GRAND JURY DEFERS ACTION ON CONLEY

TALK OF POSTPONING FRANK TRIAL TILL FALL

MORE BLONDES THAN BRUNETTES ENTER SLOGAN BEAUTY CONTEST

Miss Luetta L. Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hart Porter, of No. 282 Crumley street, is the newest nominee in the "beauty button" contest. She is of the blonde type with golden brown hair and gray eyes.

An unusual commentary on the beauty contest is that more blondes than brunettes have been nominated. But the contest is not closed yet, and what the final result will be no one can tell. Also the brunettes who have been nominated are keeping well up with the blondes in votes.

A letter has come to the contest editor stating that photographs flatter some types of beauty while they do not do others justice.

That is true, but it depends on the particular photograph. That all the photographs so far published have made a good impression is shown by other letters of nomination, in which the writers state they are reluctant to enter their candidates after seeing so many pretty faces entered in the race.

Well, every one to his own taste. All readers of The Georgian and American still have the privilege of nominating and voting for whom they please. The votes will decide what girl's picture is to adorn the "500,000 Club" booster buttons.

Nominate your candidate and send in her photograph. Then get your friends to vote for her.

MRS. PANKHURST JAILED AFTER FIERCE RIOT

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 21.—In one of the fiercest riots which has marked the suffragette propaganda in Great Britain, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militants was arrested to-day with six of her followers.

The fight with the detectives came when the officers tried to arrest Mrs. Pankhurst as she was entering the Pavilion Music Hall, where her daughter Sylvia and other prominent suffragettes were holding a meeting.

Mrs. Pankhurst was seized after a violent struggle, and when the frenzied women saw their leader in the hands of the officers they charged upon them, using hatpins and all sorts of weapons to wrest their leader away.

The officers held their prisoner and resisted the attacks of the women. Six other women who were the ringleaders in the attack on the officers also were taken into custody.

Mrs. Pankhurst was taken to Holloway jail.

She escaped from the detectives yesterday by having a fellow militant leave her house deeply veiled. The detectives believed the veiled woman was the militant leader and only after they had forced her into a taxicab did they learn their mistake.

DOCTOR AND GIRL ARE TAKEN ON VICE CHARGE

Dr. M. W. Lewis, a prominent physician of Carrollton, was arrested Monday morning and placed under $1,000 bond on a charge of disorderly conduct. He is charged with registering as man and wife at the Hotel Scoville, on Mitchell street, with Miss Effie McColman, who is held as a witness in the case. The trial will be held before Recorder Broyles Tuesday afternoon. The arrest was delayed until the physician had finished a difficult operation at a sanitarium.

According to the charges, Dr. Lewis arrived in Atlanta Monday morning with Miss McColman, registering at the Hotel Scoville with her as Dr. Lewis and wife.

This is denied by Dr. Lewis, who says someone who evidently has it in for him, added the "and wife."

Dr. Lewis and the girl, who is only 19 years old, were arrested on information furnished to the police by an alleged friend of the couple, who saw them on the train Monday morning.

According to Dr. Lewis, the girl came to Atlanta with him to have some work done on her teeth. The girl says she came with the doctor with her parents' permission. The McColmans live in the country about ten miles from Carrollton.

U. S. Will Refuse to Recognize Huerta

END IS SEEN OF MEXICO REGIME

Will Not Last Year Out, President Says—Stronger Successor Is Hoped For.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The United States does not intend to recognize the Huerta Government in Mexico, because that administration is reported to be tottering to its ruin and is not expected to last the year out.

This was the gist of President Wilson's discussion of the Mexican situation with the Washington correspondents to-day. The President said that at present he is doing nothing but studying the Mexican problem so as to be able to discuss it thoroughly with Ambassador Wilson when the latter reaches Washington Friday.

But he indicated clearly that the Administration does not intend to recognize Huerta, no matter what advice the Ambassador gives.

The Chief Executive has been advised on the highest authority that President Huerta is losing his grip. It is not considered good policy to recognize a government which has but a short time to live, and the United States will reserve its approbation for another and stronger regime, which, it is hoped, will succeed the Huerta Government.

The President to-day indicated clearly that there would be no further steps in the Mexican matter until after the White House conference scheduled for Friday.

Rebels Reported Planning Massacre of Americans.

EL PASO, July 21.—Efforts were made to-day to obtain news from the Madero lumber camp, 200 miles southwest of here, where a small band of Americans was reported surrounded by Mexican rebels and in danger of being massacred.

Appeals for aid were received by officials of the Madero Lumber Company here, General Francisco Castro, federal commander in Juarez, and American Consul Thomas D. Edwards. General Castro was asked to send rtoops to protect the Americans.

The Madero Lumber Company is an American-Canadian Corporation. It owns a large area of forest lands, controls the Mexican Northwestern Railroad and has built several small towns in Northwestern Mexico.

U. S. Warship to Protect Americans at Frontera.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Either a United States battleship or a gunboat will be sent to Frontera, Mexico, in response to a request from the United States Consul there, for the protection of American lives and property, it was said at the Navy Department to-day.

The revolutionists, it is said, have occupied two American-owned plantations there and have threatened to attack the port. The Navy Department will send one of the warships now at Tampico to Frontera as soon as Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt receives the request of the United States Consul from the State Department, which is expected hourly.

At the War Department it was said to-day that permission will be granted to General Obregon, the rebel leader, to visit Los Angeles.

The State Department has received no further dispatches relating to the battle between the federals and constitutionalists yesterday, but it is expected the conflict will be decisive in determining whether this province will be added to the territory now under rebel control.

Mexico to Grant Free Land to 50,000 Japanese.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, July 21.—A note granting concessions to 50,000 Japanese for free lands in the State of Morelos will be sent to the Mikado of Japan in a few days.

Women Voters of Chicago Keep Tab On Aldermen's Conduct

CHICAGO, July 21.—Women of Chicago, who will vote for the first time at the next city election, to-day began definite plans for defeating Aldermen who do not vote on the side of the public good on all questions coming before the Council.

At to-night's session of the Council women will record the vote of every Alderman on every question. Women watchers will attend every Council committee meeting and keep complete records of the conduct of Aldermen.

These records will be used against Aldermen who have "played politics" or otherwise failed in their duties, or for those who have done well, as the women watchers see them.

Mobile Society Girl Held as Accomplice Of Burglar Husband

BIRMINGHAM, July 21.—Mrs. Medora Newton, daughter of S. H. McMaster, formerly president of a Mobile bank, is in jail here charged with being an accessory to alleged burglaries by her husband, Louis Kittler, alias Newton. It is said that the young wife, dressed as a man, aided her husband.

Kittler had confessed to seventeen burglaries in and about Birmingham, but steadfastly declares his wife was not concerned in any of them.

As a girl Mrs. Newton was a member of one of Mobile's most exclusive society sets.

Picnic Party Rescued As Launch Goes Down

MIAMI, July 21.—Impaled in submerged piling in Biscayne Bay a gasoline launch sank last night just as the last member of the party of picnickers was removed to the launch owned by A. A. Bunnell, City Sanitary Inspector. He was attracted by cries of the frightened excursionists. Mrs. John Staff is reported in a critical condition to-day as the result of fright. Other members of the party included John Staff, a shipbuilder, and child and George Lundberger, wife and child. The picnickers kept the launch afloat until help arrived by stuffing their clothing around the piling, which protruded through the bottom of the boat.

Thief Kills Trustee Of Arch Creek, Fla.

ARCH CREEK, FLA., July 21.—Ordered out of town by the Town Trustees for many thefts, N. Hanks, liberated last week from the county chaingang, where he served three months for theft of lumber from a schoolhouse, last night choked H. L. Blanks, one of the trustees, to death, and fired a shot through the door of the home of H. W. Wyatt, another trustee. He did not molest H. Robins, the third trustee. At daylight Wyatt, armed with a shotgun, started out to find Hanks, but a Deputy Sheriff got Hanks safe in jail.

The murder of Blanks is the third in Arch Creek in the last four years.

Tampa Makes Record Phosphate Shipment

TAMPA, July 21.—Board of Trade records compiled to-day show that 39,253 tons of phosphate were shipped through this port last week. This is more than any other week in the history of the port and more than any port in the world ever shipped in like time. This is the world's leader in phosphate shipments.

Since June 1 there have been 230,000 tons of phosphate shipped out of Tampa.

SUSPENDED OFFICER JAILED.

MIAMI, July 21.—M. P. Merritt, suspended from the police force Friday for fighting, was jailed to-day by Chief C. R. Ferguson for threatening the chief. Ferguson is a candidate for re-election in to-morrow's primary.

SCULLER DEFENDS TITLE.

Special Cable to The Georgian.

LONDON, July 21.—E. Barry, the English sculler, to-day defended his title as world's champion by defeating Harry Pearce, the Australian, in a four-uarter mile race on the Thames.

HOUSE GIVES CANDLER A CHANCE

Reconsiders Adverse Action on New County After Hot Debate. Hardeman Scores Lobby.

After one of the stormiest sittings of the present session, the House of Representatives to-day agreed to reconsider its previous adverse action upon Candler County by a vote of 92 to 59.

During the progress of the debate on Candler the House was bitterly arraigned by Mr. Hardeman, of Jefferson, for its slow progress to date, which charge was quite as vehemently resented by Mr. Blackburn, of Fulton, and others.

Mr. Wohlwender, of Muscogee, whose call for the previous question on Thursday last was held responsible for Candler's slaughter then, in moving to reconsider to-day, explained to the House that he had made his motion in entire good faith, and if he had made a mistake, he wished that his mistake be not visited on Candler. If he had hurt anybody's feeling or said anything he ought not to have said, the gentleman from Muscogee begged everybody's pardon.

Dove of Peace Scared.

This apparently paved the way for a peaceful vote, but it soon became plain that a peaceful vote was not in sight.

Mr. Hardman vehemently protested reconsideration, and in doing so charged that the House was disgracefully far behind in its business, and that too much time already had been wasted on new county claims and constitutional amendments.

Mr. Hardeman's wholesale denunciation of the House for laxness and tardiness was quickly resented. It was contended that the present House, instead of being behind in its work, is really farther ahead as it enters its last 25 days than any House for many years past.

Bills' Status Made Plain.

The appropriations bill is ready for the House's consideration, and Chairman Wheatly has given notice that he will call it up Tuesday.

This will put it before the House at least ten days earlier than usual.

The tax act, it was contended, will reach the House in record-breaking time, and the House committees have worked overtime reporting bills.

Representative Blackburn challenged Mr. Hardeman to name any Legislature within the knowledge of either man, both of whom are veterans of the House, wherein any bill of general importance, particularly the appropriations bill and the tax act, was reported within the first 25 days of its session.

Mr. Hardeman did not name such a Legislature, but he held, nevertheless, that the present House had been unnecessarily slow.

The gentleman from Jefferson declared that the whole trouble lay at the door of the proposed new counties, and said that he had been "lobbled with so persistently and so vehemently that he could not even find places to eat and sleep in comfort in Atlanta."

Debate Grows Personal.

As the vote was proceeding, at least 40 members arose to explain their votes, and at times the debate became very personal and full of feeling.

Mr. Wohlwender, of Muscogee, was the storm center of the talk as a rule, but it was evident enough that beneath it was another and far more important something—perhaps a direct fight upon the very House organization itself.

The reconsidered Candler County measure probably will go over to next session, and it is doubtful whether any other new county propositions will come up this year.

Sweethearts Visit Soldiers of Second At St. Simons Camp

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 21.—Sunday was a gala day for the Second Georgia Regiment, excursions bringing wives, sweethearts and friends of the men and officers from all over Middle Georgia. All day the camp was alive with visitors interested in seeing how the men lived. Many dinner parties were given in camp during the day. The surf was the chief attraction until the big dress parade in the afternoon. It was the best review so far held and was witnessed by magnificent crowds.

Drills are being held in combat formations to-day leading up to the hike, bivouac and battle of Friday. The men will leave Thursday in heavy marching order prepared to cook their own meals, sleep in pup tents and begin the big battle before day Friday.

To-day's officer of the day was E. W. Beck. The officer of the guard was J. H. Nutt. Both are of Griffin.

Four Women Caught In Vice Net Escape From Martha Home

Four young women, three of whom had been caught in Chief Beavers' vice dragnet last week, escaped from the Martha Home during chapel exercises Sunday night.

The women were Effie Drummond, who after being caught in a raid on Mrs. Lula Bell's place at Peters and Fair streets, declared she was a minister's daughter from North Carolina, and had been the victim of a white slaver; Maude Dougherty, apprehended at the same house; Beatrice Renfro, companion of A. N. Trippe, a Whitehall street clerk, arrested on complaint of Tripp'e wife, and Hyrtle Bell, who was placed in the home at the request of her parents.

The dragnet has been recast for the fugitives.

Strike on Healey Building Settled

Work will be resumed Tuesday morning on the new Healey Building following a conference Monday between R. M. Walker, William Healey, owner of the building, and representatives of the Building Trades Council.

According to the terms of the agreement, only union men will be employed on the building. The strike was called because of the alleged failure of the painting and electrical contractors to employ union men exclusively.

Shoots Husband Who Stayed Out Too Late

SAVANNAH, July 21.—As a result of a quarrel with his wife, Joe Dare is in a critical condition in a hospital, with a bullet wound in his left breast, just over the heart, and his wife is in police station a nervous wreck from her experience. Both admit the wife fired the shot. Dare has been operated on and the bullet extracted, but his condition is so serious that his post-mortem statement has been taken.

The trouble between the couple seems to have followed the very late arrival of Dare at home.

PROTEST OF SOLICITOR DORSEY WINS

Presents Evidence Showing Indictment of Negro Would Hinder Frank Prosecution.

Here are the important developments of Monday in the Phagan case:

The decision of the Grand Jury of Fulton County not to bring at this time an indictment against James Conley.

The information that there is a strong probability of another postponement of the trial of Leo M. Frank.

The Grand Jury's refusal to reopen its investigation of the Phagan murder mystery was a decided victory for the Solicitor after that body had overridden his request that no session be called to take up the matter in any of its aspects.

A report that Judge L. S. Roan who will preside at the Frank trial had signified his desire that the case be put off until fall, gave rise to the expectation that another postponement will take place, and that the date probably will be set for some week in September.

Defense Said To Be Willing.

The defense also is said to be in favor of a continuence. Luther Z Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, said Monday that he did not contemplate asking for further delay, but thought that it would be a hardship on the jurors to hear the case at this time of the year. He made it plain that he would not oppose any move for a continuance.

The Grand Jury Monday decided to take no action at this time looking to the indictment of James Conley, accuser of Leo M. Frank in the murder of Mary Phagan.

The Grand Jury came to its decision after Solicitor General Dorsey had presented a mass of evidence to show why the indictment of the negro would hamper the prosecution of Frank. After more than an hour's conference the Silicitor issued this statement.

"I am requested by the Grand Jury to say no action will be taken at this time on the James Conley matter, and that that body will not pay any attention whatever to anonymous communications."

It is known that the Grand Jury has been flooded with letters on the Phagan case, many of them urging action on Conley, and many unsigned.

A recent Supreme Court decision was cited by Solicitor Dorsey to the Grand Jury when he demanded "hands off" on the Conley indictment. The decision says of the Solicitor:

"He is to determine whether or not to commence a particular prosecution, or to discontinue one already begun. The Solicitor General draws the bill of indictment and examines the witnesses, not with a view to the interest of any client, but alone to subserve public justice.

"The whole prosecution from the time the case is laid before him is under his direction, supervision and control.—102 Georgia, page 271."

Delay in Trial Rumored.

The impression gained ground Monday that a postponement of the trial of Frank was probable. It was reported that the defense would make a move to effect this before the case comes up on June 28.

According to Solicitor Dorsey, Judge L. S. Roan, who will try the case, is not particularly anxious that it come up at this time.

Says Judge Favors Delay.

"I was talking with Judge Roan a short time ago," said the Solicitor, "and from his conversation I gathered that he would rather the trial did not come up before fall, though he did not say so outright."

Shortly before noon Jim Conley was taken from his cell at police headquarters and spirited off in an automobile by Detectives Starnes and Campbell, the officers who have had complete charge of the negro for several weeks. Inquiry failed to reveal the destination or purpose of this action. The negro was out of his cell less than an hour and on his return the same strict secrecy was maintained.

Fighting Mincey.

According to Chief of Detectives Lanford, the mysterious trip of Conley from police headquarters with Detectives Starnes and Campbell ended at the corner of Electric avenue and Carter street, where W. H. Mincey, the insurance agent, declared in an affidavit the negro was sitting on the curb intoxicated the afternoon of the Phagan murder, and confessed that he had killed a girl that day.

Chief Lanford stated that an effort had been made by the detectives to have persons residing in that vicinity identify Conley as having seen him there at the time Mincey stated. However, no one had been able to do so. It was also declared that Conley had been taken around to a Butler street address where it is declared the negro was at the time Mincey swears the conversation on the curbing took place.

Solicitor Dorsey was the only person asked to appear before the jurors. Before they assembled he asserted that he was entirely confident that no indictment would be returned against the negro.

UNFAIR TO THE DRUGGIST

The Old Joke About "Something Just as Good," Doesn't Apply to This Drug Store.

You have probably heard dozens of times the old story that a drug store was a place to "get something just as good." There is at least one druggist in the world that you can't say this about.

It is certain that an inferior article will never be substituted for a guaranteed one by any dealer. Take for instance a safe, reliable remedy for constipation and liver trouble like Dodson's Liver Tone. This harmless vegetable liquid has proved so satisfactory a liver stimulant and reliever of billousness, and to entirely take the place of calomel without any danger or restriction of habits or diet, that there are dozens of preparations springing up with imitations of its claims.

But Dodson's Liver Tone is guaranteed to do all that is claimed for it, and if you are not satisfied with it your druggist will hand your money back with a smile. Any person going to a drug store for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will be sure of getting a large bottle of this genuine remedy in exchange for his half dollar.

Mulhall Says Foes 'Shadowed' Gompers

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Colonel Mulhall, testifying to-day before the Lobby Investigation Committee, declared that Judge Davenport, attorney for the Buck's Stove and Range Company of St. Louis, trailed Samuel Gompers during the 1908 campaign with stenographers, who reported all of Gompers' speeches.

The motive, he said, was the hope that Gompers would say something which might be brought to the attention of the Federal courts, which had under consideration the injunction and contempt proceedings against Gompers and the other heads of the American Federation of Labor.

Wilson Can't See Rest for Congress

WASHINGTON, July 21.—President Wilson told visitors to-day that he is well satisfied with the progress of the currency legislation and expects to see the bill passed by both Houses before before the end of the present session.

"Do you mean the present special session or after a recess?" the President was asked.

"I have heard nothing about a recess," the President replied, "and I see no reason for one."

COUNCIL ATTACKS TWO MORE VETOES

City Lawmakers Go After Record in Overriding Wishes of Mayor Woodward.

Members of Council at the meeting Monday afternoon will attempt to override two vetoes of Mayor Woodward. These will be their thirty-third and thirty-fourth efforts and they will set a record. During the former years of the Mayor's service his disapproval of councilmanic action was annulled 22 times by two-thirds votes of Council.

The first matter to come up will be the question of consolidating the assessing and receiving departments of the tax office. The Council resolution seeks to place Receiver Beauchamp under the Assessors. Mayor Woodward has the Receiver's side with the statement:

"About the only reason that I can see for consolidating these offices again is simply for the purpose of political patronage, a question that should not enter into this matter when the efficiency and the good of the city are taken into consideration."

Alderman James R. Nutting, author of the resolution, declares that the divided system has proved a failure, and blames it for the loss of almost $50,000 in revenue.

The other veto of the Mayor is on the resolution appropriating $5 for an option on the $100,000 electric plant feature of the new crematory. Mayor Woodward declares the whole proposition was knocked out by the Supreme Court and that he will not sign any check throwing away $5 of the city's money.

Alderman Nutting, Councilman Albert Thomson and others charge the Mayor's opposition is due to the fact that he is tied up with the Georgia Railway and Power Company interests.

CHURCH ANNOUNCES SOCIAL.

BRIDE ROAMS CITY SEEKING HUSBAND

Waycross Girl Deserted a Week After Marriage, Seeks Missing Spouse in Atlanta.

Wooed and won after nine months of romantic courtship; a week of happiness in an ideal home, then desertion, was the experience of Mrs. S. J. Jowers, a pretty young woman, of Waycross, who is scouring the State in search of her missing husband. She appealed to the Atlanta police Sunday.

The young woman went direct to police headquarters, where she bared the whole story of her misfortunes.

Between sobs, which moved even Captain Poole, who has heard many a tale of this sort, she told how she had been wooed; how, finally, she had given her heart to the ardent suitor; how they were married in the little church in Waycross, where she was born and reared; how they took up their married life at her husband's home in Fitzgerald—and then, one week later, of his sudden departure.

Jowers, the young wife told the police, said he was going away to get a better job—that was the last she heard of him.

Having a "tip" that he might be in Atlanta, Mrs. Jowers came to Atlanta and immediately instituted a search for him through the police. All the afternoon Captain Poole and the young woman searched the streets of Atlanta, but to no avail.

Mrs. Jowers left Atlanta Monday morning, after leaving a description of her husband with the police.

Mrs. Jowers, before marriage, was Miss Victoria Pace, daughter of J. B. Pace, of Waycross. She is 18 years of age and is pretty.

JERRY MOLES. Loses Her Best Loved Playmate When Lad and His Inseparable Chum Drown.

Sorrow, using death as its weapon, struck twice to the heart of 14-year-old Mary Chastine Sunday, and in so doing cast a shadow over the entire vicinity of her home at No. 33 Humphries street, for she was its sunshine.

In the double stroke the lives of both the mother of the girl, Mrs. Arie Chastine, and her best-loved playmate, Jerry Moles, 15 years old, who lived across the street, were snuffed out, the former after an operation and the boy from drowning in the Chattahoochee River.

And, as if not satisfied, the Reaper added a third to his toll from the neighborhood in taking the life of Casey Daniels, No. 71 Hightower street, 15 years old, also a friend of Mary, who drowned with Jerry.

Inquest Into Death Called.

An inquest into the death of the boys was called by the Coroner.

The two boys went fishing Saturday afternoon in the Chattahoochee River at the end of the Marietta road.

As Casey Daniels was leaving home his mother warned him not to venture in the water.

"Please don't go to the river," said Mrs. Daniels to her son. "Go to some creek and fish like good boys. I am so afraid something will happen and that you both will drown."

Bodies Caught on Fishline.

When the boys did not return at nightfall their parents became alarmed and a party with lanterns searched the river bank. Sunday the search was resumed by about 100 persons. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon G. W. Smith, of No. 527 West North avenue, located a fishing line hung across the river.

He climbed out of the boat in which he sat and found a ghastly burden caught in the hooks below. The depth of the water at this point is about fifteen feet. The bodies of the two boys were lying on the river bottom with their arms entwined.

They were clad only in undershirt and trousers. The remainder of their apparel was found later under bushes at the opposite side of the stream.

Both Poor Swimmers.

N. L. Moles, father of Jerry, thinks both boys were in bathing, that one of them got beyond his depth, and that the other boy tried to rescue his friend. Both were poor swimmers.

Casey Daniels was a member of the Junior Order of Mechanics. He is survived by four brothers and four sisters. All of the sisters and two of the brothers are married. They are M. L. Daniels, of No. 82 Stewart avenue; William R., of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. Timms, of East Point; Mrs. Etta Ellis, of Lula, Fla.; Mrs. Ora McAdoo and Mrs. Mamie Patton, of San Francisco. Two boys remain at home, Royal, 20, and Ernest, 18 years. Casey returned to Atlanta last Christmas after having been with his sister in San Francisco for three years.

Lads Worked Together.

Jerry Moles is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Moles; a sister, Elsie, 13 months old, and a brother, Bruce, who is 17. Jerry's father is employed at the Atlanta Woolen Mill.

Both boys worked at the Boston Brady Machine Works.

A double funeral for the two boys will be held at Union Tabernacle, in McDaniel street, at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. Interment will be at Westview.

ANSLEY PARK TO PROTEST DELAY ON STREETS

Citizens Will Demand That Paving Provided for Seven Months Ago Be Done at Once.

With almost seven months of the year gone and no street work done in Ansley Park, members of the Ansley Park Association, made up of residents and property owners of that section, are planning to make a protest to the City Council.

Many of the streets in that section practically are impassable. Though the avenues are lined with beautiful homes surrounded by well-kept lawns, the streets are cut into ruts and holes worse than any country roads. Neither the city nor the country has done any work to speak of in Ansley Park since it was incorporated.

As an aid toward a solution of the problem, The Georgian has made an investigation of the conditions from the city officials' viewpoint.

Owners to Pay Two-Thirds.

When the January budget was made up $19,931.25 was provided for repaving Peachtree circle from Fifteenth street to Prado, the property owners to pay $13,287.50 of the amount and the city to pay $6,643.75.

From the streets ordinary fund the Eighth Ward got $5,950, from the rock and chert fund $2,150 and from the chert repair fund $600.

From this appropriation only one block of street has been paved, Lombardy street between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets. Not even a pick has been stuck in any other part of the park, and there have been seven months of the finest working weather the city construction department has ever known.

Although the property owners are to pay two-thirds of the cost of the paving of Peachtree circle they have been tabooed on this street for more than a year.

Nothing Done on S. Prado.

While the residents have borne the condition with the patience of Job they declare they will not remain quiet any longer.

From the general fund $4,769 has been set aside for paving South Prado from Piedmont avenue to Prado. This is a favorite drive for autoists. It winds around with the beauty of a mountain pass. Attractive homes are built up along it. But it is worn full of deep holes and ridges, and though the money for its repair has been available since the first of the year no contract has been let—not even have bids been asked for.

The general funds are supposed to provide for repairs of streets. Repairs have been unknown to Ansley Park.

Chairman Orville H. Hall, of the Council Streets Committee, said Monday morning that the reason for this condition was that the city forces had been engaged in other sections.

Beaten by "Wire Pulling."

His statement would indicate that the Eighth Ward representatives had been completely outdone in the "wire pulling" contest that goes on between Councilmen over street work.

W. A. Hansel, Assistant Chief of Construction, said the contract had been let for "dolarway" paving on Peachtree circle, but that the contractor also was repaving Central avenue, and that he would have to finish that before going to Peachtree circle. He said he expected Central avenue to be finished in about ten days.

As to South Prado, he said a new process of bitulithic macadam would be tried there, but that they were waiting to see how the same sort of paving laid on Gordon street turned out before putting it down on South Prado.

Members of the Ansley Park Association are dissatisfied. They can not understand why they have not had some street work done this year.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Good Forsyth Bill.

John F. Conroy and his diving models; the Great Lester, ventriloquist; Deiro, the famous accordionist; George Auger and company; Smith, Cook and Marie Branden; Shriner and Richards; the Be Anos.

That is the bill of vaudeville that is to be served at the Forsyth matinee and night all of this week. It is a wonderful combination of talent, one of the best groups of high-grade Keith vaudeville acts that have been assembled in Atlanta. Conroy and his models present an act that is declared to be the strongest drawing card in modern vaudeville. It is made up of a famous life-saver and two pretty girls who are expert in swimming and diving. A great pool tank is used and the stage setting is one of the handsomest that has been presented on any stage.

Tabloid at Bijou.

The Bijou is proving the popularity of musical comedy these days in the packed houses that have greeted every tabloid show of thes eason. The little Marietta street house is perfectly ventilated, cooled by the latest devices, and kept at a temperature that is a positive relief from the heat of the crowded pavements outside. For the week beginnig this afternoon the attraction will be "Good Morning, Judge," said to be the funniest tabloid on the circuit. The original methods of a rich brewer, who as Mayor is forced to act as judge of the municipal court, provoke mirth of the hilarious kind.

There will be the usual performances during the week, daily matinees at 3 o'clock, and night shows at 7:30 and 9.

"Les Miserables."

Realizing that there is a spirited demand on the part of the public for high-class photodramas Jake Wells has been devoting several months to preparations for presenting in the South the masterpieces of motography. He has just completed arrangements to present at the Grand this week the most magnificent product of kinemotography, Victor Hugo's immortal romance, "Les Miserables," in nine reels. This production, which cost over $100,000, was made in Paris and in the French countryside showing the actual scenes portrayed by the great master. The principal roles were enacted by the principal players of Paris.

HOUSE ASKED TO INCREASE LIST OF PENSIONS

Another Measure Bars Commercial Discrimination by Unfair Price Cuts.

The introduction of a bill by Senator Peyton, of the Thirty-first, prohibiting unfair commercial discrimination by slashing prices in one section of the State and boosting them in another, featured Monday evening's session of the State Senate.

Another important bill introduced was that by Senator Buetz extending the pension list to include the widows of Confederate veterans who married prior to 1875. Under the present law, widows are pensioned only when they were married prior to 1870.

Senator Stark, of the Thirty-third, introduced a bill providing for the regulation by the Railroad Commission of the rate of speed of railroad cars in the corporate limits of any city not exceeding 2,000 inhabitants.

Another bill introduced by Senator Searcy provides for an amendment to the code of 1910 so as to allow the transportation of negro prisoners in charge of deputy sheriffs in the white cars or compartments of railroad cars. Sheriffs and deputies say they are subject to riot when carrying negro prisoners in negro compartments.

A resolution providing for the canvassing of the vote for United States Senator Bacon in joint session of the House and Senate Tuesday at noon was adopted by the Senate.

Monday marked the turning into the last half of the present session of the Legislature and was featured by the House transacting the smallest amount of work of any day of the 25 whic hhave passed.

Reconsideration of House Resolution, No. 56, which refers to the appointment of a commission to investigate the complaint of Georgia farmers against the damage to their crops by fumes from copper plants in Ducktown, Tenn., was asked by Representative Corn, and the session was extended ten minutes to accommodate him. His motion was lost by a heavy vote.

Man Beaten to Death By Mob; Mayor Held

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, MINN., July 21.—Mayor Edeke, of Ranier, Minn., is out on bail to-day, charged with being an accessory to the murder of F. J. Couture, owner of the Ranier Hotel. James Kelly was in the county jail here, charged with the actual murder.

Couture was beaten to death by a crowd of men after he made a statement that no attempt was being made in Ranier to enforce the saloon-closing laws. Mayor Edeke is charged with being a member of the crowd.

FRANKLIN FARMERS' RALLY.

ROYSTON.—The Farmers' Union of Franklin County held a rally at Bold Springs Saturday. The speakers were C. S. Barrett, president of the National Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Assistant State Commissioner of Agriculture. Representative T. G. Dorough, of Franklin, introduced the speakers.

CRAWFORD HEIRS SEEK LUMB'S EXTRADITION

Judge Ellis Will Be Asked to Request Governor for Necessary Papers.

Appeal to Judge Ellis, of the Superior Court, to request Governor Slaton to appoint Attorney General Felder to prosecute the case in which extradition papers are desired for Fred Lumb, the New York barber, named as an accomplice of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, in the alleged poisoning of her husband, will be made by Colonel T. S. James, attorney for the Crawford heirs at law.

If the Governor grants the request, according to Attorney Jones, the attorneys for the Crawford heirs will consult the Attorney General in regard to making out requisition papers for the return of Lumb from New York.

Should the Attorney General advise such a course the attorneys will immediately get out the necessary extradition papers. Attorney James said he had no doubt requisition papers eventually would be obtained.

Colonel James' decision to wage a fight for the return of Lumb followed an informal conference with Governor Slaton early Monday morning. Besides Colonel James and A. Kemper, attorneys for the heirs; Burton Smith and Reuben Arnold, representing Mrs. Crawford, were present at the conference to contest the granting of extradition papers.

According to Colonel James, the Governor declined to have anything to do with the matter until an application had been filed with him. He gave assurance, however, that extradition papers might be obtained before indictment if a proper case were made out.

Fair Smokers May Puff in Buffet Cars

CHICAGO, July 21.—Women on transcontinental trains may smoke in the buffet car. The precedent was set by Miss Hester McKay, who said her father was a Chicago manufacturer. She and several other women passengers on a train that was speeding toward Yellowstone Park to-day puffed cigarettes with the men in the buffet car.

Of the twenty male passengers in the car nineteen voted to allow the women to smoke.

BOYS AND GIRLS EAGER TO WIN AD PRIZES

Many Entries in Want Ad Contest Show Enthusiasm Over Georgian's offer for Light Work.

The busiest office in Atlanta Monday was that of the Want Ad Man, and it's going to keep busy, too. The way the boys and girls came in to enter the Want Ad Contest proved that the plan is going to be the one big success of the season.

It isn't every summer that the young folks have a chance to get an automobile for nothing but a few weeks of pleasant work and they are beginning to realize it. Of course, they won't all get the automobile, but there are pianos and motorcycles and a trip to California, gold watches and bikes and other prizes. Everybody has a chance.

The swarm of contestants kept circulating around so busily that the Want Ad Man had to go out and rent another office. He found it on the fourth floor of the Foote & Davies Building, No. 21 Edgewood avenue, just a few steps from North Pryor street, and all the contest details will be handled there.

Ready for Opening.

The contest will open within a few days, and if you are coming in you had better come now, before the field gets crowded. Be sure to clip out the nomination blank printed on another page of this issue, fill it out and bring it to the Want Ad Man.

Don't think because there are many contestants that there isn't room for you. Atlanta is a big town, the whole territory is open to you, and you have just as good an opportunity to win as anyone else. But don't delay and let the others get a start on you. Read the daily advertisements and stories in The Georgian and keep up with the contest news.

Here are some of the young men and women who have entered the contest. They are bright young live wires, every one. Better get your name on the list:

HOUSE SPEAKER WILL DEMAND TAX REFORM

Says Ways and Means Committee Must Get Together or He Will Take Floor.

Speaker William H. Burwell has taken a firm hand in the adjustment of the difference existing in the Ways and Means Committee of the House with respect to a tax equalization measure, and has read the riot act to that honorable body.

The Speaker, who, although he is the Speaker, is not divested in any way of his representative capacity, will take the floor, if necessary, and fight for a tax equalization measure that means something, and that will insure a State board of as great effectiveness as may be secured.

The Speaker takes the position that neither extreme of opinion in the Ways and Means Committee, or anywhere else in the Legislature, should be permitted to control or block legislation to its way of thinking.

Insists They Get Together.

He, therefore, when the Ways and Means Committee seemed to be hopelessly split, called upon the heads of the two factions therein and told them very plainly that they must get together, or he might be compelled, against his will, to undertake to find a means of getting them together.

The Speaker insisted that it was not so much a question of getting this or that tax equalization measure through, with all of its provisions just so, as it was a question of, at least, getting things started toward genuine and honest tax reform.

To pass an equalization measure without any sort of State board to equalize the counties would, the Speaker thinks, not be to pass such a measure as the people desire or as would be effective.

On the other hand, the Speaker is willing to concede that it may not be necessary now to insist that the State board have too wide authority or be made arbitrarily supreme.

Seeks to Bring About Order.

In other words, with a split in the committee already in evidence and a split on the floor of the House looming as a grave probability, the Speaker has intervened, both as the Speaker and as the Representative from Hancock County, to bring order out of chaos, if possible, and, in the interest of economizing time, to hasten along the matter of tax reform.

The Speaker is an earnest advocate of prompt payment for the school teachers, and he also is heartily in favor of revising the tax laws thoroughly and effectively. He, perhaps, personally inclines to a more drastic and effective tax equalization measure than now seems possible to secure from the House.

His attitude is, however, that even "half a loaf is better than no bread," and that the interests of the State demand a getting together of the warring factions inside the Ways and Means Committee, as paving the way to an approximately satisfactory compromise measure on the floor.

Speaker's Stand Effective.

The direct result of the Speaker's interference was a reassembling of the Ways and Means Committee and the recommendation of a measure carrying a State Board of Tax Equalizers of limited powers and discretion.

His hearty insistence that he would take the floor in person, and, if necessary, lead the fight on a tax equalization measure proposing to eliminate entirely the State Board, undoubtedly has had a profound effect on the situation.

The Speaker is determined that the House, at least, shall not permit tax reform to be a failure, if he can prevent it. And he is willing to go the limit of his responsibility, if necessary, in getting things shaped up as they should be.

Churches Lukewarm, Dr. Holderby Asserts

Dr. A. R. Holderby, pastor of Moore Memorial Church, declared in his sermon Sunday morning that the churches of to-day were lukewarm and the members indifferent.

"If the ministry really believed in the doctrine of eternal punishment and preached it what a shaking of dry bones there would be," he said.

"Much of the preaching of to-day is formal, even apologetic. We tell our children the Bible is the best book in the world, yet it is not given a place in our schools."

Daniels Blamed by Socialists for Riots

SEATTLE, July 21.—This city was quiet to-day and there was no indication of further trouble on account of the rioting of Friday night and Saturday morning when headquarters of the Industrial Workers of the World and the Socialists were wrecked.

A memorial to President Wilson was forwarded by the Socialists, laying the blame for the trouble upon Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

Warden Traps Hunter With Field Glasses

SAVANNAH, July 21.—From the windows of a business house on Bay Street Charles B. Westcott, State Deputy Fsh and Game Warden, watched a hunter through a pair of field glasses as he came down the Savannah River in a boat, and placed him under arrest when he reached the city.

The hunter, J. W. Cooper, had a gun, ammunition and a bag containing eight picked birds, packed in ice, which Westcott has identified as summer duck.

'TIGER' GETS FARM SENTENCE.

COLUMBUS.—Langdon Bell, frequent violator of the prohibition law in Columbus, has been sentenced by Judge Tigner, of City Court, to pay a fine of $250 or serve six months on the State farm. Officers, however, refuse to send Bell to the farm, as there is a similar charge pending against him in the Superior Court.

HOUSE'S INTEREST IN SUFFRAGE ON INCREASE--HERE'S THE REASON

Miss Mary Rosa Johnson, who has set the entire House a-flutter.

She's a suffragist and is winning favor for "the cause."

PASTOR CHARGES LIQUOR BOYCOTT

Dr. Ainsworth Charges Macon Saloon Interests With Conspiracy.

MACON, July 21.—Dr. W. N. Ainsworth charged from the pulpit at the Mulberry Street Methodist Church last night that the saloon men and their friends have organized a boycott against the fifty members of the Law Enforcement League who last week signed a petition for an injunction against the saloons and social clubs.

"A devout member and faithful official of this church lost his position last night because he signed the petition," declared Dr. Ainsworth, who organized the campaign against the liquor interests. He further declared that the boycott was planned to extend to men in business, as well as to procure the discharge of salaried men who participated in the movement, and proposed to blacklist all men catering to public trade who allowed their names to go on the petitions. He declared that if this boycott continued the courts will be invoked for aid and protection.

At the same time that this sermon was preached the Rev. T. F. Calloway at the Second Street Baptist church declared that "Macon is rotten to the core, being the widest open city in Georgia." He attacked the city administration for the alleged conditions.

MacFarlane Jones' Infant Will Survive

RICHMOND, July 21.—The infant child of W. MacFarlane Jones, whose wife died at her home in Atlanta last Wednesday, probably will live, its attendants at Memorial Hospital, this city, say, although its life was hanging by a thread for two days after its mother's death. The child, a boy, was brought here with the body of Mrs. Jones, whose funeral took place in this city.

Mr. Jones is connected with the Barron G. Collier Agency in Atlanta.

GARRISON AT GALVESTON.

GALVESTON, TEX., July 21.—Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison and Major General Leonard Wood to-day inspected Fort Crockett and later went to Texas City, where a review of the entire second division took place.

Press Table Suddenly Becomes Attractive to Lawmakers and Sessions Lose Monotony.

Members of the House are finding excuses to hang around the press table; the young men of the press have found such expressions as "brown eyes," "wavy hair," and "suffragette" mysteriously creeping into their copy; Speaker Burwell has found trouble in keeping his eyes on the north side of the House and Clerk John Eolfeuillet has experienced the greatest difficulty in calling the roll.

The reason—well, it's the press table's nomination for the Booster Button Girl in Atlanta's beauty contest—Miss Mary Rosa Johnson, a monopoly of feminine pulchritude, who has become a regular member of the House newspaper delegation.

Miss Johnson "just strolled in," coming with her friend, Mrs. Margaret McWhorter, who has been accorded the privilege of the press table this season. Her visit created a demand for her continuous presence there. Accordingly appropriate resolutions were drawn up and unanimously adopted, beseeching her to act as guardian of the press table for the balance of the session.

Miss Johnson is a real honest-to-goodness suffragette. It took her about one minute to convert the press gang to the cause of suffrage, while the Legislators fell in the suffrage column in rapid order. A strong effort was made by a youth presiding over the Senate press table to inveigle her to their side of the Capitol, but a comparison of "the gangs" brought her back to the House in short order.

"Oh, I think it is great to be here," she said. "You know I am a suffragette, and I like to see the Legislators at work, because they act so funny. Does anybody in the world know what they are talking about?"

COLONEL KINGMAN INDORSED.

SAVANNAH, July 21.—A resolution introduced by A. B. Moore, indorsing Colonel Dan C. Kingman, engineer in charge of the Savannah district, for chief of engineers of the United States Bureau of Engineers, has been adopted by the Savannah Chamber of Commerce.

VIADUCT COMFORT BUILDING URGED

Park Board Member Receives Postals From Leading Citizens Pledging Support.

Thousands of Atlantans have joined in the demand for a public comfort building over Wall street, with main entrance from the Whitehall viaduct.

L. C. Green, member of the Park Board from the Fourth Ward, who started the movement, has received thousands of postal cards indorsing the movement and pledging support. These cards are from every class, and in the number are the leading citizens of Atlanta. Following are extracts from the postals received:

Ex-Mayor Robert F. Maddox—I am heartily in favor of the movement to have the city erect a public comfort building.

V. H. Kriegshaber—It is a good thing. Push it along to completion.

L. J. Daniel—Yes, if on Whitehall viaduct extending out over Wall street opposite the Peters Building, entrance from viaduct. Under this viaduct or Pryor street underpass, no good.

E. A. Hartsock—I do most heartily indorse the movement, and I think it should go on the Whitehall viaduct, something like the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad office.

TIE TARIFF VOTE IN THE SENATE IMMINENT

Chamberlain's Decision to Vote Independent of Party Lines Imperils Passage of Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, announced to-day that he would not be bound by the Senate Democratic caucus to vote for the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill. This leaves only 48 Democratic Senators upon which the Democrats can rely to support the measure and makes the vote of Vice President Marshall necessary to break a tie if Chamberlain bolts on the final vote.

"I want it understood," said Chamberlain, "that as a Senator from Oregon I am absolutely free to support what is right in this matter. I am not bound to support this or any other measure. What I want is the truthlight."

Chamberlain did not state he would vote against the bill, and his Democratic colleagues were of the opinion that he would be found among the faithful when the bill comes to a vote.

Senator Burton, of Ohio, Republican, attacked in the Senate to-day the ad valorem duties in the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill; denounced as false Democratic predictions that the bill would reduce the cost of living, and criticised the measure for its "free trade tendencies."

Burton declared that members of the Democratic party admitted the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill would not reduce the cost of living. He quoted from a "signed interview" by Secretary of Commerce Redfield, in which Redfield termed the benefit to be derived from the tariff bill "moral and mental," and stated that no "intelligent man expects it (the bill) to be more than a step toward the reduction of the cost of living."

"I believe that the proposed measure is based on theories which are erroneous and that its adoption will prove disastrous to our industrial activites and to the whole framework of our economic and social life," said Burton.

"Furthermore, it will not accomplish the beneficial results which are claimed.

"The business of the country, its industrial life, had adjusted itself to a party of protection. For 50 years the prevailing rates have been high. We can not change from these rates in a single year without widespread injury. The proposed changes are without precedent in the fiscal history of our own or any other country."

DR. RIDLEY WINS CONVERTS.

There were eight professions of faith and five additions to the Central Baptist Church membership Sunday morning following a sermon by Dr. Caleb A. Ridley on "The Gospel as an Antidote for Sin."

FATALLY HURT IN FIRE.

CLARKSDALE, MISS., July 21.—One man was fatally injured and several slightly burned in a tenement house fire here to-day. The flames were controlled after heavy damage had been done.

'I'VE HEAVY FIXED CHARGES,' PLEA OF BRYAN

Lecturing Secretary of State Admits Others Could Live on $38.46 a Day.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD., July 21.—"If an annual salary of $12,000 for the Secretary of State is not sufficient to maintain him and his family in a manner befitting the dignity of the high office, would you advocate an increase in that salary?"

This question was asked William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State, after he had delivered a Chautauqua lecture for which he received $250.

"No, I would not advocate an increase," replied Mr. Bryan. "The salary is sufficient to meet the expenses of the Secretary of State when those expenses are confined to his home and official life.

His Case Different.

"This, however, is not the case with me. The fact ought not to be overlooked, and it ought not to be necessary for me to mention, that in my life are certain fixed charges which must be met. These charges, with my living expenses and expenses incidental to my position exceed my salary."

"Is your farm a paying proposition?" was asked.

"It is a liability. It is not an asset," Mr. Bryan replied.

"Is your life insured?"

"Yes. The premiums are fixed charges. When a man abandons his home and takes an office he leaves behind him at his old home expenses which he cannot avoid. Every man in public life knows that I am not delivering lectures with a view of adding to my accumulations. I am working to meet my expenses.

"I must keep intact whatever money I have accumulated for my old age and for my family.

His Tongue Might Warp.

"I cannot expect to be a bread winner when infirmities of age overtake me.

"However, I do not care to make detailed explanations for my acts. Those acts speak for themselves. I have never hidden nor concealed my acts. I know I am right and I shall proceed accordingly. My statement of a few days ago still stands."

"Then you will continue to deliver Chautauqua lecutres?"

"Yes; and the public service will suffer no injury. My engagements are such that they can be cancelled at a moment's notice. I shall not be far from Washington at any time."

The subject of Mr. Bryan's lecture here was "The Making of a Man." It was delivered in a big auditorium tent before 1,000 persons, who paid $1, 75c or 25c each admission. The total receipts were far in excess of $250.

Away from Post 38 Days.

This is the thirty-eighth day Mr. Bryan has been absent from his post since his appointment as Secretary of State on March 4, one hundred and thirty-five days ago.

He is advertised to lecture at Gary, Ind., next week.

As Secretary of State, Bryan's salary of $12,000 a year pays him $38.46 a day, counting every day in the year except Sundays.

As a lecturer, Mr. Bryan receives $250 a night guarantee and a percentage of the receipts, besides all expenses.

Apologizes in Papers For Posting His Wife

NEW LONDON, July 21.—Jonathan L. Beckwith, a prosperous young contractor of Niantic, surprised his fellow-townsmen last week when he inserted a notice in New London papers forbidding anyone to harbor or trust his wife. While the notice was being printed, Mrs. Beckwith transferred a vanload of furniture to her father's house.

To-day the New London papers had the following announcement:

"I acknowledge being a little hasty in posting my wife, as I find no reason for same.—Jno. L. Beckwith, Niantic, Conn."

Driver Ditches Auto In Averting Holdup

The chauffeur of Ed L. Wight, of No. 262 Juniper street, was driving through Inman Park Sunday when two young men hailed him and asked if they might ride into town. When they were in the car they leveled revolvers at the chauffeur and ordered him to drive toward East Point, according to his story.

The car was found in a ditch near East Point Sunday morning. The chauffeur said at this point the highwaymen attempted to rob him, and in trying to defend himself he ran the car into the ditch.

The police are still investigating the case.

Mrs. Phipps Wooed; Big Alimony in Peril

BOSTON, July 21.—Mrs. Genevieve Phipps, divorced wife of Lawrence Cowles Phipps, Pittsburg steel magnate, who arrived on the Hamburg-American liner Cleveland, refused today to discuss the report that she is the bride of Edward W. Powell, a young clubman of Denver. Powell refuses to talk also.

If Mrs. Phipps is again a bride, she will, under the terms of her divorce, lose the $25,000 yearly income on steel bonds given to her out of her former husband's $17,000,000 fortune.

Owner Asks $1,200 For Cow's Switch

CINCINNATI, July 21.—Holden Bros., of Kentucky, breeders of thoroughbred cattle, have sued the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet Company for $1,200 for the loss of the end or switch of a registered Jersey cow's tail.

The complaint recites that the cow was shipped from Louisville to Cincinnati on July 6 and that en route the end of her tail was pulled or cut off, making her valueless for prize-winning or show purposes.

Dogs Have Valet, Fan, Bath, Room and Bed

BROCKTON, MASS., July 21.—Twelve Pomeranians, owned by Mrs. E. V. Graves, a prominent business woman here, have a whole house to themselves. The dogs have individual beds, electric fans, a valet and a bath twice a day.

Each dog has its own room.

RETAILERS TURN CONVENTION INTO 'LOBBY'

Merchants in Annual Session Here Spend Time Pulling for Pet Legislation.

Retail merchants from all parts of Georgia gathered in Atlanta Monday for their annual convention, which will remain in session Tuesday and Wednesday. The first sessions were set for Monday, but full attendance of 1,000 or more delegates is not expected until Tuesday.

The main object of the convention is to attempt to further the passage of the fraudulent check and garnishment bills which the association has drafted.

The bills are likely to meet opposition in the House, it is believed, and the convention practically resolved itself into a "lobby" Monday morning, when, after a brief executive meeting, all the delegates proceeded to the Capitol to "work on" the representatives.

Wilmer L. Moore welcomed the convention. J. W. S. Hardy is president and John Bratton is secretary of the organization.

150 Hours' Sleep Refreshes Woman

ST LOUIS, July 21.—Miss Christine Fischer, a school teacher, who slept almost uninterruptedly for 150 hours following a tennis game, declared she felt greatly refreshed, though a little weak.

Now Well After Using Eckman's Alterative

The makers of Eckman's Alterative, which is doing so much good for Lung Trouble, are continually in receipt of wonderful reports of recoveries brought about solely through the use of this medicine. Investigate the case of this writer, who used Eckman's Alterative and who is to-day enjoying good health:

421 Second Ave., Aurora, Ill.

"Gentlemen: Pardon me for not writing sooner, but I wanted to see if I would stay cured. I can now truthfully say I am perfectly well. I have no pain, no cough, no night sweats, no hay fever. Since a child of two years I have been ailing with lung trouble, which grew worse as I grew older. At the age of fourteen the doctor said if I could not be sent South I would surely die of Consumption. Every winter I would be sure to have either Bronchitis, Pleurisy or Pneumonia. I had Typhoid-Pneumonia one time. I had catarrh of the stomach and bowels and had Hay Fever for the last few years; but have not anything of the kind this year. I will answer all letters sent to me, asking a history of my case, from any one suffering with lung trouble."

(Affidavit) ETTA PLATH.

(Six years later reports still well.)

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

THE $55 SHORTHAND COURSE AND $55 BOOKKEEPING COURSE BOTH FOR THE PRICE OF ONE

Remarkable Offer Now Made by the Southern Shorthand and Business University.

PROF. THOS. L. BRYAN.

Fifty Scholarships at half price!

The $55 Shorthand Course and the $55 Bookkeeping Course, both combined, for the price of one course, $55.

While these scholarships last, either of the $55 courses may be obtained at $40.

This is an unusual opportunity and will not be in effect long, as the scholarships are already being taken. Act at once if you desire to avail yourself of this splendid offer.

Occasionally opportunities are open in all lines of commerce for the securing of great bargains, but now comes the Southern Shorthand and Business University, of this city, with the above unusual offer, which will make the hearts of the young people glad, who desire to begin business careers.

"I have been with the Southern Business College for more than four years as lecturer and representative," said Professor Thomas L. Bryan to-day, "and, although I have been a preacher of the gospel for many years, I can say that there is no work more religious nor more important than that of training our young men and young women for business positions—giving them an earning capacity which will acquire for them independence through life.

"I have succeeded in arranging with the Southern to put on the foregoing midsummer special advertising proposition, which will be hailed with delight by the young people of the South.

"Phone, call or write and I will call upon you and give full information.

"Checks for Scholarships may be mailed from out-of-town purchasers and Scholarships will be forwarded to them immediately. The Scholarships will be good for entrance at any future time; therefore, if you wish to enter in August or September, or later, buy Scholarship now and save the big difference in cost.

"It is not a question of obtaining as low or even a lower rate at some other colleges, but the point of great interest is that you can now secure such a remarkably low rate in the long-established, old reliable, superbly equipped, and well-known Southern Shorthand and Business University, 'the school that gets results,' and naturally the school you prefer to attend.

"Nearly 50 pupils enter the Southern every month at the regular rates. These 50 half-priced Scholarships will, therefore, last only a few days. You will have to act at once.

"Remember, the two $55 Courses for the price of one until 50 Scholarships are sold."

No Key to Woman's Mind, Says Alienist

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Dr. B. R. Logie, Government alienist for the District of Columbia, came right out in a courtroom and said:

"All the ordinary tests fail. No one on earth has ever been able to solve the psychology of the feminine mind."

Dr. Logie was a witness in the legal battle between Mrs. Emma Prall Knorr and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Prall, sisters-in-law, who have been in controversy for ten years over a large estate.

Trip for Columbus' Bones Is Suggested

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Assistant Secretary of State Osborne, as the result of his visit to the Dominican Republic and Hayti, suggests that the bones of Christopher Columbus which are at Santo Domingo City, be placed aboard the first ship to go through the Panama Canal.

SERMONS SHOW SPLIT ON BIBLE IN SCHOOLS

Atlanta's pulpits became a forum Sunday for discussion of the Searcy-Bush bill, enactment of which would force the regular reading of the Bible in Georgia's public schools. Many sermons revealed that the preachers are divided on the subject.

The bill has had a stormy career since its purpose was discovered. It aroused little debate in the Educational Committee of the Senate, and was reported out favorably. As soon as its text became known, however, a delegation of clergymen visited the committee and started the agitation.

Dr. C. W. Daniel of the First Baptist Church, Dr. H. M. DuBose of the First Methodist Church and Dr. Dunbar Ogden of the Central Presbyterian Church, favor passage of the measure which has been recommitted to the consideration of the committee. Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, preached in opposition.

Objects to Making Bible Bludgeon.

Dr. White protested against "making Jesus king by force." He declared the principle of compulsory Bible reading in the schools was the same which Christ Himself rejected nearly 2,000 years ago when the populace sought to take Him and make Him temporal king.

"The objection to this bill is not met by eulogies of the Bible," he said. "It is, rather, that the State, being a political institution, can not, without violating its fundamental charter and without exceeding its established function, make the Bible the instrument of compulsion and the weapon of force."

Daniel's View Opposite.

Dr. Daniel, taking a stand directly opposite that of Dr. White, asserted that the State was bound to furnish the students of the public schools a knowledge of the Bible because the Bible is the source of all that is best in English literature and has furnished the moral basis of civilization.

Dr. Ogden preached for the bill, but recommended an amendment permitting children whose parents objected to the reading to be excused while the Bible was being read.

Dr. DuBose declared the use of the Bible was just to all sects, and that its reading in the public schools was essential to the future of the State and nation.

BULGARS SHORN OF SPOILS OF TURK WAR

Adrianople Retaken by Moslems, Who Push on to Regain All Lost Territory.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—Suffering defeat after defeat at the hands of its former allies and friends, the crowning humiliation coming at the hands of the Turks, who recaptured Adrianople without opposition, the warlike spirit of the Bulgarians has been tamed.

With the Roumanian army within a day's march of Sofia, the Bulgars are ready to accept peace at any price.

The retaking of Adrianople by the Turks seems to mark the utter collapse of Bulgaria's resistance to the attacks of its former allies and its former enemy.

Apparently Bulgaria's recent crushing reverses are largely due to dissensions among its commanders in the field and the lack of confidence on the part of the Government in the heads of its army.

From present indications it is likely that Bulgaria will be shorn of the territory which came to it as the result of the victories over the Turks in the recent war.

Already the Sofia Government has offered Roumania an important territorial concession to cease hostilities. It is likely that the other Balkan States will claim a large share of territory as the fruits of victory.

Peace arrangements probably will be made without the assistance of the powers, the Balkan States being insistent upon settling their dispute without outside interference.

Bulgaria's Foes. Ready to Arbitrate.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, July 21.—If Bulgaria accepts the preliminary conditions of the other Balkan States, the war in the allied States will be brought to a speedy conclusion.

The Greek, Servian and Montenegrin Governments to-day informed the Russian representative that they are ready to negotiate with Bulgaria to end hostilities.

Bulgars Willing to Begin Peace Parley.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 21.—The Bulgarian Government to-day officially notified Roumania and the powers that it is willing to conclude peace with the other Balkan States.

The Bulgarian delegates have arrived at Nish, and it is probable that peace negotiations will be begun to-day.

CANAL IN DANGER FROM POWERS, U. S. FEARS

President Tells Newspaper Men Armed Protectorate Over Central America Is Only Safeguard.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—That the United States fears encroachments by European powers upon the Canal Zone and is therefore preparing to establish an armed protectorate over all Central America was clearly indicated during President Wilson's semi-weekly conference with the "newspaper cabinet" to-day.

Protection of the canal, the President said, is the underlying principle of the Nicaraguan proposal by Secretary of State Bryan as the means for settlement of disputes relative to the canal, and the reason why Nicaragua was selected as the first country to be approached in connection with the policy which is destined to succeed "dollar diplomacy."

The President said the United States desired to render friendly assistance to all Latin America, and indicated that the other republics would be approached when negotiations with Nicaragua had been completed.

Secretary Bryan's Nicaraguan policy is not intended for application to all the Central American republics, but each will be treated with separately.

The Platt amendment giving the United States the right to intervene in all the Latin American countries will be introduced into all the agreements with these nations, and the United States will be enabled to exercise an army protectorate over all Central America, and the Monroe Doctrine will be bolstered in its weakest part.

It is realized that European nations may object to the power of the United States, but their objections merely will be "noted and filed," because the United States believes it is entirely within its rights in defending the Monroe Doctrine as it sees fit.

The Social World

Atlanta society was well represented at both the Piedmont Driving Club and East Lake Country Club Saturday evening, when the regular week-end dinner-dance was given at both club houses. The ballroom of the Piedmont Club was filled with gay parties who enjoyed a delicious dinner. Each table was decorated in phlox, and after dinner those who did not care to dance enjoyed the refreshing breezes on the cool terrace, where garlands of Japanese lanterns and fairy lamps added to the beauty of the terrace.

Among those attending the dinner dance were General and Mrs. Robert K. Evans, Captain and Mrs. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. William Schroder, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips McDuffie, Mr. and Mrs. Logan Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. John Charles Wheatley, Mr. and Mrs. Henry DeGive, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Lowman, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Little, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hawkins, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Entre Nous Dance.

A delightful occasion to all present was the picnic dance given by the Entre Nous Club at Austell Saturday. The afternoon was passed at Lithia Springs. The committee in charge was William Frasier, Bruce Durette, Misse Hilda Scharf and Marie Ulmer.

A large number of the club's members and guests were present, among them being Misses Marie Ulmer, Jennie Mae Calloway, Hilda Scharf, Julia House, Bobby Balentine, Estelle Brown, Elizabeth Clayton, Allie Ramsaur, Lucille Dunn, Nellie Doherty, Scleider, Landrum, Milton, Messrs. Ed Jarvis, Ralph Barker, Charles Cowan, Robert Cheshire, Bruce Durette, Frank Wellons, Al Bridwell, Clarence Harrisan, Carlton Beem, W. J. Weems, Robert Quinn, Stedman Burgess, Stuart Baird, Sterling Garwood, William Frasier, Ralph Dean, Charles LaFontaine, J. T. Henry, of Jacksonville.

The chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Guthrie and Mrs. Calloway.

P. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Norton and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Norton

Civic League to Change Name.

At a recent meeting of the Atlanta Civic League it was decided to change the name of that organization to one which would more clearly show what the League stands for. The name Woman Suffrage League was chosen as the more suitable, and this name will be brought before the league at the next meeting, which takes place Wednesday, July 23.

The first woman suffrage association in Georgia was formed in Atlanta in the early nineties, with Mrs. F. Swift as president. In 1904 the league, believing that the organization would grow more rapidly with a less aggressive name, changed it to the Atlanta Civic League. But the league believes the time is auspicious to make its purpose clear, so a change of name will again be effected at the next meeting, the executive board having already passed upon the advisability of such a change.

Men and women who believe in the enfranchisement of women are invited to attend the next meeting.

Vesper Club Dance.

One of the pleasant events of last week was the dance given by the Vesper Club on Friday evening, July 18. Among those present were Miss Ruth Maghee, of Columbus, Ohio, and Miss Dora Chandler, of Dallas, Texas; Miss Maude Lewis, Miss Evelyn Green, Miss Mary Anderson, Miss Lucy Hinman, Miss Lilloise Reed, Miss Martha Roper, Miss Katherine Perry, Miss Virginia Woodfin, Miss Josephine Smith, Miss Nell Walker, Miss Mildred Laird, Miss Dora Chandler, Miss Marie Dinkens, Miss Irene Sewell, Miss Virginia Standard, Miss Ruth Maghee, Miss Agnes Bell, Miss Ruth Atkinson, Miss Gladys Watkins, Miss Louise Mell, Miss Justine Henderson Miss Helen Billingsby, Miss Nina Brown, Miss Marie Ulmer, Miss Jessie Thompson, Miss Frances Springer, Messrs. L. H. Withers, E. M. Stephens, R. H. Atkinson, Clarence Trotti, J. H. Kelly, Dick Elkin, Fred Smith, Robert Ledsinger, Drew Swanson, Ralph Lee, Franklin Chalmers, Holland Symes, Linton Floyd, Marion Hamilton, Clarence Jordan, J. S. McCreight, Robert Caldwell, A. M. Dimmock, Ernest Acker, Don Aichison, Crawford Maddox, Clyde Mathis, Judson Willingham, Arthur Laird, J. J. Simpson, W. E. Simpson, Howard Lewis, Frank Kempton, Howard Thorn, A. C. Parks, Stewart Baird, Sterling Garwood, E. J. Band, H. R. Thombaugh, J. C. Rose, L. B. Rhodes, Mr. Cheshire, Guy Harper, J. N. Ewing, M. L. Barwald, W. G. W. Weems, W. B. Durette, G. H. Payne, C. L. Shillings. The chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. R. Y. Sanders and Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Brooks. Next dance will be given Aust 1. All members are requested to attend.

Suffrage Issue To Be Discussed.

The committee on arrangements will present a program at Taft Hall on Tuesday evening at 7:45 o'clock, when the woman suffrage issue will be discussed.

The meeting will be called to order and Dr. Percy J. Starnes will render a program of popular airs on the echo organ. As Dr. Starnes, one of the foremost organists in the world, is soon to leave Atlanta, and as the echo organ has never been heard before on a strictly public occasion, this will be a real treat. At 8:15 o'clock the speakers will be introduced by Mrs. Peel and will include, among many others, Mr. J. J. Spalding, Dr. Hughlett, R. L. Hope, Frank Rice, J. R. Smith, R. A. Broyles, E. R. Black, the Hon. Sam Lumpkin Olive, the Hon. R. H. Hardeman, the Hon. H. H. Swift, the Hon. W. L. Converse, the Hon. Louis E. Wisdom, Mrs. M. L. McLendon, Mrs. W. H. Felton, Mrs. F. S. Whiteside, Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, Miss Rosa Woodberry, Leonard J. Grossman and the Hon. Ernest Neal.

The public is invited and assured of an interesting evening. No matter how people feel about it, the women believe that such a discussion at this time will be welcomed by all thinking people.

Cowles-Weisiger.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Cowles announce the marriage of their daughter, Maury Lee, to Mr. Carroll Weisiger, of Louisville, Ky., the wedding taking place Saturday evening, July 19, at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents on West Peachtree street, Rev. Richard Orme Flinn officiating.

Although the engagement of these young people was known to a number of friends, their wedding comes as a surprise to them as it took place much sooner than was expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Weisiger left for a trip to Richmond, after which they will make their home in Louisville.

For Miss Robbins

Among the parties this week for Miss Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, who is visiting Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, was the box party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon at which Miss Margaret Ashford entertained, complimenting also her guest, Miss Fannie Neal Anderson, of Athens.

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Harry Stotesbury Cutter will give a bridge party for Miss Robbins and for Miss Anderson.

Miss Clifford West will compliment Miss Robbins and Miss Margaret Buckner, of Richmond, the guest of Miss Helen Jones, with a small tea at the Driving Club, inviting eight girls to meet them, Friday afternoon.

Next week Mrs. Allan is planning to have a large afternoon tea for her guest and for Mrs. Charles Dowman, of Birmingham. This party will be July 29, from 5 to 7 o'clock, at her home in Howard street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. B. Allan will entertain at the dinner-dance at the Capital City Country Club Thursday evening, July 31.

For Miss Nancy Reed.

Mis Nancy Reed, who has been visiting in Beaufort, N. C., for two months, has returned to Atlanta and is the guest of Mrs. George C. Speir, who is planning a series of parties in her honor. The first will be a swimming and supper party at the Capital City Country Club next Thursday. About the 10th of August Mrs. Speir and Miss Reed will leave for Atlantic City, Narragansett Pier and Philadelphia. While in Philadelphia they will be the guests of Mr. Milton Reed.

Atlantans at Warm Springs.

A number of the younger set are having a gay time at Warm Springs under the chaperonage of Mrs. Edwin Stewart. Among them are Misses Mary Stewart, Marion Dunson, Dolly Blalock, Grace Bloodworth, Helen Stewart, John Stewart, Thomas Crenshaw, Jr., and Bernard Neal.

Mr. and Mrs. Ovid Lombard, Mr. W. J. Peabody, Miss Carrie Peabody and Miss Katherine Wyly motored to Warm Springs Saturday to spend the week-end, returning home Monday morning.

McCracken-Hart.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Quarrels McCracken announce the marriage of their daughter, Pearl, to Mr. Henry Bentley Hart, on Saturday, July 19, at Waynesville, N. C.

Miss Story Entertains.

Miss Kathryn Story gave an "Up Jinks" party in compliment to her cousin, Miss Edith Camp, of Clarkston. Those present were Misses Edith Camp, Lois Collings, Ellen Ramey, Ruby Chapman, Maude Baker, Vivian Corum, Thelma Smith, Evelyn Jordan, Laura Binns, Louise Dent, Brucie Ellison, Louise Spratlin, Kathryn Story and Julia Story.

Miss Wilson's House Party.

One of the delightful occasions of the week was a house party in which Miss May Hall Wilson entertained at her country home, "Fern Rock," complimentary to her guest, Miss Ruth Slack, of LaGrange, Ga. The time was spent delightfully in tennis, swimming and motoring.

The party included Misses Slack, Linda Miller, Annie Winship Bates, Mary Gray Rushin, Lucile Hendricks, Leland Hughlett and Alice Wilson.

For Miss Carmichael.

Mrs. Clyde King will entertain at 5 o'clock tea Thursday afternoon at her home in Druid Hills for Miss Margaret Rushton's guest, Miss Clio Carmichael, of Jackson, Ga.

For Mrs. Clarke.

Mrs. J. F. Clarke, of Chattanooga, was tendered a matinee party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon by the members of her former bridge club. The guests were Mrs. F. S. Carlock, Mrs. John C. Reese and her guest, Miss Louise Gibson, of Rome; Mrs. Walter H. Harte, Mrs. LeRoy Webb, Mrs. E. B. Braswell, of Fitzgerald, and Miss Corinne Cunyus.

For Miss Boyce.

Mrs. Irene DeLaney Weathers will entertain 30 young people at a dance Tuesday evening for Miss Leslie Weathers' guest, Miss Nellie Boyce, of Columbus. Mrs. J. E. Spurlock will entertain twenty young people in honor of Miss Boyce and of Miss Lillian Daniel, of Hogansville, on Wednesday evening.

For Mrs. Dunbar.

Mrs. Hinton Baker entertained at a matinee party at the Forsyth Monday complimentary to Mrs. B. S. Dunbar, Jr., of Augusta, who is visiting Mrs. George Boynton.

The guests were Mrs. B. S. Dunbar, Jr., Mrs. George Boynton, Mrs. King, Mrs. Samuel Garlington, of Augusta; Mrs. Charles Boynton, Mrs. Robert B. Ridley, Jr., and Mrs. J. B. Robinson.

After the matinee the party had tea at the Hotel Ansley.

Mrs. Spalding Hostess.

Mrs. Hughes Spalding will entertain at tea at the Piedmont Driving Club Friday afternoon for Miss Mattie Wilson DuBose and Mrs. Edgeworth Lampkin, of Athens, who will arrive Thursday to be her guests for several days. Miss DuBose came Saturday and is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. DuBose, at the Majestic.

Miss Gordon Entertains.

Miss Kathryn Gordon gave a box party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Rogers Keese, a recent bride, and Miss Elizabeth Stubbs, of Shreveport, who is now visiting Miss Gordon after a visit to Miss Dodo White.

Twelve young women were entertained. After the matinee the party enjoyed tea at the Hotel Ansley.

Miss Ashford Hostess.

Miss Margaret Ashford entertained at a box party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon for her guest, Miss Fannie Neal Anderson, of Athens, and for Miss Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, the guest of Mrs. J. P. B. Allan.

The party included Misses Anderson, Dorothy Robbins, Helen Morris, Mrs. Harry Stotesbury Cutter and Mrs. J. P. B. Allan.

The guests had tea at the Cafe Denechaud after the matinee.

Lieutenant Mitchell Burdett, who has been at Gettysburg, has been ordered to Fort Niagara, N. Y., where he will remain until September, returning then to Fort McPherson.

Among those leaving Atlanta Sunday night for Toxaway, N. C., were Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, Miss Helen Dargan, Miss Eula Jackson, Miss Ada Alexander, Mr. Hal Hentz and Mr. Edward Alsop, of New York.

George W. Wilkins, who left Atlanta about June 15, is making a tour of the Far West and Canada. His first stop was at the Grand Canyon and he has since visited a number of points of interest in California, Oregon and Washington. He will return by Vancouver and Winnipeg, reaching home early in August.

FITE AT WAR ON CITY OFFICIALS

Judge Attacks Cartersville Administration and Brands Newspaper Publication Falsehoods.

CARTERSVILLE, July 21.—To a crowd that packed his courtroom Judge A. W. Fite spoke to-day denouncing the present city government and openly attacking C. M. Milam, chairman of the City School Board; Mayor Young and others. He charged nepotism in the conduct of the city affairs. He denounced publications regarding him in certain newspapers as "premeditated, willful, wicked and malicious falsehoods."

Judge Fite said that the fight had just begun and that Bartow's legislators would be called upon to introduce a bill to increase the City School Board from three to five members, and if they refused to do so, which he did not anticipate, he would continue to fight for the people's interest.

The speaking has deeply stirred the city and has created quite a sensation. Resolutions were passed indorsing Judge Fite's proposed bill to elect members of the School Board by the people, against reducing the corporate limits of the city of Cartersville and to establish a Recorder's Court for the city.

ONE MAN DIES AS HOT SPELL ENDS

Cool Breezes Following Rain Cause Temperature to Drop to 76 Monday Morning.

