I ONCE asked the lamented Harry Pulliam, then president of the National League, how he could construe this a balk when there was nothing specific in the rule book about it, and he replied that he simply construed such an act as PRIMA FACIE evidence of an intention to commit a balk. I regret to have to say that in my opinion this is no answer at all, for the simple reason that no pitcher ever has an INTENTION of committing a balk.

Just to hear what he would say, I once asked the same question of the great Mordecai Brown. He averred that the point was covered in the rule book. I handed him the book and asked him to kindly show me where it was. He looked and looked, but never found it, and had to give up the case except to remark that he knew well enough it was a balk all right, and so it is everywhere construed.

By the way, it is worth noting that a balk does not entitle the batter ever to his base, but only such runners as are already on base. With no runner on a pitcher may make all the balks he likes and nothing will happen.

It is perfectly possible, though, for a pitcher to have a very puzzling way of throwing either to home or to a base without one being able to tell for certain just where he is going to throw, and that without committing a balk. This is easier for left-handed men than for right-handers; but I have seen the latter kind who could so twist and distort their bodies at the waist, after starting a seeming delivery to the plate, that they were able to completely fool the first-base runner into starting for second, and who then succeeded in wrenching their left foot around so as to thrust it straight out toward first base after all and to squarely face that sack before compelled to turn the ball loose. In a case like this the pitcher has gone through, seemingly, with the motion so far toward a plate delivery that the runner has not thought it possible for him to change and get it to first base instead. Yet the pitcher has succeeded in doing that very thing, and has conformed to the requirements of a throw to first base as well. To do this he has had to so retard the final movements of his arm swing as to give himself time to step out toward first and to face it, and still have force and accuracy enough in the throw to get it there speedily; it is a very difficult thing to do. But it can be done, and that quite legitimately.

To Be Continued Next Sunday.

Quick, Easy and Positive Cure for All Foot Torture.

The following is said to be the surest and quickest cure known to science for all foot ailments: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for fully fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effect is really wonderful. All soreness goes instantly; the feet feel delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for sore bunions, sweaty, smelly and aching feet. A twenty-five-cent box of Calocide is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. It works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Don't waste time on uncertain remedies. Mack and McGraw Will Set New Record if They Land This Year

Connie Mack and John McGraw are heading straight for two big league records. Should these rival managers succeed in piloting their teams to the pennant, all modern records will have been shattered, for nobody in these days of baseball has succeeded in annexing five championships for one club. McGraw has already won four for the Giants and Mack has corraled the same number for the Athletics.

Fred Clarke has landed four and Frank Chance, while managing the Cubs, came across with four, but no other big league leader can point to a record any way near that mark.

McGraw won his first pennant for New York in 1904, repeated in 1905 and then came back in 1911 and 1912. Mack's work has been every bit as clean-cut. He first landed a flag in 1902. Three years late, in 1905, he grabbed another, and then in 1910 and 1911 repeated.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

30,000 INVITED TO TAKE PART IN CONVENTION

More Than 100 Speakers Asked to Discuss Problems of the Southern Merchant.

Of all the conventions which come to Atlanta, there is probably none which is of more importance to the city in a business way than the Southern Merchants' Convention, which will be held during the first two weeks in August, and which is promoted by the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Taking advantage of the fact that Dixie merchants come to Atlanta in large numbers at that time, in order to buy their fall stocks from the big wholesale and manufacturing houses of the city, the association has developed this gathering into an organized convention, which serves the twofold purpose of entertaining these business guests of the city, and also of helping them to overcome the difficulties which they meet in the pursuit of commercial success.

It is of inestimable benefit to business men when a number of them can get together and talk over their problems. The association has arranged for more than 100 speakers, drawn from the ranks of the merchants themselves, who will present these everyday problems as they have come up in their own businesses. Every merchant will be invited to take part in the discussion, and in this way the good results which have been gotten by one man will be given to all for their combined benefit.

The time of the convention has been well provided for. In the daytime there will be enough discussion to give every merchant the fullest possible benefit. But there will be enough time left for the visiting amongst the wholesale houses which every merchant will want to do.

Then there are barbecues, receptions, dinners, theater parties and baseball parties all arranged for, at all of which the merchants will be the guests of the association. Every merchant in Dixie is cordially invited to come to this convention, and ample preparations are being made to care for them all.

Secretary Moore has sent out over 30,000 invitations, and the man who doesn't come and take advantage of this splendid opportunity will have only himself to blame.

Notes on Selling

Hatpin point protectors that can be worn for ornamentation as well as for protection are now shown. They are said to hold firmly, and can be released at the slightest touch.

Red and the brighter shades of green and yellow are the preferred colors of sweaters for use at the shore or mountains this season.

Evening wraps of corded silks, chiffon, or heavily-beaded net are popular now. Better models are draped about the knees and fastened at the side with a single ornament or button. Short coats, similar to the Eton, are shown among the late models. The vests are quite small, extending several inches along the sides, showing the modish, broad girdle.

A small watch handbag, made of gray and all black striped silk, with a new-shaped frame, is featured locally now. It is fitted with cardcase, mirror and watch, and is suitable for wear with light summer frocks as well as heavier fall costumes.

Selling agents say that the new spring lines of silk and cotton mixtures are very satisfactory, and that they look for keen competition.

Plain nets are in great demand abroad, and prices are persistently advancing. Shadow flouncings will probably be in especially good demand here, in widths ranging from 12 to 27 inches.

Carpet wool dealers in the primary market are advancing prices.

JUTE PRODUCTION.

It is reported that the Indian government's preliminary forecast on the jute crop is 3,191,000 acres, an increase of about 6 per cent over last year. Important changes are being made at Washington in the wording of the jute schedule. The child labor clause has been modified in its application to goods made entirely by children under 14 years of age.

Mahogany Worth Fortune Used Here for Furniture

Colonial Pieces Reproduced and New England Is Scoured for Good Models.

When you think of furniture you think of Grand Rapids, Mich., don't you?

Of course you do, just as when you think of cotton goods, you think of Fall River, Mass.

But isn't there a chance—just a bare chance—that you are being fooled? That massive, highly polished, solid mahogany sideboard—can you find the maker's name anywhere on it? Probably you can not, and if not, how do you know it came from the Michigan city? Just as likely as not the piece was built right here in Atlanta.

Atlanta has several really large furniture concerns. One of them, the Southern Furniture Company, out Marietta street, devotes its efforts almost exclusively to high-grade dining room and bedroom sets. About 250 men are employed the year around, turning out dining room tables, writing desks, china closets, sideboards, beds, dressers, chiffoniers, dressers and washstands.

Follow Colonial Models.

For the most part these are faithful copies of old colonial pieces, and solid mahogany and solid oak are the woods most in favor.

The day of veneers and of fancy carvings is gone, it seems. Dignity of line, sober finish, with the richness all in the material—this is the policy today.

Stacked in the factory yards are mahogany and oak in the rough, worth, in the aggregate, several hundred thousand dollars. Otto Schwab, the vice president, points out a very ordinary looking stack, about the color of a cigar box. "There's $30,000 worth of Mexican mahogany," he remarks. "It is worth from $250 to $400 per 1,000 feet. Roughly, I should say that mahogany is worth three times as much as oak."

When the lumber arrives in Atlanta it must remain in the stacks a year, to insure perfect seasoning. Even after that, it goes to the dry kilns.

From the dry kilns it goes to a man who saws it into proper lengths.

Waste Manufacturers' Bane.

"Here is the man who can break any furniture factory," said Mr. Schwab. "He has in his mind all the different lengths useful in the plant, and it is his business to cut every plank to the best advantage. If he does not, there is terrible waste, and waste is the bane of every manufacturer's existence."

Sized and sorted as it comes from the kiln, the lumber is "ripped" into proper widths. Then it is loaded on trucks and starts its path through the wood-working machines. Everything is in order. The sawdust and shavings are sucked up by great fans and carried straight back to the furnace fires. Loose blocks are not allowed to mess up the floors. The lumber moves from machine to machine on trucks. It never has to be rehandled. Pieces are stacked in compartments as carefully as a good business house files its letters, so that a workman need not waste time in searching for any particular thing he wants.

Sandpaper on Belts.

Every appliance is up to the minute. There are, for instance, "sanding machines," where sandpaper belting whizzes incessantly. In one machine this sandpaper belt is so arranged as to sandpaper the entire top of a dresser or sideboard or table at one operation, a skillful workman increasing or decreasing the pressure at the exact points desired.

Another sandpaper belt hisses over a flexible pillow and by resting oddshaped bits on this pillow, curved table legs and the like are made smooth and ready for the varnishing processes.

Four and five coats of varnish are necessary before the final coat is applied. Each coat must be allowed to dry, then be sandpapered before the next is applied. This takes several weeks. When all this is done, each piece stands from three to four weeks for the varnish to take on the rock-like consistency necessary before it can be pumiced, and given its final polish.

Formerly all rubbing with pumice and water was done by hand. Lately a machine was invented which imitates closely the motion of the human workman, and this, to some extent, has supplanted hand rubbing, but it never will do so entirely.

Red Gum Furniture.

As often is the case, the South is producing something which can not be duplicated elsewhere, a product of great beauty, and other sections are taking to it quicker than the people right at home.

In the furniture business, red gum gives an example of this. In the Southern Furniture Company display rooms stand red gum pieces, finished in imitation of mahogany. It is not exaggeration to say that red gum, properly finished, can not be detected from mahogany except by an expert, and he can not, at a distance of two feet. The only difference is that mahogany has a minute, dotted grain, fine almost as a pin point, which red gum lacks. This can be seen with the eye eight or ten inches from the wood. At a greater distance, it becomes indistinguishable.

"Europe is buying great quantities of this," says Mr. Schwab. "America takes to it slowly. The American likes to say that his furniture is solid mahogany. Another piece, as beautiful, which no one could tell from the real, and which is solid, home-grown wood, durable and beautiful, does not appeal to him."

Designer an Autocrat.

The designer is the autocrat of the furniture factory. His office is in the room where the display models are made—but he is not always in his office.

"He takes it easy," explains Mr. Schwab.

Interesting stories are told of the work of designing furniture. Sometimes it entails a search through old New England towns, and the purchase of a broken-down old bed—valuable only for its design.

Then many factors must be considered. For instance, the development of the city flat has made it necessary to design sideboards and dining tables of small size.

Yokohama's Market For Silks Is Active

Prices Are Stiffer on Sales of 2,800 Bales for First Week—Italy's Crop Short.

The Yokohama silk market is more active and prices stiff. Sales for the first week of the season amounted to 2,800 bales, of which 1,100 bales were shipped to Europe and America. Stocks in that market were reported as 4,000 bales of filatures.

Milan advices confirmed that the Italian crop would barely exceed 70 per cent of last year's. While American buyers were holding back, European manufacturers slowly followed the advance asked on new silk. The Canton market advanced, and there was good demand from both European and American buyers.

Stocks of short reels in this market were almost nil, and little silk was obtainable for shipment earlier than six weeks hence. At Shanghai the market was quiet, but firm. Steam filatures were reported slowly advancing in this market, and there was good demand for coarse sizes. It was estimated that the season's production of these filatures would be about 23,000 bales.

WAR RAISES PRICES.

The Balkan war has brought about a rise in certain lumber prices in Europe because of the big demand for wood for ammunition boxes.

INSURANCE FOR HONEST BUYERS DRAWS TRADE

Western Firm Refunds Five Per Cent of Money Paid for oGods When Misfortune Comes.

"I wonder how many of the merchandising and manufacturing firms of Atlanta have insurance for customers," said a buyer for a Western house. "Furthermore, I wonder how many of them ever heard of such a thing. I think I am fairly well informed along business lines, and I never heard of it until recently.

"I was talking to a Western man about a month ago, a member of a wholesale firm doing a business of a million or more a year and increasing rapidly. I knew that he formerly had been a successful traveling salesman and had left the road and organized the firm some seven or eight years ago, and I was interested in learning how the business had made such progress. He said it was the insurance idea that attracted trade if prices and quality of goods were equal to those of competitors.

Ideal Part of Capital.

"Naturally, I wanted to know what the insurance idea was, and he said it had come to him, as he had been going about among customers, that any firm which could give them a line of insurance in the right direction would get their trade. He talked to friends who had money and business experience, and they organized the firm with his insurance idea as part of their working capital.

"This idea was to allow a customer 5 per cent return on the amount of all goods bought and paid for, in case he became unable to continue in business by reason of death, ill-health, or ill-luck. Simple enough proposition, isn't it? He cited an instance of one man who had bought $50,000 worth of goods while he had been dealing with the firm and was compelled to retire on account of poor health. He had saved very little, as he had a large family, and the prospect before him was not bright. The firm took his case under advisement and when they were fully convinced that he was eligible, he drew $2,500 in cash.

"That much unexpected money is a great help, and it proved a saving grace to this man, for with it he bought a snug little farm on which he has made a modest living and got back much of his health.

Gets Fresh Start.

"Another customer, through no fault of his own, was forced into bankruptcy. As it happened, he owed the firm nothing at the time, but he had bought some thirty-odd thousand dollars' worth of goods, and they gave him his choice of $1,500 in cash or the same amount in stock for a new start. He took the goods, made a new start, and is now in a position to claim more than $3,000 if he can't help himself in any other way.

"Another customer died insolvent, owing the firm $300. He had been a pretty good customer and his insurance would have entitled him to about $1,200. The firm deducted what he owed and gave the widow about $900 in cash.

OVERDUE BILLS WORST MENACE JOBBER MEETS

Credit Man Shows That Prompt Collections Are Necessary for Permanent Success.

"Each day that an unpaid bill runs over the date when due it becomes harder to collect," said recently a credit man connected with a local wholesale grocery concern.

"Shortly after I became connected with this house a solicitor for a large collection agency interviewed me, and I decided to give him some of our business. There were a number of back accounts on file that needed clearing up, so I handed them to him.

"He looked at them and handed them back, saying that he judged them rather old and did not care to test his firm's ability on such prospects. They had resisted various attempts at collection. This I foolishly explained to him, and it seemed to strengthen his opinion that they were hardly worth troubling with.

"Had those accounts been properly handled at the beginning they would either have been collected or the customers would have had no more goods. As matters stood, a bill of good was shipped them the month previous. It is difficult to keep the customers of a large house prompt in the matter of payments, but it can be done. It is worth while doing, too, because it is the only way to success. I have had no accounts outlawed since I have been connected with my firm. Losses are bound to occur in business failures, but I speak only of houses carelessly allowing accounts to run for indefinite periods uncollected.

"The house that does not collect promptly does business at its own expense, while the house that collects efficiently does business at its customers' expense.

"There need be no concern about the 'worthy dealer in trouble' whose luck is temporarily against him. Their numbers are small and the house's judgment can govern those cases. Sympathy is all right in deserving cases, and we are not hard on deserving retailers. Only, we have our running expenses to meet every week. Is there any reason why the people we serve should not meet theirs? We are careful to investigate the facts in cases where allowances are made. That is the only way to permanent success."

SOUTHERN RAILROADS BUY MUCH NEW EQUIPMENT

The Baldwin Locomotive Works has received orders from Amsinck & Co., of New York, for four locomotives; from the Virginia and Southwestern for three locomotives and from the Tremont and Gulf for one switching engine.

The Seaboard line has ordered five dining cars from the Pullman Company.

The American Locomotive Company has received orders for five super-heater Mikado locomotives from the El Paso and Southwestern Railway and for five 6-wheel switching engines from the Chicago Junction Railway.

Yellow Pine Scarce, Supply Almost Gone

North Carolina Variety Almost Supplants White Pine for Building Packing Cases.

The consumption of yellow pine lumber has increased to such an extent that while the public is familiar with its value for construction, building operations, and packing cases, very little is known as to the amount of timber left standing. In a few years the supply will be exhausted.

Short-leaf yellow pine, known in the trade as "North Carolina pine," has taken the place of white pine to such an extent that the latter has almost disappeared from the market. In 1909, 90 per cent of the packing cases manufactured were made of white pine. This wood became so hard to procure and increased in price so rapidly that North Carolina pine came into use.

At the present date 90 per cent of the packing cases are made from this wood.

When general business is good throughout the country the demand exceeds the supply. When crops are abundant and the Middle West is prosperous, so much of this wood goes to that part of the country that the mills on the Atlantic seaboard find it difficult to manufacture enough lumber to supply the wants of dealers in Eastern States.

Glassware Makers Readjusting Prices

Have Been Selling Product Under Cost and Now Are Marking Up Their Lists.

Prices on many lines of glassware are to be advanced immediately, but only in keeping with the increased cost of production. Manufacturers have been asking too much on some lines and not enough on others, according to The Crockery and Glass Journal.

Under the present plan it is proposed to remedy the condition, lowering the items which have been listed too high and bringing up the prices of those that have been sold below the cost of production. The two largest manufacturers in the United States have put new lists into effect, and some of the smaller plants will follow suit at once.

MANUFACTURERS COMMITTEE CONSIDERS MANY OFFERS

Manufacturers on the subcommittee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which is pushing plans for the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, met Wednesday at noon to discuss the several proposals which have been made offering buildings to house the exhibit. The subcommittee is progressing well in its work of estimating costs, floor space, available location, and the like, but has reached no definite conclusion.

HIGHER PRICES FOR FOOD NOT AID TO FARMER

City Distribution Represents Most of the Cost the Consumer Is Paying Nowadays.

The high prices which the housewife is paying for foodstuffs in these days of record top figures does not mean as much prosperity for the farmer as would appear.

Dr. Clyde L. King, of the Wharton School of Finance, finds after an exhaustive study that on many articles of produce a full third of the price paid by the consumer goes to cartage and delivery costs, and for retailers' profits.

"If our urban dwellers are to have released a larger share of their incomes for other than subsistence purposes, these food costs must be reduced," says Dr. King.

"Probably half of them now spend annually nearly half of their income for food. In the future that city will have the best civic and industrial prosperity which first perfects plans whereby subsistence costs may be reduced to each and every citizen. In the past city growth depended on the exploitation of virgin resources and in the development of new industries. From now on city growth must hinge more and more largely upon community efficiency as expressed in lower living costs. The food problem is vitally wrapped up with the solution of the city's industrial supremacy and the extension of its industrial boundaries."

What Wages Average.

The manufacturer and employer of labor is particularly interested in a reduction of the food supply costs and in perfecting a closer industrial unity between the city and all the surrounding agricultural communities. Statistics show that 60 per cent of the males at least 16 years old are employed in manufacturing, mining, trade, transportation, and other occupations associated with industrial life in cities were earning less than $626 per annum in 1904, or about $2 a day, while 30 per cent were receiving between $626 and $1,000, and only 10 per cent were receiving $1,000 a year.

WILL ATTEMPT TO HURRY BILLS THROUGH HOUSE

Two Thousand Retailers Gathering for Purpose of Backing Bad Check and Garnishment Laws.

Two thousand retail grocers, dry goods men and hardware merchants will parade Monday morning from the Ansley Hotel to the State Capitol.

They have important business at the Capitol.

Not to put too fine an edge on the matter, they are going to do some lobbying, but this is a lobby which is open and aboveboard, and at which no one can take offense.

The bills which the retailers favor are the fraudulent check bill and the new garnishment bill, both of which measures, they declare, are necessary for their proper protection.

A fight on the bills is due in the House Tuesday. For this reason the annual convention of the Georgia Retailers' Association has been called for this date. It will remain in session Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Little business, besides endeavoring to get favorable action on the two bills mentioned and the election of officers for the coming year, will be accomplished.

J. W. S. Harding, president, will call the meeting to order Monday morning at 9 o'clock at the Hotel Ansley. Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Chamber of Commerce, will deliver the address of welcome. An executive session of an hour's duration will follow. Then comes the parade to the Capitol.

Two thousand retailers are expected to be in line. Dublin, Waycross, Thomasville, Augusta, Bainbridge, Athens, Columbus and Macon are expected to send big delegations. Other towns which find it impossible to send big delegations are sending petitions. Some merchants already are on the ground.

Every Representative who shows an inclination to oppose these two bills is likely to meet strong pressure from the merchants of his district, endeavoring to change his view of the matter.

It is expected there will be no trouble getting the bills through the Senate. The measures have moved along as if on greased ways in that body.

CANADA REFUGE OF U. S. STEEL IF GUILTY AS TRUST

Infinite Possibilities Found in Perpetual Charter Just Given Corporation.

LOOPHOLE FOR DISSOLUTION

Gary Sets Example for His Brother Officers in Stratagem.

By BOERSIANER.

There are infinite possibilities in the letters patent just granted the United States Steel Corporation by the Canadian Government.

The grant is apropos of a $20,000,000 plant that the corporation means to build up there. But the charter, not the mill, is the thing. The license to do almost any kind of business is perpetual.

Under it, also, Mr. Gary and his associates may control all sorts of properties—including, of course, the Tennessee Company. Equally, of course, the Steel Corporation may recontract for the Great Northern Ore Company—an amount of raw material which it was difficult to believe Gary would relinquish.

The charter may be rendered significantly adaptable in other ways. Should the Government win the pending suit against the corporation—should the United States Supreme Court order a dissolution—the company might extinguish itself in the United States and operate under the foreign rights just accorded.

It is an idea that should comfort the corporation's security holders, especially the owners of the common and preferred stocks, who might be simply asked to exchange the certificates of the old corporation for stocks in the Canadian concern—if the worst befall in the court, or, indeed, in Congress; for the Canadian tariff differs from the schedule of imposts proposed by the bill under the Senate's consideration.

Manifestly Mr. Gary and his coadjutors have indulged in thought for over a year. Their cogitation has ultimated in the Canadian proposition—which may be made protective alike to the management and to the security holders.

Obviously, too, Gary is setting an example to his brother corporation managers who may say in defense that the lawmakers of the United States are driving industrial companies out of the country.

Whatever is done with the Canadian charter, it is certain that the Steel Corporation has in reservation a legal stratagem evasive, ingenious and no doubt perfectly effective.

Crossing Corn Strains Increases Yield From 30 to 150 Per Cent, Declare Experts

Remarkable Results Have Been Attained by Farmers Who Have Worked Long and Patiently on Hybridizing Grain. No More Acreage or Expense Entailed in New Scientific Method.

By CHARLES A. WHITTLE.

Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Think of from 30 to 150 per cent increase in yield as a result of crossing strains of corn! Is it not very much worth while for farmers to take notice? If even less than 30 per cent gain were made as a result, what an enormous gain to the farmer, and that, too, without more work, more fertilizer or greater acreage planted!

Since the year 1876 Professor W. J. Beal, of the Michigan Agricultural College, has been demonstrating the fact that the first generation of hybrids has increased yields of corn. More recently other demonstrators have shown, beyond peradventure, that from 30 to 150 per cent can be obtained from planting hybrids, or one-year crosses, over planting pure strains alone.

So high has been piled the testimony of facts that no one has a right to doubt. It remains only for the farmer to apply. This he can do with very little trouble. When the farmer does make use of this little trick which the scientist has taught him, his wealth in corn, his cost of fattening hogs or beef, will stand at a much more favorable figure than at present.

Vigor Only Temporary.

While working long and painstakingly on hybridizing or crossing corn, the scientists discovered important limitations and facts which it is well for the farmer to know if he is to make a success of his seed plats. The first of these is that while crossing adds vigor it is only temporary. The greatest increase in vigor is in the first generation crosses. While a greater yield can be obtained by planting the seed of the crosses or hybrids for two or three years than can be obtained from planting a single pure strain, yet the wiser policy would be to return to original strains after planting one crop of hybrid seeds. This means that for the first year the two strains can be planted together in the same row. This will increase the yield the first year, but when the seed from the cross or hybrid crop is planted, the subsequent crop will be still larger in yield and production of fodder.

Returning to the original strain after the hybrid seed has been used one year, of course can be easily done, if the farmer will maintain seed plats where the pure strains are kept separate from other strains.

Same Variety Should Be Used.

The second important fact about making crosses is that only unrelated strains of the same variety should be used and not two distinct varieties. Unrelated strains of the same kind of corn can be obtained from different parts of the State or from different States for crossing purposes. What one needs to be certain of, however, is that the seed he is obtaining from elsewhere has been kept pure. Reliable seed producers who know how to maintain a pure strain, of course, are to be looked to rather than to the indiscriminate grower for the strains in making a cross.

These two important facts are as essential to success as the main discovery of the effect of crossing. To keep planting the seed of a hybrid corn because it produced a large yield at one time, in the light of investigation, would prove foolish. This is too often a common practice of farmers.

Keep the pure strains strong and vigorous by seed selection and the hybrid fields will take care of themselves as to yields and stover. Any farmer can perfect his seed corn and add greatly to its yielding power by well-known methods of seed selection. The germination test is foremost as a means for determining the vigor and potential yielding power of the grains taken from a given ear of corn. Plant ten grains of corn from an ear in a sand box where moisture and proper temperature are maintained. In a few days the green sprouts will have appeared. Examine and see how many of the ten grains germinated.

If eight or nine did, the ear can be said to have strong germinating power, and that it can produce a thrifty, good yielding plant. The remainder of the ear can then be planted in the seed bed. If the seed plat is kept away from other plats that are growing different strains or varieties, then a strong, pure strain of corn is assured. To add to the strength of the pure strain, it is the custom of the seed breeder to detassle every other plant. This leaves the stalk that has been detasseled to be fertilized by another plant, rather than by itself.

Aids Production Power.

This has been shown to add to the producing power of the plant. The corn from the detassled stalks, of course, is the grain for planting in the seed plats next year. The seed from the stalks not detassled and all grain from the tasseled stalks which is not required for maintaining the seed plat, can be planted in the general field after being mixed with similar corn taken from another plat. Thus mixed a hybrid plant is produced of the greatest possible yielding power.

Thus is seen that it is no difficult matter to breed up strains of corn and to make hybrid crosses for largest field yields. Any farmer can do it. In fact, no other one can do it so well for a given farm as the farmer himself. When he grows his own seed he knows whether or not proper care has been taken to keep the strains pure and strong. He has also made use of strains of corn that have become adjusted to the climate, soil and conditions in general of the farm. In other words, he is taking fewest chances when he does all this work himself. And it is not a large amount of work. It requires very little time. The interest it will arouse as well as the yields it will increase will make of it a fascinating work for any intelligent farmer.

SCALPERS BUSY, COTTON MARKET TO THEIR LIKING

October Fluctuates Between 11.40 and 11.60—Big Fellow and Public Not Interested.

NEW ORLEANS, July 19.—A more hopeful feeling in regard to the defeat of the Clarke amendment having been engendered recently by the advices from Washington, the cotton market has become more active, with bulls inclined to bid prices up to higher levels.

The weekly weather report Tuesday was rather discouraging to the bear element, droughty conditions being reported as prevailing in Texas and Oklahoma, while rain also was said to be needed in some portions of the Atlantics, which was rather surprising to the trade here, as it was thought that there had recently been sufficient rains in the Eastern belt. Some private crop reports received from that section of the belt within the last few days also state that the cotton crop is being damaged by blight, especially in Alabama.

The market lately has ranged between 11.40 and 11.60 for October delivery. Covering by shorts has checked any decline in the neighborhood of 11.40, while profit-taking by longs, together with some fresh short selling, has served to prevent the market advancing much above the level of 11.60 for October.

Good Scalpers' Market.

The result has been a good scalping market, which professional traders have taken advantage of, but the larger operators and the outside public, apprehensive as to the Clarke amendment passing, have, as a rule, refrained from taking any interest.

Now that a more optimistic feeling prevails in cotton circles here, interest in the market appears to be reviving, and, with a little more encouragement, leading bulls in this market would not hesitate to put some ginger into the speculative position. There is still a fairly large short interest in the market, and it would not require a great deal of buying to put the bears on the run. Prices on the new crop deliveries are now 1 cent under those prevailing a year ago, when, in some respects, the crop outlook was better than it is to-day.

Boll Weevil Active.

More reports of damage by boll weevil are coming in, especially from Texas and Louisiana, where the pest appears to have gained great headway. The rains which are needed now in Texas would lead to greater damage still from the boll weevil. Consequently, crop prospects in the Western belt are not encouraging, no matter from what angle the situation is viewed.

The Census Bureau report on consumption for the month of June proved to be a very bullish document. It proved conclusively that consumption in this country is running on the basis of 5,750,000 bales, which would indicate a total consumption, America and Europe combined, of at least 14,750,000 bales. For this reason, the trade is beginning to realize that a new crop of at least 15,000,000 bales will be required to keep the spindles of the world running and maintain reserves above the danger point next season.

In other words, the situation, as regards sufficiency of supplies or deficiency, hangs in the balance. Everything depends upon the new crop, and should it begin to deteriorate there might be an outburst of bullish speculation which would put prices back to a parity with those that prevailed a year ago at this time.

MORE CHEERFUL SPIRIT SHOWN IN SOUTHEAST

Improvement in Cotton Prospects Caused by Fine Growing Weather Brings Optimism.

By M. A. ROSE.

Two weeks of hot weather, varied by good showers, have done marvels for the cotton crop of the Southeast, according to the views of competent observers, who have made trips through the farming sections.

Cotton in South Georgia is waist high, they say, and a little more of this ideal weather—ideal from the cotton planters' standpoint—will do much to overcome the late start the crop suffered. If August, now, will be as kindly as July, and if the frost is not too early, an excellent crop will be assured. To make conditions perfect, a little rain in Central-Southeast Georgia might be added, for the abundant showers elsewhere skipped that section, according to the Weather Bureau's report last week.

The feeling all around is more cheerful. Country bankers and merchants report to their Atlanta correspondents that the crops look better—particularly the corn, which promises a more abundant yield than Georgia ever has known.

"Balance Basis" Rules.

By keeping loans strictly to a "balance basis"—that is, by demanding that a customer's balance be kept at 25 per cent of the total amount he is allowed to borrow—the supply of money is kept equal to the needs of commerce and industry.

Atlanta institutions, with one or two exceptions, have not yet begun to borrow from New York City. Within a few weeks this will begin, probably not as early as usual, for the cotton crop is a little late.

The outlook, according to good authorities, is for good prices for the cotton crop. Domestic consumption, many think, will reach 6,000,000 bales this year, a record figure. For nine months domestic mill takings were something less than 500,000 bales per month, but for April and May takings were well above 500,000 bales. They were close to 500,000 in June.

Cotton Prices Better.

July and August, terminating the cotton year, are expected to bring the total up to 6,000,000. Prices have stiffened perceptibly for spinnable grades in consequence. The total number of spindles in operation during the year has been close to the record, and stocks have been decreasing steadily since January.

Stocks and bonds continue to be quoted at bargain prices, both local investments and those listed on the New York Exchange. There was a small revival in trading following July dividend disbursements, but it has died down again. Fall, it is believed, will see much more active investment and speculation, and several Atlanta financiers, according to rumor, plan to father some new issues.

Hand-to-mouth buying of goods continues the rule, though some fair fall orders are reported by jobbers.

Cotton Trade Inclined To Enlarge Estimates

Bears Timorous Despite Promise of Big Yields. Spot Prices Steady.

MEMPHIS, July 19.—Another week of progress for the cotton crop is history, and the tendency is to enlarge yield expectations. There is still, however, plenty of time for something to happen and fear that it might is contributing largely to the disposition to make haste slowly in yielding to the temptation to try to discount a big crop.

The trade seems to realize that ever since the first of the year there has been a feeling in the cotton world that the crop of the season 1913-14 was going to be a large one, and so far nothing has happened to seriously interfere with this promise, yet in the face of many adverse conditions and circumstances, the price has held steady, and only for a brief spell have futures been below 11 cents.

This fact tends to increase confidence in the stability of the affair and discourages willingness on the part of bearishly inclined people to commit themselves too heavily on that side until there is assurance that the crop will be sufficient for the world's needs for the ensuing year and allow for some enlargement of the reserves in the hands of spinners.

As yet notes of complaint from the fields have been in a minor key and danger is largely prospective. There have been some temperatures that were too high for the best progress of the crop, for the moisture supply was limited, but while this was the case the weevils in the same districts have been kept in check.

Oklahoma has sent the most serious complaints as to the heat, although the condition is that State has been high and there is room for some deterioration and still leave promise of a good crop. Texas as usual is sending a variety of reports, though the average opinion is that a record crop will be marketed there. There is basis for expecting a large early movement from that Commonwealth also, and three new bales already have been marketed.

In this territory, which comprises the area that produces the bulk of the long staple varieties, the prospect is the best in years, though in the lower edge, including some of Mississippi and Arkansas, the weevil bids fair to be a factor. Conditions are so favorable at the moment that the tendency here is to take an optimistic view of the entire belt. Information reaching here is that while there has been much improvement in the Eastern belt during the past few weeks, chances are against yield equaling the record of two years ago.

Bears, however, think they see possibility of the belt setting a new record in the number of bales, while outlook is for good quality.

There is small activity in the spot department, although sales in this market have been fairly large for midsummer. The unsold stock here is small and only a few buyers are here, but scattering orders are coming from spinners. Receipts are small, but stocks in the aggregate at counted towns are larger than they were a year ago. Quotations are holding steady and middling ranges from 12 cents to 12 7-16.

OCCASIONAL OBSERVATIONS

The late J. P Morgan's heart more than his head entered into his investments. So the detailed list shows. He did not leave one important block of either bonds or stocks. The veteran banker was not the Croesus that was popularly supposed. He was loyal to Hartford—its financial institutions, its insurance companies and even its carpet industries.

* * *

It will do no harm now to publish the fact that latterly Mr. Morgan's mania for buying all sorts of art and quasi-art treasures became so abnormal that his partners and his family had occasion for alarm. He spent more millions than he was making during the closing years of his life. He had regal contempt for money when it was weighed in the balance with art or his special brands of philanthropy. Of course, he would brook no interference in his purchases, most of which toward the close were paid for by notes, which were discharged when he collected his profits from his firm.

* * *

If bankers are correct in their diagnosis, there will be no currency legislation this session. Legislators object to doing a double shift. They want to go home the moment the tariff bill is signed. Then, too, every lawmaker has a currency plan of his own up his sleeve, which he will try to force down the throats of his colleagues.

* * *

Neither James Speyer nor President Vanderlip of the National City Bank will go to Europe this summer, they have their hands full at home with railroad problems.

* * *

Many Wall street people are hoping that the Eastern trainmen will go on strike. There are at least 10,000 men in Wall street who would be glad to take the jobs thrown up by the conductors and trainmen.

* * *

Some brokers are paying 3 per cent for call money, notwithstanding that lower rates are obtainable. One such broker explained his apparent extravagance thus: "I do not care to pay off my 3 per cent loans and take on others at the lower rates. You see, my bank never charges me more than 6 per cent for call money, no matter how high it goes, so that it would be small business for me to pay the loan now that the bank is making a little money out of my loan. Another thing, if I paid it off under present conditions I would probably have to pay the current rate whenever call funds might be above 6 per cent in the future."

* * *

There are five institutions in Wall street which do not charge more than 6 per cent on call money, even though it might be quoted at 10 or 25 or 125 per cent. They are the National City Bank, United States Trust Company, Central Trust Company, Fifth Avenue Bank and the Park National. The last institution does not charge more than 6 per cent on its own money, but it does charge more than on that lent for the account of out-of-town correspondents.

* * *

The First National Bank, of which George F. Baker is president, is considered the biggest "Shylock" in the financial district. It always gets as much for its money as it can and in times when money is very high its reserve sinks below the 25 per cent mark. Little wonder the bank has paid 12,550 per cent in dividends since Mr. Baker became president in 1873.

New Canadian Charter Rouses Much Talk.

DETROIT, July 19.—The charter of the Canadian branch of the United States Steel Corporation, copies of which have been received here, grants that company an absolute monopoly of the Canadian steel business if the new concern desires to establish itself in control.

One section expressly grants the right to absorb any and all other companies engaging wholly or in part in the steel business. It may buy timber lands and engage in the manufacture of wooden products.

It may construct roads, build bridges and water transportation lines, with depots, docks and all other facilities for operation. It may own and operate electric and gas plants and telephone systems. It may build and own cars and, in fact, do everything except build railroads.

Few Sales of Iron at Present Prices

Southern Pig Held for $11 Per Ton. Stocks Will be Reduced in the Fall.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., July 19.—Southern pig iron now is being held for $11 per ton, and there are few sales being made. The market is far from being satisfactory, however, and the make is in excess of the demand. The manufacturers are not inclined to sell at the low prices that have been prevailing, and though reports are to be heard of $10.50 per ton iron, there are no orders.

The accumulated stocks of iron, estimated heretofore at 200,000 tons, should be cut down considerably during the third quarter of the year. At $11 per ton there is little profit on pig iron, and the furnace companies are said to be considering it better business to hold the iron rather than let it go out at the lower price.

Some of the companies selling special brand iron are not making concessions on the premium prices; for instance, the Alabama Company is not selling Clifton iron under $12 per ton. Special analysis iron is also commanding a special price. Charcoal iron commands more than $22.50 per ton and very little business is now being transacted for the reason that consumers are looking forward to a reduction in the quotations.

Curtailment of the production of pig iron in the Southern territory will be increased as the conditions of the market warrant it. The make in July will be considerably under what it was in June, during which month Alabama produced more than 163,000 tons of iron.

The steel plants are losing no time. There is a steady delivery of products, though reports have it that there is further reduction in unfilled orders. Following the announcement of the placing of an order for 18,000 tons of rail by the Southern and other railroads, it is learned that something like 20,000 tons of other shapes in steel are needed and will be ordered shortly in the Southern territory. Steel prices have shown but little changes lately, save as to wire.

Cast iron pipe is beginning to take on some activity.

Paper Market Is Puzzle to Handlers

Difficult to Estimate Demand for Mercantile Notes, and Buyers Are "Whining."

NEW YORK, July 19.—Commercial paper is moving in strange channels. The market is "whimmy." Handlers of mercantile paper can form no estimate from day to day of the demand for their commodity. One day the buying is large, then for a protracted spell the purchasing is nil.

Further to entangle the situation extraordinary and inexplicable discrimination is being shown by institutions to certain best names to the detriment of others equally as good. As the representative of a prominent house put it, there is no telling what the upshot will be.

With standard houses unable to get money to finance their current shipments, prolongation of debts follows, or, failing that, liquidation is precipitated.

Shows 'London' Beef 34 Per Ct. American

Corporation Votes to Allow Armour's Shop In Smithfield, After Considerable Debate.

LONDON, July 19.—The fact that 34 per cent of the beef supplied to Smithfield, London's biggest meat market comes from American producers was revealed at the City Corporation meeting, when the question of renting certain shops in the market to the Armours was being discussed.

Councillor Kimber, opposing the recommendation, alleged that American firms importing meats to Smithfield artificially inflated prices. Other Councillors defended American meat trade methods which enabled the poor to buy cheaply. One market tenant said: "We want Americans to continue to do a large business in Smithfield."

The recommendation was carried by an overwhelming majority.

New Tariff Will Spur Trade, Says McLean

New York Magnate Confident Business Troubles Are Near End. Much Money Idle.

LONDON, July 19.—James McLean, of Phelps, Dodge & Co., New York, and a director in some thirty corporations, who sailed on the Imperator, said:

"Our troubles, due merely to overtrading, were caused by an extraordinary expansion of commerce throughout the world during the past few years. At present securities are being liquidated almost to a standstill, but there is no real depreciation in their value. I believe there is a vast quantity of money lying idle in New York awaiting investment.

"I don't believe this moderate tariff will injure anyone in the slightest, but will rather tend to induce a genuine rush of trade throughout the country."

EARNINGS OF U. S. STEEL ABOVE DIVIDEND NEEDS

NEW YORK, July 19.—The United States Steel Corporation, according to a semi-annual statement just issued, during the first half of 1913 earned sufficient money to meet the half yearly requirements of 3½ per cent on preferred and 2½ per cent on common stock by more than $17,800,000.

There was a surplus at the end of the first quarter after dividend payments of $7,370,000 and there will be a surplus of $10,431,000 based upon the estimated earnings of $37,500,000 for the second quarter.

ODDS AND ENDS OF FINANCE NEWS

There were 1648 vessels, aggregating 382,304 gross tons, built in the United States in fiscal year ended June 30, largest construction since 1908.

Buenos Aires Great Southern Railway proposes to increase capital by £5,000,000, of which £2,650,000 will be issued as soon as possible on the London market.

Merger is planned of Central National Bank and Security Trust Company of Lynn, two of the largest institutions in the city, with combined resources of $8,000,000.

Deutsch Amerikanische Petroleum Gesellschaft, the German subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company, for the year 1912 shows net profits of $747,712, an increase for the year of $132,049.

James J. Hill, now in Canada, expresses opinion that Canada has been borrowing too freely, that both individuals and municipalities have been going ahead too rapidly and that the Dominion now has all the railroad mileage 8,000,000 peopel can support.

So far as the trade's information goes the world is now consuming wheat on a scale about 25 per cent larger than that of 15 or 20 years ago. Last year's world's shipments were the largest ever known by about 12,000,000 bushels and figure out 665,522,000, or a rate of nearly 12,800,000 bushels weekly.

Last year freight shipments into and out of Pittsburg aggregated 171,071,238 tons, of which 164,594,915 tons went to railroads, while 12,476,323 tons was water-borne, a new high record, eclipsing the best previous record, that of 1910, by 9,337,970 tons, or 5.5 per cent. The figures for 1912 reflect an increase of 96.6 per cent over those of 1903, and as compared with those of 1898 they show a gain of 284 per cent.

WILL SPEND MILLION TO IMPROVE BRINSON RAILWAY

SAVANNAH, July 19.—An agreement to place the common stock of the Brinson Railway Company in a voting trust for four years has been approved by the stockholders.

The stock is owned largely by George M. Brinton, of Springfield, Ga., who is president. Mills B. Lane, of the Citizens and Southern Bank, and Jacob S. Collins, of the Real Estate Bank and Trust Company, both at Savannah, were named as trustees, and were authorized to name a third trustee to serve with them. Mr. Collins and John E. Foy were elected members of the board of directors, in addition to the other members who were re-elected.

Thus John H. Hunter and Robert M. Hitch will remain on the board. The financing is to be provided through New York financiers, who are represented by James Imbrie, of that city, chairman of the directors of the railroad.

This action means that about $1,000,000 additional is to be invested in the Brinson Railway Company.

B. & O. Year Earnings Exceed $100,000,000

Gross Sets New Record; Net Reduced by Flood Damage—7.12 Per Cent for Common.

The year ended June 30 was a banner one for the Baltimore and Ohio, earnings exceeding $100,000,000 for the first time. But flood damage decreased the net by $498,687. Surplus after all charges and dividends amounted approximately to $1,000,000, a decrease of about $600,000.

Although the estimate to overcome the physical damage done by the flood was $3,000,000, some permanent work will incur further charges of over $1,000,000.

Gross operating income amounted to $101,541,905, an increase of $8,947,582. Earnings available for dividends on the common stock were equal to 7.12 per cent, compared with 7.58 per cent in the previous year.

AMMONIA BOMBS USED.

Ammonia bombs are being tried out on some of the national forests for the purpose of extinguishing forest fires. They are said to have worked well in the case of brush fires where the firefighters find difficulty in getting near enough to the burning area to beat out the flames. Each bomb exploded will extinguish fire in a circle of about five yards in diameter.

TREE PLANTER TRIED.

Experiments with a tree planting machine at the Utah Agricultural Experiment Station indicate that it may be used to advantage in reforesting old burned areas on the national forests.

Rumely Plants Shut, Year's Orders Filled

The Important Question to the Stockholder Is, "When Will Manufacturing be Resumed"

NEW YORK, July 19.—A dispatch from Chicago to the effect that the Rumely Company is planning practically to close down its plants for making thrashing machines and tractor engines appeared at a casual reading to supply a bearish argument on the Rumely stocks.

Inquiry at the company's bankers brought the confirmation of the statement, but also developed some additional information which removed much of its possibilities as a market factor. The company will stop construction of thrashers and tractors, as well as several other lines of farm machinery, around August 1, because the year's orders have been filled. The remaining months of 1913 will be devoted to deliveries and collections.

The contraction of manufacturing in midsummer is a seasonal matter, followed to a greater or less extent by all concerns making farming implements. Of far more significance than the reason for closing the Rumely plants is the problem as to when they will again start up.

Usually new contracts have been received by the late autumn to warrant the resumption of business on a substantial scale, but such may not be the case this year. A director said yesterday that he would not be surprised if there should not be much activity before January 1.

GIRL PLAYS MAN AND WINS LOVE OF HATED RIVAL

Unique Vengeance Is Planned by Young Woman Whose Sweetheart Proved Faithless.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Jilted by her lover, Bessie McIntyre, of North Wheeling, a pretty 18-year-old girl, secured an odd but effective revenge on her rival, who "stole" her sweetheart and on the faithless lover at the same time.

June 25 Harry Pendleton, a well-known young business man of this city, informed Miss McIntyre that he could not see her again(as he had become engaged to another girl. By a dint of inquiry the jilted girl ascertained that the girl who had stolen her lover's affections was Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, Ohio, just across the river from this city. Securing permission from her parents, Miss McIntyre had her hair cut off, and donning one of her brother's suits, she visited Bridgeport and met Miss Allen.

It was a case of love at first sight—on the part of the Bridgeport girl. Miss McIntyre masquerading as "Lawrence Dessing," was a devoted lover, and every night found "Lawrence Dessing" at the home of Miss Aiken.

Last Sunday night while "Dessing" and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to call on her again. She then confessed her love to her companion, the pseudo "Dessing." Miss McIntyre, dressed in a gown of the latest mode last night met Miss Aiken in this city. Before Miss Aiken could speak the North Wheeling girl told her how she had revenged herself.

In a moment the girls were fighting and were separated by the police.

Must Stay Maids to Get Mother's Estate

Daughters of Ohio Woman Are Beneficiaries Under Will Which Prohibits Their Marriage.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, July 19. One of the most remarkable wills ever admitted to probate in this county was made by Jane Lake, late of Richwood, who left considerable property to her three daughters, Linie, Nora and Ida.

The provisions are that the estate shall be equally divided among the three daughters, on the condition that none of them will marry. If one of them marries, her share of the estate goes to the two remaining single. If all three should marry, the entire estate is to go to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Concussion of Brain Kills a Gigantic Frog

Oscar Siler went to Mich.
Thought he'd rest and catch some fish,
Pitched his tent on Fountain Lake—
Listen to this nature fake:

FOUNTAIN, MICH., July 19—Oscar Siler, of Chicago, who has been fishing on the lake near here, claims to have killed the record frog. Said frog is said to weigh 6 pounds and to be 15 inches long. It will be sent to Chicago. The frog died of concussion of the brain. Thus—

"Kerplunk," croaked the prehistoric bullfrog.
"You're drunk," piped the monarch of the bog.
Whereupon Siler (who was sober) bounced a rock off the bullfrog's bean.

Miner Returns Rich To Find Wife Dead

Comes Back Home to Make Restitution for Having Deserted Her 20 Years Ago.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Wealthy and anxious to take back his wife, whom he deserted twenty years ago, Josiah Bronson, a modern Enoch Arden, found the old home in ruins and the wife dead. From the old-timers who had known him in the early days he learned that his wife, believing him dead, had married his twin brother.

Two children, he learned, were born of the marriage, and upon the death of the mother were sent to relatives in West Virginia.

Bronson declared he would care for the children. "I shall give them the best education money can buy," he said. "I deserted their mother when she was just a young woman, and now I want to atone for the cowardly act."

Tight Shoes Land Thief Behind Bars

Burglar in Jewelry Store Kicks Heels to Relieve Pressure and Alarms Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Frank Davies, who at times also gives his name as John Simpson and Joe Allen, became irritated last night while scooping unset diamonds in his hat in a dark room because the toes of his new shoes were too narrow.

Intending to relieve the squeeze, he kicked toward the floor with his heel, but miscalculated and drove his foot through a glass show case. A policeman in a saloon on the floor below heard the noise and arrested Davies, who says he is an ex-convict and that he arrived here from Los Angeles at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The diamonds were claimed to-day by the jewelers from whom they were taken.

PERSEVERANCE WINS FOR SHOW AT KNOXVILLE

Conservation Exposition Will Open September 1 Free of Debt and Complete.

KNOXVILLE, July 19.—In an authorized interview T. A. Wright, president of the National Conservation Exposition to be held in this city from September 1 to November 1, makes the statement that the exposition will open its gates on September 1 complete to the last detail, and that the exposition will be opened absolutely free of debt of any kind.

So far as is known, this will set a record for expositions anywhere. The financing of the project in the face of a number of disappointments is something in which the officers and directors of the exposition take pride.

"At the time the exposition project was first broached," says President Wright's statement, "it was expected that the Congress of the United States would appropriate $250,000 for a large exposition building. Through the action of one Knoxville man and of two or three Congressmen this appropriation was defeated in the last days of the last Congress. But the United States Government will be represented at the exposition by suitable exhibits from its various departments. The defeating of the appropriation bill will make no difference in the size or the quality of the Government displays.

"I have waited so that I might be sure of my ground in making the statement that the exposition will be complete on the opening day, and that it will be absolutely free of debt on that day.

"The exhibit space under cover has been increased more than four times what it was at former expositions and the Midway and outdoor space have been increased more than five times that heretofore used. The success of the exposition is assured. It will be the greatest exposition ever held in the South."

Five large exposition buildings have been added to the plant of the old Appalachian Exposition, and four of these are finished to the last nail; the fifth is under roof. A new Midway street, with over a mile of frontage, has been constructed. Only last week it was found necessary to add 30,000 square feet of space to the grounds in order that all applicants for outdoor space might be taken care of.

FISHERMAN FINDS $1,400 WORTH OF PEARLS IN HAUL

PEORIA, ILL., July 19.—Joe Johnson, a clam fisherman on the Illinois River, found two gems among the pile of clams brought in from a day's haul. Johnson, thinking the pearls of unusual value, took them to a jeweler, who to-day gave him $1,400 for the two stones.

BRYAN DODGES PAPER'S QUESTIONS

wrong. It is using the office for making money."

Senator Bristow said action would be had on his resolution. He said, too, that there would be quite a little discussion on the subject. It probably will be referred to a committee. Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, says it probably would be "handled in a routine way."

Mr. Bacon says he thought the resolution was introduced to bring about a discussion of the course of Mr. Bryan, and that remedial legislation was not demanded.

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend, of Michigan, holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the Government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Among those who talked were the following:

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts—A Cabinet member can live on $12,000 a year if he does not have large family expenses, and he can live comfortably and respectably.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania—Samuel J. Randall, one of the greatest of Democrats, served this country for a whole generation, living on a salary of $5,000 a year. I have always disapproved of the custom that has grown up resulting in the very considerable neglect of official duties on the part of public men in order that they may go on lecture circuits.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina—While Mr. Bryan's speaking tours will serve a good purpos in that he always preached true Democracy and patriotism and Christian living, he can never again appear as a knight errant of Democracy.

Representative Willis, of Ohio—I am opposed to a Government official capitalizing his job. The Secretaryship of State is a man's job. Mr. Bryan should stay here and attend to the work of his office. He has enough on his hands with the present critical situation in Mexico, the unsettled questions with Japan and the matter of the Panama Canal tolls. We members of Congress have to stick to our tasks.

Representative Miller, of Minnesota—Mr. Bryan is giving this country a remarkable exhibition in the difference between his preachings during the past seventeen years and his present practices.

Representative Kahn, of California—There are many able men in the employ of the Government who are prevented by law and the hours of service from increasing their incomes through additional employment.

Representative Payne, of New York—I have been able to live on my salary as a member of the House. I can not see why the Secretary of State is unable to live on his salary.

Towne, Bryan's Friend, Calls Step Unfortunate.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Secretary Bryan's determination to supplement his official salary of $12,000 by going on a six weeks' lecture tour has awakened severe criticism from the men who supported him when he first loomed on the political horizon.

Charles A. Towne, who was one of the speakers at the famous "Dollar Dinner" in April, 1899, organized to emphasize Bryan's Jeffersonian simplicity of tastes, discussed Mr. Bryan's new move reluctantly, as they are still close friends.

"I consider the Secretary's plan to continue his lecture tours while occupying the chief place in the President's Cabinet most unfortunate," said Mr. Towne. "These are days when great national issues must be decided, and when the Secretary of State is required to give every bit of time and energy in behalf of the nation. It is a time when men intrusted with the affairs of the Government must have their minds occupied with nothing else except the questions of state.

Explanation Only Makes It Worse, Says World.

(From The N. Y. World, July 16.)

It is with the most profound regret that we have to note the position into which the Secretary of State has drawn himself and the explanation now given which only makes it worse.

Whether Mr. Bryan can afford to take a prolonged vacation at just this critical time for the Administration and his own high office may be a question, but a minor one. Whether, under the frankly admitted circumstances of personal fortune, he can only afford a money-making vacation, must be something less than a question with the great masses of the people whose life he has lived in sympathy.

The real question is whether the Government for such a position as his may not justly claim an undivided service, and whether any other view is compatible with a worthy ambition. We have had men in high office who have sacrificed personal fortune to render such undivided service and could afford it. We have had many more men there who have done this and could not afford it.

We can not think of the President of the United States doing otherwise. We should not be able to think of any of his Cabinet doing otherwise.

Action Most Bizarre, Says Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, July 19.—Regarding Secretary Bryan's lecture tour, The Pall Mall Gazette to-night says:

"It is a singular paradox in a country where there is so much money in politics as in the United States that the chief member of the President's cabinet should find his official salary inadequate to support his existence.

"We can quite understand why $12,000 a year is not enough for the Secretary of State, considering the American scale of life, but one would have expected a man of Bryan's moral courage to call upon his country for a living wage, to which he is entitled, rather than to propose going on the stump as a lecturer, in the roles of a minister and a professional entertainer.

"They make a most bizarre combination to all British ways of thinking, and we shall be surprised if even American opinion reconciles itself to their incongruity."

FARMERS UNION HOPE OF SOUTH, SAYS SPEAKER

L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee Division, Brings Message of Cheer to Planters of Georgia.

MUST CHECK CROP WASTE

Profit of Middleman Is Declared Out of All Proportion to the Work He Does.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a flying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"The marvelous grandeur of the world's progress astounds and amazes us, yet the wonderful story would never have been written had it not been for the ever-faithful farmer.

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

"But it is not my right, it is not my place, it is not my duty, to wield the lash. I had rather weave a rose garland than a crown of thorns. We can always see motes easier than we can feel beams, but I know the farmer; I have endured his hardships; I have felt his griefs; I am acquainted with his disappointments, and I am anxious to point out a more excellent way.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"When we became a nation the farmer owned 90 per cent of the wealth. In 1850 our national wealth was $7,000,000,000 and the farmer owned $4,000,000,000, or four-sevenths.

"In 1913 our national wealth is estimated at $131,000,000,000, and the farmer owns $26,000,000,000. Our farm property is valued at nearly $40,000,000,000, but $14,000,000,000 is owned by other classes than farmers.

"The above figures show that farmers are not holding their own, for if they had kept pace with other vocations since 1850 they would now own $75,000,000,000 worth of wealth instead of $26,000,000,000. Their lack of business methods and failure to match conditions have cost them $49,000,000,000. This would buy all the farm property in the United States and have enough left to buy a half interest in all the railroads.

Others Get Wealth.

"In a score of years the farmers of this country have produced $135,000,000,000 worth of farm products, or enough to buy all the property in the United States. Yet this wonderful amount of wealth has not gone to the farmers. We have 10,000 men in this country who own an average of $10,000,000 each. And their combined wealth is $100,000,000,000. The other 99,990,000 people own $31,000,000,000. Of our 100,000,000, 60,000,000 are homeless.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice

Girl Traps a Thief In Telephone Booth

Sets Shoulder Against Door and Holds Man Until Cries Bring Her Aid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Holding a thief trapped in a telephone booth, Miss Florence Rosenthal, cashier in Edward Feuhrer's drug store at No. 53 Second avenue, finally succeeded in delivering him to the police yesterday.

The captive, who said he was Alexander Moskowitz, 17 years old, was so long "telephoning" that Miss Rosenthal went to the booth to see if he was dead or alive. She saw him opening the money box with a screwdriver, she says. Screaming for her employer, she set her shoulder against the door, and the youth could not force it open. Moskowitz was held for trial.

Burleson Eats but Two Meals Each Day

Postmaster General Believes in and Practices "Early to Bed, Early to Rise" Theory.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Postmaster General Burleson believes thoroughly in the old adage, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." He practices this theory himself and in addition supplements it by a two-meal-a-day program.

His daily routine is as follows:

"I arise at 5 in the morning.

"Read the papers until 6.

"Breakfast.

"Go over papers and reports until 9.

"Work at the Postoffice Department until 5 in the afternoon without any lunch or lunch hour.

"Dinner at 6 to 7 o'clock.

"Eight o'clock—go to bed."

"Cooling Period" to Halt Divorce Evil

Pastor Suggests That Three Months Elapse Between Final Hearing and Decision of Court.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Speaking on "The Modern Problem of Marriage and Divorce," before the Central Conference of American Rabbis here to-day, the Rev. L. Leonard Levy, of Pittsburg, advocated a "cooling" period of three months from the time of the final hearing until the decision is announced as the solution of the problem of minimizing the divorce evil. "This cooling period," said the speaker, "would cover a time during which neither of the parties at interest could marry."

Even Take Fizz Out Of City's Soda Water

Members of Cincinnati Board of Health to Censor All Soft Drinks Sold.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—The "fizz and bubble" in soda water and ginger ale manufactured in this city is to be no more, if the Board of Health has its way about the matter, and it seems likely at this time that its contention will hold good. The board has asked the Council to pass an ordinance limiting the amount of alcohol to one-half of 1 per cent in any one drink of this kind. If the resolution is passed and made a law no dealer will be allowed to make soft drinks without first getting a permit.

Foul Tip Injures Fair Baseball Enthusiast, but Her Ardor Is Not Diminished.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, July 19.—Miss Cora Bauer, of this city, was struck in the face by a foul tip while watching a ball game between the Akron and Zanesville teams here. Her nose was split open, three teeth knocked out and she may be disfigured for life. Nevertheless, after being treated by a physician, she decided to stay out the game.

Marries His Aunt, 12 Years His Senior

Young Actor Takes as Bride the Recently Divorced Wife of His Uncle.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Earl Oscar Schenck, 24 years old, an actor, of No. 600 West 138th street, was married in the City Hall yesterday to his aunt, Marion Carr Schenck, twelve years his senior.

The bride of yesterday was married in April, 1899, to Oscar A. Schenck, the uncle of her present husband, who on January 17 of this year divorced her in Columbus, Ohio, "for gross neglect of duty."

ONLY AMERICAN KING YEARNS TO QUIT HIS THRONE

All of Former Broker's Thirty Wives Want English Gowns. Jealousy Spreads.

JOB IS NOT A HAPPY ONE

NewYorker Who Won South Sea Kingdom With a Phonograph Faces Petticoat Revolt.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King, practically has made up his mind to renounce his throne. He is King of the Island of Arorae, one of the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands. Until 1909 he was a New York curb broker. The insistence of his many wives for English gowns and his loneliness have led to the determination to give up his kingly honors. He tells of his intentions in a letter just received by a friend in this city.

The career of Everett has been unusual. In 1909, when he was in business in this city, he was thought to be well to do. He met reverses, however, in Wall Street, and in the latter part of 1909 disappeared, without leaving a word of farewell. Nothing was heard from him until in 1911, in a remarkable letter, he told of being made the King of Arorae, in the South Sea Islands. He had landed, he said, on one of the small islands, and had gone from there to other islands of the Gilbert group. Finally he reached Arorae. It was a phonograph which he had in his possession that eventually won for him his throne. The King at that time of the island took a great fancy to the phonograph.

Phonograph Wins Kingdom.

By the hour Everett, according to his own account, entertained the monarch, constantly growing in his graces. Finally the old King adopted Everett, and when he died Everett succeeded to the throne. According to the custom of the island, Everett took a good many wives.

Everett took a very lively interest in the affairs of the island. He increased its business with traders. The principal product of the island is copra, or dried cocoanut meat. The letter, in part, reads:

"At the present time the King's job is about the last thing to be desired, and do not be surprised if I walk in on you some day in the near future. I am about tired of the job.

"For some time past conditions here have steadily become worse. It started when my wives, of whom there are about 30, insisted on wearing English dresses. A trader who stopped here presented one of the natives with three English gowns in exchange for some copra. The native presented them to the King, and I in turn gave them to three of my wives. The natives have never worn any clothes to speak of. Imagine my surprise, then, when the three dresses became the center of a regular war among my wives.

"The three victorious wives managed to get them on somehow, and that settled it. Every one of them set up a kick for a dress, and they worried the life out of me. I was forced to get the gowns. The first trader that stopped at the island from Australia was commissioned to bring them back on the next trip, and in due course of time they arrived.

Jealousy Over English Gowns.

"The dresses were of all colors and sizes. Most of the people here are about the same stature, few being over four feet six or seven. Some of the dresses were too small, others too large, but they created a sensation. Dressed in those creations, with bare brown feet stepping proudly, my wives paraded up and down the island, causing every woman in the kingdom, young and old, to grow jealous.

"So far, half of the female population have been given the gowns and the other half are waiting eagerly. The worst part of it all is that the men are as enthusiastic over this new style of dress as the women, and my objections have not added to my popularity whatever. I am daily expecting the men to demand suits of flannel and silk shirts.

Affairs on a Business Basis.

"I have not done so badly here financially. I put the business of the island on a business basis soon after becoming King, and things have flourished.

"I don't know how the people here will take my departure. They may even try to prevent it, and I have been considering the best method to leave. I could probably get aboard one of the trading ships and get to Australia, after which it would be easy, of course, to get back to the United States."

Congregation Built Up by Band Concerts

Ohio Pastor With Novel Methods Now Claims Biggest Sunday School in World.

CANTON, OHIO, July 19.—With the attraction of a band concert in the church roof garden and a double orchestra concert in the church auditorium, the Rev. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton's First Christian Church, has built up what he claims is the biggest Sunday school in the world within five years.

The average attendance in this hot month of July is 3,251. The record attendance is 4,714. Several Sundays back 38 babies were checked in the "babies' check room" of the $90,000 church. The men's class of 250 had to hold their session in the street while the teacher explained the lesson from the tonneau of an automobile.

Congress to Lose Costly Stationery

Government Printer Is Ordered to Stop Use of Costly Material for Lawmakers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Members of Congress will draw no more costly embossed stationery at the expense of the Government. Hereafter they will get along with plain, every-day printed letterheads and envelopes.

The Joint Committee on Printing discovered that the Government Printing Office last year turned out 11,000,000 embossed pieces of stationery at an extra cost of $30,000. An order has been issued to the Government Printer to stop this extravagance.

On the Senate side of Congress this economy reform is resented, but it goes just the same. If Senators want stationery de luxe they must foot the bills out of their private purse.

3 Drowned Trying To Avoid Wet Feet

Women Stand Up In Leaky Boat, Capsizing Craft In View of Hundreds.

NORRISTOWN, PA., July 19.—Caught in a storm while boating on the Schuylkill River, three women, all church workers, were drowned. They are:

Miss Anna Mary Livergood, Miss Emma J. Rex and Miss Helen Green, all of Norristown.

Miss Margaret Green, a sister of Miss Helen Green, clung to the overturned boat and was saved.

The women were within a quarter of a mile of the boat landing when the wind struck them.

The boat began to leak badly. To keep their feet and clothing dry the four girls stood on the seats. The next instant the boat turned over.

Two hundred persons on a boat returning from a park saw the accident.

Blue Cauliflower Is Raised in California

Latest Horticultural Product Is Hybrid of Ordinary Cauliflower and Purple Pickling Cabbage.

OAKLAND, July 19.—Blue cauliflower, the latest novelty in things horticultural, was introduced to the public to-day by Hugo Lilienthal, instructor in the University of California. The new vegetable is bright blue in color and stronger than the ordinary cauliflower in flavor.

Zickrick seized a hoe as she went into the yard and killed the snake just as it was about to spring at the baby.

LOBBY INQUIRY STIRS NATION

Mulhall Story Leaves U. S. Aghast

Power of Interests Vividly Revealed

MARTIN W. MULHALL, former lobbyist of National Association of Manufacturers, whose revelations of corruption startled nation.

Names of Wilson, Taft, Senators and Congressmen Are Dragged Into the Testimony, Showing Corporations Have Set No Limit in Corruption.

STARTLING FACTS REVEALED IN U. S. SENATE INVESTIGATION OF CONGRESSIONAL LOBBY

National Association of Manufacturers raised a slush fund of $500,000 to $700,000 a year to oppose objectionable legislation.

Place in Taft Cabinet pledged to manufacturers by Vorys, Taft manager.

Charges that the big manufacturers had the ears of Taft, Sherman and Cannon.

List of Congressmen in pay of the National Manufacturers' Association disclosed. Also, a list of the "unpurchasable," whom the association hated, and tried to defeat.

Fights made by National Manufacturers' Association on progressive Congressmen and Senators, often successful.

More than 400 letter tell of plans of association to become sinister factor in controlling the wheels of government.

Attempts made to foment strife among labor organizations, and to corrupt labor leaders, even Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Agreement by Woodrow Wilson with Gompers and Morrison that he support Hughes for Senate.

Powers of big business fought Hughes because he was friendly to labor.

Tom Johnson, Senator McComas of Maryland, and others were political victims of the association's vengeance.

Gigantic corruption in Wall Street laid bare in testimony of David Lamar.

Forgery on Union Pacific's books covering item of $82,000,000 charged.

Senate resolutions hawked about Wall street for sale to highest bidder.

The nation to-day stands aghast at the sensational revelations which have come as the result of investigations by the Overman Committee of the United States Senate into the work of lobbies at the National Capital.

It has heard how big business combines and Wall Street operators have made and unmade men in public life, influenced legislation, dominated public opinion, all the time secret and vigilant.

It has learned how big business has become one of the most powerful factors in the American civilization, striking in the dark against men who opposed it.

It has heard the names of the men highest in public life, President Wilson, former President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet members, dragged into the testimony, and has learned that certain predatory interests have set no limits in their attempt to corrupt public servants.

The bulk of the startling testimony came from Martin M. Mulhall, for years the servant of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the chief lobbyist of that organization at Washington, and from David Lamar, an operator in stocks, who is known as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

Wilson Starts Inquiry.

The investigation began more than a month ago when President Wilson declared that a lobby, "insidious and industrious" in nature, had long dominated tariff legislation. The announcement did not come unexpectedly, however, and there were many Senators and Congressmen to endorse the Chief Executive. The Senate began immediately its investigation of the charges, empowering a committee, headed by Senator Overman, to conduct the inquiry.

Relatively pointless testimony from men interested in the sugar industry came first, revealing the fact that sugar lobbies were the most industrious. Lobbyists from Hawaii, the Philippines and Louisiana defended their actions by a protest against free sugar. Former Governor Carter of Hawaii declared that the elimination of the duty on sugar would make the Hawaiian Islands merely military posts, destroying their commercial prestige. Frank C. Lowry, of the "free sugar lobby," admitted in the testimony that $25,000 had been spent in four years by the Federal Sugar Refining Company in lobbying operations.

Then came the Mulhall testimony,

Old Age Attributed To Her False Teeth

Woman, Age 99, Declares She Has Used Set 59 Years—Always Chews Well.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 19.—At the age of 99, Mrs. Levina Derr, of Hudson, declares that her long life is due solely to the fact that she bought a set of good store teeth fifty years ago.

Mrs. Derr is still active. Five generations of her family are living, and she declares she is as young as any of them.

"I was blessed with good teeth," she said, "and I always made it a point to chew my food well. A good stomach is the foundation of good health, and the stomach can not be good unless the teeth are good."

300 "HELLO GIRLS" ASK BOSS TO BE BEST MAN

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—The Postmaster General is bewildered over the result of the recent permission which he granted to telephone girls to get married. Three hundred of these girls promptly availed themselves of the chance and every couple asked the Postmaster General to act as best man.

Umbrellas for Farm Hands Is Inducement

Planter Advertises That He Will Supply Them With Sulkies, Sunshades and Ice Cream.

FINDLAY, OHIO, July 19.—There are other communities in this country that are suffering for a lack of farm hands besides Kansas. It is up to H. B. Clark, a farmer in the western part of Hancock County, to make good, else be prosecuted for false advertising, as provided by the new newspaper laws.

In a morning paper Mr. Clark is advertising for farm hands to plow corn. He says he will provide them with riding cultivator, a large sun umbrella for each, ice water to drink and all the ice cream each applicant can eat every other day, with $2.50 a day wages.

Race Restrictions In Hotels Illegal

ALBANY, N. Y., July 19.—There must be no discrimination because of race, creed or color at any public resort, place of amusement or of public accommodation, under the amended civil rights law which takes effect September 1, 1913.

The attention of Attorney General Carmody has been called to the fact that circulars are being issued by some health resorts in the State, in which is the announcement that the places are not open to certain races.

In a statement to-day Mr. Carmody reviews the statute and declares that such notices will be prohibited.

'Oh Fudge' Strongest Language Permitted

Kansas City Starts Crusade Against Public Swearing—Police Rebuke Violators.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—Anything stronger than "Oh, fudge!" must not be heard on the streets of Kansas City hereafter. All the ministers of the city and all the members of their churches have started an anti-swearing crusade, and part of the work is to ask persons who are overheard to swear to consider the vulgarity of it and cease the practice.

The Police Department and the street railway company have agreed to join in the crusade, so that hereafter it is part of the policeman's duty to stop swearing as well as breaches of the peace.

STORY OF MULHALL WILL EXTEND U. S. LOBBY INQUIRY

Mulhall represented the National Association of Manufacturers, in Washington. The association has a membership of 225 organizations, among them the most influential of the country, and 4,000 individuals, who control billions of capital.

The burden of his statements were that the association had for years promoted tariff, labor, and general business legislation favorable to itself, had maintained a lobby staff of seventeen, including himself, and former Presidents VanCleave and Kirby, of the association, at the capital to defeat hostile legislation, and it was always seeking and often obtaining control of the House and Senate Committee on Labor and Judiciary.

Created Tariff Commission.

He said that the association's efforts were responsible for the creation of the Tariff Commission under President Taft, and said that nine former Congressmen and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages in the House, had obtained money for services rendered.

More sensational still were the declarations that former President Taft, former Vice President Sherman, and former Speaker Cannon, besides many Congressmen and Senators were among those whom the association could affect by appeals to sentiment or other interests. He told of an unsuccessful attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, and of successful work among petty labor leaders.

Mulhall told of his own great ingratitude, how he obtained a Federal position through the influence of Senator McComas of Maryland, and at the same time entered the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers, helping to defeat his patron because McComas had been doomed for his opposition to the association.

McComas, it seems, was not the only victim. Tom L. Johnson had been defeated for Mayor of Cleveland, said Mulhall, for his opposition to the association, and William E. Hughes was opposed by the business combine for Senator from New Jersey because he was the advocate of many labor bills. It was in this connection that Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, had agreed with Gompers and Morrison, the labor leaders, to support Hughes, and had stumped the State in his favor.

Spies Kept in Field.

The work of the association against the eight-hour law, its enmity to most legislation that was favorable to labor, how he kept in occasional communication with former Vice President Sherman, how spies were kept in the field to corrupt minor labor leaders and to knife opponents, were other sensational bits of the Mulhall testimony.

George Pope, president of the association, and other officials of the organization, have made statements declaring that Mulhall is not to be believed, and that most of the statements were inspired by the fact that Mulhall was discharged by the association. From many persons and places have come statements denouncing Mulhall as a man of reprehensible character, lessening thus the substantiability of many of the charges. But in many instances the declarations he made seemed to be assured of reliability by documents that are substantial.

Interesting is his list of Congressmen whom he said had received pay from the association. He named in this connection J. E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, the House "whip" of the last administration; J. T. McDermott, Democrat, of Illinois; J. J. Jenkins, Republican, Wisconsin; Kittredge Haskins, Republican, Vermont; C. E. Littlefield, Republican, Maine; H. M. Bannon, Republican, Ohio; H. M. Coudry, Republican, Missouri; J. J. Gardner, Republican, New Jersey; R. B. Cole, Republican, Ohio, and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages.

On the other hand, he named a number of Congressmen who had consistently fought the association's interests, and whom he frankly called "unpurchasable." They are: Speaker Clark, Burnett of Alabama, Mayo Nichols, Pennsylvania; Parson, New nard, Virginia; Cooper, Wisconsin; York; Green, Massachusetts; Haugen, Iowa; Wilson, Pennsylvania; McComas, Maryland; Pearre, Maryland; Hughes, New Jersey; Kelliher, Massachusetts; Connolly, Massachusetts, and the labor leaders, Gompers, John Mitchell and Secretary Morrison of the Federation of Labor. William Barnes, the New York boss, he said, was his friend, and could always be depended on to "take care of bills."

Revelations of Lamar.

On the heels of the Mulhall revelations came those from David Lamar, the smiling, cynical "Wolf of Wall Street." Lamar it was who told of having sent Edward Lauterbach, his attorney, to peddle around Wall Street a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the Senate.

J. P. Morgan was one of the men whom Lauterbach visited on this errand. He told how he had impersonated Congressmen Palmer and Riordan in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass Ledyard and Paul D. Cravath, corporation attorneys, and Robert S. Lovett, the railroad president, feigning knowledge of the intentions of the dominant party. Further, he declared that he had represented himself as fresh from the councils of Speaker Clark and other leaders when he visited Wall Street operators for concessions.

Lamar's most remarkable disclosure was his statement that the Union Pacific Railroad's books had been forged in 1901 to cover an item of $82,000,000, whereby the fortunes of E. H. Harriman, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, and others were built.

Testimonials Discredited.

Discredit has been cast upon Lamar's testimony as on Mulhall's, as coming from a man lacking in scruples. Paul D. Cravath, attorney for the Union Pacific, gave out a statement that the testimony regarding the gigantic forgery was part of a bear campaign against the company.

The Senate investigation will be conducted in detail, and it is likely, to judge from the announced intentions of the committee members, that every member of the Senate and of the House, every public official whose name has been dragged into the affair, and every one in anyway connected with the situation will be called in as witnesses. Appearances seem to indicate that the hearing will last far into the summer.

Mulhall was on the stand the greater part of last week explaining a batch of correspondence which had passed between him and political and labor leaders throughout the United States. The correspondence, according to evidence which has been revealed, he has sought to sell to magazines and newspapers several times, but in vain. Nonchalantly, the ex-lobbyist has pointed out letter after letter from prominent men, talking of alleged significant deals almost carelessly.

"This is a letter from Senator Foraker," he said, indicating one. "It was asking me to see a labor man about his chances for re-election to the Senate. I think he was considering the Presidency at the time."

Secrets of big politics are being bared daily during the investigation. Details of how spies worked among the labor men, and of the secret methods of big business have been explained by Mulhall at more than one point in his testimony.

In defense of his own lobbying, Mulhall made statements that a labor lobby existed, naming Samuel Gompers. As a result, Gompers and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be brought before the committee to explain their activities in the cause of labor and capital, respectively.

Inez Milholland's Wedding Blow to Suffragists

Her Romance May Annul Marriage to the Cause

Beautiful Leader of Votes for Women Won After Courtship on Two Continents.

Mrs. Eugene Boissevain, who was Miss Inez Milholland, famous suffragist beauty and orator, before her marriage to wealthy Dutchman last week.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Suffrage leaders of the United States are today bowed in spirit. They can think of their recent victory in Illinois without smiling. They read of success of women jurors and policemen with no show of ecstasy. Their minds are troubled. They seek to know whether Mrs. Eugen Boissevain will be as potent a personality for the cause as was Inez Milholland before she suddenly decided to take unto herself a husband in the form of the wealthy Dutchman she wedded Tuesday in London.

For Inez Milholland has been no small force in the suffrage movement in the United States. She graduated from Vassar just about the time when the votes for women idea traveled across the seas from England, and she has been right on the firing line in the battle for the ballot ever since.

Beauty of Suffrage Ranks.

Miss Milholland, beg pardon, Mrs. Boissevain, has ever been in the specially mentioned class in every important suffrage movement. She has been the American Christobal Pankhurst, only more so, though it has not been recorded that she has smashed anything, or has had to dodge extradition treaties to keep from the painful necessity of going on a hunger strike.

Even before she graduated from Vassar, Miss Milholland was known to fame. Her remarkable beauty, her mentality and personal magnetism made her a leader in this great girls' college. She was the champion all around athlete and held a world's record for putting the shot.

After leaving Vassar, she went in for the law and the pursuit of the ballot. Her beauty and powers of oratory made her a leader quickly. Her pictures soon became almost as familiar a feature of newspaper front pages as the physiognomy of Colonel Roosevelt.

During the strike of the garment workers in New York, several years ago, Miss Milholland volunteered for picket duty and it was her oratory that kept the girls stubbornly on the strike until they partially won their demands.

In the first big suffrage parade in New York she was a battalion leader and was a striking figure as she rode astride on a big bay charger.

Challenges Orator Heflin.

She again achieved prominence by challenging Representative Tom Heflin of Alabama to joint debate when that doughty Congressman spoke disparagingly of the cause, and though it is known that Mr. Heflin loves to speak and delights in debate, he carefully avoided meeting Miss Milholland on the forum.

In the great suffrage parade in Washington the day before President Wilson's inauguration Miss Milholland led the procession as the herald of the cause. She was mounted on a pure white horse and was clad in robes of white, while a coronet surmounted her magnificent hair which fell loosely down her back.

So striking was her appearance that she was quickly an object of the attacks of the thugs and boors who tried to break up the parade, and it is recorded that one of these men received a blow on the jaw from the fist of the young woman who once held the world shot-put record.

Lately Miss Milholland has been doing magazine work, and though socially a favorite, has always declared that matrimony was not for her.

"I am wedded to the cause," she told her admirers, among whom were Sidney Smith, the New York clubman; John Fox, Jr., author and former husband of Fritzi Scheff, and Lord Curzon, formerly viceroy of India.

Her marriage was a complete surprise. None of her intimates had ever heard of Boissevain, though he is said to be a Hollander of immense personal fortune. He remains a man of mystery.

Whether this marriage will annul her former marriage to the cause is the question that perplexes the suffrage leaders, but they, as a rule, protest that it will not.

"I'll venture to say that in the future you will seldom hear of Mrs. Eugene Boissevain," said one advocate of the cause. "But," she continued, "you will hear a good deal maybe of Inez Milholland's husband."

John E. Milholland, her father, was evidently not greatly shocked by the marriage. Here is what he cabled his daughter:

"Have not been so mad in two hundred years. You should be boiled in oil. Do you expect forgiveness until the next century. Indefensible chip of the old block, you have given us a pretty rough deal, but nevertheless I humbly and fervently pray God's blessing upon you and yours forever.

"PATER."

Boissevain's Brother Elated.

Robert W. Boissevain, brother of the bridegroom, was in a decidedly agreeable frame of mind yesterday in his office at No. 17 Battery place. Besides calling his brother a "lucky dog" and describing him as being "smiled upon by the gods," he said that the new Mrs. Boissevain has now seven sisters-in-law who possess collectively 25 children and that all these seven Boissevain sisters are suffragists of the non-militant type.

"We are of an old family, originally French, but Dutch by adoption," said Mr. Boissevain. "My brother is a banker, and in his own Amsterdam circle considered rich. Of course, his guilders would not compare with the dollars of the American millionaires, but he is now sufficiently blest.

"Wireless" in Courtship.

"Eugen, who is 33 years old, and my brother Jan came over to New York on the Olympic to pay me a visit," he said. "They arrived June 10 and stopped at the Holland House with me. William Marconi, the wireless discoverer, and Mrs. Marconi were here at the same time. My brother and I have known Mr. Marconi for years and I now understand that the Marconis have known the Milholland family for a long time.

"Anyway, two days after the arrival of my brothers, that is, June 12, I was dining with them in the Holland House and Mr. and Mrs. Marconi entered the dining room with one of the most beautiful women we had ever seen. Miss Milholland was presented to us, and my brother Eugen lost interest in all other things then and there.

"Eugen and Jan had planned to tour the States for six weeks at least, but during the dinner Miss Milholland said something about leaving for Europe early in July. The plans of Eugen, I could see, went flying.

"But when Miss Milholland decided to sail to Europe with the Marconis on the Mauretania on July 2 Eugen engaged passage on the same liner.

"Last Friday I received from Eugen in London a cablegram telling me that he had married Miss Milholland. That is all I know about it, aside from the fact that Miss Milholland has married into an honorable family."

MAZDAZNANS EAT FLOWERS AND SING TO THE SUN

All This in Classic Boston, Where the Cult Has a Membership Small but Exclusive.

BOSTON, July 19.—It is ancient history that Nebuchadnezzer went out and ate grass like an ox. Out in the Back Bay and up in Lowell there can be found small yet select circles of folk who eat grass and say they enjoy it.

Not only this, but they worship the sun, pray to the sun, sing to the sun, take sun baths, dew baths, eat rose petals and pansies, drive out disease by fasting spells (or say they do so), fast for days and then fatten up on a diet of water to drink and violets to eat, kiss and rekiss, and try to be as happy and contented as can be.

These people are the Mazdaznans or Sun Worshipers. Into their innermost shrines have penetrated none but ardent devotees, so that none of their rites have been made public. As revealed for the first time at the big Gahanbar, or national peace congress of the Mazdaznans, these rites are weird enough—strange to the outside world, but taken as a matter of course by the Mazdaznans.

And the strange part of the rites and worship is that the devout worshipers believe their practice will lengthen their years into three or four centuries.

Secret Rites of Cult.

Another thing about the sun folk is that they don't worry. So in the hot weather they manage to keep cool figurative!" and physically. They usually look happy and contented when met on the street.

None outside the cult itself knew—up to the holding of the recent Gahanbar or Congress—of the secret rites of the Mazdaznans. These are practiced in the inner circles, so called.

For years the famous "Green Book" of the Mazdaznans was a mystery sealed to the eyes of ordinary mortals. The book was guarded sacredly by the Sun Worshipers. In it are printed the precepts of the cult.

Here are some of them:

You can get cured of anything if you have faith enough long enough.

Sickness, sin and poverty will be eradicated by Mazdaznanism.

The fly you swat may be the incarnated soul of a great-great-great-grandmother.

Be careful, then, how you swat the flies.

Obstinacy Cause for Pain.

Pain is nothing but the result of obstinacy in you. If you are suffering from a toothache, it is because you are "declining to yield to the peaceful operations of intelligence."

Never go under the surgeon's knife or take "herbal medicine."

Deny the "bonds of ancestral relation through sickness, sin or sorrow."

And practice these things: Deep or "conscious" breathing and vegetarianism.

If you can do these things, you may become a Mazdaznan, so the "Green Book" says.

The High Priestess is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Roth Hilton, wife of Dr. George Hilton, of Lowell.

In the inner worship Hanish, the leader, is His Humbleness, Mrs. Hilton is Spenta Marie—the equivalent of "holy mother."

Their chief New England shrine is the Mazdaznan Temple, in Lowell. This was formerly a barn belonging to Dr. Hilton, but later converted into a "house of worship."

The central figure in the worship is Mrs. Hilton, the High Priestess. She is the mother of two pretty daughters, one of whom, the elder, Miss Ruthken Mariana Hilton, is being educated to follow in her mother's steps as High Priestess. Some day pretty Miss Ruthken—her name before the court changed it was Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of Mrs. Hilton by her first marriage—will be the leader of the Mazdaznans. The other daughter is Miss Constance Cleopatra Hilton.

The majority of the followers of the "Little Master," Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, are the persons of middle life and evidently of generous means. While a few of the cult are young women of surpassing beauty, yet the advanced philosophic principles of Mazdaznan are so complex and abstract that only those of mature mind are intellectually and spiritually capable of comprehending them. Therefore, there is a dearth of young people in the cult.

Meows from Limb of Tree to Voice Love

Chicago Romeo Tries Novel Method of Wooing, but Falls Into Clutches of Law.

CHICAGO, July 19.—John Wadjinski's method of love-making goes back to the days when anthropoid Romeos used to hang by their tails and carol love songs all night long. He put his theories into practice on the night of May 3. To-day he was fined $5 and costs by Judge Sabath, who could find no sympathy for the unconventional wooing.

Sophia Emmerling had retired for the night. John Wadjinski strode through the night with caveman emotions stirring in his breast. He entered the Emmerling yard and climbed a tree. He straddled a branch opposite Sophia's window and began to "meow" like a cat. To the girl thus rudely awakened he made love in a voice that could be heard for a block.

Mrs. Anna Emmerling, the girl's mother, called the police. Wadjinski was yanked from romance to the jail.

Bold Amazon Shoves Auto Out of Her Way

Worcester, Mass., Woman Merely Bruises Her Finger When She Pushes Car from Path.

WORCESTER, MASS., July 19.—Agnes Olsen, 30, known far and wide as "the Amazon," is none the worse today, save for a sore finger, as a result of her stopping a touring car on Main street, and pushing it back out of her way. The machine was unharmed.

Walter Shea, chauffeur of the touring car, was startled to see a woman walk in front of the machine as he was passing City Hall. His horror turned to amazement when she turned as he ground on his brakes, calmly grasped the car by the hood, and not only stopped its menacing approach, but pushed it back a foot.

Women Convict Her For Slapping Child

First Feminine Jury in Sonoma County, California, Returns Verdict of Guilty of Assault.

PETALUMA, COLO., July 19.—A jury of twelve women convicted a woman, Mrs. W. S. Waldorf, upon a charge of battery here to-day. This is the first jury of women that ever tried a case in Sonoma County. Mrs. Waldorf was accused of having slapped a neighbor's children. The jury was out less than an hour.

Quarrel at License Desk Halts Wedding

Prospective Bride Objected to Way Her Fiance Spelled Name and Ceremony Was Called Off.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., July 19. A near-wedding was spoiled to-day when the bride-to-be and the bridegroom-to-be quarreled over the spelling of the latter's name. C. W. Clane, of Los Angeles, aged 44, and wearing diamonds as large as hickory nuts, accompanied by a woman about 35 years old, applied for a license.

He started to fill out the blank. "Spell it right, please; spell it Cline," whispered the woman, but Clane just kept on writing.

Again his prospective bride, speaking right out loud, said he was spelling his name wrongly. But still Clane paid no attention. Then, in tones of downright anger, she exclaimed. "You spell your name properly or there will be no wedding."

"Very well," answered the man, and he crumpled up the application blank and they left the office.

Surgeon Rebuilding Man's Entire Face

Ears and Nose Burned Months Ago Are Being Replaced by Series of Operations.

GRAHAM, MO., July 19.—Pierce Fleming, who lives near Graham, is undergoing one of the most remarkable series of operations ever attempted in Missouri. His face is being built anew.

Several months ago the Fleming home was burned and Pierce was severely burned about the head. For a time it was thought he could not live. He finally recovered, but his ears and nose were badly scarred.

A Kansas City surgeon was consulted and he began the work of rebuilding the face of the burned man. The ears have been completely rebuilt and the doctor is now working on the nose and the eyes. It is barely possible now to discern the difference between the new nose and ears of Fleming and the ones he lost in the fire.

Cartridge Placed on Track Shoots Youth

Boy May Die from Bullet Which Penetrated Lungs as Result of Belated Celebration.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—A delayed Fourth of July celebration on the part of small boys yesterday may result fatally for 8-year-old Francis Wright, who received a bullet in the chest at Twenty-fourth and Bryant streets. In company with his chums, he had been placing cartridges on the car tracks. One of them exploding, sent a bullet whizzing at him. He was taken to the Mission Emergency Hospital, where it was found that the bullet had penetrated the lung. The boy's parents had him removed to his home, No. 2582 Twenty-fourth street, where his condition is considered grave.

Mary Walker Aids Penniless Countess

Pioneer Worker for Women's Rights Befriends Noblewoman Who Was Nurse During War.

RUTLAND, VT., July 19.—When Dr. Mary Walker, pioneer worker for woman's rights, leaves to-morrow for Oswego, N. Y., after being royally entertained on her first visit to Vermont, she will take with her the Countess Nicholas, once a celebrity, and her friend since they were nurses together in the Union Army during the Civil War.

Penniless, although she has devoted a fortune to charity, and ill, the Countess will be placed in a sanitarium by the noted reformer, who, attired in her mannish costume, attracted much attention at the various receptions tendered her here. Dr. Walker believes the Countess will recover her health.

WILSON AND BRYAN TO CAN SPEECHES FOR FARMERS

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Secretary Bryan and Secretary Houston have agreed to "can" some speeches urging the farmers to stay in the country and raise cattle and oats and healthy children. President Wilson will be asked to talk into the phonograph also—he set the precedent when he made a record for the Indians. This is the scheme of A. P. Sandles, secretary of the Ohio State Board of Agriculture, who wants the records for delivery at various farmers' institutes

PLANTERS OF GEORGIA FLOCK TO JOIN UNION

and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The 12,000,000 farmers of this country are laboring under an indebtedness of $6,000,000,000. On this amount, counting commissions and renewal charges, they are paying an annual interest of 8 1-2 per cent, or $510,000,000, while the business men and manufacturers pay an average of 5 per cent interest, or $300,000,000, on $6,000,000,000. This $210,000,000 excess interest paid by the farmers would pay off our farm indebtedness in 28 years. Co-operative efforts and rural credits would right these wrongs. So, let us continue to discourage this present system until it has passed into history and is only remembered in the misty back yonder.

"Distribution being one of our greatest problems, our second declaration of purposes is to assist our members in buying and selling. The Federal Government has spent $100,000,000 in the last ten years, teaching us how to produce, and not a cent to teach us how to market.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

Expense Is Unavoidable.

"We all agree that there is an unavoidable expense in the distribution of farm products. But let us make what seems to us a reasonable division of the $13,000,000,000 consumers other than farmers pay for farm products each year.

Give the wholesaler and jobber $1,000,000,000, the transportation companies $1,000,000,000, the retailer $1,500,000,000; then throw in $500,000,000 for all possible misallowance, and we have $9,000,000,000, which is $3,000,000,000 more than the farmer gets. This amount falls into the waste basket of speculation.

"If it were divided between the producer and consumer it would clothe the naked, feed the hungry and educate the illiterate, instead of breeding millionaires, paupers, anarchists and suicides. If the Farmers' Union fills its mission, it will not be long until a less portion of the laborers' toil will be turned in at the toll gate of the palace and a great portion will find its way through the door of the cottage, and help to lift the humble tenement to the comfort, dignity and luxury of a home.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 250,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If properly handled, this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices; we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep his pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

Automobile Driver Kills Deer With Car

Horn Frightens Animal But He Afterwards Turns to Fight and Pierces Tire With Horns.

UKIAH, CAL., July 19.—W. C. Jones, of Los Angeles, ran down a big deer with his auto near Largo yesterday when it jumped over the fence in front of the machine. Jones opened his throttle and turned loose the horn. The noise frightened the animal, and, after a half mile chase, it turned to give battle. The deer made one vicious lunge forward, its horn piercing the front tire, the impact breaking its neck. Jones loaded his prize into the machine.

Marries and Steals To Reform a Girl

Divinity Student Admits Taking Money Trusted to Him Because He Loved Woman.

DENVER, July 19.—William Schulz, student of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $38 from the student body, whose cashier he was, says he married Miss Thelma Gillion and became a defaulter, not only because he loved the girl, but because he desired to assist her in giving up her former way of living.

That Schulz had partly succeeded in his work of reclamation is the belief of all Denver people who have come in contact with the young woman since she and Schulz arrived in this city. They unite in saying that there is no better behaved young woman in Denver than Mrs. Schulz.

His offer was never accepted until last night, when a claim was put in by Joseph Robson, of No. 61 Boyde street, whose wife, Julia, found herself with two little girls and a boy to share the offer. All three children and their mother, who is only 21 years old, are doing well. Complete outfits for the three were provided to-day.

HORSE FALLS IN FISSURE IN SINKING KANSAS FARM

HOISINGTON, KANS., July 19.—Fissures varying from a few inches to a foot and a half in width and extending several feet into the ground have opened up in L. E. Baker's alfalfa field near this city and are causing a great deal of speculation.

There have been no indications of an earthquake of any sort, but the ground seems to be sinking away. The fissures were discovered when Baker missed one of his horses and found it imprisoned in a fissure.

CRAWFORD HEIRS EXPECT SEARCH FOR BARBER TO BARE PRE-NUPTIAL PLOT

Relatives Think That Lump Will Tell Woman Held on Poison Charge Planned to Wed Him on Her Husband's Death.

If the tireless search which is being directed by Atlanta lawyers discovers in New York a man named Fred Lump, the prosecution in the case against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, thinks a pre-nuptial plot against Crawford can be proved.

The alleged plot was between Mrs. Crawford, then Mrs. Savage, and Lump. She would marry the wealthy Crawford, obtain his money, and then marry Lump, say her accusers.

Lump is a barber by trade and a Bohemian by nativity. He is supposed to be in New York, and in that city detectives in the employ of the prosecution have been at work for several days. Every message that comes from them, however, is one of failure.

Colonel James Makes Charge.

The charge of a plot first was made by Col. J. S. James, who is attorney for the contesting Crawford heirs, who ordered the arrest of Lump. Colonel James said that Lump admitted his being in Atlanta at the time of Crawford's death, and that other testimony valuable to the prosecution was given by him in deposition several weeks ago. But present search for the Bohemian barber has proved fruitless.

Colonel James points to Mrs. E. C. Bursener as one of the witnesses of the prosecution to substantiate the murder plot charge. Mrs. Bursener, it is claimed, will testify that she frequently heard Mrs. Crawford say that she would marry Crawford, get his money, and later run away with Lump. The prosecution will seek to prove also by Mrs. Gertrude A. Painter, it is said, that there was a definite agreement to this plan existent between Mrs. Crawford and Lump.

The forces that are trying to saddle Mrs. Crawford with the murder charge are scoring heavily in the closely-allied civil suit. Heirs of Joshua B. Crawford, trying to break the will by which the widow received the bulk of the estate, charging undue influence, have produced a number of witnesses to swear to an antagonism between Crawford and Mrs. Mary B. Crawford.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. L. C. Dillingsley, who testified that Joshua B. Crawford said, time and again, that he would not marry the woman. This statement was elicited in the attempt to prove that Crawford was not rational, and probably was intoxicated, when he married Mrs. Crawford.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Mrs. Dillingsley, who said she lived in the Crawford home on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death, told of instances of alleged cruelty on Mrs Crawford's part, directed particularly toward a Miss Scott. Mrs. Sallie Alexander, an old woman of Henry County, was another witness by whom it was sought to prove habitual drunkenness on Crawford's part.

Mrs. Crawford, released from the Tower on bail of $6,250, has remained in the seclusion of her home on West Peachtree street all week, steadfastly quiet and refusing all statements in the face of the accusations against her. She has said nothing regarding the case, except a simple denial of the charges.

Reporters seeing her were treated courteously and quietly, and Mrs. Crawford seemed not averse to talk to them freely. But in most of the talk the subject of the murder charge and the plot charge in which Lump's name appears was carefully skirted.

Mrs. Crawford is a large woman, of dignified appearance. Not one moment since her arrest Saturday night has her composure broken, even slightly. In the Tower she received the few persons who called on her, and during the visit did not exhibit a sign of perturbation.

Calls Charge "Awful Thing."

To reporters and to all her visitors, when she mentioned at all the subject of the murder charge, she referred to it as "this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford finds staunch friends in her children and grandchildren, who visited her at the Tower, and were with her almost all the few hours she spent in jail, bringing her flowers, a savory meal, and other tokens of their love.

Mrs. Crawford's children are bitter in their speech against the nephews and neices of Joshua B. Crawford, who, they say, are persecuting their mother with extreme cruelty. Mrs. Crawford herself accused her enemies of cruelty and lack of feeling.

Mrs. Crawford met Joshua B. Crawford when she was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine, wither Crawford went in search of health. It was there she met him, and there that she married him. At his death, there was a settlement of his estate, Mrs. Crawford taking hold of the affairs with a capable hand.

An agreement was signed, and the affairs of Joshua B. Crawford, deceased, seemed amicably settled. Then the litigation was sprung. In the first bill of complaint the heirs who contested the will charged Mrs. Crawford with poisoning her husband, and of exerting undue influence to procure a will in her favor. But it was not until three years later, two weeks ago, that an examination of the remains of Joshua B. Crawford to ascertain traces of poison was ordered. Upon the examination came the verdict of the physician that traces of poison were vident, and Mrs. Crawford was arrested.

With preliminary hearing waived, Mrs. Crawford's case is flatly up to the grand jury, which, without definite date of meeting, awaits the call of the Solicitor General. The body probably will be assembled next week.

MRS. MARY BELLE CRAWFORD, held on poison charge in famous will case mystery, with her grandchild, Viola Belle Bennett.

Fortune in Gold Nuggets Awaits Heir

Wealth Will Revert to State of Kansas Unless Kin of Old Woman Appear.

HUTCHINSON, July 19.—There is a bag of gold nuggets and gold dust awaiting heirs that may go to the State of Kansas. These nuggets and the gold dust, along with some money and other personal property to the value of $10,000, are in the hands of former Sheriff G. M. Duckworth, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ana M. Bernhert, who died a few days ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Some years ago when Mrs. Bernhert, who lived alone, was found to be of unsound mind, Dr. Duckworth was named as her guardian and she was taken to an asylum for treatment. In searching the house he found scattering personal property. It was found that much of it was gold nuggets and dust, saved, evidently, from some former mining experience, and hoarded away.

Baby Sips Hat Bleach; Dies from Poisoning

Mother, Bedridden from Appendicitis, Is Unable to Stop Child from Drinking Acid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—As a result of drinking a mixture of lye and oxalic acid, used by her father to clean an old straw hat, Dorothy E. Smith, 20 months old, died yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her father is Leo Smith, of No. 47 Brooklyn avenue, Jamaica, an employee of the Long Island Railroad.

The child's mother is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She and the baby were alone in the house yesterday when the child drank the mixture. She heard the baby's screams, but could not leave her bed, so she screamed, too, and neighbors who responded called a doctor.

RENO SINGS ITS SWAN SONG AS DIVORCE MECCA

Grand Rush of Colonists to Take Advantage of the Old Law Comes to an End.

RENO, July 19.—With such songs as "Meet a Friend From Your Home Town" and "At the Devil's Ball," sung by feminine entertainers from Metropolitan music halls, accompanied by high-class orchestras, the divorce colony celebrated the past week the beginning of the end of the Nevada quick divorce.

On the stroke of the midnight hour on Monday the curtain dropped upon one scene in Reno's notable divorce colony performance which has commanded the attention of the world for so long—that of the almost daily appearance of new faces upon the streets, as men and women, from plain country folk to elaborately gowned and bejeweled society beauties, arrived to begin their required six months' residence in the State and county, preparatory to the prospective divorce action.

Law Halts Colonists.

No more will incoming trains deposit these colonists and carloads of trunks, for the familiar song, "I'm on My Way to Reno," has been shelved by the action of the last Legislature, when it dealt the knock-out blow in its ultimatum that no divorce proceeding shall be instituted in the State of Nevada under the existing six-month residence law after December 21 next, thereby limiting the time in which newcomers could begin such residence period to Monday last.

Previous to July, 1909, the presence here for divorce of but an occasional person of prominence merely commanded attention to that individual, but it led to a method of publicity by an attorney which started the ball rolling, and it has never stopped rolling. Its greatest momentum is being witnessed now.

All Houses Are Thronged.

During the past month, and especially the week ending on Monday, the throng of newcomers has experienced great difficulty in securing such apartments as they might desire. All the hotels are crowded, as are the desirable rooming houses. Available cottages are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. In many cottages from four to six divorcees are living.

Some private boarding houses are housing as many as ten of the fair sex, and men. There are now scores of so-called "divorcees' nests" here. Every train the past fortnight has unloaded new arrivals, the preponderance of men and very young women, seemingly well to do and fashionable being noticeable. The proportion of men to women increased largely. Baby carriages and dogs played conspicuous parts.

Willing To Marry But Not to Apologize

Man Sued for Breach of Promise Says Hill Wed But Refuses to Beg Forgiveness.

ATCHISON, KANS., July 19.—Mary Falk and William Burke were engaged to be married. The date had been set, the guests had assembled, and everything was in readiness, but Burke did not appear. Chagrined and heartbroken, Miss Falk engaged an attorney and sued Burke for $25,000 as balm for her wounded feelings.

"It was all a mistake," said Burke. "I wanted and still want to marry Miss Falk. I was under the impression that under the rules of the Catholic Church the ceremony had to be performed by the pastor of the bride's church. I couldn't find him in time to perform the ceremony and naturally supposed the wedding was off for the time being."

Miss Falk accepted the explanation, but she insisted that Burke must apologize for not appearing for the wedding. Burke, however, insisted that she must apologize for suing him.

Boy Finds $35,500; Hides it from Police

Advertises That He Picked up Money and Declares He Will Return it to Owner.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., July 19.—Brayton Gardner, 18 years old, who announced he had found $35,500 in a leather bag on the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad, to-night refused to tell the police where he put the money.

"I have hidden it in a safe place," said he, "and if someone claims it I will produce it immediately."

Gardner walked into the office of a local newspaper and inserted an advertisement, reading:

"Found, $35,500. Owner can have money by identifying it and satisfying Brayton Gardner."

Stolen Jewels Are Found Buried in Park

Last of $100,000 Loot Stolen by Employee of Firm Recovered After Confession.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The final confession of young William Beck, who stole $100,000 worth of jewelry from his employers, Udall & Ballou, was obtained yesterday. The last $2,800 of the loot was found by detectives. It was buried in Central Park.

Beck had insisted until yesterday that he had told all. But Inspector Faurot finally got him to reveal the hiding place. The police were told to enter the park at 110th street and Eighth avenue and count eighteen stone blocks in the wall to a spot where a small bush grew. Buried 6 inches they found nine diamond rings and a pair of cuff buttons.

Attending Funerals Hobby of Old Squaw

"Glass Eye," Noted for Lamentations at Obsequies, at Last Principal at Mortuary Ceremony.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREG., July 19.—"Glass Eye" is dead. She was an aged Indian woman, well known here since the settlment of this section. It was one of her hobbies to attend every funeral that she could, and on these occasions she posed as chief mourner by her excessive lamentations.

Her name has been forgotten by the whites, who only know her by the nickname, which is said to have been given her when young, because of the brightness of her eyes and not because of any abnormality in them.

She was about 75 years old, and is reported to have been the sister of "White Cindy," another noted aborigine.

Indian Girl Seeks Office in Oklahoma

Educated Cherokee Business Woman Would Be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

VINITA, OKLA., July 19.—Announcement by Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, that she will not be a candidate for re-election, brings into the race for the Democratic nomination a young Cherokee woman, Miss Pearl Holderman, of Northern Craig County, whose ability as an educated business woman has given her a wide acquaintance in Eastern Oklahoma.

Miss Holderman has large business responsibilities, and her experience and ability have made her more than a match for most men. Because of her father's impaired health she manages his cattle ranch, directing every detail, including the care of a herd of blooded cattle. This young Cherokee woman owns a thousand acres of land in her own name, all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

MOTHER OF TEN SUES; WEDDED TWENTY-ONE YEARS

DAYTON, WYO., July 19.—After living with David Krouse Towns for 21 years and bearing ten children of which he is the father, Mrs. Martha Ellen Towns has brought suit for divorce, asserting that her husband unjustly accused her of infidelity and that he had attempted to secure her incarceration in the State Insane Asylum, although realizing that she was sane.

Aged Oil Queen, Wife Of Youth, Ruled Sane

Young Spendthrift Husband Is Welcome to Fortune, She Says, on Leaving Asylum.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 19.—The courts and her children can not separate Mrs. Cynthia C. Sparks, known as West Virginia's "oil queen," and her young husband, Fred Sparks, and she is again free, after having been incarcerated in the West Virginia Hospital for Insane for ten days.

Further, the superintendent and the members of the State Board of Control have placed beyond question her sanity after a close observation, while she was under their supervision.

Mrs. Sparks is going to join her 26-year-old husband, who, it is alleged by the woman's children by her first husband, was rapidly dissipating her fortune of $2,000,000 by his extravagance and riotious living.

The old woman declared to-day that her young husband was welcome to the half of her fortune which she retained after having signed over the half to him.

Women Wear Bath Dresses Down Town

Startle Natives by Appearing in Ice Cream Parlor in Their Beach Attire.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Two buxon matrons and a miss about 19 years old created a sensation about dusk by walking through the streets of Warwood, north of this city, in bathing costumes. Unabashed by the attention they attracted, they entered an ice cream parlor, where they ordered ices, and after eating them walked to their homes.

The matter was brought to the attention of Town Marshal E. L. Pool, who immediately issued a warning that women appearing hereafter in such scant attire would subject themselves to arrest.

INDIANS, 102 AND 97, WILL VISIT FAIR DIRECTORS

MONTROSE, COLO., July 19.—The board of directors of the Western Slope Fair Association decided to bring 50 Ute Indians from the reservation in Utah to Montrose during the fair in September. The Indians will include Chief McCook, 97, and his sister, Chippeta, 102, who is the widow of Chief Ouray.

Naturalist Editor Has Forest Sanctum

Sets His Type in Shade of Hemlock and Lives in Wigwam all Winter.

WESTFIELD, MASS., July 19.—A unique editorial and printing plant is that known as "Seneca Wigwam, The Press in the Forest," located in the heart of the woods about three miles west of this place.

The sanctum is a typical Indian tepee, where the editor, Joseph C. Duport, an out-of-door enthusiast, prints, illustrates and publishes an original magazine called the Woronoco Valley Calumet.

In summer the editor sets his type in the shade of a hemlock, and in the winter or during inclement weather his work is done in the wigwam, which contains an up-to-date twentieth century printing press and equipment.

Policeman's Watch Stops Death Bullet

Hospital Steward Thinks Patrolman Burglar and Fires Six Shots at His Heart.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 19.—A watch in his vest pocket stopped a bullet which otherwise probably would have pierced the heart of Patrolman O'Hara last night. The shot was one of six fired by Roscoe Gray, steward of the Oakland College of Medicine, under the impression that O'Hara was a burglar. The other shots did not hit O'Hara. Gray nearly collapsed when he learned his mistake.

O'Hara was on his rounds when he noticed a door in the college building open. Trying to close it, he set off a burglar alarm and Gray opened fire in the dark.

Silver Wire Travels Through Two Arms

CHICO, CAL., July 19.—James Dupen, a Chico merchant, to-day submitted to an operation, in which a piece of silver wire, used in closing a wound on the left wrist in 1897, was extracted from the index finger of the right hand. The wire, which is one-half inch long, passed up one arm, across the chest and worked down the opposite arm, emerging at the finger.

Bee Sting on Neck Fatal to Farmer

Dies from Paralysis of Heart Fifteen Minutes After Insect Poison Enters System.

BRISTOL, PA., July 19.—John Pickering, a farmer of Woodbine, while engaged in his customary duties about the farm Saturday, was stung on the neck by a large bee and within fifteen minutes he was dead.

Dr. Heritage, of Langhorne, was summoned, but did not arrive in time to render aid. The doctor says death was the result of paralysis of the heart, caused by the bee sting.

DOCTOR GIVES LIFE TO SAVE A MAIMED BOY

Protects Patient When Motor Truck Crashes Into Ambulance on Way to Hospital.

TWO CHAUFFEURS INJURED

Warnings Cried From Veranda of Infirmary Come Too Late to Prevent Tragedy.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Just before a huge motor truck crashed into an ambulance conveying an injured boy to Lincoln Hospital last night, Dr. Enrico Salvini hurled himself between his charge and the side of the ambulance. An instant later there was a terrific smash. The ambulance was hurled to the sidewalk and wrecked.

When rescuers extricated the young hospital doctor they found him unconscious and mortally injured, while the youth whose life he had so heroically sought to save had received no injury as a result of the collision. The latter, however, had sustained severe hurts in a fall a short time before. The two chauffeurs on the ambulance were also injured, but not seriously.

Doctor's Skull Fractured.

Dr. Salvini suffered a fractured skull, internal injuries and a fracture of the left hand.

Charles Abrahams, one of the chauffeurs, has a fracture of the right arm and contusions of the body, while James McGowan, the other chauffeur, has a wrenched back, lacerations of the right arm and contusions of the body.

The accident happened at Brook Avenue and One Hundred and Forty-third Street, the Bronx. The ambulance was rushing to the hospital with Edward Lindholm, 16 years old, of 245 East One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street, who had been injured by a fall in the subway at Mott Avenue. Dashing north in Brook Avenue was a motor truck owned by Gottfriend Brothers, of Ninth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street, and in charge of Herbert Lawrence, of 163 Sterling Place, Brooklyn.

Warning Is Screamed.

Patients on the veranda of St. Francis Hospital, which is at the corner, screamed a warning and Abrahams and Lawrence tried to avoid a crash. Hearing the cries, Dr. Salvini peered from behind. He hurled himself into the body of the ambulance and tried to form a shield for the helpless boy. The injured persons were rushed into St. Francis Hospital.

The accident brought together two classmates who had not seen each other since they graduated from the University of Vermont. The man who took charge of the injured physician in St. Francis Hospital was Dr. Frank Cross. He and Dr. Salvini had been chums in boyhood and were reared in the same town in Vermont, and went through college together. Neither knew the other was in New York.

Minnesota Seeks Elk for Big Preserve

Section Is Natural Home of Animal, and State Asks Herd From Yellowstone.

ST. PAUL, July 19.—Fifty elk from the Yellowstone National Park, if they can be obtained, will be turned loose in Minnesota in the Superior forest and game reserve, which lies along the Canadian boundary line north of Lake Superior.

The territory is the natural home of the elk, and together with the adjoining national reserve covers more than 1,000,000 acres. There are no elk in either reserve now. It is estimated that the annual increase in the herd will be 50 per cent. This is the increase noted in the Yellowstone Park.

HARD THICK CRUST COVERED BOY'S HEAD

Cracked with Least Pressure, Causing Discharge. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In One Week Entirely Cured.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my baby of an ulcerated sore behind her ear and now we think we cannot keep house without them." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Poss, Nov. 5, 1912.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Wasp Sting Enables Cripple to Walk

Regains Use of Legs After 38 Years on Crutches When Insect Invades Bed.

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—Charles Wightman, deputy county clerk at Clayton, told a reporter how he had just been able to walk without crutches for the first time in 38 of the 42 years of his life. He fell when he was 4 and injured both legs permanently.

He said that a neighbor had told him a snake story just before he went to bed.

He thought how comfortable it was to live in a country where one could sleep in peace instead of in one of those countries where he had heard snakes sometimes creep in and share one's bed.

He thrust his right leg deeper under the covers. Then something that stung like a hot needle pierced his ankle. "I sprang out of bed and ran and stumbled twelve feet across the room," he said. "It was the first time I had taken so many steps since I was a baby."

"And was it really a snake?" he was asked. "No; it was a wasp." And he showed the ankle that the sting had swollen it.

Indian Papoose Is Raised by Soldiers

Full-Blooded Modoc, Back at Old Home, Tells Romantic Story of Early Life.

KLAMATH FALLS, July 19.—Kit Carson, a full-blood Modoc, visited his native land a few days ago for the first time since his babyhood.

The story of the life of Carson is unique. In 1852 a detachment of Government troops was sent to the Klamath country to quiet reported uprisings among the Indians. A large band of Indians had established a village on the shore of the lake. When the Indians caught sight of the soldiers they made a hasty departure.

Kit Carson, who was then about a year old, was left behind by his frightened mother. It was difficult for the soldiers to determine what to do with the child. Finally a soldier named Woods asked that he be permitted to adopt the boy. He gave the little fellow the name of Kit Carson and found him a temporary home with a Spanish family at Yreka.

Miner Returns Rich To Find Wife Dead

Comes Back Home to Make Restitution for Having Deserted Her 20 Years Ago.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Wealthy and anxious to take back his wife, whom he deserted twenty years ago, Josiah Bronson, a modern Enoch Arden, found the old home in ruins and the wife dead. From the old-timers who had known him in the early days he learned that his wife, believing him dead, had married his twin brother.

Two children, he learned, were born of the marriage, and upon the death of the mother were sent to relatives in West Virginia.

Bronson declared he would care for the children. "I shall give them the best education money can buy," he said. "I deserted their mother when she was just a young woman, and now I want to atone for the cowardly act."

Pawns Gold Teeth He Didn't Chew With

Kansan Says He Could Masticate on Other Side and Oakes Crowns to Loan Agent.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—"I don't need these teeth to chew with and they're loose, anyway," an old man said at the municipal pawnshop, pulling seven gold crowns out of his mouth and laying them on the counter.

"These teeth are just a losing investment as long as I do all my chewing on the other side, anyway. I might as well be getting something on them. Can you make me a loan?"

Ralph Perry, manager of the pawnshop, gave the man $1.75 on his gold bicuspids and molars.

"When the ones on the other side get loose, I'll be back after these," the man promised. "My dentist said there was gold enough in the bunch so he could trade me a set of false teeth for 'em as soon as the crowns all wore out and got loose."

Will Not Quit Husband, Though Both Enamored of Race Horses

Former "Belle of New York" Says Report of Separation From Oscar Lewisohn Is Silly.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Edna May Lewisohn and Oscar Lewisohn, her wealthy husband, both admit having new loves, and for that reason will break up housekeeping, but they will not separate, as has been reported, declares the former belle of New York.

The reason that there will be no divorce court proceedings is that they both have the same love and it interferes no whit with their connubial felicity. According to Mrs. Lewisohn, both have become madly infatuated with horse racing, and to keep in close touch with their stable they will give up their home, Cranbourne Manor.

"Both my husband and myself have become very keen on racing," said Mrs. Lewisohn, after denying the reported separation, "and we are trying to find a place near Newmarket, where he has ten horses in training. He is at present in Germany with his brother, but on his return we probably will rent our London house.

"Mr. Lewisohn has just taken up racing this year and has been remarkably successful for a novice campaigner. If his horses come up to expectations, he plans to increase his stable until he has one of the largest strings of thoroughbreds in England or the Continent. As for any separation, that is simply silly. We were never happier."

Wagons Must Have Lights at Both Ends

Washington State Will Enforce Strict Vehicle Law—All Classes Affected.

SEATTLE, July 19.—On and after August 1 every vehicle in this State must be provided with both rear and front lights in case night travel is necessary. Automobiles, wagons, buggies and cycles must carry lights so that travelers in front or behind may see.

Farmers as well as city residents are affected, and the old familiar farm wagon will be altered by a lantern hung from the rear axle and a spotlight fastened to the spring seat. The law was necessary because of the increasing traffic at night through sections where roads are narrow and grades dangerous.

PISTOL SHOT TO START A RUSH IN NEBRASKA

Government to Have an Old-Fashioned Land Opening in October.

BROKEN BOW, NEBR., July 19.—An old-fashioned land opening and Western rush, the first since Oklahoma was thrown open to settlement more than twenty years ago, will be witnessed in Western Nebraska next October, when nearly half a million acres formerly held in a Government forest reserve, will be declared open for homesteading purposes.

The order of the Land Department returning to the old method of land distribution came unexpectedly to the local land office, which had expected a prosaic "drawing" instead of the picturesque "rush."

The lands in question lie in McPherson and Grant Counties and for about ten years have been protected from settlement by having been segregated as "forest reserves," though there were absolutely no trees on the great tract when it was withdrawn from settlement.

However, it was the intention of the Forestry Bureau to make an object lesson of this portion of the great plains and to plant millions of pines, cottonwood, poplar and locusts—in fact, to change a great plain into a dense forest.

Ten Years to Learn.

It has taken the Government ten years and a lot of money to discover that the soil and the climate of this section are not conducive to tree culture. But, having reached that conclusion, the great tract will now be released by the Forestry Bureau and will be returned to the Land Department for homesteading purposes.

In the meantime, however, all the land reserve has been settled up by farmers and stock raisers, and today there is scarcely an acre of public land in the counties. The entire tract was, years ago, included in the great open country and was known as the very best grazing and cattle raising range in all the trans-Missouri country.

In those years it was supposed that Western Nebraska would never produce crops and would never be a farming country. But in after years it has come to pass that some of the best farming counties in the State are cut from the famous "short grass" country. There are many first-class sections of farming land included in the 344,000 acres which will be "rushed for" next fall, but the larger portion is grazing land.

To Parcel Grazing Land.

The grazing land will be parceled out in 640-acre tracts and will be awarded under the Kinkaid act, which permits of homesteads of this size. The farming land, however, will be limited to 120 acres to each individual. Under the new rules governing homesteading, it will be necessary for the applicant to spend only three years on the property instead of the five years required for so many years by the homestead laws. At the end of that time a deed can be secured, and the land can then be sold or retained, just as the homesteader desires.

All this land is easy of access. On the north Burlington Railroad towns are only a few miles away, and on the south a branch of Union Pacific skirts the border. It is somewhat hilly along the streams, but there are numerous high table lands, excellent for agricultural purposes, besides a number of wide and rich valleys. In the area there are a number of never-failing streams, a dozen or more lakes fed by springs, and hay flats of miles in extent. Before it was segregated it was looked upon as the richest ranch land in the State. To-day, were it possible to have title to the lands, they would sell from $50 an acre downward to $5.

Efforts Prove Failure.

The efforts of the Government to make the plains into a great forest have been a failure.

On farms of 100 acres each there will be room for 2,084 homesteaders on the tract which will be opened. But because many of the homesteads will be of 640 acres each, not that many can be given farms.

Some of the lands will come under the jurisdiction of the land office at North Platte and the others will report to the Broken Bow land office. Under the system to be used, the entire tract will be patrolled by soldiers to prevent "sooners" from entering. On the appointed day, October 1, probably at noon, a single shot, fired by an officer, will start the rush. All applicants will have an even start and there will be neither favoritism nor handicap.

After selecting his land, it is then up to the homesteader to get to the land office before another homesteader beats him to it. Many races and contests will undoubtedly occur and the picturesqueness of the West of 25 or 40 years ago will be in evidence.

CHANGS, ON WAY HOME, CLING TO YANKEE FRILLS

Wife and Children of Chinese Minister Sail Derssed in Latest American Fashions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—After more than three years in Washington with her husband, Minister Chang, Mme. Chang is returning to the Orient. She is accompanied by two daughters, a son, Henry K. Chang; a little daughter-in-law and a tiny grandchild. During her residence in America Mme. Chang has changed her ideas about many things, and about others she maintains the old Chinese beliefs.

The two young daughters, Miss Alice and Miss Lillie Chang, have been attending school in Washington for two years, and with the progress of their education have abandoned their picturesque nature clothes for American garb.

Whether they will adopt the clothes of their native country on their return remains to be seen. Miss Alice Chang, who spoke for the party at the St. Francis before they sailed on the Manchuria, said:

"It all depends on what is in fashion in China.

Favor American Fashions.

"If we find American clothes fashionable out there, we shall wear them. We adopted them when we entered Gunnison Hall, our Washington school These are more convenient when traveling," she added, pointing to a pale blue silk crepe costume with the latest frills and furbelows. "When we wear our other clothes, people stare so, and sometimes they laugh. They aren't used to them in Washington."

The question of recent changes in China is of especial interest to Mme. Chang and her daughters.

The idea that women may vote in China and that the door of opportunity is opening for them daily there has caused the Chinese women to be thoughtful.

"I don't know about this voting," said Mme. Chang, through her daughter. "I don't believe very much in it."

"Only for some women," broke in one daughter.

Education Qualification.

"I would make an educational qualification," said Miss Lillie. "Not every woman ought to vote."

"Home is the place for women," said Mme. Chang, true to her country's traditions and centuries of training. "A woman ought to do housekeeping, to stay at home and to have children."

Mme. Chang and the daughters are opposed to the Western idea of a woman earning her own living. They believe she should want to stay at home to be cared for, even if she has to do without some of the extras which her own money can secure.

"Women in China probably never will reach that stage," said Mme. Chang. "There will be fewer opportunities for them to enter professional and business fields."

College is a goal which is being aspired to by the two daughters, although they are not sure yet what particular lines they want to pursue. "We can go if we want to, you know," said Miss Alice. "Our people believe in college for girls if they want it."

USES HIS KNIFE TO CUT OUT HIS OWN APPENDIX

Farmer Faints After Making Incision Into Himself, but Doctors Finish Operation.

POND CREEK, OHIO, July 19.—Carlyle Goldsmith, the young farmer who operated on himself for acute appendicitis, continues to be the most talked of man in Grant County. He is showing rapid improvement, and indications are he shortly will be able to work.

Dr. F. P. Hulen, Goldsmith's family physician, says recent medical history is without record of a sane man undertaking such a dangerous method to cure a physical infirmity. Goldsmith says he knew what he was doing and became his own surgeon solely because he feared further delay might cause immediate death.

Goldsmith is 24 and a muscular, strong man. This was his fourth attack. His physician told him eighteen months ago that sooner or later a surgical operation would be necessary.

When his fourth attack came, the pain was so agonizing that Goldsmith was convinced his end was near. His physician was sent for, but in the meantime Goldsmith called his wife, told her to bring clean cloths, warm water and a bottle of carbolic. Then he asked for a knife having a strong blade with a razor edge.

He made an incision four inches long through the abdominal wall. The cutting caused less pain than the acid.

The operation came abruptly to an end when Goldsmith fainted. Ten minutes later Dr. Hulen arrived. Goldsmith was unconscious. The physician dressed the wound. The appendix was removed.

No complications ensued. He was badly burned by the carbolic acid, and this wound is causing his physician the most worry.

Harry and Margaret thought they had everything that makes for happiness in life. London, Paris, Rome, Vienna knew them; their swift cars flung the miles away; the smoke of their yacht lay low along the horizon. Then, as though some evil spirit had thrust between them the thin edge of a gigantic wedge, and day by day were relentlessly driving it home—something forced them gradually apart.

Their married life is being lived today, and will be lived countless times again, by many couples who make the same mistake. Read how Harry and Margaret worked out the problem for themselves and—just in time—found the key to the happiness they had missed.

CARNEGIE WAS BLESSED BY BEING BORN OF POOR PARENTS, SAYS STEAD

Bitter Experience as Child Laborer Did Not Kill Hope of Steel Master Who Always Believed His Dreams of Success Would Come True.

By W. T. STEAD.

Here is the concluding chapter of the life story of Andrew Carnegie as depicted by the late William T. Stead. It seems that the element of chance netted the steel master a colossal fortune.

Mr. Carnegie was not born rich. If he ever thanked God, he would daily thank Him for decreeing that he should be born poor. To be born to honest poverty and compelled to labor and strike for a livelihood in youth is the best of all schools for developing latent qualities, strengthening character and making useful men; hence from this school have come our leaders.

He was born in Dunfermline on November 25, 1837, the son of William Carnegie, a small master-weaver, who was regarded as a propertied man, fairly well to do in the world because he owned four damask looms, and was able to employ apprentices.

The Carnegies embarked in a sailing ship, as the Pilgrim Fathers had done 200 years before, and they were seven weeks crossing the Atlantic!

Bitter Experience as Boy.

He had an experience, a rather bitter experience, of the hardship of child labor. A child of 13, with the responsibility of running a steam engine, naturally felt that he was no longer a boy, but a man indeed. But although the work was heavy and the hours long, he was not unhappy. He had a good home, and he never ceased to cherish hope in his breast. "I was young," he said, "and had my dreams, and something within always told me that this would not last."

When only 14 he became telegraph boy at Pittsburg.

From telegraph boy Mr. Carnegie pushed his way upward to become an operator. This brought him in a salary of $25 a month—a figure which, as a boy, he had fixed as the ideal standard of comfort!

One day Thomas A. Scott, a superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who frequently came to the telegraph office, and had noticed Carnegie's briskness, offered him the post of clerk and operator to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. In the service of that line he remained thirteen years. He began by being telegraphic clerk and operator. He left it after having been appointed to the post of Mr. Scott himself, that of superintendent of the Pittsburg division.

Pay Raised to $35.

His pay went up to $35 a month. He became a favorite with Mr. Scott, and shortly after he came to the office his friend and employer suggested to him that if he had $500 to invest he could not do better than buy ten shares in the Adams Express Company at $60 each.

His mother decided at once that they must mortgage their home in order to secure the money to "give our boy a start." There was no difficulty about this, as the house was worth $800. The money was raised, the stock was bought, and Andrew Carnegie began his career as a capitalist.

When Mr. Scott became Assistant Secretary of War he put Mr. Carnegie in charge of the military railroads and telegraphs of the Government. Carnegie was then only 23, and it was his first experience of actual warfare.

Shortly after his return from Washington he stumbled upon the inventor of the sleeping car, with whom he formed a partnership, which gave him another great upward lift. Sleeping cars paid better dividends even than the Adams Express Company, and Mr. Carnegie now began to feel that he was on the highway to wealth.

But it was when he struck oil he made his first big success. He purchased an oil-bearing farm for $40,000. Its value rose to $5,000,000—that is, the shares of the company sold in the market upon this basis—and one year it paid in cash dividends $1,000,000.

Starts Bridge Company.

After his appointment as Mr. Scott's successor in the superintendency of the Pittsburg Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, he found that the company he was serving had begun to make experiments with an iron bridge. He joined with several friends and started the Keystone Bridge Works. The Keystone firm was successful from the start, and Mr. Carnegie found that bridge-building paid him better than superintending railways. He no sooner felt his feet in the new enterprise than he resigned his position on the railway.

Seeing that steel was the coming metal, Mr. Carnegie set to work to provide a plant to anticipate the inevitable demand. He had established a reputation, he was known to be a man in whose hands everything prospered, he could command as much capital as he required. And as he had faith in the future of the country, whose praises he chanted in his book, "Triumphant Democracy," he acquired all the best coal and iron mines in the neighborhood of Pittsburg.

Owes Debt to Partners.

Mr. Carnegie in describing his upward march naturally does not dwell much on rebates. He is profuse in his acknowledgments of the services rendered him by his partners:

"I have often said that if I had to lose all the capital I had in the works or lose my partners, I should let all my capital go and start again without a dollar, but with the organization intact."

He was constantly on the lookout for young fellows of exceptional capacity. He mentioned one instance in which he had taken a young fellow from behind a counter in Dunfermline, sent him to Pittsburg, given him a chance of proving what was in him, and finally admitted him to partnership, with a result that he is now drawing a dividend of $250,000 a year. Mr. Carnegie kept the majority of the shares in his own hands, but nearly one-half of the shares were distributed among the rising young men who were offered a better chance of making them in the firm than they could possibly have found elsewhere.

Apart from questions of detail and administration Mr. Carnegie owed his great success largely to a strong imagination married to keen Scotch common sense. Nine years ago The Times, summing up the story of the growth of the Carnegie works, thus described the culminating development of his business just before he turned it over to the United States Steel and Iron Company:

"The chief stages in the recent progress of the Carnegie Steel Company have been the building at Homestead Works of plants of perhaps unequaled extent for the manufacture of open-hearth steel and armor plates, the acquisition of the larger and richer parts of the Connelsville coal field, near Pittsburg, the buying up of the richest iron ore mines of the Mesaba and other ranges on Lake Superior, the acquisition or control of a special fleet of steamers for the transport of iron ores from their mines on Lake Superior to Cleveland on Lake Erie, a distance of 700 to 900 miles, and a private railway to take the ore overland from Cleveland to Pittsburg and the construction of blast furnaces at Duquesne, on the Monongahela River, which have each produced as much in a day as the largest furnaces, 30 years ago, were capable of producing in an average week."

Delay Expansion for Buyers.

The year before Mr. Carnegie sold his interest in the business for $300,000,000 he had offered to sell out for the sum of $165,000,000.

It was in the next year that Pierpont Morgan became alarmed by the competition which Carnegie offered to his steel corporation, and as a result of the menace of that competition Mr. Carnegie was induced to sell the company, which he had previously valued at $150,000,000 for $445,000,000. Of this Mr. Carnegie's own share was $300,000,000.

Therefore, more than two-thirds of his whole fortune was paid to him, not because of any industrial activity on his part, but owing to the manner in which he succeeded in impressing upon Pierpont Morgan the fact that he must be bought out at any price.

The one towering fact which Carnegie's rivals kept before them was that their company had cleared $40,000,000 during the last year. They were not selling so much steel, and brick, and machinery. They were selling a money-making mechanism, which had taken 36 years to construct. And so, in the letter which Schwab carried back to Morgan, were the following figures:

Five per cent gold bonds	$304,000,000
Preferred stock	98,277,120
Common stock	90,279,040

Taking the preferred stock at par, and the common at 50, this meant a cash price of $447,416,640. Add to this the $40,000,000 of profit for the year, and the total was $487,416,640—nearly half a billion.

Mr. Carnegie had triumphed all along the line. And the secret of his triumph, apart from the phenomenal prosperity of that boom year, was that he knew and practiced the arts which created the needed atmosphere, and brought about the psychological moment when the enemy feels there is nothing for it but to capitulate and sell out "at any cost without even counting the cost."

Couldn't Die Until He Moved Friend's Body

Pioneer Refuses to Allow Companion's Remains to Rest in Old Deserted Cemetery.

DUFUR, OREG., July 19.—"No, he was just my friend."

This was the answer given by H. Koehler, of Portland, when asked if William Holman, whose body he had gone to the trouble and expense of moving from one cemetery to another, was a relative.

Many, hany years ago, when there was but a small handful of settlers in the Fifteen-Mile Valley, a location for a cemetery was selected on a hill overlooking the valley.

A few days ago Kohler, now a gray-haired man, came to look after the last resting place of his friend Holman. He left here soon after Holman's death 35 years ago.

"We were good friends—very good friends," he said. "I could not die happy if I knew he would be left out there in that old cemetery with no one left to care for his grave. I had intended to look after this long ago, but circumstances have prevented, and now I am growing old and I must do this one kind act for my friend. We were very, very good friends."

Rats Give Sleeping Fisherman Haircut

Well Oiled Head of Angler Proves Excellent Provender for Hungry Island Rodents.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., July 19. A Santa Barbara fisherman has discovered a new way of getting his hair clipped. He appeared about his usual haunts yesterday with one-half of his head neatly shorn of hair. He says that the mice did it. A well-known fisherman vouches for the tale.

Santa Barbara Island is inhospitable and barren and contains not a drop of fresh water. For this reason fishing parties take a good supply of liquid refreshment.

Usually fishermen sleep on their boats on account of the mice. However, the fisherman in the party of Williams said he would sleep on shore.

This fisherman had earned the sobriquet of "Dude," owing to his habit of oiling his hair. It was this oil that caused the involuntary haircut, for the fishermen say that during the "Dude's" hours of slumber the mice visited him and neatly cut the hair close to the scalp in their relish of the oil.

Japs' 'Amo' Starts Romance at Harvard

Girl Student Teaches Him Language of Nippon and Now They Sail for Tokio Honeymoon.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—They met in the yard at Harvard. He was finishing his course and she was studying the intricacies of the Japanese language.

"Will you teach me Japanese?" asked James Lee Kauffman, and she said "yes."

They studied together day after day. Finally he was graduated to what corresponds to "Amo" in the Latin books. He asked her several times to explain its meaning.

"It means I love," she said, blushing.

"I am sure it must mean I love you," he said, and when she nodded that such might be the case he admitted that such was the case.

So they were married in Lancaster, Pa., and came here.

They sailed for Tokio. He is to take the chair of English law in the Imperial University.

Sioux City Finds Policewomen Useful

Superintendent of Police Safety Declares They Have Lessened Trouble With Girls.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA, July 19.—"I want especially to have the policewomen on the force during the summer months," says the Superintendent of Public Safety. "We formerly had plenty of trouble with young girls in dance halls, but since the women came on the force there has been none of this.

"I believe that they are doing fine work and am very well satisfied. The only thing that would cause their release from the force would be the lack of sufficient appropriation to pay their salary. They are necessary to the force in guarding the morals of the women of Sioux City."

Safe Robber Relic Found in Old Wall

Discoverers Believe That Ancient Money Box Was Taken From Stage Coach by Highwaymen.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., July 19.—While repairing the State highway at the top of Conococheague Mountain, near Concord, Ralph Hopple and Elias Snyder, who were tearing down a stone wall, found an express money box, of heavy sheet iron, lined with wood. The lid was partly open and the lock had been sprung with an iron hook found near the box.

It is thought the box was in the old stone wall for more than a century and was placed there by a gang of robbers that infested that section in the days of stage coaches.

7 Policemen Accused Of Shooting Craps

Magic of Their Number Has No Effect on Judge, Who Calls Defense "Outrageous."

NEW YORK, July 19.—It looked as if the magic seven might prove an unlucky number, for the seven patrolmen tried before Deputy Commissioner Newburger yesterday on the charge of shooting craps in the Lenox Avenue Station.

They testified as one man that Captain Kuhne was mistaken and that they weren't shooting craps, but the Commissioner said their story was "outrageous," and ordered Captain Kuhne to file additional charges of making false statements to a superior officer.

Stranger Found in Bed Says He Hired It

Flat Dweller Returns Home to Discover Farmer Peacefully Asleep on His Couch.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Michael Lanckowitz, his wife and child came home last night to find a man occupying the bed in their flat, at No. 222 Ludlow street. There was a fight, and a policeman was called.

The intruder, who said he was John Besky, a farmer of Freehold, N. J., insisted he had paid $1.50 to sleep in the room all night, and had been led there by the man who rented the room to him.

Besky was locked up protesting that in the struggle at the flat he had lost a watch and $75.

NATION FINALLY REFUSES BURR'S PENSION PLEA

United States Decides After 79 Years Just to File Request in National Museum.

PAPER OF GREAT VALUE.

Letter to Former Vice President From Washington Throws Light on Writer's Character.

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—After some delay—79 years, to be more or less exact—the United States Government has decided on a final action on Aaron Burr's application for a pension. The Government proposes to put the application in the National Museum. This is a patriotic and quite inexpensive method of disposing of a formal application for money.

Exhibited in a glass inclosed case in the museum, the papers may rest peacefully and indefinitely, telling future generations that in his last days Burr was considerably "hard-up." This is a fact not generally known. But if future generations happen to be observant they may notice that the papers show Uncle Sam to be a bit tardy in matters of pensions.

Papers Valuable Historically.

Historically, the papers are very valuable. They contain a letter written by George Washington to Aaron Burr, which even to-day—about 135 years after the letter was penned—is in a state of perfect preservation. Any student of values of historical relics can tell how much such a thing is worth. Officials at the National Museum declare the letter to be "invaluable."

The paper is a bit yellow but it is intact. The ink is a trifle faded, but can be read without difficulty even without the aid of glasses. And, furthermore, the letter reveals a bit of Washington's character more clearly than a volume of history. The missive shows how the general treated with his officers. Burr had written to Washington requesting leave of absence from military duty on account of ill health and suggesting that while off duty his pay may be discontinued.

Here is George Washington's reply to Burr:

Headquarters,
Frederick, 26th Oct., 1778.

"Dear Sir:

"I have your favor of the 24th. You, in my opinion, carry your ideas of delicacy too far when you propose to drop your pay while the recovery of your health necessarily requires your absence from the service. It is not customary, and it would be unjust. You therefore have leave to retire until your health is so far re-established as to enable you to do your duty.

"Be pleased to give the Colonel notice of this, that he may know where to call upon you should any unforeseen exigency require it.

"I am, dear sir,

"Your mo. obt. servt.,
"GEO. WASHINGTON.

"Lt. Col. Burr."

Burr's Final Appeal.

George Washington's letter is regarded as the most valuable paper among the sheaf composing Burr's application, but the application itself, Burr's formal appeal for a pension, has much historical worth because it is Burr's own record of his military service, written in 1834, just two years before his death, at the age of 80 years, in Port Richmond, Staten Island, N. Y. The papers contain no mention of Burr's famous duel with Alexander Hamilton, in which Hamilton was mortally wounded.

Burr even failed to mention in the papers that he had been Vice President of the United States, and reference to the fact that he was arrested and tried for treason for attempting to form a republic west of the Mississippi is also omitted. In the application it is recited, however, that Burr was unable to appear in court to swear to the facts by reason of "bodily infirmity."

Gets Blow Intended For His Twin Brother

Chicago Youth Struck When Angry Swain Avenges Pleasantry His Duplicate Was Guilty Of.

CHICAGO, July 19.—William and Otto Andler, of 3751 North Whipple Street, are twins. William passed a pleasantry about a lass who was going her way with one William Dieverkorn.

Sudden anger surged through Dieverkorn, but he held himself in check and escorted the young woman home. Then he came back, met Andler on the street an gave him a jarring wallop.

Andler soon discovered that the blow was meant for his brother and that Dieverkorn got mixed in the delivery of the goods.

Otto Andler refused to rest on this explanation. He caused the arrest of Dieverkorn, and it came out in court how William got the laugh, Otto got the punch and Dieverkorn got the hook.

Judge Sabith inspected the twins, said he couldn't see any difference and dismissed the case, warning Dieverkorn to be more discriminating in the future.

CONVICTS OFFERED PARDON IF THEY WILL PICK BERRIES

GEORGETOWN, DEL., July 19.—Full and complete pardons await even the prisoners in Sussex County if they will pick strawberries or work on the farms.

The scarcity of labor has become a serious problem to the farmers this year, and so serious has the question become that many of them have notified committing magistrates that they will pay all fines for intoxicated and disorderly persons if it can be arranged that these people pick berries.

Prodigies Starts Scholars' War

Mathematics and Language Clash

Both Boys Sons of Professors

Edward R. Hardy, the five-year-old prodigy, who is causing the professors at New York University to marvel over his proficiency in languages, is shown in the upper picture, while below is William James Sidis, thirteen years old, who is adding luster to the fame of Harvard by his feats in mathematics.

Different Methods of Mental Training Employed Cause Lively Discussion Between Schools.

The continued progress in mathematics of the young prodigy, William James Sidis, at Harvard, and the fact that there is at New York University a 5-year-old prodigy in languages, Edward R. Hardy, is reviving in the discussions of educators the old question of which field of mental effort has the greater developing power, mathematics or language study.

The opponents of mathematics have said that the study of language developed the literary imagination and the finer graces of the mind, while mathematics only developed the power of thinking in abstractions unrelated to actual life.

Called Mental Loafing.

The opponents of language study have said that the mathematical mind was the only thing that counted in holding one's own in the world, and that language study in excess was mere luxurious mental loafing.

The two boys, however, seem to show, in the minds of educators that know them both, that development is possible in either course, and development of an extreme nature.

Young Sidis at 11 years expounded the fourth dimension to Harvard professors—he is only 13 now—while the little 5-year-old prodigy shows a keen grasp of affairs. He is taking a course in school gardens. This is what he himself said of his hopes in that direction:

"The course will not be difficult for me. I already have studied the values of fertilizers in close areas, the temperature and the moisture. I now expect to learn what to do to banish germs and parasites, and also I expect to learn something of grafting."

Three-Foot Limit for Girls.

Side by side let us put a quotation from the mathematically developed Sidis. Says he of women:

"A nice little girl. There is no such animal. I believe in the three-foot limit, and by that I mean that this distance should be maintained with them.

"To keep this rule, I never use the subway in rush hours, and I once waited three-quarters of an hour in an office building for an elevator with no skirts in it to take me to the street.

"A woman is merely a thing. Everyone whose acquaintance is forced upon me I designate by numbers, but not by name. I keep a catalogue of those names, and when at rare intervals a new woman comes into the circle of my intimates, she loses her identity, as far as I am concerned, and becomes a number. You may be sure that the numbers do not extend far into the 'teens.'

But probably not even the greatest opponent of mathematics in contradistinction to language study would say that mathematics was responsible for this cynical view.

Both prodigies have something in common. Both are the sons of highly educated parents, their fathers being college professors.

Girl Shoots Herself When She Is Spanked

Mother Punishes Her for Spending Afternoons With Boys—She Fires Bullet Into Breast.

NEW YORK, July 19.—When the mother of 15-year-old Mary DeMartino spanked her a week ago for spending the afternoons with young men on the roof of their home, No. 337 East Forty-seventh street, the girl threatened to shoot herself.

Mrs. DeMartino caught her on the roof again yesterday, and after Mary had been chastised, she fired a bullet into her breast, penetrating one of her lungs. She was taken to Flower Hospital, and last night was in a critical condition.

—on the part of the Bridgeport girl. Miss McIntyre masquerading as "Lawrence Dessing," was a devoted lover, and every night found "Lawrence Dessing" at the home of Miss Aiken.

Last Sunday night while "Dessing" and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to call on her again. She then confessed her love to her companion, the pseudo "Dessing." Miss McIntyre, dressed in a gown of the latest mode last night met Miss Aiken in this city. Before Miss Aiken could speak the North Wheeling girl told her how she had revenged herself.

In a moment the girls were fighting and were separated by the police.

GIRL PLAYS MAN AND WINS LOVE OF HATED RIVAL

Unique Vengeance Is Planned by Young Woman Whose Sweetheart Proved Faithless.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Jilted by her lover, Bessie McIntyre, of North Wheeling, a pretty 18-year-old girl, secured an odd but effective revenge on her rival, who "stole" her sweetheart and on the faithless lover at the same time.

June 25 Harry Pendleton, a well-known young business man of this city, informed Miss McIntyre that he could not see her again (as he had become engaged to another girl. By a dint of inquiry the jilted girl ascertained that the girl who had stolen her lover's affections was Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, Ohio, just across the river from this city. Securing permission from her parents, Miss McIntyre had her hair cut off, and donning one of her brother's suits, she visited Bridgeport and met Miss Allen.

It was a case of love at first sight

PERSEVERANCE WINS FOR SHOW AT KNOXVILLE

Conservation Exposition Will Open September 1 Free of Debt and Complete.

KNOXVILLE, July 19.—In an authorized interview T. A. Wright, president of the National Conservation Exposition to be held in this city from September 1 to November 1, makes the statement that the exposition will open its gates on September 1 complete to the last detail, and that the exposition will be opened absolutely free of debt of any kind.

So far as is known, this will set a record for expositions anywhere. The financing of the project in the face of a number of disappointments is something in which the officers and directors of the exposition take pride.

"At the time the exposition project was first broached," says President Wright's statement, "it was expected that the Congress of the United States would appropriate $250,000 for a large exposition building. Through the action of one Knoxville man and of two or three Congressmen this appropriation was defeated in the last days of the last Congress. But the United States Government will be represented at the exposition by suitable exhibits from its various departments. The defeating of the appropriation bill will make no difference in the size or the quality of the Government displays.

"I have waited so that I might be sure of my ground in making the statement that the exposition will be complete on the opening day, and that it will be absolutely free of debt on that day.

"The exhibit space under cover has been increased more than four times what it was at former expositions and the Midway and outdoor space have been increased more than five times that heretofore used. The success of the exposition is assured. It will be the greatest exposition ever held in the South."

Five large exposition buildings have been added to the plant of the old Appalachian Exposition, and four of these are finished to the last nail; the fifth is under roof. A new Midway street, with over a mile of frontage, has been constructed. Only last week it was found necessary to add 30,000 square feet of space to the grounds in order that all applicants for outdoor space might be taken care of.

Leaves Husband Two Years to Get Degree

Wife of Professor of Engineering in Philippines Returns to College to Finish Course.

ANN ARBOR, MICH., July 19.—There appeared in the list of graduates and others who took degrees at the University of Michigan last month the name of Mattie E. M. Wrentmore, Ann Arbor.

In private life she is Mrs. Clarence G. Wrentmore, wife of a former professor of the university, now dean of the department of engineering in the University of the Philippines.

Professor and Mrs. Wrentmore decided they could not allow their four children to grow up with no more educational advantages than could be given them in the Philippines. This decision, coupled with the desire Mrs. Wrentmore had always had to complete her college course, caused them to determine to forego each other's company for a time.

She then entered the university two years ago.

Concrete Patch Put On River's Bottom

Engineers Employ Novel Method of Keeping Texas Stream From Habit of Losing Itself.

MARTINDALE, TEXAS, July 19.—It has been found necessary to put another patch on the bed of the Blanco River. This stream has a remarkable way of losing itself, and in order to restore it to its surface channel a concrete patch has been placed upon the holes through which it disappears.

For many years it has been emptying portions of its flow into small holes in its bed, but it was not until about a year ago that the entire bottom, so to speak, dropped out at a point near San Marcos. In one night the river below that point went dry. It had had a width of nearly 200 feet and was flowing a strong current until the sudden disappearance of the water.

TRAVELING WATER WAGON IS PROVIDED FOR HORSES

BOSTON, July 19.—A traveling water cart from which horses may be refreshed has been placed in commission in Boston's streets by the S. P. C. A.

For years the society has been furnishing water from hydrant stations, but recently there have been many requests for a watering place in sections of the city where it would be impractical to open hydrants. Hence the advent of the water cart.

MYSTERY MAN'S NAME TO STAY SECRET ALWAYS

Operation on Brain Fails to Reveal Identity of "J. C. R." Has Baffled Surgeons.

ROCHESTER, MINN., July 19.—That "J. C. R.," the mystery patient in the Rochester State Hospital, will never know who he is nor will the world, unless friends of olden days come to the rescue, and that he will never again speak, is the verdict of the surgeons, following a remarkable operation performed upon the brain.

"It is problematical that the operation will accomplish its purpose," said C. C. Heyerdale, first assistant superintendent of the State Hospital, after leaving the operating room.

The opening of the skull revealed a large area of degenerated brain cells covering the centers of speech and memory, and an unusually large cyst containing fluid was removed. This would indicate that in times past "J. C. R." probably suffered a hemorrhage of the brain, which could have been the result of a stroke of apoplexy or an injury inflicted upon the skull or brain. The unusually large area of degeneration discourages any hope that the memory will ever be restored or speech recovered.

MAN SWALLOWS MINNOWS, WHICH COME UP TROUT

Farmer Drinks From Stream and Then Turns Table on Jonah by Letting Fish Escape.

BENTON HARBOR, MICH., July 19. The biblical story of Jonah and the whale isn't in it with the case of Paul Nickels, a farmer residing east of Benton Harbor.

Nickels has turned out to be a human aquarium. Fast failing in health and with his physicians predicting that he could not live, he suffered from a baffling stomach complaint.

Nickels was seized with a violent coughing spell, during which he coughed up a six-inch trout, perfectly developed and living. The farmer yesterday was again seized with a coughing spell and emitted three other fish, each three inches in length.

Now, instead of dying, Nickels will live, local physicians say.

Across the farmer's acres a brook threads its way. Often when working in his fields Nickels would go to the stream and, kneeling down to the water, would slake his thirst. It is supposed that in drinking from the brook he swallowed several tiny minnows and that despite their change of habit lived and thrived. All the fish Nickels coughed up were brook trout.

WRITERS MAKE BEST DIPLOMATS DECLARES PAGE

New Ambassador to Italy, Author of Many Stories, Leaves Himself Out of Discussion.

SPEAKS IN GENERAL SENSE

Thinks a Writer Must Be Conversant With Economic and Governmental Problems of Day.

YORK HARBOR, ME., July 19.—Are authors better qualified to fill diplomatic posts than others? The appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy brings this subject to the fore, coupled with the appointments made by President Wilson.

The greatest diplomats America boasts were men of letters. Benjamin Franklin, John Hay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, William Dean Howell furnish a distinguished list.

Mr. Page, who is 60, is modesty personified. He has been reporter, lawyer, writer, and has succeeded in all.

Mr. Page asked if he could explain as an author what special qualifications a man of letters possesses to perform the duties of Ambassador, consented to speak, leaving his own case out of the discussion. Said he:

"A man of letters is better fitted to do anything better than anyone else. His work has broadened his horizon; if it hadn't we might as well do away with letters.

Must Know Problems.

"The author must necessarily be conversant with the economic and governmental problems of the day.

"I think the greatest good authors in general have alone is to interpret the spirit of the section about which they write. There can be no doubt there is a better feeling now between the North and the South than there was before the Spanish-American war. This, I believe, is because of writers.

"Every part of the world is being more properly set before another part by the authors.

"The President has had a thorough training. Besides the college education, he has had associations with the North and the South, and he is conversant with the economic and governmental problems. He is a man of strong character and has been deservedly selected by the people to hold their most important office.

"I met Walter Page prior to his departure for his London post and gave him a dinner. His whole heart was set upon the desire to 'make good.'"

Qualifications of Diplomat.

"What is your idea of the qualifications a good diplomat possesses?" he was asked.

"Devotion to his duty is perhaps the first and most important," he replied. "Then comes devotion to your country, application to your duty and a desire to bring your country and the country to which you have been sent closer together.

"Of course, since the cable came into use foreign posts are brought closer to the State Department at Washington, and it must be a great comfort to an Ambassador to feel that at any time he may seek aid from Washington.

"I believe Charles Francis Adams was the last foreign ambassador to be thrown upon his own resources, and that was because the cable was cut.

"Rome is indeed a charming post. I believe it is the most romantic city in the world. I am sure I shall like it."

Tight Shoes Land Thief Behind Bars

Burglar in Jewelry Store Kicks Heels to Relieve Pressure and Alarms Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Frank Davies, who at times also gives his name as John Simpson and Joe Allen, became irritated last night while scooping unset diamonds in his hat in a dark room because the toes of his new shoes were too narrow.

Intending to relieve the squeeze, he kicked toward the floor with his heel, but miscalculated and drove his foot through a glass show case. A policeman in a saloon on the floor below heard the noise and arrested Davies, who says he is an ex-convict and that he arrived here from Los Angeles at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The diamonds were claimed to-day by the jewelers from whom they were taken.

Noble Ex-Convict Becomes Minister

Leonard Mordaunt Runs Gamut of Life From British Society to California Prison.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Leonard Mordaunt, ex-convict, scion of a noble English family, and better known in the role of a prison-reform worker, was ordained to the ministry of the Free Methodist Church by Bishops Jones and Sellew at the close of the annual conference which has been going on in the secluded aisles of Mineral Park.

During twenty years he has ranged from the welcome member of exclusive circles of European society to the lowest grade of convict. He became a convert and decided to dedicate the remaining years of his existence to the service of God and humanity.

An inventor, he obtained money and departed for Philadelphia to look over machinery, preparatory to starting a factory at Pana. He is 40 years old.

Feeds Her Pet Pig With a Silver Spoon

Denver Society Woman Provides Bed of Down and Linen for Her Porcine Possession.

DENVER, July 19.—Mrs. Whitney Newton, a Denver society matron, has a new pet.

Young Robert Newton came home a few evenings ago and brought a baby pig with him.

Mrs. Newton took the squirming animal into her arms and tried to make it comfortable, but without success. Finally, in desperation, she went to the linen closet, took out a fine piece of hemstitched linen, embroidered with blue flowers, wrapped it gently about the slick little pig, then laid him cautiously upon the downy pillows beside her own.

Piggy gave a satisfied little squeak, doubled up his feet and went off to sleep happily.

This cunning act won Mrs. Newton's heart, and from exasperation she developed a positive liking for her pet. His white skin is washed, combed and perfumed and he sleeps in a downy bed every night beside his mistress. He also eats from a silver spoon.

Woman Sues to Save Parrot From Cursing

Tells Court That Bird Is Under Baneful Influences Now as Property of Saloon Man.

ALTON, ILL., July 19.—Mrs. Geneva Littlehage has applied to Justice Daniel Gorman for a replevin writ to obtain possession of a parrot to save him from the baneful influences of a saloon.

"The bird never swore once in his life, and I can't bear the thought of his learning to curse," she told the Justice. "You ought to help along the cause by not charging me anything for the papers."

Mrs. Littlehage said while coming from Kansas City to Alton she employed a porter to carry the cage. She said he ran off with the parrot and when she next heard of it the bird had been sold to a saloon man for $10. The proprietor of the saloon refused, it is said, to give it to the owner.

Must Stay Maids to Get Mother's Estate

Daughters of Ohio Woman Are Beneficiaries Under Will Which Prohibits Their Marriage.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, July 19. One of the most remarkable wills ever admitted to probate in this county was made by Jane Lake, late of Richwood, who left considerable property to her three daughters, Linie, Nora and Ida.

The provisions are that the estate shall be equally divided among the three daughters, on the condition that none of them will marry. If one of them marries, her share of the estate goes to the two remaining single. If all three should marry, the entire estate is to go to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

FISHERMAN FINDS $1,400 WORTH OF PEARLS IN HAUL

PEORIA, ILL., July 19.—Joe Johnson, a clam fisherman on the Illinois River, found two gems among the pile of clams brought in from a day's haul. Johnson, thinking the pearls of unusual value, took them to a jeweler, who to-day gave him $1,400 for the two stones.

In Shady Dells of Sharon, Mass., Prominent Members of the Exclusive Sets Learn To Be Graceful.

SHARON, MASS., July 15.—Beautiful bare-footed society women clad in diaphanous draperies whirling through the groves like Dianas and dryads of mythological days caused this little town much disturbance until it was learned that these nymph-like dancers were only groups of fashionable women from Boston, New York, Washington and other large cities learning the art of rhythmic expression at Mrs. Florence Fleming Noyes' Sharon Summer School.

Just now Sharon has recovered a little from the shock of having its dells and glades peopled with gyrating girls going through mysterious evolutions, but the interesting new kind of training which Mrs. Noyes has started in Massachusetts promises to atract large numbers of rhythmic women students from everywhere.

The rhythmic dance is especially delightful since it necessitates the wearing of special apparel, thin, loose and silken, to give full and perfect play to the motions of the limbs and the free gyrations of the body.

"Close to Nature" Dance.

Litheness, suppleness and harmony are the main objects in the learning of rhythmic expression and lessons are best inculcated, Mrs. Noyes believes, where overhanging tree boughs, falling leaves and the aroma of opening blossoms lend to the enchantment of the atmosphere.

It is partly for such a reason that Mrs. Noyes chose Sharon as the spot for her summer school. Behind the clean, fresh, white-painted bungalow-cottage on Pleasant street, that does duty as a living room and classroom building, is a beautiful grove of tall trees with low swinging branches and dark green grass underneath.

It is in this grove that the pupils are inducted into the first mysteries of rhythmic expression.

As they get experience and feel the restrictions of the grove they naturally seek the wider range of the wooded expanses that surround the town. Hence the surprise that was at first caused when these startling Delsartian women of society were seen amid the trees or deep in the recesses of some particularly remote glen gliding through the fantastic evolutions that are supposed to lend the body perfect ease and repose.

Groups ranging from ten to a score or more in number mysteriously appeared and disappeared. Great modesty was shown in regard to keeping aloof from the townspeople, and only the chance passer who happened upon one of these rhythm classes of beautiful girls knew of the great grace and extreme litheness of body that was being taught and learned.

Among the girls studying with Miss Noyes are Beulah Hepburn, daughter of A. Barton Hepburn, of New York; Margaret Tuttle, daughter of Mrs. Howard Mansfield, a prominent suffrage leader; Mildred Anderson and Mable Coffin, of New York; Elena Farons, a Kansas City society woman; Winifred Lawrence, a Cleveland society girl; Lenora DeGrange, Effie Baker, Kathryn Dunkhorst and Elise Ryan, of Washington, and Bertha Remick, a composer, of Sharon.

Moving Picture Gives Mother Clew to Girl

Missing Daughter Is Recognized on Screen and Police Are Following Up Trace.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The "movies" may be instrumental in restoring Olga Ellis, 5, to the mother from whom she was taken in Revere, Mass., and brought to California.

For six months the police have sought John Ellis, of Revere, Mass., who is said to have left that city with his daughter.

A school-teacher of Berkeley, Cal., became interested in the case and gave a picture of the child and the mother's address to a moving picture agency.

Mrs. Myrtle Palmer, housekeeper in a hotel here, saw the mother's appeal at a moving picture theater recently and recognized the little girl as one who had stayed at the hotel with her father for several weeks. He had registered, she said, as D. Delisle, and had gone to Eureka, Cal.

Mrs. Palmer notified the police and search for the man and child has been instituted in Eureka.

Squaws Lay Ties As Bucks Play Poker

Desert Section Hand Boss Returns to Find Piute Women Doing Construction Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Piute Indians as substitutes for Mexican section hands were tried out in the Nevada desert last week. The Mexicans were deemed unsatisfactory because they would drop their tools and rest the instant the "boss" got far enough away so that he could not hit them with a shovel handle.

With the Indians on the job, however, the work went along just the same, boss or no boss.

Nevertheless the Mexicans are again on the pay roll and the Indians are taking their traditional ease.

After glowingly watching five days of splendid work by his Piute bucks the section boss left them the other day. Returning 24 hours later he found the suffragette members of the Piute tribe doing the work on the railroad, while the bucks were gathered in a poker game at one side of the track.

BORUP PARTY TO HUNT NEW LAND IN ARCTIC SEAS

Daring Explorers Headed by Donald McMillan to Remain Two Years in Cracker Land.

Special Cable to The American.

SYDNEY, N. S., July 19.—When the little whaler Diana left this port for Flagler Bay, with the Borup Memorial Expedition to Crocker Land on board, the exploration party bade farewell to the haunts of the white man for two years.

The next stop of the hardy vessel will be Etah, the Eskimo colony, where a party of natives will be taken on board, and the ship will then proceed into the Kane Basin and headquarters will be established in the westerly end of the basin at what is known as Flagler Bay. Here the supplies will be unloaded and winter quarters established. Should no mishap occur this work should be accomplished some time in August or September, when the Diana will return to this port, leaving the small band of intrepid explorers and their Eskimo friends and companions on their own resources.

Will Explore Unknown Land.

The chief object of the expedition is to explore an unknown land or chain of islands first sighted by Peary in 1906. Again in 1908 Peary had another view of this land, but was unable to set foot upon it. So far as is known, no man, at least no white man, has ever visited this mysterious place.

Haul out your latest map of the Arctic regions. In about longitude 75, latitude 79, you will find the Kane Basin and Flagler Bay, the winter quarters of the party. Trace your way along the 79th degree of latitude through the water passage which separates Ellsmere Land from Grinnell Land until you reach 86th longitude meridian.

Here turn north in the channel which separates Axel-Heigerg Land on the west, from King Oscar Land and Grant Land on the east, gradually pushing to the northwest until you reach the northernmost tip of Axel-Heigerg Land, known as Cape Thomas Hubbard, slightly above the 81st parallel and in longitude 93. This is really the jumping off place of North America. This is the point from which Peary saw Crocker Land in the distant northwest.

It is from this point that the present expedition will set out for the unexplored region.

May Be Huge Continent.

Crocker Land may be just a few islands or it may be a huge Arctic continent. That is what Dr. Donald MacMillan and his party are going to find out. The work of establishing supply stations between Flagler Bay and Cape Hubbard is expected to be finished by February of next year. With a large base of supplies at the cape, the little party will set out across the frozen ice to Crocker Land, 100 miles away.

Once there geological and botanical specimens will be obtained, the coast line of the land will be surveyed and every scientific fact about the land will be obtained so that when the party returns we shall know for a certainty what Crocker Land really is.

With the summer of 1914 will come the breaking up of the ice in the sea between Crocker Land and Cape Hubbard. This means that in all probability the party will be compelled to remain in this barren region and wait for the winter to freeze the ice and afford them a passageway to their base of supplies. This is where the dangerous part of the expedition comes in.

Starvation Big Danger.

Will these men be able to subsist in this region for several months on the meager supplies they can carry with them and the game they may find there? The tragedies of the Arctics may be summed up in the one word "starvation." Everything depends upon supplies, without them the party is doomed to one of the most horrible deaths ever suffered by mankind. The pains of hunger, the freezing of the body when the blood is no longer able to supply the necessary warmth, the knowledge that there is absolutely no hope, the thoughts of the loved ones waiting for the return, these and many more sufferings which we are unable to realize or imagine fall to the lot of the members of an Arctic party without provisions.

The possibility of such a catastrophe befalling his party was mentioned to Dr. Donald MacMillan before he sailed from this port. He turned his clear eyes to his questioner and in the firm tones of a man who has implicit faith in his own ability said: "But we won't fail. The equipment we have, the experience of the Eskimos which we will take with us, many of whom were with Peary on his successful Polar expedition, the trained dogs and the determination to succeed will bring us back safely."

And anyone who knows this young man, imbued with the spirit of adventure and a love for the frozen north, can not doubt that he will succeed. Such men as Anthony Fiala, Sir Ernest Shackleton and Robert E. Peary have the utmost faith in MacMillan to accomplish any task to which he turns.

Would you have a slim, youthful figure? Though no longer young, it may be yours.

FOR MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

THE newest shirts to wear with the eponge skirts are those in pique. The new pique is only a distant relative to the stiff pique of other years, as it is delightfully soft and supple. The shirt is masculine in cut, with the exception of the neck, which is invariably finished by one of the becoming rolling collars which owe their origin to the days of Marie Stuart. The correct finishing touches are added when a sash of plaid ribbon and a cravat to match are adjusted. No matter how severe the skirt and shirtwaist may be, the sash is sure to give the feminine touch.

* * *

The all-black hat is the smart headgear of the hour, regardless of the shape, and it is a practical choice for the beach. A black hat does not look quite as summery or light as an all-white hat, but the sun can not damage it as it can one of colored straw, or even one of the natural tone straw, which may become actually sunburnt. There is a fad for trimming some of the black hats with blue ribbon bows, and a few of the bolder spirits among the fashion leaders are appearing in brown straw hats. When the latter are worn with brown shoes and stockings and a sash of brown moire or tulle, the effect is really artistic.

* * *

Separate skirts of cotton eponge have had a tremendous sale, and many of the well-dressed girls at Newport and Tuxedo are wearing them to the exclusion of linen or the durable cotton corduroy, which is becoming very common these days. The two-piece model preserves the straight, narrow silhouette, but does not launder as well as the gored skirt, which, when properly cut, should not sag after washing. These skirts button over the left hip and are slightly gathered into a belt in the back, which fastens with a buckle.

* * *

White serge, while not so serviceable for rough usage as tub stuffs or mixed tweeds, is altogether charming for outing wear provided one can keep it clean, and there are pretty ready-made suits, one-piece frocks and separate skirts of white serge offered at prices so reasonable that it does not seem extravagant to have two or three things of the kind, and so be able to spare one easily during its trip to the cleaners.

* * *

All petticoats are as thin and soft as possible, without being actually transparent—unless the wearer stands in a strong sunlight. Then sometimes the effect is rather startling. The petticoat now is exquisitely fitted, and is as narrow as possible, having a flounce of fine machine embroidery at the foot. Unless intended for wear with a sheer frock, the petticoat does not reach below the top of the buttoned boot.

* * *

Flesh-tinted linings in yokes have become such a frenzy with feminine folk that the craze has spread even to lingerie. The latest nightgown is of thin batiste, with a lace yoke lined with flesh-tinted net. This yoke reaches to below the arms, and, instead of being attached to the gown under a ribbon beading, a garland of tiny, pale pink roses covers the seam. The short lace sleeves are also looped up with pink silk roses.

* * *

Sweaters show more variety than they once did. One may have them any length from hip length to full length and in many shapes. The Bulgarian lines are also in evidence among the new sweaters this season, the wide belt being usually of some contrasting color with cuffs and collar to match.

* * *

Jet ornaments are popular on light summer frocks. The lighter the frock the heavier the ornament. One, made of seven octagonal pieces of cut jet, the center one two inches across and the end ones an inch across—set in a row—is used to mark the high front waistline of a sheer batiste embroidered afternoon gown. The ornament extends well round a quarter of even the fashionable waist.

* * *

So far this season one has not seen any of the light-colored silks and satins used for suits or one-piece frocks for general wear. When a woman wears a light or bright pink gown it is of muslin or eponge or French voile. Both silk and satin are found in navy blue, chocolate brown, and, especially, in beige; the latter, like tan, is being widely used with black trimming and is immensely attractive. Its neutrality of tone allows various dashes of color to be used against it.

* * *

The peplum is still here. In a dainty white lingerie blouse showing a straight, gatherless peplum eight or ten inches long, there is an interesting belt arrangement. Two sections of the belt are made of mull, like the blouse, and these two sections band the waist at the sides. The belt in front and back is made of dark blue satin ribbon, folded narrow like the mull belt. On each end of each of the ribbon bands is a big white pearl button, and the mull sections of the belt button over the ribbon on these buttons.

* * *

Bead trimming, apparently, is not going out of fashion. A recently shown serge coat has a short, loose coat, the raw edge of which is banded with bright blue beads—the serge is navy—embroidered in a straggling design a couple of inches wide. The neck edge of the coat and the sleeves, too, showed the same banding.

The smart thing just now is the dying flower droop, the collapse of the whole figure which seems the result of mental fatigue, but which is in reality the result of a carefully thought out mannerism introduced for the purpose of advertisement by a famous Parisian actress. This charming woman is possessed of what the novelists call a willowy form. She is tall, exceedingly slender, extraordinarily graceful

LATEST PARIS COSTUMES STARTLE GIDDIEST MODES HAVE EVERYTHING BUT SIMPLICITY

Fashions Shown at Longchamps and Other French Race Courses Last Word in Sensations.

An old, old song remarked, "They do such things and they say such things—on the Bowery." But the modern place for doing and saying "such" things in Paris—and from the indications of these pictures snapped at the races at Longchamps, just outside of "Gay Paree," they are wearing such things as our giddiest Atlantan would scarcely venture on home soil.

In the one case a modestly flowered silk skirt with wee buds borrowed from the old chintz patterns is topped by a "cubist" coat of very spherical lines! Pale gray brocade flowered in great purple irises is seamed down the back that there may be fullness enough to shor from two cords at the top, and to finish with four cord shirrings at the bottom, and still to fasten kimono fashion over the shoulders. A hat of duchess lace banded in white moire and decked with a great bush of black aigrettes finishes the costume.

The other fair Parisienne carries a parasol of white broderie Anglaise inset with rare venise lace and with a three-inch edge of black velvet. The black and white color scheme continues in the shoes, which have patent leather vamps and instep strappings of white suede. And the gown itself is a creation of shadow and venise and duchess laces with net and point d'esprit and black beads for further garniture! The gown has the new cross front drapery that is suggestive of a surplice when found on a waist, but brings to mind nothing so much as harem trousers when found on the skirt. The only things of simplicity in this costume are the old-fashioned mitts that cover the arms and the big full-blown rosette thrust into the girdle.

on the artistic lines laid down by disciples of Puvis DeChavannes. She started the fad for drooping figures of an exaggeratedly natural order and the fashion has spread with the rapidity of a prairie fire.

Violent color contrasts are tolerated and therefore one sees a purple ruff and cape over a gown of black satin which has a black tulle top; over while lace gowns there will be a ruff and cape of raspberry red tulle.

Where are the plain shoes of to-day going? There are not many of them, to be sure, but the new shoes which are coming in from day to day put the few plain ones that are left to shame. For the new ones show much slashing and cutting and gilding and painting. One pair of slippers is made of green, silver and white, and the kid from toe to heel is slashed away leaving openings shaped like crescents separated by the merest slivers of kid. Another slipper, with a French heel, is made to be worn without stockings. It, too, is made of painted and gilded kid, and has a strap to go between the great toe and the one next to it which buckles to a strap crossing the instep.

Zinnias have come into great popularity this summer. Their popularity began, in fact, last winter, when Futurist designs and colors first came in. There is a stiffness and rigidity of form about zinnias that harmonizes with designs formed of cubes and triangles. And the bright, clear colors of this flower suggest those in the giddiest futurist silk. Hence the popularity of the zinnia for corsage bouquets, hat and frock trimmings in its artificial form, and for household and garden decoration in its real form.

The New "Picture Hat"

The picture hat is taking its revenge. All last winter and far into the spring of this year it was pushed into the background by pert little jam pots and caricatures of Indian turbans. The picture hat was out of favor. Those who continued to wear it were smiled at as out of date; dress experts asserted that we should not see a revival of the wide-brimmed hat for several seasons to come.

But those who really understand the fashions of Paris—more than that, who understand something of the ways of the Parisiennes—never doubted the early return of the big hat, weighed down with rich feathers or lovely flowers. Its coming might be delayed a little, but it was certain to arrive nevertheless. And it has arrived.

Once again there are seen genuine picture hats, large and small; such hats as might have graced the beauties depicted by the old masters.

This is essentially a lace year. Wide lace flounces are getting more and more fashionable. They will be in high favor for casino wear. These lace dresses, arranged in three or four tiers, are exceedingly becoming; more than that, they are full of artistic charm. Painters through all the ages have raved about supple draperies of lace or fragile gauze.

MISS WILSON IS PLAIN 'JESSIE' IN KENSINGTON

Pennsylvania Folk, Whom Daughter of President Aided, Like White House Bride-to-Be.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Kensington is living over again the three years that Miss Jessie Wilson, the President's second daughter, whose engagement to Francis Bowen Sayre, of Bethlehem, has just been announced, spent as a social worker in the mill district.

To Kensington she is just "Jessie," and "Jessie" she always will be, the girl who traveled up and down narrow streets on visits of mercy, who attended the sick beds of mothers and was a sister to the working girls and a pal of the short-trousered boys who gathered at the Lighthouse gymnasium.

Miss Wilson's work of social service at the Lighthouse, 152 West Lehigh avenue, brought her in close contact with the men, women and children of the mill sections, and to all of them she endeared herself by her modesty, her unassuming manner, her cordiality and sincerity. The life of the settlement she followed closely, spending five days a week in routine work and returning to her home in Princeton for the week-end.

Many a meal Jessie Wilson has eaten at the uncovered tables of the Lighthouse Restaurant with motormen and millworkers for her companions, never thinking herself a whit better than the people who surrounded her.

Roast beef, fried potatoes, tomato sauce, lemon pie, bread and butter, and coffee—why should a President's daughter want more? And she didn't want more. So when it was more convenient to at eat the restaurant than with Mr. and Mrs. R. Porter Bradford, the manager of the Lighthouse, with whom she resided, she ordered the menu chalked on the wall of the restaurant, "full roast dinner for 15 cents."

Miss Wilson has lately been associated with the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, and has been active in work for the betterment of factory girls.

Scant Dress Barred From Communion

Pastor Assails Women Who Appear in Church Clad in "Yard of Nothing."

MERIDEN, CONN., July 19.—"The dress for attendance at the house of God in clothes suggesting a ballroom or a recreation pier is disgraceful, and hereafter women with slashed skirts, transparent waists, low-necked or short-sleeved gowns will be refused holy communion at St. Rose's Catholic Church," the Rev. James Conlin said to-night. "I have no objection," he continued, "to women appearing in church in the coolest manner consistent with decency, but when they appear in things that are only a wisp of cloth and a yard of nothing, I believe it is time for me to protest."

The Tango Arrives in Time To Stir Jaded Paris Nerves

By La Raconteuse.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—Personally I am quite unable to understand why the tango's merits and demerits should continue to interest Parisians. But it is an undeniable fact that the Argentine nationale dance, which, by the way, is repudiated by the Argentine legation, still remains the subject of most heated discussions in the salons and everywhere.

The exotic dance was fortunate in arriving here at a time when we were practically at our wits' end for a new subject of conversation. Society found what it wanted the very moment the chief of police forbade the tango to be danced in public, and now tango has reached the heights of its popularity. It may even survive this dreadfully hot summer. It is discussed in society at the "fives" in the Bois, and "tout Paris" is at present divided into two hostile camps—for and against tango.

Tango at Senate Ball.

Since the tango, as I said, has been repudiated by the Argentine Embassy, we really do not know where the dance comes from, but we have adopted it, and the other evening I saw it danced most beautifully at a ball given by the President of the Senate in Luxembourg.

Our theatrical ladies find it far more interesting and plastic than either the Boston or the "grizzly hug," with no reminiscences of the "cake walk," of which they heartily tired.

Gabriel d'Annunzio, who was asked his opinion of the tango, replied with a smile: "Why, everybody tells me I dance it admirably, so, of course, I am delighted with it."

