SEEK MISSING WITNESS IN POISON CASE

HOLLOWAY CORROBORATES MINCEY'S AFFIDAVIT

TALKS FASTER THAN THE HOUSE CAN THINK

WILLIAM JOSIAH NUNNALLY.

LEAP TO STREET TO ESCAPE IN NIGHT FIRE

Aroused from their sleep by the roar of flames and the smell of smoke, half a dozen doomers in the home of Mrs. J. Sutton, 55 Luckie street, escaped in their night attire Tuesday morning at 4:30 o'clock, when fire broke out in the upper story of the house. Some of them leaped from the windows just in time to avoid the falling roof.

It is not known how the fire started. It was discovered by one of the roomers, who awoke suddenly and found the entire upper portion of the house in flames. He shouted and awoke the other roomers and Mrs. Sutton, who also sleeps on the second at the rear ran to the front of the building only a moment before the roof crashed in. One man was struck on the shoulder by a pice of falling timber, but was only slightly bruised.

The occupants of the house gathered in the upper front hall and found their escape cut off by a wall of smoke and flames that was fast devouring the stairway. Some of them braved the flames and ran down the stairway. Others let themselves down from the windows. As the last of the roomers reached the ground the roof of the house fell in.

The fire department extinguished the blaze before the building was destroyed, but not until it had been badly damaged.

Griffin Elks Give Monster Barbecue

GRIFFIN, July 15.—About 50 Elks from Newnan, Jackson, LaGrange and other nearby cities gathered here Monday as guests at a monster barbecue given by the Griffin Elks. A public feature of the festivities was a street parade under the direction of four prominent Griffin Elks.

After the barbecue a regular session of the lodge was held, and a good class of candidates was initiated.

"Gentleman From Floyd" Is the "Human Gatling Gun" of the Legislature.

"Mr.Speaker,Imovethatthismotionbe laidonthetable!"

It must be spoken faster than one possibly may read it, however, or it will not be half so fast as Representative Nunnally says it, whenever he does say it, which is not infrequently.

In the matter of rapidity of speech, William Josiah Nunnally, of Floyd, is the "human gatling gun" of the House.

He can say words quicker than the most expert can think them.

By the time the average listener begins to suspect that Nunnally is fairly well started on what he has to say, Nunnally has said it, and passed on to something else.

Nunnally refuses to consider the necessity or desirability of even a thin space between words. In the matter of conservation of time with respect to free speech, Nunnally, of Floyd, is the admitted Gifford Pinchot of the General Assembly.

If every member of the House would save time in talking like Nunnally saves it, the Legislature could adjourn in two or three weeks after meeting, and save the State thousands of dollars annually.

There is one thing about what Nunnally says, however—there always is much common sense and level-headedness in it.

He is one of the most popular and influential men in the House. He is experienced in business and the law, and has served a term both as Solicitor General of the Rome Circuit and Judge of the City Court of Rome.

When the present Legislature dissolves it will be found that Nunnally is one member who has made a lasting record for effectiveness and genuine service to the State. Speaker Burwell wisely gave him very high committee assignments.

Hold Fake Weddings To Evade Dance Ban

JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 15.—To evade the law in regard to music and dancing after hours, bogus weddings are held nightly in local dance halls, under permits from the police.

Legislature Hurries to Prevent Extra Session

HEARD DEATH THREAT, IS CLAIM

Crawford Heirs Also Will Attempt to Prove Marriage Illegal. Senility Alleged.

To prove Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford threatened to kill Joshua B. Crawford before she married him at St. Augustine, Fla., Colonel J. S. James ordered Tuesday morning a search in New York to locate a barber, Fred Lump, who is declared to have heard Mrs. Crawford make the alleged death threats.

Colonel James said Lump had already given valuable testimony by interrogatory, but that the heirs were especially anxious to have him come to Atlanta and testify in person. He will be one of the three witnesses to be presented to the Grand Jury when the prosecution seeks an indictment.

Two Other Witnesses.

The other two witnesses will be the young woman who said she saw Mrs. Crawford administer something to Crawford from a small vial, and the other will be Dr. H. F. Harris, of the State Board of Health, who testified he found strong evidences of poison in Crawford's stomach.

Pending the Grand Jury investigation of the criminal charge, Colonel James announced that he would introduce evidence calculated to annul Mrs. Crawford's marriage to Crawford and make the estate automatically revert to the heirs in the civil case.

"As a matter of fact, Mrs. Crawford's divorces were not secured on real legal principal, and I think we will be able to conclusively establish the fact that she was not even divorced," said Colonel James. "This would annual the marriage and make the estate intestate.

"If that is not sufficient, we will prove that Crawford was drunk at the time he married, and that he was an imbecile."

Ordeal Fails to Shake Mrs. Crawford's Poise.

By EVELYN WREN.

With superb poise Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford surrendered Sunday morning and took up her abode in Fulton County jail. Monday at 12:45, with the same self-possession, she signed the bonds which released her from imprisonment.

This horrible nightmare of accusation has brought more suffering than the humiliation of the few hours' imprisonment. The Tower was a quiet, restful spot and not uncomfortable, but the thoughts which accompany

Leniency to Slaver Stirs Suffragettes; Courts Are Scored

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 15.—The Suffragette, the press organ of the Women's Social and Political Union, today contained a bristling denunciation of the British judiciary because a woman, known as "Queenie" Gerald, who pleaded guilty to white slavery, was sentenced only to three months, while suffragists are thrown into prison for long periods for breaking windows.

The police raid of "Queenie" Gerald's establishment was highly sensational and evidence was secured, it was alleged, which showed that members of Parliament and of the Government were friendly with the woman.

Women Fight Duel; Shears as Weapons

OAKLAND, CAL., July 15.—In the seclusion of a flower garden and with an old grievance to settle two women fought a spectacular duel with shears in Oakland.

The duelists were Mrs. A. Hultz and her neighbor, Mrs. F. R. Ruley. As a result of their fight, Mrs. Hultz is in a critical condition in care of physicians, while her antagonist, less seriously hurt, is at the city prison.

Public Cigar Cutter Called Health Peril

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Warning to the public against the use of the automatic cigar cutter on the ground that it is an agency for the spread of disease was issued to-day by the United States public health service.

The statement points out that many smokers, on purchasing a cigar and before clippins off the end place it between their lips while paying for the purchase.

Famous Cat Starves, Grieving for Master

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 15.—Henri Rochefort's famous cat, Kroumir, that accompanied him everywhere, did not survive the death of his master long.

He refused to take food since the death of Mr. Rochefort on July 1, and died of grief, as supposed, at Aix-les-Bains this morning.

Rochester Puts Ban On Peekaboo Styles

ROCHESTER, PA., July 15.—Following a meeting of the Council here, a resolution was reported which defines the mode of dress women can not wear. "Expose gowns" and slashed and tight skirts are barred.

Hose must not be transparant and a liberal exposure of the bosom and arms will not be tolerated.

What Is the Limit Of Decency In Woman's Dress?

SLATON WILL INSIST ON TAX LAW

Governor Likely to Recall Assembly if Reforms Are Not Made Before Adjournment.

Unless the Legislature, during its present session, enacts such tax reforms as the Governor thinks essential to the welfare and prosperity of the State, it is more than likely that it will be called immediately in extraordinary session, for the sole purpose of effecting those reforms.

The Governor has the authority to give affairs that direction if he thinks it necessary, and he may limit the General Assembly in his call to such measures as he chooses, and nothing else can be considered in a session so called.

The Governor himself has not uttered the threat of an extraordinary session, but some gentlemen close to him, and, in a way, authorized to speak for him, have let it be known that the possibility of an extra session has crossed the Executive mind more than once of late, and that failure upon the part of the Legislature to enact the tax reform the Governor holds absolutely necessary at this time more than likely will impel the Governor to the heroic remedy of an extra session.

Feverishly Active Now.

That these semi-authoritative rumors and hints have had their effect upon the General Assembly, is abundantly evidenced in the feverish activity lately manifested in some of the House committees.

House bill No. 1, by Mr. Cole, of Bartow, for instance, has been reported at last out of the Ways and Means Committee, and will go to the House at once with a favorable recommendation.

This bill, which has the hearty indorsement of the Governor, provides for an inheritance tax, and is expected to produce a large revenue to the State.

The Ways and Means Committee, in reporting the inheritance tax measure, combined the Cole bill with other inheritance tax measures introduced—one by Mr. Swift of Muscogee and another by Mr. Slater of Bryan—into one measure, embodying most of the Cole bill and some good features of the other two.

Nevertheless, although the present session is practically half over, it is significant that House Bill No. 1 not yet has been read a second time in the House.

This first revenue measure introduced must be followed by many others, if the Slaton program of tax reform is carried out in its entirety, and the Senate must have an opportunity to pass upon all revenue measures produced by the House. Revenue measures can not originate in the Senate.

House Plainly Agitated.

These things, in view of the fact that the Governor has asked for the tax and revenue acts at least ten days before adjournment, have given color to the extra session rumor, and the House plainly has been more or less agitated thereby.

The fact that the Legislature has made no further progress than it has is not charged particularly to the leaders in either House. It is admitted that both President Anderson and Speaker Burwell have worked overtime trying to push things along. Both officials announced their committee assignments in record-breaking time, and the various committees have been urged constantly to exert themselves to the utmost.

There has been much waste of time on the floor of both Houses, however, and unless the waste is cut out from this time forward the impression is that tax reform measures generally will fall by the wayside and fail of passage.

'Tiger Dance,' It's 'Something Awful,' Coming to America

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 15.—The "Tiger dance," which is described as "something fierce and very awful," will be on its way to the United States Friday, when its originator, Uriel Davis, a dancing master, sails for New York.

He intends to introduce it at Newport and in the homes of the fashionably rich in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Washington.

The "tiger dance" is a combination of the turkey trot and the tango, but it also involves some new contortions hitherto unknown to modern science. Mr. Davis is said to have unearthed them while studying the dances of the ancient worshipers of Bacchus and Venus.

Deserted by Wife, He Flies Gay Banners

WINSTED, CONN., July 15.—Returning after a day's work as baggagemaster on a New Haven train, Henry S. Henderling found a bare home with only his bed in it. His wife, children and household goods were gone.

After learning that Mrs. Henderling had rented apartments elsewhere he proceeded to celebrate. He bought firearms and flags and red, white and blue bunting. His neighbors were aroused during the night by reports of pistols, and when day broke they saw the Henderling house decorated in the national colors. He explained he was celebrating his wife's retreat.

Advice to Lovelorn: 'Buy Some Dicyanin'

CHICAGO, ILL., July 15.—When you see five reddish spots in the human aura then propose.

The girls will say, "Yes." At that time she is experiencing a "rush of affection."

This advice to the lovelorn was given by Dr. Edwin B. Beckwith in a lecture on the human aura. He explained that the lovelorn young man must carry a sensitive screen of dicyanin, through which to gaze at the girl.

Young Persian to Attend West Point

WEST POINT, N. Y., July 15.—Among those expected to enter the Military Academy as cadets in the near future is Mizra Mohammed Ali Khan, of Pershia, in whose behalf a joint resolution has been introduced in Congress.

Many foreigners have been educated at West Point, and to-day West Pointers are officers in nearly every regular military establishment in Central America.

3-Day Speed Carnival On at Brighton Drome

NEW YORK, July 15.—The sweepstakes handicap at 9 miles will be the feature at the opening of a three-day speed carnival at the Brighton Beach motordrome to-night. Arthur Chappelle, the speed demon, will give the field a handicap of two and a quarter laps and will be forced to smash the present record for the distance in order to win.

Mayor Must Wed To Gain Re-election

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., July 15.—The Women's Homestead Association here has demanded that Mayor Edward Barry wed if he wishes to be re-elected. The association has submitted a list of three women from which the Mayor might take his choice.

The Mayor has promised to wed if he can find his "ideal."

POLICE CLOSE 2 ROOMING HOUSES

Chief Beavers Opens Real Fight on Doubtful Places—Several Under Watch.

Active steps against doubtful rooming and boarding houses were taken by Chief of Police Beavers Tuesday morning. He declared that he intends to close every "shady" rooming house in the city against which he can obtain evidence.

He intimated that he has the addresses of a number of boarding houses where, it is alleged, young girls and men visit and where the roomers are in reality inmates of the place, and his campaign is to be directed especially against these.

They will be thoroughly investigated, and if evidence is found to sustain the action, will be closed and the Council asked to revoke the licenses of the persons who operate the places.

Orders closing two boarding houses were issued from headquarters this morning. Mrs. Lulu Bell, whose hotel at Fair and Peters streets was raided last week, resulting in the arrest of half a dozen persons and the telling of a white slave story by Effie Drummond, was ordered to vacate the place and close it up.

The Bell place, Chief Beavers firmly believes, is one of those under the control of the "higher-ups" in the vice ring, against whom he is now obtaining evidence, and he regards the arrest of the Bell woman and the closing of the place as one of the significant steps of the campaign he is waging against vice.

The negro joint at 76 Chestnut street, which was raided by the police Sunday morning, was also ordered closed by Chief Beavers Tuesday. Sev-eral white men were arrested when this raid was made, and evidence has been obtained that the place was one of the most vicious in the city.

Dr. Delemar Freed Of Attack Charge

HAMILTON, July 15.—Dr. James Delemar, who was given a preliminary trial before Justices Harry Stevens, R. Gip Robinson and Ben R. Harris here on Monday, on the charge of attacking the wife of a prominent Harris County farmer, was discharged, there not being sufficient evidence introduced to hold him to Superior Court. The trial was in progress the entire day and 97 witnesses were examined.

Dr. Delemar was given an ovation by friends. He returned to Mountain Hill, his home, with his brother and father-in-law.

Dr. Delemar was arrested last week and was confined in the Muscogee County jail pending his hearing.

White Men Fined in War on Negro Dives

A crusade against white men frequenting negro dives has been started by Recorder Nash Broyles. He fined three men, who gave their names as Kirk, Smith and Little and A. B. Arnold, of Macon, who forfeited $50.75.

The five white men were arrested in a raid on a place at 76 Chestnut street, early Sunday morning. Helen Lester, who runs the dive, was held for the higher courts in bonds of $500.

"The mingling of whites and blacks does more to stir up race trouble than anything else," declared the Recorder.

GRASSHOPPERS POISONED.

DODGE CITY, KANS., July 15.—Farmers in Western Kansas have unit united in spreading tons of poisoned bran mash over fields in an effort to check the ravages of grasshoppers.

RECALLS HE WAS TOLD STORY OF CONLEY

Watchman Remembers of Visit of Witness to Factory on Day of Crime.

Further corroboration of several of the important details in the remarkable affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance agent and teacher, who swore he heard Jim Conley confess killing a girl, came Tuesday in a statement by E. F. Holloway, day watchman at the National Pencil Factory.

Holloway substantiated in every particular the story of Mincey's visit to the factory the Tuesday following the crime and recalled the general trend of the conversation, which was practically as Mincey related it in his signed statement published exclusively in The Georgian Monday. The defense has obtained an affidavit from Holloway as to the circumstances of the day.

"I remember Mincey coming here Tuesday," said Holloway. "He was a quiet, retiring fellow, and I guess we scared him out. There were a lot of people in the factory, and the excitement after the murder was at its height. Several detectives were there and there were a score of people bothering the detectives and the factory authorities with their theories on the killing.

Wanted Negroes Arrested.

"This man Mincey came up to me and said he wanted to see Mr. Frank. I told him Mr. Frank was not there, but that I could take care of him. He asked me how many negroes worked in the factory, as I recall it, and I told him seven or eight.

"'You'd better have everyone of them arrested,' he replied. 'I know the one that did it.'

"'But there weren't any negroes working in the factory Saturday except the night watchman,' I told him, and I said that I didn't see any negroes at all when I left at 11:45 on account of the holiday. I got a little sore at him because he kept pestering me about the negroes, and I guess he got mad because I wouldn't pay any attention to him.

"Finally, Herbert Schiff or somebody else turned to the crowd and told them they all would have to leave the building, as it wasn't possible to make any progress in the investigation with them scattered all over every floor and in the basement. This man Mincey went out with them, and that was the last I thought about his story until the day I found Jim Conley washing his shirt in the factory, something he never did before, so far as I know.

Told of Seeing Conley.

"After this Conley was arrested and I was pretty positive that he killed the girl, although I didn't have any means of knowing that he even was in the factory until he confessed it of his own accord after he denied it half a dozen times. Then I told some of the people connected with the factory about Mincey, and when I saw him next he told all about the reasons that he felt positive it was Conley.

"He said that he had met Conley the afternoon that Mary Phagan was murdered and that Conley had boasted that he had killed a girl. Mincey said he met him somewhere over near where Conley lived. I don't know whether it was at Electric and Carter streets or not. He said he didn't think much of it at the time, as he had supposed that Conley in his drunken stupor was merely bragging about his part in some negro row. He told me that Conley had threatened him, saying:

"'I killed a girl already to-day; I don't want to kill nobody else.'

"After this I guess they got his affidavit."

CRAWFORD HEIRS SEEK MISSING WITNESS

New York Scoured For Barber, Said to Have Heard Death Threats.

her night and day are almost unendurable. She has had to meet the accusation of the most dastardly crime of which a woman could be capable—that of committing a husband's murder by the very method which won his love and admiration.

Mrs. Crawford sat in the Tower cell waiting for the deputy, J. P. Miner, to bring the word which meant that she could go with her son-in-law, J. Lee Bennett, back to the cottage where Sallie May, her daughter, and the three grandchildren anxiously awaited her.

"Everyone has been so kind to me here," she said. "They have tried to make it seem better and to make me comfortable."

Gives Home Touch to Cell.

She was composed, without a trace of brazenness in her attitude. It was that of a kind, gentle, motherly woman—all woman—who had been thrust by circumstances into unusual surroundings. Her gratitude for the simple courtesies of the jailers showed the sympathetic nature with which she had always met the world.

A love story number of a familiar woman's magazine and current numbers of other housekeeping periodicals lay on the bed beside her. These and the big bunch of flowers broke the austerity of the prison room and gave it even the homelike touch which some women can bestow upon the most sordid quarters.

The magazines and flowers had helped the brave woman to endure the weary hours. She glanced toward the bed and smiled.

"Those magazines were brought in to me and I read several of the stories last night," said she. "Then I grew sleepy and dropped off for a good night's rest."

Looks Worn and Pale.

Mrs. Crawford looked a trifle worn and pale as the result of her first jail experience. She had eaten, though, and enjoyed a good dinner on Sunday. Sallie May, her daughter, had brought it—and Sallie May is her mother's imitator in culinary fields. She had had breakfast this morning, but had had little else to employ her time save to sit and think and wonder why and how people could be so cruel.

"I did not dream that there could be such cruelty in human nature. I never dreamed that animosity could carry them to such a length," said Mrs. Crawford, almost losing the control which she had evidenced. When the sobs were near, she stopped talking until she could recover her poise. There was no attempt to secure sympathy by complaint or by the little tricks known to most women.

Her face lighted up when we discussed cooking.

"I am a fine cook," she said. "No one can beat me at that, if I do say it. I like to cook, and folks always like my cooking."

Mrs. Crawford was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine and it was there that Joshua B. Crawford came in search of health and good care.

Does Not Rail at Heirs.

"It was my business and to my interest to make the hotel pay," she said. "I felt that the meals must be good in order to keep patronage. Somehow I could not get others to do it as I wanted it, so I did nearly every bit of the cooking myself. It tasted better."

"No, I just can't believe it," she said, as we turned from the interesting cooking discussion. "You see, I settled the estate with the Crawford heirs shortly after Mr. Crawford's death and they signed the agreement. They seemed perfectly satisfied. Now, they say that even four years ago they believed me guilty of this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford speaks of the charge of Joshua Crawford's nieces and nephews as a strange exhibition of cruelty and regards the matter as one mete for her sympathy. She does not give way to self-pity nor does she rail against the injustice of their acts. Rather does she accept the hideous nightmare as the result of peculiar, unfamiliar traits which she has never herself experienced.

She seems dazed and in a dream. "I just can't believe it. I can't realize it at all."

Never Loses Her Poise.

In this attitude she was led to the iron gates Sunday morning, heard the signal, waited and watched for the deputy to bring his jangling keys and slowly open the gates. She had heard the gate shut behind her and had gone through a second one.

Then entering the large, loitering elevator she had gone slowly up and up until she reached the floor of her prison room. Her room was the symbol of all the animosity, all the cruelty which she had known at the hands of the Crawfords.

The gates swung the same way Monday morning at the Tower, but the calm woman in black emerged from the austerity of captivity and saw the sunlight of high noon. She smiled and thanked every one who had been kind to her, delaying her departure to plan for the disposal of her big bunch of posies. Mary Belle Crawford left the Tower as she came—thoroughly poised and superbly womanly.

Can Texas Beauty Outrival Atlanta's?

MISS ELLEN EVELYN JAMES.

BUTTON BEAUTY RACE STARTED WITH RUSH

Atlanta Seeks Prettier Girl Than Texas Belle, Chosen 'Goddess of Plenty.'

Atlanta's "button beauty" contest has caused the question to arise:

"Will the Atlanta beauty eclipse the Texas girl selected to represent the 'Goddess of Plenty' on one of the new bills to be turned out by Uncle Sam?"

This young woman, Miss Ellen Evelyn James, of San Antonio, Tex., has attracted widespread attention by her fair face. She so appealed to Kenyon Cox, the artist who designed the new bill, that he said she must represent the 'Goddess of Plenty.'

Has Atlanta Prettier Girl?

Look at the face and see if you think Atlanta can furnish a prettier girl to adorn the "500,000 club" buttons?

The pretty girl contest has started with a grand rush. A number of Atlanta's most famous beauties are in at the start, and others, not so well known but exceedingly attractive, promise to make strong races.

Leading spirits in the "500,000 club" movement declare that no greater honor could be paid an Atlanta girl than to have her picture on the buttons of the people who are to boost Atlanta's population to 500,000 by 1920.

The accompanying coupons show how to enter candidates.

Windsor Tells City's Needs.

James P. Windsor, assistant cashier of the American National Bank, has written an interesting letter to The Georgian acknowledging receipt of the $25 prize for the best slogan. He commends The Georgian for its policy toward a half-million city and proceeds to give his ideas of what is needed.

The gist of his letter is an appeal for more parks and means of better recreation for the masses of the people, and a condemnation of strict enforcement of "blue laws." Here is his letter:

Praises Pretty Atlanta Girls.

To the Editor of The Georgian:

I acknowledge, with thanks, receipt of your check for $25, the prize awarded in the Georgian's interesting slogan contest.

Evidently the distinguished judges were also of the opinion that a successful slogan should be symbolic of Atlanta's beautiful women. For, while a salubrious climate, a desirable location, and influential newspapers have played an important part in the city's marvelous growth, the real answer to, "Why is Atlanta?" is her many beautiful women. It is they who inspire the wonderful Atlanta spirit, influence the casual visitor to locate here permanently; and when one's poor judgment takes him to other climes, it is the remembrance of them that brings him back home.

But the main object of our "500,000 Club" is to exert every effort to increase our population to the desired number within the next few years. This can and will be done when our civic bodies realize the fact that Atlanta is now lagging behind other cities in some respects, especially that of park improvements.

Solution of Vice Problems.

The solution of all vice problems, as well as those of crime, and the surest way to attract newcomers to any city, is to provide adequate facilities for recreation and amusement.

In other words there should be sincerity in our "boosting." So the question arises, Is it really great to live in Atlanta?

To the capitalist, with his numerous facilities for pleasure, such as clubs, autos, commodious home, and the means to take frequent vacation trips to other cities and resorts, Atlanta, with its unequalled climate, is really a great place in which to live.

But to the average citizen—the man of limited means, such as the laboring man, the small salaried man or the young man just going into business, who must economize by force of circumstances—Atlanta offers few attractions or places of amusement at a moderate price, and to him it is a veritable workshop.

Atlanta is one of the few large cities without a down-town public park or breathing place. This feature should be provided in the plaza plan of bridging over the railroad tracks which now penetrate the heart of the city. At least $1,000,000 should be expended in beautifying our present parks, and sufficient funds should be appropriated annually to furnish high class music in at least two of them every night during the summer months.

Urges Park Improvements.

Piedmont is now but a desert of possibilities, while nature and the liberality of one individual has given us Grant Park. Permanent buildings, and grounds suitable for exposition or fair purposes, including a mile-race track where high class harness races might be conducted in connection with the fairs, should be included in Lakewood's improvements.

These, and many other things which may seem extravagant to some, must be accomplished in order to get the 500,000 by 1920.

Los Angeles is now increasing her population at the rate of 75,000 per year. But Los Angeles is expending $50,000,000 on a water supply, and over $20,000,000 on street and public road improvements. It is time Atlanta was doing something big, instead of wrangling over the individual conduct of a few alleged "business men." The continual magnifying of vice conditions, and the too strict enforcement of blue laws, is not compatible with progress, and is doing the city an injury. I would remind some of our over-zealous reformers that there is danger in bringing to our homes too much of the sordid things in life, for—

"Vice is a monster of so frightful mein,
That to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

I am, sir,
JAMES P. WINDSOR.
Atlanta, Ga., July 14, 1913.

BOYS OF FIFTH START ON ANNUAL 'HIKE' ACROSS ST. SIMONS ISLAND

Mrs. F. J. Paxon, of Atlanta, at camp.

Shell she fired in salute to Governor given to her as souvenir.

Atlanta Regiment to Return Wednesday—Fondly Remember Visit of Mrs. Slaton's Party.

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 15.—The boys of Atlanta's militia regiment, the Fifth Infantry, Georgia National Guard, encamped here, packed their equipment early Tuesday morning in preparation for the annual cross-country hike. Officially the hike began shortly before noon and will continue until Wednesday noon, when the boys will return to St. Simon's "strike" camp, receive their pay and start for home.

Tuesday's hike is the second big feature of the camp within the last three days following the visit of the Governor and his party Saturday and Sunday.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. F. J. Paxon, of Atlanta, member of Mrs. Slaton's party, fired the evening salute to the Governor. Following this rather unusual proceeding, the boys presented Mrs. Paxon with the shell which she had fired, with an original poem by the poet laureate of the Fifth.

Mrs. Slaton also received a shell which she fired earlier in the day. Both of the women are proud of the souvenirs.

The boys still hark back to the big dance Saturday night, in which hundreds of Brunswick's most beautiful belles participated, besides the members of Governor Slaton's party.

In a measure the dance and the good times served to cause the boys to forget all the discomforts of camp life. Thus far the hospital corps has had nothing to do except treat sunblistered backs.

Tuesday's hike, it is thought, will put the boys in fine trim. They didn't seem to mind the work one bit when they left camp Tuesday morning. All were in high spirits, apparently eager for the fray.

Trainmen on S. P. Threatening Strike

SAN FRANCISCO, July 15.—A general strike of all conductors, brakemen and yardmen of the Southern Pacific Railway system was threatened to-day in California.

Unless the railway officials allow employees of the Trans-Bay Electric system to work on the same basis as employees of the steam roads, more than 5,000 men have threatened to walk out, tying up the great transportation lines in the territory extending from El Paso on the south, Ogden on the east and Portland on the north.

T. R. Off for Heart Of Arizona Desert

WILLIAMS, ARIZ., July 15.—Accompanied by his two sons, Archie and Quentin and his nephew, Nicholas Roosevelt, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has left the Grand Canon on a hunting trip into the "big game" country of Northern Arizona and Southern Utah.

Visits will be made to the Moki, Hopi and Navajo Indian reservations. The largest tract of standing pine in the United States will be traversed and the trip will carry them into the heart of the Arizona desert.

SOUTHERN GROCERS TO MEET.

CHARLOTTE, July 15.—The annual convention of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association convenes in this city Wednesday morning in the auditorium, when more than 1,000 grocerymen from a dozen Southern States will be present for the three days' deliberations.

Wife of Cartersville Lawyer Gets Divorce

CARTERSVILLE, July 15.—Mrs. Betty R. Lyon was granted a divorce from T. J. Lyon, a well-known attorney, Monday afternoon when twelve divorce decrees were ordered in Bartow Superior Court. Lyon vigorously fought the suit, denying his wife's allegations, setting up counter-charges and pleading his own case. As both are prominent people, there was a crowded courtroom and much interest was manifested.

The jury returned a verdict in favor of Mrs. Lyon. Her grounds for a divorce were drunkenness and cruel treatment.

Find Fishing Worms In Morgan's Garden

NEW YORK, July 15.—Going fishing? Want some worms? Go up to J. P. Morgan's litle garden at Thirty-seventh street and Madison avenue any evening and you can get all you want.

Perhaps the patrolman was "fixed." At any rate, two men climbed over the iron railing that separates the financier's little grass plot from public intrusion. One had a tin cracker box. Both got down on their hands and knees and prowled over the grass.

Within 20 minutes they had their can full of fat worms.

COFFEE GROWING MAY NET DIXIE MILLIONS

Haphazard Experiment in Louisiana Arouses Government to Make Thorough Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, July 15. — For many years it has been the belief of agriculturists and scientists that coffee can not be grown commercially in the United States, because it is essentially a tropical plant, and American farmers have given up hope of participating in this tremendously valuable crop.

Now, however, the result of a haphazard planting in Louisiana has awakened the interest of the Department of Agriculture, and it is predicted that if the claims made in this instance are confirmed, the day soon may come when the States of the South will be producing a large part of the coffee of the world.

In 1911, the United States imported 878,322,468 pounds of coffee, valued at $90,949,963, to supply the needs of the millions of coffee drinkers in this country. This great sum of money will go to the Southern States if it develops that the coffee grown in Louisiana is the genuine plant, and that it was not produced under exceptional circumstances.

Ransdell Gets Letter.

The discovery that coffee can be grown in the United States is best told in the words of a letter to Senator Ransdell from Henri Jullien, of Jeanerette, La. He says:

"One of my neighbors, a negro, purchased a pound of Rio coffee, and in the coffee were four seeds in the hull. He conceived the idea of planting these four seeds. Two grew and gave him two plants. This was two years ago. Last year, he made two rice sacks full of coffee. This year, he planted the contents of one of these sacks.

"Briefly speaking, he now has from this sack two rows two acres long of coffee plants. I have seen these coffee plants. They are growing to perfection and are abundantly laden with coffee. This is queer.

"This negro planted at haphazard, without knowledge of the time for planting, and, as he had no knowledge of coffee cultivation, the cultivation also was haphazard. He even planted corn between his coffee plants.

Plants Are Overladen.

"The established facts known to all here are that these coffee plants grow admirably and are overladen with coffee. This has caused me to inquqire whether we should not undertake this culture. Personally, I should like to experiment with about two acres, planted in different kinds of coffee, and give same my serious personal attention."

He then asks for seeds and information from the Department of Agriculture on the proper methods of coffee cultivation.

Senator Ransdell took up the matter with the Department of Agriculture, and Secretary Houston told him the case would be investigated. Then Senator Ransdell received from Acting Secretary Galloway the following letter:

Grown for Ornament.

"I have had this matter looked into carefully. The commercial culture of coffee has never been attempted in this country, so far as known to our people, although it is grown by a number of persons in gardens and other protected places along the Gulf coast as an ornamental plant.

"It is advertised by one or two nurserymen in this country as an ornamental, and plants from these nurserymen and seeds from the Porto Rico Experiment Station, as well as from various tropical countries have been secured and planted at various points along the Gulf coast of Texas and other Southern States.

"Coffee, however, is an essentially tropical plant which can not stand frost, and for this reason its culture on a commercial scale has not been considered feasible.

Department Wants Samples.

"From the description given by Mr. Jullien, our men are unable to say whether or not the plant to which he refers is really coffee. The experiment, however, is a very interesting one, and if he could secure some samples and forward them to us, our men would be glad to make an examination of the same with a view of determining just what the plant is.

"A few of the berries and some of the leaves would be sufficient for this purpose. They should be sent to Mr. W. E. Safford, of the Bureau of Plant Industry of this department, and can be forwarded under the enclosed addressed franks of postage. After this material is received, we will be glad to take up the matter further with Mr. Jullien and render him every assistance possible in this connection."

Senator Ransdell has written Mr. Jullien to rush the samples to the Department.

GRATEFUL ITALIAN CITY TO PLACE BUST OF MORGAN IN TOWN HALL

Selarriano Pietro, completing bust of Morgan in New York City.

Financier Restored Priest's Robe, of Rare Value, Stolen From Church at Ascoli.

By COUNT MOURIK BEAUFORT.

NEW YORK, July 15.—A marble bust of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, just completed here, will be placed in the town hall of the city of Ascoli Piceno, Italy, thereby reversing the customary procedure of importing works of art from Italy to America.

Signor Sciarrino Cartaino Pietro, who, for the last three years, has had his studio in New York, has had the honor of producing the first marble bust of the famous financier.

A few years ago Mr. Morgan bought a magnificent cope, a priest's robe of rare value. His intimate friends say he was delighted with the addition to Signor Pietro to execute this marble, however, it was discovered that the robe had been stolen from the church in Ascoli Piceno. Mr. Morgan at once took steps to have it restored to the church.

This made a deep impression upon Italians, not only residents of the little mountain city, but the country, and many honors were bestowed upon the financier.

Now, since Mr. Morgan's death, the town wishes to honor his memory, and a few months ago, Signor Luigi Mazzoni, Mayor of Ascoli Piceno, ordered Signor Pietro to execute this marble bust. With the assistance of photographs and under the personal direction of young Mr. Morgan, Mrs. Herbert Satterlee and Mrs. Hamilton, the financier's daughters, Signor Pietro has succeeded in creating a perfect likeness.

Said Signor Pietro yesterday:

"I do not think that all the works of Michael Angelo could have been more inspiring than the enthusiasm and devotion of Mr. Morgan and his two sisters to their father's memory. They have helped me wonderfully. Mr. Morgan has been in my studio almost every day and he has watched me work with an expression that was to me a real inspiration."

SOFT MOONLIGHT HASTENS WEDDING

Friends of Miss Vera F. England and Joseph W. Hooge Surprised. Plan Auto Tour as Honeymoon.

Miss Vera F. England, of Mobile, and Joseph W. Hogge, of Macon, were married here Monday as a result of Atlanta's beautiful moonlight nights—not that they don't have beautiful moonlight nights in Mobile and Macon, but the young sweethearts happened to be in neither of those places.

They have arranged to take an extended automobile honeymoon trip in order to view the bright moon from all parts of Georgia and Alabama.

Miss England came to Atlanta with her mother, Mrs. G. K. England, to visit the family of Charles W. England. Mr. Hooge came from Macon Monday to visit his fiancee.

The ceremony was performed by Father Robert F. Kennedy at the Church of Immaculate Conception at 11 o'clock Monday morning. The wedding date had been fixed for several months hence.

Young Caminetti at Work as Pipe Layer

TAFT, CAL., July 15.—That Drew Caminetti, who is awaiting trial on charge of white slaving, has been in Taft since last month, became known when the men working with him on a pipe line crew tipped it off that a youth called "Blackie" had repeatedly telephone to some unknown place and asked for messages for Drew Caminetti.

Caminetti came to Taft shortly after June 1 from Sacramento, and immediately hired out to a pipe line contracting company.

Waits a Month and Wins $14,000 Prize

MOOSE JAW, SASK., July 15.—H. Johnson, formerly of Itasca County, Minnesota, obtained a $14,000 tract after waiting in front of the Land Office here for a month. During his wait torrential rains fell, and for many days there weer others ahead of Johnson. Numerous fights occurred and the police had to interfere several times.

Johnson almost lost his prize in the last hour by going into the Land Office too soon and finding another man in his place when he returned. The police, however, let him remain first.

THE SUNDAY AMERICAN'S GREAT BASEBALL TEAM

All the important leagues of baseball are now in action. So are tens of thousands of fans. So are also the men who write of the doings of the diamond stars for those same fans to read.

It is the newspaper with the STAR TEAM of writers that makes the strongest appeal to baseball enthusiasts.

BUT—to be stars, baseball players and writers about the diamond warriors must be fair and square. That is an essential part of KNOWING THE GAME.

Here Is The Hearst Sunday American Team for 1913

CHRISTY MATHEWSON—For years the famous pitcher for the New York Giants. Known everywhere as one of the brainiest players in the business and one of the squarest in whatever he writes about the game of which he is master.

JOE AGLER—The Crackers' sensational first-sacker. He is giving local fans all the "inside" news of Billy Smith's aggregation. His comments on plays are immense.

W. S. FARNSWORTH—His stories of the big league teams are right up to the minute. Having traveled with the New York Yankees, New York Giants and Boston Red Sox during the past seven years, he is able to tell of the "workings" of the major league clubs.

PERCY H. WHITING—For over seven years he has been writing Southern League baseball. He is the dean of Southern diamond experts and has the largest following this side of the Mason and Dixon line. He is fearless in his writings and always tells the truth.

SAM CRANE—A big league ball player for years and personally acquainted with all the major leaguers. For the past twenty years he has been writing baseball and is considered the greatest student of the game in the world. He travels with the National League Champion Giants.

DAMON RUNYON—The wittiest baseball writer in the East. He tells of the big league games in a manner that has a laugh in every line. But he never gets away from baseball like most of the humorous followers of the diamond warriors.

W. J. McBETH—His "inside" stories of big league games cannot be beaten. He sticks to facts and figures and his predictions are followed by thousands of fans. He has traveled as "war correspondent" with nearly every big league team during the past ten years.

CHARLEY DRYDEN—The Mark Twain of baseball. For years he has traveled with New York, Philadelphia and Chicago teams and his writings are baseball classics. He is personally acquainted with every big league player and probably has the largest following of any baseball expert in the country.

A. H. C. MITCHELL—Considered the greatest expert in the New England States. His stories of last fall's world's series were marvels. He roasts when a roast is coming and praises when praise is due. He has been writing baseball for twenty years.

ALLEN SANGREE—He is well known in the South, having been here with big league teams on training trips for the past fifteen years. He will travel with the New York Yankees this season, and his stories of Russell Ford and Ed Sweeney, former Crackers, will be of especial interest to local fandom.

J. W. McCONAUGHY—Popular with Eastern baseball fans because of his fearless writings. He never gets away from the truth, but tells a straight, readable story. He has been writing baseball in St. Louis and New York for twelve years.

J. W. HEISMAN—Considered the greatest college coach in the South. His college stories are copied by every paper in this part of the United States. His predictions are seldom wrong, and his weekly review of Southern college teams cannot be beaten.

JOE BEAN—As coach of Marist he has led all the other prep school coaches a merry chase. A few years ago he was the star shortstop of the New York Giants. His stories are bright and interesting.

INNIS BROWN—For four years he was considered one of the greatest athletes that ever attended Vanderbilt. His baseball stories of college teams are read by every undergraduate and graduate in the South.

In the General Sporting Field

As well as in baseball, The Sunday American scores an exceptionally large number of base hits in all other branches of sports.

Ben Adams, hero of the Olympic games, writes interesting stories about track and field athletics. The boxing world is well covered by Ed W. Smith, W. W. Naughton, H. M. Walker, Ed Curley and "Left Hook." Tick Tichenor takes care of the golf. He knows every golfer in the South and his stories are real live "bearcats." Tennis and automobiles are two other branches of sport that are covered thoroughly in The Sunday American.

LOCKS AT GATUN CLOSED; LAKE RISING FAST

Huge Artificial Body of Water Ready October 1 to Float Ships Through Canal.

The Canal Record, official publication of the Isthmian Canal Commission, in the issue just received in Atlanta contains this account of the closing of the last of the great Gatun gates, which will bring Gatun Lake to the operating level:

"Anticipating the schedule, the last gate of the three 8 by 18 foot sluices through the ogee of the Gatun spillway dam was closed at 10:40 a. m. on June 27, with the surface of the lake at 48.25 feet above sea level. It is not expected to open the gates again, and the lake may be considered to be on its final rise to operating level.

"Under conditions of normal runoff, as determined by measurements recorded over the watershed for the past 23 years, the lake should reach 85 feet by December 1, 1913; it should rise to 71 feet, the elevation of the railroad at Gorgona, about October 1. At that height it would afford a 21-foot channel.

Water in Culebra Cut Soon.

"The top of the dike at Gamboa, protecting Culebra Cut from flooding through its north end, is 78.2 feet above sea level, but it is anticipated that the water will be let into the cut before the lake has reached that elevation, which it may do about November 1.

"The channel between Gatun and Gamboa has ben completed since July, 1912, with the exception of about 300,000 cubic yards of gravel, washed into it by the Chagres River, which is to be removed by dredges. From Gatun to Bohio no excavation was required, except a small quantity at Pana Blanca; the surface of the ground was less than 40 feet above sea level and the full lake will afford depth enough for the ships.

"The channel needed only to be cleared of vegetation and marked with lights and buoys. From Pena Blanca to Tabernilla the excavation was mostly in cutting off the tops of peninsulas formed by the tortuous course of the Chagres.

Less Than Year's Work Here.

"The heavy work was from San Pazlo to Gamboa. Total excavations in the Chagres district to date have amounted to 12,384,655 cubic yards. Including what remains to be done, the total excavation for the channel through Gatun Lake is less than the excavation accomplished in Culebra Cut every year since 1907.

"Gatun Lake came into existence on April 25, 1910, when the wide diversion at Gatun Dam was closed and the flow from the Chagres and Trinidad Rivers was forced through the spillway channel. The head of the spillway was 10 feet above the sea level, which caused the water to rise to a normal surface of 14 feet above the sea. In times of flood, the surface rose to about 18 feet, inundating parts of the Panama Railroad through the Black Swamp.

Old Railroad Is Removed.

"On February 15, 1912, the relocated line of the railroad, between Gatun and Gamboa, was placed in use and immediately afterward the removal of the old line was begun. About the same time the sluice gates were closed and the lake was allowed to rise. It attained a maximum elevation of 56.3 feet on November 30, 1912.

"At this height the water poured over the gap, at 50 feet above sea level, in the uncompleted ogee, and, in order to allow the completion of the dam during the dry season, the sluice gates were opened in December.

"On January 1, 1913, the surface of the lake was 48.3 feet above sea level, around which it has been maintained since, though the completion of the ogee to its elevation of 69 feet was accomplished in April."

GEORGIA MAN CONSUL.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The following presidential appointment was confirmed by the Senate to-day: Nathaniel B. Stewart, of Georgia, to be Consul at Milan, Italy.

SEVERE PAIN WITH HEMORRHOIDS

Got No Rest Nights. Had to Be Propped Up in Bed. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured In Three Weeks.

Bissell, Ala. — "I was troubled for several years with protruding hemorrhoids. They caused pain of the most severe kind and some loss of blood. They were so inflamed that the touch of anything against them was most intense agony. I got no rest nights and had to have my legs and feet propped up in the bed.

"I tried all kinds of advertised cures and I was told that an operation was the only relief. I suffered untold agony. I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. I tried it and then procured a box of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I took the Cuticura Soap and made a solution with warm water and bathed the affected parts before applying the Cuticura Ointment. I was cured sound and well in three weeks' time. A cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment accomplished what all else failed to do." (Signed) L. R. Cook, Nov. 12, 1912.

For red, rough, chapped and bleeding hands, itching, burning palms, and painful finger-ends with shapeless nails, a one-night Cuticura treatment works wonders. Soak hands, on retiring, in hot water and Cuticura Soap. Dry, anoint with Cuticura Ointment and wear soft bandages or old, loose gloves during the night. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

JUST LIKE A WOMAN

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall, of Chatham, is in Atlanta for a few days, on his way to Athens, where he will visit before leaving for his diplomatic post of duty in Switzerland.

Mr. Stovall is extremely well liked by all the members of the General Assembly, and there are few, if any, he does not know more or less intimately. His nomination to be Minister to Switzerland, which was in line with his ambition for years, was particularly gratifying to his friends throughout all Georgia, and he has been the recipient of many warm and hearty congratulations since his arrival in the Capital.

"I have not the slightest doubt," said Mr. Stovall, "that the Wilson administration is to be a complete success in every way. The President is a hard and conscientious worker, and is, I think, carrying out to the letter the promises of the Baltimore platform.

"I am leaving for Switzerland within the next two weeks, and feel sure I shall find the assignment not only most pleasant, but one wherein I can be of real service to my country. I have a desire, of course, to be useful as well as ornamental, if I may so express myself, and there is much that may be done in the wonderful and progressive little nation of Switzerland that will be well worth while.

"The present Legislature impresses me as a safe and sane body, and not at all inclined to run amuck. I have talked with many members, and I am sure the desire to achieve lasting and helpful tax reforms is universal. There is not much time left, of course, but the Legislature can—and doubtless will—accomplish much in the four weeks yet to its credit."

The friends of United States Senator Bacon are urging all voters to go to the polls to-day and cast a ballot for Bacon to succeed himself in the Senate.

There is no opposition, of course, but as a compliment to the Senator, if for no other reason, it is very desirable that a large vote be cast.

Senator Bacon is the first man Georgia ever honored with a fourth term in the Senate, and he will be the first United States Senator named under the new popular elections amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Mr. Bell, of Clay, looks like Champ Clark, and that, of course, puts a large measure of responsibility upon him.

The gentleman from Clay is quiet and more or less reserved, but in repose his face does remind one strikingly of the great Missourian, and the temptation to call him "Mr. Speaker" frequently is rampant within the hearts of those who are used to addressing Mr. Clark after that fashion.

"Champ Clark is a mighty fine man, all right, and worth looking like," said Bell to-day, when the matter of his resemblance was mentioned in his presence.

Some of the friends of Frank Liebman, the energetic real estate man of Atlanta, have spoken favorably to Commissioner of Agriculture James D. Price about him, and asked Mr. Price to appoint Mr. Liebman to some sort of agricultural job.

Mr. Liebman is quite an authority, upon his own admission, on "setting out peas" and differentiating watermelon from sweet potato vines.

Mr. Price is said to have tendered Mr. Liebman a place as fertilizer inspector in the Okeefenokee swamp, and the Atlanta man is reported as looking upon the honor thus about to be thrust upon him with gratified eyes.

If Mr. Liebman accepts the appointment, it will take him away from Atlanta for four months each year, at a salary of $84.50 per month.

Augusta is making great preparations to entertain the General Assembly when it visits that city Saturday.

Augusta is proud of and deeply interested in the Georgia Medical College, located there, as a branch of the State University, and the citizens are doing everything in their power to advance its interests and welfare. Recently the standard of the college was raised greatly, and it now ranks with the foremost institutions of the kind in the world.

It has been 125 years since the Georgia Legislature was in Augusta, and as it may be as long before it gets there again—although Augusta sincerely hopes not—the forthcoming visit is to be made memorable.

A special train will be run for the benefit of the visitors, going and coming, and a party of not less than 150 has been provided for.

The municipal court bill for Atlanta will be introduced in the General Assembly by the Fulton County delegation on next Monday.

This bill has been carefully drawn and is thought to embody the very best and most up-to-date ideas in courts of the kind.

It will have the backing of the bar and citizens generally, and likely will pass both Houses without friction of any sort.

It is by no means a sure thing that the Tippins bill will not be reintroduced in the present Legislature, notwithstanding the fact that the Georgia Anti-Saloon League is reported to have decided not to request it.

There are some members who think that measure exactly the thing the State needs.

Whether it can be passed is, of course, problematical, but its friends may try it out again, nevertheless.

FREE VOTES CUT AS PONY RACE NEARS END

It is hard to tell who got the most fun out of Sunday's outing at Grant Park, the boys and girls who are in the contests for The Georgian and American ponies, or their elders who gathered to watch them.

Of course, the fun of driving the ponies was all for the children. But the elders got their amusement in hearing the droll remarks of the youngsters, and in seeing their shining faces.

One little fellow spent a good deal of time trying to pick out the pony he wanted. He feels sure he will win, and was concerned only in selecting the best animal.

After viewing all in the park, he still was dissatisfied.

"What's the matter?" asked the contest manager. "Aren't they good ponies?"

"Yes, sir. But please, sir, have you any with blue eyes?"

All the children are working hard now to take full advantage of the extra vote offer which closes Saturday night at 10 o'clock. Until that time there will be liberal allowances of bonus votes for every club of $35, $25 or $15 in subscriptions. The subscriptions may be of any length, from two years down to one month.

As announced, each bonus offer to stimulate the contestants will be a little less attractive as the contest draws to a close. Manifestly it would be unfair to offer in the last week extra votes in greater numbers than during previous periods, thus putting the contestants who "got busy" early at a disadvantage. But the present offer is sufficiently attractive to bring out the best efforts of every contestant.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

JUNE 10.—I was forcibly reminded this morning that my contemplated flight is no dream by the appearance of Manette dressed in her hobo clothes. Instead of the dainty, lace-trimmed white in which she is always attired, she wore a blue checked gingham, her curls had been cropped off; in her hand she carried a blue sunbonnet, and her shoes were a durable, heavy-soled tan.

The little monkey was very much excited because I didn't know her, and danced around the room, darting out the door and across the lawn at the sound of Mrs. Spencer's voice, giving such squeals of delight on the way that I felt that the cure for both of us had begun.

"A happy baby," I murmured.

"A baby no longer," said Richards, who had brought her into the room. There was an unusual note in Richards' voice, and I was not surprised when I turned to look at her to find traces of tears on her face.

"She can dress herself now," she said, half-proudly, and half in complaint. "She wouldn't let me fasten a button for her because she said she would have to dress herself when she is away from me.

"Mr. Max, there isn't a doctor anywhere near where you are going, and what are you going to do without me to nurse her if she gets sick? And who will sterilize her food? The poor little lamb, to be taken into a wilderness like that!"

She covered her face with her apron and began to cry. The doctor is right. The love we have for Manette is weighted too heavily with apprehension for the child's good. It is well I am taking her away.

Comforting Words.

I couldn't scold her. I could only give her the reassurance I had given every day since the trip was planned. That I would telegraph for her at the first symptom of illness; that I would send her a daily bulletin; that I would see that Manette didn't eat this, and remember that last fall she had a fever because she ate too much of that, and that her throat isn't strong, and her stomach is weak, etc.

All I promised to remember because of my respect for Richards' intentions, and all except the bulletins I intend to forget because of my interest in the child.

June 11.—Jack and Sally Spencer came over last evening, and it was the first time I had seen her since Jack's return. I thought she looked a little worn and thoughtful, but outwardly she was her same serene, sweet, wholesome self. She approved of my plans for Manette. I was glad, for I have learned to rely on her judgment.

She wished, she said, that she could take a little child she loved and go away from everybody in the world.

"Complimentary to me," laughed her husband.

Sally winced, a quick flash of color mantled her cheeks and as suddenly receded, leaving her more pale and tired than is her ordinary wont. I wondered her husband didn't see it. Or rather, to speak more truthfully, I wondered that any man could have the love of a woman like Sally, and not show greater interest in her condition.

"It would do me good," she resumed, "in caring for a child one forgets many things."

Just what the doctor had said to me! I am glad I can take the cure.

I wish every hungry-hearted man and woman in the world could know what it is to love and to have the love of a child, and in that way "forget many things."

A Farewell Tea.

June 12.—We start to-night, and Jack and Sally came over to take a farewell make-believe tea on the lawn. I wish I could have been spared it, for, with my sorrow over her unhappiness, my indignation at him and the fight I am making to keep down all rebellious longings, I am rapidly getting myself into a serious state.

"I met Mrs. Brown on the street when away last week," said Jack, drinking make-believe tea out of a cup as big as a thimble.

To be so brazen! I wouldn't have thought it of him! I shouldn't have looked at Sally when he said it. I should have had more sense. But men have no sense in such matters, and I can't claim a credit that doesn't belong to me. So I looked at her, and made no reply, and when Jack, in his asinine stupidity wondered why I made no answer and looked up to see, he found me gazing at his wife with what must have been anything but a conventional tea party expression. And he saw that she had dropped the cream pitcher and it was broken, and that her eyes were filled with tears, and her face white, as she apologized to Manette, an unusual emotion over the loss of a child's dish!

Nor did her color come back, though Manette said it was all right in her sweetest manner, and her tears continued to flow in an altogether uncontrollable way, though Manette climbed on her lap and hugged her and said she didn't care for the dishes and would rather lose all of them than see Aunt Sally cry.

"You are getting as foolish and nervous as an old woman," grumbled her husband. "I don't suppose a dozen tea sets like these cost a dollar."

"They don't," I agreed. "But sometimes we don't reckon the cost of a thing after it is broken."

Manette Asleep.

June 13.—It is midnight, and Manette is asleep in her berth. Poor little girl! I decided when I saw Richards weeping over her, and Sarah Rae wiping her eyes with her knuckles, and the cook and the maids looking as if at a funeral, with Tompkins as the undertaker, that we have all been loving her too much.

Everyone acted as if she might never come back alive, and their lugubrious expressions and tear-soaked farewells made the child look frightened. "Am I your sick baby?" she asked, when we had waved the last good-bye, and Tompkins was taking us to the train.

Mrs. Spencer rode in the limousine with us. It was a journey of an hour's duration to reach the little suburban station I had decided to take to escape newspaper observation, and she insisted on taking it. I was sorry.

Manette, exhausted by the day's excitement, fell asleep in my arms within five minutes, and I think for the first half hour neither Sally nor I spoke a word.

Then she began. "I have been thinking over what you said, Max," she said, "and I refuse to let you think you are right. I need a big brother. Do you know I haven't a relative in the world unless my husband can be called one? You need a sister, someone to help you with the care of that child, and to whom you can come with all your little and big troubles.

"So it is all settled. You are to have no further thought of anything else in your head. I am your sister; you are my brother. It was the happiest relationship I have ever known. I refuse to let it be spoiled by your silly notion that you may not care more for me than you should."

Not another word was spoken. We reached the station, and the train pulled in. I carried Manette to my stateroom, and then returned to the limousine to bid good-bye to Sally.

Another Kiss.

I held out my hand. She ignored it, and put both arms around my neck.

"Good-bye, best brother in the world," she whispered, kissing my cheek.

God! It was more than mortal man could stand. I threw my arms around her, and when I left her a moment later I am sure that I took with me every hope she could have had that my love for her was like a man feels for his sister.

Wrong Stuff.

Entering a barber's shop, a customer with scanty locks asked for a bottle of hair restorer, with which the assistant promptly supplied him. For a time he persevered in his application of the remedy for missing hair, but this only resulted in raising bumps in his cranium which would have puzzled the most expert phrenologist. In haste he returned to the barber's shop.

"Look," he exclaimed, excitedly, "what the stuff you sold me in this bottle has done to my head."

Puzzled and perplexed, the barber took the bottle, examined it, then turned to the assistant and fairly shouted:

"You blockhead! What you have sold this customer is not hair restorer. It is my patent recipe for bust developing!"

Plenty of Time.

Mr. Styles: "I have two tickets for the opera."

Mrs. Styles: "Oh, good! I'll go and put my hat on right away."

"All right, dear. I guess you'll be ready in time. The tickets are for to-morrow night."

The Ghost Breaker

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Is this man Warren, the ghost-breaker?"

"Remember, he's harmless," cautioned Jarvis, to the detectives out of the corner of his mouth. "Humor him—agree with anything he says."

The Duke was almost blind with fury because he could not hear the mumbled words. There is no knowing what he would have been if he had heard them.

"Answer my question!" he stormed. "Is this man Warren, the ghost-breaker?"

"Tom" had to hide behind his more self-possessed friend, who managed to gurgle:

"Now, that's all right, Dook. Sure he's a ghost-breaker! Ain't he, Tom?"

Tom was nearly purple in the face, but he managed to get out in a half-strangled voice:

"Surest thing you know, bo."

"Sacristi!" foamed the exalted cousin. "Am I, Hernado d'Alva, to be mocked at by two grinning, bull-necked scullions?"

"Shake a leg there!" called a voice from the deck, "if you are going ashore with the pilot!"

The detectives staggered weakly to the door and Driscoll feebly waved his hand farewell.

"You're all right, Dook, old boy! Ghost-breaker! Whee! Wow! Ha, ha!"

The Ambush at the Inn.

Segura, cupped in a fertile valley among the jagged red-brown Spanish mountains, was the natural home of rest. When you came down to it over the winding mountain road it breathed from afar the spirit of dolce far niente. All day long it dozed in the soft yellow sunlight, and all night long it slept in the dim glow of the great yellow stars.

At times its peace was broken by the sudden, fierce descent of a mountain storm. Then the wild lightnings play around the towers of the old castle perched high above it, and the warm rain lashes through the olive trees and beats clamorous summons on the flat roofs of the houses.

But these storms quickly pass and leave Segura greener, fairer, lazier and sleepier than before.

Scientists have observed that a people inevitably conform themselves to their environment; that in their character and even their physical make-up they reflect the climate and topography of their native land. It was so with Segura and the Segurans. They were a solidly built, but for the most part a placid and ox-eyed breed, but likely to be swept by sudden and violent storms of passion, when the steel flashed, sharply and deadly as the mountain lightning. Excitement, passion of any sort, quickly spent its force.

The Little Inn.

Entering the town by the old Roman road, which is still the one decent highway of the region, you pass the little Church of Our Lady of Roncomadour and just beyond it you come upon the one little inn of the town. Here the villagers have for generations done most of their gambling, dueling and drinking. You enter into a large room and see a fireplace at your left and tables scattered about the floor in front of it.

At your right the staircase rises against the front wall of the room, so that only the foot is visible from the door. Beneath the stairs are two deep windows, so close together as to be practically one. There is a table in this little alcove and it is a fine place in which to eat your supper, for the windows command a view of the valley and, beyond, the rugged mountains and the great castle, dark and stern, against the sunset. Sitting there you would be disappointed if you were not told that the old castle was haunted. Its great square towers and sheer, half-ruined curtains hark back to a time when ghosts should have been bred by the score.

The Seguras had wrenched it from a feudal enemy and held it for their king. The Moor had been thrust back from its walls three times in the last days of Granada. Its towers had rung with battle cries and crash of blade and armor. Its halls and stairways had been slippery with blood and its moat choked with the harvest of the fight.

You may have some difficulty in obtaining this table, as it is a favorite one of the Seguran card players and idlers. Any of the other tables will be generally at your disposal, for most of the natives prefer the wineroom, which is at the end of the passage that opens at the rear. But this particular spot is a favorite.

Just at this time it was at a premium, especially as night fell over the valley. For even the bovine nature of the Segurans was stirred by the repeated tragedies and unsolved mystery of the grim and deserted castle.

Gaspar, a fat-faced, round-bodied villager, one of the most sedulous of the customers of Pedro, the inkeeper, sat at the little table by the windows and told the latest developments to a friend just returned from his military service in Africa. The young Prince had gone in to lay the ghost and find the treasure. That was two weeks ago, and—Sancta Maria!—not one sound or sign of him since.

"What men will not do for money or women!" commented the bravo, with piety. He looked keener and more alert than the other villagers as a result of his recent army experience. His name was Maximo. "Did he go in alone?" he asked.

"Old Vardos, his father's body servant, pleaded with him all the way to the angle where the brook runs out of the moat not to throw away another life for that phantom treasure. Every night since then the old man has returned and left a basket of provisions at the main gate." Gaspar's great dark eyes opened and his voice took on a hollow tone. "None of them had been touched!"

Maximo swore with sympathetic vigor.

"And wouldn't any one go in there with him?"

Gaspar stared at him as if he thought him demented.

"No! Why should they?"

"He is your Prince," frowned the soldier.

Gaspar shrugged his shoulders uncomfortably and shuffled his feet under the table.

"Isn't a man's life his own?" he growled.

"Sacristi! You are a lot of old women," snapped Maximo. "Where is his sister—the Princess? What is she doing about it?"

"She's not here—she is away—gone on some mysterious errand to America. It is rumored in the village that she went to get a man to fight the ghost."

The soldier flushed a brick-red under his dark skin.

"In the name of the Virgin! Did she have to go that far for some one with stomach enough to go into the castle?"

At the moment Dolores, the innkeeper's daughter—the pretty black-eyed belle of the village—slipped into the room and wanted to know what was the matter. Gaspar explained that he thought he had seen a light from the main tower of the castle a short time before and was explaining the situation to his friend. The girl pooh-poohed the idea and the twain departed for the wine room in search of refreshment.

Dolores was evidently waiting for some one. She went to the window and looked out down the road repeatedly. At last she was rewarded by the appearance of a lithe, gray-haired man, who hastened to greet her.

"Any news, Vardos?" she cried eagerly.

He held out a basket which he carried. His face was gray and solemn and his eyes shone in the firelight.

"Nothing," he replied in a low, faltering voice. "Here is the basket—untouched, as usual." He placed the basket on the table by the window and stared out at the castle for a moment in silence.

"This is the fifteenth night," he added. "Gaspar swears he saw a light in the tower to-night," said the girl, in the same hushed tones. The old servitor crossed himself.

"If he did it was an unblessed light."

The girl crossed herself also, and muttered a short prayer.

"You haven't given up hope?" she asked, after a pause, and the question was more of a plea than otherwise.

Vardon shook his head.

THE SPANISH BULLY

The innkeeper came on the run.

"A thousand pardons, senor, he begged, stumbling into the room; "What can I do for you?"

Don Robledo glared at him until the innkeeper was reduced to a condition of abject terror, then snapped:

"My horse is outside. Wash out his mouth and don't water him until he is cool. Leave the saddle on."

"Yes, senor. Yes, senor."

No Hope.

"I gave up hope when he went in. I waited to-night until an hour past sundown, and twice I called. Once," he gulped and his voice grew shakier, "a wail came back to me! It may have been the wind through a grated window, but it sounded like a sigh of the damned! When I called again, something moved in the turret of the keep, like a man waving, and my heart leaped with joy. But only for an instant; for, with a harsh cry, a black, ugly bird flapped from the turret straight for where the sun had set—on my left! Mind you, the left—"

Dolored shuddered and her lip trembled.

"Oh, if the Princess were only here!" she wailed.

"She's on her way—but what can she do?"

Dolores' slender body straightened instantly and the shadow of terror disappeared. Her eyes flashed and her bosom heaved with sudden passion.

"She will go straight to the castle," she cried. "And will Segura have it said that she went alone?"

This time it was Vardos who shuddered. "God forbid that it should come to that!" he exclaimed, fervently. "Good-night."

The little inn was undisturbed for some little while after the departure of Vardon. It was nearly 8 o'clock when a tall, powerfully made man galloped up on a black horse, tossed the bridle to a hostler and strode into the main room of the inn. He had probably the hardest face in all the rough region of hard faces. His mouth was wide, but was a mere slit in a craggy countenance. His cheeks were laced with white scars. One long weal traveled from the bridge of the nose downward to the angle of the jaw. His eyebrows were bushy and jet black and shaded the most sinister and menacing pair of black eyes ever set into a human face. This was Don Robledo, bravo, duelist, general "bad man" and right-hand ruffian of the Duke of Alva.

Finding no one about he thumped the top of the table with his riding whip and bellowed:

"Hey! You, Pedro!"

The Bully.

A sleepy voice replied somewhere in the recesses of the house.

"Wake up!" roared Don Robledo, whacking the table again.

Then the inn-keeper seemed to recognize this peculiar summons, or the voice of the summoner, and he came on the run.

"A thousand pardons, senor!" he begged, stumbling into the room. "What can I do for you?"

Don Robledo glared at him until the inn-keeper was reduced to a condition of abject terror, then snapped:

"My horse is outside. Wash out his mouth and don't water him till he is cool. Leave the saddle on."

"Yes, senor! Yes, senor!"

Pedro made hurriedly for the door, but was stopped by a sharp command.

"Hold on. If that rat-infested larder of yours is empty, get it filled before His Excellency arrives."

"The Duke coming here!" exclaimed Pedro. "When?"

"To-night. Don't stand and stare! Where's your daughter?"

"I'll call her," the inn-keeper assured him, hastening out.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Household Suggestions

To keep the hands soft have a bottle of olive oil on your washstand, and before washing the hands rub a little of the oil well in. Then soap and wash as usual. The oil loosens the dirt and also keeps the skin soft.

Grass stains may be removed from washing materials by carefully rubbing the spots with a little fresh lard. Then wash in the usual way, and you will find that the stains have entirely disappeared.

To make bread crumbs quickly place a piece of bread in a muslin bag, tie the opening, and rub with the hands. The crumbs will be quite fine, and it will only take a minute or two to bake them.

To make cabbage digestible, when half boiled pour off the water and place in fresh boiling water.

When preparing the whitening for ceilings or pantries, add one pint of oiled milk, after you have put in as much water as you require. The milk gives the ceiling a beautiful gloss when dry and keeps the whitening from rubbing off.

Tea Made with Boiling Milk instead of water and allowed to stand for four minutes before being poured off the leaves is excellent for invalids and most nourishing.

An Economical Way of Frying Onions is to place sufficient cold water at the bottom of the pan to cover it, then slice the onions and put them into the pan with a piece of dripping the size of a walnut. Fried in this way they will not burn.

Introducing Himself.

A gentleman was once advertised to sing at a charity concert presided over by a city councilor—a self-made man. The first song was "The Owl." On rising to announce it the chairman was interrupted and informed that the singer had not arrived, a fact that he duly notified to the audience.

A little later, however, the missing baritone made his appearance, and was observed by the worthy chairman, who called on him without delay.

But the singer had hurried, and had not recovered his breath, so, with apologies, this fact was suitably explained and another artiste requisitioned. At length the baritone was quite ready.

The councilor rose, and quite innocently discomfited the long-awaited singer by announcing with marked confidence:

"Mr. Hampton will now favor us with the longed-for 'Howl!'"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FORGIVE HIM, OF COURSE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The other day, while talking to a young man, he kissed me. I was very indignant, and refused to speak to him again. He sent me a letter of apology, and apologized personally, but still I refuse to speak to him. Would you advise me to ignore him entirely?

C. T.

He has shown due repentance, and I hope you will forgive him. If he is the gentleman I hope he is, he will not repeat the offense until an engagement makes it a privilege.

I HOPE NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been in love with a cousin for four months, and although we have not spoken of it, I feel that she reciprocates. But, being a young man of a serious mood, I am at times annoyed by her teasing and silly actions, also I am grieved because when there is company she seemingly neglects me for other young men, while when we are alone she accepts my attentions. Do you think she loves me?

MUSIC LOVER.

You are cousins, which should be a bar to any closer relationship. Though you were not, I would still hope she did not love you, for you, being "of serious mood," would change her happy, merry disposition to one more grave, instead of being glad. The Lord made her that way.

CERTAINLY.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I would like to know if it is proper for me to ask a friend if I may take her home. If it is, I would like to know the proper thing to say.

A. H. B.

"May I take you home?" is the simplest and best form to use. Always ask her, never taking it for granted, as some men have done, and in that way compelling her acceptance.

Henry Gets a Rest

"HENRY said," related Mrs. Dillpickle, "that he was not feeling very fit and the change would do him good. 'If you insist,' said he, 'on spending a week in Michigan at the summer cottage getting things ready for the family invasion I might as well go along. There will be fishing—it's just the time for bass—and, besides, maybe I can help you.'

"Henry added that last phrase with the air of a guilty sudden thought. He is a good husband, but I must say that around the house Henry Dillpickle is about as much use as a flying machine or a white elephant. But I let him go along. I've had experience before when I yearned for a strong right arm to beat rugs and rake and spade and scrub and couldn't hire any one because all the men were doing spring plowing and all the women were busy wiping up mud tracks after them.

"Henry has put on too much weight and all winter he mourned because he had no time to take an expensive gymnastic and massage course to run down his weight. He has talked loud and long about how willingly he would live on bran diet and be pounded to a jelly if only he could lose weight, and I thought I saw a way to help him and also myself.

A Feverish Stare.

"When the launch dumped us and our baggage on the pier and went coughing away Henry began looking at the lake with that absorbed, feverish, fisherman's stare. I stopped that immediately.

"'Run on to the cottage, Henry,' I said, 'and get the wheelbarrow and cart up the trunk and the linoleum and the suit case and the groceries.'

"'In these clothes?' he howled reproachfully.

"'There is a lovely suit hanging in the closet at the cottage,' I told him. 'Don't you remember? It's the one you wore when you fell into the lake and went herring and got run over by the Fishers' automobile. There is fringe on the cuffs, but nobody will see you—trot on!'

"The way Henry puffed and steamed getting that luggage to the house would have been heartrending had I not been too busy cleaning out the kitchen. I made him eat his lunch on the kitchen table, which broke his proud heart. Just as he was getting out an after-lunch cigar I put a spade into his hand.

"'You will have time to fix about half the garden this afternoon,' I told him. 'Then there's the yard to rake, and I want what's left of the woodpile moved, and you know we're going to make a new path to the lake. Meanwhile, I wish you'd beat these rugs.'

"Henry looked at me reproachfully, but I was adamant. 'I did think,' said he feebly, 'that maybe I'd get a nice mess of fish for dinner——'

"'Fish!' echoed I. 'Oh, my, no! Not when I have a lovely can of salmon ready!'

"Henry groaned and took up the white man's burden. He went to bed at 7 o'clock that night, walking bent over like an old man. He said that never again should he wonder at the hobbling, shuffling gait of steady farmers. He understood why they couldn't straighten up.

"He tried to slip out at 5 the next morning to go fishing, but I opened one eye and suggested that it would be nice if he would start the kitchen fire and a blaze in the fireplace. Two hours later I found Henry, all smudged like a stoker, shaking his fist at the kitchen stove, which he had entirely covered with all the ashes he hadn't scattered over the floor. 'I've put everything on that fire of yours,' he stormed, 'from kerosene to vanilla extract, and it won't burn! There is a Michigan law against cook stoves burning, I know! I—'

"When I suggested that if he opened the drafts instead of shutting them it might be better, Henry just blew up and popped out of doors, where he chopped the window boxes into kindling wood before he realized what he was doing. I had to stand over him that day to make him keep on with the garden. By night he said he felt queer and knew he was going to die and that he had no idea I had such a cruel and inconsiderate nature.

"The next morning he groaned feebly when I woke him and then he refused to get up. He said his head ached and his back ached, and his legs and arms ached, and why in thunder didn't I hire a man to do my slaving and let him expire in peace?

Glad To Go.

"I had to spend a great deal of the day putting hot cloths on Henry's aches and pains and soothing his disposition, and when he did rise from his bed of suffering he said 'Ouch!' whenever he moved, and he looked pale.

"The last day there I let him go fishing and he came home with a fine string of fish. He nearly fainted when I said that, of course, he would have to clean them for me. Henry Dillpickle can't kill a mosquito without gulping, and those fish were still lively. At dinner he said he guessed he had lost his fondness for fish.

"Henry said he was mighty glad to get home," concluded Mrs. Dillpickle, "where he could recover his health and strength after his strenuous rest in the country!"

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a comity of ladies calm to the house last nite. Thay belong to a new club wich Ma has joined, called the Sisters of the Songbird. The object of the club, Ma told Pa, is to teech the art of singing & the art of making new & butiful songs & sending them to forin lands ware the heethen is setting alone in his blindness.

One of the ladies did all the talking. Her naim was Missus Smily Goode. The way she looked at Pa onst wen he tried to say sumthing & interrupted her, it was a awful look. I bet Mister Goode is a kind of a silent man.

The objeck of our order, sed Missus Goode, is to promote song in all its butiful buty. Song & the maiking of songs has progressed, she sed, until it is grate in its vary grateness. What is noabler or grater than one who makes songs? she sed to Pa.

I doan't know, sed Pa, the only song writers I know is jest plain good fellows like Vince Bryant and Billy Cobb or Harry Williams. Thay don't feel grate or noabel excep sumtimes late at nite or at a stag party, Pa sed.

But I mean songs for the heethen to make them see the truth, sed Missus Goode. I mean songs that shud be sent to forrin countries.

He Indorsed It.

That is what shud be did with a lot of the songs that is a kind of rage now, Pa sed. One sure thing, sed Pa, if a good heethen mother saw sum of them songs like "Wait Till I Git You Alone Tonite" & a lot of that tripe, she wuddent let her littel heethen daughter sing it, Pa sed. I doan't think we peepul in this country have a rite to send misshunaries anyware after standing for sum of the songs that make a hit here.

You doan't seem to understand, sed Missus Emily Goode. This is the kind of songs we are going to send to the heethen like this one wich I have just rote. Then she sang:

Kindness, kindness, gentle kindness
Must be shown by all us gurls
To the heethen in his blindness
Diving after preshus pearls.
Oh the foolish pearls he dives for
Underneath the deep blue sea.
Vain are the foolish things he strives for,
Let us help him, you & me.

CHORUS.

Kindness, kindness, that's the word
That by heathen must be herd.
Preech it, sisters, everyware,
Sing it to sum heethen air,
Till the cannibuls we know there
Will not gulp us wen we go there.

Well, sed Pa, ware are you all deer littel cunning reeformers going to get the gelt for this grand movement? You cant maik it by publishing & selling yure songs, sed Pa, beekaus the song bisness is on the fritz.

Strong, Brave Men.

We are going to deepend on you strong, brave men to help us out, sed one of the Sisters of the Songbird. We are kind of deependent on you noabel men, after all is sed & done about our wanting to vote & all that. We lean on you.

Not on me, sed Pa. I am too long in the league. I wont give a cent. Put that in yure pipes and sing it, sed Pa.

What She Was Meant For.

A lady of great beauty and attractiveness, who was an ardent admirer of Ireland, once crowned her praise of it at a party by saying:

"I think I was meant for an Irishwoman."

"Madam," rejoined a witty son of Erin, who happened to be present, "thousands would back me in saying that you were meant for an Irishman."

A Stunning Hat

Fully Described by Olivette

By Olivette.

A WONDERFUL picture hat for the fresh young face is the one we illustrate to-day. Black Milanese straw forms the foundation, and a double flounce of accordion plated maline shadows the brim. The maline covers the rounded crown and a narrow fluting of it edges the top of the crown. At the base of the crown in front nestles a great full-blown rose in glowing crimson, and wound loosely around the crown is double-faced black satin ribbon, which falls in graceful loops and ends from the down-curving back brim. One end of the ribbon is almost to the waist, and the other falls almost to the knees—a most unusual new feature.

Something Neat

"I THINK I'll put in one of those marble fountains over at my country house this summer," said the fat man, meditatively.

"Don't you do it!" quickly objected the lean man. "Try to keep from putting on style. Did you ever hear what happened to Page last year—Rawiston C. Page, who ran hotels here in Chicago and gained fame for the elaborate equipment in the liquid solace portion of his biggest venture? That was a famous old place, and I guss any prominent man in the United States who hadn't visited that arrangement of—solid mahogany and plate-glass mirrors was either a paralytic or couldn't break through the crowd.

"But when Page disposed of his business some years ago, he found himself with about $50,000 worth of mahogany and mirrors on his hands. The new management had different plans. The mahogany and mirrors didn't bother Page much, because by this time he was too busy planting strawberries and green peas over on his Michigan estate and digging holes for fence posts, while his hired men stood around and admired his muscle.

"I don't know any man who has more fun with anything than Page has had with his Michigan country place. He built things all over it, and whenever he could use up unlikely material, he was tickled to death. He swelled up frightfully over a garage made from Venetian blinds that were left from wrecking one of his buildings, and when he planned out a winter home for his two pet cows from a sailboat and some laths, he was perfectly happy. When it became necessary last year to build a brand-new chicken house, he almost got a headache because he was afraid he would have to have just a normal, prosaic, usual chicken house. And his collection of fowls is too valuable and good looking to be condemned to anything like that. Then one night he awoke with a yell of joy and wrote a telegram, and by the next boat from Chicago along came the mahogany and plate glass that had been reposing in storage.

"The country contractor nearly had a fit and even wept tears of protest, but Page couldn't hear him. The chicken house was built on one of Page's back lots next the public road that runs through Page's estate, and the mirrors were put on outside, because the hired man who cared for the chickens stormed around so. He insisted that chickens needed sleep, particularly nervous, blooded chickens, and he pointed out that if the mirrors were inside, the hens would spend all their time preening and primping, that being the nature of the female sex.

"I tell you that was a great building. On a sunny day it was a regular mirage. Everybody, from the young women guests at the summer hotel a quarter of a mile away to the girl who did laundry work for the cottagers, used to make pilgrimages to Page's chicken house to see how their skirts hung and their general effect approaching from a distance.

"Those mirrors were a regular delight to the women. They said it was the first time in their lives they had had access to a looking-glass with plenty of room around it. The hired man caught one woman trying to pry loose a mirror with her nail file the night before she was to leave for home, but the contractor had done his work too well.

"Barring the death of a $500 rooster that got so infuriated at his reflection one day that he fought it to the bitter end, nothing serious happened till the time old Markham undertook to ride by on a bicycle one moonlight night when he had tarried too long in the village. He was the kind who is opposed to progress, forks on the table and women folks who can't work in the field. The reflection of the lantern on his handle bars in the chicken house mirrors caught his eyes. It followed him.

"'Y' wull, wull ye?" he roared, and headed his wheel in its direction. The mysterious person with the light approached him as rapidly. There was a terrific collision, and then Markham fell on his enemy with a howl of rage.

"Swinging his bicycle over his head, he used it as a weapon, and, dazed and infuriated by the cutting shower that fell over him, he kept on madly smashing. When he stopped there wasn't enough glass left in the side of the chicken house next the road to use in a vanity case.

"Three-quarters of the hens suffered from nervous prostration the rest of the summer and refused to work. The worst of it was that any woman who wanted to see how her skirt hung had to climb the fence and go around to the other side of the chicken house, and there were lots of complaints to Page on that score.

"Page said there was no use trying to elevate the architectural sense of the countryside. He was so discouraged that he built a woodshed of mere lumber while he wasn't thinking. The mahogany chicken house made him a lot of trouble."

"Maybe a marble fountain would be ostentatious," remarked the fat man.

Their Married Life

Helen Determines to Brave Warren's Wrath and Engage Rooms at Another Hotel.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

HELEN opened the door to the grinning French maid with the coffee and rolls. The girl looked uncertainly around for some place to set the tray, for on the only table Helen had unpacked her traveling bag.

"Wait, you can put it here," and Helen hurriedly cleared off the table.

The maid, who could not understand or speak a word of English, put down the tray, chattered something in French, and hurried out.

"Breakfast come?" called Warren from the bedroom.

"The tray's come, but I shouldn't call it breakfast," answered Helen, viewing it with disgust. "Just see how they serve things here!"

It was certainly not an attractive tray. There were only coffee and rolls. A roll and a blackened spoon and knife was thrust in each of the thick, chipped coffee cups. There was a small plate of butter, a brown earthenware coffee pot, a pitcher of hot milk, a saucer with a few lumps of sugar—and nothing else. There were no napkins, and not even saucers for the cups.

"Well, they don't believe in unessentials, that's certain," was Warren's comment as he surveyed the tray.

"Look at that silver!" exclaimed Helen indignantly, taking the blackened spoon and knife from one of the cups.

"I'd hardly call it silver. But come on—draw up a chair there. It's after nine now and I ought to be out of here."

Helen spread a fresh towel on the table to serve as a cloth, and arranged on it the meager contents of the tray.

"Here, dear, this is as good as paper napkins," taking from her trunk some crumpled tissue paper.

Helen in Distress.

"Oh, don't be so darn particular," pouring out his coffee, while Helen wiped out her cup and spoon with the paper. "You've got to put up with a lot of things when you travel."

"I can put up with almost anything—if it's clean. But I don't think this place IS clean. Hadn't you better tell them as you go out that we're not going to stay?"

"I've no time to look up any other place," he frowned. "I'm here on business and got to be on the job. We can put up with this for a couple of weeks—won't be here longer than that."

Helen flushed. "Dear, I CAN'T stay at this place. I tell you it isn't CLEAN! I can't eat here," pushing back untouched the cup of muddy, brown coffee.

"See here, the place for anybody that's as blamed fussy as you—is at home! If I'd had any sense, I'd left you there."

"But can't I find other rooms?" pleadingly. "I haven't anything else to do—I can start out the first thing this morning. Dear, you said we didn't have to stay here if we didn't like it."

"Well, I like it all right. This is good enough for anybody. We've got two big rooms right on the Boulevard, within a stone's throw of the Opera House—what more do you want?"

He pushed back the shabby red velvet arm chair, crumpled the tissue paper into a ball and threw it on the table as he rose.

"Now I'll be back here about half-past six, and we'll go out to dinner. You can fool around the shops or do anything you like—but we're going to let well enough alone and stay right here. Understand?"

He strode into the bedroom, brushed his hat, jammed it on his head, got some papers out of his suit case and started for the door.

"Now, you've got enough money?"

Helen nodded.

"Well, the American Express Company is right around the corner—they'll tell you how to get anywhere. You might stop in there and see if there's any mail for us.

An Appalling Thought.

Helen followed him to the door, realizing that when Warren went out on the street he would be lost to her—there would be no way she could reach him until 6 o'clock. To be left so alone the first day in a foreign city seemed suddenly somewhat appalling. Warren kissed her hurriedly, and drew away from her clinging arms with a curt:

"Now, take care of yourself. Don't get run over. You have to look where you're going here—these cabmen'd sooner run over you than not. Go to the Bon Marche. That's a big shop—you can spend most of the day there."

When he had gone, Helen glanced around with a dismayed sense of her loneliness. And this place—she HATED it! The strong morning sun lit up the shabby carpet and the dusty, worn, red velvet furniture. The bedroom with its now disordered bed and untidy wash-stand was even less attractive.

A few minutes later Helen, armed with her guide-book and a book of French phrases, locked her trunk and started out—determined to find other rooms in spite of what Warren had said.

She knew the Continental Hotel was very near, for he had pointed it out as they drove from the station. When she entered the lobby, it was with a sight of relief. At least this looked more like the hotels at home. One of the clerks, who spoke English, informed her that they had not a single vacant room and would not have for the next ten days.

From there Helen went to the American Express Company. She paused to view the Opera House which the guide-book said was the heart of Paris.

It was a majestic building, but Helen was not in the mood for sight-seeing this morning. The wonder of being in Paris was somewhat dulled by what she considered the "wretched" place at which they were stopping. For Helen had none of the instincts of a real traveler. Her first demand was for cleanliness and comfort—to her the joys of sightseeing were secondary.

The American Express Company was a big, hospitable building on the corner. Two-thirds of the Americans in Paris have their mail sent to this office, and when Helen entered a dozen or more were writing letters and taking advantage of the guide-books, dictionaries and bureau of information. At the mail window Helen asked timidly if there was anything for Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Curtis."

The clerk took down a big package of letters from the "C" pigeon-hole, shuffled over them quickly and threw out three for Warren and one for herself. Helen went to a desk by the window and eagerly opened the letter from her mother.

Carterstown, Mo.,
June 24, 1913.

My Dear Helen—I am writing this several days before you sail so that it will be awaiting for you when you reach Paris. Do hope your voyage will be a smooth one, and that you will not be seasick.

I am sending you a clipping from the "Daily Trumpet." I don't know how they get the news out here, but you see they do. Everyone here thinks it's fine that you can travel so much. To go to London last year and to Paris this year—that's more than anyone in Carterstown can do. Did I tell you that the Episcopal Church had made up a fund to send their pastor, Dr. Eldridge, abroad this summer? The two Dobson girls are going also. But they're all going on a cheap line from Montreal. You are very fortunate to be able to go on the best line and in such grand style.

I know you will enjoy all the sights in Paris and the many beautiful shops. Send me a post card when you can. I will not expect you to write much, as I know you will be too busy.

I hope Warren will be successful in his business, as you write that this is only a business trip.

With love to both. MOTHER.

The clipping from her home town paper, Helen read with an amused smile:

"Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Curtis, of New York City, are sailing for Paris on the Kaiser Wilhelm. Mrs. Curtis was formerly Miss Helen Allen, of this city, and has many friends and relatives here. Mr. Curtis is a prominent lawyer in New York. We hope that their trip will be a pleasant one."

She slipped the letter back into the envelope, wondering if they would think Warren and she were traveling in such "grand style" if they could see the room she had left this morning.

A Daring Plan.

Helen looked up quickly as two American women sat down nearby.

"You're staying at the Ritz, aren't you?" asked the other one.

"Oh, no, we discovered the most wonderful little hotel this year. We've two beautiful rooms for only twenty francs a day! Everything's so clean and the service is PERFECT. Perhaps you know of it—Hotel Ronceray, 19 Rue Montaigne.

Helen hastily scribbled the address in the back of her guide-book, then gathering up her mail, she went deliberately over to the information desk and asked what bus would take her to the Rue Montaigne.

Two beautiful rooms for twenty francs a day, and they were paying sixteen at that dreadful place! Helen's lips were suddenly set in a little grim line of determination. If this hotel was as that woman had described it, she would brave Warren's wrath and engage the rooms. She would even retain them with a deposit—a deposit large enough to insure their taking them.

It was so rarely that Helen ever took even the slightest initiative without consulting Warren, that when a few moments later she climbed on the bus that was to take her to the Hotel Ronceray, her heart beat fast at her own daring.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Now you'd better go and go quick!

CHAPTER XVII.

WHEN Jennie and the fellow met Tom, as they were going into the place—that Jennie thought was only a restaurant—Jennie just nodded to Tom and was going on in with the fellow. But Tom stood in the way and asked Jennie if she hadn't better come home with him.

At this the fellow got real angry and asked Tom who HE was and what business was it of HIS. Tom didn't pay any attention to the fellow, but would not let Jennie pass. Jennie was for getting angry, too, and told Tom it was none of his business.

Then Tom finally told her that her aunt, the boarding house keeper, was very sick and that she had sent him to bring Jennie home in a hurry. The fellow shook his fist in Tom's face and tried to shove him aside. Tom grabbed him by the collar, shaking him, and said, "You measly rat, I know about this place where you are trying to take this young girl and if it wasn't for creating a scene I'd break every bone in your wretched body, and now you'd better go and go quick, for I might do it anyway, before this hot weather makes me lose my temper."

Tom then took Jennie by the arm and walked off down the street. Jennie had never seen Tom quite so aroused, and, strange to relate, she was as meek as a lamb and walked with him to the car, never saying a word.

When they were on the car, Tom turned to her and said, "Jennie, girl, your aunt isn't sick. She didn't send me for you at all. I just told you that to get you away from that place and that fellow. I happened to be passing and saw you with that man and going into that awful place and told you that about your aunt, so as to get you away quick. If you had gone into that place you'd never been the same girl afterward, for it's one of the worst places in town, and I love you, Jennie, and I want you to kind a think of me once in a while." But Jennie looked straight ahead, not saying a word.

"Yes," said the meek-looking man, "I've no doubt you've had some great hunting experiences in your travels abroad."

"I have, indeed."

"Buffalo hunting——"

"Yes."

"And bear hunting——"

"Of course."

"Well, you just come round and let my wife take you house hunting and bargain hunting with her. Then you'll begin to know what real excitement is."

The late Sir W. S. Gilbert was inclined to be witty at the expense of the men and women who like to do amateur acting in the name of charity. An enthusiast once said to him:

"Mr. Gilbert, what do you think of our amateur club?"

"I think they are not so much a club as a bundle of sticks," returned the master of repartee.

CRACKERS NOW BATTLING FOR GRAND OLD RAG

They Could Make Only Thirteen Runs Monday, but Managed to Win—Race Tight.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THIRTEEN is certainly a jinx for Atlanta. It's been a jinx all season. It is still jinxing. Take it yesterday. The Crackers were playing a marvelous offensive game—simply marvelous. Yet, try as they could, old Thirteen had 'em anchored. They got right up to thirteen hits and thirteen runs and there they stuck.

It was surely unlucky.

Yet, as the league-leading Billikens could make only seven runs through all a hot afternoon, the Crackers won.

And, since Chattanooga kindly trounced Mobile, the dear old race tightened up another notch.

* * *

FINE doings now in the first division! Montgomery has two games and a half on Mobile. Mobile has one on Atlanta. The locals are a game and a half ahead of Chattanooga.

Verily, some contest!

If Montgomery and Mobile lost again to-day—which would mean that Atlanta and Chattanooga must win, the race would tighten beautifully. The Billikens would hold a lead of a game and a half. But the Crackers would pass the Gulls, while the Lookouts would close up.

* * *

THE pennant bug seems to have bitten the Crackers at last. They played to win yesterday—strictly. And they won.

A team that will bat can not long be denied. And the Crackers everlastingly mauled the pellet yesterday. They had to.

Good old Gil Price was bad, and run after run sifted in while he presided. Then they warmed up Dent, at the earnest solicitation of Whitey Alperman, who nearly waved off an arm getting the thing started. The Washington chap pitched pretty well. They got to him for a run in the sixth and in the seventh he contributed again, this time with the assistance of an error in the outfield. Before the Billiken scoring ended seven runs were chalked up against the Crackers. But that amounted to nothing.

The locals knocked the Brown Boys, B and C, out of the box in the order named. Then Dobbs, having no pitcher, put in Breen. On appearance, Breen is to the pitching mound what a cart horse is to a pair of racing shafts. But he proved the best hurler of the three, and the Crackers scored but two runs while he performed, and those were helped along by two errors.

* * *

ONE gob of gloom cropped out when Wally Smith hurt his hand trying to stop a terrific liner and was forced to retire. But the fans were cheered by the excellent playing of Manush.

Apparently, Smith has forked a prize in this chap. He handled one slow ball phenomenally well, hauled down a pop, and looked useful at the bat, though he didn't happen to grab a hit.

* * *

THE game was full of weird batting performances. Here is a partial list:

Though Bailey scored three runs he was only given one time at bat. Once he walked, once he sacrificed, and twice he was hit. He seemed to think that C. Brown was trying to bean him and, when for the second successive time he was beaned—that time with a terrific ball to the jaw—he tried his best to throw his bat at Brown. Fortunately, Donahue saw the motion, grabbed the bat and hostilities were called off. To return to the batting performances:

Long only made two hits—for seven bases!

Smith hit two sacrifice flies out of four attempts.

Agler got to first three times and scored every time.

Dent made two hits for three bases and scored one run.

Wares made hits his first four times up. He began with a two-bagger. Then he slumped to singles his next pair of times out. Then he hit a three-bagger. A fly to Welchonce in the eighth marred a perfect batting score.

INTERNATIONAL SAILING RACE WON BY AMERICAN

NEW YORK, July 15.—The International sailing canoe cup is to-day safe from foreign invaders for some time to come. "To have and to hold" was the watchword yesterday when Leo Priede, of the Manhattan Canoe Club, the American defender, sent his little craft skimming over the eight-mile course at Gravesend Bay and shot across the finish line two minutes and twelve seconds ahead of his Canadian rival, Ralph B. Britton, of the Ganaoque Canoe and Motor Boat Club.

FOUR CLUBS SAVED FROM WRECK OF INTERSTATE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 15.—For the present the Interstate League will continue under its present name as a four-club circuit, with Erie, Wheeling, Akron and Youngstown as its members. Players of the Steubenville, Columbus, Zanesville and Canton clubs were paid up to July 15 inclusive, and some of them were turned over to the clubs still remaining in the organization.

Marquard Writes About Pitching Hurler Must Control His Speed

By "Rube" Marquard.

(Star Southpaw of the Champion Giants and Holder of the World's Record for Consecutive Victories at Nineteen Straight.)

HITTING ability, declares the baseball sage, covers a multitude of sins. No one in the game will attempt to deny this logic. But in baseball, as in other walks of life, there are a favored few exempt from the usual regulations.

In our profession the pitcher is not looked upon as a necessary part of the heavy artillery, provided he can control with reasonable success the cannonading of the enemy. A pitcher of sufficient cunning to minimize hits need not worry over his ability to manufacture that article.

I would not like to apply to my particular trade a warped form of the opening epigram. I would then say that speed covers a multitude of pitching sins. I am going to tell what I know of the value of speed in pitching because I am constantly besieged with letters imploring advice as to the best way of becoming a great pitcher.

It seems strange that the youth of the land are all bent upon the subject of pitching. I wonder if it can be that old human trait of wishing to get the very most with the least effort? Actually some baseball players believe that a pitcher has a cinch because he has to work only once every four or five days. They forget to calculate ratio, to figure reaction and the time necessary for recuperation.

Speed a Wonderful Asset.

Naturally enough, most of the communications I receive bear inquiry upon the necessary qualification for effectiveness in left-handed pitching. I must have heard by this time from every fork-side boy in the Empire State. To them here, now and publicly, I give this answer: "How about your speed?"

Speed is a wonderful asset either to a right-hander or a southpaw. By speed I do not mean the bare ability to propel a ball swiftly through the air, but to propel it rapidly with some fashion of accuracy.

It goes without saying that speed misapplied is a curse to any boxman. A batter in such circumstances does not have to hit; he is sure of his base by waiting. The catcher is put in the air. The confidence of the supporting cast, largely necessary for good results, is absolutely destroyed.

Controlled speed, however, is the acme of pitching success. This, at least, I know goes for left-handed pitching. Run over the list of the great southpaws of the game and you will find invariably that the chief stock in trade has been pure, unmitigated speed.

Consider "Rube" Waddell, for years the hero of the American League. They used to compare his speed with that of the great Amos Rusie. Eddie Plank, Connie Mack's wonderful veteran southpaw, has a "smoke" ball that he cuts loose at times which is just about as wicked as anything that his stable mate, Bender, can show.

Rucker Has Great Speed.

Nap Rucker, of Brooklyn, is also possessed of tremendous speed. Both these renowned port-siders are wise in experience and do not overwork their arms in developing smoke. They use curves and slow balls judiciously. But when it comes to a pinch, they can turn loose with the next one.

Speed, of course, counts as much to the advantage of a right-handed pitcher as it does to that of a left-hander. But I do not think it is so absolutely essential. It stands to reason that a good fielding pitcher is of wonderful defensive strength. In his presence a manager has five infielders instead of four. Yet a left-handed pitcher is by his very nature handicapped much more severely than a right-handed one, as a strictly defensive instrument.

The great majority of infield plays are made at first base. A right-hander, no matter what part of the infield he may be in when he fields the ball, can so arrange to handle it as to have first base before him. The left-handed tosser must turn completely around before starting his throw. That fractional second often decides the issue of the game.

Now, here is where speed comes to the rescue of the southpaw. By it he can checkmate most effectively all serious attempts at consecutive bunting toward his territory, which, of course, under ordinary circumstances might greatly annoy and inconvenience him. No one yet has contrived a successful method of "laying down" great speed. Its impact against the most loosely held bat is sure to produce some sort of a lively grounder.

A young man seriously contemplating a baseball career should give as much study to his natural qualifications as he would if he had designs on any commercial or professional life. I can not think of a better plan for him to display his wares before some competent, unbiased judge. This may not always be possible. So I will try to give a hint or two that may be helpful.

Southpaw Needs Speed.

No one who is not equipped with fine physical ability should aspire to pitching renown. There have been good little pitchers, but they are the rare exceptions that prove the rule. A right-hander is more liable to get by without rare speed than is a southpaw. But speed is a blessing to any sort of box man. Usually the speediest pitchers are the big men. Size has much to do with it, I think.

It stands to reason that height—or possibly, I should say, length of reach—has a very important bearing. Walter Johnson, of Washington, who is said to be the speediest pitcher of the game, possesses the longest reach in baseball. He spans something like 82 inches. This great length of "whip," supplemented by powerful arm and back muscles, acts as a fulcrum that would put to shame the best effort of a short "wing," no matter how strong.

I am credited with some reputation for "smoke." But my fast ball comes far easier than it did before I got my growth, not because I am any stronger, or use more effort, but because I now possess greater leverage.

For much the same reason a pitcher should be possessed of good hands. Long fingers and a stout grip are almost indispensable. Upon them depend the knack of putting the proper "stuff," or spin to the ball.

CRACKERS GET LEIFIELD; EVERS LETS CRAIG OUT

CHICAGO, July 14.—The Cub management announced that two of its players have been sent to the minor leagues. "Lefty" Leifield, the veteran southpaw pitcher, was first let out to the Atlanta team, as Manager Evers believes he has outlived his usefulness as far as the big teams are concerned.

Craig, the young collegian who joined the team a short time back, was sent to Terre Haute, Ind., for further seasoning.

LYNCH SATISFIED WITH HIS UMPIRES; NO CHANGE

NEW YORK, July 15.—There will be no change in the personnel of the National League staff of umpires this season, according to a statement issued last night by President Thomas J. Lynch. Mr. Lynch says that despite adverse criticism of umpires by several club owners, he has found the umpiring in the National League this year to have been as good as at any time in the last four years.

Sox Buy Chappell; 'Comy' Pays Big Price

CHICAGO, July 15.—Larry Chappelle, the sensational outfielder of the Milwaukee team, of the American Association, was sold to the Chicago White Sox yesterday. For him President Comiskey gave Outfielder John Beall, a catcher whose name was not made public, and a "cash consideration." Chappelle is to report at once. He has been batting around .359 and fielding with the best of them. Practically every club in the major leagues bid for him.

President Comiskey, of the Chicago Club, said that Chappelle was the highest-priced baseball player ever purchased. Beyond stating that he valued Beall at $3,000, Comiskey, however, would not give any figures.

LAGRANGE AGAIN LEADS LEAGUE IN ATTENDANCE

LA GRANGE, GA., July 15.—Official announcement has just come from Georgia-Alabama League headquarters giving the figures on the attendance receipts at all Fourth of July games in the league. As in the case of the opening games, LaGrange leads by a large margin, and this, too, in the face of the fact that both Gadsden and Anniston are very much larger towns than LaGrange.

The receipts for the Fourth of July games were as follows: LaGrange, $382.40; Anniston, $364.35; Gadsden (morning game), $200.45; Gadsden (afternoon game), $212.30; Talladega (morning game), $198.10; Newnan (morning game), $174.20.

Williams and Ledoux In Coast Go To-night

LOS ANGELES, July 15.—The twenty-round bantamweight battle at Vernon Arena to-night between Kid Williams, of Baltimore, and Charley Ledoux, of France, promises to be one of the fastest battles ever staged on the coast.

Williams and Ledoux are almost identical in measurements and fight the same style of battle. The Frenchman is in much better condition than on his previous appearance here, when Eddie Campi won a twenty-round decision over him. Williams is also in prime condition. The betting, which at first was 10 to 8 on Williams, is now even money.

CARRIGAN MAY LEAD RED SOX NEXT SEASON

BOSTON, MASS., July 15.—Despite denials of Manager Stahl, Secretary-Treasurer McRoy and others of the war that has broken out betwen Stahl and President McAleer, of the Red Sox, new evidence of a coming shake-up in the team, with Carrigan as the 1914 manager, are developing.

Declarations that Stahl will not manage the team after his contract expires are gaining among sport writers. Several players who figured in the winning of the world's championship are also mentioned as likely to be soon traded.

* * *

Former Heroes To Go.

STAHL is quoted as saying, in a St. Louis dispatch, "I have troubles enough."

The Sox are anxious to obtain Shotten and Pratt, of the Browns, the former a clever outfielder and the latter a second baseman. The Sox are reported ready to offer Duffy Lewis, Yerkes and perhaps Harold Janvrin, the Boston schoolboy, in exchange. The aim is to get more batting strength and speed.

Seeking More Speed.

The talk that Cady is to be traded to the Yankees for a pitcher and a young infielder is revived to-day. Martin Krugg and Scott, who have been given try-outs by the Sox, are expected to be recalled for utility infielders. McAleer is reported to be doing scout duty himself in the search of players of promise.

The fans look upon these moves as not only building for next year, but also as an attempt to make the "Speed Boys," as the Sox used to be called, a team with much more pepper than it now displays.

Carrigan, who has been in the background most of the time this year, formed with Captain Wagner and Stahl, the strategy board that mapped the Red Sox campaign pennant-ward last year. He was talked of for manager before Stahl returned to the team from his banking berth in Chicago, and is a great favorite with the players and fans.

More ginger, fewer autos and auto rides, and a pennant in 1914 are what Carrigan is expected to bring about.

PRURITIS A SEVERE FORM OF ECZEMA

A Method of Home Treatment That Is Very Effective.

There is probably no other remedy so well known as S. S. S. for the blood. And it is remarkably effective in that form of skin disease known as pruritis, or intense itching. The action of S. S. S. is rapid. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment. And the medical elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food. There facts are brought out in a highly interesting book on skin diseases, compiled by the medical department of the Swift Specific Co., 184 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It is mailed free, together with a special letter of advice, to all who are struggling with a blood disease.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day of your druggist. It will surprise you with its wonderful action in the blood.

Don't accept something offered you as "just as good." The only reason why anyone should not try to sell you something cheaper from crude drugs. Beware of any attempt to persuade you to buy something in place of S. S. S.

Here's a Sure Cure for Health

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

BUSINESS OF CHEERING.

"I never will return again," Jack Johnson boldly said,
And brought a million blessings down upon his kinky head,
And if the smallpox had refused to greet us any more
There would be less rejoicing on this hospitable shore,
And if the ball collectors had refused to hunt us out
Our nation would be less inclined to chortle and to shout.

The report that Mr. Johnson intends to remain in France will not start any international complications—that is, unless France threatens to send him back.

It is said that Frank Chance gains five pounds every time he wins a ball game. At his present rate he may, in the course of years, become heavy enough to classify as a featherweight.

Charley Murphy may be justified in protesting against incompetent umpires, but if all the incompetents were driven from baseball, perchance a magnate or two would be looking for a new job.

Frank Chance thinks the Athletics will win, thereby demonstrating that he is not an original thinker.

Quoth a headline: "Ball Players Oppose Cut in Salary." We have always insisted that ball players greatly resemble human beings.

When Baker Borton is not traveling from the minors to the majors he is on his way back. Some day he may meet and trip himself.

The sensation of the year in the National League is the fact that the Phillies have meandered into the midst of July without having fractured a flock of legs.

SPORT.

Of all the sports I ever knew the one I love the most
Is sitting in a baseball park behind a great big post.

If baseball magnates had the interests of the public at heart (lawfter) they would build grandstands with glass posts. Or they would furnish each man who sits behind a post with an X-ray machine.

St. Louis has just discovered that there is gambling on baseball, thereby demonstrating that it has just recovered from an attack of blindness.

A chain, as a highbrow once remarked, is no stronger than its weakest link. Baseball is no better than its magnates.

When we think it over, this is an awful thing to say about baseball.

What puzzles us is that the magnates have not thought of charging extra money when there is an extra inning game.

Joe Rivers, who broke a milkman's jaw with a wallop, has learned that dentists and milkmen do not belong to the same lodge.

We note by the papers that Debs is winning in a walk. If this were to be printed around election time one would think some copy reader was trying to kid the public.

The gent who put up the kale to support the Porter races is one of our best little spendthrifts. If not, he is affected by the heat.

R. Zeider, the well known planter, announces that the harvesting of his bunion crop has been a complete success.

Mr. Zeider is said to be a clever youth, but he overlooked a golden opportunity. While he was under the anesthetic he could have had several cubic yards of nose removed.

Al Palzer and Georges Carpentier have been matched to engage in a conflict in France. And yet there are skeptics who claim that the dead never come back.

Jack Dillon has split with his manager, demonstrating that he is a bona fide pugilist. A bona-fide pugilist always splits with his manager when he starts to make any money.

Horse racing is one of the most popular of our sports. It is hard to believe otherwise when we note that they are giving away tickets.

ROUGH STUFF.

Perchance it is the lowbrow stuff in all our human blood,
But I always feel a thrill of joy intense
When a roughneck swings a hefty bat and makes a mighty thud
And the ball goes sailing over yonder fence.

Richards Wins Two Races and a Bride

Well, Tex Richards "went and done it."

Last week a story appeared that if Richards, champion motorcycle rider of Dixie, won two races at the last Drome meet he would win himself a bride.

He won both races.

But, of course, having been faked before, the public put it down as a press agent's myth.

The odd part about it is that the story was true.

It leaked out to-day that on Saturday afternoon Wilmer Richards, of Dallas, Texas, was married to Miss Tona Taylor, of Atlanta. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. A. Little at his residence, Forest avenue and Boulevard.

GOLF LANGUAGE AMUSES PLAYER AND SPECTATOR

By Chick Evans.

THE language of golf amuses many people. The names of the whole technology of the game seem queer to the uninitiated. In addition to these ordinary terms, different people and communities have different ways of describing conditions of the game that give a still more original twist to the language.

When our party recently journeyed into Victoria, B. C., we met some delightful Britons and learned something new in the golf vernacular. For instance, they would say, when Warren Wood would tear off a screaming wooden shot, "Oh! big one!" Macan, the Northwest champion, had the most original vocabulary, made all the more impressive by a rich, Scotch-Irish-English accent.

Once, when playing, he kept getting his body in ahead of his shots, and he missed them time and again. Then he would stamp his foot on the ground and mutter, "God's curses." When I was playing with him in Seattle in the second team match my mashie was behaving very nicely and I choked with stifled laughter, when one of the earliest of these shots went near the hole and "Mac" exclaimed, "My word, but that's adjacent!" He called many of his shots "blithering idiots," and when luck ran against him, he would say that he must soon "start to freaking," which meant playing some freaky holes, such as bogey six in four, etc. All of this vocabulary was further enriched by an Irish accent that made his conversation still more attractive. He was truly a fine fellow and added many a picturesque phrase to our golf language.

* * *

A CURIOUS English golf editor, determined to settle the disputed question as to whether women or men took a longer time over a round of golf, so he timed a number of couples at St. Andrews and a number at St. Anne, and discovered the feminine saint was from 30 to 45 minutes faster than the masculine one.

The time appeared to be saved in the execution of the shots, thus showing quicker decision on the part of the woman. The Englishman further quoted Schopenhauer to prove that women relied for their decisions upon instinct more than men do, and "instinct acts quicker than reason."

BROU'S
INJECTION—A PERMANENT CURE
of the most obstinate cases guaranteed in from 3 to 6 days; no other treatment required. Sold by all druggists.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Johnny Kilbane has decided to don the padded mitts again. The champion signed articles yesterday to box Mat Brock in a 12-round bout at Cleveland on Labor Day. The fighters have agreed to weigh 122 pounds at 3 o'clock.

* * *

Billy Gibson, manager of the Garden A. C., New York, is trying to induce Lightweight Champion Ritchie to meet Leach Cross in a 10-round bout next month. Gibson thinks the fight would draw $35,000, of which he offers Ritchie a 50-per cent guarantee.

* * *

Charley Ledoux, the French bantamweight champion, and Kid Williams, of Baltimore, will clash in a scheduled 20-round battle at Vernon, Cal., on Tuesday night. Both boys are in splendid shape and each is confident of victory. The betting favors the Baltimore lad at odds of 2 to 1.

* * *

Willie Ritchie, Joe Rivers and Leach Cross, all of whom have been in the public eye of late, fight under assumed names. In fact, a big percentage of the more prominent scrappers use stage names in the ring.

* * *

Frankie Russell threatens to be the next ring idol with New Orleans' fighting fans. Frankie was given a knockout decision over Johnny Lore, the other night, and is now in line for a match with Charlie White, the Chicago whirlwind.

* * *

Danny Morgan, the talkative manager of Jack Britton, is hot over a match with Willie Ritchie for his protege. Morgan says he will give Ritchie a $10,000 side bet and will also get the club to stage the mill. This is a pretty strong line of chatter for even a man of Mr. Morgan's reputation.

* * *

Jack Dillon, claimant of the middleweight title, has signed articles to battle Toni Caponi in a 12-round set-to at Winnipeg on August 8. Dillon should have little trouble in defeating the Italian scrapper.

* * *

Despite his many years of service in the boxing game, Jim Flynn continues to reap in the dough. The Pueblo fireman is now billed to take on Gunboat Smith in a 10-round affair at New York the early part of next month.

* * *

When Al Palzer arrives in Paris all arrangements will be made for his scrap with the French heavyweight champion, Georges Carpentier. It is said they will get a $15,000 purse.

* * *

Friends of Ad Wolgast are begging the ex-champion to beat it to the farm and get into shape for a return engagement with Ritchie. There are still many who think that the "Michigan Wildcat" would have a great chance to regain his title if he would only get into real fighting shape.

* * *

Frankie Whitney, well known among local boxing followers, will probably make his next fight at Denver. A fight promoter in the Colorado city is after Whitney to meet Eddie Johnson in August. The pair clashed about two months ago with honors even.

* * *

Strenuous efforts are being made by Tommy Burns, ex-heavyweight champion and manager of Arthur Pelky, to arrange a match between his man and Gunboat Smith, to be fought in one of the California clubs. Burns is confident Pelky will defeat Smith if they meet.

* * *

Bud Anderson, the Oregon lightweight, will not fight for six months, according to his manager. Anderson is convalescing rapidly from his operation for appendicitis last Thursday.

INGRATITUDE.

The magnate reeled to his auto—
"Oh, take me to my yacht!"
He moaned, "My heart is broken—
And the day is very hot.
I can not join the thousands
Who watch those ingrates play.
"I hear"—a sob—"they claim I've
No right to cut their pay!"

* * *

CHAMPION RITCHIE, WE understand, is undecided whether to take a trip to Europe or engage in another bout of fisticuffs. If anyone wants to speculate against the trip to Europe we know where he can place a small sum.

* * *

A BIG LEAGUE MAGNATE IS showing evidences of the effect of the recent hot spell. He says that the chief objection to cutting ball games to catch trains is that it is "grossly unfair to the public." Sure! He really means the people who pay to see a whole ball game.

* * *

"FROM NOW ON," ANNOUNCES Johnny Dundee, "I will appear only as a lightweight." Admire his honesty in avoiding the word "fight."

JIMMY TAMSETT, SORE AT ARREST, TO QUIT DIAMOND

ALBANY, N. Y., July 15.—James L. Tamsett, manager and owner of the Albany State League Baseball Club and shortstop of the Memphis team nearly ten years ago, announces that because of the agitation against Sunday baseball and the subsequent arrest of himself and three Troy players on Sunday, June 29, he will withdraw from the game.

Manager Tamsett and the Troy men will be separately tried before Justice of the Peace Christopher Valentine, of the town of Colonie.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Start of Many Breeds Contributed to Fine Show Room Displays

The Number of Birds in Certain Variety Attracts Attention of Beginner.

By JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Each breed has its friends and supporters. The more of these supporters or boosters that get behind a certain breed or variety, the more popular it becomes, and that is the principal reason why some breeds become so wonderfully popular, while others apparently just as meritorious are scarcely heard about. Clubs are formed for the sole purpose of boosting, as they call it, their favorite variety. New buyers are largely influenced by the so-called popularity of a certain variety and the kind of display it makes at the various fairs and shows. First impressions are most often made at fairs where the beginner is often found and becomes interested. He looks about, is impressed by the breeds most strongly represented and shown in the best and most attractive manner. If he finds a breed represented with but two or three pairs he gives but little attention and passes on. But just let him find a large exhibit shown by one, two or three exhibitors in very attractive shape and in fine, healthy condition and the chances are ten to one that our friend will get stuck on them, as the saying goes, and he concludes that they must be about the best chicken to be found. Let there be a lot of half starved, sickly looking, scaly legged chickens upon the other side and see how quickly our visitor will turn up his nose and give them the go-by. Appearances go a long way toward making lasting impressions in the poultry business, as the young fellow told his father when he was out looking for a wife. So my advice to you or any who are in the poultry business and want to get recruits or customers and want them upon your special varieties, is to get up all the interest possible among breeders of that variety and get them to make fine displays, and the more of them the better the competition, which is all the better for trade. I have shown 40 birds of one kind, where one-half that number would have filled that class, but I wanted the visitor to get the impression that there was something doing down my aisle, and you can bet there was. I made my display pay me well in dollars and cents. The superintendent at one particular fair where I exhibited regularly said he wanted me to put my exhibit facing the main entrance. Why? Simply because I brought a large exhibit of one variety, all in first-class shape, clean and the picture of health. As a result I made many sales, got many a beginner to think that the Barred Plymouth Rocks were the only fowl worth having, and I started many on the road to success. I mention these simple facts to show the reader that a little extra effort in the way of appearances or show will pay every time. It will pay the poultry breeders just as well as it will pay the dry goods merchant to make his fine show window displays. It is not the number of breeds we keep that counts for success, but the care and attention we give to each. I have known breeders to make a specialty of some one of what we call very unpopular varieties, and with careful breeding and equally careful exhibiting and advertising make a real success. They went into it to win and they were not disappointed. So after all it is not so much what variety one selects, so long as it is a good, practical breed, and we make up our minds and impress upon the public that it is as good, if not the best, variety on the list. We keep up our end of the business in producing good stock and lose no opportunity to impress upon the public what we think about it. I assure you they will do the rest. You must not rest upon your oars, but keep eternally pushing forward.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Realty Convention Sought by Atlanta

National Association May Come Here in 1916—Local Contractors to Bid—Many Acreage Deals.

That Atlanta will make a strong bid for the ninth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges in 1916 was indicated Monday. Charles P. Glover, retiring president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, will present this proposition at the monthly banquet of the real estate dealers Friday night at the Cafe Durand, at which time the annual election of officers will be held.

"I expect a full attendance and favorable action to be taken," declared Mr. Glover. "Atlanta was not prepared to handle the convention this year, although it was virtually offered the city, but by 1916 the real estate men should be in a position to care for it. We already have some assurances of support in the South if we go out after the convention.

"It appears that Pittsburg will land the 1914 convention, and it is a foregone conclusion that the meeting in 1915 will be held in Los Angeles, on account of the exposition. Then will come Atlanta's chance, and we want to seize the opportunity."

Memphis took a brass band to the convention at Louisville last year in preparation for a formal bid for 1914. Winnipeg having been assured of the meeting in 1913. If Atlanta finally decides to go after the convention it is probable that a unique dress will be provided. Jacksonville promises to be a contender.

The annual election of officers of the Atlanta Real Estate Board is expected to bring out a number of candidates. The meeting is the last before the convention at Winnipeg. Dinner starts at 6:30 o'clock. Notices of it have been sent out by G. Ward Wight, secretary, and a large number of responses is expected.

Bidding for $500,000 Concern.

Atlanta contractors will soon submit bids for the buildings of the Georgia Packing and Stock Yards Company at Macon, whose plant will be one of the most complete in this section. E. W. Gould is president of the concern, L. L. Gibson vice president, and John Rudle, of Atlanta, secretary and treasurer.

The construction work will be under the direction of Lombard & Co., of Atlanta, and the engineer is D. E. Washington, of Chicago, from whom plans are expected soon. The capital stock of the company is $500,000.

Letters to Property Owners.

Letters from the South Side Improvement Club have gone to every property owner on South Pryor street between Georgia avenue and Ridge avenue, and all but two or three of the latter have agreed to give two feet to widen this thoroughfare. The plan is for the city to furnish the materials, the county do the work, and the property owners to waive damages and give enough for the widening. Sixty per cent of the owners have been heard from.

The club is working with the idea that it will go after the Finance Committee of Council next year. The committee meets every Thursday night at McCord's grocery store, Georgia avenue and South Pryor street.

This improvement will open up South Pryor to the Hapeville road and make one of the best north-and-south thoroughfares in the city.

For Wholesale Sites.

Wholesale concerns, especially warehouses, are expected to be located in goodly number soon along the spur track which will connect the Southern and Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railways. The route of the track will be through a small tract just south of the Nelson street viaduct and will extend for the present to Haynes street, two blocks. William J. Morrison, Dr. W. J. Blalock, W. S. McKemie, E. D. Duncan and Robert A. Smythe are interested in the project.

Peachtree Place Purchase.

The Thomson & Lynes Real Estate Agency has announced the sale of three lots at the northwest corner of Peachtree Place and Spring Street to a client for $8,750, through Earle Green and Paul Nuckols, of that agency. The lots are in the Wylie and Brandon subdivision.

Sale of 3,179 1-2 Acres.

Atlanta continues to be the market place for farm lands in Georgia. The Lane Realty Company, for instance, has sold in the last few weeks 3,179 1-2 acres in Georgia and Florida, aggregating $52,500, or an average of about $17 per acre. Some of these lands are very fertile, and wise real estate men consider that purchasers who hold them long enough will not only make them pay, but will be able to sell them at a handsome advance. Panama Canal influences, it is contended, will bring an immediate rise in prices. Another influence is that of immigration, which is pouring into Georgia in a steady stream.

The company mentioned above has also announced some interesting house and lot sales, the aggregate of these and the acreage transactions being nearly $100,000.

The Balkan Nations, Turned Butchers, Have Outraged Humanity

The Balkan races have forfeited the respect of civilization.

Saving only Greece, which holds to the elements of humanity and Christian warfare, the Balkan races within the fortnight have proven themselves to be a horde of murderous savages, of whom the arch savage and murderer is Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

There was never such a fall in history so swift, so sudden—from fame to infamy—from heroism to shame.

The world of civilization was with the Balkans in their war. It was blazoned as almost a holy war—the war of the Christian nations against the Unspeakable and Heathen Turk—the last nemesis of civilization upon centuries of butchery and cycles of barbarity.

The crimson ghosts of Albania and Zeitoun—the holocausts of Christian martyrs incinerated in Turkish fires, the battalions of Christians butchered because they were Christians, the pictures of infants bayoneted before their mothers' eyes, and mothers murdered, with outrage preceding or following fast on murder—aroused the public protest of the Christian world.

Every voice in Christendom rang for Bulgaria and the Balkans. Every civilized prayer was theirs. The Georgian helped to lead and vocalize the great procession of American sentiment that bade godspeed to the Balkan soldiers of the Cross.