A cool breeze and a temperature of 76 at 8 o'clock Monday morning brought relief from a heat wave to which one man fell a victim and many others suffered intensely.

The victim was Patrick J. Boland, head baker at Rogers' Bakery, who resided at the home of Policeman Robert Braselton.

Boland returned to his home at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and complained to Mrs. Braselton of the intensity of the heat. Some time later T. Z. Gallant, a friend, entered Boland's room and found him lying across the bed, apparently asleep. Gallant did not disturb him, but returned again Sunday at noon. Boland was lying in the position, dead.

Boland's home is in Lynn, Mass., where he has a wife and three children.

The Coroner's verdict, following an inquest over the body Sunday afternoon, was death caused by the heat. Telegraphic instructions from Lynn are being awaited pending disposition of the body.

Showers which fell late Sunday afternoon reduced the intensity of the heat and, together with a breeze, brought about a pleasant night.

Let the Mothers of Little Girls Between the Ages of Six and Twelve Years Note the Splendid Savings on Girls' Dresses

Junior Department---Third Floor

This is perhaps the finest opportunity the season has brought!

For the dresses are those better sorts that mothers and daughters both like, and they are priced often at one-third, and in some instances, at one fourth of unusual prices.

There are some forty in all, divided into two lots.

The wise mothers will not wait long after eight o'clock to get to the Junior Department to-morrow.

None of these sent C. O. D.; none will be exchanged.

For $6.50, $8.50 & $9.50 Dresses

Sizes six to twelve years.

They are linens and ginghams, white linen and colored linens.

Hand embroidery is the rule instead of the exception in the trimmings—some show Irish crochet laces.

Belted dresses, with plaited skirts, low neck and short sleeves. Trim, smart affairs that show they are worth their former prices.

For $4.00, $5.00 & 6.00 Dresses

Sizes six to twelve years.

Of the better grade of percales and Anderson's Scotch ginghams—which tells that the colors are thoroughly dependable and that the patterns are the choicest and charmingest that are woven. You will find hand embroidery on these too, and novel touches of folds and buttons. Wish we could hold them up right here for you to see. Belted, plaited skirts.

Girls' Princess Slips of white nainsooks and lingerie cloth, variously trimmed with Valenciennes and torchon laces and embroideries, are reduced in this fashion for to-morrow---
Those formerly $3.00 are $2.00; those formerly $2.25 and $2.00 are $1.25; those formerly $1.25 are $1.00.

39c

For Children's 50c Dresses

Sizes one to six.

More of those best 50c ginghams, percale and lawn dresses at 39c.

Mothers who have bought before will welcome the news.

Choose from several styles—long-waisted effects and little straight dresses.

Prettier paterns and neater trimmings are not to be found in 50c dresses, seldom are they found in 65c dresses.

89c

For Boys' $1.00 & $1.25 Suits

Wash suits in sizes two to six years.

Of madras, percale and gingham, white and colors, and accordingly little suits for little "Buster" when he is on his good behavior and others for him to run and play in. Not a one but what will come smilingly from the laundry. Low neck and short sleeves.

IN THE HAUNTED CASTLE

SUDDENLY BOTH HEARD THE SOUND OF MUFFLED FOOTSTEPS, AS IF SOME ONE WERE RUNNING ON HEAVY CARPET, AND THEY KNEW THERE WAS NO CARPET IN ALL THE VAST STONE HALLS. BEFORE THEY COULD ATTEMPT TO LOCATE THE SOUND THERE CAME TWO THUDS, ONE LIGHT AND ONE HEAVY, AS IF OF A BLOW AND A FALL, AND THEN A LOW HEART CHILLING MOAN THAT SEEMED TO COME NOT FROM ONE OF ALL THE HALLS, BUT ALL OF THEM. THIS WAS IMMEDIATELY ANSWERED BY A MOAN THAT CAME UNMISTAKABLY FROM RUSTY. "I WANNA GO HOME! I WANNA GO HOME!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Moaning feebly, Rusty shook his gray head.

"I'se so scairt I don' remember nothin'."

"They're nothing but suits of armor. Stay on your pins and don't bump into me again. The next one of those rear-end collisions and I'm liable to let some moonlight into you. You've been treading on my heels every step I take and when I stop you bump into me."

"I'm powerful scairt I might lose you."

"A fine chance!" snorted his master. He swung the lantern about and peered into the corners of the apartment.

"Well, Rusty," he went on in his natural voice, "we've been through this old castle pretty thoroughly now from dungeon to tower, and not a sign of Duke or Prince or Jarvis else. Unless they pound or carry a smoky lantern. It's a clew, Rusty; it's a clew. We'll stick right here till we find out where it leads. I'll swear the Duke never went to Madrid, but came right here from the inn. Get away from me, I tell you!"

A Little Cheer.

He struck a match and resumed his examination of the fireplace, holding the light well inside.

"There's a fine chance for a fire. The chimney's clear. Now then, but up that little table and start a fire. You won't feel half so scared when you've got a good blaze behind you."

By virtue of his great weight Rusty reduced the old table to firewood by the simple process of sitting on it. As he was building the fire, Jarvis suggested that he would scout around a bit.

"Don't you do no scoutin' outside of this here room!" ordered the old darky, straightening up. Jarvis laughed and told him to go on with the fire. He sat down on the stone floor and began removing his shoe with many groans.

"Now, what's the matter? What's wrong with your shoe?"

"Tain't my shoe—it's my foot," grunted Rusty. "You know, when I was holdin' the hosses an' waitin' an' waitin' fer you to come out—dem guns went off and all dem hosses jumped right on me!"

"There were only two horses, Rusty," smiled the young man.

"I was countin' dey feet," grumbled the servant, as he bent over the fire once more. He had sufficiently recovered from his fright to be disgruntled and make pertinent addenda to his master's comments on the lay of the land.

"This way leads to the main gate," remarked Jarvis, thoughtfully, peering through the other door.

"That's where dat black thing followed me," grumbled Rusty. He appeared to locate every inch of the castle through its connection with some personal disaster.

The Death Trap.

"Well, there's been a black thing following me," retorted Jarvis, "treading on my heels every step I've taken. Him! And that door goes to the armory.

"That's where I fell down dem slippery stairs."

Suddenly Jarvis stopped and stared intently into a far corner beyond the fireplace. There was a small door partly opened, as though some one had pulled it hastily behind him as he darted through.

"That's it!" he exclaimed, triumphantly, darting forward. "Where can that lead——"

His foot went down suddenly through the floor. He hurled himself forward and the floor seemed to rise and strike him violently in the chest. The next instant he rolled to one side and was on his feet.

"My God!" he muttered brokenly, the cold sweat bathing his face. "My God! That was a close one!"

"Lordy, Marse Warren—wha' dat?" cried Rusty, starting to his feet. Warren's lantern had been dashed against the wall and he stood in the uncertain firelight.

"Get back!" he ordered sharply. Light that other lantern."

Rusty cautiously approached with the lighted lantern. Warren took it in his left hand and held out his right.

"Take a good grip, Rusty. Can you hold me?"

"Yes, sah!" Rusty crouched back and set himself.

Jarvis cautiously stepped out with his left foot. A four-foot strip of the floor sank under the light weight and the other end of the trap, the end nearest the wall, rose. If he had been walking at an ordinary gait nothing could have saved him. The speed of his rush and his remarkable agility carried forward far enough for the weight of his upper body to strike the rising end of the trap and thus shut it again.

"God! I thought so!" he murmured as he stepped back after a timid peep into the black pit below. He wiped his face and his hand trembled slightly for the first time that night. "Water and a long drop! No wonder people disappear in this castle. Good Lord! What if her brother went down there! Rusty! Whatever happens, keep clear of this. If you step on this you'll never see Kentucky again for sure!"

Rusty opened his ample lips, but before he could speak a groan came from beyond the wall they were facing. It sounded nearer and more human than ever. But it trailed off into a sound like the winds among the empty echoing towers.

"It certainly sounded like a groan," muttered Jarvis, tip-toeing cautiously around the trap toward the little door. "Shut up, Rusty!"

The faithful but terrified servitor was giving vent to sounds more dreadful than those that issued from the walls.

"Marse Warren! look out!" he begged.

The Portrait.

"Listen!" He stood for a few moments in silence, peering in at a little flight of stone steps that led up through the wall. Then he turned back to the fireplace.

"I guess it's the wind. This place is getting on our nerves."

"This warn't no wind, Marse Warren," protested Rusty, solemnly. "Ah hope to die if dat warn't a sure-nuff groan. An' ah wants to tell you somethin' else." He turned and stared accusingly at a large portrait of some grandee of Charles V.'s time which hung beside the broad steps that mounted to the corridor of the armory. "Hab you ever been in church or somewhere an' all of a sudden a feelin' come over you that there was eyes starin' at the back o' your hald? You just knowed it?—until you couldn' stan' it no longer and just had to turn 'round and see who 't was?"

"Why, yes, Rusty," agreed Jarvis wonderingly. "I've had that happen. Why?"

"That's just the way I feel now—like they was eyes lookin' at me. You see dat picture? Seems like dat feller was lookin' at me—like he'd step right out o' de frame; or dem two battleship boogies"—he pointed to the knights beside the staircase—"jump right down here!"

"It's been a good many hundred years since those boys jumped, Rusty," smiled his master. Sh-h! Listen!" There was the sound of swift footsteps again. Jarvis softly cocked his pistol. "Somebody running—coming this way."

Again it ended in the two thuds, like a blow and fall. And all was still. Jarvis swore.

"I wanna go home," moaned the darky.

His master set his teeth. "What do you know about that?" He had walked swiftly to the little door in the wall and was peering in.

"I don't know nothin' about."

"I thought so!" exclaimed Jarvis and he whistled softly, as if in utter amazement. Rusty's curiosity again overcame his terror and he drew near. Besides, it was more comfortable in the shelter of his master's .45.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Rusty, this man with the smoky lantern has been up these stairs!"

"You ain't a-goin' up?" protested the old darky.

"I am not!" was the emphatic reply, "cause the Duke or some of his men are probably at the top of the stairs with a long gun—and I'm no hook hero."

"Supposin it am the Prince," suggested Rusty, with awe.

"Well, suppose it is the Prince. He might blow my head off because he doesn't know what I came for. And if it's some one else—they'll blow my head off because they do know."

Without warning the sound of the running feet reached them again, but now it seemed to come from every quarter of the surrounding area. Jarvis, with Rusty cowering at his elbow, backed out into the center of the room, the long blue barrel of his revolver making quick play in all directions.

A Bachelor's Diary

He Is Mistaken for a Kidnapper

By MAX.

JULY 1.—Our days are so monotonous that if I were to attempt to set down in detail what happens, it would sound like a chapter from Genesis: And Arpasha begat Shelah, and Shelah begat Eber, and Eber begat Joktan, and Joktan begat Almodad, etc., etc., an endless chain of begats.

For I would relate in the same sing-song strain that a bath in the lake followed getting up and breakfast follows the bath, and a nap follows breakfast, and lunch follows the nap, and a walk in the woods follows the lunch, etc., etc., a monotony that is growing pleasing to me now that I have learned to find thrills of excitement in Mrs. Allen's daily report at breakfast that she found a rat in the trap. I do not recall a market report in six months previous that has excited me more.

Manette is growing brown and fat and sturdy, and with no one near to remind us that she has a delicate stomach, all such trouble has passed away, proving my contention that we keep our physical ailments alive by recognition of their existence. If Richards could see us eating our picnic lunches off a log in the woods, stopping occasionally to brush off an inquisitive ant or a ladybug that is lost from home, and regarding these little creatures of another world as friends, instead of germ-infested enemies, she would steal the child from me and bring suit in the court charging that I am not fit to be its guardian.

Her Future.

"I am convinced," I said gravely to Manette this afternoon, taking a chicken sandwich from her hands, for she is always the hostess at our picnics, "that a man-cared-for child is healthier than one that is cared for by a woman. She is neither nagged nor pampered so much. Now if Richards were here she would make you throw away that sandwich because there is an ant on it—brush it off, my dear—and she would worry you because there is a streak of dirt on your cheek and a rip in your dress. I don't. I just let you forget all those things and be happy. I never want you, my baby, to be so much of a woman that you can't enjoy the Lord's big outdoors because you have left your powder rag at home. You must rise above yourself, little one."

She looked at me gravely with those big blue eyes, and then, robbing her sandwich of the meat that she might temporarily rid the brown-eyed pup of the look of longing he had fastened on her, said, "When I get big, I won't be a woman at all, I'll just be your wife."

"How I wish you were old enough," I replied fervently.

That would be a glorious thing, Diary. To take a child and train her in the ways one desired, and then marry her when she is grown.

"You will marry some nice young man," I argued, "and go away and leave your Uncle Max. It is the way of nature, and I can't keep you always."

I suppose I unconsciously sighed, for in another moment she was on my lap, rubbing a greasy sandwich down the back of my neck, while she protested between hugs and crumby kisses that she never intended to leave me, unless, and it gave me a twinge to hear her say it, "Lisbeth sent for her."

I was holding her tight with one hand, and with the other was trying to make the brown-eyed pup leap over our heads for a piece of chicken when I heard the sound of approaching horses, and a girl's merry laugh.

There was an abrupt turn in the bridal path near us, and a minute later they appeared in view, all unconscious of three interested listeners, for the pup had also paused in his play to cock wise-looking ears their way.

"I don't," the girl was saying, "believe in the kind of love you talk about. It would make of woman a sort of domestic chattel, like a cook-stove or a table. The fundamental principles of liberty—here her attention was attracted to us by the pup's shrill bark—I think that term, "fundamental principles," made him fear a procession of women were coming—and she stopped abruptly, staring at us with eyes that were first astonished, and that changed to admiration when she saw Manette.

An Admirer.

"What a beautiful child," she said, swinging lightly from her horse, and coming across the grass toward us, her horse following, with his nose pressed lovingly against her shoulder.

"Whose is she," impatiently, "and what is she doing here in these wilds alone with a man like you?"

My disguise was plainly perfect. I hadn't shaved in three weeks, and wore that morning a suit of Allen's overalls, for we contemplated a jaunt across the lake in an improvised raft. I laughed. I do not know when I was more amused.

"That," I replied, making no attempt to rise or remove my hat, "is not the affair of every wayfarer on the road."

She colored angrily. "I intend to make it my affair. Look at her shoes with holes in the toes, and the scratches on her poor little arms and legs. You poor baby," getting down on her knees, "has that man been abusing you?"

I do not think at first Manette comprehended what the girl meant, and when it dawned upon her, her indignation was fine to see.

"I am not a poor child," she cried, "I am a rich child; everyone says so. Nurse says I'll be worth millions some day; and I don't want them. I want only my Uncle Max!"

I think there flashed across her brain a recollection of the woman who kidnaped her, for in a frenzy she threw her arms around my neck and screamed: "Make her go 'way! Make her go 'way! I'm afraid; I'm afraid!"

I was amused no longer, for the child was plainly suffering. Rising to my feet, I lifted my hat and said very coldly:

"You are trespassing on private property. Please ride on."

"We will go," she answered, angrily, "but this doesn't end here. I will find out who this Uncle Max is the child wants, and take steps to restore her to her guardian. She plainly doesn't belong to a man like you."

He Laughs.

Then, though Manette still whimpered I threw back my head and laughed till the woods rang with it. I had a vision of what my friends and associates in the city would say if they knew some pert young suffragette was preparing to have me arrested for a tramp and abductor of small children. It even flashed across my mind that if those men afflicted with the kind of softening of the brain that fits them for getting out the Sunday papers knew of it, they would give it three pages, with pictures of all of us, including the pup and the sandwich Manette still held in her grimy fingers. They might even give a picture in magnified proportions of the ant that this little baby-heiress to millions had brushed off her bread.

I laughed so long that Manette stopped whimpering, and lifting her face from my shoulder said in tones that breathed defiance, "Go 'way, please. I want my Uncle Max."

The girl turned to her escort, who had jumped from his horse when I began to laugh, and said something I did not catch. Evidently his reply restrained her from tearing the child from my arms, for with a protesting air she suffered herself to be helped to her horse, and they rode away.

The last look I had of her was of a face crimson with indignation and anger. The last she had of me was of a man doubled up with laughter.

"Manette," I said gravely, taking my share of the lemon cake, "those briar scratches you got on your arms and legs yesterday are giving your Uncle Max a bad name."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET YOUR MOTHER DECIDE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young man with whom I have been keeping company for quite some time. We have broken off friedship for a while, and my mother strongly objects to his return. I love him. Can you tell me what is best to do? H. V. E.

Mother always knows best, particularly when the girl is very young, which I am judging is your case.

If he is worthy of you he will wait. Believe me, my dear, if he is the man set aside to be your mate he will not be easily discouraged.

THAT IS HIS PLACE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you kindly enlighten me as to whether it is proper to thank the gentlemen after returning form a show or a ball? BABY.

The good old-fashioned courtesy makes all the pleasure his. He owes you the delight he has had in your company.

LET YOUR MOTHER KNOW.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am sixteen and deeply in love with a man two years my senior. For six months he took me home from school, and after I was graduated he expressed his love for me. He has given me a ring. The only thing that makes me hesitate is that we are of a different religion. ESTELLE.

Your mother should know of your love affair at once. Not only because of the difference in religion, but because of your extreme youth.

DUTY, MY DEAR.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been engaged to a young man two years. The man is 33 years old. We love each other very much. Owing to our aged mothers, we think it's impossible to get married, as he is the only support of his mother and I am the only child left at home to take care of my mother, who is 85. Between love and duty, which will we do? M. S.

Your mothers are so old that your time of waiting will be very short. I am sure if either of you failed in your duty you would live to regret it. Unless you can marry and take your mothers with you, which is not advisable, postpone your marriage till you can enter it feeling that your happiness is not purchased with another's woe.

LET THE MATTER END.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had the pleasure of meeting a young man at a public dance. He asked to see me home and I consented. He made an appointment with me that we both kept. When he left me he failed to set a definite time for a next meeting, saying he would try to visit a place where I frequented. Now, do you think that I should have anything to do with him in the form of writing, etc., or drop him, as I am positive that he never will visit this place? ANXIOUS.

You are very sure he will not keep any appointments he makes, so why concern yourself about him? Let the acquaintance drop before it is more serious.

No Tunes Allowed.

Not long ago a certain brass band, which shall be nameless, was engaged to play at a local village feast. On the way there the conducter suggested that they should "have a tune," but the driver of the wagonette at once objected to the project.

"No toons while I drive," he remarked.

"But, why?" persisted the conductor. "Surely the horses wouldn't run away?"

"No," said the driver, "they wouldn't."

"Then why object?"

"Simply becos the poor beggars could not run away if they tried," was the grim retort. "Their running away days is over, an' so long as I drives you ain't a-going to take no mean advantage of 'em. That's why I sez no toons."

The conductor subsided, and there were "no toons" on that journey.

The Temper Curse

By DOROTHY DIX.

THE real problems of life are not the big problems, nor are its tragedies the great sorrows of existence. The conundrums that nobody can answer are offered by just little everyday complications, and the things that break our hearts, and wreck homes, are not great sins, or afflictions, but small, miserable, sordid worries and aggravations that blot out the sunshine and take all the joy out of life for us.

As an example of this I submit the case of one of my correspondents. She is a good, conscientious woman, married to a good man, and they have had a happy home. Recently, however, the woman's mother has died and she had to offer the shelter of her home to a young sister, a beautiful and talented girl of 20, who has the temper of a virago.

The girl has nowhere else to go, for although she is amply fitted by her abilities to support herself, she can keep no situation because of her uncontrolled temper and tongue. To have to support her is a burden on her sister, but the worst feature of it is that the girl has made a peaceful and happy home such a storm center that it is wrecking it, and the woman's husband is very naturally threatening to send the sister away.

Fears the Worst.

The poor wife and sister is between two fires. She fears the worst for her sister if the girl, young and beautiful and headstrong, is deprived of all guardianship and restraint, and even of shelter, and at the same time she feels the injustice of sacrificing her husband and her home to the girl's tantrums, and she asks what she had best do under the circumstances.

I side with the husband. I think that there is nothing else in the world in which the most of us show ourselves so cowardly as in the craven, meachin' way in which we give into people with tempers and let them ride roughshod over us. Before a redheaded temper and a venomous tongue we are all arrant cowards, and that is why the possessors of tempers don't try to control them.

Among my acquaintances there is a certain child who holds the world's championship for crying. She shrieks and shrieks until she maddens everybody about her. Not long ago, catching her for once in a smiling mood, I said, "Mabel, why do you cry so much?" She looked at me in round-eyed amazement and calmly replied, "Why, if I didn't cry, how would I get anything I want?"

That is the philosophy of the individuals with high tempers. They know that the balance of us are so terrified at the thought of their raging that we will give into them without an argument; that we will walk on eggs to try to keep from ruffling their sensibilities, and that we will put up with any injustice or imposition rather than go through a scene with them.

So They Rage.

Therefore they rage. It's the easiest way to get what they want, for the person without a temper is no more fitted to cope with the individual with a temper than an infant in arms is to engage in a prize fight with Jack Johnson.

Every one of us knows some great, big, strong, splendid man who is so afraid of his wife's temper that he lies to her about having to see some man downtown if he wants to stay out a few minutes longer than the curfew she rings on him, and who doesn't dare to even treat an old woman friend with common civility if he meets her when wife is along.

All of us know women who live in such terror of their husband's temper that they tremble at the very sound of his keys in the front door, and who spend their lives in falsifying household accounts, and trying to conceal everything that happens in the household that could possibly vex their violent spouses.

Ordinarily these men and women are not cowards. They have the courage to lead a charge in battle, or face death without a tremor. They even have the moral courage to endure their hell-on-earth of being married to a high tempered wife or husband, yet before that temper they become abject worms of the dust, without a fight in them.

So far as I know, no psychologist has ever attempted to explain the fear we have of the tempers of those with whom we must live. Perhaps the struggle for existence takes so much out of us that we have no strength left with which to wage a perpetual battle at home. Perhaps we have a sense of decency that the high tempered lack which keeps us from retaliating in kind. Perhaps no real lady or gentleman is fitted to deal with the woman or man who has not the finer instincts that consideration for other people and self-mastery give.

At any rate the fact remains that we all do stand in such shaking, quivering fear of the high tempered that we encourage them in giving full reign to their evil dispositions. This makes us to a degree accessory before the crime. We need more grit and backbone in dealing with them, and it's dollars to doughnuts that if the evil tempered knew that they would be chucked out of house and home unless they controlled themselves they would curb their passions.

Temper should be made the first cause for divorce.

If every woman was perfectly aware that she would have to be gentle and amiable in order to hold down her job, and have a husband to pay her bills for her instead of having to hustle to support herself, there would be no more shrewish women, nor men who had heart failure every time they thought of what their wives would say to them when they got home.

If every man knew that he would have to answer to a divorce summons and pay alimony if he didn't make himself pleasant and agreeable at home, we should have no more domestic bullies and tyrants who talk to their wives as they would not dare speak to any husky man who could knock them down.

And if all of our sisters, and our cousins, and our aunts, and our mothers-in-law, who come and live on us, and who keep us dodging their ways, and trying to keep from precipitating an avalanche of fury and abuse on our hearthstones, were perfectly sure that they would either have to be good-natured or get out, we should see such a sweetening up of dispositions as the world has never known.

For the person with the temper is never anything but a selfish bully. We could call his, or her bluff, if we had the nerve to do it.

Just Sampling It.

For a long time the pale-faced man regarded the sandwich on the counter before him suspiciously. At length he carefully lifted off the top slice of bread, took out a piece of ham, ate it, and replaced as before. In a few seconds he again removed the top piece, extracted another piece of meat this time, and replaced the top again; and again the performance was repeated until the ham had gone. A bystander tapped him on the shoulder.

"Excuse me," said the inquisitive one, "but why don't you eat up your sandwich, instead of picking at it in that fashion?"

"Well, you see," whispered back the other, glaring around suspiciously. "I can not very well eat it. It isn't my sandwich."

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE long winter and spring months devoted by Daysey Mayme Appleton to instructing spinsters in the care of infants, to fighting for the ballot for mothers, and to relegating to his place among the worms of the dust that monster called Man, had taken the starch out of her ambition and the curl out of her hair.

She realized that though it would fall with a crash fatal to its inhabitants, she must drop the world she was carrying on her shoulders.

She must go away from kin and friends, seeking some holy spot of solitude where she might renew the fagged impulses of her soul, and decide what degree of blonde would be most becoming to her for next season.

"I am going to spend the summer at Lake Skodunk," she announced one afternoon to her friends.

"Oh," replied seventeen of them, "how nice! We will go with you!"

Then immediately they began to seek for railroad pamphlets telling about the beauties of Lake Skodunk, to write for reservations at the hotel, and to pack their trunks.

Daysey Mayme is an easy mark among her friends. All women are easy marks among their friends. Or else they have no friends! There was only one thing to do: She must not offend her friends; she must give up Lake Skodunk.

She had found at the last moment, she said when seeing them on their train, that she could not go. She might join them later.

Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea looked good on the map. "I will go to Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea," she said, wearily, to a third cousin, "where my soul may commune alone with the sad sea waves."

The third cousin looked interested. She hurried away to tell the other kin.

That evening seven cousins, five uncles, eleven aunts and nine in-laws called Daysey Mayme to the telephone. "We think," each one cried, "that it would be fine to have a family reunion at Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea, and we are all going with you."

The next day Daysey Mayme Appleton was missing, and no one could learn her whereabouts. She had pulled down the blinds to give the impression that the house was abandoned for the summer and had locked herself in.

Every morning she dressed while balancing on one foot on a piano stool in a very small closet, to simulate the experience in the dressing car on a Pullman, and every night she slept on the pantry shelf.

"In this way," she said, putting a cinder in her eye, "I experience all the joys of travel and escape my dear relatives and friends."

MRS. MANGES ESCAPES OPERATION

How She Was Saved From Surgeon's Knife by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mogadore, Ohio.—"The first two years I was married I suffered so much from female troubles and bearing-down pains that I could not stand on my feet long enough to do my work. The doctor said I would have to undergo an operation, but my husband wanted me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound first. I took three bottles and it made me well and strong, and I avoided a dreadful operation. I now have two fine, healthy children, and I can not say too much about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. Lee Manges, R. F. D. 10, Mogadore, Ohio.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

A Charming Summer Gown Fully Described by Olivette

HERE is a little summer costume that may be truly called a "confection," though we generally prefer not to use that gastronomic term in the description of even the dreams of the sartorial realm.

White or shell pink is the foundation of heavy grade china or shantung silk. There is an eight-inch slit over the left ankle, and all about the hem tiny pink wild roses are set at equal intervals. The overskirt is of wide shadow lace, falling to the knees at the front and lengthening some eight inches under the caught-in drapery at the back. A garland of the roses peeks from under this, and another surmounts the wide girdle and rises to meet the square-cut vest of filmy white chiffon. Both waist and puff sleeves are of the lace, and another garland of the dear little wild roses nestles under the sleeve at the elbow.

The hat is a great round white Neapolitan, covered with frill after frill of white accordion plaited maline, with a monster pink rose crushing in all the filminess at the left.

Dainty white slippers and silk stockings, and a filmy parasol with a wide border of chiffon printed in great pink roses, complete an absolutely ideal summer costume.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

Walker had accompanied his wife on an excursion to the realms of bargains, and in the enormous building, with its many departments, had become separated from his better half.

For an hour at least he remained lounging impatiently at the junction of many ways, where lifts, stairs and passages met, and then, tired and angry, he approached an irreproachable shopwalker.

"Sir," he said to the frock-coated and suave attendant, in tones of righteous indignation, "I've lost my wife."

Back came the reply, with stunning force: "Third floor over the bridge for the mourning department!"

* * *

It was in a country village that the swain had proposed for the hand of the village beauty, and had been accepted.

He had bought the engagement ring and was hurrying to the home of his adored one. A friend stopped him to make inquiry concerning his haste.

"Hullo, there, Bob! Is there a fire?"

"Yes," replied Bob, with what breath he had left, "my heart's on fire and I'm going now to ring the village belle."

Peter Burrowes, a well-known member of the Irish bar, was on one occasion counsel for the prosecution at an important trial for murder. Burrowes had a severe cold and opened his speech with a box of lozenges in one hand and in the other a small pistol bullet by which the man had met his death. Between the pauses of his address he kept supplying himself with a lozenge. But at last, in the very middle of a high-falutin' period, he stopped. His legal chest heaved, his eyes seemed starting from his head, and in a voice tremulous with fright he exclaimed:

"Oh-h-h! Gentlemen, gentlemen, I've swallowed the bul-let!"

"Mr. Chairman," said the orator, who had already occupied the platform for twenty minutes, amid many interjections from the audience. "Mr. Chairman, may I appeal on a point of order? There is really so much resultory conversation going on in parts of the hall that it is impossible for me to hear a word I am saying."

Voice from the back of the hall: "Don't be downhearted. You're not missing much."

A Pledge of Spinisterhood

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM a young man of nineteen," writes X. Y. Z., "and in love with a girl of seventeen who has signed an old-maid pledge, about which she seems to be serious. I have been paying her attention for the past six months, and would like to know whether to continue."

Following is the pledge of spinsterhood which this wise old dame of seventeen has signed:

"We, the undersigned, vow in all good faith that we shall, for the convenience of ourselves and the good of the world, live as Old Maids.

"We, the said undersigned, do agree that we will work honestly and faithfully until, if our lives are spared, we have accumulated a sum requisite for purchasing and maintaining a small house in the suburbs, where the said undersigned shall reside.

"We shall have freedom to visit, entertain, etc., such of our friends as we desire. There is to be no restriction, except that we shall deport ourselves in all manner, and under all circumstances, as ladies.

"It is also agreed by the undersigned that when we reach the age of 40, with consent of the majority, we shall each adopt a child from the asylum.

"If any of this charmed and secret circle should commit the grievous error of marrying, the penalty will be expulsion from the aforesaid circle, and she MUST HAND HER FIANCE THIS PLEDGE BEFORE THE COMMITTEE, TO BE TORN UP BY THE SAID FIANCE."

No Sense of Humor.

The young have no sense of humor. It requires adversity, humiliation, disappointment and grief to make one philosophical, and philosophy is the parent of wit. If the young had a sense of humor, X. Y. Z. would carry this pledge about with him that he may have something to smile about when things go wrong, and the girl who has signed it would laugh herself to death.

What does it amount to? Less than the paper it is written on!

Imagine, if you can, a lot of kittens agreeing what they will do and be when they are old tabby cats!

Conceive, if you can, of the kind of a girl who will deny herself the frivolities of youth, the pretty ribbons and feathers and clothes, the theater, the dance, the love that is looking her way, that she may some day have a home in which she will enjoy the glorious privilege of shriveling up as an old maid!

No girl makes that pledge for herself, my dear young man. She looks at the other girls, and sees that they are plain, and not so attractive as herself. "They know they will be old maids," every girl says, "and are making their plans so that it will look as if they WANTED to be. Of course, I'll sign the pledge. It may please them and won't hurt ME!"

And every girl signs, each with the secret assurance that SHE will not be an old maid.

They agree to deny themselves, that they may purchase a home. This is the story of every good woman's life: A self-denial in the hope that some day she may own a home, but it is a self-denial that is a joy because it has its origin in LOVE. A woman loves a man and sentences herself to a lifetime of self-denial when she marries. She loves her children, and thereafter knows not what the word "SELF" means.

Wait Awhile.

She pinches and skimps and scrapes and makes over with "Love's old sweet song" ringing in her ears, and knows neither discouragement nor regret. But can anyone imagine that the same noble effort and sacrifice are possible when the goal is a home where a lot of spinsters may abide in about as much peace as so many tabby cats?

Believe me, my dear young man, your sweetheart would work harder to stay out of such a place than to enter it. Let me assure you that she would know neither peace of mind nor rest if she thought for a moment that a home with no one in it but WOMEN was to be her refuge.

If she thinks so now, it is because she is 17. When she is 27, she will be in a panic because her steps seem to be turning that way.

Encourage your sweetheart. Let her know that when she is safely within the walls of this retreat, you will drive by with your wife some day and perhaps name one of your babies for her.

It will prove a sure cure.

-:- The Amulets -:-

A Tragic Short Story Complete.

THE cattle dealer opened the door of the taproom of the roadside inn and ordered a liter of cider.

"You must be thirsty, Brunier, or you would not order a whole liter," said the innkeeper.

"You bet I am, but I can afford a thirst on a day like this, when I have four thousand francs in my pocket. Four nice, crisp brown bills, and almost half of it is clear profit."

"But are you not afraid to walk home alone with that much money in your pocket?"

"Afraid! With fists and arms like mine! Not a bit of it, and besides I wear two amulets guaranteed to guard you against any danger."

He opened his shirt and showed two greenish-looking copper medals hanging on a string on his broad breast.

"Look at these," he said, "this one is the holy Benoit's, the patron of all travelers, and the other St. Antoine's, the protector of the poor. These saints have never failed, and I feel as safe as if I were already at home, though it will be a dark night to-night."

The innkeeper laughed.

"Is it really possible," he asked, "that a sensible fellow like you, who gets the best of everybody in any deal, can really believe in two old copper medals?"

"Well, I do believe in them," said Brunier, "you have to believe in something; you surely do yourself."

"I don't believe in anything," said the innkeeper, and offered his customer a drink before he started.

He Starts.

"Well, I don't mind; I still feel a little dusty in my throat."

Half an hour later when the sun had set and darkness was setting in, Brunier started homeward. He carried his hat in his hand and the evening wind played with his heavy dark curls, cooling his hot head. The innkeeper stood looking after him with a frown on his face and his lips pressed tightly together. Then he called his sons.

"Did you see that big fellow?" he asked. "That is Brunier, the cattle dealer, going home from market."

The two boys looked like retrievers scenting the game.

"You understand what I mean," said the father. "And if you two are not fools you will cut across the fields to the crossroads near the forester's house. You will get there at least a half hour ahead of Brunier. In two hours you ought to be back here with 4,000 francs in your pockets."

The brothers did not waste any time. The younger armed himself with a heavy crowbar and the older with a hunting knife.

"Do you think we ought to kill him?" asked the younger.

The innkeeper was silent for a moment, then he nodded.

* * *

How long Brunier had been lying there he did not know. He felt sore all over and felt the blood trickling from his forehead. His coat was torn, the pockets rifled, his heart was beating hard against his ribs, and his arms were so stiff that he could scarcely move them.

After many attempts he succeeded in getting on his feet, and when he had bathed his face in a spring close by he felt much better and began to think of what he ought to do. He was not strong enough to reach home so he decided to return to the inn.

Blood was still flowing from the gaping wound, but he walked ahead without minding. It was quite clear to him who had played the dirty trick on him. It must be some cattle-driver or woodchopper. But, thank God, he was still alive and had his money yet. He pulled forth his amulets and kissed them fervently, thanking the saints who had so wonderfully preserved his life.

* * *

"So you expect me to believe you did not find any money, you scoundrels," roared the innkeeper to his sons.

"No. And still we searched everywhere, in the pockets, coat, vest, shirt and stockings."

"Then you are bigger fools than I thought you were," the father shouted.

Suddenly there was a knock at the window. The door was opened, and a ghastly silence followed the loud quarrel when the bloodstained Brunier entered. The two sons turned pale as ghosts and beads of cold perspiration stood on their foreheads. The innkeeper stood motionless in the middle of the floor staring at his guest.

Brunier dropped into a chair and gased: "Give me a glass of brandy, and I shall be all right. Somebody tried to kill me attacking me from behind, but they did not succeed. I am still alive and have my money yet. Unfortunately I did not get a chance to see who they were."

The three men breathed easier. He had not recognized them, so the matter was not serious.

"Well," said Brunier to the inn keeper, "perhaps you will believe in my amulets now."

The Hiding Place.

He did not notice the innkeeper's vicious scowl.

"But where did you hide your money, Brunier?" he asked in a trembling voice.

"Inside the lining of my hat."

Brunier then asked for a room and said he wanted to sleep.

"I'll give you my own bed," said the innkeeper, and conducted him to a room above the taproom. Brunier undressed and went to bed, but could not sleep. His wound was very painful, so he decided to go down and get some oil for a dressing. In the darkness he felt his way and was about to open the door of the taproom when he heard somebody mention his name. He listened, and what he heard made him shiver. He had to sit down on the step not to fall. They were planning to kill him yet.

He sneaked back to his room. Flight was out of the question, but he would sell his life dearly. He had no weapon, not even his cane, which he had left below, but in a cupboard he found a half-filled siphon of seltzer, a dreadful weapon in the hand of a determined man.

He posted himself behind the door and waited. A few moments later he heard sneaking steps on the creaking stairs. It was the innkeeper. He stopped a moment on the top step and then opened the door. As he was approaching the bed the siphon came down on his head and he dropped without a sound.

"You have got what you deserved," said Brunier. Then he picked up his hat and ran toward the village, while the two sons were busy digging a grave for his body in the garden.

It was almost daylight when he reached the village and told what had happened. An hour later the house was surrounded by gendarmes. They found the two boys still digging in the garden.

In the room above the innkeeper was found. He confessed his crime before he died.

Some time later Brunier had two gold cases made for the amulets which ad twice saved his life.

Professional Rivalry.

Everything in the street was dim and quiet, for the thoroughfare was in a highly respectable neighborhood, and the hour was 2 a. m. In fact, save for a stray, wandering cat, and a constable, now rounding a corner in the far distance, there were no signs of life or animation anywhere.

William Sikes stepped out from the shadow of a friedly tree, glanced furtively around him, and then assisted Tom Crooke, his bosom friend and partner, to alight from the drawing room window of No. 63.

"Well, old pal, what luck?" he whispered.

"No luck at all," growled Tom. "The bloke what likes there is a lawyer."

William looked apprehensive.

"Then 'ow much 'ave you lost?" he asked.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

They Would Get Along Somehow

WHEN the boss sent for Jennie to come to his private office he told her the old story about it being the dull season and that he would have to let her go at the end of the week, and when she reminded him that he had always kept her before during the dull season he told her that he had noticed a decided lack of interest in her work compared to the way she used to work, and, besides, that he had heard stories about her being out with men at night, etc.

So Jennie was sure that her former girl friend had kept her word about getting even with Jennie for—as she thought—stealing her fellow away from her.

Coming out of the office, she wanted to cry, but held in so as not to give the girl the satisfaction of seeing her. As it was, she thought she noticed a flicker of a satisfied smile on the girl's face.

What now of paying the weekly instalments on her clothes—and they were the only ones she had—and what of the money that was so badly needed at home? When Jennie reached home, her friend, the boarding house keeper, was surprised to see her so early, and asked her what was the matter, and when Jennie told she had been "let out" at the office, the good woman, instead of deriding Jennie for losing her position, tried to sympathize with her and took her head on her breast, saying they would get along SOMEHOW until Jennie could get another job. But in her heart she didn't see how they could.

Jennie went up to her room and, flinging herself on the bed, had a good cry. When she quieted down and thought it all over she remembered the fellow she had been out with and his offer to furnish up a flat for her. She shrank at the mere thought of it, but wondered if it wouldn't be the EASIEST WAY at that.

.:. The Head Waitress .:.

By HANK.

"WHAT'S this I hear about you and Marie having a date?" asked the Head Waitress of the Steady Customer in the Cafe L'Enfant.

"Nothing to it," he replied. "Where did you get it?"

"From Mr. Flakes, the manager," said the Head Waitress, "and he told me he had it straight, too. He said that Marie asked for an hour off so she could get all dolled up to go out with you. Of course, it ain't none of my business, and——"

"Cut it out," interrupted the Steady Customer. "Mr. Flakes is kidding you, or Marie is kidding him. Not that I wouldn't dearly love to take both you and Marie out any time, but I'm getting too old to go gallivanting around with two such beauteous dames."

"I guess Marie was kidding," said the Head Waitress. "All them cashiers is great kidders, especially the blondes. You see, every guy that goes up to the desk hands out something foolish while he's paying his check, and Marie has to take their money with one hand and wave to them with the other or they'd be broken-hearted. I don't see much nourishment in it myself, but all those poor boobs act as if one smile from the cashier had taken ten years off their age, and they go out simpering like a lot of love-sick swines."

"Swains, I suppose you mean," corrected the Steady Customer.

"Have it your own way," said the Head Waitress, "you literary guys is great sticklers for correct pronouncements, ain't you? Well, I'm glad to hear you ain't fallen for no blonde because I've taken an interest in you and I'd hate to see you going nutty over a pair of big eyes and a golden dome. Not that Marie ain't a nice girl, and one of the nicest I ever seen, but she shouldn't be wasting her time with any of you newspaper guys."

"What's the matter with us?" asked the Steady Customer. "I'm surprised to hear you talk that way, Louise."

"Are you?" she said. "Well, long ago in the dim, distant past, I showered my young and innocent affections on one of you literary blokes, and for a time I was in the seventh heaven of happiness. He used to write me poems, too, real love ones. I remember one that went something like this:

"Louise, Louise, you little tease,
I'm really mad about you;
You say you truly love me, dear,
I'd hate to ever doubt you;
Some day, we'll married be, and then
Our lives we'll link together
And travel down the broad highway
No matter what the weather."

"Pretty good," said the Steady Customer.

"Oh, yes, I raved about it," said the Head Waitress, "until I found out that he was traveling down the 'broad highway' with about nine others."

"But that's no reason why you should be down on all literary lights," exclaimed the Steady Customer.

"A child once stung, never goes back to the beehive, as Kipling says," replied Louise, "and believe me, Kipling was right."

Nil Desperandum.

Percy Parkington arose and brushed the dust from his knees. Then, drawing himself up to his full height, he gazed resentfully upon the farm of Miss Muriel Muggins, who nonchalantly fanned herself the while.

"Very well, Miss Muggins," came in bitter tones from Percy. "Oh, very well! You have spurned me, it is true! Indeed, you have spurned me twice! But, though despair eats my heart, I shall not die! I mean to go into the busy world. I will fight! I will win! My name shall become known and my riches shall become envied—"

"Pardon me for interrupting you, Mr. Parkington," interjected Miss Muggins, "but when you have accomplished all that you may try me again."

Couldn't Understand It.

Local "Terrier:" "Well, uncle, how do I look as a soldier?"

Farmer Giles: "Foine, my boy! But blessed if Oi can think 'ow yer git them twisted trousers on!"

D. MANCHESTER LEADS CONTEST; MURPHY DROPS

Americus Player Jumps to First Place in Popularity Race; Jordan Is Second.

HATS off to Dick Manchester! The Americus player is now leading the Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian's contest to decide the most popular player in the Empire State League. This is the first time Manchester has been on top since this race started.

Otto Jordan, the Valdosta manager, has passed Herbert "Pat" Murphy and is second. Murphy is third in the race. "Goat" Holliday, Waycross' first baseman, has dropped to fourth place. Four thousand five hundred votes separate the first four players.

The margin between Jordan and Manchester is but slight. Votes poured in for these players yesterday, and both took turns in taking the lead. While the coupons were piling in for these two, the Murphy rooters must have been resting, as very few coupons were received for the Thomasville shortstop. He ranks third at the present time, and will have a hard time regaining his old position unless his admirers get busy at once.

Manchester Is Hero.

Manchester, however, is the hero of the contest. The Baseball Popularity Editor stated several days ago that this player was the dark horse in the contest and was looking for something big to happen. Not that he had any inside information, but the steady way in which the votes kept coming in for Dick made him think so.

H. Champlin, Dudley, B. Wilder, Mutis Gray and W. Walker also hold positions where a great deal of hustling might send them romping to the top. They are all closely bunched, but are not receiving their votes in large enough bunches.

Make Every Day Count.

The tip now given out to the contestants in this contest is to make every day count. Fighters are wanted in this race, and a game fighter never quits. It's now up to the Empire State League fans to show their mettle. So far they have done wonderfully, but there is still room for improvement. The race is surely one remarkable fight, and the Popularity Editor is having a tough time revising the leaders. However, he is so interested in the battle being waged that he is willing to give up a few hours' sleep so as to give the players and fans his time.

Clip Out Coupons.

The coupon appears in to-day's paper. Clip it out, fill it in and mail it to the Baseball Popularity Editor, Atlanta Georgian, Atlanta, Ga. Remember there are no resting days in this contest. Every day is another day, so get busy and send your favorite player into the lead. Don't think that because your player hasn't been in the first five he has no chance. Every player in this race has a good chance. All he needs is some real support by his followers. The winner of the contest is to receive a beautiful loving cup.

FORBES BACK IN RING; MAY MEET JIMMY WALSH

CHICAGO, July 21.—Harry Forbes, once bantamweight champion of the world, would reenter the boxing game. He is stirred to activity by seeing some of the present day performers in action, believing that he is easily better than most of them in this section of the country.

The Fox River Club of Aurora, of which Art Reid is matchmaker, is anxious to get Forbes into a contest and there is a chance that they will stage him with Jimmy Walsh, the English bantam star now in this city, within a short time.

JOHNSON, AINSMITH, LAPORTE BARELY ESCAPE DROWNING

CHICAGO, July 21.—Walter Johnson, Bob Ainsmith, John Henry and Frank Laporte, of the Washington Baseball Club, were caught in the undertow while bathing at the Chicago Beach Hotel. Prompt work by life guards saved them from being carried out into the lake.

Gedeon, another player on the team, was washed against a post by a wave, and was rescued unconscious by life guards.

NEW YORK MAY HAUL IN LINE ON THOMPSON

By O. B. Keeler.

AND it isn't all flowery beds of ease for the manager of a baseball club, even when the hands are going well and the breaks are breaking properly, and the games are piling up in the "W" column, and all that.

Sometimes, you see, one of the hands may be going almost too well. That is, if he has a string to him.

There is Carl Thompson, with the Crackers. And there is F. Leroy Chance, sometime Peerless Leader.

Carl is here, and F. Chance is there. But between them is the string. Carl is stacking up a pretty heap of workmanlike games. The P. L. is watching his alleged slabmen ease off point after point in the percentage column.

And so—getting to the tie that binds—one Major Frank Callaway tosses restlessly these sultry nights, by reason of something apart from the sultriness.

Claiming season is drawing close.

"And," says Major Frank, "I'm just hoping F. Chance will be looking the other way when the date comes 'round."

Because, you see, Carl Thompson belongs to the Highlanders. And he is looking more and more as if he could sand the skids under that luckless aggregation, which appears beyond the present capacity of Russell Ford, Ray Caldwell, et al.

Of course, it might be considered something of a joke on Carl if he should be dragged back to the Yanks at this time. But that ball club is likely to take a turn for the better one of these days—and the laugh might be the other way 'round.

* * *

AND that isn't all.

"Clark Griffith is mighty apt to take hold of Gilbert Price," Major Callaway remarked Saturday. "He's just the style the Old Fox likes to grab while in its comparative infancy and train according to his own ideas."

After which the president of the Crackers intimated that the Hon. Griffith had quite some ideas as to the care and rearing of youthful slabmen.

"Griff's pretty hard to work for; that is, for an opinionated youngster," he added. "I doubt if ever there was a wiser old noodle cocked over a pitching shoulder than that owned by the old Fox. He was a great pitcher himself—and he knows it. So the kid who tries to tell Griff something new about the slab game is due to hear something not altogether to his advantage."

* * *

THE Crackers now are at the critical stage of their campaign. Much depends on the shape in which the club comes home after the present road trip. If Smith's men should start the long home series with only a few games separating them from the top—and that's admitting they don't show in front on the trip—they should make one grand little fight the rest of the way.

An important point just now is to keep the regulars in condition during the hot, grueling road trip. Major Callaway has telegraphed the club's secretary to provide bottled water of the best type for the players on the train, at the hotels and on the field the rest of the jaunt. It's just a precaution against the troublesome and sometimes dangerous ailments frequently caused by changes of drinking water in widely-separated points, particularly in hot weather.

And in baseball, as in any other business, it's the small points that make or break, when it's all footed up.

Mystery in Death of Negro at Pensacola

PENSACOLA, July 21.—The body of an unknown negro was found in the slip at the Commendancia street wharf here to-day, and indications are that he was murdered and thrown overboard. A Coroner's jury, investigating the case, adjourned until Wednesday afternoon to obtain more evidence.

The physician who examined the body found the jaw broken and a number of teeth knocked loose and gave as his opinion that the dead negro had been struck in the face or body or has yet been able to identify the negro. A policeman testified that he had heard a shot in that vicinity on Saturday night.

MOORE MAY GO TO REDS.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—Manager Tinker, of the Cincinnati Club, to-day offered to trade Pitcher Suggs to Philadelphia. Pitcher Earle Moore, who was sold recently by Manager Doolin to St. Louis, refuses to report to the Cardinals, but says he would be willing to play with the Reds.

COFFROTH ARRANGING FOR BIG CARD FOR AUGUST DATE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21.—"Sunny Jim" Coffroth has the August fight permit for this city and is busy arranging a card for the show. Just who will make up the main event James hasn't decided as yet, but he has assured the fans that whoever the boxers are they will be lads who will offer a crack card. Jim seldom fails in giving the public the best possible, and all lovers of the game are awaiting his decision. It is understood he is on the trail of Packey McFarland and Jack Britton, but it is hardly likely that he will be able to get this pair before Labor Day, if he can land them then.

But he has Leach Cross, Matty Baldwin, Johny Dundee, Red Watson and Tommy Murphy among the lightweights, with Jess Willard and Sam Langford to pick opponents for if he should decide on the big lads. Willie Ritchie has practically assured James that he will do battle with any lightweight on Labor Day, and Tommy Murphy will be Coffroth's selection, this, of course, subject to changes in the bill if McFarland should decide to box.

O'BRIEN CLAIMS A DRAW WITH FREDDIE WELCH

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 21.—Young Jack O'Brien to-day posted $1,000 with a local paper here to go as a forfeit for a second match with Freddie Welch, the British lightweight. O'Brien declares that the worst he should have received in his clash with Welch on Saturday should have been a draw.

What O'Brien asks in the second match is an impartial referee.

LOOKOUTS TO RELEASE OUTFIELDER ELSTON

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 21.—President O. B. Andrews announced to-day that Outfielder Elston is to be released at once, while Kid Elberfeld will go to right and Dee Walsh will play short. The Kid believes that he will be able to play in his usual form in the outfield, where it will not be necessary for him to stoop so much.

THORNTON, EX-CUB HURLER, HELD FOR SANITY BOARD

TACOMA, WASH., July 21.—Walter M. Thornton, a few years ago a twirler for the Chicago National League Club, last night was placed in the padded cell of the county jail at Everett to be held for examination by the county sanity board. While pitching for Chicago he was struck on the head by a batted ball. He has never been quite sane since.

CHANCE TAKES HARD RAP AT BAN'S LEAGUE

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 21.—Frank Chance is red-hot at the scurvy treatment he has received in the American League. "They come at you with a lot of salve," he said this morning, "and all the while they are thinking how to knife you. Not being acquainted with ther little game, I played on the level with Callahan over the Chase deal. I wanted to get rid of Chase, though I knew he was a good ball player.

"Callahan stated that this guy Zeider was in fine shape, and I took his word. Callahan turned out to be a first-class kidder. Wait till I get going and I'll hand those blokes back some of their own coin.

* * *

"THEN the other day they gave us a fine square deal in Cleveland. Yes, they did. Fighting for the pennant, and they have as much change to win as I have, they thought to strangle us by advertising a double-header, when it was all we could do to reach here for one game. Why, the secretary of this club put up an argument that we could have taken another train by way of Chicago, getting here earlier. The boys would have to had to occupy a day coach. Can you beat that? Even if we are in last place, this club is not going to be a piker.

* * *

"SAY for me that David Harum and Jesse James never had anything on the gang I'm up against in the American League; that is, barring Frank Farrell."

MOLLIWITZ BEING LOOKED OVER BY LEAGUE SCOUTS

MILWAUKEE, July 21.—The records of such men as Chappelle, who came from a State league team, have brought scouts to this territory. The latest being inspected is Fred Molliwitz, first baseman for the Green Bay team. Eddie Sweeney has been in the State to look him over for Frank Chance, and Fred Lake came from Detroit to see him.

Jock McNeil Some Mathematician

Figures How He'll Win Marathon

JOCK M'NEIL believes that he is going to win the big Marathon grind at the Motordrome Tuesday night. "And not because I have the fastest machine," says Jock, "but because I have figured out just what I must do.

"To win a long-distance race on a board track, a rider must be somewhat of an expert mathematician. A machine carries two and one-half gallons of gasoline and two quarts of high-speed oil. In the Marathon race Tuesday night there will be nearly 105 laps, exclusive of the several rounds made before the race is started.

"All riders carry a small pump fastened to the oil can. With this the oil is drawn from the tank and shot into the engine. I figure on using a 'shot of oil' every one and three-quarter laps.

"If I should use a pump full every lap and a half I would run out of oil before the race is finished, and that would mean the loss of one or more laps to replenish my oil tank.

"It will be seen that a rider must constantly have his wits about him, keeping track of the laps, judge the pace, stay as close to the beaten path as possible and watch for other things that might develop in the long race.

"Riding on a circular track also requires a great deal of endurance and skill. No one likes to set the pace in a long race, as the leader breaks the wind. The skillful rider will always try to remain a yard or so back of the leader until near the finish, and allow himself to be carried along by the suction in order to save his oil, and when the final lap is reached he gives his engine a shot of the lubricant and the spurts in front of the pacemaker as if the leader had suddenly stopped."

McNeil didn't intend to let it be known that he had figured out how he could remain on the track all the time, but Jock is such a good-natured little Scotchman that he finally let the other nine riders "in."

Still it's a cinch that such a wicked pace will be set by the leaders that every man will have to stop at least once.

Like at the famous automobile races, each rider will have a "pit" in front of the paddock where he can change a tire or a wheel in a very few seconds, get a chain repaired, or whatever is needed.

Those who are fortunate enough to secure seats in front of the paddock will surely witness a lot of interesting "doings" as the riders stop for necessary repairs.

A Motordrome Sweepstakes in three heats and a final, a special match race and a trial against time will round out the card.

With such a program as this, the attendance at the Motordrome Tuesday night is sure to be the largest in its history. In the event of rain, the events will be run off Wednesday night, or the next night that is clear.

Here is the complete program:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves; time, 38 4-5 seconds.

MOTORDROME SWEEPSTAKES.

One mile to qualify for two-mile final. Two to qualify in each heat and three in fastest heat.

First Heat—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Second Heat—No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

SWIMMER IS BLINDED BY WAVES IN LONG STRUGGLE

NEW YORK, July 21.—After remaining in the water fourteen hours and thirteen minutes, Harry L. Ellensky, of New Haven, Conn., who yesterday attempted to swim from the Battery, New York, to Sandy Hook, N. J., was forced to quit on account of the temporary blindness, induced by salt waves dashing in his eyes.

Ellensky was within a quarter of a mile of his goal when he lost all sense of direction. He was credited with covering 35 miles in his swim against the swirling waters of New York harbor. For his remarkable achievement, Ellensky was appointed a captain in the American Life Saving Society. He is 19 years old and weighs 200 pounds.

In an attempt to swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook yesterday, Miss Rose Pitonoff, of Boston, was forced to leave the water after she had battled with an inrushing tide for more than an hour.

An Atlanta Business Man Indorses Contest:

When the business office of The Georgian opened its doors early Friday morning a prominent business man was there with his 16-year-old son.

"I want Charley to enter the want ad contest," he said. "Put him down and start him to work."

The young man's nomination blank was accepted and he was given instructions for securing want ads. His father turned to the want ad man.

"I believe Charley will go out and win," he said. "He has it in him. But even if he doesn't win, I want him to try. I know a few weeks of actual experience in this contest will give him a thousand dollars' worth of education in the most highly-paid work on earth—practical salesmanship. That's why I put him in."

Fill out the Nomination Blank NOW. Bring it to the Want Ad Man. The contest is about to open and early entrants will get the best start.

Full announcement of the Contest's opening will be made in a few days. It is important that entries be made NOW, and the nomination blanks brought in.

COTTON DROPS ON COOLER WEATHER

Texas Showers and Low Cables Promote General Selling. Marked Absence of Support.

NEW YORK, July 21.—A break in the heat wave over the cotton belt resulted in a much weaker Liverpool market this morning and in turn produced a selling movement there which forced prices down from 5 to 11 points from the closing quotations of Saturday.

Immediately after the opening, general selling dominated the market, resulting in a further decline of 1 to 4 points from the initial level. Some light rains reported from portions of Texas brought out offerings from some of the leading interests. However, the map only showed a light sprinkle at Galveston, but heavy rains in portions of the eastern belt. Cooler weather and rains more than offset the bullish circular of F. M. Cordill, who reported deterioration in sections of Texas, caused by the excessive dry spell and boll weevils.

Crop advices and easier cables promoted sufficient selling orders to keep prices around the opening range during the early session.

At the close the market was steady, with prices at a net decline of 4 to 12 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 21.—Our forecast of cooler weather over Sunday was entirely fulfilled. Records this morning show the heat spell completely broken and good rains fell in Arkansas, Oklahoma, parts of the lower Central States and generally in the eastern half of the Atlantics. Lighter showers, with some good rains, fell in North and East Texas.

Liverpool writes: "A large crop has been planted in Egypt; progress so far good and dependent only on the weather to materialize." Political news continues unfavorable. London says: "Complete collapse of authority by the powers is claimed."

First trades here were at a decline of 6 points and the market was quiet around opening figures all the morning. New York wires show a disposition in favor of the market on the ground that Texas had no general rains. But the small stock there and the firm hold by the spot houses on the near position is the main reason for the respect paid to the bull side.

DRY GOODS TRADE FALLING OFF; COLLECTIONS BETTER

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Distribution of merchandise in general shows the midsummer falling off, but in no way to a greater degree than is usual at this time of the year. Collections are somewhat better than normal.

"Merchants generally are taking advantage of the great open stock in this market, where they can work to the week just what they need. This means a greater turn-over to them and also makes for a sounder business condition.

"Ruffling, plaiting and fluting of lace and shadow lace edging, as well as wash blondes, are having an unusually large distribution owing principally to the adoption of these materials for use in lingerie. The demand for this kind of merchandise has so increased that there is already a shortage in wash blondes and prices are advancing.

"There is also a materially increased call for cotton lace flouncing in 17, 27 and 45-inch widths for dresses, to be used over highly colored silks. The popularity of this novelty is steadily growing and promises to extend throughout the entire fall and winter season."

Clearings Gain, but Not to 1912 Level

Bank clearings in the United States for the week ending July 17 agregated $3,044,757,000, against $2,537,015,000 the previous week and $3,163,623,000 in the same week last year, according to Bradstreet's tabulation. MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, July 21.—Rains fell in Oklahoma and Northern Texas, while temperatures are decidedly lower. This gives relief and is the basis for to-day's easier prices. No rain in Central Texas or West, where driest, and ten-peratures rise complaints will likely be resumed. Some rains east, but not general. It is a weather market.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Thompson, Towle & Co.: We expect to see a further advance in cotton.

Browning & Co.: We believe any change for the worse would cause a sharp advance.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Everything depends on the weather.

GENERAL BUYING PUTS STOCKS UP

Improved Metal Trade and Investment Demand Causes Increased Activity.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The copper stocks showed the most activity at the opening of the stock market to-day, due to the improvement in the metal trade. Amalgamated Copper advanced ⅞ to 67⅝, and fractional gains were made in Anaconda and Utah.

The opening in the other stocks were irregular and changes were without much importance and equally divided between gains and losses. A firmer tone was shown in the petroleum issues in response to the declaration of the regular dividend on Mexican Petroleum.

There was practically no change in the leading railroads after the first fifteen minutes of trading.

In London the trading was mixed, but a cheerful tone prevailed in American shares.

The curb market was dull and steady.

Increased strength and activity developed soon after the opening and throughout the forenoon numerous issues showed gains from 1 to 2 points. The heaviest trading was in Union Pacific and Steel, London being an important factor in all trading. Canadian moved up ⅞ and a gain of 1 point was made in Third avenue. Steel advanced ¾. Call money loaned at 2½.

Aggressive buying gave a strong tone to the market in the afternoon. The buying was based to some extent on cables asserting that the establishment of peace in the Balkans was near at hand. Further advances were made in Amalgamated, Utah and Chino Copper, and nearly all the railroads and industrials late in the afternoon rose to new high figures for the day.

The market closed strong. Government bonds unchanged. Other bonds firm.

Wheat—No. 2 red .....84@85
Corn—No. 2 66
Oats—No. 2 .....39@40

CHICAGO, July 21.—Corn was the leader in speculation to-day, as it gained 1⅛@1⅛ cent on buying credited to the countri, which was brought about by the continued dry weather throughout the belt.

Wheat was up ½@⅝ and oats gained ⅝@⅞. The strength in corn held the other cereals and kept them from declining. There was a great deal of black rust talk, but the best authorities in the spring wheat country say there is no black rust at the moment and that with cool weather it is not likely to make its appearance. The visible supply of wheat increased 433,000 bushels for the past week; the first increase in many moons. Corn decreased 1,607,000 bushels and oats increased 204,000 bushels. Cash transactions in grain at Chicago were 275,000 bushels wheat and 100,000 bushels each of corn and oats.

News and Notes Of Grain Crops

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Farmers of the United States now hold the whip hand. Their action in the matter of offering wheat will make the price. And it may be said that the more eager the foreigners to secure wheat, the more indifference will be shown by the growers. The farmer of today is well informed on conditions and circumstances surrounding the wheat situation, and he is as competent to pick out a place to dump his surplus wheat as the best broker in Chicago. He watches the crop conditions, the milling situation, the export and other buying power, and when there is a likelihood of any improvement in the price of wheat the farmer is fully aware of the prospective change in his favor.

* * *

The crop killer has left the spring wheat country for the simple reason that he has not been able to gain a foothold since the dry sections of the Northwest were thoroughly wet down and the outlook has improved.

* * *

It is amusing to the old-time farmers on the Board of Trade to witness the scramble for corn, as seen for a few weeks past, on the report of great damage by high winds throughout Kansas. One man who was brought up in corn belt of the country says that if the weather is not hot in June and July he would like to know how there could be a crop of corn.

* * *

Kansas was reported as having lost its corn crop by hot winds and grasshoppers, while on the following day a man who is well known in Chicago for his conservatism reported the crop in the same neighborhood as progressing.

* * *

There was a big open account in oats a few weeks ago, but this has been pretty well evened up and at the moment there are fewer bulls than before.

Plan to Close Naval Stores on August 15

SAVANNAH, July 21.—A resolution will be presented at a meeting of naval stores operators of Florida and Georgia in Jacksonville to-day, calling for the closing down of the industry on August 15 in order to reduce production and benefit the market.

The idea is to close the chipping boxes on August 15, which is two months before the usual time for closing them. This will, of course, reduce production, and the market will be correspondingly benefited. Whether the plan can be put into effect in all the territory is, however, doubtful. It will be necessary to have all the boxes closed to secure the desired effect.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Profit From Poultry Depends Upon Care

Exercise, Feed, Housing, all Vital in Chicken Raising.

Fowls can not care for themselves and produce a profit. The smallest of the individual unit in poultry is what causes people to look upon the business as rather small. However small the individuals may seem in comparison with other live stock they should receive careful attention to insure success.

The poultry keeper, whether making it a side line to his business or a specialty, should have a definite end in view. The purpose should be clearly defined and kept constantly in mind. It is necessary to have orderly plans mapped out in order that the work shall go on regularly.

No kind of business seems to respond more promptly to careful methodical work than the chicken business. Conditions differ on farms and poultry plants, and for that reason each one must in a measure map out his own line of work, but whatever it is it should be done in a systematic manner by the proper person at the proper time.

It is a fortunate condition that permits of caring for the poultry by the interested members of the poultryman's family. Fowls are creatures of habit and dependent upon their keeper. This is especially true in their feeding.

Rich Food Needed.

A 4½-pound Leghorn hen laying 175 eggs per year yields fully five times her weight, and that too, in a concentrated form. Perhaps a good deal of the time she is laying an egg daily. To accomplish this feat the hen must not only have rich food in abundance, but should receive it at regular intervals.

To accomplish regularity in the care of fowls it must be understood whose duty it is to attend to each line of work. Let there be no misunderstanding and consequent neglect by one person thinking that some one else has done the work. Everything should go on like a clock. Learn to save labor and prevent waste in all parts of the business.

Shelter is all important, both to protect your fowls from the cold and rain. You should aim to maintain comfort in your flock at all seasons. Keep water vessels above the dirt and litter of the floor. Have them of such material that they may be cleaned easily. There should be no bad smell about a poultry house. Keepers of small flocks of poultry often become careless and negligent about cleaning their houses and the result is often failure and disgust with no one to blame but themselves.

For those who do not care to go to the trouble to clean out their poultry houses every morning a good plan is to sprinkle over the dropping some dry road dust or, sawdust, and clean but once a week. Of course provision must be made for your dust during the summer months. It is the part of good management to have a dry shed for storing the poultry manure to be used as a fertilizer.

A thorough whitewashing inside and out should be given at least twice during the summer months.

Exercise Is Important.

The amount of exercise depends largely upon the breed and the condition of chickens. Overfat fowls should be compelled to work for what they get until they are reduced to a reasonable condition, while thin fowls should not be compelled to scratch for their food. Fowls that seem inactive and sluggish should have plenty of green stuff and scratch for their food.

Free range always provides plenty of exercise. In close confinement it is different, however, and some ingenuity must be exercised to incuce your fowls to take exercise enough to make their blood circulate and produce good health either by scratching for their grain or jumping to secure cabbage hung by a string too high for them to stand and reach it.

The more exercise that is provided the less likely the fowls are to acquire bad habits, such as egg eating, feather pulling, etc. It is always easier to prevent disease than it is to cure it; hence it is advisable to quarantine all purchased fowls for at least ten days until all possibility of infection is passed.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Committee Asks Price On Four Top Floors

Merchants May Be Housed in Chamber Building—Numerous Small Sales Monday.

The Chamber of Commerce committee considering a site for the exhibit of Atlanta-made goods in a permanent building for the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association decided Monday to ask the directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company to submit them a price on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building at the southeast corner of North Pryor and Auburn avenue.

President Moore has accordingly called a meeting of the directors for 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Chamber rooms in the Empire Building.

The committee considered several propositions, but it is known that the members would like to be in the Chamber building if possible, hence the request. The Chamber, in this event, would occupy the first two floors of the six-story building, which is now being renovated.

The action of the committee came as somewhat of a surprise in real estate circles, since this site had not been seriously considered until it was mentioned Monday. There is nothing to commit the committee in their request. They explained that they only wanted to consider the proposition along with the others.

Numerous Small Sales.

Small sales with a good total proved interesting in Monday's real estate announcements.

The Forrest & George Adair Real Estate Agency have made the following sales:

For Thomas H. Pitt and D. O. Chestnut to F. E. Walthall, No. 114 North Moreland avenue, an eight-room, two-story house on a 40 by 200-foot lot, for $7,000; for Thomas B. Paine to Mrs. V. V. Tilson, a six-room bungalow on the east side of East Lake road, between Fair and Herman streets, 80 by 170 feet, for $5,500; for Mrs. A. W. Mynett to Mrs. Laura Quarles, No. 182 East Pine street, a two-story, seven-room house on the north side of the street and on a 37½ by 150-foot lot, for $3,350.

The house sold for Mr. Paine at East Lake is not the house which is occupied, but one near it which he built to sell.

W. Dobbins & Co. have sold for Mrs. Fannie McHenry to Mrs. A. C. Moore, a 25 by 100-foot lot in Mays street, near the railroad tracks, for $650; for O. C. Radford to Mrs. M. P. Beauchamp, a house and lot on the west side of Bates avenue, Kirkwood, 50 by 260 feet, near Boulevard DeKalb, for $3,400; for Mrs. L. C. Carmichael to L. A. Morris, No. 64 Candler street, a six-room bungalow on a 50 by 132-foot lot, between McLendon street and Euclid avenue, for $3,850.

T. M. Cater has bought from J. K. Nicholson through M. P. Tyson, of the Adair & Holt Agency, No. 64 Garden street, an irregular-shaped lot of about 60 feet frontage, for $2,500.

Rent Bulletin Appears.

The Smith, Ewing & Rankin Real Estate and Renting Agency, started publication Monday of a weekly rent bulletin. Mr. Smith explaining that the increased business of the firm made this move necessary.

To Sell Peachtree Lease.

The lease on the space occupied by the Savoy Cafe, at No. 34 Peachtree, has been placed in the hands of E. E. Pomeroy, trustee, for sale. This was determined on Saturday instead of a sale in the office of Referee in Bankruptcy Percy H. Adams, in the Grant Building. The lease has about four years to run. Terms are cash.

Connally Avenue Lot on Sale.

B. S. Bomar, administrator of the estate of the late Mary E. Madden, will sell at auction before the courthouse door Tuesday, August 1, a 50 by 100 foot lot on the west side of Connally avenue, 30 feet from the United States Barracks fence. Grover C. Middlebrooks is the attorney.

East Avenue Purchase.

Mrs. Mary Hunt has bought from E. M. Willingham, through the F. McC. Brown Real Estate Agency, the one-story frame house on the east side of East avenue, near East Fair, for $2,000. The lot is 48 by 138.

Pryor Street Underpass.

According to information obtained Monday, an effort will be made soon to have Council consider a proposition to underpass the Southern Railway tracks at South Pryor and Ridge avenue, while the work of widening, regrading and repaving South Pryor is in progress. This improvement, it is pointed out, would make a continuous smooth thoroughfare to Lakewood. With this work done, it will be possible to connect up Lakewood drive and South Pryor with a roadway that would save many yards in travel about the lake. There is at present no driveway at the north end of the lake, and the addition would put driveways almost entirely around it.

To Build at Brookhaven.

E. L. Bishop is clearing a five-acre tract at Brookhaven, opposite the No. 7 green of the Capital City Country Club golf course, and will soon build a bungalow. Hentz & Reid, architects, are drawing plans. The lot is on Brookhaven Drive, east. J. E. C. Pedder has a lot to the west of Mr. Bishop, and he is also planning a home, it is said.

Ponce DeLeon Projection.

The upper stories of the Ponce DeLeon apartments are all right as regards encroachment on the sidewalk at the southeast corner of Peachtree and Ponce DeLeon, according to Assistant Building Inspector C. J. Bowen. Only about 30 inches from the base upward, consisting of ornamental stone, is in the encroachment, and this can probably be adjusted to the satisfaction of the apartment officials and the city. The projection is about 4 3-4 inches.

Progress on Peachtree.

In about two weeks, according to Shelby Smith, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, repairs to Peachtree will be completed. The stretch from Peachtree Creek to Buckhead is done, and the convicts started Monday working southward from the creek to Fifteenth street. Sixth street to Fifteenth was finished some weeks ago, and the repairs will make a smooth thoroughfare about eight miles in length. The gap between W. S. Witham's and the DeKalb County line, near the Capital City Country Club, will be completed in a few weeks.

Interest in Comfort Station.