Madame Cassimir Perier sees absolutely nothing interesting the the tango, which has made no impression whatever on her, but Maurice Rostand, son of our great and immortal poet, finds tango incomparable, symbolizing "soft and gentle, perhaps a little sad, dreams." He emphatically declares that it must be danced only by young and beautiful partners who are in perfect harmony body and soul.

La Belle Otero Enthusiastic.

"LaBelle Otero" is enthusiastic about tango and tells me that in a revue soon to be performed she will dance it as Paris has never seen anything danced before. I am afraid it will be most shocking.

Princess Lucien Murat has startled us all by declaring: "I love tango above anything else in this world, and find it absolutely chaste when it is danced by a Spaniard or a South American. Frenchmen will never learn to dance it properly."

Mlle Cecile Sorel, of the "Comedie Francaise," says she does not know nor want to know the tango, "for there is only one kind of dance, that which is taught by Isadora Duncan, which arouses in my soul images of the highest beauty."

Andre deFouqueres says tango is a sad, melancholy dance which will never lastingly appeal to the lively, animated French people.

He thinks it should be limited to the stage. It can be danced very correctly; on the other hand it is liable not to be.

Its unsuitability for the drawing room comes also from the fact that it is not a gay and convivial dance and pretty like the Russian polka or the Polish polka. "I am a partisan of the old dances," says M. de Fouqueres, and at certain evening parties I have danced the Empire dances. One must have tradition, especially a nation like France, famous for her chivalry and politeness.

Country Club Clothes

Reception days at the country club and the yacht club bring out very distinguished costumes of the lingerie order, accompanied by picture hats loaded with roses, and parasols selected to match sashes. Such frocks this year are almost entirely of fine lace and machine embroidery, with knowing touches in the way of sashes and little tulle bows at the neck and girdle. Airy black tulle bows with sheer white frocks are extremely smart, and with this white and black combination is carried a parasol of decided hue, like mustard yellow, Nell rose or saxe blue. Buttoned white oxfords are much fancied with white frocks of an airy character, though buttoned boots of buckskin are liked best with yachting costumes of a tailored nature.

WOMAN JURORS SCORN STYLE OF SMART LAWYER

Beau Brummel Clothes and Bachelor Button of Barrister Fail to Win His Cause.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Personal pulchritude and unusuarly smart habiliments, heightened by a bachelor's button and an ingratiating manner, failed to win for Assistant District Attorney Maxwell McNutt, in his appeal to the jury of women which tried Mrs. Bertha J. Williams on an extortion charge to-day. After deliberating one hour and 55 minutes, the jury, the first in the history of the world composed of women to hear a felony case, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

"Of course she said she did what she did, but we didn't think when she said she did it, she meant she had meant to do it," said one of the jurywomen.

Hence, Mrs. Williams, attired in a fetching Milan hat and a neat white serge tailored suit, much scrutinized by the jurywomen, made discreet osculatory advances to her benefactors, and the incident was closed.

Mrs. Annette Robinson, also armored in attractive feminine fixings, was the complaining witness in the case. She accused Mrs. Williams of having written her a letter April 8, attempting to extort $150 in return for the delivery of a trunk said to have contained certain evidence which, according to the letter, would have embarrassed Mrs. Robinson, had it fallen into the hands of the police.

When Played by Instinct

(Experiences with the New Instinctive Playing. No. 8 of series.)

I RAISED merry riot in my house last night. I had the whole place going: but I didn't care. I was having the time of my life!

"I was near Mary's new Virtuolo Player Piano, and I thought I'd try it out. So I put in a roll marked 'Dixie,' while I was pecking around at the door, and that old song must have gone to my head. Before I knew it I was crashing it out for all I was worth—

"'Way down south in the land of cotton.'

"I closed my eyes, touched the 'soft and strong' Acsolo buttons,' and I put regular smash and ginger into that music.

"Why I seemed to be right back in those thrilling days of '61 again—when multitudes went wild over that great old song—when hearts beat like trip-hammers and throats sang themselves hoarse with its stirring rhythm.

"Well, Mary peeked in—and stayed. Then Mary's young man; and then some of the neighbors came along, too, and all joined in—yelling and singing and capering like mad!

"Say—my 'music instinct' is great, when I can play 'Dixie' like that!"

SUNDAY AMERICAN'S SPECIAL CABLE LETTERS RECEIVED FROM ALL THE GREAT CAPITALS OF EUROPE

ASQUITH WILL STAY PREMIER DESPITE TORIES

Reports of Prime Minister Withdrawing To Go on Bench All Emenate From Opposition.

By PHILIP EVERETT.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Seldom, if ever, has the air here been as full of political rumors as during the last few weeks—a fact which seems to show that the heat of the summer has played havoc with the brains of our conservative editors and politicians, for all the rumors invariably may be traced back to the camp of the Opposition.

The fall and collapse of the present Government was confidently predicted as destined to take place long ago, and when the prophecy was not fulfilled, the political gossips began to talk of all the important changes that were to take place in the Cabinet.

Asquith to Appoint Isaacs.

The most sensational of these predictions was that Mr. Asquith, tired with the burdens and responsibilities of his office, would resign after appointing himself Lord Chief Justice to succeed Lord Alverstone, who, as everybody knows, will never resume his seat on the bench.

A successor will have to be found, but as the long court vacation is at hand, no new Lord Chief Justice will have to be nominated until October, and then, no matter how often the Tory press has predicted that Mr. Asquith would never dare do, he will nominate Sir Rufus Isaacs for the vacant position.

And no one of any importance will say a word against the appointment, for in all England there is no man more fit to hold this high office than the present Attorney General. In a month or two all the artificial indignation stirred up by the Marconi affair will have completely disappeared.

Premier to Keep Post.

I can assure my readers, on the very best authority, that Mr. Asquith has not the slightest intention of leaving the political arena now, and everybody who knows him knows that this is so.

The statesman who, in face of unexampled difficulties, passed the Parliament act is not going to leave his post until the fruits of that great measure are garnered.

A distinguished colleague of Mr. Asquith's in the present Cabinet said a few weeks ago: "Loyalty is one of the brightest jewels in the crown of the Prime Minister's character." That loyalty will not be wanting to the Liberal party at this juncture in its fortunes. There is also a loyalty that a man owes to himself, and Mr. Asquith must feel that it is incumbent on him to see that the machine which he fashioned in the Parliament act is capable of doing its work.

Earl's Money to Buy Mother Home

Markham Girl to Spend Heart Balm

THE most recent photograph of Daisy Markham, the English actress, and a remarkable photograph of a clerk at work in the Bank of England, weighing out the $250,000 which the Marquis of Northampton paid to Miss Markham to settle her breach of promise suit.

Intends To Provide Her Parent With Handsome Income From Breach of Promise Suit.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Lovely Miss Daisy Markham declares she will expend much of the $250,000 the young Marquis of Northampton, former Earl of Compton, paid to her to settle the breach of promise suit in buying a residence for her mother, and in providing an income for her.

A quarter of a million is the largest sum ever paid in England in such a suit, but the Marquis of Northampton inherited a great fortune at his father's death, and one of the largest pieces of property in London owned by any one proprietor.

Well Known in America.

Miss Markham is well known in New York, where she was last seen with the Wyndham Company, as Elaine Shrimpton in "The Case of Rebellious Susan." She averred in bringing the suit that on April 21, 1912, the then Lord Compton verbally promised to marry her, and on October 12, 1912, refused to keep his promise.

Miss Markham wrote to Lord Compton after he broke off their engagement. She addressed him as "Dearest Darling Bim," and after pleading against his decision, said:

I would rather have you, Bim, dear, and live in a little cottage than have all your wealth and estates and live without you.

He replied, telling his love and despair. Miss Markham's lawyers regarded this letter as their most effective weapon in the suit. Here are some expressions in it:

I might just write you a line, as I am feeling so miserable.

I am going to ask you to believe I have always and do at the present moment love and respect you more than anyone in the world, and that you are absolutely my ideal of perfect womanhood.

Ways of World Hard.

But, Daisy, the ways of the world are hard, and I want you to believe that what I am now doing I am doing from a sense of duty, genuinely believing it to be the best for both of us.

Daisy, you don't know how those so-called ladies (of his own rank) would treat you, and I really could not bear to see you suffering it. And with your sweet, sensitive nature it would be torture to you. Oh, if only I could escape from my position! BIM.

GERMANY MAD TO BEAT U.S. IN 1916 OLYMPIC

Thousands of Young Men Are Striving For Places on Team to Represent Empire.

By STEVEN BURNETT.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Americans, who after their triumph in Stockholm last year may think that they will only have to come over here to repeat the same thing at the Berlin Olympic games in 1916 had better look to their laurels in time, for all Germany is possessed by a craze for sport.

All over the country thousands and thousands of young men are patiently drilling almost every day in all the branches of sport and from among all these the most promising athletes will be chosen a year from January next and during the following fifteen months up to the very time of the great international contest all the young men selected will be absolutely in the hands of autocratic trainers who will bring them as close as possible to absolute perfection. The expenses of this long training will willingly be borne by enthusiastic lovers of sports all over the country.

Craze for Sport Increases.

To a certain extent Germany has always been a sport-loving country. Its "turnvereins," which are so well known in every city in America, where a German colony exists, are older than any similar associations in Europe, but of late the craze for sports has reached proportions unknown in any other country in the world.

This renaissance of athletics is in the first place due to the Kaiser personally who has encouraged sport from the day of his accession and his pride was certainly justified when he said in his speech at a regatta the other day that there are more than 50,000 oarsmen in Germany belonging to more rowing clubs than in all the rest of Europe together.

It is indeed true that there is a colossal development of sport in Germany.

Polo Gains Popularity.

Games which never before had a foothold are springing into widespread popularity. Polo is a case in point. This sport is officially prohibited in the army by order of the Emperor, who still thinks that the physical dangers involved for officers are wholly out of proportion to any benefits to be derived.

Yet a group of gentlemen riders and other enthusiasts have just laid out at the new "garden city" of Frohnau, to the northeast of Berlin, a polo field and clubhouse, with a series of tennis courts, golf links, rifle and archery ranges, croquet grounds and everything else conducive to the cultivation of outdoor life.

LIGHT ON COCAS TREASURE SHED BY TAR'S WIDOW

Irishwoman Declares usband Was Mate of Ship Which Carried Gold to Hiding Place.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Mrs. Bridget McGowan, a widow living in the West of Ireland, has written to a London newspaper that her husband was third officer of the Peruvian bark Mary Pio (Holy Mary), which conveyed the "Cocos Island treasure" from Lima to Cocos Island in 1855, in order to prevent it from falling into the hands of Chilean invaders.

This is the first time in the voluminous literature of the Cocos treasure question that some person has appeared who claims to have been acquainted personally with any member of the crew of the treasure ship. It also indicates an entirely new history of the treasure.

The accepted story of all the treasure hunters hitherto has been that the incident took place in 1825, when the Spanish colonies revolted from the mother country, and the Spanish loyalists of Lima, in order to save their valuables from the invading Peruvian patriots, chartered a British ship called the Mary Deer to remove the treasure to Cocos Island.

Mrs. McGowan declares that the Mary Pio, with a crew of 36, conveyed the treasure to Cocos Island and buried it in four caches.

The ship was wrecked in a hurricane off Cocos, and only three of the crew reached the shore.

One was the writer's husband; the other two, an Englishman and a Welshman, died afterward on the island from eating poisonous berries.

The third mate survived and retained a map of the location of the four caches, in which five tons of gold were hidden.

His widow says that 30 years ago he gave the map to a man who is still living. She adds that an exact copy of that map is still extant and is well preserved.

Marvelous Star of Ice Ballet Gives Berlin Thrills

By ALAN DALE.

Special Correspondence of The Sunday American.

BERLIN, July 19.—If you can imagine Pavlova with all her wiles, witcheries and Baccahanalian abandon, leaping, bounding, pirouetting and rotating on ice skates, you may have some faint idea of the amazing and beautiful Charlotte Oelschlager—known in Berlin as "Little Charlotte"—whom I saw last night in the finest entertainment I've viewed on this side of the pond—the ice ballet by Leo Barteuschek, at the Admiral's Palast.

Everything that an agile and almost supernaturally graceful Terpsichorean artist can do with daintily slippered feet little Charlotte does with tiny, glittering ice skates on her diminutive tootsies. The effect of it is positively bewildering. The smooth, gliding and velvety sensation of the ice sheet is absolutely unlike anything that the ordinary dancer has to offer, and the astounding versatility of the skaterine—who can do more on the knives of skates than Pavlova can do without them (and I make that statement unhesitatingly)—compels a rapt attention.

Little Charlotte is an awfully pretty girl.

She has long, blonde, un-wiggy hair, that in the dazzling light shed upon the huge ice arena of the Admiral's Palast, looks like spun silk; she owns a fascinating smile quite unlike the smirk that won't come off, so popular with the average dancing lady, and she has youth, effervescence and a sort of untrammeled gayety of manner that are positively irresistible. She is thin, supple, lissome and—perfectly astonishing. I take off my hat to her.

She is the finest artist of her kind that I have seen, and Berlin loves her. After viewing the work last night, I had the cozy, comfortable, well-satisfied sensation that an astonishing feat always induces. I felt glad that I had come to Berlin, for neither in Paris nor in London is there anything faintly to compare with the fascination of little Charlotte. If her nationality were otherwise, I should glory in calling her little Charlotte russe!

She appeared in the big ice ballet called "Flirtation in St. Moritz." It takes place on the large, glassy sheet of ice at the Admiral's Palast, with scenic effects at one end. It is in three acts with a story.

The entire cast of nine principals and a huge "chorus" of servants, geishas, Japanese dancers and supernumeraries are all on skates! Their evolutions at first amaze you, then, as you grow accustomed to them, they delight you and arouse a sort of titillating enthusiasm.

There are three acts of this ice-pageant, one called "Winter Sport at St. Moritz," the second "A Soiree in a Hotel de Luxe" and the third a "Japanese Festival." In the second, all the skaters and skating principals wear gorgeous evening gowns, as handsome as anything even America could desire, and in the Japanese scene they are all kimonoed and Japanesed in the most bewildering riot of colors. Dazzling calcium is shed over the proceedings, and—well, it is a sensation.

The best of it all is that you are dining at the Admiral's Palast. All around the magnificent and imposing ice field are tables where all the Berlinese dine and drink their beloved beer. It is not elaborately expensive, as such a thing would be in America. You pay your 50 or 60 cents for a seat, and your dinner is less costly than it would be at an ordinary restaurant.

And, believe me, it is in this moderation, this ungrasping catering to the multitude, that the success of such a giant scheme as the Admiral's Palast lies.

But the ice ballet of itself is a marvel. In addition to little Charlotte, who danced with a sort of Mordkin, called Max Feist—on skates—there was the gorgeous Dallerup, whose pyrotechnical skating made one dizzy. And there was Harry Paulsen. There were episodes on skis that was delightful; there were humorous incidents; there were Marcelines and big bears, and food not only for adults but for children. Not once did "Flirtation in St. Moritz" drag. The unexpected was always happening. One felt like the song that chirps "What Is Coming, Who Shall Say?" The whole thing was a joy.

One dines slowly and epicureanly in the German style. There is no gulping of food or rushing of drink. One takes one's time, sitting round that gorgeous ice field, which is cool and delicious, and quite unlike the feverish atmosphere one finds in most crowded resorts. All along the balcony were hundreds of diners in small reserved private boxes, but all the dining and wining (or beer-ing) never once interfered with this exultant ice ballet.

That gripped one, and dinner was really nothing more than a gastronomic accompaniment. Imagine the Madison Square Garden filled with people dining around its arena, and you may get some faint idea of the imposing Admiral's Palast.

But "Little Charlotte" was the benign star of it all, and throughout there wasn't one solitary note of ragtime! Not one!!

STRANGE JEWEL FROM EGYPT IS IN ENGLISH HOME

Excavation Party in Tomb Unearths Pharaoh Toy and Its Wonderful History.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—A jewel with a wonderful history was the feature of the Royal Society's conversazione at Burlington House recently.

It is of carnelian, lapis lazuli and turquoise and was made by order of the Pharaoh of Upper Egypt 3,400 years before the birth of Christ.

The Pharoah gave it to one of his court favorites, and when the latter died it was buried with him in his magnificent tomb at Gerzeh, some forty miles away from modern Cairo. A body-snatcher of ancient Egypt broke open the tomb of the dead favorite of Pharaoh.

For once, poetic justice—an institution which flourished even in Egypt—came into operation. The heavy slabs that formed the roof of the tomb fell on the thief and crushed him flat.

Then the wind came, and with it the sand; and year by year the ruined tomb was buried deeper, so that it lay for centuries hidden in the desert.

Last March, Professor Flinders Petrie and his excavating party found it. The fallen roof and the crushed body of the thief told their own tale, and the excavators were encouraged to look for what they knew the thief had not been able to take away with him. And so at last they found the beautiful jewel at which a court artificer had wrought, perhaps for years, 50 centuries ago. It was inspected here with deep curiosity.

London Women Take 'Railwaymen' Jobs

Great Western Road Is Making Experiment of Employing Them as Car Cleaners.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—The Great Western Railway Company is making the novel experiment of employing women as "railwaymen," a number of women being engaged as carriage cleaners in the London district.

The innovation is strongly resented by the members of the National Union of Railwaymen, who fear that this is merely the first move in a general attempt to substitute female for male labor.

Protest meetings are being organized and the head office of the National Union of Railwaymen has been asked to take the matter up.

Women are largely employed as railway coach cleaners on the Continent.

City of Paris Makes Money on Art Show

"Municipal Operation" of Exhibition Is Tried in New Field With Great Success.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—The city fathers have just concluded an interesting and very successful experiment in "municipal operation." The city fathers took it into their heads to give the people an artistic treat and organized an exhibition of the works of David, the celebrated artist.

The exhibition lasted 53 days and was a great success, not only artistically, but also from a financial viewpoint.

The city of Paris made money out of it, although 25,000 persons were admitted free every Sunday. On all other days an admission fee of 20 cents was charged. So numerous were the visitors that a handsome sum remains in the hands of the Municipal Council after paying all expenses.

Paris Bar Leader Frees Lady Macbeth

Henri Robert Proud of Fact He Acquitted Alleged Slayer of Duncan at Literary Trial.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—Henri Robert has been elected leader of the Paris Bar. He has freed more criminals than any lawyer living, and made his fame in the Dreyfus case. He is a Parisian of Parisians, having been born here 50 years ago.

Of all the case he has won, he says, his defense of Lady Macbeth has given him most pleasure. At a literary entertainment he undertook that defense and, to the minds of the listeners, proved that historical murderess to be innocent.

Few 'Gillies' Left On the Scotch Moors

Rich Americans Who Rent Highland "Shooting Boxes" Can't Find Guides to Trace Game.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Because of the recent boom in trade, rich manufacturers in the Midlands and in the North are tumbling over each other to obtain the best fishings and shootings in Scotland for the fall. As a rule, the best are snapped up by wealthy Americans, but the latter are much troubled by a great dearth of "gillies," as the keepers are called.

Hundreds of young "gillies" have emigrated to Canada; soon there will be none, and the millionaires will have to find their way alone about the deer forests and grouse moors.

For the season to date the number of Scotchmen who have gone to Canada is 24,500, but by the end of the season it will be well over 30,000.

PHONOGRAPHIC RECORDS MAILED ON CLOTH SQUARES

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—A new device for carrying on correspondence by phonograph has been introduced in Paris.

The record is made on a square of prepared cloth, which can be sent through the post in an envelope and is said to reproduce the voice with great accuracy. The cost of a complete outfit, including the machine for both transmitting and receiving messages and a supply of cloth squares, is from $50 to $60.

Balfour's Book in Big Demand in Britain

Applicants for Works of Former Premier at Library Invariably Told They Are "Out."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—The books of Arthur Balfour, former Prime Minister, are among the most widely read in London. At the annual general meeting of the London Library, over which Mr. Balfour presided, the Hon. Evan Charteris said that he had inquired at the library on numerous occasions for books written by Mr. Balfour, and was constantly told that they were "out." After waiting for some time and still being unable to secure the books at the library, he purchased a set for himself and recommended that another set be purchased for use in the library, as many others had had his experience in being told that the books were out.

CLOCK AT STATION HAS NEW NUMBERS, 13 TO 24

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—The clock in the facade of St. Lazare Station is to be the first in Paris to have the newly adopted official numerals of 13 to 24 for the hours after noon.

From 1 a. m. to 12 the figures 1 to 12 will appear on the dial. As noon strikes they will disappear and by an automatic arrangement the figures 13 to 24 will take their places.

English Crowded Out Of 'Dear Old London'

Everything in British Capital Now Is American, Even Language Spoken at Big Hotels.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—London has been so full of Americans this season that there was no longer room for Britishers, and many moved with their baggage to the contiguous islands, Guernsey, Jeddo and Herne. The shopkeepers still stayed on, however.

Parisian methods in the hotels are being ousted to give place to American dishes. Colored and alluring ads are tempting "our dear American friends" to buy and announcements are put up that "American is spoken here."

The English, in fact, are commencing to speak "American" quite intelligibly. This is being helped by the incursion of American dishes into the cuisine of the great hotels, which are now seeking to follow New York models.

London Women Are Now Smoking Cigars

Some of Fashionable Devotees of Nicotine Are Even Developing Fondness for Pipe.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—When woman soothes her nerves now with tobacco it is not a cigarette she chooses, but a cigar, if she wants to appear quite up to date. The majority of women nowadays smoke cigarettes, but the ultra modern members of the fair sex are taking to cigars—even pipes.

The pipe chosen especially for women is a little light wooden pipe called the "Bellque," which costs $1.

Pipes, however, are not so much "the vogue" at present as the cigar, and the favorite cigar which women smoke, it seems, is the La Florde Cuba. This is a long, thin cigar, which costs 50 cents in London.

Gamblers Hide in Convent During Raid

Men and Women in Evening Clothes Seen in Yard of Cloister by French Officers.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—When the police raided a suspected gambling den patronized by society folk, they found no one in the house after the doors had been broken down, but about 40 men and women in evening clothes were seen in hasty flight in the garden.

The gamblers scaled the garden wall and escaped into the grounds of the Sacred Heart Convent. Most of the fugitives made their way to the street, but a dozen of the ladies, it is said, remained in hiding in the garden of the convent throughout the night, departing quietly the next morning.

Kaiser Ends Feud With Lippe Family

Emperor of Germany in Bending Mood Patches Up Old Quarrel With Prince Frederick IV.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—The Kaiser is a strong man, noted for his friendships as for his enmities, and always a better man to deal with than to fight with, but he is just now in a bending mood.

Having patched up the old-time feud with the Cumberland family and made "a happy union" for his beloved daughter, he has magnanimously ended his feud of fifteen years with the ruling family of Lippe, one of the little principalities with which the German Empire is studded. He has recognized Prince Frederick IV of Lippe.

Deadly Gas Gun Is Refused by England

Inventor Makes Weapon Which Shoots Chemicals That Start Fire, Unextinguishable by Water.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Ernest Walsh, a young chemist of Hull, has invented a remarkable gas gun, which he has offered to the War Department.

His offer was refused without test or examination, and to-day he left for France to submit his invention on the invitation of the French authorities.

The gun, which represents his life's work, throws projectiles containing chemicals which set fire to anything they strike, the flames not being extinguishable by water.

PETRIFIED BODY OF GIANT OF PATAGONIA AUCTIONED

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—A petrified man was sold by auction in Paris recently.

The man lived some thousands of years ago in Patagonia. He was about 8 feet 6 inches in height. Though he is now a stone statue, the body bears traces of deep wounds. It is supposed that the man was killed and that his body was slowly changed to stone by the action of water charged with lime salts.

Amorous Suitor Has to Pay $250 Damages for Failing to Carry Out Osculatory Promise.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—"I send you a kiss for the tips of each of your little soft ears," and "if we are not married in a year I will resign myself to bachelorhood. At Swansea Court Miss Protheroe recovered $250 damages and costs for breach of promise.

Divine Sarah Now Domino Enthusiast

Madame Bernhardt Takes It to Heart When Beaten, so Opponents Generally Gracefully Lose.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—Madame Bernhardt, who spends her summer holidays at her home at Belle Isle, on the coast of the Bay of Biscay, has become very fond of the game of dominoes and usually plays after luncheon and after dinner. Although she is a poor player, she enjoys the game and is keenly disappointed when she loses.

Guests at Belle Isle have formed the habit of gracefully losing to the Divine Sarah, thus pleasing her vanity.

Her afternoons are spent in her studio, where she is modeling her tomb, which is to be placed on Belle Isle as a landmark for sailors.

Doctor's Boyish Face Reveals Skin Renewer

I heard the other day the story of the physician with so admirable a skin that all his women patients asked the secret. He told one, who generously told others, that, knowing the remarkable absorbent property of ordinary mercolized wax, he concluded this substance would make an excellent complexion renewer and preserver. Knowing the wax could not harm the skin, he began using it after shaving. He soon observed that the old, withered, colorless cuticle was being gradually absorbed and replaced by younger, healthier skin. This was the simple secret of the silver-haired doctor with the boyish face.

The secret became public property. Now women everywhere use mercolized wax, applying it nights like cold cream, washing it off mornings—continuing until the complexion is entirely renovated. An ounce of this wax, procurable at any druggist's, will banish the worst complexion.

Another valuable rejuvenator used by this doctor was a wrinkle-remover and preventive in the form of a face bath, made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half-pint witch hazel. This also has become famous. —Aurelia in Fashion Review.

Otherwise Most of Us Would Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and billousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Zim Says: 'Good Batter Slams Anything Pitched'

POSITION AT PLATE BIG FACTOR IN HITTING

Getting "All Set" Not Only Narrows "Swing" but Increases Risk of Being "Beaned."

HERE'S the second of the articles by Henry (Heinie) Zimmerman on "How to Hit the Ball." You can't wait for the pitcher to put one over to your liking, says the great Cub batter, for if you do it will be an accident if you get it.

By HENRY ZIMMERMAN.

One of the questions which is being constantly hurled at me is, "Heine, what would you rather hit?"

Of course every batter has his favorite ball and almost every batter has his weakness.

I would rather hit a curve ball than anything else. I prefer it to a fast one, and it certainly gives me more pleasure to hit at a hook than it does to swipe at a slow one. If the old days when you could call for what you wanted were in vogue I would address the pitcher in this way:

"Mr. Pitcher, please curve it; let it come over the plate along about my waist on the inside corner of the plate. Then instruct your left fielder to play deep."

That's my favorite, but it is also my impression that the batter who is wise won't wait for his favorite. Because the moment the pitcher discovers what you like he feeds you the opposite. It's only by accident that you get what you like, and since all the pitchers know what I prefer I have no hesitancy in telling the public.

Doesn't Pay to Wait for Favorite Ball

I never could figure why a man who likes to hit and who wants to hit is so particular about the kind of a ball he swings at. It's my honest and candid opinion that more base hits are made off balls which would be called "balls" by the umpire than off those which cross the plate between the knees and the shoulders.

Wagner gets lots of base hits on wild pitches. They tell me that Lajoie in the American League makes a practice of getting doubles and triples on balls that are as high as his head.

It certainly has been my experience that I could hit safely almost anything I could touch. There's a reason for this, too. The position at the plate and the weight of the bat used has a lot to do with this.

They say that Wagner is awkward at the plate. His position may not be graceful, but it is one of the best in the league. If you will notice he simply lounges all over that plate. He is never set. The result is that he is prepared to hit anything.

Get "All Set," but Can't Hit the Ball

Contrast his position with that of some of the other fellows. They go up there, dig a hole for their right foot if they be right-hand hitters and get set. They are planted to take an awful wallop at the ball. But they are in no position to hit a fast curve, for instance.

They also are always taking the chance of being "beaned." That's true, for the reason that they are set, they are rigid, they can't get out of the way of a ball that breaks at the last moment and starts for their head.

Many a man has been hit by a pitched ball for the reason that he set himself to swing. The best way is to be up there lounging like Wagner. Then you are in position to step forward and meet the ball. You also are in position to swing at the fast breaking ones. You are running mighty little chance of being "beaned."

Speaking of the weaknesses of batters it's my opinion that Wagner has the most peculiar of any man in the game. It's no use to try to fool him on a curve. You can't. It's just as useless to try a fast one. He'll pound that, regardless of where it is pitched. He cares nothing for a spitter and a change of pace means nothing but a fattening of his batting average.

Ball That Fools Wagner.

Jimmy Archer tells me that when the pitcher must pitch to Wagner, when it is in the pinch, he signals for one square over the heart of the plate, with nothing but speed on it. Archer says that Wagner will do less with this than he will if you try to fool him, and Mordecai Brown used to do the same thing.

Since Wagner and Lajoie have been compared for years and years perhaps it would not be wrong for me to say here that Archer says that the two men are alike in their weaknesses and that Lajoie can do less with the ball which most batters like than he can with the hooks, the slow ones, the fast one with the hop. Archer knows, for the reason that he caught in the American League.

The size of the bat has a lot to do with it. I want one of medium size, say 40 ounces. I'm strong enough to swing the kind that Chief Meyers does. But I couldn't get as many hits. The way the pitchers curve them on you nowadays a man must have something in his hand that he can swing at the last instant and swing hard and true.

I wouldn't like to say that the average batter swings a club that is too heavy. But in my opinion any time that a bat feels the least bit heavy it is too heavy and should be discarded for a lighter one.

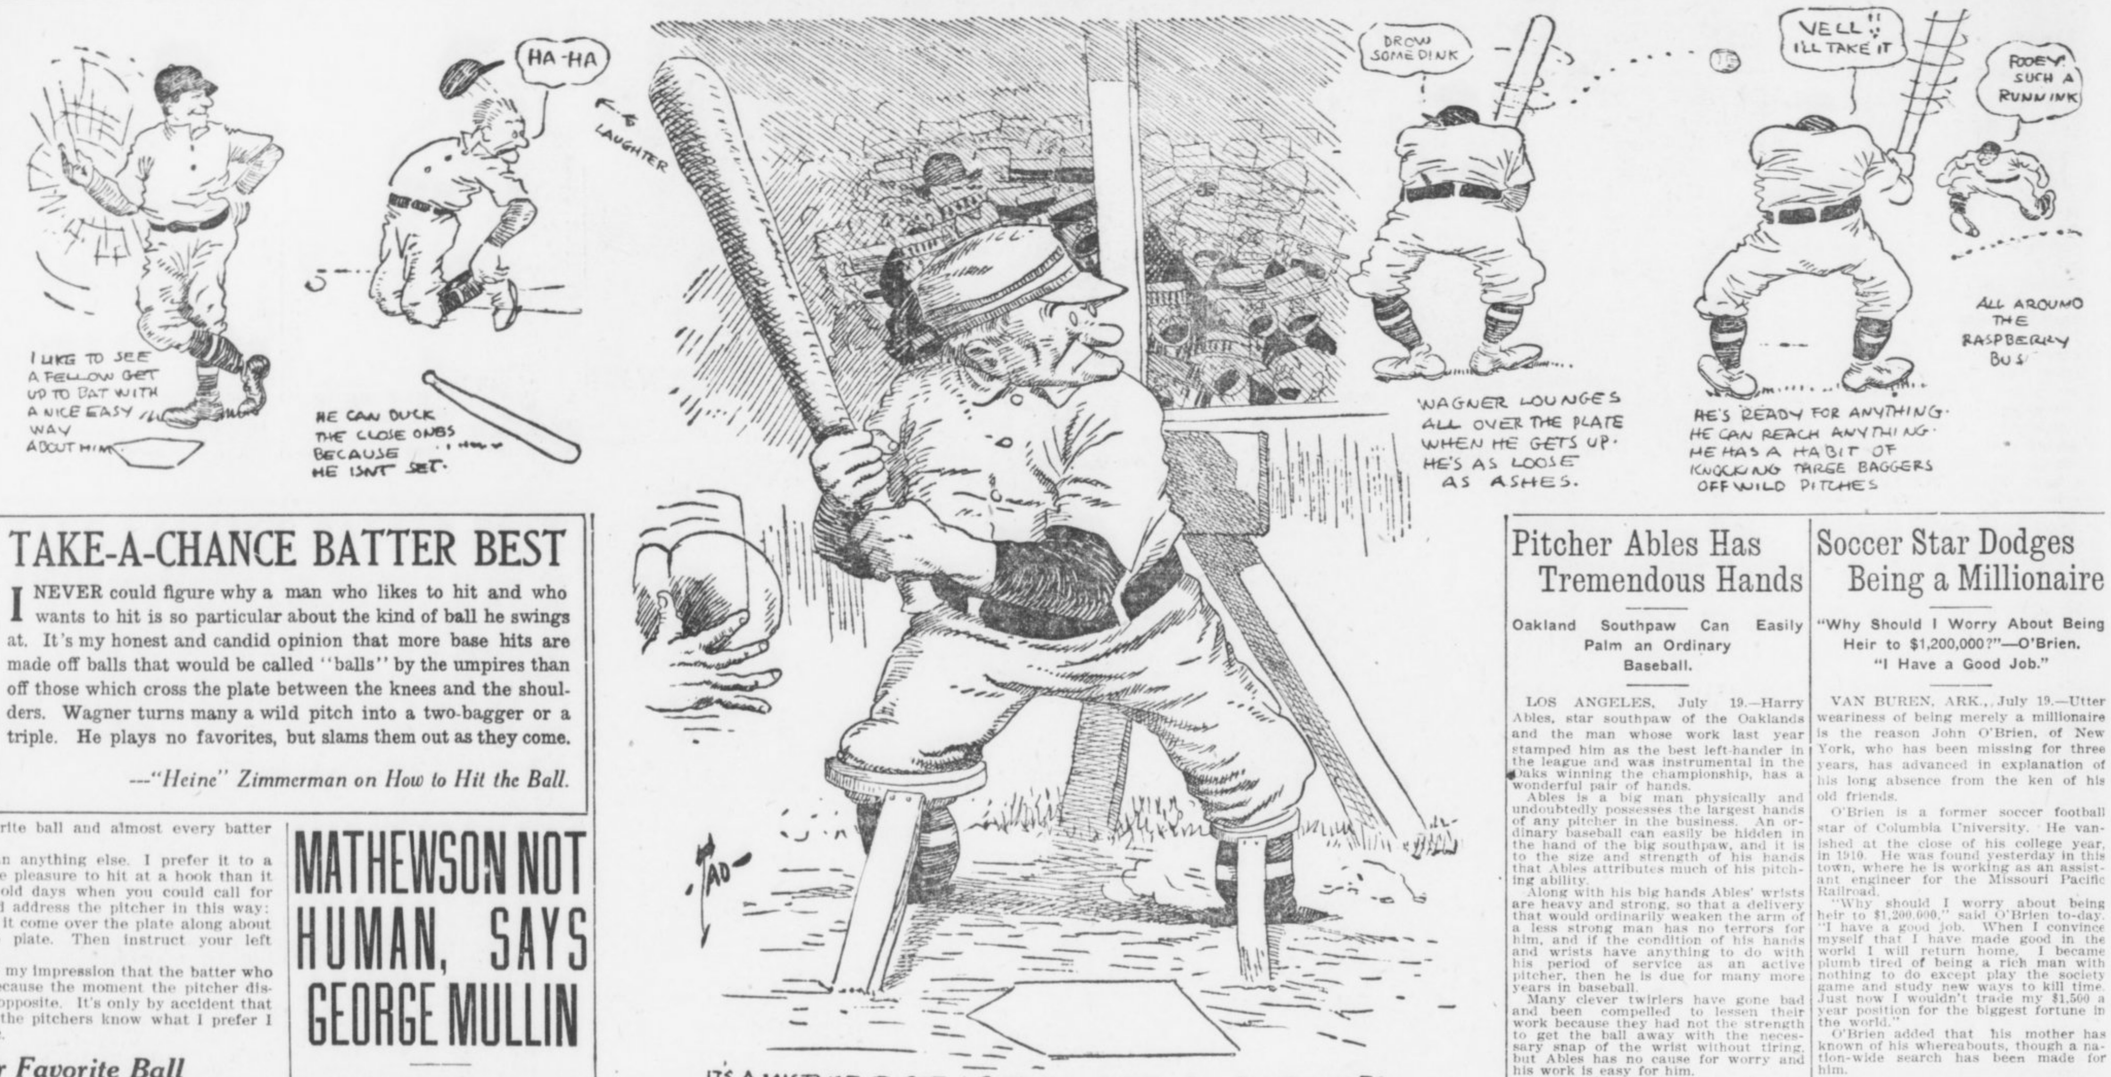
FINED, HE JOINS FEDERALS.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 19.—Outfielder Roy Keener was fined $50 by Manager Burke, of Fort Wayne, because he would not go into the box to finish a game. He jumped and joined the Indianapolis Federals.

ASHMORE IS MILLIKIN COACH.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., July 19.—James N. Ashmore has been appointed professor of the athletic course at the James R. Millikin University for the coming year. Ashmore has been with the Millikin Institution for several years and his reappointment gives general satisfaction to the student body.

TAD MAKES IT CLEAR THAT HEINE HAS RIGHT DOPE ON ART OF SLUGGING 'EM OUT



TAKE-A-CHANCE BATTER BEST

I NEVER could figure why a man who likes to hit and who wants to hit is so particular about the kind of ball he swings at. It's my honest and candid opinion that more base hits are made off balls that would be called "balls" by the umpires than off those which cross the plate between the knees and the shoulders. Wagner turns many a wild pitch into a two-bagger or a triple. He plays no favorites, but slams them out as they come.

MATHEWSON NOT HUMAN, SAYS GEORGE MULLIN

Says "Big Six" Will Never "Go Back" and Is the Wonder of Baseball.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The other afternoon I met George Mullin walking along Broadway, alone. It was a day or so before the announcement came that he had been released to Montreal in the International League. Mullin was deep in thought when I spied him ahead of me. He was lost so far that he jumped when I touched him on the shoulder.

"How goes it, George?" I asked.

"Sliding back by degrees," he said, with a half smile. "But I am working hard to make the slide as slow as possible. But," he went on, "I suppose it comes to all of us in time, excepting that fellow Mathewson—and he isn't human."

"Don't you think it will ever come to him?" was asked.

"Doesn't look like it. Why, that fellow is now the oldest pitcher in either league—that is, he has been at it longer. Still, here he is in his thirteenth year and leading all pitchers! What is his record?"

"He has won seventeen and lost five, I believe."

* * *

"THERE you are. Now, how does he do it? Four years ago some of the Cub players told me he was losing his stuff, but, somehow, he manages to keep winning.

"I'll tell you," said Mullin, "I believe he runs himself just like he does his automobile. He uses just enough gasoline to get in the lead, and when he strikes the down grade he shuts it off and coasts. I guess my trouble is that I used up too much gasoline before I thought of it."

* * *

THIS theory of Mullin's is borne out by the members of the Giant infield, who begin to tremble the minute Matty gets a good lead. Once in front, Six puts the first ball over and lets the batters hit it where they may. Line drives shoot all around the diamond until men get on bases, and then the Old Master tightens up—turns on more gasoline.

"If you don't stop that, Matty," Grover Hartley said to the star pitcher the other day after a close game, "you are going to get some of those infielders killed." Matty didn't take very kindly to that suggestion, but the very next day Larry Doyle was knocked down by a line drive just after the Giants had a five-run lead on the Phillies, and Fletcher narrowly escaped having his leg shot off.

A. A. U. Bars Mixed Swimming Meets

Protests Entered Against Girls Being Allowed to Compete Against Men In Races.

NEW YORK, July 19.—James E. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, and the chairman of the National Registration Committee, has sent a hot letter to E. C. Brennan, of the American Life Saving Society.

It was reported to the A. A. U. that Brennan was giving mixed swimming events, and that is something the A. A. U. officials will never countenance. They do not want to see the girls made "public characters," and they want to protect the young women and not to degrade them by competition against men in the same tank.

In this stand Sullivan is backed by the entire A. A. U. as well as the New York Board of Education, of which he is a member. If the girls and women are to have more extended competition than they have now, the A. A. U. men say they should have associations of their own for protection, that they should compete only among themselves, and not against boys or men.

SAYLOR TO BOX ON COAST; PLANS BOUTS WITH STARS

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 19.—In an effort to land his new protege, Milburn ("Young") Saylor, at the top of the lightweight heap, Ray Bronson is planning an early invasion of the Pacific coast.

Western promoters are dickering with Bronson for a bout on Labor Day between Saylor and Leach Cross, "Harlem Tommy" Murphy, Bud Anderson or Joe Rivers. Bronson says he is anxious to match with any one of the four.

In his last bouts Saylor knocked out "Battling" Kelly, a welterweight, in four rounds, then stopped "Battling" Terry, a Pittsburg welter, in three rounds.

OLDRING AND BENDER ARE BIG HELP TO ATHLETICS

PHILADELPHIA, PA., July 19—What a remarkable difference it makes in a ball player when he displays interest in his work and takes the proper care of himself is plainly demonstrated in the improvement Rube Oldring and "Chief" Bender of the Philadelphia Athletics, are showing this season over last. It is not a secret that neither of these players buckled down to real work last season.

Manager Mack found it necessary to suspend them both, and when they came into the fold this year it was under a contract which controls their conduct by means of having the amount they are to draw in salary fluctuate. The result is that both are delivering the goods in real shape this season.

CLABBY AND HICKS WILL MEET IN RETURN MATCH

DETROIT, MICH., July 19.—Freddie Hicks, the local middleweight, has been matched to meet Jimmy Clabby at Butte, August 3. Hicks has met the Hammond boxer, tackling him at his home town in a ten-round bout, and getting a sound lacing. This match will be over the same route.

LYNCH WILL MANAGE SPOKANE.

SEATTLE, July 19.—Mike Lynch left for Vancouver, B. C., last night to take the management of the Spokane Northwestern League club, which has been disorganized and playing badly. Lynch was released by Victoria for the purpose of strengthening Spokane, it being considered that the condition of Spokane was injuring the whole league. The Victoria team will still present a strong line-up.

'SMOKY JOE' IS ADJUDGED THE SLOWEST TWIRLER

THE Philadelphia Evening Telegraph has discovered the slowest pitchers in the world. Here is how it described a recent game in which they performed:

"Smoky Joe" Wood and "Waco Bill" Taff, little brothers of the box, can outpoint any tortoise that ever crawled for studied deliberation, for deliberate languor and for general sleepiness when in the performance of their duties.

This is not a slam at the usefulness and the worth of either twirler. Both "get there" just as did the turtle in the fable. But aeons and aeons pass between their departure and their arrival, and meanwhile suppers grow cold at home and wifey remembers that he never thought of ball games while he was courting her and that it's very funny, anyhow, that he should come home in the dusk every time he goes to the grounds.

Wood, however, has even Taff outclassed. During the ninth inning recently he averaged more than 40 seconds to every pitch. Any self-respecting moving picture machine would burn out its bearings before it could be run slow enough to catch him at work. There is a popular tradition in a Boston newspaper office that one camera man got an action picture of Wood, but this seems unlikely.

Wood combines his loitering with speed only excelled by Walter Johnson. He winds up like an old-fashioned watch, swinging his arms slowly. Watching him makes every one want to yawn. Then he untangles himself suddenly while the batter, who by this time has also the hookworm complaint, is nodding drowsily. Whish—goes a streak over the plate, whereupon Umpire Ferguson calls it a ball. If the whish thing goes a foot inside, outside, into the rubber plate or ten feet in the air, Ferguson impartially calls it a strike. The main thing is that the batter rarely meets the ball.

Assuming that the ball has gone somewhere near the catcher, this procedure is then enacted. The backstop snaps the ball to Wood, who has run up to within a few feet of the plate, and who is usually inquiring kindly whether Ferguson's astigmatism is congenial if acquired. J. Wood grabs the ball with his gloved hand in a rather petulant way and carries it tenderly back to the hill. Instead of stopping at the box, he ignores it entirely and wanders five or six yards behind it.

From this vantage point he looks at the catcher, critically, craining his head hither and yon. Perhaps something in the grandstand attracts his attention. Joe promptly develops great interest in it. Roused to a sense of duty by the acrid tones of the infielders, Wood finally begins the march back to the box. Hastily counting the fans in the left bleachers, he adds up those in the right. Having exhausted everything else of interest, he puts his spiked shoes fairly in the box and begins to swing his arms. After a few seconds he warms up to the work and lets the ball drive.

Joe takes an unfair advantage of the batters by this method. Strong men in the grandstand and bleachers snored raucously after watching him for an inning. Rube Oldring pinched himself urgently once or twice while at the plate to make certain that he was still awake. All Wood needs to be the best pitcher in the world is a crooning kind of lullaby to match his actions. Then the ball park would be an excellent sanitarium for sufferers from insomnia. Even without the lullaby Joe is still some shakes of a twirler.

Pitcher Ables Has Tremendous Hands

Oakland Southpaw Can Easily Palm an Ordinary Baseball.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Harry Ables, star southpaw of the Oaklands and the man whose work last year stamped him as the best left-hander in the league and was instrumental in the Oaks winning the championship, has a wonderful pair of hands.

Ables is a big man physically and undoubtedly possesses the largest hands of any pitcher in the business. An ordinary baseball can easily be hidden in the hand of the big southpaw, and it is to the size and strength of his hands that Ables attributes much of his pitching ability.

Along with his big hands Ables' wrists are heavy and strong, so that a delivery that would ordinarily weaken the arm of a less strong man has no terrors for him, and if the condition of his hands and wrists have anything to do with his period of service as an active pitcher, then he is due for many more years in baseball.

Many clever twirlers have gone bad and been compelled to lessen their work because they had not the strength to get the ball away with the necessary snap of the wrist without tiring, but Ables has no cause for worry and his work is easy for him.

As the Coast League can boast a pitcher possessing the biggest hands, at the same time the player with the smallest hands is in the organization. Billy Kenworthy, of the Sacramento club, being barely able to grip a baseball. As Ables' hands are an aid to him, Kenworthy's short fingers are a detriment to him. Many a hard-hit drive that would be handled with ease by an ordinary fielder has to be handled with extraordinary care by the Sacramento star, as a baseball is to him as big as an indoor baseball would be in the hands of the big Oakland southpaw.

Soccer Star Dodges Being a Millionaire

"Why Should I Worry About Being Heir to $1,200,000?"—O'Brien. "I Have a Good Job."

VAN BUREN, ARK., July 19.—Utter weariness of being merely a millionaire is the reason John O'Brien, of New York, who has been missing for three years, has advanced in explanation of his long absence from the ken of his old friends.

O'Brien is a former soccer football star of Columbia University. He vanished at the close of his college year, in 1910. He was found yesterday in this town, where he is working as an assistant engineer for the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

"Why should I worry about being heir to $1,200,000," said O'Brien to-day. "I have a good job. When I convince myself that I have made good in the world I will return home. I became plumb tired of being a rich man with nothing to do except play the society game and study new ways to kill time. Just now I wouldn't trade my $1,560 a year position for the biggest fortune in the world."

O'Brien added that his mother has known of his whereabouts, though a nation-wide search has been made for him.

WENT WITHOUT MEALS TO LEARN NATIONAL GAME

Hughie High, Tigers' Young Recruit, Has Fought Hard to Make a Success.

THIS is a story of a young man who literally would rather play baseball than eat.

You often have heard people use the expression that they preferred something else to taking their meals, but when it comes to a showdown they probably were not slow in lining up for the march to the dining room. There is one member of the Detroit Tigers, however, who repeatedly has missed his supper in order that he might have more time to devote to the national pastime.

Hughie High is the name of this athlete who found more pleasure in playing baseball on an empty stomach than in doing anything else after a feast. Not only did he endure the pangs of hunger in order to engage in the sport, but assimilated many a parental licking for cutting his meals besides.

Mr. High is what might be termed a persevering person. When he makes up his mind to do anything he just naturally goes and does it. Until this particular object is accomplished he is deaf, dumb and blind except where hearing, speaking or seeing will help him to attain that which he desires. It so happens that he was bitten by a baseball germ early in life and from that time on his world has revolved around the game.

* * *

THE little fellow was not fortunate enough to be able to devote his entire attention to baseball, however. His parents decided that he had to be useful and ornamental at the same time, so he went to work learning the plumber's trade. Just why he selected this occupation when there were so many openings for good burglars and porch climbers is not apparent. Possibly he didn't like the idea of working nights and figured he could get just as much money and more regular sleep by holding people up the daytime by means of the pipe wrench and the molten lead.

St. Louis is High's home and also the scene of his plumbing endeavors. The pounders and faucet fixers of the Mound City work eight hours a day, as do most plumbers elsewhere. This gives them one hour for actual labor and seven for going back to the shop after their tools. Naturally, with eight hours sliced right out of the daylight, Mr. High did not have very much time left for ball playing, but he found that by passing up his supper he could get in about an hour's work on the lots in the baseball months.

Also he managed to quit half an hour earlier in the evening by taking only 30 minutes for dinner at noon instead of 60. Then, of course, Sundays and holidays he did not have to work, unless there was some special job, which meant overtime pay and more money to be spent for balls, bats and gloves.

* * *

THE young plumber played hard in the short time allowed him to enjoy the game and his proficiency attracted the attention of some of the Trolley Leaguers. Finally he attained the proud position of a member of one of the Trolley League clubs, and thereafter he lived just for the Sunday battles in that flourishing semi-professional circuit.

By this time his people had given up the idea of weaning him away from baseball, and instead of bestowing a licking on him whenever he missed supper they began to read the papers Monday morning to find out what Hugh had done in the Sabbath battles. They still predicted that he would come to no good end, but were glad, since he insisted on being a ball player, that he was a good one.

After a couple of seasons in the Trolley League he was signed by the Hartford club, in the Connecticut League, where he played in 1911 and 1912, joining the Tigers from that outfit last fall.

He still works at the plumbing business in the fall and winter months and holds a union journeyman's card.

When not learning to wipe joints or swipe the ball, Hughie managed to find time to give himself a fair education. He attended night grade school and night high school after it grew too dark to see the horsehide, and in the cold months when there was no outdoor pastiming, and was so conscientious with his lessons that he makes a very creditable appearance in conversation. In fact, he has often been taken for a college man. The little outfielder declines to be worried about the prospect of his being beaten to the Tigers' utility job by Ray Powell.

* * *

"IF Powell can beat me I'll be the first one to congratulate him," said Hugh. "He is a fine ball player and a fine fellow, and there will be no hard feeling on my part whichever way our fight for a regular job with the Detroit club may turn out. I know that I still have a lot to learn about baseball, and if I am sent to the International League to learn I will not be a bit sore. I'll try my best to make good wherever they shift me, and by doing that may be able to get another chance in the big league next year.

"I am young and have plenty of time, and should I fail to make good I will not be discouraged. It is a big jump from the Connecticut to the American League, or even to the International, and whichever way things come out I am sure of a better job at a better salary than I had last season."

HARVARD TEAMS SHOWED STRONG IN ATHLETICS

Wearers of Crimson Captured Four College Championships for 1912-1913.

BOSTON, MASS., July 19.—The wearers of the Harvard crimson excelled on the intercollegiate athletic field for the academic year of 1912-13. Out of sixteen possible athletic championships the men from Cambridge won four outright and divided honors for the fifth. Harvard triumphed in football, cross-country running, hockey and association football, in addition to dividing the lacrosse title with Johns Hopkins.

Since Johns Hopkins declined the Harvard challenge to play off the tie for the lacrosse title this might reasonably be awarded to Harvard, but when the Harvard challenge reached Baltimore the Southern team had disbanded and was under no obligation to play off the tie.

The University of Pennsylvania scored first in three championships and therefore ranks second to Harvard, with Yale, Cornell and Princeton tied with two championships each. For purposes of computation each championship is regarded as a single point, which would make the score of the eight universities figure as follows: Harvard, 4 1-2; Pennsylvania, 3; Yale, 2; Princeton, 2; Cornell, 2; Syracuse, 1; Columbia, 1; Johns Hopkins, 1-2.

Poor Year for Yale.

Not only did Harvard win outright more championships than any of its rivals, but the Crimson athletes finished second in one of the major sport championships they did not win, besides making a uniformly high record in the many minor sports. In rowing Harvard certainly deserves to rank third, while in track atletics its team did finish second. In baseball the Crimson beat Yale in two out of three games, and while the championship of the diamond is given to the Blue on the season's record, the Crimson deserves to rank second or third. As a further distinction for Harvard, the Crimson beat Yale in three out of four major sports.

The Crimson won in football, baseball and rowing, leaving Yale supreme only on the track, but Harvard made some amends for this by beating out Yale in the I. C. A. A. A. A. track championships. It was a fat year for Harvard and a mighty lean one for Yale.

There isn't any room for dispute over the majority of the championship titles here awarded. In practically all of the minor sports there were associations which arranged schedules that left no doubt as to the competitor winning first place.

In the four major sports—football, baseball, rowing and track athletics—this was possible only in track athletics, but in the three others the supremacy of the teams to which the honor is awarded was sufficient to leave no room for dispute.

Harvard was entitled to the supremacy in football by virtue of going through the season undefeated and beating both Princeton and Yale in decisive fashion. This was a record such as no other team in the country made.

Brickley Football Hero.

There were two or three other teams which finished the season undefeated, but their opponents were not in Harvard's class. Harvard's 1912 eleven was one of the best combinations ever produced at Cambridge. It was an all-round team, excelling its opponents in every department of the game, whether punting, drop and place kicking, end running or line plunging.

At the same time there was one individual on the eleven who deserves to be immortalized in Harvard's football history. This was Charles Brickley, who, although only a sophomore, shone with the brilliancy of a Coy or a Poe.

UNUSUAL RULES AND PLAYS IN BASEBALL

NO. 2.

By J. W. Heisman.

IT is not generally understood by laymen that a player on either coaching line has no right, by the rules, to coach, or to say anything whatsoever, as long as there is no runner on base. All that he says is supposed to be in the nature of advice or instruction to base runners, and as long as there are none on the rule distinctly prohibits him from advising his batter, addressing the umpire, or quarreling with any member of the opposition. It's a pity that umpires do not enforce this rule better for its violation leads, in my opinion, to over half of the squabbles and fines that occur in the game.

Pitching Rules—The Position.

When he delivers the ball to the plate the pitcher must have one foot (the rear one) in contact with the pitcher's plate.

He must, at the instant of delivery, be squarely facing the batter.

He must not take more than one forward step, and both feet must be in front of his plate, or on a line with its front edge. He must not raise either foot until after he has started his delivery.

The Balk.

Not only spectators but a great many baseball experts are often puzzled as to whether a given case does or does not constitute a balk. This is not strange, for there are seven ways, by the rule, that a pitcher can employ to manufacture one of these little oddities—so rarely ever observed by Southern League umpires, even with good telescopes. The trouble is that while one is deciding in their own mind that in a certain delivery that the pitcher illustrated he did not violate this, that and the other canon of good form, we forget that very one remaining rule of the seven which he probably did break. Then, too, you can not positively describe the actions one may go through in throwing either to the plate or to a base, so specifically and definitely but that most any two men will see the pitcher's movements in different ways in case of an argument, and will differ radically as to whether those movements conformed to the rules or did not. Here they are, in brief—mull over them for yourself:

A pitcher makes a balk whenever he starts a wind-up (if he is in the box, has one foot in contact with the plate) and doesn't throw somewhere at the conclusion of that wind-up. If he is not in the box he can whirl his arms and bluff to throw all he pleases.

If he throws to any base to catch a runner he must simultaneously step out directly toward that base with one foot. And if he starts to throw to the plate or to first base he must go through with it and turn the ball loose toward the one place or the other. But he can bluff all he pleases to second and third and will not be penalized if he fails to let the ball go.

If the pitcher delivers the ball to the batter while not conforming to all of the rules regarding the position he should take in the box, he has, of course, committed a balk.

And if he holds the ball so long without delivering it somewhere, as, in the opinion of the umpire, to be unnecessarily delaying the game, he is in hot water again. And if he makes any motion whatever that is habitual with him in his manner of delivery without following that motion up with the ball he is clearly in contempt of court.

* * *

NOW section 7 of the balk rule says that he has also committed a FAUX PAS (French for foxy pass that didn't pan out right) whenever he makes any motion to pitch while standing in his position without having the ball in his possession. While this is true, "all right, all right," it has always puzzled me immensely why they don't go on and include here another way of violating good pitching manners that umpires will everywhere be shocked over, but which is not stated in the rule book anywhere. It is this: If you get in the pitcher's box without the ball in your possession you are committing a balk by that mere fact alone, and whether you mawe "any motion to pitch" or not.

* * *

I ONCE asked the lamented Harry Pulliam, then president of the National League, how he could construe this a balk when there was nothing specific in the rule book about it, and he replied that he simply construed such an act as PRIMA FACIE evidence of an intention to commit a balk. I regret to have to say that in my opinion this is no answer at all, for the simple reason that no pitcher ever has an INTENTION of committing a balk.

Just to hear what he would say, I once asked the same question of the great Mordecai Brown. He averred that the point was covered in the rule book. I handed him the book and asked him to kindly show me where it was. He looked and looked, but never found it, and had to give up the case except to remark that he knew well enough it was a balk all right, and so it is everywhere construed.

By the way, it is worth noting that a balk does not entitle the batter ever to his base, but only such runners as are already on base. With no runner on a pitcher may make all the balks he likes and nothing will happen.

It is perfectly possible, though, for a pitcher to have a very puzzling way of throwing either to home or to a base without one being able to tell for certain just where he is going to throw, and that without committing a balk. This is easier for left-handed men than for right-handers; but I have seen the latter kind who could so twist and distort their bodies at the waist, after starting a seeming delivery to the plate, that they were able to completely fool the first-base runner into starting for second, and who then succeeded in wrenching their left foot around so as to thrust it straight out toward first base after all and to squarely face that sack before compelled to turn the ball loose. In a case like this the pitcher has gone through, seemingly, with the motion so far toward a plate delivery that the runner has not thought it possible for him to change and get it to first base instead. Yet the pitcher has succeeded in doing that very thing, and has conformed to the requirements of a throw to first base as well. To do this he has had to so retard the final movements of his arm swing as to give himself time to step out toward first and to face it, and still have force and accuracy enough in the throw to get it there speedily; it is a very difficult thing to do. But it can be done, and that quite legitimately.

Mack and McGraw Will Set New Record if They Land This Year

Connie Mack and John McGraw are heading straight for two big league records. Should these rival managers succeed in piloting their teams to the pennant, all modern records will have been shattered, for nobody in these days of baseball has succeeded in annexing five championships for one club. McGraw has already won four for the Giants and Mack has corraled the same number for the Athletics.

Fred Clarke has landed four and Frank Chance, while managing the Cubs, came across with four, but no other big league leader can point to a record any way near that mark.

McGraw won his first pennant for New York in 1904, repeated in 1905 and then came back in 1911 and 1912. Mack's work has been every bit as clean-cut. He first landed a flag in 1902. Three years late, in 1905, he grabbed another, and then in 1910 and 1911 repeated.

CANADA REFUGE OF U. S. STEEL IF GUILTY AS TRUST

Infinite Possibilities Found in Perpetual Charter Just Given Corporation.

LOOPHOLE FOR DISSOLUTION

Gary Sets Example for His Brother Officers in Stratagem.

By BOERSIANER.

There are infinite possibilities in the letters patent just granted the United States Steel Corporation by the Canadian Government.

The grant is apropos of a $20,000,000 plant that the corporation means to build up there. But the charter, not the mill, is the thing. The license to do almost any kind of business is perpetual.

Under it, also, Mr. Gary and his associates may control all sorts of properties—including, of course, the Tennessee Company. Equally, of course, the Steel Corporation may recontract for the Great Northern Ore Company—an amount of raw material which it was difficult to believe Gary would relinquish.

The charter may be rendered significantly adaptable in other ways. Should the Government win the pending suit against the corporation—should the United States Supreme Court order a dissolution—the company might extinguish itself in the United States and operate under the foreign rights just accorded.

It is an idea that should comfort the corporation's security holders, especially the owners of the common and preferred stocks, who might be simply asked to exchange the certificates of the old corporation for stocks in the Canadian concern—if the worst befall in the court, or, indeed, in Congress; for the Canadian tariff differs from the schedule of imposts proposed by the bill under the Senate's consideration.

Manifestly Mr. Gary and his coadjutors have indulged in thought for over a year. Their cogitation has ultimated in the Canadian proposition—which may be made protective alike to the management and to the security holders.

Obviously, too, Gary is setting an example to his brother corporation managers who may say in defense that the lawmakers of the United States are driving industrial companies out of the country.

Whatever is done with the Canadian charter, it is certain that the Steel Corporation has in reservation a legal stratagem evasive, ingenious and no doubt perfectly effective.

New Canadian Charter Rouses Much Talk.

DETROIT, July 19.—The charter of the Canadian branch of the United States Steel Corporation, copies of which have been received here, grants that company an absolute monopoly of the Canadian steel business if the new concern desires to establish itself in control.

One section expressly grants the right to absorb any and all other companies engaging wholly or in part in the steel business. It may buy timber lands and engage in the manufacture of wooden products.

It may construct roads, build bridges and water transportation lines, with depots, docks and all other facilities for operation. It may own and operate electric and gas plants and telephone systems. It may build and own cars and, in fact, do everything except build railroads.

Few Sales of Iron at Present Prices

Southern Pig Held for $11 Per Ton. Stocks Will be Reduced in the Fall.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., July 19.—Southern pig iron now is being held for $11 per ton, and there are few sales being made. The market is far from being satisfactory, however, and the make is in excess of the demand. The manufacturers are not inclined to sell at the low prices that have been prevailing, and though reports are to be heard of $10.50 per ton iron, there are no orders.

The accumulated stocks of iron, estimated heretofore at 200,000 tons, should be cut down considerably during the third quarter of the year. At $11 per ton there is little profit on pig iron, and the furnace companies are said to be considering it better business to hold the iron rather than let it go out at the lower price.

Some of the companies selling special brand iron are not making concessions on the premium prices; for instance, the Alabama Company is not selling Clifton iron under $12 per ton. Special analysis iron is also commanding a special price. Charcoal iron commands more than $22.50 per ton and very little business is now being transacted for the reason that consumers are looking forward to a reduction in the quotations.

Curtailment of the production of pig iron in the Southern territory will be increased as the conditions of the market warrant it. The make in July will be considerably under what it was in June, during which month Alabama produced more than 163,000 tons of iron.

The steel plants are losing no time. There is a steady delivery of products, though reports have it that there is further reduction in unfilled orders. Following the announcement of the placing of an order for 18,000 tons of rail by the Southern and other railroads, it is learned that something like 20,000 tons of other shapes in steel are needed and will be ordered shortly in the Southern territory. Steel prices have shown but little changes lately, save as to wire.

Cast iron pipe is beginning to take on some activity.

Crossing Corn Strains Increases Yield From 30 to 150 Per Cent, Declare Experts

Remarkable Results Have Been Attained by Farmers Who Have Worked Long and Patiently on Hybridizing Grain. No More Acreage or Expense Entailed in New Scientific Method.

By CHARLES A. WHITTLE.

Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Think of from 30 to 150 per cent increase in yield as a result of crossing strains of corn! Is it not very much worth while for farmers to take notice? If even less than 30 per cent gain were made as a result, what an enormous gain to the farmer, and that, too, without more work, more fertilizer or greater acreage planted!

Since the year 1876 Professor W. J. Beal, of the Michigan Agricultural College, has been demonstrating the fact that the first generation of hybrids has increased yields of corn. More recently other demonstrators have shown, beyond peradventure, that from 30 to 150 per cent can be obtained from planting hybrids, or one-year crosses, over planting pure strains alone.

So high has been plied the testimony of facts that no one has a right to doubt. It remains only for the farmer to apply. This he can do with very little trouble. When the farmer does make use of this little trick which the scientist has taught him, his wealth in corn, his cost of fattening hogs or beef, will stand at a much more favorable figure than at present.

Vigor Only Temporary.

While working long and painstakingly on hybridizing or crossing corn, the scientists discovered important limitations and facts which it is well for the farmer to know if he is to make a success of his seed plats. The first of these is that while crossing adds vigor it is only temporary. The greatest increase in vigor is in the first generation crosses. While a greater yield can be obtained by planting the seed of the crosses or hybrids for two or three years than can be obtained from planting a single pure strain, yet the wiser policy would be to return to original strains after planting one crop of hybrid seeds. This means that for the first year the two strains can be planted together in the same row. This will increase the yield the first year, but when the seed from the cross or hybrid crop is planted, the subsequent crop will be still larger in yield and production of fodder.

Returning to the original strain after the hybrid seed has been used one year, of course can be easily done, if the farmer will maintain seed plats where the pure strains are kept separate from other strains.

Same Variety Should Be Used.

The second important fact about making crosses is that only unrelated strains of the same variety should be used and not two distinct varieties. Unrelated strains of the same kind of corn can be obtained from different parts of the State or from different States for crossing purposes. What one needs to be certain of, however, is that the seed he is obtaining from elsewhere has been kept pure. Reliable seed producers who know how to maintain a pure strain, of course, are to be looked to rather than to the indiscriminate grower for the strains in making a cross.

These two important facts are as essential to success as the main discovery of the effect of crossing. To keep planting the seed of a hybrid corn because it produced a large yield at one time, in the light of investigation, would prove foolish. This is too often a common practice of farmers.

Keep the pure strains strong and vigorous by seed selection and the hybrid fields will take care of themselves as to yields and stover. Any farmer can perfect his seed corn and add greatly to its yielding power by well-known methods of seed selection. The germination test is foremost as a means for determining the vigor and potential yielding power of the grains taken from a given ear of corn. Plant ten grains of corn from an ear in a sand box where moisture and proper temperature are maintained. In a few days the green sprouts will have appeared. Examine and see how many of the ten grains germinated.

If eight or nine did, the ear can be said to have strong germinating power, and that it can produce a thrifty, good yielding plant. The remainder of the ear can then be planted in the seed bed. If the seed plat is kept away from other plats that are growing different strains or varieties, then a strong, pure strain of corn is assured. To add to the strength of the pure strain, it is the custom of the seed breeder to detassle every other plant. This leaves the stalk that has been detasseled to be fertilized by another plant, rather than by itself.

Aids Production Power.

This has been shown to add to the producing power of the plant. The corn from the detassled stalks, of course, is the grain for planting in the seed plats next year. The seed from the stalks not detassled and all grain from the tasseled stalks which is not required for maintaining the seed plat, can be planted in the general field after being mixed with similar corn taken from another plat. Thus mixed a hybrid plant is produced of the greatest possible yielding power.

Thus is seen that it is no difficult matter to breed up strains of corn and to make hybrid crosses for largest field yields. Any farmer can do it. In fact, no other one can do it so well for a given farm as the farmer himself. When he grows his own seed he knows whether or not proper care has been taken to keep the strains pure and strong. He has also made use of strains of corn that have become adjusted to the climate, soil and conditions in general of the farm. In other words, he is taking fewest chances when he does all this work himself. And it is not a large amount of work. It requires very little time. The interest it will arouse as well as the yields it will increase will make of it a fascinating work for any intelligent farmer.

OCCASIONAL OBSERVATIONS

The late J. P Morgan's heart more than his head entered into his investments. So the detailed list shows. He did not leave one important block of either bonds or stocks. The veteran banker was not the Croesus that was popularly supposed. He was loyal to Hartford—its financial institutions, its insurance companies and even its carpet industries.

* * *

It will do no harm now to publish the fact that latterly Mr. Morgan's mania for buying all sorts of art and quasi-art treasures became so abnormal that his partners and his family had occasion for alarm. He spent more millions than he was making during the closing years of his life. He had regal contempt for money when it was weighed in the balance with art or his special brands of philanthropy. Of course, he would brook no interference in his purchases, most of which toward the close were paid for by notes, which were discharged when he collected his profits from his firm.

* * *

If bankers are correct in their diagnosis, there will be no currency legislation this session. Legislators object to doing a double shift. They want to go home the moment the tariff bill is signed. Then, too, every lawmaker has a currency plan of his own up his sleeve, which he will try to force down the throats of his colleagues.

* * *

Neither James Speyer nor President Vanderlip of the National City Bank will go to Europe this summer, they have their hands full at home with railroad problems.

* * *

Many Wall street people are hoping that the Eastern trainmen will go on strike. There are at least 10,000 men in Wall street who would be glad to take the jobs thrown up by the conductors and trainmen.

* * *

Some brokers are paying 3 per cent for call money, notwithstanding that lower rates are obtainable. One such broker explained his apparent extravagance thus: "I do not care to pay off my 3 per cent loans and take on others at the lower rates. You see, my bank never charges me more than 6 per cent for call money, no matter how high it goes, so that it would be small business for me to pay the loan now that the bank is making a little money out of my loan. Another thing, if I paid it off under present conditions I would probably have to pay the current rate whenever call funds might be above 6 per cent in the future."

* * *

There are five institutions in Wall street which do not charge more than 6 per cent on call money, even though it might be quoted at 10 or 25 or 125 per cent. They are the National City Bank, United States Trust Company, Central Trust Company, Fifth Avenue Bank and the Park National. The last institution does not charge more than 6 per cent on its own money, but it does charge more than on that lent for the account of out-of-town correspondents.

* * *

The First National Bank, of which George F. Baker is president, is considered the biggest "Shylock" in the financial district. It always gets as much for its money as it can and in times when money is very high its reserve sinks below the 25 per cent mark. Little wonder the bank has paid 12,550 per cent in dividends since Mr. Baker became president in 1873.

Paper Market Is Puzzle to Handlers

Difficult to Estimate Demand for Mercantile Notes, and Buyers Are "Whining."

NEW YORK, July 19.—Commercial paper is moving in strange channels. The market is "whimmy." Handlers of mercantile paper can form no estimate from day to day of the demand for their commodity. One day the buying is large, then for a protracted spell the purchasing is nil.

Further to entangle the situation extraordinary and inexplicable discrimination is being shown by institutions to certain best names to the detriment of others equally as good. As the representative of a prominent house put it, there is no telling what the upshot will be.

With standard houses unable to get money to finance their current shipments, prolongation of debts follows, or, failing that, liquidation is precipitated.

Shows 'London' Beef 34 Per Ct. American

Corporation Votes to Allow Armour's Shop in Smithfield, After Considerable Debate.

LONDON, July 19.—The fact that 34 per cent of the beef supplied to Smithfield, London's biggest meat market comes from American producers was revealed at the City Corporation meeting, when the question of renting certain shops in the market to the Armours was being discussed.

Councillor Kimber, opposing the recommendation, alleged that American firms importing meats to Smithfield artificially inflated prices. Other Councillors defended American meat trade methods which enabled the poor to buy cheaply. One market tenant said: "We want Americans to continue to do a large business in Smithfield."

The recommendation was carried by an overwhelming majority.

New Tariff Will Spur Trade, Says McLean

New York Magnate Confident Business Troubles Are Near End. Much Money Idle.

LONDON, July 19.—James McLean, of Phelps, Dodge & Co., New York, and a director in some thirty corporations, who sailed on the Imperator, said:

"Our troubles, due merely to overtrading, were caused by an extraordinary expansion of commerce throughout the world during the past few years. At present securities are being liquidated almost to a standstill, but there is no real depreciation in their value. I believe there is a vast quantity of money lying idle in New York awaiting investment.

"I don't believe this moderate tariff will injure anyone in the slightest, but will rather tend to induce a genuine rush of trade throughout the country."

EARNINGS OF U. S. STEEL ABOVE DIVIDEND NEEDS

NEW YORK, July 19.—The United States Steel Corporation, according to a semi-annual statement just issued, during the first half of 1913 earned sufficient money to meet the half yearly requirements of 3½ per cent on preferred and 2½ per cent on common stock by more than $17,800,000.

There was a surplus at the end of the first quarter after dividend payments of $7,279,000 and there will be a surplus of money to meet the half estimated earnings of $37,500,000 for the second quarter.

WILL SPEND MILLION TO IMPROVE BRINSON RAILWAY

SAVANNAH, July 19.—An agreement to place the common stock of the Brinson Railway Company in a voting trust for four years has been approved by the stockholders.

The stock is owned largely by George M. Brinton, of Springfield, Ga., who is president. Mills B. Lane, of the Citizens and Southern Bank, and Jacob S. Collins, of the Real Estate Bank and Trust Company, both at Savannah, were named as trustees, and were authorized to name a third trustee to serve with them. Mr. Collins and John E. Foy were elected members of the board of directors, in addition to the other members who were re-elected.

Thus John H. Hunter and Robert M. Hitch will remain on the board. The financing is to be provided through New York financiers, who are represented by James Imbrie, of that city, chairman of the directors of the railroad.

This action means that about $1,000,000 additional is to be invested in the Brinson Railway Company.

So far as the trade's information goes the world is now consuming wheat on a scale about 25 per cent larger than that of 15 or 20 years ago. Last year's world's shipments were the largest ever known by about 12,000,000 bushels and figure out 665,522,000, or a rate of nearly 12,800,000 bushels weekly.

Last year freight shipments into and out of Pittsburg aggregated 171,071,238 tons, of which 164,594,915 tons went to railroads, while 12,476,323 tons was water-borne, a new high record, eclipsing the best previous record, that of 1910, by 9,337,970 tons, or 5.5 per cent. The figures for 1912 reflect an increase of 26.6 per cent over those of 1903, and as compared with those of 1898 they show a gain of 284 per cent.

WALL STREET NEEDS LESSON FROM LA SALLE

No Western Firms Close Offices Because They Spend for Statisticians, Not Champagne.

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, July 12.—A New York Stock Exchange membership was transferred for $38,000 a few days ago. At the same time New York reported that within sixteen months 85 firms had retired from Wall Street and 155 branch offices were closed.

These statistics are instructive, but not necessarily ominous; just as bourse business, though tryingly dull, is by no means moribund.

The exchange as an institution has been taught a much needed lesson. That lesson has been taken to heart. The reformatory measures adopted, although belated, have been numerous and pretty thorough; they have put the Eastern board on the ethical plane of the European bourses.

Yet while the exchange as an exchange has purged itself of such poisonous stuff and has transformed chronic arrogance into a courtesy that is scarcely distinguishable from amiable humility, certain members of the exchange require reformation.

West Holds On.

It is a highly suggestive contrast that while there have been 85 retirements in Wall Street, New York, not one has occurred in LaSalle Street, Chicago. There have been retrenchments in the West, but no surrenders. Two offices were closed recently, but these were branches of New York houses.

The confident maintenance of their business on the part of Western brokers is not due to the variety of their commission trade. Dealing in grain, cotton and provisions as well as in stocks and bonds does not account for the superior sustenance of the Chicago members. Their success lies in a qualitative, not a quantitative attribute.

Considered collectively, Western houses are liberal in their treatment of clients. A ten-shares customer gets the same consideration as a 1,000-shares buyer—or seller. The head of the house does not spend $1,000 a night in Atlantic City or on the Great White Way wining and dining and chorus-girling a "big" client, actual or prospective. He spends several thousand dollars a year for a competent statistician and corporation expert who may keep the firm's clientele reasonably well informed.

Champagne Not Popular.

In the West business is worked up from an office desk during the day, and not from a champagne bottle at night.

In the average Western office the partners go home after business hours and study financial literature, that they may be efficient and of some real value to their following. They do not come to business at 11 a. m. and hurry to the high-ball club directly after the last quotation is recorded. To most of them the commission business is a serious business and not an aleatory affair with a festive midnight appendage.

Again, the democracy of tone and conduct has a meaning of practical application. It is not in the hope that the ten-shares man may become a 1,000-shares man in time, which prompts unfailing courtesy to the humbler customer. It is rather prompted by a genuine feeling of equality and fraternity.

The Westerner, unlike the Easterner, does not instantly forget a small client at the sight of an important one; does not become an abject sycophant. Money is the prime consideration in the brokerage business as in other businesses, but west of Wall Street it does not breed snobbishness in those who possess, or expect to have, much of it.

As a unit the New York Stock Exchange is an entirely different establishment from what it was eighteen months ago, but the units of the Eastern exchange call for searching information.

B. & O. Year Earnings Exceed $100,000,000

Gross Sets New Record; Net Reduced by Flood Damage—7.12 Per Cent for Common.

The year ended June 30 was a banner one for the Baltimore and Ohio, earnings exceeding $100,000,000 for the first time. But flood damage decreased the net by $498,687. Surplus after all charges and dividends amounted approximately to $1,600,000, a decrease of about $600,000.

Although the estimate to overcome the physicial damage done by the flood was $3,000,000, some permanent work will incur further charges of over $1,000,000.

Gross operating income amounted to $101,541,905, an increase of $8,947,582. Earnings available for dividends on the common stock were equal to 7.12 per cent, compared with 7.58 per cent in the previous year.

TOURISTS TAKE IMMENSE SUMS ACROSS OCEAN

Nation's Trade Balance Is Affected Considerably by Spenders at European Resorts.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Although estimates of sums spent by tourists abroad vary, the total is stupendous. They largely affect our balance of trade. These expenditures account for much of our excess of exports, the remainder being accounted for by remittances to other lands, by payments for ocean freight and by interest upon capital borrowed from other countries, etc.

Charles F. Speare calculated in 1908 that remittances from America of foreign born were $250,000,000 a year, and that the rate of increase is 10 per cent. This would give for 1913 over $400,000,000.

Sir George Parish, editor of The Statist, in 1910 arrived at conclusion that "the United States have on balance to pay other countries a net sum of $250,000,000 for interest upon foreign capital invested with them; that expenditures of American citizens in other lands exceed by $170,000,000 outlays of foreign tourists in the United States; that remittances of foreign born citizens to friends in Europe and elsewhere amount to $150,000,000, and that net sum paid for ocean freight to other countries is $25,000,000.

Heavy Exports Necessary.

"Thus America has to make an annual payment of about $595,000,000 for purposes other than for purchase of goods from other countries. In other words, exports of merchandise, gold and silver from the United States must exceed aggregate value of merchandise, gold and silver imported by nearly $600,000,000 in order that payment may be made for interest, tourist expenditure, etc. That is to say, America requires an excess over imports of nearly $600,000,000 per annum in order to settle her trade balance."

Figures presented here recently gave a different estimate of some of these factors. It was shown the American traveler spent abroad between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000; that the American exodus into Canada removed $150,000,000 a year from this country; and that sums sent or taken out of the country by foreigners were $595,000,000 per annum.

Another Estimate.

Even these estimates do not sufficiently indicate actual conditions, in opinion of important financial interests. Average estimates by prominent bankers put outgo of funds from United States as follows:

Travelers	$ 300,000,000
Interest on investments held by foreigners	250,000,000
Freights	100,000,000
Spent by American residents abroad	100,000,000
Remittances by foreigners	500,000,000
Taken into Canada	150,000,000
Total	$1,400,000,000

In addition, our imports are at the rate of $1,845,000,000, giving a total expenditure of $3,245,000,000. Against this can be set exports of $2,501,000,000, leaving an annual balance of trade against the United States of $744,000,000. This balance can be met only by sale of American securities to Europe and by other foreign investments here.

Times May Change.

For many years this invisible trade balance against this country has thus been easily absorbed. In the future, according to this financial view, matters may be different. Europe is coming to the point where American securities, in competition with attractive European investments, high interest return of new emissions, proximity of investment and success of opportunity will no longer appeal to the European investor. American finance is looking with a certain anxiety to what it considers the inevitably near approach of that time.

Contraction of the European market and interest in American securities will force a serious problem upon expansion of the United States, in which about $7,500,000,000 of foreign capital has been invested. This capital is largely in railroad securities. It has had the effect of releasing capital for domestic and manufacturing purposes, in turn causing enormous growth in population, production and wealth. Any change of these conditions which may check flow of capital from foreign sources will revolutionize the bases of our international and national position. This gives food for serious thought at a moment when our national industrial position also is being changed from a historic tariff policy of 125 years of growth and success.

Find Curious Parallel With History of 1896

Wall Street Thinks 1913 Like Dullness Which Preceded Wonderful Expansion After '96.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Members of the Stock Exchange who were on the board in 1896 draw numerous parallels between conditions at the present time and in the former year. They liken various factors of finance, politics and business of to-day with factors in 1896, and find them much alike.

Currency and banking were then in a process of alteration, and they are changing now. Political strife at Washington was unsettling to trade and industry, and the same holds true at this time. Cotton acreage showed a large increase in May of that year, when stocks reached their lowest ebb, and the state of the grain crops was excellent. These conditions hold good to-day also. The ease of money and the tightness of credit in 1896 could be further paralleled with money and credit now, although the reasons therefor were by no means the same.

And after the dullness of 1896 came a period of wonderful expansion.

In other directions, however, there was much dissimilarity between present and past financial and business elements which bore influence on stocks. Many of the railroads in 1896 were just beginning to come out of receiverships. There was much doubt that the Government would continue to redeem its notes in gold, and there had been a great outflow of the precious metal to Europe. The future looked dark for men who made their living buying and selling securities, and the feeling of pessimism was furthered by a decline in the price of Stock Exchange seats to $14,000.

Bayard Dominick, Jr., of Dominick & Dominick, bought a seat in the summer of 1896 for $16,000. He discussed the situation as he found it when he first went on the board in this way:

All Were Discouraged.

"Everybody was discouraged. Old members, prophesying that the day of the stock broker was over, sold their memberships at great sacrifices and went into other lines. There was practically no speculation that year, and the railroads were in such bad shape that investors would not touch them."

Mr. Dominick produced a notebook containing records of the first business he transacted on the board.

"The first stock I bought," he continued, "was ten shares of Union Pacific at 61-4—not 60 1-4, but $6.25 a at 22 1-8, twenty shares of St. Paul at 69, some Northern Pacific preferred at 26 3-4, and Atchison preferred at 22 1-4. A few shares of American Sugar cost me 110 3-8, an exceedingly high price in comparison with the others mentioned, but this was owing to the fact that Havemeyer was at the height of his career then, and Sugar was addicted to large fluctuations daily. Sugar was the best speculating medium on the board as far as intermittent speculation showed itself.

BRYAN OUGHT TO LIVE ON HIS PAY OR QUIT, SAY SENATORS

Explanation of Secretary of State More Amazing Than His Acts, Declares Bristow, Who Introduced Resolution to Investigate

Wilson's Premier Capitalizing His Position, Asserts Representative Willis—Much Work To Be Done in His Department.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the National Capital is that if Secretary Bryan can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Mr. Bryan to-day gave evidence of the fact that the country-wide criticism had got under his skin. That he was irritated and impatient and realized the "bad break" he has made was apparent to his subordinates throughout the day. Somewhat petulantly he declared that the press of the country might have assumed that "my lecture engagements are subject to cancellation."

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow Cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

Evades Paper's Questions.

The American to-day endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions and refused to discuss the subject of his official pronunciamento.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by The American:

"If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

"If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

"You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?"

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned to the questions. Later in the day he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Bristow, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan to stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, to-day came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secrttary Bryan's second statement has astounded me even more than his first one," said Mr. Bristow. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the Governmtnt service is amazing.

"Secretary Bryan says he has a right to use his vacation for lecturing if he sees fit. But he is to be away on one tour of six weeks, and there is no telling where his vacation will end.

Needed at His Post.

"Besides, since he has been Secretary of State he has been in Washington only about one-half the time so far. If ever there was a time when the Secretary of State was needed on the job it is now, when so many important questions are up for consideration. To cause the people to pay money to hear the Secretary of State, the highest officer in the Cabinet, deliver addresses is all

U. S. State Secrets 'Lifted' From Wire By Mexican Agents

Information Worth Thousands of Dollars Finds Its Way Into Possession of Huerta.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A copy of the official code of the State Department, containing information worth thousands of dollars to foreign governments, has fallen into the hands of the Mexican administration.

It is being used to further the ends of the Huerta regime, it was asserted here to-day.

For some months State Department officials have suspected that the Government telegrams from Mexico City have been tampered with, it is declared, but this was not considered important, as all the dispatches were in code, and, therefore, theoretically illegible.

About three weeks ago, however, Government officials here had their first inkling that the Mexicans were obtaining the gist of dispatches passing between the State Department and Ambassador Wilson.

The agents of the almost unknown "secret service" of the State Department were put on the trail and evidence was obtained that the Government dispatches had been "lifted" from the wires in Mexico and decoded, the information contained therein being transmitted to President Huerta and his Cabinet.

Girl Traps a Thief In Telephone Booth

Sets Shoulder Against Door and Holds Man Until Cries Bring Her Aid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Holding a thief trapped in a telephone booth, Miss Florence Rosenthal, cashier in Edward Feuhrer's drug store at No. 53 Second avenue, finally succeeded in delivering him to the police yesterday.

The captive, who said he was Alexander Moskowitz, 17 years old, was so long "telephoning" that Miss Rosenthal went to the booth to see if he was dead or alive. She saw him opening the money box with a screwdriver, she says. Screaming for her employer, she set her shoulder against the door, and the youth could not force it open. Moskowitz was held for trial.

Burleson Eats but Two Meals Each Day

Postmaster General Believes in and Practices "Early to Bed, Early to Rise" Theory.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Postmaster General Burleson believes thoroughly in the old adage, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." He practices this theory himself and in addition supplements it by a two-meal-a-day program.

His daily routine is as follows:

"I arise at 5 in the morning.

"Read the papers until 6.

"Breakfast.

"Go over papers and reports until 9.

"Work at the Postoffice Department until 5 in the afternoon without any lunch or lunch hour.

"Dinner at 6 to 7 o'clock.

"Eight o'clock—go to bed."

"Cooling Period" to Halt Divorce Evil

Pastor Suggests That Three Months Elapse Between Final Hearing and Decision of Court.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Speaking on "The Modern Problem of Marriage and Divorce," before the Central Conference of American Rabbis here to-day, the Rev. L. Leonard Levy, of Pittsburg, advocated a "cooling" period of three months from the time of the final hearing until the decision is announced as the solution of the problem of minimizing the divorce evil. "This cooling period," said the speaker, "would cover a time during which neither of the parties at interest could marry."

Marries His Aunt, 12 Years His Senior

NEW YORK, July 19.—Earl Oscar Schenck, 24 years old, an actor, of No. 600 West 138th street, was married in the City Hall yesterday to his aunt, Marion Carr Schenck, twelve years his senior.

The bride of yesterday was married in April, 1899, to Oscar A. Schenck, the uncle of her present husband, who on January 17 of this year divorced her in Columbus, Ohio, "for gross neglect of duty."

SHORTAGE HITS NATIONAL BANK AT LAFAYETTE

Comptroller of Currency Orders Institution Closed When Defalcation Is Discovered.

ARRESTS ARE LIKELY

Preliminary Examination Shows That It Has Been Looted of Not Less Than $30,000.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane today announced that the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., has been closed by National Bank Examiner Thomas C. Dunlap, with the authority of the board of directors, on account of a large shortage which makes the bank insolvent.

Mr. Kane says he has not received a detailed report of the condition of the bank. Mr. Dunlap has been appointed receiver.

"We do not know how big the defalcation may be," said Mr. Kane, "but our preliminary examination has shown that it is not less than $30,000. This shortage has occurred since May 23, when the bank was last examined. Suspicion on the part of officers of the bank several days ago that a shortage existed caused them to call in Examiner Dunlap. Discovery of the embbezzlement resulted.

"In his telegraphic advices to me Mr. Dunlap does not say to whom suspicion attaches. The last statement of the condition of the bank, issued on June 4, showed the bank to be in a proper state. The president of the bank is R. N. Dickerson, and S. A. Hunt, Jr., is cashier."

In a telegram from Mr. Dunlap Mr. Kane is advised that steps have been taken to make an arrest.

Depositors to Lose Little by Failure.

CHATTANOOGA, July 19.—Local bankers stated to-day that the liabilities of the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., which was announced to-day by Acting Comptroller of Currency Kane, at Washington, to have failed, were approximately $240,000, but that depositors would be paid in full, with but a slight loss to stockholders, as the assets would prove but slightly less.

An unsuccessful attempt was made this morning to obtain a schedule of the liabilities and assets of the institution. The officials are extremely reticent concerning the cause of the institution's embarrassment.

Aerial Ferry to Join Cities in California

Air Pilot Gets Permission to Install Aeroplane Service Between San Francisco and Oakland.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The first aerial ferry of the world will be in operation between San Francisco and Oakland in September. Permission was granted officially to-day by the Harbor Commission to John L. Lekas to construct a dock for his hydroaeroplane.

Lekas recently applied for a permit, declaring that he wished to establish a regular passenger service between the trans-bay cities. Lekas was before the commission to-day and satisfied them he was a safe and sane air pilot.

Motor Cars to Cut High Cost of Dying

Storage Battery Busses To Be Put in Service in Chicago as Funeral Equipage.

CHICAGO, July 19.—The high cost of dying is to be reduced. Storage battery motor busses are to be put in service as funeral cars. The change from carriages to busses, it is estimated, will result in a saving of $30 in the cost of each funeral. As there are 31,000 funerals in Chicago each year, the general reduction in the cost of dying, if busses were used in all funerals, would be $930,000.

Girl Fan Loses Teeth But Stays Out Game

Foul Tip Injures Fair Baseball Enthusiast, but Her Ardor Is Not Diminished.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, July 19.—Miss Cora Bauer, of this city, was struck in the face by a foul tip while watching a ball game between the Akron and Zanesville teams here. Her nose was split open, three teeth knocked out and she may be disfigured for life. Nevertheless, after being treated by a physician, she decided to stay out the game.

Congregation Built Up by Band Concerts

Ohio Pastor With Novel Methods Now Claims Biggest Sunday School in World.

CANTON, OHIO, July 19.—With the attraction of a band concert in the church roof garden and a double orchestra concert in the church auditorium, the Rev. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton's First Christian Church, has built up what he claims is the biggest Sunday school in the world within five years.

The average attendance in this hot month of July is 3,251. The record attendance is 4,714. Several Sundays back 38 babies were checked in the "babies' check room" of the $90,000 church. The men's class of 250 had to hold their session in the street while the teacher explained the lesson from the tonneau of an automobile.

Doctor Says He Has Vaccine to Cure Cold

Dead Organisms Found In Blood of Patient Afflicted With Influenza Used as Culture.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Claims to the discovery of a remarkable vaccine for the cure and prevention of the troublesome "cold" known among medical men as in influenza are being made by physicians of the Mulford Laboratory, near Philadelphia, under the direction of Dr. A. P. Mitchins.

The vaccine is composed of the dead organisms found in the blood of a person afflicted with influenza. These organs are isolated and then an impure culture is obtained. Afterward, a saline solution is used to wash the culture germs and then the vaccine is ready for injection.

One striking feature of the results of the vaccine, it is said, is that it cures diseases allied with the common cold at the same time it does the "cold."

3 Drowned Trying To Avoid Wet Feet

Women Stand Up In Leaky Boat, Capsizing Craft in View of Hundreds.

NORRISTOWN, PA., July 19.—Caught in a storm while boating on the Schuylkill River, three women, all church workers, were drowned. They are:

Miss Anna Mary Livergood, Miss Emma J. Rex and Miss Helen Green, all of Norristown.

Miss Margaret Green, a sister of Miss Helen Green, clung to the overturned boat and was saved.

The women were within a quarter of a mile of the boat landing when the wind struck them.

The boat began to leak badly. To keep their feet and clothing dry the four girls stood on the seats. The next instant the boat turned over.

Two hundred persons on a boat returning from a park saw the accident.

Blue Cauliflower Is Raised in California

Latest Horticultural Product Is Hybrid of Ordinary Cauliflower and Purple Pickling Cabbage.

OAKLAND, July 19.—Blue cauliflower, the latest novelty in things horticultural, was introduced to the public to-day by Hugo Lilienthal, instructor in the University of California. The new plant is a hybridization of the ordinary cauliflower and the purple "pickling cabbage," declared by the experts to be a "first cousin to the cauliflower." The new vegetable is bright blue in color and stronger than the ordinary cauliflower in flavor.

Only a Bathing Suit Left Friend by Thief

Youth Is Marooned in Atlantic City When Companion Disappears With Money and Clothes.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Arthur Leonard, a New York youth, spent the entire day on the beach in his bathing suit to-day, following the disappearence of his chum, whose name he refuses to reveal, with four suits of his clothing and all his money.

Leonard wired his relatives in New York State telling them of his predicament. They came here to-night with clothing and rescued him.

Billie Burke Wires She Is Recovering

Actress Was Threatened With Appendicitis, but Did Not Have to Undergo Operation.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Billie Burke, telegraphing the London bureau of The American to-day from Carlsbad in reply to an inquiry concerning her health, says:

"Thanks awfully. Was threatened with appendicitis, but have not had to undergo operation. Recovering nicely.

LOBBY INQUIRY STIRS NATION

Mulhall Story Leaves U. S. Aghast

Power of Interests Vividly Revealed

MARTIN W. MULHALL, former lobbyist of National Association of Manufacturers, whose revelations of corruption startled nation.

Names of Wilson, Taft, Senators and Congressmen Are Dragged Into the Testimony, Showing Corporations Have Set No Limit in Corruption.

STARTLING FACTS REVEALED IN U. S. SENATE INVESTIGATION OF CONGRESSIONAL LOBBY

National Association of Manufacturers raised a slush fund of $500,000 to $700,000 a year to oppose objectionable legislation.

Place in Taft Cabinet pledged to manufacturers by Vorys, Taft manager.

Charges that the big manufacturers had the ears of Taft, Sherman and Cannon.

List of Congressmen in pay of the National Manufacturers' Association disclosed. Also, a list of the "unpurchasable," whom the association hated, and tried to defeat.

Fights made by National Manufacturers' Association on progressive Congressmen and Senators, often successful.

More than 400 letter tell of plans of association to become sinister factor in controlling the wheels of government.

Attempts made to foment strife among labor organizations, and to corrupt labor leaders, even Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Agreement by Woodrow Wilson with Gompers and Morrison that he support Hughes for Senate.

Powers of big business fought Hughes because he was friendly to labor.

Tom Johnson, Senator McComas of Maryland, and others were political victims of the association's vengeance.

Gigantic corruption in Wall Street laid bare in testimony of David Lamar.

Forgery on Union Pacific's books covering item of $82,000,000 charged.

Senate resolutions hawked about Wall street for sale to highest bidder.

The nation to-day stands aghast at the sensational revelations which have come as the result of investigations by the Overman Committee of the United States Senate into the work of lobbies at the National Capital.

It has heard how big business combines and Wall Street operators have made and unmade men in public life, influenced legislation, dominated public opinion, all the time secret and vigilant.

It has learned how big business has become one of the most powerful factors in the American civilization, striking in the dark against men who opposed it.

It has heard the names of the men highest in public life, President Wilson, former President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet members, dragged into the testimony, and has learned that certain predatory interests have set no limits in their attempt to corrupt public servants.

The bulk of the startling testimony came from Martin M. Mulhall, for years the servant of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the chief lobbyist of that organization at Washington, and from David Lamar, an operator in stocks, who is known as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

Wilson Starts Inquiry.

The investigation began more than a month ago when President Wilson declared that a lobby, "insidious and industrious" in nature, had long dominated tariff legislation. The announcement did not come unexpectedly, however, and there were many Senators and Congressmen to endorse the Chief Executive. The Senate began immediately its investigation of the charges, empowering a committee, headed by Senator Overman, to conduct the inquiry.

Relatively pointless testimony from men interested in the sugar industry came first, revealing the fact that sugar lobbies were the most industrious. Lobbyists from Hawaii, the Philippines and Louisiana defended their actions by a protest against free sugar. Former Governor Carter of Hawaii declared that the elimination of the duty on sugar would make the Hawaiian Islands merely military posts, destroying their commercial prestige. Frank C. Lowry, of the "free sugar lobby," admitted in the testimony that $25,000 had been spent in four years by the Federal Sugar Refining Company in lobbying operations.

Then came the Mulhall testimony,

Even Take Fizz Out Of City's Soda Water

Members of Cincinnati Board of Health to Censor All Soft Drinks Sold.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—The "fizz and bubble" in soda water and ginger ale manufactured in this city is to be no more, if the Board of Health has its way about the matter, and it seems likely at this time that its contention will hold good. The board has asked the Council to pass an ordinance limiting the amount of alcohol to one-half of 1 per cent in any one drink of this kind. If the resolution is passed and made a law no dealer will be allowed to make soft drinks without first getting a permit.

300 "HELLO GIRLS" ASK BOSS TO BE BEST MAN

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—The Postmaster General is bewildered over the result of the recent permission which he granted to telephone girls to get married. Three hundred of these girls promptly availed themselves of the chance and every couple asked the Postmaster General to act as best man.

Umbrellas for Farm Hands Is Inducement

Planter Advertises That He Will Supply Them With Sulkies, Sunshades and Ice Cream.

FINDLAY, OHIO, July 19.—There are other communities in this country that are suffering for a lack of farm hands besides Kansas. It is up to H. B. Clark, a farmer in the western part of Hancock County, to make good, else be prosecuted for false advertising, as provided by the new newspaper laws.

In a morning paper Mr. Clark is advertising for farm hands to plow corn. He says he will provide them with riding cultivator, a large sun umbrella for each, ice water to drink and all the ice cream each applicant can eat every other day, with $2.50 a day wages.

GREAT BRITAIN IS AFTER LATEST GERMAN AIR CRAFT

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Great Britain, it is stated, is negotiating for an Unger airship, which is larger, faster and more rigid than any others yet designed, including the Zeppelins.

'Oh Fudge' Strongest Language Permitted

Kansas City Starts Crusade Against Public Swearing—Police Rebuke Violators.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—Anything stronger than "Oh, fudge!" must not be heard on the streets of Kansas City hereafter. All the ministers of the city and all the members of their churches have started an anti-swearing crusade, and part of the work is to ask persons who are overheard to swear to consider the vulgarity of it and cease the practice.

The Police Department and the street railway company have agreed to join in the crusade, so that hereafter it is part of the policeman's duty to stop swearing as well as breaches of the peace.

Miss Elliott Returns To Stage To Be Happy

Will Play Potiphar's Wife in Sir Herbert Tree's "Joseph and His Brethren."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Maxine Elliott, yielding to Sir Herbert Tree's persuasion, will return to the stage September 2 in a great production of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." She will play Potiphar's wife.

Miss Elliott gives as the chief reason for her reappearance that every one is happier when occupied. She is now living in her beautiful house at Bushey, just outside London.

STORY OF MULHALL WILL EXTEND U. S. LOBBY INQUIRY

Mulhall represented the National Association of Manufacturers, in Washington. The association has a membership of 225 organizations, among them the most influential of the country, and 4,000 individuals, who control billions of capital.

The burden of his statements were that the association had for years promoted tariff, labor, and general business legislation favorable to itself, had maintained a lobby staff of seventeen, including himself, and former Presidents VanCleave and Kirby, of the association, at the capital to defeat hostile legislation, and it was always seeking and often obtaining control of the House and Senate Committee on Labor and Judiciary.

Created Tariff Commission.

He said that the association's efforts were responsible for the creation of the Tariff Commission under President Taft, and said that nine former Congressmen and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages in the House, had obtained money for services rendered.

More sensational still were the declarations that former President Taft, former Vice President Sherman, and former Speaker Cannon, besides many Congressmen and Senators were among those whom the association could affect by appeals to sentiment or other interests. He told of an unsuccessful attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, and of successful work among petty labor leaders.

Mulhall told of his own great ingratitude, how he obtained a Federal position through the influence of Senator McComas of Maryland, and at the same time entered the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers, helping to defeat his patron because McComas had been doomed for his opposition to the association.

McComas, it seems, was not the only victim. Tom L. Johnson had been defeated for Mayor of Cleveland, said Mulhall, for his opposition to the association, and William E. Hughes was opposed by the business combine for Senator from New Jersey because he was the advocate of many labor bills. It was in this connection that Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, had agreed with Gompers and Morrison, the labor leaders, to support Hughes, and had stumped the State in his favor.

Spies Kept in Field.

The work of the association against the eight-hour law, its enmity to most legislation that was favorable to labor, how he kept in occasional communication with former Vice President Sherman, how spies were kept in the field to corrupt minor labor leaders, and to knife opponents, were other sensational bits of the Mulhall testimony.

George Pope, president of the association, and other officials of the organization, have made statements declaring that Mulhall is not to be believed, and that most of the statements were inspired by the fact that Mulhall was discharged by the association. From many persons and places have come statements denouncing Mulhall as a man of reprehensible character, lessening thus the substantiability of many of the charges. But in many instances the declarations he made seemed to be assured of reliability by documents that are substantial.

Interesting is his list of Congressmen whom he said had received pay from the association. He named in this connection J. E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, the House "whip" of the last administration; J. T. McDermott, Democrat, of Illinois; J. J. Jenkins Republican, Wisconsin; Kittredge Haskins, Republican, Vermont; C. E. Littlefield, Republican, Maine; H. M. Bannon, Republican, Ohio; H. M. Coudry, Republican, Missouri; J. J. Gardner, Republican, New Jersey; R. B. Cole, Republican, Ohio, and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages.

On the other hand, he named a number of Congressmen who had consistently fought the association's interests, and whom he frankly called "unpurchasable." They are: Speaker Clark, Burnett of Alabama, Maynard, Virginia; Cooper, Wisconsin; Nicholls, Pennsylvania; Parson, New York; Green, Massachusetts; Haugen, Iowa; Wilson, Pennsylvania; McComas, Maryland; Pearre, Maryland; Hughes, New Jersey; Kelliher, Massachusetts, and the labor leaders, Gompers, John Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the Federation of Labor. William Barnes, the New York boss, he said, was his friend, and could always be depended on to "take care of bills."

Revelations of Lamar.

On the heels of the Mulhall revelations came those from David Lamar, the smiling, cynical "Wolf of Wall Street." Lamar it was who told of having sent Edward Lauterbach, his attorney, to peddle around Wall Street a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the Senate.

J. P. Morgan was one of the men whom Lauterbach visited on this errand. He told how he had impersonated Congressmen Palmer and Riordan in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass Ledyard and Paul D. Cravath, corporation attorneys, and Robert S. Lovett, the railroad president, feigning knowledge of the intentions of the dominant party. Further, he declared that he had represented himself as fresh from the councils of Speaker Clark and other leaders when he visited Wall Street operators for concessions.

Lamar's most remarkable disclosure was his statement that the Union Pacific Railroad's books had been forged in 1901 to cover an item of $82,000,000, whereby the fortunes of E. H. Harriman, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, and others were built.

Testimonials Discredited.

Discredit has been cast upon Lamar's testimony as on Mulhall's, as coming from a man lacking in scruples. Paul D. Cravath, attorney for the Union Pacific, gave out a statement that the testimony regarding the gigantic forgery was part of a bear campaign against the company.

The Senate investigation will be conducted in detail, and it is likely, to judge from the announced intentions of the committee members, that every member of the Senate and of the House, every public official whose name has been dragged into the affair, and every one in anyway connected with the situation will be called in as witnesses. Appearances seem to indicate that the hearing will last far into the summer.

Mulhall was on the stand the greater part of last week explaining a batch of correspondence which had passed between him and political and labor leaders throughout the United States. The correspondence, according to evidence which has been revealed, he has sought to sell to magazines and newspapers several times, but in vain. Nonchalantly, the ex-lobbyist has pointed out letter after letter from prominent men, talking of alleged significant deals almost carelessly.

"This is a letter from Senator Foraker," he said, indicating one. "It was asking me to see a labor man about his chances for re-election to the Senate. I think he was considering the Presidency at the time."

Secrets of big politics are being bared daily during the investigation. Details of how spies worked among the labor men, and of the secret methods of big business have been explained by Mulhall at more than one point in his testimony.

In defense of his own lobbying, Mulhall made statements that a labor lobby existed, naming Samuel Gompers. As a result, Gompers and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be brought before the committee to explain their activities in the cause of labor and capital, respectively.

Inez Milholland's Wedding Blow to Suffragists

Her Romance May Annul Marriage to the Cause

Mrs. Eugen Boissevain, who was Miss Inez Milholland, famous suffragist beauty and orator, before her marriage to wealthy Dutchman last week.

Beautiful Leader of Votes for Women Won After Courtship on Two Continents.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Suffrage leaders of the United States are today bowed in spirit. They can think of their recent victory in Illinois without smiling. They read of success of women jurors and policemen with no show of ecstasy. Their minds are troubled. They seek to know whether Mrs. Eugen Boissevain will be as potent a personality for the cause as was Inez Milholland before she suddenly decided to take unto herself a husband in the form of the wealthy Dutchman she wedded Tuesday in London.

For Inez Milholland has been go force in the suffrage movement the United States. She graduated om Vassar just about the time when the votes for women idea traveled across the seas from England, and she has been right on the firing line in the battle for the ballot ever since.

Beauty of Suffrage Ranks.

Miss Milholland, beg pardon, Mrs. Boissevain, has ever been in the specially mentioned class in every important suffrage movement. She has been the American Christobal Pankhurst, only more so, though it has not been recorded that she has smashed anything, or has had to dodge extradition treaties to keep from the painful necessity of going on a hunger strike.

Even before she graduated from Vassar, Miss Milholland was known to fame. Her remarkable beauty, her mentality and personal magnetism made her a leader in this great girls' college. She was the champion all around athlete and held a world's record for putting the shot.

During the strike of the garment workers in New York, several years ago, Miss Milholland volunteered for picket duty and it was her oratory that kept the girls stubbornly on the strike until they partially won their demands.

In the first big suffrage parade in New York she was a battalion leader and was a striking figure as she rode astride on a big bay charger.

Challenges Orator Heflin.

She again achieved prominence by challenging Representative Tom Heflin of Alabama to joint debate when that doughty Congressman spoke disparagingly of the cause, and though it is known that Mr. Heflin loves to speak and delights in debate, he carefully avoided meeting Miss Milholland on the forum.

In the great suffrage parade in Washington the day before President Wilson's inauguration Miss Milholland led the procession as the herald of the cause. She was mounted on a pure white horse and was clad in robes of white, while a coronet surmounted her magnificent hair which fell loosely down her back.

So striking was her appearance that she was quickly an object of the attacks of the thugs and boors who tried to break up the parade, and it is recorded that one of these men received a blow on the jaw from the fist of the young woman who once held the world shot-put record.

"I am wedded to the cause," she told her admirers, among whom were Sidney Smith, the New York clubman; John Fox, Jr., author and former husband of Fritzi Scheff, and Lord Curzon, formerly viceroy of India.

Whether this marriage will annul her former marriage to the cause is the question that perplexes the suffrage leaders, but they, as a rule, protest that it will not.

John E. Milholland, her father, was evidently not greatly shocked by the marriage. Here is what he cabled his daughter:

"Have not been so mad in two hundred years. You should be boiled in oil. Do you expect forgiveness until the next century. Indefensible chip of the old block, you have given us a pretty rough deal, but nevertheless I humbly and fervently pray God's blessing upon you and yours forever.

"PATER."

Boissevain's Brother Elated.

Robert W. Boissevain, brother of the bridegroom, was in a decidedly agreeable frame of mind yesterday in his office at No. 17 Battery place. Besides calling his brother a "lucky dog" and describing him as being "smiled upon by the gods," he said that the new Mrs. Boissevain has now seven sisters-in-law who possess collectively 25 children and that all these seven Boissevain sisters are suffragists of the non-militant type.

"Wireless" in Courtship.

"Eugen, who is 33 years old, and my brother Jan came over to New York on the Olympic to pay me a visit," he said. "They arrived June 10 and stopped at the Holland House with me. William Marconi, the wireless discoverer, and Mrs. Marconi were here at the same time. My brother and I have known Mr. Marconi for years, and I now understand that the Marconis have known the Milholland family for a long time.

"Anyway, two days after the arrival of my brothers, that is, June 12, I was dining with them in the Holland House and Mr. and Mrs. Marconi entered the dining room with one of the most beautiful women we had ever seen. Miss Milholland was presented to us, and my brother Eugen lost interest in all other things then and there.

"Eugen and Jan had planned to tour the States for six weeks at least, but during the dinner Miss Milholland said something about leaving for Europe early in July. The plans of Eugen, I could see, went flying.

MAZDAZNANS EAT FLOWERS AND SING TO THE SUN

All This in Classic Boston, Where the Cult Has a Membership Small but Exclusive.

BOSTON, July 19.—It is ancient history that Nebuchadnezzer went out and ate grass like an ox. Out in the Back Bay and up in Lowell there can be found small yet select circles of folk who eat grass and say they enjoy it.

Not only this, but they worship the sun, pray to the sun, sing to the sun, take sun baths, dew baths, eat rose petals and pansies, drive out disease by fasting spells (or say they do so), fast for days and then fatten up on a diet of water to drink and violets to eat, kiss and rekiss, and try to be as happy and contented as can be.

These people are the Mazdaznans or Sun Worshipers. Into their innermost shrines have penetrated none but ardent devotees, so that none of their rites have been made public. As revealed for the first time at the big Gahanbar, or national peace congress of the Mazdaznans, these rites are weird enough—strange to the outside world, but taken as a matter of course by the Mazdaznans.

And the strange part of the rites and worship is that the devout worshipers believe their practice will lengthen their years into three or four centuries.

Secret Rites of Cult.

Another thing about the sun folk is that they don't worry. So in the hot weather they manage to keep cool figurative- and physically. They usually look happy and contented when met on the street.

None outside the cult itself knew—up to the holding of the recent Gahanbar or Congress—of the secret rites of the Mazdaznans. These are practiced in the inner circles, so called.

For years the famous "Green Book" of the Mazdaznans was a mystery sealed to the eyes of ordinary mortals. The book was guarded sacredly by the Sun Worshipers. In it are printed the precepts of the cult.

Here are some of them:

You can get cured of anything if you have faith enough long enough.

Sickness, sin and poverty will be eradicated by Mazdaznanism.

The fly you swat may be the incarnated soul of a great-great-great-grandmother.

Be careful, then, how you swat the flies.

Obstinacy Cause for Pain.

Pain is nothing but the result of obstinacy in you. If you are suffering from a toothache, it is because you are "declining to yield to the peaceful operations of intelligence."

Never go under the surgeon's knife or take "herbal medicine."

Deny the "bonds of ancestral relation through sickness, sin or sorrow."

And practice these things: Deep or "conscious" breathing and vegetarianism.

If you can do these things, you may become a Mazdaznan, so the "Green Book" says.

The High Priestess is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Roth Hilton, wife of Dr. George Hilton, of Lowell.

In the inner worship Hanish, the leader, is His Humbleness, Mrs. Hilton is Spenta Marie—the equivalent of "holy mother."

Their chief New England shrine is the Mazdaznan Temple, in Lowell. This was formerly a barn belonging to Dr. Hilton, but later converted into a "house of worship."

The central figure in the worship is Mrs. Hilton, the High Priestess. She is the mother of two pretty daughters, one of whom, the elder, Miss Ruthken Mariana Hilton, is being educated to follow in her mother's steps as High Priestess. Some day pretty Miss Ruthken—her name before the court changed it was Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of Mrs. Hilton by her first marriage—will be the leader of the Mazdaznans. The other daughter is Miss Constance Cleopatra Hilton.

The majority of the followers of the "Little Master," Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, are the persons of middle life and evidently of generous means. While a few of the cult are young women of surpassing beauty, yet the advanced philosophic principles of Mazdaznan are so complex and abstract that only those of mature mind are intellectually and spiritually capable of comprehending them. Therefore, there is a dearth of young people in the cult.

Rats Give Sleeping Fisherman Haircut

Well Oiled Head of Angler Proves Excellent Provender for Hungry Island Rodents.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., July 19. A Santa Barbara fisherman has discovered a new way of getting his hair clipped. He appeared about his usual haunts yesterday with one-half of his head neatly shorn of hair. He says that the mice did it. A well-known fisherman vouches for the tale.

Santa Barbara Island is inhospitable and barren and contains not a drop of fresh water. For this reason fishing parties take a good supply of liquid refreshment.

Usually fishermen sleep on their boats on account of the mice. However, the fisherman in the party of Williams said he would sleep on shore.

This fisherman had earned the sobriquet of "Dude," owing to his habit of oiling his hair. It was this oil that caused the involuntary haircut, for the fishermen say that during the "Dude's" hours of slumber the mice visited him and neatly cut the hair close to the scalp in their relish of the oil.

Japs' 'Amo' Starts Romance at Harvard

Girl Student Teaches Him Language of Nippon and Now They Sail for Tokio Honeymoon.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—They met in the yard at Harvard. He was finishing his course and she was studying the intricacies of the Japanese language.

"Will you teach me Japanese?" asked James Lee Kauffman, and she said "yes."

They studied together day after day. Finally he was graduated to what corresponds to "Amo" in the Latin books. He asked her several times to explain its meaning.

"It means I love," she said, blushing.

"I am sure it must mean I love you," he said, and when she nodded that such might be the case he admitted that such was the case.

So they were married in Lancaster, Pa., and came here.

They sailed for Tokio. He is to take the chair of English law in the Imperial University.

Marries and Steals To Reform a Girl

Divinity Student Admits Taking Money Trusted to Him Because He Loved Woman.

DENVER, July 19.—William Schulz, student of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $38 from the student body, whose cashier he was, says he married Miss Thelma Gillion and became a defaulter, not only because he loved the girl, but because he desired to assist her in giving up her former way of living.

That Schulz had partly succeeded in his work of reclamation is the belief of all Denver people who have come in contact with the young woman since she and Schulz arrived in this city. They unite in saying that there is no better behaved young woman in Denver than Mrs. Schulz.

Sioux City Finds Policewomen Useful

Superintendent of Police Safety Declares They Have Lessened Trouble With Girls.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA, July 19.—"I want especially to have the policewomen on the force during the summer months," says the Superintendent of Public Safety. "We formerly had plenty of trouble with young girls in dance halls, but since the women came on the force there has been none of this.

"I believe that they are doing fine work and am very well satisfied. The only thing that would cause their release from the force would be the lack of sufficient appropriation to pay their salary. They are necessary to the force in guarding the morals of the women of Sioux City."

Safe Robber Relic Found in Old Wall

Discoverers Believe That Ancient Money Box Was Taken From Stage Coach by Highwaymen.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., July 19.—While repairing the State highway at the top of Conococheague Mountain, near Concord, Ralph Hopple and Elias Snyder, who were tearing down a stone wall, found an express money box, of heavy sheet iron, lined with wood. The lid was partly open and the lock had been sprung with an iron hook found near the box.

It is thought the box was in the old stone wall for more than a century and was placed there by a gang of robbers that infested that section in the days of stage coaches.

ACID THROWN AS JEALOUS WIFE STRIKES RIVAL

House Physician of Kimball House Center of Affray Witnessed by Peachtree Crowd.

Dr. J. Robert Smith, house physician at the Kimball Hotel; Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Ina McNeil, of No. 299 Forrest avenue, a saleswoman at a downtown store, engaged in a struggle in front of the Park-Chambers-Hardwick store on Peachtree street Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. Smith found her husband with Mrs. McNeil.

In the melee Mrs. McNeil received a slight cut on her arm, and Mrs. Smith claims also she gave her a black eye. During the trouble a bottle of what is supposed to have been carbolic acid was thrown by one of the participants, but none of them will admit throwing it. Dr. Smith declares he did not see the acid thrown, and Mrs. Smith will not say whether she threw it or not.

Hundreds See Fray.

The triangular affray was witnessed by hundreds of Peachtree street pedestrians, and created considerable excitement. After the bottle of acid had crashed to the pavement and broken, Dr. Smith hustled his wife around the corner, while Mrs. McNeil ran into the store and hurried to the second floor.

Mrs. Smith admits attacking Mrs. McNeil. She says she has several times asked her to keep away from Dr. Smith, and declares she became infuriated when she saw her husband meet Mrs. McNeil downtown to-day.

Says She Trailed Smith.

"Dr. Smith has been running around with Mrs. McNeil for more than a year now," said Mrs. Smith. "We have been separated for several years, but of late the doctor has asked me to return to him. He has offered to buy me an automobile if I would come back, but I told him I would have to test him. I asked him to keep away from Mrs. McNeil, and I've also asked Mrs. McNeil to keep away from Robert.

"I heard several weeks ago that he was going around with her again, and this morning I came to Atlanta from my home in Douglas. I trailed Dr. Smith to-day when he left the Kimball House, and I saw him meet the woman on Edgewood avenue. I followed them until they got in front of the store on Peachtree street, and then I got so mad that I stopped them.

"I admit I hit Mrs. McNeil, and I would do it again. I just got so mad that I walked up and struck her in the face. I gave her a black eye and scratched her on the arm, but she didn't hurt me. I don't know anything about the acid. Dr. Smith did not do anything while we were fighting, but acted like he wanted to get away. After the bottle was thrown, he took me out of the place."

Girl Shoots Herself When She Is Spanked

Mother Punishes Her for Spending Afternoons With Boys—She Fires Bullet Into Breast.

NEW YORK, July 19.—When the mother of 15-year-old Mary DeMartino spanked her a week ago for spending the afternoons with young men on the roof of their home, No. 337 East Forty-seventh street, the girl threatened to shoot herself.

Mrs. DeMartino caught her on the roof again yesterday, and after Mary had been chastised, she fired a bullet into her breast, penetrating one of her lungs. She was taken to Flower Hospital, and last night was in a critical condition.

Couldn't Die Until He Moved Friend's Body

Pioneer Refuses to Allow Companion's Remains to Rest in Old Deserted Cemetery.

DUFUR, OREG., July 19.—"No, he was just my friend."

This was the answer given by H. Koehler, of Portland, when asked if William Holman, whose body he had gone to the trouble and expense of moving from one cemetery to another, was a relative.

Many, many years ago, when there was but a small handful of settlers in the Fifteen-Mile Valley, a location for a cemetery was selected on a hill overlooking the valley.

A few days ago Kohler, now a gray-haired man, came to look after the last resting place of his friend Holman. He left here soon after Holman's death 35 years ago.

"We were good friends—very good friends," he said. "I could not die happy if I knew he would be left out there in that old cemetery with no one left to care for his grave. I had intended to look after this long ago, but circumstances have prevented, and now I am growing old and I must do this one kind act for my friend. We were very, very good friends."

Horn Frightens Animal But He Afterwards Turns to Fight and Pierces Tire With Horns.

UKIAH, CAL., July 19.—W. C. Jones, of Los Angeles, ran down a big deer with his auto near Largo yesterday when it jumped over the fence in front of the machine. Jones opened his throttle and turned loose the horn. The noise frightened the animal, and, after a half mile chase, it turned to give battle. The deer made one vicious lunge forward, its horn piercing the front tire, the impact breaking its neck. Jones loaded his prize into the machine.

CRAWFORD HEIRS EXPECT SEARCH FOR BARBER TO BARE PRE-NUPTIAL PLOT

Relatives Think That Lump Will Tell Woman Held on Poison Charge Planned to Wed Him on Her Husband's Death.

If the tireless search which is being directed by Atlanta lawyers discovers in New York a man named Fred Lump, the prosecution in the case against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, thinks a pre-nuptial plot against Crawford can be proved.

The alleged plot was between Mrs. Crawford, then Mrs. Savage, and Lump. She would marry the wealthy Crawford, obtain his money, and then marry Lump, say her accusers.

Lump is a barber by trade and a Bohemian by nativity. He is supposed to be in New York, and in that city detectives in the employ of the prosecution have been at work for several days. Every message that comes from them, however, is one of failure.

Colonel James Makes Charge.

The charge of a plot first was made by Col. J. S. James, who is attorney for the contesting Crawford heirs, who ordered the arrest of Lump. Colonel James said that Lump admitted his being in Atlanta at the time of Crawford's death, and that other testimony valuable to the prosecution was given by him in deposition several weeks ago. But present search for the Bohemian barber has proved fruitless.

Colonel James points to Mrs. E. C. Bursener as one of the witnesses of the prosecution to substantiate the murder plot charge. Mrs. Bursener, it is claimed, will testify that she frequently heard Mrs. Crawford say that she would marry Crawford, get his money, and later run away with Lump. The prosecution will seek to prove also by Mrs. Gertrude A. Painter, it is said, that there was a definite agreement to this plan existent between Mrs. Crawford and Lump.

The forces that are trying to saddle Mrs. Crawford with the murder charge are scoring heavily in the closely-allied civil suit. Heirs of Joshua B. Crawford, trying to break the will by which the widow received the bulk of the estate, charging undue influence, have produced a number of witnesses to swear to an antagonism between Crawford and Mrs. Mary B. Crawford.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. L. C. Dillingsley, who testified that Joshua B. Crawford said, time and again, that he would not marry the woman. This statement was elicited in the attempt to prove that Crawford was not rational, and probably was intoxicated, when he married Mrs. Crawford.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Mrs. Dillingsley, who said she lived in the Crawford home on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death, told of instances of alleged cruelty on Mrs Crawford's part, directed particularly toward a Miss Scott. Mrs. Sallie Alexander, an old woman of Henry County, was another witness by whom it was sought to prove habitual drunkenness on Crawford's part.

Mrs. Crawford, released from the Tower on bail of $6,250, has remained in the seclusion of her home on West Peachtree street all week, steadfastly quiet and refusing all statements in the face of the accusations against her. She has said nothing regarding the case, except a simple denial of the charges.

Reporters seeing her were treated courteously and quietly, and Mrs. Crawford seemed not averse to talk to them freely. But in most of the talk the subject of the murder charge and the plot charge in which Lump's name appears was carefully skirted.

Mrs. Crawford is a large woman, of dignified appearance. Not one moment since her arrest Saturday night has her composure broken, even slightly. In the Tower she received the few persons who called on her, and during the visit did not exhibit a sign of perturbation.

Calls Charge "Awful Thing."

To reporters and to all her visitors, when she mentioned at all the subject of the murder charge, she referred to it as "this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford finds staunch friends in her children and grandchildren, who visited her at the Tower, and were with her almost all the few hours she spent in jail, bringing her flowers, a savory meal, and other tokens of their love.

Mrs. Crawford's children are bitter in their speech against the nephews and neices of Joshua B. Crawford, who, they say, are persecuting their mother with extreme cruelty. Mrs. Crawford herself accused her enemies of cruelty and lack of feeling.

Mrs. Crawford met Joshua B. Crawford when she was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine, wither Crawford went in search of health. It was there she met him, and there that she married him. At his death, there was a settlement of his estate, Mrs. Crawford taking hold of the affairs with a capable hand.

An agreement was signed, and the affairs of Joshua B. Crawford, deceased, seemed amicably settled. Then the litigation was sprung. In the first bill of complaint the heirs who contested the will charged Mrs. Crawford with poisoning her husband, and of exerting undue influence to procure a will in her favor. But it was not until three years later, two weeks ago, that an examination of the remains of Joshua B. Crawford to ascertain traces of poison was ordered. Upon the examination came the verdict of the physician that traces of poison were vident, and Mrs. Crawford was arrested.

With preliminary hearing waived, Mrs. Crawford's case is flatly up to the grand jury, which, without definite date of meeting, awaits the call of the Solicitor General. The body probably will be assembled next week

MRS. MARY BELLE CRAWFORD, held on poison charge in famous will case mystery, with her grandchild, Viola Belle Bennett.

Fortune in Gold Nuggets Awaits Heir

Wealth Will Revert to State of Kansas Unless Kin of Old Woman Appear.

HUTCHINSON, July 19.—There is a bag of gold nuggets and gold dust awaiting heirs that may go to the State of Kansas. These nuggets and the gold dust, along with some money and other personal property to the value of $10,000, are in the hands of former Sheriff G. M. Duckworth, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ana M. Bernhert, who died a few days ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Some years ago when Mrs. Bernhert, who lived alone, was found to be of unsound mind, Dr. Duckworth was named as her guardian and she was taken to an asylum for treatment. In searching the house he found scattering personal property. It was found that much of it was gold nuggets and dust, saved, evidently, from some former mining experience, and hoarded away.

Baby Sips Hat Bleach; Dies from Poisoning

Mother, Bedridden from Appendicitis, Is Unable to Stop Child from Drinking Acid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—As a result of drinking a mixture of lye and oxalic acid, used by her father to clean an old straw hat, Dorothy E. Smith, 20 months old, died yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her father is Leo Smith, of No. 47 Brooklyn avenue, Jamaica, an employee of the Long Island Railroad.

The child's mother is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She and the baby were alone in the house yesterday when the child drank the mixture. She heard the baby's screams, but could not leave her bed, so she screamed, too, and neighbors who responded called a doctor.

RENO SINGS ITS SWAN SONG AS DIVORCE MECCA

Grand Rush of Colonists to Take Advantage of the Old Law Comes to an End.

RENO, July 19.—With such songs as "Meet a Friend From Your Home Town" and "At the Devil's Ball," sung by feminine entertainers from Metropolitan music halls, accompanied by high-class orchestras, the divorce colony celebrated the past week the beginning of the end of the Nevada quick divorce.

On the stroke of the midnight hour on Monday the curtain dropped upon one scene in Reno's notable divorce colony performance which has commanded the attention of the world for so long—that of the almost daily appearance of new faces upon the streets, as men and women, from plain country folk to elaborately gowned and bejeweled society beauties, arrived to begin their required six months' residence in the State and county, preparatory to the prospective divorce action.

Law Halts Colonists.

No more will incoming trains deposit these colonists and carloads of trunks, for the familiar song, "I'm on My Way to Reno," has been shelved by the action of the last Legislature, when it dealt the knock-out blow in its ultimatum that no divorce proceeding shall be instituted in the State of Nevada under the existing six-month residence law after December 21 next, thereby limiting the time in which newcomers could begin such residence period to Monday last.

Previous to July, 1909, the presence here for divorce of but an occasional person of prominence merely commanded attention to that individual, but it led to a method of publicity by an attorney which started the ball rolling, and it has never stopped rolling. Its greatest momentum is being witnessed now.

All Houses Are Thronged.

During the past month, and especially the week ending on Monday, the throng of newcomers has experienced great difficulty in securing such apartments as they might desire. All the hotels are crowded, as are the desirable rooming houses. Available cottages are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. In many cottages from four to six divorcees are living.

Some private boarding houses are housing as many as ten of the fair sex, and men. There are now scores of so-called "divorcees' nests" here. Every train the past fortnight has unloaded new arrivals, the preponderance of men and very young women, seemingly well to do and fashionable being noticeable. The proportion of men to women increased largely. Baby carriages and dogs played conspicuous parts.

Attending Funerals Hobby of Old Squaw

"Glass Eye," Noted for Lamentations at Obsequies, at Last Principal at Mortuary Ceremony.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREG., July 19.—"Glass Eye" is dead. She was an aged Indian woman, well known here since the settlement of this section. It was one of her hobbies to attend every funeral that she could, and on these occasions she posed as chief mourner by her excessive lamentations.

Her name has been forgotten by the whites, who only know her by the nickname, which is said to have been given her when young, because of the brightness of her eyes and not because of any abnormality in them.

She was about 75 years old, and is reported to have been the sister of "White Cindy," another noted aborigine.

Boy Finds $35,500; Hides it from Police

Advertises That He Picked up Money and Declares He Will Return it to Owner.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., July 19.—Brayton Gardner, 18 years old, who announced he had found $35,500 in a leather bag on the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad, to-night refused to tell the police where he put the money.

"I have hidden it in a safe place," said he, "and if someone claims it I will produce it immediately."

Gardner walked into the office of a local newspaper and inserted an advertisement, reading:

"Found, $35,500. Owner can have money by identifying it and satisfying Brayton Gardner."

Stolen Jewels Are Found Buried in Park

Last of $100,000 Loot Stolen by Employee of Firm Recovered After Confession.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The final confession of young William Beck, who stole $100,000 worth of jewelry from his employers, Udall & Ballou, was obtained yesterday. The last $2,800 of the loot was found by detectives. It was buried in Central Park.

Beck had insisted until yesterday that he had told all. But Inspector Faurot finally got him to reveal the hiding place. The police were told to enter the park at 110th street and Eighth avenue and count eighteen stone blocks in the wall to a spot where a small bush grew. Buried 6 inches they found nine diamond rings and a pair of cuff buttons.

Congress to Lose Costly Stationery

Government Printer Is Ordered to Stop Use of Costly Material for Lawmakers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Members of Congress will draw no more costly embossed stationery at the expense of the Government. Hereafter they will get along with plain, every-day printed letterheads and envelopes.

The Joint Committee on Printing discovered that the Government Printing Office last year turned out 11,000,000 embossed pieces of stationery at an extra cost of $30,000. An order has been issued to the Government Printer to stop this extravagance.

On the Senate side of Congress this economy reform is resented, but it goes just the same. If Senators want stationery de luxe they must foot the bills out of their private purse.

Indian Girl Seeks Office in Oklahoma

Educated Cherokee Business Woman Would Be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

VINITA, OKLA., July 19.—Announcement by Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, that she will not be a candidate for re-election, brings into the race for the Democratic nomination a young Cherokee woman, Miss Pearl Holderman, of Northern Craig County, whose ability as an educated business woman has given her a wide acquaintance in Eastern Oklahoma.

Miss Holderman has large business responsibilities, and her experience and ability have made her more than a match for most men. Because of her father's impaired health she manages his cattle ranch, directing every detail, including the care of a herd of blooded cattle. This young Cherokee woman owns a thousand acres of land in her own name, all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

INDIANS, 102 AND 97, WILL VISIT FAIR DIRECTORS

MONTROSE, COLO., July 19.—The board of directors of the Western Slope Fair Association decided to bring 50 Ute Indians from the reservation in Utah to Montrose during the fair in September. The Indians will include Chief McCook, 97, and his sister, Chippeta, 102, who is the widow of Chief Ouray.

Old Age Attributed To Her False Teeth

Woman, Age 99, Declares She Has Used Set 59 Years—Always Chews Well.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 19.—At the age of 99, Mrs. Levina Derr, of Hudson, declares that her long life is due solely to the fact that she bought a set of good store teeth fifty years ago.

Mrs. Derr is still active. Five generations of her family are living, and she declares she is as young as any of them.

"I was blessed with good teeth," she said, "and I always made it a point to chew my food well. A good stomach is the foundation of good health, and the stomach can not be good unless the teeth are good."

Women Wear Bath Dresses Down Town

Startle Natives by Appearing In Ice Cream Parlor in Their Beach Attire.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Two buxon matrons and a miss about 19 years old created a sensation about dusk by walking through the streets of Warwood, north of this city, in bathing costumes. Unabashed by the attention they attracted, they entered an ice cream parlor, where they ordered ices, and after eating them walked to their homes.

The matter was brought to the attention of Town Marshal E. L. Pool, who immediately issued a warning that women appearing hereafter in such scant attire would subject themselves to arrest.

Naturalist Editor Has Forest Sanctum

Sets His Type In Shade of Hemlock and Lives in Wigwam all Winter.

WESTFIELD, MASS., July 19.—A unique editorial and printing plant is that known as "Seneca Wigwam, The Press in the Forest," located in the heart of the woods about three miles west of this place.

The sanctum is a typical Indian tepee, where the editor, Joseph C. Duport, an out-of-door enthusiast, prints, illustrates and publishes an original magazine called the Woronoco Valley Calumet.

In summer the editor sets his type in the shade of a hemlock, and in the winter or during inclement weather his work is done in the wigwam, which contains an up-to-date twentieth century printing press and equipment.

Policeman's Watch Stops Death Bullet

Hospital Steward Thinks Patrolman Burglar and Fires Six Shots at His Heart.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 19.—A watch in his vest pocket stopped a bullet which otherwise probably would have pierced the heart of Patrolman O'Hara last night. The shot was one of six fired by Roscoe Gray, steward of the Oakland College of Medicine, under the impression that O'Hara was a burglar. The other shots did not hit O'Hara. Gray nearly collapsed when he learned his mistake.

O'Hara was on his rounds when he noticed a door in the college building open. Trying to close it, he set off a burglar alarm and Gray opened fire in the dark.

Silver Wire Travels Through Two Arms

CHICO, CAL., July 19.—James Dupen, a Chico merchant, to-day submitted to an operation, in which a piece of silver wire, used in closing a wound on the left wrist in 1897, was extracted from the index finger of the right hand. The wire, which is one-half inch long, passed up one arm, across the chest and worked down the opposite arm, emerging at the finger.

Bee Sting on Neck Fatal to Farmer

Dies from Paralysis of Heart Fifteen Minutes After Insect Poison Enters System.

BRISTOL, PA., July 19.—John Pickering, a farmer of Woodbine, while engaged in his customary duties about the farm Saturday, was stung on the neck by a large bee and within fifteen minutes he was dead.

Dr. Heritage, of Langhorne, was summoned, but did not arrive in time to render aid. The doctor says death was the result of paralysis of the heart, caused by the bee sting.

FARMERS' UNION HOPE OF SOUTH, SAY ORGANIZERS IN GREAT GEORGIA CAMPAIGN

Charles S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee, Sweep Through the State With a Message to Planters to Check Enormous Crop Waste.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a flying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"The marvelous grandeur of the world's progress astounds and amazes us, yet the wonderful story would never have been written had it not been for the ever-faithful farmer.

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"When we became a nation the farmer owned 90 per cent of the wealth. In 1850 our national wealth was $7,000,000,000 and the farmer owned $4,000,000,000, or four-sevenths.

"In 1913 our national wealth is estimated at $131,000,000,000, and the farmer owns $26,000,000,000. Our farm property is valued at nearly $40,000,000,000, but $14,000,000,000 is owned by other classes than farmers.

"The above figures show that farmers are not holding their own, for if they had kept pace with other vocations since 1850 they would now own $75,000,000,000 worth of wealth instead of $26,000,000,000. Their lack of business methods and failure to match conditions have cost them $49,000,000,000. This would buy all the farm property in the United States and have enough left to buy a half interest in all the railroads.

"In a score of years the farmers of this country have produced $135,000,000,000 worth of farm products, or enough to buy all the property in the United States. Yet this wonderful amount of wealth has not gone to the farmers. We have 10,000 men in this country who own an average of $10,000,000 each. And their combined wealth is $100,000,000,000. The other 99,990,000 people own $31,000,000,000. Of our 100,000,000, 60,000,000 are homeless.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The 12,000,000 farmers of this country are laboring under an indebtedness of $6,000,000,000. On this amount, counting commissions and renewal charges, they are paying an annual interest of 8 1-2 per cent, or $510,000,000, while the business men and manufacturers pay an average of 5 per cent interest, or $300,000,000, on $6,000,000,000. This $210,000,000 excess interest paid by the farmers would pay off our farm indebtedness in 28 years. Co-operative efforts and rural credits would right these wrongs. So, let us continue to discourage this present system until it has passed into history and is only remembered in the misty back yonder.

"Distribution being one of our greatest problems, our second declaration of purposes is to assist our members in buying and selling. The Federal Government has spent $100,000,000 in the last ten years, teaching us how to produce, and not a cent to teach us how to market.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

Expense Is Unavoidable.

"We all agree that there is an unavoidable expense in the distribution of farm products. But let us make what seems to us a reasonable division of the $13,000,000,000 consumers other than farmers pay for farm products each year.

Give the wholesaler and jobber $1,000,000,000, the transportation companies $3,000,000,000, the retailer $1,500,000,000; then throw in $500,000,000 for all possible misallowance, and we have $9,000,000,000, which is $3,000,000,000 more than the farmer gets. This amount falls into the waste basket of speculation.

"If it were divided between the producer and consumer it would clothe the naked, feed the hungry and educate the illiterate, instead of breeding millionaires, paupers, anarchists and suicides. If the Farmers' Union fills its mission, it will not be long until a less portion of the laborers' toil will be turned in at the toll gate of the palace and a great portion will find its way through the door of the cottage, and help to lift the humble tenement to the comfort, dignity and luxury of a home.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 250,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If property handled this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices; we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep his pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

Human Chain Saves Man on Niagara Brink

Four Men Take Desperate Chance in Rescue Work at Edge of Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 19.—Truman Chapman, aged 22, of Hamilton, Ont., is alive to-day after falling into the Niagara River and being rescued at the very brink of the American Falls. Four men formed a human chain, and, by taking a desperate chance, saved Chapman when his body providentially lodged between projections of rocks.

Chapman, who is subject to fits, was leaning against a railing at Prospect Point, directly over the water's edge, when he fell in. The current from this point to the brink of the falls is irresistible, but the unconscious body struck the rocks just right to be held temporarily. John Hughes, T. S. Winders, T. D. Thomas and an unidentified man were the heroes.

Advises Wives to Keep Their Secrets

Head of National Homestead Association Says It's a Mistake for Husbands to Know Too Much.

BOSTON, July 19.—"The wise wife never tells her husband all her secrets. She knows better than to run the chance of losing her independence."

So declared Mrs. Charlotte Smith, head of the National Homestead Association, to-day. The association is studying to find out what makes happy homes. It has learned that if a wife tells her husband everything it is a lesson to him not to tell her his secrets.

"Many divorces are occasioned by married couples knowing too much of each other," declared Mrs. Smith.

Aged Sisters Make White House Carpets

Old Women, Expert Dyers and Weavers, Are Preparing to Decorate Mrs. Wilson's Room.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 19.—Miss Caroline McHargue and Mrs. Martha Walker, of Elkin, aged 74 and 76, respectively, are engaged in preparing carpets, druggets and portieres to furnish the room of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the White House at Washington. They are experts in the blending of colors.

The two aged women are sisters. They live together and are expert dyers and weavers, using the old-time barks and herbs in the dyeing process, and the old-fashioned hand loom cards and spinning wheel.

Cartridge Placed on Track Shoots Youth

Boy May Die from Bullet Which Penetrated Lungs as Result of Belated Celebration.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—A delayed Fourth of July celebration on the part of small boys yesterday may result fatally for 8-year-old Francis Wright, who received a bullet in the chest at Twenty-fourth and Bryant streets. In company with his chums, he had been placing cartridges on the car tracks. One of them exploding, sent a bullet whizzing at him. He was taken to the Mission Emergency Hospital, where it was found that the bullet had penetrated the lung. The boy's parents had him removed to his home, No. 2582 Twenty-fourth street, where his condition is considered grave.

THIS DRESS WAS TOO MUCH FOR PRIM RICHMOND.

THIS Picture shows Miss Flossie Brown in the split skirt which caused so much excitement in Richmond, Va., that the young lady was arrested, fined $25 and given twenty-four hours in which to leave town. The idea of the slit skirt did not appeal at all to the Virginians, but it has not been received with so much disfavor elsewhere, for Miss Brown, or Blossom Browning, as she prefers to be called, has been invited to wear it in Pittsburg and Baltimore.

Quarrel at License Desk Halts Wedding

Prospective Bride Objected to Way Her Fiance Spelled Name and Ceremony Was Called Off.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., July 19. A near-wedding was spoiled to-day when the bride-to-be and the bridegroom-to-be quarreled over the spelling of the latter's name. C. W. Clane, of Los Angeles, aged 44, and wearing diamonds as large as hickory nuts, accompanied by a woman about 35 years old, applied for a license.

He started to fill out the blank. "Spell it right, please; spell it Cline," whispered the woman, but Clane just kept on writing.

Again his prospective bride, speaking right out loud, said he was spelling his name wrongly. But still Clane paid no attention. Then, in tones of downright anger, she exclaimed: "You spell your name properly or there will be no wedding."

"Very well," answered the man, and he crumpled up the application blank and they left the office.

NATION FINALLY REFUSES BURR'S PENSION PLEA

United States Decides After 79 Years Just to File Request in National Museum.

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—After some delay—79 years, to be more or less exact—the United States Government has decided on a final action on Aaron Burr's application for a pension. The Government proposes to put the application in the National Museum. This is a patriotic and quite inexpensive method of disposing of a formal application for money.

Exhibited in a glass inclosed case in the museum, the papers may rest peacefully and indefinitely, telling future generations that in his last days Burr was considerably "hard-up." This is a fact not generally known. But if future generations happen to be observant they may notice that the papers show Uncle Sam to be a bit tardy in matters of pensions.

Papers Valuable Historically.

Historically, the papers are very valuable. They contain a letter written by George Washington to Aaron Burr, which even to-day—about 135 years after the letter was penned—is in a state of perfect preservation. Any student of values of historical relics can tell how much such a thing is worth. Officials at the National Museum declare the letter to be "invaluable."

The paper is a bit yellow but it is intact. The ink is a trifle faded, but can be read without difficulty even without the aid of glasses. And, furthermore, the letter reveals a bit of Washington's character more clearly than a volume of history. The missive shows how the general treated with his officers. Burr had written to Washington requesting leave of absence from military duty on account of ill health and suggesting that while off duty his pay may be discontinued.

Here is George Washington's reply to Burr:

Headquarters,
Frederick, 26th Oct., 1778.

"Dear Sir:

"I have your favor of the 24th. You, in my opinion, carry your ideas of delicacy too far when you propose to drop your pay while the recovery of your health necessarily requires your absence from the service. It is not customary, and it would be unjust. You therefore have leave to retire until your health is so far re-established as to enable you to do your duty.

"Be pleased to give the Colonel notice of this, that he may know where to call upon you should any unforeseen exigency require it.

"I am, dear sir,

"Your mo. obt. servt.,
"GEO. WASHINGTON.

"Lt. Col. Burr."

Burr's Final Appeal.

George Washington's letter is regarded as the most valuable paper among the sheaf composing Burr's application, but the application itself, Burr's formal appeal for a pension, has much historical worth because it is Burr's own record of his military service, written in 1834, just two years before his death, at the age of 80 years, in Port Richmond, Staten Island, N. Y. The papers contain no mention of Burr's famous duel with Alexander Hamilton, in which Hamilton was mortally wounded.

Burr even failed to mention in the papers that he had been Vice President of the United States, and reference to the fact that he was arrested and tried for treason for attempting to form a republic west of the Mississippi is also omitted. In the application it is recited, however, that Burr was unable to appear in court to swear to the facts by reason of "bodily infirmity."

CONVICTS OFFERED PARDON IF THEY WILL PICK BERRIES

GEORGETOWN, DEL., July 19.—Full and complete pardons await even the prisoners in Sussex County if they will pick strawberries or work on the farms.

The scarcity of labor has become a serious problem to the farmers this year, and so serious has the question become that many of them have notified committing magistrates that they will pay all fines for intoxicated and disorderly persons if it can be arranged that these people pick berries.

CHANGS, ON WAY HOME, CLING TO YANKEE FRILLS

Wife and Children of Chinese Minister Sail Derssed in Latest American Fashions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—After more than three years in Washington with her husband, Minister Chang, Mme. Chang is returning to the Orient. She is accompanied by two daughters, a son, Henry K. Chang; a little daughter-in-law and a tiny grandchild. During her residence in America Mme. Chang has changed her ideas about many things, and about others she maintains the old Chinese beliefs.

The two young daughters, Miss Alice and Miss Lillie Chang, have been attending school in Washington for two years, and with the progress of their education have abandoned their picturesque nature clothes for American garb.

Whether they will adopt the clothes of their native country on their return remains to be seen. Miss Alice Chang, who spoke for the party at the St. Francis before they sailed on the Manchuria, said:

"It all depends on what is in fashion in China.

Favor American Fashions.

"If we find American clothes fashionable out there, we shall wear them. We adopted them when we entered Gunnison Hall, our Washington school. These are more convenient when traveling," she added, pointing to a pale blue silk crepe costume with the latest frills and furbelows. "When we wear our other clothes, people stare so, and sometimes they laugh. They aren't used to them in Washington."

The question of recent changes in China is of especial interest to Mme. Chang and her daughters.

The idea that women may vote in China and that the door of opportunity is opening for them daily there has caused the Chinese women to be thoughtful.

"I don't know about this voting," said Mme. Chang, through her daughter. "I don't believe very much in it."

"Only for some women," broke in one daughter.

Education Qualification.

"I would make an educational qualification," said Miss Lillie. "Not every woman ought to vote."

"Home is the place for women," said Mme. Chang, true to her country's traditions and centuries of training. "A woman ought to do housekeeping, to stay at home and to have children."

Mme. Chang and the daughters are opposed to the Western idea of a woman earning her own living. They believe she should want to stay at home to be cared for, even if she has to do without some of the extras which her own money can secure.

"Women in China probably never will reach that stage," said Mme. Chang. "There will be fewer opportunities for them to enter professional and business fields."

College is a goal which is being aspired to by the two daughters, although they are not sure yet what particular lines they want to pursue. "We can go if we want to, you know," said Miss Alice. "Our people believe in college for girls if they want it."

Surgeon Rebuilding Man's Entire Face

Ears and Nose Burned Months Ago Are Being Replaced by Series of Operations.

GRAHAM, MO., July 19.—Pierce Fleming, who lives near Graham, is undergoing one of the most remarkable series of operations ever attempted in Missouri. His face is being built anew.

Several months ago the Fleming home was burned and Pierce was severely burned about the head. For a time it was thought he could not live. He finally recovered, but his ears and nose were badly scarred.

A Kansas City surgeon was consulted and he began the work of rebuilding the face of the burned man. The ears have been completely rebuilt and the doctor is now working on the nose and the eyes. It is barely possible now to discern the difference between the new nose and ears of Fleming and the ones he lost in the fire.

WOMAN JURORS SCORN STYLE OF SMART LAWYER

Beau Brummel Clothes and Bachelor Button of Barrister Fail to Win His Cause.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Personal pulchritude and unusually smart habiliments, heightened by a bachelor's button and an ingratiating manner, failed to win for Assistant District Attorney Maxwell McNutt, in his appeal to the jury of women which tried Mrs. Bertha J. Williams on an extortion charge to-day. After deliberating one hour and 55 minutes, the jury, the first in the history of the world composed of women to hear a felony case, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

"Of course she said she did what she did, but we didn't think when she said she did it, she meant she had meant to do it," said one of the jurywomen.

Hence, Mrs. Williams, attired in a fetching Milan hat and a neat white serge tailored suit, much scrutinized by the jurywomen, made discreet osculatory advances to her benefactors, and the incident was closed.

Mrs. Annette Robinson, also armored in attractive feminine fixings, was the complaining witness in the case. She accused Mrs. Williams of having written her a letter April 8, attempting to extort $150 in return for the delivery of a trunk said to have contained certain evidence which, according to the letter, would have embarrassed Mrs. Robinson, had it fallen into the hands of the police.

Meows from Limb of Tree to Voice Love

Chicago Romeo Tries Novel Method of Wooing, but Falls Into Clutches of Law.

CHICAGO, July 19.—John Wadjinski's method of love-making goes back to the days when anthropoid Romeos used to hang by their tails and carol love songs all night long. He put his theories into practice on the night of May 3. To-day he was fined $5 and costs by Judge Sabath, who could find no sympathy for the unconventional wooing.

Sophia Emmerling had retired for the night. John Wadjinski strode through the night with caveman emotions stirring in his breast. He entered the Emmerling yard and climbed a tree. He straddled a branch opposite Sophia's window and began to "meow" like a cat. To the girl thus rudely awakened he made love in a voice that could be heard for a block.

Mrs. Anna Emmerling, the girl's mother, called the police. Wadjinski was yanked from romance to the jail.

MYSTERY MAN'S NAME TO STAY SECRET ALWAYS

Operation on Brain Fails to Reveal Identity of "J. C. R." Has Baffled Surgeons.

ROCHESTER, MINN., July 19.—That "J. C. R.," the mystery patient in the Rochester State Hospital, will never know who he is nor will the world, unless friends of olden days come to the rescue, and that he will never again speak, is the verdict of the surgeons, following a remarkable operation performed upon the brain.

"It is problematical that the operation will accomplish its purpose," said C. C. Heyerdale, first assistant superintendent of the State Hospital, after leaving the operating room.

The opening of the skull revealed a large area of degenerated brain cells covering the centers of speech and memory, and an unusually large cyst containing fluid was removed. This would indicate that in times past "J. C. R." probably suffered a hemorrhage of the brain, which could have been the result of a stroke of apoplexy or an injury inflicted upon the skull or brain. The unusually large area of degeneration discourages any hope that the memory will ever be restored or speech recovered.

Gets Blow Intended For His Twin Brother

Chicago Youth Struck When Angry Swain Avenges Pleasantry His Duplicate Was Guilty Of.

CHICAGO, July 19.—William and Otto Andler, of 3751 North Whipple Street, are twins. William passed a pleasantry about a lass who was going her way with one William Dieverkorn.

Sudden anger surged through Dieverkorn, but he held himself in check and escorted the young woman home. Then he came back, met Andler on the street an gave him a jarring wallop.

Andler soon discovered that the blow was meant for his brother and that Dieverkorn got mixed in the delivery of the goods.

Otto Andler refused to rest on this explanation. He caused the arrest of Dieverkorn, and it came out in court how William got the laugh, Otto got the punch and Dieverkorn got the hook.

Judge Sabith inspected the twins, said he couldn't see any difference and dismissed the case, warning Dieverkorn to be more discriminating in the future.

DORSEY FIGHTS MOVEMENT TO INDICT CONLEY

Solicitor Is Bombarded With Letters to Proceed Against Negro as Slayer of Mary Phagan.

THE GRAND JURY IS CALLED

Hottest Battle of Famous Case To Be Waged Behind Closed Doors of Inquisitory Body.

Solicitor Dorsey is fighting vigorously the movement in the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley Monday for the murder of Mary Phagan, despite the bambardment of letters from many citizens and by the sentiment of some of its own members.

It is for the consideration of these letters and petitions, asking the reopening of the Phagan matter, that the meeting has been called.

It was in the face of Solicitor Dorsey's bitterest opposition that the meeting was called at all. Foreman Beattie issued his defi after a previous Grand Jury had been defeated in its efforts to reopen the case with a view of indicting Jim Conley and after Dorsey explicitly had expressed his strongest disapproval of such a move.

Crucial Battle Coming.

With the first skirmish won by those in favor of the indictment of Conley, the hottest battle is yet to be waged behind the closed doors of the jury room. The question first will be on whether the grand jurors consider it proper at this time to reopen the investigation whose first chapter resulted in the indictment of Leo M. Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan. Solicitor Dorsey will lay before the body for the first time all of his reasons for desiring a postponement of all further investigation until after the trial of Frank.

Should the Solicitor be driven back from this position by the Grand Jury again disregarding his wishes and taking up the investigation, he will be forced to take refuge in the last ditch and make his fight against the indictment of Conley.

With all the weight of evidence which has piled up against the negro, it is regarded as beyond the realm of possibilities that he could persuade the jurors to return a "no bill" against Conley on the charge of murder. Dorsey's one remaining hope at this time would be, it is said, to induce the Grand Jury to waive definite action until after the trial of Frank, when it will be in a position to say whether an indictment shall be drawn against Conley as an accessory after the fact, to which he has confessed, or as the actual murderer.

Dorsey Refuse sto Comply.

The Solicitor's attitude in the matter plainly was shown by his statement when Foreman Beattie went to him Friday seeking to have him call the meeting. Dorsey flatly refused and said:

"The meeting's only purpose will be to exploit the evidence and embarrass the State, and I hope the Grand Jury when it meets will decide to leave the matter alone.

"The indictment of Conley at this time will be a useless procedure that will not stop the trial of Frank. It will only have a mild but undesirable effect on the State's case.

"Conley is in jail and is going to stay there for some time. He is where the authorities can put their hands on him, and he can be indicted much more properly after the Frank case has been disposed of than before, and by the delay there is no danger of a miscarriage of justice."

The Solicitor's position is attacked as palpably unfair by those who have been working to bring about the indictment of the negro. Dorsey would have the testimony of the negro accredited as that of any free and trustworthy citizen, while those opposing him declare it should be taken in the light of that of a possible murderer who is endeavoring to shift the blame on another's shoulders, they say.

Evidence More Direct.

They add that the evidence against Conley is far more direct and damning than any ever brought against Frank. They charge, on this account, that Conley has been protected and "coddled" when he should have been placed on the same basis as the other suspect in the case and should go before the jury in that aspect.

General denials were entered Saturday to the story published Friday that the Pinkertons had changed their attitude in the murder mystery and were convinced of the innocence of Frank. Chief of Detectives Lanford declared that Harry Scott had reaffirmed his belief in the guilt of Frank and the innocence of Conley, except as accessory after the fact.

Atlanta Day To Be Society Event

Knoxville Exposition Plans Feature

Mrs. Van Deventer, Daughter of Mr. Justice Lurton, to Visit City for Conservation Fair.

Atlanta Day at the National Conservation Exposition in Knoxville this fall will be one of the largest of the many special days arranged for the national fair in the East Tennessee city.

Atlanta Day, according to plans now on foot, will be largely a society function, for the members of the Woman's Department of the exposition headed by Mrs. Horace VanDeventer, a daughter of Justice Lurton of the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as Knoxville's acknowledged society leader, expect to formulate their plans so that many of Atlanta society folk will make the trip to Knoxville for that day.

In addition it is planned to make Atlanta Day at the exposition one of peculiar and intimate interest to all residents of the city.

Mrs. VanDeventer to Come Here.

The plans for this special day are now in the making. They will be matured probably while the delegation of Knoxville business men is in Atlanta next week, and later when Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers in the woman's department come to the Georgia metropolis to take up the matter with Atlanta society folk.

In the preparations for what undoubtedly will be the South's greatest exposition, the woman's department is playing no small part. In Knoxville the expositon management considers itself fortunate that Mrs. VanDeventer consented to take the direction of the woman's work. She has a very large circle of friends and acquaintancse throughout the country, in cities of the North as well as in cities of the South, and what is more, she has succeeded in interesting large numbers of society women in the work she has under way.

Miss Mabel Boardman, president of the American Red Cross Society and a woman who finds time in the multitude of her various philanthropic work to devote herself to society, will be the guest of the woman's department of the exposition on September 19. Miss Boardman to accept this invitation will be obliged to cut short her vacation, but she has gladly consented to do this rather than miss going to Knoxville. She will be made the recipient of many social favors and attentions while in Knoxville. She will be the house guest of Mrs VanDeventer.

Mrs. Hammond Interested.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, of Washington, wife of the multi-millionaire mining engineer, who was the special Ambassador from the United States to England at the time of the coronation of King George, is another society woman who has become interested in the Knoxville show and who will come to that city for one of the special days. Mrs. Hammond is president of the National Civic Federation, which will have an extensive exhibit at the Exposition.

Mrs. John Goelet, of Washington; Miss Mabel Wetmore and other women whose names are known the country over will also be guests of the woman's department while the Exposition gates are open. Recently Mrs. Van Deventer made a trip to Nashville to interest the women of that city. On very short notice a meeting was called. Two hundred or more Nashville women went to that meeting. A number of men went also. There was much enthusiasm shown. The result was that plans were completed then and there for a Nashville Day.

More than that—the Nashville Park Commissioners, under whose auspices a splendid exhibit of paintings is being shown in the Parthenon of that city, voluntarily and as a compliment to Mrs. VanDeventer decided to continue the exhibition almost to the time set for the opening of the Conservation Exposition. Then the exhibits will be moved to Knoxville. One of them will be shown in the Art Building; the other, which is the celebrated collection owned by Charles L. Freer, a millionaire art collector, of Detroit, will be placed in the Woman's Building.

Mrs. Denney Also Active.

Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers, among them Mrs. George W. Denney, fourth vice president, who is also the president of the Tennessee State Federation of Women's Clubs and very active in the club life of Knoxville and Tennessee, are planning now to come to Atlanta within a short time to talk matters over with Atlanta women. Just when Mrs. VanDeventer and Mrs. Denney will come or where the meeting will be held has not been decided.

The fact that Atlanta business men are showing a keener interest in the exposition—which is one designed to benefit the entire South—than they have heretofore, and the chances that Atlanta will be well represented at the exposition, is counted upon to assist the women.

The woman's department has planned its work along broad lines. The stereotyped exhibits that always have been a part of women's departments in other expositions will have no place in the Woman's Building at Knoxville. The idea behind the National Conservation Exposition is one of conservation, and these women have figured it out that there is probably nothing that needs conserving more than the energies and the health of women all over this broad land.

So that is what the exhibits in the woman's department will typify to a very large extent. Of course, the things that have a peculiar interest and attraction to women will not be overlooked.

ARTIFICIAL RAIN INSTALLED ON ATLANTA FARM

Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown Protect Crops With Pipe System.

"These dry nights, when my crops are burning up, I can smell that artificial rain a mile off," said a farmer in the suburbs of Atlanta.

The "artificial rain" of which he spoke is produced on three "fancy" farms within a short distance of Five Points, and, according to the unanimous verdict of Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown, who own "everhead irrigation" plants, it means salvation in dry years.

Stories are told of the wonderful crops these farmers grow—two yields of Irish potatoes a year, for instance, from 200 to 300 bushels an acre—six cuttings of alfalfa, crops of beans when the market is bare and beans are worth $2 a bushel.

Yet the system is simple enough.

Pipes Supply Rain.

On posts eight feet high rest pipes about two inches in diameter. These pipes run the whole length of the fields, and the lines of pipe are twenty feet apart. About two feet apart in the pipes are tiny holes. A gasoline engine, a pump which it operates, an abundant supply of water, and the thing is done.

Six hours each evening, when there is no rain, the pump is run and fine streams of water spurt from the holes in the pipes. At high pressure, these streams are thrown almost from one line of pipe to the next. Handles at convenient intervals make it possible to turn the pipes so that the streams are deflected in any direction and the ground thoroughly soaked with the spray.

This system excels ditch irrigation for Georgia soil for the reason that Georgia clay does not soak up water from a ditch in sufficient quantities. Besides, the soil cakes when water is applied in this way. "Artificial rain," however, coming down like a mist, permeates the whole soil and brings results.

Of course, an overhead pipe system is expensive. The cost is estimated at $250 per acre. This might be reduced somewhat if the farmer performed all the labor himself, or it might easily cost more if conditions were not entirely favorable. The increased yield, however, more than overbalances this initial outlay.

Loring Brown tells of getting an $1,100 crop of Irish potatoes from an acre, under his pipe system. In reality, there were two crops, a spring planting and a fall planting, and the potatoes brought a high price because they were sold for seed.

Fail to Realize Work.

"I have only one objection to seeing Belmont farm described in the newspapers," said Mr. Brown, as he sat in a swing on his front gallery and sorted a thick packet of letters. "My objection is that people read of big yields and good profits, then are anxious to try the same methods. They want to spend a lot of money to emulate Belmont, and fail to take account of the hard work that must go with it.

"A farmer, whether he has a fancy farm or one of the old-fashioned kind, must work eighteen hours a day. He must be on the job 365 days a year. That is what many people forget.

Five years ago, drouth killed the entire crop of potatoes on Belmont. Mr. Brown estimates that dry season cost him $3,000. That winter he went to Greeley, Colo., where overhead irrigation is in use, to see if he could work out a solution of the problem—some sort of insurance against drouth. The pipe lines were the answer. Farms around Atlanta can not grow the same yields produced around Greeley, but the difference in price caused by being closer to a good market overcomes the lesser yield, and more.

Zimmer Installs System.

Mr. Zimmer, on his Kimballville Farm, installed an identical system, though on a smaller scale, and since he installed it, never has had occasion to use it. By some streak of fate, his farm has been blessed with abundant rains.

But rain is freakish in choosing its itinerary. In Atlanta itself and out as far as the Chattahoochee River rains have been sufficient this year. But beyond the river there is serious drouth. Crops are drying up. Irrigation would have been the salvation of the farmers.

And as they sit in front of their homes at night, they can smell the sweet odor of refreshed fields at Belmont—"that darn artificial rain."

WIVES CREDITED WITH KEEPING HUSBANDS ALIVE

Medical Association Finds That Benedict's Regular Existence Is Better Than Bachelor's.

Supervision by wives as a possible reason for the greater longevity of married men than of bachelors is discussed by The Journal of the American Medical Association in its editorial section of the recently published statistics on this point. There is no remark on the statistics of more suicides among married men than bachelors.

The Journal has further information indicating that careful as the married men may be, with restraint once removed through the death or divorce of the wife, widowers and grass widowers leap into indiscretions and are lopped off more rapidly than either those still in the state or those who escaped matrimony.

Live Regular Lives.

"Undoubtedly the low death rate among married men is partly due to the fact that, as a rule, those who are in good health, are readier to marry, while those with more delicate health, especially if suffering from any definite ailment, are not willing to assume the burden and responsibility of a family," says The Journal. "Another factor is that married men live much more regular lives as a rule, and consequently avoid many of the dangers of irregular living.

"This view would seem to be corroborated by the statistics as to the mortality among married men who have lost their wives either by death or divorce. The death rate among these "unmarried men" is considerably higher than that of husbands of the same age, and even as a rule it is higher than that of the bachelors of the same age.

Widowers Die Fast.

"The death rate, for instance, of widowers and divorced men between 20 and 30 is nearly double that of single men. From 30 to 40 it is only 14.1 to 12.9, while from 40 to 50 the mortality of divorced and widowers is slightly less than that of single men of the same age. From 50 to 60, however, it is slightly higher once more.

"At all these ages the mortality rate among widowers and the divorced is at least nearly and sometimes double that of married men of the same age."

Feeds Her Pet Pig With a Silver Spoon

Denver Society Woman Provides Bed of Down and Linen for Her Porcine Possession.

DENVER, July 19.—Mrs. Whitney Newton, a Denver society matron, has a new pet.

Young Robert Newton came home a few evenings ago and brought a baby pig with him.

Mrs. Newton took the squirming animal into her arms and tried to make it comfortable, but without success. Finally, in desperation, she went to the linen closet, took out a fine piece of hemstitched linen, embroidered with blue flowers, wrapped it gently about the slick little pig, then laid him cautiously upon the downy pillows beside her own.

Piggy gave a satisfied little squeak, doubled up his feet and went off to sleep happily.

This cunning act won Mrs. Newton's heart, and from exasperation she developed a positive liking for her pet. His white skin is washed, combed and perfumed and he sleeps in a downy bed every night beside his mistress. He also eats from a silver spoon.

EXPRESS CLAIM OFFICES TO BE CONSOLIDATED

Savannah To Be Headquarters of Florida, Georgia and Southeastern Divisions of Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Consolidated claim offices of three divisions of the Southern Express Company will be located in Savannah after August 1, in pursuance of an order promulgated from the general headquarters of the concern several days ago, official notice of which has just been received here. Simultaneously general claim offices will be opened in Richmond and Chattanooga.

Claim departments, distinct and separate from the other branches of the company's business, will be an entirely new thing with this big corporation. W. K. Weaver, of Savannah, chief clerk in the office of Division Superintendent C. C. Wolfe, will be in charge of the consolidated claims office here.

Heretofore it has been the practice of the company to have small claims departments in the offices of each division superintendent, and with him as the chief claim agent.

The offices in Savannah will bring about the consolidation of the claims department of the Florida, the Georgia and the Southeastern divisions of the company. The headquarters of the Florida division have been in Jacksonville, while those of the Southeastern division have been in Atlanta. The Georgia division headquarters have always been in Savannah.

The consolidation will bring 42 new employees of the company to this city. About 25 of these will come from Atlanta, while the others will be transferred from Jacksonville.

The establishment of the claim office at Richmond will embrace the offices now at Wilmington, N. C.; Charlotte and Norfolk. The Chattanooga office will embrace all of the Western division of the company.

Court Calls Both of Boy's Parents Unfit

Serious Charges Are Made Against Proprietor of Inlet Hotel at Tybee and His Wife.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—So serious are the charges and counter-charges in the alimony case of Mrs. Annia Jones against W. A. Jones, proprietor of the Inlet Hotel at Tybee, that Judge Walter G. Charlton has stated from the bench in the Superior Court that he doesn't consider either the father or the mother fit to have the custody of their four-year-old son.

Witness testified to alleged misconduct of Mrs. Jones during the absence of her husband, who is an engineer on the Tybee Branch of the Central of Georgia Railroad and obliged to spend a portion of his time in the city. Other witness testified to gross neglect and mistreatment of Mrs. Jones on the part of her husband.

They called on Senators Bacon and Smith and had lunch with the latter.

Playground Question Rests With Militia

Savannah Volunteer Guards and Georgia Hussars Must Vote to Give Land for Purpose.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Whether the Park Extension will be converted into a model playground and athletic park has not been finally determined. The Savannah Volunteer Guards and the Georgia Hussars, the two military organizations which have not yet given their consent and approval to the plan, have not taken action in regard to the matter.

No special meeting of the Hussars has been held, owing to the absence from the city of Captain Frank P. McIntyre. The Guards have discussed the matter, but owing to the fact that no definite proposition has been put up to them, they have neither approved nor disapproved the plan.

The extension is under the control of the military and the city jointly, and has been set aside as a drill ground.

Letters left by the girl, who came here recently from Statesboro, indicate that she contemplated the deed for days before the actual attempt was made.

Davant has written to the general office in New Orleans, of the auditing company which recently checked up the books and affairs of the city government in Savannah requesting that a full and complete report on the result of these investigations be rendered at the earliest possible moment. Savannah to Ask Civil Service Law

Police and Fire Departments To Be Put Under Regulations—Efficiency Tests Are Planned.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Alderman George B. Elton's civil service bill will be introduced in the Legislature during the present session.

The special committee appointed by the Mayor to investigate the civil service regulations in other cities has completed its work and recommended the introduction of the bill at the present session. The measure will be immediately advertised for the specified period.

If the bill passes, the Mayor will be authorized to appoint a special committee of three, to be known as the Civil Service Commisson, this commission to have entire charge of the administration of the civil service law in the city. The bill provides that the police and fire departments be placed under civil service, the idea being to divorce these departments from politics.

The bill provides for efficiency tests for the members of the police and fire departments. The selection of appointees will be governed by their moral, mental and physical fitness, and their tenure of office will not depend on the vagaries of politics. They would not be subject to removal unless it were proved that they had been guilty of misconduct or that they were otherwise unfit for their positions.

Whether the bill will pass the Legislature is a question. Its passage will be determined largely by the attitude of the Chatham County Representatives toward it. If a majority of the legislators from this county agree it is a good measure, it probably will go through, but if there is a difference of opinion among the legislators, its defeat is pretty well assured.

LIARS' CONTEST ENDS IN TIE, ANOTHER IS TO BE HELD

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Because three well-known citizens tied for first place in the liars' convention just held in Waycross, it has been decided to hold a second convention to break the tie. The Moose Club is responsible for the inauguration of the novel convention and has decided to present an additional prize to the winner in the next.

City Officials Will Take Turn as Mayor

Savannah Executive Now Plans Regular Daily Period for Conferring With City Employees.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Hereafter city officials will be shown no favoritism when they call on Mayor Richard J. Davant on city business. They will have to take their chances along with everybody else. If one of the humblest citizens happens to get into the Mayor's reception room first the city official will have to wait his turn.

Mayor Davant has given his secretary instructions to this effect, and they will have to stand until a system of office hours which the Mayor has in mind can be put into effect.

It is the Mayor's plan to set aside a certain hour each day for interviews with city officials on city business. This hour will be made known to the people, and callers other than city officials will not be allowed to see the Mayor during that period. Another hour—or two, if necessary—will be set aside for the public.

At present there is no system of this sort at the City Hall, and the callers see the Mayor whenever their time comes. Heretofore city officials have been given precedence over all others irrespective of the time they arrived or how many people are ahead of them.

It has been the case that a city official was admitted to the Mayor the moment he arrived at the office, no matter if a dozen or so people had been waiting for some time for an interview.

JURY BELIEVES BULLARD TO BE SPAIN'S SLAYER

Investigation of Death of Eccentric and Wealthy Farmer Ends in Coroner's Verdict.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—The Clinch County Coroner's Jury investigating the mysterious murder of Mack Spain, an eccentric and wealthy farmer, has returned a verdict accusing Tom Bullard, a white man just entering the twenties.

Bullard is the man who found Spain's body, or rather informed searchers of the place where the body could be found. His part in the search for the body is one thing that has turned suspicion to him, as it is alleged he told members of the searching party Spain's body was on the edge of a pond and could be seen easily. When found the body was in a location that made it impossible for any one to see it from the place Bullard said he was when he first discovered the farmer's remains.

At least one more white man, and officers are inclined to believe a third, may become implicated. Bullard has steadfastly refused to make any statement beyond saying that he knows nothing of how Spain was killed.

Another arrest may be made within a few days. Both men suspected of knowing something of the death and the robbery have been found and it is declared will not be able to get away. Sheriff Lee, of Clinch, has been in Waycross working on a clew that he found near Spain's home and this, it is said, will fix the responsibility for the murder beyond any doubt. No one has been able to ascertain how much was taken from Spain, nor where it was put. Bullard has told officers nothing that will aid them in this respect.

Every door and window will be double locked and barred and rigged with wires in such way that if one is touched an alarm will be sounded.

FARM UNION TO UNITE FORCES WITH TOILERS

Federation of Labor and Agricultural Organization to Co-operate Closely if Plans Mature.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Plans that are expected to aid the proposed consolidation of work of the American Federation of Labor and the Farmers' Union were discussed at length in Waycross to-day when a joint committee representing the trade unionists and the Ware County Farmers' Union held a conference.

S. B. Marks, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, and Robert Fechner, secretary, attended, as did President James Cowart, of the Ware County Farmers' Union.

It is not proposed that the National Farmers' Union and the American Federation of Labor shall affiliate and become one big organization. The movement seeks only a unity of purpose—close co-operation for mutual welfare.

Following the conference it was announced that a joint meeting of the State executive committees of the Farmers' Union and the Georgia Federation of Labor would be called. When this is done it is expected that the national organizations will adopt a similar plan for use in the entire country.

Worth $250,000 Now, Still 'Bucks' Wood

E. G. Kastenhuber's Only New Plans Are to Widen Scope of His Laboratory Work.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Finding himself in possession of cash and property worth a quarter of a million dollars has not caused Edwin G. Kastenhuber to change his way of living. If anything, he is working harder now than before. He can be found any morning just at daylight out in his backyard cutting wood. That's his first morning work at home and he refers to it as his "exercise."

Plans for more extensive laboratory work have been made by Mr. Kastenhuber and with the means at hand to carry them out, he expects in a short while to demonstrate some valuable formulae. One of his successes is a mixture of ordinary South Georgia sand with chemicals, forming a hard tile, colored in any way desired. Fancy bricks made by him have withstood all kinds of tests.

Discussing the new turn of events, Mr. Kastenhuber says he does not feel any different since getting $250,000.

"In my new laboratory I will have fitted up special quarters for students and will have a department open to the medical profession. The best time I can have is when I am working, and I am certainly not going to start loafing just because I am well fixed," he said.

Storm Does Damage In Moultrie Section

Naval Stores Operators and Farmers Suffer Loss From Wind, Rain and Hail.

MOULTRIE, July 19.—The terrific wind and electrical storm that swept over this section last night wrought considerable damage over a wide area.

At Omega, just north of here, several houses were unroofed, while three were blown to the ground, the inmates escaping death in a miraculous manner. Pine trees boxed for turpentine snapped in two and the loss to naval stores operators will amount to hundreds of dollars. In the eastern part of the county a torrential rain, accompanied by hail, devastated crops. In Moultrie lightning struck one house. The high wind blew over a church in the suburbs.

R. L. English Is Found Guilty of Stealing Wire from Savannah Electric Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—With his pretty wife, not yet out of her teens, sitting in the courtroom, R. L. English has been tried and convicted in the City Court of the larceny of copper wire from the Savannah Electric Company. Mrs. English, hardly more than a girl, clad in a pink summer dress and wearing a big leghorn hat with a wreath of red roses, sat calmly through the trying ordeal. Mrs. English maintains that her husband is innocent of any intentional wrongdoing.

Indian Papoose Is Raised by Soldiers

Full-Blooded Modoc, Back at Old Home, Tells Romantic Story of Early Life.

KLAMATH FALLS, July 19.—Kit Carson, a full-blood Modoc, visited his native land a few days ago for the first time since his babyhood.