And their battle was magnificently won. All records of history were equalled if not surpassed on the battlefields of this modern and magnificent crusade.

Step by step the Unspeakable Turk was driven back from his battlefields of murder. Inch by inch the Crescent yielded to the Cross.

Bulgaria swept from Adrianople to Chatalja. Greek battleships blocked the transportation of Turkish troops and provisions of war. Servia marched from her own victorious battlefields to reinforce the Bulgarians in the crisis at Adrianople and Chatalja, and with the allied legions thundering at the despairing gates of Constantinople, Southwestern Europe passed from the Crescent to Christ, and a great new nation seemed to have been born from the Slavonic races to rewrite history and to shift the balance of power from the elder monarchies to the plains of Thrace—now consecrated to liberty and humanity.

It was an epoch in human history. It was an Armageddon rich in the righteous triumph of the right above the wrong. And in its glorious aftermath the annals of the Christian races should have been remade and amplified.

But almost in a night the scene has changed. The peace of London became the proclamation of a progressive savagery. The men who endured like martyrs and fought like lions could not win like men, but quarreled like jackals over the spoils of victory.

Bulgaria, first in battle, was foremost in her greed, and her crimson hands, wet with heathen blood, and presuming on their strength, reached out to grasp the throats of Christian allies and to seize the territory that Greece and Servia had helped like heroes to achieve. Friends fastened their fangs into each other's vitals with a ferocity fiercer than they had shown their common foe.

The Balkan armies seem to have become as barbarous as the Turks.

Their hatred for the Turk was as nothing to their hatred for each other.

The hideous greed of territory blinded their eyes to every sentiment of Christianity and to every creed of Christ.

They caught from the Turk his bloodiest butcheries and branded them upon their fratricidal strife. The Bulgars at Kilkiss and Kurkut burned alive seven hundred men before their tortured wives with as fine a savagery as ever brutalized the Turk. The Serb at Belgrade shouted jeers and hisses into the dying ears of Bulgarian prisoners, brought from the battle fronts, and hand to hand with fist and foot, with tooth and nail, like primeval savages, fought Bulgar and Serb, who had carried the Cross of Christ in triumph above the infidel and Unspeakable Turk.

The Balkan fortnight behind us is an outrage upon the whole Christian world. These lapsed Christians, these transformed savages of greed, have within ten days lost the sympathy of humanity and their place among civilized nations. They have struck a staggering blow at the faith they followed and their religion and ours they have defiled.

The nations that cried godspeed to the Balkan armies of yesterday are ready now to cry, "Down with the newborn butchers of the Danube," and the world is ready to approve and applaud Austria or any other power that will repossess the territory so unworthily held and proceed to govern the people so obviously incapable and so basely unequal to the task of governing themselves.

LETTERS FROM GEORGIAN READERS

VICTORY FOR WOMEN.

Editor The Georgian:

I wish to thank you for the editorial, "A Great Victory for Southern Women." It was timely and in the right spirit. Georgia women have a right to the use of the State Capitol for meetings and there is no good reason why they should be denied the privilege.

OBJECT LESSONS.

Editor The Georgian:

I enjoy reading The Georgian, especially the editorial page. I tell my friends that the last page of The Georgian is worth infinitely more than double the price of the paper. I save each last page and re-read them and read them to my young friends—the schoolboys. Hal Coffman's pictures are great sermons. Dorothy Dix is a sane and sensible writer. So is Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Drs. Serviss and White. The picture by Coffman showing an old sinner standing reared back in a bar drinking and telling what he used to be was a great object lesson.

The Metal Workers

We Live in the Age of Steel, He Says. Steel is the Synonym of Civilization and the Badge of Prosperity.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

I.

WE live in the age of steel. Steel is the synonym of civilization and the badge of prosperity. When the railroads are buying steel and extending their lines, we are prosperous. The farmer builds barns, fences broad acres, puts up silos, and the young folks make homes. Iron and steel enter into every building project.

America, by reason of her enormous consumption of metals, has earned the title of "The Land of Steel." We are a nation of builders.

Progress is only possible where there is mutuality and co-operation—where we see the seeming paradox of individual liberty harnessed to the car of common weal.

To certain persons of "artistic temperament" the term "commercialism" is anathema. They see no beauty in the smokestack, the skyscraper, the huge mills, the flying locomotive.

Man at the Forge.

They perceive only the dewdrop, the lily, the clouds, the cobwebs, the moonshine. They rave about the grotesque gargoyle upon some old church-tower, but can not imagine the chimney yonder, as it gives out its incense of commerce, a monument to the industry of man.

They rhapsodize about the sunset, but fail to see the magnificence of the man at the forge—framed in glowing gold, wresting steel from stones.

And again we hear men speak of the sordidness of industrialism "The dragnet of avariciousness enmeshes us; the collections for foreign missions show a lamentable decrease, and the automobile industry is booming."

The soap-box reformer spiels of the luxuries of the rich, and draws a harrowing contrast between the Brussels carpet and the elbow cushions of these parasites and the laboring classes.

And some few, mistaking the shadow for the substance, the mirage of ease for the oasis of success, leave the beaten, upward track, and slide down the toboggan of inertia into oblivion.

The vast majority of us, though, realize that industrialism is the lifeblood of the nation; that nothing contributes more to a nation's greatness than its men and women who work; and that true progress is the natural resultant of a people bound together with the sympathy and mutuality incidental thereto.

We are moving onward. Sometimes we whirl like a dervish, remaining almost stationery; at others we outdo the "Limited." We are now alive to the necessity for a sound mind and a healthy body. And we also realize that a healthy body is conducive to intelligent thinking and wise decision.

Mammoth Industries.

Business development is possible only through continuous, concentrated effort and conscientious, painstaking labor. We have countless examples of that truth in the annals of our country's achievements.

Mammoth industries have evolved from small beginnings by the application of those vital principles. Labor has until recently been wholly associated with the pick and shovel, the ax and saw. It is now, however, pretty generally recognized that both bodily and mental sweat is necessary to the successful issue of business enterprise.

"From every man according to his ability, to every man according to his need." One may be a hewer of wood or a drawer of water; another a captain of industry. One may be a toiler in the valley, and still another in the observatory on the mountaintop, reading the signs of the times. Yet what matters it, if they are all co-operating?

The manufacturer needs the miner, the miner the manufacturer. They both need the farmer, and he needs them both.

Brain? Yes. Brawn? Yes. But brawn and brain is the combination. Together they can move the mountains, link countries together, or slice a continent in half. By their exercise we reach up into the clouds and bind the lightning to our chariot wheels or utilize its power in manufacture.

We annihilate space by wireless telegraphy, we spurn the earth with our aeroplanes. We dig and burrow, pump and mine; we tap Nature's stores, and put harness on her forces.

We plow, we plant, and reap; we drain, and irrigate. We make gardens of waste places, and the desert to blossom like the rose.

When trials come, we meet them with manliness.

When difficulties arise, we seek their solution. We are becoming more self-reliant and confident every day. Superstittion and the shackles of the unknown fetter us no longer. We are gods in embryo. We have no limitation but ourselves.

Iron is the most abundant and useful of all metals, and has been known from the remotest time.

The ancient Egyptians were familiar with the process of working iron and undoubtedly knew how to make steel.

Iron in Ancient Days.

Tools found in their temples were made of this metal, and if the British Museum is to be seen an ax-head from the pyramid of Gizeh dating B. C. 4000.

The Assyrians and Babylonians were also skilful workers in iron. The Greeks obtained their knowledge of iron-working from these older nations. The Romans learned the art from the Greeks, and developed it in England, where it had been in operation since B. C. 55.

Other European nations were also workers of iron at an early date, using rude forges and crude methods.

For several centuries progress was slow, and the manufacture of iron or steel was not considered of sufficient importance to be called an industry.

Not until 1350, when the manufacture of cast iron and steel was inaugurated in Germany, did the industry assume any importance.

The fuel used for the smelting of the ore was charcoal. In 1558, the British Parliament (with the prescience which is a permanent characteristic of that august body) passed laws restricting the building of ironworks in some parts of the country, and forbidding the cutting down of trees for fuel. This cutting down of supplies led to the search for a substitute for charcoal for fuel, and in 1619 a man by the name of Dudley used coal for the purpose of smelting. The plan was not received with favor and fell into disuse.

HIS CAREER

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

JOHN SMITH was a baby so cunning and bright
That his parents stood gaping from morning till night,
When crowing and chuckling, as most babies will,
He was thought to possess a comedian's skill.
When quiet and weary, perhaps half asleep,
"My word," said his parents, "that baby is deep!
We'll make him a teacher,
The dear little joker,
Or maybe a preacher
Or lawyer or broker."

John Smith went through college ahead of his friends,
And started with fervor to rough-hew his ends.
His efforts, however, all seemed to fall flat,
For he fizzled at this and he foozled at that.
He was kicked out so often by taskmasters mean
That he looked like the film in a picture machine.
Some people are teachers
And doctors and lawyers
And brokers and preachers
That ought to be sawyers.

MURDER PLOT LAID TO WIDOW AND BARBER

SEEK MAN IN CRAWFORD MYSTERY

Heirs of Capitalist Accuse Friend of Widow of Aiding in Poison Plan.

Declaring that Joshua B. Crawford was the victim of a murder plot between Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford and Fred Lumb, a New York barber, J. S. James, attorney for the heirs-at-law to the $250,000 estate, announced Tuesday afternoon that he would swear out a warrant for Lumb's arrest on the charge of murder and have him brought back to Atlanta for prosecution.

"Lumb and Mrs. Crawford planned this whole thing in Florida," said James. "They planned to turn the estate into cash and get away. Lumb visited Mrs. Crawford in Atlanta before her husband died. He was here when he died, and remained in the city until two months after the funeral. We have evidence that will convince any fair-minded jury this pair plotted to murder the old man, and we will produce it at the proper time.

"I will swear out a warrant for the arrest of Lumb on a charge of murder this afternoon. If he remains in America we will bring him to Atlanta to prosecute him."

"I would cut my throat from ear to ear before I would degrade myself by marrying this woman," is a remark made in reference to Mrs. Crawbord by Joshua B. Crawford before their marriage, accoding to the testimony of Mrs. L. C. Dillingsly Tuesday afternoon in the civil hearing of the $250,000 will case.

Mrs. Dillingsly was one of the witnesses called to establish the contention of the other heirs that the marriage was forced upon Crawford, and that he was not in his right mind when the ceremony was performed.

By another witness it was sought to prove that Crawford at this time was almost constantly intoxicated, and to set up the probability that he was in this condition when he entered into marriage.

Mrs. Dillingsly lived at the Crawford residence on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death. She recited a number of conversations she said she had with him, and asserted that Mrs. Crawford at one time attempted to choke a Miss Scott, the sister of the witness.

She said that on two different occasions her sister was awakened in the night by smothering sensations as though something had been placed over her face, and that each time she saw Mrs. Crawford returning to her bed.

Ordeal Fails to Shake Mrs. Crawford's Poise.

By EVELYN WREN.

With superb poise Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford surrendered Sunday morning and took up her abode in Fulton County jail. Monday at 12:45, with the same self-possession, she signed the bonds which released her from imprisonment.

This horrible nightmare of accusation has brought more suffering than the humiliation of the few hours' imprisonment. The Tower was a quiet, restful spot and not uncomfortable, but the thoughts which accompany her night and day are almost unendurable. She has had to meet the accusation of the most dastardly crime of which a woman could be capable—that of committing a husband's murder by the very method which won his love and admiration.

Mrs. Crawford sat in the Tower cell waiting for the deputy, J. P. Miner, to bring the word which meant that she could go with her son-in-law, J. Lee Bennett, back to the cottage where Sallie May, her daughter, and the three grandchildren anxiously awaited her.

"Everyone has been so kind to me here," she said. "They have tried to

Asks Divorce From Man She Says Has Two Other Wives

That she married a man and lived with him for almost a year, then learned he had two other wives living and had just buried a third, is the experience recounted by Mrs. I. L. Davis, formerly Miss Grace Bradshaw, of Atlanta, in a petition for divorce filed in Superior Court Tuesday morning. The husband resides at No. 607 Marietta street.

Mrs. Davis asserts she was married to I. L. Davis in Atlanta in November, 1912, and left him in January, 1913, when she learned of his previous marriages. She says he has not been divorced from either of his other living wives.

In June, 1907, she says Davis married Miss Evie Whitten in Atlanta, using the name of Ivory York. In October, 1910, she claims, he married Miss Martha Mahatney in Knoxville, Tenn. His first wife, who is dead, was from South Carolina.

AFFIDAVIT OF MINCEY IS UPHELD

Factory Watchman Recalls Visit to Plant of Man Who Heard Conley Confess

Further corroboration of several of the important details in the remarkable affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance agent and teacher, who swore he heard Jim Conley confess killing a girl, came Tuesday in a statement by E. F. Holloway, day watchman at the National Pencil Factory.

Holloway substantiated in every particular the story of Mincey's visit to the factory the Tuesday following the crime and recalled the general trend of the conversation, which was practically as Mincey related it in his signed statement published exclusively in The Georgian Monday. The defense has obtained an affidavit from Holloway as to the circumstances of the day.

"I remember Mincey coming here Tuesday," said Holloway. "He was a quiet, retiring fellow, and I guess we scared him out. There were a lot of people in the factory, and the excitement after the murder was at its height. Several detectives were there and there were a score of people bothering the detectives and the factory authorities with their theories on the killing.

Wanted Negroes Arrested.

"This man Mincey came up to me and said he wanted to see Mr. Frank. I told him Mr. Frank was not there, but that I could take care of him. He asked me how many negroes worked in the factory, as I recall it, and I told him seven or eight.

"'You'd better have everyone of them arrested,' he replied. 'I know the one that did it.'

"'But there weren't any negroes working in the factory Saturday except the night watchman,' I told him, and I said that I didn't see any negroes at all when I left at 11:45 on account of the holiday. I got a little sore at him because he kept pestering me about the negroes, and I guess he got mad because I wouldn't pay any attention to him.

"Finally, Herbert Schiff or somebody else turned to the crowd and told them they all would have to leave the building, as it wasn't possible to make any progress in the investigation with them scattered all over every floor and in the basement. This man Mincey went out with them, and that was the last I thought about his story until the day I found Jim Conley washing his shirt in the factory, something he never did before, so far as I know.

Told of Seeing Conley.

"After this Conley was arrested and I was pretty positive that he killed the girl, although I didn't have any means of knowing that he even was in the factory until he confessed it of his own accord after he denied it half a dozen times. Then I told some of the people connected with the factory about Mincey, and when I saw him next he told all about the reasons that he felt positive it was Conley.

"He said that he had met Conley the afternoon that Mary Phagan was murdered and that Conley had boasted that he had killed a girl. Mincey said he met him somewhere over near where Conley lived. I don't know whether it was at Electric and Carter streets or not. He said he didn't think much of it at the time, as he had supposed that Conley in his drunken stupor was merely bragging about his part in some negro row. He told me that Conley had threatened him, saying:

"'I killed a girl already to-day; I don't want to kill nobody else.'

"After this I guess they got his affidavit."

BOY KILLED BY KICK OF HORSE

Children Victims in Accidents in Different Parts of City at Nearly Same Hour.

A 9-year-old boy was killed outright and a 5-year-old boy received a fractured skull which probably will prove fatal, by being kicked by a horse and a mule Tuesday afternoon. The two accidents occurred in different parts of the city less than half an hour apart.

Robert Stewart, the boy who was killed, was the son of Mrs. Belle Stewart, of 63 Ella street. He was riding a horse and as he turned the corner of Wells and Stewart streets the animal became frightened and threw him.

The boy fell directly in front of the frightened horse and the animal whirled and kicked him in the head, killing him instantly.

Jeffe Barryhill, 5 years old, was kicked in the head by a mule belonging to his father while playing in the front yard of his home at 808 Marietta street.

The child was sitting in the grass, playing with his toys, and the mule was wandering around eating grass. The animal came close to the boy, and the child reached out and placed his hand on the hind leg of the mule. The animal kicked, one of his hoofs striking the child just above the left eye, causing a fracture of the skull.

The Barryhill boy was hurried to Grady Hospital, where surgeons say there is little hope for his life.

LONDON, July 15.—Miss Inez Millholland, the New York suffragist, was married to-day in London to Eugene Bolssevain, a wealthy Dutchman whose home is in Amsterdam.

Miss Milholland is the daughter of John Millholland, a wealthy New York lawyer, and is herself a practicing lawyer with offices in the financial district of New York. She has been prominent in woman's suffrage work since her graduation from Vassar.

Cobb Suspended for Tilt With Umpire

DETROIT, MICH., July 14.—Ty Cobb was this morning suspended indefinitely by President Ban Johnson, of the American League, for language used to George Hildebrand during yesterday's Detroit-Philadelphia game.

In the ninth inning yesterday Ty went after a low line drive hit by Baker to right centerfield and claimed he made a shoestring catch, but Hildebrand ruled that Cobb "trapped" the ball. A wrangle followed and Cobb was ordered from the grounds.

Leifield Refuses To Join Crackers

CHICAGO, July 15.—Lefty Leifield, Cub pitcher traded to Atlanta, has refused to report to the Southern city, according to reports here. Lefty is said to have told President Murphy, of the Cubs, that he would not report as directed and that he would quit baseball rather than join a club with which he did not care to play.

U. S. Warship Mishap Kills 1, Hurts Others

BOSTON, July 15.—The bursting of a steam pipe on board the battleship Nebraska at the Charleston navy yard this afternoon killed Charles Agens, 19 years old, ordinary seaman, and injured several others.

Cotton Man Ends His Life Because of New Law on Bales

AUGUSTA, July 15.—Promulgation of new rules requiring cotton bales for export to be of uniform size and condition is said to have preyed on Joseph Settegast's mind so that he committed suicide here to-day. He was found in his bed with a bullet hole in his right temple. eH grasped a revolver in his hand.

Settegast was 50 years old and was one of the leading cotton dealers in Georgia.

It is said the new rules regulating bales would have forced him to change his methods to such an extent as to cause him big financial loss.

Chamber Urged to Employ Milk Expert

The report of the Chamber of Commerce milk committee was discussed at a meeting of the officers and members of the advisory committee, directory and chairman of all committees at a luncheon at the Piedmont Hotel Tuesday afternoon.

The committee recommends that the Chamber employ Dr. Charles North, of Philadelphia, a milk expert, to investigate the city's milk supply. This portion of the report was referred to the finance committee after its adoption by the directors, and has not yet been acted upon.

Temperance Bill Is Tabled in Committee

The Temperance Committee of the Senate gave the Anti-Saloon League forces a set-back Tuesday morning by tabling the Searcy bill which was offered at the request of the temperance people. Indications are the league lobbyists will have a hard fight to get it before the Senate.

The opponents of the bill assert it will not do because it places an unfair burden of responsibility on the carriers.

$1,200 Relief Fund Given to Mrs. Yancey

The fund of $1,200 collected by the members of the Sheriff's force for the benefit of David Yancey, the court deputy who was killed in a battle with a drug-crazed negro several weeks ago, was turned over to Mrs. Yancey Tuesday. With the amount collected by the newspapers and the Sheriff's office, Mrs. Yancey will have sufficient money, it is thought, to raise the mortgage on her home and provide for her children.

Motordrome Races Off Till To-morrow

The Motordrome races, set for decision to-night, have been postponed until to-morrow night.

At that time teh same program will be run.

The heavy rains of the afternoon wet up the track to such a condition of saturation that racing was impossible, and it was at the request of the riders that the meet was put off until to-morrow.

PONCE DE LEON PARK, July 15.—Gil Price opposed Elmer Brown on the mound here this afternoon in the second game of the series between the Crackers and the Billikens. The game was late in starting on account of the heavy shower.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Bisland and Agler did all that was necessary with Walker's daisy-cutter. Wares died an easy death, Manush to Agler. Elwert drew a free passage to first. Breen grounded to Bisland, who stepped on second, forcing Elwert. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Long took three husky swing, but failed to connect. Welchonce was turned back over the Knaupp-Snedecor route. Alperman was winged by a pitched ball and limped to first. Manush grounded to Knaupp, who made a wide throw to Snedecor, and on the error all hands were safe. Bisland rolled one to Knaupp, who relayed the pill to Wares, forcing Manush at the midway. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Jantzen drew four wide ones and strolled to Station One. Knaupp grounded to Price, who heaved to Bisland, forcing Jantzen at the keystone. Knaupp was killed off on his attempted pilfer trip, Dunn to Alperman. Snedecor leaned against a curve for a one-timer to center. Gribbens sent a fly to right that would have been an out had not Long slipped, letting the ball fall for a single. Snedecor going to third. E. Brown was thrown out by Alperman. TWO HITS, NO RUNS.

With three and two on him, Agler fouled to Elwert. Bailey was patient and was rewarded with a base on balls. Dunn whiffed on three pitched balls. Price lofted a foul to Elwert. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

Walker laced a pretty single to center. Wares worked Price for a walking ticket. Elwert beat out a bunt down the third base line and the bases were intoxicated. Breen was kind enough to fan. Jantzen was uncouth enough to bang a single to right that scored Walker and Wares. Knaupp tripled to the scoreboard, Elwert and Jantzen cashing. Snedecor singled to right, scoring Knaupp. Gribbens' liner caromed off Price's glove to Manush, who tossed to Agler in time, Snedecor going to second. Agler played a lone hand with Brown's grasser. FIVE HITS, FIVE RUNS.

Long raised to Wares. Welchonce lined to Jantzen in far away left. Alperman popped to Wares. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING.

Bisland booted Walker's easy roller, and on the error the batter anchored safely at first. Wares smashed a peachy two-bagger to left and Walker eased himself over to the difficult cushion. Elwert dropped a single into the center garden, Walker and Wares denting the dish with tallies. Breen sent a balooner to Long. On a short passed ball Elwert tries to move up to second, but Dunn's chuck to Alperman turned him back. Jantzen took the easy road to first. Jantzen stole second aided and abetted by a low throw to first. Knaupp was a whiff victom. TWO HITS, TWO RUNS.

Manush pasted a single to right. Knaupp tossed out Bisland, Manush trotting over to station 2. Agler rolled to Knaupp, who got the ball to Snedecor in plenty of time, Manush ambling to third. Bailey popped to Knaupp. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

FIFTH INNING.

Bailey was under Snedecor's sky-high soarer. Bailey also pulled down Gribbens' offering. E. Brown perished, Price to Agler, on a weak tap. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

hit into a double play that costtinnu

Dunn waited out four bad ones. Price bit into a double play that cost Dunn's life as well as Gil's own, Wares to Knaupp to Snedecor. Long was thrown out by Wares. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

CRAWFORD HEIRS SEEK MISSING WITNESS

New York Scoured For Barber, Said to Have Heard Death Threats.

make it seem better and to make me comfortable."

Gives Home Touch to Cell.

She was composed, without a trace of brazenness in her attitude. It was that of a kind, gentle, motherly woman—all woman—who had been thrust by circumstances into unusual surroundings. Her gratitude for the simple courtesies of the jailers showed the sympathetic nature with which she had always met the world.

A love story number of a familiar woman's magazine and current numbers of other housekeeping periodicals lay on the bed beside her. These and the big bunch of flowers broke the austerity of the prison room and gave it even the homelike touch which some women can bestow upon the most sordid quarters.

The magazines and flowers had helped the brave woman to endure the weary hours. She glanced toward the bed and smiled.

"Those magazines were brought in to me and I read several of the stories last night," said she. "Then I grew sleepy and dropped off for a good night's rest."

Looks Worn and Pale.

Mrs. Crawford looked a trifle worn and pale as the result of her first jail experience. She had eaten, though, and enjoyed a good dinner on Sunday. Sallie May, her daughter, had brought it—and Sallie May is her mother's imitator in culinary fields. She had had breakfast this morning, but had had little else to employ her time save to sit and think and wonder why and how people could be so cruel.

"I did not dream that there could be such cruelty in human nature. I never dreamed that animosity could carry them to such a length," said Mrs. Crawford, almost losing the control which she had evidenced. When the sobs were near, she stopped talking until she could recover her poise. There was no attempt to secure sympathy by compaint or by the little tricks known to most women.

Her face lighted up when we discussed cooking.

"I am a fine cook," she said. "No one can beat me at that, if I do say it. I like to cook, and folks always like my cooking."

Mrs. Crawford was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine and it was there that Joshua B. Crawford came in search of health and good care.

Does Not Rail at Heirs.

"It was my business and to my interest to make the hotel pay," she said. "I felt that the meals must be good in order to keep patronage. Somehow I could not get others to do it as I wanted it, so I did nearly every bit of the cooking myself. It tasted better."

"No, I just can't believe it," she said, as we turned from the interesting cooking discussion. "You see, I settled the estate with the Crawford heirs shortly after Mr. Crawford's death and they signed the agreement. They seemed perfectly satisfied. Now, they say that even four years ago they believed me guilty of this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford speaks of the charge of Joshua Crawford's nieces and nephews as a strange exhibition of cruelty and regards the matter as one mete for her sympathy. She does not give way to self-pity nor does she rail against the injustice of their acts. Rather does she accept the hideous nightmare as the result of peculiar, unfamiliar traits which she has never herself experienced.

She seems dazed and in a dream. "I just can't believe it. I can't realize it at all."

Never Loses Her Poise.

In this attitude she was led to the iron gates Sunday morning, heard the signal, waited and watched for the deputy to bring his jangling keys and slowly open the gates. She had heard the gate shut behind her and had gone through a second one.

Then entering the large, loitering elevator she had gone slowly up and up until she reached the floor of her prison room. Her room was the symbol of all the animosity, all the cruelty which she had known at the hands of the Crawfords.

The gates swung the same way Monday morning at the Tower, but the calm woman in black emerged from the austerity of captivity and saw the sunlight of high noon. She smiled and thanked every one who had been kind to her, delaying her departure to plan for the disposal of her big bunch of posies. Mary Belle Crawford left the Tower as she came—thoroughly poised and superbly womanly.

WAGON TOPS, AS BOATS, FERRY BATTALION

Four Companies of Seventeenth Infantry Work Out New Way to Cross Stream.

A new method of crossing streams under actual conditions of warfare—the utilizing of the tops of the army wagons as boats—was worked out by a battalion of the Seventeenth Infantry, Companies L, I, K and M, at Lakewood Tuesday morning, under the personal supervision of General Evans, commander of the Department of the Gulf. Captain O. J. Charles commanded the battalion.

The test showed that a battalion of four companies and their full equipment can be transferred across a river 100 yards wide in from four to six hours' less time than is required under the old methods of building pontoon bridges or of cutting timber and making rafts.

Fourteen in One Top.

The troops approached the stream with their full war equipment. The tops of the army wagons were removed from the running gears and canvas was fastened on them to keep them from sinking.

Companies L and I crossed first, 32 men making the trip in two wagon tops fastened together. Their combined weight was estimated at 5,000 pounds. The first crossing was commanded by Captain Charles and Captain Beck.

Had Full Equipment.

Fourteen men were transferred across the stream in one wagon top, a combined weight of 2,100 pounds, under the command of Captain Carter, and Captain Young took the full equipment of the battalion across in one wagon box. The mules swam the creek.

General Evans and the other army officers expressed their satisfaction at the successful working out of the scheme, which has never before been tried in the army. Another battalion probably will be brought to Lakewood within a few days, and the experiment tried again.

GEORGIA SOLON PUT ON LOBBY BLACKLIST

Mulhall Includes W. G. Brantley's Name on List He Was Ordered to Fight.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The political success of the National Association of Manufacturers in 1907 caused it to decide to play a part in the selection of a President the following year, according to a letter written by Fred C. Schwedtman, secretary of the late President James W. Van Cleave to Colonel M. M. Mulhall. The letter was read before the Overman lobby inquiry committee to-day.

In other letters read into the record to-day it was indicated that Colonel Mulhall, as agent of the N. A. M., had close political relations with Governor Haines, of Maine; Representatives Bartholdt and Cowdrey, of Missouri, and that the association was instrumental in defeating Tom L. Johnson for re-election as Mayor of Cleveland.

Broke Strike With Money.

Mulhall also described how he, by the use of money, broke a strike of 23,000 shoemakers in St. Louis in 1907. The committee made slow progress to-day, reading less than 200 letters. More than a thousand have been introduced in all.

Secretary Schwedtman in a letter to Mulhall in 1907 referred with great satisfaction to the lengthy reference to the then Secretary of War Taft made to the activities and purposes of the N. A. M. in a speech at Columbus, Ohio.

Repeats Gompers' Bribe Story.

Mulhall to-day repeated his charge that Atherton Brownell, of New York, who was in charge of the publicity bureau of the national association, attempted to bribe Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, but he was not given an opportunity to explain his assertion.

The committee read into the records a memorandum which was presumed to be a list of blacklisted congressmen. Mulhall's memory was bad when questioned about it and he did not remember its purpose. The memorandum appeared to be addressed to Representative James Watson. It read:

Watson—Here's a list for you to knock out:

Candler, Mississippi; Hamlin, Missouri; Danforth, New York; Payne, New York; Lever, South Carolina; Graham, Illinois; Lobeck, Nebraska; eBall, Texas; John H. Stevens, Texas; C. C. Bowman, Pennsylvania; Lloyd, Missouri; Clark, Missouri; Humphreys, Mississippi; Carter, Oklahoma; W. G. Brantley, Georgia; Hull, Tennessee; Bulkely, Ohio; Burgess, Texas; Towner, Iowa; Focht, Pennsylvania; Gardner, Massachusetts; Henry George, Jr., New York; R. L. Henry, Texas; Hinds, Maine; Lindbergh, Minnesota; R. R. Rees, Kansas; T. L. Reilly, Connecticut; Foster, Virginia. Members in town up to this time, November 25.

The memorandum was dated November 25, 1907.

Would Save Bryan From Lecture Work

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Senator Bristow of Kansas to-day introduced a resolution requiring the President to advise the Senate at his earliest opportunity what salary would be sufficient for a Secretary of State to maintain his establishment in Washington without recourse to the lecture platform.

The resolution followed Secretary Bryan's statement that he can not live on his salary.

'Jap Exterminator' Tries to See Wilson

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Gus Bess, an inventor, visited the White House to-day with a model of his latest flying machine wrapped in a piece of oil cloth. He demanded to see the President because he has "a machine which will wipe out all the Japanese and make the United States the first nation in the world."

Bess was informed that the President was "out."

WOODWARD AIDS CHIEF IN VICE CRUSADE

Mayor Gives Report of Negro Dive Near Which Policemen Have Been Seen.

Mayor Woodward entered the fight which Chief Beavers is waging against vice in Atlanta Tuesday when he told of a negro dive and blind tiger which he said had been reported to him Tuesday morning by a man whose name he refuses to make public.

This man, Mayor Woodward declared, had told him he had seen policemen passing through an alley in the direction of the blind tiger, though none of them had actually been seen to enter the place.

Chief Beavers ordered an investigation.

Captain Poole has been given particular instructions to probe the report that policemen visit the place.

Declaring that 50 per cent of the women arrested during the months of June and July were young girls, Mrs. Mary Bohnefeld, police matron, Tuesday afternoon placed the blame for present conditions on the immodest dress now worn by women, and also on the paint and powder demanded by the dictates of fashion.

"The dress that women are wearing nowadays," she declared, "is a crime, and is the cause of the downfall of so many young girls. Men are encouraged to make advances when they see a girl on the streets, wearing immodest and indecent clothing and with her face painted and powdered."

Orders closing two boarding houses were issued from headquarters this morning. Mrs. Lulu Bell, whose hotel at Fair and Peters streets was raided last week, resulting in the arrest of half a dozen persons and the telling of a white slave story by Effie Drummond, was ordered to vacate the place and close it up.

The negro joint at 76 Chestnut street, which was raided by the police Sunday morning, was also ordered closed by Chief Beavers Tuesday. Several white men were arrested when this raid was made, and evidence has been obtained that the place was one of the most vicious in the city.

Man Who Found Body Of Mack Spain Held

WAYCROSS, July 15.—More arrests in the mysterious robbery and murder of Mack Spain, the wealthy bachelor farmer whose body was found yesterday in a pond near his home, are expected to-day. Tom Bullard, aged 22, who found the murdered man's body, has been arrested on suspicion. It is reported remarks made by him caused officers to believe he knew something of the murder.

Efforts to locate relatives of the murdered man have failed. The body will be buried near his farm.

Slow Phone Service Lets Burglar Escape

Delay in making telephone connections allowed a man who attempted to rob the Sharp Drug Store at Marietta and Walton Streets to escape, Tuesday morning about 2 o'clock. The watchman of the Cathcart Storage Company, across the street, saw the burglar, and tried to telephone the police.

Before he could get a connection with headquarters the burglar left the place. No trace of him could be found when Policemen Anderson and Watson arrived.

Boy, 10, Leads Flight From Reformatory

MACON, July 15.—Led by Marvin Williford, the 10-year-old boy who has three times run away from the Georgia Industrial Home, four boys, all inmates of the institution, escaped Sunday afternoon. When arrested 24 hours later they were in an empty freight car, bound for Fitzgerald, the former home town of their leader.

Marvin Williford is the boy about whose recent whipping by Overseer W. F. Armor such a stir was raised.

BUTTON BEAUTY RACE STARTED WITH RUSH

Atlanta Seeks Prettier Girl Than Texas Belle, Chosen 'Goddess of Plenty.'

Atlanta's "button beauty" contest has caused the question to arise: Texas girl selected to represent the

"Will the Atlanta beauty eclipse the 'Goddess of Plenty' on one of the new bills to be turned out by Uncle Sam?"

This young woman, Miss Ellen Evelyn James, of San Antonio, Tex., has attracted widespread attention by her fair face. She so appealed to Kenyon Cox, the artist who designed the new bill, that he said she must represent the 'Goddess of Plenty.'

Has Atlanta Prettier Girl?

Look at the face and see if you think Atlanta can furnish a prettier girl to adorn the "500,000 club" buttons?

The pretty girl contest has started with a grand rush. A number of Atlanta's most famous beauties are in at the start, and others, not so well known but exceedingly attractive, promise to make strong races.

Leading spirits in the "500,000 club" movement declare that no greater honor could be paid an Atlanta girl than to have her picture on the buttons of the people who are to boost Atlanta's population to 500,000 by 1920.

The accompanying coupons show how to enter candidates.

Windsor Tells City's Needs.

James P. Windsor, assistant cashier of the American National Bank, has written an interesting letter to The Georgian acknowledging receipt of the $25 prize for the best slogan. He commends The Georgian for its policy toward a half-million city and proceeds to give his ideas of what is needed.

The gist of his letter is an appeal for more parks and means of better recreation for the masses of the people, and a condemnation of strict enforcement of "blue laws." Here is his letter:

Praises Pretty Atlanta Girls.

To the Editor of The Georgian:

I acknowledge, with thanks, receipt of your check for $25, the prize awarded in the Georgian's interesting slogan contest.

Evidently the distinguished judges were also of the opinion that a successful slogan should be symbolic of Atlanta's beautiful women. For, while a salubrious climate, a desirable location, and influential newspapers have played an important part in the city's marvelous growth, the real answer to, "Why is Atlanta?" is her many beautiful women. It is they who inspire the wonderful Atlanta spirit, influence the casual visitor to locate here permanently; and when one's poor judgment takes him to other climes, it is the remembrance of them that brings him back home.

But the main object of our "500,000 Club" is to exert every effort to increase our population to the desired number within the next few years. This can and will be done when our civic bodies realize the fact that Atlanta is now lagging behind other cities in some respects, especially that of park improvements.

Solution of Vice Problems.

The solution of all vice problems, as well as those of crime, and the surest way to attract newcomers to any city, is to provide adequate facilities for recreation and amusement.

In other words there should be sincerity in our "boosting." So the question arises, is it really great to live in Atlanta?

To the capitalist, with his numerous facilities for pleasure, such as clubs, autos, commodious home, and the means to take frequent vacation trips to other cities and resorts, Atlanta, with its unequalled climate, is really a great place in which to live.

But to the average citizen—the man of limited means, such as the laboring man, the small salaried man or the young man just going into business, who must economize by force of circumstances—Atlanta offers few attractions or places of amusement at a moderate price, and to him it is a veritable workshop.

Atlanta is one of the few large cities without a down-town public park or breathing place. This feature should be provided in the plaza plan of bridging over the railroad tracks which now penetrate the heart of the city. At least $1,000,000 should be expended in beautifying our present parks, and sufficient funds should be appropriated annually to furnish high class music in at least two of them every night during the summer months.

Urges Park Improvements.

Piedmont is now but a desert of possibilities, while nature and the liberality of one individual has given us Grant Park. Permanent buildings, and grounds suitable for exposition or fair purposes, including a mile-race track where high class harness races might be conducted in connection with the fairs, should be included in Lakewood's improvements.

These, and many other things which may seem extravagant to some, must be accomplished in order to get the 500,000 by 1920.

Los Angeles is now increasing her population at the rate of 75,000 per year. But Los Angeles is expending $50,000,000 on a water supply, and over $20,000,000 on street and public road improvements. It is time Atlanta was doing something big, instead of wrangling over the individual conduct of a few alleged "business men." The continual magnifying of vice conditions, and the too strict enforcement of blue laws, is not compatible with progress, and is doing the city an injury. I would remind some of our over-zealous reformers that there is danger in bringing to our homes too much of the sordid things in life, for—

"Vice is a monster of so frightful mein,
That to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

I am, sir,
JAMES P. WINDSOR.

Fight Over Painter's Viscera Is Resumed

BALTIMORE, MD., July 15.—The legal battle for the viscera of E. O. Painter, the dead Jacksonville fertilizer man, was resumed before Judge Duffy in the Circuit Court to-day. The session, which was taken up by the examination of Dr. Charles Glaser, who made the analysis of the Painter organs, was adjourned at 2 o'clock. The case will be reopened Thursday morning.

Dr. Glaser reiterated his previous statement that there was no poison found in Painter's vital organs. He said the viscera is still in a condition to permit another analysis.

Mystery in Suicide Attempt at Biloxi

MOBILE, July 15.—Mrs. Anna Alvis, 18 years old, formerly Miss Casper, of Baltimore, where she has relatives, attempted suicide at Biloxi, Miss., near here, last night, by taking carbolic acid. Several doctors worked with her all night, but she is expected to die. Why she took the poison is a mystery.

Mrs. Alvis came to Mobile from Baltimore seven months ago and later went to Biloxi.

Rochester Puts Ban On Peekaboo Styles

ROCHESTER, PA., July 15.—Following a meeting of the Council here, a resolution was reported which defines the mode of dress women can not wear. "Expose gowns" and slashed and tight skirts are barred.

Hose must not be transparant and a liberal exposure of the bosom and arms will not be tolerated.

MRS. HARRIMAN AVERTS GREAT RAIL STRIKE

Social Leader Makes President's Arbitration Offer to Managers and Trainmen Possible.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The Newlands-Clayton bill, providing for the arbitration of the threatened strike of 100,000 railway employees passed the Senate at 3:15 p. m. without a dissenting vote. The measure will go to the President for his signature and the bill will become law before the day is over.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—That the honor of averting the railroad strike which threatened to tie up the commerce of the entire eastern part of the United States belongs to Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, New York society leader and niece of E. H. Harriman, late railroad king, was admitted at the White House to-day.

Mrs. Harriman, the only woman ever appointed a member of the industrial commission, heard rumors of a strike about two months ago in New York before the trouble found its way into print.

Put Matter Before Wilson.

Mrs. Harriman came at once to the President and placed the matter before him, laying emphasis on the fact that the strike would tie up Eastern commerce and might seriously damage the record of the Democratic administration.

She also suggested that the President call a conference between the railroad leaders and the representatives of the employees. This it was thought not wise to do because of the danger of charges of "undue White House influence."

Suggest Plan That Wins.

Mrs. Harriman then asked if the President would be willing to supervise the conference if she could engineer it through the Civic Federation.

This President Wilson agreed to do and when the strike was about to be called he presided over the conference and induced both sides to arbitrate.

Whaddya Mean, They Got Enough?

WAYCROSS, July 15.—Trying to eat two gallons of ice cream at one time, H. Friedman and two young sons this morning became seriously ill.

The father is reported as telling his boys that for once in their lives they were going to have enough ice cream.

VETERANS' PLEA SENDS SLATON TO REUNION

Governor Unable to Resist Virtual Demand of Old Soldiers to Visit Brunswick.

Governor Slaton will leave for Brunswick again Wednesday night to attend the State reunion of Confederate veterans. Despite the fact that he spent Saturday and Sunday in Brunswick and had no intention of returning there for some time, he found it impossible to withstand the oratory of the grizzled warriors, who virtually demanded that he attend their gathering.

"It's good and proper for you to come here and inspect the State's soldiers," the veterans said. "They are a fine lot of fellows and would show up well if circumstances demanded a display of their bravery. But what about the men who have bared their breasts to the enemy's bullets in defense of the State?

"Our number is dwindling rapidly. The half century swinging of the scythe of time has taken many of us to the world beyond. It is but meet and proper, we might say mandatory, that the Governor of the State meet with us at our reunions."

Such a plea as this the Governor declared he could not resist.

LEGISLATORS IN RUSH TO AVOID EXTRA CALL

Governor Likely to Reconvene Assembly if Tax Reforms Are Not Made This Session.

Unless the Legislature, during its present session, enacts such tax reforms as the Governor thinks essential to the welfare and prosperity of the State, it is more than likely that it will be called immediately in extraordinary session, for the sole purpose of effecting those reforms.

The Governor himself has not uttered the threat of an extraordinary session, but some gentlemen close to him, and, in a way, authorized to speak for him, have let it be known that the possibility of an extra session has crossed the Executive mind more than once of late, and that failure upon the part of the Legislature to enact the tax reform the Governor holds absolutely necessary at this time more than likely will impel the Governor to the heroic remedy of an extra session.

Feverishly Active Now.

That these semi-authoritative rumors and hints have had their effect upon the General Assembly, is abundantly evidenced in the feverish activity lately manifested in some of the House committees.

House bill No. 1, by Mr. Cole, of Bartow, for instance, has been reported at last out of the Ways and Means Committee, and will go to the House at once with a favorable recommendation.

This first revenue measure introduced must be followed by many others, if the Slaton program of tax reform is carried out in its entirety, and the Senate must have an opportunity to pass upon all revenue measures produced by the House. Revenue measures can not originate in the Senate.

There has been much waste of time on the floor of both Houses, however, and unless the waste is cut out from this time forward the impression is that tax reform measures generally will fall by the wayside and fall of passage.

Committee Favors Inheritance Tax.

The Georgia House Tuesday morning rushed the adoption of a large number of local bills. On account of the joint meeting of the Senate and House to be addressed by Herbert E. Myrick and T. Sambola Jones, many matters were postponed.

The bill increasing the salaries of the members of the Prison Commission from $2,000 to $3,000 per year, which was killed in the House Monday, was granted reconsideration by a unanimous vote, on the plea of Representative Ed Wohlwender, who said if the reconsideration was granted he would make a motion that the bill be carried over until next year.

Committees Make Reports.

A flood of committee reports was placed upon the clerk's desk Tuesday morning. One of the most interesting was from General Judiciary Committee No. 1, which favorably reported three bills. One is a "blue sky" bill, curbing the activities of brokers indulging in the sale of worthless stocks and bonds by requiring the registering and certifying by the Comptroller General of all stocks and bonds.

Another is the inheritance tax bill, which provides a special tax on all inheritances of $5,000 or more. The other bill favorably reported is a special registration bill. It provides for a permanent registration list.

Inspector Attacks Apartment House

Attorney Albert Howell and F. E. Kneip, superintendent of the Fuller Construction Company, will be tried in Police Court before Recorder Nash Broyles Tuesday afternoon, charged with violating the building ordinances of the city by erecting a window in the Ponce DeLeon Apartments, for which the Fuller company has the contract, and of which Mr. Howell is one of the owners.

The cases against Mr. Howell and Mr. Kneip were made at the instance of Assistant Building Inspector Charles Bowen, who asserted that the show window extended 14 inches over the sidewalk on Peachtree street. Mr. Bowen will seek to have the window declared a nuisance and ordered removed.

Mayor Urges Haste In Work on Streets

Mayor Woodward called a conference of city and county officials in his office Tuesday in an effort to hasten the work on Ivy and West Mitchell streets and Georgia avenue.

The Mayor took this action just before signing a resolution authorizing the regrading of West Peachtree street, which will be begun next fall. The Georgia Railway and Power Company will begin relaying tracks on Ivy street Wednesday and within a few days the repaving will begin.

WEDDING SPEEDED BY SOFT ATLANTA MOON

MRS. JOSEPH W. HOOGE.

Miss Vera F. England, of Mobile, and Joseph W. Hooge, of Macon, were married here Monday as a result of Atlanta's beautiful moonlight nights—not that they don't have beautiful moonlight nights in Mobile and Macon, but the young sweethearts happened to be in neither of those places.

They have arranged to take an extended automobile honeymoon trip in order to view the bright moon from all parts of Georgia and Alabama.

Miss England came to Atlanta with her mother, Mrs. G. K. England, to visit the family of Charles W. England. Mr. Hooge came from Macon Monday to visit his fiancee.

The ceremony was performed by Father Robert F. Kennedy at the Church of Immaculate Conception at 11 o'clock Monday morning. The wedding date had been fixed for several months hence.

Veterans Will Meet Where They Enlisted

Fairburn, Ga., will be the scene of a reunion of the survivors of the "Bloody Thirtieth" Georgia Regiment July 25. It was at Fairburn that the Thirtieth was mustered into service September 26, 1861, and this will be its thirty-fifth annual reunion.

The Thirtieth contained the names of several thousand warriors on its roll during the four years of the war between the States. Its loss in human life is believed to have been as heavy as any other Confederate regiment.

Fairburn is preparing to give the veterans a great entertainment. All other Confederate veterans are invited.

HEAL BABY'S ITCHING SKIN WITH RESINOL

For babies tortured by eczema, prickly heat, teething rash, or other itching, burning skin eruption, there is instant relief in a warm bath with Resinol Soap and a gentle application of Resinol Ointment. The itching and scratching stop at once, baby can sleep, and soon the tormented little skin becomes clear and healthy again. The Resinol treatment is so absolutely free from anything that could injure the tenderest skin, that it can be used on even the youngest infant.

Resinol Soap for baby's daily bath will usually prevent any skin trouble and chafing because it contains the soothing, healing Resinol medication. Doctors have prescribed Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap for eighteen years and druggists everywhere sell them. Trial free; Dept. 7-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

LEAP TO STREET TO ESCAPE IN NIGHT FIRE

Flames in Rooming House Nearly Trap Guests, Roused From Sleep by Smoke.

Aroused from their sleep by the roar of flames and the smell of smoke, half a dozen roomers in the home of Mrs. J. Sutton, 55 Luckie street, escaped in their night attire Tuesday morning at 4:30 o'clock, when fire broke out in the upper story of the house. Some of them leaped from the windows just in time to avoid the falling roof.

It is not known how the fire started. It was discovered by one of the roomers, who awoke suddenly and found the entire upper portion of the house in flames. He shouted and awoke the other roomers and Mrs. Sutton, who also sleeps on the second floor. Those occuping rooms at the rear ran to the front of the building only a moment before the roof crashed in. One man was struck on the shoulder by a piece of falling timber, but was only slightly bruised.

The occupants of the house gathered in the upper front hall and found their escape cut off by a wall of smoke and flames that was fast devouring the stairway. Some of them braved the flames and ran down the stairway. Others let themselves down from the windows. As the last of the roomers reached the ground the roof of the house fell in.

The fire department extinguished the blaze before the building was destroyed, but not until it had been badly damaged.

Senator Smith to Address Assembly

Senator Hoke Smith will address a joint meeting of the Senate and House of Representatives Friday at noon.

The address is being looked forward to with interest, as Senator Smith is expected to touch upon the question of tax reform. This is the most important question to face any Georgia Legislature in many years, and is receiving more attention from the present General Assembly than any other matter.

SEARCHING SIDELIGHTS ON POLITICS IN GEORGIA

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall, of Chatham, is in Atlanta for a few days, on his way to Athens, where he will visit before leaving for his diplomatic post of duty in Switzerland.

Mr. Stovall is extremely well liked by all the members of the General Assembly, and there are few, if any, he does not know more or less intimately. His nomination to be Minister to Switzerland, which was in line with his ambition for years, was particularly gratifying to his friends throughout all Georgia, and he has been the recipient of many warm and hearty congratulations since his arrival in the Capital.

"I have not the slightest doubt," said Mr. Stovall, "that the Wilson administration is to be a complete success in every way. The President is a hard and conscientious worker, and is, I think, carrying out to the letter the promises of the Baltimore platform.

"I am leaving for Switzerland within the next two weeks, and feel sure I shall find the assignment not only most pleasant, but one wherein I can be of real service to my country. I have a desire, of course, to be useful as well as ornamental, if I may so express myself, and there is much that may be done in the wonderful and progressive little nation of Switzerland that will be well worth while.

"The present Legislature impresses me as a safe and sane body, and not at all inclined to run amuck. I have talked with many members, and I am sure the desire to achieve lasting and helpful tax reforms is universal. There is not much time left, of course, but the Legislature can—and doubtless will—accomplish much in the four weeks yet to its credit."

The friends of United States Senator Bacon are urging all voters to go to the polls to-day and cast a ballot for Bacon to succeed himself in the Senate.

There is no opposition, of course, but as a compliment to the Senator, if for no other reason, it is very desirable that a large vote be cast.

Senator Bacon is the first man Georgia ever honored with a fourth term in the Senate, and he will be the first United States Senator named under the new popular elections amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Mr. Bell, of Clay, looks like Champ Clark, and that, of course, puts a large measure of responsibility upon him.

The gentleman from Clay is quiet and more or less reserved, but in repose his face does remind one strikingly of the great Missourian, and the temptation to call him "Mr. Speaker" frequently is rampant within the hearts of those who are used to addressing Mr. Clark after that fashion.

"Champ Clark is a mighty fine man, all right, and worth looking like," said Bell to-day, when the matter of his resemblance was mentioned in his presence.

Some of the friends of Frank Liebman, the energetic real estate man of Atlanta, have spoken favorably to Commissioner of Agriculture James D. Price about him, and asked Mr. Price to appoint Mr. Liebman to some sort of agricultural job.

Mr. Liebman is quite an authority, upon his own admission, on "setting out peas" and differentiating watermelon from sweet potato vines.

Mr. Price is said to have tendered Mr. Liebman a place as fertilizer inspector in the Okeefenokee swamp, and the Atlanta man is reported as looking upon the honor thus about to be thrust upon him with gratified eyes.

If Mr. Liebman accepts the appointment, it will take him away from Atlanta for four months each year, at a salary of $84.50 per month.

Augusta is making great preparations to entertain the General Assembly when it visits that city Saturday.

Augusta is proud of and deeply interested in the Georgia Medical College, located there, as a branch of the State University, and the citizens are doing everything in their power to advance its interests and welfare. Recently the standard of the college was raised greatly, and it now ranks with the foremost institutions of the kind in the world.

It has been 125 years since the Georgia Legislature was in Augusta, and as it may be as long before it gets there again—although Augusta sincerely hopes not—the forthcoming visit is to be made memorable.

A special train will be run for the benefit of the visitors, going and coming, and a party of not less than 150 has been provided for.

The municipal court bill for Atlanta will be introduced in the General Assembly by the Fulton County delegation on next Monday.

This bill has been carefully drawn and is thought to embody the very best and most up-to-date ideas in courts of the kind.

It will have the backing of the bar and citizens generally, and likely will pass both Houses without friction of any sort.

It is by no means a sure thing that the Tippins bill will not be reintroduced in the present Legislature, notwithstanding the fact that the Georgia Anti-Saloon League is reported to have decided not to request it.

There are some members who think that measure exactly the thing the State needs.

Whether it can be passed is, of course, problematical, but its friends may try it out again, nevertheless.

The best story of the year, "Adam's Clay," by Cosmo Hamilton, begins in next Sunday's American. Don't miss a chapter. Every one bristles with interest.

An Event Which Will Prove Attractive to All Women Loving Fresh Undermuslins

Our New York buyer found a prominent maker of fashionable undermuslins with an end-of-the-season OVERLOT. We made him an offer for the entire surplus, which was accepted, and the goods will be ready for your inspection Wednesday. This is a collection of cool and crisp MUSLINWEAR ITEMS, which will be shown at an opportune moment when your mid-summer wardrobe needs replenishing.

Eighty-Eight Cents for New Garments, Many of Them Worth Up to One-Fifty Each

Gowns

About 18 styles of popular 1913 nightgowns, of nainsooks and sheer materials, representing manufacturer's best efforts of the season. Being from this celebrated maker, it is obvious that they are the most wanted styles. Included in the assortment are many of the noncrinkable crepe gowns, which are now so popular and are so much wanted for traveling uses.

A Wonderful Sale of Undermuslins AT 88c EACH

Combinations

About ten styles of the popular combination garments will be shown in this One-Price sale. No garment is so widely popular as the combination. In this lot are many different models of sheer and soft finish materials, mostly in drawer effects. Some of these garments are trimmed with laces, others are of the all-over embroidery styles; many are trimmed with shadow laces; others with medallions and blind embroidery.

Petticoats

Although these petticoats being machine made, they are excellent reproductions of French pieces, and are remarkable at the price quoted. These are mostly of the new "flat styles" effectively embroidered on the flounces. These values are out of the ordinary and we are happy to be able to supply you at little figures these petticoats, which have recently sprung into favor, being now the most wanted garment in the trousseau.

Drawers

In this collection are about ten styles of sheer nainsook and lingerie cloth drawers. Many of them are in the new straight effects, others in the Dorothy style; while many are the ever popular circular. Some of them are simply trimmed with convent scallops; others more elaborately trimmed with either Val or shadow laces; many are a combination of both lace and embroidery, and a few are finished with just a flat band of embroidery.

Corset Covers

Comisole, the newest thing in corset covers. These are in shadow laces, tucked nets or all-over embroidery. We also show the sturdier garments of nainsooks. Some of these are trimmed in Val laces or medallions. All are finished with beading drawn with ribbon. Many of the corset covers have ribbon shoulder straps. In this lot we show a few of the convent scalloped, with hand-embroidered floral designs.

THREE INVADING ARMIES CAMP IN BULGARIA

Roumanians, Greeks and Servians Co-operate—Vanquished Make Abject Plea to Russia.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BELGRADE, July 15.—Three hostile armies of invasion are on Bulgarian soil.

The Roumanians under Crown Prince Ferdinand, who crossed the Danube, halted and are co-operating with Greek and Servian forces, which have also invaded Bulgaria. Servians have entered Bulgaria west of Kustendil, while another allied army of Greeks and Serbs have crossed the Bulgar frontier through Djumbala.

A St. Petersburg dispatch says that Bulgaria has informed Russian that she unconditionally accepts any peace terms with Russia, acting for Greece and Servia, may present. Bulgaria has also consented to allow Roumania to annex any extent of territory on condition that Roumanian troops do not enter Sofia.

Further reports of Bulgarian atrocities in the south were received by the Servian Government.

Peace Parley Expected To Be Opened This Week.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 15.—Peace negotiations between representatives of Bulgaria, Servia and Greece will open here this week, according to the present program of the Russian Foreign Office.

M. Sazonoff, Russian Foreign Minister, said to-day that Bulgarian peace envoys are expected to open negotiations at once. After the signature of the protocol of an armistice fighting will stop.

Word from Sofia says that Bulgarian troops, driven toward the capital from every angle, are concentrating around Sofia.

An international inquiry of reports of atrocities in Macedonia will probably be conducted in Paris or Vienna.

King Peter Threatens to Dictate Peace in Sofia.

VIENNA, July 15.—King Peter of Servia threatens to "dictate" terms of Balkan peace in Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, unless the Bulgarian Government immediately agrees to the preliminary draft of a treaty of peace drawn by Premier Pasitch of Servia and Premier Venizelos of Greece.

A telegram to-day from Athens states that Greece and Servia are in accord on the terms of peace to which Bulgaria must submit. In a general way they include the following:

Greece to hold Salonika and occupy about 5,000 square miles of territory in Southern Macedonia.

The railway from Salonika to Mitrovitza to be internationalized.

Servia to have a commercial outlet on the Aragon sea, full permission for the construction of a ship canal from the Danube southward and of a railway to the Adriatic.

Bulgaria to give up all Grek and Servian prisoners of war.

Servia to occupy all the fertile district from the Southern Servian boundary southward and eastward from the Vardar River to Demir Hissar, thence eastward to the Rhodope mountains.

Massacre by Allies Charged by Bulgars.

SOFIA, July 15.—The entire Bulgarian and Turkish population of Pravista, in Southern Macedonia, has been massacred by the Greek army, which occupied Kavala last week, it was officially announced to-day by the Bulgarian Government.

Replying to stories of slaughter by Bulgarian troops, emanating from Athens, the Bulgarian Government to-day made public reports of Bulgarian officers in the South, which lay charges of grave excesses at the hands of the Greeks.

Sixty Thousand Homeless.

Sixty thousand Bulgarians and Turks in the district about Pravista and Kavala are homeless, these reports say, and on the verge of famine. The Greeks and Servians are charged with having ravaged the country and cut down refugees.

FREE VOTES CUT AS PONY RACE NEARS END

Bonuses Remain Attractive and Fair Enough, However, to Spur Contestants to Best Efforts.

It is hard to tell who got the most fun out of Sunday's outing at Grant Park, the boys and girls who are in the contests for The Georgian and American ponies, or their elders who gathered to watch them.

Of course, the fun of driving the ponies was all for the children. But the elders got their amusement in hearing the droll remarks of the youngsters, and in seeing their shining faces.

Josephine Simril, 9 East Alabama street.

One little fellow spent a good deal of time trying to pick out the pony he wanted. He feels sure he will win, and was concerned only in selecting the best animal.

After viewing all in the park, he still was dissatisfied.

"What's the matter?" asked the contest manager. "Aren't they good ponies?"

"Yes, sir. But please, sir, have you any with blue eyes?"

All the children are working hard now to take full advantage of the extra vote offer which closes Saturday night at 10 o'clock. Until that time there will be liberal allowances of bonus votes for every club of $35, $25 or $15 in subscriptions. The subscriptions may be of any length, from two years down to one month.

As announced, each bonus offer to stimulate the contestants will be a little less attractive as the contest draws to a close. Manifestly it would be unfair to offer in the last week extra votes in greater numbers than during previous periods, thus putting the contestants who "got busy" early at a disadvantage. But the present offer is sufficiently attractive to bring out the best efforts of every contestant.

Guarantee Heads To Be Defendants

Judge Pendleton announced from the bench Tuesday that he would issue an order in the Guarantee Banking and Trust Company litigation making S. E. Smith, president of the company; H. S. Miles, secretary and treasurer, and W. A. Foster and George H. Sims, directors, parties defendant in the action.

J. N. Robertson, appointed receiver for the company pending a decision by the Supreme Court, will act as receiver for the property of the four men, keeping it intact until the litigation is settled.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Forsyth Bill Is Good.

Valerie Bergere and her company in an intensely dramatic sketch, "Judgment;" Britt Wood and his harmonica; Shelvey Brothers, three unusually clever contortionists, and a bevy of pretty girls in a minstrel act, combine to form a good show at the Forsyth this week. Miss Bergere headlines the show, in a playlet that gives full opportunity for her emotional powers.

The Metropolitan minstrels have some good songs, but the action is made dull by two boys, "end men," whose comedy is old and very sad. The five girls are pretty, and one of them, Flo Bert, has an unusually good contralto voice.

Other numbers are Work and Play, acrobats; Les Cougets, with a novel musical act, and Clark and Verdi, who entertain with a line of Italian jokes.

Friends of Bible in Schools Win Point

Enemies of the measure requiring reading of the Bible in Georgia public schools won their first victory Tuesday morning when the Senate voted unanimously to recommit the bill for further consideration by the Education Committee, on a motion by Senator Foster, chairman of the committee, who held a lengthy conference Tuesday morning with Rabbi David Marx, Dr. Wilmer and Father Rappler who oppose the bill.

That another fight will be made when the committee grants a hearing to those who oppose the bill according to statements Tuesday morning by Dr. H. M. DuBose, an advocate of the measure.

Bars 'Shylocks' From Shore in Big Estate

ANNISTON, July 15.—"Shylocks" are barred under the provision of the will of the late Col. J. G. Farley, retired Anniston capitalist and reputed millionaire, who died here recently.

Farley's three children, Mrs. A. J. Goodwin and J. G. Farley, of this city, and Mrs. Harry Bellenger, of Gadsden, are made executors of the estate, and any of them who lends any money from the estate shall be removed from office. All money now invested in bonds is to be withdrawn and invested in real estate.

Farley's widow is given a one-fourth share in the estate.

Senate Will Break Long-Speech Record

WASHINGTON, July 15.—A record in sustained speechmaking will be made by the Republicans when the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill comes up for debate Wednesday.

Senator La Follette is scheduled to wage a wordy war lasting seven days. Senator Smoot has estimated the length of his diatribe against Democratic iniquity at five days. Senator Smith of Michigan, will talk three days.

Many long speeches are scheduled from the Democratic ranks.

Wilson Will Go to Cornish Again Soon

WASHINGTON, July 15.—President Wilson is planning to take a week-end trip to Cornish, N. H., on either August 7 or 14, according to White House reports to-day.

The Chief Executive will go to the "summer capitol" on Thursday and return to Washington the following Monday.

There's a treat for every reader of The American in Cosmo Hamilton's "Adam's Clay," which bgins Sunday. It's a big story. Don't miss the first chapters.

Motor to the Wigwam, Indian Springs, for the week-end. Fifty-one miles. Roads are good either by Griffin or McDonough. Climate fine.

CLAIMS LOAN MEN MULCTED HIM

Conductor Says He Paid Extortionate Interest and Asks Retraint of Garnishment.

The operations of money lenders were unearthed Tuesday morning when William S. Coburn, representing Sidney Baxter, a conductor on the Southern Railway, went before Judge Newman in the United States District Court and applied for an order restraining two money lenders from levying on the wages of his client.

Saturday Baxter filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, placing his assets at $930 and liabilities at $1,376, asking that his salary outstanding, $240, and household property valued at $500 be exempt.

In 1909 Baxter borrowed $150 from the Birmingham Discount Company, which charged him, he says, $15 per month interest. Baxter in his petition claims to have paid the interest for three years and still owes the concern $150, the principal.

Again, on July 1, 1912, Baxter borrowed from the Atlanta Finance Company, which is represented in Atlanta by G. H. Rosenbush, $105, and for this amount he claims to have paid $11 per month interest for one year, and still owes the original $105.

These two concerns from which Baxter borrowed threaten to garnishee his wages, the petition states.

U. S. Experts Guests Of Lady Aberdeen

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DUBLIN, July 15.—Lady Aberdeen, on the occasion of a brilliant reception for the American commission on agriculture, which is now in Ireland, entertained the visitors in her latest project.

She is establishing in Dublin in a fine old Georgian mansion the Welcome Club, for the reception of Irish visitors from America. At this club travelers register and are given information telling them how to make the most of the sojourn in Ireland.

Seaboard May Bid On A., B. & A. Road

CORDELE, July 15—An impression prevails in railroad circles here that the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company will bid for the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic road, when it is placed on sale to satisfy the creditors.

It is also rumored that if it bids in the property the Seaboard will consolidate the shops of the two roads for the eastern division in Cordele. The rumors are being generally discussed here.

Waits a Month and Wins $14,000 Prize

MOOSE JAW, SASK., July 15.—H. Johnson, formerly of Itasca County, Minnesota, obtained a $14,000 tract after waiting in front of the Land Office here for a month. During his wait torrential rains fell, and for many days there weer others ahead of Johnson. Numerous fights occurred and the police had to interfere several times.

Johnson almost lost his prize in the last hour by going into the Land Office too soon and finding another man in his place when he returned.

The police, however, let him remain first.

Held for Slaying in Houston 23 Years Ago

ALBANY, July 15.—A negro, believed to be the murderer of Joseph Fudge, a white man, who was killed 23 years ago at Henderson, Houston County, is in jail here. He was arrested on a trivial charge and while in jail is alleged to have confessed to another negro that he was the murderer.

Fudge operated a blacksmith shop at Henderson. Following a dispute between him and a negro employee, the black struck him on the head with a heavy stick, killing him instantly.

Young Caminetti at Work as Pipe Layer

TAFT, CAL., July 15.—That Drew Caminetti, who is awaiting trial on charge of white slaving, has been in Taft since last month, became known when the men working with him on a pipe line crew tipped it off that a youth called "Blackie" had repeatedly telephone to some unknown place and asked for messages for Drew Caminetti.

Caminetti came to Taft shortly after June 1 from Sacramento, and immediately hired out to a pipe line contracting company.

Kentucky Governor Tries to End Strike

LEXINGTON, KY., July 15.—An attempt to arbitrate the strike of street car motormen and conductors was made to-day when a conference of Governor McDermott with traction and labor officials was called.

There was no rioting to-day and company officials said they would not attempt to operate any cars with strike-breakers.

GEORGIA MAN CONSUL.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The following presidential appointment was confirmed by the Senate to-day: Nathaniel B. Stewart, of Georgia, to be Consul at Milan, Italy.

SALES OF AUGUST FEATURE COTTON

Bullish Talk Based on Damage by Boll Weevil in Texas Causes Late Buying.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The cotton market opened steady to-day, first prices ranging from 2, unchanged to 3 points lower than Monday's final. The weather map was slightly bullish, but this was slightly offset by the bearish prediction of a big local house.

There was no special feature to trading after the call, transactions being held within a small volume. Sentiment continues bearish and Liverpool was reported a seller of the old crop positions. This promoted an active selling movement, with August the heaviest pressed option. August dropped from 12.12 to 11.99, while other positions declined some 3 to 6 points from the initial level. Later the market developed a steadier tone, resulting in prices rallying a few points, and during the late forenoon price movement was practically unchanged from the previous close.

Trade buying of new as well as old crop positions was the chief feature of a quiet market. Many operators would have been glad to have purchased cotton on the decline, but neither buying nor selling orders were sufficient to create wide fluctuations in prices.

The market is kept from depression by the continued decrease of the stock —and, on the other hand, it is prevented from advancing by the favorable progress of the crop. However, the most important factor which is the predominating influence against activity is the proposal to tax cotton Future. The large interests, as well as the small firms, are unable to see how to do business in the future and are inclined to await further development of news from Washington before pushing their commitments to any extent.

At the close the market was steady with July 1 point higher, while other positions were 2 to 6 points decline from the closing quotations of Monday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.15; August, 12.02; October, 11.47; January, 11.31.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.46; August, 11.97; October, 11.47; January, 11.47.

Warehouse stocks in New York to-day are 36,083 bales; certificated, 30,085 bales.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 15.—With the exception of Tennessee, North Carolina and West Texas, where it was cloudy, fair weather prevailed over the belt, with only a few scattered showers. Indications are for increasing cloudiness in the northwestern quarter, with a rise in temperature; prospects are for rain and cooler weather toward the end of the week. Partly cloudy to fair weather, with a few scattered showers in the central and eastern States; temperatures normal.

The market opened unchanged, but soon eased to 11.41 for December on a 12-point break in August in New York. While the impregnable position of July is admitted, it is thought that the fate of July is too unimportant to delay adjustment to a new situation, and that the promise of abundant new supplies for the coming month is so strong as to put August futures beyond the grip of the manipulative control of a few.

The market rallied a little toward 11 o'clock in anticipation of bullish remarks in the Government weekly weather report about the hot spell in Texas in the middle of last week.

STOCKS RESPOND TO ACTIVE BUYING

Propitious Cables and Long Interests Liquidate, Cause Strength All Day.

By CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Most stocks at the opening of the stock market to-day responded to more optimistic news with the result that gains were scattered thorugh the list. Union Pacific advanced 1 point, but later reacted. Canadian Pacific was 1¼ higher. Amalgamated Copper was up ⅜ at the outset, but later lost all its advance.

The growing possibility that a railroad strike on the Eastern lines will be averted and cables telling of stronger European markets had an early effect which profit-taking removed.

Among the other gains were United States Steel common ⅜, Southern Pacific ¼, Chino Copper ½, Northern Pacific ¼, Reading ⅝, Pennsylvania ⅛, Missouri Pacific ⅛, Erie ⅛, Chesapeake and Ohio ⅛, American Can ½.

American Telephone and Telegraph lost ½; American Smelting also shaded.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were sluggish. Canadian Pacific in London was strengthened on repurchases.

After the first fifteen minutes of trading the market became dull and price movements returned unchanged to ¼ higher, with the exception of Chesapeake and Ohio, which advanced ⅞. Anaconda, Canadian Pacific, Erie and Pennsylvania Railroad advanced ¼. Southern Pacific rose ½; other issues were unchanged.

Call money loaning at 2¼.

Trading continued extremely narrow in the last hour and at times a condition of almost absolute stagnation prevailed. The most important feature was the absence of supply and prices were mostly maintained at the level obtained earlier in the day. Canadian Pacific went to 214 for a net gain of 2 points on the day. Steel went to 53, but receded fractionally. Union Pacific gained over the mid-day range and Amalgamated Copper also moved up slightly.

The market closed firm. Governments unchanged; other bonds steady.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Money on call 2¼; time money unchanged; sixty days 4 per cent, ninety days 5¼, six months 6@6⅛.

Posted rates: Sterling exchange 4.84@4.87½, with actual business in bankers' bills at 4.8675 for demand and 4.8315 for sixty-day bills.

Prime mercantile paper unchanged.

METAL MARKET.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The metal market was dull to-day.

Quotations: Copper, spot, 13¼ bid; July, 13¼@13⅜; August, 13¼@13⅜; September, 13¼@13⅜; lead, 4.30@4.40; spelter, 5.25@5.35; tin, 39.70@40.00.

PRICE OF SHEEP SOAR.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Another 15 to 25c advance was scored by the sheep market to-day, Idaho lambs selling at 8.55. Sorting was light, which made prices even higher than they looked on paper. Beef and pork are so high that mutton is getting the benefit.

Cattle trade was nominally steady, although Kansas City had another big run of draught refugees out of Kansas pastures. Hogs were strong to 5c higher with a 9.30 top.

Wheat—No. 2 red .....104 @104½
Corn—No. 2 ..... 61¾
Oats—No. 2 39

CHICAGO, July 15.—Wheat showed losses of ¼ to ½c early to-day on the weakness in the markets abroad, coupled with larger receipts in the Northwest than expected, and the pressure of wheat off the English coast. There was good selling by scattered longs and the buying was of a half-hearted character.

Corn was up ⅛ to ¼c on small offerings in the pit and good buying by shorts. Rains are badly needed in sections of Canada.

Oats were off ¼ to ⅜c and slow.

Provisions were firmer with hogs, which were 5c higher at the yards.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: We think, summing up the general situation, that the favorable action is to buy cotton on soft spots.

Miller & Co.: The market continued in control of the summer position, but in our opinion it can only be a short time before conditions surrounding the present growth must prove the dominating influence, and if conditions continue as favorable as they are at present will make for lower prices.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We continue to advise moderate purchases on declines.

Josephthal, Louchheim & Co.: We continue to advise sales on all strong spots.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.: We would not hesitate to sell the new crop on rallies.

Logan & Bryan: We rather feel that purchases on moderate setbacks are in order.

SEVERE PAIN WITH HEMORRHOIDS

Got No Rest Nights. Had to Be Propped Up in Bed. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured in Three Weeks.

Bissell, Ala. — "I was troubled for several years with protruding hemorrhoids. They caused pain of the most severe kind and some loss of blood. They were so inflamed that the touch of anything against them was most intense agony. I got no rest nights and had to have my legs and feet propped up in the bed.

"I tried all kinds of advertised cures and I was told that an operation was the only relief. I suffered untold agony. I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. I tried it and then procured a box of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I took the Cuticura Soap and made a solution with warm water and bathed the affected parts before applying the Cuticura Ointment. I was cured sound and well in three weeks' time. A cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment accomplished what all else failed to do." (Signed) L. R. Cook, Nov. 12, 1912.

For red, rough, chapped and bleeding hands, itching, burning palms, and painful finger-ends with shapeless nails, a one-night Cuticura treatment works wonders. Soak hands, on retiring, in hot water and Cuticura Soap. Dry, anoint with Cuticura Ointment and wear soft bandages or old, loose gloves during the night. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Dr. Delemar Freed Of Attack Charge

HAMILTON, July 15.—Dr. James Delemar, who was given a preliminary trial before Justices Harry Stevens, R. Gip Robinson and Ben R. Harris here on Monday, on the charge of attacking the wife of a prominent Harris County farmer, was discharged, there not being sufficient evidence introduced to hold him to Superior Court. The trial was in progress the entire day and 97 witnesses were examined.

Dr. Delemar was given an ovation by friends. He returned to Mountain Hill, his home, with his brother and father-in-law.

Dr. Delemar was arrested last week and was confined in the Muscogee County jail pending his hearing.

Now for Silk Remnants

The Selling Starts at Nine o'Clock

The silk section has given over every semblance of a remnant it possessed for this sale—that its "swan song" sale shall be its best.

There will be no more Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. silk remnant sales this season!

So be advised—this is your best opportunity to secure a dress, a coat, a waist pattern at smallest cost.

Here—we will list some of the kinds included—

Crepe de Chines, Foulards,
Messalines, Taffetas,
Chiffons, Brocades,
Wash Silks, Kimono Silks,
Corded Silks, China Silks,
Poplins, Novelties.

And each of these could be further divided into many varieties—all this season's silks, now sold down to remnant lengths (one-half yard to ten yards), because they were the silks in the colors and patterns and at the prices that the discriminating women of Atlanta wanted.

The silks remain as fine as ever. The prices, however, are changed very materially.

Many are reduced one-third.

Many are reduced one-half.

And a great many are reduced more than one-half.

Indeed, at these reductions this will be the last Silk Remnant Sale of the season!

Buy for now, buy for the fall and save, knowing no such opportunity will be offered again.

None of these silks on approval, none exchanged, none C. O. D.

Women's Hats Bow to New Prices

The bow amounts to a fine courtesy, so very low are the new prices. And now that so many women want another hat, but an inexpensive one, perhaps for traveling, perhaps for no other reason than to have just a fresh hat, this sale amounts to a timely event.

Hats at $1.00

Twenty-five of these—and as many different hats. Originally a number of these were $10.00 and from that down to $5.00. Many of them are just what women will want for traveling or for street wear. Dark colors mostly, too variously shaded and trimmed to describe them.

$1.00!

It would not pay for the ribbons, the feathers, the flowers or the shapes!

Hats at $5.00

Some thirty of these, and all fresh and charming. Just for our workrooms. In the height of the season these would be $7.50 and up. There are light hats for wear with white dresses, there are smart dark hats for going-away; there are a few mourning hats; there are a few leghorns, a few Neapolitans. The greatest number are hemps.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

JUNE 10.—I was forcibly reminded this morning that my contemplated flight is no dream by the appearance of Manette dressed in her hobo clothes. Instead of the dainty, lace-trimmed white in which she is always attired, she wore a blue checked gingham, her curls had been cropped off; in her hand she carried a blue sunbonnet, and her shoes were a durable, heavy-soled tan.

The little monkey was very much excited because I didn't know her, and danced around the room, darting out the door and across the lawn at the sound of Mrs. Spencer's voice, giving such squeals of delight on the way that I felt that the cure for both of us had begun.

"A happy baby," I murmured.

"A baby no longer," said Richards, who had brought her into the room. There was an unusual note in Richards' voice, and I was not surprised when I turned to look at her to find traces of tears on her face.

"She can dress herself now," she said, half-proudly, and half in complaint. "She wouldn't let me fasten a button for her because she said she would have to dress herself when she is away from me.

"Mr. Max, there isn't a doctor anywhere near where you are going, and what are you going to do without me to nurse her if she gets sick? And who will sterilize her food? The poor little lamb, to be taken into a wilderness like that!"

She covered her face with her apron and began to cry. The doctor is right. The love we have for Manette is weighted too heavily with apprehension for the child's good. It is well I am taking her away.

Comforting Words.

I couldn't scold her. I could only give her the reassurance I had given every day since the trip was planned. That I would telegraph for her at the first symptom of illness; that I would send her a daily bulletin; that I would see that Manette didn't eat this, and remember that last fall she had a fever because she ate too much of that, and that her throat isn't strong, and her stomach is weak, etc.

All I promised to remember because of my respect for Richards' intentions, and all except the bulletins I intend to forget because of my interest in the child.

June 11.—Jack and Sally Spencer came over last evening, and it was the first time I had seen her since Jack's return. I thought she looked a little worn and thoughtful, but outwardly she was her same serene, sweet, wholesome self. She approved of my plans for Manette. I was glad, for I have learned to rely on her judgment.

She wished, she said, that she could take a little child she loved and go away from everybody in the world.

"Complimentary to me," laughed her husband.

Sally winced, a quick flash of color mantled her cheeks and as suddenly receded, leaving her more pale and tired than is her ordinary wont. I wondered her husband didn't see it. Or rather, to speak more truthfully, I wondered that any man could have the love of a woman like Sally, and not show greater interest in her condition.

"It would do me good," she resumed. "In caring for a child one forgets many things."

Just what the doctor had said to me! I am glad I can take the cure.

I wish every hungry-hearted man and woman in the world could know what it is to love and to have the love of a child, and in that way "forget many things."

A Farewell Tea.

June 12.—We start to-night, and Jack and Sally came over to take a farewell make-believe tea on the lawn. I wish I could have been spared it, for, with my sorrow over her unhappiness, my indignation at him and the fight I am making to keep down all rebellious longings, I am rapidly getting myself into a serious state.

"I met Mrs. Brown on the street when away last week," said Jack, drinking make-believe tea out of a cup as big as a thimble.

To be so brazen! I wouldn't have thought it of him! I shouldn't have looked at Sally when he said it. I should have had more sense. But men have no sense in such matters, and I can't claim a credit that doesn't belong to me. So I looked at her, and made no reply, and when Jack, in his asinine stupidity wondered why I made no answer and looked up to see, he found me gazing at his wife with what must have been anything but a conventional tea party expression. And he saw that she had dropped the cream pitcher and it was broken, and that her eyes were filled with tears, and her face white, as she apologized to Manette, an unusual emotion over the loss of a child's dish!

Nor did her color come back, though Manette said it was all right in her sweetest manner, and her tears continued to flow in an altogether uncontrollable way, though Manette climbed on her lap and hugged her and said she didn't care for the dishes and would rather lose all of them than see Aunt Sally cry.

"You are getting as foolish and nervous as an old woman," grumbled her husband. "I don't suppose a dozen tea sets like these cost a dollar."

"They don't," I agreed. "But sometimes we don't reckon the cost of a thing after it is broken."

Manette Asleep.

June 13.—It is midnight, and Manette is asleep in her berth. Poor little girl! I decided when I saw Richards weeping over her, and Sarah Ras wiping her eyes with her knuckles, and the cook and the maids looking as if at a funeral, with Tompkins as the undertaker, that we have all been loving her too much.

Everyone acted as if she might never come back alive, and their lugubrious expressions and tear-soaked farewells made the child look frightened. "Am I your sick baby?" she asked, when we had waved the last good-bye, and Tompkins was taking us to the train.

Mrs. Spencer rode in the limousine with us. It was a journey of an hour's duration to reach the little suburban station I had decided to take to escape newspaper observation, and she insisted on taking it. I was sorry.

Manette, exhausted by the day's excitement, fell asleep in my arms within five minutes, and I think for the first half hour neither Sally nor I spoke a word.

Then she began. "I have been thinking over what you said, Max," she said, "and I refuse to let you think you are right. I need a big brother. Do you know I haven't a relative in the world unless my husband can be called one? You need a sister, someone to help you with the care of that child, and to whom you can come with all your little and big troubles.

"So it is all settled. You are to have no further thought of anything else in your head. I am your sister; you are my brother. It was the happiest relationship I have ever known. I refuse to let it be spoiled by your silly notion that you may not care more for me than you should."

Not another word was spoken. We reached the station, and the train pulled in. I carried Manette to my stateroom, and then returned to the limousine to bid good-bye to Sally.

Another Kiss.

I held out my hand. She ignored it, and put both arms around my neck.

"Good-bye, best brother in the world," she whispered, kissing my cheek.

God! It was more than mortal man could stand. I threw my arms around her, and when I left her a moment later I am sure that I took with me every hope she could have had that my love for her was like a man feels for his sister.

Wrong Stuff.

Entering a barber's shop, a customer with scanty locks asked for a bottle of hair restorer, with which the assistant promptly supplied him. For a time he persevered in his application of the remedy for missing hair, but this only resulted in raising bumps in his cranium which would have puzzled the most expert phrenologist. In haste he returned to the barber's shop.

"Look," he exclaimed, excitedly, "what the stuff you sold me in this bottle has done to my head."

Puzzled and perplexed, the barber took the bottle, examined it, then turned to the assistant and fairly shouted:

"You blockhead! What you have sold this customer is not hair restorer. It is my patent recipe for bust developing!"

Plenty of Time.

Mr. Styles: "I have two tickets for the opera."

Mrs. Styles: "Oh, good! I'll go and put my hat on right away."

"All right, dear. I guess you'll be ready in time. The tickets are for to-morrow night."

The Ghost Breaker

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Is this man Warren, the ghost-breaker?"

"Remember, he's harmless," cautioned Jarvis, to the detectives out of the corner of his mouth. "Humor him—agree with anything he says."

The Duke was almost blind with fury because he could not hear the mumbled words. There is no knowing what he would have been if he had heard them.

"Answer my question!" he stormed. "Is this man Warren, the ghost-breaker?"

"Tom" had to hide behind his more self-possessed friend, who managed to gurgle:

"Now, that's all right, Dook. Sure he's a ghost-breaker! Ain't he, Tom?"

Tom was nearly purple in the face, but he managed to get out in a half-strangled voice:

"Surest thing you know, bo."

"Sacristi!" foamed the exalted cousin. "Am I, Hernado d'Alva, to be mocked at by two grinning, bull-necked scullions?"

"Shake a leg there!" called a voice from the deck, "if you are going ashore with the pilot!"

The detectives staggered weakly to the door and Driscoll feebly waved his hand farewell.

"You're all right, Dook, old boy! Ghost-breaker! Whee! Wow! Ha, ha!"

The Ambush at the Inn.

Segura, cupped in a fertile valley among the jagged red-brown Spanish mountains, was the natural home of rest. When you came down to it over the winding mountain road it breathed from afar the spirit of dolce far niente. All day long it dozed in the soft yellow sunlight, and all night long it slept in the dim glow of the great yellow stars.

At times its peace was broken by the sudden, fierce descent of a mountain storm. Then the wild lightnings play around the towers of the old castle perched high above it, and the warm rain lashes through the olive trees and beats clamorous summons on the flat roofs of the houses.

But these storms quickly pass and leave Segura greener, fairer, lazier and sleepier than before.

Scientists have observed that a people inevitably conform themselves to their environment; that in their character and even their physical make-up they reflect the climate and topography of their native land. It was so with Segura and the Segurans. They were a solidly built, but for the most part a placid and ox-eyed breed, but likely to be swept by sudden and violent storms of passion, when the steel flashed, sharply and deadly as the mountain lightning. Excitement, passion of any sort, quickly spent its force.

The Little Inn.

Entering the town by the old Roman road, which is still the one decent highway of the region, you pass the little Church of Our Lady of Roncomadour and just beyond it you come upon the one little inn of the town. Here the villagers have for generations done most of their gambling, dueling and drinking. You enter into a large room and see a fireplace at your left and tables scattered about the floor in front of it.

At your right the staircase rises against the front wall of the room, so that only the foot is visible from the door. Beneath the stairs are two deep windows, so close together as to be practically one. There is a table in this little alcove and it is a fine place in which to eat your supper, for the windows command a view of the valley and, beyond, the rugged mountains and the great castle, dark and stern, against the sunset. Sitting there you would be disappointed if you were not told that the old castle was haunted. Its great square towers and sheer, half-ruined curtains hark back to a time when ghosts should have been bred by the score.

The Seguras had wrenched it from a feudal enemy and held it for their king. The Moor had been thrust back from its walls three times in the last days of Granada. Its towers had rung with battle cries and crash of blade and armor. Its halls and stairways had been slippery with blood and its moat choked with the harvest of the fight.

You may have some difficulty in obtaining this table, as it is a favorite one of the Seguran card players and idlers. Any of the other tables will be generally at your disposal, for most of the natives prefer the wineroom, which is at the end of the passage that opens at the rear. But this particular spot is a favorite.

Just at this time it was at a premium, especially as night fell over the valley. For even the bovine nature of the Segurans was stirred by the repeated tragedies and unsolved mystery of the grim and deserted castle.

Gaspar, a fat-faced, round-bodied villager, one of the most sedulous of the customers of Pedro, the inkeeper, sat at the little table by the windows and told the latest developments to a friend just returned from his military service in Africa. The young Prince had gone in to lay the ghost and find the treasure. That was two weeks ago, and—Sancta Maria!—not one sound or sign of him since.

"What men will not do for money or women!" commented the bravo, with piety. He looked keener and more alert than the other villagers as a result of his recent army experience. His name was Maximo. "Did he go in alone?" he asked.

"Old Vardos, his father's body servant, pleaded with him all the way to the

THE SPANISH BULLY

The innkeeper came on the run.

"A thousand pardons, senor, he begged, stumbling into the room; "What can I do for you?"

Don Robledo glared at him until the innkeeper was reduced to a condition of abject terror, then snapped:

"My horse is outside. Wash out his mouth and don't water him until he is cool. Leave the saddle on."

"Yes, senor. Yes, senor."

angle where the brook runs out of the moat not to throw away another life for that phantom treasure. Every night since then the old man has returned and left a basket of provisions at the main gate." Gaspar's great dark eyes opened and his voice took on a hollow tone. "None of them had been touched!"

Maximo swore with sympathetic vigor.

"And wouldn't any one go in there with him?"

Gaspar stared at him as if he thought him demented.

"No! Why should they?"

"He is your Prince," frowned the soldier.

Gaspar shrugged his shoulders uncomfortably and shuffled his feet under the table.

"Isn't a man's life his own?" he growled.

"Sacristi! You are a lot of old women," snapped Maximo. "Where is his sister—the Princess? What is she doing about it?"

"She's not here—she is away—gone on some mysterious errand to America. It is rumored in the village that she went to get a man to fight the ghost."

The soldier flushed a brick-red under his dark skin.

"In the name of the Virgin! Did she have to go that far for some one with stomach enough to go into the castle?"

At the moment Dolores, the innkeeper's daughter—the pretty black-eyed belle of the village—slipped into the room and wanted to know what was the matter. Gaspar explained that he thought he had seen a light from the main tower of the castle a short time before and was explaining the situation to his friend. The girl pooh-poohed the idea and the twain departed for the wine room in search of refreshment.

Dolores was evidently waiting for some one. She went to the window and looked out down the road repeatedly. At last she was rewarded by the appearance of a lithe, gray-haired man, who hastened to greet her.

"Any news, Vardos?" she cried eagerly.

He held out a basket which he carried. His face was gray and solemn and his eyes shone in the firelight.

"Nothing," he replied in a low, faltering voice. "Here is the basket—untouched, as usual." He placed the basket on the table by the window and stared out at the castle for a moment in silence.

"This is the fifteenth night," he added.

"Gaspar swears he saw a light in the tower to-night," said the girl, in the same hushed tones. The old servitor crossed himself.

"If he did it was an unblessed light."

The girl crossed herself also, and muttered a short prayer.

"You haven't given up hope?" she asked, after a pause, and the question was more of a plea than otherwise.

Vardon shook his head.

No Hope.

"I gave up hope when he went in. I waited to-night until an hour past sundown, and twice I called. Once," he gulped and his voice grew shakier, "a wail came back to me! It may have been the wind through a grated window, but it sounded like a sigh of the damned! When I called again, something moved in the turret of the keep, like a man waving, and my heart leaped with joy. But only for an instant; for, with a harsh cry, a black, ugly bird flapped from the turret straight for where the sun had set—on my left! Mind you, the left—"

Dolores shuddered and her lip trembled.

"Oh, if the Princess were only here!" she wailed.

"She's on her way—but what can she do?"

Dolores' slender body straightened instantly and the shadow of terror disappeared. Her eyes flashed and her bosom heaved with sudden passion.

"She will go straight to the castle," she cried. "And will Segura have it said that she went alone?"

This time it was Vardos who shuddered. "God forbid that it should come to that!" he exclaimed, fervently. "Good-night."

The little inn was undisturbed for some little while after the departure of Vardon. It was nearly 8 o'clock when a tall, powerfully made man galloped up on a black horse, tossed the bridle to a hostler and strode into the main room of the inn. He had probably the hardest face in all the rough region of hard faces. His mouth was wide, but was a mere slit in a craggy countenance. His cheeks were laced with white scars. One long weal traveled from the bridge of the nose downward to the angle of the jaw. His eyebrows were bushy and jet black and shaded the most sinister and menacing pair of black eyes ever set into a human face. This was Don Robledo, bravo, duelist, general "bad man" and right-hand ruffian of the Duke of Alva.

Finding no one about he thumped the top of the table with his riding whip and bellowed:

"Hey! You, Pedro!"

The Bully.

A sleepy voice replied somewhere in the recesses of the house.

"Wake up!" roared Don Robledo, whacking the table again.

Then the inn-keeper seemed to recognize this peculiar summons, or the voice of the summoner, and he came on the run.

"A thousand pardons, senor!" he begged, stumbling into the room. "What can I do for you?"

Don Robledo glared at him until the inn-keeper was reduced to a condition of abject terror, then snapped:

"My horse is outside. Wash out his mouth and don't water him till he is cool. Leave the saddle on."

"Yes, senor! Yes, senor!"

Pedro made hurriedly for the door, but was stopped by a sharp command.

"Hold on. If that rat-infested larder of yours is empty, get it filled before His Excellency arrives."

"The Duke coming here!" exclaimed Pedro. "When?"

"To-night. Don't stand and stare! Where's your daughter?"

"I'll call her," the inn-keeper assured him, hastening out.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FORGIVE HIM, OF COURSE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The other day, while talking to a young man, he kissed me. I was very indignant, and refused to speak to him again. He sent me a letter of apology, and apologized personally, but still I refuse to speak to him. Would you advise me to ignore him entirely?

C. T.

He has shown due repentance, and I hope you will forgive him. If he is the gentleman I hope he is, he will not repeat the offense until an engagement makes it a privilege.

I HOPE NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been in love with a cousin for four months, and although we have not spoken of it, I feel that she reciprocates. But, being a young man of a serious mood, I am at times annoyed by her teasing and silly actions, also I am grieved because when there is company she seemingly neglects me for other young men, while when we are alone she accepts my attentions. Do you think she loves me?

MUSIC LOVER.

You are cousins, which should be a bar to any closer relationship. Though you were not, I would still hope she did not love you, for you, being "of serious mood," would change her happy, merry disposition to one more grave, instead of being glad. The Lord made her that way.

CERTAINLY.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I would like to know if it is proper for me to ask a friend if I may take her home. If it is, I would like to know the proper thing to say.

A. H. B.

"May I take you home?" is the simplest and best form to use. Always ask her, never taking it for granted, as some men have done, and in that way compelling her acceptance.

Henry Gets a Rest

"HENRY said," related Mrs. Dillpickle, "that he was not feeling very fit and the change would do him good. 'If you insist,' said he, 'on spending a week in Michigan at the summer cottage getting things ready for the family invasion I might as well go along. There will be fishing—it's just the time for bass—and, besides, maybe I can help you.'

"Henry added that last phrase with the air of a guilty sudden thought. He is a good husband, but I must say that around the house Henry Dillpickle is about as much use as a flying machine or a white elephant. But I let him go along. I've had experience before when I yearned for a strong right arm to beat rugs and rake and spade and scrub and couldn't hire any one because all the men were doing spring plowing and all the women were busy wiping up mud tracks after them.

"Henry has put on too much weight and all winter he mourned because he had no time to take an expensive gymnastic and massage course to run down his weight. He has talked loud and long about how willingly he would live on bran diet and be pounded to a jelly if only he could lose weight, and I thought I saw a way to help him and also myself.

A Feverish Stare.

"When the launch dumped us and our baggage on the pier and went coughing away Henry began looking at the lake with that absorbed, feverish, fisherman's stare. I stopped that immediately.

"'Run on to the cottage, Henry,' I said, 'and get the wheelbarrow and cart up the trunk and the linoleum and the suit case and the groceries.'

"'In these clothes?' he howled reproachfully.

"'There is a lovely suit hanging in the closet at the cottage,' I told him. 'Don't you remember? It's the one you wore when you fell into the lake and were burying and got run over by the Fishers' automobile. There is fringe on the cuffs, but nobody will see you—trot on!'

"The way Henry puffed and steamed getting that luggage to the house would have been heartrending had I not been too busy cleaning out the kitchen. I made him eat his lunch on the kitchen table, which broke his proud heart. Just as he was getting out an after-lunch cigar I put a spade into his hand.

"'You will have time to fix about half the garden this afternoon,' I told him. 'Then there's the yard to rake, and I want what's left of the woodpile moved, and you know we're going to make a new path to the lake. Meanwhile, I wish you'd beat these rugs.'

"Henry looked at me reproachfully, but I was adamant. 'I did think,' said he feebly, 'that maybe I'd get a nice mess of fish for dinner——'

"'Fish?' echoed I. 'Oh, my, no! Not when I have a lovely can of salmon ready!'

"Henry groaned and took up the white man's burden. He went to bed at 7 o'clock that night, walking bent over like an old man. He said that never again should he wonder at the hobbling, shuffling gait of steady farmers. He understood why they couldn't straighten up.

"He tried to slip out at 5 the next morning to go fishing, but I opened one eye and suggested that it would be nice if he would start the kitchen fire and a blaze in the fireplace. Two hours later I found Henry, all smudged like a stoker, shaking his fist at the kitchen stove, which he had entirely covered with all the ashes he hadn't scattered over the floor. 'I've put everything on that fire of yours,' he stormed, 'from kerosene to vanilla extract, and it won't burn! There is a Michigan law against cook stoves burning, I know! I——'

"When I suggested that if he opened the drafts instead of shutting them it might be better, Henry blew up and popped out of doors, where he chopped the window boxes into kindling wood before he realized what he was doing. I had to stand over him that day to make him keep on with the garden. By night he said he felt queer and knew he was going to die and that he had no idea I had such a cruel and inconsiderate nature.

"The next morning he groaned feebly when I woke him and then he refused to get up. He said his head ached and his back ached, and his legs and arms ached, and why in thunder didn't I hire a man to do my slaving and let him expire in peace?

Glad To Go.

"I had to spend a great deal of the day putting hot cloths on Henry's aches and pains and soothing his disposition, and when he did rise from his bed of suffering he said 'Ouch!' whenever he moved, and he looked pale.

"The last day there I let him go fishing and he came home with a fine string of fish. He nearly fainted when I said that, of course, he would have to clean them for me. Henry Dillpickle can't kill a mosquito without gulping, and those fish were still lively. At dinner he said he guessed he had lost his fondness for fish.

"Henry said he was mighty glad to get home," concluded Mrs. Dillpickle, "where he could recover his health and strength after his strenuous rest in the country!"

Household Suggestions

To keep the hands soft have a bottle of olive oil on your washstand, and before washing the hands rub a little of the oil well in. Then soap and wash as usual. The oil loosens the dirt and also keeps the skin soft.

Grass stains may be removed from washing materials by carefully rubbing the spots with a little fresh lard. Then wash in the usual way, and you will find that the stains have entirely disappeared.

To make bread crumbs quickly place a piece of bread in a muslin bag, tie the opening, and rub with the hands. The crumbs will be quite fine, and it will only take a minute or two to bake them.

To make cabbage digestible, when half boiled pour off the water and place in fresh boiling water.

When preparing the whitening for ceilings or pantries, add one pint of boiled milk, after you have put in as much water as you require. The milk gives the ceiling a beautiful gloss when dry and keeps the whitening from rubbing off.

Tea Made with Boiling Milk instead of water and allowed to stand for four minutes before being poured off the leaves is excellent for invalids and most nourishing.

An Economical Way of Frying Onions is to place sufficient cold water at the bottom of the pan to cover it, then slice the onions and put them into the pan with a piece of dripping the size of a walnut. Fried in this way they will not burn.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a comity of ladies caim to the house last nite. Thay belong to a new club wich Ma has joined, called the Sisters of the Songbird. The object of the club, Ma told Pa, is to teech the art of singing & the art of making new & butiful songs & sending them to forrin lands ware the heethen is setting alone in his blindness.

One of the ladies did all the talking. Her naim was Missus Smily Goode. The way she looked at Pa onst wen he tried to say sumthing & interrupted her, it was a awful look. I bet Mister Goode is a kind of a silent man.

The objeck of our order, sed Missus Goode, is to promote song in all its butiful buty. Song & the maiking of songs has progressed, she sed, until it is grate in its vary grateness. What is noabler or grater than one who makes songs? she sed to Pa.

I doan't know, sed Pa, the only song writers I know is jest plain good fellows like Vince Bryant and Billy Cobb or Harry Williams. Thay don't feel grate or noabel excep sumtimes late at nite or at a stag party, Pa sed.

But I mean songs for the heethen to make them see the truth, sed Missus Goode. I mean songs that shud be sent to forrin countries.

He Indorsed It.

That is what shud be did with a lot of the songs that is a kind of rage now, Pa sed. One sure thing, sed Pa, if a good heethen mother saw sum of them songs like "Wait Till I Git You Alone Tonite" & a lot of that tripe, she wuddent let her littel heethen daughter sing it, Pa sed. I doan't think we peepul in this country have a rite to send misshunaries anyware after standing for sum of the songs that make a hit here.

You doan't seem to understand, sed Missus Emily Goode. This is the kind of songs we are going to send to the heethen like this one wich I have just rote. Then she sang:

Kindness, kindness, gentle kindness
Must be shown by all us gurls
To the heethen in his blindness
Diving after preshus pearls.
Oh the foolish pearls he dives for
Underneath the deep blue sea.
Pain are the foolish things he strives for,
Let us help him, you & me.

CHORUS.

Kindness, kindness, that's the word
That by heathen must be herd.
Preech it, sisters, everyware,
Sing it to sum heethen air,
Till the cannibuls we know there
Will not gulp us wen we go there.

Well, sed Pa, ware are you all deer littel cunning reeformers going to get the gelt for this grand movement? You cant maik it by publishing & selling yure songs, sed Pa, beekaus the song bisness is on the fritz.

Strong, Brave Men.

We are going to deepend on you strong, brave men to help us out, sed one of the Sisters of the Songbird. We are kind of deependent on you noabel men, after all is sed & done about our wanting to vote & all that. We lean on you.

Not on me, sed Pa. I am too long in the league. I wont give a cent. Put that in yure pipes and sing it, sed Pa.

What She Was Meant For.

A lady of great beauty and attractiveness, who was an ardent admirer of Ireland, once crowned her praise of it at a party by saying:

"I think I was meant for an Irishwoman."

"Madam," rejoined a witty son of Erin, who happened to be present, "thousands would back me in saying that you were meant for an Irishman."

A Stunning Hat

Fully Described by Olivette

By Olivette.

A WONDERFUL picture hat for the fresh young face is the one we illustrate to-day. Black Milanese straw forms the foundation, and a double flounce of accordion plated maline shadows the brim. The maline covers the rounded crown and a narrow fluting of it edges the top of the crown. At the base of the crown in front nestles a great full-blown rose in glowing crimson, and wound loosely around the crown is double-faced black satin ribbon, which falls in graceful loops and ends from the down-curving back brim. One end of the ribbon is almost to the waist, and the other falls almost to the knees—a most unusual new feature.

A Good Reason.

It was a red-letter day at one of our large schools, and the boys were under examination in "optics." The point under illustration was that strictly and scientifically speaking, to see not objects, but their images depicted on the retina. The doctor, to make the matter plainer, said to the head of the class:

"Jackson, did you ever actually see your father?"

Bill promptly replied: "No, sir."

"Please explain why you never saw your own father."

"Because," replied Bill, very gravely, "he died before I was born, sir."

Introducing Himself.

A gentleman was once advertised to sing at a charity concert presided over by a city councilor—a self-made man. The first song was "The Owl." On rising to announce it the chairman was interrupted and informed that the singer had not arrived, a fact that he duly notified to the audience.

A little later, however, the missing baritone made his appearance, and was observed by the worthy chairman, who called on him without delay.

But the singer had hurried, and had not recovered his breath, so, with apologies, this fact was suitably explained and another artiste requisitioned. At length the baritone was quite ready.

The councilor rose, and quite innocently discomfited the long-awaited singer by announcing with marked confidence:

"Mr. 'Ampton will now favor us with the longed-for 'Howl!'"

Their Married Life

Helen Determines to Brave Warren's Wrath and Engage Rooms at Another Hotel.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

HELEN opened the door to the grinning French maid with the coffee and rolls. The girl looked uncertainly around for some place to set the tray, for on the only table Helen had unpacked her traveling bag.

"Wait, you can put it here," and Helen hurriedly cleared off the table.

The maid, who could not understand or speak a word of English, put down the tray, chattered something in French, and hurried out.

"Breakfast come?" called Warren from the bedroom.

"The tray's come, but I shouldn't call it breakfast," answered Helen, viewing it with disgust. "Just see how they serve things here!"

It was certainly not an attractive tray. There were only coffee and rolls. A roll and a blackened spoon and knife was thrust in each of the thick, chipped coffee cups. There was a small plate of butter, a brown earthenware coffee pot, a pitcher of hot milk, a saucer with a few lumps of sugar—and nothing else. There were no napkins, and not even saucers for the cups.

"Well, they don't believe in unessentials, that's certain," was Warren's comment as he surveyed the tray.

"Look at that silver!" exclaimed Helen indignantly, taking the blackened spoon and knife from one of the cups.

"I'd hardly call it silver. But come on—draw up a chair there. It's after nine now and I ought to be out of here."

Helen spread a fresh towel on the table to serve as a cloth, and arranged on it the meager contents of the tray.

"Here, dear, this is as good as paper napkins," taking from her trunk some crumpled tissue paper.

Helen in Distress.

"Oh, don't be so darn particular," pouring out his coffee, while Helen wiped out her cup and spoon with the paper. "You've got to put up with a lot of things when you travel."

"I can put up with almost anything—if it's clean. But I don't think this place IS clean. Hadn't you better tell them as you go out that we're not going to stay?"

"I've no time to look up any other place," he frowned. "I'm here on business and got to be on the job. We can put up with this for a couple of weeks—won't be here longer than that."

Helen flushed. "Dear, I CAN'T stay at this place. I tell you it isn't CLEAN! I can't eat here," pushing back untouched the cup of muddy, brown coffee.

"See here, the place for anybody that's as blamed fussy as you—is at home! If I'd had any sense, I'd left you there."

"But can't I find other rooms?" pleadingly. "I haven't anything else to do—I can start out the first thing this morning. Dear, you said we didn't have to stay here if we didn't like it."

"Well, I like it all right. This is good enough for anybody. We've got two big rooms right on the Boulevard, within a stone's throw of the Opera House—what more do you want?"

He pushed back the shabby red velvet arm chair, crumpled the tissue paper into a ball and threw it on the table as he rose.

"Now I'll be back here about half-past six, and we'll go out to dinner. You can fool around the shops or do anything you like—but we're going to let well enough alone and stay right here. Understand?"

He strode into the bedroom, brushed his hat, jammed it on his head, got some papers out of his suit case and started for the door.

"Now, you've got enough money?"

Helen nodded.

"Well, the American Express Company is right around the corner—they'll tell you how to get anywhere. You might stop in there and see if there's any mail for us.

An Appalling Thought.

Helen followed him to the door, realizing that when Warren went out on the street he would be lost to her—there would be no way she could reach him until 6 o'clock. To be left so alone the first day in a foreign city seemed suddenly somewhat appalling. Warren kissed her hurriedly, and drew away from her clinging arms with a curt:

"Now, take care of yourself. Don't get run over. You have to look where you're going here—these cabmen'd sooner run over you than not. Go to the Bon Marche. That's a big shop—you can spend most of the day there."

When he had gone, Helen glanced around with a dismayed sense of her loneliness. And this place—she HATED it! The strong morning sun lit up the shabby carpet and the dusty, worn, red velvet furniture. The bedroom with its now disordered bed and untidy wash-stand was even less attractive.

A few minutes later Helen, armed with her guide-book and a book of French phrases, locked her trunk and started out—determined to find other rooms in spite of what Warren had said.

She knew the Continental Hotel was very near, for he had pointed it out as they drove from the station. When she entered the lobby, it was with a sight of relief. At least this looked more like the hotels at home. One of the clerks, who spoke English, informed her that they had not a single vacant room and would not have for the next ten days.

From there Helen went to the American Express Company. She paused to view the Opera House which the guide-book said was the heart of Paris.

It was a majestic building, but Helen was not in the mood for sight-seeing this morning. The wonder of being in Paris was somewhat dulled by what she considered the "wretched" place at which they weer stopping. For Helen had none of the instincts of a real traveler. Her first demand was for cleanliness and comfort—to her the joys of sightseeing were secondary.

The American Express Company was a big, hospitable building on the corner. Two-thirds of the Americans in Paris have their mail sent to this office, and when Helen entered a dozen or more were writing letters and taking advantage of the guide-books, dictionaries and bureau of information. At the mail window Helen asked timidly if there was anything for Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Curtis."

The clerk took down a big package of letters from the "C" pigeon-hole, shuffled over them quickly and threw out three for Warren and one for herself. Helen went to a desk by the window and eagerly opened the letter from her mother.

Carterstown, Mo.,
June 24, 1913.

My Dear Helen—I am writing this several days before you sail so that it will be awaiting for you when you reach Paris. Do hope your voyage will be a smooth one, and that you will not be seasick.

I am sending you a clipping from the "Daily Trumpet." I don't know how they get the news out here, but you see they do. Everyone here thinks it's fine that you can travel so much. To go to London last year and to Paris this year—that's more than anyone in Carterstown can do. Did I tell you that the Episcopal Church had made up a fund to send their pastor, Dr. Eldridge, abroad this summer? The two Dobson girls are going also. But they're all going on a cheap line from Montreal. You are very fortunate to be able to go on the best line and in such grand style.

I know you will enjoy all the sights in Paris and the many beautiful shops. Send me a post card when you can. I will not expect you to write much, as I know you will be too busy.

I hope Warren will be successful in his business, as you write that this is only a business trip.

With love to both. MOTHER.

The clipping from her home town paper, Helen read with an amused smile:

"Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Curtis, of New York City, are sailing for Paris on the Kaiser Wilhelm. Mrs. Curtis was formerly Miss Helen Allen, of this city, and has many friends and relatives here. Mr. Curtis is a prominent lawyer in New York. We hope that their trip will be a pleasant one."

She slipped the letter back into the envelope, wondering if they would think Warren and she were traveling in such "grand style" if they could see the room she had left this morning.

A Daring Plan.

Helen looked up quickly as two American women sat down nearby.

"You're staying at the Ritz, aren't you?" asked the other one.

"Oh, no, we discovered the most wonderful little hotel this year. We've two beautiful rooms for only twenty francs a day! Everything's so clean and the service is PERFECT. Perhaps you know of it—Hotel Ronceray, 10 Rue Montaigne.

Helen hastily scribbled the address in the back of her guide-book, then gathering up her mail, she went deliberately over to the information desk and asked what bus would take her to the Rue Montaigne.

Two beautiful rooms for twenty francs a day, and they were paying sixteen at that dreadful place! Helen's lips were suddenly set in a little grim line of determination. If this hotel was as that woman had described it, she would brave Warren's wrath and engage the rooms. She would even retain them with a deposit—a deposit large enough to insure their taking them.

It was so rarely that Helen ever took even the slightest initiative without consulting Warren, that when a few moments later she climbed on the bus that was to take her to the Hotel Ronceray, her heart beat fast at her own daring.

The Mistakes of Jennie

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Now you'd better go and go quick!

CHAPTER XVII.

WHEN Jennie and the fellow met Tom, as they were going into the place—that Jennie thought was only a restaurant—Jennie just nodded to Tom and was going on in with the fellow. But Tom stood in the way and asked Jennie if she hadn't better come home with him.

At this the fellow got real angry and asked Tom who HE was and what business was it of HIS. Tom didn't pay any attention to the fellow, but would not let Jennie pass. Jennie was for getting angry, too, and told Tom it was none of his business.

Then Tom finally told her that her aunt, the boarding house keeper, was very sick and that she had sent him to bring Jennie home in a hurry. The fellow shook his fist in Tom's face and tried to shove him aside. Tom grabbed him by the collar, shaking him, and said, "You measly rat, I know about this place where you are trying to take this young girl and if it wasn't for creating a scene I'd break every bone in your wretched body, and now you'd better go and go quick, for I might do it anyway, before this hot weather makes me lose my temper."

Tom then took Jennie by the arm and walked off down the street. Jennie had never seen Tom quite so aroused, and, strange to relate, she was as meek as a lamb and walked with him to the car, never saying a word.

When they were on the car, Tom turned to her and said, "Jennie, girl, your aunt isn't sick. She didn't send me for you at all. I just told you that to get you away from that place and that fellow. I happened to be passing and saw you with that man and going into that awful place and told you that about your aunt, so as to get you away quick. If you had gone into that place you'd never been the same girl afterward, for it's one of the worst places in town, and I love you, Jennie, and I want you to kind a think of me once in a while." But Jennie looked straight ahead, not saying a word.

"Yes," said the meek-looking man, "I've no doubt you've had some great hunting experiences in your travels abroad."

"I have, indeed."

"Buffalo hunting——"

"Yes."

"And bear hunting——"

"Of course."

"Well, you just come round and let my wife take you house hunting and bargain hunting with her. Then you'll begin to know what real excitement is."

The late Sir W. S. Gilbert was inclined to be witty at the expense of the men and women who like to do amateur acting in the name of charity. An enthusiast once said to him:

"Mr. Gilbert, what do you think of our amateur club?"

"I think they are not so much a club as a bundle of sticks," returned the master of repartee.

When Making Bread-and-Butter Pudding, sprinkle each slice of bread and butter with desiccated cocoanut instead of currants and stew some on the top. This will make a change from the ordinary pudding, and will be found very tasty.

Why don't you come on up to Hot Springs Arkansas, and enjoy a game of golf in the cool fresh breezes of these beautiful mountain heights?

Did you think Hot Springs was merely a famous health resort?

Not at all! Thousands come here for the summer pleasures alone. The golf grounds and tennis courts are unsurpassed, the hill drives and paths invite you to ride, drive and ramble along; and for those who just must fish, wherever they go, the picturesque Ouchita River is nearby.

You would be surprised what little is asked for good board and how low the bath prices are fixed by the U. S. Government.

The Rock Island is the direct line to Hot Springs from Memphis. Four modernly equipped trains daily, leaving Memphis at 7:00 a. m., 9:45 a. m., 11:00 a. m. and 12:01 midnight. Trains from the southeast make direct connection in Memphis with these Rock Island trains to Hot Springs, Ark.

Learn about the many attractions this health and pleasure place offers. Write for booklet, and for details about schedule and fare from your home town.

Why not spend your vacation at this place where you can enjoy every summer pleasure, and be benefited by the world's most healing waters?

CRACKERS NOW BATTLING FOR GRAND OLD RAG

By Percy H. Whiting.

THIRTEEN is certainly a jinx for Atlanta. It's been a jinx all season. It is still jinxing. Take it yesterday. The Crackers were playing a marvelous offensive game—simply marvelous. Yet, try as they could, old Thirteen had 'em anchored. They got right up to thirteen hits and thirteen runs and there they stuck.

It was surely unlucky.

Yet, as the league-leading Billikens could make only seven runs through all a hot afternoon, the Crackers won.

And, since Chattanooga kindly trounced Mobile, the dear old race tightened up another notch.

* * *

FINE doings now in the first division! Montgomery has two games and a half on Mobile. Mobile has one on Atlanta. The locals are a game and a half ahead of Chattanooga.

Verily, some contest!

If Montgomery and Mobile lost again to-day—which would mean that Atlanta and Chattanooga must win, the race would tighten beautifully. The Billikens would hold a lead of a game and a half. But the Crackers would pass the Gulls, while the Lookouts would close up.

* * *

THE pennant bug seems to have bitten the Crackers at last. They played to win yesterday—strictly. And they won.

A team that will bat can not long be denied. And the Crackers everlastingly mauled the pellet yesterday. They had to.

Good old Gil Price was bad, and run after run sifted in while he presided. Then they warmed up Dent, at the earnest solicitation of Whitey Alperman, who nearly waved off an arm getting the thing started. The Washington chap pitched pretty well. They got to him for a run in the sixth and in the seventh he contributed again, this time with the assistance of an error in the outfield. Before the Billiken scoring ended seven runs were chalked up against the Crackers. But that amounted to nothing.

The locals knocked the Brown Boys, E. and C., out of the box in the order named. Then Dobbs, having no pitcher, put in Breen. On appearance, Breen is to the pitching mound what a cart horse is to a pair of racing shafts. But he proved the best hurler of the three, and the Crackers scored but two runs while he performed, and those were helped along by two errors.

* * *

ONE gob of gloom cropped out when Wally Smith hurt his hand trying to stop a terrific liner and was forced to retire. But the fans were cheered by the excellent playing of Manush.

Apparently, Smith has forked a prize in this chap. He handled one slow ball phenomenally well, hauled down a pop, and looked useful at the bat, though he didn't happen to grab a hit.

* * *

THE game was full of weird batting performances. Here is a partial list:

Though Bailey scored three runs he was only given one time at bat. Once he walked, once he sacrificed, and twice he was hit. He seemed to think that C. Brown was trying to bean him and, when for the second successive time he was beaned—that time with a terrific ball to the jaw—he tried his best to throw his bat at Brown. Fortunately, Donahue saw the motion, grabbed the bat and hostilities were called off. To return to the batting performances:

Long only made two hits—for seven bases!

Smith hit two sacrifice flies out of four attempts.

Agler got to first three times and scored every time.

Dent made two hits for three bases and scored one run.

Wares made hits his first four times up. He began with a two-bagger. Then he slumped to singles his next pair of times out. Then he hit a three-bagger. A fly to Welchonce in the eighth marred a perfect batting score.

INTERNATIONAL SAILING RACE WON BY AMERICAN

NEW YORK, July 15.—The International sailing canoe cup is to-day safe from foreign invaders for some time to come. "To have and to hold" was the watchword yesterday when Leo Friede, of the Manhattan Canoe Club, the American defender, sent his little craft skimming over the eight-mile course at Gravesend Bay and shot across the finish line two minutes and twelve seconds ahead of his Canadian rival, Ralph B. Britton, of the Ganaoque Canoe and Motor Boat Club.

FOUR CLUBS SAVED FROM WRECK OF INTERSTATE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 15.—For the present the Interstate League will continue under its present name as a four-club circuit, with Erie, Wheeling, Akron and Youngstown as its members. Players of the Steubenville, Columbus, Zanesville and Canton clubs were paid up to July 15 inclusive, and some of them were turned over to the clubs still remaining in the organization.

Sox Buy Chappell; 'Comy' Pays Big Price

CHICAGO, July 15.—Larry Chappelle, the sensational outfielder of the Milwaukee team, of the American Association, was sold to the Chicago White Sox yesterday. For him President Comiskey gave Outfielder John Beall, a catcher whose name was not made public, and a "cash consideration." Chappelle is to report at once. He has been batting around .359 and fielding with the best of them. Practically every club in the major leagues bid for him.

President Comiskey, of the Chicago Club, said that Chappelle was the highest-priced baseball player ever purchased. Beyond stating that he valued Beall at $3,000, Comiskey, however, would not give any figures.

Williams and Ledoux In Coast Go To-night

LOS ANGELES, July 15.—The twenty-round bantamweight battle at Vernon Arena to-night between Kid Williams, of Baltimore, and Charley Ledoux, of France, promises to be one of the fastest battles ever staged on the coast.

Williams and Ledoux are almost identical in measurements and fight the same style of battle. The Frenchman is in much better condition than on his previous appearance here, when Eddie Campi won a twenty-round decision over him. Williams is also in prime condition. The betting, which at first was 10 to 8 on Williams, is now even money.

MAGNATE PLANS TOUR.

SEATTLE, WASH., July 15.—Michael Fisher, a local baseball magnate, is to-day planning a South Sea Islands baseball tour, which will include three months in Australia. Fisher contemplates establishing league baseball in Australia if the sport proves popular.

WALKER VS. MILLER.

WINNIPEG, MAN., July 15.—George Walker, Canadian champion middleweight wrestler, to-day was matched to meet Walter Miller, of Duluth, American champion, before a local club on July 31.

FODDER FOR FANS

After losing ten straight games the Brooklyn Dodgers finally broke their losing streak by beating the Cubs to the tune of 9 to 2.

* * *

After winning eight games the Pirates finally went down to defeat at the hands of the Boston Braves and this despite the fact that Hans Wagner was shoved in as a pinch hitter.

* * *

This is pennant-raising day at the Polo Grounds and a big crowd of baseball moguls flocked to New York to take part or look on. Among them is Garry Herrmann, whose Cincinnati Reds play the Giants this afternoon.