Real estate men went over their listings Monday with a view of selecting a site for the city public comfort station, which has been designed by Haralson Bleckley, the well-known architect and author of the plaza plan. This building is to cost $10,000, according to the sketch, and will be located at some point to be chosen by the City Council. Such an institution has been suggested by City Clerk Walter Taylor, Harrison Jones and others.

Activity in Lots.

F. C. Word, of the Southern Railway Company, has refused a $500 profit on six acres of land on Mount Perian road which he bought last week, through J. E. Pritchett, of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency. The land cost him $1,623.

The above agency reports the sale of nearly $50,000 in the past week in its Peachtree Highlands, Clairemont, Woodlawn Park and Peachtreehurst subdivisions, as well as No. 199 North Moreland avenue to Mrs. E. J. Mitchell for the Kelly-Nealy Company, for $7,000; No. 130 Tift avenue to Dixon avenue for a client, $2,400; No. 154 Ormond street, corner of Frazier, to R. T. Harralson for Mrs. Lula Mitchell, for $2,000, and three tracts on the Mount Perian road for $4,680, to people whose names are withheld.

Millions of Americans Are Saving---Millions of Americans Need to Borrow---Farmers Especially

Isn't It Possible for the Government to Put Those That Are SAVING In Touch With Those That Need to BORROW. Must the Blood-Sucker Always Play His Game of Usury Between Them?

(Copyright, 1913.)

In this country millions of industrious, careful human beings, anxious to provide for the future, are willing to save—and it is practically impossible for them to get a decent rate of interest on their savings and NOT risk being robbed at the same time.

In this country, where the millions are anxious to save, you have millions of farmers and small business men who are compelled to borrow—as their operations for the year exceed necessarily at one time or another the amount of money that they have on hand.

You have the savers on the one hand getting only 2 per cent if they put their money in the United States Postal Bank. And even then they are limited as to the amount they can put in. They get 3 per cent if they put their money in private savings banks—and take the usual risk of having the money lost through dishonesty or withheld from them in time of panic.

You have the farmers, upon whose labor and intelligence the nation depends, compelled to borrow for the purchase of seeds, of machinery. And, while the SAVING, careful American who accumulates his earnings can get only 2 per cent or 3 per cent interest, THE FARMER MUST PAY, ON THE AVERAGE, EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT FOR THE MONEY THAT HE BORROWS.

Isn't there some way of getting the AMERICAN WHO SAVES and the AMERICAN WHO BORROWS closer together?

Is it not an outrage that the hundreds of millions that the careful American saves should be lent to the hard-working farmer with SOME BANKING ORGANIZATION BETWEEN THE TWO GETTING A "RAKE OFF" OF FIVE AND A HALF PER CENT ON THE MONEY?

That is exactly what happens.

The money that the bankers are lending is simply the money that others have SAVED.

And the money that the farmers are borrowing is simply the money that the savers have deposited in the banks.

The people who save in this country get 3 per cent at most on their savings. And the farmers who borrow pay 8½ per cent.

And in the process 5½ per cent goes to build up a non-producing class THAT IS NOT NECESSARY.

Why should not the Government of the United States pay a decent rate of interest to the American citizen for his savings, and lend to the farmers at a fair rate of interest when the farmers need to borrow?

It doesn't cost 5½ per cent to handle money, to take it in with one hand and lend it with the other.

The United States Government might well afford to pay the careful, saving American 3 per cent on his money and LEND THAT SAME MONEY TO THE FARMER AT 4 PER CENT.

This would give the Government a margin of 1 per cent to cover expenses.

Why isn't it possible to do this?

It isn't possible for various reasons.

The first reason is that the finances of the United States are usually run by bankers for bankers.

The second reason is that the banking class represents Government, which in this country means money.

The little man who is saving his few hundred dollars and who must be content to get 3 per cent and risk losing it, and the farmer who is borrowing his few thousand dollars and who must go almost on his knees to get it, AND THEN PAY EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT—those two classes are not the Government.

The Government of this country is the banking class, the money class, the money itself.

And therefore the man who saves must accept 3 per cent interest and worry about his money's safety.

And the farmer who borrows must pay 8½ per cent and worry about his payments promptly on time, and pay a commission for extensions, and find himself sold out in time of panics.

And those who profit are the middlemen, the NON-PRODUCERS, the parasites, the blood-suckers of the community.

When will the people find a leader big enough and able enough to hand the savings of the frugal workmen in the shape of a loan to the equally frugal and valuable farmer, and take from both of them ONLY ENOUGH TO PAY FOR THE TRANSACTION?

They do these things in other countries.

In Germany and France they lend thousands of millions to the farmers at 4 per cent a year and less.

The farmers of this country borrow thousands of millions of dollars THROUGH A PRIVATE EXTORTIONATE BANKING SYSTEM AND THE AVERAGE CHARGE IS EIGHT AND ONE-HALF PER CENT.

Eight and one-half per cent on one thousand millions is eighty-five millions of dollars. And this is, at the least, FIFTY MILLIONS MORE THAN THE FARMERS SHOULD PAY.

Money is as much a TOOL in these days as any other.

If you make money, the most important tool, expensive for the farmer, YOU MAKE LIVING AND THE COST OF LIVING EXPENSIVE FOR ALL.

This nation should let the farmers have cheap money, and at the same time give to the saving mechanic a fair rate of interest AND ABSOLUTE SAFETY WITH A GOVERNMENT GUARANTEE.

That can be done, if MONEY will permit the people of this country to run the Government and the finances of the country for the benefit of the people—and not for the benefit of the blood-sucking middleman, called the banking system.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Horses and Camels Lived in Frozen North, Once a Mild Tropical Region, and Believed to Have Been Original Home of Man.

By GARRET P. SERVISS

HARDLY have the eyes of the world been opened, as never before, to the fascinating mysteries of the South Pole and its wonderful surrounding continent, than its great rival of the north makes new claims upon our attention.

North Pole Once a Mild, If Not Tropical, Region.

One of the strangest problems that science has to face is that presented by the fast accumulating evidence that, in former times, possibly before man had developed into his present physical form, a mild, if not a tropical, climate prevailed in those vast northern regions which are now buried, most of the time, under snow and ice. There is even reason to think that this strange condition may have existed up to the very Pole!

The period generally fixed by geologists for the existence of this state of things within the Arctic Circle is what is known as the Pleistocene (from the Greek pleistos, "most," and kainos, "recent," the meaning being that it was the most recent period of the great Tertiary Age). Any attempt to fix in years the distance of that time from ours is merely guesswork. It has been said that history reckons by years and geology by ages. It may be that the Pleistocene dates back a hundred thousand, and, perhaps, two or three hundred thousand years.

Anyhow, in Pleistocene times animals and plants, some of which are extinct and others of which are now found only in temperate or tropical regions, existed, apparently in abundance, in the polar regions of the north.

The latest discoveries concerning these vanished inhabitants of a land that has now become frigid and inhospitable relate to camels and horses. The presence of the camel in Alaska, not as a curiosity in a traveling menagerie, but as a regular inhabitant of the land, is astonishing to think of. We know the camel as a desert animal, a lover of the Sahara, with its waterless expanses of wind-driven, sun-blasted sand, but here he appears, dwelling before the two-legged animal that was to become his master had been introduced upon the planet, in a region which, in its present condition, would be almost as inappropriate a place of residence for him as the moon would be for men!

But he has left his fossilized bones there, and science has discovered them. We can not contradict such evidence.

Science Discovers That Horse Lived in Alaska.

Then, too, the horse existed in Alaska in that same strange age. Its remains have been found in so many places that it is impossible to conclude otherwise than that horses ranged freely over immense expanses within the Arctic Circle where now the sub-soil is a frozen mass that never melts. At that time great prairies of luscious grass must have existed there at nearly all times of the year, for horses do not store up food to last through a long, pitiless winter.

Mammoths and Bison Roamed Frozen North.

Somewhere about the same time mammoths, bisons and other strange animals also roamed that part of the world, finding an abundance of food about them. If there were men in existence at that time, they, too, may have been polar inhabitants!

The great question now is: What caused the change? Why were the Arctic regions warm and genial at that time, and how have they come into the state which we now find?

Some have suggested that the earth has partly tipped over, its axis of rotation, or the line joining its poles, assuming a different position. But this would involve a tremendous catastrophe, throwing the oceans out of their beds and producing disastrous changes all over the globe, and evidence of such a universal catastrophe is lacking. Moreover, there is hardly anything known to science more stable than an axis of rotation. Once set a body spining about a particular axis and it is extremely difficult to change the direction or slope of that axis. The whole form of the earth plainly indicates that it has been turning for countless ages about the same poles, and must have begun to so turn when it was yet plastic, or molten, for it has bulged at the equator, just as any mass of that kind must do under the influence of centrifugal force.

A more probable hypothesis is that the change of climate has been caused by elevations and subsidences of the earth's crust. The presence of horses and camels in Alaska has been ascribed to the former existence of a great "land bridge" connecting Asia with North America. Horses did not exist in America at the time of its discovery, and camels have never inhabited this Continent, except in Pleistocene times.

In view of the facts that I have been reciting, one can not but think of the strange theory, which has been strongly advocated in the past, though never accepted by science.

Many Believe Home of Race Was North Pole.

Not a few students believe that the original home of the present inhabitants of our hemisphere, and perhaps of the whole human race, was around the North Pole, from which they were driven by climatic changes. If that were so, then what is now the Arctic Ocean must have been a land "flowing with milk and honey," in the old Scriptural sense.

The Mad Monarch

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

HIS subjects may be found in every clime;
From every source they crawl to lick his hand.
His home in Hell is wonderfully planned
To welcome slaves that die from time to time.
His nag daughter is Lust. His son is Crime.
He has a solid throne in every land.
And what with hearts to break and serfs to brand,
He goes but seldom to his couch of slime.

He slays men's brains and deadens baby lives.
Oh, the vast pyramids this king could build
Were he to use the bones of starving wives
Who sigh to join the victims he has killed!
Mockingly glow in his grim diadem
Three bloody ruby letters—R-U-M.

"I Know Dozens of People," She Says, "Who Would Never Have Been Born If This Health Idea Had Been Strictly Carried Out ---and Somehow I Don't Think the World Would Have Been Much Better Off For That."

By WINIFRED BLACK.

ONCE there was a clever little boy who was always taking clocks to pieces and meddling with locks and making wheels, and inventing ways of shutting the old door so that it wouldn't be locked and yet the dog could spring the latch—such a clever, clever boy—but I always hated to have him come to visit at our house.

You see, he could take a clock to pieces wonderfully well and put it together—just moderately well. The clock would go after he had put it together again, but somehow there was always something wrong with it some way. Sometimes it told the time all right, but struck wrong. Sometimes it struck all right, but told the hour wrong, and then again it was the alarm that never quite got over the clever boy's handling.

Sometimes I wonder about him—he's a doctor now, a very successful surgeon; always taking people to pieces. I wonder if they run quite so well when he is through with them as they did before he touched them—he and his "science."

Wants to Regulate All the Marriages.

I see he read a paper at a great medical convention yesterday—it was all about "eliminating the unfit."

He doesn't want anyone to marry but people in perfect health. He thinks physicians should regulate marriage—and regulate it legally. No one should be allowed to marry at all without the "yes, indeed," of the whole medical profession. Fine idea, progressive, and all that. I wonder if it is quite practical?

Now, there's the doctor himself, for instance. I happen to know that his mother was an old-fashioned consumptive. She took twenty years a-dying, and one of his brothers died of the old-fashioned illness out in Colorado not so many weeks ago.

The doctor is alive yet, and very lively, too, thank you. He would not be here at all if his advice had been taken thirty years ago—and just think how we should have missed him and his experiments with the clocks and with people's internals.

We knew a good many of the same people, the doctor and I, when he was taking clocks to pieces.

One of them died of cancer; her mother died of it, too; and she married and had three children. One of them is the cleverest, all-around woman I know, one is mediocre and one has made a fortune in a country town and is spending it helping sick babies get well. Now if that woman had not been allowed to marry, what then?

The best family in the town where we both lived had three sons—every one of them has turned out a failure. One's an invalid, one's a criminal and one's a drunkard. Father was sound as a hickory nut, and mother never had an ill day in her life. How about that family?

How far back have you got to go to get at the source of infection and who's going to do the "going?"

"Somebody 'Queer' In Every Family."

"I can find enough degenerates in any family on earth to get any client off for murder in the first degree," said a clever lawyer to me just the other day. "I don't suppose there's a family in America without somebody 'queer' in it."

Just how "queer" have you got to be and who's going to decide about it when you try to get a marriage license and can't?

"Eliminate the unfit"—well, well, Mr. Physician, who are the unfit?

There's Robert Louis Stevenson, for instance. He never drew a breath of good health in his life. Would you have "eliminated" him?

How about Julius Caesar, how about Napoleon, how about Mohammed, how about Daniel Webster, how about St. Paul?

Unfit—every one of them—from the doctor's point of view, and there are still more illustrious examples of the unfit who survived and made the world over just to suit their own ideas while the "fit" stood around and looked on and wondered about it.

It's a glorious idea you have, doctor, and one that every civilized nation should study carefully—but are you quite sure how you are going to manage it?

I got the "sterilized" fad once and wouldn't let anyone have a drop of water that wasn't boiled; till my old doctor came along and told me I had boiled all the life out of it, and he said he'd risk a few germs if he were me—on the principle that he'd rather be an aquarium than a cemetery—and I got over my fad.

"Drink water all you can," shouts the water-cure fiend.

"Don't touch water till you have to," insists the new specialist.

"When your brain is tired, work your body," advises the doctor who is supposed to know.

"Don't overwork a tired system," says his neighbor. "Rest is the only thing to cure fatigue."

Owe Their Existence To Old-Time Laws.

And so it goes—we're all so interested—in this "eliminate the unfit" idea, and yet when I look around among my friends, a pretty decent lot of people as the world goes, I can see dozens of them who would never have been born at all if this idea had been strictly carried out, and somehow I can't think the world would have been much better off for that.

Take the old clock to pieces, doctor, all you will, but please, good friend, be quite sure you know how to put it together again so it will strike twelve at midnight and not at eight of the morning.

:-: Marshal D'Ancre :-:

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE execution, 296 years ago, of Leonora Galigai, wife of the Marshal D'Ancre, was the wind-up of one of the most remarkable life stories in French history.

In 1610 the fanatical Ravaillac plunged his dagger into the heart of Henry Fourth, and Mary de Medici was proclaimed Regent. At the time of her marriage to Henry Mary brought with her from Florence her nurse's daughter, Leonora Galigai, and her husband, Concino Concini, son of a Florentine notary. By these creatures the Regent was completely hypnotized, and in a trice the nurse's daughter and the notary's son became the most consequential personages in France. Mary, besides making the pair her confidential advisers, gave them every opportunity for advancing their material fortunes, with the result that, in addition to wielding great power at court, they grew immensely wealthy. The well-filled strong box left by the great King was pilfered right and left, and in a little while Concini was able to say: "When I came to France I was not worth a sou, now I am worth eight millions." His wife also laid by a splendid wad of the "needful," besides supplying herself with the plate, wardrobe and jewels that were the wonder of her time.

Purchasing the Marquisate of Ancre and a marshalship, the notary's son was now the Marshal D'Ancre, and as for the nurse's daughter—she was pretty nearly the "whole thing," for she dominated both Mary and D'Ancre.

But alas, for the "best laid plans of mice and men!" One day, after some seven years of prosperity, the Marshal D'Ancre was shot down like a dog by the order, or with the consent, of the young King, Louis Thirteenth, and not long thereafter the court creatures seized D'Ancre's widow and took her before the bar of the Parliament, by which body she was unceremoniously sentenced to the block. The last words of the dashing adventuress, as she looked out upon the sea of humanity that had gathered to witness her execution, were:

"What a lot of people to look at one poor creature die!"

50 GIRLS DIE IN FACTORY FIRE

TRAPPED BY FLAMES IN FACTORY

Women, In Panic, Leap to Death In River as Escape Is Cut Off.

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., Julyy 22. From 30 to 50 young women overall workers were killed and 40 other girls seriously injured this afternoon in a fire that destroyed the building of the Binghampton Clothing Company, No. 17 Wall street.

The police estimate the dead at 50.

It is impossible late to-day to give an exact estimate of the number of dead, for the fire is still raging, having spread to the buildings of the Binghampton postoffice, the McKellar Drug Company and the Simon O'Neill Harness Goods Company.

All the city hospitals are filled with those who have been injured and of the 125 persons who were in the building when the fire started only fifteen are known to have escaped without injury.

Thought Alarm a Joke.

The first alarm was sounded at 2:30 o'clock, but there was no response to the alarm on the part of the working girls. There had been several false alarms sounded in the building lately and the employees had come to look upon the sound of the fire bell as a joke.

The fire was first discovered on the stairway of the building leading to the second story. So fierce was the blaze that all possibility of escape by the stairway was immediately cut off. As soon as the girls realized their peril there was a panic and a general rush for the fire escapes, which became blocked.

Panic developed, women leaping wildly from upper windows onto the sidewalks, while many others jumped into the Chenango River.

Firemen reached the scene promptly and aided by policemen and citizens gathered the injured in blankets and nets and rushed them to the hospitals.

The offices of the company were situated on the ground floor. There were only six persons in the offices when the fire started.

Workers on Top Flor Caught.

On the floor above was the cutting department. Five cutters were at work when the alarm sounded, but they were able to make their escape safely. Twenty persons were busy on the third floor and the greater number of employees, girls and women for the most part, to the number of 80, were busy on the top floor.

It was on the top floor that the frightful loss of life occurred. Those who reached the windows first were forced to jump to the ground by those who crowded behind.

INVASION OF MEXICO IS DEMANDED

Murray of Oklahoma Would Hasten Relief to Americans and Europeans In Danger.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Denunciation of the Taft and Wilson administrations for their dilatory attitudes toward Mexico was voiced by Senators Lodge and Fall in the Senate to-day.

Fall stated that had the Taft administration assumed a determined front at the time of the Madero revolution two years ago, peace would have been established.

Senator Lodge demanded that steps be taken to protect American citizens whose murder by Mexican bandits was neither avenged by Mexico or the United States.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A sensational resolution demanding intervention in Mexico within 30 days unless peace be restored, and denouncing the Heutra regime as one of "brute force, incendiarism, rapine and murder," was introduced in the House to-day by Representative William H. Murray, of Oklahoma, a Democrat.

The resolution provides that the President shall notify Mexico that peace must be restored and that the lives and property of American citizens and all foreigners sojourning in Mexico shall be respected.

If disorder in the Mexican republic continues for another 30 days the resolution provides the President shall intervene, "establish peace and order and civil government, and take possession of all public property of the former republic of Mexico and hold the same until every item of expense and all damages for the deprivation of liberty or the destruction of property of any American citizen or citizens of any other nation has been fully compensated out of the Mexican revenues."

Gives President War Power.

It is also demanded that in the event of intervention the President is empowered to rehabilitate the Mexican Government, prepare the Mexicans for self-government and restore law and order, "and the President is authorized to use the land and naval forces of the United States for the accomplishment of all such purposes."

The preamble of the resolution defends the Monroe Doctrine and asserts that the United States is in duty bound to protect its own citizens in Mexico as wel as the citizens of other nations. The refusal of this country to carry out the Monroe Doctrine, the resolution says, might justify foreign intervention.

Mr. Murrays resolution refers to President Huerta as "the usurping marauder." Huerta, the resolution recites, "has nullified the Constitution, destroyed all lawful authority and government and has committed upon the persons of the President (Madero) and his family, a blackhanded murder, paralleled in all history only by the cruelty of the dark ages, with all its superstititions and dastardly deeds of rapine and murder."

"There remains in Mexico neither rights of government nor of belligerent powers such as could be recognized," continues the Oklahoman's resolution.

Punishment for Guerrillas.

After warning the Mexican Government to restore order and protect the lives of Americans, it is stipulated that this Government "shall pursue to the ends of the earth" any military leader or band who disregards the warning.

NEW RULING ON DELAY ASKED

Hearing of Crawford Case May Conflict With Frank Trial; Conference Planned.

Reuben R. Arnold, of counsel for Leo M. Frank, announced Tuesday that he proposed to seek a conference of the attorneys in the Frank case and in the Crawford will hearing to determine which case should be postponed next Monday, the date set for the beginning of the trial of Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan.

Mr. Arnold, Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, both also are attorneys in the Crawford will case, and it would be impossible on this account to conduct the two cases simultaneously. The Crawford hearing will resume Wednesday before a special auditor in a branch of the Superior Court, and undoubtedly will be in progress next week if it is not stopped by a postponement.

The will hearing, because of the fact that it already is under way, would have a natural precedence over the Frank trial. This may be waived, however, in order to take up the Phagan mystery.

Bloody Stick Found.

The defense admitted Tuesday that it had in its posession a bloodstained stick, which it says was found behind the radiator on the first floor of the pencil factory, near the elevator shaft on May 10, and that this weapon will be used to uphold the theory of Frank's attorneys announced some weeks ago, that Mary Phagan was killed with a stick by the negro Jim Conley, after she had received her pay envelope.

While it had long been known that the theory that the Phagan girl met her death by a blow over the head with a stick would be advanced by the defense, the actual posession, it was learned, has been zealously guarded. The weapon it was learned, was found by L. P. Whitefield and W. D. McWorth, of the Pinkerton force, who made a careful search of the factory on May 9. It was turned over to counsel for Frank on the following day.

None of the attorneys for the defense will say that they intend to ask for a postponement of the Frank trial, but the hot weather and the fact that the Crawford case is in progress at this time apepar to be combining to bring about such a consummation.

Judge Roan has stated that the case would be called Monday, but he probably will accede to the request for a conference some day this week to discuss the matter.

Court Likely to Accede.

Attorney Arnold will ask that the jurymen be not summoned until a definite decision is reached as to which of the cases is to take precedence.

Despite the reported repudiation of her sensational affidavit that eLo M. Frank had tried repeatedly on the night of the Mary Phagan murder to secure a room in which to bring a girl, Mrs. Nina Formby declared in Chattanooga Tuesday that she would be in Atlanta on July 28 to testify to her statements when the trial of the pencil factory superintendent opens.

Denies She Retracted.

According to a dispatch from Chattanooga, where the woman has been for several weeks, Mrs. Formby denies having ever retracted from her original declarations which she made to the police, and further stated that she would repeat them on the witness stand.

The police have asserted that Mrs. Formby has been eliminated from the case.

LATEST NEWS

E. C. Kilpatrick, of No. 391 Capitol avenue, a clerk in the office of the traffic manager of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, was arrested by Policeman Bryant Tuesday afternoon, after several young women employed in the offices of the Grant Building had complained to the police that he had insulted them. Tuesday afternoon two young women employed in a Grant Building office saw Kilpatrick coming down in the elevator, and, they claim, recognized him as the man who had been insulting them. They followed him from the building and pointed him out to Policeman Bryant.

Kilpatrick is held at headquarters under $100 bond. He declares that he is a victim of mistaken identity.

COURT DIRECTS FRANK VENIRE BE DRAWN

Preparations Are Made to Begin Trial Monday Despite Talk of Delay.

prepared Tuesday to draw the 150 veniremen for the trial. This venire will be called next Monday morning unless the weather is unusually warm.

The jury, in all probability, will be selected and served before Wednesday night, according to Judge Pendleton.

Attorney Reuben R. Arnold stated Tuesday morning that he probably would ask Judge Pendleton to draw the venire from the Grand Jury box, and that he felt confident he could cite enough law on the subject to sustain his point.

Solicitor to Fight Move.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey stated that the procedure was altogether irregular, if not illegal, and that he would oppose such a move as strongly as he fought the attempt on the part of the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley over his protest.

The attorneys on both sides will be notified by telephone when Judge Pendleton begins to draw the venire, and he will allow them to be heard.

Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside at the Frank trial, will not return to Atlanta from Covington until Friday. He announced to a correspondent of The Georgian in Covington that the Frank trial would be called next Monday sure, but he would not commit himself as to whether he would consider any move for postponement after the case was called.

Before leaving for Covington he remarked that if the weather was as hot next Monday as it was last week he would welcome some sufficient ground for postponement.

Both Sides Are Ready.

Attorneys Arnold and Rosser admit they would like to se the trial postponed to escape the ordeal of a hard fight in torrid weather, but state they will be reluctant to ask for delay unless there is some very excellent reason why the case should not go to trial.

Both sides are ready. All the witnesses who will be used are within the jurisdiction of the court and able to attend. The inability of any one of the more than 100 to be in court on the day the case is called would sustain a request for postponement, but the attorneys for the defense made it clear that if any move for postponement for any other reason than the absence of a witness was made, it would come from the other side, or the judge.

Attorney Arnold stated that the failure of the Grand Jury to indict Conley had made little difference to their case, because it had been built before any known move was made to bring about the indictment.

"It made absolutely no difference to us," he said. "It was purely a technical point in the trial that would have been in our favor. As to the negro's character and standing, it would make little difference to a fair-minded jury whether he were indicted."

Bacon, Unopposed, Gets 29,529 Votes In Senate Election

A total of 29,529 votes were cast for Augustus O. Bacon for United States Senator in the special election held July 15. No one opposed Senator Bacon, but more than one-eighth of the State's electorate turned out to give him a complimentary vote.

The election was unique in that it was the first to be held under the new law requiring United States Senators to be elected by direct vote of the people.

The returns were canvassed before the House and Senate in a joint meeting Tuesday by a committee of five Senators and five Representatives. The senatorial committee was composed of Senators Jones, Tarver, Tyler, Turner and Bush. The House committee consisted of Representatives Miller, McCrory, Smith, Edmondson and Culpepper.

35 CONVICTS IN CAGE BURNED TO DEATH

Fire Starts in Hay Under Sleeping Quarters on Mississippi Penal Farm.

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—Thirty-five convicts, sleping on the second floor of a wooden cage at the Oakley convict farm 20 miles southwest of Jackson, were burned to death early this morning.

All of the victims were negroes and their bodies were burned beyond recognition. This afternoon their charred bodies were buried in the prison grave yard.

The fire started on the first floor at the stairway landing, cutting off the only avenue of escape. The structure was built ten years ago with lumber taken from the old penitentiary building in Jackson. It burned with astonishing rapidity.

The convict farm is not equipped with any form of fire protection. Two night watchmen are employed at the place, but neither saw the fire until the flames burst through the windows of the lower floor.

The screams of the dying prisoners could be heard for nearly two miles. Farmers in the vicinity hurried to the scene, but were unable to give any assistance. The lower floor of the cage was used as a store building, quantities of hay, corn and molasses being in storage. The hay doubtless caused the fire to spread with added rapidity.

The Oakley farm is in charge of Sergeant S. T. Byrd. The prison hospital also is located at that place, but the convicts who lost their lives were not members of the hospital squad, all of them being employed in the cotton fields. Several notorious negro criminals were among those who lost their lives.

Coroner J. W. Beal, accompanied by a jury, went to Oakley this morning to hold an inquest, and endeavor to ascertain the cause of the fire.

Origin of Fire Mystery.

"I can't explain it," said Sergeant Byrd over the long distance telephone this morning. "As to the origin of the fire I haven't the slightest idea. It may have been a match carelessly dropped at the stairway. I can not believe it was of incendiary origin.

"There was never a chance to save any of the prisoners. The blaze was under good headway before anybody discovered it. When we reached the building it was to find that the fire centered around the only stairway leading to the upper floor of the cage. All of the upper windows were covered with heavy iron bars and it was impossible for the convicts to fight their way out.

Fight Was Useless.

"We did everything in our power, but the fight was useless. The building was doomed from the first and the piteous cries of the poor prisoners who were being roasted alive added to the demoralization of our forces. We have no sort of fire protection or fire fighting equipment here, and the buckets of water thrown by other prisoners on the building had no effect whatever."

The first news of the holocaust was received by Mrs. O. M. Spickard, secretary of the State Prison Board, in a telephone message from Mrs. Byrd wife of the sergeant. Mrs. Byrd was almost hysterical and could give but few of the details. An hour later communication was secured with Sergeant Byrd and a list of the victims obtained. A number of the prisoners were life termers.

Under prison rules, all convicts must be in their cages and lights out by 9 o'clock. The prisoners had been sleeping several hours when they were awakened by the intense heat and clouds of smoke that poured up from below.

According to Assistant Secretary S. E. Birdsong, of the Prison Board, nearly all convict cages at the prison farms, except those at Parchman, are similarly constructed, having only one means of exit.

Clark Makes White Suits Congress Fad

WASHINGTON, July 22.—If Mark Twain could return to earth and come to Congress he would be immensely gatified by the unanimity with which distinguished statesmen have adopted his fad of wearing white.

Over on the House side, Speaker Champ Clark, looking like a huge mountain of ice cream, is resplendent in white from his snowy hair to his immaculate white ties. Since he has set the fashion there, it has spread like wildfire over the chamber.

SEEK EVIDENCE AGAINST GANG OF ROBBERS

Police Attempt to Prove Pair That Nearly Killed Clerk Committed Series of Crimes.

Detectives Tuesday searched the home of R. W. Miller, at Red Oak, near Atlanta, in an attempt to unearth more evidence that Miller and T. W. Reeves, who were caught after they had knocked senseless an employee in the store of R. A. Gober, No. 30 Carroll street, and were trying to open the safe Monday night, perpetrated a series of daring and cleverly-planned burglaries covering a period of several months.

During the afternoon the two men were again cross-examined by the police.

Their alleged attempt to loot the Gober store came near to being fatal to Eugene M. Davis, 18 years old, formerly residing in Bishopville, S. C. Davis, who occasionally worked at night for his employer, was sitting on the steps to the store about 11 o'clock when four men approached him.

"Boy," one of them said, "can you let us into the store? We are mighty thirsty and want a dope around."

Thrown Into Ice Box.

"Sure," replied Davis without hesitation as he pulled a bunch of keys from his pocket and unlocked the store door.

Entering the store, he was followed by the men. The small ice box where soft drinks are kept is just inside the door. As Davis raised the lid of the ice box he was rudely seized from the rear by the nape of the neck and a rough hand was clapped over his mouth.

He was bumped against the side of the wall into near insensibility and dragged to the rear of the store, which is used as a butcher shop. Back of the butcher shop counter is an ice closet about nine feet high and four feet deep.

His captors opened the ice box door and thrust Davis in, bolting the heavy door upon him. Davis was unable to rise to his feet and lay in a cramped position, with 300 pounds of ice not two inches from his head.

Thought He Would Die.

"The air was stuffy," said Davis. "I could hardly get my breath, and I thought several times I would die. It was terribly cold, and a sickening sensation came over me as I felt the drops of water trickle down on my back."

"I couldn't hear a sound. The men had taken the keys from me, and I didn't know whether anyone would ever get me out. The keyring taken from me contained the key to the safe which I had heard Mr. Gober say contained several hundred dollars. Finally I could stand it no longer; my breath was gone and I felt I was lost. I remembered no more until I awoke to find men standing all around me and someone giving me a taste of something which felt warm and good.

"I must have been in there fifteen minutes at least, but I don't know. Mr. Gober says it was more than twenty minutes before they found me."

Defy Police to Prove Guilt.

Despite the assertion of the detectives that they have connected the men with a chain of robberies and suit case thefts extending over a considerable time, both Reeves and Miller emphatically denied Tuesday that they had had anything to do with them and defied the police to prove their charges.

The detectives went to the home of Reeves, 13 Stonewall street, and there found three suit cases, which, they say, are stolen property. Another suit case was found in a woman's room at No. 153 1-2 Whitehall street.

Chief Lanford Tuesday morning said that Reeves and Miller had stolen more than 40 suit cases at the depots in the recent weeks, and also had participated in attempts at safe-cracking and burglary. Detectives Chewning, Davis, Sturdivant and Rosser have taken turns in trailing the men in the last six weeks.

distant, Washington is on the qui vive for every shift in the Mexican situation.

Predictions are made that, by the time Ambassador Wilson arrives, the Huerta administration will be in such an unstable conditon that the envoy will not recommend that it be recognized, no matter how favorably disposed he may be toward it.

Dispatches of the past two days have caused deep alarm to the State Department because of the insistent appeals for help coming from Americans in the demoralized country.

Tuxpam, on the southeastern coast of Mexico, is now the center of all official eyes. The town was captured by the Constitutionalists, and the battleship Louisiana, with Rear Admiral Fletcher aboard, is speeding toward the port from Vera Cruz to prevent possible depredations on foreign property.

Senator Demands Protection of U. S. Citizens.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Senator Fall, of New Mexico, to-day called up in the Senate his resolution providing that the constitutional rights of American citizens shall go with them throughout the world and that American life and property shall be protected abroad. This resolution was framed from a plank in the Democratic platform.

"I ask that the resolution be placed before the Senate for immediate consideration," said Fall. "Its importance demands immediate attention."

Senator Bacon, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, moved the resolution be referred to his committee.

Bacon Urges Caution.

"We are in a position of grave responsibility," said Senator Bacon, "and no man who loves his country can afford to shut his eyes to the effect of an enunciation on this matter by the Senate, therefore care should be taken in voicing an opinion on this resolution."

Bacon argued the resolution was open to criticism inasmuch as an American citizen in Mexico or the Balkans had no constitutional rights.

Senator Lodge, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, called attention to the fact that the resolution was copied from a plank in the Democratic platform which had been framed by Senator O'Gorman, of New York.

Lodge Takes Issue.

"Can not we act upon two abstract principles, contained in this resolution, because these principles are being violated in a neighboring country at this time?" demanded Senator Lodge.

Senator Bacon asked if Lodge wished to send an army to Mexico because American citizens have been imprisoned there.

"No," said Senator Lodge. "There are diplomatic steps to be taken to rescue American citizens and a resort to arms should be had only when all other stepe have been taken. This resolution can not be lightly dismissed."

"As I see it, the resolution means about this: If some person goes to a foreign country and gets in trouble there, he can embroil all the people in the United States. I am not in favor of the resolution," said Senator Jones, of Washington.

Japan Not to Aid Huerta Administration.

MEXICO CITY, July 22.—Japan will not aid the Huerta administration in its fight for recognition by the United States.

While greatly appreciating the friendship shown the Japanese Government, the latter's charge d'affaires to-day notified President Huerta and his Cabinet that his country will not sanction any demonstration, when the new Japanese Minister arrives, which would tend to be of an anti-American character.

Committee Favors Woman Lawyer Bill

Chances for women lawyers to obtain the right to practice in the courts of Georgia received a boost Monday afternoon when the bill introduced by Representative J. L. Cooper met with a favorable report from General Judiciary Committee No. 1.

For several years the House has been so divided on the question that each time the bill has been killed.

TARVER BILL IS PASSED AFTER HOT FIGHT

Provides for Damage Suits in Homicide Cases—Was Issue in Senate Several Years.

Following a two-hour debate, in which charges of being in league with the railroads and counter charges of seeking to increase the earnings of damage suit lawyers were made, the Georgia Senate Tuesday morning, by a vote of 27 to 10, passed Senator Tarver's bill, as amended, providing for recovery by certain parties in cases of homicide. The bill has been before the Senate several years.

Snator Miller, of the Twenty-fourth District, who opened the fight on the bill in an hour's speech, declared the authors of the bill could not have drawn a better thing for the damage suit lawyers. He offered a substitute bill omitting the alleged drastic features, which was voted down. Judge Allen, of the Twentieth, also opposed the bill.

In rebuttal Senator Tarver declared the opposition had the interests of the railroads at heart. Following the vote Senator Miller gave notice of requesting reconsideration of the bill.

One Other Bill Passed.

In addition to Senator Tarver's bill, the Senate passed one other, a local measureo ffered by Senator Smith, of the Ninth, amending the charter incorporating the town of Edison.

The Senate passed a resolution, offered by Judge Allen, extending sympathy to Speaker Burwell upon the death of his sister, Miss Rosa Burwell.

The General Judiciary Committee of the Senate reported adversely the bill for an amendment to the Code providing that the only grounds for total divorce shall be adultery. It is understood a minority report on this measure will be filed with the President of the Senate.

The committee also reported in the negative on the bill providing for the rotation of judges of Superior courts. A favorable report was made on the bill providing for the appointment of a Notary Public for the State at large, as well as a bill providing for an amendment to the penal code making husband and wife competent as witnesses in criminal proceedings, but not compelled to testify one against the other.

Other Committees Report.

The Senate Finance Committee, headed by Senator Miller, recommended the bill forcing foreign fire insurance companies that have reinsured all policies to show cause for withdrawal from the State.

The Penitentiary Committee reported favorably the measure making it unlawful for any person with authority to deliver a prisoner to another.

Thomas Protested As Crawford Case Solicitor Pro Tem

Reuben R. Arnold, one of the attorneys for Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, under heavy bail on the charge of poisoning her husband, Joshua Crawford, filed a protest Tuesday against the appointment of Attorney Lewis Thomas, former City Solicitor, as Solicitor Pro Tem in the prosecution of Mrs. Crawford.

The appointment was made by Judge W. D. Ellis because of the disqualification of Solicitor Dorsey. Attorney Arnolds based his objection on the ground that Thomas already had been one of the attorneys in the case and therefore also was disqualified.

Attorney James said Tuesday he would go before Thomas and seek to have him indict Fred Lumb so that extradition papers might be obtained. He said he also would urge the immediate indictment of Mrs. Crawford.

Joseph E. Johnson Dies in Sanitarium

Joseph E. Johnson, 86 years old, father of George E. Johnson, the Police Commissioner, of No. 302 Luckie street, died Tuesday morning at 5 o'clock at a private sanitarium. He is survived by three sons, George E., Orie and W. L. Johnson.

For several years Mr. oJhnson was active in various lines and well known by business men of Atlanta.

The funeral will be held from the residence Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Interment will be in Oakland Cemetery.

OBITUARY

The double funeral of Casey Daniels and Jerry Moles, who were drowned in the Chattahoochee River Saturday while on a fishing trip, was held from the Congregational Church on McDaniel and Hightower streets Tuesday morning. The body of Casey Daniels was interred at Sardis churchyard, that of Jerry Moles at Westview.

Mrs. Rachel Harland, twenty-eight years old, wife of John H. Harland, cashier at the Putt & Davies Company, died Tuesday morning at 2 o'clock at their home, No. 196 Juniper street. The funeral will be held from the residence at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. Interment in Westview.

Mary M. Mapes, two-year-old daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. A. L. Mapes, No. 210 Winthrop street, died Tuesday morning at 6 o'clock. Funeral services will be held from Poole's chapel at 2 o'clock Wednesday. Interment in Westview.

Melvin Nesbitt, 15-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Nesbitt, died Tuesday morning at the home, No. 25 Dill avenue. Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment in Westview.

The funeral of Mrs. Clara Holt, who died Sunday, will take place at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the residence, No. 720 East Fair street. Interment at Hollywood.

NOVEL QUESTION FOR SUFFRAGE DEBATE

Speakers to Determine Difference in Meaning of "Suffragette" and "Suffragist."

Woman suffrage in all its phases will be discussed Tuesday night in Taft Hall. One of the important questions to be settled will be the distinction between a suffragist and a suffragette. Speakers who will take up this angle of the argument declare there is a wider gap in the meaning of the words than there is between sanitarium and sanatorium.

The debate will be under the auspices of the Habersham Chapter, D. A. R., and is the last of a series of entertainments arranged by the chapter to aid in raising funds for the new building which will be erected in Peachtree street.

"This will be an open discussion on the suffrage question, as one of the leading thoughts of the day," said Mrs. William Lawson Peel, outlining the plans. "It must not be thought for a moment, however, that the Daughters of the American Revolution are taking part in this discussion as an organization or even as individuals.

"For instance, our last entertainment was a Mother Goose affair, but it was not intended that the public suppose we were all geese.

"Our next venture will be the presentation of beautiful Indian legends, but it can not be inferred that we are Indians."

Mrs. Peel, who is vice president general, N. S. D. A. R., and prominently connected with Habersham Chapter, will preside.

The meeting will be called at 7:45 o'clock. Among the speakers will be Miss Rosa Woodberry, Mrs. M. C. Hardin, Mrs. M. T. McWhorter, Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, Mrs. W. H. Felton, Mrs. M. L. McLendon, Mrs. Frances Whiteside, Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, J. R. Smith, R. H. Hardeman, Dr. A. M. Hughlett, H. H. Swift, J. L. Hope, W. L. Converse, Louis Wisdom and R. A. Broyles.

Council Serenaded After Aiding Police

Council Monday had just increased the salaries of six roundsmen $5 by changing their names to sergeants and the leaders in the fight were leaning back in satisfaction when the air suddenly was filled with lively dance music.

Custodian Joe Shearer had a phonograph in the adjoining committee room and someone had started it. The councilmen heard all the records before they stopped the machine.

STORY OF PHAGAN CASE BY CHAPTERS

Slaying of Factory Girl, South's Most Baffling Crime Mystery, Reviewed in Detail.

CHAPTER I.

Will the veil of mystery be lifted when the curtain rises next Monday on another scene in Atlanta's darkest tragedy?

A vast audience, shocked by the horror of Mary Phagan's fate on a Saturday of last April and held through the succeeding weeks in the thrall of the baffling crime drama, in keen suspense awaits this question's answer.

Will Fulton County's Solicitor General be able to point his finger at Leo M. Frank and exclaim, "That is the man who strangled Mary Phagan!" backing his damning accusation with such an abundance of evidence that there can remain no shadow of doubt?

Or will Luther Rosser, certain to be a towering and masterful factor in the titanic struggle that is to be staged, unmask his strength, bring to bear the secret evidence that has been in his possession for weeks, beat down every bulwark of suspicion that the State has erected about its prisoner and, as a dramatic finale, assail the negro, Jim Conley, cowering in the witness stand, with a raking volley of questions that will leave the negro man shaken and terrified, a confession of the crime upon his lips?

Whole State Stirred.

All of Atlanta—most of the State—is hanging with the most intense interest on the outcome.

No other crime ever stirred Georgia to its depths as has the slaying of the little factory girl.

No murder ever has so gripped the hearts and aroused the sympathies of the people throughout the State.

Georgia's criminal history reveals no other case in which the public's interest has remained at fever heat through three months filled with other exciting events. From the time the extras first flamed the details of the brutal killing in the National Pencil Factory until the present there has appeared to be no diminution in the desire to learn each day's developments.

There was in the early days of the tragedy a cry for summary vengeance upon the murderer, but time has tempered this into a universal demand for justice, which is none the less determined in that it is not so demonstrative as the first hot wave of indignation.

The Phagan case has remained in the public mind partly, of course, because it has remained as baffling a mystery as the local detectives ever have encountered. With the mystery solved its appealing interest gradually would have died out, but a review of the tragic features of the drama so far as it has progressed and a consideration of those who have parts in it supplies an explanation of why the fate of Mary Phagan is still uppermost in the people's hearts.

The revolting circumstances of the crime—the attack, the pitiful struggle of the helpless child in the hands of her assailant, the blow and, finally, the garrote—all refuse to be erased from the memory.

Two Principal Figures.

But standing out in stronger prominence than the remembrance of these abhorrent details are two of the principal figures in the tragedy.

They are Mary Phagan, victim, and Leo M. Frank, charged by the State with her death. These two have made the appeal to the public imagination. The contrast in their positions in life intensified it.

Mary Phagan was only a little factory girl whose happy and innocent laughter was stilled by one of the blackest crimes in Atlanta's history.

Leo Frank, a brilliant young man of position and family, was accused of this deed of a beast in human guise.

Mary Phagan was not rich. She was glad to get the $3 or $4 a week that her work at the pencil factory won for her.

Leo Frank's family had wealth. An uncle was a reputed millionaire.

Mary Phagan had hardly the education to which her years entitled her. Times were not always easy in her family and she was driven to neglect her schoolbooks and work in the factory.

Frank was a Cornell graduate. He had a high technical education. He had been sent abroad to select the machinery for the Atlanta plant. His business associates placed every confidence in him. His friends knew him for an upright and moral young man, with a most promising career ahead of him.

That he would descend to the level of a criminal of the worst type was inconceivable to them. The possibility furnished to thousands of others a subject for daily conjecture.

Life of Slain Girl.

Mary Phagan's life began 14 years ago in Marietta. She was the petted "baby" of the family. She had three older brothers and a sister, now 18. Even in the early years of childhood she is remembered as having the pretty features and attractive ways that made her greatly liked by her girl friends later when she came to work in Atlanta.

For a playmate in the days at Marietta she had one who was to play a brief but sensational part in April's tragedy. It was J. M. Gantt. Within a few hours after her cold body was found in the gloomy basement of the National Pencil Factory her childhood playmate was arrested as he left a car in Marietta, to which place there seemed at the time every indication that he was fleeing.

Her childish prattle had changed to the happy conversation of young girlhood when the family moved to East Point. There bereavement visited the family in the death of Mary's father. Hardship followed sorrow and it became necessary for little Mary to follow the example of her brothers and sisters and assist in providing a livelihood for the family. She could not do much, but she did her mite willingly and cheerfully.

A year ago Mrs. Phagan married W. J. Coleman and the family moved to No. 146 Lindsay street, Atlanta. Mary obtained work in the National Pencil Factory and soon made friends with all the children about her home and with the girls she met at the factory. Although she never had many of the luxuries of life, Mary was reared carefully by her mother and enjoyed the wise counsel that is sometimes denied the children of families in more pretentious circumstances.

All Loved Little Mary.

To the loving and painstaking home training, the attractive half-shy little maiden brought a naturally sweet disposition. In the few leisure hours she had she often played about her home with the children of the neighbors. The little people of Bellwood, on the outskirts of Atlanta, all grew to love the sweet-tempered, pretty little girl. When they returned to their homes after a frolic their conversation was of what Mary had said and what Mary had done.

The fathers and mothers began to take notice of her as she laughed and chattered among the other children. They came to watch for the time each morning when she boarded a car to go to work at the pencil factory. They took a sort of parental interest in the bright-eyed, light-hearted little girl.

The small community is a bit of a city in itself. Everyone knows everyone else and the neighborly spirit is exemplified in the manner in which the residents, most of them working people, struggle for each other and sympathize in each other's afflictions. They joined in their near-worship of the little factory girl. She embodied in their minds pure and attractive young girlhood. They guarded her reputation almost as jealously as did her own mother. If anything should happen to her it would be a shock to every family in the little community.

On a Thursday, the last in April, Mary was playing with two of her dearest girl chums, Vera Epps and Lillian Waignel. The back yards of the Phagan and Epps homes adjoined. The Waignel girl lived just across the street from Vera Epps at No. 249 Fox street. An expected shipment of metal at the pencil factory had not arrived and a section of the plant was shut down temporarily, throwing Mary out of work until the metal should arrive.

A Strange Foreboding.

The three little girls ran and played about the whole afternoon, laughing and talking in their childish happiness. Toward evening, tired from the frolic, they rested on the embankment near their homes. In the hard red clay they dug out their initials as they rested.

"M. P." were the letters scratched out of the dirt by Mary.

"Let's keep them here always," cried Vera, clapping her hands.

"But if one of us should die?" suggested Mary.

"Then the other two of us would come back here and dig the initials out again when it rained," Vera replied, but a shadow had fallen over the gayety of the little group.

Two days later several of the housewives of Bellwood, looking from their windows, saw Mary Phagan get aboard a car for Atlanta, and they never saw her return. Vera Epps waved her a good-bye as Mary hurried down the street without a thought that it was a last farewell.

When Vera looked upon her playmate the next time, there was no answering smile. The pink cheeks that flushed with happiness and health were ghastly white except where they were begrimed and pitifully bruised and swollen. The beautiful young body, once full of life, was cold and inanimate and mutilated.

Goes to the Factory.

The Confederate veterans were preparing to honor their dead when Mary came into town that day. It was a holiday and she had planned to go to the pencil factory to get the $1.20 due her for the short time she had worked that week and then to witness the parade of the boys in gray.

She got a word of greeting from Conductor W. T. Hollis when she boarded the car on its run into town. Motorman W. M. Matthews, who many times before had brought the little girl from her home in Bellwood to work in Atlanta, also noticed her as he slowed down to take her — at the crossing.

Conductor Hollis says that the car arrived at Broad and Marietta streets at 12:07 o'clock. He was relieved there by another conductor and knows only that Mary stayed on the car. Motorman Matthews says that she left at Broad and Hunter and started toward the factory. Some time between 12:10 and 12:15 Mary Phagan entered the doors of the National Pencil Factory and went to the office of Leo Frank, where she drew her pay. She never was seen alive after that moment except by the brute that attacked her, beat her cruelly and completed his demoniac crime by looping a cord about the tender flesh of her neck and strangling her to death.

No One Saw Her Alive Again.

From the moment that the little factory girl entered the office of Frank the mystery dated.

Whether she never left the presence of the young superintendent alive, the public does not know.

Whether she started down the stairs and there was attacked by a negro fiend lurking in the darkness, later paying out the toll of her young life to the fury of his bestiality, also is shrouded in a mystery as yet undispelled by the searching investigation of three months.

Many pieces of evidence point to the latter surmise, but no one, so far as is known, is able to say with certainty that this is so, save possibly Jim Conley himself.

Conley and Frank, by their own admissions, were in the factory when Mary Phagan entered. Frank told freely of his presence there. Conley's confession was wrung from him after three weeks in a cell at the police station.

Upstairs on the fourth floor were Harry Denham and Arthur White. Mrs. White visited the factory to see her husband. She left shortly before 1 o'clock, when Frank came to the fourth floor to tell the men that if they wished to remain they would have to stay until about 3 o'clock, as he was going home for lunch and would lock them in.

Frank Alone in Factory.

They stayed in the factory and Frank departed within a few minutes. Shortly before 3 o'clock he returned and the men came downstairs and left, after White had gone into Frank's office to borrow $2.

Frank was alone in the factory from this time until 4 o'clock. No one has any information as to when Conley left or how he left, except by his own statements. He says that he left shortly after 1 o'clock by the front door. If Frank's story of the time he quit the building is true, it is fairer to presume that the negro left some time after 1 o'clock and through the basement's rear door, which he forced open by pulling the staple.

Newt Lee, the negro night watchman, came to the factory at 4 o'clock. He unlocked the outside door and the door leading up to the second floor.

"All right, Mr. Frank," he shouted as he approached the superintendent's office.

Sent Negro Lee Away.

Frank appeared rubbing his hands and remarking that it was too bad Lee had come down at this time as he might as well have stayed at home and got more sleep. He told Lee he might go and return at 6 o'clock, the regular hour for reporting.

A few minutes after Lee came back to the factory, J. M. Gantt, a discharged employee, walked across the street and said he would like to go into the factory and get a pair of shoes he had left there three weeks before. Frank gave him permission, but seemed a little doubtful of Gantt's real purpose. After the factory superintendent had gone to his home, he called Lee up on the telephone and asked if Gantt were gone and everything was all right at the factory. Lee replied that Gantt had left as soon as he had obtained the shoes and called up a girl friend from the office.

Lee made his regular rounds for several hours that night, shutting down all the windows and making his trip over the different floors, as was his custom.

He climbed down the ladder into the basement to see if everything was all right down there. He went no farther, however, than the flickering gas light at the bottom of the ladder. Peering through the darkness, he saw nothing out of the way.

Second Trip to Basement.

That night was no different than any other night up until shortly before 3 o'clock in the morning, if the negro's story is to be credited. At this time he made another trip into the basement.

Did he hear some sound that led him to go down the ladder and venture beyond the dim circle of light from the gas jet?

Was some other living being in the cellar when he clambered down the ladder?

He says not. With his dirty, smoky lantern he descended through the scuttle hole. This time he did not stop at the little area of light made by the gas jet. Swinging his lantern slowly back and forth in front of him, he made his way toward the rear of the basement. Near the boiler he stopped. After a few moments he looked about him.

What was that lying over there to his left on a pile of sawdust and other trash and dirt? Could it be that some of the rascally fellows in the plant were playing this ghoulish joke on him?

Tremblingly he held the lantern in front of him. The black man's eyes dilated with horror. There could be no mistake about it. His impulse was to flee, but he pulled himself together.

He started toward the dark, inert object lying there on the trash heap.

6,500-Pound Cheese Made in New York

UTICA, N. Y., July 22.—The finishing touches on a cheese weighing 6,500 pounds, the largest cheese ever made in New York State, if not in the world, were put on to-day at the Gowdy factory in Martinsburg.

Two days' milk from two factories was required. The cheese will be exhibited at the State fair in Syracuse.

DEATH'S SHADOW CAST OVER HOUSE

Recess Taken Out of Respect to Speaker Burwell, Whose Sister Died Suddenly.

A shadow was thrown over the House Tuesday morning by the death of Speaker W. H. Burwell's sister, Miss Ruth Burwell. Out of respect to the Speaker the House recessed for two hours after adopting resolutions expressing sympathy for the bereaved member.

Miss Burwell died Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Brooks, in Griffin, where she was visiting. While she had not been well for some time, her death was unexpected. Mr. Burwell spent Sunday with her and she appeared to be much improved.

Miss Burwell was well known throughout the State, being a woman of unusual brilliance. Her home was in Albany, where she was dearly beloved. She was 35 years of age.

Second Among Members' Family.

Her death is the second to occur among the families of House members during this session. Chairman L. R. Akin, of the Ways and Means Committee, suffered the loss of a daughter two weeks ago.

Adjournment for the entire day would have been taken Tuesday but for the fact that a joint meeting of the Senate and House had been arranged for the canvassing of the vote for United States Senator July 15, in which Senator Bacon was the only candidate.

In future the House will get down to work early, adopting a resolution Tuesday morning setting the hour of convening at 9 o'clock for the remaining 23 days of the session. The regular hour of adjournment, 1 o'clock, will continue.

House Faces Three Busy Weeks.

With virtually every committee meeting daily, the members of the House are facing three strenuous weeks. The local bills have been disposed of in wholesale quantities and but a small number remain before the House. The calendar is rapidly getting down to a general bill basis and scant attention will be paid to local ones in the future.

The recess prevented the taking up of the general appropriations bill which Chairman Wheatley, of the Appropriations Committee, had announced he would call for to-day, and it probably will be taken up Wednesday. The appropriation bill takes precedent over all other bills.

TRUE LOVE JOLTED IN ARSON HEARING

Boarder Adores Landlady, but She Has Him Bound Over as a Firebug.

Confessions of love requited were made and repudiated in Judge Broyles' court Tuesday when the trial of G. A. Vaughn on the charge of arson made by Mrs. A. C. Klapper following the burning of her home at No. 256 East Hunter street last Friday was heard.

Vaughn was bound over to a higher court under bond of $3,000, but not before he had emptied his heart of all its feeling for his accuser and declared that his love had not been spurned by her.

"Why she placed her arms about me and kissed me tenderly the morning of the fire," Vaughn, who was a boarder at Mrs. Klapper' home, declared. "And now she charges me with arson. It can not be true."

By this statement, Mrs. Klapper, who is past middle age, was considerably ruffled.

"I never did kiss him," she exclaimed. "One time he gave me $30 when I was sick to pay doctors' bills, and when I bought a coat with the money he got mad and said he would burn it up. And he did, and my house, too."

The fire was discovered in a closet in Vaughn's room on the top floor shortly after he had departed for downtown. Miss Bonnie Burns, another boarder, testified at the trial that Vaughn, in leaving the house had looked up at the roof. Miss Burns' testimony proved the strongest against Vaughn.

KODAKER KING OF ATLANTA FAME DIES IN CELL

Technicality Delays Pardon Until Too Late—Career Here Sensational—Jailed in Boston.

Cardenio F. King, Boston newspaper publisher and financier, who died a convict on the State farm at Bridgewater, Mass., Monday just before Governor Foss was ready to sign his pardon, had an Atlanta career almost as interesting as his pathetic death, according to Atlantans who knew him during his residence here more than ten years ago.

He came to Atlanta from North Carolina and was known as "Kodaker" Kink because of a column he ran in various Atlanta newspapers which was headed by a photograph of himself with a camera. His personal appearance marked him an unusual man, for he weighed about 300 pounds, had bright red hair and mustache and a rosy complexion.

His column was indicative of his character. It always began with a few breezy paragraphs of choice gossip, but a reader would not peruse far before he discovered himself buried in alluring advertisements.

Hoaxed by Walter Taylor.

Occasionally when advertisers refused to be convinced of the value of this column he would be sent out on regular assignments. It so happened that one day he was sent to the police station, the "beat" of Walter Taylor, the present City Clerk, but then a bright young reporter. "Kodaker" King was unfamiliar with the assignment, so he decided the best policy was to follow close on the heels of Walter Taylor. And thereby hangs a tale.

Walter Taylor "framed" with Detective Billy Crim, the famous policeman who passed away several years ago, to call him suddenly as though something startling had happened. Crim sprang the trick one hot August day while Taylor and King were walking down the street, and Taylor, lithe and young, darted up the steps.

He did not stop until he had gained the roof of the cupola of the police station. He did not even stop to look around, for he knew that King, 300 pounds net, was following him with all his might and main.

King Reached Top—Purple.

Several minutes later King, puffing and blowing, stuck his head through the manhole on the roof. His red face had turned purple and the perspiration streamed down his cheeks.

Soon afterward "Kodaker" King left Atlanta. He was flat broke and his friends did not know what would become of him. But a few years later he returned with his name changed to "Oil" King; and it was remarked that if his oil flowed as much as his money, he would be a second John D. Rockefeller.

As "Kodaker" he had gone to Boston. But he dropped that title with the discovery of oil at Beaumont, Texas. He went out there as an advertising man and soon owned a number of acres of rocky land.

Train Attached for Debt.

Back East he hurried and organized an oil company. When he struck Atlanta he was traveling in a special train. He advertised his stock in two-page spreads in each of the Atlanta papers. Sam W. Small, evangelist and newspaper man, was engaged as his press agent.

The only reminder of his former days of poverty and gloom was when all his possessions in the train were attached by a justice of the peace bailiff for an old debt of $40. But he paid that and was on his way.

The next Atlantans heard of King was that he was in the penitentiary in Massachusetts. He had been the owner of a daily paper, The Boston Daily Tribune. His financial career was ended when he was convicted of obtaining $22,000 under false pretenses.

Died in Sight of Liberty.

Only a technicality prevented his last words being those of a free man. His wife and four sons were at his bedside. Governor Foss had been wired that his condition was hopeless. The Governor had canvassed his council and decided to grant a pardon. But the council could not be called together to take formal action until Tuesday.

When Dr. Emerson, medical head of the State Farm, went to announce that a pardon would be granted Tuesday he found King dead. Chronic intestinal trouble was the cause.

NEGRO CHAUFFEURS MEET.

The first meeting of the newly organized Negro Chauffers' Association will be held at the Negro Congregational Church Tuesday evening. Dr. R. H. Butler will deliver an address.

VOTING GROWS BRISK IN SLOGAN EMBLEM 'PRETTIEST GIRL' RACE

Miss Estell McDonald, latest entrant in the slogan button beauty contest.

Nominations and Photos of All Types of Beauty Are Pouring In.

With the "Beauty Button" contest, to determine whose picture among the hundreds of Atlanta girls shall adorn the Greater Atlanta button, in full swing, nominations with photographs of all types of beauty are coming in.

Hundreds of votes are being cast, everyone in Atlanta having the privilege of nominating and voting for whomever they wish. The honor of leading the city in its quest for the 500,000 population mark by 1920 is being sought on all sides.

Every contestant is busy securing votes, and with the end of the race, the picture of the candidate securing the largest number of votes will be placed upon the button.

One of the latest entrants is Miss Estell McDonald, an extremely attractive young woman, whose friends are confident that no mistake will be made if she is chosen to represent fair Atlanta.

'Bomb' for Wilson Was Cake of Soap; Doctor Brought It

WASHINGTON, July 22.—When Dr. Bernard Rachauer, who gave his address at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., called at the White House to-day and demanded to see President Wilson, the secret service men took him into custody long enough to examine a black bag the doctor carried.

The secret service operatives feared a bomb. They found a cake of soap and a roll of bandages.

Dr. Rachauer would not state his business with the President. He was told that the Chief Executive was "not at home."

Roumania Ready to Treat With Bulgars

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, July 22.—The Bulgarian Legation here this afternoon received the following dispatch from the home government at Sofia:

"The Government has decided to surrender Adrianople to the Turks."

BUCHAREST, July 22.—Roumania is willing to end the war with Bulgaria. In an official note issued today it accepts the Sofia Government's offer to cede territory above Turtukai and Dobrideh.

Roumania suggests, however, that the peace negotiations proceed within the borders of its own country.

Glass Tries to Quiet Money Board Strife

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Representative Ragsdale, of South Carolina, the member of the House Banking and Currency Committee who suddenly quit the committee because Chairman Glass could not furnish copies of certain amendments to the currency bill that Ragsdale demanded, returned to the conference on the bill with his Democratic colleagues to-day.

Glass made strenuous effort to preserve harmony in the committee.

Militants Are Fined; Burn Another House

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 22.—Following the severe battle between the militant suffragettes and the police, when the later arrested Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and six of her followers, the rioters were arraigned in police court to-day. Two were fined and two others were ordered to furnish bond to keep the peace.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, July 22.—The suffragettes' "arson squad" resumed operations here to-day. A house valued at $2,000 was destroyed by fire.

ATLANTA BATTLE RECALLED BY CLAYTON

Construction Head Gives Interesting Reminiscences on 49th Anniversary.

Captain Robert M. Clayton, well-known Atlantan who was in charge of a company and was much under fire during the siege of Atlanta, Tuesday, the forty-ninth anniversary of the Battle of Atlanta, talked interestingly to a Georgian reporter of the events that made this day famous in history.

"A strong movement is on foot to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of this battle next year with ostentatious ceremonies," said Captain Clayton.

"The old Moseley house on the Marietta road, just beyond the city limits, marks the headquarters of General John B. Hood, the commander of the Confederate army. It was on this spot that General Joseph E. Johnston was ordered to surrender his command to Hood July 18, 1864. General Johnston had refused to fight, retreating from Tennessee. On the day the change was made all the soldiers wore crepe on their arms.

Memorial Park.

"A proposition has been made to sell 37 acres of this property to the city for a memorial park. It is about the only battleground around here available for such a purpose."

Captain Clayton explained that the first fighting begun around Atlanta was on July 20, along the old Collier road, north of the city. During that battle he was struck for the first and only time during the war with a bullet. But it was a spent bullet and did not break the skin. Night found both divisions undisturbed in their positions.

Firing was resumed again on the morning of July 22, east of the city between the Georgia railroad and the old Koch house. Hood had sent Hardee with his corps around north of the city to make the attack. The Confederates charged from the south and east toward the city, but the city was held against them.

Where McPehrson Fell.

The fighting was the fiercest of any of the battles around Atlanta. Of it there is a vivid picture in Cyclorama at Grant Park.

General McPherson fell at a spot on McPherson avenue now marked by a marble column. He was succeeded in command of the Federals by General John A. Logan. It was the day of the death of General W. H. C. Walker, of the Confederates.

Colonel Albert Howell, well known in Atlanta, and the late Colonel L. P. Thomas commanded two regiments that charged and took a Federal battery which was stationed at the present corner of Moreland and DeKalb avenues.

Night came again without any change in the relative positions of the two armies.

Under Constant Fire.

The next fight was on July 28, on the Moseley place, west of the city. That day did not mark a victory, but it began the siege of Atlanta that did not let up until September 8, when the city was taken by General Sherman and burned to the ground.

Captain Clayton said the city was constantly under fire during all those days, although many of the people remained and business was carried on as well as possible.

One day a barber, sitting in front of his shop at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, was struck and killed by a shell. The shell also struck an iron street lamp post and pierced a hole in it. The post stands there yet, one of the many interesting marks of those terrible days.

House Has 'Spank' Day; Olive Warms Breeches of Pages

Tuesday was official spanking day in the House, with genial Sam Olive, Representative from Richmond County, as "spanker" and the pages as "spankees."

During the recess the pages became unusually playful. In fact, they are the liveliest pages the House ever has known. One of them developed the idea of initiating the new members of their ranks, but ran a-foul of Representative Olive, who decided to initiate the entire lot.

Ten slaps upon the western side of each of the pages' trousers were applied to each youngster. There was no escape, for as each boy's turn came the other pages seized him and held him firmly across genial Sam's lap, while the ten slaps were counted in unison.

Fire Sweeps Over County in Kentucky

LOUISVILLE, July 22.—Flames today are sweeping the fields of Green County.

Farmers are making heroic efforts to check the fierce blaze that has already burned over thousand of acres parched by the protracted drouth.

LEADERS AGREE TO PUSH BIG FUNDS BILL

Decks Cleared in House and Appriation Measure Will Go to Senate This Week.

When Chairman Wheatley, of the House Appropriations Committee, calls up the general appropriations bill Wednehday he will ask that it be made a continuing order until it is disposed of in the House and sent to the Senate.

The chairman of the Appropriations Committee has the extraordinary right under the rules of the House of calling up his bill whenever he pleases, and it must have the right of way.

Chairman Wheatley has determined to exercise his right to the limit, and to that end has invited and obtained the promise of Speaker Burwell's earnest and sincere support in putting the bill through.

Trying to Push It Along.

It is the purpose of Chairman Wheatley and the Speaker to have the general appropriations bill in the hands of the Senate at least by the end of this week, and if they succeed they will have the bill in the Senate earlier than it has been since the war, and at least ten days earlier than it has been in thirty years.

When the big bill comes up the House will immediately be resolved in a committee of the whole House, with some member other than the Speaker presiding, as the rules require.

The chairman of the Committee of the Whole House has not yet been announced, but it is likely it will be Mr. McMichael, of Marion, or Mr. Miller, of Bibb.

Both are experienced parliamentarians and either would make a fit and proper person for the work. Both are behind the effort to get the appropriation bill into the hands of the Governor well in advance of adjournment, as the Governor has requested.

General Tax Act Next.

The bill carries the constitutional appropriations, statehouse salaries, and the like, which can not be changed by the House, in full, and these items will be quickly disposed of.

The other items will go in in blank, to be filled in by the committee of the whole.

Immediately after the general appropriations bill is disposed of the tax revision bill and the general tax act will come into the House from the Ways and Means Committee, when, at the request of Chairman Aiken, those bills also will be given the right of way. Both should be in the hands of the Senate before the end of next week.

Speed Assured in Senate.

If this is accomplished, another House record will be smashed.

The chairmen of the two big committees and the Speaker of the House have been assured by a large majority of the House that they will be co-operated with in their efforts to expedite legislation.

In the Senate President Anderson is but waiting for the House measures in order that he may duplicate there the program of orderly haste to be enacted in the House. He has assurance of co-operation from a practically solid Senate.

Big Damages Asked In Macon Depot Case

MACON, July 22.—The special committees appointed to ascertain the amounts of damages claimed by property owners on Cherry street on account of the closing of the thoroughfare for the building of a union station have submitted their report to the Railroad Commission.

The report shows that the property owners want exceedingly large damages, and that it will take either arbitration or court suits to settle most of the claims.

Chamberlain Decides Not to Oppose Tariff

WASHINGTON, July 22.—That Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, a Democrat, does not intend to vote against the tariff bill because it carries free raw wool and other items objectionable to the West became apparent to-day.

An examination of the Congressional Record shows that the remark he made in the Senate yesterday that he would not support the bill has been revised out of the official record.

$500,000 Fine Paid Texas by Oil Trust

GREENEVILLE, TEXAS, July 22. A penalty of $500,00 was paid to-day to the State of Texas by the Magnolia Petroleum Company of Texas under a verdict by which H. C. Folger, Jr., and John D. Archbold submitted to a ruling that they release 21,596 shares of stock in the company to a trustee.

Instructions to pay the penalty were received by officers of the Magnolia Company from the offices of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

Orators within and without the General Assembly, particularly those given to loquacity and frequency of effect, sometimes being more or less hard up for something to say upon the spur of the moment—whatever that is—now and then jump a-straddle of the Grand Old Legislature's grand old neck and dance a hornpipe thereupon!

Always the liviest tune to dance by concerns the Legislature's "do-nothing" inclination, and its proneness to move at a snail's pace. Particularly is this the case when the orator immediately on the job is "a-gin the government, anyway."

An attack upon the present Legislature that it is too slow may be justified. Maybe it is slow—slower than it ought to be. Maybe legislatures ought to do everything right off the reel, and debate the matter afterward, if time holds out. Maybe a lot of things—but the only way to judge one legislature as to its efficiency is by past legislatures; and in the matter of slowness, laziness, pokeasyness, or generel cussedness, the present Legislature is entitled to be judged, perhaps.

The following things are true, as the records will show: Never before within the service of any member of the present General Assembly has a general appropriations bill been reported to the House for action so early as on the twenty-sixth day of its sitting.

And yet, this Legislature, under the direction of the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, will take up that very bill in the whole House to-day—the twenty-sixth day of its sitting!

The general tax act will be ready for the House before Saturday night—at least ten days earlier than any general tax act has been reported within a decade or more.

The various committees have reported more than 100 bills adversely, and easily as many more favorably. This was made possible by reason of the fact that the committees of both the House and the Senate were appointed this year two days earlier than ever before in thirty years.

In one recent Legislature, the Senate had the general tax act exactly FOUR days—this year it will have some fifteen days before adjournment. It is a well-known parliamentary fact, too, that both these bills have the right of way over all other bills at all times.

It undoubtedly is true that any Legislature would be able to travel much faster than it does were it not for the fact that local bills require almost as elaborate handling as general bills, and a reform in this matter has been urged for years. But since that reform never has been effected, it hardly seems fair to charge the present Legislature with giving to these bills more than the time absolutely necessary to their passage.

And so, while it may be true that the present Legislature is no faster than it should be, it is just as well to remember that the Legislature machine is of an old model, and therefore much out of date, and can not run any faster than it can!

When the State takes the speed limit off its Legislature, it naturally will have to provide a machine capable of making at least a little bit better time than the speed limit, or nothing will happen by way of reform.

The present Legislature may not be a wonder of wonders, but it really is moving along FASTER than usual—and that is the honest truth of it!

Mr. Payton, of Worth, the handsomest man in the last House, and one of the handsomest men in any House, looked in on the General Assembly to-day to see if it was moving along to suit him.

Mr. Payton gave it as his opinion that the present House is all right, so far as he could see, albeit he neglected to bring his eyeglasses along, and wasn't committing himself finally.

"I enjoyed my brief Legislative career," said Mr. Payton, "and made many lasting friendships while it continued. I take great interest in the work of the present House, and believe it will enact some wholesome legislation. I believe it wants to do the right thing, at least. I have met many new members, and the average seeme to run rather high. In many ways, however, being a member of the Legislature is more or less a thankless job, and it often happens that the best and most sincere workers fail to get the credit they really are entitled to."

"Uncle Billy" Wilson, of Gwinette, another veteran of the last House, and the prize humorist therein, was talking it over with his former colleagues to-day.

"Uncle Billy" declines and refuses to get excited about anything, and always takes life as easy as he knows how. He does not look upon a Legislator's job as one removing him very far from the ranks of just ordinary folks, and therefore he never takes himself too seriously.

"I love all the boys, and in the main they are good boys," said "Uncle Billy." "If they make mistakes, they generally are mistakes of the head and not of the heart!"