The story of the life of Carson is unique. In 1852 a detachment of Government troops was sent to the Klamath country to quiet reported uprisings among the Indians. A large band of Indians had established a village on the shore of the lake. When the Indians caught sight of the soldiers they made a hasty departure.

Kit Carson, who was then about a year old, was left behind by his frightened mother. It was difficult for the soldiers to determine what to do with the child. Finally a soldier named Woods asked that he be permitted to adopt the boy. He gave the little fellow the name of Kit Carson and found him a temporary home with a Spanish family at Yreka.

Police of Waycross For 'Slashed Skirt'

Men, Not Women, To Be Arrested If Latest Style Causes Too Much Excitement.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Wearers of the new style "slashed skirt" have nothing to fear in Waycross. The police will not arrest wearers of the new skirt, but will see that men do not let their curiosity make them obnoxious.

The first time a slashed skirt was seen here the wearer paraded up and down one of the city's main business streets and as long as she was on the street there was an unusual number of men found "strolling"—none of the strollers getting very far from the skirt. It is said that a number of women here have purchased the slashed skirts and after trying them on at home, have sewn up most of the slash or worn the skirt with a petticoat.

The boys turned out in force with their brass buttons, to the delight of the girls on the island. So far this has been the big event of the encampment. On Saturday the officer of the day was W. G. Fage, and officer of guard, J. J. West, both of Albany.

SEEKING CUTS IN EVERGLADES ASSESSMENTS

Dade County Commissioners to Hear Complaints of Land Companies on Monday.

JACKSONVILLE, July 19.—When the Dade County Commissioners meet Monday to begin the work of equalizing the taxes of the county, the representatives of the Everglade Land Companies in Dade County will be present to enter a protest against the present assessment of the lands held by them.

A similar case was decided by Judge Call in the Federal Court here last week, but J. M. Cobb, vice president of the Everglade Sugar and Land Company, declared that this decision would not affect the Dade County companies. Judge Call ruled against the Palm Beach companies who were fighting for a reduction in the valuation of $3 per acre. However, the Dade County companies do not believe they will be bound by this ruling, as their property is assessed at $6 per acre and is similar to that owned by the Palm Beach companies.

The County Commissioners are expecting to equalize the 1913 taxes Monday, and hundreds of taxpayers will be present to protest against present assessments. The Everglade Sugar and Land Company will be the largest landowner represented. The company has employed several of the best lawyers in Miami and expects to make a hard fight for tax reduction.

Trammell Apologizes For Ignoring Militia

But Officers Maintain Governor Neglected Visiting Camp to Curry Political Favor.

JACKSONVILLE, July 19.—Governor Park Trammell has sent a telegram to a newspaer here saying he had not intentionally meant to snub the National Guard of Florida by failure to visit the camp at Black Point last week. He says he was in Jacksonville on important matters of state and regets that he could not visit the encampment.

Militia officers here, however, insist the Governor's failure to visit the camp can not be construed as anything but an intentional slight, as he is the first Governor who has failed to show his interest in the military organization of the State. They contend the Governor's failure to visit camp was due to a desire to curry political favor with a certain element that has no use for citizen soldiers. Incidentally, they say, the Governor would like to go to the United States Senate.

As soon as the Panama Canal is completed the syndicate intends to increase the size of the line and take in the western coast of South America. The price paid for the lumber yard site here was $2,000,000.

The negro was not taken to Blountstown, but was kept in the Bainbridge, Ga., jail.

Pou says he has not been guilty of any intentional wrongdoing, and that he is perfectly willing to leave the question of serving as commissioner to the voters.

The County Solicitor still is considering the mass of evidence gained during his investigation and has not filed any information or made any announcement as to what he intends doing.

Wife of Professor of Engineering in Philippines Returns to College to Finish Course.

In private life she is Mrs. Clarence G. Wrentmore, wife of a former professor of the university, now dean of the department of engineering in the University of the Philippines.

Professor and Mrs. Wrentmore decided they could not allow their four children to grow up with no more educational advantages than could be given them in the Philippines. This decision, coupled with the desire Mrs. Wrentmore had always had to complete her college course, caused them to determine to forego each other's company for a time.

She then entered the university two years ago.

FLORIDA CITIES BEGIN FIGHT FOR WATERWAY AID

Daytona and New Smyrna to Send Delegation to Washington to Urge Federal Appropriation.

JACKSONVILLE, July 19.—Perhaps no State in the Union is making a harder fight for waterway appropriations than Florida. Jacksonville has taken the lead for years in asking for money for this purpose, with Tampa and Pensacola close seconds. However, the smaller cities of the State also have been active, and many good results have been obtained.

For years efforts have been made to induce the Government to open pj and improve Mosquito Inlet for commerce. This body of water has been passed over by one board after another until the citizens of Daytona and New Smyrna have decided that a committee be sent to Washington to make a personal appeal. At the last meeting of the Board of Trade of Daytona a letter was read from the New Smyrna board asking that the two organizations unite in securing money from the two cities to pay the expenses of a committee to be sent to Washington to appear before the Board of Army Engineers.

The city Councilmen of these two cities have been asked to contribute to the expenses of this committee, which is to be named by the Central Florida Waterways Association. The city fathers are reminded of the fact that the county officials contributed $200 to the cause and that they should be as liberal. Figures are also given to show the need of improvements which can only be made by the United States Government.

British capitalists have become interested in the project and have financed the proposition. This means that work is to be started next month and will be pushed to completion. This road will be the only one crossing the State.

Most of the property in the city is owned by people from Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania and Ohio. These tourists or winter visitors will not return before September.

Private capital is seeking to furnish the gas for the city, but the people have fought the proposition so hard that the commissioners do not want to grant the franchise without popular expression on the subject.

Will Exhume Body To Examine Wounds

Report That Man Found Dead Was Seen With Woman Can Not Be Verified.

TALLAHASSEE, July 19.—The report that Willie Steinhusen, whose body was found on the edge of town Tuesday, was in company with a woman named May Coleman, and had been seen on the Lanark train Sunday night, has been traced by deputy sheriffs and policemen, who state that they are unable to verify it.

Policemen Isler and Gray were told by a negro that he saw Steinhusen Sunday morning, and he was so drunk that he had to assist him from the Seaboard track to keep a passing train from running over him. Policeman Gray believes that after he was seen by this negro in his drunken and exhausted stupor, he lay down in the hot sun and died.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my baby of an ulcerated sore behind her ear and now we think we cannot keep house without them." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Poss, Nov. 5, 1912.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. every corn, every time, as sure as the sun rises. It takes about two seconds to apply it. Corn pains stop, you forget the corn, the corn shrivels up, and it's gone! Ever try anything like that? You never did. There's no more fussing with plasters that press on the corn, no more salves that take off the surrounding flesh, no more bandages. No more knives, files or razors that make corns grow, and cause danger of blood poison. "GETS-IT" is equally harmless to healthy or irritated flesh. It "gets" every corn, wart, callous and bunion you've got.

"GETS-IT" is sold at all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Atlanta by Jacobs' Pharmacy Company, Elkin Drug Co., Coursey & Munn, Gunter-Watkins Drug Company, E. H. Cone, Inc., Tipton & Co.

Human System Poisons Itself

Otherwise Most of Us Would Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Prominent Citizen Indorses NUXCARA

Mr. J. W. Brooks, traveling representative of The Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, says: "For two years I have carried in my grip a bottle of Nuxcara, and would not think of going out on the road without it. I consider it the most wonderful discovery in medicine. The number of people who suffer with indigestion and dyspepsia, the terrible distress they suffer, no one knows but those who have had experience with it. When one remedy after another fails, when digestive agents seem to aggravate it. In the face of all this, Nuxcara cures in every case—truly it is a wonderful remedy."

COLUMBUS MILL SCHOOL HELD AS MODEL BY U. S.

How Georgia City Is Caring for Cotton Factory Children Told in Government Pamphlet.

How Columbus is caring for the education of the boys and girls of its cotton mills is the story embodied in a pamphlet published by the United States Department of Education, copies of which were circulated in Atlanta yesterday.

How the boys and girls of the mills themselves work against going to school, rendering doubly hard the problem before the public, is a pitiful note of the story.

They call their school in Columbus the "dinner toters' school," because even during their school days they must work, taking hot lunches to their parents, brothers, sisters, and others who work in the mills.

Must Take Parents' Lunch.

The pamphlet tells of this custom, revealing something of the life of the cotton mill child. It says:

"The long intermission in the middle of the day is necessary that the children may take the lunches to the mills. Many of the mills are some distance from the school—some more than a mile away. Most of the children, therefore, walk more than two miles during the noon hour. Besides, they are compelled to wait 20 or 30 minutes for the operatives to eat their dinners before taking the baskets back.

"Some children earn several dollars each week by carrying such baskets to mill operatives. The price usually paid for taking lunch to one person for a week is 25 cents, and children often take lunches to several persons."

The booklet was prepared by Roland B. Daniel, and was published by the Department of Education as the description of an admirable system. It deals not only with the mill children, but with the boys and girls who are more fortunate, showing how the Columbus scheme of education is variable, being adapted to meet the demands that come with a mixed population so as to care alike for the two classes. P. P. Claxton, Federal Commissioner of Education, says in the foreword to the book:

"Columbus was one of the first of this country's cities to work out certain phases of this problem of adaptation."

The Columbus schools effect industrial training for all children, but a training varied according to the class from which the children come.

Call of Mills Strong.

The writer, Mr. Hill, laments the fact that "the call of the mills is strong."

"While the prescribed course for the mill children contemplates seven years, few continue after the fifth or sixth year," he wrote. "Not more than 1 per cent finish this school and pursue their studies further."

In all lines of work, academic and industrial, the aim of the school for mill operatives is to better living conditions a little among the people for whom it was organized. That is the only hope. In the beginning the advocates of this type of school thought that many of the mill children might be induced to continue in school and do more advanced work, especially along vocational lines. In this respect the school has been a disappointment to some.

"We are seldom able to induce pupils to finish even the limited course offered in this school," writes Mr. Daniel. "Our best hope is that we may better living conditions a little."

Toward the end, the school has been made a sort of social center. The school is in session the entire year around, and pupils are promoted quarterly, that the children will not drift away, as it is feared they would surely do in the case of a three months' vacation. Teachers do social work, visiting the sick, distributing certain charity, obtaining means of operation for the physically defective, arranging for social evenings, fostering organizations among the older people, and dealing in like activities.

Summing up the work of the school, the writer says:

"While this school has done good work and its benefits have been felt, we are sure the weakest point in it is not being able to hold the children long enough to receive its full benefits. An enforced attendance law would aid very materially in this respect."

Industrial Work Taught.

Along with "the three R's," the mill children are trained in industrial branches, being taught woodworking and gardening. The girls are given work in basket-making, sewing, cooking, poultry-raising and gardening.

In its scheme of adaptation, the city has an altogether different school for other children. The regular grade work is done, and in the traditional high school a year and a half of industrial work, manual training for the boys and domestic science for the girls, is given.

Another variation comes when the curriculum of the negro schools are worked out. There is industrial education for negroes in the public school, but different from that supplied the white children. The Columbus method is altogether one of adaptation.

The difference lies in the fact that the negroes receive more of the training, going into more branches of manual labor, and taking it throughout the school course. Almost every branch of work with the hands is offered them. Of this work the booklet says:

"Pupils who remain in the schools long enough to complete the course receive in compensation for their labor upon leaving school about twice what they would receive for unskilled labor such as they would be able to render without such training. It is often the case that one of these boys is able to earn $2 a day at the age of 17 when his father, without such preparation, receives $1.25 for unskilled labor.

High School in Scheme.

The book, being altogether a treatise on industrial education in Columbus, is given over largely to a description of the courses in the Columbus Industrial High School, the pride of the city's scheme of education. The school, besides its academic work, has vocational courses, including home economics, dressmaking and millinery, mechanic arts, textile arts, and a business course.

This industrial high school is separate and distinct from the conventional academic high school. It is merely another phase of the Columbus scheme of adaptation of education to varied needs and to varied classes.

Pony Contestants in Home Stretch

Fine Progress Made in Last Days

Winners of Race Will Be Announced in Few Days After Battle Closes July 31.

Great progress has been made by the contestants who are striving for The Georgian and American ponies, as the standings published to-day demonstrate. Nearly all the contestants who are crowding toward the front have more than 100,000 votes, but in the ten days remaining these figures, in all probability, will be doubled and trebled.

This is in spite of the fact that the coupons have been discontinued. Gains from now on will represent simply subscriptions obtained. The contestants agree unanimously that this is perfectly fair. A coupon-clipping contest is no contest at all, except as it represents the ability to build up a system of collecting the slips from friends in the neighborhood. A subscription-getting contest, on the other hand, tests the mettle of every contestant to the full, and the best will win.

Will Announce Winners Soon.

Besides, by discontinuing the coupons, it will be possible to announce the winners in the contest probably August 3, three days after the contest closes, on the night of July 31.

If coupons still were being voted, it would take two weeks or more for all of them to come in, and knowledge of the result would be delayed that long.

The bonus offer, awarding 20,000, 12,500 and 6,000 votes for clubs of $35, $25 and $15, respectively, closed Saturday night, and with a large number of clubs turned in. It was a laggard contestant, indeed, who did not appear yesterday with at least a $35 club, and some of the most active had two and three clubs.

Even Chance in Country.

Contestants in the country, it is supposed, did as well, but subscriptions arriving in Monday's mails will be credited on the club offer for these out-of-town boys and girls. This is to give them an even chance with their city cousins.

Probably another small bonus will be offered for the closing weeks of the contest. It will be nothing like those which have been given so far—not nearly so attractive, but still worth winning.

Within a few days the thirteen additional ponies needed to make up the complete lot of twenty-two will be on hand. They are being collected now from the leading breeders of this sort of fancy stock and will be brought to Atlanta before the contest closes.

Maurice Means, of Meansville, is shown at the top, while below is Miss Helen Brantley, of No. 31 E. Alexander Street. Both are way up in the race for the prize Shetlands.

Moving Picture Gives Mother Clew to Girl

Missing Daughter Is Recognized on Screen and Police Are Following Up Trace.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The "movies" may be instrumental in restoring Olga Ellis, 5, to the mother from whom she was taken in Revere, Mass., and brought to California.

For six months the police have sought John Ellis, of Revere, Mass., who is said to have left that city with his daughter.

A school-teacher of Berkeley, Cal., became interested in the case and gave a picture of the child and the mother's address to a moving picture agency.

Mrs. Myrtle Palmer, housekeeper in a hotel here, saw the mother's appeal at a moving picture theater recently and recognized the little girl as one who had stayed at the hotel with her father for several weeks. He had registered, she said, as D. Delisle, and had gone to Eureka, Cal.

Mrs. Palmer notified the police and search for the man and child has been instituted in Eureka.

Women Convict Her For Slapping Child

First Feminine Jury in Sonoma County, California, Returns Verdict of Guilty of Assault.

PETALUMA, COLO., July 19.—A jury of twelve women convicted a woman, Mrs. W. S. Waldorf, upon a charge of battery here to-day. This is the first jury of women that ever tried a case in Sonoma County. Mrs. Waldorf was accused of having slapped a neighbor's children. The jury was out less than an hour.

HORSE FALLS IN FISSURE IN SINKING KANSAS FARM

HOISINGTON, KANS., July 19.—Fissures varying from a few inches to a foot and a half in width and extending several feet into the ground have opened up in L. E. Baker's alfalfa field near this city and are causing a great deal of speculation.

There have been no indications of an earthquake of any sort, but the ground seems to be sinking away. The fissures were discovered when Baker missed one of his horses and found it imprisoned in a fissure.

Squaws Lay Ties As Bucks Play Poker

Desert Section Hand Boss Returns to Find Piute Women Doing Construction Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Piute Indians as substitutes for Mexican section hands were tried out in the Nevada desert last week. The Mexicans were deemed unsatisfactory because they would drop their tools and rest the instant the "boss" got far enough away so that he could not hit them with a shovel handle.

With the Indians on the job, however, the work went along just the same, boss or no boss.

Nevertheless the Mexicans are again on the pay roll and the Indians are taking their traditional ease.

After glowingly watching five days of splendid work by his Piute bucks the section boss left them the other day. Returning 24 hours later he found the suffragette members of the Piute tribe doing the work on the railroad, while the bucks were gathered in a poker game at one side of the track.

Tight Shoes Land Thief Behind Bars

Burglar in Jewelry Store Kicks Heels to Relieve Pressure and Alarms Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Frank Davies, who at times also gives his name as John Simpson and Joe Allen, became irritated last night while scooping unset diamonds in his hat in a dark room because the toes of his new shoes were too narrow.

Intending to relieve the squeeze, he kicked toward the floor with his heel, but miscalculated and drove his foot through a glass show case. A policeman in a saloon on the floor below heard the noise and arrested Davies, who says he is an ex-convict and that he arrived here from Los Angeles at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The diamonds were claimed to-day by the jewelers from whom they were taken.

Must Stay Maids to Get Mother's Estate

Daughters of Ohio Woman Are Beneficiaries Under Will Which Prohibits Their Marriage.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, July 19. One of the most remarkable wills ever admitted to probate in this county was made by Jane Lake, late of Richwood, who left considerable property to her three daughters, Linie, Nora and Ida.

The provisions are that the estate shall be equally divided among the three daughters, on the condition that none of them will marry. If one of them marries, her share of the estate goes to the two remaining single. If all three should marry, the entire estate is to go to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ONLY AMERICAN KING YEARNS TO QUIT HIS THRONE

All of Former Broker's Thirty Wives Want English Gowns. Jealousy Spreads.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King, practically has made up his mind to renounce his throne. He is King of the Island of Arorae, one of the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands. Until 1909 he was a New York curb broker. The insistence of his many wives for English gowns and his loneliness have led to the determination to give up his kingly honors. He tells of his intentions in a letter just received by a friend in this city.

The career of Everett has been unusual. In 1909, when he was in business in this city, he was thought to be well to do. He met reverses, however, in Wall Street, and in the latter part of 1909 disappeared, without leaving a word of farewell. Nothing was heard from him until in 1911, in a remarkable letter, he told of being made the King of Arorae, in the South Sea Islands. He had landed, he said, on one of the small islands, and had gone from there to other islands of the Gilbert group. Finally he reached Arorae. It was a phonograph which he had in his possession that eventually won for him his throne. The King at that time of the island took a great fancy to the phonograph.

Phonograph Wins Kingdom.

By the hour Everett, according to his own account, entertained the monarch, constantly growing in his graces. Finally the old King adopted Everett, and when he died Everett succeeded to the throne. According to the custom of the island, Everett took a good many wives.

Everett took a very lively interest in the affairs of the island. He increased its business with traders. The principal product of the island is copra, or dried cocoanut meat. The letter, in part, reads:

"At the present time the King's job is about the last thing to be desired, and do not be surprised if I walk in on you some day in the near future. I am about tired of the job.

"For some time past conditions here have steadily become worse. It started when my wives, of whom there are about 30, insisted on wearing English dresses. A trader who stopped here presented one of the natives with three English gowns in exchange for some copra. The native presented them to the King, and I in turn gave them to three of my wives. The natives have never worn any clothes to speak of. Imagine my surprise, then, when the three dresses became the center of a regular war among my wives.

"The three victorious wives managed to get them on somehow, and that settled it. Every one of them set up a kick for a dress, and they worried the life out of me. I was forced to get the gowns. The first trader that stopped at the island from Australia was commissioned to bring them back on the next trip, and in due course of time they arrived.

Jealousy Over English Gowns.

"The dresses were of all colors and sizes. Most of the people here are about the same stature, few being over four feet six or seven. Some of the dresses were too small, others too large, but they created a sensation. Dressed in those creations, with bare brown feet stepping proudly, my wives paraded up and down the island, causing every woman in the kingdom, young and old, to grow jealous.

"So far, half of the female population have been given the gowns and the other half are waiting eagerly. The worst part of it all is that the men are as enthusiastic over this new style of dress as the women, and my objections have not added to my popularity whatever. I am daily expecting the men to demand suits of flannel and silk shirts.

Affairs on a Business Basis.

"I have not done so badly here financially. I put the business of the island on a business basis soon after becoming King, and things have flourished.

"I don't know how the people here will take my departure. They may even try to prevent it, and I have been considering the best method to leave. I could probably get aboard one of the trading ships and get to Australia, after which it would be easy, of course, to get back to the United States."

County of Warner

Should Be Created

Manchester, the Logical County Seat—County Will Have 10,000 Population; $1,750,000 Taxable Values; Area Over 222 Square Miles.

The people situated in the southeastern portion of Meriwether, northern portion of Talbot and northeastern portion of Harris Counties will petition the 1913 session of the Legislature to create a new county to be named Warner, in honor of the late Chief Justice Hiram Warner, the area of which will be 222 square miles, while the area of the old counties after the proposed county of Warner is created will not be materially reduced, but will leave them among the larger counties of Middle Georgia, and Meriwether will then contain 421 square miles; Harris, 465 square miles, and Talbot, 329 square miles. The territory to compose Warner County is inaccessible to either of the present county sites by railroads and in transacting legal business the citizens are required to go this distance by private conveyance over mountainous roads, which in rainy seasons are almost impassable; while a very large portion of the population has no means of conveyance and are forced to a great expense in reaching the present county sites.

Taxable Values of New County.

The proposed county of Warner will have taxable values of one and three-quarter million dollars. This will leave Meriwether taxable values of about twice the amount of Warner County; while Harris and Talbot, from which counties small values will be taken, will not be materially reduced, but have considerably more wealth than Warner and no incorporated town is to be taken from either Talbot or Harris and but a few miles of railroad.

The population of Warner County will be upward of 10,500, of which more than 2,000 live in Manchester, the proposed county seat. At least 5,000 of those living within the country territory closely adjoining Manchester have to travel 14 to 20 miles to their present respective county sites. Warner County would exceed in population 32 counties in the State.

Roads and Bridges.

Warner County as proposed will take from the three affected counties its proportion of roads and bridges as compared to its area and wealth, while the roads and bridges in this territory have received but little attention, as the taxes collected by the old counties have been spent on other roads and bridges nearer the present county sites, and other sections of the counties, since this territory occupies the "remote corners," consequently has had little influence in securing road improvements.

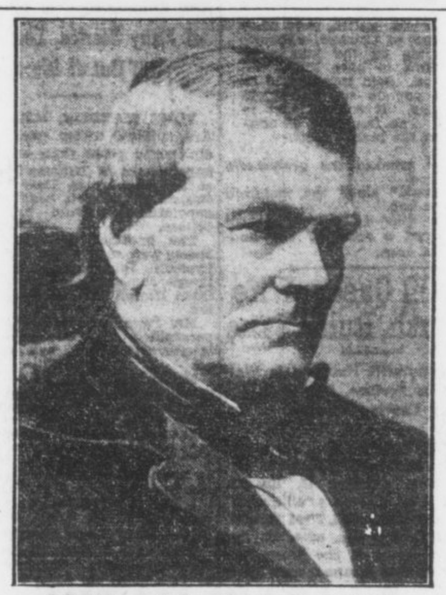
Warner County, as proposed will include Gill, Chalybeate, First, Raleigh, Bullochville and parts of the Third, Harris and lower Ninth Districts of Meriwether County; portions of Valley Plains District of Harris County and Flint Hill and parts of Pleasant Hill and Valley districts of Talbot County.

The distance from Manchester, the proposed county site of Warner County, to Greenville, the county site of Meriwether, over public roads is 18 miles; to Hamilton, the county site of Harris, 20 miles, and to Talbotton, the county site of Talbot, 20 miles. No citizen living in the proposed county would be required to travel farther than 12 miles to reach Manchester, the proposed county site.

Schedule of Trains.

No portion of Warner County at present is directly connected by rail with its respective county site. Those wishing to attend court by rail from Manchester and its vicinity must leave Manchester at 4 o'clock a. m., change at Durand and arrive in Greenville at 8 o'clock a. m., requiring a layover at Durand of about three hours. Returning, leave Greenville at 6 o'clock p. m., arriving at Manchester at 11:40 p. m., necessitating a layover at Durand of five hours, or about 20 hours to go a distance of 20 miles and return. This is the most convenient schedule.

The present counties are well provided with modern jails and courthouses.



HIRAM WARNER

Brief Sketch of Late Chief Justice

HIRAM WARNER

Hiram Warner, for whom Warner County is to be named, was born at Williamsburg, Hampshire County, Mass., on October 29th, 1802. He sailed for Savannah when 19 years of age, but was shipwrecked off Cape Hatteras, and reached the Georgia port weeks later. He settled first at Sparta as a teacher. He studied law and was admitted to the bar at Knoxville, Crawford County, in 1824. He married there and had one child, a daughter, the mother of Associate Justice Hiram Warner Hill of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

He was a member of the Legislature 1828-31. He was elected judge of the Coweta Circuit of the Superior Court of Georgia in 1833. At that time there was no Supreme Court, and the Superior Court judges gathered in annual convention to discuss their decisions and establish uniformity of practice.

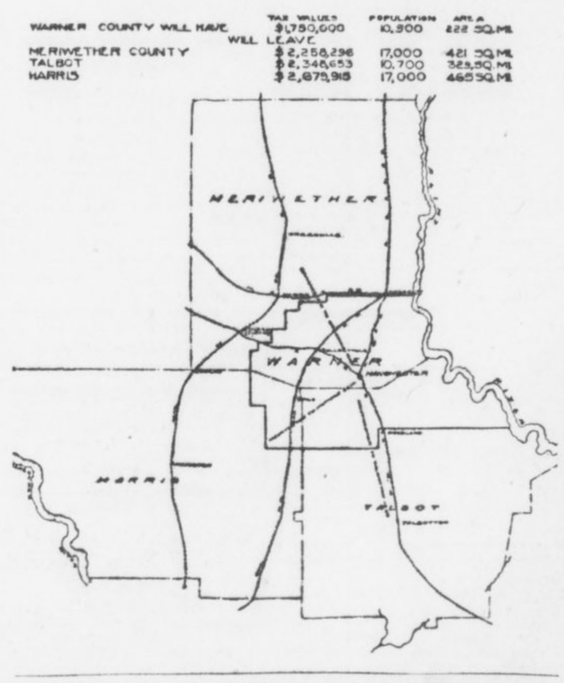
In 1845 the Supreme Court of Georgia was organized and with Joseph Henry Lumpkin and Eugenius A. Nesbit was elected to that high branch of the judiciary. He defeated Benjamin H. Hill for Congress in 1855; was renominated, but declined re-election. Nearly 60 years old when the war came, he was at home caring for his family, his only son-in-law being at the front. He was held by Wilson's raiders and actually hanged and left for dead because he did not tell where suspected gold was hidden.

Later he was appointed to the judgeship of Coweta Circuit by Governor Jenkins. He was named Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia in 1867 to succeed Chief Justice Lumpkin, deceased.

His decisions from the bench and his printed decisions upon the Supreme Court bench are classics in Georgia's judicial history and his decisions are leading ones in ruling on similar cases today.

Judge Warner was reared a Presbyterian. He never joined a religious denomination. He lived and died, however, a believer in the Bible, the truths of Christianity and the creed of that denomination to which his family belonged. It was his habit to keep upon the table in his bedroom to the last day of his life two books; one was Blackstone, and the other was the Bible. This Bible his mother gave him when he left home for his long journey. To this same Bible he turned for comfort and support when, 58 years afterward, an old and broken man, he entered the valley of the shadow.

It is this man whose memory is sought to be revered in the creation of the county which is to bear his name—Warner.



Little Territory From Three of the State's Largest Counties Will Give County—New County Has Railroads—Sentiment Favors It.

No county has ever been created in which the sentiment was stronger for a new county than Warner. The movement has been spontaneous in all sections and our petitions contain more than 95 per cent of the white electors in Warner County. The people realize the great inconvenience with which they are now burdened and have joined unanimously in the movement.

Situation of Warner.

The proposed county of Warner will include portions of Pine and Oak mountains. In recent years most of this section was considered of little value on account of its inaccessibility and the rough character of the country. Little money has been spent by the counties in developing this territory, and the roads, most of them crossing the mountains and ridges, are bad, and have received but little attention.

In 1906 the A., B. & A. railroad was built, traversing this section with its Birmingham and Atlanta lines merging at Manchester; since which time Manchester has grown to be a town of about 2,000 people, as a result of which the territory adjoining Manchester has developed very rapidly; approximately $2,000,000 having been spent in improvements and business naturally drifted in this direction. The people residing in this territory buy all their supplies and sell their produce at Manchester, Bullochville, Raleigh, Chalybeate and Shiloh. Nothing calls them out of the proposed county except court duty, and they are deprived of the privilege accorded the majority of our people in the state of transacting their business and attending court in the same day.

Demand of Modern Times.

In this day of modern methods, when man's greatest asset is his time, when all business has become greatly intensified and concentration and conservation are occupying the attention of all progressive, thinking people, all men must realize that to make a success out of any public institution its interest must be well guarded. In this connection, large counties can not receive their just consideration. It is out of the question for the county commissioners in the three counties affected to give the counties' business the attention which it deserves. The area is too large, the business too vast, the demands too great and the distance too far for the county authorities to attend to the business properly.

General Statements of Interest

Manchester, the proposed county site, contains one large cotton mill, railroad shops and division offices of the A., B. & A. R. R., one bank, 33 brick store buildings and 16 wooden store buildings, all of which are occupied by various lines of general merchandise; two moving picture theaters, one newspaper and printing office, three hotels, five churches, modern school system, municipal light plant, two livery and sale stables, two large builders' supply houses, fireproof warehouse and gin.

Bullochville has several large supply houses, one bank, guano factory, also the Tuscawilla, a magnificent three-story brick hotel with modern equipment throughout, the best equipped hotel in the State in a town many times its size. Near Bullochville is located the famous Warm Springs resort, which is too well known to be described.

Just above Bullochville is the thriving town of Raleigh, which controls all business within its territory.

South of Bullochville on the Southern Railroad is Shiloh, now located in Harris County, one of the best farming supply towns in the State.

East of Manchester on the A., B. & A. is located Chalybeate Springs, a resort famous since ante-bellum days. The water from these springs has been known throughout the State since Georgia's early history.

Just east of Chalybeate is the Tatum Iron Company's mines, which are now being successfully developed.

All facts stated herein are not exaggerated, but can be substantiated with unlimited amount of evidence.

GIRL PLAYS MAN AND WINS LOVE OF HATED RIVAL

Unique Vengeance Is Planned by Young Woman Whose Sweetheart Proved Faithless.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Jilted by her lover, Bessie McIntyre, of North Wheeling, a pretty 18-year-old girl, secured an odd but effective revenge on her rival, who "stole" her sweetheart and on the faithless lover at the same time.

June 25 Harry Pendleton, a well-known young business man of this city, informed Miss McIntyre that he could not see her again(as he had become engaged to another girl. By a dint of inquiry the jilted girl ascertained that the girl who had stolen her lover's affections was Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, Ohio, just across the river from this city. Securing permission from her parents, Miss McIntyre had her hair cut off, and donning one of her brother's suits, she visited Bridgeport and met Miss Allen.

It was a case of love at first sight—on the part of the Bridgeport girl Miss McIntyre masquerading as "Lawrence Dessing," was a devoted lover, and every night found "Lawrence Dessing" at the home of Miss Aiken.

Last Sunday night while "Dessing" and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to call on her again. She then confessed her love to her companion, the pseudo "Dessing." Miss McIntyre, dressed in a gown of the latest mode last night met Miss Aiken in this city. Before Miss Aiken could speak the North Wheeling girl told her how she had revenged herself.

In a moment the girls were fighting and were separated by the police.

Willing To Marry But Not to Apologize

Man Sued for Breach of Promise Says Hill Wed But Refuses to Beg Forgiveness.

ATCHISON, KANS., July 19.—Mary Falk and William Burke were engaged to be married. The date had been set, the guests had assembled, and everything was in readiness, but Burke did not appear. Chagrined and heartbroken, Miss Falk engaged an attorney and sued Burke for $25,000 as balm for her wounded feelings.

"It was all a mistake," said Burke. "I wanted and still want to marry Miss Falk. I was under the impression that under the rules of the Catholic Church the ceremony had to be performed by the pastor of the bride's church. I couldn't find him in time to perform the ceremony and naturally supposed the wedding was off for the time being."

Miss Falk accepted the explanation, but she insisted that Burke must apologize for not appearing for the wedding. Burke, however, insisted that she must apologize for suing him.

Concussion of Brain Kills a Gigantic Frog

Oscar Siler went to Mich. Thought he'd rest and catch some fish, Pitched his tent on Fountain Lake—Listen to this nature fake:

FOUNTAIN, MICH., July 19.—Oscar Siler, of Chicago, who has been fishing on the lake near here, claims to have killed the record frog. Said frog is said to weigh 6 pounds and to be 15 inches long. It will be sent to Chicago. The frog died of concussion of the brain. Thus—

"Kerplunk," croaked the prehistoric bullfrog.
"You're drunk," piped the monarch of the bog.
Whereupon Siler (who was sober) bounced a rock off the bullfrog's bean.

Aged Oil Queen, Wife Of Youth, Ruled Sane

Young Spendthrift Husband Is Welcome to Fortune, She Says, on Leaving Asylum.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 19.—The courts and her children can not separate Mrs. Cynthia C. Sparks, known as West Virginia's "oil queen," and her young husband, Fred Sparks, and she is again free, after having been incarcerated in the West Virginia Hospital for Insane for ten days.

Further, the superintendent and the members of the State Board of Control have placed beyond question her sanity after a close observation, while she was under their supervision.

Mrs. Sparks is going to join her 26-year-old husband, who, it is alleged by the woman's children by her first husband, was rapidly dissipating her fortune of $2,000,000 by his extravagance and riotious living.

The old woman declared to-day that her young husband was welcome to the half of her fortune which she retained after having signed over the half to him.

Miner Returns Rich To Find Wife Dead

Comes Back Home to Make Restitution for Having Deserted Her 20 Years Ago.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Wealthy and anxious to take back his wife, whom he deserted twenty years ago, Josiah Bronson, a modern Enoch Arden, found the old home in ruins and the wife dead. From the old-timers who had known him in the early days he learned that his wife, believing him dead, had married his twin brother.

Two children, he learned, were born of the marriage, and upon the death of the mother were sent to relatives in West Virginia.

Bronson declared he would care for the children. "I shall give them the best education money can buy," he said. "I deserted their mother when she was just a young woman, and now I want to atone for the cowardly act."

WRITERS MAKE BEST DIPLOMATS DECLARES PAGE

New Ambassador to Italy, Author of Many Stories, Leaves Himself Out of Discussion.

YORK HARBOR, ME., July 19.—Are authors better qualified to fill diplomatic posts than others? The appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy brings this subject to the fore, coupled with the appointments made by President Wilson.

The greatest diplomats America boasts were men of letters. Benjamin Franklin, John Hay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, William Dean Howell furnish a distinguished list.

Mr. Page, who is 60, is modesty personified. He has been reporter, lawyer, writer, and has succeeded in all.

Mr. Page asked if he could explain as an author what special qualifications a man of letters possesses to perform the duties of Ambassador, consented to speak, leaving his own case out of the discussion. Said he:

"A man of letters is better fitted to do anything better than anyone else. His work has broadened his horizon; if it hadn't we might as well do away with letters.

Must Know Problems.

"The author must necessarily be conversant with the economic and governmental problems of the day.

"I think the greatest good authors in general have alone is to interpret the spirit of the section about which they write. There can be no doubt there is a better feeling now between the North and the South than there was before the Spanish-American war. This, I believe, is because of writers.

"Every part of the world is being more properly set before another part by the authors.

"The President has had a thorough training. Besides the college education, he has had associations with the North and the South, and he is conversant with the economic and governmental problems. He is a man of strong character and has been deservedly selected by the people to hold their most important office.

"I met Walter Page prior to his departure for his London post and gave him a dinner. His whole heart was set upon the desire to 'make good.'"

Qualifications of Diplomat.

"What is your idea of the qualifications a good diplomat possesses?" he was asked.

"Devotion to his duty is perhaps the first and most important," he replied. "Then comes devotion to your country, application to your duty and a desire to bring your country and the country to which you have been sent closer together.

"Of course, since the cable came into use foreign posts are brought closer to the State Department at Washington, and it must be a great comfort to an Ambassador to feel that at any time he may seek aid from Washington.

"I believe Charles Francis Adams was the last foreign ambassador to be thrown upon his own resources, and that was because the cable was cut.

"Rome is indeed a charming post. I believe it is the most romantic city in the world. I am sure I shall like it."

BRYAN DODGES PAPER'S QUESTIONS

wrong. It is using the office for making money."

Senator Bristow said action would be had on his resolution. He said, too, that there would be quite a little discussion on the subject. It probably will be referred to a committee. Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, says it probably would be "handled in a routine way."

Mr. Bacon says he thought the resolution was introduced to bring about a discussion of the course of Mr. Bryan, and that remedial legislation was not demanded.

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend, of Michigan, holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the Government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Among those who talked were the following:

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts—A Cabinet member can live on $12,000 a year if he does not have large family expenses, and he can live comfortably and respectably.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania—Samuel J. Randall, one of the greatest of Democrats, served this country for a whole generation, living on a salary of $5,000 a year. I have always disapproved of the custom that has grown up resulting in the very considerable neglect of official duties on the part of public men in order that they may go on lecture circuits.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina—While Mr. Bryan's speaking tours will serve a good purpos in that he always preached true Democracy and patriotism and Christian living, he can never again appear as a knight errant of Democracy.

Representative Willis, of Ohio—I am opposed to a Government official capitalizing his job. The Secretaryship of State is a man's job. Mr. Bryan should stay here and attend to the work of his office. He has enough on his hands with the present critical situation in Mexico, the unsettled questions with Japan and the matter of the Panama Canal tolls. We members of Congress have to stick to our tasks.

Representative Miller, of Minnesota—Mr. Bryan is giving this country a remarkable exhibition in the difference between his preachings during the past seventeen years and his present practices.

Representative Kahn, of California—There are many able men in the employ of the Government who are prevented by law and the hours of service from increasing their incomes through additional employment.

Representative Payne, of New York—I have been able to live on my salary as a member of the House. I can not see why the Secretary of State is unable to live on his salary.

Towne, Bryan's Friend, Calls Step Unfortunate.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Secretary Bryan's determination to supplement his official salary of $12,000 by going on a six weeks' lecture tour has awakened severe criticism from the men who supported him when he first loomed on the political horizon.

Charles A. Towne, who was one of the speakers at the famous "Dollar Dinner" in April, 1899, organized to emphasize Bryan's Jeffersonian simplicity of tastes, discussed Mr. Bryan's new move reluctantly, as they are still close friends.

"I consider the Secretary's plan to continue his lecture tours while occupying the chief place in the President's Cabinet most unfortunate," said Mr .Towne. "These are days when great national issues must be decided, and when the Secretary of State is required to give every bit of time and energy in behalf of the nation. It is a time when men intrusted with the affairs of the Government must have their minds occupied with nothing else except the questions of state.

Explanation Only Makes It Worse, Says World.

(From The N. Y. World, July 16.)

It is with the most profound regret that we have to note the position into which the Secretary of State has drawn himself and the explanation now given which only makes it worse.

Whether Mr. Bryan can afford to take a prolonged vacation at just this critical time for the Administration and his own high office may be a question, but a minor one. Whether, under the frankly admitted circumstances of personal fortune, he can only afford a money-making vacation, must be something less than a question with the great masses of the people whose life he has lived in sympathy.

The real question is whether the Government for such a position as his may not justly claim an undivided service, and whether any other view is compatible with a worthy ambition. We have had men in high office who have sacrificed personal fortune to render such undivided service and could afford it. We have had many more men there who have done this and could not afford it.

We can not think of the President of the United States doing otherwise. We should not be able to think of any of his Cabinet doing otherwise.

Action Most Bizarre, Says Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, July 19.—Regarding Secretary Bryan's lecture tour, The Pall Mall Gazette to-night says:

"It is a singular paradox in a country where there is so much money in politics as in the United States that the chief member of the President's cabinet should find his official salary inadequate to support his existence.

"We can quite understand why $12,000 a year is not enough for the Secretary of State, considering the American scale of life, but one would have expected a man of Bryan's moral courage to call upon his country for a living wage, to which he is entitled, rather than to propose going on the stump as a lecturer, in the roles of a minister and a professional entertainer.

"They make a most bizarre combination to all British ways of thinking, and we shall be surprised if even American opinion reconciles itself to their incongruity."

MOTHER OF TEN SUES; WEDDED TWENTY-ONE YEARS

DAYTON, WYO., July 19.—After living with David Krouse Towns for 21 years and bearing ten children of which he is the father, Mrs. Martha Ellen Towns has brought suit for divorce, asserting that her husband unjustly accused her of infidelity and that he had attempted to secure her incarceration in the State Insane Asylum, although realizing that she was sane.

BRYAN OUGHT TO LIVE ON HIS PAY OR QUIT, SAY SENATORS

Explanation of Secretary of State More Amazing Than His Acts, Declares Bristow, Who Introduced Resolution to Investigate

Wilson's Premier Capitalizing His Position, Asserts Representative Willis—Much Work To Be Done in His Department.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the National Capital is that if Secretary Bryan can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Mr. Bryan to-day gave evidence of the fact that the country-wide criticism had got under his skin. That he was irritated and impatient and realized the "bad break" he has made was apparent to his subordinates throughout the day. Somewhat petulantly he declared that the press of the country might have assumed that "my lecture engagements are subject to cancellation."

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow Cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

Evades Paper's Questions.

The American to-day endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions and refused to discuss the subject of his official pronunciamento.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by The American:

"If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

"If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

"You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?"

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned to the questions. Later in the day he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Bristow, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan to stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, to-day came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secretary Bryan's second statement has astounded me even more than his first one," said Mr. Bristow. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the Governmtnt service is amazing.

"Secretary Bryan says he has a right to use his vacation for lecturing if he sees fit. But he is to be away on one tour of six weeks, and there is no telling where his vacation will end.

Needed at His Post.

"Besides, since he has been Secretary of State he has been in Washington only about one-half the time so far. If ever there was a time when the Secretary of State was needed on the job it is now, when so many important questions are up for consideration. To cause the people to pay money to hear the Secretary of State, the highest officer in the Cabinet, deliver addresses is all

"Read the papers until 6.

Girl Traps a Thief In Telephone Booth

Sets Shoulder Against Door and Holds Man Until Cries Bring Her Aid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Holding a thief trapped in a telephone booth, Miss Florence Rosenthal, cashier in Edward Feuhrer's drug store at No. 53 Second avenue, finally succeeded in delivering him to the police yesterday.

The captive, who said he was Alexander Moskowitz, 17 years old, was so long "telephoning" that Miss Rosenthal went to the booth to see if he was dead or alive. She saw him opening the money box with a screwdriver, she says. Screaming for her employer, she set her shoulder against the door, and the youth could not force it open. Moskowitz was held for trial.

SHORTAGE HITS NATIONAL BANK AT LAFAYETTE

Comptroller of Currency Orders Institution Closed When Defalcation Is Discovered.

ARRESTS ARE LIKELY

Preliminary Examination Shows That It Has Been Looted of Not Less Than $30,000.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane today announced that the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., has been closed by National Bank Examiner Thomas C. Dunlap, with the authority of the board of directors, on account of a large shortage which makes the bank insolvent.

Mr. Kane says he has not received a detailed report of the condition of the bank. Mr. Dunlap has been appointed receiver.

"We do not know how big the defalcation may be," said Mr. Kane, "but our preliminary examination has shown that it is not less than $30,000. This shortage has occurred since May 23, when the bank was last examined. Suspicion on the part of officers of the bank several days ago that a shortage existed caused the n to call in Examiner Dunlap. Discovery of the embbezzlement resulted.

"In his telegraphic advices to me Mr. Dunlap does not say to whom suspicion attaches. The last statement of the condition of the bank, issued on June 4, showed the bank to be in a proper state. The president of the bank is R. N. Dickerson, and S. A. Hunt, Jr., is cashier."

In a telegram from Mr. Dunlap Mr. Kane is advised that steps have been taken to make an arrest.

Depositors to Lose Little by Failure.

CHATTANOOGA, July 19.—Local bankers stated to-day that the liabilities of the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., which was announced to-day by Acting Comptroller of Currency Kane, at Washington, to have failed, were approximately $240,000, but that depositors would be paid in full, with but a slight loss to stockholders, as the assets would prove but slightly less.

An unsuccessful attempt was made this morning to obtain a schedule of the liabilities and assets of the institution. The officials are extremely reticent concerning the cause of the institution's embarrassment.

Aerial Ferry to Join Cities in California

Air Pilot Gets Permission to Install Aeroplane Service Between San Francisco and Oakland.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The first aerial ferry of the world will be in operation between San Francisco and Oakland in September. Permission was granted officially to-day by the Harbor Commission to John L. Lekas to construct a dock for his hydroaeroplane.

Lekas recently applied for a permit, declaring that he wished to establish a regular passenger service between the trans-bay cities. Lekas was before the commission to-day and satisfied them he was a safe and sane air pilot.

Motor Cars to Cut High Cost of Dying

Storage Battery Busses To Be Put in Service in Chicago as Funeral Equipage.

CHICAGO, July 19.—The high cost of dying is to be reduced. Storage battery motor busses are to be put in service as funeral cars. The change from carriages to busses, it is estimated, will result in a saving of $30 in the cost of each funeral. As there are 31,000 funerals in Chicago each year, the general reduction in the cost of dying, if busses were used in all funerals, would be $930,000.

Billie Burke Wires She Is Recovering

Actress Was Threatened With Appendicitis, but Did Not Have to Undergo Operation.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Billie Burke, telegraphing the London bureau of The American to-day from Carlsbad in reply to an inquiry concerning her health, says:

"Thanks awfully. Was threatened with appendicitis, but have not had to undergo operation. Recovering nicely.

"BILLIE BURKE."

U. S. State Secrets 'Lifted' From Wire By Mexican Agents

Information Worth Thousands of Dollars Finds Its Way Into Possession of Huerta.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A copy of the official code of the State Department, containing information worth thousands of dollars to foreign governments, has fallen into the hands of the Mexican administration.

It is being used to further the ends of the Huerta regime, it was asserted here to-day.

For some months State Department officials have suspected that the Government telegrams from Mexico City have been tampered with, it is declared, but this was not considered important, as all the dispatches were in code, and, therefore, theoretically illegible.

About three weeks ago, however, Government officials here had their first inkling that the Mexicans were obtaining the gist of dispatches passing between the State Department and Ambassador Wilson.

The agents of the almost unknown "secret service" of the State Department were put on the trail and evidence was obtained that the Government dispatches had been "lifted" from the wires in Mexico and decoded, the information contained therein being transmitted to President Huerta and his Cabinet.

Doctor Says He Has Vaccine to Cure Cold

Dead Organisms Found In Blood of Patient Afflicted With Influenza Used as Culture.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Claims to the discovery of a remarkable vaccine for the cure and prevention of the troublesome "cold" known among medical men as in influenza are being made by physicians of the Mulford Laboratory, near Philadelphia, under the direction of Dr A. P. Mitchins.

The vaccine is composed of the dead organisms found in the blood of a person afflicted with influenza. These organs are isolated and then an impure culture is obtained. Afterward, a saline solution is used to wash the culture germs and then the vaccine is ready for injection.

One striking feature of the results of the vaccine, it is said, is that it cures diseases allied with the common cold at the same time it does the "cold."

3 Drowned Trying To Avoid Wet Feet

Women Stand Up In Leaky Boat, Capsizing Craft in View of Hundreds.

NORRISTOWN, PA., July 19.—Caught in a storm while boating on the Schuylkill River, three women, all church workers, were drowned. They are:

Miss Anna Mary Livergood, Miss Emma J. Rex and Miss Helen Green, all of Norristown.

Miss Margaret Green, a sister of Miss Helen Green, clung to the overturned boat and was saved.

The women were within a quarter of a mile of the boat landing when the wind struck them.

The boat began to leak badly. To keep their feet and clothing dry the four girls stood on the seats. The next instant the boat turned over.

Two hundred persons on a boat returning from a park saw the accident.

Congregation Built Up by Band Concerts

Ohio Pastor With Novel Methods Now Claims Biggest Sunday School in World.

CANTON, OHIO, July 19.—With the attraction of a band concert in the church roof garden and a double orchestra concert in the church auditorium, the Rev. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton's First Christian Church, has built up what he claims is the biggest Sunday school in the world within five years.

The average attendance in this hot month of July is 3,251. The record attendance is 4,714. Several Sundays back 38 babies were checked in the "babies' check room" of the $90,000 church. The men's class of 250 had to hold their session in the street while the teacher explained the lesson from the tonneau of an automobile.

Capital Now Calls Water 'Bryan Milk'

"Adam's Ale" Disappears From Vocabularies of Thirsty Statesmen Who Are Teetotalers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Bryan milk is what they call water in the National Capital nowadays. The new name is fast ousting the familiar Adam's ale by which water has been known for some centuries.

When you go in a cafe here and the waiter asks you what you will drink, if you are a teetotaler you say airily: "Oh, a glass of Bryan milk."

LOBBY INQUIRY STIRS NATION

Mulhall Story Leaves U. S. Aghast

Power of Interests Vividly Revealed

MARTIN W. MULHALL, former lobbyist of National Association of Manufacturers, whose revelations of corruption startled nation.

Names of Wilson, Taft, Senators and Congressmen Are Dragged Into the Testimony, Showing Corporations Have Set No Limit in Corruption.

STARTLING FACTS REVEALED IN U. S. SENATE INVESTIGATION OF CONGRESSIONAL LOBBY

National Association of Manufacturers raised a slush fund of $500,000 to $700,000 a year to oppose objectionable legislation.

Place in Taft Cabinet pledged to manufacturers by Vorys, Taft manager.

Charges that the big manufacturers had the ears of Taft, Sherman and Cannon.

List of Congressmen in pay of the National Manufacturers' Association disclosed. Also, a list of the "unpurchasable," whom the association hated, and tried to defeat.

Fights made by National Manufacturers' Association on progressive Congressmen and Senators, often successful.

More than 400 letter tell of plans of association to become sinister factor in controlling the wheels of government.

Attempts made to foment strife among labor organizations, and to corrupt labor leaders, even Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Agreement by Woodrow Wilson with Gompers and Morrison that he support Hughes for Senate.

Powers of big business fought Hughes because he was friendly to labor.

Tom Johnson, Senator McComas of Maryland, and others were political victims of the association's vengeance.

Gigantic corruption in Wall Street laid bare in testimony of David Lamar.

Forgery on Union Pacific's books covering item of $82,000,000 charged.

Senate resolutions hawked about Wall street for sale to highest bidder.

The nation to-day stands aghast at the sensational revelations which have come as the result of investigations by the Overman Committee of the United States Senate into the work of lobbies at the National Capital.

It has heard how big business combines and Wall Street operators have made and unmade men in public life, influenced legislation, dominated public opinion, all the time secret and vigilant.

It has learned how big business has become one of the most powerful factors in the American civilization, striking in the dark against men who opposed it.

It has heard the names of the men highest in public life, President Wilson, former President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet members, dragged into the testimony, and has learned that certain predatory interests have set no limits in their attempt to corrupt public servants.

The bulk of the startling testimony came from Martin M. Mulhall, for years the servant of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the chief lobbyist of that organization at Washington, and from David Lamar, an operator in stocks, who is known as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

Wilson Starts Inquiry.

The investigation began more than a month ago when President Wilson declared that a lobby, "insidious and industrious" in nature, had long dominated tariff legislation. The announcement did not come unexpectedly, however, and there were many Senators and Congressmen to endorse the Chief Executive. The Senate began immediately its investigation of the charges, empowering a committee, headed by Senator Overman, to conduct the inquiry.

Relatively pointless testimony from men interested in the sugar industry came first, revealing the fact that sugar lobbies were the most industrious. Lobbyists from Hawaii, the Philippines and Louisiana defended their actions by a protest against free sugar. Former Governor Carter of Hawaii declared that the elimination of the duty on sugar would make the Hawaiian Islands merely military posts, destroying their commercial prestige. Frank C. Lowry, of the "free sugar lobby," admitted in the testimony that $25,000 had been spent in four years by the Federal Sugar Refining Company in lobbying operations.

Then came the Mulhall testimony.

Even Take Fizz Out Of City's Soda Water

Members of Cincinnati Board of Health to Censor All Soft Drinks Sold.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—The "fizz and bubble" in soda water and ginger ale manufactured in this city is to be no more, if the Board of Health has its way about the matter, and it seems likely at this time that its contention will hold good. The board has asked the Council to pass an ordinance limiting the amount of alcohol to one-half of 1 per cent in any one drink of this kind. If the resolution is passed and made a law no dealer will be allowed to make soft drinks without first getting a permit.

300 "HELLO GIRLS" ASK BOSS TO BE BEST MAN

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—The Postmaster General is bewildered over the result of the recent permission which he granted to telephone girls to get married. Three hundred of these girls promptly availed themselves of the chance and every couple asked the Postmaster General to act as best man.

Umbrellas for Farm Hands Is Inducement

Planter Advertises That He Will Supply Them With Sulkies, Sunshades and Ice Cream.

FINDLAY, OHIO, July 19.—There are other communities in this country that are suffering for a lack of farm hands besides Kansas. It is up to H. B. Clark, a farmer in the western part of Hancock County, to make good, else be prosecuted for false advertising, as provided by the new newspaper laws.

In a morning paper Mr. Clark is advertising for farm hands to plow corn. He says he will provide them with riding cultivator, a large sun umbrella for each, ice water to drink and all the ice cream each applicant can eat every other day, with $2.50 a day wages.

GREAT BRITAIN IS AFTER LATEST GERMAN AIR CRAFT

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Great Britain, it is stated, is negotiating for an Unger airship, which is larger, faster and more rigid than any others yet designed, including the Zeppelins.

'Oh Fudge' Strongest Language Permitted

Kansas City Starts Crusade Against Public Swearing—Police Rebuke Violators.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—Anything stronger than "Oh, fudge!" must not be heard on the streets of Kansas City hereafter. All the ministers of the city and all the members of their churches have started an anti-swearing crusade, and part of the work is to ask persons who are overheard to swear to consider the vulgarity of it and cease the practice.

The Police Department and the street railway company have agreed to join in the crusade, so that hereafter it is part of the policeman's duty to stop swearing as well as breaches of the peace.

Miss Elliott Returns To Stage To Be Happy

Will Play Potiphar's Wife in Sir Herbert Tree's "Joseph and His Brethren."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Maxine Elliott, yielding to Sir Herbert Tree's persuasion, will return to the stage September 2 in a great production of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." She will play Potiphar's wife.

Miss Elliott gives as the chief reason for her reappearance that every one is happier when occupied. She is now living in her beautiful house at Bushey, just outside London.

STORY OF MULHALL WILL EXTEND U. S. LOBBY INQUIRY

Mulhall represented the National Association of Manufacturers, in Washington. The association has a membership of 225 organizations, among them the most influential of the country, and 4,000 individuals, who control billions of capital.

The burden of his statements were that the association had for years promoted tariff, labor, and general business legislation favorable to itself, had maintained a lobby staff of seventeen, including himself, and former Presidents VanCleave and Kirby, of the association, at the capital to defeat hostile legislation, and it was always seeking and often obtaining control of the House and Senate Committee on Labor and Judiciary.

Created Tariff Commission.

He said that the association's efforts were responsible for the creation of the Tariff Commission under President Taft, and said that nine former Congressmen and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages in the House, had obtained money for services rendered.

More sensational still were the declarations that former President Taft, former Vice President Sherman, and former Speaker Cannon, besides many Congressmen and Senators were among those whom the association could affect by appeals to sentiment or other interests. He told of an unsuccessful attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, and of successful work among petty labor leaders.

Mulhall told of his own great ingratitude, how he obtained a Federal position through the influence of Senator McComas of Maryland, and at the same time entered the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers, helping to defeat his patron because McComas had been doomed for his opposition to the association.

McComas, it seems, was not the only victim. Tom L. Johnson had been defeated for Mayor of Cleveland, said Mulhall, for his opposition to the association, and William E. Hughes was opposed by the business combine for Senator from New Jersey because he was the advocate of many labor bills. It was in this connection that Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, had agreed with Gompers and Morrison, the labor leaders, to support Hughes, and had stumped the State in his favor.

Spies Kept in Field.

The work of the association against the eight-hour law, its enmity to most legislation that was favorable to labor, how he kept in occasional communication with former Vice President Sherman, how spies were kept in the field to corrupt minor labor leaders, and to knife opponents, were other sensational bits of the Mulhall testimony.

George Pope, president of the association, and other officials of the organization, have made statements declaring that Mulhall is not to be believed, and that most of the statements were inspired by the fact that Mulhall was discharged by the association. From many persons and places have come statements denouncing Mulhall as a man of reprehensible character, lessening thus the substantiability of many of the charges. But in many instances the declarations he made seemed to be assured of reliability by documents that are substantial.

Interesting is his list of Congressmen whom he said had received pay from the association. He named in this connection J. E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, the House "whip" of the last administration; J. T. McDermott, Democrat, of Illinois; J. J. Jenkins, Republican, Wisconsin; Kittredge Haskins, Republican, Vermont; C. E. Littlefield, Republican, Maine; H. M. Bannon, Republican, Ohio; H. M. Coudry, Republican, Missouri; J. J. Gardner, Republican, New Jersey; R. B. Cole, Republican, Ohio, and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages.

On the other hand, he named a number of Congressmen who had consistently fought the association's interests, and whom he frankly called "unpurchasable." They are: Speaker Clark, Burnett of Alabama, Mays-Nichols, Pennsylvania; Parson, New nard, Virginia; Cooper, Wisconsin; York; Green, Massachusetts; Haugen, Iowa; Wilson, Pennsylvania; McComas, Maryland; Pearre, Maryland; Hughes, New Jersey; Kelliher, Massachusetts; Connolly, Massachusetts, and the labor leaders, Gompers, John Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the Federation of Labor. William Barnes, the New York boss, he said, was his friend, and could always be depended on to "take care of bills."

Revelations of Lamar.

On the heels of the Mulhall revelations came those from David Lamar, the smiling, cynical "Wolf of Wall Street." Lamar it was who told of having sent Edward Lauterbach, his attorney, to peddle around Wall Street a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the Senate.

J. P. Morgan was one of the men whom Lauterbach visited on this errand. He told how he had impersonated Congressmen Palmer and Riordan in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass Ledyard and Paul D. Cravath, corporation attorneys, and Robert S. Lovett, the railroad president, feigning knowledge of the intentions of the dominant party. Further, he declared that he had represented himself as fresh from the councils of Speaker Clark and other leaders when he visited Wall Street operators for concessions.

Lamar's most remarkable disclosure was his statement that the Union Pacific Railroad's books had been forged in 1901 to cover an item of $82,000,000, whereby the fortunes of E. H. Harriman, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, and others were built.

Testimonials Discredited.

Discredit has been cast upon Lamar's testimony as on Mulhall's, as coming from a man lacking in scruples. Paul D. Cravath, attorney for the Union Pacific, gave out a statement that the testimony regarding the gigantic forgery was part of a bear campaign against the company.

The Senate investigation will be conducted in detail, and it is likely, to judge from the announced intentions of the committee members, that every member of the Senate and of the House, every public official whose name has been dragged into the affair, and every one in anyway connected with the situation will be called in as witnesses. Appearances seem to indicate that the hearing will last far into the summer.

Mulhall was on the stand the greater part of last week explaining a batch of correspondence which had passed between him and political and labor leaders throughout the United States. The correspondence, according to evidence which has been revealed, he has sought to sell to magazines and newspapers several times, but in vain. Nonchalantly, the ex-lobbyist has pointed out letter after letter from prominent men, talking of alleged significant deals almost carelessly.

"This is a letter from Senator Foraker," he said, indicating one. "It was asking me to see a labor man about his chances for re-election to the Senate. I think he was considering the Presidency at the time."

Secrets of big politics are being bared daily during the investigation. Details of how spies worked among the labor men, and of the secret methods of big business have been explained by Mulhall at more than one point in his testimony.

In defense of his own lobbying, Mulhall made statements that a labor lobby existed, naming Samuel Gompers. As a result, Gompers and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be brought before the committee to explain their activities in the cause of labor and capital, respectively.

Inez Milholland's Wedding Blow to Suffragists

Her Romance May Annul Marriage to the Cause

Mrs. Eugen Boissevain, who was Miss Inez Milholland, famous suffragist beauty and orator, before her marriage to wealthy Dutchman last week.

Beautiful Leader of Votes for Women Won After Courtship on Two Continents.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Suffrage leaders of the United States are today bowed in spirit. They can think of their recent victory in Illinois without smiling. They read of success of women jurors and policemen with no show of ecstasy. Their minds are troubled. They seek to know whether Mrs. Eugen Boissevain will be as potent a personality for the cause as was Inez Milholland before she suddenly decided to take unto herself a husband in the form of the wealthy Dutchman she wedded Tuesday in London.

For Inez Milholland has been no small force in the suffrage movement in the United States. She graduated from Vassar just about the time when the votes for women idea traveled across the seas from England, and she has been right on the firing line in the battle for the ballot ever since.

Beauty of Suffrage Ranks.

Miss Milholland, beg pardon, Mrs. Boissevain, has ever been in the specially mentioned class in every important suffrage movement. She has been the American Christobal Pankhurst, only more so, though it has not been recorded that she has smashed anything, or has had to dodge extradition treaties to keep from the painful necessity of going on a hunger strike.

Even before she graduated from Vassar, Miss Milholland was known to fame. Her remarkable beauty, her mentality and personal magnetism made her a leader in this great girls' college. She was the champion all around athlete and held a world's record for putting the shot.

During the strike of the garment workers in New York, several years ago, Miss Milholland volunteered for picket duty and it was her oratory that kept the girls stubbornly on the strike until they partially won their demands.

In the first big suffrage parade in New York she was a battalion leader and was a striking figure as she rode astride on a big bay charger.

Challenges Orator Heflin.

She again achieved prominence by challenging Representative Tom Heflin of Alabama to joint debate when that doughty Congressman spoke disparagingly of the cause, and though it is known that Mr. Heflin loves to speak and delights in debate, he carefully avoided meeting Miss Milholland on the forum.

In the great suffrage parade in Washington the day before President Wilson's inauguration Miss Milholland led the procession as the herald of the cause. She was mounted on a pure white horse and was clad in robes of white, while a coronet surmounted her magnificent hair which fell loosely down her back.

So striking was her appearance that she was quickly an object of the attacks of the thugs and boors who tried to break up the parade, and it is recorded that one of these men received a blow on the jaw from the fist of the young woman who once held the world shot-put record.

"I am wedded to the cause," she told her admirers, among whom were Sidney Smith, the New York clubman; John Fox, Jr., author and former husband of Fritzi Scheff, and Lord Curzon, formerly viceroy of India.

Whether this marriage will annul her former marriage to the cause is the question that perplexes the suffrage leaders, but they, as a rule, protest that it will not.

John E. Milholland, her father, was evidently not greatly shocked by the marriage. Here is what he cabled his daughter:

"Have not been so mad in two hundred years. You should be boiled in oil. Do you expect forgiveness until the next century. Indefensible chip of the old block, you have given us a pretty rough deal, but nevertheless I humbly and fervently pray God's blessing upon you and yours forever. "PATER."

Boissevain's Brother Elated.

Robert W. Boissevain, brother of the bridegroom, was in a decidedly agreeable frame of mind yesterday in his office at No. 17 Battery place. Besides calling his brother a "lucky dog" and describing him as being "smiled upon by the gods," he said that the new Mrs. Boissevain has now seven sisters-in-law who possess collectively 25 children and that all these seven Boissevain sisters are suffragists of the non-militant type.

"Wireless" in Courtship.

"Eugen, who is 33 years old, and my brother Jan came over to New York on the Olympic to pay me a visit," he said. "They arrived June 10 and stopped at the Holland House with me. William Marconi, the wireless discoverer, and Mrs. Marconi were here at the same time. My brother and I have known Mr. Marconi for years, and I now understand that the Marconis have known the Milholland family for a long time.

"Anyway, two days after the arrival of my brothers, that is, June 12, I was dining with them in the Holland House and Mr. and Mrs. Marconi entered the dining room with one of the most beautiful women we had ever seen. Miss Milholland was presented to us, and my brother Eugen lost interest in all other things then and there.

"Eugen and Jan had planned to tour the States for six weeks at least, but during the dinner Miss Milholland said something about leaving for Europe early in July. The plans of Eugen, I could see, went flying.

MAZDAZNANS EAT FLOWERS AND SING TO THE SUN

All This in Classic Boston, Where the Cult Has a Membership Small but Exclusive.

BOSTON, July 19.—It is ancient history that Nebuchadnezzer went out and ate grass like an ox. Out in the Back Bay and up in Lowell there can be found small yet select circles of folk who eat grass and say they enjoy it.

Not only this, but they worship the sun, pray to the sun, sing to the sun, take sun baths, dew baths, eat rose petals and pansies, drive out disease by fasting spells (or say they do so), fast for days and then fatten up on a diet of water to drink and violets to eat, kiss and rekiss, and try to be as happy and contented as can be.

These people are the Mazdaznans or Sun Worshipers. Into their innermost shrines have penetrated none but ardent devotees, so that none of their rites have been made public. As revealed for the first time at the big Gahanbar, or national peace congress of the Mazdaznans, these rites are weird enough—strange to the outside world, but taken as a matter of course by the Mazdaznans.

And the strange part of the rites and worship is that the devout worshipers believe their practice will lengthen their years into three or four centuries.

Secret Rites of Cult.

Another thing about the sun folk is that they don't worry. So in the hot weather they manage to keep cool figuratively and physically. They usually look happy and contented when met on the street.

None outside the cult itself knew—up to the holding of the recent Gahanbar or Congress—of the secret rites of the Mazdaznans. These are practiced in the inner circles, so called.

For years the famous "Green Book" of the Mazdaznans was a mystery sealed to the eyes of ordinary mortals. The book was guarded sacredly by the Sun Worshipers. In it are printed the precepts of the cult.

Here are some of them:

You can get cured of anything if you have faith enough long enough.

Sickness, sin and poverty will be eradicated by Mazdaznanism.

The fly you swat may be the incarnated soul of a great-great-great-grandmother.

Be careful, then, how you swat the flies.

Obstinacy Cause for Pain.

Pain is nothing but the result of obstinacy in you. If you are suffering from a toothache, it is because you are "declining to yield to the peaceful operations of intelligence."

Never go under the surgeon's knife or take "herbal medicine."

Deny the "bonds of ancestral relation through sickness, sin or sorrow."

And practice these things: Deep or "conscious" breathing and vegetarianism.

If you can do these things, you may become a Mazdaznan, so the "Green Book" says.

The High Priestess is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Roth Hilton, wife of Dr. George Hilton, of Lowell.

In the inner worship Hanish, the leader, is His Humbleness, Mrs. Hilton is Spenta Marie—the equivalent of "holy mother."

Their chief New England shrine is the Mazdaznan Temple, in Lowell. This was formerly a barn belonging to Dr. Hilton, but later converted into a "house of worship."

The central figure in the worship is Mrs. Hilton, the High Priestess. She is the mother of two pretty daughters, one of whom, the elder, Miss Ruthken Mariana Hilton, is being educated to follow in her mother's steps as High Priestess. Some day pretty Miss Ruthken—her name before the court changed it was Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of Mrs. Hilton by her first marriage—will be the leader of the Mazdaznans. The other daughter is Miss Constance Cleopatra Hilton.

The majority of the followers of the "Little Master," Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, are the persons of middle life and evidently of generous means. While a few of the cult are young women of surpassing beauty, yet the advanced philosophic principles of Mazdaznan are so complex and abstract that only those of mature mind are intellectually and spiritually capable of comprehending them. Therefore, there is a dearth of young people in the cult.

FORT WAYNE, July 19.—A long hike as a dual honeymoon trip began to-day, when Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lew Ross and Mr. and Mrs. J. Russell Klein, of this city, will start for Winchester, Va., where they will visit relatives.

Both couples recently were married. Ross and Klien have resigned their positions in order to make the trip. The men will carry a camping outfit weighing 25 pounds. All will wear duck suits and leggings.

Rats Give Sleeping Fisherman Haircut

Well Oiled Head of Angler Proves Excellent Provender for Hungry Island Rodents.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., July 19. A Santa Barbara fisherman has discovered a new way of getting his hair clipped. He appeared about his usual haunts yesterday with one-half of his head neatly shorn of hair. He says that the mice did it. A well-known fisherman vouches for the tale.

Santa Barbara Island is inhospitable and barren and contains not a drop of fresh water. For this reason fishing parties take a good supply of liquid refreshment.

Usually fishermen sleep on their boats on account of the mice. However, the fisherman in the party of Williams said he would sleep on shore.

This fisherman had earned the sobriquet of "Dude," owing to his habit of oiling his hair. It was this oil that caused the involuntary haircut, for the fishermen say that during the "Dude's" hours of slumber the mice visited him and neatly cut the hair close to the scalp in their relish of the oil.

Japs' 'Amo' Starts Romance at Harvard

Girl Student Teaches Him Language of Nippon and Now They Sail for Tokio Honeymoon.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—They met in the yard at Harvard. He was finishing his course and she was studying the intricacies of the Japanese language.

"Will you teach me Japanese?" asked James Lee Kauffman, and she said "yes."

They studied together day after day. Finally he was graduated to what corresponds to "Amo" in the Latin books. He asked her several times to explain its meaning.

"It means I love," she said, blushing.

"I am sure it must mean I love you," he said, and when she nodded that such might be the case he admitted that such was the case.

So they were married in Lancaster, Pa., and came here.

They sailed for Tokio. He is to take the chair of English law in the Imperial University.

Marries and Steals To Reform a Girl

Divinity Student Admits Taking Money Trusted to Him Because He Loved Woman.

DENVER, July 19.—William Schulz, student of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $38 from the student body, whose cashier he was, says he married Miss Thelma Gillion and became a defaulter, not only because he loved the girl, but because he desired to assist her in giving up her former way of living.

That Schulz had partly succeeded in his work of reclamation is the belief of all Denver people who have come in contact with the young woman since she and Schulz arrived in this city. They unite in saying that there is no better behaved young woman in Denver than Mrs. Schulz.

Sioux City Finds Policewomen Useful

Superintendent of Police Safety Declares They Have Lessened Trouble With Girls.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA, July 19.—"I want especially to have the policewomen on the force during the summer months," says the Superintendent of Public Safety. "We formerly had plenty of trouble with young girls in dance halls, but since the women came on the force there has been none of this.

"I believe that they are doing fine work and am very well satisfied. The only thing that would cause their release from the force would be the lack of sufficient appropriation to pay their salary. They are necessary to the force in guarding the morals of the women of Sioux City."

Safe Robber Relic Found in Old Wall

Discoverers Believe That Ancient Money Box Was Taken From Stage Coach by Highwaymen.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., July 19.—While repairing the State highway at the top of Conococheague Mountain, near Concord, Ralph Hopple and Elias Snyder, who were tearing down a stone wall, found an express money box, of heavy sheet iron, lined with wood. The lid was partly open and the lock had been sprung with an iron hook found near the box.

It is thought the box was in the old stone wall for more than a century and was placed there by a gang of robbers that infested that section in the days of stage coaches.

ACID THROWN AS JEALOUS WIFE STRIKES RIVAL

House Physician of Kimball House Center of Affray Witnessed by Peachtree Crowd.

Dr. J. Robert Smith, house physician at the Kimball Hotel; Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Ina McNeil, of No. 299 Forrest avenue, a saleswoman at a downtown store, engaged in a struggle in front of the Park-Chambers-Hardwick store on Peachtree street Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. Smith found her husband with Mrs. McNeil.

In the melee Mrs. McNeil received a slight cut on her arm, and Mrs. Smith claims also she gave her a black eye. During the trouble a bottle of what is supposed to have been carbolic acid was thrown by one of the participants, but none of them will admit throwing it. Dr. Smith declares he did not see the acid thrown, and Mrs. Smith will not say whether she threw it or not.

Hundreds See Fray.

The triangular affray was witnessed by hundreds of Peachtree street pedestrians, and created considerable excitement. After the bottle of acid had crashed to the pavement and broken, Dr. Smith hustled his wife around the corner, while Mrs. McNeil ran into the store and hurried to the second floor.

Mrs. Smith admits attacking Mrs. McNeil. She says she has several times asked her to keep away from Dr. Smith, and declares she became infuriated when she saw her husband meet Mrs. McNeil downtown to-day.

Says She Trailed Smith.

"Dr. Smith has been running around with Mrs. McNeil for more than a year now," said Mrs. Smith. "We have been separated for several years, but of late the doctor has asked me to return to him. He has offered to buy me an automobile if I would come back, but I told him I would have to test him. I asked him to keep away from Mrs. McNeil, and I've also asked Mrs. McNeil to keep away from Robert.

"I heard several weeks ago that he was going around with her again, and this morning I came to Atlanta from my home in Douglas. I trailed Dr. Smith to-day when he left the Kimball House, and I saw him meet the woman on Edgewood avenue. I followed them until they got in front of the store on Peachtree street, and then I got so mad that I stopped them.

"I admit I hit Mrs. McNeil, and I would do it again. I just got so mad that I walked up and struck her in the face. I gave her a black eye and scratched her on the arm, but she didn't hurt me. I don't know anything about the acid. Dr. Smith did not do anything while we were fighting, but acted like he wanted to get away. After the bottle was thrown, he took me out of the place."

Girl Shoots Herself When She Is Spanked

Mother Punishes Her for Spending Afternoons With Boys—She Fires Bullet Into Breast.

NEW YORK, July 19.—When the mother of 15-year-old Mary DeMartino spanked her a week ago for spending the afternoons with young men on the roof of their home, No. 337 East Forty-seventh street, the girl threatened to shoot herself.

Mrs. DeMartino caught her on the roof again yesterday, and after Mary had been chastised, she fired a bullet into her breast, penetrating one of her lungs. She was taken to Flower Hospital, and last night was in a critical condition.

Couldn't Die Until He Moved Friend's Body

Pioneer Refuses to Allow Companion's Remains to Rest In Old Deserted Cemetery.

DUFUR, OREG., July 19.—"No, he was just my friend."

This was the answer given by H. Koehler, of Portland, when asked if William Holman, whose body he had gone to the trouble and expense of moving from one cemetery to another, was a relative.

Many, many years ago, when there was but a small handful of settlers in the Fifteen-Mile Valley, a location for a cemetery was selected on a hill overlooking the valley.

A few days ago Kohler, now a gray-haired man, came to look after the last resting place of his friend Holman. He left here soon after Holman's death 35 years ago.

"We were good friends—very good friends," he said. "I could not die happy if I knew he would be left out there in that old cemetery with no one left to care for his grave. I had intended to look after this long ago, but circumstances have prevented, and now I am growing old and I must do this one kind act for my friend. We were very, very good friends."

Automobile Driver Kills Deer With Car

Horn Frightens Animal But He Afterwards Turns to Fight and Pierces Tire With Horns.

UKIAH, CAL., July 19.—W. C. Jones, of Los Angeles, ran down a big deer with his auto near Largo yesterday when it jumped over the fence in front of the machine. Jones opened his throttle and turned loose the horn. The noise frightened the animal, and, after a half mile chase, it turned to give battle. The deer made one vicious lunge forward, its horn piercing the front tire, the impact breaking its neck. Jones loaded his prize into the machine.

CRAWFORD HEIRS EXPECT SEARCH FOR BARBER TO BARE PRE-NUPTIAL PLOT

Relatives Think That Lump Will Tell Woman Held on Poison Charge Planned to Wed Him on Her Husband's Death.

If the tireless search which is being directed by Atlanta lawyers discovers in New York a man named Fred Lump, the prosecution in the case against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, thinks a pre-nuptial plot against Crawford can be proved.

The alleged plot was between Mrs. Crawford, then Mrs. Savage, and Lump. She would marry the wealthy Crawford, obtain his money, and then marry Lump, say her accusers.

Lump is a barber by trade and a Bohemian by nativity. He is supposed to be in New York, and in that city detectives in the employ of the prosecution have been at work for several days. Every message that comes from them, however, is one of failure.

Colonel James Makes Charge.

The charge of a plot first was made by Col. J. S. James, who is attorney for the contesting Crawford heirs, who ordered the arrest of Lump. Colonel James said that Lump admitted his being in Atlanta at the time of Crawford's death, and that other testimony valuable to the prosecution was given by him in deposition several weeks ago. But present search for the Bohemian barber has proved fruitless.

Colonel James points to Mrs. E. C. Bursener as one of the witnesses of the prosecution to substantiate the murder plot charge. Mrs. Bursener, it is claimed, will testify that she frequently heard Mrs. Crawford say that she would marry Crawford, get his money, and later run away with Lump. The prosecution will seek to prove also by Mrs. Gertrude A. Painter, it is said, that there was a definite agreement to this plan existent between Mrs. Crawford and Lump.

The forces that are trying to saddle Mrs. Crawford with the murder charge are scoring heavily in the closely-allied civil suit. Heirs of Joshua B. Crawford, trying to break the will by which the widow received the bulk of the estate, charging undue influence, have produced a number of witnesses to swear to an antagonism between Crawford and Mrs. Mary B. Crawford.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. L. C. Dillingsley, who testified that Joshua B. Crawford said, time and again, that he would not marry the woman. This statement was elicited in the attempt to prove that Crawford was not rational, and probably was intoxicated, when he married Mrs. Crawford.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Mrs. Dillingsley, who said she lived in the Crawford home on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death, told of instances of alleged cruelty on Mrs Crawford's part, directed particularly toward a Miss Scott. Mrs. Sallie Alexander, an old woman of Henry County, was another witness by whom it was sought to prove habitual drunkenness on Crawford's part.

Mrs. Crawford, released from the Tower on bail of $6,250, has remained in the seclusion of her home on West Peachtree street all week, steadfastly quiet and refusing all statements in the face of the accusations against her. She has said nothing regarding the case, except a simple denial of the charges.

Reporters seeing her were treated courteously and quietly, and Mrs. Crawford seemed not averse to talk to them freely. But in most of the talk the subject of the murder charge and the plot charge in which Lump's name appears was carefully skirted.

Mrs. Crawford is a large woman, of dignified appearance. Not one moment since her arrest Saturday night has her composure broken, even slightly. In the Tower she received the few persons who called on her, and during the visit did not exhibit a sign of perturbation.

Calls Charge "Awful Thing."

To reporters and to all her visitors, when she mentioned at all the subject of the murder charge, she referred to it as "this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford finds staunch friends in her children and grandchildren, who visited her at the Tower, and were with her almost all the few hours she spent in jail, bringing her flowers, a savory meal, and other tokens of their love.

Mrs. Crawford's children are bitter in their speech against the nephews and neices of Joshua B. Crawford, who, they say, are persecuting their mother with extreme cruelty. Mrs. Crawford herself accused her enemies of cruelty and lack of feeling.

Mrs. Crawford met Joshua B. Crawford when she was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine, wither Crawford went in search of health. It was there she met him, and there that she married him. At his death, there was a settlement of his estate, Mrs. Crawford taking hold of the affairs with a capable hand.

An agreement was signed, and the affairs of Joshua B. Crawford, deceased, seemed amicably settled. Then the litigation was sprung. In the first bill of complaint the heirs who contested the will charged Mrs. Crawford with poisoning her husband, and of exerting undue influence to procure a will in her favor. But it was not until three years later, two weeks ago, that an examination of the remains of Joshua B. Crawford to ascertain traces of poison was ordered. Upon the examination came the verdict of the physician that traces of poison were vident, and Mrs. Crawford was arrested.

With preliminary hearing waived, Mrs. Crawford's case is flatly up to the grand jury, which, without definite date of meeting, awaits the call of the Solicitor General. The body probably will be assembled next week.

MRS. MARY BELLE CRAWFORD, held on poison charge in famous will case mystery, with her grandchild, Viola Belle Bennett.

Fortune in Gold Nuggets Awaits Heir

Wealth Will Revert to State of Kansas Unless Kin of Old Woman Appear.

HUTCHINSON, July 19.—There is a bag of gold nuggets and gold dust awaiting heirs that may go to the State of Kansas. These nuggets and the gold dust, along with some money and other personal property to the value of $10,000, are in the hands of former Sheriff G. M. Duckworth, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ann M. Bernhert, who died a few days ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Some years ago when Mrs. Bernhert, who lived alone, was found to be of unsound mind, Dr. Duckworth was named as her guardian and she was taken to an asylum for treatment. In searching the house he found scattering personal property. It was found that much of it was gold nuggets and dust, saved, evidently, from some former mining experience, and hoarded away.

Baby Sips Hat Bleach; Dies from Poisoning

Mother, Bedridden from Appendicitis, Is Unable to Stop Child from Drinking Acid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—As a result of drinking a mixture of lye and oxalic acid, used by her father to clean an old straw hat, Dorothy E. Smith, 20 months old, died yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her father is Leo Smith, of No. 47 Brooklyn avenue, Jamaica, an employee of the Long Island Railroad.

The child's mother is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She and the baby were alone in the house yesterday when the child drank the mixture. She heard the baby's screams, but could not leave her bed, so she screamed, too, and neighbors who responded called a doctor.

SOT IS SENTENCED TO BATHE AND GO TO CHURCH

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 19.—To attend church each Sunday for three months and to bathe his children once a week was the novel sentence imposed on John Norris in the Police Court by Mayor Reed.

Norris pleaded guilty to intoxication. It was his second appearance in court within two months.

The terms of his sentence, if not complied with, will result in him serving 109 days in the workhouse.

RENO SINGS ITS SWAN SONG AS DIVORCE MECCA

Grand Rush of Colonists to Take Advantage of the Old Law Comes to an End.

RENO, July 19.—With such songs as "Meet a Friend From Your Home Town" and "At the Devil's Ball," sung by feminine entertainers from Metropolitan music halls, accompanied by high-class orchestras, the divorce colony celebrated the past week the beginning of the end of the Nevada quick divorce.

On the stroke of the midnight hour on Monday the curtain dropped upon one scene in Reno's notable divorce colony performance which has commanded the attention of the world for so long—that of the almost daily appearance of new faces upon the streets, as men and women, from plain country folk to elaborately gowned and bejeweled society beauties, arrived to begin their required six months' residence in the State and county, preparatory to the prospective divorce action.

Law Halts Colonists.

No more will incoming trains deposit these colonists and carloads of trunks, for the familiar song, "I'm on My Way to Reno," has been shelved by the action of the last Legislature, when it dealt the knock-out blow in its ultimatum that no divorce proceeding shall be instituted in the State of Nevada under the existing six-month residence law after December 21 next, thereby limiting the time in which newcomers could begin such residence period to Monday last.

Previous to July, 1909, the presence here for divorce of but an occasional person of prominence merely commanded attention to that individual, but it led to a method of publicity by an attorney which started the ball rolling, and it has never stopped rolling. Its greatest momentum is being witnessed now.

All Houses Are Thronged.

During the past month, and especially the week ending on Monday, the throng of newcomers has experienced great difficulty in securing such apartments as they might desire. All the hotels are crowded, as are the desirable rooming houses. Available cottages are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. In many cottages from four to six divorcees are living.

Some private boarding houses are housing as many as ten of the fair sex, and men. There are now scores of so-called "divorcees' nests" here. Every train the past fortnight has unloaded new arrivals, the preponderance of men and very young women, seemingly well to do and fashionable being noticeable. The proportion of men to women increased largely. Baby carriages and dogs played conspicuous parts.

Attending Funerals Hobby of Old Squaw

"Glass Eye," Noted for Lamentations at Obsequies, at Last Principal at Mortuary Ceremony.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREG., July 19.—"Glass Eye" is dead. She was an aged Indian woman, well known here since the settlment of this section. It was one of her hobbies to attend every funeral that she could, and on these occasions she posed as chief mourner by her excessive lamentations.

Her name has been forgotten by the whites, who only know her by the nickname, which is said to have been given her when young, because of the brightness of her eyes and not because of any abnormality in them.

She was about 75 years old, and is reported to have been the sister of "White Cindy," another noted aborigine.

Boy Finds $35,500; Hides it from Police

Advertises That He Picked up Money and Declares He Will Return it to Owner.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., July 19.—Brayton Gardner, 18 years old, who announced he had found $35,500 in a leather bag on the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad, to-night refused to tell the police where he put the money.

"I have hidden it in a safe place," said he, "and if someone claims it I will produce it immediately."

Gardner walked into the office of a local newspaper and inserted an advertisement, reading:

"Found, $35,500. Owner can have money by identifying it and satisfying Brayton Gardner."

Stolen Jewels Are Found Buried in Park

Last of $100,000 Loot Stolen by Employee of Firm Recovered After Confession.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The final confession of young William Beck, who stole $100,000 worth of jewelry from his employers, Udall & Bailou, was obtained yesterday. The last $2,800 of the loot was found by detectives. It was buried in Central Park.

Beck had insisted until yesterday that he had told all. But Inspector Faurot finally got him to reveal the hiding place. The police were told to enter the park at 110th street and Eighth avenue and count eighteen stone blocks in the wall to a spot where a small bush grew. Buried 6 inches they found nine diamond rings and a pair of cuff buttons.

Congress to Lose Costly Stationery

Government Printer Is Ordered to Stop Use of Costly Material for Lawmakers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Members of Congress will draw no more costly embossed stationery at the expense of the Government. Hereafter they will get along with plain, every-day printed letterheads and envelopes.

The Joint Committee on Printing discovered that the Government Printing Office last year turned out 11,000,000 embossed pieces of stationery at an extra cost of $30,000. An order has been issued to the Government Printer to stop this extravagance.

On the Senate side of Congress this economy reform is resented, but it goes just the same. If Senators want stationery de luxe they must foot the bills out of their private purse.

Indian Girl Seeks Office in Oklahoma

Educated Cherokee Business Woman Would Be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

VINITA, OKLA., July 19.—Announcement by Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, that she will not be a candidate for re-election, brings into the race for the Democratic nomination a young Cherokee woman, Miss Pearl Holderman, of Northern Craig County, whose ability as an educated business woman has given her a wide acquaintance in Eastern Oklahoma.

Miss Holderman has large business responsibilities, and her experience and ability have made her more than a match for most men. Because of her father's impaired health she manages his cattle ranch, directing every detail, including the care of a herd of blooded cattle. This young Cherokee woman owns a thousand acres of land in her own name, all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

Old Age Attributed To Her False Teeth

Woman, Age 99, Declares She Has Used Set 59 Years—Always Chews Well.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 19.—At the age of 99, Mrs. Levina Derr, of Hudson, declares that her long life is due solely to the fact that she bought a set of good stone teeth fifty years ago.

Mrs. Derr is still active. Five generations of her family are living, and she declares she is as young as any of them.

"I was blessed with good teeth," she said, "and I always made it a point to chew my food well. A good stomach is the foundation of good health, and the stomach can not be good unless the teeth are good."

INDIANS, 102 AND 97, WILL VISIT FAIR DIRECTORS

MONTROSE, COLO., July 19.—The board of directors of the Western Slope Fair Association decided to bring 50 Ute Indians from the reservation in Utah to Montrose during the fair in September. The Indians will include Chief McCook, 97, and his sister, Chippeta, 102, who is the widow of Chief Ouray.

Women Wear Bath Dresses Down Town

Startle Natives by Appearing in Ice Cream Parlor in Their Beach Attire.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Two buxon matrons and a miss about 19 years old created a sensation about dusk by walking through the streets of Warwood, north of this city, in bathing costumes. Unabashed by the attention they attracted, they entered an ice cream parlor, where they ordered ices, and after eating them walked to their homes.

The matter was brought to the attention of Town Marshal E. L. Pool, who immediately issued a warning that women appearing hereafter in such scant attire would subject themselves to arrest.

Naturalist Editor Has Forest Sanctum

Sets His Type in Shade of Hemlock and Lives in Wigwam all Winter.

WESTFIELD, MASS., July 19.—A unique editorial and printing plant is that known as "Seneca Wigwam, The Press in the Forest," located in the heart of the woods about three miles west of this place.

The sanctum is a typical Indian tepee, where the editor, Joseph C. Duport, an out-of-door enthusiast, prints, illustrates and publishes an original magazine called the Woronoco Valley Calumet.

In summer the editor sets his type in the shade of a hemlock, and in the winter or during inclement weather his work is done in the wigwam, which contains an up-to-date twentieth century printing press and equipment.

Policeman's Watch Stops Death Bullet

Hospital Steward Thinks Patrolman Burglar and Fires Six Shots at His Heart.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 19.—A watch in his vest pocket stopped a bullet which otherwise probably would have pierced the heart of Patrolman O'Hara last night. The shot was one of six fired by Roscoe Gray, steward of the Oakland College of Medicine, under the impression that O'Hara was a burglar. The other shots did not hit O'Hara. Gray nearly collapsed when he learned his mistake.

O'Hara was on his rounds when he noticed a door in the college building open. Trying to close it, he set off a burglar alarm and Gray opened fire in the dark.

Silver Wire Travels Through Two Arms

CHICO, CAL., July 19.—James Dupen, a Chico merchant, to-day submitted to an operation, in which a piece of silver wire, used in closing a wound on the left wrist in 1897, was extracted from the index finger of the right hand. The wire, which is one-half inch long, passed up one arm, across the chest and worked down the opposite arm, emerging at the finger.

Bee Sting on Neck Fatal to Farmer

Dies from Paralysis of Heart Fifteen Minutes After Insect Poison Enters System.

BRISTOL, PA., July 19.—John Pickering, a farmer of Woodbine, while engaged in his customary duties about the farm Saturday, was stung on the neck by a large bee and within fifteen minutes he was dead.

Dr. Heritage, of Langhorne, was summoned, but did not arrive in time to render aid. The doctor says death was the result of paralysis of the heart, caused by the bee sting.

FARMERS' UNION HOPE OF SOUTH, SAY ORGANIZERS IN GREAT GEORGIA CAMPAIGN

Charles S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee, Sweep Through the State With a Message to Planters to Check Enormous Crop Waste.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a rallying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"The marvelous grandeur of the world's progress astounds and amazes us, yet the wonderful story would never have been written had it not been for the ever-faithful farmer.

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"When we became a nation the farmer owned 90 per cent of the wealth. In 1850 our national wealth was $7,000,000,000 and the farmer owned $4,000,000,000, or four-sevenths.

"In 1913 our national wealth is estimated at $131,000,000,000, and the farmer owns $26,000,000,000. Our farm property is valued at nearly $40,000,000,000, but $14,000,000,000 is owned by other classes than farmers.

"The above figures show that farmers are not holding their own, for if they had kept pace with other vocations since 1850 they would now own $75,000,000,000 worth of wealth instead of $26,000,000,000. Their lack of business methods and failure to match conditions have cost them $49,000,000,000. This would buy all the farm property in the United States and have enough left to buy a half interest in all the railroads.

"In a score of years the farmers of this country have produced $135,000,000,000 worth of farm products, or enough to buy all the property in the United States. Yet this wonderful amount of wealth has not gone to the farmers. We have 10,000 men in this country who own an average of $10,000,000 each. And their combined wealth is $100,000,000,000. The other 99,990,000 people own $31,000,000,000. Of our 100,000,000, 60,000,000 are homeless.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'Education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The 12,000,000 farmers of this country are laboring under an indebtedness of $6,000,000,000. On this amount, counting commissions and renewal charges, they are paying an annual interest of 8 1-2 per cent, or $510,000,000, while the business men and manufacturers pay an average of 5 per cent interest, or $300,000,000, on $6,000,000,000. This $210,000,000 excess interest paid by the farmers would pay off our farm indebtedness in 28 years. Co-operative efforts and rural credits would right these wrongs. So, let us continue to discourage this present system until it has passed into history and is only remembered in the misty back yonder.

"Distribution being one of our greatest problems, our second declaration of purposes is to assist our members in buying and selling. The Federal Government has spent $100,000,000 in the last ten years, teaching us how to produce, and not a cent to teach us how to market.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

Expense Is Unavoidable.

"We all agree that there is an unavoidable expense in the distribution of farm products. But let us make what seems to us a reasonable division of the $13,000,000,000 consumers other than farmers pay for farm products each year.

Give the wholesaler and jobber $1,000,000,000, the transportation companies $1,000,000,000, the retailer $1,500,000,000; then throw in $500,000,000 for all possible misallowance, and we have $9,000,000,000, which is $3,000,000,000 more than the farmer gets. This amount falls into the waste basket of speculation.

"If it were divided between the producer and consumer it would clothe the naked, feed the hungry and educate the illiterate, instead of breeding millionaires, paupers, anarchists and suicides. If the Farmers' Union fills its mission, it will not be long until a less portion of the laborers' toll will be turned in at the toll gate of the palace and a great portion will find its way through the door of the cottage, and help to lift the humble tenement to the comfort, dignity and luxury of a home.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 250,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If property handled this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices, we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep his pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

Human Chain Saves Man on Niagara Brink

Four Men Take Desperate Chance in Rescue Work at Edge of Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 19.—Truman Chapman, aged 22, of Hamilton, Ont., is alive to-day after falling into the Niagara River and being rescued at the very brink of the American Falls. Four men formed a human chain, and, by taking a desperate chance, saved Chapman when his body providentially lodged between projections of rocks.

Chapman, who is subject to fits, was leaning against a railing at Prospect Point, directly over the water's edge, when he fell in. The current from this point to the brink of the falls is irresistible, but the unconscious body struck the rocks just right to be held temporarily. John Hughes, T. S. Winders, T. D. Thomas and an unidentified man were the heroes.

Advises Wives to Keep Their Secrets

Head of National Homestead Association Says It's a Mistake for Husbands to Know Too Much.

BOSTON, July 19.—"The wise wife never tells her husband all her secrets. She knows better than to run the chance of losing her independence."

So declared Mrs. Charlotte Smith, head of the National Homestead Association, to-day. The association is studying to find out what makes happy homes. It has learned that if a wife tells her husband everything it is a lesson to him not to tell her his secrets.

"Many divorces are occasioned by married couples knowing too much of each other," declared Mrs. Smith.

Aged Sisters Make White House Carpets

Old Women, Expert Dyers and Weavers, Are Preparing to Decorate Mrs. Wilson's Room.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 19.—Miss Caroline McHargue and Mrs. Martha Walker, of Elkin, aged 74 and 76, respectively, are engaged in preparing carpets, druggets and portieres to furnish the room of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the White House at Washington. They are experts in the blending of colors.

The two aged women are sisters. They live together and are expert dyers and weavers, using the old-time barks and herbs in the dyeing process, and the old-fashioned hand loom cards and spinning wheel.

Cartridge Placed on Track Shoots Youth

Boy May Die from Bullet Which Penetrated Lungs as Result of Belated Celebration.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—A delayed Fourth of July celebration on the part of small boys yesterday may result fatally for 8-year-old Francis Wright, who received a bullet in the chest at Twenty-fourth and Bryant streets. In company with his chums, he had been placing cartridges on the car tracks. One of them exploding, sent a bullet whizzing at him. He was taken to the Mission Emergency Hospital, where it was found that the bullet had penetrated the lung. The boy's parents had him removed to his home, No. 2582 Twenty-fourth street, where his condition is considered grave.

THIS DRESS WAS TOO MUCH FOR PRIM RICHMOND.

THIS Picture shows Miss Flossie Brown in the split skirt which caused so much excitement in Richmond, Va., that the young lady was arrested, fined $25 and given twenty-four hours in which to leave town. The idea of the slit skirt did not appeal at all to the Virginians, but it has not been received with so much disfavor elsewhere, for Miss Brown, or Blossom Browning, as she prefers to be called, has been invited to wear it in Pittsburg and Baltimore.

Quarrel at License Desk Halts Wedding

Prospective Bride Objected to Way Her Fiance Spelled Name and Ceremony Was Called Off.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., July 19. A near-wedding was spoiled to-day when the bride-to-be and the bridegroom-to-be quarreled over the spelling of the latter's name. C. W. Clane, of Los Angeles, aged 44, and wearing diamonds as large as hickory nuts, accompanied by a woman about 35 years old, applied for a license.

He started to fill out the blank. "Spell it right, please; spell it Cline," whispered the woman, but Clane just kept on writing.

Again his prospective bride, speaking right out loud, said he was spelling his name wrongly. But still Clane paid no attention. Then, in tones of downright anger, she exclaimed, "You spell your name properly or there will be no wedding."

"Very well," answered the man, and he crumpled up the application blank and they left the office.

NATION FINALLY REFUSES BURR'S PENSION PLEA

United States Decides After 79 Years Just to File Request in National Museum.

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—After some delay—79 years, to be more or less exact—the United States Government has decided on a final action on Aaron Burr's application for a pension. The Government proposes to put the application in the National Museum. This is a patriotic and quite inexpensive method of disposing of a formal application for money.

Exhibited in a glass inclosed case in the museum, the papers may rest peacefully and indefinitely, telling future generations that in his last days Burr was considerably "hard-up." This is a fact not generally known. But if future generations happen to be observant they may notice that the papers show Uncle Sam to be a bit tardy in matters of pensions.

Papers Valuable Historically.

Historically, the papers are very valuable. They contain a letter written by George Washington to Aaron Burr, which even to-day—about 135 years after the letter was penned—is in a state of perfect preservation. Any student of values of historical relics can tell how much such a thing is worth. Officials at the National Museum declare the letter to be "invaluable."

The paper is a bit yellow but it is intact. The ink is a trifle faded, but can be read without difficulty even without the aid of glasses. And, furthermore, the letter reveals a bit of Washington's character more clearly than a volume of history. The missive shows how the general treated with his officers. Burr had written to Washington requesting leave of absence from military duty on account of ill health and suggesting that while off duty his pay may be discontinued.

Here is George Washington's reply to Burr:

Headquarters,
Frederick, 26th Oct., 1778.

"Dear Sir:

"I have your favor of the 24th. You, in my opinion, carry your ideas of delicacy too far when you propose to drop your pay while the recovery of your health necessarily requires your absence from the service. It is not customary, and it would be unjust. You therefore have leave to retire until your health is so far re-established as to enable you to do your duty.

"Be pleased to give the Colonel notice of this, that he may know where to call upon you should any unforeseen exigency require it.

"I am, dear sir,

"Your mo. obt. servt.,
"GEO. WASHINGTON.

"Lt. Col. Burr."

Burr's Final Appeal.

George Washington's letter is regarded as the most valuable paper among the sheaf composing Burr's application, but the application itself, Burr's formal appeal for a pension, has much historical worth because it is Burr's own record of his military service, written in 1834, just two years before his death, at the age of 80 years, in Port Richmond, Staten Island, N. Y. The papers contain no mention of Burr's famous duel with Alexander Hamilton, in which Hamilton was mortally wounded.

Burr even failed to mention in the papers that he had been Vice President of the United States, and reference to the fact that he was arrested and tried for treason for attempting to form a republic west of the Mississippi is also omitted. In the application it is recited, however, that Burr was unable to appear in court to swear to the facts by reason of "bodily infirmity."

CONVICTS OFFERED PARDON IF THEY WILL PICK BERRIES

GEORGETOWN, DEL., July 19.—Full and complete pardons await even the prisoners in Sussex County if they will pick strawberries or work on the farms.

The scarcity of labor has become a serious problem to the farmers this year, and so serious has the question become that many of them have notified committing magistrates that they will pay all fines for intoxicated and disorderly persons if it can be arranged that these people pick berries.

CHANGS, ON WAY HOME, CLING TO YANKEE FRILLS

Wife and Children of Chinese Minister Sail Derssed in Latest American Fashions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—After more than three years in Washington with her husband, Minister Chang, Mme. Chang is returning to the Orient. She is accompanied by two daughters, a son, Henry K. Chang, a litt e daughter-in-law and a tiny grandchild. During her residence in America Mme. Chang has changed her ideas about many things, and about others she maintains the old Chinese beliefs.

The two young daughters, Miss Alice and Miss Lillie Chang, have been attending school in Washington for two years, and with the progress of their education have abandoned their picturesque nature clothes for American garb.

Whether they will adopt the clothes of their native country on their return remains to be seen. Miss Alice Chang, who spoke for the party at the St. Francis before they sailed on the Manchuria, said:

"It all depends on what is in fashion in China.

Favor American Fashions.

"If we find American clothes fashionable out there, we shall wear them. We adopted them when we entered Gunnison Hall, our Washington school. These are more convenient when traveling," she added, pointing to a pale blue silk crepe costume with the latest frills and furbelows. "When we wear our other clothes, people stare so, and sometimes they laugh. They aren't used to them in Washington."

The question of recent changes in China is of especial interest to Mme. Chang and her daughters.

The idea that women may vote in China and that the door of opportunity is opening for them daily there has caused the Chinese women to be thoughtful.

"I don't know about this voting," said Mme. Chang, through her daughter. "I don't believe very much in it."

"Only for some women," broke in one daughter.

Education Qualification.

"I would make an educational qualification," said Miss Lillie. "Not every woman ought to vote."

"Home is the place for women," said Mme. Chang, true to her country's traditions and centuries of training. "A woman ought to do housekeeping, to stay at home and to have children."

Mme. Chang and the daughters are opposed to the Western idea of a woman earning her own living. They believe she should want to stay at home to be cared for, even if she has to do without some of the extras which her own money can secure.

"Women in China probably never will reach that stage," said Mme. Chang. "There will be fewer opportunities for them to enter professional and business fields."

College is a goal which is being aspired to by the two daughters, although they are not sure yet what particular lines they want to pursue. "We can go if we want to, you know," said Miss Alice. "Our people believe in college for girls if they want it."

Surgeon Rebuilding Man's Entire Face

Ears and Nose Burned Months Ago Are Being Replaced by Series of Operations.

GRAHAM, MO., July 19.—Pierce Fleming, who lives near Graham, is undergoing one of the most remarkable series of operations ever attempted in Missouri. His face is being built anew.

Several months ago the Fleming home was burned and Pierce was severely burned about the head. For a time it was thought he could not live. He finally recovered, but his ears and nose were badly scarred.

A Kansas City surgeon was consulted and he began the work of rebuilding the face of the burned man. The ears have been completely rebuilt and the doctor is now working on the nose and the eyes. It is barely possible now to discern the difference between the new nose and ears of Fleming and the ones he lost in the fire.

High Ad Standard Urged by Maxwell

He has placed his application for membership in the Atlanta Ad Men's Club and has enrolled as a charter member of the "500,000-by-1920 Club" launched by The Georgian.

He has many friends who predict that his success in other cities will be duplicated in Atlanta and even increased.

WOMAN JURORS SCORN STYLE OF SMART LAWYER

Beau Brummel Clothes and Bachelor Button of Barrister Fail to Win His Cause.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Personal pulchritude and unusually smart habiliments, heightened by a bachelor's button and an ingratiating manner, failed to win for Assistant District Attorney Maxwell McNutt, in his appeal to the jury of women which tried Mrs. Bertha J. Williams on an extortion charge to-day. After deliberating one hour and 55 minutes, the jury, the first in the history of the world composed of women to hear a felony case, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

"Of course she said she did what she did, but we didn't think when she said she did it, she meant she had meant to do it," said one of the jurywomen.

Hence, Mrs. Williams, attired in a fetching Milan hat and a neat white serge tailored suit, much scrutinized by the jurywomen, made discreet osculatory advances to her benefactors, and the incident was closed.

Mrs. Annette Robinson, also armored in attractive feminine fixings, was the complaining witness in the case. She accused Mrs. Williams of having written her a letter April 8, attempting to extort $150 in return for the delivery of a trunk said to have contained certain evidence which, according to the letter, would have embarrassed Mrs. Robinson, had it fallen into the hands of the police.

Meows from Limb of Tree to Voice Love

Chicago Romeo Tries Novel Method of Wooing, but Falls Into Clutches of Law.

CHICAGO, July 19.—John Wadjinski's method of love-making goes back to the days when anthropoid Romeos used to hang by their tails and carol love songs all night long. He put his theories into practice on the night of May 3. To-day he was fined $5 and costs by Judge Sabath, who could find no sympathy for the unconventional wooing.

Sophia Emmerling had retired for the night. John Wadjinski strode through the night with caveman emotions stirring in his breast. He entered the Emmerling yard and climbed a tree. He straddled a branch opposite Sophia's window and began to "meow" like a cat. To the girl thus rudely awakened he made love in a voice that could be heard for a block.

Mrs. Anna Emmerling, the girl's mother, called the police. Wadjinski was yanked from romance to the jail.

MYSTERY MAN'S NAME TO STAY SECRET ALWAYS

Operation on Brain Fails to Reveal Identity of "J. C. R." Has Baffled Surgeons.

ROCHESTER, MINN., July 19.—That "J. C. R.," the mystery patient in the Rochester State Hospital, will never know who he is nor will the world, unless friends of olden days come to the rescue, and that he will never again speak, is the verdict of the surgeons, following a remarkable operation performed upon the brain.

"It is problematical that the operation will accomplish its purpose," said C. C. Heyerdale, first assistant superintendent of the State Hospital, after leaving the operating room.

The opening of the skull revealed a large area of degenerated brain cells covering the centers of speech and memory, and an unusually large cyst containing fluid was removed. This would indicate that in times past "J. C. R." probably suffered a hemorrhage of the brain, which could have been the result of a stroke of apoplexy or an injury inflicted upon the skull or brain. The unusually large area of degeneration discourages any hope that the memory will ever be restored or speech recovered.

Gets Blow Intended For His Twin Brother

Chicago Youth Struck When Angry Swain Avenges Pleasantry His Duplicate Was Guilty Of.

CHICAGO, July 19.—William and Otto Andler, of 3751 North Whipple Street, are twins. William passed a pleasantry about a lass who was going her way with one William Dieverkorn.

Sudden anger surged through Dieverkorn, but he held himself in check and escorted the young woman home. Then he came back, met Andler on the street an gave him a jarring wallop.

Andler soon discovered that the blow was meant for his brother and that Dieverkorn got mixed in the delivery of the goods.

Otto Andler refused to rest on this explanation. He caused the arrest of Dieverkorn, and it came out in court how William got the laugh, Otto got the punch and Dieverkorn got the hook.

Judge Sabith inspected the twins, said he couldn't see any difference and dismissed the case, warning Dieverkorn to be more discriminating in the future.

DORSEY FIGHTS MOVEMENT TO INDICT CONLEY

Solicitor Is Bombarded With Letters to Proceed Against Negro as Slayer of Mary Phagan.

THE GRAND JURY IS CALLED

Hottest Battle of Famous Case To Be Waged Behind Closed Doors of Inquisitory Body.

Solicitor Dorsey is fighting vigorously the movement in the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley Monday for the murder of Mary Phagan, despite the bambardment of letters from many citizens and by the sentiment of some of its own members.

It is for the consideration of these letters and petitions, asking the reopening of the Phagan matter, that the meeting has been called.

It was in the face of Solicitor Dorsey's bitterest opposition that the meeting was called at all. Foreman Beattie issued his defi after a previous Grand Jury had been defeated in its efforts to reopen the case with a view of indicting Jim Conley and after Dorsey explicitly had expressed his strongest disapproval of such a move.

Crucial Battle Coming.

With the first skirmish won by those in favor of the indictment of Conley, the hottest battle is yet to be waged behind the closed doors of the jury room. The question first will be on whether the grand jurors consider it proper at this time to reopen the investigation whose first chapter resulted in the indictment of Leo M. Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan. Solicitor Dorsey will lay before the body for the first time all of his reasons for desiring a postponement of all further investigation until after the trial of Frank.

Should the Solicitor be driven back from this position by the Grand Jury again disregarding his wishes and taking up the investigation, he will be forced to take refuge in the last ditch and make his fight against the indictment of Conley.

With all the weight of evidence which has piled up against the negro, it is regarded as beyond the realm of possibilities that he could persuade the jurors to return a "no bill" against Conley on the charge of murder. Dorsey's one remaining hope at this time would be, it is said, to induce the Grand Jury to waive definite action until after the trial of Frank, when it will be in a position to say whether an indictment shall be drawn against Conley as an accessory after the fact, to which he has confessed, or as the actual murderer.

Dorsey Refuse sto Comply.

The Solicitor's attitude in the matter plainly was shown by his statement when Foreman Beattie went to him Friday seeking to have him call the meeting. Dorsey flatly refused and said:

"The meeting's only purpose will be to exploit the evidence and embarrass the State, and I hope the Grand Jury when it meets will decide to leave the matter alone.

"The indictment of Conley at this time will be a useless procedure that will not stop the trial of Frank. It will only have a mild but undesirable effect on the State's case.

"Conley is in jail and is going to stay there for some time. He is where the authorities can put their hands on him, and he can be indicted much more properly after the Frank case has been disposed of than before, and by the delay there is no danger of a miscarriage of justice."

The Solicitor's position is attacked as palpably unfair by those who have been working to bring about the indictment of the negro. Dorsey would have the testimony of the negro accredited as that of any free and trustworthy citizen, while those opposing him declare it should be taken in the light of that of a possible murderer who is endeavoring to shift the blame on another's shoulders, they say.

Evidence More Direct.

They add that the evidence against Conley is far more direct and damning than any ever brought against Frank. They charge, on this account, that Conley has been protected and "coddled" when he should have been placed on the same basis as the other suspect in the case and should go before the jury in that aspect.

General denials were entered Saturday to the story published Friday that the Pinkertons had changed their attitude in the murder mystery and were convinced of the innocence of Frank. Chief of Detectives Lanford declared that Harry Scott had reaffirmed his belief in the guilt of Frank and the innocence of Conley, except as accessory after the fact.

Atlanta Day To Be Society Event

Knoxville Exposition Plans Feature

Mrs. Van Deventer, Daughter of Mr. Justice Lurton, to Visit City for Conservation Fair.

Atlanta Day at the National Conservation Exposition in Knoxville this fall will be one of the largest of the many special days arranged for the national fair in the East Tennessee city.

Atlanta Day, according to plans now on foot, will be largely a society function, for the members of the Woman's Department of the exposition headed by Mrs. Horace VanDeventer, a daughter of Justice Lurton of the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as Knoxville's acknowledged society leader, expect to formulate their plans so that many of Atlanta society folk will make the trip to Knoxville for that day.

In addition it is planned to make Atlanta Day at the exposition one of peculiar and intimate interest to all residents of the city.

Mrs. VanDeventer to Come Here.

The plans for this special day are now in the making. They will be matured probably while the delegation of Knoxville business men is in Atlanta next week, and later when Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers in the woman's department come to the Georgia metropolis to take up the matter with Atlanta society folk.

In the preparations for what undoubtedly will be the South's greatest exposition, the woman's department is playing no small part. In Knoxville the exposition management considers itself fortunate that Mrs. VanDeventer consented to take the direction of the woman's work. She has a very large circle of friends and acquaintancse throughout the country, in cities of the North as well as in cities of the South, and what is more, she has succeeded in interesting large numbers of society women in the work she has under way.

Miss Mabel Boardman, president of the American Red Cross Society and a woman who finds time in the multitude of her various philanthropic work to devote herself to society, will be the guest of the woman's department of the exposition on September 19. Miss Boardman to accept this invitation will be obliged to cut short her vacation, but she has gladly consented to do this rather than miss going to Knoxville. She will be made the recipient of many social favors and attentions while in Knoxville. She will be the house guest of Mrs VanDeventer.

Mrs. Hammond Interested.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, of Washington, wife of the multi-millionaire mining engineer, who was the special Ambassador from the United States to England at the time of the coronation of King George, is another society woman who has become interested in the Knoxville show and who will come to that city for one of the special days. Mrs. Hammond is president of the National Civic Federation, which will have an extensive exhibit at the Exposition.

Mrs. John Goelet, of Washington; Miss Mabel Wetmore and other women whose names are known the country over will also be guests of the woman's department while the Exposition gates are open. Recently Mrs. Van Deventer made a trip to Nashville to interest the women of that city. On very short notice a meeting was called. Two hundred or more Nashville women went to that meeting. A number of men went also. There was much enthusiasm shown. The result was that plans were completed then and there for a Nashville Day.

More than that—the Nashville Park Commissioners, under whose auspices a splendid exhibit of paintings is being shown in the Parthenon of that city, voluntarily and as a compliment to Mrs. VanDeventer decided to continue the exhibition almost to the time set for the opening of the Conservation Exposition. Then the exhibits will be moved to Knoxville. One of them will be shown in the Art Building; the other, which is the celebrated collection owned by Charles L. Freer, a millionaire art collector, of Detroit, will be placed in the Woman's Building.

Mrs. Denney Also Active.

Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers, among them Mrs. George W. Denney, fourth vice president, who is also the president of the Tennessee State Federation of Women's Clubs and very active in the club life of Knoxville and Tennessee, are planning now to come to Atlanta within a short time to talk matters over with Atlanta women. Just when Mrs. VanDeventer and Mrs. Denney will come or where the meeting will be held has not been decided.

The fact that Atlanta business men are showing a keener interest in the exposition—which is one designed to benefit the entire South—than they have heretofore, and the chances that Atlanta will be well represented at the exposition, is counted upon to assist the women.

The woman's department has planned its work along broad lines. The stereotyped exhibits that always have been a part of women's departments in other expositions will have no place in the Woman's Building at Knoxville. The idea behind the National Conservation Exposition is one of conservation, and these women have figured it out that there is probably nothing that needs conserving more than the energies and the health of women all over this broad land.

So that is what the exhibits in the woman's department will typify to a very large extent. Of course, the things that have a peculiar interest and attraction to women will not be overlooked.

ARTIFICIAL RAIN INSTALLED ON ATLANTA FARM

Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown Protect Crops With Pipe System.

"These dry nights, when my crops are burning up, I can smell that artificial rain a mile off," said a farmer in the suburbs of Atlanta.

The "artificial rain" of which he spoke is produced on three "fancy" farms within a short distance of Five Points, and, according to the unanimous verdict of Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown, who own "overhead irrigation" plants, it means salvation in dry years.

Stories are told of the wonderful crops these farmers grow—two yields of Irish potatoes a year, for instance, from 200 to 300 bushels an acre—six cuttings of alfalfa, crops of beans when the market is bare and beans are worth $2 a bushel.

Yet the system is simple enough.

Pipes Supply Rain.

On posts eight feet high rest pipes about two inches in diameter. These pipes run the whole length of the fields, and the lines of pipe are twenty feet apart. About two feet apart in the pipes are tiny holes. A gasoline engine, a pump which it operates, an abundant supply of water, and the thing is done.

Six hours each evening, when there is no rain, the pump is run and fine streams of water spurt from the holes in the pipes. At high pressure, these streams are thrown almost from one line of pipe to the next. Handles at convenient intervals make it possible to turn the pipes so that the streams are deflected in any direction and the ground thoroughly soaked with the spray.

This system excels ditch irrigation for Georgia soil for the reason that Georgia clay does not soak up water from a ditch in sufficient quantities. Besides, the soil cakes when water is applied in this way. "Artificial rain," however, coming down like a mist, permeates the whole soil and brings results.

Of course, an overhead pipe system is expensive. The cost is estimated at $250 per acre. This might be reduced somewhat if the farmer performed all the labor himself, or it might easily cost more if conditions were not entirely favorable. The increased yield, however, more than overbalances this initial outlay.

Loring Brown tells of getting an $1,100 crop of Irish potatoes from an acre, under his pipe system. In reality, there were two crops, a spring planting and a fall planting, and the potatoes brought a high price because they were sold for seed.

Fail to Realize Work.

"I have only one objection to seeing Belmont farm described in the newspapers," said Mr. Brown, as he sat in a swing on his front gallery and sorted a thick packet of letters. "My objection is that people read of big yields and good profits, then are anxious to try the same methods. They want to spend a lot of money to emulate Belmont, and fail to take account of the hard work that must go with it.

"A farmer, whether he has a fancy farm or one of the old-fashioned kind, must work eighteen hours a day. He must be on the job 365 days a year. That is what many people forget.

Five years ago, drouth killed the entire crop of potatoes on Belmont. Mr. Brown estimates that dry season cost him $3,000. That winter he went to Greeley, Colo., where overhead irrigation is in use, to see if he could work out a solution of the problem—some sort of insurance against drouth. The pipe lines were the answer. Farms around Atlanta can not grow the same yields produced around Greeley, but the difference in price caused by being closer to a good market overcomes the lesser yield, and more.

Zimmer Installs System.

Mr. Zimmer, on his Kimballville Farm, installed an identical system, though on a smaller scale, and since he installed it, never has had occasion to use it. By some streak of fate, his farm has been blessed with abundant rains.

But rain is freakish in choosing its itinerary. In Atlanta itself and out as far as the Chattahoochee River rains have been sufficient this year. But beyond the river there is serious drouth. Crops are drying up. Irrigation would have been the salvation of the farmers.

And as they sit in front of their homes at night, they can smell the sweet odor of refreshed fields at Belmont—"that darn artificial rain."

WIVES CREDITED WITH KEEPING HUSBANDS ALIVE

Medical Association Finds That Benedict's Regular Existence Is Better Than Bachelor's.

Supervision by wives as a possible reason for the greater longevity of married men than of bachelors is discussed by The Journal of the American Medical Association in its editorial section of the recently published statistics on this point. There is no remark on the statistics of more suicides among married men than bachelors.

The Journal has further information indicating that careful as the married men may be, with restraint once removed through the death or divorce of the wife, widowers and grass widowers leap into indiscretions and are lopped off more rapidly than either those still in the state or those who escaped matrimony.

Live Regular Lives.

"Undoubtedly the low death rate among married men is partly due to the fact that, as a rule, those who are in good health, are readier to marry, while those with more delicate health, especially if suffering from any definite ailment, are not willing to assume the burden and responsibility of a family," says The Journal. "Another factor is that married men live much more regular lives as a rule, and consequently avoid many of the dangers of irregular living.

"This view would seem to be corroborated by the statistics as to the mortality among married men who have lost their wives either by death or divorce. The death rate among these "unmarried men" is considerably higher than that of husbands of the same age, and even as a rule it is higher than that of the bachelors of the same age.

Widowers Die Fast.

"The death rate, for instance, of widowers and divorced men between 20 and 30 is nearly double that of single men. From 30 to 40 it is only 14.1 to 12.9, while from 40 to 50 the mortality of divorced and widowers is slightly less than that of single men of the same age. From 50 to 60, however, it is slightly higher once more.

"At all these ages the mortality rate among widowers and the divorced is at least nearly and sometimes double that of married men of the same age."

Feeds Her Pet Pig With a Silver Spoon

Denver Society Woman Provides Bed of Down and Linen for Her Porcine Possession.

DENVER, July 19.—Mrs. Whitney Newton, a Denver society matron, has a new pet.

Young Robert Newton came home a few evenings ago and brought a baby pig with him.

Mrs. Newton took the squirming animal into her arms and tried to make it comfortable, but without success. Finally, in desperation, she went to the linen closet, took out a fine piece of hemstitched linen, embroidered with blue flowers, wrapped it gently about the slick little pig, then laid him cautiously upon the downy pillows beside her own.

Piggy gave a satisfied little squeak, doubled up his feet and went off to sleep happily.

This cunning act won Mrs. Newton's heart, and from exasperation she developed a positive liking for her pet. His white skin is washed, combed and perfumed and he sleeps in a downy bed every night beside his mistress. He also eats from a silver spoon.

EXPRESS CLAIM OFFICES TO BE CONSOLIDATED

Savannah To Be Headquarters of Florida, Georgia and Southeastern Divisions of Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Consolidated claim offices of three divisions of the Southern Express Company will be located in Savannah after August 1, in pursuance of an order promulgated from the general headquarters of the concern several days ago, official notice of which has just been received here. Simultaneously general claim offices will be opened in Richmond and Chattanooga.

Claim departments distinct and separate from the other branches of the company's business, will be an entirely new thing with this big corporation. W. K. Weaver, of Savannah, chief clerk in the office of Division Superintendent C. C. Wolfle, will be in charge of the consolidated claims office here.

Heretofore it has been the practice of the company to have small claims departments in the offices of each division superintendent, and with him as the chief claim agent.

The offices in Savannah will bring about the consolidation of the claims department of the Florida, the Georgia and the Southeastern divisions of the company. The headquarters of the Florida division have been in Jacksonville, while those of the Southeastern division have been in Atlanta. The Georgia division headquarters have always been in Savannah.

The consolidation will bring 42 new employees of the company to this city. About 25 of these will come from Atlanta, while the others will be transferred from Jacksonville.

The establishment of the claim office at Richmond will embrace the offices now at Wilmington, N. C.; Charlotte and Norfolk. The Chattanooga office will embrace all of the Western division of the company.

Court Calls Both of Boy's Parents Unfit

Serious Charges Are Made Against Proprietor of Inlet Hotel at Tybee and His Wife.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—So serious are the charges and counter-charges in the alimony case of Mrs. Annia Jones against W. A. Jones, proprietor of the Inlet Hotel at Tybee, that Judge Walter G. Charlton has stated from the bench in the Superior Court that he doesn't consider either the father or the mother fit to have the custody of their four-year-old son.

Witnesses testified to alleged misconduct of Mrs. Jones during the absences of her husband, who is an engineer on the Tybee Branch of the Central of Georgia Railroad and obliged to spend a portion of his time in the city. Other witnesses testified to gross neglect and misireatment of Mrs. Jones on the part of her husband.

Playground Question Rests With Militia

Savannah Volunteer Guards and Georgia Hussars Must Vote to Give Land for Purpose.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Whether the Park Extension will be converted into a model playground and athletic park has not been finally determined. The Savannah Volunteer Guards and the Georgia Hussars, the two military organizations which have not yet given their consent and approval to the plan, have not taken action in regard to the matter.

No special meeting of the Hussars has been held, owing to the absence from the city of Captain Frank P. McIntyre. The Guards have discussed the matter, but owing to the fact that no definite proposition has been put up to them, they have neither approved nor disapproved the plan.

The extension is under the control of the military and the city jointly, and has been set aside as a drill ground.

Letters left by the girl, who came here recently from Statesboro, indicate that she contemplated the deed for days before the actual attempt was made.

Davant has written to the general office in New Orleans, of the auditing company which recently checked up the books and affairs of the city government in Savannah requesting that a full and complete report on the result of these investigations be rendered at the earliest possible moment. Savannah to Ask Civil Service Law

Police and Fire Departments To Be Put Under Regulations—Efficiency Tests Are Planned.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Alderman George B. Elton's civil service bill will be introduced in the Legislature during the present session.

The special committee appointed by the Mayor to investigate the civil service regulations in other cities has completed its work and recommended the introduction of the bill at the present session. The measure will be immediately advertised for the specified period.

If the bill passes, the Mayor will be authorized to appoint a special committee of three, to be known as the Civil Service Commisson, this commission to have entire charge of the administration of the civil service law in the city. The bill provides that the police and fire departments be placed under civil service, the idea being to divorce these departments from politics.

The bill provides for efficiency tests for the members of the police and fire departments. The selection of appointees will be governed by their moral, mental and physical fitness, and their tenure of office will not depend on the vagaries of politics. They would not be subject to removal unless it were proved that they had been guilty of misconduct or that they were otherwise unfit for their positions.

Whether the bill will pass the Legislature is a question. Its passage will be determined largely by the attitude of the Chatham County Representatives toward it. If a majority of the legislators from this county agree it is a good measure, it probably will go through, but if there is a difference of opinion among the legislators, its defeat is pretty well assured.

LIARS' CONTEST ENDS IN TIE, ANOTHER IS TO BE HELD

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Because three well-known citizens tied for first place in the liars' convention just held in Waycross, it has been decided to hold a second convention to break the tie. The Moose Club is responsible for the inauguration of the novel convention and has decided to present an additional prize to the winner in the next.

City Officials Will Take Turn as Mayor

Savannah Executive Now Plans Regular Daily Period for Conferring With City Employees.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Hereafter city officials will be shown no favoritism when they call on Mayor Richard J. Davant on city business. They will have to take their chances along with everybody else. If one of the humblest citizens happens to get into the Mayor's reception room first the city official will have to wait his turn.

Mayor Davant has given his secretary instructions to this effect, and they will have to stand until a system of office hours which the Mayor has in mind can be put into effect.

It is the Mayor's plan to set aside a certain hour each day for interviews with city officials on city business. This hour will be made known to the people, and callers other than city officials will not be allowed to see the Mayor during that period. Another hour—or two, if necessary—will be set aside for the public.

At present there is no system of this sort at the City Hall, and the callers see the Mayor whenever their time comes. Heretofore city officials have been given precedence over all others irrespective of the time they arrived or how many people are ahead of them.

It has been the case that a city official was admitted to the Mayor the moment he arrived at the office, no matter if a dozen or so people had been waiting for some time for an interview.

JURY BELIEVES BULLARD TO BE SPAIN'S SLAYER

Investigation of Death of Eccentric and Wealthy Farmer Ends in Coroner's Verdict.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—The Clinch County Coroner's Jury investigating the mysterious murder of Mack Spain, an eccentric and wealthy farmer, has returned a verdict accusing Tom Bullard, a white man just entering the twenties.

Bullard is the man who found Spain's body, or rather informed searchers of the place where the body could be found. His part in the search for the body is one thing that has turned suspicion to him, as it is alleged he told members of the searching party Spain's body was on the edge of a pond and could be seen easily. When found the body was in a location that made it impossible for any one to see it from the place Bullard said he was when he first discovered the farmer's remains.

At least one more white man, and officers are inclined to believe a third, may become implicated. Bullard has steadfastly refused to make any statement beyond saying that he knows nothing of how Spain was killed.

Another arrest may be made within a few days. Both men suspected of knowing something of the death and the robbery have been found and it is declared will not be able to get away. Sheriff Lee, of Clinch, has been in Waycross working on a clew that he found near Spain's home and this, it is said, will fix the responsibility for the murder beyond any doubt. No one has been able to ascertain how much was taken from Spain, nor where it was put. Bullard has told officers nothing that will aid them in this respect.

Granite Hen House To Foil Marauders

Flock Reduced to Lone Hen, Moultrie Man Lays Plans for Burglar-Proof Building.

MOULTRIE, July 19.—R. B. Vick has a unique plan for defeating the evil intentions of chicken thieves, his once flourishing flock having fallen into their hands until now he has but one lone hen.

Vick is going to lay the cornerstone of a granite chicken coop in a few days. He hopes in this manner to foil marauders. He has posted at his front gate an invitation to all chicken thieves to be present at the ceremony and inspect the plans.

Every door and window will be double locked and barred and rigged with wires in such way that if one is touched an alarm will be sounded.

Sweetheart False; Indian Girl Ends Life

Ute Maid Leaps From Rock of Legendary Fame When She Finds Love Faithless.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Zanaida, niece of Chief Whispering Pine, of the Ute reservation, and a girl of unusual charm committed suicide by leaping from Suicide Rock, a stone monument of legendary fame which rears its head at the foot of the reservation and has been the means of many grim tragedies by heartbroken maidens of the Ute nation.

Zanaida was courted by many of the young braves. She fell in love with the handsomest man and the day was set for the ceremony. Elk Tooth suddenly deserted her for another girl of the tribe, and, heartbroken, Zanaida sought surcease in death.

Siwash Has First And Only Car Ride

Chief Seattle's Cousin Says He Is Now Ready to Go to Happy Hunting Ground.

SEATTLE, July 19.—Chief Seattle's first co usin, "Port Angeles Bob," age unknown, and who has lived in the outskirts of Port Angeles since the earliest settlers can remember, set foot in Seattle the other day, took his first ride on a street car, saw some moving pictures, paid homage to the statue of Chief Seattle, and declared his resolve to return home and remain contented there until he goes to the happy hunting grounds.

FARM UNION TO UNITE FORCES WITH TOILERS

Federation of Labor and Agricultural Organization to Co-operate Closely if Plans Mature.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Plans that are expected to aid the proposed consolidation of work of the American Federation of Labor and the Farmers' Union were discussed at length in Waycross to-day when a joint committee representing the trade unionists and the Ware County Farmers' Union held a conference.

S. B. Marks, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, and Robert Fechner, secretary, attended, as did President James Cowart, of the Ware County Farmers' Union.

It is not proposed that the National Farmers' Union and the American Federation of Labor shall affiliate and become one big organization. The movement seeks only a unity of purpose—close co-operation for mutual welfare.

Following the conference it was announced that a joint meeting of the State executive committees of the Farmers' Union and the Georgia Federation of Labor would be called. When this is done it is expected that the national organizations will adopt a similar plan for use in the entire country.

E. G. Kastenhuber's Only New Plans Are to Widen Scope of His Laboratory Work.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Finding himself in possession of cash and property worth a quarter of a million dollars has not caused Edwin G. Kastenhuber to change his way of living. If anything, he is working harder now than before. He can be found any morning just at daylight out in his backyard cutting wood. That's his first morning work at home and he refers to it as his "exercise."

Plans for more extensive laboratory work have been made by Mr. Kastenhuber and with the means at hand to carry them out, he expects in a short while to demonstrate some valuable formulae. One of his successes is a mixture of ordinary South Georgia sand with chemicals, forming a hard tile, colored in any way desired. Fancy bricks made by him have withstood all kinds of tests.

Discussing the new turn of events, Mr. Kastenhuber says he does not feel any different since getting $250,000.

"In my new laboratory I will have fitted up special quarters for students and will have a department open to the medical profession. The best time I can have is when I am working, and I am certainly not going to start loafing just because I am well fixed," he said.

Storm Does Damage In Moultrie Section

Naval Stores Operators and Farmers Suffer Loss From Wind, Rain and Hail.

MOULTRIE, July 19.—The terrific wind and electrical storm that swept over this section last night wrought considerable damage over a wide area.

At Omega, just north of here, several houses were unroofed, while three were blown to the ground, the inmates escaping death in a miraculous manner. Pine trees boxed for turpentine snapped in two and the loss to naval stores operators will amount to hundreds of dollars. In the eastern part of the county a torrential rain, accompanied by hail, devastated crops. In Moultrie lightning struck one house. The high wind blew over a church in the suburbs.

Girl Bride Sees Husband Convicted

R. L. English Is Found Guilty of Stealing Wire from Savannah Electric Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—With his pretty wife, not yet out of her teens, sitting in the courtroom, R. L. English has been tried and convicted in the City Court of the larceny of copper wire from the Savannah Electric Company. Mrs. English, hardly more than a girl, clad in a pink summer dress and wearing a big leghorn hat with a wreath of red roses, sat calmly through the trying ordeal. Mrs. English maintains that her husband is innocent of any intentional wrongdoing.

Indian Papoose Is Raised by Soldiers

Full-Blooded Modoc, Back at Old Home, Tells Romantic Story of Early Life.

KLAMATH FALLS, July 19.—Kit Carson, a full-blood Modoc, visited his native land a few days ago for the first time since his babyhood.

The story of the life of Carson is unique. In 1852 a detachment of Government troops was sent to the Klamath country to quiet reported uprisings among the Indians. A large band of Indians had established a village on the shore of the lake. When the Indians caught sight of the soldiers they made a hasty departure.

Kit Carson, who was then about a year old, was left behind by his frightened mother. It was difficult for the soldiers to determine what to do with the child. Finally a soldier named Woods asked that he be permitted to adopt the boy. He gave the little fellow the name of Kit Carson and found him a temporary home with a Spanish family at Yreka.

Police of Waycross For 'Slashed Skirt'

Men, Not Women, To Be Arrested if Latest Style Causes Too Much Excitement.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Wearers of the new style "slashed skirt" have nothing to fear in Waycross. The police will not arrest wearers of the new skirt, but will see that men do not let their curiosity make them obnoxious.

The first time a slashed skirt was seen here the wearer paraded up and down one of the city's main business streets and as long as she was on the street there was an unusual number of men found "strolling"—none of the strollers getting very far from the skirt. It is said that a number of women here have purchased the slashed skirts and after trying them on at home, have sewn up most of the slash or worn the skirt with a petticoat.

Fage, and officer of guard, J. J. West, both of Albany.

AUGUSTA SEEKS TO STRIP POLICE CHIEF OF POWER

War Is Declared Between Chairman of Board and Head of Law Enforcement Force.

AUGUSTA, July 19.—War has been declared between Chairman E. J. Lyon, of the Board of Police Commissioners, and Chief of Police George P. Elliott.

At a recent meeting of the board the statement was made by one of the members that Elliott had ignored and shown a contempt for Chairman Lyon and that during the administration of Chairman T. M. Philpot, Lyon's predecessor, the Chief had shown an utter contempt for him.

At that meeting a resolution was introduced to change the rule of the board which says the Chief shall take his orders from the board only and to make it read that the Chief shall take his orders from the board, and when the board is not in session, from the chairman.

Action was postponed because of the absence of the Chief.

Kept in Solitary Confinement.

The cause of the trouble covers a multitude of alleged deeds of commission and omission on the part of Elliott during the past three years. The straw that broke the camel's back, however, is recent.

The story is that the Chief had a white man arrested and locked up in a cell apart from anyone else, and ordered that no one be allowed to see him. One of the commissioners was interested in the prisoner and he visited the barracks and asked the lieutenant in charge to let him see him. The lieutenant replied that the Chief had issued orders for no one to see him and that the Chief had gone for the day. Efforts to communicate with the Chief were unsuccessful and, although the commissioner is said to have stormed and begged, the lieutenant was obdurate.

The commissioner then went to see Chairman Lyon and the latter returned to the barracks with him. Lyon is said to have ordered the lieutenant to allow the commissioner to see the prisoner in question and the chairman himself was then told that it would be impossible because the Chief's orders could not be disobeyed.

"The Chief is boss around here," one of the officers is reported to have told Chairman Lyon.

Would Take Away Authority.

The chairman and the commissioner went away boiling over with rage. They determined to have a reckoning day with Elliott and now he is to be stripped of his authority. His champion is the Mayor, who says that he is the best Chief Augusta ever had.

Chief Elliott has had a rather stormy career as Chief of Police. He first became head of the police department in January, 1910. He was a major of the Third Battalion, National Guard of Georgia, at the time and he endeavored to rule the police department along similar lines to the Georgia militia. He has had trouble from the start with the public and with his superior officers.

Farmers' Club of North Georgia Meet

Savannah Valley Association Now Comprises Ten Organizations and 700 Members.

AUGUSTA, July 19.—At Aiken, S. C., 2,000 people gathered Wednesday for the annual meeting of the Savannah Valley Associated Farmers' Clubs. It was the ninth annual meeting of the organization and was the most largely attended in its history.

A little over eight years ago four farmers' clubs of the Savannah Valley in the vicinity of Augusta met together and formed the Associated Farmers' Clubs with Dr. Joseph E. Greene, of this city, as president, and Dr. W. E. Mealing, of North Augusta, S. C., secretary and treasurer. These officers have been re-elected at every annual meeting held since that time and the organization has grown from four clubs to ten, and from a membership of 150 farmers to 700. With their families they represent about 4,000 people.

The organization is now composed of the following clubs: Richmond County Agricultural Society, Meriwether Farmers' Club, Schultz Hill Agricultural Club, Beech Island Club, Aiken County Club, Edgefield Agricultural Society, Clark's Hill Agricultural Club, Bennett Spring Agricultural Club, Myers' Hill Agricultural Society and the Ellenton Agricultural Club.

The farmers' clubs, both through the individual clubs and the Associated Clubs have revolutionized farming in this section of Georgia and South Carolina. Their slogan is "intensify and diversify."

PEACH SHIPPING NEARLY ENDED; 900 CARS SENT

MACON, July 19.—Local railroad men report that the peach movement from this part of the State practically is at an end. So far about 900 cars have been shipped, and it is not thought that the remainder of the crop will exceed 100 cars.

This is the smallest production in recent years, but the prices have been exceptionally good, and the cars have averaged $1,500 on the Northern markets. This makes the total income from the sale of peaches in this territory in excess of $1,250,000.

LAURENS CHURCHES HOLD BIG COUNTRY REVIVALS

DUBLIN, July 19.—This is the season of revival meetings in Laurens County, and at the country churches especially the people are meeting at a good portion of them daily, enjoying an all-day service with dinner on the grounds. Senator's Election Costly in Richmond

Expense Averaged 66 Cents Per Ballot, and Ranged From 27 Cents to $5.85.

AUGUSTA, July 19.—The election held last Tuesday for United States Senator was probably the most expensive ever held in Richmond County, for each vote cost the county an average of 66 cents. There was a total of 266 votes cast, and the cost of the election was $177.

Secretary J. M. Haynie, of the County Commission, has compiled some interesting figures on the subject. The cost ran from 27 cents per vote in the First Ward to $5.85 in the 1269th District. In the city the managers were paid $5 each and one of the managers was paid an extra $2 to bring the ballot box to the courthouse. In the country the managers were paid $3 each.

Their advice was that the cloudburst and hail did great damage to crops during its 30 minutes duration.

It is believed that the storm was local to Jeffersonville, no rain being reported at either Sandersville or Drybranch.

Conductor Fails to Pay Alimony; Jailed

Bondsman Surrenders J. C. Brooks, Who Has Figured in Bitter Marital Difficulties.

MACON, July 19.—J. C. Brooks, a conductor for the Central of Georgia Railroad, is in jail for contempt of court on account of his failure to pay his wife, Mrs. Evelyn Brooks, the alimony awarded to her by the court. Brooks was surrendered by his bondsman, W. L. Bazemore.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks' marital troubles have figured prominently in the courts here for several months. Brooks recently secured possession of his 10-month-old baby, which was taken from the mother and awarded to him by the Ordinary on a habeas corpus proceeding.

Mrs. Brooks then brought suit for divorce and alimony. The former is pending, but temporary alimony has already been awarded her in the sum of $60 cash, the payment of her attorneys' fees, $40 per month until the divorce case is heard, and the payment for an operation costing $250.

MACIN, July 19.—The next move on the program of the Law Enforcement League is to put out candidates for Mayor and Aldermen.

It is stated that the movement will crystallize just as soon as the administration party announces its candidates. Bridges Smith will be the candidate for Mayor for the administration, and six of the present Aldermen will be on his ticket.

A. L. Dasher, Alderman, will also have a ticket, and it will probably be announced within the next ten days. His candidacy for Mayor was made six months ago.

Strenuous Fight on To Close Saloons

Fate of Law Enforcement League's Crusade Lies in Injunctions Against Three Places.

MACON, July 19.—The Law Enforcement League has undertaken a campaign to close every saloon and locker club in Macon. The future policy of the league will depend entirely on the ultimate fate of the petitions for injuncions against three saloons which were filed in the Bibb Superior Court this week.

Forty-five of Macon's leading citizens are plaintiffs on the petitions. They have engaged competent counsel and announce that they propose to conduct a strenuous fight.

The proprietors of the three have been ordered to show cause on August 1 why they should not be permanently enjoined from operating.

SCORE FELLED BY HEAT; 105 IS MACON RECORD

Work Suspended as Unsurpassed Torrid Wave Withers City. Too Hot to Bathe.

MACON, July 19.—Although Macon has been the hottest city in the United States for two days, according to the reports of the United States Weather Bureau, with a minimum temperature of 86 and a maximum of 105, only one death has resulted from the heat.

However, nearly a score of prostrations are reported. D. G. Boileau collapsed in front of the courthouse at 1 o'clock, and is now in a serious condition.

A negro convict was seized with a sunstroke late yesterday afternoon, and he died this morning, after great suffering. All of the other convicts were allowed to rest in the shade to-day, and those companies employing street gangs also suspended work.

The government's figures show that yesterday Louisville, Ky., and Thomasville, Ga., were tied with Macon, both having temperatures of 104. To-day, however, Macon went to 105.

The next highest temperature ever recorded in Macon was 102 degrees on July 23, 1907. Only four times before in the history of the local weather station has the temperature ever exceeded 100 degrees here.

Bathers were forced to leave the water at Lakeside Park to-day, as the water was too warm for comfort.

AUGUSTA, GA., July 19.—The Augusta-Aiken Railway and Electric Corporation has been ordered by the Railroad Commission of South Carolina to have separate compartments for whites and negroes on its interstate cars. MILLER DENIES HE IS FIGHTING MEDICAL BILL

Representative, However, Declares Measure Should Be Recommitted and Amended.

MACON MEDICAL—2-7 Macon B D

MACON, July 19.—Representative Wallace Miller is opposed to certain features of the medical practice bill, one of the most important measures now pending in the Legislature, and for that reason he is the recipient of scores of letters and telegrams from physicians in Macon and other parts of the State. His position on the bill has also been somewhat misunderstood. On account of this fact, Mr. Miller desires to be sete right with the doctors and with the public.

"The impression has gone abroad," he states, "that I am opposed to the medical practice bill that the doctors of the State are so much interested in and that I have been actively fighting it on the floor of the House. The facts in the case are these:

"The Rules Committee, of which I am a member, has power to take up bills out of their order on the calendar and set them down as a special order on any named date. This, however, can not be done unless the report of the Rules Committee setting bills down as special orders is adopted by the House.

"A majority of the Rules Committee saw fit to set down the medical practice bill as a special order for Tuesday, July 22. This bill is No. 185 in the calendar, and under the rules of the House would not come up for passage until it was reached in its regular numerical order. I simply protested against this bill being set down ahead of all other bills in the calendar, and the House sustained me in my protest.

"I am in favor of the object sought by the doctors of the State, but think the bill should be recommitted and amended materially."

DUBLIN, July 19.—The new opera house, which is being erected in this city will be ready for use about September 1. The building is a large two-story brick structure, the upper floor being used for theater purposes. It will seat about 1,500 people. The lower floor is divided off into stores.

The management has offered to give a box party to the person suggesting the most appropriate name for the new play house.

HEAT WAVE AT AUGUSTA LASTS MORE THAN MONTH

AUGUSTA, July 19.—Augusta is experiencing one of the most protracted spells of heat in its history. For the last 34 days the thermometer has gone above the 90 mark. Only on two occasions has it gone to 100. Augusta is not any hotter, however, than any other place in this section, and not so hot as many.

Augusta Crime Wave Stirs Citizens' Ire

Residences on Principal Streets Entered and Robbed—Negro Found in Home by Woman.

AUGUSTA, July 19.—There are more robberies in Augusta now than ever before in the history of the city. During the past few days residences on several of the principal streets have been entered. The police seem to be unable to cope with the situation.

The homes of W. J. Townsend, George F. Claussen and Dr. C. W. Crane, on the 1100 block of Greene street, were robbed of money, jewelry and other articles Thursday night. On the same night the home of Julian M. Smith, councilman from the Fifth Ward, at No. 1319 Fifteenth street, was entered by a negro. Mrs. Smith did not sleep that night with her wonted soundness and at 4 a. m. she heard a noise. She saw a negro standing just at the foot of her bed. She screamed and Mr. Smith rushed to her assistance, but the negro made his escape.

The Y. W. C. A. headquarters at Seventh and Reynolds streets was entered the same night by a negro who was frightened off before he was able to steal anything.

Brooks County Strip Would Be in Lowndes

Movement Started to Have Bill Introduced in Legislature to Have Transfer Made.

VALDOSTA, July 19.—A movement has been started here to transfer a strip of territory on the southern border of Brooks County to Lowndes County, and the Representatives in the Legislature will be asked to introduce a bill to that effect.

The territory affected lies along the Willacoochee River, remote from the county seat of Brooks County, and it is claimed that the people living in that section are anxious to be placed in Lowndes County.

The National Highway passes throug hthe stretch of territory, but it is understood that the County Commissioners of Brooks County have refused to maintain the highway or do any work whatever on it.

Business men in this city recently subscribed nearly $1,000 to be expended on the highway through the strip mentioned. Brooks County refused to do anything whatever toward building and maintaining the road.

MACON TO BE WITHOUT SALVATION ARMY POST

MACON, July 19.—After to-morrow night Macon will be without a Salvation Army post for the first time in twelve years. Ensign Coleman has been in Macon for six years.

TRAVELING WATER WAGON IS PROVIDED FOR HORSES

BOSTON, July 19.—A traveling water cart from which horses may be refreshed has been placed in commission in Boston's streets by the S. P. C. A.

For years the society has been furnishing water from hydrant stations, but recently there have been many requests for a watering place in sections of the city where it would be impractical to open hydrants. Hence the advent of the water cart.

PROGRESS MADE ON AUGUSTA'S LEVEE BUILDING

Commissioner of Public Works to Confer With United States Engineer in Savannah.

AUGUSTA, July 19.—Rapid progress is being made on levee contracts, according to Nisbet Wingfield, Commissioner of Public Works.

Mr. Wingfield will go to Savannah within a short time to see Colonel Kingman, of the United States Corps of Engineers, in charge of the Savannah River, with reference to letting the contract for rip-rapping the banks up to the 25-foot contour from Fifth street to East Boundary.

It is estimated that $120,000 will be required to complete this work, $60,000 of which has been appropriated by the Federal Government and a similar amount by the city.

Bryan & Co. will soon complete the rip-rapping of the banks from Hawks Gully to Fifth street, and have completed all of this work, with the exception of that between Fifth and Sixth streets. This contract was let about two years ago, and during the first year little work was done, because the river was high the greater part of the time. Bryan & Co. were awarded it after a number of bids had been examined. The successful bidders' figures were $250,000.

Mr. Wingfield says that the Berry-Fortune Construction Company will complete the Hawks Gully gates by October 1, and that soon afterward a number of the other contracts will be finished.

A. J. Twiggs & Sons will probably complete the levee down to Hawks Gully by January 1, and by that time the gates at the King and Sibley mill tail races will have been completed.

Augusta will be protected from high water by some time in 1914, although it can not be stated definitely just what time it will be. Work has begun on building the pier for the additional span in the North Augusta bridge, the span itself being built in Roanoke, Va., by a large bridge concern. All of the obstacles in the way of the levee from Thirteenth street to Hawks Gully have been removed and splendid progress is being made all along the line.

The contracts already awarded amount to $600,000.

DEXTER BANKS TO MERGE WITH $25,000 CAPITAL

DUBLIN, July 19.—Two banks of Laurens County, located at Dexter, a few miles from Dublin, will consolidate as soon as the legal preliminaries can be arranged. The Dexter Banking Company and the Farmers' State Bank will merge under the name of the Dexter Banking Company, with a paid-in capital of $25,000. The president will probably be R. C. Hogan while the cashier in all probability will be H. F. Maund.

TEMPERATURE AT DUBLIN GOES BEYOND 100 MARK

DUBLIN, July 19.—The hot weather of the week past has been felt keenly by the people of this city. Although there have been no prostrations from the heat, the Government station located here gave out the record for Thursday as 101, Friday being equally as hot. Unless rain comes soon the crops will suffer a great deal from the extreme heat.

MORE WHEAT NOW GROWN IN DUBLIN TERRITORY

DUBLIN, July 19.—The flour mill at Dublin, which is the only one in this section, is doing an unusually large amount of grinding this year, wheat being shipped to it from all this section. There is considerably more wheat being grown in this section than formerly.

Cracked with Least Pressure, Causing Discharge. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In One Week Entirely Cured.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased one Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my baby of an ulcerated sore behind her ear and now we think we cannot keep house without them." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Poss, Nov. 5, 1912.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Human System Poisons Itself

OtherwiseMost of UsWould Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

3 Times a Day—

One-half hour before each meal. Then you can eat three nourishing meals each day without discomfort. Your appetite will respond to the improved condition of your digestive system. Your health will be assured.

Nuxcara is a guaranteed remedy for the treatment of the membranes of the stomach and intestines. It is not a digestive agent, but a certain and positive cure for indigestion and dyspepsia.

Prominent Citizen Indorses NUXCARA

Mr. J. W. Brooks, traveling representative of The Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, says: "For two years I have carried in my grip a bottle of Nuxcara, and would not think of going out on the road without it. I consider it the most wonderful discovery in medicine. The number of people who suffer with indigestion and dyspepsia, the terrible distress they suffer, no one knows but those who have had experience with it. When one remedy after another fails, when digestive agents seem to aggravate it. In the face of all this, Nuxcara cures in every case—truly it is a wonderful remedy."

Nuxcara promotes the secretion of natural digestive fluids, restores and reduces the inflamed membranes. Proper assimilation is re-established. Nutrition is improved. Hence, Nuxcara increases vitality.

COLUMBUS MILL SCHOOL HELD AS MODEL BY U. S.

How Georgia City Is Caring for Cotton Factory Children Told in Government Pamphlet.

How Columbus is caring for the education of the boys and girls of its cotton mills is the story embodied in a pamphlet published by the United States Department of Education, copies of which were circulated in Atlanta yesterday.

How the boys and girls of the mills themselves work against going to school, rendering doubly hard the problem before the public, is a pitiful note of the story.

They call their school in Columbus the "dinner toters' school," because even during their school days they must work, taking hot lunches to their parents, brothers, sisters, and others who work in the mills.

Must Take Parents' Lunch.

The pamphlet tells of this custom, revealing something of the life of the cotton mill child. It says:

"The long intermission in the middle of the day is necessary that the children may take the lunches to the mills. Many of the mills are some distance from the school—some more than a mile away. Most of the children, therefore, walk more than two miles during the noon hour. Besides, they are compelled to wait 20 or 30 minutes for the operatives to eat their dinners before taking the baskets back.

"Some children earn several dollars each week by carrying such baskets to mill operatives. The price usually paid for taking lunch to one person for a week is 25 cents, and children often take lunches to several persons."

The booklet was prepared by Roland B. Daniel, and was published by the Department of Education as the description of an admirable system. It deals not only with the mill children, but with the boys and girls who are more fortunate, showing how the Columbus scheme of education is variable, being adapted to meet the demands that come with a mixed population so as to care alike for the two classes. P. P. Claxton, Federal Commissioner of Education, says in the foreword to the book:

"Columbus was one of the first of this country's cities to work out certain phases of this problem of adaptation."

The Columbus schools effect industrial training for all children, but a training varied according to the class from which the children come.

Call of Mills Strong.

The writer, Mr. Hill, laments the fact that "the call of the mills is strong."

"While the prescribed course for the mill children contemplates seven years, few continue after the fifth or sixth year," he wrote. "Not more than 1 per cent finish this school and pursue their studies further."

In all lines of work, academic and industrial, the aim of the school for mill operatives is to better living conditions a little among the people for whom it was organized. That is the only hope. In the beginning the advocates of this type of school thought that many of the mill children might be induced to continue in school and do more advanced work, especially along vocational lines. In this respect the school has been a disappointment to some.

"We are seldom able to induce pupils to finish even the limited course offered in this school," writes Mr. Daniel. "Our best hope is that we may better living conditions a little."

Toward the end, the school has been made a sort of social center. The school is in session the entire year around, and pupils are promoted quarterly, that the children will not drift away, as it is feared they would surely do in the case of a three months' vacation. Teachers do social work, visiting the sick, distributing certain charity, obtaining means of operation for the physically defective, arranging for social evenings, fostering organizations among the older people, and dealing in like activities.

Summing up the work of the school, the writer says:

"While this school has done good work and its benefits have been felt, we are sure the weakest point in it is not being able to hold the children long enough to receive its full benefits. An enforced attendance law would aid very materially in this respect."

Industrial Work Taught.

Along with "the three R's," the mill children are trained in industrial branches, being taught woodworking and gardening. The girls are given work in basket-making, sewing, cooking, poultry-raising and gardening.

In its scheme of adaptation, the city has an altogether different school for other children. The regular grade work is done, and in the traditional high school a year and a half of industrial work, manual training for the boys and domestic science for the girls, is given.

Another variation comes when the curriculum of the negro schools are worked out. There is industrial education for negroes in the public school, but different from that supplied the white children. The Columbus method is altogether one of adaptation.

The difference lies in the fact that the negroes receive more of the training, going into more branches of manual labor, and taking it throughout the school course. Almost every branch of work with the hands is offered them. Of this work the booklet says:

"Pupils who remain in the schools long enough to complete the course receive in compensation for their labor upon leaving school about twice what they would receive for unskilled labor such as they would be able to render without such training. It is often the case that one of these boys is able to earn $2 a day at the age of 17 when his father, without such preparation, receives $1.25 for unskilled labor.

High School in Scheme.

The book, being altogether a treatise on industrial education in Columbus, is given over largely to a description of the courses in the Columbus Industrial High School, the pride of the city's scheme of education. The school, besides its academic work, has vocational courses, including home economics, dressmaking and millinery, mechanic arts, textile arts, and a business course. This industrial high school is separate and distinct from the conventional academic high school. It is merely another phase of the Columbus scheme of adaptation of education to varied needs and to varied classes.

Pony Contestants in Home Stretch

Fine Progress Made in Last Days

Winners of Race Will Be Announced in Few Days After Battle Closes July 31.

Great progress has been made by the contestants who are striving for The Georgian and American ponies, as the standings published to-day demonstrate. Nearly all the contestants who are crowding toward the front have more than 100,000 votes, but in the ten days remaining these figures, in all probability, will be doubled and trebled.

This is in spite of the fact that the coupons have been discontinued. Gains from now on will represent simply subscriptions obtained. The contestants agree unanimously that this is perfectly fair. A coupon-clipping contest is no contest at all, except as it represents the ability to build up a system of collecting the slips from friends in the neighborhood. A subscription-getting contest, on the other hand, tests the mettle of every contestant to the full, and the best will win.

Will Announce Winners Soon.

Besides, by discontinuing the coupons, it will be possible to announce the winners in the contest probably August 3, three days after the contest closes, on the night of July 31.

If coupons still were being voted, it would take two weeks or more for all of them to come in, and knowledge of the result would be delayed that long.

The bonus offer, awarding 20,000, 12,500 and 6,000 votes for clubs of $35, $25 and $15, respectively, closed Saturday night, and with a large number of clubs turned in. It was a laggard contestant, indeed, who did not appear yesterday with at least a $35 club, and some of the most active had two and three clubs.

Even Chance in Country.

Contestants in the country, it is supposed, did as well, but subscriptions arriving in Monday's mails will be credited on the club offer for these out-of-town boys and girls. This is to give them an even chance with their city cousins.

Probably another small bonus will be offered for the closing weeks of the contest. It will be nothing like those which have been given so far—not nearly so attractive, but still worth winning.

Within a few days the thirteen additional ponies needed to make up the complete lot of twenty-two will be on hand. They are being collected now from the leading breeders of this sort of fancy stock and will be brought to Atlanta before the contest closes.

Maurice Means, of Meansville, is shown at the top, while below is Miss Helen Brantley, of No. 31 E. Alexander Street. Both are way up in the race for the prize Shetlands.

Squaws Lay Ties As Bucks Play Poker

Desert Section Hand Boss Returns to Find Piute Women Doing Construction Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Piute Indians as substitutes for Mexican section hands were tried out in the Nevada desert last week. The Mexicans were deemed unsatisfactory because they would drop their tools and rest the instant the "boss" got far enough away so that he could not hit them with a shovel handle.

With the Indians on the job, however, the work went along just the same, boss or no boss.

Nevertheless the Mexicans are again on the pay roll and the Indians are taking their traditional ease.

After glowingly watching five days of splendid work by his Piute bucks the section boss left them the other day. Returning 24 hours later he found the suffragette members of the Piute tribe doing the work on the railroad, while the bucks were gathered in a poker game at one side of the track.

Tight Shoes Land Thief Behind Bars

Burglar in Jewelry Store Kicks Heels to Relieve Pressure and Alarms Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Frank Davies, who at times also gives his name as John Simpson and Joe Allen, became irritated last night while scooping unset diamonds in his hat in a dark room because the toes of his new shoes were too narrow.

Intending to relieve the squeeze, he kicked toward the floor with his heel, but miscalculated and drove his foot through a glass show case. A policeman in a saloon on the floor below heard the noise and arrested Davies, who says he is an ex-convict and that he arrived here from Los Angeles at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The diamonds were claimed to-day by the jewelers from whom they were taken.

Must Stay Maids to Get Mother's Estate

Daughters of Ohio Woman Are Beneficiaries Under Will Which Prohibits Their Marriage.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, July 19. One of the most remarkable wills ever admitted to probate in this county was made by Jane Lake, late of Richwood, who left considerable property to her three daughters, Linie, Nora and Ida.

The provisions are that the estate shall be equally divided among the three daughters, on the condition that none of them will marry. If one of them marries, her share of the estate goes to the two remaining single. If all three should marry, the entire estate is to go to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Moving Picture Gives Mother Clew to Girl

Missing Daughter Is Recognized on Screen and Police Are Following Up Trace.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The "movies" may be instrumental in restoring Olga Ellis, 5, to the mother from whom she was taken in Revere, Mass., and brought to California.

For six months the police have sought John Ellis, of Revere, Mass., who is said to have left that city with his daughter.

A school-teacher of Berkeley, Cal., became interested in the case and gave a picture of the child and the mother's address to a moving picture agency.

Mrs. Myrtle Palmer, housekeeper in a hotel here, saw the mother's appeal at a moving picture theater recently and recognized the little girl as one who had stayed at the hotel with her father for several weeks. He had registered, she said, as D. Delisle, and had gone to Eureka, Cal.

Mrs. Palmer notified the police and search for the man and child has been instituted in Eureka.

Women Convict Her For Slapping Child

First Feminine Jury in Sonoma County, California, Returns Verdict of Guilty of Assault.

PETALUMA, COLO., July 19.—A jury of twelve women convicted a woman, Mrs. W. S. Waldorf, upon a charge of battery here to-day. This is the first jury of women that ever tried a case in Sonoma County. Mrs. Waldorf was accused of having slapped a neighbor's children. The jury was out less than an hour.

HORSE FALLS IN FISSURE IN SINKING KANSAS FARM

HOISINGTON, KANS., July 19.—Fissures varying from a few inches to a foot and a half in width and extending several feet into the ground have opened up in L. E. Baker's alfalfa field near this city and are causing a great deal of speculation.

There have been no indications of an earthquake of any sort, but the ground seems to be sinking away. The fissures were discovered when Baker missed one of his horses and found it imprisoned in a fissure.

ONLY AMERICAN KING YEARNS TO QUIT HIS THRONE

All of Former Broker's Thirty Wives Want English Gowns. Jealousy Spreads.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King, practically has made up his mind to renounce his throne. He is King of the Island of Arorae, one of the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands. Until 1909 he was a New York curb broker. The insistence of his many wives for English gowns and his loneliness have led to the determination to give up his kingly honors. He tells of his intentions in a letter just received by a friend in this city.

The career of Everett has been unusual. In 1909, when he was in business in this city, he was thought to be well to do. He met reverses, however, in Wall Street, and in the latter part of 1909 disappeared, without leaving a word of farewell. Nothing was heard from him until in 1911, in a remarkable letter, he told of being made the King of Arorae, in the South Sea Islands. He had landed, he said, on one of the small islands, and had gone from there to other islands of the Gilbert group. Finally he reached Arorae. It was a phonograph which he had in his possession that eventually won for him his throne. The King at that time of the island took a great fancy to the phonograph.

Phonograph Wins Kingdom.

By the hour Everett, according to his own account, entertained the monarch, constantly growing in his graces. Finally the old King adopted Everett, and when he died Everett succeeded to the throne. According to the custom of the island, Everett took a good many wives.

Everett took a very lively interest in the affairs of the island. He increased its business with traders. The principal product of the island is copra, or dried cocoanut meat. The letter, in part, reads:

"At the present time the King's job is about the last thing to be desired, and do not be surprised if I walk in on you some day in the near future. I am about tired of the job.

"For some time past conditions here have steadily become worse. It started when my wives, of whom there are about 30, insisted on wearing English dresses. A trader who stopped here presented one of the natives with three English gowns in exchange for some copra. The native presented them to the King, and I in turn gave them to three of my wives. The natives have never worn any clothes to speak of. Imagine my surprise, then, when the three dresses became the center of a regular war among my wives.

"The three victorious wives managed to get them on somehow, and that settled it. Every one of them set up a kick for a dress, and they worried the life out of me. I was forced to get the gowns. The first trader that stopped at the island from Australia was commissioned to bring them back on the next trip, and in due course of time they arrived.

Jealousy Over English Gowns.

"The dresses were of all colors and sizes. Most of the people here are about the same stature, few being over four feet six or seven. Some of the dresses were too small, others too large, but they created a sensation. Dressed in those creations, with bare brown feet stepping proudly, my wives paraded up and down the island, causing every woman in the kingdom, young and old, to grow jealous.

"So far half of the female population have been given the gowns and the other half are waiting eagerly. The worst part of it all is that the men are as enthusiastic over this new style of dress as the women, and my objections have not added to my popularity whatever. I am daily expecting the men to demand suits of flannel and silk shirts.

Affairs on a Business Basis.

"I have not done so badly here financially. I put the business of the island on a business basis soon after becoming King, and things have flourished.

"I don't know how the people here will take my departure. They may even try to prevent it, and I have been considering the best method to leave. I could probably get aboard one of the trading ships and get to Australia, after which it would be easy, of course, to get back to the United States."

WASHINGTON, D. C.

County of Warner

Should Be Created

Manchester, the Logical County Seat—County Will Have 10,000 Population; $1,750,000 Taxable Values; Area Over 222 Square Miles.

The people situated in the southeastern portion of Meriwether, northern portion of Talbot and northeastern portion of Harris Counties will petition the 1913 session of the Legislature to create a new county to be named Warner, in honor of the late Chief Justice Hiram Warner, the area of which will be 222 square miles, while the area of the old counties after the proposed county of Warner is created will not be materially reduced, but will leave them among the larger counties of Middle Georgia, and Meriwether will then contain 421 square miles; Harris, 465 square miles, and Talbot, 329 square miles. The territory to compose Warner County is inaccessible to either of the present county sites by railroads and in transacting legal business the citizens are required to go this distance by private conveyance over mountainous roads, which in rainy seasons are almost impassable; while a very large portion of the population has no means of conveyance and are forced to a great expense in reaching the present county sites.

Taxable Values of New County.

The proposed county of Warner will have taxable values of one and three-quarter million dollars. This will leave Meriwether taxable values of about twice the amount of Warner County; while Harris and Talbot, from which counties small values will be taken, will not be materially reduced, but have considerably more wealth than Warner and no incorporated town is to be taken from either Talbot or Harris and but a few miles of railroad.

The population of Warner County will be upward of 10,500, of which more than 2,000 live in Manchester, the proposed county seat. At least 5,000 of those living within the country territory closely adjoining Manchester have to travel 14 to 20 miles to their present respective county sites. Warner County would exceed in population 32 counties in the State.

Roads and Bridges.

Warner County as proposed will take from the three affected counties its proportion of roads and bridges as compared to its area and wealth, while the roads and bridges in this territory have received but little attention, as the taxes collected by the old counties have been spent on other roads and bridges nearer the present county sites, and other sections of the counties, since this territory occupies the "remote corners," consequently has had little influence in securing road improvements.

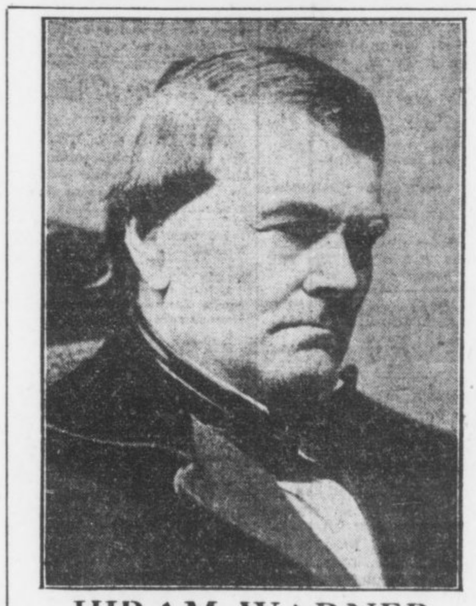
Warner County, as proposed will include Gill, Chalybeate, First, Raleigh, Bullochville and parts of the Third, Harris and lower Ninth Districts of Meriwether County; portions of Valley Plains District of Harris County and Flint Hill and parts of Pleasant Hill and Valley districts of Talbot County.

The distance from Manchester, the proposed county site of Warner County, to Greenville, the county site of Meriwether, over public roads is 18 miles; to Hamilton, the county site of Harris, 20 miles, and to Talbotton, the county site of Talbot, 20 miles. No citizen living in the proposed county would be required to travel farther than 12 miles to reach Manchester, the proposed county site.

Schedule of Trains.

No portion of Warner County at present is directly connected by rail with its respective county site. Those wishing to attend court by rail from Manchester and its vicinity must leave Manchester at 4 o'clock a. m., change at Durand and arrive in Greenville at 8 o'clock a. m., requiring a layover at Durand of about three hours. Returning, leave Greenville at 6 o'clock p. m., arriving at Manchester at 11:40 p. m., necessitating a layover at Durand of five hours, or about 20 hours to go a distance of 20 miles and return. This is the most convenient schedule.

The present counties are well provided with modern jails and courthouses.



HIRAM WARNER

Brief Sketch of Late Chief Justice

HIRAM WARNER

Hiram Warner, for whom Warner County is to be named, was born at Williamsburg, Hampshire County, Mass., on October 29th, 1802. He sailed for Savannah when 19 years of age, but was shipwrecked off Cape Hatteras, and reached the Georgia port weeks later. He settled first at Sparta as a teacher. He studied law and was admitted to the bar at Knoxville, Crawford County, in 1824. He married there and had one child, a daughter, the mother of Associate Justice Hiram Warner Hill of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

He was a member of the Legislature 1828-31. He was elected judge of the Coweta Circuit of the Superior Court of Georgia in 1833. At that time there was no Supreme Court, and the Superior Court judges gathered in annual convention to discuss their decisions and establish uniformity of practice.

In 1845 the Supreme Court of Georgia was organized and with Joseph Henry Lumpkin and Eugenius A. Nesbit was elected to that high branch of the judiciary. He defeated Benjamin H. Hill for Congress in 1855; was renominated, but declined re-election. Nearly 60 years old when the war came, he was at home caring for his family, his only son-in-law being at the front. He was held by Wilson's raiders and actually hanged and left for dead because he did not tell where suspected gold was hidden.

Later he was appointed to the judgeship of Coweta Circuit by Governor Jenkins. He was named Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia in 1867 to succeed Chief Justice Lumpkin, deceased.

His decisions from the bench and his printed decisions upon the Supreme Court bench are classics in Georgia's judicial history and his decisions are leading ones in ruling on similar cases today.

Judge Warner was reared a Presbyterian. He never joined a religious denomination. He lived and died, however, a believer in the Bible, the truths of Christianity and the creed of that denomination to which his family belonged. It was his habit to keep upon the table in his bedroom to the last day of his life two books; one was Blackstone, and the other was the Bible. This Bible his mother gave him when he left home for his long journey. To this same Bible he turned for comfort and support when, 58 years afterward, an old and broken man, he entered the valley of the shadow.

It is this man whose memory is sought to be revered in the creation of the county which is to bear his name—Warner.

Little Territory From Three of the State's Largest Counties Will Give County—New County Has Railroads—Sentiment Favors It.

No county has ever been created in which the sentiment was stronger for a new county than Warner. The movement has been spontaneous in all sections and our petitions contain more than 95 per cent of the white electors in Warner County. The people realize the great inconvenience with which they are now burdened and have joined unanimously in the movement.

Situation of Warner.

The proposed county of Warner will include portions of Pine and Oak mountains. In recent years most of this section was considered of little value on account of its inaccessibility and the rough character of the country. Little money has been spent by the counties in developing this territory, and the roads, most of them crossing the mountains and ridges, are bad, and have received but little attention.

In 1906 the A., B. & A. railroad was built, traversing this section with its Birmingham and Atlanta lines merging at Manchester; since which time Manchester has grown to be a town of about 2,000 people, as a result of which the territory adjoining Manchester has developed very rapidly; approximately $2,000,000 having been spent in improvements and business naturally drifted in this direction. The people residing in this territory buy all their supplies and sell their produce at Manchester, Bullochville, Raleigh, Chalybeate and Shiloh. Nothing calls them out of the proposed county except court duty, and they are deprived of the privilege accorded the majority of our people in the state of transacting their business and attending court in the same day.

Demand of Modern Times.

In this day of modern methods, when man's greatest asset is his time, when all business has become greatly intensified and concentration and conservation are occupying the attention of all progressive, thinking people, all men must realize that to make a success out of any public institution its interest must be well guarded. In this connection, large counties can not receive their just consideration. It is out of the question for the county commissioners in the three counties affected to give the counties' business the attention which it deserves. The area is too large, the business too vast, the demands too great and the distance too far for the county authorities to attend to the business properly.

General Statements of Interest

Manchester, the proposed county site, contains one large cotton mill, railroad shops and division offices of the A., B. & A. R. R., one bank, 33 brick store buildings, all of which are occupied by various lines of general merchandise; two moving picture theaters, one newspaper and printing office, three hotels, five churches, modern school system, municipal light plant, two livery and sale stables, two large builders' supply houses, fireproof warehouse and gin.

Bullochville has several large supply houses, one bank, guano factory, also the Tuscawilla, a magnificent three-story brick hotel with modern equipment throughout, the best equipped hotel in the State in a town many times its size. Near Bullochville is located the famous Warm Springs resort, which is too well known to be described.

Just above Bullochville is the thriving town of Raleigh, which controls all business within its territory.

South of Bullochville on the Southern Railroad is Shiloh, now located in Harris County, one of the best farming supply towns in the State.

East of Manchester on the A., B. & A. is located Chalybeate Springs, a resort famous since ante-bellum days. The water from these springs has been known throughout the State since Georgia's early history.

Just east of Chalybeate is the Tatum Iron Company's mines, which are now being successfully developed.

All facts stated herein are not exaggerated, but can be substantiated with unlimited amount of evidence.

GIRL PLAYS MAN AND WINS LOVE OF HATED RIVAL

Unique Vengeance Is Planned by Young Woman Whose Sweetheart Proved Faithless.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Jilted by her lover, Bessie McIntyre, of North Wheeling, a pretty 18-year-old girl, secured an odd but effective revenge on her rival, who "stole" her sweetheart and on the faithless lover at the same time.

June 25 Harry Pendleton, a well-known young business man of this city, informed Miss McIntyre that he could not see her again(as he had become engaged to another girl. By a dint of inquiry the jilted girl ascertained that the girl who had stolen her lover's affections was Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, Ohio, just across the river from this city. Securing permission from her parents, Miss McIntyre had her hair cut off, and donning one of her brother's suits, she visited Bridgeport and met Miss Allen.

It was a case of love at first sight—on the part of the Bridgeport girl. Miss McIntyre masquerading as "Lawrence Dessing," was a devoted lover, and every night found "Lawrence Dessing" at the home of Miss Aiken.

Last Sunday night while "Dessing" and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to call on her again. She then confessed her love to her companion, the pseudo "Dessing." Miss McIntyre, dressed in a gown of the latest mode last night met Miss Aiken in this city. Before Miss Aiken could speak the North Wheeling girl told her how she had revenged herself.

In a moment the girls were fighting and were separated by the police.

Willing To Marry But Not to Apologize

Man Sued for Breach of Promise Says Hill Wed But Refuses to Beg Forgiveness.

ATCHISON, KANS., July 19.—Mary Falk and William Burke were engaged to be married. The date had been set, the guests had assembled, and everything was in readiness, but Burke did not appear. Chagrined and heartbroken, Miss Falk engaged an attorney and sued Burke for $25,000 as balm for her wounded feelings.

"It was all a mistake," said Burke. "I wanted and still want to marry Miss Falk. I was under the impression that under the rules of the Catholic Church the ceremony had to be performed by the pastor of the bride's church. I couldn't find him in time to perform the ceremony and naturally supposed the wedding was off for the time being."

Miss Falk accepted the explanation, but she insisted that Burke must apologize for not appearing for the wedding. Burke, however, insisted that she must apologize for suing him.