* * *

Ebbets field, home of the Dodgers in Brooklyn, is to be dedicated this afternoon. The fact that it is pennant-raising day at the Polo Grounds kept some notables away from Ebbets field who otherwise would have been there. However, among those who went to Brooklyn to take part were C. W. Murphy, owner of the Cubs; President F. J. Navin, of the Tigers; President C. W. Somers, of the Cleveland Naps; President B. F. Shibe, of the Athletics, and James E. Gaffney, of the Boston Nationals.

* * *

In the game between the Phillies and the Cardinals not a Quaker was left on bases in the eight innings. It was one of the best pitched games seen in Philadelphia this year.

* * *

Lefty Leifield, once a pitcher for the Pirates and who was sold to the Cubs last fall, has been shunted to the minors. He goes to Atlanta.

* * *

Catcher Grover Land, of the Naps, has been released to the Toledo club.

* * *

The Senators had to use three pitchers to beat the Naps.

CRACKERS GET LEIFIELD; EVERS LETS CRAIG OUT

CHICAGO, July 14.—The Cub management announced that two of its players have been sent to the minor leagues. "Lefty" Leifield, the veteran southpaw pitcher, was first let out to the Atlanta team, as Manager Evers believes he has outlived his usefulness as far as the big teams are concerned.

Craig, the young collegian who joined the team a short time back, was sent to Terre Haute, Ind., for further seasoning.

LYNCH SATISFIED WITH HIS UMPIRES; NO CHANGE

NEW YORK, July 15.—There will be no change in the personnel of the National League staff of umpires this season, according to a statement issued last night by President Thomas J. Lynch. Mr. Lynch says that despite adverse criticism of umpires by several club owners, he has found the umpiring in the National League this year to have been as good as at any time in the last four years.

LAGRANGE AGAIN LEADS LEAGUE IN ATTENDANCE

LA GRANGE, GA., July 15.—Official announcement has just come from Georgia-Alabama League headquarters giving the figures on the attendance receipts at all Fourth of July games in the league. As in the case of the opening games, LaGrange leads by a large margin, and this, too, in the face of the fact that both Gadsden and Anniston are very much larger towns than LaGrange.

The receipts for the Fourth of July games were as follows: LaGrange, $382.40; Anniston, $364.35; Gadsden (morning game), $200.45; Gadsden (afternoon game), $212.30; Talladega (morning game), $198.10; Newnan (morning game), $174.20.

TRAVERS TO MAKE TRIP.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Jerome D. Travers, the national amateur golf champion, has said that he will visit England next year and attempt to annex the amateur title of the British Isles.

3 BIG EVENTS AT MOTORDROME MEET TO-NIGHT

Cracker Sweepstakes, at 7 Miles, Will Be Longest and Most Important Race of Season.

THE Cracker Sweepstakes, most important of the races scheduled for decision thus far at the local Motordrome, will be run Tuesday night. It was postponed from Friday night on account of rain.

The final in this event will be at seven miles, the longest race of the season. On account of its length this affair is likely to produce form upsets and might possibly produce some motorcycle upsets as well. A 7-mile race at 85 to 90 miles an hour on a 4-lap track is calculated to try to the utmost limits the endurance of any rider. And because a tired man is likely to wabble and because a wabble means a spill, there are fine possibilities for excitement in Tuesday night's races.

The Motordrome purse will be especially interesting because it will bring to a focus the speed rays from the three scintilating stars of the local track — McNeil, Graves and Richards. At the last meet the machines of McNeil and Graves went punk at the last minutes and Richards romped. This time they will have their machines in condition again and well tuned up. McNeil has had a run of especially hard luck this season, but he believes it has turned at last. If it has, Jock will make it exciting, for McNeil has the fastest machine at the track—when the blamed thing works.

Graves has a new Excelsior, a "boat" that has proved, at the Chicago Motordrome, that it is sensationally fast. It went bloole at the last races, but "Millionaire Morty" believe he has it tinkered up now to a point where nothing can happen to it, provided it stays on two wheels.

A third big attraction of the evening will be the 4-cornered match race. There is no telling which riders will be put in this, but Manager Prince will get his stars together for this one and give the public the greatest race possible.

First Event.

Jock McNeil, one mile against time, present world's record for quarter-mile track held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves. Time, :38 4-5.

Second Event:
Motordrome Purse.

One mile to qualify; three miles final. One to qualify in each heat and two in fastest heat.

No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 9, Harry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Third Event.

No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 7, George Renel; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Fourth Event.

No. 4, George Lockner; No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz.

Fifth Event.

Final of Motordrome Purse—Three miles.

Sixth Event:
Crackers' Sweepstakes.

Three miles to qualify and seven miles final. One to qualify in each heat and two in fastest heat.

No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Seventh Event.

No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 8, Jock McNeil.

Eighth Event.

No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Ninth Event.

Seven-mile final of the Crackers' Sweepstakes.

Tenth Event.

Four-cornered special match race to be announced later, four miles.

DALEY GOES TO PELICANS.

NASHVILLE, TENN., July 15—It was announced last night that Jud Daley, outfielder of the local team, had been loaned to the New Orleans club. Daley has been on the bench for some days in this city.

PRURITIS A SEVERE FORM OF ECZEMA

A Method of Home Treatment That Is Very Effective.

There is probably no other remedy so well known as S. S. S. for the blood. And it is remarkably effective in that form of skin disease known as pruritis, or intense itching. The action of S. S. S. is rapid. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment. And the medical elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food. These facts are brought out in a highly interesting book on skin diseases, compiled by the medical department of the Swift Specific Co., 184 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It is mailed free, together with a special letter of advice, to all who are struggling with a blood disease.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day of your druggist. It will surprise you with its wonderful action in the blood.

Don't accept something offered you as "just as good." The only reason why anyone should not try to sell you something cheaper from crude drugs. Beware of any attempt to persuade you to buy something in place of S. S. S.

Here's a Sure Cure for Health

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

BUSINESS OF CHEERING.

"I never will return again," Jack Johnson boldly said,
And brought a million blessings down upon his kinky head,
And if the smallpox had refused to greet us any more
There would be less rejoicing on this hospitable shore,
And if the bill collectors had refused to hunt us out
Our nation would be less inclined to chortle and to shout.

The report that Mr. Johnson intends to remain in France will not start any international complications—that is, unless France threatens to send him back.

It is said that Frank Chance gains five pounds every time he wins a ball game. At his present rate he may, in the course of years, become heavy enough to classify as a featherweight.

Charley Murphy may be justified in protesting against incompetent umpires, but if all the incompetents were driven from baseball, perchance a magnate or two would be looking for a new job.

Frank Chance thinks the Athletics will win, thereby demonstrating that he is not an original thinker.

Quoth a headline: "Ball Players Oppose Cut in Salary." We have always insisted that ball players greatly resemble human beings.

When Baker Borton is not traveling from the minors to the majors he is on his way back. Some day he may meet and trip himself.

The sensation of the year in the National League is the fact that the Phillies have meandered into the midst of July without having fractured a flock of legs.

SPORT.

Of all the sports I ever knew the one I love the most
Is sitting in a baseball park behind a great big post.

If baseball magnates had the interests of the public at heart (lawfter) they would build grandstands with glass posts. Or they would furnish each man who sits behind a post with an X-ray machine.

St. Louis has just discovered that there is gambling on baseball, thereby demonstrating that it has just recovered from an attack of blindness.

A chain, as a highbrow once remarked, is no stronger than its weakest link. Baseball is no better than its magnates.

When we think it over, this is an awful thing to say about baseball.

What puzzles us is that the magnates have not thought of charging extra money when there is an extra inning game.

Joe Rivers, who broke a milkman's jaw with a wallop, has learned that dientists and milkmen do not belong to the same lodge.

We note by the papers that Debs is winning in a walk. If this were to be printed around election time one would think some copy reader was trying to kid the public.

The gent who put up the kale to support the Porter races is one of our best little spendthrifts. If not, he is affected by the heat.

R. Zelder, the well known planter, announces that the harvesting of his bunion crop has been a complete success.

Mr. Zelder is said to be a clever youth, but he overlooked a golden opportunity. While he was under the anesthetic he could have had several cubic yards of nose removed.

Al Palzer and Georges Carpentier have been matched to engage in a conflict in France. And yet there are skeptics who claim that the dead never come back.

Jack Dillon has split with his manager, demonstrating that he is a bona fide pugilist. A bona-fide pugilist always splits with his manager when he starts to make any money.

Horse racing is one of the most popular of our sports. It is hard to believe otherwise when we note that they are giving away tickets.

ROUGH STUFF.

Perchance it is the lowbrow stuff in all our human blood,
But I always feel a thrill of joy intense
When a roughneck swings a hefty bat and makes a mighty thud
And the ball goes sailing over yonder fence.

Richards Wins Two Races and a Bride

Well, Tex Richards "went and done it."

Last week a story appeared that if Richards, champion motorcycle rider of Dixie, won two races at the last Drome meet he would win himself a bride.

He won both races.

But, of course, having been faked before, the public put it down as a press agent's myth.

The odd part about it is that the story was true.

It leaked out to-day that on Saturday afternoon Wilmer Richards, of Dallas, Texas, was married to Miss Tona Taylor, of Atlanta. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. A. Little at his residence, Forest avenue and Boulevard.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Johnny Kilbane has decided to don the padded mitts again. The champion signed articles yesterday to box Mat Brock in a 12-round bout at Cleveland on Labor Day. The fighters have agreed to weigh 122 pounds at 3 o'clock.

* * *

Billy Gibson, manager of the Garden A. C., New York, is trying to induce Lightweight Champion Ritchie to meet Leach Cross in a 10-round bout next month. Gibson thinks the fight would draw $35,000, of which he offers Ritchie a 50-per cent guarantee.

* * *

Charley Ledoux, the French bantamweight champion, and Kid Williams, of Baltimore, will clash in a scheduled 20-round battle at Vernon, Cal., on Tuesday night. Both boys are in splendid shape and each is confident of victory. The betting favors the Baltimore lad at odds of 2 to 1.

* * *

Willie Ritchie, Joe Rivers and Leach Cross, all of whom have been in the public eye of late, fight under assumed names. In fact, a big percentage of the more prominent scrappers use stage names in the ring.

* * *

Frankie Russell threatens to be the next ring idol with New Orleans' fighting fans. Frankie was given a knock out decision over Johnny Lore, the other night, and is now in line for a match with Charlie White, the Chicago whirlwind.

* * *

Danny Morgan, the talkative manager of Jack Britton, is hot over a match with Willie Ritchie for his protege. Morgan says he will give Ritchie a $10,000 side bet and will also get the club to stage the mill. This is a pretty strong line of chatter for even a man of Mr. Morgan's reputation.

* * *

Jack Dillon, claimant of the middleweight title, has signed articles to battle Toni Caponi in a 12-round set-to at Winnipeg on August 8. Dillon should have little trouble in defeating the Italian scrapper.

* * *

Despite his many years of service in the boxing game, Jim Flynn continues to reap in the dough. The Pueblo fireman is now billed to take on Gunboat Smith in a 10-round affair at New York the early part of next month.

* * *

When Al Palzer arrives in Paris all arrangements will be made for his scrap with the French heavyweight champion, Georges Carpentier. It is said they will get a $15,000 purse.

* * *

Friends of Ad Wolgast are begging the ex-champion to beat it to the farm and get into shape for a return engagement with Ritchie. There are still many who think that the "Michigan Wildcat" would have a great chance to regain his title if he would only get into real fighting shape.

* * *

Frankie Whitney, well known among local boxing followers, will probably make his next fight at Denver. A fight promoter in the Colorado city is after Whitney to meet Eddie Johnson in August. The pair clashed about two months ago with honors even.

* * *

Strenuous efforts are being made by Tommy Burns, ex-heavyweight champion and manager of Arthur Pelky, to arrange a match between his man and Gunboat Smith, to be fought in one of the California clubs. Burns is confident Pelky will defeat Smith if they meet.

* * *

Bud Anderson, the Oregon lightweight, will not fight for six months, according to his manager. Anderson is convalescing rapidly from his operation for appendicitis last Thursday.

INGRATITUDE.

The magnate reeled to his auto—
"Oh, take me to my yacht!"
He moaned, "My heart is broken—
And the day is very hot.
I can not join the thousands
Who watch those ingrates play.
"I hear"—a sob—"they claim I've
No right to cut their pay!"

CHAMPION RITCHIE, WE understand, is undecided whether to take a trip to Europe or engage in another bout of fisticuffs. If anyone wants to speculate against the trip to Europe we know where he can place a small sum.

* * *

A BIG LEAGUE MAGNATE IS showing evidences of the effect of the recent hot spell. He says that the chief objection to cutting ball games to catch trains is that it is "grossly unfair to the public." Sure! He really means the people who pay to see a whole ball game.

"FROM NOW ON," ANNOUNCES Johnny Dundee, "I will appear only as a lightweight." Admire his honesty in avoiding the word "fight."

JIMMY TAMSETT, SORE AT ARREST, TO QUIT DIAMOND

ALBANY, N. Y., July 15.—James L. Tamsett, manager and owner of the Albany State League Baseball Club and shortstop of the Memphis team nearly ten years ago, announces that because of the agitation against Sunday baseball and the subsequent arrest of himself and three Troy players on Sunday, June 29, he will withdraw from the game.

Manager Tamsett and the Troy men will be separately tried before Justice of the Peace Christopher Valentine, of the town of Colonie.

Hot Days Breed Lice By Millions, Keep Close Watch for Them

Cholera, a Much Dreaded Disease, Easily Stamped Out By This Method.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Judge Marshall: I have two hens that have a looseness of the bowels, and I fear it is cholera. Will you please give me a remedy and oblige.

Yours truly, J. R. C.

Conyers, Ga.

Reply: Many people want to jump at conclusions and call everything cholera that seems to trouble their chickens. This is especially true, if there is any sign of bowel trouble. While many of the ailments have no semblance of cholera, it is perhaps a good thing to get uneasy and be ready to investigate; with such a state of affairs, something is very likely to be done to better their condition. Very often, during hot weather, you will find a number of your hens stalking about the yard in a slow, listless manner, stopping to straighten their feathers and pick at themselves. You can just put it down in your notebook that they are being overrun with mites which are simply sucking their very life blood from them, which will cause them to have bowel trouble, and if the pests are not removed, it will not take very many days to see the death of many good hens. These hot days breed lice by the millions when they are allowed a start. After a few hens have died of such trouble of the bowels, caused by lice or mites, others may be affected by contagion, and real cholera is brought forth. In real cholera the fowl assumes a very tired or listful gait, similar to the one when lice is the trouble, but the discharge of the bowels is of a watery nature, green and bright yellow in color. The comb soon turns black or very dark purple; at times there is a foamy discharge from the mouth, but not always. When this is present it indicates cold in connection with the bowel trouble. When these decided symptoms of cholera are present a prompt separation should ensue, putting those showing a decided case promptly under the sod, making a place for all showing slight symptoms, to get them away from the well ones. In the drinking water for the well ones and the slightly indisposed ones, add one-fourth ounce of sulpho-carbonate of zinc to each gallon of water. Cleaning the premises is a most important item at such a time. The runs and houses should be thoroughly cleaned, scraped and swept and the droppings covered with soil. After this is done, a thorough sprinkling should be done with water into which has been stirred one pint of sulphuric acid to twenty gallons of water. The stamping out of the disease depends largely upon the thoroughness of the cleaning. Cholera is a much dreaded disease, but with prompt and vigorous methods of the right kind, it is easily stamped out. The advice for those who do not have it is to go the cleaning job, anyway, and thus prevent its appearance at all.

THEY ARE VERY SCARCE

YOU WILL find it hard to buy a desirable 50-foot building lot on the North Side for less than $2,500 or $3,000. These same lots could be bought three years ago for $700 to $1,000. This is the small investor's opportunity. Buy them partially developed, in the RIGHT SPOT, on easy terms—CHEAP, and sell the finished product.

Between the Ansley Park golf course and Piedmont avenue is the most STRATEGICALLY situated undeveloped property in Fulton County—owned by the shrewdest investors. This is the day of the SMALL INVESTOR, and they are making money fast in this section. Those who have bought in 1913 will double their money when the county finishes the roads in this neighborhood, and this is going to be done.

There is 100 per cent profit in our 60-foot lots at $10 down and $10 per month. Fifty-odd have been sold.

The Balkan Nations, Turned Butchers, Have Outraged Humanity

The Balkan races have forfeited the respect of civilization.

Saving only Greece, which holds to the elements of humanity and Christian warfare, the Balkan races within the fortnight have proven themselves to be a horde of murderous savages, of whom the arch savage and murderer is Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

There was never such a fall in history so swift, so sudden—from fame to infamy—from heroism to shame.

The world of civilization was with the Balkans in their war. It was blazoned as almost a holy war—the war of the Christian nations against the Unspeakable and Heathen Turk—the last nemesis of civilization upon centuries of butchery and cycles of barbarity.

The crimson ghosts of Albania and Zeitoun—the holocausts of Christian martyrs incinerated in Turkish fires, the battalions of Christians butchered because they were Christians, the pictures of infants bayoneted before their mothers' eyes, and mothers murdered, with outrage preceding or following fast on murder—aroused the public protest of the Christian world.

Every voice in Christendom rang for Bulgaria and the Balkans. Every civilized prayer was theirs. The Georgian helped to lead and vocalize the great procession of American sentiment that bade godspeed to the Balkan soldiers of the Cross.

And their battle was magnificently won. All records of history were equalled if not surpassed on the battlefields of this modern and magnificent crusade.

Step by step the Unspeakable Turk was driven back from his battlefields of murder. Inch by inch the Crescent yielded to the Cross.

Bulgaria swept from Adrianople to Chatalja. Greek battleships blocked the transportation of Turkish troops and provisions of war. Servia marched from her own victorious battlefields to reinforce the Bulgarians in the crisis at Adrianople and Chatalja, and with the allied legions thundering at the despairing gates of Constantinople, Southwestern Europe passed from the Crescent to Christ, and a great new nation seemed to have been born from the Slavonic races to rewrite history and to shift the balance of power from the elder monarchies to the plains of Thrace—now consecrated to liberty and humanity.

It was an epoch in human history. It was an Armageddon rich in the righteous triumph of the right above the wrong. And in its glorious aftermath the annals of the Christian races should have been remade and amplified.

But almost in a night the scene has changed. The peace of London became the proclamation of a progressive savagery. The men who endured like martyrs and fought like lions could not win like men, but quarreled like jackals over the spoils of victory.

Bulgaria, first in battle, was foremost in her greed, and her crimson hands, wet with heathen blood, and presuming on their strength, reached out to grasp the throats of Christian allies and to seize the territory that Greece and Servia had helped like heroes to achieve. Friends fastened their fangs into each other's vitals with a ferocity fiercer than they had shown their common foe.

The Balkan armies seem to have become as barbarous as the Turks.

Their hatred for the Turk was as nothing to their hatred for each other.

The hideous greed of territory blinded their eyes to every sentiment of Christianity and to every creed of Christ.

They caught from the Turk his bloodiest butcheries and branded them upon their fratricidal strife. The Bulgars at Kilkiss and Kurkut burned alive seven hundred men before their tortured wives with as fine a savagery as ever brutalized the Turk. The Serb at Belgrade shouted jeers and hisses into the dying ears of Bulgarian prisoners, brought from the battle fronts, and hand to hand with fist and foot, with tooth and nail, like primeval savages, fought Bulgar and Serb, who had carried the Cross of Christ in triumph above the infidel and Unspeakable Turk.

The Balkan fortnight behind us is an outrage upon the whole Christian world. These lapsed Christians, these transformed savages of greed, have within ten days lost the sympathy of humanity and their place among civilized nations. They have struck a staggering blow at the faith they followed and their religion and ours they have defiled.

The nations that cried godspeed to the Balkan armies of yesterday are ready now to cry, "Down with the newborn butchers of the Danube," and the world is ready to approve and applaud Austria or any other power that will repossess the territory so unworthily held and proceed to govern the people so obviously incapable and so basely unequal to the task of governing themselves.

The Metal Workers

We Live in the Age of Steel, He Says. Steel is the Synonym of Civilization and the Badge of Prosperity.

By ELBERT HUBBARD
Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

I.

WE live in the age of steel. Steel is the synonym of civilization and the badge of prosperity. When the railroads are buying steel and extending their lines, we are prosperous. The farmer builds barns, fences broad acres, puts up silos, and the young folks make homes. Iron and steel enter into every building project.

America, by reason of her enormous consumption of metals, has earned the title of "The Land of Steel." We are a nation of builders.

Progress is only possible where there is mutuality and co-operation—where we see the seeming paradox of individual liberty harnessed to the car of common weal.

To certain persons of "artistic temperament" the term "commercialism" is anathema. They see no beauty in the smokestack, the skyscraper, the huge mills, the flying locomotive.

Man at the Forge.

They perceive only the dewdrop, the lily, the clouds, the cobwebs, the moonshine. They rave about the grotesque gargoyle upon some old church-tower, but can not imagine the chimney yonder, as it gives out its incense of commerce, a monument to the industry of man.

They rhapsodize about the sunset, but fail to see the magnificence of the man at the forge—framed in glowing gold, wresting steel from stones.

And again we hear men speak of the sordidness of industrialism "The dragnet of avariciousness enmeshes us; the collections for foreign missions show a lamentable decrease, and the automobile industry is booming."

The soap-box reformer spiels of the luxuries of the rich, and draws a harrowing contrast between the Brussels carpet and the elbow cushions of these parasites and the laboring classes.

And some few, mistaking the shadow for the substance, the mirage of ease for the oasis of success, leave the beaten, upward track, and slide down the toboggan of inertia into oblivion.

The vast majority of us, though, realize that industrialism is the lifeblood of the nation; that nothing contributes more to a nation's greatness than its men and women who work; and that true progress is the natural resultant of a people bound together with the sympathy and mutuality incidental thereto.

We are moving onward. Sometimes we whirl like a dervish, remaining almost stationery; at others we outdo the "Limited." We are now alive to the necessity for a sound mind and a healthy body. And we also realize that a healthy body is conducive to intelligent thinking and wise decision.

Mammoth Industries.

Business development is possible only through continuous, concentrated effort and conscientious, painstaking labor. We have countless examples of that truth in the annals of our country's achievements.

Mammoth industries have evolved from small beginnings by the application of those vital principles. Labor has until recently been wholly associated with the pick and shovel, the ax and saw. It is now, however, pretty generally recognized that both bodily and mental sweat is necessary to the successful issue of business enterprise.

"From every man according to his ability, to every man according to his need." One may be a hewer of wood or a drawer of water; another a captain of industry. One may be a toiler in the valley, and still another in the observatory on the mountaintop, reading the signs of the times. Yet what matters it, if they are all co-operating?

The manufacturer needs the miner, the miner the manufacturer. They both need the farmer, and he needs them both.

Brain? Yes. Brawn? Yes. But brawn and brain is the combination. Together they can move the mountains, link countries together, or slice a continent in half. By their exercise we reach up into the clouds and bind the lightning to our chariot wheels or utilize its power in manufacture.

We annihilate space by wireless telegraphy, we spurn the earth with our aeroplanes. We dig and burrow, pump and mine; we tap Nature's stores, and put harness on her forces.

We plow, we plant, and reap; we drain, and irrigate. We make gardens of waste places, and the desert to blossom like the rose.

When trials come, we meet them with manliness.

When difficulties arise, we seek their solution. We are becoming more self-reliant and confident every day. Superstittion and the shackles of the unknown fetter us no longer. We are gods in embryo. We have no limitation but ourselves.

Iron is the most abundant and useful of all metals, and has been known from the remotest time.

The ancient Egyptians were familiar with the process of working iron and undoubtedly knew how to make steel.

Iron in Ancient Days.

Tools found in their temples were made of this metal, and if the British Museum is to be seen an ax-head from the pyramid of Gizeh dating B. C. 4000.

The Assyrians and Babylonians were also skilful workers in iron. The Greeks obtained their knowledge of iron-working from these older nations. The Romans learned the art from the Greeks, and developed it in England, where it had been in operation since B. C. 55.

Other European nations were also workers of iron at an early date, using rude forges and crude methods.

For several centuries progress was slow, and the manufacture of iron or steel was not considered of sufficient importance to be called an industry.

Not until 1350, when the manufacture of cast iron and steel was inaugurated in Germany, did the industry assume any importance.

The fuel used for the smelting of the ore was charcoal. In 1558, the British Parliament (with the prescience which is a permanent characteristic of that august body) passed laws restricting the building of ironworks in some parts of the country, and forbidding the cutting down of trees for fuel. This cutting down of supplies led to the search for a substitute for charcoal for fuel, and in 1619 a man by the name of Dudley used coal for the purpose of smelting. The plan was not received with favor and fell into disuse.

HIS CAREER

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

JOHN SMITH was a baby so cunning and bright
That his parents stood gaping from morning till night,
When crowing and chuckling, as most babies will,
He was thought to possess a comedian's skill.
When quiet and weary, perhaps half asleep,
"My word," said his parents, "that baby is deep!
We'll make him a teacher,
The dear little joker,
Or maybe a preacher
Or lawyer or broker."

John Smith went through college ahead of his friends,
And started with fervor to rough-hew his ends.
His efforts, however, all seemed to fall flat,
For he fizzled at this and he foozled at that.
He was kicked out so often by taskmasters mean
That he looked like the film in a picture machine.
Some people are teachers
And doctors and lawyers
And brokers and preachers
That ought to be sawyers.

MURDER PLOT LAID TO WIDOW AND BARBER

SEEK MAN IN CRAWFORD MYSTERY

Heirs of Capitalist Accuse Friend of Widow of Aiding in Poison Plan.

Declaring that Joshua B. Crawford was the victim of a murder plot between Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford and Fred Lumb, a New York barber, J. S. James, attorney for the heirs-at-law to the $250,000 estate, announced Tuesday afternoon that he would swear out a warrant for Lumb's arrest on the charge of murder and have him brought back to Atlanta for prosecution.

"Lumb and Mrs. Crawford planned this whole thing in Florida," said James. "They planned to turn the estate into cash and get away. Lumb visited Mrs. Crawford in Atlanta before her husband died. He was here when he died, and remained in the city until two months after the funeral. We have evidence that will convince any fair-minded jury this pair plotted to murder the old man, and we will produce it at the proper time.

"I will swear out a warrant for the arrest of Lumb on a charge of murder this afternoon. If he remains in America we will bring him to Atlanta to prosecute him."

"I would cut my throat from ear to ear before I would degrade myself by marrying this woman," is a remark made in reference to Mrs. Crawbord by Joshua B. Crawford before their marriage, accoding to the testimony of Mrs. L. C. Dillingsly Tuesday afternoon in the civil hearing of the $250,000 will case.

Mrs. Dillingsly was one of the witnesses called to establish the contention of the other heirs that the marriage was forced upon Crawford, and that he was not in his right mind when the ceremony was performed.

By another witness it was sought to prove that Crawford at this time was almost constantly intoxicated, and to set up the probability that he was in this condition when he entered into marriage.

Mrs. Dillingsly lived at the Crawford residence on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death. She recited a number of conversations she said she had with him, and asserted that Mrs. Crawford at one time attempted to choke a Miss Scott, the sister of the witness.

She said that on two different occasions her sister was awakened in the night by smothering sensations as though something had been placed over her face, and that each time she saw Mrs. Crawford returning to her bed.

Ordeal Fails to Shake Mrs. Crawford's Poise.

By EVELYN WREN.

With superb poise Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford surrendered Sunday morning and took up her abode in Fulton County jail. Monday at 12:45, with the same self-possession, she signed the bonds which released her from imprisonment.

This horrible nightmare of accusation has brought more suffering than the humiliation of the few hours' imprisonment. The Tower was a quiet, restful spot and not uncomfortable, but the thoughts which accompany her night and day are almost unendurable. She has had to meet the accusation of the most dastardly crime of which a woman could be capable—that of committing a husband's murder by the very method which won his love and admiration.

Mrs. Crawford sat in the Tower cell waiting for the deputy, J. P. Miner, to bring the word which meant that she could go with her son-in-law, J. Lee Bennett, back to the cottage where Sallie May, her daughter, and the three grandchildren anxiously awaited her.

"Everyone has been so kind to me here," she said. "They have tried to

Asks Divorce From Man She Says Has Two Other Wives

That she married a man and lived with him for almost a year, then learned he had two other wives living and had just buried a third, is the experience recounted by Mrs. I. L. Davis, formerly Miss Grace Bradshaw, of Atlanta, in a petition for divorce filed in Superior Court Tuesday morning. The husband resides at No. 607 Marietta street.

Mrs. Davis asserts she was married to I. L. Davis in Atlanta in November, 1912, and left him in January, 1913, when she learned of his previous marriages. She says he has not been divorced from either of his other living wives.

In June, 1907, she says Davis married Miss Evie Whitten in Atlanta, using the name of Ivory York. In October, 1910, she claims, he married Miss Martha Mahatney in Knoxville, Tenn. His first wife, who is dead, was from South Carolina.

AFFIDAVIT OF MINCEY IS UPHELD

Factory Watchman Recalls Visit to Plant of Man Who Heard Conley Confess

Further corroboration of several of the important details in the remarkable affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance agent and teacher, who swore he heard Jim Conley confess killing a girl, came Tuesday in a statement by E. F. Holloway, day watchman at the National Pencil Factory.

Holloway substantiated in every particular the story of Mincey's visit to the factory the Tuesday following the crime and recalled the general trend of the conversation, which was practically as Mincey related it in his signed statement published exclusively in The Georgian Monday. The defense has obtained an affidavit from Holloway as to the circumstances of the day.

"I remember Mincey coming here Tuesday," said Holloway. "He was a quiet, retiring fellow, and I guess we scared him out. There were a lot of people in the factory, and the excitement after the murder was at its height. Several detectives were there and there were a score of people bothering the detectives and the factory authorities with their theories on the killing.

Wanted Negroes Arrested.

"This man Mincey came up to me and said he wanted to see Mr. Frank. I told him Mr. Frank was not there, but that I could take care of him. He asked me how many negroes worked in the factory, as I recall it, and I told him seven or eight.

"'You'd better have everyone of them arrested,' he replied. 'I know the one that did it.'

"But there weren't any negroes working in the factory Saturday except the night watchman,' I told him, and I said that I didn't see any negroes at all when I left at 11:45 on account of the holiday. I got a little sore at him because he kept pestering me about the negroes, and I guess he got mad because I wouldn't pay any attention to him.

"Finally, Herbert Schiff or somebody else turned to the crowd and told them they all would have to leave the building, as it wasn't possible to make any progress in the investigation with them scattered all over every floor and in the basement. This man Mincey went out with them, and that was the last I thought about his story until the day I found Jim Conley washing his shirt in the factory, something he never did before, so far as I know.

Told of Seeing Conley.

"After this Conley was arrested and I was pretty positive that he killed the girl, although I didn't have any means of knowing that he even was in the factory until he confessed it of his own accord after he denied it half a dozen times. Then I told some of the people connected with the factory about Mincey, and when I saw him next he told all about the reasons that he felt positive it was Conley.

"He said that he had met Conley the afternoon that Mary Phagan was murdered and that Conley had boasted that he had killed a girl. Mincey said he met him somewhere over near where Conley lived. I don't know whether it was at Electric and Carter streets or not. He said he didn't think much of it at the time, as he had supposed that Conley in his drunken stupor was merely bragging about his part in some negro row. He told me that Conley had threatened him, saying:

"'I killed a girl already to-day; I don't want to kill nobody else.'

"After this I guess they got his affidavit."

BOY KILLED BY KICK OF HORSE

Children Victims in Accidents in Different Parts of City at Nearly Same Hour.

A 9-year-old boy was killed outright and a 5-year-old boy received a fractured skull which probably will prove fatal, by being kicked by a horse and a mule Tuesday afternoon. The two accidents occurred in different parts of the city less than half an hour apart.

Robert Stewart, the boy who was killed, was the son of Mrs. Belle Stewart, of 63 Ella street. He was riding a horse and as he turned the corner of Wells and Stewart streets the animal became frightened and threw him.

The boy fell directly in frbnt of the frightened horse and the animal whirled and kicked him in the head, killing him instantly.

Jeffe Barryhill, 5 years old, was kicked in the head by a mule belonging to his father while playing in the front yard of his home at 808 Marietta street.

The child was sitting in the grass, playing with his toys, and the mule was wandering around eating grass. The animal came close to the boy, and the child reached out and placed his hand on the hind leg of the mule.

The animal kicked, one of his hoofs striking the child just above the left eye, causing a fracture of the skull.

The Barryhill boy was hurried to Grady Hospital, where surgeons say there is little hope for his life.

LONDON, July 15.—Miss Inez Millholland, the New York suffragist, was married to-day in London to Eugene Boissevain, a wealthy Dutchman whose home is in Amsterdam.

Miss Milholland is the daughter of John Millholland, a wealthy New York lawyer, and is herself a practicing lawyer with offices in the financial district of New York. She has been prominent in woman's suffrage work since her graduation from Vassar.

Cobb Suspended for Tilt With Umpire

DETROIT, MICH., July 14.—Ty Cobb was this morning suspended indefinitely by President Ban Johnson, of the American League, for language used to George Hildebrand during yesterday's Detroit-Philadelphia game.

In the ninth inning yesterday Ty went after a low line drive hit by Baker to right centerfield and claimed he made a shoestring catch, but Hildebrand ruled that Cobb "trapped" the ball. A wrangle followed and Cobb was ordered from the grounds.

Leifield Refuses To Join Crackers

CHICAGO, July 15.—Lefty Leifield, Cub pitcher traded to Atlanta, has refused to report to the Southern city, according to reports here. Lefty is said to have told President Murphy, of the Cubs, that he would not report as directed and that he would quit baseball rather than join a club with which he did not care to play.

Rutledge Man Hurt In Fall in Lift Shaft

W. D. Parker, of Rutledge, Ga., fell through the elevator shaft of the building of the Ward-Truitt Dry Goods Company, at Madison avenue and Hunter street, Tuesday afternoon, and was seriouly injured.

Mr. Rutledge fell one floor to the basement. When he was picked up a minute later, he was unconscious. He was taken to the Grady Hospital.

Employees of the firm declare that Rutledge, who is a bit nearsighted, mistook the opening of the elevator shaft for a doorway and stepped into the shaft.

Motordrome Races Off Till To-morrow

The Motordrome races, set for decision to-night, have been postponed until to-morrow night.

At that time teh same program will be run.

The heavy rains of the afternoon wet up the track to such a condition of saturation that racing was impossible, and it was at the request of the riders that the meet was put off until to-morrow.

PRICE EASY FOR BILL BATTERS

Crackers and Billikens Clash in Second Game of Series at Poncy Park.

PONCE DE LEON PARK, July 15.—Gil Price opposed Elmer Brown on the mound here this afternoon in the second game of the series between the Crackers and the Billikens. The game was late in starting on account of the heavy shower.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Bisland and Agler did all that was necessary with Walker's daisy-cutter. Wares died an easy death, Manush to Agler. Elwert drew a free passage to first. Breen grounded to Bisland, who stepped on second, forcing Elwert. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Long took three husky swing, but failed to connect. Welchonce was turned back over the Knaupp-Snedecor route. Alperman was winged by a pitched ball and limped to first. Manush grounded to Knaupp, who made a wide throw to Snedecor, and on the error all hands were safe. Bisland rolled one to Knaupp, who relayed the pill to Wares, forcing Manush at the midway. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Jantzen drew four wide ones and strolled to Station One. Knaupp grounded to Price, who heaved to Bisland, forcing Jantzen at the keystone. Knaupp was killed off on his attempted pilfer trip, Dunn to Alperman. Snedecor leaned against a curve for a one-timer to center. Gribbens sent a fly to right that would have been an out had not Long slipped, letting the ball fall for a single, Snedecor going to third. E. Brown was thrown out by Alperman. TWO HITS, NO RUNS.

With three and two on him, Agler fouled to Elwert. Bailey was patient and was rewarded with a base on balls. Dunn whiffed on three pitched balls. Price lofted a foul to Elwert. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

Walker laced a pretty single to center. Wares worked Price for a walking ticket. Elwert beat out a bunt down the third base line and the bases were intoxicated. Breen was kind enough to fan. Jantzen was uncouth enough to bang a single to right that scored Walker and Wares. Knaupp tripled to the scoreboard, Elwert and Jantzen cashing. Snedecor singled to right, scoring Knaupp. Gribbens' liner caroomed off Price's glove to Manush, who tossed to Agler in time, Snedecor going to second. Agler played a lone hand with Brown's grasser. FIVE HITS, FIVE RUNS.

Long raised to Wares. Welchonce lined to Jantzen in far away left. Alperman popped to Wares. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING.

Bisland booted Walker's easy roller and on the error the batter anchored safely at first. Wares smashed a peachy two-bagger to left and Walker eased himself over to the difficult cushion. Elwert dropped a single into the center garden, Walker and Wares denting the dish with tallies. Breen sent a baloooner to Long. On a short passed ball Elwert tries to move up to second, but Dunn's chuck to Alperman turned him back. Jantzen took the easy road to first. Jantzen stole second added and abetted by a low throw to first. Knaupp was a whiff victom. TWO HITS, TWO RUNS.

Manush pasted a single to right. Knaupp tossed out Bisland, Manush trotting over to station 2. Agler rolled to Knaupp, who got the ball to Snedecor in plenty of time, Manush ambling to third. Bailey popped to Knaupp. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

FIFTH INNING.

Bailey was under Snedecor's skyhigh soarer. Bailey also pulled down Gribbens' offering. E. Brown perished, Price to Agler, on a weak tap. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

hit into a double play that costtinnu

Dunn waited out four bad ones. Price hit into a double play that cost Dunn's life as well as Gil's own, Wares to Knaupp to Snedecor. Long was thrown out by Wares. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

SIXTH INNING.

Walker took the count on strikes. Wares hoisted high to Welchonce. Elwert beat out a puzzling roller to Bisland for a hit. Breen hit to Manush, who gave the ball to Alperman, forcing Elwert at second. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

Welchonce strolled on four crazy chucks. Alperman hit into a double play, Knaupp to Wares to Snedecor. Manush was pie for Knaupp and Snedecor. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

SEVENTH INNING.

Jantzen's boost was a cinch for Long. Bisland played ping pong with Knaupp's grounder and the batter anchored on first. Long pulled down Snedecor's offering, Knaupp stole second. Gribbens went back to work when Bisland tossed [illegible]ounder to Agler. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

[illegible]s and Snedecor made easy work with Bisland's grounder. Agler boosted to Jantzen. Bailey died, Knaupp to Snedecor. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

EIGHTH INNING.

As a pitcher Brown is some hitter; he singled to center. Walker did the Casey act. Wares hit high in front of the plate and Dunn smothered the ball. Elwert flied to Manush. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

CRAWFORD HEIRS SEEK MISSING WITNESS

New York Scoured For Barber, Said to Have Heard Death Threats.

make it seem better and to make me comfortable."

Gives Home Touch to Cell.

She was composed, without a trace of brazenness in her attitude. It was that of a kind, gentle, motherly woman—all woman—who had been thrust by circumstances into unusual surroundings. Her gratitude for the simple courtesies of the jailers showed the sympathetic nature with which she had always met the world.

A love story number of a familiar woman's magazine and current numbers of other housekeeping periodicals lay on the bed beside her. These and the big bunch of flowers broke the austerity of the prison room and gave it even the homelike touch which some women can bestow upon the most sordid quarters.

The magazines and flowers had helped the brave woman to endure the weary hours. She glanced toward the bed and smiled.

"Those magazines were brought in to me and I read several of the stories last night," said she. "Then I grew sleepy and dropped off for a good night's rest."

Looks Worn and Pale.

Mrs. Crawford looked a trifle worn and pale as the result of her first jail experience. She had eaten, though, and enjoyed a good dinner on Sunday. Sallie May, her daughter, had brought it—and Sallie May is her mother's imitator in culinary fields. She had had breakfast this morning, but had had little else to employ her time save to sit and think and wonder why and how people could be so cruel.

"I did not dream that there could be such cruelty in human nature. I never dreamed that animosity could carry them to such a length," said Mrs. Crawford, almost losing the control which she had evidenced. When the sobs were near, she stopped talking until she could recover her poise. There was no attempt to secure sympathy by complaint or by the little tricks known to most women.

Her face lighted up when we discussed cooking.

"I am a fine cook," she said. "No one can beat me at that, if I do say it. I like to cook, and folks always like my cooking."

Mrs. Crawford was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine and it was there that Joshua B. Crawford came in search of health and good care.

Does Not Rail at Heirs.

"It was my business and to my interest to make the hotel pay," she said. "I felt that the meals must be good in order to keep patronage. Somehow I could not get others to do it as I wanted it, so I did nearly every bit of the cooking myself. It tasted better."

"No, I just can't believe it," she said, as we turned from the interesting cooking discussion. "You see, I settled the estate with the Crawford heirs shortly after Mr. Crawford's death and they signed the agreement. They seemed perfectly satisfied. Now, they say that even four years ago they believed me guilty of this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford speaks of the charge of Joshua Crawford's nieces and nephews as a strange exhibition of cruelty and regards the matter as one mete for her sympathy. She does not give way to self-pity nor does she rail against the injustice of their acts. Rather does she accept the hideous nightmare as the result of peculiar, unfamiliar traits which she has never herself experienced.

She seems dazed and in a dream. "I just can't believe it. I can't realize it at all."

Never Loses Her Poise.

In this attitude she was led to the iron gates Sunday morning, heard the signal, waited and watched for the deputy to bring his jangling keys and slowly open the gates. She had heard the gate shut behind her and had gone through a second one.

Then entering the large, loitering elevator she had gone slowly up and up until she reached the floor of her prison room. Her room was the symbol of all the animosity, all the cruelty which she had known at the hands of the Crawfords.

The gates swung the same way Monday morning at the Tower, but the calm woman in black emerged from the austerity of captivity and saw the sunlight of high noon. She smiled and thanked every one who had been kind to her, delaying her departure to plan for the disposal of her big bunch of posies. Mary Belle Crawford left the Tower as she came—thoroughly poised and superbly womanly.

WAGON TOPS, AS BOATS, FERRY BATTALION

Four Companies of Seventeenth Infantry Work Out New Way to Cross Stream.

A new method of crossing streams under actual conditions of warfare—the utilizing of the tops of the army wagons as boats—was worked out by a battalion of the Seventeenth Infantry, Companies L, I, K and M, at Lakewood Tuesday morning, under the personal supervision of General Evans, commander of the Department of the Gulf. Captain O. J. Charles commanded the battalion.

The test showed that a battalion of four companies and their full equipment can be transferred across a river 100 yards wide in from four to six hours' less time than is required under the old methods of building pontoon bridges or of cutting timber and making rafts.

Fourteen in One Top.

The troops approached the stream with their full war equipment. The tops of the army wagons were removed from the running gears and canvas was fastened on them to keep them from sinking.

Companies L and I crossed first, 32 men making the trip in two wagon tops fastened together. Their combined weight was estimated at 5,000 pounds. The first crossing was commanded by Captain Charles and Captain Beck.

Had Full Equipment.

Fourteen men were transferred across the stream in one wagon top, a combined weight of 2,100 pounds, under the command of Captain Carter, and Captain Young took the full equipment of the battalion across in one wagon box. The mules swam the creek.

General Evans and the other army officers expressed their satisfaction at the successful working out of the scheme, which has never before been tried in the army. Another battalion probably will be brought to Lakewood within a few days, and the experiment tried again.

GEORGIA SOLON PUT ON LOBBY BLACKLIST

Mulhall Includes W. G. Brantley's Name on List He Was Ordered to Fight.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The political success of the National Association of Manufacturers in 1907 caused it to decide to play a part in the selection of a President the following year, according to a letter written by Fred C. Schwedtman, secretary of the late President James W. Van Cleave to Colonel M. M. Mulhall. The letter was read before the Overman lobby inquiry committee to-day.

In other letters read into the record to-day it was indicated that Colonel Mulhall, as agent of the N. A. M., had close political relations with Governor Haines, of Maine; Representatives Bartholdt and Cowdrey, of Missouri, and that the association was instrumental in defeating Tom L. Johnson for re-election as Mayor of Cleveland.

Broke Strike With Money.

Mulhall also described how he, by the use of money, broke a strike of 23,000 shoemakers in St. Louis in 1907. The committee made slow progress to-day, reading less than 200 letters. More than a thousand have been introduced in all.

Secretary Schwedtman in a letter to Mulhall in 1907 referred with great satisfaction to the lengthy reference to the then Secretary of War Taft made to the activities and purposes of the N. A. M. in a speech at Columbus, Ohio.

Repeats Gompers' Bribe Story.

Mulhall to-day repeated his charge that Atherton Brownell, of New York, who was in charge of the publicity bureau of the national association, attempted to bribe Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, but he was not given an opportunity to explain his assertion.

The committee read into the records a memorandum which was presumed to be a list of blacklisted congressmen. Mulhall's memory was bad when questioned about it and he did not remember its purpose. The memorandum appeared to be addressed to Representative James Watson. It read:

Watson—Here's a list for you to knock out:

Candler, Mississippi; Hamlin, Missouri; Danforth, New York; Payne, New York; Lever, South Carolina; Graham, Illinois; Lobeck, Nebraska; elBall, Texas; John H. Stevens, Texas; C. C. Bowman, Pennsylvania; Lloyd, Missouri; Clark, Missouri; Humphreys, Mississippi; Carter, Oklahoma; W. G. Brantley, Georgia; Hull, Tennessee; Bulkely, Ohio; Burgess, Texas; Towner, Iowa; Focht, Pennsylvania; Gardner; Massachusetts; Henry George, Jr., New York; R. L. Henry, Texas; Hinds, Maine; Lindbergh, Minnesota; R. R. Rees, Kansas; T. L. Reilly, Connecticut; Foster, Virginia. Members in town up to this time, November 25.

The memorandum was dated November 25, 1907.

Would Save Bryan From Lecture Work

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Senator Bristow of Kansas to-day introduced a resolution requiring the President to advise the Senate at his earliest opportunity what salary would be sufficient for a Secretary of State to maintain his establishment in Washington without recourse to the lecture platform.

The resolution followed Secretary Bryan's statement that he can not live on his salary.

'Jap Exterminator' Tries to See Wilson

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Gus Bess, an inventor, visited the White House to-day with a model of his latest flying machine wrapped in a piece of oil cloth. He demanded to see the President because he has "a machine which will wipe out all the Japanese and make the United States the first nation in the world."

Bess was informed that the President was "out."

WOODWARD AIDS CHIEF IN VICE CRUSADE

Mayor Gives Report of Negro Dive Near Which Policemen Have Been Seen.

Mayor Woodward entered the fight which Chief Beavers is waging against vice in Atlanta Tuesday when he told of a negro dive and blind tiger which he said had been reported to him Tuesday morning by a man whose name he refuses to make public.

This man, Mayor Woodward declared, had told him he had seen policemen passing through an alley in the direction of the blind tiger, though none of them had actually been seen to enter the place.

Chief Beavers ordered an investigation.

Captain Poole has been given particular instructions to probe the report that policemen visit the place.

Declaring that 50 per cent of the women arrested during the months of June and July were young girls, Mrs. Mary Bohnefeld, police matron, Tuesday afternoon placed the blame for present conditions on the immodest dress now worn by women, and also on the paint and powder demanded by the dictates of fashion.

"The dress that women are wearing nowadays," she declared, "is a crime, and is the cause of the downfall of so many young girls. Men are encouraged to make advances when they see a girl on the streets, wearing immodest and indecent clothing and with her face painted and powdered."

Orders closing two boarding houses were issued from headquarters this morning. Mrs. Lulu Bell, whose hotel at Fair and Peters streets was raided last week, resulting in the arrest of half a dozen persons and the telling of a white slave story by Effie Drummond, was ordered to vacate the place and close it up.

The negro joint at 76 Chestnut street, which was raided by the police Sunday morning, was also ordered closed by Chief Beavers Tuesday. Several white men were arrested when this raid was made, and evidence has been obtained that the place was one of the most vicious in the city.

Man Who Found Body Of Mack Spain Held

WAYCROSS, July 15.—More arrests in the mysterious robbery and murder of Mack Spain, the wealthy bachelor farmer whose body was found yesterday in a pond near his home, are expected to-day. Tom Bullard, aged 22, who found the murdered man's body, has been arrested on suspicion. It is reported remarks made by him caused officers to believe he knew something of the murder.

Efforts to locate relatives of the murdered man have failed. The body will be buried near his farm.

Slow Phone Service Lets Burglar Escape

Delay in making telephone connections allowed a man who attempted to rob the Sharp Drug Store at Marietta and Walton Streets to escape, Tuesday morning about 2 o'clock. The watchman of the Cathcart Storage Company, across the street, saw the burglar, and tried to telephone the police.

Before he could get a connection with headquarters the burglar left the place. No trace of him could be found when Policemen Anderson and Watson arrived.

Boy, 10, Leads Flight From Reformatory

MACON, July 15.—Led by Marvin Williford, the 10-year-old boy who has three times run away from the Georgia Industrial Home, four boys, all inmates of the institution, escaped Sunday afternoon. When arrested 24 hours later they were in an empty freight car, bound for Fitzgerald, the former home town of their leader.

Marvin Williford is the boy about whose recent whipping by Overseer W. F. Armor such a stir was raised.

BUTTON BEAUTY RACE STARTED WITH RUSH

Atlanta Seeks Prettier Girl Than Texas Belle, Chosen 'Goddess of Plenty.'

Atlanta's "button beauty" contest has caused the question to arise: Texas girl selected to represent the

"Will the Atlanta beauty eclipse the 'Goddess of Plenty' on one of the new bills to be turned out by Uncle Sam?"

This young woman, Miss Ellen Evelyn James, of San Antonio, Tex., has attracted widespread attention by her fair face. She so appealed to Kenyon Cox, the artist who designed the new bill, that he said she must represent the 'Goddess of Plenty.'

Has Atlanta Prettier Girl?

Look at the face and see if you think Atlanta can furnish a prettier girl to adorn the "500,000 club" buttons?

The pretty girl contest has started with a grand rush. A number of Atlanta's most famous beauties are in at the start, and others, not so well known but exceedingly attractive, promise to make strong races.

Leading spirits in the "500,000 club" movement declare that no greater honor could be paid an Atlanta girl than to have her picture on the buttons of the people who are to boost Atlanta's population to 500,000 by 1920.

The accompanying coupons show how to enter candidates.

Windsor Tells City's Needs.

James P. Windsor, assistant cashier of the American National Bank, has written an interesting letter to The Georgian acknowledging receipt of the $25 prize for the best slogan. He commends The Georgian for its policy toward a half-million city and proceeds to give his ideas of what is needed.

The gist of his letter is an appeal for more parks and means of better recreation for the masses of the people, and a condemnation of strict enforcement of "blue laws." Here is his letter:

Praises Pretty Atlanta Girls.

To the Editor of The Georgian:

I acknowledge, with thanks, receipt of your check for $25, the prize awarded in the Georgian's interesting slogan contest.

Evidently the distinguished judges were also of the opinion that a successful slogan should be symbolic of Atlanta's beautiful women. For, while a salubrious climate, a desirable location, and influential newspapers have played an important part in the city's marvelous growth, the real answer to, "Why is Atlanta?" is her many beautiful women. It is they who inspire the wonderful Atlanta spirit, influence the casual visitor to locate here permanently; and when one's poor judgment takes him to other climes, it is the remembrance of them that brings him back home.

But the main object of our "500,000 Club" is to exert every effort to increase our population to the desired number within the next few years. This can and will be done when our civic bodies realize the fact that Atlanta is now lagging behind other cities in some respects, especially that of park improvements.

Solution of Vice Problems.

The solution of all vice problems, as well as those of crime, and the surest way to attract newcomers to any city, is to provide adequate facilities for recreation and amusement.

In other words there should be sincerity in our "boosting." So the question arises, is it really great to live in Atlanta?

To the capitalist, with his numerous facilities for pleasure, such as clubs, autos, commodious home, and the means to take frequent vacation trips to other cities and resorts, Atlanta, with its unequalled climate, is really a great place in which to live.

But to the average citizen—the man of limited means, such as the laboring man, the small salaried man or the young man just going into business, who must economize by force of circumstances—Atlanta offers few attractions or places of amusement at a moderate price, and to him it is a veritable workshop.

Atlanta is one of the few large cities without a down-town public park or breathing place. This feature should be provided in the plaza plan of bridging over the railroad tracks which now penetrate the heart of the city. At least $1,000,000 should be expended in beautifying our present parks, and sufficient funds should be appropriated annually to furnish high class music in at least two of them every night during the summer months.

Urges Park Improvements.

Piedmont is now but a desert of possibilities, while nature and the liberality of one individual has given us Grant Park. Permanent buildings, and grounds suitable for exposition or fair purposes, including a mile-race track where high class harness races might be conducted in connection with the fairs, should be included in Lakewood's improvements.

These, and many other things which may seem extravagant to some, must be accomplished in order to get the 500,000 by 1920.

Los Angeles is now increasing her population at the rate of 75,000 per year. But Los Angeles is expending $50,000,000 on a water supply, and over $20,000,000 on street and public road improvements. It is time Atlanta was doing something big, instead of wrangling over the individual conduct of a few alleged "business men." The continual magnifying of vice conditions, and the too strict enforcement of blue laws, is not compatible with progress, and is doing the city an injury. I would remind some of our over-zealous reformers that there is danger in bringing to our homes too much of the sordid things in life, for—

"Vice is a monster of so frightful mein,
That to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

I am, sir,
JAMES P. WINDSOR.
Atlanta, Ga., July 14, 1913.

Fight Over Painter's Viscera Is Resumed

BALTIMORE, MD., July 15.—The legal battle for the viscera of E. O. Painter, the dead Jacksonville fertilizer man, was resumed before Judge Duffy in the Circuit Court to-day. The session, which was taken up by the examination of Dr. Charles Glaser, who made the analysis of the Painter organs, was adjourned at 2 o'clock. The case will be reopened Thursday morning.

Dr. Glaser reiterated his previous statement that there was no poison found in Painter's vital organs. He said the viscera is still in a condition to permit another analysis.

Mystery in Suicide Attempt at Biloxi

MOBILE, July 15.—Mrs. Anna Alvis, 18 years old, formerly Miss Casper, of Baltimore, where she has relatives, attempted suicide at Biloxi, Miss., near here, last night, by taking carbolic acid. Several doctors worked with her all night, but she is expected to die. Why she took the poison is a mystery.

Mrs. Alvis came to Mobile from Baltimore seven months ago and later went to Biloxi.

MRS. HARRIMAN AVERTS GREAT RAIL STRIKE

Social Leader Makes President's Arbitration Offer to Managers and Trainmen Possible.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The Newlands-Clayton bill, providing for the arbitration of the threatened strike of 100,000 railway employees passed the Senate at 3:15 p. m, without a dissenting vote. The measure will go to the President for his signature and the bill will become law before the day is over.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—That the honor of averting the railroad strike which threatened to tie up the commerce of the entire eastern part of the United States belongs to Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, New York society leader and niece of E. H. Harriman, late railroad king, was admitted at the White House to-day.

Mrs. Harriman, the only woman ever appointed a member of the industrial commission, heard rumors of a strike about two months ago in New York before the trouble found its way into print.

Put Matter Before Wilson.

Mrs. Harriman came at once to the President and placed the matter before him, laying emphasis on the fact that the strike would tie up Eastern commerce and might seriously damage the record of the Democratic administration.

She also suggested that the President call a conference between the railroad leaders and the representatives of the employees. This it was thought not wise to do because of the danger of charges of "undue White House influence."

Suggest Plan That Wins.

Mrs. Harriman then asked if the President would be willing to supervise the conference if she could engineer it through the Civic Federation.

This President Wilson agreed to do and when the strike was about to be called he presided over the conference and induced both sides to arbitrate.

Whaddya Mean, They Got Enough?

WAYCROSS, July 15.—Trying to eat two gallons of ice cream at one time, H. Friedman and two young sons this morning became seriously ill.

The father is reported as telling his boys that for once in their lives they were going to have enough ice cream.

VETERANS' PLEA SENDS SLATON TO REUNION

Governor Unable to Resist Virtual Demand of Old Soldiers to Visit Brunswick.

Governor Slaton will leave for Brunswick again Wednesday night to attend the State reunion of Confederate veterans. Despite the fact that he spent Saturday and Sunday in Brunswick and had no intention of returning there for some time, he found it impossible to withstand the oratory of the grizzled warriors, who virtually demanded that he attend their gathering.

"It's good and proper for you to come here and inspect the State's soldiers," the veterans said. "They are a fine lot of fellows and would show up well if circumstances demanded a display of their bravery. But what about the men who have bared their breasts to the enemy's bullets in defense of the State?

"Our number is dwindling rapidly. The half century swinging of the scythe of time has taken many of us to the world beyond. It is but meet and proper, we might say mandatory, that the Governor of the State meet with us at our reunions."

Such a plea as this the Governor declared he could not resist.

LEGISLATORS IN RUSH TO AVOID EXTRA CALL

Governor Likely to Reconvene Assembly if Tax Reforms Are Not Made This Session.

Unless the Legislature, during its present session, enacts such tax reforms as the Governor thinks essential to the welfare and prosperity of the State, it is more than likely that it will be called immediately in extraordinary session, for the sole purpose of effecting those reforms.

The Governor himself has not uttered the threat of an extraordinary session, but some gentlemen close to him, and, in a way, authorized to speak for him, have let it be known that the possibility of an extra session has crossed the Executive mind more than once of late, and that failure upon the part of the Legislature to enact the tax reform the Governor holds absolutely necessary at this time more than likely will impel the Governor to the heroic remedy of an extra session.

Feverishly Active Now.

That these semi-authoritative rumors and hints have had their effect upon the General Assembly, is abundantly evidenced in the feverish activity lately manifested in some of the House committees.

House bill No. 1, by Mr. Cole, of Bartow, for instance, has been reported at last out of the Ways and Means Committee, and will go to the House at once with a favorable recommendation.

This first revenue measure introduced must be followed by many others, if the Slaton program of tax reform is carried out in its entirety, and the Senate must have an opportunity to pass upon all revenue measures produced by the House. Revenue measures can not originate in the Senate.

There has been much waste of time on the floor of both Houses, however, and unless the waste is cut out from this time forward the impression is that tax reform measures generally will fall by the wayside and fail of passage.

Committee Favors Inheritance Tax.

The Georgia House Tuesday morning rushed the adoption of a large number of local bills. On account of the joint meeting of the Senate and House to be addressed by Herbert E. Myrick and T. Sambola Jones, many matters were postponed.

The bill increasing the salaries of the members of the Prison Commission from $2,000 to $3,000 per year, which was killed in the House Monday, was granted reconsideration by a unanimous vote, on the plea of Representative Ed Wohlwender, who said if the reconsideration was granted he would make a motion that the bill be carried over until next year.

Committees Make Reports.

A flood of committee reports was placed upon the clerk's desk Tuesday morning. One of the most interesting was from General Judiciary Committee No. 1, which favorably reported three bills. One is a "blue sky" bill, curbing the activities of brokers indulging in the sale of worthless stocks and bonds by requiring the registering and certifying by the Comptroller General of all stocks and bonds.

Another is the inheritance tax bill, which provides a special tax on all inheritances of $5,000 or more. The other bill favorably reported is a special registration bill. It provides for a permanent registration list.

Inspector Attacks Apartment House

Attorney Albert Howell and F. E. Kneip, superintendent of the Fuller Construction Company, will be tried in Police Court before Recorder Nash Broyles Tuesday afternoon, charged with violating the building ordinances of the city by erecting a window in the Ponce DeLeon Apartments, for which the Fuller company has the contract, and of which Mr. Howell is one of the owners.

The cases against Mr. Howell and Mr. Kneip were made at the instance of Assistant Building Inspector Charles Bowen, who asserted that the show window extended 14 inches over the sidewalk on Peachtree street. Mr. Bowen will seek to have the window declared a nuisance and ordered removed.

Mayor Urges Haste In Work on Streets

Mayor Woodward called a conference of city and county officials in his office Tuesday in an effort to hasten the work on Ivy and West Mitchell streets and Georgia avenue.

The Mayor took this action just before signing a resolution authorizing the regrading of West Peachtree street, which will be begun next fall. The Georgia Railway and Power Company will begin relaying tracks on Ivy street Wednesday and within a few days the repaving will begin.

WEDDING SPEEDED BY SOFT ATLANTA MOON

MRS. JOSEPH W. HOOGE.

Miss Vera F. England, of Mobile, and Joseph W. Hooge, of Macon, were married here Monday as a result of Atlanta's beautiful moonlight nights—not that they don't have beautiful moonlight nights in Mobile and Macon, but the young sweethearts happened to be in neither of those places.

They have arranged to take an extended automobile honeymoon trip in order to view the bright moon from all parts of Georgia and Alabama.

Miss England came to Atlanta with her mother, Mrs. G. K. England, to visit the family of Charles W. England. Mr. Hooge came from Macon Monday to visit his fiancee.

The ceremony was performed by Father Robert F. Kennedy at the Church of Immaculate Conception at 11 o'clock Monday morning. The wedding date had been fixed for several months hence.

Veterans Will Meet Where They Enlisted

Fairburn, Ga., will be the scene of a reunion of the survivors of the "Bloody Thirtieth" Georgia Regiment July 25. It was at Fairburn that the Thirtieth was mustered into service September 26, 1861, and this will be its thirty-fifth annual reunion.

The Thirtieth contained the names of several thousand warriors on its roll during the four years of the war between the States. Its loss in human life is believed to have been as heavy as any other Confederate regiment.

Fairburn is preparing to give the veterans a great entertainment. All other Confederate veterans are invited.

HEAL BABY'S ITCHING SKIN WITH RESINOL

For babies tortured by eczema, prickly heat, teething rash, or other itching, burning skin eruption, there is instant relief in a warm bath with Resinol Soap and a gentle application of Resinol Ointment. The itching and scratching stop at once, baby can sleep, and soon the tormented little skin becomes clear and healthy again. The Resinol treatment is so absolutely free from anything that could injure the tenderest skin, that it can be used on even the youngest infant.

Resinol Soap for baby's daily bath will usually prevent any skin trouble and chafing because it contains the soothing, healing Resinol medication. Doctors have prescribed Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap for eighteen years and druggists everywhere sell them. Trial free; Dept. 7-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

LEAP TO STREET TO ESCAPE IN NIGHT FIRE

Flames in Rooming House Nearly Trap Guests, Roused From Sleep by Smoke.

Aroused from their sleep by the roar of flames and the smell of smoke, half a dozen roomers in the home of Mrs. J. Sutton, 55 Luckie street, escaped in their night attire Tuesday morning at 4:30 o'clock, when fire broke out in the upper story of the house. Some of them leaped from the windows just in time to avoid the falling roof.

It is not known how the fire started. It was discovered by one of the roomers, who awoke suddenly and found the entire upper portion of the house in flames. He shouted and awoke the other roomers and Mrs. Sutton, who also sleeps on the second floor. Those occuping rooms at the rear ran to the front of the building only a moment before the roof crashed in. One man was struck on the shoulder by a piece of falling timber, but was only slightly bruised.

The occupants of the house gathered in the upper front hall and found their escape cut off by a wall of smoke and flames that was fast devouring the stairway. Some of them braved the flames and ran down the stairway. Others let themselves down from the windows. As the last of the roomers reached the ground the roof of the house fell in.

The fire department extinguished the blaze before the building was destroyed, but not until it had been badly damaged.

Senator Smith to Address Assembly

Senator Hoke Smith will address a joint meeting of the Senate and House of Representatives Friday at noon.

The address is being looked forward to with interest, as Senator Smith is expected to touch upon the question of tax reform. This is the most important question to face any Georgia Legislature in many years, and is receiving more attention from the present General Assembly than any other matter.

SEARCHING SIDELIGHTS ON POLITICS IN GEORGIA

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall, of Chatham, is in Atlanta for a few days, on his way to Athens, where he will visit before leaving for his diplomatic post of duty in Switzerland.

Mr. Stovall is extremely well liked by all the members of the General Assembly, and there are few, if any, he does not know more or less intimately. His nomination to be Minister to Switzerland, which was in line with his ambition for years, was particularly gratifying to his friends throughout all Georgia, and he has been the recipient of many warm and hearty congratulations since his arrival in the Capital.

"I have not the slightest doubt," said Mr. Stovall, "that the Wilson administration is to be a complete success in every way. The President is a hard and conscientious worker, and is, I think, carrying out to the letter the promises of the Baltimore platform.

"I am leaving for Switzerland within the next two weeks, and feel sure I shall find the assignment not only most pleasant, but one wherein I can be of real service to my country. I have a desire, of course, to be useful as well as ornamental, if I may so express myself, and there is much that may be done in the wonderful and progressive little nation of Switzerland that will be well worth while.

"The present Legislature impresses me as a safe and sane body, and not at all inclined to run amuck. I have talked with many members, and I am sure the desire to achieve lasting and helpful tax reforms is universal. There is not much time left, of course, but the Legislature can—and doubtless will—accomplish much in the four weeks yet to its credit."

The friends of United States Senator Bacon are urging all voters to go to the polls to-day and cast a ballot for Bacon to succeed himself in the Senate.

There is no opposition, of course, but as a compliment to the Senator, if for no other reason, it is very desirable that a large vote be cast.

Senator Bacon is the first man Georgia ever honored with a fourth term in the Senate, and he will be the first United States Senator named under the new popular elections amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Mr. Bell, of Clay, looks like Champ Clark, and that, of course, puts a large measure of responsibility upon him.

The gentleman from Clay is quiet and more or less reserved, but in repose his face does remind one strikingly of the great Missourian, and the temptation to call him "Mr. Speaker" frequently is rampant within the hearts of those who are used to addressing Mr. Clark after that fashion.

"Champ Clark is a mighty fine man, all right, and worth looking like," said Bell to-day, when the matter of his resemblance was mentioned in his presence.

Some of the friends of Frank Liebman, the energetic real estate man of Atlanta, have spoken favorably to Commissioner of Agriculture James D. Price about him, and asked Mr. Price to appoint Mr. Liebman to some sort of agricultural job.

Mr. Liebman is quite an authority, upon his own admission, on "setting out peas" and differentiating watermelon from sweet potato vines.

Mr. Price is said to have tendered Mr. Liebman a place as fertilizer inspector in the Okeefenokee swamp, and the Atlanta man is reported as looking upon the honor thus about to be thrust upon him with gratified eyes.

If Mr. Liebman accepts the appointment, it will take him away from Atlanta for four months each year, at a salary of $84.50 per month.

Augusta is making great preparations to entertain the General Assembly when it visits that city Saturday.

Augusta is proud of and deeply interested in the Georgia Medical College, located there, as a branch of the State University, and the citizens are doing everything in their power to advance its interests and welfare. Recently the standard of the college was raised greatly, and it now ranks with the foremost institutions of the kind in the world.

It has been 125 years since the Georgia Legislature was in Augusta, and as it may be as long before it gets there again—although Augusta sincerely hopes not—the forthcoming visit is to be made memorable.

A special train will be run for the benefit of the visitors, going and coming, and a party of not less than 150 has been provided for.

The municipal court bill for Atlanta will be introduced in the General Assembly by the Fulton County delegation on next Monday.

This bill has been carefully drawn and is thought to embody the very best and most up-to-date ideas in courts of the kind.

It will have the backing of the bar and citizens generally, and likely will pass both Houses without friction of any sort.

It is by no means a sure thing that the Tippins bill will not be reintroduced in the present Legislature, notwithstanding the fact that the Georgia Anti-Saloon League is reported to have decided not to request it.

There are some members who think that measure exactly the thing the State needs.

Whether it can be passed is, of course, problematical, but its friends may try it out again, nevertheless.

The best story of the year, "Adam's Clay," by Cosmo Hamilton, begins in next Sunday's American. Don't miss a chapter. Every one bristles with interest.

This is a collection of cool and crisp MUSLINWEAR ITEMS, which will be shown at an opportune moment when your mid-summer wardrobe needs replenishing.

Eighty-Eight Cents for New Garments, Many of Them Worth Up to One-Fifty Each

Gowns

About 18 styles of popular 1913 nightgowns, of nainsooks and sheer materials, representing manufacturer's best efforts of the season. Being from this celebrated maker, it is obvious that they are the most wanted styles. Included in the assortment are many of the noncrinkable crepe gowns, which are now so popular and are so much wanted for traveling uses.

A Wonderful Sale of Undermuslins AT 88c EACH

Combinations

About ten styles of the popular combination garments will be shown in this One-Price sale. No garment is so widely popular as the combination. In this lot are many different models of sheer and soft finish materials, mostly in drawer effects. Some of these garments are trimmed with laces, others are of the all-over embroidery styles; many are trimmed with shadow laces; others with medallions and blind embroidery.

Petticoats

Although these petticoats being machine made, they are excellent reproductions of French pieces, and are remarkable at the price quoted. These are mostly of the new "flat styles" effectively embroidered on the flounces. These values are out of the ordinary and we are happy to be able to supply you at little figures these petticoats, which have recently sprung into favor, being now the most wanted garment in the trousseau.

Drawers

In this collection are about ten styles of sheer nainsook and lingerie cloth drawers. Many of them are in the new straight effects, others in the Dorothy style; while many are the ever popular circular. Some of them are simply trimmed with convent scallops; others more elaborately trimmed with either Val or shadow laces; many are a combination of both lace and embroidery, and a few are finished with just a flat band of embroidery.

Corset Covers

Comisole, the newest thing in corset covers. These are in shadow laces, tucked nets or all-over embroidery. We also show the sturdier garments of nainsooks. Some of these are trimmed in Val laces or medallions. All are finished with beading drawn with ribbon. Many of the corset covers have ribbon shoulder straps. In this lot we show a few of the convent scalloped, with hand-embroidered floral designs.

THREE INVADING ARMIES CAMP IN BULGARIA

Roumanians, Greeks and Servians Co-operate—Vanquished Make Abject Plea to Russia.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BELGRADE, July 15.—Three hostile armies of invasion are on Bulgarian soil.

The Roumanians under Crown Prince Ferdinand, who crossed the Danube, halted and are co-operating with Greek and Servian forces, which have also invaded Bulgaria. Servians have entered Bulgaria west of Kustendil, while another allied army of Greeks and Serbs have crossed the Bulgar frontier through Djumbala.

A St. Petersburg dispatch says that Bulgaria has informed Russian that she unconditionally accepts any peace terms with Russia, acting for Greece and Servia, may present. Bulgaria has also consented to allow Roumania to annex any extent of territory on condition that Roumanian troops do not enter Sofia.

Further reports of Bulgarian atrocities in the south were received by the Servian Government.

Peace Parley Expected To Be Opened This Week.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 15.—Peace negotiations between representatives of Bulgaria, Servia and Greece will open here this week, according to the present program of the Russian Foreign Office.

M. Sazonoff, Russian Foreign Minister, said to-day that Bulgarian peace envoys are expected to open negotiations at once. After the signature of the protocol of an armistice fighting will stop.

Word from Sofia says that Bulgarian troops, driven toward the capital from every angle, are concentrating around Sofia.

An international inquiry of reports of atrocities in Macedonia will probably be conducted in Paris or Vienna.

King Peter Threatens to Dictate Peace in Sofia.

VIENNA, July 15.—King Peter of Servia threatens to "dictate" terms of Balkan peace in Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, unless the Bulgarian Government immediately agrees to the preliminary draft of a treaty of peace drawn by Premier Pasitch of Servia and Premier Venizelos of Greece.

A telegram to-day from Athens states that Greece and Servia are in accord on the terms of peace to which Bulgaria must submit. In a general way they include the following:

Greece to hold Salonika and occupy about 5,000 square miles of territory in Southern Macedonia.

The railway from Salonika to Mitrovitza to be internationalized.

Servia to have a commercial outlet on the Aragon sea, full permission for the construction of a ship canal from the Danube southward and of a railway to the Adriatic.

Bulgaria to give up all Grek and Servian prisoners of war.

Servia to occupy all the fertile district from the Southern Servian boundary southward and eastward from the Vardar River to Demir Hissar, thence eastward to the Rhodope mountains.

Massacre by Allies Charged by Bulgars.

SOFIA, July 15.—The entire Bulgarian and Turkish population of Pravista, in Southern Macedonia, has been massacred by the Greek army, which occupied Kavala last week, it was officially announced to-day by the Bulgarian Government.

Replying to stories of slaughter by Bulgarian troops, emanating from Athens, the Bulgarian Government to-day made public reports of Bulgarian officers in the South, which lay charges of grave excesses at the hands of the Greeks.

Sixty Thousand Homeless.

Sixty thousand Bulgarians and Turks in the district about Pravista and Kavala are homeless, these reports say, and on the verge of famine. The Greeks and Servians are charged with having ravaged the country and cut down refugees.

FREE VOTES CUT AS PONY RACE NEARS END

Bonuses Remain Attractive and Fair Enough, However, to Spur Contestants to Best Efforts.

It is hard to tell who got the most fun out of Sunday's outing at Grant Park, the boys and girls who are in the contests for The Georgian and American ponies, or their elders who gathered to watch them.

Of course, the fun of driving the ponies was all for the children. But the elders got their amusement in hearing the droll remarks of the youngsters, and in seeing their shining faces.

Josephine Simril, 9 East Alabama street.

One little fellow spent a good deal of time trying to pick out the pony he wanted. He feels sure he will win, and was concerned only in selecting the best animal.

After viewing all in the park, he still was dissatisfied.

"What's the matter?" asked the contest manager. "Aren't they good ponies?"

"Yes, sir. But please, sir, have you any with blue eyes?"

All the children are working hard now to take full advantage of the extra vote offer which closes Saturday night at 10 o'clock. Until that time there will be liberal allowances of bonus votes for every club of $35, $25 or $15 in subscriptions. The subscriptions may be of any length, from two years down to one month.

As announced, each bonus offer to stimulate the contestants will be a little less attractive as the contest draws to a close. Manifestly it would be unfair to offer in the last week extra votes in greater numbers than during previous periods, thus putting the contestants who "got busy" early at a disadvantage. But the present offer is sufficiently attractive to bring out the best efforts of every contestant.

Guarantee Heads To Be Defendants

Judge Pendleton announced from the bench Tuesday that he would issue an order in the Guarantee Banking and Trust Company litigation making S. E. Smith, president of the company; H. S. Miles, secretary and treasurer, and W. A. Foster and George H. Sims, directors, parties defendant in the action.

J. N. Robertson, appointed receiver for the company pending a decision by the Supreme Court, will act as receiver for the property of the four men, keeping it intact until the litigation is settled.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Forsyth Bill Is Good.

Valerie Bergere and her company in an intensely dramatic sketch, "Judgment;" Britt Wood and his harmonica; Shelvey Brothers, three unusually clever contortionists, and a bevy of pretty girls in a minstrel act, combine to form a good show at the Forsyth this week. Miss Bergere headlines the show, in a playlet that gives full opportunity for her emotional powers.

The Metropolitan minstrels have some good songs, but the action is made dull by two boys, "end men," whose comedy is old and very sad. The five girls are pretty, and one of them, Flo Bert, has an unusually good contralto voice.

Other numbers are Work and Play, acrobats; Les Cougets, with a novel musical act, and Clark and Verdi, who entertain with a line of Italian jokes.

Friends of Bible in Schools Win Point

Enemies of the measure requiring reading of the Bible in Georgia public schools won their first victory Tuesday morning when the Senate voted unanimously to recommit the bill for further consideration by the Education Committee, on a motion by Senator Foster, chairman of the committee, who held a lengthy conference Tuesday morning with Rabbi David Marx, Dr. Wilmer and Father Rappier who oppose the bill.

That another fight will be made when the committee grants a hearing to those who oppose the bill according to statements Tuesday morning by Dr. H. M. DuBose, an advocate of the measure.

Bars 'Shylocks' From Shore in Big Estate

ANNISTON, July 15.—"Shylocks" are barred under the provision of the will of the late Col. J. G. Farley, retired Anniston capitalist and reputed millionaire, who died here recently.

Farley's three children, Mrs. A. J. Goodwin and J. G. Farley, of this city, and Mrs. Harry Bellenger, of Gadsden, are made executors of the estate, and any of them who lends any money from the estate shall be removed from office. All money now invested in bonds is to be withdrawn and invested in real estate.

Farley's widow is given a one-fourth share in the estate.

Senate Will Break Long-Speech Record

WASHINGTON, July 15.—A record in sustained speechmaking will be made by the Republicans when the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill comes up for debate Wednesday.

Senator La Follette is scheduled to wage a wordy war lasting seven days. Senator Smoot has estimated the length of his diatribe against Democratic iniquity at five days. Senator Smith of Michigan, will talk three days.

Many long speeches are scheduled from the Democratic ranks.

Wilson Will Go to Cornish Again Soon

WASHINGTON, July 15.—President Wilson is planning to take a week-end trip to Cornish, N. H., on either August 7 or 14, according to White House reports to-day.

The Chief Executive will go to the "summer capitol" on Thursday and return to Washington the following Monday.

There's a treat for every reader of The American in Cosmo Hamilton's "Adam's Clay," which bgins Sunday. It's a big story. Don't miss the first chapters.

Motor to the Wigwam, Indian Springs, for the week-end. Fifty-one miles. Roads are good either by Griffin or McDonough. Climate fine.

CLAIMS LOAN MEN MULCTED HIM

Conductor Says He Paid Extortionate Interest and Asks Restraint of Garnishment.

The operations of money lenders were unearthed Tuesday morning when William S. Coburn, representing Sidney Baxter, a conductor on the Southern Railway, went before Judge Newman in the United States District Court and applied for an order restraining two money lenders from levying on the wages of his client.

Saturday Baxter filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, placing his assets at $930 and liabilities at $1,376, asking that his salary outstanding, $240, and household property valued at $500 be exempt.

In 1909 Baxter borrowed $150 from the Birmingham Discount Company, which charged him, he says, $15 per month interest. Baxter in his petition claims to have paid the interest for three years and still owes the concern $150, the principal.

Again, on July 1, 1912, Baxter borrowed from the Atlanta Finance Company, which is represented in Atlanta by G. H. Rosenbush, $105, and for this amount he claims to have paid $11 per month interest for one year, and still owes the original $105.

These two concerns from which Baxter borrowed threaten to garnishee his wages, the petition states.

U. S. Experts Guests Of Lady Aberdeen

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DUBLIN, July 15.—Lady Aberdeen, on the occasion of a brilliant reception for the American commission on agriculture, which is now in Ireland, entertained the visitors in her latest project.

She is establishing in Dublin in a fine old Georgian mansion the Welcome Club, for the reception of Irish visitors from America. At this club travelers register and are given information telling them how to make the most of the sojourn in Ireland.

Seaboard May Bid On A., B. & A. Road

CORDELE, July 15—An impression prevails in railroad circles here that the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company will bid for the Atlanta, Birmingham and Athantic road, when it is placed on sale to satisfy the creditors.

It is also rumored that if it bids in the property the Seaboard will consolidate the shops of the two roads for the eastern division in Cordele. The rumors are being generally discussed here.

Waits a Month and Wins $14,000 Prize

MOOSE JAW, SASK., July 15.—H. Johnson, formerly of Itasca County, Minnesota, obtained a $14,000 tract after waiting in front of the Land Office here for a month. During his wait torrential rains fell, and for many days there weer 'others ahead of Johnson. Numerous fights occurred and the police had to interfere several times.

Johnson almost lost his prize in the last hour by going into the Land Office too soon and finding another man in his place when he returned. The police, however, let him remain first.

Held for Slaying in Houston 23 Years Ago

ALBANY, July 15.—A negro, believed to be the murderer of Joseph Fudge, a white man, who was killed 23 years ago at Henderson, Houston County, is in jail here. He was arrested on a trivial charge and while in jail is alleged to have confessed to another negro that he was the murderer.

Fudge operated a blacksmith shop at Henderson. Following a dispute between him and a negro employee, the black struck him on the head with a heavy stick, killing him instantly.

Young Caminetti at Work as Pipe Layer

TAFT, CAL., July 15.—That Drew Caminetti, who is awaiting trial on charge of white slaving, has been in Taft since last month, became known when the men working with him on a pipe line crew tipped it off that a youth called "Blackie" had repeatedly telephone to some unknown place and asked for messages for Drew Caminetti.

Caminetti came to Taft shortly after June 1 from Sacramento, and immediately hired out to a pipe line contracting company.

Kentucky Governor Tries to End Strike

LEXINGTON, KY., July 15.—An attempt to arbitrate the strike of street car motormen and conductors was made to-day when a conference of Governor McDermott with traction and labor officials was called.

There was no rioting to-day and company officials said they would not attempt to operate any cars with strikebreakers.

GEORGIA MAN CONSUL.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The following presidential appointment was confirmed by the Senate to-day: Nathaniel B. Stewart, of Georgia, to be Consul at Milan, Italy.

SALES OF AUGUST FEATURE COTTON

Bullish Talk Based on Damage by Boll Weevil in Texas Causes Late Buying.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The cotton market opened steady to-day, first prices ranging from 2, unchanged to 3 points lower than Monday's final. The weather map was slightly bullish, but this was slightly offset by the bearish prediction of a big local house.

There was no special feature to trading after the call, transactions being held within a small volume. Sentiment continues bearish and Liverpool was reported a seller of the old crop positions. This promoted an active selling movement, with August the heaviest pressed option. August dropped from 12.12 to 11.99, while other positions declined some 3 to 6 points from the initial level. Later the market developed a steadier tone, resulting in prices rallying a few points, and during the late forenoon price movement was practically unchanged from the previous close.

Trade buying of new as well as old crop positions was the chief feature of a quiet market. Many operators would have been glad to have purchased cotton on the decline, but neither buying nor selling orders were sufficient to create wide fluctuations in prices.

The market is kept from depression by the continued decrease of the stock—and, on the other hand, it is prevented from advancing by the favorable progress of the crop. However, the most important factor which is the predominating influence against activity is the proposal to tax cotton futures. The large interests, as well as the small firms, are unable to see how to do business in the future and are inclined to await further development of news from Washington before pushing their commitments to any extent.

At the close the market was steady with July 1 point higher, while other positions were 2 to 6 points decline from the closing quotations of Monday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 15.—With the exception of Tennessee, North Carolina and West Texas, where it was cloudy, fair weather prevailed over the belt, with only a few scattered showers. Indications are for increasing cloudiness in the northwestern quarter, with a rise in temperature; prospects are for rain and cooler weather toward the end of the week. Partly cloudy to fair weather, with a few scattered showers in the central and eastern States; temperatures normal.

The market opened unchanged, but soon eased to 11.41 for December on a 12-point break in August in New York. While the immutable position of July is admitted, it is thought that the fate of July is too unimportant to delay adjustment to a new situation, and that the promise of abundant new supplies for the coming month is so strong as to put August futures beyond the grip of the manipulative control of a few.

The market rallied a little toward 11 o'clock in anticipation of the bullish remarks in the Government weekly weather report about the hot spell in Texas in the middle of last week.

STOCKS RESPOND TO ACTIVE BUYING

Propitious Cables and Long Interests Liquidate, Cause Strength All Day.

By CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Most stocks at the opening of the stock market to-day responded to more optimistic news with the result that gains were scattered thorugh the list. Union Pacific advanced 1 point, but later reacted. Canadian Pacific was 1¼ higher. Amalgamated Copper was up ⅜ at the outset, but later lost all its advance.

The growing possibility that a railroad strike on the Eastern lines will be averted and cables telling of stronger European markets had an early effect which profit-taking removed.

Among the other gains were United States Steel common ⅜, Southern Pacific ¾, Chino Copper ½, Northern Pacific ¼, Reading ¾, Pennsylvania ⅛, Missouri Pacific ⅛, Erie ½, Chesapeake and Ohio ⅛, American Can ½.

American Telephone and Telegraph lost ½; American Smelting also shaded.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were sluggish. Canadian Pacific in London was strengthened on repurchases.

After the first fifteen minutes of trading the market became dull and price movements returned unchanged to ¼ higher, with the exception of Chesapeake and Ohio, which advanced ⅜; Anaconda, Canadian Pacific, Erie and Pennsylvania Railroad advanced ¼. Southern Pacific rose ½; other issues were unchanged.

Call money loaning at 2¼.

Trading continued extremely narrow in the last hour and at times a condition of almost absolute stagnation prevailed. The most important feature was the absence of supply and prices were mostly maintained at the level obtained earlier in the day. Canadian Pacific went to 214 for a net gain of 2 points on the day. Steel went to 53, but receded fractionally. Union Pacific gained over the mid-day range and Amalgamated Copper also moved up slightly.

The market closed firm. Governments unchanged; other bonds steady.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Money on call 2¼; time money unchanged; sixty days 4 per cent, ninety days 5¼, six months 6@6½.

Posted rates: Sterling exchange 4.84@4.87½, with actual business in bankers' bills at 4.8675 for demand and 4.8315 for sixty-day bills.

Prime mercantile paper unchanged.

METAL MARKET.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The metal market was dull to-day.

Quotations: Copper, spot, 13¼ bid; July, 13¼@13⅜; August, 13¼@13⅜; September, 13¼@13⅜; lead, 4.30@4.40; spelter, 5.25@5.35; tin, 39.70@40.00.

PRICE OF SHEEP SOAR.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Another 15 to 25c advance was scored by the sheep market to-day. Idaho lambs selling at $8.85. Sorting was light, which made prices even higher than they looked on paper. Beef and pork are so high that mutton is getting the benefit.

Cattle trade was nominally steady, although Kansas City had another big run of draught refugees out of Kansas pastures. Hogs were strong to 5c higher with a 9.30 top.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red .....104 @104½
Corn—No. 2 ..... 61¾
Oats—No. 2 39

CHICAGO, July 15.—Wheat showed losses of ¼ to ½c early to-day on the weakness in the markets abroad, coupled with larger receipts in the Northwest than expected, and the pressure of wheat off the English coast. There was good selling by scattered longs and the buying was of a half-hearted character.

Corn was up ⅛ to ¼c on small offerings in the pit and good buying by shorts. Rains are badly needed in sections of Canada.

Oats were off ⅛ to ⅜c and slow.

Provisions were firmer with hogs, which were 5c higher at the yards.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: We think, summing up the general situation, that the favorable action is to buy cotton on soft spots.

Miller & Co.: The market continued in control of the summer position, but in our opinion it can only be a short time before conditions surrounding the present growth must prove the dominating influence, and if conditions continue as favorable as they are at present will make for lower prices.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We continue to advise moderate purchases on declines.

Josephthal, Louchheim & Co.: We continue to advise sales on all strong spots.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.: We would not hesitate to sell the new crop on rallies.

Logan & Bryan: We rather feel that purchases on moderate setbacks are in order.

For Mrs. Wyatt.

Mrs. Henry Wyatt, Jr., of Marietta, was the honor guest at a bridge party given Tuesday morning by Mrs. Homer Davis and her sister, Mrs. Ernest Blair Durham. Summer flowers adorned the apartments and ivory fans were prizes. Mrs. Davis wore lavender embroidered lingerie, trimmed with lace and blue satin. Mrs. Durham wore pink crepe and Mrs. Wyatt was in cream embroidered crepe, lace trimmed. Mrs. M. A. Davis, who assisted in entertaining, wore white embroidered marquisette.

Mr. Byington's Guests.

Mr. John Byington will entertain at dinner Tuesday evening at his home on Lucile avenue in compliment to the vestrymen of the Church of the Incarnation.

The guests will be the Rev. John Wing, Messrs. C. J. Kamper, C. J. Kelley, C. E. Pollard, C. R. Snyder, Arthur Dyer, Walter Grant, Raymond Williams and R. E. Kauffman.

Miss Daley Hostess.

Miss Lillian Daley gave a matinee party Tuesday afternoon for her guest, Miss Eva Stephens, of Dublin, and for Miss Viola Wade, of Palmetto, Fla.

The party included the Misses Eva Stephens, Viola Wade, Lola Wasum, Bessie Small and Annie Jenkins and Mrs. J. R. Glenn, Jr., and Mrs. M. B. Rogers.

SEVERE PAIN WITH HEMORRHOIDS

Got No Rest Nights. Had to Be Propped Up in Bed. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured in Three Weeks.

Bissell, Ala. — "I was troubled for several years with protruding hemorrhoids. They caused pain of the most severe kind and some loss of blood. They were so inflamed that the touch of anything against them was most intense agony. I got no rest nights and had to have my legs and feet propped up in the bed.

"I tried all kinds of advertised cures and I was told that an operation was the only relief. I suffered untold agony. I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. I tried it and then procured a box of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I took the Cuticura Soap and made a solution with warm water and bathed the affected parts before applying the Cuticura Ointment. I was cured sound and well in three weeks' time. A cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment accomplished what all else failed to do." (Signed) L. R. Cook, Nov. 12, 1912.

For red, rough, chapped and bleeding hands, itching, burning palms, and painful finger-ends with shapeless nails, a one-night Cuticura treatment works wonders. Soak hands, on retiring, in hot water and Cuticura Soap. Dry, anoint with Cuticura Ointment and wear soft bandages or old, loose gloves during the night. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Now for Silk Remnants

The Selling Starts at Nine o'Clock

The silk section has given over every semblance of a remnant it possessed for this sale—that its "swan song" sale shall be its best.

There will be no more Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. silk remnant sales this season!

So be advised—this is your best opportunity to secure a dress, a coat, a waist pattern at smallest cost.

Here—we will list some of the kinds included—

Crepe de Chines,	Foulards,
Messalines,	Taffetas,
Chiffons,	Brocades,
Wash Silks,	Kimono Silks,
Corded Silks,	China Silks,
Poplins,	Novelties.

And each of these could be further divided into many varieties—all this season's silks, now sold down to remnant lengths (one-half yard to ten yards), because they were the silks in the colors and patterns and at the prices that the discriminating women of Atlanta wanted.

The silks remain as fine as ever. The prices, however, are changed very materially.

Many are reduced one-third.

Many are reduced one-half.

And a great many are reduced more than one-half.

Indeed, at these reductions this will be the last Silk Remnant Sale of the season!

Buy for now, buy for the fall and save, knowing no such opportunity will be offered again.

None of these silks on approval, none exchanged, none C. O. D.

Women's Hats Bow to New Prices

The bow amounts to a fine courtesy, so very low are the new prices. And now that so many women want another hat, but an inexpensive one, perhaps for traveling, perhaps for no other reason than to have just a fresh hat, this sale amounts to a timely event.

Hats at $1.00

Twenty-five of these—and as many different hats. Originally a number of these were $10.00 and from that down to $5.00. Many of them are just what women will want for traveling or for street wear. Dark colors mostly, too variously shaded and trimmed to describe them.

$1.00!

It would not pay for the ribbons, the feathers, the flowers or the shapes!

Hats at $5.00

Some thirty of these, and all fresh and charming. Just for our workrooms. In the height of the season these would be $7.50 and up. There are light hats for wear with white dresses, there are smart dark hats for going-away; there are a few mourning hats; there are a few leghorns, a few Neapolitans. The greatest number are hemps.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

JUNE 10.—I was forcibly reminded this morning that my contemplated flight is no dream by the appearance of Manette dressed in her hobo clothes. Instead of the dainty, lace-trimmed white in which she is always attired, she wore a blue checked gingham, her curls had been cropped off; in her hand she carried a blue sunbonnet, and her shoes were a durable, heavy-soled tan.

The little monkey was very much excited because I didn't know her, and danced around the room, darting out the door and across the lawn at the sound of Mrs. Spencer's voice, giving such squeals of delight on the way that I felt that the cure for both of us had begun.

"A happy baby," I murmured.

"A baby no longer," said Richards, who had brought her into the room. There was an unusual note in Richards' voice, and I was not surprised when I turned to look at her to find traces of tears on her face.

"She can dress herself now," she said, half-proudly, and half in complaint. "She wouldn't let me fasten a button for her because she said she would have to dress herself when she is away from me.

"Mr. Max, there isn't a doctor anywhere near where you are going, and what are you going to do without me to nurse her if she gets sick? And who will sterilize her food? The poor little lamb, to be taken into a wilderness like that!"

She covered her face with her apron and began to cry. The doctor is right. The love we have for Manette is weighted too heavily with apprehension for the child's good. It is well I am taking her away.

Comforting Words.

I couldn't scold her. I could only give her the reassurance I had given every day since the trip was planned. That I would telegraph for her at the first symptom of illness; that I would send her a daily bulletin; that I would see that Manette didn't eat this, and remember that last fall she had a fever because she ate too much of that, and that her throat isn't strong and her stomach is weak, etc.

All I promised to remember because of my respect for Richards' intentions, and all except the bulletins I intend to forget because of my interest in the child.

June 11.—Jack and Sally Spencer came over last evening, and it was the first time I had seen her since Jack's return. I thought she looked a little worn and thoughtful, but outwardly she was her same serene, sweet, wholesome self. She approved of my plans for Manette, I was glad, for I have learned to rely on her judgment.

She wished, she said, that she could take a little child she loved and go away from everybody in the world.

"Complimentary to me," laughed her husband.

Sally winced, a quick flash of color mantled her cheeks and as suddenly receded, leaving her more pale and tired than is her ordinary wont. I wondered her husband didn't see it. Or rather, to speak more truthfully, I wondered that any man could have the love of a woman like Sally, and not show greater interest in her condition.

"It would do me good," she resumed. "In caring for a child one forgets many things."

Just what the doctor had said to me! I am glad I can take the cure.

I wish every hungry-hearted man and woman in the world could know what it is to love and to have the love of a child, and in that way "forget many things."

A Farewell Tea.

June 12.—We start to-night, and Jack and Sally came over to take a farewell make-believe tea on the lawn. I wish I could have been spared it, for, with my sorrow over her unhappiness, my indignation at him and the fight I am making to keep down all rebellious longings, I am rapidly getting myself into a serious state.

"I met Mrs. Brown on the street when away last week," said Jack, drinking make-believe tea out of a cup as big as a thimble.

To be so brazen! I wouldn't have thought it of him! I shouldn't have looked at Sally when he said it. I should have had more sense. But men have no sense in such matters, and I can't claim a credit that doesn't belong to me. So I looked at her, and made no reply, and when Jack, in his asinine stupidity wondered why I made no answer and looked up to see, he found me gazing at his wife with what must have been anything but a conventional tea party expression. And he saw that she had dropped the cream pitcher and it was broken, and that her eyes were filled with tears, and her face white, as she apologized to Manette, an unusual emotion over the loss of a child's dish!

Nor did her color come back, though Manette said it was all right in her sweetest manner, and her tears continued to flow in an altogether uncontrollable way, though Manette climbed on her lap and hugged her and said she didn't care for the dishes and would rather lose all of them than see Aunt Sally cry.

"You are getting as foolish and nervous as an old woman," grumbled her husband. "I don't suppose a dozen tea sets like these cost a dollar."

"They don't," I agreed. "But sometimes we don't reckon the cost of a thing after it is broken."

Manette Asleep.

June 13.—It is midnight, and Manette is asleep in her berth. Poor little girl! I decided when I saw Richards weeping over her, and Sarah Rae wiping her eyes with her knuckles, and the cook and the maids looking as if at a funeral, with Tompkins as the undertaker, that we have all been loving her too much.

Everyone acted as if she might never come back alive, and their lugubrious expressions and tear-soaked farewells made the child look frightened. "Am I your sick baby?" she asked, when we had waved the last good-bye, and Tompkins was taking us to the train.

Mrs. Spencer rode in the limousine with us. It was a journey of an hour's duration to reach the little suburban station I had decided to take to escape newspaper observation, and she insisted on taking it. I was sorry.

Manette, exhausted by the day's excitement, fell asleep in my arms within five minutes, and I think for the first half hour neither Sally nor I spoke a word.

Then she began. "I have been thinking over what you said, Max," she said, "and I refuse to let you think you are right. I need a big brother. Do you know I haven't a relative in the world unless my husband can be called one? You need a sister, someone to help you with the care of that child, and to whom you can come with all your little and big troubles.

"So it is all settled. You are to have no further thought of anything else in your head. I am your sister; you are my brother. It was the happiest relationship I have ever known. I refuse to let it be spoiled by your silly notion that you may not care more for me than you should."

Not another word was spoken. We reached the station, and the train pulled in. I carried Manette to my stateroom, and then returned to the limousine to bid good-bye to Sally.

Another Kiss.

I held out my hand. She ignored it, and put both arms around my neck.

"Good-bye, best brother in the world," she whispered, kissing my cheek.

God! It was more than mortal man could stand. I threw my arms around her, and when I left her a moment later I am sure that I took with me every hope she could have had that my love for her was like a man feels for his sister.

Wrong Stuff.

Entering a barber's shop, a customer with scanty locks asked for a bottle of hair restorer, with which the assistant promptly supplied him. For a time he persevered in his application of the remedy for missing hair, but this only resulted in raising bumps in his cranium which would have puzzled the most expert phrenologist. In haste he returned to the barber's shop.

"Look," he exclaimed, excitedly, "what the stuff you sold me in this bottle has done to my head."

Puzzled and perplexed, the barber took the bottle, examined it, then turned to the assistant and fairly shouted:

"You blockhead! What you have sold this customer is not hair restorer. It is my patent recipe for bust developing!"

Plenty of Time.

Mr. Styles: "I have two tickets for the opera."

Mrs. Styles: "Oh, good! I'll go and put my hat on right away."

"All right, dear. I guess you'll be ready in time. The tickets are for to-morrow night."

THREE WOMEN TESTIFY

To the Merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound During Change of Life.

Streator, Ill.—"I shall always praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound wherever I go. It has done me so much good at Change of Life, and it has also helped my daughter. It is one of the grandest medicines for women that can be bought. I shall try to induce others to try it."—Mrs. J. H. Campbell, 206 N. Second St., W. S. Streator, Illinois.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"It was at the 'Change of Life' that I turned to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, using it as a tonic to build up my system, with beneficial results."—Mrs. Sara Hayward, 1825 W. Venango St. (Tioga), Phila., Pa.

San Francisco, Cal.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for many years whenever I would feel bad. I have gone through the Change of Life without any troubles and thank the Compound for it. I recommend it to young girls and to women of all ages."—Mrs. C. Barrie, 3052 25th St., San Francisco, Cal.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled.

The Ghost Breaker

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Is this man Warren, the ghost-breaker?"

"Remember, he's harmless," cautioned Jarvis, to the detectives out of the corner of his mouth. "Humor him—agree with anything he says."

The Duke was almost blind with fury because he could not hear the mumbled words. There is no knowing what he would have been if he had heard them.

"Answer my question!" he stormed. "Is this man Warren, the ghost-breaker?"

"Tom" had to hide behind his more self-possessed friend, who managed to gurgle:

"Now, that's all right, Dook. Sure he's a ghost-bredker! Ain't he, Tom?"

Tom was nearly purple in the face, but he managed to get out in a half strangled voice:

"Surest thing you know, bo."

"Sacristi!" foamed the exalted cousin. "Am I, Hernado d'Alva, to be mocked at by two grinning, bull-necked scullions?"

"Shake a leg there!" called a voice from the deck, "If you are going ashore with the pilot!"

The detectives staggered weakly to the door and Driscoll feebly waved his hand farewell.

"You're all right, Dook, old boy! Ghost-breaker! Whee! Wow! Ha, ha!"

The Ambush at the Inn.

Segura, cupped in a fertile valley among the jagged red-brown Spanish mountains, was the natural home of rest. When you came down to it over the winding mountain road it breathed from afar the spirit of dolce far niente. All day long it dozed in the soft yellow sunlight, and all night long it slept in the dim glow of the great yellow stars.

At times its peace was broken by the sudden, fierce descent of a mountain storm. Then the wild lightnings play around the towers of the old castle perched high above it, and the warm rain lashes through the olive trees and beats clamorous summons on the flat roofs of the houses.

But these storms quickly pass and leave Segura greener, fairer, lazier and sleepier than before.

Scientists have observed that a people inevitably conform themselves to their environment; that in their character and even their physical make-up they reflect the climate and topography of their native land. It was so with Segura and the Segurans. They were a solidly built, but for the most part a placid and ox-eyed breed, but likely to be swept by sudden and violent storms of passion, when the steel flashed, sharply and deadly as the mountain lightning. Excitement, passion of any sort, quickly spent its force.

The Little Inn.

Entering the town by the old Roman road, which is still the one decent highway of the region, you pass the little Church of Our Lady of Roncomadour and just beyond it you come upon the one little inn of the town. Here the villagers have for generations done most of their gambling, dueling and drinking. You enter into a large room and see a fireplace at your left and tables scattered about the floor in front of it.

At your right the staircase rises against the front wall of the room, so that only the foot is visible from the door. Beneath the stairs are two deep windows, so close together as to be practically one. There is a table in this little alcove and it is a fine place in which to eat your supper, for the windows command a view of the valley and, beyond, the rugged mountains and the great castle, dark and stern, against the sunset. Sitting there you would be disappointed if you were not told that the old castle was haunted. Its great square towers and sheer, half-ruined curtains hark back to a time when ghosts should have been bred by the score.

The Segurans had wrenched it from a feudal enemy and held it for their king. The Moor had been thrust back from its walls three times in the last days of Granada. Its towers had rung with battle cries and crash of blade and armor. Its halls and stairways had been slippery with blood and its moat choked with the harvest of the fight.

You may have some difficulty in obtaining this table, as it is a favorite one of the Seguran card players and idlers. Any of the other tables will be generally at your disposal, for most of the natives prefer the wineroom, which is at the end of the passage that opens at the rear. But this particular spot is a favorite.

Just at this time it was at a premium, especially as night fell over the valley. For even the bovine nature of the Segurans was stirred by the repeated tragedies and unsolved mystery of the grim and deserted castle.

Gaspar, a fat-faced, round-bodied villager, one of the most sedulous of the customers of Pedro, the inkeeper, sat at the little table by the windows and told the latest developments to a friend just returned from his military service in Africa. The young Prince had gone in to lay the ghost and find the treasure. That was two weeks ago, and—Sancta Maria!—not one sound or sign of him since.

"What men will not do for money or women!" commented the bravo, with piety. He looked keener and more alert than the other villagers as a result of his recent army experience. His name was Maximo. "Did he go in alone?" he asked.

"Old Vardos, his father's body servant, headed with him all the way to the angle where the brook runs out of the moat not to throw away another life for that phantom treasure. Every night since then the old man has returned and left a basket of provisions at the main gate." Gaspar's great dark eyes opened and his voice took on a hollow tone. "None of them had been touched!"

Maximo swore with sympathetic vigor.

"And wouldn't any one go in there with him?"

Gaspar stared at him as if he thought him demented.

"No! Why should they?"

"He is your Prince," frowned the soldier.

Gaspar shrugged his shoulders uncomfortably and shuffled his feet under the table.

"Isn't a man's life his own?" he growled.

"Sacristi! You are a lot of old women," snapped Maximo. "Where is his sister—the Princess? What is she doing about it?"

"She's not here—she is away—gone on some mysterious errand to America. It is rumored in the village that she went to get a man to fight the ghost."

The soldier flushed a brick-red under his dark skin.

"In the name of the Virgin! Did she have to go that far for some one with stomach enough to go into the castle?"

At the moment Dolores, the innkeeper's daughter—the pretty black-eyed belle of the village—slipped into the room and wanted to know what was the matter. Gaspar explained that he thought he had seen a light from the main tower of the castle a short time before and was explaining the situation to his friend. The girl pooh-poohed the idea and the twain departed for the wine room in search of refreshment.

Dolores was evidently waiting for some one. She went to the window and looked out down the road repeatedly. At last she was rewarded by the appearance of a lithe, gray-haired man, who hastened to greet her.

"Any news, Vardos?" she cried eagerly.

He held out a basket which he carried. His face was gray and solemn and his eyes shone in the firelight.

"Nothing," he replied in a low, faltering voice. "Here is the basket—untouched, as usual." He placed the basket on the table by the window and stared out at the castle for a moment in silence.

"This is the fifteenth night," he added.

"Gaspar swears he saw a light in the tower to-night," said the girl, in the same hushed tones. The old servitor crossed himself.

"If he did it was an unblessed light."

The girl crossed herself also, and muttered a short prayer.

"You haven't given up hope?" she asked, after a pause, and the question was more of a plea than otherwise.

Vardon shook his head.

No Hope.

"I gave up hope when he went in. I waited to-night until an hour past sundown, and twice I called. Once," he gulped and his voice grew shakier, "a wail came back to me! It may have been the wind through a grated window, but it sounded like a sigh of the damned! When I called again, something moved in the turret of the keep, like a man waving, and my heart leaped with joy. But only for an instant; for, with a harsh cry, a black, ugly bird flapped from the turret straight for where the sun had set—on my left! Mind you, the left—"

Dolored shuddered and her lip trembled.

"Oh, if the Princess were only here!" she wailed.

"She's on her way—but what can she do?"

Dolores' slender body straightened instantly and the shadow of terror disappeared. Her eyes flashed and her bosom heaved with sudden passion.

"She will go straight to the castle," she cried. "And will Segura have it said that she went alone?"

This time it was Vardos who shuddered. "God forbid that it should come to that!" he exclaimed, fervently. "Good-night."

The little inn was undisturbed for some little while after the departure of Vardon. It was nearly 8 o'clock when a tall, powerfully made man galloped up on a black horse, tossed the bridle to a hostler and strode into the main room of the inn. He had probably the hardest face in all the rough region of hard faces. His mouth was wide, but was a mere slit in a craggy countenance. His cheeks were laced with white scars. One long weal traveled from the bridge of the nose downward to the angle of the jaw. His eyebrows were bushy and jet black and shaded the most sinister and menacing pair of black eyes ever set into a human face. This was Don Robledo, bravo, duelist, general "bad man" and right-hand ruffian of the Duke of Alva.

Finding no one about he thumped the top of the table with his riding whip and bellowed:

"Hey! You, Pedro!"

The Bully.

A sleepy voice replied somewhere in the recesses of the house.

"Wake up!" roared Don Robledo, whacking the table again.

Then the inn-keeper seemed to recognize this peculiar summons, or the voice of the summoner, and he came on the run.

"A thousand pardons, senor!" he begged, stumbling into the room. "What can I do for you?"

Don Robledo glared at him until the inn-keeper was reduced to a condition of abject terror, then snapped:

"My horse is outside. Wash out his mouth and don't water him till he is cool. Leave the saddle on."

"Yes, senor! Yes, senor!"

Pedro made hurriedly for the door, but was stopped by a sharp command.

"Hold on. If that rat-infested larder of yours is empty, get it filled before His Excellency arrives."

"The Duke coming here!" exclaimed Pedro. "When?"

"To-night. Don't stand and stare! Where's your daughter?"

"I'll call her," the inn-keeper assured him, hastening out.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

THE SPANISH BULLY

The innkeeper came on the run.

"A thousand pardons, senor, he begged, stumbling into the room; "What can I do for you?"

Don Robledo glared at him until the innkeeper was reduced to a condition of abject terror, then snapped:

"My horse is outside. Wash out his mouth and don't water him until he is cool. Leave the saddle on."

"Yes, senor. Yes, senor."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FORGIVE HIM, OF COURSE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The other day, while talking to a young man, he kissed me. I was very indignant, and refused to speak to him again. He sent me a letter of apology, and apologized personally, but still I refuse to speak to him. Would you advise me to ignore him entirely?

C. T.

He has shown due repentance, and I hope you will forgive him. If he is the gentleman I hope he is, he will not repeat the offense until an engagement makes it a privilege.

I HOPE NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been in love with a cousin for four months, and although we have not spoken of it, I feel that she reciprocates. But, being a young man of a serious mood, I am at times annoyed by her teasing and silly actions, also I am grieved because when there is company she seemingly neglects me for other young men, while when we are alone she accepts my attentions. Do you think she loves me?

MUSIC LOVER.

You are cousins, which should be a bar to any closer relationship. Though you were not, I would still hope she did not love you, for you, being "of serious mood," would change her happy, merry disposition to one more grave, instead of being glad. The Lord made her that way.

CERTAINLY.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I would like to know if it is proper for me to ask a friend if I may take her home. If it is, I would like to know the proper thing to say.

A. H. B.

"May I take you home?" is the simplest and best form to use. Always ask her, never taking it for granted, as some men have done, and in that way compelling her acceptance.

Household Suggestions

To keep the hands soft have a bottle of olive oil on your washstand, and before washing the hands rub a little of the oil well in. Then soap and wash as usual. The oil loosens the dirt and also keeps the skin soft.

Grass stains may be removed from washing materials by carefully rubbing the spots with a little fresh lard. Then wash in the usual way, and you will find that the stains have entirely disappeared.

To make bread crumbs quickly place a piece of bread in a muslin bag, tie the opening, and rub with the hands. The crumbs will be quite fine, and it will only take a minute or two to bake them.

To make cabbage digestible, when half boiled pour off the water and place in fresh boiling water.

When preparing the whitening for ceilings or pantries, add one pint of boiled milk, after you have put in as much water as you require. The milk gives the ceiling a beautiful gloss when dry and keeps the whitening from rubbing off.

Tea Made with Boiling Milk instead of water and allowed to stand for four minutes before being poured off the leaves is excellent for invalids and most nourishing.

An Economical Way of Frying Onions is to place sufficient cold water at the bottom of the pan to cover it, then slice the onions and put them into the pan with a piece of dripping the size of a walnut. Fried in this way they will not burn.

Henry Gets a Rest

"HENRY said," related Mrs. Dillpickle, "that he was not feeling very fit and the change would do him good. 'If you insist,' said he, 'on spending a week in Michigan at the summer cottage getting things ready for the family invasion I might as well go along. There will be fishing—it's just the time for bass—and, besides, maybe I can help you.'

"Henry added that last phrase with the air of a guilty sudden thought. He is a good husband, but I must say that around the house Henry Dillpickle is about as much use as a flying machine or a white elephant. But I let him go along. I've had experience before when I yearned for a strong right arm to beat rugs and rake and spade and scrub and couldn't hire any one because all the men were doing spring plowing and all the women were busy wiping up mud tracks after them.

"Henry has put on too much weight and all winter he mourned because he had no time to take an expensive gymnastic and massage course to run down his weight. He has talked loud and long about how willingly he would live on bran diet and be pounded to a jelly if only he could lose weight, and I thought I saw a way to help him and also myself.

A Feverish Stare.

"When the launch dumped us and our baggage on the pier and went coughing away Henry began looking at the lake with that absorbed, feverish, fisherman's stare. I stopped that immediately.

"'Run on to the cottage, Henry,' I said, 'and get the wheelbarrow and cart up the trunk and the linoleum and the suit case and the groceries.'

"'In these clothes?' he howled reproachfully.

"'There is a lovely suit hanging in the closet at the cottage,' I told him. 'Don't you remember? It's the one you wore when you fell into the lake and went berrying and got run over by the Fishers' automobile. There is fringe on the cuffs, but nobody will see you—trot on!'

"The way Henry puffed and steamed getting that luggage to the house would have been heartrending had I not been too busy cleaning out the kitchen. I made him eat his lunch on the kitchen table, which broke his proud heart. Just as he was getting out an after-lunch cigar I put a spade into his hand.

"'You will have time to fix about half the garden this afternoon,' I told him. 'Then there's the yard to rake, and I want what's left of the woodpile moved, and you know we're going to make a new path to the lake. Meanwhile, I wish you'd beat these rugs.'

"Henry looked at me reproachfully, but I was adamant. 'I did think,' said he feebly, 'that maybe I'd get a nice mess of fish for dinner——'

"'Fish?' echoed I. 'Oh, my, no! Not when I have a lovely can of salmon ready!'

"Henry groaned and took up the white man's burden. He went to bed at 7 o'clock that night, walking bent over like an old man. He said that never again should he wonder at the hobbling, shuffling gait of steady farmers. He understood why they couldn't straighten up.

"He tried to slip out at 5 the next morning to go fishing, but I opened one eye and suggested that it would be nice if he would start the kitchen fire and a blaze in the fireplace. Two hours later I found Henry, all smudged like a stoker, shaking his fist at the kitchen stove, which he had entirely covered with all the ashes he hadn't scattered over the floor. 'I've put everything on that fire of yours,' he stormed, 'from kerosene to vanilla extract, and it won't burn! There is a Michigan law against cook stoves burning, I know! I—'

"When I suggested that if he opened the drafts instead of shutting them it might be better, Henry just blew up and popped out of doors, where he chopped the window boxes into kindling wood before he realized what he was doing. I had to stand over him that day to make him keep on with the garden. By night he said he felt queer and knew he was going to die and that he had no idea I had such a cruel and inconsiderate nature.

"The next morning he groaned feebly when I woke him and then he refused to get up. He said his head ached and his back ached, and his legs and arms ached, and why in thunder didn't I hire a man to do my slaving and let him expire in peace?

Glad To Go.

"I had to spend a great deal of the day putting hot cloths on Henry's aches and pains and soothing his disposition, and when he did rise from his bed of suffering he said 'Ouch!' whenever he moved, and he looked pale.

"The last day there I let him go fishing and he came home with a fine string of fish. He nearly fainted when I said that, of course, he would have to clean them for me. Henry Dillpickle can't kill a mosquito without gulping, and those fish were still lively. At dinner he said he guessed he had lost his fondness for fish.

"Henry said he was mighty glad to get home," concluded Mrs. Dillpickle, "where he could recover his health and strength after his strenuous rest in the country!"

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a comity of ladies calm to the house last nite. Thay belong to a new club wich Ma has joined, called the Sisters of the Songbird. The object of the club, Ma told Pa, is to teech the art of singing & the art of making new & butiful songs & sending them to forrin lands ware the heethen is setting alone in his blindness.

One of the ladies did all the talking. Her naim was Missus Smily Goode. The way she looked at Pa onst wen he tried to say sumthing & interrupted her, it was a awful look. I bet Mister Goode is a kind of a silent man.

The objeck of our order, sed Missus Goode, is to promote song in all its butiful buty. Song & the maiking of songs has progressed, she sed, until it is grate in its vary grateness. What is noabler or grater than one who makes songs? she sed to Pa.

I doan't know, sed Pa, the only song writers I know is jest plain good fellows like Vince Bryant and Billy Cobb or Harry Williams. Thay don't feel grate or noabel excep sumtimes late at nite or at a stag party, Pa sed.

But I mean songs for the heethen to make them see the truth, sed Missus Goode. I mean songs that shud be sent to forrin countries.

He Indorsed It.

That is what shud be did with a lot of the songs that is a kind of rage now, Pa sed. One sure thing, sed Pa, if a good heethen mother saw sum of them songs like "Wait Till I Git You Alone Tonite" & a lot of that tripe, she wuddent let her littel heethen daughter sing it, Pa sed. I doan't think we peepul in this country have a rite to send misshunaries anyware after standing for sum of the songs that make a hit here.

You doan't seem to understand, sed Missus Emily Goode. This is the kind of songs we are going to send to the heethen like this one wich I have just rote. Then she sang:

Kindness, kindness, gentle kindness
Must be shown by all us gurls
To the heethen in his blindness
Diving after preshus pearls.
Oh the foolish pearls he dives for
Underneath the deep blue sea.
Vain are the foolish things he strives for,
Let us help him, you & me.

CHORUS.

Kindness, kindness, that's the word
That by heathen must be herd.
Preech it, sisters, everyware,
Sing it to sum heethen air,
Till the cannibuls we know there
Will not gulp us wen we go there.

Well, sed Pa, ware are you all deer littel cunning reeformers going to get the gelt for this grand movement? You cant maik it by publishing & selling yure songs, sed Pa, beekaus the song bisness is on the fritz.

Strong, Brave Men.

We are going to deepend on you strong, brave men to help us out, sed one of the Sisters of the Songbird. We are kind of deependent on you noabel men, after all is sed & done about our wanting to vote & all that. We lean on you.

Not on me, sed Pa. I am too long in the league. I wont give a cent. Put that in yure pipes and sing it, sed Pa.

What She Was Meant For.

A lady of great beauty and attractiveness, who was an ardent admirer of Ireland, once crowned her praise of it at a party by saying:

"I think I was meant for an Irishwoman."

"Madam," rejoined a witty son of Erin, who happened to be present, "thousands would back me in saying that you were meant for an Irishman."

A Stunning Hat

Fully Described by Olivette

By Olivette.

A WONDERFUL picture hat for the fresh young face is the one we illustrate to-day. Black Milanese straw forms the foundation, and a double flounce of accordion plated maline shadows the brim. The maline covers the rounded crown and a narrow fluting of it edges the top of the crown. At the base of the crown in front nestles a great full-blown rose in glowing crimson, and wound loosely around the crown is double-faced black satin ribbon, which falls in graceful loops and ends from the down-curving back brim. One end of the ribbon is almost to the waist, and the other falls almost to the knees—a most unusual new feature.

A Good Reason.

It was a red-letter day at one of our large schools, and the boys were under examination in "optics." The point under illustration was that strictly and scientifically speaking, to see not objects, but their images depicted on the retina. The doctor, to make the matter plainer, said to the head of the class:

"Jackson, did you ever actually see your father?"

Bill promptly replied: "No, sir."

"Please explain why you never saw your own father."

"Because," replied Bill, very gravely, "he died before I was born, sir."