Louis E. Wisdom, of Forsyth, who is altogether 22 years of age but not much more, notwithstanding the fact that he looks every day of 17, had trouble with a new doorkeeper in the House of Representatives the other day.

Wisdom didn't know there was a new doorkeeper on the job until, accompanied by two friends of the female persuasion, he approached the door during a session for admittance.

"Hey, you, kiddo!" stage-whispered the doorkeeper, "you can't get in here!"

"The h—um—deuce, I can't!" said Wisdom, in a loud and commanding tone of voice. "I'm a member of the House!"

"Run along, buddy, and let your pipe go out—you can't put that over me! If you had claimed to be a page, all right, I might have fallen for it, but a person must be at least twenty-one to get in here as a member!" replied the doorkeeper, as he pushed Wisdom gently back.

Then Wisdom quit arguing, and went around to another door with his lady friends, where he stood in with the doorkeeper, and everything was all right.

When the new doorkeeper found out what he had done, he was much chagrined and attempted to apologize to Wisdom, but Wisdom is a good little fellow and wouldn't stand for any apologies. He admitted that he hardly looked the part of a mature and experienced statesman, anyway, and said he could and did understand the situation.

If it just hadn't been for the ladies—!

General West Gets Gettysburg Medal

A silver medal bearing the inscription "1863-1913, Fiftieth Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg," the gift of Governor Tener of Pennsylvania, has been received by General A. J. West, the Georgia Gettysburg Commissioner.

Accompanying the beautiful gift was a letter from Governor Tener in which he expresses his sincere appreciation for the active interest of General West in the celebration.

The medal has the kneeling figures of two veterans, blue and gray, on one side and on the reverse side two hands tightly clasped.

LAGRANGE GREETS WEEKLY EDITORS

Largest Attendance in 27 Years at Annual Georgia Press Convention.

LA GRANGE, July 22.—With 75 more delegates attending than at any previous convention, the twenty-seventh annual session of the Georgia Weekly Press Association opened here this morning. The delegates number 250 and represent 150 papers.

The convention assembled in the Troup County courthouse. After a solo by Miss Ruth Oppenheim, of Atlanta, and the invocation by the Rev. E. B. Vaughn, pastor of the First Baptist Church, LaGrange, Mayor John M. Edmondson and President W. A. Reeves, of the LaGrange Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the visitors. W. S. Coleman, of The Cedartown Standard, responded. Mrs. John N. Holder read a paper prepared by her husband, editor of The Jackson Herald, who was unable to attend. The theme was "The Influence of the Georgia Press on the Government of the State."

At 11:50 o'clock the convention delegates left for West Point, where a big barbecue was tendered this afternoon, followed by a reception at the home of W. Trox Bankston, editor of The West Point News. They return to LaGrange this afternoon.

300 Pellagra Cases In Flooded Counties

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—The State Board of Health to-day issued a report declaring that more than 300 cases of pellagra have been discovered in Mississippi counties that were overflowed during the spring floods.

In Washington County 125 cases were reported.

MAYOR BALKS AT DICTOGRAPH CHECK

Refuses to Sign $19 Voucher for Use of Very Machine That Trapped Him.

Mayor Woodward again is refusing to sign checks.

From the Police Department has come a voucher for $19 to pay the expense of the very dictograph that entrapped Mayor Woodward, Colonel T. B. Felder and others in the Williams House No. 2. Chairman A. R. Colcord, of the Council Police Committee, hesitated at approving this voucher and Mayor Woodward scoffs at the idea of him signing the check.

Also, he explained, he is not inclined to throw away $5 on an option on an electric feature to the new crematory. He sent the resolution providing this back to Council without acting on it. The lower branch of Council passed it up again by a vote of 15 to 2.

Although Council easily overrode Mayor Woodward the thirty-third time on the tax office merger issue the bill must be passed by the Legislature to become effective. It will have to be attached as a rider to the other charter amendments and then submitted to a vote of the people along with the other amendments.

MEN AND RELIGION BULLETIN NO. 65

CHAINGANGS IN GEORGIA

Breaking Rocks, Breaking Men, and a Death in Camp

Last Thursday night a man slept chained to others.

Doubtless the drag of the shackle on his leg disturbed his rest.

In the cool of Friday morning he shuffled out of the convict camp.

Linked with clinking steel to others, he came through the woods to the rock quarry.

The guard unlocked the gang chain.

The man scrambled down into the pit.

Work started.

The sun mounted higher.

Its beams sought and found the laborers.

Men began to feel it as they toiled.

Twelve pounds is the weight of the ordinary quarry hammer.

Theirs weigh forty-nine pounds in this quarry.

One, buying them for the county, said:

"Strength is not required to crush stone with these. They come down of their own weight. THE ROCK BREAKS."

YES, AND SO DO MEN!

Forty-nine pounds to the hammer!

You could scarcely raise one.

Consider, then, what you do when you force the man to do that which you could not endure—

Lifting this hammer—crushing stone with it when the thermometer registers nearly one hundred degrees!

And doing this at the bottom of a funnel-shaped pit of stone into which the sun's rays pour and beat, enveloping in wave on wave of agonizing heat the suffering striped and shackled working men!

Friday each minute the heat grew worse.

The atmosphere quivered with it.

The quarry became a pit of torment.

From its depths, to his keeper, the man cried:

"I am sick."

The guard replied:

"You didn't say so this morning."

Later the man fell fainting at his work.

Stripe-clad, shackled men lifted him tenderly.

They carried him out.

Through the woods a jolting springless wagon bore the dying man to the convict camp, where he died.

The man had not been condemned to death.

He was only a misdemeanor convict.

The utmost punishment provided by your law for him was twelve months in the chaingang, six months in jail and a fine of one thousand dollars.

And you had no wish to kill him.

BUT THE MAN IS DEAD.

Across the ages rings the question of God:

"What mean you that you break my people to pieces, and grind the faces of the poor?"

Down the centuries comes the voice of Jesus, saying:

"Woe unto you, for you load men with burdens grievous to be borne and you yourself touch not the burden with one of your fingers."

Do not deny responsibility for the man's death.

Your laws—our laws—placed him in the convict camp.

Your servant, a public official, made him work the day he died.

He feared your lash—our lash.

God will require of you and of us his blood and the blood of others.

WANT AD RACE TO BEGIN ON THURSDAY

Contestants and Those Who Expect to Enter Must See Want Ad Man on Wednesday.

Well, we're ready to start. Are you? The Want Ad Contest will begin Thursday morning. Long before noon the doorbells will begin to tinkle and housewives will be saying to contestants:

"Why, yes; I do want something. I need a better washerwoman. You can print an advertisement for one, and here's the money. Oh, there's something else. Perhaps a want ad will help me sell my old piano. You can put that in, too."

There's no limit to the number of things a want ad will do to make housekeeping easier, to fill a need. Here are just a few of them:

Find a cook or housegirl.

Sell an automobile, furniture, eggs, flowers.

Rent a room, furnished or unfurnished.

Find an apartment just like you want.

Get you boarders or find you a boarding house.

Sell your house or vacant lot, or find the kind of home you wish to rent or purchase.

Sell that fancy poultry to eager purchasers.

Find a lost handbag, a strayed family pet.

Locate missing persons.

Find a position if you're out of a job.

Get an Early Start.

But if you don't get an early start you'll be handicapped. No use in letting other folks get ahead of you. There are many contestants entered and ready to work, but not so many that your chances will be hurt. Atlanta is a big city, and there is room for everybody to have a chance to win.

If you already have entered, come to see the Want Ad Man to-morrow (Wednesday) sure. If you haven't entered yet, clip out the nomination blank in the big advertisement in to-day's issue of this paper, have it filled out, and bring it to the Want Ad Man early Wednesday. He will tell you everything you wish to know, put you under the direction of a skilled and experienced district manager, and start you in the race for that automobile.

Prizes Worth While.

Look over the prizes in the advertisement to-day. An automobile, a piano, a trip to California, motorcycles, bicycles, watches, diamonds—something worth trying for. And the contest will not cost you a cent. There's no gamble in it, no guesswork—nothing but the use of brains and energy.

You'll find the Want Ad Man at 403 Foote & Davies Building, Edgewood avenue and North Pryor street. You'll be mighty glad you met him!

Mother Fights for Custody of Children

AUGUSTA, July 22.—Mrs. Mary W. Zachry, wife of Julian J. Zachry, a well-known attorney and business man of this city and Harlem, Ga., has appealed from the decision of the Ordinary, who awarded the custody of the Zachry children to the father. The case will be heard before Judge Hammond, of the Superior Court.

Zachry and his wife were married here about four years ago, a few weeks after his first wife died. The second Mrs. Zachry was his stenographer. Several months ago the couple separated after a rather stormy married life. The wife took the two children. Zachry sued out writs of habeas corpus and obtained possession of them.

Woman in Charge Of 1,000 Convicts

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—Mrs. O. M. Spickard, a frail middle-aged woman, to-day is in charge of the Mississippi State penitentiary. She exercises control over more than 1,000 prisoners, including more than 100 murderers and burglars. Governor Brewer to-day said he would appoint Mrs. Spickard to a position on the Prison Board.

Mrs. Spickard became secretary of the board when Lawrence Yerger was convicted in the wholesale prison graft trials recently, and became head of the prison system when President C. C. Smith was convicted and removed.

Fair Sponsor of Arabian Style Admits New Fad Is Doomed Here.

At last Dame Fashion seems to have overstepped the line in freakish wearing apparel for women, so far as Atlanta is concerned.

The Arabian nose veil, an importation now much in vogue in Newport and other Eastern centers of all that is fashionable, has met a sharp rebuff here.

The veil in use is drawn taut over the tip of the nose and covers the mouth and chin. One sees but the eyes of the wearer. Mrs. French Vanderbilt, Mrs. William Goadby and others are its sponsors in the East.

Miss Nancy Reed, a former Atlanta girl, now visiting Mrs. George Spier in Twelfth street, is among the first here to attempt the nose veil.

"It won't do for Atlanta girls," she declared, and her decision seems to have been sustained, especially by the men of the city, who enjoy seeing all of a pretty face.

FATHER SHIELDS GIRL ARRESTED WITH DOCTOR

Grief of Forgiveness Displayed When Effie McCalmon Meets Parent and Brother.

The grief of forgiveness was pathetically displayed in Chief of Police Beavers' office Tuesday morning when Effie McCalmon, the country girl from near Carrollton, arrested Monday with Dr. M. W. Lewis, a prominent physician of that town, in a raid on the Scoville Hotel, met her father and brother, and begged to be taken home.

The girl's pathetic plight was more than the irate father and brother could endure. Simultaneously they clasped her in their arms. Then she was taken by them in an automobile to the station. The trio departed at 11 o'clock for home.

J. M. McCalmon, father of the girl, a prominent planter, and his son Emory, ticket agent at Bowden Junction, both told Chief Beavers they would return when the physician's case comes up to prosecute Lewis to the full extent of the law. They also declared they would bring the girl back to Atlanta and let her tell her story to the court.

"This man has cast shame on my home which can never be forgotten," declared the father. "He has blighted my daughter's future. Restitution by punishment of the law is a poor substitute, but I will have it."

Lewis was released Monday night, after he had secured the $1,000 bond under which he was bound over by Judge Broyles during the afternoon. Immediately afterward he disappeared.

Lewis and the girl were registered at the hotel as man and wife.

Photographers of U. S. May Come to Atlanta Next Year

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 22.—With a dozen boosters putting forth the brand of effort that captured the big Shriners' convention, Atlanta's chances of getting the next gathering of the Photographers' Association of America, now in session here, are growing better every hour.

The Atlantans have opened an office in the convention hall and a display in the lobby of the Hotel Baltimore, where the delegates are entertained and provided with literature descriptive of the Gate City. There are about 800 delegates here now, with several hundred more coming.

Harry Goodhart, L. D. Hicks and Fred Houser, who head the Atlanta delegation, are confident that the Georgia city will secure the next convention.

Mr. Goodhart declared this morning that "there is nothing to it but Atlanta. I have talked to several hundred delegates and they all want to come to the 'New York of the South.'"

Mississippi Tries to Break Rail Merger

CLARKSDALE, MISS., July 22.—Suits are prepared for filing to-day against the Illinois Central and Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroads, demanding penalties of nearly $50,000,000 and a dissolution of an alleged unlawful merger.

Infractions of the State anti-trust laws, charged by Attorney General Ross A. Collins, were given as reasons for ousting the Illinois Central from the State, and taking the charter from the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley.

DIXIE IS DELUGED BY PROSPERITY, SAYS HARDY

Retailers' President Declares Business Is Better and Georgia Is Forging Into Lead.

"Dixie is bubbling over with prosperity."

That is the characteristic way in which J. W. S. Hardy, of Waycross, president of the Retail Merchants' Association, defined commercial conditions in the South when seen by The Georgian at the association's convention headquarters in the Hotel Ansley.

"But we can better the present condition and our merchants in all parts of Georgia have come to the realization that by individual effort and plugging in the right direction we can make Georgia the foremost State in the Union," declared Mr. Hardy.

"To this end the convention was called," said Mr. Hardy, "to meet in Atlanta while the Legislature is in session, so that merchants can be in close touch with their Representatives and exercise every influence in their power to get them to support and vote for the garnishment and fraudulent check bills.

"This is a business meeting of business men, and in no sense is it for the purpose of boosting Atlanta interests. Its only purpose is to work for the best interests of the merchants of Georgia.

"We are in an era of good business that is unrivaled. Competition is keen, but it is also true that competition is the life of trade and progress.

"From all parts of the State come encouraging assertions that this year has been a little better than last. Even a little is better than no increase at all. But I am inclined to believe that business this year is infinitely more than a little better than last in all lines."

General Harris to Inspect Second at St. Simons Friday

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 22.—The Second Georgia Regiment is making extensive preparations for the visit to camp of Brigadier General Walter A. Harris and staff on Friday, when a special dress parade will be held in his honor.

The big battle of the maneuvers was fought this morning, the men having to cut their way with bayonets through the matted underbrush of a swamp to get to the firing lines, but, according to the instructors, they did it like veterans. More "casualties" were caused by the barbed points of sandspurs than by the enemy.

Rain fell yesterday for the first time and the men were compelled to drill in ponchos. Forsyth defeated Columbus in a ball game, 14 to 4. To-day's officer of the day was Captain John T. Aycock, and the officer of the guard Lieutenant H. A. Dickens, both of Monroe.

The Clearaway of Kayser Gloves

There is no doubting the quality of Kayser Gloves.

Women have come, through experience, to know that Kayser Gloves are best, and therefore cheapest at regular prices.

And now comes the Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company clearaway of Kayser Gloves, in which, as in all clearaways here, real worth is subservient to immediate disposal.

So the new prices and the opportunity for women to supply themselves with Kayser Gloves for times to come.

69c For Kayser's $1.00 Gloves, chamoisette, natural shade, sixteen-button length.

98c For Kayser's $1.75 Gloves, sixteen-button length, embroidered silk, in pink, light blue, rose, tan, pongee, brown and gray.

98c For Kayser's $2.00 Gloves, sixteen-button length, black silk, heavy quality, all sizes.

$1.19 For Kayser's $1.75 to $3.00 Gloves, sixteen-button length, embroidered silk, black and white, all sizes in black, 5½, 7, 7½ in white.

A fluttering and falling of handkerchief prices to-morrow---Women's 25c all-linen handkerchiefs with hand-embroidered initials drop to 15c; the linen is sheer, the embroidery is neatly done. Also women's 25c autographed handkerchiefs are 10c. They are all linen and the name---"given" name---is hand-worked.

The Social World

Mrs. Rufus J. Woodstock, of Asheville, N. C., who has been tendered a series of parties as the guest of Miss Lillian Logan, was the honor guest at an informal bridge party Tuesday morning, given by Mrs. Robert K. Rambo.

Old-fashioned garden flowers, zinnias, crepe myrtle, and althea formed the decorations throughout Mrs. Rambo's home, and pretty fans were given for top score, for consolation and for the honor guest. A dainty luncheon was served on the card tables at the close of the game.

Mrs. Rambo wore a morning gown of pink linen. Invited to meet Mrs. Woodstock were Mrs. Charles Shelton, Mrs. Linton Baker, of Augusta; Mrs. Julian Prade, Mrs. Robert McCord, Mrs. Albert Herring, of Mississippi; Mrs. Robert Burgess, Mrs. John Charles Wheatley, Mrs. H. B. Odell, Mrs. George K. Selden, Mrs. Blair Armstrong and Miss Lillian Logan.

Mrs. Cutter Hostess.

Mrs. Harry Stotesbury Cutter gave an informal bridge party Tuesday afternoon in compliment to Miss Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, the guest of Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, and for Miss Fannie Neal Anderson, of Athens, who is with her cousin, Miss Margaret Ashford.

The house was tastefully decorated with nasturtiums and potted flowers. The prizes were a pearl bar pin for high score. To the honor guests were given books.

Mrs. Cutter wore pink charmeuse draped with crepe.

The party included Misses Willie Loyless, Grace Thorn, Elizabeth Parker, Helen Thorn, Ethel Tutwiler, Mrs. Victor R. Smith, Mrs. Edward Malone, Mrs. Berrien Moore, Mrs. Carter Colquitt Cole, Mrs. Wilson Runette, Mrs. Robert Hopkins, Mrs. Clarence Angier, Mrs. Howard Parker and Mrs. J. P. B. Allan.

Children's Party.

Mrs. Robert Foreman was hostess at a children's party Tuesday afternoon, when 24 little guests were entertained. Miss Betty Pou, of Columbus, the guest of Mrs. Dozier Pou, and Miss Louise Martin, of Augusta, the guest of Mrs. Albert Howell, were the guests of honor. The feature of the afternoon was the reading of a number of stories of adventure and of Indian legends by Mrs. Charles Goodman. Later refreshments were served. The decorations were of garden flowers.

Mrs. Ayer Hostess.

Mrs. C. K. Ayer entertained at an informal bridge party Saturday evening in compliment to her guest, Miss Ethel Tye Wright, of McDonough, and Mrs. Robert Barnwell, a bride.

The house was decorated with garden flowers. The prizes were won by Mrs. Laura Cawthorne and Mr. J. W. White.

Mrs. J. W. White entertained at tea Monday afternoon at the Piedmont Club for Mrs. Ayer's guests.

Dance at Crystal Palace.

The young men of the Tech Summer School will give a subscription dance Friday evening at the Crystal Palace, inviting a number of young women to be their guests.

Miss Walker Hostess.

Miss Eloise Walker gave a matinee party at the Forsyth Tuesday afternoon for Miss Clio Carmichael, of Jackson, who is visiting Miss Margaret Rushton at the home of her sister, Mrs. Clyde King, in Ponce De-Leon avenue.

The party included Misses Clio Carmichael, Margaret Rushton, Evelyn Ragland and Cullen Battle.

After the matinee the party had tea at Hotel Ansley.

For Miss Carmichael.

Miss Clio Carmichael, of Jackson, is being entertained as the guest of Miss Margaret Rushton.

Tuesday afternoon Miss Eloise Walker gave a box party in her honor. Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Clyde King will entertain at an afternoon tea for Miss Rushton and her guest.

Mrs. Graham Williams will give a bridge party Thursday morning at her home on Tenth street.

Miss Marian Fielder has invited a number of her friends to meet Miss Carmichael at a bridge party Friday morning, and in the afternoon Mrs. John Ray Pattillo will give a bridge party.

For Miss Julia Black.

Mrs. Eugene Black entertained 30 children Tuesday afternoon at her home on Peachtree road, in honor of her little daughter, Julia.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Forsyth Bill High Class.

First nighters at the Forsyth Monday evening were given a real thrill by the aquatic feats of John F. Conroy and his two diving girls. The act is exceptionally good and the scenery is striking.

The remainder of the bill is excellent. In Diero is the masterhand of the piano-accordion. From the classic music to ragtime the musician is a wonder. He was repeatedly recalled for encores. A trio of comedians that handed over some very funny stuff included Smith Cook and Marie Brandon. Lester is an entertaining ventriloquist. Another big drawing card, especially for the children, was Jack Auger, "Jack the Giant Killer." The BeAnos, a novelty gymnastic act, opened the bill. Shriner and Richards, in songs and dances, were good.

"Les Miserables" a Hit.

In the pictured dramatization of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," playing this week at the Grand Theater, Atlanta is offered another of the mammoth film productions like "Quo Vadis."

"Les Miserables" had its Atlanta premiere Monday night. In coloring the picture is perfect; however, its action in a few spots lags a bit, as though the producer leaned too much to detail to bring forth realism. However, the play does not lack tenseness and thrills. Prospective auditors are advised to arrive before the first flash on the screen, as the presentation of the escape from the prison, in the first film, is, without doubt, the cream of all that is exciting in the play.

In the cast of characters are seen some of France's most noted actors. The stage setting is minute and lavish to the last detail. Manager Cordoza is to be congratulated upon his battle with the heat. The Grand is hot weather is like an oasis in the desert.

'OLD HOSS' JUDGE SAYS PONIES ARE GREAT

Pick of Mountain Herd Ordered to Make Out Prizes for Georgian Contestants.

Telegrams Monday ordered John G. Mobley, of Winnsboro, S. C., to ship the thirteen ponies necessary to complete the herd of 22 which The Georgian and American will give away after the close of its contest, July 31.

Within a few days, the special car bringing the Shetlands should arrive. According to the expert who went to Winnsboro and picked them out, they are a feast for the eyes.

Mr. Mobley has a plantation of 1,400 acres. Of this area, 450 acres of wood lot are used as a pony farm. Just now, he has 100 head of ponies, which have been roaming the woods and the rich pasture, and, these hot days, seeking the shady tangles.

The Georgian and American were offered their pick of the entire five-score ponies. Twenty negroes, mounted on mules, started at 8 o'clock in the morning to round them up. By 1 o'clock they had the 100 little fellows on the summit of a hill where Mr. Mobley is accustomed to give them salt. From this knoll they were driven to the pens, and the best fifteen were selected. All are sound, gentle, affectionate and well trained. They vary sufficiently in markings, colors and size to please all tastes. Perhaps the pick of the bunch is "Flash," who looks like a race horse, and is as fast as his name.

Every one of the ponies is worth well above $100, and with each goes a guarantee of good health and freedom from blemish.

If the boys and girls are enthusiastic about the ponies already in Atlanta, they will be wildly excited over the newcomers, it is predicted, for they are believed to be, if anything, a little better than those first purchased.

Pastors to Speak at Hearing on Bible Bill

The hearing on the bill requiring the reading of the Bible in the public schools will be resumed before the Senate Education Committee Tuesday afternoon. Following the hearing the committee probably will agree whether to report favorably or unfavorably to the Senate Wednesday.

Among the speakers will be leading ministers of Atlanta in addition to members of the committee.

IN THE HAUNTED CASTLE

SUDDENLY BOTH HEARD THE SOUND OF MUFFLED FOOTSTEPS, AS IF SOME ONE WERE RUNNING ON HEAVY CARPET, AND THEY KNEW THERE WAS NO CARPET IN ALL THE VAST STONE HALLS. BEFORE THEY COULD ATTEMPT TO LOCATE THE SOUND THERE CAME TWO THUDS, ONE LIGHT AND ONE HEAVY, AS IF OF A BLOW AND A FALL, AND THEN A LOW HEART CHILLING MOAN THAT SEEMED TO COME NOT FROM ONE OF ALL THE HALLS, BUT ALL OF THEM. THIS WAS IMMEDIATELY ANSWERED BY A MOAN THAT CAME UNMISTAKABLY FROM RUSTY.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Moaning feebly, Rusty shook his gray head.

"I'se so scairt I don' remember nothin'."

"They're nothing but suits of armor. Stay on your pins and don't bump into me again. The next one of those rear-end collisions and I'm liable to let some moonlight into you. You've been treading on my heels every step I take and when I stop you bump into me."

"I'm powerful scairt I might lose you."

"A fine chance!" snorted his master. He swung the lantern about and peered into the corners of the apartment.

"Well, Rusty," he went on in his natural voice, "we've been through this old castle pretty thoroughly now from dungeon to tower, and not a sign of Duke or Prince or anyone else—unless they pound or carry a smoky lantern. It's a clew, Rusty; it's a clew. We'll stick right here till we find out where it leads. I'll swear the Duke never went to Madrid, but came right here from the inn. Get away from me, I tell you!"

A Little Cheer.

He struck a match and resumed his examination of the fireplace, holding the light well inside.

"There's a fine chance for a fire. The chimney's clear. Now then, but up that little table and start a fire. You won't feel half so scared when you've got a good blaze behind you."

By virtue of his great weight Rusty reduced the old table to firewood by the simple process of sitting on it. As he was building the fire, Jarvis suggested that he would scout around a bit.

"Don't you do no scoutin' outside of this here room!" ordered the old negro, straightening up. Jarvis laughed and told him to go on with the fire. He sat down on the stone floor and began removing his shoe with many groans.

"Now, what's the matter? What's wrong with your shoe?"

"'Tain't my shoe—it's my foot," grunted Rusty. "You know, when I was holdin' the hosses an' waitin' an' waitin' fer you to come out—dem guns went off and all dem hosses jumped right on me!"

"There were only two horses, Rusty," smiled the young man.

"I was countin' dey feet," grumbled the servant, as he bent over the fire once more. He had sufficiently recovered from his fright to be disgruntled and make pertinent addenda to his master's comments on the lay of the land.

"This way leads to the main gate," remarked Jarvis, thoughtfully, peering through the other door.

"That's where dat black thing followed me," grumbled Rusty. He appeared to locate every inch of the castle through its connection with some personal disaster.

The Death Trap.

"Well, there's been a black thing following me," retorted Jarvis, "treading on my heels every step I've taken. Hm! And that door goes to the armory."

"That's where I fell down dem slippery stairs."

Suddenly Jarvis stopped and stared intently into a far corner beyond the fireplace. There was a small door partly opened, as though some one had pulled it hastily behind him as he darted through.

"That's it!" he exclaimed, triumphantly, darting forward. "Where can that lead——"

His foot went down suddenly through the floor. He hurled himself forward and the floor seemed to rise and strike him violently in the chest. The next instant he rolled to one side and was on his feet.

"My God!" he muttered brokenly, the cold sweat bathing his face. "My God! That was a close one!"

"Lordy, Marse Warren—wha' dat?" cried Rusty, starting to his feet. Warren's lantern had been dashed against the wall and he stood in the uncertain firelight.

"Get back!" he ordered sharply. Light that other lantern."

Rusty cautiously approached with the lighted lantern. Warren took it in his left hand and held out his right.

"Take a good grip, Rusty. Can you hold me?"

"Yes, sah!" Rusty crouched back and set himself.

Jarvis cautiously stepped out with his left foot. A four-foot strip of the floor sank under the light weight and the other end of the trap, the end nearest the wall, rose. If he had been walking at an ordinary gait nothing could have saved him. The speed of his rush and his remarkable agility carried forward far enough for the weight of his upper body to strike the rising end of the trap and thus shut it again.

"God! I thought so!" he murmured as he stepped back after a timid peep into the black pit below. He wiped his face and his hand trembled slightly for the first time that night. "Water and a long drop! No wonder people disappear in this castle. Good Lord! What if her brother went down there! Rusty! Whatever happens, keep clear of this. If you step on this you'll never see Kentucky again for sure!"

Rusty opened his ample lips, but before he could speak a groan came from beyond the wall they were facing. It sounded nearer and more human than ever. But it trailed off into a sound like the winds among the empty echoing towers.

"It certainly sounded like a groan," muttered Jarvis, tip-toeing cautiously around the trap toward the little door. "Shut up, Rusty!"

The faithful but terrified servitor was giving vent to sounds more dreadful than those that issued from the walls.

"Marse Warren! look out!" he begged.

The Portrait.

"Listen!" He stood for a few moments in silence, peering in at a little flight of stone steps that led up through the wall. Then he turned back to the fireplace.

"I guess it's the wind. This place is getting on our nerves."

"This warn't no wind, Marse Warren," protested Rusty, solemnly. "Ah hope to die if dat warn't a sure-nuff groan. An' ah wants to tell you somethin' else." He turned and stared accusingly at a large portrait of some grandee of Charles V.'s time which hung beside the broad steps that mounted to the corridor of the armory. "Hah you ever been in church or somewhere an' all of a sudden a feelin' come over you that there was eyes starin' at the back o' your head? You just knowed it?—until you couldn' stan' it no longer and just had to turn 'round and see who 't was?"

"Why, yes, Rusty," agreed Jarvis wonderingly. "I've had that happen. Why?"

"That's just the way I feel now—like they was eyes lookin' at me. You see dat picture? Seems like dat feller was lookin' at me—like he'd step right out o' de frame; or dem two battleship boogies"—he pointed to the knights beside the staircase—"jump right down here!"

"It's been a good many hundred years since those boys jumped, Rusty," smiled his master. Sh-h! Listen!" There was the sound of swift, soft movement again. Jarvis softly cocked his pistol. "Somebody running—coming this way."

Again it ended in the two thuds, like a blow and fall. And all was still. Jarvis swore.

"I wanna go home," moaned the darky.

His master set his teeth. "What do you know about that?" He had walked swiftly to the little door in the wall and was peering in.

"I don't know nothin' about."

"I thought so!" exclaimed Jarvis and he whistled softly, as if in utter amazement. Rusty's curiosity again overcame his terror and he drew near. Besides, it was more comfortable in the shelter of his master's .45.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Rusty, this man with the smoky lantern has been up the stairs!"

"You ain't a-goin' up?" protested the old darky.

"I am not!" was the emphatic reply, "cause the Duke or some of his men are probably at the top of the stairs with a long gun—and I'm no book hero."

"Supposin' it am the Prince," suggested Rusty, with awe.

"Well, suppose it is the Prince. He might blow my head off because he doesn't know what I came for. And if it's some one else—they'll blow my head off because they do know."

Without warning the sound of the running feet reached them again, but now it seemed to come from every quarter of the surrounding area. Jarvis, with Rusty cowering at his elbow, backed out into the center of the room, the long blue barrel of his revolver making quick play in all directions.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

He Is Mistaken for a Kidnapper

By MAX.

JULY 1.—Our days are so monotonous that if I were to attempt to set down in detail what happens, it would sound like a chapter from Genesis: And Arpashn begat Shelah, and Shelah begat Eber, and Eber begat Joktan, and Joktan begat Almodad, etc., etc., an endless chain of begats.

For I would relate in the same sing-song strain that a bath in the lake followed getting up and breakfast follows the bath, and a nap follows breakfast, and lunch follows the nap, and a walk in the woods follows the lunch, etc., etc., a monotony that is growing pleasing to me now that I have learned to find thrills of excitement in Mrs. Allen's daily report at breakfast that she found a rat in the trap. I do not recall a market report in six months previous that has excited me more.

Manette is growing brown and fat and sturdy, and with no one near to remind us that she has a delicate stomach, all such trouble has passed away, proving my contention that we keep our physical ailments alive by recognition of their existence. If Richards could see us eating our picnic lunches off a log in the woods, stopping occasionally to brush off an inquisitive ant or a ladybug that is lost from home, and regarding these little creatures of another world as friends, instead of germ-infested enemies, she would steal the child from me and bring suit in the court charging that I am not fit to be its guardian.

Her Future.

"I am convinced," I said gravely to Manette this afternoon, taking a chicken sandwich from her hands, for she is always the hostess at our picnics, "that a man-cared-for child is healthier than one that is cared for by a woman. She is neither nagged nor pampered so much. Now, if Richards were here she would make you throw away that sandwich because there is an ant on it—brush it off, my dear—and she would worry you because there is a streak of dirt on your cheek and a rip in your dress. I don't. I just let you forget all those things and be happy. I never want you, my baby, to be so much of a woman that you can't enjoy the Lord's big outdoors because you have left your powder rag at home. You must rise above yourself, little one."

She looked at me gravely with those big blue eyes, and then, robbing her sandwich of the meat that she might temporarily rid the brown-eyed pup of the look of longing he had fastened on her, said, "When I get big, I won't be a woman at all. I'll just be your wife."

"How I wish you were old enough," I replied fervently.

That would be a glorious thing, Diary. To take a child and train her in the ways one desired, and then marry her when she is grown.

"You will marry some nice young man," I argued, "and go away and leave your Uncle Max. It is the way of nature, and I can't keep you always."

I suppose I unconsciously sighed, for in another moment she was on my lap, rubbing a greasy sandwich down the back of my neck, while she protested between hugs and crumby kisses that she never intended to leave me, unless, and it gave me a twinge to hear her say it, "Lisbeth sent for her."

I was holding her tight with one hand, and with the other was trying to make the brown-eyed pup leap over our heads for a piece of chicken when I heard the sound of approaching horses, and a girl's merry laugh.

There was an abrupt turn in the bridal path near us, and a minute later they appeared in view, all unconscious of three interested listeners, for the pup had also paused in his play to cock wise-looking ears their way.

"I don't," the girl was saying, "believe in the kind of love you talk about. It would make of woman a sort of domestic chattel, like a cook-stove or a table. The fundamental principles of liberty—here her attention was attracted to us by the pup's shrill bark—I think that term, "fundamental principles," made him fear a procession of women were coming—and she stopped abruptly, staring at us with eyes that were first astonished, and that changed to admiration when she saw Manette.

An Admirer.

"What a beautiful child," she said, swinging lightly from her horse, and coming across the grass toward us, her horse following, with his nose pressed lovingly against her shoulder.

"Whose is she," impatiently, "and what is she doing here in these wilds alone with a man like you?"

My disguise was plainly perfect. I hadn't shaved in three weeks, and wore that morning a suit of Allen's overalls, for we contemplated a jaunt across the lake in an improvised raft.

I laughed. I do not know when I was more amused.

"That," I replied, making no attempt to rise or remove my hat, "is not the affair of every wayfarer on the road."

She colored angrily. "I intend to make it my affair. Look at her shoes with holes in the toes, and the scratches on her poor little arms and legs. You poor baby," getting down on her knees, "has that man been abusing you?"

I do not think at first Manette comprehended what the girl meant, and when it dawned upon her, her indignation was fine to see.

"I am not a poor child," she cried. "I am a rich child; everyone says so. Nurse says I'll be worth millions some day; and I don't want them. I want only my Uncle Max!"

I think there flashed across her brain a recollection of the woman who kidnaped her, for in a frenzy she threw her arms around my neck and screamed: "Make her go 'way! Make her go 'way! I'm afraid; I'm afraid!"

I was amused no longer, for the child was plainly suffering. Rising to my feet, I lifted my hat and said very coldly:

"You are trespassing on private property. Please ride on."

"We will go," she answered, angrily, "but this doesn't end here. I will find out who this Uncle Max is the child wants, and take steps to restore her to her guardian. She plainly doesn't belong to a man like you."

He Laughs.

Then, though Manette still whimpered I threw back my head and laughed till the woods rang with it. I had a vision of what my friends and associates in the city would say if they knew some pert young suffragette was preparing to have me arrested for a tramp and abductor of small children. It even flashed across my mind that if those men afflicted with the kind of softening of the brain that fits them for getting out the Sunday papers knew of it, they would give it three pages, with pictures of all of us, including the pup and the sandwich Manette still held in her grimy fingers. They might even give a picture in magnified proportions of the ant that this little baby-heiress to millions had brushed off her bread.

I laughed so long that Manette stopped whimpering, and lifting her face from my shoulder said in tones that breathed defiance, "Go 'way, please. I want my Uncle Max."

The girl turned to her escort, who had jumped from his horse when I began to laugh, and said something I did not catch. Evidently his reply restrained her from tearing the child from my arms, for with a protesting air she suffered herself to be helped to her horse, and they rode away.

The last look I had of her was of a face crimson with indignation and anger. The last she had of me was of a man doubled up with laughter.

"Manette," I said gravely, taking my share of the lemon cake, "those briar scratches you got on your arms and legs yesterday are giving your Uncle Max a bad name."

Advice to the Lovelorn
By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET YOUR MOTHER DECIDE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young man with whom I have been keeping company for quite some time. We have broken off friedship for a while, and my mother strongly objects to his return. I love him. Can you tell me what is best to do? H. V. E.

Mother always knows best, particularly when the girl is very young, which I am judging is your case.

If he is worthy of you he will wait. Believe me, my dear, if he is the man set aside to be your mate he will not be easily discouraged.

THAT IS HIS PLACE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you kindly enlighten me as to whether it is proper to thank the gentlemen after returning form a show or a ball? BABY.

The good old-fashioned courtesy makes all the pleasure his. He owes you the delight he has had in your company.

LET YOUR MOTHER KNOW.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am sixteen and deeply in love with a man two years my senior. For six months he took me home from school, and after I was graduated he expressed his love for me. He has given me a ring. The only thing that makes me hesitate is that we are of a different religion. ESTELLE.

Your mother should know of your love affair at once. Not only because of the difference in religion, but because of your extreme youth.

DUTY, MY DEAR.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been engaged to a young man two years. The man is 33 years old. We love each other very much. Owing to our aged mothers, we think it's impossible to get married, as he is the only support of his mother and I am the only child left at home to take care of my mother, who is 85. Between love and duty, which will we do? M. S.

Your mothers are so old that your time of waiting will be very short. I am sure if either of you failed in your duty you would live to regret it. Unless you can marry and take your mothers with you, which is not advisable, postpone your marriage till you can enter it feeling that your happiness is not purchased with another's woe.

LET THE MATTER END.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had the pleasure of meeting a young man at a public dance. He asked to see me home and I consented. He made an appointment with me that we both kept. When he left me he failed to set a definite time for a next meeting, saying he would try to visit a place where I frequented. Now, do you think that I should have anything to do with him in the form of writing, etc., or drop him, as I am positive that he never will visit this place?

ANXIOUS.

You are very sure he will not keep any appointments he makes, so why concern yourself about him? Let the acquaintance drop before it is more serious.

No Tunes Allowed.

Not long ago a certain brass band, which shall be nameless, was engaged to play at a local village feast. On the way there the conducter suggested that they should "have a tune," but the driver of the wagonette at once objected to the project.

"No toons while I drive," he remarked.

"But, why?" persisted the conductor. "Surely the horses wouldn't run away?"

"No," said the driver, "they wouldn't."

"Then why object?"

"Simply becos the poor beggars could not run away if they tried," was the grim retort. "Their running away days is over, an' so long as I drives you ain't a-going to take no mean advantage of 'em. That's why I sez no toons."

The conductor subsided, and there were "no toons" on that journey.

:: The Temper Curse :-: By DOROTHY DIX. ::

THE real problems of life are not the big problems, nor are its tragedies the great sorrows of existence. The conundrums that nobody can answer are offered by just little everyday complications, and the things that break our hearts, and wreck homes, are not great sins, or afflictions, but small, miserable, sordid worries and aggravations that blot out the sunshine and take all the joy out of life for us.

As an example of this I submit the case of one of my correspondents. She is a good, conscientious woman, married to a good man, and they have had a happy home. Recently, however, the woman's mother has died and she had to offer the shelter of her home to a young sister, a beautiful and talented girl of 20, who has the temper of a virago.

The girl has nowhere else to go, for although she is amply fitted by her abilities to support herself, she can keep no situation because of her uncontrolled temper and tongue. To have to support her is a burden on her sister, but the worst feature of it is that the girl has made a peaceful and happy home such a storm center that it is wrecking it, and the woman's husband is very naturally threatening to send the sister away.

Fears the Worst.

The poor wife and sister is between two fires. She fears the worst for her sister if the girl, young and beautiful and headstrong, is deprived of all guardianship and restraint, and even of shelter, and at the same time she feels the injustice of sacrificing her husband and her home to the girl's tantrums, and she asks what she had best do under the circumstances.

I side with the husband. I think that there is nothing else in the world in which the most of us show ourselves so cowardly as in the craven, meachin' way in which we give into people with tempers and let them ride roughshod over us. Before a redheaded temper and a venomous tongue we are all arrant cowards, and that is why the possessors of tempers don't try to control them.

Among my acquaintances there is a certain child who holds the world's championship for crying. She shrieks and shrieks until she maddens everybody about her. Not long ago, catching her for once in a smiling mood, I said, "Mabel, why do you cry so much?" She looked at me in round-eyed amazement and calmly replied, "Why, if I didn't cry, how would I get anything I want?"

That is the philosophy of the individuals with high tempers. They know that the balance of us are so terrified at the thought of their raging that we will give into them without an argument; that we will walk on eggs to try to keep from ruffling their sensibilities, and that we will put up with any injustice or imposition rather than go through a scene with them.

So They Rage.

Therefore they rage. It's the easiest way to get what they want, for the person without a temper is no more fitted to cope with the individual with a temper than an infant in arms is to engage in a prize fight with Jack Johnson.

Every one of us knows some great, big, strong, splendid man who is so afraid of his wife's temper that he lies to her about having to see some man downtown if he wants to stay out a few minutes longer than the curfew she rings on him, and who doesn't dare to even treat an old woman friend with common civility if he meets her when wife is along.

All of us know women who live in such terror of their husband's temper that they tremble at the very sound of his keys in the front door, and who spend their lives in falsifying household accounts, and trying to conceal everything that happens in the household that could possibly vex their violent spouses.

Ordinarily these men and women are not cowards. They have the courage to lead a charge in battle, or face death without a tremor. They even have the moral courage to endure their hell-on-earth of being married to a high tempered wife or husband, yet before that temper they become abject worms of the dust, without a fight in them.

So far as I know, no psychologist has ever attempted to explain the fear we have of the tempers of those with whom we must live. Perhaps the struggle for existence takes so much out of us that we have no strength left with which to wage a perpetual battle at home. Perhaps we have a sense of decency that the high tempered lack which keeps us from retaliating in kind. Perhaps no real lady or gentleman is fitted to deal with the woman or man who has not the finer instincts that consideration for other people and self-mastery give.

At any rate the fact remains that we all do stand in such shaking, quivering fear of the high tempered that we encourage them in giving full reign to their evil dispositions. This makes us to a degree accessory before the crime. We need more grit and backbone in dealing with them, and it's dollars to doughnouts that if the evil tempered knew that they would be chucked out of house and home unless they controlled themselves they would curb their passions.

Temper should be made the first cause for divorce.

If every woman was perfectly aware that she would have to be gentle and cmiable in order to hold down her job, and have a husband to pay her bills for her instead of having to hustle to support herself, there would be no more shrewish women, nor men who had heart failure every time they thought of what their wives would say to them when they got home.

If every man knew that he would have to answer to a divorce summons and pay alimony if he didn't make himself pleasant and agreeable at home, we should have no more domestic bullies and tyrants who talk to their wives as they would not dare speak to any husky man who could knock them down.

And if all of our sisters, and our cousins, and our aunts, and our mothers-in-law, who come and live on us, and who keep us dodging their ways, and trying to keep from precipitating an avalanche of fury and abuse on our hearthstones, were perfectly sure that they would either have to be good-natured or get out, we should see such a sweetening up of dispositions as the world has never known.

For the person with the temper is never anything but a selfish bully. We could call his, or her bluff, if we had the nerve to do it.

Just Sampling It.

For a long time the pale-faced man regarded the sandwich on the counter before him suspiciously. At length he carefully lifted off the top slice of bread, took out a piece of ham, ate it, and replaced as before. In a few seconds he again removed the top piece, extracted another piece of meat this time, and replaced the top again; and again the performance was repeated until the ham had gone. A bystander tapped him on the shoulder.

"Excuse me," said the inquisitive one, "but why don't you eat up your sandwich, instead of picking at it in that fashion?"

"Well, you see," whispered back the other, glaring around suspiciously. "I can not very well eat it. It isn't my sandwich."

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE long winter and spring months devoted by Daysey Mayme Appleton to instructing spinsters in the care of infants, to fighting for the ballot for mothers, and to relegating to his place among the worms of the dust that monster called Man, had taken the starch out of her ambition and the curl out of her hair.

She realized that though it would fall with a crash fatal to its inhabitants, she must drop the world she was carrying on her shoulders.

She must go away from kin and friends, seeking some holy spot of solitude where she might renew the fagged impulses of her soul, and decide what degree of blonde would be most becoming to her for next season.

"I am going to spend the summer at Lake Skodunk," she announced one afternoon to her friends.

"Oh," replied seventeen of them, "how nice! We will go with you!"

Then immediately they began to seek for railroad pamphlets telling about the beauties of Lake Skodunk, to write for reservations at the hotel, and to pack their trunks.

Daysey Mayme is an easy mark among her friends. All women are easy marks among their friends. Or else they have no friends! There was only one thing to do: She must not offend her friends; she must give up Lake Skodunk.

She had found at the last moment, she said when seeing them on their train, that she could not go. She might join them later.

Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea looked good on the map. "I will go to Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea," she said, wearily, to a third cousin, "where my soul may commune alone with the sad sea waves."

The third cousin looked interested. She hurried away to tell the other kin.

That evening seven cousins, five uncles, eleven aunts and nine in-laws called Daysey Mayme to the telephone. "We think," each one cried, "that it would be fine to have a family reunion at Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea, and we are all going with you."

The next day Daysey Mayme Appleton was missing, and no one could learn her whereabouts. She had pulled down the blinds to give the impression that the house was abandoned for the summer and had locked herself in.

Every morning she dressed while balancing on one foot on a piano stool in a very small closet, to simulate the experience in the dressing car on a Pullman, and every night she slept on the pantry shelf.

"In this way," she said, putting a cinder in her eye, "I experience all the joys of travel and escape my dear relatives and friends."

MRS. MANGES ESCAPES OPERATION

How She Was Saved From Surgeon's Knife by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mogadore, Ohio.—"The first two years I was married I suffered so much from female troubles and bearing-down pains that I could not stand on my feet long enough to do my work. The doctor said I would have to undergo an operation, but my husband wanted me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound first. I took three bottles and it made me well and strong, and I avoided a dreadful operation. I now have two fine, healthy children, and I can not say too much about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. Lee Manges, R. F. D. 10, Mogadore, Ohio.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A Charming Summer Gown Fully Described by Olivette

HERE is a little summer costume that may be truly called a "confection," though we generally prefer not to use that gastronomic term in the description of even the dreams of the sartorial realm.

White or shell pink is the foundation of heavy grade china or shantung silk. There is an eight-inch slit over the left ankle, and all about the hem tiny pink wild roses are set at equal intervals. The overskirt is of wide shadow lace, falling to the knees at the front and lengthening some eight inches under the caught-in drapery at the back. A garland of the roses peeks from under this, and another surmounts the wide girdle and rises to meet the square-cut vest of filmy white chiffon. Both waist and puff sleeves are of the lace, and another garland of the dear little wild roses nestles under the sleeve at the elbow.

The hat is a great round white Neapolitan, covered with frill after frill of white accordion plaited maline, with a monster pink rose crushing in all the filminess at the left.

Dainty white slippers and silk stockings, and a filmy parasol with a wide border of chiffon printed in great pink roses, complete an absolutely ideal summer costume.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

Walker had accompanied his wife on an excursion to the realms of bargains, and in the enormous building, with its many departments, had become separated from his better half.

For an hour at least he remained lounging impatiently at the junction of many ways, where lifts, stairs and passages met, and then, tired and angry, he approached an irreproachable shop-walker.

"Sir," he said to the frock-coated and suave attendant, in tones of righteous indignation, "I've lost my wife."

Back came the reply, with stunning force: "Third floor over the bridge for the mourning department!"

It was in a country village that the swain had proposed for the hand of the village beauty, and had been accepted.

He had bought the engagement ring and was hurrying to the home of his adored one. A friend stopped him to make inquiry concerning his haste.

"Hullo, there, Bob! Is there a fire?"

"Yes," replied Bob, with what breath he had left, "my heart's on fire and I'm going now to ring the village belle."

Peter Burrowes, a well-known member of the Irish bar, was on one occasion counsel for the prosecution at an important trial for murder. Burrowes had a severe cold and opened his speech with a box of lozenges in one hand and in the other a small pistol bullet by which the man had met his death. Between the pauses of his address he kept supplying himself with a lozenge. But at last, in the very middle of a high-falutin' period, he stopped. His legal chest heaved, his eyes seemed starting from his head, and in a voice tremulous with fright he exclaimed:

"Oh-h-h! Gentlemen, gentlemen, I've swallowed the bul-let!"

"Mr. Chairman," said the orator, who had already occupied the platform for twenty minutes, amid many interjections from the audience. "Mr. Chairman, may I appeal on a point of order? There is really so much resultory conversation going on in parts of the hall that it is impossible for me to hear a word I am saying."

Voice from the back of the hall: "Don't be downhearted. You're not missing much."

A Pledge of Spinisterhood

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM a young man of nineteen," writes X. Y. Z., "and in love with a girl of seventeen who has signed an old-maid pledge, about which she seems to be serious. I have been paying her attention for the past six months, and would like to know whether to continue."

Following is the pledge of spinsterhood which this wise old dame of seventeen has signed:

"We, the undersigned, vow in all good faith that we shall, for the convenience of ourselves and the good of the world, live as Old Maids.

"We, the said undersigned, do agree that we will work honestly and faithfully until, if our lives are spared, we have accumulated a sum requisite for purchasing and maintaining a small house in the suburbs, where the said undersigned shall reside.

"We shall have freedom to visit, entertain, etc., such of our friends as we desire. There is to be no restriction, except that we shall deport ourselves in all manner, and under all circumstances, as ladies.

"It is also agreed by the undersigned that when we reach the age of 40, with consent of the majority, we shall each adopt a child from the asylum.

"If any of this charmed and secret circle should commit the grievous error of marrying, the penalty will be expulsion from the aforesaid circle, and she MUST HAND HER FIANCE THIS PLEDGE BEFORE THE COMMITTEE, TO BE TORN UP BY THE SAID FIANCE."

No Sense of Humor.

The young have no sense of humor. It requires adversity, humiliation, disappointment and grief to make one philosophical, and philosophy is the parent of wit. If the young had a sense of humor, X. Y. Z. would carry this pledge about with him that he may have something to smile about when things go wrong, and the girl who has signed it would laugh herself to death.

What does it amount to? Less than the paper it is written on!

Imagine, if you can, a lot of kittens agreeing what they will do and be when they are old tabby cats!

Conceive, if you can, of the kind of a girl who will deny herself the frivolities of youth, the pretty ribbons and feathers and clothes, the theater, the dance, the love that is looking her way, that she may some day have a home in which she will enjoy the glorious privilege of shriveling up as an old maid!

No girl makes that pledge for herself, my dear young man. She looks at the other girls, and sees that they are plain, and not so attractive as herself. "They know they will be old maids," every girl says, "and are making their plans so that it will look as if they WANTED to be. Of course, I'll sign the pledge. It may please them and won't hurt ME!"

And every girl signs, each with the secret assurance that SHE will not be an old maid.

They agree to deny themselves, that they may purchase a home. This is the story of every good woman's life: A self-denial in the hope that some day she may own a home, but it is a self-denial that is a joy because it has its origin in LOVE. A woman loves a man and sentences herself to a lifetime of self-denial when she marries. She loves her children, and thereafter knows not what the word "SELF" means.

Wait Awhile.

She pinches and skimps and scrapes and makes over with "Love's old sweet song" ringing in her ears, and knows neither discouragement nor regret. But can anyone imagine that the same noble effort and sacrifice are possible when the goal is a home where a lot of spinsters may abide in about as much peace as so many tabby cats?

Believe me, my dear young man, your sweetheart would work harder to stay out of such a place than to enter it. Let me assure you that she would know neither peace of mind nor rest if she thought for a moment that a home with no one in it but WOMEN was to be her refuge.

If she thinks so now, it is because she is 17. When she is 27, she will be in a panic because her steps seem to be turning that way.

Encourage your sweetheart. Let her know that when she is safely within the walls of this retreat, you will drive by with your wife some day and perhaps name one of your babies for her.

It will prove a sure cure.

-:- The Amulets -:-

A Tragic Short Story Complete.

THE cattle dealer opened the door of the taproom of the roadside inn and ordered a liter of cider.

"You must be thirsty, Brunier, or you would not order a whole liter," said the innkeeper.

"You bet I am, but I can afford a thirst on a day like this, when I have four thousand francs in my pocket. Four nice, crisp brown bills, and almost half of it is clear profit."

"But are you not afraid to walk home alone with that much money in your pocket?"

"Afraid! With fists and arms like mine! Not a bit of it, and besides I wear two amulets guaranteed to guard you against any danger."

He opened his shirt and showed two greenish-looking copper medals hanging on a string on his broad breast.

"Look at these," he said, "this one is the holy Benoit's, the patron of all travelers, and the other St. Antoine's, the protector of the poor. These saints have never failed, and I feel as safe as if I were already at home, though it will be a dark night to-night."

The innkeeper laughed.

"Is it really possible," he asked, "that a sensible fellow like you, who gets the best of everybody in any deal, can really believe in two old copper medals?"

"Well, I do believe in them," said Brunier, "you have to believe in something; you surely do yourself."

"I don't believe in anything," said the innkeeper, and offered his customer a drink before he started.

He Starts.

"Well, I don't mind; I still feel a little dusty in my throat."

Half an hour later when the sun had set and darkness was setting in, Brunier started homeward. He carried his hat in his hand and the evening wind played with his heavy dark curls, cooling his hot head. The innkeeper stood looking after him with a frown on his face and his lips pressed tightly together. Then he called his sons.

"Did you see that big fellow?" he asked. "That is Brunier, the cattle dealer, going home from market."

The two boys looked like retrievers scenting the game.

"You understand what I mean," said the father. "And if you two are not fools you will cut across the fields to the crossroads near the forester's house. You will get there at least a half hour ahead of Brunier. In two hours you ought to be back here with 4,000 francs in your pockets."

The brothers did not waste any time. The younger armed himself with a heavy crowbar and the older with a hunting knife.

"Do you think we ought to kill him?" asked the younger.

The innkeeper was silent for a moment, then he nodded.

* * *

How long Brunier had been lying there he did not know. He felt sore all over and felt the blood trickling from his forehead. His coat was torn, the pockets rifled, his heart was beating hard against his ribs, and his arms were so stiff that he could scarcely move them.

After many attempts he succeeded in getting on his feet, and when he had bathed his face in a spring close by he felt much better and began to think of what he ought to do. He was not strong enough to reach home so he decided to return to the inn.

Blood was still flowing from the gaping wound, but he walked ahead without minding. It was quite clear to him who had played the dirty trick on him. It must be some cattle driver or woodchopper. But, thank God, he was still alive and had his money yet. He pulled forth his amulets and kissed them fervently, thanking the saints who had so wonderfully preserved his life.

* * *

"So you expect me to believe you did not find any money, you scoundrels," roared the innkeeper to his sons.

"No. And still we searched everywhere, in the pockets, coat, vest, shirt and stockings."

"Then you are bigger fools than I thought you were," the father shouted.

Suddenly there was a knock at the window. The door was opened, and a ghastly silence followed the loud quarrel when the bloodstained Brunier entered. The two sons turned pale as ghosts and beads of cold perspiration stood on their foreheads. The innkeeper stood motionless in the middle of the floor staring at his guest.

Brunier dropped into a chair and gased: "Give me a glass of brandy, and I shall be all right. Somebody tried to kill me, attacking me from behind, but they did not succeed. I am still alive and have my money yet. Unfortunately I did not get a chance to see who they were."

The three men breathed easier. He had not recognized them, so the matter was not serious.

"Well," said Brunier to the inn keeper, "perhaps you will believe in my amulets now."

The Hiding Place.

He did not notice the innkeeper's vicious scowl.

"But where did you hide your money, Brunier?" he asked in a trembling voice.

"Inside the lining of my hat."

Brunier then asked for a room and said he wanted to sleep.

"I'll give you my own bed," said the innkeeper, and conducted him to a room above the taproom. Brunier undressed and went to bed, but could not sleep. His wound was very painful, so he decided to go down and get some oil for a dressing. In the darkness he felt his way and was about to open the door of the taproom when he heard somebody mention his name. He listened, and what he heard made him shiver. He had to sit down on the step not to fall. They were planning to kill him yet.

He sneaked back to his room. Flight was out of the question, but he would sell his life dearly. He had no weapon, not even his cane, which he had left below, but in a cupboard he found a half-filled siphon of seltzer, a dreadful weapon in the hand of a determined man.

He posted himself behind the door and waited. A few moments later he heard sneaking steps on the creaking stairs. It was the innkeeper. He stopped a moment on the top step and then opened the door. As he was approaching the bed the siphon came down on his head and he dropped without a sound.

"You have got what you deserved," said Brunier. Then he picked up his hat and ran toward the village, while the two sons were busy digging a grave for his body in the garden.

It was almost daylight when he reached the village and told what had happened. An hour later the house was surrounded by gendarmes. They found the two boys still digging in the garden.

In the room above the innkeeper was found. He confessed his crime before he died.

Some time later Brunier had two gold cases made for the amulets which had twice saved his life.

Professional Rivalry.

Everything in the street was dim and quiet, for the thoroughfare was in a highly respectable neighborhood, and the hour was 2 a. m. In fact, save for a stray, wandering cat, and a constable, now rounding a corner in the far distance, there were no signs of life or animation anywhere.

William Sikes stepped out from the shadow of a friendly tree, glanced furtively around him, and then assisted Tom Crooke, his bosom friend and partner, to alight from the drawing room window of No. 63.

"Well, old pal, what luck?" he whispered.

"No luck at all," growled Tom. "The bloke what likes there is a lawyer."

William looked apprehensive.

"Then 'ow much 'ave you lost?" he asked.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

They Would Get Along Somehow

WHEN the boss sent for Jennie to come to his private office he told her the old story about it being the dull season and that he would have to let her go at the end of the week, and when she reminded him that he had always kept her before during the dull season he told her that he had noticed a decided lack of interest in her work compared to the way she used to work, and, besides, that he had heard stories about her being out with men at night, etc.

So Jennie was sure that her former girl friend had kept her word about getting even with Jennie for—as she thought—stealing her fellow away from her.

Coming out of the office, she wanted to cry, but held in so as not to give the girl the satisfaction of seeing her. As it was, she thought she noticed a flicker of a satisfied smile on the girl's face.

What now of paying the weekly instalments on her clothes—and they were the only ones she had—and what of the money that was so badly needed at home? When Jennie reached home, her friend, the boarding house keeper, was surprised to see her so early, and asked her what was the matter, and when Jennie told she had been "let out" at the office, the good woman, instead of deriding Jennie for losing her position, tried to sympathize with her and took her head on her breast, saying they would get along SOMEHOW until Jennie could get another job. But in her heart she didn't see how they could.

Jennie went up to her room and, flinging herself on the bed, had a good cry. When she quieted down and thought it all over she remembered the fellow she had been out with and his offer to furnish up a flat for her. She shrank at the mere thought of it, but wondered if it wouldn't be the EASIEST WAY at that.

.:. The Head Waitress .:.

By HANK.

"WHAT'S this I hear about you and Marie having a date?" asked the Head Waitress of the Steady Customer in the Cafe L'Enfant.

"Nothing to it," he replied. "Where did you get it?"

"From Mr. Flakes, the manager," said the Head Waitress, "and he told me he had it straight, too. He said that Marie asked for an hour off so she could get all dolled up to go out with you. Of course, it ain't none of my business, and——"

"Cut it out," interrupted the Steady Customer. "Mr. Flakes is kidding you, or Marie is kidding him. Not that I wouldn't dearly love to take both you and Marie out any time, but I'm getting too old to go gallivanting around with two such beauteous dames."

"I guess Marie was kidding," said the Head Waitress. "All them cashiers is great kidders, especially the blondes. You see, every guy that goes up to the desk hands out something foolish while he's paying his check, and Marie has to take their money with one hand and wave to them with the other or they'd be broken-hearted. I don't see much nourishment in it myself, but all those poor boobs act as if one smile from the cashier had taken ten years off their age, and they go out simpering like a lot of love-sick swines."

"Swains, I suppose you mean," corrected the Steady Customer.

"Have it your own way," said the Head Waitress, "you literary guys is great sticklers for correct pronouncements, ain't you? Well, I'm glad to hear you ain't fallen for no blonde because I've taken an interest in you and I'd hate to see you going nutty over a pair of big eyes and a golden dome. Not that Marie ain't a nice girl, and one of the nicest I ever seen, but she shouldn't be wasting her time with any of you newspaper guys."

"What's the matter with us?" asked the Steady Customer. "I'm surprised to hear you talk that way, Louise."

"Are you?" she said. "Well, long ago in the dim, distant past, I showered my young and innocent affections on one of you literary blokes, and for a time I was in the seventh heaven of happiness. He used to write me poems, too, real love ones. I remember one that went something like this:

"Louise, Louise, you little tease,
I'm really mad about you;
You say you truly love me, dear,
I'd hate to ever doubt you;
Some day, we'll married be, and then
Our lives we'll link together
And travel down the broad highway
No matter what the weather."

"Pretty good," said the Steady Customer.

"Oh, yes, I raved about it," said the Head Waitress, "until I found out that he was traveling down the 'broad highway' with about nine others."

"But that's no reason why you should be down on all literary lights," exclaimed the Steady Customer.

"A child once stung, never goes back to the beehive, as Kipling says," replied Louise, "and believe me, Kipling was right."

Nil Desperandum.

Percy Parkington arose and brushed the dust from his knees. Then, drawing himself up to his full height, he gazed resentfully upon the farm of Miss Muriel Muggins, who nonchalantly fanned herself the while.

"Very well, Miss Muggins," came in bitter tones from Percy. "Oh, very well! You have spurned me, it is true! Indeed, you have spurned me twice! But, though despair eats my heart, I shall not die! I mean to go into the busy world. I will fight! I will win! My name shall become known and my riches shall become envied—"

"Pardon me for interrupting you, Mr. Parkington," interjected Miss Muggins, "but when you have accomplished all that you may try me again."

Couldn't Understand It.

Local "Terrier:" "Well, uncle, how do I look as a soldier?"

Farmer Giles: "Foine, my boy! But blessed if Oi can think 'ow yer git them twisted trousers on!"

PITCHER PRICE SENT HOME BY MANAGER SMITH

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN, July 22.—Two things happened to Gilbert Price yesterday in this town. The Turtles got to him in the second inning of the ball game and hammered him fiercely to the bench. Then after the game, Manager Smith told the pitcher to pack his duds and get aboard a train for Atlanta.

The reason for the move is not known, but it must be a pretty sound one, or Billy Smith never would have dispensed with the services of one of his regular slabmen with two tough series left to play after the Crackers are done with the Turtles.

* * *

JOE CONZELMAN went in after the game was hopelesly lost, as it turned out, and showed his usual class against the Turtles, stopping the scoring handily. He held them so close that had it not been for the air-tight work of Rube Kissinger, who was having one of his good days, the Smithies might have overcome the handicap and won out even at that stage.

But Kissinger was mighty good. At that, the boys were hitting the ball right on the nose, only luck would direct it straight at some Memphis fielder. That is all in the breaks, however, and some time, when the breaks are our way, the other pitcher is going to pay for all of it.

The Turtles are going fine just now and are playing the kind of scrappy baseball that earns a fair share of the breaks.

* * *

WALLY SMITH still is in the grasp of one of the worst hitting slumps he ever has had, and we are missing his long wallops greatly. When he starts hitting again—and he is bound to do that—he is going to help the club out a lot.

Dent and Dunn are scheduled to work in the game to-day.

BAN WILL NOT RECOGNIZE COMPLAINT OF F. CHANCE

CHICAGO, July 22.—No official action will be taken by the American League in connection with Frank Chance's complaint charging the Chicago Americans with misrepresenting the physical condition of Zeider and the playing ability of Borton, for whom Chance traded Hal Chase, Ban Johnson so announced yesterday.

"It will be impossible to take action compensating New York for alleged loss," said Johnson, "for the reason that Chance wanted Zeider more than any other man. He had his choice of at least six Chicago players and picked Zeider and Borton."

CRACKED THUMB WILL KEEP WOOD OUT SEVERAL WEEKS

BOSTON, July 22.—Joe Wood, star pitcher of the Boston Americans, will be out of the game for several weeks. Examination of his injured right thumb under the X-ray to-day showed that there was a crack in the end of the big bone, and the indications are now that a piece of the bone has been chipped off.

Unusual care is being taken in the treatment of the injury to guard against stiffness in the joint, which would put an end to Wood's career.

MADE 103 CONSECUTIVE BULL'S-EYES AT 300 YARDS

WAKEFIELD, MASS., July 22.—All records for consecutive bull's-eyes at 800 yards were broken here in the ninth annual meeting of the New England Military Riflemen's Association when Captain Stuart W. Wise, of the Bay State team, made 103 perfect shots.

The previous record for consecutive bull's-eyes at 800 yards was made by J. W. Hessian, of New York, at Seaxirt last year.

Atlanta Wins Leifield Argument

Herrmann and Murphy Disagree

By O. B. Keeler.

COMES now the august Augustus Herrmann, of the Supreme Court of baseball, and hands down an opinion in the Leifield controversy decidedly favorable to our Major Frank E. Callaway. By the same token, the same opinion may be construed as somewhat of a reproof to our amiable little friend C. Webb Murphy, of the Cubs.

The idea is dual. It is granted (1) that if Mr. Lefty Leifield doesn't choose to play ball for Atlanta, Atlanta doesn't have to argue the question with Mr. Leifield, and (2) that if Mr. Leifield isn't going to play ball for Atlanta, Atlanta doesn't have to pay Mr. Murphy for Mr. Leifield.

Which does look fair enough.

And, anyway, that's the view the Hon. Herrmann takes of the case in a letter to Mr. Murphy, a copy of which was received by Major Callaway yesterday.

Incidentally, the Hon. Herrmann's opinion is of considerable weight in balancing the little problems of baseball.

* * *

HERE is a chronological sketch of the incidents:

Rather less than two weeks ago, Mr. Murphy and Major Callaway were dickering about Leifield, who (Mr. Murphy fancied) would be just the cog to round out a pennant racing machine in this town.

Mr. Murphy also fancied Mr. Leifield's value as a cog would be about $3,500.

Major Callaway revised that estimate downward somewhat and made the Cub owner an offer, conditional upon Leifield's willingness to play with Atlanta at a stipulated salary.

There was the rub.

Mr. Murphy accepted the offer, "with all conditions," and wired that he had ordered Leifield to report. Then he added a message that an explanatory letter was on the way.

The explanatory letter explained that Mr. Leifield was balking; had balked, in fact, all the way to St. Louis, where he lived and where he proposed to remain.

In fine, it appeared that if Mr. Leifield was to play in the Southern League, that institution would have to be moved over to St. Louis.

Mr. Murphy suggested that Major Callaway write to the Missouri Balkan and try to reason with him.

Major Callaway suggested that he had other things to do.

Further, he suggested that the deal was entirely off.

That suggestion extracted from Mr. Murphy a flat-footed declaration that the deal couldn't be called off in that manner. He countered with a promise to tell the National Commission on Major Callaway.

The Major promptly replied that the deal already was off, and therefore not subject to further calling. If Mr. Murphy cared to consult the commission, he had Major Callawhy's full permission'—even his earnest request—to do so.

It seems Mr. Murphy did.

And it also seems (from the Hon. Herrmann's letter) that he did not get very far with it.

* * *

THAT "optional agreement" thing is all very fine, in its way. But it does have a certain effect on the lucrative sales Southern League clubs have been accustomed to count on for star players developed during the season.

There is the crack battery of Prough and Mayer, of the Barons. The pitcher is slated for sale, and should yield a good price. But the receiving end was placed on an optional agreement by the White Sox, and it is pretty well assured that Callahan will yank him in when the yanking season opens.

Of the Crackers, Conzelman and Long are the property of big league clubs.

In the matter of outright sales, the Lookouts probably will get the big slice of the circuit in disposing of Covelesklie and Street.

* * *

DON'T blame Cholly Frank for gravitating swiftly toward cynicism, pessimism, fatalism, and any other isms that convey the idea of bursting bubbles and lost illusions.

Here's just a sample of the wretched Dutchman's luck this year.

Cholly swapped Snedecor to Montgomery for Kutina and Bagby, and when he made the Billiken management go through with the deal, it was generally regarded as a regular David Harum coup.

But Kutina refused to report, and now Bagby is out of the game with a broken wrist, while Snedecor is playing great ball for the Billies.

Don't blame Cholly, then.

ENTRIES AT TERRE HAUTE.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 22.—Harness racing began here to-day with a field of good horses. The number of entries is unexpectedly large. In a number of events the purses are $1,000. Many of the 3-year-olds entered in this year's entries will make their first start at this meeting.

WOOD, HUNTER AND PHELPS LOW IN WESTERN TOURNEY

FLOSSMOOR CLUB, CHICAGO, July 22.—Three local players tied at 18 holes in the eliminating round of the fourteenth annual championship of the Western Golf Association this morning.

Warren K. Wood, of Homewood; Paul Hunter, of Midlothian, and Mason Phelps, another Midlothian player, were the players who led the 134 starters this morning. Warren Wood, as well as Paul Hunter, made the first nine in 37 and the last nine in 40, while Phelps negotiated the first nine holes in 39 strokes and the last nine in 38.

Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, the present title holder, had the next best score, with a 78. He took 40 strokes for the first nine holes and 38 for the last half.

OMAHA RELEASES ARBOGAST.

OMAHA, NEBR., July 22.—President W. R. Rourke, of the Omaha Western League club, has announced the release of Charles Arbogast, who has been manager of the Omaha team for the last two seasons. Rourke will manage the team himself. Arbogast goes to the Los Angeles team of the Pacific Coast League.

"ZEIDER SICK, IS BETTER THAN CHASE."—CHANCE

CLEVELAND, July 22.—Frank Chance, manager of the Yankees, in speaking of the Zeider-Chase deal, slips the following knock to Chase.

"We're perfectly satisfied with this deal. I wouldn't give Zeider when right for three Chases. I think he's a better man than Chase at his best. And Zeider in a hospital is of more value to the New York club than Hal Chase would be to-day.

"There's no chance in the world for us to ask that the trade by which we gave Chase for Zeider and Borton be canceled. We don't want the deal canceled, but we are asking that the Chicago club be required to pay the salary of Zeider and to pay his doctor's bills until such time as he is able to play."

Big Marathon Grind On To-night

Ten Riders in Sensational Race

MOTORCYCLE fans in Atlanta are to be given a real treat at the Motordrome to-night. The best card of the season is to be put on, and some thrilling races are bound to be the result.

The big Marathon race is easily the feature. The sight of ten riders, all being on the track at the same time, each trying his hardest to get into the lead, should be a scene well worth watching. The riders are to cover 26 miles 385 yards.

As the leaders in a long race have a great advantage, there is bound to be a hot scramble throughout the long grind. The riders out in front invariably cover the track so as to keep their opponents from getting ahead. Mixups of some sort are usually the result, and if some spills are not recorded it will surely be a big surprise.

Tex Richards and Jock McNeil, the favorites, have their machines in the best of shape, and are out to set a record. They have been practicing daily, and wise ones are looking for these two to fight it out to a finish. However, both these speed demons may be beaten out by a dark horse. Morty Graves has his machine in good working order, and it would not surprise many to see him win out.