Concussion of Brain Kills a Gigantic Frog

Oscar Siler went to Mich.
Thought he'd rest and catch some fish,
Pitched his tent on Fountain Lake—
Listen to this nature fake:

FOUNTAIN, MICH., July 19.—Oscar Siler, of Chicago, who has been fishing on the lake near here, claims to have killed the record frog. Said frog is said to weigh 6 pounds and to be 15 inches long. It will be sent to Chicago. The frog died of concussion of the brain. Thus—

"Kerplunk," croaked the prehistoric bullfrog.
"You're drunk," piped the monarch of the bog.
Whereupon Siler (who was sober) bounced a rock off the bullfrog's bean.

Aged Oil Queen, Wife Of Youth, Ruled Sane

Young Spendthrift Husband Is Welcome to Fortune, She Says, on Leaving Asylum.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 19.—The courts and her children can not separate Mrs. Cynthia C. Sparks, known as West Virginia's "oil queen," and her young husband, Fred Sparks, and she is again free, after having been incarcerated in the West Virginia Hospital for Insane for ten days.

Further, the superintendent and the members of the State Board of Control have placed beyond question her sanity after a close observation, while she was under their supervision.

Mrs. Sparks is going to join her 26-year-old husband, who, it is alleged by the woman's children by her first husband, was rapidly dissipating her fortune of $2,000,000 by his extravagance and riotious living.

The old woman declared to-day that her young husband was welcome to the half of her fortune which she retained after having signed over the half to him.

Miner Returns Rich To Find Wife Dead

Comes Back Home to Make Restitution for Having Deserted Her 20 Years Ago.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Wealthy and anxious to take back his wife, whom he deserted twenty years ago, Josiah Bronson, a modern Enoch Arden, found the old home in ruins and the wife dead. From the old-timers who had known him in the early days he learned that his wife, believing him dead, had married his twin brother.

Two children, he learned, were born of the marriage, and upon the death of the mother were sent to relatives in West Virginia.

Bronson declared he would care for the children. "I shall give them the best education money can buy," he said. "I deserted their mother when she was just a young woman, and now I want to atone for the cowardly act."

WRITERS MAKE BEST DIPLOMATS DECLARES PAGE

New Ambassador to Italy, Author of Many Stories, Leaves Himself Out of Discussion.

YORK HARBOR, ME., July 19.—Are authors better qualified to fill diplomatic posts than others? The appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy brings this subject to the fore, coupled with the appointments made by President Wilson.

The greatest diplomats America boasts were men of letters. Benjamin Franklin, John Hay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, William Dean Howell furnish a distinguished list.

Mr. Page, who is 60, is modesty personified. He has been reporter, lawyer, writer, and has succeeded in all.

Mr. Page asked if he could explain as an author what special qualifications a man of letters possesses to perform the duties of Ambassador, consented to speak, leaving his own case out of the discussion. Said he:

"A man of letters is better fitted to do anything better than anyone else. His work has broadened his horizon; if it hadn't we might as well do away with letters.

Must Know Problems.

"The author must necessarily be conversant with the economic and governmental problems of the day.

"I think the greatest good authors in general have alone is to interpret the spirit of the section about which they write. There can be no doubt there is a better feeling now between the North and the South than there was before the Spanish-American war. This, I believe, is because of writers.

"Every part of the world is being more properly set before another part by the authors.

"The President has had a thorough training. Besides the college education, he has had associations with the North and the South, and he is conversant with the economic and governmental problems. He is a man of strong character and has been deservedly selected by the people to hold their most important office.

"I met Walter Page prior to his departure for his London post and gave him a dinner. His whole heart was set upon the desire to 'make good.'"

Qualifications of Diplomat.

"What is your idea of the qualifications a good diplomat possesses?" he was asked.

"Devotion to his duty is perhaps the first and most important," he replied. "Then comes devotion to your country, application to your duty and a desire to bring your country and the country to which you have been sent closer together.

"Of course, since the cable came into use foreign posts are brought closer to the State Department at Washington, and it must be a great comfort to an Ambassador to feel that at any time he may seek aid from Washington.

"I believe Charles Francis Adams was the last foreign ambassador to be thrown upon his own resources, and that was because the cable was cut.

"Rome is indeed a charming post. I believe it is the most romantic city in the world. I am sure I shall like it."

BRYAN DODGES PAPER'S QUESTIONS

wrong. It is using the office for making money."

Senator Bristow said action would be had on his resolution. He said, too, that there would be quite a little discussion on the subject. It probably will be referred to a committee, Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, says it probably would be "handled in a routine way."

Mr. Bacon says he thought the resolution was introduced to bring about a discussion of the course of Mr. Bryan, and that remedial legislation was not demanded.

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend, of Michigan, holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the Government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Among those who talked were the following:

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts—A Cabinet member can live on $12,000 a year if he does not have large family expenses, and he can live comfortably and respectably.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania—Samuel J. Randall, one of the greatest of Democrats, served this country for a whole generation, living on a salary of $5,000 a year. I have always disapproved of the custom that has grown up resulting in the very considerable neglect of official duties on the part of public men in order that they may go on lecture circuits.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina—While Mr. Bryan's speaking tours will serve a good purpos in that he always preached true Democracy and patriotism and Christian living, he can never again appear as a knight errant of Democracy.

Representative Willis, of Ohio—I am opposed to a Government official capitalizing his job. The Secretaryship of State is a man's job. Mr. Bryan should stay here and attend to the work of his office. He has enough on his hands with the present critical situation in Mexico, the unsettled questions with Japan and the matter of the Panama Canal tolls. We members of Congress have to stick to our tasks.

Representative Miller, of Minnesota—Mr. Bryan is giving this country a remarkable exhibition in the difference between his preachings during the past seventeen years and his present practices.

Representative Kahn, of California—There are many able men in the employ of the Government who are prevented by law and the hours of service from increasing their incomes through additional employment.

Representative Payne, of New York—I have been able to live on my salary as a member of the House. I can not see why the Secretary of State is unable to live on his salary.

Towne, Bryan's Friend, Calls Step Unfortunate.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Secretary Bryan's determination to supplement his official salary of $12,000 by going on a six weeks' lecture tour has awakened severe criticism from the men who supported him when he first loomed on the political horizon.

Charles A. Towne, who was one of the speakers at the famous "Dollar Dinner" in April, 1899, organized to emphasize Bryan's Jeffersonian simplicity of tastes, discussed Mr. Bryan's new move reluctantly, as they are still close friends.

"I consider the Secretary's plan to continue his lecture tours while occupying the chief place in the President's Cabinet most unfortunate," said Mr .Towne. "These are days when great national issues must be decided, and when the Secretary of State is required to give every bit of time and energy in behalf of the nation. It is a time when men intrusted with the affairs of the Government must have their minds occupied with nothing else except the questions of state.

Explanation Only Makes It Worse, Says World.

(From The N. Y. World, July 16.)

It is with the most profound regret that we have to note the position into which the Secretary of State has drawn himself and the explanation now given which only makes it worse.

Whether Mr. Bryan can afford to take a prolonged vacation at just this critical time for the Administration and his own high office may be a question, but a minor one. Whether, under the frankly admitted circumstances of personal fortune, he can only afford a money-making vacation, must be something less than a question with the great masses of the people whose life he has lived in sympathy.

The real question is whether the Government for such a position as his may not justly claim an undivided service, and whether any other view is compatible with a worthy ambition. We have had men in high office who have sacrificed personal fortune to render such undivided service and could afford it. We have had many more men there who have done this, and could not afford it.

We can not think of the President of the United States doing otherwise. We should not be able to think of any of his Cabinet doing otherwise.

Action Most Bizarre, Says Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, July 19.—Regarding Secretary Bryan's lecture tour, The Pall Mall Gazette to-night says:

"It is a singular paradox in a country where there is so much money in politics as in the United States that the chief member of the President's cabinet should find his official salary inadequate to support his existence.

"We can quite understand why $12,000 a year is not enough for the Secretary of State, considering the American scale of life, but one would have expected a man of Bryan's moral courage to call upon his country for a living wage, to which he is entitled, rather than to propose going on the stump as a lecturer, in the roles of a minister and a professional entertainer.

"They make a most bizarre combination to all British ways of thinking, and we shall be surprised if even American opinion reconciles itself to their incongruity."

MOTHER OF TEN SUES; WEDDED TWENTY-ONE YEARS

DAYTON, WYO., July 19.—After living with David Krouse Towns for 21 years and bearing ten children of which he is the father, Mrs. Martha Ellen Towns has brought suit for divorce, asserting that her husband unjustly accused her of infidelity and that he had attempted to secure her incarceration in the State Insane Asylum, although realizing that she was sane.

BRYAN OUGHT TO LIVE ON HIS PAY OR QUIT, SAY SENATORS

Explanation of Secretary of State More Amazing Than His Acts, Declares Bristow, Who Introduced Resolution to Investigate

Wilson's Premier Capitalizing His Position, Asserts Representative Willis—Much Work To Be Done in His Department.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the National Capital is that if Secretary Bryan can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Mr. Bryan to-day gave evidence of the fact that the country-wide criticism had got under his skin. That he was irritated and impatient and realized the "bad break" he has made was apparent to his subordinates throughout the day. Somewhat petulantly he declared that the press of the country might have assumed that "my lecture engagements are subject to cancellation."

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow Cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

Evades Paper's Questions.

The American to-day endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions and refused to discuss the subject of his official pronunciamento.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by The American:

"If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

"If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

"You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?"

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned to the questions. Later in the day he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Bristow, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan to stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, to-day came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secrttary Bryan's second statement has astounded me even more than his first one," said Mr. Bristow. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the Governmtnt service is amazing.

"Secretary Bryan says he has a right to use his vacation for lecturing if he sees fit. But he is to be away on one tour of six weeks, and there is no telling where his vacation will end.

Needed at His Post.

"Besides, since he has been Secretary of State he has been in Washington only about one-half the time so far. If ever there was a time when the Secretary of State was needed on the job it is now, when so many important questions are up for consideration. To cause the people to pay money to hear the Secretary of State, the highest officer in the Cabinet, deliver addresses is all

Burleson Eats but Two Meals Each Day

Postmaster General Believes in and Practices "Early to Bed, Early to Rise" Theory.

"Read the papers until 6.
"Breakfast.
"Go over papers and reports until 9.

Girl Traps a Thief In Telephone Booth

Sets Shoulder Against Door and Holds Man Until Cries Bring Her Aid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Holding a thief trapped in a telephone booth, Miss Florence Rosenthal, cashier in Edward Feuhrer's drug store at No. 53 Second avenue, finally succeeded in delivering him to the police yesterday.

The captive, who said he was Alexander Moskowitz, 17 years old, was so long "telephoning" that Miss Rosenthal went to the booth to see if he was dead or alive. She saw him opening the money box with a screwdriver, she says. Screaming for her employer, she set her shoulder against the door, and the youth could not force it open. Moskowitz was held for trial.

SHORTAGE HITS NATIONAL BANK AT LAFAYETTE

Comptroller of Currency Orders Institution Closed When Defalcation Is Discovered.

ARRESTS ARE LIKELY

Preliminary Examination Shows That It Has Been Looted of Not Less Than $30,000.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane today announced that the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., has been closed by National Bank Examiner Thomas C. Dunlap, with the authority of the board of directors, on account of a large shortage which makes the bank insolvent.

Mr. Kane says he has not received a detailed report of the condition of the bank. Mr. Dunlap has been appointed receiver.

"We do not know how big the defalcation may be," said Mr. Kane, "but our preliminary examination has shown that it is not less than $30,000. This shortage has occurred since May 23, when the bank was last examined. Suspicion on the part of officers of the bank several days ago that a shortage existed caused them to call in Examiner Dunlap. Discovery of the embbezzlement resulted.

"In his telegraphic advices to me Mr. Dunlap does not say to whom suspicion attaches. The last statement of the condition of the bank, issued on June 4, showed the bank to be in a proper state. The president of the bank is R. N. Dickerson, and S. A. Hunt, Jr., is cashier."

In a telegram from Mr. Dunlap Mr. Kane is advised that steps have been taken to make an arrest.

Depositors to Lose Little by Failure.

CHATTANOOGA, July 19.—Local bankers stated to-day that the liabilities of the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., which was announced to-day by Acting Comptroller of Currency Kane, at Washington, to have failed, were approximately $240,000, but that depositors would be paid in full, with but a slight loss to stockholders, as the assets would prove but slightly less.

An unsuccessful attempt was made this morning to obtain a schedule of the liabilities and assets of the institution. The officials are extremely reticent concerning the cause of the institution's embarrassment.

Aerial Ferry to Join Cities in California

Air Pilot Gets Permission to Install Aeroplane Service Between San Francisco and Oakland.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The first aerial ferry of the world will be in operation between San Francisco and Oakland in September. Permission was granted officially to-day by the Harbor Commission to John L. Lekas to construct a dock for his hydroaeroplane.

Lekas recently applied for a permit, declaring that he wished to establish a regular passenger service between the trans-bay cities. Lekas was before the commission to-day and satisfied them he was a safe and sane air pilot.

Motor Cars to Cut High Cost of Dying

Storage Battery Busses To Be Put in Service in Chicago as Funeral Equipage.

CHICAGO, July 19.—The high cost of dying is to be reduced. Storage battery motor busses are to be put in service as funeral cars. The change from carriages to busses, it is estimated, will result in a saving of $30 in the cost of each funeral. As there are 31,000 funerals in Chicago each year, the general reduction in the cost of dying, if busses were used in all funerals, would be $930,000.

Billie Burke Wires She Is Recovering

Actress Was Threatened With Appendicitis, but Did Not Have to Undergo Operation.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Billie Burke, telegraphing the London bureau of The American to-day from Carlsbad in reply to an inquiry concerning her health, says:

"Thanks awfully. Was threatened with appendicitis, but have not had to undergo operation. Recovering nicely.

"BILLIE BURKE."

U. S. State Secrets 'Lifted' From Wire By Mexican Agents

Information Worth Thousands of Dollars Finds Its Way Into Possession of Huerta.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A copy of the official code of the State Department, containing information worth thousands of dollars to foreign governments, has fallen into the hands of the Mexican administration.

It is being used to further the ends of the Huerta regime, it was asserted here to-day.

For some months State Department officials have suspected that the Government telegrams from Mexico City have been tampered with, it is declared, but this was not considered important, as all the dispatches were in code, and, therefore, theoretically illegible.

About three weeks ago, however, Government officials here had their first inkling that the Mexicans were obtaining the gist of dispatches passing between the State Department and Ambassador Wilson.

The agents of the almost unknown "secret service" of the State Department were put on the trail and evidence was obtained that the Government dispatches had been "lifted" from the wires in Mexico and decoded, the information contained therein being transmitted to President Huerta and his Cabinet.

Doctor Says He Has Vaccine to Cure Cold

Dead Organisms Found in Blood of Patient Afflicted With Influenza Used as Culture.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Claims to the discovery of a remarkable vaccine for the cure and prevention of the troublesome "cold" known among medical men as in influenza are being made by physicians of the Mulford Laboratory, near Philadelphia, under the direction of Dr. A. P. Mitchins.

The vaccine is composed of the dead organisms found in the blood of a person afflicted with influenza. These organs are isolated and then an impure culture is obtained. Afterward, a saline solution is used to wash the culture germs and then the vaccine is ready for injection.

One striking feature of the results of the vaccine, it is said, is that it cures diseases allied with the common cold at the same time it does the "cold."

3 Drowned Trying To Avoid Wet Feet

Women Stand Up in Leaky Boat, Capsizing Craft in View of Hundreds.

NORRISTOWN, PA., July 19.—Caught in a storm while boating on the Schuylkill River, three women, all church workers, were drowned. They are:

Miss Anna Mary Livergood, Miss Emma J. Rex and Miss Helen Green, all of Norristown.

Miss Margaret Green, a sister of Miss Helen Green, clung to the overturned boat and was saved.

The women were within a quarter of a mile of the boat landing when the wind struck them.

The boat began to leak badly. To keep their feet and clothing dry the four girls stood on the seats. The next instant the boat turned over.

Two hundred persons on a boat returning from a park saw the accident.

Congregation Built Up by Band Concerts

Ohio Pastor With Novel Methods Now Claims Biggest Sunday School in World.

CANTON, OHIO, July 19.—With the attraction of a band concert in the church roof garden and a double orchestra concert in the church auditorium, the Rev. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton's First Christian Church, has built up what he claims is the biggest Sunday school in the world within five years.

The average attendance in this hot month of July is 3,251. The record attendance is 4,714. Several Sundays back 38 babies were checked in the "babies' check room" of the $90,000 church. The men's class of 250 had to hold their session in the street while the teacher explained the lesson from the tonneau of an automobile.

Capital Now Calls Water 'Bryan Milk'

"Adam's Ale" Disappears From Vocabularies of Thirsty Statesmen Who Are Teetotalers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Bryan milk is what they call water in the National Capital nowadays. The new name is fast ousting the familiar Adam's ale by which water has been known for some centuries.

When you go in a cafe here and the waiter asks you what you will drink, if you are a teetotaler you say airly: "Oh, a glass of Bryan milk."

LOBBY INQUIRY STIRS NATION

Mulhall Story Leaves U. S. Aghast

Power of Interests Vividly Revealed

MARTIN W. MULHALL, former lobbyist of National Association of Manufacturers, whose revelations of corruption startled nation.

Names of Wilson, Taft, Senators and Congressmen Are Dragged Into the Testimony, Showing Corporations Have Set No Limit in Corruption.

STARTLING FACTS REVEALED IN U. S. SENATE INVESTIGATION OF CONGRESSIONAL LOBBY

National Association of Manufacturers raised a slush fund of $500,000 to $700,000 a year to oppose objectionable legislation.

Place in Taft Cabinet pledged to manufacturers by Vorys, Taft manager.

Charges that the big manufacturers had the ears of Taft, Sherman and Cannon.

List of Congressmen in pay of the National Manufacturers' Association disclosed. Also, a list of the "unpurchasable," whom the association hated, and tried to defeat.

Fights made by National Manufacturers' Association on progressive Congressmen and Senators, often successful.

More than 400 letter tell of plans of association to become sinister factor in controlling the wheels of government.

Attempts made to foment strife among labor organizations, and to corrupt labor leaders, even Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Agreement by Woodrow Wilson with Gompers and Morrison that he support Hughes for Senate.

Powers of big business fought Hughes because he was friendly to labor.

Tom Johnson, Senator McComas of Maryland, and others were political victims of the association's vengeance.

Gigantic corruption in Wall Street laid bare in testimony of David Lamar.

Forgery on Union Pacific's books covering item of $82,000,000 charged.

Senate resolutions hawked about Wall street for sale to highest bidder.

The nation to-day stands aghast at the sensational revelations which have come as the result of investigations by the Overman Committee of the United States Senate into the work of lobbies at the National Capital.

It has heard how big business combines and Wall Street operators have made and unmade men in public life, influenced legislation, dominated public opinion, all the time secret and vigilant.

It has learned how big business has become one of the most powerful factors in the American civilization, striking in the dark against men who opposed it.

It has heard the names of the men highest in public life, President Wilson, former President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet members, dragged into the testimony, and has learned that certain predatory interests have set no limits in their attempt to corrupt public servants.

The bulk of the startling testimony came from Martin M. Mulhall, for years the servant of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the chief lobbyist of that organization at Washington, and from David Lamar, an operator in stocks, who is known as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

Wilson Starts Inquiry.

The investigation began more than a month ago when President Wilson declared that a lobby, "insidious and industrious" in nature, had long dominated tariff legislation. The announcement did not come unexpectedly, however, and there were many Senators and Congressmen to endorse the Chief Executive. The Senate began immediately its investigation of the charges, empowering a committee, headed by Senator Overman, to conduct the inquiry.

Relatively pointless testimony from men interested in the sugar industry came first, revealing the fact that sugar lobbies were the most industrious. Lobbyists from Hawaii, the Philippines and Louisiana defended their actions by a protest against free sugar. Former Governor Carter of Hawaii declared that the elimination of the duty on sugar would make the Hawaiian Islands merely military posts, destroying their commercial prestige. Frank C. Lowry, of the "free sugar lobby," admitted in the testimony that $25,000 had been spent in four years by the Federal Sugar Refining Company in lobbying operations.

Then came the Mulhall testimony.

Even Take Fizz Out Of City's Soda Water

Members of Cincinnati Board of Health to Censor All Soft Drinks Sold.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—The "fizz and bubble" in soda water and ginger ale manufactured in this city is to be no more, if the Board of Health has its way about the matter, and it seems likely at this time that its contention will hold good. The board has asked the Council to pass an ordinance limiting the amount of alcohol to one-half of 1 per cent in any one drink of this kind. If the resolution is passed and made a law no dealer will be allowed to make soft drinks without first getting a permit.

300 "HELLO GIRLS" ASK BOSS TO BE BEST MAN

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—The Postmaster General is bewildered over the result of the recent permission which he granted to telephone girls to get married. Three hundred of these girls promptly availed themselves of the chance and every couple asked the Postmaster General to act as best man.

Umbrellas for Farm Hands Is Inducement

Planter Advertises That He Will Supply Them With Sulkies, Sunshades and Ice Cream.

FINDLAY, OHIO, July 19.—There are other communities in this country that are suffering for a lack of farm hands besides Kansas. It is up to H. B. Clark, a farmer in the western part of Hancock County, to make good, else be prosecuted for false advertising, as provided by the new newspaper laws.

In a morning paper Mr. Clark is advertising for farm hands to plow corn. He says he will provide them with riding cultivator, a large sun umbrella for each, ice water to drink and all the ice cream each applicant can eat every other day, with $2.50 a day wages.

GREAT BRITAIN IS AFTER LATEST GERMAN AIR CRAFT

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Great Britain, it is stated, is negotiating for an Unger airship, which is larger, faster and more rigid than any others yet designed, including the Zeppelins.

'Oh Fudge' Strongest Language Permitted

Kansas City Starts Crusade Against Public Swearing—Police Rebuke Violators.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—Anything stronger than "Oh, fudge!" must not be heard on the streets of Kansas City hereafter. All the ministers of the city and all the members of their churches have started an anti-swearing crusade, and part of the work is to ask persons who are overheard to swear to consider the vulgarity of it and cease the practice.

The Police Department and the street railway company have agreed to join in the crusade, so that hereafter it is part of the policeman's duty to stop swearing as well as breaches of the peace.

Miss Elliott Returns To Stage To Be Happy

Will Play Potiphar's Wife in Sir Herbert Tree's "Joseph and His Brethren."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Maxine Elliott, yielding to Sir Herbert Tree's persuasion, will return to the stage September 2 in a great production of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." She will play Potiphar's wife.

Miss Elliott gives as the chief reason for her reappearance that every one is happier when occupied. She is now living in her beautiful house at Bushey, just outside London.

STORY OF MULHALL WILL EXTEND U. S. LOBBY INQUIRY

Mulhall represented the National Association of Manufacturers, in Washington. The association has a membership of 225 organizations, among them the most influential of the country, and 4,000 individuals, who control billions of capital.

The burden of his statements were that the association had for years promoted tariff, labor, and general business legislation favorable to itself, had maintained a lobby staff of seventeen, including himself, and former Presidents VanCleave and Kirby, of the association, at the capital to defeat hostile legislation, and it was always seeking and often obtaining control of the House and Senate Committee on Labor and Judiciary.

Created Tariff Commission.

He said that the association's efforts were responsible for the creation of the Tariff Commission under President Taft, and said that nine former Congressmen and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages in the House, had obtained money for services rendered.

More sensational still were the declarations that former President Taft, former Vice President Sherman, and former Speaker Cannon, besides many Congressmen and Senators were among those whom the association could affect by appeals to sentiment or other interests. He told of an unsuccessful attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, and of successful work among petty labor leaders.

Mulhall told of his own great ingratitude, how he obtained a Federal position through the influence of Senator McComas of Maryland, and at the same time entered the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers, helping to defeat his patron because McComas had been doomed for his opposition to the association.

McComas, it seems, was not the only victim. Tom L. Johnson had been defeated for Mayor of Cleveland, said Mulhall, for his opposition to the association, and William E. Hughes was opposed by the business combine for Senator from New Jersey because he was the advocate of many labor bills. It was in this connection that Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, had agreed with Gompers and Morrison, the labor leaders, to support Hughes, and had stumped the State in his favor.

Spies Kept in Field.

The work of the association against the eight-hour law, its enmity to most legislation that was favorable to labor, how he kept in occasional communication with former Vice President Sherman, how spies were kept in the field to corrupt minor labor leaders, and to knife opponents, were other sensational bits of the Mulhall testimony.

George Pope, president of the association, and other officials of the organization, have made statements declaring that Mulhall is not to be believed, and that most of the statements were inspired by the fact that Mulhall was discharged by the association. From many persons and places have come statements denouncing Mulhall as a man of reprehensible character, lessening thus the substantiability of many of the charges. But in many instances the declarations he made seemed to be assured of reliability by documents that are substantial.

Interesting is his list of Congressmen whom he said had received pay from the association. He named in this connection J. E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, the House "whip" of the last administration; J. T. McDermott, Democrat, of Illinois; J. J. Jenkins, Republican, Wisconsin; Kittredge Haskins, Republican, Vermont; C. E. Littlefield, Republican, Maine; H. M. Bannon, Republican, Ohio; H. M. Coudry, Republican, Missouri; J. J. Gardner, Republican, New Jersey; R. B. Cole, Republican, Ohio, and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages.

On the other hand, he named a number of Congressmen who had consistently fought the association's interests, and whom he frankly called "unpurchasable." They are: Speaker Clark, Burnett of Alabama, Maynichols, Pennsylvania; Parson, New nard, Virginia; Cooper, Wisconsin; York; Green, Massachusetts; Haugen, Iowa; Wilson, Pennsylvania; McComas, Maryland; Pearre, Maryland; Hughes, New Jersey; Kelliher, Massachusetts; Connolly, Massachusetts, and the labor leaders, Gompers, John Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the Federation of Labor. William Barnes, the New York boss, he said, was his friend, and could always be depended on to "take care of bills."

Revelations of Lamar.

On the heels of the Mulhall revelations came those from David Lamar, the smiling, cynical "Wolf of Wall Street." Lamar it was who told of having sent Edward Lauterbach, his attorney, to peddle around Wall Street a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the Senate.

J. P. Morgan was one of the men whom Lauterbach visited on this errand. He told how he had impersonated Congressmen Palmer and Riordan in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass Ledyard and Paul D. Cravath, corporation attorneys, and Robert S. Lovett, the railroad president, feigning knowledge of the intentions of the dominant party. Further, he declared that he had represented himself as fresh from the councils of Speaker Clark and other leaders when he visited Wall Street operators for concessions.

Lamar's most remarkable disclosure was his statement that the Union Pacific Railroad's books had been forged in 1901 to cover an item of $82,600,000, whereby the fortunes of E. H. Harriman, Kuhn, Boeb and Company, and others were built.

Testimonials Discredited.

Discredit has been cast upon Lamar's testimony as on Mulhall's, as coming from a man lacking in scruples. Paul D. Cravath, attorney for the Union Pacific, gave out a statement that the testimony regarding the gigantic forgery was part of a bear campaign against the company.

The Senate investigation will be conducted in detail, and it is likely, to judge from the announced intentions of the committee members, that every member of the Senate and of the House, every public official whose name has been dragged into the affair, and every one in anyway connected with the situation will be called in as witnesses. Appearances seem to indicate that the hearing will last far into the summer.

Mulhall was on the stand the greater part of last week explaining a batch of correspondence which had passed between him and political and labor leaders throughout the United States. The correspondence, according to evidence which has been revealed, he has sought to sell to magazines and newspapers several times, but in vain. Nonchalantly, the ex-lobbyist has pointed out letter after letter from prominent men, talking of alleged significant deals almost carelessly.

"This is a letter from Senator Forraker," he said, indicating one. "It was asking me to see a labor man about his chances for re-election to the Senate. I think he was considering the Presidency at the time."

Secrets of big politics are being bared daily during the investigation. Details of how spies worked among the labor men, and of the secret methods of big business have been explained by Mulhall at more than one point in his testimony.

In defense of his own lobbying, Mulhall made statements that a labor lobby existed, naming Samuel Gompers. As a result, Gompers and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be brought before the committee to explain their activities in the cause of labor and capital, respectively.

Inez Milholland's Wedding Blow to Suffragists

Her Romance May Annul Marriage to the Cause

Beautiful Leader of Votes for Women Won After Courtship on Two Continents.

Mrs. Eugen Boissevain, who was Miss Inez Milholland, famous suffragist beauty and orator, before her marriage to wealthy Dutchman last week.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Suffrage leaders of the United States are today bowed in spirit. They can think of their recent victory in Illinois without smiling. They read of success of women jurors and policemen with no show of ecstasy. Their minds are troubled. They seek to know whether Mrs. Eugen Boissevain will be as potent a personality for the cause as was Inez Milholland before she suddenly decided to take unto herself a husband in the form of the wealthy Dutchman she wedded Tuesday in London.

For Inez Milholland has been no small force in the suffrage movement in the United States. She graduated from Vassar just about the time when the votes for women idea traveled across the seas from England, and she has been right on the firing line in the battle for the ballot ever since.

Beauty of Suffrage Ranks.

Miss Milholland, beg pardon, Mrs. Boissevain, has ever been in the specially mentioned class in every important suffrage movement. She has been the American Christobal Pankhurst, only more so, though it has not been recorded that she has smashed anything, or has had to dodge extradition treaties to keep from the painful necessity of going on a hunger strike.

Even before she graduated from Vassar, Miss Milholland was known to fame. Her remarkable beauty, her mentality and personal magnetism made her a leader in this great girls' college. She was the champion all around athlete and held a world's record for putting the shot.

During the strike of the garment workers in New York, several years ago, Miss Milholland volunteered for picket duty and it was her oratory that kept the girls stubbornly on the strike until they partially won their demands.

In the first big suffrage parade in New York she was a battalion leader and was a striking figure as she rode astride on a big bay charger.

Challenges Orator Heflin.

She again achieved prominence by challenging Representative Tom Heflin of Alabama to joint debate when that doughty Congressman spoke disparagingly of the cause, and though it is known that Mr. Heflin loves to speak and delights in debate, he carefully avoided meeting Miss Milholland on the forum.

In the great suffrage parade in Washington the day before President Wilson's inauguration Miss Milholland led the procession as the herald of the cause. She was mounted on a pure white horse and was clad in robes of white, while a coronet surmounted her magnificent hair which fell loosely down her back.

So striking was her appearance that she was quickly an object of the attacks of the thugs and boors who tried to break up the parade, and it is recorded that one of these men received a blow on the jaw from the fist of the young woman who once held the world shot-put record.

"I am wedded to the cause," she told her admirers, among whom were Sidney Smith, the New York clubman; John Fox, Jr., author and former husband of Fritzi Scheff, and Lord Curzon, formerly viceroy of India.

Whether this marriage will annul her former marriage to the cause is the question that perplexes the suffrage leaders, but they, as a rule, protest that it will not.

John E. Milholland, her father, was evidently not greatly shocked by the marriage. Here is what he cabled his daughter:

"Have not been so mad in two hundred years. You should be boiled in oil. Do you expect forgiveness until the next century. Indefensible chip of the old block, you have given us a pretty rough deal, but nevertheless I humbly and fervently pray God's blessing upon you and yours forever. "PATER."

Boissevain's Brother Elated.

Robert W. Boissevain, brother of the bridegroom, was in a decidedly agreeable frame of mind yesterday in his office at No. 17 Battery place. Besides calling his brother a "lucky dog and describing him as being "smiled upon by the gods," he said that the new Mrs. Boissevain has now seven sisters-in-law who possess collectively 25 children and that all these seven Boissevain sisters are suffragists of the non-militant type.

"Wireless" in Courtship.

"Eugen, who is 33 years old, and my brother Jan came over to New York on the Olympic to pay me a visit," he said. "They arrived June 10 and stopped at the Holland House with me. William Marconi, the wireless discoverer, and Mrs. Marconi were here at the same time. My brother and I have known Mr. Marconi for years, and I now understand that the Marconis have known the Milholland family for a long time.

"Anyway, two days after the arrival of my brothers, that is, June 12, I was dining with them in the Holland House and Mr. and Mrs. Marconi entered the dining room with one of the most beautiful women we had ever seen. Miss Milholland was presented to us, and my brother Eugen lost interest in all other things then and there.

"Eugen and Jan had planned to tour the States for six weeks at least, but during the dinner Miss Milholland said something about leaving for Europe early in July. The plans of Eugen, I could see, went flying.

MAZDAZNANS EAT FLOWERS AND SING TO THE SUN

All This in Classic Boston, Where the Cult Has a Membership Small but Exclusive.

BOSTON, July 19.—It is ancient history that Nebuchadnezzer went out and ate grass like an ox. Out in the Back Bay and up in Lowell there can be found small yet select circles of folk who eat grass and say they enjoy it.

Not only this, but they worship the sun, pray to the sun, sing to the sun, take sun baths, dew baths, eat rose petals and pansies, drive out disease by fasting spells (or say they do so), fast for days and then fatten up on a diet of water to drink and violets to eat, kiss and rekiss, and try to be as happy and contented as can be.

These people are the Mazdaznans or Sun Worshipers. Into their innermost shrines have penetrated none but ardent devotees, so that none of their rites have been made public. As revealed for the first time at the big Gahanbar, or national peace congress of the Mazdaznans, these rites are weird enough—strange to the outside world, but taken as a matter of course by the Mazdaznans.

And the strange part of the rites and worship is that the devout worshipers believe their practice will lengthen their years into three or four centuries.

Secret Rites of Cult.

Another thing about the sun folk is that they don't worry. So in the hot weather they manage to keep cool figuratively and physically. They usually look happy and contented when met on the street.

None outside the cult itself knew—up to the holding of the recent Gahanbar or Congress—of the secret rites of the Mazdaznans. These are practiced in the inner circles, so called.

For years the famous "Green Book" of the Mazdaznans was a mystery sealed to the eyes of ordinary mortals. The book was guarded sacredly by the Sun Worshipers. In it are printed the precepts of the cult.

Here are some of them:

You can get cured of anything if you have faith enough long enough.

Sickness, sin and poverty will be eradicated by Mazdaznanism.

The fly you swat may be the incarnated soul of a great-great-great-grandmother.

Be careful, then, how you swat the flies.

Obstinacy Cause for Pain.

Pain is nothing but the result of obstinacy in you. If you are suffering from a toothache, it is because you are "declining to yield to the peaceful operations of intelligence."

Never go under the surgeon's knife or take "herbal medicine."

Deny the "bonds of ancestral relation through sickness, sin or sorrow."

And practice these things: Deep or "conscious" breathing and vegetarianism.

If you can do these things, you may become a Mazdaznan, so the "Green Book" says.

The High Priestess is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Roth Hilton, wife of Dr. George Hilton, of Lowell.

In the inner worship Hanish, the leader, is His Humbleness, Mrs. Hilton is Spenta Marie—the equivalent of "holy mother."

Their chief New England shrine is the Mazdaznan Temple, in Lowell. This was formerly a barn belonging to Dr. Hilton, but later converted into a "house of worship."

The central figure in the worship is Mrs. Hilton, the High Priestess. She is the mother of two pretty daughters, one of whom, the elder, Miss Ruthken Mariana Hilton, is being educated to follow in her mother's steps as High Priestess. Some day pretty Miss Ruthken—her name before the court changed it was Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of Mrs. Hilton by her first marriage—will be the leader of the Mazdaznans. The other daughter is Miss Constance Cleopatra Hilton.

The majority of the followers of the "Little Master," Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, are the persons of middle life and evidently of generous means. While a few of the cult are young women of surpassing beauty, yet the advanced philosophic principles of Mazdaznan are so complex and abstract that only those of mature mind are intellectually and spiritually capable of comprehending them. Therefore, there is a dearth of young people in the cult.

Both couples recently were married. Ross and Klien have resigned their positions in order to make the trip. The men will carry a camping outfit weighing 25 pounds. All will wear duck suits and leggings.

Rats Give Sleeping Fisherman Haircut

Well Oiled Head of Angler Proves Excellent Provender for Hungry Island Rodents.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., July 19. A Santa Barbara fisherman has discovered a new way of getting his hair clipped. He appeared about his usual haunts yesterday with one-half of his head neatly shorn of hair. He says that the mice did it. A well-known fisherman vouches for the tale.

Santa Barbara Island is inhospitable and barren and contains not a drop of fresh water. For this reason fishing parties take a good supply of liquid refreshment.

Usually fishermen sleep on their boats on account of the mice. However, the fisherman in the party of Williams said he would sleep on shore.

This fisherman had earned the sobriquet of "Dude," owing to his habit of oiling his hair. It was this oil that caused the involuntary haircut, for the fishermen say that during the "Dude's" hours of slumber the mice visited him and neatly cut the hair close to the scalp in their relish of the oil.

Japs' 'Amo' Starts Romance at Harvard

Girl Student Teaches Him Language of Nippon and Now They Sail for Tokio Honeymoon.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—They met in the yard at Harvard. He was finishing his course and she was studying the intricacies of the Japanese language.

"Will you teach me Japanese?" asked James Lee Kauffman, and she said "yes."

They studied together day after day. Finally he was graduated to what corresponds to "Amo" in the Latin books. He asked her several times to explain its meaning.

"It means I love," she said, blushing.

"I am sure it must mean I love you," he said, and when she nodded that such might be the case he admitted that such was the case.

So they were married in Lancaster, Pa., and came here.

They sailed for Tokio. He is to take the chair of English law in the Imperial University.

Marries and Steals To Reform a Girl

Divinity Student Admits Taking Money Trusted to Him Because He Loved Woman.

DENVER, July 19.—William Schulz, student of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $38 from the student body, whose cashier he was, says he married Miss Thelma Gillion and became a defaulter, not only because he loved the girl, but because he desired to assist her in giving up her former way of living.

That Schulz had partly succeeded in his work of reclamation is the belief of all Denver people who have come in contact with the young woman since she and Schulz arrived in this city. They unite in saying that there is no better behaved young woman in Denver than Mrs. Schulz.

Sioux City Finds Policewomen Useful

Superintendent of Police Safety Declares They Have Lessened Trouble With Girls.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA, July 19.—"I want especially to have the policewomen on the force during the summer months," says the Superintendent of Public Safety. "We formerly had plenty of trouble with young girls in dance halls, but since the women came on the force there has been none of this.

"I believe that they are doing fine work and am very well satisfied. The only thing that would cause their release from the force would be the lack of sufficient appropriation to pay their salary. They are necessary to the force in guarding the morals of the women of Sioux City."

Safe Robber Relic Found in Old Wall

Discoverers Believe That Ancient Money Box Was Taken From Stage Coach by Highwaymen.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., July 19.—While repairing the State highway at the top of Conococheague Mountain, near Concord, Ralph Hopple and Elias Snyder, who were tearing down a stone wall, found an express money box, of heavy sheet iron, lined with wood. The lid was partly open and the lock had been sprung with an iron hook found near the box.

It is thought the box was in the old stone wall for more than a century and was placed there by a gang of robbers that infested that section in the days of stage coaches.

ACID THROWN AS JEALOUS WIFE STRIKES RIVAL

House Physician of Kimball House Center of Affray Witnessed by Peachtree Crowd.

Dr. J. Robert Smith, house physician at the Kimball Hotel; Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Ina McNeil, of No. 299 Forrest avenue, a saleswoman at a downtown store, engaged in a struggle in front of the Park-Chambers-Hardwick store on Peachtree street Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. Smith found her husband with Mrs. McNeil.

In the melee Mrs. McNeil received a slight cut on her arm, and Mrs. Smith claims also she gave her a black eye. During the trouble a bottle of what is supposed to have been carbolic acid was thrown by one of the participants, but none of them will admit throwing it. Dr. Smith declares he did not see the acid thrown, and Mrs. Smith will not say whether she threw it or not.

Hundreds See Fray.

The triangular affray was witnessed by hundreds of Peachtree street pedestrians, and created considerable excitement. After the bottle of acid had crashed to the pavement and broken, Dr. Smith hustled his wife around the corner, while Mrs. McNeil ran into the store and hurried to the second floor.

Mrs. Smith admits attacking Mrs. McNeil. She says she has several times asked her to keep away from Dr. Smith, and declares she became infuriated when she saw her husband meet Mrs. McNeil downtown to-day.

Says She Trailed Smith.

"Dr. Smith has been running around with Mrs. McNeil for more than a year now," said Mrs. Smith. "We have been separated for several years, but of late the doctor has asked me to return to him. He has offered to buy me an automobile if I would come back, but I told him I would have to test him. I asked him to keep away from Mrs. McNeil, and I've also asked Mrs. McNeil to keep away from Robert.

"I heard several weeks ago that he was going around with her again, and this morning I came to Atlanta from my home in Douglas. I trailed Dr. Smith to-day when he left the Kimball House, and I saw him meet the woman on Edgewood avenue. I followed them until they got in front of the store on Peachtree street, and then I got so mad that I stopped them.

"I admit I hit Mrs. McNeil, and I would do it again. I just got so mad that I walked up and struck her in the face. I gave her a black eye and scratched her on the arm, but she didn't hurt me. I don't know anything about the acid. Dr. Smith did not do anything while we were fighting, but acted like he wanted to get away. After the bottle was thrown, he took me out of the place."

Girl Shoots Herself When She Is Spanked

Mother Punishes Her for Spending Afternoons With Boys—She Fires Bullet Into Breast.

NEW YORK, July 19.—When the mother of 15-year-old Mary DeMartino spanked her a week ago for spending the afternoons with young men on the roof of their home, No. 337 East Forty-seventh street, the girl threatened to shoot herself.

Mrs. DeMartino caught her on the roof again yesterday, and after Mary had been chastised, she fired a bullet into her breast, penetrating one of her lungs. She was taken to Flower Hospital, and last night was in a critical condition.

Couldn't Die Until He Moved Friend's Body

Pioneer Refuses to Allow Companion's Remains to Rest In Old Deserted Cemetery.

DUFUR, OREG., July 19.—"No, he was just my friend."

This was the answer given by H. Koehler, of Portland, when asked if William Holman, whose body he had gone to the trouble and expense of moving from one cemetery to another, was a relative.

Many, many years ago, when there was but a small handful of settlers in the Fifteen-Mile Valley, a location for a cemetery was selected on a hill overlooking the valley.

A few days ago Kohler, now a gray-haired man, came to look after the last resting place of his friend Holman. He left here soon after Holman's death 35 years ago.

"We were good friends—very good friends," he said. "I could not die happy if I knew he would be left out there in that old cemetery with no one left to care for his grave. I had intended to look after this long ago, but circumstances have prevented, and now I am growing old and I must do this one kind act for my friend. We were very, very good friends."

Automobile Driver Kills Deer With Car

Horn Frightens Animal But He Afterwards Turns to Fight and Pierces Tire With Horns.

UKIAH, CAL., July 19.—W. C. Jones, of Los Angeles, ran down a big deer with his auto near Largo yesterday when it jumped over the fence in front of the machine. Jones opened his throttle and turned loose the horn. The noise frightened the animal, and, after a half mile chase, it turned to give battle. The deer made one vicious lunge forward, its horn piercing the front tire, the impact breaking its neck. Jones loaded his prize into the machine.

CRAWFORD HEIRS EXPECT SEARCH FOR BARBER TO BARE PRE-NUPTIAL PLOT

Relatives Think That Lump Will Tell Woman Held on Poison Charge Planned to Wed Him on Her Husband's Death.

If the tireless search which is being directed by Atlanta lawyers discovers in New York a man named Fred Lump, the prosecution in the case against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, thinks a pre-nuptial plot against Crawford can be proved.

The alleged plot was between Mrs. Crawford, then Mrs. Savage, and Lump. She would marry the wealthy Crawford, obtain his money, and then marry Lump, say her accusers.

Lump is a barber by trade and a Bohemian by nativity. He is supposed to be in New York, and in that city detectives in the employ of the prosecution have been at work for several days. Every message that comes from them, however, is one of failure.

Colonel James Makes Charge.

The charge of a plot first was made by Col. J. S. James, who is attorney for the contesting Crawford heirs, who ordered the arrest of Lump. Colonel James said that Lump admitted his being in Atlanta at the time of Crawford's death, and that other testimony valuable to the prosecution was given by him in deposition several weeks ago. But present search for the Bohemian barber has proved fruitless.

Colonel James points to Mrs. E. C. Bursener as one of the witnesses of the prosecution to substantiate the murder plot charge. Mrs. Bursener, it is claimed, will testify that she frequently heard Mrs. Crawford say that she would marry Crawford, get his money, and later run away with Lump. The prosecution will seek to prove also by Mrs. Gertrude A. Painter, it is said, that there was a definite agreement to this plan existent between Mrs. Crawford and Lump.

The forces that are trying to saddle Mrs. Crawford with the murder charge are scoring heavily in the closely-allied civil suit. Heirs of Joshua B. Crawford, trying to break the will by which the widow received the bulk of the estate, charging undue influence, have produced a number of witnesses to swear to an antagonism between Crawford and Mrs. Mary B. Crawford.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. L. C. Dillingsley, who testified that Joshua B. Crawford said, time and again, that he would not marry the woman. This statement was elicited in the attempt to prove that Crawford was not rational, and probably was intoxicated, when he married Mrs. Crawford.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Mrs. Dillingsley, who said she lived in the Crawford home on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death, told of instances of alleged cruelty on Mrs Crawford's part, directed particularly toward a Miss Scott. Mrs. Sallie Alexander, an old woman of Henry County, was another witness by whom it was sought to prove habitual drunkenness on Crawford's part.

Mrs. Crawford, released from the Tower on bail of $6,250, has remained in the seclusion of her home on West Peachtree street all week, steadfastly quiet and refusing all statements in the face of the accusations against her. She has said nothing regarding the case, except a simple denial of the charges.

Reporters seeing her were treated courteously and quietly, and Mrs. Crawford seemed not averse to talk to them freely. But in most of the talk the subject of the murder charge and the plot charge in which Lump's name appears was carefully skirted.

Mrs. Crawford is a large woman, of dignified appearance. Not one moment since her arrest Saturday night has her composure broken, even slightly. In the Tower she received the few persons who called on her, and during the visit did not exhibit a sign of perturbation.

Calls Charge "Awful Thing."

To reporters and to all her visitors, when she mentioned at all the subject of the murder charge, she referred to it as "this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford finds staunch friends in her children and grandchildren, who visited her at the Tower, and were with her almost all the few hours she spent in jail, bringing her flowers, a savory meal, and other tokens of their love.

Mrs. Crawford's children are bitter in their speech against the nephews and neices of Joshua B. Crawford, who, they say, are persecuting their mother with extreme cruelty. Mrs. Crawford herself accused her enemies of cruelty and lack of feeling.

Mrs. Crawford met Joshua B. Crawford when she was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine, wither Crawford went in search of health. It was there she met him, and there that she married him. At his death, there was a settlement of his estate, Mrs. Crawford taking hold of the affairs with a capable hand.

An agreement was signed, and the affairs of Joshua B. Crawford, deceased, seemed amicably settled. Then the litigation was sprung. In the first bill of complaint the heirs who contested the will charged Mrs. Crawford with poisoning her husband, and of exerting undue influence to procure a will in her favor. But it was not until three years later, two weeks ago, that an examination of the remains of Joshua B. Crawford to ascertain traces of poison was ordered. Upon the examination came the verdict of the physician that traces of poison were vident, and Mrs. Crawford was arrested.

With preliminary hearing waived, Mrs. Crawford's case is flatly up to the grand jury, which, without definite date of meeting, awaits the call of the Solicitor General. The body probably will be assembled next week.

MRS. MARY BELLE CRAWFORD, held on poison charge in famous will case mystery, with her grandchild, Viola Belle Bennett.

Fortune in Gold Nuggets Awaits Heir

Wealth Will Revert to State of Kansas Unless Kin of Old Woman Appear.

HUTCHINSON, July 19.—There is a bag of gold nuggets and gold dust awaiting heirs that may go to the State of Kansas. These nuggets and the gold dust, along with some money and other personal property to the value of $10,000, are in the hands of former Sheriff G. M. Duckworth, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ana M. Bernhert, who died a few days ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Some years ago when Mrs. Bernhert, who lived alone, was found to be of unsound mind, Dr. Duckworth was named as her guardian and she was taken to an asylum for treatment. In searching the house he found scattering personal property. It was found that much of it was gold nuggets and dust, saved, evidently, from some former mining experience, and hoarded away.

Baby Sips Hat Bleach; Dies from Poisoning

Mother, Bedridden from Appendicitis, Is Unable to Stop Child from Drinking Acid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—As a result of drinking a mixture of lye and oxalic acid, used by her father to clean an old straw hat, Dorothy E. Smith, 20 months old, died yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her father is Leo Smith, of No. 47 Brooklyn avenue, Jamaica, an employee of the Long Island Railroad.

The child's mother is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She and the baby were alone in the house yesterday when the child drank the mixture. She heard the baby's screams, but could not leave her bed, so she screamed, too, and neighbors who responded called a doctor.

SOT IS SENTENCED TO BATHE AND GO TO CHURCH

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 19.—To attend church each Sunday for three months and to bathe his children once a week was the novel sentence imposed on John Norris in the Police Court by Mayor Reed.

Norris pleaded guilty to intoxication. It was his second appearance in court within two months.

The terms of his sentence, if not complied with, will result in him serving 109 days in the workhouse.

RENO SINGS ITS SWAN SONG AS DIVORCE MECCA

Grand Rush of Colonists to Take Advantage of the Old Law Comes to an End.

RENO, July 19.—With such songs as "Meet a Friend From Your Home Town" and "At the Devil's Ball," sung by feminine entertainers from Metropolitan music halls, accompanied by high-class orchestras, the divorce colony celebrated the past week the beginning of the end of the Nevada quick divorce.

On the stroke of the midnight hour on Monday the curtain dropped upon one scene in Reno's notable divorce colony performance which has commanded the attention of the world for so long—that of the almost daily appearance of new faces upon the streets, as men and women, from plain country folk to elaborately gowned and bejeweled society beauties, arrived to begin their required six months' residence in the State and county, preparatory to the prospective divorce action.

Law Halts Colonists.

No more will incoming trains deposit these colonists and carloads of trunks, for the familiar song, "I'm on My Way to Reno," has been shelved by the action of the last Legislature, when it dealt the knock-out blow in its ultimatum that no divorce proceeding shall be instituted in the State of Nevada under the existing six-month residence law after December 21 next, thereby limiting the time in which newcomers could begin such residence period to Monday last.

Previous to July, 1909, the presence here for divorce of but an occasional person of prominence merely commanded attention to that individual, but it led to a method of publicity by an attorney which started the ball rolling, and it has never stopped rolling. Its greatest momentum is being witnessed now.

All Houses Are Thronged.

During the past month, and especially the week ending on Monday, the throng of newcomers has experienced great difficulty in securing such apartments as they might desire. All the hotels are crowded, as are the desirable rooming houses. Available cottages are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. In many cottages from four to six divorcees are living.

Some private boarding houses are housing as many as ten of the fair sex, and men. There are now scores of so-called "divorcees' nests" here. Every train the past fortnight has unloaded new arrivals, the preponderance of men and very young women, seemingly well to do and fashionable being noticeable. The proportion of men to women increased largely. Baby carriages and dogs played conspicuous parts.

Attending Funerals Hobby of Old Squaw

"Glass Eye," Noted for Lamentations at Obsequies, at Last Principal at Mortuary Ceremony.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREG., July 19.—"Glass Eye" is dead. She was an aged Indian woman, well known here since the settlment of this section. It was one of her hobbies to attend every funeral that she could, and on these occasions she posed as chief mourner by her excessive lamentations.

Her name has been forgotten by the whites, who only know her by the nickname, which is said to have been given her when young, because of the brightness of her eyes and not because of any abnormality in them.

She was about 75 years old, and is reported to have been the sister of "White Cindy," another noted aborigine.

Boy Finds $35,500; Hides it from Police

Advertises That He Picked up Money and Declares He Will Return it to Owner.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., July 19.—Brayton Gardner, 18 years old, who announced he had found $35,500 in a leather bag on the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad, to-night refused to tell the police where he put the money.

"I have hidden it in a safe place," said he, "and if someone claims it I will produce it immediately."

Gardner walked into the office of a local newspaper and inserted an advertisement reading:

"Found, $35,500. Owner can have money by identifying it and satisfying Brayton Gardner."

Stolen Jewels Are Found Buried in Park

Last of $100,000 Loot Stolen by Employee of Firm Recovered After Confession.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The final confession of young William Beck, who stole $100,000 worth of jewelry from his employers, Udall & Ballou, was obtained yesterday. The last $2,800 of the loot was found by detectives. It was buried in Central Park.

Beck had insisted until yesterday that he had told all. But Inspector Faurot finally got him to reveal the hiding place. The police were told to enter the park at 110th street and Eighth avenue and count eighteen stone blocks in the wall to a spot where a small bush grew. Buried 6 inches they found nine diamond rings and a pair of cuff buttons.

Indian Girl Seeks Office in Oklahoma

Educated Cherokee Business Woman Would Be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

VINITA, OKLA., July 19.—Announcement by Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, that she will not be a candidate for re-election, brings into the race for the Democratic nomination a young Cherokee woman, Miss Pearl Holderman, of Northern Craig County, whose ability as an educated business woman has given her a wide acquaintance in Eastern Oklahoma.

Miss Holderman has large business responsibilities and her experience and ability have made her more than a match for most men. Because of her father's impaired health she manages his cattle ranch, directing every detail, including the care of a herd of blooded cattle. This young Cherokee woman owns a thousand acres of land in her own name, all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

Old Age Attributed To Her False Teeth

Woman, Age 99, Declares She Has Used Set 59 Years—Always Chews Well.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 19.—At the age of 99, Mrs. Levina Derr, of Hudson, declares that her long life is due solely to the fact that she bought a set of good store teeth fifty years ago.

Mrs. Derr is still active. Five generations of her family are living, and she declares she is as young as any of them.

"I was blessed with good teeth," she said, "and I always made it a point to chew my food well. A good stomach is the foundation of good health, and the stomach can not be good unless the teeth are good."

Congress to Lose Costly Stationery

Government Printer Is Ordered to Stop Use of Costly Material for Lawmakers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Members of Congress will draw no more costly embossed stationery at the expense of the Government. Hereafter they will get along with plain, every-day printed letterheads and envelopes.

The Joint Committee on Printing discovered that the Government Printing Office last year turned out 11,000,000 embossed pieces of stationery at an extra cost of $30,000. An order has been issued to the Government Printer to stop this extravagance.

On the Senate side of Congress this economy reform is resented, but it goes just the same. If Senators want stationery de luxe they must foot the bills out of their private purse.

INDIANS, 102 AND 97, WILL VISIT FAIR DIRECTORS

MONTROSE, COLO., July 19.—The board of directors of the Western Slope Fair Association decided to bring 50 Ute Indians from the reservation in Utah to Montrose during the fair in September. The Indians will include Chief McCook, 97, and his sister, Chippeta, 102, who is the widow of Chief Ouray.

Women Wear Bath Dresses Down Town

Startle Natives by Appearing in Ice Cream Parlor in Their Beach Attire.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Two buxon matrons and a miss about 19 years old created a sensation about dusk by walking through the streets of Warwood, north of this city, in bathing costumes. Unabashed by the attention they attracted, they entered an ice cream parlor, where they ordered ices, and after eating them walked to their homes.

The matter was brought to the attention of Town Marshal E. L. Pool, who immediately issued a warning that women appearing hereafter in such scant attire would subject themselves to arrest.

Naturalist Editor Has Forest Sanctum

Sets His Type in Shade of Hemlock and Lives in Wigwam all Winter.

WESTFIELD, MASS., July 19.—A unique editorial and printing plant is that known as "Seneca Wigwam, The Press in the Forest," located in the heart of the woods about three miles west of this place.

The sanctum is a typical Indian tepee, where the editor, Joseph C. Duport, an out-of-door enthusiast, prints, illustrates and publishes an original magazine called the Woronoco Valley Calumet.

In summer the editor sets his type in the shade of a hemlock, and in the winter or during inclement weather his work is done in the wigwam, which contains an up-to-date twentieth century printing press and equipment.

Policeman's Watch Stops Death Bullet

Hospital Steward Thinks Patrolman Burglar and Fires Six Shots at His Heart.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 19.—A watch in his vest pocket stopped a bullet which otherwise probably would have pierced the heart of Patrolman O'Hara last night. The shot was one of six fired by Roscoe Gray, steward of the Oakland College of Medicine, under the impression that O'Hara was a burglar. The other shots did not hit O'Hara. Gray nearly collapsed when he learned his mistake.

O'Hara was on his rounds when he noticed a door in the college building open. Trying to close it, he set off a burglar alarm and Gray opened fire in the dark.

Silver Wire Travels Through Two Arms

Metal Closes Wound on Left Wrist and Works Way to the Right Finger.

CHICO, CAL., July 19.—James Dupen, a Chico merchant, to-day submitted to an operation, in which a piece of silver wire, used in closing a wound on the left wrist in 1897, was extracted from the index finger of the right hand. The wire, which is one-half inch long, passed up one arm, across the chest and worked down the opposite arm, emerging at the finger.

Bee Sting on Neck Fatal to Farmer

Dies from Paralysis of Heart Fifteen Minutes After Insect Poison Enters System.

BRISTOL, PA., July 19.—John Pickering, a farmer of Woodbine, while engaged in his customary duties about the farm Saturday, was stung on the neck by a large bee and within fifteen minutes he was dead.

Dr. Heritage, of Langhorne, was summoned, but did not arrive in time to render aid. The doctor says death was the result of paralysis of the heart, caused by the bee sting.

FARMERS' UNION HOPE OF SOUTH, SAY ORGANIZERS IN GREAT GEORGIA CAMPAIGN

Charles S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee, Sweep Through the State With a Message to Planters to Check Enormous Crop Waste.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a flying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"The marvelous grandeur of the world's progress astounds and amazes us, yet the wonderful story would never have been written had it not been for the ever-faithful farmer.

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"When we became a nation the farmer owned 90 per cent of the wealth. In 1850 our national wealth was $7,000,000,000 and the farmer owned $4,000,000,000, or four-sevenths.

"In 1913 our national wealth is estimated at $131,000,000,000, and the farmer owns $26,000,000,000. Our farm property is valued at nearly $40,000,000,000, but $14,000,000,000 is owned by other classes than farmers.

"The above figures show that farmers are not holding their own, for if they had kept pace with other vocations since 1850 they would now own $75,000,000,000 worth of wealth instead of $26,000,000,000. Their lack of business methods and failure to match conditions have cost them $49,000,000,000. This would buy all the farm property in the United States and have enough left to buy a half interest in all the railroads.

"In a score of years the farmers of this country have produced $135,000,000,000 worth of farm products, or enough to buy all the property in the United States. Yet this wonderful amount of wealth has not gone to the farmers. We have 10,000 men in this country who own an average of $10,000,000 each. And their combined wealth is $100,000,000,000. The other 99,990,000 people own $31,000,000,000. Of our 100,000,000, 60,000,000 are homeless.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The 12,000,000 farmers of this country are laboring under an indebtedness of $6,000,000,000. On this amount, counting commissions and renewal charges, they are paying an annual interest of 8 1-2 per cent, or $510,000,000, while the business men and manufacturers pay an average of 5 per cent interest, or $300,000,000, on $6,000,000,000. This $210,000,000 excess interest paid by the farmers would pay off our farm indebtedness in 25 years. Co-operative efforts and rural credits would right these wrongs. So, let us continue to discourage this present system until it has passed into history and is only remembered in the misty back yonder.

"Distribution being one of our greatest problems, our second declaration of purposes is to assist our members in buying and selling. The Federal Government has spent $100,000,000 in the last ten years, teaching us how to produce, and not a cent to teach us how to market.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

Expense Is Unavoidable.

"We all agree that there is an unavoidable expense in the distribution of farm products. But let us make what seems to us a reasonable division of the $13,000,000,000 consumers other than farmers pay for farm products each year.

Give the wholesaler and jobber $1,000,000,000, the transportation companies $1,000,000,000, the retailer $1,500,000,000; then throw in $500,000,000 for all possible misallowance, and we have $9,000,000,000, which is $3,000,000,000 more than the farmer gets. This amount falls into the waste basket of speculation.

"If it were divided between the producer and consumer it would clothe the naked, feed the hungry and educate the illiterate, instead of breeding millionaires, paupers, anarchists and suicides. If the Farmers' Union fills its mission, it will not be long until a less portion of the laborers' toll will be turned in at the toll gate of the palace and a great portion will find its way through the door of the cottage, and help to lift the humble tenement to the comfort, dignity and luxury of a home.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 250,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If properly handled, this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices; we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep his pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

THIS DRESS WAS TOO MUCH FOR PRIM RICHMOND.

THIS Picture shows Miss Flossie Brown in the split skirt which caused so much excitement in Richmond, Va., that the young lady was arrested, fined $25 and given twenty-four hours in which to leave town. The idea of the slit skirt did not appeal at all to the Virginians, but it has not been received with so much disfavor elsewhere, for Miss Brown, or Blossom Browning, as she prefers to be called, has been invited to wear it in Pittsburg and Baltimore.

Quarrel at License Desk Halts Wedding

Prospective Bride Objected to Way Her Fiance Spelled Name and Ceremony Was Called Off.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., July 19. A near-wedding was spoiled to-day when the bride-to-be and the bridegroom-to-be quarreled over the spelling of the latter's name. C. W. Clane, of Los Angeles, aged 44, and wearing diamonds as large as hickory nuts, accompanied by a woman about 35 years old, applied for a license.

He started to fill out the blank. "Spell it right, please; spell it Cline," whispered the woman, but Clane just kept on writing.

Again his prospective bride, speaking right out loud, said he was spelling his name wrongly. But still Clane paid no attention. Then, in tones of downright anger, she exclaimed, "You spell your name properly or there will be no wedding."

"Very well," answered the man, and he crumpled up the application blank and they left the office.

NATION FINALLY REFUSES BURR'S PENSION PLEA

United States Decides After 79 Years Just to File Request in National Museum.

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—After some delay—79 years, to be more or less exact—the United States Government has decided on a final action on Aaron Burr's application for a pension. The Government proposes to put the application in the National Museum. This is a patriotic and quite inexpensive method of disposing of a formal application for money.

Exhibited in a glass inclosed case in the museum, the papers may rest peacefully and indefinitely, telling future generations that in his last days Burr was considerably "hard-up." This is a fact not generally known. But if future generations happen to be observant they may notice that the papers show Uncle Sam to be a bit tardy in matters of pensions.

Papers Valuable Historically.

Historically, the papers are very valuable. They contain a letter written by George Washington to Aaron Burr, which even to-day—about 135 years after the letter was penned—is in a state of perfect preservation. Any student of values of historical relics can tell how much such a thing is worth. Officials at the National Museum declare the letter to be "invaluable."

The paper is a bit yellow but it is intact. The ink is a trifle faded, but can be read without difficulty even without the aid of glasses. And, furthermore, the letter reveals a bit of Washington's character more clearly than a volume of history. The missive shows how the general treated with his officers. Burr had written to Washington requesting leave of absence from military duty on account of ill health and suggesting that while off duty his pay may be discontinued.

Here is George Washington's reply to Burr:

Headquarters,
Frederick, 26th Oct., 1778.

"Dear Sir:

"I have your favor of the 24th. You, in my opinion, carry your ideas of delicacy too far when you propose to drop your pay while the recovery of your health necessarily requires your absence from the service. It is not customary, and it would be unjust. You therefore have leave to retire until your health is so far re-established as to enable you to do your duty.

"Be pleased to give the Colonel notice of this, that he may know where to call upon you should any unforeseen exigency require it.

"I am, dear sir,

"Your mo. obt. servt.,
"GEO. WASHINGTON.

"Lt. Col. Burr."

Burr's Final Appeal.

George Washington's letter is regarded as the most valuable paper among the sheaf composing Burr's application, but the application itself, Burr's formal appeal for a pension, has much historical worth because it is Burr's own record of his military service, written in 1834, just two years before his death, at the age of 80 years, in Port Richmond, Staten Island, N. Y. The papers contain no mention of Burr's famous duel with Alexander Hamilton, in which Hamilton was mortally wounded.

Burr even failed to mention in the papers that he had been Vice President of the United States, and reference to the fact that he was arrested and tried for treason for attempting to form a republic west of the Mississippi is also omitted. In the application it is recited, however, that Burr was unable to appear in court to swear to the facts by reason of "bodily infirmity."

CONVICTS OFFERED PARDON IF THEY WILL PICK BERRIES

GEORGETOWN, DEL., July 19.—Full and complete pardons await even the prisoners in Sussex County if they will pick strawberries or work on the farms.

The scarcity of labor has become a serious problem to the farmers this year, and so serious has the question become that many of them have notified committing magistrates that they will pay all fines for intoxicated and disorderly persons if it can be arranged that these people pick berries.

CHANGS, ON WAY HOME, CLING TO YANKEE FRILLS

Wife and Children of Chinese Minister Sail Derssed in Latest American Fashions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—After more than three years in Washington with her husband, Minister Chang, Mme. Chang is returning to the Orient. She is accompanied by two daughters, a son, Henry K. Chang; a little daughter-in-law and a tiny grandchild. During her residence in America Mme. Chang has changed her ideas about many things, and about others she maintains the old Chinese beliefs.

The two young daughters, Miss Alice and Miss Lillie Chang, have been attending school in Washington for two years, and with the progress of their education have abandoned their picturesque nature clothes for American garb.

Whether they will adopt the clothes of their native country on their return remains to be seen. Miss Alice Chang, who spoke for the party at the St. Francis before they sailed on the Manchuria, said:

"It all depends on what is in fashion in China.

Favor American Fashions.

"If we find American clothes fashionable out there, we shall wear them. We adopted them when we entered Gunnison Hall, our Washington school. These are more convenient when traveling," she added, pointing to a pale blue silk crepe costume with the latest frills and furbelows. "When we wear our other clothes, people stare so, and sometimes they laugh. They aren't used to them in Washington."

The question of recent changes in China is of especial interest to Mme. Chang and her daughters.

The idea that women may vote in China and that the door of opportunity is opening for them daily there has caused the Chinese women to be thoughtful.

"I don't know about this voting," said Mme. Chang, through her daughter. "I don't believe very much in it."

"Only for some women," broke in one daughter.

Education Qualification.

"I would make an educational qualification," said Miss Lillie. "Not every woman ought to vote."

"Home is the place for women," said Mme. Chang, true to her country's traditions and centuries of training. "A woman ought to do housekeeping, to stay at home and to have children."

Mme. Chang and the daughters are opposed to the Western idea of a woman earning her own living. They believe she should want to stay at home to be cared for, even if she has to do without some of the extras which her own money can secure.

"Women in China probably never will reach that stage," said Mme. Chang. "There will be fewer opportunities for them to enter professional and business fields."

College is a goal which is being aspired to by the two daughters, although they are not sure yet what particular lines they want to pursue. "We can go if we want to, you know," said Miss Alice. "Our people believe in college for girls if they want it."

Surgeon Rebuilding Man's Entire Face

Ears and Nose Burned Months Ago Are Being Replaced by Series of Operations.

GRAHAM, MO., July 19.—Pierce Fleming, who lives near Graham, is undergoing one of the most remarkable series of operations ever attempted in Missouri. His face is being built anew.

Several months ago the Fleming home was burned and Pierce was severely burned about the head. For a time it was thought he could not live. He finally recovered, but his ears and nose were badly scarred.

A Kansas City surgeon was consulted and he began the work of rebuilding the face of the burned man. The ears have been completely rebuilt and the doctor is now working on the nose and the eyes. It is barely possible now to discern the difference between the new nose and ears of Fleming and the ones he lost in the fire.

High Ad Standard Urged by Maxwell

M. C. MAXWELL

M. C. Maxwell, for seven years sales and advertising manager for several of the different stores operated by the Rhodes Syndicate, is now with the Rhodes-Wood Furniture Company, Whitehall and Mitchell streets, the Atlanta store.

Mr. Maxwell is one of the best advertising men in the furniture business, and his thorough knowledge of this line of work and his courtesy to customers have always made him a popular salesman. He is a firm believer in the standard of advertising as outlined in the Baltimore convention by the Associated Advertising Clubs of America and he believes the time is near when fraudulent advertisers and those who make misstatements in their advertising will not be tolerated.

Mr. Maxwell was president of the Charleston Ad Club for two years, and his capable and earnest administration contributed considerably toward making it one of the leading ad clubs of the South.

He has placed his application for membership in the Atlanta Ad Men's Club and has enrolled as a charter member of the "500,000-by-1920-Club" launched by The Georgian.

He has many friends who predict that his success in other cities will be duplicated in Atlanta and even increased.

WOMAN JURORS SCORN STYLE OF SMART LAWYER

Beau Brummel Clothes and Bachelor Button of Barrister Fail to Win His Cause.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Personal pulchritude and unusually smart habiliments, heightened by a bachelor's button and an ingratiating manner, failed to win for Assistant District Attorney Maxwell McNutt, in his appeal to the jury of women which tried Mrs. Bertha J. Williams on an extortion charge to-day. After deliberating one hour and 55 minutes, the jury, the first in the history of the world composed of women to hear a felony case, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

"Of course she said she did what she did, but we didn't think when she said she did it, she meant she had meant to do it," said one of the jurywomen.

Hence, Mrs. Williams, attired in a fetching Milan hat and a neat white serge tailored suit, much scrutinized by the jurywomen, made discreet osculatory advances to her benefactors, and the incident was closed.

Mrs. Annette Robinson, also armored in attractive feminine fixings, was the complaining witness in the case. She accused Mrs. Williams of having written her a letter April 8, attempting to extort $150 in return for the delivery of a trunk said to have contained certain evidence which, according to the letter, would have embarrassed Mrs. Robinson, had it fallen into the hands of the police.

Meows from Limb of Tree to Voice Love

Chicago Romeo Tries Novel Method of Wooing, but Falls Into Clutches of Law.

CHICAGO, July 19.—John Wadjinski's method of love-making goes back to the days when anthropoid Romeos used to hang by their tails and carol love songs all night long. He put his theories into practice on the night of May 3. To-day he was fined $5 and costs by Judge Sabath, who could find no sympathy for the unconventional wooing.

Sophia Emmerling had retired for the night. John Wadjinski strode through the night with caveman emotions stirring in his breast. He entered the Emmerling yard and climbed a tree. He straddled a branch opposite Sophia's window and began to "meow" like a cat. To the girl thus rudely awakened he made love in a voice that could be heard for a block.

Mrs. Anna Emmerling, the girl's mother, called the police. Wadjinski was yanked from romance to the jail.

MYSTERY MAN'S NAME TO STAY SECRET ALWAYS

Operation on Brain Fails to Reveal Identity of "J. C. R." Has Baffled Surgeons.

ROCHESTER, MINN., July 19.—That "J. C. R.," the mystery patient in the Rochester State Hospital, will never know who he is nor will the world, unless friends of olden days come to the rescue, and that he will never again speak, is the verdict of the surgeons, following a remarkable operation performed upon the brain.

"It is problematical that the operation will accomplish its purpose," said C. C. Heyerdale, first assistant superintendent of the State Hospital, after leaving the operating room.

The opening of the skull revealed a large area of degenerated brain cells covering the centers of speech and memory, and an unusually large cyst containing fluid was removed. This would indicate that in times past "J. C. R." probably suffered a hemorrhage of the brain, which could have been the result of a stroke of apoplexy or an injury inflicted upon the skull or brain. The unusually large area of degeneration discourages any hope that the memory will ever be restored or speech recovered.

Gets Blow Intended For His Twin Brother

Chicago Youth Struck When Angry Swain Avenges Pleasantry His Duplicate Was Guilty Of.

CHICAGO, July 19.—William and Otto Andler, of 3751 North Whipple Street, are twins. William passed a pleasantry about a lass who was going her way with one William Dieverkorn.

Sudden anger surged through Dieverkorn, but he held himself in check and escorted the young woman home. Then he came back, met Andler on the street an gave him a jarring wallop.

Andler soon discovered that the blow was meant for his brother and that Dieverkorn got mixed in the delivery of the goods.

Otto Andler refused to rest on this explanation. He caused the arrest of Dieverkorn, and it came out in court how William got the laugh, Otto got the punch and Dieverkorn got the hook.

Judge Sabith inspected the twins, said he couldn't see any difference and dismissed the case, warning Dieverkorn to be more discriminating in the future.

Human Chain Saves Man on Niagara Brink

Four Men Take Desperate Chance in Rescue Work at Edge of Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 19.—Truman Chapman, aged 22, of Hamilton, Ont., is alive to-day after falling into the Niagara River and being rescued at the very brink of the American Falls. Four men formed a human chain, and, by taking a desperate chance, saved Chapman when his body providentially lodged between projections of rocks.

Chapman, who is subject to fits, was leaning against a railing at Prospect Point, directly over the water's edge, when he fell in. The current from this point to the brink of the falls is irresistible, but the unconscious body struck the rocks just right to be held temporarily. John Hughes, T. S. Winders, T. D. Thomas and an unidentified man were the heroes.

Advises Wives to Keep Their Secrets

Head of National Homestead Association Says It's a Mistake for Husbands to Know Too Much.

BOSTON, July 19.—"The wise wife never tells her husband all her secrets. She knows better than to run the chance of losing her independence."

So declared Mrs. Charlotte Smith, head of the National Homestead Association, to-day. The association is studying to find out what makes happy homes. It has learned that if a wife tells her husband everything it is a lesson to him not to tell her his secrets.

"Many divorces are occasioned by married couples knowing too much of each other," declared Mrs. Smith.

Aged Sisters Make White House Carpets

Old Women, Expert Dyers and Weavers, Are Preparing to Decorate Mrs. Wilson's Room.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 19.—Miss Caroline McHargue and Mrs. Martha Walker, of Elkin, aged 74 and 76, respectively, are engaged in preparing carpets, druggets and portieres to furnish the room of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the White House at Washington. They are experts in the blending of colors.

The two aged women are sisters. They live together and are expert dyers and weavers, using the old-time barks and herbs in the dyeing process, and the old-fashioned hand loom cards and spinning wheel.

Cartridge Placed on Track Shoots Youth

Boy May Die from Bullet Which Penetrated Lungs as Result of Belated Celebration.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—A delayed Fourth of July celebration on the part of small boys yesterday may result fatally for 8-year-old Francis Wright, who received a bullet in the chest at Twenty-fourth and Bryant streets. In company with his chums, he had been placing cartridges on the car tracks. One of them exploding, sent a bullet whizzing at him. He was taken to the Mission Emergency Hospital, where it was found that the bullet had penetrated the lung. ATLANTA INVITES COMPETITION

¶ In no uncertain terms we want to correct any impression that may have arisen out of a recent publication about the City Council requiring a license tax upon visiting salesmen selling to the consumer.

¶ This matter has never come up in any meeting of our association. In fact, our members are believers in an open market; all of them sell their goods in the open markets of the world, and visiting merchants can rest assured that we desire them to have every opportunity to compare prices and values with any and all competition.

DORSEY FIGHTS MOVEMENT TO INDICT CONLEY

Solicitor Is Bombarded With Letters to Proceed Against Negro as Slayer of Mary Phagan.

THE GRAND JURY IS CALLED

Hottest Battle of Famous Case To Be Waged Behind Closed Doors of Inquisitory Body.

Solicitor Dorsey is fighting vigorously the movement in the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley Monday for the murder of Mary Phagan, despite the bambardment of letters from many citizens and by the sentiment of some of its own members.

It is for the consideration of these letters and petitions, asking the reopening of the Phagan matter, that the meeting has been called.

It was in the face of Solicitor Dorsey's bitterest opposition that the meeting was called at all. Foreman Beattie issued his defi after a previous Grand Jury had been defeated in its efforts to reopen the case with a view of indicting Jim Conley and after Dorsey explicitly had expressed his strongest disapproval of such a move.

Crucial Battle Coming.

With the first skirmish won by those in favor of the indictment of Conley, the hottest battle is yet to be waged behind the closed doors of the jury room. The question first will be on whether the grand jurors consider it proper at this time to reopen the investigation whose first chapter resulted in the indictment of Leo M. Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan. Solicitor Dorsey will lay before the body for the first time all of his reasons for desiring a postponement of all further investigation until after the trial of Frank.

Should the Solicitor be driven back from this position by the Grand Jury again disregarding his wishes and taking up the investigation, he will be forced to take refuge in the last ditch and make his fight against the indictment of Conley.

With all the weight of evidence which has piled up against the negro, it is regarded as beyond the realm of possibilities that he could persuade the jurors to return a "no bill" against Conley on the charge of murder. Dorsey's one remaining hope at this time would be, it is said, to induce the Grand Jury to waive definite action until after the trial of Frank, when it will be in a position to say whether an indictment shall be drawn against Conley as an accessory after the fact, to which he has confessed, or as the actual murderer.

Dorsey Refuse sto Comply.

The Solicitor's attitude in the matter plainly was shown by his statement when Foreman Beattie went to him Friday seeking to have him call the meeting. Dorsey flatly refused and said:

"The meeting's only purpose will be to exploit the evidence and embarrass the State, and I hope the Grand Jury when it meets will decide to leave the matter alone.

"The indictment of Conley at this time will be a useless procedure that will not stop the trial of Frank. It will only have a mild but undesirable effect on the State's case.

"Conley is in jail and is going to stay there for some time. He is where the authorities can put their hands on him, and he can be indicted much more properly after the Frank case has been disposed of than before, and by the delay there is no danger of a miscarriage of justice."

The Solicitor's position is attacked as palpably unfair by those who have been working to bring about the indictment of the negro. Dorsey would have the testimony of the negro accredited as that of any free and trustworthy citizen, while those opposing him declare it should be taken in the light of that of a possible murderer who is endeavoring to shift the blame on another's shoulders, they say.

Evidence More Direct.

They add that the evidence against Conley is far more direct and damning than any ever brought against Frank. They charge, on this account, that Conley has been protected and "coddled" when he should have been placed on the same basis as the other suspect in the case and should go before the jury in that aspect.

General denials were entered Saturday to the story published Friday that the Pinkertons had changed their attitude in the murder mystery and were convinced of the innocence of Frank. Chief of Detectives Lanford declared that Harry Scott had reaffirmed his belief in the guilt of Frank and the innocence of Conley, except as accessory after the fact.

Atlanta Day To Be Society Event

Knoxville Exposition Plans Feature

Mrs. Van Deventer, Daughter of Mr. Justice Lurton, to Visit City for Conservation Fair.

Atlanta Day at the National Conservation Exposition in Knoxville this fall will be one of the largest of the many special days arranged for the national fair in the East Tennessee city.

Atlanta Day, according to plans now on foot, will be largely a society function, for the members of the Woman's Department of the exposition headed by Mrs. Horace VanDeventer, a daughter of Justice Lurton of the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as Knoxville's acknowledged society leader, expect to formulate their plans so that many of Atlanta society folk will make the trip to Knoxville for that day.

In addition it is planned to make Atlanta Day at the exposition one of peculiar and intimate interest to all residents of the city.

Mrs. VanDeventer to Come Here.

The plans for this special day are now in the making. They will be matured probably while the delegation of Knoxville business men is in Atlanta next week, and later when Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers in the woman's department come to the Georgia metropolis to take up the matter with Atlanta society folk.

In the preparations for what undoubtedly will be the South's greatest exposition, the woman's department is playing no small part. In Knoxville the exposition management considers itself fortunate that Mrs. VanDeventer consented to take the direction of the woman's work. She has a very large circle of friends and acquaintancse throughout the country, in cities of the North as well as in cities of the South, and what is more, she has succeeded in interesting large numbers of society women in the work she has under way.

Miss Mabel Boardman, president of the American Red Cross Society and a woman who finds time in the multitude of her various philanthropic work to devote herself to society, will be the guest of the woman's department of the exposition on September 19. Miss Boardman to accept this invitation will be obliged to cut short her vacation, but she has gladly consented to do this rather than miss going to Knoxville. She will be made the recipient of many social favors and attentions while in Knoxville. She will be the house guest of Mrs VanDeventer.

Mrs. Hammond Interested.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, of Washington, wife of the multimillionaire mining engineer, who was the special Ambassador from the United States to England at the time of the coronation of King George, is another society woman who has become interested in the Knoxville show and who will come to that city for one of the special days. Mrs. Hammond is president of the National Civic Federation, which will have an extensive exhibit at the Exposition.

Mrs. John Goelet, of Washington; Miss Mabel Wetmore and other women whose names are known the country over will also be guests of the woman's department while the Exposition gates are open. Recently Mrs. Van Deventer made a trip to Nashville to interest the women of that city. On very short notice a meeting was called. Two hundred or more Nashville women went to that meeting. A number of men went also. There was much enthusiasm shown. The result was that plans were completed then and there for a Nashville Day.

More than that—the Nashville Park Commissioners, under whose auspices a splendid exhibit of paintings is being shown in the Parthenon of that city, voluntarily and as a compliment to Mrs. VanDeventer decided to continue the exhibition almost to the time set for the opening of the Conservation Exposition. Then the exhibits will be moved to Knoxville. One of them will be shown in the Art Building; the other, which is the celebrated collection owned by Charles L. Freer, a millionaire art collector, of Detroit, will be placed in the Woman's Building.

Mrs. Denney Also Active.

Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers, among them Mrs. George W. Denney, fourth vice president, who is also the president of the Tennessee State Federation of Women's Clubs and very active in the club life of Knoxville and Tennessee, are planning now to come to Atlanta within a short time to talk matters over with Atlanta women. Just when Mrs. VanDeventer and Mrs. Denney will come or where the meeting will be held has not been decided.

The fact that Atlanta business men are showing a keener interest in the exposition—which is one designed to benefit the entire South—than they have heretofore, and the chances that Atlanta will be well represented at the exposition, is counted upon to assist the women.

The woman's department has planned its work along broad lines. The stereotyped exhibits that always have been a part of women's departments in other expositions will have no place in the Woman's Building at Knoxville. The idea behind the National Conservation Exposition is one of conservation, and these women have figured it out that there is probably nothing that needs conserving more than the energies and the health of women all over this broad land.

So that is what the exhibits in the woman's department will typify to a very large extent. Of course, the things that have a peculiar interest and attraction to women will not be overlooked.

ARTIFICIAL RAIN INSTALLED ON ATLANTA FARM

Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown Protect Crops With Pipe System.

"These dry nights, when my crops are burning up, I can smell that artificial rain a mile off," said a farmer in the suburbs of Atlanta.

The "artificial rain" of which he spoke is produced on three "fancy" farms within a short distance of Five Points, and, according to the unanimous verdict of Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown, who own "overhead irrigation" plants, it means salvation in dry years.

Stories are told of the wonderful crops these farmers grow—two yields of Irish potatoes a year, for instance, from 200 to 300 bushels an acre—six cuttings of alfalfa, crops of beans when the market is bare and beans are worth $2 a bushel.

Yet the system is simple enough.

Pipes Supply Rain.

On posts eight feet high rest pipes about two inches in diameter. These pipes run the whole length of the fields, and the lines of pipe are twenty feet apart. About two feet apart in the pipes are tiny holes. A gasoline engine, a pump which it operates, an abundant supply of water, and the thing is done.

Six hours each evening, when there is no rain, the pump is run and fine streams of water spurt from the holes in the pipes. At high pressure, these streams are thrown almost from one line of pipe to the next. Handles at convenient intervals make it possible to turn the pipes so that the streams are deflected in any direction and the ground thoroughly soaked with the spray.

This system excels ditch irrigation for Georgia soil for the reason that Georgia clay does not soak up water from a ditch in sufficient quantities. Besides, the soil cakes when water is applied in this way. "Artificial rain," however, coming down like a mist, permeates the whole soil and brings results.

Of course, an overhead pipe system is expensive. The cost is estimated at $250 per acre. This might be reduced somewhat if the farmer performed all the labor himself, or it might easily cost more if conditions were not entirely favorable. The increased yield, however, more than overbalances this initial outlay.

Loring Brown tells of getting an $1,100 crop of Irish potatoes from an acre, under his pipe system. In reality, there were two crops, a spring planting and a fall planting, and the potatoes brought a high price because they were sold for seed.

Fail to Realize Work.

"I have only one objection to seeing Belmont farm described in the newspapers," said Mr. Brown, as he sat in a swing on his front gallery and sorted a thick packet of letters. "My objection is that people read of big yields and good profits, then are anxious to try the same methods. They want to spend a lot of money to emulate Belmont, and fail to take account of the hard work that must go with it.

"A farmer, whether he has a fancy farm or one of the old-fashioned kind, must work eighteen hours a day. He must be on the job 365 days a year. That is what many people forget.

Five years ago, drouth killed the entire crop of potatoes on Belmont. Mr. Brown estimates that dry season cost him $3,000. That winter he went to Greeley, Colo., where overhead irrigation is in use, to see if he could work out a solution of the problem—some sort of insurance against drouth. The pipe lines were the answer. Farms around Atlanta can not grow the same yields produced around Greeley, but the difference in price caused by being closer to a good market overcomes the lesser yield, and more.

Zimmer Installs System.

Mr. Zimmer, on his Kimballville Farm, installed an identical system, though on a smaller scale, and since he installed it, never has had occasion to use it. By some streak of fate, his farm has been blessed with abundant rains.

But rain is freakish in choosing its itinerary. In Atlanta itself and out as far as the Chattahoochee River rains have been sufficient this year. But beyond the river there is serious drouth. Crops are drying up. Irrigation would have been the salvation of the farmers.

And as they sit in front of their homes at night, they can smell the sweet odor of refreshed fields at Belmont—"that darn artificial rain."

WIVES CREDITED WITH KEEPING HUSBANDS ALIVE

Medical Association Finds That Benedict's Regular Existence Is Better Than Bachelor's.

Supervision by wives as a possible reason for the greater longevity of married men than of bachelors is discussed by The Journal of the American Medical Association in its editorial section of the recently published statistics on this point. There is no remark on the statistics of more suicides among married men than bachelors.

The Journal has further information indicating that careful as the married men may be, with restraint once removed through the death or divorce of the wife, widowers and grass widowers leap into indiscretions and are lopped off more rapidly than either those still in the state or those who escaped matrimony.

Live Regular Lives.

"Undoubtedly the low death rate among married men is partly due to the fact that, as a rule, those who are in good health, are readier to marry, while those with more delicate health, especially if suffering from any definite ailment, are not willing to assume the burden and responsibility of a family," says The Journal. "Another factor is that married men live much more regular lives as a rule, and consequently avoid many of the dangers of irregular living.

"This view would seem to be corroborated by the statistics as to the mortality among married men who have lost their wives either by death or divorce. The death rate among these "unmarried men" is considerably higher than that of husbands of the same age, and even as a rule it is higher than that of the bachelors of the same age.

Widowers Die Fast.

"The death rate, for instance, of widowers and divorced men between 20 and 30 is nearly double that of single men. From 30 to 40 it is only 14.1 to 12.9, while from 40 to 50 the mortality of divorced and widowers is slightly less than that of single men of the same age. From 50 to 60, however, it is slightly higher once more.

"At all these ages the mortality rate among widowers and the divorced is at least nearly and sometimes double that of married men of the same age."

Feeds Her Pet Pig With a Silver Spoon

Denver Society Woman Provides Bed of Down and Linen for Her Porcine Possession.

DENVER, July 19.—Mrs. Whitney Newton, a Denver society matron, has a new pet.

Young Robert Newton came home a few evenings ago and brought a baby pig with him.

Mrs. Newton took the squirming animal into her arms and tried to make it comfortable, but without success. Finally, in desperation, she went to the linen closet, took out a fine piece of hemstitched linen, embroidered with blue flowers, wrapped it gently about the slick little pig, then laid him cautiously upon the downy pillows beside her own.

Piggy gave a satisfied little squeak, doubled up his feet and went off to sleep happily.

This cunning act won Mrs. Newton's heart, and from exasperation she developed a positive liking for her pet. His white skin is washed, combed and perfumed and he sleeps in a downy bed every night beside his mistress. He also eats from a silver spoon.

EXPRESS CLAIM OFFICES TO BE CONSOLIDATED

Savannah To Be Headquarters of Florida, Georgia and Southeastern Divisions of Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Consolidated claim offices of three divisions of the Southern Express Company will be located in Savannah after August 1, in pursuance of an order promulgated from the general headquarters of the concern several days ago, official notice of which has just been received here. Simultaneously general claim offices will be opened in Richmond and Chattanooga.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Whether the Park Extension will be converted into a model playground and athletic park has not been finally determined. The Savannah Volunteer Guards and the Georgia Hussars, the two military organizations which have not yet given their consent and approval to the plan, have not taken action in regard to the matter.

No special meeting of the Hussars has been held, owing to the absence from the city of Captain Frank P. McIntyre. The Guards have discussed the matter, but owing to the fact that no definite proposition has been put up to them, they have neither approved nor disapproved the plan.

The extension is under the control of the military and the city jointly, and has been set aside as a drill ground.

Temptations of Men Drive Girl to Poison

Statesboro Girl Takes Iodine In Front of Casino at Thunderbolt—Act Long Contemplated.

SAVANNAH, GA., July 19.—Driven to desperation by temptations put in her path by men is the reason given by Miss Tynie Boylston, 18 years old, for her attempted suicide by drinking iodine on the grounds in front of the Casino, Thunderbolt, several nights ago. The girl is now entirely recovered and repentant. Letters left by the girl, who came here recently from Statesboro, indicate that she contemplated the deed for days before the actual attempt was made.

EARLY REPORT WANTED ON SAVANNAH AFFAIRS

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Mayor Richard J. Davant has written to the general office in New Orleans, of the auditing company which recently checked up the books and affairs of the city government in Savannah, requesting that a full and complete report on the result of these investigations be rendered at the earliest possible moment. The Mayor thinks that the matter of installing a new system to keep track of the affairs of the municipal government has been hanging fire long enough.

Savannah to Ask Civil Service Law

Police and Fire Departments To Be Put Under Regulations—Efficiency Tests Are Planned.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Alderman George B. Elton's civil service bill will be introduced in the Legislature during the present session.

The special committee appointed by the Mayor to investigate the civil service regulations in other cities has completed its work and recommended the introduction of the bill at the present session. The measure will be immediately advertised for the specified period.

If the bill passes, the Mayor will be authorized to appoint a special committee of three, to be known as the Civil Service Commisson, this commission to have entire charge of the administration of the civil service law in the city. The bill provides that the police and fire departments be placed under civil service, the idea being to divorce these departments from politics.

The bill provides for efficiency tests for the members of the police and fire departments. The selection of appointees will be governed by their moral, mental and physical fitness, and their tenure of office will not depend on the vagaries of politics. They would not be subject to removal unless it were proved that they had been guilty of misconduct or that they were otherwise unfit for their positions.

Whether the bill will pass the Legislature is a question. Its passage will be determined largely by the attitude of the Chatham County Representatives toward it. If a majority of the legislators from this county agree it is a good measure, it probably will go through, but if there is a difference of opinion among the legislators, its defeat is pretty well assured.

LIARS' CONTEST ENDS IN TIE, ANOTHER IS TO BE HELD

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Because three well-known citizens tied for first place in the liars' convention just held in Waycross, it has been decided to hold a second convention to break the tie. The Moose Club is responsible for the inauguration of the novel convention and has decided to present an additional prize to the winner in the next.

City Officials Will Take Turn as Mayor

Savannah Executive Now Plans Regular Daily Period for Conferring With City Employees.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Hereafter city officials will be shown no favoritism when they call on Mayor Richard J. Davant on city business. They will have to take their chances along with everybody else. If one of the humblest citizens happens to get into the Mayor's reception room first the city official will have to wait his turn.

Mayor Davant has given his secretary instructions to this effect, and they will have to stand until a system of office hours which the Mayor has in mind can be put into effect.

It is the Mayor's plan to set aside a certain hour each day for interviews with city officials on city business. This hour will be made known to the people, and callers other than city officials will not be allowed to see the Mayor during that period. Another hour—or two, if necessary—will be set aside for the public.

At present there is no system of this sort at the City Hall, and the callers see the Mayor whenever their time comes. Heretofore city officials have been given precedence over all others irrespective of the time they arrived or how many people are ahead of them.

It has been the case that a city official was admitted to the Mayor the moment he arrived at the office, no matter if a dozen or so people had been waiting for some time for an interview.

JURY BELIEVES BULLARD TO BE SPAIN'S SLAYER

Investigation of Death of Eccentric and Wealthy Farmer Ends in Coroner's Verdict.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—The Clinch County Coroner's Jury investigating the mysterious murder of Mack Spain, an eccentric and wealthy farmer, has returned a verdict accusing Tom Bullard, a white man just entering the twenties.

Bullard is the man who found Spain's body, or rather informed searchers of the place where the body could be found. His part in the search for the body is one thing that has turned suspicion to him, as it is alleged he told members of the searching party Spain's body was on the edge of a pond and could be seen easily. When found the body was in a location that made it impossible for any one to see it from the place Bullard said he was when he first discovered the farmer's remains.

At least one more white man, and officers are inclined to believe a third, may become implicated. Bullard has steadfastly refused to make any statement beyond saying that he knows nothing of how Spain was killed.

Another arrest may be made within a few days. Both men suspected of knowing something of the death and the robbery have been found and it is declared will not be able to get away. Sheriff Lee, of Clinch, has been in Waycross working on a clew that he found near Spain's home and this, it is said, will fix the responsibility for the murder beyond any doubt. No one has been able to ascertain how much was taken from Spain, nor where it was put. Bullard has told officers nothing that will aid them in this respect.

Every door and window will be double locked and barred and rigged with wires in such way that if one is touched an alarm will be sounded.

FARM UNION TO UNITE FORCES WITH TOILERS

Federation of Labor and Agricultural Organization to Co-operate Closely if Plans Mature.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Plans that are expected to aid the proposed consolidation of work of the American Federation of Labor and the Farmers' Union were discussed at length in Waycross to-day when a joint committee representing the trade unionists and the Ware County Farmers' Union held a conference.

S. B. Marks, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, and Robert Fechner, secretary, attended, as did President James Cowart, of the Ware County Farmers' Union.

It is not proposed that the National Farmers' Union and the American Federation of Labor shall affiliate and become one big organization. The movement seeks only a unity of purpose—close co-operation for mutual welfare.

Following the conference it was announced that a joint meeting of the State executive committees of the Farmers' Union and the Georgia Federation of Labor would be called. When this is done it is expected that the national organizations will adopt a similar plan for use in the entire country.

Worth $250,000 Now, Still 'Bucks' Wood

E. G. Kastenhuber's Only New Plans Are to Widen Scope of His Laboratory Work.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Finding himself in possession of cash and property worth a quarter of a million dollars has not caused Edwin G. Kastenhuber to change his way of living. If anything, he is working harder now than before. He can be found any morning just at daylight out in his backyard cutting wood. That's his first morning work at home and he refers to it as his "exercise."

Plans for more extensive laboratory work have been made by Mr. Kastenhuber and with the means at hand to carry them out, he expects in a short while to demonstrate some valuable formulae. One of his successes is a mixture of ordinary South Georgia sand with chemicals, forming a hard tile, colored in any way desired. Fancy bricks made by him have withstood all kinds of tests.

Discussing the new turn of events, Mr. Kastenhuber says he does not feel any different since getting $250,000.

"In my new laboratory I will have fitted up special quarters for students and will have a department open to the medical profession. The best time I can have is when I am working, and I am certainly not going to start loafing just because I am well fixed," he said.

Storm Does Damage In Moultrie Section

Naval Stores Operators and Farmers Suffer Loss From Wind, Rain and Hail.

MOULTRIE, July 19.—The terrific wind and electrical storm that swept over this section last night wrought considerable damage over a wide area.

At Omega, just north of here, several houses were unroofed, while three were blown to the ground, the inmates escaping death in a miraculous manner. Pine trees boxed for turpentine snapped in two and the loss to naval stores operators will amount to hundreds of dollars. In the eastern part of the county a torrential rain, accompanied by hail, devastated crops. In Moultrie lightning struck one house. The high wind blew over a church in the suburbs.

Girl Bride Sees Husband Convicted

R. L. English Is Found Guilty of Stealing Wire from Savannah Electric Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—With his pretty wife, not yet out of her teens, sitting in the courtroom, R. L. English has been tried and convicted in the City Court of the larceny of copper wire from the Savannah Electric Company. Mrs. English, hardly more than a girl, clad in a pink summer dress and wearing a big leghorn hat with a wreath of red roses, sat calmly through the trying ordeal. Mrs. English maintains that her husband is innocent of any intentional wrongdoing.

Indian Papoose Is Raised by Soldiers

Full-Blooded Modoc, Back at Old Home, Tells Romantic Story of Early Life.

KLAMATH FALLS, July 19.—Kit Carson, a full-blood Modoc, visited his native land a few days ago for the first time since his babyhood.

The story of the life of Carson is unique. In 1852 a detachment of Government troops was sent to the Klamath country to quiet reported uprisings among the Indians. A large band of Indians had established a village on the shore of the lake. When the Indians caught sight of the soldiers they made a hasty departure.

Kit Carson, who was then about a year old, was left behind by his frightened mother. It was difficult for the soldiers to determine what to do with the child. Finally a soldier named Woods asked that he be permitted to adopt the boy. He gave the little fellow the name of Kit Carson and found him a temporary home with a Spanish family at Yreka.

Police of Waycross For 'Slashed Skirt'

Men, Not Women, To Be Arrested If Latest Style Causes Too Much Excitement.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Wearers of the new style "slashed skirt" have nothing to fear in Waycross. The police will not arrest wearers of the new skirt, but will see that men do not let their curiosity make them obnoxious.

The first time a slashed skirt was seen here the wearer paraded up and down one of the city's main business streets and as long as she was on the street there was an unusual number of men found "strolling"—none of the strollers getting very far from the skirt. It is said that a number of women here have purchased the slashed skirts and after trying them on at home, have sewn up most of the slash or worn the skirt with a petticoat.

The first dress parade was held Saturday afternoon. The regimental dance was given on Saturday night, the Second Regiment Band furnishing the music. The boys turned out in force with their brass buttons, to the delight of the girls on the island. So far this has been the big event of the encampment. On Saturday the officer of the day was W. G. Fage, and officer of guard, J. J. West, both of Albany.

Dixon expressed gratification when the announcement was made that the club would not make an indorsement.

AUGUSTA SEEKS TO STRIP POLICE CHIEF OF POWER

War Is Declared Between Chairman of Board and Head of Law Enforcement Force.

AUGUSTA, July 19.—War has been declared between Chairman E. J. Lyon, of the Board of Police Commissioners, and Chief of Police George P. Elliott.

At a recent meeting of the board the statement was made by one of the members that Elliott had ignored and shown a contempt for Chairman Lyon and that during the administration of Chairman T. M. Philpot, Lyon's predecessor, the Chief had shown an utter contempt for him.

At that meeting a resolution was introduced to change the rule of the board which says the Chief shall take his orders from the board only and to make it read that the Chief shall take his orders from the board, and when the board is not in session, from the chairman.

Action was postponed because of the absence of the Chief.

Kept in Solitary Confinement.

The cause of the trouble covers a multitude of alleged deeds of commission and omission on the part of Elliott during the past three years. The straw that broke the camel's back, however, is recent.

The story is that the Chief had a white man arrested and locked up in a cell apart from anyone else, and ordered that no one be allowed to see him. One of the commissioners was interested in the prisoner and he visited the barracks and asked the lieutenant in charge to let him see him. The lieutenant replied that the Chief had issued orders for no one to see him and that the Chief had gone for the day. Efforts to communicate with the Chief were unsuccessful and, although the commissioner is said to have stormed and begged, the lieutenant was obdurate.

The commissioner then went to see Chairman Lyon and the latter returned to the barracks with him. Lyon is said to have ordered the lieutenant to allow the commissioner to see the prisoner in question and the chairman himself was then told that it would be impossible because the Chief's orders could not be disobeyed.

"The Chief is boss around here," one of the officers is reported to have told Chairman Lyon.

Would Take Away Authority.

The chairman and the commissioner went away boiling over with rage. They determined to have a reckoning day with Elliott and now he is to be stripped of his authority. His champion is the Mayor, who says that he is the best Chief Augusta ever had.

Chief Elliott has had a rather stormy career as Chief of Police. He first became head of the police department in January, 1910. He was a major of the Third Battalion, National Guard of Georgia, at the time and he endeavored to rule the police department along similar lines to the Georgia militia. He has had trouble from the start with the public and with his superior officers.

Farmers' Club of North Georgia Meet

Savannah Valley Association Now Comprises Ten Organizations and 700 Members.

AUGUSTA, July 19.—At Aiken, S. C., 2,000 people gathered Wednesday for the annual meeting of the Savannah Valley Associated Farmers' Clubs. It was the ninth annual meeting of the organization and was the most largely attended in its history.

A little over eight years ago four farmers' clubs of the Savannah Valley in the vicinity of Augusta met together and formed the Associated Farmers' Clubs with Dr. Joseph E. Greene, of this city, as president, and Dr. W. E. Mealing, of North Augusta, S. C., secretary and treasurer. These officers have been re-elected at every annual meeting held since that time and the organization has grown from four clubs to ten, and from a membership of 150 farmers to 700. With their families they represent about 4,000 people.

The organization is now composed of the following clubs: Richmond County Agricultural Society, Meriwether Farmers' Club, Schultz Hill Agricultural Club, Beech Island Club, Aiken County Club, Edgefield Agricultural Society, Clark's Hill Agricultural Club, Bennett Spring Agricultural Club, Myers' Hill Agricultural Society and the Ellenton Agricultural Club.

The farmers' clubs, both through the individual clubs and the Associated Clubs have revolutionized farming in this section of Georgia and South Carolina. Their slogan is "intensify and diversify."

PEACH SHIPPING NEARLY ENDED; 900 CARS SENT

MACON, July 19.—Local railroad men report that the peach movement from this part of the State practically is at an end. So far about 900 cars have been shipped, and it is not thought that the remainder of the crop will exceed 100 cars.

This is the smallest production in recent years, but the prices have been exceptionally good, and the cars have averaged $1,500 on the Northern markets. This makes the total income from the sale of peaches in this territory in excess of $1,250,000.

LAURENS CHURCHES HOLD BIG COUNTRY REVIVALS

Senator's Election Costly in Richmond

Expense Averaged 66 Cents Per Ballot, and Ranged From 27 Cents to $5.85.

AUGUSTA, July 19.—The election held last Tuesday for United States Senator was probably the most expensive ever held in Richmond County, for each vote cost the county an average of 66 cents. There was a total of 266 votes cast, and the cost of the election was $177.

Secretary J. M. Haynie, of the County Commission, has compiled some interesting figures on the subject. The cost ran from 27 cents per vote in the First Ward to $5.85 in the 1269th District. In the city the managers were paid $5 each and one of the managers was paid an extra $2 to bring the ballot box to the courthouse. In the country the managers were paid $3 each.

Their advice was that the cloudburst and hail did great damage to crops during its 30 minutes duration.

It is believed that the storm was local to Jeffersonville, no rain being reported at either Sandersville or Drybranch.

Conductor Fails to Pay Alimony; Jailed

Bondsman Surrenders J. C. Brooks, Who Has Figured in Bitter Marital Difficulties.

MACON, July 19.—J. C. Brooks, a conductor for the Central of Georgia Railroad, is in jail for contempt of court on account of his failure to pay his wife, Mrs. Evelyn Brooks, the alimony awarded to her by the court. Brooks was surrendered by his bondsman, W. L. Bazemore.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks' marital troubles have figured prominently in the courts here for several months. Brooks recently secured possession of his 19-month-old baby, which was taken from the mother and awarded to him by the Ordinary on a habeas corpus proceeding.

Mrs. Brooks then brought suit for divorce and alimony. The former is pending, but temporary alimony has already been awarded her in the sum of $60 cash, the payment of her attorneys' fees, $40 per month until the divorce case is heard, and the payment for an operation costing $250.

Crusaders to Have A Municipal Ticket

MACIN, July 19.—The next move on the program of the Law Enforcement League is to put out candidates for Mayor and Aldermen.

It is stated that the movement will crystallize just as soon as the administration party announces its candidates. Bridges Smith will be the candidate for Mayor for the administration, and six of the present Aldermen will be on his ticket.

A. L. Dasher, Alderman, will also have a ticket, and it will probably be announced within the next ten days. His candidacy for Mayor was made six months ago.

Strenuous Fight on To Close Saloons

Fate of Law Enforcement League's Crusade Lies in Injunctions Against Three Places.

MACON, July 19.—The Law Enforcement League has undertaken a campaign to close every saloon and locker club in Macon. The future policy of the league will depend entirely on the ultimate fate of the petitions for injunctions against three saloons which were filed in the Bibb Superior Court this week.

Forty-five of Macon's leading citizens are plaintiffs on the petitions. They have engaged competent counsel and announce that they propose to conduct a strenuous fight.

The proprietors of the three have been ordered to show cause on August 1 why they should not be permanently enjoined from operating.

SCORE FELLED BY HEAT; 105 IS MACON RECORD

Work Suspended as Unsurpassed Torrid Wave Withers City. Too Hot to Bathe.

MACON, July 19.—Although Macon has been the hottest city in the United States for two days, according to the reports of the United States Weather Bureau, with a minimum temperature of 86 and a maximum of 105, only one death has resulted from the heat.

However, nearly a score of prostrations are reported. D. G. Bolleaneau collapsed in front of the courthouse at 1 o'clock, and is now in a serious condition.

A negro convict was seized with a sunstroke late yesterday afternoon, and he died this morning, after great suffering. All of the other convicts were allowed to rest in the shade to-day, and those companies employing street gangs also suspended work.

The government's figures show that yesterday Louisville, Ky., and Thomasville, Ga., were tied with Macon, both having temperatures of 104. To-day, however, Macon went to 105.

The next highest temperature ever recorded in Macon was 102 degrees on July 23, 1907. Only four times before in the history of the local weather station has the temperature ever exceeded 100 degrees here.

Bathers were forced to leave the water at Lakeside Park to-day, as the water was too warm for comfort.

MILLER DENIES HE IS FIGHTING MEDICAL BILL

Representative, However, Declares Measure Should Be Recommitted and Amended.

MACON MEDICAL—2-7 Macon B D

MACON, July 19.—Representative Wallace Miller is opposed to certain features of the medical practice bill, one of the most important measures now pending in the Legislature, and for that reason he is the recipient of scores of letters and telegrams from physicians in Macon and other parts of the State. His position on the bill has also been somewhat misunderstood. On account of this fact, Mr. Miller desires to be sete right with the doctors and with the public.

"The impression has gone abroad," he states, "that I am opposed to the medical practice bill that the doctors of the State are so much interested in and that I have been actively fighting it on the floor of the House. The facts in the case are these:

"The Rules Committee, of which I am a member, has power to take up bills out of their order on the calendar and set them down as a special order on any named date. This, however, can not be done unless the report of the Rules Committee setting bills down as special orders is adopted by the House.

"A majority of the Rules Committee saw fit to set down the medical practice bill as a special order for Tuesday, July 22. This bill is No. 185 in the calendar, and under the rules of the House would not come up for passage until it was reached in its regular numerical order. I simply protested against this bill being set down ahead of all other bills in the calendar, and the House sustained me in my protest.

"I am in favor of the object sought by the doctors of the State, but think the bill should be recommitted and amended materially."

HEAT WAVE AT AUGUSTA LASTS MORE THAN MONTH

AUGUSTA, July 19.—Augusta is experiencing one of the most protracted spells of heat in its history. For the last 34 days the thermometer has gone above the 90 mark. Only on two occasions has it gone to 100. Augusta is not any hotter, however, than any other place in this section, and not so hot as many.

Augusta Crime Wave Stirs Citizens' Ire

Residences on Principal Streets Entered and Robbed—Negro Found in Home by Woman.

AUGUSTA, July 19.—There are more robberies in Augusta now than ever before in the history of the city. During the past few days residences on several of the principal streets have been entered. The police seem to be unable to cope with the situation.

The homes of W. J. Townsend, George F. Claussen and Dr. C. W. Crane, on the 1100 block of Greene street, were robbed of money, jewelry and other articles Thursday night. On the same night the home of Julian M. Smith, councilman from the Fifth Ward, at No. 1319 Fifteenth street, was entered by a negro. Mrs. Smith did not sleep that night with her wonted soundness and at 4 a. m. she heard a noise. She saw a negro standing just at the foot of her bed. She screamed and Mr. Smith rushed to her assistance, but the negro made his escape.

The Y. W. C. A. headquarters at Seventh and Reynolds streets was entered the same night by a negro who was frightened off before he was able to steal anything.

Brooks County Strip Would Be in Lowndes

Movement Started to Have Bill Introduced in Legislature to Have Transfer Made.

VALDOSTA, July 19.—A movement has been started here to transfer a strip of territory on the southern border of Brooks County to Lowndes County, and the Representatives in the Legislature will be asked to introduce a bill to that effect.

The territory affected lies along the Willacoochee River, remote from the county seat of Brooks County, and it is claimed that the people living in that section are anxious to be placed in Lowndes County.

The National Highway passes throug hthe stretch of territory, but it is understood that the County Commissioners of Brooks County have refused to maintain the highway or do any work whatever on it.

Business men in this city recently subscribed nearly $1,000 to be expended on the highway through the strip mentioned. Brooks County refused to do anything whatever toward building and maintaining the road.

Ensign Coleman has been in Macon for six years.

TRAVELING WATER WAGON IS PROVIDED FOR HORSES

BOSTON, July 19.—A traveling water cart from which horses may be refreshed has been placed in commission in Boston's streets by the S. P. C. A.

PROGRESS MADE ON AUGUSTA'S LEVEE BUILDING

Commissioner of Public Works to Confer With United States Engineer in Savannah.

AUGUSTA, July 19.—Rapid progress is being made on levee contracts, according to Nisbet Wingfield, Commissioner of Public Works.

Mr. Wingfield will go to Savannah within a short time to see Colonel Kingman, of the United States Corps of Engineers, in charge of the Savannah River, with reference to letting the contract for rip-rapping the banks up to the 25-foot contour from Fifth street to East Boundary.

It is estimated that $120,000 will be required to complete this work, $60,000 of which has been appropriated by the Federal Government and a similar amount by the city.

Bryan & Co. will soon complete the rip-rapping of the banks from Hawks Gully to Fifth street, and have completed all of this work, with the exception of that between Fifth and Sixth streets. This contract was let about two years ago, and during the first year little work was done, because the river was high the greater part of the time. Bryan & Co. were awarded it after a number of bids had been examined. The successful bidders' figures were $250,000.

Mr. Wingfield says that the Berry-Fortune Construction Company will complete the Hawks Gully gates by October 1, and that soon afterward a number of the other contracts will be finished.

A. J. Twiggs & Sons will probably complete the levee down to Hawks Gully by January 1, and by that time the gates at the King and Sibley mill tail races will have been completed.

Augusta will be protected from high water by some time in 1914, although it can not be stated definitely just what time it will be. Work has begun on building the pier for the additional span in the North Augusta bridge, the span itself being built in Roanoke, Va., by a large bridge concern. All of the obstacles in the way of the levee from Thirteenth street to Hawks Gully have been removed and splendid progress is being made all along the line.

The contracts already awarded amount to $600,000.

DEXTER BANKS TO MERGE WITH $25,000 CAPITAL

DUBLIN, July 19.—Two banks of Laurens County, located at Dexter, a few miles from Dublin, will consolidate as soon as the legal preliminaries can be arranged. The Dexter Banking Company and the Farmers' State Bank will merge under the name of the Dexter Banking Company, with a paid-in capital of $25,000. The president will probably be R. C. Hogan, while the cashier in all probability will be H. F. Maund.

TEMPERATURE AT DUBLIN GOES BEYOND 100 MARK

DUBLIN, July 19.—The hot weather of the week past has been felt keenly by the people of this city. Although there have been no prostrations from the heat, the Government station located here gave out the record for Thursday as 101, Friday being equally as hot. Unless rain comes soon the crops will suffer a great deal from the extreme heat.

MORE WHEAT NOW GROWN IN DUBLIN TERRITORY

HARD THICK CRUST COVERED BOY'S HEAD

Cracked with Least Pressure, Causing Discharge. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In One Week Entirely Cured.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my baby of an ulcerated sore behind her ear and now we think we cannot keep house without them." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Poss, Nov. 5, 1912.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Human System Poisons Itself

OtherwiseMost of UsWould Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Prominent Citizen Indorses NUXCARA

Mr. J. W. Brooks, traveling representative of The Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, says: "For two years I have carried in my grip a bottle of Nuxcara, and would not think of going out on the road without it. I consider it the most wonderful discovery in medicine. The number of people who suffer with indigestion and dyspepsia, the terrible distress they suffer, no one knows but those who have had experience with it. When one remedy after another fails, when digestive agents seem to aggravate it. In the face of all this, Nuxcara cures in every case—truly it is a wonderful remedy."

COLUMBUS MILL SCHOOL HELD AS MODEL BY U. S.

How Georgia City Is Caring for Cotton Factory Children Told in Government Pamphlet.

How Columbus is caring for the education of the boys and girls of its cotton mills is the story embodied in a pamphlet published by the United States Department of Education, copies of which were circulated in Atlanta yesterday.

How the boys and girls of the mills themselves work against going to school, rendering doubly hard the problem before the public, is a pitiful note of the story.

They call their school in Columbus the "dinner toters' school," because even during their school days they must work, taking hot lunches to their parents, brothers, sisters, and others who work in the mills.

Must Take Parents' Lunch.

The pamphlet tells of this custom, revealing something of the life of the cotton mill child. It says:

"The long intermission in the middle of the day is necessary that the children may take the lunches to the mills. Many of the mills are some distance from the school—some more than a mile away. Most of the children, therefore, walk more than two miles during the noon hour. Besides, they are compelled to wait 20 or 30 minutes for the operatives to eat their dinners before taking the baskets back.

"Some children earn several dollars each week by carrying such baskets to mill operatives. The price usually paid for taking lunch to one person for a week is 25 cents, and children often take lunches to several persons."

The booklet was prepared by Roland B. Daniel, and was published by the Department of Education as the description of an admirable system. It deals not only with the mill children, but with the boys and girls who are more fortunate, showing how the Columbus scheme of education is variable, being adapted to meet the demands that come with a mixed population so as to care alike for the two classes. P. P. Claxton, Federal Commissioner of Education, says in the foreword to the book:

"Columbus was one of the first of this country's cities to work out certain phases of this problem of adaptation."

The Columbus schools effect industrial training for all children, but a training varied according to the class from which the children come.

Call of Mills Strong.

The writer, Mr. Hill, laments the fact that "the call of the mills is strong."

"While the prescribed course for the mill children contemplates seven years, few continue after the fifth or sixth year," he wrote. "Not more than 1 per cent finish this school and pursue their studies further."

In all lines of work, academic and industrial, the aim of the school for mill operatives is to better living conditions a little among the people for whom it was organized. That is the only hope. In the beginning the advocates of this type of school thought that many of the mill children might be induced to continue in school and do more advanced work, especially along vocational lines. In this respect the school has been a disappointment to some.

"We are seldom able to induce pupils to finish even the limited course offered in this school," writes Mr. Daniel. "Our best hope is that we may better living conditions a little."

Toward the end, the school has been made a sort of social center. The school is in session the entire year around, and pupils are promoted quarterly, that the children will not drift away, as it is feared they would surely do in the case of a three months' vacation. Teachers do social work, visiting the sick, distributing certain charity, obtaining means of operation for the physically defective, arranging for social evenings, fostering organizations among the older people, and dealing in like activities.

Summing up the work of the school, the writer says:

"While this school has done good work and its benefits have been felt, we are sure the weakest point in it is not being able to hold the children long enough to receive its full benefits. An enforced attendance law would aid very materially in this respect."

Industrial Work Taught.

Along with "the three R's," the mill children are trained in industrial branches, being taught woodworking and gardening. The girls are given work in basket-making, sewing, cooking, poultry-raising and gardening.

In its scheme of adaptation, the city has an altogether different school for other children. The regular grade work is done, and in the traditional high school a year and a half of industrial work, manual training for the boys and domestic science for the girls, is given.

Another variation comes when the curriculum of the negro schools are worked out. There is industrial education for negroes in the public school, but different from that supplied the white children. The Columbus method is altogether one of adaptation.

The difference lies in the fact that the negroes receive more of the training, going into more branches of manual labor, and taking it throughout the school course. Almost every branch of work with the hands is offered them. Of this work the booklet says:

"Pupils who remain in the schools long enough to complete the course receive in compensation for their labor upon leaving school about twice what they would receive for unskilled labor such as they would be able to render without such training. It is often the case that one of these boys is able to earn $2 a day at the age of 17 when his father, without such preparation, receives $1.25 for unskilled labor.

High School in Scheme.

The book, being altogether a treatise on industrial education in Columbus, is given over largely to a description of the courses in the Columbus Industrial High School, the pride of the city's scheme of education. The school, besides its academic work, has vocational courses, including home economics, dressmaking and millinery, mechanic arts, textile arts, and a business course.

This industrial high school is separate and distinct from the conventional academic high school. It is merely another phase of the Columbus scheme of adaptation of education to varied needs and to varied classes.

Pony Contestants in Home Stretch

Fine Progress Made in Last Days

Winners of Race Will Be Announced in Few Days After Battle Closes July 31.

Great progress has been made by the contestants who are striving for The Georgian and American ponies, as the standings published to-day demonstrate. Nearly all the contestants who are crowding toward the front have more than 100,000 votes, but in the ten days remaining these figures, in all probability, will be doubled and trebled.

This is in spite of the fact that the coupons have been discontinued. Gains from now on will represent simply subscriptions obtained. The contestants agree unanimously that this is perfectly fair. A coupon-clipping contest is no contest at all, except as it represents the ability to build up a system of collecting the slips from friends in the neighborhood. A subscription-getting contest, on the other hand, tests the mettle of every contestant to the full, and the best will win.

Will Announce Winners Soon.

Besides, by discontinuing the coupons, it will be possible to announce the winners in the contest probably August 3, three days after the contest closes, on the night of July 31.

If coupons still were being voted, it would take two weeks or more for all of them to come in, and knowledge of the result would be delayed that long.

The bonus offer, awarding 20,000, 12,500 and 6,000 votes for clubs of $35, $25 and $15, respectively, closed Saturday night, and with a large number of clubs turned in. It was a laggard contestant, indeed, who did not appear yesterday with at least a $35 club, and some of the most active had two and three clubs.

Even Chance in Country.

Contestants in the country, it is supposed, did as well, but subscriptions arriving in Monday's mails will be credited on the club offer for these out-of-town boys and girls. This is to give them an even chance with their city cousins.

Probably another small bonus will be offered for the closing weeks of the contest. It will be nothing like those which have been given so far—not nearly so attractive, but still worth winning.

Within a few days the thirteen additional ponies needed to make up the complete lot of twenty-two will be on hand. They are being collected now from the leading breeders of this sort of fancy stock and will be brought to Atlanta before the contest closes.

Maurice Means, of Meansville, is shown at the top, while below is Miss Helen Brantley, of No. 31 E. Alexander Street. Both are way up in the race for the prize Shetlands.

Squaws Lay Ties As Bucks Play Poker

Desert Section Hand Boss Returns to Find Piute Women Doing Construction Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Piute Indians as substitutes for Mexican section hands were tried out in the Nevada desert last week. The Mexicans were deemed unsatisfactory because they would drop their tools and rest the instant the "boss" got far enough away so that he could not hit them with a shovel handle.

With the Indians on the job, however, the work went along just the same, boss or no boss.

Nevertheless the Mexicans are again on the pay roll and the Indians are taking their traditional ease.

After glowingly watching five days of splendid work by his Piute bucks the section boss left them the other day. Returning 24 hours later he found the suffragette members of the Piute tribe doing the work on the railroad, while the bucks were gathered in a poker game at one side of the track.

Tight Shoes Land Thief Behind Bars

Burglar in Jewelry Store Kicks Heels to Relieve Pressure and Alarms Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Frank Davies, who at times also gives his name as John Simpson and Joe Allen, became irritated last night while scooping unset diamonds in his hat in a dark room because the toes of his new shoes were too narrow.

Intending to relieve the squeeze, he kicked toward the floor with his heel, but miscalculated and drove his foot through a glass show case. A policeman in a saloon on the floor below heard the noise and arrested Davies, who says he is an ex-convict and that he arrived here from Los Angeles at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The diamonds were claimed to-day by the jewelers from whom they were taken.

Must Stay Maids to Get Mother's Estate

Daughters of Ohio Woman Are Beneficiaries Under Will Which Prohibits Their Marriage.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, July 19. One of the most remarkable wills ever admitted to probate in this county was made by Jane Lake, late of Richwood, who left considerable property to her three daughters, Linie, Nora and Ida.

The provisions are that the estate shall be equally divided among the three daughters, on the condition that none of them will marry. If one of them marries, her share of the estate goes to the two remaining single. If all three should marry, the entire estate is to go to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Moving Picture Gives Mother Clew to Girl

Missing Daughter Is Recognized on Screen and Police Are Following Up Trace.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The "movies" may be instrumental in restoring Olga Ellis, 5, to the mother from whom she was taken in Revere, Mass., and brought to California.

For six months the police have sought John Ellis, of Revere, Mass., who is said to have left that city with his daughter.

A school-teacher of Berkeley, Cal., became interested in the case and gave a picture of the child and the mother's address to a moving picture agency.

Mrs. Myrtle Palmer, housekeeper in a hotel here, saw the mother's appeal at a moving picture theater recently and recognized the little girl as one who had stayed at the hotel with her father for several weeks. He had registered, she said, as D. Delisle, and had gone to Eureka, Cal.

Mrs. Palmer notified the police and search for the man and child has been instituted in Eureka.

Women Convict Her For Slapping Child

First Feminine Jury in Sonoma County, California, Returns Verdict of Guilty of Assault.

PETALUMA, COLO., July 19.—A jury of twelve women convicted a woman, Mrs. W. S. Waldorf, upon a charge of battery here to-day. This is the first jury of women that ever tried a case in Sonoma County. Mrs. Waldorf was accused of having slapped a neighbor's children. The jury was out less than an hour.

HORSE FALLS IN FISSURE IN SINKING KANSAS FARM

HOISINGTON, KANS., July 19.—Fissures varying from a few inches to a foot and a half in width and extending several feet into the ground have opened up in L. E. Baker's alfalfa field near this city and are causing a great deal of speculation.

There have been no indications of an earthquake of any sort, but the ground seems to be sinking away. The fissures were discovered when Baker missed one of his horses and found it imprisoned in a fissure.

ONLY AMERICAN KING YEARNS TO QUIT HIS THRONE

All of Former Broker's Thirty Wives Want English Gowns. Jealousy Spreads.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King, practically has made up his mind to renounce his throne. He is King of the Island of Arorae, one of the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands. Until 1909 he was a New York curb broker. The insistence of his many wives for English gowns and his loneliness have led to the determination to give up his kingly honors. He tells of his intentions in a letter just received by a friend in this city.

The career of Everett has been unusual. In 1909, when he was in business in this city, he was thought to be well to do. He met reverses, however, in Wall Street, and in the latter part of 1909 disappeared, without leaving a word of farewell. Nothing was heard from him until in 1911, in a remarkable letter, he told of being made the King of Arorae, in the South Sea Islands. He had landed, he said, on one of the small islands, and had gone from there to other islands of the Gilbert group. Finally he reached Arorae. It was a phonograph which he had in his possession that eventually won for him his throne. The King at that time of the island took a great fancy to the phonograph.

Phonograph Wins Kingdom.

By the hour Everett, according to his own account, entertained the monarch, constantly growing in his graces. Finally the old King adopted Everett, and when he died Everett succeeded to the throne. According to the custom of the island, Everett took a good many wives.

Everett took a very lively interest in the affairs of the island. He increased its business with traders. The principal product of the island is copra, or dried cocoanut meat. The letter, in part, reads:

"At the present time the King's job is about the last thing to be desired, and do not be surprised if I walk in on you some day in the near future. I am about tired of the job.

"For some time past conditions here have steadily become worse. It started when my wives, of whom there are about 30, insisted on wearing English dresses. A trader who stopped here presented one of the natives with three English gowns in exchange for some copra. The native presented them to the King, and I in turn gave them to three of my wives. The natives have never worn any clothes to speak of. Imagine my surprise, then, when the three dresses became the center of a regular war among my wives.

"The three victorious wives managed to get them on somehow, and that settled it. Every one of them set up a kick for a dress, and they worried the life out of me. I was forced to get the gowns. The first trader that stopped at the island from Australia was commissioned to bring them back on the next trip, and in due course of time they arrived.

Jealousy Over English Gowns.

"The dresses were of all colors and sizes. Most of the people here are about the same stature, few being over four feet six or seven. Some of the dresses were too small, others too large, but they created a sensation. Dressed in those creations, with bare brown feet stepping proudly, my wives paraded up and down the island, causing every woman in the kingdom, young and old, to grow jealous.

"So far, half of the female population have been given the gowns and the other half are waiting eagerly. The worst part of it all is that the men are as enthusiastic over this new style of dress as the women, and my objections have not added to my popularity whatever. I am daily expecting the men to demand suits of flannel and silk shirts.

Affairs on a Business Basis.

"I have not done so badly here financially. I put the business of the island on a business basis soon after becoming King, and things have flourished.

"I don't know how the people here will take my departure. They may even try to prevent it, and I have been considering the best method to leave. I could probably get aboard one of the trading ships and get to Australia, after which it would be easy, of course, to get back to the United States."

County of Warner

Should Be Created

Manchester, the Logical County Seat—County Will Have 10,000 Population; $1,750,000 Taxable Values; Area Over 222 Square Miles.

The people situated in the southeastern portion of Meriwether, northern portion of Talbot and northeastern portion of Harris Counties will petition the 1913 session of the Legislature to create a new county to be named Warner, in honor of the late Chief Justice Hiram Warner, the area of which will be 222 square miles, while the area of the old counties after the proposed county of Warner is created will not be materially reduced, but will leave them among the larger counties of Middle Georgia, and Meriwether will then contain 421 square miles; Harris, 465 square miles, and Talbot, 329 square miles. The territory to compose Warner County is inaccessible to either of the present county sites by railroads and in transacting legal business the citizens are required to go this distance by private conveyance over mountainous roads, which in rainy seasons are almost impassable; while a very large portion of the population has no means of conveyance and are forced to a great expense in reaching the present county sites.

Taxable Values of New County.

The proposed county of Warner will have taxable values of one and three-quarter million dollars. This will leave Meriwether taxable values of about twice the amount of Warner County; while Harris and Talbot, from which counties small values will be taken, will not be materially reduced, but have considerably more wealth than Warner and no incorporated town is to be taken from either Talbot or Harris and but a few miles of railroad.

The population of Warner County will be upward of 10,500, of which more than 2,000 live in Manchester, the proposed county seat. At least 5,000 of those living within the country territory closely adjoining Manchester have to travel 14 to 20 miles to their present respective county sites. Warner County would exceed in population 32 counties in the State.

Roads and Bridges.

Warner County as proposed will take from the three affected counties its proportion of roads and bridges as compared to its area and wealth, while the roads and bridges in this territory have received but little attention, as the taxes collected by the old counties have been spent on other roads and bridges nearer the present county sites, and other sections of the counties, since this territory occupies the "remote corners," consequently has had little influence in securing road improvements.

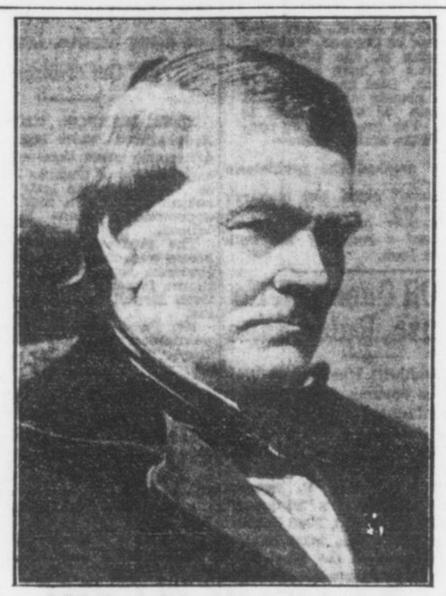
Warner County, as proposed will include Gill, Chalybeate, First, Raleigh, Bullochville and parts of the Third, Harris and lower Ninth Districts of Meriwether County; portions of Valley Plains District of Harris County and Flint Hill and parts of Pleasant Hill and Valley districts of Talbot County.

The distance from Manchester, the proposed county site of Warner County, to Greenville, the county site of Meriwether, over public roads is 18 miles; to Hamilton, the county site of Harris, 20 miles, and to Talbotton, the county site of Talbot, 20 miles. No citizen living in the proposed county would be required to travel farther than 12 miles to reach Manchester, the proposed county site.

Schedule of Trains.

No portion of Warner County at present is directly connected by rail with its respective county site. Those wishing to attend court by rail from Manchester and its vicinity must leave Manchester at 4 o'clock a. m., change at Durand and arrive in Greenville at 8 o'clock a. m., requiring a layover at Durand of about three hours. Returning, leave Greenville at 6 o'clock p. m., arriving at Manchester at 11:40 p. m., necessitating a layover at Durand of five hours, or about 20 hours to go a distance of 20 miles and return. This is the most convenient schedule.

The present counties are well provided with modern jails and courthouses.



HIRAM WARNER

Brief Sketch of Late Chief Justice

HIRAM WARNER

Hiram Warner, for whom Warner County is to be named, was born at Williamsburg, Hampshire County, Mass., on October 29th, 1802. He sailed for Savannah when 19 years of age, but was shipwrecked off Cape Hatteras, and reached the Georgia port weeks later. He settled first at Sparta as a teacher. He studied law and was admitted to the bar at Knoxville, Crawford County, in 1824. He married there and had one child, a daughter, the mother of Associate Justice Hiram Warner Hill of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

He was a member of the Legislature 1828-31. He was elected judge of the Coweta Circuit of the Superior Court of Georgia in 1833. At that time there was no Supreme Court, and the Superior Court judges gathered in an annual convention to discuss their decisions and establish uniformity of practice.

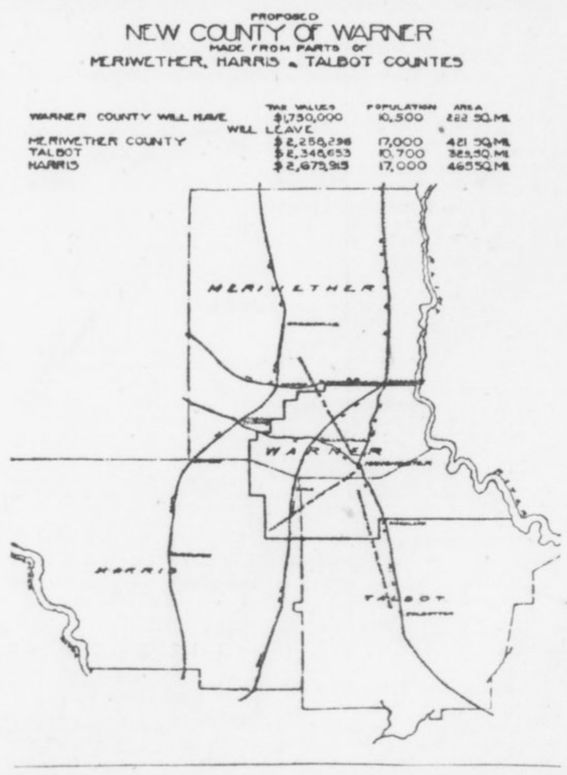
In 1845 the Supreme Court of Georgia was organized and with Joseph Henry Lumpkin and Eugenius A. Nesbit was elected to that high branch of the judiciary. He defeated Benjamin H. Hill for Congress in 1855; was renominated, but declined re-election. Nearly 60 years old when the war came, he was at home caring for his family, his only son-in-law being at the front. He was held by Wilson's raiders and actually hanged and left for dead because he did not tell where suspected gold was hidden.

Later he was appointed to the judgeship of Coweta Circuit by Governor Jenkins. He was named Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia in 1867 to succeed Chief Justice Lumpkin, deceased.

His decisions from the bench and his printed decisions upon the Supreme Court bench are classics in Georgia's judicial history and his decisions are leading ones in ruling on similar cases today.

Judge Warner was reared a Presbyterian. He never joined a religious denomination. He lived and died, however, a believer in the Bible, the truths of Christianity and the creed of that denomination to which his family belonged. It was his habit to keep upon the table in his bedroom to the last day of his life two books; one was Blackstone, and the other was the Bible. This Bible his mother gave him when he left home for his long journey. To this same Bible he turned for comfort and support when, 58 years afterward, an old and broken man, he entered the valley of the shadow.

It is this man whose memory is sought to be revered in the creation of the county which is to bear his name—Warner.



Little Territory From Three of the State's Largest Counties Will Give County—New County Has Railroads—Sentiment Favors It.

No county has ever been created in which the sentiment was stronger for a new county than Warner. The movement has been spontaneous in all sections and our petitions contain more than 95 per cent of the white electors in Warner County. The people realize the great inconvenience with which they are now burdened and have joined unanimously in the movement.

Situation of Warner.

The proposed county of Warner will include portions of Pine and Oak mountains. In recent years most of this section was considered of little value on account of its inaccessibility and the rough character of the country. Little money has been spent by the counties in developing this territory, and the roads, most of them crossing the mountains and ridges, are bad, and have received but little attention.

In 1906 the A., B. & A. railroad was built, traversing this section with its Birmingham and Atlanta lines merging at Manchester; since which time Manchester has grown to be a town of about 2,000 people, as a result of which the territory adjoining Manchester has developed very rapidly; approximately $2,000,000 having been spent in improvements and business naturally drifted in this direction. The people residing in this territory buy all their supplies and sell their produce at Manchester, Bullochville, Raleigh, Chalybeate and Shiloh. Nothing calls them out of the proposed county except court duty, and they are deprived of the privilege accorded the majority of our people in the state of transacting their business and attending court in the same day.

Demand of Modern Times.

In this day of modern methods, when man's greatest asset is his time, when all business has become greatly intensified and concentration and conservation are occupying the attention of all progressive, thinking people, all men must realize that to make a success out of any public institution its interest must be well guarded. In this connection, large counties can not receive their just consideration. It is out of the question for the county commissioners in the three counties affected to give the counties' business the attention which it deserves. The area is too large, the business too vast, the demands too great and the distance too far for the county authorities to attend to the business properly.

General Statements of Interest

Manchester, the proposed county site, contains one large cotton mill, railroad shops and division offices of the A., B. & A. R. R., one bank, 33 brick store buildings and 16 wooden store buildings, all of which are occupied by various lines of general merchandise; two moving picture theaters, one newspaper and printing office, three hotels, five churches, modern school system, municipal light plant, two livery and sale stables, two large builders' supply houses, fireproof warehouse and gin.

Bullochville has several large supply houses, one bank, guano factory, also the Tuscawilla, a magnificent three-story brick hotel with modern equipment throughout, the best equipped hotel in the State in a town many times its size. Near Bullochville is located the famous Warm Springs resort, which is too well known to be described.

Just above Bullochville is the thriving town of Raleigh, which controls all business within its territory.

South of Bullochville on the Southern Railroad is Shiloh, now located in Harris County, one of the best farming supply towns in the State.

East of Manchester on the A., B. & A. is located Chalybeate Springs, a resort famous since ante-bellum days. The water from these springs has been known throughout the State since Georgia's early history.

Just east of Chalybeate is the Tatum Iron Company's mines, which are now being successfully developed.

All facts stated herein are not exaggerated, but can be substantiated with unlimited amount of evidence.

GIRL PLAYS MAN AND WINS LOVE OF HATED RIVAL

Unique Vengeance Is Planned by Young Woman Whose Sweetheart Proved Faithless.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Jilted by her lover, Bessie McIntyre, of North Wheeling, a pretty 18-year-old girl, secured an odd but effective revenge on her rival, who "stole" her sweetheart and on the faithless lover at the same time.

June 25 Harry Pendleton, a well-known young business man of this city, informed Miss McIntyre that he could not see her again(as he had become engaged to another girl. By a dint of inquiry the jilted girl ascertained that the girl who had stolen her lover's affections was Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, Ohio, just across the river from this city. Securing permission from her parents, Miss McIntyre had her hair cut off, and donning one of her brother's suits, she visited Bridgeport and met Miss Allen.

It was a case of love at first sight—on the part of the Bridgeport girl. Miss McIntyre masquerading as "Lawrence Dessing," was a devoted lover, and every night found "Lawrence Dessing" at the home of Miss Aiken.

Last Sunday night while "Dessing" and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to call on her again. She then confessed her love to her companion, the pseudo "Dessing." Miss McIntyre, dressed in a gown of the latest mode last night met Miss Aiken in this city. Before Miss Aiken could speak the North Wheeling girl told her how she had revenged herself.

In a moment the girls were fighting and were separated by the police.

Willing To Marry But Not to Apologize

Man Sued for Breach of Promise Says Hill Wed But Refuses to Beg Forgiveness.

ATCHISON, KANS., July 19.—Mary Falk and William Burke were engaged to be married. The date had been set, the guests had assembled, and everything was in readiness, but Burke did not appear. Chagrined and heartbroken, Miss Falk engaged an attorney and sued Burke for $25,000 as balm for her wounded feelings.

"It was all a mistake," said Burke. "I wanted and still want to marry Miss Falk. I was under the impression that under the rules of the Catholic Church the ceremony had to be performed by the pastor of the bride's church. I couldn't find him in time to perform the ceremony and naturally supposed the wedding was off for the time being."

Miss Falk accepted the explanation, but she insisted that Burke must apologize for not appearing for the wedding. Burke, however, insisted that she must apologize for suing him.

FOUNTAIN, MICH., July 19.—Oscar Siler, of Chicago, who has been fishing on the lake near here, claims to have killed the record frog. Said frog is said to weigh 6 pounds and to be 15 inches long. It will be sent to Chicago. The frog died of concussion of the brain. Thus—

"Kerplunk," croaked the prehistoric bullfrog.
"You're drunk," piped the monarch of the bog.

Aged Oil Queen, Wife Of Youth, Ruled Sane

Young Spendthrift Husband Is Welcome to Fortune, She Says, on Leaving Asylum.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 19.—The courts and her children can not separate Mrs. Cynthia C. Sparks, known as West Virginia's "oil queen," and her young husband, Fred Sparks, and she is again free, after having been incarcerated in the West Virginia Hospital for Insane for ten days.

Further, the superintendent and the members of the State Board of Control have placed beyond question her sanity after a close observation, while she was under their supervision.

Mrs. Sparks is going to join her 26-year-old husband, who, it is alleged by the woman's children by her first husband, was rapidly dissipating her fortune of $2,000,000 by his extravagance and riotious living.

The old woman declared to-day that her young husband was welcome to the half of her fortune which she retained after having signed over the half to him.

Miner Returns Rich To Find Wife Dead

Comes Back Home to Make Restitution for Having Deserted Her 20 Years Ago.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Wealthy and anxious to take back his wife, whom he deserted twenty years ago, Josiah Bronson, a modern Enoch Arden, found the old home in ruins and the wife dead. From the old-timers who had known him in the early days he learned that his wife, believing him dead, had married his twin brother.

Two children, he learned, were born of the marriage, and upon the death of the mother were sent to relatives in West Virginia.

Bronson declared he would care for the children. "I shall give them the best education money can buy," he said. "I deserted their mother when she was just a young woman, and now I want to atone for the cowardly act."

WRITERS MAKE BEST DIPLOMATS DECLARES PAGE

New Ambassador to Italy, Author of Many Stories, Leaves Himself Out of Discussion.

YORK HARBOR, ME., July 19.—Are authors better qualified to fill diplomatic posts than others? The appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy brings this subject to the fore, coupled with the appointments made by President Wilson.

The greatest diplomats America boasts were men of letters. Benjamin Franklin, John Hay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, William Dean Howell furnish a distinguished list.

Mr. Page, who is 60, is modesty personified. He has been reporter, lawyer, writer, and has succeeded in all.

Mr. Page asked if he could explain as an author what special qualifications a man of letters possesses to perform the duties of Ambassador, consented to speak, leaving his own case out of the discussion. Said he:

"A man of letters is better fitted to do anything better than anyone else. His work has broadened his horizon; if it hadn't we might as well do away with letters.

Must Know Problems.

"The author must necessarily be conversant with the economic and governmental problems of the day.

"I think the greatest good authors in general have alone is to interpret the spirit of the section about which they write. There can be no doubt there is a better feeling now between the North and the South than there was before the Spanish-American war. This, I believe, is because of writers.

"Every part of the world is being more properly set before another part by the authors.

"The President has had a thorough training. Besides the college education, he has had associations with the North and the South, and he is conversant with the economic and governmental problems. He is a man of strong character and has been deservedly selected by the people to hold their most important office.

"I met Walter Page prior to his departure for his London post and gave him a dinner. His whole heart was set upon the desire to 'make good.'"

Qualifications of Diplomat.

"What is your idea of the qualifications a good diplomat possesses?" he was asked.

"Devotion to his duty is perhaps the first and most important," he replied. "Then comes devotion to your country, application to your duty and a desire to bring your country and the country to which you have been sent closer together.

"Of course, since the cable came into use foreign posts are brought closer to the State Department at Washington, and it must be a great comfort to an Ambassador to feel that at any time he may seek aid from Washington.

"I believe Charles Francis Adams was the last foreign ambassador to be thrown upon his own resources, and that was because the cable was cut.

"Rome is indeed a charming post. I believe it is the most romantic city in the world. I am sure I shall like it."

BRYAN DODGES PAPER'S QUESTIONS

wrong. It is using the office for making money."

Senator Bristow said action would be had on his resolution. He said, too, that there would be quite a little discussion on the subject. It probably will be referred to a committee, Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, says it probably would be "handled in a routine way."

Mr. Bacon says he thought the resolution was introduced to bring about a discussion of the course of Mr. Bryan, and that remedial legislation was not demanded.

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend, of Michigan, holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the Government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Among those who talked were the following:

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts—A Cabinet member can live on $12,000 a year if he does not have large family expenses, and he can live comfortably and respectably.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania—Samuel J. Randall, one of the greatest of Democrats, served this country for a whole generation, living on a salary of $5,000 a year. I have always disapproved of the custom that has grown up resulting in the very considerable neglect of official duties on the part of public men in order that they may go on lecture circuits.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina—While Mr. Bryan's speaking tours will serve a good purpos in that he always preached true Democracy and patriotism and Christian living, he can never again appear as a knight errant of Democracy.

Representative Willis, of Ohio—I am opposed to a Government official capitalizing his job. The Secretaryship of State is a man's job. Mr. Bryan should stay here and attend to the work of his office. He has enough on his hands with the present critical situation in Mexico, the unsettled questions with Japan and the matter of the Panama Canal tolls. We members of Congress have to stick to our tasks.

Representative Miller, of Minnesota—Mr. Bryan is giving this country a remarkable exhibition in the difference between his preachings during the past seventeen years and his present practices.

Representative Kahn, of California—There are many able men in the employ of the Government who are prevented by law and the hours of service from increasing their incomes through additional employment.

Representative Payne, of New York—I have been able to live on my salary as a member of the House. I can not see why the Secretary of State is unable to live on his salary.

Towne, Bryan's Friend, Calls Step Unfortunate.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Secretary Bryan's determination to supplement his official salary of $12,000 by going on a six weeks' lecture tour has awakened severe criticism from the men who supported him when he first loomed on the political horizon.

Charles A. Towne, who was one of the speakers at the famous "Dollar Dinner" in April, 1899, organized to emphasize Bryan's Jeffersonian simplicity of tastes, discussed Mr. Bryan's new move reluctantly, as they are still close friends.

"I consider the Secretary's plan to continue his lecture tours while occupying the chief place in the President's Cabinet most unfortunate," said Mr. Towne. "These are days when great national issues must be decided, and when the Secretary of State is required to give every bit of time and energy in behalf of the nation. It is a time when men intrusted with the affairs of the Government must have their minds occupied with nothing else except the questions of state.

Explanation Only Makes It Worse, Says World.

(From The N. Y. World, July 16.)

It is with the most profound regret that we have to note the position into which the Secretary of State has drawn himself and the explanation now given which only makes it worse.

Whether Mr. Bryan can afford to take a prolonged vacation at just this critical time for the Administration and his own high office may be a question, but a minor one. Whether, under the frankly admitted circumstances of personal fortune, he can only afford a money-making vacation, must be something less than a question with the great masses of the people whose life he has lived in sympathy.

The real question is whether the Government for such a position as his may not justly claim an undivided service, and whether any other view is compatible with a worthy ambition. We have had men in high office who have sacrificed personal fortune to render such undivided service and could afford it. We have had many more men there who have done this and could not afford it.

We can not think of the President of the United States doing otherwise. We should not be able to think of any of his Cabinet doing otherwise.

Action Most Bizarre, Says Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, July 19.—Regarding Secretary Bryan's lecture tour, The Pall Mall Gazette to-night says:

"It is a singular paradox in a country where there is so much money in politics as in the United States that the chief member of the President's cabinet should find his official salary inadequate to support his existence.

"We can quite understand why $12,000 a year is not enough for the Secretary of State, considering the American scale of life, but one would have expected a man of Bryan's moral courage to call upon his country for a living wage, to which he is entitled, rather than to propose going on the stump as a lecturer, in the roles of a minister and a professional entertainer.

"They make a most bizarre combination to all British ways of thinking, and we shall be surprised if even American opinion reconciles itself to their incongruity."

MOTHER OF TEN SUES; WEDDED TWENTY-ONE YEARS

DAYTON, WYO., July 19.—After living with David Krouse Towns for 21 years and bearing ten children of which he is the father, Mrs. Martha Ellen Towns has brought suit for divorce, asserting that her husband unjustly accused her of infidelity and that he had attempted to secure her incarceration in the State Insane Asylum, although realizing that she was sane.

BRYAN OUGHT TO LIVE ON HIS PAY OR QUIT, SAY SENATORS

Explanation of Secretary of State More Amazing Than His Acts, Declares Bristow, Who Introduced Resolution to Investigate

Wilson's Premier Capitalizing His Position, Asserts Representative Willis—Much Work To Be Done in His Department.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the National Capital is that if Secretary Bryan can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Mr. Bryan to-day gave evidence of the fact that the country-wide criticism had got under his skin. That he was irritated and impatient and realized the "bad break" he has made was apparent to his subordinates throughout the day. Somewhat petulantly he declared that the press of the country might have assumed that "my lecture engagements are subject to cancellation."

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow Cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

Evades Paper's Questions.

The American to-day endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions and refused to discuss the subject of his official pronunciamento.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by The American:

"If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

"If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

"You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?"

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned to the questions. Later in the day he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Bristow, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan to stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, to-day came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secretary Bryan's second statement has astounded me even more than his first one," said Mr. Bristow. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the Governmtnt service is amazing.

"Secretary Bryan says he has a right to use his vacation for lecturing if he sees fit. But he is to be away on one tour of six weeks, and there is no telling where his vacation will end.

Needed at His Post.

"Besides, since he has been Secretary of State he has been in Washington only about one-half the time so far. If ever there was a time when the Secretary of State was needed on the job it is now, when so many important questions are up for consideration. To cause the people to pay money to hear the Secretary of State, the highest officer in the Cabinet, deliver addresses is all

The Two Recently in Jail as Murder Suspects, and Wife on Bigamy Charge.

BIRMINGHAM, July 19.—A marriage license was issued to-day to Evie Isbell and Will Burns, the latter giving his home address as Vandiver, Shelby County. The murder never was solved.

Marshall Isbell had his wife arrested on a charge of bigamy, accusing her of marrying Burns before 60 days were up after a divorce had been granted. The marriage to-day legalized the former marriage.

SHORTAGE HITS NATIONAL BANK AT LAFAYETTE

Comptroller of Currency Orders Institution Closed When Defalcation Is Discovered.

ARRESTS ARE LIKELY

Preliminary Examination Shows That It Has Been Looted of Not Less Than $30,000.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane today announced that the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., has been closed by National Bank Examiner Thomas C. Dunlap, with the authority of the board of directors, on account of a large shortage which makes the bank insolvent.

Mr. Kane says he has not received a detailed report of the condition of the bank. Mr. Dunlap has been appointed receiver.

"We do not know how big the defalcation may be," said Mr. Kane, "but our preliminary examination has shown that it is not less than $30,000. This shortage has occurred since May 23, when the bank was last examined. Suspicion on the part of officers of the bank several days ago that a shortage existed caused them to call in Examiner Dunlap. Discovery of the embbezzlement resulted.

"In his telegraphic advices to me Mr. Dunlap does not say to whom suspicion attaches. The last statement of the condition of the bank, issued on June 4, showed the bank to be in a proper state. The president of the bank is R. N. Dickerson, and S. A. Hunt, Jr., is cashier."

In a telegram from Mr. Dunlap Mr. Kane is advised that steps have been taken to make an arrest.

Depositors to Lose Little by Failure.

CHATTANOOGA, July 19.—Local bankers stated to-day that the liabilities of the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., which was announced to-day by Acting Comptroller of Currency Kane, at Washington, to have failed, were approximately $240,000, but that depositors would be paid in full, with but a slight loss to stockholders, as the assets would prove but slightly less.

An unsuccessful attempt was made this morning to obtain a schedule of the liabilities and assets of the institution. The officials are extremely reticent concerning the cause of the institution's embarrassment.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The first aerial ferry of the world will be in operation between San Francisco and Oakland in September. Permission was granted officially to-day by the Harbor Commission to John L. Lekas to construct a dock for his hydroaeroplane.

Motor Cars to Cut High Cost of Dying

Storage Battery Busses To Be Put In Service in Chicago as Funeral Equipage.

CHICAGO, July 19.—The high cost of dying is to be reduced. Storage battery motor busses are to be put in service as funeral cars. The change from carriages to busses, it is estimated, will result in a saving of $30 in the cost of each funeral. As there are 31,000 funerals in Chicago each year, the general reduction in the cost of dying, if busses were used in all funerals, would be $930,000.

"Thanks awfully. Was threatened with appendicitis, but have not had to undergo operation. Recovering nicely.

U. S. State Secrets 'Lifted' From Wire By Mexican Agents

Information Worth Thousands of Dollars Finds Its Way Into Possession of Huerta.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A copy of the official code of the State Department, containing information worth thousands of dollars to foreign governments, has fallen into the hands of the Mexican administration.

It is being used to further the ends of the Huerta regime, it was asserted here to-day.

For some months State Department officials have suspected that the Government telegrams from Mexico City have been tampered with, it is declared, but this was not considered important, as all the dispatches were in code, and, therefore, theoretically illegible.

About three weeks ago, however, Government officials here had their first inkling that the Mexicans were obtaining the gist of dispatches passing between the State Department and Ambassador Wilson.

The agents of the almost unknown "secret service" of the State Department were put on the trail and evidence was obtained that the Government dispatches had been "lifted" from the wires in Mexico and decoded the information contained therein being transmitted to President Huerta and his Cabinet.

Doctor Says He Has Vaccine to Cure Cold

Dead Organisms Found In Blood of Patient Afflicted With Influenza Used as Culture.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Claims to the discovery of a remarkable vaccine for the cure and prevention of the troublesome "cold" known among medical men as in influenza are being made by physicians of the Mulford Laboratory, near Philadelphia, under the direction of Dr A. P. Mitchins.

The vaccine is composed of the dead organisms found in the blood of a person afflicted with influenza. These organs are isolated and then an impure culture is obtained. Afterward, a saline solution is used to wash the culture germs and then the vaccine is ready for injection.

One striking feature of the results of the vaccine, it is said, is that it cures diseases allied with the common cold at the same time it does the "cold."

3 Drowned Trying To Avoid Wet Feet

Women Stand Up In Leaky Boat, Capsizing Craft In View of Hundreds.

NORRISTOWN, PA., July 19.—Caught in a storm while boating on the Schuylkill River, three women, all church workers, were drowned. They are:

Miss Anna Mary Livergood, Miss Emma J. Rex and Miss Helen Green, all of Norristown.

Miss Margaret Green, a sister of Miss Helen Green, clung to the overturned boat and was saved.

The women were within a quarter of a mile of the boat landing when the wind struck them.

The boat began to leak badly. To keep their feet and clothing dry the four girls stood on the seats. The next instant the boat turned over.

Two hundred persons on a boat returning from a park saw the accident.

Congregation Built Up by Band Concerts

Ohio Pastor With Novel Methods Now Claims Biggest Sunday School in World.

CANTON, OHIO, July 19.—With the attraction of a band concert in the church roof garden and a double orchestra concert in the church auditorium, the Rev. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton's First Christian Church, has built up what he claims is the biggest Sunday school in the world within five years.

The average attendance in this hot month of July is 3,251. The record attendance is 4,714. Several Sundays back 38 babies were checked in the "babies' check room" of the $90,000 church. The men's class of 250 had to hold their session in the street while the teacher explained the lesson from the tonneau of an automobile.

Capital Now Calls Water 'Bryan Milk'

"Adam's Ale" Disappears From Vocabularies of Thirsty Statesmen Who Are Teetotalers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Bryan milk is what they call water in the National Capital nowadays. The new name is fast ousting the familiar Adam's ale by which water has been known for some centuries.

When you go in a cafe here and the waiter asks you what you will drink, if you are a teetotaler you say airly: "Oh, a glass of Bryan milk."

List of Congressmen in pay of the National Manufacturers' Association disclosed. Also, a list of the "unpurchasable," whom the association hated, and tried to defeat.

Fights made by National Manufacturers' Association on progressive Congressmen and Senators, often successful.

More than 400 letter tell of plans of association to become sinister factor in controlling the wheels of government.

Attempts made to foment strife among labor organizations, and to corrupt labor leaders, even Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Agreement by Woodrow Wilson with Gompers and Morrison that he support Hughes for Senate.

Powers of big business fought Hughes because he was friendly to labor.

Tom Johnson, Senator McComas of Maryland, and others were political victims of the association's vengeance.

Gigantic corruption in Wall Street laid bare in testimony of David Lamar.

Forgery on Union Pacific's books covering item of $82,000,000 charged.

Senate resolutions hawked about Wall street for sale to highest bidder.

The nation to-day stands aghast at the sensational revelations which have come as the result of investigations by the Overman Committee of the United States Senate into the work of lobbies at the National Capital.

It has heard how big business combines and Wall Street operators have made and unmade men in public life, influenced legislation, dominated public opinion, all the time secret and vigilant.

It has learned how big business has become one of the most powerful factors in the American civilization, striking in the dark against men who opposed it.

It has heard the names of the men highest in public life, President Wilson, former President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet members, dragged into the testimony, and has learned that certain predatory interests have set no limits in their attempt to corrupt public servants.

The bulk of the startling testimony came from Martin M. Mulhall, for years the servant of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the chief lobbyist of that organization at Washington, and from David Lamar, an operator in stocks, who is known as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

Wilson Starts Inquiry.

The investigation began more than a month ago when President Wilson declared that a lobby, "insidious and industrious" in nature, had long dominated tariff legislation. The announcement did not come unexpectedly, however, and there were many Senators and Congressmen to endorse the Chief Executive. The Senate began immediately its investigation of the charges, empowering a committee, headed by Senator Overman, to conduct the inquiry.

Relatively pointless testimony from men interested in the sugar industry came first, revealing the fact that sugar lobbies were the most industrious. Lobbyists from Hawaii, the Philippines and Louisiana defended their actions by a protest against free sugar. Former Governor Carter of Hawaii declared that the elimination of the duty on sugar would make the Hawaiian Islands merely military posts, destroying their commercial prestige. Frank C. Lowry, of the "free sugar lobby," admitted in the testimony that $25,000 had been spent in four years by the Federal Sugar Refining Company in lobbying operations.

Then came the Mulhall testimony.

Even Take Fizz Out Of City's Soda Water

Members of Cincinnati Board of Health to Censor All Soft Drinks Sold.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—The "fizz and bubble" in soda water and ginger ale manufactured in this city is to be no more, if the Board of Health has its way about the matter, and it seems likely at this time that its contention will hold good. The board has asked the Council to pass an ordinance limiting the amount of alcohol to one-half of 1 per cent in any one drink of this kind. If the resolution is passed and made a law no dealer will be allowed to make soft drinks without first getting a permit.

300 "HELLO GIRLS" ASK BOSS TO BE BEST MAN

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—The Postmaster General is bewildered over the result of the recent permission which he granted to telephone girls to get married. Three hundred of these girls promptly availed themselves of the chance and every couple asked the Postmaster General to act as best man.

Umbrellas for Farm Hands Is Inducement

Planter Advertises That He Will Supply Them With Sulkies, Sunshades and Ice Cream.

FINDLAY, OHIO, July 19.—There are other communities in this country that are suffering for a lack of farm hands besides Kansas. It is up to H. B. Clark, a farmer in the western part of Hancock County, to make good, else be prosecuted for false advertising, as provided by the new newspaper laws.

In a morning paper Mr. Clark is advertising for farm hands to plow corn. He says he will provide them with riding cultivator, a large sun umbrella for each, ice water to drink and all the ice cream each applicant can eat every other day, with $2.50 a day wages.

GREAT BRITAIN IS AFTER LATEST GERMAN AIR CRAFT

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Great Britain, it is stated, is negotiating for an Unger airship, which is larger, faster and more rigid than any others yet designed, including the Zeppelins.

'Oh Fudge' Strongest Language Permitted

Kansas City Starts Crusade Against Public Swearing—Police Rebuke Violators.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—Anything stronger than "Oh, fudge!" must not be heard on the streets of Kansas City hereafter. All the ministers of the city and all the members of their churches have started an anti-swearing crusade, and part of the work is to ask persons who are overheard to swear to consider the vulgarity of it and cease the practice.

The Police Department and the street railway company have agreed to join in the crusade, so that hereafter it is part of the policeman's duty to stop swearing as well as breaches of the peace.

Miss Elliott Returns To Stage To Be Happy

Will Play Potiphar's Wife in Sir Herbert Tree's "Joseph and His Brethren."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Maxine Elliott, yielding to Sir Herbert Tree's persuasion, will return to the stage September 2 in a great production of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." She will play Potiphar's wife.

Miss Elliott gives as the chief reason for her reappearance that every one is happier when occupied. She is now living in her beautiful house at Bushey, just outside London.

STORY OF MULHALL WILL EXTEND U. S. LOBBY INQUIRY

Mulhall represented the National Association of Manufacturers, in Washington. The association has a membership of 225 organizations, among them the most influential of the country, and 4,000 individuals, who control billions of capital.

The burden of his statements were that the association had for years promoted tariff, labor, and general business legislation favorable to itself, had maintained a lobby staff of seventeen, including himself, and former Presidents VanCleave and Kirby, of the association, at the capital to defeat hostile legislation, and it was always seeking and often obtaining control of the House and Senate Committee on Labor and Judiciary.

Created Tariff Commission.

He said that the association's efforts were responsible for the creation of the Tariff Commission under President Taft, and said that nine former Congressmen and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages in the House, had obtained money for services rendered.

More sensational still were the declarations that former President Taft, former Vice President Sherman, and former Speaker Cannon, besides many Congressmen and Senators were among those whom the association could affect by appeals to sentiment or other interests. He told of an unsuccessful attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, and of successful work among petty labor leaders.

Mulhall told of his own great ingratitude, how he obtained a Federal position through the influence of Senator McComas of Maryland, and at the same time entered the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers, helping to defeat his patron because McComas had been doomed for his opposition to the association.

McComas, it seems, was not the only victim. Tom L. Johnson had been defeated for Mayor of Cleveland, said Mulhall, for his opposition to the association, and William E. Hughes was opposed by the business combine for Senator from New Jersey because he was the advocate of many labor bills. It was in this connection that Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, had agreed with Gompers and Morrison, the labor leaders, to support Hughes, and had stumped the State in his favor.

Spies Kept in Field.

The work of the association against the eight-hour law, its enmity to most legislation that was favorable to labor, how he kept in occasional communication with former Vice President Sherman, how spies were kept in the field to corrupt minor labor leaders, and to knife opponents, were other sensational bits of the Mulhall testimony.

George Pope, president of the association, and other officials of the organization, have made statements declaring that Mulhall is not to be believed, and that most of the statements were inspired by the fact that Mulhall was discharged by the association. From many persons and places have come statements denouncing Mulhall as a man of reprehensible character, lessening thus the substantiability of many of the charges. But in many instances the declarations he made seemed to be assured of reliability by documents that are substantial.

Interesting is his list of Congressmen whom he said had received pay from the association. He named in this connection J. E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, the House "whip" of the last administration; J. T. McDermott, Democrat, of Illinois; J. J. Jenkins, Republican, Wisconsin; Kittredge Haskins, Republican, Vermont; C. E. Littlefield, Republican, Maine; H. M. Bannon, Republican, Ohio; H. M. Coudry, Republican, Missouri; J. J. Gardner, Republican, New Jersey; R. B. Cole, Republican, Ohio, and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages.

On the other hand, he named a number of Congressmen who had consistently fought the association's interests, and whom he frankly called "unpurchasable." They are: Speaker Clark, Burnett of Alabama, Maynichols, Pennsylvania; Parson, New nard, Virginia; Cooper, Wisconsin; York; Green, Massachusetts; Haugen, Iowa; Wilson, Pennsylvania; McComas, Maryland; Pearre, Maryland; Hughes, New Jersey; Kelliher, Massachusetts; Connolly, Massachusetts, and the labor leaders, Gompers, John Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the Federation of Labor. William Barnes, the New York boss, he said, was his friend, and could always be depended on to "take care of bills."

Revelations of Lamar.

On the heels of the Mulhall revelations came those from David Lamar, the smiling, cynical "Wolf of Wall Street." Lamar it was who told of having sent Edward Lauterbach, his attorney, to peddle around Wall Street a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the Senate.

J. P. Morgan was one of the men whom Lauterbach visited on this errand. He told how he had impersonated Congressmen Palmer and Riordan in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass Ledyard and Paul D. Cravath, corporation attorneys, and Robert S. Lovett, the railroad president, feigning knowledge of the intentions of the dominant party. Further, he declared that he had represented himself as fresh from the councils of Speaker Clark and other leaders when he visited Wall Street operators for concessions.

Lamar's most remarkable disclosure was his statement that the Union Pacific Railroad's books had been forged in 1901 to cover an item of $82,000,000, whereby the fortunes of E. H. Harriman, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, and others were built.

Testimonials Discredited.

Discredit has been cast upon Lamar's testimony as on Mulhall's, as coming from a man lacking in scruples. Paul D. Cravath, attorney for the Union Pacific, gave out a statement that the testimony regarding the gigantic forgery was part of a bear campaign against the company.

The Senate investigation will be conducted in detail, and it is likely, to judge from the announced intentions of the committee members, that every member of the Senate and of the House, every public official whose name has been dragged into the affair, and every one in anyway connected with the situation will be called in as witnesses. Appearances seem to indicate that the hearing will last far into the summer.

Mulhall was on the stand the greater part of last week explaining a batch of correspondence which had passed between him and political and labor leaders throughout the United States. The correspondence, according to evidence which has been revealed, he has sought to sell to magazines and newspapers several times, but in vain. Nonchalantly, the ex-lobbyist has pointed out letter after letter from prominent men, talking of alleged significant deals almost carelessly.

"This is a letter from Senator Forraker," he said, indicating one. "It was asking me to see a labor man about his chances for re-election to the Senate. I think he was considering the Presidency at the time."

Secrets of big politics are being bared daily during the investigation. Details of how spies worked among the labor men, and of the secret methods of big business have been explained by Mulhall at more than one point in his testimony.

In defense of his own lobbying, Mulhall made statements that a labor lobby existed, naming Samuel Gompers. As a result, Gompers and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be brought before the committee to explain their activities in the cause of labor and capital, respectively.

Inez Milholland's Wedding Blow to Suffragists

Her Romance May Annul Marriage to the Cause

Mrs. Eugen Boissevain, who was Miss Inez Milholland, famous suffragist beauty and orator, before her marriage to wealthy Dutchman last week.

Beautiful Leader of Votes for Women Won After Courtship on Two Continents.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Suffrage leaders of the United States are today bowed in spirit. They can think of their recent victory in Illinois without smiling. They read of success of women jurors and policemen with no show of ecstasy. Their minds are troubled. They seek to know whether Mrs. Eugen Boissevain will be as potent a personality for the cause as was Inez Milholland before she suddenly decided to take unto herself a husband in the form of the wealthy Dutchman she wedded Tuesday in London.

For Inez Milholland has been no small force in the suffrage movement in the United States. She graduated from Vassar just about the time when the votes for women idea traveled across the seas from England, and she has been right on the firing line in the battle for the ballot ever since.

Beauty of Suffrage Ranks.

Miss Milholland, beg pardon, Mrs. Boissevain, has ever been in the specially mentioned class in every important suffrage movement. She has been the American Christobal Pankhurst, only more so, though it has not been recorded that she has smashed anything, or has had to dodge extradition treaties to keep from the painful necessity of going on a hunger strike.

Even before she graduated from Vassar, Miss Milholland was known to fame. Her remarkable beauty, her mentality and personal magnetism made her a leader in this great girls' college. She was the champion all around athlete and held a world's record for putting the shot.

During the strike of the garment workers in New York, several years ago, Miss Milholland volunteered for picket duty and it was her oratory that kept the girls stubbornly on the strike until they partially won their demands.

In the first big suffrage parade in New York she was a battalion leader and was a striking figure as she rode astride on a big bay charger.

Challenges Orator Heflin.

She again achieved prominence by challenging Representative Tom Heflin of Alabama to joint debate when that doughty Congressman spoke disparagingly of the cause, and though it is known that Mr. Heflin loves to speak and delights in debate, he carefully avoided meeting Miss Milholland on the forum.

In the great suffrage parade in Washington the day before President Wilson's inauguration Miss Milholland led the procession as the herald of the cause. She was mounted on a pure white horse and was clad in robes of white, while a coronet surmounted her magnificent hair which fell loosely down her back.

So striking was her appearance that she was quickly an object of the attacks of the thugs and boors who tried to break up the parade, and it is recorded that one of these men received a blow on the jaw from the fist of the young woman who once held the world shot-put record.

"I am wedded to the cause," she told her admirers, among whom were Sidney Smith, the New York clubman; John Fox, Jr., author and former husband of Fritzi Scheff, and Lord Curzon, formerly viceroy of India.

Whether this marriage will annul her former marriage to the cause is the question that perplexes the suffrage leaders, but they, as a rule, protest that it will not.

John E. Milholland, her father, was evidently not greatly shocked by the marriage. Here is what he cabled his daughter:

"Have not been so mad in two hundred years. You should be boiled in oil. Do you expect forgiveness until the next century. Indefensible chip of the old block, you have given us a pretty rough deal, but nevertheless I humbly and fervently pray God's blessing upon you and yours forever.

"PATER."

Boissevain's Brother Elated.

Robert W. Boissevain, brother of the bridegroom, was in a decidedly agreeable frame of mind yesterday in his office at No. 17 Battery place. Besides calling his brother a "lucky dog" and describing him as being "smiled upon by the gods," he said that the new Mrs. Boissevain has now seven sisters-in-law who possess collectively 25 children and that all these seven Boissevain sisters are suffragists of the non-militant type.

"Wireless" in Courtship.

"Eugen, who is 33 years old, and my brother Jan came over to New York on the Olympic to pay me a visit," he said. "They arrived June 10 and stopped at the Holland House with me. William Marconi, the wireless discoverer, and Mrs. Marconi were here at the same time. My brother and I have known Mr. Marconi for years, and I now understand that the Marconis have known the Milholland family for a long time.

"Anyway, two days after the arrival of my brothers, that is, June 12, I was dining with them in the Holland House and Mr. and Mrs. Marconi entered the dining room with one of the most beautiful women we had ever seen. Miss Milholland was presented to us, and my brother Eugen lost interest in all other things then and there.

"Eugen and Jan had planned to tour the States for six weeks at least, but during the dinner Miss Milholland said something about leaving for Europe early in July. The plans of Eugen, I could see, went flying.

MAZDAZNANS EAT FLOWERS AND SING TO THE SUN

All This in Classic Boston, Where the Cult Has a Membership Small but Exclusive.

BOSTON, July 19.—It is ancient history that Nebuchadnezzer went out and ate grass like an ox. Out in the Back Bay and up in Lowell there can be found small yet select circles of folk who eat grass and say they enjoy it.

Not only this, but they worship the sun, pray to the sun, sing to the sun, take sun baths, dew baths, eat rose petals and pansies, drive out disease by fasting spells (or say they do so), fast for days and then fatten up on a diet of water to drink and violets to eat, kiss and rekiss, and try to be as happy and contented as can be.

These people are the Mazdaznans or Sun Worshipers. Into their innermost shrines have penetrated none but ardent devotees, so that none of their rites have been made public. As revealed for the first time at the big Gahanbar, or national peace congress of the Mazdaznans, these rites are weird enough—strange to the outside world, but taken as a matter of course by the Mazdaznans.

And the strange part of the rites and worship is that the devout worshipers believe their practice will lengthen their years into three or four centuries.

Secret Rites of Cult.

Another thing about the sun folk is that they don't worry. So in the hot weather they manage to keep cool figuratively and physically. They usually look happy and contented when met on the street.

None outside the cult itself knew—up to the holding of the recent Gahanbar or Congress—of the secret rites of the Mazdaznans. These are practiced in the inner circles, so called.

For years the famous "Green Book" of the Mazdaznans was a mystery sealed to the eyes of ordinary mortals. The book was guarded sacredly by the Sun Worshipers. In it are printed the precepts of the cult.

Here are some of them:

You can get cured of anything if you have faith enough long enough.

Sickness, sin and poverty will be eradicated by Mazdaznanism.

The fly you swat may be the incarnated soul of a great-great-great-grandmother.

Be careful, then, how you swat the flies.

Obstinacy Cause for Pain.

Pain is nothing but the result of obstinacy in you. If you are suffering from a toothache, it is because you are "declining to yield to the peaceful operations of intelligence."

Never go under the surgeon's knife or take "herbal medicine."

Deny the "bonds of ancestral relation through sickness, sin or sorrow."

And practice these things: Deep or "conscious" breathing and vegetarianism.

If you can do these things, you may become a Mazdaznan, so the "Green Book" says.

The High Priestess is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Roth Hilton, wife of Dr. George Hilton, of Lowell.

In the inner worship Hanish, the leader, is His Humbleness, Mrs. Hilton is Spenta Marie—the equivalent of "holy mother."

Their chief New England shrine is the Mazdaznan Temple, in Lowell. This was formerly a barn belonging to Dr. Hilton, but later converted into a "house of worship."

The central figure in the worship is Mrs. Hilton, the High Priestess. She is the mother of two pretty daughters, one of whom, the elder, Miss Ruthken Mariana Hilton, is being educated to follow in her mother's steps as High Priestess. Some day pretty Miss Ruthken—her name before the court changed it was Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of Mrs. Hilton by her first marriage—will be the leader of the Mazdaznans. The other daughter is Miss Constance Cleopatra Hilton.

The majority of the followers of the "Little Master," Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, are the persons of middle life and evidently of generous means. While a few of the cult are young women of surpassing beauty, yet the advanced philosophic principles of Mazdaznan are so complex and abstract that only those of mature mind are intellectually and spiritually capable of comprehending them. Therefore, there is a dearth of young people in the cult.