Introducing Himself.

A gentleman was once advertised to sing at a charity concert presided over by a city councilor—a self-made man. The first song was "The Owl." On rising to announce it the chairman was interrupted and informed that the singer had not arrived, a fact that he duly notified to the audience.

A little later, however, the missing baritone made his appearance, and was observed by the worthy chairman, who called on him without delay.

But the singer had hurried, and had not recovered his breath, so, with apologies, this fact was suitably explained and another artiste requisitioned. At length the baritone was quite ready.

The councilor rose, and quite innocently discomfited the long-awaited singer by announcing with marked confidence:

"Mr. 'Ampton will now favor us with the longed-for 'Howl!' "

Their Married Life

Helen Determines to Brave Warren's Wrath and Engage Rooms at Another Hotel.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

HELEN opened the door to the grinning French maid with the coffee and rolls. The girl looked uncertainly around for some place to set the tray, for on the only table Helen had unpacked her traveling bag.

"Wait, you can put it here," and Helen hurriedly cleared off the table.

The maid, who could not understand or speak a word of English, put down the tray, chattered something in French, and hurried out.

"Breakfast come?" called Warren from the bedroom.

"The tray's come, but I shouldn't call it breakfast," answered Helen, viewing it with disgust. "Just see how they serve things here!"

It was certainly not an attractive tray. There were only coffee and rolls. A roll and a blackened spoon and knife was thrust in each of the thick, chipped coffee cups. There was a small plate of butter, a pitcher of hot milk, a saucer with a few lumps of sugar—and nothing else. There were no napkins, and not even saucers for the cups.

"Well, they don't believe in unessentials, that's certain," was Warren's comment as he surveyed the tray.

"Look at that silver!" exclaimed Helen indignantly, taking the blackened spoon and knife from one of the cups.

"I'd hardly call it silver. But come on—draw up a chair there. It's after nine now and I ought to be out of here."

Helen spread a fresh towel on the table to serve as a cloth, and arranged on it the meager contents of the tray.

"Here, dear, this is as good as paper napkins," taking from her trunk some crumpled tissue paper.

Helen in Distress.

"Oh, don't be so darn particular," pouring out his coffee, while Helen wiped out her cup and spoon with the paper. "You've got to put up with a lot of things when you travel."

"I can put up with almost anything—if it's clean. But I don't think this place IS clean. Hadn't you better tell them as you go out that we're not going to stay?"

"I've no time to look up any other place," he frowned. "I'm here on business and got to be on the job. We can put up with this for a couple of weeks—won't be here longer than that."

Helen flushed. "Dear, I CAN'T stay at this place. I tell you it isn't CLEAN! I can't eat here," pushing back untouched the cup of muddy, brown coffee.

"See here, the place for anybody that's as blamed fussy as you—is at home! If I'd had any sense, I'd left you there."

"But can't I find other rooms?" pleadingly. "I haven't anything else to do—I can start out the first thing this morning. Dear, you said we didn't have to stay here if we didn't like it."

"Well, I like it all right. This is good enough for anybody. We've got two big rooms right on the Boulevard, within a stone's throw of the Opera House—what more do you want?"

He pushed back the shabby red velvet arm chair, crumpled the tissue paper into a ball and threw it on the table as he rose.

"Now I'll be back here about half-past six, and we'll go out to dinner. You can fool around the shops or do anything you like—but we're going to let well enough alone and stay right here. Understand?"

He strode into the bedroom, brushed his hat, jammed it on his head, got some papers out of his suit case and started for the door.

"Now, you've got enough money?"

Helen nodded.

"Well, the American Express Company is right around the corner—they'll tell you how to get anywhere. You might stop in there and see if there's any mail for us.

An Appalling Thought.

Helen followed him to the door, realizing that when Warren went out on the street he would be lost to her—there would be no way she could reach him until 6 o'clock. To be left so alone the first day in a foreign city seemed suddenly somewhat appalling. Warren kissed her hurriedly, and drew away from her clinging arms with a curt:

"Now, take care of yourself. Don't get run over. You have to look where you're going here—these cabmen'd sooner run over you than not. Go to the Bon Marche. That's a big shop—you can spend most of the day there."

When he had gone, Helen glanced around with a dismayed sense of her loneliness. And this place—she HATED it! The strong morning sun lit up the shabby carpet and the dusty, worn, red velvet furniture. The bedroom with its now disordered bed and untidy wash-stand was even less attractive.

A few minutes later Helen, armed with her guide-book and a book of French phrases, locked her trunk and started out—determined to find other rooms in spite of what Warren had said.

She knew the Continental Hotel was very near, for he had pointed it out as they drove from the station. When she entered the lobby, it was with a sight of relief. At least this looked more like the hotels at home. One of the clerks, who spoke English, informed her that they had not a single vacant room and would not have for the next ten days.

From there Helen went to the American Express Company. She paused to view the Opera House which the guide-book said was the heart of Paris.

It was a majestic building, but Helen was not in the mood for sight-seeing this morning. The wonder of being in Paris was somewhat dulled by what she considered the "wretched" place at which they weer stopping. For Helen had none of the instincts of a real traveler. Her first demand was for cleanliness and comfort—to her the joys of sightseeing were secondary.

The American Express Company was a big, hospitable building on the corner. Two-thirds of the Americans in Paris have their mail sent to this office, and when Helen entered a dozen or more were writing letters and taking advantage of the guide-books, dictionaries and bureau of information. At the mail window Helen asked timidly if there was anything for Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Curtis."

The clerk took down a big package of letters from the "C" pigeon-hole, shuffled over them quickly and threw out three for Warren and one for herself. Helen went to a desk by the window and eagerly opened the letter from her mother.

Carterstown, Mo.,
June 24, 1913.

My Dear Helen—I am writing this several days before you sail so that it will be awaiting for you when you reach Paris. Do hope your voyage will be a smooth one, and that you will not be seasick.

I am sending you a clipping from the "Daily Trumpet." I don't know how they get the news out here, but you see they do. Everyone here thinks it's fine that you can travel so much. To go to London last year and to Paris this year—that's more than anyone in Carterstown can do. Did I tell you that the Episcopal Church had made up a fund to send their pastor, Dr. Eldridge, abroad this summer? The two Dobson girls are going also. But they're all going on a cheap line from Montreal. You are very fortunate to be able to go on the best line and in such grand style.

I know you will enjoy all the sights in Paris and the many beautiful shops. Send me a post card when you can. I will not expect you to write much, as I know you will be too busy.

I hope Warren will be successful in his business, as you write that this is only a business trip.

With love to both. MOTHER.

The clipping from her home town paper, Helen read with an amused smile:

"Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Curtis, of New York City, are sailing for Paris on the Kaiser Wilhelm. Mrs. Curtis was formerly Miss Helen Allen, of this city, and has many friends and relatives here. Mr. Curtis is a prominent lawyer in New York. We hope that their trip will be a pleasant one."

She slipped the letter back into the envelope, wondering if they would think Warren and she were traveling in such "grand style" if they could see the room she had left this morning.

A Daring Plan.

Helen looked up quickly as two American women sat down nearby.

"You're staying at the Ritz, aren't you?" asked the other one.

"Oh, no, we discovered the most wonderful little hotel this year. We've two beautiful rooms for only twenty francs a day! Everything's so clean and the service is PERFECT. Perhaps you know of it—Hotel Ronceray, 10 Rue Montaigne.

Helen hastily scribbled the address in the back of her guide-book, then gathering up her mail, she went deliberately over to the information desk and asked what bus would take her to the Rue Montaigne.

Two beautiful rooms for twenty francs a day, and they were paying sixteen at that dreadful place! Helen's lips were suddenly set in a little grim line of determination. If this hotel was as that woman had described it, she would brave Warren's wrath and engage the rooms. She would even retain them with a deposit—a deposit large enough to insure their taking them.

It was so rarely that Helen ever took even the slightest initiative without consulting Warren, that when a few moments later she climbed on the bus that was to take her to the Hotel Ronceray, her heart beat fast at her own daring.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Now you'd better go and go quick!

CHAPTER XVII.

WHEN Jennie and the fellow met Tom, as they were going into the place—that Jennie thought was only a restaurant—Jennie just nodded to Tom and was going on in with the fellow. But Tom stood in the way and asked Jennie if she hadn't better come home with him.

At this the fellow got real angry and asked Tom who HE was and what business was it of HIS. Tom didn't pay any attention to the fellow, but would not let Jennie pass. Jennie was for getting angry, too, and told Tom it was none of his business.

Then Tom finally told her that her aunt, the boarding house keeper, was very sick and that she had sent him to bring Jennie home in a hurry. The fellow shook his fist in Tom's face and tried to shove him aside. Tom grabbed him by the collar, shaking him, and said, "You measly rat, I know about this place where you are trying to take this young girl and if it wasn't for creating a scene I'd break every bone in your wretched body, and now you'd better go and go quick, for I might do it anyway, before this hot weather makes me lose my temper."

Tom then took Jennie by the arm and walked off down the street. Jennie had never seen Tom quite so aroused, and, strange to relate, she was as meek as a lamb and walked with him to the car, never saying a word.

When they were on the car, Tom turned to her and said, "Jennie, girl, your aunt isn't sick. She didn't send me for you at all. I just told you that to get you away from that place and that fellow. I happened to be passing and saw you with that man and going into that awful place and told you that about your aunt, so as to get you away quick. If you had gone into that place you'd never been the same girl afterward, for it's one of the worst places in town, and I love you, Jennie, and I want you to kind a think of me once in a while." But Jennie looked straight ahead, not saying a word.

"Yes," said the meek-looking man, "I've no doubt you've had some great hunting experiences in your travels abroad."

"I have, indeed."

"Buffalo hunting——"

"Yes."

"And bear hunting——"

"Of course."

"Well, you just come round and let my wife take you house hunting and bargain hunting with her. Then you'll begin to know what real excitement is."

The late Sir W. S. Gilbert was inclined to be witty at the expense of the men and women who like to do amateur acting in the name of charity. An enthusiast once said to him:

"Mr. Gilbert, what do you think of our amateur club?"

"I think they are not so much a club as a bundle of sticks," returned the master of repartee.

Why don't you come on up to Hot Springs Arkansas, and enjoy a game of golf in the cool fresh breezes of these beautiful mountain heights?

Did you think Hot Springs was merely a famous health resort?

Not at all! Thousands come here for the summer pleasures alone. The golf grounds and tennis courts are unsurpassed, the hill drives and paths invite you to ride, drive and ramble along; and for those who just must fish, wherever they go, the picturesque Ouchita River is nearby.

You would be surprised what little is asked for good board and how low the bath prices are fixed by the U. S. Government.

The Rock Island is the direct line to Hot Springs from Memphis. Four modernly equipped trains daily, leaving Memphis at 7:00 a. m., 9:45 a. m., 11:00 a. m. and 12:01 midnight. Trains from the southeast make direct connection in Memphis with these Rock Island trains to Hot Springs, Ark.

Learn about the many attractions this health and pleasure place offers. Write for booklet, and for details about schedule and fare from your home town.

Why not spend your vacation at this place where you can enjoy every summer pleasure, and be benefited by the world's most healing waters?

CRACKERS NOW BATTLING FOR GRAND OLD RAG

They Could Make Only Thirteen Runs Monday, but Managed to Win—Race Tight.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THIRTEEN is certainly a jinx for Atlanta. It's been a jinx all season. It is still jinxing. Take it yesterday. The Crackers were playing a marvelous offensive game—simply marvelous. Yet, try as they could, old Thirteen had 'em anchored. They got right up to thirteen hits and thirteen runs and there they stuck.

It was surely unlucky.

Yet, as the league-leading Billikens could make only seven runs through all a hot afternoon, the Crackers won.

And, since Chattanooga kindly trounced Mobile, the dear old race tightened up another notch.

* * *

FINE doings now in the first division! Montgomery has two games and a half on Mobile. Mobile has one on Atlanta. The locals are a game and a half ahead of Chattanooga.

Verily, some contest!

If Montgomery and Mobile lost again to-day—which would mean that Atlanta and Chattanooga must win, the race would tighten beautifully. The Billikens would hold a lead of a game and a half. But the Crackers would pass the Gulls, while the Lookouts would close up.

* * *

THE pennant bug seems to have bitten the Crackers at last. They played to win yesterday—strictly. And they won.

A team that will bat can not long be denied. And the Crackers everlastingly mauled the pellet yesterday. They had to.

Good old Gil Price was bad, and run after run sifted in while he presided. Then they warmed up Dent, at the earnest solicitation of Whitey Alperman, who nearly waved off an arm getting the thing started. The Washington chap pitched pretty well. They got to him for a run in the sixth and in the seventh he contributed again, this time with the assistance of an error in the outfield. Before the Billiken scoring ended seven runs were chalked up against the Crackers. But that amounted to nothing.

The locals knocked the Brown Boys, E. and C., out of the box in the order named. Then Dobbs, having no pitcher, put in Breen. On appearance, Breen is to the pitching mound what a cart horse is to a pair of racing shafts. But he proved the best hurler of the three, and the Crackers scored but two runs while he performed, and those were helped along by two errors.

* * *

ONE gob of gloom cropped out when Wally Smith hurt his hand trying to stop a terrific liner and was forced to retire. But the fans were cheered by the excellent playing of Manush.

Apparently, Smith has forked a prize in this chap. He handled one slow ball phenomenally well, hauled down a pop, and looked useful at the bat, though he didn't happen to grab a hit.

* * *

THE game was full of weird batting performances. Here is a partial list:

Though Bailey scored three runs he was only given one time at bat. Once he walked, once he sacrificed, and twice he was hit. He seemed to think that C. Brown was trying to bean him and, when for the second successive time he was beaned—that time with a terrific ball to the jaw—he tried his best to throw his bat at Brown. Fortunately, Donahue saw the motion, grabbed the bat and hostilities were called off. To return to the batting performances:

Long only made two hits—for seven bases!

Smith hit two sacrifice flies out of four attempts.

Agler got to first three times and scored every time.

Dent made two hits for three bases and scored one run.

Wares made hits his first four times up. He began with a two-bagger. Then he slumped to singles his next pair of times out. Then he hit a three-bagger. A fly to Welchonce in the eighth marred a perfect batting score.

INTERNATIONAL SAILING RACE WON BY AMERICAN

NEW YORK, July 15.—The International sailing canoe cup is to-day safe from foreign invaders for some time to come. "To have and to hold" was the watchword yesterday when Leo Friede, of the Manhattan Canoe Club, the American defender, sent his little craft skimming over the eight-mile course at Greveseend Bay and shot across the finish line two minutes and twelve seconds ahead of his Canadian rival, Ralph H. Britton, of the Ganaoque Canoe and Motor Boat Club.

FOUR CLUBS SAVED FROM WRECK OF INTERSTATE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 15.—For the present the Interstate League will continue under its present name as a four-club circuit, with Erie, Wheeling, Akron and Youngstown as its members. Players of the Steubenville, Columbus, Zanesville and Canton clubs were paid up to July 15 inclusive, and some of them were turned over to the clubs still remaining in the organization.

Sox Buy Chappell; 'Comy' Pays Big Price

CHICAGO, July 15.—Larry Chappelle, the sensational outfielder of the Milwaukee team, of the American Association, was sold to the Chicago White Sox yesterday. For him President Comiskey gave Outfielder John Beall, a catcher whose name was not made public, and a "cash consideration." Chappelle is to report at once. He has been batting around .359 and fielding with the best of them. Practically every club in the major leagues bid for him.

President Comiskey, of the Chicago Club, said that Chappelle was the highest-priced baseball player ever purchased. Beyond stating that he valued Beall at $3,000, Comiskey, however, would not give any figures.

Williams and Ledoux In Coast Go To-night

LOS ANGELES, July 15.—The twenty-round bantamweight battle at Vernon Arena to-night between Kid Williams, of Baltimore, and Charley Ledoux, of France, promises to be one of the fastest battles ever staged on the coast.

Williams and Ledoux are almost identical in measurements and fight the same style of battle. The Frenchman is in much better condition than on his previous appearance here, when Eddie Campi won a twenty-round decision over him. Williams is also in prime condition. The betting, which at first was 10 to 8 on Williams, is now even money.

MAGNATE PLANS TOUR.

SEATTLE, WASH., July 15.—Michael Fisher, a local baseball magnate, is to-day planning a South Sea Islands baseball tour, which will include three months in Australia. Fisher contemplates establishing league baseball in Australia if the sport proves popular.

WALKER VS. MILLER.

WINNIPEG, MAN., July 15.—George Walker, Canadian champion middleweight wrestler, to-day was matched to meet Walter Miller, of Duluth, American champion, before a local club on July 31.

FODDER FOR FANS

After losing ten straight games the Brooklyn Dodgers finally broke their losing streak by beating the Cubs to the tune of 9 to 2.

* * *

After winning eight games the Pirates finally went down to defeat at the hands of the Boston Braves and this despite the fact that Hans Wagner was shoved in as a pinch hitter.

* * *

This is pennant-raising day at the Polo Grounds and a big crowd of baseball moguls flocked to New York to take part or look on. Among them is Garry Herrmann, whose Cincinnati Reds play the Giants this afternoon.

* * *

Ebbets field, home of the Dodgers in Brooklyn, is to be dedicated this afternoon. The fact that it is pennant-raising day at the Polo Grounds kept some notables away from Ebbets field who otherwise would have been there. However, among those who went to Brooklyn to take part were C. W. Murphy, owner of the Cubs; President F. J. Navin, of the Tigers; President C. W. Somers, of the Cleveland Naps; President B. F. Shibe, of the Athletics, and James E. Gaffney, of the Boston Nationals.

* * *

In the game between the Phillies and the Cardinals not a Quaker was left on bases in the eight innings. It was one of the best pitched games seen in Philadelphia this year.

* * *

Lefty Leifield, once a pitcher for the Pirates and who was sold to the Cubs last fall, has been shunted to the minors. He goes to Atlanta.

* * *

Catcher Grover Land, of the Naps, has been released to the Toledo club.

* * *

The Senators had to use three pitchers to beat the Naps.

CRACKERS GET LEIFIELD; EVERS LETS CRAIG OUT

CHICAGO, July 14.—The Cub management announced that two of its players have been sent to the minor leagues. "Lefty" Leifield, the veteran southpaw pitcher, was first let out to the Atlanta team, as Manager Evers believes he has outlived his usefulness as far as the big teams are concerned.

Craig, the young collegian who joined the team a short time back, was sent to Terre Haute, Ind., for further seasoning.

LYNCH SATISFIED WITH HIS UMPIRES; NO CHANGE

NEW YORK, July 15.—There will be no change in the personnel of the National League staff of umpires this season, according to a statement issued last night by President Thomas J. Lynch. Mr. Lynch says that despite adverse criticism of umpires by several club owners, he has found the umpiring in the National League this year to have been as good as at any time in the last four years.

LAGRANGE AGAIN LEADS LEAGUE IN ATTENDANCE

LA GRANGE, GA., July 15.—Official announcement has just come from Georgia-Alabama League headquarters giving the figures on the attendance receipts at all Fourth of July games in the league. As in the case of the opening games, LaGrange leads by a large margin, and this, too, in the face of the fact that both Gadsden and Anniston are very much larger towns than LaGrange.

The receipts for the Fourth of July games were as follows: LaGrange, $382.40; Anniston, $364.35; Gadsden (morning game), $200.45; Gadsden (afternoon game), $212.30; Talladega (morning game), $198.10; Newnan (morning game), $174.20.

TRAVERS TO MAKE TRIP.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Jerome D. Travers, the national amateur golf champion, has said that he will visit England next year and attempt to annex the amateur title of the British Isles.

3 BIG EVENTS AT MOTORDROME MEET TO-NIGHT

Cracker Sweepstakes, at 7 Miles, Will Be Longest and Most Important Race of Season.

THE Cracker Sweepstakes, most important of the races scheduled for decision thus far at the local Motordrome, will be run Tuesday night. It was postponed from Friday night on account of rain.

The final in this event will be at seven miles, the longest race of the season. On account of its length this affair is likely to produce form upsets and might possibly produce some motorcycle upsets as well. A 7-mile race at 85 to 90 miles an hour on a 4-lap track is calculated to try to the utmost limits the endurance of any rider. And because a tired man is likely to wabble and because a wabble means a spill, there are fine possibilities for excitement in Tuesday night's races.

The Motordrome purse will be especially interesting because it will bring to a focus the speed rays from the three scintilating stars of the local track — McNeil, Graves and Richards. At the last meet the machines of McNeil and Graves went punk at the last minutes and Richards romped. This time they will have their machines in condition again and well tuned up. McNeil has had a run of especially hard luck this season, but he believes it has turned at last. If it has, Jock will make it exciting, for McNeil has the fastest machine at the track—when the blamed thing works.

Graves has a new Excelsior, a "boat" that has proved, at the Chicago Motordrome, that it is sensationally fast. It went blooie at the last races, but "Millionaire Morty" believe he has it tinkered up now to a point where nothing can happen to it, provided it stays on two wheels.

A third big attraction of the evening will be the 4-cornered match race. There is no telling which riders will be put in this, but Manager Prince will get his stars together for this one and give the public the greatest race possible.

First Event.

Jock McNeil, one mile against time, present world's record for quarter-mile track held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves. Time, :38 4-5.

Second Event:

Motordrome Purse.

One mile to qualify; three miles final. One to qualify in each heat and two in fastest heat.

No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 9, Harry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Third Event.

No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 7, George Renel; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Fourth Event.

No. 4, George Lockner; No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz.

Fifth Event.

Final of Motordrome Purse—Three miles.

Sixth Event:

Crackers' Sweepstakes.

Three miles to qualify and seven miles final. One to qualify in each heat and two in fastest heat.

No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Seventh Event.

No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 8, Jock McNeil.

Eighth Event.

No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Ninth Event.

Seven-mile final of the Crackers' Sweepstakes.

Tenth Event.

Four-cornered special match race to be announced later, four miles.

DALEY GOES TO PELICANS.

NASHVILLE, TENN., July 15—It was announced last night that Jud Daley, outfielder of the local team, had been loaned to the New Orleans club. Daley has been on the bench for some days in this city.

PRURITIS A SEVERE FORM OF ECZEMA

A Method of Home Treatment That Is Very Effective.

There is probably no other remedy so well known as S. S. S. for the blood. And it is remarkably effective in that form of skin disease known as pruritis, or intense itching. The action of S. S. S. is rapid. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment. And the medical elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food. These facts are brought out in a highly interesting book on skin diseases, compiled by the medical department of the Swift Specific Co., 184 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It is mailed free, together with a special letter of advice, to all who are struggling with a blood disease.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day of your druggist. It will surprise you with its wonderful action in the blood.

Don't accept something offered you as "just as good." The only reason why anyone should not try to sell you something cheaper from crude drugs. Beware of any attempt to persuade you to buy something in place of S. S. S.

Here's a Sure Cure for Health

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

BUSINESS OF CHEERING.

"I never will return again," Jack Johnson boldly said,
And brought a million blessings down upon his kinky head,
And if the smallpox had refused to greet us any more
There would be less rejoicing on this hospitable shore,
And if the bill collectors had refused to hunt us out
Our nation would be less inclined to chortle and to shout.

The report that Mr. Johnson intends to remain in France will not start any international complications—that is, unless France threatens to send him back.

It is said that Frank Chance gains five pounds every time he wins a ball game. At his present rate he may, in the course of years, become heavy enough to classify as a featherweight.

Charley Murphy may be justified in protesting against incompetent umpires, but if all the incompetents were driven from baseball, perchance a magnate or two would be looking for a new job.

Frank Chance thinks the Athletics will win, thereby demonstrating that he is not an original thinker.

Quoth a headline: "Ball Players Oppose Cut in Salary." We have always insisted that ball players greatly resemble human beings.

When Baker Borton is not traveling from the minors to the majors he is on his way back. Some day he may meet and trip himself.

The sensation of the year in the National League is the fact that the Phillies have meandered into the midst of July without having fractured a flock of legs.

SPORT.

Of all the sports I ever knew the one I love the most
Is sitting in a baseball park behind a great big post.

If baseball magnates had the interests of the public at heart (lawfter) they would build grandstands with glass posts. Or they would furnish each man who sits behind a post with an X-ray machine.

St. Louis has just discovered that there is gambling on baseball, thereby demonstrating that it has just recovered from an attack of blindness.

A chain, as a highbrow once remarked, is no stronger than its weakest link. Baseball is no better than its magnates.

When we think it over, this is an awful thing to say about baseball.

What puzzles us is that the magnates have not thought of charging extra money when there is an extra inning game.

Joe Rivers, who broke a milkman's jaw with a wallop, has learned that dentists and milkmen do not belong to the same lodge.

We note by the papers that Debs is winning in a walk. If this were to be printed around election time one would think some copy reader was trying to kid the public.

The gent who put up the kale to support the Porter races is one of our best little spendthrifts. If not, he is affected by the heat.

R. Zeider, the well known planter, announces that the harvesting of his bunion crop has been a complete success.

Mr. Zeider is said to be a clever youth, but he overlooked a golden opportunity. While he was under the anesthetic he could have had several cubic yards of nose removed.

Al Palzer and Georges Carpentier have been matched to engage in a conflict in France. And yet there are skeptics who claim that the dead never come back.

Jack Dillon has split with his manager, demonstrating that he is a bona fide pugilist. A bona-fide pugilist always splits with his manager when he starts to make any money.

Horse racing is one of the most popular of our sports. It is hard to believe otherwise when we note that they are giving away tickets.

ROUGH STUFF.

Perchance it is the lowbrow stuff in all our human blood,
But I always feel a thrill of joy intense
When a roughneck swings a hefty bat and makes a mighty thud
And the ball goes sailing over yonder fence.

Richards Wins Two Races and a Bride

Well, Tex Richards "went and done it."

Last week a story appeared that if Richards, champion motorcycle rider of Dixie, won two races at the last Drome meet he would win himself a bride.

He won both races.

But, of course, having been faked before, the public put it down as a press agent's myth.

The odd part about it is that the story was true.

It leaked out to-day that on Saturday afternoon Wilmer Richards, of Dallas, Texas, was married to Miss Tona Taylor, of Atlanta. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. A. Little at his residence, Forest avenue and Boulevard.

BROU'S INJECTION—A PERMANENT CURE

of the most obstinate cases guaranteed in from 3 to 6 days; no other treatment required. Sold by all druggists.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Johnny Kilbane has decided to don the padded mitts again. The champion signed articles yesterday to box Mat Brock in a 12-round bout at Cleveland on Labor Day. The fighters have agreed to weigh 122 pounds at 3 o'clock.

* * *

Billy Gibson, manager of the Garden A. C., New York, is trying to induce Lightweight Champion Ritchie to meet Leach Cross in a 10-round bout next month. Gibson thinks the fight would draw $35,000, of which he offers Ritchie a 50-per cent guarantee.

* * *

Charley Ledoux, the French bantamweight champion, and Kid Williams, of Baltimore, will clash in a scheduled 20-round battle at Vernon, Cal., on Tuesday night. Both boys are in splendid shape and each is confident of victory. The betting favors the Baltimore lad at odds of 2 to 1.

* * *

Willie Ritchie, Joe Rivers and Leach Cross, all of whom have been in the public eye of late, fight under assumed names. In fact, a big percentage of the more prominent scrappers use stage names in the ring.

* * *

Frankie Russell threatens to be the next ring idol with New Orleans' fighting fans. Frankie was given a knockout decision over Johnny Lore, the other night, and is now in line for a match with Charlie White, the Chicago whirlwind.

* * *

Danny Morgan, the talkative manager of Jack Britton, is hot over a match with Willie Ritchie for his protege. Morgan says he will give Ritchie a $10,000 side bet and will also get the club to stage the mill. This is a pretty strong line of chatter for even a man of Mr. Morgan's reputation.

* * *

Jack Dillon, claimant of the middleweight title, has signed articles to battle Toni Caponi in a 12-round set-to at Winnipeg on August 8. Dillon should have little trouble in defeating the Italian scrapper.

* * *

Despite his many years of service in the boxing game, Jim Flynn continues to reap in the dough. The Pueblo fireman is now billed to take on Gunboat Smith in a 10-round affair at New York the early part of next month.

* * *

When Al Palzer arrives in Paris all arrangements will be made for his scrap with the French heavyweight champion, Georges Carpentier. It is said they will get a $15,000 purse.

* * *

Friends of Ad Wolgast are begging the ex-champion to beat it to the farm and get into shape for a return engagement with Ritchie. There are still many who think that the "Michigan Wildcat" would have a great chance to regain his title if he would only get into real fighting shape.

* * *

Frankie Whitney, well known among local boxing followers, will probably make his next fight at Denver. A fight promoter in the Colorado city is after Whitney to meet Eddie Johnson in August. The pair clashed about two months ago with honors even.

* * *

Strenuous efforts are being made by Tommy Burns, ex-heavyweight champion and manager of Arthur Pelky, to arrange a match between his man and Gunboat Smith, to be fought in one of the California clubs. Burns is confident Pelky will defeat Smith if they meet.

* * *

Bud Anderson, the Oregon lightweight, will not fight for six months, according to his manager. Anderson is convalescing rapidly from his operation for appendicitis last Thursday.

INGRATITUDE.

The magnate reeled to his auto—
"Oh, take me to my yacht!"
He moaned, "My heart is broken—
And the day is very hot.
I can not join the thousands
Who watch those ingrates play.
"I hear"—a sob—"they claim I've
No right to cut their pay!"

* * *

CHAMPION RITCHIE, we understand, is undecided whether to take a trip to Europe or engage in another bout of fisticuffs. If anyone wants to speculate against the trip to Europe we know where he can place a small sum.

* * *

A BIG LEAGUE MAGNATE IS showing evidences of the effect of the recent hot spell. He says that the chief objection to cutting ball games to catch trains is that it is "grossly unfair to the public." Sure! He really means the people who pay to see a whole ball game.

"FROM NOW ON," announces Johnny Dundee, "I will appear only as a lightweight." Admire his honesty in avoiding the word "fight."

JIMMY TAMSETT, SORE AT ARREST, TO QUIT DIAMOND

ALBANY, N. Y., July 15.—James L. Tamsett, manager and owner of the Albany State League Baseball Club and shortstop of the Memphis team nearly ten years ago, announces that because of the agitation against Sunday baseball and the subsequent arrest of himself and three Troy players on Sunday, June 29, he will withdraw from the game.

Manager Tamsett and the Troy men will be separately tried before Justice of the Peace Christopher Valentine, of the town of Colonie.

Hot Days Breed Lice By Millions, Keep Close Watch for Them

Cholera, a Much Dreaded Disease, Easily Stamped Out By This Method.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Judge Marshall: I have two hens that have a looseness of the bowels, and I fear it is cholera. Will you please give me a remedy and oblige.

Yours truly, J. R. C.

Conyers, Ga.

Reply: Many people want to jump at conclusions and call everything cholera that seems to trouble their chickens. This is especially true, if there is any sign of bowel trouble. While many of the ailments have no semblance of cholera, it is perhaps a good thing to get uneasy and be ready to investigate; with such a state of affairs, something is very likely to be done to better their condition. Very often, during hot weather, you will find a number of your hens stalking about the yard in a slow, listless manner, stopping to straighten their feathers and pick at themselves. You can just put it down in your notebook that they are being overrun with mites which are simply sucking their very life blood from them, which will cause them to have bowel trouble, and if the pests are not removed, it will not take very many days to see the death of many good hens. These hot days breed lice by the millions when they are allowed a start. After a few hens have died of such trouble of the bowels, caused by lice or mites, others may be affected by contagion, and real cholera is brought forth. In real cholera the fowl assumes a very tired or listful gait, similar to the one when lice is the trouble, but the discharge of the bowels is of a watery nature, green and bright yellow in color. The comb soon turns black or very dark purple; at times there is a foamy discharge from the mouth, but not always. When this is present it indicates cold in connection with the bowel trouble. When these decided symptoms of cholera are present a prompt separation should ensue, putting those showing a decided case promptly under the sod, making a place for all showing slight symptoms, to get them away from the well ones. In the drinking water for the well ones and the slightly indisposed ones, add one-fourth ounce of sulpho-carbonate of zinc to each gallon of water. Cleaning the premises is a most important item at such a time. The runs and houses should be thoroughly cleaned, scraped and swept and the droppings covered with soil. After this is done, a thorough sprinkling should be done with water into which has been stirred one pint of sulphuric acid to twenty gallons of water. The stamping out of the disease depends largely upon the thoroughness of the cleaning. Cholera is a much dreaded disease, but with prompt and vigorous methods of the right kind, it is easily stamped out. The advice for those who do not have it is to do the cleaning job, anyway, and thus prevent its appearance at all.

THEY ARE VERY SCARCE

YOU WILL find it hard to buy a desirable 50-foot building lot on the North Side for less than $2,500 or $3,000. These same lots could be bought three years ago for $700 to $1,000. This is the small investor's opportunity. Buy them partially developed, in the RIGHT SPOT, on easy terms—CHEAP, and sell the finished product.

Between the Ansley Park golf course and Piedmont avenue is the most STRATEGICALLY situated undeveloped property in Fulton County—owned by the shrewdest investors. This is the day of the SMALL INVESTOR, and they are making money fast in this section. Those who have bought in 1913 will double their money when the county finishes the roads in this neighborhood, and this is going to be done.

There is 100 per cent profit in our 60-foot lots at $10 down and $10 per month. Fifty-odd have been sold.

The Balkan Nations, Turned Butchers, Have Outraged Humanity

The Balkan races have forfeited the respect of civilization.

Saving only Greece, which holds to the elements of humanity and Christian warfare, the Balkan races within the fortnight have proven themselves to be a horde of murderous savages, of whom the arch savage and murderer is Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

There was never such a fall in history so swift, so sudden—from fame to infamy—from heroism to shame.

The world of civilization was with the Balkans in their war. It was blazoned as almost a holy war—the war of the Christian nations against the Unspeakable and Heathen Turk—the last nemesis of civilization upon centuries of butchery and cycles of barbarity.

The crimson ghosts of Albania and Zeitoun—the holocausts of Christian martyrs incinerated in Turkish fires, the battalions of Christians butchered because they were Christians, the pictures of infants bayoneted before their mothers' eyes, and mothers murdered, with outrage preceding or following fast on murder—aroused the public protest of the Christian world.

Every voice in Christendom rang for Bulgaria and the Balkans. Every civilized prayer was theirs. The Georgian helped to lead and vocalize the great procession of American sentiment that bade godspeed to the Balkan soldiers of the Cross.

And their battle was magnificently won. All records of history were equalled if not surpassed on the battlefields of this modern and magnificent crusade.

Step by step the Unspeakable Turk was driven back from his battlefields of murder. Inch by inch the Crescent yielded to the Cross.

Bulgaria swept from Adrianople to Chatalja. Greek battleships blocked the transportation of Turkish troops and provisions of war. Servia marched from her own victorious battlefields to reinforce the Bulgarians in the crisis at Adrianople and Chatalja, and with the allied legions thundering at the despairing gates of Constantinople, Southwestern Europe passed from the Crescent to Christ, and a great new nation seemed to have been born from the Slavonic races to rewrite history and to shift the balance of power from the elder monarchies to the plains of Thrace—now consecrated to liberty and humanity.

It was an epoch in human history. It was an Armageddon rich in the righteous triumph of the right above the wrong. And in its glorious aftermath the annals of the Christian races should have been remade and amplified.

But almost in a night the scene has changed. The peace of London became the proclamation of a progressive savagery. The men who endured like martyrs and fought like lions could not win like men, but quarreled like jackals over the spoils of victory.

Bulgaria, first in battle, was foremost in her greed, and her crimson hands, wet with heathen blood, and presuming on their strength, reached out to grasp the throats of Christian allies and to seize the territory that Greece and Servia had helped like heroes to achieve. Friends fastened their fangs into each other's vitals with a ferocity fiercer than they had shown their common foe.

The Balkan armies seem to have become as barbarous as the Turks.

Their hatred for the Turk was as nothing to their hatred for each other.

The hideous greed of territory blinded their eyes to every sentiment of Christianity and to every creed of Christ.

They caught from the Turk his bloodiest butcheries and branded them upon their fratricidal strife. The Bulgars at Kilkiss and Kurkut burned alive seven hundred men before their tortured wives with as fine a savagery as ever brutalized the Turk. The Serb at Belgrade shouted jeers and hisses into the dying ears of Bulgarian prisoners, brought from the battle fronts, and hand to hand with fist and foot, with tooth and nail, like primeval savages, fought Bulgar and Serb, who had carried the Cross of Christ in triumph above the infidel and Unspeakable Turk.

The Balkan fortnight behind us is an outrage upon the whole Christian world. These lapsed Christians, these transformed savages of greed, have within ten days lost the sympathy of humanity and their place among civilized nations. They have struck a staggering blow at the faith they followed and their religion and ours they have defiled.

The nations that cried godspeed to the Balkan armies of yesterday are ready now to cry, "Down with the newborn butchers of the Danube," and the world is ready to approve and applaud Austria or any other power that will repossess the territory so unworthily held and proceed to govern the people so obviously incapable and so basely unequal to the task of governing themselves.

The Metal Workers

We Live in the Age of Steel, He Says. Steel is the Synonym of Civilization and the Badge of Prosperity.

By ELBERT HUBBARD
Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

I.

WE live in the age of steel. Steel is the synonym of civilization and the badge of prosperity. When the railroads are buying steel and extending their lines, we are prosperous. The farmer builds barns, fences broad acres, puts up silos, and the young folks make homes. Iron and steel enter into every building project.

America, by reason of her enormous consumption of metals, has earned the title of "The Land of Steel." We are a nation of builders.

Progress is only possible where there is mutuality and co-operation—where we see the seeming paradox of individual liberty harnessed to the car of common weal.

To certain persons of "artistic temperament" the term "commercialism" is anathema. They see no beauty in the smokestack, the skyscraper, the huge mills, the flying locomotive.

Man at the Forge.

They perceive only the dewdrop, the lily, the clouds, the cobwebs, the moonshine. They rave about the grotesque gargoyle upon some old church-tower, but can not imagine the chimney yonder, as it gives out its incense of commerce, a monument to the industry of man.

They rhapsodize about the sunset, but fail to see the magnificence of the man at the forge—framed in glowing gold, wresting steel from stones.

And again we hear men speak of the sordidness of industrialism "The dragnet of avariciousness enmeshes us; the collections for foreign missions show a lamentable decrease, and the automobile industry is booming."

The soap-box reformer spiels of the luxuries of the rich, and draws a harrowing contrast between the Brussels carpet and the elbow cushions of these parasites and the laboring classes.

And some few, mistaking the shadow for the substance, the mirage of ease for the oasis of success, leave the beaten, upward track, and slide down the toboggan of inertia into oblivion.

The vast majority of us, though, realize that industrialism is the lifeblood of the nation; that nothing contributes more to a nation's greatness than its men and women who work; and that true progress is the natural resultant of a people bound together with the sympathy and mutuality incidental thereto.

We are moving onward. Sometimes we whirl like a dervish, remaining almost stationery; at others we outdo the "Limited." We are now alive to the necessity for a sound mind and a healthy body. And we also realize that a healthy body is conducive to intelligent thinking and wise decision.

Mammoth Industries.

Business development is possible only through continuous, concentrated effort and conscientious, painstaking labor. We have countless examples of that truth in the annals of our country's achievements.

Mammoth industries have evolved from small beginnings by the application of those vital principles. Labor has until recently been wholly associated with the pick and shovel, the ax and saw. It is now, however, pretty generally recognized that both bodily and mental sweat is necessary to the successful issue of business enterprise.

"From every man according to his ability, to every man according to his need." One may be a hewer of wood or a drawer of water; another a captain of industry. One may be a toiler in the valley, and still another in the observatory on the mountaintop, reading the signs of the times. Yet what matters it, if they are all co-operating?

The manufacturer needs the miner, the miner the manufacturer. They both need the farmer, and he needs them both.

Brain? Yes. Brawn? Yes. But brawn and brain is the combination. Together they can move the mountains, link countries together, or slice a continent in half. By their exercise we reach up into the clouds and bind the lightning to our chariot wheels or utilize its power in manufacture.

We annihilate space by wireless telegraphy, we spurn the earth with our aeroplanes. We dig and burrow, pump and mine; we tap Nature's stores, and put harness on her forces.

We plow, we plant, and reap; we drain, and irrigate. We make gardens of waste places, and the desert to blossom like the rose.

When trials come, we meet them with manliness.

When difficulties arise, we seek their solution. We are becoming more self-reliant and confident every day. Superstition and the shackles of the unknown fetter us no longer. We are gods in embryo. We have no limitation but ourselves.

Iron is the most abundant and useful of all metals, and has been known from the remotest time.

The ancient Egyptians were familiar with the process of working iron and undoubtedly knew how to make steel.

Iron in Ancient Days.

Tools found in their temples were made of this metal, and if the British Museum is to be seen an ax-head from the pyramid of Gizeh dating B. C. 4000.

The Assyrians and Babylonians were also skilful workers in iron. The Greeks obtained their knowledge of iron-working from these older nations. The Romans learned the art from the Greeks, and developed it in England, where it had been in operation since B. C. 55.

Other European nations were also workers of iron at an early date, using rude forges and crude methods.

For several centuries progress was slow, and the manufacture of iron or steel was not considered of sufficient importance to be called an industry.

Not until 1350, when the manufacture of cast iron and steel was inaugurated in Germany, did the industry assume any importance.

The fuel used for the smelting of the ore was charcoal. In 1558, the British Parliament (with the prescience which is a permanent characteristic of that august body) passed laws restricting the building of ironworks in some parts of the country, and forbidding the cutting down of trees for fuel. This cutting down of supplies led to the search for a substitute for charcoal for fuel, and in 1619 a man by the name of Dudley used coal for the purpose of smelting. The plan was not received with favor and fell into disuse.

HIS CAREER

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

JOHN SMITH was a baby so cunning and bright
That his parents stood gaping from morning till night,
When crowing and chuckling, as most babies will,
He was thought to possess a comedian's skill.
When quiet and weary, perhaps half asleep,
"My word," said his parents, "that baby is deep!
We'll make him a teacher,
The dear little joker,
Or maybe a preacher
Or lawyer or broker."

John Smith went through college ahead of his friends,
And started with fervor to rough-hew his ends.
His efforts, however, all seemed to fall flat.
For he fizzled at this and he foozled at that.
He was kicked out so often by taskmasters mean
That he looked like the film in a picture machine.
Some people are teachers
And doctors and lawyers
And brokers and preachers
That ought to be sawyers.

LETTERS FROM GEORGIAN READERS

VICTORY FOR WOMEN.

Editor The Georgian:

I wish to thank you for the editorial, "A Great Victory for Southern Women." It was timely and in the right spirit. Georgia women have a right to the use of the State Capitol for meetings and there is no good reason why they should be denied the privilege. MRS. A. H. C.

OBJECT LESSONS.

Editor The Georgian:

I enjoy reading The Georgian, especially the editorial page. A tell my friends that the last page of The Georgian is worth infinitely more than double the price of the paper. I save each last page and re-read them and read them to my young friends—the schoolboys. Hal Coffman's pictures are great sermons. Dorothy Dix is a sane and sensible writer. So is Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Drs. Serviss and White. The picture by Coffman showing an old sinner standing reared back in a bar drinking and telling what he used to be was a great object lesson.

MULHALL AVERS 'LOBBY' ROUTED TOM JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, July 15.—When the Overman Lobby Committee convened to-day Senator Reed read a letter from the late Vice President J. S. Sherman to M. M. Mulhall, arranging for a meeting in New York with James W. VanCleave, late president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

A letter to W. D. Sayles, of Cleveland, dated July 16, 1907, showed that the national association was prepared to aid in a campaign to defeat Mayor Tom L. Johnson for re-election in Cleveland. A series of communications indicated that agents of the association constantly were advising with the late Vice President James S. Sherman regarding the political policy of the national association.

What Beat Tom Johnson.

Before 1907 Mulhall had been in St. Louis to aid in breaking a strike in the Blue Ribbon shoe factory.

Mulhall was in Cleveland doing political work during the Tom L. Johnson mayoralty campaign of 1907.

"I went there at the direction of the National Association of Manufacturers, and we beat Johnson," explained Mulhall.

"There is every indication that in our past campaign we have with us the majority of the leading Republican Congressmen and Senators, and men higher up than that, too," wrote Fred C. C. Schwedtman, secretary to VanCleave, to Mulhall, in August, 1907.

Gives First Clean Bill.

Thomas J. Lyons, Republican, of Augusta, Me., who co-operated with Mulhall in electing Congressman Littlefield, received the first certificate of character Mulhall has given anyone.

"I think he was absolutely honest," said Mulhall. "He was not in my employ."

In a letter to Mulhall, September 5, 1907, Schwedtman referred with satisfaction to the fact that President Taft referred at great length to the national association.

Mulhall explained that the greatest efforts were made to conduct political maneuvers secretly. Men were referred to by number. Mulhall was No. 11, Congressman Littlefield No. 8 and the late Vice President Sherman No. 8.

Atlanta Regiment to Return Wednesday—Fondly Remember Visit of Mrs. Slaton's Party.

Unique souvenirs of the visit of the gubernatorial party to St. Simons Saturday, during the encampment there of the Fifth Regiment, Georgia National Guard, are the two shells presented to Mrs. John Marshall Slaton and Mrs. Frederick J. Paxon.

The shells are of brass, ten inches in length and three inches in diameter. The one presented to Mrs. Slaton was the first fired in the seventeen-gun salute to Governor Slaton when he and his party arrived on the island; that given to Mrs. Paxon was the one which she fired at sunset.

The two shells will be engraved by Maier & Berkele, the inscriptions citing the circumstances under which they were presented.

In addition to the presentation of the two shells, Mrs. Slaton and Mrs. Paxon were given the accompanying poem, written in their honor by the Atlanta Artillery Firing Squad:

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 15.—The boys of Atlanta's militia regiment, the Fifth Infantry, Georgia National Guard, encamped here, packed their equipment early Tuesday morning in preparation for the annual cross-country hike. Officially the hike began shortly before noon and will continue until Wednesday noon, when the boys will return to St. Simon's "strike" camp, receive their pay and start for home.

Tuesday's hike is the second big feature of the camp within the last three days following the visit of the Governor and his party Saturday and Sunday.

The boys still hark back to the big dance Saturday night, in which hundreds of Brunswick's most beautiful belles participated, besides the members of Governor Slaton's party.

In a measure the dance and the good times served to cause the boys to forget all the discomforts of camp life. Thus far the hospital corps has had nothing to do except treat sunblistered backs.

WOODWARD AIDS CHIEF IN VICE CRUSADE

Mayor Woodward entered the fight which Chief Beavers is waging against vice in Atlanta Tuesday when he told of a negro dive and blind tiger which he said had been reported to him Tuesday morning by a man whose name he refuses to make public.

This man, Mayor Woodward declared, had told him he had seen policemen passing through an alley in the direction of the blind tiger, though none of them had actually been seen to enter the place.

Chief Beavers ordered an investigation.

Captain Poole has been given particular instructions to probe the report that policemen visit the place.

Declaring that 50 per cent of the women arrested during the months of June and July were young girls, Mrs. Mary Bohnefeld, police matron, Tuesday afternoon placed the blame for present conditions on the immodest dress now worn by women, and also on the paint and powder demanded by the dictates of fashion.

"The dress that women are wearing nowadays," she declared, "is a crime, and is the cause of the downfall of so many young girls. Men are encouraged to make advances when they see a girl on the streets, wearing immodest and indecent clothing and with her face painted and powdered."

Orders closing two boarding houses were issued from headquarters this morning. Mrs. Lulu Bell, whose hotel at Fair and Peters streets was raided last week, resulting in the arrest of half a dozen persons and the telling of a white slave story by Effie Drummond, was ordered to vacate the place and close it up.

The negro joint at 76 Chestnut street, which was raided by the police Sunday morning, was also ordered closed by Chief Beavers Tuesday. Several white men were arrested when this raid was made, and evidence has been obtained that the place was one of the most vicious in the city.

BOY KILLED BY KICK OF HORSE

Murder Plot Charged to Widow and Barber

SEEK MAN IN CRAWFORD MYSTERY

Heirs of Capitalist Accuse Friend of Widow of Aiding in Poison Plan.

Declaring that Joshua B. Crawford was the victim of a murder plot between Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford and Fred Lumb, a New York barber, J. S. James, attorney for the heirs-at-law to the $250,000 estate, announced Tuesday afternoon that he would swear out a warrant for Lumb's arrest on the charge of murder and have him brought back to Atlanta for prosecution.

"Lumb and Mrs. Crawford planned this whole thing in Florida," said James. "They planned to turn the estate into cash and get away. Lumb visited Mrs. Crawford in Atlanta before her husband died. He was here when he died, and remained in the city until two months after the funeral. We have evidence that will convince any fair-minded jury this pair plotted to murder the old man, and we will produce it at the proper time.

"I will swear out a warrant for the arrest of Lumb on a charge of murder this afternoon. If he remains in America we will bring him to Atlanta to prosecute him."

Coercion Also Charged.

"I would cut my throat from ear to ear before I would degrade myself by marrying this woman," is a remark made in reference to Mrs. Crawbord by Joshua B. Crawford before their marriage, accoding to the testimony of Mrs. L. C. Dillingsly Tuesday afternoon in the civil hearing of the $250,000 will case.

Mrs. Dillingsly was one of the witnesses called to establish the contention of the other heirs that the marriage was forced upon Crawford, and that he was not in his right mind when the ceremony was performed.

By another witness it was sought to prove that Crawford at this time was almost constantly intoxicated, and to set up the probability that he was in this condition when he entered into marriage.

Mrs. Dillingsly lived at the Crawford residence on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death. She recited a number of conversations she said she had with him, and asserted that Mrs. Crawford at one time attempted to choke a Miss Scott, the sister of the witness.

She said that on two different occasions her sister was awakened in the night by smothering sensations as though something had been placed over her face, and that each time she

Cotton Man Ends His Life Because of New Law on Bales

AUGUSTA, July 15.—Promulgation of new rules requiring cotton bales for export to be of uniform size and condition is said to have preyed on Joseph Settegast's mind so that he committed suicide here to-day. He was found in his bed with a bullet hole in his right temple. eH grasped a revolver in his hand.

Settegast was 50 years old and was one of the leading cotton dealers in Georgia.

It is said the new rules regulating bales would have forced him to change his methods to such an extent as to cause him big financial loss.

Chamber Urged to Employ Milk Expert

The report of the Chamber of Commerce milk committee was discussed at a meeting of the officers and members of the advisory committee, directory and chairman of all committees at a luncheon at the Piedmont Hotel Tuesday afternoon.

The committee recommends that the Chamber employ Dr. Charles North, of Philadelphia, a milk expert, to investigate the city's milk supply. This portion of the report was referred to the finance committee after its adoption by the directors, and has not yet been acted upon.

Temperance Bill Is Tabled in Committee

The Temperance Committee of the Senate gave the Anti-Saloon League forces a set-back Tuesday morning by tabling the Searcy bill which was offered at the request of the temperance people. Indications are the league lobbyists will have a hard fight to get it before the Senate.

The opponents of the bill assert it will not do because it places an unfair burden of responsibility on the carriers.

$1,200 Relief Fund Given to Mrs. Yancey

The fund of $1,200 collected by the members of the Sheriff's force for the benefit of David Yancey, the court deputy who was killed in a battle with a drug-crazed negro several weeks ago, was turned over to Mrs. Yancey Tuesday. With the amount collected by the newspapers and the Sheriff's office, Mrs. Yancey will have sufficient money, it is thought, to raise the mortgage on her home and provide for her children.

BOSTON, July 15.—The bursting of a steam pipe on board the battleship Nebraska at the Charleston navy yard this afternoon killed Charles Agena, 19 years old, ordinary seaman, and injureed several others.

1 KILLED, 1 DYING IN 2 MISHAPS

Children Victims in Accidents in Different Parts of City at Nearly Same Hour.

A 9-year-old boy was killed outright and a 5-year-old boy received a fractured skull which probably will prove fatal, by being kicked by a horse and a mule Tuesday afternoon. The two accidents occurred in different parts of the city less than half an hour apart.

Robert Stewart, the boy who was killed, was the son of Mrs. Belle Stewart, of 63 Ella street. He was riding a horse and as he turned the corner at Wells and tSewart streets the animal became frightened and threw him.

The boy fell directly in front of the frightened horse and the animal whirled and kicked him in the head, killing him instantly.

Jefffe Barryhill, 5 years old, was kicked in the head by a mule belonging to his father while playing in the front yard of his home at 808 Marietta street.

The child was sitting in the grass, playing with his toys, and the mule was wandering around eating grass. The animal came close to the boy, and the child reached out and placed his hand on the hind leg of the mule.

The animal kicked, one of his hoofs striking the child just above the left eye, causing a fracture of the skull.

The Barryhill boy was hurried to Grady Hospital, where surgeons say there is little hope for his life.

Would Save Bryan From Lecture Work

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Senator Bristow of Kansas, to-day introduced a resolution requiring the President to advise the Senate at his earliest opportunity what salary would be sufficient for a Secretary of State to maintain his establishment in Washington without recourse to the lecture platform.

The resolution followed Secretary Bryan's statement that he can not live on his salary.

'Jap Exterminator' Tries to See Wilson

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Gus Bess, an inventor, visited the White House to-day with a model of his latest flying machine wrapped in a piece of oil cloth. He demanded to see the President because he has "a machine which will wipe out all the Japanese and make the United States the first nation in the world."

Bess was informed that the President was "out."

Mrs. Cornwallis West Is Given First Decree

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 15.—A first decree was granted to-day to Mrs. George Cornwallis West in her divorce suit. She was not forced to go into a recital of domestic affairs.

Mrs. Cornwallis West is the mother of Winston Churchill, first Lord of the Admiralty.

Asks Divorce From Man She Says Has Two Other Wives

That she married a man and lived with him for almost a year, then learned he had two other wives living and had just buried a third, is the experience recounted by Mrs. I. L. Davis, formerly Miss Grace Bradshaw, of Atlanta, in a petition for divorce filed in Superior Court Tuesday morning. The husband resides at No. 607 Marietta street.

Mrs. Davis asserts she was married to I. L. Davis in Atlanta in November, 1912, and left him in January, 1913, when she learned of his previous marriages. She says he has not been divorced from either of his other living wives.

In June, 1907, she says Davis married Miss Evie Whitten in Atlanta, using the name of Ivory York. In October, 1910, she claims, he married Miss Martha Mahatney in Knoxville, Tenn. His first wife, who is dead, was from South Carolina.

Fight Over Painter's Viscera Is Resumed

BALTIMORE, MD., July 15.—The legal battle for the viscera of E. O. Painter, the dead Jacksonville fertilizer man, was resumed before Judge Duffy in the Circuit Court to-day. The session, which was taken up by the examination of Dr. Charles Glaser, who made the analysis of the Painter organs, was adjourned at 2 o'clock. The case will be reopened Thursday morning.

Dr. Glaser reiterated his previous statement that there was no poison found in Painter's vital organs. He said the viscera is still in a condition to permit another analysis.

2 'September Morns' On a Hot July Night

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 15.—Indignant relatives of Miss Mabel VanHice and Miss Agnes Nelson today asked the Vito County authorities to use their best efforts to locate and arrest the joker who caused the girls to come home naked last evening.

It happened that Miss VanHice and Miss Nelson did not find as secluded a spot as they thought when they left their clothes on the bank of Big Walnut Creek and went in for a plunge. Someone found their garments and carried them away. The girls waited until it was dark and then hurried home.

Rutledge Man Hurt In Fall in Lift Shaft

W. D. Parker, of Rutledge, Ga., fell through the levator shaft of the building of the Ward-Truitt Drygoods Company, at Madison avenue and Hunter street, Tuesday afternoon, and was seriously injured.

Mr. Rutledge fell one floor to the basement. When he was picked up a minute later, he was unconscious. He was taken to the Grady Hospital.

Employees of the firm declare that Rutledge, who is a it shortsighted, mistook the opening of the elecator shaft for a doorway and stepped into the shaft.

$1,000 in Stamps on Safeblower Suspect

Robert E. Barry, United States Postoffice Inspector, with headquarters in the Federal Building, received a telegram Tuesday morning notifying him of the capture of a suspected safecracker at a railroad station in Chattanooga.

More than $1,000 in postage stamps was found in his possession. He gave his name as Albert D. Cammeyer and his home as Green Cove, Fla.

Senator Beveridge and family are now in New Hampshire.

HOLLOWAY ASSERTS HE WAS TOLD OF NEGRO

Factory Watchman Recalls Visit to Plant of Man Who Heard Conley Confess

Further corroboration of several of the important details in the remarkable affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance agent and teacher, who swore he heard Jim Conley confess killing a girl, came Tuesday in a statement by E. F. Holloway, day watchman at the National Pencil Factory.

Holloway substantiated in every particular the story of Mincey's visit to the factory the Tuesday following the crime and recalled the general trend of the conversation, which was practically as Mincey related it in his signed statement published exclusively in The Georgian Monday. The defense has obtained an affidavit from Holloway as to the circumstances of the day.

"I remember Mincey coming here Tuesday," said Holloway. "He was a quiet, retiring fellow, and I guess we scared him out. There were a lot of people in the factory, and the excitement after the murder was at its height. Several detectives were there and there were a score of people bothering the detectives and the factory authorities with their theories on the killing.

Wanted Negroes Arrested.

"This man Mincey came up to me and said he wanted to see Mr. Frank. I told him Mr. Frank was not there, but that I could take care of him. He askes me how many negroes worked in the factory, as I recall it, and I told him seven or eight.

"'You'd better have everyone of them arrested,' he replied. 'I know the one that did it.'

"'But there weren't any negroes working in the factory Saturday except the night watchman,' I told him, and I said that I didn't see any negroes at all when I left at 11:45 on account of the holiday. I got a little sore at him because he kept pestering me about the negroes, and I guess he got mad because I wouldn't pay any attention to him.

"Finally, Herbert Schiff or somebody else turned to the crowd and told them they all would have to leave the building, as it wasn't possible to make any progress in the investigation with them scattered all over every floor and in the basement. This man Mincey went out with them, and that was the last I thought about his story until the day I found Jim Conley washing his shirt in the factory, something he never did before, so far as I know.

Told of Seeing Conley.

"After this Conley was arrested and I was pretty positive that he killed the girl, although I didn't have any means of knowing that he even was in the factory until he confessed it of his own accord after he denied it half a dozen times. Then I told some of the people connected with the factory about Mincey, and when I saw him next he told all about the reasons that he felt positive it was Conley.

"He said that he had met Conley the afternoon that Mary Phagan was murdered and that Conley had boasted that he had killed a girl. Mincey said he met him somewhere over near where Conley lived. I don't know whether it was at Electric and Carter streets or not. He said he didn't think much of it at the time, as he had supposed that Conley in his drunken stupor was merely bragging about his part in some negro row. He told me that Conley had threatened him, saying:

"'I killed a girl already to-day; I don't want to kill nobody else.'

"After this I guess they got his affidavit."

CRAWFORD HEIRS SEEK MISSING WITNESS

New York Scoured For Barber, Said to Have Heard Death Threats.

saw Mrs. Crawford returning to her bed.

Ordeal Fails to Shake Mrs. Crawford's Poise.

By EVELYN WREN.

With superb poise Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford surrendered Sunday morning and took up her abode in Fulton County jail. Monday, at 12:45, with the same self-possession, she signed the bonds which released her from imprisonment.

This horrible nightmare of accusation has brought more suffering than the humiliation of the few hours' imprisonment. The Tower was a quiet, restful spot and not uncomfortable, but the thoughts which accompany her night and day are almost unendurable. She has had to meet the accusation of the most dastardly crime of which a woman could be capable—that of committing a husband's murder by the very method which won his love and admiration.

Mrs. Crawford sat in the Tower cell waiting for the deputy, J. P. Miner, to bring the word which meant that she could go with her son-in-law, J. Lee Bennett, back to the cottage where Sallie May, her daughter, and the three grandchildren anxiously awaited her.

"Everyone has been so kind to me here," she said. "They have tried to make it seem better and to make me comfortable."

Gives Home Touch to Cell.

She was composed, without a trace of brazenness in her attitude. It was that of a kind, gentle, motherly woman—all woman—who had been thrust by circumstances into unusual surroundings. Her gratitude for the simple courtesies of the jailers showed the sympathetic nature with which she had always met the world.

A love story number of a familiar woman's magazine and current numbers of other housekeeping periodicals lay on the bed beside her. These and the big bunch of flowers broke the austerity of the prison room and gave it even the homelike touch which some women can bestow upon the most sordid quarters.

The magazines and flowers had helped the brave woman to endure the weary hours. She glanced toward the bed and smiled.

"Those magazines were brought in to me and I read several of the stories last night," said she. "Then I grew sleepy and dropped off for a good night's rest."

Looks Worn and Pale.

Mrs. Crawford looked a trifle worn and pale as the result of her first jail experience. She had eaten, though, and enjoyed a good dinner on Sunday. Sallie May, her daughter, had brought it—and Sallie May is her mother's imitator in culinary fields. She had had breakfast this morning, but had had little else to employ her time save to sit and think and wonder why and how people could be so cruel.

"I did not dream that there could be such cruelty in human nature. I never dreamed that animosity could carry them to such a length," said Mrs. Crawford, almost losing the control which she had evidenced. When the sobs were near, she stopped talking until she could recover her poise. There was no attempt to secure sympathy by complaint or by the little tricks known to most women.

Her face lighted up when we discussed cooking.

"I am a fine cook," she said. "No one can beat me at that, if I do say it. I like to cook, and folks always like my cooking."

Mrs. Crawford was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine and it was there that Joshua B. Crawford came in search of health and good care.

Does Not Rail at Heirs.

"It was my business and to my interest to make the hotel pay," she said. "I felt that the meals must be good in order to keep patronage. Somehow I could not get others to do it as I wanted it, so I did nearly every bit of the cooking myself. It tasted better."

"No, I just can't believe it," she said, as we turned from the interesting cooking discussion. "You see, I settled the estate with the Crawford heirs shortly after Mr. Crawford's death and they signed the agreement. They seemed perfectly satisfied. Now, they say that even four years ago they believed me guilty of this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford speaks of the charge of Joshua Crawford's nieces and nephews as a strange exhibition of cruelty and regards the matter as one mete for her sympathy. She does not give way to self-pity nor does she rail against the injustice of their acts. Rather does she accept the hideous nightmare as the result of peculiar, unfamiliar traits which she has never herself experienced.

She seems dazed and in a dream. "I just can't believe it. I can't realize it at all."

Never Loses Her Poise.

In this attitude she was led to the iron gates Sunday morning, heard the signal, waited and watched for the deputy to bring his jangling keys and slowly open the gates. She had heard the gate shut behind her and had gone through a second one.

Then entering the large, loitering elevator she had gone slowly up and up until she reached the floor of her prison room. Her room was the symbol of all the animosity, all the cruelty which she had known at the hands of the Crawfords.

The gates swung the same way Monday morning at the Tower, but the calm woman in black emerged from the austerity of captivity and saw the sunlight of high noon. She smiled and thanked every one who had been kind to her, delaying her departure to plan for the disposal of her big bunch of posies. Mary Belle Crawford left the Tower as she came—thoroughly poised and superbly womanly.

Tentative Rate Cuts Made to Rail Board

RALEIGH, July 15.—In a fourth effort to reach an agreement on interstate freight rates, the presidents of four railroads and a number of traffic managers held a conference with Governor Craig and the Corporation Commission to-day.

The carriers have offered what they say are substantial reductions in commodity rates, and they believe the acceptance of these reductions by the State will end the complaints of North Carolina merchants. The Southern, Seaboard, Norfolk Southern and Clinchfield systems were represented.

Wife of Cartersville Lawyer Gets Divorce

CARTERSVILLE, July 15.—Mrs. Betty R. Lyon was granted a divorce from T. J. Lyon, a well-known attorney, Monday afternoon when twelve divorce decrees were ordered in Bartow Superior Court. Lyon vigorously fought the suit, denying his wife's allegations, setting up counter-charges and pleading his own case. As both are prominent people, there was a crowded courtroom and much interest was manifested.

The jury returned a verdict in favor of Mrs. Lyon. Her grounds for a divorce were drunkenness and cruel treatment.

Adamson Family to Hold Reunion; Over 100 Members Coming

The Adamson family will be in town Friday, August 1. One hundred strong, they will gather at Grant Park from the four corners of the country and spend a joyful reunion, made more enjoyable by a barbecue prepared under the direction of an Adamson. To make this part of the feast completely "Adamsonesque," the negro cooks will also bear the family name of Adamson, being descended from slaves belonging to the Adamson family prior to '61.

Political strength will be displayed in the gathering. Chief of the political members of the family will be Congressman W. C. Adamson, who will journey from Washington to attend the reunion. With him will be "Bob" Adamson, Private Secretary to Mayor Gaynor, of New York, who is well known in Atlanta, his old home. His father, A. P. Adamson, of Rex, Ga., and Colonel R. W. Adamson, of Carrollton, Ga., are two of the Adamsons who conceived the idea of a yearly reunion. Both are widely known.

This will be the second reunion of the Adamson family, the first having been held at Carrollton last year.

Women Fight Duel; Shears as Weapons

OAKLAND, CAL., July 15.—In the seclusion of a flower garden and with an old grievance to settle two women fought a spectacular duel with shears in Oakland.

The duelists were Mrs. A. Hultz and her neighbor, Mrs. F. R. Ruley. As a result of their fight, Mrs. Hultz is in a critical condition in care of physicians, while her antagonist, less seriously hurt, is at the city prison.

'Man Can Get Drunk On Own Doorstep'

WASHINGTON, July 15.—"It is no crime to drink beer or whiskey on one's own doorstep," said Judge Pugh in court here, dismissing Robert Lee, charged with violating the new excise law.

The policeman said the prisoner's feet were on the sidewalk when the arrest was made. "Yes, but most of him was on his own doorstep," replied the court.

Fake Ballplayer Is Jailed; Judge a Fan

JERSEY CITY, July 15.—George Boylan, of this city, arraigned in court here charged with stealing his father's watch, told Judge Charles F. O'Brien, a knowing baseball fan, that he played shortstop on the Montreal International League club.

The judge then named the only shortstops who have played for Montreal this year. Boylan got thirty days.

WAGON TOPS, AS BOATS, FERRY BATTALION

Four Companies of Seventeenth Infantry Work Out New Way to Cross Stream.

A new method of crossing streams under actual conditions of warfare—the utilizing of the tops of the army wagons as boats—was worked out by a battalion of the Seventeenth Infantry. Companies I, I, K and M, at Lakewood Tuesday morning, under the personal supervision of General Evans, commander of the Department of the Gulf. Captain O. J. Charles commanded the battalion.

The test showed that a battalion of four companies and their full equipment can be transferred across a river 100 yards wide in from four to six hours' less time than is required under the old methods of building pontoon bridges or of cutting timber and making rafts.

Fourteen in One Top.

The troops approached the stream with their full war equipment. The tops of the army wagons were removed from the running gears and canvas was fastened on them to keep them from sinking.

Companies L and I crossed first, 32 men making the trip in two wagon tops fastened together. Their combined weight was estimated at 5,000 pounds. The first crossing was commanded by Captain Charles and Captain Beck.

Had Full Equipment.

Fourteen men were transferred across the stream in one wagon top, a combined weight of 2,100 pounds, under the command of Captain Carter, and Captain Young took the full equipment of the battalion across in one wagon box. The mules swam the creek.

General Evans and the other army officers expressed their satisfaction at the successful working out of the scheme, which has never before been tried in the army. Another battalion probably will be brought to Lakewood within a few days, and the experiment tried again.

Man Who Found Body Of Mack Spain Held

WAYCROSS, July 15.—More arrests in the mysterious robbery and murder of Mack Spain, the wealthy bachelor farmer whose body was found yesterday in a pond near his home, are expected to-day. Tom Bullard, aged 22, who found the murdered man's body, has been arrested on suspicion. It is reported remarks made by him caused officers to believe he knew something of the murder.

Efforts to locate relatives of the murdered man have failed. The body will be buried near his farm.

Slow Phone Service Lets Burglar Escape

Delay in making telephone connections allowed a man who attempted to rob the Sharp Drug Store at Marietta and Walton Streets to escape, Tuesday morning about 2 o'clock. The watchman of the Cathcart Storage Company, across the street, saw the burglar, and tried to telephone the police.

Before he could get a connection with headquarters the burglar left the place. No trace of him could be found when Policemen Anderson and Watson arrived.

Boy, 10, Leads Flight From Reformatory

MACON, July 15.—Led by Marvin Williford, the 10-year-old boy who has three times run away from the Georgia Industrial Home, four boys, all inmates of the institution, escaped Sunday afternoon. When arrested 24 hours later they were in an empty freight car, bound for Fitzgerald, the former home town of their leader.

Marvin Williford is the boy about whose recent whipping by Overseer W. F. Armor such a stir was raised.

BUTTON BEAUTY RACE STARTED WITH RUSH

Atlanta Seeks Prettier Girl Than Texas Belle, Chosen 'Goddess of Plenty.'

Atlanta's "button beauty" contest has caused the question to arise: Texas girl selected to represent the "Will the Atlanta beauty eclipse the 'Goddess of Plenty' on one of the new bills to be turned out by Uncle Sam?"

This young woman, Miss Ellen Evelyn James, of San Antonio, Tex., has attracted widespread attention by her fair face. She so appealed to Kenyon Cox, the artist who designed the new bill, that he said she must represent the 'Goddess of Plenty.'

Has Atlanta Prettier Girl?

Look at the face and see if you think Atlanta can furnish a prettier girl to adorn the "500,000 club" buttons?

The pretty girl contest has started with a grand rush. A number of Atlanta's most famous beauties are in at the start, and others, not so well known but exceedingly attractive, promise to make strong races.

Leading spirits in the "500,000 club" movement declare that no greater honor could be paid an Atlanta girl than to have her picture on the buttons of the people who are to boost Atlanta's population to 500,000 by 1920.

The accompanying coupons show how to enter candidates.

Windsor Tells City's Needs.

James P. Windsor, assistant cashier of the American National Bank, has written an interesting letter to The Georgian acknowledging receipt of the $25 prize for the best slogan. He commends The Georgian for its policy toward a half-million city and proceeds to give his ideas of what is needed.

The gist of his letter is an appeal for more parks and means of better recreation for the masses of the people, and a condemnation of strict enforcement of "blue laws." Here is his letter:

Praises Pretty Atlanta Girls.

To the Editor of The Georgian:

I acknowledge, with thanks, receipt of your check for $25, the prize awarded in the Georgian's interesting slogan contest.

Evidently the distinguished judges were also of the opinion that a successful slogan should be symbolic of Atlanta's beautiful women. For, while a salubrious climate, a desirable location, and influential newspapers have played an important part in the city's marvelous growth, the real answer to, "Why is Atlanta?" is her many beautiful women. It is they who inspire the wonderful Atlanta spirit, influence the casual visitor to locate here permanently; and when one's poor judgment takes him to other climes, it is the remembrance of them that brings him back home.

But the main object of our "500,000 Club" is to exert every effort to increase our population to the desired number within the next few years. This can and will be done when our civic bodies realize the fact that Atlanta is now lagging behind other cities in some respects, especially that of park improvements.

Solution of Vice Problems.

The solution of all vice problems, as well as those of crime, and the surest way to attract newcomers to any city, is to provide adequate facilities for recreation and amusement.

In other words there should be sincerity in our "boosting." So the question arises, is it really great to live in Atlanta?

To the capitalist, with his numerous facilities for pleasure, such as clubs, autos, commodious home, and the means to take frequent vacation trips to other cities and resorts, Atlanta, with its unequalled climate, is really a great place in which to live.

But to the average citizen—the man of limited means, such as the laboring man, the small salaried man or the young man just going into business, who must economize by force of circumstances—Atlanta offers few attractions or places of amusement at a moderate price, and to him it is a veritable workshop.

Atlanta is one of the few large cities without a down-town public park or breathing place. This feature should be provided in the plaza plan of bridging over the railroad tracks which now penetrate the heart of the city. At least $1,000,000 should be expended in beautifying our present parks, and sufficient funds should be appropriated annually to furnish high class music in at least two of them every night during the summer months.

Urges Park Improvements.

Piedmont is now but a desert of possibilities, while nature and the liberality of one individual has given us Grant Park. Permanent buildings, and grounds suitable for exposition or fair purposes, including a mile-race track where high class harness races might be conducted in connection with the fairs, should be included in Lakewood's improvements.

These, and many other things which may seem extravagant to some, must be accomplished in order to get the 500,000 by 1920.

Los Angeles is now increasing her population at the rate of 75,000 per year. But Los Angeles is expending $50,000,000 on a water supply, and over $20,000,000 on street and public road improvements. It is time Atlanta was doing something big, instead of wrangling over the individual conduct of a few alleged "business men." The continual magnifying of vice conditions, and the too strict enforcement of blue laws, is not compatible with progress, and is doing the city an injury. I would remind some of our over-zealous reformers that there is danger in bringing to our homes too much of the sordid things in life, for—

"Vice is a monster of so frightful mein,
That to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

I am, sir,
JAMES P. WINDSOR.
Atlanta, Ga., July 14, 1913.

White Men Fined in War on Negro Dives

A crusade against white men frequenting negro dives has been started by Recorder Nash Broyles. He fined three men, who gave their names as Kirk, Smith and Moore, and convictions were also obtained against J. W. Little and A. B. Arnold, of Macon, who forfeited $50.75.

The five white men were arrested in a raid on a place at 76 Chestnut street, early Sunday morning. Helen Lester, who runs the dive, was held for the higher courts in bonds of $500.

"The mingling of whites and blacks does more to stir up race trouble than anything else," declared the Recorder.

Mystery in Suicide Attempt at Biloxi

MOBILE, July 15.—Mrs. Anna Alvis, 18 years old, formerly Miss Casper, of Baltimore, where she has relatives, attempted suicide at Biloxi, Miss., near here, last night, by taking carbolic acid. Several doctors worked with her all night, but she is expected to die. Why she took the poison is a mystery.

Mrs. Alvis came to Mobile from Baltimore seven months ago and later went to Biloxi.

MRS. HARRIMAN AVERTS GREAT RAIL STRIKE

Social Leader Makes President's Arbitration Offer to Managers and Trainmen Possible.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—By a unanimous vote the House to-day passed the Newlands-Clayton bill amending the Erdman act and providing a means of arbitrating the differences between the Eastern railroads and their trainmen.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—That the honor of averting the railroad strike which threatened to tie up the commerce of the entire eastern part of the United States belongs to Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, New York society leader and niece of E. H. Harriman, late railroad king, was admitted at the White House to-day.

Mrs. Harriman, the only woman ever appointed a member of the industrial commission, heard rumors of a strike about two months ago in New York before the trouble found its way into print.

Put Matter Before Wilson.

Mrs. Harriman came at once to the President and placed the matter before him, laying emphasis on the fact that the strike would tie up Eastern commerce and might seriously damage the record of the Democratic administration.

She also suggested that the President call a conference between the railroad leaders and the representatives of the employees. This it was thought not wise to do because of the danger of charges of "undue White House influence."

Suggest Plan That Wins.

Mrs. Harriman then asked if the President would be willing to supervise the conference if she could engineer it through the Civic Federation.

This President Wilson agreed to do and when the strike was about to be called he presided over the conference and induced both sides to arbitrate.

VETERANS' PLEA SENDS SLATON TO REUNION

Governor Unable to Resist Virtual Demand of Old Soldiers to Visit Brunswick.

Governor Slaton will leave for Brunswick again Wednesday night to attend the State reunion of Confederate veterans. Despite the fact that he spent Saturday and Sunday in Brunswick and had no intention of returning there for some time, he found it impossible to withstand the oratory of the grizzled warriors, who virtually demanded that he attend their gathering.

"It's good and proper for you to come here and inspect the State's soldiers," the veterans said. "They are a fine lot of fellows and would show up well if circumstances demanded a display of their bravery. But what about the men who have bared their breasts to the enemy's bullets in defense of the State?

"Our number is dwindling rapidly. The half century swinging of the scythe of time has taken many of us to the world beyond. It is but meet and proper, we might say mandatory, that the Governor of the State meet with us at our reunions."

Such a plea as this the Governor declared he could not resist.

LEGISLATORS IN RUSH TO AVOID EXTRA CALL

Governor Likely to Reconvene Assembly if Tax Reforms Are Not Made This Session.

Unless the Legislature, during its present session, enacts such tax reforms as the Governor thinks essential to the welfare and prosperity of the State, it is more than likely that it will be called immediately in extraordinary session, for the sole purpose of effecting those reforms.

The Governor himself has not uttered the threat of an extraordinary session, but some gentlemen close to him, and, in a way, authorized to speak for him, have let it be known that the possibility of an extra session has crossed the Executive mind more than once of late, and that failure upon the part of the Legislature to enact the tax reform the Governor holds absolutely necessary at this time more than likely will impel the Governor to the heroic remedy of an extra session.

Feverishly Active Now.

That these semi-authoritative rumors and hints have had their effect upon the General Assembly, is abundantly evidenced in the feverish activity lately manifested in some of the House committees.

House bill No. 1, by Mr. Cole, of Bartow, for instance, has been reported at last out of the Ways and Means Committee, and will go to the House at once with a favorable recommendation.

This first revenue measure introduced must be followed by many others, if the Slaton program of tax reform is carried out in its entirety, and the Senate must have an opportunity to pass upon all revenue measures produced by the House. Revenue measures can not originate in the Senate.

There has been much waste of time on the floor of both Houses, however, and unless the waste is cut out from this time forward the impression is that tax reform measures generally will fall by the wayside and fall of passage.

Committee Favors Inheritance Tax.

The Georgia House Tuesday morning rushed the adoption of a large number of local bills. On account of the joint meeting of the Senate and House to be addressed by Herbert E. Myrick and T. Sambola Jones, many matters were postponed.

The bill increasing the salaries of the members of the Prison Commission from $2,000 to $3,000 per year, which was killed in the House Monday, was granted reconsideration by a unanimous vote, on the plea of Representative Ed Wohlwender, who said if the reconsideration was granted he would make a motion that the bill be carried over until next year.

Committees Make Reports.

A flood of committee reports was placed upon the clerk's desk Tuesday morning. One of the most interesting was from General Judiciary Committee No. 1, which favorably reported three bills. One is a "blue sky" bill, curbing the activities of brokers indulging in the sale of worthless stocks and bonds by requiring the registering and certifying by the Comptroller General of all stocks and bonds.

Another is the inheritance tax bill, which provides a special tax on all inheritances of $5,000 or more. The other bill favorably reported is a special registration bill. It provides for a permanent registration list.

Inspector Attacks Apartment House

Attorney Albert Howell and F. E. Kneip, superintendent of the Fuller Construction Company, will be tried in Police Court before Recorder Nash Broyles Tuesday afternoon, charged with violating the building ordinances of the city by erecting a window in the Ponce DeLeon Apartments, for which the Fuller company has the contract, and of which Mr. Howell is one of the owners.

The cases against Mr. Howell and Mr. Kneip were made at the instance of Assistant Building Inspector Charles Bowen, who asserted that the show window extended 14 inches over the sidewalk on Peachtree street. Mr. Bowen will seek to have the window declared a nuisance and ordered removed.

Mayor Urges Haste In Work on Streets

Mayor Woodward called a conference of city and county officials in his office Tuesday in an effort to hasten the work on Ivy and West Mitchell streets and Georgia avenue.

The Mayor took this action just before signing a resolution authorizing the regrading of West Peachtree street, which will be begun next fall. The Georgia Railway and Power Company will begin relaying tracks on Ivy street Wednesday and within a few days the repaving will begin.

GRASSHOPPERS POISONED.

DODGE CITY, KANS., July 15.—Farmers in Western Kansas have united in spreading tons of poisoned bran mash over fields in an effort to check the ravages of grasshoppers.

WEDDING SPEEDED BY SOFT ATLANTA MOON

MRS. JOSEPH W. HOOGE.

Miss Vera F. England, of Mobile, and Joseph W. Hooge, of Macon, were married here Monday as a result of Atlanta's beautiful moonlight nights—not that they don't have beautiful moonlight nights in Mobile and Macon, but the young sweethearts happened to be in neither of those places.

They have arranged to take an extended automobile honeymoon trip in order to view the bright moon from all parts of Georgia and Alabama.

Miss England came to Atlanta with her mother, Mrs. G. K. England, to visit the family of Charles W. England. Mr. Hooge came from Macon Monday to visit his fiancee.

The ceremony was performed by Father Robert F. Kennedy at the Church of Immaculate Conception at 11 o'clock Monday morning. The wedding date had been fixed for several months hence.

Veterans Will Meet Where They Enlisted

Fairburn, Ga., will be the scene of a reunion of the survivors of the "Bloody Thirtieth" Georgia Regiment July 25. It was at Fairburn that the Thirtieth was mustered into service September 26, 1861, and this will be its thirty-fifth annual reunion.

The Thirtieth contained the names of several thousand warriors on its roll during the four years of the war between the States. Its loss in human life is believed to have been as heavy as any other Confederate regiment.

Fairburn is preparing to give the veterans a great entertainment. All other Confederate veterans are invited.

HEAL BABY'S ITCHING SKIN WITH RESINOL

For babies tortured by eczema, prickly heat, teething rash, or other itching, burning skin eruption, there is instant relief in a warm bath with Resinol Soap and a gentle application of Resinol Ointment. The itching and scratching stop at once, baby can sleep, and soon the tormented little skin becomes clear and healthy again. The Resinol treatment is so absolutely free from anything that could injure the tenderest skin, that it can be used on even the youngest infant.

Resinol Soap for baby's daily bath will usually prevent any skin trouble and chafing because it contains the soothing, healing Resinol medication. Doctors have prescribed Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap for eighteen years and druggists everywhere sell them. Trial free; Dept. 7-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

LEAP TO STREET TO ESCAPE IN NIGHT FIRE

Flames in Rooming House Nearly Trap Guests, Roused From Sleep by Smoke.

Aroused from their sleep by the roar of flames and the smell of smoke, half a dozen roomers in the home of Mrs. J. Sutton, 55 Luckie street, escaped in their night attire Tuesday morning at 4:30 o'clock, when fire broke out in the upper story of the house. Some of them leaped from the windows just in time to avoid the falling roof.

It is not known how the fire started. It was discovered by one of the roomers, who awoke suddenly and found the entire upper portion of the house in flames. He shouted and awoke the other roomers and Mrs. Sutton, who also sleeps on the second floor. Those occuping rooms at the rear ran to the front of the building only a moment before the roof crashed in. One man was struck on the shoulder by a piece of falling timber, but was only slightly bruised.

The occupants of the house gathered in the upper front hall and found their escape cut off by a wall of smoke and flames that was fast devouring the stairway. Some of them braved the flames and ran down the stairway. Others let themselves down from the windows. As the last of the roomers reached the ground the roof of the house fell in.

The fire department extinguished the blaze before the building was destroyed, but not until it had been badly damaged.

Senator Smith to Address Assembly

Senator Hoke Smith will address a joint meeting of the Senate and House of Representatives Friday at noon.

The address is being looked forward to with interest, as Senator Smith is expected to touch upon the question of tax reform. This is the most important question to face any Georgia Legislature in many years, and is receiving more attention from the present General Assembly than any other matter.

SEARCHING SIDELIGHTS ON POLITICS IN GEORGIA

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall, of Chatham, is in Atlanta for a few days, on his way to Athens, where he will visit before leaving for his diplomatic post of duty in Switzerland.

Mr. Stovall is extremely well liked by all the members of the General Assembly, and there are few, if any, he does not know more or less intimately. His nomination to be Minister to Switzerland, which was in line with his ambition for years, was particularly gratifying to his friends throughout all Georgia, and he has been the recipient of many warm and hearty congratulations since his arrival in the Capital.

"I have not the slightest doubt," said Mr. Stovall, "that the Wilson administration is to be a complete success in every way. The President is a hard and conscientious worker, and is, I think, carrying out to the letter the promises of the Baltimore platform.

"I am leaving for Switzerland within the next two weeks, and feel sure I shall find the assignment not only most pleasant, but one wherein I can be of real service to my country. I have a desire, of course, to be useful as well as ornamental, if I may so express myself, and there is much that may be done in the wonderful and progressive little nation of Switzerland that will be well worth while.

"The present Legislature impresses me as a safe and sane body, and not at all inclined to run amuck. I have talked with many members, and I am sure the desire to achieve lasting and helpful tax reforms is universal. There is not much time left, of course, but the Legislature can—and doubtless will—accomplish much in the four weeks yet to its credit."

The friends of United States Senator Bacon are urging all voters to go to the polls to-day and cast a ballot for Bacon to succeed himself in the Senate.

There is no opposition, of course, but as a compliment to the Senator, if for no other reason, it is very desirable that a large vote be cast.

Senator Bacon is the first man Georgia ever honored with a fourth term in the Senate, and he will be the first United States Senator named under the new popular elections amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Mr. Bell, of Clay, looks like Champ Clark, and that, of course, puts a large measure of responsibility upon him.

The gentleman from Clay is quiet and more or less reserved, but in repose his face does remind one strikingly of the great Missourian, and the temptation to call him "Mr. Speaker" frequently is rampant within the hearts of those who are used to addressing Mr. Clark after that fashion.

"Champ Clark is a mighty fine man, all right, and worth looking like," said Bell to-day, when the matter of his resemblance was mentioned in his presence.

Some of the friends of Frank Liebman, the energetic real estate man of Atlanta, have spoken favorably to Commissioner of Agriculture James D. Price about him, and asked Mr. Price to appoint Mr. Liebman to some sort of agricultural job.

Mr. Liebman is quite an authority, upon his own admission, on "setting out peas" and differentiating watermelon from sweet potato vines.

Mr. Price is said to have tendered Mr. Liebman a place as fertilizer inspector in the Okeefenokee swamp, and the Atlanta man is reported as looking upon the honor thus about to be thrust upon him with gratified eyes.

If Mr. Liebman accepts the appointment, it will take him away from Atlanta for four months each year, at a salary of $84.50 per month.

Augusta is making great preparations to entertain the General Assembly when it visits that city Saturday.

Augusta is proud of and deeply interested in the Georgia Medical College, located there, as a branch of the State University, and the citizens are doing everything in their power to advance its interests and welfare. Recently the standard of the college was raised greatly, and it now ranks with the foremost institutions of the kind in the world.

It has been 125 years since the Georgia Legislature was in Augusta, and as it may be as long before it gets there again—although Augusta sincerely hopes not—the forthcoming visit is to be made memorable.

A special train will be run for the benefit of the visitors, going and coming, and a party of not less than 150 has been provided for.

The municipal court bill for Atlanta will be introduced in the General Assembly by the Fulton County delegation on next Monday.

This bill has been carefully drawn and is thought to embody the very best and most up-to-date ideas in courts of the kind.

It will have the backing of the bar and citizens generally, and likely will pass both Houses without friction of any sort.

It is by no means a sure thing that the Tippins bill will not be reintroduced in the present Legislature, notwithstanding the fact that the Georgia Anti-Saloon League is reported to have decided not to request it.

There are some members who think that measure exactly the thing the State needs.

Whether it can be passed is, of course, problematical, but its friends may try it out again, nevertheless.

The best story of the year, "Adam's Clay," by Cosmo Hamilton, begins in next Sunday's American. Don't miss a chapter. Every one bristles with interest.

An Event Which Will Prove Attractive to All Women Loving Fresh Undermuslins

Our New York buyer found a prominent maker of fashionable undermuslins with an end-of-the-season OVERLOT. We made him an offer for the entire surplus, which was accepted, and the goods will be ready for your inspection Wednesday. This is a collection of cool and crisp MUSLINWEAR ITEMS, which will be shown at an opportune moment when your midsummer wardrobe needs replenishing.

Eighty-Eight Cents for New Garments, Many of Them Worth Up to One-Fifty Each

Gowns

About 18 styles of popular 1913 nightgowns, of nainsooks and sheer materials, representing manufacturer's best efforts of the season. Being from this celebrated maker, it is obvious that they are the most wanted styles. Included in the assortment are many of the noncrinkable crepe gowns, which are now so popular and are so much wanted for traveling uses.

A Wonderful Sale of Undermuslins AT 88c EACH

Combinations

About ten styles of the popular combination garments will be shown in this One-Price sale. No garment is so widely popular as the combination. In this lot are many different models of sheer and soft finish materials, mostly in drawer effects. Some of these garments are trimmed with laces, others are of the all-over embroidery styles; many are trimmed with shadow laces; others with medallions and blind embroidery.

Petticoats

Although these petticoats being machine made, they are excellent reproductions of French pieces, and are remarkable at the price quoted. These are mostly of the new "flat styles" effectively embroidered on the flounces. These values are out of the ordinary and we are happy to be able to supply you at little figures these petticoats, which have recently sprung into favor, being now the most wanted garment in the trousseau.

Drawers

In this collection are about ten styles of sheer nainsook and lingerie cloth drawers. Many of them are in the new straight effects, others in the Dorothy style; while many are the ever popular circular. Some of them are simply trimmed with convent scallops; others more elaborately trimmed with either Val or shadow laces; many are a combination of both lace and embroidery, and a few are finished with just a flat band of embroidery.

Corset Covers

Comisole, the newest thing in corset covers. These are in shadow laces, tucked nets or all-over embroidery. We also show the sturdier garments of nainsooks. Some of these are trimmed in Val laces or medallions. All are finished with beading drawn with ribbon. Many of the corset covers have ribbon shoulder straps. In this lot we show a few of the convent scalloped, with hand-embroidered floral designs.

THREE INVADING ARMIES CAMP IN BULGARIA

Roumanians, Greeks and Servians Co-operate—Vanquished Make Abject Plea to Russia.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BELGRADE, July 15.—Three hostile armies of invasion are on Bulgarian soil.

The Roumanians under Crown Prince Ferdinand, who crossed the Danube, halted and are co-operating with Greek and Servian forces, which have also invaded Bulgaria. Servians have entered Bulgaria west of Kustendil, while another allied army of Greeks and Serbs have crossed the Bulgar frontier through Djumbala.

A St. Petersburg dispatch says that Bulgaria has informed Russian that she unconditionally accepts any peace terms with Russia, acting for Greece and Servia, may present. Bulgaria has also consented to allow Roumania to annex any extent of territory on condition that Roumanian troops do not enter Sofia.

Further reports of Bulgarian atrocities in the south were received by the Servian Government.

Peace Parley Expected To Be Opened This Week.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 15.—Peace negotiations between representatives of Bulgaria, Servia and Greece will open here this week, according to the present program of the Russian Foreign Office.

M. Sazonoff, Russian Foreign Minister, said to-day that Bulgarian peace envoys are expected to open negotiations at once. After the signature of the protocol of an armistice fighting will stop.

Word from Sofia says that Bulgarian troops, driven toward the capital from every angle, are concentrating around Sofia.

An international inquiry of reports of atrocities in Macedonia will probably be conducted in Paris or Vienna.

King Peter Threatens to Dictate Peace in Sofia.

VIENNA, July 15.—King Peter of Servia threatens to "dictate" terms of Balkan peace in Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, unless the Bulgarian Government immediately agrees to the preliminary draft of a treaty of peace drawn by Premier Pasitch of Servia and Premier Venizelos of Greece.

A telegram to-day from Athens states that Greece and Servia are in accord on the terms of peace to which Bulgaria must submit. In a general way they include the following:

Greece to hold Salonika and occupy about 5,000 square miles of territory in Southern Macedonia.

The railway from Salonika to Mitrovitza to be internationalized.

Servia to have a commercial outlet on the Aragon sea, full permission for the construction of a ship canal from the Danube southward and of a railway to the Adriatic.

Bulgaria to give up all Grek and Servian prisoners of war.

Servia to occupy all the fertile district from the Southern Servian boundary southward and eastward from the Vardar River to Demir Hissar, thence eastward to the Rhodope mountains.

Massacre by Allies Charged by Bulgars.

SOFIA, July 15.—The entire Bulgarian and Turkish population of Pravista, in Southern Macedonia, has been massacred by the Greek army, which occupied Kavala last week, it was officially announced to-day by the Bulgarian Government.

Replying to stories of slaughter by Bulgarian troops, emanating from Athens, the Bulgarian Government to-day made public reports of Bulgarian officers in the South, which lay charges of grave excesses at the hands of the Greeks.

Sixty Thousand Homeless.

Sixty thousand Bulgarians and Turks in the district about Pravista and Kavala are homeless, these reports say, and on the verge of famine. The Greeks and Servians are charged with having ravaged the country and cut down refugees.

FREE VOTES CUT AS PONY RACE NEARS END

Bonuses Remain Attractive and Fair Enough, However, to Spur Contestants to Best Efforts.

It is hard to tell who got the most fun out of Sunday's outing at Grant Park, the boys and girls who are in the contests for The Georgian and American ponies, or their elders who gathered to watch them.

Of course, the fun of driving the ponies was all for the children. But

Josephine Simril, 9 East Alabama street.

the elders got their amusement in hearing the droll remarks of the youngsters, and in seeing their shining faces.

One little fellow spent a good deal of time trying to pick out the pony he wanted. He feels sure he will win, and was concerned only in selecting the best animal.

After viewing all in the park, he still was dissatisfied.

"What's the matter?" asked the contest manager. "Aren't they good ponies?"

"Yes, sir. But please, sir, have you any with blue eyes?"

All the children are working hard now to take full advantage of the extra vote offer which closes Saturday night at 10 o'clock. Until that time there will be liberal allowances of bonus votes for every club of $25, $26 or $15 in subscriptions. The subscriptions may be of any length, from two years down to one month.

As announced, each bonus offer to stimulate the contestants will be a little less attractive as the contest draws to a close. Manifestly it would be unfair to offer in the last week extra votes in greater numbers than during previous periods, thus putting the contestants who "got busy" early at a disadvantage. But the present offer is sufficiently attractive to bring out the best efforts of every contestant.

Guarantee Heads To Be Defendants

Judge Pendleton announced from the bench Tuesday that he would issue an order in the Guarantee Banking and Trust Company litigation making S. E. Smith, president of the company; H. S. Miles, secretary and treasurer, and W. A. Foster and George H. Sims, directors, parties defendant in the action.

J. N. Robertson, appointed receiver for the company pending a decision by the Supreme Court, will act as receiver for the property of the four men, keeping it intact until the litigation is settled.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Forsyth Bill Is Good.

Valerie Bergere and her company in an intensely dramatic sketch, "Judgment;" Britt Wood and his harmonica; Shelvey Brothers, three unusually clever contortionists, and a bevy of pretty girls in a minstrel act, combine to form a good show at the Forsyth this week. Miss Bergere headlines the show, in a playlet that gives full opportunity for her emotional powers.

The Metropolitan minstrels have some good songs, but the action is made dull by two boys, "end men," whose comedy is old and very sad. The five girls are pretty, and one of them, Flo Bert, has an unusually good contralto voice.

Other numbers are Work and Play, acrobats; Les Cougets, with a novel musical act, and Clark and Verdi, who entertain with a line of Italian jokes.

Friends of Bible in Schools Win Point

Enemies of the measure requiring reading of the Bible in Georgia public schools won their first victory Tuesday morning when the Senate voted unanimously to recommit the bill for further consideration by the Education Committee, on a motion by Senator Foster, chairman of the committee, who held a lengthy conference Tuesday morning with Rabbi David Marx, Dr. Wilmer and Father Rappler who oppose the bill.

That another fight will be made when the committee grants a hearing to those who oppose the bill according to statements Tuesday morning by Dr. H. M. DuBose, an advocate of the measure.

Bars 'Shylocks' From Shore in Big Estate

ANNISTON, July 15.—"Shylocks" are barred under the provision of the will of the late Col. J. G. Farley, retired Anniston capitalist and reputed millionaire, who died here recently.

Farley's three children, Mrs. A. J. Goodwin and J. G. Farley, of this city, and Mrs. Harry Bellenger, of Gadsden, are made executors of the estate, and any of them who lends any money from the estate shall be removed from office. All money now invested in bonds is to be withdrawn and invested in real estate.

Farley's widow is given a one-fourth share in the estate.

Senate Will Break Long-Speech Record

WASHINGTON, July 15.—A record in sustained speechmaking will be made by the Republicans when the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill comes up for debate Wednesday.

Senator La Follette is scheduled to wage a wordy war lasting seven days. Senator Smoot has estimated the length of his diatribe against Democratic iniquity at five days. Senator Smith of Michigan, will talk three days.

Many long speeches are scheduled from the Democratic ranks.

Wilson Will Go to Cornish Again Soon

WASHINGTON, July 15.—President Wilson is planning to take a week-end trip to Cornish, N. H., on either August 7 or 14, according to White House reports to-day.

The Chief Executive will go to the "summer capitol" on Thursday and return to Washington the following Monday.

There's a treat for every reader of The American in Cosmo Hamilton's "Adam's Clay," which bgins Sunday. It's a big story. Don't miss the first chapters.

Motor to the Wigwam, Indian Springs, for the week-end. Fifty-one miles. Roads are good either by Griffin or McDonough. Climate fine.

CLAIMS LOAN MEN MULCTED HIM

Conductor Says He Paid Extortionate Interest and Asks Retraint of Garnishment.

The operations of money lenders were unearthed Tuesday morning when William S. Coburn, representing Sidney Baxter, a conductor on the Southern Railway, went before Judge Newman in the United States District Court and applied for an order restraining two money lenders from levying on the wages of his client.

Saturday Baxter filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, placing his assets at $930 and liabilities at $1,376, asking that his salary outstanding, $240, and household property valued at $500 be exempt.

In 1909 Baxter borrowed $150 from the Birmingham Discount Company, which charged him, he says, $15 per month interest. Baxter in his petition claims to have paid the interest for three years and still owes the concern $150, the principal.

Again, on July 1, 1912, Baxter borrowed from the Atlanta Finance Company, which is represented in Atlanta by G. H. Rosenbush, $105, and for this amount he claims to have paid $11 per month interest for one year, and still owes the original $105.

These two concerns from which Baxter borrowed threaten to garnishee his wages, the petition states.

U. S. Experts Guests Of Lady Aberdeen

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DUBLIN, July 15.—Lady Aberdeen, on the occasion of a brilliant reception for the American commission on agriculture, which is now in Ireland, entertained the visitors in her latest project.

She is establishing in Dublin in a fine old Georgian mansion the Welcome Club, for the reception of Irish visitors from America. At this club travelers register and are given information telling them how to make the most of the sojourn in Ireland.

Seaboard May Bid On A., B. & A. Road

CORDELE, July 15—An impression prevails in railroad circles here that the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company will bid for the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic road, when it is placed on sale to satisfy the creditors.

It is also rumored that if it bids in the property the Seaboard will consolidate the shops of the two roads for the eastern division in Cordele. The rumors are being generally discussed here.

Waits a Month and Wins $14,000 Prize

MOOSE JAW, SASK., July 15.—H. Johnson, formerly of Itasca County, Minnesota, obtained a $14,000 tract after waiting in front of the Land Office here for a month. During his wait torrential rains fell, and for many days there weer others ahead of Johnson. Numerous fights occurred and the police had to interfere several times.

Johnson almost lost his prize in the last hour by going into the Land Office too soon and finding another man in his place when he returned. The police, however, let him remain first.

Held for Slaying in Houston 23 Years Ago

ALBANY, July 15.—A negro, believed to be the murderer of Joseph Fudge, a white man, who was killed 23 years ago at Henderson, Houston County, is in jail here. He was arrested on a trivial charge and while in jail is alleged to have confessed to another negro that he was the murderer.

Fudge operated a blacksmith shop at Henderson. Following a dispute between him and a negro employee, the black struck him on the head with a heavy stick, killing him instantly.

Young Caminetti at Work as Pipe Layer

TAFT, CAL., July 15.—That Drew Caminetti, who is awaiting trial on charge of white slaving, has been in Taft since last month, became known when the men working with him on a pipe line crew tipped it off that a youth called "Blackie" had repeatedly telephone to some unknown place and asked for messages for Drew Caminetti.

Caminetti came to Taft shortly after June 1 from Sacramento, and immediately hired out to a pipe line contracting company.

Kentucky Governor Tries to End Strike

LEXINGTON, KY., July 15.—An attempt to arbitrate the strike of street car motormen and conductors was made to-day when a conference of Governor McDermott with traction and labor officials was called.

There was no rioting to-day and company officials said they would not attempt to operate any cars with strike-breakers.

GEORGIA MAN CONSUL.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The following presidential appointment was confirmed by the Senate to-day: Nathaniel B. Stewart, of Georgia, to be Consul at Milan, Italy.

SALES OF AUGUST FEATURE COTTON

Bullish Talk Based on Damage by Boll Weevils in Texas Causes Late Buying.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The cotton market opened steady to-day, first prices ranging from 2, unchanged to 3 points lower than Monday's final. The weather map was slightly bullish, but this was slightly offset by the bearish prediction of a big local house.

There was no special feature to trading after the call, transactions being held within a small volume. Sentiment continues bearish and Liverpool was reported a seller of the old crop positions. This promoted an active selling movement, with August the heaviest pressed option. August dropped from 12.12 to 11.99, while other positions declined some 3 to 6 points from the initial level. Later the market developed a steadier tone, resulting in prices rallying a few points, and during the late forenoon price movement was practically unchanged from the previous close.

Trade buying of new as well as old crop positions was the chief feature of a quiet market. Many operators would have been glad to have purchased cotton on the decline, but neither buying nor selling orders were sufficient to create wide fluctuations in prices.

The market is kept from depression by the continued decrease of the stock—and, on the other hand, it is prevented from advancing by the favorable progress of the crop. However, the most important factor which is the predominating influence against activity is the proposal to tax cotton futures. The large interests, as well as the small firms, are unable to see how to do business in the future and are inclined to await further development of news from Washington before pushing their commitments to any extent.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.15; August, 12.02; October, 11.47; January, 11.31.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.46; August, 11.97; October, 11.47; January, 11.47.

New Orleans and Galveston have discontinued their estimated cotton receipts through July and August.

Warehouse stocks in New York to-day are 36,083 bales; certificated, 30,085 bales.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 15.—With the exception of Tennessee, North Carolina and West Texas, where it was cloudy, fair weather prevailed over the belt, with only a few scattered showers. Indications are for increasing cloudiness in the northwestern quarter, with a rise in temperature; prospects are for rain and cooler weather toward the end of the week. Partly cloudy to fair weather, with a few scattered showers in the central and eastern States; temperatures normal.

The market opened unchanged, but soon eased to 11.41 for December on a 12-point break in August in New York. While the impregnable position of July is admitted, it is thought that the fate of July is too unimportant to delay adjustment to a new situation, and that the promise of abundant new supplies for the coming month is so strong as to put August futures beyond the grip of the manipulative control of a few.

The market rallied a little toward 11 o'clock in anticipation of bullish remarks in the Government weekly weather report about the hot spell in Texas in the middle of last week.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Unsettled weather will continue from the southern lower Lake region and the upper Ohio Valley eastward with occasional thundershowers to-night or Wednesday. In the northern upper Lake region, the South and West, the weather will be generally fair. Temperature changes will not be of consequence.

Forecast until 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Georgia—Fair to-night and Wednesday.

Virginia—Unsettled with showers to-night or Wednesday.

North Carolina—Local thundershowers to-night or Wednesday.

South Carolina—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Florida—Local showers to-night or Wednesday, except fair in the northwest portion.

Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Wednesday.

Louisiana—Fair to-night and Wednesday, except showers in the extreme southeast portion Wednesday.

Texas—Fair to-night and Wednesday.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, July 15.—Buying credited to stock exchange house is given as reason for advance. The market is narrow and trading limited and a few thousand bales are sufficient to swing prices several points. The weather is quite favorable and crop is doing about everything it ought to do, which fact, however important in the end, is at the moment entirely disregarded.

Liverpool continues to sell cotton free.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The cotton seed oil market was firmer on scattered local buying to-day, induced by strength in lard and light offerings, but business was light with little evidence of demand from refiners.

STOCKS RESPOND TO ACTIVE BUYING

Propitious Cables and Long Interests Liquidated, Causes Strength All Day.

By CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Most stocks at the opening of the stock market to-day responded to more optimistic news with the result that gains were scattered thorugh the list. Union Pacific advanced 1 point, but later reacted. Canadian Pacific was 1¼ higher. Amalgamated Copper was up ⅝ at the outset, but later lost all its advance.

The growing possibility that a railroad strike on the Eastern lines will be averted and cables telling of stronger European markets had an early effect which profit-taking removed.

Among the other gains were United States Steel common ⅝, Southern Pacific ¼, Chino Copper ½, Northern Pacific ¼, Reading ⅜, Pennsylvania ½, Missouri Pacific ⅛, Erie ⅛, Chesapeake and Ohio ⅛, American Can ½.

American Telephone and Telegraph lost ½; American Smelting also shaded. The curb was steady.

Americans in London were sluggish. Canadian Pacific in London was strengthened on repurchases.

STOCK GOSSIP

Now that the trainmen and railroad managers have agreed to arbitration it looks as if the market would do better. Although the Mexican situation may furnish the bears an excuse for selling, would prefer to buy dividend-paying railroad issues on weak spots for the long pull. Union Pacific and Reading should be attractive at these prices. —G. D. Potter.

• • •

The New York Financial Bureau says: "A continuation of the backing and filling by the professional element may be seen to-day. We would look for good buying opportunities. Moderate profits should appeal to the daily trader. Information channels are still friendly to the market in a conservative way."

• • •

It is estimated that steel mill operations have fallen off about 5 per cent since the latter part of June.

Secretary McAdoo may call part of $604,000,000 bonds now held by the National banks in order to stop bear selling of bonds.

Western Union for eleven months ended May 31 shows a surplus after charges of $2,862,843, a decrease of $2,140,000.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Mean temperatures were 1 to 4 above normal, except in Tennessee, Carolina, Georgia, northern parts of Alabama and Mississippi, eastern Arkansas and Florida, except the extreme west portion, where temperature was normal or slightly below the greatest deficiency being 3 degrees at Memphis.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 70 to 82 degrees over Eastern States, 80 to 86 over Central and 82 to 88 over Western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 70 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 88 degrees, at Forth Worth, Texas.

Precipitation occurred generally over the Central and Eastern portions of the coton region, but the amounts were unevenly distributed. Very little precipitation occurred in Texas and Oklahoma, many stations reporting none during the week. More than 2 inches occurred at a few stations in Southern Louisiana, Central Mississippi, Eastern Arkansas, Western Tennessee, East Central Alabama, West Central Georgia and Northeastern Florida.

The greatest weekly precipitation, 6.6 inches, occurred at Morgan City, La.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Wheat showed losses of ¼ to ½c early to-day on the weakness in the markets abroad, coupled with larger receipts in the Northwest than expected, and the pressure of wheat off the English coast. There was good selling by scattered longs and the buying was of a half-hearted character.

Corn was up ⅛ to ¼c on small offerings in the pit and good buying by shorts. Rains are badly needed in sections of Canada.

Oats were off ⅛ to ⅜c and slow.

Provisions were firmer with hogs, which were 5c higher at the yards.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: We think, summing up the general situation, that the favorable action is to buy cotton on soft spots.

Miller & Co.: The market continued in control of the summer position, but in our opinion it can only be a short time before conditions surrounding the present growth must prove the dominating influence, and if conditions continue as favorable as they are at present will make for lower prices.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We continue to advise moderate purchases on declines.

Josephthal, Louchheim & Co.: We continue to advise sales on all strong spots.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.: We would not hesitate to sell the new crop on rallies.

Logan & Bryan: We rather feel that purchases on moderate setbacks are in order.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "It was the belief of most wheat traders last night that while there might be some further rally in prices, it was likely to be only temporary and that wheat should be sold on good bulges. A good deal, however, will depend on the attitude of the farmer in selling.

"Corn is looked upon as a weather proposition. Some bears think that the crop is virtually made. The best posted corn specialists, however, say that a corn crop never has been made before the first of September, and there have been a great many years when it was not considered safe by September 20.

"Oats specialists are undecided as to whether the market has had its break. They say the trade oversold on last week's decline and their covering was mainly responsible for yesterday's bulge."

• • •

Minneapolis says: "Rainfall at New Ulm, Minn., .04; Pierre, S. Dak., .62; Yankton, raining, .03; Sioux Falls, Watertown, trace; Dickinson, .02, temperatures moderate."

• • •

After making new low levels, wheat, corn and oats were pushed up yesterday sharply on reports that high temperatures and grasshoppers were doing considerable damage to the crop.

• • •

Exports of cereals from Roumania have been prohibited, owing to the war.

• • •

Minneapolis wheat stock decreased 22,000 bushels in one day.

• • •

B. F. Johnson, of Minneapolis, says: "If we get good filling weather, the three Northwestern States will raise 200,000,000 bushels."

• • •

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "Wheat—Map shows showers in Northwest, with moderate temperatures. Northwestern crop conditions will be closely watched, especially since talk of rust damage has started.

"Corn—Chicago and vicinity had good rains last night, as did also a number of points south of us in the State, and some precipitation in Ohio Valley. No rains reported in Southwest, with extremely high temperatures yesterday at numerous points in Kansas and Nebraska. Until conditions change, prices are apt to hold firm.

"Oats—Market will be influenced more or less by action of corn.

"Provisions—General tone to the market is firm."

• • •

Wheat was easy on the start on poor cables. Big winter wheat movement and favorable weather for threshing, but the market soon rallied on scattered demand from shorts, based on apprehension over rust talk from northwest and export possibilities.

• • •

Corn was higher on continued dry weather in the Northwest, with high temperatures and disappointing receipts. —Pearsall.

Dr. Delemar Freed Of Attack Charge

HAMILTON, July 15.—Dr. James Delemar, who was given a preliminary trial before Justices Harry Stevens, R. Gip Robinson and Ben R. Harris here on Monday, on the charge of attacking the wife of a prominent Harris County farmer, was discharged, there not being sufficient evidence introduced to hold him to Superior Court. The trial was in progress the entire day and 97 witnesses were examined.

Dr. Delemar was given an ovation by friends. He returned to Mountain Hill, his home, with his brother and father-in-law.

Dr. Delemar was arrested last week and was confined in the Muscogee County jail pending his hearing.

ALLEN AND KENNA, ATLANTA FAVORITES, AT THE BONITA

Allen and Kenna, decided favorites in Atlanta and elsewhere in the South, opened at the Bonita Theater Monday an engagement which will probably be a record-breaker in that splendid little playhouse. With the prettiest bunch of showgirls—good singers and dancers all—and the best trio heard in the South, the Bonita is doing a great business. Come in where it is cool and enjoy a real hot show.

Catholics Attacked In Riots in Ireland

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DERRY, IRELAND, July 15.—Many persons were injured and much damage to property was done here to-day during riots in which a number of excursionists from Belfast participated.

A number of Unionists attacked a Catholic institution, and the windows in the residences of many Catholics were smashed. Numerous shots were fired before the police restored order. Over a score were taken to hospitals.

D. A. R. Plans Shaft To Mrs. Mary Bryan

A subscription campaign by the Baron DeKalb Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, of Clarkston, Ga., for funds to erect a suitable memorial to the memory of Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, the gifted writer, who was a member of the chapter, was instituted last week.

Contributions may be sent to Miss Catherine R. Dillon, regent, and Miss Lola Milner, corresponding secretary, No. 16 Barry street, Decatur, Ga.

AVIATOR FALLS IN LAKE.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Max Lillie, Chicago aviator, fell into Lake Michigan from his hydroaeroplane two miles from the shore to-day. He swam to the machine and clung to it until a boat rescued him.

Daniel's Receivers Ask Court for Loan

Colonel W. L. Peel and H. A. Harris, trust officer of the Atlanta Credit Men's Adjustment Bureau, receivers conducting the business of H. T. Daniel, of Palmetto, Ga., alleged bankrupt, applied to Federal Judge Newman Tuesday morning for authority to borrow $5,000 to carry on Daniel's business, which includes the cultivation of 2,700 acres of farm land and the operation of two stores.

Since taking charge the receivers claim to have put assets on a paying basis and state that, when the crops are harvested, the dismissal of all proceedings will at once occur.

Famous Cat Starves, Grieving for Master

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 15.—Henri Rochefort's famous cat, Kroumir, that accompanied him everywhere, did not survive the death of his master long.

He refused to take food since the death of Mr. Rochefort on July 1, and died of grief, as supposed, at Aix-les-Bains this morning.

SEVERE PAIN WITH HEMORRHOIDS

Got No Rest Nights. Had to Be Propped Up in Bed. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured in Three Weeks.

Bissell, Ala. — "I was troubled for several years with protruding hemorrhoids. They caused pain of the most severe kind and some loss of blood. They were so inflamed that the touch of anything against them was most intense agony. I got no rest nights and had to have my legs and feet propped up in the bed.

"I tried all kinds of advertised cures and I was told that an operation was the only relief. I suffered untold agony. I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. I tried it and then procured a box of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I took the Cuticura Soap and made a solution with warm water and bathed the affected parts before applying the Cuticura Ointment. I was cured sound and well in three weeks' time. A cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment accomplished what all else failed to do." (Signed) L. R. Cook, Nov. 12, 1912.

For red, rough, chapped and bleeding hands, itching, burning palms, and painful finger-ends with shapeless nails, a one-night Cuticura treatment works wonders. Soak hands, on retiring, in hot water and Cuticura Soap. Dry, anoint with Cuticura Ointment and wear soft bandages or old, loose gloves during the night. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Now for Silk Remnants

The Selling Starts at Nine o'Clock

The silk section has given over every semblance of a remnant it possessed for this sale—that its "swan song" sale shall be its best.

There will be no more Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. silk remnant sales this season!

So be advised—this is your best opportunity to secure a dress, a coat, a waist pattern at smallest cost.

Here—we will list some of the kinds included—

Crepe de Chines,
Messalines,
Chiffons,
Wash Silks,
Corded Silks,
Poplins,
Foulards,
Taffetas,
Brocades,
Kimono Silks,
China Silks,
Novelties.

And each of these could be further divided into many varieties—all this season's silks, now sold down to remnant lengths (one-half yard to ten yards), because they were the silks in the colors and patterns and at the prices that the discriminating women of Atlanta wanted.

The silks remain as fine as ever. The prices, however, are changed very materially.

Many are reduced one-third.

Many are reduced one-half.

And a great many are reduced more than one-half.

Indeed, at these reductions this will be the last Silk Remnant Sale of the season!

Buy for now, buy for the fall and save, knowing no such opportunity will be offered again.

None of these silks on approval, none exchanged, none C. O. D.

Women's Hats Bow to New Prices

The bow amounts to a fine courtesy, so very low are the new prices. And now that so many women want another hat, but an inexpensive one, perhaps for traveling, perhaps for no other reason than to have just a fresh hat, this sale amounts to a timely event.

Hats at $1.00

Twenty-five of these—and as many different hats. Originally a number of these were $10.00 and from that down to $5.00. Many of them are just what women will want for traveling or for street wear. Dark colors mostly, too variously shaded and trimmed to describe them.

$1.00!

It would not pay for the ribbons, the feathers, the flowers or the shapes!

Hats at $5.00

Some thirty of these, and all fresh and charming. Just for our workrooms. In the height of the season these would be $7.50 and up. There are light hats for wear with white dresses, there are smart dark hats for going-away; there are a few mourning hats; there are a few leghorns, a few Neapolitans. The greatest number are hemps.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

JUNE 10.—I was forcibly reminded this morning that my contemplated flight is no dream by the appearance of Manette dressed in her hobo clothes. Instead of the dainty, lace-trimmed white in which she is always attired, she wore a blue checked gingham, her curls had been cropped off; in her hand she carried a blue sunbonnet, and her shoes were a durable, heavy-soled tan.

The little monkey was very much excited because I didn't know her, and danced around the room, darting out the door and across the lawn at the sound of Mrs. Spencer's voice, giving such squeals of delight on the way that I felt that the cure for both of us had begun.

"A happy baby," I murmured.

"A baby no longer," said Richards, who had brought her into the room. There was an unusual note in Richards' voice, and I was not surprised when I turned to look at her to find traces of tears on her face.

"She can dress herself now," she said, half-proudly, and half in complaint. "She wouldn't let me fasten a button for her because she said she would have to dress herself when she is away from me."

"Mr. Max, there isn't a doctor anywhere near where you are going, and what are you going to do without me to nurse her if she gets sick? And who will sterilize her food? The poor little lamb, to be taken into a wilderness like that!"

She covered her face with her apron and began to cry. The doctor is right. The love we have for Manette is weighted too heavily with apprehension for the child's good. It is well I am taking her away.

Comforting Words.

I couldn't scold her. I could only give her the reassurance I had given every day since the trip was planned. That I would telegraph for her at the first symptom of illness; that I would send her a daily bulletin; that I would see that Manette didn't eat this, and remember that last fall she had a fever because she ate too much of that, and that her throat isn't strong, and her stomach is weak, etc.

All I promised to remember because of my respect for Richards' intentions, and all except the bulletins I intend to forget because of my interest in the child.