Big Cash Prize to Winner.

A cash prize of $500 is to go to the winner. This is enough to make any of them take some daring chances to cop the big event. Each rider will have a pit in front of the paddock, where he can change a tire or wheel in a very few minutes and continue on his journey.

The Motordrome Sweepstakes should also afford some excellent racing. The riders will be trying out their machines for the big event, and some fast racing should be witnessed.

New Sweaters for Riders.

To-night each rider will have a new sweater, a different colored one for each. This is after the plan used on the metropolitan racing tracks, so that each mount and his jockey is distinguishable no matter how far away from the spectators.

Following are the colors that will be worn by the motor demons to-night:

No. 1, Morty Graves, black; No. 2, Harry Schwartz, green; No. 3, Billy Shields, orange; No. 4, George Lockner, black with red stripes; No. 5, Tex Richards, bright red; No. 6, Freddie Luther, maroon; No. 7, George Renel, red with white stripe; No. 8, Jock McNeil, white; No. 9, Henry Lewis, light blue; No. 10, Harry Glenn, dark red.

Here is the complete program:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves; time, 38 4-5 seconds.

MOTORDROME SWEEPSTAKES.

One mile to qualify for two-mile final. Two to qualify in each heat, and three in fastest heat.

First Heat—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Second Heat—No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Harry Glenn vs. Harry Schwartz. (Special match race). Two miles, best two out of three heats.

Final heat of Motordrome Sweepstakes—Two miles.

Second heat of special match race—Glenn vs. Schwartz.

Third heat of special match race, if necessary.

Big Marathon Race—26 miles 385 yards. Ten riders to compete. Each rider will have to ride 105 times around the track.

INTERSTATE BALL LEAGUE GOES TO SMASH AGAIN

ERIE, PA., July 22.—The reorganized Interstate League season came to an unexpected ending here, with the Erie team a second pennant winner, finishing the abbreviated schedule with a percentage of 1.000. The four-club circuit, composed of Youngstown, Akron, Wheeling and Erie, proved a losing proposition.

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR
If there were no Fords, automobiling would be like yachting---the sport of rich men. But by centering his effort upon the production of one good car, Henry Ford has brought the price down within reason---and the easy reach of the many.
Here's the test: 300,000 Fords now in service. Runabout $525; Touring Car $600; Town Car $800—f. o. b. Detroit, with all equipment. Get catalogue and all particulars from Ford Motor Company, 311 Peachtree St., Atlanta.

LOOKOUTS NEED GOOD HITTER TO PULL THROUGH

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 22. That the immediate addition of material strength is absolutely necessary not only to keep the Lookouts in the race, but moreover to make them a first-division club, is being gradually conceded locally.

The showing of the Lookouts in the week just passed, and, in fact, during the long home stay which closed with the Gulls, gave conclusive proof that the club does not possess the strength and stamina not only to rise in the percentage ladder, but even to hold its present position.

Realizing the general weakness of the club for the final spurt, Elberfeld has secured Dee Walsh from the St. Louis Browns, but the acquisition of the league's fielding sensation is not going to help the club to any material extent, as offensive strength is what is needed. Walsh can not be expected to hit over .250, although he will surpass Williams in fielding.

Alberfeld and Elston, who represent about 50 per cent of the club's offensive strength, can not be depended upon to any degree of certainty, because of their injuries. Elston has a bad leg, which has worried him for three seasons, and the member forces him to lay out so long that his batting eye is continually off form. The beaning of Elberfeld will undoubtedly affect him to some extent throughout the entire season.

The Lookouts must get another good hitter to pull through.

It is being gradually conceded here that Atlanta and Birmingham, although there is considerable prejudice against both clubs, are the two teams which are to be the ultimate grapplers for the rag. They seem to possess the greatest strength, and are not being forced to spurt now as are Montgomery and Mobile.

LANGFORD-MILLER GO OFF; NEGRO MAY BE BARRED

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Sam Langford has been stamped an undesirable in this city, so far as ring engagements are concerned. The board of supervisors have notified Promoter J. T. Mitchell, of the National A. C., who planned to stage a four-round bout between Charlie Miller and Langford here Friday, that the colored heavyweight would not be permitted to enter the ring.

This action was taken under a ruling of the Police Commission, in charge of boxing contests, that fighters whose names appear on the professional "list" can not take part in the "amateur" four-round bouts. Langford's name appears on the Police Commission's "professional list." It was not made clear whether Sam might box in longer contests, though it is taken he has been barred from all bouts.

YALE TEAM TO GET BUSY.

SIASCONSETT, MASS., July 22.—Arrangements have been completed by Cautain Ketcham, of the Yale football team for the early training of the linemen. Twenty-five men will begin preliminary practice at the Siasconsett Cottage Club here about September 1.

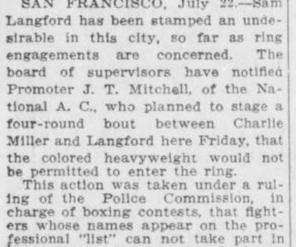
Look Out For Poison Ivy



Strolling through the woods or clearing brush, picnickers, hunters, fishermen—look out for poison ivy. And in the meantime keep your blood pure by using S. S. S. If your skin is rough with eczema, pimples or any other eruption, S. S. S. stimulates the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to dry up and heal all sore spots.

S. S. S. will do this positively. It dominates the principle of osmosis, stimulates the cells of the skin to select their own nutriment from the blood, made pure and healing by the wonderful medicinal ingredients of this famous blood purifier. It is a safe remedy, as it contains no minerals, and yet its action is a marvel.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting any one to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 186 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

J. M'ALEER TELLS HOW JAKE STAHL QUIT BOSTONS

CLEVELAND, July 22.—James McAleer, president of the Boston Americans, refused to discuss the statement of Ban Johnson given out in New York, in which the league leader severely criticised Jimmy for his action in releasing Jake Stahl.

"There is nothing to say on the Stahl matter," said McAleer.

"The change in the club was precipitated by Stahl himself.

"'Are you figuring on making a change in the managership of the team,' he asked me in Chicago.

"'Not this season,' I replied.

"'At the end of the year?' he asked.

"'It is possible there may be a change then,' I replied.

"'Well, in that case,' said Stahl, 'I might as well get through now.'

"'Do you mean that you wish to resign?' I asked.

"'Pay me to the end of the season and I'm through,' was the answer.

"So I gave him the money he would have drawn had he gone all the way through to his release."

McAleer stated that Carrigan will continue to manage the Red Sox the remainder of this season.

"Whether or not he will manage the team in 1914 depends entirely upon himself," said the club president. McAleer said there was absolutely no truth in the story that Fielder Jones had been offered the management of ths club.

SEC. FARRELL ISSUES NEW RULING ON OPTIONAL MEN

AUBURN, N. Y., July 22.—Chairman Farrell, of the National Board of Arbitration governing minor baseball, to-day gave out the following orders relative to the sale and trading of players among major and minor leagues:

"All optional agreements must be excised on or before August 15.

"The sale or the release of players within twenty days of the commencement of the major league drafting period or within twenty days of the close of the season of the club disposing of the player is prohibited.

"The sale of a player's release by one national association to another shall be null and void against the selection by draft of the player by a major league club from the selling club, unless he be in the actual service of the purchasing club for twenty days before the opening of the drafting season for major league clubs."

RUBAIYAT OF FRANK CHANCE.

Some spend their Kale for Golden Bricks, and Some
Buy Goods of Green to show the Folks back Hum,
While others purchase Athletes from the Sox
And wake to find said Athletes on the Bum.

The guileless Yokel bites, and having bit,
Discovers he is Stung and throws a Fit.
He throws a Dozen Fits and even more,
But all they Hand him is the Frozen Mitt.

A Book of Baseball lurks beneath my Brow;
I know the Why, the Wherefore and the How,
And yet those Gold Brick Merchants make me feel
Like some poor Yokel underneath the Bough.

Quoth a tale from Boston: "Johnny Evers was in bad humor to-day." When Johnny Evers is discovered in good humor it will be time to get out an extra.

One lesson to be learned from the Stahl case is that solid ivory is not confined entirely to the playing end of the game.

The double play is one of the most thrilling features of baseball, but there is nothing particularly thrilling about the double cross.

It is true that there is no gambling at Mineral Springs. Neither is he a gambler who plies his trade with three shells and an elusive little pea.

Lives of managers remind us
We are heroes while we shine,
But departing, feel behind us
Footprints planted on our spine.

IDOLS.

In days of old,
When foes grew bold
And slammed the ball about,
The crowd would rise
And rend the skies
Till Walsh came strolling out.

Nt more they rise
To rend the skies
When Edward makes his bow.
They pass him by
With frigid eye
And yell for Russell now.

The idols rear,
The loubrows cheer,
And then the downfall comes.
The gents who play
Like stars to-day
To-morrow may be bums.

SPEAKING OF CHASE.

Who stung Frank Chance?
"I," said J. Cal.
"I copped his Hal—
I stung Frank Chance."

Who saw him stung?
"I," said Frank Farrell.
"I lost a barrel—
I saw him stung."

Who'll fix it up?
"I," said Big Ban;
"If any one can,
I'll fix it up."

There was no deception used in the Chase trade. Each was trying to trim the other and naturally one of them lost.

Carl Morris announces that he is heavyweight champion of the South, but we have not heard the South boasting about it.

Speaking in the vernacular of the game, it might be said that Artic Hofman hit into a double cross.

And it is nothing more,
Alas, 'tis nothing more!

Earl Moore refuses to join the Cardinals, the inference being that he prefers to remain with a big league team.

Reading the newspapers, one is led to believe that as pugilists those Cards are great little ball players.

One is glad to learn from Ban Johnson that the gents who control baseball are actuated by a spirit of philanthropy. But it would be hard to convince Artie Hofman or Mordecai Brown of said fact.

HOME AGAIN.

Beneath a spreading tropic tree
The foreign wrestler sits.
And frequently a smile of glee
Across his visage flits.
A proud and happy man is he
With money in his mitts.

And as he counts his pile of dough
He looks across the sea,
And sings: "When Autumn breezes blow
I must return to thee,
America, where boneheads grow—
Sweet land of ivory!"

PLAY CAREFULLY FIRST SHOTS, IS EVANS' ADVICE

By Chick Evans.

TO PLAY golf well, one must keep everlastingly at it. This is a rather hard thing to do, for a golfer may play regularly for a certain length of time, and then not see a club for a week, or a month. This is particularly true of the business man who finds it hard to get out to play on regular days. The lack of regular practice adds to the difficulty and uncertainty of the first few shots of one's game. Golf is at all times the most uncertain of games; perhaps in this uncertainty lies its fascination.

Early Shots Are Important.

Even the expert can not judge what scores or strokes the day's play or the next round holds for him, but the first few shots in a round of golf, especially the first tee shots, are apt to be indicative of the day's play. The first drive is usually played to a gallery, either of spectators or waiting players, and for that reason I have formulated a few rules which I endeavor to use when I play a new course, or hit my first balls after an absence from the game.

Judgment of distance does not mean so much to me at the start as the desire to hit the ball fairly and squarely in the right manner. If one takes great care in the hitting of the first few shots, he will find the path around the course much smoother than if he is careless and misses the first few. A player should learn to hit a ball fairly and squarely, so that the muscles will work in rhythmical assistance. I have frequently gone along teeing and heeling my shots and then at last struck a square blow, and at once felt my muscles respond to the clean impact.

Player Should Study Shots.

I am a firm believer in the habit of hitting a few practice shots before starting to play, and my chief rule is: Keep your eye on the ball and see that your clubhead traverses the imaginary line to the hole.

Judge John Barton Payne once said to me:

"Every shot should be made as if one were making his will."

That is not putting it too strong.

COTTON DROPS AS LONGS LIQUIDATE

New Crops Heavily Sold on Propitious Weather and Absence of Support.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The cotton market opened fairly active to-day, and first prices were 1 to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The steadiness was attributed mainly to firm cables. The fact that dry weather still prevailed over the Central and Western belt also led to supporting orders in the new crop positions. After the call the ring was inclined to sell on reports of further rains in Texas, which relieved the intense heat of the past several days. In many localities the rainfall was heavy. As sentiment is against the market, the selling became rather general, resulting in a rapid decline of 2 to 6 points from the initial level. New crops were the heaviest pressed options. October lost 6 points, while December declined 5 points.

During the late forenoon active buying by the larger spot interests gave the market a steady tone, resulting in prices recovering. Trading was light and the market ruled dull but steady.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.20; August, 12.06; October, 11.54; January, 11.41.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.34; August, 11.97; October, 11.58; January, 11.57.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, July 22.—This market was due to open unchanged on old crop positions, ⅛ point lower on October and 1½ points higher on January, but opened quiet but steady, generally 1 point higher. At 12:15 p. m. the market was steady, at a net advance of 2½ to 3 points. Later the market declined ½ point from 12:15 p. m.

Spot cotton in good demand at unchanged prices; middling 6.72d; sales, 10,000 bales, including 8,700 American bales; imports 15,000, of which 1,000 were American bales.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net gain of 2½ to 3½ points from the closing quotations of Monday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 22.—The weather map presents very favorable conditions, cover over the entire belt, with a splendid rainfall in the Eastern States, particularly in Georgia, South Carolina and parts of Alabama. Indications are for increasing cloudiness, with prospects of showers in the Central and Western States, while in the Atlantics after to-day the tendency will be for clearing weather.

Liverpool was due 5 points higher, but failed to advance. Spots were unchanged; sales 10,000 bales.

Private advices from Paris, Texas, report good rains in that section. Ballinger, Texas, also reported rain, and at Ardmore, Okla., over one inch July 20. This market opened lower on the favorable weather map, but there was no pressure to sell, owing to anticipation of a bullish weekly weather report at 11 a. m., and a disposition to advance the market reflected by New York quotations.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, July 22. — Mean temperature ranged from one to six degrees above normal in the Central and the Texas coast, where there was a deficiency of from one to three degrees. The greatest excess in mean temperature occurred over extreme Southeastern Tennessee and Central Georgia.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 76 to 86 degrees over the Eastern, from 82 to 84 over Central and from 82 to 86 degrees over the Western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 76 degrees occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 86 at Fort Smith, Ark., Fort Worth, Texas, Thomasville, Macon and Augusta, Ga.

Precipitation occurred generally over the Eastern portion of the cotton growing States, over Southern Louisiana, along the coast of Texas and in the Northern and Northeastern portions of Texas, Southern Oklahoma and in a few localities in Arkansas. Elsewhere, there was no rain during the week. The percipitation was unevenly distributed and generally light, the heaviest amounts being reported from the Carolinas. More than two inches occurred in parts of Louisiana, Georgia, Florida and the Carolinas.

The greatest weekly amount, 4.70 inches, occurred at Newbern, N. C.

COTTON GOSSIP

Trading was light and there was no feature to the opening, except some buying on firm cables. The ring sold early, and on the decline Mitchell and Gwathmey became buyers. Mitchell purchased January freely, while Riordan bought December. The market was steady, but sentiment was against the advance.

* * *

The market during the past several days has been almost featureless. There has been some selling on reported rains in Texas, but a few buying orders start the market on a upward scale. However, should rain come over the Western belt it is believed the market will be sold to a lower level. On the other hand, if the rains should not materialize, a higher market is looked for. Sentiment at the moment is very much mixed.

* * *

In reply to inquiries for opinions most traders are replying that values depend on the weather and legislative developments at Washington.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma—generally clear."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, July 22.—Hayward & Clark: The map shows splendid weather, part cloudy to fair in the Central and Western States. Cloudy in Alabama and the Atlantics, raining now in Georgia, some showers in Texas. Indications are for increasing cloudiness, showers in Western and Central belt, tendency toward clearing in Atlantics.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "In the face of lower temperatures, a spreading rain area and a more rapidly increasing early movement than last year, yesterday's cotton market reflected a character of steadiness that surprised both factions. In the adjustment of parities in the New Orleans ring made a more bullish showing than did New York, but in any event, the contract markets reflected a will of their own, which did not harmonize with the talent's interpretation of the things, crop and trade wise.

"Over in Texas active ginning operations are now beginning to be reported. Thus far nine new bales have been definitely accounted for. On July 29 last year only twelve new bales had been reported. Much talk has been heard of boll-weevil in Mississippi, but the fact that the farmers in the fertile and highly productive delta country have had very little to say on this subject is significant.

"The Central and Atlantic States have been enjoying just as favorable weather as could be expected, even though a short spell of very high temperature has been reported by some sections. Thus, all in all, the crop seems to be progressing toward a larger out-turn than that of 1912-13 is likely to prove. On the other hand, steamship men estimate that freight room out of the cotton ports thus far engaged to January 1914 does not exceed half a million bales. This, of course, does not mean that only half a million bales have been sold for forward delivery to Europe, but it at least sugests the probability that foreign consumers are awaiting the outcome of the legislative situation at Washington, in fact that prohibitive legislation will shift market control from America to Europe.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Showers will continue to-night in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States and local thundershowers are probable in the upper lake and western lower lake region. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi river fair weather will prevail to-night and Wednesday.

Forecast.

Georgia—Local showers to-night or Wednesday.

Virginia — Fair to-night, slightly warmer in the southwest portion. Wednesday fair.

North and South Carolina, Florida and Alabama—Local showers to-night or Wednesday.

Mississippi—Fair in north, local showers in South portions to-night and Wednesday.

Tennessee and Kentucky—Fair to-night and Wednesday; warmer to-night

Louisiana—Fair in north and west showers in southeast portion to-night or Wednesday.

Texas—Fair to-night and Wednesday.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The October delivery was the center of attraction in the cotton seed oil market to-day. Demand from shorts and refiners, induced by the scarcity of crude offerings, served to force that month up 22 points. Old crop oil was in demand. There was very little doing in the late positions.

NEW YORK COFFEE MARKET.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Underlying sentiment was still rather bullish and it was rumored that this morning's decline in the price of coffee was only natural after the recent rally of a cent a pound, while moreover developments in the spot position have been of a character to encourage holders.

CROP PROSPECTS ADVANCE STOCKS

Large Interests Absorb Issues on All Recessions, Giving Market Brighter Appearance.

BY CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The strong tone which characterized the opening of the stock market to-day was not well maintained, and before the end of the fifteen minutes, sharp recessions were in order. Union Pacific lost its advance of 5-8 and a reaction of a point was recorded in Canadian Pacific.

The traders were disapointed at the action of the market in failing to follow the strong tone in London.

There was no change in Amalgamated Copper, American Can and Reading Steel was off ⅛, while the other changes were about equally divided between gains and losses.

Although trading was slow in London, the tone was strong, with the American shares the leading feature. The curb market opened easier.

After the first few minutes, business was quieter than at any time for over a week past. New Haven was about the most important factor, gaining 2⅞ to 102¼. Practically all of the early gains were lost and the tone remained dull. Southern Pacific and Steel dropped ⅜. Canadian Pacific declined ⅛ to 219 and Reading lost ¼. Call money loaning at 2½ per cent.

There was little feature in the afternoon markets, business being smaler and fluctuations confined within narrow limits. Republic Iron common continued strong, selling 3 points net higher for the day. Canadian Pacific held most of its early advance.

Republic Steel Co. Makes Good Report

NEW YORK, July 22.—The report of the Republic Iron and Steel Company for the six months ended June 30 last shows net earnings applicable to dividends of $1,972,421. Finished and semi-finished unfilled tonnage increased 49,967 tons.

Net assets June 30 were $85,470,663, an increase of $2,403,156 over the same date in 1912.

STOCK GOSSIP

The Financial Bureau says: "Information channels expect to see a continued improvement in the stock market. There is, however, sufficient uncertainty in the situation to warrant reasonable caution, except where investment purchases are made. Would not reach for stocks, but would buy on moderate setbacks. Cotton is bought conservatively on reactions. Wheat and corn are considered cheap, but are offered on advances for trading profits."

* * *

It looks as if this advance has only started. Would increase holdings on any recession in stocks like Union Pacific, Reading, Copper issues and Steel common.—G. D. Potter.

* * *

The Bankers Trust Company certificates of deposit for the St. Louis and San Francisco general lien 5 per cent bonds have been listed on the Stock Exchange. It is understood the total amount deposited under the agreement with Speyer & Co. in New York and in Europe is more than $25,000,000. No call has yet been made for the deposit of the French bonds amounting to $23,000,000. Of the remaining balance, a clear majority has been deposited under the Speyer bondholders' agreement.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "The wheat market is regarded as largely a merchandising proposition. It was noticed that some of the leading bears who sold early were buying at the close. Traders who were short of corn and long of oats were closing their spreads yesterday. One line of 250,000 bushels of corn was bought in and the oats sold. There is a lot of this business opening. There are also a lot of shorts in September corn who are long in December corn who have not started to cover."

* * *

Aberdeen, S. Dak., wires: "Commencing in western Clark County running through Spink and southern Brown Counties, extending west to the river, covering over 500,000 acres, 90 per cent total failure. East and north from Aberdeen about 10 per cent abandoned."

* * *

Bradley, S. Dak., wires: "Every field of velvet and blue stem wheat in this section has the little brown specks on the main stem of the wheat, some spots in three fields, the leaves of the wheat entirely dead from it. There is no damage yet, but this is unmistakably the first symptom of black rust. Red rust is very bad over the three States, and it is no short step from red rust to black rust."

* * *

B. W. Snow wires from Omaha, July 21: "The corn crop in Nebraska, south of the Platte and west of Lincoln, already is hurt badly and in a critical position. Portion of the Republican Valley received some rain and the crop is holding out, but fully one-fourth of the State is over the danger line and losing ground fast. From Hastings to Holdredge and south to St. Cloud fields are largely fired. I have seen places to-day where hot winds last week killed the leaves on trees. From Hastings to Grand the corn is shoving white and now is coming to tassel at four feet. East of Lincoln there is small damage, but some white heads are showing. The hopeful possibility lies in the fact that the crop was not in tassel during last week's blistering weather, but many tassels now are coming white. The section of the State I covered is in no worse shape than Northern Kansas."

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "Wheat—We look for a steady market to-day and are inclined to think prices will gradually harden.

"Corn—We can see nothing but higher prices.

"Oats—In our opinion the market is in a strong position, with a comparatively limited long interest and more new buying apparent.

"Provisions—The strength in corn is helping prices, and while there is more or less realizing, new buying appears to be on the increase."

Rainfall and Temperature: Canadian Northwest part cloudy, 45 to 64 degrees; Edmonton, .02; Minnedosa, .24; Northwest cloudy, 58 to 76; Moorhead, .64; Duluth, .01; Huron raining, .14; West clear, 64 to 68; Southwest clear, 64 to 74; Ohio Valley part cloudy, 64 to 70.

Kansas City says: "The corn and wheat region bulletin shows no rain. Maximum temperatures yesterday 85 to 98 degrees. Minneapolis says rainfall at Campbell, Minn., .70; Crookston, .24; Grafton, N. Dak., .15; Grand Forks, .44; Jamestown, .26; Winnipeg cloudy, 55; Duluth cloudy, 58; Glenwood city .98 on ground this morning; Bismarck clear, 61; Harvey cloudy, 60; light shower last night."

* * *

Advices from the largest corn counties in Kansas, which normally produce 55,000,000 bushels: Three reports from Atchison County show loss of 30 per cent; two from Hrabor show loss of 60 per cent; two from Red Cloud show loss of 75 per cent; two from Hutchinson show loss of 100 per cent; Jewell County shows loss of 65 per cent; Lyon County shows loss of 50 per cent; Kingman loss of 95 per cent; Sedgwick, 75 per cent; Marshall, 55 per cent; Butler, 95 per cent; Mitchell, 75 per cent; Washington, 80 per cent, and Reno, 80 per cent.

* * *

Lyle wires Chapin from Norton, Kans.: "The important corn counties of Kansas, along the Nebraska line east of Bellville, crop in normal promise, with light exceptions. West of Belleville there is some damage that may be 25 per cent in some fields. Most of the fields are not yet hurt, not much in tassel. Five per cent generally applied will cover all apparent damage to some extent by heat and lack of moisture. In some localities corn is beginning to curl during the day. Corn on good soil holding up well and making rapid growth."

200 METAL WORKERS TO MEET IN ATLANTA

The annual convention of the International Alliance of Sheet Metal Workers will be held at the Piedmont Hotel during the week of August 4.

In a letter received Tuesday morning by the management of the hotel, John E. Gray, general secretary, states that there will be about 200 delegates in attendance. A meeting of the twelve members of the Executive Board will be held the week prior to the convention.

Oats—No. 2 39

CHICAGO, July 22.—There was an enormous business in cash wheat today, the total transactions here amounting to 50,000 bushels, all of which was for export. The seaboard reported fifty boat loads or 40,000 bushels taken by exporters, and in addition to this vessel room was engaged for twenty loads for August shipment, with the rate of freight favorable to the shipper.

Prices for wheat closed ¼ to ⅜ cent lower for the day; corn was off ½ to ⅝ and oats were ⅝ to ½ cent lower. Cash sales of corn were 190,000 bushels and of oats 170,000 bushels.

Hog products were lower on selling by those wanting profits.

A message from one of the crop experts now in the Northwest, says that the black rust scare is at an end and that wheat is ripening rapidly and that the harvesting of the same will soon be on.

LONGEST TUNNEL

THE longest tunnel in the world is the Simplon, which is twelve and one-half miles long. It took over eight years to complete, at a cost of nearly $20,000,000. The tunnel gives France and Switzerland direct communication with Milan.

Many people are still under the impression that the St. Gothard tunnel is the longest, but, as a matter of fact, the Simplon tunnel is one-fourth more in length than the St. Gothard, and nearly twice the length of the Mont Cenis.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Viaduct Is Wanted For Spring Street

Old Agitation To Be Renewed. Brown Building Changes—Home for Druid Hills.

Things are shaping up in such a way, say well-informed real estate men, that remarkable developments may be expected shortly on the west side of the city. A good deal has been said of late about railroad operations, the proposed Bleckley plaza, which will extend to Forsyth street, and of proposed manufactories along railroad rights of way. Now comes the announcement that the Spring street viaduct project has been revived.

A well-known citizen is telling his friends that he will make the race for council with the Spring street viaduct as one of his platform planks.

A survey of the ground necessary for this improvement was made by Captain R. M. Clayton, Chief of Construction, and the idea is for the south end of the bride to strike Madison avenue.

There has been a growing tendency to bring the Terminal Station nearer the center of the city and nearer the Union Station, and advocates of the Spring street viaduct anticipate that such an improvement will contribute largely to this effect. The Bleckley Plaza would also serve this end.

The Spring street bridge would be several hundred feet long and the idea would be to make it uniform in height with the other viaducts. The Forsyth street bridge is now highest, with the Broad and Whitehall structures about on a line.

Brown Building Alterations.

The block of buildings of the Joseph E. Brown Company, on the north side of Wall street, opposite the Union Depot, is undergoing repairs to cost about $500, the metal cornices having been condemned by Building Inspector Hays. The old cornices will be replaced with brick and cement.

To Build in Druid Hills.

Charles T. Hopkins, the well-known attorney, will soon sell his home at 403 North Boulevard, it was learned Tuesday, and will erect a handsome home in Druid Hills. The Hopkins home is one of the oldest in the neighborhood, and is located on a lot 150 by 160 feet. It is at the corner of Angier avenue.

Loan Money at 7 Per Cent.

There is no lack of loan money at 7 per cent on all kinds of Atlanta property, according to S. B. McKinney, of the loan department of the Edwin P. Ansley Real Estate Agency.

"Real estate is the best security for money," declared Mr. McKinney, "and I would loan on any kind of Atlanta property that was worth anything. We are getting money regularly from several States of the Union, and this looks like a good sign to me. Frequently the loan agents don't recommend loans on anything except central and semi-central property, but I consider the suburban property around Atlanta splendid security."

To Fix Price for Floors.

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company are meeting Tuesday afternoon to fix a price on four floors of the chamber home at the southeast corner of North Pryor street and Auburn avenue, a request for such a price having come from the committee looking for a site for the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association exhibit building. Real estate men are watching the outcome with interest, inasmuch as the building will be a distinct addition to whatever district it adorns.

Application for Dormitory.

An application was filed Tuesday with Building Inspector Hays for a permit to build a three-story dormitory for the Marist College on the east side of Ivy street, near Peachtree, at a cost of $40,000. The Mackle-Crawford Construction Company have the contract.

Plans for Exhibit Building.

Among the propositions for a site for the permanent exhibit building of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association is one by L. O. Turner, the well-known real estate man, who would locate this structure on the west side of South Pryor street, 95 feet south of East Mitchell street. The lot is 105 by 185 feet, and a client of Mr. Turner's would sell it for $80,000, on terms acceptable to the Chamber of Commerce.

J. R. Smith's proposition was to erect a $100,000 building at the northwest corner of Bartow and Walton streets on a lot fronting 100 feet on Walton and 95 feet on Bartow. Mr. Smith and associates would lease this property ten years at $18,000 a year, payable $1,500 monthly, with an option to purchase at the end of a year for $185,000. A loan of about $75,000 would have to be assumed and five annual notes of $17,000 would be given at 6 per cent, $25,000 to be cash.

East Lake Sales.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. report the sale of three building lots in the subdivision of the East Lake Drive, Land and Improvement Company for an aggregate of about $2,100. These are in block 2 and just off Lakeview drive. Several new homes are going up in this subdivision.

Mims Parcel Brings $10,937.

W. N. Gary has bought from the estate of Sue Harper Mims, through the L. C. Green Realty Company, a 60 by 145 foot lot on Peachtree Circle, in Ansley Park, for $10,937. This is known as lot 2 of block 13.

Resume Healey Work.

Work was again taken up Tuesday on the Healey Building, following a ten-day strike, and prospects point to satisfactory progress from now on. The Healey lost 60 days at the start because her giant cranes failed to arrive, and thus fell far behind the Hurt Building and the Winecoff Hotel. The latter are due to be completed October 1, but the Healey Building will not be ready for tenants until after January 1, 1914.

Millions of Americans Are Saving---Millions of Americans Need to Borrow---Farmers Especially

Isn't It Possible for the Government to Put Those That Are SAVING In Touch With Those That Need to BORROW. Must the Blood-Sucker Always Play His Game of Usury Between Them?

(Copyright, 1913.)

In this country millions of industrious, careful human beings, anxious to provide for the future, are willing to save—and it is practically impossible for them to get a decent rate of interest on their savings and NOT risk being robbed at the same time.

In this country, where the millions are anxious to save, you have millions of farmers and small business men who are compelled to borrow—as their operations for the year exceed necessarily at one time or another the amount of money that they have on hand.

You have the savers on the one hand getting only 2 per cent if they put their money in the United States Postal Bank. And even then they are limited as to the amount they can put in. They get 3 per cent if they put their money in private savings banks—and take the usual risk of having the money lost through dishonesty or withheld from them in time of panic.

You have the farmers, upon whose labor and intelligence the nation depends, compelled to borrow for the purchase of seeds, of machinery. And, while the SAVING, careful American who accumulates his earnings can get only 2 per cent or 3 per cent interest, THE FARMER MUST PAY, ON THE AVERAGE, EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT FOR THE MONEY THAT HE BORROWS.

Isn't there some way of getting the AMERICAN WHO SAVES and the AMERICAN WHO BORROWS closer together?

Is it not an outrage that the hundreds of millions that the careful American saves should be lent to the hard-working farmer with SOME BANKING ORGANIZATION BETWEEN THE TWO GETTING A "RAKE OFF" OF FIVE AND A HALF PER CENT ON THE MONEY?

That is exactly what happens.

The money that the bankers are lending is simply the money that others have SAVED.

And the money that the farmers are borrowing is simply the money that the savers have deposited in the banks.

The people who save in this country get 3 per cent at most on their savings. And the farmers who borrow pay 8½ per cent.

And in the process 5½ per cent goes to build up a non-producing class THAT IS NOT NECESSARY.

Why should not the Government of the United States pay a decent rate of interest to the American citizen for his savings, and lend to the farmers at a fair rate of interest when the farmers need to borrow?

It doesn't cost 5½ per cent to handle money, to take it in with one hand and lend it with the other.

The United States Government might well afford to pay the careful, saving American 3 per cent on his money and LEND THAT SAME MONEY TO THE FARMER AT 4 PER CENT.

This would give the Government a margin of 1 per cent to cover expenses.

Why isn't it possible to do this?

It isn't possible for various reasons.

The first reason is that the finances of the United States are usually run by bankers for bankers.

The second reason is that the banking class represents Government, which in this country means money.

The little man who is saving his few hundred dollars and who must be content to get 3 per cent and risk losing it, and the farmer who is borrowing his few thousand dollars and who must go almost on his knees to get it, AND THEN PAY EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT—those two classes are not the Government.

The Government of this country is the banking class, the money class, the money itself.

And therefore the man who saves must accept 3 per cent interest and worry about his money's safety.

And the farmer who borrows must pay 8½ per cent and worry about his payments promptly on time, and pay a commission for extensions, and find himself sold out in time of panics.

And those who profit are the middlemen, the NON-PRODUCERS, the parasites, the blood-suckers of the community.

When will the people find a leader big enough and able enough to hand the savings of the frugal workmen in the shape of a loan to the equally frugal and valuable farmer, and take from both of them ONLY ENOUGH TO PAY FOR THE TRANSACTION?

They do these things in other countries.

In Germany and France they lend thousands of millions to the farmers at 4 per cent a year and less.

The farmers of this country borrow thousands of millions of dollars THROUGH A PRIVATE EXTORTIONATE BANKING SYSTEM AND THE AVERAGE CHARGE IS EIGHT AND ONE-HALF PER CENT.

Eight and one-half per cent on one thousand millions is eighty-five millions of dollars. And this is, at the least, FIFTY MILLIONS MORE THAN THE FARMERS SHOULD PAY.

Money is as much a TOOL in these days as any other.

If you make money, the most important tool, expensive for the farmer, YOU MAKE LIVING AND THE COST OF LIVING EXPENSIVE FOR ALL.

This nation should let the farmers have cheap money, and at the same time give to the saving mechanic a fair rate of interest AND ABSOLUTE SAFETY WITH A GOVERNMENT GUARANTEE.

That can be done, if MONEY will permit the people of this country to run the Government and the finances of the country for the benefit of the people—and not for the benefit of the blood-sucking middleman, called the banking system.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Horses and Camels Lived in Frozen North, Once a Mild Tropical Region, and Believed to Have Been Original Home of Man.

By GARRET P. SERVISS

HARDLY have the eyes of the world been opened, as never before, to the fascinating mysteries of the South Pole and its wonderful surrounding continent, than its great rival of the north makes new claims upon our attention.

North Pole Once a Mild, If Not Tropical, Region.

One of the strangest problems that science has to face is that presented by the fast accumulating evidence that, in former times, possibly before man had developed into his present physical form, a mild, if not a tropical, climate prevailed in those vast northern regions which are now buried, most of the time, under snow and ice. There is even reason to think that this strange condition may have existed up to the very Pole!

The period generally fixed by geologists for the existence of this state of things within the Arctic Circle is what is known as the Pleistocene (from the Greek pleistos, "most," and kainos, "recent," the meaning being that it was the most recent period of the great Tertiary Age). Any attempt to fix in years the distance of that time from ours is merely guesswork. It has been said that history reckons by years and geology by ages. It may be that the Pleistocene dates back a hundred thousand, and, perhaps, two or three hundred thousand years.

Anyhow, in Pleistocene times animals and plants, some of which are extinct and others of which are now found only in temperate or tropical regions, existed, apparently in abundance, in the polar regions of the north.

The latest discoveries concerning these vanished inhabitants of a land that has now become frigid and inhospitable relate to camels and horses. The presence of the camel in Alaska, not as a curiosity in a traveling menagerie, but as a regular inhabitant of the land, is astonishing to think of. We know the camel as a desert animal, a lover of the Sahara, with its waterless expanses of wind-driven, sun-blasted sand, but here he appears, dwelling before the two-legged animal that was to become his master had been introduced upon the planet, in a region which, in its present condition, would be almost as inappropriate a place of residence for him as the moon would be for men!

But he has left his fossilized bones there, and science has discovered them. We can not contradict such evidence.

Science Discovers That Horse Lived in Alaska.

Then, too, the horse existed in Alaska in that same strange age. Its remains have been found in so many places that it is impossible to conclude otherwise than that horses ranged freely over immense expanses within the Arctic Circle where now the sub-soil is a frozen mass that never melts. At that time great prairies of luscious grass must have existed there at nearly all times of the year, for horses do not store up food to last through a long, pitiless winter.

Mammoths and Bison Roamed Frozen North.

Somewhere about the same time mammoths, bisons and other strange animals also roamed that part of the world, finding an abundance of food about them. If there were men in existence at that time, they, too, may have been polar inhabitants!

The great question now is: What caused the change? Why were the Arctic regions warm and genial at that time, and how have they come into the state which we now find?

Some have suggested that the earth has partly tipped over, its axis of rotation, or the line joining its poles, assuming a different position. But this would involve a tremendous catastrophe, throwing the oceans out of their beds and producing disastrous changes all over the globe, and evidence of such a universal catastrophe is lacking. Moreover, there is hardly anything known to science more stable than an axis of rotation. Once set a body spining about a particular axis and it is extremely difficult to change the direction or slope of that axis. The whole form of the earth plainly indicates that it has been turning for countless ages about the same poles, and must have begun to so turn when it was yet plastic, or molten, for it has bulged at the equator, just as any mass of that kind must do under the influence of centrifugal force.

A more probable hypothesis is that the change of climate has been caused by elevations and subsidences of the earth's crust. The presence of horses and camels in Alaska has been ascribed to the former existence of a great "land bridge" connecting Asia with North America. Horses did not exist in America at the time of its discovery, and camels have never inhabited this Continent, except in Pleistocene times.

In view of the facts that I have been reciting, one can not but think of the strange theory, which has been strongly advocated in the past, though never accepted by science.

Many Believe Home of Race Was North Pole.

Not a few students believe that the original home of the present inhabitants of our hemisphere, and perhaps of the whole human race, was around the North Pole, from which they were driven by climatic changes. If that were so, then what is now the Arctic Ocean must have been a land "flowing with milk and honey," in the old Scriptural sense.

The Mad Monarch

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

HIS subjects may be found in every clime;
From every source they crawl to lick his hand.
His home in Hell is wonderfully planned
To welcome slaves that die from time to time.
His nag daughter is Lust. His son is Crime.
He has a solid throne in every land.
And what with hearts to break and serfs to brand,
He goes but seldom to his couch of slime.

He slays men's brains and deadens baby lives.
Oh, the vast pyramids this king could build
Were he to use the bones of starving wives
Who sigh to join the victims he has killed!
Mockingly glow in his grim diadem
Three bloody ruby letters—R-U-M.

Certified Brides and Bridegrooms

"I Know Dozens of People," She Says, "Who Would Never Have Been Born If This Health Idea Had Been Strictly Carried Out ---and Somehow I Don't Think the World Would Have Been Much Better Off For That."

By WINIFRED BLACK.

ONCE there was a clever little boy who was always taking clocks to pieces and meddling with locks and making wheels, and inventing ways of shutting the old door so that it wouldn't be locked and yet the dog could spring the latch—such a clever, clever boy—but I always hated to have him come to visit at our house.

You see, he could take a clock to pieces wonderfully well and put it together—just moderately well. The clock would go after he had put it together again, but somehow there was always something wrong with it some way. Sometimes it told the time all right, but struck wrong. Sometimes it struck all right, but told the hour wrong, and then again it was the alarm that never quite got over the clever boy's handling.

Sometimes I wonder about him—he's a doctor now, a very successful surgeon; always taking people to pieces. I wonder if they run quite so well when he is through with them as they did before he touched them—he and his "science."

Wants to Regulate All the Marriages.

I see he read a paper at a great medical convention yesterday—it was all about "eliminating the unfit."

He doesn't want anyone to marry but people in perfect health. He thinks physicians should regulate marriage—and regulate it legally. No one should be allowed to marry at all without the "yes, indeed," of the whole medical profession. Fine idea, progressive, and all that. I wonder if it is quite practical?

Now, there's the doctor himself, for instance. I happen to know that his mother was an old-fashioned consumptive. She took twenty years a-dying, and one of his brothers died of the old-fashioned illness out in Colorado not so many weeks ago.

The doctor is alive yet, and very lively, too, thank you. He would not be here at all if his advice had been taken thirty years ago—and just think how we should have missed him and his experiments with the clocks and with people's internals.

We knew a good many of the same people, the doctor and I, when he was taking clocks to pieces.

One of them died of cancer; her mother died of it, too; and she married and had three children. One of them is the cleverest, all-around woman I know, one is mediocre and one has made a fortune in a country town and is spending it helping sick babies get well. Now if that woman had not been allowed to marry, what then?

The best family in the town where we both lived had three sons—every one of them has turned out a failure. One's an invalid, one's a criminal and one's a drunkard. Father was sound as a hickory nut, and mother never had an ill day in her life. How about that family?

How far back have you got to go to get at the source of infection and who's going to do the "going?"

"Somebody 'Queer' In Every Family."

"I can find enough degenerates in any family on earth to get any client off for murder in the first degree," said a clever lawyer to me just the other day. "I don't suppose there's a family in America without somebody 'queer' in it."

Just how "queer" have you got to be and who's going to decide about it when you try to get a marriage license and can't?

"Eliminate the unfit"—well, well, Mr. Physician, who are the unfit?

There's Robert Louis Stevenson, for instance. He never drew a breath of good health in his life. Would you have "eliminated" him?

How about Julius Caesar, how about Napoleon, how about Mohammed, how about Daniel Webster, how about St. Paul?

Unfit—every one of them—from the doctor's point of view, and there are still more illustrious examples of the unfit who survived and made the world over just to suit their own ideas while the "fit" stood around and looked on and wondered about it.

It's a glorious idea you have, doctor, and one that every civilized nation should study carefully—but are you quite sure how you are going to manage it?

I got the "sterilized" fad once and wouldn't let anyone have a drop of water that wasn't boiled; till my old doctor came along and told me I had boiled all the life out of it, and he said he'd risk a few germs if he were me—on the principle that he'd rather be an aquarium than a cemetery—and I got over my fad.

"Drink water all you can," shouts the water-cure fiend.

"Don't touch water till you have to," insists the new specialist.

"When your brain is tired, work your body," advises the doctor who is supposed to know.

"Don't overwork a tired system," says his neighbor. "Rest is the only thing to cure fatigue."

Owe Their Existence To Old-Time Laws.

And so it goes—we're all so interested—in this "eliminate the unfit" idea, and yet when I look around among my friends, a pretty decent lot of people as the world goes, I can see dozens of them who would never have been born at all if this idea had been strictly carried out, and somehow I can't think the world would have been much better off for that.

Take the old clock to pieces, doctor, all you will, but please, good friend, be quite sure you know how to put it together again so it will strike twelve at midnight and not at eight of the morning.

:-: Marshal D'Ancre :-:

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE execution, 296 years ago, of Leonora Galigai, wife of the Marshal D'Ancre, was the wind-up of one of the most remarkable life stories in French history.

In 1610 the fanatical Ravaillac plunged his dagger into the heart of Henry Fourth, and Mary de Medici was proclaimed Regent. At the time of her marriage to Henry Mary brought with her from Florence her nurse's daughter, Leonora Galigai, and her husband, Concino Concini, son of a Florentine notary. By these creatures the Regent was completely hypnotized, and in a trice the nurse's daughter and the notary's son became the most consequential personages in France. Mary, besides making the pair her confidential advisers, gave them every opportunity for advancing their material fortunes, with the result that, in addition to wielding great power at court, they grew immensely wealthy. The well-filled strong box left by the great King was pilfered right and left, and in a little while Concini was able to say: "When I came to France I was not worth a sou, now I am worth eight millions." His wife also laid by a splendid wad of the "needful," besides supplying herself with the plate, wardrobe and jewels that were the wonder of her time.

Purchasing the Marquisate of Ancre and a marshalship, the notary's son was now the Marshal D'Ancre, and as for the nurse's daughter—she was pretty nearly the "whole thing," for she dominated both Mary and D'Ancre.

But alas, for the "best laid plans of mice and men!" One day, after some seven years of prosperity, the Marshal D'Ancre was shot down like a dog by the order, or with the consent, of the young King, Louis Thirteenth, and not long thereafter the court creatures seized D'Ancre's widow and took her before the bar of the Parliament, by which body she was unceremoniously sentenced to the block. The last words of the dashing adventuress, as she looked out upon the sea of humanity that had gathered to witness her execution, were:

"What a lot of people to look at one poor creature die!"

50 GIRLS REPORTED DEAD IN FIRE

DEFENSE ASKS NEW RULING IN DELAYING FRANK TRIAL

CRAWFORD CASE MAY CONFLICT

Conference Planned to Decide Which Shall Take Precedence. Ready to Draw Venire.

Reuben R. Arnold, of counsel for Leo M. Frank, announced Tuesday that he proposed to seek a conference of the attorneys in the Frank case and in the Crawford will hearing to determine which case should be postponed next Monday, the date set for the beginning of the trial of Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan.

Mr. Arnold, Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, both also are attorneys in the Crawford will case, and it would be impossible on this account to conduct the two cases simultaneously. The Crawford hearing will resume Wednesday before a special auditor in a branch of the Superior Court, and undoubtedly will be in progress next week if it is not stopped by a postponement.

The will hearing, because of the fact that it already is under way, would have a natural precedence over the Frank trial. This may be waived, however, in order to take up the Phagan mystery.

Bloody Stick Found.

The defense admitted Tuesday that it had in its posession a bloodstained stick, which it says was found behind the radiator on the first floor of the pencil factory, near the elevator shaft on May 10, and that this weapon will be used to uphold the theory of Frank's attorneys announced some weeks ago, that Mary Phagan was killed with a stick by the negro Jim Conley, after she had received her pay envelope.

While it had long been known that the theory that the Phagan girl met her death by a blow over the head with a stick would be advanced by the defense, the actual posession, it was learned, has been zealously guarded. The weapon it was learned, was found by L. P. Whitefield and W. D. McWorth, of the Pinkerton force, who made a careful search of the factory on May 9. It was turned over to counsel for Frank on the following day.

None of the attorneys for the defense will say that they intend to ask for a postponement of the Frank trial, but the hot weather and the fact that the Crawford case is in progress at this time apepar to be combining to bring about such a consummation.

Judge Roan has stated that the case would be called Monday, but he probably will accede to the request for a conference some day this week to discuss the matter.

Court Likely to Accede.

Attorney Arnold will ask that the jurymen be not summoned until a definite decision is reached as to which of the cases is to take precedence.

Despite the reported repudiation of her sensational affidavit that eLo M. Frank had tried repeatedly on the night of the Mary Phagan murder to secure a room in which to bring a girl, Mrs. Nina Formby declared in Chattanooga Tuesday that she would be in Atlanta on July 28 to testify to her statements when the trial of the pencil factory superintendent opens.

Denies She Retracted.

According to a dispatch from Chattanooga, where the woman has been for several weeks, Mrs. Formby denies having ever retracted from her original declarations which she made to the police, and further stated that she would repeat them on the witness stand.

The police have asserted that Mrs. Formby has been eliminated from the case.

Superior Judge John T. Pendleton prepared Tuesday to draw the 150 veniremen for the trial. This venire will be called next Monday morning unless the weather is unusually warm.

The jury, in all probability, will be selected and served before Wednes-

LATEST NEWS

E. C. Kilpatrick, of No. 391 Capitol avenue, a clerk in the office of the traffic manager of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, was arrested by Policeman Bryant Tuesday afternoon, after several young women employed in the offices of the Grant Building had complained to the police that he had insulted them. Tuesday afternoon two young women employed in a Grant Building office saw Kilpatrick coming down in the elevator, and, they claim, recognized him as the man who had been insulting them. They followed him from the building and pointed him out to Policeman Bryant.

Kilpatrick is held at headquarters under $100 bond. He declares that he is a victim of mistaken identity.

There will be no motorcycle races Tuesday night. Noon Hudson announced late Tuesday afternoon that the races scheduled had been postponed on account of rain until Wednesday night.

Qualifying rounds in the Capital City Country Club handicap match golf tournament will be played August 2-13. The trophy is the president's cup, presented by Robert F. Maddox. This cup becomes the property of the player winning it twice in succession. A cup also will be given the winner of the second flight. The consolation prize is a handsome golf bag.

Lewis E. Thomas, appointed by Superior Judge W. D. Ellis to act as solicitor prot me in the prosecution of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford on the charge of poisoning her husband, announced Tuesday afternoon he had declined to act. Judge Ellis stated he would make a new appointment Wednesday morning.

VIENNA, July 22.—Bulgaria has given up the fight. In a note to the powers the Government states that in order to prove her sincerity and her wish for peace she had decided to sign an armistice and to demobolize her troops immediately.

CHATTANOOGA, July 22.—W. B. Mitchell, widely known as a banker in this city and throughout this section, died here to-day after a lingering illness. He was prominently connected.

PEKIN, CHINA, July 22.—The residents in South China who are opposed to President Yuan Shih Kai, and his policies, to-day were prepared to march on Pekin, expecting this warlike move to get the Powers to intervene.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A bill to increase the membership of the Supreme Court of the United States to eleven justices was introduced in the House to-day by Representative Ripley, a Pennsylvania Progressive. A similar bill is pending in the Senate.

Obsolete Laws to Be Stricken From Atlanta City Code

Through the efforts of Councilman Claude L. Ashley, the City Council has appointed a special committee to strike all persiflage from the City Code. He said it is full of obsolete laws, and gives the following examples:

No public meeting shall be held in Atlanta without twelve hours' notice to the Chief of Police.

Pigs shall not be allowed to run loose in the streets.

It shall be unlawful to trap mockingbirds within the city limits.

It shall be unlawful to auction off mules at the corner of Broad and ---rietta streets.

BILL GRANTS WAR POWER TO WILSON

Murray of Oklahoma Would Hasten Relief to Americans and Europeans in Mexico.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Denunciation of the Taft and Wilson administrations for their dilatory attitudes toward Mexico was voiced by Senators Lodge and Fall in the Senate to-day.

Fall stated that had the Taft administration assumed a determined front at the time of the Madero revolution two years ago, peace would have been established.

Senator Lodge demanded that steps be taken to protect American citizens whose murder by Mexican bandits was neither avenged by Mexico or the United States.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A sensational resolution demanding intervention in Mexico within 30 days unless peace be restored, and denouncing the Heutra regime an one of "brute force, incendiarism, rapine and murder," was introduced in the House to-day by Representative William H. Murray, of Oklahoma, a Democrat.

The resolution provides that the President shall notify Mexico that peace must be restored and that the lives and property of American citizens and all foreigners sojourning in Mexico shall be respected.

If disorder in the Mexican republic continues for another 30 days the resolution provides the President shall intervene, "establish peace and order and civil government, and take possession of all public property of the former republic of Mexico and hold the same until every item of expense and all damages for the deprivation of liberty or the destruction of property of any American citizen or citizens of any other nation has been fully compensated out of the Mexican revenues."

Gives President War Power.

It is also demanded that in the event of intervention the President is empowered to rehabilitate the Mexican Government, prepare the Mexicans for self-government and restore law and order, "and the President is authorized to use the land and naval forces of the United States for the accomplishment of all such purposes."

The preamble of the resolution defends the Monroe Doctrine and asserts that the United States is in duty bound to protect its own citizens in Mexico as wel as the citizens of other nations. The refusal of this country to carry out the Monroe Doctrine, the resolution says, might justify foreign intervention.

Mr. Murrays resolution refers to President Huerta as "the usurping marauder." Huerta, the resolution recites, "has nullified the Constitution, destroyed all lawful authority and government and has committed upon the persons of the President (Madero) and his family, a blackhanded murder, paralleled in all history only by the cruelty of the dark ages, with all its superstitions and dastardly deeds of rapine and murder."

"There remains in Mexico neither rights of government nor of belligerent powers such as could be recognized," continues the Oklahoman's resolution.

Punishment for Guerrillas.

After warning the Mexican Government to restore order and protect the lives of Americans, it is stipulated that this Government "shall pursue to the ends of the earth" any military leader or band who disregards the warning.

With the arrival of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson only two days distant, Washington is on the qui vive for every shift in the Mexican situation.

Predictions are made that, by the time Ambassador Wilson arrives, the Huerta administration will be in such an unstable conditon that the envoy will not recommend that it

Bryan Naps in Depot; Buys 45-Cent Lunch For 5; All on $12,000!

CHICAGO, July 22.—For two hours early to-day Secretary of State Bryan sat nearly upright in a railroad station seat and slept. When his train was called he entered a drawing room and prepared to awake in Oelwein, Iowa, where he was scheduled to give a chautauqua lecture this afternoon.

Before his nap Secretary Bryan entertained four newspaper men at a midnight lunch which cost him 45 cents. He ate cantaloupe off a dairy lunch chair. Three others of the party ate canteloupe and one reporter drank buttermilk.

Huge Cofferdam on Ohio River Breaks

HENDERSON, KY., July 22.—Heavy piledrivers and barges were tossed about on the Ohio River like skiffs to-day when 200 feet of the cofferdam on the Government's $1,000,000 dam just below here washed out.

Scores of workmen were swept into the rushing waters, but late reports said none drowned.

TRAPPED BY FLAMES IN CLOTHING FACTORY

Women, In Panic, Leap to Death In River as Escape Is Cut Off.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., July 22.—Thirty to fifty girls are reported to have been killed in a fire which broke out here this afternoon in the Binghamton Clothing Company's factory.

An estimate made at 4:30 p. m. placed the number of dead at fifty.

However, so much confusion existed at the time that there was but little chance of reaching an accurate estimate. Some of those who were taken to the hospital badly burned or injured from their falls died a short time later.

A number of bodies are believed to be in the ruins of the building. The estimate of those who were at work at the time the fire broke out ranged from 140 to 200.

Women Leap to Streets.

The fire started in the overall factory, which is situated on Wall street and fronts on the Chenango River. It was a four-story structure.

The fire started on the ground floor and swept into the upper structure before the many females employed there realized their peril.

Panic developed, women leaping wildly from upper windows onto the sidewalks, while many others jumped into the Chenango River.

Firemen reached the scene promptly and aided by policemen and citizens gathered the injured in blankets and nets and rushed them to the hospitals.

Flames Spreading.

It was stated it would be impossible to estimate the number of killed until a check of those injured and a check of the company's employees whose names appear on the payroll could be made.

At 4 o'clock only two bodies had been recovered, although nineteen dead girls were plainly visible in the ruins.

The Binghamton postoffice building and the buildings of the McKellar Drug Company and Simon O'Neil harness goods store are also ablaze.

Deadly Bomb Sent To Carnegie Will Be Dropped Into Ocean

NEW YORK, July 22.—So deadly was the bomb sent to the offices of the Carnegie Corporation addressed personally to Andrew Carnegie, in the opinion of the police, that the Bureau of Combustibles will to-day take the missile on board a launch and drop it in the sea as the only safe way of getting it out of New York.

So dangerous is believed to be the contents of the watermelon-shaped container of zinc that the bureau's chief bomb expert refused to open it, declaring that the destruction of two city blocks might result.

So far the police are without a clew to the sender of the bomb.

Hot Siege Broken, Says Weather Man

Hot weather is over in Atlanta for the next few days, and the weather man says there is no immediate prospect of another spell like that of last week. An east wind, bearing considerable moisture, is causing showers all over Georgia and the South Atlantic coast region.

The forecast for Tuesday and Wednesday is showers, with a maximum temperature of 82 or 83 degrees.

COURT DIRECTS FRANK VENIRE BE DRAWN

Preparations Are Made to Begin Trial Monday Despite Talk of Delay.

day night, according to Judge Pendleton.

Attorney Reuben R. Arnold stated Tuesday morning that he probably would ask Judge Pendleton to draw the venire from the Grand Jury box, and that he felt confident he could cite enough law on the subject to sustain his point.

Solicitor to Fight Move.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey stated that the procedure was altogether irregular, if not illegal, and that he would oppose such a move as strongly as he fought the attempt on the part of the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley over his protest.

The attorneys on both sides will be notified by telephone when Judge Pendleton begins to draw the venire, and he will allow them to be heard.

Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside at the Frank trial, will not return to Atlanta from Covington until Friday. He announced to a correspondent of The Georgian in Covington that the Frank trial would be called next Monday sure, but he would not commit himself as to whether he would consider any move for postponement after the case was called.

Before leaving for Covington he remarked that if the weather was as hot next Monday as it was last week he would welcome some sufficient ground for postponement.

Both Sides Are Ready.

Attorneys Arnold and Rosser admit they would like to se the trial postponed to escape the ordeal of a hard fight in torrid weather, but state they will be reluctant to ask for delay unless there is some very excellent reason why the case should not go to trial.

Both sides are ready. All the witnesses who will be used are within the jurisdiction of the court and able to attend. The inability of any one of the more than 100 to be in court on the day the case is called would sustain a request for postponement, but the attorneys for the defense made it clear that if any move for postponement for any other reason than the absence of a witness was made, it would come from the other side, or the judge.

Attorney Arnold stated that the failure of the Grand Jury to indict Conley had made little difference to their case, because it had been built before any known move was made to bring about the indictment.

"It made absolutely no difference to us," he said. "It was purely a technical point in the trial that would have been in our favor. As to the negro's character and standing, it would make little difference to a fair-minded jury whether he were indicted."

Bacon, Unopposed, Gets 29,529 Votes In Senate Election

A total of 29,529 votes were cast for Augustus O. Bacon for United States Senator in the special election held July 15. No one opposed Senator Bacon, but more than one-eighth of the State's electorate turned out to give him a complimentary vote.

The election was unique in that it was the first to be held under the new law requiring United States Senators to be elected by direct vote of the people.

The returns were canvassed before the House and Senate in a joint meeting Tuesday by a committee of five Senators and five Representatives. The senatorial committee was composed of Senators Jones, Tarver, Tyler, Turner and Bush. The House committee consisted of Representatives Miller, McCrory, Smith, Edmondson and Culpepper.

35 CONVICTS IN CAGE BURNED TO DEATH

Fire Starts in Hay Under Sleeping Quarters on Mississippi Penal Farm.

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—Thirty-five convicts, sleping on the second floor of a wooden cage at the Oakley convict farm 20 miles southwest of Jackson, were burned to death early this morning.

All of the victims were negroes and their bodies were burned beyond recognition. This afternoon their charred bodies were buried in the prison grave yard.

The fire started on the first floor at the stairway landing, cutting off the only avenue of escape. The structure was built ten years ago with lumber taken from the old penitentiary building in Jackson. It burned with astonishing rapidity.

The convict farm is not equipped with any form of fire protection. Two night watchmen are employed at the place, but neither saw the fire until the flames burst through the windows of the lower floor.

The screams of the dying prisoners could be heard for nearly two miles. Farmers in the vicinity hurried to the scene, but were unable to give any assistance. The lower floor of the cage was used as a store building, quantities of hay, corn and molasses being in storage. The hay doubtless caused the fire to spread with added rapidity.

The Oakley farm is in charge of Sergeant S. T. Byrd. The prison hospital also is located at that place, but the convicts who lost their lives were not members of the hospital squad, all of them being employed in the cotton fields. Several notorious negro criminals were among those who lost their lives.

Coroner J. W. Beal, accompanied by a jury, went to Oakley this morning to hold an inquest, and endeavor to ascertain the cause of the fire.

Origin of Fire Mystery.

"I can't explain it," said Sergeant Byrd over the long distance telephone this morning. "As to the origin of the fire I haven't the slightest idea. It may have been a match carelessly dropped at the stairway. I can not believe it was of incendiary origin.

"There was never a chance to save any of the prisoners. The blaze was under good headway before anybody discovered it. When we reached the building it was to find that the fire centered around the only stairway leading to the upper floor of the cage. All of the upper windows were covered with heavy iron bars and it was impossible for the convicts to fight their way out.

Fight Was Useless.

"We did everything in our power, but the fight was useless. The building was doomed from the first and the piteous cries of the poor prisoners who were being roasted alive added to the demoralization of our forces. We have no sort of fire protection or fire fighting equipment here, and the buckets of water thrown by other prisoners on the building had no effect whatever."

The first news of the holocaust was received by Mrs. O. M. Spickard, secretary of the State Prison Board, in a telephone message from Mrs. Byrd wife of the sergeant. Mrs. Byrd was almost hysterical and could give but few of the details. An hour later communication was secured with Sergeant Byrd and a list of the victims obtained. A number of the prisoners were life termers.

Under prison rules, all convicts must be in their cages and lights out by 9 o'clock. The prisoners had been sleeping several hours when they were awakened by the intense heat and clouds of smoke that poured up from below.

According to Assistant Secretary S. E. Birdsong, of the Prison Board, nearly all convict cages at the prison farms, except those at Parchman, are similarly constructed, having only one means of exit.

Clark Makes White Suits Congress Fad

WASHINGTON, July 22.—If Mark Twain could return to earth and come to Congress he would be immensely gatified by the unanimity with which distinguished statesmen have adopted his fad of wearing white.

Over on the House side, Speaker Champ Clark, looking like a huge mountain of ice cream, is resplendent in white from his snowy hair to his immaculate white ties. Since he has set the fashion there, it has spread like wildfire over the chamber.

SEEK EVIDENCE AGAINST GANG OF ROBBERS

Police Attempt to Prove Pair That Nearly Killed Clerk Committed Series of Crimes.

Detectives Tuesday searched the home of R. W. Miller, at Red Oak, near Atlanta, in an attempt to unearth more evidence that Miller and T. W. Reeves, who were caught after they had knocked senseless an employee in the store of R. A. Gober, No. 30 Carroll street, and were trying to open the safe Monday night, perpetrated a series of daring and cleverly-planned burglaries covering a period of several months.

During the afternoon the two men were again cross-examined by the police.

Their alleged attempt to loot the Gober store came near to being fatal to Eugene M. Davis, 18 years old, formerly residing in Bishopville, S. C. Davis, who occasionally worked at night for his employer, was sitting on the steps to the store about 11 o'clock when four men approached him.

"Boy," one of them said, "can you let us into the store? We are mighty thirsty and want a dope around."

Thrown Into Ice Box.

"Sure," replied Davis without hesitation as he pulled a bunch of keys from his pocket and unlocked the store door.

Entering the store, he was followed by the men. The small ice box where soft drinks are kept is just inside the door. As Davis raised the lid of the ice box he was rudely seized from the rear by the nape of the neck and a rough hand was clapped over his mouth.

He was bumped against the side of the wall into near insensibility and dragged to the rear of the store, which is used as a butcher shop. Back of the butcher shop counter is an ice closet about nine feet high and four feet deep.

His captors opened the ice box door and thrust Davis in, bolting the heavy door upon him. Davis was unable to rise to his feet and lay in a cramped position, with 300 pounds of ice not two inches from his head.

Thought He Would Die.

"The air was stuffy," said Davis. "I could hardly get my breath, and I thought several times I would die. It was terribly cold, and a sickening sensation came over me as I felt the drops of water trickle down on my back."

"I couldn't hear a sound. The men had taken the keys from me, and I didn't know whether anyone would ever get me out. The keyring taken from me contained the key to the safe which I had heard Mr. Gober say contained several hundred dollars. Finally I could stand it no longer; my breath was gone and I felt I was lost. I remembered no more until I awoke to find men standing all around me and someone giving me a taste of something which felt warm and good.

"I must have been in there fifteen minutes at least, but I don't know. Mr. Gober says it was more than twenty minutes before they found me."

Defy Police to Prove Guilt.

Despite the assertion of the detectives that they have connected the men with a chain of robberies and suit case thefts extending over a considerable time, both Reeves and Miller emphatically denied Tuesday that they had had anything to do with them and defied the police to prove their charges.

The detectives went to the home of Reeves, 13 Stonewall street, and there found three suit cases, which, they say, are stolen property. Another suit case was found in a woman's room at No. 153 1-2 Whitehall street.

Chief Lanford Tuesday morning said that Reeves and Miller had stolen more than 40 suit cases at the depots in the recent weeks, and also had participated in attempts at safe-cracking and burglary. Detectives Chewning, Davis, Sturdivant and Rosser have taken turns in trailing the men in the last six weeks.

AMERICAN PLEAS FROM MEXICO ALARM U. S.

be recognized, no matter how favorably disposed he may be toward it.

Dispatches of the past two days have caused deep alarm to the State Department because of the insistent appeals for help coming from Americans in the demoralized country.

Tuxpam, on the southeastern coast of Mexico, is now the center of all official eyes. The town was captured by the Constitutionalists, and the battleship Louisiana, with Rear Admiral Fletcher aboard, is speeding toward the port from Vera Cruz to prevent possible depredations on foreign property.

Senator Demands Protection of U. S. Citizens.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Senator Fall, of New Mexico, to-day called up in the Senate his resolution providing that the constitutional rights of American citizens shall go with them throughout the world and that American life and property shall be protected abroad. This resolution was framed from a plank in the Democratic platform.

"I ask that the resolution be placed before the Senate for immediate consideration," said Fall. "Its importance demands immediate attention."

Senator Bacon, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, moved the resolution be referred to his committee.

Bacon Urges Caution.

"We are in a position of grave responsibility," said Senator Bacon, "and no man who loves his country can afford to shut his eyes to the effect of an enunciation on this matter by the Senate, therefore care should be taken in voicing an opinion on this resolution."

Bacon argued the resolution was open to criticism inasmuch as an American citizen in Mexico or the Balkans had no constitutional rights.

Senator Lodge, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, called attention to the fact that the resolution was copied from a plank in the Democratic platform which had been framed by Senator O'Gorman, of New York.

Lodge Takes Issue.

"Can not we act upon two abstract principles, contained in this resolution, because these principles are being violated in a neighboring country at this time?" demanded Senator Lodge.

Senator Bacon asked if Lodge wished to send an army to Mexico because American citizens have been imprisoned there.

"No," said Senator Lodge. "There are diplomatic steps to be taken to rescue American citizens and a resort to arms should be had only when all other steps have been taken. This resolution can not be lightly dismissed."

"As I see it, the resolution means about this: If some person goes to a foreign country and gets in trouble there, he can embroil all the people in the United States. I am not in favor of the resolution," said Senator Jones, of Washington.

Japan Not to Aid Huerta Administration.

MEXICO CITY, July 22.—Japan will not aid the Huerta administration in its fight for recognition by the United States.

While greatly appreciating the friendship shown the Japanese Government, the latter's charge d'affaires to-day notified President Huerta and his Cabinet that his country will not sanction any demonstration, when the new Japanese Minister arrives, which would tend to be of an anti-American character.

Mayor Can Not Give Ansley Park Relief

Mayor Woodward said Tuesday he sympathized with the citizens of Ansley Park because they had been unable to get any street work done, but he did not know how to help them.

"I have been pleading for a new system by which we could make somebody responsible for such negligence, but we have so far been unable to get it," he said. "It would take a Philadelphia lawyer to discover who is responsible for the neglect of Ansley Park.

"If those people will band together and stir up the whole Council and all the members of the construction department they may be able to get something done."

TARVER BILL IS PASSED AFTER HOT FIGHT

Provides for Damage Suits in Homicide Cases—Was Issue in Senate Several Years.

Following a two-hour debate, in which charges of being in league with the railroads and counter charges of seeking to increase the earnings of damage suit lawyers were made, the Georgia Senate Tuesday morning, by a vote of 27 to 10, passed Senator Tarver's bill, as amended, providing for recovery by certain parties in cases of homicide. The bill has been before the Senate several years.

Snator Miller, of the Twenty-fourth District, who opened the fight on the bill in an hour's speech, declared the authors of the bill could not have drawn a better thing for the damage suit lawyers. He offered a substitute bill omitting the alleged drastic features, which was voted down. Judge Allen, of the Twentieth, also opposed the bill.

In rebuttal Senator Tarver declared the opposition had the interests of the railroads at heart. Following the vote Senator Miller gave notice of requesting reconsideration of the bill.

One Other Bill Passed.

In addition to Senator Tarver's bill, the Senate passed one other, a local measureo ffered by Senator Smith, of the Ninth, amending the charter incorporating the town of Edison.

The Senate passed a resolution, offered by Judge Allen, extending sympathy to Speaker Burwell upon the death of his sister, Miss Rosa Burwell.

The General Judiciary Committee of the Senate reported adversely the bill for an amendment to the Code providing that the only grounds for total divorce shall be adultery. It is understood a minority report on this measure will be filed with the President of the Senate.

The committee also reported in the negative on the bill providing for the rotation of judges of Superior courts. A favorable report was made on the bill providing for the appointment of a Notary Public for the State at large, as well as a bill providing for an amendment to the penal code making husband and wife competent as witnesses in criminal proceedings, but not compelled to testify one against the other.

Other Committees Report.

The Senate Finance Committee headed by Senator Miller, recommended the bill forcing foreign fire insurance companies that have reinsured all policies to show cause for withdrawal from the State.

The Penitentiary Committee reported favorably the measure making it unlawful for any person with authority to deliver a prisoner to another.

Thomas Protested As Crawford Case Solicitor Pro Tem

Reuben R. Arnold, one of the attorneys for Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, under heavy bail on the charge of poisoning her husband, Joshua Crawford, filed a protest Tuesday against the appointment of Attorney Lewis Thomas, former City Solicitor, as Solicitor Pro Tem in the prosecution of Mrs. Crawford.

The appointment was made by Judge W. D. Ellis because of the disqualification of Solicitor Dorsey. Attorney Arnolds based his objection on the ground that Thomas already had been one of the attorneys in the case and therefore also was disqualified.

Attorney James said Tuesday he would go before Thomas and seek to have him indict Fred Lumb so that extradition papers might be obtained. He said he also would urge the immediate indictment of Mrs. Crawford.

Joseph E. Johnson Dies in Sanitarium

Joseph E. Johnson, 86 years old, father of George E. Johnson, the Police Commissioner, of No. 302 Luckie street, died Tuesday morning at 5 o'clock at a private sanitarium. He is survived by three sons, George E., Orie and W. L. Johnson.

For several years Mr. oJhnson was active in various lines and well known by business men of Atlanta.

The funeral will be held from the residence Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Interment will be in Oakland Cemetery.

OBITUARY

The double funeral of Casey Daniels and Jerry Moles, who were drowned in the Chattahoochee River Saturday while on a fishing trip, was held from the Congregational Church on McDaniel and Hightower streets Tuesday morning. The body of Casey Daniels was interred at Sardis churchyard, that of Jerry Moles at Westview.

Mrs. Rachel Harland, twenty-eight years old, wife of John H. Harland, cashier at the Putt & Davies Company, died Tuesday morning at 2 o'clock at their home, No. 196 Juniper street. The funeral will be held from the residence at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. Interment in Westview.

Mary M. Mapes, two-year-old daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. A. L. Mapes, No. 210 Winthrop street, died Tuesday morning at 6 o'clock. Funeral services will be held from Poole's chapel at 2 o'clock Wednesday. Interment in Westview.

Melvin Nesbitt, 15-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Nesbitt, died Tuesday morning at the home, No. 25 Dill avenue. Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment in Westview.