FORT WAYNE, July 19.—A long hike as a dual honeymoon trip began to-day, when Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lew Ross and Mr. and Mrs. J. Russell Klein, of this city, will start for Winchester, Va., where they will visit relatives.

Both couples recently were married. Ross and Klien have resigned their positions in order to make the trip. The men will carry a camping outfit weighing 25 pounds. All will wear duck suits and leggings.

Rats Give Sleeping Fisherman Haircut

Well Oiled Head of Angler Proves Excellent Provender for Hungry Island Rodents.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., July 19. A Santa Barbara fisherman has discovered a new way of getting his hair clipped. He appeared about his usual haunts yesterday with one-half of his head neatly shorn of hair. He says that the mice did it. A well-known fisherman vouches for the tale.

Santa Barbara Island is inhospitable and barren and contains not a drop of fresh water. For this reason fishing parties take a good supply of liquid refreshment.

Usually fishermen sleep on their boats on account of the mice. However, the fisherman in the party of Williams said he would sleep on shore.

This fisherman had earned the sobriquet of "Dude," owing to his habit of oiling his hair. It was this oil that caused the involuntary haircut, for the fishermen say that during the "Dude's" hours of slumber the mice visited him and neatly cut the hair close to the scalp in their relish of the oil.

Japs' 'Amo' Starts Romance at Harvard

Girl Student Teaches Him Language of Nippon and Now They Sail for Tokio Honeymoon.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—They met in the yard at Harvard. He was finishing his course and she was studying the intricacies of the Japanese language.

"Will you teach me Japanese?" asked James Lee Kauffman, and she said "yes."

They studied together day after day. Finally he was graduated to what corresponds to "Amo" in the Latin books. He asked her several times to explain its meaning.

"It means I love," she said, blushing.

"I am sure it must mean I love you," he said, and when she nodded that such might be the case he admitted that such was the case.

So they were married in Lancaster, Pa., and came here.

They sailed for Tokio. He is to take the chair of English law in the Imperial University.

Marries and Steals To Reform a Girl

Divinity Student Admits Taking Money Trusted to Him Because He Loved Woman.

DENVER, July 19.—William Schulz, student of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $38 from the student body, whose cashier he was, says he married Miss Thelma Gillion and became a defaulter, not only because he loved the girl, but because he desired to assist her in giving up her former way of living.

That Schulz had partly succeeded in his work of reclamation is the belief of all Denver people who have come in contact with the young woman since she and Schulz arrived in this city. They unite in saying that there is no better behaved young woman in Denver than Mrs. Schulz.

Sioux City Finds Policewomen Useful

Superintendent of Police Safety Declares They Have Lessened Trouble With Girls.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA, July 19.—"I want especially to have the policewomen on the force during the summer months," says the Superintendent of Public Safety. "We formerly had plenty of trouble with young girls in dance halls, but since the women came on the force there has been none of this.

"I believe that they are doing fine work and am very well satisfied. The only thing that would cause their release from the force would be the lack of sufficient appropriation to pay their salary. They are necessary to the force in guarding the morals of the women of Sioux City."

Safe Robber Relic Found in Old Wall

Discoverers Believe That Ancient Money Box Was Taken From Stage Coach by Highwaymen.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., July 19.—While repairing the State highway at the top of Conococheague Mountain, near Concord, Ralph Hopple and Elias Snyder, who were tearing down a stone wall, found an express money box, of heavy sheet iron, lined with wood. The lid was partly open and the lock had been sprung with an iron hook found near the box.

It is thought the box was in the old stone wall for more than a century and was placed there by a gang of robbers that infested that section in the days of stage coaches.

ACID THROWN AS JEALOUS WIFE STRIKES RIVAL

House Physician of Kimball House Center of Affray Witnessed by Peachtree Crowd.

Dr. J. Robert Smith, house physician at the Kimball Hotel; Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Ina McNeil, of No. 299 Forrest avenue, a saleswoman at a downtown store, engaged in a struggle in front of the Park-Chambers-Hardwick store on Peachtree street Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. Smith found her husband with Mrs. McNeil.

In the melee Mrs. McNeil received a slight cut on her arm, and Mrs. Smith claims also she gave her a black eye. During the trouble a bottle of what is supposed to have been carbolic acid was thrown by one of the participants, but none of them will admit throwing it. Dr. Smith declares he did not see the acid thrown, and Mrs. Smith will not say whether she threw it or not.

Hundreds See Fray.

The triangular affray was witnessed by hundreds of Peachtree street pedestrians, and created considerable excitement. After the bottle of acid had crashed to the pavement and broken, Dr. Smith hustled his wife around the corner, while Mrs. McNeil ran into the store and hurried to the second floor.

Mrs. Smith admits attacking Mrs. McNeil. She says she has several times asked her to keep away from Dr. Smith, and declares she became infuriated when she saw her husband meet Mrs. McNeil downtown to-day.

Says She Trailed Smith.

"Dr. Smith has been running around with Mrs. McNeil for more than a year now," said Mrs. Smith. "We have been separated for several years, but of late the doctor has asked me to return to him. He has offered to buy me an automobile if I would come back, but I told him I would have to test him. I asked him to keep away from Mrs. McNeil, and I've also asked Mrs. McNeil to keep away from Robert.

"I heard several weeks ago that he was going around with her again, and this morning I came to Atlanta from my home in Douglas. I trailed Dr. Smith to-day when he left the Kimball House, and I saw him meet the woman on Edgewood avenue. I followed them until they got in front of the store on Peachtree street, and then I got so mad that I stopped them.

"I admit I hit Mrs. McNeil, and I would do it again. I just got so mad that I walked up and struck her in the face. I gave her a black eye and scratched her on the arm, but she didn't hurt me. I don't know anything about the acid. Dr. Smith did not do anything while we were fighting, but acted like he wanted to get away. After the bottle was thrown, he took me out of the place."

Girl Shoots Herself When She Is Spanked

Mother Punishes Her for Spending Afternoons With Boys—She Fires Bullet Into Breast.

NEW YORK, July 19.—When the mother of 15-year-old Mary DeMartino spanked her a week ago for spending the afternoons with young men on the roof of their home, No. 337 East Forty-seventh street, the girl threatened to shoot herself.

Mrs. DeMartino caught her on the roof again yesterday, and after Mary had been chastised, she fired a bullet into her breast, penetrating one of her lungs. She was taken to Flower Hospital, and last night was in a critical condition.

Couldn't Die Until He Moved Friend's Body

Pioneer Refuses to Allow Companion's Remains to Rest in Old Deserted Cemetery.

DUFUR, OREG., July 19.—"No, he was just my friend."

This was the answer given by H. Koehler, of Portland, when asked if William Holman, whose body he had gone to the trouble and expense of moving from one cemetery to another, was a relative.

Many, many years ago, when there was but a small handful of settlers in the Fifteen-Mile Valley, a location for a cemetery was selected on a hill overlooking the valley.

A few days ago Kohler, now a gray-haired man, came to look after the last resting place of his friend Holman. He left here soon after Holman's death 35 years ago.

"We were good friends—very good friends," he said. "I could not die happy if I knew he would be left out there in that old cemetery with no one left to care for his grave. I had intended to look after this long ago, but circumstances have prevented, and now I am growing old and I must do this one kind act for my friend. We were very, very good friends."

Automobile Driver Kills Deer With Car

Horn Frightens Animal But He Afterwards Turns to Fight and Pierces Tire With Horns.

UKIAH, CAL., July 19.—W. C. Jones, of Los Angeles, ran down a big deer with his auto near Largo yesterday when it jumped over the fence in front of the machine. Jones opened his throttle and turned loose the horn. The noise frightened the animal, and, after a half mile chase, it turned to give battle. The deer made one vicious lunge forward, its horn piercing the front tire, the impact breaking its neck. Jones loaded his prize into the machine.

CRAWFORD HEIRS EXPECT SEARCH FOR BARBER TO BARE PRE-NUPTIAL PLOT

Relatives Think That Lump Will Tell Woman Held on Poison Charge Planned to Wed Him on Her Husband's Death.

If the tireless search which is being directed by Atlanta lawyers discovers in New York a man named Fred Lump, the prosecution in the case against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, thinks a pre-nuptial plot against Crawford can be proved.

The alleged plot was between Mrs. Crawford, then Mrs. Savage, and Lump. She would marry the wealthy Crawford, obtain his money, and then marry Lump, say her accusers.

Lump is a barber by trade and a Bohemian by nativity. He is supposed to be in New York, and in that city detectives in the employ of the prosecution have been at work for several days. Every message that comes from them, however, is one of failure.

Colonel James Makes Charge.

The charge of a plot first was made by Col. J. S. James, who is attorney for the contesting Crawford heirs, who ordered the arrest of Lump. Colonel James said that Lump admitted his being in Atlanta at the time of Crawford's death, and that other testimony valuable to the prosecution was given by him in deposition several weeks ago. But present search for the Bohemian barber has proved fruitless.

Colonel James points to Mrs. E. C. Bursener as one of the witnesses of the prosecution to substantiate the murder plot charge. Mrs. Bursener, it is claimed, will testify that she frequently heard Mrs. Crawford say that she would marry Crawford, get his money, and later run away with Lump. The prosecution will seek to prove also by Mrs. Gertrude A. Painter, it is said, that there was a definite agreement to this plan existent between Mrs. Crawford and Lump.

The forces that are trying to saddle Mrs. Crawford with the murder charge are scoring heavily in the closely-allied civil suit. Heirs of Joshua B. Crawford, trying to break the will by which the widow received the bulk of the estate, charging undue influence, have produced a number of witnesses to swear to an antagonism between Crawford and Mrs. Mary B. Crawford.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. L. C. Dillingsley, who testified that Joshua B. Crawford said, time and again, that he would not marry the woman. This statement was elicited in the attempt to prove that Crawford was not rational, and probably was intoxicated, when he married Mrs. Crawford.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Mrs. Dillingsley, who said she lived in the Crawford home on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death, told of instances of alleged cruelty on Mrs Crawford's part, directed particularly toward a Miss Scott. Mrs. Sallie Alexander, an old woman of Henry County, was another witness by whom it was sought to prove habitual drunkenness on Crawford's part.

Mrs. Crawford, released from the Tower on bail of $6,250, has remained in the seclusion of her home on West Peachtree street all week, steadfastly quiet and refusing all statements in the face of the accusations against her. She has said nothing regarding the case, except a simple denial of the charges.

Reporters seeing her were treated courteously and quietly, and Mrs. Crawford seemed not averse to talk to them freely. But in most of the talk the subject of the murder charge and the plot charge in which Lump's name appears was carefully skirted.

Mrs. Crawford is a large woman, of dignified appearance. Not one moment since her arrest Saturday night has her composure broken, even slightly. In the Tower she received the few persons who called on her, and during the visit did not exhibit a sign of perturbation.

Calls Charge "Awful Thing."

To reporters and to all her visitors, when she mentioned at all the subject of the murder charge, she referred to it as "this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford finds staunch friends in her children and grandchildren, who visited her at the Tower, and were with her almost all the few hours she spent in jail, bringing her flowers, a savory meal, and other tokens of their love.

Mrs. Crawford's children are bitter in their speech against the nephews and neices of Joshua B. Crawford, who, they say, are persecuting their mother with extreme cruelty. Mrs. Crawford herself accused her enemies of cruelty and lack of feeling.

Mrs. Crawford met Joshua B. Crawford when she was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine, wither Crawford went in search of health. It was there she met him, and there that she married him. At his death, there was a settlement of his estate, Mrs. Crawford taking hold of the affairs with a capable hand.

An agreement was signed, and the affairs of Joshua B. Crawford, deceased, seemed amicably settled. Then the litigation was sprung. In the first bill of complaint the heirs who contested the will charged Mrs. Crawford with poisoning her husband, and of exerting undue influence to procure a will in her favor. But it was not until three years later, two weeks ago, that an examination of the remains of Joshua B. Crawford to ascertain traces of poison was ordered. Upon the examination came the verdict of the physician that traces of poison were vident, and Mrs. Crawford was arrested.

With preliminary hearing waived, Mrs. Crawford's case is flatly up to the grand jury, which, without definite date of meeting, awaits the call of the Solicitor General. The body probably will be assembled next week.

MRS. MARY BELLE CRAWFORD, held on poison charge in famous will case mystery, with her grandchild, Viola Belle Bennett.

RENO SINGS ITS SWAN SONG AS DIVORCE MECCA

Grand Rush of Colonists to Take Advantage of the Old Law Comes to an End.

RENO, July 19.—With such songs as "Meet a Friend From Your Home Town' and "At the Devil's Ball," sung by feminine entertainers from Metropolitan music halls, accompanied by high-class orchestras, the divorce colony celebrated the past week the beginning of the end of the Nevada quick divorce.

On the stroke of the midnight hour on Monday the curtain dropped upon one scene in Reno's notable divorce colony performance which has commanded the attention of the world for so long—that of the almost daily appearance of new faces upon the streets, as men and women, from plain country folk to elaborately gowned and bejeweled society beauties, arrived to begin their required six months' residence in the State and county, preparatory to the prospective divorce action.

Law Halts Colonists.

No more will incoming trains deposit these colonists and carloads of trunks, for the familiar song, "I'm on My Way to Reno," has been shelved by the action of the last Legislature, when it dealt the knock-out blow in its ultimatum that no divorce proceeding shall be instituted in the State of Nevada under the existing six-month residence law after December 21 next, thereby limiting the time in which newcomers could begin such residence period to Monday last.

Previous to July, 1909, the presence here for divorce of but an occasional person of prominence merely commanded attention to that individual, but it led to a method of publicity by an attorney which started the ball rolling, and it has never stopped rolling. Its greatest momentum is being witnessed now.

All Houses Are Thronged.

During the past month, and especially the week ending on Monday, the throng of newcomers has experienced great difficulty in securing such apartments as they might desire. All the hotels are crowded, as are the desirable rooming houses. Available cottages are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. In many cottages from four to six divorcees are living.

Some private boarding houses are housing as many as ten of the fair sex, and men. There are now scores of so-called "divorcees' nests" here. Every train the past fortnight has unloaded new arrivals, the preponderance of men and very young women, seemingly well to do and fashionable being noticeable. The proportion of men to women increased largely. Baby carriages and dogs played conspicuous parts.

Fortune in Gold Nuggets Awaits Heir

Wealth Will Revert to State of Kansas Unless Kin of Old Woman Appear.

HUTCHINSON, July 19.—There is a bag of gold nuggets and gold dust awaiting heirs that may go to the State of Kansas. These nuggets and the gold dust, along with some money and other personal property to the value of $10,000, are in the hands of former Sheriff G. M. Duckworth, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ana M. Bernhert, who died a few days ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Some years ago when Mrs. Bernhert, who lived alone, was found to be of unsound mind, Dr. Duckworth was named as her guardian and she was taken to an asylum for treatment. In searching the house he found scattering personal property. It was found that much of it was gold nuggets and dust, saved, evidently, from some former mining experience, and hoarded away.

Baby Sips Hat Bleach; Dies from Poisoning

Mother, Bedridden from Appendicitis, Is Unable to Stop Child from Drinking Acid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—As a result of drinking a mixture of lye and oxalic acid, used by her father to clean an old straw hat, Dorothy E. Smith, 20 months old, died yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her father is Leo Smith, of No. 47 Brooklyn avenue, Jamaica, an employee of the Long Island Railroad.

The child's mother is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She and the baby were alone in the house yesterday when the child drank the mixture. She heard the baby's screams, but could not leave her bed, so she screamed, too, and neighbors who responded called a doctor.

SOT IS SENTENCED TO BATHE AND GO TO CHURCH

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 19.—To attend church each Sunday for three months and to bathe his children once a week was the novel sentence imposed on John Norris in the Police Court by Mayor Reed.

Norris pleaded guilty to intoxication. It was his second appearance in court within two months.

The terms of his sentence, if not complied with, will result in him serving 109 days in the workhouse.

Attending Funerals Hobby of Old Squaw

"Glass Eye," Noted for Lamentations at Obsequies, at Last Principal at Mortuary Ceremony.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREG., July 19.—"Glass Eye" is dead. She was an aged Indian woman, well known here since the settlment of this section. It was one of her hobbies to attend every funeral that she could, and on these occasions she posed as chief mourner by her excessive lamentations.

Her name has been forgotten by the whites, who only know her by the nickname, which is said to have been given her when young, because of the brightness of her eyes and not because of any abnormality in them.

She was about 75 years old, and is reported to have been the sister of "White Cindy," another noted aborigine.

Boy Finds $35,500; Hides it from Police

Advertises That He Picked up Money and Declares He Will Return it to Owner.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., July 19.—Brayton Gardner, 18 years old, who announced he had found $35,500 in a leather bag on the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad, to-night refused to tell the police where he put the money.

"I have hidden it in a safe place," said he, "and if someone claims it I will produce it immediately."

Gardner walked into the office of a local newspaper and inserted an advertisement reading:

"Found, $35,500. Owner can have money by identifying it and satisfying Brayton Gardner."

Stolen Jewels Are Found Buried in Park

Last of $100,000 Loot Stolen by Employee of Firm Recovered After Confession.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The final confession of young William Beck, who stole $100,000 worth of jewelry from his employers, Udall & Ballou, was obtained yesterday. The last $2,800 of the loot was found by detectives. It was buried in Central Park.

Beck had insisted until yesterday that he had told all. But Inspector Faurot finally got him to reveal the hiding place. The police were told to enter the park at 110th street and Eighth avenue and count eighteen stone blocks in the wall to a spot where a small bush grew. Buried 6 inches they found nine diamond rings and a pair of cuff buttons.

Indian Girl Seeks Office in Oklahoma

Educated Cherokee Business Woman Would Be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

VINITA, OKLA., July 19.—Announcement by Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, that she will not be a candidate for re-election, brings into the race for the Democratic nomination a young Cherokee woman, Miss Pearl Holderman, of Northern Craig County, whose ability as an educated business woman has given her a wide acquaintance in Eastern Oklahoma.

Miss Holderman has large business responsibilities, and her experience and ability have made her more than a match for most men. Because of her father's impaired health she manages his cattle ranch, directing every detail, including the care of a herd of blooded cattle. This young Cherokee woman owns a thousand acres of land in her own name, all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

Old Age Attributed To Her False Teeth

Woman, Age 99, Declares She Has Used Set 59 Years—Always Chews Well.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 19.—At the age of 99, Mrs. Levina Derr, of Hudson, declares that her long life is due solely to the fact that she bought a set of good store teeth fifty years ago.

Mrs. Derr is still active. Five generations of her family are living, and she declares she is as young as any of them.

"I was blessed with good teeth," she said, "and I always made it a point to chew my food well. A good stomach is the foundation of good health, and the stomach can not be good unless the teeth are good."

Congress to Lose Costly Stationery

Government Printer Is Ordered to Stop Use of Costly Material for Lawmakers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Members of Congress will draw no more costly embossed stationery at the expense of the Government. Hereafter they will get along with plain, every-day printed letterheads and envelopes.

The Joint Committee on Printing discovered that the Government Printing Office last year turned out 11,000,000 embossed pieces of stationery at an extra cost of $30,000. An order has been issued to the Government Printer to stop this extravagance.

On the Senate side of Congress this economy reform is resented, but it goes just the same. If Senators want stationery de luxe they must foot the bills out of their private purse.

INDIANS, 102 AND 97, WILL VISIT FAIR DIRECTORS

MONTROSE, COLO., July 19.—The board of directors of the Western Slope Fair Association decided to bring 50 Ute Indians from the reservation in Utah to Montrose during the fair in September. The Indians will include Chief McCook, 97, and his sister, Chippeta, 102, who is the widow of Chief Ouray.

Women Wear Bath Dresses Down Town

Startle Natives by Appearing In Ice Cream Parlor in Their Beach Attire.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Two buxon matrons and a miss about 19 years old created a sensation about dusk by walking through the streets of Warwood, north of this city, in bathing costumes. Unabashed by the attention they attracted, they entered an ice cream parlor, where they ordered ices, and after eating them walked to their homes.

The matter was brought to the attention of Town Marshal E. L. Pool, who immediately issued a warning that women appearing hereafter in such scant attire would subject themselves to arrest.

Naturalist Editor Has Forest Sanctum

Sets His Type In Shade of Hemlock and Lives in Wigwam all Winter.

WESTFIELD, MASS., July 19.—A unique editorial and printing plant is that known as "Seneca Wigwam, The Press in the Forest," located in the heart of the woods about three miles west of this place.

The sanctum is a typical Indian tepee, where the editor, Joseph C. Duport, an out-of-door enthusiast, prints, illustrates and publishes an original magazine called the Woronoco Valley Calumet.

In summer the editor sets his type in the shade of a hemlock, and in the winter or during inclement weather his work is done in the wigwam, which contains an up-to-date twentieth century printing press and equipment.

Policeman's Watch Stops Death Bullet

Hospital Steward Thinks Patrolman Burglar and Fires Six Shots at His Heart.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 19.—A watch in his vest pocket stopped a bullet which otherwise probably would have pierced the heart of Patrolman O'Hara last night. The shot was one of six fired by Roscoe Gray, steward of the Oakland College of Medicine, under the impression that O'Hara was a burglar. The other shots did not hit O'Hara. Gray nearly collapsed when he learned his mistake.

O'Hara was on his rounds when he noticed a door in the college building open. Trying to close it, he set off a burglar alarm and Gray opened fire in the dark.

Silver Wire Travels Through Two Arms

CHICO, CAL., July 19.—James Dupen, a Chico merchant, to-day submitted to an operation, in which a piece of silver wire, used in closing a wound on the left wrist in 1897, was extracted from the index finger of the right hand. The wire, which is one-half inch long, passed up one arm, across the chest and worked down the opposite arm, emerging at the finger.

FARMERS' UNION HOPE OF SOUTH, SAY ORGANIZERS IN GREAT GEORGIA CAMPAIGN

Charles S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee, Sweep Through the State With a Message to Planters to Check Enormous Crop Waste.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a flying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"The marvelous grandeur of the world's progress astounds and amazes us, yet the wonderful story would never have been written had it not been for the ever-faithful farmer.

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"When we became a nation the farmer owned 90 per cent of the wealth. In 1850 our national wealth was $7,000,000,000 and the farmer owned $4,000,000,000, or four-sevenths.

"In 1913 our national wealth is estimated at $131,000,000,000, and the farmer owns $26,000,000,000. Our farm property is valued at nearly $40,000,000,000, but $14,000,000,000 is owned by other classes than farmers.

"The above figures show that farmers are not holding their own, for if they had kept pace with other vocations since 1850 they would now own $75,000,000,000 worth of wealth instead of $26,000,000,000. Their lack of business methods and failure to match conditions have cost them $49,000,000,000. This would buy all the farm property in the United States and have enough left to buy a half interest in all the railroads.

"In a score of years the farmers of this country have produced $135,000,000,000 worth of farm products, or enough to buy all the property in the United States. Yet this wonderful amount of wealth has not gone to the farmers. We have 10,000 men in this country who own an average of $10,000,000 each. And their combined wealth is $100,000,000,000. The other 99,990,000 people own $31,000,000,000. Of our 100,000,000, 60,000,000 are homeless.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The 12,000,000 farmers of this country are laboring under an indebtedness of $6,000,000,000. On this amount, counting commissions and renewal charges, they are paying an annual interest of 8 1-2 per cent, or $510,000,000, while the business men and manufacturers pay an average of 5 per cent interest, or $300,000,000, on $6,000,000,000. This $210,000,000 excess interest paid by the farmers would pay off our farm indebtedness in 28 years. Co-operative efforts and rural credits would right these wrongs. So, let us continue to discourage this present system until it has passed into history and is only remembered in the misty back yonder.

"Distribution being one of our greatest problems, our second declaration of purposes is to assist our members in buying and selling. The Federal Government has spent $100,000,000 in the last ten years, teaching us how to produce, and not a cent to teach us how to market.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

Expense Is Unavoidable.

"We all agree that there is an unavoidable expense in the distribution of farm products. But let us make what seems to us a reasonable division of the $13,000,000,000 consumers other than farmers pay for farm products each year.

Give the wholesaler and jobber $1,000,000,000, the transportation companies $1,000,000,000, the retailer $1,500,000,000; then throw in $500,000,000 for all possible misallowance, and we have $9,000,000,000, which is $3,000,000,000 more than the farmer gets. This amount falls into the waste basket of speculation.

"If it were divided between the producer and consumer it would clothe the naked, feed the hungry and educate the illiterate, instead of breeding millionaires, paupers, anarchists and suicides. If the Farmers' Union fills its mission, it will not be long until a less portion of the laborers' toll will be turned in at the toll gate of the palace and a great portion will find its way through the door of the cottage, and help to lift the humble tenement to the comfort, dignity and luxury of a home.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 250,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If property handled this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices; we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

THIS DRESS WAS TOO MUCH FOR PRIM RICHMOND.

THIS Picture shows Miss Flossie Brown in the split skirt which caused so much excitement in Richmond, Va., that the young lady was arrested, fined $25 and given twenty-four hours in which to leave town. The idea of the slit skirt did not appeal at all to the Virginians, but it has not been received with so much disfavor elsewhere, for Miss Brown, or Blossom Browning, as she prefers to be called, has been invited to wear it in Pittsburg and Baltimore.

Quarrel at License Desk Halts Wedding

Prospective Bride Objected to Way Her Fiance Spelled Name and Ceremony Was Called Off.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., July 19. A near-wedding was spoiled to-day when the bride-to-be and the bridegroom-to-be quarreled over the spelling of the latter's name. C. W. Clane, of Los Angeles, aged 44, and wearing diamonds as large as hickory nuts, accompanied by a woman about 35 years old, applied for a license.

He started to fill out the blank. "Spell it right, please; spell it Cline," whispered the woman, but Clane just kept on writing.

Again his prospective bride, speaking right out loud, said he was spelling his name wrongly. But still Clane paid no attention. Then, in tones of downright anger, she exclaimed, "You spell your name properly or there will be no wedding."

"Very well," answered the man, and he crumpled up the application blank and they left the office.

NATION FINALLY REFUSES BURR'S PENSION PLEA

United States Decides After 79 Years Just to File Request in National Museum.

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—After some delay—79 years, to be more or less exact—the United States Government has decided on a final action on Aaron Burr's application for a pension. The Government proposes to put the application in the National Museum. This is a patriotic and quite inexpensive method of disposing of a formal application for money.

Exhibited in a glass inclosed case in the museum, the papers may rest peacefully and indefinitely, telling future generations that in his last days Burr was considerably "hard-up." This is a fact not generally known. But if future generations happen to be observant they may notice that the papers show Uncle Sam to be a bit tardy in matters of pensions.

Papers Valuable Historically.

Historically, the papers are very valuable. They contain a letter written by George Washington to Aaron Burr, which even to-day—about 135 years after the letter was penned—is in a state of perfect preservation. Any student of values of historical relics can tell how much such a thing is worth. Officials at the National Museum declare the letter to be "invaluable."

The paper is a bit yellow but it is intact. The ink is a trifle faded, but can be read without difficulty even without the aid of glasses. And, furthermore, the letter reveals a bit of Washington's character more clearly than a volume of history. The missive shows how the general treated with his officers. Burr had written to Washington requesting leave of absence from military duty on account of ill health and suggesting that while off duty his pay may be discontinued.

Here is George Washington's reply to Burr:

Headquarters,
Frederick, 26th Oct., 1778.

"Dear Sir:

"I have your favor of the 24th. You, in my opinion, carry your ideas of delicacy too far when you propose to drop your pay while the recovery of your health necessarily requires your absence from the service. It is not customary, and it would be unjust. You therefore have leave to retire until your health is so far re-established as to enable you to do your duty.

"Be pleased to give the Colonel notice of this, that he may know where to call upon you should any unforeseen exigency require it.

"I am, dear sir,
"Your mo. obt. servt.,
"GEO. WASHINGTON.

"Lt. Col. Burr."

Burr's Final Appeal.

George Washington's letter is regarded as the most valuable paper among the sheaf composing Burr's application, but the application itself, Burr's formal appeal for a pension, has much historical worth because it is Burr's own record of his military service, written in 1834, just two years before his death, at the age of 80 years, in Port Richmond, Staten Island, N. Y. The papers contain no mention of Burr's famous duel with Alexander Hamilton, in which Hamilton was mortally wounded.

Burr even failed to mention in the papers that he had been Vice President of the United States, and reference to the fact that he was arrested and tried for treason for attempting to form a republic west of the Mississippi is also omitted. In the application it is recited, however, that Burr was unable to appear in court to swear to the facts by reason of "bodily infirmity."

CONVICTS OFFERED PARDON IF THEY WILL PICK BERRIES

GEORGETOWN, DEL., July 19.—Full and complete pardons await even the prisoners in Sussex County if they will pick strawberries or work on the farms.

The scarcity of labor has become a serious problem to the farmers this year, and so serious has the question become that many of them have notified committing magistrates that they will pay all fines for intoxicated and disorderly persons if it can be arranged that these people pick berries.

CHANGS, ON WAY HOME, CLING TO YANKEE FRILLS

Wife and Children of Chinese Minister Sail Derssed in Latest American Fashions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—After more than three years in Washington with her husband, Minister Chang, Mme. Chang is returning to the Orient. She is accompanied by two daughters, a son, Henry K. Chang; a little daughter-in-law and a tiny grandchild. During her residence in America Mme. Chang has changed her ideas about many things, and about others she maintains the old Chinese beliefs.

The two young daughters, Miss Alice and Miss Lillie Chang, have been attending school in Washington for two years, and with the progress of their education have abandoned their picturesque nature clothes for American garb.

Whether they will adopt the clothes of their native country on their return remains to be seen. Miss Alice Chang, who spoke for the party at the St. Francis before they sailed on the Manchuria, said:

"It all depends on what is in fashion in China.

Favor American Fashions.

"If we find American clothes fashionable out there, we shall wear them. We adopted them when we entered Gunnison Hall, our Washington school. These are more convenient when traveling," she added, pointing to a pale blue silk crepe costume with the latest frills and furbelows. "When we wear our other clothes, people stare so, and sometimes they laugh. They aren't used to them in Washington."

The question of recent changes in China is of especial interest to Mme. Chang and her daughters.

The idea that women may vote in China and that the door of opportunity is opening for them daily there has caused the Chinese women to be thoughtful.

"I don't know about this voting," said Mme. Chang, through her daughter. "I don't believe very much in it."

"Only for some women," broke in one daughter.

Education Qualification.

"I would make an educational qualification," said Miss Lillie. "Not every woman ought to vote."

"Home is the place for women," said Mme. Chang, true to her country's traditions and centuries of training. "A woman ought to do housekeeping, to stay at home and to have children."

Mme. Chang and the daughters are opposed to the Western idea of a woman earning her own living. They believe she should want to stay at home to be cared for, even if she has to do without some of the extras which her own money can secure.

"Women in China probably never will reach that stage," said Mme. Chang. "There will be fewer opportunities for them to enter professional and business fields."

College is a goal which is being aspired to by the two daughters, although they are not sure yet what particular lines they want to pursue. "We can go if we want to, you know," said Miss Alice. "Our people believe in college for girls if they want it."

Surgeon Rebuilding Man's Entire Face

Ears and Nose Burned Months Ago Are Being Replaced by Series of Operations.

GRAHAM, MO., July 19.—Pierce Fleming, who lives near Graham, is undergoing one of the most remarkable series of operations ever attempted in Missouri. His face is being built anew.

Several months ago the Fleming home was burned and Pierce was severely burned about the head. For a time it was thought he could not live. He finally recovered, but his ears and nose were badly scarred.

A Kansas City surgeon was consulted and he began the work of rebuilding the face of the burned man. The ears have been completely rebuilt and the doctor is now working on the nose and the eyes. It is barely possible now to discern the difference between the new nose and ears of Fleming and the ones he lost in the fire.

High Ad Standard Urged by Maxwell

He has placed his application for membership in the Atlanta Ad Men's Club and has enrolled as a charter member of the "500,000-by-1920-Club" launched by The Georgian.

He has many friends who predict that his success in other cities will be duplicated in Atlanta and even increased.

WOMAN JURORS SCORN STYLE OF SMART LAWYER

Beau Brummel Clothes and Bachelor Button and Ingratiating Manner Fail to Win His Cause.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Personal pulchritude and unusually smart habiliments, heightened by a bachelor's button and an ingratiating manner, failed to win for Assistant District Attorney Maxwell McNutt, in his appeal to the jury of women which tried Mrs. Bertha J. Williams on an extortion charge to-day. After deliberating one hour and 55 minutes, the jury, the first in the history of the world composed of women to hear a felony case, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

"Of course she said she did what she did, but we didn't think when she said she did it, she meant she had meant to do it," said one of the jurywomen.

Hence, Mrs. Williams, attired in a fetching Milan hat and a neat white serge tailored suit, much scrutinized by the jurywomen, made discreet osculatory advances to her benefactors, and the incident was closed.

Mrs. Annette Robinson, also armored in attractive feminine fixings, was the complaining witness in the case. She accused Mrs. Williams of having written her a letter April 8, attempting to extort $150 in return for the delivery of a trunk said to have contained certain evidence which, according to the letter, would have embarrassed Mrs. Robinson, had it fallen into the hands of the police.

Meows from Limb of Tree to Voice Love

Chicago Romeo Tries Novel Method of Wooing, but Falls Into Clutches of Law.

CHICAGO, July 19.—John Wadjinski's method of love-making goes back to the days when anthropoid Romeos used to hang by their tails and carol love songs all night long. He put his theories into practice on the night of May 3. To-day he was fined $5 and costs by Judge Sabath, who could find no sympathy for the unconventional wooing.

Sophia Emmerling had retired for the night. John Wadjinski strode through the night with caveman emotions stirring in his breast. He entered the Emmerling yard and climbed a tree. He straddled a branch opposite Sophia's window and began to "meow" like a cat. To the girl thus rudely awakened he made love in a voice that could be heard for a block.

Mrs. Anna Emmerling, the girl's mother, called the police. Wadjinski was yanked from romance to the jail.

MYSTERY MAN'S NAME TO STAY SECRET ALWAYS

Operation on Brain Fails to Reveal Identity of "J. C. R." Has Baffled Surgeons.

ROCHESTER, MINN., July 19.—That "J. C. R.," the mystery patient in the Rochester State Hospital, will never know who he is nor will the world, unless friends of olden days come to the rescue, and that he will never again speak, is the verdict of the surgeons, following a remarkable operation performed upon the brain.

"It is problematical that the operation will accomplish its purpose," said C. C. Heyerdale, first assistant superintendent of the State Hospital, after leaving the operating room.

The opening of the skull revealed a large area of degenerated brain cells covering the centers of speech and memory, and an unusually large cyst containing fluid was removed. This would indicate that in times past "J. C. R." probably suffered a hemorrhage of the brain, which could have been the result of a stroke of apoplexy or an injury inflicted upon the skull or brain. The unusually large area of degeneration discourages any hope that the memory will ever be restored or speech recovered.

Gets Blow Intended For His Twin Brother

Chicago Youth Struck When Angry Swain Avenges Pleasantry His Duplicate Was Guilty Of.

CHICAGO, July 19.—William and Otto Andler, of 3751 North Whipple Street, are twins. William passed a pleasantry about a lass who was going her way with one William Dieverkorn.

Sudden anger surged through Dieverkorn, but he held himself in check and escorted the young woman home. Then he came back, met Andler on the street an gave him a jarring wallop.

Andler soon discovered that the blow was meant for his brother and that Dieverkorn got mixed in the delivery of the goods.

Otto Andler refused to rest on this explanation. He caused the arrest of Dieverkorn, and it came out in court how William got the laugh, Otto got the punch and Dieverkorn got the hook.

Judge Sabith inspected the twins, said he couldn't see any difference and dismissed the case, warning Dieverkorn to be more discriminating in the future.

Human Chain Saves Man on Niagara Brink

Four Men Take Desperate Chance in Rescue Work at Edge of Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 19.—Truman Chapman, aged 22, of Hamilton, Ont., is alive to-day after falling into the Niagara River and being rescued at the very brink of the American Falls. Four men formed a human chain, and, by taking a desperate chance, saved Chapman when his body providentially lodged between projections of rocks.

Chapman, who is subject to fits was leaning against a railing at Prospect Point, directly over the water's edge, when he fell in. The current from this point to the brink of the falls is irresistible, but the unconscious body struck the rocks just right to be held temporarily. John Hughes, T. S. Winders, T. D. Thomas and an unidentified man were the heroes.

Advises Wives to Keep Their Secrets

Head of National Homestead Association Says It's a Mistake for Husbands to Know Too Much.

BOSTON, July 19.—"The wise wife never tells her husband all her secrets. She knows better than to run the chance of losing her independence."

So declared Mrs. Charlotte Smith, head of the National Homestead Association, to-day. The association is studying to find out what makes happy homes. It has learned that if a wife tells her husband everything it is a lesson to him not to tell her his secrets.

"Many divorces are occasioned by married couples knowing too much of each other," declared Mrs. Smith.

Aged Sisters Make White House Carpets

Old Women, Expert Dyers and Weavers, Are Preparing to Decorate Mrs. Wilson's Room.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 19.—Miss Caroline McHargue and Mrs. Martha Walker, of Elkin, aged 74 and 76, respectively, are engaged in preparing carpets, druggets and portieres to furnish the room of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the White House at Washington. They are experts in the blending of colors.

The two aged women are sisters. They live together and are expert dyers and weavers, using the old-time barks and herbs in the dyeing process, and the old-fashioned hand loom cards and spinning wheel.

Cartridge Placed on Track Shoots Youth

Boy May Die from Bullet Which Penetrated Lungs as Result of Belated Celebration.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—A delayed Fourth of July celebration on the part of small boys yesterday may result fatally for 8-year-old Francis Wright, who received a bullet in the chest at Twenty-fourth and Bryant streets. In company with his chums, he had been placing cartridges on the car tracks. One of them exploding, sent a bullet whizzing at him. He was taken to the Mission Emergency Hospital, where it was found that the bullet had penetrated the lung. The boy's parents had him removed to his home, No. 2582 Twenty-fourth street, where his condition is considered grave.

DORSEY FIGHTS MOVEMENT TO INDICT CONLEY

Solicitor Is Bombarded With Letters to Proceed Against Negro as Slayer of Mary Phagan.

THE GRAND JURY IS CALLED

Hottest Battle of Famous Case To Be Waged Behind Closed Doors of Inquisitory Body.

Solicitor Dorsey is fighting vigorously the movement in the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley Monday for the murder of Mary Phagan, despite the bambardment of letters from many citizens and by the sentiment of some of its own members.

It is for the consideration of these letters and petitions, asking the reopening of the Phagan matter, that the meeting has been called.

It was in the face of Solicitor Dorsey's bitterest opposition that the meeting was called at all. Foreman Beattie issued his defi after a previous Grand Jury had been defeated in its efforts to reopen the case with a view of indicting Jim Conley and after Dorsey explicitly had expressed his strongest disapproval of such a move.

Crucial Battle Coming.

With the first skirmish won by those in favor of the indictment of Conley, the hottest battle is yet to be waged behind the closed doors of the jury room. The question first will be on whether the grand jurors consider it proper at this time to reopen the investigation whose first chapter resulted in the indictment of Leo M. Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan. Solicitor Dorsey will lay before the body for the first time all of his reasons for desiring a postponement of all further investigation until after the trial of Frank.

Should the Solicitor be driven back from this position by the Grand Jury again disregarding his wishes and taking up the investigation, he will be forced to take refuge in the last ditch and make his fight against the indictment of Conley.

With all the weight of evidence which has piled up against the negro, it is regarded as beyond the realm of possibilities that he could persuade the jurors to return a "no bill" against Conley on the charge of murder. Dorsey's one remaining hope at this time would be, it is said, to induce the Grand Jury, to waive definite action until after the trial of Frank, when it will be in a position to say whether an indictment shall be drawn against Conley as an accessory after the fact, to which he has confessed, or as the actual murderer.

Dorsey Refuse sto Comply.

The Solicitor's attitude in the matter plainly was shown by his statement when Foreman Beattie went to him Friday seeking to have him call the meeting. Dorsey flatly refused and said:

"The meeting's only purpose will be to exploit the evidence and embarrass the State, and I hope the Grand Jury when it meets will decide to leave the matter alone.

"The indictment of Conley at this time will be a useless procedure that will not stop the trial of Frank. It will only have a mild but undesirable effect on the State's case.

"Conley is in jail and is going to stay there for some time. He is where the authorities can put their hands on him, and he can be indicted much more properly after the Frank case has been disposed of than before, and by the delay there is no danger of a miscarriage of justice."

The Solicitor's position is attacked as palpably unfair by those who have been working to bring about the indictment of the negro. Dorsey would have the testimony of the negro accredited as that of any free and trustworthy citizen, while those opposing him declare it should be taken in the light of that of a possible murderer who is endeavoring to shift the blame on another's shoulders, they say.

Evidence More Direct.

They add that the evidence against Conley is far more direct and damning than any ever brought against Frank. They charge, on this account, that Conley has been protected and "coddled" when he should have been placed on the same basis as the other suspect in the case and should go before the jury in that aspect.

General denials were entered Saturday to the story published Friday that the Pinkertons had changed their attitude in the murder mystery and were convinced of the innocence of Frank. Chief of Detectives Lanford declared that Harry Scott had reaffirmed his belief in the guilt of Frank and the innocence of Conley, except as accessory after the fact.

Atlanta Day To Be Society Event

Knoxville Exposition Plans Feature

Mrs. Van Deventer, Daughter of Mr. Justice Lurton, to Visit City for Conservation Fair.

At the top Mrs. Horace Van Deventer, President of the Woman's Department of the National Conservation Exposition is shown, while the middle picture shows the Liberal Arts Building. Mrs. George W. Denny, a Vice President of the Woman's Department is shown in the lower picture.

Atlanta Day at the National Conservation Exposition in Knoxville this fall will be one of the largest of the many special days arranged for the national fair in the East Tennessee city.

Atlanta Day, according to plans now on foot, will be largely a society function, for the members of the Woman's Department of the exposition headed by Mrs. Horace VanDeventer, a daughter of Justice Lurton of the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as Knoxville's acknowledged society leader, expect to formulate their plans so that many of Atlanta society folk will make the trip to Knoxville for that day.

In addition it is planned to make Atlanta Day at the exposition one of peculiar and intimate interest to all residents of the city.

Mrs. VanDeventer to Come Here.

The plans for this special day are now in the making. They will be matured probably while the delegation of Knoxville business men is in Atlanta next week, and later when Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers in the woman's department come to the Georgia metropolis to take up the matter with Atlanta society folk.

In the preparations for what undoubtedly will be the South's greatest exposition, the woman's department is playing no small part. In Knoxville the exposition management considers itself fortunate that Mrs. VanDeventer consented to take the direction of the woman's work. She has a very large circle of friends and acquaintancse throughout the country, in cities of the North as well as in cities of the South, and what is more, she has succeeded in interesting large numbers of society women in the work she has under way.

Miss Mabel Boardman, president of the American Red Cross Society and a woman who finds time in the multitude of her various philanthropic work to devote herself to society, will be the guest of the woman's department of the exposition on September 19. Miss Boardman to accept this invitation will be obliged to cut short her vacation, but she has gladly consented to do this rather than miss going to Knoxville. She will be made the recipient of many social favors and attentions while in Knoxville. She will be the house guest of Mrs VanDeventer.

Mrs. Hammond Interested.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, of Washington, wife of the multimillionaire mining engineer, who was the special Ambassador from the United States to England at the time of the coronation of King George, is another society woman who has become interested in the Knoxville show and who will come to that city for one of the special days. Mrs. Hammond is president of the National Civic Federation, which will have an extensive exhibit at the Exposition.

Mrs. John Goelet, of Washington; Miss Mabel Wetmore and other women whose names are known the country over will also be guests of the woman's department while the Exposition gates are open. Recently Mrs. Van Deventer made a trip to Nashville to interest the women of that city. On very short notice a meeting was called. Two hundred or more Nashville women went to that meeting. A number of men went also. There was much enthusiasm shown. The result was that plans were completed then and there for a Nashville Day.

More than that—the Nashville Park Commissioners, under whose auspices a splendid exhibit of paintings is being shown in the Parthenon of that city, voluntarily and as a compliment to Mrs. VanDeventer decided to continue the exhibition almost to the time set for the opening of the Conservation Exposition. Then the exhibits will be moved to Knoxville. One of them will be shown in the Art Building; the other, which is the celebrated collection owned by Charles L. Freer, a millionaire art collector, of Detroit, will be placed in the Woman's Building.

Mrs. Denney Also Active.

Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers, among them Mrs. George W. Denney, fourth vice president, who is also the president of the Tennessee State Federation of Women's Clubs and very active in the club life of Knoxville and Tennessee, are planning now to come to Atlanta within a short time to talk matters over with Atlanta women. Just when Mrs. VanDeventer and Mrs. Denney will come or where the meeting will be held has not been decided.

The fact that Atlanta business men are showing a keener interest in the exposition—which is one designed to benefit the entire South—than they have heretofore, and the chances that Atlanta will be well represented at the exposition, is counted upon to assist the women.

The woman's department has planned its work along broad lines. The stereotyped exhibits that always have been a part of women's departments in other expositions will have no place in the Woman's Building at Knoxville. The idea behind the National Conservation Exposition is one of conservation, and these women have figured it out that there is probably nothing that needs conserving more than the energies and the health of women all over this broad land.

So that is what the exhibits in the woman's department will typify to a very large extent. Of course, the things that have a peculiar interest and attraction to women will not be overlooked.

ARTIFICIAL RAIN INSTALLED ON ATLANTA FARM

Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown Protect Crops With Pipe System.

"These dry nights, when my crops are burning up, I can smell that artificial rain a mile off," said a farmer in the suburbs of Atlanta.

The "artificial rain" of which he spoke is produced on three "fancy" farms within a short distance of Five Points, and, according to the unanimous verdict of Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown, who own "overhead irrigation" plants, it means salvation in dry years.

Stories are told of the wonderful crops these farmers grow—two yields of Irish potatoes a year, for instance, from 200 to 300 bushels an acre—six cuttings of alfalfa, crops of beans when the market is bare and beans are worth $2 a bushel.

Yet the system is simple enough.

Pipes Supply Rain.

On posts eight feet high rest pipes about two inches in diameter. These pipes run the whole length of the fields, and the lines of pipe are twenty feet apart. About two feet apart in the pipes are tiny holes. A gasoline engine, a pump which it operates, an abundant supply of water, and the thing is done.

Six hours each evening, when there is no rain, the pump is run and fine streams of water spurt from the holes in the pipes. At high pressure, these streams are thrown almost from one line of pipe to the next. Handles at convenient intervals make it possible to turn the pipes so that the streams are deflected in any direction and the ground thoroughly soaked with the spray.

This system excels ditch irrigation for Georgia soil for the reason that Georgia clay does not soak up water from a ditch in sufficient quantities. Besides, the soil cakes when water is applied in this way. "Artificial rain," however, coming down like a mist, permeates the whole soil and brings results.

Of course, an overhead pipe system is expensive. The cost is estimated at $250 per acre. This might be reduced somewhat if the farmer performed all the labor himself, or it might easily cost more if conditions were not entirely favorable. The increased yield, however, more than overbalances this initial outlay.

Loring Brown tells of getting an $1,100 crop of Irish potatoes from an acre, under his pipe system. In reality, there were two crops, a spring planting and a fall planting, and the potatoes brought a high price because they were sold for seed.

Fail to Realize Work.

"I have only one objection to seeing Belmont farm described in the newspapers," said Mr. Brown, as he sat in a swing on his front gallery and sorted a thick packet of letters. "My objection is that people read of big yields and good profits, then are anxious to try the same methods. They want to spend a lot of money to emulate Belmont, and fail to take account of the hard work that must go with it.

"A farmer, whether he has a fancy farm or one of the old-fashioned kind, must work eighteen hours a day. He must be on the job 365 days a year. That is what many people forget.

Five years ago, drouth killed the entire crop of potatoes on Belmont. Mr. Brown estimates that dry season cost him $3,000. That winter he went to Greeley, Colo., where overhead irrigation is in use, to see if he could work out a solution of the problem—some sort of insurance against drouth. The pipe lines were the answer. Farms around Atlanta can not grow the same yields produced around Greeley, but the difference in price caused by being closer to a good market overcomes the lesser yield, and more.

Zimmer Installs System.

Mr. Zimmer, on his Kimballville Farm, installed an identical system, though on a smaller scale, and since he installed it, never has had occasion to use it. By some streak of fate, his farm has been blessed with abundant rains.

But rain is freakish in choosing its itinerary. In Atlanta itself and out as far as the Chattahoochee River rains have been sufficient this year. But beyond the river there is serious drouth. Crops are drying up. Irrigation would have been the salvation of the farmers.

And as they sit in front of their homes at night, they can smell the sweet odor of refreshed fields at Belmont—"that darn artificial rain."

WIVES CREDITED WITH KEEPING HUSBANDS ALIVE

Medical Association Finds That Benedict's Regular Existence Is Better Than Bachelor's.

Supervision by wives as a possible reason for the greater longevity of married men than of bachelors is discussed by The Journal of the American Medical Association in its editorial section of the recently published statistics on this point. There is no remark on the statistics of more suicides among married men than bachelors.

The Journal has further information indicating that careful as the married men may be, with restraint once removed through the death or divorce of the wife, widowers and grass widowers leap into indiscretions and are lopped off more rapidly than either those still in the state or those who escaped matrimony.

Live Regular Lives.

"Undoubtedly the low death rate among married men is partly due to the fact that, as a rule, those who are in good health, are readier to marry, while those with more delicate health, especially if suffering from any definite ailment, are not willing to assume the burden and responsibility of a family," says The Journal. "Another factor is that married men live much more regular lives as a rule, and consequently avoid many of the dangers of irregular living.

"This view would seem to be corroborated by the statistics as to the mortality among married men who have lost their wives either by death or divorce. The death rate among these "unmarried men" is considerably higher than that of husbands of the same age, and even as a rule it is higher than that of the bachelors of the same age.

Widowers Die Fast.

"The death rate, for instance, of widowers and divorced men between 20 and 30 is nearly double that of single men. From 30 to 40 it is only 14.1 to 12.9, while from 40 to 50 the mortality of divorced and widowers is slightly less than that of single men of the same age. From 50 to 60, however, it is slightly higher once more.

"At all these ages the mortality rate among widowers and the divorced is at least nearly and sometimes double that of married men of the same age."

Feeds Her Pet Pig With a Silver Spoon

Denver Society Woman Provides Bed of Down and Linen for Her Porcine Possession.

DENVER, July 19.—Mrs. Whitney Newton, a Denver society matron, has a new pet.

Young Robert Newton came home a few evenings ago and brought a baby pig with him.

Mrs. Newton took the squirming animal into her arms and tried to make it comfortable, but without success. Finally, in desperation, she went to the linen closet, took out a fine piece of hemstitched linen, embroidered with blue flowers, wrapped it gently about the slick little pig, then laid him cautiously upon the downy pillows beside her own.

Piggy gave a satisfied little squeak, doubled up his feet and went off to sleep happily.

This cunning act won Mrs. Newton's heart, and from exasperation she developed a positive liking for her pet. His white skin is washed, combed and perfumed and he sleeps in a downy bed every night beside his mistress. He also eats from a silver spoon.

EXPRESS CLAIM OFFICES TO BE CONSOLIDATED

Savannah To Be Headquarters of Florida, Georgia and Southeastern Divisions of Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Consolidated claim offices of three divisions of the Southern Express Company will be located in Savannah after August 1, in pursuance of an order promulgated from the general headquarters of the concern several days ago, official notice of which has just been received here. Simultaneously general claim offices will be opened in Richmond and Chattanooga.

Claim departments distinct and separate from the other branches of the company's business, will be an entirely new thing with this big corporation. W. K. Weaver, of Savannah, chief clerk in the office of Division Superintendent C. C. Wolfle, will be in charge of the consolidated claims office here.

Heretofore it has been the practice of the company to have small claims departments in the offices of each division superintendent, and with him as the chief claim agent.

The offices in Savannah will bring about the consolidation of the claims department of the Florida, the Georgia and the Southeastern divisions of the company. The headquarters of the Florida division have been in Jacksonville, while those of the Southeastern division have been in Atlanta. The Georgia division headquarters have always been in Savannah.

The consolidation will bring 42 new employees of the company to this city. About 25 of these will come from Atlanta, while the others will be transferred from Jacksonville.

The establishment of the claim office at Richmond will embrace the offices now at Wilmington, N. C.; Charlotte and Norfolk. The Chattanooga office will embrace all of the Western division of the company.

Court Calls Both of Boy's Parents Unfit

Serious Charges Are Made Against Proprietor of Inlet Hotel at Tybee and His Wife.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—So serious are the charges and counter-charges in the alimony case of Mrs. Annia Jones against W. A. Jones, proprietor of the Inlet Hotel at Tybee, that Judge Walter G. Charlton has stated from the bench in the Superior Court that he doesn't consider either the father or the mother fit to have the custody of their four-year-old son.

Witness testified to alleged misconduct of Mrs. Jones during the absences of her husband, who is an engineer on the Tybee Branch of the Central of Georgia Railroad and obliged to spend a portion of his time in the city. Other witness testified to gross neglect and mistreatment of Mrs. Jones on the part of her husband.

They called on Senators Bacon and Smith and had lunch with the latter.

Playground Question Rests With Militia

Savannah Volunteer Guards and Georgia Hussars Must Vote to Give Land for Purpose.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Whether the Park Extension will be converted into a model playground and athletic park has not been finally determined. The Savannah Volunteer Guards and the Georgia Hussars, the two military organizations which have not yet given their consent and approval to the plan, have not taken action in regard to the matter.

No special meeting of the Hussars has been held, owing to the absence from the city of Captain Frank P. McIntyre. The Guards have discussed the matter, but owing to the fact that no definite proposition has been put up to them, they have neither approved nor disapproved the plan.

The extension is under the control of the military and the city jointly, and has been set aside as a drill ground.

The girl is now entirely recovered and repentant. Letters left by the girl, who came here recently from Statesboro, indicate that she contemplated the deed for days before the actual attempt was made.

Davant has written to the general office in New Orleans, of the auditing company which recently checked up the books and affairs of the city government in Savannah requesting that a full and complete report on the result of these investigations be rendered at the earliest possible moment. Savannah to Ask Civil Service Law

Police and Fire Departments To Be Put Under Regulations—Efficiency Tests Are Planned.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Alderman George B. Elton's civil service bill will be introduced in the Legislature during the present session.

The special committee appointed by the Mayor to investigate the civil service regulations in other cities has completed its work and recommended the introduction of the bill at the present session. The measure will be immediately advertised for the specified period.

If the bill passes, the Mayor will be authorized to appoint a special committee of three, to be known as the Civil Service Commisson, this commission to have entire charge of the administration of the civil service law in the city. The bill provides that the police and fire departments be placed under civil service, the idea being to divorce these departments from politics.

The bill provides for efficiency tests for the members of the police and fire departments. The selection of appointees will be governed by their moral, mental and physical fitness, and their tenure of office will not depend on the vagaries of politics. They would not be subject to removal unless it were proved that they had been guilty of misconduct or that they were otherwise unfit for their positions.

Whether the bill will pass the Legislature is a question. Its passage will be determined largely by the attitude of the Chatham County Representatives toward it. If a majority of the legislators from this county agree it is a good measure, it probably will go through, but if there is a difference of opinion among the legislators, its defeat is pretty well assured.

LIARS' CONTEST ENDS IN TIE, ANOTHER IS TO BE HELD

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Because three well-known citizens tied for first place in the liars' convention just held in Waycross, it has been decided to hold a second convention to break the tie. The Moose Club is responsible for the inauguration of the novel convention and has decided to present an additional prize to the winner in the next.

City Officials Will Take Turn as Mayor

Savannah Executive Now Plans Regular Daily Period for Conferring With City Employees.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Hereafter city officials will be shown no favoritism when they call on Mayor Richard J. Davant on city business. They will have to take their chances along with everybody else. If one of the humblest citizens happens to get into the Mayor's reception room first the city official will have to wait his turn.

Mayor Davant has given his secretary instructions to this effect, and they will have to stand until a system of office hours which the Mayor has in mind can be put into effect.

It is the Mayor's plan to set aside a certain hour each day for interviews with city officials on city business. This hour will be made known to the people, and callers other than city officials will not be allowed to see the Mayor during that period. Another hour—or two, if necessary—will be set aside for the public.

At present there is no system of this sort at the City Hall, and the callers see the Mayor whenever their time comes. Heretofore city officials have been given precedence over all others irrespective of the time they arrived or how many people are ahead of them.

It has been the case that a city official was admitted to the Mayor the moment he arrived at the office, no matter if a dozen or so people had been waiting for some time for an interview.

JURY BELIEVES BULLARD TO BE SPAIN'S SLAYER

Investigation of Death of Eccentric and Wealthy Farmer Ends in Coroner's Verdict.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—The Clinch County Coroner's Jury investigating the mysterious murder of Mack Spain, an eccentric and wealthy farmer, has returned a verdict accusing Tom Bullard, a white man just entering the twenties.

Bullard is the man who found Spain's body or rather informed searchers of the place where the body could be found. His part in the search for the body is one thing that has turned suspicion to him, as it is alleged he told members of the searching party Spain's body was on the edge of a pond and could be seen easily. When found the body was in a location that made it impossible for any one to see it from the place Bullard said he was when he first discovered the farmer's remains.

At least one more white man, and officers are inclined to believe a third, may become implicated. Bullard has steadfastly refused to make any statement beyond saying that he knows nothing of how Spain was killed.

Another arrest may be made within a few days. Both men suspected of knowing something of the death and the robbery have been found and it is declared will not be able to get away. Sheriff Lee, of Clinch, has been in Waycross working on a clew that he found near Spain's home and this, it is said, will fix the responsibility for the murder beyond any doubt. No one has been able to ascertain how much was taken from Spain, nor where it was put. Bullard has told officers nothing that will aid them in this respect.

MOULTRIE, July 19.—R. B. Vick has a unique plan for defeating the evil intentions of chicken thieves, his once flourishing flock having fallen into their hands until now he has but one lone hen.

Vick is going to lay the cornerstone of a granite chicken coop in a few days. He hopes in this manner to foil marauders. He has posted at his front gate an invitation to all chicken thieves to be present at the ceremony and inspect the plans.

Every door and window will be double locked and barred and rigged with wires in such way that if one is touched an alarm will be sounded.

Sweetheart False; Indian Girl Ends Life

Zanaida was courted by many of the young braves. She fell in love with the handsomest man and the day was set for the ceremony. Elk Tooth suddenly deserted her for another girl of the tribe, and, heartbroken, Zanaida sought surcease in death.

FARM UNION TO UNITE FORCES WITH TOILERS

Federation of Labor and Agricultural Organization to Co-operate Closely if Plans Mature.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Plans that are expected to aid the proposed consolidation of work of the American Federation of Labor and the Farmers' Union were discussed at length in Waycross to-day when a joint committee representing the trade unionists and the Ware County Farmers' Union held a conference.

S. B. Marks, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, and Robert Fechner, secretary, attended, as did President James Cowart, of the Ware County Farmers' Union.

It is not proposed that the National Farmers' Union and the American Federation of Labor shall affiliate and become one big organization. The movement seeks only a unity of purpose—close co-operation for mutual welfare.

Following the conference it was announced that a joint meeting of the State executive committees of the Farmers' Union and the Georgia Federation of Labor would be called. When this is done it is expected that the national organizations will adopt a similar plan for use in the entire country.

Worth $250,000 Now, Still 'Bucks' Wood

E. G. Kastenhuber's Only New Plans Are to Widen Scope of His Laboratory Work.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Finding himself in possession of cash and property worth a quarter of a million dollars has not caused Edwin G. Kastenhuber to change his way of living. If anything, he is working harder now than before. He can be found any morning just at daylight out in his backyard cutting wood. That's his first morning work at home and he refers to it as his "exercise."

Plans for more extensive laboratory work have been made by Mr. Kastenhuber and with the means at hand to carry them out, he expects in a short while to demonstrate some valuable formulas. One of his successes is a mixture of ordinary South Georgia sand with chemicals, forming a hard tile, colored in any way desired. Fancy bricks made by him have withstood all kinds of tests.

Discussing the new turn of events, Mr. Kastenhuber says he does not feel any different since getting $250,000.

"In my new laboratory I will have fitted up special quarters for students and will have a department open to the medical profession. The best time I can have is when I am working, and I am certainly not going to start loafing just because I am well fixed," he said.

Storm Does Damage In Moultrie Section

Naval Stores Operators and Farmers Suffer Loss From Wind, Rain and Hail.

MOULTRIE, July 19.—The terrific wind and electrical storm that swept over this section last night wrought considerable damage over a wide area.

At Omega, just north of here, several houses were unroofed, while three were blown to the ground, the inmates escaping death in a miraculous manner. Pine trees boxed for turpentine snapped in two and the loss to naval stores operators will amount to hundreds of dollars. In the eastern part of the county a torrential rain, accompanied by hail, devastated crops. In Moultrie lightning struck one house. The high wind blew over a church in the suburbs.

Girl Bride Sees Husband Convicted

R. L. English Is Found Guilty of Stealing Wire from Savannah Electric Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—With his pretty wife, not yet out of her teens, sitting in the courtroom, R. L. English has been tried and convicted in the City Court of the larceny of copper wire from the Savannah Electric Company. Mrs. English, hardly more than a girl, clad in a pink summer dress and wearing a big leghorn hat with a wreath of red roses, sat calmly through the trying ordeal. Mrs. English maintains that her husband is innocent of any intentional wrongdoing.

Indian Papoose Is Raised by Soldiers

Full-Blooded Modoc, Back at Old Home, Tells Romantic Story of Early Life.

KLAMATH FALLS, July 19.—Kit Carson, a full-blood Modoc, visited his native land a few days ago for the first time since his babyhood.

The story of the life of Carson is unique. In 1852 a detachment of Government troops was sent to the Klamath country to quiet reported uprisings among the Indians. A large band of Indians had established a village on the shore of the lake. When the Indians caught sight of the soldiers they made a hasty departure.

Kit Carson, who was then about a year old, was left behind by his frightened mother. It was difficult for the soldiers to determine what to do with the child. Finally a soldier named Woods asked that he be permitted to adopt the boy. He gave the little fellow the name of Kit Carson and found him a temporary home with a Spanish family at Yreka.

Police of Waycross For 'Slashed Skirt'

Men, Not Women, To Be Arrested If Latest Style Causes Too Much Excitement.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Wearers of the new style "slashed skirt" have nothing to fear in Waycross. The police will not arrest wearers of the new skirt, but will see that men do not let their curiosity make them obnoxious.

The first time a slashed skirt was seen here the wearer paraded up and down one of the city's main business streets and as long as she was on the street there was an unusual number of men found "strolling"—none of the strollers getting very far from the skirt. It is said that a number of women here have purchased the slashed skirts and after trying them on at home, have sewn up most of the slash or worn the skirt with a petticoat.

SOLDIERS REST AT ST. SIMONS CAMP SUNDAY

Second Regiment Gives Big Dance on Island Saturday Night—First Dress Parade.

ST. SIMONS, July 19.—Sunday will be a day of rest for the Second Georgia Regiment, and the men will be given a chance to get acquainted with the historic island. There will be nothing to do until the big dress parade até o'clock in the afternoon.

The first dress parade was held Saturday afternoon. The regimental dance was given on Saturday night, the Second Regiment Band furnishing the music. The boys turned out in force with their brass buttons, to the delight of the girls on the island. So far this has been the big event of the encampment. On Saturday the officer of the day was W. G. Fage, and officer of guard, J. J. West, both of Albany.

CRACKER CLUB TO STAY OUT OF SHERIFF'S RACE

SAVANNAH, July 19.—There will be no indorsement of a candidate for Sheriff of Chatham County by the Cracker Club. It had been stated that an effort would be made to have the club indorse Robert Sausey. The supporters of Colonel Merrett W. Dixon expressed gratification when the announcement was made that the club would not make an indorsement.

MELON SEASON OVER, BUYERS SEEN NO MORE

Jovial Solicitors Depart, Leaving Behind Much Cash—Larger Acreage for 1914 Certain.

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—The finish of the watermelon season in South Georgia is at hand and the face of the ubiquitous melon buyer will be seen no more in the land until another year rolls around.

These buyers are a jolly set and soon make themselves part of the life of a town, knowing everybody by name, rooting vociferously for the home ball team and becoming generally popular while sandwiching in a lot of business for their respective roads or houses.

The farmer who decided not to plant watermelons for shipment this year is regretful now, as the season has been the finest in years and the prices have kept up well through the whole season.

Charlie Aldag, of Pidcock, reports eight carloads shipped from five and a half acres of land, and there are others coming very nearly up to it. A number of farmers received as high as from $200 to $225 on special carloads. The results of the present season mean the biggest acreage in watermelons next year that has ever been known here.

Residents Who Are Well-to-Do Refuse to Send Checks for Paving Assessments.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Following the instructions of Mayor Chappell, Marshal George J. Burrus, has issued attachments against a large number of Columbus property owners, because of failure to pay paving assessments.

The city has paving accounts amounting to more than $27,000. Many who are amply able to pay for some reason have refused.

CORDELE SWELTERS WHEN TEMPERATURE GOES TO 110

CORDELE, July 19.—Yesterday went on record as probably being the hottest day that has ever been felt in Cordele. The thermometer registered 105 in the shade and in the sun it reached 110 degrees. There was no wind stirring through most of the day, which caused the heat to reach an almost unbearable degree. When a breeze did stir the heat waves were so intense that they were almost scorching in their effect.

TWO-SESSION SCHOOL PLAN TO STICK AT THOMASVILLE

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—To stick to two sessions a day in the public schools here for at least another term was the decision of the Thomasville Board of Education at its meeting this week. A petition signed by several hundred of the patrons of the school was presented asking that it restore the old one-session rule, but, after considering the matter, the majority of the board voted to let the present rule continue.

A. P. A. HOLDS SECRET MEETING AT CORDELE

CORDELE, July 19.—A meeting of the members of the American Protective Association of Cordele was held last night, at which time it is thought that permanent organization was effected. However, as the political body held the meeting behind closed doors, none of the details acted upon by the gathering became definitely known outside of the members.

NEGRO AT THOMASVILLE COMMITTED SUICIDE

THOMASVILLE, July 19—With a pistol in his hand, his thumb on the trigger and a bullet hole in the center of his forehead, Jack Lofton, a negro section hand on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, was found dead locked in his house. It is an unusual thing for a negro to commit suicide. This is the second case known here among the members of that race.

OVERCOME BY HEAT AT ICE PLANT IN CORDELE

CORDELE, July 19.—Jake Robinson, a negro, employed at a local ice plant, was overcome by heat to-day and came near dying. There has been a great deal of suffering in Cordele within the past few days as a result of the severe hot weather.

TRAVELING WATER WAGON IS PROVIDED FOR HORSES

BOSTON, July 19.—A traveling water cart from which horses may be refreshed has been placed in commission in Boston's streets by the S. P. C. A.

For years the society has been furnishing water from hydrant stations, but recently there have been many requests for a watering place in sections of the city where it would be impractical to open hydrants. Hence the advent of the water cart.

For social news of the South see page 10 this section and the society section.

Court Orders Sale Of Property Halted

Fourth National of Columbus Gets Injunction to Prevent Debtor Transferring Holdings.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Judge Z. A. Littlejohn, of Americus, who heard the argument in the petition of the Fourth National Bank of this city, against Leo Lowenherz and H. M. Mooty, in which the bank was seeking to enjoin them from disposing of property made over by Mooty to Lowenherz, has handed down his decision, in which he enjoins Lowenherz from disposing of the property without first giving bond to the amount of the sale of the property, until after a final settlement of the case in the courts.

There is $13,000 involved, over which Mooty transferred to Lowenherz last February in settlement of a claim the latter held against the former. At the time the property transfer was made Mooty owed the bank something like $1,500 and had no other property on which the bank could obtain its money. Lowenherz is president of one of the largest dry goods establishments in West Georgia and Mooty is his former bookkeeper.

OLD COLUMBUS STANDPIPE NOW IS BEING DESTROYED

COLUMBUS, July 19.—An old Columbus landmark is passing away with the removal of the standpipe on Upper Broad street, which was erected during the year 1888, when Cliff B. Grimes was Mayor.

The standpipe when torn down will be rebuilt on Wynn's Hill, which is one of the highest points about the city and the Columbus Water Supply Company will extend its mains from North Highlands, where a new settling basin will be built to the standpipe, a distance of three miles.

SUES STREET RAILROAD FOR $10,000 DAMAGES

COLUMBUS, July 19.—A suit for $10,000 has been filed against the Columbus Railroad Company by John H. Newsome, who alleges that on February 22 he was permanently injured, when a car of the defendant company struck a negro's horse and knocked it against him. The negro, whose horse was struck by the car, does not figure in the suit, as he has never filed any claim against the street railway company and his name is not known.

COLUMBUS INVESTIGATING DROWNING IN RESERVOIR

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The city of Columbus has started an investigation of the report that a man named Hamilton, who was recently reported drowned in Holland Creek, was really drowned in the reservoir from which Columbus gets a part of its water supply. In fact it is acknowledged that the man was really drowned in the reservoir, but that he was gotten out before the water was contaminated.

Power Company May Use Tallulah 'Juice'

Incorporators of Columbus Concern Silent and Rumor Is Busy as to Their Aims.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Edward W. Swift, J. P. Illges, J. P. Kyle, Clifford J. Swift, John T. Davis, Jr., J. P. Golden, T. E. Golden, O. C. Bulloch, E. J. Rankin, John A. Rankin, E. P. Dismukes and Harry L. Williams have filed a petition for a charter for the Muscogee Light and Power Company.

The capital stock will be $50,000 paid in, but the incorporators ask for the privilege of increasing its capital to $1,000,000 by a majority vote from time to time. Much speculation is rife as to the intentions of promoters, but they refuse to talk.

It is the opinion of many that they propose to establish a power company in this city and take their current from the Georgia Power Company's plant a Tallulah Falls. The proposed company announces its intention of furnishing current for lighting, heating, operating electric cars and to conduct a business similar to other corporations of like character.

Woman Sues to Save Parrot From Cursing

Tells Court That Bird Is Under Baneful Influences Now as Property of Saloon Man.

ALTON, ILL., July 19.—Mrs. Geneva Littlehage has applied to Justice Daniel Gorman for a replevin writ to obtain possession of a parrot to save him from the baneful influences of a saloon.

"The bird never swore once in his life, and I can't bear the thought of his learning to curse," she told the Justice. "You ought to help along the cause by not charging me anything for the papers."

Mrs. Littlehage said while coming from Kansas City to Alton she employed a porter to carry the cage. She said he ran off with the parrot and when she next heard of it the bird had been sold to a saloon man for $10. The proprietor of the saloon refused, it is said, to give it to the owner.

Concrete Patch Put On River's Bottom

Engineers Employ Novel Method of Keeping Texas Stream From Habit of Losing Itself.

MARTINDALE, TEXAS, July 19.—It has been found necessary to put another patch on the bed of the Blanco River. This stream has a remarkable way of losing itself, and in order to restore it to its surface channel a concrete patch has been placed upon the holes through which it disappears.

For many years it has been emptying portions of its flow into small holes in its bed, but it was not until about a year ago that the entire bottom, so to speak, dropped out at a point near San Marcos. In one night the river below that point went dry, it had had a width of nearly 200 feet and was flowing a strong current until the sudden disappearance of the water.

PLAN BIG FETE WHEN CANAL IS READY FOR USE

Flotilla to Make Trip From Columbus Down Chattahoochee to St. Andrew's Bay.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—For the purpose of celebrating the opening of the St. Andrews Bay Canal in an appropriate manner next fall, the Columbus Board of Trade will take steps at once to memorialize Congress to assist. The Navy Department will be asked to send warships to St. Andrews Bay, and men of national fame will be invited to make addresses at the various points along the river and canal where stops are made.

The plan is to begin at Columbus and have a flotilla travel down the Chattahoochee River, giving a whole week over to the ceremonies, which will be elaborate. South Georgia, South Alabama and West Florida are much interested in the scheme.

It is expected that there will be several hundred persons who will make the trip down the river to St. Andrews Bay.

Noble Ex-Convict Becomes Minister

Leonard Mordaunt Runs Gamut of Life From British Society to California Prison.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Leonard Mordaunt, ex-convict, scion of a noble English family, and better known in the role of a prison-reform worker, was ordained to the ministry of the Free Methodist Church by Bishops Jones and Sellew at the close of the annual conference which has been going on in the secluded aisles of Mineral Park.

During twenty years he has ranged from the welcome member of exclusive circles of European society to the lowest grade of convict. He became a convert and decided to dedicate the remaining years of his existence to the service of God and humanity.

Minnesota Seeks Elk for Big Preserve

Section Is Natural Home of Animal, and State Asks Herd From Yellowstone.

ST. PAUL, July 19.—Fifty elk from the Yellowstone National Park, if they can be obtained, will be turned loose in Minnesota in the Superior forest and game reserve, which lies along the Canadian boundary line north of Lake Superior.

The territory is the natural home of the elk, and together with the adjoining national reserve covers more than 1,000,000 acres. There are no elk in either reserve now. It is estimated that the annual increase in the herd will be 50 per cent. This is the increase noted in the Yellowstone Park.

Bold Amazon Shoves Auto Out of Her Way

Worcester, Mass., Woman Merely Bruises Her Finger When She Pushes Car from Path.

WORCESTER, MASS., July 19.—Agnes Olsen, 30, known far and wide as "the Amazon," is none the worse today, save for a sore finger, as a result of her stopping a touring car on Main street, and pushing it back out of her way. The machine was unharmed.

Walter Shea, chauffeur of the touring car, was startled to see a woman walk in front of the machine as he was passing City Hall. His horror turned to amazement when she turned as he ground on his brakes, calmly grasped the car by the hood, and not only stopped its menacing approach, but pushed it back a foot.

Race Restrictions In Hotels Illegal

New York Attorney General Writes Opinion That They Violate New Civil Rights Bill.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 19.—There must be no discrimination because of race, creed or color at any public resort, place of amusement or of public accommodation, under the amended civil rights law which takes effect September 1, 1913.

The attention of Attorney General Carmody has been called to the fact that circulars are being issued by some health resorts in the State, in which is the announcement that the places are not open to certain races.

In a statement to-day Mr. Carmody reviews the statute and declares that such notices will be prohibited.

ROCKFORD, ILL., July 19.—Miss Julia C. Lathrop, head of the National Children's Bureau, has returned to the home of her birth and childhood to espouse the cause of the nation's babies and to appeal to the executives of Illinois cities to join in the movement of a broadening municipal protection for child growth.

Miss Lathrop renewed her demand for a rigid birth registration law and referred to the progress being made in that direction.

SEEK FOR MOST STUPID MAN.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—A German paper has started a prize symposium on the question: "Who is the most stupid man in Berlin?"

Bridge Burns; Stops Traffic on A., B. & A.

Alapaha River Crossing Destroyed by Fire—Sparks From Locomotive Blamed for Blaze.

CORDELE, July 19.—The Alapaha River bridge on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlanta Railway, two miles south of Rebecca, was destroyed by fire yesterday about noon, temporarily putting at a standstill all freight traffic over the road between Cordele and Fitzgerald. It is thought that the fire caught from sparks from the engine of a northbound passenger train.

Until the bridge can be rebuilt, which will probably require a week, all passenger trains will be detoured between Cordele and Tifton over the Georgia Southern and Florida Railroad, and between Fitzgerald and Tifton over the Thomasville branch of the A., B. & A. road. Perishable freight also will be routed over these roads.

Hot Weather Causes Sabbath-Breaking

Ice Company Sets Aside Old Rule and Decides to Deliver to Customrs on Sunday.

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—The heat wave of the past week proved too much for the Sabbath-keeping rules of the Thomasville Ice Company and it has decided to go back to delivering ice to customers on that day.

For a year or two past no ice was delivered on Sunday anywhere in the city and those who wanted an extra quantity over the supply laid in on Saturday had to go or send to the factory for it. Many complaints have been sent in of late that the expense of buying a large quantity on Saturday to last over Sunday was too much for the ordinary citizen.

Wasp Sting Enables Cripple to Walk

Regains Use of Legs After 38 Years on Crutches When Insect Invades Bed.

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—Charles Wightman, deputy county clerk at Clayton, told a reporter how he had just been able to walk without crutches for the first time in 38 of the 42 years of his life. He fell when he was 4 and injured both legs permanently.

He said that a neighbor had told him a snake story just before he went to bed.

He thought how comfortable it was to live in a country where one could sleep in peace instead of in one of those countries where he had heard snakes sometimes creep in and share one's bed.

He thrust his right leg deeper under the covers. Then something that stung like a hot needle pierced his ankle. "I sprang out of bed and ran and stumbled twelve feet across the room," he said. "It was the first time I had taken so many steps unassisted since I was a baby."

"And was it really a snake?" he was asked. "No; it was a wasp." And he showed the ankle where the sting had swollen it.

Pawns Gold Teeth He Didn't Chew With

Kansan Says He Could Masticate on Other Side and Oakes Crowns to Loan Agent.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—"I don't need these teeth to chew with and they're loose, anyway," an old man said at the municipal pawnshop, pulling seven gold crowns out of his mouth and laying them on the counter.

"These teeth are just a losing investment as long as I do all my chewing on the other side, anyway. I might as well be getting something on them. Can you make me a loan?"

Ralph Perry, manager of the pawnshop, gave the man $1.75 on his gold bicuspids and molars.

"When the ones on the other side get loose, I'll be back after these," the man promised. "My dentist said there was gold enough in the bunch so he could trade me a set of false teeth for 'em as soon as the crowns all wore out and got loose."

Wagons Must Have Lights at Both Ends

Washington State Will Enforce Strict Vehicle Law—All Classes Affected.

SEATTLE, July 19.—On and after August 1 every vehicle in this State must be provided with both rear and front lights in case night travel is necessary. Automobiles, wagons, buggies and cycles must carry lights so that travelers in front or behind may see.

Farmers as well as city residents are affected, and the old familiar farm wagon will be altered by a lantern hung from the rear axle and a spotlight fastened to the spring seat. The law was necessary because of the increasing traffic at night through sections where roads are narrow and grades dangerous.

500 FARMERS AT COLLEGE TO HEAR SOIL LECTURE

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., July 19.—Kankakee farmers, 500 strong, visited the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois. Professor J. C. Coller, "soil director" for the county, was in charge of the excursion, which came on a special train.

Dr. C. G. Hopkins lectured on soil and fertility, and afterward the university farm was inspected. Eighty women in the party inspected the domestic science department. Luncheon was served by "co-eds."

FIGHT ASSURED OVER LOCATION FOR HOSPITAL

Columbus Owns Two Lots—Others Offered at High Price. Present Site Undesirable.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Now that the hospital bond issue has been carried, and the city when it sells its $60,000 worth of bonds will be in a position to erect a first-class hospital, a fair-sized row is in sight over the location.

As usual, there are a number of sites offered, at prices above the average. The city owns one or two lots that are available in addition to the one where the present hospital stands.

The location of the present hospital is just about as uninviting as it would be possible to find, there being railroad yards, roundhouse and shops on the south, a sash and door plant on the east, railroad tracks on the west and a tombstone and marble works plant and a cemetery on the north.

Engineer Races His Train Past Flames

Row of Houses and 100-Cord Stack of Wood Beside Track Are Burned.

CORDELE, July 19.—Passengers on an Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic train had an exciting experience yesterday afternoon when the train came upon a fire very close to the tracks in the vicinity of Hatley, in which more than 100 cords of wood and several small houses were destroyed.

In order to pass the fire with safety, the engineer was obliged to open the throttle and put his engine to the fastest speed. All of the passengers went through the experience safely, though the heat from the fire was so intense that some of them were almost suffocated. The wood had been stacked alongside the track for shipment. How the fire originated was not learned.

Seaboard to Make Division at Cordele

All Developments Point to Plan for Increasing Importance of Crisp Metropolis.

CORDELE, July 19.—The Seaboard Air Line is considering establishing relay shops in Cordele, it seems, for the road has concluded to make this point the passenger terminal for the Savannah-Montgomery division.

Railroad men say they have seen orders to different passenger trainmen that two months after July 1 they would be required to take up their runs for both directions at this point. Another fact that seems to give backing to the report is that recent inquiries have been made by conductors and engineers, seeking to secure residences here. More than 50 new citizens would be brought to Cordele by the change. The present passenger terminal is at Americus.

EXPRESS AGENT AND CASH MISSING FROM WARWICK

CORDELE, July 19.—S. J. Smith, an employee of the Southern Express Company, acting as temporary agent at Warwick, between Cordele and Albany, on the Georgia Southwestern and Gulf Railway, during a vacation of the regular agent, disappeared last night, and, it is said, took all the funds on hand. It is reported that he came to Cordele, but officers here failed to locate him.

Brooks County Strip Would Be in Lowndes

Movement Started to Have Bill Introduced in Legislature to Have Transfer Made.

VALDOSTA, July 19.—A movement has been started here to transfer a strip of territory on the southern border of Brooks County to Lowndes County, and the Representatives in the Legislature will be asked to introduce a bill to that effect.

The territory affected lies along the Willacoochee River, remote from the county seat of Brooks County, and it is claimed that the people living in that section are anxious to be placed in Lowndes County.

The National Highway passes throug hthe stretch of territory, but it is understood that the County Commissioners of Brooks County have refused to maintain the highway or do any work whatever on it.

Business men in this city recently subscribed nearly $1,000 to be expended on the highway through the strip mentioned. Brooks County refused to do anything whatever toward building and maintaining the road.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The movement instituted by the D. A. R.'s in Columbus to bring the ashes of Former Governor John Clarke of Georgia from St. Andrews Bay, Fla., where they are buried, is well under way.

RAILROAD WILL FIGHT PAVING OF VALDOSTA LAND

Atlantic Coast Line Will Test Right of City to Assess It for Work.

VALDOSTA, July 19.—The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company today notified the Mayor and Council of Valdosta that it will not consent to the paving of Savannah avenue and requesting the city to have the brick which are piled along the avenue removed from its property.

The action of the road brings to a head the differences between the city and the road affecting the ownership of the thoroughfare.

It is understood that the city will pave the street and levy the assessments for the work as they are made against other property owners. The railroad is expected to begin legal action to prevent this, and the ownership of the property will be settled by the courts.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Human System Poisons Itself

Otherwise Most of Us Would Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Nuxcara is a guaranteed remedy for the treatment of the membranes of the stomach and intestines. It is not a digestive agent, but a certain and positive cure for indigestion and dyspepsia.

Nuxcara promotes the secretion of natural digestive fluids, restores and reduces the inflamed membranes. Proper assimilation is re-established. Nutrition is improved. Hence, Nuxcara increases vitality.

Prominent Citizen Indorses NUXCARA

Mr. J. W. Brooks, traveling representative of The Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, says: "For two years I have carried in my grip a bottle of Nuxcara, and would not think of going out on the road without it. I consider it the most wonderful discovery in medicine. The number of people who suffer with indigestion and dyspepsia, the terrible distress they suffer, no one knows but those who have had experience with it. When one remedy after another fails, when digestive agents seem to aggravate it. In the face of all this, Nuxcara cures in every case—truly it is a wonderful remedy."

COLUMBUS MILL SCHOOL HELD AS MODEL BY U. S.

How Georgia City Is Caring for Cotton Factory Children Told in Government Pamphlet.

How Columbus is caring for the education of the boys and girls of its cotton mills is the story embodied in a pamphlet published by the United States Department of Education, copies of which were circulated in Atlanta yesterday.

How the boys and girls of the mills themselves work against going to school, rendering doubly hard the problem before the public, is a pitiful note of the story.

They call their school in Columbus the "dinner toters' school," because even during their school days they must work, taking hot lunches to their parents, brothers, sisters, and others who work in the mills.

Must Take Parents' Lunch.

The pamphlet tells of this custom, revealing something of the life of the cotton mill child. It says:

"The long intermission in the middle of the day is necessary that the children may take the lunches to the mills. Many of the mills are some distance from the school—some more than a mile away. Most of the children, therefore, walk more than two miles during the noon hour. Besides, they are compelled to wait 20 or 30 minutes for the operatives to eat their dinners before taking the baskets back.

"Some children earn several dollars each week by carrying such baskets to mill operatives. The price usually paid for taking lunch to one person for a week is 25 cents, and children often take lunches to several persons."

The booklet was prepared by Roland B. Daniel, and was published by the Department of Education as the description of an admirable system. It deals not only with the mill children, but with the boys and girls who are more fortunate, showing how the Columbus scheme of education is variable, being adapted to meet the demands that come with a mixed population so as to care alike for the two classes. P. P. Claxton, Federal Commissioner of Education, says in the foreword to the book:

"Columbus was one of the first of this country's cities to work out certain phases of this problem of adaptation."

The Columbus schools effect industrial training for all children, but a training varied according to the class from which the children come.

Call of Mills Strong.

The writer, Mr. Hill, laments the fact that "the call of the mills is strong."

"While the prescribed course for the mill children contemplates seven years, few continue after the fifth or sixth year," he wrote. "Not more than 1 per cent finish this school and pursue their studies further."

In all lines of work, academic and industrial, the aim of the school for mill operatives is to better living conditions a little among the people for whom it was organized. That is the only hope. In the beginning the advocates of this type of school thought that many of the mill children might be induced to continue in school and do more advanced work, especially along vocational lines. In this respect the school has been a disappointment to some.

"We are seldom able to induce pupils to finish even the limited course offered in this school," writes Mr. Daniel. "Our best hope is that we may better living conditions a little."

Toward the end, the school has been made a sort of social center. The school is in session the entire year around, and pupils are promoted quarterly, that the children will not drift away, as it is feared they would surely do in the case of a three months' vacation. Teachers do social work, visiting the sick, distributing certain charity, obtaining means of operation for the physically defective, arranging for social evenings, fostering organizations among the older people, and dealing in like activities.

Summing up the work of the school, the writer says:

"While this school has done good work and its benefits have been felt, we are sure the weakest point in it is not being able to hold the children long enough to receive its full benefits. An enforced attendance law would aid very materially in this respect."

Industrial Work Taught.

Along with "the three R's," the mill children are trained in industrial branches, being taught woodworking and gardening. The girls are given work in basket-making, sewing, cooking, poultry-raising and gardening.

In its scheme of adaptation, the city has an altogether different school for other children. The regular grade work is done, and in the traditional high school a year and a half of industrial work, manual training for the boys and domestic science for the girls, is given.

Another variation comes when the curriculum of the negro schools are worked out. There is industrial education for negroes in the public school, but different from that supplied the white children. The Columbus method is altogether one of adaptation.

The difference lies in the fact that the negroes receive more of the training, going into more branches of manual labor, and taking it throughout the school course. Almost every branch of work with the hands is offered them. Of this work the booklet says:

"Pupils who remain in the schools long enough to complete the course receive in compensation for their labor upon leaving school about twice what they would receive for unskilled labor such as they would be able to render without such training. It is often the case that one of these boys is able to earn $2 a day at the age of 17 when his father, without such preparation, receives $1.25 for unskilled labor.

High School in Scheme.

The book, being altogether a treatise on industrial education in Columbus, is given over largely to a description of the courses in the Columbus Industrial High School, the pride of the city's scheme of education. The school, besides its academic work, has vocational courses, including home economics, dressmaking and millinery, mechanic arts, textile arts, and a business course.

This industrial high school is separate and distinct from the conventional academic high school. It is merely another phase of the Columbus scheme of adaptation of education to varied needs and to varied classes.

Pony Contestants in Home Stretch

Fine Progress Made in Last Days

Winners of Race Will Be Announced in Few Days After Battle Closes July 31.

Great progress has been made by the contestants who are striving for The Georgian and American ponies, as the standings published to-day demonstrate. Nearly all the contestants who are crowding toward the front have more than 100,000 votes, but in the ten days remaining these figures, in all probability, will be doubled and trebled.

This is in spite of the fact that the coupons have been discontinued. Gains from now on will represent simply subscriptions obtained. The contestants agree unanimously that this is perfectly fair. A coupon-clipping contest is no contest at all, except as it represents the ability to build up a system of collecting the slips from friends in the neighborhood. A subscription-getting contest, on the other hand, tests the mettle of every contestant to the full, and the best will win.

Will Announce Winners Soon.

Besides, by discontinuing the coupons, it will be possible to announce the winners in the contest probably August 3, three days after the contest closes, on the night of July 31.

If coupons still were being voted, it would take two weeks or more for all of them to come in, and knowledge of the result would be delayed that long.

The bonus offer, awarding 20,000, 12,500 and 6,000 votes for clubs of $35, $25 and $15, respectively, closed Saturday night, and with a large number of clubs turned in. It was a laggard contestant, indeed, who did not appear yesterday with at least a $35 club, and some of the most active had two and three clubs.

Even Chance in Country.

Contestants in the country, it is supposed, did as well, but subscriptions arriving in Monday's mails will be credited on the club offer for these out-of-town boys and girls. This is to give them an even chance with their city cousins.

Probably another small bonus will be offered for the closing weeks of the contest. It will be nothing like those which have been given so far—not nearly so attractive, but still worth winning.

Within a few days the thirteen additional ponies needed to make up the complete lot of twenty-two will be on hand. They are being collected now from the leading breeders of this sort of fancy stock and will be brought to Atlanta before the contest closes.

Maurice Means, of Meansville, is shown at the top, while below is Miss Helen Brantley, of No. 31 E. Alexander Street. Both are way up in the race for the prize Shetlands.

Moving Picture Gives Mother Clew to Girl

Missing Daughter Is Recognized on Screen and Police Are Following Up Trace.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The "movies" may be instrumental in restoring Olga Ellis, 5, to the mother from whom she was taken in Revere, Mass., and brought to California.

For six months the police have sought John Ellis, of Revere, Mass., who is said to have left that city with his daughter.

A school-teacher of Berkeley, Cal., became interested in the case and gave a picture of the child and the mother's address to a moving picture agency.

Mrs. Myrtle Palmer, housekeeper in a hotel here, saw the mother's appeal at a moving picture theater recently and recognized the little girl as one who had stayed at the hotel with her father for several weeks. He had registered, she said, as D. Delisle, and had gone to Eureka, Cal.

Mrs. Palmer notified the police and search for the man and child has been instituted in Eureka.

Women Convict Her For Slapping Child

First Feminine Jury in Sonoma County, California, Returns Verdict of Guilty of Assault.

PETALUMA, COLO., July 19.—A jury of twelve women convicted a woman, Mrs. W. S. Waldorf, upon a charge of battery here to-day. This is the first jury of women that ever tried a case in Sonoma County. Mrs. Waldorf was accused of having slapped a neighbor's children. The jury was out less than an hour.

HORSE FALLS IN FISSURE IN SINKING KANSAS FARM

HOISINGTON, KANS., July 19.—Fissures varying from a few inches to a foot and a half in width and extending several feet into the ground have opened up in L. E. Baker's alfalfa field near this city and are causing a great deal of speculation.

There have been no indications of an earthquake of any sort, but the ground seems to be sinking away. The fissures were discovered when Baker missed one of his horses and found it imprisoned in a fissure.

Squaws Lay Ties As Bucks Play Poker

Desert Section Hand Boss Returns to Find Piute Women Doing Construction Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Piute Indians as substitutes for Mexican section hands were tried out in the Nevada desert last week. The Mexicans were deemed unsatisfactory because they would drop their tools and rest the instant the "boss" got far enough away so that he could not hit them with a shovel handle.

With the Indians on the job, however, the work went along just the same, boss or no boss.

Nevertheless the Mexicans are again on the pay roll and the Indians are taking their traditional ease.

After glowingly watching five days of splendid work by his Piute bucks the section boss left them the other day. Returning 24 hours later he found the suffragette members of the Piute tribe doing the work on the railroad, while the bucks were gathered in a poker game at one side of the track.

Tight Shoes Land Thief Behind Bars

Burglar in Jewelry Store Kicks Heels to Relieve Pressure and Alarms Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Frank Davies, who at times also gives his name as John Simpson and Joe Allen, became irritated last night while scooping unset diamonds in his hat in a dark room because the toes of his new shoes were too narrow.

Intending to relieve the squeeze, he kicked toward the floor with his heel, but miscalculated and drove his foot through a glass show case. A policeman in a saloon on the floor below heard the noise and arrested Davies, who says he is an ex-convict and that he arrived here from Los Angeles at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The diamonds were claimed to-day by the jewelers from whom they were taken.

Must Stay Maids to Get Mother's Estate

Daughters of Ohio Woman Are Beneficiaries Under Will Which Prohibits Their Marriage.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, July 19. One of the most remarkable wills ever admitted to probate in this county was made by Jane Lake, late of Richwood, who left considerable property to her three daughters, Linie, Nora and Ida.

The provisions are that the estate shall be equally divided among the three daughters, on the condition that none of them will marry. If one of them marries, her share of the estate goes to the two remaining single. If all three should marry, the entire estate is to go to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ONLY AMERICAN KING YEARNS TO QUIT HIS THRONE

All of Former Broker's Thirty Wives Want English Gowns. Jealousy Spreads.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King, practically has made up his mind to renounce his throne. He is King of the Island of Arorae, one of the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands. Until 1909 he was a New York curb broker. The insistence of his many wives for English gowns and his loneliness have led to the determination to give up his kingly honors. He tells of his intentions in a letter just received by a friend in this city.

The career of Everett has been unusual. In 1909, when he was in business in this city, he was thought to be well to do. He met reverses, however, in Wall Street, and in the latter part of 1909 disappeared, without leaving a word of farewell. Nothing was heard from him until in 1911, in a remarkable letter, he told of being made the King of Arorae, in the South Sea Islands. He had landed, he said, on one of the small islands, and had gone from there to other islands of the Gilbert group. Finally he reached Arorae. It was a phonograph which he had in his possession that eventually won for him his throne. The King at that time of the island took a great fancy to the phonograph.

Phonograph Wins Kingdom.

By the hour Everett, according to his own account, entertained the monarch, constantly growing in his graces. Finally the old King adopted Everett, and when he died Everett succeeded to the throne. According to the custom of the island, Everett took a good many wives.

Everett took a very lively interest in the affairs of the island. He increased its business with traders. The principal product of the island is copra, or dried cocoanut meat. The letter, in part, reads:

"At the present time the King's job is about the last thing to be desired, and do not be surprised if I walk in on you some day in the near future. I am about tired of the job.

"For some time past conditions here have steadily become worse. It started when my wives, of whom there are about 30, insisted on wearing English dresses. A trader who stopped here presented one of the natives with three English gowns in exchange for some copra. The native presented them to the King, and I in turn gave them to three of my wives. The natives have never worn any clothes to speak of. Imagine my surprise, then, when the three dresses became the center of a regular war among my wives.

"The three victorious wives managed to get them on somehow, and that settled it. Every one of them set up a kick for a dress, and they worried the life out of me. I was forced to get the gowns. The first trader that stopped at the island from Australia was commissioned to bring them back on the next trip, and in due course of time they arrived.

Jealousy Over English Gowns.

"The dresses were of all colors and sizes. Most of the people here are about the same stature, few being over four feet six or seven. Some of the dresses were too small, others too large, but they created a sensation. Dressed in those creations, with bare brown feet stepping proudly, my wives paraded up and down the island, causing every woman in the kingdom, young and old, to grow jealous.

"So far, half of the female population have been given the gowns and the other half are waiting eagerly. The worst part of it all is that the men are as enthusiastic over this new style of dress as the women, and my objections have not added to my popularity whatever. I am daily expecting the men to demand suits of flannel and silk shirts.

Affairs on a Business Basis.

"I have not done so badly here financially. I put the business of the island on a business basis soon after becoming King, and things have flourished.

"I don't know how the people here will take my departure. They may even try to prevent it, and I have been considering the best method to leave. I could probably get aboard one of the trading ships and get to Australia, after which it would be easy, of course, to get back to the United States."

County of Warner

Should Be Created

Manchester, the Logical County Seat—County Will Have 10,000 Population; $1,750,000 Taxable Values; Area Over 222 Square Miles.

Little Territory From Three of the State's Largest Counties Will Give County—New County Has Railroads—Sentiment Favors It.

The people situated in the southeastern portion of Meriwether, northern portion of Talbot and northeastern portion of Harris Counties will petition the 1913 session of the Legislature to create a new county to be named Warner, in honor of the late Chief Justice Hiram Warner, the area of which will be 222 square miles, while the area of the old counties after the proposed county of Warner is created will not be materially reduced, but will leave them among the larger counties of Middle Georgia, and Meriwether will then contain 421 square miles; Harris, 465 square miles, and Talbot, 329 square miles. The territory to compose Warner County is inaccessible to either of the present county sites by railroads and in transacting legal business the citizens are required to go this distance by private conveyance over mountainous roads, which in rainy seasons are almost impassable; while a very large portion of the population has no means of conveyance and are forced to a great expense in reaching the present county sites.

Taxable Values of New County.

The proposed county of Warner will have taxable values of one and three-quarter million dollars. This will leave Meriwether taxable values of about twice the amount of Warner County; while Harris and Talbot, from which counties small values will be taken, will not be materially reduced, but have considerably more wealth than Warner and no incorporated town is to be taken from either Talbot or Harris and but a few miles of railroad.

The population of Warner County will be upward of 10,500, of which more than 2,000 live in Manchester, the proposed county seat. At least 5,000 of those living within the country territory closely adjoining Manchester have to travel 14 to 20 miles to their present respective county sites. Warner County would exceed in population 32 counties in the State.

Roads and Bridges.

Warner County as proposed will take from the three affected counties its proportion of roads and bridges as compared to its area and wealth, while the roads and bridges in this territory have received but little attention, as the taxes collected by the old counties have been spent on other roads and bridges nearer the present county sites, and other sections of the counties, since this territory occupies the "remote corners," consequently has had little influence in securing road improvements.

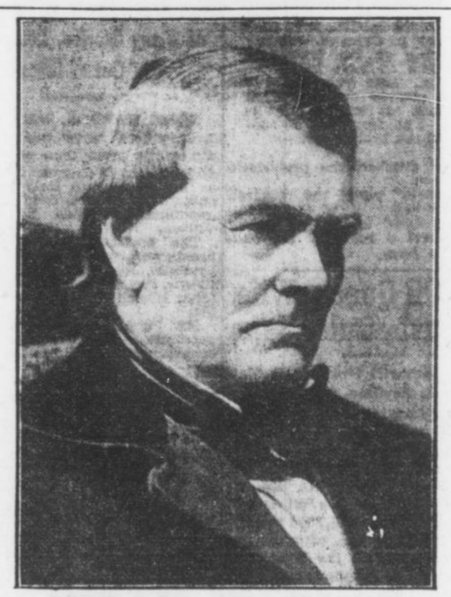
Warner County, as proposed will include Gill, Chalybeate, First, Raleigh, Bullochville and parts of the Third, Harris and lower Ninth Districts of Meriwether County; portions of Valley Plains District of Harris County and Flint Hill and parts of Pleasant Hill and Valley districts of Talbot County.

The distance from Manchester, the proposed county site of Warner County, to Greenville, the county site of Meriwether, over public roads is 18 miles; to Hamilton, the county site of Harris, 20 miles, and to Talbotton, the county site of Talbot, 20 miles. No citizen living in the proposed county would be required to travel farther than 12 miles to reach Manchester, the proposed county site.

Schedule of Trains.

No portion of Warner County at present is directly connected by rail with its respective county site. Those wishing to attend court by rail from Manchester and its vicinity must leave Manchester at 4 o'clock a. m., change at Durand and arrive in Greenville at 8 o'clock a. m., requiring a layover at Durand of about three hours. Returning, leave Greenville at 6 o'clock p. m., arriving at Manchester at 11:40 p. m., necessitating a layover at Durand of five hours, or about 20 hours to go a distance of 20 miles and return. This is the most convenient schedule.

The present counties are well provided with modern jails and courthouses.



HIRAM WARNER

Brief Sketch of Late Chief Justice HIRAM WARNER

Hiram Warner, for whom Warner County is to be named, was born at Williamsburg, Hampshire County, Mass., on October 29th, 1802. He sailed for Savannah when 19 years of age, but was shipwrecked off Cape Hatteras, and reached the Georgia port weeks later. He settled first at Sparta as a teacher. He studied law and was admitted to the bar at Knoxville, Crawford County, in 1824. He married there and had one child, a daughter, the mother of Associate Justice Hiram Warner Hill of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

He was a member of the Legislature 1828-31. He was elected judge of the Coweta Circuit of the Superior Court of Georgia in 1833. At that time there was no Supreme Court, and the Superior Court judges gathered in annual convention to discuss their decisions and establish uniformity of practice.

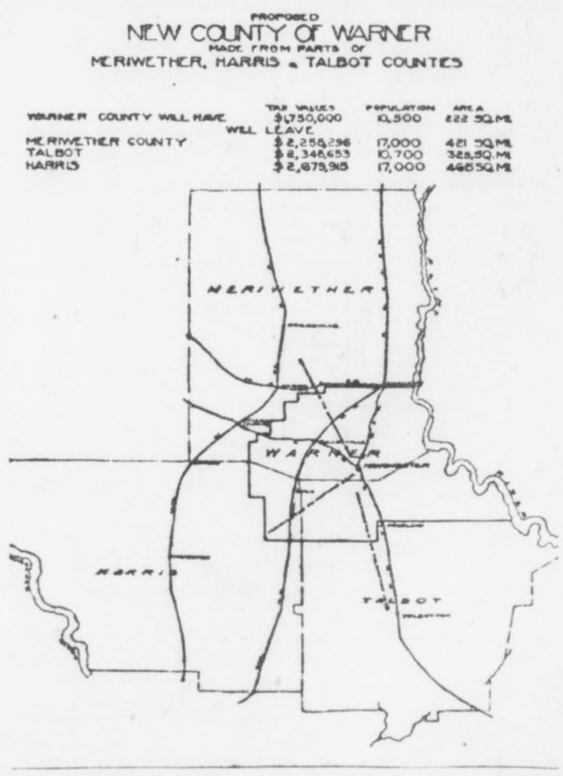
In 1845 the Supreme Court of Georgia was organized and with Joseph Henry Lumpkin and Eugenius A. Nesbit was elected to that high branch of the judiciary. He defeated Benjamin H. Hill for Congress in 1855; was renominated, but declined re-election. Nearly 60 years old when the war came, he was at home caring for his family, his only son-in-law being at the front. He was held by Wilson's raiders and actually hanged and left for dead because he did not tell where suspected gold was hidden.

Later he was appointed to the judgeship of Coweta Circuit by Governor Jenkins. He was named Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia in 1867 to succeed Chief Justice Lumpkin, deceased.

His decisions from the bench and his printed decisions upon the Supreme Court bench are classics in Georgia's judicial history and his decisions are leading ones in ruling on similar cases today.

Judge Warner was reared a Presbyterian. He never joined a religious denomination. He lived and died, however, a believer in the Bible, the truths of Christianity and the creed of that denomination to which his family belonged. It was his habit to keep upon the table in his bedroom to the last day of his life two books; one was Blackstone, and the other was the Bible. This Bible his mother gave him when he left home for his long journey. To this same Bible he turned for comfort and support when, 58 years afterward, an old and broken man, he entered the valley of the shadow.

It is this man whose memory is sought to be revered in the creation of the county which is to bear his name—Warner.



Situation of Warner.

The proposed county of Warner will include portions of Pine and Oak mountains. In recent years most of this section was considered of little value on account of its inaccessibility and the rough character of the country. Little money has been spent by the counties in developing this territory, and the roads, most of them crossing the mountains and ridges, are bad, and have received but little attention.

In 1906 the A., B. & A. railroad was built, traversing this section with its Birmingham and Atlanta lines merging at Manchester; since which time Manchester has grown to be a town of about 2,000 people, as a result of which the territory adjoining Manchester has developed very rapidly; approximately $2,000,000 having been spent in improvements and business naturally drifted in this direction. The people residing in this territory buy all their supplies and sell their produce at Manchester, Bullochville, Raleigh, Chalybeate and Shiloh. Nothing calls them out of the proposed county except court duty, and they are deprived of the privilege accorded the majority of our people in the state of transacting their business and attending court in the same day.

Demand of Modern Times.

In this day of modern methods, when man's greatest asset is his time, when all business has become greatly intensified and concentration and conservation are occupying the attention of all progressive, thinking people, all men must realize that to make a success out of any public institution its interest must be well guarded. In this connection, large counties can not receive their just consideration. It is out of the question for the county commissioners in the three counties affected to give the counties' business the attention which it deserves. The area is too large, the business too vast, the demands too great and the distance too far for the county authorities to attend to the business properly.

General Statements of Interest

Manchester, the proposed county site, contains one large cotton mill, railroad shops and division offices of the A., B. & A. R. R., one bank, 33 brick store buildings and 16 wooden store buildings, all of which are occupied by various lines of general merchandise; two moving picture theaters, one newspaper and printing office, three hotels, five churches, modern school system, municipal light plant, two livery and sale stables, two large builders' supply houses, fireproof warehouse and gin.

Bullochville has several large supply houses, one bank, guano factory, also the Tuscawilla, a magnificent three-story brick hotel with modern equipment throughout, the best equipped hotel in the State in a town many times its size. Near Bullochville is located the famous Warm Springs resort, which is too well known to be described.

Just above Bullochville is the thriving town of Raleigh, which controls all business within its territory.

South of Bullochville on the Southern Railroad is Shiloh, now located in Harris County, one of the best farming supply towns in the State.

East of Manchester on the A., B. & A. is located Chalybeate Springs, a resort famous since ante-bellum days. The water from these springs has been known throughout the State since Georgia's early history.

Just east of Chalybeate is the Tatum Iron Company's mines, which are now being successfully developed.

All facts stated herein are not exaggerated, but can be substantiated with unlimited amount of evidence.

GIRL PLAYS MAN AND WINS LOVE OF HATED RIVAL

Unique Vengeance Is Planned by Young Woman Whose Sweetheart Proved Faithless.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Jilted by her lover, Bessie McIntyre, of North Wheeling, a pretty 18-year-old girl, secured an odd but effective revenge on her rival, who "stole" her sweetheart and on the faithless lover at the same time.

June 25 Harry Pendleton, a well-known young business man of this city, informed Miss McIntyre that he could not see her again(as he had become engaged to another girl. By a dint of inquiry the jilted girl ascertained that the girl who had stolen her lover's affections was Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, Ohio, just across the river from this city. Securing permission from her parents, Miss McIntyre had her hair cut off, and donning one of her brother's suits, she visited Bridgeport and met Miss Allen.

It was a case of love at first sight—on the part of the Bridgeport girl. Miss McIntyre masquerading as "Lawrence Dessing," was a devoted lover, and every night found "Lawrence Dessing" at the home of Miss Aiken.

Last Sunday night while "Dessing" and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to call on her again. She then confessed her love to her companion, the pseudo "Dessing." Miss McIntyre, dressed in a gown of the latest mode last night met Miss Aiken in this city. Before Miss Aiken could speak the North Wheeling girl told her how she had revenged herself.

In a moment the girls were fighting and were separated by the police.

Willing To Marry But Not to Apologize

Man Sued for Breach of Promise Says Hill Wed But Refuses to Beg Forgiveness.

ATCHISON, KANS., July 19.—Mary Falk and William Burke were engaged to be married. The date had been set, the guests had assembled, and everything was in readiness, but Burke did not appear. Chagrined and heartbroken, Miss Falk engaged an attorney and sued Burke for $25,000 as balm for her wounded feelings.

"It was all a mistake," said Burke. "I wanted and still want to marry Miss Falk. I was under the impression that under the rules of the Catholic Church the ceremony had to be performed by the pastor of the bride's church. I couldn't find him in time to perform the ceremony and naturally supposed the wedding was off for the time being."

Miss Falk accepted the explanation, but she insisted that Burke must apologize for not appearing for the wedding. Burke, however, insisted that she must apologize for suing him.

Concussion of Brain Kills a Gigantic Frog

Oscar Siler went to Mich.
Thought he'd rest and catch some fish,
Pitched his tent on Fountain Lake—
Listen to this nature fake:

FOUNTAIN, MICH., July 19.—Oscar Siler, of Chicago, who has been fishing on the lake near here, claims to have killed the record frog. Said frog is said to weigh 6 pounds and to be 15 inches long. It will be sent to Chicago. The frog died of concussion of the brain. Thus—

"Kerplunk," croaked the prehistoric bullfrog.
"You're drunk," piped the monarch of the bog.
Whereupon Siler (who was sober) bounced a rock off the bullfrog's bean.

Aged Oil Queen, Wife Of Youth, Ruled Sane

Young Spendthrift Husband Is Welcome to Fortune, She Says, on Leaving Asylum.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 19.—The courts and her children can not separate Mrs. Cynthia C. Sparks, known as West Virginia's "oil queen," and her young husband, Fred Sparks, and she is again free, after having been incarcerated in the West Virginia Hospital for Insane for ten days.

Further, the superintendent and the members of the State Board of Control have placed beyond question her sanity after a close observation, while she was under their supervision.

Mrs. Sparks is going to join her 26-year-old husband, who, it is alleged by the woman's children by her first husband, was rapidly dissipating her fortune of $2,000,000 by his extravagance and riotious living.

The old woman declared to-day that her young husband was welcome to the half of her fortune which she retained after having signed over the half to him.

Miner Returns Rich To Find Wife Dead

Comes Back Home to Make Restitution for Having Deserted Her 20 Years Ago.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Wealthy and anxious to take back his wife, whom he deserted twenty years ago, Josiah Bronson, a modern Enoch Arden, found the old home in ruins and the wife dead. From the old-timers who had known him in the early days he learned that his wife, believing him dead, had married his twin brother.

Two children, he learned, were born of the marriage, and upon the death of the mother were sent to relatives in West Virginia.

Bronson declared he would care for the children. "I shall give them the best education money can buy," he said. "I deserted their mother when she was just a young woman, and now I want to atone for the cowardly act."

WRITERS MAKE BEST DIPLOMATS DECLARES PAGE

New Ambassador to Italy, Author of Many Stories, Leaves Himself Out of Discussion.

YORK HARBOR, ME., July 19.—Are authors better qualified to fill diplomatic posts than others? The appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy brings this subject to the fore, coupled with the appointments made by President Wilson.

The greatest diplomats America boasts were men of letters. Benjamin Franklin, John Hay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, William Dean Howell furnish a distinguished list.

Mr. Page, who is 60, is modesty personified. He has been reporter, lawyer, writer, and has succeeded in all.

Mr. Page asked if he could explain as an author what special qualifications a man of letters possesses to perform the duties of Ambassador, consented to speak, leaving his own case out of the discussion. Said he:

"A man of letters is better fitted to do anything better than anyone else. His work has broadened his horizon; if it hadn't we might as well do away with letters.

Must Know Problems.

"The author must necessarily be conversant with the economic and governmental problems of the day.

"I think the greatest good authors in general have alone is to interpret the spirit of the section about which they write. There can be no doubt there is a better feeling now between the North and the South than there was before the Spanish-American war. This, I believe, is because of writers.

"Every part of the world is being more properly set before another part by the authors.

"The President has had a thorough training. Besides the college education, he has had associations with the North and the South, and he is conversant with the economic and governmental problems. He is a man of strong character and has been deservedly selected by the people to hold their most important office.

"I met Walter Page prior to his departure for his London post and gave him a dinner. His whole heart was set upon the desire to 'make good.'"

Qualifications of Diplomat.

"What is your idea of the qualifications a good diplomat possesses?" he was asked.

"Devotion to his duty is perhaps the first and most important," he replied. "Then comes devotion to your country, application to your duty and a desire to bring your country and the country to which you have been sent closer together.

"Of course, since the cable came into use foreign posts are brought closer to the State Department at Washington, and it must be a great comfort to an Ambassador to feel that at any time he may seek aid from Washington.

"I believe Charles Francis Adams was the last foreign ambassador to be thrown upon his own resources, and that was because the cable was cut.

"Rome is indeed a charming post. I believe it is the most romantic city in the world. I am sure I shall like it."

BRYAN DODGES PAPER'S QUESTIONS

wrong. It is using the office for making money."

Senator Bristow said action would be had on his resolution. He said, too, that there would be quite a little discussion on the subject. It probably will be referred to a committee, Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, says it probably would be "handled in a routine way."

Mr. Bacon says he thought the resolution was introduced to bring about a discussion of the course of Mr. Bryan, and that remedial legislation was not demanded.

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend, of Michigan, holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the Government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Among those who talked were the following:

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts—A Cabinet member can live on $12,000 a year if he does not have large family expenses, and he can live comfortably and respectably.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania—Samuel J. Randall, one of the greatest of Democrats, served this country for a whole generation, living on a salary of $5,000 a year. I have always disapproved of the custom that has grown up resulting in the very considerable neglect of official duties on the part of public men in order that they may go on lecture circuits.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina—While Mr. Bryan's speaking tours will serve a good purpos in that he always preached true Democracy and patriotism and Christian living, he can never again appear as a knight errant of Democracy.

Representative Willis, of Ohio—I am opposed to a Government official capitalizing his job. The Secretaryship of State is a man's job. Mr. Bryan should stay here and attend to the work of his office. He has enough on his hands with the present critical situation in Mexico, the unsettled questions with Japan and the matter of the Panama Canal tolls. We members of Congress have to stick to our tasks.

Representative Miller, of Minnesota—Mr. Bryan is giving this country a remarkable exhibition in the difference between his preachings during the past seventeen years and his present practices.

Representative Kahn, of California—There are many able men in the employ of the Government who are prevented by law and the hours of service from increasing their incomes through additional employment.

Representative Payne, of New York—I have been able to live on my salary as a member of the House. I can not see why the Secretary of State is unable to live on his salary.

Towne, Bryan's Friend, Calls Step Unfortunate.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Secretary Bryan's determination to supplement his official salary of $12,000 by going on a six weeks' lecture tour has awakened severe criticism from the men who supported him when he first loomed on the political horizon.

Charles A. Towne, who was one of the speakers at the famous "Dollar Dinner" in April, 1899, organized to emphasize Bryan's Jeffersonian simplicity of tastes, discussed Mr. Bryan's new move reluctantly, as they are still close friends.

"I consider the Secretary's plan to continue his lecture tours while occupying the chief place in the President's Cabinet most unfortunate," said Mr. Towne. "These are days when great national issues must be decided, and when the Secretary of State is required to give every bit of time and energy in behalf of the nation. It is a time when men intrusted with the affairs of the Government must have their minds occupied with nothing else except the questions of state.

Explanation Only Makes It Worse, Says World.

(From The N. Y. World, July 16.)

It is with the most profound regret that we have to note the position into which the Secretary of State has drawn himself and the explanation now given which only makes it worse.

Whether Mr. Bryan can afford to take a prolonged vacation at just this critical time for the Administration and his own high office may be a question, but a minor one. Whether, under the frankly admitted circumstances of personal fortune, he can only afford a money-making vacation, must be something less than a question with the great masses of the people whose life he has lived in sympathy.

The real question is whether the Government for such a position as his may not justly claim an undivided service, and whether any other view is compatible with a worthy ambition. We have had men in high office who have sacrificed personal fortune to render such undivided service and could afford it. We have had many more men there who have done this and could not afford it.

We can not think of the President of the United States doing otherwise. We should not be able to think of any of his Cabinet doing otherwise.

Action Most Bizarre, Says Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, July 19.—Regarding Secretary Bryan's lecture tour, The Pall Mall Gazette to-night says:

"It is a singular paradox in a country where there is so much money in politics as in the United States that the chief member of the President's cabinet should find his official salary inadequate to support his existence.

"We can quite understand why $12,000 a year is not enough for the Secretary of State, considering the American scale of life, but one would have expected a man of Bryan's moral courage to call upon his country for a living wage, to which he is entitled, rather than to propose going on the stump as a lecturer, in the roles of a minister and a professional entertainer.

"They make a most bizarre combination to all British ways of thinking, and we shall be surprised if even American opinion reconciles itself to their incongruity."

MOTHER OF TEN SUES; WEDDED TWENTY-ONE YEARS

DAYTON, WYO., July 19.—After living with David Krouse Towns for 21 years and bearing ten children of which he is the father, Mrs. Martha Ellen Towns has brought suit for divorce, asserting that her husband unjustly accused her of infidelity and that he had attempted to secure her incarceration in the State Insane Asylum, although realizing that she was sane.

BRYAN OUGHT TO LIVE ON HIS PAY OR QUIT, SAY SENATORS

Explanation of Secretary of State More Amazing Than His Acts, Declares Bristow, Who Introduced Resolution to Investigate

Wilson's Premier Capitalizing His Position, Asserts Representative Willis—Much Work To Be Done in His Department.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the National Capital is that if Secretary Bryan can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Mr. Bryan to-day gave evidence of the fact that the country-wide criticism had got under his skin. That he was irritated and impatient and realized the "bad break" he has made was apparent to his subordinates throughout the day. Somewhat petulantly he declared that the press of the country might have assumed that "my lecture engagements are subject to cancellation."

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow Cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

Evades Paper's Questions.

The American to-day endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions and refused to discuss the subject of his official pronunciamento.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by The American:

"If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

"If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

"You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?"

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned to the questions. Later in the day he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Bristow, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan to stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, to-day came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secrttary Bryan's second statement has astounded me even more than his first one," said Mr. Bristow. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the Governmtnt service is amazing.

"Secretary Bryan says he has a right to use his vacation for lecturing if he sees fit. But he is to be away on one tour of six weeks, and there is no telling where his vacation will end.

Needed at His Post.

"Besides, since he has been Secretary of State he has been in Washington only about one-half the time so far. If ever there was a time when the Secretary of State was needed on the job it is now, when so many important questions are up for consideration. To cause the people to pay money to hear the Secretary of State, the highest officer in the Cabinet, deliver addresses is all

U. S. State Secrets 'Lifted' From Wire By Mexican Agents

Information Worth Thousands of Dollars Finds Its Way Into Possession of Huerta.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A copy of the official code of the State Department, containing information worth thousands of dollars to foreign governments, has fallen into the hands of the Mexican administration.

It is being used to further the ends of the Huerta regime, it was asserted here to-day.

For some months State Department officials have suspected that the Government telegrams from Mexico City have been tampered with, it is declared, but this was not considered important, as all the dispatches were in code, and, therefore, theoretically illegible.

About three weeks ago, however, Government officials here had their first inkling that the Mexicans were obtaining the gist of dispatches passing between the State Department and Ambassador Wilson.

The agents of the almost unknown "secret service" of the State Department were put on the trail and evidence was obtained that the Government dispatches had been "lifted" from the wires in Mexico and decoded, the information contained therein being transmitted to President Huerta and his Cabinet.

Girl Traps a Thief In Telephone Booth

Sets Shoulder Against Door and Holds Man Until Cries Bring Her Aid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Holding a thief trapped in a telephone booth, Miss Florence Rosenthal, cashier in Edward Feuhrer's drug store at No. 53 Second avenue, finally succeeded in delivering him to the police yesterday.

The captive, who said he was Alexander Moskowitz, 17 years old, was so long "telephoning" that Miss Rosenthal went to the booth to see if he was dead or alive. She saw him opening the money box with a screwdriver, she says. Screaming for her employer, she set her shoulder against the door, and the youth could not force it open. Moskowitz was held for trial.

Burleson Eats but Two Meals Each Day

Postmaster General Believes in and Practices "Early to Bed, Early to Rise" Theory.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Postmaster General Burleson believes thoroughly in the old adage, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." He practices this theory himself and in addition supplements it by a two-meal-a-day program.

His daily routine is as follows:

"I arise at 5 in the morning.

"Read the papers until 6.

"Breakfast.

"Go over papers and reports until 9.

"Work at the Postoffice Department until 5 in the afternoon without any lunch or lunch hour.

"Dinner at 6 to 7 o'clock.

"Eight o'clock—go to bed."

"Cooling Period" to Halt Divorce Evil

Pastor Suggests That Three Months Elapse Between Final Hearing and Decision of Court.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Speaking on "The Modern Problem of Marriage and Divorce," before the Central Conference of American Rabbis here to-day, the Rev. L. Leonard Levy, of Pittsburg, advocated a "cooling" period of three months from the time of the final hearing until the decision is announced as the solution of the problem of minimizing the divorce evil. "This cooling period," said the speaker, "would cover a time during which neither of the parties at interest could marry."

NEW YORK, July 19.—Earl Oscar Schenck, 24 years old, an actor, of No. 600 West 138th street, was married in the City Hall yesterday to his aunt, Marion Carr Schenck, twelve years his senior.

SHORTAGE HITS NATIONAL BANK AT LAFAYETTE

Comptroller of Currency Orders Institution Closed When Defalcation Is Discovered.

ARRESTS ARE LIKELY

Preliminary Examination Shows That It Has Been Looted of Not Less Than $30,000.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane today announced that the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., has been closed by National Bank Examiner Thomas C. Dunlap, with the authority of the board of directors, on account of a large shortage which makes the bank insolvent.

Mr. Kane says he has not received a detailed report of the condition of the bank. Mr. Dunlap has been appointed receiver.

"We do not know how big the defalcation may be," said Mr. Kane, "but our preliminary examination has shown that it is not less than $30,000. This shortage has occurred since May 23, when the bank was last examined. Suspicion on the part of officers of the bank several days ago that a shortage existed caused them to call in Examiner Dunlap. Discovery of the embbezzlement resulted.

"In his telegraphic advices to me Mr. Dunlap does not say to whom suspicion attaches. The last statement of the condition of the bank, issued on June 4, showed the bank to be in a proper state. The president of the bank is R. N. Dickerson, and S. A. Hunt, Jr., is cashier."

In a telegram from Mr. Dunlap Mr. Kane is advised that steps have been taken to make an arrest.

Depositors to Lose Little by Failure.

CHATTANOOGA, July 19.—Local bankers stated to-day that the liabilities of the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., which was announced to-day by Acting Comptroller of Currency Kane, at Washington, to have failed, were approximately $240,000, but that depositors would be paid in full, with but a slight loss to stockholders, as the assets would prove but slightly less.

An unsuccessful attempt was made this morning to obtain a schedule of the liabilities and assets of the institution. The officials are extremely reticent concerning the cause of the institution's embarrassment.

Aerial Ferry to Join Cities in California

Air Pilot Gets Permission to Install Aeroplane Service Between San Francisco and Oakland.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The first aerial ferry of the world will be in operation between San Francisco and Oakland in September. Permission was granted officially to-day by the Harbor Commission to John L. Lekas to construct a dock for his hydroaeroplane.

Lekas recently applied for a permit, declaring that he wished to establish a regular passenger service between the trans-bay cities. Lekas was before the commission to-day and satisfied them he was a safe and sane air pilot.

Motor Cars to Cut High Cost of Dying

Storage Battery Busses To Be Put in Service in Chicago as Funeral Equipage.

CHICAGO, July 19.—The high cost of dying is to be reduced. Storage battery motor busses are to be put in service as funeral cars. The change from carriages to busses, it is estimated, will result in a saving of $30 in the cost of each funeral. As there are 31,000 funerals in Chicago each year, the general reduction in the cost of dying, if busses were used in all funerals, would be $930,000.

Girl Fan Loses Teeth But Stays Out Game

Foul Tip Injures Fair Baseball Enthusiast, but Her Ardor Is Not Diminished.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, July 19.—Miss Cora Bauer, of this city, was struck in the face by a foul tip while watching a ball game between the Akron and Zanesville teams here. Congregation Built Up by Band Concerts

Ohio Pastor With Novel Methods Now Claims Biggest Sunday School in World.

CANTON, OHIO, July 19.—With the attraction of a band concert in the church roof garden and a double orchestra concert in the church auditorium, the Rev. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton's First Christian Church, has built up what he claims is the biggest Sunday school in the world within five years.

The average attendance in this hot month of July is 3,251. The record attendance is 4,714. Several Sundays back 38 babies were checked in the "babies' check room" of the $90,000 church. The men's class of 250 had to hold their session in the street while the teacher explained the lesson from the tonneau of an automobile.

Doctor Says He Has Vaccine to Cure Cold

Dead Organisms Found in Blood of Patient Afflicted With Influenza Used as Culture.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Claims to the discovery of a remarkable vaccine for the cure and prevention of the troublesome "cold" known among medical men as in influenza are being made by physicians of the Mulford Laboratory, near Philadelphia, under the direction of Dr A. P. Mitchins.

The vaccine is composed of the dead organisms found in the blood of a person afflicted with influenza. These organs are isolated and then an impure culture is obtained. Afterward, a saline solution is used to wash the culture germs and then the vaccine is ready for injection.

One striking feature of the results of the vaccine, it is said, is that it cures diseases allied with the common cold at the same time it does the "cold."

3 Drowned Trying To Avoid Wet Feet

Women Stand Up in Leaky Boat, Capsizing Craft In View of Hundreds.

NORRISTOWN, PA., July 19.—Caught in a storm while boating on the Schuylkill River, three women, all church workers, were drowned. They are:

Miss Anna Mary Livergood, Miss Emma J. Rex and Miss Helen Green, all of Norristown.

Miss Margaret Green, a sister of Miss Helen Green, clung to the overturned boat and was saved.

The women were within a quarter of a mile of the boat landing when the wind struck them.

The boat began to leak badly. To keep their feet and clothing dry the four girls stood on the seats. The next instant the boat turned over.

Two hundred persons on a boat returning from a park saw the accident.

Blue Cauliflower Is Raised in California

Latest Horticultural Product Is Hybrid of Ordinary Cauliflower and Purple Pickling Cabbage.

OAKLAND, July 19.—Blue cauliflower, the latest novelty in things horticultural, was introduced to the public to-day by Hugo Lilienthal, instructor in the University of California. The new plant is a hybridization of the ordinary cauliflower and the purple "pickling cabbage," declared by the experts to be a "first cousin to the cauliflower." The new vegetable is bright blue in color and stronger than the ordinary cauliflower in flavor.

Only a Bathing Suit Left Friend by Thief

Youth Is Marooned in Atlantic City When Companion Disappears With Money and Clothes.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Arthur Leonard, a New York youth, spent the entire day on the beach in his bathing suit to-day, following the disappearence of his chum, whose name he refuses to reveal, with four suits of his clothing and all his money.

Leonard wired his relatives in New York State telling them of his predicament. They came here to-night with clothing and rescued him.

Billie Burke Wires She Is Recovering

Actress Was Threatened With Appendicitis, but Did Not Have to Undergo Operation.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Billie Burke, telegraphing the London bureau of The American to-day from Carlsbad in reply to an inquiry concerning her health, says:

"Thanks awfully. Was threatened with appendicitis, but have not had to undergo operation. Recovering nicely.

"BILLIE BURKE."

LOBBY INQUIRY STIRS NATION

Mulhall Story Leaves U. S. Aghast

Power of Interests Vividly Revealed

MARTIN W. MULHALL, former lobbyist of National Association of Manufacturers, whose revelations of corruption startled nation.

Names of Wilson, Taft, Senators and Congressmen Are Dragged Into the Testimony, Showing Corporations Have Set No Limit in Corruption.

STARTLING FACTS REVEALED IN U. S. SENATE INVESTIGATION OF CONGRESSIONAL LOBBY

National Association of Manufacturers raised a slush fund of $500,000 to $700,000 a year to oppose objectionable legislation.

Place in Taft Cabinet pledged to manufacturers by Vorys, Taft manager.

Charges that the big manufacturers had the ears of Taft, Sherman and Cannon.

List of Congressmen in pay of the National Manufacturers' Association disclosed. Also, a list of the "unpurchasable," whom the association hated, and tried to defeat.

Fights made by National Manufacturers' Association on progressive Congressmen and Senators, often successful.

More than 400 letter tell of plans of association to become sinister factor in controlling the wheels of government.

Attempts made to foment strife among labor organizations, and to corrupt labor leaders, even Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Agreement by Woodrow Wilson with Gompers and Morrison that he support Hughes for Senate.

Powers of big business fought Hughes because he was friendly to labor.

Tom Johnson, Senator McComas of Maryland, and others were political victims of the association's vengeance.

Gigantic corruption in Wall Street laid bare in testimony of David Lamar.

Forgery on Union Pacific's books covering item of $82,000,000 charged.

Senate resolutions hawked about Wall street for sale to highest bidder.

The nation to-day stands aghast at the sensational revelations which have come as the result of investigations by the Overman Committee of the United States Senate into the work of lobbies at the National Capital.

It has heard how big business combines and Wall Street operators have made and unmade men in public life, influenced legislation, dominated public opinion, all the time secret and vigilant.

It has learned how big business has become one of the most powerful factors in the American civilization, striking in the dark against men who opposed it.

It has heard the names of the men highest in public life, President Wilson, former President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet members, dragged into the testimony, and has learned that certain predatory interests have set no limits in their attempt to corrupt public servants.

The bulk of the startling testimony came from Martin M. Mulhall, for years the servant of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the chief lobbyist of that organization at Washington, and from David Lamar, an operator in stocks, who is known as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

Wilson Starts Inquiry.

The investigation began more than a month ago when President Wilson declared that a lobby, "insidious and industrious" in nature, had long dominated tariff legislation. The announcement did not come unexpectedly, however, and there were many Senators and Congressmen to endorse the Chief Executive. The Senate began immediately its investigation of the charges, empowering a committee, headed by Senator Overman, to conduct the inquiry.

Relatively pointless testimony from men interested in the sugar industry came first, revealing the fact that sugar lobbies were the most industrious. Lobbyists from Hawaii, the Philippines and Louisiana defended their actions by a protest against free sugar. Former Governor Carter of Hawaii declared that the elimination of the duty on sugar would make the Hawaiian Islands merely military posts, destroying their commercial prestige. Frank C. Lowry, of the "free sugar lobby," admitted in the testimony that $25,000 had been spent in four years by the Federal Sugar Refining Company in lobbying operations.

Then came the Mulhall testimony.

Even Take Fizz Out Of City's Soda Water

Members of Cincinnati Board of Health to Censor All Soft Drinks Sold.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—The "fizz and bubble" in soda water and ginger ale manufactured in this city is to be no more, if the Board of Health has its way about the matter, and it seems likely at this time that its contention will hold good. The board has asked the Council to pass an ordinance limiting the amount of alcohol to one-half of 1 per cent in any one drink of this kind. If the resolution is passed and made a law no dealer will be allowed to make soft drinks without first getting a permit.

300 "HELLO GIRLS" ASK BOSS TO BE BEST MAN

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—The Postmaster General is bewildered over the result of the recent permission which he granted to telephone girls to get married. Three hundred of these girls promptly availed themselves of the chance and every couple asked the Postmaster General to act as best man.

Umbrellas for Farm Hands Is Inducement

Planter Advertises That He Will Supply Them With Sulkies, Sunshades and Ice Cream.

FINDLAY, OHIO, July 19.—There are other communities in this country that are suffering for a lack of farm hands besides Kansas. It is up to H. B. Clark, a farmer in the western part of Hancock County, to make good, else be prosecuted for false advertising, as provided by the new newspaper laws.

In a morning paper Mr. Clark is advertising for farm hands to plow corn. He says he will provide them with riding cultivator, a large sun umbrella for each, ice water to drink and all the ice cream each applicant can eat every other day, with $2.50 a day wages.

GREAT BRITAIN IS AFTER LATEST GERMAN AIR CRAFT

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Great Britain, it is stated, is negotiating for an Unger airship, which is larger, faster and more rigid than any others yet designed, including the Zeppelins.

'Oh Fudge' Strongest Language Permitted

Kansas City Starts Crusade Against Public Swearing—Police Rebuke Violators.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—Anything stronger than "Oh, fudge!" must not be heard on the streets of Kansas City hereafter. All the ministers of the city and all the members of their churches have started an anti-swearing crusade, and part of the work is to ask persons who are overheard to swear to consider the vulgarity of it and cease the practice.

The Police Department and the street railway company have agreed to join in the crusade, so that hereafter it is part of the policeman's duty to stop swearing as well as breaches of the peace.

Miss Elliott Returns To Stage To Be Happy

Will Play Potiphar's Wife in Sir Herbert Tree's "Joseph and His Brethren."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Maxine Elliott, yielding to Sir Herbert Tree's persuasion, will return to the stage September 2 in a great production of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." She will play Potiphar's wife.

Miss Elliott gives as the chief reason for her reappearance that every one is happier when occupied. She is now living in her beautiful house at Bushey, just outside London.

STORY OF MULHALL WILL EXTEND U. S. LOBBY INQUIRY

Mulhall represented the National Association of Manufacturers, in Washington. The association has a membership of 225 organizations, among them the most influential of the country, and 4,000 individuals, who control billions of capital.

The burden of his statements were that the association had for years promoted tariff, labor, and general business legislation favorable to itself, had maintained a lobby staff of seventeen, including himself, and former Presidents VanCleave and Kirby, of the association, at the capital to defeat hostile legislation, and it was always seeking and often obtaining control of the House and Senate Committee on Labor and Judiciary.

Created Tariff Commission.

He said that the association's efforts were responsible for the creation of the Tariff Commission under President Taft, and said that nine former Congressmen and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages in the House, had obtained money for services rendered.

More sensational still were the declarations that former President Taft, former Vice President Sherman, and former Speaker Cannon, besides many Congressmen and Senators were among those whom the association could affect by appeals to sentiment or other interests. He told of an unsuccessful attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, and of successful work among petty labor leaders.

Mulhall told of his own great ingratitude, how he obtained a Federal position through the influence of Senator McComas of Maryland, and at the same time entered the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers, helping to defeat his patron because McComas had been doomed for his opposition to the association.

McComas, it seems, was not the only victim. Tom L. Johnson had been defeated for Mayor of Cleveland, said Mulhall, for his opposition to the association, and William E. Hughes was opposed by the business combine for Senator from New Jersey because he was the advocate of many labor bills. It was in this connection that Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, had agreed with Gompers and Morrison, the labor leaders, to support Hughes, and had stumped the State in his favor.

Spies Kept in Field.

The work of the association against the eight-hour law, its enmity to most legislation that was favorable to labor, how he kept in occasional communication with former Vice President Sherman, how spies were kept in the field to corrupt minor labor leaders, and to knife opponents, were other sensational bits of the Mulhall testimony.

George Pope, president of the association, and other officials of the organization, have made statements declaring that Mulhall is not to be believed, and that most of the statements were inspired by the fact that Mulhall was discharged by the association. From many persons and places have come statements denouncing Mulhall as a man of reprehensible character, lessening thus the substantiability of many of the charges. But in many instances the declarations he made seemed to be assured of reliability by documents that are substantial.

Interesting is his list of Congressmen whom he said had received pay from the association. He named in this connection J. E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, the House "whip" of the last administration; J. T. McDermott, Democrat, of Illinois; J. J. Jenkins, Republican, Wisconsin; Kittredge Haskins, Republican, Vermont; C. E. Littlefield, Republican, Maine; H. M. Bannon, Republican, Ohio; H. M. Coudry, Republican, Missouri; J. J. Gardner, Republican, New Jersey; R. B. Cole, Republican, Ohio, and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages.

On the other hand, he named a number of Congressmen who had consistently fought the association's interests, and whom he frankly called "unpurchasable." They are: Speaker Clark, Burnett of Alabama, Maynard, Virginia; Cooper, Wisconsin; Nichols, Pennsylvania; Parson, New York; Green, Massachusetts; Haugen, Iowa; Wilson, Pennsylvania; McComas, Maryland; Pearre, Maryland; Hughes, New Jersey; Kelliher, Massachusetts; Connolly, Massachusetts, and the labor leaders, Gompers, John Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the Federation of Labor. William Barnes, the New York boss, he said, was his friend, and could always be depended on to "take care of bills."

Revelations of Lamar.

On the heels of the Mulhall revelations came those from David Lamar, the smiling, cynical "Wolf of Wall Street." Lamar it was who told of having sent Edward Lauterbach, his attorney, to meddle around Wall Street a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the Senate.

J. P. Morgan was one of the men whom Lauterbach visited on this errand. He told how he had impersonated Congressmen Palmer and Riordan in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass Ledyard and Paul D. Cravath, corporation attorneys, and Robert S. Lovett, the railroad president, feigning knowledge of the intentions of the dominant party. Further, he declared that he had represented himself as fresh from the councils of Speaker Clark and other leaders when he visited Wall Street operators for concessions.

Lamar's most remarkable disclosure was his statement that the Union Pacific Railroad's books had been forged in 1901 to cover an item of $82,000,000, whereby the fortunes of E. H. Harriman, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, and others were built.

Testimonials Discredited.

Discredit has been cast upon Lamar's testimony as on Mulhall's, as coming from a man lacking in scruples. Paul D. Cravath, attorney for the Union Pacific, gave out a statement that the testimony regarding the gigantic forgery was part of a bear campaign against the company.

The Senate investigation will be conducted in detail, and it is likely, to judge from the announced intentions of the committee members, that every member of the Senate and of the House, every public official whose name has been dragged into the affair and every one in anyway connected with the situation will be called in as witnesses. Appearances seem to indicate that the hearing will last far into the summer.

Mulhall was on the stand the greater part of last week explaining a batch of correspondence which had passed between him and political and labor leaders throughout the United States. The correspondence, according to evidence which has been revealed, he has sought to sell to magazines and newspapers several times, but in vain. Nonchalantly, the ex-lobbyist has pointed out letter after letter from prominent men talking of alleged significant deals almost carelessly.

"This is a letter from Senator Foraker," he said, indicating one. "It was asking me to see a labor man about his chances for re-election to the Senate. I think he was considering the Presidency at the time."

Secrets of big politics are being bared daily during the investigation. Details of how spies worked among the labor men, and of the secret methods of big business have been explained by Mulhall at more than one point in his testimony.

In defense of his own lobbying, Mulhall made statements that a labor lobby existed, naming Samuel Gompers. As a result, Gompers and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be brought before the committee to explain their activities in the cause of labor and capital, respectively.

Inez Milholland's Wedding Blow to Suffragists

Her Romance May Annul Marriage to the Cause

Mrs. Eugen Boissevain, who was Miss Inez Milholland, famous suffragist beauty and orator, before her marriage to wealthy Dutchman last week.

Beautiful Leader of Votes for Women Won After Courtship on Two Continents.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Suffrage leaders of the United States are today bowed in spirit. They can think of their recent victory in Illinois without smiling. They read of success of women jurors and policemen with no show of ecstasy. Their minds are troubled. They seek to know whether Mrs. Eugen Boissevain will be as potent a personality for the cause as was Inez Milholland before she suddenly decided to take unto herself a husband in the form of the wealthy Dutchman she wedded Tuesday in London.

For Inez Milholland has been no small force in the suffrage movement in the United States. She graduated from Vassar just about the time when the votes for women idea traveled across the seas from England, and she has been right on the firing line in the battle for the ballot ever since.

Beauty of Suffrage Ranks.

Miss Milholland, beg pardon, Mrs. Boissevain, has ever been in the specially mentioned class in every important suffrage movement. She has been the American Christobal Pankhurst, only more so, though it has not been recorded that she has smashed anything, or has had to dodge extradition treaties to keep from the painful necessity of going on a hunger strike.

Even before she graduated from Vassar, Miss Milholland was known to fame. Her remarkable beauty, her mentality and personal magnetism made her a leader in this great girls' college. She was the champion all around athlete and held a world's record for putting the shot.

During the strike of the garment workers in New York, several years ago, Miss Milholland volunteered for picket duty and it was her oratory that kept the girls stubbornly on the strike until they partially won their demands.

In the first big suffrage parade in New York she was a battalion leader and was a striking figure as she rode astride on a big bay charger.

Challenges Orator Heflin.

She again achieved prominence by challenging Representative Tom Heflin of Alabama to joint debate when that doughty Congressman spoke disparagingly of the cause, and though it is known that Mr. Heflin loves to speak and delights in debate, he carefully avoided meeting Miss Milholland on the forum.

In the great suffrage parade in Washington the day before President Wilson's inauguration Miss Milholland led the procession as the herald of the cause. She was mounted on a pure white horse and was clad in robes of white, while a coronet surmounted her magnificent hair which fell loosely down her back.

So striking was her appearance that she was quickly an object of the attacks of the thugs and boors who tried to break up the parade, and it is recorded that one of these men received a blow on the jaw from the fist of the young woman who once held the world shot-put record.

"I am wedded to the cause," she told her admirers, among whom were Sidney Smith, the New York clubman; John Fox, Jr., author and former husband of Fritzi Scheff, and Lord Curzon, formerly viceroy of India.

Whether this marriage will annul her former marriage to the cause is the question that perplexes the suffrage leaders, but they, as a rule, protest that it will not.

John E. Milholland, her father, was evidently not greatly shocked by the marriage. Here is what he cabled his daughter:

"Have not been so mad in two hundred years. You should be boiled in oil. Do you expect forgiveness until the next century. Indefensible chip of the old block, you have given us a pretty rough deal, but nevertheless I humbly and fervently pray God's blessing upon you and yours forever.

"PATER."

Boissevain's Brother Elated.

Robert W. Boissevain, brother of the bridegroom, was in a decidedly agreeable frame of mind yesterday in his office at No. 17 Battery place. Besides calling his brother a "lucky dog" and describing him as being "smiled upon by the gods," he said that the new Mrs. Boissevain has now seven sisters-in-law who possess collectively 25 children and that all these seven Boissevain sisters are suffragists of the non-militant type.

"Wireless" in Courtship.

"Eugen, who is 33 years old, and my brother Jan came over to New York on the Olympic to pay me a visit," he said. "They arrived June 10 and stopped at the Holland House with me. William Marconi, the wireless discoverer, and Mrs. Marconi were here at the same time. My brother and I have known Mr. Marconi for years, and I now understand that the Marconis have known the Milholland family for a long time.

"Anyway, two days after the arrival of my brothers, that is, June 12, I was dining with them in the Holland House and Mr. and Mrs. Marconi entered the dining room with one of the most beautiful women we had ever seen. Miss Milholland was presented to us, and my brother Eugen lost interest in all other things then and there.

"Eugen and Jan had planned to tour the States for six weeks at least, but during the dinner Miss Milholland said something about leaving for Europe early in July. The plans of Eugen, I could see, went flying.

MAZDAZNANS EAT FLOWERS AND SING TO THE SUN

All This in Classic Boston, Where the Cult Has a Membership Small but Exclusive.

BOSTON, July 19.—It is ancient history that Nebuchadnezzer went out and ate grass like an ox. Out in the Back Bay and up in Lowell there can be found small yet select circles of folk who eat grass and say they enjoy it.

Not only this, but they worship the sun, pray to the sun, sing to the sun, take sun baths, dew baths, eat rose petals and pansies, drive out disease by fasting spells (or say they do so), fast for days and then fatten up on a diet of water to drink and violets to eat, kiss and rekiss, and try to be as happy and contented as can be.

These people are the Mazdaznans or Sun Worshipers. Into their innermost shrines have penetrated none but ardent devotees, so that none of their rites have been made public. As revealed for the first time at the big Gahanbar, or national peace congress of the Mazdaznans, these rites are weird enough—strange to the outside world, but taken as a matter of course by the Mazdaznans.

And the strange part of the rites and worship is that the devout worshipers believe their practice will lengthen their years into three or four centuries.

Secret Rites of Cult.

Another thing about the sun folk is that they don't worry. So in the hot weather they manage to keep cool figurative!~ and physically. They usually look happy and contented when met on the street.

None outside the cult itself knew—up to the holding of the recent Gahanbar or Congress—of the secret rites of the Mazdaznans. These are practiced in the inner circles, so called.

For years the famous "Green Book" of the Mazdaznans was a mystery sealed to the eyes of ordinary mortals. The book was guarded sacredly by the Sun Worshipers. In it are printed the precepts of the cult.

Here are some of them:

You can get cured of anything if you have faith enough long enough.

Sickness, sin and poverty will be eradicated by Mazdaznanism.

The fly you swat may be the incarnated soul of a great-great-great-grandmother.

Be careful, then, how you swat the flies.

Obstinacy Cause for Pain.

Pain is nothing but the result of obstinacy in you. If you are suffering from a toothache, it is because you are "declining to yield to the peaceful operations of intelligence."

Never go under the surgeon's knife or take "herbal medicine."

Deny the "bonds of ancestral relation through sickness, sin or sorrow."

And practice these things: Deep or "conscious" breathing and vegetarianism.

If you can do these things, you may become a Mazdaznan, so the "Green Book" says.

The High Priestess is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Roth Hilton, wife of Dr. George Hilton, of Lowell.

In the inner worship Hanish, the leader, is His Humbleness, Mrs. Hilton is Spenta Marie—the equivalent of "holy mother."

Their chief New England shrine is the Mazdaznan Temple, in Lowell. This was formerly a barn belonging to Dr. Hilton, but later converted into a "house of worship."

The central figure in the worship is Mrs. Hilton, the High Priestess. She is the mother of two pretty daughters, one of whom, the elder, Miss Ruthken Mariana Hilton, is being educated to follow in her mother's steps as High Priestess. Some day pretty Miss Ruthken—her name before the court changed it was Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of Mrs. Hilton by her first marriage—will be the leader of the Mazdaznans. The other daughter is Miss Constance Cleopatra Hilton.

The majority of the followers of the "Little Master," Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, are the persons of middle life and evidently of generous means. While a few of the cult are young women of surpassing beauty, yet the advanced philosophic principles of Mazdaznan are so complex and abstract that only those of mature mind are intellectually and spiritually capable of comprehending them. Therefore, there is a dearth of young people in the cult.

Rats Give Sleeping Fisherman Haircut

Well Oiled Head of Angler Proves Excellent Provender for Hungry Island Rodents.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., July 19. A Santa Barbara fisherman has discovered a new way of getting his hair clipped. He appeared about his usual haunts yesterday with one-half of his head neatly shorn of hair. He says that the mice did it. A well-known fisherman vouches for the tale.

Santa Barbara Island is inhospitable and barren and contains not a drop of fresh water. For this reason fishing parties take a good supply of liquid refreshment.

Usually fishermen sleep on their boats on account of the mice. However, the fisherman in the party of Williams said he would sleep on shore.

This fisherman had earned the sobriquet of "Dude," owing to his habit of oiling his hair. It was this oil that caused the involuntary haircut, for the fishermen say that during the "Dude's" hours of slumber the mice visited him and neatly cut the hair close to the scalp in their relish of the oil.

Japs' 'Amo' Starts Romance at Harvard

Girl Student Teaches Him Language of Nippon and Now They Sail for Tokio Honeymoon.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—They met in the yard at Harvard. He was finishing his course and she was studying the intricacies of the Japanese language.

"Will you teach me Japanese?" asked James Lee Kauffman, and she said "yes."

They studied together day after day. Finally he was graduated to what corresponds to "Amo" in the Latin books. He asked her several times to explain its meaning.

"It means I love," she said, blushing.

"I am sure it must mean I love you," he said, and when she nodded that such might be the case he admitted that such was the case.

So they were married in Lancaster, Pa., and came here.

They sailed for Tokio. He is to take the chair of English law in the Imperial University.

Marries and Steals To Reform a Girl

Divinity Student Admits Taking Money Trusted to Him Because He Loved Woman.

DENVER, July 19.—William Schulz, student of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $38 from the student body, whose cashier he was, says he married Miss Thelma Gillion and became a defaulter, not only because he loved the girl, but because he desired to assist her in giving up her former way of living.

That Schulz had partly succeeded in his work of reclamation is the belief of all Denver people who have come in contact with the young woman since she and Schulz arrived in this city. They unite in saying that there is no better behaved young woman in Denver than Mrs. Schulz.

Sioux City Finds Policewomen Useful

Superintendent of Police Safety Declares They Have Lessened Trouble With Girls.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA, July 19.—"I want especially to have the policewomen on the force during the summer months," says the Superintendent of Public Safety. "We formerly had plenty of trouble with young girls in dance halls, but since the women came on the force there has been none of this.

"I believe that they are doing fine work and am very well satisfied. The only thing that would cause their release from the force would be the lack of sufficient appropriation to pay their salary. They are necessary to the force in guarding the morals of the women of Sioux City."

Safe Robber Relic Found in Old Wall

Discoverers Believe That Ancient Money Box Was Taken From Stage Coach by Highwaymen.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., July 19.—While repairing the State highway at the top of Conococheague Mountain, near Concord, Ralph Hopple and Elias Snyder, who were tearing down a stone wall, found an express money box, of heavy sheet iron, lined with wood. The lid was partly open and the lock had been sprung with an iron hook found near the box.

It is thought the box was in the old stone wall for more than a century and was placed there by a gang of robbers that infested that section in the days of stage coaches.

ACID THROWN AS JEALOUS WIFE STRIKES RIVAL

House Physician of Kimball House Center of Affray Witnessed by Peachtree Crowd.

Dr. J. Robert Smith, house physician at the Kimball Hotel; Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Ina McNeil, of No. 299 Forrest avenue, a saleswoman at a downtown store, engaged in a struggle in front of the Park-Chambers-Hardwick store on Peachtree street Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. Smith found her husband with Mrs. McNeil.

In the melee Mrs. McNeil received a slight cut on her arm, and Mrs. Smith claims also she gave her a black eye. During the trouble a bottle of what is supposed to have been carbolic acid was thrown by one of the participants, but none of them will admit throwing it. Dr. Smith declares he did not see the acid thrown, and Mrs. Smith will not say whether she threw it or not.

Hundreds See Fray.

The triangular affray was witnessed by hundreds of Peachtree street pedestrians, and created considerable excitement. After the bottle of acid had crashed to the pavement and broken, Dr. Smith hustled his wife around the corner, while Mrs. McNeil ran into the store and hurried to the second floor.

Mrs. Smith admits attacking Mrs. McNeil. She says she has several times asked her to keep away from Dr. Smith, and declares she became infuriated when she saw her husband meet Mrs. McNeil downtown to-day.

Says She Trailed Smith.

"Dr. Smith has been running around with Mrs. McNeil for more than a year now," said Mrs. Smith. "We have been separated for several years, but of late the doctor has asked me to return to him. He has offered to buy me an automobile if I would come back, but I told him I would have to test him. I asked him to keep away from Mrs. McNeil, and I've also asked Mrs. McNeil to keep away from Robert.

"I heard several weeks ago that he was going around with her again, and this morning I came to Atlanta from my home in Douglas. I trailed Dr. Smith to-day when he left the Kimball House, and I saw him meet the woman on Edgewood avenue. I followed them until they got in front of the store on Peachtree street, and then I got so mad that I stopped them.

"I admit I hit Mrs. McNeil, and I would do it again. I just got so mad that I walked up and struck her in the face. I gave her a black eye and scratched her on the arm, but she didn't hurt me. I don't know anything about the acid. Dr. Smith did not do anything while we were fighting, but acted like he wanted to get away. After the bottle was thrown, he took me out of the place."

Girl Shoots Herself When She Is Spanked

Mother Punishes Her for Spending Afternoons With Boys—She Fires Bullet Into Breast.

NEW YORK, July 19.—When the mother of 15-year-old Mary DeMartino spanked her a week ago for spending the afternoons with young men on the roof of their home, No. 337 East Forty-seventh street, the girl threatened to shoot herself.

Mrs. DeMartino caught her on the roof again yesterday, and after Mary had been chastised, she fired a bullet into her breast, penetrating one of her lungs. She was taken to Flower Hospital, and last night was in a critical condition.

Couldn't Die Until He Moved Friend's Body

Pioneer Refuses to Allow Companion's Remains to Rest in Old Deserted Cemetery.

DUFUR, OREG., July 19.—"No, he was just my friend."

This was the answer given by H. Koehler, of Portland, when asked if William Holman, whose body he had gone to the trouble and expense of moving from one cemetery to another, was a relative.

Many, many years ago, when there was but a small handful of settlers in the Fifteen-Mile Valley, a location for a cemetery was selected on a hill overlooking the valley.

A few days ago Kohler, now a gray-haired man, came to look after the last resting place of his friend Holman. He left here soon after Holman's death 35 years ago.

"We were good friends—very good friends," he said. "I could not die happy if I knew he would be left out there in that old cemetery with no one left to care for his grave. I had intended to look after this long ago, but circumstances have prevented, and now I am growing old and I must do this one kind act for my friend. We were very, very good friends."

Horn Frightens Animal But He Afterwards Turns to Fight and Pierces Tire With Horns.

UKIAH, CAL., July 19.—W. C. Jones, of Los Angeles, ran down a big deer with his auto near Largo yesterday when it jumped over the fence in front of the machine. Jones opened his throttle and turned loose the horn. The noise frightened the animal, and, after a half mile chase, it turned to give battle. The deer made one vicious lunge forward, its horn piercing the front tire, the impact breaking its neck. Jones loaded his prize into the machine.

CRAWFORD HEIRS EXPECT SEARCH FOR BARBER TO BARE PRE-NUPTIAL PLOT

Relatives Think That Lump Will Tell Woman Held on Poison Charge Planned to Wed Him on Her Husband's Death.

If the tireless search which is being directed by Atlanta lawyers discovers in New York a man named Fred Lump, the prosecution in the case against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, thinks a pre-nuptial plot against Crawford can be proved.

The alleged plot was between Mrs. Crawford, then Mrs. Savage, and Lump. She would marry the wealthy Crawford, obtain his money, and then marry Lump, say her accusers.

Lump is a barber by trade and a Bohemian by nativity. He is supposed to be in New York, and in that city detectives in the employ of the prosecution have been at work for several days. Every message that comes from them, however, is one of failure.

Colonel James Makes Charge.

The charge of a plot first was made by Col. J. S. James, who is attorney for the contesting Crawford heirs, who ordered the arrest of Lump. Colonel James said that Lump admitted his being in Atlanta at the time of Crawford's death, and that other testimony valuable to the prosecution was given by him in deposition several weeks ago. But present search for the Bohemian barber has proved fruitless.

Colonel James points to Mrs. E. C. Bursener as one of the witnesses of the prosecution to substantiate the murder plot charge. Mrs. Bursener, it is claimed, will testify that she frequently heard Mrs. Crawford say that she would marry Crawford, get his money, and later run away with Lump. The prosecution will seek to prove also by Mrs. Gertrude A. Painter, it is said, that there was a definite agreement to this plan existent between Mrs. Crawford and Lump.

The forces that are trying to saddle Mrs. Crawford with the murder charge are scoring heavily in the closely-allied civil suit. Heirs of Joshua B. Crawford, trying to break the will by which the widow received the bulk of the estate, charging undue influence, have produced a number of witnesses to swear to an antagonism between Crawford and Mrs. Mary B. Crawford.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. L. C. Dillingsley, who testified that Joshua B. Crawford said, time and again, that he would not marry the woman. This statement was elicited in the attempt to prove that Crawford was not rational, and probably was intoxicated, when he married Mrs. Crawford.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Mrs. Dillingsley, who said she lived in the Crawford home on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death, told of instances of alleged cruelty on Mrs Crawford's part, directed particularly toward a Miss Scott. Mrs. Sallie Alexander, an old woman of Henry County, was another witness by whom it was sought to prove habitual drunkenness on Crawford's part.

Mrs. Crawford, released from the Tower on bail of $6,250, has remained in the seclusion of her home on West Peachtree street all week, steadfastly quiet and refusing all statements in the face of the accusations against her. She has said nothing regarding the case, except a simple denial of the charges.

Reporters seeing her were treated courteously and quietly, and Mrs. Crawford seemed not averse to talk to them freely. But in most of the talk the subject of the murder charge and the plot charge in which Lump's name appears was carefully skirted.

Mrs. Crawford is a large woman, of dignified appearance. Not one moment since her arrest Saturday night has her composure broken, even slightly. In the Tower she received the few persons who called on her, and during the visit did not exhibit a sign of perturbation.

Calls Charge "Awful Thing."

To reporters and to all her visitors, when she mentioned at all the subject of the murder charge, she referred to it as "this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford finds staunch friends in her children and grandchildren, who visited her at the Tower, and were with her almost all the few hours she spent in jail, bringing her flowers, a savory meal, and other tokens of their love.

Mrs. Crawford's children are bitter in their speech against the nephews and neices of Joshua B. Crawford, who, they say, are persecuting their mother with extreme cruelty. Mrs. Crawford herself accused her enemies of cruelty and lack of feeling.

Mrs. Crawford met Joshua B. Crawford when she was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine, wither Crawford went in search of health. It was there she met him, and there that she married him. At his death, there was a settlement of his estate, Mrs. Crawford taking hold of the affairs with a capable hand.

An agreement was signed, and the affairs of Joshua B. Crawford, deceased, seemed amicably settled. Then the litigation was sprung. In the first bill of complaint the heirs who contested the will charged Mrs. Crawford with poisoning her husband, and of exerting undue influence to procure a will in her favor. But it was not until three years later, two weeks ago, that an examination of the remains of Joshua B. Crawford to ascertain traces of poison was ordered. Upon the examination came the verdict of the physician that traces of poison were vident, and Mrs. Crawford was arrested.

With preliminary hearing waived, Mrs. Crawford's case is flatly up to the grand jury, which, without definite date of meeting, awaits the call of the Solicitor General. The body probably will be assembled next week.

MRS. MARY BELLE CRAWFORD, held on poison charge in famous will case mystery, with her grandchild, Viola Belle Bennett.

Fortune in Gold Nuggets Awaits Heir

Wealth Will Revert to State of Kansas Unless Kin of Old Woman Appear.

HUTCHINSON, July 19.—There is a bag of gold nuggets and gold dust awaiting heirs that may go to the State of Kansas. These nuggets and the gold dust, along with some money and other personal property to the value of $10,000, are in the hands of former Sheriff G. M. Duckworth, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ann M. Bernhert, who died a few days ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Some years ago when Mrs. Bernhert, who lived alone, was found to be of unsound mind, Dr. Duckworth was named as her guardian and she was taken to an asylum for treatment. In searching the house he found scattering personal property. It was found that much of it was gold nuggets and dust, saved, evidently, from some former mining experience, and hoarded away.

Baby Sips Hat Bleach; Dies from Poisoning

Mother, Bedridden from Appendicitis, Is Unable to Stop Child from Drinking Acid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—As a result of drinking a mixture of lye and oxalic acid, used by her father to clean an old straw hat, Dorothy E. Smith, 20 months old, died yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her father is Leo Smith, of No. 47 Brooklyn avenue, Jamaica, an employee of the Long Island Railroad.

The child's mother is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She and the baby were alone in the house yesterday when the child drank the mixture. She heard the baby's screams, but could not leave her bed, so she screamed, too, and neighbors who responded called a doctor.

RENO SINGS ITS SWAN SONG AS DIVORCE MECCA

Grand Rush of Colonists to Take Advantage of the Old Law Comes to an End.

RENO, July 19.—With such songs as "Meet a Friend From Your Home Town" and "At the Devil's Ball," sung by feminine entertainers from Metropolitan music halls, accompanied by high-class orchestras, the divorce colony celebrated the past week the beginning of the end of the Nevada quick divorce.

On the stroke of the midnight hour on Monday the curtain dropped upon one scene in Reno's notable divorce colony performance which has commanded the attention of the world for so long—that of the almost daily appearance of new faces upon the streets, as men and women, from plain country folk to elaborately gowned and bejeweled society beauties, arrived to begin their required six months' residence in the State and county, preparatory to the prospective divorce action.

Law Halts Colonists.

No more will incoming trains deposit these colonists and carloads of trunks, for the familiar song, "I'm on My Way to Reno," has been shelved by the action of the last Legislature, when it dealt the knock-out blow in its ultimatum that no divorce proceeding shall be instituted in the State of Nevada under the existing six-month residence law after December 21 next, thereby limiting the time in which newcomers could begin such residence period to Monday last.

Previous to July, 1909, the presence here for divorce of but an occasional person of prominence merely commanded attention to that individual, but it led to a method of publicity by an attorney which started the ball rolling, and it has never stopped rolling. Its greatest momentum is being witnessed now.

All Houses Are Thronged.

During the past month, and especially the week ending on Monday, the throng of newcomers has experienced great difficulty in securing such apartments as they might desire. All the hotels are crowded, as are the desirable rooming houses. Available cottages are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. In many cottages from four to six divorcees are living.

Some private boarding houses are housing as many as ten of the fair sex, and men. There are now scores of so-called "divorcees' nests" here. Every train the past fortnight has unloaded new arrivals, the preponderance of men and very young women, seemingly well to do and fashionable being noticeable. The proportion of men to women increased largely. Baby carriages and dogs played conspicuous parts.

Attending Funerals Hobby of Old Squaw

"Glass Eye," Noted for Lamentations at Obsequies, at Last Principal at Mortuary Ceremony.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREG., July 19.—"Glass Eye" is dead. She was an aged Indian woman, well known here since the settlment of this section. It was one of her hobbies to attend every funeral that she could, and on these occasions she posed as chief mourner by her excessive lamentations.

Her name has been forgotten by the whites, who only know her by the nickname, which is said to have been given her when young, because of the brightness of her eyes and not because of any abnormality in them.

She was about 75 years old, and is reported to have been the sister of "White Cindy," another noted aborigine.

Boy Finds $35,500; Hides it from Police

Advertises That He Picked up Money and Declares He Will Return it to Owner.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., July 19.—Brayton Gardner, 18 years old, who announced he had found $35,500 in a leather bag on the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad, to-night refused to tell the police where he put the money.

"I have hidden it in a safe place," said he, "and if someone claims it I will produce it immediately."

Gardner walked into the office of a local newspaper and inserted an advertisement, reading:

"Found, $35,500. Owner can have money by identifying it and satisfying Brayton Gardner."

Stolen Jewels Are Found Buried in Park

Last of $100,000 Loot Stolen by Employee of Firm Recovered After Confession.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The final confession of young William Beck, who stole $100,000 worth of jewelry from his employers, Udall & Ballou, was obtained yesterday. The last $2,800 of the loot was found by detectives. It was buried in Central Park.

Beck had insisted until yesterday that he had told all. But Inspector Faurot finally got him to reveal the hiding place. The police were told to enter the park at 110th street and Eighth avenue and count eighteen stone blocks in the wall to a spot where a small bush grew. Buried 6 inches they found nine diamond rings and a pair of cuff buttons.

Indian Girl Seeks Office in Oklahoma

Educated Cherokee Business Woman Would Be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

VINITA, OKLA., July 19.—Announcement by Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, that she will not be a candidate for re-election, brings into the race for the Democratic nomination a young Cherokee woman, Miss Pearl Holderman, of Northern Craig County, whose ability as an educated business woman has given her a wide acquaintance in Eastern Oklahoma.

Miss Holderman has large business responsibilities, and her experience and ability have made her more than a match for most men. Because of her father's impaired health she manages his cattle ranch, directing every detail, including the care of a herd of blooded cattle. This young Cherokee woman owns a thousand acres of land in her own name, all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

Old Age Attributed To Her False Teeth

Woman, Age 99, Declares She Has Used Set 59 Years—Always Chews Well.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 19.—At the age of 99, Mrs. Levina Derr, of Hudson, declares that her long life is due solely to the fact that she bought a set of good store teeth fifty years ago.

Mrs. Derr is still active. Five generations of her family are living, and she declares she is as young as any of them.

"I was blessed with good teeth," she said, "and I always made it a point to chew my food well. A good stomach is the foundation of good health, and the stomach can not be good unless the teeth are good."

Congress to Lose Costly Stationery

Government Printer Is Ordered to Stop Use of Costly Material for Lawmakers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Members of Congress will draw no more costly embossed stationery at the expense of the Government. Hereafter they will get along with plain, every-day printed letterheads and envelopes.

The Joint Committee on Printing discovered that the Government Printing Office last year turned out 11,000,000 embossed pieces of stationery at an extra cost of $30,000. An order has been issued to the Government Printer to stop this extravagance.

On the Senate side of Congress this economy reform is resented, but it goes just the same. If Senators want stationery de luxe they must foot the bills out of their private purse.

Women Wear Bath Dresses Down Town

Startle Natives by Appearing in Ice Cream Parlor in Their Beach Attire.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Two buxon matrons and a miss about 19 years old created a sensation about dusk by walking through the streets of Warwood, north of this city, in bathing costumes. Unabashed by the attention they attracted, they entered an ice cream parlor, where they ordered ices, and after eating them walked to their homes.

The matter was brought to the attention of Town Marshal E. L. Pool, who immediately issued a warning that women appearing hereafter in such scant attire would subject themselves to arrest.

Naturalist Editor Has Forest Sanctum

Sets His Type in Shade of Hemlock and Lives in Wigwam all Winter.

WESTFIELD, MASS., July 19.—A unique editorial and printing plant is that known as "Seneca Wigwam, The Press in the Forest," located in the heart of the woods about three miles west of this place.

The sanctum is a typical Indian tepee, where the editor, Joseph C. Duport, an out-of-door enthusiast, prints, illustrates and publishes an original magazine called the Woronoco Valley Calumet.

In summer the editor sets his type in the shade of a hemlock, and in the winter or during inclement weather his work is done in the wigwam, which contains an up-to-date twentieth century printing press and equipment.

Policeman's Watch Stops Death Bullet

Hospital Steward Thinks Patrolman Burglar and Fires Six Shots at His Heart.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 19.—A watch in his vest pocket stopped a bullet which otherwise probably would have pierced the heart of Patrolman O'Hara last night. The shot was one of six fired by Roscoe Gray, steward of the Oakland College of Medicine, under the impression that O'Hara was a burglar. The other shots did not hit O'Hara. Gray nearly collapsed when he learned his mistake.

O'Hara was on his rounds when he noticed a door in the college building open. Trying to close it, he set off a burglar alarm and Gray opened fire in the dark.

Silver Wire Travels Through Two Arms

Metal Closes Wound on Left Wrist and Works Way to the Right Finger.

CHICO, CAL., July 19.—James Dupen, a Chico merchant, to-day submitted to an operation, in which a piece of silver wire, used in closing a wound on the left wrist in 1897, was extracted from the index finger of the right hand. The wire, which is one-half inch long, passed up one arm, across the chest and worked down the opposite arm, emerging at the finger.

Bee Sting on Neck Fatal to Farmer

Dies from Paralysis of Heart Fifteen Minutes After Insect Poison Enters System.

BRISTOL, PA., July 19.—John Pickering, a farmer of Woodbine, while engaged in his customary duties about the farm Saturday, was stung on the neck by a large bee and within fifteen minutes he was dead.

Dr. Heritage, of Langhorne, was summoned, but did not arrive in time to render aid. The doctor says death was the result of paralysis of the heart, caused by the bee sting.

FARMERS' UNION HOPE OF SOUTH, SAY ORGANIZERS IN GREAT GEORGIA CAMPAIGN

Charles S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee, Sweep Through the State With a Message to Planters to Check Enormous Crop Waste.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a flying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"The marvelous grandeur of the world's progress astounds and amazes us, yet the wonderful story would never have been written had it not been for the ever-faithful farmer.

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"When we became a nation the farmer owned 90 per cent of the wealth. In 1850 our national wealth was $7,000,000,000 and the farmer owned $4,000,000,000, or four-sevenths.

"In 1913 our national wealth is estimated at $131,000,000,000, and the farmer owns $26,000,000,000. Our farm property is valued at nearly $40,000,000,000, but $14,000,000,000 is owned by other classes than farmers.

"The above figures show that farmers are not holding their own, for if they had kept pace with other vocations since 1850 they would now own $75,000,000,000 worth of wealth instead of $26,000,000,000. Their lack of business methods and failure to match conditions have cost them $49,000,000,000. This would buy all the farm property in the United States and have enough left to buy a half interest in all the railroads.

"In a score of years the farmers of this country have produced $135,000,000,000 worth of farm products, of enough to buy all the property in the United States. Yet this wonderful amount of wealth has not gone to the farmers. We have 10,000 men in this country who own an average of $10,000,000 each. And their combined wealth is $100,000,000,000. The other 99,990,000 people own $31,000,000,000. Of our 100,000,000, 60,000,000 are homeless.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The 12,000,000 farmers of this country are laboring under an indebtedness of $6,000,000,000. On this amount, counting commissions and renewal charges, they are paying an annual interest of 8 1-2 per cent, or $510,000,000, while the business men and manufacturers pay an average of 5 per cent interest, or $300,000,000, on $6,000,000,000. This $210,000,000 excess interest paid by the farmers would pay off our farm indebtedness in 28 years. Co-operative efforts and rural credits would right these wrongs. So, let us continue to discourage this present system until it has passed into history and is only remembered in the misty back yonder.

"Distribution being one of our greatest problems, our second declaration of purposes is to assist our members in buying and selling. The Federal Government has spent $100,000,000 in the last ten years, teaching us how to produce, and not a cent to teach us how to market.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

Expense Is Unavoidable.

"We all agree that there is an unavoidable expense in the distribution of farm products. But let us make what seems to us a reasonable division of the $13,000,000,000 consumers other than farmers pay for farm products each year.

Give the wholesaler and jobber $1,000,000,000, the transportation companies $1,000,000,000, the retailer $1,500,000,000; then throw in $500,000,000 for all possible misallowance, and we have $3,000,000,000, which is $3,000,000,000 more than the farmer gets. This amount falls into the waste basket of speculation.

"If it were divided between the producer and consumer it would clothe the naked, feed the hungry and educate the illiterate, instead of breeding millionaires, paupers, anarchists and suicides. If the Farmers' Union fills its mission, it will not be long until a less portion of the laborers' toll will be turned in at the toll gate of the palace and a great portion will find its way through the door of the cottage, and help to lift the humble tenement to the comfort, dignity and luxury of a home.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 260,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If property handled this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices; we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep his pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

THIS DRESS WAS TOO MUCH FOR PRIM RICHMOND.

THIS Picture shows Miss Flossie Brown in the split skirt which caused so much excitement in Richmond, Va., that the young lady was arrested, fined $25 and given twenty-four hours in which to leave town. The idea of the slit skirt did not appeal at all to the Virginians, but it has not been received with so much disfavor elsewhere, for Miss Brown, or Blossom Browning, as she prefers to be called, has been invited to wear it in Pittsburg and Baltimore.

Quarrel at License Desk Halts Wedding

Prospective Bride Objected to Way Her Fiance Spelled Name and Ceremony Was Called Off.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., July 19. A near-wedding was spoiled to-day when the bride-to-be and the bridegroom-to-be quarreled over the spelling of the latter's name. C. W. Clane, of Los Angeles, aged 44, and wearing diamonds as large as hickory nuts, accompanied by a woman about 35 years old, applied for a license.

He started to fill out the blank. "Spell it right, please; spell it Cline," whispered the woman, but Clane just kept on writing.

Again his prospective bride, speaking right out loud, said he was spelling his name wrongly. But still Clane paid no attention. Then, in tones of downright anger, she exclaimed, "You spell your name properly or there will be no wedding."

"Very well," answered the man, and he crumpled up the application blank and they left the office.

NATION FINALLY REFUSES BURR'S PENSION PLEA

United States Decides After 79 Years Just to File Request in National Museum.

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—After some delay—79 years, to be more or less exact—the United States Government has decided on a final action on Aaron Burr's application for a pension. The Government proposes to put the application in the National Museum. This is a patriotic and quite inexpensive method of disposing of a formal application for money.

Exhibited in a glass inclosed case in the museum, the papers may rest peacefully and indefinitely, telling future generations that in his last days Burr was considerably "hard-up." This is a fact not generally known. But if future generations happen to be observant they may notice that the papers show Uncle Sam to be a bit tardy in matters of pensions.

Papers Valuable Historically.

Historically, the papers are very valuable. They contain a letter written by George Washington to Aaron Burr, which even to-day—about 135 years after the letter was penned—is in a state of perfect preservation. Any student of values of historical relics can tell how much such a thing is worth. Officials at the National Museum declare the letter to be "invaluable."