June 11.—Jack and Sally Spencer came over last evening, and it was the first time I had seen her since Jack's return. I thought she looked a little worn and thoughtful, but outwardly she was her same serene, sweet, wholesome self. She approved of my plans for Manette. I was glad, for I have learned to rely on her judgment.

She wished, she said, that she could take a little child she loved and go away from everybody in the world.

"Complimentary to me," laughed her husband.

Sally winced, a quick flash of color mantled her cheeks and as suddenly receded, leaving her more pale and tired than is her ordinary wont. I wondered her husband didn't see it. Or rather, to speak more truthfully, I wondered that any man could have the love of a woman like Sally, and not show greater interest in her condition.

"It would do me good," she resumed, "in caring for a child one forgets many things."

Just what the doctor had said to me! I am glad I can take the cure.

I wish every hungry-hearted man and woman in the world could know what it is to love and to have the love of a child, and in that way "forget many things."

A Farewell Tea.

June 12.—We start to-night, and Jack and Sally came over to take a farewell make-believe tea on the lawn. I wish I could have been spared it, for, with my sorrow over her unhappiness, my indignation at him and the fight I am making to keep down all rebellious longings, I am rapidly getting myself into a serious state.

"I met Mrs. Brown on the street when away last week," said Jack, drinking make-believe tea out of a cup as big as a thimble.

To be so brazen! I wouldn't have thought it of him! I shouldn't have looked at Sally when he said it. I should have had more sense. But men have no sense in such matters, and I can't claim a credit that doesn't belong to me. So I looked at her, and made no reply, and when Jack, in his asinine stupidity wondered why I made no answer and looked up to see, he found me gazing at his wife with what must have been anything but a conventional tea party expression. And he saw that she had dropped the cream pitcher and it was broken, and that her eyes were filled with tears, and her face white, as she apologized to Manette, an unusual emotion over the loss of a child's dish!

Nor did her color come back, though Manette said it was all right in her sweetest manner, and her tears continued to flow in an altogether uncontrollable way, though Manette climbed on her lap and hugged her and said she didn't care for the dishes and would rather lose all of them than see Aunt Sally cry.

"You are getting as foolish and nervous as an old woman," grumbled her husband. "I don't suppose a dozen tea sets like these cost a dollar."

"They don't," I agreed. "But sometimes we don't reckon the cost of a thing after it is broken."

Manette Asleep.

June 13.—It is midnight, and Manette is asleep in her berth. Poor little girl! I decided when I saw Richards weeping over her, and Sarah Rae wiping her eyes with her knuckles, and the cook and the maids looking as if at a funeral, with Tompkins as the undertaker, that we have all been loving her too much.

Everyone acted as if she might never come back alive, and their lugubrious expressions and tear-soaked farewells made the child look frightened. "Am I your sick baby?" she asked, when we had waved the last good-bye, and Tompkins was taking us to the train.

Mrs. Spencer rode in the limousine with us. It was a journey of an hour's duration to reach the little suburban station I had decided to take to escape newspaper observation, and she insisted on taking it. I was sorry.

Manette, exhausted by the day's excitement, fell asleep in my arms within five minutes, and I think for the first half hour neither Sally nor I spoke a word.

Then she began. "I have been thinking over what you said, Max," she said, "and I refuse to let you think you are right. I need a big brother. Do you know I haven't a relative in the world unless my husband can be called one? You need a sister, someone to help you with the care of that child, and to whom you can come with all your little and big troubles.

"So it is all settled. You are to have no further thought of anything else in your head. I am your sister; you are my brother. It was the happiest relationship I have ever known. I refuse to let it be spoiled by your silly notion that you may not care more for me than you should."

Not another word was spoken. We reached the station, and the train pulled in. I carried Manette to my stateroom, and then returned to the limousine to bid good-bye to Sally.

Another Kiss.

I held out my hand. She ignored it, and put both arms around my neck.

"Good-bye, best brother in the world," she whispered, kissing my cheek.

God! It was more than mortal man could stand. I threw my arms around her, and when I left her a moment later I am sure that I took with me every hope she could have had that my love for her was like a man feels for his sister.

Wrong Stuff.

Entering a barber's shop, a customer with scanty locks asked for a bottle of hair restorer, with which the assistant promptly supplied him. For a time he persevered in his application of the remedy for missing hair, but this only resulted in raising bumps in his cranium which would have puzzled the most expert phrenologist. In haste he returned to the barber's shop.

"Look," he exclaimed, excitedly, "what the stuff you sold me in this bottle has done to my head!"

Puzzled and perplexed, the barber took the bottle, examined it, then turned to the assistant and fairly shouted:

"You blockhead! What you have sold this customer is not hair restorer. It is my patent recipe for bust developing!"

Plenty of Time.

Mr. Styles: "I have two tickets for the opera."

Mrs. Styles: "Oh, good! I'll go and put my hat on right away."

"All right, dear. I guess you'll be ready in time. The tickets are for to-morrow night."

THREE WOMEN TESTIFY

To the Merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound During Change of Life.

Streator, Ill.—"I shall always praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound wherever I go. It has done me so much good at Change of Life, and it has also helped my daughter. It is one of the grandest medicines for women that can be bought. I shall try to induce others to try it."—Mrs. J. H. Campbell, 206 N. Second St., W. S., Streator, Illinois.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"It was at the 'Change of Life' that I turned to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, using it as a tonic to build up my system, with beneficial results."—Mrs. Sara Hayward, 1825 W. Venango St. (Tioga), Phila., Pa.

San Francisco, Cal.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for many years whenever I would feel bad. I have gone through the Change of Life without any troubles and thank the Compound for it. I recommend it to young girls and to women of all ages."—Mrs. C. Barrie, 3052 25th St., San Francisco, Cal.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The Ghost Breaker

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Is this man Warren, the ghost-breaker?"

"Remember, he's harmless," cautioned Jarvis, to the detectives out of the corner of his mouth. "Humor him—agree with anything he says."

The Duke was almost blind with fury because he could not hear the mumbled words. There is no knowing what he would have been if he had heard them.

"Answer my question!" he stormed. "Is this man Warren, the ghost-breaker?"

"Tom" had to hide behind his more self-possessed friend, who managed to gurgle:

"Now, that's all right, Dook. Sure he's a ghost-breaker! Ain't he, Tom?"

Tom was nearly purple in the face, but he managed to get out in a half strangled voice:

"Surest thing you know, bo."

"Sacristi!" foamed the exalted cousin. "Am I, Hernado d'Alva, to be mocked at by two grinning, bull-necked scullions?"

"Shake a leg there!" called a voice from the deck, "if you are going ashore with the pilot!"

The detectives staggered weakly to the door and Driscoll feebly waved his hand farewell.

"You're all right, Dook, old boy! Ghost-breaker! Whee! Wow! Ha, ha!"

The Ambush at the Inn.

Segura, cupped in a fertile valley among the jagged red-brown Spanish mountains, was the natural home of rest. When you came down to it over the winding mountain road it breathed from afar the spirit of dolce far niente. All day long it dozed in the soft yellow sunlight, and all night long it slept in the dim glow of the great yellow stars.

At times its peace was broken by the sudden, fierce descent of a mountain storm. Then the wild lightnings play around the towers of the old castle perched high above it, and the warm rain lashes through the olive trees and beats clamorous summons on the flat roofs of the houses.

But these storms quickly pass and leave Segura greener, fairer, lazier and sleepier than before.

Scientists have observed that a people inevitably conform themselves to their environment; that in their character and even their physical make-up they reflect the climate and topography of their native land. It was so with Segura and the Segurans. They were a solidly built, but for the most part a placid and ox-eyed breed, but likely to be swept by sudden and violent storms of passion, when the steel flashed, sharply and deadly as the mountain lightning. Excitement, passion of any sort, quickly spent its force.

The Little Inn.

Entering the town by the old Roman road, which is still the one decent highway of the region, you pass the little Church of Our Lady of Roncomadour and just beyond it you come upon the one little inn of the town. Here the villagers have for generations done most of their gambling, dueling and drinking. You enter into a large room and see a fireplace at your left and tables scattered about the floor in front of it.

At your right the staircase rises against the front wall of the room, so that only the foot is visible from the door. Beneath the stairs are two deep windows, so close together as to be practically one. There is a table in this little alcove and it is a fine place in which to eat your supper, for the windows command a view of the valley and, beyond, the rugged mountains and the great castle, dark and stern, against the sunset. Sitting there you would be disappointed if you were not told that the old castle was haunted. Its great square towers and sheer, half-ruined curtains hark back to a time when ghosts should have been bred by the score.

The Seguras had wrenched it from a feudal enemy and held it for their king. The Moor had been thrust back from its walls three times in the last days of Granada. Its towers had rung with battle cries and crash of blade and armor. Its halls and stairways had been slippery with blood and its moat choked with the harvest of the fight.

You may have some difficulty in obtaining this table, as it is a favorite one of the Seguran card players and idlers. Any of the other tables will be generally at your disposal, for most of the natives prefer the wineroom, which is at the end of the passage that opens at the rear. But this particular spot is a favorite.

Just at this time it was at a premium, especially as night fell over the valley. For even the bovine nature of the Segurans was stirred by the repeated tragedies and unsolved mystery of the grim and deserted castle.

Gaspar, a fat-faced, round-bodied villager, one of the most sedulous of the customers of Pedro, the inkeeper, sat at the little table by the windows and told the latest developments to a friend just returned from his military service in Africa. The young Prince had gone in to lay the ghost and find the treasure. That was two weeks ago, and—Sancta Maria!—not one sound or sign of him since.

"What men will not do for money or women!" commented the bravo, with piety. He looked keener and more alert than the other villagers as a result of his recent army experience. His name was Maximo. "Did he go in alone?" he asked.

"Old Vardos, his father's body servant, pleaded with him all the way to the angle where the brook runs out of the moat not to throw away another life for that phantom treasure. Every night since then the old man has returned and left a basket of provisions at the main gate." Gaspar's great dark eyes opened and his voice took on a hollow tone. "None of them had been touched!"

Maximo swore with sympathetic vigor.

"And wouldn't any one go in there with him?"

Gaspar stared at him as if he thought him demented.

"No! Why should they?"

"He is your Prince," frowned the soldier.

Gaspar shrugged his shoulders uncomfortably and shuffled his feet under the table.

"Isn't a man's life his own?" he growled.

"Sacristi! You are a lot of old women," snapped Maximo. "Where is his sister—the Princess? What is she doing about it?"

"She's not here—she is away—gone on some mysterious errand to America. It is rumored in the village that she went to get a man to fight the ghost."

The soldier flushed a brick-red under his dark skin.

"In the name of the Virgin! Did she have to go that far for some one with stomach enough to go into the castle?"

At the moment Dolores, the innkeeper's daughter—the pretty black-eyed belle of the village—slipped into the room and wanted to know what was the matter. Gaspar explained that he thought he had seen a light from the main tower of the castle a short time before and was explaining the situation to his friend. The girl pooh-poohed the idea and the twain departed for the wine room in search of refreshment.

Dolores was evidently waiting for some one. She went to the window and looked out down the road repeatedly. At last she was rewarded by the appearance of a lithe, gray-haired man, who hastened to greet her.

"Any news, Vardos?" she cried eagerly.

He held out a basket which he carried. His face was gray and solemn and his eyes shone in the firelight.

"Nothing," he replied in a low, faltering voice. "Here is the basket—untouched, as usual." He placed the basket on the table by the window and stared out at the castle for a moment in silence.

"This is the fifteenth night," he added.

"Gaspar swears he saw a light in the tower to-night," said the girl, in the same hushed tones. The old servitor crossed himself.

"If he did it was an unblessed light."

The girl crossed herself also, and muttered a short prayer.

"You haven't given up hope?" she asked, after a pause, and the question was more of a plea than otherwise.

Vardon shook his head.

No Hope.

"I gave up hope when he went in. I waited to-night until an hour past sundown, and twice I called. Once," he gulped and his voice grew shakier, "a wail came back to me! It may have been the wind through a grated window, but it sounded like a sigh of the damned! When I called again, something moved in the turret of the keep, like a man waving, and my heart leaped with joy. But only for an instant; for, with a harsh cry, a black, ugly bird flapped from the turret straight for where the sun had set—on my left! Mind you, the left—"

Dolored shuddered and her lip trembled.

"Oh, if the Princess were only here!" she wailed.

"She's on her way—but what can she do?"

Dolores' slender body straightened instantly and the shadow of terror disappeared. Her eyes flashed and her bosom heaved with sudden passion.

"She will go straight to the castle," she cried. "And will Segura have it said that she went alone?"

This time it was Vardos who shuddered. "God forbid that it should come to that!" he exclaimed, fervently. "Good-night."

The little inn was undisturbed for some little while after the departure of Vardon. It was nearly 8 o'clock when a tall, powerfully made man galloped up on a black horse, tossed the bridle to a hostler and strode into the main room of the inn. He had probably the hardest face in all the rough region of hard faces. His mouth was wide, but was a mere slit in a craggy countenance. His cheeks were laced with white scars. One long weal traveled from the bridge of the nose downward to the angle of the jaw. His eyebrows were bushy and jet black and shaded the most sinister and menacing pair of black eyes ever set into a human face. This was Don Robledo, bravo, duelist, general "bad man" and right-hand ruffian of the Duke of Alva.

Finding no one about he thumped the top of the table with his riding whip and bellowed:

"Hey! You, Pedro!"

The Bully.

A sleepy voice replied somewhere in the recesses of the house.

"Wake up!" roared Don Robledo, whacking the table again.

Then the inn-keeper seemed to recognize this peculiar summons, or the voice of the summoner, and he came on the run.

"A thousand pardons, senor!" he begged, stumbling into the room. "What can I do for you?"

Don Robledo glared at him until the inn-keeper was reduced to a condition of abject terror, then snapped:

"My horse is outside. Wash out his mouth and don't water him till he is cool. Leave the saddle on."

"Yes, senor! Yes, senor!"

Pedro made hurriedly for the door, but was stopped by a sharp command.

"Hold on. If that rat-infested larder of yours is empty, get it filled before His Excellency arrives."

"The Duke coming here!" exclaimed Pedro. "When?"

"To-night. Don't stand and stare! Where's your daughter?"

"I'll call her," the inn-keeper assured him, hastening out.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

THE SPANISH BULLY

The innkeeper came on the run.

"A thousand pardons, senor, he begged, stumbling into the room; "What can I do for you?"

Don Robledo glared at him until the innkeeper was reduced to a condition of abject terror, then snapped:

"My horse is outside. Wash out his mouth and don't water him until he is cool. Leave the saddle on."

"Yes, senor. Yes, senor."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FORGIVE HIM, OF COURSE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The other day, while talking to a young man, he kissed me. I was very indignant, and refused to speak to him again. He sent me a letter of apology, and apologized personally, but still I refuse to speak to him. Would you advise me to ignore him entirely?

C. T.

He has shown due repentance, and I hope you will forgive him. If he is the gentleman I hope he is, he will not repeat the offense until an engagement makes it a privilege.

I HOPE NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been in love with a cousin for four months, and although we have not spoken of it, I feel that she reciprocates. But, being a young man of a serious mood, I am at times annoyed by her teasing and silly actions, also I am grieved because when there is company she seemingly neglects me for other young men, while when we are alone she accepts my attentions. Do you think she loves me?

MUSIC LOVER.

You are cousins, which should be a bar to any closer relationship. Though you were not, I would still hope she did not love you, for you, being "of serious mood," would change her happy, merry disposition to one more grave, instead of being glad. The Lord made her that way.

CERTAINLY.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I would like to know if it is proper for me to ask a friend if I may take her home. If it is, I would like to know the proper thing to say.

A. H. B.

"May I take you home?" is the simplest and best form to use. Always ask her, never taking it for granted, as some men have done, and in that way compelling her acceptance.

Henry Gets a Rest

"HENRY said," related Mrs. Dillpickle, "that he was not feeling very fit and the change would do him good. 'If you insist,' said he, 'on spending a week in Michigan at the summer cottage getting things ready for the family invasion I might as well go along. There will be fishing—it's just the time for bass—and, besides, maybe I can help you.'

"Henry added that last phrase with the air of a guilty sudden thought. He is a good husband, but I must say that around the house Henry Dillpickle is about as much use as a flying machine or a white elephant. But I let him go along. I've had experience before when I yearned for a strong right arm to beat rugs and rake and spade and scrub and couldn't hire any one because all the men were doing spring plowing and all the women were busy wiping up mud tracks after them.

"Henry has put on too much weight and all winter he mourned because he had no time to take an expensive gymnastic and massage course to run down his weight. He has talked loud and long about how willingly he would live on bran diet and be pounded to a jelly if only he could lose weight, and I thought I saw a way to help him and also myself.

A Feverish Stare.

"When the launch dumped us and our baggage on the pier and went coughing away Henry began looking at the lake with that absorbed, feverish, fisherman's stare. I stopped that immediately.

"'Run on to the cottage, Henry,' I said, 'and get the wheelbarrow and cart up the trunk and the linoleum and the suit case and the groceries.'

"'In these clothes?' he howled reproachfully.

"'There is a lovely suit hanging in the closet at the cottage,' I told him. 'Don't you remember? It's the one you wore when you fell into the lake and went berrying and got run over by the Fishers' automobile. There is fringe on the cuffs, but nobody will see you—trot on!'

"The way Henry puffed and steamed getting that luggage to the house would have been heartrending had I not been too busy cleaning out the kitchen. I made him eat his lunch on the kitchen table, which broke his proud heart. Just as he was getting out an afterlunch cigar I put a spade into his hand.

"'You will have time to fix about half the garden this afternoon,' I told him. 'Then there's the yard to rake, and I want what's left of the woodpile moved, and you know we're going to make a new path to the lake. Meanwhile, I wish you'd beat these rugs.'

"Henry looked at me reproachfully, but I was adamant. 'I did think,' said he feebly, 'that maybe I'd get a nice mess of fish for dinner——'

"'Fish?' echoed I. 'Oh, my, no! Not when I have a lovely can of salmon ready!'

"Henry groaned and took up the white man's burden. He went to bed at 7 o'clock that night, walking bent over like an old man. He said that never again should he wonder at the hobbling, shuffling gait of steady farmers. He understood why they couldn't straighten up.

"He tried to slip out at 5 the next morning to go fishing, but I opened one eye and suggested that it would be nice if he would start the kitchen fire and a blaze in the firepiace. Two hours later I found Henry, all smudged like a stoker, shaking his fist at the kitchen stove, which he had entirely covered with all the ashes he hadn't scattered over the floor. 'I've put everything on that fire of yours,' he stormed, 'from kerosene to vanilla extract, and it won't burn! There is a Michigan law against cook stoves burning, I know! I——'

"'When I suggested that if he opened the drafts instead of shutting them it might be better, Henry just blew up and popped out of doors, where he chopped the window boxes into kindling wood before he realized what he was doing. I had to stand over him that day to make him keep on with the garden. By night he said he felt queer and knew he was going to die and that he had no idea I had such a cruel and inconsiderate nature.

"The next morning he groaned feebly when I woke him and then he refused to get up. He said his head ached and his back ached, and his legs and arms ached, and why in thunder didn't I hire a man to do my slaving and let him expire in peace?

Glad To Go.

"I had to spend a great deal of the day putting hot cloths on Henry's aches and pains and soothing his disposition, and when he did rise from his bed of suffering he said 'Ouch!' whenever he moved, and he looked pale.

"The last day there I let him go fishing and he came home with a fine string of fish. He nearly fainted when I said that, of course, he would have to clean them for me. Did Henry Dillpickle can't kill a mosquito without gulping, and those fish were still lively. At dinner he said he guessed he had lost his fondness for fish.

"Henry said he was mighty glad to get home," concluded Mrs. Dillpickle, "where he could recover his health and strength after his strenuous rest in the country!"

Household Suggestions

To keep the hands soft have a bottle of olive oil on your washstand, and before washing the hands rub a little of the oil well in. Then soap and wash as usual. The oil loosens the dirt and also keeps the skin soft.

Grass stains may be removed from washing materials by carefully rubbing the spots with a little fresh lard. Then wash in the usual way, and you will find that the stains have entirely disappeared.

To make bread crumbs quickly place a piece of bread in a muslin bag, tie the opening, and rub with the hands. The crumbs will be quite fine, and it will only take a minute or two to bake them.

To make cabbage digestible, when half boiled pour off the water and place in fresh boiling water.

When preparing the whitening for ceilings or pantries, add one pint of boiled milk, after you have put in as much water as you require. The milk gives the ceiling a beautiful gloss when dry and keeps the whitening from rubbing off.

Tea Made with Boiling Milk instead of water and allowed to stand for four minutes before being poured off the leaves is excellent for invalids and most nourishing.

An Economical Way of Frying Onions is to place sufficient cold water at the bottom of the pan to cover it, then slice the onions and put them into the pan with a piece of dripping the size of a walnut. Fried in this way they will not burn.

SPLENDID HOT WEATHER FOOD

You should eat meat very sparingly during hot weather—meat heats the body. At the same time, you must eat nutritious food.

Try Faust Spaghetti. It is a nutritious, non-heating food. Made from Durum Wheat, the cereal that overflows in gluten, a muscle, bone and flesh builder. A 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef—ask your doctor. Write for free recipe book and find out how many different ways Faust Spaghetti can be served to tease the palate. Sold in 5c and 10c packages.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a comity of ladies caim to the house last nite. Thay belong to a new club wich Ma has joined, called the Sisters of the Songbird. The object of the club, Ma told Pa, is to teech the art of singing & the art of making new & butiful songs & sending them to forrin lands ware the heethen is setting alone in his blindness.

One of the ladies did all the talking. Her naim was Missus Smily Goode. The way she looked at Pa onst wen he tried to say sumthing & interrupted her, it was a awful look. I bet Mister Goode is a kind of a silent man.

The objeck of our order, sed Missus Goode, is to promote song in all its butiful buty. Song & the maiking of songs has progressed, she sed, until it is grate in its vary grateness. What is noabler or grater than one who makes songs? she sed to Pa.

I doan't know, sed Pa, the only song writers I know is jest plain good fellows like Vince Bryant and Billy Cobb or Harry Williams. Thay don't feel grate or noabel excep sumtimes late at nite or at a stag party, Pa sed.

But I mean songs for the heethen to make them see the truth, sed Missus Goode. I mean songs that shud be sent to forrin countries.

He Indorsed It.

That is what shud be did with a lot of the songs that is a kind of rage now, Pa sed. One sure thing, sed Pa, if a good heethen mother saw sum of them songs like "Wait Till I Git You Alone Tonite" & a lot of that tripe, she wuddent let her littel heethen daughter sing it, Pa sed. I doan't think we peepul in this country have a rite to send misshunaries anyware after standing for sum of the songs that make a hit here.

You doan't seem to understand, sed Missus Emily Goode. This is the kind of songs we are going to send to the heethen like this one wich I have just rote. Then she sang:

Kindness, kindness, gentle kindness
Must be shown by all us gurls
To the heethen in his blindness
Diving after preshus pearls.
Oh the foolish pearls he dives for
Underneath the deep blue sea.
Vain are the foolish things he strives for,
Let us help him, you & me.

CHORUS.

Kindness, kindness, that's the word
That by heathen must be herd.
Preech it, sisters, everyware,
Sing it to sum heethen air.
Till the cannibuls we know there
Will not gulp us wen we go there.

Well, sed Pa, ware are you all deer littel cunning reeformers going to get the gelt for this grand movement? You cant maik it by publishing & selling yure songs, sed Pa, beekaus the song bisness is on the fritz.

Strong, Brave Men.

We are going to deepend on you strong, brave men to help us out, sed one of the Sisters of the Songbird. We are kind of deependent on you noabel men, after all is sed & done about our wanting to vote & all that. We lean on you.

Not on me, sed Pa. I am too long in the league. I wont give a cent. Put that in yure pipes and sing it, sed Pa.

What She Was Meant For.

A lady of great beauty and attractiveness, who was an ardent admirer of Ireland, once crowned her praise of it at a party by saying:

"I think I was meant for an Irishwoman."

"Madam," rejoined a witty son of Erin, who happened to be present, "thousands would back me in saying that you were meant for an Irishman."

A Stunning Hat

Fully Described by Olivette

By Olivette.

A WONDERFUL picture hat for the fresh young face is the one we illustrate to-day. Black Milanese straw forms the foundation, and a double flounce of accordion plated maline shadows the brim. The maline covers the rounded crown and a narrow fluting of it edges the top of the crown. At the base of the crown in front nestles a great full-blown rose in glowing crimson, and wound loosely around the crown is double-faced black satin ribbon, which falls in graceful loops and ends from the down-curving back brim. One end of the ribbon is almost to the waist, and the other falls almost to the knees—a most unusual new feature.

A Good Reason.

It was a red-letter day at one of our large schools, and the boys were under examination in "optics." The point under illustration was that strictly and scientifically speaking, to see not objects, but their images depicted on the retina. The doctor, to make the matter plainer, said to the head of the class:

"Jackson, did you ever actually see your father?"

Bill promptly replied: "No, sir."

"Please explain why you never saw your own father."

"Because," replied Bill, very gravely, "he died before I was born, sir."

Introducing Himself.

A gentleman was once advertised to sing at a charity concert presided over by a city councilor—a self-made man. The first song was "The Owl." On rising to announce it the chairman was interrupted and informed that the singer had not arrived, a fact that he duly notified to the audience.

A little later, however, the missing baritone made his appearance, and was observed by the worthy chairman, who called on him without delay.

But the singer had hurried, and had not recovered his breath, so, with apologies, this fact was suitably explained and another artiste requisitioned. At length the baritone was quite ready.

The councilor rose, and quite innocently discomfited the long-awaited singer by announcing with marked confidence:

"Mr. 'Ampton will now favor us with the longed-for 'Howl!'"

Their Married Life

Helen Determines to Brave Warren's Wrath and Engage Rooms at Another Hotel.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

HELEN opened the door to the grinning French maid with the coffee and rolls. The girl looked uncertainly around for some place to set the tray, for on the only table Helen had unpacked her traveling bag.

"Wait, you can put it here," and Helen hurriedly cleared off the table.

The maid, who could not understand or speak a word of English, put down the tray, chattered something in French, and hurried out.

"Breakfast come?" called Warren from the bedroom.

"The tray's come, but I shouldn't call it breakfast," answered Helen, viewing it with disgust. "Just see how they serve things here!"

It was certainly not an attractive tray. There were only coffee and rolls. A roll and a blackened spoon and knife was thrust in each of the thick, chipped coffee cups. There was a small plate of butter, a brown earthenware coffee pot, a pitcher of hot milk, a saucer with a few lumps of sugar—and nothing else. There were no napkins, and not even saucers for the cups.

"Well, they don't believe in unessentials, that's certain," was Warren's comment as he surveyed the tray.

"Look at that silver!" exclaimed Helen indignantly, taking the blackened spoon and knife from one of the cups.

"I'd hardly call it silver. But come on—draw up a chair there. It's after nine now and I ought to be out of here."

Helen spread a fresh towel on the table to serve as a cloth, and arranged on it the meager contents of the tray.

"Here, dear, this is as good as paper napkins," taking from her trunk some crumpled tissue paper.

Helen in Distress.

"Oh, don't be so darn particular," pouring out his coffee, while Helen wiped out her cup and spoon with the paper. "You've got to put up with a lot of things when you travel."

"I can put up with almost anything—if it's clean. But I don't think this place IS clean. Hadn't you better tell them as you go out that we're not going to stay?"

"I've no time to look up any other place," he frowned. "I'm here on business and got to be on the job. We can put up with this for a couple of weeks—won't be here longer than that."

Helen flushed. "Dear, I CAN'T stay at this place. I tell you it isn't CLEAN! I can't eat here," pushing back untouched the cup of muddy, brown coffee.

"See here, the place for anybody that's as blamed fussy as you—is at home! If I'd had any sense, I'd left you there."

"But can't I find other rooms?" pleadingly. "I haven't anything else to do—I can start out the first thing this morning. Dear, you said we didn't have to stay here if we didn't like it."

"Well, I like it all right. This is good enough for anybody. We've got two big rooms right on the Boulevard, within a stone's throw of the Opera House—what more do you want?"

He pushed back the shabby red velvet arm chair, crumpled the tissue paper into a ball and threw it on the table as he rose.

"Now I'll be back here about half-past six, and we'll go out to dinner. You can fool around the shops or do anything you like—but we're going to let well enough alone and stay right here. Understand?"

He strode into the bedroom, brushed his hat, jammed it on his head, got some papers out of his suit case and started for the door.

"Now, you've got enough money?"

Helen nodded.

"Well, the American Express Company is right around the corner—they'll tell you how to get anywhere. You might stop in there and see if there's any mail for us.

An Appalling Thought.

Helen followed him to the door, realizing that when Warren went out on the street he would be lost to her—there would be no way she could reach him until 6 o'clock. To be left so alone the first day in a foreign city seemed suddenly somewhat appalling. Warren kissed her hurriedly, and drew away from her clinging arms with a curt:

"Now, take care of yourself. Don't get run over. You have to look where you're going here—these cabmen'd sooner run over you than not. Go to the Bon Marche. That's a big shop—you can spend most of the day there."

When he had gone, Helen glanced around with a dismayed sense of her loneliness. And this place—she HATED it! The strong morning sun lit up the shabby carpet and the dusty, worn, red velvet furniture. The bedroom with its now disordered bed and untidy wash-stand was even less attractive.

A few minutes later Helen, armed with her guide-book and a book of French phrases, locked her trunk and started out—determined to find other rooms in spite of what Warren had said.

She knew the Continental Hotel was very near, for he had pointed it out as they drove from the station. When she entered the lobby, it was with a sight of relief. At least this looked more like the hotels at home. One of the clerks, who spoke English, informed her that they had not a single vacant room and would not have for the next ten days.

From there Helen went to the American Express Company. She paused to view the Opera House which the guide-book said was the heart of Paris.

It was a majestic building, but Helen was not in the mood for sight-seeing this morning. The wonder of being in Paris was somewhat dulled by what she considered the "wretched" place at which they weer stopping. For Helen had none of the instincts of a real traveler. Her first demand was for cleanliness and comfort—to her the joys of sightseeing were secondary.

The American Express Company was a big, hospitable building on the corner. Two-thirds of the Americans in Paris have their mail sent to this office, and when Helen entered a dozen or more were writing letters and taking advantage of the guide-books, dictionaries and bureau of information. At the mail window Helen asked timidly if there was anything for Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Curtis."

The clerk took down a big package of letters from the "C" pigeon-hole, shuffled over them quickly and threw out three for Warren and one for herself. Helen went to a desk by the window and eagerly opened the letter from her mother.

Carterstown, Mo.,
June 24, 1913.

My Dear Helen—I am writing this several days before you sail so that it will be awaiting for you when you reach Paris. Do hope your voyage will be a smooth one, and that you will not be seasick.

I am sending you a clipping from the "Daily Trumpet." I don't know how they get the news out here, but you see they do. Everyone here thinks it's fine that you can travel so much. To go to London last year and to Paris this year—that's more than anyone in Carterstown can do. Did I tell you that the Episcopal Church had made up a fund to send their pastor, Dr. Eldridge, abroad this summer? The two Dobson girls are going also. But they're all going on a cheap line from Montreal. You are very fortunate to be able to go on the best line and in such grand style.

I know you will enjoy all the sights in Paris and the many beautiful shops. Send me a post card when you can. I will not expect you to write much, as I know you will be too busy.

I hope Warren will be successful in his business, as you write that this is only a business trip.

With love to both, MOTHER.

The clipping from her home town paper, Helen read with an amused smile:

"Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Curtis, of New York City, are sailing for Paris on the Kaiser Wilhelm. Mrs. Curtis was formerly Miss Helen Allen, of this city, and has many friends and relatives here. Mr. Curtis is a prominent lawyer in New York. We hope that their trip will be a pleasant one."

She slipped the letter back into the envelope, wondering if they would think Warren and she were traveling in such "grand style" if they could see the room she had left this morning.

A Daring Plan.

Helen looked up quickly as two American women sat down nearby.

"You're staying at the Ritz, aren't you?" asked the other one.

"Oh, no, we discovered the most wonderful little hotel this year. We've two beautiful rooms for only twenty francs a day! Everything's so clean and the service is PERFECT. Perhaps you know of it—Hotel Ronceray, 10 Rue Montaigne.

Helen hastily scribbled the address in the back of her guide-book, then gathering up her mail, she went deliberately over to the information desk and asked what bus would take her to the Rue Montaigne.

Two beautiful rooms for twenty francs a day, and they were paying sixteen at that dreadful place! Helen's lips were suddenly set in a little grim line of determination. If this hotel was as that woman had described it, she would brave Warren's wrath and engage the rooms. She would even retain them with a deposit—a deposit large enough to insure their taking them.

It was so rarely that Helen ever took even the slightest initiative without consulting Warren, that when a few moments later she climbed on the bus that was to take her to the Hotel Ronceray, her heart beat fast at her own daring.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Now you'd better go and go quick!

CHAPTER XVII.

WHEN Jennie and the fellow met Tom, as they were going into the place—that Jennie thought was only a restaurant—Jennie just nodded to Tom and was going on in with the fellow. But Tom stood in the way and asked Jennie if she hadn't better come home with him.

At this the fellow got real angry and asked Tom who HE was and what business was it of HIS. Tom didn't pay any attention to the fellow, but would not let Jennie pass. Jennie was for getting angry, too, and told Tom it was none of his business.

Then Tom finally told her that her aunt, the boarding house keeper, was very sick and that she had sent him to bring Jennie home in a hurry. The fellow shook his fist in Tom's face and tried to shove him aside. Tom grabbed him by the collar, shaking him, and said, "You measly rat, I know about this place where you are trying to take this young girl and if it wasn't for creating a scene I'd break every bone in your wretched body, and now you'd better go and go quick, for I might do it anyway, before this hot weather makes me lose my temper."

Tom then took Jennie by the arm and walked off down the street. Jennie had never seen Tom quite so aroused, and, strange to relate, she was as meek as a lamb and walked with him to the car, never saying a word.

When they were on the car, Tom turned to her and said, "Jennie, girl, your aunt isn't sick. She didn't send me for you at all. I just told you that to get you away from that place and that fellow. I happened to be passing and saw you with that man and going into that awful place and told you that about your aunt, so as to get you away quick. If you had gone into that place you'd never been the same girl afterward, for it's one of the worst places in town, and I love you, Jennie, and I want you to kind a think of me once in a while." But Jennie looked straight ahead, not saying a word.

CRACKERS NOW BATTLING FOR GRAND OLD RAG

They Could Make Only Thirteen Runs Monday, but Managed to Win—Race Tight.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THIRTEEN is certainly a jinx for Atlanta. It's been a jinx all season. It is still jinxing. Take it yesterday. The Crackers were playing a marvelous offensive game—simply marvelous. Yet, try as they could, old Thirteen had 'em anchored. They got right up to thirteen hits and thirteen runs and there they stuck.

It was surely unlucky.

Yet, as the league-leading Billikens could make only seven runs through all a hot afternoon, the Crackers won.

And, since Chattanooga kindly trounced Mobile, the dear old race tightened up another notch.

* * *

FINE doings now in the first division! Montgomery has two games and a half on Mobile. Mobile has one on Atlanta. The locals are a game and a half ahead of Chattanooga.

Verily, some contest!

If Montgomery and Mobile lost again to-day—which would mean that Atlanta and Chattanooga must win, the race would tighten beautifully. The Billikens would hold a lead of a game and a half. But the Crackers would pass the Gulls, while the Lookouts would close up.

* * *

THE pennant bug seems to have bitten the Crackers at last. They played to win yesterday—strictly. And they won.

A team that will bat can not long be denied. And the Crackers everlastingly mauled the pellet yesterday.

They had to.

Good old Gil Price was bad, and run after run sifted in while he presided. Then they warmed up Dent, at the earnest solicitation of Whitey Alperman, who nearly waved off an arm getting the thing started. The Washington chap pitched pretty well. They got to him for a run in the sixth and in the seventh he contributed again, this time with the assistance of an error in the outfield. Before the Billiken scoring ended seven runs were chalked up against the Crackers. But that amounted to nothing.

The locals knocked the Brown Boys, E. and C., out of the box in the order named. Then Dobbs, having no pitcher, put in Breen. On appearance, Breen is to the pitching mound what a cart horse is to a pair of racing shafts. But he proved the best hurler of the three, and the Crackers scored but two runs while he performed, and those were helped along by two errors.

* * *

ONE gob of gloom cropped out when Wally Smith hurt his hand trying to stop a terrific liner and was forced to retire. But the fans were cheered by the excellent playing of Manush.

Apparently, Smith has forked a prize in this chap. He handled one slow ball phenomenally well, hauled down a pop, and looked useful at the bat, though he didn't happen to grub a hit.

* * *

THE game was full of weird batting performances. Here is a partial list:

Though Bailey scored three runs he was only given one time at bat. Once he walked, once he sacrificed, and twice he was hit. He seemed to think that C. Brown was trying to bean him and, when for the second successive time he was beaned—that time with a terrific ball to the jaw—he tried his best to throw his bat at Brown. Fortunately, Donahue saw the motion, grabbed the bat and hostilities were called off. To return to the batting performances:

Long only made two hits—for seven bases!

Smith hit two sacrifice flies out of four attempts.

Agler got to first three times and scored every time.

Dent made two hits for three bases and scored one run.

Wares made hits his first four times up. He began with a two-bagger. Then he slumped to singles his next pair of times out. Then he hit a three-bagger. A fly to Welchonce in the eighth marred a perfect batting score.

INTERNATIONAL SAILING RACE WON BY AMERICAN

NEW YORK, July 15.—The International sailing canoe cup is to-day safe from foreign invaders for some time to come. "To have and to hold" was the watchword yesterday when Leo Friede, of the Manhattan Canoe Club, the American defender, sent his little craft skimming over the eight-mile course at Grevesend Bay and shot across the finish line two minutes and twelve seconds ahead of his Canadian rival, Ralph H. Britton, of the Ganaoque Canoe and Motor Boat Club.

FOUR CLUBS SAVED FROM WRECK OF INTERSTATE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 15.—For the present the Interstate League will continue under its present name as a four-club circuit, with Erie, Wheeling, Akron and Youngstown as its members. Players of the Steubenville, Columbus, Zanesville and Canton clubs were paid up to July 15 inclusive, and some of them were turned over to the clubs still remaining in the organization.

Sox Buy Chappell; 'Comy' Pays Big Price

CHICAGO, July 15.—Larry Chappelle, the sensational outfielder of the Milwaukee team, of the American Association, was sold to the Chicago White Sox yesterday. For him President Comiskey gave Outfielder John Beall, a catcher whose name was not made public, and a "cash consideration." Chappelle is to report at once. He has been batting around .359 and fielding with the best of them. Practically every club in the major leagues bid for him.

President Comiskey, of the Chicago Club, said that Chappelle was the highest-priced baseball player ever purchased. Beyond stating that he valued Beall at $3,000, Comiskey, however, would not give any figures.

Williams and Ledoux In Coast Go To-night

LOS ANGELES, July 15.—The twenty-round bantamweight battle at Vernon Arena to-night between Kid Williams, of Baltimore, and Charley Ledoux, of France, promises to be one of the fastest battles ever staged on the coast.

Williams and Ledoux are almost identical in measurements and fight the same style of battle. The Frenchman is in much better condition than on his previous appearance here, when Eddie Campi won a twenty-round decision over him. Williams is also in prime condition. The betting, which at first was 10 to 8 on Williams, is now even money.

MAGNATE PLANS TOUR.

SEATTLE, WASH., July 15.—Michael Fisher, a local baseball magnate, is to-day planning a South Sea Islands baseball tour, which will include three months in Australia. Fisher contemplates establishing league baseball in Australia if the sport proves popular.

WALKER VS. MILLER.

WINNIPEG, MAN., July 15.—George Walker, Canadian champion middleweight wrestler, to-day was matched to meet Walter Miller, of Duluth, American champion, before a local club on July 31.

FODDER FOR FANS

After losing ten straight games the Brooklyn Dodgers finally broke their losing streak by beating the Cubs to the tune of 9 to 2.

* * *

After winning eight games the Pirates finally went down to defeat at the hands of the Boston Braves and this despite the fact that Hans Wagner was shoved in as a pinch hitter.

* * *

This is pennant-raising day at the Polo Grounds and a big crowd of baseball moguls flocked to New York to take part or look on. Among them is Garry Herrmann, whose Cincinnati Reds play the Giants this afternoon.

* * *

Ebbets field, home of the Dodgers in Brooklyn, is to be dedicated this afternoon. The fact that it is pennant-raising day at the Polo Grounds kept some notables away from Ebbets field who otherwise would have been there. However, among those who went to Brooklyn to take part were C. W. Murphy, owner of the Cubs; President F. J. Navin, of the Tigers; President C. W. Somers, of the Cleveland Naps; President B. F. Shibe, of the Athletics, and James E. Gaffney, of the Boston Nationals.

* * *

In the game between the Phillies and the Cardinals not a Quaker was left on bases in the eight innings. It was one of the best pitched games seen in Philadelphia this year.

* * *

Lefty Leifield, once a pitcher for the Pirates, and who was sold to the Cubs last fall, has been shunted to the minors. He goes to Atlanta.

* * *

Catcher Grover Land, of the Naps, has been released to the Toledo club.

* * *

The Senators had to use three pitchers to beat the Naps.

CRACKERS GET LEIFIELD; EVERS LETS CRAIG OUT

CHICAGO, July 14.—The Cub management announced that two of its players have been sent to the minor leagues. "Lefty" Leifield, the veteran southpaw pitcher, was first let out to the Atlanta team, as Manager Evers believes he has outlived his usefulness as far as the big teams are concerned.

Craig, the young collegian who joined the team a short time back, was sent to Terre Haute, Ind., for further seasoning.

LYNCH SATISFIED WITH HIS UMPIRES; NO CHANGE

NEW YORK, July 15.—There will be no change in the personnel of the National League staff of umpires this season, according to a statement issued last night by President Thomas J. Lynch. Mr. Lynch says that despite adverse criticism of umpires by several club owners, he has found the umpiring in the National League this year to have been as good as at any time in the last four years.

LAGRANGE AGAIN LEADS LEAGUE IN ATTENDANCE

LA GRANGE, GA., July 15.—Official announcement has just come from Georgia-Alabama League headquarters giving the figures on the attendance receipts at all Fourth of July games in the league. As in the case of the opening games, LaGrange leads by a large margin, and this, too, in the face of the fact that both Gadsden and Anniston are very much larger towns than LaGrange.

The receipts for the Fourth of July games were as follows: LaGrange, $382.40; Anniston, $364.35; Gadsden (morning game), $200.45; Gadsden (afternoon game), $212.30; Talladega (morning game), $198.10; Newnan (morning game), $174.20.

3 BIG EVENTS AT MOTORDROME MEET TO-NIGHT

Cracker Sweepstakes, at 7 Miles, Will Be Longest and Most Important Race of Season.

THE Cracker Sweepstakes, most important of the races scheduled for decision thus far at the local Motordrome, will be run Tuesday night. It was postponed from Friday night on account of rain.

The final in this event will be at seven miles, the longest race of the season. On account of its length this affair is likely to produce form upsets and might possibly produce some motorcycle upsets as well. A 7-mile race at 85 to 90 miles an hour on a 4-lap track is calculated to try to the utmost limits the endurance of any rider. And because a tired man is likely to wabble and because a wabble means a spill, there are fine possibilities for excitement in Tuesday night's races.

The Motordrome purse will be especially interesting because it will bring to a focus the speed rays from the three scintilating stars of the local track — McNeil, Graves and Richards. At the last meet the machines of McNeil and Graves went punk at the last minutes and Richards romped. This time they will have their machines in condition again and well tuned up. McNeil has had a run of especially hard luck this season, but he believes it has turned at last. If it has, Jock will make it exciting, for McNeil has the fastest machine at the track—when the blamed thing works.

Graves has a new Excelsior, a "boat" that has proved, at the Chicago Motordrome, that it is sensationally fast. It went bloote at the last races, but "Millionaire Morty" believe he has it tinkered up now to a point where nothing can happen to it, provided it stays on two wheels.

A third big attraction of the evening will be the 4-cornered match race. There is no telling which riders will be put in this, but Manager Prince will get his stars together for this one and give the public the greatest race possible.

First Event.

Jock McNeil, one mile against time, present world's record for quarter-mile track held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves. Time, :38 4-5.

Second Event:

Motordrome Purse.

One mile to qualify; three miles final. One to qualify in each heat and two in fastest heat.

No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 9, Harry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Third Event.

No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 7, George Renel; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Fourth Event.

No. 4, George Lockner; No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz.

Fifth Event.

Final of Motordrome Purse—Three miles.

Sixth Event:

Crackers' Sweepstakes.

Three miles to qualify and seven miles final. One to qualify in each heat and two in fastest heat.

No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Seventh Event.

No. 7, Georges Renel; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 8, Jock McNeil.

Eighth Event.

No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Ninth Event.

Seven-mile final of the Crackers' Sweepstakes.

Tenth Event.

Four-cornered special match race to be announced later, four miles.

DALEY GOES TO PELICANS.

NASHVILLE, TENN., July 15—It was announced last night that Jud Daley, outfielder of the local team, had been loaned to the New Orleans club. Daley has been on the bench for some days in this city.

PRURITIS A SEVERE FORM OF ECZEMA

A Method of Home Treatment That Is Very Effective.

There is probably no other remedy so well known as S. S. S. for the blood. And it is remarkably effective in that form of skin disease known as pruritis, or intense itching. The action of S. S. S. is rapid. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment. And the medical elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food. These facts are brought out in a highly interesting book on skin diseases, compiled by the medical department of the Swift Specific Co., 184 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It is mailed free, together with a special letter of advice, to all who are struggling with a blood disease.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day of your druggist. It will surprise you with its wonderful action in the blood.

Don't accept something offered you as "just as good." The only reason why anyone should not try to sell you something cheaper from crude drugs. Beware of any attempt to persuade you to buy something in place of S. S. S.

Here's a Sure Cure for Health

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

BUSINESS OF CHEERING.

"I never will return again," Jack Johnson boldly said,
And brought a million blessings down upon his kinky head,
And if the smallpox had refused to greet us any more
There would be less rejoicing on this hospitable shore,
And if the bill collectors had refused to hunt us out
Our nation would be less inclined to chortle lud to shout.

The report that Mr. Johnson intends to remain in France will not start any international complications—that is, unless France threatens to send him back.

It is said that Frank Chance gains five pounds every time he wins a ball game. At his present rate he may, in the course of years, become heavy enough to classify as a featherweight.

Charley Murphy may be justified in protesting against incompetent umpires, but if all the incompetents were driven from baseball, perchance a magnate or two would be looking for a new job.

Frank Chance thinks the Athletics will win, thereby demonstrating that he is not an original thinker.

Quoth a headline: "Ball Players Oppose Cut in Salary." We have always insisted that ball players greatly resemble human beings.

When Baker Borton is not traveling from the minors to the majors he is on his way back. Some day he may meet and trip himself.

The sensation of the year in the National League is the fact that the Phillies have meandered into the midst of July without having fractured a flock of legs.

SPORT.

Of all the sports I ever knew the one I love the most
Is sitting in a baseball park behind a great big post.

If baseball magnates had the interests of the public at heart (lawfter) they would build grandstands with glass posts. Or they would furnish each man who sits behind a post with an X-ray machine.

St. Louis has just discovered that there is gambling on baseball, thereby demonstrating that it has just recovered from an attack of blindness.

A chain, as a highbrow once remarked, is no stronger than its weakest link. Baseball is no better than its magnates.

When we think it over, this is an awful thing to say about baseball.

What puzzles us is that the magnates have not thought of charging extra money when there is an extra inning game.

Joe Rivers, who broke a milkman's jaw with a wallop, has learned that dentists and milkmen do not belong to the same lodge.

We note by the papers that Debs is winning in a walk. If this were to be printed around election time one would think some copy reader was trying to kid the public.

The gent who put up the kale to support the Porter races is one of our best little spendthrifts. If not, he is affected by the heat.

R. Zeider, the well known planter, announces that the harvesting of his bunion crop has been a complete success.

Mr. Zeider is said to be a clever youth, but he overlooked a golden opportunity. While he was under the anesthetic he could have had several cubic yards of nose removed.

Al Palzer and Georges Carpentier have been matched to engage in a conflict in France. And yet there are skeptics who claim that the dead never come back.

Jack Dillon has split with his manager, demonstrating that he is a bona fide pugilist. A bona-fide pugilist always splits with his manager when he starts to make any money.

Horse racing is one of the most popular of our sports. It is hard to believe otherwise when we note that they are giving away tickets.

ROUGH STUFF.

Perchance it is the lowbrow stuff in all our human blood,
But I always feel a thrill of joy intense
When a roughneck swings a hefty bat and makes a mighty thud
And the ball goes sailing over yonder fence.

Richards Wins Two Races and a Bride

Well, Tex Richards "went and done it."

Last week a story appeared that if Richards, champion motorcycle rider of Dixie, won two races at the last Drome meet he would win himself a bride.

He won both races.

But, of course, having been faked before, the public put it down as a press agent's myth.

The odd part about it is that the story was true.

It leaked out to-day that on Saturday afternoon Wilmer Richards, of Dallas, Texas, was married to Miss Tona Taylor, of Atlanta. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. A. Little at his residence, Forest avenue and Boulevard.

HOFMAN SUES CHICAGO CLUB FOR BACK PAY

CHICAGO, July 15.—The regular professional baseball contract—the link which welds together the great chain of organized baseball—is to be tested in the courts.

Arthur F. Hofman, former outfielder and utility man of the Chicago National League baseball team, through his attorney, Roy D. Keehan, filed suit against the club for $3,000, which, he claims, is due him as back pay through failure of the club management to notify him of the termination of his contract.

Hofman's suit is an attack on the validity of the regular baseball contract, in that he charges a system of practical peonage, by which the player is handled as a chattel. Through this system, according to Hofman's suit, baseball players may be "blacklisted" and kept from earning a living at their profession unless in perfect accord with the club owners.

The system, Hofman alleges, holds its strength through the ironclad agreement existing between each and every club owner in the National, American and other leagues operating under the "national agreement."

An example of the peonage charged by Hofman was pointed out in the case of Larry Chappelle, stellar outfielder of the Milwaukee American Association club.

"Mrs. Agnes Havenor owns the Milwaukee club," said Mr. Keehan. "She decided to sell Chappelle and went about it in mucht he same manner that a farmer about to sell a prize steer would do. She advertised among other baseball club owners for bids for her prize."

AVIATOR IS KILLED.

MUELHAUSEN, GERMANY, July 15.—A young German aviator named Dietrikhs, was killed here yesterday. While landing he brought his aeroplane too abruptly to earth; it overturned and he was crushed beneath the motor.

YANKEES BUY PITCHERS.

HELENA, MONT., July 15.—Manager Shea, of the Helena baseball team, of the Union Association, announced today the sale of Pitcher John Cooney, to the New York Americans.

BAUMAN REPORTS TO TIGERS.

DETROIT, MICH., July 15.—Hugh Jennings has recalled Third Baseman Bauman from Providence and expects to use him regularly with the Tigers.

BROU'S INJECTION—A PERMANENT CURE

of the most obstinate cases guaranteed in from 3 to 6 days; no other treatment required. Sold by all druggists.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Johnny Kilbane has decided to don the padded mitts again. The champion signed articles yesterday to box Mat Brock in a 12-round bout at Cleveland on Labor Day. The fighters have agreed to weigh 122 pounds at 3 o'clock.

* * *

Billy Gibson, manager of the Garden A. C., New York, is trying to induce Lightweight Champion Ritchie to meet Leach Cross in a 10-round bout next month. Gibson thinks the fight would draw $35,000, of which he offers Ritchie a 50-per cent guarantee.

* * *

Charley Ledoux, the French bantamweight champion, and Kid Williams, of Baltimore, will clash in a scheduled 20-round battle at Vernon, Cal., on Tuesday night. Both boys are in splendid shape and each is confident of victory. The betting favors the Baltimore lad at odds of 2 to 1.

* * *

Willie Ritchie, Joe Rivers and Leach Cross, all of whom have been in the public eye of late, fight under assumed names. In fact, a big percentage of the more prominent scrappers use stage names in the ring.

* * *

Frankie Russell threatens to be the next ring idol with New Orleans' fighting fans. Frankie was given a knock-out decision over Johnny Lore, the other night, and is now in line for a match with Charlie White, the Chicago whirlwind.

* * *

Danny Morgan, the talkative manager of Jack Britton, is hot over a match with Willie Ritchie for his protege. Morgan says he will give Ritchie a $10,000 side bet and will also get the club to stage the mill. This is a pretty strong line of chatter for even a man of Mr. Morgan's reputation.

* * *

Jack Dillon, claimant of the middleweight title, has signed articles to battle Tony Caponi in a 12-round set-to at Winnipeg on August 8. Dillon should have little trouble in defeating the Italian scrapper.

* * *

Despite his many years of service in the boxing game, Jim Flynn continues to reap in the dough. The Pueblo fireman is now billed to take on Gunboat Smith in a 10-round affair at New York the early part of next month.

* * *

When Al Palzer arrives in Paris all arrangements will be made for his scrap with the French heavyweight champion, Georges Carpentier. It is said they will get a $15,000 purse.

* * *

Friends of Ad Wolgast are begging the ex-champion to beat it to the farm and get into shape for a return engagement with Ritchie. There are still many who think that the "Michigan Wildcat" would have a great chance to regain his title if he would only get into real fighting shape.

* * *

Frankie Whitney, well known among local boxing followers, will probably make his next fight at Denver. A fight promoter in the Colorado city is after Whitney to meet Eddie Johnson in August. The pair clashed about two months ago with honors even.

* * *

Strenuous efforts are being made by Tommy Burns, ex-heavyweight champion and manager of Arthur Pelky, to arrange a match between his man and Gunboat Smith, to be fought in one of the California clubs. Burns is confident Pelky will defeat Smith if they meet.

* * *

Bud Anderson, the Oregon lightweight, will not fight for six months, according to his manager. Anderson is convalescing rapidly from his operation for appendicitis last Thursday.

INGRATITUDE.

The magnate reeled to his auto—
"Oh, take me to my yacht!"
He moaned, "My heart is broken—
And the day is very hot.
I can not join the thousands
Who watch those ingrates play.
"I hear"—a sob—"they claim I've
No right to cut their pay!"

CHAMPION RITCHIE, WE understand, is undecided whether to take a trip to Europe or engage in another bout of fisticuffs. If anyone wants to speculate against the trip to Europe we know where he can place a small sum.

A BIG LEAGUE MAGNATE IS showing evidences of the effect of the recent hot spell. He says that the chief objection to cutting ball games to catch trains is that it is "grossly unfair to the public." Sure! He really means the people who pay to see a whole ball game.

"FROM NOW ON," ANNOUNCES Johnny Dundee. "I will appear only as a lightweight." Admire his honesty in avoiding the word "fight."

JIMMY TAMSETT, SORE AT ARREST, TO QUIT DIAMOND

ALBANY, N. Y., July 15.—James L. Tamsett, manager and owner of the Albany State League Baseball Club and shortstop of the Memphis team nearly ten years ago, announces that because of the agitation against Sunday baseball and the subsequent arrest of himself and three Troy players on Sunday, June 29, he will withdraw from the game.

Manager Tamsett and the Troy men will be separately tried before Justice of the Peace Christopher Valentine, of the town of Colonie.

Hot Days Breed Lice By Millions, Keep Close Watch for Them

Cholera, a Much Dreaded Disease, Easily Stamped Out By This Method.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Judge Marshall: I have two hens that have a looseness of the bowels, and I fear it is cholera. Will you please give me a remedy and oblige.

Yours truly, J. R. C.
Conyers, Ga.

Reply: Many people want to jump at conclusions and call everything cholera that seems to trouble their chickens. This is especially true, if there is any sign of bowel trouble. While many of the ailments have no semblance of cholera, it is perhaps a good thing to get uneasy and be ready to investigate; with such a state of affairs, something is very likely to be done to better their condition. Very often, during hot weather, you will find a number of your hens stalking about the yard in a slow, listless manner, stopping to straighten their feathers and pick at themselves. You can just put it down in your notebook that they are being overrun with mites which are simply sucking their very life blood from them, which will cause them to have bowel trouble, and if the pests are not removed, it will not take very many days to see the death of many good hens? These hot days breed lice by the millions when they are allowed a start. After a few hens have died of such trouble of the bowels, caused by lice or mites, others may be affected by contagion, and real cholera is brought forth. In real cholera the fowl assumes a very tired or listful gait, similar to the one when lice is the trouble, but the discharge of the bowels is of a watery nature, green and bright yellow in color. The comb soon turns black or very dark purple; at times there is a foamy discharge from the mouth, but not always. When this is present it indicates cold in connection with the bowel trouble. When these decided symptoms of cholera are present a prompt separation should ensue, putting those showing a decided case promptly under the sod, making a place for all showing slight symptoms, to get them away from the well ones. In the drinking water for the well ones and the slightly indisposed ones, add one-fourth ounce of sulpho-carbonate of zinc to each gallon of water. Cleaning the premises is a most important item at such a time. The runs and houses should be thoroughly cleaned, scraped and swept and the droppings covered with soil. After this is done, a thorough sprinkling should be done with water, into which has been stirred one pint of sulphuric acid to twenty gallons of water. The stamping out of the disease depends largely upon the thoroughness of the cleaning. Cholera is a much dreaded disease, but with prompt and vigorous methods of the right kind, it is easily stamped out. The advice for those who do not have it is to do the cleaning job, anyway, and thus prevent its appearance at all.

(200 by 250 feet.)
BETTER be "safe" in buying this property now, than "sorry" afterwards you didn't; $35 foot.
THOMAS R. PINNEY, Sales Manager, 12 "Real Estate Row."

THEY ARE VERY SCARCE

YOU WILL find it hard to buy a desirable 50-foot building lot on the North Side for less than $2,500 or $3,000. These same lots could be bought three years ago for $700 to $1,000. This is the small investor's opportunity. Buy them partially developed, in the RIGHT SPOT, on easy terms—CHEAP, and sell the finished product.

Between the Ansley Park golf course and Piedmont avenue is the most STRATEGICALLY situated undeveloped property in Fulton County—owned by the shrewdest investors. This is the day of the SMALL INVESTOR, and they are making money fast in this section. Those who have bought in 1913 will double their money when the county finishes the roads in this neighborhood, and this is going to be done.

There is 100 per cent profit in our 60-foot lots at $10 down and $10 per month. Fifty-odd have been sold.

The Balkan Nations, Turned Butchers, Have Outraged Humanity

The Balkan races have forfeited the respect of civilization.

Saving only Greece, which holds to the elements of humanity and Christian warfare, the Balkan races within the fortnight have proven themselves to be a horde of murderous savages, of whom the arch savage and murderer is Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

There was never such a fall in history so swift, so sudden—from fame to infamy—from heroism to shame.

The world of civilization was with the Balkans in their war. It was blazoned as almost a holy war—the war of the Christian nations against the Unspeakable and Heathen Turk—the last nemesis of civilization upon centuries of butchery and cycles of barbarity.

The crimson ghosts of Albania and Zeitoun—the holocausts of Christian martyrs incinerated in Turkish fires, the battalions of Christians butchered because they were Christians, the pictures of infants bayoneted before their mothers' eyes, and mothers murdered, with outrage preceding or following fast on murder—aroused the public protest of the Christian world.

Every voice in Christendom rang for Bulgaria and the Balkans. Every civilized prayer was theirs. The Georgian helped to lead and vocalize the great procession of American sentiment that bade godspeed to the Balkan soldiers of the Cross.

And their battle was magnificently won. All records of history were equalled if not surpassed on the battlefields of this modern and magnificent crusade.

Step by step the Unspeakable Turk was driven back from his battlefields of murder. Inch by inch the Crescent yielded to the Cross.

Bulgaria swept from Adrianople to Chatalja. Greek battleships blocked the transportation of Turkish troops and provisions of war. Servia marched from her own victorious battlefields to reinforce the Bulgarians in the crisis at Adrianople and Chatalja, and with the allied legions thundering at the despairing gates of Constantinople, Southwestern Europe passed from the Crescent to Christ, and a great new nation seemed to have been born from the Slavonic races to rewrite history and to shift the balance of power from the elder monarchies to the plains of Thrace—now consecrated to liberty and humanity.

It was an epoch in human history. It was an Armageddon rich in the righteous triumph of the right above the wrong. And in its glorious aftermath the annals of the Christian races should have been remade and amplified.

But almost in a night the scene has changed. The peace of London became the proclamation of a progressive savagery. The men who endured like martyrs and fought like lions could not win like men, but quarreled like jackals over the spoils of victory.

Bulgaria, first in battle, was foremost in her greed, and her crimson hands, wet with heathen blood, and presuming on their strength, reached out to grasp the throats of Christian allies and to seize the territory that Greece and Servia had helped like heroes to achieve. Friends fastened their fangs into each other's vitals with a ferocity fiercer than they had shown their common foe.

The Balkan armies seem to have become as barbarous as the Turks.

Their hatred for the Turk was as nothing to their hatred for each other.

The hideous greed of territory blinded their eyes to every sentiment of Christianity and to every creed of Christ.

They caught from the Turk his bloodiest butcheries and branded them upon their fratricidal strife. The Bulgars at Kilkiss and Kurkut burned alive seven hundred men before their tortured wives with as fine a savagery as ever brutalized the Turk. The Serb at Belgrade shouted jeers and hisses into the dying ears of Bulgarian prisoners, brought from the battle fronts, and hand to hand with fist and foot, with tooth and nail, like primeval savages, fought Bulgar and Serb, who had carried the Cross of Christ in triumph above the infidel and Unspeakable Turk.

The Balkan fortnight behind us is an outrage upon the whole Christian world. These lapsed Christians, these transformed savages of greed, have within ten days lost the sympathy of humanity and their place among civilized nations. They have struck a staggering blow at the faith they followed and their religion and ours they have defiled.

The nations that cried godspeed to the Balkan armies of yesterday are ready now to cry, "Down with the newborn butchers of the Danube," and the world is ready to approve and applaud Austria or any other power that will repossess the territory so unworthily held and proceed to govern the people so obviously incapable and so basely unequal to the task of governing themselves.

The Metal Workers

We Live in the Age of Steel, He Says. Steel is the Synonym of Civilization and the Badge of Prosperity.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

I.

WE live in the age of steel. Steel is the synonym of civilization and the badge of prosperity. When the railroads are buying steel and extending their lines, we are prosperous. The farmer builds barns, fences broad acres, puts up silos, and the young folks make homes. Iron and steel enter into every building project.

America, by reason of her enormous consumption of metals, has earned the title of "The Land of Steel." We are a nation of builders.

Progress is only possible where there is mutuality and co-operation—where we see the seeming paradox of individual liberty harnessed to the car of common weal.

To certain persons of "artistic temperament" the term "commercialism" is anathema. They see no beauty in the smokestack, the skyscraper, the huge mills, the flying locomotive.

Man at the Forge.

They perceive only the dewdrop, the lily, the clouds, the cobwebs, the moonshine. They rave about the grotesque gargoyle upon some old church-tower, but can not imagine the chimney yonder, as it gives out its incense of commerce, a monument to the industry of man.

They rhapsodize about the sunset, but fail to see the magnificence of the man at the forge—framed in glowing gold, wresting steel from stones.

And again we hear men speak of the sordidness of industrialism "The dragnet of avariciousness enmeshes us; the collections for foreign missions show a lamentable decrease, and the automobile industry is booming."

The soap-box reformer spiels of the luxuries of the rich, and draws a harrowing contrast between the Brussels carpet and the elbow cushions of these parasites and the laboring classes.

And some few, mistaking the shadow for the substance, the mirage of ease for the oasis of success, leave the beaten, upward track, and slide down the toboggan of inertia into oblivion.

The vast majority of us, though, realize that industrialism is the lifeblood of the nation; that nothing contributes more to a nation's greatness than its men and women who work; and that true progress is the natural resultant of a people bound together with the sympathy and mutuality incidental thereto.

We are moving onward. Sometimes we whirl like a dervish, remaining almost stationery; at others we outdo the "Limited." We are now alive to the necessity for a sound mind and a healthy body. And we also realize that a healthy body is conducive to intelligent thinking and wise decision.

Mammoth Industries.

Business development is possible only through continuous, concentrated effort and conscientious, painstaking labor. We have countless examples of that truth in the annals of our country's achievements.

Mammoth industries have evolved from small beginnings by the application of those vital principles. Labor has until recently been wholly associated with the pick and shovel, the ax and saw. It is now, however, pretty generally recognized that both bodily and mental sweat is necessary to the successful issue of business enterprise.

"From every man according to his ability, to every man according to his need." One may be a hewer of wood or a drawer of water; another a captain of industry. One may be a toiler in the valley, and still another in the observatory on the mountaintop, reading the signs of the times. Yet what matters it, if they are all co-operating?

The manufacturer needs the miner, the miner the manufacturer. They both need the farmer, and he needs them both.

Brain? Yes. Brawn? Yes. But brawn and brain is the combination. Together they can move the mountains, link countries together, or slice a continent in half. By their exercise we reach up into the clouds and bind the lightning to our chariot wheels or utilize its power in manufacture.

We annihilate space by wireless telegraphy, we spurn the earth with our aeroplanes. We dig and burrow, pump and mine; we tap Nature's stores, and put harness on her forces.

We plow, we plant, and reap; we drain, and irrigate. We make gardens of waste places, and the desert to blossom like the rose.

When trials come, we meet them with manliness.

When difficulties arise, we seek their solution. We are becoming more self-reliant and confident every day. Superstittion and the shackles of the unknown fetter us no longer. We are gods in embryo. We have no limitation but ourselves.

Iron is the most abundant and useful of all metals, and has been known from the remotest time.

The ancient Egyptians were familiar with the process of working iron and undoubtedly knew how to make steel.

Iron in Ancient Days.

Tools found in their temples were made of this metal, and if the British Museum is to be seen an ax-head from the pyramid of Gizeh dating B. C. 4000.

The Assyrians and Babylonians were also skilful workers in iron. The Greeks obtained their knowledge of iron-working from these older nations. The Romans learned the art from the Greeks, and developed it in England, where it had been in operation since B. C. 55.

Other European nations were also workers of iron at an early date, using rude forges and crude methods.

For several centuries progress was slow, and the manufacture of iron or steel was not considered of sufficient importance to be called an industry.

Not until 1350, when the manufacture of cast iron and steel was inaugurated in Germany, did the industry assume any importance.

The fuel used for the smelting of the ore was charcoal. In 1558, the British Parliament (with the prescience which is a permanent characteristic of that august body) passed laws restricting the building of ironworks in some parts of the country, and forbidding the cutting down of trees for fuel. This cutting down of supplies led to the search for a substitute for charcoal for fuel, and in 1619 a man by the name of Dudley used coal for the purpose of smelting. The plan was not received with favor and fell into disuse.

HIS CAREER

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

JOHN SMITH was a baby so cunning and bright
That his parents stood gaping from morning till night,
When crowing and chuckling, as most babies will,
He was thought to possess a comedian's skill.
When quiet and weary, perhaps half asleep,
"My word," said his parents, "that baby is deep!
We'll make him a teacher,
The dear little joker,
Or maybe a preacher
Or lawyer or broker."

John Smith went through college ahead of his friends,
And started with fervor to rough-hew his ends.
His efforts, however, all seemed to fall flat,
For he fizzled at this and he foozled at that.
He was kicked out so often by taskmasters mean
That he looked like the film in a picture machine.
Some people are teachers
And doctors and lawyers
And brokers and preachers
That ought to be sawyers.

VICTORY FOR WOMEN.

Editor The Georgian:

I wish to thank you for the editorial, "A Great Victory for Southern Women." It was timely and in the right spirit. Georgia women have a right to the use of the State Capitol for meetings and there is no good reason why they should be denied the privilege. MRS. A. H. C.

OBJECT LESSONS.

Editor The Georgian:

I enjoy reading The Georgian, especially the editorial page. I tell my friends that the last page of The Georgian is worth infinitely more than double the price of the paper. I save each last page and re-read them and read them to my young friends—the schoolboys. Hal Coffman's pictures are great sermons. Dorothy Dix is a sane and sensible writer. So is Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Drs. Serviss and White. The picture by Coffman showing an old sinner standing reared back in a bar drinking and telling what he used to be was a great object lesson.

GOVERNOR DELIGHTED WITH SOLDIERS' CAMP

MRS. JOHN M. SLATON.

Governor John M. Slaton, Mrs. Slaton, members of the Governor's staff and others of the executive party who spent Saturday afternoon and Sunday in camp at St. Simons Island with the Fifth Georgia Infantry, returned to Atlanta Monday morning.

The Governor expressed himself as delighted with his outing and complimented the Atlanta regiment upon the splendid showing it made in camp.

A special dress parade was held Saturday afternoon, when the regiment was reviewed by the Governor and his party.

En route to and from St. Simons the visitors stopped in Brunswick and were entertained by business men of that city. Governor Slaton expects to return to Brunswick on Wednesday to attend the reunion of Georgia Confederate Veterans on Wednesday and Thursday.

WIDOW FREE ON BOND IN WILL CASE

Mrs. Crawford Waives Preliminary Examination on Charge of Poisoning Her Husband.

Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, accused of murdering her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, by poisoning, was released from the Tower Monday morning under a bond of $6,250 to await an investigation by the Fulton Grand Jury. Her bond was signed by Charles C. Jones.

Attorneys Burton Smith and Reuben Arnold, for Mrs. Crawford, waived a preliminary examination before Justice of the Peace C. H. Girardeau, and went before Superior Judge W. D. Ellis, where the bond was assessed after an agreement among the attorneys in the celebrated $250,000 will case.

Judge Ellis first announced that he could not fix the bond until he had gone into the merits of the case and called upon Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey to represent the State. The Solicitor stated that he would be disqualified because his law firm was interested, and the court was unable to find an attorney to act as Solicitor Pro Tem who had not been interested in it during the last four years.

Lawyers Reach Agreement.

The case would have been postponed until Wednesday had not the attorneys reached an agreement in order that the civil side could be resumed Tuesday morning.

Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner went to jail with the bond for Mrs. Crawford, and later returned with an order for her release.

No further criminal action will be taken, according to Attorney J. S. James, for the heirs-at-law, until the next meeting of the Grand Jury, which probable will be the latter part of this week.

Mrs. Crawford's release followed her unexpected return to the city at 2 o'clock Sunday morning from Tucker, Ga., where she had gone Saturday to visit friends. She was driven in to Atlanta in a buggy by John Cox, of Attorney Reuben Arnold's office.

Gave Self Up at Tower.

Upon her arrival in the city, she went first to her home on West Peachtree street, and secured a few belongings. An hour later she awakened the jailer at the Tower and surrendered herself. She was quartered in the hospital ward at the jail during her incarceration.

Her visit to Tucker was to Mrs. Clemmie Johnson, who lived with the Crawfords before the death of Joshua B. Crawford. Mrs. Crawford said that Mrs. Johnson was to be an important witness at the hearing before an auditor and that she visited her to arrange for her coming to Atlanta.

She will be an important witness for Mrs. Crawford, according to her attorneys, to show that the wife never administered poison, or even medicine, to her husband.

Flames Destroy Home; Fire Chief Hunts Incendiaries

Fire Chief Cummings is investigating a fire which destroyed the residence of W. N. Smith, No. 344 Myrtle street, and damaged the home of L. W. Laudrick, No. 348 Myrtle street.

Leading to the belief that the blaze was of incendiary origin is the fact that the members of the Smith family all were away from home on a vacation. The interior of the house was aflame when the department arrived, and efforts to check the fire were futile.

The Laudrick family were aroused from their sleep and were driven into the street in their night clothes.

The President gained twelve pounds during his week away from Washington.

Fritzi Scheff Leaves Her Troupe Stranded

CHICAGO, July 14.—More than 60 New York actors, actresses, chorus girls and chorus men to-day are stranded in Chicago. They were members of the "Mlle. GIRL BARES NEW VICE SYSTEM

Young Woman From the Country Says She Was Lured to Resort on Peters Street.

As a result of a sensational story told in police court Monday morning by Effie Drummond, a 20-year-old country girl, who was arrested Saturday when the police raided the boarding house of Mrs. Lulu Bell, at Fair and Peters streets, Chief Beavers at noon issued a general order for the arrest of Joe North, named by the Drummond girl as a "white slaver."

The girl charges that North, after he had promised to marry her, lured her to the Bell woman's place, and after giving her liquor until she was stupefied, forced her into the companionship of men whom he and the Bell woman had brought to the place.

Chief Beavers thinks the testimony of the Drummond girl forms an important link in the chain of evidence he is weaving around members of the vice ring said to exist in Atlanta.

The testimony of the girl indicates, the police believe, that North merely was the agent of men higher up, and that he acted on their instructions in luring the Drummond girl, and possibly others, to the Bell woman's place.

Tells All to Court.

The Chief has announced that every phase of the girl's story will be investigated thoroughly. Some of the things she has told dovetail into statements made by other girls who have been lured to ruin by the band which is alleged to have its headquarters in Atlanta.

The story of the Drummond girl was one of the most astounding and dramatic told since Chief Beavers started his vice probe. She laid bare the workings of what the police believe is an organized gang of "white slavers."

"I came to Atlanta three weeks ago from my home in the country near Rockmart, Ga.," she said. "I had heard lots about Atlanta and what a great town it was. I had never been in a town larger than Rockmart, and I thought the people in Atlanta would be as good and kind to me as they were in my own little home town.

"After I had been in Atlanta about a week, I met Joe North. I was lonely. I had made no friends, no one had offered to help except some women with whom I would have nothing to do, and I was glad to meet anyone who showed an interest in me. He was very nice to me at first. He took me to shows and I had a good time.

"Then he began to make love to me, and finally asked me to marry him. I had learned to love him in

Mystery in Slaying Of Rich, Eccentric Ware County Farmer

WAYCROSS, July 14.—With the skull badly battered as if from blows inflicted by some heavy instrument, the body of Mack Spain, a wealthy and eccentric bachelor farmer, whose home was west of Waycross, was today found on the edge of a pond, 20 miles from here. He had been dead at least two weeks, almost as long as he had been missing from his home. Both barrels of the shotgun found by him had been discharged.

Just how much money Spain had with him when he was murdered and robbed is not known, but neighbors say he never had less than $1,000.

Spain's home was originally in North Carolina. He had a valuable farm near Mexico, on the Waycross and Western Railroad. It was his expressed will that all his property go to E. T. Wing, superintendent of the Waycross and Western, and to whom he had become attached. No clew as to who killed him has been found.

Desperate 'Battle' Near Jacksonville; 2nd Regiment Wins

JACKSONVILLE, July 14.—In a "desperate engagement" early this morning in a clump of woods adjoining the Black Point Military Reservation, the First Regiment, National Guard of Florida, was completely routed by the Second Regiment, both sides leaving scores of "dead" and "wounded" on the field.

Colonel A. H. Blanding commanded the Second Regiment, Lieutenant Colonel Joseph P. Hickey being in command of the First Regiment, composed largely of Jacksonville men. The First Regiment officers lay their defeat in the spirited sham battle to the fact that the opposing regiment had three battalions to their two.

The soldiers will break camp tonight or early to-morrow.

Rabbi Opposes Bible Reading in Schools; Bill Likely to Pass

Rabbi David Marx, heading a large delegation, protested to the Senate Committee on Education Monday morning against the bill providing for the reading of the Bible in the public schools. Rabbi Marx, it is understood, objected on the grounds that such a bill would be unfair to the parents of many children who do not favor compulsory reading of the Bible.

Despite the protest, the committee, according to Chairman Foster, will report favorably on the bill. Members of the committee advised the protesting delegation to renew their protest when the bill reaches the House.

Popular Election to Name Bacon Senator

An election will be held in Georgia Tuesday for United States Senator, under an act passed by the Georgia Legislature at its present session.

Augustus Octavius Bacon, of Bibb County, present senior Senator, is unopposed and will be named to succeed himself.

This election, while the first to be held in the United States under the new Federal constitutional amendment, is perfunctory, as Senator Bacon was nominated in a Democratic primary more than a year ago to succeed himself.

BANKERS TO URGE FARMING INQUIRY

Several Atlanta bankers will go before the Appropriations Committee of the Georgia House of Representatives Tuesday afternoon to urge the passage of the Cochran bill creating a commission to investigate agricultural conditions.

"It is a well-known fact that Georgia is not using all available agricultural facilities," said Joseph A. McCord, vice president of the Third National Bank. "We want to know why."

The bill creating the commission was introduced by Representative R. O. Cochran, of Atlanta. Others who urge its adoption are Robert F. Maddox, vice president of the American National Bank, and J. T. Holleman, president of the Southern Mortgage Company.

POLICE KILL MAN TRAILING MAYOR

DAWSON, July 14.—John W. Brown, a well-known white man of Dawson, was shot and perhaps fatally wounded here to-day by Chief of Police Brown and Policeman Crouch. Brown was reported to officers as lying in wait in a stable to shoot Mayor McNulty. Officers went to arrest him. As they entered the stable door Brown raised his gun to fire. The officers were a second too quick for Brown, shooting him down as he fired.

The trouble resulted, it is said, from a raid officers made on Brown's residence yesterday. He has long been suspected of violating the prohibition law. It is said he blamed Mayor McNulty for the raid, and expressed the intention of killing him to-day. Public sentiment is strongly with the officers.

'I AM SEEKING ONLY TO DO MY DUTY FOR TRUTH AND JUSTICE'

The Georgian Secures Remarkable Statement From Chief Witness for Defense in the Trial of Frank. Declares Belief in Conley's Guilt.

On Thursday, July 10, The Georgian published the exclusive story of an affidavit in the possession of the lawyers for Leo M. Frank, accused of the murder of Mary Phagan, made by W. H. Mincey, an insurance agent, the substance of which was to the effect that Jim Conley, the negro sweeper at the pencil factory, had confessed that he killed the little girl.

In his affidavit, Mincey declared that he met the negro Conley at Electric avenue and Carter street on the afternoon of the murder; that Conley was intoxicated and when approached by Mincey for insurance became angry and exclaimed, threateningly: "I have killed a girl to-day; I don't want to kill nobody else."

The Georgian has now secured from Mincey a complete statement of his connection with the Phagan case. It is as follows:

By W. H. MINCEY

If Jim Conley told the truth at a time he was most likely to do so, that is, when he was drunk, then I know he killed Mary Phagan, and I have known this for weeks.

I am not an insurance agent, as some of the papers have me, but I am a teacher by profession. I am a graduate of a branch of the State University, A. B. degree, hold a Georgia State Teacher's license, and have been teaching in Georgia every year for the past twenty-five years. I am now teaching. But during my vacation I worked for an insurance company in Atlanta for ten weeks.

By this company I was assigned a territory west of the Terminal Station. Saturday, April 26, I worked in the office till noon. In the afternoon I went out on Peachtree street and saw the parade. After the parade I went over beyond Davis street on "back calls" and to make an effort to close some "prospects" I had.

I passed down Rhodes street, and when I turned back, I had calls to make back on Electric avenue and Mitchell street. From Rhodes street there is a trailway up a bluff to the junction of Carter street and Electric avenue. I went up this.

Passing the house that sits just on the brow of this bluff I noticed a negro man sitting with his head leaning down on his chest as if asleep. I passed on some twenty feet when this negro raised his head and said: "Who is that?" The sharp, quick, excited manner in which he said this attracted my attention. A negro woman passing by Conley said, "It is a policy man," meaning an insurance man.

Said He Was Jim Conley

I stopped and got into a conversation with the negro about insurance. He told me his name was Jim Conley. He told me he lived at 172 Rhodes street. I saw at once there was something wrong with him. He was nervous and excited, and tried to put me off and get rid of me by telling me to come to 172 Rhodes street next week and he would take insurance. But as the negro had excited my curiosity by his incoherent, scattering way of talking and his nervous and excited manner, I remained standing there firing questions at him.

He told me he was in trouble. I asked him if they had had him in jail or the stockade. He said no, but he was expecting to be in jail, and that right away. I asked him what for.

He said: "Murder, I killed a girl to-day."

I said: "Oh, I see! You are Jack the Ripper."

The thought that occurred to me was that he meant he had the few weeks I knew him, and I promised to marry him.

"Then he said he would get me a boarding house where he could be near me, and he took me to Mrs. Bell's place. He said it was a nice, respectable boarding house, and I didn't know any better. For a few days he treated me as nice as ever, and then he began urging me to drink beer. After I drank one or two glasses of beer I became almost intoxicated and North took advantage of my condition.

"After that he made me drink all the time, and he brought his friends to see me. The first time he brought a man there he made me get drunk.

"Mrs. Bell and North got all the money I made. They said I owed them for room rent and board.

"Lots of times I wanted to go back home, but they wouldn't let me. North said if I tried to get out of the house he would cut my throat.

Says She Was Threatened.

"On one occasion he rubbed a razor across my throat, and said if I didn't see the men he brought to the place he would cut my head off. I thought I would never get out, but the police came Saturday and took us all away."

The trials of the four other persons involved in the raid on the Peters street place were held at the same time as the trial of the Drummond girl.

Mrs. Lulu Bell, who conducted the boarding house, was held to the higher courts on bond of $500, charged with running a resort. L. W. Berkstein and his wife were held on bonds of $200 on a charge of being accessories. Maude Wilson and the Drummond girl were sent to the Martha Home.

Effie Drummond pleaded for Judge Broyles to allow her to return to her country home.

"Let me go home, Judge," she cried. "I love the country and I want to go back. I've had enough of the life and wrongdoing of the city. I want to go back where people are kind and will help me."

Sends Her to Reform Home.

"It will be better," Judges Broyles replied, "for you to go to the home for a few months. I'm afraid if I let you go home you would not stay. I'm afraid the lure of the white lights is too great, and that you would return to Atlanta and the life into which you were led."

The father and husband of Corinne Wilson, who, together with Dora Rothstein, was ordered sent to the Home of the Good Shepherd in Cincinnati Saturday, appeared before Judge Broyles Monday morning and asked that she be allowed to return to her home. The girl's husband, Andrew Wilson, declared he still loved her and was willing to take her back.

Judge Broyles rescinded the order placing her in the reform school, but declared he will hold her at the Martha Home until the trial of A. C. Dollar and W. W. Suttles, the man named by the Wilson and Rothstein girls in their vice story.

After the men are tried she probably will be returned to her husband.

PRETTIEST FACE SOUGHT FOR BUTTONS

The Georgian Monday begins the "booster button" beauty contest to select the prettiest girl in Atlanta. Her face will adorn the "500,000 Club" buttons with the slogan:

"Watch Atlanta—She'll Get You Yet. 500,000 by 1920."

The accompanying coupons show the simplicity of this contest. Readers are to clip them out, nominate their candidate with one coupon and vote for her with the other. The nominees and the number of votes will be published from day to day. The coupons will appear in the Georgian every day and the girl who gets the most votes will be the one selected.

No booster plan of recent years has attracted as much attention as the "500,000 Club" inaugurated by Hearst's Atlanta papers. When it was decided buttons would be furnished to all the members and a $25 prize offered for the best slogan, suggestions came in by the thousands, not only from Atlanta but from all over Georgia and adjoining States.

It was the suggestion submitted by J. P. Windsor, assistant cashier of the American National Bank, that the face of the prettiest girl in the city adorn the buttons that the judges unanimously agreed upon. They declared nothing could inspire more interest.

Women may soon win the right to vote and a larger place in the affairs of this man-made world. But, as wise philosophers have noted, it is doubtful if they ever will fill a more important sphere than the one of charm assigned them since history began. The girl whose face adorns the "500,000 Club" buttons will hold this place as no girl in Atlanta ever did.

The "500,000 Club" has made a genuine appeal to Atlanta. It has been indorsed by leading citizens and many of the leading organizations. When it is finally organized it will be the largest, livest working body in the city.

STATE FACED BY INJUNCTION IN FUMES SUIT

The Legislature will have to provide more time for the Tennessee Copper Company to abate the nuisance of its noxious gases in Georgia, or the right of injunction against it will be decreed by the United States Supreme Court in October.

A bill has been introduced in the State Senate authorizing the Governor to look into the question of further time, and if it passes, the defendant company may be given a while longer in which to relieve the damages the United States Supreme Court already has adjudged it responsible for.

In 1907 the Supreme Court admitted the damages to crops, fruits and growing things in the neighborhood of Ducktown, just across the Georgia line in Tennessee, as results of the escaping sulphurous fumes, but the court, by agreement with the State's counsel, gave the Tennessee Copper Company until the court's October term of this year to remedy the evil, otherwise it will have the right of injunction adjudged against it.

That was six years ago, and complaints still are coming from the vicinity of Ducktown, and efforts are being made to force the matter to a conclusion this fall.

The company is extensively interested in the Ducktown neighborhood, however, and the disposition of the State heretofore has been not to crowd it too far, particularly as it supposedly has been making efforts to abate the nuisance.

The question now is whether the State has not gone the full limit of tolerance in the matter, and if the right of injunction should not now be insisted upon.

If the Legislature passes the bill giving the Governor the right to adjust the matter, further time may be granted the copper company. If it does not, the final decree from the Supreme Court doubtless will be insisted upon immediately.

FOSS DENOUNCES TARIFF AND ANNOUNCED HE WILL MOVE PLANT TO CANADA

BOSTON, July 14.—Declaring that ridiculous legislation was driving American manufacturers to Canada and that reciprocity would surely meet the widespread demand for a lower tariff, Governor Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts to-day issued a statement regarding his intentions to transfer the bulk of his business from Boston to Canada.

He bitterly assails both the Republican and Democratic parties on the tariff questions and accuses the present administration of "paltering." The statement follows:

"For more than twelve years one of the principal Massachusetts corporations which I represent has had under consideration a plan of transferring to Canada a large portion of its work. I have personally opposed this plan and endeavored to maintain this internal enterprise in full here in Massachusettes, but am now convinced that it is no longer possible to defer action on this matter.

Purchase Plant In Canada.

"Accordingly I make the announcement, although I do so with sincere regret, that the B. F. Sturtevant Company has just completed the purchase of a manufacturing plant in Galt, Ont., and that a large part of the work, which has hitherto been done at Hyde Park, will now be transferred to Canada.

"All over the United States the tendency among the principal manufacturing interests is toward the establishment of plants in Canada. This movement has been going on for many years and it is estimated that from $300,000,000 to $500,000,000 of American capital is invested in these Canadian plants.

"The Sturtevant company must join the procession in order to meet the conditions of the industry, for the movement has now proceeded to a point where corporations which fail to follow are faced with serious embarrassment.

Have Filled Home Market.

"American manufacturers have completely filled the American market, and their production now is greatly in excess of the domestic demand. Under these conditions the expansion of the domestic plants is impossible and it is becoming necessary for them to curtail production.

"If they had a reasonable outlet for their surplus products, under reciprocal agreements with other countries, these industries exist they must remove in part to those countries whose markets could remain at home and grow; but under the conditions that they desire to reach.

"The Sturtevant Company no longer can ignore this movement. The industrial situation demands that it take part. Therefore, after more than a decade of effort to render this step unnecessary it is reluctantly obliged to accept the situation and remove to Canada a part of its work, thus curtailing production in Massachusettes.

Blames Tariff for Action.

"The movement of American manufacturers to Canada could be stopped and they could remain intact in this country if it were not for the absurd conditions created by our tariff legislation.

"We should have with Canada and other countries such trade agreements as would enable us to manufacture our goods in the United States, giving employment to American workingmen, and utilizing only American capital.

"But such agreements would imply a recognition of the principle of reciprocity. If we were to ship the products of American factories to Canada and to Europe without the present handicaps, we should require certain trade concessions from the governments of our customer nations, and in return for these concessions we should be expected to grant similar ones to the products of those countries.

"Checks to Foreign Trade."

"While the McKinley tariff recognized this principle, the later Republican tariffs have mainly ignored it and substituted retaliation and trade reprisals, practically imposing a prohibitive fine upon our foreign commerce.

"Four years ago those who were then responsible for the policy of the Republican party in Massachusetts told me that my tariff belief was inconsistent with membership in that party. It was at this juncture that I endeavored to secure from the Democratic party some recognition of reciprocity as the only reasonable basis of a tariff system.

"The Massachusetts Democracy adopted my views on this question, making it a national policy of three campaigns. But the Democratic majority in Congress is hesitating and paltering with the splendid opportunity; it even seems to be imperiling the little reciprocity we still offer to Canada in regard to the paper industry.

"Notwithstanding the failures of both of the great parties to recognize the principle of reciprocity, it is the one fundamental doctrine which should be common to the policies of both.

"Tariff Cuts Ridiculous."

"However, I shall not give up hope, for it is so ridiculous to lower our tariff, as the pending bill proposes, without making provision to obtain equal concessions from foreign countries, that I am confident the sensible elements of all parties soon will see it. Personally I intend to point it out to them upon every opportunity.

"The policy of reciprocity was declared by the founder of the Democratic party, Thomas Jefferson, and indorsed by the leading statesmen of the Republican party, notably, McKinley and Blaine. Notwithstanding the advice of these great leaders, the Republican policy has continued on the lines of trade prohibition and exclusion, while the Democratic policy continues indifferent to the opportunity which the reduction of the tariff affords to make other countries give American goods the same advantages which we propose to give them.

Attacks Both Big Parties.

"Instead of inviting customers by mutually beneficial trade agreements, the Republican policy would exclude foreign trade.

"Instead of making tariff concessions only to those countries which would join us in such trade agreements, the Democratic policy would tear down the protecting wall of our tariff on all sides and surrender indiscriminately to foreign competition the American market, with its 100,000,000 buyers—by far the most valuable market in the world.

"In sharp distinction from both these policies a tariff drawn upon reciprocal lines would lower our tariff wall only to those countries which will give us a quid pro quo.".

Reciprocity Real Remedy.

"Reciprocity would meet the widespread demand throughout this country for a lower tariff—and would meet that demand on sane and reasonable lines, stimulating our industries and our trade. Free trade, on the other hand, if suddenly forced on the country, would be ruinous.

"How ominous and deep-seated the tariff trouble is many people do not to-day realize, but in view of the real facts it is little short of farcical that we should invite foreign countries to participate in our great Panama-Pacific Exposition and to display their products therein.

"Both in France and Germany the invitations of our Government to participate in this exposition are being ridiculed by chambers of commerce and by leading merchants and manufacturers in general.

Germans Denounced Policy.

"In Germany many prominent business men are urging the Government to withdraw wholly from the exposition on the ground it is impossible to transact an export and import business with this country on any reasonable terms or with any assurance of fair play, and the same protest is being made emphatically in France by President Legrand, of the Paris Chamber of Commerce.

"It is suicidal for American manufacturing interests to ignore these handicaps to foreign trade. Canada, in particular, is one of our most valuable customer nations in theory, and should be so in fact.

"During the past ten years the rate of increase in population in Canada has proceeded far faster than in this country, and her relative industrial power is growing faster than our own. If we can not get this market through proper adjustment of our tariff policy, then we must go to Canada and establish ourselves there."

RAILROAD STRIKE CONFERENCE IN WHITE HOUSE

President Confident of Speedy Settlement—Managers Wire Conditional Arbitration Offer.

Rail Leaders Wire Offer to Arbitrate

NEW YORK, July 14.—An offer to arbitrate the demands of the trainmen under the Newlands amendment to the Erdman act, urged by the trainmen for months, which has just passed the Senate, was wired to union leaders at the White House conference by the executive committee of the railroad managers to-day.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—That the difficulties between the trainmen and their employers will be settled by arbitration regardless of what action Congress takes with respect to the Erdman act, is the opinion of President Wilson, expressed on his return here to-day.

The President will confer this afternoon with a committee representing the trainmen, and on the result of this conference will depend the exact status of the arbitration.

The President in speaking to the Washington correspondents to-day stated that he did not consider that the personnel of the arbitration board is a matter for either side to become greatly exercised about.

Wilson Sees "Exaggeration."

The Chief Executive is positive that justice will be done to both sides, and he does not believe the situation is as serious as has been painted. He thinks both sides are exaggerating somewhat to sway public opinion.

The White House conference, which will take place in President Wilson's private office at 3 o'clock to-day, will be closed to the public, but a statement may be issued later.

In addition to the President, there will be present Secretary of Labor Wilson, Senator Newlands of Nevada, Representative Clayton of Alabama and Representative Mann of Illinois, Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad; Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio; George W. Stevens, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio, and Frank Trumbull, chairman of the executive board of the same road; W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central, and President Wickersham, of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad.

Four Labor Leaders Present.

Union leaders to be present are Warren B. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; W. C. Carter, president of the Brotherhood of Firemen; A. B. Garretson, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, and W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

The Eastern railroad strike situation threatens to tie up 42 lines east of Chicago and throw 100,000 trainmen out of work.

Although the committee of 1,000 representing the employees of all the involved railroads ratified the strike vote of the men, the situation to-day was cleared by advices from Washington to the effect that the Newlands amendment to the Erdman act, providing for arbitration of disputes affecting common carriers, probably will be ratified. This is what the men seek, together with demands for a 20 per cent wage increase and readjustment of working conditoins.

Seth Low Lauds Wilson.

Seth Low, president of the National Civic Federation and supporter of the Newlands amendment, declared the White House conference is the most important "peace event" since the first conference at The Hague.

It is now in the power of Presidents Garretson and Lee to call a strike at their own discretion, this power having been delegated to them by the committee of 1,000. Noon tomorrow has been fixed as the time limit for peace overtures from the railroads. Most of the members of the committee of 1,000 have left the city.

The strike leaders declare that a walkout of conductors, baggagemen, brakemen and switchmen probably would be followed by a strike of firemen, as the railway firemen are dissatisfied with working conditions.

PRICE OF FRUIT SOARS ABOVE POOR MAN

Oranges Dollar and Peaches Thirty Cents a Dozen—Vegetables Also Set High Mark.

Oranges, per doz.	$1.00
Lemons, per doz.	.60
Peaches, doz.	.30
Grape fruit, each	.35
Tomatoes, quart	.25
Lettuce, head	.15
Celery, stalk	.10
Grapes, 2-qt. basket	.40

No, not in Nome or Sitka, but right in Atlanta.

Fruit prices have gone far beyond the reach of the modest pocketbook. Short crops and a corner are given as causes.

The corner is in lemons. According to Broad street commission merchants, lemons are not scarce, but they have been cornered by a New York ring and are unobtainable except at the price quoted.

One might turn to limes as a substitute if some few thousand other inhabitants had not been inspired with the same happy thought, so that the supply of limes, always inadequate, has been held for fancy prices.

Peaches Scarce This Year.

Georgia peaches are scarce this year, and right at the orchards bring $2.25 to $2.50 per six-basket crate. So do not blame the grocer; he is barely "geting out" at his price.

Niagara grapes are 40 cents a basket, but it is only fair to state that it is very early for grapes.

Small and 'scabby' grapefruit can be had for 20 cents, but the good fruit is 15 cents above this mark.

Worms, thousands of them, devoured the tomato crop in the vicinity of Atlanta. One commission merchant got together a carload and is the envy of all his unsuccessful rivals.

11 DIE IN WRECK OF RESORT TRAINS

Merrymakers at Los Angeles Victims in Crash of Excursion Cars—200 Injured.

LOS ANGELES, July 14.—Eleven persons were known to be dead and it was feared to-day that many of the 200 injured would die, following the wreck of two three-car trains returning to Los Angeles from Venice and Ocean Park. Four cars were telescoped, and few of the passengers of either train escaped injury.

The rear train was said to be speeding faster than 40 miles an hour when it crashed into the rear coach of the first train.

Officials to-day said no responsibility had been placed on any of the train crews. Both trains were packed with pleasure-seekers returning from a day at the beaches.

The identified dead are Jacob Barman, Ed Murray, William Taylor, Merrill Evans, Los Angeles; Clifford Axley, San Francisco; Edna T. Altar, secretary Associated Charities, Pasadena; Veronica Miller, telephone operator, Los Angeles.

Fireflies, Chemically Treated, Light Home

MORGANTOWN, W. VA., July 14. Thornton Flowers, of Mona, declared that by treating a firefly by his secret chemical process a light surpassing electricity can be obtained.

He says he has his home illuminated with the new lights.

Advice to Those Who Have Lung Trouble

Pulmonary Lung Trouble is said to be curable by simply living in the open air and taking an abundance of fresh eggs and milk. Do all you possibly can to add to strength and increase weight; eat wholesome, nourishing food, and breathe the cleanest and purest air, and then, if health and strength do not return, add the tonic and beneficial effects of Eckman's Alterative. Read what it did in this case:

Wilmington, Del.

"Gentlemen: In January, 1908, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs. I took eggs and milk in quantities, but I got very weak. Mr. C. A. Lippincott, my employer (Lippincott & Co., Department Store, 306 to 314 Market street, Wilmington, Del.), recommended to me Eckman's Alterative, and upon his suggestion I began taking it at once. This was about June, 1908. I continued faithfully, using no other remedy, and finally noticed the clearing of the lungs. I firmly believe Eckman's Alterative saved my life."

(Affidavit) JAS. SQUIRES.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

TURKS READY TO JOIN ASSAULT ON BULGARS

Pact With Greece and Servia Reported—100,000 Troops Wait to Storm Adrianople.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 14.—While Russia and France are working to bring about peace in the Balkans, military activity in Turkish territory is increasing, and there were surface indications to-day that negotiations between Turkey, Servia and Greece for a concerted campaign against Bulgaria are being rushed.

General Enver Bey, Turkish Minister of War, believes it would be extremely easy for the Turks to re-take Adrianople from the Bulgarians, as the bulk of the retaining Bulgar army was withdrawn from Adrianople to fight the Serbs and Greeks.

There is an army of 100,000 Turks between Chorlu and this city, the greater part of them being massed along the Chatalja lines, just north of this city.

Bulgaria Officially Denies Ruler's Death.

SOFIA, July 14.—Official denial was made here to-day of reports that Czar Ferdinand and Dr. Daneff, former Premier, were assasinated by the mobs Saturday.

A telegram from Bucharest states that Prince Ferdinand, the Roumanian Crown Prince, has gone to the front to take command of all the Roumanian forces.

The Roumanian army of invasion is slowly advancing toward Sofia, making prisoners of all the Bulgarian troops in their way.

France Joins Czar To End Balkan War.

PARIS, July 14.—France to-day joined Russia in appealing to Servia and Greece to cease hostilities against Bulgaria. Greece has telegraphed to Belgrade the terms upon which the Greek Government will stop the war. This action was taken because Greece wants to act in co-operation with Servia in ending the conflict.

With the greatest abjectness Bulgaria has admitted complete defeat and has taken full responsibility for beginning the fighting aganist her former allies.

A Bucharest telegram states that Roumania will not make peace until her terms are accepted unconditionally by Bulgaria.

Tracks Wanted in Wholesale District

Petition for the extension of spur tracks of the Southern Railway into the wholesale district in the Walker and Mangum Streets section probably will be acted on by the City Council next Monday. The petition follows an order of Judge Don Pardee allowing the Southern to make the extension.

The proposed tracks will run through a small tract south of the Nelson street viaduct, owned by the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, and will extend to Haynes street, a distance of two blocks. Two tracks will cross Mangum street and between the railroad and this street there will be four others.

Church Too Formal, Says Atlanta Pastor

"The church needs to take off her kid gloves and go down where there is sin, suffering and sorrow and lift up the fallen, and love men into the Kingdom of God." Thus spoke the Rev. A. R. Holderby, pastor of the Moore Memorial Church, at the Sunday morning service.

"The church was never intended to be a secret order with hard and fast rules, but to be a hospital for the reception of poor men," he said. "Unfortunately, most of our churches of to-day are purely social clubs, with not much religion or sympathy or brotherly love, while secret orders have been organized to do the real work of the church."

Press Association Plans Big Outing

Plans for the annual meeting of the Georgia Weekly Press Association at LaGrange July 22 and 23 are completed and show that the attendance this year will be the largest in the history of the association.

The members from North Georgia will leave Atlanta at 5:45 o'clock the afternoon of July 21 via the Atlanta and West Point Road. From South and Middle Georgia the party will travel by the Macon and Birmingham and the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic.

From LaGrange the press party will go to Brunswick for a few days' outing on the salts.

Turkey Trot Gait to Hell, Says Minister

COLUMBUS, July 14.—Dr. A. M. Williams, presiding elder of the Columbus district and one of the best-known Methodist ministers in Georgia, created something of a sensation at St. Luke's Methodist Church Sunday morning when he used as a text for his sermon, "Summer Sins and the Turkey Trot Gait to Hell."

The minister severely criticised the modern dances and those who take part in them. Parents are responsible for girls dancing the turkey trot and various other dances that are equally as bad, he said.

WISDOM PUTS JOY IN GEORGIA LEGISLATURE

Louis E. Wisdom, of Forsyth.

Next to Youngest Member, Though, Lives Every Inch Up to His Name.

If one just a little younger member of the Georgia Legislature had not beaten Louis E. Wisdom of Forsyth to it, Wisdom would be the "baby" of the House this year. He's slightly more than 22.

While Wisdom is only next to the youngest member, he really looks the part of the House "baby" more surely than anybody else, and generally he gets credit for being the juvenile cut-up, anyway.

If it be true that a real smile gets one further in politics than most anything, Wisdom of Forsyth some day will be President of these United States.

His smile is of the triple-expansion, all-wool-and-several-yards-wide guaranteed under the pure food and drugs act, seraphic, beatific and altogether ecstatic variety—and always is warranted not to come off!

When Wisdom smiles—which most generally he does—rainbows festoon the horizon, optimism runs amuck, and one can plainly hear the music of the spheres!

He emphatically and beyond dispute is the joy of the House of Representatives.

And Wisdom can do more than smile. He is chairman of the big Committee on Special Judiciary and is a worker always on the job. In his home county of Forsyth he is regarded as one of the genuinely substantial young men of the community and already has made a fine reputation as an attorney at law.

He is regular in his attendance at sessions of the House and is looked upon as one of the coming men in the General Assembly.

Long Lake-Air Race Halted by Weather

CHARLEVOIX, MICH., July 14.—The hydro-aeroplane flight from Chicago to Detroit, halted to-day while a conference of officials here was held to decide whether to call the race off on account of bad weather.

If an agreement can be reached among the aviators the race likely will be stopped. Beckwith Havens and Roy M. Francis, leaders in the race, are marooned at Pentwater, Mich.

AMERICAN LIFE ADMITS IT IS INSOLVENT

Company's Attorney Admits Situation Is Critical, and Welcomes Receivership.

Admitting a half-million-dollar crash in the insolvency of the American Life and Annuity Company, Attorney Jack Hastings, for the company, appeared before the Superior Court Monday morning and asked that a receiver be named.

He informed the court that the company was hopelessly insolvent and that he saw no necessity for answering the petition for a receivership filed last Friday. He said the assets are about $90,000 and the liabilities something above $500,000. Superior Judge W. D. Ellis announced he would name the receiver during the day.

In the petition for receivership Attorneys Jones and Chambers alleged that although the company had taken in $441,000 on the sale of income certificates during the four years of its existence, the assets were now less than $135,000. At the same time the petitioners obtained a temporary injunction to restrain the company from paying $12,000 interest on income certificates July 15.

Comptroller General William A. Wright was investigating the affairs of the company at the time a petition for receivership was asked, and was consulted regarding the appointment.

Following the investigation, General Wright intervened in behalf of the State. Judge Ellis acceded to the intervention and, instead of appointing a receiver, as he previously had expressed his intention of doing, ordered the Deputy Insurance Commissioner to take charge of the assets of the company and hold them intact until some further order from the Superior Court.

Indicating the condition of insolvency of the company, the attorney for one client in the case said that the company settled one $5,000 death claim for $4,100, paying with a check. Payment on the check, he said, was refused by the banks, and the beneficiaries had received nothing.

Girl Fails in Effort to End Life With Drug

SAVANNAH, July 14.—Miss Tynie Boylston, aged 18, who came to Savannah from Augusta, attempted to commit suicide on the grounds at the Casino, Thunderbolt, last night by drinking iodine. She had just told her escort, J. H. Moore, of near Statesboro, that she had nothing to live for. An emetic, promptly administered, saved her life.

Moore says the girl told him she was despondent, and he suspected a love affair, but knew nothing of the details.

Bell House Boys All Ready for Barbecue

All arrangements have been completed for the barbecue of the Bell House boys at the Cold Springs 'cue grounds Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Emma Bell, the famous head of the house, has promised to be present and all Bell House boys, past and present, have been invited to attend.

The entertainment committee urges all who expect to be present to notify them at 258 Peachtree Street.

Suffragist Victory Soon, Predicted by Rev. Dunbar Ogden

The Rev. Dunbar Ogden delivered a strong address on woman suffrage at his evening service at the Central Presbyterian Church. That woman is rapidly coming into her own and that it is only a question of time when she will have full rank politically with the men was his prediction.

"Woman is the center of the home and the home is the center of civilization," he declared. "We can't change this. Full suffrage has been granted her in many States, and whether we like it or not, the door of the home has been thrown open politically, commercially and socially.

"In Georgia a girl is not protected after she is ten years old, but when a new law is proposed some one across the street protests. God pity the men. In her club life woman seeks to better conditions and in her political life she will do the same thing."

Tries to Block Sale Of His Life Policies

Frank T. Arnold, former New York bank cashier, serving a term at the Federal prison in Atlanta, applied to the Fulton Superior Court Monday morning to restrain his daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Hicks, and his nephew, Howard Wright, of New York, from disposing of his life insurance policies, amounting to $9,000.

Arnold alleged that he gave the policies to them when he was committed to prison and has learned they are trying to cash them for a part of the value.

'House' to Discuss City's Milk Supply

Atlanta's milk supply will be the subject of discussion Tuesday at the Piedmont grillroom when the "House of Representatives" will meet. The "House" is made up of the committee chairmen, the ex-presidents, the officers, directors and advisory board of the Chamber of Commerce.

It has not met for some time, but the custom of holding "Dutch treat" luncheons frequently will be revived.

Woman's Fall Into Basement Mystery

While making his rounds at the Healey Building about 9 p. m. Sunday, Night Foreman Dan Smith found a woman lying at the bottom of the basement, twenty feet below the street.

She told Smith her name was Miss Mamie Matthews, aged 37, of 295 Ashby Street, and that she fell into the basement. But how she chanced to fall in and what has become of the red lantern which is said to have been placed there are mysteries.

The woman suffered lacerations and bruises, though no bones were broken. She was taken to Grady Hospital.

Children's School Planned by Harvard

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., July 14.—Harvard plans to establish an experimental kindergarten next fall with children from 4 to 6 years of age. The faculty of the university's department of education will be in Chicago.

If this work proves successful, it will develop gradually by the addition of new grades till Harvard is prepared to take a boy of 4 or 5 and train him through the elementary and high school courses and through college, turning him out fifteen or twenty years after his admission with a degree.

OLDEST MEMBER BURNS CHURCH MORTGAGE

Sheriff Mangum Prepares Torch to Wipe Out $6,000 Debt of St. Paul's Methodist.

Members of St. Paul's Methodist Church are congratulating themselves upon the celebration Sunday when the $6,000 mortgage upon the building was burned by Miss Esther Cook, the oldest member, who in 1869 taught Sunday school under a large oak tree when the church was started.

Sheriff C. W. Mangum is a charter member, and it was he who prepared the torch which Miss Cook applied to a piece of paper that wiped out a debt of $6,000.

Two well-known Atlantans who were in Miss Cook's class—W. E. Dunn, chairman of the City Waterworks Committee, and T. J. Laird—escorted their former teacher to the rostrum. Miss Cook is in her eighty-second year, and her appearance with two grown men who as little boys had learned their first Bible lessons from her soon after Sherman had laid Atlanta in ashes stirred the congregation.

The celebration was one of the most unique in Atlanta's church history. A little mission, started years ago, with only a mere handful of earnest workers, has grown to a present membership of 2,300. The present church was erected in 1906 at a cost of $51,000. Its formal dedication will occur in October.

Most of the stewards and trustees are men who have been in the church 30 or 40 years. The trustees are Sheriff Mangum, who is also a steward; J. T. McDonald, J. K. Kelly, G. W. Dyar, W. E. Adamsson, J. K. Thrower, J. K. Polk, J. T. Stewart and A. J. Joy.

START YOUR LIVER, DON'T STOP WORK

Dodson's Liver Tone Acts Mildly, but Surely—Livens Up the Liver and You Stay On Your Feet.

It is the experience of calomel users that if they take enough of the drug to have the desired effect, it seriously interferes with their work the day after. But this is the least important item, for calomel is often a dangerous drug and acts on the system violently.

Don't take chances with calomel. Get a bottle of the pleasant, safe and perfectly harmless Dodson's Liver Tone, guaranteed to take the place of calomel. Instead of making you feel worse the next day it makes you feel better—and you actually are better, for no remedy in the whole world livens up the liver, regulates the bowels and really rejuvenates the system any better than this dose.

You are the sole judge of its merits. Any dealer is fully authorized to hand you back your money without question if it fails to please you—and relieve you.

Remember, if you feel constipated and bilious, what you need is Dodson's Liver Tone. A large bottle and a good guarantee for 50 cents from all druggists.

SCHOOL TEACHER TELLS REMARKABLE STORY TO THE GEORGIAN

Says He Only Desires to Prevent a Crime as Bad as Phagan Slaying

Negro Who Declared He Had Killed a Girl First Said His Name Was Jim Conley, Mincey Declares.

killed some negro woman, and the only thing that seemed peculiar to me was that he said "girl" instead of "woman."

I said: "Why did you kill her?"

He began to get angry and I saw he was drunk.

He said: "Now, that is for me to know and you to find out."

Negro Seemed Suspiciously Nervous

I did not attach much to what he was saying, thinking it was the babbling of a drunken negro; but his restless, quick glancing around and his keeping his eyes on me, and the wild, unnatural glare in his eyes caused me to want to press him further to find out really what he had been doing.

I said: "Let me write your insurance this afternoon," and started down to where he was.

He said: "Don't you come down here," speaking this in an angry, threatening manner. This caused me to press him the more.

I said: "No, I will take your application now," and continued.

He said: "I tell you not to come down here."

When he saw I was coming on anyway, he jumped up, and as he went round the corner of the house he said: "I have killed one to-day and I don't want to kill another."

I said: "Well, one a day is enough; that is 365 a year," turned and walked off.

Now, this negro told me his name was Jim Conley. He told me he lived at 172 Rhodes street. I was talking to him somewhere about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Saturday, April 26. He told me he had killed a girl that day. Again he told me he had killed one that day and he did not want to kill another.

Now, if Jim Conley did not in fact tell me that he killed Mary Phagan on that day, then I don't know what language is, and I am sure I know what language is. I suppose it can be established that Jim Conley was nowhere else than in Atlanta on that day. Mary Phagan was murdered in Atlanta that day.

No Other Girl Slain That Day

So far as is known, no other girl was murdered in Atlanta that day. Now, did Jim Conley not tell me he killed Mary Phagan? If he did not, absolutely, I do not know when I have reasoned out a proposition in algebra, geometry or logic. But I am sure I do know when I have solved a problem.

On Sunday morning after the murder I heard someone say a 17-year-old girl had been killed the night before and dragged into a basement somewhere, supposed to be a girl of the streets and killed by some rowdies. I knew nothing further of this till Monday morning, passing down Forsyth street by the National Pencil Factory, I heard some one say "There is the place where the girl was killed," and some men standing there said she was seen at 11 o'clock Saturday night on the corner there. This placed the murder after I had seen and talked to Conley.

But during the day Monday I saw a paper, and as no one about this child's age saw her on Saturday, knowing that she would seek companions of near her age had she left the building, I at once decided she had never left the plant after going there.

Tuesday morning, passing the factory, I walked in and up the steps to the second floor. Some man walked up to me and asked what I wanted. I told him I wanted to see Mr. Frank.

Mincey Calls at the Factory

He said Mr. Frank was not in, that he could attend to what I wanted.

I told him I wanted to see where that little girl was killed and how many negroes worked there. The man did not want me to look over the building, but told me about the negroes. I asked him what negroes were there on Saturday. He said there were no negroes there on Saturday. I asked him if he was there. He said he was; that he was the day watchman. I asked him what time he left. He said at 11:45.

I said: "That was just a few minutes before that little girl came, then."

He said: "Yes."

I said: "Didn't you see a negro here when you left?"

He said: "No, I told you there were no negroes here; it was holiday and they did not work that day." I kept asking him about negroes and talking till he was out of patience. All this time I kept walking and looking. He followed me everywhere I went. I learned later that the man's name to whom I was talking is Holloway, and he is the only one connected with the plant to whom I ever talked.

My talk with Jim Conley on Saturday afternoon convinced me that he had killed some one, or thought he had; but knowing it was impossible for him to be connected with this unless he was there, I got out of patience with Holloway as much as he was out with me.

I saw everything was disturbed and torn up, and Holloway was mad. I was mad, too. At last I turned on him and told him that that little girl never left that building after she came in there, and that some one in the building who knew the building killed her. Things were becoming more confused in the building, and after another parley with him about a negro being there, I turned and left the building, thoroughly disgusted.

Well, this seemed to me to eliminate Jim Conley, yet his words, acts and looks continued to haunt me as if I had seen a ghost. Well, things rocked on, and I worked on. But I believed all the time that there was a missing link somewhere.

Later I saw that some lady saw a negro in the building the day of the murder, but I took no further trouble with it. I did not want to get mixed up in it at all.

Goes to the Police Station

Later, when I learned that a Jim Conley was there on the day of the murder, I one afternoon went down to the police station to see if this was the same Jim Conley I saw the afternoon of the murder.

I did not know any of the detectives, but a very nice, courteous gentleman came out, and I told him I would like to see the negro they had, to see if he was the same I saw on Carter street the day of the murder. He asked me if he seemed excited any way. I said: "Very much so." He told me to come in.

I went in. To the best of my knowledge and belief, this was the negro I talked to the afternoon of the murder.

I got into a conversation with him. Conley looked just the same. The same dark clothes, the same hat; the voice had mellowed down much, the glare had faded from his eyes; but the voice and eyes were there the same.

I tried to make Conley remember me, but he said he had never seen me before; that he was not on Carter street that afternoon; that he did not know anyone on Carter street.

Now, whether the negro was lying or was so drunk he did not remember, I don't know; but it is the one or the other.

I did not tell him he was the negro; I told him he looked like the negro.

When I was convinced that Conley was going to deny everything, I said: "Jim, you were pretty drunk that afternoon, were you not?" He said he had been drinking, but was not drunk. At this juncture one of the gentlemen in the room got up and opened the door. He said nothing, but I understood this to be a signal for me to go; and they had been as nice to me as I could have asked, so I said: "That is all. I only wished to see him." I told the detectives nothing; I just walked in and had a few words with Conley and walked out. I saw they were at something. I did not know what, but I did not care to "butt in." On the outside of the room some newspaper boys came up to me at once and began to ask me questions, but the newspaper is the last place I want to get into, and I said: "Nothing for the papers." I walked down.

Writes Anonymously to Dorsey

Later I wrote Mr. Dorsey a letter, but did not sign my name to it. I asked to not have Jim Conley indicted for anything other than murder, as I had from his own lips that he had killed a girl the afternoon of the murder. I never told any detective or policeman anything. As I stated to Mr. Dorsey, my conditions were such that I could not afford to be caught up there and held as a witness. It was my intention to give the information I had to someone, but who was the proper one and when was the proper time I had not yet decided.

When I noticed a movement, as it seemed, to turn Conley loose, I knew that was not the thing to do, so I went to Mr. Rosser. I told Mr. Rosser I had information I would give him, but I would first have to ask him not to hold me there as a witness, or give out anything to the newspapers. I was assured that I would be safe on this line.

Mr. Rosser told me he would like to hear the statement, no matter whom it was against. That he wanted the murderer of Mary Phagan convicted, no difference who he is. After making the statement he asked me if I objected making the same and swearing to it. I told him I did not. I stepped out in another room and made the statement to be written.

Knows No One in the Case

Now, I know none of the people concerned in this. I saw Jim Conley, I saw one man at the National Pencil Factory, who I learn is Holloway, I saw Mr. Rosser but once.

I have only done what I believe any true citizen would do. I believe any other citizen would do as I have done. I have faith in the people of Georgia. I suppose I know as many people in Georgia as nearly any other man in the State. There are no people anywhere more generous, more noble, or more fair.

Now so far as I know I have told it the best I can, and I am willing to leave everything to the courts and the people.

If Jim Conley did murder little Mary Phagan, I will not remain quiet so far as what I know and let him make me and you and every other citizen a party to another crime just as bad.

I am at work and had much rather never be called as a witness, but should I be called no power can prevent me from doing my duty as a true citizen.

I have criticised no one and shall not do so; and I, as a citizen of Georgia, claim the right to perform a duty to my State and fellowman unmolested.

Signed

W. H. Mincey

Mincey Tells How He Came to Make His Startling Affidavit.

"I wrote Mr. Dorsey a letter, but did not sign my name to it. I asked to not have Jim Conley indicted for anything other than murder, as I had it from his lips that he had killed a girl the afternoon of the murder. I never told any detective or policeman anything.

"As I stated to Mr. Dorsey, my conditions were such that I could not afford to be held as a witness.