The funeral of Mrs. Clara Holt, who died Sunday, will take place at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the residence, No. 720 East Fair street. Interment at Hollywood.

NOVEL QUESTION FOR SUFFRAGE DEBATE

Speakers to Determine Difference in Meaning of "Suffragette" and "Suffragist."

Woman suffrage in all its phases will be discussed Tuesday night in Taft Hall. One of the important questions to be settled will be the distinction between a suffragist and a suffragette. Speakers who will take up this angle of the argument declare there is a wider gap in the meaning of the words than there is between sanitarium and sanatorium.

The debate will be under the auspices of the Habersham Chapter, D. A. R., and is the last of a series of entertainments arranged by the chapter to aid in raising funds for the new building which will be erected in Peachtree street.

"This will be an open discussion on the suffrage question, as one of the leading thoughts of the day," said Mrs. William Lawson Peel, outlining the plans. "It must not be thought for a moment, however, that the Daughters of the American Revolution are taking part in this discussion as an organization or even as individuals.

"For instance, our last entertainment was a Mother Goose affair, but it was not intended that the public suppose we were all geese.

"Our next venture will be the presentation of beautiful Indian legends, but it can not be inferred that we are Indians."

Mrs. Peel, who is vice president general, N. S. D. A. R., and prominently connected with Habersham Chapter, will preside.

The meeting will be called at 7:45 o'clock. Among the speakers will be Miss Rosa Woodberry, Mrs. M. C. Hardin, Mrs. M. T. McWhorter, Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, Mrs. W. H. Felton, Mrs. M. L. McLendon, Mrs. Frances Whiteside, Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, J. R. Smith, R. H. Hardeman, Dr. A. M. Hughlett, H. H. Swift, J. L. Hope, W. L. Converse, Louis Wisdom and R. A. Broyles.

Council Serenaded After Aiding Police

Council Monday had just increased the salaries of six roundsmen $5 by changing their names to sergeants and the leaders in the fight were leaning back in satisfaction when the air suddenly was filled with lively dance music.

Custodian Joe Shearer had a phonograph in the adjoining committee room and someone had started it. The councilmen heard all the records before they stopped the machine.

STORY OF PHAGAN CASE BY CHAPTERS

Slaying of Factory Girl, South's Most Baffling Crime Mystery, Reviewed in Detail.

CHAPTER I.

Will the veil of mystery be lifted when the curtain rises next Monday on another scene in Atlanta's darkest tragedy?

A vast audience, shocked by the horror of Mary Phagan's fate on a Saturday of last April and held through the succeeding weeks in the thrall of the baffling crime drama, in keen suspense awaits this question's answer.

Will Fulton County's Solicitor General be able to point his finger at Leo M. Frank and exclaim, "That is the man who strangled Mary Phagan!" backing his damning accusation with such an abundance of evidence that there can remain no shadow of doubt?

Or will Luther Rosser, certain to be a towering and masterful factor in the titanic struggle that is to be staged, unmask his strength, bring to bear the secret evidence that has been in his possession for weeks, beat down every bulwark of suspicion that the State has erected about its prisoner and, as a dramatic finale, assail the negro, Jim Conley, cowering in the witness stand, with a raking volley of questions that will leave the negro man shaken and terrified, a confession of the crime upon his lips?

Whole State Stirred.

All of Atlanta—most of the State—is hanging with the most intense interest on the outcome.

No other crime ever stirred Georgia to its depths as has the slaying of the little factory girl.

No murder ever has so gripped the hearts and aroused the sympathies of the people throughout the State.

Georgia's criminal history reveals no other case in which the public's interest has remained at fever heat through three months filled with other exciting events. From the time the extras first flamed the details of the brutal killing in the National Pencil Factory until the present there has appeared to be no diminution in the desire to learn each day's developments.

There was in the early days of the tragedy a cry for summary vengeance upon the murderer, but time has tempered this into a universal demand for justice, which is none the less determined in that it is not so demonstrative as the first hot wave of indignation.

The Phagan case has remained in the public mind partly, of course, because it has remained as baffling a mystery as the local detectives ever have encountered. With the mystery solved its appealing interest gradually would have died out, but a review of the tragic features of the drama so far as it has progressed and a consideration of those who have parts in it supplies an explanation of why the fate of Mary Phagan is still uppermost in the people's hearts.

The revolting circumstances of the crime—the attack, the pitiful struggle of the helpless child in the hands of her assailant, the blow and, finally, the garrote—all refuse to be erased from the memory.

Two Principal Figures.

But standing out in stronger prominence than the remembrance of these abhorrent details are two of the principal figures in the tragedy.

They are Mary Phagan, victim, and Leo M. Frank, charged by the State with her death. These two have made the appeal to the public imagination. The contrast in their positions in life intensified it.

Mary Phagan was only a little factory girl whose happy and innocent laughter was stilled by one of the blackest crimes in Atlanta's history.

Leo Frank, a brilliant young man of position and family, was accused of this deed of a beast in human guise.

Mary Phagan was not rich. She was glad to get the $3 or $4 a week that her work at the pencil factory won for her.

Leo Frank's family had wealth. An uncle was a reputed millionaire.

Mary Phagan had hardly the education which her years entitled her, times were not always easy in her family and she was driven to neglect her schoolbooks and work in the factory.

Frank was a Cornell graduate. He had a high technical education. He had been sent abroad to select the machinery for the Atlanta plant. His business associates placed every confidence in him. His friends knew him for an upright and moral young man, with a most promising career ahead of him.

That he would descend to the level of a criminal of the worst type was inconceivable to them. The possibility, furnished to thousands of others a subject for daily conjecture.

Life of Slain Girl.

Mary Phagan's life began 14 years ago in Marietta. She was the petted "baby" of the family. She had three older brothers and a sister, now 18. Even in the early years of childhood she is remembered as having the pretty features and attractive ways that made her greatly liked by her girl friends later when she came to work in Atlanta.

For a playmate in the days at Marietta she had one who was to play a brief but sensational part in April's tragedy. It was J. M. Gantt. Within a few hours after her cold body was found in the gloomy basement of the National Pencil Factory her childhood playmate was arrested as he left a car in Marietta, to which place there seemed at the time every indication that he was fleeing.

Her childish prattle had changed to the happy conversation of young girlhood when the family moved to East Point. There bereavement visited the family in the death of Mary's father. Hardship followed sorrow and it became necessary for little Mary to follow the example of her brothers and sisters and assist in providing a livelihood for the family. She could not do much, but she did her mite willingly and cheerfully.

A year ago Mrs. Phagan married W. J. Coleman and the family moved to No. 146 Lindsay street, Atlanta. Mary obtained work in the National Pencil Factory and soon made friends with all the children about her home and with the girls she met at the factory. Although she never had many of the luxuries of life, Mary was reared carefully by her mother and enjoyed the wise counsel that is sometimes denied the children of families in more pretentious circumstances.

All Loved Little Mary.

To the loving and painstaking home training, the attractive half-shy little maiden brought a naturally sweet disposition. In the few leisure hours she had she often played about her home with the children of the neighbors. The little people of Bellwood, on the outskirts of Atlanta, all grew to love the sweet-tempered, pretty little girl. When they returned to their homes after a frolic their conversation was of what Mary had said and what Mary had done.

The fathers and mothers began to take notice of her as she laughed and chattered among the other children. They came to watch for the time each morning when she boarded a car to go to work at the pencil factory. They took a sort of parental interest in the bright-eyed, light-hearted little girl.

The small community is a bit of a city in itself. Everyone knows everyone else and the neighborly spirit is exemplified in the manner in which the residents, most of them working people, struggle for each other and sympathize in each other's afflictions. They joined in their near-worship of the little factory girl. She embodied in their minds pure and attractive young girlhood. They guarded her reputation almost as jealously as did her own mother. If anything should happen to her it would be a shock to every family in the little community.

On a Thursday, the last in April, Mary was playing with two of her dearest girl chums, Vera Epps and Lillian Waignel. The back yards of the Phagan and Epps homes adjoined. The Waignel girl lived just across the street from Vera Epps at No. 249 Fox street. An expected shipment of metal at the pencil factory had not arrived and a section of the plant was shut down temporarily, throwing Mary out of work until the metal should arrive.

A Strange Foreboding.

The three little girls ran and played about the whole afternoon, laughing and talking in their childish happiness. Toward evening, tired from the frolic, they rested on the embankment near their homes. In the hard red clay they dug out their initials as they rested.

"M. P." were the letters scratched out of the dirt by Mary.

"Let's keep them here always," cried Vera, clapping her hands.

"But if one of us should die?" suggested Mary.

"Then the other two of us would come back here and dig the initials out again when it rained," Vera replied, but a shadow had fallen over the gayety of the little group.

Two days later several of the housewives of Bellwood, looking from their windows, saw Mary Phagan get aboard a car for Atlanta, and they never saw her return. Vera Epps waved her a good-bye as Mary hurried down the street without a thought that it was a last farewell.

When Vera looked upon her playmate the next time, there was no answering smile. The pink cheeks that flushed with happiness and health were ghastly white except where they were begrimed and pitifully bruised and swollen. The beautiful young body, once full of life, was cold and inanimate and mutilated.

Goes to the Factory.

The Confederate veterans were preparing to honor their dead when Mary came into town that day. It was a holiday and she had planned to go to the pencil factory to get the $1.20 due her for the short time she had worked that week and then to witness the parade of the boys in gray.

She got a word of greeting from Conductor W. T. Hollis when she boarded the car on its run into town. Motorman W. M. Matthews, who many times before had brought the little girl from her home in Bellwood to work in Atlanta, also noticed her as he slowed down to take her — at the crossing.

Conductor Hollis says that the car arrived at Broad and Marietta streets at 12:07 o'clock. He was relieved there by another conductor and knows only that Mary stayed on the car. Motorman Matthews says that she left at Broad and Hunter and started toward the factory. Some time between 12:10 and 12:15 Mary Phagan entered the doors of the National Pencil Factory and went to the office of Leo Frank, where she drew her pay. She never was seen alive after that moment except by the brute that attacked her, beat her cruelly and completed his demoniac crime by looping a cord about the tender flesh of her neck and strangling her to death.

No One Saw Her Alive Again.

From the moment that the little factory girl entered the office of Frank the mystery dated.

Whether she never left the presence of the young superintendent alive, the public does not know.

Whether she started down the stairs and there was attacked by a negro fiend lurking in the darkness, later paying out the toll of her young life to the fury of his bestiality, also is shrouded in a mystery as yet undispelled by the searching investigation of three months.

Many pieces of evidence point to the latter surmise, but no one, so far as is known, is able to say with certainty that this is so, save possibly Jim Conley himself.

Conley and Frank, by their own admissions, were in the factory when Mary Phagan entered. Frank told freely of his presence there. Conley's confession was wrung from him after three weeks in a cell at the police station.

Upstairs on the fourth floor were Harry Denham and Arthur White. Mrs. White visited the factory to see her husband. She left shortly before 1 o'clock, when Frank came to the fourth floor to tell the men that if they wished to remain they would have to stay until about 3 o'clock, as he was going home for lunch and would lock them in.

Frank Alone in Factory.

They stayed in the factory and Frank departed within a few minutes. Shortly before 3 o'clock he returned and the men came downstairs and left, after White had gone into Frank's office to borrow $2.

Frank was alone in the factory from this time until 4 o'clock. No one has any information as to when Conley left or how he left, except by his own statements. He says that he left shortly after 1 o'clock by the front door. If Frank's story of the time he quit the building is true, it is fairer to presume that the negro left some time after 1 o'clock and through the basement's rear door, which he forced open by pulling the staple.

Newt Lee, the negro night watchman, came to the factory at 4 o'clock. He unlocked the outside door and the door leading up to the second floor.

"All right, Mr. Frank," he shouted as he approached the superintendent's office.

Sent Negro Lee Away.

Frank appeared rubbing his hands and remarking that it was too bad Lee had come down at this time as he might as well have stayed at home and got more sleep. He told Lee he might go and return at 6 o'clock, the regular hour for reporting.

A few minutes after Lee came back to the factory, J. M. Gantt, a discharged employee, walked across the street and said he would like to go into the factory and get a pair of shoes he had left there three weeks before. Frank gave him permission, but seemed a little doubtful of Gantt's real purpose. After the factory superintendent had gone to his home, he called Lee up on the telephone and asked if Gantt were gone and everything was all right at the factory. Lee replied that Gantt had left as soon as he had obtained the shoes and called up a girl friend from the office.

Lee made his regular rounds for several hours that night, shutting down all the windows and making his trip over the different floors, as was his custom.

He climbed down the ladder into the basement to see if everything was all right down there. He went no farther, however, than the flickering gas light at the bottom of the ladder. Peering through the darkness, he saw nothing out of the way.

Second Trip to Basement.

That night was no different than any other night up until shortly before 3 o'clock in the morning, if the negro's story is to be credited. At this time he made another trip into the basement.

Did he hear some sound that led him to go down the ladder and venture beyond the dim circle of light from the gas jet?

Was some other living being in the cellar when he clambered down the ladder?

He says not. With his dirty, smoky lantern, he descended through the scuttle hole. This time he did not stop at the little area of light made by the gas jet. Swinging his lantern slowly back and forth in front of him, he made his way toward the rear of the basement. Near the boiler he stopped. After a few moments he looked about him.

What was that lying over there to his left on a pile of sawdust and other trash and dirt? Could it be that some of the rascally fellows in the plant were playing this ghoulish joke on him?

Tremblingly he held the lantern in front of him. The black man's eyes dilated with horror. There could be no mistake about it. His impulse was to flee, but he pulled himself together.

He started toward the dark, inert object lying there on the trash heap

Motorcyclist Hurt In Auto Collision

Dave Rudisall, of College Park, is in Grady Hospital with a broken leg as a result of a collision between his motorcycle and an automobile near Fort McPherson Monday afternoon.

The automobile was driven by Harry Manning, of East Point. His machine was uninjured and he carried Rudisall to the hospital.

6,500-Pound Cheese Made in New York

UTICA, N. Y., July 22.—The finishing touches on a cheese weighing 6,500 pounds, the largest cheese ever made in New York State, if not in the world, were put on to-day at the Gowdy factory in Martinsburg.

Two days' milk from two factories was required. The cheese will be exhibited at the State fair in Syracuse.

DEATH'S SHADOW CAST OVER HOUSE

Recess Taken Out of Respect to Speaker Burwell, Whose Sister Died Suddenly.

A shadow was thrown over the House Tuesday morning by the death of Speaker W. H. Burwell's sister, Miss Ruth Burwell. Out of respect to the Speaker the House recessed for two hours after adopting resolutions expressing sympathy for the bereaved member.

Miss Burwell died Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Brooks, in Griffin, where she was visiting. While she had not been well for some time, her death was unexpected. Mr. Burwell spent Sunday with her and she appeared to be much improved.

Miss Burwell was well known throughout the State, being a woman of unusual brilliance. Her home was in Albany, where she was dearly beloved. She was 35 years of age.

Second Among Members' Family.

Her death is the second to occur among the families of House members during this session. Chairman L. R. Akin, of the Ways and Means Committee, suffered the loss of a daughter two weeks ago.

Adjournment for the entire day would have been taken Tuesday but for the fact that a joint meeting of the Senate and House had been arranged for the canvassing of the vote for United States Senator July 15, in which Senator Bacon was the only candidate.

In future the House will get down to work early, adopting a resolution Tuesday morning setting the hour of convening at 9 o'clock for the remaining 23 days of the session. The regular hour of adjournment, 1 o'clock, will continue.

House Faces Three Busy Weeks.

With virtually every committee meeting daily, the members of the House are facing three strenuous weeks. The local bills have been disposed of in wholesale quantities and but a small number remain before the House. The calendar is rapidly getting down to a general bill basis and scant attention will be paid to local ones in the future.

The recess prevented the taking up of the general appropriations bill which Chairman Wheatley, of the Appropriations Committee, had announced he would call for to-day, and it probably will be taken up Wednesday. The appropriation bill takes precedent over all other bills.

TRUE LOVE JOLTED IN ARSON HEARING

Boarder Adores Landlady, but She Has Him Bound Over as a Firebug.

Confessions of love requited were made and repudiated in Judge Broyles' court Tuesday when the trial of G. A. Vaughn on the charge of arson made by Mrs. A. C. Klapper following the burning of her home at No. 256 East Hunter street last Friday was heard.

Vaughn was bound over to a higher court under bond of $3,000, but not before he had emptied his heart of all its feeling for his accuser and declared that his love had not been spurned by her.

"Why she placed her arms about me and kissed me tenderly the morning of the fire," Vaughn, who was a boarder at Mrs. Klapper' home, declared. "And now she charges me with arson. It can not be true."

By this statement, Mrs. Klapper, who is past middle age, was considerably ruffled.

"I never did kiss him," she exclaimed. "One time he gave me $30 when I was sick to pay doctors' bills, and when I bought a coat with the money he got mad and said he would burn it up. And he did, and my house, too."

The fire was discovered in a closet in Vaughn's room on the top floor shortly after he had departed for downtown. Miss Bonnie Burns, another boarder, testified at the trial that Vaughn, in leaving the house had looked up at the roof. Miss Burns' testimony proved the strongest against Vaughn.

KODAKER KING OF ATLANTA FAME DIES IN CELL

Technicality Delays Pardon Until Too Late—Career Here Sensational—Jailed in Boston.

Cardenio F. King, Boston newspaper publisher and financier, who died a convict on the State farm at Bridgewater, Mass., Monday just before Governor Foss was ready to sign his pardon, had an Atlanta career almost as interesting as his pathetic death, according to Atlantans who knew him during his residence here more than ten years ago.

He came to Atlanta from North Carolina and was known as "Kodaker" Kink because of a column he ran in various Atlanta newspapers which was headed by a photograph of himself with a camera. His personal appearance marked him an unusual man, for he weighed about 300 pounds, had bright red hair and mustache and a rosy complexion.

His column was indicative of his character. It always began with a few breezy paragraphs of choice gossip, but a reader would not peruse far before he discovered himself buried in alluring advertisements.

Hoaxed by Walter Taylor.

Occasionally when advertisers refused to be convinced of the value of this column he would be sent out on regular assignments. It so happened that one day he was sent to the police station, the "beat" of Walter Taylor, the present City Clerk, but then a bright young reporter. "Kodaker" King was unfamiliar with the assignment, so he decided the best policy was to follow close on the heels of Walter Taylor. And thereby hangs a tale.

Walter Taylor "framed" with Detective Billy Crim, the famous policeman who passed away several years ago, to call him suddenly as though something startling had happened. Crim sprang the trick one hot August day while Taylor and King were walking down the street, and Taylor, lithe and young, darted up the steps.

He did not stop until he had gained the roof of the cupola of the police station. He did not even stop to look around, for he knew that King, 300 pounds net, was following him with all his might and main.

King Reached Top—Purple.

Several minutes later King, puffing and blowing, stuck his head through the manhole on the roof. His red face had turned purple and the perspiration streamed down his cheeks.

Soon afterward "Kodaker" King left Atlanta. He was flat broke and his friends did not know what would become of him. But a few years later he returned with his name changed to "Oil" King; and it was remarked that if his oil flowed as much as his money, he would be a second John D. Rockefeller.

As "Kodaker" he had gone to Boston. But he dropped that title with the discovery of oil at Beaumont, Texas. He went out there as an advertising man and soon owned a number of acres of rocky land.

Train Attached for Debt.

Back East he hurried and organized an oil company. When he struck Atlanta he was traveling in a special train. He advertised his stock in two-page spreads in each of the Atlanta papers. Sam W. Small, evangelist and newspaper man, was engaged as his press agent.

The only reminder of his former days of poverty and gloom was when all his possessions in the train were attached by a justice of the peace bailiff for an old debt of $40. But he paid that and was on his way.

The next Atlantans heard of King was that he was in the penitentiary in Massachusetts. He had been the owner of a daily paper, The Boston Daily Tribune. His financial career was ended when he was convicted of obtaining $22,000 under false pretenses.

Died in Sight of Liberty.

Only a technicality prevented his last words being those of a free man. His wife and four sons were at his bedside. Governor Foss had been wired that his condition was hopeless. The Governor had canvassed his council and decided to grant a pardon. But the council could not be called together to take formal action until Tuesday.

When Dr. Emerson, medical head of the State Farm, went to announce that a pardon would be granted Tuesday he found King dead. Chronic intestinal trouble was the cause.

NEGRO CHAUFFEURS MEET.

The first meeting of the newly organized Negro Chauffers' Association will be held at the Negro Congregational Church Tuesday evening. Dr. R. H. Butler will deliver an address.

VOTING GROWS BRISK IN SLOGAN EMBLEM 'PRETTIEST GIRL' RACE

Miss Estell McDonald, latest entrant in the slogan button beauty contest.

Nominations and Photos of All Types of Beauty Are Pouring In.

With the "Beauty Button" contest, to determine whose picture among the hundreds of Atlanta girls shall adorn the Greater Atlanta button, in full swing, nominations with photographs of all types of beauty are coming in.

Hundreds of votes are being cast, everyone in Atlanta having the privilege of nominating and voting for whomever they wish. The honor of leading the city in its quest for the 500,000 population mark by 1920 is being sought on all sides.

Every contestant is busy securing votes, and with the end of the race, the picture of the candidate securing the largest number of votes will be placed upon the button.

One of the latest entrants is Miss Estell McDonald, an extremely attractive young woman, whose friends are confident that no mistake will be made if she is chosen to represent fair Atlanta.

'Bomb' for Wilson Was Cake of Soap; Doctor Brought It

WASHINGTON, July 22.—When Dr. Bernard Rachauer, who gave his address at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., called at the White House to-day and demanded to see President Wilson, the secret service men took him into custody long enough to examine a black bag the doctor carried.

The secret service operatives feared a bomb. They found a cake of soap and a roll of bandages.

Dr. Rachauer would not state his business with the President. He was told that the Chief Executive was "not at home."

Roumania Ready to Treat With Bulgars

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, July 22.—The Bulgarian Legation here this afternoon received the following dispatch from the home government at Sofia:

"The Government has decided to surrender Adrianople to the Turks."

BUCHAREST, July 22.—Roumania is willing to end the war with Bulgaria. In an official note issued to-day it accepts the Sofia Government's offer to cede territory above Turtukai and Dobrideh.

Roumania suggests, however, that the peace negotiations proceed within the borders of its own country.

Glass Tries to Quiet Money Board Strife

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Representative Ragsdale, of South Carolina, the member of the House Banking and Currency Committee who suddenly quit the committee because Chairman Glass could not furnish copies of certain amendments to the currency bill that Ragsdale demanded, returned to the conference on the bill with his Democratic colleagues to-day.

Glass made strenuous effort to preserve harmony in the committee.

Militants Are Fined; Burn Another House

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 22.—Following the severe battle between the militant suffragettes and the police, when the later arrested Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and six of her followers, the rioters were arraigned in police court to-day. Two were fined and two others were ordered to furnish bond to keep the peace.

ATLANTA BATTLE RECALLED BY CLAYTON

Construction Head Gives Interesting Reminiscences on 49th Anniversary.

Captain Robert M. Clayton, well-known Atlantan who was in charge of a company and was much under fire during the siege of Atlanta, Tuesday, the forty-ninth anniversary of the Battle of Atlanta, talked interestingly to a Georgian reporter of the events that made this day famous in history.

"A strong movement is on foot to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of this battle next year with ostentatious ceremonies," said Captain Clayton.

"The old Moseley house on the Marietta road, just beyond the city limits, marks the headquarters of General John B. Hood, the commander of the Confederate army. It was on this spot that General Joseph E. Johnston was ordered to surrender his command to Hood July 18, 1864. General Johnston had refused to fight, retreating from Tennessee. On the day the change was made all the soldiers wore crepe on their arms.

Memorial Park.

"A proposition has been made to sell 37 acres of this property to the city for a memorial park. It is about the only battleground around here available for such a purpose."

Captain Clayton explained that the first fighting begun around Atlanta was on July 20, along the old Collier road, north of the city. During that battle he was struck for the first and only time during the war with a bullet. But it was a spent bullet and did not break the skin. Night found both divisions undisturbed in their positions.

Firing was resumed again on the morning of July 22, east of the city between the Georgia railroad and the old Koch house. Hood had sent Hardee with his corps around north of the city to make the attack. The Confederates charged from the south and east toward the city, but the city was held against them.

Where McPehrson Fell.

The fighting was the fiercest of any of the battles around Atlanta. Of it there is a vivid picture in Cyclorama at Grant Park.

General McPherson fell at a spot on McPherson avenue now marked by a marble column. He was succeeded in command of the Federals by General John A. Logan. It was the day of the death of General W. H. C. Walker, of the Confederates.

Colonel Albert Howell, well known in Atlanta, and the late Colonel L. P. Thomas commanded two regiments that charged and took a Federal battery which was stationed at the present corner of Moreland and DeKalb avenues.

Night came again without any change in the relative positions of the two armies.

Under Constant Fire.

The next fight was on July 28, on the Moseley place, west of the city. That day did not mark a victory, but it began the siege of Atlanta that did not let up until September 8, when the city was taken by General Sherman and burned to the ground.

Captain Clayton said the city was constantly under fire during all those days, although many of the people remained and business was carried on as well as possible.

One day a barber, sitting in front of his shop at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, was struck and killed by a shell. The shell also struck an iron street lamp post and pierced a hole in it. The post stands there yet, one of the many interesting marks of those terrible days.

House Has 'Spank' Day; Olive Warms Breeches of Pages

Tuesday was official spanking day in the House, with genial Sam Olive, Representative from Richmond County, as "spanker" and the pages as "spankees."

During the recess the pages became unusually playful. In fact, they are the liveliest pages the House ever has known. One of them developed the idea of initiating the new members of their ranks, but ran afoul of Representative Olive, who decided to initiate the entire lot.

Ten slaps upon the western side of each of the pages' trousers were applied to each youngster. There was no escape, for as each boy's turn came the other pages seized him and held him firmly across genial Sam's lap, while the ten slaps were counted in unison.

Fire Sweeps Over County in Kentucky

LOUISVILLE, July 22.—Flames today are sweeping the fields of Green County.

Farmers are making heroic efforts to check the fierce blaze that has already burned over thousand of acres parched by the protracted drouth.

LEADERS AGREE TO PUSH BIG FUNDS BILL

Decks Cleared in House and Appriation Measure Will Go to Senate This Week.

When Chairman Wheatley, of the House Appropriations Committee, calls up the general appropriations bill Wednehday he will ask that it be made a continuing order until it is disposed of in the House and sent to the Senate.

The chairman of the Appropriations Committee has the extraordinary right under the rules of the House of calling up his bill whenever he pleases, and it must have the right of way.

Chairman Wheatley has determined to exercise his right to the limit, and to that end has invited and obtained the promise of Speaker Burwell's earnest and sincere support in putting the bill through.

Trying to Push It Along.

It is the purpose of Chairman Wheatley and the Speaker to have the general appropriations bill in the hands of the Senate at least by the end of this week, and if they succeed they will have the bill in the Senate earlier than it has been since the war, and at least ten days earlier than it has been in thirty years.

When the big bill comes up the House will immediately be resolved in a committee of the whole House, with some member other than the Speaker presiding, as the rules require.

The chairman of the Committee of the Whole House has not yet been announced, but it is likely it will be Mr. McMichael, of Marion, or Mr. Miller, of Bibb.

Both are experienced parliamentarians and either would make a fit and proper person for the work. Both are behind the effort to get the appropriation bill into the hands of the Governor well in advance of adjournment, as the Governor has requested.

General Tax Act Next.

The bill carries the constitutional appropriations, statehouse salaries and the like, which can not be changed by the House, in full, and these items will be quickly disposed of.

The other items will go in in blank, to be filled in by the committee of the whole.

Immediately after the general appropriations bill is disposed of the tax revision bill and the general tax act will come into the House from the Ways and Means Committee, when, at the request of Chairman Aiken, those bills also will be given the right of way. Both should be in the hands of the Senate before the end of next week.

Speed Assured in Senate.

If this is accomplished, another House record will be smashed.

The chairmen of the two big committees and the Speaker of the House have been assured by a large majority of the House that they will be co-operated with in their efforts to expedite legislation.

In the Senate President Anderson is but waiting for the House measures in order that he may duplicate there the program of orderly haste to be enacted in the House. He has assurance of co-operation from a practically solid Senate.

Big Damages Asked In Macon Depot Case

MACON, July 22.—The special committees appointed to ascertain the amounts of damages claimed by property owners on Cherry street on account of the closing of the thoroughfare for the building of a union station have submitted their report to the Railroad Commission.

The report shows that the property owners want exceedingly large damages, and that it will take either arbitration or court suits to settle most of the claims.

Chamberlain Decides Not to Oppose Tariff

WASHINGTON, July 22.—That Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, a Democrat, does not intend to vote against the tariff bill because it carries free raw wool and other items objectionable to the West became apparent to-day.

An examination of the Congressional Record shows that the remark he made in the Senate yesterday that he would not support the bill has been revised out of the official record.

$500,000 Fine Paid Texas by Oil Trust

GREENEVILLE, TEXAS, July 22.—A penalty of $500,00 was paid to-day to the State of Texas by the Magnolia Petroleum Company of Texas under a verdict by which H. C. Folger, Jr., and John D. Archbold submitted to a ruling that they release 21,596 shares of stock in the company to a trustee.

Instructions to pay the penalty were received by officers of the Magnolia Company from the offices of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Orators within and without the General Assembly, particularly those given to loquacity and frequency of effect, sometimes being more or less hard up for something to say upon the spur of the moment—whatever that is—now and then jump a-straddle of the Grand Old Legislature's grand old neck and dance a hornpipe thereupon!

Always the liviest tune to dance by concerns the Legislature's "do-nothing" inclination, and its proneness to move at a snail's pace. Particularly is this the case when the orator immediately on the job is "a-gin the government, anyway."

An attack upon the present Legislature that it is too slow may be justified. Maybe it is slow—slower than it ought to be. Maybe legislatures ought to do everything right off the reel, and debate the matter afterward, if time holds out. Maybe a lot of things—but the only way to judge one legislature as to its efficiency is by past legislatures; and in the matter of slowness, laziness, pokeasyness, or generel cussedness, the present Legislature is entitled to be judged, perhaps.

The following things are true, as the records will show: Never before within the service of any member of the present General Assembly has a general appropriations bill been reported to the House for action so early as on the twenty-sixth day of its sitting.

And yet, this Legislature, under the direction of the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, will take up that very bill in the whole House to-day—the twenty-sixth day of its sitting!

The general tax act will be ready for the House before Saturday night—at least ten days earlier than any general tax act has been reported within a decade or more.

The various committees have reported more than 100 bills adversely, and easily as many more favorably. This was made possible by reason of the fact that the committees of both the House and the Senate were appointed this year two days earlier than ever before in thirty years.

In one recent Legislature, the Senate had the general tax act exactly FOUR days—this year it will have some fifteen days before adjournment. It is a well-known parliamentary fact, too, that both these bills have the right of way over all other bills at all times.

It undoubtedly is true that any Legislature would be able to travel much faster than it does were it not for the fact that local bills require almost as elaborate handling as general bills, and a reform in this matter has been urged for years. But since that reform never has been effected, it hardly seems fair to charge the present Legislature with giving to these bills more than the time absolutely necessary to their passage.

And so, while it may be true that the present Legislature is no faster than it should be, it is just as well to remember that the Legislature machine is of an old model, and therefore much out of date, and can not run any faster than it can!

When the State takes the speed limit off its Legislature, it naturally will have to provide a machine capable of making at least a little bit better time than the speed limit, or nothing will happen by way of reform.

The present Legislature may not be a wonder of wonders, but it really is moving along FASTER than usual—and that is the honest truth of it!

Mr. Payton, of Worth, the handsomest man in the last House, and one of the handsomest men in any House, looked in on the General Assembly to-day to see if it was moving along to suit him.

Mr. Payton gave it as his opinion that the present House is all right, so far as he could see, albeit he neglected to bring his eyeglasses along, and wasn't committing himself finally.

"I enjoyed my brief Legislative career," said Mr. Payton, "and made many lasting friendships while it continued. I take great interest in the work of the present House, and believe it will enact some wholesome legislation. I believe it wants to do the right thing, at least. I have met many new members, and the average seeme to run rather high. In many ways, however, being a member of the Legislature is more or less a thankless job, and it often happens that the best and most sincere workers fail to get the credit they really are entitled to."

"Uncle Billy" Wilson, of Gwinette, another veteran of the last House, and the prize humorist therein, was talking it over with his former colleagues to-day.

"Uncle Billy" declines and refuses to get excited about anything, and always takes life as easy as he knows how. He does not look upon a Legislator's job as one removing him very far from the ranks of just ordinary folks, and therefore he never takes himself too seriously.

"I love all the boys, and in the main they are good boys," said "Uncle Billy." "If they make mistakes, they generally are mistakes of the head and not of the heart!"

Louis E. Wisdom, of Forsyth, who is altogether 22 years of age but not much more, notwithstanding the fact that he looks every day of 17, had trouble with a new doorkeeper in the House of Representatives the other day.

Wisdom didn't know there was a new doorkeeper on the job until, accompanied by two friends of the female persuasion, he approached the door during a session for admittance.

"Hey, you, kiddo!" stage-whispered the doorkeeper, "you can't get in here!"

"The h—um—deuce, I can't!" said Wisdom, in a loud and commanding tone of voice. "I'm a member of the House!"

"Run along, buddy, and let your pipe go out—you can't put that over me! If you had claimed to be a page, all right, I might have fallen for it, but a person must be at least twenty-one to get in here as a member!" replied the doorkeeper, as he pushed Wisdom gently back.

Then Wisdom quit arguing, and went around to another door with his lady friends, where he stood in with the doorkeeper, and everything was all right.

When the new doorkeeper found out what he had done, he was much chagrined and attempted to apologize to Wisdom, but Wisdom is a good little fellow and wouldn't stand for any apologies. He admitted that he hardly looked the part of a mature and experienced statesman, anyway, and said he could and did understand the situation.

If it just hadn't been for the ladies—!

General West Gets Gettysburg Medal

A silver medal bearing the inscription "1863-1913. Fiftieth Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg," the gift of Governor Tener of Pennsylvania, has been received by General A. J. West, the Georgia Gettysburg Commissioner.

Accompanying the beautiful gift was a letter from Governor Tener in which he expresses his sincere appreciation for the active interest of General West in the celebration.

The medal has the kneeling figures of two veterans, blue and gray, on one side and on the reverse side two hands tightly clasped.

LAGRANGE GREETS WEEKLY EDITORS

Largest Attendance in 27 Years at Annual Georgia Press Convention.

LAGRANGE, July 22.—With 75 more delegates attending than at any previous convention, the twenty-seventh annual session of the Georgia Weekly Press Association opened here this morning. The delegates number 250 and represent 150 papers.

The convention assembled in the Troup County courthouse. After a solo by Miss Ruth Oppenheim, of Atlanta, and the invocation by the Rev. E. B. Vaughn, pastor of the First Baptist Church, LaGrange, Mayor John M. Edmondson and President W. A. Reeves, of the LaGrange Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the visitors. W. S. Coleman, of The Cedartown Standard, responded. Mrs. John N. Holder read a paper prepared by her husband, editor of The Jackson Herald, who was unable to attend. The theme was "The Influence of the Georgia Press on the Government of the State."

At 11:50 o'clock the convention delegates left for West Point, where a big barbecue was tendered this afternoon, followed by a reception at the home of W. Trox Bankston, editor of The West Point News. They return to LaGrange this afternoon.

300 Pellagra Cases In Flooded Counties

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—The State Board of Health to-day issued a report declaring that more than 300 cases of pellagra have been discovered in Mississippi counties that were overflowed during the spring floods.

In Washington County 125 cases were reported.

MAYOR BALKS AT DICTOGRAPH CHECK

Refuses to Sign $19 Voucher for Use of Very Machine That Trapped Him.

Mayor Woodward again is refusing to sign checks.

From the Police Department has come a voucher for $19 to pay the expense of the very dictograph that entrapped Mayor Woodward, Colonel T. B. Felder and others in the Williams House No. 2. Chairman A. R. Colcord, of the Council Police Committee, hesitated at approving this voucher and Mayor Woodward scoffs at the idea of him signing the check.

Also, he explained, he is not inclined to throw away $5 on an option on an electric feature to the new crematory. He sent the resolution providing this back to Council without acting on it. The lower branch of Council passed it up again by a vote of 15 to 2.

Although Council easily overrode Mayor Woodward the thirty-third time on the tax office merger issue the bill must be passed by the Legislature to become effective. It will have to be attached as a rider to the other charter amendments and then submitted to a vote of the people along with the other amendments.

CHAINGANGS IN GEORGIA

Breaking Rocks, Breaking Men, and a Death in Camp

Last Thursday night a man slept chained to others.

Doubtless the drag of the shackle on his leg disturbed his rest.

In the cool of Friday morning he shuffled out of the convict camp.

Linked with clinking steel to others, he came through the woods to the rock quarry.

The guard unlocked the gang chain.

The man scrambled down into the pit.

Work started.

The sun mounted higher.

Its beams sought and found the laborers.

Men began to feel it as they toiled.

Twelve pounds is the weight of the ordinary quarry hammer.

Theirs weigh forty-nine pounds in this quarry.

One, buying them for the county, said:

"Strength is not required to crush stone with these. They come down of their own weight. THE ROCK BREAKS."

YES, AND SO DO MEN!

Forty-nine pounds to the hammer!

You could scarcely raise one.

Consider, then, what you do when you force the man to do that which you could not endure—

Lifting this hammer—crushing stone with it when the thermometer registers nearly one hundred degrees!

And doing this at the bottom of a funnel-shaped pit of stone into which the sun's rays pour and beat, enveloping in wave on wave of agonizing heat the suffering striped and shackled working men!

Friday each minute the heat grew worse.

The atmosphere quivered with it.

The quarry became a pit of torment.

From its depths, to his keeper, the man cried:

"I am sick."

The guard replied:

"You didn't say so this morning."

Later the man fell fainting at his work.

Stripe-clad, shackled men lifted him tenderly.

They carried him out.

Through the woods a jolting springless wagon bore the dying man to the convict camp, where he died.

The man had not been condemned to death.

He was only a misdemeanor convict.

The utmost punishment provided by your law for him was twelve months in the chaingang, six months in jail and a fine of one thousand dollars.

And you had no wish to kill him.

BUT THE MAN IS DEAD.

Across the ages rings the question of God:

"What mean you that you break my people to pieces, and grind the faces of the poor?"

Down the centuries comes the voice of Jesus, saying:

"Woe unto you, for you load men with burdens grievous to be borne and you yourself touch not the burden with one of your fingers."

Do not deny responsibility for the man's death.

Your laws—our laws—placed him in the convict camp.

Your servant, a public official, made him work the day he died.

He feared your lash—our lash.

God will require of you and of us his blood and the blood of others.

The Executive Committee of The Men and Religion Forward Movement

WANT AD RACE TO BEGIN ON THURSDAY

Contestants and Those Who Expect to Enter Must See Want Ad Man on Wednesday.

Well, we're ready to start. Are you?

The Want Ad Contest will begin Thursday morning. Long before noon the doorbells will begin to tinkle and housewives will be saying to contestants:

"Why, yes; I do want something. I need a better washerwoman. You can print an advertisement for one, and here's the money. Oh, there's something else. Perhaps a want ad will help me sell my old piano. You can put that in, too."

There's no limit to the number of things a want ad will do to make housekeeping easier, to fill a need. Here are just a few of them:

Find a cook or housegirl.

Sell an automobile, furniture, eggs, flowers.

Rent a room, furnished or unfurnished.

Find an apartment just like you want.

Get you boarders or find you a boarding house.

Sell your house or vacant lot, or find the kind of home you wish to rent or purchase.

Sell that fancy poultry to eager purchasers.

Find a lost handbag, a strayed family pet.

Locate missing persons.

Find a position if you're out of a job.

Get an Early Start.

But if you don't get an early start you'll be handicapped. No use in letting other folks get ahead of you. There are many contestants entered and ready to work, but not so many that your chances will be hurt. Atlanta is a big city, and there is room for everybody to have a chance to win.

If you already have entered, come to see the Want Ad Man to-morrow (Wednesday) sure. If you haven't entered yet, clip out the nomination blank in the big advertisement in to-day's issue of this paper, have it filled out, and bring it to the Want Ad Man early Wednesday. He will tell you everything you wish to know, put you under the direction of a skilled and experienced district manager, and start you in the race for that automobile.

Prizes Worth While.

Look over the prizes in the advertisement to-day. An automobile, a piano, a trip to California, motorcycles, bicycles, watches, diamonds—something worth trying for. And the contest will not cost you a cent. There's no gamble in it, no guesswork—nothing but the use of brains and energy.

You'll find the Want Ad Man at 403 Foote & Davies Building, Edgewood avenue and North Pryor street. You'll be mighty glad you met him!

Mother Fights for Custody of Children

AUGUSTA, July 22.—Mrs. Mary W. Zachry, wife of Julian J. Zachry, a well-known attorney and business man of this city and Harlem, Ga., has appealed from the decision of the Ordinary, who awarded the custody of the Zachry children to the father. The case will be heard before Judge Hammond, of the Superior Court.

Zachry and his wife were married here about four years ago, a few weeks after his first wife died. The second Mrs. Zachry was his stenographer. Several months ago the couple separated after a rather stormy married life. The wife took the two children. Zachry sued out writs of habeas corpus and obtained possession of them.

Woman in Charge Of 1,000 Convicts

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—Mrs. O. M. Spickard, a frail middle-aged woman, to-day is in charge of the Mississippi State penitentiary. She exercises control over more than 1,000 prisoners, including more than 100 murderers and burglars. Governor Brewer to-day said he would appoint Mrs. Spickard to a position on the Prison Board.

Mrs. Spickard became secretary of the board when Lawrence Yerger was convicted in the wholesale prison graft trials recently, and became head of the prison system when President C. C. Smith was convicted and removed.

Anyone Seen Nogi? His Pal Is Grieving

"Nogi" is gone and now, after a futile search throughout the city, his little master gives up his quest heartbroken. Nogi is a fox terrier and pal of a little boy over on the South Side Last Wednesday he disappeared down Whitehall street and has not been found since.

A reward of $10 has been offered by Jack Roberts, of the Guthman Steam Laundry, and L. P. Hoppe, of the Southern Flour and Grain Company, for his recovery.

ATLANTA BALKS AT NOSE VEIL; MUST SEE ALL OF PRETTY FACE

Miss Nancy Reed, first girl to wear the nose veil here.

She says it will not do for Atlanta beauties at all.

Fair Sponsor of Arabian Style Admits New Fad Is Doomed Here.

At last Dame Fashion seems to have overstepped the line in freakish wearing apparel for women, so far as Atlanta is concerned.

The Arabian nose veil, an importation now much in vogue in Newport and other Eastern centers of all that is fashionable, has met a sharp rebuff here.

The veil in use is drawn taut over the tip of the nose and covers the mouth and chin. One sees but the eyes of the wearer. Mrs. French Vanderbilt, Mrs. William Goadby and others are its sponsors in the East.

Miss Nancy Reed, a former Atlanta girl, now visiting Mrs. George Spier in Twelfth street, is among the first here to attempt the nose veil.

"It won't do for Atlanta girls," she declared, and her decision seems to have been sustained, especially by the men of the city, who enjoy seeing all of a pretty face.

FATHER SHIELDS GIRL ARRESTED WITH DOCTOR

Grief of Forgiveness Displayed When Effie McCalmon Meets Parent and Brother.

The grief of forgiveness was pathetically displayed in Chief of Police Beavers' office Tuesday morning when Effie McCalmon, the country girl from near Carrollton, arrested Monday with Dr. M. W. Lewis, a prominent physician of that town, in a raid on the Scoville Hotel, met her father and brother, and begged to be taken home.

The girl's pathetic plight was more than the irate father and brother could endure. Simultaneously they clasped her in their arms. Then she was taken by them in an automobile to the station. The trio departed at 11 o'clock for home.

J. M. McCalmon, father of the girl, a prominent planter, and his son Emory, ticket agent at Bowden Junction, both told Chief Beavers they would return when the physician's case comes up to prosecute Lewis to the full extent of the law. They also declared they would bring the girl back to Atlanta and let her tell her story to the court.

"This man has cast shame on my home which can never be forgotten," declared the father. "He has blighted my daughter's future. Restitution by punishment of the law is a poor substitute, but I will have it."

Lewis was released Monday night, after he had secured the $1,000 bond under which he was bound over by Judge Broyles during the afternoon. Immediately afterward he disappeared.

Lewis and the girl were registered at the hotel as man and wife.

Photographers of U. S. May Come to Atlanta Next Year

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 22.—With a dozen boosters putting forth the brand of effort that captured the big Shriners' convention, Atlanta's chances of getting the next gathering of the Photographers' Association of America, now in session here, are growing better every hour.

The Atlantans have opened an office in the convention hall and a display in the lobby of the Hotel Baltimore, where the delegates are entertained and provided with literature descriptive of the Gate City. There are about 800 delegates here now, with several hundred more coming.

Harry Goodhart, L. D. Hicks and Fred Houser, who head the Atlanta delegation, are confident that the Georgia city will secure the next convention.

Mr. Goodhart declared this morning that "there is nothing to it but Atlanta. I have talked to several hundred delegates and they all want to come to the 'New York of the South.'"

Mississippi Tries to Break Rail Merger

CLARKSDALE, MISS., July 22.—Suits are prepared for filing to-day against the Illinois Central and Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroads, demanding penalties of nearly $50,000,000 and a dissolution of an alleged unlawful merger.

Infractions of the State anti-trust laws, charged by Attorney General Ross A. Collins, were given as reasons for ousting the Illinois Central from the State, and taking the charter from the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley.

Electric Vote Device Planned for House

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The House Rules Committee to-day began an investigation of the feasibility of installing an electrical voting system in the House to avoid the long delays consequent upon the calling of the roll by the reading clerk.

Representative Walsh, of New Jersey, appeared before the committee to explain an electric system of voting he has proposed.

DIXIE IS DELUGED BY PROSPERITY, SAYS HARDY

Retailers' President Declares Business Is Better and Georgia Is Forging Into Lead.

"Dixie is bubbling over with prosperity."

That is the characteristic way in which J. W. S. Hardy, of Waycross, president of the Retail Merchants' Association, defined commercial conditions in the South when seen by The Georgian at the association's convention headquarters in the Hotel Ansley.

"But we can better the present condition and our merchants in all parts of Georgia have come to the realization that by individual effort and plugging in the right direction we can make Georgia the foremost State in the Union," declared Mr. Hardy.

"To this end the convention was called," said Mr. Hardy, "to meet in Atlanta while the Legislature is in session, so that merchants can be in close touch with their Representatives and exercise every influence in their power to get them to support and vote for the garnishment and fraudulent check bills.

"This is a business meeting of business men, and in no sense is it for the purpose of boosting Atlanta interests. Its only purpose is to work for the best interests of the merchants of Georgia.

"We are in an era of good business that is unrivaled. Competition is keen, but it is also true that competition is the life of trade and progress.

"From all parts of the State come encouraging assertions that this year has been a little better than last. Even a little is better than no increase at all. But I am inclined to believe that business this year is infinitely more than a little better than last in all lines."

General Harris to Inspect Second at St. Simons Friday

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 22.—The Second Georgia Regiment is making extensive preparations for the visit to camp of Brigadier General Walter A. Harris and staff on Friday, when a special dress parade will be held in his honor.

The big battle of the maneuvers was fought this morning, the men having to cut their way with bayonets through the matted underbrush of a swamp to get to the firing lines, but, according to the instructors, they did it like veterans. More "casualties" were caused by the barbed points of sandspurs than by the enemy.

Rain fell yesterday for the first time and the men were compelled to drill in ponchos. Forsyth defeated Columbus in a ball game, 14 to 4. To-day's officer of the day was Captain John T. Aycock, and the officer of the guard Lieutenant H. A. Dickens, both of Monroe.

The SOCIAL WORLD

Mrs. Rufus J. Woodstock, of Asheville, N. C., who has been tendered a series of parties as the guest of Miss Lillian Logan, was the honor guest at an informal bridge party Tuesday morning, given by Mrs. Robert K. Rambo.

Old-fashioned garden flowers, zinnias, crepe myrtle, and althea formed the decorations throughout Mrs. Rambo's home, and pretty fans were given for top score, for consolation and for the honor guest. A dainty luncheon was served on the card tables at the close of the game.

Mrs. Rambo wore a morning gown of pink linen. Invited to meet Mrs. Woodstock were Mrs. Charles Shelton, Mrs. Linton Baker, of Augusta; Mrs. Julian Prade, Mrs. Robert McCord, Mrs. Albert Herring, of Mississippi; Mrs. Robert Burgess, Mrs. John Charles Wheatley, Mrs. H. B. Odell, Mrs. George K. Selden, Mrs. Blair Armstrong and Miss Lillian Logan.

Mrs. Cutter Hostess.

Mrs. Harry Stotesbury Cutter gave an informal bridge party Tuesday afternoon in compliment to Miss Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, the guest of Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, and for Miss Fannie Neal Anderson, of Athens, who is with her cousin, Miss Margaret Ashford.

The house was tastefully decorated with nasturtiums and potted flowers. The prizes were a pearl bar pin for high score. To the honor guests were given books.

Mrs. Cutter wore pink charmeuse draped with crepe.

The party included Misses Willie Loyless, Grace Thorn, Elizabeth Parker, Helen Thorn, Ethel Tutwiler, Mrs. Victor R. Smith, Mrs. Edward Malone, Mrs. Berrien Moore, Mrs. Carter Colquitt Cole, Mrs. Wilson Runette, Mrs. Robert Hopkins, Mrs. Clarence Angier, Mrs. Howard Parker and Mrs. J. P. B. Allan.

Children's Party.

Mrs. Robert Foreman was hostess at a children's party Tuesday afternoon, when 24 little guests were entertained. Miss Betty Pou, of Columbus, the guest of Mrs. Dozier Pou, and Miss Louise Martin, of Augusta, the guest of Mrs. Albert Howell, were the guests of honor. The feature of the afternoon was the reading of a number of stories of adventure and of Indian legends by Mrs. Charles Goodman. Later refreshments were served. The decorations were of garden flowers.

Mrs. Ayer Hostess.

Mrs. C. K. Ayer entertained at an informal bridge party Saturday evening in compliment to her guest, Miss Ethel Tye Wright, of McDonough, and Mrs. Robert Barnwell, a bride.

The house was decorated with garden flowers. The prizes were won by Mrs. Laura Cawthorne and Mr. J. W. White.

Mrs. J. W. White entertained at tea Monday afternoon at the Piedmont Club for Mrs. Ayer's guests.

Dance at Crystal Palace.

The young men of the Tech Summer School will give a subscription dance Friday evening at the Crystal Palace, inviting a number of young women to be their guests.

Miss Walker Hostess.

Miss Eloise Walker gave a matinee party at the Forsyth Tuesday afternoon for Miss Clio Carmichael, of Jackson, who is visiting Miss Margaret Rushton at the home of her sister, Mrs. Clyde King, in Ponce DeLeon avenue.

The party included Misses Clio Carmichael, Margaret Rushton, Evelyn Ragland and Cullen Battle.

After the matinee the party had tea at Hotel Ansley.

For Miss Carmichael.

Miss Clio Carmichael, of Jackson, is being entertained as the guest of Miss Margaret Rushton.

Tuesday afternoon Miss Eloise Walker gave a box party in her honor. Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Clyde King will entertain at an afternoon tea for Miss Rushton and her guest.

Mrs. Graham Williams will give a bridge party Thursday morning at her home on Tenth street.

Miss Marian Fielder has invited a number of her friends to meet Miss Carmichael at a bridge party Friday morning, and in the afternoon Mrs. John Ray Pattillo will give a bridge party.

For Miss Julia Black.

Mrs. Eugene Black entertained 30 children Tuesday afternoon at her home on Peachtree road, in honor of her little daughter, Julia.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Forsyth Bill High Class.

First nighters at the Forsyth Monday evening were given a real thrill by the aquatic feats of John F. Conroy and his two diving girls. The act is exceptionally good and the scenery is striking.

The remainder of the bill is excellent. In Diero is the masterhand of the piano-accordion. From the classic music to ragtime the musician is a wonder. He was repeatedly recalled for encores. A trio of comedians that handed over some very funny stuff included Smith Cook and Marie Brandon. Lester is an entertaining ventriloquist. Another big drawing card, especially for the children, was Jack Auger, "Jack the Giant Killer." The BeAnos, a novelty gymnastic act, opened the bill. Shriner and Richards, in songs and dances, were good.

"Les Miserables" a Hit.

In the pictured dramatization of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," playing this week at the Grand Theater Atlanta is offered another of the mammoth film productions like "Quo Vadis."

"Les Miserables" had its Atlanta premiere Monday night. In coloring the picture is perfect; however, its action in a few spots lags a bit, as though the producer leaned too much to detail to bring forth realism. However, the play does not lack tenseness and thrills. Prospective auditors are advised to arrive before the first flash on the screen, as the presentation of the escape from the prison, in the first film, is, without doubt, the cream of all that is exciting in the play.

In the cast of characters are seen some of France's most noted actors. The stage setting is minute and lavish to the last detail. Manager Cordoza is to be congratulated upon his battle with the heat. The Grand in hot weather is like an oasis in the desert.

'OLD HOSS' JUDGE SAYS PONIES ARE GREAT

Pick of Mountain Herd Ordered to Make Out Prizes for Georgian Contestants.

Telegrams Monday ordered John G. Mobley, of Winnsboro, S. C., to ship the thirteen ponies necessary to complete the herd of 22 which The Georgian and American will give away after the close of its contest, July 31.

Within a few days, the special car bringing the Shetlands should arrive. According to the expert who went to Winnsboro and picked them out, they are a feast for the eyes.

Mr. Mobley has a plantation of 1,400 acres. Of this area, 450 acres of wood lot are used as a pony farm. Just now, he has 100 head of ponies, which have been roaming the woods and the rich pasture, and, these hot days, seeking the shady tangles.

The Georgian and American were offered their pick of the entire five-score ponies. Twenty negroes, mounted on mules, started at 8 o'clock in the morning to round them up. By 1 o'clock they had the 100 little fellows on the summit of a hill where Mr. Mobley is accustomed to give them salt. From this knoll they were driven to the pens, and the best fifteen were selected. All are sound, gentle, affectionate and well trained. They vary sufficiently in markings, colors and size to please all tastes. Perhaps the pick of the bunch is "Flash," who looks like a race horse, and is as fast as his name.

Every one of the ponies is worth well above $100, and with each goes a guarantee of good health and freedom from blemish.

If the boys and girls are enthusiastic about the ponies already in Atlanta, they will be wildly excited over the newcomers, it is predicted, for they are believed to be, if anything, a little better than those first purchased.

Pastors to Speak at Hearing on Bible Bill

The hearing on the bill requiring the reading of the Bible in the public schools will be resumed before the Senate Education Committee Tuesday afternoon. Following the hearing the committee probably will agree whether to report favorably or unfavorably to the Senate Wednesday.

Among the speakers will be leading ministers of Atlanta in addition to members of the committee.

IN THE HAUNTED CASTLE

SUDDENLY BOTH HEARD THE SOUND OF MUFFLED FOOTSTEPS, AS IF SOME ONE WERE RUNNING ON HEAVY CARPET, AND THEY KNEW THERE WAS NO CARPET IN ALL THE VAST STONE HALLS. BEFORE THEY COULD ATTEMPT TO LOCATE THE SOUND THERE CAME TWO THUDS, ONE LIGHT AND ONE HEAVY, AS IF OF A BLOW AND A FALL, AND THEN A LOW HEART CHILLING MOAN THAT SEEMED TO COME NOT FROM ONE OF ALL THE HALLS, BUT ALL OF THEM. THIS WAS IMMEDIATELY ANSWERED BY A MOAN THAT CAME UNMISTAKABLY FROM RUSTY. "I WANNA GO HOME! I WANNA GO HOME!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Moaning feebly, Rusty shook his gray head.

"I'se so scairt I don' remember nothin'."

"They're nothing but suits of armor. Stay on your pins and don't bump into me again. The next one of those rear-end collisions and I'm liable to let some moonlight into you. You've been treading on my heels every step I take and when I stop you bump into me."

"I'm powerful scairt I might lose you."

"A fine chance!" snorted his master. He swung the lantern about and peered into the corners of the apartment.

"Well, Rusty," he went on in his natural voice, "we've been through this old castle pretty thoroughly now from dungeon to tower, and not a sign of Duke or Prince or anyone else—unless they pound or carry a smoky lantern. It's a clew, Rusty; it's a clew. We'll stick right here till we find out where it leads. I'll swear the Duke never went to Madrid, but came right here from the inn. Get away from me, I tell you!"

A Little Cheer.

He struck a match and resumed his examination of the fireplace, holding the light well inside.

"There's a fine chance for a fire. The chimney's clear. Now then, but up that little table and start a fire. You won't feel half so scared when you've got a good blaze behind you."

By virtue of his great weight Rusty reduced the old table to firewood by the simple process of sitting on it. As he was building the fire, Jarvis suggested that he would scout around a bit.

"Don't you do no scoutin' outside of this here room!" ordered the old darky, straightening up. Jarvis laughed and told him to go on with the fire. He sat down on the stone floor and began removing his shoe with many groans.

"Now, what's the matter? What's wrong with your shoe?"

"'Tain't my shoe—it's my foot," grunted Rusty. "You know, when I was holdin' the hosses an' waitin' an' waitin' fer you to come out—dem guns went off and all dem hosses jumped right on me!"

"There were only two horses, Rusty," smiled the young man.

"I was countin' dey feet," grumbled the servant, as he bent over the fire once more. He had sufficiently recovered from his fright to be disgruntled and make pertinent addenda to his master's comments on the lay of the land.

"This way leads to the main gate," remarked Jarvis, thoughtfully, peering through the other door.

"That's where dat black thing followed me," grumbled Rusty. He appeared to locate every inch of the castle through its connection with some personal disaster.

The Death Trap.

"Well, there's been a black thing following me," retorted Jarvis, "treading on my heels every step I've taken. Hm! And that door goes to the armory.

"That's where I fell down dem slippery stairs."

Suddenly Jarvis stopped and stared intently into a far corner beyond the fireplace. There was a small door partly opened, as though some one had pulled it hastily behind him as he darted through.

"That's it!" he exclaimed, triumphantly, darting forward. "Where can that lead——"

His foot went down suddenly through the floor. He hurled himself forward and the floor seemed to rise and strike him violently in the chest. The next instant he rolled to one side and was on his feet.

"My God!" he muttered brokenly, the cold sweat bathing his face. "My God! That was a close one!"

"Lordy, Marse Warren—wha' dat?" cried Rusty, starting to his feet. Warren's lantern had been dashed against the wall and he stood in the uncertain firelight.

"Get back!" he ordered sharply. Light that other lantern."

Rusty cautiously approached with the lighted lantern. Warren took it in his left hand and held out his right.

"Take a good grip, Rusty. Can you hold me?"

"Yes, sah!" Rusty crouched back and set himself.

Jarvis cautiously stepped out with his left foot. A four-foot strip of the floor sank under the light weight and the other end of the trap, the end nearest the wall, rose. If he had been walking at an ordinary gait nothing could have saved him. The speed of his rush and his remarkable agility carried forward far enough for the weight of his upper body to strike the rising end of the trap and thus shut it again.

"God! I thought so!" he murmured as he stepped back after a timid peep into the black pit below. He wiped his face and his hand trembled slightly for the first time that night. "Water and a long drop! No wonder people disappear in this castle. Good Lord! What if her brother went down there! Rusty! Whatever happens, keep clear of this. If you step on this you'll never see Kentucky again for sure!"

Rusty opened his ample lips, but before he could speak a groan came from beyond the wall they were facing. It sounded nearer and more human than ever. But it trailed off into a sound like the winds among the empty echoing towers.

"It certainly sounded like a groan," muttered Jarvis, tip-toeing cautiously around the trap toward the little door. "Shut up, Rusty!"

The faithful but terrified servitor was giving vent to sounds more dreadful than those that issued from the walls.

"Marse Warren! look out!" he begged.

The Portrait.

"Listen!" He stood for a few moments in silence, peering in at a little flight of stone steps that led up through the wall. Then he turned back to the fireplace.

"I guess it's the wind. This place is getting on our nerves."

"This warn't no wind, Marse Warren," protested Rusty, solemnly. "Ah hope to die if dat warn't a sure-nuff groan. An' ah wants to tell you somethin' else." He turned and stared accusingly at a large portrait of some grandee of Charles V.'s time which hung beside the broad steps that mounted to the corridor of the armory. "Hab you ever been in church or somewhere an' all of a sudden a feelin' come over you that there was eyes starin' at the back o' your haid? You just knowed it?—until you couldn' stan' it no longer and just had to turn 'round and see who 't was?"

"Why, yes, Rusty," agreed Jarvis wonderingly. "I've had that happen. Why?"

"That's just the way I feel now—like dey was eyes lookin' at me. You see dat picture? Seems like dat feller was lookin' at me—like he'd step right out o' de frame; or dem two battleship boogies"—he pointed to the knights beside the staircase—"jump right down here!"

"It's been a good many hundred years since those boys jumped, Rusty," smiled his master. Sh-h! Listen!" There was the sound of swift footsteps again. Jarvis softly cocked his pistol. "Somebody running—coming this way!"

Again it ended in the two thuds, like a blow and fall. And all was still. Jarvis swore.

"I wanna go home," moaned the darky.

His master set his teeth. "What do you know about that?" He had walked swiftly to the little door in the wall and was peering in.

"I don't know nothin' about."

"I thought so!" exclaimed Jarvis and he whistled softly, as if in utter amazement. Rusty's curiosity again overcame his terror and he drew near. Besides, it was more comfortable in the shelter of his master's 45.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Rusty, this man with the smoky lantern has been up these stairs!"

"You ain't a-goin' up?" protested the old darky.

"I am not!" was the emphatic reply, "cause the Duke or some of his men are probably at the top of the stairs with a long gun—and I'm no book hero."

"Supposin' it am the Prince," suggested Rusty, with awe.

"Well, suppose it is the Prince. He might blow my head off because he doesn't know what I came for. And if it's some one else—they'll blow my head off because they do know."

Without warning the sound of the running feet reached them again, but now it seemed to come from every quarter of the surrounding area. Jarvis, with Rusty cowering at his elbow, backed out into the center of the room, the long blue barrel of his revolver making quick play in all directions.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

A Bachelor's Diary
He Is Mistaken for a Kidnapper

By MAX.

JULY 1.—Our days are so monotonous that if I were to attempt to set down in detail what happens, it would sound like a chapter from Genesis: And Arpasha begat Shelah, and Shelah begat Eber, and Eber begat Joktan, and Joktan begat Almodad, etc., etc., an endless chain of begats.

For I would relate in the same sing-song strain that a bath in the lake followed getting up and breakfast follows the bath, and a nap follows breakfast, and lunch follows the nap, and a walk in the woods follows the lunch, etc., etc., a monotony that is growing pleasing to me now that I have learned to find thrills of excitement in Mrs. Allen's daily report at breakfast that she found a rat in the trap. I do not recall a market report in six months previous that has excited me more.

Manette is growing brown and fat and sturdy, and with no one near to remind us that she has a delicate stomach, all such trouble has passed away, proving my contention that we keep our physical ailments alive by recognition of their existence. If Richards could see us eating our picnic lunches off a log in the woods, stopping occasionally to brush off an inquisitive ant or a ladybug that is lost from home, and regarding these little creatures of another world as friends, instead of germ-infested enemies, she would steal the child from me and bring suit in the court charging that I am not fit to be its guardian.

Her Future.

"I am convinced," I said gravely to Manette this afternoon, taking a chicken sandwich from her hands, for she is always the hostess at our picnics, "that a man-cared-for child is healthier than one that is cared for by a woman. She is neither nagged nor pampered so much. Now if Richards were here she would make you throw away that sandwich because there is an ant on it—brush it off, my dear—and she would worry you because there is a streak of dirt on your cheek and a rip in your dress. I don't. I just let you forget all those things and be happy. I never want you, my baby, to be so much of a woman that you can't enjoy the Lord's big outdoors because you have left your powder rag at home. You must rise above yourself, little one."

She looked at me gravely with those big blue eyes, and then, robbing her sandwich of the meat that she might temporarily rid the brown-eyed pup of the look of longing he had fastened on her, said, "When I get big, I won't be a woman at all. I'll just be your wife."

"How I wish you were old enough," I replied fervently.

That would be a glorious thing, Diary. To take a child and train her in the ways one desired, and then marry her when she is grown.

"You will marry some nice young man," I argued, "and go away and leave your Uncle Max. It is the way of nature, and I can't keep you always."

I suppose I unconsciously sighed, for in another moment she was on my lap, rubbing a greasy sandwich down the back of my neck, while she protested between hugs and crumby kisses that she never intended to leave me, unless, and it gave me a twinge to hear her say it, "Lisbeth sent for her."

I was holding her tight with one hand, and with the other was trying to make the brown-eyed pup leap over our heads for a piece of chicken when I heard the sound of approaching horses, and a girl's merry laugh.

There was an abrupt turn in the bridal path near us, and a minute later they appeared in view, all unconscious of three interested listeners, for the pup had also paused in his play to cock wise-looking ears their way.

"I don't," the girl was saying, "believe in the kind of love you talk about. It would make of woman a sort of domestic chattel, like a cook-stove or a table. The fundamental principles of liberty—here her attention was attracted to us by the pup's shrill bark—I think that term, "fundamental principles," made him fear a procession of women were coming—and she stopped abruptly, staring at us with eyes that were first astonished, and that changed to admiration when she saw Manette.

An Admirer.

"What a beautiful child," she said, swinging lightly from her horse, and coming across the grass toward us, her horse following, with his nose pressed lovingly against her shoulder.

"Whose is she," impatiently, "and what is she doing here in these wilds alone with a man like you?"

My disguise was plainly perfect. I hadn't shaved in three weeks, and wore that morning a suit of Allen's overalls, for we contemplated a jaunt across the lake in an improvised raft.

I laughed. I do not know when I was more amused.

"That," I replied, making no attempt to rise or remove my hat, "is not the affair of every wayfarer on the road."

She colored angrily. "I intend to make it my affair. Look at her shoes with holes in the toes, and the scratches on her poor little arms and legs. You poor baby," getting down on her knees, "has that man been abusing you?"

I do not think at first Manette comprehended what the girl meant, and when it dawned upon her, her indignation was fine to see.

"I am not a poor child," she cried. "I am a rich child; everyone says so. Nurse says I'll be worth millions some day; and I don't want them. I want only my Uncle Max!"

I think there flashed across her brain a recollection of the woman who kidnaped her, for in a frenzy she threw her arms around my neck and screamed: "Make her go 'way! Make her go 'way! I'm afraid; I'm afraid!"

I was amused no longer, for the child was plainly suffering. Rising to my feet, I lifted my hat and said very coldly:

"You are trespassing on private property. Please ride on."

"We will go," she answered, angrily, "but this doesn't end here. I will find out who this Uncle Max is the child wants, and take steps to restore her to her guardian. She plainly doesn't belong to a man like you."

He Laughs.

Then, though Manette still whimpered I threw back my head and laughed till the woods rang with it. I had a vision of what my friends and associates in the city would say if they knew some pert young suffragette was preparing to have me arrested for a tramp and abductor of small children. It even flashed across my mind that if those men afflicted with the kind of softening of the brain that fits them for getting out the Sunday papers knew of it, they would give it three pages, with pictures of all of us, including the pup and the sandwich Manette still held in her grimy fingers. They might even give a picture in magnified proportions of the ant that this little baby-heiress to millions had brushed off her bread.

I laughed so long that Manette stopped whimpering, and lifting her face from my shoulder said in tones that breathed defiance, "Go 'way, please. I want my Uncle Max."

The girl turned to her escort, who had jumped from his horse when I began to laugh, and said something I did not catch. Evidently his reply restrained her from tearing the child from my arms, for with a protesting air she suffered herself to be helped to her horse, and they rode away.

The last look I had of her was of a face crimson with indignation and anger. The last she had of me was of a man doubled up with laughter.

"Manette," I said gravely, taking my share of the lemon cake, "those briar scratches you got on your arms and legs yesterday are giving your Uncle Max a bad name."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET YOUR MOTHER DECIDE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young man with whom I have been keeping company for quite some time. We have broken off friedship for a while, and my mother strongly objects to his return. I love him. Can you tell me what is best to do? H. V. E.

Mother always knows best, particularly when the girl is very young, which I am judging is your case.

If he is worthy of you he will wait. Believe me, my dear, if he is the man set aside to be your mate he will not be easily discouraged.

THAT IS HIS PLACE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you kindly enlighten me as to whether it is proper to thank the gentlemen after returning form a show or a ball? BABY.

The good old-fashioned courtesy makes all the pleasure his. He owes you the delight he has had in your company.

LET YOUR MOTHER KNOW.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am sixteen and deeply in love with a man two years my senior. For six months he took me home from school, and after I was graduated he expressed his love for me. He has given me a ring. The only thing that makes me hesitate is that we are of a different religion. ESTELLE.

Your mother should know of your love affair at once., Not only because of the diifference in religion, but because of your extreme youth.

DUTY, MY DEAR.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been engaged to a young man two years. The man is 33 years old. We love each other very much. Owing to our aged mothers, we think it's impossible to get married, as he is the only support of his mother and I am the only child left at home to take care of my mother, who is 85. Between love and duty, which will we do? M. S.

Your mothers are so old that your time of waiting will be very short. I am sure if either of you failed in your duty you would live to regret it. Unless you can marry and take your mothers with you, which is not advisable, postpone your marriage till you can enter it feeling that your happiness is not purchased with another's woe.

LET THE MATTER END.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had the pleasure of meeting a young man at a public dance. He asked to see me home and I consented. He made an appointment with me that we both kept. When he left me he failed to set a definite time for a next meeting, saying he would try to visit a place where I frequented. Now, do you think that I should have anything to do with him in the form of writing, etc., or drop him, as I am positive that he never will visit this place?

ANXIOUS.

You are very sure he will not keep any appointments he makes, so why concern yourself about him? Let the acquaintance drop before it is more serious.

No Tunes Allowed.

Not long ago a certain brass band, which shall be nameless, was engaged to play at a local village feast. On the way there the conducter suggested that they should "have a tune," but the driver of the wagonette at once objected to the project.

"No toons while I drive," he remarked.

"But, why?" persisted the conductor. "Surely the horses wouldn't run away?"

"No," said the driver, "they wouldn't."

"Then why object?"

"Simply becos the poor beggars could not run away if they tried," was the grim retort. "Their running away days is over, an' so long as I drives you ain't a-going to take no mean advantage of 'em. That's why I seg no toons."

The conductor subsided, and there were "no toons" on that journey.

The Temper Curse

By DOROTHY DIX.