The paper is a bit yellow but it is intact. The ink is a trifle faded, but can be read without difficulty even without the aid of glasses. And, furthermore, the letter reveals a bit of Washington's character more clearly than a volume of history. The missive shows how the general treated with his officers. Burr had written to Washington requesting leave of absence from military duty on account of ill health and suggesting that while off duty his pay may be discontinued.

Here is George Washington's reply to Burr:

Headquarters,
Frederick, 26th Oct., 1778.

"Dear Sir:

"I have your favor of the 24th. You, in my opinion, carry your ideas of delicacy too far when you propose to drop your pay while the recovery of your health necessarily requires your absence from the service. It is not customary, and it would be unjust. You therefore have leave to retire until your health is so far re-established as to enable you to do your duty.

"Be pleased to give the Colonel notice of this, that he may know where to call upon you should any unforeseen exigency require it.

"I am, dear sir,

"Your mo. obt. servt.,
"GEO. WASHINGTON.

"Lt. Col. Burr."

Burr's Final Appeal.

George Washington's letter is regarded as the most valuable paper among the sheaf composing Burr's application, but the application itself, Burr's formal appeal for a pension, has much historical worth because it is Burr's own record of his military service, written in 1834, just two years before his death, at the age of 80 years, in Port Richmond, Staten Island, N. Y. The papers contain no mention of Burr's famous duel with Alexander Hamilton, in which Hamilton was mortally wounded.

Burr even failed to mention in the papers that he had been Vice President of the United States, and reference to the fact that he was arrested and tried for treason for attempting to form a republic west of the Mississippi is also omitted. In the application it is recited, however, that Burr was unable to appear in court to swear to the facts by reason of "bodily infirmity."

CONVICTS OFFERED PARDON IF THEY WILL PICK BERRIES

GEORGETOWN, DEL., July 19.—Full and complete pardons await even the prisoners in Sussex County if they will pick strawberries or work on the farms.

The scarcity of labor has become a serious problem to the farmers this year, and so serious has the question become that many of them have notified committing magistrates that they will pay all fines for intoxicated and disorderly persons if it can be arranged that these people pick berries.

CHANGS, ON WAY HOME, CLING TO YANKEE FRILLS

Wife and Children of Chinese Minister Sail Derssed in Latest American Fashions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—After more than three years in Washington with her husband, Minister Chang, Mme. Chang is returning to the Orient. She is accompanied by two daughters, a son, Henry K. Chang; a little daughter-in-law and a tiny grandchild. During her residence in America Mme. Chang has changed her ideas about many things, and about others she maintains the old Chinese beliefs.

The two young daughters, Miss Alice and Miss Lillie Chang, have been attending school in Washington for two years, and with the progress of their education have abandoned their picturesque nature clothes for American garb.

Whether they will adopt the clothes of their native country on their return remains to be seen. Miss Alice Chang, who spoke for the party at the St. Francis before they sailed on the Manchuria, said:

"It all depends on what is in fashion in China.

Favor American Fashions.

"If we find American clothes fashionable out there, we shall wear them. We adopted them when we entered Gunnison Hall, our Washington school. These are more convenient when traveling," she added, pointing to a pale blue silk crepe costume with the latest frills and furbelows. "When we wear our other clothes, people stare so, and sometimes they laugh. They aren't used to them in Washington."

The question of recent changes in China is of especial interest to Mme. Chang and her daughters.

The idea that women may vote in China and that the door of opportunity is opening for them dally there has caused the Chinese women to be thoughtful.

"I don't know about this voting," said Mme. Chang, through her daughter. "I don't believe very much in it."

"Only for some women," broke in one daughter.

Education Qualification.

"I would make an educational qualification," said Miss Lillie. "Not every woman ought to vote."

"Home is the place for women," said Mme. Chang, true to her country's traditions and centuries of training. "A woman ought to do housekeeping, to stay at home and to have children."

Mme. Chang and the daughters are opposed to the Western idea of a woman earning her own living. They believe she should want to stay at home to be cared for, even if she has to do without some of the extras which her own money can secure.

"Women in China probably never will reach that stage," said Mme. Chang. "There will be fewer opportunities for them to enter professional and business fields."

College is a goal which is being aspired to by the two daughters, although they are not sure yet what particular lines they want to pursue. "We can go if we want to, you know," said Miss Alice. "Our people believe in college for girls if they want it."

Surgeon Rebuilding Man's Entire Face

Ears and Nose Burned Months Ago Are Being Replaced by Series of Operations.

GRAHAM, MO., July 19.—Pierce Fleming, who lives near Graham, is undergoing one of the most remarkable series of operations ever attempted in Missouri. His face is being built anew.

Several months ago the Fleming home was burned and Pierce was severely burned about the head. For a time it was thought he could not live. He finally recovered, but his ears and nose were badly scarred.

A Kansas City surgeon was consulted and he began the work of rebuilding the face of the burned man. The ears have been completely rebuilt and the doctor is now working on the nose and the eyes. It is barely possible now to discern the difference between the new nose and ears of Fleming and the ones he lost in the fire.

WOMAN JURORS SCORN STYLE OF SMART LAWYER

Beau Brummel Clothes and Bachelor Button of Barrister Fail to Win His Cause.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Personal pulchritude and unusually smart habiliments, heightened by a bachelor's button and an ingratiating manner, failed to win for Assistant District Attorney Maxwell McNutt, in his appeal to the jury of women which tried Mrs. Bertha J. Williams on an extortion charge to-day. After deliberating one hour and 55 minutes, the jury, the first in the history of the world composed of women to hear a felony case, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

"Of course she said she did what she did, but we didn't think when she said she did it, she meant she had meant to do it," said one of the jurywomen.

Hence, Mrs. Williams, attired in a fetching Milan hat and a neat white serge tailored suit, much scrutinized by the jurywomen, made discreet osculatory advances to her benefactors, and the incident was closed.

Mrs. Annette Robinson, also armored in attractive feminine fixings, was the complaining witness in the case. She accused Mrs. Williams of having written her a letter April 8, attempting to extort $150 in return for the delivery of a trunk said to have contained certain evidence which, according to the letter, would have embarrassed Mrs. Robinson, had it fallen into the hands of the police.

Meows from Limb of Tree to Voice Love

Chicago Romeo Tries Novel Method of Wooing, but Falls Into Clutches of Law.

CHICAGO, July 19.—John Wadjinski's method of love-making goes back to the days when anthropoid Romeos used to hang by their tails and carol love songs all night long. He put his theories into practice on the night of May 3. To-day he was fined $5 and costs by Judge Sabath, who could find no sympathy for the unconventional wooing.

Sophia Emmerling had retired for the night. John Wadjinski strode through the night with caveman emotions stirring in his breast. He entered the Emmerling yard and climbed a tree. He straddled a branch opposite Sophia's window and began to "meow" like a cat. To the girl thus rudely awakened he made love in a voice that could be heard for a block.

Mrs. Anna Emmerling, the girl's mother, called the police. Wadjinski was yanked from romance to the jail.

MYSTERY MAN'S NAME TO STAY SECRET ALWAYS

Operation on Brain Fails to Reveal Identity of "J. C. R." Has Baffled Surgeons.

ROCHESTER, MINN., July 19.—That "J. C. R.," the mystery patient in the Rochester State Hospital, will never know who he is nor will the world, unless friends of olden days come to the rescue, and that he will never again speak, is the verdict of the surgeons, following a remarkable operation performed upon the brain.

"It is problematical that the operation will accomplish its purpose," said C. C. Heyerdale, first assistant superintendent of the State Hospital, after leaving the operating room.

The opening of the skull revealed a large area of degenerated brain cells covering the centers of speech and memory, and an unusually large cyst containing fluid was removed. This would indicate that in times past "J. C. R." probably suffered a hemorrhage of the brain, which could have been the result of a stroke of apoplexy or an injury inflicted upon the skull or brain. The unusually large area of degeneration discourages any hope that the memory will ever be restored or speech recovered.

Gets Blow Intended For His Twin Brother

Chicago Youth Struck When Angry Swain Avenges Pleasantry His Duplicate Was Guilty Of.

CHICAGO, July 19.—William and Otto Andler, of 3751 North Whipple Street, are twins. William passed a pleasantry about a lass who was going her way with one William Dieverkorn.

Sudden anger surged through Dieverkorn, but he held himself in check and escorted the young woman home. Then he came back, met Andler on the street an gave him a jarring wallop.

Andler soon discovered that the blow was meant for his brother and that Dieverkorn got mixed in the delivery of the goods.

Otto Andler refused to rest on this explanation. He caused the arrest of Dieverkorn, and it came out in court how William got the laugh, Otto got the punch and Dieverkorn got the hook.

Judge Sabith inspected the twins, said he couldn't see any difference and dismissed the case, warning Dieverkorn to be more discriminating in the future.

Human Chain Saves Man on Niagara Brink

Four Men Take Desperate Chance in Rescue Work at Edge of Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 19.—Truman Chapman, aged 22, of Hamilton, Ont., is alive to-day after falling into the Niagara River and being rescued at the very brink of the American Falls. Four men formed a human chain, and, by taking a desperate chance, saved Chapman when his body providentially lodged between projections of rocks.

Chapman, who is subject to fits, was leaning against a railing at Prospect Point, directly over the water's edge, when he fell in. The current from this point to the brink of the falls is irresistible, but the unconscious body struck the rocks just right to be held temporarily. John Hughes, T. S. Winders, T. D. Thomas and an unidentified man were the heroes.

Advises Wives to Keep Their Secrets

Head of National Homestead Association Says It's a Mistake for Husbands to Know Too Much.

BOSTON, July 19.—"The wise wife never tells her husband all her secrets. She knows better than to run the chance of losing her independence."

So declared Mrs. Charlotte Smith, head of the National Homestead Association, to-day. The association is studying to find out what makes happy homes. It has learned that if a wife tells her husband everything it is a lesson to him not to tell her his secrets.

"Many divorces are occasioned by married couples knowing too much of each other," declared Mrs. Smith.

Aged Sisters Make White House Carpets

Old Women, Expert Dyers and Weavers, Are Preparing to Decorate Mrs. Wilson's Room.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 19.—Miss Caroline McHargue and Mrs. Martha Walker, of Elkin, aged 74 and 76, respectively, are engaged in preparing carpets, druggets and portieres to furnish the room of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the White House at Washington. They are experts in the blending of colors.

The two aged women are sisters. They live together and are expert dyers and weavers, using the old-time barks and herbs in the dyeing process, and the old-fashioned hand loom cards and spinning wheel.

Cartridge Placed on Track Shoots Youth

Boy May Die from Bullet Which Penetrated Lungs as Result of Belated Celebration.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—A delayed Fourth of July celebration on the part of small boys yesterday may result fatally for 8-year-old Francis Wright, who received a bullet in the chest at Twenty-fourth and Bryant streets. In company with his chums, he had been placing cartridges on the car tracks. One of them exploding, sent a bullet whizzing at him. He was taken to the Mission Emergency Hospital, where it was found that the bullet had penetrated the lung. The boy's parents had him removed to his home, No. 2582 Twenty-fourth street, where his condition is considered grave.

DORSEY FIGHTS MOVEMENT TO INDICT CONLEY

Solicitor Is Bombarded With Letters to Proceed Against Negro as Slayer of Mary Phagan.

THE GRAND JURY IS CALLED

Hottest Battle of Famous Case To Be Waged Behind Closed Doors of Inquisitory Body.

Solicitor Dorsey is fighting vigorously the movement in the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley Monday for the murder of Mary Phagan, despite the bambardment of letters from many citizens and by the sentiment of some of its own members.

It is for the consideration of these letters and petitions, asking the reopening of the Phagan matter, that the meeting has been called.

It was in the face of Solicitor Dorsey's bitterest opposition that the meeting was called at all. Foreman Beattie issued his defi after a previous Grand Jury had been defeated in its efforts to reopen the case with a view of indicting Jim Conley and after Dorsey explicitly had expressed his strongest disapproval of such a move.

Crucial Battle Coming.

With the first skirmish won by those in favor of the indictment of Conley, the hottest battle is yet to be waged behind the closed doors of the jury room. The question first will be on whether the grand jurors consider it proper at this time to reopen the investigation whose first chapter resulted in the indictment of Leo M. Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan. Solicitor Dorsey will lay before the body for the first time all of his reasons for desiring a postponement of all further investigation until after the trial of Frank.

Should the Solicitor be driven back from this position by the Grand Jury again disregarding his wishes and taking up the investigation, he will be forced to take refuge in the last ditch and make his fight against the indictment of Conley.

With all the weight of evidence which has piled up against the negro, it is regarded as beyond the realm of possibilities that he could persuade the jurors to return a "no bill" against Conley on the charge of murder. Dorsey's one remaining hope at this time would be, it is said, to induce the Grand Jury to waive definite action until after the trial of Frank, when it will be in a position to say whether an indictment shall be drawn against Conley as an accessory after the fact, to which he has confessed, or as the actual murderer.

Dorsey Refuse sto Comply.

The Solicitor's attitude in the matter plainly was shown by his statement when Foreman Beattie went to him Friday seeking to have him call the meeting. Dorsey flatly refused and said:

"The meeting's only purpose will be to exploit the evidence and embarrass the State, and I hope the Grand Jury when it meets will decide to leave the matter alone.

"The indictment of Conley at this time will be a useless procedure that will not stop the trial of Frank. It will only have a mild but undesirable effect on the State's case.

"Conley is in jail and is going to stay there for some time. He is where the authorities can put their hands on him, and he can be indicted much more properly after the Frank case has been disposed of than before, and by the delay there is no danger of a miscarriage of justice."

The Solicitor's position is attacked as palpably unfair by those who have been working to bring about the indictment of the negro. Dorsey would have the testimony of the negro accredited as that of any free and trustworthy citizen, while those opposing him declare it should be taken in the light of that of a possible murderer who is endeavoring to shift the blame on another's shoulders, they say.

Evidence More Direct.

They add that the evidence against Conley is far more direct and damning than any ever brought against Frank. They charge, on this account, that Conley has been protected and "coddled" when he should have been placed on the same basis as the other suspect in the case and should go before the jury in that aspect.

General denials were entered Saturday to the story published Friday that the Pinkertons had changed their attitude in the murder mystery and were convinced of the innocence of Frank. Chief of Detectives Lanford declared that Harry Scott had reaffirmed his belief in the guilt of Frank and the innocence of Conley, except as accessory after the fact.

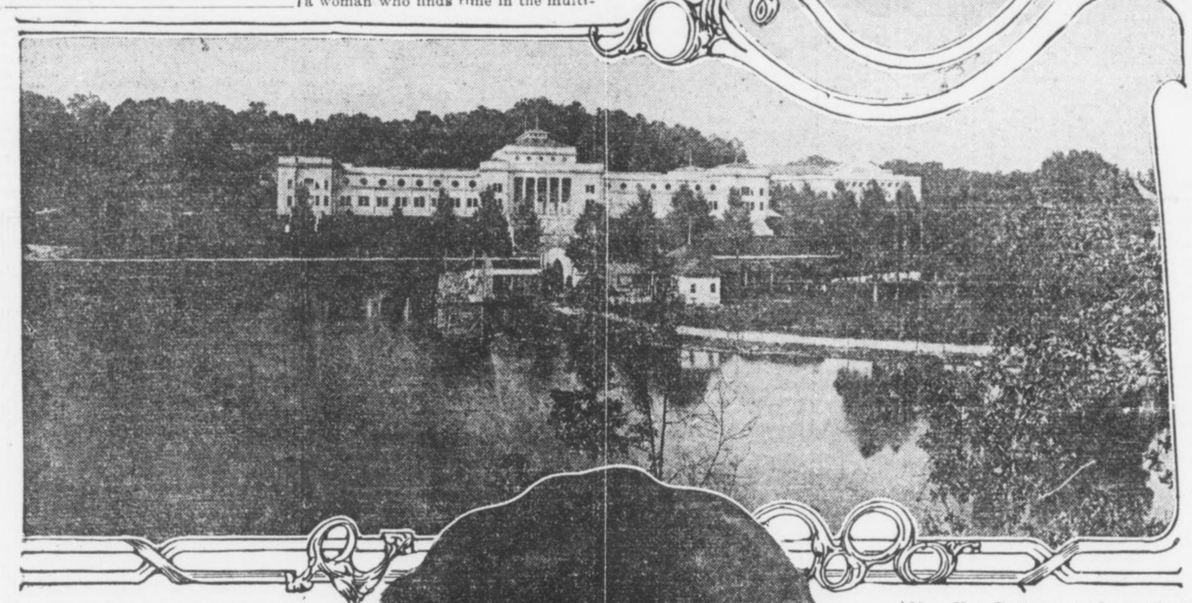
At the top Mrs. Horace Van Deventer, President of the Woman's Department of the National Conservation Exposition is shown, while the middle picture shows the Liberal Arts Building. Mrs. George W. Denny, a Vice President of the Woman's Department is shown in the lower picture.



Atlanta Day at the National Conservation Exposition in Knoxville this fall will be one of the largest of the many special days arranged for the national fair in the East Tennessee city.

Atlanta Day, according to plans now on foot, will be largely a society function, for the members of the Woman's Department of the exposition headed by Mrs. Horace VanDeventer, a daughter of Justice Lurton of the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as Knoxville's acknowledged society leader, expect to formulate their plans so that many of Atlanta society folk will make the trip to Knoxville for that day.

In addition it is planned to make Atlanta Day at the exposition one of peculiar and intimate interest to all residents of the city.

Mrs. VanDeventer to Come Here.

The plans for this special day are now in the making. They will be matured probably while the delegation of Knoxville business men is in Atlanta next week, and later when Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers in the woman's department come to the Georgia metropolis to take up the matter with Atlanta society folk.

In the preparations for what undoubtedly will be the South's greatest exposition, the woman's department is playing no small part. In Knoxville the exposition management considers itself fortunate that Mrs. VanDeventer consented to take the direction of the woman's work. She has a very large circle of friends and acquaintancse throughout the country, in cities of the North as well as in cities of the South, and what is more, she has succeeded in interesting large numbers of society women in the work she has under way.

Miss Mabel Boardman, president of the American Red Cross Society and a woman who finds time in the multitude of her various philanthropic work to devote herself to society, will be the guest of the woman's department of the exposition on September 19. Miss Boardman to accept this invitation will be obliged to cut short her vacation, but she has gladly consented to do this rather than miss going to Knoxville. She will be made the recipient of many social favors and attentions while in Knoxville. She will be the house guest of Mrs VanDeventer.

Mrs. Hammond Interested.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, of Washington, wife of the multi-millionaire mining engineer, who was the special Ambassador from the United States to England at the time of the coronation of King George, is another society woman who has become interested in the Knoxville show and who will come to that city for one of the special days. Mrs. Hammond is president of the National Civic Federation, which will have an extensive exhibit at the Exposition.

Mrs. John Goelet, of Washington; Miss Mabel Wetmore and other women whose names are known the country over will also be guests of the woman's department while the Exposition gates are open. Recently Mrs. Van Deventer made a trip to Nashville to interest the women of that city. On very short notice a meeting was called. Two hundred or more Nashville women went to that meeting. A number of men went also. There was much enthusiasm shown. The result was that plans were completed then and there for a Nashville Day.

More than that—the Nashville Park Commissioners, under whose auspices a splendid exhibit of paintings is being shown in the Parthenon of that city, voluntarily and as a compliment to Mrs. VanDeventer decided to continue the exhibition almost to the time set for the opening of the Conservation Exposition. Then the exhibits will be moved to Knoxville. One of them will be shown in the Art Building; the other, which is the celebrated collection owned by Charles L. Freer, a millionaire art collector, of Detroit, will be placed in the Woman's Building.

Mrs. Denney Also Active.

Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers, among them Mrs. George W. Denney, fourth vice president, who is also the president of the Tennessee State Federation of Women's Clubs and very active in the club life of Knoxville and Tennessee, are planning now to come to Atlanta within a short time to talk matters over with Atlanta women. Just when Mrs. VanDeventer and Mrs. Denney will come or where the meeting will be held has not been decided.

The fact that Atlanta business men are showing a keener interest in the exposition—which is one designed to benefit the entire South—than they have heretofore, and the chances that Atlanta will be well represented at the exposition, is counted upon to assist the women.

The woman's department has planned its work along broad lines. The stereotyped exhibits that always have been a part of women's departments in other expositions will have no place in the Woman's Building at Knoxville. The idea behind the National Conservation Exposition is one of conservation, and these women have figured it out that there is probably nothing that needs conserving more than the energies and the health of women all over this broad land.

So that is what the exhibits in the woman's department will typify to a very large extent. Of course, the things that have a peculiar interest and attraction to women will not be overlooked.

ARTIFICIAL RAIN INSTALLED ON ATLANTA FARM

Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown Protect Crops With Pipe System.

"These dry nights, when my crops are burning up, I can smell that artificial rain a mile off," said a farmer in the suburbs of Atlanta.

The "artificial rain" of which he spoke is produced on three "fancy" farms within a short distance of Five Points, and, according to the unanimous verdict of Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown, who own "everhead irrigation" plants, it means salvation in dry years.

Stories are told of the wonderful crops these farmers grow—two yields of Irish potatoes a year, for instance, from 200 to 300 bushels an acre—six cuttings of alfalfa, crops of beans when the market is bare and beans are worth $2 a bushel.

Yet the system is simple enough.

Pipes Supply Rain.

On posts eight feet high rest pipes about two inches in diameter. These pipes run the whole length of the fields, and the lines of pipe are twenty feet apart. About two feet apart in the pipes are tiny holes. A gasoline engine, a pump which it operates, an abundant supply of water, and the thing is done.

Six hours each evening, when there is no rain, the pump is run and fine streams of water spurt from the holes in the pipes. At high pressure, these streams are thrown almost from one line of pipe to the next. Handles at convenient intervals make it possible to turn the pipes so that the streams are deflected in any direction and the ground thoroughly soaked with the spray.

This system excels ditch irrigation for Georgia soil for the reason that Georgia clay does not soak up water from a ditch in sufficient quantities. Besides, the soil cakes when water is applied in this way. "Artificial rain," however, coming down like a mist, permeates the whole soil and brings results.

Of course, an overhead pipe system is expensive. The cost is estimated at $250 per acre. This might be reduced somewhat if the farmer performed all the labor himself, or it might easily cost more if conditions were not entirely favorable. The increased yield, however, more than overbalances this initial outlay.

Loring Brown tells of getting an $1,100 crop of Irish potatoes from an acre, under his pipe system. In reality, there were two crops, a spring planting and a fall planting, and the potatoes brought a high price because they were sold for seed.

Fail to Realize Work.

"I have only one objection to seeing Belmont farm described in the newspapers," said Mr. Brown, as he sat in a swing on his front gallery and sorted a thick packet of letters. "My objection is that people read of big yields and good profits, then are anxious to try the same methods. They want to spend a lot of money to emulate Belmont, and fail to take account of the hard work that must go with it.

"A farmer, whether he has a fancy farm or one of the old-fashioned kind, must work eighteen hours a day. He must be on the job 365 days a year. That is what many people forget.

Five years ago, drouth killed the entire crop of potatoes on Belmont. Mr. Brown estimates that dry season cost him $3,000. That winter he went to Greeley, Colo., where overhead irrigation is in use, to see if he could work out a solution of the problem—some sort of insurance against drouth. The pipe lines were the answer. Farms around Atlanta can not grow the same yields produced around Greeley, but the difference in price caused by being closer to a good market overcomes the lesser yield, and more.

Zimmer Installs System.

Mr. Zimmer, on his Kimballville Farm, installed an identical system, though on a smaller scale, and since he installed it, never has had occasion to use it. By some streak of fate, his farm has been blessed with abundant rains.

But rain is freakish in choosing its itinerary. In Atlanta itself and out as far as the Chattahoochee River rains have been sufficient this year. But beyond the river there is serious drouth. Crops are drying up. Irrigation would have been the salvation of the farmers.

And as they sit in front of their homes at night, they can smell the sweet odor of refreshed fields at Belmont—"that darn artificial rain."

WIVES CREDITED WITH KEEPING HUSBANDS ALIVE

Medical Association Finds That Benedict's Regular Existence Is Better Than Bachelor's.

Supervision by wives as a possible reason for the greater longevity of married men than of bachelors is discussed by The Journal of the American Medical Association in its editorial section of the recently published statistics on this point. There is no remark on the statistics of more suicides among married men than bachelors.

The Journal has further information indicating that careful as the married men may be, with restraint once removed through the death or divorce of the wife, widowers and grass widowers leap into indiscretions and are lopped off more rapidly than either those still in the state or those who escaped matrimony.

Live Regular Lives.

"Undoubtedly the low death rate among married men is partly due to the fact that, as a rule, those who are in good health, are readier to marry, while those with more delicate health, especially if suffering from any definite ailment, are not willing to assume the burden and responsibility of a family," says The Journal. "Another factor is that married men live much more regular lives as a rule, and consequently avoid many of the dangers of irregular living.

"This view would seem to be corroborated by the statistics as to the mortality among married men who have lost their wives either by death or divorce. The death rate among these "unmarried men" is considerably higher than that of husbands of the same age, and even as a rule it is higher than that of the bachelors of the same age.

Widowers Die Fast.

"The death rate, for instance, of widowers and divorced men between 20 and 30 is nearly double that of single men. From 30 to 40 it is only 14.1 to 12.9, while from 40 to 50 the mortality of divorced and widowers is slightly less than that of single men of the same age. From 50 to 60, however, it is slightly higher once more.

"At all these ages the mortality rate among widowers and the divorced is at least nearly and sometimes double that of married men of the same age."

Feeds Her Pet Pig With a Silver Spoon

Denver Society Woman Provides Bed of Down and Linen for Her Porcine Possession.

DENVER, July 19.—Mrs. Whitney Newton, a Denver society matron, has a new pet.

Young Robert Newton came home a few evenings ago and brought a baby pig with him.

Mrs. Newton took the squirming animal into her arms and tried to make it comfortable, but without success. Finally, in desperation, she went to the linen closet, took out a fine piece of hemstitched linen, embroidered with blue flowers, wrapped it gently about the slick little pig, then laid him cautiously upon the downy pillows beside her own.

Piggy gave a satisfied little squeak, doubled up his feet and went off to sleep happily.

This cunning act won Mrs. Newton's heart, and from exasperation she developed a positive liking for her pet. His white skin is washed, combed and perfumed and he sleeps in a downy bed every night beside his mistress. He also eats from a silver spoon.

EXPRESS CLAIM OFFICES TO BE CONSOLIDATED

Savannah To Be Headquarters of Florida, Georgia and Southeastern Divisions of Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Consolidated claim offices of three divisions of the Southern Express Company will be located in Savannah after August 1, in pursuance of an order promulgated from the general headquarters of the concern several days ago, official notice of which has just been received here. Simultaneously general claim offices will be opened in Richmond and Chattanooga.

Claim departments distinct and separate from the other branches of the company's business, will be an entirely new thing with this big corporation. W. K. Weaver, of Savannah, chief clerk in the office of Division Superintendent C. C. Wolfe, will be in charge of the consolidated claims office here.

Heretofore it has been the practice of the company to have small claims departments in the offices of each division superintendent, and with him as the chief claim agent.

The offices in Savannah will bring about the consolidation of the claims department of the Florida, the Georgia and the Southeastern divisions of the company. The headquarters of the Florida division have been in Jacksonville, while those of the Southeastern division have been in Atlanta. The Georgia division headquarters have always been in Savannah.

The consolidation will bring 42 new employees of the company to this city. About 25 of these will come from Atlanta, while the others will be transferred from Jacksonville.

The establishment of the claim office at Richmond will embrace the offices now at Wilmington, N. C.; Charlotte and Norfolk. The Chattanooga office will embrace all of the Western division of the company.

Witnesses testified to alleged misconduct of Mrs. Jones during the absences of her husband, who is an engineer on the Tybee Branch of the Central of Georgia Railroad and obliged to spend a portion of his time in the city. Savannah Volunteer Guards and Georgia Hussars Must Vote to Give Land for Purpose.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Whether the Park Extension will be converted into a model playground and athletic park has not been finally determined. The Savannah Volunteer Guards and the Georgia Hussars, the two military organizations which have not yet given their consent and approval to the plan, have not taken action in regard to the matter.

No special meeting of the Hussars has been held, owing to the absence from the city of Captain Frank P. McIntyre. The Guards have discussed the matter, but owing to the fact that no definite proposition has been put up to them, they have neither approved nor disapproved the plan.

The extension is under the control of the military and the city jointly, and has been set aside as a drill ground.

Savannah to Ask Civil Service Law

Police and Fire Departments To Be Put Under Regulations—Efficiency Tests Are Planned.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Alderman George B. Elton's civil service bill will be introduced in the Legislature during the present session.

The special committee appointed by the Mayor to investigate the civil service regulations in other cities has completed its work and recommended the introduction of the bill at the present session. The measure will be immediately advertised for the specified period.

If the bill passes, the Mayor will be authorized to appoint a special committee of three, to be known as the Civil Service Commisson, this commission to have entire charge of the administration of the civil service law in the city. The bill provides that the police and fire departments be placed under civil service, the idea being to divorce these departments from politics.

The bill provides for efficiency tests for the members of the police and fire departments. The selection of appointees will be governed by their moral, mental and physical fitness, and their tenure of office will not depend on the vagaries of politics. They would not be subject to removal unless it were proved that they had been guilty of misconduct or that they were otherwise unfit for their positions.

Whether the bill will pass the Legislature is a question. Its passage will be determined largely by the attitude of the Chatham County Representatives toward it. If a majority of the legislators from this county agree it is a good measure, it probably will go through, but if there is a difference of opinion among the legislators, its defeat is pretty well assured.

LIARS' CONTEST ENDS IN TIE, ANOTHER IS TO BE HELD

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Because three well-known citizens tied for first place in the liars' convention just held in Waycross, it has been decided to hold a second convention to break the tie. The Moose Club is responsible for the inauguration of the novel convention and has decided to present an additional prize to the winner in the next.

City Officials Will Take Turn as Mayor

Savannah Executive Now Plans Regular Daily Period for Conferring With City Employees.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Hereafter city officials will be shown no favoritism when they call on Mayor Richard J. Davant on city business. They will have to take their chances along with everybody else. If one of the humblest citizens happens to get into the Mayor's reception room first the city official will have to wait his turn.

Mayor Davant has given his secretary instructions to this effect, and they will have to stand until a system of office hours which the Mayor has in mind can be put into effect.

It is the Mayor's plan to set aside a certain hour each day for interviews with city officials on city business. This hour will be made known to the people, and callers other than city officials will not be allowed to see the Mayor during that period. Another hour—or two, if necessary—will be set aside for the public.

At present there is no system of this sort at the City Hall, and the callers see the Mayor whenever their time comes. Heretofore city officials have been given precedence over all others irrespective of the time they arrived or how many people are ahead of them.

It has been the case that a city official was admitted to the Mayor the moment he arrived at the office, no matter if a dozen or so people had been waiting for some time for an interview.

JURY BELIEVES BULLARD TO BE SPAIN'S SLAYER

Investigation of Death of Eccentric and Wealthy Farmer Ends in Coroner's Verdict.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—The Clinch County Coroner's Jury investigating the mysterious murder of Mack Spain, an eccentric and wealthy farmer, has returned a verdict accusing Tom Bullard, a white man just entering the twenties.

Bullard is the man who found Spain's body, or rather informed searchers of the place where the body could be found. His part in the search for the body is one thing that has turned suspicion to him, as it is alleged he told members of the searching party Spain's body was on the edge of a pond and could be seen easily. When found the body was in a location that made it impossible for any one to see it from the place Bullard said he was when he first discovered the farmer's remains.

At least one more white man, and officers are inclined to believe a third, may become implicated. Bullard has steadfastly refused to make any statement beyond saying that he knows nothing of how Spain was killed.

Another arrest may be made within a few days. Both men suspected of knowing something of the death and the robbery have been found and it is declared will not be able to get away. Sheriff Lee, of Clinch, has been in Waycross working on a clew that he found near Spain's home and this, it is said, will fix the responsibility for the murder beyond any doubt. No one has been able to ascertain how much was taken from Spain, nor where it was put. Bullard has told officers nothing that will aid them in this respect.

MOULTRIE, July 19.—R. B. Vick has a unique plan for defeating the evil intentions of chicken thieves, his once flourishing flock having fallen into their hands until now he has but one lone hen.

Vick is going to lay the cornerstone of a granite chicken coop in a few days. He hopes in this manner to foil marauders. He has posted at his front gate an invitation to all chicken thieves to be present at the ceremony and inspect the plans.

Every door and window will be double locked and barred and rigged with wires in such way that if one is touched an alarm will be sounded.

Zanaida was courted by many of the young braves. She fell in love with the handsomest man and the day was set for the ceremony. Elk Tooth suddenly deserted her for another girl of the tribe, and, heartbroken, Zanaida sought surcease in death.

FARM UNION TO UNITE FORCES WITH TOILERS

Federation of Labor and Agricultural Organization to Co-operate Closely if Plans Mature.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Plans that are expected to aid the proposed consolidation of work of the American Federation of Labor and the Farmers' Union were discussed at length in Waycross to-day when a joint committee representing the trade unionists and the Ware County Farmers' Union held a conference.

S. B. Marks, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, and Robert Fechner, secretary, attended, as did President James Cowart, of the Ware County Farmers' Union.

It is not proposed that the National Farmers' Union and the American Federation of Labor shall affiliate and become one big organization. The movement seeks only a unity of purpose—close co-operation for mutual welfare.

Following the conference it was announced that a joint meeting of the State executive committees of the Farmers' Union and the Georgia Federation of Labor would be called. When this is done it is expected that the national organizations will adopt a similar plan for use in the entire country.

Worth $250,000 Now, Still 'Bucks' Wood

E. G. Kastenhuber's Only New Plans Are to Widen Scope of His Laboratory Work.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Finding himself in possession of cash and property worth a quarter of a million dollars has not caused Edwin G. Kastenhuber to change his way of living. If anything, he is working harder now than before. He can be found any morning just at daylight out in his backyard cutting wood. That's his first morning work at home and he refers to it as his "exercise."

Plans for more extensive laboratory work have been made by Mr. Kastenhuber and with the means at hand to carry them out, he expects in a short while to demonstrate some valuable formulae. One of his successes is a mixture of ordinary South Georgia sand with chemicals, forming a hard tile, colored in any way desired. Fancy bricks made by him have withstood all kinds of tests.

Discussing the new turn of events, Mr. Kastenhuber says he does not feel any different since getting $250,000.

"In my new laboratory I will have fitted up special quarters for students and will have a department open to the medical profession. The best time I can have is when I am working, and I am certainly not going to start loafing just because I am well fixed," he said.

Storm Does Damage In Moultrie Section

Naval Stores Operators and Farmers Suffer Loss From Wind, Rain and Hail.

MOULTRIE, July 19.—The terrific wind and electrical storm that swept over this section last night wrought considerable damage over a wide area.

At Omega, just north of here, several houses were unroofed, while three were blown to the ground, the inmates escaping death in a miraculous manner. Pine trees boxed for turpentine snapped in two and the loss to naval stores operators will amount to hundreds of dollars. In the eastern part of the county a torrential rain, accompanied by hail, devastated crops. In Moultrie lightning struck one house. The high wind blew over a church in the suburbs.

Girl Bride Sees Husband Convicted

R. L. English Is Found Guilty of Stealing Wire from Savannah Electric Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—With his pretty wife, not yet out of her teens, sitting in the courtroom, R. L. English has been tried and convicted in the City Court of the larceny of copper wire from the Savannah Electric Company. Mrs. English, hardly more than a girl, clad in a pink summer dress and wearing a big leghorn hat with a wreath of red roses, sat calmly through the trying ordeal. Mrs. English maintains that her husband is innocent of any intentional wrongdoing.

Indian Papoose Is Raised by Soldiers

Full-Blooded Modoc, Back at Old Home, Tells Romantic Story of Early Life.

KLAMATH FALLS, July 19.—Kit Carson, a full-blood Modoc, visited his native land a few days ago for the first time since his babyhood.

The story of the life of Carson is unique. In 1852 a detachment of Government troops was sent to the Klamath country to quiet reported uprisings among the Indians. A large band of Indians had established a village on the shore of the lake. When the Indians caught sight of the soldiers they made a hasty departure.

Kit Carson, who was then about a year old, was left behind by his frightened mother. It was difficult for the soldiers to determine what to do with the child. Finally a soldier named Woods asked that he be permitted to adopt the boy. He gave the little fellow the name of Kit Carson and found him a temporary home with a Spanish family at Yreka.

Police of Waycross For 'Slashed Skirt'

Men, Not Women, To Be Arrested if Latest Style Causes Too Much Excitement.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Wearers of the new style "slashed skirt" have nothing to fear in Waycross. The police will not arrest wearers of the new skirt, but will see that men do not let their curiosity make them obnoxious.

The first time a slashed skirt was seen here the wearer paraded up and down one of the city's main business streets and as long as she was on the street there was an unusual number of men found "strolling"—none of the strollers getting very far from the skirt. It is said that a number of women here have purchased the slashed skirts and after trying them on at home, have sewn up most of the slash or worn the skirt with a petticoat.

ST. SIMONS, July 19.—Sunday will be a day of rest for the Second Georgia Regiment, and the men will be given a chance to get acquainted with the historic island. There will be nothing to do until the big dress parade at 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

The first dress parade was held Saturday afternoon. The regimental dance was given on Saturday night, the Second Regiment Band furnishing the music. The boys turned out in force with their brass buttons, to the delight of the girls on the island. So far this has been the big event of the encampment. On Saturday the officer of the day was W. G. Fage, and officer of guard, J. J. West, both of Albany.

Dixon expressed gratification when the announcement was made that the club would not make an indorsement.

MELON SEASON OVER, BUYERS SEEN NO MORE

Jovial Solicitors Depart, Leaving Behind Much Cash—Larger Acreage for 1914 Certain.

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—The finish of the watermelon season in South Georgia is at hand and the face of the ubiquitous melon buyer will be seen no more in the land until another year rolls around.

These buyers are a jolly set and soon make themselves part of the life of a town, knowing everybody by name, rooting vociferously for the home ball team and becoming generally popular while sandwiching in a lot of business for their respective roads or houses.

The farmer who decided not to plant watermelons for shipment this year is regretful now, as the season has been the finest in years and the prices have kept up well through the whole season.

Charlie Aldag, of Pidcock, reports eight carloads shipped from five and a half acres of land, and there are others coming very nearly up to it. A number of farmers received as high as from $200 to $225 on special carloads. The results of the present season mean the biggest acreage in watermelons next year that has ever been known here.

Columbus Attaches Tardy Taxpayers

Residents Who Are Well-to-Do Refuse to Send Checks for Paving Assessments.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Following the instructions of Mayor Chappell, Marshal George J. Burrus, has issued attachments against a large number of Columbus property owners, because of failure to pay paving assessments.

The city has paving accounts amounting to more than $27,000. Many who are amply able to pay for some reason have refused.

CORDELE SWELTERS WHEN TEMPERATURE GOES TO 110

CORDELE, July 19.—Yesterday went on record as probably being the hottest day that has ever been felt in Cordele. The thermometer registered 105 in the shade and in the sun it reached 110 degrees. There was no wind stirring through most of the day, which caused the heat to reach an almost unbearable degree. When a breeze did stir the heat waves were so intense that they were almost scorching in their effect.

TWO-SESSION SCHOOL PLAN TO STICK AT THOMASVILLE

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—To stick to two sessions a day in the public schools here for at least another term was the decision of the Thomasville Board of Education at its meeting this week. A petition signed by several hundred of the patrons of the school was presented asking that it restore the old one-session rule, but, after considering the matter, the majority of the board voted to let the present rule continue.

A. P. A. HOLDS SECRET MEETING AT CORDELE

CORDELE, July 19.—A meeting of the members of the American Protective Association of Cordele was held last night, at which time it is thought that permanent organization was effected. However, as the political body held the meeting behind closed doors, none of the details acted upon by the gathering became definitely known outside of the members.

NEGRO AT THOMASVILLE COMMITTED SUICIDE

THOMASVILLE, July 19—With a pistol in his hand, his thumb on the trigger and a bullet hole in the center of his forehead, Jack Lofton, a negro section hand on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, was found dead locked in his house. It is an unusual thing for a negro to commit suicide. This is the second case known here among the members of that race.

BOSTON, July 19.—A traveling water cart from which horses may be refreshed has been placed in commission in Boston's streets by the S. P. C. A.

For years the society has been furnishing water from hydrant stations, but recently there have been many requests for a watering place in sections of the city where it would be impractical to open hydrants. Hence the advent of the water cart.

Court Orders Sale Of Property Halted

Fourth National of Columbus Gets Injunction to Prevent Debtor Transferring Holdings.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Judge Z. A. Littlejohn, of Americus, who heard the argument in the petition of the Fourth National Bank of this city, against Leo Lowenherz and H. M. Mooty, in which the bank was seeking to enjoin them from disposing of property made over by Mooty to Lowenherz, has handed down his decision, in which he enjoins Lowenherz from disposing of the property without first giving bond to the amount of the sale of the property, until after a final settlement of the case in the courts.

There is $13,000 involved, over which Mooty transferred to Lowenherz last February in settlement of a claim the latter held against the former. At the time the property transfer was made Mooty owed the bank something like $1,500 and had no other property on which the bank could obtain its money. Lowenherz is president of one of the largest dry goods establishments in West Georgia and Mooty is his former bookkeeper.

OLD COLUMBUS STANDPIPE NOW IS BEING DESTROYED

COLUMBUS, July 19.—An old Columbus landmark is passing away with the removal of the standpipe on Upper Broad street, which was erected during the year 1888, when Cliff B. Grimes was Mayor.

The standpipe when torn down will be rebuilt on Wynn's Hill, which is one of the highest points about the city and the Columbus Water Supply Company will extend its mains from North Highlands, where a new settling basin will be built to the standpipe, a distance of three miles.

Newsome, who alleges that on February 22 he was permanently injured, when a car of the defendant company struck a negro's horse and knocked it against him. The negro, whose horse was struck by the car, does not figure in the suit, as he has never filed any claim against the street railway company and his name is not known.

COLUMBUS INVESTIGATING DROWNING IN RESERVOIR

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The city of Columbus has started an investigation of the report that a man named Hamilton, who was recently reported drowned in Holland Creek, was really drowned in the reservoir from which Columbus gets a part of its water supply. In fact it is acknowledged that the man was really drowned in the reservoir, but that he was gotten out before the water was contaminated.

Power Company May Use Tallulah 'Juice'

Incorporators of Columbus Concern Silent and Rumor Is Busy as to Their Aims.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Edward W. Swift, J. P. Illges, J. P. Kyle, Clifford J. Swift, John T. Davis, Jr., J. P. Golden, T. E. Golden, O. C. Bulloch, E. J. Rankin, John A. Rankin, E. P. Dismukes and Harry L. Williams have filed a petition for a charter for the Muscogee Light and Power Company.

The capital stock will be $50,000 paid in, but the incorporators ask for the privilege of increasing its capital to $1,000,000 by a majority vote from time to time. Much speculation is rife as to the intentions of promoters, but they refuse to talk.

It is the opinion of many that they propose to establish a power company in this city and take their current from the Georgia Power Company's plant at Tallulah Falls. The proposed company announces its intention of furnishing current for lighting, heating, operating electric cars and to conduct a business similar to other corporations of like character.

Woman Sues to Save Parrot From Cursing

Tells Court That Bird Is Under Baneful Influences Now as Property of Saloon Man.

ALTON, ILL., July 19.—Mrs. Geneva Littlehage has applied to Justice Daniel Gorman for a replevin writ to obtain possession of a parrot to save him from the baneful influences of a saloon.

"The bird never swore once in his life, and I can't bear the thought of his learning to curse," she told the Justice. "You ought to help along the cause by not charging me anything for the papers."

Mrs. Littlehage said while coming from Kansas City to Alton she employed a porter to carry the cage. She said he ran off with the parrot and when she next heard of it the bird had been sold to a saloon man for $10. The proprietor of the saloon refused, it is said, to give it to the owner.

Concrete Patch Put On River's Bottom

Engineers Employ Novel Method of Keeping Texas Stream From Habit of Losing Itself.

MARTINDALE, TEXAS, July 19.—It has been found necessary to put another patch on the bed of the Blanco River. This stream has a remarkable way of losing itself, and in order to restore it to its surface channel a concrete patch has been placed upon the holes through which it disappears.

For many years it has been emptying portions of its flow into small holes in its bed, but it was not until about a year ago that the entire bottom, so to speak, dropped out at a point near San Marcos. In one night the river below that point went dry. It had had a width of nearly 200 feet and was flowing a strong current until the sudden disappearance of the water.

PLAN BIG FETE WHEN CANAL IS READY FOR USE

Flotilla to Make Trip From Columbus Down Chattahoochee to St. Andrew's Bay.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—For the purpose of celebrating the opening of the St. Andrews Bay Canal in an appropriate manner next fall, the Columbus Board of Trade will take steps at once to memorialize Congress to assist. The Navy Department will be asked to send warships to St. Andrews Bay, and men of national fame will be invited to make addresses at the various points along the river and canal where stops are made.

The plan is to begin at Columbus and have a flotilla travel down the Chattahoochee River, giving a whole week over to the ceremonies, which will be elaborate. South Georgia, South Alabama and West Florida are much interested in the scheme.

It is expected that there will be several hundred persons who will make the trip down the river to St. Andrews Bay.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Leonard Mordaunt, ex-convict, scion of a noble English family, and better known in the role of a prison-reform worker, was ordained to the ministry of the Free Methodist Church by Bishops Jones and Sellew at the close of the annual conference which has been going on in the secluded aisles of Mineral Park.

During twenty years he has ranged from the welcome member of exclusive circles of European society to the lowest grade of convict. He became a convert and decided to dedicate the remaining years of his existence to the service of God and humanity.

ST. PAUL, July 19.—Fifty elk from the Yellowstone National Park, if they can be obtained, will be turned loose in Minnesota in the Superior forest and game reserve, which lies along the Canadian boundary line north of Lake Superior.

The territory is the natural home of the elk, and together with the adjoining national reserve covers more than 1,000,000 acres. There are no elk in either reserve now. It is estimated that the annual increase in the herd will be 50 per cent. This is the increase noted in the Yellowstone Park.

Bold Amazon Shoves Auto Out of Her Way

Worcester, Mass., Woman Merely Bruises Her Finger When She Pushes Car from Path.

WORCESTER, MASS., July 19.—Agnes Olsen, 30, known far and wide as "the Amazon," is none the worse today, save for a sore finger, as a result of her stopping a touring car on Main street, and pushing it back out of her way. The machine was unharmed.

Walter Shea, chauffeur of the touring car, was startled to see a woman walk in front of the machine as he was passing City Hall. His horror turned to amazement when she turned as he ground on his brakes, calmly grasped the car by the hood, and not only stopped its menacing approach, but pushed it back a foot.

The attention of Attorney General Carmody has been called to the fact that circulars are being issued by some health resorts in the State, in which is the announcement that the places are not open to certain races.

In a statement to-day Mr. Carmody reviews the statute and declares that such notices will be prohibited.

Lathrop, head of the National Children's Bureau, has returned to the home of her birth and childhood to espouse the cause of the nation's babies and to appeal to the executives of Illinois cities to join in the movement of a broadening municipal protection for child growth.

Bridge Burns; Stops Traffic on A., B. & A.

Alapaha River Crossing Destroyed by Fire—Sparks From Locomotive Blamed for Blaze.

CORDELE, July 19.—The Alapaha River bridge on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlanta Railway, two miles south of Rebecca, was destroyed by fire yesterday about noon, temporarily putting at a standstill all freight traffic over the road between Cordele and Fitzgerald. It is thought that the fire caught from sparks from the engine of a northbound passenger train.

Until the bridge can be rebuilt, which will probably require a week, all passenger trains will be detoured between Cordele and Tifton over the Georgia Southern and Florida Railroad, and between Fitzgerald and Tifton over the Thomasville branch of the A., B. & A. road. Perishable freight also will be routed over these roads.

Hot Weather Causes Sabbath-Breaking

Ice Company Sets Aside Old Rule and Decides to Deliver to Customrs on Sunday.

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—The heat wave of the past week proved too much for the Sabbath-keeping rules of the Thomasville Ice Company and it has decided to go back to delivering ice to customers on that day.

For a year or two past no ice was delivered on Sunday anywhere in the city and those who wanted an extra quantity over the supply laid in on Saturday had to go or send to the factory for it. Many complaints have been sent in of late that the expense of buying a large quantity on Saturday to last over Sunday was too much for the ordinary citizen.

Wasp Sting Enables Cripple to Walk

Regains Use of Legs After 38 Years on Crutches When Insect Invades Bed.

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—Charles Wightman, deputy county clerk at Clayton, told a reporter how he had just been able to walk without crutches for the first time in 38 of the 42 years of his life. He fell when he was 4 and injured both legs permanently.

He said that a neighbor had told him a snake story just before he went to bed.

He thought how comfortable it was to live in a country where one could sleep in peace instead of in one of those countries where he had heard snakes sometimes creep in and share one's bed.

He thrust his right leg deeper under the covers. Then something that stung like a hot needle pierced his ankle. "I sprang out of bed and ran and stumbled twelve feet across the room," he said. "It was the first time I had taken so many steps unassisted since I was a baby."

"And was it really a snake?" he was asked. "No; it was a wasp." And he showed the ankle where the sting had swollen it.

Pawns Gold Teeth He Didn't Chew With

Kansan Says He Could Masticate on Other Side and Oakes Crowns to Loan Agent.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—"I don't need these teeth to chew with and they're loose, anyway," an old man said at the municipal pawnshop, pulling seven gold crowns out of his mouth and laying them on the counter.

"These teeth are just a losing investment as long as I do all my chewing on the other side, anyway. I might as well be getting something on them. Can you make me a loan?"

Ralph Perry, manager of the pawnshop, gave the man $1.75 on his gold bicuspids and molars.

"When the ones on the other side get loose, I'll be back after these," the man promised. "My dentist said there was gold enough in the bunch so he could trade me a set of false teeth for 'em as soon as the crowns all wore out and got loose."

Wagons Must Have Lights at Both Ends

Washington State Will Enforce Strict Vehicle Law—All Classes Affected.

SEATTLE, July 19.—On and after August 1 every vehicle in this State must be provided with both rear and front lights in case night travel is necessary. Automobiles, wagons, buggies and cycles must carry lights so that travelers in front or behind may see.

Farmers as well as city residents are affected, and the old familiar farm wagon will be altered by a lantern hung from the rear axle and a spotlight fastened to the spring seat. The law was necessary because of the increasing traffic at night through sections where roads are narrow and grades dangerous.

500 FARMERS AT COLLEGE TO HEAR SOIL LECTURE

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., July 19.—Kankakee farmers, 500 strong, visited the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois. Professor J. C. Collier, "soil director" for the county, was in charge of the excursion, which came on a special train.

Dr. C. G. Hopkins lectured on soil and fertility, and afterward the university farm was inspected. Eighty women in the party inspected the domestic science department. Luncheon was served by "co-eds."

FIGHT ASSURED OVER LOCATION FOR HOSPITAL

Columbus Owns Two Lots—Others Offered at High Price. Present Site Undesirable.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Now that the hospital bond issue has been carried, and the city when it sells its $60,000 worth of bonds will be in a position to erect a first-class hospital, a fair-sized row is in sight over the location.

As usual, there are a number of sites offered, at prices above the average. The city owns one or two lots that are available in addition to the one where the present hospital stands.

The location of the present hospital is just about as uninviting as it would be possible to find, there being railroad yards, roundhouse and shops on the south, a sash and door plant on the east, railroad tracks on the west and a tombstone and marble works plant and a cemetery on the north.

Engineer Races His Train Past Flames

Row of Houses and 100-Cord Stack of Wood Beside Track Are Burned.

CORDELE, July 19.—Passengers on an Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic train had an exciting experience yesterday afternoon when the train came upon a fire very close to the tracks in the vicinity of Hatley, in which more than 100 cords of wood and several small houses were destroyed.

In order to pass the fire with safety, the engineer was obliged to open the throttle and put his engine to the fastest speed. All of the passengers went through the experience safely, though the heat from the fire was so intense that some of them were almost suffocated. The wood had been stacked alongside the track for shipment. How the fire originated was not learned.

Seaboard to Make Division at Cordele

All Developments Point to Plan for Increasing Importance of Crisp Metropolis.

CORDELE, July 19.—The Seaboard Air Line is considering establishing relay shops in Cordele, it seems, for the road has concluded to make this point the passenger terminal for the Savannah-Montgomery division.

Railroad men say they have seen orders to different passenger trainmen that two months after July 1 they would be required to take up their runs for both directions at this point. Another fact that seems to give backing to the report is that recent inquiries have been made by conductors and engineers, seeking to secure residences here. More than 50 new citizens would be brought to Cordele by the change. The present passenger terminal is at Americus.

EXPRESS AGENT AND CASH MISSING FROM WARWICK

CORDELE, July 19.—S. J. Smith, an employee of the Southern Express Company, acting as temporary agent at Warwick, between Cordele and Albany, on the Georgia Southwestern and Gulf Railway, during a vacation of the regular agent, disappeared last night, and, it is said, took all the funds on hand. It is reported that he came to Cordele, but officers here failed to locate him.

Brooks County Strip Would Be in Lowndes

Movement Started to Have Bill Introduced in Legislature to Have Transfer Made.

VALDOSTA, July 19.—A movement has been started here to transfer a strip of territory on the southern border of Brooks County to Lowndes County, and the Representatives in the Legislature will be asked to introduce a bill to that effect.

The territory affected lies along the Willacoochee River, remote from the county seat of Brooks County, and it is claimed that the people living in that section are anxious to be placed in Lowndes County.

The National Highway passes throug hthe stretch of territory, but it is understood that the County Commissioners of Brooks County have refused to maintain the highway or do any work whatever on it.

Business men in this city recently subscribed nearly $1,000 to be expended on the highway through the strip mentioned. Brooks County refused to do anything whatever toward building and maintaining the road.

D. A. R. SEEKS TO MOVE ASHES OF GOVERNOR

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The movement instituted by the D. A. R.'s in Columbus to bring the ashes of Former Governor John Clarke of Georgia from St. Andrews Bay, Fla., where they are buried, is well under way.

RAILROAD WILL FIGHT PAVING OF VALDOSTA LAND

Atlantic Coast Line Will Test Right of City to Assess It for Work.

VALDOSTA, July 19.—The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company today notified the Mayor and Council of Valdosta that it will not consent to the paving of Savannah avenue and requesting the city to have the brick which are piled along the avenue removed from its property.

The action of the road brings to a head the differences between the city and the road affecting the ownership of the thoroughfare.

It is understood that the city will pave the street and levy the assessments for the work as they are made against other property owners. The railroad is expected to begin legal action to prevent this, and the ownership of the property will be settled by the courts.

HARD THICK CRUST COVERED BOY'S HEAD

Cracked with Least Pressure, Causing Discharge. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In One Week Entirely Cured.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased one Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my baby of an ulcerated sore behind her ear and now we think we cannot keep house without them." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Poss, Nov. 5, 1912.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Human System Poisons Itself

OtherwiseMost of UsWould Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

GUARD YOUR HEALTH! NUXCARA!

Warm weather is dangerous. It will play havoc with your digestion. Your appetite will wane. You will not feel inclined to eat the proper, nourishing food. Irregular meals, imperfectly masticated, will ruin your digestion. Without good digestion life is worthless.

Take NUXCARA

3 Times a Day—

One-half hour before each meal. Then you can eat three nourishing meals each day without discomfort. Your appetite will respond to the improved condition of your digestive system. Your health will be assured.

Nuxcara is a guaranteed remedy for the treatment of the membranes of the stomach and intestines. It is not a digestive agent, but a certain and positive cure for indigestion and dyspepsia.

Prominent Citizen Indorses NUXCARA

Mr. J. W. Brooks, traveling representative of The Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, says: "For two years I have carried in my grip a bottle of Nuxcara, and would not think of going out on the road without it. I consider it the most wonderful discovery in medicine. The number of people who suffer with indigestion and dyspepsia, the terrible distress they suffer, no one knows but those who have had experience with it. When one remedy after another fails, when digestive agents seem to aggravate it. In the face of all this, Nuxcara cures in every case—truly it is a wonderful remedy."

ASK YOUR DRUGGIST

Nuxcara promotes the secretion of natural digestive fluids, restores and reduces the inflamed membranes. Proper assimilation is re-established. Nutrition is improved. Hence, Nuxcara increases vitality.

Hundreds of Atlantans testify as to its merits. The best physicians recommend it. An Atlanta druggist discovered it after years of scientific study.

Read this testimonial. Nuxcara will do the same for you, if you take it three times a day.

COLUMBUS MILL SCHOOL HELD AS MODEL BY U. S.

How Georgia City Is Caring for Cotton Factory Children Told in Government Pamphlet.

How Columbus is caring for the education of the boys and girls of its cotton mills is the story embodied in a pamphlet published by the United States Department of Education, copies of which were circulated in Atlanta yesterday.

How the boys and girls of the mills themselves work against going to school, rendering doubly hard the problem before the public, is a pitiful note of the story.

They call their school in Columbus the "dinner toters' school," because even during their school days they must work, taking hot lunches to their parents, brothers, sisters, and others who work in the mills.

Must Take Parents' Lunch.

The pamphlet tells of this custom, revealing something of the life of the cotton mill child. It says:

"The long intermission in the middle of the day is necessary that the children may take the lunches to the mills. Many of the mills are some distance from the school—some more than a mile away. Most of the children, therefore, walk more than two miles during the noon hour. Besides, they are compelled to wait 20 or 30 minutes for the operatives to eat their dinners before taking the baskets back.

"Some children earn several dollars each week by carrying such baskets to mill operatives. The price usually paid for taking lunch to one person for a week is 25 cents, and children often take lunches to several persons."

The booklet was prepared by Roland B. Daniel, and was published by the Department of Education as the description of an admirable system. It deals not only with the mill children, but with the boys and girls who are more fortunate, showing how the Columbus scheme of education is variable, being adapted to meet the demands that come with a mixed population so as to care alike for the two classes. P. P. Claxton, Federal Commissioner of Education, says in the foreword to the book:

"Columbus was one of the first of this country's cities to work out certain phases of this problem of adaptation."

The Columbus schools effect industrial training for all children, but a training varied according to the class from which the children come.

Call of Mills Strong.

The writer, Mr. Hill, laments the fact that "the call of the mills is strong."

"While the prescribed course for the mill children contemplates seven years, few continue after the fifth or sixth year," he wrote. "Not more than 1 per cent finish this school and pursue their studies further."

In all lines of work, academic and industrial, the aim of the school for mill operatives is to better living conditions a little among the people for whom it was organized. That is the only hope. In the beginning the advocates of this type of school thought that many of the mill children might be induced to continue in school and do more advanced work, especially along vocational lines. In this respect the school has been a disappointment to some.

"We are seldom able to induce pupils to finish even the limited course offered in this school," writes Mr. Daniel. "Our best hope is that we may better living conditions a little."

Toward the end, the school has been made a sort of social center. The school is in session the entire year around, and pupils are promoted quarterly, that the children will not drift away, as it is feared they would surely do in the case of a three months' vacation. Teachers do social work, visiting the sick, distributing certain charity, obtaining means of operation for the physically defective, arranging for social evenings, fostering organizations among the older people, and dealing in like activities.

Summing up the work of the school, the writer says:

"While this school has done good work and its benefits have been felt, we are sure the weakest point in it is not being able to hold the children long enough to receive its full benefits. An enforced attendance law would aid very materially in this respect."

Industrial Work Taught.

Along with "the three R's," the mill children are trained in industrial branches, being taught woodworking and gardening. The girls are given work in basket-making, sewing, cooking, poultry-raising and gardening.

In its scheme of adaptation, the city has an altogether different school for other children. The regular grade work is done, and in the traditional high school a year and a half of industrial work, manual training for the boys and domestic science for the girls, is given.

Another variation comes when the curriculum of the negro schools are worked out. There is industrial education for negroes in the public school, but different from that supplied the white children. The Columbus method is altogether one of adaptation.

The difference lies in the fact that the negroes receive more of the training, going into more branches of manual labor, and taking it throughout the school course. Almost every branch of work with the hands is offered them. Of this work the booklet says:

"Pupils who remain in the schools long enough to complete the course receive in compensation for their labor upon leaving school about twice what they would receive for unskilled labor such as they would be able to render without such training. It is often the case that one of these boys is able to earn $2 a day at the age of 17 when his father, without such preparation, receives $1.25 for unskilled labor.

High School in Scheme.

The book, being altogether a treatise on industrial education in Columbus, is given over largely to a description of the courses in the Columbus Industrial High School, the pride of the city's scheme of education. The school, besides its academic work, has vocational courses, including home economics, dressmaking and millinery, mechanic arts, textile arts, and a business course.

This industrial high school is separate and distinct from the conventional academic high school. It is merely another phase of the Columbus scheme of adaptation of education to varied needs and to varied classes.

Pony Contestants in Home Stretch

Fine Progress Made in Last Days

Winners of Race Will Be Announced in Few Days After Battle Closes July 31.

Great progress has been made by the contestants who are striving for The Georgian and American ponies, as the standings published to-day demonstrate. Nearly all the contestants who are crowding toward the front have more than 100,000 votes, but in the ten days remaining these figures, in all probability, will be doubled and trebled.

This is in spite of the fact that the coupons have been discontinued. Gains from now on will represent simply subscriptions obtained. The contestants agree unanimously that this is perfectly fair. A coupon-clipping contest is no contest at all, except as it represents the ability to build up a system of collecting the slips from friends in the neighborhood. A subscription-getting contest, on the other hand, tests the mettle of every contestant to the full, and the best will win.

Will Announce Winners Soon.

Besides, by discontinuing the coupons, it will be possible to announce the winners in the contest probably August 3, three days after the contest closes, on the night of July 31.

If coupons still were being voted, it would take two weeks or more for all of them to come in, and knowledge of the result would be delayed that long.

The bonus offer, awarding 20,000, 12,500 and 6,000 votes for clubs of $35, $25 and $15, respectively, closed Saturday night, and with a large number of clubs turned in. It was a laggard contestant, indeed, who did not appear yesterday with at least a $35 club, and some of the most active had two and three clubs.

Even Chance in Country.

Contestants in the country, it is supposed, did as well, but subscriptions arriving in Monday's mails will be credited on the club offer for these out-of-town boys and girls. This is to give them an even chance with their city cousins.

Probably another small bonus will be offered for the closing weeks of the contest. It will be nothing like those which have been given so far—not nearly so attractive, but still worth winning.

Within a few days the thirteen additional ponies needed to make up the complete lot of twenty-two will be on hand. They are being collected now from the leading breeders of this sort of fancy stock and will be brought to Atlanta before the contest closes.

Maurice Means, of Meansville, is shown at the top, while below is Miss Helen Brantley, of No. 31 E. Alexander Street. Both are way up in the race for the prize Shetlands.

Moving Picture Gives Mother Clew to Girl

Missing Daughter Is Recognized on Screen and Police Are Following Up Trace.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The "movies" may be instrumental in restoring Olga Ellis, 5, to the mother from whom she was taken in Revere, Mass., and brought to California.

For six months the police have sought John Ellis, of Revere, Mass., who is said to have left that city with his daughter.

A school-teacher of Berkeley, Cal., became interested in the case and gave a picture of the child and the mother's address to a moving picture agency.

Mrs. Myrtle Palmer, housekeeper in a hotel here, saw the mother's appeal at a moving picture theater recently and recognized the little girl as one who had stayed at the hotel with her father for several weeks. He had registered, she said, as D. Delisle, and had gone to Eureka, Cal.

Mrs. Palmer notified the police and search for the man and child has been instituted in Eureka.

Women Convict Her For Slapping Child

First Feminine Jury in Sonoma County, California, Returns Verdict of Guilty of Assault.

PETALUMA, COLO., July 19.—A jury of twelve women convicted a woman, Mrs. W. S. Waldorf, upon a charge of battery here to-day. This is the first jury of women that ever tried a case in Sonoma County. Mrs. Waldorf was accused of having slapped a neighbor's children. The jury was out less than an hour.

HORSE FALLS IN FISSURE IN SINKING KANSAS FARM

HOISINGTON, KANS., July 19.—Fissures varying from a few inches to a foot and a half in width and extending several feet into the ground have opened up in L. E. Baker's alfalfa field near this city and are causing a great deal of speculation.

There have been no indications of an earthquake of any sort, but the ground seems to be sinking away. The fissures were discovered when Baker missed one of his horses and found it imprisoned in a fissure.

Squaws Lay Ties As Bucks Play Poker

Desert Section Hand Boss Returns to Find Piute Women Doing Construction Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Piute Indians as substitutes for Mexican section hands were tried out in the Nevada desert last week. The Mexicans were deemed unsatisfactory because they would drop their tools and rest the instant the "boss" got far enough away so that he could not hit them with a shovel handle.

With the Indians on the job, however, the work went along just the same, boss or no boss.

Nevertheless the Mexicans are again on the pay roll and the Indians are taking their traditional ease.

After glowingly watching five days of splendid work by his Piute bucks the section boss left them the other day. Returning 24 hours later he found the suffragette members of the Piute tribe doing the work on the railroad, while the bucks were gathered in a poker game at one side of the track.

Tight Shoes Land Thief Behind Bars

Burglar in Jewelry Store Kicks Heels to Relieve Pressure and Alarms Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Frank Davies, who at times also gives his name as John Simpson and Joe Allen, became irritated last night while scooping unset diamonds in his hat in a dark room because the toes of his new shoes were too narrow.

Intending to relieve the squeeze, he kicked toward the floor with his heel, but miscalculated and drove his foot through a glass show case. A policeman in a saloon on the floor below heard the noise and arrested Davies, who says he is an ex-convict and that he arrived here from Los Angeles at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The diamonds were claimed to-day by the jewelers from whom they were taken.

Must Stay Maids to Get Mother's Estate

Daughters of Ohio Woman Are Beneficiaries Under Will Which Prohibits Their Marriage.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, July 19. One of the most remarkable wills ever admitted to probate in this county was made by Jane Lake, late of Richwood, who left considerable property to her three daughters, Linie, Nora and Ida.

The provisions are that the estate shall be equally divided among the three daughters, on the condition that none of them will marry. If one of them marries, her share of the estate goes to the two remaining single. If all three should marry, the entire estate is to go to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ONLY AMERICAN KING YEARNS TO QUIT HIS THRONE

All of Former Broker's Thirty Wives Want English Gowns. Jealousy Spreads.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King, practically has made up his mind to renounce his throne. He is King of the Island of Arorae, one of the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands. Until 1909 he was a New York curb broker. The insistence of his many wives for English gowns and his loneliness have led to the determination to give up his kingly honors. He tells of his intentions in a letter just received by a friend in this city.

The career of Everett has been unusual. In 1909, when he was in business in this city, he was thought to be well to do. He met reverses, however, in Wall Street, and in the latter part of 1909 disappeared, without leaving a word of farewell. Nothing was heard from him until in 1911, in a remarkable letter, he told of being made the King of Arorae, in the South Sea Islands. He had landed, he said, on one of the small islands, and had gone from there to other islands of the Gilbert group. Finally he reached Arorae. It was a phonograph which he had in his possession that eventually won for him his throne. The King at that time of the island took a great fancy to the phonograph.

Phonograph Wins Kingdom.

By the hour Everett, according to his own account, entertained the monarch, constantly growing in his graces. Finally the old King adopted Everett, and when he died Everett succeeded to the throne. According to the custom of the island, Everett took a good many wives.

Everett took a very lively interest in the affairs of the island. He increased its business with traders. The principal product of the island is copra, or dried cocoanut meat. The letter, in part, reads:

"At the present time the King's job is about the last thing to be desired, and do not be surprised if I walk in on you some day in the near future. I am about tired of the job.

"For some time past conditions here have steadily become worse. It started when my wives, of whom there are about 30, insisted on wearing English dresses. A trader who stopped here presented one of the natives with three English gowns in exchange for some copra. The native presented them to the King, and I in turn gave them to three of my wives. The natives have never worn any clothes to speak of. Imagine my surprise, then, when the three dresses became the center of a regular war among my wives.

"The three victorious wives managed to get them on somehow, and that settled it. Every one of them set up a kick for a dress, and they worried the life out of me. I was forced to get the gowns. The first trader that stopped at the island from Australia was commissioned to bring them back on the next trip, and in due course of time they arrived.

Jealousy Over English Gowns.

"The dresses were of all colors and sizes. Most of the people here are about the same stature, few being over four feet six or seven. Some of the dresses were too small, others too large, but they created a sensation. Dressed in those creations, with bare brown feet stepping proudly, my wives paraded up and down the island, causing every woman in the kingdom, young and old, to grow jealous.

"So far, half of the female population have been given the gowns and the other half are waiting eagerly. The worst part of it all is that the men are as enthusiastic over this new style of dress as the women, and my objections have not added to my popularity whatever. I am daily expecting the men to demand suits of flannel and silk shirts.

Affairs on a Business Basis.

"I have not done so badly here financially. I put the business of the island on a business basis soon after becoming King, and things have flourished.

"I don't know how the people here will take my departure. They may even try to prevent it, and I have been considering the best method to leave. I could probably get aboard one of the trading ships and get to Australia, after which it would be easy, of course, to get back to the United States."

County of Warner

Should Be Created

Manchester, the Logical County Seat—County Will Have 10,000 Population; $1,750,000 Taxable Values; Area Over 222 Square Miles.

The people situated in the southeastern portion of Meriwether, northern portion of Talbot and northeastern portion of Harris Counties will petition the 1913 session of the Legislature to create a new county to be named Warner, in honor of the late Chief Justice Hiram Warner, the area of which will be 222 square miles, while the area of the old counties after the proposed county of Warner is created will not be materially reduced, but will leave them among the larger counties of Middle Georgia, and Meriwether will then contain 421 square miles; Harris, 465 square miles, and Talbot, 329 square miles. The territory to compose Warner County is inaccessible to either of the present county sites by railroads and in transacting legal business the citizens are required to go this distance by private conveyance over mountainous roads, which in rainy seasons are almost impassable; while a very large portion of the population has no means of conveyance and are forced to a great expense in reaching the present county sites.

Taxable Values of New County.

The proposed county of Warner will have taxable values of one and three-quarter million dollars. This will leave Meriwether taxable values of about twice the amount of Warner County; while Harris and Talbot, from which counties small values will be taken, will not be materially reduced, but have considerably more wealth than Warner and no incorporated town is to be taken from either Talbot or Harris and but a few miles of railroad.

The population of Warner County will be upward of 10,500, of which more than 2,000 live in Manchester, the proposed county seat. At least 5,000 of those living within the country territory closely adjoining Manchester have to travel 14 to 20 miles to their present respective county sites. Warner County would exceed in population 32 counties in the State.

Roads and Bridges.

Warner County as proposed will take from the three affected counties its proportion of roads and bridges as compared to its area and wealth, while the roads and bridges in this territory have received but little attention, as the taxes collected by the old counties have been spent on other roads and bridges nearer the present county sites, and other sections of the counties, since this territory occupies the "remote corners," consequently has had little influence in securing road improvements.

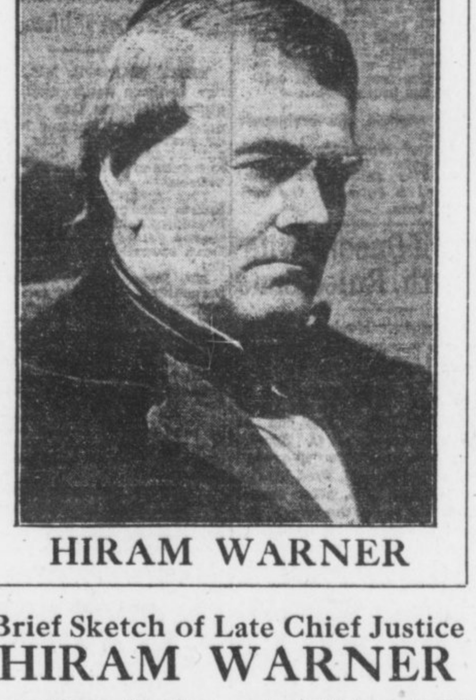
Warner County, as proposed will include Gill, Chalybeate, First, Raleigh, Bullochville and parts of the Third, Harris and lower Ninth Districts of Meriwether County; portions of Valley Plains District of Harris County and Flint Hill and parts of Pleasant Hill and Valley districts of Talbot County.

The distance from Manchester, the proposed county site of Warner County, to Greenville, the county site of Meriwether, over public roads is 18 miles; to Hamilton, the county site of Harris, 20 miles, and to Talbotton, the county site of Talbot, 20 miles. No citizen living in the proposed county would be required to travel farther than 12 miles to reach Manchester, the proposed county site.

Schedule of Trains.

No portion of Warner County at present is directly connected by rail with its respective county site. Those wishing to attend court by rail from Manchester and its vicinity must leave Manchester at 4 o'clock a. m., change at Durand and arrive in Greenville at 8 o'clock a. m., requiring a layover at Durand of about three hours. Returning, leave Greenville at 6 o'clock p. m., arriving at Manchester at 11:40 p. m., necessitating a layover at Durand of five hours, or about 20 hours to go a distance of 20 miles and return. This is the most convenient schedule.

The present counties are well provided with modern jails and courthouses.



HIRAM WARNER

Brief Sketch of Late Chief Justice HIRAM WARNER

Hiram Warner, for whom Warner County is to be named, was born at Williamsburg, Hampshire County, Mass., on October 29th, 1802. He sailed for Savannah when 19 years of age, but was shipwrecked off Cape Hatteras, and reached the Georgia port weeks later. He settled first at Sparta as a teacher. He studied law and was admitted to the bar at Knoxville, Crawford County, in 1824. He married there and had one child, a daughter, the mother of Associate Justice Hiram Warner Hill of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

He was a member of the Legislature 1828-31. He was elected judge of the Coweta Circuit of the Superior Court of Georgia in 1833. At that time there was no Supreme Court, and the Superior Court judges gathered in annual convention to discuss their decisions and establish uniformity of practice.

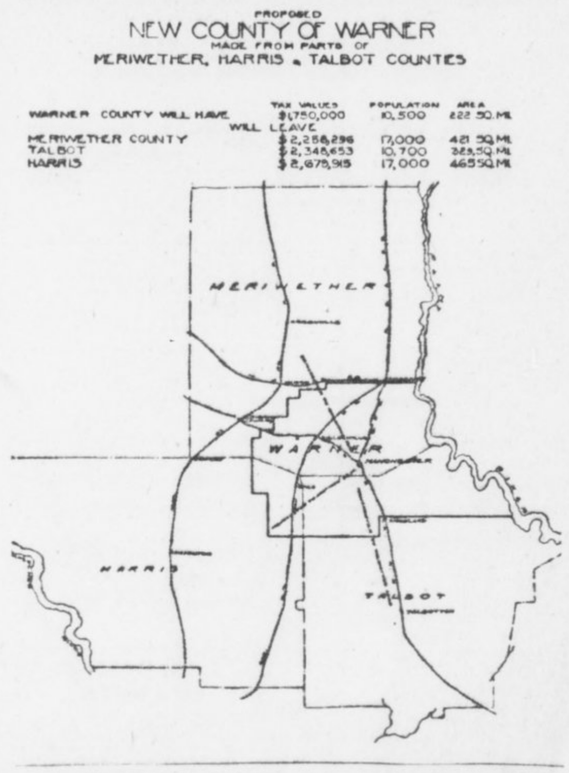
In 1845 the Supreme Court of Georgia was organized and with Joseph Henry Lumpkin and Eugenius A. Nesbit was elected to that high branch of the judiciary. He defeated Benjamin H. Hill for Congress in 1855; was renominated, but declined re-election. Nearly 60 years old when the war came, he was at home caring for his family, his only son-in-law being at the front. He was held by Wilson's raiders and actually hanged and left for dead because he did not tell where suspected gold was hidden.

Later he was appointed to the judgeship of Coweta Circuit by Governor Jenkins. He was named Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia in 1867 to succeed Chief Justice Lumpkin, deceased.

His decisions from the bench and his printed decisions upon the Supreme Court bench are classics in Georgia's judicial history and his decisions are leading ones in ruling on similar cases today.

Judge Warner was reared a Presbyterian. He never joined a religious denomination. He lived and died, however, a believer in the Bible, the truths of Christianity and the creed of that denomination to which his family belonged. It was his habit to keep upon the table in his bedroom to the last day of his life two books; one was Blackstone, and the other was the Bible. This Bible his mother gave him when he left home for his long journey. To this same Bible he turned for comfort and support when, 58 years afterward, an old and broken man, he entered the valley of the shadow.

It is this man whose memory is sought to be revered in the creation of the county which is to bear his name—Warner.



Little Territory From Three of the State's Largest Counties Will Give County—New County Has Railroads—Sentiment Favors It.

No county has ever been created in which the sentiment was stronger for a new county than Warner. The movement has been spontaneous in all sections and our petitions contain more than 95 per cent of the white electors in Warner County. The people realize the great inconvenience with which they are now burdened and have joined unanimously in the movement.

Situation of Warner.

The proposed county of Warner will include portions of Pine and Oak mountains. In recent years most of this section was considered of little value on account of its inaccessibility and the rough character of the country. Little money has been spent by the counties in developing this territory, and the roads, most of them crossing the mountains and ridges, are bad, and have received but little attention.

In 1906 the A., B. & A. railroad was built, traversing this section with its Birmingham and Atlanta lines merging at Manchester; since which time Manchester has grown to be a town of about 2,000 people, as a result of which the territory adjoining Manchester has developed very rapidly; approximately $2,000,000 having been spent in improvements and business naturally drifted in this direction. The people residing in this territory buy all their supplies and sell their produce at Manchester, Bullochville, Raleigh, Chalybeate and Shiloh. Nothing calls them out of the proposed county except court duty, and they are deprived of the privilege accorded the majority of our people in the state of transacting their business and attending court in the same day.

Demand of Modern Times.

In this day of modern methods, when man's greatest asset is his time, when all business has become greatly intensified and concentration and conservation are occupying the attention of all progressive, thinking people, all men must realize that to make a success out of any public institution its interest must be well guarded. In this connection, large counties can not receive their just consideration. It is out of the question for the county commissioners in the three counties affected to give the counties' business the attention which it deserves. The area is too large, the business too vast, the demands too great and the distance too far for the county authorities to attend to the business properly.

General Statements of Interest

Manchester, the proposed county site, contains one large cotton mill, railroad shops and division offices of the A., B. & A. R. R., one bank, 33 brick store buildings and 16 wooden store buildings, all of which are occupied by various lines of general merchandise; two moving picture theaters, one newspaper and printing office, three hotels, five churches, modern school system, municipal light plant, two livery and sale stables, two large builders' supply houses, fireproof warehouse and gin.

Bullochville has several large supply houses, one bank, guano factory, also the Tuscawilla, a magnificent three-story brick hotel with modern equipment throughout, the best equipped hotel in the State in a town many times its size. Near Bullochville is located the famous Warm Springs resort, which is too well known to be described.

Just above Bullochville is the thriving town of Raleigh, which controls all business within its territory.

South of Bullochville on the Southern Railroad is Shiloh, now located in Harris County, one of the best farming supply towns in the State.

East of Manchester on the A., B. & A. is located Chalybeate Springs, a resort famous since ante-bellum days. The water from these springs has been known throughout the State since Georgia's early history.

Just east of Chalybeate is the Tatum Iron Company's mines, which are now being successfully developed.

All facts stated herein are not exaggerated, but can be substantiated with unlimited amount of evidence.

GIRL PLAYS MAN AND WINS LOVE OF HATED RIVAL

Unique Vengeance Is Planned by Young Woman Whose Sweetheart Proved Faithless.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Jilted by her lover, Bessie McIntyre, of North Wheeling, a pretty 18-year-old girl, secured an odd but effective revenge on her rival, who "stole" her sweetheart and on the faithless lover at the same time.

June 25 Harry Pendleton, a well-known young business man of this city, informed Miss McIntyre that he could not see her again(as he had become engaged to another girl. By a dint of inquiry the jilted girl ascertained that the girl who had stolen her lover's affections was Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, Ohio, just across the river from this city. Securing permission from her parents, Miss McIntyre had her hair cut off, and donning one of her brother's suits, she visited Bridgeport and met Miss Allen.

It was a case of love at first sight—on the part of the Bridgeport girl. Miss McIntyre masquerading as "Lawrence Dassing," was a devoted lover, and every night found "Lawrence Dessing" at the home of Miss Aiken.

Last Sunday night while "Dessing" and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to call on her again. She then confessed her love to her companion, the pseudo "Dessing." Miss McIntyre, dressed in a gown of the latest mode last night met Miss Aiken in this city. Before Miss Aiken could speak the North Wheeling girl told her how she had revenged herself.

In a moment the girls were fighting and were separated by the police.

Willing To Marry But Not to Apologize

Man Sued for Breach of Promise Says Hill Wed But Refuses to Beg Forgiveness.

ATCHISON, KANS., July 19.—Mary Falk and William Burke were engaged to be married. The date had been set, the guests had assembled, and everything was in readiness, but Burke did not appear. Chagrined and heartbroken, Miss Falk engaged an attorney and sued Burke for $25,000 as balm for her wounded feelings.

"It was all a mistake," said Burke. "I wanted and still want to marry Miss Falk. I was under the impression that under the rules of the Catholic Church the ceremony had to be performed by the pastor of the bride's church. I couldn't find him in time to perform the ceremony and naturally supposed the wedding was off for the time being."

Miss Falk accepted the explanation, but she insisted that Burke must apologize for not appearing for the wedding. Burke, however, insisted that she must apologize for suing him.

Concussion of Brain Kills a Gigantic Frog

Oscar Siler went to Mich.
Thought he'd rest and catch some fish,
Pitched his tent on Fountain Lake—
Listen to this nature fake:

FOUNTAIN, MICH., July 19.—Oscar Siler, of Chicago, who has been fishing on the lake near here, claims to have killed the record frog. Said frog is said to weigh 6 pounds and to be 15 inches long. It will be sent to Chicago. The frog died of concussion of the brain. Thus—

"Kerplunk," croaked the prehistoric bullfrog.
"You're drunk," piped the monarch of the bog.
Whereupon Siler (who was sober) bounced a rock off the bullfrog's bean.

Aged Oil Queen, Wife Of Youth, Ruled Sane

Young Spendthrift Husband Is Welcome to Fortune, She Says, on Leaving Asylum.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 19.—The courts and her children can not separate Mrs. Cynthia C. Sparks, known as West Virginia's "oil queen," and her young husband, Fred Sparks, and she is again free, after having been incarcerated in the West Virginia Hospital for Insane for ten days.

Further, the superintendent and the members of the State Board of Control have placed beyond question her sanity after a close observation, while she was under their supervision.

Mrs. Sparks is going to join her 26-year-old husband, who, it is alleged by the woman's children by her first husband, was rapidly dissipating her fortune of $2,000,000 by his extravagance and riotious living.

The old woman declared to-day that her young husband was welcome to the half of her fortune which she retained after having signed over the half to him.

Miner Returns Rich To Find Wife Dead

Comes Back Home to Make Restitution for Having Deserted Her 20 Years Ago.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Wealthy and anxious to take back his wife, whom he deserted twenty years ago, Josiah Bronson, a modern Enoch Arden, found the old home in ruins and the wife dead. From the old-timers who had known him in the early days he learned that his wife, believing him dead, had married his twin brother.

Two children, he learned, were born of the marriage, and upon the death of the mother were sent to relatives in West Virginia.

Bronson declared he would care for the children. "I shall give them the best education money can buy," he said. "I deserted their mother when she was just a young woman, and now I want to atone for the cowardly act."

WRITERS MAKE BEST DIPLOMATS DECLARES PAGE

New Ambassador to Italy, Author of Many Stories, Leaves Himself Out of Discussion.

YORK HARBOR, ME., July 19.—Are authors better qualified to fill diplomatic posts than others? The appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy brings this subject to the fore, coupled with the appointments made by President Wilson.

The greatest diplomats America boasts were men of letters. Benjamin Franklin, John Hay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, William Dean Howell furnish a distinguished list.

Mr. Page, who is 60, is modesty personified. He has been reporter, lawyer, writer, and has succeeded in all.

Mr. Page asked if he could explain as an author what special qualifications a man of letters possesses to perform the duties of Ambassador, consented to speak, leaving his own case out of the discussion. Said he:

"A man of letters is better fitted to do anything better than anyone else. His work has broadened his horizon; if it hadn't we might as well do away with letters.

Must Know Problems.

"The author must necessarily be conversant with the economic and governmental problems of the day.

"I think the greatest good authors in general have alone is to interpret the spirit of the section about which they write. There can be no doubt there is a better feeling now between the North and the South than there was before the Spanish-American war. This, I believe, is because of writers.

"Every part of the world is being more properly set before another part by the authors.

"The President has had a thorough training. Besides the college education, he has had associations with the North and the South, and he is conversant with the economic and governmental problems. He is a man of strong character and has been deservedly selected by the people to hold their most important office.

"I met Walter Page prior to his departure for his London post and gave him a dinner. His whole heart was set upon the desire to 'make good.'"

Qualifications of Diplomat.

"What is your idea of the qualifications a good diplomat possesses?" he was asked.

"Devotion to his duty is perhaps the first and most important," he replied. "Then comes devotion to your country, application to your duty and a desire to bring your country and the country to which you have been sent closer together.

"Of course, since the cable came into use foreign posts are brought closer to the State Department at Washington, and it must be a great comfort to an Ambassador to feel that at any time he may seek aid from Washington.

"I believe Charles Francis Adams was the last foreign ambassador to be thrown upon his own resources, and that was because the cable was cut.

"Rome is indeed a charming post. I believe it is the most romantic city in the world. I am sure I shall like it."

BRYAN DODGES PAPER'S QUESTIONS

wrong. It is using the office for making money."

Senator Bristow said action would be had on his resolution. He said, too, that there would be quite a little discussion on the subject. It probably will be referred to a committee. Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, says it probably would be "handled in a routine way."

Mr. Bacon says he thought the resolution was introduced to bring about a discussion of the course of Mr. Bryan, and that remedial legislation was not demanded.

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend, of Michigan, holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the Government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Among those who talked were the following:

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts—A Cabinet member can live on $12,000 a year if he does not have large family expenses, and he can live comfortably and respectably.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania—Samuel J. Randall, one of the greatest of Democrats, served this country for a whole generation, living on a salary of $5,000 a year. I have always disapproved of the custom that has grown up resulting in the very considerable neglect of official duties on the part of public men in order that they may go on lecture circuits.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina—While Mr. Bryan's speaking tours will serve a good purpos in that he always preached true Democracy and patriotism and Christian living, he can never again appear as a knight errant of Democracy.

Representative Willis, of Ohio—I am opposed to a Government official capitalizing his job. The Secretaryship of State is a man's job. Mr. Bryan should stay here and attend to the work of his office. He has enough on his hands with the present critical situation in Mexico, the unsettled questions with Japan and the matter of the Panama Canal tolls. We members of Congress have to stick to our tasks.

Representative Miller, of Minnesota—Mr. Bryan is giving this country a remarkable exhibition in the difference between his preachings during the past seventeen years and his present practices.

Representative Kahn, of California—There are many able men in the employ of the Government who are prevented by law and the hours of service from increasing their incomes through additional employment.

Representative Payne, of New York—I have been able to live on my salary as a member of the House. I can not see why the Secretary of State is unable to live on his salary.

Towne, Bryan's Friend, Calls Step Unfortunate.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Secretary Bryan's determination to supplement his official salary of $12,000 by going on a six weeks' lecture tour has awakened severe criticism from the men who supported him when he first loomed on the political horizon.

Charles A. Towne, who was one of the speakers at the famous "Dollar Dinner" in April, 1899, organized to emphasize Bryan's Jeffersonian simplicity of tastes, discussed Mr. Bryan's new move reluctantly, as they are still close friends.

"I consider the Secretary's plan to continue his lecture tours while occupying the chief place in the President's Cabinet most unfortunate," said Mr. Towne. "These are days when great national issues must be decided, and when the Secretary of State is required to give every bit of time and energy in behalf of the nation. It is a time when men intrusted with the affairs of the Government must have their minds occupied with nothing else except the questions of state.

Explanation Only Makes It Worse, Says World.

(From The N. Y. World, July 16.)

It is with the most profound regret that we have to note the position into which the Secretary of State has drawn himself and the explanation now given which only makes it worse.

Whether Mr. Bryan can afford to take a prolonged vacation at just this critical time for the Administration and his own high office may be a question, but a minor one. Whether, under the frankly admitted circumstances of personal fortune, he can only afford a money-making vacation, must be something less than a question with the great masses of the people whose life he has lived in sympathy.

The real question is whether the Government for such a position as his may not justly claim an undivided service, and whether any other view is compatible with a worthy ambition. We have had men in high office who have sacrificed personal fortune to render such undivided service and could afford it. We have had many more men there who have done this and could not afford it.

We can not think of the President of the United States doing otherwise. We should not be able to think of any of his Cabinet doing otherwise.

Action Most Bizarre, Says Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, July 19.—Regarding Secretary Bryan's lecture tour, The Pall Mall Gazette to-night says:

"It is a singular paradox in a country where there is so much money in politics as in the United States that the chief member of the President's cabinet should find his official salary inadequate to support his existence.

"We can quite understand why $12,000 a year is not enough for the Secretary of State, considering the American scale of life, but one would have expected a man of Bryan's moral courage to call upon his country for a living wage, to which he is entitled, rather than to propose going on the stump as a lecturer, in the roles of a minister and a professional entertainer.

"They make a most bizarre combination to all British ways of thinking, and we shall be surprised if even American opinion reconciles itself to their incongruity."

MOTHER OF TEN SUES; WEDDED TWENTY-ONE YEARS

DAYTON, WYO., July 19.—After living with David Krouse Towns for 21 years and bearing ten children of which he is the father, Mrs. Martha Ellen Towns has brought suit for divorce, asserting that her husband unjustly accused her of infidelity and that he had attempted to secure her incarceration in the State Insane Asylum, although realizing that she was sane.

BRYAN OUGHT TO LIVE ON HIS PAY OR QUIT, SAY SENATORS

Explanation of Secretary of State More Amazing Than His Acts, Declares Bristow, Who Introduced Resolution to Investigate

Wilson's Premier Capitalizing His Position, Asserts Representative Willis—Much Work To Be Done in His Department.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the National Capital is that if Secretary Bryan can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Mr. Bryan to-day gave evidence of the fact that the country-wide criticism had got under his skin. That he was irritated and impatient and realized the "bad break" he has made was apparent to his subordinates throughout the day. Somewhat petulantly he declared that the press of the country might have assumed that "my lecture engagements are subject to cancellation."

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow Cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

Evades Paper's Questions.

The American to-day endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions and refused to discuss the subject of his official pronunciamento.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by The American:

"If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

"If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

"You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?"

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned to the questions. Later in the day he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Bristow, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan te stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, to-day came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secrttary Bryan's second statement has astounded me even more than his first one," said Mr. Bristow. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the Governmtnt service is amazing.

"Secretary Bryan says he has a right to use his vacation for lecturing if he sees fit. But he is to be away on one tour of six weeks, and there is no telling where his vacation will end.

Needed at His Post.

"Besides, since he has been Secretary of State he has been in Washington only about one-half the time so far. If ever there was a time when the Secretary of State was needed on the job it is now, when so many important questions are up for consideration. To cause the people to pay money to hear the Secretary of State, the highest officer in the Cabinet, deliver addresses is all

"Read the papers until 6.

Girl Traps a Thief In Telephone Booth

Sets Shoulder Against Door and Holds Man Until Cries Bring Her Aid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Holding a thief trapped in a telephone booth, Miss Florence Rosenthal, cashier in Edward Feuhrer's drug store at No. 53 Second avenue, finally succeeded in delivering him to the police yesterday.

The captive, who said he was Alexander Moskowitz, 17 years old, was so long "telephoning" that Miss Rosenthal went to the booth to see if he was dead or alive. She saw him opening the money box with a screwdriver, she says. Screaming for her employer, she set her shoulder against the door, and the youth could not force it open. Moskowitz was held for trial.

SHORTAGE HITS NATIONAL BANK AT LAFAYETTE

Comptroller of Currency Orders Institution Closed When Defalcation Is Discovered.

ARRESTS ARE LIKELY

Preliminary Examination Shows That It Has Been Looted of Not Less Than $30,000.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane today announced that the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., has been closed by National Bank Examiner Thomas C. Dunlap, with the authority of the board of directors, on account of a large shortage which makes the bank insolvent.

Mr. Kane says he has not received a detailed report of the condition of the bank. Mr. Dunlap has been appointed receiver.

"We do not know how big the defalcation may be," said Mr. Kane, "but our preliminary examination has shown that it is not less than $30,000. This shortage has occurred since May 23, when the bank was last examined. Suspicion on the part of officers of the bank several days ago that a shortage existed caused them to call in Examiner Dunlap. Discovery of the embbezzlement resulted.

"In his telegraphic advices to me Mr. Dunlap does not say to whom suspicion attaches. The last statement of the condition of the bank, issued on June 4, showed the bank to be in a proper state. The president of the bank is R. N. Dickerson, and S. A. Hunt, Jr., is cashier."

In a telegram from Mr. Dunlap Mr. Kane is advised that steps have been taken to make an arrest.

Depositors to Lose Little by Failure.

CHATTANOOGA, July 19.—Local bankers stated to-day that the liabilities of the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., which was announced to-day by Acting Comptroller of Currency Kane, at Washington, to have failed, were approximately $240,000, but that depositors would be paid in full, with but a slight loss to stockholders, as the assets would prove but slightly less.

An unsuccessful attempt was made this morning to obtain a schedule of the liabilities and assets of the institution. The officials are extremely reticent concerning the cause of the institution's embarrassment.

Aerial Ferry to Join Cities in California

Air Pilot Gets Permission to Install Aeroplane Service Between San Francisco and Oakland.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The first aerial ferry of the world will be in operation between San Francisco and Oakland in September. Permission was granted officially to-day by the Harbor Commission to John L. Lekas to construct a dock for his hydroaeroplane.

Lekas recently applied for a permit, declaring that he wished to establish a regular passenger service between the trans-bay cities. Lekas was before the commission to-day and satisfied them he was a safe and sane air pilot.

Motor Cars to Cut High Cost of Dying

Storage Battery Busses To Be Put in Service in Chicago as Funeral Equipage.

CHICAGO, July 19.—The high cost of dying is to be reduced. Storage battery motor busses are to be put in service as funeral cars. The change from carriages to busses, it is estimated, will result in a saving of $30 in the cost of each funeral. As there are 31,000 funerals in Chicago each year, the general reduction in the cost of dying, if busses were used in all funerals, would be $930,000.

Billie Burke Wires She Is Recovering

Actress Was Threatened With Appendicitis, but Did Not Have to Undergo Operation.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Billie Burke, telegraphing the London bureau of The American to-day from Carlsbad in reply to an inquiry concerning her health, says:

"Thanks awfully. Was threatened with appendicitis, but have not had to undergo operation. Recovering nicely.

"BILLIE BURKE."

U. S. State Secrets 'Lifted' From Wire By Mexican Agents

Information Worth Thousands of Dollars Finds Its Way Into Possession of Huerta.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A copy of the official code of the State Department, containing information worth thousands of dollars to foreign governments, has fallen into the hands of the Mexican administration.

It is being used to further the ends of the Huerta regime, it was asserted here to-day.

For some months State Department officials have suspected that the Government telegrams from Mexico City have been tampered with, it is declared, but this was not considered important, as all the dispatches were in code, and, therefore, theoretically illegible.

About three weeks ago, however, Government officials here had their first inkling that the Mexicans were obtaining the gist of dispatches passing between the State Department and Ambassador Wilson.

The agents of the almost unknown "secret service" of the State Department were put on the trail and evidence was obtained that the Government dispatches had been "lifted" from the wires in Mexico and decoded, the information contained therein being transmitted to President Huerta and his Cabinet.

Doctor Says He Has Vaccine to Cure Cold

Dead Organisms Found in Blood of Patient Afflicted With Influenza Used as Culture.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Claims to the discovery of a remarkable vaccine for the cure and prevention of the troublesome "cold" known among medical men as in influenza are being made by physicians of the Mulford Laboratory, near Philadelphia, under the direction of Dr A. P. Mitchins.

The vaccine is composed of the dead organisms found in the blood of a person afflicted with influenza. These organs are isolated and then an impure culture is obtained. Afterward, a saline solution is used to wash the culture germs and then the vaccine is ready for injection.

One striking feature of the results of the vaccine, it is said, is that it cures diseases allied with the common cold at the same time it does the "cold."

3 Drowned Trying To Avoid Wet Feet

Women Stand Up In Leaky Boat, Capsizing Craft In View of Hundreds.

NORRISTOWN, PA., July 19.—Caught in a storm while boating on the Schuylkill River, three women, all church workers, were drowned. They are:

Miss Anna Mary Livergood, Miss Emma J. Rex and Miss Helen Green, all of Norristown.

Miss Margaret Green, a sister of Miss Helen Green, clung to the overturned boat and was saved.

The women were within a quarter of a mile of the boat landing when the wind struck them.

The boat began to leak badly. To keep their feet and clothing dry the four girls stood on the seats. The next instant the boat turned over.

Two hundred persons on a boat returning from a park saw the accident.

Congregation Built Up by Band Concerts

Ohio Pastor With Novel Methods Now Claims Biggest Sunday School in World.

CANTON, OHIO, July 19.—With the attraction of a band concert in the church roof garden and a double orchestra concert in the church auditorium, the Rev. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton's First Christian Church, has built up what he claims is the biggest Sunday school in the world within five years.

The average attendance in this hot month of July is 3,251. The record attendance is 4,714. Several Sundays back 38 babies were checked in the "babies' check room" of the $90,000 church. The men's class of 250 had to hold their session in the street while the teacher explained the lesson from the tonneau of an automobile.

Capital Now Calls Water 'Bryan Milk'

"Adam's Ale" Disappears From Vocabularies of Thirsty Statesmen Who Are Teetolars.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Bryan milk is what they call water in the national capital nowadays. The new name is fast ousting the familiar Adam's ale by which water has been known for some centuries.

When you go in a cafe here and the waiter asks you what you will drink, if you are a teetotaler you say airly: "Oh, a glass of Bryan milk."

LOBBY INQUIRY STIRS NATION

Mulhall Story Leaves U. S. Aghast

Power of Interests Vividly Revealed

MARTIN W. MULHALL, former lobbyist of National Association of Manufacturers, whose revelations of corruption startled nation.

Names of Wilson, Taft, Senators and Congressmen Are Dragged Into the Testimony, Showing Corporations Have Set No Limit in Corruption.

STARTLING FACTS REVEALED IN U. S. SENATE INVESTIGATION OF CONGRESSIONAL LOBBY

National Association of Manufacturers raised a slush fund of $500,000 to $700,000 a year to oppose objectionable legislation.

Place in Taft Cabinet pledged to manufacturers by Vorys, Taft manager.

Charges that the big manufacturers had the ears of Taft, Sherman and Cannon.

List of Congressmen in pay of the National Manufacturers' Association disclosed. Also, a list of the "unpurchasable," whom the association hated, and tried to defeat.

Fights made by National Manufacturers' Association on progressive Congressmen and Senators, often successful.

More than 400 letter tell of plans of association to become sinister factor in controlling the wheels of government.

Attempts made to foment strife among labor organizations, and to corrupt labor leaders, even Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Agreement by Woodrow Wilson with Gompers and Morrison that he support Hughes for Senate.

Powers of big business fought Hughes because he was friendly to labor.

Tom Johnson, Senator McComas of Maryland, and others were political victims of the association's vengeance.

Gigantic corruption in Wall Street laid bare in testimony of David Lamar.

Forgery on Union Pacific's books covering item of $82,000,000 charged.

Senate resolutions hawked about Wall street for sale to highest bidder.

The nation to-day stands aghast at the sensational revelations which have come as the result of investigations by the Overman Committee of the United States Senate into the work of lobbies at the National Capital.

It has heard how big business combines and Wall Street operators have made and unmade men in public life, influenced legislation, dominated public opinion, all the time secret and vigilant.

It has learned how big business has become one of the most powerful factors in the American civilization, striking in the dark against men who opposed it.

It has heard the names of the men highest in public life, President Wilson, former President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet members, dragged into the testimony, and has learned that certain predatory interests have set no limits in their attempt to corrupt public servants.

The bulk of the startling testimony came from Martin M. Mulhall, for years the servant of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the chief lobbyist of that organization at Washington, and from David Lamar, an operator in stocks, who is known as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

Wilson Starts Inquiry.

The investigation began more than a month ago when President Wilson declared that a lobby, "insidious and industrious" in nature, had long dominated tariff legislation. The announcement did not come unexpectedly, however, and there were many Senators and Congressmen to endorse the Chief Executive. The Senate began immediately its investigation of the charges, empowering a committee, headed by Senator Overman, to conduct the inquiry.

Relatively pointless testimony from men interested in the sugar industry came first, revealing the fact that sugar lobbies were the most industrious. Lobbyists from Hawaii, the Philippines and Louisiana defended their actions by a protest against free sugar. Former Governor Carter of Hawaii declared that the elimination of the duty on sugar would make the Hawaiian Islands merely military posts, destroying their commercial prestige. Frank C. Lowry, of the "free sugar lobby," admitted in the testimony that $25,000 had been spent in four years by the Federal Sugar Refining Company in lobbying operations.

Then came the Mulhall testimony.

Even Take Fizz Out Of City's Soda Water

Members of Cincinnati Board of Health to Censor All Soft Drinks Sold.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—The "fizz and bubble" in soda water and ginger ale manufactured in this city is to be no more, if the Board of Health has its way about the matter, and it seems likely at this time that its contention will hold good. The board has asked the Council to pass an ordinance limiting the amount of alcohol to one-half of 1 per cent in any one drink of this kind. If the resolution is passed and made a law no dealer will be allowed to make soft drinks without first getting a permit.

300 "HELLO GIRLS" ASK BOSS TO BE BEST MAN

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—The Postmaster General is bewildered over the result of the recent permission which he granted to telephone girls to get married. Three hundred of these girls promptly availed themselves of the chance and every couple asked the Postmaster General to act as best man.

Umbrellas for Farm Hands Is Inducement

Planter Advertises That He Will Supply Them With Sulkies, Sunshades and Ice Cream.

FINDLAY, OHIO, July 19.—There are other communities in this country that are suffering for a lack of farm hands besides Kansas. It is up to H. B. Clark, a farmer in the western part of Hancock County, to make good, else be prosecuted for false advertising, as provided by the new newspaper laws.

In a morning paper Mr. Clark is advertising for farm hands to plow corn. He says he will provide them with riding cultivator, a large sun umbrella for each, ice water to drink and all the ice cream each applicant can eat every other day, with $2.50 a day wages.

GREAT BRITAIN IS AFTER LATEST GERMAN AIR CRAFT

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Great Britain, it is stated, is negotiating for an Unger airship, which is larger, faster and more rigid than any others yet designed, including the Zeppelins.

'Oh Fudge' Strongest Language Permitted

Kansas City Starts Crusade Against Public Swearing—Police Rebuke Violators.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—Anything stronger than "Oh, fudge!" must not be heard on the streets of Kansas City hereafter. All the ministers of the city and all the members of their churches have started an anti-swearing crusade, and part of the work is to ask persons who are overheard to swear to consider the vulgarity of it and cease the practice.

The Police Department and the street railway company have agreed to join in the crusade, so that hereafter it is part of the policeman's duty to stop swearing as well as breaches of the peace.

Miss Elliott Returns To Stage To Be Happy

Will Play Potiphar's Wife in Sir Herbert Tree's "Joseph and His Brethren."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Maxine Elliott, yielding to Sir Herbert Tree's persuasion, will return to the stage September 2 in a great production of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." She will play Potiphar's wife.

Miss Elliott gives as the chief reason for her reappearance that every one is happier when occupied. She is now living in her beautiful house at Bushey, just outside London.

STORY OF MULHALL WILL EXTEND U. S. LOBBY INQUIRY

Mulhall represented the National Association of Manufacturers, in Washington. The association has a membership of 225 organizations, among them the most influential of the country, and 4,000 individuals, who control billions of capital.

The burden of his statements were that the association had for years promoted tariff, labor, and general business legislation favorable to itself, had maintained a lobby staff of seventeen, including himself, and former Presidents VanCleave and Kirby, of the association, at the capital to defeat hostile legislation, and it was always seeking and often obtaining control of the House and Senate Committee on Labor and Judiciary.

Created Tariff Commission.

He said that the association's efforts were responsible for the creation of the Tariff Commission under President Taft, and said that nine former Congressmen and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages in the House, had obtained money for services rendered.

More sensational still were the declarations that former President Taft, former Vice President Sherman, and former Speaker Cannon, besides many Congressmen and Senators were among those whom the association could affect by appeals to sentiment or other interests. He told of an unsuccessful attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, and of successful work among petty labor leaders.

Mulhall told of his own great ingratitude, how he obtained a Federal position through the influence of Senator McComas of Maryland, and at the same time entered the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers, helping to defeat his patron because McComas had been doomed for his opposition to the association.

McComas, it seems, was not the only victim. Tom L. Johnson had been defeated for Mayor of Cleveland, said Mulhall, for his opposition to the association, and William E. Hughes was opposed by the business combine for Senator from New Jersey because he was the advocate of many labor bills. It was in this connection that Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, had agreed with Gompers and Morrison, the labor leaders, to support Hughes, and had stumped the State in his favor.

Spies Kept in Field.

The work of the association against the eight-hour law, its enmity to most legislation that was favorable to labor, how he kept in occasional communication with former Vice President Sherman, how spies were kept in the field to corrupt minor labor leaders, and to knife opponents, were other sensational bits of the Mulhall testimony.

George Pope, president of the association, and other officials of the organization, have made statements declaring that Mulhall is not to be believed, and that most of the statements were inspired by the fact that Mulhall was discharged by the association. From many persons and places have come statements denouncing Mulhall as a man of reprehensible character, lessening thus the substantiability of many of the charges. But in many instances the declarations he made seemed to be assured of reliability by documents that are substantial.

Interesting is his list of Congressmen whom he said had received pay from the association. He named in this connection J. E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, the House "whip" of the last administration; J. T. McDermott, Democrat, of Illinois; J. J. Jenkins, Republican, Wisconsin; Kittredge Haskins, Republican, Vermont; C. E. Littlefield, Republican, Maine; H. M. Bannon, Republican, Ohio; H. M. Coudry, Republican, Missouri; J. J. Gardner, Republican, New Jersey; R. B. Cole, Republican, Ohio, and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages.

On the other hand, he named a number of Congressmen who had consistently fought the association's interests, and whom he frankly called "unpurchasable." They are: Speaker Clark, Burnett of Alabama; Mayo-Nichols, Pennsylvania; Parson, New hard, Virginia; Cooper, Wisconsin; York; Green, Massachusetts; Haugen, Iowa; Wilson, Pennsylvania; McComas, Maryland; Pearre, Maryland; Hughes, New Jersey; Kelliher, Massachusetts; Connolly, Massachusetts, and the labor leaders, Gompers, John Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the Federation of Labor. William Barnes, the New York boss, he said, was his friend, and could always be depended on to "take care of bills."

Revelations of Lamar.

On the heels of the Mulhall revelations came those from David Lamar, the smiling, cynical "Wolf of Wall Street." Lamar it was who told of having sent Edward Lauterbach, his attorney, to peddle around Wall Street a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the Senate.

J. P. Morgan was one of the men whom Lauterbach visited on this errand. He told how he had impersonated Congressmen Palmer and Riordan in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass Ledyard and Paul D. Cravath, corporation attorneys, and Robert S. Lovett, the railroad president, feigning knowledge of the intentions of the dominant party. Further, he declared that he had represented himself as fresh from the councils of Speaker Clark and other leaders when he visited Wall Street operators for concessions.

Lamar's most remarkable disclosure was his statement that the Union Pacific Railroad's books had been forged in 1901 to cover an item of $82,000,000, whereby the fortunes of E. H. Harriman, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, and others were built.

Testimonials Discredited.

Discredit has been cast upon Lamar's testimony as on Mulhall's, as coming from a man lacking in scruples. Paul D. Cravath, attorney for the Union Pacific, gave out a statement that the testimony regarding the gigantic forgery was part of a bear campaign against the company.

The Senate investigation will be conducted in detail, and it is likely, to judge from the announced intentions of the committee members, that every member of the Senate and of the House, every public official whose name has been dragged into the affair, and every one in anyway connected with the situation will be called in as witnesses. Appearances seem to indicate that the hearing will last far into the summer.

Mulhall was on the stand the greater part of last week explaining a batch of correspondence which had passed between him and political and labor leaders throughout the United States. The correspondence, according to evidence which has been revealed, he has sought to sell to magazines and newspapers several times, but in vain. Nonchalantly, the ex-lobbyist has pointed out letter after letter from prominent men, talking of alleged significant deals almost carelessly.

"This is a letter from Senator Foraker," he said, indicating one. "It was asking me to see a labor man about his chances for re-election to the Senate. I think he was considering the Presidency at the time."

Secrets of big politics are being bared daily during the investigation. Details of how spies worked among the labor men, and of the secret methods of big business have been explained by Mulhall at more than one point in his testimony.

In defense of his own lobbying, Mulhall made statements that a labor lobby existed, naming Samuel Gompers. As a result, Gompers and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be brought before the committee to explain their activities in the cause of labor and capital, respectively.

Inez Milholland's Wedding Blow to Suffragists

Her Romance May Annul Marriage to the Cause

Mrs. Eugen Boissevain, who was Miss Inez Milholland, famous suffragist beauty and orator, before her marriage to wealthy Dutchman last week.

Beautiful Leader of Votes for Women Won After Courtship on Two Continents.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Suffrage leaders of the United States are today bowed in spirit. They can think of their recent victory in Illinois without smiling. They read of success of women jurors and policemen with no show of ecstasy. Their minds are troubled. They seek to know whether Mrs. Eugen Boissevain will be as potent a personality for the cause as was Inez Milholland before she suddenly decided to take unto herself a husband in the form of the wealthy Dutchman she wedded Tuesday in London.

For Inez Milholland has been no small force in the suffrage movement in the United States. She graduated from Vassar just about the time when the votes for women idea traveled across the seas from England, and she has been right on the firing line in the battle for the ballot ever since.

Beauty of Suffrage Ranks.

Miss Milholland, beg pardon, Mrs. Boissevain, has ever been in the specially mentioned class in every important suffrage movement. She has been the American Christobal Pankhurst, only more so, though it has not been recorded that she has smashed anything, or has had to dodge extradition treaties to keep from the painful necessity of going on a hunger strike.

Even before she graduated from Vassar, Miss Milholland was known to fame. Her remarkable beauty, her mentality and personal magnetism made her a leader in this great girls' college. She was the champion all around athlete and held a world's record for putting the shot.

During the strike of the garment workers in New York, several years ago, Miss Milholland volunteered for picket duty and it was her oratory that kept the girls stubbornly on the strike until they partially won their demands.

In the first big suffrage parade in New York she was a battalion leader and was a striking figure as she rode astride on a big bay charger.

Challenges Orator Heflin.

She again achieved prominence by challenging Representative Tom Heflin of Alabama to joint debate when that doughty Congressman spoke disparagingly of the cause, and though it is known that Mr. Heflin loves to speak and delights in debate, he carefully avoided meeting Miss Milholland on the forum.

In the great suffrage parade in Washington the day before President Wilson's inauguration Miss Milholland led the procession as the herald of the cause. She was mounted on a pure white horse and was clad in robes of white, while a coronet surmounted her magnificent hair which fell loosely down her back.

So striking was her appearance that she was quickly an object of the attacks of the thugs and boors who tried to break up the parade, and it is recorded that one of these men received a blow on the jaw from the fist of the young woman who once held the world shot-put record.

"I am wedded to the cause," she told her admirers, among whom were Sidney Smith, the New York clubman; John Fox, Jr., author and former husband of Fritzi Scheff, and Lord Curzon, formerly viceroy of India.

Whether this marriage will annul her former marriage to the cause is the question that perplexes the suffrage leaders, but they, as a rule, protest that it will not.

John E. Milholland, her father, was evidently not greatly shocked by the marriage. Here is what he cabled his daughter:

"Have not been so mad in two hundred years. You should be boiled in oil. Do you expect forgiveness until the next century. Indefensible chip of the old block, you have given us a pretty rough deal, but nevertheless I humbly and fervently pray God's blessing upon you and yours forever.

"PATER."

Boissevain's Brother Elated.

Robert W. Boissevain, brother of the bridegroom, was in a decidedly agreeable frame of mind yesterday in his office at No. 17 Battery place. Besides calling his brother a "lucky dog" and describing him as being "smiled upon by the gods," he said that the new Mrs. Boissevain has now seven sisters-in-law who possess collectively 25 children and that all these seven Boissevain sisters are suffragists of the non-militant type.

"Wireless" in Courtship.

"Eugen, who is 33 years old, and my brother Jan came over to New York on the Olympic to pay me a visit," he said. "They arrived June 10 and stopped at the Holland House with me. William Marconi, the wireless discoverer, and Mrs. Marconi were here at the same time. My brother and I have known Mr. Marconi for years, and I now understand that the Marconis have known the Milholland family for a long time.

"Anyway, two days after the arrival of my brothers, that is, June 12, I was dining with them in the Holland House and Mr. and Mrs. Marconi entered the dining room with one of the most beautiful women we had ever seen. Miss Milholland was presented to us, and my brother Eugen lost interest in all other things then and there.

"Eugen and Jan had planned to tour the States for six weeks at least, but during the dinner Miss Milholland said something about leaving for Europe early in July. The plans of Eugen, I could see, went flying.

MAZDAZNANS EAT FLOWERS AND SING TO THE SUN

All This in Classic Boston, Where the Cult Has a Membership Small but Exclusive.

BOSTON, July 19.—It is ancient history that Nebuchadnezzer went out and ate grass like an ox. Out in the Back Bay and up in Lowell there can be found small yet select circles of folk who eat grass and say they enjoy it.

Not only this, but they worship the sun, pray to the sun, sing to the sun, take sun baths, dew baths, eat rose petals and pansies, drive out disease by fasting spells (or say they do so), fast for days and then fatten up on a diet of water to drink and violets to eat, kiss and rekiss, and try to be as happy and contented as can be.

These people are the Mazdaznans or Sun Worshipers. Into their innermost shrines have penetrated none but ardent devotees, so that none of their rites have been made public. As revealed for the first time at the big Gahanbar, or national peace congress of the Mazdaznans, these rites are weird enough—strange to the outside world, but taken as a matter of course by the Mazdaznans.

And the strange part of the rites and worship is that the devout worshipers believe their practice will lengthen their years into three or four centuries.

Secret Rites of Cult.

Another thing about the sun folk is that they don't worry. So in the hot weather they manage to keep cool figuratively and physically. They usually look happy and contented when met on the street.

None outside the cult itself knew—up to the holding of the recent Gahanbar or Congress—of the secret rites of the Mazdaznans. These are practiced in the inner circles, so called.

For years the famous "Green Book" of the Mazdaznans was a mystery sealed to the eyes of ordinary mortals. The book was guarded sacredly by the Sun Worshipers. In it are printed the precepts of the cult.

Here are some of them:

You can get cured of anything if you have faith enough long enough.

Sickness, sin and poverty will be eradicated by Mazdaznanism.

The fly you swat may be the incarnated soul of a great-great-great-grandmother.

Be careful, then, how you swat the flies.

Obstinacy Cause for Pain.

Pain is nothing but the result of obstinacy in you. If you are suffering from a toothache, it is because you are "declining to yield to the peaceful operations of intelligence."

Never go under the surgeon's knife or take "herbal medicine."

Deny the "bonds of ancestral relation through sickness, sin or sorrow."

And practice these things: Deep or "conscious" breathing and vegetarianism.

If you can do these things, you may become a Mazdaznan, so the "Green Book" says.

The High Priestess is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Roth Hilton, wife of Dr. George Hilton, of Lowell.

In the inner worship Hanish, the leader, is His Humbleness, Mrs. Hilton is Spenta Marie—the equivalent of "holy mother."

Their chief New England shrine is the Mazdaznan Temple, in Lowell. This was formerly a barn belonging to Dr. Hilton, but later converted into a "house of worship."

The central figure in the worship is Mrs. Hilton, the High Priestess. She is the mother of two pretty daughters, one of whom, the elder, Miss Ruthken Mariana Hilton, is being educated to follow in her mother's steps as High Priestess. Some day pretty Miss Ruthken—her name before the court changed it was Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of Mrs. Hilton by her first marriage—will be the leader of the Mazdaznans. The other daughter is Miss Constance Cleopatra Hilton.

The majority of the followers of the "Little Master," Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, are the persons of middle life and evidently of generous means. While a few of the cult are young women of surpassing beauty, yet the advanced philosophic principles of Mazdaznan are so complex and abstract that only those of mature mind are intellectually and spiritually capable of comprehending them. Therefore, there is a dearth of young people in the cult.

Rats Give Sleeping Fisherman Haircut

Well Oiled Head of Angler Proves Excellent Provender for Hungry Island Rodents.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., July 19. A Santa Barbara fisherman has discovered a new way of getting his hair clipped. He appeared about his usual haunts yesterday with one-half of his head neatly shorn of hair. He says that the mice did it. A well-known fisherman vouches for the tale.

Santa Barbara Island is inhospitable and barren and contains not a drop of fresh water. For this reason fishing parties take a good supply of liquid refreshment.

Usually fishermen sleep on their boats on account of the mice. However, the fisherman in the party of Williams said he would sleep on shore.

This fisherman had earned the sobriquet of "Dude," owing to his habit of oiling his hair. It was this oil that caused the involuntary haircut, for the fishermen say that during the "Dude's" hours of slumber the mice visited him and neatly cut the hair close to the scalp in their relish of the oil.

Japs' 'Amo' Starts Romance at Harvard

Girl Student Teaches Him Language of Nippon and Now They Sail for Tokio Honeymoon.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—They met in the yard at Harvard. He was finishing his course and she was studying the intricacies of the Japanese language.

"Will you teach me Japanese?" asked James Lee Kauffman, and she said "yes."

They studied together day after day. Finally he was graduated to what corresponds to "Amo" in the Latin books. He asked her several times to explain its meaning.

"It means I love," she said, blushing.

"I am sure it must mean I love you," he said, and when she nodded that such might be the case he admitted that such was the case.

So they were married in Lancaster, Pa., and came here.

They sailed for Tokio. He is to take the chair of English law in the Imperial University.

Marries and Steals To Reform a Girl

Divinity Student Admits Taking Money Trusted to Him Because He Loved Woman.

DENVER, July 19.—William Schulz, student of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $38 from the student body, whose cashier he was, says he married Miss Thelma Gillion and became a defaulter, not only because he loved the girl, but because he desired to assist her in giving up her former way of living.

That Schulz had partly succeeded in his work of reclamation is the belief of all Denver people who have come in contact with the young woman since she and Schulz arrived in this city. They unite in saying that there is no better behaved young woman in Denver than Mrs. Schulz.

Sioux City Finds Policewomen Useful

Superintendent of Police Safety Declares They Have Lessened Trouble With Girls.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA, July 19.—"I want especially to have the policewomen on the force during the summer months," says the Superintendent of Public Safety. "We formerly had plenty of trouble with young girls in dance halls, but since the women came on the force there has been none of this.

"I believe that they are doing fine work and am very well satisfied. The only thing that would cause their release from the force would be the lack of sufficient appropriation to pay their salary. They are necessary to the force in guarding the morals of the women of Sioux City."

Safe Robber Relic Found in Old Wall

Discoverers Believe That Ancient Money Box Was Taken From Stage Coach by Highwaymen.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., July 19.—While repairing the State highway at the top of Conococheague Mountain, near Concord, Ralph Hopple and Elias Snyder, who were tearing down a stone wall, found an express money box, of heavy sheet iron, lined with wood. The lid was partly open and the lock had been sprung with an iron hook found near the box.

It is thought the box was in the old stone wall for more than a century and was placed there by a gang of robbers that infested that section in the days of stage coaches.

ACID THROWN AS JEALOUS WIFE STRIKES RIVAL

House Physician of Kimball House Center of Affray Witnessed by Peachtree Crowd.

Dr. J. Robert Smith, house physician at the Kimball Hotel; Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Ina McNeil, of No. 299 Forrest avenue, a saleswoman at a downtown store, engaged in a struggle in front of the Park-Chambers-Hardwick store on Peachtree street Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. Smith found her husband with Mrs. McNeil.

In the melee Mrs. McNeil received a slight cut on her arm, and Mrs. Smith claims also she gave her a black eye. During the trouble a bottle of what is supposed to have been carbolic acid was thrown by one of the participants, but none of them will admit throwing it. Dr. Smith declares he did not see the acid thrown, and Mrs. Smith will not say whether she threw it or not.

Hundreds See Fray.

The triangular affray was witnessed by hundreds of Peachtree street pedestrians, and created considerable excitement. After the bottle of acid had crashed to the pavement and broken, Dr. Smith hustled his wife around the corner, while Mrs. McNeil ran into the store and hurried to the second floor.

Mrs. Smith admits attacking Mrs. McNeil. She says she has several times asked her to keep away from Dr. Smith, and declares she became infuriated when she saw her husband meet Mrs. McNeil downtown to-day.

Says She Trailed Smith.

"Dr. Smith has been running around with Mrs. McNeil for more than a year now," said Mrs. Smith. "We have been separated for several years, but of late the doctor has asked me to return to him. He has offered to buy me an automobile if I would come back, but I told him I would have to test him. I asked him to keep away from Mrs. McNeil, and I've also asked Mrs. McNeil to keep away from Robert.

"I heard several weeks ago that he was going around with her again, and this morning I came to Atlanta from my home in Douglas. I trailed Dr. Smith to-day when he left the Kimball House, and I saw him meet the woman on Edgewood avenue. I followed them until they got in front of the store on Peachtree street, and then I got so mad that I stopped them.

"I admit I hit Mrs. McNeil, and I would do it again. I just got so mad that I walked up and struck her in the face. I gave her a black eye and scratched her on the arm, but she didn't hurt me. I don't know anything about the acid. Dr. Smith did not do anything while we were fighting, but acted like he wanted to get away. After the bottle was thrown, he took me out of the place."

Girl Shoots Herself When She Is Spanked

Mother Punishes Her for Spending Afternoons With Boys—She Fires Bullet Into Breast.

NEW YORK, July 19.—When the mother of 15-year-old Mary DeMartino spanked her a week ago for spending the afternoons with young men on the roof of their home, No. 337 East Forty-seventh street, the girl threatened to shoot herself.

Mrs. DeMartino caught her on the roof again yesterday, and after Mary had been chastised, she fired a bullet into her breast, penetrating one of her lungs. She was taken to Flower Hospital, and last night was in a critical condition.

Couldn't Die Until He Moved Friend's Body

Pioneer Refuses to Allow Companion's Remains to Rest in Old Deserted Cemetery.

DUFUR, OREG., July 19.—"No, he was just my friend."

This was the answer given by H. Koehler, of Portland, when asked if William Holman, whose body he had gone to the trouble and expense of moving from one cemetery to another, was a relative.

Many, hany years ago, when there was but a small handful of settlers in the Fifteen-Mile Valley, a location for a cemetery was selected on a hill overlooking the valley.

A few days ago Kohler, now a gray-haired man, came to look after the last resting place of his friend Holman. He left here soon after Holman's death 35 years ago.

"We were good friends—very good friends," he said. "I could not die happy if I knew he would be left out there in that old cemetery with no one left to care for his grave. I had intended to look after this long ago, but circumstances have prevented, and now I am growing old and I must do this one kind act for my friend. We were very, very good friends."

Automobile Driver Kills Deer With Car

Horn Frightens Animal But He Afterwards Turns to Fight and Pierces Tire With Horns.

UKIAH, CAL., July 19.—W. C. Jones, of Los Angeles, ran down a big deer with his auto near Largo yesterday when it jumped over the fence in front of the machine. Jones opened his throttle and turned loose the horn. The noise frightened the animal, and, after a half mile chase, it turned to give battle. The deer made one vicious lunge forward, its horn piercing the front tire, the impact breaking its neck. Jones loaded his prize into the machine.

CRAWFORD HEIRS EXPECT SEARCH FOR BARBER TO BARE PRE-NUPTIAL PLOT

Relatives Think That Lump Will Tell Woman Held on Poison Charge Planned to Wed Him on Her Husband's Death.

If the tireless search which is being directed by Atlanta lawyers discovers in New York a man named Fred Lump, the prosecution in the case against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, thinks a pre-nuptial plot against Crawford can be proved.

The alleged plot was between Mrs. Crawford, then Mrs. Savage, and Lump. She would marry the wealthy Crawford, obtain his money, and then marry Lump, say her accusers.

Lump is a barber by trade and a Bohemian by nativity. He is supposed to be in New York, and in that city detectives in the employ of the prosecution have been at work for several days. Every message that comes from them, however, is one of failure.

Colonel James Makes Charge.

The charge of a plot first was made by Col. J. S. James, who is attorney for the contesting Crawford heirs, who ordered the arrest of Lump. Colonel James said that Lump admitted his being in Atlanta at the time of Crawford's death, and that other testimony valuable to the prosecution was given by him in deposition several weeks ago. But present search for the Bohemian barber has proved fruitless.

Colonel James points to Mrs. E. C. Bursener as one of the witnesses of the prosecution to substantiate the murder plot charge. Mrs. Bursener, it is claimed, will testify that she frequently heard Mrs. Crawford say that she would marry Crawford, get his money, and later run away with Lump. The prosecution will seek to prove also by Mrs. Gertrude A. Painter, it is said, that there was a definite agreement to this plan existent between Mrs. Crawford and Lump.

The forces that are trying to saddle Mrs. Crawford with the murder charge are scoring heavily in the closely-allied civil suit. Heirs of Joshua B. Crawford, trying to break the will by which the widow received the bulk of the estate, charging undue influence, have produced a number of witnesses to swear to an antagonism between Crawford and Mrs. Mary B. Crawford.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. L. C. Dillingsley, who testified that Joshua B. Crawford said, time and again, that he would not marry the woman. This statement was elicited in the attempt to prove that Crawford was not rational, and probably was intoxicated, when he married Mrs. Crawford.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Mrs. Dillingsley, who said she lived in the Crawford home on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death, told of instances of alleged cruelty on Mrs Crawford's part, directed particularly toward a Miss Scott. Mrs. Sallie Alexander, an old woman of Henry County, was another witness by whom it was sought to prove habitual drunkenness on Crawford's part.

Mrs. Crawford, released from the Tower on bail of $6,250, has remained in the seclusion of her home on West Peachtree street all week, steadfastly quiet and refusing all statements in the face of the accusations against her. She has said nothing regarding the case, except a simple denial of the charges.

Reporters seeing her were treated courteously and quietly, and Mrs. Crawford seemed not averse to talk to them freely. But in most of the talk the subject of the murder charge and the plot charge in which Lump's name appears was carefully skirted.

Mrs. Crawford is a large woman, of dignified appearance. Not one moment since her arrest Saturday night has her composure broken, even slightly. In the Tower she received the few persons who called on her, and during the visit did not exhibit a sign of perturbation.

Calls Charge "Awful Thing."

To reporters and to all her visitors, when she mentioned at all the subject of the murder charge, she referred to it as "this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford finds staunch friends in her children and grandchildren, who visited her at the Tower, and were with her almost all the few hours she spent in jail, bringing her flowers, a savory meal, and other tokens of their love.

Mrs. Crawford's children are bitter in their speech against the nephews and neices of Joshua B. Crawford, who, they say, are persecuting their mother with extreme cruelty. Mrs. Crawford herself accused her enemies of cruelty and lack of feeling.

Mrs. Crawford met Joshua B. Crawford when she was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine, wither Crawford went in search of health. It was there she met him, and there that she married him. At his death, there was a settlement of his estate, Mrs. Crawford taking hold of the affairs with a capable hand.

An agreement was signed, and the affairs of Joshua B. Crawford, deceased, seemed amicably settled. Then the litigation was sprung. In the first bill of complaint the heirs who contested the will charged Mrs. Crawford with poisoning her husband, and of exerting undue influence to procure a will in her favor. But it was not until three years later, two weeks ago, that an examination of the remains of Joshua B. Crawford to ascertain traces of poison was ordered. Upon the examination came the verdict of the physician that traces of poison were vident, and Mrs. Crawford was arrested.

With preliminary hearing waived, Mrs. Crawford's case is flatly up to the grand jury, which, without definite date of meeting, awaits the call of the Solicitor General. The body probably will be assembled next week.

MRS. MARY BELLE CRAWFORD, held on poison charge in famous will case mystery, with her grandchild, Viola Belle Bennett.

Fortune in Gold Nuggets Awaits Heir

Wealth Will Revert to State of Kansas Unless Kin of Old Woman Appear.

HUTCHINSON, July 19.—There is a bag of gold nuggets and gold dust awaiting heirs that may go to the State of Kansas. These nuggets and the gold dust, along with some money and other personal property to the value of $10,000, are in the hands of former Sheriff G. M. Duckworth, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ana M. Bernhert, who died a few days ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Some years ago when Mrs. Bernhert, who lived alone, was found to be of unsound mind, Dr. Duckworth was named as her guardian and she was taken to an asylum for treatment. In searching the house he found scattering personal property. It was found that much of it was gold nuggets and dust, saved, evidently, from some former mining experience, and hoarded away.

Baby Sips Hat Bleach; Dies from Poisoning

Mother, Bedridden from Appendicitis, Is Unable to Stop Child from Drinking Acid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—As a result of drinking a mixture of lye and oxalic acid, used by her father to clean an old straw hat, Dorothy E. Smith, 20 months old, died yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her father is Leo Smith, of No. 47 Brooklyn avenue, Jamaica, an employee of the Long Island Railroad.

The child's mother is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She and the baby were alone in the house yesterday when the child drank the mixture. She heard the baby's screams, but could not leave her bed, so she screamed, too, and neighbors who responded called a doctor.

SOT IS SENTENCED TO BATHE AND GO TO CHURCH

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 19.—To attend church each Sunday for three months and to bathe his children once a week was the novel sentence imposed on John Norris in the Police Court by Mayor Reed.

Norris pleaded guilty to intoxication. It was his second appearance in court within two months.

The terms of his sentence, if not complied with, will result in him serving 109 days in the workhouse.

RENO SINGS ITS SWAN SONG AS DIVORCE MECCA

Grand Rush of Colonists to Take Advantage of the Old Law Comes to an End.

RENO, July 19.—With such songs as "Meet a Friend From Your Home Town" and "At the Devil's Ball," sung by feminine entertainers from Metropolitan music halls, accompanied by high-class orchestras, the divorce colony celebrated the past week the beginning of the end of the Nevada quick divorce.

On the stroke of the midnight hour on Monday the curtain dropped upon one scene in Reno's notable divorce colony performance which has commanded the attention of the world for so long—that of the almost daily appearance of new faces upon the streets, as men and women, from plain country folk to elaborately gowned and bejeweled society beauties, arrived to begin their required six months' residence in the State and county, preparatory to the prospective divorce action.

Law Halts Colonists.

No more will incoming trains deposit these colonists and carloads of trunks, for the familiar song, "I'm on My Way to Reno," has been shelved by the action of the last Legislature, when it dealt the knock-out blow in its ultimatum that no divorce proceeding shall be instituted in the State of Nevada under the existing six-month residence law after December 21 next, thereby limiting the time in which newcomers could begin such residence period to Monday last.

Previous to July, 1909, the presence here for divorce of but an occasional person of prominence merely commanded attention to that individual, but it led to a method of publicity by an attorney which started the ball rolling, and it has never stopped rolling. Its greatest momentum is being witnessed now.

All Houses Are Thronged.

During the past month, and especially the week ending on Monday, the throng of newcomers has experienced great difficulty in securing such apartments as they might desire. All the hotels are crowded, as are the desirable rooming houses. Available cottages are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. In many cottages from four to six divorcees are living.

Some private boarding houses are housing as many as ten of the fair sex, and men. There are now scores of so-called "divorcees' nests" here. Every train the past fortnight has unloaded new arrivals, the preponderance of men and very young women, seemingly well to do and fashionable being noticeable. The proportion of men to women increased largely. Baby carriages and dogs played conspicuous parts.

Attending Funerals Hobby of Old Squaw

"Glass Eye," Noted for Lamentations at Obsequies, at Last Principal at Mortuary Ceremony.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREG., July 19.—"Glass Eye" is dead. She was an aged Indian woman, well known here since the settlement of this section. It was one of her hobbies to attend every funeral that she could, and on these occasions she posed as chief mourner by her excessive lamentations.

Her name has been forgotten by the whites, who only know her by the nickname, which is said to have been given her when young, because of the brightness of her eyes and not because of any abnormality in them.

She was about 75 years old, and is reported to have been the sister of "White Cindy," another noted aborigine.

Boy Finds $35,500; Hides it from Police

Advertises That He Picked up Money and Declares He Will Return it to Owner.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., July 19.—Brayton Gardner, 18 years old, who announced he had found $35,500 in a leather bag on the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad, to-night refused to tell the police where he put the money.

"I have hidden it in a safe place," said he, "and if someone claims it I will produce it immediately."

Gardner walked into the office of a local newspaper and inserted an advertisement, reading:

"Found, $35,500. Owner can have money by identifying it and satisfying Brayton Gardner."

Stolen Jewels Are Found Buried in Park

Last of $100,000 Loot Stolen by Employee of Firm Recovered After Confession.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The final confession of young William Beck, who stole $100,000 worth of jewelry from his employers, Udall & Ballou, was obtained yesterday. The last $2,800 of the loot was found by detectives. It was buried in Central Park.

Beck had insisted until yesterday that he had told all. But Inspector Faurot finally got him to reveal the hiding place. The police were told to enter the park at 110th street and Eighth avenue and count eighteen stone blocks in the wall to a spot where a small bush grew. Buried 6 inches they found nine diamond rings and a pair of cuff buttons.

Indian Girl Seeks Office in Oklahoma

Educated Cherokee Business Woman Would Be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

VINITA, OKLA., July 19.—Announcement by Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, that she will not be a candidate for re-election, brings into the race for the Democratic nomination a young Cherokee woman, Miss Pearl Holderman, of Northern Craig County, whose ability as an educated business woman has given her a wide acquaintance in Eastern Oklahoma.

Miss Holderman has large business responsibilities, and her experience and ability have made her more than a match for most men. Because of her father's impaired health she manages his cattle ranch, directing every detail, including the care of a herd of blooded cattle. This young Cherokee woman owns a thousand acres of land in her own name, all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

Old Age Attributed To Her False Teeth

Woman, Age 99, Declares She Has Used Set 59 Years—Always Chews Well.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 19.—At the age of 99, Mrs. Levina Derr, of Hudson, declares that her long life is due solely to the fact that she bought a set of good store teeth fifty years ago.

Mrs. Derr is still active. Five generations of her family are living, and she declares she is as young as any of them.

"I was blessed with good teeth," she said, "and I always made it a point to chew my food well. A good stomach is the foundation of good health, and the stomach can not be good unless the teeth are good."

Congress to Lose Costly Stationery

Government Printer Is Ordered to Stop Use of Costly Material for Lawmakers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Members of Congress will draw no more costly embossed stationery at the expense of the Government. Hereafter they will get along with plain, every-day printed letterheads and envelopes.

The Joint Committee on Printing discovered that the Government Printing Office last year turned out 11,000,000 embossed pieces of stationery at an extra cost of $30,000. An order has been issued to the Government Printer to stop this extravagance.

On the Senate side of Congress this economy reform is resented, but it goes just the same. If Senators want stationery de luxe they must foot the bills out of their private purse.

INDIANS, 102 AND 97, WILL VISIT FAIR DIRECTORS

MONTROSE, COLO., July 19.—The board of directors of the Western Slope Fair Association decided to bring 50 Ute Indians from the reservation in Utah to Montrose during the fair in September. The Indians will include Chief McCook, 97, and his sister, Chippeta, 102, who is the widow of Chief Ouray.

Women Wear Bath Dresses Down Town

Startle Natives by Appearing In Ice Cream Parlor in Their Beach Attire.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Two buxon matrons and a miss about 19 years old created a sensation about dusk by walking through the streets of Warwood, north of this city, in bathing costumes. Unabashed by the attention they attracted, they entered an ice cream parlor, where they ordered ices, and after eating them walked to their homes.

The matter was brought to the attention of Town Marshal E. L. Pool, who immediately issued a warning that women appearing hereafter in such scant attire would subject themselves to arrest.

TON OF SILKWORMS BUMPED.

PARIS, July 19.—Eight sacks containing nearly a ton of silkworms were thrown out on the track a few days ago at Vintinille by thieves who broke into a car of a freight train. The silkworms were recovered.

Naturalist Editor Has Forest Sanctum

Sets His Type in Shade of Hemlock and Lives in Wigwam all Winter.

WESTFIELD, MASS., July 19.—A unique editorial and printing plant is that known as "Seneca Wigwam, The Press in the Forest," located in the heart of the woods about three miles west of this place.

The sanctum is a typical Indian tepee, where the editor, Joseph C. Duport, an out-of-door enthusiast, prints, illustrates and publishes an original magazine called the Woronoco Valley Calumet.

In summer the editor sets his type in the shade of a hemlock, and in the winter or during inclement weather his work is done in the wigwam, which contains an up-to-date twentieth century printing press and equipment.

Policeman's Watch Stops Death Bullet

Hospital Steward Thinks Patrolman Burglar and Fires Six Shots at His Heart.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 19.—A watch in his vest pocket stopped a bullet which otherwise probably would have pierced the heart of Patrolman O'Hara last night. The shot was one of six fired by Roscoe Gray, steward of the Oakland College of Medicine, under the impression that O'Hara was a burglar. The other shots did not hit O'Hara. Gray nearly collapsed when he learned his mistake.

O'Hara was on his rounds when he noticed a door in the college building open. Trying to close it, he set off a burglar alarm and Gray opened fire in the dark.

Silver Wire Travels Through Two Arms

Metal Closes Wound on Left Wrist and Works Way to the Right Finger.

CHICO, CAL., July 19.—James Dupen, a Chico merchant, to-day submitted to an operation, in which a piece of silver wire, used in closing a wound on the left wrist in 1897, was extracted from the index finger of the right hand. The wire, which is one-half inch long, passed up one arm, across the chest and worked down the opposite arm, emerging at the finger.

Bee Sting on Neck Fatal to Farmer

Dies from Paralysis of Heart Fifteen Minutes After Insect Poison Enters System.

BRISTOL, PA., July 19.—John Piekering, a farmer of Woodbine, while engaged in his customary duties about the farm Saturday, was stung on the neck by a large bee and within fifteen minutes he was dead.

Dr. Heritage, of Langhorne, was summoned, but did not arrive in time to render aid. The doctor says death was the result of paralysis of the heart, caused by the bee sting.

FARMERS' UNION HOPE OF SOUTH, SAY ORGANIZERS IN GREAT GEORGIA CAMPAIGN

Charles S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee, Sweep Through the State With a Message to Planters to Check Enormous Crop Waste.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a flying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"The marvelous grandeur of the world's progress astounds and amazes us, yet the wonderful story would never have been written had it not been for the ever-faithful farmer.

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"When we became a nation the farmer owned 90 per cent of the wealth In 1850 our national wealth was $7,000,000,000 and the farmer owned $4,000,000,000, or four-sevenths.

"In 1913 our national wealth is estimated at $131,000,000,000, and the farmer owns $26,000,000,000. Our farm property is valued at nearly $40,000,000,000, but $14,000,000,000 is owned by other classes than farmers.

"The above figures show that farmers are not holding their own, for if they had kept pace with other vocations since 1850 they would now own $75,000,000,000 worth of wealth instead of $26,000,000,000. Their lack of business methods and failure to match conditions have cost them $49,000,000,000. This would buy all the farm property in the United States and have enough left to buy a half interest in all the railroads.

"In a score of years the farmers of this country have produced $135,000,000,000 worth of farm products, or enough to buy all the property in the United States. Yet this wonderful amount of wealth has not gone to the farmers. We have 10,000 men in this country who own an average of $10,000,000 each. And their combined wealth is $100,000,000,000. The other 99,990,000 people own $31,000,000,000. Of our 100,000,000, 60,000,000 are homeless.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The 12,000,000 farmers of this country are laboring under an indebtedness of $6,000,000,000. On this amount, counting commissions and renewal charges, they are paying an annual interest of 8 1-2 per cent, or $510,000,000, while the business men and manufacturers pay an average of 5 per cent interest, or $300,000,000, on $6,000,000,000. This $210,000,000 excess interest paid by the farmers would pay off our farm indebtedness in 28 years. Co-operative efforts and rural credits would right these wrongs. So, let us continue to discourage this present system until it has passed into history and is only remembered in the misty back yonder.

"Distribution being one of our greatest problems, our second declaration of purposes is to assist our members in buying and selling. The Federal Government has spent $100,000,000 in the last ten years, teaching us how to produce, and not a cent to teach us how to market.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

Expense Is Unavoidable.

"We all agree that there is an unavoidable expense in the distribution of farm products. But let us make what seems to us a reasonable division of the $13,000,000,000 consumers other than farmers pay for farm products each year.

Give the wholesaler and jobber $1,000,000,000, the transportation companies $1,000,000,000, the retailer $1,500,000,000; then throw in $500,000,000 for all possible misallowance, and we have $9,000,000,000, which is $3,000,000,000 more than the farmer gets. This amount falls into the waste basket of speculation.

"If it were divided between the producer and consumer it would clothe the naked, feed the hungry and educate the illiterate, instead of breeding millionaires, paupers, anarchists and suicides. If the Farmers' Union fills its mission, it will not be long until a less portion of the laborers' toll will be turned in at the toll gate of the palace and a great portion will find its way through the door of the cottage, and help to lift the humble tenement to the comfort, dignity and luxury of a home.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 250,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If properly handled, this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices; we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep his pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

THIS DRESS WAS TOO MUCH FOR PRIM RICHMOND.

THIS Picture shows Miss Flossie Brown in the split skirt which caused so much excitement in Richmond, Va., that the young lady was arrested, fined $25 and given twenty-four hours in which to leave town. The idea of the slit skirt did not appeal at all to the Virginians, but it has not been received with so much disfavor elsewhere, for Miss Brown, or Blossom Browning, as she prefers to be called, has been invited to wear it in Pittsburg and Baltimore.

Quarrel at License Desk Halts Wedding

Prospective Bride Objected to Way Her Fiance Spelled Name and Ceremony Was Called Off.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., July 19. A near-wedding was spoiled to-day when the bride-to-be and the bridegroom-to-be quarreled over the spelling of the latter's name. C. W. Clane, of Los Angeles, aged 44, and wearing diamonds as large as hickory nuts, accompanied by a woman about 35 years old, applied for a license.

He started to fill out the blank. "Spell it right, please; spell it Cline," whispered the woman, but Clane just kept on writing.

Again his prospective bride, speaking right out loud, said he was spelling his name wrongly. But still Clane paid no attention. Then, in tones of downright anger, she exclaimed, "You spell your name properly or there will be no wedding."

"Very well," answered the man, and he crumpled up the application blank and they left the office.

Human Chain Saves Man on Niagara Brink

Four Men Take Desperate Chance in Rescue Work at Edge of Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 19.—Truman Chapman, aged 22, of Hamilton, Ont., is alive to-day after falling into the Niagara River and being rescued at the very brink of the American Falls. Four men formed a human chain, and, by taking a desperate chance, saved Chapman when his body providentially lodged between projections of rocks.

Chapman, who is subject to fits, was leaning against a railing at Prospect Point, directly over the water's edge, when he fell in. The current from this point to the brink of the falls is irresistible, but the unconscious body struck the rocks just right to be held temporarily. John Hughes, T. S. Winders, T. D. Thomas and an unidentified man were the heroes.

Advises Wives to Keep Their Secrets

Head of National Homestead Association Says It's a Mistake for Husbands to Know Too Much.

BOSTON, July 19.—"The wise wife never tells her husband all her secrets. She knows better than to run the chance of losing her independence."

So declared Mrs. Charlotte Smith, head of the National Homestead Association, to-day. The association is studying to find out what makes happy homes. It has learned that if a wife tells her husband everything it is a lesson to him not to tell her his secrets.

"Many divorces are occasioned by married couples knowing too much of each other," declared Mrs. Smith.

Aged Sisters Make White House Carpets

Old Women, Expert Dyers and Weavers, Are Preparing to Decorate Mrs. Wilson's Room.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 19.—Miss Caroline McHargue and Mrs. Martha Walker, of Elkin, aged 74 and 76, respectively, are engaged in preparing carpets, druggets and portieres to furnish the room of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the White House at Washington. They are experts in the blending of colors.

The two aged women are sisters. They live together and are expert dyers and weavers, using the old-time barks and herbs in the dyeing process, and the old-fashioned hand loom cards and spinning wheel.

Cartridge Placed on Track Shoots Youth

Boy May Die from Bullet Which Penetrated Lungs as Result of Belated Celebration.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—A belayed Fourth of July celebration on the part of small boys yesterday may result fatally for 8-year-old Francis Wright, who received a bullet in the chest at Twenty-fourth and Bryant streets. In company with his chums, he had been placing cartridges on the car tracks. One of them exploding, sent a bullet whizzing at him. He was taken to the Mission Emergency Hospital, where it was found that the bullet had penetrated the lung. The boy's parents had him removed to his home, No. 2582 Twenty-fourth street, where his condition is considered grave.

NATION FINALLY REFUSES BURR'S PENSION PLEA

United States Decides After 79 Years Just to File Request in National Museum.

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—After some delay—79 years, to be more or less exact—the United States Government has decided on a final action on Aaron Burr's application for a pension. The Government proposes to put the application in the National Museum. This is a patriotic and quite inexpensive method of disposing of a formal application for money.

Exhibited in a glass inclosed case in the museum, the papers may rest peacefully and indefinitely, telling future generations that in his last days Burr was considerably "hard-up." This is a fact not generally known. But if future generations happen to be observant they may notice that the papers show Uncle Sam to be a bit tardy in matters of pensions.

Papers Valuable Historically.

Historically, the papers are very valuable. They contain a letter written by George Washington to Aaron Burr, which even to-day—about 135 years after the letter was penned—is in a state of perfect preservation. Any student of values of historical relics can tell how much such a thing is worth. Officials at the National Museum declare the letter to be "invaluable."

The paper is a bit yellow but it is intact. The ink is a trifle faded, but can be read without difficulty even without the aid of glasses. And, furthermore, the letter reveals a bit of Washington's character more clearly than a volume of history. The missive shows how the general treated with his officers. Burr had written to Washington requesting leave of absence from military duty on account of ill health and suggesting that while off duty his pay may be discontinued.

Here is George Washington's reply to Burr:

Headquarters,
Frederick, 26th Oct., 1778.

"Dear Sir:

"I have your favor of the 24th. You, in my opinion, carry your ideas of delicacy too far when you propose to drop your pay while the recovery of your health necessarily requires your absence from the service. It is not customary, and it would be unjust. You therefore have leave to retire until your health is so far re-established as to enable you to do your duty.

"Be pleased to give the Colonel notice of this, that he may know where to call upon you should any unforeseen exigency require it.

"I am, dear sir,

"Your mo. obt. servt.,
"GEO. WASHINGTON.

"Lt. Col. Burr."

Burr's Final Appeal.

George Washington's letter is regarded as the most valuable paper among the sheaf composing Burr's application, but the application itself, Burr's formal appeal for a pension, has much historical worth because it is Burr's own record of his military service, written in 1834, just two years before his death, at the age of 80 years, in Port Richmond, Staten Island, N. Y. The papers contain no mention of Burr's famous duel with Alexander Hamilton, in which Hamilton was mortally wounded.

Burr even failed to mention in the papers that he had been Vice President of the United States, and reference to the fact that he was arrested and tried for treason for attempting to form a republic west of the Mississippi is also omitted. In the application it is recited, however, that Burr was unable to appear in court to swear to the facts by reason of "bodily infirmity."

CONVICTS OFFERED PARDON IF THEY WILL PICK BERRIES

GEORGETOWN, DEL., July 19.—Full and complete pardons await even the prisoners in Sussex County if they will pick strawberries or work on the farms.

The scarcity of labor has become a serious problem to the farmers this year, and so serious has the question become that many of them have notified committing magistrates that they will pay all fines for intoxicated and disorderly persons if it can be arranged that these people pick berries.

CHANGS, ON WAY HOME, CLING TO YANKEE FRILLS

Wife and Children of Chinese Minister Sail Derssed in Latest American Fashions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—After more than three years in Washington with her husband, Minister Chang, Mme. Chang is returning to the Orient. She is accompanied by two daughters, a son, Henry K. Chang; a litt e daughter-in-law and a tiny grandchild. During her residence in America Mme. Chang has changed her ideas about many things, and about others she maintains the old Chinese beliefs.

The two young daughters, Miss Alice and Miss Lillie Chang, have been attending school in Washington for two years, and with the progress of their education have abandoned their picturesque nature clothes for American garb.

Whether they will adopt the clothes of their native country on their return remains to be seen. Miss Alice Chang, who spoke for the party at the St. Francis before they sailed on the Manchuria, said:

"It all depends on what is in fashion in China.

Favor American Fashions.

"If we find American clothes fashionable out there, we shall wear them. We adopted them when we entered Gunnison Hall, our Washington school. These are more convenient when traveling," she added, pointing to a pale blue silk crepe costume with the latest frills and furbelows. "When we wear our other clothes, people stare so, and sometimes they laugh. They aren't used to them in Washington."

The question of recent changes in China is of especial interest to Mme. Chang and her daughters.

The idea that women may vote in China and that the door of opportunity is opening for them daily there has caused the Chinese women to be thoughtful.

"I don't know about this voting," said Mme. Chang, through her daughter. "I don't believe very much in it."

"Only for some women," broke in one daughter.

Education Qualification.

"I would make an educational qualification," said Miss Lillie. "Not every woman ought to vote."

"Home is the place for women," said Mme. Chang, true to her country's traditions and centuries of training. "A woman ought to do housekeeping, to stay at home and to have children."

Mme. Chang and the daughters are opposed to the Western idea of a woman earning her own living. They believe she should want to stay at home to be cared for, even if she has to do without some of the extras which her own money can secure.

"Women in China probably never will reach that stage," said Mme. Chang. "There will be fewer opportunities for them to enter professional and business fields."

College is a goal which is being aspired to by the two daughters, although they are not sure yet what particular lines they want to pursue. "We can go if we want to, you know," said Miss Alice. "Our people believe in college for girls if they want it."

Surgeon Rebuilding Man's Entire Face

Ears and Nose Burned Months Ago Are Being Replaced by Series of Operations.

GRAHAM, MO., July 19.—Pierce Fleming, who lives near Graham, is undergoing one of the most remarkable series of operations ever attempted in Missouri. His face is being built anew.

Several months ago the Fleming home was burned and Pierce was severely burned about the head. For a time it was thought he could not live. He finally recovered, but his ears and nose were badly scarred.

A Kansas City surgeon was consulted and he began the work of rebuilding the face of the burned man. The ears have been completely rebuilt and the doctor is now working on the nose and the eyes. It is barely possible now to discern the difference between the new nose and ears of Fleming and the ones he lost in the fire.

WOMAN JURORS SCORN STYLE OF SMART LAWYER

Beau Brummel Clothes and Bachelor Button of Barrister Fail to Win His Cause.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Personal pulchritude and unusually smart habiliments, heightened by a bachelor's button and an ingratiating manner, failed to win for Assistant District Attorney Maxwell McNutt, in his appeal to the jury of women which tried Mrs. Bertha J. Williams on an extortion charge to-day. After deliberating one hour and 55 minutes, the jury, the first in the history of the world composed of women to hear a felony case, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

"Of course she said she did what she did, but we didn't think when she said she did it, she meant she had meant to do it," said one of the jurywomen.

Hence, Mrs. Williams, attired in a fetching Milan hat and a neat white serge tailored suit, much scrutinized by the jurywomen, made discreet osculatory advances to her benefactors, and the incident was closed.

Mrs. Annette Robinson, also armored in attractive feminine fixings, was the complaining witness in the case. She accused Mrs. Williams of having written her a letter April 8, attempting to extort $150 in return for the delivery of a trunk said to have contained certain evidence which, according to the letter, would have embarrassed Mrs. Robinson, had it fallen into the hands of the police.

Meows from Limb of Tree to Voice Love

Chicago Romeo Tries Novel Method of Wooing, but Falls Into Clutches of Law.

CHICAGO, July 19.—John Wadjinski's method of love-making goes back to the days when anthropoid Romeos used to hang by their tails and carol love songs all night long. He put his theories into practice on the night of May 3. To-day he was fined $5 and costs by Judge Sabath, who could find no sympathy for the unconventional wooing.

Sophia Emmerling had retired for the night. John Wadjinski strode through the night with caveman emotions stirring in his breast. He entered the Emmerling yard and climbed a tree. He straddled a branch opposite Sophia's window and began to "meow" like a cat. To the girl thus rudely awakened he made love in a voice that could be heard for a block.

Mrs. Anna Emmerling, the girl's mother, called the police. Wadjinski was yanked from romance to the jail.

MYSTERY MAN'S NAME TO STAY SECRET ALWAYS

Operation on Brain Fails to Reveal Identity of "J. C. R." Has Baffled Surgeons.

ROCHESTER, MINN., July 19.—That "J. C. R.," the mystery patient in the Rochester State Hospital, will never know who he is nor will the world, unless friends of olden days come to the rescue, and that he will never again speak, is the verdict of the surgeons, following a remarkable operation performed upon the brain.

"It is problematical that the operation will accomplish its purpose," said C. C. Heyerdale, first assistant superintendent of the State Hospital, after leaving the operating room.

The opening of the skull revealed a large area of degenerated brain cells covering the centers of speech and memory, and an unusually large cyst containing fluid was removed. This would indicate that in times past "J. C. R." probably suffered a hemorrhage of the brain, which could have been the result of a stroke of apoplexy or an injury inflicted upon the skull or brain. The unusually large area of degeneration discourages any hope that the memory will ever be restored or speech recovered.

Gets Blow Intended For His Twin Brother

Chicago Youth Struck When Angry Swain Avenges Pleasantry His Duplicate Was Guilty Of.

CHICAGO, July 19.—William and Otto Andler, of 3751 North Whipple Street, are twins. William passed a pleasantry about a lass who was going her way with one William Dieverkorn.

Sudden anger surged through Dieverkorn, but he held himself in check and escorted the young woman home. Then he came back, met Andler on the street an gave him a jarring wallop.

Andler soon discovered that the blow was meant for his brother and that Dieverkorn got mixed in the delivery of the goods.

Otto Andler refused to rest on this explanation. He caused the arrest of Dieverkorn, and it came out in court how William got the laugh, Otto got the punch and Dieverkorn got the hook.

Judge Sabith inspected the twins, said he couldn't see any difference and dismissed the case, warning Dieverkorn to be more discriminating in the future.

DORSEY FIGHTS MOVEMENT TO INDICT CONLEY

Solicitor Is Bombarded With Letters to Proceed Against Negro as Slayer of Mary Phagan.

THE GRAND JURY IS CALLED

Hottest Battle of Famous Case To Be Waged Behind Closed Doors of Inquisitory Body.

Solicitor Dorsey is fighting vigorously the movement in the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley Monday for the murder of Mary Phagan, despite the bambardment of letters from many citizens and by the sentiment of some of its own members.

It is for the consideration of these letters and petitions, asking the reopening of the Phagan matter, that the meeting has been called.

It was in the face of Solicitor Dorsey's bitterest opposition that the meeting was called at all. Foreman Beattie issued his defi after a previous Grand Jury had been defeated in its efforts to reopen the case with a view of indicting Jim Conley and after Dorsey explicitly had expressed his strongest disapproval of such a move.

Crucial Battle Coming.

With the first skirmish won by those in favor of the indictment of Conley, the hottest battle is yet to be waged behind the closed doors of the jury room. The question first will be on whether the grand jurors consider it proper at this time to reopen the investigation whose first chapter resulted in the indictment of Leo M. Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan. Solicitor Dorsey will lay before the body for the first time all of his reasons for desiring a postponement of all further investigation until after the trial of Frank.

Should the Solicitor be driven back from this position by the Grand Jury again disregarding his wishes and taking up the investigation, he will be forced to take refuge in the last ditch and make his fight against the indictment of Conley.

With all the weight of evidence which has piled up against the negro, it is regarded as beyond the realm of possibilities that he could persuade the jurors to return a "no bill" against Conley on the charge of murder. Dorsey's one remaining hope at this time would be, it is said, to induce the Grand Jury to waive definite action until after the trial of Frank, when it will be in a position to say whether an indictment shall be drawn against Conley as an accessory after the fact, to which he has confessed, or as the actual murderer.

Dorsey Refuse sto Comply.

The Solicitor's attitude in the matter plainly was shown by his statement when Foreman Beattie went to him Friday seeking to have him call the meeting. Dorsey flatly refused and said:

"The meeting's only purpose will be to exploit the evidence and embarrass the State, and I hope the Grand Jury when it meets will decide to leave the matter alone.

"The indictment of Conley at this time will be a useless procedure that will not stop the trial of Frank. It will only have a mild but undesirable effect on the State's case.

"Conley is in jail and is going to stay there for some time. He is where the authorities can put their hands on him, and he can be indicted much more properly after the Frank case has been disposed of than before, and by the delay there is no danger of a miscarriage of justice."

The Solicitor's position is attacked as palpably unfair by those who have been working to bring about the indictment of the negro. Dorsey would have the testimony of the negro accredited as that of any free and trustworthy citizen, while those opposing him declare it should be taken in the light of that of a possible murderer who is endeavoring to shift the blame on another's shoulders, they say.

Evidence More Direct.

They add that the evidence against Conley is far more direct and damning than any ever brought against Frank. They charge, on this account, that Conley has been protected and "coddled" when he should have been placed on the same basis as the other suspect in the case and should go before the jury in that aspect.

General denials were entered Saturday to the story published Friday that the Pinkertons had changed their attitude in the murder mystery and were convinced of the innocence of Frank. Chief of Detectives Lanford declared that Harry Scott had reaffirmed his belief in the guilt of Frank and the innocence of Conley, except as accessory after the fact.

Atlanta Day To Be Society Event at Knoxville Exposition Plans Feature

Mrs. Van Deventer, Daughter of Mr. Justice Lurton, to Visit City for Conservation Fair.

Atlanta Day at the National Conservation Exposition in Knoxville this fall will be one of the largest of the many special days arranged for the national fair in the East Tennessee city.

Atlanta Day, according to plans now on foot, will be largely a society function, for the members of the Woman's Department of the exposition headed by Mrs. Horace VanDeventer, a daughter of Justice Lurton of the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as Knoxville's acknowledged society leader, expect to formulate their plans so that many of Atlanta society folk will make the trip to Knoxville for that day.

In addition it is planned to make Atlanta Day at the exposition one of peculiar and intimate interest to all residents of the city.

Mrs. VanDeventer to Come Here.

The plans for this special day are now in the making. They will be matured probably while the delegation of Knoxville business men is in Atlanta next week, and later when Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers in the woman's department come to the Georgia metropolis to take up the matter with Atlanta society folk.

In the preparations for what undoubtedly will be the South's greatest exposition, the woman's department is playing no small part. In Knoxville the exposition management considers itself fortunate that Mrs. VanDeventer consented to take the direction of the woman's work. She has a very large circle of friends and acquaintancse throughout the country, in cities of the North as well as in cities of the South, and what is more, she has succeeded in interesting large numbers of society women in the work she has under way.

Miss Mabel Boardman, president of the American Red Cross Society and a woman who finds time in the multitude of her various philanthropic work to devote herself to society, will be the guest of the woman's department of the exposition on September 19. Miss Boardman to accept this invitation will be obliged to cut short her vacation, but she has gladly consented to do this rather than miss going to Knoxville. She will be made the recipient of many social favors and attentions while in Knoxville. She will be the house guest of Mrs VanDeventer.

Mrs. Hammond Interested.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, of Washington, wife of the multimillionaire mining engineer, who was the special Ambassador from the United States to England at the time of the coronation of King George, is another society woman who has become interested in the Knoxville show and who will come to that city for one of the special days. Mrs. Hammond is president of the National Civic Federation, which will have an extensive exhibit at the Exposition.

Mrs. John Goelet, of Washington; Miss Mabel Wetmore and other women whose names are known the country over will also be guests of the woman's department while the Exposition gates are open. Recently Mrs. Van Deventer made a trip to Nashville to interest the women of that city. On very short notice a meeting was called. Two hundred or more Nashville women went to that meeting. A number of men went also. There was much enthusiasm shown. The result was that plans were completed then and there for a Nashville Day.

More than that—the Nashville Park Commissioners, under whose auspices a splendid exhibit of paintings is being shown in the Parthenon of that city, voluntarily and as a compliment to Mrs. VanDeventer decided to continue the exhibition almost to the time set for the opening of the Conservation Exposition. Then the exhibits will be moved to Knoxville. One of them will be shown in the Art Building; the other, which is the celebrated collection owned by Charles L. Freer, a millionaire art collector, of Detroit, will be placed in the Woman's Building.

Mrs. Denney Also Active.

Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers, among them Mrs. George W. Denney, fourth vice president, who is also the president of the Tennessee State Federation of Women's Clubs and very active in the club life of Knoxville and Tennessee, are planning now to come to Atlanta within a short time to talk matters over with Atlanta women. Just when Mrs. VanDeventer and Mrs. Denney will come or where the meeting will be held has not been decided.

The fact that Atlanta business men are showing a keener interest in the exposition—which is one designed to benefit the entire South—than they have heretofore, and the chances that Atlanta will be well represented at the exposition, is counted upon to assist the women.

The woman's department has planned its work along broad lines. The stereotyped exhibits that always have been a part of women's departments in other expositions will have no place in the Woman's Building at Knoxville. The idea behind the National Conservation Exposition is one of conservation, and these women have figured it out that there is probably nothing that needs conserving more than the energies and the health of women all over this broad land.

So that is what the exhibits in the woman's department will typify to a very large extent. Of course, the things that have a peculiar interest and attraction to women will not be overlooked.

ARTIFICIAL RAIN INSTALLED ON ATLANTA FARM

Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown Protect Crops With Pipe System.

"These dry nights, when my crops are burning up, I can smell that artificial rain a mile off," said a farmer in the suburbs of Atlanta.

The "artificial rain" of which he spoke is produced on three "fancy" farms within a short distance of Five Points, and, according to the unanimous verdict of Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown, who own "overhead irrigation" plants, it means salvation in dry years.

Stories are told of the wonderful crops these farmers grow—two yields of Irish potatoes a year, for instance, from 200 to 300 bushels an acre—six cuttings of alfalfa, crops of beans when the market is bare and beans are worth $2 a bushel.

Yet the system is simple enough.

Pipes Supply Rain.

On posts eight feet high rest pipes about two inches in diameter. These pipes run the whole length of the fields, and the lines of pipe are twenty feet apart. About two feet apart in the pipes are tiny holes. A gasoline engine, a pump which it operates, an abundant supply of water, and the thing is done.

Six hours each evening, when there is no rain, the pump is run and fine streams of water spurt from the holes in the pipes. At high pressure, these streams are thrown almost from one line of pipe to the next. Handles at convenient intervals make it possible to turn the pipes so that the streams are deflected in any direction and the ground thoroughly soaked with the spray.

This system excels ditch irrigation for Georgia soil for the reason that Georgia clay does not soak up water from a ditch in sufficient quantities. Besides, the soil cakes when water is applied in this way. "Artificial rain," however, coming down like a mist, permeates the whole soil and brings results.

Of course, an overhead pipe system is expensive. The cost is estimated at $250 per acre. This might be reduced somewhat if the farmer performed all the labor himself, or it might easily cost more if conditions were not entirely favorable. The increased yield, however, more than overbalances this initial outlay.

Loring Brown tells of getting an $1,100 crop of Irish potatoes from an acre, under his pipe system. In reality, there were two crops, a spring planting and a fall planting, and the potatoes brought a high price because they were sold for seed.

Fail to Realize Work.

"I have only one objection to seeing Belmont farm described in the newspapers," said Mr. Brown, as he sat in a swing on his front gallery and sorted a thick packet of letters. "My objection is that people read of big yields and good profits, then are anxious to try the same methods. They want to spend a lot of money to emulate Belmont, and fail to take account of the hard work that must go with it.

"A farmer, whether he has a fancy farm or one of the old-fashioned kind, must work eighteen hours a day. He must be on the job 365 days a year. That is what many people forget.

Five years ago, drouth killed the entire crop of potatoes on Belmont. Mr. Brown estimates that dry season cost him $3,000. That winter he went to Greeley, Colo., where overhead irrigation is in use, to see if he could work out a solution of the problem—some sort of insurance against drouth. The pipe lines were the answer. Farms around Atlanta can not grow the same yields produced around Greeley, but the difference in price caused by being closer to a good market overcomes the lesser yield, and more.

Zimmer Installs System.

Mr. Zimmer, on his Kimballville Farm, installed an identical system, though on a smaller scale, and since he installed it, never has had occasion to use it. By some streak of fate, his farm has been blessed with abundant rains.

But rain is freakish in choosing its itinerary. In Atlanta itself and out as far as the Chattahoochee River rains have been sufficient this year. But beyond the river there is serious drouth. Crops are drying up. Irrigation would have been the salvation of the farmers.

And as they sit in front of their homes at night, they can smell the sweet odor of refreshed fields at Belmont—"that darn artificial rain."

WIVES CREDITED WITH KEEPING HUSBANDS ALIVE

Medical Association Finds That Benedict's Regular Existence Is Better Than Bachelor's.

Supervision by wives as a possible reason for the greater longevity of married men than of bachelors is discussed by The Journal of the American Medical Association in its editorial section of the recently published statistics on this point. There is no remark on the statistics of more suicides among married men than bachelors.

The Journal has further information indicating that careful as the married men may be, with restraint once removed through the death or divorce of the wife, widowers and grass widowers leap into indiscretions and are lopped off more rapidly than either those still in the state or those who escaped matrimony.

Live Regular Lives.

"Undoubtedly the low death rate among married men is partly due to the fact that, as a rule, those who are in good health, are readier to marry, while those with more delicate health, especially if suffering from any definite ailment, are not willing to assume the burden and responsibility of a family," says The Journal. "Another factor is that married men live much more regular lives as a rule, and consequently avoid many of the dangers of irregular living.

"This view would seem to be corroborated by the statistics as to the mortality among married men who have lost their wives either by death or divorce. The death rate among these "unmarried men" is considerably higher than that of husbands of the same age, and even as a rule it is higher than that of the bachelors of the same age.

Widowers Die Fast.

"The death rate, for instance, of widowers and divorced men between 20 and 30 is nearly double that of single men. From 30 to 40 it is only 14.1 to 12.9, while from 40 to 50 the mortality of divorced and widowers is slightly less than that of single men of the same age. From 50 to 60, however, it is slightly higher once more.

"At all these ages the mortality rate among widowers and the divorced is at least nearly and sometimes double that of married men of the same age."

Feeds Her Pet Pig With a Silver Spoon

Denver Society Woman Provides Bed of Down and Linen for Her Porcine Possession.

DENVER, July 19.—Mrs. Whitney Newton, a Denver society matron, has a new pet.

Young Robert Newton came home a few evenings ago and brought a baby pig with him.

Mrs. Newton took the squirming animal into her arms and tried to make it comfortable, but without success. Finally, in desperation, she went to the linen closet, took out a fine piece of hemstitched linen, embroidered with blue flowers, wrapped it gently about the slick little pig, then laid him cautiously upon the downy pillows beside her own.

Piggy gave a satisfied little squeak, doubled up his feet and went off to sleep happily.

This cunning act won Mrs. Newton's heart, and from exasperation she developed a positive liking for her pet. His white skin is washed, combed and perfumed and he sleeps in a downy bed every night beside his mistress. He also eats from a silver spoon.

EXPRESS CLAIM OFFICES TO BE CONSOLIDATED

Savannah To Be Headquarters of Florida, Georgia and Southeastern Divisions of Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Consolidated claim offices of three divisions of the Southern Express Company will be located in Savannah after August 1, in pursuance of an order promulgated from the general headquarters of the concern several days ago, official notice of which has just been received here. Simultaneously general claim offices will be opened in Richmond and Chattanooga.

Claim departments distinct and separate from the other branches of the company's business, will be an entirely new thing with this big corporation. W. K. Weaver, of Savannah, chief clerk in the office of Division Superintendent C. C. Wolfle, will be in charge of the consolidated claims office here.

Heretofore it has been the practice of the company to have small claims departments in the offices of each division superintendent, and with him as the chief claim agent.

The offices in Savannah will bring about the consolidation of the claims department of the Florida, the Georgia and the Southeastern divisions of the company. The headquarters of the Florida division have been in Jacksonville, while those of the Southeastern division have been in Atlanta. The Georgia division headquarters have always been in Savannah.

The consolidation will bring 42 new employees of the company to this city. About 25 of these will come from Atlanta, while the others will be transferred from Jacksonville.

The establishment of the claim office at Richmond will embrace the offices now at Wilmington, N. C.; Charlotte and Norfolk. The Chattanooga office will embrace all of the Western division of the company.

Court Calls Both of Boy's Parents Unfit

Serious Charges Are Made Against Proprietor of Inlet Hotel at Tybee and His Wife.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—So serious are the charges and counter-charges in the alimony case of Mrs. Annia Jones against W. A. Jones, proprietor of the Inlet Hotel at Tybee, that Judge Walter G. Charlton has stated from the bench in the Superior Court that he doesn't consider either the father or the mother fit to have the custody of their four-year-old son.

Witnesses testified to alleged misconduct of Mrs. Jones during the absences of her husband, who is an engineer on the Tybee Branch of the Central of Georgia Railroad and obliged to spend a portion of his time in the city. Other witneses testified to gross neglect and mistreatment of Mrs. Jones on the part of her husband.

They called on Senators Bacon and Smith and had lunch with the latter.

Playground Question Rests With Militia

Savannah Volunteer Guards and Georgia Hussars Must Vote to Give Land for Purpose.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Whether the Park Extension will be converted into a model playground and athletic park has not been finally determined. The Savannah Volunteer Guards and the Georgia Hussars, the two military organizations which have not yet given their consent and approval to the plan, have not taken action in regard to the matter.

No special meeting of the Hussars has been held, owing to the absence from the city of Captain Frank P. McIntyre. The Guards have discussed the matter, but owing to the fact that no definite proposition has been put up to them, they have neither approved nor disapproved the plan.

The extension is under the control of the military and the city jointly, and has been set aside as a drill ground.

Letters left by the girl, who came here recently from Statesboro, indicate that she contemplated the deed for days before the actual attempt was made.

Savannah to Ask Civil Service Law

Police and Fire Departments To Be Put Under Regulations—Efficiency Tests Are Planned.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Alderman George B. Elton's civil service bill will be introduced in the Legislature during the present session.

The special committee appointed by the Mayor to investigate the civil service regulations in other cities has completed its work and recommended the introduction of the bill at the present session. The measure will be immediately advertised for the specified period.