"It was my intention to give the information I had to someone, but who was the proper one and when was the proper time I had not decided.

"When I noticed a movement to turn Conley loose, I went to Mr. Rosser. Mr. Rosser told me he would like to hear the statement, no matter whom it was against; that he wanted the murderer of Mary Phagan convicted, no difference who he is. I stepped out into another room and made the statement."

State's Attorney Attacks Affidavit Made by Mincey

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey and Attorney Frank A. Hooper, engaged in the prosecution of Leo M. Frank, were induced Monday to break the silence they have maintained since grilling the negro Jim Conley last week. They made their first public comments on the sensational developments of the last few days in the Phagan murder mystery.

Both declared emphatically that neither the affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance solicitor, nor the reported confession of the negro Will Green, who is said to have been an eyewitness of the attack upon Mary Phagan, gave evidence sufficient to shake their conviction of Leo Frank's guilt.

Rumors that the State was preparing to change its theory and to ask for the indictment of Jim Conley were laughed at.

"I sincerely doubt," said Mr. Hooper, "if that Mincey affidavit ever will be heard from again as a seriously considered piece of evidence in the Phagan case. To my mind it means absolutely nothing. The statement, undoubtedly, was made and sworn to, but the prosecution places no dependence in it and will be able to disprove it if its signer is called as a witness in the case.

"It is difficult to understand, of course, how such a statement could be made in good faith. If it was made in good faith, I believe that Mincey was laboring under a delusion. Possibly he was talking to a negro the afternoon of the crime. When he read of the murder of the little factory girl, the incidents of his conversation with some unidentified colored man took on a form in his excited imagination that made him certain that this negro had told of a killing and that the negro was Jim Conley."

But the defense is firm in the belief that the affidavit and Mincey's testimony will be important in their efforts to prove the innocence of Frank and the guilt of Conley. This part of the defense will be strengthened by character testimony for Mincey and by statements from negro women who are said to have overheard the conversation between Conley and Mincey in which the negro is quoted as boasting:

"I killed a girl to-day; I don't want to kill anybody else."

Green Important Witness.

Much depends on the testimony of the negro, Will Green, who has been tracked through a half dozen States and is now believed to be in the hands of detectives in Birmingham, Ala. The report that he had declared he had been an eyewitness of the attack upon Mary Phagan and had asserted that it was a negro who was guilty of the crime gave weight for the first time to the possibility that direct evidence would be produced at the trial of Leo Frank.

Until Green entered the case the evidence against both Frank and Lee was purely circumstantial. If Green sticks to the story he is said to have told to companions, it will throw the bulk of the dependence for the conviction of Conley upon his evidence.

Green, according to report, told friends he was shooting craps with a negro on the first floor of the pencil factory on Saturday, April 26. He is reported to have said a little girl came down the steps and that his negro companion, who was partially intoxicated and had been losing money, declared he was going to steal the girl's money.

Green remonstrated, he said, but the other negro started toward the girl and Green fled. The next Monday he read of the murder and left for St. Louis. It was at this city the hunt for him began.

X-Ray Wizard Dies Martyr to Science

HARTFORD, CONN., July 14.—Burton E. Baker, known as an "X-ray wizard," and head of an experimental station here, is dead after a long illness, induced from experimentation on his own body with X-rays. He went to New York City last fall and took the radium cure under Dr. Abbe, but failed to rally.

Baker had built up a reputation in his work that made him known all over the United States and in Europe.

WHITE SLAVERY MADE FELONY BY NEW BILL

Measure in Georgia Senate Augments War on Traffic in Women and Girls.

A more or less featureless session of the Georgia Senate Monday morning was enlivened by the reading of an invitation to the Senators to participate in an old-fashioned Southern barbecue by the Georgia Club of El Paso, Tex.

In reply President Randolph Anderson sent the following telegram, which was adopted by unanimous vote of the Senate:

"Mr. John M. Wyatt, President of the Georgia Club of El Paso, Tex.: The Georgia Senate thanks you for your kind invitation, and regrets that wireless transportation not yet being in existence it can only send greeting instead of appearing in person.—Randolph Anderson."

A number of local bills were passed in the Senate Monday morning and the following new bills were presented for the first reading:

By Senators Bush of the Eighth and Foster of the Twenty-eighth—Prohibiting any person from inveigling any female of previous chaste character or any femole who is under 14 years of age into a house of ill-fame or otherwise, upon penalty of being convicted for felony in case of guilt.

By Senator Sweat, of the Fifth District—Providing for the conservation of the pine forests of Georgia, making it unlawful for any person to cut young trees for the extraction of turpentine or otherwise mutilating pine trees.

By Senator Bullock, of the Twenty-fifth District—Providing for an amendment to the act creating a State Board of Embalming Examiners.

By Senator Hughey, of the Twenty-fifth—Prohibiting firms or other dealers in seed from disposing of garden seed unless the package has a written guarantee thereon.

Among the local bills passed by the Senate Monday morning were: Amending the charter of the City Court of Jefferson County, by Senator Stark, of the Thirty-third; a bill amending the act creating a Board of Commissioners of Roads for Charlton County, by Senator Ollliff, of the Fourth, and a bill changing the charter of the town of Oglethorpe, creating a public school system, by Senator Richardson, of the Thirteenth.

The Senate also, upon motion of Senator Hughey, of the Thirty-fifth, passed a resolution indorsing the proposed joint session of the Senate and House Tuesday at 12:30 for the purpose of hearing Herbert E. Myrick, of Springfield, Ill., who will speak on rural finance, and T. Sambola Jones, United States Exposition Commissioner, on the proposed appropriation for Georgia's exhibit at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

PRISON BOARD IS DENIED BOOST IN SALARY

Bill to Increase Compensation to $3,000 Defeated—Cross-State Road Act Held Up.

An effort to increase the salaries of the members of the State Prison Commission from $2,000 to $3,000 a year was defeated in the House Monday following an hour's debate. The vote was 111 to 38 against the adoption of the report of the penitentiary Committee.

Arguments favoring the passage of the bill were made by Representatives Wohlwender, Wimberly and Slater, who insisted strenuously that a salary of $2,000 was absolutely inadequate for the service involved and the caliber of the men composing the present board.

Mr. Wohlwender gave notice he would move to reconsider the bill.

Delay Action on Road Bill.

The first bill to come up for a third reading at the session Monday was the one providing for a public highway from the King's Ferry Bridge on the Ogeechee River, in Bryan County, through the counties of Bryan, Liberty, McIntosh, Glynn or Wayne and Camden, to some suitable point on the Florida line, the State to furnish either 50 or 100 State convicts to the counties through which the road will run. The proposed highway will connext with a State road traversing Florida.

After some discussion, a motion postponing action on the report of the committee, which was favorable, until Wednesday was carried. Three hundred copies of the bill will be printed and distributed among the members in the meanwhile. Those backing the bill have hopes of ultimately extending the road clear across the State.

Candler County Gets Boost.

Candler County received a boost when the Constitutional Committee reported it favorably. Action on it will come up probably Wednesday or Thursday.

A reconsideration of House Bill No. 36, which was killed Friday, was granted upon the motion of Representative Garlington of Richmond. This bill provides for the foreclosing of a mortgage within four weeks instead of four months, and the House showed itself almost equally divided on the question when it was put to the vote last Friday.

Fisherman Is Slain; Farmer Under Arrest

HAWKINSVILLE, July 14.—While searching fish baskets Sunday on the Ocmulgee River, about twelve miles south of Hawkinsville, James McGlamery, a well-known farmer, was shot from the opposite side of the river. He died during the afternoon.

Ned McAllister, a farmer, living five miles from the scene, who, it is alleged, owned the baskets being fished, and, because of a previous robbery, was in waiting for any intruders, has been arrested. He denies the charge and claims he can prove an alibi.

The SOCIAL WORLD

The week-end dinner dance at the Piedmont Club was one of the largest this season in the series of delightful weekly dinner dances sponsored by the club. One hundred and sixty guests were seated for dinner on the terrace, each table being decorated in white phlox. Festoons of Japanese lanterns outlined the terrace, and there was music by an orchestra.

A number of large parties were given, several of them being arranged for popular Atlantans who will depart soon to spend the summer elsewhere. Mrs. John Grant, who will leave Wednesday with her family to spend the summer at the Greenbrier White, was tendered a dinner party of 22 covers by Colonel and Mrs. William Lawson Peel.

Mrs. Roby Robinson, who leaves next week to spend the summer in Maine, was tendered a party by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stearns, their other guests being Mr and Mrs. Clark Howell and their guest, Mrs. Comer, of Savannah; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cotton Alston, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Weyman, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Evins and Mr. James H. Nunnally.

Mrs. William Leland Southwell, of Macon, the guest of Mrs. William B. Burwell, was tendered a dinner party by Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair. Mr. and Mrs. Junius G. Oglesby had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Sciple and Mr. and Mrs. Junius G. Oglesby, Jr.

Mrs. William A. Tilt, of New York, was a lovely visitor present, and among others present were Dr. and Mrs. Charles Remsen, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Kiser, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Harris, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Speer, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Little, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Foster Maddox, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Lowry Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. James James L. Dickey, Jr., Judge and Mrs. William T. Newman, Judge and Mrs. Percy Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hilsman, Mr. and Mrs. George Calhoun Walters, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Woodruff, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Howe, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Cohen, Misses Annie Lee McKenzie, Helen Dargan, Messrs. Eugene Kelly, Milton Dargan, Jr., Dozier Lowndes, James Harris and Lewis Carhart.

For Misses Nowell.

Miss Willie Nowell, of Augusta, will arrive Saturday to visit Miss Lucile Goodrich. Her sister, Miss Helen Nowell, is already here and has been the guest of honor at several parties the past week.

Saturday evening there will be a dinner party at East Lake in compliment to the Misses Nowell. Miss Margaret Smith will entertain for them and Miss Lois Pattillo, who is in North Carolina, will give an informal bridge party on her return.

Mission Workers Meet.

There will be a meeting of the Atlanta Woman's Union of Mission Workers Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at St. Luke's Episcopal Church.

For Miss Stephens.

Miss Lillian Daley entertained the members of her church circle Monday afternoon, in honor of her guest, Miss Eva Stephens, of Dublin. Miss Daley will give a matinee party Tuesday afternoon for Miss Stephens and for Miss Viola Wade, of Palmetto, Fla. Other guests will include Mrs. Hatton B. Rogers, Mrs. G. R. Glenn, Jr., and Misses Lucile Daley, Anna Lou Jenkins, Bessie Small and Lola Waxum.

Mrs. Rollestone Entertains.

A recent event was the progressive hearts-dice party given by Mrs. J. A. Rollestone at her home on Boulevard terrace for her guests, Miss Janie Bond, of Fitzgerald; Mrs. Bert F. Tull, of Augusta, and Mrs. Jameson and Miss Anna Holson, of New York.

The prizes were won by Miss Essie May Weems, a hand-embroidered handkerchief, and Mr. Smith, a loving cup book. The consolation fell to Mrs. W. H. Davidson.

Punch was served by Misses Louisa Viewig and Pearl Myrick.

The guests were Misses Janie Bond, Edith Little, Mary Hines, Essie Mae Means, Anna Holson, Bertha Hines, Barbara Adams, Mary Rice, Louisa Viewig, Pearl Myrick, Mrs. Bert F. Tull, Mrs. Louis F. Henderson, Mrs. Jameson, Mrs. W. H. Davidson, Mrs. Anna Viewig, Mrs. J. A. Rollestone, Mr. Frank Carnes, Dr. Fred A. Hansen, Messrs. Smith, W. H. Davidson, Walter Farlow, Morton Rollestone, Avary Means, Davis, Taylor, J. A. Rollestone, Louis F. Henderson and L. V. Henderson.

For Mrs. Southwell.

A series of informal parties is being tendered Mrs. William Leland Southwell, of Macon, who is visiting Mrs. William B. Burwell, at the home of Mr. Clark Howell, 741 Peachtree street. Mrs. Southwell was tendered a dinner party Saturday evening at the Piedmont Club by Mr. Forrest Adair, and an informal luncheon of six covers was tendered her Saturday by Mrs. Burwell at the Capital City Club. Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. Burwell entertained informally at dinner at the Georgian Terrace in her honor. Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Jackson will give a dinner Tuesday evening at the Capital City Club.

Miss Brantley's Party.

Miss Margaret Brantley entertained recently at her home in Decatur, the guests being Misses Elizabeth Evans, Louise Haygood, Annie Marie Parry, Elizabeth Mack, Rebecca Candler, Ethel Coffee, Jean Robson, Annie Kate Green, Cornelia Dunwody, Ruth Reid, Ruth Paden, Madge Pollock, Sarah Terrell and guest, Evelyn Pratt; Adeline Milledge, Irma Mayson, Sarah Franklin Montgomery, Glover and Lillian Henderson, Elizabeth Visscher, Lavinia Jones, Louise Hutcheson, Nell Murphy, Kate Behrman, Emma Collier, Belle Bruner, Lena Wittig, Messrs. ENTER THE 'SILHOUETTE SLOUCH;' IT'S THE NEW TIGHT SKIRT TODDLE

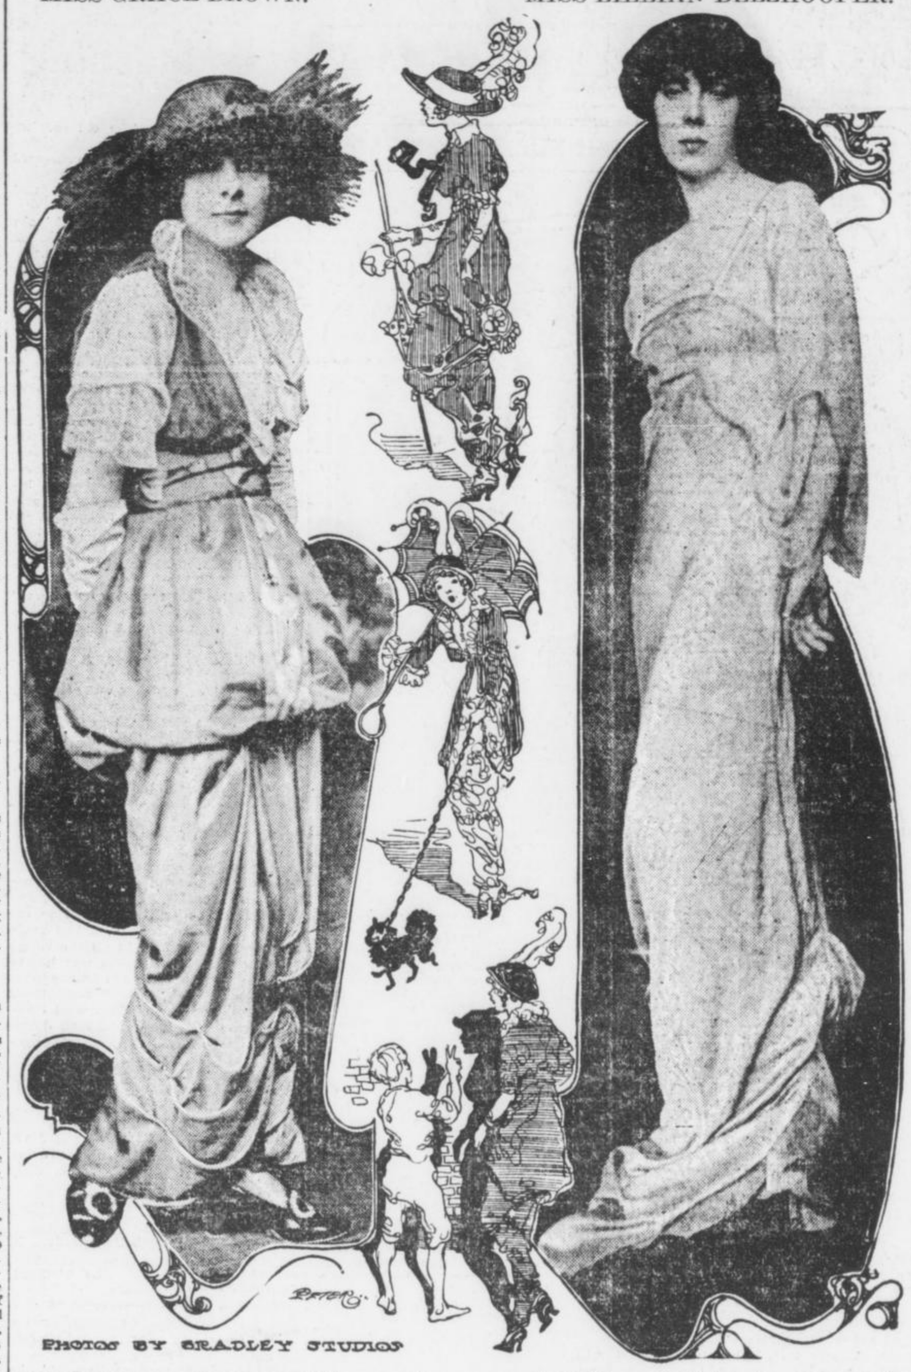
MISS GRACE BROWN. MISS LILLIAN BELZHOOFER.



PHOTOS BY BRADLEY STUDIOS

Grace Brown and Lillian Belzhoofer Graceful Exponents of Pendulum Swing Gait.

NEW YORK, July 14.—You remember the day when you used in the candle light to make figures with your two hands on the wall next to your bed. You called them shadows on the wall. But when you grew up you came to know them as silhouettes.

The word has now been adapted for a new "slouch" walk to be seen along Fifth avenue or in some of the fashionable summer hotels around New York.

The "silhouette slouch," just as its old predecessor—the picture on the wall—gives you sharp angular outlines of the subject—in the present case, the fashionable young woman. Owing to the tightness of the skirt at the bottom, the center of gravity—if we may make that comparison—is lowered. This gives the body a certain swing and creates certain angles around the knees, the shoulders and the elbows. The "slouch" is much like the stiff movement of the pendulum of a clock, i. e., forward and backward.

Miss Grace Brown, of Chicago, who is considered one of the best dressed young women in the Long Island set, and Miss Lillian Belzhooter, a Cincinnati society girl, and one of the most popular debutantes of last season, are among the young women who have adopted the new walk and carry it off with grace.

A Sale of Interest to Mothers and Daughters

Misses' and Children's Hats at Clearaway Prices

Junior Department---Third Floor

Great and fine reductions on Misses' and Children's hats for to-morrow and so much pleasure to both mothers and daughters!

Here—

$3.00 and $4.00 Hats Are . . . 98c

$8.00 and $10.00 Hats Are . . . $2.50

$12.50 and $15.00 Hats Are . . . $5.00

Rather a happy time for such a sale. For daughter, too, would have a fresh hat at this season and now it will cost—well, you see just how very little it will cost!

Many kinds are included, those at 98c for general wear, in light and dark straws—hats you will like for more reasons than just their new price. Those at $2.50 are the smarter affairs—hats for both "dress up" and street wear. There are but fourteen of these and not one was originally less than $8.00. Those at $5.00 are the lovely affairs of laces and ribbons—the lingerie hats—made by artists who turn their whole thought to style for the young folk. However, there are only eight of these.

Half-Price

For Children's White Dresses

They Were $1.50 to $10.00

Sizes one to six years.

Buy them by the half-dozens, in that direction lies economy.

Half-price for those little white dresses that mothers—so they say—can never get enough of—and for those dainty and lovely "best dresses."

There are practically all styles included. Little "Gretchen" dresses, little Russian dresses, little long-waisted dresses—sheer Swiss embroideries are plentiful, and French Valenciennes and cluny lace—it would be hard to find a dress you would not like. Some of the less expensive ones show pipings of blue and red. Low neck, short sleeves.

Before we realize it we will be in the midst of our planning for the fall, and of all the refixing and refurnishing of the home that this implies. No doubt there will be some pieces of new furniture necessary---it may be a chair, a rocker, a bed, a table, a chiffonier, a china cabinet or perhaps a whole set.

If you will anticipate your needs and fill them now during the life of our "Blue Tag" Furniture Sale, you will save.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

JUNE 10.—I was forcibly reminded this morning that my contemplated flight is no dream by the appearance of Manette dressed in her hobo clothes. Instead of the dainty, lace-trimmed white in which she is always attired, she wore a blue checked gingham, her curls had been cropped off; in her hand she carried a blue sunbonnet, and her shoes were a durable, heavy-soled tan.

The little monkey was very much excited because I didn't know her, and danced around the room, darting out the door and across the lawn at the sound of Mrs. Spencer's voice, giving such squeals of delight on the way that I felt that the cure for both of us had begun.

"A happy baby," I murmured.

"A baby no longer," said Richards, who had brought her into the room. There was an unusual note in Richards' voice, and I was not surprised when I turned to look at her to find traces of tears on her face.

"She can dress herself now," she said, half-proudly, and half in complaint. "She wouldn't let me fasten a button for her because she said she would have to dress herself when she is away from me.

"Mr. Max, there isn't a doctor anywhere near where you are going, and what are you going to do without me to nurse her if she gets sick? And who will sterilize her food? The poor little lamb, to be taken into a wilderness like that!"

She covered her face with her apron and began to cry. The doctor is right. The love we have for Manette is weighted too heavily with apprehension for the child's good. It is well I am taking her away.

Comforting Words.

I couldn't scold her. I could only give her the reassurance I had given every day since the trip was planned. That I would telegraph for her at the first symptom of illness; that I would send her a daily bulletin; that I would see that Manette didn't eat this, and remember that last fall she had a fever because she ate too much of that, and that her throat isn't strong, and her stomach is weak, etc.

All I promised to remember because of my respect for Richards' intentions, and all except the bulletins I intend to forget because of my interest in the child.

June 11.—Jack and Sally Spencer came over last evening, and it was the first time I had seen her since Jack's return. I thought she looked a little worn and thoughtful, but outwardly she was her same serene, sweet, wholesome self. She approved of my plans for Manette. I was glad, for I have learned to rely on her judgment.

She wished, she said, that she could take a little child she loved and go away from everybody in the world.

"Complimentary to me," laughed her husband.

Sally winced, a quick flash of color mantled her cheeks and as suddenly receded, leaving her more pale and tired than is her ordinary wont. I wondered her husband didn't see it. Or rather, to speak more truthfully, I wondered that any man could have the love of a woman like Sally, and not show greater interest in her condition.

"It would do me good," she resumed. "In caring for a child one forgets many things."

Just what the doctor had said to me! I am glad I can take the cure.

I wish every hungry-hearted man and woman in the world could know what it is to love and to have the love of a child, and in that way "forget many things."

A Farewell Tea.

June 12.—We start to-night, and Jack and Sally came over to take a farewell make-believe tea on the lawn. I wish I could have been spared it, for, with my sorrow over her unhappiness, my indignation at him and the fight I am making to keep down all rebellious longings, I am rapidly getting myself into a serious state.

"I met Mrs. Brown on the street when away last week," said Jack, drinking make-believe tea out of a cup as big as a thimble.

To be so brazen! I wouldn't have thought it of him! I shouldn't have looked at Sally when he said it. I should have had more sense. But men have no sense in such matters, and I can't claim a credit that doesn't belong to me. So I looked at her, and made no reply, and when Jack, in his asinine stupidity wondered why I made no answer and looked up to see, he found me gazing at his wife with what must have been anything but a conventional tea party expression. And he saw that she had dropped the cream pitcher and it was broken, and that her eyes were filled with tears, and her face white, as she apologized to Manette, an unusual emotion over the loss of a child's dish!

Nor did her color come back, though Manette said it was all right in her sweetest manner, and her tears continued to flow in an altogether uncontrollable way, though Manette climbed on her lap and hugged her and said she didn't care for the dishes and would rather lose all of them than see Aunt Sally cry.

"You are getting as foolish and nervous as an old woman," grumbled her husband. "I don't suppose a dozen tea sets like these cost a dollar."

"They don't," I agreed. "But sometimes we don't reckon the cost of a thing after it is broken."

Manette Asleep.

June 13.—It is midnight, and Manette is asleep in her berth. Poor little girl! I decided when I saw Richards weeping over her, and Sarah Rae wiping her eyes with her knuckles, and the cook and the maids looking as if at a funeral, with Tompkins as the undertaker, that we have all been loving her too much.

Everyone acted as if she might never come back alive, and their lugubrious expressions and tear-soaked farewells made the child look frightened. "Am I your sick baby?" she asked, when we had waved the last good-bye, and Tompkins was taking us to the train.

Mrs. Spencer rode in the limousine with us. It was a journey of an hour's duration to reach the little suburban station I had decided to take to escape newspaper observation, and she insisted on taking it. I was sorry.

Manette, exhausted by the day's excitement, fell asleep in my arms within five minutes, and I think for the first half hour neither Sally nor I spoke a word.

Then she began. "I have been thinking over what you said, Max," she said, "and I refuse to let you think you are right. I need a big brother. Do you know I haven't a relative in the world unless my husband can be called one? You need a sister, someone to help you with the care of that child, and to whom you can come with all your little and big troubles.

"So it is all settled. You are to have no further thought of anything else in your head. I am your sister; you are my brother. It was the happiest relationship I have ever known. I refuse to let it be spoiled by your silly notion that you may not care more for me than you should."

Not another word was spoken. We reached the station, and the train pulled in. I carried Manette to my stateroom, and then returned to the limousine to bid good-bye to Sally.

Another Kiss.

I held out my hand. She ignored it, and put both arms around my neck.

"Good-bye, best brother in the world," she whispered, kissing my cheek.

God! It was more than mortal man could stand. I threw my arms around her, and when I left her a moment later I am sure that I took with me every hope she could have had that my love for her was like a man feels for his sister.

Wrong Stuff.

Entering a barber's shop, a customer with scanty locks asked for a bottle of hair restorer, with which the assistant promptly supplied him. For a time he persevered in his application of the remedy for missing hair, but this only resulted in raising bumps in his cranium which would have puzzled the most expert phrenologist. In haste he returned to the barber's shop.

"Look," he exclaimed, excitedly, "what the stuff you sold me in this bottle has done to my head."

Puzzled and perplexed, the barber took the bottle, examined it, then turned to the assistant and fairly shouted:

"You blockhead! What you have sold this customer is not hair restorer. It is my patent recipe for bust developing!"

Plenty of Time.

Mr. Styles: "I have two tickets for the opera."

Mrs. Styles: "Oh, good! I'll go and put my hat on right away."

"All right, dear. I guess you'll be ready in time. The tickets are for to-morrow night."

The GHOST BREAKER

By C. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

The Most Exciting Serial of the Year.

SERIALIZED

By J. W. McCONAUGHY

(Copyright, 1913, by Star Co.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Is this man Warren, the ghost-breaker?"

"Remember, he's harmless," cautioned Jarvis, to the detectives out of the corner of his mouth. "Humor him—agree with anything he says."

The Duke was almost blind with fury because he could not hear the mumbled words. There is no knowing what he would have been if he had heard them.

"Answer my question!" he stormed. "Is this man Warren, the ghost-breaker?"

"Tom" had to hide behind his more self-possessed friend, who managed to gurgle:

"Now, that's all right, Dook. Sure he's a ghost-breaker! Ain't he, Tom?"

Tom was nearly purple in the face, but he managed to get out in a half strangled voice:

"Surest thing you know, bo."

"Sacristi!" foamed the exalted cousin. "Am I, Hernado d'Alva, to be mocked at by two grinning, bull-necked scullions?"

"Shake a leg there!" called a voice from the deck, "if you are going ashore with the pilot!"

The detectives staggered weakly to the door and Driscoll feebly waved his hand farewell.

"You're all right, Dook, old boy! Ghost-breaker! Whee! Wow! Ha, ha!"

The Ambush at the Inn.

Segura, cupped in a fertile valley among the jagged red-brown Spanish mountains, was the natural home of rest. When you came down to it over the winding mountain road it breathed from afar the spirit of dolce far niente. All day long it dozed in the soft yellow sunlight, and all night long it slept in the dim glow of the great yellow stars.

At times its peace was broken by the sudden, fierce descent of a mountain storm. Then the wild lightnings play around the towers of the old castle perched high above it, and the warm rain lashes through the olive trees and beats clamorous summons on the flat roofs of the houses.

But these storms quickly pass and leave Segura greener, fairer, lazier and sleepier than before.

Scientists have observed that a people inevitably conform themselves to their environment; that in their character and even their physical make-up they reflect the climate and topography of their native land. It was so with Segura and the Segurans. They were a solidly built, but for the most part a placid and ox-eyed breed, but likely to be swept by sudden and violent storms of passion, when the steel flashed, sharply and deadly as the mountain lightning. Excitement, passion of any sort, quickly spent its force.

The Little Inn.

Entering the town by the old Roman road, which is still the one decent highway of the region, you pass the little Church of Our Lady of Roncomadour and just beyond it you come upon the one little inn of the town. Here the villagers have for generations, done most of their gambling, dueling and drinking. You enter into a large room and see a fireplace at your left and tables scattered about the floor in front of it.

At your right the staircase rises against the front wall of the room, so that only the foot is visible from the door. Beneath the stairs are two deep windows, so close together as to be practically one. There is a table in this little alcove and it is a fine place in which to eat your supper, for the windows command a view of the valley and, beyond, the rugged mountains and the great castle, dark and stern, against the sunset. Sitting there you would be disappointed if you were not told that the old castle was haunted. Its great square towers and sheer, half-ruined curtains hark back to a time when ghosts should have been bred by the score.

The Seguras had wrenched it from a feudal enemy and held it for their king. The Moor had been thrust back from its walls three times in the last days of Granada. Its towers had rung with battle cries and crash of blade and armor. Its halls and stairways had been slippery with blood and its moat choked with the harvest of the fight.

You may have some difficulty in obtaining this table, as it is a favorite one of the Seguran card players and killers. Any of the other tables will be generally at your disposal, for most of the natives prefer the wineroom, which is at the end of the passage that opens at the rear. But this particular spot is a favorite.

Just at this time it was at a premium, especially as night fell over the valley. For even the bovine nature of the Segurans was stirred by the repeated tragedies and unsolved mystery of the grim and deserted castle.

Gaspar, a fat-faced, round-bodied villager, one of the most sedulous of the customers of Pedro, the inkeeper, sat at the little table by the windows and told the latest developments to a friend just returned from his military service in Africa. The young Prince had gone in to lay the ghost and find the treasure. That was two weeks ago, and—Sancta Maria!—not one sound or sign of him since.

"What men will not do for money or women!" commented the bravo, with piety. He looked keener and more alert than the other villagers as a result of his recent army experience. His name was Maximo. "Did he go in alone?" he asked.

"Old Vardos, his father's body servant, pleaded with him all the way to the angle where the brook runs out of the moat not to throw away another life for that phantom treasure. Every night since then the old man has returned and left a basket of provisions at the main gate." Gaspar's great dark eyes opened and his voice took on a hollow tone. "None of them had been touched!"

Maximo swore with sympathetic vigor.

THE SPANISH BULLY

The innkeeper came on the run.

"A thousand pardons, senor, he begged, stumbling into the room; "What can I do for you?"

Don Robledo glared at him until the innkeeper was reduced to a condition of abject terror, then snapped:

"My horse is outside. Wash out his mouth and don't water him until he is cool. Leave the saddle on."

"Yes, senor. Yes, senor."

"And wouldn't any one go in there with him?"

Gaspar stared at him as if he thought him demented.

"No! Why should they?"

"He is your Prince," frowned the soldier.

Gaspar shrugged his shoulders uncomfortably and shuffled his feet under the table.

"Isn't a man's life his own?" he growled.

"Sacristi! You are a lot of old women," snapped Maximo. "Where is his sister—the Princess? What is she doing about it?"

"She's not here—she is away—gone on some mysterious errand to America. It is rumored in the village that she went to get a man to fight the ghost."

The soldier flushed a brick-red under his dark skin.

"In the name of the Virgin! Did she have to go that far for some one with stomach enough to go into the castle?"

At the moment Dolores, the innkeeper's daughter—the pretty black-eyed belle of the village—slipped into the room and wanted to know what was the matter. Gaspar explained that he thought he had seen a light from the main tower of the castle a short time before and was explaining the situation to his friend. The girl pooh-poohed the idea and the twain departed for the wine room in search of refreshment.

Dolores was evidently waiting for some one. She went to the window and looked out down the road repeatedly. At last she was rewarded by the appearance of a lithe, gray-haired man, who hastened to greet her.

"Any news, Vardos?" she cried eagerly.

He held out a basket which he carried. His face was gray and solemn and his eyes shone in the firelight.

"Nothing," he replied in a low, faltering voice. "Here is the basket—untouched, as usual." He placed the basket on the table by the window and stared out at the castle for a moment in silence.

"This is the fifteenth night," he added. "Gaspar swears he saw a light in the tower to-night," said the girl, in the same hushed tones. The old servitor crossed himself.

"If he did it was an unblessed light."

The girl crossed herself also, and muttered a short prayer.

"You haven't given up hope?" she asked, after a pause, and the question was more of a plea than otherwise.

Vardon shook his head.

No Hope.

"I gave up hope when he went in. I waited to-night until an hour past sundown, and twice I called. Once," he gulped and his voice grew shakier, "a wail came back to me! It may have been the wind through a grated window, but it sounded like a sigh of the damned! When I called again, something moved in the turret of the keep, like a man waving, and my heart leaped with joy. But only for an instant; for, with a harsh cry, a black, ugly bird flapped from the turret straight for where the sun had set—on my left! Mind you, the left—"

Dolored shuddered and her lip trembled.

"Oh, if the Princess were only here!" she walled.

"She's on her way—but what can she do?"

Dolores' slender body straightened instantly and the shadow of terror disappeared. Her eyes flashed and her bosom heaved with sudden passion.

"She will go straight to the castle," she cried. "And will Segura have it said that she went alone?"

This time it was Vardos who shuddered. "God forbid that it should come to that!" he exclaimed, fervently. "Good-night."

The little inn was undisturbed for some little while after the departure of Vardon. It was nearly 8 o'clock when a tall, powerfully made man galloped up on a black horse, tossed the bridle to a hostler and strode into the main room of the inn. He had probably the hardest face in all the rough region of hard faces. His mouth was wide, but was a mere slit in a craggy countenance. His cheeks were laced with white scars. One long weal traveled from the bridge of the nose downward to the angle of the jaw. His eyebrows were bushy and jet black and shaded the most sinister and menacing pair of black eyes ever set into a human face. This was Don Robledo, bravo, duelist, general "bad man" and right-hand ruffian of the Duke of Alva.

Finding no one about he thumped the top of the table with his riding whip and bellowed:

"Hey! You, Pedro!"

The Bully.

A sleepy voice replied somewhere in the recesses of the house.

"Wake up!" roared Don Robledo, whacking the table again.

Then the inn-keeper seemed to recognize this peculiar summons, or the voice of the summoner, and he came on the run.

"A thousand pardons, senor!" he begged, stumbling into the room. "What can I do for you?"

Don Robledo glared at him until the inn-keeper was reduced to a condition of abject terror, then snapped:

"My horse is outside. Wash out his mouth and don't water him till he is cool. Leave the saddle on."

"Yes, senor! Yes, senor!"

Pedro made hurriedly for the door, but was stopped by a sharp command.

"Hold on. If that rat-infested larder of yours is empty, get it filled before His Excellency arrives."

"The Duke coming here!" exclaimed Pedro. "When?"

"To-night. Don't stand and stare! Where's your daughter?"

"I'll call her," the inn-keeper assured him, hastening out.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Household Suggestions

To keep the hands soft have a bottle of olive oil on your washstand, and before washing the hands rub a little of the oil well in. Then soap and wash as usual. The oil loosens the dirt and also keeps the skin soft.

Grass stains may be removed from washing materials by carefully rubbing the spots with a little fresh lard. Then wash in the usual way, and you will find that the stains have entirely disappeared.

To make bread crumbs quickly place a piece of bread in a muslin bag, tie the opening, and rub with the hands. The crumbs will be quite fine, and it will only take a minute or two to bake them.

To make cabbage digestible, when half boiled pour off the water and place in fresh boiling water.

When preparing the whitening for ceilings or pantries, add one pint of boiled milk, after you have put in as much water as you require. The milk gives the ceiling a beautiful gloss when dry and keeps the whitening from rubbing off.

Tea Made with Boiling Milk instead of water and allowed to stand for four minutes before being poured off the leaves is excellent for invalids and most nourishing.

An Economical Way of Frying Onions is to place sufficient cold water at the bottom of the pan to cover it, then slice the onions and put them into the pan with a piece of dripping the size of a walnut. Fried in this way they will not burn.

Introducing Himself.

A gentleman was once advertised to sing at a charity concert presided over by a city councilor—a self-made man. The first song was "The Owl." On rising to announce it the chairman was interrupted and informed that the singer had not arrived, a fact that he duly notified to the audience.

A little later, however, the missing baritone made his appearance, and was observed by the worthy chairman, who called on him without delay.

But the singer had hurried, and had not recovered his breath, so, with apologies, this fact was suitably explained and another artiste requisitioned. At length the baritone was quite ready.

The councilor rose, and quite innocently discomfited the long-awaited singer by announcing with marked confidence:

"Mr 'Ampton will now favor us with the longed-for 'Howl!'"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FORGIVE HIM, OF COURSE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The other day, while talking to a young man, he kissed me. I was very indignant, and refused to speak to him again. He sent me a letter of apology, and apologized personally, but still I refuse to speak to him. Would you advise me to ignore him entirely?

C. T.

He has shown due repentance, and I hope you will forgive him. If he is the gentleman I hope he is, he will not repeat the offense until an engagement makes it a privilege.

I HOPE NOT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been in love with a cousin for four months, and although we have not spoken of it, I feel that she reciprocates. But, being a young man of a serious mood, I am at times annoyed by her teasing and silly actions, also I am grieved because when there is company she seemingly neglects me for other young men, while when we are alone she accepts my attentions. Do you think she loves me?

MUSIC LOVER.

You are cousins, which should be a bar to any closer relationship. Though you were not, I would still hope she did not love you, for you, being "of serious mood," would change her happy, merry disposition to one more grave, instead of being glad. The Lord made her that way.

CERTAINLY.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I would like to know if it is proper for me to ask a friend if I may take her home. If it is, I would like to know the proper thing to say.

A. H. B.

"May I take you home?" is the simplest and best form to use. Always ask her, never taking it for granted, as some men have done, and in that way compelling her acceptance.

Henry Gets a Rest

"HENRY said," related Mrs. Dillpickle, "that he was not feeling very fit and the change would do him good. 'If you insist,' said he, 'on spending a week in Michigan at the summer cottage getting things ready for the family invasion I might as well go along. There will be fishing—it's just the time for bass—and, besides, maybe I can help you.'

"Henry added that last phrase with the air of a guilty sudden thought. He is a good husband, but I must say that around the house Henry Dillpickle is about as much use as a flying machine or a white elephant. But I let him go along. I've had experience before when I yearned for a strong right arm to beat rugs and rake and spade and scrub and couldn't hire any one because all the men were doing spring plowing and all the women were busy wiping up mud tracks after them.

"Henry has put on too much weight and all winter he mourned because he had no time to take an expensive gymnastic and massage course to run down his weight. He has talked loud and long about how willingly he would live on Iran diet and be pounded to a jelly if only he could lose weight, and I thought I saw a way to help him and also myself.

A Feverish Stare.

"When the launch dumped us and our baggage on the pier and went coughing away Henry began looking at the lake with that absorbed, feverish, fisherman's stare. I stopped that immediately.

"'Run on to the cottage, Henry,' I said, 'and get the wheelbarrow and cart up the trunk and the linoleum and the suit case and the groceries.'

"'In these clothes?' he howled reproachfully.

"'There is a lovely suit hanging in the closet at the cottage,' I told him. 'Don't you remember? It's the one you wore when you fell into the lake and went berrying and got run over by the Fishers' automobile. There is fringe on the cuffs, but nobody will see you—trot on!'

"The way Henry puffed and steamed getting that luggage to the house would have been heartrending had I not been too busy cleaning out the kitchen. I made him eat his lunch on the kitchen table, which broke his proud heart. Just as he was getting out an afternoon cigar I put a spade into his hand. 'You will have time to fix about half the garden this afternoon,' I told him. 'Then there's the yard to rake, and I want what's left of the woodpile moved, and you know we're going to make a new path to the lake. Meanwhile, I wish you'd beat these rugs.'

"Henry looked at me reproachfully, but I was adamant. 'I did think,' said he feebly, 'that maybe I'd get a nice mess of fish for dinner——'

"'Fish?' echoed I. 'Oh, my, no! Not when I have a lovely can of salmon ready!'

"Henry groaned and took up the white man's burden. He went to bed at 7 o'clock that night, walking bent over like an old man. He said that never again should he wonder at the hobbling, shuffling gait of steady farmers. He understood why they couldn't straighten up.

"He tried to slip out at 5 the next morning to go fishing, but I opened one eye and suggested that it would be nice if he would start the kitchen fire and a blaze in the fireplace. Two hours later I found Henry, all smudged like a stoker, shaking his fist at the kitchen stove, which he had entirely covered with all the ashes he hadn't scattered over the floor. 'I've put everything on that fire of yours,' he stormed, 'from kerosene to vanilla extract, and it won't burn! There is a Michigan law against cook stoves burning, I know! I——'

"When I suggested that if he opened the drafts instead of shutting them it might be better, Henry just blew up and popped out of doors, where he chopped the window boxes into kindling wood before he realized what he was doing. I had to stand over him that day to make him keep on with the garden. By night he said he felt queer and knew he was going to die and that he had no idea I had such a cruel and inconsiderate nature.

"The next morning he groaned feebly when I woke him and then he refused to get up. He said his head ached and his back ached, and his legs and arms ached, and why in thunder didn't I hire a man to do my slaving and let him expire in peace?

Glad To Go.

"I had to spend a great deal of the day putting hot cloths on Henry's aches and pains and soothing his disposition, and when he did rise from his bed of suffering he said 'Ouch!' whenever he moved, and he looked pale.

"The last day there I let him go fishing and he came home with a fine string of fish. He nearly fainted when I said that, of course, he would have to clean them for me. Henry Dillpickle can't kill a mosquito without gulping, and those fish were still lively. At dinner he said he guessed he had lost his fondness for fish.

"Henry said he was mighty glad to get home," concluded Mrs. Dillpickle, "where he could recover his health and strength after his strenuous rest in the country!"

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a comity of ladies caim to the house last nite. Thay belong to a new club wich Ma has joined, called the Sisters of the Songbird. The object of the club, Ma told Pa, is to teech the art of singing & the art of making new & butiful songs & sending them to forin lands ware the heethen is setting alone in his blindness.

One of the ladies did all the talking. Her naim was Missus Smily Goode. The way she looked at Pa onst wen he tried to say sumthing & interrupted her, it was a awful look. I bet Mister Goode is a kind of a silent man.

The objeck of our order, sed Missus Goode, is to promote song in all its butiful buty. Song & the maiking of songs has progressed, she sed, until it is grate in its vary grateness. What is noabler or grater than one who makes songs? she sed to Pa.

I doan't know, sed Pa, the only song writers I know is jest plain good fellows like Vince Bryant and Billy Cobb or Harry Williams. Thay don't feel grate or noabel excep sumtimes late at nite or at a stag party, Pa sed.

But I mean songs for the heethen to make them see the truth, sed Missus Goode. I mean songs that shud be sent to forrin countries.

He Indorsed It.

That is what shud be did with a lot of the songs that is a kind of rage now, Pa sed. One sure thing, sed Pa, if a good heethen mother saw sum of them songs like "Wait Till I Git You Alone Tonite" & a lot of that tripe, she wuddent let her littel heethen daughter sing it, Pa sed. I doan't think we peepul in this country have a rite to send misshunaries anyware after standing for sum of the songs that make a hit here.

You doan't seem to understand, sed Missus Emily Goode. This is the kind of songs we are going to send to the heethen like this one wich I have just rote. Then she sang:

Kindness, kindness, gentle kindness
Must be shown by all us gurls
To the heethen in his blindness
Diving after preshus pearls.
Oh the foolish pearls he dives for
Underneath the deep blue sea.
Vain are the foolish things he strives for,
Let us help him, you & me.

CHORUS.

Kindness, kindness, that's the word
That by heathen must be herd.
Preech it, sisters, everyware,
Sing it to sum heethen air,
Till the cannibuls we know there
Will not gulp us wen we go there.

Well, sed Pa, ware are you all deer littel cunning reeformers going to get the gelt for this grand movement? You cant maik it by publishing & selling yure songs, sed Pa, beekaus the song bisness is on the fritz.

Strong, Brave Men.

We are going to deepend on you strong, brave men to help us out, sed one of the Sisters of the Songbird. We are kind of deependent on you noabel men, after all is sed & done about our wanting to vote & all that. We lean on you.

Not on me, sed Pa. I am too long in the league. I wont give a cent. Put that in yure pipes and sing it, sed Pa.

What She Was Meant For.

A lady of great beauty and attractiveness, who was an ardent admirer of Ireland, once crowned her praise of it at a party by saying:

"I think I was meant for an Irishwoman."

"Madam," rejoined a witty son of Erin, who happened to be present, "thousands would back me in saying that you were meant for an Irishman."

A Stunning Hat

Fully Described by Olivette

By Olivette.

A WONDERFUL picture hat for the fresh young face is the one we illustrate to-day. Black Milanese straw forms the foundation, and a double flounce of accordion plated maline shadows the brim. The maline covers the rounded crown and a narrow fluting of it edges the top of the crown. At the base of the crown in front nestles a great full-blown rose in glowing crimson, and wound loosely around the crown is double-faced black satin ribbon, which falls in graceful loops and ends from the down-curving back brim. One end of the ribbon is almost to the waist, and the other falls almost to the knees—a most unusual new feature.

Something Neat

"I THINK I'll put in one of those marble fountains over at my country house this summer," said the fat man, meditatively.

"Don't you do it!" quickly objected the lean man. "Try to keep from putting on style. Did you ever hear what happened to Page last year—Rawlston C. Page, who ran hotels here in Chicago and gained fame for the elaborate equipment in the liquid solace portion of his biggest venture? That was a famous old place, and I guss any prominent man in the United States who hadn't visited that arrangement of solid mahogany and plate-glass mirrors was either a paralytic or couldn't break through the crowd.

"But when Page disposed of his business some years ago, he found himself with about $50,000 worth of mahogany and mirrors on his hands. The new management had different plans. The mahogany and mirrors didn't bother Page much, because by this time he was too busy planting strawberries and green peas over on his Michigan estate and digging holes for fence posts, while his hired men stood around and admired his muscle.

"I don't know any man who has more fun with anything than Page has had with his Michigan country place. He built things all over it, and whenever he could use up unlikely material, he was tickled to death. He swelled up frightfully over a garage made from Venetian blinds that were left from wrecking one of his buildings, and when he planned out a winter home for his two pet cows from a sailboat and some laths, he was perfectly happy. When it became necessary last year to build a brand-new chicken house, he almost got a headache because he was afraid he would have to have just a normal, prosaic, usual chicken house. And his collection of fowls is too valuable and good looking to be condemned to anything like that. Then one night he awoke with a yell of joy and wrote a telegram, and by the next boat from Chicago along came the mahogany and plate glass that had been reposing in storage.

"The country contractor nearly had a fit and even wept tears of protest, but Page couldn't hear him. The chicken house was built on one of Page's back lots next the public road that runs through Page's estate, and the mirrors were put on outside because the hired man who cared for the chickens stormed around so. He insisted that chickens needed sleep, particularly nervous, blooded chickens, and he pointed out that if the mirrors were inside, the hens would spend all their time preening and primping, that being the nature of the female sex.

"I tell you that was a great building. On a sunny day it was a regular mirage. Everybody, from the young women guests at the summer hotel a quarter of a mile away to the girl who did laundry work for the cottagers, used to make pilgrimages to Page's chicken house to see how their skirts hung and their general effect approaching from a distance.

"Those mirrors were a regular delight to the women. They said it was the first time in their lives they had had access to a looking-glass with plenty of room around it. The hired man caught one woman trying to pry loose a mirror with her nail file the night before she was to leave for home, but the contractor had done his work too well.

"Barring the death of a $500 rooster that got so infuriated at his reflection one day that he fought it to the bitter end, nothing serious happened till the time old Markham undertook to ride by on a bicycle one moonlight night when he had tarried too long in the village. He was the kind who is opposed to progress, forks on the table and women folks who can't work in the field. The reflection of the lantern on his handle bars in the chicken house mirrors caught his eyes. It followed him.

"Y' wull, wull ye?" he roared, and headed his wheel in its direction. The mysterious person with the light approached him as rapidly. There was a terrific collision, and then Markham fell on his enemy with a howl of rage.

"Swinging his bicycle over his head, he used it as a weapon, and, dazed and infuriated by the cutting shower that fell over him, he kept on madly smashing. When he stopped there wasn't enough glass left in the side of the chicken house next the road to use in a vanity case.

"Three-quarters of the hens suffered from nervous prostration the rest of the summer and refused to work. The worst of it was that any woman who wanted to see how her skirt hung had to climb the fence and go around to the other side of the chicken house, and there were lots of complaints to Page on that score.

"Page said there was no use trying to elevate the architectural sense of the countryside. He was so discouraged that he built a woodshed of mere lumber while he wasn't thinking. The mahogany chicken house made him a lot of trouble."

"Maybe a marble fountain would be ostentatious," remarked the fat man.

Their Married Life

Helen Determines to Brave Warren's Wrath and Engage Rooms at Another Hotel.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

HELEN opened the door to the grinning French maid with the coffee and rolls. The girl looked uncertainly around for some place to set the tray, for on the only table Helen had unpacked her traveling bag.

"Wait, you can put it here," and Helen hurriedly cleared off the table.

The maid, who could not understand or speak a word of English, put down the tray, chattered something in French, and hurried out.

"Breakfast come?" called Warren from the bedroom.

"The tray's come, but I shouldn't call it breakfast," answered Helen, viewing it with disgust. "Just see how they serve things here!"

It was certainly not an attractive tray. There were only coffee and rolls. A roll and a blackened spoon and knife was thrust in each of the thick, chipped coffee cups. There was a small plate of butter, a brown earthenware coffee pot, a pitcher of hot milk, a saucer with a few lumps of sugar—and nothing else. There were no napkins, and not even saucers for the cups.

"Well, they don't believe in unessentials, that's certain," was Warren's comment as he surveyed the tray.

"Look at that silver!" exclaimed Helen indignantly, taking the blackened spoon and knife from one of the cups.

"I'd hardly call it silver. But come on—draw up a chair there. It's after nine now and I ought to be out of here."

Helen spread a fresh towel on the table to serve as a cloth, and arranged on it the meager contents of the tray.

"Here, dear, this is as good as paper napkins," taking from her trunk some crumpled tissue paper.

Helen in Distress.

"Oh, don't be so darn particular," pouring out his coffee, while Helen wiped out her cup and spoon with the paper. "You've got to put up with a lot of things when you travel."

"I can put up with almost anything—if it's clean. But I don't think this place IS clean. Hadn't you better tell them as you go out that we're not going to stay?"

"I've no time to look up any other place," he frowned. "I'm here on business and got to be on the job. We can put up with this for a couple of weeks—won't be here longer than that."

Helen flushed. "Dear, I CAN'T stay at this place. I tell you it isn't CLEAN! I can't eat here," pushing back untouched the cup of muddy, brown coffee.

"See here, the place for anybody that's as blamed fussy as you—is at home! If I'd had any sense, I'd left you there."

"But can't I find other rooms?" pleadingly. "I haven't anything else to do—I can start out the first thing this morning. Dear, you said we didn't have to stay here if we didn't like it."

"Well, I like it all right. This is good enough for anybody. We've got two big rooms right on the Boulevard, within a stone's throw of the Opera House—what more do you want?"

He pushed back the shabby red velvet arm chair, crumpled the tissue paper into a ball and threw it on the table as he rose.

"Now I'll be back here about half-past six, and we'll go out to dinner. You can fool around the shops or do anything you like—but we're going to let well enough alone and stay right here. Understand?"

He strode into the bedroom, brushed his hat, jammed it on his head, got some papers out of his suit case and started for the door.

"Now, you've got enough money?"

Helen nodded.

"Well, the American Express Company is right around the corner—they'll tell you how to get anywhere. You might stop in there and see if there's any mail for us.

An Appalling Thought.

Helen followed him to the door, realizing that when Warren went out on the street he would be lost to her—there would be no way she could reach him until 6 o'clock. To be left so alone the first day in a foreign city seemed suddenly somewhat appalling. Warren kissed her hurriedly, and drew away from her clinging arms with a curt:

"Now, take care of yourself. Don't get run over. You have to look where you're going here—these cabmen'd sooner run over you than not. Go to the Bon Marche. That's a big shop—you can spend most of the day there."

When he had gone, Helen glanced around with a dismayed sense of her loneliness. And this place—she HATED it! The strong morning sun lit up the shabby carpet and the dusty, worn, red velvet furniture. The bedroom with its now disordered bed and untidy wash-stand was even less attractive.

A few minutes later Helen, armed with her guide-book and a book of French phrases, locked her trunk and started out—determined to find other rooms in spite of what Warren had said.

She knew the Continental Hotel was very near, for he had pointed it out as they drove from the station. When she entered the lobby, it was with a sight of relief. At least this looked more like the hotels at home. One of the clerks, who spoke English, informed her that they had not a single vacant room and would not have for the next ten days.

From there Helen went to the American Express Company. She paused to view the Opera House which the guide-book said was the heart of Paris.

It was a majestic building, but Helen was not in the mood for sight-seeing this morning. The wonder of being in Paris was somewhat dulled by what she considered the "wretched" place at which they were stopping. For Helen had none of the instincts of a real traveler. Her first demand was for cleanliness and comfort—to her the joys of sightseeing were secondary.

The American Express Company was a big, hospitable building on the corner. Two-thirds of the Americans in Paris have their mail sent to this office, and when Helen entered a dozen or more were writing letters and taking advantage of the guide-books, dictionaries and bureau of information. At the mail window Helen asked timidly if there was anything for Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Curtis."

The clerk took down a big package of letters from the "C" pigeon-hole, shuffled over them quickly and threw out three for Warren and one for herself. Helen went to a desk by the window and eagerly opened the letter from her mother.

Carterstown, Mo.,
June 24, 1913.

My Dear Helen—I am writing this several days before you sail so that it will be awaiting for you when you reach Paris. Do hope your voyage will be a smooth one, and that you will not be seasick.

I am sending you a clipping from the "Daily Trumpet." I don't know how they get the news out here, but you see they do. Everyone here thinks it's fine that you can travel so much. To go to London last year and to Paris this year—that's more than anyone in Carterstown can do. Did I tell you that the Episcopal Church had made up a fund to send their pastor, Dr. Eldridge, abroad this summer? The two Dobson girls are going also. But they're all going on a cheap line from Montreal. You are very fortunate to be able to go on the best line and in such grand style.

I know you will enjoy all the sights in Paris and the many beautiful shops. Send me a post card when you can. I will not expect you to write much, as I know you will be too busy.

I hope Warren will be successful in his business, as you write that this is only a business trip.

With love to both. MOTHER.

The clipping from her home town paper, Helen read with an amused smile:

"Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Curtis, of New York City, are sailing for Paris on the Kaiser Wilhelm. Mrs. Curtis was formerly Miss Helen Allen, of this city, and has many friends and relatives here. Mr. Curtis is a prominent lawyer in New York. We hope that their trip will be a pleasant one."

She slipped the letter back into the envelope, wondering if they would think Warren and she were traveling in such "grand style" if they could see the room she had left this morning.

A Daring Plan.

Helen looked up quickly as two American women sat down nearby.

"You're staying at the Ritz, aren't you?" asked the other one.

"Oh, no, we discovered the most wonderful little hotel this year. We've two beautiful rooms for only twenty francs a day! Everything's so clean and the service is PERFECT. Perhaps you know of it—Hotel Ronceray, 10 Rue Montaigne.

Helen hastily scribbled the address in the back of her guide-book, then gathering up her mail, she went deliberately over to the information desk and asked what bus would take her to the Rue Montaigne.

Two beautiful rooms for twenty francs a day, and they were paying sixteen at that dreadful place! Helen's lips were suddenly set in a little grim line of determination. If this hotel was as that woman had described it, she would brave Warren's wrath and engage the rooms. She would even retain them with a deposit—a deposit large enough to insure their taking them.

It was so rarely that Helen ever took even the slightest initiative without consulting Warren, that when a few moments later she climbed on the bus that was to take her to the Hotel Ronceray, her heart beat fast at her own daring.

A Good Reason.

It was a red-letter day at one of our large schools, and the boys were under examination in "optics." The point under illustration was that strictly and scientifically speaking, to see not objects, but their images depicted on the retina. The doctor, to make the matter plainer, said to the head of the class:

"Jackson, did you ever actually see your father?"

Bill promptly replied: "No, sir."

"Please explain why you never saw your own father."

"Because," replied Bill, very gravely, "he died before I was born, sir."

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Now you'd better go and go quick!

CHAPTER XVII.

WHEN Jennie and the fellow met Tom, as they were going into the place—that Jennie thought was only a restaurant—Jennie just nodded to Tom and was going on in with the fellow. But Tom stood in the way and asked Jennie if she hadn't better come home with him.

At this the fellow got real angry and asked Tom who HE was and what business was it of HIS. Tom didn't pay any attention to the fellow, but would not let Jennie pass. Jennie was for getting angry, too, and told Tom it was none of his business.

Then Tom finally told her that her aunt, the boarding house keeper, was very sick and that she had sent him to bring Jennie home in a hurry. The fellow shook his fist in Tom's face and tried to shove him aside. Tom grabbed him by the collar, shaking him, and said, "You measly rat, I know about this place where you are trying to take this young girl and if it wasn't for creating a scene I'd break every bone in your wretched body, and now you'd better go and go quick, for I might do it anyway, before this hot weather makes me lose my temper."

Tom then took Jennie by the arm and walked off down the street. Jennie had never seen Tom quite so aroused, and, strange to relate, she was as meek as a lamb and walked with him to the car, never saying a word.

When they were on the car, Tom turned to her and said, "Jennie, girl, your aunt isn't sick. She didn't send me for you at all. I just told you that to get you away from that place and that fellow. I happened to be passing and saw you with that man and going into that awful place and told you that about your aunt, so as to get you away quick. If you had gone into that place you'd never been the same girl afterward, for it's one of the worst places in town, and I love you, Jennie, and I want you to kind a think of me once in a while." But Jennie looked straight ahead, not saying a word.

PONCE DE LEON BALL PARK, July 14.—The Crackers triumphed over the Billikens, 13 to 7, in a slugfest here this afternoon. Both teams smashed the ball to all corners of the lot.

E. Brown, C. Brown and Breen were on the mound for the league leaders. All were hammered hard by the locals. Price and Dent did the hurling for Smith's crew. The former was taken out in the fifth. Long did the heavy stick work with a triple and a homer.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Walker was an easy out over the Smith-Agler route. Wares placed his bat against the ball for a neat double to left. Elwert drew four balls and took first. Alperman picked up Sloan's grounder and threw the Montgomery outfielder out at first. Both runners advanced a peg on the out. Jantzen beat out a grounder to Bisland and Wares scored with the first run of the game. Jantzen and Elwert tried a double steal, but the later was out at the plate, Chapman to Alperman to Agler to Bisland to Chapman. TWO HITS, ONE RUN.

Tommy Long opened for Atlanta with a ripping triple to the scoreboard. Welchonce popped weakly to Donahue. On a wild pitch Long trotted over the plate with the tying run. Whitey Alperman was the candy kid with another long triple to the scoreboard. Smith was there in the pinch with a sacrifice fly to Sloan and Alperman registered. Bisland fanned. TWO HITS, TWO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Bisland and Agler disposed of Knaupp. Long pulled down Snedecor's long foul with a leaping one-handed catch. Donahue lined to Bailey. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Agler was given free transportation to first. On a passed ball Agler raced to second. Bailey was also given four bad ones and ambled to the initial sack. Brown balked on the umpire's decision and was put out of the game. Several minutes were wasted while Johnny Dobb's sent C. Brown out to warm up. Chapman, the first man to face C. Brown slammed a single to center and Agler tallied. Price laid down a dandy bunt and both runners advanced a base. Long was patient and was awarded a free pass, filling the bases. Welchonce out, Wares to Snedecor and aBiley registered.s Alperman grounded to Wares and was out to Snedecor. ONE HIT, TWO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

C. Brown placed a single to right. Walker walked forcing Brown to the middle sack. Wares bunted safely down the third base line, filling the sacks and putting Price in a hole. Elwert hit a sacrifice to Welchonce and Brown tallied. Sloan grounded to Alperman and Wares was forced at second. Jantzen ballooned to Long, leaving two runners stranded on bases. TWO HITS, ONE RUN.

Smith's best was an easy grounder to Knaupp and was out to Snedecor. Bisland smashed a single to center. Agler was an easy victim over the strike-out route. Bailey was hit by a pitched ball and followed the path to first base. Bisland surprised the fans by pilfering third. When Donahue threw wild to third, the Cracker shortstop scored, while Bailey went to second. Chapman kept up the good work by hitting a single to center and Bailey romped over the counting station. Price ended the inning by whiffing. TWO HITS, TWO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING.

Knaupp started the inning with a one-baser to center. Snedecor hit to Agler, and when Joe let the ball get through him both runners were safe, in an attempt to catch Snedecor off first. Price threw wild and both runners advanced a cushion. Donahue did the Casey stunt. Brown out, Bisland to Agler and Knaupp scored. Walker grounded to Alperman and was out to Agler. ONE HIT, ONE RUN.

Long popped to Snedecor. Welchonce found Brown's offering easy and singled to left. Alperman followed with a single to right and Welchonce took third. Smith lined to Jantzen and Welchonce tallied. Bisland was out, Elwert to Snedecor. TWO HITS, ONE RUN.

FIFTH INNING.

Wares dropped a single in center. Elwert singled to left and Wares took second. Dent relieved price at this Stage of the game. Dent started off badly by hitting Sloan and the bases were densely populated. Jantzen struck out. Wares was caught off third, but scored when Dent dropped the ball at the plate. Elwert went to third on the error. Knaupp fouled to Smith. Snedecor out, Alperman to Agler. TWO HITS, ONE RUN.

Agler kept up the heavy hitting by singling over Wares head. Bailey was hit by a pitched ball and Joe trotted to the keystone sack. When Bailey was hit he started to throw his bat at C. Brown, but Donahue grabbed it just in time. On a wild pitch both runners advanced. Chapman fanned. Dent doubled to center and Agler scampered over the home platter. Bailey took third on the safe drive. Tommy Long caught hold of a good one and drove it to the scoreboard for a clean home run, scoring aBiley and Dent ahead of him. Welchonce was safe at first when Brown fumbled his roller. Welchonce stole second and raced to third when Donahue threw wild to second. Alperman struck out. Smith flied to Walker. THREE HITS, FOUR RUNS.

SIXTH INNING.

Donahue flied to Welchonce. Brown fouled to Smith. Walker walked. Wares tripled to right and Walker tallied. Elwert fanned. ONE HIT, ONE RUN.

Breen went to the slab for Montgomery. Bisland walked. Agler forced Bisland at second to Wares unassisted. Bailey out, Elwert to Snedecor. Chapman popped to Knaupp. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

SEVENTH INNING.

Sloan walked. Jantzen singled to left. When Bailey let the ball get through him Sloan scored and Jantzen went to third. Smith hurt his hand on the play and was replaced by Manush. Knaupp out, Bisland to Agler and Jantzen tallied. Snedecor fanned. Donahue singled to center. Breen out, Manush to Agler. TWO HITS TWO RUNS.

Dent singled. Long out, Breen to Snedecor. Welchonce fanned. Alperman out, to Snedecor . ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

EIGHTH INNING.

Walker popped to Manush. Wares flied to Welchonce. Elwert lined to Welchonce. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Manush out, Elwert to Snedecor. Bisland walked, stole second and went to third on Donahue's wild throw. Agler singled and Bisland scored. Bailey flied to Sloan. Chapman singled and Agler scored. Dent flied to Walker. TWO HITS, TWO RUNS.

NINTH INNING.

Sloan out, Dent to Agler. Jantzen popped to Bisland. Kanupp fanned. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

RUSSELL GETS KNOCKOUT DECISION OVER J. LORE

NEW ORLEANS, July 14.—Frank C. Russell, of this city, knocked Johnny Lore, of New York, through the ropes in the eleventh round of their scheduled twenty-round fight at McDonoughville yesterday afternoon, and Lore was counted out before he could get back into the ring.

Just as Lore crashed through the ropes and out among the spectators the referee began the count, and before Lore could get back he had reached "ten." He officially accredited Russell with a knockout.

Lore was not in reality knocked out. He would have been able to continue the fight, although Russell had had all the better of it.

PIG-HEADEDNESS COSTS "BONE" SPENCER HIS JOB

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 14.—Failure to back up a throw to second base cost Ray Spencer, New Orleans outfielder, his place in the Southern League. Following Saturday's game with Nashville, Manager Frank, it is reported, reprimanded Spencer for his lax playing in the outfield. Said the Dutchman: "Say, you either back up those throws or I'll get someone who can."

Retorted Spencer: "Well, get him, I'm through."

Result: Frank handed the player his walking papers. Spencer left here last night for his home. Bagby will probably be shifted to the outfield, Angemeier going to first.

JORDAN'S LEAD IN DANGER; FANS POUR IN VOTES

Holliday and Others Threaten to Oust Valdosta Manager From High Position.

THE HEARST SUNDAY AMERICAN AND ATLANTA GEORGIAN'S contest to decide the most popular player in the Empire State League is now in full bloom. Fans all over the circuit are pouring in votes for their favorite player and the race is now closer than at any stage of the contest heretofore.

When it was announced yesterday that Otto Jordan was leading his rivals in the great race, fans at once got busy and now threaten to force the Valdosta manager out of the lead before the week is over.

In fact the first five players in this race are so closely bunched that tomorrow night may find any of them on top. There are others to be considered in the contest, although it can not be denied that the first five have the best chance to cop the loving cup donated by this paper.

Fans Must Get Busy.

If the Valdosta fans want to keep Jordan on top, and you Waycross fans want to regain the lead for "Goat" Holliday, don't miss the coupon in to-day's paper. Now is the time to get busy, as dark horses are entering this race every day now.

Send in Votes.

The Popularity Editor again asks the fans to send in their votes at once. Don't hold onto them. We mean you fans who are holding hundreds of coupons for a final spurt. Perhaps you have just enough votes to put your player in the lead, and having attained that position he is likely to hold it until the end of the season.

McFarland Ready to Box Ritchie

Agrees to Make 134 for Champ

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, July 14.—When Willie Ritchie reaches Chicago, ostensibly to rest and renew old acquaintances, he'll find that he has selected a miserable spot, in so far as a resting place is concerned.

There won't be any rest for him, for Packey McFarland, who in the last year has become a bitter ring rival of the lightweight champion, plans to bombard him with all sorts of whys and why nots. What Packey will demand is a match, and the stockyards lightweight asserts he won't give Ritchie a minute's rest until he gets a definite answer.

134 Would Suit Packey.

Ritchie will not be permitted to hide behind the excuse that McFarland isn't a legitimate lightweight. Packey asserts that Willie let down the bars to Rivers and sees no apparent reason why he shouldn't be given a match at 134 pounds ringside, the weight at which Ritchie defended his honors against the Mexican on the Fourth of July. Packey says he is capable of boxing with his full fighting strength at that weight, despite all reports to the contrary, and will back up his assertion with real, cash money.

"Nobody can tell me that I wouldn't draw more money with Ritchie in a championship match than any other lightweight in the country," Packey said to-day. "We could draw a bigger house than if he fought Cross, Britton and Tommy Murphy all in the same day. That's saying quite a mouthful, but it's the truth.

"I have been stalled long enough about a championship match. I'm going to get recognition from Ritchie, who finds a hard time making the lightweight limit, or know the reason why. First I was matched to box Bat Nelson when he held the title. Articles were signed and everything was set. Then Nelson crawled. He refused to box me.

Then Wolgast Dodged Him.

"Then came Wolgast. He managed to escape fighting me with a lot of talk that I couldn't make the weight. We came near being matched a dozen times. The coast promoters were jumping over themselves to land the match, but with the usual result—Wolgast got away.

"With Ritchie it is a different story. He can't yelp about the weight, for he's a big lightweight and was forced to acknowledge it. He and I are in the same boat as regards weight, and if he gets away from me I certainly will be a bewildered Irishman. I honestly can't see how he can sidestep me."

The lightweight champion was due in Chicago to-day, but advised his friends that business had detained him in San Francisco, and that he would be unable to start East before another week.

Taking Life Easy Now.

McFarland is living the life of a person possessing a sprinkling can full of money these days. Packey is burning up the boulevards with his new motor car, taking short trips in the country, and having the time of his life. He says that he will be ready to enter the ring again with the return of cooler weather, and hopes to land a Labor Day match with Ritchie on the coast.

JACK DILLON TO BATTLE 12 ROUNDS WITH CAPONI

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 14.—Jack Dillon, local middleweight star, has signed to meet Tony Caponi for a scheduled twelve-round battle to be staged before the National Sporting Club, of Winnipeg, August 8.

RACES TUESDAY LOOK BEST OF YEAR AT DROME

TUESDAY NIGHT looks like the big night of the year at the Atlanta Motordrome.

The postponed Cracker Stakes will be run off, with Bill Smith as starter and with the star distance men at the track competing for the big prize in a seven-mile final.

The racing ought to be the most sensational of the season. The seven-mile event will inevitably be a thriller. Seven miles is a terrific distance for a motorcycle race on a short track. If the local saucer were a mile track, it would be possible to hold long races. But the strain of circling a quarter-mile oval is so tremendous that riders can not stand up under much of it. Long races on short tracks mean spills and assorted varieties of excitement.

The Motordrome Purse should be above the average. Jock McNeil has had a lot of time to get his J. A. P. patched up again, and he believes it is spavin-proof now. Graves has been working steadily to speed up his new Excelsior and has it about right now. These two will give "Tex" Richards the speed experience of his life.

In case of rain Tuesday night the races will be postponed until Wednesday.

LOCAL FIGHT FANS MAY BE BUNKED AGAIN

Little Chance of White-Abel Go, Carded for Friday Night, Being a Success.

By W. S. Farnsworth.

CHARLEY WHITE, who is scheduled to fight Jake Abel at the Auditorium-Armory Friday night, was billed by the promoter to arrive in Atlanta this morning.

He hasn't arrived.

Abel, according to the promoter, was to have arrived this morning.

He hasn't arrived.

According to the promoter there will be three ten-round fights Friday night. Abel is to meet White in the final bout. In the others, Young may hook up with Charley Lee, while Eddie Hanlon may meet Terry Nelson.

According to the promoter the show will be staged under the auspices of the Fifth Regiment Band. Said band needs new uniforms.

We hope they get them.

However, the promoter who is staging the bouts "for the band" Friday night is the same promoter who has bunked Atlanta fight fans time and again.

He is the promoter who staged the two fake fights that Carl Morris participated in here. He is the promoter who swore right up to the minute the Young Saylor-Joe Thomas fight was to start that Saylor was in town, and then substituted a rank third-rater, Yankee Schwartz.

He is the promoter who allowed the Abe Attell-Benny Kauffmann fight to go eight rounds. His referee, at the suggestion of the police, had the good judgment to stop this fake at the end of the eighth.

But this same promoter did not give the fans back their money. And he didn't pay Attell the $750 guarantee.

This same promoter declared to the newspapers in Atlanta that Attell had faked, in his opinion.

Yet he wired to Bat Masterson, of The Morning Telegraph, in New York, as follows:

Attell-Kauffmann bout here tonight was stopped by police because Kauffmann refused to fight Attell back. It was a one-man fight, Attell trying to fight and Kauffmann covering up. It was plainly no fault of Attell's.

* * *

THIS promoter has guaranteed Nate Lewis, manager of White, two round-trip tickets and $400. White will not enter the ring until he gets the $400.

He has promised Kid Young $60, and Young will not get into the ring until he has received the $60.

He has promised Terry Nelson $60, and Nelson will not get into the ring until he has received the $60.

Also, unless Abe Attell is paid the $750 this promoter owes him, the ex-champion will, undoubtedly, attach the gate receipts for the money owed him for his fake fight, which said promoter, under his signature, declared was no fake.

And unless all this money is in the house, there will be no fight, and those who will have purchased their tickets in advance will gain nothing.

The fighting game is in a bad way in Atlanta. It is likely to be killed forever if the show scheduled for Friday night turns out to be a fiasco.

O'TOOLE READY IN 5 WEEKS.

PITTSBURG, PA., July 14.—Marty O'Toole, the $22,500 Pirate pitcher, who was operated on a week ago for appendicitis, will be able to play ball in five weeks, according to a statement issued to-day. It was at first feared that he would be out of the game for the remainder of the season, but his exceptional constitution is bringing him around.

AUTO TOURISTS IN DENVER.

DENVER, July 14.—Indiana tourists to the Pacific Coast, traveling in machines of their own make, reached Denver Saturday afternoon on schedule time. The day's trip was made over the worst roads encountered so far. Governor Ammons welcomed the Hoosiers. The party leaves tonight, when it will start for Hot Sulphur Springs.

CUBAN LEADS CHESS TOURNEY.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Capablanca, the Cuban chess champion, leads the Rice tourney with five games won. Mardas and Kupchik are tied for second place, with three games each.

M'DOUGALL SETS NEW MARK.

NEWARK, N. J., July 14.—Donald McDougall, of the New York A. C., won the three-mile open amateur bicycle race at the Velodrome yesterday in 5:56 3-5, creating a new world's record.

BLOCK JOINS SHORE LEAGUE.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., July 14.—Catcher Jimmy Block, suspended by the Milwaukee club, to-day signed to play first base for the local club in the Lake Shore League.

MANAGERIAL JOB CAUSES EVERS TO JOIN WORRY CLUB

By Davenport.

CHICAGO, July 14.—"What does it mean to a ball player to assume the responsibilities of the managership of a ball club?"

This very pointed interrogation was put up directly to Johnny Evers, present leader of the Cubs.

"It means a lot of worry," said John, and the expression on the Trojan's face as he gave vent to the words more than told the story.

Being simply a ball player, one who is told what to do and when to do it, is fine business, particularly if one is able to do as he is told the proper time, but jumping from that position to one where it becomes necessary to give the orders and know just when and where a thing should be done and by whom, is a different matter.

Evers a Changed Man.

Evers' face is a veritable scoreboard. Glance at it after a game that the Cubs have won, and you can almost read the score. There is a smile playing about his countenance that tells the tale more plainly than the tape.

If, however, the Cubs have lost, the worried expression on John's face tells the tale more plainly than figures.

The managership of the Cubs has made a changed man of Evers. He is restless and continually worried. He sleeps but little nights, smokes almost incessantly, and is simply a bundle of quivering nerves.

This is true with practically all of the new managers in the National League, with the exception, perhaps, of Joe Tinker.

Here is one boss who is taking things as they come, living an easy, simple life, and is always looking on the bright side.

Makes Pals of His Men.

Joe makes companions of his men. If one of the Reds makes a rank bobble Joe has little to say about it on the field.

Evers pursues a different method. If the pitcher seems to be going bad, John walks in from his path at second and tells the delinquent that it is time for him to either smoke up or get out. Opinion differs as to the advisability of this method, but John seems to be getting results, while Joe's club is still down in the rut.

Miller Huggins is another upon whom the managerial duties have weighed heavily. When the season opened Huggins was one of the most pleasant, affable little fellows one would care to meet.

The Cards started off like a bunch of two-year-olds, and Miller could see nothing but the silver lining, but as the season waxed stronger the Cards slumped and the cloud lost its glittering lining. Huggins rapidly lost that pleasant disposition and is now fighting every inch of the way.

MEYERS TRIED NEW PLAY ON EBBETS FIELD

By Sam Crane.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Chief Meyers tried for a play recently in the Giants-Dodgers series over at Ebbets Field that has splendid possibilities. It is not at all likely, though, that the Chief's original conception will be followed to such an extent that the present style of playing baseball will be revolutionized. But, still, the Chief is entitled to great credit for his originality.

I have seen players back up their own wild throws, and once saw Dan O'Leary chase a ball he threw over a grandstand and nail the batter at the plate, but the latter sprung as big a charley horse in one of his legs as Dan was laboring under in his head, but when a catcher runs down into deep right field and with a chance to return the ball to the plate in time to nail the batter at the position the catcher just vacated, then I am sure there is nothing new in baseball.

This is exactly what Chief Meyers did.

Meyers Chases Ball.

In the fifth inning of one of the games Miller, of the Dodgers, splashed a slow roller along the third base line. Shafer got the ball and whipepd it to Merkle like a shot. The runner and the ball got to first at about the same instant, and Merkle, having no chance to catch the ball, it went out into foul ground and caromed off the low concrete wall toward Burns, who was playing right field. Meyers anticipated the play as if by second sight, and as the ball whistled by Merkle, the Chief was seen dashing madly past first, chasing the speeding pellet for dear life. He had nearly reached it, too, when Burns picked it up and by a great heave to Fletcher smothered Miller at third.

Chance for Rare Play.

Now, it would have been the easiest play in the world for Meyers to have got the ball, and if Miller had kept on home to have pinched him at the plate by ten feet or more.

If that play had been pulled off it would surely have been the strangest ever made on the ball field, and the Chief would have been the most talked of and written about player in the country.

It was as startlingly thrilling an attempt at backing up as I ever witnessed, and the Chief rather showed up some of his speedy fellow players who pride themselves on their sprinting and cast good-natured slurs at the Chief's running powers.

TWIRLER IS RELEASED.

KEOKUK, July 14.—Manager Manush has given Pitcher Winnie French his release.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Charley White, the clever Chicago boxer, has signed to meet Freddie Welch in a twelve-round bout at Butte, Mont., on the night of August 2. This will be White's first important fight since he was defeated by Jack Britton at New Orleans, July 4.

* * *

Kid Williams and Charley Le Doux, two slugging bantams, will battle at Los Angeles on Tuesday in a scheduled twenty-round fray. Both these boys are scrappers of the Battling Nelson type and should put up a merry mill.

* * *

Friends of Leach Cross state that in his recent fight with Bud Anderson, followers of the latter lost over $50,000. This sounds well at a long distance.

* * *

After his beating at the hands of Frank Klaus in Boston recently; Jimmy Gardner, the Lowell middleweight, told his camp followers that he was through with the fighting game forever.

* * *

Joe Rivers indignantly denies that he quit in his bout with Willie Ritchie and he is confident that he can trim the champion if given another chance. He also expresses a desire to try out Leach Cross.

* * *

While Charley Ledoux, the little French fighter, has many admirers on the coast, few of them are backing him in his coming fight with Kid Williams.

* * *

Matty Baldwin, the veteran lightweight, is the latest to seek a match with Leach Cross. Although Matty is an old-timer at the boxing game, he is without a doubt one of the toughest 133-pounders before the public to-day. He holds a twenty-round victory over Willie Ritchie, the present title holder.

* * *

Kid Duke, local bantamweight, is carrying around a decorated optic and several other scars. Duke clashed with Kid Brooks in an exhibition bout the other night, but says the mill turned out to be a regular scrap before the boys had been boxing many minutes. "You ought to see the other fellow," wails Mr. Duke.

* * *

Young Saylor's press agent is on the job again. Said press agent informs us of the fact that hereafter Ray Bronson is to handle the Hoosier lightweight. Bronson writes that he is going to take Saylor to the coast, where he hopes to sign his protege for battles with some of the star boys out West.

* * *

Johnny Coulon has been ordered to take a long rest in Colorado. This means that it will be some time before the champion will be able to don the padded mitts again.

* * *

Steve Ketchel, the Chicago lightweight, has been matched to meet Sammy Trott, of Columbus, in a twelve-round set-to at Winnipeg on August 6. The boys agreed to weigh 133 pounds at 3 o'clock.

* * *

Jimmy Murphy, who stopped Danny Goodman at Terre Haute, Ind., on July 4, has been matched to meet Mickey Sheridan at Indianapolis, Ind., on August 7. The weight will be 135 pounds ringside.

* * *

Someone gave "Knockout" Brown an automobile to play with the other day and Dany Morgan's pet at once started to "feel it out." The judge simply said "$25." Rather than go to jail Brown paid the fine.

* * *

Willie Ritchie contemplates a trip to Europe. The lightweight champion is evidently bent on making the most of the opportunity to combine pleasure with business.

* * *

According to physicians, Bud Anderson's condition, while not really critical, is due to the punishment inflicted by Leach Cross in their fight on July 4. Again will be heard the howl against the kidney punch.

FODDER FOR FANS

Pitcher Carroll Brown of the Athletics gave 15 passes on balls in the game against the Tigers Saturday. Just after the contest he received a telegram saying: "Mother and child doing well," then his friends knew why he was nervous.

* * *

Third Baseman Zelder of the Yankees hay be out of the game for the balance of the season. Zelder was sent to a hospital in St. Louis suffering from a spiked foot which threatens to develop blood poisoning.

* * *

The magnates in the big leagues are secretly worrying over the success of the new Federal League, the new Western outlaw, which is struggling for existence in St. Louis, Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Kansas City, Indianapolis and other cities.

* * *

Sunday was a day of rest in the National League, no games being scheduled.

* * *

President Ban Johnson, of the American League, and other baseball magnates arrived in New York to-day to attend the flag-raising at Ebbetts' Field, Brooklyn, to-morrow.

* * *

Practically all of the major league managers, except Johnny Evers, of the Chicago Cubs, concede the National League pennant to the Giants.

Four of the five American League games yesterday were won and lost by the narow margin of one run.

* * *

The Brooklyn Dodgers have now dropped ten straight games.

* * *

The Giants ahve eight games to play this week. Double-headers with the Cardinals are booked for Thursday and Friday.

* * *

Manager Chance, of the New York Americans, is said to be negotiating for the purchase of Shortstop Bobby Wallace, of the St. Louis Browns.

* * *

"Joe" Boehling, of the Senators, is one of the sensations of the season. He has wone nine games and lost none.

* * *

The Giants are leading the National leaguers by six games and the Athletics the American league by nine games.

* * *

In a signed article in a New York newspaper to-day Christy Mathewson, the Giants' pitcher, predicted that the New Yorks would not only win the National League pennant, but the world's championship as well.

* * *

It is reported that George Stovall, manager of the St. Louis Americans, will manager the Toledo team in the American Association next year.

JAKE STAHL MAY NOT BE ABLE TO PLAY THIS YEAR

ST. LOUIS, MO., July 14.—Jake Stahl is directing his Red Sox team from the rathskeller, attired in his citizens' clothes. He isn't in uniform because the injured leg, which has kept him out of the game all season, hasn't fully mended. It is said that Stahl may not be able to play at all this season.

It has been Stahl's failure to play that has had a deal to do with the Red Sox slump this season, after having won the world's championship from the Giants last fall. Stahl was one of the team's best hit-makers a year ago, when they finished in front of the American League field. While Stahl's absence has had its ill effect on the team—

Tim Murnane, the old-time pitcher and now a baseball writer in Boston, says the failure of Joe Wood to pitch up to his 1912 form was the real cause of the Sox's slump.

* * *

"WOOD sprained his thumb in the early part of the season and couldn't get going right," said Murnane. "In fact, he isn't right just yet, as the sprain won't permit him getting the proper grip on the ball.

"Stahl and Wood were of great value to the team a year ago, but the club has figured in hard luck in other ways this year. At different times Larry Gardner, Wagner and Lewis has been out of the line-up because of injuries or other causes.

"Buck O'Brien was sold to the White Sox at a good figure. He's not a poor pitcher, by any means, but was permitted to go because he just couldn't win for the Boston team. His record with the Red Sox this season was something like three victories and eight losses. He should prove a good man for Callahan."

* * *

THE Red Sox are hopeful that something will happen to enable them to again represent the American League in the world's series. But they are making no wagers that they will again cut in on the spoils.

They realize that the present lead of the Athletics of Philadelphia is almost too great to overcome at this stage of the campaign. It would be different if the Mackmen were composed of young players who might crack in the excitement of the struggle, but inasmuch as Mack is chaperoning a troupe of veterans who have twice been through the world's series grind, there is little chance of the Elephants chucking it up.

BOXER'S ARM IS MENDED.

CHICAGO, July 14.—Labe Safro, a Minneapolis welterweight boxer, is in Chicago after a visit to Youngstown, Ohio, where "Bonesetter" Reese mended a kink in his elbow. Safro hurt his arm while training last December.

BANTAMS CLASH IN LONG GO ON COAST TUESDAY

By Harry Gilmore, Jr.

LOS ANGELES, July 14.—With the French champion, LeDoux, and Johnny Williams, the Baltimore scrapper, as McCarey's headliners for the Vernon attraction tomorrow night, fistic patrons are promised one of the best bantamweight matches that has been staged here. It seems an absolute certainty that with both these strong, rugged, hard-hitting little fellows thrown together the battle will be most satisfactory as a simon-pure slugfest. Both boxers are of comparatively similar styles, but the husky Baltimore lad leads his opponent a long way in point of cleverness and ring generalship.

Are Evenly Matched.

LeDoux and Williams are almost exact counterparts in size and physical make-up. Johnny is the more perfectly developed boy and knows how to utilize his strength to better advantage, although Frenchy is apparently as sturdy in the ring as is his opponent. They both slug from gong to gong. With two principals fighting this style directly onto the other, and both boxers being the game, courageous youngsters they have shown themselves to be, there is bound to be a hard and interesting battle while it lasts.

Little LeDoux was seen here with Eddie Campi, and though sadly outclassed in cleverness, he created a most favorable impression with fight followers because he is one of those ever-trying and vicious mixers that creates fight for the spectators. Against Williams he should find the task an easier one to execute his swinging wallops and superfluous energy, which went so amiss against the elusive Frisco bantam. Williams is not nearly so clever and shifty on his feet as Campi, and may be caught in range of the Frenchman's punches with surprising regularity.

Each a Hard Hitter.

As concerns their respective hitting ability, there is little to choose between them. If anything, I fancy LeDoux is the more dangerous and a harder puncher.

Basing my judgment entirely upon their respective twenty-round battles with Eddie Campi, Williams has the class and I believe he will win this match in a rather decisive manner.

GEORGIA RANKED HIGH IN REPORT ON SCHOOLS

Federal Commissioner of Education Commends University for High Standard of Learning.

High rank is accorded the University of Georgia in the classification of educational institutions just completed by the United States Commissioner of Education. Not only is the standing of learning shown to be unusually high, but the investment by the State, private endowment and number of students place the State in front rank.

In twelve of the larger institutions more than 400 professors are employed, while the private libraries of the schools contain 125,000 volumes, especial note being made to the high character of the books in each library.

Following are the statistics shown on some of the schools:

University of Georgia—Professors, 65; students, 654; income from tuition and fees, $15,477; income from State, $118,025; income from endowment, $1,450; books in library, 38,100.

Tech First in Enrollment.

Georgia School of Technology—Professors, 61; students, 689; income from tuition and fees, $42,020; from board, $31,106; income from State, $82,500; volumes in library, 10,000.

Andrew Female College—Professors, 6; students, 143; income from tuition and fees, $4,000; from board, $15,000; books, 3,000.

Agnes Scott College—Professors, 18; students, 148; tuition and fees, $17,998; board, $37,984; income from endowment, $5,147; bound volumes, 5,500.

Bessie Tift—Professors, 28; students, 358; tuition and fees, $30,000; from board, $40,995; endowment income, $400; bound volumes, 3,000.

Brenau College—Professors, 42; students, 454; from tuition and fees, $68,889; from board, $71,048; bound volumes, 7,000.

LaGrange College—Professors, 25; students, 194; income from tuition and fees, $9,200; from board, $8,750; bound volumes, 4,000.

Other Georgia Colleges.

Southern Female College—Professors, 21; students, 112; income from tuition and fees, $2,750; from board, $9,000; bound volumes, 800.

Mercer University—Professors, 31; students, 358; tuition and fees, $15,510; board, $18,300; income from endowment, $13,230; bound volumes, 20,000.

Wesleyan College—Professors, 27; students, 445; income from tuition and fees, $42,672; from board, $48,000; bound volumes, 3,500.

Emory College—Professors, 17; students, 290; tuition and fees, $13,686; income from endowment, $19,461; bound volumes, 35,000.

Shorter College—Professors, 16; students, 300; income from tuition and fees, $20,000; board, $35,000; bound volumes, 1,000.

Southern Conference Of Mormons Success

The Mormon Chapel in Woodward avenue could not contain the throng that gathered for the closing session of the annual North Georgia Conference Sunday night. Elder Charles A. Callis, president of the Southern States Mission, was the principal speaker. He urged renewed effort in the missionary movement.

In addition to the Georgia delegates, there were sixteen Mormon elders from the West. The meeting lasted two days and covered the work in ten Southern States.

Nazimova to Speak 4 Tongues on Tour

NEW YORK, July 14.—Madame Alla Nazimova sails for London tomorrow on the first stage of a trip around the world. Four languages will be used in presenting the repertoire during the trip.

Madame Nazimova has just finished a tour to California. It is the actress' personal wish to perform her own roles in French when she is in France, in German when in Germany, and in Italian in Italy.

Captor of McKinley Assassin Loses Post

KANSAS CITY, July 14.—John P. McCauley, police sergeant in Buffalo when President McKinley was shot, and among the first to seize Czolgosz, the assassin, was one of three policemen removed from the local force by the Police Commissioner today. McCauley had been a patrolman here two years.

After the arrest of Czolgosz, McCauley took him to the police station and booked him.

Says Prison Meals Are Best in State

HACKENSACK, N. J., July 14.—Henry G. Moore, a wealthy prisoner in the local jail, declared the prison meals could not be beat anywhere in the State, and praised the prison cook for his good work.

Moore is locked up for going out of the State while under a non exeat bond of $30,000.

GETS CHAIR AT SEWANEE.

MILLEDGEVILLE.—The Rev. H. L. Jewett Williams, rector of the St. Stephens Episcopal Church here, has been appointed to the chair of Greek New Testament exegesis at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn. Mr. Williams graduated from the University of Georgia and won the Rhodes scholarship to Oxford, England.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

At the Bijou.

The matinee this afternoon at the Bijou will usher in the seventh week of musical comedy with a rapid-fire melange of melody and music, entitled "Hotel a la Carte." As the title would indicate, the action of the piece takes place in and around a modern hotel, and the funny situations and eccentric doings of the queer guests form a background for plenty of fun, entertaining specialties, up-to-date dances, tuneful songs—the whole presented by an exceptionally clever company. Miss Mayme Elmore, as Flossie Spearmint, is said to be a most pleasing and entertaining bit of femininity, and she is ably assisted by Joe Scott, as the bellboy; Gordon Newman, as Percy Uno, and Walter Walheiser, as the barber.

New Bill at Forsyth.

Clever Valerie Bergere, who scored such a tremendous hit at the Grand this season in "His Japanese Wife," will be the star attraction at the Forsyth this week, presenting her newest success, "Judgment." Her supporting company would be a credit to any star. Her play is said to be one of the cleverest ideas that vaudeville has shown, and will be staged in the manner that has made all Bergere productions models of perfection.

Britt Wood, the original character comedian, will return here after an absence of a year. He appeared at the Forsyth last summer and his hit has never been eclipsed. His eccentric dances, his quaint monologue and his harmonica playing have made him a genuine star.

The Metropolita Minstrels, a group of clever young people, who are all expert in song and dance; Clark and Verdi, character comedians; Work and Play, the jesting gymnasts; the Les Gougets, European musical novelty duo, and the Shelvey Brothers, in contortion exercises, will also appear.

Grand to Continue Movies.

Movies at the Grand have become so popular that the management is looking forward to making the policy permanent. There has been a decided interest evidenced in the Grand's pictures, and as the season progresses and the biggest and best features are secured, it is believed that the theater will be crowded all the time.

Starting this afternoon at 2:30 and continuing until 10:30 to-night, there will be a program of straight motion pictures, a continuous performance, of the best subjects that are released by the greatest producers of movies. The admission will be 10 cents.

The Grand is a convenient theater for pictures. It is splendidly located, there are seats for everyone and the house is perfectly ventilated and cooled with iced air and noiseless fans.

FUN WITH PONIES PUTS NEW LIFE IN CONTEST

Manager and Parents of Candidates Confer While Children Enjoy Grant Park Outing.

Five days remain of the special bonus offer for Georgian and American pony contestants, and, refreshed and rested after an outing in Grant Park Sunday, the boys and girls are prepared to take advantage of their unusual opportunity.

The outing at Grant Park was a success. The ponies gave unalloyed pleasure to dozens of the contestants, who rode and drove the tireless little animals.

"Gee! I've got to win," said one lad. "This sample of what fun a pony is just tantalizes."

His sentiment was echoed by all. Any boy or girl who once draws a rein over a pony wants one "for keeps."

The parents were on hand, also, and held many an anxious conference with the contest manager. Sage advice was asked and given, and several of the contestants, their parents primed with hints as to how to help, will go forward at increased speed.

The boys and girls need all the help they can get just now. For five days more, a special bonus offer gives them generous allowance of extra votes for clubs of $35, $25 and $15 in subscriptions of any length.

When the bonus offer closes Saturday night, the end of the contest will be but ten working days away, for all votes must be in by midnight of July 31, and as soon thereafter as the vote totals can be checked over accurately, the 22 ponies and 22 watches will make 44 boys and girls in Georgia and the South supremely happy.

Endeavorers Hold Service at Sunrise

LOS ANGELES, July 14.—With a sunrise consecration service at Fiesta Park, conducted by President Francis E. Clark, in which State and provincial delegations responded as delegations, the Christian Endeavorers to-day began their last day of the international convention in Los Angeles.

Addresses were delivered to-day by the Rev. Julian D. Caldwell, of Nashville, Tenn.; General Secretary William Shaw, the Rev. Francis E. Clark and a number of foreign delegates.

$25,000 To Be Used to Find Car Fare Profit

BOSTON, MASS., July 14.—The Massachusetts Institute of Technology will spend $5,000 annually for five years, the gift of an anonymous benefactor, to determine how far a street railway can carry a passenger with profit from a nickel.

Incidentally it will investigate the conflicting claims of the Boston Elevated and citizens of Ward 26. The company declares it can not afford a 5-cent rate to Hyde Park, and the citizens there claim it can and should.

Saw Bodies of 1,000 Suicides; Kills Self

WILMINGTON, DEL., July 14.—A Coroner's jury has returned a verdict of suicide in the case of Edmund E. Myers, former Deputy Coroner.

Myers, it is said, had handled 10,000 bodies, 1,000 of which were suicides, in twenty years.

J. Stovall Smith Dies 2 Hours After Return From Trip

J. Stovall Smith, well-known Whitehall street druggist, died at his home, 131 Ashby street, Saturday night. The funeral services were held Monday morning in the West End Presbyterian Church with Masonic rites. The interment was in Oakland Cemetery.

Mr. Smith reached home Saturday night from a business trip and complained of being ill. He rapidly grew worse and within two hours was dead. He was active in church and fraternal order circles. He is survived by his wife, two brothers and four sisters.

OBITUARY.

The body of P. W. Stonecipher, 50 years old, who died at a local sanitarium at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, will be sent to Toccoa, Ga., Monday afternoon for funeral and interment.

The body of J. G. Thompson, who died at a private sanitarium Sunday morning, will be sent to Stone Mountain, Ga., Tuesday morning at 7:30 for funeral and interment. Mr. Thompson was 30 years old, and is survived by his mother, Mrs. M. L. Thompson, of Atlanta. He was a member of the Atlanta Lodge of Masons and of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. These lodges have charge of the funeral.

The funeral of H. T. Jones, who died at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, will be held from the chapel of Greenberg & Bond at 7 o'clock Monday night. Mr. Jones was a member of the Winn, Jones & Hudson Mule Company. He is survived by his wife, two children; his father, J. B. Jones; a sister, Mrs. W. Sutton, and three brothers, Hadley, Hurley and Reuben Jones. The body will be sent to Greenbrier, Tenn., for interment.

The body of Joseph Hutcheson, who died at his home in Decatur Sunday, was sent to his old home in Carroll County Monday morning for funeral and interment. Mr. Hutcheson was 74 years old. He was a lieutenant of Company I, Thirty-seventh Georgia Regiment, during the war. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Misses Louise and Almeda Hutcheson, and one son, Joseph Hutcheson, Jr.

The wife of M. L. Donaldson, a former resident of Atlanta, and a graduate of Tech in 1911, died Sunday in St. Louis, where Mr. Donaldson is connected with the Westinghouse Company. The body was sent to Wilkinsburg, Pa., for funeral and interment. Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson had been married only three months. H. R. Donaldson, of Atlanta, is a brother of M. L. Donaldson.

Mrs. Elnora McKee Dies; Family Absent

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Elnora McKee, who died Saturday afternoon, will be held Monday afternoon from All Saints' Church. Interment will be in Westview Cemetery. Mrs. McKee did not become seriously ill until a few days ago. She was removed to a private sanitarium and members of her family summoned, but she died before they arrived.

Mrs. McKee came to Atlanta from Louisville three years ago. She is survived by her husband, Franklin W. McKee, president of the Central Cotton Oil Company and a member of the Capital City Club; four children, Miss Elva McKee, who graduated at Wellesley this year; the Misses Verna and Frankie McKee and Thurston McKee. She also is survived by her father, Samuel W. Day, of Stephens, Ark.

$38,000 Low Record For Exchange Seat

NEW YORK, July 14.—A new low record was established for New York Stock Exchange membership when Irving Bunnell, a member of the Curb Association, purchased the seat of Edwin T. Maynard for $38,000.

This is the poorest price paid in more than thirteen years. The previous sale was $40,000. The maximum was $95,000, in 1906.

GEORGIA TO HAVE BIG CHILDHOOD EXHIBITION

700 Pictures, 200 of Atlanta Tads, Will Grace Huge Building at 1915 World's Fair.

I. Wasserkrug, representing the Temple of Childhood department of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, arrived in Atlanta Monday to make arrangements for the selection of the portraits of the 200 best looking children of this city and 500 from the State at large, which will be placed on exhibition at the great exposition in 1915.

Governor John M. Slaton has been requested to make the selections for Georgia, while Mayor Woodward has received the nomination as official portrait censor for Atlanta. The Governor and the Mayor will be assisted by other distinguished citizens.

Mr. Wasserkrug said the work will result in one of the most unique exhibits ever sent out by Georgia.

When the names of the children have been submitted to the exposition authorities, the official photographer, who will be selected Monday by Mr. Wasserkrug, will be notified, and the mothers of the children will be requested to bring them for the sitting, which will be gratis.

The Temple of Childhood, according to Mr. Wasserkrug, will be one of the great features of the exposition. The building, which will cost about $250,000, will contain exhibits of educational and industrial character.

"It is the first time in the history of expositions," said Mr. Wasserkrug Monday morning, "that a thing of this kind has been attempted. The exposition authorities are putting forth every effort to make it a success. We have men out now in all the principal cities of the United States, besides one in Europe, who are collecting the portraits of the most beautiful children, which will form a collection of 100,000 to be placed in the great hall of the Temple of Childhood. The exhibit undoubtedly will constitute the greatest commemorative feature of the exhibition."

Atlanta, Birmingham, Montgomery and Mobile are the Southern cities selected for representation in the palace.

Mr. Wasserkrug will go to Birmingham from Atlanta. After his tour of the South, he will return to St. Louis, headquarters of the Temple of Childhood department.

Predicts Free Love In 15 Generations

DENVER, July 14.—"Free love possibly may come within fifteen generations," said Dr. Belle B. Gurley, of Chicago, before the national convention of the American Homeopathic Institute.

"The races can not hope to achieve its highest development in free love, but it may be an evolutionary step in the perfection of the species.

"Personally, I am not in favor of free love. Only by intelligent education can we avert this disaster.

To Overworked Women

Are you one of the great army of women who thru force of circumstances have had to do more than your rightful share of work? In your weakened condition you have almost lost all hope of ever enjoying that health and strength that should be yours.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

No Alcohol — No Narcotics

For over forty years has been recommended for just such cases as yours. Thousands of women have benefited by it.

You, too, will find it a good, honest, square deal Restorative Tonic and Strength-giving Nervine and Regulator—compounded and carefully adapted to act in harmony with woman's peculiar, delicate and ever sensitive organism. It makes weak women strong, sick women well. For over 40 years it has given satisfaction in its liquid form. Now it can also be obtained in tablet form—from dealers in medicine—or send 50 one-cent stamps for a trial box to Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in Plain English; or, Medicine Simplified, 1008 pages, over 500 illustrations, newly revised up-to-date Edition, cloth-bound, sent for 31 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of wrapping and mailing only. Address: Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

One of Many

Mrs. G. H. Williams, of Lynnhaven, Va., wrote: "It is six years since my health gave way. I had female trouble and all the doctors (I employed three) said I would die. I was not able to do my work, had to hire someone all the time. Finally, I read in the papers about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and decided to try it. I had not taken but one bottle until I found it had done me good. I took in all, five bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and now I am able to do all my housework, and have gained fourteen pounds. I advise all women who suffer from female trouble to try your 'Favorite Prescription.' It's the only medicine on earth."

Chaingangs in Georgia

"One of the glaring needs of the State Is a corrective home for delinquent girls"

—Report of the Prison Commission of Georgia

Ten years old.

Did you at that age understand life?

Knew you the misery that would inevitably come as the result of a false step?

You did not.

Your little girl knows even less.

But under our law—

She can understand and consent to her ruin—can blight her life and sell her soul for a bit of candy, if she is ten years old—

Though she must be twenty-one before she can contract to sell a hog for gold.

Your law is wrong.

You will change it.

Do it to-day.

And more—

Provide a home for wayward girls!

The Prison Commission of Georgia says:

"One of the glaring needs of the State is a corrective home for delinquent girls."

The Penitentiary Committee of the House has, without a dissenting vote, recommended the passage of a bill providing for such a home.

Its members have seen the bitter need.

Think!

To-day a girl of fifteen is on the brink.

Friends have tried—they are trying to save her.

But her mother is already in the pit.

She is dragging the daughter down.

Together they are lost. They are destroying others.

Both might be saved, had we the home.

Saturday a girl of fourteen and one of sixteen stood in court.

If Georgia had a strong industrial school for wayward girls, these might be held and taught.

For girls like these other States have homes.

Georgia has none, though under her laws the girl of ten may consent to her own ruin.

Year after year you have delayed, pleading lack of funds as an excuse for not building this school and home.

LET US DELAY NO LONGER.

You have ever found both time and money to combat cholera among the swine of Georgia.

And, in this, you have done right.

For the hog means food and clothes for loved ones.

But these girls?

You will do as much and more for them.

Their loss is more serious than the death of a hog.

Their fall means——

Save them from this!

You can. You will.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

BUYING OF JULY FEATURES COTTON

Small Stock on Hand Is Causing Bearish Element to Go Slow. Narrow Range.

NEW YORK, July 14.—An easy tone prevailed in the cotton market at the opening to-day and first prices were unchanged to 3 points lower than Saturday's final. Early cables were little better than had been expected after the triple holiday. Before the opening here, however, cables eased off. Trading at the outset was extremely light, but some demand prevailed for old crop positions by the spot interests, causing a steadier tone, resulting in prices rallying some 1 to 9 points from the initial level.

The weather map was favorable, but had no special feature. Sentiment is bearish and the average trader contends that any further advance will probably bring out active selling. The official Government records show temperature average for the State of Texas and Oklahoma 96 degrees. There was only two stations showed 100 degrees aSturday and Sunday, one had 100 and the other 102 degrees.

The Government report on supply and distribution of cotton during uJne was considered bearish by the trade. The consumption of cotton during June was 447,000 bales, compared with 511,000 bales during May. This influenced an active selling movement during the forenoon and prices shaded sharply, being 1 to 5 points higher than the previous close.

Throughout the afternoon session the market was extremely dull, transactions were very light and fluctuations narrow. Interest was plainly centered on July and October, of which the larger spot houses were the buyers. This, together with a decrease in the local stock of cotton in the past several days, aggregating 6,000 bales, is causing the bearish element to go slow. All crop advices favored the bears, except there is continued talk of boll weevil doing some damage in Alabama.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net gain of 1 to 8 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 14.—While there was not much rain in the Western States over Sunday temperatures were lower and are now entirely normal. This result, without much rain, is perhaps more favorable to crop prospects, as rank growth will be prevented and maturity furthered in the Southern portion, where much of the crop is about to be out beyond damage by weevil.

Partly cloudy weather prevailed in the central and eastern belt, with some scattered showers, best in Tennessee, north Alabama, Missisippi and Florida. Stationary conditions are indicated for the next two days, except that Oklahoma, northwest Texas and western Arkansas will have increasing cloudiness and prospects for some rain.

Liverpool came in as due and quotes spots 5 points lower. Sales 10,000 bales. Very pessimistic views from Paris on the financial situation are the only striking feature in the foreign news. Our market opened easier with feeling rather bearish, but strong bidding in July by certain leaders at once checked selling and prices held well around 1.48 for October.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—There will be thundershowers to-night or Tuesday over the Northern districts from the Mississippi Valley eastward and in the Southern portion of the South Atlantic States. Elsewhere East of the Rocky Mountains the weather will be generally fair to-night and Tuesday. The temperature will be cooler to-night.

Forecast until 7 p. m. Tuesday:

Georgia—Local showers to-night or Tuesday.

Virginia—Showers to-night or Tuesday except fair in Southeast portion.

North and South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Tuesday.

Florida—Local showers to-night or Tuesday except fair in Northwestern portion.

East Texas—Fair to-night and Tuesday.

West Texas—Showers to-night or Tuesday, fair in Southeast portion.

Louisiana—Fair to-night and Tuesday.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Chisholm & Chapman: "We prefer the long sile of the market."

Logan & Bryan: "We think long side attractive during periods of depression as any unfavorable developments in the belt would likely result in a sharp upturn."

Orvis Bros. & Co.: "The market displays remarkable steadiness in the face of the flattering promise, and the small supply of floating contracts renders it acutely responsive to the least buying power."

Miller & Co.: "The far months invite intelligent action on the bear side of the market."

COTTON GOSSIP

"The market has ruled quiet but steady to-day. There has been fair demand for summer options, also for October, but there was little for sale. The stock here has decreased 6,000 bales in the past seven days, and it now looks as if they will have only a stock of about 15,000 bales by August 1. This is causing the bearish element to go slow. Some of the larger spot interests have been noticeable buyers of new crop as well as old.

"There is continued talk to-day of boll weevil in Alabama and Texas, all of which is having a stimulating effect."—J. M. Anderson.

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma, generally clear, light rain at El Paso, Texas."

* * *

The first cotton bale received at Houston, Texas, was consigned to Weld & Neville and sold for 20 cents per pound. William Gumoens bought it.

* * *

Bureau report on supply and distribution bearish.

* * *

Trading was light at the opening of the market to-day. Spot houses, however, were good buyers of the old crops, which caused the early advance. Sentiment is against the market.—Anderson.

* * *

Atlanta, Ga., wires: "Crop getting better daily; old gray dusty hill lands, which seldom make anything, have good crops this year."

* * *

Warehouse stocks in New York, 36,083 bales; certificated, 30,076 bales.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, July 14.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows part cloudy in Texas, Alabama and Western Georgia. Fair elsewhere, nice rains in North Alabama and West Florida. Few scattered showers elsewhere. Temperatures normal. Indications are for part cloudy to fair generally; some scattered showers, mostly in the central belt.

* * *

Washington forecast for week: Local thundershowers may be expected during the week over South Atlantic and East Gulf States. Generally fair over the West Gulf States, except occasional showers east of Louisiana.

* * *

The Times-Democrat herewith presents its second report on the cotton crop of 1913. The consensus of opinion is to the following effect:

1. Improvement has been the rule weather having been almost ideal for cultivation.

2. There has been no lack of labor and the fields have consequently been worked to the maximum.

3. Complaints of boll weevil come from several States and the reports from certain districts of Mississippi show that grave damage has already occurred.

4. Despite the forcing weather of the last month, the crop is still on the average somewhat late.

5. Taking the belt is a whole the possibilities are great in either direction. With a perfect season on from this time forward, a bumper yield might be expected; with a seriously unfavorable change in this respect the outturn might be sensationally small.

BANK CLEARINGS SHRINK AT NEARLY EVERY CITY

Bank clearings in the United States for the week ending July 10 aggregate $2,538,122,000, against $3,663,768,000 the previous week and $3,440,310,000 in the corresponding week last year, according to Bradstreet's tabulation. SMALL CHANGE IN PRICE OF STOCK

Talent Awaiting Results of the Strike Conference, Which Is Expected To Be Averted.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Heaviness in the foreign markets and anxiety over the strike situation on the Eastern railways caused a dull opening of the stock market to-day and most of the initial quotations were lower. After half an hour many of the issues which had begun lower made partial recoveries.

Among the declines were U. S. Steel common, ¼; Union Pacific, ½; Southern Pacific, ½; Reading, ½; Lehigh Valley, ½; C. and O., ¼; Canadian Pacific, 1; American Smelting, ¼, and Amalgamated Copper, ½.

Union Pacific, Reading and Canadian Pacific made complete recoveries. New York Central advanced ½ while Anaconda and American Can also gained.

The curb was quiet. Americans in London were irregular and narrow. Canadian Pacific in London was lower.

Price movements remained unchanged except for slight fractional gains which were recorded in the last few minutes of trading. Canadian Pacific moved up ½ to 213, with New York Central the only declining issue, yielding ⅜ to 96⅛. Union Pacific, Reading, Southern Pacific and Northern Pacific advanced ¼. Chesapeake and Ohio rose ⅝, other issues unchanged. Call money loaned at 2 per cent.

Stocks sold off in the last hour and nearly all hovered around the opening prices, at quotations lower than the mid-day level. Amalgamated Copper sold at 62½, or 4 under the mid-day prices. Other losses from the noon quotations were American Smelting 1⅝, Steel ⅛, Chesapeake and Ohio ⅞, Canadian Pacific 1⅛. Canadian Pacific sold around 211⅞. Outside news was bearish. The tone was heavy.

The market closed weak. Governments unchanged; other bonds strong.

CATTLE AND HOGS OFF.

CHICAGO, July 14.—Chicago received nearly 1,935 cars of live stock to-day and receipts of cattle and hogs were generous all around, causing declines of 10 to 15c on the former and 5 to 10c on the latter. Sheep were strong to 10c higher. Kansas pastures are parched and a run of 17,000 at Kansas City was due mainly to that fact. Kansas City and St. Louis each had 200 cars of Texas cattle. Quality here was nothing to brag about. Shipping hogs got good action and were only 5c lower, the top being 8.40. A lot of packing stuff had to sell from 8.30 down.

BULLISH ADVICES PUTS CEREALS UP

Hot Weather and Grasshoppers Playing Havoc With Crops Run Shorts to Cover.

CHICAGO, July 14.—The wheat market closed with a bullish undercurrent shown and at net advances of ⅝@¾c for the day. There was considerable wheat bought on the faint rumors of black rust in scattered sections of the spring wheat country, and which were unaccompanied with buying orders and which were later denied.

The visible supply of wheat decreased 513,000 bushels for the week, corn decreased 378,000 bushels, while oats increased 1,843,000 bushels.

Corn closed at advances of 1¼@1¾c. Oats were up ⅝@1¼c. Cash transactions here were said to be large on export acount, which was taken mainly by foreign shipers at the seaboard.

Provisions were unsettled.

Grain Notes

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "Wheat: The map shows general rains in the Canadian Northwest and some on this side of the line. Some reaction in prices would seem reasonable.

"Corn: Liquidation has been very heavy and we look for the strength in the cash position to prove at least a steadying influence.

"Oats: As in corn, liquidation has been drastic, but the cash situation is entirely different, stocks being excessive for this time of the year and really prove the greatest weight on the market. At the same time the decline has been a very sharp one, and a reaction would naturally seem in order.

"Provisions: The strength in July pork continues and packers as well as shorts are good buyers of lard."

* * *

"Last year on July 1, the Government report was taken as indicating a yield of 30.1 bushels per acre on oats and a total crop of 1,139,000,000 bushels. From that time forward weather conditions were favorable, the crop filled better than anticipated, and yield finally 37.4 per acre, and total crop 1,418,000,000 bushels. A similar record of crop improvement seems probable this year. The last Government report was gathered at the end of June, when severe drouth and abnormally hot weather discouraged crop observers. Immediately after that date good rains visited the dry districts and temperature was normal, furnishing the conditions needed for filling and all reports for a week or ten days past indicate an improved situation. Last year such conditions after July 1, added seven bushels per acre to the yield. Half as much a gain this year would give a crop, which, taken with the heavy carry over of old oats, would make a supply fully as burdensome as that of last year."—Rycroft.

* * *

Winona, Minn., says the crop looks fine. Corn is 15 to 20 per cent better than last year. All reports this morning from Iowa, Minnesota, South Dakota and Wisconsin say the best corn crop ever raised is in sight.

SIDELIGHTS ON POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The Georgia Legislature has indulged itself this session in much talk of tax reform, but so far the reform is not exactly in sight.

What has heretofore prevailed by way of tax reform talk admittedly has been magnificent, but it has not been war!

Tax reform in the Kimball House lobby and tax reform on the statute books of Georgia are two radically different things—and it, really, is tax reform on the statute books that the people of Georgia generally seem most to be hankering for.

Beginning to-day there remain about four weeks of Legislative time in which tax reform may be achieved.

Scant time, even if none of it is lost. If anything worth while gets through, it will have to hustle, and a good many things will have to get out of its way.

The Senate is not embarrassed in this matter so much as the House, for the House must get its measures out of its hands and in the hands of the Senate, or take the blame for the failure to put tax reform over.

Both the Senate and the House, in spite of themselves, have succeeded in wasting much time this session.

This is distinctly the fault of the Houses, moreover, and not of the presiding officers or the committee chairmen.

The Senate and the House continually throw away their time debating frivolous things—such as whether the hall shall be permitted to thus and so speaker, or whether a bill referred to one committee really was not an affront to or reflection upon some other committee.

There is not much time left in which tax reform measures may be put over. If they are put over, both Houses must dispose of the necessary and important work now in hand and as speedily as possible take up the real big business of the session.

Congressman Charles R. Crisp, who has been spending a few days in Georgia as the House "marks time" to the Senate's tariff music, will leave for washington to-day, as he expects the currency bill to be brought out of the committee this week.

Mr. Crisp thinks the present extraordinary session of Congress may continue up to, and probably run into, the regular session in December, although he thinks that in the event of this, a recess may be taken early in the fall.

"Uncle John" Foster of Floyd is one of the veterans of the House of Representatives who doesn't go in extensively for oratory on the floor. He is a great talker in the committee rooms and never hesitates to express himself upon any topic that may come up, but most talk upon the floor he looks upon as fireworks and of no particular importance.

Mr. Foster is now serving his third consecutive term in the House, and has served two ór three terms in addition thereto.

The present capitol is crowded to suffocation and just about bulges at the ends when the General Assembly is in session.

The courts and the various departments, constantly expanding and requiring more and more room, have left few places for the committees to meet.

It is no uncommon sight nowadays to see House and Senate committees meeting in the corridors to the right and left of the presiding officers' stands, in the cloakrooms, or any other old place sufficiently large for all the members to crowd in.

Before long it looks as if it will be absolutely necessary to provide an annex of some sort. There absolutely is no available room left in the capitol proper.

Mr. Stewart of Coffee is the prize objector of the present House of Representatives.

The gentleman from Stewart despises anything out of its regular order, even as the devil despises holy water. Unanimous consents give him a powerful pain, and always are fair marks for his veto.

As a matter of fact, too, there are few members who serve a better purpose in the House than those given to objecting.

Under the unanimous consent rule, much legislative legerdemain is practiced, and the man who sits on the job watching for "jokers" in unanimous consent propositions is a member mighty well worth while.

Already, for the lack of an objector always on the job, numerous bills have been withdrawn from their proper committees and re-referred to committees before which they have no business whatever—and the trouble about it is they can not be sent back where they belong now, except under that same unanimous consent rule.

Returning solons are loud in their praises of Athens, where the General Assembly spent Saturday inspecting the various State institutions there.

"I never had a better time in my life than I did in Athens, and I never went on a trip, moreover, where less time was wasted," said one returning pilgrim.

"Nothing was tendered the visitors by way of amusement until after we had made the rounds of all the institutions and spent sufficient time therein to make ourselves familiar with them. After the day's work was over, however, and playtime came, we certainly were furnished a good time.

"The Athens Chamber of Commerce had us in charge, and we certainly got all that was coming to us.

"I am glad I went to Athens, as I had a bully time and saw a lot that was well worth looking into."

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Start of Many Breeds Contributed to Fine Show Room Displays

The Number of Birds in Certain Variety Attracts Attention of Beginner.

By JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Each breed has its friends and supporters. The more of these supporters or boosters that get behind a certain breed or variety, the more popular it becomes, and that is the principal reason why some breeds become so wonderfully popular, while others apparently just as meritorious are scarcely heard about. Clubs are formed for the sole purpose of boosting, as they call it, their favorite variety. New buyers are largely influenced by the so-called popularity of a certain variety and the kind of display it makes at the various fairs and shows. First impressions are most often made at fairs where the beginner is often found and becomes interested. He looks about, is impressed by the breeds most strongly represented and shown in the best and most attractive manner. If he finds a breed represented with but two or three pairs he gives but little attention and passes on. But just let him find a large exhibit shown by one, two or three exhibitors in very attractive shape and in fine, healthy condition and the chances are ten to one that our friend will get stuck on them, as the saying goes, and he concludes that they must be about the best chicken to be found. Let there be a lot of half starved, sickly looking, scaly legged chickens upon the other side and see how quickly our visitor will turn up his nose and give them the go-by. Appearances go a long way toward making lasting impressions in the poultry business, as the young fellow told his father when he was out looking for a wife. So my advice to you or any who are in the poultry business and want to get recruits or customers and want them upon your special varieties, is to get up all the interest possible among breeders of that variety and get them to make fine displays, and the more of them the better the competition, which is all the better for trade. I have shown 40 birds of one kind, where one-half that number would have filled that class, but I wanted the visitor to get the impression that there was something doing down my aisle, and you can bet there was. I made my display pay me well in dollars and cents. The superintendent at one particular fair where I exhibited regularly said he wanted me to put my exhibit facing the main entrance. Why? Simply because I brought a large exhibit of one variety, all in first-class shape, clean and the picture of health. As a result I made many sales, got many a beginner to think that the Barred Plymouth Rocks were the only fowl worth having, and I started many on the road to success. I mention these simple facts to show the reader that a little extra effort in the way of appearances or show will pay every time. It will pay the poultry breeders just as well as it will pay the dry goods merchant to make his fine show window displays. It is not the number of breeds we keep that counts for success, but the care and attention we give to each. I have known breeders to make a specialty of some one of what we call very unpopular varieties, and with careful breeding and equally careful exhibiting and advertising make a real success. They went into it to win and they were not disappointed. So after all it is not so much what variety one selects, so long as it is a good, practical breed, and we make up our minds and impress upon the public that it is as good, if not the best, variety on the list. We keep up our end of the business in producing good stock and lose no opportunity to impress upon the public what we think about it. I assure you they will do the rest. You must not rest upon your oars, but keep eternally pushing forward.

ALMOST EVERYBODY

EXPECTS TO OWN a home sometime sooner or later. When the time comes you will be surprised at the scarcity of suitable building lots and the great advancement in prices. Why not look around now, while the market affords such good opportunities?

JUST OFF Stewart Avenue, in a thoroughly established community, convenient to good car service, city school and large city park, we have a number of very desirable lots 50x200 feet; also some brand-new bungalows that can be bought on very reasonable terms. Lots ranging in price, $900 to $1,200; bungalows, from $3,500 to $4,000.

LOT, PEACHTREE ROAD.
(200 by 250 feet.)
BETTER be "safe" in buying this property now, than "sorry" afterwards you didn't; $35 foot.
THOMAS R. FINNEY, Sales Manager, 12 "Real Estate Row."

THEY ARE VERY SCARCE

YOU WILL find it hard to buy a desirable 50-foot building lot on the North Side for less than $2,500 or $3,000. These same lots could be bought three years ago for $700 to $1,000. This is the small investor's opportunity. Buy them partially developed, in the RIGHT SPOT, on easy terms—CHEAP, and sell the finished product.

Between the Ansley Park golf course and Piedmont avenue is the most STRATEGICALLY situated undeveloped property in Fulton County—owned by the shrewdest investors. This is the day of the SMALL INVESTOR, and they are making money fast in this section. Those who have bought in 1913 will double their money when the county finishes the roads in this neighborhood, and this is going to be done.

There is 100 per cent profit in our 60-foot lots at $10 down and $10 per month. Fifty-odd have been sold.

The Balkan Nations, Turned Butchers, Have Outraged Humanity

The Balkan races have forfeited the respect of civilization.

Saving only Greece, which holds to the elements of humanity and Christian warfare, the Balkan races within the fortnight have proven themselves to be a horde of murderous savages, of whom the arch savage and murderer is Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

There was never such a fall in history so swift, so sudden—from fame to infamy—from heroism to shame.

The world of civilization was with the Balkans in their war. It was blazoned as almost a holy war—the war of the Christian nations against the Unspeakable and Heathen Turk—the last nemesis of civilization upon centuries of butchery and cycles of barbarity.

The crimson ghosts of Albania and Zeitoun—the holocausts of Christian martyrs incinerated in Turkish fires, the battalions of Christians butchered because they were Christians, the pictures of infants bayoneted before their mothers' eyes, and mothers murdered, with outrage preceding or following fast on murder—aroused the public protest of the Christian world.

Every voice in Christendom rang for Bulgaria and the Balkans. Every civilized prayer was theirs. The Georgian helped to lead and vocalize the great procession of American sentiment that bade godspeed to the Balkan soldiers of the Cross.

And their battle was magnificently won. All records of history were equalled if not surpassed on the battlefields of this modern and magnificent crusade.

Step by step the Unspeakable Turk was driven back from his battlefields of murder. Inch by inch the Crescent yielded to the Cross.

Bulgaria swept from Adrianople to Chatalja. Greek battleships blocked the transportation of Turkish troops and provisions of war. Servia marched from her own victorious battlefields to reinforce the Bulgarians in the crisis at Adrianople and Chatalja, and with the allied legions thundering at the despairing gates of Constantinople, Southwestern Europe passed from the Crescent to Christ, and a great new nation seemed to have been born from the Slavonic races to rewrite history and to shift the balance of power from the elder monarchies to the plains of Thrace—now consecrated to liberty and humanity.

It was an epoch in human history. It was an Armageddon rich in the righteous triumph of the right above the wrong. And in its glorious aftermath the annals of the Christian races should have been remade and amplified.

But almost in a night the scene has changed. The peace of London became the proclamation of a progressive savagery. The men who endured like martyrs and fought like lions could not win like men, but quarreled like jackals over the spoils of victory.

Bulgaria, first in battle, was foremost in her greed, and her crimson hands, wet with heathen blood, and presuming on their strength, reached out to grasp the throats of Christian allies and to seize the territory that Greece and Servia had helped like heroes to achieve. Friends fastened their fangs into each other's vitals with a ferocity fiercer than they had shown their common foe.

The Balkan armies seem to have become as barbarous as the Turks.

Their hatred for the Turk was as nothing to their hatred for each other.

The hideous greed of territory blinded their eyes to every sentiment of Christianity and to every creed of Christ.

They caught from the Turk his bloodiest butcheries and branded them upon their fratricidal strife. The Bulgars at Kilkiss and Kurkut burned alive seven hundred men before their tortured wives with as fine a savagery as ever brutalized the Turk. The Serb at Belgrade shouted jeers and hisses into the dying ears of Bulgarian prisoners, brought from the battle fronts, and hand to hand with fist and foot, with tooth and nail, like primeval savages, fought Bulgar and Serb, who had carried the Cross of Christ in triumph above the infidel and Unspeakable Turk.

The Balkan fortnight behind us is an outrage upon the whole Christian world. These lapsed Christians, these transformed savages of greed, have within ten days lost the sympathy of humanity and their place among civilized nations. They have struck a staggering blow at the faith they followed and their religion and ours they have defiled.

The nations that cried godspeed to the Balkan armies of yesterday are ready now to cry, "Down with the newborn butchers of the Danube," and the world is ready to approve and applaud Austria or any other power that will repossess the territory so unworthily held and proceed to govern the people so obviously incapable and so basely unequal to the task of governing themselves.

The Metal Workers

We Live in the Age of Steel, He Says. Steel is the Synonym of Civilization and the Badge of Prosperity.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

I.

WE live in the age of steel. Steel is the synonym of civilization and the badge of prosperity. When the railroads are buying steel and extending their lines, we are prosperous. The farmer builds barns, fences broad acres, puts up silos, and the young folks make homes. Iron and steel enter into every building project.

America, by reason of her enormous consumption of metals, has earned the title of "The Land of Steel." We are a nation of builders.

Progress is only possible where there is mutuality and co-operation—where we see the seeming paradox of individual liberty harnessed to the car of common weal.

To certain persons of "artistic temperament" the term "commercialism" is anathema. They see no beauty in the smokestack, the skyscraper, the huge mills, the flying locomotive.

Man at the Forge.

They perceive only the dewdrop, the lily, the clouds, the cobwebs, the moonshine. They rave about the grotesque gargoyle upon some old church-tower, but can not imagine the chimney yonder, as it gives out its incense of commerce, a monument to the industry of man.

They rhapsodize about the sunset, but fail to see the magnificence of the man at the forge—framed in glowing gold, wresting steel from stones.

And again we hear men speak of the sordidness of industrialism. "The dragnet of avariciousness enmeshes us; the collections for foreign missions show a lamentable decrease, and the automobile industry is booming."

The soap-box reformer spiels of the luxuries of the rich, and draws a harrowing contrast between the Brussels carpet and the elbow cushions of these parasites and the laboring classes.

And some few, mistaking the shadow for the substance, the mirage of ease for the oasis of success, leave the beaten, upward track, and slide down the toboggan of inertia into oblivion.

The vast majority of us, though, realize that industrialism is the lifeblood of the nation; that nothing contributes more to a nation's greatness than its men and women who work; and that true progress is the natural resultant of a people bound together with the sympathy and mutuality incidental thereto.

We are moving onward. Sometimes we whirl like a dervish, remaining almost stationery; at others we outdo the "Limited." We are now alive to the necessity for a sound mind and a healthy body. And we also realize that a healthy body is conducive to intelligent thinking and wise decision.

Mammoth Industries.

Business development is possible only through continuous, concentrated effort and conscientious, painstaking labor. We have countless examples of that truth in the annals of our country's achievements.

Mammoth industries have evolved from small beginnings by the application of those vital principles. Labor has until recently been wholly associated with the pick and shovel, the ax and saw. It is now, however, pretty generally recognized that both bodily and mental sweat is necessary to the successful issue of business enterprise.

"From every man according to his ability, to every man according to his need." One may be a hewer of wood or a drawer of water; another a captain of industry. One may be a toiler in the valley, and still another in the observatory on the mountain-top, reading the signs of the times. Yet what matters it, if they are all co-operating?

The manufacturer needs the miner, the miner the manufacturer. They both need the farmer, and he needs them both.

Brain? Yes. Brawn? Yes. But brawn and brain is the combination. Together they can move the mountains, link countries together, or slice a continent in half. By their exercise we reach up into the clouds and bind the lightning to our chariot wheels or utilize its power in manufacture.

We annihilate space by wireless telegraphy, we spurn the earth with our aeroplanes. We dig and burrow, pump and mine; we tap Nature's stores, and put harness on her forces.

We plow, we plant, and reap; we drain, and irrigate. We make gardens of waste places, and the desert to blossom like the rose.

When trials come, we meet them with manliness.

When difficulties arise, we seek their solution. We are becoming more self-reliant and confident every day. Superstition and the shackles of the unknown fetter us no longer. We are gods in embryo. We have no limitation but ourselves.

Iron is the most abundant and useful of all metals, and has been known from the remotest time.

The ancient Egyptians were familiar with the process of working iron and undoubtedly knew how to make steel.

Iron in Ancient Days.

Tools found in their temples were made of this metal, and if the British Museum is to be seen an ax-head from the pyramid of Gizeh dating B. C. 4000.

The Assyrians and Babylonians were also skilful workers in iron. The Greeks obtained their knowledge of iron-working from these older nations. The Romans learned the art from the Greeks, and developed it in England, where it had been in operation since B. C. 55.

Other European nations were also workers of iron at an early date, using rude forges and crude methods.

For several centuries progress was slow, and the manufacture of iron or steel was not considered of sufficient importance to be called an industry.

Not until 1350, when the manufacture of cast iron and steel was inaugurated in Germany, did the industry assume any importance.

The fuel used for the smelting of the ore was charcoal. In 1558, the British Parliament (with the prescience which is a permanent characteristic of that august body) passed laws restricting the building of ironworks in some parts of the country, and forbidding the cutting down of trees for fuel. This cutting down of supplies led to the search for a substitute for charcoal for fuel, and in 1619 a man by the name of Dudley used coal for the purpose of smelting. The plan was not received with favor and fell into disuse.

HIS CAREER

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

JOHN SMITH was a baby so cunning and bright
That his parents stood gaping from morning till night,
When crowing and chuckling, as most babies will,
He was thought to possess a comedian's skill.
When quiet and weary, perhaps half asleep,
"My word," said his parents, "that baby is deep!
We'll make him a teacher,
The dear little joker,
Or maybe a preacher
Or lawyer or broker."

John Smith went through college ahead of his friends,
And started with fervor to rough-hew his ends.
His efforts, however, all seemed to fall flat,
For he fizzled at this and he foozled at that.
He was kicked out so often by taskmasters mean
That he looked like the film in a picture machine.
Some people are teachers
And doctors and lawyers
And brokers and preachers
That ought to be sawyers.

VICTORY FOR WOMEN.

Editor The Georgian:

I wish to thank you for the editorial, "A Great Victory for Southern Women." It was timely and in the right spirit. Georgia women have a right to the use of the State Capitol for meetings and there is no good reason why they should be denied the privilege. MRS. A. H. C.

OBJECT LESSONS.

Editor The Georgian:

I enjoy reading The Georgian, especially the editorial page. A tell my friends that the last page of The Georgian is worth infinitely more than double the price of the paper. I save each last page and re-read them and read them to my young friends—the schoolboys. Hal Coffman's pictures are great sermons. Dorothy Dix is a sane and sensible writer. So is Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Drs. Serviss and White. The picture by Coffman showing an old sinner standing reared back in a bar drinking and telling what he used to be was a great object lesson.

COFFEE MAY NET DIXIE MILLIONS

Haphazard Experiment in Louisiana Arouses Government to Make Thorough Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—For many years it has been the belief of agriculturists and scientists that coffee can not be grown commercially in the United States, because it is essentially a tropical plant, and American farmers have given up hope of participating in this trementdously valuable crop.

Now, however, the result of a haphazard planting in Louisiana has awakened the interest of the Department of Agriculture, and it is predicted that if the claims made in this instance are confirmed, the day soon may come when the States of the South will be producing a large part of the coffee of the world.

In 1911, the United States imported 878,322,468 pounds of coffee, valued at $90,949,963, to supply the needs of the millions of coffee drinkers in this country. This great sum of money will go to the Southern States if it develops that the coffee grown in Louisiana is the genuine plant, and that it was not produced under exceptional circumstances.

The discovery that coffee can be grown in the United States is best told in the words of a letter to Senator Ransdell from Henri Julien, of Jeanerette, La. He says:

"One of my neighbors, a negro, purchased a pound of Rio coffee, and in the coffee were four seeds in the hull. He conceived the idea of planting these four seeds. Two grew and gave him two plants. This was two years ago. Last year, he made two rice sacks full of coffee. This year, he planted the contents of one of these sacks.

"He now has from this sack two rows two acres long of coffee plants. I have seen these coffee plants. They are growing to perfection and are abundantly laden with coffee.

"This negro planted at haphazard, without knowledge of the time for planting, and, as he had no knowledge of coffee cultivation, the cultivation also was haphazard. He even planted corn between his coffee plants.

"The established facts known to all here are that these coffee plants grow admirably and are overladen with coffee. This has caused me to inquire whether we should not undertake this culture. Personally, I should like to experiment with about two acres, planted in different kinds of coffee, and give same my serious personal attention."

WINS $14 000 PRIZE.

MOOSE JAW, SASK., July 15.—H. Johnson, formerly of Itasca County, Minnesota, obtained a $14,000 tract after waiting in front of the Land Office here for a month. During his wait torrential rains fell, and for many days there were others ahead of Johnson. Numerous fights occurred and the police had to interfere several times.

Johnson almost lost his prize in the last hour by going into the Land Office too soon and finding another man in his place when he returned.

The police, however, let him remain first.

SENATOR SMITH TO SPEAK.

Senator Hoke Smith will address a joint meeting of the Senate and House of Representatives Friday at noon.

The address is being looked forward to with interest, as Senator Smith is expected to touch upon the question of tax reform. This is the most important question to face any Georgia Legislature in many years, and is receiving more attention from the present General Assembly than any other matter.

ARMLESS MAN AUTO EXPERT.

DALLAS, TEXAS, July 15.—County Judge Quentin D. Corley, of Dallas County, the only armless county judge in Texas and possibly the only armless expert motorist in the world, left Dallas Sunday morning for a tour of South and Southwest Texas.

Judge Corley has applied different pieces of apparatus which enable him to drive his car with perfect ease.

GRASSHOPPERS POISONED.

DODGE CITY, KANS., July 15.—Farmers in Western Kansas have united in spreading tons of poisoned bran mash over fields in an effort to check the ravages of grasshoppers.

DETROIT, July 15.—As a result of a slight cut of his right hand, received in a baseball game July 14, Clarence Limberger is dead to-day of lockjaw.

WIDOW ACCUSED IN CRAWFORD WILL CASE

MRS. MARY BELLE CRAWFORD.

Witness Is Sought In Crawford Case

To prove Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford threatened to kill Joshua S. Crawford before she married him at St. Augustine, Fla., Colonel J. S. James ordered Tuesday morning a search in New York to locate a barber, Fred Lump, who is declared to have heard Mrs. Crawford make the alleged death threats.

Colonel James said Lump had already given valuable testimony by interrogatory, but that the heirs were especially anxious to have him come to Atlanta and testify in person. He will be one of the three witnesses to be presented to the Grand Jury when the prosecution seeks an indictment.

The other two witnesses will be the young woman who said she saw Mrs. Crawford administer something to Crawford from a small vial, and the other will be Dr. H. F. Harris, of the State Board of Health, who testified he found strong evidences of poison in Crawford's stomach.

CALLED HEALTH PERIL.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Warning to the public against the use of the automatic cigar cutter on the ground that it is an agency for the spread of disease was issued to-day by the United States Public Health Service.

The statement points out that many smokers, on purchasing a cigar and before clipping off the end, place it between their lips while paying for the purchase.

A subscription campaign by the Baron DeKalb Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, of Clarkston, Ga., for funds to erect a suitable memorial to the memory of Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, the gifted writer who was a member of the chapter, was instituted last week.

Contributions may be sent to Miss Catherine R. Dillon, regent, and Miss Lola Milner, corresponding secretary, No. 16 Barry street, Decatur, Ga.

Women Fight Duel; Shears as Weapons

OAKLAND, CAL., July 15.—In the seclusion of a flower garden and with an old grievance to settle two women fought a spectacular duel with shears in Oakland.

The duelists were Mrs. A. Hultz and her neighbor, Mrs. F. R. Ruley. As a result of their fight, Mrs. Hultz is in a critical condition in care of physicians, while her antagonist, less seriously hurt, is at the city prison.

DR. DELEMAR FREED.

HAMILTON, July 15.—Dr. James Delemar, who was given a preliminary trial before Justices Harry Stevens, R. Gip Robinson and Ben R Harris here on Monday, on the charge of attacking the wife of a prominent Harris County farmer, was discharged, there not being sufficient evidence introduced to hold him to Superior Court The trial was in progress the entire day and 97 witnesses were examined.

Dr. Delemar was given an ovation by friends.

THAT'S RIGHT.

CORYDON, IND., July 15.—Mrs. Samuel Ralston, wife of Indiana's Governor, believes a woman's place is at home. She announced that belief before the Indiana Democratic Editorial Association.

"Every editor likes a woman who can give him good fried chicken, nice hot biscuits and peach cobbler," said Mrs. Ralston. "No woman should be afraid of honest work. It is love in every man's home that counts."

Mrs. Ralston was the guest of the editors on their summer outing.

FAMOUS CAT STARVES.

PARIS, July 15.—Henri Rochefort's famous cat, Kroumir, that accompanied him everywhere, did not survive the death of his master long.

He refused to take food since the death of Mr. Rochefort on July 1, and died of grief, as supposed, at Aix-les-Bains this morning.

SLATON INSISTS ON A TAX LAW

Governor Likely to Recall Assembly if Reforms Are Not Made Before Adjournment.

Unless the Legislature, during its present session, enacts such tax reforms as the Governor thinks essential to the welfare and prosperity of the State, it is more than likely that it will be called immediately in extraordinary session, for the sole purpose of effecting those reforms.

The Governor has the authority to give affairs that direction if he thinks it necessary, and he may limit the General Assembly in his call to such measures as he chooses, and nothing else can be considered in a session so called.

The Governor himself has not uttered the threat of an extraordinary session, but some gentlemen close to him, and, in a way, authorized to speak for him, have let it be known that the possibility of an extra session has crossed the Executive mind more than once of late, and that failure upon the part of the Legislature to enact the tax reform the Governor holds absolutely necessary at this time more than likely will impel the Governor to the heroic remedy of an extra session.

That these semi-authoritative rumors and hints have had their effect upon the General Assembly is abundantly evidenced in the feverish activity lately manifested in some of the House committees.

House bill No. 1, by Mr. Cole, of Bartow, for instance, has been reported at last out of the Ways and Means Committee, and will go to the House at once with a favorable recommendation.

This bill, which has the hearty indorsement of the Governor, provides for an inheritance tax, and is expected to produce a large revenue to the State.

The Ways and Means Committee, in reporting the inheritance tax measure, combined the Cole bill with other inheritance tax measures introduced—one by Mr. Swift of Muscogee and another by Mr. Slater of Bryan—into one measure, embodying most of the Cole bill and some good features of the other two.

Nevertheless, although the present session is practically half over, it is significant that House Bill No. 1 not yet has been read a second time in the House.

This first revenue measure introduced must be followed by many others, if the Slaton program of tax reform is carried out in its entirety, and the Senate must have an opportunity to pass upon all revenue measures produced by the House. Revenue measures can not originate in the Senate.

CORROBORATES MINCEY STORY.

Further corroboration of several of the important details in the remarkable affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance agent and teacher, who swore he heard Jim Conley confess killing a girl, came Tuesday in a statement by E. F. Holloway, day watchman at the National Pencil factory.

Holloway substantiated in every particular the story of Mincey's visit to the factory the Tuesday following the crime, and recalled the general trend of the conversation, which was practically as Mincey related it in his signed statement published exclusively in The Georgian Monday. The defense has obtained an affidavit from Holloway as to the circumstances of the day.

GUESTS OF LADY ABERDEEN.

DUBLIN, July 15.—Lady Aberdeen, on the occasion of a brilliant reception for the American commission on agriculture, which is now in Ireland, entertained the visitors in her latest project.

She is establishing in Dublin in a fine old Georgian mansion the Welcome Club, for the reception of Irish visitors from America. At this club travelers register and are given information telling them how to make the most of the sojourn in Ireland.

BAN ON PEEKABOOS.

ROCHESTER, PA., July 15.—Following a meeting of the Council here, a resolution was reported which defines the mode of dress women can not wear. "Expose gowns" and slashed and tight skirts are barred.

Hose must not be transparent and a liberal exposure of the bosom and arms will not be tolerated.

GEORGIA MAN CONSUL.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The following presidential appointment was confirmed by the Senate to-day: Nathaniel B. Stewart, of Georgia, to be Consul at Milan, Italy.

The world of civilization was with the Balkans in their war. It was blazoned as almost a holy war—the war of the Christian nations against the Unspeakable and Heathen Turk—the last nemesis of civilization upon centuries of butchery and cycles of barbarity.

The crimson ghosts of Albania and Zeitoun—the holocausts of Christian martyrs incinerated in Turkish fires, the battalions of Christians butchered because they were Christians, the pictures of infants bayoneted before their mothers' eyes, and mothers murdered, with outrage preceding or following fast on murder—aroused the public protest of the Christian world.

Every voice in Christendom rang for Bulgaria and the Balkans. Every civilized prayer was theirs. The Georgian helped to lead and vocalize the great procession of American sentiment that bade godspeed to the Balkan soldiers of the Cross.

And their battle was magnificently won. All records of history were equalled if not surpassed on the battlefields of this modern and magnificent crusade.

Step by step the Unspeakable Turk was driven back from his battlefields of murder. Inch by inch the Crescent yielded to the Cross.

Bulgaria swept from Adrianople to Chatalja. Greek battleships blocked the transportation of Turkish troops and provisions of war. Servia marched from her own victorious battlefields to reinforce the Bulgarians in the crisis at Adrianople and Chatalja, and with the allied legions thundering at the despairing gates of Constantinople, Southwestern Europe passed from the Crescent to Christ, and a great new nation seemed to have been born from the Slavonic races to rewrite history and to shift the balance of power from the elder monarchies to the plains of Thrace—now consecrated to liberty and humanity.

It was an epoch in human history. It was an Armageddon rich in the righteous triumph of the right above the wrong. And in its glorious aftermath the annals of the Christian races should have been remade and amplified.

But almost in a night the scene has changed. The peace of London became the proclamation of a progressive savagery. The men who endured like martyrs and fought like lions could not win like men, but quarreled like jackals over the spoils of victory.

Bulgaria, first in battle, was foremost in her greed, and her crimson hands, wet with heathen blood, and presuming on their strength, reached out to grasp the throats of Christian allies and to seize the territory that Greece and Servia had helped like heroes to achieve. Friends fastened their fangs into each other's vitals with a ferocity fiercer than they had shown their common foe.

The Balkan armies seem to have become as barbarous as the Turks.

Their hatred for the Turk was as nothing to their hatred for each other.

The hideous greed of territory blinded their eyes to every sentiment of Christianity and to every creed of Christ.

They caught from the Turk his bloodiest butcheries and branded them upon their fratricidal strife. The Bulgars at Kilkiss and Kurkut burned alive seven hundred men before their tortured wives with as fine a savagery as ever brutalized the Turk. The Serb at Belgrade shouted jeers and hisses into the dying ears of Bulgarian prisoners, brought from the battle fronts, and hand to hand with fist and foot, with tooth and nail, like primeval savages, fought Bulgar and Serb, who had carried the Cross of Christ in triumph above the infidel and Unspeakable Turk.

The Balkan fortnight behind us is an outrage upon the whole Christian world. These lapsed Christians, these transformed savages of greed, have within ten days lost the sympathy of humanity and their place among civilized nations. They have struck a staggering blow at the faith they followed and their religion and ours they have defiled.

The nations that cried godspeed to the Balkan armies of yesterday are ready now to cry, "Down with the newborn butchers of the Danube," and the world is ready to approve and applaud Austria or any other power that will repossess the territory so unworthily held and proceed to govern the people so obviously incapable and so basely unequal to the task of governing themselves.

SENATE MEMBERSHIP SHOULD BE INCREASED

The constitutional amendment proposing an increased membership in the Georgia Senate ought to pass the General Assembly and be sent to the people for ratification.

Not only would it be wise immediately to increase the membership of the Senate from 44 to 60, but it would be a most excellent idea to provide for the Senate's further increase in membership, as the necessity for the same might arise.

As the Georgia Senate is now constituted and assembled, it can not be made the effective body it should be.

The legislative power and influence of individual Senators is out of all proportion to the legislative power and influence of individual Representatives, notwithstanding the fact that individual Representatives, under Georgia's foolish rotation system of electing Senators, are more than apt to be the more experienced and genuinely statesmanlike individuals of the two.

While it is true that seniority of continuous service in legislative bodies should confer upon members no extraordinary and unusual rights, it nevertheless also is true that seniority of service does increase progressively the usefulness of members of the right sort, by reason of their always broadening experience.

In Georgia, however, a Senator, no matter how apparent his usefulness may be, under the rotation system in vogue is put out of the Senate after he has served one term, and can not hope to get back until his county's time comes round again. Sometimes it comes round in six years, and sometimes it comes round in twelve.

The consequence is that, while individual members of usefulness in the House may serve continuously from term to term, the State has an absolutely new Senate on its hands every time the Legislature assembles!

It is not surprising, therefore, that the House of Representatives in Georgia usually is a stronger body than the Senate, notwithstanding the greater power and influence upon legislation of individual Senators.

There are several counties in Georgia that should be made Senatorial districts within themselves. And there are many Senatorial districts that should be cut down sharply.

In addition to that, when the State has been redistricted, the rotation system of electing Senators should be abolished.

If these reforms are effected, the result will be a greater and much more useful Senate.

The bill now pending, proposing as it does a redistricting of the State and an increase in Senatorial membership, is a step in exactly the right direction. It has been favorably recommended to the Senate, and it is to be hoped that it may pass.

It is really constructive legislation, and to be most highly commended to the General Assembly's attention and earnest consideration.

:=: Catherine of Russia :=:

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

CATHERINE II, the "Semiramis of the North," came to the throne 151 years ago.

Catherine, daughter of the Prince of Anhalt, was born at Stettin in 1729. She had a hard time of it in her childhood, her mother being as mean to her as Frederick the Great's father was to him. At 16 she was married against her will to Peter, Duke of Holstein. Peter was a big, strapping animal of a fellow, but a degree or two above idiocy. He passed most of his time flirting with low women and playing with dogs and rats.

This fact explains, though it does not justify, Catherine's various little flirtations on her own hook.

By the death of Elizabeth, the semi-idiotic dog fancier became Czar in 1762, but he was almost immediately set aside in favor of Catherine. So far as intellect and will power went the Princess of Anhalt was well qualified for the big place that came to her. She was well read in history, philosophy and literature; had absorbed, in fact, most of the knowledge of her time, and was mentally able to fill any throne on earth. She proved to be a great sovereign, as sovereigns went in those days. She made Russia powerful, and was in many ways a worthy successor to Peter the Great.

But the magnificence of her court the marvelous extent of her dominions, her foreign conquests and the imposing position she held among the "Majesties" of the world, could not hide the fact that at heart she cared but little for the Russian people, and did but little for the promotion of their political, social and economic advancement.

Catherine demonstrated to perfection the fact—at that time somewhat in dispute—that a woman could fill a throne as well as a man, but she also proved that the woman sovereign can be as cruelly unjust as the man sovereign; for was not Catherine one of the leading spirits in the Partition of Poland, the "foulest deed in the history of the world?"

HIS CAREER

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

JOHN SMITH was a baby so cunning and bright
That his parents stood gaping from morning till night,
When crowing and chuckling, as most babies will,
He was thought to possess a comedian's skill.
When quiet and weary, perhaps half asleep,
"My word," said his parents, "that baby is deep!

We'll make him a teacher,
The dear little joker,
Or maybe a preacher
Or lawyer or broker."

John Smith went through college ahead of his friends.
And started with fervor to rough-hew his ends.
His efforts, however, all seemed to fall flat,
For he fizzled at this and he foozled at that.
He was kicked out so often by taskmasters mean
That he looked like the film in a picture machine.

Some people are teachers
And doctors and lawyers
And brokers and preachers
That ought to be sawyers.

DECLARES SUGAR INTERESTS TRIED TO USE THE FARMERS

WASHINGTON, July 9.—That the sugar interests attempted to induce the Southern farmers unions to pull their chestnuts out of the fire in the matter of securing a duty on sugar, was the charge to-day of I. A. Smith, of Tennille, Ga., president of the Georgia Farmers' Union, before the Overman lobby investigating committee.

Smith described a meeting called in New Orleans by J. D. Bowen, of Texas, in which sugar men monopolized the meeting, named the committees and attempted to give an impression that the farmers' unions of the South were back of the demand for high duties on sugar and cotton manufactures. The meeting was called ostensibly to aid "the greater consumption of cotton."

Smith said Bowen paid Smith's expenses. The witness declared he wrote letters to Senator Bacon and Senator Hoke Smith, charging them to stay out of the Democratic caucus on the cotton tariff.

"It appeared there were more men there outside the farmers union than members," said Smith, speaking of the New Orleans meeting. He asserted he was a low tariff advocate and that when he heard D. V. Callcock and other sugar men advocate high tariff rates he decided he was with the wrong crowd. Smith declared that cotton manufacturers wanted the farmers' unions to fight their battles and he resented this.

Senator Overman read a newspaper statement that Smith approved of what was done at the New Orleans meeting. Smith denied this.

"When I got home I found out that I had been mixed up in a bad crowd," said Smith. "Bowen deceived me and was there in the interests of sugar men instead of cotton growers."

H. S. Mobley, of Prairie Grove, Ark., president of the Arkansas Farmers' Union, told the committee he was invited by J. D. Bowen to attend this same meeting at Bowen's expense. Mobley stated facts similar to those related by I. A. Smith.

"The New Orleans meeting has been generally condemned by Farmers' Unions as a fake meeting?" asked Senator Overman.

"Yes," replied Mobley.

William Whitman, of Brookland, Mass., director in a dozen textile factories at Lawrence and New Bedford, Mass., Calhoun, S. C., and Pawtucket, R. I., which produce silk, cotton and woolen yarns and cloths, and which have a combined capacity of $20,000,000, was next called in company with Thomas A. Marvin and Winthrop L. Marvin, of Boston, to testify regarding the wool lobby.

Whitman said his factories had been unable to run full time largely because of market conditions and not because of labor difficulties. Witness was one of the most aggressive factory owners during the famous Lawrence strike, which began in one of his mills. He said the market had been bad since 1909, but is worse today than ever before. Whitman said, however, yearly increases in the capacity of the plants had been made.

Thirty aDay for Calls.

A. D. Baldwin, Cleveland, Ohio, the first witness to-day, is an attorney with sugar interests in Hawaii and represents Alexander & Baldwin, of New York and Honolulu. His salary is $30 a day while in Washington.

"I don't think I earn it," said Baldwin, who declared his activities had been limited to calling on about twenty Senators.

He said all of the cane sugar interests made common cause of their demands for a duty on sugar.

GOVERNOR NOMINATES.

Governor Slaton Wednesday transmitted to the Senate his first batch of recommendations for appointments, the list including several judgeships, solicitor appointments and university and college trusteeships.

The list reads:

W. L. Phillips, Judge of the City Court of Louisville.

John R. Phillips, Solicitor of the City Court of Louisville.

Hon. J. G. Cranford, Judge of the City Court of Valdosta for four years.

James M. Johnson, Solicitor of the City Court of Valdosta.

Hamilton McWhorter, Jr., Solicitor of the City Court of Lexington.

W. A. Post, Judge of the City Court of Newnan.

W. L. Stallings, Solicitor of the City Court of Newnan.

Hamilton McWhorter of Athens, trustee of the University of Georgia.

Samuel B. Adams of Savannah, trustee of the University of Georgia.

Byron B. Bower of Bainbridge, trustee of the University of Georgia.

J. E. Hays of Montezuma, trustee of the University of Georgia.

J. J. Connor of Cartersville, trustee of the State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts.

HOUSE FAVORS WOMEN.

Representative John Y. Smith of Fulton succeeded Wednesday in getting up his House resolution to permit the use of the Hall of Representatives to the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association Wednesday night and Thursday night, and it was passed in its regular order by a viva voce vote without a dissenting voice.

Thus ended one of the most interesting and spectacular fights ever waged inside the big State Capitol.

The Senate stood by its guns, however, and even after the House had extended the use of its hall to the suffragists, declined the invitation of the women to attend their sessions, by laying the invitation on the table without action.

TEN ONE-LEGGED MEN.

EDWARDSVILLE, ILL., July 9.—Ten one-legged men appeared in court here when the case of Walter Taylor against the Commonwealth Steel Company was called.

Taylor seeks damages for the loss of a leg. The witnesses were in court to testify that a man crippled as Taylor is can find employment.

WHIPPING MAN WORTH $10.50 FINE, SHE SAYS

MRS. J. J. LEE.

Woman Thanks Judge for Light Penalty—Considers Herself Vindicated.

Mrs. J. J. Lee, who was fined $10.50 in police court Tuesday afternoon for horsewhipping T. D. Thompson, whom she accuses of slandering her, says she got her money's worth in the feeling that she had protected, to the best of her ability, her good name.

"It surely was worth $10.50 to thrash that man Thompson," she said Wednesday morning. "I went to court prepared to pay $50, and I thank Judge Broyles for letting me off with so small a fine. If I had had the money, I would have been willing to pay $500 for the satisfied feeling I now have."

PLAN TO BAR BOLL WEEVIL FROM STATES OF THE SOUTH

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Plans for barring the boll weevil from Georgia, most of Alabama, Florida, South Carolina and North Carolina and saving the cotton growers millions of dollars a year are being drafted by Senator Smith, of South Carolina, with the tentative approval of Secretary of Agriculture Houston.

The weevil has already swept over Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas, and is moving eastward into Alabama.

Senator Smith's plan is for the Federal Government, with State co-operation, to prohibit the growing of cotton in a belt which would separate the Atlantic Coast States from the Southwestern States.

As the boll weevil migrates only from cotton field to cotton field, the Senator believes this belt would save the States to the east of it from the pest.

700 GREEKS ARE BURNED BY BULGAR "IRREGULARS"

ATHENS, July 9.—The Dowager Queen of Greece, mother of King Constantine, left to-day for Salonika on a transport to help nurse the wounded Greeks in the military hospital there.

Many society women are volunteering to go to the front to act as nurses on the battlefield.

Princess Helene has given away half of her jewels to secure medical supplies for the Greeks.

Five priests of the Greek Catholic Church and the Metropolitan of Lahona were executed by Bulgarian soldiers on their retreat across the Struma River, before the advance of King Constantine's army, it was reported to-day in war dispatches from Salonika.

This followed the report that 700 Greeks were burned in a mosque near Kilkish by Bulgarian "irregulars."

BARRETT AND RHODES TALK TO FARMERS AT SYLVANIA

SYLVANIA, July 9.—Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and L. M. Rhodes, State President of Tennessee and chairman of the national board of directors of the union, are stirring the farmers of Georgia as they have never been stirred before in recent years.

Sylvania, the heart of Screven County, was alive with farmers, their wives, their sons and their daughters Tuesday to hear Barrett and Rhodes tell of the future of the farmers of Screven County and the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America.

It did not require the presence of Barrett and Rhodes to awaken interest in the Farmers' Union in Screven County, as the farmers appear to be fully alive to the advantages of the organization.

The farmers of Georgia believe in Charlie Barrett and love him. He is one of them. No Governor ever met with a greater reception than did Barrett on his arrival in Sylvania. Crowds were gathered at the station when the train arrived, and the march to the hotel was impeded the entire distance by rugged, honest, good old farmers who were determined to meet and shake hands with their president.

After the masterful address of Chairman Rhodes he was next in popularity to President Barrett. A big, whole-souled farmer, talking to brother farmers, Rhodes hit true to the spot with every word—and he is an orator, too. For more than an hour he fired volleys of truths and advice to the farmers that won them every one.

President H. C. Evans and Secretary D. B. Newton, of the Screven County Union, were about the busiest pair in Sylvania in many moons. But they are rejoicing in the fact that their union and Screven County are receiving praises from the national president and the chairman of the national board of directors on the splendid work they have done.

The impression prevails in Sylvania to-day that after this rally there will not be a half dozen farmers in Screven County out of the union in a month.

ORDERS REPORT CHANGED.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—Precedents were rudely overturned in the United States District Court here today when the retiring Federal Grand Jury's report regarding the Caminetti-Diggs white slave case, rejected by the court, was published in the San Francisco newspapers.

The report contained comments upon the case displeasing to the court and Judge VanFleet ordered the report changed. It was changed and the altered report was filed, but the members of the Grand Jury handed copies of the paragraphs to which the court objected to the newspapers.

The Grand Jury called the action of Attorney General McReynolds in ordering a delay in the trials of the two young men charged with taking two young girls into another State for immoral purposes "unfortunately weak."

The rejected part of the report stated that the Grand Jury viewed President Wilson's action in the case "with sadness and regret.'

FINDS WIFE MARRIED.

ANDERSON, IND., July 9.—After having been mourned as dead by his family for many years, Mark McCandliss, who mysteriously disappeared from this city twelve years ago, suddenly returned, and, like Enoch Arden, found his wife married to another.

McCandliss appeared at the home of his wife's mother, Mrs. Martha Hackenberg, 1612 Halford Street. As it happened his two children, Marie and Dan McCandliss, were both at the home of their grandmother. Mrs. Hackenberg at once recognized her former son-in-law and pointed out his two children, who are now almost grown.

McCandliss said he had very little recollection of having left Anderson, and that for the last twelve years he had wandered all through the United States.

MONEY CROP OF TEXAS.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS, July 9.—Peter Radford, president of the Texas Farmers' Union, in a public statement says:

"In Texas cotton is the money crop, and the problem of marketing it intelligently has absorbed the attention of the leaders of economic thought for half a century. The crop is ofttimes mortgaged, and debt is such a hard taskmaster that the farmer, in order to escape it, rushes to the market with his products and down goes the price.

"To relieve the pressure the bankers are advancing the farmers $35 a bale at 6 per cent, payable when the cotton is sold. The title to the cotton rests with the farmer and he can sell when he pleases, and there is no longer occasion for disposing of his crop on a weak or glutted market.

TINY SOCIETY GIRL TO WED.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Miss Lucinda Pennebaker, the "midget" of Washington society, as her friends call her, because she is so tiny, surprised them to-day by announcing her marriage yesterday to Elbert Johnson, a young lawyer.

Miss Pennebaker sprang into social fame when a debutante through the dainty minuet she danced for President Taft at a Southern relief ball. She was a leader of the Southern circle.

POISON THEORY INJECTED INTO WILL CONTEST CASE

A positive statement from Dr. F. H. Harris, of the State Board of Health, that Joshua Crawford died of morphine poisoning instead of pneumonia, the announced cause of his death by the attending physician, Dr. J. W. Hurt, was the sensational development in the Crawford $250,000 will case Thursday.

Dr. Harris was called to the stand at noon. Attorney Reuben Arnold, for Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the widow, to whom all the estate was left, pinned him to the assertion.

For the first time in his career, he said, he deviated from his custom of merely mentioning possibilities or probabilities.

"There was absolutely no trace of pneumonia or any disease of the lungs," said Dr. Harris. "Morphine poisoning very likely produced death."

Dr. Harris was on the stand for very nearly an hour, but his statement was unshaken.

No announcement would be made by the attorneys for the heirs-at-law, who number more than thirty, but it was confidently understood they would not rest the case with the introduction of Dr. Harris, but would have other experts, and probably members of the family to take the stand in an effort to substantiate the evidence of Dr. Harris.

Attorney Arnold stated that the evidence of Dr. Harris would be torn to pieces when he put Dr. J. W. Hurt on the stand to tell of administering morphine and opium to Crawford in an effort to stop the violent fits of coughing and near congestion of the lungs, with which he suffered in the last month of his life.

He intimated also that he would introduce experts to prove that the quantities of opium and morphine found in Crawford's stomach by Dr. Harris were not sufficient to produce death, nor more than a normal dose administered by the average physician.

Mrs. Crawford, the widow, was not in the courtroom Wednesday when the poison theory was advanced by Dr. Harris, and it was doubtful whether she would attend the hearing Thursday.

Heirs-at-law to the estate and their friends attended in large numbers, and despite the fact it is a strictly civil procedure and no court official is presiding, it had all the appearance and interest of a sensational criminal trial.

CONFER ON RULES.

Representatives of all the important railroads in the Southeast conferred with cotton exporters, compressors and buyers at the Ansley Hotel Thursday morning on the new rules of the steamship companies governing exportation of cotton.

The steamship companies have announced that they will make notations of any damage on the through bills of lading. This, the banks say, makes the bills not negotiable. The railroads also fear that claims for damage will be made against them in such instances, and in such event they will be obliged to make the same notations on their bills at the interior points where the shipments originate.

Whether to do this or refuse to issue through bills of lading is the question which is of vital importance to the movement of cotton this season.

NOT EVEN A SMILE.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Andrew P. Talmadge, of Washington, last summer jumped overboard, clothes and all, and rescued a young woman after she had gone down the second time. In the rescue he was obliged to put his arm about her. She gave him an awful glare, but he attributes it to excitement.

To-day he met the young woman on the street, and instead of beaming a smile of gratitude, she turned her head haughtily and did not speak.

SHE'LL ADOPT CHILD.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—"Christie," the baby that Representative Borland, of Missouri, adopted in Kansas City without notifying his wife, who suddenly found herself with a child with the measles on her hands, returned to Kansas City to-day with Mrs. Borland.

The latter has decided to officially adopt her little sister, Jessie, four and a half years old, who also was brought home by the Congressman.

CONFESSES TO KILLING.

ANDERSON, IND., July 10.—William Brown, Jr., 27, of Ingalls, Ind., to-day confessed he killed Constable Albert Hawkins, of this city, who was found dead on the sidewalk in Ingalls last night with his throat slashed and his jaw crushed.

A charge of murder has been placed against young Brown. He claims he committed the deed in self-defense, using a pocketknife when Hawkins threatened him with arrest.

FOR SEX HYGIENE.

CHICAGO, July 10.—Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of Chicago's public schools, to-day was given credit for a signal victory by the advocates of sex hygiene study in schools.

The Board of Education adopted a resolution providing for a thorough course in "personal purity" to be inaugurated at the beginning of the next school year.

WHAT FLIES COST.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Figured out in money, to say nothing of the loss in human life, the cost to the United States annually of supporting its fly population amounts to $157,800,000, say Government experts who have been making a study of the results of the germ-spreading activities of these insects.

It is estimated that the fly is responsible for an expenditure of $50,000,000 for the handling of tuberculosis cases, attributable to germs spread by the pests, while $70,000,000 represents the cost of typhoid fever cases originating in the same way.

WISDOM PUTS JOY IN GEORGIA LEGISLATURE

Louis E. Wisdom, of Forsyth.

Next to Youngest Member, Though, Lives Every Inch Up to His Name.

If one just a little younger member of the Georgia Legislature had not beaten Louis E. Wisdom of Forsyth to it, Wisdom would be the "baby" of the House this year. He's slightly more than 22.

While Wisdom is only next to the youngest member, he really looks the part of the House "baby" more surely than anybody else, and generally he gets credit for being the juvenile cut-up, anyway.

If it be true that a real smile gets one further in politics than most anything, Wisdom of Forsyth some day will be President of these United States.

His smile is of the triple-expansion, all-wool-and-several-yards-wide guaranteed under the pure food and drugs act, seraphic, beatific and altogether ecstatic variety—and always is warranted not to come off!

When Wisdom smiles—which most generally he does—rainbows festoon the horizon, optimism runs amuck, and one can plainly hear the music of the spheres!

He emphatically and beyond dispute is the joy of the House of Representatives.

And Wisdom can do more than smile. He is chairman of the big Committee on Special Judiciary and is a worker always on the job. In his home county of Forsyth he is regarded as one of the genuinely substantial young men of the community and already has made a fine reputation as an attorney at law.

GARRISON PLANS TO MAKE U. S. ARMY MORE EFFICIENT

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The most radical and dramatic move in army administration since Elihu Root reorganized it a decade ago has been determined by Secretary of War Garrison. He intends to fight Congress on the question of maintaining 100 or more "absolutely useless" army posts in the interior.

He intends to withdraw troops from at least 75 per cent of them in the interest of economy and efficiency, and next Wednesday will start on a five weeks' tour of the posts to crystallize the details of the policy he announced to-day.

Secretary Garrison is disgusted with the "wasteful and extravagant way in which the army is being conducted," and lays it all to the system of maintaining army posts as part of the "pork barrel" into which every member of Congress dips his fingers. There are at present 157 posts in the country, an average of one post to every 250 soldiers in the army. Every State is represented.

DOCTOR'S WIFE CONFESSES THAT SHE WAS A FIREBUG

LIVERPOOL, July 10.—A remarkable confession of a dual life, which in some respects equals "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, was made here to-day by a woman. Mrs. Edith Rigby, wife of a rich and prominent doctor, admitted to the police that she has been a member of militant suffrage arson squad for six months without her husband's knowledge.

Every night she would slip from her home and set fire to buildings, plant bombs or send threatening letters to those opposing the cause. She told the police that she had caused at least $200,000 damage through her own executions.

Her husband opposes suffrage and she had to carry on her campaign of vandalism clandestinely. By day she appeared a gentle, dutiful wife, with no thought of "votes for women." But at night she went forth with violence in her heart. She was arrested.

In her excitement the woman became hysterical and bitterly denounced the government.

65,000 MEN MEET DEATH IN BATTLES IN BALKANS

VIENNA, July 10.—According to estimates compiled here to-day from official and unofficial dispatches from the Balkans, at least 65,000 men have been killed in the fighting between Bulgarians on one side and Servians, Greeks and Montenegrins on the other.

It is a certainty, however, that these figures are exaggerated, as the Servian and Greek losses have invariably come from Bulgarian sources, while estimates of Bulgarian casualties have emanated from Athens, Uskub or Belgrade.

GREAT BATTLE RAGING.

SOFIA, July 10.—Another desperate battle with enormous losses of life on both sides is raging north of Kotchana between Bulgars and Serbs who attempted to cross the border into Bulgaria.

The Servians had a double object—first, to march upon the Bulgarian capital; second, to get behind the Bulgarian lines and cut off the retreat of the two southern divisions to Kustendil, the Bulgarian base of operations.

According to official advices from the front, the battle is being fought between Kotchana and Egri Palanka, along a small river. It is estimated that about 75,000 men are engaged The battle lines are stretched over an area of ten miles.

Both sides are supported by artillery. The Servians also have a heavy force of cavalry. Bulgarian reinforcements have been sent over the Sofia-Uskub Railroad.

WANTS ECONOMY.

Governor Slaton again made it plain in an after-dinner address at the Capital City Club Wednesday night that he will insist upon rigid economy in the Legislature until Georgia's present systems of finance and taxation are radically reformed.

Chairman Crawford Wheatley, of the House Appropriations Committee, was host. The dinner was given in honor of the House committee and the Executive. It was informal, and was given for the purpose of getting the committee and the Governor in close and intimate touch.

The Governor pointed out that the estimated deficit in the State treasury now, based upon appropriations made by the last Legislature, amounts to the amazing sum of $776,170.

FARMERS ARE ORGANIZING.

MILLEN, July 10.—That the farmers of Georgia are rallying to the standard of the Farmers' Union as never before is demonstrated at every meeting at which President C. S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, State president of Tennessee, are the principal speakers.

At Sylvania Tuesday two new unions were organized. Many names were added to the rolls of the old unions.

At Millen, the county seat of Jenkins, there was a large gathering in the beautiful new courthouse Wednesday.

PRAISE FOR WILSON.

LONDON, July 10.—Colonel T. N. House, the intimate friend of President Wilson, at whose home in New York the President generally stays on his visits to the metropolis, is sailing to-morrow on the Latonia for Boston. In a talk with the representative of the Hearst papers he said:

"President Wilson has achieved and even exceeded the high expectations of his friends. Before his term of office is over it is certain he will have left his mark on history."

REMEDY FOR DIVORCE EVIL.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 10.—"Cooling periods" three months from the finish of the trial to give remorse a chance to work and bring about a reconciliation were advocated to-day by Rev. J. Leonard Levy, of Pittsburg, as a remedy for the divorce evil.

Dr. Levy said in a paper read before the Conference of American Rabbis that Rabbis should demand two weeks' notice from those who wanted to be married so as to investigate their records.

PRAISE FOR M'NAB.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—Although Judge Vanfleet, of the United States District Court, on Tuesday removed the "stinger" from the Federal rGand Jury's report, in which President Wilson and Attorney General McReynolds were criticised for their part in the Diggs-Caminetti affair, he permitted some praise for John L. McNab to stand in the amended report.

"Mr. McNab is of the type needed in positions of public trust, and the Department of Justice has lost one of its best officials," the report reads.

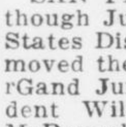
TORE UP LICENSE.

WEBSTER, MASS., July 10.—As the bride and bridegroom, Michael Narel and Julia Marcik, were proceeding down the aisle of the altar in St. Joseph's Church here, William Dorobis, of Chicago, drew forth a marriage license, which he had procured six weeks ago to wed Miss Marcik.

He tore it to shreds and scattered it on the floor in front of the couple.

MAN HEAT MADDENED.

MOBILE, July 10.—Heat maddened, Henrico Selana, a fireman on the British steamship Glenbridge, which came into port to-day, plunged overboard just outside Havana Harbor and was drowned.



DROPSY TREATED. Quick relief, swelling, short breath soon removed, often entire relief in 15 to 25 days. Trial treatment sent FREE. Write Dr. H. H. Green's Sons, Box B, Atlanta, Ga.

NEWS OF FRIDAY, JULY 11, 1913

SPEAKER CLARK MAKES DENIAL BEFORE PROBERS

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Speaker Champ Clark appeared before the Lobby Committee of the Senate to-day and made a denial that he ever knew or had anything to do with J. Pierpont Morgan, Lewis Cass Ledyard, Edward Lauterbach or David Lamar. The Speaker's declaration was in answer to the Lamar-Lauterbach testimony before the committee, although Lamar finally admitted he never saw Speaker Clark and never had any direct communication with him.

It was the intention of the committee to call Colonel Martin W. Mulhall, but this action was delayed by lengthy testimony given by W. L. Whitman, of Boston, a wool manufacturer. Whitman testified, among other things, that Simon N. D. North, former Director of the Census, was on the pay roll of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers while he was chief statistician of the Census Bureau and while he was clerk of the Senate Finance Committee.

He was clerk of this committee while the Dingley tariff bill was under consideration. Whitman said North received $4,000 a year from the association up to the time he became Director of the Census.

"Ledyard says that Lauterbach told him that he was in communication with me through Senator Stone," said Speaker Clark. "Lauterbach, who acknowledged that he lied, said that Lamar gave him the information. Lamar confessed that the whole tale was a lie to force Morgan & Co. to take Lauterbach back into their employ. All of them disclaimed any acquaintance or communication with me.

"Senator Stone justly and promptly characterized the Lamar-Lauterbach tale a lie, in which he was entirely correct. He and I never in our lives conversed about or in any way mentioned to each other Morgan & Co. nor the Steel Trust investigation.

"I never spoke to John Pierpont Morgan or any member of his firm in my life; never communicated with him or them in any manner whatsoever; never authorized anybody else to do so.

"I was, to my best knowledge and belief, never introduced, even casually, to him or to any of them. To my best knowledge and belief, I never saw any of them except Mr. Morgan himself, and that was across the large dining room of the New Willard at a Gridiron Club banquet.

"I was introduced to Lauterbach here in Washington several years ago in the presence of several gentlemen and passed the usual salutations with him. That was all. I never saw him before or since, and never communicated with him in any manner whatsoever nor about any business matter whatsoever.

"I never had heard of Lamar and knew only by seeing his name in the papers that there was such a man as Lewis Cass Ledyard. It seems to me that when Mr. Ledyard found out that Senator Stone's name and my name were being bandied about by Lamar, the pseudo Palmer, and Lauterbach he ought to have let me know."

HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

CORNISH, N. H., July 11.—President Wilson had a narrow escape from a serious accident on the return trip from Hanover to-day when his automobile skidded on the newly oiled road and came near crashing into a rail fence.

Robinson, the White House chauffeur, threw on the emergency brakes and stopped the heavy machine just in time to prevent injury to the car or to the President.

The President's automobile attempted to turn aside to allow a heavy dray to pass. The skid chains failed to catch in the oil and the car swung around until it came within a foot of the fence by the side of the road.

The President was thrown slightly to one side of the car, but managed to retain his seat.

NEGRO IS HANGED.

Exactly one year to the very day and hour after the death of his victim, Oscar Dewberry, the negro convicted of stabbing 15-year-old Horace Dodson on Decatur Street, May 27, 1912, expiated his crime on the gallows in the county prison Friday morning. The trap was sprung by Deputy Sheriff John Owens at 11:05 o'clock and the negro was pronounced dead 25 minutes later.

Dewberry confessed his guilt to Sheriff Mangum at 9:30 o'clock Friday morning and later dictated a written confession to the Rev. H. H. Proctor. He said he stabbed young Dodson after Dodson and some other boys had brushed against him.

The negro professed religion and prayed fervently just before he was led to the gallows.

ATTORNEY FOUND DEAD.

BIRMINGHAM, July 11.—The body of James Alexander, an attorney of Ensley, was found in the woods between Ensley and Wylam to-day. Alexander, who was 55 years old, went to Fairfield to attend court on Wednesday. On his return he started to walk to his home, two miles away. It is believed he was stricken with apoplexy and dropped dead in the woods.

Searching parties spent a day and night looking for him.

SENDS RAKE TO WILSON.

WINSTED, CONN., July 11.—Following a custom inaugurated by his grandfather, who presented to Abraham Lincoln a hay rake, Marshall W. Stedman, a rake maker, of Tyringham, Mass., has sent a rake with 40 teeth, the whole handsomely grained and varnished, to President Wilson.

President Wilson's rake is smaller than the one which Stedman sent to President Taft.

LEGISLATOR PROUD OF HIS LIKENESS TO BRYAN

SAM L. OLIVE.

Can't Bring Himself, Though, to Appreciation of Commoner's Kind of Highballs.

Representative Samuel L. Olive of Richmond is kept mighty busy most of his time nowadays looking like William Jennings Bryan. Generally he makes a first-class job of it.

Not only does Mr. Olive look the part of the Peerless Leader, but he acts it in numerous ways, particularly in speaking.

Olive, admittedly, is the very best orator in the House.

In one way, though, Mr. Olive fears he never shall come to be entirely like the Peerless—for the life of him, the gentleman from Richmond is unable to make grape juice the paramount liquid issue with himself!

Olive is the one man in the House who can overcome the wretched acoustic properties so completely as to make himself heard in every nook and corner when speaking.

CORONER'S JURY ASKS THE ARREST OF WIDOW

A warrant against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, widow of J. B. Crawford, on the charge of murdering her husband by giving him poison, was issued late Friday afternoon, signed by the Coroner of Carroll County and returnable to the Fulton Country Grand Jury.

The verdict of the Coroner's jury, which was read at Friday morning's hearing of the famous will case before J. N. Anderson, auditor, recommended that she be arrested and held for a Grand Jury investigation.

The verdict was:

We, the jury, find that the deceased came to his death from poison administered by Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, and recommend that she be held for investigation by the Fulton Grand Jury.

The inquest was held Thursday in Carrollton. It was an adjourned session of the first inquest on June 12, when the body was exhumed. Dr. H. F. Harris, of the State Board of Health, and Miss Viola Whitman, a woman who lived with the Crawfords after the marriage, were the witnesses.

Dr. Harris testified to finding morphine in the stomach, and that in his opinion Crawford did not die of pneumonia or any disease of the lungs.

Miss Whitman testified to seeing Mrs. Crawford give her husband medicine from a small vial.

FOREST FIRE UNDER CONTROL.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 11.—The forest fire that has been menacing several towns on Mount Tamalpa is under control. Muir Woods, California's most noted natural beauty spot, is safe.

ALL EUROPE IS STIRRED BY NEW WAR IN BALKANS

LONDON, July 11.—Intense anxiety has been caused in diplomatic circles of the European capitals by the action of Roumania in declaring war on Bulgaria. The dispute between the two countries dates back to the end of the war between Turkey and the "allies," when Bulgaria refused to give up territory demanded by Roumania as a price of the latter's neutrality.

Roumania is believed to have nearly half a million men under arms, although some of these have not been concentrated.

The powers will take concerted action, it is believed, to put an end to Bulgarian-Roumanian hostilities before they become general. Czar Ferdinand is anxious for peace for the campaign against Servia, and Greece has been disastrous to the Bulgarian nation.

Belief existed in diplomatic quarters that Bulgaria will not offer any armed resistance against Roumania unless it becomes absolutely neces-

ATTACKS HOKE SMITH.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Following the confirmation of Mrs. H. W. J. Ham's appointment as postmaster at Gainesville, Thomas M. Bell, Representative from the Ninth District, has made a statement bitterly criticising Senator Hoke Smith for the defeat of A. S. Hardy. He openly charges that the defeat of the man he recommended for the place is directly the result of intense feeling against anti-Smith men.

Mrs. Ham succeeds Mrs. Helen D. Longstreet, who lost her position, it is said, through her activities for Roosevelt in the last presidential campaign.

ROYAL CARRIAGE ATTACKED; MANY PERSONS INJURED

LIVERPOOL, July 11.—Many persons were hurt here to-day in street fighting between men and women which followed an attempt by militant suffragettes to attack the carriage in which King George and Queen Mary were driving through the city.

The attack followed a wild scene in Lord Street when Miss Jolly, secretary of the Liverpool branch of the Women's Social and Political Union, made a lone raid, smashing hundreds of dollars' worth of plate-glass windows.

The local militant leaders had laid plans for the biggest suffrage demonstration Liverpool has ever seen, because of the presence here to-day of the King and Queen, who are making a tour of England.

Extraordinary police precautions had been taken to guard their majesties from attack, as it was feared that the militants, who have been unusually active here of late, would attempt to interfere with the progress of the royal party and perhaps commit actual assault.

Soldiers co-operated with police and detectives in policing the streets and in protecting the King and Queen from the crowds.

Just before the royal party turned into Lord Street Miss Jolly appeared, dashing into the crowd of spectators, and brandishing a poker above her head, she scattered them right and left. Screaming denunciations of the Government, she sent her weapon crashing into the plate-glass windows, doing hundreds of dollars' worth of damage.

Several policemen overpowered her while she struggled with maniacal fury. She was locked up. This incident alarmed the authorities, for it served as a clew that the women planned an active day.

Half an hour later the attack upon the royal carriage occurred. From a break in the police lines several women ran into the street. They hurled a quantity of suffrage literature into the carriage and one of them seized the door and tried to wrench it open. Another ran toward the horses' heads to stop them.

An equerry leaped to the street and grappled with one of the women, and in an instant the others were seized by policemen. In the meantime, however, supporters of the militants had swarmed to the aid of their sisters and a fight began.

Women attacked men and men retaliated. Fists, clubs and hatpins were the chief weapons. Many were knocked down and trampled. The police made a number of arrests.

SHOT CREATES PANIC.

LONDON, July 11.—An evident attempt at assassination occurred in the House of Commons to-day when a man in the gallery for spectators drew a revolver and fired shortly after the session of the House opened. A parliamentary policeman who was nearby grasped the man and wrenched the pistol from his hand before he could fire again.

RULE CONCERNING COTTON.

"Our rule, effective September 1, is that a bale of cotton must be covered so thoroughly that none of the lint is visible," said F. D. M. Strachan, of the Strachan Steamship Line, explaining new export rules to the assembled traffic men and cotton exporters in the Hotel Ansley Thursday.

"Much of the bagging used is very large mesh. If a bale were covered with this big mesh bagging, so that you could see the white cotton through it, would the steamship companies note on the bill of lading that the cotton was not thoroughly covered?" asked the general freight agent of a big railroad system.

"Certainly," replied Mr. Strachan, who was quizzed at length.

"Mr. Strachan," came a voice from the rear of the hall, "if you were tendered a pretty girl, in good condition, but covered with a large mesh shirtwaist, would you make exception on the bill of lading?"

"You go to blazes," retorted the steamship man, and the quiz ended.

COLD IS ITALY.

ROME, July 11.—Italy to-day experienced the coldest mid-July in 600 years. The cold wave has followed a great storm.

The temperature fell below 60 degrees here to-day. Such weather has not been experienced since the summer of 1313.

MESSINA, July 11.—A tempest near the Straits of Messina, accompanied by heavy rainfall, has caused enormous damage in this region. Crops have been destroyed.

COSENA, July 11.—Hurricanes, accompanied by slight earthquake shocks and underground rumblings, have terrified peasants in this region for two days.

FLIES 80 MILES AN HOUR.

MACATAWA, MICH., July 11.—A world's hydroaeroplane record for distance was within the grasp of Glenn Martin, of Los Angeles, this afternoon as he closed in upon Beckwith Haven and Roy M. Francis, leaders in the Chicago-to-Detroit airboat race.

Martin maintained a speed of 80 miles an hour for 200 miles to-day after leaving Chicago. He landed for half an hour at Michigan City, and then came on to Macatawa Bay, where he lunched and left for Cralevoix, his third scheduled stop, shortly after 1 o'clock.

NEWS OF SATURDAY, JULY 12, 1913

JAP AGREEMENT WITH MEXICO STIRS THE U. S.

MEXICO CITY, July 12.—Formal protest was lodged to-day by the United States Government against the action of the Mexican Government in allowing the Mexican press to stir up anti-American feeling.

Two notes were presented by United States Ambassador H. L. Wilson. At the same time denial was made of the report that United States warships in the harbor at Guayamas used their wireless and searchlights to aid the rebels.

Those publications have resulted in scattered demonstrations and rioting, although no arrests have been reported. Notices have been posted in the schools here for the children to secure small Japanese flags. These will be carried in a procession of children who will welcome the new Japanese Ambassador upon his arrival.

Mexico is cementing her relations with Japan, and it is reported that a special envoy will soon be sent to Tokio to invite the investment of Japanese capital, and rich concessions will be given, it is said.

Following is a translation of the notices posted in the schools:

"The representative of the Japanese Emperor to our Government is about to arrive in this city. The attitude of mutual sympathy and esteem which our people and the people of Japan profess is well known.

"We firmly believe that the time has come to tender a public and solemn testimonial of international sympathy now that our national life has been put to a test by the imperialistic ambassador of a strong people.

"Therefore, the students of all the schools are asked to be at the railway station, each carrying a Japanese flag, to receive the Japanese Emperor's representative.

"This act will be significant and of great importance. The day and hour of the Japanese Ambassador's arrival will be announced later."

A number of American families have made preparations to leave here if further evidences of hostility are shown.

"It is true that the situation is delicate," said Minister of War Blanquet, "but the Government feels it can cope with it. Lamentable consequences may be occasioned by the anti-American feeling, but we are trying to kill it."

El Pais, most rabid of the newspapers, to-day published nearly a full-page picture of Friday's anti-American demonstration by students. On the editorial page the paper said:

"We see in Japan a future ally and defender of our independence, because such an alliance would be dangerous to the United States."

An anonymous letter threatening the United States Embassy with destruction has been received by Ambassador Wilson and turned over to the Mexican Foreign Office.

PLANTERS RALLY AT JACKSON.

JACKSON, July 12.—Several hundred farmers and their families gathered in Jackson Friday to attend the Butts County Farmers' Institute, held under direction of the State College of Agriculture.

The occasion was made a rally day for the members of the Boys' Corn Club and the Girls' Canning Club. Dinner was served by the farmers at the Farmers' Union Warehouse.

Talks were made by Dr. William Burson, of the department of veterinary science at the State College of Agriculture; Professor T. H. McHatton, of the horticulture department, and S. M. Brown, district agent of the Boys' Corn Club work. County School Superintendent C. S. Maddox was chairman. The meeting was held in the courthouse.

$11,698,520 OF BUTTER STORED.

NEW YORK, July 12.—According to the warehousemen's report for July 1, there was 41,784,000 pounds of butter in storage, compared with 33,209,000 pounds at the same time last year, an excess of 8,576,000 pounds.

At the present wholesale price, 28 cents, the holding represents $11,698,520. The average cost of June butter in New York was 27.81 cents, compared with 27.31 cents during June, 1912.

2,000 CANS OF FRUIT.

MACON, July 12.—More than 2,000 cans of fruit and vegetables were canned during the present week by the boys and girls of the Bibb County canning clubs, under the direction of Mrs. C. L. Rolston. Canning "bees" will be held during the ensuing week at the following points in the county: Lizella, Monday; Warrior School, Tuesday; Midway School, Wednesday; Bethel, Thursday; Price School, Friday.

BECKER LOSES FIGHT.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Supreme Court Justice Goff to-day denied the application of Charles Becker, the former police lieutenant, convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, for a new trial.

M'COMBS OUT OF DANGER.

PARIS, July 12.—Physicians attending William F. McCombs, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, who was operated on for appendicitis Tuesday, said to-day that he is now out of danger.

WOMEN TO POLICE DANCES.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 12.—This city has set aside $6,000 for a woman's police bureau, consisting of a chief and two assistants, to police public dance halls.

INVENTS ARTIFICIAL SUN.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—Dr. Herbert E. Ies, a scientist, says he has invented an apparatus emitting rays equal to sunshine and the light of day.

MRS. JOSEPH LEITER, considered model mother of wealth, who has invented unique shoes for her children.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Mrs. Joseph Leiter, who is often held up as an example of the perfect American mother of wealth, has designed shoes for her children, which she claims gives them comfort in the summer playtime.

These shoes are something like the old-fashioned sandals, but are made of cloth instead of leather, and have side pieces to support the ankles.

PREACHER AND WOMAN HE ELOPED WITH, JAILED

CARTERSVILLE, July 12.—Rev. John Wheeler and Mrs. Mattie Lee Porter, an eloping couple, now occupy cells in the Bartow County jail, Sheriff Charlie Smith returning from Cotton Plant, Ark., with them Thursday afternoon.

At Christmastide last year Rev. Mr. Wheeler, leaving his wife and several children, and Mrs. Porter, leaving her husband and one child, eloped and the officers have been in pursuit.

They both lived in the little community of Sugar Valley, just a few miles from Cartersville, and the intimacy between the two was not known until they ran away. The Grand Jury at the January term of Superior Court found true bills against each.

Rev. Mr. Wheeler is 51 years old, and for about 25 years has resided in this county. He worked as a machinist at Cotton Plant, which was his old trade. Prior to his elopement he filled engagements nearly every Sunday in many country communities.

Mrs. Porter is about 25 years old and her husband was a respected citizen of Sugar Valley. She is the mother of several small children and brought back with her a baby about four months old.

TROUT LIKES ATTENTION.

ESTES PARK, CAL., July 12.—"Sunbeam," the pet speckled trout in the fish hatchery at Estes Park, has just recovered from an indisposition caused by stomach trouble or rheumatism.

The fish, now a 3-year-old, and about 11 inches long, is as good an example of gentle and loving trouthood as it is possible to find. It is very fond of being stroked and petted, and will swim around and rub itself against a person's hand whenever a chance is given it.

LEMONS 60C A DOZEN.

Lemons are 60 cents a dozen.

Atlanta housewives who bought the fruit Saturday from local grocery stores were astonished.

The worst of it is that they may go still higher.

The present price of lemons is the highest in ten years. There are no lemons from California, and those from Sicily retail at 5 cents apiece.

HOMEMADE PLANE FALLS.

ST. CHARLES, ILL., July 12.—B. L. Walters, an amateur aviator, was in a hospital here to-day as the result of a 200-foot fall in a homemade biplane. He flew six miles.

GERMS IN EVERY SPANK.

EVANSVILLE, IND., July 12.—Wade Green, suffering from typhoid fever, spanked his three children the other day and they now have the disease, supposed to have been contracted from him.

WOMAN EVEN BOASTS OF DROWNING STEPCHILDREN

UNION CITY, TENN., July 12.—Without a tremor of emotion, Mrs. Hennie Yates, confessed murderess of her two small stepchildren, Ligon and Ida Mai, by drowning in a pond near Troy, Tenn., last Wednesday, sat in her cell in the county jail here to-day and boasted of all the grewsome details of the shocking crime, which was made possible through the assistance of Floy Farris, her fifteen-year-old daughter by a former husband.

A deeper reason for revenge against her husband, James Yates, than the admitted dinner table quarrel was brought out in the recital of the story, when Mrs. Yates made the allegation that her daughter, Floy, had been ruined by her second husband, James Yates.

After inviting the children to bathe in the pond, Mrs. Yates stated that, despite the frantic struggles of Ligon and his piteous shrieks for mercy as he clung to a twig to save himself, with the assistance of Floy she had broken his grip and, holding his head under the water, had filled his mouth with the slimy ooze from the bottom, to hasten his death.

Ida Mai began screaming and toddled away, but, at her mother's command, Floy captured her and held her beneath the water "until she quit moving."

The woman will be tried in September. She had engaged no attorneys. Insanity probably will be her plea.

Her husband will be the chief prosecutor, and states that he will do everything in his power to send his wife, the mother of his youngest child, to the gallows.

MAY FIGHT FOR OFFICE.

MACON, July 12.—It is very likely that a lively incident will develop out of the action of the Postoffice Department in asking for the resignation of Harry Stilwell Edwards, Macon postmaster, who is a Republican appointee. It is thought that Mr. Edwards will refuse to resign, as the San Francisco postmaster has done, making it necessary for the department to summarily remove him.

Custis Nottingham, whom Senator Bacon has recommended for the place, is the Senator's local agent in Macon, looking after all of the Bacon property interests here. He was formerly Recorder of the city, and in the pre-convention campaign last year he was an active Underwood supporter. He also has always supported Joe Brown.

SALT CHECKS BIG FIRE.

MICHIGAN CITY, IND., July 12.—Fire to-night partially destroyed the Harkell & Barker Car Company's mill yard here, resulting in a $1,000,000 loss.

Flames were fanned by a stiff west wind, and although aid was sent from Hammond, Gary, Laporte and South Bend, it was impossible to control the fire with the use of water. After dynamite had failed to check the flames, a trainload of table salt was rushed to the scene and 500 men poured the salt on top of the lumber in the flames' path, and this checked the blaze.

The yards contained millions of feet of Southern pine. A spark from a locomotive was responsible for the blaze.

DEER HERDS WITH HORSES.

LIBBY, MONT., July 14.—Henry Wegner, who has a ranch on the upper Yakt, says that a pure white deer has become associated with his horses and follows them into the corral. Mr. Wegner said it was a doe and had pink eyes, so he named it Albino.

Old hunters here say that on account of its freakish appearance it had become an outcast, and in such cases the animal always will go to a herd of cattle or horses if possible.

FARMERS HOLD RALLY.

DOUGLASVILLE, July 12.—An agricultural rally was held here to-day under the auspices of the State Agricultural College, with a large attendance. The movement was fathered by the Farmers' Union in this county and by the local Commercial Club.

The occasion was also a booster day for the Douglas County Fair to be held here next fall, and several important committees of the Fair Association met the farmers.

TRAIN HITS AUTO; SIX DIE.

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—Six persons were killed and one seriously hurt in an automobile accident at San Gabriel. The dead were members of a tourist family named Huffman from Caruthersville, Mo., residing temporarily at Long Branch.

A Southern Pacific engine backed into the automobile, in which eight persons were riding. Only one escaped injury.

WANT $25,000 FOR HOG.

Premier Longfellow Rival, a blue-blooded Berkshire hog with an ancestry tracing back to the Mayflower, was the subject of a $25,000 litigation in the court of Judge Bell Friday morning.

Rival's owner, J. B. DeBow, late of Nashville and now of Atlanta, sought to recover this amount for the killing of the aristocrat of pigdom.

Attorneys for the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific Railroad were on hand to say that the hog was not worth even the $10,000 awarded DeBow by another court and from which award an appeal was taken.

The story told the court was that Premier Longfellow Rival was on his private palace car en route from Montgomery to Vicksburg, where he was to be exhibited at a fair in 1909. There was a collision and Rival was considerably smashed up. About a month later he calmly laid down and died.

TO WREAK VENGEANCE ON CRUEL BULGARS

ATHENS, July 12.—"The Bulgarians have surpassed all the horrors of barbaric times and have proved that they no longer have a right to be reckoned among civilized people."

Telegraphing thus to the Greek Minister of Foreign Affairs from the field, where he is in command of the Greek forces, King Constantine utters a vigorous protest to the world against the acts of the Bulgarians in the latest Balkan war and states that he is compelled to wreak vengeance. In his message the King says:

"The commander of the sixth division reports that Bulgarian soldiers, carrying out the orders of their captain, gathered together in the courtyard of the school at Demirhissar two priests and more than 100 notables, whom they massacred. The bodies have been disinterred in order to prove the crime. Bulgarian soldiers violated girls, one of whom, resisting, was cut to pieces.

"Protest in my name to the representatives of the civilized powers against the acts of these monsters in human form. Protest also to the entire world and say that, to my regret, I see myself compelled to wreak vengeance in order to inspire these monsters with terror and make them reflect before committing more outrages of this sort."

The commander of the seventh division reports that the town of Seres was burned yesterday, with the exception of the Jewish and Mussulman quarters. Many men, women and children were found murdered or burned beyond recognition in their homes. Twenty thousand persons are without shelter.

It was semi-officially announced today that the Greek Government has replied to the Russian proposal for the cessation of hostilities in order that peace be concluded on the battlefield. The proposal has the support of Great Britain and France.

SCORES SHOT IN STREETS.

LONDON, July 12.—The report that Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria had been assassinated early in the day during an uprising at Sofia was denied in an official dispatch received here tonight. Scores of persons were shot down in the streets of Sofia during the disturbance when a mob gathered in front of the Royal Palace and called on the Czar to abdicate.

NEAR END OF LONG WALK.

PAXTON, ILL., July 12.—In the attempt to win a prize of $1,300 by walking from New York to Chicago via New Orleans, a distance of 3,612 miles, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Paxton arrived here to-day. Three couples left New York July 12, 1912. Mr. and Mrs. Hubbell, of Boston, who were walking independently, dropped out at Lynchburg, Va. Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Edwards, walking for the Montreal Club, are about 300 miles behind the Paxtons.

The Paxtons are walking for the Metropolitan Club of New York. The prize will be the world's championship for ladies for so great a distance. They are delivering a letter from Behrman, Mayor of New Orleans, to Carter Harrison, Mayor of Chicago.

SOUTHERN GIRL KILLED.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., July 12.—Miss Gertrude Mordecai, daughter of Judge T. M. Mordecai, of Charleston, S. C., was almost instantly killed today when an auto in which she was riding left the road and plunged into a tree on the State road near here.

The other passengers were Miss Cornelia Mordecai, a sister of the dead girl; Miss Hannah K. Falk, of Savannah, Ga.; Henry A. Schermerhorn, of Schenectady, N. Y., and the chauffeur, Ole Starr.

The accident occurred while the Mordecai car was running more than 50 miles an hour.

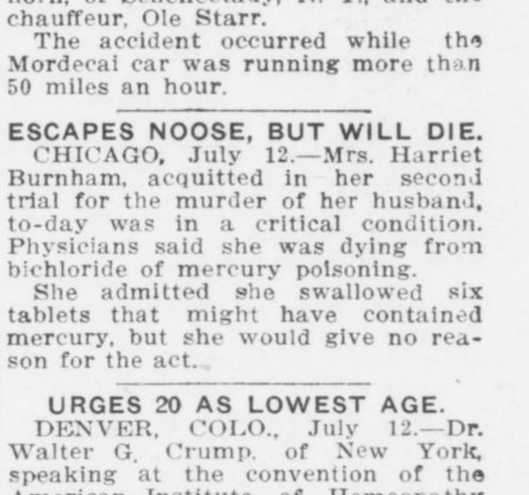
ESCAPES NOOSE, BUT WILL DIE.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Mrs. Harriet Burnham, acquitted in her second trial for the murder of her husband, to-day was in a critical condition. Physicians said she was dying from bichloride of mercury poisoning.

She admitted she swallowed six tablets that might have contained mercury, but she would give no reason for the act.

URGES 20 AS LOWEST AGE.

DENVER, COLO., July 12.—Dr. Walter G. Crump, of New York, speaking at the convention of the American Institute of Homeopathy here, declared that in order to propagate a better race a law fixing the minimum age for motherhood at 20 years should be enacted at once.



NEWS OF SUNDAY, JULY 13, 1913

PUBLIC MEN HIT RIGHT AND LEFT BY LOBBY PROBE

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Martin M. Mulhall, confessed lobbyist of the National Association of Manufacturers, after dodging subpena servers of the House of Representatives since Saturday afternoon, will be before the Senate lobby investigating committee again and resume his revelations of alleged dealings and double dealings with men of affairs in and out of Congress.

Though legislative affairs, chiefly tariff revision and currency reform, are progressing and destined to take on new vigor this week, interest in them is overshadowed by the Mulhall charges, hitting at public men right and left, as the Overman committee digs deeper in the huge pile of correspondence carried on between this man, officials of the National Association of Manufacturers, labor leaders, Congressmen and others.

Enlivening the interest in the lobby hunt is the game of hide and seek attending it, members of the Senate committee in the role of hiders and members of the House investigating committee acting as seekers after the arch-witness Mulhall and his ten-year pile of correspondence.

Chairman Garrett and his colleagues, directed by the House to inquire into Mulhall's charges, were considerably aroused yesterday over the trick played by the Senate committee, which let Mulhall leave town for over Sunday before subpena servers could round up the witness for a Saturday afternoon session with the House committee.

As matters stand now in the contest between the Senate and the House for jurisdiction over the person and effects of Mulhall, the Senate claims nine points of the law, being possessor of both witness and documents, and will continue to hold them until all the papers in the case have been read into the record and interpreted by Mulhall and until they are through with the witness.

It is not the intention of the Senate committee to release Mulhall from the subpena which antedates that issued by the House committee. Members of the committee declared today that they could not finish with Mulhall in less than a week, and that they might require his presence longer on direct examination. In order to avert any possibility of the witness getting away from the Senate side the committee contemplates holding day and night sessions.

The House investigators will continue to watch for an opportunity to catch Mulhall when he is not engaged before the Overman committee, and, in the meantime, they are planning to examine acquaintances and relatives of the Baltimore lobbyist to get all possible information about the man and his operations from outside sources.

President Wilson returns to Washington to-morrow from his vacation, and will find the Senate ready to debate on the long considered tariff bill. He also will find that the bill has been made a party measure, as he desired, and that when it becomes a law it will have been placed on the statute books by the Democratic party and not as the result of any particular effort by an individual Congressman or Senator or clique of individuals.

FOUR PERSONS KILLED.

CAMBRIDGE, OHIO, July 13.—Four persons were killed, a fifth probably fatally injured and a score of others hurt tolnight when Baltimore and Ohio passenger train No. 15 crashed into a Cambridge and Byesville interurban street car at a crossing in East Cambridge.

The accident was caused by a terrific storm which was passing over this section. The street car conductor had stopped his car and gone forward to the crossing and signaled the car to come ahead. He is said to have seen the headlight of the oncoming passenger train, but believed it was a lightning flash.

CRUSHED WHEN AIRSHIP FALLS.

ATLANTIC BEACH, FLA., July 13

C. A. Dorian, an aviator who has been giving a series of exhibition flights at the Atlantic Beach Hotel, fell a distance of 50 feet from his Wright biplane while flying along the beach late this afternoon and was seriously injured.

After traveling about 200 yards, the machine had risen to the height of about 50 feet when suddenly it swerved to the right and crashed to the beach, pinning Dorian beneath it. The beach was crowded with automobiles, and as the biplane fell it narrowly missed a big touring car in which were a half dozen people.

POSTMASTER ARRESTED.

MERIDIAN, MISS., July 13.—William J. Price, postmaster here, was arrested at his home this morning on the charge of embezzling postal funds. The amount alleged to be involved is said to be between $4,000 and $5,000. The arrest was made by Postoffice Inspector Hass, after a two-weeks' investigation of Mr. Price's office. Mr. Price waived a preliminary hearing and was released on $6,000 bond. He refused to make a statement concerning his arrest.

BRYAN HAS TO LECTURE.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 12.—During the delivery of a lecture at Hendersonville, near here, to-day, Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan paused in the course of his lecture to state that he is compelled to deliver Chautauqua lectures in order to supplement his Government salary, which, he declares, is not sufficient to meet his expenses.

ONCE NEWSIE, NOW HE AIDS IN MAKING LAWS

Georgia lawmaker, who rose from ranks of "newsies" to halls of Legislature.

Representative E. D. Cole, of Bartow.

In the first place, Representative Cole, of Bartow, was not christened Edward, or Edwin, or Ed, or anything like that.

As a matter of fact, his full entitlements are Emreid Dargan Cole!

That, however, was entirely too fancy an outlay of names for this gentleman when first he started out to make his own way in life, and so he elected to have himself called "E. D.," which inevitably evoluted into plain, ordinary, old-fashioned "Ed" as time ran on.

Ed Cole began his business career with a total capital of $1.35. Besides that, he possessed nothing beyond one suit of clothes, vintage unknown, a couple of pairs of socks and a superabundance of energy and pluck.

He plunged into business for himself at 16 by getting a job as train "butcher" on a jerkwater railroad in South Carolina, and he soon enlarged his capital of $1.35 to 100 times that amount.

Not long after this experience one of the big news agencies heard of Cole and grabbed him. Before long he was in charge of a division or so for that concern—and now he still is on the sunny side of 30, worth along toward—well, he is worth a six-figure sum, all right, anyway!

In casting about for a vice chairman of the important Ways and Means Committee of the House, Speaker Burwell looked into Cole's record. He became convinced that Cole was one of the safest and sanest business men in the House, and as that was exactly what he was looking for, Cole got the assignment.

Cole's inheritance tax bill is House bill No. 1, and is generally accepted as the most intelligent inheritance tax measure pending in the Legislature. It likely is the one that will be enacted into law. Cole never introduced it until he felt sure it was right and modeled along the most approved lines.

NO MERCY FOR BULGARS FROM THEIR FORMER ALLIES

LONDON, July 13.—The Balkan States appear to be again in the melting pot. There is no sign of peace at present. Greece and Servia have declined to agree to an armistice. The Turkish army is advancing by forced marches from Chatalja and Bulair, apparently with the consent of Greece and Servia, to attempt the recapture of Adrianople and Thrace.

Roumania is said to be proceeding to occupy a much large extent of Bulgarian territory than she previously claimed, and Greece is burning to avenge the Bulgarian massacres, concerning which horrifying details continually appear in official reports issued from Athens and Salonika. According to these reports, ears and fingers of Greek women still bearing earrings and rings were found in the pockets of Bulgarian prisoners.

FORCES OF BULGARIA RETIRE.

BUCHAREST, July 13.—Official reports state that the Roumanian troops are advancing toward the quadrilateral comprising Silstria, Rustohuk, Schumla and Varna, which Roumania has decided to occupy. The Bulgarians are retiring before them.

TWELVE PERSONS KILLED AND FIFTY ARE INJURED

LOS ANGELES, July 13.—Twelve persons were killed and about 50 others were injured to-night when a Pacific electric interurban train ran into another electric train at Vineyard Station, a junction on the outskirts of Los Angeles.

First reports from the wreck were conflicting. As nearly as could be learned, both trains were inbound from Venice, an ocean beach town, 16 miles from Los Angeles. They were crowded with homeward-bound residents of Los Angeles who had spent the day at the beaches, and it is reported that many of the injured were severely hurt.

BULGARIANS FIRE A CITY.

SALONIKA, July 13.—Refugees from Seres assert that the Bulgarian police set fire to the town in several places Thursday. While the fire was raging throughout the city Bulgarian guns, mounted on adjacent heights, bombarded houses flying foreign flags, notably the consulates, which were filled with fugitives, and poured shrapnel into the crowds fleeing from the city.

PLOT TO ASSASSINATE DIAZ AND UUERTA FRUSTRATED

MEXICO CITY, July 13.—A plot to assassinate President Huerta, General Felix Diaz and General Blanquet, the War Minister, has been frustrated by the arrest of one deputy and ten others of prominence. It is said the intention was to use bombs at some opportune moment when these officials were driving through the streets.

Documents were found on the prisoners identifying them as supporters of Zapata and setting forth an outline of the plot. Several of the prisoners have confessed. In a building somewhat remotely located they had practiced the throwing of bombs, studying the effect.

The American Ambassador's note of protest to the Foreign Office against permitting an anti-American demonstration here to-day had certain indirect results, although the Government did not absolutely forbid the holding of what officials style "a popular manifestation of patriotism."

A demonstration took place in the capital this afternoon, but not more than 400 persons participated. There were no speeches and few cries against Americans. The line of march was through the principal streets, and the manifestants halted in front of a big Japanese store, crying "Vivas" for Japan. Small silk Japanese flags were carried with the Mexican colors.

A detachment of police accompanied the procession and the Minister of War, General Blanquet, followed in an automobile. Brigadier General Samuel Garcia Cuellar, Governor of the Federal district, yesterday refused permission for a demonstration Sunday, and ordered the police to disperse it if it was formed. The students last night applied to the Minister of the Interior, Dr. Aureliano Urrutia, who told them that he sympathized with them and would overrule the Governor's order on condition that they created no disturbance.

RUINED AMERICANS FLEEING.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Destitute Americans are arriving in the United States on every boat from Mexican ports. Many of them face financial ruin in consequence of the series of revolutions which has paralyzed commercial and industrial enterprises, and they are leaving the southern republic with reluctance.

American Consuls are empowered to draw upon the State Department for funds to bring Americans out of the various danger zones, and in some instances, notably at Torreon, Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson has sent money to be expended by Consuls and consular agents to relieve actual hunger.

TO BEAUTIFY CANAL.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The report of the Fine Arts Commission, which is charged with the preparation of plans for the beautification of the Panama Canal, has been completed.

The plans embody landscape effects to make artistic the approaches to the canal, as well as the locks and the country through which the great waterway has been cut. As far as possible, the commission proposes to preserve existing beautiful landscapes and to supplement them by the planting of additional trees.

KILLS HIMSELF; WIFE ILL.

MACON, GA., July 13.—Henry T. Thomas, 60 years of age, committed suicide here this evening while his wife was lying desperately ill in her bed.

Thomas took a pistol and, going out into the cow lot at his home, shot himself through the heart. Mrs. Thomas heard the shot and sent her son, who was with her at the time, to investigate. He found his father still alive, but before he could be carried into the house he died.

PEARL HARBOR DRY DOCK.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Expert advice from outside the Navy Department will be invoked by Secretary Daniels in arriving at a decision as to the completion of the big Pearl Harbor dry dock in Hawaii. He has concluded that the amount of money involved is so large that decision should be delayed until the best expert counsel should be had before proceeding with the work.

SYLVIA PANKHURST RELEASED.

LONDON, July 13.—Sylvia Pankhurst was released from Holloway jail to-night as the result of her "hunger strike." Miss Pankhurst was sentenced July 8 to three months' imprisonment for incitement to commit disorders on June 29, when she led a mob to Downing street to attack the official residences of the Ministers.

FOUR NEGROES TO DIE.

CHESTER, S. C., July 13.—Four negroes—Meeks Griffin, John Crosby, Tom Griffin and Nelson Bryce—Saturday were found guilty of murder and sentenced to death for the murder of John Q. Lewis, of the Cornell section of this county, who was shot to death in his store April 26 last. The negroes were sentenced to die in the electric chair Friday, September 26.

FLIES FROM PARIS TO BERLIN.

BERLIN, July 13.—The French aviator Leon Letort made a flight from Paris to Berlin without a stop to-day. He left the French capital at 4:10 o'clock this morning and landed here at 1:10 in the afternoon.

CANCER FREE TREATISE The Leach Sanatorium, Indianapolis, Ind., has published a booklet which gives interesting facts about the cause of Cancer, also tells what to do for pain, bleeding, order, etc. Write for it today, mentioning this paper.

NEWS OF MONDAY, JULY 14, 1913

CRAWFORD'S WIDOW FREED ON BOND TO AWAIT PROBE

Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, accused of murdering her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, by poisoning, was released from the Tower Monday morning under a bond of $6,250 to await an investigation by the Fulton Grand Jury. Her bond was signed by Charles C. Jones.

Attorneys Burton Smith and Reuben Arnold, for Mrs. Crawford, waived a preliminary examination before Justice of the Peace C. H. Girardeau, and went before Superior Judge W. D. Ellis, where the bond was assessed after an agreement among the attorneys in the celebrated $250,000 will case.

Judge Ellis first announced that he could not fix the bond until he had gone into the merits of the case and called upon Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey to represent the State. The Solicitor stated that he would be disqualified because his law firm was interested, and the court was unable to find an attorney to act as Solicitor Pro Tem who had not been interested in it during the last four years.

The case would have been postponed until Wednesday had not the attorneys reached an agreement in order that the civil side could be resumed Tuesday morning.

Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner went to jail with the bond for Mrs. Crawford, and later returned with an order for her release.

No further criminal action will be taken, according to Attorney J. S. James, for the heirs-at-law, until the next meeting of the Grand Jury, which probable will be the latter part of this week.

Mrs. Crawford's release followed her unexpected return to the city at 2 o'clock Sunday morning from Tucker, Ga., where she had gone Saturday to visit friends. She was driven in to Atlanta in a buggy by John Cox, of Attorney Reuben Arnold's office.

Upon her arrival in the city, she went first to her home on West Peachtree street, and secured a few belongings. An hour later she awakened the jailer at the Tower and surrendered herself. She was quartered in the hospital ward at the jail during her incarceration.

Her visit to Tucker was to Mrs. Clemmie Johnson, who lived with the Crawfords before the death of Joshua B. Crawford. Mrs. Crawford said that Mrs. Johnson was to be an important witness at the hearing before an auditor and that she visited her to arrange for her coming to Atlanta.

She will be an important witness for Mrs. Crawford, according to her attorneys, to show that the wife never administered poison, or even medicine, to her husband.

GIRL DRINKS IODINE.

SAVANNAH, July 14.—Miss Tynie Boylston, aged 18, who came to Savannah from Augusta, attempted to commit suicide on the grounds at the Casino, Thunderbolt, last night by drinking iodine. She had just told her escort, J. H. Moore, of near Statesboro, that she had nothing to live for. An emetic, promptly administered, saved her life.

Moore says the girl told him she was despondent, and he suspected a love affair, but knew nothing of the details.

PRESIDENT RETURNS.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Tanned by his week in the New Hampshire sun, President Wilson returned to Washington to-day feeling greatly benefited by his vacation.

"I had a splendid time in Cornish," said the President, "and I certainly did enjoy it. Dr. Grayson assured me that the motoring and golf did me a great deal of good physically, and I feel much better than when I left Washington."

The President gained twelve pounds during his week away from Washington.

AIRMEN MAROONED.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH., July 14.—The hydro-aeroplane flight from Chicago to Detroit, halted to-day while a conference of officials here was held to decide whether to call the race off on account of bad weather.

If an agreement can be reached among the aviators the race likely will be stopped. Beckwith Havens and Roy M. Francis, leaders in the race, are marooned at Pentwater, Mich.

TWO SISTERS DROWN.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 14.—Two women, sisters, were drowned and two men companions narrowly escaped the same fate early to-day as the culmination of an old-fashioned "joy ride."

In a rig well stocked with bottled beer the party of four was returning from a park, when the horse was driven down the steep bank of a canal and plunged into twelve feet of water.

REPORT ON COTTON.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—A report issued to-day by the Census Bureau shows cotton consumed during June, 466,914 running bales. Cotton in manufacturing establishments June 30, 1,296,657 bales, and in independent warehouses 611,519 bales. Imports, 8,032, equivalent to 500-pound bales; exports, 223,921 running bales. Cotton spindles active during June, 30,057,910.

PAULINE FREDERICK, beautiful actress, who has returned to stage after failing to find happiness in riches of architect husband.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The hardships of a stage career are preferable to a home life, however luxurious, without love, in the opinion of Pauline Frederick, the actress-wife of Frank M. Andrews, the well-known architect.

And that is why Miss Frederick is back at work in the effort to regain her position on the stage, which she left four years ago to become Mrs. Andrews.

"When I married Mr. Andrews," she said to a Sunday American reporter to-day, "I decided to choose a career of love instead of fame. But I soon saw that the pursuit of love and happiness was not a silvery path through a garden of roses. Mr. Andrews soon let me know that he objected to being looked upon merely as "Pauline Frederick's husband.'

"I decided to go back on the stage partly because my husband seemed indifferent as to what I did and partly because I feared he was in love with another woman, the daughter of an American diplomat and the wife of an officer of the Royal Dragoon Guards of England."

WEALTHY FARMER IS SLAIN; BODY FOUND NEAR A POND

WAYCROSS, July 14.—With the skull badly battered as if from blows inflicted by some heavy instrument, the body of Mack Spain, a wealthy and eccentric bachelor farmer, whose home was west of Waycross, was today found on the edge of a pond, 20 miles from here. He had been dead at least two weeks, almost as long as he had been missing from his home. Both barrels of the shotgun found by him had been discharged.

Just how much money Spain had with him when he was murdered and robbed is not known, but neighbors say he never had less than $1,000.

Spain's home was originally in North Carolina. He had a valuable farm near Mexico, on the Waycross and Western Railroad. It was his expressed will that all his property go to E. T. Wing, superintendent of the Waycross and Western, and to whom he had become attached. No clew as to who killed him has been found.

LIKES PRISON FARE.

HACKENSACK, N. J., July 14.—Henry G. Moore, a wealthy prisoner in the local jail, declared the prison meals could not be beat anywhere in the State, and praised the prison cook for his good work.

Moore is locked up for going out of the State while under a non exeat bond of $30,000.

DIES FROM GRIEF.

NEWARK, N. J., July 14.—Mrs. Francis Burkes, of North Bergen, Pa., was found dead from grief on the grave of her husband, who died sixteen years ago.

Since the death of her husband Mrs. Burkes scarcely had missed a day in visiting the grave.

NEW HE'S A SUICIDE.

WILMINGTON, DEL., July 14.—A Coroner's jury has returned a verdict of suicide in the case of Edmund E. Myers, former Deputy Coroner.

Myers, it is said, had handled 10,000 bodies, 1,000 of which were suicides in twenty years.

BILL CALLS FOR STANDARD IN GRADES OF COTTON

WASHINGTON, July 14.—A favorable report has been ordered by a sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Agriculture on a bill introduced by Senator Smith, of South Carolina, pfoviding for Governmental standards of grades of cotton and requiring the contracts for the purchase or sale of cotton to be fulfilled in the grade specified in the contract.

Senator Smith's bill differs from the Clark amendment to the tariff bill in that it provides no tax or penalties for failures to deliver under a contract for future delivery.

Senator Smith, who is a cotton planter of wide experience, has expressed the fear that Senator Clarke's amendment, if adopted by Congress, will operate to impose a burden on the cotton grower. He is thinking seriously of offering his amendment as a substitute.

The Smith bill provides that every contract for the purchase or sale of cotton for future delivery shall be in writing and shall specify the grade of cotton that is the subject matter of the contract. Nine governmental standards are suggested by the bill in preference to the 37 graduations fixed by the New York Cotton Exchange. Under the bill the Secretary of Agriculture is directed to prescribe separate standards for the various grades of "long staple" or "gulf cotton," and all contracts for the purchase or sale of such cotton are required to specify the length of the staple.

Senator Smith pointed out what he regarded as the important feature of this bill, which requires that the seller of cotton for future delivery be restricted by his contract to the option of settling on the basis of not more than one grade above or grade below the particular grade specified in the contract. In making settlement the commercial difference in the price of such grades the day previous to settlement are to determine the price at which the buyers must settle.

"At present future contracts for high-grade cotton are heavily discounted," said Senator Smith, "because it is realized that when delivery is demanded nothing like the grade set out in the contract will be delivered. The lower grades have an artificial valuation so much higher than the commercial price that the one who delivers saves a wide margin by presenting a lower grade and making an arbitrary settlement of the difference."

ACTORS STRANDED.

CHICAGO, July 14.—More than 60 New York actors, actresses, chorus girls and chorus men to-day are stranded in Chicago. They were members of the "Mlle. Modiste" company that closed here Saturday night. The manager of the company left for New York yesterday after failing to raise the railroad fare for the whole company.

Fritzi Scheff, the star of the show, accompanied by her maids, her automobile and her chauffeur, went to New York on an extra-fare train.

WOMEN WEAR MASKS.

LONDON, July 14.—Wearing of masks by society women who attend racy theatrical productions, but who are ashamed to let their relatives and friends know of it, has come into vogue here.

A large number of women from court circles are daily attending the risque French show, "I Love It," but all wear masks for fear of the censure of their husbands and of Queen Mary, who has forbidden any of the ladies of her court from entering the Middlesex Theater, where the production is on.

Clergymen are beseeching the censor to close up the theater, declaring it will debase all who see it because of its gross imorality.

MULHALL DEFENDS SELF.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Stung by attacks on his character because he sold the correspondence of the National Association of Manufacturers, Colonel Martin M. Mulhall turned on his assailants before the Senate lobby inquiry committee to-day and declared that for two months before the letters were sold to a New York newspaper he attempted to dispose of them without a money consideration.

Senator Reed inquired if Mulhall did sell the letters and telegrams. Mulhall evaded a direct answer.

TO USE FIREFLIES.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA., July 14. Thornton Flowers, of Mona, declared that by treating a firefly by his secret chemical process a light surpassing electricity can be obtained.

He says he has his home illuminated with the new lights.

ATTACKS TARIFF BILL.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—The first Republican assault on the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill was made in the Senate to-day by Senator McCumber, of North Dakota.

"The bill seems to have been conceived in animosity against every American industry that realy needed protection," he said, "but the special object of its hate is the American farmer."

MUST LEAVE AT 10.

YONKERS, N. Y., July 14.—Charles Doyle, of this city, wanted his stepdaughter's suitors to leave the house at 9 p. m. She insisted on two hours more. They compromised at 10 o'clock.

WALKS OUT OF WINDOW.

PHILADELPHIA, July 14.—Dreaming she was fleeing from a dog, Anna Wilson, 14, walked out of her third-floor bedroom window. She suffered only a broken arm.

RUSSIA AND FRANCE TRY TO END WAR IN BALKANS

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 14.—While Russia and France are working to bring about peace in the Balkans, military activity in Turkish territory is increasing, and there were surface indications to-day that negotiations between Turkey, Servia and Greece for a concerted campaign against Bulgaria are being rushed.

General Enver Bey, Turkish Minister of War, believes it would be extremely easy for the Turks to re-take Adrianople from the Bulgarians, as the bulk of the retaining Bulgar army was withdrawn from Adrianople to fight the Serbs and Greeks.

There is an army of 100,000 Turks between Chorlu and this city, the greater part of them being massed along the Chatalja lines, just north of this city.

DENIES RULER'S DEATH.

SOFIA, July 14.—Official denial was made here to-day of reports that Czar Ferdinand and Dr. Daneff, former Premier, were assasinated by the mobs Saturday.

A telegram from Bucharest states that Prince Ferdinand, the Roumanian Crown Prince, has gone to the front to take command of all the Roumanian forces.

The Roumanian army of invasion is slowly advancing toward Sofia, making prisoners of all the Bulgarian troops in their way.

FRANCE JOINS RUSSIA.

PARIS, July 14.—France to-day joined Russia in appealing to Servia and Greece to cease hostilities against Bulgaria. Greece has telegraphed to Belgrade the terms upon which the Greek Government will stop the war. This action was taken because Greece wants to act in co-operation with Servia in ending the conflict.

With the greatest abjectness Bulgaria has admitted complete defeat and has taken full responsibility for beginning the fighting aganist her former allies.

A Bucharest telegram states that Roumania will not make peace until her terms are accepted unconditionally by Bulgaria.

SHOT BY OFFICERS.

DAWSON, July 14.—John W. Brown, a well-known white man of Dawson, was shot and perhaps fatally wounded here to-day by Chief of Police Brown and Policeman Crouch. Brown was reported to officers as lying in wait in a stable to shoot Mayor McNulty. Officers went to arrest him. As they entered the stable door Brown raised his gun to fire. The officers were a second too quick for Brown, shooting him down as he fired.

The trouble resulted, it is said, from a raid officers made on Brown's residence yesterday. He has long been suspected of violating the prohibition law. It is said he blamed Mayor McNulty for the raid, and expressed the intention of killing him to-day. Public sentiment is strongly with the officers.

LINEN IS HIGHER.

NEW YORK, July 14.—According to a member of the linen trade back from abroad, prices there now are from 5 to 10 per cent higher than when the last heavy purchases were made in November. In the local market staple color dress linens, especially blues and pinks, are scarce. Dealers have advanced prices on several staple numbers.

The substantial business in novelty dress linens this season has led dealers to believe that ratines will be in good demand next season also. The fact that these goods are being shown extensively in cotton is regarded as an indication of their stability.

FIRE ALARM CAUSES SUIT.

CHICAGO, July 14.—Alleged negligence in forwarding a fire alarm signal in Kansas City, Mo., on July 12, 1912, was made the basis for a $100,000 damage suit against subsidiaries of the Western Union Telegraph Company by Morris & Co., meat packers.

The Morris complaint alleges that a heavy fire loss was caused at its Kansas City plant because of delay in transmitting the fire alarm signal.

TO SAVE PARROT'S MORALS.

ALTON, ILL., July 14.—Mrs. Geneva Littlepage has applied to Justice Gorman for a replevin writ to obtain possession of a parrot to save him from the baneful influences of a saloon.

"The bird never swore once in his life, and I can't bear the thought of his learning to curse," she told the justice.

Mrs. Littlepage said the parrot had been stolen and when she next heard of it the bird had been sold to a saloonkeeper for $10.

NO AMERICAN DANCES.

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND, July 14.—"No American dances allowed here" is a sign confronting tourists at nearly all the high-class Swiss hotels. The managers declare the notices had to be put up because of complaints from English, French and other foreign tourists, with the exception of Americans.

Continental visitors have left a number of hotels where American girls insisted on dancing the turkey trot, the tango, the bunny hug and the Texas tommy.

JAPS AND NEGROES BARRED.

DENVER, July 14.—Japanese and negroes are barred from bathing in the lake at Washington Park here by order of Park Commissioner Thum.

He will allow none but whites to use the waters.

Market Quotations For Week Ending July 15, 1913

REVIEW OF COTTON MARKET

Advices to the effect that the boll weevil is spreading over the larger part of Texas and Alabama, coupled with a decrease of 6,000 bales of cotton in the New York warehouse during the past seven days, promoted sufficient speculative buying to hold prices in close range of last Tuesday's closing quotations. It now looks as if the warehouses in New York will have only a stock of about 15,000 bales by August 1. This is causing the bearish element to go slow, while the larger spot interests have been noticeable buyers of new crop positions as well as old months. However, offerings were very light, except at intervals when sales were liberal, coming mainly from a clique of professionals who apparently purchased at lower levels. In addition to the decrease in stocks, Liverpool and McFadden houses were booked as good buyers on the late options on small decline as hedges against forward sales of goods. The market rules steady. Sentiment is bearish and the weather is ideal and crop news continues favorable. Sellers are timid and waiting for something to give the market a decided downward push.

From the close of last Tuesday t New York future contract market shows a net decline of 3 to 10 points, while spots are quoted at 11.30, practically unchanged from the previous week.

About the most important factor that favors the bull element is the steady reduction in contract stocks. On the other hand nothing has apeared in the present crop situation to warrant unfavorable apprehension, except the boll weevil in the two States mentioned. Reports from the South are to the effect that the destructive pest has not reached the fields enough to promote any alarming talk. The plant is now facing its critical period. Naturally, slight damage will be done before July-August is out of the way. Both Habersham King and F. M. Cordill were out with extremely bearish circulars during the latter part of last week. King's report showed that conditions were favorable over 85 per cent of the belt and a standoff as to the other 15 per cent. Cordill spoke in enthusiastic terms of the progress of the crop, saying the plant was well developed and fruiting nicely. The crop is clean and well worked and is enjoying perfect growing weather.

The crop outlook of Georgia, which next to Texas, is the largest producer of cotton in the belt, is better than last year, according to quoted views of members of the Georgia Legislature, who are in session in Atlanta just now. They say that conditions are far better than they were a year ago and if present promise is fulfilled Georgia will push hard the record crop of two years ago when Georgia picked 2,794,000 bales of the staple.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat's second report on the cotton crop of 1913 follows:

"1. Improvement has been the rule, weather having been almost ideal for cultivation.

"There has been no lack of labor and the fields have consequently been worked to the maximum.

"3. Complaints of boll weevil come from several states and the reports from certain districts of Mississippi show that grave damage has already occurred.

"4 Despite the forcing weather of the last month, the crop is still on the average somewhat late.

"5. Taking the belt as a whole the possibilities are great in either direction. With a perfect season on from this time forward, a bumper yield might be expected; with a seriously unfavorable change in this regard, the outturn might be sensationally small."

Liverpool observed a three-day holiday in celebration of the opening of the new dock and there were no cables from that center nor any trading Friday and Saturday. Liverpool has been an important factor in the movement of cotton prices during the past few months. Moreover, it has been the predominating influence. In absence of cables the market was unusually quiet and killed off business in the American exchanges considerably.

Sentiment in the South is by no means in favor of a cotton futures tax. Southern newspapers are out strongly against the amendment. The Jacksonville Times-Union declares that the effect of the tax would be simply to take 50 cents a bale out of the pockets of the farmer who grows the cotton and put it into the hands of the man who manufactures goods. The New Orleans Picayune and The New York Commercial also oppose the proposed tax vigorously.

The president of the Georgia Cotton Manufacturers' Association sent a telegram to the Senate finance committee protesting the passage of the amendment. A message was sent to United States Senator Sheppard of Texas, signed by some of his constituents, which declared that 75 per cent of the people in Texas are against legislation of the character proposed by the authors of the tax amendment. This message, in part, said that the passage of the amendment would put out of business all small cotton buyers and leave the producer at the mercy of the spinner, who would continue to regulate the price of cotton.

The following is a copy of the night telegram sent by the president of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia to the Senate finance committee:

"The Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia urges the most careful consideration of your committee as to the effect of the proposed Clark amendment placing a tax on contracts for future delivery of cotton on the legitimate hedges which the mills of this association buy for future delivery. This transaction is the antithesis of gambling. It protects the mill when actual cotton can not be obtained to cover the purchase of cloth by a buyer who wants deliveries made months ahead. This purchase of cotton futures is sold when actual cotton is bought, and this transaction is the backbone of the cotton mill business; and, if the cotton exchanges of New York and New Orleans are to be prevented from selling futures to actual producers and consumers of cotton, both the mills and the farmers of the South are bound to suffer. If legislation must be had to stop gambling in cotton or other products for gambling purposes only, then there should be an exemption made in order to protect farmers and manufacturers who use the cotton exchanges in order to keep from gambling. This is a sound business proposition which your committee can not ignore or refute, and the earnest consideration of same is respectfully requested by our association of some 140 cotton mills, representing $40,000,000 of invested capital."

TUESDAY'S REVIEW:

NEW YORK, July 15.—The cotton market opened steady to-day, first prices ranging from 2, unchanged to 3 points lower than Monday's final. The weather map was slightly bullish, but this was slightly offset by the bearish prediction of a big local house.

There was no special feature to trading after the call, transactions being held within a small volume. Sentiment continues bearish and Liverpool was reported a seller of the old crop positions. This promoted an active selling movement, with August the heaviest pressed option. August dropped from 12.12 to 11.99, while other positions declined some 3 to 6 points from the initial level. Later the market developed a steadier tone, resulting in prices rallying a few points, and during the late forenoon price movement was practically unchanged from the previous close.

Trade buying of new as well as old crop positions was the chief feature of a quiet market. Many operators would have been glad to have purchased cotton on the decline, but neither buying nor selling orders were sufficient to create wide fluctuations in prices.

The market is kept from depression by the continued decrease of the stock—and, on the other hand, it is prevented from advancing by the favorable progress of the crop. However, the most important factor which is the predominating influence against activity is the proposal to tax cotton futures. The large interests, as well as the small firms, are unable to see how to do business in the future and are inclined to await further development of news from Washington before pushing their commitments to any extent.

At the close the market was steady with July 1 point higher, while other positions were 2 to 6 points decline from the closing quotations of Monday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.15; August, 12.02; October, 11.47; January, 11.31.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.46; August, 11.97; October, 11.47; January, 11.47.

Warehouse stocks in New York today are 36,083 bales; certificated, 30,085 bales.

NEW ORLEANS, July 15.—With the exception of Tennessee, North Carolina and West Texas, where it was cloudy, fair weather prevailed over the belt, with only a few scattered showers. Indications are for increasing cloudiness in the northwestern quarter, with a rise in temperature; prospects are for rain and cooler weather toward the end of the week. Partly cloudy to fair weather, with a few scattered showers in the central and eastern States; temperatures normal.

The market opened unchanged, but soon eased to 11.41 for December on a 12-point break in August in New York. While the impregnable position of July is admitted, it is thought that the fate of July is too unimportant to delay adjustment to a new situation, and that the promise of abundant new supplies for the coming month is so strong as to put August futures beyond the grip of the manipulative control of a few.

The market rallied a little toward 11 o'clock in anticipation of bullish remarks in the Government weekly weather report about the hot spell in Texas in the middle of last week.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, July 15.—J. M. Anderson says: "The principal feature of the market was the early selling of August, said to be for Liverpool; however, after this selling was over the market reacted quickly on small buying. The principal buying apparently came from spot interests. There is more bullish talk today than has been heard for several days, based on wires from Texas stating that boll weevil are doing considerable damage around San Antonio, and also the small stock on hand here.

"Cordill's report on Texas was bearish and other reports indicate favorable conditions. However, the bulls contended that any change from now on would naturally be unfavorable and it would take very little to start an upturn. However, it is not probable that we will have any material change until there is further news from Washington ac to the drastic legislation now pending."

* * *

Theodore Price is said to be talking very bullish to his friends, laying the stress to the small increase in acreage, given by the Government's estimate.

* * *

Cotton acreage in Texas is 900,000 acres larger than last year, and it is generally believed that the crop will exceed 5,000,000 bales, compared with 5,120,252 bales last year and 4,447,648 bales in 1911, against 3,172,488 bales in 1910. Last year the total production of the crop aggregated 14,076,430 bales, the second largest crop ever grown. The largest was grown in 1911, when something more than 16,038,000 bales was the yield.

* * *

General discussion regarding the proposal to tax cotton futures is less pessimistic than it was when the amendment was first introduced. Many express the belief that it will fall through.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma, clear and pleasant."

* * *

The character of the trading each day lately is so similar and the factors governing prices so stationary that writing a market letter becomes a matter of trying to say the same thing over and over again in different words. Purchases of 15,000 bales of October by Baruch brokers was the only trading of consequence yesterday. These people seem to get in the market frequently either way, hoping to get a run, but so far they evidently have been disappointed. Gwathmey sold August and scattered Wall Street shorts bought July. Generally outside speculation was absolutely dead.

Corn—No. 2 ..... 61¾
Oats—No. 2 39

CHICAGO, July 15.—Wheat showed losses of ⅞@1c and while July and December closed at the bottom prices reached, September reacted ⅜ from the lowest level. While there were some sales of wheat here to xporters and some at the seasoard, the amounts were not given, but were generally believed to have been small.

The world's available supply as compiled by Bradstreet's showed a decrease of 8,713,000 bushels wheat for the week, which was 600,000 bushels larger than the corresponding period a year ago.

The weaknes sin wheat and the profit-taking in corn by longs trimmed the rough edges off the latter market late and final prices were ⅜@¾c lower. High temperatures were reported in Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

Oats were off ¾@1¼. Provisions were mainly lower.

PRICE OF SHEEP SOAR.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Another 15 to 25c advance was scored by the sheep market to-day, Idaho lambs selling at 8.55. Sorting was light, which made prices even higher than they looked on paper. Beef and pork are so high that mutton is getting the benefit.

Cattle trade was nominally steady, although Kansas City had another big run of draught refugees out of Kansas pastures. Hogs were strong to 5c higher with a 9.30 top.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "It was the belief of most wheat traders last night that while there might be some further rally in prices, it was likely to be only temporary and that wheat should be sold on good bulges. A good deal, however, will depend on the attitude of the farmer in selling.

"Corn is looked upon as a weather proposition. Some bears think that the crop is virtually made. The best posted corn specialists, however, say that a corn crop never has been made before the first of September, and there have been a great many years when it was not considered safe by September 20.

"Oats specialists are undecided as to whether the market has had its break. They say the trade oversold on last week's decline and their covering was mainly responsible for yesterday's bulge."

* * *

Minneapolis says: "Rainfall at New Ulm, Minn., .04; Pierre, S. Dak., .02; Yankton, raining, .03; Sioux Falls, Watertown, trace; Dickinson, .02, temperatures moderate."

* * *

After making new low levels, wheat, corn and oats were pushed up yesterday sharply on reports that high temperatures and grasshoppers were doing considerable damage to the crop.

* * *

Exports of cereals from Roumania have been prohibited, owing to the war.

* * *

Minneapolis wheat stock decreased 23,000 bushels in one day.

* * *

B. F. Johnson, of Minneapolis, says: "If we get good filling weather, the three Northwestern States will raise 200,000,000 bushels."

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says:

"Wheat—Map shows showers in Northwest, with moderate temperatures. Northwestern crop conditions will be closely watched, especially since talk of rust damage has started.

"Corn—Chicago and vicinity had good rains last night, as did also a number of points south of us in the State, and some precipitation in Ohio Valley. No rains reported in Southwest, with extremely high temperatures yesterday at numerous points in Kansas and Nebraska. Until conditions change, prices are apt to hold firm.

"Oats—Market will be influenced more or less by action of corn.

"Provisions—General torfe to the market is firm."

* * *

Wheat was easy on the start on poor cables. Big winter wheat movement and favorable weather for threshing, but the market soon rallied on scattered demand from shorts, based on apprehension over rust talk from northwest and export possibilities.

* * *

Corn was higher on continued dry weather in the Northwest, with high temperatures and disappointing receipts.—Pearsall.

* * *

Mitchell, S. Dak., says past five days have been exceptionally favorable for crops. Corn is away above par. Springfield, Ill., says: "We have a light crop of oats; hardly more than 50 per cent of average."

* * *

Pembria, N. Dak., wires: "Recent rains have materially changed crop conditions, giving much better prospects for a fair crop."

* * *

A crop bulletin says that rapid progress was made in haying and harvesting. Late oats are beginning to ripen and will be ready to cut in a week or ten days. Winter wheat is a great crop, but yield will not be as great as last year. Showers were of great benefit to corn and pasture.

* * *

The whole Northwest is buying corn on hot wind reports.