THE real problems of life are not the big problems, nor are its tragedies the great sorrows of existence. The conundrums that nobody can answer are offered by just little everyday complications, and the things that break our hearts, and wreck homes, are not great sins, or afflictions, but small, miserable, sordid worries and aggravations that blot out the sunshine and take all the joy out of life for us.

As an example of this I submit the case of one of my correspondents. She is a good, conscientious woman, married to a good man, and they have had a happy home. Recently, however, the woman's mother has died and she had to offer the shelter of her home to a young sister, a beautiful and talented girl of 20, who has the temper of a virago.

The girl has nowhere else to go, for although she is amply fitted by her abilities to support herself, she can keep no situation because of her uncontrolled temper and tongue. To have to support her is a burden on her sister, but the worst feature of it is that the girl has made a peaceful and happy home such a storm center that it is wrecking it, and the woman's husband is very naturally threatening to send the sister away.

Fears the Worst.

The poor wife and sister is between two fires. She fears the worst for her sister if the girl, young and beautiful and headstrong, is deprived of all guardianship and restraint, and even of shelter, and at the same time she feels the injustice of sacrificing her husband and her home to the girl's tantrums, and she asks what she had best do under the circumstances.

I side with the husband. I think that there is nothing else in the world in which the most of us show ourselves so cowardly as in the craven, meachin' way in which we give into people with tempers and let them ride roughshod over us. Before a redheaded temper and a venomous tongue we are all arrant cowards, and that is why the possessors of tempers don't try to control them.

Among my acquaintances there is a certain child who holds the world's championship for crying. She shrieks and shrieks until she maddens everybody about her. Not long ago, catching her for once in a smiling mood, I said, "Mabel, why do you cry so much?" She looked at me in round-eyed amazement and calmly replied, "Why, if I didn't cry, how would I get anything I want?"

That is the philosophy of the individuals with high tempers. They know that the balance of us are so terrified at the thought of their raging that we will give into them without an argument; that we will walk on eggs to try to keep from ruffling their sensibilities, and that we will put up with any injustice or imposition rather than go through a scene with them.

So They Rage.

Therefore they rage. It's the easiest way to get what they want, for the person without a temper is no more fitted to cope with the individual with a temper than an infant in arms is to engage in a prize fight with Jack Johnson.

Every one of us knows some great, big, strong, splendid man who is so afraid of his wife's temper that he lies to her about having to see some man downtown if he wants to stay out a few minutes longer than the curfew she rings on him, and who doesn't dare to even treat an old woman friend with common civility if he meets her when wife is along.

All of us know women who live in such terror of their husband's temper that they tremble at the very sound of his keys in the front door, and who spend their lives in falsifying household accounts, and trying to conceal everything that happens in the household that could possibly vex their violent spouses.

Ordinarily these men and women are not cowards. They have the courage to lead a charge in battle, or face death without a tremor. They even have the moral courage to endure their hell-on-earth of being married to a high tempered wife or husband, yet before that temper they become abject worms of the dust, without a fight in them.

So far as I know, no psychologist has ever attempted to explain the fear we have of the tempers of those with whom we must live. Perhaps the struggle for existence takes so much out of us that we have no strength left with which to wage a perpetual battle at home. Perhaps we have a sense of decency that the high tempered lack which keeps us from retaliating in kind. Perhaps no real lady or gentleman is fitted to deal with the woman or man who has not the finer instincts that consideration for other people and self-mastery give.

At any rate the fact remains that we all do stand in such shaking, quivering fear of the high tempered that we encourage them in giving full reign to their evil dispositions. This makes us to a degree accessory before the crime. We need more grit and backbone in dealing with them, and it's dollars to doughnuts that if the evil tempered knew that they would be chucked out of house and home unless they controlled themselves they would curb their passions.

Temper should be made the first cause for divorce.

If every woman was perfectly aware that she would have to be gentle and amiable in order to hold down her job, and have a husband to pay her bills for her instead of having to hustle to support herself, there would be no more shrewish women, nor men who had heart failure every time they thought of what their wives would say to them when they got home.

If every man knew that he would have to answer to a divorce summons and pay alimony if he didn't make himself pleasant and agreeable at home, we should have no more domestic bullies and tyrants who talk to their wives as they would not dare speak to any husky man who could knock them down.

And if all of our sisters, and our cousins, and our aunts, and our mothers-in-law, who come and live on us, and who keep us dodging their ways, and trying to keep from precipitating an avalanche of fury and abuse on our hearthstones, were perfectly sure that they would either have to be good-natured or get out, we should see such a sweetening up of dispositions as the world has never known.

For the person with the temper is never anything but a selfish bully. We could call his, or her bluff, if we had the nerve to do it.

Just Sampling It.

For a long time the pale-faced man regarded the sandwich on the counter before him suspiciously. At length he carefully lifted off the top slice of bread, took out a piece of ham, ate it, and replaced as before. In a few seconds he again removed the top piece, extracted another piece of meat this time, and replaced the top again; and again the performance was repeated until the ham had gone. A bystander tapped him on the shoulder.

"Excuse me," said the inquisitive one, "but why don't you eat up your sandwich, instead of picking at it in that fashion?"

"Well, you see," whispered back the other, glaring around suspiciously. "I can not very well eat it. It isn't my sandwich."

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE long winter and spring months devoted by Daysey Mayme Appleton to instructing spinsters in the care of infants, to fighting for the ballot for mothers, and to relegating to his place among the worms of the dust that monster called Man, had taken the starch out of her ambition and the curl out of her hair.

She realized that though it would fall with a crash fatal to its inhabitants, she must drop the world she was carrying on her shoulders.

She must go away from kin and friends, seeking some holy spot of solitude where she might renew the tagged impulses of her soul, and decide what degree of blonde would be most becoming to her for next season.

"I am going to spend the summer at Lake Skodunk," she announced one afternoon to her friends.

"Oh," replied seventeen of them, "how nice! We will go with you!"

Then immediately they began to seek for railroad pamphlets telling about the beauties of Lake Skodunk, to write for reservations at the hotel, and to pack their trunks.

Daysey Mayme is an easy mark among her friends. All women are easy marks among their friends. Or else they have no friends! There was only one thing to do: She must not offend her friends; she must give up Lake Skodunk.

She had found at the last moment, she said when seeing them on their train, that she could not go. She might join them later.

Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea looked good on the map. "I will go to Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea," she said, wearily, to a third cousin, "where my soul may commune alone with the sad sea waves."

The third cousin looked interested. She hurried away to tell the other kin.

That evening seven cousins, five uncles, eleven aunts and nine in-laws called Daysey Mayme to the telephone. "We think," each one cried, "that it would be fine to have a family reunion at Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea, and we are all going with you."

The next day Daysey Mayme Appleton was missing, and no one could learn her whereabouts. She had pulled down the blinds to give the impression that the house was abandoned for the summer and had locked herself in.

Every morning she dressed while balancing on one foot on a piano stool in a very small closet, to simulate the experience in the dressing car on a Pullman, and every night she slept on the pantry shelf.

"In this way," she said, putting a cinder in her eye, "I experience all the joys of travel and escape my dear relatives and friends."

MRS. MANGES ESCAPES OPERATION

How She Was Saved From Surgeon's Knife by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mogadore, Ohio.—"The first two years I was married I suffered so much from female troubles and bear-down pains that I could not stand on my feet long enough to do my work. The doctor said I would have to undergo an operation, but my husband wanted me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound first. I took three bottles and it made me well and strong, and I avoided a dreadful operation. I now have two fine, healthy children, and I can not say too much about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. Lee Manges, R. F. D. 10, Mogadore, Ohio.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A Charming Summer Gown Fully Described by Olivette

HERE is a little summer costume that may be truly called a "confection," though we generally prefer not to use that gastronomic term in the description of even the dreams of the sartorial realm.

White or shell pink is the foundation of heavy grade china or shantung silk. There is an eight-inch slit over the left ankle, and all about the hem tiny pink wild roses are set at equal intervals. The overskirt is of wide shadow lace, falling to the knees at the front and lengthening some eight inches under the caught-in drapery at the back. A garland of the roses peeks from under this, and another surmounts the wide girdle and rises to meet the square-cut vest of filmy white chiffon. Both waist and puff sleeves are of the lace, and another garland of the dear little wild roses nestles under the sleeve at the elbow.

The hat is a great round white Neapolitan, covered with frill after frill of white accordion plaited maline, with a monster pink rose crushing in all the filminess at the left.

Dainty white slippers and silk stockings, and a filmy parasol with a wide border of chiffon printed in great pink roses, complete an absolutely ideal summer costume.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

Walker had accompanied his wife on an excursion to the realms of bargains, and in the enormous building, with its many departments, had become separated from his better half.

For an hour at least he remained lounging impatiently at the junction of many ways, where lifts, stairs and passages met, and then, tired and angry, he approached an irreproachable shopwalker.

"Sir," he said to the frock-coated and suave attendant, in tones of righteous indignation, "I've lost my wife."

Back came the reply, with stunning force: "Third floor over the bridge for the mourning department!"

It was in a country village that the swain had proposed for the hand of the village beauty, and had been accepted.

He had bought the engagement ring and was hurrying to the home of his adored one. A friend stopped him to make inquiry concerning his haste.

"Hullo, there, Bob! Is there a fire?"

"Yes," replied Bob, with what breath he had left, "my heart's on fire and I'm going now to ring the village belle."

Peter Burrowes, a well-known member of the Irish bar, was on one occasion counsel for the prosecution at an important trial for murder. Burrowes had a severe cold and opened his speech with a box of lozenges in one hand and in the other a small pistol bullet by which the man had met his death. Between the pauses of his address he kept supplying himself with a lozenge. But at last, in the very middle of a high-falutin' period, he stopped. His legal chest heaved, his eyes seemed starting from his head, and in a voice tremulous with fright he exclaimed:

"Oh-h-h! Gentlemen, gentlemen, I've swallowed the bul-let!"

"Mr. Chairman," said the orator, who had already occupied the platform for twenty minutes, amid many interjections from the audience. "Mr. Chairman, may I appeal on a point of order? There is really so much resultory conversation going on in parts of the hall that it is impossible for me to hear a word I am saying."

Voice from the back of the hall: "Don't be downhearted. You're not missing much."

A Pledge of Spinisterhood

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM a young man of nineteen," writes X. Y. Z., "and in love with a girl of seventeen who has signed an old-maid pledge, about which she seems to be serious. I have been paying her attention for the past six months, and would like to know whether to continue."

Following is the pledge of spinsterhood which this wise old dame of seventeen has signed:

"We, the undersigned, vow in all good faith that we shall, for the convenience of ourselves and the good of the world, live as Old Maids.

"We, the said undersigned, do agree that we will work honestly and faithfully until, if our lives are spared, we have accumulated a sum requisite for purchasing and maintaining a small house in the suburbs, where the said undersigned shall reside.

"We shall have freedom to visit, entertain, etc., such of our friends as we desire. There is to be no restriction, except that we shall deport ourselves in all manner, and under all circumstances, as ladies.

"It is also agreed by the undersigned that when we reach the age of 40, with consent of the majority, we shall each adopt a child from the asylum.

"If any of this charmed and secret circle should commit the grievous error of marrying, the penalty will be expulsion from the aforesaid circle, and she MUST HAND HER FIANCE THIS PLEDGE BEFORE THE COMMITTEE, TO BE TORN UP BY THE SAID FIANCE."

No Sense of Humor.

The young have no sense of humor. It requires adversity, humiliation, disappointment and grief to make one philosophical, and philosophy is the parent of wit. If the young had a sense of humor, X. Y. Z. would carry this pledge about with him that he may have something to smile about when things go wrong, and the girl who has signed it would laugh herself to death.

What does it amount to? Less than the paper it is written on!

Imagine, if you can, a lot of kittens agreeing what they will do and be when they are old tabby cats!

Conceive, if you can, of the kind of a girl who will deny herself the frivolities of youth, the pretty ribbons and feathers and clothes, the theater, the dance, the love that is looking her way, that she may some day have a home in which she will enjoy the glorious privilege of shriveling up as an old maid!

No girl makes that pledge for herself, my dear young man. She looks at the other girls, and sees that they are plain, and not so attractive as herself. "They know they will be old maids," every girl says, "and are making their plans so that it will look as if they WANTED to be. Of course, I'll sign the pledge. It may please them and won't hurt ME!"

And every girl signs, each with the secret assurance that SHE will not be an old maid.

They agree to deny themselves, that they may purchase a home. This is the story of every good woman's life: A self-denial in the hope that some day she may own a home, but it is a self-denial that is a joy because it has its origin in LOVE. A woman loves a man and sentences herself to a lifetime of self-denial when she marries. She loves her children, and thereafter knows not what the word "SELF" means.

Wait Awhile.

She pinches and skimps and scrapes and makes over with "Love's old sweet song" ringing in her ears, and knows neither discouragement nor regret. But can anyone imagine that the same noble effort and sacrifice are possible when the goal is a home where a lot of spinsters may abide in about as much peace as so many tabby cats?

Believe me, my dear young man, your sweetheart would work harder to stay out of such a place than to enter it. Let me assure you that she would know neither peace of mind nor rest if she thought for a moment that a home with no one in it but WOMEN was to be her refuge.

If she thinks so now, it is because she is 17. When she is 27, she will be in a panic because her steps seem to be turning that way.

Encourage your sweetheart. Let her know that when she is safely within the walls of this retreat, you will drive by with your wife some day and perhaps name one of your babies for her.

It will prove a sure cure.

-:- The Amulets -:-

A Tragic Short Story Complete.

THE cattle dealer opened the door of the taproom of the roadside inn and ordered a liter of cider.

"You must be thirsty, Brunier, or you would not order a whole liter," said the innkeeper.

"You bet I am, but I can afford a thirst on a day like this, when I have four thousand francs in my pocket. Four nice, crisp brown bills, and almost half of it is clear profit."

"But are you not afraid to walk home alone with that much money in your pocket?"

"Afraid! With fists and arms like mine! Not a bit of it, and besides I wear two amulets guaranteed to guard you against any danger."

He opened his shirt and showed two greenish-looking copper medals hanging on a string on his broad breast.

"Look at these," he said, "this one is the holy Benoit's, the patron of all travelers, and the other St. Antoine's, the protector of the poor. These saints have never failed, and I feel as safe as if I were already at home, though it will be a dark night to-night."

The innkeeper laughed.

"Is it really possible," he asked, "that a sensible fellow like you, who gets the best of everybody in any deal, can really believe in two old copper medals?"

"Well, I do believe in them," said Brunier, "you have to believe in something; you surely do yourself."

"I don't believe in anything," said the innkeeper, and offered his customer a drink before he started.

He Starts.

"Well, I don't mind; I still feel a little dusty in my throat."

Half an hour later when the sun had set and darkness was setting in, Brunier started homeward. He carried his hat in his hand and the evening wind played with his heavy dark curls, cooling his hot head. The innkeeper stood looking after him with a frown on his face and his lips pressed tightly together. Then he called his sons.

"Did you see that big fellow?" he asked. "That is Brunier, the cattle dealer, going home from market."

The two boys looked like retrievers scenting the game.

"You understand what I mean," said the father. "And if you two are not fools you will cut across the fields to the crossroads near the forester's house. You will get there at least a half hour ahead of Brunier. In two hours you ought to be back here with 4,000 francs in your pockets."

The brothers did not waste any time. The younger armed himself with a heavy crowbar and the older with a hunting knife.

"Do you think we ought to kill him?" asked the younger.

The innkeeper was silent for a moment, then he nodded.

* * *

How long Brunier had been lying there he did not know. He felt sore all over and felt the blood trickling from his forehead. His coat was torn, the pockets rifled, his heart was beating hard against his ribs, and his arms were so stiff that he could scarcely move them.

After many attempts he succeeded in getting on his feet, and when he had bathed his face in a spring close by he felt much better and began to think of what he ought to do. He was not strong enough to reach home so he decided to return to the inn.

Blood was still flowing from the gaping wound, but he walked ahead without minding. It was quite clear to him who had played the dirty trick on him. It must be some cattle driver or woodchopper. But, thank God, he was still alive and had his money yet. He pulled forth his amulets and kissed them fervently, thanking the saints who had so wonderfully preserved his life.

* * *

"So you expect me to believe you did not find any money, you scoundrels," roared the innkeeper to his sons.

"No. And still we searched everywhere, in the pockets, coat, vest, shirt and stockings."

"Then you are bigger fools than I thought you were," the father shouted.

Suddenly there was a knock at the window. The door was opened, and a ghastly silence followed the loud quarrel when the bloodstained Brunier entered. The two sons turned pale as ghosts and beads of cold perspiration stood on their foreheads. The innkeeper stood motionless in the middle of the floor staring at his guest.

Brunier dropped into a chair and gasped: "Give me a glass of brandy, and I shall be all right. Somebody tried to kill me, attacking me from behind, but they did not succeed. I am still alive and have my money yet. Unfortunately I did not get a chance to see who they were."

The three men breathed easier. He had not recognized them, so the matter was not serious.

"Well," said Brunier to the inn keeper, "perhaps you will believe in my amulets now."

The Hiding Place.

He did not notice the innkeeper's vicious scowl.

"But where did you hide your money, Brunier?" he asked in a trembling voice.

"Inside the lining of my hat."

Brunier then asked for a room and said he wanted to sleep.

"I'll give you my own bed," said the innkeeper, and conducted him to a room above the taproom. Brunier undressed and went to bed, but could not sleep. His wound was very painful, so he decided to go down and get some oil for a dressing. In the darkness he felt his way and was about to open the door of the taproom when he heard somebody mention his name. He listened, and what he heard made him shiver. He had to sit down on the step not to fall. They were planning to kill him yet.

He sneaked back to his room. Flight was out of the question, but he would sell his life dearly. He had no weapon, not even his cane, which he had left below, but in a cupboard he found a half-filled siphon of seltzer, a dreadful weapon in the hand of a determined man.

He posted himself behind the door and waited. A few moments later he heard sneaking steps on the creaking stairs. It was the innkeeper. He stopped a moment on the top step and then opened the door. As he was approaching the bed the siphon came down on his head and he dropped without a sound.

"You have got what you deserved," said Brunier. Then he picked up his hat and ran toward the village, while the two sons were busy digging a grave for his body in the garden.

It was almost daylight when he reached the village and told what had happened. An hour later the house was surrounded by gendarmes. They found the two boys still digging in the garden.

In the room above the innkeeper was found. He confessed his crime before he died.

Some time later Brunier had two gold cases made for the amulets which had twice saved his life.

Professional Rivalry.

Everything in the street was dim and quiet, for the thoroughfare was in a highly respectable neighborhood, and the hour was 2 a. m. In fact, save for a stray, wandering cat, and a constable, now rounding a corner in the far distance, there were no signs of life or animation anywhere.

William Sikes stepped out from the shadow of a friedly tree, glanced furtively around him, and then assisted Tom Crooke, his bosom friend and partner, to alight from the drawing room window of No. 63.

"Well, old pal, what [illegible]" he whispered.

"No luck at all," [illegible] Tom. "The bloke what likes there [illegible] lawyer."

William looked apprehensive.

"Then 'ow much 'ave you lost?" he asked.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

They Would Get Along Somehow

WHEN the boss sent for Jennie to come to his private office he told her the old story about it being the dull season and that he would have to let her go at the end of the week, and when she reminded him that he had always kept her before during the dull season he told her that he had noticed a decided lack of interest in her work compared to the way she used to work, and, besides, that he had heard stories about her being out with men at night, etc.

So Jennie was sure that her former girl friend had kept her word about getting even with Jennie for—as she thought—stealing her fellow away from her.

Coming out of the office, she wanted to cry, but held in so as not to give the girl the satisfaction of seeing her. As it was, she thought she noticed a flicker of a satisfied smile on the girl's face.

What now of paying the weekly instalments on her clothes—and they were the only ones she had—and what of the money that was so badly needed at home? When Jennie reached home, her friend, the boarding house keeper, was surprised to see her so early, and asked her what was the matter, and when Jennie told she had been "let out" at the office, the good woman, instead of deriding Jennie for losing her position, tried to sympathize with her and took her head on her breast, saying they would get along SOMEHOW until Jennie could get another job. But in her heart she didn't see how they could.

Jennie went up to her room and, flinging herself on the bed, had a good cry. When she quieted down and thought it all over she remembered the fellow she had been out with and his offer to furnish up a flat for her. She shrank at the mere thought of it, but wondered if it wouldn't be the EASIEST WAY at that.

.:. The Head Waitress .:.

By HANK.

"WHAT'S this I hear about you and Marie having a date?" asked the Head Waitress of the Steady Customer in the Cafe L'Enfant.

"Nothing to it," he replied. "Where did you get it?"

"From Mr. Flakes, the manager," said the Head Waitress, "and he told me he had it straight, too. He said that Marie asked for an hour off so she could get all dolled up to go out with you. Of course, it ain't none of my business, and——"

"Cut it out," interrupted the Steady Customer. "Mr. Flakes is kidding you, or Marie is kidding him. Not that I wouldn't dearly love to take both you and Marie out any time, but I'm getting too old to go gallivanting around with two such beauteous dames."

"I guess Marie was kidding," said the Head Waitress. "All them cashiers is great kidders, especially the blondes. You see, every guy that goes up to the desk hands out something foolish while he's paying his check, and Marie has to take their money with one hand and wave to them with the other or they'd be broken-hearted. I don't see much nourishment in it myself, but all those poor boobs act as if one smile from the cashier had taken ten years off their age, and they go out simpering like a lot of love-sick swines."

"Swains, I suppose you mean," corrected the Steady Customer.

"Have it your own way," said the Head Waitress, "you literary guys is great sticklers for correct pronouncements, ain't you? Well, I'm glad to hear you ain't fallen for no blonde because I've taken an interest in you and I'd hate to see you going nutty over a pair of big eyes and a golden dome. Not that Marie ain't a nice girl, and one of the nicest I ever seen, but she shouldn't be wasting her time with any of you newspaper guys."

"What's the matter with us?" asked the Steady Customer. "I'm surprised to hear you talk that way, Louise."

"Are you?" she said. "Well, long ago in the dim, distant past, I showered my young and innocent affections on one of you literary blokes, and for a time I was in the seventh heaven of happiness. He used to write me poems, too, real love ones. I remember one that went something like this:

"Louise, Louise, you little tease,
I'm really mad about you;
You say you truly love me, dear,
I'd hate to ever doubt you;
Some day, we'll married be, and then
Our lives we'll link together
And travel down the broad highway
No matter what the weather.'

"Pretty good," said the Steady Customer.

"Oh, yes, I raved about it," said the Head Waitress, "until I found out that he was traveling down the broad highway with about nine others."

"But that's no reason why you should be down on all literary lights," exclaimed the Steady Customer.

"A child once stung, never goes back to the beehive, as Kipling says," replied Louise, "and believe me, Kipling was right."

Nil Desperandum.

Percy Farkington arose and brushed the dust from his knees. Then, drawing himself up to his full height, he gazed resentfully upon the form of Miss Muriel Muggins, who nonchalantly fanned herself the while.

"Very well, Miss Muggins," came in bitter tones from Percy. "Oh, very well! You have spurned me, it is true! Indeed, you have spurned me twice! But, though despair eats my heart, I shall not die! I mean to go into the busy world. I will fight! I will win! My name shall become known and my riches shall become envied—"

"Pardon me for interrupting you, Mr. Farkington," interjected Miss Muggins, "but when you have accomplished all that you may try me again."

Couldn't Understand It.

Local "Terrier:" "Well, uncle, how do I look as a soldier?"

Farmer Giles: "Foine, my boy! But blessed if Oi can think 'ow yer git them twisted trousers on!"

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

PITCHER PRICE SENT HOME BY MANAGER SMITH

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN, July 22.—Two things happened to Gilbert Price yesterday in this town. The Turtles got to him in the second inning of the ball game and hammered him fiercely to the bench. Then after the game, Manager Smith told the pitcher to pack his duds and get aboard a train for Atlanta.

The reason for the move is not known, but it must be a pretty sound one, or Billy Smith never would have dispensed with the services of one of his regular slabmen with two tough series left to play after the Crackers are done with the Turtles.

* * *

JOE CONZELMAN went in after the game was hopelesly lost, as it turned out, and showed his usual class against the Turtles, stopping the scoring handily. He held them so close that had it not been for the air-tight work of Rube Kissinger, who was having one of his good days, the Smithies might have overcome the handicap and won out even at that stage.

But Kissinger was mighty good. At that, the boys were hitting the ball right on the nose, only luck would direct it straight at some Memphis fielder. That is all in the breaks, however, and some time, when the breaks are our way, the other pitcher is going to pay for all of it.

The Turtles are going fine just now and are playing the kind of scrappy baseball that earns a fair share of the breaks.

* * *

WALLY SMITH still is in the grasp of one of the worst hitting slumps he ever has had, and we are missing his long wallops greatly. When he starts hitting again—and he is bound to do that—he is going to help the club out a lot.

Dent and Dunn are scheduled to work in the game to-day.

BAN WILL NOT RECOGNIZE COMPLAINT OF F. CHANCE

CHICAGO, July 22.—No official action will be taken by the American League in connection with Frank Chance's complaint charging the Chicago Americans with misrepresenting the physical condition of Zeider and the playing ability of Borton, for whom Chance traded Hal Chase, Ban Johnson so announced yesterday.

"It will be impossible to take action compensating New York for alleged loss," said Johnson, "for the reason that Chance wanted Zeider more than any other man. He had his choice of at least six Chicago players and picked Zeider and Borton."

CRACKED THUMB WILL KEEP WOOD OUT SEVERAL WEEKS

BOSTON, July 22.—Joe Wood, star pitcher of the Boston Americans, will be out of the game for several weeks. Examination of his injured right thumb under the X-ray to-day showed that there was a crack in the end of the big bone, and the indications are now that a piece of the bone has been chipped off.

Unusual care is being taken in the treatment of the injury to guard against stiffness in the joint, which would put an end to Wood's career.

MADE 103 CONSECUTIVE BULL'S-EYES AT 300 YARDS

WAKEFIELD, MASS., July 22.—All records for consecutive bull's-eyes at 800 yards were broken here in the ninth annual meeting of the New England Military Riflemen's Association when Captain Stuart W. Wise, of the Bay State team, made 103 perfect shots.

The previous record for consecutive bull's-eyes at 800 yards was made by J. W. Hessian, of New York, at Seagirt last year.

Atlanta Wins Leifield Argument

Herrmann and Murphy Disagree

By O. B. Keeler.

COMES now the august Augustus Herrmann, of the Supreme Court of baseball, and hands down an opinion in the Leifield controversy decidedly favorable to our Major Frank E. Callaway. By the same token, the same opinion may be construed as somewhat of a reproof to our amiable little friend C. Webb Murphy, of the Cubs.

The idea is dual. It is granted (1) that if Mr. Lefty Leifield doesn't choose to play ball for Atlanta, Atlanta doesn't have to argue the question with Mr. Leifield, and (2) that if Mr. Leifield isn't going to play ball for Atlanta, Atlanta doesn't have to pay Mr. Murphy for Mr. Leifield.

Which does look fair enough.

And, anyway, that's the view the Hon. Herrmann takes of the case in a letter to Mr. Murphy, a copy of which was received by Major Callaway yesterday.

Incidentally, the Hon. Herrmann's opinion is of considerable weight in balancing the little problems of baseball.

* * *

HERE is a chronological sketch of the incidents:

Rather less than two weeks ago, Mr. Murphy and Major Callaway were dickering about Leifield, who (Mr. Murphy fancied) would be just the cog to round out a pennant racing machine in this town.

Mr. Murphy also fancied Mr. Leifield's value as a cog would be about $3,500.

Major Callaway revised that estimate downward somewhat and made the Cub owner an offer, conditional upon Leifield's willingness to play with Atlanta at a stipulated salary.

There was the rub.

Mr. Murphy accepted the offer, "with all conditions," and wired that he had ordered Leifield to report. Then he added a message that an explanatory letter was on the way.

The explanatory letter explained that Mr. Leifield was balking; had balked, in fact, all the way to St. Louis, where he lived and where he proposed to remain.

In fine, it appeared that if Mr. Leifield was to play in the Southern League, that institution would have to be moved over to St. Louis.

Mr. Murphy suggested that Major Callaway write to the Missouri Balkan and try to reason with him.

Major Callaway suggested that he had other things to do.

Further, he suggested that the deal was entirely off.

That suggestion extracted from Mr. Murphy a flat-footed declaration that the deal couldn't be called off in that manner. He countered with a promise to tell the National Commission on Major Callaway.

The Major promptly replied that the deal already was off, and therefore not subject to further calling. If Mr. Murphy cared to consult the commission, he had Major Callaway's full permission—even his earnest request—to do so.

It seems Mr. Murphy did.

And it also seems (from the Hon. Herrmann's letter) that he did not get very far with it.

* * *

THAT "optional agreement" thing is all very fine, in its way. But it does have a certain effect on the lucrative sales Southern League clubs have been accustomed to count on for star players developed during the season.

There is the crack battery of Prough and Mayer, of the Barons. The pitcher is slated for sale, and should yield a good price. But the receiving end was placed on an optional agreement by the White Sox, and it is pretty well assured that Callahan will yank him in when the yanking season opens.

Of the Crackers, Conzelman and Long are the property of big league clubs.

In the matter of outright sales, the Lookouts probably will get the big slice of the circuit in disposing of Coveleskie and Street.

* * *

DON'T blame Cholly Frank for gravitating swiftly toward cynicism, pessimism, fatalism, and any other isms that convey the idea of bursting bubbles and lost illusions.

Here's just a sample of the wretched Dutchman's luck this year.

Cholly swapped Snedecor to Montgomery for Kutina and Bagby, and when he made the Billiken management go through with the deal, it was generally regarded as a regular David Harum coup.

But Kutina refused to report, and now Bagby is out of the game with a broken wrist, while Snedecor is playing great ball for the Billies.

Don't blame Cholly, then.

WOOD, HUNTER AND PHELPS LOW IN WESTERN TOURNEY

FLOSSMOOR CLUB, CHICAGO, July 22.—Three local players tied at 18 holes in the eliminating round of the fourteenth annual championship of the Western Golf Association this morning.

Warren K. Wood, of Homewood; Paul Hunter, of Midlothian, and Mason Phelps, another Midlothian player, were the players who led the 134 starters this morning. Warren Wood, as well as Paul Hunter, made the first nine in 37 and the last nine in 40, while Phelps negotiated the first nine holes in 39 strokes and the last nine in 38.

Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, the present title holder, had the next best score, with a 78. He took 40 strokes for the first nine holes and 38 for the last half.

OMAHA RELEASES ARBOGAST.

OMAHA, NEBR., July 22.—President W. R. Rourke, of the Omaha Western League club, has announced the release of Charles Arbogast, who has been manager of the Omaha team for the last two seasons. Rourke will manage the team himself. Arbogast goes to the Los Angeles team of the Pacific Coast League.

And (added to that) there comes an application for season tickets to the big show from five Americans now living in Chile, who plan to spend their vacation as spectators at the world's series, provided they are assured of seats.

* * *

There appears to be some little doubt in Chattanooga as to whether the Lookouts are merely sleeping, or really have passed on. Our guess is that Kid Elberfield still is kicking at any rate.

* * *

It remained for Charley Schmidt to revive the ancient and at one time highly honorable custom of inspiring a hand-out of hard and soft money by taging the pill at an opportune juncture. There happened to be two on bases in the second game of the Birmingham-Mobile double-header Saturday, and Gregory made the mistake of walking Robertson to get at Charles. Result: four runs.

Somebody is compiling a blue book on temperamental ball players who distress their respective managers by outbursts of operatic and erratic behavior Here are some nominees: Rube Marquard and Art Shafer of the Giants; Earl More and Sherwood Magee, of the Phillies, and T. R. Cobb, who alone is sufficient for H. Jenings to handle. But, say—what about peaceful Heinie Zimmerman?

Jawn M. McGraw—the "M" standing for Manager and not Muggsy, as you doubtless were figuring—has entered upon his twelfth consecutive year as boss of the New York Giants. He has won four penants in that period, standing in a tie with Mack, Chance and Clarke in that respect. Muggsy bids fair to top the Peerless Leader and the Pirates' leader by copping a fifth flag this season. But Mr. McGillicuddy will keep step. Oh, yes!

TORONTO GETS ALMEIDA; NASHVILLE WANTED HIM

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—Almeida, the Cuban player who has been with the Cincinnati National League club for some time, has been released to the Toronto team of the International League.

THE FURTHER WE GO INTO it the more the "ethics" of organized baseball resemble the code of the police graft ring. Mr. Comiskey says of the recent goldbricking of the New York club in the Chase deal that "they ought to take their medicine gracefully." In other words, no matter what is handed to you, don't squeal, for the good of the game.

News of the Ring Game

Spider Britt, the local bantamweight, is ready to don the padded mitts again. Britt is particularly anxious to get on with either Charlie Lee or Kid Young. Spider says he never felt better in his life than he does at the present time and is positive he can defeat either of the above mentioned boys.

Bob McAllister has finally decided to take a crack at the twenty-round game. The Western middleweight has agreed to take on Ed Petroskey before Jim Coffroth's club at Frisco some time next month.

Jake Abel has departed for his home in Chattanooga. Before he left Jake stated that Charlie White was without a doubt the heaviest puncher he has ever met. Yes, several other boys hold the same opinion as Abel. For reference apply to Joe Thomas.

* * *

Although Charlie Lee was given the verdict over Kid Young on a foul last week, there are many of the opinion that Young can take the measure of the tall featherweight if he would only get into condition. Young has promised to train as he never has before if given another chance at his conqueror.

Danny Morgan, the talkative manager, is still keeping his press agent busy trying to force Willie Ritchie into a match. Britton is one boxer who is entitled to a chance at the title.

Carl Morris, the Sapulpa heavyweight, is to battle Al Benedict, of Hoboken, N. J., in a 15-round encounter at Joplin, Mo., Friday night.

Lest we forget, Meyer Pries wishes us to announce that he is still alive. Meyer is yearning for a return engagement with Spider Britt. Pries is certainly one game youngster.

"ZEIDER SICK, IS BETTER THAN CHASE."—CHANCE

CLEVELAND, July 22.—Frank Chance, manager of the Yankees, in speaking of the Zeider-Chase deal, slips the following knock to Chase.

"We're perfectly satisfied with this deal. I wouldn't give Zeider when right for three Chases. I think he's a better man than Chase at his best. And Zeider in a hospital is of more value to the New York club than Hal Chase would be to-day.

"There's no chance in the world for us to ask that the trade by which we gave Chase for Zeider and Borton be canceled. We don't want the deal canceled, but we are asking that the Chicago club be required to pay the salary of Zeider and to pay his doctor's bills until such time as he is able to play."

Big Marathon Grind On To-night

Ten Riders in Sensational Race

MOTORCYCLE fans in Atlanta are to be given a real treat at the Motordrome to-night. The best card of the season is to be put on, and some thrilling races are bound to be the result.

The big Marathon race is easily the feature. The sight of ten riders, all being on the track at the same time, each trying his hardest to get into the lead, should be a scene well worth watching. The riders are to cover 26 miles 385 yards.

As the leaders in a long race have a great advantage, there is bound to be a hot scramble throughout the long grind. The riders out in front invariably cover the track so as to keep their opponents from getting ahead. Mixups of some sort are usually the result, and if some spills are not recorded it will surely be a big surprise.

Tex Richards and Jock McNeil, the favorites, have their machines in the best of shape, and are out to set a record. They have been practicing daily, and wise ones are looking for these two to fight it out to a finish. However, both these speed demons may be beaten out by a dark horse. Morty Graves has his machine in good working order, and it would not surprise many to see him win out.

Big Cash Prize to Winner.

A cash prize of $500 is to go to the winner. This is enough to make any of them take some daring chances to cop the big event. Each rider will have a pit in front of the paddock, where he can change a tire or wheel in a very few minutes and continue on his journey.

The Motordrome Sweepstakes should also afford some excellent racing. The riders will be trying out their machines for the big event, and some fast racing should be witnessed.

New Sweaters for Riders.

To-night each rider will have a new sweater, a different colored one for each. This is after the plan used on the metropolitan racing tracks, so that each mount and his jockey is distinguishable no matter how far away from the spectators.

Following are the colors that will be worn by the motor demons to-night:

No. 1, Morty Graves, black; No. 2, Harry Schwartz, green; No. 3, Billy Shields, orange; No. 4, George Lockner, black with red stripes; No. 5, Tex Richards, bright red; No. 6, Freddie Luther, maroon; No. 7, George Renel, red with white stripe; No. 8, Jock McNeil, white; No. 9, Henry Lewis, light blue; No. 10, Harry Glenn, dark red.

Here is the complete program:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves; time, 38 4-5 seconds.

MOTORDROME SWEEPSTAKES.

One mile to qualify for two-mile final. Two to qualify in each heat, and three in fastest heat.

First Heat—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Second Heat—No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Harry Glenn vs. Harry Schwartz. (Special match race). Two miles, best two out of three heats.

Final heat of Motordrome Sweepstakes—Two miles.

Second heat of special match race—Glenn vs. Schwartz.

Third heat of special match race, if necessary.

Big Marathon Race—26 miles 385 yards. Ten riders to compete. Each rider will have to ride 105 times around the track.

INTERSTATE BALL LEAGUE GOES TO SMASH AGAIN

ERIE, PA., July 22.—The reorganized Interstate League season came to an unexpected ending here, with the Erie team a second pennant-winner, finishing the abbreviated schedule with a percentage of 1.000. The four-club circuit, composed of Youngstown, Akron, Wheeling and Erie, proved a losing proposition.

LOOKOUTS NEED GOOD HITTER TO PULL THROUGH

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 22. That the immediate addition of material strength is absolutely necessary not only to keep the Lookouts in the race, but moreover to make them a first-division club, is being gradually conceded locally.

The showing of the Lookouts in the week just passed, and, in fact, during the long home stay which closed with the Gulls, gave conclusive proof that the club does not possess the strength and stamina not only to rise in the percentage ladder, but even to hold its present position.

Realizing the general weakness of the club for the final spurt, Elberfeld has secured Dee Walsh from the St. Louis Browns, but the acquisition of the league's fielding sensation is not going to help the club to any material extent, as offensive strength is what is needed. Walsh can not be expected to hit over .250, although he will surpass Williams in fielding.

Alberfeld and Elston, who represent about 50 per cent of the club's offensive strength, can not be depended upon to any degree of certainty, because of their injuries. Elston has a bad leg, which has worried him for three seasons, and the member forces him to lay out so long that his batting eye is continually off form. The beaning of Elberfeld will undoubtedly affect him to some extent throughout the entire season.

The Lookouts must get another good hitter to pull through.

It is being gradually conceded here that Atlanta and Birmingham, although there is considerable prejudice against both clubs, are the two teams which are to be the ultimate grapplers for the rag. They seem to possess the greatest strength, and are not being forced to spurt now as are Montgomery and Mobile.

LANGFORD-MILLER GO OFF; NEGRO MAY BE BARRED

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Sam Langford has been stamped an undesirable in this city, so far as ring engagements are concerned. The board of supervisors have notified Promoter J. T. Mitchell, of the National A. C., who planned to stage a four-round bout between Charlie Miller and Langford here Friday, that the colored heavyweight would not be permitted to enter the ring.

This action was taken under a ruling of the Police Commission, in charge of boxing contests, that fighters whose names appear on the professional "list" can not take part in the "amateur" four-round bouts. Langford's name appears on the Police Commission's "professional list." It was not made clear whether Sam might box in longer contests, though it is taken he has been barred from all bouts.

YALE TEAM TO GET BUSY.

SIASCONSETT, MASS., July 22.—Arrangements have been completed by Cautain Ketcham, of the Yale football team for the early training of the linemen. Twenty-five men will begin preliminary practice at the Siasconsett Cottage Club here about September 1.

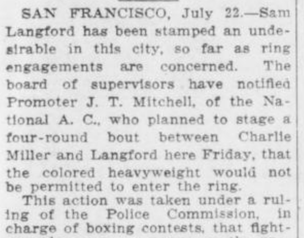
Look Out For Poison Ivy



Strolling through the woods or clearing brush, picnickers, hunters, fishermen—look out for poison ivy. And in the meantime keep your blood pure by using S. S. S. If your skin is rough with eczema, pimples or any other eruption, S. S. S. stimulates the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to dry up and heal all sore spots.

S. S. S. will do this positively. It dominates the principle of osmosis, stimulates the cells of the skin to select their own nutriment from the blood, made pure and healing by the wonderful medicinal ingredients of this famous blood purifier. It is a safe remedy, as it contains no minerals, and yet its action is a marvel.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting any one to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 186 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

J. M'ALEER TELLS HOW JAKE STAHL QUIT BOSTONS

CLEVELAND, July 22.—James McAleer, president of the Boston Americans, refused to discuss the statement of Ban Johnson given out in New York, in which the league leader severely criticised Jimmy for his action in releasing Jake Stahl.

"There is nothing to say on the Stahl matter," said McAleer.

"The change in the club was precipitated by Stahl himself.

"'Are you figuring on making a change in the managership of the team,' he asked me in Chicago.

"'Not this season,' I replied.

"'At the end of the year?' he asked.

"'It is possible there may be a change then,' I replied.

"'Well, in that case,' said Stahl, 'I might as well get through now.'

"'Do you mean that you wish to resign?' I asked.

"'Pay me to the end of the season and I'm through,' was the answer.

"So I gave him the money he would have drawn had he gone all the way through to his release."

McAleer stated that Carrigan will continue to manage the Red Sox the remainder of this season.

"Whether or not he will manage the team in 1914 depends entirely upon himself," said the club president. McAleer said there was absolutely no truth in the story that Fielder Jones had been offered the management of the club.

SEC. FARRELL ISSUES NEW RULING ON OPTIONAL MEN

AUBURN, N. Y., July 22.—Chairman Farrell, of the National Board of Arbitration governing minor baseball, to-day gave out the following orders relative to the sale and trading of players among major and minor leagues:

"All optional agreements must be exercised on or before August 15.

"The sale or the release of players within twenty days of the commencement of the major league drafting period or within twenty days of the close of the season of the club disposing of the player is prohibited.

"The sale of a player's release by one national association to another shall be null and void against the selection by draft of the player by a major league club from the selling club, unless he be in the actual service of the purchasing club for twenty days before the opening of the drafting season for major league clubs."

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

RUBAIYAT OF FRANK CHANCE.

Some spend their Kale for Golden Bricks, and Some
Buy Goods of Green to show the Folks back Hum,
While others purchase Athletes from the Sox
And wake to find said Athletes on the Bum.

The guileless Yokel bites, and having bit,
Discovers he is Stung and throws a Fit.
He throws a Dozen Fits and even more,
But all they Hand him is the Frozen Mitt.

A Book of Baseball lurks beneath my Brow;
I know the Why, the Wherefore and the How,
And yet those Gold Brick Merchants make me feel
Like some poor Yokel underneath the Bough.

Quoth a tale from Boston: "Johnny Evers was in bad humor to-day." When Johnny Evers is discovered in good humor it will be time to get out an extra.

One lesson to be learned from the Stahl case is that solid ivory is not confined entirely to the playing end of the game.

The double play is one of the most thrilling features of baseball, but there is nothing particularly thrilling about the double cross.

It is true that there is no gambling at Mineral Springs. Neither is he a gambler who plies his trade with three shells and an elusive little pea.

Is as flimsy as air,
And the men have such curious eyes!"

Lives of managers remind us
We are heroes while we shine,
But departing, feel behind us
Footprints planted on our spine.

IDOLS.

In days of old,
When foes grew bold
And slammed the ball about,
The crowd would rise
And rend the skies
Till Walsh came strolling out.

No more they rise
To rend the skies
When Edward makes his bow.
They pass him by
With frigid eye
And yell for Russell now.

The idols rear,
The lowbrows cheer,
And then the downfall comes.
The gents who play
Like stars to-day
To-morrow may be bums.

SPEAKING OF CHASE.

Who stung Frank Chance?
"I," said J. Cal.
"I copped his Hal—
I stung Frank Chance."

Who saw him stung?
"I," said Frank Farrell.
"I lost a barrel—
I saw him stung."

Who'll fix it up?
"I," said Big Bam;
"If any one can,
I'll fix it up."

There was no deception used in the Chase trade. Each was trying to trim the other and naturally one of them lost.

Carl Morris announces that he is heavyweight champion of the South, but we have not heard the South boasting about it.

Speaking in the vernacular of the game, it might be said that Artic Hofman hit into a double cross.

THE B. B. ATHLETE.

A contract, when his eye grows dim,
Is but a worthless scrawl to him,
And it is nothing more,
Alas, 'tis nothing more!

Earl Moore refuses to join the Cardinals, the inference being that he prefers to remain with a big league team.

Reading the newspapers, one is led to believe that as pugilists those Cards are great little ball players.

One is glad to learn from Ban Johnson that the gents who control baseball are actuated by a spirit of philanthropy. But it would be hard to convince Artie Hofman or Mordecai Brown of said fact.

HOME AGAIN.

Beneath a spreading tropic tree
The foreign wrestler sits.
And frequently a smile of glee
Across his visage flits.
A proud and happy man is he
With money in his mitts.

And as he counts his pile of dough
He looks across the sea,
And sings: "When Autumn breezes blow
I must return to thee,
America, where boneheads grow—
Sweet land of ivory!"

PLAY CAREFULLY FIRST SHOTS, IS EVANS' ADVICE

By Chick Evans.

TO PLAY golf well, one must keep everlastingly at it. This is a rather hard thing to do, for a golfer may play regularly for a certain length of time, and then not see a club for a week, or a month. This is particularly true of the business man who finds it hard to get out to play on regular days. The lack of regular practice adds to the difficulty and uncertainty of the first few shots of one's game. Golf is at all times the most uncertain of games; perhaps in this uncertainty lies its fascination.

Early Shots Are Important.

Even the expert can not judge what scores or strokes the day's play or the next round holds for him, but the first few shots in a round of golf, especially the first tee shots, are apt to be indicative of the day's play. The first drive is usually played to a gallery, either of spectators or waiting players, and for that reason I have formulated a few rules which I endeavor to use when I play a new course, or hit my first balls after an absence from the game.

Judgment of distance does not mean so much to me at the start as the desire to hit the ball fairly and squarely in the right manner. If one takes great care in the hitting of the first few shots, he will find the path around the course much smoother than if he is careless and misses the first few. A player should learn to hit a ball fairly and squarely, so that the muscles will work in rhythmical assistance. I have frequently gone along teeing and heeling my shots and then at last struck a square blow, and at once felt my muscles respond to the clean impact.

Player Should Study Shots.

I am a firm believer in the habit of hitting a few practice shots before starting to play, and my chief rule is: Keep your eye on the ball and see that your clubhead traverses the imaginary line to the hole.

Judge John Barton Payne once said to me:

"Every shot should be made as if one were making his will."

That is not putting it too strong.

COTTON DROPS AS LONGS LIQUIDATE

New Crops Heavily Sold on Propitious Weather and Absence of Support.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The cotton market opened fairly active to-day, and first prices were 1 to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The steadiness was attributed mainly to firm cables. The fact that dry weather still prevailed over the Central and Western belt also led to supporting orders in the new crop positions. After the call the ring was inclined to sell on reports of further rains in Texas, which relieved the intense heat of the past several days. In many localities the rainfall was heavy. As sentiment is against the market, the selling became rather general, resulting in a rapid decline of 2 to 6 points from the initial level. New crops were the heaviest pressed options. October lost 6 points, while December declined 5 points.

During the late forenoon active buying by the larger spot interests gave the market a steady tone, resulting in prices recovering. Trading was light and the market ruled dull but steady.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.20; August, 12.06; October, 11.54; January, 11.41.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.34; August, 11.97; October, 11.58; January, 11.57.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, July 22.—This market was due to open unchanged on old crop positions, ½ point lower on October and 1½ points higher on January, but opened quiet but steady, generally 1 point higher. At 12:15 p. m. the market was steady, at a net advance of 2½ to 3 points. Later the market declined ½ point from 12:15 p. m.

Spot cotton in good demand at unchanged prices; middling 6.72d; sales, 10,000 bales, including 8,700 American bales; imports 15,000, of which 1,000 were American bales.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net gain of 2½ to 3½ points from the closing quotations of Monday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 23.—The weather map presents very fvorable conditions; cooler over the entire belt, with a splendid rainfall in the Eastern States, particularly in Georgia, South Carolina and parts of Alabama. Indications are for increasing cloudiness, with prospects of showers in the Central and Western States, while in the Atlantics after to-day the tendency will be for clearing weather.

Liverpool was 1 to 2 points higher, but failed to advance; spots were unchanged; sales, 10,000 bales.

Private advices from Paris, Texas, report good rains in that section. Ballinger, Texas, also reported rain, and at Ardmore, Okla., over one inch July 20.

This market opened lower on the favorable weather map, but there was no pressure to sell, owing to anticipation of a bullish weekly weather report at 11 a. m., and a disposition to advance the market reflected by New York quotations.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, July 22. — Mean temperature ranged from one to six degrees above normal, except on the Texas coast, where there was a deficiency of from one to three degrees. The greatest excess in mean temperature occurred over extreme Southeastern Tennessee and Central Georgia.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 76 to 86 degrees over the Eastern, from 82 to 84 over Central and from 82 to 86 degrees over the Western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 76 degrees occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 86 at Fort Smith, Ark., Fort Worth, Texas, Thomasville, Macon and Augusta, Ga.

Precipitation occurred generally over the Eastern portion of the cotton growing States, over Southern Louisiana, along the coast of Texas and in the Northern and Northeastern portions of Texas, Southern Oklahoma and in a few localities in Arkansas. Elsewhere, there was no rain during the week. The percipitation was unevenly distributed and generally light, the heaviest amounts being reported from the Carolinas. More than two inches occurred in parts of Louisiana, Georgia, Florida and the Carolinas.

The greatest weekly amount, 4.76 inches, occurred at Newbern, N. C.

COTTON GOSSIP

Trading was light and there was no feature to the opening, except some buying on firm cables. The ring sold early, and on the decline Mitchell and Gwathmey became buyers. Mitchell purchased January freely, while Riordan bought December. The market was steady, but sentiment was against the advance.

* * *

The market during the past several days has been almost featureless. There has been some selling on reported rains in Texas, but a few buying orders start the market on a upward scale. However, should rain come over the Western belt it is believed the market will be sold to a lower level. On the other hand, if the rains should not materialize, a higher market is looked for. Sentiment at the moment is very much mixed.

* * *

In reply to inquiries for opinions most traders are replying that values depend on the weather and legislative developments at Washington.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma—generally clear."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, July 22.—Hayward & Clark: "The map shows splendid weather, part cloudy to fair in the Central and Western States. Cloudy in Alabama and the Atlantics, raining now in Georgia, some showers in Texas. Indications are for increasing cloudiness, showers in Western and Central belt, tendency toward clearing in Atlantics.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "In the face of lower temperatures, a spreading rain area and a more rapidly increasing early movement than last year, yesterday's cotton market reflected a character of steadiness that surprised both factions. In the adjustment of parities in the New Orleans ring made a more bullish showing than did New York, but in any event, the contract markets reflected a will of their own, which did not harmonize with the talent's interpretation of the things, crop and trade wise.

Over in Texas active ginning operations are now beginning to be reported. Thus far nine new bales have been definitely acounted for. On July 29 last year only twelve new bales had been reported. Much talk has been heard of boll-weevil in Mississippi, but the fact that the farmers in the fertile and highly productive delta country have had very little to say on this subject is significant.

"The Central and Atlantic States have been enjoying just as favorable weather as could be expected, even though a short spell of very high temperature has been reported by some sections. Thus, all in all, the crop seems to be progressing toward a larger out-turn than that of 1912-13 is likely to prove. On the other hand, steamship men estimate that freight room out of the cotton ports thus far engaged to January 1914 does not exceed half a million bales. Of course, this need not mean that only half a million bales have been sold for forward delivery to Europe, but it at least sugests the probability that foreign consumers are awaiting the outcome of the legislative situation at Washington, in hope that prohibitive legislation will shift market control from America to Europe.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Showers will continue to-night in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States and local thundershowers are probable in the upper lake and western lower lake region. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi river fair weather will prevail to-night and Wednesday.

Forecast.

Georgia—Local showers to-night or Wednesday.

Virginia — Fair to-night, slightly warmer in the southwest portion. Wednesday fair.

North and South Carolina, Florida and Alabama—Local showers to-night or Wednesday.

Mississippi—Fair in north, local showers in South portions to-night and Wednesday.

Tennessee and Kentucky—Fair to-night and Wednesday; warmer to-night

Louisiana—Fair in north and west showers in southeast portion to-night or Wednesday.

Texas—Fair to-night and Wednesday.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The October delivery was the center of attraction in the cotton seed oil market to-day. Demand from shorts and refiners, induced by the scarcity of crude offerings, served to force that month up 22 points. Old crop oil was in demand. There was very little doing in the late positions.

NEW YORK COFFEE MARKET.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Underlying sentiment was still rather bullish and it was rumored that this morning's decline in the price of coffee was only natural after the recent rally of a cent a pound, while moreover developments in the spot position have been of a character to encourage holders.

CROP PROSPECTS ADVANCE STOCKS

Large Interests Absorb Issues on All Recessions, Giving Market Brighter Appearance.

BY CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The strong tone which characterized the opening of the stock market to-day was not well maintained, and before the end of the fifteen minutes, sharp recessions were in order. Union Pacific lost its advance of 5-8 and a reaction of a point was recorded in Canadian Pacific.

The traders were disapointed at the action of the market in failing to follow the strong tone in London.

There was no change in Amalgamated Copper, American Can and Reading Steel was off ⅛, while the other changes were about equally divided between gains and losses.

Although trading was slow in London, the tone was strong, with the American shares the leading feature. The curb market opened easier.

After the first few minutes, business was quieter than at any time for over a week past. New Haven was about the most important factor, gaining 2⅞ to 102½. Practically all of the early gains were lost and the tone remained dull. Southern Pacific and Steel dropped ⅜. Canadian Pacific declined ½ to 219 and Reading lost ¼. Call money loaning at 2½ per cent.

There was little feature in the afternoon markets, business being smaler and fluctuations confined within narrow limits. Republic Iron common continued strong, selling 3 points net higher for the day. Canadian Pacific held most of its early advance.

Republic Steel Co. Makes Good Report

NEW YORK, July 22.—The report of the Republic Iron and Steel Company for the six months ended June 30 last shows net earnings applicable to dividends of $1,972,421. Finished and semi-finished unfilled tonnage increased 49,967 tons.

Net assets June 30 were $85,470,663, an increase of $2,403,156 over the same date in 1912.

STOCK GOSSIP

The Financial Bureau says: "Information channels expect to see a continued improvement in the stock market. There is, however, sufficient uncertainty in the situation to warrant reasonable caution, except where investment purchases are made. Would not reach for stocks, but would buy on moderate setbacks. Cotton is bought conservatively on reactions. Wheat and corn are considered cheap, but are offered on advances for trading profits."

* * *

It looks as if this advance has only started. Would increase holdings on any recession in stocks like Union Pacific, Reading, Copper issues and Steel common.—G. D. Potter.

The Bankers Trust Company certificates of deposit for the St. Louis and San Francisco general lien 5 per cent bonds have been listed on the Stock Exchange. It is understood the total amount deposited under the agreement with Speyer & Co. in New York and in Europe is more than $25,000,000. No call has yet been made for the deposit of the French bonds amounting to $23,000,000. Of the remaining balance, a clear majority has been deposited under the Speyer bondholders' agreement.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "The wheat market is regarded as largely a merchandising proposition. It was noticed that some of the leading bears who sold early were buying at the close. Traders who were short of corn and long of oats were closing their spreads yesterday. One line of 250,000 bushels of corn was bought in and the oats sold. There is a lot of this business opening. There are also a lot of shorts in September corn who are long in December corn who have not started to cover."

* * *

Aberdeen, S. Dak., wires: "Commencing in western Clark County running through Spink and southern Brown Counties, extending west to the river, covering over 500,000 acres, 90 per cent total failure. East and north from Aberdeen about 10 per cent abandoned."

* * *

Bradley, S. Dak., wires: "Every field of velvet and blue stem wheat in this section has the little brown specks on the main stem of the wheat, some spots in three fields, the leaves of the wheat entirely dead from it. There is no damage yet, but this is unmistakably the first symptom of black rust. Red rust is very bad over the three States, and it is no short step from red rust to black rust."

* * *

B. W. Snow wires from Omaha, July 21: "The corn crop in Nebraska, south of the Platte and west of Lincoln, already is hurt badly and in a critical position. Portion of the Republican Valley needs rain and the crop is holding out, but fully one-fourth of the State is over the danger line and losing ground fast. From Hastings to Holdredge and south to St. Cloud fields are largely fired. I have seen places to-day where hot winds last week killed the leaves on trees. From Hastings to Crete the corn is showing white, and now is coming to tassel at four feet. East of Lincoln there is small damage, but some white heads are showing. The hopeful possibility lies in the fact that the crop was not in tassel during last week's blistering weather, but many tassels now are coming white. The section of the State I covered is in no worse shape than Northern Kansas."

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "Wheat—We look for a steady market to-day and extend to think prices will gradually harden.

"Corn—We can see nothing but higher prices.

"Oats—In our opinion the market is in a strong position, with a comparatively limited long interest and more new buying apparent.

"Provisions—The strength in corn is helping prices, and while there is more or less realizing, new buying appears to be on the increase."

Kansas City says: "The corn and wheat region bulletin shows no rain. Maximum temperatures yesterday 85 to 98 degrees. Minneapolis says rainfall at Campbell, Minn., .70; Crookston, .24; Grafton, N. Dak., .15; Grand Forks, .44; Jamestown, .20; Winnipeg cloudy, 55; Duluth cloudy, 58; Glenwood cloudy, 60; hard rain this morning; Bismarck clear, 61; Harvey cloudy, 60; light shower last night."

Advices from the largest corn counties in Kansas, which normally produce 55,000,000 bushels: Three reports from Atchison County show loss of 30 per cent; two from Hrabor show loss of 60 per cent; two from Red Cloud show loss of 75 per cent; two from Dickinson show loss of 100 per cent; Jewell County shows loss of 50 per cent; Lyon County shows loss of 50 per cent; Kingman loss of 95 per cent; Sedgwick, 75 per cent; Marshall, 55 per cent; Butler, 95 per cent; Mitchell, 75 per cent; Washington, 80 per cent, and Reno, 80 per cent.

* * *

Lyle wires Chapin from Norton, Kans.: "The important corn counties of Kansas, along the Nebraska line, east of Belliville, crop in normal promise, with light exceptions. West of Belleville there is some damage that may be 25 per cent in some fields. Most of the fields are not yet hurt, not much in tassel. Five per cent generally applied will cover all apparent damage to date."

* * *

Iowa weather and crop bulletin says: "First four days of week excessively hot. Daily maximum temperatures 100 to 104 degrees over Southern counties on one or more days, and as rainfall was inappreciable over the larger prt of the State, crops beginning to feel the effect of the dry hot weather. Late oats are already damaged to some extent by heat and lack of moisture. In some localities corn is beginning to curl during the day. Corn on good soil holding up well and making rapid growth."

200 METAL WORKERS TO MEET IN ATLANTA

The annual convention of the International Alliance of Sheet Metal Workers will be held at the Piedmont Hotel during the week of August 4.

In a letter received Tuesday morning by the management of the hotel, John E. Gray, general secretary, states that there will be about 200 delegates in attendance. A meeting of the twelve members of the Executive Board will be held the week prior to the convention.

CHICAGO, July 22.—There was an enormous business in cash wheat to-day, the total transactions here amounting to 50,000 bushels, all of which was for export. The seaboard reported fifty boat loads or 40,000 bushels taken by exporters, and in addition to this vessel room was engaged for twenty loads for 9august shipment, with the rate of freight favorable to the shipper.

Prices for wheat closed ¼ to ⅝ cent lower for the day; corn was off ½ to ⅝ and oats were ⅜ to ½ cent lower. Cash sales of corn were 190,000 bushels and of oats 170,000 bushels.

Hog products were lower on selling by those wanting profits.

A message from one of the crop experts now in the Northwest, says that the black rust scare is at an end and that wheat is ripening rapidly and that the harvesting of the same will soon be on.

LONGEST TUNNEL

THE longest tunnel in the world is the Simplon, which is twelve and one-half miles long. It took over eight years to complete, at a cost of nearly $20,000,000. The tunnel gives France and Switzerland direct communication with Milan.

Many people are still under the impression that the St. Gothard tunnel is the longest, but, as a matter of fact, the Simplon tunnel is one-fourth more in length than the St. Gothard, and nearly twice the length of the Mont Cenis.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Viaduct Is Wanted For Spring Street

Old Agitation To Be Renewed. Brown Building Changes—Home for Druid Hills.

Things are shaping up in such a way, say well-informed real estate men, that remarkable developments may be expected shortly on the west side of the city. A good deal has been said of late about railroad operations, the proposed Bleckley plaza, which will extend to Forsyth street, and of proposed manufactories along railroad rights of way. Now comes the announcement that the Spring street viaduct project has been revived.

A well-known citizen is telling his friends that he will make the race for council with the Spring street viaduct as one of his platform planks.

A survey of the ground necessary for this improvement was made by Captain R. M. Clayton, Chief of Construction, and the idea is for the south end of the bride to strike Madison avenue.

There has been a growing tendency to bring the Terminal Station nearer the center of the city and nearer the Union Station, and advocates of the Spring street viaduct anticipate that such an improvement will contribute largely to this effect. The Bleckley Plaza would also serve this end.

The Spring street bridge would be several hundred feet long and the idea would be to make it uniform in height with the other viaducts. The Forsyth street bridge is now highest, with the Broad and Whitehall structures about on a line.

Brown Building Alterations.

The block of buildings of the Joseph E. Brown Company, on the north side of Wall street, opposite the Union Depot, is undergoing repairs to cost about $500, the metal cornices having been condemned by Building Inspector Hays. The old cornices will be replaced with brick and cement.

To Build in Druid Hills.

Charles T. Hopkins, the well-known attorney, will soon sell his home at 403 North Boulevard, it was learned Tuesday, and will erect a handsome home in Druid Hills. The Hopkins home is one of the oldest in the neighborhood, and is located on a lot 150 by 160 feet. It is at the corner of Angier avenue.

Loan Money at 7 Per Cent.

There is no lack of loan money at 7 per cent on all kinds of Atlanta property, according to S. B. McKinney, of the loan department of the Edwin P. Ansley Real Estate Agency.

"Real estate is the best security for money," declared Mr. McKinney, "and I would loan on any kind of Atlanta property that was worth anything. We are getting money regularly from several States of the Union, and this looks like a good sign to me. Frequently the loan agents don't recommend loans on anything except central and semi-central property, but I consider the suburban property around Atlanta splendid security."

To Fix Price for Floors.

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company are meeting Tuesday afternoon to fix a price on four floors of the chamber home at the southeast corner of North Pryor street and Auburn avenue, a request for such a price having come from the committee looking for a site for the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association exhibit building. Real estate men are watching the outcome with interest, inasmuch as the building will be a distinct addition to whatever district it adorns.

Application for Dormitory.

An application was filed Tuesday with Building Inspector Hays for a permit to build a three-story dormitory for the Marist College on the east side of Ivy street, near Peachtree, at a cost of $40,000. The Mackle-Crawford Construction Company have the contract.

Plans for Exhibit Building.

Among the propositions for a site for the permanent exhibit building of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association is one by L. O. Turner, the well-known real estate man, who would locate this structure on the west side of South Pryor street, 95 feet south of East Mitchell street. The lot is 105 by 185 feet, and a client of Mr. Turner's would sell it for $80,000, on terms acceptable to the Chamber of Commerce.

J. R. Smith's proposition was to erect a $100,000 building at the northwest corner of Bartow and Walton streets on a lot fronting 100 feet on Walton and 95 feet on Bartow. Mr. Smith and associates would lease this property ten years at $18,000 a year, payable $1,500 monthly, with an option to purchase at the end of a year for $185,000. A loan of about $75,000 would have to be assumed and five annual notes of $17,000 would be given at 6 per cent, $25,000 to be cash.

East Lake Sales.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. report the sale of three building lots in the subdivision of the East Lake Drive, Land and Improvement Company for an aggregate of about $2,100. These are in block 2 and just off Lakeview drive. Several new homes are going up in this subdivision.

Mims Parcel Brings $10,937.

W. N. Gary has bought from the estate of Sue Harper Mims, through the L. C. Green Realty Company, a 60 by 145 foot lot on Peachtree Circle, in Ansley Park, for $10,937. This is known as lot 2 of block 13.

Resume Healey Work.

Work was again taken up Tuesday on the Healey Building, following a ten-day strike, and prospects point to satisfactory progress from now on. The Healey lost 60 days at the start because her giant cranes failed to arrive, and thus fell far behind the Hurt Building and the Winecoff Hotel. The latter are due to be completed October 1, but the Healey Building will not be ready for tenants until after January 1, 1914.

Millions of Americans Are Saving---Millions of Americans Need to Borrow---Farmers Especially

Isn't It Possible for the Government to Put Those That Are SAVING In Touch With Those That Need to BORROW. Must the Blood-Sucker Always Play His Game of Usury Between Them?

(Copyright, 1913.)

In this country millions of industrious, careful human beings, anxious to provide for the future, are willing to save—and it is practically impossible for them to get a decent rate of interest on their savings and NOT risk being robbed at the same time.

In this country, where the millions are anxious to save, you have millions of farmers and small business men who are compelled to borrow—as their operations for the year exceed necessarily at one time or another the amount of money that they have on hand.

You have the savers on the one hand getting only 2 per cent if they put their money in the United States Postal Bank. And even then they are limited as to the amount they can put in. They get 3 per cent if they put their money in private savings banks—and take the usual risk of having the money lost through dishonesty or withheld from them in time of panic.

You have the farmers, upon whose labor and intelligence the nation depends, compelled to borrow for the purchase of seeds, of machinery. And, while the SAVING, careful American who accumulates his earnings can get only 2 per cent or 3 per cent interest, THE FARMER MUST PAY, ON THE AVERAGE, EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT FOR THE MONEY THAT HE BORROWS.

Isn't there some way of getting the AMERICAN WHO SAVES and the AMERICAN WHO BORROWS closer together?

Is it not an outrage that the hundreds of millions that the careful American saves should be lent to the hard-working farmer with SOME BANKING ORGANIZATION BETWEEN THE TWO GETTING A "RAKE OFF" OF FIVE AND A HALF PER CENT ON THE MONEY?

That is exactly what happens.

The money that the bankers are lending is simply the money that others have SAVED.

And the money that the farmers are borrowing is simply the money that the savers have deposited in the banks.

The people who save in this country get 3 per cent at most on their savings. And the farmers who borrow pay 8½ per cent.

And in the process 5½ per cent goes to build up a non-producing class THAT IS NOT NECESSARY.

Why should not the Government of the United States pay a decent rate of interest to the American citizen for his savings, and lend to the farmers at a fair rate of interest when the farmers need to borrow?

It doesn't cost 5½ per cent to handle money, to take it in with one hand and lend it with the other.

The United States Government might well afford to pay the careful, saving American 3 per cent on his money and LEND THAT SAME MONEY TO THE FARMER AT 4 PER CENT.

This would give the Government a margin of 1 per cent to cover expenses.

Why isn't it possible to do this?

It isn't possible for various reasons.

The first reason is that the finances of the United States are usually run by bankers for bankers.

The second reason is that the banking class represents Government, which in this country means money.

The little man who is saving his few hundred dollars and who must be content to get 3 per cent and risk losing it, and the farmer who is borrowing his few thousand dollars and who must go almost on his knees to get it, AND THEN PAY EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT—those two classes are not the Government.

The Government of this country is the banking class, the money class, the money itself.

And therefore the man who saves must accept 3 per cent interest and worry about his money's safety.

And the farmer who borrows must pay 8½ per cent and worry about his payments promptly on time, and pay a commission for extensions, and find himself sold out in time of panics.

And those who profit are the middlemen, the NON-PRODUCERS, the parasites, the blood-suckers of the community.

When will the people find a leader big enough and able enough to hand the savings of the frugal workmen in the shape of a loan to the equally frugal and valuable farmer, and take from both of them ONLY ENOUGH TO PAY FOR THE TRANSACTION?

They do these things in other countries.

In Germany and France they lend thousands of millions to the farmers at 4 per cent a year and less.

The farmers of this country borrow thousands of millions of dollars THROUGH A PRIVATE EXTORTIONATE BANKING SYSTEM AND THE AVERAGE CHARGE IS EIGHT AND ONE-HALF PER CENT.

Eight and one-half per cent on one thousand millions is eighty-five millions of dollars. And this is, at the least, FIFTY MILLIONS MORE THAN THE FARMERS SHOULD PAY.

Money is as much a TOOL in these days as any other.

If you make money, the most important tool, expensive for the farmer, YOU MAKE LIVING AND THE COST OF LIVING EXPENSIVE FOR ALL.

This nation should let the farmers have cheap money, and at the same time give to the saving mechanic a fair rate of interest AND ABSOLUTE SAFETY WITH A GOVERNMENT GUARANTEE.

That can be done, if MONEY will permit the people of this country to run the Government and the finances of the country for the benefit of the people—and not for the benefit of the blood-sucking middleman, called the banking system.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Horses and Camels Lived in Frozen North, Once a Mild Tropical Region, and Believed to Have Been Original Home of Man.

By GARRET P. SERVISS

HARDLY have the eyes of the world been opened, as never before, to the fascinating mysteries of the South Pole and its wonderful surrounding continent, than its great rival of the north makes new claims upon our attention.

North Pole Once a Mild, If Not Tropical, Region.

One of the strangest problems that science has to face is that presented by the fast accumulating evidence that, in former times, possibly before man had developed into his present physical form, a mild, if not a tropical, climate prevailed in those vast northern regions which are now buried, most of the time, under snow and ice. There is even reason to think that this strange condition may have existed up to the very Pole!

The period generally fixed by geologists for the existence of this state of things within the Arctic Circle is what is known as the Pleistocene (from the Greek pleistos, "most," and kainos, "recent," the meaning being that it was the most recent period of the great Tertiary Age). Any attempt to fix in years the distance of that time from ours is merely guesswork. It has been said that history reckons by years and geology by ages. It may be that the Pleistocene dates back a hundred thousand, and, perhaps, two or three hundred thousand years.

Anyhow, in Pleistocene times animals and plants, some of which are extinct and others of which are now found only in temperate or tropical regions, existed, apparently in abundance, in the polar regions of the north.

The latest discoveries concerning these vanished inhabitants of a land that has now become frigid and inhospitable relate to camels and horses. The presence of the camel in Alaska, not as a curiosity in a traveling menagerie, but as a regular inhabitant of the land, is astonishing to think of. We know the camel as a desert animal, a lover of the Sahara, with its waterless expanses of wind-driven, sun-blasted sand, but here he appears, dwelling before the two-legged animal that was to become his master had been introduced upon the planet, in a region which, in its present condition, would be almost as inappropriate a place of residence for him as the moon would be for men!