If the bill passes, the Mayor will be authorized to appoint a special committee of three, to be known as the Civil Service Commisson, this commission to have entire charge of the administration of the civil service law in the city. The bill provides that the police and fire departments be placed under civil service, the idea being to divorce these departments from politics.

The bill provides for efficiency tests for the members of the police and fire departments. The selection of appointees will be governed by their moral, mental and physical fitness, and their tenure of office will not depend on the vagaries of politics. They would not be subject to removal unless it were proved that they had been guilty of misconduct or that they were otherwise unfit for their positions.

Whether the bill will pass the Legislature is a question. Its passage will be determined largely by the attitude of the Chatham County Representatives toward it. If a majority of the legislators from this county agree it is a good measure, it probably will go through, but if there is a difference of opinion among the legislators, its defeat is pretty well assured.

LIARS' CONTEST ENDS IN TIE, ANOTHER IS TO BE HELD

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Because three well-known citizens tied for first place in the liars' convention just held in Waycross, it has been decided to hold a second convention to break the tie. The Moose Club is responsible for the inauguration of the novel convention and has decided to present an additional prize to the winner in the next.

City Officials Will Take Turn as Mayor

Savannah Executive Now Plans Regular Daily Period for Conferring With City Employees.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Hereafter city officials will be shown no favoritism when they call on Mayor Richard J. Davant on city business. They will have to take their chances along with everybody else. If one of the humblest citizens happens to get into the Mayor's reception room first the city official will have to wait his turn.

Mayor Davant has given his secretary instructions to this effect, and they will have to stand until a system of office hours which the Mayor has in mind can be put into effect.

It is the Mayor's plan to set aside a certain hour each day for interviews with city officials on city business. This hour will be made known to the people, and callers other than city officials will not be allowed to see the Mayor during that period. Another hour—or two, if necessary—will be set aside for the public.

At present there is no system of this sort at the City Hall, and the callers see the Mayor whenever their time comes. Heretofore city officials have been given precedence over all others irrespective of the time they arrived or how many people are ahead of them.

It has been the case that a city official was admitted to the Mayor the moment he arrived at the office, no matter if a dozen or so people had been waiting for some time for an interview.

JURY BELIEVES BULLARD TO BE SPAIN'S SLAYER

Investigation of Death of Eccentric and Wealthy Farmer Ends in Coroner's Verdict.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—The Clinch County Coroner's Jury investigating the mysterious murder of Mack Spain, an eccentric and wealthy farmer, has returned a verdict accusing Tom Bullard, a white man just entering the twenties.

Bullard is the man who found Spain's body, or rather informed searchers of the place where the body could be found. His part in the search for the body is one thing that has turned suspicion to him, as it is alleged he told members of the searching party Spain's body was on the edge of a pond and could be seen easily. When found the body was in a location that made it impossible for any one to see it from the place Bullard said he was when he first discovered the farmer's remains.

At least one more white man, and officers are inclined to believe a third, may become implicated. Bullard has steadfastly refused to make any statement beyond saying that he knows nothing of how Spain was killed.

Another arrest may be made within a few days. Both men suspected of knowing something of the death and the robbery have been found and it is declared will not be able to get away. Sheriff Lee, of Clinch, has been in Waycross working on a clew that he found near Spain's home and this, it is said, will fix the responsibility for the murder beyond any doubt. No one has been able to ascertain how much was taken from Spain, nor where it was put. Bullard has told officers nothing that will aid them in this respect.

MOULTRIE, July 19.—R. B. Vick has a unique plan for defeating the evil intentions of chicken thieves, his once flourishing flock having fallen into their hands until now he has but one lone hen.

Vick is going to lay the cornerstone of a granite chicken coop in a few days. He hopes in this manner to foil marauders. He has posted at his front gate an invitation to all chicken thieves to be present at the ceremony and inspect the plans.

Every door and window will be double locked and barred and rigged with wires in such way that if one is touched an alarm will be sounded.

FARM UNION TO UNITE FORCES WITH TOILERS

Federation of Labor and Agricultural Organization to Co-operate Closely if Plans Mature.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Plans that are expected to aid the proposed consolidation of work of the American Federation of Labor and the Farmers' Union were discussed at length in Waycross to-day when a joint committee representing the trade unionists and the Ware County Farmers' Union held a conference.

S. B. Marks, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, and Robert Fechner, secretary, attended, as did President James Cowart, of the Ware County Farmers' Union.

It is not proposed that the National Farmers' Union and the American Federation of Labor shall affiliate and become one big organization. The movement seeks only a unity of purpose—close co-operation for mutual welfare.

Following the conference it was announced that a joint meeting of the State executive committees of the Farmers' Union and the Georgia Federation of Labor would be called. When this is done it is expected that the national organizations will adopt a similar plan for use in the entire country.

Worth $250,000 Now, Still 'Bucks' Wood

E. G. Kastenhuber's Only New Plans Are to Widen Scope of His Laboratory Work.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Finding himself in possession of cash and property worth a quarter of a million dollars has not caused Edwin G. Kastenhuber to change his way of living. If anything, he is working harder now than before. He can be found any morning just at daylight out in his backyard cutting wood. That's his first morning work at home and he refers to it as his "exercise."

Plans for more extensive laboratory work have been made by Mr. Kastenhuber and with the means at hand to carry them out, he expects in a short while to demonstrate some valuable formulae. One of his successes is a mixture of ordinary South Georgia sand with chemicals, forming a hard tile, colored in any way desired. Fancy bricks made by him have withstood all kinds of tests.

Discussing the new turn of events, Mr. Kastenhuber says he does not feel any different since getting $250,000.

"In my new laboratory I will have fitted up special quarters for students and will have a department open to the medical profession. The best time I can have is when I am working, and I am certainly not going to start loafing just because I am well fixed," he said.

Storm Does Damage In Moultrie Section

Naval Stores Operators and Farmers Suffer Loss From Wind, Rain and Hail.

MOULTRIE, July 19.—The terrific wind and electrical storm that swept over this section last night wrought considerable damage over a wide area.

At Omega, just north of here, several houses were unroofed, while three were blown to the ground, the inmates escaping death in a miraculous manner. Pine trees boxed for turpentine snapped in two and the loss to naval stores operators will amount to hundreds of dollars. In the eastern part of the county a torrential rain, accompanied by hail, devastated crops. In Moultrie lightning struck one house. The high wind blew over a church in the suburbs.

Girl Bride Sees Husband Convicted

R. L. English Is Found Guilty of Stealing Wire from Savannah Electric Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—With his pretty wife, not yet out of her teens, sitting in the courtroom, R. L. English has been tried and convicted in the City Court of the larceny of copper wire from the Savannah Electric Company. Mrs. English, hardly more than a girl, clad in a pink summer dress and wearing a big picture hat with a wreath of red roses, sat calmly through the trying ordeal. Mrs. English maintains that her husband is innocent of any intentional wrongdoing.

Indian Papoose Is Raised by Soldiers

Full-Blooded Modoc, Back at Old Home, Tells Romantic Story of Early Life.

KLAMATH FALLS, July 19.—Kit Carson, a full-blood Modoc, visited his native land a few days ago for the first time since his babyhood.

The story of the life of Carson is unique. In 1852 a detachment of Government troops was sent to the Klamath country to quiet reported uprisings among the Indians. A large band of Indians had established a village on the shore of the lake. When the Indians caught sight of the soldiers they made a hasty departure.

Kit Carson, who was then about a year old, was left behind by his frightened mother. It was difficult for the soldiers to determine what to do with the child. Finally a soldier named Woods asked that he be permitted to adopt the boy. He gave the little fellow the name of Kit Carson and found him a temporary home with a Spanish family at Yreka.

Police of Waycross For 'Slashed Skirt'

Men, Not Women, To Be Arrested if Latest Style Causes Too Much Excitement.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Wearers of the new style "slashed skirt" have nothing to fear in Waycross. The police will not arrest wearers of the new skirt, but will see that men do not let their curiosity make them obnoxious.

The first time a slashed skirt was seen here the wearer paraded up and down one of the city's main business streets and as long as she was on the street there was an unusual number of men found "strolling"—none of the strollers getting very far from the skirt. It is said that a number of women here have purchased the slashed skirts and after trying them on at home, have sewn up most of the slash or worn the skirt with a petticoat.

Second Regiment Gives Big Dance on Island Saturday Night—First Dress Parade.

ST .SIMONS, July 19.—Sunday will be a day of rest for the Second Georgia Regiment, and the men will be given a chance to get acquainted with the historic island. There will be nothing to do until the big dress parade até o'clock in the afternoon.

The first dress parade was held Saturday afternoon. The regimental dance was given on Saturday night, the Second Regiment Band furnishing the music. The boys turned out in force with their brass buttons, to the delight of the girls on the island. So far this has been the big event of the encampment. On Saturday the officer of the day was W. G. Fage, and officer of guard, J. J. West, both of Albany.

Dixon expressed gratification when the announcement was made that the club would not make an indorsement.

MELON SEASON OVER, BUYERS SEEN NO MORE

Jovial Solicitors Depart, Leaving Behind Much Cash—Larger Acreage for 1914 Certain.

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—The finish of the watermelon season in South Georgia is at hand and the face of the ubiquitous melon buyer will be seen no more in the land until another year rolls around.

These buyers are a jolly set and soon make themselves part of the life of a town, knowing everybody by name, rooting vociferously for the home ball team and becoming generally popular while sandwiching in a lot of business for their respective roads or houses.

The farmer who decided not to plant watermelons for shipment this year is regretful now, as the season has been the finest in years and the prices have kept up well through the whole season.

Charlie Aldag, of Pidcock, reports eight carloads shipped from five and a half acres of land, and there are others coming very nearly up to it. A number of farmers received as high as from $200 to $225 on special carloads. The results of the present season mean the biggest acreage in watermelons next year that has ever been known here.

Columbus Attaches Tardy Taxpayers

Residents Who Are Well-to-Do Refuse to Send Checks for Paving Assessments.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Following the instructions of Mayor Chappell, Marshal George J. Burrus, has issued attachments against a large number of Columbus property owners, because of failure to pay paving assessments.

The city has paving accounts amounting to more than $27,000. Many who are amply able to pay for some reason have refused.

CORDELE SWELTERS WHEN TEMPERATURE GOES TO 110

CORDELE, July 19.—Yesterday went on record as probably being the hottest day that has ever been felt in Cordele. The thermometer registered 105 in the shade and in the sun it reached 110 degrees. There was no wind stirring through most of the day, which caused the heat to reach an almost unbearable degree. When a breeze did stir the heat waves were so intense that they were almost scorching in their effect.

TWO-SESSION SCHOOL PLAN TO STICK AT THOMASVILLE

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—To stick to two sessions a day in the public schools here for at least another term was the decision of the Thomasville Board of Education at its meeting this week. A petition signed by several hundred of the patrons of the school was presented asking that it restore the old one-session rule, but, after considering the matter, the majority of the board voted to let the present rule continue.

A. P. A. HOLDS SECRET MEETING AT CORDELE

CORDELE, July 19.—A meeting of the members of the American Protective Association of Cordele was held last night, at which time it is thought that permanent organization was effected. However, as the political body held the meeting behind closed doors, none of the details acted upon by the gathering became definitely known outside of the members.

NEGRO AT THOMASVILLE COMMITTED SUICIDE

THOMASVILLE, July 19—With a pistol in his hand, his thumb on the trigger and a bullet hole in the center of his forehead, Jack Lofton, a negro section hand on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, was found dead locked in his house. It is an unusual thing for a negro to commit suicide. This is the second case known here among the members of that race.

OVERCOME BY HEAT AT ICE PLANT IN CORDELE

TRAVELING WATER WAGON IS PROVIDED FOR HORSES

BOSTON, July 19.—A traveling water cart from which horses may be refreshed has been placed in commission in Boston's streets by the S. P. C. A.

For years the society has been furnishing water from hydrant stations, but recently there have been many requests for a watering place in sections of the city where it would be impractical to open hydrants. Hence the advent of the water cart.

For social news of the South see page 10 this section and the society section.

Court Orders Sale Of Property Halted

Fourth National of Columbus Gets Injunction to Prevent Debtor Transferring Holdings.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Judge Z. A. Littlejohn, of Americus, who heard the argument in the petition of the Fourth National Bank of this city, against Leo Lowenherz and H. M. Mooty, in which the bank was seeking to enjoin them from disposing of property made over by Mooty to Lowenherz, has handed down his decision, in which he enjoins Lowenherz from disposing of the property without first giving bond to the amount of the sale of the property, until after a final settlement of the case in the courts.

There is $13,000 involved, over which Mooty transferred to Lowenherz last February in settlement of a claim the latter held against the former. At the time the property transfer was made Mooty owed the bank something like $1,500 and had no other property on which the bank could obtain its money. Lowenherz is president of one of the largest dry goods establishments in West Georgia and Mooty is his former bookkeeper.

OLD COLUMBUS STANDPIPE NOW IS BEING DESTROYED

COLUMBUS, July 19.—An old Columbus landmark is passing away with the removal of the standpipe on Upper Broad street, which was erected during the year 1888, when Cliff B. Grimes was Mayor.

The standpipe when torn down will be rebuilt on Wynn's Hill, which is one of the highest points about the city and the Columbus Water Supply Company will extend its mains from North Highlands, where a new settling basin will be built to the standpipe, a distance of three miles.

SUES STREET RAILROAD FOR $10,000 DAMAGES

COLUMBUS, July 19.—A suit for $10,000 has been filed against the Columbus Railroad Company by John H. Newsome, who alleges that on February 22 he was permanently injured, when a car of the defendant company struck a negro's horse and knocked it against him. The negro, whose horse was struck by the car, does not figure in the suit, as he has never filed any claim against the street railway company and his name is not known.

COLUMBUS INVESTIGATING DROWNING IN RESERVOIR

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The city of Columbus has started an investigation of the report that a man named Hamilton, who was recently reported drowned in Holland Creek, was really drowned in the reservoir from which Columbus gets a part of its water suply. In fact it is acknowledged that the man was really drowned in the reservoir, but that he was gotten out before the water was contaminated.

Power Company May Use Tallulah 'Juice'

Incorporators of Columbus Concern Silent and Rumor Is Busy as to Their Aims.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Edward W. Swift, J. P. Illges, J. P. Kyle, Clifford J. Swift, John T. Davis, Jr., J. P. Golden, T. E. Golden, O. C. Bulloch, E. J. Rankin, John A. Rankin, E. P. Dismukes and Harry L. Williams have filed a petition for a charter for the Muscogee Light and Power Company.

The capital stock will be $50,000 paid in, but the incorporators ask for the privilege of increasing its capital to $1,000,000 by a majority vote from time to time. Much speculation is rife as to the intentions of promoters, but they refuse to talk.

It is the opinion of many that they propose to establish a power company in this city and take their current from the Georgia Power Company's plant at Tallulah Falls. The proposed company announces its intention of furnishing current for lighting, heating, operating electric cars and to conduct a business similar to other corporations of like character.

Woman Sues to Save Parrot From Cursing

Tells Court That Bird Is Under Baneful Influences Now as Property of Saloon Man.

ALTON, ILL., July 19.—Mrs. Geneva Littlehage has applied to Justice Daniel Gorman for a replevin writ to obtain possession of a parrot to save him from the baneful influences of a saloon.

"The bird never swore once in his life, and I can't bear the thought of his learning to curse," she told the Justice. "You ought to help along the cause by not charging me anything for the papers."

Mrs. Littlehage said while coming from Kansas City to Alton she employed a porter to carry the cage. She said he ran off with the parrot and when she next heard of it the bird had been sold to a saloon man for $10. The proprietor of the saloon refused, it is said, to give it to the owner.

Concrete Patch Put On River's Bottom

Engineers Employ Novel Method of Keeping Texas Stream From Habit of Losing Itself.

MARTINDALE, TEXAS, July 19.—It has been found necessary to put another patch on the bed of the Blanco River. This stream has a remarkable way of losing itself, and in order to restore it to its surface channel a concrete patch has been placed upon the holes through which it disappears.

For many years it has been emptying portions of its flow into small holes in its bed, but it was not until about a year ago that the entire bottom, so to speak, dropped out at a point near San Marcos. In one night the river below that point went dry. It had had a width of nearly 200 feet and was flowing a strong current until the sudden disappearance of the water.

PLAN BIG FETE WHEN CANAL IS READY FOR USE

Flotilla to Make Trip From Columbus Down Chattahoochee to St. Andrew's Bay.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—For the purpose of celebrating the opening of the St. Andrews Bay Canal in an appropriate manner next fall, the Columbus Board of Trade will take steps at once to memorialize Congress to assist. The Navy Department will be asked to send warships to St. Andrews Bay, and men of national fame will be invited to make addresses at the various points along the river and canal where stops are made.

The plan is to begin at Columbus and have a flotilla travel down the Chattahoochee River, giving a whole week over to the ceremonies, which will be elaborate. South Georgia, South Alabama and West Florida are much interested in the scheme.

It is expected that there will be several hundred persons who will make the trip down the river to St. Andrews Bay.

Noble Ex-Convict Becomes Minister

Leonard Mordaunt Runs Gamut of Life From British Society to California Prison.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Leonard Mordaunt, ex-convict, scion of a noble English family, and better known in the role of a prison-reform worker, was ordained to the ministry of the Free Methodist Church by Bishops Jones and Sellew at the close of the annual conference which has been going on in the secluded aisles of Mineral Park.

During twenty years he has ranged from the welcome member of exclusive circles of European society to the lowest grade of convict. He became a convert and decided to dedicate the remaining years of his existence to the service of God and humanity.

Minnesota Seeks Elk for Big Preserve

Section Is Natural Home of Animal, and State Asks Herd From Yellowstone.

ST. PAUL, July 19.—Fifty elk from the Yellowstone National Park, if they can be obtained, will be turned loose in Minnesota in the Superior forest and game reserve, which lies along the Canadian boundary line north of Lake Superior.

The territory is the natural home of the elk, and together with the adjoining national reserve covers more than 1,000,000 acres. There are no elk in either reserve now. It is estimated that the annual increase in the herd will be 50 per cent. This is the increase noted in the Yellowstone Park.

Bold Amazon Shoves Auto Out of Her Way

Worcester, Mass., Woman Merely Bruises Her Finger When She Pushes Car from Path.

WORCESTER, MASS., July 19.—Agnes Olsen, 30, known far and wide as "the Amazon," is none the worse today, save for a sore finger, as a result of her stopping a touring car on Main street, and pushing it back out of her way. The machine was unharmed.

Walter Shea, chauffeur of the touring car, was startled to see a woman walk in front of the machine as he was passing City Hall. His horror turned to amazement when she turned as he ground on his brakes, calmly grasped the car by the hood, and not only stopped its menacing approach, but pushed it back a foot.

Race Restrictions In Hotels Illegal

New York Attorney General Writes Opinion That They Violate New Civil Rights Bill.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 19.—There must be no discrimination because of race, creed or color at any public resort, place of amusement or of public accommodation, under the amended civil rights law which takes effect September 1, 1913.

The attention of Attorney General Carmody has been called to the fact that circulars are being issued by some health resorts in the State, in which is the announcement that the places are not open to certain races.

In a statement to-day Mr. Carmody reviews the statute and declares that such notices will be prohibited.

CHILDREN'S BUREAU WANTS CITIES TO CARE FOR BABIES

ROCKFORD, ILL., July 19.—Miss Julia C. Lathrop, head of the National Children's Bureau, has returned to the home of her birth and childhood to espouse the cause of the nation's babies and to appeal to the executives of Illinois cities to join in the movement of a broadening municipal protection for child growth.

Miss Lathrop renewed her demand for a rigid birth registration law and referred to the progress being made in that direction.

SEEK FOR MOST STUPID MAN.

BERLIN, July 19.—A German paper has started a prize symposium on the question: "Who is the most stupid man in Berlin?"

Bridge Burns; Stops Traffic on A., B. & A.

Alapaha River Crossing Destroyed by Fire—Sparks From Locomotive Blamed for Blaze.

CORDELE, July 19.—The Alapaha River bridge on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlanta Railway, two miles south of Rebecca, was destroyed by fire yesterday about noon, temporarily putting at a standstill all freight traffic over the road between Cordele and Fitzgerald. It is thought that the fire caught from sparks from the engine of a northbound passenger train.

Until the bridge can be rebuilt, which will probably require a week, all passenger trains will be detoured between Cordele and Tifton over the Georgia Southern and Florida Railroad, and between Fitzgerald and Tifton over the Thomasville branch of the A., B. & A. road. Perishable freight also will be routed over these roads.

Hot Weather Causes Sabbath-Breaking

Ice Company Sets Aside Old Rule and Decides to Deliver to Customrs on Sunday.

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—The heat wave of the past week proved too much for the Sabbath-keeping rules of the Thomasville Ice Company and it has decided to go back to delivering ice to customers on that day.

For a year or two past no ice was delivered on Sunday anywhere in the city and those who wanted an extra quantity over the supply laid in on Saturday had to go or send to the factory for it. Many complaints have been sent in of late that the expense of buying a large quantity on Saturday to last over Sunday was too much for the ordinary citizen.

Wasp Sting Enables Cripple to Walk

Regains Use of Legs After 38 Years on Crutches When Insect Invades Bed.

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—Charles Wightman, deputy county clerk at Clayton, told a reporter how he had just been able to walk without crutches for the first time in 38 of the 42 years of his life. He fell when he was 4 and injured both legs permanently.

He said that a neighbor had told him a snake story just before he went to bed.

He thought how comfortable it was to live in a country where one could sleep in peace instead of in one of those countries where he had heard snakes sometimes creep in and share one's bed.

He thrust his right leg deeper under the covers. Then something that stung like a hot needle pierced his ankle. "I sprang out of bed and ran and stumbled twelve feet across the room," he said. "It was the first time I had taken so many steps unassisted since I was a baby."

"And was it really a snake?" he was asked. "No; it was a wasp." And he showed the ankle where the sting had swollen it.

Pawns Gold Teeth He Didn't Chew With

Kansan Says He Could Masticate on Other Side and Oakes Crowns to Loan Agent.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—"I don't need these teeth to chew with and they're loose, anyway," an old man said at the municipal pawnshop, pulling seven gold crowns out of his mouth and laying them on the counter.

"These teeth are just a losing investment as long as I do all my chewing on the other side, anyway. I might as well be getting something on them. Can you make me a loan?"

Ralph Perry, manager of the pawnshop, gave the man $1.75 on his gold bicuspids and molars.

"When the ones on the other side get loose, I'll be back after these," the man promised. "My dentist said there was gold enough in the bunch so he could trade me a set of false teeth for 'em as soon as the crowns all wore out and got loose."

Wagons Must Have Lights at Both Ends

Washington State Will Enforce Strict Vehicle Law—All Classes Affected.

SEATTLE, July 19.—On and after August 1 every vehicle in this State must be provided with both rear and front lights in case night travel is necessary. Automobiles, wagons, buggies and cycles must carry lights so that travelers in front or behind may see.

Farmers as well as city residents are affected, and the old familiar farm wagon will be altered by a lantern hung from the rear axle and a spotlight fastened to the spring seat. The law was necessary because of the increasing traffic at night through sections where roads are narrow and grades dangerous.

500 FARMERS AT COLLEGE TO HEAR SOIL LECTURE

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., July 19.—Kankakee farmers, 500 strong, visited the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois. Professor J. C. Coller, "soil director" for the county, was in charge of the excursion, which came on a special train.

Dr. C. G. Hopkins lectured on soil and fertility, and afterward the university farm was inspected. Eighty women in the party inspected the domestic science department. Luncheon was served by "co-eds."

FIGHT ASSURED OVER LOCATION FOR HOSPITAL

Columbus Owns Two Lots—Others Offered at High Price. Present Site Undesirable.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Now that the hospital bond issue has been carried, and the city when it sells its $60,000 worth of bonds will be in a position to erect a first-class hospital, a fair-sized row is in sight over the location.

As usual, there are a number of sites offered, at prices above the average. The city owns one or two lots that are available in addition to the one where the present hospital stands.

The location of the present hospital is just about as uninviting as it would be possible to find, there being railroad yards, roundhouse and shops on the south, a sash and door plant on the east, railroad tracks on the west and a tombstone and marble works plant and a cemetery on the north.

Engineer Races His Train Past Flames

Row of Houses and 100-Cord Stack of Wood Beside Track Are Burned.

CORDELE, July 19.—Passengers on an Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic train had an exciting experience yesterday afternoon when the train came upon a fire very close to the tracks in the vicinity of Hatley, in which more than 100 cords of wood and several small houses were destroyed.

In order to pass the fire with safety, the engineer was obliged to open the throttle and put his engine to the fastest speed. All of the passengers went through the experience safely, though the heat from the fire was so intense that some of them were almost suffocated. The wood had been stacked alongside the track for shipment. How the fire originated was not learned.

Seaboard to Make Division at Cordele

All Developments Point to Plan for Increasing Importance of Crisp Metropolis.

CORDELE, July 19.—The Seaboard Air Line is considering establishing relay shops in Cordele, it seems, for the road has concluded to make this point the passenger terminal for the Savannah-Montgomery division.

Railroad men say they have seen orders to different passenger trainmen that two months after July 1 they would be required to take up their runs for both directions at this point. Another fact that seems to give backing to the report is that recent inquiries have been made by conductors and engineers, seeking to secure residences here. More than 50 new citizens would be brought to Cordele by the change. The present passenger terminal is at Americus.

EXPRESS AGENT AND CASH MISSING FROM WARWICK

CORDELE, July 19.—S. J. Smith, an employee of the Southern Express Company, acting as temporary agent at Warwick, between Cordele and Albany, on the Georgia Southwestern and Gulf Railway, during a vacation of the regular agent, disappeared last night, and, it is said, took all the funds on hand. It is reported that he came to Cordele, but officers here failed to locate him.

Brooks County Strip Would Be in Lowndes

Movement Started to Have Bill Introduced in Legislature to Have Transfer Made.

VALDOSTA, July 19.—A movement has been started here to transfer a strip of territory on the southern border of Brooks County to Lowndes County, and the Representatives in the Legislature will be asked to introduce a bill to that effect.

The territory affected lies along the Willacoochee River, remote from the county seat of Brooks County, and it is claimed that the people living in that section are anxious to be placed in Lowndes County.

The National Highway passes through athe stretch of territory, but it is understood that the County Commissioners of Brooks County have refused to maintain the highway or do any work whatever on it.

Business men in this city recently subscribed nearly $1,000 to be expended on the highway through the strip mentioned. Brooks County refused to do anything whatever toward building and maintaining the road.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The movement instituted by the D. A. R.'s in Columbus to bring the ashes of Former Governor John Clarke of Georgia from St. Andrews Bay, Fla., where they are buried, is well under way.

RAILROAD WILL FIGHT PAVING OF VALDOSTA LAND

Atlantic Coast Line Will Test Right of City to Assess It for Work.

VALDOSTA, July 19.—The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company today notified the Mayor and Council of Valdosta that it will not consent to the paving of Savannah avenue and requesting the city to have the brick which are piled along the avenue removed from its property.

The action of the road brings to a head the differences between the city and the road affecting the ownership of the thoroughfare.

It is understood that the city will pave the street and levy the assessments for the work as they are made against other property owners. The railroad is expected to begin legal action to prevent this, and the ownership of the property will be settled by the courts.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Human System Poisons Itself

OtherwiseMost of UsWould Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Take NUXCARA

3 Times a Day—

One-half hour before each meal. Then you can eat three nourishing meals each day without discomfort. Your appetite will respond to the improved condition of your digestive system. Your health will be assured.

Nuxcara is a guaranteed remedy for the treatment of the membranes of the stomach and intestines. It is not a digestive agent, but a certain and positive cure for indigestion and dyspepsia.

Prominent Citizen Indorses NUXCARA

Mr. J. W. Brooks, traveling representative of The Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, says: "For two years I have carried in my grip a bottle of Nuxcara, and would not think of going out on the road without it. I consider it the most wonderful discovery in medicine. The number of people who suffer with indigestion and dyspepsia, the terrible distress they suffer, no one knows but those who have had experience with it. When one remedy after another fails, when digestive agents seem to aggravate it. In the face of all this, Nuxcara cures in every case—truly it is a wonderful remedy."

ASK YOUR DRUGGIST

Nuxcara promotes the secretion of natural digestive fluids, restores and reduces the inflamed membranes. Proper assimilation is re-established. Nutrition is improved. Hence, Nuxcara increases vitality.

COLUMBUS MILL SCHOOL HELD AS MODEL BY U. S.

How Georgia City Is Caring for Cotton Factory Children Told in Government Pamphlet.

How Columbus is caring for the education of the boys and girls of its cotton mills is the story embodied in a pamphlet published by the United States Department of Education, copies of which were circulated in Atlanta yesterday.

How the boys and girls of the mills themselves work against going to school, rendering doubly hard the problem before the public, is a pitiful note of the story.

They call their school in Columbus the "dinner toters' school," because even during their school days they must work, taking hot lunches to their parents, brothers, sisters, and others who work in the mills.

Must Take Parents' Lunch.

The pamphlet tells of this custom, revealing something of the life of the cotton mill child. It says:

"The long intermission in the middle of the day is necessary that the children may take the lunches to the mills. Many of the mills are some distance from the school—some more than a mile away. Most of the children, therefore, walk more than two miles during the noon hour. Besides, they are compelled to wait 20 or 30 minutes for the operatives to eat their dinners before taking the baskets back.

"Some children earn several dollars each week by carrying such baskets to mill operatives. The price usually paid for taking lunch to one person for a week is 25 cents, and children often take lunches to several persons."

The booklet was prepared by Roland B. Daniel, and was published by the Department of Education as the description of an admirable system. It deals not only with the mill children, but with the boys and girls who are more fortunate, showing how the Columbus scheme of education is variable, being adapted to meet the demands that come with a mixed population so as to care alike for the two classes. P. P. Claxton, Federal Commissioner of Education, says in the foreword to the book:

"Columbus was one of the first of this country's cities to work out certain phases of this problem of adaptation."

The Columbus schools effect industrial training for all children, but a training varied according to the class from which the children come.

Call of Mills Strong.

The writer, Mr. Hill, laments the fact that "the call of the mills is strong."

"While the prescribed course for the mill children contemplates seven years, few continue after the fifth or sixth year," he wrote. "Not more than 1 per cent finish this school and pursue their studies further."

In all lines of work, academic and industrial, the aim of the school for mill operatives is to better living conditions a little among the people for whom it was organized. That is the only hope. In the beginning the advocates of this type of school thought that many of the mill children might be induced to continue in school and do more advanced work, especially along vocational lines. In this respect the school has been a disappointment to some.

"We are seldom able to induce pupils to finish even the limited course offered in this school," writes Mr. Daniel. "Our best hope is that we may better living conditions a little."

Toward the end, the school has been made a sort of social center. The school is in session the entire year around, and pupils are promoted quarterly, that the children will not drift away, as it is feared they would surely do in the case of a three months' vacation. Teachers do social work, visiting the sick, distributing certain charity, obtaining means of operation for the physically defective, arranging for social evenings, fostering organizations among the older people, and dealing in like activities.

Summing up the work of the school, the writer says:

"While this school has done good work and its benefits have been felt, we are sure the weakest point in it is not being able to hold the children long enough to receive its full benefits. An enforced attendance law would aid very materially in this respect."

Industrial Work Taught.

Along with "the three R's," the mill children are trained in industrial branches, being taught woodworking and gardening. The girls are given work in basket-making, sewing, cooking, poultry-raising and gardening.

In its scheme of adaptation, the city has an altogether different school for other children. The regular grade work is done, and in the traditional high school a year and a half of industrial work, manual training for the boys and domestic science for the girls, is given.

Another variation comes when the curriculum of the negro schools are worked out. There is industrial education for negroes in the public school, but different from that supplied the white children. The Columbus method is altogether one of adaptation.

The difference lies in the fact that the negroes receive more of the training, going into more branches of manual labor, and taking it throughout the school course. Almost every branch of work with the hands is offered them. Of this work the booklet says:

"Pupils who remain in the schools long enough to complete the course receive in compensation for their labor upon leaving school about twice what they would receive for unskilled labor such as they would be able to render without such training. It is often the case that one of these boys is able to earn $2 a day at the age of 17 when his father, without such preparation, receives $1.25 for unskilled labor.

High School in Scheme.

The book, being altogether a treatise on industrial education in Columbus, is given over largely to a description of the courses in the Columbus Industrial High School, the pride of the city's scheme of education. The school, besides its academic work, has vocational courses, including home economics, dressmaking and millinery, mechanic arts, textile arts, and a business course.

This industrial high school is separate and distinct from the conventional academic high school. It is merely another phase of the Columbus scheme of adaptation of education to varied needs and to varied classes.

Pony Contestants in Home Stretch

Fine Progress Made in Last Days

Winners of Race Will Be Announced in Few Days After Battle Closes July 31.

Great progress has been made by the contestants who are striving for The Georgian and American ponies, as the standings published to-day demonstrate. Nearly all the contestants who are crowding toward the front have more than 100,000 votes, but in the ten days remaining these figures, in all probability, will be doubled and trebled.

This is in spite of the fact that the coupons have been discontinued. Gains from now on will represent simply subscriptions obtained. The contestants agree unanimously that this is perfectly fair. A coupon-clipping contest is no contest at all, except as it represents the ability to build up a system of collecting the slips from friends in the neighborhood. A subscription-getting contest, on the other hand, tests the mettle of every contestant to the full, and the best will win.

Will Announce Winners Soon.

Besides, by discontinuing the coupons, it will be possible to announce the winners in the contest probably August 3, three days after the contest closes, on the night of July 31.

If coupons still were being voted, it would take two weeks or more for all of them to come in, and knowledge of the result would be delayed that long.

The bonus offer, awarding 20,000, 12,500 and 6,000 votes for clubs of $35, $25 and $15, respectively, closed Saturday night, and with a large number of clubs turned in. It was a laggard contestant, indeed, who did not appear yesterday with at least a $35 club, and some of the most active had two and three clubs.

Even Chance in Country.

Contestants in the country, it is supposed, did as well, but subscriptions arriving in Monday's mails will be credited on the club offer for these out-of-town boys and girls. This is to give them an even chance with their city cousins.

Probably another small bonus will be offered for the closing weeks of the contest. It will be nothing like those which have been given so far—not nearly so attractive, but still worth winning.

Within a few days the thirteen additional ponies needed to make up the complete lot of twenty-two will be on hand. They are being collected now from the leading breeders of this sort of fancy stock and will be brought to Atlanta before the contest closes.

Maurice Means, of Meansville, is shown at the top, while below is Miss Helen Brantley, of No. 31 E. Alexander Street. Both are way up in the race for the prize Shetlands.

Squaws Lay Ties As Bucks Play Poker

Desert Section Hand Boss Returns to Find Piute Women Doing Construction Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Piute Indians as substitutes for Mexican section hands were tried out in the Nevada desert last week. The Mexicans were deemed unsatisfactory because they would drop their tools and rest the instant the "boss" got far enough away so that he could not hit them with a shovel handle.

With the Indians on the job, however, the work went along just the same, boss or no boss.

Nevertheless the Mexicans are again on the pay roll and the Indians are taking their traditional ease.

After glowingly watching five days of splendid work by his Piute bucks the section boss left them the other day. Returning 24 hours later he found the suffragette members of the Piute tribe doing the work on the railroad, while the bucks were gathered in a poker game at one side of the track.

Tight Shoes Land Thief Behind Bars

Burglar in Jewelry Store Kicks Heels to Relieve Pressure and Alarms Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Frank Davies, who at times also gives his name as John Simpson and Joe Allen, became irritated last night while scooping unset diamonds in his hat in a dark room because the toes of his new shoes were too narrow.

Intending to relieve the squeeze, he kicked toward the floor with his heel, but miscalculated and drove his foot through a glass show case. A policeman in a saloon on the floor below heard the noise and arrested Davies, who says he is an ex-convict and that he arrived here from Los Angeles at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The diamonds were claimed to-day by the jewelers from whom they were taken.

Must Stay Maids to Get Mother's Estate

Daughters of Ohio Woman Are Beneficiaries Under Will Which Prohibits Their Marriage.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, July 19. One of the most remarkable wills ever admitted to probate in this county was made by Jane Lake, late of Richwood, who left considerable property to her three daughters, Linie, Nora and Ida.

The provisions are that the estate shall be equally divided among the three daughters, on the condition that none of them will marry. If one of them marries, her share of the estate goes to the two remaining single. If all three should marry, the entire estate is to go to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Moving Picture Gives Mother Clew to Girl

Missing Daughter Is Recognized on Screen and Police Are Following Up Trace.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The "movies" may be instrumental in restoring Olga Ellis, 5, to the mother from whom she was taken in Revere, Mass., and brought to California.

For six months the police have sought John Ellis, of Revere, Mass., who is said to have left that city with his daughter.

A school-teacher of Berkeley, Cal., became interested in the case and gave a picture of the child and the mother's address to a moving picture agency.

Mrs. Myrtle Palmer, housekeeper in a hotel here, saw the mother's appeal at a moving picture theater recently and recognized the little girl as one who had stayed at the hotel with her father for several weeks. He had registered, she said, as D. Delisle, and had gone to Eureka, Cal.

Mrs. Palmer notified the police and search for the man and child has been instituted in Eureka.

Women Convict Her For Slapping Child

First Feminine Jury in Sonoma County, California, Returns Verdict of Guilty of Assault.

PETALUMA, COLO., July 19.—A jury of twelve women convicted a woman, Mrs. W. S. Waldorf, upon a charge of battery here to-day. This is the first jury of women that ever tried a case in Sonoma County. Mrs. Waldorf was accused of having slapped a neighbor's children. The jury was out less than an hour.

HORSE FALLS IN FISSURE IN SINKING KANSAS FARM

HOISINGTON, KANS., July 19.—Fissures varying from a few inches to a foot and a half in width and extending several feet into the ground have opened up in L. E. Baker's alfalfa field near this city and are causing a great deal of speculation.

There have been no indications of an earthquake of any sort, but the ground seems to be sinking away. The fissures were discovered when Baker missed one of his horses and found it imprisoned in a fissure.

ONLY AMERICAN KING YEARNS TO QUIT HIS THRONE

All of Former Broker's Thirty Wives Want English Gowns. Jealousy Spreads.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King, practically has made up his mind to renounce his throne. He is King of the Island of Arorae, one of the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands. Until 1909 he was a New York curb broker. The insistence of his many wives for English gowns and his loneliness have led to the determination to give up his kingly honors. He tells of his intentions in a letter just received by a friend in this city.

The career of Everett has been unusual. In 1909, when he was in business in this city, he was thought to be well to do. He met reverses, however, in Wall Street, and in the latter part of 1909 disappeared, without leaving a word of farewell. Nothing was heard from him until in 1911, in a remarkable letter, he told of being made the King of Arorae, in the South Sea Islands. He had landed, he said, on one of the small islands, and had gone from there to other islands of the Gilbert group. Finally he reached Arorae. It was a phonograph which he had in his possession that eventually won for him his throne. The King at that time of the island took a great fancy to the phonograph.

Phonograph Wins Kingdom.

By the hour Everett, according to his own account, entertained the monarch, constantly growing in his graces. Finally the old King adopted Everett, and when he died Everett succeeded to the throne. According to the custom of the island, Everett took a good many wives.

Everett took a very lively interest in the affairs of the island. He increased its business with traders. The principal product of the island is copra, or dried cocoanut meat. The letter, in part, reads:

"At the present time the King's job is about the last thing to be desired, and do not be surprised if I walk in on you some day in the near future. I am about tired of the job.

"For some time past conditions here have steadily become worse. It started when my wives, of whom there are about 30, insisted on wearing English dresses. A trader who stopped here presented one of the natives with three English gowns in exchange for some copra. The native presented them to the King, and I in turn gave them to three of my wives. The natives have never worn any clothes to speak of. Imagine my surprise, then, when the three dresses became the center of a regular war among my wives.

"The three victorious wives managed to get them on somehow, and that settled it. Every one of them set up a kick for a dress, and they worried the life out of me. I was forced to get the gowns. The first trader that stopped at the island from Australia was commissioned to bring them back on the next trip, and in due course of time they arrived.

Jealousy Over English Gowns.

"The dresses were of all colors and sizes. Most of the people here are about the same stature, few being over four feet six or seven. Some of the dresses were too small, others too large, but they created a sensation. Dressed in those creations, with bare brown feet stepping proudly, my wives paraded up and down the island, causing every woman in the kingdom, young and old, to grow jealous.

"So far, half of the female population have been given the gowns and the other half are waiting eagerly. The worst part of it all is that the men are as enthusiastic over this new style of dress as the women, and my objections have not added to my popularity whatever. I am daily expecting the men to demand suits of flannel and silk shirts.

Affairs on a Business Basis.

"I have not done so badly here financially. I put the business of the island on a business basis soon after becoming King, and things have flourished.

"I don't know how the people here will take my departure. They may even try to prevent it, and I have been considering the best method to leave. I could probably get aboard one of the trading ships and get to Australia, after which it would be easy, of course, to get back to the United States."

Manchester, the Logical County Seat—County Will Have 10,000 Population; $1,750,000 Taxable Values; Area Over 222 Square Miles.

The people situated in the southeastern portion of Meriwether, northern portion of Talbot and northeastern portion of Harris Counties will petition the 1913 session of the Legislature to create a new county to be named Warner, in honor of the late Chief Justice Hiram Warner, the area of which will be 222 square miles, while the area of the old counties after the proposed county of Warner is created will not be materially reduced, but will leave them among the larger counties of Middle Georgia, and Meriwether will then contain 421 square miles; Harris, 465 square miles, and Talbot, 329 square miles. The territory to compose Warner County is inaccessible to either of the present county sites by railroads and in transacting legal business the citizens are required to go this distance by private conveyance over mountainous roads, which in rainy seasons are almost impassable; while a very large portion of the population has no means of conveyance and are forced to a great expense in reaching the present county sites.

Taxable Values of New County.

The proposed county of Warner will have taxable values of one and three-quarter million dollars. This will leave Meriwether taxable values of about twice the amount of Warner County; while Harris and Talbot, from which counties small values will be taken, will not be materially reduced, but have considerably more wealth than Warner and no incorporated town is to be taken from either Talbot or Harris and but a few miles of railroad.

The population of Warner County will be upward of 10,500, of which more than 2,000 live in Manchester, the proposed county seat. At least 5,000 of those living within the country territory closely adjoining Manchester have to travel 14 to 20 miles to their present respective county sites. Warner County would exceed in population 32 counties in the State.

Roads and Bridges.

Warner County as proposed will take from the three affected counties its proportion of roads and bridges as compared to its area and wealth, while the roads and bridges in this territory have received but little attention, as the taxes collected by the old counties have been spent on other roads and bridges nearer the present county sites, and other sections of the counties, since this territory occupies the "remote corners," consequently has had little influence in securing road improvements.

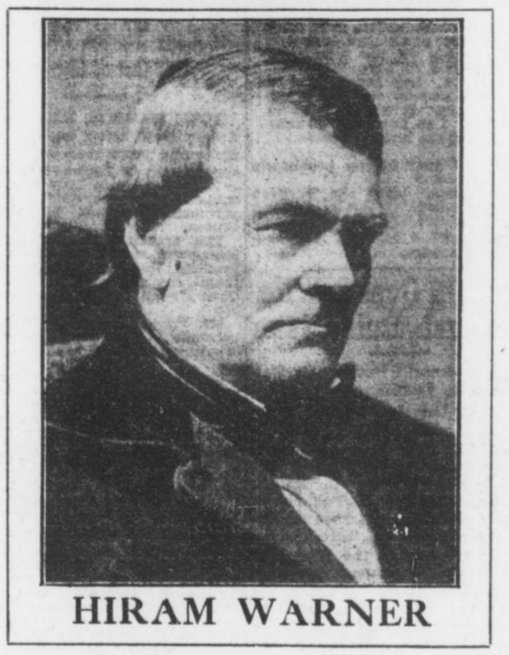
Warner County, as proposed will include Gill, Chalybeate, First, Raleigh, Bullochville and parts of the Third, Harris and lower Ninth Districts of Meriwether County; portions of Valley Plains District of Harris County and Flint Hill and parts of Pleasant Hill and Valley districts of Talbot County.

The distance from Manchester, the proposed county site of Warner County, to Greenville, the county site of Meriwether, over public roads is 18 miles; to Hamilton, the county site of Harris, 20 miles, and to Talbotton, the county site of Talbot, 20 miles. No citizen living in the proposed county would be required to travel farther than 12 miles to reach Manchester, the proposed county site.

Schedule of Trains.

No portion of Warner County at present is directly connected by rail with its respective county site. Those wishing to attend court by rail from Manchester and its vicinity must leave Manchester at 4 o'clock a. m., change at Durand and arrive in Greenville at 8 o'clock a. m., requiring a layover at Durand of about three hours. Returning, leave Greenville at 6 o'clock p. m., arriving at Manchester at 11:40 p. m., necessitating a layover at Durand of five hours, or about 20 hours to go a distance of 20 miles and return. This is the most convenient schedule.

The present counties are well provided with modern jails and courthouses.



HIRAM WARNER

Brief Sketch of Late Chief Justice HIRAM WARNER

Hiram Warner, for whom Warner County is to be named, was born at Williamsburg, Hampshire County, Mass., on October 29th, 1802. He sailed for Savannah when 19 years of age, but was shipwrecked off Cape Hatteras, and reached the Georgia port weeks later. He settled first at Sparta as a teacher. He studied law and was admitted to the bar at Knoxville, Crawford County, in 1824. He married there and had one child, a daughter, the mother of Associate Justice Hiram Warner Hill of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

He was a member of the Legislature 1828-31. He was elected judge of the Coweta Circuit of the Superior Court of Georgia in 1833. At that time there was no Supreme Court, and the Superior Court judges gathered in annual convention to discuss their decisions and establish uniformity of practice.

In 1845 the Supreme Court of Georgia was organized and with Joseph Henry Lumpkin and Eugenius A. Nesbit was elected to that high branch of the judiciary. He defeated Benjamin H. Hill for Congress in 1855; was renominated, but declined re-election. Nearly 60 years old when the war came, he was at home caring for his family, his only son-in-law being at the front. He was held by Wilson's raiders and actually hanged and left for dead because he did not tell where suspected gold was hidden.

Later he was appointed to the judgeship of Coweta Circuit by Governor Jenkins. He was named Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia in 1867 to succeed Chief Justice Lumpkin, deceased.

His decisions from the bench and his printed decisions upon the Supreme Court bench are classics in Georgia's judicial history and his decisions are leading ones in ruling on similar cases today.

Judge Warner was reared a Presbyterian. He never joined a religious denomination. He lived and died, however, a believer in the Bible, the truths of Christianity and the creed of that denomination to which his family belonged. It was his habit to keep upon the table in his bedroom to the last day of his life two books; one was Blackstone, and the other was the Bible. This Bible his mother gave him when he left home for his long journey. To this same Bible he turned for comfort and support when, 58 years afterward, an old and broken man, he entered the valley of the shadow.

It is this man whose memory is sought to be revered in the creation of the county which is to bear his name—Warner.

Little Territory From Three of the State's Largest Counties Will Give County—New County Has Railroads—Sentiment Favors It.

No county has ever been created in which the sentiment was stronger for a new county than Warner. The movement has been spontaneous in all sections and our petitions contain more than 95 per cent of the white electors in Warner County. The people realize the great inconvenience with which they are now burdened and have joined unanimously in the movement.

Situation of Warner.

The proposed county of Warner will include portions of Pine and Oak mountains. In recent years most of this section was considered of little value on account of its inaccessibility and the rough character of the country. Little money has been spent by the counties in developing this territory, and the roads, most of them crossing the mountains and ridges, are bad, and have received but little attention.

In 1906 the A., B. & A. railroad was built, traversing this section with its Birmingham and Atlanta lines merging at Manchester; since which time Manchester has grown to be a town of about 2,000 people, as a result of which the territory adjoining Manchester has developed very rapidly; approximately $2,000,000 having been spent in improvements and business naturally drifted in this direction. The people residing in this territory buy all their supplies and sell their produce at Manchester, Bullochville, Raleigh, Chalybeate and Shiloh. Nothing calls them out of the proposed county except court duty, and they are deprived of the privilege accorded the majority of our people in the state of transacting their business and attending court in the same day.

Demand of Modern Times.

In this day of modern methods, when man's greatest asset is his time, when all business has become greatly intensified and concentration and conservation are occupying the attention of all progressive, thinking people, all men must realize that to make a success out of any public institution its interest must be well guarded. In this connection, large counties can not receive their just consideration. It is out of the question for the county commissioners in the three counties affected to give the counties' business the attention which it deserves. The area is too large, the business too vast, the demands too great and the distance too far for the county authorities to attend to the business properly.

General Statements of Interest

Manchester, the proposed county site, contains one large cotton mill, railroad shops and division offices of the A., B. & A. R. R., one bank, 33 brick store buildings and 16 wooden store buildings, all of which are occupied by various lines of general merchandise; two moving picture theaters, one newspaper and printing office, three hotels, five churches, modern school system, municipal light plant, two livery and sale stables, two large builders' supply houses, fireproof warehouse and gin.

Bullochville has several large supply houses, one bank, guano factory, also the Tuscawilla, a magnificent three-story brick hotel with modern equipment throughout, the best equipped hotel in the State in a town many times its size. Near Bullochville is located the famous Warm Springs resort, which is too well known to be described.

Just above Bullochville is the thriving town of Raleigh, which controls all business within its territory.

South of Bullochville on the Southern Railroad is Shiloh, now located in Harris County, one of the best farming supply towns in the State.

East of Manchester on the A., B. & A. is located Chalybeate Springs, a resort famous since ante-bellum days. The water from these springs has been known throughout the State since Georgia's early history.

Just east of Chalybeate is the Tatum Iron Company's mines, which are now being successfully developed.

All facts stated herein are not exaggerated, but can be substantiated with unlimited amount of evidence.

GIRL PLAYS MAN AND WINS LOVE OF HATED RIVAL

Unique Vengeance Is Planned by Young Woman Whose Sweetheart Proved Faithless.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Jilted by her lover, Bessie McIntyre, of North Wheeling, a pretty 18-year-old girl, secured an odd but effective revenge on her rival, who "stole" her sweetheart and on the faithless lover at the same time.

June 25 Harry Pendleton, a well-known young business man of this city, informed Miss McIntyre that he could not see her again(as he had become engaged to another girl. By a dint of inquiry the jilted girl ascertained that the girl who had stolen her lover's affections was Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, Ohio, just across the river from this city. Securing permission from her parents, Miss McIntyre had her hair cut off, and donning one of her brother's suits, she visited Bridgeport and met Miss Allen.

It was a case of love at first sight—on the part of the Bridgeport girl. Miss McIntyre masquerading as "Lawrence Dessing," was a devoted lover, and every night found "Lawrence Dessing" at the home of Miss Aiken.

Last Sunday night while "Dessing" and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to call on her again. She then confessed her love to her companion, the pseudo "Dessing." Miss McIntyre, dressed in a gown of the latest mode last night met Miss Aiken in this city. Before Miss Aiken could speak the North Wheeling girl told her how she had revenged herself.

In a moment the girls were fighting and were separated by the police.

Willing To Marry But Not to Apologize

Man Sued for Breach of Promise Says Hill Wed But Refuses to Beg Forgiveness.

ATCHISON, KANS., July 19.—Mary Falk and William Burke were engaged to be married. The date had been set, the guests had assembled, and everything was in readiness, but Burke did not appear. Chagrined and heartbroken, Miss Falk engaged an attorney and sued Burke for $25,000 as balm for her wounded feelings.

"It was all a mistake," said Burke. "I wanted and still want to marry Miss Falk. I was under the impression that under the rules of the Catholic Church the ceremony had to be performed by the pastor of the bride's church. I couldn't find him in time to perform the ceremony and naturally supposed the wedding was off for the time being."

Miss Falk accepted the explanation, but she insisted that Burke must apologize for not appearing for the wedding. Burke, however, insisted that she must apologize for suing him.

Concussion of Brain Kills a Gigantic Frog

Oscar Siler went to Mich.
Thought he'd rest and catch some fish,
Pitched his tent on Fountain Lake—
Listen to this nature fake:

FOUNTAIN, MICH., July 19.—Oscar Siler, of Chicago, who has been fishing on the lake near here, claims to have killed the record frog. Said frog is said to weigh 6 pounds and to be 15 inches long. It will be sent to Chicago. The frog died of concussion of the brain. Thus—

"Kerplunk," croaked the prehistoric bullfrog.
"You're drunk," piped the monarch of the bog.
Whereupon Siler (who was sober) bounced a rock off the bullfrog's bean.

Aged Oil Queen, Wife Of Youth, Ruled Sane

Young Spendthrift Husband Is Welcome to Fortune, She Says, on Leaving Asylum.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 19.—The courts and her children can not separate Mrs. Cynthia C. Sparks, known as West Virginia's "oil queen," and her young husband, Fred Sparks, and she is again free, after having been incarcerated in the West Virginia Hospital for Insane for ten days.

Further, the superintendent and the members of the State Board of Control have placed beyond question her sanity after a close observation, while she was under their supervision.

Mrs. Sparks is going to join her 26-year-old husband, who, it is alleged by the woman's children by her first husband, was rapidly dissipating her fortune of $2,000,000 by his extravagance and riotious living.

The old woman declared to-day that her young husband was welcome to the half of her fortune which she retained after having signed over the half to him.

Miner Returns Rich To Find Wife Dead

Comes Back Home to Make Restitution for Having Deserted Her 20 Years Ago.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Wealthy and anxious to take back his wife, whom he deserted twenty years ago, Josiah Bronson, a modern Enoch Arden, found the old home in ruins and the wife dead. From the old-timers who had known him in the early days he learned that his wife, believing him dead, had married his twin brother.

Two children, he learned, were born of the marriage, and upon the death of the mother were sent to relatives in West Virginia.

Bronson declared he would care for the children. "I shall give them the best education money can buy," he said. "I deserted their mother when she was just a young woman, and now I want to atone for the cowardly act."

WRITERS MAKE BEST DIPLOMATS DECLARES PAGE

New Ambassador to Italy, Author of Many Stories, Leaves Himself Out of Discussion.

YORK HARBOR, ME., July 19.—Are authors better qualified to fill diplomatic posts than others? The appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy brings this subject to the fore, coupled with the appointments made by President Wilson.

The greatest diplomats America boasts were men of letters. Benjamin Franklin, John Hay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, William Dean Howell furnish a distinguished list.

Mr. Page, who is 60, is modesty personified. He has been reporter, lawyer, writer, and has succeeded in all.

Mr. Page asked if he could explain as an author what special qualifications a man of letters possesses to perform the duties of Ambassador, consented to speak, leaving his own case out of the discussion. Said he:

"A man of letters is better fitted to do anything better than anyone else. His work has broadened his horizon; if it hadn't we might as well do away with letters.

Must Know Problems.

"The author must necessarily be conversant with the economic and governmental problems of the day.

"I think the greatest good authors in general have alone is to interpret the spirit of the section about which they write. There can be no doubt there is a better feeling now between the North and the South than there was before the Spanish-American war. This, I believe, is because of writers.

"Every part of the world is being more properly set before another part by the authors.

"The President has had a thorough training. Besides the college education, he has had associations with the North and the South, and he is conversant with the economic and governmental problems. He is a man of strong character and has been deservedly selected by the people to hold their most important office.

"I met Walter Page prior to his departure for his London post and gave him a dinner. His whole heart was set upon the desire to 'make good.'"

Qualifications of Diplomat.

"What is your idea of the qualifications a good diplomat possesses?" he was asked.

"Devotion to his duty is perhaps the first and most important," he replied. "Then comes devotion to your country, application to your duty and a desire to bring your country and the country to which you have been sent closer together.

"Of course, since the cable came into use foreign posts are brought closer to the State Department at Washington, and it must be a great comfort to an Ambassador to feel that at any time he may seek aid from Washington.

"I believe Charles Francis Adams was the last foreign ambassador to be thrown upon his own resources, and that was because the cable was cut.

"Rome is indeed a charming post. I believe it is the most romantic city in the world. I am sure I shall like it."

BRYAN DODGES PAPER'S QUESTIONS

wrong. It is using the office for making money."

Senator Bristow said action would be had on his resolution. He said, too, that there would be quite a little discussion on the subject. It probably will be referred to a committee. Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, says it probably would be "handled in a routine way."

Mr. Bacon says he thought the resolution was introduced to bring about a discussion of the course of Mr. Bryan, and that remedial legislation was not demanded.

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend, of Michigan, holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the Government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Among those who talked were the following:

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts—A Cabinet member can live on $12,000 a year if he does not have large family expenses, and he can live comfortably and respectably.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania—Samuel J. Randall, one of the greatest of Democrats, served this country for a whole generation, living on a salary of $5,000 a year. I have always disapproved of the custom that has grown up resulting in the very considerable neglect of official duties on the part of public men in order that they may go on lecture circuits.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina—While Mr. Bryan's speaking tours will serve a good purpos in that he always preached true Democracy and patriotism and Christian living, he can never again appear as a knight errant of Democracy.

Representative Willis, of Ohio—I am opposed to a Government official capitalizing his job. The Secretaryship of State is a man's job. Mr. Bryan should stay here and attend to the work of his office. He has enough on his hands with the present critical situation in Mexico, the unsettled questions with Japan and the matter of the Panama Canal tolls. We members of Congress have to stick to our tasks.

Representative Miller, of Minnesota—Mr. Bryan is giving this country a remarkable exhibition in the difference between his preachings during the past seventeen years and his present practices.

Representative Kahn, of California—There are many able men in the employ of the Government who are prevented by law and the hours of service from increasing their incomes through additional employment.

Representative Payne, of New York—, have been able to live on my salary as a member of the House. I can not see why the Secretary of State is unable to live on his salary.

Towne, Bryan's Friend, Calls Step Unfortunate.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Secretary Bryan's determination to supplement his official salary of $12,000 by going on a six weeks' lecture tour has awakened severe criticism from the men who supported him when he first loomed on the political horizon.

Charles A. Towne, who was one of the speakers at the famous "Dollar Dinner" in April, 1899, organized to emphasize Bryan's Jeffersonian simplicity of tastes, discussed Mr. Bryan's new move reluctantly, as they are still close friends.

"I consider the Secretary's plan to continue his lecture tours while occupying the chief place in the President's Cabinet most unfortunate," said Mr. Towne. "These are days when great national issues must be decided, and when the Secretary of State is required to give every bit of time and energy in behalf of the nation. It is a time when men intrusted with the affairs of the Government must have their minds occupied with nothing else except the questions of state.

Explanation Only Makes It Worse, Says World.

(From The N. Y. World, July 16.)

It is with the most profound regret that we have to note the position into which the Secretary of State has drawn himself and the explanation now given which only makes it worse.

Whether Mr. Bryan can afford to take a prolonged vacation at just this critical time for the Administration and his own high office may be a question, but a minor one. Whether, under the frankly admitted circumstances of personal fortune, he can only afford a money-making vacation, must be something less than a question with the great masses of the people whose life he has lived in sympathy.

The real question is whether the Government for such a position as his may not justly claim an undivided service, and whether any other view is compatible with a worthy ambition. We have had men in high office who have sacrificed personal fortune to render such undivided service and could afford it. We have had many more men there who have done this and could not afford it.

We can not think of the President of the United States doing otherwise. We should not be able to think of any of his Cabinet doing otherwise.

Action Most Bizarre, Says Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, July 19.—Regarding Secretary Bryan's lecture tour, The Pall Mall Gazette to-night says:

"It is a singular paradox in a country where there is so much money in politics as in the United States that the chief member of the President's cabinet should find his official salary inadequate to support his existence.

"We can quite understand why $12,000 a year is not enough for the Secretary of State, considering the American scale of life, but one would have expected a man of Bryan's moral courage to call upon his country for a living wage, to which he is entitled, rather than to propose going on the stump as a lecturer, in the roles of a minister and a professional entertainer.

"They make a most bizarre combination to all British ways of thinking, and we shall be surprised if even American opinion reconciles itself to their incongruity."

MOTHER OF TEN SUES; WEDDED TWENTY-ONE YEARS

DAYTON, WYO., July 19.—After living with David Krouse Towns for 21 years and bearing ten children of which he is the father, Mrs. Martha Ellen Towns has brought suit for divorce, asserting that her husband unjustly accused her of infidelity and that he had attempted to secure her incarceration in the State Insane Asylum, although realizing that she was sane.

BRYAN OUGHT TO LIVE ON HIS PAY OR QUIT, SAY SENATORS

Explanation of Secretary of State More Amazing Than His Acts, Declares Bristow, Who Introduced Resolution to Investigate

Wilson's Premier Capitalizing His Position, Asserts Representative Willis—Much Work To Be Done in His Department.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the National Capital is that if Secretary Bryan can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Mr. Bryan to-day gave evidence of the fact that the country-wide criticism had got under his skin. That he was irritated and impatient and realized the "bad break" he has made was apparent to his subordinates throughout the day. Somewhat petulantly he declared that the press of the country might have assumed that "my lecture engagements are subject to cancellation."

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow Cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

Evades Paper's Questions.

The American to-day endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions and refused to discuss the subject of his official pronunciamento.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by The American:

"If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

"If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

"You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?"

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned to the questions. Later in the day he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Bristow, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan to stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, to-day came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secrttary Bryan's second statement has astounded me even more than his first one," said Mr. Bristow. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the Governmtnt service is amazing.

"Secretary Bryan says he has a right to use his vacation for lecturing if he sees fit. But he is to be away on one tour of six weeks, and there is no telling where his vacation will end.

Needed at His Post.

"Besides, since he has been Secretary of State he has been in Washington only about one-half the time so far. If ever there was a time when the Secretary of State was needed on the job it is now, when so many important questions are up for consideration. U. S. State Secrets 'Lifted' From Wire By Mexican Agents

Information Worth Thousands of Dollars Finds Its Way Into Possession of Huerta.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A copy of the official code of the State Department, containing information worth thousands of dollars to foreign governments, has fallen into the hands of the Mexican administration.

It is being used to further the ends of the Huerta regime, it was asserted here to-day.

For some months State Department officials have suspected that the Government telegrams from Mexico City have been tampered with, it is declared, but this was not considered important, as all the dispatches were in code, and, therefore, theoretically illegible.

About three weeks ago, however, Government officials here had their first inkling that the Mexicans were obtaining the gist of dispatches passing between the State Department and Ambassador Wilson.

The agents of the almost unknown "secret service" of the State Department were put on the trail and evidence was obtained that the Government dispatches had been "lifted" from the wires in Mexico and decoded, the information contained therein being transmitted to President Huerta and his Cabinet.

Girl Traps a Thief In Telephone Booth

Sets Shoulder Against Door and Holds Man Until Cries Bring Her Aid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Holding a thief trapped in a telephone booth, Miss Florence Rosenthal, cashier in Edward Feuhrer's drug store at No. 53 Second avenue, finally succeeded in delivering him to the police yesterday.

The captive, who said he was Alexander Moskowitz, 17 years old, was so long "telephoning" that Miss Rosenthal went to the booth to see if he was dead or alive. She saw him opening the money box with a screwdriver, she says. Screaming for her employer, she set her shoulder against the door, and the youth could not force it open. Moskowitz was held for trial.

Burleson Eats but Two Meals Each Day

Postmaster General Believes in and Practices "Early to Bed, Early to Rise" Theory.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Postmaster General Burleson believes thoroughly in the old adage, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." He practices this theory himself and in addition supplements it by a two-meal-a-day program.

His daily routine is as follows:

"I arise at 5 in the morning.

"Read the papers until 6.

"Breakfast.

"Go over papers and reports until 9.

"Work at the Postoffice Department until 5 in the afternoon without any lunch or lunch hour.

"Dinner at 6 to 7 o'clock.

"Eight o'clock—go to bed."

"Cooling Period" to Halt Divorce Evil

Pastor Suggests That Three Months Elapse Between Final Hearing and Decision of Court.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Speaking on "The Modern Problem of Marriage and Divorce," before the Central Conference of American Rabbis here to-day, the Rev. L. Leonard Levy, of Pittsburg, advocated a "cooling" period of three months from the time of the final hearing until the decision is announced as the solution of the problem of minimizing the divorce evil. "This cooling period," said the speaker, "would cover a time during which neither of the parties at interest could marry."

NEW YORK, July 19.—Earl Oscar Schenck, 24 years old, an actor, of No. 600 West 138th street, was married in the City Hall yesterday to his aunt, Marion Carr Schenck, twelve years his senior.

SHORTAGE HITS NATIONAL BANK AT LAFAYETTE

Comptroller of Currency Orders Institution Closed When Defalcation Is Discovered.

ARRESTS ARE LIKELY

Preliminary Examination Shows That It Has Been Looted of Not Less Than $30,000.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane today announced that the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., has been closed by National Bank Examiner Thomas C. Dunlap, with the authority of the board of directors, on account of a large shortage which makes the bank insolvent.

Mr. Kane says he has not received a detailed report of the condition of the bank. Mr. Dunlap has been appointed receiver.

"We do not know how big the defalcation may be," said Mr. Kane, "but our preliminary examination has shown that it is not less than $30,000. This shortage has occurred since May 23, when the bank was last examined. Suspicion on the part of officers of the bank several days ago that a shortage existed caused them to call in Examiner Dunlap. Discovery of the embbezzlement resulted.

"In his telegraphic advices to me Mr. Dunlap does not say to whom suspicion attaches. The last statement of the condition of the bank, issued on June 4, showed the bank to be in a proper state. The president of the bank is R. N. Dickerson, and S. A. Hunt, Jr., is cashier."

In a telegram from Mr. Dunlap Mr. Kane is advised that steps have been taken to make an arrest.

Depositors to Lose Little by Failure.

CHATTANOOGA, July 19.—Local bankers stated to-day that the liabilities of the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., which was announced to-day by Acting Comptroller of Currency Kane, at Washington, to have failed, were approximately $240,000, but that depositors would be paid in full, with but a slight loss to stockholders, as the assets would prove but slightly less.

An unsuccessful attempt was made this morning to obtain a schedule of the liabilities and assets of the institution. The officials are extremely reticent concerning the cause of the institution's embarrassment.

Aerial Ferry to Join Cities in California

Air Pilot Gets Permission to Install Aeroplane Service Between San Francisco and Oakland.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The first aerial ferry of the world will be in operation between San Francisco and Oakland in September. Permission was granted officially to-day by the Harbor Commission to John L. Lekas to construct a dock for his hydroaeroplane.

Lekas recently applied for a permit, declaring that he wished to establish a regular passenger service between the trans-bay cities. Lekas was before the commission to-day and satisfied them he was a safe and sane air pilot.

Motor Cars to Cut High Cost of Dying

Storage Battery Busses To Be Put in Service in Chicago as Funeral Equipage.

CHICAGO, July 19.—The high cost of dying is to be reduced. Storage battery motor busses are to be put in service as funeral cars. The change from carriages to busses, it is estimated, will result in a saving of $30 in the cost of each funeral. As there are 31,000 funerals in Chicago each year, the general reduction in the cost of dying, if busses were used in all funerals, would be $930,000.

Girl Fan Loses Teeth But Stays Out Game

Foul Tip Injures Fair Baseball Enthusiast, but Her Ardor Is Not Diminished.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, July 19.—Miss Cora Bauer, of this city, was struck in the face by a foul tip while watching a ball game between the Akron and Zanesville teams here. Her nose was split open, three teeth knocked out and she may be disfigured for life. Nevertheless, after being treated by a physician, she decided to stay out the game.

Congregation Built Up by Band Concerts

Ohio Pastor With Novel Methods Now Claims Biggest Sunday School in World.

CANTON, OHIO, July 19.—With the attraction of a band concert in the church roof garden and a double orchestra concert in the church auditorium, the Rev. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton's First Christian Church, has built up what he claims is the biggest Sunday school in the world within five years.

The average attendance in this hot month of July is 3,251. The record attendance is 4,714. Several Sundays back 38 babies were checked in the "babies' check room" of the $90,000 church. The men's class of 250 had to hold their session in the street while the teacher explained the lesson from the tonneau of an automobile.

Doctor Says He Has Vaccine to Cure Cold

Dead Organisms Found In Blood of Patient Afflicted With Influenza Used as Culture.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Claims to the discovery of a remarkable vaccine for the cure and prevention of the troublesome "cold" known among medical men as in influenza are being made by physicians of the Mulford Laboratory, near Philadelphia, under the direction of Dr A. P. Mitchins.

The vaccine is composed of the dead organisms found in the blood of a person afflicted with influenza. These organs are isolated and then an impure culture is obtained. Afterward a saline solution is used to wash the culture germs and then the vaccine is ready for injection.

One striking feature of the results of the vaccine, it is said, is that it cures diseases allied with the common cold at the same time it does the "cold."

3 Drowned Trying To Avoid Wet Feet

Women Stand Up in Leaky Boat, Capsizing Craft in View of Hundreds.

NORRISTOWN, PA., July 19.—Caught in a storm while boating on the Schuylkill River, three women, all church workers, were drowned. They are:

Miss Anna Mary Livergood, Miss Emma J. Rex and Miss Helen Green, all of Norristown.

Miss Margaret Green, a sister of Miss Helen Green, clung to the overturned boat and was saved.

The women were within a quarter of a mile of the boat landing when the wind struck them.

The boat began to leak badly. To keep their feet and clothing dry the four girls stood on the seats. The next instant the boat turned over.

Two hundred persons on a boat returning from a park saw the accident.

Blue Cauliflower Is Raised in California

Latest Horticultural Product Is Hybrid of Ordinary Cauliflower and Purple Pickling Cabbage.

OAKLAND, July 19.—Blue cauliflower, the latest novelty in things horticultural, was introduced to the public to-day by Hugo Lilienthal, instructor in the University of California. The new plant is a hybridization of the ordinary cauliflower and the purple "pickling cabbage," declared by the experts to be a "first cousin to the cauliflower." The new vegetable is bright blue in color and stronger than the ordinary cauliflower in flavor.

Youth Is Marooned in Atlantic City When Companion Disappears With Money and Clothes.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Arthur Leonard, a New York youth, spent the entire day on the beach in his bathing suit to-day, following the disappearence of his chum, whose name he refuses to reveal, with four suits of his clothing and all his money.

Leonard wired his relatives in New York State telling them of his predicament. They came here to-night with clothing and rescued him.

LOBBY INQUIRY STIRS NATION

Mulhall Story Leaves U. S. Aghast

Power of Interests Vividly Revealed

MARTIN W. MULHALL, former lobbyist of National Association of Manufacturers, whose revelations of corruption startled nation.

Names of Wilson, Taft, Senators and Congressmen Are Dragged Into the Testimony, Showing Corporations Have Set No Limit in Corruption.

STARTLING FACTS REVEALED IN U. S. SENATE INVESTIGATION OF CONGRESSIONAL LOBBY

National Association of Manufacturers raised a slush fund of $500,000 to $700,000 a year to oppose objectionable legislation.

Place in Taft Cabinet pledged to manufacturers by Vorys, Taft manager.

Charges that the big manufacturers had the ears of Taft, Sherman and Cannon.

List of Congressmen in pay of the National Manufacturers' Association disclosed. Also, a list of the "unpurchasable," whom the association hated, and tried to defeat.

Fights made by National Manufacturers' Association on progressive Congressmen and Senators, often successful.

More than 400 letter tell of plans of association to become sinister factor in controlling the wheels of government.

Attempts made to foment strife among labor organizations, and to corrupt labor leaders, even Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Agreement by Woodrow Wilson with Gompers and Morrison that he support Hughes for Senate.

Powers of big business fought Hughes because he was friendly to labor.

Tom Johnson, Senator McComas of Maryland, and others were political victims of the association's vengeance.

Gigantic corruption in Wall Street laid bare in testimony of David Lamar.

Forgery on Union Pacific's books covering item of $82,000,000 charged.

Senate resolutions hawked about Wall street for sale to highest bidder.

The nation to-day stands aghast at the sensational revelations which have come as the result of investigations by the Overman Committee of the United States Senate into the work of lobbies at the National Capital.

It has heard how big business combines and Wall Street operators have made and unmade men in public life, influenced legislation, dominated public opinion, all the time secret and vigilant.

It has learned how big business has become one of the most powerful factors in the American civilization, striking in the dark against men who opposed it.

It has heard the names of the men highest in public life, President Wilson, former President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet members, dragged into the testimony, and has learned that certain predatory interests have set no limits in their attempt to corrupt public servants.

The bulk of the startling testimony came from Martin M. Mulhall, for years the servant of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the chief lobbyist of that organization at Washington, and from David Lamar, an operator in stocks, who is known as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

Wilson Starts Inquiry.

The investigation began more than a month ago when President Wilson declared that a lobby, "insidious and industrious" in nature, had long dominated tariff legislation. The announcement did not come unexpectedly, however, and there were many Senators and Congressmen to endorse the Chief Executive. The Senate began immediately its investigation of the charges, empowering a committee, headed by Senator Overman, to conduct the inquiry.

Relatively pointless testimony from men interested in the sugar industry came first, revealing the fact that sugar lobbies were the most industrious. Lobbyists from Hawaii, the Philippines and Louisiana defended their actions by a protest against free sugar. Former Governor Carter of Hawaii declared that the elimination of the duty on sugar would make the Hawaiian Islands merely military posts, destroying their commercial prestige. Frank C. Lowry, of the "free sugar lobby," admitted in the testimony that $25,000 had been spent in four years by the Federal Sugar Refining Company in lobbying operations.

Then came the Mulhall testimony.

Even Take Fizz Out Of City's Soda Water

Members of Cincinnati Board of Health to Censor All Soft Drinks Sold.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—The "fizz and bubble" in soda water and ginger ale manufactured in this city is to be no more, if the Board of Health has its way about the matter, and it seems likely at this time that its contention will hold good. The board has asked the Council to pass an ordinance limiting the amount of alcohol to one-half of 1 per cent in any one drink of this kind. If the resolution is passed and made a law no dealer will be allowed to make soft drinks without first getting a permit.

300 "HELLO GIRLS" ASK BOSS TO BE BEST MAN

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—The Postmaster General is bewildered over the result of the recent permission which he granted to telephone girls to get married. Three hundred of these girls promptly availed themselves of the chance and every couple asked the Postmaster General to act as best man.

Umbrellas for Farm Hands Is Inducement

Planter Advertises That He Will Supply Them With Sulkies, Sunshades and Ice Cream.

FINDLAY, OHIO, July 19.—There are other communities in this country that are suffering for a lack of farm hands besides Kansas. It is up to H. B. Clark, a farmer in the western part of Hancock County, to make good, else be prosecuted for false advertising, as provided by the new newspaper laws.

In a morning paper Mr. Clark is advertising for farm hands to plow corn. He says he will provide them with riding cultivator, a large sun umbrella for each, ice water to drink and all the ice cream each applicant can eat every other day, with $2.50 a day wages.

GREAT BRITAIN IS AFTER LATEST GERMAN AIR CRAFT

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Great Britain, it is stated, is negotiating for an Unger airship, which is larger, faster and more rigid than any others yet designed, including the Zeppelins.

'Oh Fudge' Strongest Language Permitted

Kansas City Starts Crusade Against Public Swearing—Police Rebuke Violators.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—Anything stronger than "Oh, fudge!" must not be heard on the streets of Kansas City hereafter. All the ministers of the city and all the members of their churches have started an anti-swearing crusade, and part of the work is to ask persons who are overheard to swear to consider the vulgarity of it and cease the practice.

The Police Department and the street railway company have agreed to join in the crusade, so that hereafter it is part of the policeman's duty to stop swearing as well as breaches of the peace.

Miss Elliott Returns To Stage To Be Happy

Will Play Potiphar's Wife in Sir Herbert Tree's "Joseph and His Brethren."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Maxine Elliott, yielding to Sir Herbert Tree's persuasion, will return to the stage September 2 in a great production of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." She will play Potiphar's wife.

Miss Elliott gives as the chief reason for her reappearance that every one is happier when occupied. She is now living in her beautiful house at Bushey, just outside London.

STORY OF MULHALL WILL EXTEND U. S. LOBBY INQUIRY

Mulhall represented the National Association of Manufacturers, in Washington. The association has a membership of 225 organizations, among them the most influential of the country, and 4,000 individuals, who control billions of capital.

The burden of his statements were that the association had for years promoted tariff, labor, and general business legislation favorable to itself, had maintained a lobby staff of seventeen, including himself, and former Presidents VanCleave and Kirby, of the association, at the capital to defeat hostile legislation, and it was always seeking and often obtaining control of the House and Senate Committee on Labor and Judiciary.

Created Tariff Commission.

He said that the association's efforts were responsible for the creation of the Tariff Commission under President Taft, and said that nine former Congressmen and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages in the House, had obtained money for services rendered.

More sensational still were the declarations that former President Taft, former Vice President Sherman, and former Speaker Cannon, besides many Congressmen and Senators were among those whom the association could affect by appeals to sentiment or other interests. He told of an unsuccessful attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, and of successful work among petty labor leaders.

Mulhall told of his own great ingratitude, how he obtained a Federal position through the influence of Senator McComas of Maryland, and at the same time entered the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers, helping to defeat his patron because McComas had been doomed for his opposition to the association.

McComas, it seems, was not the only victim. Tom L. Johnson had been defeated for Mayor of Cleveland, said Mulhall, for his opposition to the association, and William E. Hughes was opposed by the business combine for Senator from New Jersey because he was the advocate of many labor bills. It was in this connection that Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, had agreed with Gompers and Morrison, the labor leaders, to support Hughes, and had stumped the State in his favor.

Spies Kept in Field.

The work of the association against the eight-hour law, its enmity to most legislation that was favorable to labor, how he kept in occasional communication with former Vice President Sherman, how spies were kept in the field to corrupt minor labor leaders, and to knife opponents, were other sensational bits of the Mulhall testimony.

George Pope, president of the association, and other officials of the organization, have made statements declaring that Mulhall is not to be believed, and that most of the statements were inspired by the fact that Mulhall was discharged by the association. From many persons and places have come statements denouncing Mulhall as a man of reprehensible character, lessening thus the substantiability of many of the charges. But in many instances the declarations he made seemed to be assured of reliability by documents that are substantial.

Interesting is his list of Congressmen whom he said had received pay from the association. He named in this connection J. E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, the House "whip" of the last administration; J. T. McDermott, Democrat, of Illinois; J. J. Jenkins, Republican, Wisconsin; Kittredge Haskins, Republican, Vermont; C. E. Littlefield, Republican, Maine; H. M. Bannon, Republican, Ohio; H. M. Coudry, Republican, Missouri; J. J. Gardner, Republican, New Jersey; R. B. Cole, Republican, Ohio, and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages.

On the other hand, he named a number of Congressmen who had consistently fought the association's interests, and whom he frankly called "unpurchasable." They are: Speaker Clark, Burnett of Alabama, Maynard, Virginia; Cooper, Wisconsin; York; Green, Massachusetts; Haugen, Iowa; Wilson, Pennsylvania; McComas, Maryland; Pearre, Maryland; Hughes, New Jersey; Kelliher, Massachusetts; Connolly, Massachusetts, and the labor leaders, Gompers, John Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the Federation of Labor. William Barnes, the New York boss, he said, was his friend, and could always be depended on to "take care of bills."

Revelations of Lamar.

On the heels of the Mulhall revelations came those from David Lamar, the smiling, cynical "Wolf of Wall Street." Lamar it was who told of having sent Edward Lauterbach, his attorney, to peddle around Wall Street a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the Senate.

J. P. Morgan was one of the men whom Lauterbach visited on this errand. He told how he had impersonated Congressmen Palmer and Riordan in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass Ledyard and Paul D. Cravath, corporation attorneys, and Robert S. Lovett, the railroad president, feigning knowledge of the intentions of the dominant party. Further, he declared that he had represented himself as fresh from the councils of Speaker Clark and other leaders when he visited Wall Street operators for concessions.

Lamar's most remarkable disclosure was his statement that the Union Pacific Railroad's books had been forged in 1901 to cover an item of $82,000,000, whereby the fortunes of E. H. Harriman, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, and others were built.

Testimonials Discredited.

Discredit has been cast upon Lamar's testimony as on Mulhall's, as coming from a man lacking in scruples. Paul D. Cravath, attorney for the Union Pacific, gave out a statement that the testimony regarding the gigantic forgery was part of a bear campaign against the company.

The Senate investigation will be conducted in detail, and it is likely, to judge from the announced intentions of the committee members, that every member of the Senate and of the House, every public official whose name has been dragged into the affair, and every one in anyway connected with the situation will be called in as witnesses. Appearances seem to indicate that the hearing will last far into the summer.

Mulhall was on the stand the greater part of last week explaining a batch of correspondence which had passed between him and political and labor leaders throughout the United States. The correspondence, according to evidence which has been revealed, he has sought to sell to magazines and newspapers several times, but in vain. Nonchalantly, the ex-lobbyist has pointed out letter after letter from prominent men, talking of alleged significant deals almost carelessly.

"This is a letter from Senator Foraker," he said, indicating one. "It was asking me to see a labor man about his chances for re-election to the Senate. I think he was considering the Presidency at the time."

Secrets of big politics are being bared daily during the investigation. Details of how spies worked among the labor men, and of the secret methods of big business have been explained by Mulhall at more than one point in his testimony.

In defense of his own lobbying, Mulhall made statements that a labor lobby existed, naming Samuel Gompers. As a result, Gompers and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be brought before the committee to explain their activities in the cause of labor and capital, respectively.

Inez Milholland's Wedding Blow to Suffragists

Her Romance May Annul Marriage to the Cause

Mrs. Eugen Boissevain, who was Miss Inez Milholland, famous suffragist beauty and orator, before her marriage to wealthy Dutchman last week.

Beautiful Leader of Votes for Women Won After Courtship on Two Continents.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Suffrage leaders of the United States are today bowed in spirit. They can think of their recent victory in Illinois without smiling. They read of success of women jurors and policemen with no show of ecstasy. Their minds are troubled. They seek to know whether Mrs. Eugen Boissevain will be as potent a personality for the cause as was Inez Milholland before she suddenly decided to take unto herself a husband in the form of the wealthy Dutchman she wedded Tuesday in London.

For Inez Milholland has been no small force in the suffrage movement in the United States. She graduated from Vassar just about the time when the votes for women idea traveled across the seas from England, and she has been right on the firing line in the battle for the ballot ever since.

Beauty of Suffrage Ranks.

Miss Milholland, beg pardon, Mrs. Boissevain, has ever been in the specially mentioned class in every important suffrage movement. She has been the American Christobal Pankhurst, only more so, though it has not been recorded that she has smashed anything, or has had to dodge extradition treaties to keep from the painful necessity of going on a hunger strike.

Even before she graduated from Vassar, Miss Milholland was known to fame. Her remarkable beauty, her mentality and personal magnetism made her a leader in this great girls' college. She was the champion all around athlete and held a world's record for putting the shot.

During the strike of the garment workers in New York, several years ago, Miss Milholland volunteered for picket duty and it was her oratory that kept the girls stubbornly on the strike until they partially won their demands.

In the first big suffrage parade in New York she was a battalion leader and was a striking figure as she rode astride on a big bay charger.

Challenges Orator Heflin.

She again achieved prominence by challenging Representative Tom Heflin of Alabama to joint debate when that doughty Congressman spoke disparagingly of the cause, and though it is known that Mr. Heflin loves to speak and delights in debate, he carefully avoided meeting Miss Milholland on the forum.

In the great suffrage parade in Washington the day before President Wilson's inauguration Miss Milholland led the procession as the herald of the cause. She was mounted on a pure white horse and was clad in robes of white, while a coronet surmounted her magnificent hair which fell loosely down her back.

So striking was her appearance that she was quickly an object of the attacks of the thugs and boors who tried to break up the parade, and it is recorded that one of these men received a blow on the jaw from the fist of the young woman who once held the world shot-put record.

"I am wedded to the cause," she told her admirers, among whom were Sidney Smith, the New York clubman; John Fox, Jr., author and former husband of Fritzi Scheff, and Lord Curzon, formerly viceroy of India.

Whether this marriage will annul her former marriage to the cause is the question that perplexes the suffrage leaders, but they, as a rule, protest that it will not.

John E. Milholland, her father, was evidently not greatly shocked by the marriage. Here is what he cabled his daughter:

"Have not been so mad in two hundred years. You should be boiled in oil. Do you expect forgiveness until the next century. Indefensible chip of the old block, you have given us a pretty rough deal, but nevertheless I humbly and fervently pray God's blessing upon you and yours forever.

"PATER."

Boissevain's Brother Elated.

Robert W. Boissevain, brother of the bridegroom, was in a decidedly agreeable frame of mind yesterday in his office at No. 17 Battery place. Besides calling his brother a "lucky dog" and describing him as being "smiled upon by the gods," he said that the new Mrs. Boissevain has now seven sisters-in-law who possess collectively 25 children and that all these seven Boissevain sisters are suffragists of the non-militant type.

"Wireless" in Courtship.

"Eugen, who is 33 years old, and my brother Jan came over to New York on the Olympic to pay me a visit," he said. "They arrived June 10 and stopped at the Holland House with me. William Marconi, the wireless discoverer, and Mrs. Marconi were here at the same time. My brother and I have known Mr. Marconi for years, and I now understand that the Marconis have known the Milholland family for a long time.

"Anyway, two days after the arrival of my brothers, that is, June 12, I was dining with them in the Holland House and Mr. and Mrs. Marconi entered the dining room with one of the most beautiful women we had ever seen. Miss Milholland was presented to us, and my brother Eugen lost interest in all other things then and there.

"Eugen and Jan had planned to tour the States for six weeks at least, but during the dinner Miss Milholland said something about leaving for Europe early in July. The plans of Eugen, I could see, went flying.

MAZDAZNANS EAT FLOWERS AND SING TO THE SUN

All This in Classic Boston, Where the Cult Has a Membership Small but Exclusive.

BOSTON, July 19.—It is ancient history that Nebuchadnezzer went out and ate grass like an ox. Out in the Back Bay and up in Lowell there can be found small yet select circles of folk who eat grass and say they enjoy it.

Not only this, but they worship the sun, pray to the sun, sing to the sun, take sun baths, dew baths, eat rose petals and pansies, drive out disease by fasting spells (or say they do so), fast for days and then fatten up on a diet of water to drink and violets to eat, kiss and rekiss, and try to be as happy and contented as can be.

These people are the Mazdaznans or Sun Worshipers. Into their innermost shrines have penetrated none but ardent devotees, so that none of their rites have been made public. As revealed for the first time at the big Gahanbar, or national peace congress of the Mazdaznans, these rites are weird enough—strange to the outside world, but taken as a matter of course by the Mazdaznans.

And the strange part of the rites and worship is that the devout worshipers believe their practice will lengthen their years into three or four centuries.

Secret Rites of Cult.

Another thing about the sun folk is that they don't worry. So in the hot weather they manage to keep cool figuratively and physically. They usually look happy and contented when met on the street.

None outside the cult itself knew—up to the holding of the recent Gahanbar or Congress—of the secret rites of the Mazdaznans. These are practiced in the inner circles, so called.

For years the famous "Green Book" of the Mazdaznans was a mystery sealed to the eyes of ordinary mortals. The book was guarded sacredly by the Sun Worshipers. In it are printed the precepts of the cult.

Here are some of them:

You can get cured of anything if you have faith enough long enough.

Sickness, sin and poverty will be eradicated by Mazdaznanism.

The fly you swat may be the incarnated soul of a great-great-great-grandmother.

Be careful, then, how you swat the flies.

Obstinacy Cause for Pain.

Pain is nothing but the result of obstinacy in you. If you are suffering from a toothache, it is because you are "declining to yield to the peaceful operations of intelligence."

Never go under the surgeon's knife or take "herbal medicine."

Deny the "bonds of ancestral relation through sickness, sin or sorrow."

And practice these things: Deep or "conscious" breathing and vegetarianism.

If you can do these things, you may become a Mazdaznan, so the "Green Book" says.

The High Priestess is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Roth Hilton, wife of Dr. George Hilton, of Lowell.

In the inner worship Hanish, the leader, is His Humbleness, Mrs. Hilton is Spenta Marie—the equivalent of "holy mother."

Their chief New England shrine is the Mazdaznan Temple, in Lowell. This was formerly a barn belonging to Dr. Hilton, but later converted into a "house of worship."

The central figure in the worship is Mrs. Hilton, the High Priestess. She is the mother of two pretty daughters, one of whom, the elder, Miss Ruthken Mariana Hilton, is being educated to follow in her mother's steps as High Priestess. Some day pretty Miss Ruthken—her name before the court changed it was Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of Mrs. Hilton by her first marriage—will be the leader of the Mazdaznans. The other daughter is Miss Constance Cleopatra Hilton.

The majority of the followers of the "Little Master," Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, are the persons of middle life and evidently of generous means. While a few of the cult are young women of surpassing beauty, yet the advanced philosophic principles of Mazdaznan are so complex and abstract that only those of mature mind are intellectually and spiritually capable of comprehending them. Therefore, there is a dearth of young people in the cult.

Rats Give Sleeping Fisherman Haircut

Well Oiled Head of Angler Proves Excellent Provender for Hungry Island Rodents.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., July 19. A Santa Barbara fisherman has discovered a new way of getting his hair clipped. He appeared about his usual haunts yesterday with one-half of his head neatly shorn of hair. He says that the mice did it. A well-known fisherman vouches for the tale.

Santa Barbara Island is inhospitable and barren and contains not a drop of fresh water. For this reason fishing parties take a good supply of liquid refreshment.

Usually fishermen sleep on their boats on account of the mice. However, the fisherman in the party of Williams said he would sleep on shore.

This fisherman had earned the sobriquet of "Dude," owing to his habit of oiling his hair. It was this oil that caused the involuntary haircut, for the fishermen say that during the "Dude's" hours of slumber the mice visited him and neatly cut the hair close to the scalp in their relish of the oil.

Japs' 'Amo' Starts Romance at Harvard

Girl Student Teaches Him Language of Nippon and Now They Sail for Tokio Honeymoon.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—They met in the yard at Harvard. He was finishing his course and she was studying the intricacies of the Japanese language.

"Will you teach me Japanese?" asked James Lee Kauffman, and she said "yes."

They studied together day after day. Finally he was graduated to what corresponds to "Amo" in the Latin books. He asked her several times to explain its meaning.

"It means I love," she said, blushing.

"I am sure it must mean I love you," he said, and when she nodded that such might be the case he admitted that such was the case.

So they were married in Lancaster, Pa., and came here.

They sailed for Tokio. He is to take the chair of English law in the Imperial University.

Marries and Steals To Reform a Girl

Divinity Student Admits Taking Money Trusted to Him Because He Loved Woman.

DENVER, July 19.—William Schulz, student of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $38 from the student body, whose cashier he was, says he married Miss Thelma Gillion and became a defaulter, not only because he loved the girl but because he desired to assist her in giving up her former way of living.

That Schulz had partly succeeded in his work of reclamation is the belief of all Denver people who have come in contact with the young woman since she and Schulz arrived in this city. They unite in saying that there is no better behaved young woman in Denver than Mrs. Schulz.

Sioux City Finds Policewomen Useful

Superintendent of Police Safety Declares They Have Lessened Trouble With Girls.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA, July 19.—"I want especially to have the policewomen on the force during the summer months," says the Superintendent of Public Safety. "We formerly had plenty of trouble with young girls in dance halls, but since the women came on the force there has been none of this.

"I believe that they are doing fine work and am very well satisfied. The only thing that would cause their release from the force would be the lack of sufficient appropriation to pay their salary. They are necessary to the force in guarding the morals of the women of Sioux City."

Safe Robber Relic Found in Old Wall

Discoverers Believe That Ancient Money Box Was Taken From Stage Coach by Highwaymen.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., July 19.—While repairing the State highway at the top of Conococheague Mountain, near Concord, Ralph Hopple and Elias Snyder, who were tearing down a stone wall, found an express money box, of heavy sheet iron, lined with wood. The lid was partly open and the lock had been sprung with an iron hook found near the box.

It is thought the box was in the old stone wall for more than a century and was placed there by a gang of robbers that infested that section in the days of stage coaches.

ACID THROWN AS JEALOUS WIFE STRIKES RIVAL

House Physician of Kimball House Center of Affray Witnessed by Peachtree Crowd.

Dr. J. Robert Smith, house physician at the Kimball Hotel; Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Ina McNeil, of No. 299 Forrest avenue, a saleswoman at a downtown store, engaged in a struggle in front of the Park-Chambers-Hardwick store on Peachtree street Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. Smith found her husband with Mrs. McNeil.

In the melee Mrs. McNeil received a slight cut on her arm, and Mrs. Smith claims also she gave her a black eye. During the trouble a bottle of what is supposed to have been carbolic acid was thrown by one of the participants, but none of them will admit throwing it. Dr. Smith declares he did not see the acid thrown, and Mrs. Smith will not say whether she threw it or not.

Hundreds See Fray.

The triangular affray was witnessed by hundreds of Peachtree street pedestrians, and created considerable excitement. After the bottle of acid had crashed to the pavement and broken, Dr. Smith hustled his wife around the corner, while Mrs. McNeil ran into the store and hurried to the second floor.

Mrs. Smith admits attacking Mrs. McNeil. She says she has several times asked her to keep away from Dr. Smith, and declares she became infuriated when she saw her husband meet Mrs. McNeil downtown to-day.

Says She Trailed Smith.

"Dr. Smith has been running around with Mrs. McNeil for more than a year now," said Mrs. Smith. "We have been separated for several years, but of late the doctor has asked me to return to him. He has offered to buy me an automobile if I would come back, but I told him I would have to test him. I asked him to keep away from Mrs. McNeil, and I've also asked Mrs. McNeil to keep away from Robert.

"I heard several weeks ago that he was going around with her again, and this morning I came to Atlanta from my home in Douglas. I trailed Dr. Smith to-day when he left the Kimball House, and I saw him meet the woman on Edgewood avenue. I followed them until they got in front of the store on Peachtree street, and then I got so mad that I stopped them.

"I admit I hit Mrs. McNeil, and I would do it again. I just got so mad that I walked up and struck her in the face. I gave her a black eye and scratched her on the arm, but she didn't hurt me. I don't know anything about the acid. Dr. Smith did not do anything while we were fighting, but acted like he wanted to get away. After the bottle was thrown, he took me out of the place."

Girl Shoots Herself When She Is Spanked

Mother Punishes Her for Spending Afternoons With Boys—She Fires Bullet Into Breast.

NEW YORK, July 19.—When the mother of 15-year-old Mary DeMartino spanked her a week ago for spending the afternoons with young men on the roof of their home, No. 337 East Forty-seventh street, the girl threatened to shoot herself.

Mrs. DeMartino caught her on the roof again yesterday, and after Mary had been chastised, she fired a bullet into her breast, penetrating one of her lungs. She was taken to Flower Hospital, and last night was in a critical condition.

Couldn't Die Until He Moved Friend's Body

Pioneer Refuses to, Allow Companion's Remains to Rest In Old Deserted Cemetery.

DUFUR, OREG., July 19.—"No, he was just my friend."

This was the answer given by H. Koehler, of Portland, when asked if William Holman, whose body he had gone to the trouble and expense of moving from one cemetery to another, was a relative.

Many, many years ago, when there was but a small handful of settlers in the Fifteen-Mile Valley, a location for a cemetery was selected on a hill overlooking the valley.

A few days ago Kohler, now a gray-haired man, came to look after the last resting place of his friend Holman. He left here soon after Holman's death 35 years ago.

"We were good friends—very good friends," he said. "I could not die happy if I knew he would be left out there in that old cemetery with no one left to care for his grave. I had intended to look after this long ago, but circumstances have prevented, and now I am growing old and I must do this one kind act for my friend. We were very, very good friends."

UKIAH, CAL., July 19.—W. C. Jones, of Los Angeles, ran down a big deer with his auto near Largo yesterday when it jumped over the fence in front of the machine. Jones opened his throttle and turned loose the horn. The noise frightened the animal, and, after a half mile chase, it turned to give battle. The deer made one vicious lunge forward, its horn piercing the front tire, the impact breaking its neck. Jones loaded his prize into the machine.

CRAWFORD HEIRS EXPECT SEARCH FOR BARBER TO BARE PRE-NUPTIAL PLOT

Relatives Think That Lump Will Tell Woman Held on Poison Charge Planned to Wed Him on Her Husband's Death.

If the tireless search which is being directed by Atlanta lawyers discovers in New York a man named Fred Lump, the prosecution in the case against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, thinks a pre-nuptial plot against Crawford can be proved.

The alleged plot was between Mrs. Crawford, then Mrs. Savage, and Lump. She would marry the wealthy Crawford, obtain his money, and then marry Lump, say her accusers.

Lump is a barber by trade and a Bohemian by nativity. He is supposed to be in New York, and in that city detectives in the employ of the prosecution have been at work for several days. Every message that comes from them, however, is one of failure.

Colonel James Makes Charge.

The charge of a plot first was made by Col. J. S. James, who is attorney for the contesting Crawford heirs, who ordered the arrest of Lump. Colonel James said that Lump admitted his being in Atlanta at the time of Crawford's death, and that other testimony valuable to the prosecution was given by him in deposition several weeks ago. But present search for the Bohemian barber has proved fruitless.

Colonel James points to Mrs. E. C. Bursener as one of the witnesses of the prosecution to substantiate the murder plot charge. Mrs. Bursener, it is claimed, will testify that she frequently heard Mrs. Crawford say that she would marry Crawford, get his money, and later run away with Lump. The prosecution will seek to prove also by Mrs. Gertrude A. Painter, it is said, that there was a definite agreement to this plan existent between Mrs. Crawford and Lump.

The forces that are trying to saddle Mrs. Crawford with the murder charge are scoring heavily in the closely-allied civil suit. Heirs of Joshua B. Crawford, trying to break the will by which the widow received the bulk of the estate, charging undue influence, have produced a number of witnesses to swear to an antagonism between Crawford and Mrs. Mary B. Crawford.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. L. C. Dillingsley, who testified that Joshua B. Crawford said, time and again, that he would not marry the woman. This statement was elicited in the attempt to prove that Crawford was not rational, and probably was intoxicated, when he married Mrs. Crawford.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Mrs. Dillingsley, who said she lived in the Crawford home on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death, told of instances of alleged cruelty on Mrs Crawford's part, directed particularly toward a Miss Scott. Mrs. Sallie Alexander, an old woman of Henry County, was another witness by whom it was sought to prove habitual drunkenness on Crawford's part.

Mrs. Crawford, released from the Tower on bail of $6,250, has remained in the seclusion of her home on West Peachtree street all week, steadfastly quiet and refusing all statements in the face of the accusations against her. She has said nothing regarding the case, except a simple denial of the charges.

Reporters seeing her were treated courteously and quietly, and Mrs. Crawford seemed not averse to talk to them freely. But in most of the talk the subject of the murder charge and the plot charge in which Lump's name appears was carefully skirted.

Mrs. Crawford is a large woman, of dignified appearance. Not one moment since her arrest Saturday night has her composure broken, even slightly. In the Tower she received the few persons who called on her, and during the visit did not exhibit a sign of perturbation.

Calls Charge "Awful Thing."

To reporters and to all her visitors, when she mentioned at all the subject of the murder charge, she referred to it as "this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford finds staunch friends in her children and grandchildren, who visited her at the Tower, and were with her almost all the few hours she spent in jail, bringing her flowers, a savory meal, and other tokens of their love.

Mrs. Crawford's children are bitter in their speech against the nephews and neices of Joshua B. Crawford, who, they say, are persecuting their mother with extreme cruelty. Mrs. Crawford herself accused her enemies of cruelty and lack of feeling.

Mrs. Crawford met Joshua B. Crawford when she was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine, wither Crawford went in search of health. It was there she met him, and there that she married him. At his death, there was a settlement of his estate, Mrs. Crawford taking hold of the affairs with a capable hand.

An agreement was signed, and the affairs of Joshua B. Crawford, deceased, seemed amicably settled. Then the litigation was sprung. In the first bill of complaint the heirs who contested the will charged Mrs. Crawford with poisoning her husband, and of exerting undue influence to procure a will in her favor. But it was not until three years later, two weeks ago, that an examination of the remains of Joshua B. Crawford to ascertain traces of poison was ordered. Upon the examination came the verdict of the physician that traces of poison were vident, and Mrs. Crawford was arrested.

With preliminary hearing waived, Mrs. Crawford's case is flatly up to the grand jury, which, without definite date of meeting, awaits the call of the Solicitor General. The body probably will be assembled next week.

MRS. MARY BELLE CRAWFORD, held on poison charge in famous will case mystery, with her grandchild, Viola Belle Bennett.

Fortune in Gold Nuggets Awaits Heir

Wealth Will Revert to State of Kansas Unless Kin of Old Woman Appear.

HUTCHINSON, July 19.—There is a bag of gold nuggets and gold dust awaiting heirs that may go to the State of Kansas. These nuggets and the gold dust, along with some money and other personal property to the value of $10,000, are in the hands of former Sheriff G. M. Duckworth, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ana M. Bernhert, who died a few days ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Some years ago when Mrs. Bernhert, who lived alone, was found to be of unsound mind, Dr. Duckworth was named as her guardian and she was taken to an asylum for treatment. In searching the house he found scattering personal property. It was found that much of it was gold nuggets and dust, saved, evidently, from some former mining experience, and hoarded away.

Baby Sips Hat Bleach; Dies from Poisoning

Mother, Bedridden from Appendicitis, Is Unable to Stop Child from Drinking Acid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—As a result of drinking a mixture of lye and oxalic acid, used by her father to clean an old straw hat, Dorothy E. Smith, 20 months old, died yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her father is Leo Smith, of No. 47 Brooklyn avenue, Jamaica, an employee of the Long Island Railroad.

The child's mother is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She and the baby were alone in the house yesterday when the child drank the mixture. She heard the baby's screams, but could not leave her bed, so she screamed, too, and neighbors who responded called a doctor.

RENO SINGS ITS SWAN SONG AS DIVORCE MECCA

Grand Rush of Colonists to Take Advantage of the Old Law Comes to an End.

RENO, July 19.—With such songs as "Meet a Friend From Your Home Town" and "At the Devil's Ball," sung by feminine entertainers from Metropolitan music halls, accompanied by high-class orchestras, the divorce colony celebrated the past week the beginning of the end of the Nevada quick divorce.

On the stroke of the midnight hour on Monday the curtain dropped upon one scene in Reno's notable divorce colony performance which has commanded the attention of the world for so long—that of the almost daily appearance of new faces upon the streets, as men and women, from plain country folk to elaborately gowned and bejeweled society beauties, arrived to begin their required six months' residence in the State and county, preparatory to the prospective divorce action.

Law Halts Colonists.

No more will incoming trains deposit these colonists and carloads of trunks, for the familiar song, "I'm on My Way to Reno," has been shelved by the action of the last Legislature, when it dealt the knock-out blow in its ultimatum that no divorce proceeding shall be instituted in the State of Nevada under the existing six-month residence law after December 21 next, thereby limiting the time in which newcomers could begin such residence period to Monday last. Previous to July, 1909, the presence here for divorce of but an occasional person of prominence merely commanded attention to that individual, but it led to a method of publicity by an attorney which started the ball rolling, and it has never stopped rolling. Its greatest momentum is being witnessed now.

All Houses Are Thronged.

During the past month, and especially the week ending on Monday, the throng of newcomers has experienced great difficulty in securing such apartments as they might desire. All the hotels are crowded, as are the desirable rooming houses. Available cottages are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. In many cottages from four to six divorcees are living.

Some private boarding houses are housing as many as ten of the fair sex, and men. There are now scores of so-called "divorcees' nests" here. Every train the past fortnight has unloaded new arrivals, the preponderance of men and very young women, seemingly well to do and fashionable being noticeable. The proportion of men to women increased largely. Baby carriages and dogs played conspicuous parts.

Attending Funerals Hobby of Old Squaw

"Glass Eye," Noted for Lamentations at Obsequies, at Last Principal at Mortuary Ceremony.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREG., July 19.—"Glass Eye" is dead. She was an aged Indian woman, well known here since the settlment of this section. It was one of her hobbies to attend every funeral that she could, and on these occasions she posed as chief mourner by her excessive lamentations.

Her name has been forgotten by the whites, who only know her by the nickname, which is said to have been given her when young, because of the brightness of her eyes and not because of any abnormality in them.

She was about 75 years old, and is reported to have been the sister of "White Cindy," another noted aborigine.

Boy Finds $35,500; Hides it from Police

Advertises That He Picked up Money and Declares He Will Return it to Owner.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., July 19.—Brayton Gardner, 18 years old, who announced he had found $35,500 in a leather bag on the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad, to-night refused to tell the police where he put the money.

"I have hidden it in a safe place," said he, "and if someone claims it I will produce it immediately."

Gardner walked into the office of a local newspaper and inserted an advertisement reading:

"Found, $35,500. Owner can have money by identifying it and satisfying Brayton Gardner."

Stolen Jewels Are Found Buried in Park

Last of $100,000 Loot Stolen by Employee of Firm Recovered After Confession.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The final confession of young William Beck, who stole $100,000 worth of jewelry from his employers, Udall & Ballou, was obtained yesterday. The last $2,800 of the loot was found by detectives. It was buried in Central Park.

Beck had insisted until yesterday that he had told all. But Inspector Faurot finally got him to reveal the hiding place. The police were told to enter the park at 110th street and Eighth avenue and count eighteen stone blocks in the wall to a spot where a small bush grew. Buried 6 inches they found nine diamond rings and a pair of cuff buttons.

Indian Girl Seeks Office in Oklahoma

Educated Cherokee Business Woman Would Be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

VINITA, OKLA., July 19.—Announcement by Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, that she will not be a candidate for re-election, brings into the race for the Democratic nomination a young Cherokee woman, Miss Pearl Holderman, of Northern Craig County, whose ability as an educated business woman has given her a wide acquaintance in Eastern Oklahoma.

Miss Holderman has large business responsibilities and her experience and ability have made her more than a match for most men. Because of her father's impaired health she manages his cattle ranch, directing every detail, including the care of a herd of blooded cattle. This young Cherokee woman owns a thousand acres of land in her own name, all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

Old Age Attributed To Her False Teeth

Woman, Age 99, Declares She Has Used Set 59 Years—Always Chews Well.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 19.—At the age of 99, Mrs. Levina Derr, of Hudson, declares that her long life is due solely to the fact that she bought a set of good store teeth fifty years ago.

Mrs. Derr is still active. Five generations of her family are living, and she declares she is as young as any of them.

"I was blessed with good teeth," she said, "and I always made it a point to chew my food well. A good stomach is the foundation of good health, and the stomach can not be good unless the teeth are good."

Congress to Lose Costly Stationery

Government Printer Is Ordered to Stop Use of Costly Material for Lawmakers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Members of Congress will draw no more costly embossed stationery at the expense of the Government. Hereafter they will get along with plain, every-day printed letterheads and envelopes.

The Joint Committee on Printing discovered that the Government Printing Office last year turned out 11,000,000 embossed pieces of stationery at an extra cost of $30,000. An order has been issued to the Government Printer to stop this extravagance.

On the Senate side of Congress this economy reform is resented, but it goes just the same. If Senators want stationery de luxe they must foot the bills out of their private purse.

Women Wear Bath Dresses Down Town

Startle Natives by Appearing in Ice Cream Parlor in Their Beach Attire.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Two buxon matrons and a miss about 19 years old created a sensation about dusk by walking through the streets of Warwood, north of this city, in bathing costumes. Unabashed by the attention they attracted, they entered an ice cream parlor, where they ordered ices, and after eating them walked to their homes.

The matter was brought to the attention of Town Marshal E. L. Pool, who immediately issued a warning that women appearing hereafter in such scant attire would subject themselves to arrest.

WESTFIELD, MASS., July 19.—A unique editorial and printing plant is that known as "Seneca Wigwam, The Press in the Forest," located in the heart of the woods about three miles west of this place.

The sanctum is a typical Indian tepee, where the editor, Joseph C. Duport, an out-of-door enthusiast, prints, illustrates and publishes an original magazine called the Woronoco Valley Calumet.

In summer the editor sets his type in the shade of a hemlock, and in the winter or during inclement weather his work is done in the wigwam, which contains an up-to-date twentieth century printing press and equipment.

Policeman's Watch Stops Death Bullet

Hospital Steward Thinks Patrolman Burglar and Fires Six Shots at His Heart.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 19.—A watch in his vest pocket stopped a bullet which otherwise probably would have pierced the heart of Patrolman O'Hara last night. The shot was one of six fired by Roscoe Gray, steward of the Oakland College of Medicine, under the impression that O'Hara was a burglar. The other shots did not hit O'Hara. Gray nearly collapsed when he learned his mistake.

O'Hara was on his rounds when he noticed a door in the college building open. Trying to close it, he set off a burglar alarm and Gray opened fire in the dark.

Silver Wire Travels Through Two Arms

Metal Closes Wound on Left Wrist and Works Way to the Right Finger.

CHICO, CAL., July 19.—James Dupen, a Chico merchant, to-day submitted to an operation, in which a piece of silver wire, used in closing a wound on the left wrist in 1897, was extracted from the index finger of the right hand. The wire, which is one-half inch long, passed up one arm, across the chest and worked down the opposite arm, emerging at the finger.

FARMERS' UNION HOPE OF SOUTH, SAY ORGANIZERS IN GREAT GEORGIA CAMPAIGN

Charles S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee, Sweep Through the State With a Message to Planters to Check Enormous Crop Waste.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a flying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"The marvelous grandeur of the world's progress astounds and amazes us, yet the wonderful story would never have been written had it not been for the ever-faithful farmer.

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"When we became a nation the farmer owned 90 per cent of the wealth. In 1850 our national wealth was $7,000,000,000 and the farmer owned $4,000,000,000, or four-sevenths.

"In 1913 our national wealth is estimated at $131,000,000,000, and the farmer owns $26,000,000,000. Our farm property is valued at nearly $40,000,000,000, but $14,000,000,000 is owned by other classes than farmers.

"The above figures show that farmers are not holding their own, for if they had kept pace with other vocations since 1850 they would now own $75,000,000,000 worth of wealth instead of $26,000,000,000. Their lack of business methods and failure to match conditions have cost them $49,000,000,000. This would buy all the farm property in the United States and have enough left to buy a half interest in all the railroads.

"In a score of years the farmers of this country have produced $135,000,000,000 worth of farm products, or enough to buy all the property in the United States. Yet this wonderful amount of wealth has not gone to the farmers. We have 10,000 men in this country who own an average of $10,000,000 each. And their combined wealth is $100,000,000,000. The other 99,990,000 people own $31,000,000,000. Of our 100,000,000, 60,000,000 are homeless.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The 12,000,000 farmers of this country are laboring under an indebtedness of $6,000,000,000. On this amount, counting commissions and renewal charges, they are paying an annual interest of 8 1-2 per cent, or $510,000,000, while the business men and manufacturers pay an average of 5 per cent interest, or $300,000,000, on $6,000,000,000. This $210,000,000 excess interest paid by the farmers would pay off our farm indebtedness in 28 years. Co-operative efforts and rural credits would right these wrongs. So, let us continue to discourage this present system until it has passed into history and is only remembered in the misty back yonder.

"Distribution being one of our greatest problems, our second declaration of purposes is to assist our members in buying and selling. The Federal Government has spent $100,000,000 in the last ten years, teaching us how to produce, and not a cent to teach us how to market.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

Expense Is Unavoidable.

"We all agree that there is an unavoidable expense in the distribution of farm products. But let us make what seems to us a reasonable division of the $13,000,000,000 consumers other than farmers pay for farm products each year.

Give the wholesaler and jobber $1,000,000,000, the transportation companies $1,000,000,000, the retailer $1,500,000,000; then throw in $500,000,000 for all possible misallowance, and we have $9,000,000,000, which is $2,000,000,000 more than the farmer gets. This amount falls into the waste basket of speculation.

"If it were divided between the producer and consumer it would clothe the naked, feed the hungry and educate the illiterate, instead of breeding millionaires, paupers, anarchists and suicides. If the Farmers' Union fills its mission, it will not be long until a less portion of the laborers' toll will be turned in at the toll gate of the palace and a great portion will find its way through the door of the cottage, and help to lift the humble tenement to the comfort, dignity and luxury of a home.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 260,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If property handled, this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices; we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep his pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

THIS DRESS WAS TOO MUCH FOR PRIM RICHMOND.

THIS Picture shows Miss Flossie Brown in the split skirt which caused so much excitement in Richmond, Va., that the young lady was arrested, fined $25 and given twenty-four hours in which to leave town. The idea of the slit skirt did not appeal at all to the Virginians, but it has not been received with so much disfavor elsewhere, for Miss Brown, or Blossom Browning, as she prefers to be called, has been invited to wear it in Pittsburg and Baltimore.

Quarrel at License Desk Halts Wedding

Prospective Bride Objected to Way Her Fiance Spelled Name and Ceremony Was Called Off.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., July 19. A near-wedding was spoiled to-day when the bride-to-be and the bridegroom-to-be quarreled over the spelling of the latter's name. C. W. Clane, of Los Angeles, aged 44, and wearing diamonds as large as hickory nuts, accompanied by a woman about 35 years old, applied for a license.

He started to fill out the blank. "Spell it right, please; spell it Cline," whispered the woman, but Clane just kept on writing.

Again his prospective bride, speaking right out loud, said he was spelling his name wrongly. But still Clane paid no attention. Then, in tones of downright anger, she exclaimed: "You spell your name properly or there will be no wedding."

"Very well," answered the man, and he crumpled up the application blank and they left the office.

NATION FINALLY REFUSES BURR'S PENSION PLEA

United States Decides After 79 Years Just to File Request in National Museum.

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—After some delay—79 years, to be more or less exact—the United States Government has decided on a final action on Aaron Burr's application for a pension. The Government proposes to put the application in the National Museum. This is a patriotic and quite inexpensive method of disposing of a formal application for money.

Exhibited in a glass inclosed case in the museum, the papers may rest peacefully and indefinitely, telling future generations that in his last days Burr was considerably "hard-up." This is a fact not generally known. But if future generations happen to be observant they may notice that the papers show Uncle Sam to be a bit tardy in matters of pensions.

Papers Valuable Historically.

Historically, the papers are very valuable. They contain a letter written by George Washington to Aaron Burr, which even to-day—about 135 years after the letter was penned—is in a state of perfect preservation. Any student of values of historical relics can tell how much such a thing is worth. Officials at the National Museum declare the letter to be "invaluable."

The paper is a bit yellow but it is intact. The ink is a trifle faded, but can be read without difficulty even without the aid of glasses. And, furthermore, the letter reveals a bit of Washington's character more clearly than a volume of history. The missive shows how the general treated with his officers. Burr had written to Washington requesting leave of absence from military duty on account of ill health and suggesting that while off duty his pay may be discontinued.

Here is George Washington's reply to Burr:

Headquarters,
Frederick, 26th Oct., 1778.

"Dear Sir:

"I have your favor of the 24th. You, in my opinion, carry your ideas of delicacy too far when you propose to drop your pay while the recovery of your health necessarily requires your absence from the service. It is not customary, and it would be unjust. You therefore have leave to retire until your health is so far re-established as to enable you to do your duty.

"Be pleased to give the Colonel notice of this, that he may know where to call upon you should any unforeseen exigency require it.

"I am, dear sir,

"Your mo. obt. servt.,
"GEO. WASHINGTON.

"Lt. Col. Burr."

Burr's Final Appeal.

George Washington's letter is regarded as the most valuable paper among the sheaf composing Burr's application, but the application itself, Burr's formal appeal for a pension, has much historical worth because it is Burr's own record of his military service, written in 1834, just two years before his death, at the age of 80 years, in Port Richmond, Staten Island, N. Y. The papers contain no mention of Burr's famous duel with Alexander Hamilton, in which Hamilton was mortally wounded.

Burr even failed to mention in the papers that he had been Vice President of the United States, and reference to the fact that he was arrested and tried for treason for attempting to form a republic west of the Mississippi is also omitted. In the application it is recited, however, that Burr was unable to appear in court to swear to the facts by reason of "bodily infirmity."

CONVICTS OFFERED PARDON IF THEY WILL PICK BERRIES

GEORGETOWN, DEL., July 19.—Full and complete pardons await even the prisoners in Sussex County if they will pick strawberries or work on the farms.

The scarcity of labor has become a serious problem to the farmers this year, and so serious has the question become that many of them have notified committing magistrates that they will pay all fines for intoxicated and disorderly persons if it can be arranged that these people pick berries.

CHANGS, ON WAY HOME, CLING TO YANKEE FRILLS

Wife and Children of Chinese Minister Sail Derssed in Latest American Fashions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—After more than three years in Washington with her husband, Minister Chang, Mme. Chang is returning to the Orient. She is accompanied by two daughters, a son, Henry K. Chang; a little daughter-in-law and a tiny grandchild. During her residence in America Mme. Chang has changed her ideas about many things, and about others she maintains the old Chinese beliefs.

The two young daughters, Miss Alice and Miss Lillie Chang, have been attending school in Washington for two years, and with the progress of their education have abandoned their picturesque nature clothes for American garb.

Whether they will adopt the clothes of their native country on their return remains to be seen. Miss Alice Chang, who spoke for the party at the St. Francis before they sailed on the Manchuria, said:

"It all depends on what is in fashion in China.

Favor American Fashions.

"If we find American clothes fashionable out there, we shall wear them. We adopted them when we entered Gunnison Hall, our Washington school. These are more convenient when traveling," she added, pointing to a pale blue silk crepe costume with the latest frills and furbelows. "When we wear our other clothes, people stare so, and sometimes they laugh. They aren't used to them in Washington."

The question of recent changes in China is of especial interest to Mme. Chang and her daughters.

The idea that women may vote in China and that the door of opportunity is opening for them daily there has caused the Chinese women to be thoughtful.

"I don't know about this voting," said Mme. Chang, through her daughter. "I don't believe very much in it."

"Only for some women," broke in one daughter.

Education Qualification.

"I would make an educational qualification," said Miss Lillie. "Not every woman ought to vote."

"Home is the place for women," said Mme. Chang, true to her country's traditions and centuries of training. "A woman ought to do housekeeping, to stay at home and to have children."

Mme. Chang and the daughters are opposed to the Western idea of a woman earning her own living. They believe she should want to stay at home to be cared for, even if she has to do without some of the extras which her own money can secure.

"Women in China probably never will reach that stage," said Mme. Chang. "There will be fewer opportunities for them to enter professional and business fields."

College is a goal which is being aspired to by the two daughters, although they are not sure yet what particular lines they want to pursue. "We can go if we want to, you know," said Miss Alice. "Our people believe in college for girls if they want it."

Surgeon Rebuilding Man's Entire Face

Ears and Nose Burned Months Ago Are Being Replaced by Series of Operations.

GRAHAM, MO., July 19.—Pierce Fleming, who lives near Graham, is undergoing one of the most remarkable series of operations ever attempted in Missouri. His face is being built anew.

Several months ago the Fleming home was burned and Pierce was severely burned about the head. For a time it was thought he could not live. He finally recovered, but his ears and nose were badly scarred.

A Kansas City surgeon was consulted and he began the work of rebuilding the face of the burned man. The ears have been completely rebuilt and the doctor is now working on the nose and the eyes. It is barely possible now to discern the difference between the new nose and ears of Fleming and the ones he lost in the fire.

High Ad Standard Urged by Maxwell

M. C. MAXWELL

M. C. Maxwell, for seven years sales and advertising manager for several of the different stores operated by the Rhodes Syndicate, is now with the Rhodes-Wood Furniture Company, Whitehall and Mitchell streets, the Atlanta store.

Mr. Maxwell is one of the best advertising men in the furniture business, and his thorough knowledge of this line of work and his courtesy to customers have always made him a popular salesman. He is a firm believer in the standard of advertising as outlined in the Baltimore convention by the Associated Advertising Clubs of America and he believes the time is near when fraudulent advertisers and those who make misstatements in their advertising will not be tolerated.

Mr. Maxwell was president of the Charleston Ad Club for two years, and his capable and earnest administration contributed considerably toward making it one of the leading ad clubs of the South.

He has placed his application for membership in the Atlanta Ad Men's Club and has enrolled as a charter member of the "500,000-by-1920-Club" launched by The Georgian.

He has many friends who predict that his success in other cities will be duplicated in Atlanta and even increased.

WOMAN JURORS SCORN STYLE OF SMART LAWYER

Beau Brummel Clothes and Bachelor Button of Barrister Fail to Win His Cause.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Personal pulchritude and unusually smart habiliments, heightened by a bachelor's button and an ingratiating manner, failed to win for Assistant District Attorney Maxwell McNutt, in his appeal to the jury of women which tried Mrs. Bertha J. Williams on an extortion charge to-day. After deliberating one hour and 55 minutes, the jury, the first in the history of the world composed of women to hear a felony case, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

"Of course she said she did what she did, but we didn't think when she said she did it, she meant she had meant to do it," said one of the jurywomen.

Hence, Mrs. Williams, attired in a fetching Milan hat and a neat white serge tailored suit, much scrutinized by the jurywomen, made discreet osculatory advances to her benefactors, and the incident was closed.

Mrs. Annette Robinson, also armored in attractive feminine fixings, was the complaining witness in the case. She accused Mrs. Williams of having written her a letter April 8, attempting to extort $150 in return for the delivery of a trunk said to have contained certain evidence which, according to the letter, would have embarrassed Mrs. Robinson, had it fallen into the hands of the police.

Meows from Limb of Tree to Voice Love

Chicago Romeo Tries Novel Method of Wooing, but Falls Into Clutches of Law.

CHICAGO, July 19.—John Wadjinski's method of love-making goes back to the days when anthropoid Romeos used to hang by their tails and carol love songs all night long. He put his theories into practice on the night of May 3. To-day he was fined $5 and costs by Judge Sabath, who could find no sympathy for the unconventional wooing.

Sophia Emmerling had retired for the night. John Wadjinski strode through the night with caveman emotions stirring in his breast. He entered the Emmerling yard and climbed a tree. He straddled a branch opposite Sophia's window and began to "meow" like a cat. To the girl thus rudely awakened he made love in a voice that could be heard for a block.

Mrs. Anna Emmerling, the girl's mother, called the police. Wadjinski was yanked from romance to the jail.

MYSTERY MAN'S NAME TO STAY SECRET ALWAYS

Operation on Brain Fails to Reveal Identity of "J. C. R." Has Baffled Surgeons.

ROCHESTER, MINN., July 19.—That "J. C. R.," the mystery patient in the Rochester State Hospital, will never know who he is nor will the world, unless friends of olden days come to the rescue, and that he will never again speak, is the verdict of the surgeons, following a remarkable operation performed upon the brain.

"It is problematical that the operation will accomplish its purpose," said C. C. Heyerdale, first assistant superintendent of the State Hospital, after leaving the operating room.

The opening of the skull revealed a large area of degenerated brain cells covering the centers of speech and memory, and an unusually large cyst containing fluid was removed. This would indicate that in times past "J. C. R." probably suffered a hemorrhage of the brain, which could have been the result of a stroke of apoplexy or an injury inflicted upon the skull or brain. The unusually large area of degeneration discourages any hope that the memory will ever be restored or speech recovered.

Gets Blow Intended For His Twin Brother

Chicago Youth Struck When Angry Swain Avenges Pleasantry His Duplicate Was Guilty Of.

CHICAGO, July 19.—William and Otto Andler, of 3751 North Whipple Street, are twins. William passed a pleasantry about a lass who was going her way with one William Dieverkorn.

Sudden anger surged through Dieverkorn, but he held himself in check and escorted the young woman home. Then he came back, met Andler on the street an gave him a jarring wallop.

Andler soon discovered that the blow was meant for his brother and that Dieverkorn got mixed in the delivery of the goods.

Otto Andler refused to rest on this explanation. He caused the arrest of Dieverkorn, and it came out in court how William got the laugh. Otto got the punch and Dieverkorn got the hook.

Judge Sabith inspected the twins, said he couldn't see any difference and dismissed the case, warning Dieverkorn to be more discriminating in the future.

Human Chain Saves Man on Niagara Brink

Four Men Take Desperate Chance in Rescue Work at Edge of Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 19.—Truman Chapman, aged 22, of Hamilton, Ont., is alive to-day after falling into the Niagara River and being rescued at the very brink of the American Falls. Four men formed a human chain, and, by taking a desperate chance, saved Chapman when his body providentially lodged between projections of rocks.

Chapman, who is subject to fits was leaning against a railing at Prospect Point, directly over the water's edge, when he fell in. The current from this point to the brink of the falls is irresistible, but the unconscious body struck the rocks just right to be held temporarily. John Hughes, T. S. Winders, T. D. Thomas and an unidentified man were the heroes.

Advises Wives to Keep Their Secrets

Head of National Homestead Association Says It's a Mistake for Husbands to Know Too Much.

BOSTON, July 19.—"The wise wife never tells her husband all her secrets. She knows better than to run the chance of losing her independence."

So declared Mrs. Charlotte Smith, head of the National Homestead Association, to-day. The association is studying to find out what makes happy homes. It has learned that if a wife tells her husband everything it is a lesson to him not to tell her his secrets.

"Many divorces are occasioned by married couples knowing too much of each other," declared Mrs. Smith.

Aged Sisters Make White House Carpets

Old Women, Expert Dyers and Weavers, Are Preparing to Decorate Mrs. Wilson's Room.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 19.—Miss Caroline McHargue and Mrs. Martha Walker, of Elkin, aged 74 and 76, respectively, are engaged in preparing carpets, druggets and portieres to furnish the room of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the White House at Washington. They are experts in the blending of colors.

The two aged women are sisters. They live together and are expert dyers and weavers, using the old-time barks and herbs in the dyeing process, and the old-fashioned hand loom cards and spinning wheel.

Cartridge Placed on Track Shoots Youth

Boy May Die from Bullet Which Penetrated Lungs as Result of Belated Celebration.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—A belayed Fourth of July celebration on the part of small boys yesterday may result fatally for 8-year-old Francis Wright, who received a bullet in the chest at Twenty-fourth and Bryant streets. In company with his chums, he had been placing cartridges on the car tracks. One of them exploding, sent a bullet whizzing at him. He was taken to the Mission Emergency Hospital, where it was found that the bullet had penetrated the lung. The boy's parents had him removed to his home, No. 2582 Twenty-fourth street, where his condition is considered grave.

DORSEY FIGHTS MOVEMENT TO INDICT CONLEY

Solicitor Is Bombarded With Letters to Proceed Against Negro as Slayer of Mary Phagan.

THE GRAND JURY IS CALLED

Hottest Battle of Famous Case To Be Waged Behind Closed Doors of Inquisitory Body.

Solicitor Dorsey is fighting vigorously the movement in the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley Monday for the murder of Mary Phagan, despite the bambardment of letters from many citizens and by the sentiment of some of its own members.

It is for the consideration of these letters and petitions, asking the reopening of the Phagan matter, that the meeting has been called.

It was in the face of Solicitor Dorsey's bitterest opposition that the meeting was called at all. Foreman Beattie issued his defi after a previous Grand Jury had been defeated in its efforts to reopen the case with a view of indicting Jim Conley and after Dorsey explicitly had expressed his strongest disapproval of such a move.

Crucial Battle Coming.

With the first skirmish won by those in favor of the indictment of Conley, the hottest battle is yet to be waged behind the closed doors of the jury room. The question first will be on whether the grand jurors consider it proper at this time to reopen the investigation whose first chapter resulted in the indictment of Leo M. Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan. Solicitor Dorsey will lay before the body for the first time all of his reasons for desiring a postponement of all further investigation until after the trial of Frank.

Should the Solicitor be driven back from this position by the Grand Jury again disregarding his wishes and taking up the investigation, he will be forced to take refuge in the last ditch and make his fight against the indictment of Conley.

With all the weight of evidence which has piled up against the negro, it is regarded as beyond the realm of possibilities that he could persuade the jurors to return a "no bill" against Conley on the charge of murder. Dorsey's one remaining hope at this time would be, it is said, to induce the Grand Jury to waive definite action until after the trial of Frank, when it will be in a position to say whether an indictment shall be drawn against Conley as an accessory after the fact, to which he has confessed, or as the actual murderer.

Dorsey Refuse sto Comply.

The Solicitor's attitude in the matter plainly was shown by his statement when Foreman Beattie went to him Friday seeking to have him call the meeting. Dorsey flatly refused and said:

"The meeting's only purpose will be to exploit the evidence and embarrass the State, and I hope the Grand Jury when it meets will decide to leave the matter alone.

"The indictment of Conley at this time will be a useless procedure that will not stop the trial of Frank. It will only have a mild but undesirable effect on the State's case.

"Conley is in jail and is going to stay there for some time. He is where the authorities can put their hands on him, and he can be indicted much more properly after the Frank case has been disposed of than before, and by the delay there is no danger of a miscarriage of justice."

The Solicitor's position is attacked as palpably unfair by those who have been working to bring about the indictment of the negro. Dorsey would have the testimony of the negro accredited as that of any free and trustworthy citizen, while those opposing him declare it should be taken in the light of that of a possible murderer who is endeavoring to shift the blame on another's shoulders, they say.

Evidence More Direct.

They add that the evidence against Conley is far more direct and damning than any ever brought against Frank. They charge, on this account, that Conley has been protected and "coddled" when he should have been placed on the same basis as the other suspect in the case and should go before the jury in that aspect.

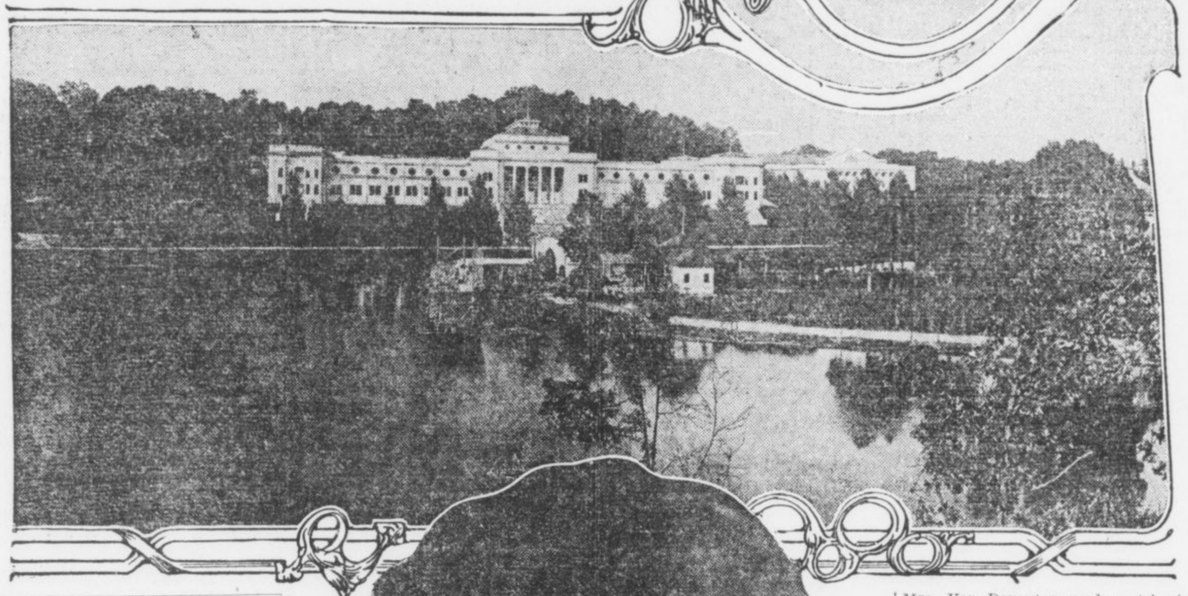
General denials were entered Saturday to the story published Friday that the Pinkertons had changed their attitude in the murder mystery and were convinced of the innocence of Frank. Chief of Detectives Lanford declared that Harry Scott had reaffirmed his belief in the guilt of Frank and the innocence of Conley, except as accessory after the fact.

Atlanta Day To Be Society Event

Knoxville Exposition Plans Feature

Mrs. Van Deventer, Daughter of Mr. Justice Lurton, to Visit City for Conservation Fair.

At the top Mrs. Horace Van Deventer, President of the Woman's Department of the National Conservation Exposition is shown, while the middle picture shows the Liberal Arts Building. Mrs. George W. Denny, a Vice President of the Woman's Department is shown in the lower picture.



Atlanta Day at the National Conservation Exposition in Knoxville this fall will be one of the largest of the many special days arranged for the national fair in the East Tennessee city.

Atlanta Day, according to plans now on foot, will be largely a society function, for the members of the Woman's Department of the exposition headed by Mrs. Horace VanDeventer, a daughter of Justice Lurton of the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as Knoxville's acknowledged society leader, expect to formulate their plans so that many of Atlanta society folk will make the trip to Knoxville for that day.

In addition it is planned to make Atlanta Day at the exposition one of peculiar and intimate interest to all residents of the city.

Mrs. VanDeventer to Come Here.

The plans for this special day are now in the making. They will be matured probably while the delegation of Knoxville business men is in Atlanta next week, and later when Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers in the woman's department come to the Georgia metropolis to take up the matter with Atlanta society folk.

In the preparations for what undoubtedly will be the South's greatest exposition, the woman's department is playing no small part. In Knoxville the exposition management considers itself fortunate that Mrs. VanDeventer consented to take the direction of the woman's work. She has a very large circle of friends and acquaintancse throughout the country, in cities of the North as well as in cities of the South, and what is more, she has succeeded in interesting large numbers of society women in the work she has under way.

Miss Mabel Boardman, president of the American Red Cross Society and a woman who finds time in the multitude of her various philanthropic work to devote herself to society, will be the guest of the woman's department of the exposition on September 19. Miss Boardman to accept this invitation will be obliged to cut short her vacation, but she has gladly consented to do this rather than miss going to Knoxville. She will be made the recipient of many social favors and attentions while in Knoxville. She will be the house guest of Mrs VanDeventer.

Mrs. Hammond Interested.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, of Washington, wife of the multimillionaire mining engineer, who was the special Ambassador from the United States to England at the time of the coronation of King George, is another society woman who has become interested in the Knoxville show and who will come to that city for one of the special days. Mrs. Hammond is president of the National Civic Federation, which will have an extensive exhibit at the Exposition.

Mrs. John Goelet, of Washington; Miss Mabel Wetmore and other women whose names are known the country over will also be guests of the woman's department while the Exposition gates are open. Recently Mrs. Van Deventer made a trip to Nashville to interest the women of that city. On very short notice a meeting was called. Two hundred or more Nashville women went to that meeting. A number of men went also. There was much enthusiasm shown. The result was that plans were completed then and there for a Nashville Day.

More than that—the Nashville Park Commissioners, under whose auspices a splendid exhibit of paintings is being shown in the Parthenon of that city, voluntarily and as a compliment to Mrs. VanDeventer decided to continue the exhibition almost to the time set for the opening of the Conservation Exposition. Then the exhibits will be moved to Knoxville. One of them will be shown in the Art Building; the other, which is the celebrated collection owned by Charles L. Freer, a millionaire art collector, of Detroit, will be placed in the Woman's Building.

Mrs. Denney Also Active.

Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers, among them Mrs. George W. Denney, fourth vice president, who is also the president of the Tennessee State Federation of Women's Clubs and very active in the club life of Knoxville and Tennessee, are planning now to come to Atlanta within a short time to talk matters over with Atlanta women. Just when Mrs. VanDeventer and Mrs. Denney will come or where the meeting will be held has not been decided.

The fact that Atlanta business men are showing a keener interest in the exposition—which is one designed to benefit the entire South—than they have heretofore, and the chances that Atlanta will be well represented at the exposition, is counted upon to assist the women.

The woman's department has planned its work along broad lines. The stereotyped exhibits that always have been a part of women's departments in other expositions will have no place in the Woman's Building at Knoxville. The idea behind the National Conservation Exposition is one of conservation, and these women have figured it out that there is probably nothing that needs conserving more than the energies and the health of women all over this broad land.

So that is what the exhibits in the woman's department will typify to a very large extent. Of course, the things that have a peculiar interest and attraction to women will not be overlooked.

ARTIFICIAL RAIN INSTALLED ON ATLANTA FARM

Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown Protect Crops With Pipe System.

"These dry nights, when my crops are burning up, I can smell that artificial rain a mile off," said a farmer in the suburbs of Atlanta.

The "artificial rain" of which he spoke is produced on three "fancy" farms within a short distance of Five Points, and, according to the unanimous verdict of Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown, who own "overhead irrigation" plants, it means salvation in dry years.

Stories are told of the wonderful crops these farmers grow—two yields of Irish potatoes a year, for instance, from 200 to 300 bushels an acre—six cuttings of alfalfa, crops of beans when the market is bare and beans are worth $2 a bushel.

Yet the system is simple enough.

Pipes Supply Rain.

On posts eight feet high rest pipes about two inches in diameter. These pipes run the whole length of the fields, and the lines of pipe are twenty feet apart. About two feet apart in the pipes are tiny holes. A gasoline engine, a pump which it operates, an abundant supply of water, and the thing is done.

Six hours each evening, when there is no rain, the pump is run and fine streams of water spurt from the holes in the pipes. At high pressure, these streams are thrown almost from one line of pipe to the next. Handles at convenient intervals make it possible to turn the pipes so that the streams are deflected in any direction and the ground thoroughly soaked with the spray.

This system excels ditch irrigation for Georgia soil for the reason that Georgia clay does not soak up water from a ditch in sufficient quantities. Besides, the soil cakes when water is applied in this way. "Artificial rain," however, coming down like a mist, permeates the whole soil and brings results.

Of course, an overhead pipe system is expensive. The cost is estimated at $250 per acre. This might be reduced somewhat if the farmer performed all the labor himself, or it might easily cost more if conditions were not entirely favorable. The increased yield, however, more than overbalances this initial outlay.

Loring Brown tells of getting an $1,100 crop of Irish potatoes from an acre, under his pipe system. In reality, there were two crops, a spring planting and a fall planting, and the potatoes brought a high price because they were sold for seed.

Fail to Realize Work.

"I have only one objection to seeing Belmont farm described in the newspapers," said Mr. Brown, as he sat in a swing on his front gallery and sorted a thick packet of letters. "My objection is that people read of big yields and good profits, then are anxious to try the same methods. They want to spend a lot of money to emulate Belmont, and fail to take account of the hard work that must go with it.

"A farmer, whether he has a fancy farm or one of the old-fashioned kind, must work eighteen hours a day. He must be on the job 365 days a year. That is what many people forget.

Five years ago, drouth killed the entire crop of potatoes on Belmont. Mr. Brown estimates that dry season cost him $3,000. That winter he went to Greeley, Colo., where overhead irrigation is in use, to see if he could work out a solution of the problem—some sort of insurance against drouth. The pipe lines were the answer. Farms around Atlanta can not grow the same yields produced around Greeley, but the difference in price caused by being closer to a good market overcomes the lesser yield, and more.

Zimmer Installs System.

Mr. Zimmer, on his Kimballville Farm, installed an identical system, though on a smaller scale, and since he installed it, never has had occasion to use it. By some streak of fate, his farm has been blessed with abundant rains.

But rain is freakish in choosing its itinerary. In Atlanta itself and out as far as the Chattahoochee River rains have been sufficient this year. But beyond the river there is serious drouth. Crops are drying up. Irrigation would have been the salvation of the farmers.

And as they sit in front of their homes at night, they can smell the sweet odor of refreshed fields at Belmont—"that darn artificial rain."

WIVES CREDITED WITH KEEPING HUSBANDS ALIVE

Medical Association Finds That Benedict's Regular Existence Is Better Than Bachelor's.

Supervision by wives as a possible reason for the greater longevity of married men than of bachelors is discussed by The Journal of the American Medical Association in its editorial section of the recently published statistics on this point. There is no remark on the statistics of more suicides among married men than bachelors.

The Journal has further information indicating that careful as the married men may be, with restraint once removed through the death or divorce of the wife, widowers and grass widowers leap into indiscretions and are lopped off more rapidly than either those still in the state or those who escaped matrimony.

Live Regular Lives.

"Undoubtedly the low death rate among married men is partly due to the fact that, as a rule, those who are in good health, are readier to marry, while those with more delicate health, especially if suffering from any definite ailment, are not willing to assume the burden and responsibility of a family," says The Journal. "Another factor is that married men live much more regular lives as a rule, and consequently avoid many of the dangers of irregular living.

"This view would seem to be corroborated by the statistics as to the mortality among married men who have lost their wives either by death or divorce. The death rate among these "unmarried men" is considerably higher than that of husbands of the same age, and even as a rule it is higher than that of the bachelors of the same age.

Widowers Die Fast.

"The death rate, for instance, of widowers and divorced men between 20 and 30 is nearly double that of single men. From 30 to 40 it is only 14.1 to 12.9, while from 40 to 50 the mortality of divorced and widowers is slightly less than that of single men of the same age. From 50 to 60, however, it is slightly higher once more.

"At all these ages the mortality rate among widowers and the divorced is at least nearly and sometimes double that of married men of the same age."

Feeds Her Pet Pig With a Silver Spoon

Denver Society Woman Provides Bed of Down and Linen for Her Porcine Possession.

DENVER, July 19.—Mrs. Whitney Newton, a Denver society matron, has a new pet.

Young Robert Newton came home a few evenings ago and brought a baby pig with him.

Mrs. Newton took the squirming animal into her arms and tried to make it comfortable, but without success. Finally, in desperation, she went to the linen closet, took out a fine piece of hemstitched linen, embroidered with blue flowers, wrapped it gently about the slick little pig, then laid him cautiously upon the downy pillows beside her own.

Piggy gave a satisfied little squeak, doubled up his feet and went off to sleep happily.

This cunning act won Mrs. Newton's heart, and from exasperation she developed a positive liking for her pet. His white skin is washed, combed and perfumed and he sleeps in a downy bed every night beside his mistress. He also eats from a silver spoon.

EXPRESS CLAIM OFFICES TO BE CONSOLIDATED

Savannah To Be Headquarters of Florida, Georgia and Southeastern Divisions of Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Consolidated claim offices of three divisions of the Southern Express Company will be located in Savannah after August 1, in pursuance of an order promulgated from the general headquarters of the concern several days ago, official notice of which has just been received here. Simultaneously general claim offices will be opened in Richmond and Chattanooga.

Claim departments, distinct and separate from the other branches of the company's business, will be an entirely new thing with this big corporation. W. K. Weaver, of Savannah, chief clerk in the office of Division Superintendent C. C. Wolfe, will be in charge of the consolidated claims office here.

Heretofore it has been the practice of the company to have small claims departments in the offices of each division superintendent, and with him as the chief claim agent.

The offices in Savannah will bring about the consolidation of the claims department of the Florida, the Georgia and the Southeastern divisions of the company. The headquarters of the Florida division have been in Jacksonville, while those of the Southeastern division have been in Atlanta. The Georgia division headquarters have always been in Savannah.

The consolidation will bring 42 new employees of the company to this city. About 25 of these will come from Atlanta, while the others will be transferred from Jacksonville.

The establishment of the claim office at Richmond will embrace the offices now at Wilmington, N. C.; Charlotte and Norfolk. The Chattanooga office will embrace all of the Western division of the company.

Court Calls Both of Boy's Parents Unfit

Serious Charges Are Made Against Proprietor of Inlet Hotel at Tybee and His Wife.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—So serious are the charges and counter-charges in the alimony case of Mrs. Amnia Jones against W. A. Jones, proprietor of the Inlet Hotel at Tybee, that Judge Walter G. Charlton has stated from the bench in the Superior Court that he doesn't consider either the father or the mother fit to have the custody of their four-year-old son.

Witness testified to alleged misconduct of Mrs. Jones during the absence of her husband, who is an engineer on the Tybee branch of the Central of Georgia Railroad and obliged to spend a portion of his time in the city. Other witness testified to gross neglect and mistreatment of Mrs. Jones on the part of her husband.

Playground Question Rests With Militia

Savannah Volunteer Guards and Georgia Hussars Must Vote to Give Land for Purpose.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Whether the Park Extension will be converted into a model playground and athletic park has not been finally determined. The Savannah Volunteer Guards and the Georgia Hussars, the two military organizations which have not yet given their consent and approval to the plan, have not taken action in regard to the matter.

No special meeting of the Hussars has been held, owing to the absence from the city of Captain Frank P. McIntyre. The Guards have discussed the matter, but owing to the fact that no definite proposition has been put up to them, they have neither approved nor disapproved the plan.

The extension is under the control of the military and the city jointly, and has been set aside as a drill ground.

Savannah to Ask Civil Service Law

Police and Fire Departments To Be Put Under Regulations—Efficiency Tests Are Planned.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Alderman George B. Elton's civil service bill will be introduced in the Legislature during the present session.

The special committee appointed by the Mayor to investigate the civil service regulations in other cities has completed its work and recommended the introduction of the bill at the present session. The measure will be immediately advertised for the specified period.

If the bill passes, the Mayor will be authorized to appoint a special committee of three, to be known as the Civil Service Commisson, this commission to have entire charge of the administration of the civil service law in the city. The bill provides that the police and fire departments be placed under civil service, the idea being to divorce these departments from politics.

The bill provides for efficiency tests for the members of the police and fire departments. The selection of appointees will be governed by their moral, mental and physical fitness, and their tenure of office will not depend on the vagaries of politics. They would not be subject to removal unless it were proved that they had been guilty of misconduct or that they were otherwise unfit for their positions.

Whether the bill will pass the Legislature is a question. Its passage will be determined largely by the attitude of the Chatham County Representatives toward it. If a majority of the legislators from this county agree it is a good measure, it probably will go through, but if there is a difference of opinion among the legislators, its defeat is pretty well assured.

LIARS' CONTEST ENDS IN TIE, ANOTHER IS TO BE HELD

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Because three well-known citizens tied for first place in the liars' convention just held in Waycross, it has been decided to hold a second convention to break the tie. The Moose Club is responsible for the inauguration of the novel convention and has decided to present an additional prize to the winner in the next.

City Officials Will Take Turn as Mayor

Savannah Executive Now Plans Regular Daily Period for Conferring With City Employees.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Hereafter city officials will be shown no favoritism when they call on Mayor Richard J. Davant on city business. They will have to take their chances along with everybody else. If one of the humblest citizens happens to get into the Mayor's reception room first the city official will have to wait his turn.

Mayor Davant has given his secretary instructions to this effect, and they will have to stand until a system of office hours which the Mayor has in mind can be put into effect.

It is the Mayor's plan to set aside a certain hour each day for interviews with city officials on city business. This hour will be made known to the people, and callers other than city officials will not be allowed to see the Mayor during that period. Another hour—or two, if necessary—will be set aside for the public.

At present there is no system of this sort at the City Hall, and the callers see the Mayor whenever their time comes. Heretofore city officials have been given precedence over all others irrespective of the time they arrived or how many people are ahead of them.

It has been the case that a city official was admitted to the Mayor the moment he arrived at the office, no matter if a dozen or so people had been waiting for some time for an interview.

A. Parker, of the Waycross circuit. A motion for a new trial was refused by Judge Parker, whose decision has received the backing of the Georgia Court of Appeals.

JURY BELIEVES BULLARD TO BE SPAIN'S SLAYER

Investigation of Death of Eccentric and Wealthy Farmer Ends in Coroner's Verdict.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—The Clinch County Coroner's Jury investigating the mysterious murder of Mack Spain, an eccentric and wealthy farmer, has returned a verdict accusing Tom Bullard, a white man just entering the twenties.

Bullard is the man who found Spain's body, or rather informed searchers of the place where the body could be found. His part in the search for the body is one thing that has turned suspicion to him, as it is alleged he told members of the searching party Spain's body was on the edge of a pond and could be seen easily. When found the body was in a location that made it impossible for any one to see it from the place Bullard said he was when he first discovered the farmer's remains.

At least one more white man, and officers are inclined to believe a third, may become implicated. Bullard has steadfastly refused to make any statement beyond saying that he knows nothing of how Spain was killed.

Another arrest may be made within a few days. Both men suspected of knowing something of the death and the robbery have been found and it is declared will not be able to get away. Sheriff Lee, of Clinch, has been in Waycross working on a clew that he found near Spain's home and this, it is said, will fix the responsibility for the murder beyond any doubt. No one has been able to ascertain how much was taken from Spain, nor where it was put. Bullard has told officers nothing that will aid them in this respect.

3 Hurt in $15,000 Fire at Waycross

L. B. Boggs, City Building Inspector, injured a foot; A. C. Monroe, a fireman, was hit on the head by a falling timber, and F. D. Rexler was badly burned about the face and arms.

J. W. Cox, a boarder, lost a $400 diamond ring and $130 in cash. L. B. Harriell, owner of the house, estimates his loss at $5,000, with partial insurance.

Granite Hen House To Foil Marauders

Flock Reduced to Lone Hen, Moultrie Man Lays Plans for Burglar-Proof Building.

MOULTRIE, July 19.—R. B. Vick has a unique plan for defeating the evil intentions of chicken thieves, his once flourishing flock having fallen into their hands until now he has but one lone hen.

Vick is going to lay the cornerstone of a granite chicken coop in a few days. He hopes in this manner to foil marauders. He has posted at his front gate an invitation to all chicken thieves to be present at the ceremony and inspect the plans.

Every door and window will be double locked and barred and rigged with wires in such way that if one is touched an alarm will be sounded.

Zanalda was courted by many of the young braves. She fell in love with the handsomest man and the day was set for the ceremony. Elk Tooth suddenly deserted her for another girl of the tribe, and, heartbroken, Zanalda sought surcease in death.

FARM UNION TO UNITE FORCES WITH TOILERS

Federation of Labor and Agricultural Organization to Co-operate Closely if Plans Mature.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Plans that are expected to aid the proposed consolidation of work of the American Federation of Labor and the Farmers' Union were discussed at length in Waycross to-day when a joint committee representing the trade unionists and the Ware County Farmers' Union held a conference.

S. B. Marks, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, and Robert Fechner, secretary, attended, as did President James Cowart, of the Ware County Farmers' Union.

It is not proposed that the National Farmers' Union and the American Federation of Labor shall affiliate and become one big organization. The movement seeks only a unity of purpose—close co-operation for mutual welfare.

Following the conference it was announced that a joint meeting of the State executive committees of the Farmers' Union and the Georgia Federation of Labor would be called. When this is done it is expected that the national organizations will adopt a similar plan for use in the entire country.

Worth $250,000 Now, Still 'Bucks' Wood

E. G. Kastenhuber's Only New Plans Are to Widen Scope of His Laboratory Work.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Finding himself in possession of cash and property worth a quarter of a million dollars has not caused Edwin G. Kastenhuber to change his way of living. If anything, he is working harder now than before. He can be found any morning just at daylight out in his backyard cutting wood. That's his first morning work at home and he refers to it as his "exercise."

Plans for more extensive laboratory work have been made by Mr. Kastenhuber and with the means at hand to carry them out, he expects in a short while to demonstrate some valuable formulae. One of his successes is a mixture of ordinary South Georgia sand with chemicals, forming a hard tile, colored in any way desired. Fancy bricks made by him have withstood all kinds of tests.

Discussing the new turn of events, Mr. Kastenhuber says he does not feel any different since getting $250,000.

"In my new laboratory I will have fitted up special quarters for students and will have a department open to the medical profession. The best time I can have is when I am working, and I am certainly not going to start loafing just because I am well fixed," he said.

Storm Does Damage In Moultrie Section

Naval Stores Operators and Farmers Suffer Loss From Wind, Rain and Hail.

MOULTRIE, July 19.—The terrific wind and electrical storm that swept over this section last night wrought considerable damage over a wide area.

At Omega, just north of here, several houses were unroofed, while three were blown to the ground, the inmates escaping death in a miraculous manner. Pine trees boxed for turpentine snapped in two and the loss to naval stores operators will amount to hundreds of dollars. In the eastern part of the county a torrential rain, accompanied by hail, devastated crops. In Moultrie lightning struck one house. The high wind blew over a church in the suburbs.

R. L. English Is Found Guilty of Stealing Wire from Savannah Electric Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—With his pretty wife, not yet out of her teens, sitting in the courtroom, R. L. English has been tried and convicted in the City Court of the larceny of copper wire from the Savannah Electric Company. Mrs. English, hardly more than a girl, clad in a pink summer dress and wearing a big leghorn hat with a wreath of red roses, sat calmly through the trying ordeal. Mrs. English maintains that her husband is innocent of any intentional wrongdoing.

Indian Papoose Is Raised by Soldiers

Full-Blooded Modoc, Back at Old Home, Tells Romantic Story of Early Life.

KLAMATH FALLS, July 19.—Kit Carson, a full-blood Modoc, visited his native land a few days ago for the first time since his babyhood.

The story of the life of Carson is unique. In 1852 a detachment of Government troops was sent to the Klamath country to quiet reported uprisings among the Indians. A large band of Indians had established a village on the shore of the lake. When the Indians caught sight of the soldiers they made a hasty departure.

Kit Carson, who was then about a year old, was left behind by his frightened mother. It was difficult for the soldiers to determine what to do with the child. Finally a soldier named Woods asked that he be permitted to adopt the boy. He gave the little fellow the name of Kit Carson and found him a temporary home with a Spanish family at Yreka.

Police of Waycross For 'Slashed Skirt'

Men, Not Women, To Be Arrested if Latest Style Causes Too Much Excitement.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Wearers of the new style "slashed skirt" have nothing to fear in Waycross. The police will not arrest wearers of the new skirt, but will see that men do not let their curiosity make them obnoxious.

The first time a slashed skirt was seen here the wearer paraded up and down one of the city's main business streets and as long as she was on the street there was an unusual number of men found "strolling"—none of the strollers getting very far from the skirt. It is said that a number of women here have purchased the slashed skirts and after trying them on at home, have sewn up most of the slash or worn the skirt with a petticoat.

ST. SIMONS, July 19.—Sunday will be a day of rest for the Second Georgia Regiment, and the men will be given a chance to get acquainted with the historic island. There will be nothing to do until the big dress parade at 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

The first dress parade was held Saturday afternoon. The regimental dance was given on Saturday night, the Second Regiment Band furnishing the music. The boys turned out in force with their brass buttons, to the delight of the girls on the island. So far this has been the big event of the encampment. On Saurday the officer of the day was W. G. Fage, and officer of guard, J. J. Vest, both of Albany.

MELON SEASON OVER, BUYERS SEEN NO MORE

Jovial Solicitors Depart, Leaving Behind Much Cash—Larger Acreage for 1914 Certain.

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—The finish of the watermelon season in South Georgia is at hand and the face of the ubiquitous melon buyer will be seen no more in the land until another year rolls around.

These buyers are a jolly set and soon make themselves part of the life of a town, knowing everybody by name, rooting vociferously for the home ball team and becoming generally popular while sandwiching in a lot of business for their respective roads or houses.

The farmer who decided not to plant watermelons for shipment this year is regretful now, as the season has been the finest in years and the prices have kept up well through the whole season.

Charlie Aldag, of Pidcock, reports eight carloads shipped from five and a half acres of land, and there are others coming very nearly up to it. A number of farmers received as high as from $200 to $225 on special carloads. The results of the present season mean the biggest acreage in watermelons next year that has ever been known here.

Columbus Attaches Tardy Taxpayers

Residents Who Are Well-to-Do Refuse to Send Checks for Paving Assessments.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Following the instructions of Mayor Chappell, Marshal George J. Burrus, has issued attachments against a large number of Columbus property owners, because of failure to pay paving assessments.

The city has paving accounts amounting to more than $27,000. Many who are amply able to pay for some reason have refused.

CORDELE SWELTERS WHEN TEMPERATURE GOES TO 110

CORDELE, July 19.—Yesterday went on record as probably being the hottest day that has ever been felt in Cordele. The thermometer registered 105 in the shade and in the sun it reached 110 degrees. There was no wind stirring through most of the day, which caused the heat to reach an almost unbearable degree. When a breeze did stir the heat waves were so intense that they were almost scorching in their effect.

TWO-SESSION SCHOOL PLAN TO STICK AT THOMASVILLE

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—To stick to two sessions a day in the public schools here for at least another term was the decision of the Thomasville Board of Education at its meeting this week. A petition signed by several hundred of the patrons of the school was presented asking that it restore the old one-session rule, but, after considering the matter, the majority of the board voted to let the present rule continue.

A. P. A. HOLDS SECRET MEETING AT CORDELE

CORDELE, July 19.—A meeting of the members of the American Protective Association of Cordele was held last night, at which time it is thought that permanent organization was effected. However, as the political body held the meeting behind closed doors, none of the details acted upon by the gathering became definitely known outside of the members.

NEGRO AT THOMASVILLE COMMITTED SUICIDE

THOMASVILLE, July 19—With a pistol in his hand, his thumb on the trigger and a bullet hole in the center of his forehead, Jack Lofton, a negro section hand on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, was found dead locked in his house. It is an unusual thing for a negro to commit suicide. This is the second case known here among the members of that race.

TRAVELING WATER WAGON IS PROVIDED FOR HORSES

BOSTON, July 19.—A traveling water cart from which horses may be refreshed has been placed in commission in Boston's streets by the S. P. C. A.

For years the society has been furnishing water from hydrant stations, but recently there have been many requests for a watering place in sections of the city where it would be impractical to open hydrants. Hence the advent of the water cart.

For social news of the South see page 10 this section and the society section.

Court Orders Sale Of Property Halted

Fourth National of Columbus Gets Injunction to Prevent Debtor Transferring Holdings.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Judge Z. A. Littlejohn, of Americus, who heard the argument in the petition of the Fourth National Bank of this city, against Leo Lowenherz and H. M. Mooty, in which the bank was seeking to enjoin them from disposing of property made over by Mooty to Lowenherz, has handed down his decision, in which he enjoins Lowenherz from disposing of the property without first giving bond to the amount of the sale of the property, until after a final settlement of the case in the courts.

There is $13,000 involved, over which Mooty transferred to Lowenherz last February in settlement of a claim the latter held against the former. At the time the property transfer was made Mooty owed the bank something like $1,500 and had no other property on which the bank could obtain its money. Lowenherz is president of one of the largest dry goods establishments in West Georgia and Mooty is his former bookkeeper.

OLD COLUMBUS STANDPIPE NOW IS BEING DESTROYED

COLUMBUS, July 19.—An old Columbus landmark is passing away with the removal of the standpipe on Upper Broad street, which was erected during the year 1888, when Cliff B. Grimes was Mayor.

The standpipe when torn down will be rebuilt on Wynn's Hill, which is one of the highest points about the city and the Columbus Water Supply Company will extend its mains from North Highlands, where a new settling basin will be built to the standpipe, a distance of three miles.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—A suit for $10,000 has been filed against the Columbus Railroad Company by John H. Newsome, who alleges that on February 22 he was permanently injured, when a car of the defendant company struck a negro's horse and knocked it against him. The negro, whose horse was struck by the car, does not figure in the suit, as he has never filed any claim against the street railway company and his name is not known.

COLUMBUS INVESTIGATING DROWNING IN RESERVOIR

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The city of Columbus has started an investigation of the report that a man named Hamilton, who was recently reported drowned in Holland Creek, was really drowned in the reservoir from which Columbus gets a part of its water supply. In fact it is acknowledged that the man was really drowned in the reservoir, but that he was gotten out before the water was contaminated.

Power Company May Use Tallulah 'Juice'

Incorporators of Columbus Concern Silent and Rumor Is Busy as to Their Aims.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Edward W. Swift, J. P. Illges, J. P. Kyle, Clifford J. Swift, John T. Davis, Jr., J. P. Golden, T. E. Golden, O. C. Bulloch, E. J. Rankin, John A. Rankin, E. P. Dismukes and Harry L. Williams have filed a petition for a charter for the Muscogee Light and Power Company.

The capital stock will be $50,000 paid in, but the incorporators ask for the privilege of increasing its capital to $1,000,000 by a majority vote from time to time. Much speculation is rife as to the intentions of promoters, but they refuse to talk.

It is the opinion of many that they propose to establish a power company in this city and take their current from the Georgia Power Company's plant a Tallulah Falls. The proposed company announces its intention of furnishing current for lighting, heating, operating electric cars and to conduct a business similar to other corporations of like character.

Woman Sues to Save Parrot From Cursing

Tells Court That Bird Is Under Baneful Influences Now as Property of Saloon Man.

ALTON, ILL., July 19.—Mrs. Geneva Littlehage has applied to Justice Daniel Gorman for a replevin writ to obtain possession of a parrot to save him from the baneful influences of a saloon.

"The bird never swore once in his life, and I can't bear the thought of his learning to curse," she told the Justice. "You ought to help along the cause by not charging me anything for the papers."

Mrs. Littlehage said while coming from Kansas City to Alton she employed a porter to carry the cage. She said he ran off with the parrot and when she next heard of it the bird had been sold to a saloon man for $10. The proprietor of the saloon refused, it is said, to give it to the owner.

Concrete Patch Put On River's Bottom

Engineers Employ Novel Method of Keeping Texas Stream From Habit of Losing Itself.

MARTINDALE, TEXAS, July 19.—It has been found necessary to put another patch on the bed of the Blanco River. This stream has a remarkable way of losing itself, and in order to restore it to its surface channel a concrete patch has been placed upon the holes through which it disappears.

For many years it has been emptying portions of its flow into small holes in its bed, but it was not until about a year ago that the entire bottom, so to speak, dropped out at a point near San Marcos. In one night the river below that point went dry. It had had a width of nearly 200 feet and was flowing a strong current until the sudden disappearance of the water.

PLAN BIG FETE WHEN CANAL IS READY FOR USE

Flotilla to Make Trip From Columbus Down Chattahoochee to St. Andrew's Bay.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—For the purpose of celebrating the opening of the St. Andrews Bay Canal in an appropriate manner next fall, the Columbus Board of Trade will take steps at once to memorialize Congress to assist. The Navy Department will be asked to send warships to St. Andrews Bay, and men of national fame will be invited to make addresses at the various points along the river and canal where stops are made.

The plan is to begin at Columbus and have a flotilla travel down the Chattahoochee River, giving a whole week over to the ceremonies, which will be elaborate. South Georgia, South Alabama and West Florida are much interested in the scheme.

It is expected that there will be several hundred persons who will make the trip down the river to St. Andrews Bay.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Leonard Mordaunt, ex-convict, scion of a noble English family, and better known in the role of a prison-reform worker, was ordained to the ministry of the Free Methodist Church by Bishops Jones and Sellew at the close of the annual conference which has been going on in the secluded aisles of Mineral Park.

During twenty years he has ranged from the welcome member of exclusive circles of European society to the lowest grade of convict. He became a convert and decided to dedicate the remaining years of his existence to the service of God and humanity.

ST. PAUL, July 19.—Fifty elk from the Yellowstone National Park, if they can be obtained, will be turned loose in Minnesota in the Superior forest and game reserve, which lies along the Canadian boundary line north of Lake Superior.

The territory is the natural home of the elk, and together with the adjoining national reserve covers more than 1,000,000 acres. There are no elk in either reserve now. It is estimated that the annual increase in the herd will be 50 per cent. This is the increase noted in the Yellowstone Park.

Bold Amazon Shoves Auto Out of Her Way

Worcester, Mass., Woman Merely Bruises Her Finger When She Pushes Car from Path.

WORCESTER, MASS., July 19.—Agnes Olsen, 30, known far and wide as "the Amazon," is none the worse today, save for a sore finger, as a result of her stopping a touring car on Main street, and pushing it back out of her way. The machine was unharmed.

Walter Shea, chauffeur of the touring car, was startled to see a woman walk in front of the machine as he was passing City Hall. His horror turned to amazement when she turned as he ground on his brakes, calmly grasped the car by the hood, and not only stopped its menacing approach, but pushed it back a foot.

Race Restrictions In Hotels Illegal

New York Attorney General Writes Opinion That They Violate New Civil Rights Bill.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 19.—There must be no discrimination because of race, creed or color at any public resort, place of amusement or of public accommodation, under the amended civil rights law which takes effect September 1, 1913.

The attention of Attorney General Carmody has been called to the fact that circulars are being issued by some health resorts in the State, in which is the announcement that the places are not open to certain races.

In a statement to-day Mr. Carmody reviews the statute and declares that such notices will be prohibited.

Lathrop, head of the National Children's Bureau, has returned to the home of her birth and childhood to espouse the cause of the nation's babies and to appeal to the executives of Illinois cities to join in the movement of a broadening municipal protection for child growth.

Miss Lathrop renewed her demand for a rigid birth registration law and referred to the progress being made in that direction.

Bridge Burns; Stops Traffic on A., B. & A.

Alapaha River Crossing Destroyed by Fire—Sparks From Locomotive Blamed for Blaze.

CORDELE, July 19.—The Alapaha River bridge on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlanta Railway, two miles south of Rebecca, was destroyed by fire yesterday about noon, temporarily putting at a standstill all freight traffic over the road between Cordele and Fitzgerald. It is thought that the fire caught from sparks from the engine of a northbound passenger train.

Until the bridge can be rebuilt, which will probably require a week, all passenger trains will be detoured between Cordele and Tifton over the Georgia Southern and Florida Railroad, and between Fitzgerald and Tifton over the Thomasville branch of the A., B. & A. road. Perishable freight also will be routed over these roads.

Hot Weather Causes Sabbath-Breaking

Ice Company Sets Aside Old Rule and Decides to Deliver to Customrs on Sunday.

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—The heat wave of the past week proved too much for the Sabbath-keeping rules of the Thomasville Ice Company and it has decided to go back to delivering ice to customers on that day.

For a year or two past no ice was delivered on Sunday anywhere in the city and those who wanted an extra quantity over the supply laid in on Saturday had to go or send to the factory for it. Many complaints have been sent in of late that the expense of buying a large quantity on Saturday to last over Sunday was too much for the ordinary citizen.

Wasp Sting Enables Cripple to Walk

Regains Use of Legs After 38 Years on Crutches When Insect Invades Bed.

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—Charles Wightman, deputy county clerk at Clayton, told a reporter how he had just been able to walk without crutches for the first time in 38 of the 42 years of his life. He fell when he was 4 and injured both legs permanently.

He said that a neighbor had told him a snake story just before he went to bed.

He thought how comfortable it was to live in a country where one could sleep in peace instead of in one of those countries where he had heard snakes sometimes creep in and share one's bed.

He thrust his right leg deeper under the covers. Then something that stung like a hot needle pierced his ankle. "I sprang out of bed and ran and stumbled twelve feet across the room," he said. "It was the first time I had taken so many steps unassisted since I was a baby."

"And was it really a snake?" he was asked. "No; it was a wasp." And he showed the ankle where the sting had swollen it.

Pawns Gold Teeth He Didn't Chew With

Kansan Says He Could Masticate on Other Side and Cakes Crowns to Loan Agent.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—"I don't need these teeth to chew with and they're loose, anyway," an old man said at the municipal pawnshop, pulling seven gold crowns out of his mouth and laying them on the counter.

"These teeth are just a losing investment as long as I do all my chewing on the other side, anyway. I might as well be getting something on them. Can you make me a loan?"

Ralph Perry, manager of the pawnshop, gave the man $1.75 on his gold bicuspids and molars.

"When the ones on the other side get loose, I'll be back after these," the man promised. "My dentist said there was gold enough in the bunch so he could trade me a set of false teeth for 'em as soon as the crowns all wore out and got loose."

Wagons Must Have Lights at Both Ends

Washington State Will Enforce Strict Vehicle Law—All Classes Affected.

SEATTLE, July 19.—On and after August 1 every vehicle in this State must be provided with both rear and front lights in case night travel is necessary. Automobiles, wagons, buggies and cycles must carry lights so that travelers in front or behind may see.

Farmers as well as city residents are affected, and the old familiar farm wagon will be altered by a lantern hung from the rear axle and a spotlight fastened to the spring seat. The law was necessary because of the increasing traffic at night through sections where roads are narrow and grades dangerous.

500 FARMERS AT COLLEGE TO HEAR SOIL LECTURE

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., July 19.—Kankakee farmers, 500 strong, visited the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois. Professor J. C. Collier, "soil director" for the county, was in charge of the excursion, which came on a special train.

Dr. C. G. Hopkins lectured on soil and fertility, and afterward the university farm was inspected. Eighty women in the party inspected the domestic science department. Luncheon was served by "co-eds."

FIGHT ASSURED OVER LOCATION FOR HOSPITAL

Columbus Owns Two Lots—Others Offered at High Price. Present Site Undesirable.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Now that the hospital bond issue has been carried, and the city when it sells its $60,000 worth of bonds will be in a position to erect a first-class hospital, a fair-sized row is in sight over the location.

As usual, there are a number of sites offered, at prices above the average. The city owns one or two lots that are available in addition to the one where the present hospital stands.

The location of the present hospital is just about as uninviting as it would be possible to find, there being railroad yards, roundhouse and shops on the south, a sash and door plant on the east, railroad tracks on the west and a tombstone and marble works plant and a cemetery on the north.

Engineer Races His Train Past Flames

Row of Houses and 100-Cord Stack of Wood Beside Track Are Burned.

CORDELE, July 19.—Passengers on an Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic train had an exciting experience yesterday afternoon when the train came upon a fire very close to the tracks in the vicinity of Hatley, in which more than 100 cords of wood and several small houses were destroyed.

In order to pass the fire with safety, the engineer was obliged to open the throttle and put his engine to the fastest speed. All of the passengers went through the experience safely, though the heat from the fire was so intense that some of them were almost suffocated. The wood had been stacked alongside the track for shipment. How the fire originated was not learned.

Seaboard to Make Division at Cordele

All Developments Point to Plan for Increasing Importance of Crisp Metropolis.

CORDELE, July 19.—The Seaboard Air Line is considering establishing relay shops in Cordele, it seems, for the road has concluded to make this point the passenger terminal for the Savannah-Montgomery division.

Railroad men say they have seen orders to different passenger trainmen that two months after July 1 they would be required to take up their runs for both directions at this point. Another fact that seems to give backing to the report is that recent inquiries have been made by conductors and engineers, seeking to secure residences here. More than 50 new citizens would be brought to Cordele by the change. The present passenger terminal is at Americus.

EXPRESS AGENT AND CASH MISSING FROM WARWICK

CORDELE, July 19.—S. J. Smith, an employee of the Southern Express Company, acting as temporary agent at Warwick, between Cordele and Albany, on the Georgia Southwestern and Gulf Railway, during a vacation of the regular agent, disappeared last night, and, it is said, took all the funds on hand. It is reported that he came to Cordele, but officers here failed to locate him.

Brooks County Strip Would Be in Lowndes

Movement Started to Have Bill Introduced in Legislature to Have Transfer Made.

VALDOSTA, July 19.—A movement has been started here to transfer a strip of territory on the southern border of Brooks County to Lowndes County, and the Representatives in the Legislature will be asked to introduce a bill to that effect.

The territory affected lies along the Willacoochee River, remote from the county seat of Brooks County, and it is claimed that the people living in that section are anxious to be placed in Lowndes County.

The National Highway passes throug hthe stretch of territory, but it is understood that the County Commissioners of Brooks County have refused to maintain the highway or do any work whatever on it.

Business men in this city recently subscribed nearly $1,000 to be expended on the highway through the strip mentioned. Brooks County refused to do anything whatever toward building and maintaining the road.

RAILROAD WILL FIGHT PAVING OF VALDOSTA LAND

Atlantic Coast Line Will Test Right of City to Assess It for Work.

VALDOSTA, July 19.—The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company today notified the Mayor and Council of Valdosta that it will not consent to the paving of Savannah avenue and requesting the city to have the brick which are piled along the avenue removed from its property.