* * *

Harrington King says corn is completely ruined by hot winds. Tassels are white and the crop in that territory is a total loss.

* * *

Export brokers say they are getting no responses to offers of wheat at yesterday's sale prices. There are no bids at all or inquiry for red winter wheat and no business doing in hard winter for export.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Mean temperatures were 1 to 4 above normal, except in Tennessee, Carolina, Georgia, northern parts of Alabama and Mississippi, eastern Arkansas and Florida, except the extreme west portion, where temperature was normal or slightly below, the greatest deficiency being 3 degrees at Memphis.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 70 to 82 degrees over Eastern States, 80 to 86 over Central and 82 to 88 over Western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 70 degrees, occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 88 degrees, at Forth Worth, Texas.

Precipitation occurred generally over the Central and Eastern portions of the coton region, but the amounts were unevenly distributed. Very little precipitation occurred in Texas and Oklahoma, many stations reporting none during the week. More than 2 inches occurred at a few stations in Southern Louisiana, Central Mississippi, Eastern Arkansas, Western Tennessee, East Central Alabama, West Central Georgia and Northeastern Florida.

The greatest weekly precipitation, 6.6 inches, occurred at Morgan City, La.

IX---Providence

A Sermon by REV. W. H. FAUST, Lexington, Ga.

Text: "All things work together for good to those that love God, to them who are the called, according to His purpose."—Romans 8:28.

It must follow as the night the day that if God created the world and all that therein is He must be the only one who can sustain and keep that which He has made. To admit the omnipotence, omniscience, omnipresence of God is but to go a step further and loyally accept the view that He cares for and provides for the needs of His own. A mother might perchance forget her child, but it is absolutely inconceivable to think of the Creator forgetting His creation. A sparrow is a small and insignificant thing, but God never allows one to fall to the ground without His notice. The hairs of a man's head are of little value, yet each one is numbered and known by the Father. A cubit added to a man's stature more or less is but little, but God alone can do the adding. The soul of one seeming influenceless man would not count for much, yet the Bible clearly teaches that there is rejoicing in Heaven over one sinner that repenteth, and at such an event the angels are made glad.

Controls All Events.

No thing is beneath the notice of God, no task is small or insignificant in His sight, no person with Him is small or useless and we make a tremendous mistake when we feel that God with omnipotent wisdom guided the Jews from Egyptian bondage to Canaan's bliss and kept Moses despite the power of his enemies, and yet will not guide the destiny of America and choose our individual paths for each of us to walk in.

The story goes that a prominent clergyman was once telling of an almost miraculous escape he had while on shipboard. The vessel caught afire and by almost superhuman efforts the flames were extinguished and the lives of those on board saved. This gentleman was talking about it in the presence of the world-famous Archbishop Whately, when the latter with a twinkle of amusement in his eye, said: "I can cap that story with one out of my own experience. I crossed over on board a ship when Providence was even more remarkable. The vessel didn't even catch afire." And he was right. We refer to the sinking of the Titanic as a mysterious Providence, but think of the thousands of ships that are guided safely across the Atlantic to their ports by the power of God.

To Them Who Love God.

One has only to study the dealings of God with the Israelites to see that He was behind every move of the nation and His purpose was being carried out at every turn, even by Pharaoh himself, whose heart was hardened or stoutened by God so that the wicked might see with all the more ease how Providence moved. There was nothing strange or miraculous about the army of Pharaoh being drowned in the sea because the plans had been working to that end, each move of the nation was in that direction and behind it all the hand of God.

Some mighty disease of contagious nature rages in a community and carries off into the realm of death many of the best loved and most useful citizens. Strange! Yes, of course, but this self same pestilence is the cause of experts coming in and making a special study of the disease and eventually working out a cure. A few lost in order that many might be saved. Judas, going out and hanging himself in remorse because he had betrayed innocent blood, in order that all men in the future might be kept back from such an awful crime. A pleasure-loving Godless father, centered in self and his own watches his child slowly die, afterwards turns to God, that he may go to his child. Strange, but merely God dealing wisely and kindly with an erring child.

Providential Mysteries Often Solvable.

Not many weeks ago the people of America were awestruck at the tremendous loss of life and property in the West, and, as moved by some mighty impulse, the people all over the nation responded to the needy sufferers' appeal for aid, but one has not far to go to see that it was but natural for flood to produce such results. Build below the high water mark and when the flood comes in above you may look for destruction. Fail to use the reason power with which God has endowed you and you can not put the penalty you receive on the shoulders of the Almighty.

Here in our own Southland the farmers are already beginning to wonder if we are to have rainy seasons and periods of drouth even as they do in Cuba and elsewhere, and sometimes feel that it is attributable to Providence, little thinking that there is a possibility that it may be caused by the fact that the timber is being cut, the water courses being changed, the forests being cleared and none of the natural distributors of moisture and rainfall left to perform their natural duties and so dryness and unlooked-for and in many instances undesired results, but none of it can be laid to God's account. It is all due to man. Here comes in the seeming miracle of turning the loaves into food for multitudes, something special we think, little stopping to consider that each spring when grains of wheat and corn spring up and produce and multiply and supply food for multitudes that the same Providence is at work preparing to meet the needs of the hungry multitudes indeed.

"God moves in mysterious ways
His wonders to perform.
He plants his footsteps on the sea
And rides upon the storms."

Had we infinite minds, we could understand His wonderful dealings with us. Lacking such, we can merely, at times, wonder at His works.

Providence is not so easily understood as is nature, because nature or creation is a finished book, and Providence is yet incomplete. Enough for us to know that when we awake to a full consciousness of His likeness we will be satisfied.

Recently while in Atlanta I stood at the base of a great building going skyward. At the time it was surely an unshapely mass. Here and there were men at work, but there was no beauty, each carpenter and workingman was performing the task assigned by the contractor and head carpenter, but when the building is finished and all parts complete one then can see the beauty and symmetry of the building, the floors that before were unsightly and rough and not appreciated will take on life and beauty as one sees the usefulness to which they can be put. So when the book is finished and all is understood, every sentence and chapter will have its beautiful meaning. And in life the things that we are now unable to comprehend will be easily understood and we will know that He doeth all things well.

Before me lies a watch, a splendid timepiece it is. I look in it. There are wheels and wheels, some moving quickly in one direction, other moving slowly in another. There seems to be confusion, but there is none. The object of the watch is to give the time and it does so. Even so with God's providences, often they seem to run athwart His blessed promises and conflict with the teachings of certain parts of the Book, but in the end we may be able to say, "He doeth all things well."

Grace is Personal.

Strange it is that we little human beings filled with weakness and inability should carry our little self-made theological cups to the great well of God's overflowing wisdom and dip them up full and feel that because they are full that the fountain has been dipped dry—not so. God in His marvelous dealings with us gives us room to exercise some of the powers with which he has endowed us. For instance, he has given us brains. Now look out of the window some cold winter day and see the little sparrows provided for by crumbs and grain thrown out into the snow by kind hands—wonderful, of course, to think of God's provision for His creation, but what would God do were you to take that precious babe out into the snow and wait for some such Providence to be manifested in his behalf. That would be presumption, rashness, simply tempting Providence. So with childlike simplicity of the Father's care and love let us come into His presence and ever feel that His eye is on the sparrow and we'll not forgotten be.

May the faith of Bryant be ours as depicted in the stanzas of that wonderful poem of his, "To the Waterfowl:"

"There is a power whose care
Teaches thy way along that pathless coast,
The desert and illimitable air,
Lone wandering, but not lost.

He, who from zone to zone,
Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight,
In the long way that I must tread alone
Will lead my steps aright."

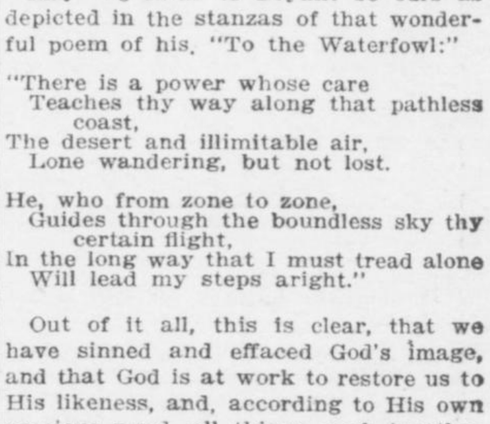
Out of it all, this is clear, that we have sinned and effaced God's image, and that God is at work to restore us to His likeness, and, according to His own precious word, all things work together for good to those who love Him, and who are seeking to know Him in the fullness of His love and the power of His resurrection. To such a God, with childlike faith, we can say:

"If I should die before I wake
I pray the Lord my soul to take."

COUNTRY SAVES CITY.

CHICAGO, July 9.—"If no country blood were instilled into the life of the large cities, there would be no fourth generation of city people. The blood of the country folk keeps renewed the ebbing energies of the harried residents of the city."

This statement was made by Dr. R. C. Augustine, of Decatur, Ill., before the Illinois Society of Optometrists in session to-day.



THE FLIGHT OF THE DUCHESS -:- -:- A Short Story

The Duke of Cleverley was at breakfast. He opened his letters. He passed over several, and came to one on rough gray paper. It was from his younger sister, Cecily:

"My dear Rupert,"—it ran—"I have been thinking it would be so nice if Peggy could come down and stay with me for a bit. It is ages since I saw her. Give her my love, and say everything persuasive you know. I shall be so disappointed if she can't come. I write to you because I know if your persuasions are not added to mine, I might as well accept defeat at once. Yours ever, Cecily."

The Duke of Cleverley laid the letter down with a trembling hand. Peggy had been gone for a whole week, and quite suddenly it revealed to him that she had not been with Cecily at all. She had said that she should not write—she was going for so short a time. And she would be back on Thursday, a week from the day she started, and that was to-day. Suddenly he covered his face with his hands. The obvious simple truth forced itself home. Peggy had gone away with someone else.

He wandered into the study and smoked moodily and thought. Just before 1 o'clock a taxi drew up at the door, and the Duchess of Cleverley stepped out of it. Her face was curiously bright and radiant.

She went straight through the hall to the study where her husband sat.

"Rupert!" she said. "My darling, have you been lonely?"

She came across and leaned over his chair.

The Duke was silent for a moment.

"No," he said. "Is that why you have come back?"

"But I said Thursday! She was staring at him in utter astonishment.

Her husband went on:

"It's a good thing you have come, because Cecily wants you to go and stay with her—says she hasn't seen you for ages.

Peggy's face blanched.

"You have heard from her?" She faltered.

He nodded.

There was silence.

"I—of course I didn't go," she said.

"Obviously."

"I went—"

"It doesn't concern me greatly where you've been. The astonishing thing is that you should have thought it necessary to come back."

"Come back!" Peggy's fair face was full of wonder.

"I can explain."

"Explain! Why should I believe your explanation? Why should your story be more literal now than it was a week ago?"

Peggy stood trembling and quivering. Once or twice she tried to speak and failed. Then she said:

"I'm sorry I came back. I'll go." And gathering up her muff and furs, she went.

The Duke wanted to ask her to explain. He wondered if she had any money; where she would go; what she would do. But something held him dumb. And while he was wondering the door banged. Peggy was gone.

It was about a quarter to seven when Ann came in.

The Duke heard the door close sharply, and the rustle of a gown. For one conflicting moment he thought it was his wife; then he was aware of a dark, strong-featured girl, dressed in a royal-blue velvet coat and a great feathered hat. She was quite unmistakably an actress.

She was looking at him critically.

"I've come," she said—"about your wife—about Peggy!"

The Duke winced.

"Won't you—sit down?" he said.

Ann Rutherford sat down on the sofa.

"I came," she said, "because it's all my fault—this dreadful misunderstanding."

She paused.

"When she—Peggy was at the Frivolity, I was there too. I was in the chorus then, she was leading lady, but we were pals, and we've written and seen each other now and again ever since. I've got on since then—to a leading part myself—and—"

"Forgive me, but what has all this to do with the Duchess of Cleverley?

Ann frowned.

"'Everything.' I was down for the leading part in the revival at the Frivolity. Well, I had a bad attack of 'flu' just before. My understudy was a nobody; the part would have been ruined. I happened to send a line to Peggy saying that I couldn't play, and that the revival would be ruined. I said in the note, 'If only you could come and play your old part!' and she took it seriously and came. She stopped with me for a week, and no one but Carnaby, the manager, and I knew who she was. You don't recognize people where you least expect to see them, and the public will never know that the Duchess of Cleverley played my part for a week. She saved the situation for me, and she loved it—every moment of it. She's an artist, and to keep her from her work is like starvation—just that. For a week she has danced and sung for me to keep my place, and it seems she's lost her own."

She laughed a little.

"I was determined you should know the truth," she said.

For a moment there was silence. Then—

"Why should I believe you?" said the Duke.

"Because you must," said Ann; and looking at her he knew that what she said was true.

The silence in the study was broken by Ann.

"She sails to-night," she said.

The Duke started.

"Sails!"

"For America," said Ann. "You've chucked her; Carnaby's snapped her up for his first touring company. It's always like that in the profession."

"What do you mean? Peggy goes to-night? My wife in a touring theatrical company!"

Ann came across the room, and, putting her two hands on the desk, confronted him.

"This fuss is all very well," she said; "but what are you offering her to stay?"

"She is the Duchess of Cleverley—my wife," said the Duke vaguely.

Ann laughed.

"As if that were the sum and purpose of life!" she said. "Have you ever thought how the superficiality of the whole thing must bore a girl like Peggy? We're pals, she and I; we've been hungry together, and tired and sometimes worse than that, but never—never once bored. I loved Peggy so much that I'd sooner have let her go off to America, and not said a word. She'd be happier so. But I've come instead—to give you another chance to appreciate her."

She looked at the watch on her wrist.

"The boat sails at nine," she said. "Are you going to see her off?"

"I'm going to stop her!" said the Duke. And he did.

IN OLD SICILY :-: :-: :-: A Short Story

It is difficult to realize what Sicily was while it was under the rule of the Kings of Naples. So many old chivalrous customs so much old world politeness had remained in this island of beautiful mountains that its ways were almost Arabian.

You know how excessive is the politeness of the Orientals and politeness of the same kind came naturally to the old-time Sicilians who were not much affected by the progress of the world outside, a brainless old fellow sitting on his farm was treated with a consideration as if he had been a feudal baron and was honored and feared by the uncouth and wild peasants who surrounded him. At Palermo the most unimportant little nobleman kept in his ramshackle palace two or three beggars whom he called his valets and proudly entered his tumbledown old-fashioned tumbril which was styled "His Grace's carriage," while he looked around to all sides to discover if perchance some rascal should neglect to salute him properly.

Greatly amusing it was, too, to see "il signore conte" go to mass on Sunday accompanied by his noble consort, dressed in a faded, but once glorious gown and with an enormous bouquet in the hand. But who would have dared smile? And when the proud personage exclaimed: "Oh signor, what a beautiful cane, what an exquisite old watch you have," who would have been impolite not to answer as custom demanded: "Why, Signor, it is a pleasure to me to offer it to you." But to accept the cane or the watch would have been grossly improper, nay almost an insult. Thus were customs in Sicily. No matter what you might express your admiration of the result would be these words: "I should be delighted if you would deign consider it your own." But it was always understood that no such offer must ever be accepted. It was a mere form of politeness.

Now it happened in the year 1869 that the Chevalier Emilio Cavarotti, returning from Paris, brought back a housekeeper to look after his estates consisting of two barren fields and some pastureland near Monreale. It must be mentioned that this manager was insolently young, pretty, nay almost beautiful and that she wore crinolines which created a scandal at Palermo, as well as a yellow exceedingly Parisian chignon which made her an object of hatred to the noble ladies of Palermo. But Chevalier Gavarotti was full of praise of her.

"She is an exceedingly able bookkeeper," he said. "I always got mixed up in my accounts, but now I feel certain that the peasants on my estates will no longer be able to cheat me."

And he added with some emotion: "Her name is Zelie. She was cashier in a great magazine in Paris, quite close to the hotel where I stopped. I found it very difficult to make the manager part with such a smart and loyal employee. She speaks Italian and is a perfect lady in every way."

But the Sicilians who felt deeply insulted, gravely shook their heads. There was not the slightest doubt that the Chevalier who was a bachelor was in danger of falling in love with a mere adventuress and they felt grieved that sooner or later the descendant of the noble Gavarottis would lower himself by marrying his servant.

Chevalier Emilio Gavarotti's closest friend was his neighbor Count Cesare Umberto, who like himself was an old bachelor, but a proud and fine looking specimen of manhood in spite of his gray hair. He was, in fact, considered a most irresistible Don Juan and the frivolous, coquettish Zelia was not slow in discovering his fine looks and manners. Count Cesare sighed at the thought that this charming Parisienne who seemed to be occupied with her account books, would soon leave her desk to become Signora Gavarotti.

One day, with a malicious wink in his eye, Count Cesare set out to visit his friend in his house near Monreale. When he departed, after saluting the pretty housekeeper in her office, he exclaimed:

"What an invaluable secretary you have, my dear friend. This young Mademoiselle Zelie is really stunning, and how sincerely devoted she seems to her work. She is indeed worth more than her weight in gold. You have found a pearl among housekeepers."

The Chevalier laughed and said, jokingly: "Why, my dear Cesare, she is yours if you want her."

The Count did not hestitate a single moment. He went into the ofice where Zelie was sitting and said:

"Mademoiselle, the Chevalier has permitted me to take you into my service immediately. I am wiling to pay twice your present salary. Will you come?"

The young lady astonished and furious at being thus disposed of without being consulted, turned to the Chevalier and asked:

"Is this true, Signor?"

Emilio Gavarotti was indignant, but his face betrayed no feeling as he replied:

"Yes, it is quite true, my child. You may leave whenever you want to."

Sicilian politeness left him nothing else to do, but he swore that he would get even.

A few days later he rang the bell of the Count's palace in Palermo with a smile on his lips.

"My dear Count," he said as sooon as he was inside the door, "what an incomparable secretary you have. Her intelligence equals her loyalty, she is evidently a most scrupulous and hard worker, a rare treasure among secretaries."

The Count looked at the Chevalier rather uneasily, he did not like the situation at all. But the Chevalier did not smile. On the contrary he bit his teeth together and hissed: "Well, Count! What do you say?"

"What should I say," asked Cesare.

"What should you say? Why common Sicilian politeness requires you to offer her to me when I praise her as I did just now. Every gentleman would know what to do in your position, it is only the rabble who ignore good tone."

The two men stood facing each other livid with rage.

"Chevalier," hissed Count Cesare at last, "your servant belongs to you. Take her back. But you have insulted me and I am going to kill you tomorrow morning."

Being a splendid shot, he did as he had said. The next morning a duel took place and Chevalier Gavarotti fell dead, with a bullet in his heart.

Mademoiselle Zelie, ended her days as Countess Zelie Umberto, but she soon became so arrogant that it was too much even for her husband, and more than once he was tempted to chase her out of his house. Many times he reproached her for having failed to follow the dictates of common politeness.

"If I had let the poor Chevalier keep that hoyden," he often sighed, "she would now have been Signora Emilio Gavarotti and my life would have been far happier and my conscience easier."

Household Suggestions

To keep the hands soft have a bottle of olive oil on your washstand, and before washing the hands rub a little of the oil well in. Then soap and wash as usual. The oil loosens the dirt and also keeps the skin soft.

Grass stains may be removed from washing materials by carefully rubbing the spots with a little fresh lard. Then wash in the usual way, and you will find that the stains have entirely disappeared.

To make bread crumbs quickly place a piece of bread in a muslin bag, tie the opening, and rub with the hands. The crumbs will be quite fine, and it will only take a minute or two to bake them.

To make cabbage digestible, when half boiled pour off the water and place in fresh boiling water.

When preparing the whitening for ceilings or pantries, add one pint of boiled milk, after you have put in as much water as you require. The milk gives the ceiling a beautiful gloss when dry and keeps the whitening from rubbing off.

Tea Made with Boiling Milk instead of water and allowed to stand for four minutes before being poured off the leaves is excellent for invalids and most nourishing.

An Economical Way of Frying Onions is to place sufficient cold water at the bottom of the pan to cover it, then slice the onions and put them into the pan with a piece of dripping the size of a walnut. Fried in this way they will not burn.

Introducing Himself.

A gentleman was once advertised to sing at a charity concert presided over by a city councilor—a self-made man.

The first song was "The Owl." On rising to announce it the chairman was interrupted and informed that the singer had not arrived, a fact that he duly notified to the audience.

A little later, however, the missing baritone made his appearance, and was observed by the worthy chairman, who called on him without delay.

But the singer had hurried, and had not recovered his breath, so, with apologies, this fact was suitably explained and another artiste requisitioned. At length the baritone was quite ready.

The councilor rose, and quite innocently discomfited the long-awaited singer by announcing with marked confidence:

"Mr. 'Ampton will now favor us with the longed-for 'Howl!' "

Up-to-Date Jokes

"Yes," said the meek-looking man, "I've no doubt you've had some great hunting experiences in your travels abroad."

"I have, indeed."

"Buffalo hunting——"

"Yes."

"And bear hunting——"

"Of course."

"Well, you just come round and let my wife take you house hunting and bargain hunting with her. Then you'll begin to know what real excitement is."

The late Sir W. S. Gilbert was inclined to be witty at the expense of the men and women who like to do amateur acting in the name of charity. An enthusiast once said to him:

"Mr. Gilbert, what do you think of our amateur club?"

"I think they are not so much a club as a bundle of sticks," returned the master of repartee.

LEGISLATORS IN RUSH TO AVOID EXTRA CALL

Governor Likely to Reconvene Assembly if Tax Reforms Are Not Made This Session.

Unless the Legislature, during its present session, enacts such tax reforms as the Governor thinks essential to the welfare and prosperity of the State, it is more than likely that it will be called immediately in extraordinary session, for the sole purpose of effecting those reforms.

The Governor himself has not uttered the threat of an extraordinary session, but some gentlemen close to him, and, in a way, authorized to speak for him, have let it be known that the possibility of an extra session has crossed the Executive mind more than once of late, and that failure upon the part of the Legislature to enact the tax reform the Governor holds absolutely necessary at this time more than likely will impel the Governor to the heroic remedy of an extra session.

Feverishly Active Now.

That these semi-authoritative rumors and hints have had their effect upon the General Assembly, is abundantly evidenced in the feverish activity lately manifested in some of the House committees.

House bill No. 1, by Mr. Cole, of Bartow, for instance, has been reported at last out of the Ways and Means Committee, and will go to the House at once with a favorable recommendation.

This first revenue measure introduced must be followed by many others, if the Slaton program of tax reform is carried out in its entirety, and the Senate must have an opportunity to pass upon all revenue measures produced by the House. Revenue measures can not originate in the Senate.

There has been much waste of time on the floor of both Houses, however, and unless the waste is cut out from this time forward the impression is that tax reform measures generally will fall by the wayside and fall of passage.

Committee Favors Inheritance Tax.

The Georgia House Tuesday morning rushed the adoption of a large number of local bills. On account of the joint meeting of the Senate and House to be addressed by Herbert E. Myrick and T. Sambola Jones, many matters were postponed.

The bill increasing the salaries of the members of the Prison Commission from $2,000 to $3,000 per year, which was killed in the House Monday, was granted reconsideration by a unanimous vote, on the plea of Representative Ed Wohlwender, who said if the reconsideration was granted he would make a motion that the bill be carried over until next year.

Committees Make Reports.

A flood of committee reports was placed upon the clerk's desk Tuesday morning. One of the most interesting was from General Judiciary Committee No. 1, which favorably reported three bills. One is a "blue sky" bill, curbing the activities of brokers indulging in the sale of worthless stocks and bonds by requiring the registering and certifying by the Comptroller General of all stocks and bonds.

Another is the inheritance tax bill, which provides a special tax on all inheritances of $5,000 or more. The other bill favorably reported is a special registration bill. It provides for a permanent registration list.

Inspector Attacks Apartment House

Attorney Albert Howell and F. E. Kneip, superintendent of the Fuller Construction Company, will be tried in Police Court before Recorder Nash Broyles Tuesday afternoon, charged with violating the building ordinances of the city by erecting a window in the Ponce DeLeon Apartments, for which the Fuller company has the contract, and of which Mr. Howell is one of the owners.

The cases against Mr. Howell and Mr. Kneip were made at the instance of Assistant Building Inspector Charles Bowen, who asserted that the show window extended 14 inches over the sidewalk on Peachtree street. Mr. Bowen will seek to have the window declared a nuisance and ordered removed.

Mayor Urges Haste In Work on Streets

Mayor Woodward called a conference of city and county officials in his office Tuesday in an effort to hasten the work on Ivy and West Mitchell streets and Georgia avenue.

The Mayor took this action just before signing a resolution authorizing the regrading of West Peachtree street, which will be begun next fall. The Georgia Railway and Power Company will begin relaying tracks on Ivy street Wednesday and within a few days the repaving will begin.

WEDDING SPEEDED BY SOFT ATLANTA MOON

MRS. JOSEPH W. HOOGE.

Miss Vera F. England, of Mobile, and Joseph W. Hooge, of Macon, were married here Monday as a result of Atlanta's beautiful moonlight nights—not that they don't have beautiful moonlight nights in Mobile and Macon, but the young sweethearts happened to be in neither of those places.

They have arranged to take an extended automobile honeymoon trip in order to view the bright moon from all parts of Georgia and Alabama.

Miss England came to Atlanta with her mother, Mrs. G. K. England, to visit the family of Charles W. England. Mr. Hooge came from Macon Monday to visit his fiancee.

The ceremony was performed by Father Robert F. Kennedy at the Church of Immaculate Conception at 11 o'clock Monday morning. The wedding date had been fixed for several months hence.

Veterans Will Meet Where They Enlisted

Fairburn, Ga., will be the scene of a reunion of the survivors of the "Bloody Thirtieth" Georgia Regiment July 25. It was at Fairburn that the Thirtieth was mustered into service September 26, 1861, and this will be its thirty-fifth annual reunion.

The Thirtieth contained the names of several thousand warriors on its roll during the four years of the war between the States. Its loss in human life is believed to have been as heavy as any other Confederate regiment.

Fairburn is preparing to give the veterans a great entertainment. All other Confederate veterans are invited.

HEAL BABY'S ITCHING SKIN WITH RESINOL

For babies tortured by eczema, prickly heat, teething rash, or other itching, burning skin eruption, there is instant relief in a warm bath with Resinol Soap and a gentle application of Resinol Ointment. The itching and scratching stop at once, baby can sleep, and soon the tormented little skin becomes clear and healthy again. The Resinol treatment is so absolutely free from anything that could injure the tenderest skin, that it can be used on even the youngest infant.

Resinol Soap for baby's daily bath will usually prevent any skin trouble and chafing because it contains the soothing, healing Resinol medication. Doctors have prescribed Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap for eighteen years and druggists everywhere sell them. Trial free; Dept. 7-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

LEAP TO STREET TO ESCAPE IN NIGHT FIRE

Flames in Rooming House Nearly Trap Guests, Roused From Sleep by Smoke.

Aroused from their sleep by the roar of flames and the smell of smoke, half a dozen roomers in the home of Mrs. J. Sutton, 55 Luckie street, escaped in their night attire Tuesday morning at 4:30 o'clock, when fire broke out in the upper story of the house. Some of them leaped from the windows just in time to avoid the falling roof.

It is not known how the fire started. It was discovered by one of the roomers, who awoke suddenly and found the entire upper portion of the house in flames. He shouted and awoke the other roomers and Mrs. Sutton, who also sleeps on the second floor. Those occuping rooms at the rear ran to the front of the building only a moment before the roof crashed in. One man was struck on the shoulder by a piece of falling timber, but was only slightly bruised.

The occupants of the house gathered in the upper front hall and found their escape cut off by a wall of smoke and flames that was fast devouring the stairway. Some of them braved the flames and ran down the stairway. Others let themselves down from the windows. As the last of the roomers reached the ground the roof of the house fell in.

The fire department extinguished the blaze before the building was destroyed, but not until it had been badly damaged.

Senator Smith to Address Assembly

Senator Hoke Smith will address a joint meeting of the Senate and House of Representatives Friday at noon.

The address is being looked forward to with interest, as Senator Smith is expected to touch upon the question of tax reform. This is the most important question to face any Georgia Legislature in many years, and is receiving more attention from the present General Assembly than any other matter.

SEARCHING SIDELIGHTS ON POLITICS IN GEORGIA

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Former Representative Pleasant A. Stovall, of Chatham, is in Atlanta for a few days, on his way to Athens, where he will visit before leaving for his diplomatic post of duty in Switzerland.

Mr. Stovall is extremely well liked by all the members of the General Assembly, and there are few, if any, he does not know more or less intimately. His nomination to be Minister to Switzerland, which was in line with his ambition for years, was particularly gratifying to his friends throughout all Georgia, and he has been the recipient of many warm and hearty congratulations since his arrival in the Capital.

"I have not the slightest doubt," said Mr. Stovall, "that the Wilson administration is to be a complete success in every way. The President is a hard and conscientious worker, and is, I think, carrying out to the letter the promises of the Baltimore platform.

"I am leaving for Switzerland within the next two weeks, and feel sure I shall find the assignment not only most pleasant, but one wherein I can be of real service to my country. I have a desire, of course, to be useful as well as ornamental, if I may so express myself, and there is much that may be done in the wonderful and progressive little nation of Switzerland that will be well worth while.

"The present Legislature impresses me as a safe and sane body, and not at all inclined to run amuck. I have talked with many members, and I am sure the desire to achieve lasting and helpful tax reforms is universal. There is not much time left, of course, but the Legislature can—and doubtless will—accomplish much in the four weeks yet to its credit."

The friends of United States Senator Bacon are urging all voters to go to the polls to-day and cast a ballot for Bacon to succeed himself in the Senate.

There is no opposition, of course, but as a compliment to the Senator, if for no other reason, it is very desirable that a large vote be cast.

Senator Bacon is the first man Georgia ever honored with a fourth term in the Senate, and he will be the first United States Senator named under the new popular elections amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Mr. Bell, of Clay, looks like Champ Clark, and that, of course, puts a large measure of responsibility upon him.

The gentleman from Clay is quiet and more or less reserved, but in repose his face does remind one strikingly of the great Missourian, and the temptation to call him "Mr. Speaker" frequently is rampant within the hearts of those who are used to addressing Mr. Clark after that fashion.

"Champ Clark is a mighty fine man, all right, and worth looking like," said Bell to-day, when the matter of his resemblance was mentioned in his presence.

Some of the friends of Frank Liebman, the energetic real estate man of Atlanta, have spoken favorably to Commissioner of Agriculture James D. Price about him, and asked Mr. Price to appoint Mr. Liebman to some sort of agricultural job.

Mr. Liebman is quite an authority, upon his own admission, on "setting out peas" and differentiating watermelon from sweet potato vines.

Mr. Price is said to have tendered Mr. Liebman a place as fertilizer inspector in the Okeefenokee swamp, and the Atlanta man is reported as looking upon the honor thus about to be thrust upon him with gratified eyes.

If Mr. Liebman accepts the appointment, it will take him away from Atlanta for four months each year, at a salary of $84.50 per month.

Augusta is making great preparations to entertain the General Assembly when it visits that city Saturday.

Augusta is proud of and deeply interested in the Georgia Medical College, located there, as a branch of the State University, and the citizens are doing everything in their power to advance its interests and welfare. Recently the standard of the college was raised greatly, and it now ranks with the foremost institutions of the kind in the world.

It has been 125 years since the Georgia Legislature was in Augusta, and as it may be as long before it gets there again—although Augusta sincerely hopes not—the forthcoming visit is to be made memorable.

A special train will be run for the benefit of the visitors, going and coming, and a party of not less than 150 has been provided for.

The municipal court bill for Atlanta will be introduced in the General Assembly by the Fulton County delegation on next Monday.

This bill has been carefully drawn and is thought to embody the very best and most up-to-date ideas in courts of the kind.

It will have the backing of the bar and citizens generally, and likely will pass both Houses without friction of any sort.

It is by no means a sure thing that the Tippins bill will not be reintroduced in the present Legislature, notwithstanding the fact that the Georgia Anti-Saloon League is reported to have decided not to request it.

There are some members who think that measure exactly the thing the State needs.

Whether it can be passed is, of course, problematical, but its friends may try it out again, nevertheless.

The best story of the year, "Adam's Clay," by Cosmo Hamilton, begins in next Sunday's American. Don't miss a chapter. Every one bristles with interest.

An Event Which Will Prove Attractive to All Women Loving Fresh Undermuslins

Our New York buyer found a prominent maker of fashionable undermuslins with an end-of-the-season OVERLOT. We made him an offer for the entire surplus, which was accepted, and the goods will be ready for your inspection Wednesday. This is a collection of cool and crisp MUSLINWEAR ITEMS, which will be shown at an opportune moment when your midsummer wardrobe needs replenishing.

Eighty-Eight Cents for New Garments, Many of Them Worth Up to One-Fifty Each

Gowns

About 18 styles of popular 1913 nightgowns, of nainsooks and sheer materials, representing manufacturer's best efforts of the season. Being from this celebrated maker, it is obvious that they are the most wanted styles. Included in the assortment are many of the noncrinkable crepe gowns, which are now so popular and are so much wanted for traveling uses.

A Wonderful Sale of Undermuslins AT 88c EACH

Combinations

About ten styles of the popular combination garments will be shown in this One-Price sale. No garment is so widely popular as the combination. In this lot are many different models of sheer and soft finish materials, mostly in drawer effects. Some of these garments are trimmed with laces, others are of the all-over embroidery styles; many are trimmed with shadow laces; others with medallions and blind embroidery.

Petticoats

Although these petticoats being machine made, they are excellent reproductions of French pieces, and are remarkable at the price quoted. These are mostly of the new "flat styles" effectively embroidered on the flounces. These values are out of the ordinary and we are happy to be able to supply you at little figures these petticoats, which have recently sprung into favor, being now the most wanted garment in the trousseau.

Drawers

In this collection are about ten styles of sheer nainsook and lingerie cloth drawers. Many of them are in the new straight effects, others in the Dorothy style; while many are the ever popular circular. Some of them are simply trimmed with convent scallops; others more elaborately trimmed with either Val or shadow laces; many are a combination of both lace and embroidery, and a few are finished with just a flat band of embroidery.

Corset Covers

Comisole, the newest thing in corset covers. These are in shadow laces, tucked nets or all-over embroidery. We also show the sturdier garments of nainsooks. Some of these are trimmed in Val laces or medallions. All are finished with beading drawn with ribbon. Many of the corset covers have ribbon shoulder straps. In this lot we show a few of the convent scalloped, with hand-embroidered floral designs.

THREE INVADING ARMIES CAMP IN BULGARIA

Roumanians, Greeks and Servians Co-operate—Vanquished Make Abject Plea to Russia.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BELGRADE, July 15.—Three hostile armies of invasion are on Bulgarian soil.

The Roumanians under Crown Prince Ferdinand, who crossed the Danube, halted and are co-operating with Greek and Servian forces, which have also invaded Bulgaria. Servians have entered Bulgaria west of Kustendil, while another allied army of Greeks and Serbs have crossed the Bulgar frontier through Djumbala.

A St. Petersburg dispatch says that Bulgaria has informed Russian that she unconditionally accepts any peace terms with Russia, acting for Greece and Servia, may present. Bulgaria has also consented to allow Roumania to annex any extent of territory on condition that Roumanian troops do not enter Sofia.

Further reports of Bulgarian atrocities in the south were received by the Servian Government.

Peace Parley Expected To Be Opened This Week.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 15.—Peace negotiations between representatives of Bulgaria, Servia and Greece will open here this week, according to the present program of the Russian Foreign Office.

M. Sazonoff, Russian Foreign Minister, said to-day that Bulgarian peace envoys are expected to open negotiations at once. After the signature of the protocol of an armistice fighting will stop.

Word from Sofia says that Bulgarian troops, driven toward the capital from every angle, are concentrating around Sofia.

An international inquiry of reports of atrocities in Macedonia will probably be conducted in Paris or Vienna.

King Peter Threatens to Dictate Peace in Sofia.

VIENNA, July 15.—King Peter of Servia threatens to "dictate" terms of Balkan peace in Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, unless the Bulgarian Government immediately agrees to the preliminary draft of a treaty of peace drawn by Premier Pasitch of Servia and Premier Venizelos of Greece.

A telegram to-day from Athens states that Greece and Servia are in accord on the terms of peace to which Bulgaria must submit. In a general way they include the following:

Greece to hold Salonika and occupy about 5,000 square miles of territory in Southern Macedonia.

The railway from Salonika to Mitrovitza to be internationalized.

Servia to have a commercial outlet on the Aragon sea, full permission for the construction of a ship canal from the Danube southward and of a railway to the Adriatic.

Bulgaria to give up all Grek and Servian prisoners of war.

Servia to occupy all the fertile district from the Southern Servian boundary southward and eastward from the Vardar River to Demir Hissar, thence eastward to the Rhodope mountains.

Massacre by Allies Charged by Bulgars.

SOFIA, July 15.—The entire Bulgarian and Turkish population of Pravista, in Southern Macedonia, has been massacred by the Greek army, which occupied Kavala last week, it was officially announced to-day by the Bulgarian Government.

Replying to stories of slaughter by Bulgarian troops, emanating from Athens, the Bulgarian Government to-day made public reports of Bulgarian officers in the South, which lay charges of grave excesses at the hands of the Greeks.

Sixty Thousand Homeless.

Sixty thousand Bulgarians and Turks in the district about Pravista and Kavala are homeless, these reports say, and on the verge of famine. The Greeks and Servians are charged with having ravaged the country and cut down refugees.

FREE VOTES CUT AS PONY RACE NEARS END

Bonuses Remain Attractive and Fair Enough, However, to Spur Contestants to Best Efforts.

It is hard to tell who got the most fun out of Sunday's outing at Grant Park, the boys and girls who are in the contests for The Georgian and American ponies, or their elders who gathered to watch them.

Of course, the fun of driving the ponies was all for the children. But

Josephine Simril, 9 East Alabama street.

the elders got their amusement in hearing the droll remarks of the youngsters, and in seeing their shining faces.

One little fellow spent a good deal of time trying to pick out the pony he wanted. He feels sure he will win, and was concerned only in selecting the best animal.

After viewing all in the park, he still was dissatisfied.

"What's the matter?" asked the contest manager. "Aren't they good ponies?"

"Yes, sir. But please, sir, have you any with blue eyes?"

All the children are working hard now to take full advantage of the extra vote offer which closes Saturday night at 10 o'clock. Until that time there will be liberal allowances of bonus votes for every club of $35, $25 or $15 in subscriptions. The subscriptions may be of any length, from two years down to one month.

As announced, each bonus offer to stimulate the contestants will be a little less attractive as the contest draws to a close. Manifestly it would be unfair to offer in the last week extra votes in greater numbers than during previous periods, thus putting the contestants who "got busy" early at a disadvantage. But the present offer is sufficiently attractive to bring out the best efforts of every contestant.

Guarantee Heads To Be Defendants

Judge Pendleton announced from the bench Tuesday that he would issue an order in the Guarantee Banking and Trust Company litigation making S. E. Smith, president of the company; H. S. Miles, secretary and treasurer, and W. A. Foster and George H. Sims, directors, parties defendant in the action.

J. N. Robertson, appointed receiver for the company pending a decision by the Supreme Court, will act as receiver for the property of the four men, keeping it intact until the litigation is settled.

OBITUARY.

The funeral of Pearl Vaughan, 16-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Vaughan, of 260 Bellwood avenue, who died at a local sanitarium at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, was held from Poole's chapel Tuesday morning. Interment at Hollywood.

The body of Mrs. Lucy W. Matthews, who died at a private sanitarium at noon Monday, was sent to her home in Macon, Ga., Monday night for funeral and interment. Mrs. Matthews was forty-two years old, and is survived by her husband, a prominent Macon furniture dealer, and seven children.

The body of Carolyn Francis Blackwell, the four-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Blackwell, who died at the residence, 481 Whitehall street, at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, will be sent to Villa Rica at 4:30 Tuesday afternoon for funeral and interment.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK.

Forsyth Bill Is Good.

Valerie Bergere and her company in an intensely dramatic sketch, "Judgment;" Britt Wood and his harmonica; Shelvey Brothers, three unusually clever contortionists, and a bevy of pretty girls in a minstrel act, combine to form a good show at the Forsyth this week. Miss Bergere headlines the show, in a playlet that gives full opportunity for her emotional powers.

The Metropolitan minstrels have some good songs, but the action is made dull by two boys, "end men," whose comedy is old and very sad. The five girls are pretty, and one of them, Flo Bert, has an unusually good contralto voice.

Other numbers are Work and Play, acrobats; Les Cougets, with a novel musical act, and Clark and Verdi, who entertain with a line of Italian jokes.

Friends of Bible in Schools Win Point

Enemies of the measure requiring reading of the Bible in Georgia public schools won their first victory Tuesday morning when the Senate voted unanimously to recommit the bill for further consideration by the Education Committee, on a motion by Senator Foster, chairman of the committee, who held a lengthy conference Tuesday morning with Rabbi David Marx, Dr. Wilmer and Father Rappler who oppose the bill.

That another fight will be made when the committee grants a hearing to those who oppose the bill according to statements Tuesday morning by Dr. H. M. DuBose, an advocate of the measure.

Bars 'Shylocks' From Shore in Big Estate

ANNISTON, July 15.—"Shylocks" are barred under the provision of the will of the late Col. J. G. Farley, retired Anniston capitalist and reputed millionaire, who died here recently.

Farley's three children, Mrs. A. J. Goodwin and J. G. Farley, of this city, and Mrs. Harry Bellenger, of Gadsden, are made executors of the estate, and any of them who lends any money from the estate shall be removed from office. All money now invested in bonds is to be withdrawn and invested in real estate.

Farley's widow is given a one-fourth share in the estate.

Senate Will Break Long-Speech Record

WASHINGTON, July 15.—A record in sustained speechmaking will be made by the Republicans when the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill comes up for debate Wednesday.

Senator La Follette is scheduled to wage a wordy war lasting seven days. Senator Smoot has estimated the length of his diatribe against Democratic iniquity at five days. Senator Smith of Michigan, will talk three days.

Many long speeches are scheduled from the Democratic ranks.

Wilson Will Go to Cornish Again Soon

WASHINGTON, July 15.—President Wilson is planning to take a week-end trip to Cornish, N. H., on either August 7 or 14, according to White House reports to-day.

The Chief Executive will go to the "summer capitol" on Thursday and return to Washington the following Monday.

CLAIMS LOAN MEN MULCTED HIM

Conductor Says He Paid Extortionate Interest and Asks Retraint of Garnishment.

The operations of money lenders were unearthed Tuesday morning when William S. Coburn, representing Sidney Baxter, a conductor on the Southern Railway, went before Judge Newman in the United States District Court and applied for an order restraining two money lenders from levying on the wages of his client.

Saturday Baxter filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, placing his assets at $930 and liabilities at $1,376, asking that his salary outstanding, $240, and household property valued at $500 be exempt.

In 1909 Baxter borrowed $150 from the Birmingham Discount Company, which charged him, he says, $15 per month interest. Baxter in his petition claims to have paid the interest for three years and still owes the concern $150, the principal.

Again, on July 1, 1912, Baxter borrowed from the Atlanta Finance Company, which is represented in Atlanta by G. H. Rosenbush, $105, and for this amount he claims to have paid $11 per month interest for one year, and still owes the original $105.

These two concerns from which Baxter borrowed threaten to garnishee his wages, the petition states.

U. S. Experts Guests Of Lady Aberdeen

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DUBLIN, July 15.—Lady Aberdeen, on the occasion of a brilliant reception for the American commission on agriculture, which is now in Ireland, entertained the visitors in her latest project.

She is establishing in Dublin in a fine old Georgian mansion the Welcome Club, for the reception of Irish visitors from America. At this club travelers register and are given information telling them how to make the most of the sojourn in Ireland.

Seaboard May Bid On A., B. & A. Road

CORDELE, July 15—An impression prevails in railroad circles here that the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company will bid for the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic road, when it is placed on sale to satisfy the creditors.

It is also rumored that if it bids in the property the Seaboard will consolidate the shops of the two roads for the eastern division in Cordele. The rumors are being generally discussed here.

Waits a Month and Wins $14,000 Prize

MOOSE JAW, SASK., July 15.—H. Johnson, formerly of Itasca County, Minnesota, obtained a $14,000 tract after waiting in front of the Land Office here for a month. During his wait torrential rains fell, and for many days there weer others ahead of Johnson. Numerous fights occurred and the police had to interfere several times.

Johnson almost lost his prize in the last hour by going into the Land Office too soon and finding another man in his place when he returned.

The police, however, let him remain first.

Held for Slaying in Houston 23 Years Ago

ALBANY, July 15.—A negro, believed to be the murderer of Joseph Fudge, a white man, who was killed 23 years ago at Henderson, Houston County, is in jail here. He was arrested on a trivial charge and while in jail is alleged to have confessed to another negro that he was the murderer.

Fudge operated a blacksmith shop at Henderson. Following a dispute between him and a negro employee, the black struck him on the head with a heavy stick, killing him instantly.

Young Caminetti at Work as Pipe Layer

TAFT, CAL., July 15.—That Drew Caminetti, who is awaiting trial on charge of white slaving, has been in Taft since last month, became known when the men working with him on a pipe line crew tipped it off that a youth called "Blackie" had repeatedly telephone to some unknown place and asked for messages for Drew Caminetti.

Caminetti came to Taft shortly after June 1 from Sacramento, and immediately hired out to a pipe line contracting company.

Kentucky Governor Tries to End Strike

LEXINGTON, KY., July 15.—An attempt to arbitrate the strike of street car motormen and conductors was made to-day when a conference of Governor McDermott with traction and labor officials was called.

There was no rioting to-day and company officials said they would not attempt to operate any cars with strikebreakers.

GEORGIA MAN CONSUL.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The following presidential appointment was confirmed by the Senate to-day: Nathaniel B. Stewart, of Georgia, to be Consul at Milan, Italy.

SALES OF AUGUST FEATURE COTTON

Bullish Talk Based on Damage by Boll Weevil in Texas Causes Late Buying.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The cotton market opened steady to-day, first prices ranging from 2, unchanged to 3 points lower than Monday's final. The weather map was slightly bullish, but this was slightly offset by the bearish prediction of a big local house.

There was no special feature to trading after the call, transactions being held within a small volume. Sentiment continues bearish and Liverpool was reported a seller of the old crop positions. This promoted an active selling movement, with August the heaviest pressed option. August dropped from 12.12 to 11.99, while other positions declined some 3 to 6 points from the initial level. Later the market developed a steadier tone, resulting in prices rallying a few points, and during the late forenoon price movement was practically unchanged from the previous close.

Trade buying of new as well as old crop positions was the chief feature of a quiet market. Many operators would have been glad to have purchased cotton on the decline, but neither buying nor selling orders were sufficient to create wide fluctuations in prices.

The market is kept from depression by the continued decrease of the stock—and, on the other hand, it is prevented from advancing by the favorable progress of the crop. However, the most important factor which is the predominating influence against activity is the proposal to tax cotton futures. The large interests, as well as the small firms, are unable to see how to do business in the future and are inclined to await further development of news from Washington before pushing their commitments to any extent.

At the close the market was steady with July 1 point higher, while other positions were 2 to 6 points decline from the closing quotations of Monday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 15.—With the exception of Tennessee, North Carolina and West Texas, where it was cloudy, fair weather prevailed over the belt, with only a few scattered showers. Indications are for increasing cloudiness in the northwestern quarter, with a rise in temperature; prospects are for rain and cooler weather toward the end of the week. Partly cloudy to fair weather, with a few scattered showers in the central and eastern States; temperatures normal.

The market opened unchanged, but soon eased to 11.41 for December on a 12-point break in August in New York. While the impregnable position of July is admitted, it is thought that the fate of July is too unimportant to delay adjustment to a new situation, and that the promise of abundant new supplies for the coming month is so strong as to put August futures beyond the grip of the manipulative control of a few.

The market rallied a little toward 11 o'clock in anticipation of bullish remarks in the Government weekly weather report about the hot spell in Texas in the middle of last week.

STOCKS RESPOND TO ACTIVE BUYING

Propitious Cables and Long Interests Liquidate, Cause Strength All Day.

By CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Most stocks at the opening of the stock market to-day responded to more optimistic news with the result that gains were scattered thorugh the list. Union Pacific advanced 1 point, but later reacted. Canadian Pacific was 1¼ higher. Amalgamated Copper was up ⅝ at the outset, but later lost all its advance.

The growing possibility that a railroad strike on the Eastern lines will be averted and cabled telling of stronger European markets had an early effect which profit-taking removed.

Among the other gains were United States Steel common ⅜, Southern Pacific ¼, Chino Copper ½, Northern Pacific ¼, Reading ¾, Pennsylvania ⅛, Missouri Pacific ¼, Erie ⅛, Chesapeake and Ohio ⅛, American Can ⅛.

American Telephone and Telegraph lost ½; American Smelting also shaded.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were sluggish. Canadian Pacific in London was strengthened on repurchases.

After the first fifteen minutes of trading the market became dull and price movements returned unchanged to ¼ higher, with the exception of Chesapeake and Ohio, which advanced ⅞, Anaconda, Canadian Pacific, Erie and Pennsylvania Railroad advanced ¼. Southern Pacific rose ½; other issues were unchanged.

Call money loaning at 2¼.

Trading continued extremely narrow in the last hour and at times a condition of almost absolute stagnation prevailed. The most important feature was the absence of supply and prices were mostly maintained at the level obtained earlier in the day. Canadian Pacific went to 214 for a net gain of 2 points on the day. Steel went to 53, but receded fractionally. Union Pacific gained over the mid-day range and Amalgamated Copper also moved up slightly.

The market closed firm. Governments unchanged; other bonds steady.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Money on call 2¼; time money unchanged; sixty days 4 per cent, ninety days 5¼, six months 6@6½.

Posted rates: Sterling exchange 4.84@4.87½, with actual business in bankers' bills at 4.8675 for demand and 4.8315 for sixty-day bills.

Prime mercantile paper unchanged.

METAL MARKET.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The metal market was dull to-day.

Quotations: Copper, spot, 13¼ bid; July, 13¼@13⅜; August, 13¼@13⅜; September, 13⅛@13⅜; lead, 4.30@4.40; spelter, 5.25@5.55; tin, 39.70@40.00.

PRICE OF SHEEP SOAR.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Another 15 to 25c advance was scored by the sheep market to-day, Idaho lambs selling at 8.55. Sorting was light, which made prices even higher than they looked on paper. Beef and pork are so high that mutton is getting the benefit.

Cattle trade was nominally steady, although Kansas City had another big run of draught refugees out of Kansas pastures. Hogs were strong to 5c higher with a 9.30 top.

Wheat—No. 2 red .....104 @104½
Corn—No. 2 ..... 61¾
Oats—No. 2 39

CHICAGO, July 15.—Wheat showed losses of ¼ to ½c early to-day on the weakness in the markets abroad, coupled with larger receipts in the Northwest than expected, and the pressure of wheat off the English coast. There was good selling by scattered longs and the buying was of a half-hearted character.

Corn was up ⅛ to ¼c on small offerings in the pit and good buying by shorts. Rains are badly needed in sections of Canada.

Oats were off ⅛ to ⅜c and slow.

Provisions were firmer with hogs, which were 5c higher at the yards.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: We think, summing up the general situation, that the favorable action is to buy cotton on soft spots.

Miller & Co.: The market continued in control of the summer position, but in our opinion it can only be a short time before conditions surrounding the present growth must prove the dominating influence, and if conditions continue as favorable as they are at present will make for lower prices.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We continue to advise moderate purchases on declines.

Josephthal, Louchheim & Co.: We continue to advise sales on all strong spots.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.: We would not hesitate to sell the new crop on rallies.

Logan & Bryan: We rather feel that purchases on moderate setbacks are in order.

SEVERE PAIN WITH HEMORRHOIDS

Got No Rest Nights. Had to Be Propped Up in Bed. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured in Three Weeks.

Bissell, Ala. — "I was troubled for several years with protruding hemorrhoids. They caused pain of the most severe kind and some loss of blood. They were so inflamed that the touch of anything against them was most intense agony. I got no rest nights and had to have my legs and feet propped up in the bed.

"I tried all kinds of advertised cures and I was told that an operation was the only relief. I suffered untold agony. I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. I tried it and then procured a box of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I took the Cuticura Soap and made a solution with warm water and bathed the affected parts before applying the Cuticura Ointment. I was cured sound and well in three weeks' time. A cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment accomplished what all else failed to do." (Signed) L. R. Cook, Nov. 12, 1912.

For red, rough, chapped and bleeding hands, itching, burning palms, and painful finger-ends with shapeless nails, a one-night Cuticura treatment works wonders. Soak hands, on retiring, in hot water and Cuticura Soap. Dry, anoint with Cuticura Ointment and wear soft bandages or old, loose gloves during the night. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Now for Silk Remnants

The Selling Starts at Nine o'Clock

The silk section has given over every semblance of a remnant it possessed for this sale—that its "swan song" sale shall be its best.

There will be no more Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. silk remnant sales this season!

So be advised—this is your best opportunity to secure a dress, a coat, a waist pattern at smallest cost.

Here—we will list some of the kinds included—

Crepe de Chines,	Foulards,
Messalines,	Taffetas,
Chiffons,	Brocades,
Wash Silks,	Kimono Silks,
Corded Silks,	China Silks,
Poplins,	Novelties.

And each of these could be further divided into many varieties—all this season's silks, now sold down to remnant lengths (one-half yard to ten yards), because they were the silks in the colors and patterns and at the prices that the discriminating women of Atlanta wanted.

The silks remain as fine as ever. The prices, however, are changed very materially.

Many are reduced one-third.

Many are reduced one-half.

And a great many are reduced more than one-half.

Indeed, at these reductions this will be the last Silk Remnant Sale of the season!

Buy for now, buy for the fall and save, knowing no such opportunity will be offered again.

None of these silks on approval, none exchanged, none C. O. D.

Women's Hats Bow to New Prices

The bow amounts to a fine courtesy, so very low are the new prices. And now that so many women want another hat, but an inexpensive one, perhaps for traveling, perhaps for no other reason than to have just a fresh hat, this sale amounts to a timely event.

Hats at $1.00

Twenty-five of these—and as many different hats. Originally a number of these were $10.00 and from that down to $5.00. Many of them are just what women will want for traveling or for street wear. Dark colors mostly, too variously shaded and trimmed to describe them.

$1.00!

It would not pay for the ribbons, the feathers, the flowers or the shapes!

Hats at $5.00

Some thirty of these, and all fresh and charming. Just for our workrooms. In the height of the season these would be $7.50 and up. There are light hats for wear with white dresses, there are smart dark hats for going-away; there are a few mourning hats; there are a few leghorns, a few Neapolitans. The greatest number are hemps.

"THE editor regrets," ran the loathsome legend—"The editor regrets——"

"As if he ever saw the story!"

The despised and rejected contributer—one R. A. Cator—snatched a pen, dipped it furiously in the ink, and wrote as follows:

"Dear Sir—By to-night's post a short story of mine reached me, with the usual formula—your regrets. But facts lead me to the conclusion that you can not possibly have read the story. Then why regret? I posted it this morning at 12:30. Presumably it reached your table about 3 o'clock, since personally addressed to you. And at 5:30 it was again in the post—with your regrets!

"From slight knowledge of editors and their ways, I consider the chances are ten to one against the possibility that you read the story between 3:30 and 5, when you put the office and its cares behind you. Don't imagine I wish to quarrel with your method of conducting business; but, considering the fact that I was introduced to you by a certain well-known novelist, I can't help feeling the irony of having my story returned unread—your regrets accompanying it. Next time won't you detain the MS. a day or two, to give your reply some vague connection with possibility? With apologies for having troubled you to consider my work—an error that shall not occur again—believe me, yours faithfully. R. A. CATOR."

Now the editor of the magazine in question—The Crown, to be precise—was something new in editors. One pictures them a collection of dust-dry, middle-aged creatures, who drink ink, eat foolscap and brandish blue pencils. The pilot of the The Crown didn't fit that picture one scrap.

He Was Young.

He was young, a jovial soul and, though not actually an Adonis, tolerably good looking and invariably well groomed. Above all, he had a sense of humor. Cynics have observed that editors are better off without it, but that's a matter of opinion.

Having degested R. A. Cator's infuriated epistle, the editor's sense of humor turned up trumps, and he in turn put pen to paper and wrote thus:

"Dear Mr. Cator—A thousand apologies! Having been a free lance once, I ought to have known better than to strain your powers of credulity in such a careless manner. To be strictly truthful, though, this statement will doubtless surprise you—that I did read your story. And it was with real regret I decided it wasn't quite suitable for the Crown.

"Having just gone to press with the next number, I returned to the office after lunch, and, by some extraordinary fluke, no callers came. Your story was the first of a pile on my desk, and I read it, with many others. I admit, sorrowfully, that such a thing could not have happened once in twelve months, and it was thoughtless of me to return your MS. in such an apparently heartless manner. Am I forgiven? If so, send along some more stories, and come up one day—Tuesday afternoon is best for us—and we can discuss some ideas. Yours truly,

"RICHARD SEALE."

About a week later Richard Seale bade farewell to a talkative caller with a sigh of relief. Sitting down in his chair of office, he tapped a formidable pile of short stories with a blue pencil, lit a cigarette, ejected a stream of smoke, and sighed again, profoundly. Cupid, though he did not know it, was perched on his shoulder.

"Life," pondered Richard Seale—the next number weighing on his mind—"Life is sad. I must go to a musical comedy to-night. Let me——"

A small bright-eyed boy entered abruptly.

"Yes?" inquired the pilot of The Crown.

"A lady, sir—see you, sir—if she can." He thrust forward a strip of pasteboard.

"Miss Rosalind Ames," read the editor, flicking the card with a nicotine-stained forefinger, and indicating with a nod that he would see Miss Ames.

She Was Pretty.

She was pretty; in fact, she was very, very pretty. One glance told him that much; the next showed him that under her assured manner she was very nervous. Much experience had helped him to read humanity with swiftness and accuracy.

"Good afternoon!" said he kindly. "I'm sorry I had to keep you waiting. To-day's rather busy, and——"

"Please don't apologize," begged Miss Rosalind Ames. "The waiting-room proved most amusing and instructive." She sank gracefully into the chair he dragged forward, facing the light.

Her complexion stood the test. Of course, he had known it would; but he was one of those men who prefer to test their theories when possible. Leaning back in his chair, long legs crossed with nonchalant ease, he regarded her under lowered eyelids, with skill born of much practice.

"I wonder if I could do some work for The Crown?" Rosalind Ames was saying. Her voice was soft and rather low, but very distinct.

It was the sort of voice one liked to listen to, so the editor decided. And he let her talk.

Before she left Seale had promised to give her literary efforts careful consideration. Reluctantly he said "Good-by" to his fair caller.

Very Enterprising.

Miss Ames, besides being pretty, proved enterprising. A story bearing her name arrived the next morning. Richard Seale read it, and it irritated him strangely. But, among other letters, his typist inscribed the following:

"Dear Miss Ames—I have read your story with interest, and much regret that it does not strike me as quite the thing for The Crown. However, I think it is capable of alteration, and if you can come to-morrow afternoon I shall be glad to talk it over with you."

And he remained hers truly.

Next day she called and her visit on this occasion lasted nearly half an hour, thereby causing much fuming on the part of other contributors, forcibly entrapped in the salubrious atmosphere of the waiting room.

At length Richard Seale, having remembered that she must leave sooner or later, allowed her to depart, bearing a typewritten MS. in her muff and a brain seething with words of encouragement, commendation and emendation.

The story was accepted, pounded into shape on the editorial table, duly to burst into the glory of print. And Rosalind Ames continued to visit the offices of The Crown. How could she help it? Work had to be discussed.

One day, as Seale sat smoking, while a stack of manuscripts languished, unread, at his elbow, the office boy appeared and extended a card.

Mr. Cator Calls.

"R. A. Cator," read the editor. "Cator? Cator? Who is—— oh! I remember! Yes, I'll see him now."

The boy vanished. Two minutes fled into eternity. Then Rosalind Ames opened the door.

Perturbed and horribly annoyed, he rose.

"How d'you do?" he began, half stammering.

"I—er—I wanted to see you, but I'll have to ask you to wait half a second. They ought not to have sent you up. There's a man coming now. I must see him—an old promise. Will you—er——"

"You don't understand," said Rosalind Ames, her eyes unusually bright. "I——"

"Yes, yes," interrupted the wielder of blue pencils, "I quite understand, and I'll see you directly the gentleman is gone."

Rosalind Ames looked him straight in the face, and laughed.

"No you won't," she said. "You see, I'm R. A. Cator!"

"You! You!"

"Yes. May I sit down? Thanks. Don't look so horribly scared. I'm R. A. Cator. Are you 'Angry'?" Her tone was anxious.

"Angry? Oh, no, but why, please?"

"I'm Rosalind Ames Cator, and I wanted to be a writer, and every one told me that I should get on much quicker as a man. I had a bet with a friend that Rosalind Ames would get a story accepted before R. A. Cator, so I worked under two names. When I used my initials every editor seemed to take it for granted that I was a man. You remember that letter you wrote me? It began, 'Dear Mr. Cator.,'"

He started, gripping his chair arm.

"By Jove! So it did!"

"Well, you wouldn't accept the work of R. A. Cator," continued the girl, "so I thought I'd try my luck as myself! I came to see you, and you were very kind. Stories that have been returned to R. A. Cator have brought checks to Rosalind Ames. I made up my mind to win my bet, and then give up journalism. Well, I won, with your help. Now do you understand?"

Apparently he did.

She continued to write for The Crown, but later her stories were signed, "Rosalind Ames Cator Seale."

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I LOVE to read of heroes who were heroing long ago,
For history lends its glamour to the mention of their deeds
When men like Richard Coeur d'Lion went out to swat the foe;
And makes us think that just such men are what the country needs.
I love to think how Hector fought before the walls of Troy,
And how the great Marc Antony became a woman's toy.
I worship Julius Caesar, and I'm strong for old Ulysses,
Who flirted with the Sirens when he should have joined his missus.

But I'm very, very grateful,
When my appetite I curb,
That I needn't eat a plateful
Of some rank Egyptian herb;
And I'm glad I take a Pullman
When I travel o'er the land,
For the noble old Crusaders
Had to hoof it through the sand.

Our names will ne'er be written large for future folk to see,
For carving warriors with a sword has somehow ceased to be.
For us no bugle will resound, no war cry rend the air;
We'll sit at no Round Table, save, perhaps, to fill two pair;
But we've got cafes to eat in, and we've got electric fans;
We do not drink from leaky gourds, we do not eat from pans.
And so I often figure, as I crank my big red car,
That all those good old ages can remain just where they are.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Don Robledo frowned and amused himself by kicking the chairs and stamping about the room until he heard the girl's footsteps. She stopped at the door when she caught sight of him. Her face hardened and her eyebrows were lifted a fraction.

"Oh, it's you," she said slowly.

Don Robledo winced and sneered.

"Modesty bids me hesitate," he replied. "But candor compels me to admit—it is I."

The girl said nothing, but continued to gaze at him with a faintly contemptuous expression. His face flushed. He swore under his breath and in three quick steps was standing over her.

"Well, well—can't you say you're glad to see me?" he snarled.

"I can, but I won't," was the cool response. "Where is father? He called me."

A Tigress.

"Never mind father! He's looking after my horse. I want to talk to you!"

Oh, you do?" retorted the girl, looking him over with studied insolence. "Well, you won't in that tone."

Don Robledo ground his teeth. You will gather that he was neither tactful nor even-tempered.

"I won't, eh—and why not?" he gritted out. "You little spitfire!"

This outbreak was received with even a larger measure of contempt.

"What do you want to say to me?" inquired Dolores, coldly.

"You little devil!" He seized her wrists in his powerful hands and pulled her toward him. "Come here! Sacristi! What's come over you these days? You are about as fond and sweet-tempered as a tigress! Anybody would think you didn't care for me at all! What have I done?"

The girl made no effort to free herself, but she looked him full in the eyes and her own were blazing.

"It is what you have NOT done! For fifteen days your Prince has been in need of you and you have not had the courage to go to him. Let go my wrists!"

She struggled to break his grip, in the midst of which Gaspar and Maximo returned and stood staring from the doorway.

"Let go my wrists!" panted the girl, but they made no move to go to her aid.

"Wait a minute—wait a minute!" he taunted her. "You can't get away—so don't try!" He drew her close to him and attempted to kiss her. He relaxed the hold on her wrists just a little. She got one hand free and struck him in the face. He let go the other hand in sheer surprise and she quickly darted out.

"You little cat!" he snarled. "I'll trim your claws!"

And Maximo let loose a roar of laughter. Gaspar nudged him violently with an apprehensive glance at the enraged and baffled bully. Don Robledo strode up to the pair, licking his thin lips. The mirth died out of Maximo's face and the apprehension deepened in that of his friend.

The fire of the dark eyes at last burned only on the veteran.

"Well, what are you laughing at—son of nobody?"

"Why—why," stammered Maximo, and his friend broke in with haste and trepidation.

"A jest in the wineroom, senor."

"Huh!" growled the firebrand. "Lucky for you! Is Pedro in there?"

"Yes, senor!"

"Then—get out of my way!"

He swaggered through them and disappeared down the passage. The two villagers drew a long breath of relief.

"Who is that gentle soul?" inquired Maximo.

Gaspar's cow eyes opened wide.

"That's Robledo," he said, in a voice of awe. "Don Robledo!"

"Robledo!" echoed the soldier. "I thought they'd hanged him long ago."

"Not that man." Gaspar shook his head knowingly. "He has too much influence behind him. He is a ruffian and a cut-throat—but he is a born fighter."

The veteran's courage, which had been somewhat dashed by the fiery suddenness of the advance of the bully, rose again.

"Some day," he growled, and rolled his eyes savagely, "some day another 'born fighter' will come along and stop his noise."

"There goes a born fighter," chuckled Gaspar, as Dolores came back. "She stopped his noise!"

"Yes, in a temper. She's the devil's own daughter!"

The next instant the tray that the girl was carrying crashed to the floor and she broke into a scream that made the groups jump a full length forward.

A Light.

"Father! Father!" shrieked the girl. She was staring out of the window beneath the stairs, her eyes wide with terror and horror and her hands clutching at her cheeks.

"What is it? What's the matter?" cried the comrades, aghast. Pedro and the other guests of the inn rushed wildly into the room, excitedly demanding the cause of the alarm.

The girl pointed fearfully up to the dark mass of the castle far above them.

"A light! A light in the castle!" she gasped.

"Nombre de Dios! Sancta Maria!" Every man in the room swiftly crossed himself and unconsciously they drew closer together.

"Are you sure?" insisted Pedro, gulping.

THE BULLY TRIES TO SUBDUE THE INNKEEPER'S DAUGHTER

"I want to talk to you," said Robledo. "Oh, you do?" retorted the girl, looking him over with studied insolence. "Well, you won't in that tone."

"It was there a moment ago. I saw it! I tell you I saw it!"

"I saw it—I saw it, too," cried Gaspard.

Again the idlers crossed themselves and pattered prayers before the chorus broke forth again.

"I don't see!"

"Where is it?"

"The Prince, the Prince! May be it's the Prince!"

"The spirit! The Evil Spirit!"

"What does it mean?"

"Mean?" Dolores caught at the word. Her own terror of the supernatural passed as she saw the panic of these babbling cowards.

"I'll tell you what it means!" she blazed out, facing them like a black-eyed fury. "It means the everlasting shame of Segura! Your Prince to whom you have sworn allegiance is in deadly peril—may be dying in that castle, not a mile away! That light may be his last signal for help, and not one of you dares go to him——"

"Ah, what's all this talk about?" demanded an insolent voice from the door.

"You—if you care to listen!" The girl turned on him swiftly. "You, Don Robledo, the best sword in Spain! Ha!" she laughed scornfully. "You are no better than the rest! Cowards—every one—who forsake your Prince in his hour of need!"

The Girl's Scorn.

The bully strode swiftly into the room and faced her.

"Coward—never!" he declared, with rather more insolence but less assurance. His eye swept the circle of faces. "A fair fight in the open, and I face the best man that walks the earth—or any two or three! But I am a fighter of men—not spirits!"

"Spirits!" the girl's scornful laugh stung him again. "Fighter of men—ha! Your skill protects you—you run no risk."

"Hush, my child!" exclaimed Pedro, with a fearful glance at the lowering face of the bravo. "You do not know what you say!"

"Don't try to stop me, father. Men—you call yourselves men—gentlemen! Gentle to your precious selves! There isn't a man among you—poor, timid, whispering sheep! And your Princess must look for aid to you!"

"A pretty speech, senorita," said a smooth, gentle voice behind her, with just a touch of irony. Instantly every man in the room uncovered.

"The Duke—His Excellency!"

The exalted lord of Alva ignored these recognitions of his rank. He was studying the girl's flushed and confused face with a faintly sarcastic smile.

"A pretty speech, senorita," he repeated. "Charming sentiments you express for your fellow-townsmen whose healthy common sense stops them from rushing to a fool's death. Still," he waved his hand as forgiving and consoling her at the same time. "All fools are not dead yet. One of them will be here to-night."

:: A Time to Dance ::

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A TIME TO DANCE MAG PAGE

"For everything there is a season, and a time for every purpose under heaven; a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance."—Eccl. 3:4.

A GIRL about eighteen years of age, dressed a little too fanciful for the business position she filled, with a little too much powder on her face, and her dress cut a little too low in the neck, stood at the head of a line of women before a bank teller's window one afternoon recently.

She had evidently come to make her employer's daily deposit, and after the clerk had waited on her, with many side remarks from her that plainly confused him, he handed her back her bank book and waited for her to step out of line.

"I have a tradelast for you," she said in a shrill voice.

The other clerks looked amused; the women in line grew impatient.

"The girl who was up here yesterday with the deposit said she thought you were the best-looking man in the bank."

The face of the young man reddened. He heard the head man of that department grumble; he knew his fellow employees were laughing; and before him stood that line of impatient women.

More Trouble.

"I agreed with her," continued the girl, her voice growing more shrill with the excitement of talking to a young man. "Say, do you like music? I wish you would come to my house some evening and hear my brother sing. Oh, he's a peach with his vocal chords, he is!"

The situation was growing desperate, and the young man with a very red face reached out his hand over her head for the bank book of the woman next in line. The girl continued to chatter until the woman behind her, enjoying a privilege her sex gave her, but which is sometimes unfortunately denied to men, pushed the girl away from the window, and the episode ended with the silly creature walking out, complaining audibly of the rudeness of the other woman.

That is, the episode ended so far as the outside of the window is concerned. That it ended on the other side without the young man receiving a reprimand for something for which he was blameless is in doubt.

This is not an unusual incident. In every business house a dozen times a day some one on the outside of the counter engages in social talk to the confusion and detriment of the man, or woman, on the other side. In every place of business an employee is called to the telephone in the busiest hours, to receive an invitation to a picnic or to be asked what he or she thought of the party attended the night before. In every business house, some workingman's time is taken and mind distracted by the silly chatter of the unemployed.

"There is a time to dance," and the girl who remembers this is never a pest in store, office or shop. If she admires or likes those on the other side of the counter, and wishes them well, she will not do them harm by injuring them in the eyes of the man who employes them.

A Weed.

A good definition of a weed might be, "Any plant growing in the wrong place." A poppy is a weed when it flaunts its scarlet petals in a corn field. A stalk of corn is a weed when it pushes its head above the ground in a bed of lilies.

A girl may be sweet and pretty and attractive—a flower, in fact—but she becomes a pest like a weed when she flaunts her charms in the wrong place.

Women are becoming a more important asset in the business world every day, but with every step forward all their sex slip a little backward every time one of them forgets that, "For everything there is a season, and a time for every purpose under heaven; a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance," and the time to chatter is not during business hours.

Up-to-Date Jokes

The Mayor and corporation of the town were entertaining the "Tommies" after the maneuvers at a banquet in the Town Hall. As the meal neared its conclusion a corpulent corporal furtively loosened his belt. A waiter approached him with a plate of luscious fruit.

"Dessert, sir?" inquired the waiter.

"Desert!" gasped the corporal. "Not me, while I can get a meal like this for nothing."

Beauty

Dainty Florence Jerome Talks On the Beauty of Ideals

I recommend simple dignity for the street.

Though I believe in a bit of powder to cool the skin, I don't like to see a girl turned into a clown.

It is a tradition of the theater to sleep until 11 o'clock, but I am going boldly against that tradition.

Each of us should be alone part of the day.

The best time for that is early in the morning.

An early morning walk braces and invigorates you for the remainder of the day.

You should always have your own ideal as a picture in your mind.

Miss Jerome in Three Poses.

THE world is being very kind to pretty 18-year-old Florence Nugent Jerome, and she is giving back to the world smiles and sweetness and sunshine.

But far back in the depths of her wonderful gray eyes is a question that makes you think of some of the sadness of all the ages,

"Why should this little girl, who has leaped into instant favor with the theatergoing public, have this question in the depths of her eyes and soul?" I asked myself. But after a few minutes I knew. Little Florence Jerome is a sensitive idealist, and so she looks at life sadly now and then for all her merry nature. She would have all beauty perfect, and she knows it is not.

"Rosemary Lee" can not find happiness in the "Follies" of New York So the creator of Rosemary can not find satisfaction in the follies of her sister-girls in New York. "Even in my little time in New York theatrical circles, I have seen so much," said she, "and I wonder, wonder if girls never think of the price they pay for immodesty and silliness."

This was to be an unusual interview. I sat up, literally as well as mentally alert. "Have you brought your ideals with you into the theater?" I asked.

Girls Have the Power.

"Yes, and into New York," answered Miss Jerome, with assurance and earnestness. "Girls have it in their power to make the attitude of the men. Now look at the results. The men are beginning to think that they must be worldly and sporty and to boast about it in order to win favor with girls. Then the girls think that in order to be popular with men they must cater to the worldliness they have helped create the demand for. So we see girls painting their faces absurdly and wearing immodest clothes and everybody blames everybody else for the lowering of our ideals. I blame the girls. If we are sweet and modest, and seem to admire and appreciate the fine qualities in men, they will cultivate them—and then we will feel that our sweet qualities make us attractive. It is an endless chain, isn't it? But I do so admire the old-fashioned modest feminine girl, and I am sure the girl of this type will find love and kindness waiting her wherever she goes.

Not a Prig.

"If men are getting so used to immodesty that they like it, why then let us train them to modesty and see how much better they will like that! A good beginning would be to distinguish carefully between the clothes we wear on the street and those we wear in the house. Simple dignity for the street, with the constant remembrance that the sun-glare reveals everything it can—so we must be careful to conceal what should be concealed—and though I believe in a bit of powder to cool the skin, I don't like to see a girl turned into a clown by the brazen revealings of the sun.

"Please don't get the idea that I am a 'prig,'" went on dainty Miss Florence, whose beauty has the sweet simplicity of the old-fashioned miniature. "I believe in youth and pleasure and being as attractive as you can, so you will look young and pleasure will come your way. But I think you should always have your own ideal as a picture in your mind and not be persuaded to like a strange picture just because it is popular.

"Now, let me illustrate for you. At the convent where I was educated I got the habit of walking each morning from 8:30 to 9:30. The air is so cool and pure then, and nature is so lovely and healing. Well, it is a tradition of the theater to sleep until about 11, and I, a mere beginner, am boldly going against that tradition, because I think that an early morning walk invigorates and braces you up for the day. I wonder if it would not be worth the while of all business women to get up a bit earlier and have each day start off in a little stock-taking visit with themselves and nature. Each of us should be alone a part of each day, and the very best time is in the coolness of the morning. You can just plan then to have your day bigger and finer than it was yesterday.

"We all need solitude and we all need pleasure. Life has to have relaxation and spice as well as ideals. But I don't know how any one can be beautiful unless they try to be sweet and lovable. And that is not a bit what you wanted, is it?" said Miss Jerome.

"It was not exactly what I expected," I answered. "But I like your old-fashioned girl and your old-fashioned ideals—and I hope you can make them the fashion of to-day."

And so I do, little sisters, and so would you if you could truly see the charm of Florence Jerome's clear, fresh girlhood unspoiled by cosmetics, undimmed by jewels, and shining forth by its own idealism as our great ideal—Beauty.

:: The Stepmother ::

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

IT makes little difference how many children there are in a motherless brood, there is always some woman brave enough to promise to be a mother to them. Actuated largely by love for their father, and with a pitying tenderness for them for which she is never given due credit, she becomes his wife.

And from that day till the day of her death she is classed among the Pronoun Parents.

She wants to love the children and be loved by them. She would like to have them call her "Mother," or "Aunt," or by her first name, but their little lips stiffen at the thought of any title so suggestive of forgiveness for one who has committed the crime of taking the place of the beloved dead. Without any agreement, and perhaps almost unconsciously, they begin to refer to her solely as "Her" or "She."

And in this rebellion they are encouraged, actively or tacitly, by all who loved the woman who is dead.

"She is your mother now," they will say, "and it is your duty to love her. Your poor dear mother! I wonder what she would say if she knew you poor little things had a stepmother?"

Objects of Pity.

They are made to understand that they are objects of pity because of some monster Father has brought home to rule over them with rod and lash. They meet her with a fear, anger and resentment that are never entirely overcome.

The Pronoun Parent may be a paragon of patience and tenderness. She may have a heart filled with love for her children. But never may she hope to make their home so pleasant that they will acknowledge they fare better than when in the pillar-to-post conditions from which their father's marriage rescued them.

She gets no credit for her efforts, and she receives a criticism that is at all times unwarranted. If she is only half as stern as their own mother had been, she is a merciless tyrant. If she denies them all their wants, she is parsimonious and is suspected of lining an individual pocket. If she grants all their desires, they lay the failure of their father to wax wealthy on her shoulders. The Pronoun Parent is always misunderstood.

Their Excuse.

If this baleful result lasted only through their childhood, the effects would be bad enough, but it accompanies them through life.

"I have a stepmother," a girl writes me, "and that is why I left home. She objected to me going out nights."

"I am only sixteen," writes another girl, "and a man of forty wants me to elope with him. I have heard he drinks, but my stepmother says so, and I don't believe it."

"I am fifteen," from another girl, "and in love with a boy of sixteen. Would you advise me to get married? You know I have a stepmother."

All through life they use as a reason for the gratification of self-will, as an excuse for folly, an explanation of failure, the existence of a stepmother. And I contend that the blame lies less with the woman who tries to fill the mother's place than with the dead woman's relatives and friends who turned every little head and heart the wrong way by maudlin sentiments of pity the day the father took a second wife.

The Pronoun Parent may make mistakes. So (though one must ask forgiveness for saying it) does the parent who is not called "Her" or "She," but by the glorifying name of "Mother."

She may make mistakes, but wait until she makes them! Don't hasten the day by implanting into her stepchildren's breasts the conviction that she can make nothing else.

:: A Mug's Game ::

To-day's Complete Short Story.

A MUG'S GAME-Mag page

FEW commercial enterprises in London could claim for their counting house a scene of greater activity than Messrs. Dodson, Finch & Dodson; but, unfortunately, that activity was not always confined to "counting" or the other legitimate functions of the department.

Discussions and differences arose constantly over matters a trifle removed from silks and satins.

"Tottenham Hotspur," said Junior Clerk Jones, pugnaciously, "could eat Chelsea! So now!"

At which Assistant Clerk Brown bridled and drew on the resources of official prestige.

"Look here, Jones," he said shortly, "get on with your work! I haven't got time to listen to your football claptrap! I want that ledger balanced by lunch time, or you'll explain to Mr. Coates!"

Mr. Jones leaned over the ponderous ledger on his desk, and addressed himself in tones happily inaudible.

"That was Brown all over. Couldn't have a decent, sensible discussion without losing his temper and turning on "shop." He wouldn't get any ledger balanced by lunch time. He'd watch it. Explain to Coates? Rats!"

An Inspiration.

Mr. Jones by a spasmodic species of logic ultimately came to the conclusion—not altogether unique—that Brown was a fool.

That being so, it became the junior's overwhelming desire to take his confrere down a peg.

How, he had yet to decide.

Half an hour later the junior clerk had occasion to traverse the corridor that led to the buying department. As he did so his eye caught the gate of the automatic self-operating lift. It was a more or less prosaic object for an eye to catch, but it flashed to the nimble brain of Mr. Jones an inspiration of the first water. He chuckled.

Properly to appreciate Mr. Jones' attitude a short description of the lift is necessary. It was one of that order which, when you have gained the interior and securely closed the gates, proceeds to the desired floor upon the pressure of a numbered button. To avoid accident, the lift ingeniously refuses to move an inch unless the gates on each floor are securely fastened. It is plain, therefore, that if one of the gates be forcibly wrenched open ever so slightly while the lift is in motion, the lift is automatically stopped; and if this phenomenon occurs while the elevator is between the floors, the unfortunate occupant is caged in like a prize rabbit until such time as the offending gate becomes adjusted.

It was this knowledge that inspired Mr. Jores with the aforementioned inspiration.

Everyone went out to lunch at 1 o'clock except Mr. Brown, who—from extra zeal, let us say—stayed almost invariably till a quarter past. Also, the assistant senior clerk was in the habit of descending by the automatic lift.

This Mr. Jones also remembered. At two or three minutes to 1 the bustle and activity of the Dodson-Finch establishment became alarmingly accentuated. Everyone seemed excessively impatient to leave the premises—that is, with the exception of Mr. Brown—as usual, and also Mr. Jones, strange to say.

The Trap.

The former glanced up at his confrere and smiled. Evidently Jones had taken him seriously and intended to complete the ledger before going out. At ten minutes past 1 Jones got up and, getting on his coat and hat, went out. He descended to the first floor, which was deserted. Here he took up station by the gates of the automatic lift.

Presently, just about a quarter past, the lift began to descend. Quickly and quietly Jones exerted his strength and wrenched open the gate. The lift stopped. Then the junior clerk stole, chuckling, out to lunch.

At ten minutes past 1 that afternoon Todbury Finch, Esq., junior partner of the firm, was seated in his sanctum on the third floor when there came a ring on the telephone.

"Hello!" he said. "Who's that? Oh, hello, George! How are you? What's that? Got something good for the 2 o'clock? Bluebell, 100 to 8. What's that? Back heavy? It's a 'cert,' then. Put it on at once. Yes, I will. Thanks for the tip, old man. Good-bye."

He put up the receiver and looked hurriedly at his watch. Just on a quarter past 1. By Jove, he'd have to act quickly. He grabbed his hat and hurried into the lift. Pressed the button and began to descend. Suddenly between the second and third floors it stopped. What was up? He pressed all the buttons vigorously, reslammed the gate, fumed and pottered for five minutes.

Then he called out:

"Hi! Shut that gate there! Hi!"

The Wrong One.

The reply came back in angry tones:

——"Gate there! Hi!"

Todburg Finch simply frothed with rage. It would be too late to put any money on the 2 o'clock. The junior partner of Dodson, Finch & Dodson was caged up like a prize rabbit. But his demeanor was less placid than a rabbit's.

* * *

Meanwhile, Junior Clerk Jones, with the feelings of one who has successfully perpetrated a joke of the first water, repaired to the tea shop, where he usually took lunch.

Here he espied Stemmings, a fellow clerk and kindred spirit, and took a seat opposite him.

Presently Jones, having battled successfully with a toasted muffin, leaned back in his chair and threw a casual glance over the assembly of diners. His face went a shade paler and his eyes took on a suddenly startled look.

For deep in the contemplation of a draughtboard in the vicinity was no other than Mr. Brown.

"What's up?" inquired Stemmings, scenting something unusual.

"How long's Brown been in here?" asked Jones.

"Came in just after you. Why?"

"He did!" cried Jones, leaping from his chair.

"Yes," Stemmings repeated "Why?"

"Nothing," replied Jones, informatively.

With which he collected his bill hastily, and performed the unprecedented fact of returning to the office twenty minutes before time.

Caught!

When he saw Brown in the tea shop the horrible suspicion had loomed in upon him that someone other than the assistant senior clerk was imprisoned in the lift. Stemmings had practically confirmed the suspicion. Who the other person was Jones hardly dared to imagine. Thrusting open the swing doors, he dashed across the spacious showroom to the lift. There was a non-committal kind of silence hanging over it that struck a vague fear to the young man's heart. He closed the gate and pressed the button.

If Mr. Jones could have stepped under the down-coming lift and converted it into an automatic juggernaut, he would have welcomed the opportunity. The sight of the now calm, ominous face of Mr. Todbury Finch struck cold despair into his heart.

The partner stepped out in silence; then he turned round on the expectant clerk with alarming shrewdness.

"Did you do it?" he snarled.

Now, had Mr. Jones been possessed of greater presence of mind or been a more accomplished disciple of Ananias, he might have offered a flat and indignant denial; but he did not.

"I—I'm sorry, sir," he stammered. "I thought it was Brown."

"You did, did you?" said Mr. Finch. "Come up to my office at once."

Jones followed him meekly.

"Now, explain it exactly," the chief commenced.

Jones, perceiving the only possible avenue of escape was the truth, made a clean breast of the whole affair.

Bounced.

"I see," said Mr. Finch, after a depressing silence, "You were playing a practical joke. I happened to be the victim. Most unfortunate for both of us, Mr. Jones. I must ask you to seek another employment. A week's notice. Thank you!"

The worst has happened. Reality is seldom worse than anticipation. Jones whistled jauntily as he left the room.

Having thus vented his spleen, Todbury Finch, Esq., lay back on his chair and pondered.

"Serves the young brat right!" he muttered.

"Teach 'em all a lesson. Lost me a hundred odd, young dog."

Shortly after 2 o'clock he went out to lunch. He ran into a shouting newsboy on the street. Mr. Finch understood the burden of his song. It was: "Two o'clock results; piper!"

"Who won the race?" asked Mr. Finch, handing the boy a coin.

"Felix," said the youngster promptly.

"Felix!" incredulously. "How about Bluebell?"

The boy eyed the partner pityingly.

"Also ran, o' course," he said. "Back 'im?"

Mr. Finch could not conceal his excitement.

"Wot! Glad 'e lorst?" said the boy bewilderedly.

"Yes, rather," said the partner, and turned his face toward the office, while the newsboy looked after him, doubting the sanity of the world.

Mr. Finch was of a mercurial temperament. The fact that Bluebell had lost turned spleen into positive jubilation. The period he had spent in the lift had saved him $150.

Bluebell was supposed to be a "cert."

After all, betting was a "mug's" game. He thought he would drop it.

Late that afternoon Mr. Jones was surprised to receive another summons to the chief.

"I've been thinking, Jones," said Todbury Finch sternly, "perhaps I was a little hard in dismissing you. You will resume your duties as usual, and, perhaps, keep practical joking out of official business."

Jones promised humbly that he would, and left piously. To this day he has never dreamed the truth.

Easy for Him.

An Irishman was one day engaged at stone breaking on the roadside, and not being used to the work could not get on very fast. A friend of his who chanced to pass by as Pat was belaboring a large stone with renewed vigor tried to show him the right way, and, taking the hammer from him, broke the stone with ease.

Said Pat: "Sure, now, and it be easy for ye to break the stone afther I have been softening it for the last half hour."

Fashion

A Striking Golfing Outfit Fully Described by Olivette

The Golfing Girl.

By Olivette

THE athletic girl never looks more attractive than when clad absolutely in keeping with the sport she follows.

The little golf girl we show you here is dressed for golfing and nothing else, with the same unquestionable good taste that marks the de rigueur riding costume the smart habit maker turns out for the riding girl.

The little knitted cap our golf girl wears is banded in the same tight stitch that is used for the revers, hem and cuffs of the white double-breasted sweater that fastens with eight white bone buttons.

The body of the sweater and crown of the cap are of the same wide wale stitch.

White silk shirt with crimson tie and blue serge skirt well above smart russet laced boots and brown silk stockings complete a costume that is well to the fore in its own field.

What He'd Lose.

Sam, the hired man, returned from the city with a scarfpin that contained a "diamond" of unusual size.

It was the pride of his heart and the envy of his companions.

His employer, after a week of basking in its radiance, asked Sam about its history.

"Sam," he said, "is it a real diamond?"

"Well," said Sam, "if it ain't, I've been robbed of half a dollar."

PONCE DE LEON PARK, July 14.—The Crackers lost to-day's game to the Billikens by a score of 7 to 1. Elmer Brown, who was in the box for the visitors, allowed only four hits, three of these coming in the final inning.

Gil Price pitched good ball with the exception of in the third and fourth innings. He was touched up for five hits and five runs in the third spasm. The Bills' other two tallies were forthcoming in the fourth period.

To-morrow's game will start at 3 o'clock, so as to allow both teams to catch trains for other pastures.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Bisland and Agler did all that was necessary with Walker's daisy-cutter. Wares died an easy death, Manush to Agler. Elwert drew a free passage to first. Breen grounded to Bisland, who stepped on second, forcing Elwert. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Long took three husky swing, but failed to connect. Welchonce was turned back over the Knaupp-Snedecor route. Alperman was winged by a pitched ball and limped to first. Manush grounded to Knaupp, who made a wide throw to Snedecor, and on the error all hands were safe. Bisland rolled one to Knaupp, who relayed the pill to Wares, forcing Manush at the midway. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Jantzen drew four wide ones and strolled to Station One. Knaupp grounded to Price, who heaved to Bisland, forcing Jantzen at the keystone. Knaupp was killed off on his attempted pilfer trip, Dunn to Alperman. Snedecor leaned against a curve for a one-timer to center. Gribbens sent a fly to right that would have been an out had not Long slipped, letting the ball fall for a single, Snedecor going to third. E. Brown was thrown out by Alperman. TWO HITS, NO RUNS.

With three and two on him, Agler fouled to Elwert. Bailey was patient and was rewarded with a base on balls. Dunn whiffed on three pitched balls. Price lofted a foul to Elwert. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

Walker laced a pretty single to center. Wares worked Price for a waiting ticket. Elwert beat out a bunt down the third base line and the bases were intoxicated. Breen was kind enough to fan. Jantzen was uncouth enough to bang a single to right that scored Walker and Wares. Knaupp tripled to the scoreboard, Elwert and Jantzen cashing. Snedecor singled to right, scoring Knaupp. Gribbens' liner caromed off Price's glove to Manush, who tossed to Agler in time, Snedecor going to second. Agler played a lone hand with Brown's grasser. FIVE HITS, FIVE RUNS.

Long raised to Wares. Welchonce lined to Jantzen in far away left. Alperman popped to Wares. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING.

Bisland booted Walker's easy roller, and on the error the batter anchored safely at first. Wares smashed a peachy two-bagger to left and Walker eased himself over to the difficult cushion. Elwert dropped a single into the center garden, Walker and Wares denting the dish with tallies. Breen sent a balooner to Long. On a short passed ball Elwert tries to move up to second, but Dunn's chuck to Alperman turned him back. Jantzen took the easy road to first. Jantzen stole second aided and abetted by a low throw to first. Knaupp was a whiff victom. TWO HITS, TWO RUNS.

Manush pasted a single to right. Knaupp tossed out Bisland, Manush trotting over to station 2. Agler rolled to Knaupp, who got the ball to Snedecor in plenty of time, Manush ambling to third. Bailey popped to Knaupp. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

FIFTH INNING.

Bailey was under Snedecor's sky-high soarer. Bailey also pulled down Gribbens' offering. E. Brown perished, Price to Agler, on a weak tap. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Dunn hit into a double play that costtinnu

Dunn waited out four bad ones. Price hit into a double play that cost Dunn's life as well as Gil's own, Wares to Knaupp to Snedecor. Long was thrown out by Wares. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

SIXTH INNING.

Walker took the count on strikes. Wares hoisted high to Welchonce. Elwert beat out a puzzling roller to Bisland for a hit. Breen hit to Manush, who gave the ball to Alperman, forcing Elwert at second. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

Welchonce strolled on four crazy chucks. Alperman hit into a double play, Knaupp to Wares to Snedecor. Manush was pie for Knaupp and Snedecor. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

SEVENTH INNING.

Jantzen's boost was a cinch for Long. Bisland played ping pong with Knaupp's grounder and the batter anchored on first. Long pulled down Snedecor's offering. Knaupp stole second. Gribbens went back to work when Bisland tossed his grounder to Agler. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Wares and Snedecor made easy work with Bisland's grounder. Agler boosted to Jantzen. Bailey died, Knaupp to Snedecor. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

EIGHTH INNING.

As a pitcher Brown is some hitter; he singled to center. Walker did the Casey act. Wares hit high in front of the plate and Dunn smothered the ball. Elwert flied to Manush. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

Dunn popped weakly to Snedecor. Price took the count on strikes. Long was thrown out by Wares. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

NINTH INNING.

Breen flied to Bailey. Jantzen was a cinch for Manush and Agler. Knaupp raised to Bisland. NO HITS, NO RUNS.

Welchonce ambled over the four-ball route. Alperman singled to center, sending Welchonce to second. Manush singled to left, filling the bases. Bisland flied to Walker, but Welchonce was held at third. Agler flied to Elwert. Bailey singled to left, scoring Welchonce. Chapman fanned. THREE HIST, ONE RUN.

INTERNATIONAL SAILING RACE WON BY AMERICAN

NEW YORK, July 15.—The International sailing canoe cup is to-day safe from foreign invaders for some time to come. "To have and to hold" was the watchword yesterday when Leo Friede, of the Manhattan Canoe Club, the American defender, sent his little craft skimming over the eight-mile course at Grevesend Bay and shot across the finish line two minutes and twelve seconds ahead of his Canadian rival, Ralph B. Britton, of the Ganaoque Canoe and Motor Boat Club.

FOUR CLUBS SAVED FROM WRECK OF INTERSTATE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 15.—For the present the Interstate League will continue under its present name as a four-club circuit, with Erie, Wheeling, Akron and Youngstown as its members. Players of the Steubenville, Columbus, Zanesville and Canton clubs were paid up to July 15 inclusive, and some of them were turned over to the clubs still remaining in the organization.

TETTER

Tetterine cures tetter. Read what Mrs. V. C. McQuiddy, Estill Springs, Tenn. says:

I had a severe case of tetter on both hands and I finally got helpless. A leading physician knew of no cure. I decided to give Tetterine a trial. To my utter surprise and satisfaction it worked a speedy cure.

Use Tetterine

It cures eczema, tetter, erysipelas, itching piles, ground itch and all skin maladies.

Richards Wins Two Races and a Bride

Well, Tex Richards "went and done it."

Last week a story appeared that if Richards, champion motorcycle rider of Dixie, won two races at the last Drome meet he would win himself a bride.

He won both races.

But, of course, having been faked before, the public put it down as a press agent's myth.

The odd part about it is that the story was true.

It leaked out to-day that on Saturday afternoon Wilmer Richards, of Dallas, Texas, was married to Miss Tona Taylor, of Atlanta. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. A. Little at his residence, Forest avenue and Boulevard.

Sox Buy Chappell; 'Comy' Pays Big Price

CHICAGO, July 15.—Larry Chappelle, the sensational outfielder of the Milwaukee team, of the American Association, was sold to the Chicago White Sox yesterday. For him President Comiskey gave Outfielder John Beall, a catcher whose name was not made public, and a "cash consideration." Chappelle is to report at once. He has been batting around .359 and fielding with the best of them. Practically every club in the major leagues bid for him.

President Comiskey, of the Chicago Club, said that Chappelle was the highest-priced baseball player ever purchased. Beyond stating that he valued Beall at $3,000, Comiskey, however, would not give any figures.

Williams and Ledoux In Coast Go To-night

LOS ANGELES, July 15.—The twenty-round bantamweight battle at Vernon Arena to-night between Kid Williams, of Baltimore, and Charley Ledoux, of France, promises to be one of the fastest battles ever staged on the coast.

Williams and Ledoux are almost identical in measurements and fight the same style of battle. The Frenchman is in much better condition than on his previous appearance here, when Eddie Campi won a twenty-round decision over him. Williams is also in prime condition. The betting, which at first was 10 to 8 on Williams, is now even money.

MAGNATE PLANS TOUR.

SEATTLE, WASH., July 15.—Michael Fisher, a local baseball magnate, is to-day planning a South Sea Islands baseball tour, which will include three months in Australia. Fisher contemplates establishing league baseball in Australia if the sport proves popular.

WALKER VS. MILLER.

WINNIPEG, MAN., July 15.—George Walker, Canadian champion middleweight wrestler, to-day was matched to meet Walter Miller, of Duluth, American champion, before a local club on July 31.

FODDER FOR FANS

After losing ten straight games the Brooklyn Dodgers finally broke their losing streak by beating the Cubs to the tune of 9 to 2.

* * *

After winning eight games the Pirates finally went down to defeat at the hands of the Boston Braves and this despite the fact that Hans Wagner was shoved in as a pinch hitter.

* * *

This is pennant-raising day at the Polo Grounds and a big crowd of baseball moguls flocked to New York to take part or look on. Among them is Garry Herrmann, whose Cincinnati Reds play the Giants this afternoon.

* * *

Ebbets field, home of the Dodgers in Brooklyn, is to be dedicated this afternoon. The fact that it is pennant-raising day at the Polo Grounds kept some notables away from Ebbets field who otherwise would have been there. However, among those who went to Brooklyn to take part were C. W. Murphy, owner of the Cubs; President F. J. Navin, of the Tigers; President C. W. Somers, of the Cleveland Naps; President B. F. Shibe, of the Athletics, and James E. Gaffney, of the Boston Nationals.

* * *

In the game between the Phillies and the Cardinals not a Quaker was left on bases in the eight innings. It was one of the best pitched games seen in Philadelphia this year.

* * *

Lefty Leifield, once a pitcher for the Pirates, and who was sold to the Cubs last fall, has been shunted to the minors. He goes to Atlanta.

* * *

Catcher Grover Land, of the Naps, has been released to the Toledo club.

* * *

The Senators had to use three pitchers to beat the Naps.

CRACKERS GET LEIFIELD; EVERS LETS CRAIG OUT

CHICAGO, July 14.—The Cub management announced that two of its players have been sent to the minor leagues. "Lefty" Leifield, the veteran southpaw pitcher, was first let out to the Atlanta team, as Manager Evers believes he has outlived his usefulness as far as the big teams are concerned.

Craig, the young collegian who joined the team a short time back, was sent to Terre Haute, Ind., for further seasoning.

LYNCH SATISFIED WITH HIS UMPIRES; NO CHANGE

NEW YORK, July 15.—There will be no change in the personnel of the National League staff of umpires this season, according to a statement issued last night by President Thomas J. Lynch. Mr. Lynch says that despite adverse criticism of umpires by several club owners, he has found the umpiring in the National League this year to have been as good as at any time in the last four years.

LAGRANGE AGAIN LEADS LEAGUE IN ATTENDANCE

LA GRANGE, GA., July 15.—Official announcement has just come from Georgia-Alabama League headquarters giving the figures on the attendance receipts at all Fourth of July games in the league. As in the case of the opening games, LaGrange leads by a large margin, and this, too, in the face of the fact that both Gadsden and Anniston are very much larger towns than LaGrange.

The receipts for the Fourth of July games were as follows: LaGrange, $382.40; Anniston, $364.35; Gadsden (morning game), $200.45; Gadsden (afternoon game), $212.30; Talladega (morning game), $198.10; Newnan (morning game), $174.20.

TRAVERS TO MAKE TRIP.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Jerome D. Travers, the national amateur golf champion, has said that he will visit England next year and attempt to annex the amateur title of the British Isles.

THIS CONTEST IS NO PLACE FOR QUITTERS

Jordan Still Leads Race for Popular Player; Rivals Need Added Support—Vote To-day.

ARE you going to be a quitter? Are you going to let Otto Jordan capture the loving cup being donated by The Atlanta Georgian and Hearst's Sunday American to the most popular player in the Empire State League? If not, then get busy at once and rush in your votes for your favorite player in this league.

The contest is now at fever heat. The Jordan fans refuse to lay down on their idol. They are rushing in hundreds of votes daily. Therefore, the only way to catch him is to get busy and beat him to it. "Goat" Holliday is one player who is in this race to stay unless his followers desert him at this late date. "Pat" Murphy, the Thomasville shortstop, is another; Manchester, of Brunswick, is near the top; Baby Wilder, the popular Cordele player, threatens to oust the leaders at any time, and there are a few others who are receiving batches of votes daily.

Need Added Support.

But these players need just a little added support to bring fame to themselves and their clubs. Jordan is now the man of the hour in the Empire State League. In fact, he has been on top most of the time since this paper started this contest. "Goat" Holliday was in the lead for two days, but he was soon ousted by the Valdosta manager.

The cup to be given by this paper to the most popular player is a dandy. We can truthfully say that ten players have a good chance to win this trophy. Votes are what count and a good deal of hustling can send the contest topsy-turvy.

Manchester Receives Votes.

Manchester received the most votes yesterday. He is now tied for third place with "Pat" Murphy, of the Thomasville team. These players are 350 votes behind Holliday, while the latter is right on the heels of Jordan. This is a good estimate of the closeness of this contest.

Clip Coupon To-day.

The coupon appears in to-day's paper. Clip it, fill it in and mail it to the Popularity Editor, Atlanta Georgian, Atlanta, Ga. Don't wait until to-morrow. Get busy to-day. Remember every player in the list published below has a chance to win the grand cup given by this paper.

Lords Defeat Irish Home Rule Measure

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 15.—The House of Lords this evening defeated the home rule bill for Ireland by a vote of 302 to 64.

PRURITIS A SEVERE FORM OF ECZEMA

A Method of Home Treatment That Is Very Effective.

There is probably no other remedy so well known as S. S. S. for the blood. And it is remarkably effective in that form of skin disease known as pruritis, or intense itching. The action of S. S. S. is rapid. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment. And the medical elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food. There facts are brought out in a highly interesting book on skin diseases, compiled by the medical department of the Swift Specific Co., 184 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It is mailed free, together with a special letter of advice, to all who are struggling with a blood disease.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day of your druggist. It will surprise you with its wonderful action in the blood.

Don't accept something offered you as "just as good." The only reason why anyone should not try to sell you something cheaper from crude drugs. Beware of any attempt to persuade you to buy something in place of S. S. S.

INGRATITUDE.

The magnate reeled to his auto—
"Oh, take me to my yacht!"
He moaned, "My heart is broken—
And the day is very hot.
I can not join the thousands
Who watch those ingrates play.
"I hear"—a sob—"they claim I've
No right to cut their pay!"

A BIG LEAGUE MAGNATE IS showing evidences of the effect of the recent hot spell. He says that the chief objection to cutting ball games to catch trains is that it is "grossly unfair to the public." Sure! He really means the people who pay to see a whole ball game.

JIMMY TAMSETT, SORE AT ARREST, TO QUIT DIAMOND

ALBANY, N. Y., July 15.—James L. Tamsett, manager and owner of the Albany State League Baseball Club and shortstop of the Memphis team nearly ten years ago, announces that because of the agitation against Sunday baseball and the subsequent arrest of himself and three Troy players on Sunday, June 29, he will withdraw from the game.

Manager Tamsett and the Troy men will be separately tried before Justice of the Peace Christopher Valentine, of the town of Colonie.

Hot Days Breed Lice By Millions, Keep Close Watch for Them

Cholera, a Much Dreaded Disease, Easily Stamped Out By This Method.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Judge Marshall: I have two hens that have a looseness of the bowels, and I fear it is cholera. Will you please give me a remedy and oblige.

Yours truly, J. R. C.
Conyers, Ga.

Reply: Many people want to jump at conclusions and call everything cholera that seems to trouble their chickens. This is especially true, if there is any sign of bowel trouble. While many of the ailments have no semblance of cholera, it is perhaps a good thing to get uneasy and be ready to investigate; with such a state of affairs, something is very likely to be done to better their condition. Very often, during hot weather, you will find a number of your hens stalking about the yard in a slow, listless manner, stopping to straighten their feathers and pick at themselves. You can just put it down in your notebook that they are being overrun with mites which are simply sucking their very life blood from them, which will cause them to have bowel trouble, and if the pests are not removed, it will not take very many days to see the death of many good hens? These hot days breed lice by the millions when they are allowed a start. After a few hens have died of such trouble of the bowels, caused by lice or mites, others may be affected by contagion, and real cholera is brought forth. In real cholera the fowl assumes a very tired or listful gait, similar to the one when lice is the trouble, but the discharge of the bowels is of a watery nature, green and bright yellow in color. The comb soon turns black or very dark purple; at times there is a foamy discharge from the mouth, but not always. When this is present it indicates cold in connection with the bowel trouble. When these decided symptoms of cholera are present a prompt separation should ensue, putting those showing a decided case promptly under the sod, making a place for all showing slight symptoms, to get them away from the well ones. In the drinking water for the well ones and the slightly indisposed ones, add one-fourth ounce of sulpho-carbonate of zinc to each gallon of water. Cleaning the premises is a most important item at such a time. The runs and houses should be thoroughly cleaned, scraped and swept and the droppings covered with soil. After this is done, a thorough sprinkling should be done with water into which has been stirred one pint of sulphuric acid to twenty gallons of water. The stamping out of the disease depends largely upon the thoroughness of the cleaning. Cholera is a much dreaded disease, but with prompt and vigorous methods of the right kind, it is easily stamped out. The advice for those who do not have it is to do the cleaning job, anyway, and thus prevent its appearance at all.

ALMOST EVERYBODY

EXPECTS TO OWN a home sometime sooner or later. When the time comes you will be surprised at the scarcity of suitable building lots and the great advancement in prices. Why not look around now, while the market affords such good opportunities?

JUST OFF Stewart Avenue, in a thoroughly established community, convenient to good car service, city school and large city park, we have a number of very desirable lots 50x200 feet; also some brand-new bungalows that can be bought on very reasonable terms. Lots ranging in price, $900 to $1,200; bungalows, from $3,500 to $4,000.

LOT, PEACHTREE ROAD.
(200 by 250 feet.)
BETTER be "safe" in buying this property now, than "sorry" afterwards you didn't; $25 foot.
THOMAS R. FINNEY, Sales Manager, 12 "Real Estate Row."

THEY ARE VERY SCARCE

YOU WILL find it hard to buy a desirable 50-foot building lot on the North Side for less than $2,500 or $3,000. These same lots could be bought three years ago for $700 to $1,000. This is the small investor's opportunity. Buy them partially developed, in the RIGHT SPOT, on easy terms—CHEAP, and sell the finished product.

Between the Ansley Park golf course and Piedmont avenue is the most STRATEGICALLY situated undeveloped property in Fulton County—owned by the shrewdest investors. This is the day of the SMALL INVESTOR, and they are making money fast in this section. Those who have bought in 1913 will double their money when the county finishes the roads in this neighborhood, and this is going to be done.

There is 100 per cent profit in our 60-foot lots at $10 down and $10 per month. Fifty-odd have been sold.

Water for Thirsty City More Important Than Scenery

Hetch Hetchy is a deep canyon back of the Yosemite Valley. Hardly a person in a hundred, even in California, ever heard of it until San Francisco, in its search for water for its people, found that by turning the floor of this remote Sierra canyon into a lake it could assure its people of an ample, pure and constant water supply.

San Francisco burned down once because of failure of its water system—owned by a private corporation. That same corporation, the Spring Valley Water Company, together with an irrigation company, has so far managed to prevent San Francisco getting the Government's consent for its employment of the Hetch Hetchy water, which now simply runs to waste in the wet season.

The Spring Valley Water Company wants San Francisco to buy it at a valuation of $25,000,000. As is usual with public utility companies endeavoring to unload on a municipality, the valuation has been put up to an exorbitant figure.

As between the interests of a greedy water company and an American city, the Government might be expected to side with the city; to consider the rights of upward of half a million people rather than the profits of a few shareholders—for the Spring Valley Water Company is a close corporation.

Having no argument to advance on the economic phase of the question, the opponents of the Hetch Hetchy water project ingeniously enlisted the aid of certain artists and other sentimental people whom it persuaded to advance the argument that it was outrageous to defile one of the wonders of nature by turning it into a water supply.

Hetch Hetchy is a wild and ragged canyon. It is probable that the visitors to it during the 50 or 60 years since its marvels became known average less than 100 a year. San Francisco's water project would not abolish the marvels of Hetch Hetchy. On the contrary, it would simply substitute for the canyon floor a beautiful mountain lake. There would not be a waterfall diminished in volume or a crag diminished in height. Hetch Hetchy would be more beautiful than it is now; and, in addition to that, the building of roads to it would make it accessible to every visitor to that part of the world, whereas not one in fifty of those who go to Yosemite attain Hetch Hetchy at the present time.

San Francisco's water problem is a most serious one. Its present privately owned supply is neither large enough nor good enough for a modern city.

One would think that the health and well-being not only of San Francisco, but of the other bay cities, would be worth even an esthetic sacrifice, but there is not even an esthetic sacrifice demanded. Nevertheless, the private interests have been able to hold back Government consent for this important enterprise. How this has been accomplished may not seem a great mystery to those who marked how the railroads whose terminals were in California stood in the way of the construction of the Panama Canal for 40 years.

San Francisco needs the Hetch Hetchy water, and it will get it promptly if the Government is not more concerned with the profits of rich interests than with the health and comfort of one of the greatest of American communities.

The bill granting water to a thirsty city is expected to be recommended by the Public Lands Committee of the House of Representatives.

That recommendation should be forthcoming at the earliest possible date, and the bill should become a law as quick as Congress can act.

With the Panama Exposition only two years off, the city that will entertain the whole world must not be handicapped an unnecessary day.

The Membership of the Georgia Senate Should Be Increased

The constitutional amendment proposing an increased membership in the Georgia Senate ought to pass the General Assembly and be sent to the people for ratification.

Not only would it be wise immediately to increase the membership of the Senate from 44 to 60, but it would be a most excellent idea to provide for the Senate's further increase in membership, as the necessity for the same might arise.

As the Georgia Senate is now constituted and assembled, it can not be made the effective body it should be.

The legislative power and influence of individual Senators is out of all proportion to the legislative power and influence of individual Representatives, notwithstanding the fact that individual Representatives, under Georgia's foolish rotation system of electing Senators, are more than apt to be the more experienced and genuinely statesmanlike individuals of the two.

While it is true that seniority of continuous service in legislative bodies should confer upon members no extraordinary and unusual rights, it nevertheless also is true that seniority of service does increase progressively the usefulness of members of the right sort, by reason of their always broadening experience.

In Georgia, however, a Senator, no matter how apparent his usefulness may be, under the rotation system in vogue is put out of the Senate after he has served one term, and can not hope to get back until his county's time comes round again. Sometimes it comes round in six years, and sometimes it comes round in twelve.

The consequence is that, while individual members of usefulness in the House may serve continuously from term to term, the State has an absolutely new Senate on its hands every time the Legislature assembles!

It is not surprising, therefore, that the House of Representatives in Georgia usually is a stronger body than the Senate, notwithstanding the greater power and influence upon legislation of individual Senators.

There are several counties in Georgia that should be made Senatorial districts within themselves. And there are many Senatorial districts that should be cut down sharply.

In addition to that, when the State has been redistricted, the rotation system of electing Senators should be abolished.

If these reforms are effected, the result will be a greater and much more useful Senate.

The bill now pending, proposing as it does a redistricting of the State and an increase in Senatorial membership, is a step in exactly the right direction. It has been favorably recommended to the Senate, and it is to be hoped that it may pass.

It is really constructive legislation, and to be most highly commended to the General Assembly's attention and earnest consideration.

Looking Pretty All the Time

A Pretty Woman Is for a Short Conquest, She Says, but for a Long Race Give Me the Average Good Looking Woman Every Day in the Week.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

"DEAR me," said the prettiest girl, "I do wish Miss Marie Corelli would learn to sing a new song. She's been doing that old 'What am I going to do to make you love me?' for so long. I'm a bit tired of it, and I should think the men would be tired of it, too."

"Well," said the cleverest girl, "the song is well enough, only she doesn't sing it right. That's the old-fashioned version. We don't use quite the same words nowadays. Ours runs more like this."

The cleverest girl threw herself back in the swinging chair, assumed a questioning and, it must be confessed, a rathed nagged expression of countenance, and chanted satirically: "What are you going to do to make me love you?"

The Right Refrain

"That's the right refrain just now. It's the one I'm going to sing anyhow, and all the girls in my class," and she threw the very clever magazine with Miss Corelli's latest article on the "Greatest thing in the world and how to get it" into the ferns—and wouldn't hear of picking it up again.

"When are these clever people who write things for the magazines going to wake up?" she said. "We don't need articles on how to catch a husband these days, or how to keep him when we've got him—not a bit in the world. The thing we need is: 'How to take an interest in matrimony as a profession when there are so many other interesting things to do.'

"My poor mother would have had an awful time if she hadn't married—fancy living with Uncle Dick all your life and being a maiden sister. But it's different with me.

"If I meet just the right man, I'll marry—maybe—but I'll think awhile before I do it. I'm going to get a rather good salary in my line of work. I can do a lot of good in the world, and oh, what a lot of fun I'm going to have. I'll have to be awfully in love with a man to give all that up—just to be Mrs. Somebody. I love being myself—it's so interesting. I'm afraid I should hate awfully just to be somebody's wife—without even my own name to go by."

And the prettiest girl joined right in with the cleverest girl—and the things they said the average everyday man would have to do to make them love him would have horrified Miss Corelli to the verge of madness if she had heard them.

They would horrify me, too—only I know it's just their heads talking now. Some day their hearts will begin to speak, and then we shall hear a different side of the story.

But, all the same, I read Miss Corelli's article on the greatest thing in the world and how to keep it, and I really did wish she hadn't gone back to the ancient days of superstitution about men and the way to make a man stay in love with his wife.

A Pretty Woman.

It was all right for people who believe in the dark of the moon idea and who wouldn't sit thirteen at a table for anything, to say and to believe when they said, that no man could love a woman unless she looked pretty all the time, but in this day and time, Miss Corelli, really now, why don't you look around you?

Who's the man the most outrageously in love with his own wife that you know?

Is she the prettiest woman of your acquaintance? I don't believe it. She isn't of mine.

A pretty woman is the thing for a short conquest, but for a long race, give me the average looking woman every day in the week. Why? Well, she's apt to be more interesting for one thing; and then, sisters, men are really not all such blithering idiots as some would have us believe—really they are not. I know men who love their wives because their wives are good women, and true friends and jolly comrades and good fellows and gentle sweethearts—honestly I do—and I've been acquainted with several men who stayed in love with their wives after they had seen said wives with their hair twisted around a comb and a mouth full of hair pins—such was the incredible folly of the creatures.

Tut, tut, Miss Corelli! What an odd lot of men you must know, really!

Are they all such absolute dunces as you try to make us think?

I don't believe it—I can't believe it. How on earth have they ever accomplished all they have in the world if they are such absolutely blind, unreasoning creatures as you say they are?

"Look pretty every minute or you'll lose him." Good gracious! Whatever would become of the world if all the married women in it agreed with you? What would happen to the babies? Who'd run downstairs in a heavy dressing gown and make husband a mustard plaster when something he'd eaten had gone wrong with him? And then there's husband—what would he think of us if we should turn around and say the same sort of thing to him?

A woman did say it in Chicago the other day—a very clever and well-known woman she was, too. She declared that she left her perfectly good young husband because she hated the way he looked with his collar off, shaving.

And the world re-echoed with gusty laughter of the gods! I wonder why?

I Wonder.

Just as I was finishing Miss Corelli's article the prettiest girl was saying:

"I wonder if it never strikes these people who are so busy telling us 'how to keep a husband' that nine out of ten of the divorce suits are brought by women—and not by men at all. To judge by statistics, it is the men who need the advice on how to keep a wife."

And I kept wondering what she'd say when she fell in love—really and truly in love—and whether she wouldn't pity every one who wasn't in the same state, and whether she wouldn't be right to pity them.

And the cleverest girl—why she's the very one who'll be crazy about some one some day, and not such a very clever some one, either, and perhaps not such a very good some one. Poor, earnest, honest, deep-hearted, cleverest girl—and she'll never really live till she is. Still, all the way back to the cottage I kept humming. And, do you know, the words that I hummed were those odious ones the cleverest girl had chanted so defiantly—"What are you going to do to make me love you?"

I wonder if they do mean something, just now, those words? And I wonder if what they mean is something sane and wholesome and well balanced and just as reasonable and good for the future of the whole race of humanity in some great, noble, far-reaching way, or if they are just a sudden outbreak of silly vanity and overweening self-esteem, brought about by the sudden change in the mysterious tide that has for so many centuries controlled the destiny of the mothers of men?

Rise up, Mr. Plain, Every Day, Ordinary Man, with the plain, every day, ordinary wife, and tell us what you think about it—honestly and truly.

JUST A-NODDIN'

By R. H.

SUCH a drowsy, drowsy tune the night-things croon
I'll be droppin' off t'sleep here, pretty soon.
Teasin, trystin little winds come foolin' by—
Kinder kiss my cheek, together, on the sly;
Seems the roses fairly fling their sweetness roun'—
'N'ever now and then a star comes tumblin' down.

* * * * * * * * *

Got a curious sort of feelin' gittin' here—
Like I'd glimpsed you, way off yonder, Betty dear.