The action of the road brings to a head the differences between the city and the road affecting the ownership of the thoroughfare.

It is understood that the city will pave the street and levy the assessments for the work as they are made against other property owners. The railroad is expected to begin legal action to prevent this, and the ownership of the property will be settled by the courts.

HARD THICK CRUST COVERED BOY'S HEAD

Cracked with Least Pressure, Causing Discharge. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In One Week Entirely Cured.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my baby of an ulcerated sore behind her ear and now we think we cannot keep house without them." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Poss, Nov. 5, 1912.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. Human System Poisons Itself

OtherwiseMost of UsWould Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

GUARD YOUR HEALTH! NUXCARA!

Warm weather is dangerous. It will play havoc with your digestion. Your appetite will wane. You will not feel inclined to eat the proper, nourishing food. Irregular meals, imperfectly masticated, will ruin your digestion. Without good digestion life is worthless.

Take NUXCARA

3 Times a Day—

One-half hour before each meal. Then you can eat three nourishing meals each day without discomfort. Your appetite will respond to the improved condition of your digestive system. Your health will be assured.

Nuxcara is a guaranteed remedy for the treatment of the membranes of the stomach and intestines. It is not a digestive agent, but a certain and positive cure for indigestion and dyspepsia.

Prominent Citizen Indorses NUXCARA

Mr. J. W. Brooks, traveling representative of The Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, says: "For two years I have carried in my grip a bottle of Nuxcara, and would not think of going out on the road without it. I consider it the most wonderful discovery in medicine. The number of people who suffer with indigestion and dyspepsia, the terrible distress they suffer, no one knows but those who have had experience with it. When one remedy after another fails, when digestive agents seem to aggravate it. In the face of all this, Nuxcara cures in every case—truly it is a wonderful remedy."

ASK YOUR DRUGGIST

Nuxcara promotes the secretion of natural digestive fluids, restores and reduces the inflamed membranes. Proper assimilation is re-established. Nutrition is improved. Hence, Nuxcara increases vitality.

Hundreds of Atlantans testify as to its merits. The best physicians recommend it. An Atlanta druggist discovered it after years of scientific study.

Read this testimonial. Nuxcara will do the same for you, if you take it three times a day.

COLUMBUS MILL SCHOOL HELD AS MODEL BY U. S.

How Georgia City Is Caring for Cotton Factory Children Told in Government Pamphlet.

How Columbus is caring for the education of the boys and girls of its cotton mills is the story embodied in a pamphlet published by the United States Department of Education, copies of which were circulated in Atlanta yesterday.

How the boys and girls of the mills themselves work against going to school, rendering doubly hard the problem before the public, is a pitiful note of the story.

They call their school in Columbus the "dinner toters' school," because even during their school days they must work, taking hot lunches to their parents, brothers, sisters, and others who work in the mills.

Must Take Parents' Lunch.

The pamphlet tells of this custom, revealing something of the life of the cotton mill child. It says:

"The long intermission in the middle of the day is necessary that the children may take the lunches to the mills. Many of the mills are some distance from the school—some more than a mile away. Most of the children, therefore, walk more than two miles during the noon hour. Besides, they are compelled to wait 20 or 30 minutes for the operatives to eat their dinners before taking the baskets back.

"Some children earn several dollars each week by carrying such baskets to mill operatives. The price usually paid for taking lunch to one person for a week is 25 cents, and children often take lunches to several persons."

The booklet was prepared by Roland B. Daniel, and was published by the Department of Education as the description of an admirable system. It deals not only with the mill children, but with the boys and girls who are more fortunate, showing how the Columbus scheme of education is variable, being adapted to meet the demands that come with a mixed population so as to care alike for the two classes. P. P. Claxton, Federal Commissioner of Education, says in the foreword to the book:

"Columbus was one of the first of this country's cities to work out certain phases of this problem of adaptation."

The Columbus schools effect industrial training for all children, but a training varied according to the class from which the children come.

Call of Mills Strong.

The writer, Mr. Hill, laments the fact that "the call of the mills is strong."

"While the prescribed course for the mill children contemplates seven years, few continue after the fifth or sixth year," he wrote. "Not more than 1 per cent finish this school and pursue their studies further."

In all lines of work, academic and industrial, the aim of the school for mill operatives is to better living conditions a little among the people for whom it was organized. That is the only hope. In the beginning the advocates of this type of school thought that many of the mill children might be induced to continue in school and do more advanced work, especially along vocational lines. In this respect the school has been a disappointment to some.

"We are seldom able to induce pupils to finish even the limited course offered in this school," writes Mr. Daniel. "Our best hope is that we may better living conditions a little."

Toward the end, the school has been made a sort of social center. The school is in session the entire year around, and pupils are promoted quarterly, that the children will not drift away, as it is feared they would surely do in the case of a three months' vacation. Teachers do social work, visiting the sick, distributing certain charity, obtaining means of operation for the physically defective, arranging for social evenings, fostering organizations among the older people, and dealing in like activities.

Summing up the work of the school, the writer says:

"While this school has done good work and its benefits have been felt, we are sure the weakest point in it is not being able to hold the children long enough to receive its full benefits. An enforced attendance law would aid very materially in this respect."

Industrial Work Taught.

Along with "the three R's," the mill children are trained in industrial branches, being taught woodworking and gardening. The girls are given work in basket-making, sewing, cooking, poultry-raising and gardening.

In its scheme of adaptation, the city has an altogether different school for other children. The regular grade work is done, and in the traditional high school a year and a half of industrial work, manual training for the boys and domestic science for the girls, is given.

Another variation comes when the curriculum of the negro schools are worked out. There is industrial education for negroes in the public school, but different from that supplied the white children. The Columbus method is altogether one of adaptation.

The difference lies in the fact that the negroes receive more of the training, going into more branches of manual labor, and taking it throughout the school course. Almost every branch of work with the hands is offered them. Of this work the booklet says:

"Pupils who remain in the schools long enough to complete the course receive in compensation for their labor upon leaving school about twice what they would receive for unskilled labor such as they would be able to render without such training. It is often the case that one of these boys is able to earn $2 a day at the age of 17 when his father, without such preparation, receives $1.25 for unskilled labor.

High School in Scheme.

The book, being altogether a treatise on industrial education in Columbus, is given over largely to a description of the courses in the Columbus Industrial High School, the pride of the city's scheme of education. The school, besides its academic work, has vocational courses, including home economics, dressmaking and millinery, mechanic arts, textile arts, and a business course.

This industrial high school is separate and distinct from the conventional academic high school. It is merely another phase of the Columbus scheme of adaptation of education to varied needs and to varied classes.

Pony Contestants in Home Stretch

Fine Progress Made in Last Days

Winners of Race Will Be Announced in Few Days After Battle Closes July 31.

Great progress has been made by the contestants who are striving for The Georgian and American ponies, as the standings published to-day demonstrate. Nearly all the contestants who are crowding toward the front have more than 100,000 votes, but in the ten days remaining these figures, in all probability, will be doubled and trebled.

This is in spite of the fact that the coupons have been discontinued. Gains from now on will represent simply subscriptions obtained. The contestants agree unanimously that this is perfectly fair. A coupon-clipping contest is no contest at all, except as it represents the ability to build up a system of collecting the slips from friends in the neighborhood. A subscription-getting contest, on the other hand, tests the mettle of every contestant to the full, and the best will win.

Will Announce Winners Soon.

Besides, by discontinuing the coupons, it will be possible to announce the winners in the contest probably August 3, three days after the contest closes, on the night of July 31.

If coupons still were being voted, it would take two weeks or more for all of them to come in, and knowledge of the result would be delayed that long.

The bonus offer, awarding 20,000, 12,500 and 6,000 votes for clubs of $35, $25 and $15, respectively, closed Saturday night, and with a large number of clubs turned in. It was a laggard contestant, indeed, who did not appear yesterday with at least a $35 club, and some of the most active had two and three clubs.

Even Chance in Country.

Contestants in the country, it is supposed, did as well, but subscriptions arriving in Monday's mails will be credited on the club offer for these out-of-town boys and girls. This is to give them an even chance with their city cousins.

Probably another small bonus will be offered for the closing weeks of the contest. It will be nothing like those which have been given so far—not nearly so attractive, but still worth winning.

Within a few days the thirteen additional ponies needed to make up the complete lot of twenty-two will be on hand. They are being collected now from the leading breeders of this sort of fancy stock and will be brought to Atlanta before the contest closes.

Maurice Means, of Meansville, is shown at the top, while below is Miss Helen Brantley, of No. 31 E. Alexander Street. Both are way up in the race for the prize Shetlands.

Squaws Lay Ties As Bucks Play Poker

Desert Section Hand Boss Returns to Find Piute Women Doing Construction Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Piute Indians as substitutes for Mexican section hands were tried out in the Nevada desert last week. The Mexicans were deemed unsatisfactory because they would drop their tools and rest the instant the "boss" got far enough away so that he could not hit them with a shovel handle.

With the Indians on the job, however, the work went along just the same, boss or no boss.

Nevertheless the Mexicans are again on the pay roll and the Indians are taking their traditional ease.

After glowingly watching five days of splendid work by his Piute bucks the section boss left them the other day. Returning 24 hours later he found the suffragette members of the Piute tribe doing the work on the railroad, while the bucks were gathered in a poker game at one side of the track.

Tight Shoes Land Thief Behind Bars

Burglar in Jewelry Store Kicks Heels to Relieve Pressure and Alarms Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Frank Davies, who at times also gives his name as John Simpson and Joe Allen, became irritated last night while scooping unset diamonds in his hat in a dark room because the toes of his new shoes were too narrow.

Intending to relieve the squeeze, he kicked toward the floor with his heel, but miscalculated and drove his foot through a glass show case. A policeman in a saloon on the floor below heard the noise and arrested Davies, who says he is an ex-convict and that he arrived here from Los Angeles at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The diamonds were claimed to-day by the jewelers from whom they were taken.

Must Stay Maids to Get Mother's Estate

Daughters of Ohio Woman Are Beneficiaries Under Will Which Prohibits Their Marriage.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, July 19. One of the most remarkable wills ever admitted to probate in this county was made by Jane Lake, late of Richwood, who left considerable property to her three daughters, Linie, Nora and Ida

The provisions are that the estate shall be equally divided among the three daughters, on the condition that none of them will marry. If one of them marries, her share of the estate goes to the two remaining single. If all three should marry, the entire estate is to go to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Moving Picture Gives Mother Clew to Girl

Missing Daughter Is Recognized on Screen and Police Are Following Up Trace.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The "movies" may be instrumental in restoring Olga Ellis, 5, to the mother from whom she was taken in Revere, Mass., and brought to California.

For six months the police have sought John Ellis, of Revere, Mass., who is said to have left that city with his daughter.

A school-teacher of Berkeley, Cal., became interested in the case and gave a picture of the child and the mother's address to a moving picture agency.

Mrs. Myrtle Palmer, housekeeper in a hotel here, saw the mother's appeal at a moving picture theater recently and recognized the little girl as one who had stayed at the hotel with her father for several weeks. He had registered, she said, as D. Delisle, and had gone to Eureka, Cal.

Mrs. Palmer notified the police and search for the man and child has been instituted in Eureka.

Women Convict Her For Slapping Child

First Feminine Jury in Sonoma County, California, Returns Verdict of Guilty of Assault.

PETALUMA, COLO., July 19.—A jury of twelve women convicted a woman, Mrs. W. S. Waldorf, upon a charge of battery here to-day. This is the first jury of women that ever tried a case in Sonoma County. Mrs. Waldorf was accused of having slapped a neighbor's children. The jury was out less than an hour.

HORSE FALLS IN FISSURE IN SINKING KANSAS FARM

HOISINGTON, KANS., July 19.—Fissures varying from a few inches to a foot and a half in width and extending several feet into the ground have opened up in L. E. Baker's alfalfa field near this city and are causing a great deal of speculation.

There have been no indications of an earthquake of any sort, but the ground seems to be sinking away. The fissures were discovered when Baker missed one of his horses and found it imprisoned in a fissure.

ONLY AMERICAN KING YEARNS TO QUIT HIS THRONE

All of Former Broker's Thirty Wives Want English Gowns. Jealousy Spreads.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King, practically has made up his mind to renounce his throne. He is King of the Island of Arorae, one of the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands. Until 1909 he was a New York curb broker. The insistence of his many wives for English gowns and his loneliness have led to the determination to give up his kingly honors. He tells of his intentions in a letter just received by a friend in this city.

The career of Everett has been unusual. In 1909, when he was in business in this city, he was thought to be well to do. He met reverses, however, in Wall Street, and in the latter part of 1909 disappeared, without leaving a word of farewell. Nothing was heard from him until in 1911, in a remarkable letter, he told of being made the King of Arorae, in the South Sea Islands. He had landed, he said, on one of the small islands, and had gone from there to other islands of the Gilbert group. Finally he reached Arorae. It was a phonograph which he had in his possession that eventually won for him his throne. The King at that time of the island took a great fancy to the phonograph.

Phonograph Wins Kingdom.

By the hour Everett, according to his own account, entertained the monarch, constantly growing in his graces. Finally the old King adopted Everett, and when he died Everett succeeded to the throne. According to the custom of the island, Everett took a good many wives.

Everett took a very lively interest in the affairs of the island. He increased its business with traders. The principal product of the island is copra, or dried cocoanut meat. The letter, in part, reads:

"At the present time the King's job is about the last thing to be desired, and do not be surprised if I walk in on you some day in the near future. I am about tired of the job.

"For some time past conditions here have steadily become worse. It started when my wives, of whom there are about 30, insisted on wearing English dresses. A trader who stopped here presented one of the natives with three English gowns in exchange for some copra. The native presented them to the King, and I in turn gave them to three of my wives. The natives have never worn any clothes to speak of. Imagine my surprise, then, when the three dresses became the center of a regular war among my wives.

"The three victorious wives managed to get them on somehow, and that settled it. Every one of them set up a kick for a dress, and they worried the life out of me. I was forced to get the gowns. The first trader that stopped at the island from Australia was commissioned to bring them back on the next trip, and in due course of time they arrived.

Jealousy Over English Gowns.

"The dresses were of all colors and sizes. Most of the people here are about the same stature, few being over four feet six or seven. Some of the dresses were too small, others too large, but they created a sensation. Dressed in those creations, with bare brown feet stepping proudly, my wives paraded up and down the island, causing every woman in the kingdom, young and old, to grow jealous.

"So far, half of the female population have been given the gowns and the other half are waiting eagerly. The worst part of it all is that the men are as enthusiastic over this new style of dress as the women, and my objections have not added to my popularity whatever. I am daily expecting the men to demand suits of flannel and silk shirts.

Affairs on a Business Basis.

"I have not done so badly here financially. I put the business of the island on a business basis soon after becoming King, and things have flourished.

"I don't know how the people here will take my departure. They may even try to prevent it, and I have been considering the best method to leave. I could probably get aboard one of the trading ships and get to Australia, after which it would be easy, of course, to get back to the United States."

WASHINGTON, D. C.

County of Warner

Should Be Created

Manchester, the Logical County Seat—County Will Have 10,000 Population; $1,750,000 Taxable Values; Area Over 222 Square Miles.

The people situated in the southeastern portion of Meriwether, northern portion of Talbot and northeastern portion of Harris Counties will petition the 1913 session of the Legislature to create a new county to be named Warner, in honor of the late Chief Justice Hiram Warner, the area of which will be 222 square miles, while the area of the old counties after the proposed county of Warner is created will not be materially reduced, but will leave them among the larger counties of Middle Georgia, and Meriwether will then contain 421 square miles; Harris, 465 square miles, and Talbot, 329 square miles. The territory to compose Warner County is inaccessible to either of the present county sites by railroads and in transacting legal business the citizens are required to go this distance by private conveyance over mountainous roads, which in rainy seasons are almost impassable; while a very large portion of the population has no means of conveyance and are forced to a great expense in reaching the present county sites.

Taxable Values of New County.

The proposed county of Warner will have taxable values of one and three-quarter million dollars. This will leave Meriwether taxable values of about twice the amount of Warner County; while Harris and Talbot, from which counties small values will be taken, will not be materially reduced, but have considerably more wealth than Warner and no incorporated town is to be taken from either Talbot or Harris and but a few miles of railroad.

The population of Warner County will be upward of 10,500, of which more than 2,000 live in Manchester, the proposed county seat. At least 5,000 of those living within the country territory closely adjoining Manchester have to travel 14 to 20 miles to their present respective county sites. Warner County would exceed in population 32 counties in the State.

Roads and Bridges.

Warner County as proposed will take from the three affected counties its proportion of roads and bridges as compared to its area and wealth, while the roads and bridges in this territory have received but little attention, as the taxes collected by the old counties have been spent on other roads and bridges nearer the present county sites, and other sections of the counties, since this territory occupies the "remote corners," consequently has had little influence in securing road improvements.

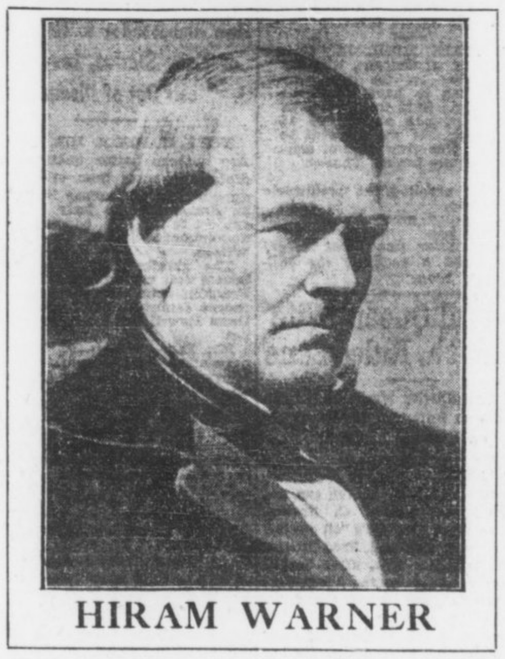
Warner County, as proposed will include Gill, Chalybeate, First, Raleigh, Bullochville and parts of the Third, Harris and lower Ninth Districts of Meriwether County; portions of Valley Plains District of Harris County and Flint Hill and parts of Pleasant Hill and Valley districts of Talbot County.

The distance from Manchester, the proposed county site of Warner County, to Greenville, the county site of Meriwether, over public roads is 18 miles; to Hamilton, the county site of Harris, 20 miles, and to Talbotton, the county site of Talbot, 20 miles. No citizen living in the proposed county would be required to travel farther than 12 miles to reach Manchester, the proposed county site.

Schedule of Trains.

No portion of Warner County at present is directly connected by rail with its respective county site. Those wishing to attend court by rail from Manchester and its vicinity must leave Manchester at 4 o'clock a. m., change at Durand and arrive in Greenville at 8 o'clock a. m., requiring a layover at Durand of about three hours. Returning, leave Greenville at 6 o'clock p. m., arriving at Manchester at 11:40 p. m., necessitating a layover at Durand of five hours, or about 20 hours to go a distance of 20 miles and return. This is the most convenient schedule.

The present counties are well provided with modern jails and courthouses.



HIRAM WARNER

Brief Sketch of Late Chief Justice HIRAM WARNER

Hiram Warner, for whom Warner County is to be named, was born at Williamsburg, Hampshire County, Mass., on October 29th, 1802. He sailed for Savannah when 19 years of age, but was shipwrecked off Cape Hatteras, and reached the Georgia port weeks later. He settled first at Sparta as a teacher. He studied law and was admitted to the bar at Knoxville, Crawford County, in 1824. He married there and had one child, a daughter, the mother of Associate Justice Hiram Warner Hill of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

He was a member of the Legislature 1828-31. He was elected judge of the Coweta Circuit of the Superior Court of Georgia in 1833. At that time there was no Supreme Court, and the Superior Court judges gathered in annual convention to discuss their decisions and establish uniformity of practice.

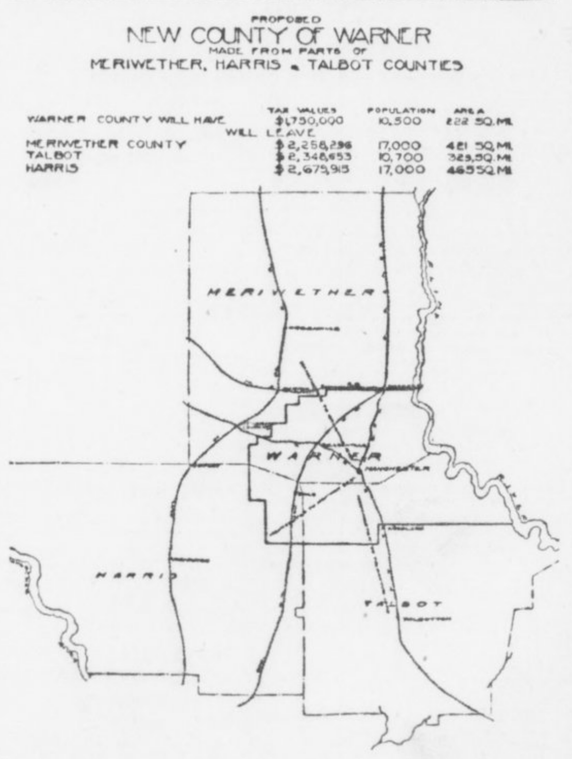
In 1845 the Supreme Court of Georgia was organized and with Joseph Henry Lumpkin and Eugenius A. Nesbit was elected to that high branch of the judiciary. He defeated Benjamin H. Hill for Congress in 1855; was renominated, but declined re-election. Nearly 60 years old when the war came, he was at home caring for his family, his only son-in-law being at the front. He was held by Wilson's raiders and actually hanged and left for dead because he did not tell where suspected gold was hidden.

Later he was appointed to the judgeship of Coweta Circuit by Governor Jenkins. He was named Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia in 1867 to succeed Chief Justice Lumpkin, deceased.

His decisions from the bench and his printed decisions upon the Supreme Court bench are classics in Georgia's judicial history and his decisions are leading ones in ruling on similar cases today.

Judge Warner was reared a Presbyterian. He never joined a religious denomination. He lived and died, however, a believer in the Bible, the truths of Christianity and the creed of that denomination to which his family belonged. It was his habit to keep upon the table in his bedroom to the last day of his life two books; one was Blackstone, and the other was the Bible. This Bible his mother gave him when he left home for his long journey. To this same Bible he turned for comfort and support when, 58 years afterward, an old and broken man, he entered the valley of the shadow.

It is this man whose memory is sought to be revered in the creation of the county which is to bear his name—Warner.



Little Territory From Three of the State's Largest Counties Will Give County—New County Has Railroads—Sentiment Favors It.

No county has ever been created in which the sentiment was stronger for a new county than Warner. The movement has been spontaneous in all sections and our petitions contain more than 95 per cent of the white electors in Warner County. The people realize the great inconvenience with which they are now burdened and have joined unanimously in the movement.

Situation of Warner.

The proposed county of Warner will include portions of Pine and Oak mountains. In recent years most of this section was considered of little value on account of its inaccessibility and the rough character of the country. Little money has been spent by the counties in developing this territory, and the roads, most of them crossing the mountains and ridges, are bad, and have received but little attention.

In 1906 the A., B. & A. railroad was built, traversing this section with its Birmingham and Atlanta lines merging at Manchester; since which time Manchester has grown to be a town of about 2,000 people, as a result of which the territory adjoining Manchester has developed very rapidly; approximately $2,000,000 having been spent in improvements and business naturally drifted in this direction. The people residing in this territory buy all their supplies and sell their produce at Manchester, Bullochville, Raleigh, Chalybeate and Shiloh. Nothing calls them out of the proposed county except court duty, and they are deprived of the privilege accorded the majority of our people in the state of transacting their business and attending court in the same day.

Demand of Modern Times.

In this day of modern methods, when man's greatest asset is his time, when all business has become greatly intensified and concentration and conservation are occupying the attention of all progressive, thinking people, all men must realize that to make a success out of any public institution its interest must be well guarded. In this connection, large counties can not receive their just consideration. It is out of the question for the county commissioners in the three counties affected to give the counties' business the attention which it deserves. The area is too large, the business too vast, the demands too great and the distance too far for the county authorities to attend to the business properly.

General Statements of Interest

Manchester, the proposed county site, contains one large cotton mill, railroad shops and division offices of the A., B. & A. R. R., one bank, 33 brick store buildings and 16 wooden store buildings, all of which are occupied by various lines of general merchandise; two moving picture theaters, one newspaper and printing office, three hotels, five churches, modern school system, municipal light plant, two livery and sale stables, two large builders' supply houses, fireproof warehouse and gin.

Bullochville has several large supply houses, one bank, guano factory, also the Tuscawilla, a magnificent three-story brick hotel with modern equipment throughout, the best equipped hotel in the State in a town many times its size. Near Bullochville is located the famous Warm Springs resort, which is too well known to be described.

Just above Bullochville is the thriving town of Raleigh, which controls all business within its territory.

South of Bullochville on the Southern Railroad is Shiloh, now located in Harris County, one of the best farming supply towns in the State.

East of Manchester on the A., B. & A. is located Chalybeate Springs, a resort famous since ante-bellum days. The water from these springs has been known throughout the State since Georgia's early history.

Just east of Chalybeate is the Tatum Iron Company's mines, which are now being successfully developed.

All facts stated herein are not exaggerated, but can be substantiated with unlimited amount of evidence.

GIRL PLAYS MAN AND WINS LOVE OF HATED RIVAL

Unique Vengeance Is Planned by Young Woman Whose Sweetheart Proved Faithless.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Jilted by her lover, Bessie McIntyre, of North Wheeling, a pretty 18-year-old girl, secured an odd but effective revenge on her rival, who "stole" her sweetheart and on the faithless lover at the same time.

June 25 Harry Pendleton, a well-known young business man of this city, informed Miss McIntyre that he could not see her again as he had become engaged to another girl. By a dint of inquiry the jilted girl ascertained that the girl who had stolen her lover's affections was Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, Ohio, just across the river from this city. Securing permission from her parents, Miss McIntyre had her hair cut off, and donning one of her brother's suits, she visited Bridgeport and met Miss Allen.

It was a case of love at first sight—on the part of the Bridgeport girl. Miss McIntyre masquerading as "Lawrence Dessing," was a devoted lover, and every night found "Lawrence Dessing" at the home of Miss Aiken.

Last Sunday night while "Dessing" and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to call on her again. She then confessed her love to her companion the pseudo "Dessing." Miss McIntyre, dressed in a gown of the latest mode last night met Miss Aiken in this city. Before Miss Aiken could speak the North Wheeling girl told her how she had revenged herself.

In a moment the girls were fighting and were separated by the police.

Willing To Marry But Not to Apologize

Man Sued for Breach of Promise Says Hill Wed But Refuses to Beg Forgiveness.

ATCHISON, KANS., July 19.—Mary Falk and William Burke were engaged to be married. The date had been set, the guests had assembled, and everything was in readiness, but Burke did not appear. Chagrined and heartbroken, Miss Falk engaged an attorney and sued Burke for $25,000 as balm for her wounded feelings.

"It was all a mistake," said Burke. "I wanted and still want to marry Miss Falk. I was under the impression that under the rules of the Catholic Church the ceremony had to be performed by the pastor of the bride's church. I couldn't find him in time to perform the ceremony and naturally supposed the wedding was off for the time being."

Miss Falk accepted the explanation, but she insisted that Burke must apologize for not appearing for the wedding. Burke, however, insisted that she must apologize for suing him.

Concussion of Brain Kills a Gigantic Frog

Oscar Siler went to Mich.
Thought he'd rest and catch some fish,
Pitched his tent on Fountain Lake—
Listen to this nature fake:

FOUNTAIN, MICH., July 19.—Oscar Siler, of Chicago, who has been fishing on the lake near here, claims to have killed the record frog. Said frog is said to weigh 6 pounds and to be 15 inches long. It will be sent to Chicago. The frog died of concussion of the brain. Thus—

"Kerplunk," croaked the prehistoric bullfrog.
"You're drunk," piped the monarch of the bog.
Whereupon Siler (who was sober) bounced a rock off the bullfrog's bean.

Aged Oil Queen, Wife Of Youth, Ruled Sane

Young Spendthrift Husband Is Welcome to Fortune, She Says, on Leaving Asylum.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 19.—The courts and her children can not separate Mrs. Cynthia C. Sparks, known as West Virginia's "oil queen," and her young husband, Fred Sparks, and she is again free, after having been incarcerated in the West Virginia Hospital for Insane for ten days.

Further, the superintendent and the members of the State Board of Control have placed beyond question her sanity after a close observation, while she was under their supervision.

Mrs. Sparks is going to join her 26-year-old husband, who, it is alleged by the woman's children by her first husband, was rapidly dissipating her fortune of $2,000,000 by his extravagance and riotious living.

The old woman declared to-day that her young husband was welcome to the half of her fortune which she retained after having signed over the half to him.

Miner Returns Rich To Find Wife Dead

Comes Back Home to Make Restitution for Having Deserted Her 20 Years Ago.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Wealthy and anxious to take back his wife, whom he deserted twenty years ago, Josiah Bronson, a modern Enoch Arden, found the old home in ruins and the wife dead. From the old-timers who had known him in the early days he learned that his wife, believing him dead, had married his twin brother.

Two children, he learned, were born of the marriage, and upon the death of the mother were sent to relatives in West Virginia.

Bronson declared he would care for the children. "I shall give them the best education money can buy," he said. "I deserted their mother when she was just a young woman, and now I want to atone for the cowardly act."

WRITERS MAKE BEST DIPLOMATS DECLARES PAGE

New Ambassador to Italy, Author of Many Stories, Leaves Himself Out of Discussion.

YORK HARBOR, ME., July 19.—Are authors better qualified to fill diplomatic posts than others? The appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy brings this subject to the fore, coupled with the appointments made by President Wilson.

The greatest diplomats America boasts were men of letters. Benjamin Franklin, John Hay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, William Dean Howell furnish a distinguished list.

Mr. Page, who is 66, is modesty personified. He has been reporter, lawyer, writer, and has succeeded in all.

Mr. Page asked if he could explain as an author what special qualifications a man of letters possesses to perform the duties of Ambassador, consented to speak, leaving his own case out of the discussion. Said he:

"A man of letters is better fitted to do anything better than anyone else. His work has broadened his horizon; if it hadn't we might as well do away with letters.

Must Know Problems.

"The author must necessarily be conversant with the economic and governmental problems of the day.

"I think the greatest good authors in general have alone is to interpret the spirit of the section about which they write. There can be no doubt there is a better feeling now between the North and the South than there was before the Spanish-American war. This, I believe, is because of writers.

"Every part of the world is being more properly set before another part by the authors.

"The President has had a thorough training. Besides the college education, he has had associations with the North and the South, and he is conversant with the economic and governmental problems. He is a man of strong character and has been deservedly selected by the people to hold their most important office.

"I met Walter Page prior to his departure for his London post and gave him a dinner. His whole heart was set upon the desire to 'make good.'"

Qualifications of Diplomat.

"What is your idea of the qualifications a good diplomat possesses?" he was asked.

"Devotion to his duty is perhaps the first and most important," he replied. "Then comes devotion to your country, application to your duty and a desire to bring your country and the country to which you have been sent closer together.

"Of course, since the cable came into use foreign posts are brought closer to the State Department at Washington, and it must be a great comfort to an Ambassador to feel that at any time he may seek aid from Washington.

"I believe Charles Francis Adams was the last foreign ambassador to be thrown upon his own resources, and that was because the cable was cut.

"Rome is indeed a charming post. I believe it is the most romantic city in the world. I am sure I shall like it."

BRYAN DODGES PAPER'S QUESTIONS

wrong. It is using the office for making money."

Senator Bristow said action would be had on his resolution. He said, too, that there would be quite a little discussion on the subject. It probably will be referred to a committee. Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, says it probably would be "handled in a routine way."

Mr. Bacon says he thought the resolution was introduced to bring about a discussion of the course of Mr. Bryan, and that remedial legislation was not demanded.

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend, of Michigan, holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the Government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Among those who talked were the following:

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts—A Cabinet member can live on $12,000 a year if he does not have large family expenses, and he can live comfortably and respectably.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania—Samuel J. Randall, one of the greatest of Democrats, served this country for a whole generation, living on a salary of $5,000 a year. I have always disapproved of the custom that has grown up resulting in the very considerable neglect of official duties on the part of public men in order that they may go on lecture circuits.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina—While Mr. Bryan's speaking tours will serve a good purpos in that he always preached true Democracy and patriotism and Christian living, he can never again appear as a knight errant of Democracy.

Representative Willis, of Ohio—I am opposed to a Government official capitalizing his job. The Secretaryship of State is a man's job. Mr. Bryan should stay here and attend to the work of his office. He has enough on his hands with the present critical situation in Mexico, the unsettled questions with Japan and the matter of the Panama Canal tolls. We members of Congress have to stick to our tasks.

Representative Miller, of Minnesota—Mr. Bryan is giving this country a remarkable exhibition in the difference between his preachings during the past seventeen years and his present practices.

Representative Kahn, of California—There are many able men in the employ of the Government who are prevented by law and the hours of service from increasing their incomes through additional employment.

Representative Payne, of New York—I have been able to live on my salary as a member of the House. I can not see why the Secretary of State is unable to live on his salary.

Towne, Bryan's Friend, Calls Step Unfortunate.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Secretary Bryan's determination to supplement his official salary of $12,000 by going on a six weeks' lecture tour has awakened severe criticism from the men who supported him when he first loomed on the political horizon.

Charles A. Towne, who was one of the speakers at the famous "Dollar Dinner" in April, 1899, organized to emphasize Bryan's Jeffersonian simplicity of tastes, discussed Mr. Bryan's new move reluctantly, as they are still close friends.

"I consider the Secretary's plan to continue his lecture tours while occupying the chief place in the President's Cabinet most unfortunate," said Mr. Towne. "These are days when great national issues must be decided, and when the Secretary of State is required to give every bit of time and energy in behalf of the nation. It is a time when men intrusted with the affairs of the Government must have their minds occupied with nothing else except the questions of state.

Explanation Only Makes It Worse, Says World.

(From The N. Y. World, July 16.)

It is with the most profound regret that we have to note the position into which the Secretary of State has drawn himself and the explanation now given which only makes it worse.

Whether Mr. Bryan can afford to take a prolonged vacation at just this critical time for the Administration and his own high office may be a question, but a minor one. Whether, under the frankly admitted circumstances of personal fortune, he can only afford a money-making vacation, must be something less than a question with the great masses of the people whose life he has lived in sympathy.

The real question is whether the Government for such a position as his may not justly claim an undivided service, and whether any other view is compatible with a worthy ambition. We have had men in high office who have sacrificed personal fortune to render such undivided service and could afford it. We have had many more men there who have done this and could not afford it.

We can not think of the President of the United States doing otherwise. We should not be able to think of any of his Cabinet doing otherwise.

Action Most Bizarre, Says Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, July 19.—Regarding Secretary Bryan's lecture tour, The Pall Mall Gazette to-night says:

"It is a singular paradox in a country where there is so much money in politics as in the United States that the chief member of the President's cabinet should find his official salary inadequate to support his existence.

"We can quite understand why $12,000 a year is not enough for the Secretary of State, considering the American scale of life, but one would have expected a man of Bryan's moral courage to call upon his country for a living wage, to which he is entitled, rather than to propose going on the stump as a lecturer, in the roles of a minister and a professional entertainer.

"They make a most bizarre combination to all British ways of thinking, and we shall be surprised if even American opinion reconciles itself to their incongruity."

MOTHER OF TEN SUES; WEDDED TWENTY-ONE YEARS

DAYTON, WYO., July 19.—After living with David Krouse Towns for 21 years and bearing ten children of which he is the father, Mrs. Martha Ellen Towns has brought suit for divorce, asserting that her husband unjustly accused her of infidelity and that he had attempted to secure her incarceration in the State Insane Asylum, although realizing that she was sane.

LOBBY JURY STIRS NATION

Mulhall Story Leaves U. S. Aghast

Power of Interests Vividly Revealed

MARTIN W. MULHALL, former lobbyist of National Association of Manufacturers, whose revelations of corruption startled nation.

Names of Wilson, Taft, Senators and Congressmen Are Dragged Into the Testimony, Showing Corporations Have Set No Limit in Corruption.

STARTLING FACTS REVEALED IN U.S. SENATE INVESTIGATION OF CONGRESSIONAL LOBBY

National Association of Manufacturers raised a slush fund of $500,000 to $700,000 a year to oppose objectionable legislation.

Place in Taft Cabinet pledged to manufacturers by Vorys, Taft manager.

Charges that the big manufacturers had the ears of Taft, Sherman and Cannon.

List of Congressmen in pay of the National Manufacturers' Association disclosed. Also, a list of the "unpurchasable," whom the association hated, and tried to defeat.

Fights made by National Manufacturers' Association on progressive Congressmen and Senators, often successful.

More than 400 letter tell of plans of association to become sinister factor in controlling the wheels of government.

Attempts made to foment strife among labor organizations, and to corrupt labor leaders, even Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Agreement by Woodrow Wilson with Gompers and Morrison that he support Hughes for Senate.

Powers of big business fought Hughes because he was friendly to labor.

Tom Johnson, Senator McComas of Maryland, and others were political victims of the association's vengeance.

Gigantic corruption in Wall Street laid bare in testimony of David Lamar.

Forgery on Union Pacific's books covering item of $82,000,000 charged.

Senate resolutions hawked about Wall street for sale to highest bidder.

The nation to-day stands aghast at the sensational revelations which have come as the result of investigations by the Overman Committee of the United States Senate into the work of lobbies at the National Capital.

It has heard how big business combines and Wall Street operators have made and unmade men in public life, influenced legislation, dominated public opinion, all the time secret and vigilant.

It has learned how big business has become one of the most powerful factors in the American civilization, striking in the dark against men who opposed it.

It has heard the names of the men highest in public life, President Wilson, former President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet members, dragged into the testimony, and has learned that certain predatory interests have set no limits in their attempt to corrupt public servants.

The bulk of the startling testimony came from Martin M. Mulhall, for years the servant of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the chief lobbyist of that organization at Washington, and from David Lamar, an operator in stocks, who is known as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

Wilson Starts Inquiry.

The investigation began more than a month ago when President Wilson declared that a lobby, "insidious and industrious" in nature, had long dominated tariff legislation. The announcement did not come unexpectedly, however, and there were many Senators and Congressmen to endorse the Chief Executive. The Senate began immediately its investigation of the charges, empowering a committee, headed by Senator Overman, to conduct the inquiry.

Relatively pointless testimony from men interested in the sugar industry came first, revealing the fact that sugar lobbies were the most industrious. Lobbyists from Hawaii, the Philippines and Louisiana defended their actions by a protest against free sugar. Former Governor Carter of Hawaii declared that the elimination of the duty on sugar would make the Hawaiian Islands merely military posts, destroying their commercial prestige. Frank C. Lowry, of the "free sugar lobby," admitted in the testimony that $25,000 had been spent in four years by the Federal Sugar Refining Company in lobbying operations.

Then came the Mulhall testimony.

BRYAN OUGHT TO LIVE ON HIS PAY OR QUIT, SAY SENATORS

Explanation of Secretary of State More Amazing Than His Acts, Declares Bristow, Who Introduced Resolution to Investigate

Wilson's Premier Capitalizing His Position, Asserts Representative Willis—Much Work To Be Done in His Department.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the National Capital is that if Secretary Bryan can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Mr. Bryan to-day gave evidence of the fact that the country-wide criticism had got under his skin. That he was irritated and impatient and realized the "bad break" he has made was apparent to his subordinates throughout the day. Somewhat petulantly he declared that the press of the country might have assumed that "my lecture engagements are subject to cancellation."

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow Cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

Evades Paper's Questions.

The American to-day endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions and refused to discuss the subject of his official pronunciamento.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by The American:

"If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

"If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

"You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?"

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned to the questions. Later in the day he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Bristow, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan to stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, to-day came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secrttary Bryan's second statement has astounded me even more than his first one," said Mr. Bristow. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the Governmtnt service is amazing.

"Secretary Bryan says he has a right to use his vacation for lecturing if he sees fit. But he is to be away on one tour of six weeks, and there is no telling where his vacation will end.

Needed at His Post.

"Besides, since he has been Secretary of State he has been in Washington only about one-half the time so far. If ever there was a time when the Secretary of State was needed on the job it is now, when so many important questions are up for consideration. To cause the people to pay money to hear the Secretary of State, the highest officer in the Cabinet, deliver addresses is all

U. S. State Secrets 'Lifted' From Wire By Mexican Agents

Information Worth Thousands of Dollars Finds Its Way Into Possession of Huerta.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A copy of the official code of the State Department, containing information worth thousands of dollars to foreign governments, has fallen into the hands of the Mexican administration.

It is being used to further the ends of the Huerta regime, it was asserted here to-day.

For some months State Department officials have suspected that the Government telegrams from Mexico City have been tampered with, it is declared, but this was not considered important, as all the dispatches were in code, and, therefore, theoretically illegible.

About three weeks ago, however, Government officials here had their first inkling that the Mexicans were obtaining the gist of dispatches passing between the State Department and Ambassador Wilson.

The agents of the almost unknown "secret service" of the State Department were put on the trail and evidence was obtained that the Government dispatches had been "lifted" from the wires in Mexico and decoded, the information contained therein being transmitted to President Huerta and his Cabinet.

Girl Traps a Thief In Telephone Booth

Sets Shoulder Against Door and Holds Man Until Cries Bring Her Aid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Holding a thief trapped in a telephone booth, Miss Florence Rosenthal, cashier in Edward Feuhrer's drug store at No. 53 Second avenue, finally succeeded in delivering him to the police yesterday.

The captive, who said he was Alexander Moskowitz, 17 years old, was so long "telephoning" that Miss Rosenthal went to the booth to see if he was dead or alive. She saw him opening the money box with a screwdriver, she says. Screaming for her employer, she set her shoulder against the door, and the youth could not force it open. Moskowitz was held for trial.

Burleson Eats but Two Meals Each Day

Postmaster General Believes in and Practices "Early to Bed, Early to Rise" Theory.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Postmaster General Burleson believes thoroughly in the old adage, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." He practices this theory himself and in addition supplements it by a two-meal-a-day program.

His daily routine is as follows:

"I arise at 5 in the morning.

"Read the papers until 6.

"Breakfast.

"Go over papers and reports until 9.

"Work at the Postoffice Department until 5 in the afternoon without any lunch or lunch hour.

"Dinner at 6 to 7 o'clock.

"Eight o'clock—go to bed."

"Cooling Period" to Halt Divorce Evil

Pastor Suggests That Three Months Elapse Between Final Hearing and Decision of Court.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Speaking on "The Modern Problem of Marriage and Divorce," before the Central Conference of American Rabbis here to-day, the Rev. L. Leonard Levy, of Pittsburg, advocated a "cooling" period of three months from the time of the final hearing until the decision is announced as the solution of the problem of minimizing the divorce evil. "This cooling period," said the speaker, "would cover a time during which neither of the parties at interest could marry."

Marries His Aunt, 12 Years His Senior

Young Actor Takes as Bride the Recently Divorced Wife of His Uncle.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Earl Oscar Schenck, 24 years old, an actor, of No. 600 West 138th street, was married in the City Hall yesterday to his aunt, Marion Carr Schenck, twelve years his senior.

The bride of yesterday was married in April, 1899, to Oscar A. Schenck, the uncle of her present husband, who on January 17 of this year divorced her in Columbus, Ohio, "for gross neglect of duty."

SHORTAGE HITS NATIONAL BANK AT LAFAYETTE

Comptroller of Currency Orders Institution Closed When Defalcation Is Discovered.

ARRESTS ARE LIKELY

Preliminary Examination Shows That It Has Been Looted of Not Less Than $30,000.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane today announced that the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., has been closed by National Bank Examiner Thomas C. Dunlap, with the authority of the board of directors, on account of a large shortage which makes the bank insolvent.

Mr. Kane says he has not received a detailed report of the condition of the bank. Mr. Dunlap has been appointed receiver.

"We do not know how big the defalcation may be," said Mr. Kane, "but our preliminary examination has shown that it is not less than $30,000. This shortage has occurred since May 23, when the bank was last examined. Suspicion on the part of officers of the bank several days ago that a shortage existed caused them to call in Examiner Dunlap. Discovery of the embbezzlement resulted.

"In his telegraphic advices to me Mr. Dunlap does not say to whom suspicion attaches. The last statement of the condition of the bank, issued on June 4, showed the bank to be in a proper state. The president of the bank is R. N. Dickerson, and S. A. Hunt, Jr., is cashier."

In a telegram from Mr. Dunlap Mr. Kane is advised that steps have been taken to make an arrest.

Depositors to Lose Little by Failure.

CHATTANOOGA, July 19.—Local bankers stated to-day that the liabilities of the First National Bank of Lafayette, Ga., which was announced to-day by Acting Comptroller of Currency Kane, at Washington, to have failed, were approximately $240,000, but that depositors would be paid in full, with but a slight loss to stockholders, as the assets would prove but slightly less.

An unsuccessful attempt was made this morning to obtain a schedule of the liabilities and assets of the institution. The officials are extremely reticent concerning the cause of the institution's embarrassment.

Aerial Ferry to Join Cities in California

Air Pilot Gets Permission to Install Aeroplane Service Between San Francisco and Oakland.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The first aerial ferry of the world will be in operation between San Francisco and Oakland in September. Permission was granted officially to-day by the Harbor Commission to John L. Lekas to construct a dock for his hydroaeroplane.

Lekas recently applied for a permit, declaring that he wished to establish a regular passenger service between the trans-bay cities. Lekas was before the commission to-day and satisfied them he was a safe and sane air pilot.

Motor Cars to Cut High Cost of Dying

Storage Battery Busses To Be Put in Service in Chicago as Funeral Equipage.

CHIGAGO, July 19.—The high cost of dying is to be reduced. Storage battery motor busses are to be put in service as funeral cars. The change from carriages to busses, it is estimated, will result in a saving of $30 in the cost of each funeral. As there are 21,000 funerals in Chicago each year, the general reduction in the cost of dying, if busses were used in all funerals, would be $930,000.

Girl Fan Loses Teeth But Stays Out Game

Foul Tip Injures Fair Baseball Enthusiast, but Her Ardor Is Not Diminished.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, July 19.—Miss Cora Bauer, of this city, was struck in the face by a foul tip while watching a ball game between the Akron and Zanesville teams here. Her nose was split open, three teeth knocked out and she may be disfigured for life. Nevertheless, after being treated by a physician, she decided to stay out the game.

Congregation Built Up by Band Concerts

Ohio Pastor With Novel Methods Now Claims Biggest Sunday School in World.

CANTON, OHIO, July 19.—With the attraction of a band concert in the church roof garden and a double orchestra concert in the church auditorium, the Rev. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton's First Christian Church, has built up what he claims is the biggest Sunday school in the world within five years.

The average attendance in this hot month of July is 3,251. The record attendance is 4,714. Several Sundays back 38 babies were checked in the "babies' check room" of the $90,000 church. The men's class of 250 had to hold their session in the street while the teacher explained the lesson from the tonneau of an automobile.

Doctor Says He Has Vaccine to Cure Cold

Dead Organisms Found in Blood of Patient Afflicted With Influenza Used as Culture.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Claims to the discovery of a remarkable vaccine for the cure and prevention of the troublesome "cold" known among medical men as in influenza are being made by physicians of the Mulford Laboratory, near Philadelphia, under the direction of Dr A. P. Mitchins.

The vaccine is composed of the dead organisms found in the blood of a person afflicted with influenza. These organs are isolated and then an impure culture is obtained. Afterward, a saline solution is used to wash the culture germs and then the vaccine is ready for injection.

One striking feature of the results of the vaccine, it is said, is that it cures diseases allied with the common cold at the same time it does the "cold."

3 Drowned Trying To Avoid Wet Feet

Women Stand Up In Leaky Boat, Capsizing Craft In View of Hundreds.

NORRISTOWN, PA., July 19.—Caught in a storm while boating on the Schuylkill River, three women, all church workers, were drowned. They are:

Miss Anna Mary Livergood, Miss Emma J. Rex and Miss Helen Green, all of Norristown.

Miss Margaret Green, a sister of Miss Helen Green, clung to the overturned boat and was saved.

The women were within a quarter of a mile of the boat landing when the wind struck them.

The boat began to leak badly. To keep their feet and clothing dry the four girls stood on the seats. The next instant the boat turned over.

Two hundred persons on a boat returning from a park saw the accident.

Blue Cauliflower Is Raised in California

Latest Horticultural Product Is Hybrid of Ordinary Cauliflower and Purple Pickling Cabbage.

OAKLAND, July 19.—Blue cauliflower, the latest novelty in things horticultural, was introduced to the public to-day by Hugo Lilienthal, instructor in the University of California. The new plant is a hybridization of the ordinary cauliflower and the purple "pickling cabbage," declared by the experts to be a "first cousin to the cauliflower." The new vegetable is bright blue in color and stronger than the ordinary cauliflower in flavor.

Only a Bathing Suit Left Friend by Thief

Youth Is Marooned in Atlantic City When Companion Disappears With Money and Clothes.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Arthur Leonard, a New York youth, spent the entire day on the beach in his bathing suit to-day, following the disappearance of his chum, whose name he refuses to reveal, with four suits of his clothing and all his money.

Leonard wired his relatives in New York State telling them of his predicament. They came here to-night with clothing and rescued him.

Even Take Fizz Out Of City's Soda Water

Members of Cincinnati Board of Health to Censor All Soft Drinks Sold.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—The "fizz and bubble" in soda water and ginger ale manufactured in this city is to be no more, if the Board of Health has its way about the matter, and it seems likely at this time that its contention will hold good. The board has asked the Council to pass an ordinance limiting the amount of alcohol to one-half of 1 per cent in any one drink of this kind. If the resolution is passed and made a law no dealer will be allowed to make soft drinks without first getting a permit.

300 "HELLO GIRLS" ASK BOSS TO BE BEST MAN

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—The Postmaster General is bewildered over the result of the recent permission which he granted to telephone girls to get married. Three hundred of these girls promptly availed themselves of the chance and every couple asked the Postmaster General to act as best man.

Umbrellas for Farm Hands Is Inducement

Planter Advertises That He Will Supply Them With Sulkies, Sunshades and Ice Cream.

FINDLAY, OHIO, July 19.—There are other communities in this country that are suffering for a lack of farm hands besides Kansas. It is up to H. B. Clark, a farmer in the western part of Hancock County, to make good, else be prosecuted for false advertising, as provided by the new newspaper laws.

In a morning paper Mr. Clark is advertising for farm hands to plow corn. He says he will provide them with riding cultivator, a large sun umbrella for each, ice water to drink and all the ice cream each applicant can eat every other day, with $2.50 a day wages.

BERLIN, July 19.—Great Britain, it is stated, is negotiating for an Unger airship, which is larger, faster and more rigid than any others yet designed, including the Zeppelins.

'Oh Fudge' Strongest Language Permitted

Kansas City Starts Crusade Against Public Swearing—Police Rebuke Violators.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—Anything stronger than "Oh, fudge!" must not be heard on the streets of Kansas City hereafter. All the ministers of the city and all the members of their churches have started an anti-swearing crusade, and part of the work is to ask persons who are overheard to swear to consider the vulgarity of it and cease the practice.

The Police Department and the street railway company have agreed to join in the crusade, so that hereafter it is part of the policeman's duty to stop swearing as well as breaches of the peace.

Miss Elliott Returns To Stage To Be Happy

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Maxine Elliott, yielding to Sir Herbert Tree's persuasion, will return to the stage September 2 in a great production of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." She will play Potiphar's wife.

Miss Elliott gives as the chief reason for her reappearance that every one is happier when occupied. She is now living in her beautiful house at Bushey, just outside London.

STORY OF MULHALL WILL EXTEND U. S. LOBBY INQUIRY

Mulhall represented the National Association of Manufacturers, in Washington. The association has a membership of 225 organizations among them the most influential of the country, and 4,000 individuals, who control billions of capital.

The burden of his statements were that the association had for years promoted tariff, labor, and general business legislation favorable to itself, had maintained a lobby staff of seventeen, including himself, and former Presidents VanCleave and Kirby, of the association, at the capital to defeat hostile legislation, and it was always seeking and often obtaining control of the House and Senate Committee on Labor and Judiciary.

Created Tariff Commission.

He said that the association's efforts were responsible for the creation of the Tariff Commission under President Taft, and said that nine former Congressmen and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages in the House, had obtained money for services rendered.

More sensational still were the declarations that former President Taft, former Vice President Sherman, and former Speaker Cannon, besides many Congressmen and Senators were among those whom the association could affect by appeals to sentiment or other interests. He told of an unsuccessful attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, and of successful work among petty labor leaders.

Mulhall told of his own great ingratitude, how he obtained a Federal position through the influence of Senator McComas of Maryland, and at the same time entered the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers, helping to defeat his patron because McComas had been doomed for his opposition to the association.

McComas, it seems, was not the only victim. Tom L. Johnson had been defeated for Mayor of Cleveland, said Mulhall, for his opposition to the association, and William E. Hughes was opposed by the business combine for Senator from New Jersey because he was the advocate of many labor bills. It was in this connection that Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, had agreed with Gompers and Morrison, the labor leaders, to support Hughes, and had stumped the State in his favor.

Spies Kept in Field.

The work of the association against the eight-hour law, its enmity to most legislation that was favorable to labor, how he kept in occasional communication with former Vice President Sherman, how spies were kept in the field to corrupt minor labor leaders, and to knife opponents, were other sensational bits of the Mulhall testimony.

George Pope, president of the association, and other officials of the organization, have made statements declaring that Mulhall is not to be believed, and that most of the statements were inspired by the fact that Mulhall was discharged by the association. From many persons and places have come statements denouncing Mulhall as a man of reprehensible character, lessening thus the substantiability of many of the charges. But in many instances the declarations he made seemed to be assured of reliability by documents that are substantial.

Interesting is his list of Congressmen whom he said had received pay from the association. He named in this connection J. E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, the House "whip" of the last administration; J. T. McDermott, Democrat, of Illinois; J. J. Jenkins Republican, Wisconsin; Kittredge Haskins, Republican, Vermont; C. E. Littlefield, Republican, Maine; H. M. Bannon, Republican, Ohio; C. M. Coudry, Republican, Missouri; J. J. Gardner, Republican, New Jersey; R. B. Cole, Republican, Ohio, and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages.

On the other hand, he named a number of Congressmen who had consistently fought the association's interests, and whom he frankly called "unpurchasable." They are: Speaker Clark, Burnett of Alabama, Mayo-Nichols, Pennsylvania; Parson, New nard, Virginia; Cooper, Wisconsin; York; Green, Massachusetts; Haugen, Iowa; Wilson, Pennsylvania; McComas, Maryland; Pearre, Maryland; Hughes, New Jersey; Kelliher, Massachusetts; Connolly, Massachusetts, and the labor leaders, Gompers, John Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the Federation of Labor. William Barnes, the New York boss, he said, was his friend, and could always be depended on to "take care of bills."

Revelations of Lamar.

On the heels of the Mulhall revelations came those from David Lamar, the smiling, cynical "Wolf of Wall Street." Lamar it was who told of having sent Edward Lauterbach, his attorney, to peddle around Wall Street a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the Senate.

J. P. Morgan was one of the men whom Lauterbach visited on this errand. He told how he had impersonated Congressmen Palmer and Riordan in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass Ledyard and Paul D. Cravath, corporation attorneys, and Robert S. Lovett, the railroad president, feigning knowledge of the intentions of the dominant party. Further, he declared that he had represented himself as fresh from the councils of Speaker Clark and other leaders when he visited Wall Street operators for concessions.

Lamar's most remarkable disclosure was his statement that the Union Pacific Railroad's books had been forged in 1901 to cover an item of $82,000,000, whereby the fortunes of E. H. Harriman, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, and others were built.

Testimonials Discredited.

Discredit has been cast upon Lamar's testimony as on Mulhall's, as coming from a man lacking in scruples. Paul D. Cravath, attorney for the Union Pacific, gave out a statement that the testimony regarding the gigantic forgery was part of a bear campaign against the company.

The Senate investigation will be conducted in detail, and it is likely, to judge from the announced intentions of the committee members, that every member of the Senate and of the House, every public official whose name has been dragged into the affair, and every one in anyway connected with the situation will be called in as witnesses. Appearances seem to indicate that the hearing will last far into the summer.

Mulhall was on the stand the greater part of last week explaining a batch of correspondence which had passed between him and political and labor leaders throughout the United States. The correspondence, according to evidence which has been revealed, he has sought to sell to magazines and newspapers several times, but in vain. Nonchalantly, the ex-lobbyist has pointed out letter after letter from prominent men, talking of alleged significant deals almost carelessly.

"This is a letter from Senator Foraker," he said, indicating one. "It was asking me to see a labor man about his chances for re-election to the Senate. I think he was considering the Presidency at the time."

Secrets of big politics are being bared daily during the investigation. Details of how spies worked among the labor men, and of the secret methods of big business have been explained by Mulhall at more than one point in his testimony.

In defense of his own lobbying, Mulhall made statements that a labor lobby existed, naming Samuel Gompers. As a result, Gompers and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be brought before the committee to explain their activities in the cause of labor and capital, respectively.

Inez Milholland's Wedding Blow to Suffragists

Her Romance May Annul Marriage to the Cause

Mrs. Eugen Boissevain, who was Miss Inez Milholland, famous suffragist beauty and orator, before her marriage to wealthy Dutchman last week.

Beautiful Leader of Votes for Women Won After Courtship on Two Continents.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Suffrage leaders of the United States are today bowed in spirit. They can think of their recent victory in Illinois without smiling. They read of success of women jurors and policemen with no show of ecstasy. Their minds are troubled. They seek to know whether Mrs. Eugen Boissevain will be as potent a personality for the cause as was Inez Milholland before she suddenly decided to take unto herself a husband in the form of the wealthy Dutchman she wedded Tuesday in London.

For Inez Milholland has been no small force in the suffrage movement in the United States. She graduated from Vassar just about the time when the votes for women idea traveled across the seas from England, and she has been right on the firing line in the battle for the ballot ever since.

Beauty of Suffrage Ranks.

Miss Milholland, beg pardon, Mrs. Boissevain, has ever been in the specially mentioned class in every important suffrage movement. She has been the American Christobal Pankhurst, only more so, though it has not been recorded that she has smashed anything, or has had to dodge extradition treaties to keep from the painful necessity of going on a hunger strike.

Even before she graduated from Vassar, Miss Milholland was known to fame. Her remarkable beauty, her mentality and personal magnetism made her a leader in this great girls' college. She was the champion all around athlete and held a world's record for putting the shot.

During the strike of the garment workers in New York, several years ago, Miss Milholland volunteered for picket duty and it was her oratory that kept the girls stubbornly on the strike until they partially won their demands.

In the first big suffrage parade in New York she was a battalion leader and was a striking figure as she rode astride on a big bay charger.

Challenges Orator Heflin.

She again achieved prominence by challenging Representative Tom Heflin of Alabama to joint debate when that doughty Congressman spoke disparagingly of the cause, and though it is known that Mr. Heflin loves to speak and delights in debate, he carefully avoided meeting Miss Milholland on the forum.

In the great suffrage parade in Washington the day before President Wilson's inauguration Miss Milholland led the procession as the herald of the cause. She was mounted on a pure white horse and was clad in robes of white, while a coronet surmounted her magnificent hair which fell loosely down her back.

So striking was her appearance that she was quickly an object of the attacks of the thugs and boors who tried to break up the parade, and it is recorded that one of these men received a blow on the jaw from the fist of the young woman who once held the world shot-put record.

"I am wedded to the cause," she told her admirers, among whom were Sidney Smith, the New York clubman; John Fox, Jr., author and former husband of Fritzi Scheff, and Lord Curzon, formerly viceroy of India.

Whether this marriage will annul her former marriage to the cause is the question that perplexes the suffrage leaders, but they, as a rule, protest that it will not.

John E. Milholland, her father, was evidently not greatly shocked by the marriage. Here is what he cabled his daughter:

"Have not been so mad in two hundred years. You should be boiled in oil. Do you expect forgiveness until the next century. Indefensible chip of the old block, you have given us a pretty rough deal, but nevertheless I humbly and fervently pray God's blessing upon you and yours forever.

"PATER."

Boissevain's Brother Elated.

Robert W. Boissevain, brother of the bridegroom, was in a decidedly agreeable frame of mind yesterday in his office at No. 17 Battery place. Besides calling his brother a "lucky dog" and describing him as being "smiled upon by the gods," he said that the new Mrs. Boissevain has now seven sisters-in-law who possess collectively 25 children and that all these seven Boissevain sisters are suffragists of the non-militant type.

"Wireless" in Courtship.

"Eugen, who is 33 years old, and my brother Jan came over to New York on the Olympic to pay me a visit," he said. "They arrived June 10 and stopped at the Holland House with me. William Marconi, the wireless discoverer, and Mrs. Marconi were here at the same time. My brother and I have known Mr. Marconi for years, and I now understand that the Marconis have known the Milholland family for a long time.

"Anyway, two days after the arrival of my brothers, that is, June 12, I was dining with them in the Holland House and Mr. and Mrs. Marconi entered the dining room with one of the most beautiful women we had ever seen. Miss Milholland was presented to us, and my brother Eugen lost interest in all other things then and there.

"Eugen and Jan had planned to tour the States for six weeks at least, but during the dinner Miss Milholland said something about leaving for Europe early in July. The plans of Eugen, I could see, went flying.

MAZDAZNANS EAT FLOWERS AND SING TO THE SUN

All This in Classic Boston, Where the Cult Has a Membership Small but Exclusive.

BOSTON, July 19.—It is ancient history that Nebuchadnezzer went out and ate grass like an ox. Out in the Back Bay and up in Lowell there can be found small yet select circles of folk who eat grass and say they enjoy it.

Not only this, but they worship the sun, pray to the sun, sing to the sun, take sun baths, dew baths, eat rose petals and pansies, drive out disease by fasting spells (or say they do so), fast for days and then fatten up on a diet of water to drink and violets to eat, kiss and rekiss, and try to be as happy and contented as can be.

These people are the Mazdaznans or Sun Worshipers. Into their innermost shrines have penetrated none but ardent devotees, so that none of their rites have been made public. As revealed for the first time at the big Gahanbar, or national peace congress of the Mazdaznans, these rites are weird enough—strange to the outside world, but taken as a matter of course by the Mazdaznans.

And the strange part of the rites and worship is that the devout worshipers believe their practice will lengthen their years into three or four centuries.

Secret Rites of Cult.

Another thing about the sun folk is that they don't worry. So in the hot weather they manage to keep cool figuratively and physically. They usually look happy and contented when met on the street.

None outside the cult itself knew—up to the holding of the recent Gahanbar or Congress—of the secret rites of the Mazdaznans. These are practiced in the inner circles, so called.

For years the famous "Green Book" of the Mazdaznans was a mystery sealed to the eyes of ordinary mortals. The book was guarded sacredly by the Sun Worshipers. In it are printed the precepts of the cult.

Here are some of them:

You can get cured of anything if you have faith enough long enough.

Sickness, sin and poverty will be eradicated by Mazdaznanism.

The fly you swat may be the incarnated soul of a great-great-great-grandmother.

Be careful, then, how you swat the flies.

Obstinacy Cause for Pain.

Pain is nothing but the result of obstinacy in you. If you are suffering from a toothache, it is because you are "declining to yield to the peaceful operations of intelligence."

Never go under the surgeon's knife or take "herbal medicine."

Deny the "bonds of ancestral relation through sickness, sin or sorrow."

And practice these things: Deep or "conscious" breathing and vegetarianism.

If you can do these things, you may become a Mazdaznan, so the "Green Book" says.

The High Priestess is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Roth Hilton, wife of Dr. George Hilton, of Lowell.

In the inner worship Hanish, the leader, is His Humbleness, Mrs. Hilton is Spenta Marie—the equivalent of "holy mother."

Their chief New England shrine is the Mazdaznan Temple, in Lowell. This was formerly a barn belonging to Dr. Hilton, but later converted into a "house of worship."

The central figure in the worship is Mrs. Hilton, the High Priestess. She is the mother of two pretty daughters, one of whom, the elder, Miss Ruthken Mariana Hilton, is being educated to follow in her mother's steps as High Priestess. Some day pretty Miss Ruthken—her name before the court changed it was Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of Mrs. Hilton by her first marriage—will be the leader of the Mazdaznans. The other daughter is Miss Constance Cleopatra Hilton.

The majority of the followers of the "Little Master," Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, are the persons of middle life and evidently of generous means. While a few of the cult are young women of surpassing beauty, yet the advanced philosophic principles of Mazdaznan are so complex and abstract that only those of mature mind are intellectually and spiritually capable of comprehending them. Therefore, there is a dearth of young people in the cult.

Rats Give Sleeping Fisherman Haircut

Well Oiled Head of Angler Proves Excellent Provender for Hungry Island Rodents.

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., July 19. A Santa Barbara fisherman has discovered a new way of getting his hair clipped. He appeared about his usual haunts yesterday with one-half of his head neatly shorn of hair. He says that the mice did it. A well-known fisherman vouches for the tale.

Santa Barbara Island is inhospitable and barren and contains not a drop of fresh water. For this reason fishing parties take a good supply of liquid refreshment.

Usually fishermen sleep on their boats on account of the mice. However, the fisherman in the party of Williams said he would sleep on shore.

This fisherman had earned the sobriquet of "Dude," owing to his habit of oiling his hair. It was this oil that caused the involuntary haircut, for the fishermen say that during the "Dude's" hours of slumber the mice visited him and neatly cut the hair close to the scalp in their relish of the oil.

Japs' 'Amo' Starts Romance at Harvard

Girl Student Teaches Him Language of Nippon and Now They Sail for Tokio Honeymoon.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—They met in the yard at Harvard. He was finishing his course and she was studying the intricacies of the Japanese language.

"Will you teach me Japanese?" asked James Lee Kauffman, and she said "yes."

They studied together day after day. Finally he was graduated to what corresponds to "Amo" in the Latin books. He asked her several times to explain its meaning.

"It means I love," she said, blushing.

"I am sure it must mean I love you," he said, and when she nodded that such might be the case he admitted that such was the case.

So they were married in Lancaster, Pa., and came here.

They sailed for Tokio. He is to take the chair of English law in the Imperial University.

Marries and Steals To Reform a Girl

Divinity Student Admits Taking Money Trusted to Him Because He Loved Woman.

DENVER, July 19.—William Schulz, student of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $38 from the student body, whose cashier he was, says he married Miss Thelma Gillion and became a defaulter, not only because he loved the girl, but because he desired to assist her in giving up her former way of living.

That Schulz had partly succeeded in his work of reclamation is the belief of all Denver people who have come in contact with the young woman since she and Schulz arrived in this city. They unite in saying that there is no better behaved young woman in Denver than Mrs. Schulz.

Sioux City Finds Policewomen Useful

Superintendent of Police Safety Declares They Have Lessened Trouble With Girls.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA, July 19.—"I want especially to have the policewomen on the force during the summer months," says the Superintendent of Public Safety. "We formerly had plenty of trouble with young girls in dance halls, but since the women came on the force there has been none of this.

"I believe that they are doing fine work and am very well satisfied. The only thing that would cause their release from the force would be the lack of sufficient appropriation to pay their salary. They are necessary to the force in guarding the morals of the women of Sioux City."

Safe Robber Relic Found in Old Wall

Discoverers Believe That Ancient Money Box Was Taken From Stage Coach by Highwaymen.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., July 19.—While repairing the State highway at the top of Conococheague Mountain, near Concord, Ralph Hopple and Elias Snyder, who were tearing down a stone wall, found an express money box, of heavy sheet iron, lined with wood. The lid was partly open and the lock had been sprung with an iron hook found near the box.

It is thought the box was in the old stone wall for more than a century and was placed there by a gang of robbers that infested that section in the days of stage coaches.

ACID THROWN AS JEALOUS WIFE STRIKES RIVAL

House Physician of Kimball House Center of Affray Witnessed by Peachtree Crowd.

Dr. J. Robert Smith, house physician at the Kimball Hotel; Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Ina McNeil, of No. 299 Forrest avenue, a saleswoman at a downtown store, engaged in a struggle in front of the Park-Chambers-Hardwick store on Peachtree street Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. Smith found her husband with Mrs. McNeil.

In the melee Mrs. McNeil received a slight cut on her arm, and Mrs. Smith claims also she gave her a black eye. During the trouble a bottle of what is supposed to have been carbolic acid was thrown by one of the participants, but none of them will admit throwing it. Dr. Smith declares he did not see the acid thrown, and Mrs. Smith will not say whether she threw it or not.

Hundreds See Fray.

The triangular affray was witnessed by hundreds of Peachtree street pedestrians, and created considerable excitement. After the bottle of acid had crashed to the pavement and broken, Dr. Smith hustled his wife around the corner, while Mrs. McNeil ran into the store and hurried to the second floor.

Mrs. Smith admits attacking Mrs. McNeil. She says she has several times asked her to keep away from Dr. Smith, and declares she became infuriated when she saw her husband meet Mrs. McNeil downtown to-day.

Says She Trailed Smith.

"Dr. Smith has been running around with Mrs. McNeil for more than a year now," said Mrs. Smith. "We have been separated for several years, but of late the doctor has asked me to return to him. He has offered to buy me an automobile if I would come back, but I told him I would have to test him. I asked him to keep away from Mrs. McNeil, and I've also asked Mrs. McNeil to keep away from Robert.

"I heard several weeks ago that he was going around with her again, and this morning I came to Atlanta from my home in Douglas. I trailed Dr. Smith to-day when he left the Kimball House, and I saw him meet the woman on Edgewood avenue. I followed them until they got in front of the store on Peachtree street, and then I got so mad that I stopped them.

"I admit I hit Mrs. McNeil, and I would do it again. I just got so mad that I walked up and struck her in the face. I gave her a black eye and scratched her on the arm, but she didn't hurt me. I don't know anything about the acid. Dr. Smith did not do anything while we were fighting, but acted like he wanted to get away. After the bottle was thrown, he took me out of the place."

Girl Shoots Herself When She Is Spanked

Mother Punishes Her for Spending Afternoons With Boys—She Fires Bullet Into Breast.

NEW YORK, July 19.—When the mother of 15-year-old Mary DeMartino spanked her a week ago for spending the afternoons with young men on the roof of their home, No. 337 East Forty-seventh street, the girl threatened to shoot herself.

Mrs. DeMartino caught her on the roof again yesterday, and after Mary had been chastised, she fired a bullet into her breast, penetrating one of her lungs. She was taken to Flower Hospital, and last night was in a critical condition.

Couldn't Die Until He Moved Friend's Body

Pioneer Refuses to Allow Companion's Remains to Rest in Old Deserted Cemetery.

DUFUR, OREG., July 19.—"No, he was just my friend."

This was the answer given by H. Koehler, of Portland, when asked if William Holman, whose body he had gone to the trouble and expense of moving from one cemetery to another, was a relative.

Many, many years ago, when there was but a small handful of settlers in the Fifteen-Mile Valley, a location for a cemetery was selected on a hill overlooking the valley.

A few days ago Kohler, now a gray-haired man, came to look after the last resting place of his friend Holman. He left here soon after Holman's death 35 years ago.

"We were good friends—very good friends," he said. "I could not die happy if I knew he would be left out there in that old cemetery with no one left to care for his grave. I had intended to look after this long ago, but circumstances have prevented, and now I am growing old and I must do this one kind act for my friend. We were very, very good friends."

Horn Frightens Animal But He Afterwards Turns to Fight and Pierces Tire With Horns.

UKIAH, CAL., July 19.—W. C. Jones, of Los Angeles, ran down a big deer with his auto near Largo yesterday when it jumped over the fence in front of the machine. Jones opened his throttle and turned loose the horn. The noise frightened the animal, and, after a half mile chase, it turned to give battle. The deer made one vicious lunge forward, its horn piercing the front tire, the impact breaking its neck. Jones loaded his prize into the machine.

CRAWFORD HEIRS EXPECT SEARCH FOR BARBER TO BARE PRE-NUPTIAL PLOT

Relatives Think That Lump Will Tell Woman Held on Poison Charge Planned to Wed Him on Her Husband's Death.

If the tireless search which is being directed by Atlanta lawyers discovers in New York a man named Fred Lump, the prosecution in the case against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, thinks a pre-nuptial plot against Crawford can be proved.

The alleged plot was between Mrs. Crawford, then Mrs. Savage, and Lump. She would marry the wealthy Crawford, obtain his money, and then marry Lump, say her accusers.

Lump is a barber by trade and a Bohemian by nativity. He is supposed to be in New York, and in that city detectives in the employ of the prosecution have been at work for several days. Every message that comes from them, however, is one of failure.

Colonel James Makes Charge.

The charge of a plot first was made by Col. J. S. James, who is attorney for the contesting Crawford heirs, who ordered the arrest of Lump. Colonel James said that Lump admitted his being in Atlanta at the time of Crawford's death, and that other testimony valuable to the prosecution was given by him in deposition several weeks ago. But present search for the Bohemian barber has proved fruitless.

Colonel James points to Mrs. E. C. Bursener as one of the witnesses of the prosecution to substantiate the murder plot charge. Mrs. Bursener, it is claimed, will testify that she frequently heard Mrs. Crawford say that she would marry Crawford, get his money, and later run away with Lump. The prosecution will seek to prove also by Mrs. Gertrude A. Painter, it is said, that there was a definite agreement to this plan existent between Mrs. Crawford and Lump.

The forces that are trying to saddle Mrs. Crawford with the murder charge are scoring heavily in the closely-allied civil suit. Heirs of Joshua B. Crawford, trying to break the will by which the widow received the bulk of the estate, charging undue influence, have produced a number of witnesses to swear to an antagonism between Crawford and Mrs. Mary B. Crawford.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. L. C. Dillingsley, who testified that Joshua B. Crawford said, time and again, that he would not marry the woman. This statement was elicited in the attempt to prove that Crawford was not rational, and probably was intoxicated, when he married Mrs. Crawford.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Mrs. Dillingsley, who said she lived in the Crawford home on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death, told of instances of alleged cruelty on Mrs Crawford's part, directed particularly toward a Miss Scott. Mrs. Salite Alexander, an old woman of Henry County, was another witness by whom it was sought to prove habitual drunkenness on Crawford's part.

Mrs. Crawford, released from the Tower on bail of $6,250, has remained in the seclusion of her home on West Peachtree street all week, steadfastly quiet and refusing all statements in the face of the accusations against her. She has said nothing regarding the case, except a simple denial of the charges.

Reporters seeing her were treated courteously and quietly, and Mrs. Crawford seemed not averse to talk to them freely. But in most of the talk the subject of the murder charge and the plot charge in which Lump's name appears was carefully skirted.

Mrs. Crawford is a large woman, of dignified appearance. Not one moment since her arrest Saturday night has her composure broken, even slightly. In the Tower she received the few persons who called on her, and during the visit did not exhibit a sign of perturbation.

Calls Charge "Awful Thing."

To reporters and to all her visitors, when she mentioned at all the subject of the murder charge, she referred to it as "this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford finds staunch friends in her children and grandchildren, who visited her at the Tower, and were with her almost all the few hours she spent in jail, bringing her flowers, a savory meal, and other tokens of their love.

Mrs. Crawford's children are bitter in their speech against the nephews and neices of Joshua B. Crawford, who, they say, are persecuting their mother with extreme cruelty. Mrs. Crawford herself accused her enemies of cruelty and lack of feeling.

Mrs. Crawford met Joshua B. Crawford when she was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine, wither Crawford went in search of health. It was there she met him, and there that she married him. At his death, there was a settlement of his estate, Mrs. Crawford taking hold of the affairs with a capable hand.

An agreement was signed, and the affairs of Joshua B. Crawford, deceased, seemed amicably settled. Then the litigation was sprung. In the first bill of complaint the heirs who contested the will charged Mrs. Crawford with poisoning her husband, and of exerting undue influence to procure a will in her favor. But it was not until three years later, two weeks ago, that an examination of the remains of Joshua B. Crawford to ascertain traces of poison was ordered. Upon the examination came the verdict of the physician that traces of poison were vident, and Mrs. Crawford was arrested.

With preliminary hearing waived, Mrs. Crawford's case is flatly up to the grand jury, which, without definite date of meeting, awaits the call of the Solicitor General. The body probably will be assembled next week.

MRS. MARY BELLE CRAWFORD, held on poison charge in famous will case mystery, with her grandchild, Viola Belle Bennett.

RENO SINGS ITS SWAN SONG AS DIVORCE MECCA

Grand Rush of Colonists to Take Advantage of the Old Law Comes to an End.

RENO, July 19.—With such songs as "Meet a Friend From Your Home Town" and "At the Devil's Ball," sung by feminine entertainers from Metropolitan music halls, accompanied by high-class orchestras, the divorce colony celebrated the past week the beginning of the end of the Nevada quick divorce.

On the stroke of the midnight hour on Monday the curtain dropped upon one scene in Reno's notable divorce colony performance which has commanded the attention of the world for so long—that of the almost daily appearance of new faces upon the streets, as men and women, from plain country folk to elaborately gowned and bejeweled society beauties, arrived to begin their required six months' residence in the State and county, preparatory to the prospective divorce action.

Law Halts Colonists.

No more will incoming trains deposit these colonists and carloads of trunks, for the familiar song, "I'm on My Way to Reno," has been shelved by the action of the last Legislature, when it dealt the knock-out blow in its ultimatum that no divorce proceeding shall be instituted in the State of Nevada under the existing six-month residence law after December 21 next, thereby limiting the time in which newcomers could begin such residence period to Monday last.

Previous to July, 1909, the presence here for divorce of but an occasional person of prominence merely commanded attention to that individual, but it led to a method of publicity by an attorney which started the ball rolling, and it has never stopped rolling. Its greatest momentum is being witnessed now.

All Houses Are Thronged.

During the past month, and especially the week ending on Monday, the throng of newcomers has experienced great difficulty in securing such apartments as they might desire. All the hotels are crowded, as are the desirable rooming houses. Available cottages are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. In many cottages from four to six divorcees are living.

Some private boarding houses are housing as many as ten of the fair sex, and men. There are now scores of so-called "divorcees' nests" here. Every train the past fortnight has unloaded new arrivals, the preponderance of men and very young women, seemingly well to do and fashionable being noticeable. The proportion of men to women increased largely. Baby carriages and dogs played conspicuous parts.

Fortune in Gold Nuggets Awaits Heir

Wealth Will Revert to State of Kansas Unless Kin of Old Woman Appear.

HUTCHINSON, July 19.—There is a bag of gold nuggets and gold dust awaiting heirs that may go to the State of Kansas. These nuggets and the gold dust, along with some money and other personal property to the value of $10,000, are in the hands of former Sheriff G. M. Duckworth, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ana M. Bernhert, who died a few days ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Some years ago when Mrs. Bernhert, who lived alone, was found to be of unsound mind, Dr. Duckworth was named as her guardian and she was taken to an asylum for treatment. In searching the house he found scattering personal property. It was found that much of it was gold nuggets and dust, saved, evidently, from some former mining experience, and hoarded away.

Baby Sips Hat Bleach; Dies from Poisoning

Mother, Bedridden from Appendicitis, Is Unable to Stop Child from Drinking Acid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—As a result of drinking a mixture of lye and oxalic acid, used by her father to clean an old straw hat, Dorothy E. Smith, 20 months old, died yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her father is Leo Smith, of No. 47 Brooklyn avenue, Jamaica, an employee of the Long Island Railroad.

The child's mother is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She and the baby were alone in the house yesterday when the child drank the mixture. She heard the baby's screams, but could not leave her bed, so she screamed, too, and neighbors who responded called a doctor.

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 19.—To attend church each Sunday for three months and to bathe his children once a week was the novel sentence imposed on John Norris in the Police Court by Mayor Reed.

Norris pleaded guilty to intoxication. It was his second appearance in court within two months.

The terms of his sentence, if not complied with, will result in him serving 109 days in the workhouse.

Women Wear Bath Dresses Down Town

Startle Natives by Appearing in Ice Cream Parlor in Their Beach Attire.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Two buxon matrons and a miss about 19 years old created a sensation about dusk by walking through the streets of Warwood, north of this city, in bathing costumes. Unabashed by the attention they attracted, they entered an ice cream parlor, where they ordered ices, and after eating them walked to their homes.

The matter was brought to the attention of Town Marshal E. L. Pool, who immediately issued a warning that women appearing hereafter in such scant attire would subject themselves to arrest.

Naturalist Editor Has Forest Sanctum

Sets His Type in Shade of Hemlock and Lives in Wigwam all Winter.

WESTFIELD, MASS., July 19.—A unique editorial and printing plant is that known as "Seneca Wigwam, The Press in the Forest," located in the heart of the woods about three miles west of this place.

The sanctum is a typical Indian tepee, where the editor, Joseph C. Duport, an out-of-door enthusiast, prints, illustrates and publishes an original magazine called the Woronoco Valley Calumet.

In summer the editor sets his type in the shade of a hemlock, and in the winter or during inclement weather his work is done in the wigwam, which contains an up-to-date twentieth century printing press and equipment.

Policeman's Watch Stops Death Bullet

Hospital Steward Thinks Patrolman Burglar and Fires Six Shots at His Heart.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 19.—A watch in his vest pocket stopped a bullet which otherwise probably would have pierced the heart of Patrolman O'Hara last night. The shot was one of six fired by Roscoe Gray, steward of the Oakland College of Medicine, under the impression that O'Hara was a burglar. The other shots did not hit O'Hara. Gray nearly collapsed when he learned his mistake.

O'Hara was on his rounds when he noticed a door in the college building open. Trying to close it, he set off a burglar alarm and Gray opened fire in the dark.

Silver Wire Travels Through Two Arms

Metal Closes Wound on Left Wrist and Works Way to the Right Finger.

CHICO, CAL., July 19.—James Dupen, a Chico merchant, to-day submitted to an operation, in which a piece of silver wire, used in closing a wound on the left wrist in 1897, was extracted from the index finger of the right hand. The wire, which is one-half inch long, passed up one arm, across the chest and worked down the opposite arm, emerging at the finger.

Bee Sting on Neck Fatal to Farmer

Dies from Paralysis of Heart Fifteen Minutes After Insect Poison Enters System.

BRISTOL, PA., July 19.—John Pickering, a farmer of Woodbine, while engaged in his customary duties about the farm Saturday, was stung on the neck by a large bee and within fifteen minutes he was dead.

Dr. Heritage, of Langhorne, was summoned, but did not arrive in time to render aid. The doctor says death was the result of paralysis of the heart, caused by the bee sting.

Attending Funerals Hobby of Old Squaw

"Glass Eye," Noted for Lamentations at Obsequies, at Last Principal at Mortuary Ceremony.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREG., July 19.—"Glass Eye" is dead. She was an aged Indian woman, well known here since the settlement of this section. It was one of her hobbies to attend every funeral that she could, and on these occasions she posed as chief mourner by her excessive lamentations.

Her name has been forgotten by the whites, who only know her by the nickname, which is said to have been given her when young, because of the brightness of her eyes and not because of any abnormality in them.

She was about 75 years old, and is reported to have been the sister of "White Cindy," another noted aborigine.

Boy Finds $35,500; Hides it from Police

Advertises That He Picked up Money and Declares He Will Return it to Owner.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., July 19.—Brayton Gardner, 18 years old, who announced he had found $35,500 in a leather bag on the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad, to-night refused to tell the police where he put the money.

"I have hidden it in a safe place," said he, "and if someone claims it I will produce it immediately."

Gardner walked into the office of a local newspaper and inserted an advertisement reading:

"Found, $35,500. Owner can have money by identifying it and satisfying Brayton Gardner."

Stolen Jewels Are Found Buried in Park

Last of $100,000 Loot Stolen by Employee of Firm Recovered After Confession.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The final confession of young William Beck, who stole $100,000 worth of jewelry from his employers, Udall & Ballou, was obtained yesterday. The last $2,800 of the loot was found by detectives. It was buried in Central Park.

Beck had insisted until yesterday that he had told all. But Inspector Faurot finally got him to reveal the hiding place. The police were told to enter the park at 110th street and Eighth avenue and count eighteen stone blocks in the wall to a spot where a small bush grew. Buried 6 inches they found nine diamond rings and a pair of cuff buttons.

Indian Girl Seeks Office in Oklahoma

Educated Cherokee Business Woman Would Be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

VINITA, OKLA., July 19.—Announcement by Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, that she will not be a candidate for re-election, brings into the race for the Democratic nomination a young Cherokee woman, Miss Pearl Holderman, of Northern Craig County, whose ability as an educated business woman has given her a wide acquaintance in Eastern Oklahoma.

Miss Holderman has large business responsibilities, and her experience and ability have made her more than a match for most men. Because of her father's impaired health she manages his cattle ranch, directing every detail, including the care of a herd of blooded cattle. This young Cherokee woman owns a thousand acres of land in her own name, all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

Old Age Attributed To Her False Teeth

Woman, Age 99, Declares She Has Used Set 59 Years—Always Chews Well.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 19.—At the age of 99, Mrs. Levina Derr, of Hudson, declares that her long life is due solely to the fact that she bought a set of good store teeth fifty years ago.

Mrs. Derr is still active. Five generations of her family are living, and she declares she is as young as any of them.

"I was blessed with good teeth," she said, "and I always made it a point to chew my food well. A good stomach is the foundation of good health, and the stomach can not be good unless the teeth are good."

Congress to Lose Costly Stationery

Government Printer Is Ordered to Stop Use of Costly Material for Lawmakers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Members of Congress will draw no more costly embossed stationery at the expense of the Government. Hereafter they will get along with plain, every-day printed letterheads and envelopes.

The Joint Committee on Printing discovered that the Government Printing Office last year turned out 11,000,000 embossed pieces of stationery at an extra cost of $30,000. An order has been issued to the Government Printer to stop this extravagance.

On the Senate side of Congress this economy reform is resented, but it goes just the same. If Senators want stationery de luxe they must foot the bills out of their private purse.

INDIANS, 102 AND 97, WILL VISIT FAIR DIRECTORS

MONTROSE, COLO., July 19.—The board of directors of the Western Slope Fair Association decided to bring 50 Ute Indians from the reservation in Utah to Montrose during the fair in September. The Indians will include Chief McCook, 97, and his sister, Chippeta, 102, who is the widow of Chief Ouray.

FARMERS' UNION HOPE OF SOUTH, SAY ORGANIZERS IN GREAT GEORGIA CAMPAIGN

Charles S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee, Sweep Through the State With a Message to Planters to Check Enormous Crop Waste.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a flying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"The marvelous grandeur of the world's progress astounds and amazes us, yet the wonderful story would never have been written had it not been for the ever-faithful farmer.

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"When we became a nation the farmer owned 90 per cent of the wealth. In 1850 our national wealth was $7,000,000,000 and the farmer owned $4,000,000,000, or four-sevenths.

"In 1913 our national wealth is estimated at $131,000,000,000, and the farmer owns $26,000,000,000. Our farm property is valued at nearly $40,000,000,000, but $14,000,000,000 is owned by other classes than farmers.

"The above figures show that farmers are not holding their own, for if they had kept pace with other vocations since 1850 they would now own $75,000,000,000 worth of wealth instead of $26,000,000,000. Their lack of business methods and failure to match conditions have cost them $49,000,000,000. This would buy all the farm property in the United States and have enough left to buy a half interest in all the railroads.

"In a score of years the farmers of this country have produced $135,000,000,000 worth of farm products, or enough to buy all the property in the United States. Yet this wonderful amount of wealth has not gone to the farmers. We have 10,000 men in this country who own an average of $10,000,000 each. And their combined wealth is $100,000,000,000. The other 99,990,000 people own $31,000,000,000. Of our 100,000,000, 80,000,000 are homeless.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The 12,000,000 farmers of this country are laboring under an indebtedness of $6,000,000,000. On this amount, counting commissions and renewal charges, they are paying an annual interest of 8 1-2 per cent, or $510,000,000, while the business men and manufacturers pay an average of 5 per cent interest, or $300,000,000, on $6,000,000,000. This $210,000,000 excess interest paid by the farmers would pay off our farm indebtedness in 28 years. Co-operative efforts and rural credits would right these wrongs. So, let us continue to discourage this present system until it has passed into history and is only remembered in the misty back yonder.

"Distribution being one of our greatest problems, our second declaration of purposes is to assist our members in buying and selling. The Federal Government has spent $100,000,000 in the last ten years, teaching us how to produce, and not a cent to teach us how to market.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

Expense Is Unavoidable.

"We all agree that there is an unavoidable expense in the distribution of farm products. But let us make what seems to us a reasonable division of the $13,000,000,000 consumers other than farmers pay for farm products each year.

Give the wholesaler and jobber $1,000,000,000, the transportation companies $1,000,000,000, the retailer $1,500,000,000; then throw in $500,000,000 for all possible misallowance, and we have $9,000,000,000, which is $3,000,000,000 more than the farmer gets. This amount falls into the waste basket of speculation.

"If it were divided between the producer and consumer it would clothe the naked, feed the hungry and educate the illiterate, instead of breeding millionaires, paupers, anarchists and suicides. If the Farmers' Union fills its mission it will not be long until a less portion of the laborers' toll will be turned in at the toll gate of the palace and a great portion will find its way through the door of the cottage, and help to lift the humble tenement to the comfort, dignity and luxury of a home.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 250,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If property handled, this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices; we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

Human Chain Saves Man on Niagara Brink

Four Men Take Desperate Chance in Rescue Work at Edge of Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 19.—Truman Chapman, aged 22, of Hamilton, Ont., is alive to-day after falling into the Niagara River and being rescued at the very brink of the American Falls. Four men formed a human chain, and, by taking a desperate chance, saved Chapman when his body providentially lodged between projections of rocks.

Chapman, who is subject to fits, was leaning against a railing at Prospect Point, directly over the water's edge, when he fell in. The current from this point to the brink of the falls is irresistible, but the unconscious body struck the rocks just right to be held temporarily. John Hughes, T. S. Winders, T. D. Thomas and an unidentified man were the heroes.

Advises Wives to Keep Their Secrets

Head of National Homestead Association Says It's a Mistake for Husbands to Know Too Much.

BOSTON, July 19.—"The wise wife never tells her husband all her secrets. She knows better than to run the chance of losing her independence."

So declared Mrs. Charlotte Smith, head of the National Homestead Association, to-day. The association is studying to find out what makes happy homes. It has learned that if a wife tells her husband everything it is a lesson to him not to tell her his secrets.

"Many divorces are occasioned by married couples knowing too much of each other," declared Mrs. Smith.

Aged Sisters Make White House Carpets

Old Women, Expert Dyers and Weavers, Are Preparing to Decorate Mrs. Wilson's Room.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 19.—Miss Caroline McHargue and Mrs. Martha Walker, of Elkin, aged 74 and 76, respectively, are engaged in preparing carpets, druggets and portieres to furnish the room of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the White House at Washington. They are experts in the blending of colors.

The two aged women are sisters. They live together and are expert dyers and weavers, using the old-time barks and herbs in the dyeing process, and the old-fashioned hand loom cards and spinning wheel.

Cartridge Placed on Track Shoots Youth

Boy May Die from Bullet Which Penetrated Lungs as Result of Belated Celebration.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—A belayed Fourth of July celebration on the part of small boys yesterday may result fatally for 8-year-old Francis Wright, who received a bullet in the chest at Twenty-fourth and Bryant streets. In company with his chums, he had been placing cartridges on the car tracks. One of them exploding, sent a bullet whizzing at him. He was taken to the Mission Emergency Hospital, where it was found that the bullet had penetrated the lung. The boy's parents had him removed to his home, No. 2582 Twenty-fourth street, where his condition is considered grave.

THIS DRESS WAS TOO MUCH FOR PRIM RICHMOND.

THIS Picture shows Miss Flossie Brown in the split skirt which caused so much excitement in Richmond, Va., that the young lady was arrested, fined $25 and given twenty-four hours in which to leave town. The idea of the slit skirt did not appeal at all to the Virginians, but it has not been received with so much disfavor elsewhere, for Miss Brown, or Blossom Browning, as she prefers to be called, has been invited to wear it in Pittsburg and Baltimore.

Quarrel at License Desk Halts Wedding

Prospective Bride Objected to Way Her Fiance Spelled Name and Ceremony Was Called Off.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., July 19. A near-wedding was spoiled to-day when the bride-to-be and the bridegroom-to-be quarreled over the spelling of the latter's name. C. W. Clane, of Los Angeles, aged 44, and wearing diamonds as large as hickory nuts, accompanied by a woman about 35 years old, applied for a license.

He started to fill out the blank. "Spell it right, please; spell it Cline," whispered the woman, but Clane just kept on writing.

Again his prospective bride, speaking right out loud, said he was spelling his name wrongly. But still Clane paid no attention. Then, in tones of downright anger, she exclaimed, "You spell your name properly or there will be no wedding."

"Very well," answered the man, and he crumpled up the application blank and they left the office.

NATION FINALLY REFUSES BURR'S PENSION PLEA

United States Decides After 79 Years Just to File Request in National Museum.

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—After some delay—79 years, to be more or less exact—the United States Government has decided on a final action on Aaron Burr's application for a pension. The Government proposes to put the application in the National Museum. This is a patriotic and quite inexpensive method of disposing of a formal application for money.

Exhibited in a glass inclosed case in the museum, the papers may rest peacefully and indefinitely, telling future generations that in his last days Burr was considerably "hard-up." This is a fact not generally known. But if future generations happen to be observant they may notice that the papers show Uncle Sam to be a bit tardy in matters of pensions.

Papers Valuable Historically.

Historically, the papers are very valuable. They contain a letter written by George Washington to Aaron Burr, which even to-day—about 135 years after the letter was penned—is in a state of perfect preservation. Any student of values of historical relics can tell how much such a thing is worth. Officials at the National Museum declare the letter to be "invaluable."

The paper is a bit yellow but it is intact. The ink is a trifle faded, but can be read without difficulty even without the aid of glasses. And, furthermore, the letter reveals a bit of Washington's character more clearly than a volume of history. The missive shows how the general treated with his officers. Burr had written to Washington requesting leave of absence from military duty on account of ill health and suggesting that while off duty his pay may be discontinued.

Here is George Washington's reply to Burr:

Headquarters,
Frederick, 26th Oct., 1778.

"Dear Sir:

"I have your favor of the 24th. You, in my opinion, carry your ideas of delicacy too far when you propose to drop your pay while the recovery of your health necessarily requires your absence from the service. It is not customary, and it would be unjust. You therefore have leave to retire until your health is so far re-established as to enable you to do your duty.

"Be pleased to give the Colonel notice of this, that he may know where to call upon you should any unforeseen exigency require it.

"I am, dear sir,

"Your mo. obt. servt.,
"GEO. WASHINGTON.

"Lt. Col. Burr."

Burr's Final Appeal.

George Washington's letter is regarded as the most valuable paper among the sheaf composing Burr's application, but the application itself. Burr's formal appeal for a pension, has much historical worth because it is Burr's own record of his military service, written in 1834, just two years before his death, at the age of 80 years, in Port Richmond, Staten Island, N. Y. The papers contain no mention of Burr's famous duel with Alexander Hamilton, in which Hamilton was mortally wounded.

Burr even failed to mention in the papers that he had been Vice President of the United States, and reference to the fact that he was arrested and tried for treason for attempting to form a republic west of the Mississippi is also omitted. In the application it is recited, however, that Burr was unable to appear in court to swear to the facts by reason of "bodily infirmity."

CONVICTS OFFERED PARDON IF THEY WILL PICK BERRIES

GEORGETOWN, DEL., July 19.—Full and complete pardons await even the prisoners in Sussex County if they will pick strawberries or work on the farms.

The scarcity of labor has become a serious problem to the farmers this year, and so serious has the question become that many of them have notified committing magistrates that they will pay all fines for intoxicated and disorderly persons if it can be arranged that these people pick berries.

CHANGS, ON WAY HOME, CLING TO YANKEE FRILLS

Wife and Children of Chinese Minister Sail Derssed in Latest American Fashions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—After more than three years in Washington with her husband, Minister Chang, Mme. Chang is returning to the Orient. She is accompanied by two daughters, a son, Henry K. Chang; a litt e daughter-in-law and a tiny grandchild. During her residence in America Mme. Chang has changed her ideas about many things, and about others she maintains the old Chinese beliefs.

The two young daughters, Miss Alice and Miss Lillie Chang, have been attending school in Washington for two years, and with the progress of their education have abandoned their picturesque nature clothes for American garb.

Whether they will adopt the clothes of their native country on their return remains to be seen. Miss Alice Chang, who spoke for the party at the St. Francis before they sailed on the Manchuria, said:

"It all depends on what is in fashion in China.

Favor American Fashions.

"If we find American clothes fashionable out there, we shall wear them. We adopted them when we entered Gunnison Hall, our Washington school. These are more convenient when traveling," she added, pointing to a pale blue silk crepe costume with the latest frills and furbelows. "When we wear our other clothes, people stare so, and sometimes they laugh. They aren't used to them in Washington."

The question of recent changes in China is of especial interest to Mme. Chang and her daughters.

The idea that women may vote in China and that the door of opportunity is opening for them daily there has caused the Chinese women to be thoughtful.

"I don't know about this voting," said Mme. Chang, through her daughter. "I don't believe very much in it."

"Only for some women," broke in one daughter.

Education Qualification.

"I would make an educational qualification," said Miss Lillie. "Not every woman ought to vote."

"Home is the place for women," said Mme. Chang, true to her country's traditions and centuries of training. "A woman ought to do housekeeping, to stay at home and to have children."

Mme. Chang and the daughters are opposed to the Western idea of a woman earning her own living. They believe she should want to stay at home to be cared for, even if she has to do without some of the extras which her own money can secure.

"Women in China probably never will reach that stage," said Mme. Chang. "There will be fewer opportunities for them to enter professional and business fields."

College is a goal which is being aspired to by the two daughters, although they are not sure yet what particular lines they want to pursue. "We can go if we want to, you know," said Miss Alice. "Our people believe in college for girls if they want it."

Surgeon Rebuilding Man's Entire Face

Ears and Nose Burned Months Ago Are Being Replaced by Series of Operations.

GRAHAM, MO., July 19.—Pierce Fleming, who lives near Graham, is undergoing one of the most remarkable series of operations ever attempted in Missouri. His face is being built anew.

Several months ago the Fleming home was burned and Pierce was severely burned about the head. For a time it was thought he could not live. He finally recovered, but his ears and nose were badly scarred.

A Kansas City surgeon was consulted and he began the work of rebuilding the face of the burned man. The ears have been completely rebuilt and the doctor is now working on the nose and the eyes. It is barely possible now to discern the difference between the new nose and ears of Fleming and the ones he lost in the fire.

WOMAN JURORS SCORN STYLE OF SMART LAWYER

Beau Brummel Clothes and Bachelor Button of Barrister Fail to Win His Cause.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Personal pulchritude and unusually smart habiliments, heightened by a bachelor's button and an ingratiating manner, failed to win for Assistant District Attorney Maxwell McNutt, in his appeal to the jury of women which tried Mrs. Bertha J. Williams on an extortion charge to-day. After deliberating one hour and 55 minutes, the jury, the first in the history of the world composed of women to hear a felony case, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

"Of course she said she did what she did, but we didn't think when she said she did it, she meant she had meant to do it," said one of the jurywomen.

Hence, Mrs. Williams, attired in a fetching Milan hat and a neat white serge tailored suit, much scrutinized by the jurywomen, made discreet osculatory advances to her benefactors, and the incident was closed.

Mrs. Annette Robinson, also armored in attractive feminine fixings, was the complaining witness in the case. She accused Mrs. Williams of having written her a letter April 8, attempting to extort $150 in return for the delivery of a trunk said to have contained certain evidence which, according to the letter, would have embarrassed Mrs. Robinson, had it fallen into the hands of the police.

Meows from Limb of Tree to Voice Love

Chicago Romeo Tries Novel Method of Wooing, but Falls Into Clutches of Law.

CHICAGO, July 19.—John Wadjinski's method of love-making goes back to the days when anthropoid Romeos used to hang by their tails and carol love songs all night long. He put his theories into practice on the night of May 3. To-day he was fined $5 and costs by Judge Sabath, who could find no sympathy for the unconventional wooing.

Sophia Emmerling had retired for the night. John Wadjinski strode through the night with caveman emotions stirring in his breast. He entered the Emmerling yard and climbed a tree. He straddled a branch opposite Sophia's window and began to "meow" like a cat. To the girl thus rudely awakened he made love in a voice that could be heard for a [illegible].

Mrs. Anna Emmerling, the girl's mother, called the police. Wadjinski was yanked from romance to the jail.

MYSTERY MAN'S NAME TO STAY SECRET ALWAYS

Operation on Brain Fails to Reveal Identity of "J. C. R." Has Baffled Surgeons.

ROCHESTER, MINN., July 19.—That "J. C. R.," the mystery patient in the Rochester State Hospital, will never know who he is nor will the world, unless friends of olden days come to the rescue, and that he will never again speak, is the verdict of the surgeons, following a remarkable operation performed upon the brain.

"It is problematical that the operation will accomplish its purpose," said C. C. Heyerdale, first assistant superintendent of the State Hospital, after leaving the operating room.

The opening of the skull revealed a large area of degenerated brain cells covering the centers of speech and memory, and an unusually large cyst containing fluid was removed. This would indicate that in times past "J. C. R." probably suffered a hemorrhage of the brain, which could have been the result of a stroke of apoplexy or an injury inflicted upon the skull or brain. The unusually large area of degeneration discourages any hope that the memory will ever be restored or speech recovered.

Gets Blow Intended For His Twin Brother

Chicago Youth Struck When Angry Swain Avenges Pleasantry His Duplicate Was Guilty Of.

CHICAGO, July 19.—William and Otto Andler, of 3751 North Whipple Street, are twins. William passed a pleasantry about a lass who was going her way with one William Dieverkorn.

Sudden anger surged through Dieverkorn, but he held himself in check and escorted the young woman home. Then he came back, met Andler on the street an gave him a jarring wallop.

Andler soon discovered that the blow was meant for his brother and that Dieverkorn got mixed in the delivery of the goods.

Otto Andler refused to rest on this explanation. He caused the arrest of Dieverkorn, and it came out in court how William got the laugh, Otto got the punch and Dieverkorn got the hook.

Judge Sabith inspected the twins, said he couldn't see any difference and dismissed the case, warning Dieverkorn to be more discriminating in the future.

DORSEY FIGHTS MOVEMENT TO INDICT CONLEY

Solicitor Is Bombarded With Letters to Proceed Against Negro as Slayer of Mary Phagan.

THE GRAND JURY IS CALLED

Hottest Battle of Famous Case To Be Waged Behind Closed Doors of Inquisitory Body.

Solicitor Dorsey is fighting vigorously the movement in the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley Monday for the murder of Mary Phagan, despite the bambardment of letters from many citizens and by the sentiment of some of its own members.

It is for the consideration of these letters and petitions, asking the reopening of the Phagan matter, that the meeting has been called.

It was in the face of Solicitor Dorsey's bitterest opposition that the meeting was called at all. Foreman Beattie issued his defi after a previous Grand Jury had been defeated in its efforts to reopen the case with a view of indicting Jim Conley and after Dorsey explicitly had expressed his strongest disapproval of such a move.

Crucial Battle Coming.

With the first skirmish won by those in favor of the indictment of Conley, the hottest battle is yet to be waged behind the closed doors of the jury room. The question first will be on whether the grand jurors consider it proper at this time to reopen the investigation whose first chapter resulted in the indictment of Leo M. Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan. Solicitor Dorsey will lay before the body for the first time all of his reasons for desiring a postponement of all further investigation until after the trial of Frank.

Should the Solicitor be driven back from this position by the Grand Jury again disregarding his wishes and taking up the investigation, he will be forced to take refuge in the last ditch and make his fight against the indictment of Conley.

With all the weight of evidence which has piled up against the negro, it is regarded as beyond the realm of possibilities that he could persuade the jurors to return a "no bill" against Conley on the charge of murder. Dorsey's one remaining hope at this time would be, it is said, to induce the Grand Jury to waive definite action until after the trial of Frank, when it will be in a position to say whether an indictment shall be drawn against Conley as an accessory after the fact, to which he has confessed, or as the actual murderer.

Dorsey Refuse sto Comply.

The Solicitor's attitude in the matter plainly was shown by his statement when Foreman Beattie went to him Friday seeking to have him call the meeting. Dorsey flatly refused and said:

"The meeting's only purpose will be to exploit the evidence and embarrass the State, and I hope the Grand Jury when it meets will decide to leave the matter alone.

"The indictment of Conley at this time will be a useless procedure that will not stop the trial of Frank. It will only have a mild but undesirable effect on the State's case.

"Conley is in jail and is going to stay there for some time. He is where the authorities can put their hands on him, and he can be indicted much more properly after the Frank case has been disposed of than before, and by the delay there is no danger of a miscarriage of justice."

The Solicitor's position is attacked as palpably unfair by those who have been working to bring about the indictment of the negro. Dorsey would have the testimony of the negro accredited as that of any free and trustworthy citizen, while those opposing him declare it should be taken in the light of that of a possible murderer who is endeavoring to shift the blame on another's shoulders, they say.

Evidence More Direct.

They add that the evidence against Conley is far more direct and damning than any ever brought against Frank. They charge, on this account, that Conley has been protected and "coddled" when he should have been placed on the same basis as the other suspect in the case and should go before the jury in that aspect.

General denials were entered Saturday to the story published Friday that the Pinkertons had changed their attitude in the murder mystery and were convinced of the innocence of Frank. Chief of Detectives Lanford declared that Harry Scott had reaffirmed his belief in the guilt of Frank and the innocence of Conley, except as accessory after the fact.

Atlanta Day To Be Society Event

Knoxville Exposition Plans Feature

Mrs. Van Deventer, Daughter of Mr. Justice Lurton, to Visit City for Conservation Fair.

Atlanta Day at the National Conservation Exposition in Knoxville this fall will be one of the largest of the many special days arranged for the national fair in the East Tennessee city.

Atlanta Day, according to plans now on foot, will be largely a society function, for the members of the Woman's Department of the exposition headed by Mrs. Horace VanDeventer, a daughter of Justice Lurton of the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as Knoxville's acknowledged society leader, expect to formulate their plans so that many of Atlanta society folk will make the trip to Knoxville for that day.

In addition it is planned to make Atlanta Day at the exposition one of peculiar and intimate interest to all residents of the city.

Mrs. VanDeventer to Come Here.

The plans for this special day are now in the making. They will be matured probably while the delegation of Knoxville business men is in Atlanta next week, and later when Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers in the woman's department come to the Georgia metropolis to take up the matter with Atlanta society folk.

In the preparations for what undoubtedly will be the South's greatest exposition, the woman's department is playing no small part. In Knoxville the exposition management considers itself fortunate that Mrs. VanDeventer consented to take the direction of the woman's work. She has a very large circle of friends and acquaintancse throughout the country, in cities of the North as well as in cities of the South, and what is more, she has succeeded in interesting large numbers of society women in the work she has under way.

Miss Mabel Boardman, president of the American Red Cross Society and a woman who finds time in the multitude of her various philanthropic work to devote herself to society, will be the guest of the woman's department of the exposition on September 13. Miss Boardman to accept this invitation will be obliged to cut short her vacation, but she has gladly consented to do this rather than miss going to Knoxville. She will be made the recipient of many social favors and attentions while in Knoxville. She will be the house guest of Mrs VanDeventer.

Mrs. Hammond Interested.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, of Washington, wife of the multimillionaire mining engineer, who was the special Ambassador from the United States to England at the time of the coronation of King George, is another society woman who has become interested in the Knoxville show and who will come to that city for one of the special days. Mrs. Hammond is president of the National Civic Federation, which will have an extensive exhibit at the Exposition.

Mrs. John Goelet, of Washington; Miss Mabel Wetmore and other women whose names are known the country over will also be guests of the woman's department while the Exposition gates are open. Recently Mrs. Van Deventer made a trip to Nashville to interest the women of that city. On very short notice a meeting was called. Two hundred or more Nashville women went to that meeting. A number of men went also. There was much enthusiasm shown. The result was that plans were completed then and there for a Nashville Day.

More than that—the Nashville Park Commissioners, under whose auspices a splendid exhibit of paintings is being shown in the Parthenon of that city, voluntarily and as a compliment to Mrs. VanDeventer decided to continue the exhibition almost to the time set for the opening of the Conservation Exposition. Then the exhibits will be moved to Knoxville. One of them will be shown in the Art Building; the other, which is the celebrated collection owned by Charles L. Freer, a millionaire art collector, of Detroit, will be placed in the Woman's Building.

Mrs. Denney Also Active.

Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers, among them Mrs. George W. Denney, fourth vice president, who is also the president of the Tennessee State Federation of Women's Clubs and very active in the club life of Knoxville and Tennessee, are planning now to come to Atlanta within a short time to talk matters over with Atlanta women. Just when Mrs. VanDeventer and Mrs. Denney will come or where the meeting will be held has not been decided.

The fact that Atlanta business men are showing a keener interest in the exposition—which is one designed to benefit the entire South—than they have heretofore, and the chances that Atlanta will be well represented at the exposition, is counted upon to assist the women.

The woman's department has planned its work along broad lines. The stereotyped exhibits that always have been a part of women's departments in other expositions will have no place in the Woman's Building at Knoxville. The idea behind the National Conservation Exposition is one of conservation, and these women have figured it out that there is probably nothing that needs conserving more than the energies and the health of women all over this broad land.

So that is what the exhibits in the woman's department will typify to a very large extent. Of course, the things that have a peculiar interest and attraction to women will not be overlooked.

ARTIFICIAL RAIN INSTALLED ON ATLANTA FARM

Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown Protect Crops With Pipe System.

"These dry nights, when my crops are burning up, I can smell that artificial rain a mile off," said a farmer in the suburbs of Atlanta.

The "artificial rain" of which he spoke is produced on three "fancy" farms within a short distance of Five Points, and, according to the unanimous verdict of Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown, who own "overhead irrigation" plants, it means salvation in dry years.

Stories are told of the wonderful crops these farmers grow—two yields of Irish potatoes a year, for instance, from 200 to 300 bushels an acre—six cuttings of alfalfa, crops of beans when the market is bare and beans are worth $2 a bushel.

Yet the system is simple enough.

Pipes Supply Rain.

On posts eight feet high rest pipes about two inches in diameter. These pipes run the whole length of the fields, and the lines of pipe are twenty feet apart. About two feet apart in the pipes are tiny holes. A gasoline engine, a pump which it operates, an abundant supply of water, and the thing is done.

Six hours each evening, when there is no rain, the pump is run and fine streams of water spurt from the holes in the pipes. At high pressure, these streams are thrown almost from one line of pipe to the next. Handles at convenient intervals make it possible to turn the pipes so that the streams are deflected in any direction and the ground thoroughly soaked with the spray.

This system excels ditch irrigation for Georgia soil for the reason that Georgia clay does not soak up water from a ditch in sufficient quantities. Besides, the soil cakes when water is applied in this way. "Artificial rain," however, coming down like a mist, permeates the whole soil and brings results.

Of course, an overhead pipe system is expensive. The cost is estimated at $250 per acre. This might be reduced somewhat if the farmer performed all the labor himself, or it might easily cost more if conditions were not entirely favorable. The increased yield, however, more than overbalances this initial outlay.

Loring Brown tells of getting an $1,100 crop of Irish potatoes from an acre, under his pipe system. In reality, there were two crops, a spring planting and a fall planting, and the potatoes brought a high price because they were sold for seed.

Fail to Realize Work.

"I have only one objection to seeing Belmont farm described in the newspapers," said Mr. Brown, as he sat in a swing on his front gallery and sorted a thick packet of letters. "My objection is that people read of big yields and good profits, then are anxious to try the same methods. They want to spend a lot of money to emulate Belmont, and fail to take account of the hard work that must go with it.

"A farmer, whether he has a fancy farm or one of the old-fashioned kind, must work eighteen hours a day. He must be on the job 365 days a year. That is what many people forget.

Five years ago, drouth killed the entire crop of potatoes on Belmont. Mr. Brown estimates that dry season cost him $3,000. That winter he went to Greeley, Colo., where overhead irrigation is in use, to see if he could work out a solution of the problem—some sort of insurance against drouth. The pipe lines were the answer. Farms around Atlanta can not grow the same yields produced around Greeley, but the difference in price caused by being closer to a good market overcomes the lesser yield, and more.

Zimmer Installs System.

Mr. Zimmer, on his Kimballville Farm, installed an identical system, though on a smaller scale, and since he installed it, never has had occasion to use it. By some streak of fate, his farm has been blessed with abundant rains.

But rain is freakish in choosing its itinerary. In Atlanta itself and out as far as the Chattahoochee River rains have been sufficient this year. But beyond the river there is serious drouth. Crops are drying up. Irrigation would have been the salvation of the farmers.

And as they sit in front of their homes at night, they can smell the sweet odor of refreshed fields at Belmont—"that darn artificial rain."

WIVES CREDITED WITH KEEPING HUSBANDS ALIVE

Medical Association Finds That Benedict's Regular Existence Is Better Than Bachelor's.

Supervision by wives as a possible reason for the greater longevity of married men than of bachelors is discussed by The Journal of the American Medical Association in its editorial section of the recently published statistics on this point. There is no remark on the statistics of more suicides among married men than bachelors.

The Journal has further information indicating that careful as the married men may be, with restraint once removed through the death or divorce of the wife, widowers and grass widowers leap into indiscretions and are lopped off more rapidly than either those still in the state or those who escaped matrimony.

Live Regular Lives.

"Undoubtedly the low death rate among married men is partly due to the fact that, as a rule, those who are in good health, are readier to marry, while those with more delicate health, especially if suffering from any definite ailment, are not willing to assume the burden and responsibility of a family," says The Journal. "Another factor is that married men live much more regular lives as a rule, and consequently avoid many of the dangers of irregular living.

"This view would seem to be corroborated by the statistics as to the mortality among married men who have lost their wives either by death or divorce. The death rate among these "unmarried men" is considerably higher than that of husbands of the same age, and even as a rule it is higher than that of the bachelors of the same age.

Widowers Die Fast.

"The death rate, for instance, of widowers and divorced men between 20 and 30 is nearly double that of single men. From 30 to 40 it is only 14.1 to 12.9, while from 40 to 50 the mortality of divorced and widowers is slightly less than that of single men of the same age. From 50 to 60, however, it is slightly higher once more.

"At all these ages the mortality rate among widowers and the divorced is at least nearly and sometimes double that of married men of the same age."

Feeds Her Pet Pig With a Silver Spoon

Denver Society Woman Provides Bed of Down and Linen for Her Porcine Possession.

DENVER, July 19.—Mrs. Whitney Newton, a Denver society matron, has a new pet.

Young Robert Newton came home a few evenings ago and brought a baby pig with him.

Mrs. Newton took the squirming animal into her arms and tried to make it comfortable, but without success. Finally, in desperation, she went to the linen closet, took out a fine piece of hemstitched linen, embroidered with blue flowers, wrapped it gently about the slick little pig, then laid him cautiously upon the downy pillows beside her own.

Piggy gave a satisfied little squeak, doubled up his feet and went off to sleep happily.

This cunning act won Mrs. Newton's heart, and from exasperation she developed a positive liking for her pet. His white skin is washed, combed and perfumed and he sleeps in a downy bed every night beside his mistress. He also eats from a silver spoon.

WOMAN WINS IN TILT WITH MAN OVER EDUCATION

Miss Parrish Routs Mercer Graduate Who Champions Dead Languages at Institute.

DALTON, July 19.—The contention of Miss C. S. Parrish, State School Supervisor, that the high schools and colleges would accomplish better results by eliminating Latin, Greek and the higher mathematics, substituting in their stead subjects of a more practical value, precipitated a lively debate between Miss Parrish and Professor J. J. Copeland, principal of the Cohutta High School, at the teachers' institute here. It ended, according to the opinion of teachers in attendance, in at least a moral victory for Miss Parrish when Professor Copeland failed to attend the institute Friday to prove Miss Parrish in error in one of her statements.

It was when Miss Parrish reiterated a former statement she had made that such practical matters as domestic science for girls and agriculture for boys would serve a much better purpose than the Latin and Greek taught in the colleges that she found a warm champion for the dead languages in Professor Copeland, who is a Mercer graduate. He not only took the view that they served as great mental trainers, but also insisted that they made a person brave to face the battle of life.

Miss Parrish stated she had noted the difference in the schoolrooms of the college-graduate teacher and of the teacher educated in a grammar school.

"I recently inspected a school taught by a graduate of Mercer University, and found it unusually untidy," she said.

When Professor Copeland replied that such a case was an exception, Miss Parrish retorted that she had found it to be the rule rather than the exception.

"But in order to give you a chance to vindicate Mercer," she said, "I will make you chairman of the committee to brighten up this room for Friday's session."

Friday Professor Copeland failed to appear at the institute, and the work of renewing the flowers in the vases was left to the committee without the assistance of the chairman.

Patrolmen Indicted For Poisoning a Dog

Detective Declares Rome Officers Responsible for Death of Fine Canine.

ROME, July 19.—Two Rome patrolmen, George Climer and Kit Carlson, have been indicted by the Grand Jury on a charge of poisoning a dog belonging to John Wood. Crampton Watters, who also lost a dog by poisoning, is assisting in the prosecution of the charges against the officers.

Late Fall Forecast By Griffin 'Prophet'

"Professor" Snider Says First Killing Frost Will Come November 12 or 13.

GRIFFIN, July 19.—Because of the fact that the great majority of his predictions concerning the weather have come true, the people of Spalding County are beginning to give attention of "Professor" A. L. Snider, a local laborer, who has been studying the clouds all of his life. Snider is without education, has little knowledge of the planets, and possesses no equipment for observing the heavenly bodies, yet he makes predictions of weather several weeks ahead and they come true with marvelous accuracy.

About six weeks ago Snider issued the forecast that July would be ushered in with a hot and dry spell, and that heavy rains would fall on July 4. Also he prophesied that cool spells would come on July 8 and 9, and again about July 12 and 13. All his prophecies came true.

"Professor" Snider's latest prognostication is that no killing frost will come this year until November 12 or 13. He bases his judgment as to this on the fact that the fall will be late as was the spring; and that the full moon in October will not be cold enough to hurt anything, and that vegetation will grow till the middle of November before being killed.

The farming classes are rejoicink in this last prediction, and praying that it may come as nearly true as the ones previously given out.

The organization of the Chamber of Commerce came as a result of a whirlwind campaign to raise $4,000 for the purpose. At a mass meeting, over which A. W. McKeand, secretary of the Southern Commercial Secretaries' Conference, presided, it was determined to undertake the organization and to push it to completion within ten days' time. Special committees were selected and sent out to solicit aid from every business concern in the city. With much easier effort than expected, the sum required was secured, and the Board of Trade permanently organized.

Offices for the board have been fitted up in the Griffin Hotel, and an expert stenographer will be placed in charge of the exhibits of Griffin and Spalding County products to be on display there permanently.

R. R. Martin, Birmingham, Bell Company Employee, Missing Since Middle of May.

BIRMINGHAM, July 19.—His widowed mother, Mrs. D. E. Martin, of Carrollton, and other relatives and officials of the company are greatly alarmed over the unexplained absence from his headquarters in Birmingham of Rufus Russell Martin, an engineer of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company. About the middle of May he left Birmingham for points in Florida in the discharge of his duties for the company, since when nothing has been heard of him, though the officials of the company, the police department of Birmingham and his friends have made every possible effort to locate him.

Martin is a young man of exemplary habits, descended from some of the oldest and most prominent families of Carroll County, and a graduate of the University of Georgia, class 1911. As there is no conceivable reason for his absence, his heart-broken mother fears that he has met with foul play.

Since his graduation Martin has spent considerable time in Virginia, the Carolinas and Alabama as right-of-way engineer for the Bell Company, and had the confidence and respect of his superiors in office, who are as much at loss to understand his absence as are his friends and relatives.

His mother's fears have been greatly increased since she has learned that about the time of his disappearance the body of a young man had been found in Birmingham, so bruised about the face that it was impossible to identify him, nor was there anything by which he could be identified found in his pockets or about his person.

Martin was between 25 and 28 years old; about 6 feet 2 inches, athletic build and ruddy complexion.

YOUNG LAWYER DRAWS ATHENS CHARTER FORM

Measure Before Legislature Proposes Commission Government to Replace Council System.

ATHENS, July 19.—The bill to replace the present Mayor and Council system of the city government in Athens by commission government that was introduced in the Legislature by Representative Rhodes, of Clarke County, this week, was drafted by one of the youngest attorneys in the state, Joseph L. Deadwyler, who has been out of the University Law School but a year, and is now a member of the Athens bar.

If this bill passes the House and Senate and comes before the people of Athens for ratification or rejection, it is sure to cause a warm local fight, because the present administration has been one of the most successful in the history of the city, and many voters are going to be hard to convince that a change is necessary.

Another bill of vital interest to Athens and Clarke County is the one, also introduced by Representative Rhodes, to abolish the present County Commissioners of Clarke County and provide for their successors' election by the people instead of appointing them by the Grand Jury as heretofore.

In September, 1910, Miller returned to his home to see his wife, Mrs. Miller, it is said, refused to see him and called her two sons to her aid. When young Miller admitted that he shot the rifle, but thought he was firing at a burglar, Judge Moses Wright instructed the Solicitor to draw a bill accusing him of assault and attempt to murder. The charges were investigated by the Grand Jury and a true bill returned.

MELON SEASON OVER, BUYERS SEEN NO MORE

Jovial Solicitors Depart, Leaving Behind Much Cash—Larger Acreage for 1914 Certain.

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—The finish of the watermelon season in South Georgia is at hand and the face of the ubiquitous melon buyer will be seen no more in the land until another year rolls around.

These buyers are a jolly set and soon make themselves part of the life of a town, knowing everybody by name, rooting vociferously for the home ball team and becoming generally popular while sandwiching in a lot of business for their respective roads or houses.

The farmer who decided not to plant watermelons for shipment this year is regretful now, as the season has been the finest in years and the prices have kept up well through the whole season.

Charlie Aldag, of Pidcock, reports eight carloads shipped from five and a half acres of land, and there are others coming very nearly up to it. A number of farmers received as high as from $200 to $225 on special carloads. The results of the present season mean the biggest acreage in watermelons next year that has ever been known here.

THOMASVILLE, July 19—With a pistol in his hand, his thumb on the trigger and a bullet hole in the center of his forehead, Jack Lofton, a negro section hand on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, was found dead locked in his house. It is an unusual thing for a negro to commit suicide. This is the second case known here among the members of that race.

TRAVELING WATER WAGON IS PROVIDED FOR HORSES

BOSTON, July 19.—A traveling water cart from which horses may be refreshed has been placed in commission in Boston's streets by the S. P. C. A.

For years the society has been furnishing water from hydrant stations, but recently there have been many requests for a watering place in sections of the city where it would be impractical to open hydrants. Hence the advent of the water cart.

For social news of the South see page 10 this section and the society section.

Court Orders Sale Of Property Halted

Fourth National of Columbus Gets Injunction to Prevent Debtor Transferring Holdings.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Judge Z. A. Littlejohn, of Americus, who heard the argument in the petition of the Fourth National Bank of this city, against Leo Lowenherz and H. M. Mooty, in which the bank was seeking to enjoin them from disposing of property made over by Mooty to Lowenherz, has handed down his decision, in which he enjoins Lowenherz from disposing of the property without first giving bond to the amount of the sale of the property, until after a final settlement of the case in the courts.

There is $13,000 involved, over which Mooty transferred to Lowenherz last February in settlement of a claim the latter held against the former. At the time the property transfer was made Mooty owed the bank something like $1,500 and had no other property on which the bank could obtain its money. Lowenherz is president of one of the largest dry goods establishments in West Georgia and Mooty is his former bookkeeper.

OLD COLUMBUS STANDPIPE NOW IS BEING DESTROYED

COLUMBUS, July 19.—An old Columbus landmark is passing away with the removal of the standpipe on Upper Broad street, which was erected during the year 1888, when Cliff B. Grimes was Mayor.

The standpipe when torn down will be rebuilt on Wynn's Hill, which is one of the highest points about the city and the Columbus Water Supply Company will extend its mains from North Highlands, where a new settling basin will be built to the standpipe, a distance of three miles.

SUES STREET RAILROAD FOR $10,000 DAMAGES

COLUMBUS, July 19.—A suit for $10,000 has been filed against the Columbus Railroad Company by John H. Newsome, who alleges that on February 22 he was permanently injured, when a car of the defendant company struck a negro's horse and knocked it against him. The negro, whose horse was struck by the car, does not figure in the suit, as he has never filed any claim against the street railway company and his name is not known.

COLUMBUS INVESTIGATING DROWNING IN RESERVOIR

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The city of Columbus has started an investigation of the report that a man named Hamilton, who was recently reported drowned in Holland Creek, was really drowned in the reservoir from which Columbus gets a part of its water suply. In fact it is acknowledged that the man was really drowned in the reservoir, but that he was gotten out before the water was contaminated.

Power Company May Use Tallulah 'Juice'

Incorporators of Columbus Concern Silent and Rumor Is Busy as to Their Aims.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Edward W. Swift, J. P. Illges, J. P. Kyle, Clifford J. Swift, John T. Davis, Jr., J. P. Golden, T. E. Golden, O. C. Bulloch, E. J. Rankin, John A. Rankin, E. P. Dismukes and Harry L. Williams have filed a petition for a charter for the Muscogee Light and Power Company.

The capital stock will be $50,000 paid in, but the incorporators ask for the privilege of increasing its capital to $1,000,000 by a majority vote from time to time. Much speculation is rife as to the intentions of promoters, but they refuse to talk.

It is the opinion of many that they propose to establish a power company in this city and take their current from the Georgia Power Company's plant at Tallulah Falls. The proposed company announces its intention of furnishing current for lighting, heating, operating electric cars and to conduct a business similar to other corporations of like character.

Woman Sues to Save Parrot From Cursing

Tells Court That Bird Is Under Baneful Influences Now as Property of Saloon Man.

ALTON, ILL., July 19.—Mrs. Geneva Littlehage has applied to Justice Daniel Gorman for a replevin writ to obtain possession of a parrot to save him from the baneful influences of a saloon.

"The bird never swore once in his life, and I can't bear the thought of his learning to curse," she told the Justice. "You ought to help along the cause by not charging me anything for the papers."

Mrs. Littlehage said while coming from Kansas City to Alton she employed a porter to carry the cage. She said he ran off with the parrot and when she next heard of it the bird had been sold to a saloon man for $10. The proprietor of the saloon refused, it is said, to give it to the owner.

Concrete Patch Put On River's Bottom

Engineers Employ Novel Method of Keeping Texas Stream From Habit of Losing Itself.

MARTINDALE, TEXAS, July 19.—It has been found necessary to put another patch on the bed of the Blanco River. This stream has a remarkable way of losing itself, and in order to restore it to its surface channel a concrete patch has been placed upon the holes through which it disappears.

For many years it has been emptying portions of its flow into small holes in its bed, but it was not until about a year ago that the entire bottom, so to speak, dropped out at a point near San Marcos. In one night the river below that point went dry. It had had a width of nearly 200 feet and was flowing a strong current until the sudden disappearance of the water.

PLAN BIG FETE WHEN CANAL IS READY FOR USE

Flotilla to Make Trip From Columbus Down Chattahoochee to St. Andrew's Bay.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—For the purpose of celebrating the opening of the St. Andrews Bay Canal in an appropriate manner next fall, the Columbus Board of Trade will take steps at once to memorialize Congress to assist. The Navy Department will be asked to send warships to St. Andrews Bay, and men of national fame will be invited to make addresses at the various points along the river and canal where stops are made.

The plan is to begin at Columbus and have a flotilla travel down the Chattahoochee River, giving a whole week over to the ceremonies, which will be elaborate. South Georgia, South Alabama and West Florida are much interested in the scheme.

It is expected that there will be several hundred persons who will make the trip down the river to St. Andrews Bay.

Noble Ex-Convict Becomes Minister

Leonard Mordaunt Runs Gamut of Life From British Society to California Prison.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Leonard Mordaunt, ex-convict, scion of a noble English family, and better known in the role of a prison-reform worker, was ordained to the ministry of the Free Methodist Church by Bishops Jones and Sellew at the close of the annual conference which has been going on in the secluded aisles of Mineral Park.

During twenty years he has ranged from the welcome member of exclusive circles of European society to the lowest grade of convict. He became a convert and decided to dedicate the remaining years of his existence to the service of God and humanity.

Minnesota Seeks Elk for Big Preserve

Section Is Natural Home of Animal, and State Asks Herd From Yellowstone.

ST. PAUL, July 19.—Fifty elk from the Yellowstone National Park, if they can be obtained, will be turned loose in Minnesota in the Superior forest and game reserve, which lies along the Canadian boundary line north of Lake Superior.

The territory is the natural home of the elk, and together with the adjoining national reserve covers more than 1,000,000 acres. There are no elk in either reserve now. It is estimated that the annual increase in the herd will be 50 per cent. This is the increase noted in the Yellowstone Park.

Bold Amazon Shoves Auto Out of Her Way

Worcester, Mass., Woman Merely Bruises Her Finger When She Pushes Car from Path.

WORCESTER, MASS., July 19.—Agnes Olsen, 30, known far and wide as "the Amazon," is none the worse today, save for a sore finger, as a result of her stopping a touring car on Main street, and pushing it back out of her way. The machine was unharmed.

Walter Shea, chauffeur of the touring car, was startled to see a woman walk in front of the machine as he was passing City Hall. His horror turned to amazement when she turned as he ground on his brakes, calmly grasped the car by the hood, and not only stopped its menacing approach, but pushed it back a foot.

Race Restrictions In Hotels Illegal

New York Attorney General Writes Opinion That They Violate New Civil Rights Bill.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 19.—There must be no discrimination because of race, creed or color at any public resort, place of amusement or of public accommodation, under the amended civil rights law which takes effect September 1, 1913.

The attention of Attorney General Carmody has been called to the fact that circulars are being issued by some health resorts in the State, in which is the announcement that the places are not open to certain races.

In a statement to-day Mr. Carmody reviews the statute and declares that such notices will be prohibited.

CHILDREN'S BUREAU WANTS CITIES TO CARE FOR BABIES

ROCKFORD, ILL., July 19.—Miss Julia C. Lathrop, head of the National Children's Bureau, has returned to the home of her birth and childhood to espouse the cause of the nation's babies and to appeal to the executives of Illinois cities to join in the movement of a broadening municipal protection for child growth.

Miss Lathrop renewed her demand for a rigid birth registration law and referred to the progress being made in that direction.

SEEK FOR MOST STUPID MAN.

BERLIN, July 19.—A German paper has started a prize symposium on the question: "Who is the most stupid man in Berlin?"

Bridge Burns; Stops Traffic on A., B. & A.

Alapaha River Crossing Destroyed by Fire—Sparks From Locomotive Blamed for Blaze.

CORDELE, July 19.—The Alapaha River bridge on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlanta Railway, two miles south of Rebecca, was destroyed by fire yesterday about noon, temporarily putting at a standstill all freight traffic over the road between Cordele and Fitzgerald. It is thought that the fire caught from sparks from the engine of a northbound passenger train.

Until the bridge can be rebuilt, which will probably require a week, all passenger trains will be detoured between Cordele and Tifton over the Georgia Southern and Florida Railroad, and between Fitzgerald and Tifton over the Thomasville branch of the A., B. & A. road. Perishable freight also will be routed over these roads.

Hot Weather Causes Sabbath-Breaking

Ice Company Sets Aside Old Rule and Decides to Deliver to Customrs on Sunday.

THOMASVILLE, July 19.—The heat wave of the past week proved too much for the Sabbath-keeping rules of the Thomasville Ice Company and it has decided to go back to delivering ice to customers on that day.

For a year or two past no ice was delivered on Sunday anywhere in the city and those who wanted an extra quantity over the supply laid in on Saturday had to go or send to the factory for it. Many complaints have been sent in of late that the expense of buying a large quantity on Saturday to last over Sunday was too much for the ordinary citizen.

Wasp Sting Enables Cripple to Walk

Regains Use of Legs After 38 Years on Crutches When Insect Invades Bed.

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—Charles Wightman, deputy county clerk at Clayton, told a reporter how he had just been able to walk without crutches for the first time in 38 of the 42 years of his life. He fell when he was 4 and injured both legs permanently.

He said that a neighbor had told him a snake story just before he went to bed.

He thought how comfortable it was to live in a country where one could sleep in peace instead of in one of those countries where he had heard snakes sometimes creep in and share one's bed.

He thrust his right leg deeper under the covers. Then something that stung like a hot needle pierced his ankle. "I sprang out of bed and ran and stumbled twelve feet across the room," he said. "It was the first time I had taken so many steps unassisted since I was a baby."

"And was it really a snake?" he was asked. "No; it was a wasp." And he showed the ankle where the sting had swollen it.

Pawns Gold Teeth He Didn't Chew With

Kansan Says He Could Masticate on Other Side and Cakes Crowns to Loan Agent.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—"I don't need these teeth to chew with and they're loose, anyway," an old man said at the municipal pawnshop, pulling seven gold crowns out of his mouth and laying them on the counter.

"These teeth are just a losing investment as long as I do all my chewing on the other side, anyway. I might as well be getting something on them. Can you make me a loan?"

Ralph Perry, manager of the pawnshop, gave the man $1.75 on his gold bicuspids and molars.

"When the ones on the other side get loose, I'll be back after these," the man promised. "My dentist said there was gold enough in the bunch so he could trade me a set of false teeth for 'em as soon as the crowns all wore out and got loose."

Wagons Must Have Lights at Both Ends

Washington State Will Enforce Strict Vehicle Law—All Classes Affected.

SEATTLE, July 19.—On and after August 1 every vehicle in this State must be provided with both rear and front lights in case night travel is necessary. Automobiles, wagons, buggies and cycles must carry lights so that travelers in front or behind may see.

Farmers as well as city residents are affected, and the old familiar farm wagon will be altered by a lantern hung from the rear axle and a spotlight fastened to the spring seat. The law was necessary because of the increasing traffic at night through sections where roads are narrow and grades dangerous.

500 FARMERS AT COLLEGE TO HEAR SOIL LECTURE

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., July 19.—Kankakee farmers, 500 strong, visited the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois. Professor J. C. Collier, "soil director" for the county, was in charge of the excursion, which came on a special train.

Dr. C. G. Hopkins lectured on soil and fertility, and afterward the university farm was inspected. Eighty women in the party inspected the domestic science department. Luncheon was served by "co-eds."

FIGHT ASSURED OVER LOCATION FOR HOSPITAL

Columbus Owns Two Lots—Others Offered at High Price. Present Site Undesirable.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—Now that the hospital bond issue has been carried, and the city when it sells its $60,000 worth of bonds will be in a position to erect a first-class hospital, a fair-sized row is in sight over the location.

As usual, there are a number of sites offered, at prices above the average. The city owns one or two lots that are available in addition to the one where the present hospital stands.

The location of the present hospital is just about as uninviting as it would be possible to find, there being railroad yards, roundhouse and shops on the south, a sash and door plant on the east, railroad tracks on the west and a tombstone and marble works plant and a cemetery on the north.

Engineer Races His Train Past Flames

Row of Houses and 100-Cord Stack of Wood Beside Track Are Burned.

CORDELE, July 19.—Passengers on an Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic train had an exciting experience yesterday afternoon when the train came upon a fire very close to the tracks in the vicinity of Hatley, in which more than 100 cords of wood and several small houses were destroyed.

In order to pass the fire with safety, the engineer was obliged to open the throttle and put his engine to the fastest speed. All of the passengers went through the experience safely, though the heat from the fire was so intense that some of them were almost suffocated. The wood had been stacked alongside the track for shipment. How the fire originated was not learned.

Seaboard to Make Division at Cordele

All Developments Point to Plan for Increasing Importance of Crisp Metropolis.

CORDELE, July 19.—The Seaboard Air Line is considering establishing relay shops in Cordele, it seems, for the road has concluded to make this point the passenger terminal for the Savannah-Montgomery division.

Railroad men say they have seen orders to different passenger trainmen that two months after July 1 they would be required to take up their runs for both directions at this point. Another fact that seems to give backing to the report is that recent inquiries have been made by conductors and engineers, seeking to secure residences here. More than 50 new citizens would be brought to Cordele by the change. The present passenger terminal is at Americus.

EXPRESS AGENT AND CASH MISSING FROM WARWICK

CORDELE, July 19.—S. J. Smith, an employee of the Southern Express Company, acting as temporary agent at Warwick, between Cordele and Albany, on the Georgia Southwestern and Gulf Railway, during a vacation of the regular agent, disappeared last night, and, it is said, took all the funds on hand. It is reported that he came to Cordele, but officers here failed to locate him.

Brooks County Strip Would Be in Lowndes

Movement Started to Have Bill Introduced in Legislature to Have Transfer Made.

VALDOSTA, July 19.—A movement has been started here to transfer a strip of territory on the southern border of Brooks County to Lowndes County, and the Representatives in the Legislature will be asked to introduce a bill to that effect.

The territory affected lies along the Willacoochee River, remote from the county seat of Brooks County, and it is claimed that the people living in that section are anxious to be placed in Lowndes County.

The National Highway passes throug hthe stretch of territory, but it is understood that the County Commissioners of Brooks County have refused to maintain the highway or do any work whatever on it.

Business men in this city recently subscribed nearly $1,000 to be expended on the highway through the strip mentioned. Brooks County refused to do anything whatever toward building and maintaining the road.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The movement instituted by the D. A. R.'s in Columbus to bring the ashes of Former Governor John Clarke of Georgia from St. Andrews Bay, Fla., where they are buried, is well under way.

RAILROAD WILL FIGHT PAVING OF VALDOSTA LAND

Atlantic Coast Line Will Test Right of City to Assess It for Work.

VALDOSTA, July 19.—The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company today notified the Mayor and Council of Valdosta that it will not consent to the paving of Savannah avenue and requesting the city to have the brick which are piled along the avenue removed from its property.

The action of the road brings to a head the differences between the city and the road affecting the ownership of the thoroughfare.

It is understood that the city will pave the street and levy the assessments for the work as they are made against other property owners. The railroad is expected to begin legal action to prevent this, and the ownership of the property will be settled by the courts.

HARD THICK CRUST COVERED BOY'S HEAD

Cracked with Least Pressure, Causing Discharge. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In One Week Entirely Cured.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Human System Poisons Itself

OtherwiseMost of UsWould Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old. All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Take NUXCARA

3 Times a Day—

One-half hour before each meal. Then you can eat three nourishing meals each day without discomfort. Your appetite will respond to the improved condition of your digestive system. Your health will be assured.

Nuxcara is a guaranteed remedy for the treatment of the membranes of the stomach and intestines. It is not a digestive agent, but a certain and positive cure for indigestion and dyspepsia.

Prominent Citizen Indorses NUXCARA

Mr. J. W. Brooks, traveling representative of The Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, says: "For two years I have carried in my grip a bottle of Nuxcara, and would not think of going out on the road without it. I consider it the most wonderful discovery in medicine. The number of people who suffer with indigestion and dyspepsia, the terrible distress they suffer, no one knows but those who have had experience with it. When one remedy after another fails, when digestive agents seem to aggravate it. In the face of all this, Nuxcara cures in every case—truly it is a wonderful remedy."

Nuxcara promotes the secretion of natural digestive fluids, restores and reduces the inflamed membranes. Proper assimilation is re-established. Nutrition is improved. Hence, Nuxcara increases vitality.

COLUMBUS MILL SCHOOL HELD AS MODEL BY U. S.

How Georgia City Is Caring for Cotton Factory Children Told in Government Pamphlet.

How Columbus is caring for the education of the boys and girls of its cotton mills is the story embodied in a pamphlet published by the United States Department of Education, copies of which were circulated in Atlanta yesterday.

How the boys and girls of the n. 's themselves work against going to school, rendering doubly hard the problem before the public, is a pitiful note of the story.

They call their school in Columbus the "dinner toters' school," because even during their school days they must work, taking hot lunches to their parents, brothers, sisters, and others who work in the mills.

Must Take Parents' Lunch.

The pamphlet tells of this custom, revealing something of the life of the cotton mill child. It says:

"The long intermission in the middle of the day is necessary that the children may take the lunches to the mills. Many of the mills are some distance from the school—some more than a mile away. Most of the children, therefore, walk more than two miles during the noon hour. Besides, they are compelled to wait 20 or 30 minutes for the operatives to eat their dinners before taking the baskets back.

"Some children earn several dollars each week by carrying such baskets to mill operatives. The price usually paid for taking lunch to one person for a week is 25 cents, and children often take lunches to several persons."

The booklet was prepared by Roland B. Daniel, and was published by the Department of Education as the description of an admirable system. It deals not only with the mill children, but with the boys and girls who are more fortunate, showing how the Columbus scheme of education is variable, being adapted to meet the demands that come with a mixed population so as to care alike for the two classes. P. P. Claxton, Federal Commissioner of Education, says in the foreword to the book:

"Columbus was one of the first of this country's cities to work out certain phases of this problem of adaptation."

The Columbus schools effect industrial training for all children, but a training varied according to the class from which the children come.

Call of Mills Strong.

The writer, Mr. Hill, laments the fact that "the call of the mills is strong."

"While the prescribed course for the mill children contemplates seven years, few continue after the fifth or sixth year," he wrote. "Not more than 1 per cent finish this school and pursue their studies further."

In all lines of work, academic and industrial, the aim of the school for mill operatives is to better living conditions a little among the people for whom it was organized. That is the only hope. In the beginning the advocates of this type of school thought that many of the mill children might be induced to continue in school and do more advanced work, especially along vocational lines. In this respect the school has been a disappointment to some.

"We are seldom able to induce pupils to finish even the limited course offered in this school," writes Mr. Daniel. "Our best hope is that we may better living conditions a little."

Toward the end, the school has been made a sort of social center. The school is in session the entire year around, and pupils are promoted quarterly, that the children will not drift away, as it is feared they would surely do in the case of a three months' vacation. Teachers do social work, visiting the sick, distributing certain charity, obtaining means of operation for the physically defective, arranging for social evenings, fostering organizations among the older people, and dealing in like activities.

Summing up the work of the school, the writer says:

"While this school has done good work and its benefits have been felt, we are sure the weakest point in it is not being able to hold the children long enough to receive its full benefits. An enforced attendance law would aid very materially in this respect."

Industrial Work Taught.

Along with "the three R's," the mill children are trained in industrial branches, being taught woodworking and gardening. The girls are given work in basket-making, sewing, cooking, poultry-raising and gardening.

In its scheme of adaptation, the city has an altogether different school for other children. The regular grade work is done, and in the traditional high school a year and a half of industrial work, manual training for the boys and domestic science for the girls, is given.

Another variation comes when the curriculum of the negro schools are worked out. There is industrial education for negroes in the public school, but different from that supplied the white children. The Columbus method is altogether one of adaptation.

The difference lies in the fact that the negroes receive more of the training, going into more branches of manual labor, and taking it throughout the school course. Almost every branch of work with the hands is offered them. Of this work the booklet says:

"Pupils who remain in the schools long enough to complete the course receive in compensation for their labor upon leaving school about twice what they would receive for unskilled labor such as they would be able to render without such training. It is often the case that one of these boys is able to earn $.' a day at the age of 17 when his father, without such preparation, receives $1.25 for unskilled labor.

High School in Scheme.

The book, being altogether a treatise on industrial education in Columbus, is given over largely to a description of the courses in the Columbus Industrial High School, the pride of the city's scheme of education. The school, besides its academic work, has vocational courses, including home economics, dressmaking and millinery, mechanic arts, textile arts, and a business course.

This industrial high school is separate and distinct from the conventional academic high school. It is merely another phase of the Columbus scheme of adaptation of education to varied needs and to varied classes.

Pony Contestants in Home Stretch

Fine Progress Made in Last Days

Winners of Race Will Be Announced in Few Days After Battle Closes July 31.

Great progress has been made by the contestants who are striving for The Georgian and American ponies, as the standings published to-day demonstrate. Nearly all the contestants who are crowding toward the front have more than 100,000 votes, but in the ten days remaining these figures, in all probability, will be doubled and trebled.

This is in spite of the fact that the coupons have been discontinued. Gains from now on will represent simply subscriptions obtained. The contestants agree unanimously that this is perfectly fair. A coupon-clipping contest is no contest at all, except as it represents the ability to build up a system of collecting the slips from friends in the neighborhood. A subscription-getting contest, on the other hand, tests the mettle of every contestant to the full, and the best will win.

Will Announce Winners Soon.

Besides, by discontinuing the coupons, it will be possible to announce the winners in the contest probably August 3, three days after the contest closes, on the night of July 31.

If coupons still were being voted, it would take two weeks or more for all of them to come in, and knowledge of the result would be delayed that long.

The bonus offer, awarding 20,000, 12,500 and 6,000 votes for clubs of $35, $25 and $15, respectively, closed Saturday night, and with a large number of clubs turned in. It was a laggard contestant, indeed, who did not appear yesterday with at least a $35 club, and some of the most active had two and three clubs.

Even Chance in Country.

Contestants in the country, it is supposed, did as well, but subscriptions arriving in Monday's mails will be credited on the club offer for these out-of-town boys and girls. This is to give them an even chance with their city cousins.

Probably another small bonus will be offered for the closing weeks of the contest. It will be nothing like those which have been given so far—not nearly so attractive, but still worth winning.

Within a few days the thirteen additional ponies needed to make up the complete lot of twenty-two will be on hand. They are being collected now from the leading breeders of this sort of fancy stock and will be brought to Atlanta before the contest closes.

Maurice Means, of Meansville, is shown at the top, while below is Miss Helen Brantley, of No. 31 E. Alexander Street. Both are way up in the race for the prize Shetlands.

Squaws Lay Ties As Bucks Play Poker

Desert Section Hand Boss Returns to Find Piute Women Doing Construction Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Piute Indians as substitutes for Mexican section hands were tried out in the Nevada desert last week. The Mexicans were deemed unsatisfactory because they would drop their tools and rest the instant the "boss" got far enough away so that he could not hit them with a shovel handle.

With the Indians on the job, however, the work went along just the same, boss or no boss.

Nevertheless the Mexicans are again on the pay roll and the Indians are taking their traditional ease.

After glowingly watching five days of splendid work by his Piute bucks the section boss left them the other day. Returning 24 hours later he found the suffragette members of the Piute tribe doing the work on the railroad, while the bucks were gathered in a poker game at one side of the track.

Tight Shoes Land Thief Behind Bars

Burglar in Jewelry Store Kicks Heels to Relieve Pressure and Alarms Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Frank Davies, who at times also gives his name as John Simpson and Joe Allen, became irritated last night while scooping unset diamonds in his hat in a dark room because the toes of his new shoes were too narrow.

Intending to relieve the squeeze, he kicked toward the floor with his heel, but miscalculated and drove his foot through a glass show case. A policeman in a saloon on the floor below heard the noise and arrested Davies, who says he is an ex-convict and that he arrived here from Los Angeles at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The diamonds were claimed to-day by the jewelers from whom they were taken.

Must Stay Maids to Get Mother's Estate

Daughters of Ohio Woman Are Beneficiaries Under Will Which Prohibits Their Marriage.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, July 19. One of the most remarkable wills ever admitted to probate in this county was made by Jane Lake, late of Richwood, who left considerable property to her three daughters, Linie, Nora and Ida.

The provisions are that the estate shall be equally divided among the three daughters, on the condition that none of them will marry. If one of them marries, her share of the estate goes to the two remaining single. If all three should marry, the entire estate is to go to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Moving Picture Gives Mother Clew to Girl

Missing Daughter Is Recognized on Screen and Police Are Following Up Trace.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The "movies" may be instrumental in restoring Olga Ellis, 5, to the mother from whom she was taken in Revere, Mass., and brought to California.

For six months the police have sought John Ellis, of Revere, Mass., who is said to have left that city with his daughter.

A school-teacher of Berkeley, Cal., became interested in the case and gave a picture of the child and the mother's address to a moving picture agency.

Mrs. Myrtle Palmer, housekeeper in a hotel here, saw the mother's appeal at a moving picture theater recently and recognized the little girl as one who had stayed at the hotel with her father for several weeks. He had registered, she said, as D. Delisle, and had gone to Eureka, Cal.

Mrs. Palmer notified the police and search for the man and child has been instituted in Eureka.

Women Convict Her For Slapping Child

First Feminine Jury in Sonoma County, California, Returns Verdict of Guilty of Assault.

PETALUMA, COLO., July 19.—A jury of twelve women convicted a woman, Mrs. W. S. Waldorf, upon a charge of battery here to-day. This is the first jury of women that ever tried a case in Sonoma County. Mrs. Waldorf was accused of having slapped a neighbor's children. The jury was out less than an hour.

HORSE FALLS IN FISSURE IN SINKING KANSAS FARM

HOISINGTON, KANS., July 19.—Fissures varying from a few inches to a foot and a half in width and extending several feet into the ground have opened up in L. E. Baker's alfalfa field near this city and are causing a great deal of speculation.

There have been no indications of an earthquake of any sort, but the ground seems to be sinking away. The fissures were discovered when Baker missed one of his horses and found it imprisoned in a fissure.

ONLY AMERICAN KING YEARNS TO QUIT HIS THRONE

All of Former Broker's Thirty Wives Want English Gowns. Jealousy Spreads.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King, practically has made up his mind to renounce his throne. He is King of the Island of Arorae, one of the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands. Until 1909 he was a New York curb broker. The insistence of his many wives for English gowns and his loneliness have led to the determination to give up his kingly honors. He tells of his intentions in a letter just received by a friend in this city.

The career of Everett has been unusual. In 1909, when he was in business in this city, he was thought to be well to do. He met reverses, however, in Wall Street, and in the latter part of 1909 disappeared, without leaving a word of farewell. Nothing was heard from him until in 1911, in a remarkable letter, he told of being made the King of Arorae, in the South Sea Islands. He had landed, he said, on one of the small islands, and had gone from there to other islands of the Gilbert group. Finally he reached Arorae. It was a phonograph which he had in his possession that eventually won for him his throne. The King at that time of the island took a great fancy to the phonograph.

Phonograph Wins Kingdom.

By the hour Everett, according to his own account, entertained the monarch, constantly growing in his graces. Finally the old King adopted Everett, and when he died Everett succeeded to the throne. According to the custom of the island, Everett took a good many wives.

Everett took a very lively interest in the affairs of the island. He increased its business with traders. The principal product of the island is copra, or dried cocoanut meat. The letter, in part, reads:

"At the present time the King's job is about the last thing to be desired, and do not be surprised if I walk in on you some day in the near future. I am about tired of the job.

"For some time past conditions here have steadily become worse. It started when my wives, of whom there are about 30, insisted on wearing English dresses. A trader who stopped here presented one of the natives with three English gowns in exchange for some copra. The native presented them to the King, and I in turn gave them to three of my wives. The natives have never worn any clothes to speak of. Imagine my surprise, then, when the three dresses became the center of a regular war among my wives.

"The three victorious wives managed to get them on somehow, and that settled it. Every one of them set up a kick for a dress, and they worried the life out of me. I was forced to get the gowns. The first trader that stopped at the island from Australia was commissioned to bring them back on the next trip, and in due course of time they arrived.

Jealousy Over English Gowns.

"The dresses were of all colors and sizes. Most of the people here are about the same stature, few being over four feet six or seven. Some of the dresses were too small, others too large, but they created a sensation. Dressed in those creations, with bare brown feet stepping proudly, my wives paraded up and down the island, causing every woman in the kingdom, young and old, to grow jealous.

"So far, half of the female population have been given the gowns and the other half are waiting eagerly. The worst part of it all is that the men are as enthusiastic over this new style of dress as the women, and my objections have not added to my popularity whatever. I am daily expecting the men to demand suits of flannel and silk shirts.

Affairs on a Business Basis.

"I have not done so badly here financially. I put the business of the island on a business basis soon after becoming King, and things have flourished.

"I don't know how the people here will take my departure. They may even try to prevent it, and I have been considering the best method to leave. I could probably get aboard one of the trading ships and get to Australia, after which it would be easy, of course, to get back to the United States."

County of Warner

Should Be Created

Manchester, the Logical County Seat—County Will Have 10,000 Population; $1,750,000 Taxable Values; Area Over 222 Square Miles.

The people situated in the southeastern portion of Meriwether, northern portion of Talbot and northeastern portion of Harris Counties will petition the 1913 session of the Legislature to create a new county to be named Warner, in honor of the late Chief Justice Hiram Warner, the area of which will be 222 square miles, while the area of the old counties after the proposed county of Warner is created will not be materially reduced, but will leave them among the larger counties of Middle Georgia, and Meriwether will then contain 421 square miles; Harris, 465 square miles, and Talbot, 329 square miles. The territory to compose Warner County is inaccessible to either of the present county sites by railroads and in transacting legal business the citizens are required to go this distance by private conveyance over mountainous roads, which in rainy seasons are almost impassable; while a very large portion of the population has no means of conveyance and are forced to a great expense in reaching the present county sites.

Taxable Values of New County.

The proposed county of Warner will have taxable values of one and three-quarter million dollars. This will leave Meriwether taxable values of about twice the amount of Warner County; while Harris and Talbot, from which counties small values will be taken, will not be materially reduced, but have considerably more wealth than Warner and no incorporated town is to be taken from either Talbot or Harris and but a few miles of railroad.

The population of Warner County will be upward of 10,500, of which more than 2,000 live in Manchester, the proposed county seat. At least 5,000 of those living within the country territory closely adjoining Manchester have to travel 14 to 20 miles to their present respective county sites. Warner County would exceed in population 32 counties in the State.

Roads and Bridges.

Warner County as proposed will take from the three affected counties its proportion of roads and bridges as compared to its area and wealth, while the roads and bridges in this territory have received but little attention, as the taxes collected by the old counties have been spent on other roads and bridges nearer the present county sites, and other sections of the counties, since this territory occupies the "remote corners," consequently has had little influence in securing road improvements.

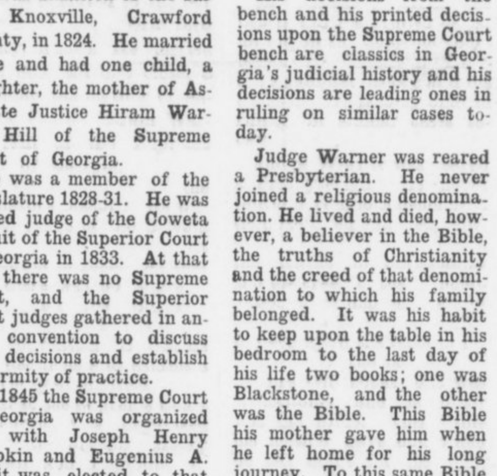
Warner County, as proposed will include Gill, Chalybeate, First, Raleigh, Bullochville and parts of the Third, Harris and lower Ninth Districts of Meriwether County; portions of Valley Plains District of Harris County and Flint Hill and parts of Pleasant Hill and Valley districts of Talbot County.

The distance from Manchester, the proposed county site of Warner County, to Greenville, the county site of Meriwether, over public roads is 18 miles; to Hamilton, the county site of Harris, 20 miles, and to Talbotton, the county site of Talbot, 20 miles. No citizen living in the proposed county would be required to travel farther than 12 miles to reach Manchester, the proposed county site.

Schedule of Trains.

No portion of Warner County at present is directly connected by rail with its respective county site. Those wishing to attend court by rail from Manchester and its vicinity must leave Manchester at 4 o'clock a. m., change at Durand and arrive in Greenville at 8 o'clock a. m., requiring a layover at Durand of about three hours. Returning, leave Greenville at 6 o'clock p. m., arriving at Manchester at 11:40 p. m., necessitating a layover at Durand of five hours, or about 20 hours to go a distance of 20 miles and return. This is the most convenient schedule.

The present counties are well provided with modern jails and courthouses.



HIRAM WARNER

Brief Sketch of Late Chief Justice

HIRAM WARNER

Hiram Warner, for whom Warner County is to be named, was born at Williamsburg, Hampshire County, Mass., on October 29th, 1802. He sailed for Savannah when 19 years of age, but was shipwrecked off Cape Hatteras, and reached the Georgia port weeks later. He settled first at Sparta as a teacher. He studied law and was admitted to the bar at Knoxville, Crawford County, in 1824. He married there and had one child, a daughter, the mother of Associate Justice Hiram Warner Hill of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

He was a member of the Legislature 1828-31. He was elected judge of the Coweta Circuit of the Superior Court of Georgia in 1833. At that time there was no Supreme Court, and the Superior Court judges gathered in annual convention to discuss their decisions and establish uniformity of practice.

In 1845 the Supreme Court of Georgia was organized and with Joseph Henry Lumpkin and Eugenius A. Nesbit was elected to that high branch of the judiciary. He defeated Benjamin H. Hill for Congress in 1855; was renominated, but declined re-election. Nearly 60 years old when the war came, he was at home caring for his family, his only son-in-law being at the front. He was held by Wilson's raiders and actually hanged and left for dead because he did not tell where suspected gold was hidden.

Later he was appointed to the judgeship of Coweta Circuit by Governor Jenkins. He was named Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia in 1867 to succeed Chief Justice Lumpkin, deceased.

His decisions from the bench and his printed decisions upon the Supreme Court bench are classics in Georgia's judicial history and his decisions are leading ones in ruling on similar cases today.

Judge Warner was reared a Presbyterian. He never joined a religious denomination. He lived and died, however, a believer in the Bible, the truths of Christianity and the creed of that denomination to which his family belonged. It was his habit to keep upon the table in his bedroom to the last day of his life two books; one was Blackstone, and the other was the Bible. This Bible his mother gave him when he left home for his long journey. To this same Bible he turned for comfort and support when, 58 years afterward, an old and broken man, he entered the valley of the shadow.

It is this man whose memory is sought to be revered in the creation of the county which is to bear his name—Warner.

Little Territory From Three of the State's Largest Counties Will Give County—New County Has Railroads—Sentiment Favors It.

No county has ever been created in which the sentiment was stronger for a new county than Warner. The movement has been spontaneous in all sections and our petitions contain more than 95 per cent of the white electors in Warner County. The people realize the great inconvenience with which they are now burdened and have joined unanimously in the movement.

Situation of Warner.

The proposed county of Warner will include portions of Pine and Oak mountains. In recent years most of this section was considered of little value on account of its inaccessibility and the rough character of the country. Little money has been spent by the counties in developing this territory, and the roads, most of them crossing the mountains and ridges, are bad, and have received but little attention.

In 1906 the A., B. & A. railroad was built, traversing this section with its Birmingham and Atlanta lines merging at Manchester; since which time Manchester has grown to be a town of about 2,000 people, as a result of which the territory adjoining Manchester has developed very rapidly; approximately $2,000,000 having been spent in improvements and business naturally drifted in this direction. The people residing in this territory buy all their supplies and sell their produce at Manchester, Bullochville, Raleigh, Chalybeate and Shiloh. Nothing calls them out of the proposed county except court duty, and they are deprived of the privilege accorded the majority of our people in the state of transacting their business and attending court in the same day.

Demand of Modern Times.

In this day of modern methods, when man's greatest asset is his time, when all business has become greatly intensified and concentration and conservation are occupying the attention of all progressive, thinking people, all men must realize that to make a success out of any public institution its interest must be well guarded. In this connection, large counties can not receive their just consideration. It is out of the question for the county commissioners in the three counties affected to give the counties' business the attention which it deserves. The area is too large, the business too vast, the demands too great and the distance too far for the county authorities to attend to the business properly.

General Statements of Interest

Manchester, the proposed county site, contains one large cotton mill, railroad shops and division offices of the A., B. & A. R. R., one bank, 33 brick store buildings and 16 wooden store buildings, all of which are occupied by various lines of general merchandise; two moving picture theaters, one newspaper and printing office, three hotels, five churches, modern school system, municipal light plant, two livery and sale stables, two large builders' supply houses, fireproof warehouse and gin.

Bullochville has several large supply houses, one bank, guano factory, also the Tuscawilla, a magnificent three-story brick hotel with modern equipment throughout, the best equipped hotel in the State in a town many times its size. Near Bullochville is located the famous Warm Springs resort, which is too well known to be described.

Just above Bullochville is the thriving town of Raleigh, which controls all business within its territory.

South of Bullochville on the Southern Railroad is Shiloh, now located in Harris County, one of the best farming supply towns in the State.

East of Manchester on the A., B. & A. is located Chalybeate Springs, a resort famous since ante-bellum days. The water from these springs has been known throughout the State since Georgia's early history.

Just east of Chalybeate is the Tatum Iron Company's mines, which are now being successfully developed.

All facts stated herein are not exaggerated, but can be substantiated with unlimited amount of evidence.

GIRL PLAYS MAN AND WINS LOVE OF HATED RIVAL

Unique Vengeance Is Planned by Young Woman Whose Sweetheart Proved Faithless.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Jilted by her lover, Bessie McIntyre, of North Wheeling, a pretty 18-year-old girl, secured an odd but effective revenge on her rival, who "stole" her sweetheart and on the faithless lover at the same time.

June 25 Harry Pendleton, a well-known young business man of this city, informed Miss McIntyre that he could not see her again(as he had become engaged to another girl. By a dint of inquiry the jilted girl ascertained that the girl who had stolen her lover's affections was Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, Ohio, just across the river from this city. Securing permission from her parents, Miss McIntyre had her hair cut off, and donning one of her brother's suits, she visited Bridgeport and met Miss Allen.

It was a case of love at first sight—on the part of the Bridgeport girl. Miss McIntyre masquerading as "Lawrence Dessing," was a devoted lover, and every night found "Lawrence Dessing" at the home of Miss Aiken.

Last Sunday night while "Dessing" and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to call on her again. She then confessed her love to her companion, the pseudo "Dessing." Miss McIntyre, dressed in a gown of the latest mode last night met Miss Aiken in this city. Before Miss Aiken could speak the North Wheeling girl told her how she had revenged herself.

In a moment the girls were fighting and were separated by the police.

Willing To Marry But Not to Apologize

Man Sued for Breach of Promise Says Hill Wed But Refuses to Beg Forgiveness.

ATCHISON, KANS., July 19.—Mary Falk and William Burke were engaged to be married. The date had been set, the guests had assembled, and everything was in readiness, but Burke did not appear. Chagrined and heartbroken, Miss Falk engaged an attorney and sued Burke for $25,000 as balm for her wounded feelings.

"It was all a mistake," said Burke. "I wanted and still want to marry Miss Falk. I was under the impression that under the rules of the Catholic Church the ceremony had to be performed by the pastor of the bride's church. I couldn't find him in time to perform the ceremony and naturally supposed the wedding was off for the time being."

Miss Falk accepted the explanation, but she insisted that Burke must apologize for not appearing for the wedding. Burke, however, insisted that she must apologize for suing him.

Concussion of Brain Kills a Gigantic Frog

Oscar Siler went to Mich.
Thought he'd rest and catch some fish,
Pitched his tent on Fountain Lake—
Listen to this nature fake:

FOUNTAIN, MICH., July 19.—Oscar Siler, of Chicago, who has been fishing on the lake near here, claims to have killed the record frog. Said frog is said to weigh 6 pounds and to be 15 inches long. It will be sent to Chicago. The frog died of concussion of the brain. Thus—

"Kerplunk," croaked the prehistoric bullfrog.
"You're drunk," piped the monarch of the bog.
Whereupon Siler (who was sober) bounced a rock off the bullfrog's bean.

Aged Oil Queen, Wife Of Youth, Ruled Sane

Young Spendthrift Husband Is Welcome to Fortune, She Says, on Leaving Asylum.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 19.—The courts and her children can not separate Mrs. Cynthia C. Sparks, known as West Virginia's "oil queen," and her young husband, Fred Sparks, and she is again free, after having been incarcerated in the West Virginia Hospital for Insane for ten days.

Further, the superintendent and the members of the State Board of Control have placed beyond question her sanity after a close observation, while she was under their supervision.

Mrs. Sparks is going to join her 26-year-old husband, who, it is alleged by the woman's children by her first husband, was rapidly dissipating her fortune of $2,000,000 by his extravagance and riotious living.

The old woman declared to-day that her young husband was welcome to the half of her fortune which she retained after having signed over the half to him.

Miner Returns Rich To Find Wife Dead

Comes Back Home to Make Restitution for Having Deserted Her 20 Years Ago.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Wealthy and anxious to take back his wife, whom he deserted twenty years ago, Josiah Bronson, a modern Enoch Arden, found the old home in ruins and the wife dead. From the old-timers who had known him in the early days he learned that his wife, believing him dead, had married his twin brother.

Two children, he learned, were born of the marriage, and upon the death of the mother were sent to relatives in West Virginia.

Bronson declared he would care for the children. "I shall give them the best education money can buy," he said. "I deserted their mother when she was just a young woman, and now I want to atone for the cowardly act."

WRITERS MAKE BEST DIPLOMATS DECLARES PAGE

New Ambassador to Italy, Author of Many Stories, Leaves Himself Out of Discussion.

YORK HARBOR, ME., July 19.—Are authors better qualified to fill diplomatic posts than others? The appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy brings this subject to the fore, coupled with the appointments made by President Wilson.

The greatest diplomats America boasts were men of letters. Benjamin Franklin, John Hay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, William Dean Howell furnish a distinguished list.

Mr. Page, who is 60, is modesty personified. He has been reporter, lawyer, writer, and has succeeded in all.

Mr. Page asked if he could explain as an author what special qualifications a man of letters possesses to perform the duties of Ambassador, consented to speak, leaving his own case out of the discussion. Said he:

"A man of letters is better fitted to do anything better than anyone else. His work has broadened his horizon; if it hadn't we might as well do away with letters.

Must Know Problems.

"The author must necessarily be conversant with the economic and governmental problems of the day.

"I think the greatest good authors in general have alone is to interpret the spirit of the section about which they write. There can be no doubt there is a better feeling now between the North and the South than there was before the Spanish-American war. This, I believe, is because of writers.

"Every part of the world is being more properly set before another part by the authors.

"The President has had a thorough training. Besides the college education, he has had associations with the North and the South, and he is conversant with the economic and governmental problems. He is a man of strong character and has been deservedly selected by the people to hold their most important office.

"I met Walter Page prior to his departure for his London post and gave him a dinner. His whole heart was set upon the desire to 'make good.'"

Qualifications of Diplomat.

"What is your idea of the qualifications a good diplomat possesses?" he was asked.

"Devotion to his duty is perhaps the first and most important," he replied. "Then comes devotion to your country, application to your duty and a desire to bring your country and the country to which you have been sent closer together.

"Of course, since the cable came into use foreign posts are brought closer to the State Department at Washington, and it must be a great comfort to an Ambassador to feel that at any time he may seek aid from Washington.

"I believe Charles Francis Adams was the last foreign ambassador to be thrown upon his own resources, and that was because the cable was cut.

"Rome is indeed a charming post. I believe it is the most romantic city in the world. I am sure I shall like it."

BRYAN DODGES PAPER'S QUESTIONS

wrong. It is using the office for making money."

Senator Bristow said action would be had on his resolution. He said, too, that there would be quite a little discussion on the subject. It probably will be referred to a committee. Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, says it probably would be "handled in a routine way."

Mr. Bacon says he thought the resolution was introduced to bring about a discussion of the course of Mr. Bryan, and that remedial legislation was not demanded.

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend, of Michigan, holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the Government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Among those who talked were the following:

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts—A Cabinet member can live on $12,000 a year if he does not have large family expenses, and he can live comfortably and respectably.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania—Samuel J. Randall, one of the greatest of Democrats, served this country for a whole generation, living on a salary of $5,000 a year. I have always disapproved of the custom that has grown up resulting in the very considerable neglect of official duties on the part of public men in order that they may go on lecture circuits.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina—While Mr. Bryan's speaking tours will serve a good purpose in that he always preached true Democracy and patriotism and Christian living, he can never again appear as a knight errant of Democracy.

Representative Willis, of Ohio—I am opposed to a Government official capitalizing his job. The Secretaryship of State is a man's job. Mr. Bryan should stay here and attend to the work of his office. He has enough on his hands with the present critical situation in Mexico, the unsettled questions with Japan and the matter of the Panama Canal tolls. We members of Congress have to stick to our tasks.

Representative Miller, of Minnesota—Mr. Bryan is giving this country a remarkable exhibition in the difference between his preachings during the past seventeen years and his present practices.

Representative Kahn, of California—There are many able men in the employ of the Government who are prevented by law and the hours of service from increasing their incomes through additional employment.

Representative Payne, of New York—I have been able to live on my salary as a member of the House. I can not see why the Secretary of State is unable to live on his salary.

Towne, Bryan's Friend, Calls Step Unfortunate.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Secretary Bryan's determination to supplement his official salary of $12,000 by going on a six weeks' lecture tour has awakened severe criticism from the men who supported him when he first loomed on the political horizon.

Charles A. Towne, who was one of the speakers at the famous "Dollar Dinner" in April, 1899, organized to emphasize Bryan's Jeffersonian simplicity of tastes, discussed Mr. Bryan's new move reluctantly, as they are still close friends.

"I consider the Secretary's plan to continue his lecture tours while occupying the chief place in the President's Cabinet most unfortunate," said Mr. Towne. "These are days when great national issues must be decided, and when the Secretary of State is required to give every bit of time and energy in behalf of the nation. It is a time when men intrusted with the affairs of the Government must have their minds occupied with nothing else except the questions of state.

Explanation Only Makes It Worse, Says World.

(From The N. Y. World, July 16.)

It is with the most profound regret that we have to note the position into which the Secretary of State has drawn himself and the explanation now given which only makes it worse.

Whether Mr. Bryan can afford to take a prolonged vacation at just this critical time for the Administration and his own high office may be a question, but a minor one. Whether, under the frankly admitted circumstances of personal fortune, he can only afford a money-making vacation, must be something less than a question with the great masses of the people whose life he has lived in sympathy.

The real question is whether the Government for such a position as his may not justly claim an undivided service, and whether any other view is compatible with a worthy ambition. We have had men in high office who have sacrificed personal fortune to render such undivided service and could afford it. We have had many more men there who have done this and could not afford it.

We can not think of the President of the United States doing otherwise. We should not be able to think of any of his Cabinet doing otherwise.

Action Most Bizarre, Says Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, July 19.—Regarding Secretary Bryan's lecture tour, The Pall Mall Gazette to-night says:

"It is a singular paradox in a country where there is so much money in politics as in the United States that the chief member of the President's cabinet should find his official salary inadequate to support his existence.

"We can quite understand why $12,000 a year is not enough for the Secretary of State, considering the American scale of life, but one would have expected a man of Bryan's moral courage to call upon his country for a living wage, to which he is entitled, rather than to propose going on the stump as a lecturer, in the roles of a minister and a professional entertainer.

"They make a most bizarre combination to all British ways of thinking, and we shall be surprised if even American opinion reconciles itself to their incongruity."

MOTHER OF TEN SUES; WEDDED TWENTY-ONE YEARS

DAYTON, WYO., July 19.—After living with David Krouse Towns for 21 years and bearing ten children of which he is the father, Mrs. Martha Ellen Towns has brought suit for divorce, asserting that her husband unjustly accused her of infidelity and that he had attempted to secure her incarceration in the State Insane Asylum, although realizing that she was sane.