But he has left his fossilized bones there, and science has discovered them. We can not contradict such evidence.

Science Discovers That Horse Lived in Alaska.

Then, too, the horse existed in Alaska in that same strange age. Its remains have been found in so many places that it is impossible to conclude otherwise than that horses ranged freely over immense expanses within the Arctic Circle where now the sub-soil is a frozen mass that never melts. At that time great prairies of luscious grass must have existed there at nearly all times of the year, for horses do not store up food to last through a long, pitiless winter.

Mammoths and Bison Roamed Frozen North.

Somewhere about the same time mammoths, bisons and other strange animals also roamed that part of the world, finding an abundance of food about them. If there were men in existence at that time, they, too, may have been polar inhabitants!

The great question now is: What caused the change? Why were the Arctic regions warm and genial at that time, and how have they come into the state which we now find?

Some have suggested that the earth has partly tipped over, its axis of rotation, or the line joining its poles, assuming a different position. But this would involve a tremendous catastrophe, throwing the oceans out of their beds and producing disastrous changes all over the globe, and evidence of such a universal catastrophe is lacking. Moreover, there is hardly anything known to science more stable than an axis of rotation. Once set a body spining about a particular axis and it is extremely difficult to change the direction or slope of that axis. The whole form of the earth plainly indicates that it has been turning for countless ages about the same poles, and must have begun to so turn when it was yet plastic, or molten, for it has bulged at the equator, just as any mass of that kind must do under the influence of centrifugal force.

A more probable hypothesis is that the change of climate has been caused by elevations and subsidences of the earth's crust. The presence of horses and camels in Alaska has been ascribed to the former existence of a great "land bridge" connecting Asia with North America. Horses did not exist in America at the time of its discovery, and camels have never inhabited this Continent, except in Pleistocene times.

In view of the facts that I have been reciting, one can not but think of the strange theory, which has been strongly advocated in the past, though never accepted by science.

Many Believe Home of Race Was North Pole.

Not a few students believe that the original home of the present inhabitants of our hemisphere, and perhaps of the whole human race, was around the North Pole, from which they were driven by climatic changes. If that were so, then what is now the Arctic Ocean must have been a land "flowing with milk and honey," in the old Scriptural sense.

The Mad Monarch

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

HIS subjects may be found in every clime;
From every source they crawl to lick his hand.
His home in Hell is wonderfully planned
To welcome slaves that die from time to time.
His nag daughter is Lust. His son is Crime.
He has a solid throne in every land.
And what with hearts to break and serfs to brand.
He goes but seldom to his couch of slime.

He slays men's brains and deadens baby lives.
Oh, the vast pyramids this king could build
Were he to use the bones of starving wives
Who sigh to join the victims he has killed!
Mockingly glow in his grim diadem
Three bloody ruby letters—R-U-M.

Certified Brides and Bridegrooms

"I Know Dozens of People," She Says, "Who Would Never Have Been Born If This Health Idea Had Been Strictly Carried Out ---and Somehow I Don't Think the World Would Have Been Much Better Off For That."

By WINIFRED BLACK.

ONCE there was a clever little boy who was always taking clocks to pieces and meddling with locks and making wheels, and inventing ways of shutting the old door so that it wouldn't be locked and yet the dog could spring the latch—such a clever, clever boy—but I always hated to have him come to visit at our house.

You see, he could take a clock to pieces wonderfully well and put it together—just moderately well. The clock would go after he had put it together again, but somehow there was always something wrong with it some way. Sometimes it told the time all right, but struck wrong. Sometimes it struck all right, but told the hour wrong, and then again it was the alarm that never quite got over the clever boy's handling.

Sometimes I wonder about him—he's a doctor now, a very successful surgeon; always taking people to pieces. I wonder if they run quite so well when he is through with them as they did before he touched them—he and his "science."

Wants to Regulate All the Marriages.

I see he read a paper at a great medical convention yesterday—it was all about "eliminating the unfit."

He doesn't want anyone to marry but people in perfect health. He thinks physicians should regulate marriage—and regulate it legally. No one should be allowed to marry at all without the "yes, indeed," of the whole medical profession. Fine idea, progressive, and all that. I wonder if it is quite practical?

Now, there's the doctor himself, for instance. I happen to know that his mother was an old-fashioned consumptive. She took twenty years a-dying, and one of his brothers died of the old-fashioned illness out in Colorado not so many weeks ago.

The doctor is alive yet, and very lively, too, thank you. He would not be here at all if his advice had been taken thirty years ago—and just think how we should have missed him and his experiments with the clocks and with people's internals.

We knew a good many of the same people, the doctor and I, when he was taking clocks to pieces.

One of them died of cancer; her mother died of it, too; and she married and had three children. One of them is the cleverest, all-around woman I know, one is mediocre and one has made a fortune in a country town and is spending it helping sick babies get well. Now if that woman had not been allowed to marry, what then?

The best family in the town where we both lived had three sons—every one of them has turned out a failure. One's an invalid, one's a criminal and one's a drunkard. Father was sound as a hickory nut, and mother never had an ill day in her life. How about that family?

How far back have you got to go to get at the source of infection and who's going to do the "going?"

"Somebody 'Queer' In Every Family."

"I can find enough degenerates in any family on earth to get any client off for murder in the first degree," said a clever lawyer to me just the other day. "I don't suppose there's a family in America without somebody 'queer' in it."

Just how "queer" have you got to be and who's going to decide about it when you try to get a marriage license and can't?

"Eliminate the unfit"—well, well, Mr. Physician, who are the unfit?

There's Robert Louis Stevenson, for instance. He never drew a breath of good health in his life. Would you have "eliminated" him?

How about Julius Caesar, how about Napoleon, how about Mohammed, how about Daniel Webster, how about St. Paul?

Unfit—every one of them—from the doctor's point of view, and there are still more illustrious examples of the unfit who survived and made the world over just to suit their own ideas while the "fit" stood around and looked on and wondered about it.

It's a glorious idea you have, doctor, and one that every civilized nation should study carefully—but are you quite sure how you are going to manage it?

I got the "sterilized" fad once and wouldn't let anyone have a drop of water that wasn't boiled; till my old doctor came along and told me I had boiled all the life out of it, and he said he'd risk a few germs if he were me—on the principle that he'd rather be an aquarium than a cemetery—and I got over my fad.

"Drink water all you can," shouts the water-cure fiend.

"Don't touch water till you have to," insists the new specialist.

"When your brain is tired, work your body," advises the doctor who is supposed to know.

"Don't overwork a tired system," says his neighbor. "Rest is the only thing to cure fatigue."

Owe Their Existence To Old-Time Laws.

And so it goes—we're all so interested—in this "eliminate the unfit" idea, and yet when I look around among my friends, a pretty decent lot of people as the world goes, I can see dozens of them who would never have been born at all if this idea had been strictly carried out, and somehow I can't think the world would have been much better off for that.

Take the old clock to pieces, doctor, all you will, but please, good friend, be quite sure you know how to put it together again so it will strike twelve at midnight and not at eight of the morning.

:-: Marshal D'Ancre :-:

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE execution, 296 years ago, of Leonora Galigai, wife of the Marshal D'Ancre, was the wind-up of one of the most remarkable life stories in French history.

In 1610 the fanatical Ravaillac plunged his dagger into the heart of Henry Fourth, and Mary de Medici was proclaimed Regent. At the time of her marriage to Henry Mary brought with her from Florence her nurse's daughter, Leonora Galigai, and her husband, Concino Concini, son of a Florentine notary. By these creatures the Regent was completely hypnotized, and in a trice the nurse's daughter and the notary's son became the most consequential personages in France. Mary, besides making the pair her confidential advisers, gave them every opportunity for advancing their material fortunes, with the result that, in addition to wielding great power at court, they grew immensely wealthy. The well-filled strong box left by the great King was pilfered right and left, and in a little while Concini was able to say: "When I came to France I was not worth a sou, now I am worth eight millions." His wife also laid by a splendid wad of the "needful," besides supplying herself with the plate, wardrobe and jewels that were the wonder of her time.

Purchasing the Marquisate of Ancre and a marshalship, the notary's son was now the Marshal D'Ancre, and as for the nurse's daughter—she was pretty nearly the "whole thing," for she dominated both Mary and D'Ancre.

But alas, for the "best laid plans of mice and men!" One day, after some seven years of prosperity, the Marshal D'Ancre was shot down like a dog by the order, or with the consent, of the young King, Louis Thirteenth, and not long thereafter the court creatures seized D'Ancre's widow and took her before the bar of the Parliament, by which body she was unceremoniously sentenced to the block. The last words of the dashing adventuress, as she looked out upon the sea of humanity that had gathered to witness her execution, were:

"What a lot of people to look at one poor creature die!"

VOTING GROWS BRISK IN SLOGAN EMBLEM 'PRETTIEST GIRL' RACE

Miss Estell McDonald, latest entrant in the slogan button beauty contest.

Nominations and Photos of All Types of Beauty Are Pouring In.

With the "Beauty Button" contest, to determine whose picture among the hundreds of Atlanta girls shall adorn the Greater Atlanta button, in full swing, nominations with photographs of all types of beauty are coming in.

Hundreds of votes are being cast, everyone in Atlanta having the privilege of nominating and voting for whomever they wish. The honor of leading the city in its quest for the 500,000 population mark by 1920 is being sought on all sides.

Every contestant is busy securing votes, and with the end of the race, the picture of the candidate securing the largest number of votes will be placed upon the button.

One of the latest entrants is Miss Estell McDonald, an extremely attractive young woman, whose friends are confident that no mistake will be made if she is chosen to represent fair Atlanta.

Atlanta Charter Is Opposed by Senator

The new charter for Atlanta will be opposed by Senator G. M. Hule, of the Thirty-fifth District, which includes Atlanta. His objection will be based on the ground that the charter curtails the powers of the City Recorder.

"While I don't live in Fulton County, still as Senator from the Thirty-fifth I consider myself as much of a resident of Atlanta as the Fulton County delegation," he said. "I see where they want to cut the Recorder's authority from a limit of $500 and 60 days to $200 and 30 days. I don't think they ought to do this; therefore, I am going to hold the bill up in the Senate."

Urges Congressional Record Cartoonist

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A suggestion that the Congressional Record be made an illustrated daily and that a regular cartoonist be employed by Congress was made by Senator John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, speaking jocularly during a debate as to whether illustrations should be inserted in the Record.

"Why could we not have a regular cartoonist," said Williams, "and a daily illustrated Record, with proper headlines and loving and lovable caricatures of our friends across the chamber?"

DEMANDS INTERVENTION IN MEXICO

BILL GRANTS WAR POWER TO WILSON

Murray of Oklahoma Would Hasten Relief to Americans and Europeans in Mexico.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A sensational resolution demanding intervention in Mexico within 30 days unless peace be restored, and denouncing the Heutra regime as one of "brute force, incendiarism, rapine and murder," was introduced in the House to-day by Representative William H. Murray, of Oklahoma, a Democrat.

The resolution provides that the President shall notify Mexico that peace must be restored and that the lives and property of American citizens and all foreigners sojourning in Mexico shall be respected.

If disorder in the Mexican republic continues for another 30 days the resolution provides the President shall intervene, "establish peace and order and civil government, and take possession of all public property of the former republic of Mexico and hold the same until every item of expense and all damages for the deprivation of liberty or the destruction of property of any American citizen or citizens of any other nation has been fully compensated out of the Mexican revenues."

Gives President War Power.

It is also demanded that in the event of intervention the President is empowered to rehabilitate the Mexican Government, prepare the Mexicans for self-government and restore law and order, "and the President is authorized to use the land and naval forces of the United States for the accomplishment of all such purposes."

The preamble of the resolution defends the Monroe Doctrine and asserts that the United States is in duty bound to protect its own citizens in Mexico as wel as the citizens of other nations. The refusal of this country to carry out the Monroe Doctrine, the resolution says, might justify foreign intervention.

Mr. Murrays resolution refers to President Huerta as "the usurping marauder." Huerta, the resolution recites, "has nullified the Constitution, destroyed all lawful authority and government and has committed upon the persons of the President (Madero) and his family, a blackhanded murder, paralleled in all history only by the cruelty of the dark ages, with all its superstititions and dastardly deeds of rapine and murder."

"There remains in Mexico neither rights of government nor of belligerent powers such as could be recognized," continues the Oklahoman's resolution.

Punishment for Guerrillas.

After warning the Mexican Government to restore order and protect the lives of Americans, it is stipulated that this Government "shall pursue to the ends of the earth" any military leader or band who disregards the warning.

With the arrival of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson only two days distant, Washington is on the qui vive for every shift in the Mexican situation.

Predictions are made that, by the time Ambassador Wilson arrives, the Huerta administration will be in such an unstable conditon that the envoy will not recommend that it be recognized, no matter how favorably disposed he may be toward it.

Dispatches of the past two days have caused deep alarm to the State Department because of the insistent appeals for help coming from Americans in the demoralized country.

Tuxpam, on the southeastern coast of Mexico, is now the center of all official eyes. The town was captured by the Constitutionalists, and the battleship Louisiana, with Rear Admiral Fletcher aboard, is speeding toward the port from Vera Cruz to prevent possible depredations on foreign property.

Glass Tries to Quiet Money Board Strife

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Representative Ragsdale, of South Carolina, the member of the House Banking and Currency Committee who suddenly quit the committee because Chairman Glass could not furnish copies of certain amendments to the currency bill that Ragsdale demanded, returned to the conference on the bill with his Democratic colleagues to-day.

Glass made strenuous effort to preserve harmony in the committee.

Said the Bulldog in Tree—Never Again!

CHICAGO, July 22.—"Whitey," a bullpup, loved to sink his teeth into auto tires.

Yesterday he made one lunge at a revolving tire, caught it firmly in his teeth and sailed away into the air. Emil Klank, manager of Frank Gotch, wrestler, climbed into a tree, 20 feet high, and rescued "Whitey"—unhurt, but greatly puzzled.

More than 100 automobiles passed "Whitey's" home to-day. "Whitey" sat on the porch and watched them.

Wrestler Killed as He Falls on Dynamite

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., July 22.—Falling while wrestling with his brother near Germantown, Martin Funk, 18, was blown to pieces to-day. A stick of dynamite in his hip pocket exploded.

His brother's left hand was blown off.

Deadly Bomb Sent To Carnegie Will Be Dropped Into Ocean

NEW YORK, July 22.—So deadly was the bomb sent to the offices of the Carnegie Corporation addressed personally to Andrew Carnegie, in the opinion of the police, that the Bureau of Combustibles will to-day take the missile on board a launch and drop it in the sea as the only safe way of getting it out of New York.

So dangerous is believed to be the contents of the watermelon-shaped container of zinc that the bureau's chief bomb expert refused to open it, declaring that the destruction of two city blocks might result.

So far the police are without a clew to the sender of the bomb.

Obsolete Laws to Be Stricken From Atlanta City Code

Through the efforts of Councilman Claude L. Ashley, the City Council has appointed a special committee to strike all persiflage from the City Code. He said it is full of obsolete laws, and gives the following examples:

No public meeting shall be held in Atlanta without twelve hours' notice to the Chief of Police.

Pigs shall not be allowed to run loose in the streets.

It shall be unlawful to trap mockingbirds within the city limits.

It shall be unlawful to auction off mules at the corner of Broad and [illegible] streets.

Bryan Naps in Depot; Buys 45-Cent Lunch For 5; All on $12,000!

CHICAGO, July 22.—For two hours early to-day Secretary of State Bryan sat nearly upright in a railroad station seat and slept. When his train was called he entered a drawing room and prepared to awake in Oelwein, Iowa, where he was scheduled to give a chautauqua lecture this afternoon.

Before his nap Secretary Bryan entertained four newspaper men at a midnight lunch which cost him 45 cents. He ate cantaloupe off a dairy lunch chair. Three others of the party ate canteloupe and one reporter drank buttermilk.

16 Considered for Mercer President

MACON, July 22.—Dr. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist Church; the Rev. P. H. Mell, former president of Clemson College, and Professor M. L. Brittain, State Superintendent of Schools, all of Atlanta, are among the sixteen ministers and educators considered for the presidency of Mercer University.

Others considered are Rev. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville; Rev. John Roach Straton, of Baltimore; Rev. W. L. Pickard, of Savannah, and E. T. Holmes, president of Gordon Institute, Barnesville.

Hot Siege Broken, Says Weather Man

Hot weather is over in Atlanta for the next few days, and the weather man says there is no immediate prospect of another spell like that of last week. An east wind, bearing considerable moisture, is causing showers all over Georgia and the South Atlantic coast region.

The forecast for Tuesday and Wednesday is showers, with a maximum temperature of 82 or 83 degrees.

PRISONERS PERISH IN CAGE

Flames Start in Hay Stored Under the Sleeping Quarters on Oakley Farm.

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—Thirty-five convicts, sleping on the second floor of a wooden cage at the Oakley convict farm 20 miles southwest of Jackson, were burned to death early this morning.

All of the victims were negroes and their bodies were burned beyond recognition. This afternoon their charred bodies were buried in the prison grave yard.

The fire started on the first floor at the stairway landing, cutting off the only avenue of escape. The structure was built ten years ago with lumber taken from the old penitentiary building in Jackson. It burned with astonishing rapidity.

The convict farm is not equipped with any form of fire protection. Two night watchmen are employed at the place, but neither saw the fire until the flames burst through the windows of the lower floor.

The screams of the dying prisoners could be heard for nearly two miles. Farmers in the vicinity hurried to the scene, but were unable to give any assistance. The lower floor of the cage was used as a store building, quantities of hay, corn and molasses being in storage. The hay doubtless caused the fire to spread with added rapidity.

The Oakley farm is in charge of Sergeant S. T. Byrd. The prison hospital also is located at that place, but the convicts who lost their lives were not members of the hospital squad, all of them being employed in the cotton fields. Several notorious negro criminals were among those who lost their lives.

Coroner J. W. Beal, accompanied by a jury, went to Oakley this morning to hold an inquest, and endeavor to ascertain the cause of the fire.

Origin of Fire Mystery.

"I can't explain it," said Sergeant Byrd over the long distance telephone this morning. "As to the origin of the fire I haven't the slightest idea. It may have been a match carelessly dropped at the stairway. I can not believe it was of incendiary origin.

"There was never a chance to save any of the prisoners. The blaze was under good headway before anybody discovered it. When we reached the building it was to find that the fire centered around the only stairway leading to the upper floor of the cage. All of the upper windows were covered with heavy iron bars and it was impossible for the convicts to fight their way out.

Fight Was Useless.

"We did everything in our power, but the fight was useless. The building was doomed from the first and the piteous cries of the poor prisoners who were being roasted alive added to the demoralization of our forces. We have no sort of fire protection or fire fighting equipment here, and the buckets of water thrown by other prisoners on the building had no effect whatever."

The first news of the holocaust was received by Mrs. O. M. Spickard, secretary of the State Prison Board, in a telephone message from Mrs. Byrd wife of the sergeant. Mrs. Byrd was almost hysterical and could give but few of the details. An hour later communication was secured with Sergeant Byrd and a list of the victims obtained. A number of the prisoners were life termers.

Under prison rules, all convicts must be in their cages and lights out by 9 o'clock. The prisoners had been sleeping several hours when they were awakened by the intense heat and clouds of smoke that poured up from below.

POSTOFFICE ROBBED.

The Tilton, Ga., postoffice was entered Tuesday morning. The safe was cracked and a considerable amount of postage stamps stolen.

House Has 'Spank' Day; Olive Warms Breeches of Pages

Tuesday was official spanking day in the House, with genial Sam Olive, Representative from Richmond County, as "spanker" and the pages as "spankees."

During the recess the pages became unusually playful. In fact, they are the liveliest pages the House ever has known. One of them developed the idea of initiating the new members of their ranks, but ran a-foul of Representative Olive, who decided to initiate the entire lot.

Ten slaps upon the western side of each of the pages' trousers were applied to each youngster. There was no escape, for as each boy's turn came the other pages seized him and held him firmly across genial Sam's lap, while the ten slaps were counted in unison.

'Bomb' for Wilson Was Cake of Soap; Doctor Brought It

WASHINGTON, July 22.—When Dr. Bernard Rachauer, who gave his address at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., called at the White House to-day and demanded to see President Wilson, the secret service men took him into custody long enough to examine a black bag the doctor carried.

The secret service operatives feared a bomb. They found a cake of soap and a roll of bandages.

Dr. Rachauer would not state his business with the President. He was told that the Chief Executive was "not at home."

Roumania Ready to Treat With Bulgars

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, July 22.—The Bulgarian Legation here this afternoon received the following dispatch from the home government at Sofia:

"The Government has decided to surrender Adrianople to the Turks."

BUCHAREST, July 22.—Roumania is willing to end the war with Bulgaria. In an official note issued to-day it accepts the Sofia Government's offer to cede territory above Turtukai and Dobrideh.

Roumania suggests, however, that the peace negotiations proceed within the borders of its own country.

Militants Are Fined; Burn Another House

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 22.—Following the severe battle between the militant suffragettes and the police, when the later arrested Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and six of her followers, the rioters were arraigned in police court to-day. Two were fined and two others were ordered to furnish bond to keep the peace.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, July 22.—The suffragettes' "arson squad" resumed operations here to-day. A house valued at $2,000 was destroyed by fire.

HEARING OF CRAWFORD CASE MAY CONFLICT

Conference Planned to Decide Which Shall Take Precedence. Ready to Draw Venire.

Reuben R. Arnold, of counsel for Leo M. Frank, announced Tuesday that he proposed to seek a conference of the attorneys in the Frank case and in the Crawford will hearing to determine which case should be postponed next Monday, the date set for the beginning of the trial of Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan.

Mr. Arnold, Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, both also are attorneys in the Crawford will case, and it would be impossible on this account to conduct the two cases simultaneously. The Crawford hearing will resume Wednesday before a special auditor in a branch of the Superior Court, and undoubtedly will be in progress next week if it is not stopped by a postponement.

The will hearing, because of the fact that it already is under way, would have a natural precedence over the Frank trial. This may be waived, however, in order to take up the Phagan mystery.

None of the attorneys for the defense will say that they intend to ask for a postponement of the Frank trial, but the hot weather and the fact that the Crawford case is in progress at this time apepar to be combining to bring about such a consummation.

Judge Roan has stated that the case would be called Monday, but he probably will accede to the request for a conference some day this week to discuss the matter.

Court Likely to Accede.

Attorney Arnold will ask that the jurymen be not summoned until a definite decision is reached as to which of the cases is to take precedence.

When Deputy Sheriff Piennie Miner arranged to install twelve large electric fans in the courtroom for the Frank trial Tuesday morning, he said there would be no excuse for a postponement on the grounds of the room being too warm.

"Spectators will not be allowed to crowd into the court," he said. "The fans will keep it much cooler than the average office building in the city. There are plenty of windows, and the place is always well shaded."

Despite the reported repudiation of her sensational affidavit that eLo M. Frank had tried repeatedly on the night of the Mary Phagan murder to secure a room in which to bring a girl, Mrs. Nina Formby declared in Chattanooga Tuesday that she would be in Atlanta on July 28 to testify to her statements when the trial of the pencil factory superintendent opens.

Denies She Retracted.

According to a dispatch from Chattanooga, where the woman has been for several weeks, Mrs. Formby denies having ever retracted from her original declarations which she made to the police, and further stated that she would repeat them on the witness stand.

The police have asserted that Mrs. Formby has been eliminated from the case.

Superior Judge John T. Pendleton prepared Tuesday to draw the 150 veniremen for the trial. This venire will be called next Monday morning unless the weather is unusually warm.

The jury, in all probability, will be selected and served before Wednesday night, according to Judge Pendleton.

COURT DIRECTS FRANK VENIRE BE DRAWN

Attorney Reuben R. Arnold stated Tuesday morning that he probably would ask Judge Pendleton to draw the venire from the Grand Jury box, and that he felt confident he could cite enough law on the subject to sustain his point.

Solicitor to Fight Move.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey stated that the procedure was altogether irregular, if not illegal, and that he would oppose such a move as strongly as he fought the attempt on the part of the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley over his protest.

The attorneys on both sides will be notified by telephone when Judge Pendleton begins to draw the venire, and he will allow them to be heard.

Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside at the Frank trial, will not return to Atlanta from Covington until Friday. He announced to a correspondent of The Georgian in Covington that the Frank trial would be called next Monday sure, but he would not commit himself as to whether he would consider any move for postponement after the case was called.

Before leaving for Covington he remarked that if the weather was as hot next Monday as it was last week he would welcome some sufficient ground for postponement.

Both Sides Are Ready.

Attorneys Arnold and Rosser admit they would like to se the trial postponed to escape the ordeal of a hard fight in torrid weather, but state they will be reluctant to ask for delay upless there is some very excellent reason why the case should not go to trial.

Both sides are ready. All the witnesses who will be used are within the jurisdiction of the court and able to attend. The inability of any one of the more than 100 to be in court on the day the case is called would sustain a request for postponement, but the attorneys for the defense made it clear that if any move for postponement for any other reason than the absence of a witness was made, it would come from the other side, or the judge.

Attorney Arnold stated that the failure of the Grand Jury to indict Conley had made little difference to their case, because it had been built before any known move was made to bring about the indictment.

"It made absolutely no difference to us," he said. "It was purely a technical point in the trial that would have been in our favor. As to the negro's character and standing, it would make little difference to a fair-minded jury whether he were indicted."

Bacon, Unopposed, Gets 29,529 Votes In Senate Election

A total of 29,529 votes were cast for Augustus O. Bacon for United States Senator in the special election held July 15. No one opposed Senator Bacon, but more than one-eighth of the State's electorate turned out to give him a complimentary vote.

The election was unique in that it was the first to be held under the new law requiring United States Senators to be elected by direct vote of the people.

The returns were canvassed before the House and Senate in a joint meeting Tuesday by a committee of five Senators and five Representatives. The senatorial committee was composed of Senators Jones, Tarver, Tyler, Turner and Bush. The House committee consisted of Representatives Miller, McCrory, Smith, Edmondson and Culpepper.

SEEK EVIDENCE AGAINST GANG OF ROBBERS

Police Attempt to Prove Pair That Nearly Killed Clerk Committed Series of Crimes.

Detectives Tuesday searched the home of R. W. Miller, at Red Oak, near Atlanta, in an attempt to unearth more evidence that Miller and T. W. Reeves, who were caught after they had knocked senseless an employee in the store of R. A. Gober, No. 30 Carroll street, and were trying to open the safe Monday night, perpetrated a series of daring and cleverly-planned burglaries covering a period of several months.

During the afternoon the two men were again cross-examined by the police.

Their alleged attempt to loot the Gober store came near to being fatal to Eugene M. Davis, 18 years old, formerly residing in Bishopville, S. C. Davis, who occasionally worked at night for his employer, was sitting on the steps to the store about 11 o'clock when four men approached him.

"Boy," one of them said, "can you let us into the store? We are mighty thirsty and want a dope around."

Thrown Into Ice Box.

"Sure," replied Davis without hesitation as he pulled a bunch of keys from his pocket and unlocked the store door.

Entering the store, he was followed by the men. The small ice box where soft drinks are kept is just inside the door. As Davis raised the lid of the ice box he was rudely seized from the rear by the nape of the neck and a rough hand was clapped over his mouth.

He was bumped against the side of the wall into near insensibility and dragged to the rear of the store, which is used as a butcher shop. Back of the butcher shop counter is an ice closet about nine feet high and four feet deep.

His captors opened the ice box door and thrust Davis in, bolting the heavy door upon him. Davis was unable to rise to his feet and lay in a cramped position, with 300 pounds of ice not two inches from his head.

Thought He Would Die.

"The air was stuffy," said Davis. "I could hardly get my breath, and I thought several times I would die. It was terribly cold, and a sickening sensation came over me as I felt the drops of water trickle down on my back."

"I couldn't hear a sound. The men had taken the keys from me, and I didn't know whether anyone would ever get me out. The keyring taken from me contained the key to the safe which I had heard Mr. Gober say contained several hundred dollars. Finally I could stand it no longer; my breath was gone and I felt I was lost. I remembered no more until I awoke to find men standing all around me and someone giving me a taste of something which felt warm and good.

"I must have been in there fifteen minutes at least, but I don't know. Mr. Gober says it was more than twenty minutes before they found me."

Defy Police to Prove Guilt.

Despite the assertion of the detectives that they have connected the men with a chain of robberies and suit case thefts extending over a considerable time, both Reeves and Miller emphatically denied Tuesday that they had had anything to do with them and defied the police to prove their charges.

The detectives went to the home of Reeves, 13 Stonewall street, and there found three suit cases, which, they say, are stolen property. Another suit case was found in a woman's room at No. 153 1-2 Whitehall street.

Chief Lanford Tuesday morning said that Reeves and Miller had stolen more than 40 suit cases at the depots in the recent weeks, and also had participated in attempts at safe-cracking and burglary. Detectives Chewning, Davis, Sturdivant and Rosser have taken turns in trailing the men in the last six weeks.

High Cost of Dying Cut by Funeral Bus

CHICAGO, July 22.—The high cost of dying is to be lowered in Chicago with the advent of motor 'buses. The funeral 'bus will have a compartment to the right of the chauffeur's seat for the coffin, and above it a place for flowers. Near the driver will sit the minister and the undertaker, and there will be accommodations for twenty-seven mourners.

The funeral 'bus, it is said, will reduce the transportation cost by $30. Ten of the 'buses are to be in operation soon.

ATLANTA BATTLE RECALLED BY CLAYTON

Construction Head Gives Interesting Reminiscences on 49th Anniversary.

Captain Robert M. Clayton, well-known Atlantan who was in charge of a company and was much under fire during the siege of Atlanta, Tuesday, the forty-ninth anniversary of the Battle of Atlanta, talked interestingly to a Georgian reporter of the events that made this day famous in history.

"A strong movement is on foot to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of this battle next year with ostentatious ceremonies," said Captain Clayton.

"The old Moseley house on the Marietta road, just beyond the city limits, marks the headquarters of General John B. Hood, the commander of the Confederate army. It was on this spot that General Joseph E. Johnston was ordered to surrender his command to Hood July 18, 1864. General Johnston had refused to fight, retreating from Tennessee. On the day the change was made all the soldiers wore crepe on their arms.

Memorial Park.

"A proposition has been made to sell 37 acres of this property to the city for a memorial park. It is about the only battleground around here available for such a purpose."

Captain Clayton explained that the first fighting begun around Atlanta was on July 20, along the old Collier road, north of the city. During that battle he was struck for the first and only time during the war with a bullet. But it was a spent bullet and did not break the skin. Night found both divisions undisturbed in their positions.

Firing was resumed again on the morning of July 22, east of the city between the Georgia railroad and the old Koch house. Hood had sent Hardee with his corps around north of the city to make the attack. The Confederates charged from the south and east toward the city, but the city was held against them.

Where McPehrson Fell.

The fighting was the fiercest of any of the battles around Atlanta. Of it there is a vivid picture in Cyclorama at Grant Park.

General McPherson fell at a spot on McPherson avenue now marked by a marble column. He was succeeded in command of the Federals by General Frank A. Logan. It was the day of the death of General W. H. C. Walker, of the Confederates.

Colonel Albert Howell, well known in Atlanta, and the late Colonel L. P. Thomas commanded two regiments that took a battery that charged and took a Federal battery which was stationed at the present corner of Moreland and DeKalb avenues.

Night came again without any change in the relative positions of the two armies.

Under Constant Fire.

The next fight was on July 28, on the Moseley place, west of the city. That day did not mark a victory, but it began the siege of Atlanta that did not let up until September 8, when the city was taken by General Sherman and burned to the ground.

Captain Clayton said the city was constantly under fire during all those days, although many of the people remained and business was carried on as well as possible.

One day a barber, sitting in front of his shop at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, was struck and killed by a shell. The shell also struck an iron street lamp post and pierced a hole in it. The post stands there yet, one of the many interesting marks of those terrible days.

KADAKER KING OF ATLANTA FAME DIES IN CELL

Technicality Delays Pardon Until Too Late—Career Here Sensational—Jailed in Boston.

Cardenio F. King, Boston newspaper publisher and financier, who died a convict on the State farm at Bridgewater, Mass., Monday just before Governor Foss was ready to sign his pardon, had an Atlanta career almost as interesting as his pathetic death, according to Atlantans who knew him during his residence here more than ten years ago.

He came to Atlanta from North Carolina and was known as "Kodaker" Kink because of a column he ran in various Atlanta newspapers which was headed by a photograph of himself with a camera. His personal appearance marked him an unusual man, for he weighed about 300 pounds, had bright red hair and mustache and a rosy complexion.

His column was indicative of his character. It always began with a few breezy paragraphs of choice gossip, but a reader would not peruse far before he discovered himself buried in alluring advertisements.

Hoaxed by Walter Taylor.

Occasionally when advertisers refused to be convinced of the value of this column he would be sent out on regular assignments. It so happened that one day he was sent to the police station, the "beat" of Walter Taylor, the present City Clerk, but then a bright young reporter. "Kodaker" King was unfamiliar with the assignment, so he decided the best policy was to follow close on the heels of Walter Taylor. And thereby hangs a tale.

Walter Taylor "framed" with Detective Billy Crim, the famous policeman who passed aawy several years ago, to call him suddenly as though something startling had happened. Crim sprang the trick one hot August day while Taylor and King were walking down the street, and Taylor, lithe and young, darted up the steps.

He did not stop until he had gained the roof of the cupola of the police station. He did not even stop to look around, for he knew that King, 300 pounds net, was following him with all his might and main.

King Reached Top—Purple.

Several minutes later King, puffing and blowing, stuck his head through the manhole on the roof. His red face had turned purple and the perspiration streamed down his cheeks.

Soon afterward "Kodaker" King left Atlanta. He was flat broke and his friends did not know what would become of him. But a few years later he returned with his name changed to "Oil" King; and it was remarked that if his oil flowed as much as his money, he would be a second John D. Rockefeller.

As "Kodaker" he had gone to Boston. But he dropped that title with the discovery of oil at Beaumont, Texas. He went out there as an advertising man and soon owned a number of acres of rocky land.

Train Attached for Debt.

Back East he hurried and organized an oil company. When he struck Atlanta he was traveling in a special train. He advertised his stock in two-page spreads in each of the Atlanta papers. Sam W. Small, evangelist and newspaper man, was engaged as his press agent.

The only reminder of his former days of poverty and gloom was when all his possessions in the train were attached by a justice of the peace bailiff for an old debt of $40. But he paid that and was on his way.

The next Atlantans heard of King was that he was in the penitentiary in Massachusetts. eH had been the owner of a daily paper, The Boston Daily Tribune. His financial career was ended when he was convicted of obtaining $22,000 under false pretenses.

Died in Sight of Liberty.

Only a technicality prevented his last words being those of a free man. His wife and four sons were at his bedside. Governor Foss had been wired that his condition was hopeless. The Governor has canvassed his counsel and decided to grant a pardon. But the council could not be called together to take formal action until Tuesday.

When Dr. Emerson, medical head of the State Farm, went to announce that a pardon would be granted Tuesday he found King dead. Chronic intestinal trouble was the cause.

TARVER BILL IS PASSED AFTER HOT FIGHT

Provides for Damage Suits in Homicide Cases—Was Issue in Senate Several Years.

Following a two-hour debate, in which charges of being in league with the railroads and counter charges of seeking to increase the earnings of damage suit lawyers were made, the Georgia Senate Tuesday morning, by a vote of 27 to 10, passed Senator Tarver's bill, as amended, providing for recovery by certain parties in cases of homicide. The bill has been before the Senate several years.

Snator Miller, of the Twenty-fourth District, who opened the fight on the bill in an hour's speech, declared the authors of the bill could not have drawn a better thing for the damage suit lawyers. He offered a substitute bill omitting the alleged drastic features, which was voted down. Judge Allen, of the Twentieth, also opposed the bill.

In rebuttal Senator Tarver declared the opposition had the interests of the railroads at heart. Following the vote Senator Miller gave notice of requesting reconsideration of the bill.

One Other Bill Passed.

In addition to Senator Tarver's bill, the Senate passed one other, a local measureo ffered by Senator Smith, of the Ninth, amending the charter incorporating the town of Edison.

The Senate passed a resolution, offered by Judge Allen, extending sympathy to Speaker Burwell upon the death of his sister, Miss Rosa Burwell.

The General Judiciary Committee of the Senate reported adversely the bill for an amendment to the Code providing that the only grounds for total divorce shall be adultery. It is understood a minority report on this measure will be filed with the President of the Senate.

The committee also reported in the negative on the bill providing for the rotation of judges of Superior courts. A favorable report was made on the bill providing for the appointment of a Notary Public for the State at large, as well as a bill providing for an amendment to the Penal Code making husband and wife competent as witnesses in criminal proceedings, but not compelled to testify one against the other.

Other Committees Report.

The Senate Finance Committee, headed by Senator Miller, recommended the bill forcing foreign fire insurance companies that have reinsured all policies to show cause for withdrawal from the State.

The Penitentiary Committee reported favorably the measure making it unlawful for any person with authority to deliver a prisoner to another.

Thomas Protested As Crawford Case Solicitor Pro Tem

Reuben R. Arnold, one of the attorneys for Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, under heavy bail on the charge of poisoning her husband, Joshua Crawford, filed a protest Tuesday against the appointment of Attorney Lewis Thomas, former City Solicitor, as Solicitor Pro Tem in the prosecution of Mrs. Crawford.

The appointment was made by Judge W. D. Ellis because of the disqualification of Solicitor Dorsey. Attorney Arnolds based his objection on the ground that Thomas already had been one of the attorneys in the case and therefore also was disqualified.

Attorney James said Tuesday he would go before Thomas and seek to have him indict Fred Lumb so that extradition papers might be obtained. He said he also would urge the immediate indictment of Mrs. Crawford.

Joseph E. Johnson Dies in Sanitarium

Joseph E. Johnson, 86 years old, father of George E. Johnson, the Police Commissioner, of No. 302 Luckie street, died Tuesday morning at 5 o'clock at a private sanitarium. He is survived by three sons, George E., Orie and W. L. Johnson.

For several years Mr. oJhnson was active in various lines and well known by business men of Atlanta.

The funeral will be held from the residence Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Interment will be in Oakland Cemetery.

OBITUARY

The double funeral of Casey Daniels and Jerry Moles, who were drowned in the Chattahoochee River Saturday while on a fishing trip, was held from the Congregational Church on McDaniel and Hightower streets Tuesday morning. The body of Casey Daniels was interred at Sardis churchyard, that of Jerry Moles at Westview.

Mrs. Rachel Harland, twenty-eight years old, wife of John H. Harland, cashier at the Pultt & Davies Company, died Tuesday morning at 2 o'clock at their home, No. 196 Juniper street. The funeral will be held from the residence at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. Interment in Westview.

Mary M. Mapes, two-year-old daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. A. L. Mapes, No. 210 Winthrop street, died Tuesday morning at 6 o'clock. Funeral services will be held from Poole's chapel at 2 o'clock Wednesday. Interment in Westview.

Melvin Nesbitt, 15-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Nesbitt, died Tuesday morning at the home, No. 25 Dill avenue. Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment in Westview.

The funeral of Mrs. Clara Holt, who died Sunday, will take place at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the residence, No. 720 East Fair street. Interment at Hollywood.

NOVEL QUESTION FOR SUFFRAGE DEBATE

Speakers to Determine Difference in Meaning of "Suffragette" and "Suffragist."

Woman suffrage in all its phases will be discussed Tuesday night in Taft Hall. One of the important questions to be settled will be the distinction between a suffragist and a suffragette. Speakers who will take up this angle of the argument declare there is a wider gap in the meaning of the words than there is between sanitarium and sanatorium.

The debate will be under the auspices of the Habersham Chapter, D. A. R., and is the last of a series of entertainments arranged by the chapter to aid in raising funds for the new building which will be erected in Peachtree street.

"This will be an open discussion on the suffrage question, as one of the leading thoughts of the day," said Mrs. William Lawson Peel, outlining the plans. "It must not be thought for a moment, however, that the Daughters of the American Revolution are taking part in this discussion as an organization or even as individuals.

"For instance, our last entertainment was a Mother Goose affair, but it was not intended that the public suppose we were all geese.

"Our next venture will be the presentation of beautiful Indian legends, but it can not be inferred that we are Indians."

Mrs. Peel, who is vice president general, N. S. D. A. R., and prominently connected with Habersham Chapter, will preside.

The meeting will be called at 7:45 o'clock. Among the speakers will be Miss Rosa Woodberry, Mrs. M. C. Hardin, Mrs. M. T. McWhorter, Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, Mrs. W. H. Felton, Mrs. M. L. McLendon, Mrs. Frances Whiteside, Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, J. R. Smith, R. H. Hardeman, Dr. A. M. Hughlett, H. H. Swift, J. L. Hope, W. L. Converse, Louis Wisdom and R. A. Broyles.

STORY OF PHAGAN CASE BY CHAPTERS

Slaying of Factory Girl, South's Most Baffling Crime Mystery, Reviewed in Detail.

CHAPTER I.

Will the veil of mystery be lifted when the curtain rises next Monday on another scene in Atlanta's darkest tragedy?

A vast audience, shocked by the horror of Mary Phagan's fate on a Saturday of last April and held through the succeeding weeks in the thrall of the baffling crime drama, in keen suspense awaits this question's answer.

Will Fulton County's Solicitor General be able to point his finger at Leo M. Frank and exclaim, "That is the man who strangled Mary Phagan!" backing his damning accusation with such an abundance of evidence that there can remain no shadow of doubt?

Or will Luther Rosser, certain to be a towering and masterful factor in the titanic struggle that is to be staged, unmask his strength, bring to bear the secret evidence that has been in his possession for weeks, beat down every bulwark of suspicion that the State has erected about its prisoner and, as a dramatic finale, assail the negro, Jim Conley, cowering in the witness stand, with a raking volley of questions that will leave the negro man shaken and terrified, a confession of the crime upon his lips?

Whole State Stirred.

All of Atlanta—most of the State—is hanging with the most intense interest on the outcome.

No other crime ever stirred Georgia to its depths as has the slaying of the little factory girl.

No murder ever has so gripped the hearts and aroused the sympathies of the people throughout the State.

Georgia's criminal history reveals no other case in which the public's interest has remained at fever heat through three months filled with other exciting events. From the time the extras first flamed the details of the brutal killing in the National Pencil Factory until the present there has appeared to be no diminution in the desire to learn each day's developments.

There was in the early days of the tragedy a cry for summary vengeance upon the murderer, but time has tempered this into a universal demand for justice, which is none the less determined in that it is not so demonstrative as the first hot wave of indignation.

The Phagan case has remained in the public mind partly, of course, because it has remained as baffling a mystery as the local detectives ever have encountered. With the mystery solved its appealing interest gradually would have died out, but a review of the tragic features of the drama so far as it has progressed and a consideration of those who have parts in it supplies an explanation of why the fate of Mary Phagan is still uppermost in the people's hearts.

The revolting circumstances of the crime—the attack, the pitiful struggle of the helpless child in the hands of her assailant, the blow and, finally, the garrote—all refuse to be erased from the memory.

Two Principal Figures.

But standing out in stronger prominence than the remembrance of these abhorrent details are two of the principal figures in the tragedy.

They are Mary Phagan, victim, and Leo M. Frank, charged by the State with her death. These two have made the appeal to the public imagination. The contrast in their positions in life intensified it.

Mary Phagan was only a little factory girl whose happy and innocent laughter was stilled by one of the blackest crimes in Atlanta's history.

Leo Frank, a brilliant young man of position and family, was accused of this deed of a beast in human guise.

Mary Phagan was not rich. She was glad to get the $3 or $4 a week that her work at the pencil factory won for her.

Leo Frank's family had wealth. An uncle was a reputed millionaire.

Mary Phagan had hardly the education to which her years entitled her. Times were not always easy in her family and she was driven to neglect her schoolbooks and work in the factory.

Frank was a Cornell graduate. He had a high technical education. He had been sent abroad to select the machinery for the Atlanta plant. His business associates placed every confidence in him. His friends knew him for an upright and moral young man, with a most promising career ahead of him.

That he would descend to the level of a criminal of the worst type was inconceivable to them. The possibility furnished to thousands of others a subject for daily conjecture.

Life of Slain Girl.

Mary Phagan's life began 14 years ago in Marietta. She was the petted "baby" of the family. She had three older brothers and a sister, now 18. Even in the early years of childhood she is remembered as having the pretty features and attractive ways that made her greatly liked by her girl friends later when she came to work in Atlanta.

For a playmate in the days at Marietta she had one who was to play a brief but sensational part in April's tragedy. It was J. M. Gantt. Within a few hours after her cold body was found in the gloomy basement of the National Pencil Factory her childhood playmate was arrested as he left a car in Marietta, to which place there seemed at the time every indication that he was fleeing.

Her childish prattle had changed to the happy conversation of young girlhood when the family moved to East Point. There bereavement visited the family in the death of Mary's father. Hardship followed sorrow and it became necessary for little Mary to follow the example of her brothers and sisters and assist in providing a livelihood for the family. She could not do much, but she did her mite willingly and cheerfully.

A year ago Mrs. Phagan married W. J. Coleman and the family moved to No. 146 Lindsay street, Atlanta. Mary obtained work in the National Pencil Factory and soon made friends with all the children about her home and with the girls she met at the factory. Although she never had many of the luxuries of life, Mary was reared carefully by her mother and enjoyed the wise counsel that is sometimes denied the children of families in more pretentious circumstances.

All Loved Little Mary.

To the loving and painstaking home training, the attractive halfshy little maiden brought a naturally sweet disposition. In the few leisure hours she had she often played about her home with the children of the neighbors. The little people of Bellwood, on the outskirts of Atlanta, all grew to love the sweet-tempered, pretty little girl. When they returned to their homes after a frolic their conversation was of what Mary had said and what Mary had done.

The fathers and mothers began to take notice of her as she laughed and chattered among the other children. They came to watch for the time each morning when she boarded a car to go to work at the pencil factory. They took a sort of parental interest in the bright-eyed, lighthearted little girl.

The small community is a bit of a city in itself. Everyone knows everyone else and the neighborly spirit is exemplified in the manner in which the residents, most of them working people, struggle for each other and sympathize in each other's afflictions. They joined in their near-worship of the little factory girl. She embodied in their minds pure and attractive young girlhood. They guarded her reputation almost as jealously as did her own mother. If anything should happen to her it would be a shock to every family in the little community.

On a Thursday, the last in April, Mary was playing with two of her dearest girl chums, Vera Epps and Lillian Waignel. The back yards of the Phagan and Epps homes adjoined. The Waignel girl lived just across the street from Vera Epps at No. 249 Fox street. An expected shipment of metal at the pencil factory had not arrived and a section of the plant was shut down temporarily, throwing Mary out of work until the metal should arrive.

A Strange Foreboding.

The three little girls ran and played about the whole afternoon, laughing and talking in their childish happiness. Toward evening, tired from the frolic, they rested on the embankment near their homes. In the hard red clay they dug out their initials as they rested.

"M. P." were the letters scratched out of the dirt by Mary.

"Let's keep them here always," cried Vera, clapping her hands.

"But if one of us should die?" suggested Mary.

"Then the other two of us would come back here and dig the initials out again when it rained," Vera replied, but a shadow had fallen over the gayety of the little group.

Two days later several of the housewives of Bellwood, looking from their windows, saw Mary Phagan get aboard a car for Atlanta, and they never saw her return. Vera Epps waved her a good-bye as Mary hurried down the street without a thought that it was a last farewell.

When Vera looked upon her playmate the next time, there was no answering smile. The pink cheeks that flushed with happiness and health were ghastly white except where they were begrimed and pitifully bruised and swollen. The beautiful young body, once full of life, was cold and inanimate and mutilated.

Goes to the Factory.

The Confederate veterans were preparing to honor their dead when Mary came into town that day. It was a holiday and she had planned to go to the pencil factory to get the $1.20 due her for the short time she had worked that week and then to witness the parade of the boys in gray.

She got a word of greeting from Conductor W. T. Hollis when she boarded the car on its run into town. Motorman W. M. Matthews, who many times before had brought the little girl from her home in Bellwood to work in Atlanta, also noticed her as he slowed down to take her — at the crossing.

Conductor Hollis says that the car arrived at Broad and Marietta streets at 12:07 o'clock. He was relieved there by another conductor and knows only that Mary stayed on the car. Motorman Matthews says that she left at Broad and Hunter and started toward the factory. Some time between 12:10 and 12:15 Mary Phagan entered the doors of the National Pencil Factory and went to the office of Leo Frank, where she drew her pay. She never was seen alive after that moment except by the brute that attacked her, beat her cruelly and completed his demoniac crime by looping a cord about the tender flesh of her neck and strangling her to death.

No One Saw Her Alive Again.

From the moment that the little factory girl entered the office of Frank the mystery dated.

Whether she never left the presence of the young superintendent alive, the public does not know.

Whether she started down the stairs and there was attacked by a negro fiend lurking in the darkness, later paying out the toll of her young life to the fury of his bestiality, also is shrouded in a mystery as yet undispelled by the searching investigation of three months.

Many pieces of evidence point to the latter surmise, but no one, so far as is known, is able to say with certainty that this is so, save possibly Jim Conley himself.

Conley and Frank, by their own admissions, were in the factory when Mary Phagan entered. Frank told freely of his presence there. Conley's confession was wrung from him after three weeks in a cell at the police station.

Upstairs on the fourth floor were Harry Denham and Arthur White. Mrs. White visited the factory to see her husband. She left shortly before 1 o'clock, when Frank came to the fourth floor to tell the men that if they wished to remain they would have to stay until about 3 o'clock, as he was going home for lunch and would lock them in.

Frank Alone in Factory.

They stayed in the factory and Frank departed within a few minutes. Shortly before 3 o'clock he returned and the men came downstairs and left, after White had gone into Frank's office to borrow $2.

Frank was alone in the factory from this time until 4 o'clock. No one has any information as to when Conley left or how he left, except by his own statements. He says that he left shortly after 1 o'clock by the front door. If Frank's story of the time he quit the building is true, it is fairer to presume that the negro left some time after 1 o'clock and through the basement's rear door, which he forced open by pulling the staple.

Newt Lee, the negro night watchman, came to the factory at 4 o'clock. He unlocked the outside door and the door leading up to the second floor.

"All right, Mr. Frank," he shouted as he approached the superintendent's office.

Sent Negro Lee Away.

Frank appeared rubbing his hands and remarking that it was too bad Lee had come down at this time as he might as well have stayed at home and got more sleep. He told Lee he might go and return at 6 o'clock, the regular hour for reporting.

A few minutes after Lee came back to the factory, J. M. Gantt, a discharged employee, walked across the street and said he would like to go into the factory and get a pair of shoes he had left there three weeks before. Frank gave him permission, but seemed a little doubtful of Gantt's real purpose. After the factory superintendent had gone to his home, he called Lee up on the telephone and asked if Gantt were gone and everything was all right at the factory. Lee replied that Gantt had left as soon as he had obtained the shoes and called up a girl friend from the office.

Lee made his regular rounds for several hours that night, shutting down all the windows and making his trip over the different floors, as was his custom.

He climbed down the ladder into the basement to see if everything was all right down there. He went no farther, however, than the flickering gas light at the bottom of the ladder. Peering through the darkness, he saw nothing out of the way.

Second Trip to Basement.

That night was no different than any other night up until shortly before 3 o'clock in the morning, if the negro's story is to be credited. At this time he made another trip into the basement.

Did he hear some sound that led him to go down the ladder and venture beyond the dim circle of light from the gas jet?

Was some other living being in the cellar when he clambered down the ladder?

He says not. With his dirty, smoky lantern he descended through the scuttle hole. This time he did not stop at the little area of light made by the gas jet. Swinging his lantern slowly back and forth in front of him, he made his way toward the rear of the basement. Near the boiler he stopped. After a few moments he looked about him.

What was that lying over there to his left on a pile of sawdust and other trash and dirt? Could it be that some of the rascally fellows in the plant were playing this ghoulish joke on him?

Tremblingly he held the lantern in front of him. The black man's eyes dilated with horror. There could be no mistake about it. His impulse was to flee, but he pulled himself together.

He started toward the dark, inert object lying there on the trash heap

Motorcyclist Hurt In Auto Collision

Dave Rudisall, of College Park, is in Grady Hospital with a broken leg as a result of a collision between his motorcycle and an automobile near Fort McPherson Monday afternoon.

The automobile was driven by Harry Manning, of East Point. His machine was uninjured and he carried Rudisall to the hospital.

6,500-Pound Cheese Made in New York

UTICA, N. Y., July 22.—The finishing touches on a cheese weighing 6,500 pounds, the largest cheese ever made in New York State, if not in the world, were put on to-day at the Gowdy factory in Martinsburg.

Two days' milk from two factories was required. The cheese will be exhibited at the State fair in Syracuse.

DEATH'S SHADOW CAST OVER HOUSE

Recess Taken Out of Respect to Speaker Burwell, Whose Sister Died Suddenly.

A shadow was thrown over the House Tuesday morning by the death of Speaker W. H. Burwell's sister, Miss Ruth Burwell. Out of respect to the Speaker the House recessed for two hours after adopting resolutions expressing sympathy for the bereaved member.

Miss Burwell died Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Brooks, in Griffin, where she was visiting. While she had not been well for some time, her death was unexpected. Mr. Burwell spent Sunday with her and she appeared to be much improved.

Miss Burwell was well known throughout the State, being a woman of unusual brilliance. Her home was in Albany, where she was dearly beloved. She was 35 years of age.

Second Among Members' Family.

Her death is the second to occur among the families of House members during this session. Chairman L. R. Akin, of the Ways and Means Committee, suffered the loss of a daughter two weeks ago.

Adjournment for the entire day would have been taken Tuesday but for the fact that a joint meeting of the Senate and House had been arranged for the canvassing of the vote for United States Senator July 15, in which Senator Bacon was the only candidate.

In future the House will get down to work early, adopting a resolution Tuesday morning setting the hour of convening at 9 o'clock for the remaining 23 days of the session. The regular hour of adjournment, 1 o'clock, will continue.

House Faces Three Busy Weeks.

With virtually every committee meeting daily, the members of the House are facing three strenuous weeks. The local bills have been disposed of in wholesale quantities and but a small number remain before the House. The calendar is rapidly getting down to a general bill basis and scant attention will be paid to local ones in the future.

The recess prevented the taking up of the general appropriations bill which Chairman Wheatley, of the Appropriations Committee, had announced he would call for to-day, and it probably will be taken up Wednesday. The appropriation bill takes precedent over all other bills.

TRUE LOVE JOLTED IN ARSON HEARING

Boarder Adores Landlady, but She Has Him Bound Over as a Firebug.

Confessions of love requited were made and repudiated in Judge Broyles' court Tuesday when the trial of G. A. Vaughn on the charge of arson made by Mrs. A. C. Klapper following the burning of her home at No. 256 East Hunter street last Friday was heard.

Vaughn was bound over to a higher court under bond of $3,000, but not before he had emptied his heart of all its feeling for his accuser and declared that his love had not been spurned by her.

"Why she placed her arms about me and kissed me tenderly the morning of the fire," Vaughn, who was a boarder at Mrs. Klapper' home, declared. "And now she charges me with arson. It can not be true."

By this statement, Mrs. Klapper, who is past middle age, was considerably ruffled.

"I never did kiss him," she exclaimed. "On one time he gave me $30 when I was sick to pay doctors' bills, and when I bought a coat with the money he got mad and said he would burn it up. And he did, and my house, too."

The fire was discovered in a closet in Vaughn's room on the top floor shortly after he had departed for downtown. Miss Bonnie Burns, another boarder, testified at the trial that Vaughn, in leaving the house had looked up at the roof. Miss Burns' testimony proved the strongest against Vaughn.

LOBBY LETTERS A BONANZA FOR FOES OF T. R.

Mulhall Quiz Takes on New Political Importance, as Colonel is Involved Deeper.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—With the statement of Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, that he drafted a drastic report in 1909 against an amendment of the Sherman anti-trust act for the secret purpose of upsetting President Roosevelt's whispered plan to so amend the law that railroads would be immune, the Overman Lobby Inquiry Committee took on new political importance to-day.

There are frequent references to Roosevelt in the Mulhall letters. In practically every instance these references are unfavorable. As long as Roosevelt is a political figure the Mulhall letters will be a mine from which the opponents may dig up sinister information.

The committee to-day continued reading letters in which Mulhall related to Secretary Schwedtman's canvass of members with respect to a tariff commission convention to be held in 1909 in Indianapolis. Mulhall saw practically every member of Congress. From many of them he could obtain no expression of their attitude toward a tariff commission, and very few of them had time or inclination to attend the Indianapolis convention, which was being engineered by the National Association of Manufacturers.

Suggesting that the lobby investigation is drifting away from its original purpose and has assumed a political cast, Colonel Mulhall asked permission to employ counsel. The committee acceded, although later Senator Reed protested.

One of the Mulhall letters to-day threw light on the fight made in the winter of 1909 to make Senator Philander C. Knox eligible to be Secretary of State. James E. Watson was to have gone to Indianapolis to attend the tariff commission sitting, but he was unable to go because Speaker Cannon and Vice President Sherman demanded that he remain here until the Knox bill was passed.

Knox's ineligibility grew out of the fact that he voted while a member of the Senate to increase the salary of the Secretary of State.

Goes for Five Beers; Quarter Gets Barrel

ST. LOUIS, July 22.—William Tipton, a laborer employed in the excavation work for a new city jail, found a quarter while digging in the rear of the Municipal Courts Building yesterday.

He immediately invited his nearest fellow worker to step across the street and help consume the five "big beers" the coin would buy. It bore the date 1805.

"Will you take enough to buy a barrel of beer for that quarter?" the bystander asked.

"Sure thing," was Tipton's reply. The stranger handed him $6.50 and pocketed the quarter.

Church Is Freed of 'Blind Tiger' Charge

MILWAUKEE, July 22.—Attorneys for the 800 members of St. Joseph's Polish Catholic Church, charged with selling liquor at a picnic, pleaded nolle contendere in police court.

The court dismissed the charges against the congregation and officers of the church upon payment of the costs by the defendants.

'Make-Up' Stone Is Editor's Monument; Bears Epitaph Poem

JEFFERSON, OHIO, July 22.—One of the most remarkable gravestones on record was placed in the cemetery here to-day.

It stands at the head of the grave of J. A. Howells, veteran editor of The Ashtabula Sentinel, who died here recently. It consists of the "make-up" stone used by Mr. Howels for fifty years, during his successive evolutions as printer's devil, printer and editor. It is inscribed with these lines, written by William Dean Howells, a brother of the editor:

Stone, upon which with hands of boy and man,
He framed the history of his time until,
Week after week, the varying record ran,
To its half-centuried tale of well and ill.
Remember now how true through all those days
He was—friend, brother, husband, son—
Fill the whole limit of your space with praise,
There needs no room for blame—blame there was none.

The boyhood of William Dean Howells was spent in the office of The Sentinel. The father of William Dean Howells and J. A. Howells was editor of the paper.

Anniston Not Shocked By 'September Morn'

ANNISTON, July 22.—There is no prudery on the part of the powers that be in Anniston. They believe in real art, even without draperies, and Miss "September Morn" is being allowed to take her dip undisturbed.

Mayor Wikle says he will not order the picture removed.

TARIFF BILL AIDS 'BEEF BARONS,' SAYS SMOOT

Declares Free Importation of Meats and Cattle Will Throttle Competition.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—When the Senate met to-day the tariff debate was resumed, and Senator Smoot, of Utah, completed the address he began yesterday. He attacked first the action of the Democrats in placing meats, cattle, hides, wool, etc., on the free list, declaring that such action is only playing into the hands of the "beef barons" and throttling competition.

The importation of meats and cattle free of duty, he said, will give a tremendous advantage to Canada, Mexico and Argentina at the expense of the American farmer.

Senator Smoot argued that the chief advocates of the low rates of tariff, both before the House and the Senate, have been the importers. Of reduced duties upon automobiles, Senator Smoot said:

"Just why the European manufacturers should have any consideration in fixing this or any other duty is beyond the comprehension of any fair-minded American citizen. But they figure very extensively in this fixing of the rates on automobiles, occupying many pages of the hearings, and filing threats which, if made elsewhere by Americans, would be considered insolent."

Gave More Than Asked.

He added that the Italian Chamber of Commerce in New York had asked merely for a reduction of 5 per cent on automobiles, but that the Democrats had conceded 15 per cent.

In the cotton schedule, Senator Smoot insisted that the Northern manufacturers had been discriminated against and the Southern producers had been favored. The Northern manufacturers make the finer grades of goods, he said. He declared that American mill workers must compete with the cheap Asiatic labor of Japan in manufacturing cotton goods.

Says Trusts Won't Suffer.

American clock and watch manufacturers, manufacturers of window glass, of pottery and of gloves, all are treated harshly by the proposed law, said Senator Smoot. The action of the Democrats, he said, meant the loss of work to thousands employed at present in these industries.

"The first industries to suffer from this bill will not be the great trusts, but the independent manufacturers having small capital and making goods requiring the highest type of workmanship," he said.

BRIDE TELLS HOW TO MANAGE A HUSBAND

Mrs. Frank Winecoff, who Gives Atlanta Wives Some Interesting Advice.

If a Husband's Worth Having He's Worth Keeping, She Says.

"Alaways Keep Him Guessing Just a Little," Advises Mrs. Frank Wyncoff.

"I believe a woman should make a study of her husband—always—if she expects to realize a happy and ideal marriage."

That is Mrs. Frank Winecoff's idea of how to be happy though married. Mrs. Winecoff, who was Miss Bess Wall before her recent marriage, is the wife of Frank Wyncoff, the well-known real estate operator.

"A wife is supposed to be a helpmate," continued Mrs. Winecoff, with a bewitching smile, "and what is a helpmate but a person to help solve and cope with difficulties? And how can a wife help her husband if she does not understand and feel in perfect sympathy with him? If husband and wife start out by being frank and confidential with each other, there is little chance of their matrimonial craft being wrecked on the shoals of divorce.

"I believe a wife should be a companion and a chum to her husband. And she should always try to be different, and not fall into a rut. Flirt with him—don't let him think he knows you absolutely, and always keep him guesing a little. But be a chum to him, and make him know that he is the only man in the world.

"At meal time I think a wife should be bright and attractive, telling her husband cheerful, pleasant things.

Avoid petty neighborhood gossip—no woman can be a good wife and a neighborhood gossip at the same time. And a man don't want to hear gossip on coming home from his office.

"It requires art to manage a husband, but if one is worth having, he is worth keeping. So study him, and what will charm and attract him, and one's married life will be harmonious, and not a series of wrangles."

T. R. Escapes Asking Hunting Permit by Killing Outlaw Game

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Officials of the forestry division of the Department of Agriculture to-day declared that Theodore Roosevelt has not been granted a permit to hunt for protected game in the Grand Canyon forest reserve, nor has he requested one, but that he is aiding Jim Owens to kill off predatory animals, such as mountain lions, coyotes and wildcats.

Jim Owens is a civil service employee of the Government, and is paid $1,400 a year to kill predatory animals. He has his own pack of hounds, a string of horses and a pack outfit.

Forestry officials have not been formally notified that Roosevelt is hunting in the Grand Canyon preserves.

BLUE LAWS TOO DRASTIC.

GADSDEN, July 22.—People of Attalla have petitioned the Mayor and Council of that city to be more lenient in the enforcement of the blue laws. Recently all soft drink stands were closed on Sunday and people claim they suffered intensely, because of inability to get cold drinks.

VATICAN GUARDS RIOT; MENACE POPE PIUS

Mutinous Swiss Soldiers Threaten to Break Into Private Chamber of Pontiff.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, July 22.—After 24 hours of wild rioting by the Pope's Swiss guards, during which the men were shorn of their military powers at the Vatican, order was restored to-day.

The demands of the soldiers, which caused the mutiny, will not be granted. The soldiers had asked concessions raising the embargo against them visiting wine shops and other stores along the Tiber; the right to choose their own commander; the increase of the guards' quota, and a demand that no punishment be meted out to them for their mutinous conduct.

The guards, incensed at the official order depriving them of their military status, stormed the Vatican, and for a time it was feared that the Italian troops quartered in the city would have to be called out to quell the disturbance.

Great alarm was felt among the Vatican officials for fear that the soldiers would force their way into the Pope's private chambers.

Drastic measures were taken to guard His Holiness from the angry soldiers, as grave fears were entertained that the Pontiff, still weakened from the effects of his recent illness, would suffer a relapse should the soldiers force their way into his presence.

LEADERS AGREE TO PUSH BIG FUNDS BILL

Decks Cleared in House and Appriation Measure Will Go to Senate This Week.

When Chairman Wheatley, of the House Appropriations Committee, calls up the general appropriations bill Wednehday he will ask that it be made a continuing order until it is disposed of in the House and sent to the Senate.

The chairman of the Appropriations Committee has the extraordinary right under the rules of the House of calling up his bill whenever he pleases, and it must have the right of way.

Chairman Wheatley has determined to exercise his right to the limit, and to that end has invited and obtained the promise of Speaker Burwell's earnest and sincere support in putting the bill through.

Trying to Push It Along.

It is the purpose of Chairman Wheatley and the Speaker to have the general appropriations bill in the hands of the Senate at least by the end of this week, and if they succeed they will have the bill in the Senate earlier than it has been since the war, and at least ten days earlier than it has been in thirty years.

When the big bill comes up the House will immediately be resolved in a committee of the whole House, with some member other than the Speaker presiding, as the rules require.

The chairman of the Committee of the Whole House has not yet been announced, but it is likely it will be Mr. McMichael, of Marion, or Mr. Miller, of Bibb.

Both are experienced parliamentarians and either would make a fit and proper person for the work. Both are behind the effort to get the appropriation bill into the hands of the Governor well in advance of adjournment, as the Governor has requested.

General Tax Act Next.

The bill carries the constitutional appropriations, statehouse salaries, and the like, which can not be changed by the House, in full, and these items will be quickly disposed of.

The other items will go in in blank, to be filled in by the committee of the whole.

Immediately after the general appropriations bill is disposed of the tax revision bill and the general tax act will come into the House from the Ways and Means Committee, when, at the request of Chairman Aiken, those bills also will be given the right of way. Both should be in the hands of the Senate before the end of next week.

Speed Assured in Senate.

If this is accomplished, another House record will be smashed.

The chairmen of the two big committees and the Speaker of the House have been assured by a large majority of the House that they will be co-operated with in their efforts to expedite legislation.

In the Senate President Anderson is but waiting for the House measures in order that he may duplicate there the program of orderly haste to be enacted in the House. He has assurance of co-operation from a practically solid Senate.

Big Damages Asked In Macon Depot Case

MACON, July 22.—The special committees appointed to ascertain the amounts of damages claimed by property owners on Cherry street on account of the closing of the thoroughfare for the building of a union station have submitted their report to the Railroad Commission.

The report shows that the property owners want exceedingly large damages, and that it will take either arbitration or court suits to settle most of the claims.

Chamberlain Decides Not to Oppose Tariff

WASHINGTON, July 22.—That Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, a Democrat, does not intend to vote against the tariff bill because it carries free raw wool and other items objectionable to the West became apparent to-day.

An examination of the Congressional Record shows that the remark he made in the Senate yesterday that he would not support the bill has been revised out of the official record.

$500,000 Fine Paid Texas by Oil Trust

GREENEVILLE, TEXAS, July 22.—A penalty of $500,00 was paid to-day to the State of Texas by the Magnolia Petroleum Company of Texas under a verdict by which H. C. Folger, Jr., and John D. Archbold submitted to a ruling that they release 21,596 shares of stock in the company to a trustee.

Instructions to pay the penalty were received by officers of the Magnolia Company from the offices of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Orators within and without the General Assembly, particularly those given to loquacity and frequency of effect, sometimes being more or less hard up for something to say upon the spur of the moment—whatever that is—now and then jump a-straddle of the Grand Old Legislature's grand old neck and dance a hornpipe thereupon!

Always the liviest tune to dance by concerns the Legislature's "do-nothing" inclination, and its proneness to move at a snail's pace. Particularly is this the case when the orator immediately on the job is "a-gin the government, anyway."

An attack upon the present Legislature that it is too slow may be justified. Maybe it is slow—slower than it ought to be. Maybe legislatures ought to do everything right off the reel, and debate the matter afterward, if time holds out. Maybe a lot of things—but the only way to judge one legislature as to its efficiency is by past legislatures; and in the matter of slowness, laziness, pokeasyness, or generel cussedness, the present Legislature is entitled to be judged, perhaps.

The following things are true, as the records will show: Never before within the service of any member of the present General Assembly has a general appropriations bill been reported to the House for action so early as on the twenty-sixth day of its sitting.

And yet, this Legislature, under the direction of the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, will take up that very bill in the whole House to-day—the twenty-sixth day of its sitting!

The general tax act will be ready for the House before Saturday night—at least ten days earlier than any general tax act has been reported within a decade or more.

The various committees have reported more than 100 bills adversely, and easily as many more favorably. This was made possible by reason of the fact that the committees of both the House and the Senate were appointed this year two days earlier than ever before in thirty years.

In one recent Legislature, the Senate had the general tax act exactly FOUR days—this year it will have some fifteen days before adjournment. It is a well-known parliamentary fact, too, that both these bills have the right of way over all other bills at all times.

It undoubtedly is true that any Legislature would be able to travel much faster than it does were it not for the fact that local bills require almost as elaborate handling as general bills, and a reform in this matter has been urged for years. But since that reform never has been effected, it hardly seems fair to charge the present Legislature with giving to these bills more than the time absolutely necessary to their passage.

And so, while it may be true that the present Legislature is no faster than it should be, it is just as well to remember that the Legislature machine is of an old model, and therefore much out of date, and can not run any faster than it can!

When the State takes the speed limit off its Legislature, it naturally will have to provide a machine capable of making at least a little bit better time than the speed limit, or nothing will happen by way of reform.

The present Legislature may not be a wonder of wonders, but it really is moving along FASTER than usual—and that is the honest truth of it!

Mr. Payton, of Worth, the handsomest man in the last House, and one of the handsomest men in any House, looked in on the General Assembly to-day to see if it was moving along to suit him.

Mr. Payton gave it as his opinion that the present House is all right, so far as he could see, albeit he neglected to bring his eyeglasses along, and wasn't committing himself finally.

"I enjoyed my brief Legislative career," said Mr. Payton, "and made many lasting friendships while it continued. I take great interest in the work of the present House, and believe it will enact some wholesome legislation. I believe it wants to do the right thing, at least. I have met many new members, and the average seems to run rather high. In many ways, however, being a member of the Legislature is more or less a thankless job, and it often happens that the best and most sincere workers fail to get the credit they really are entitled to."

"Uncle Billy" Wilson, of Gwinette, another veteran of the last House, and the prize humorist therein, was talking it over with his former colleagues to-day.

"Uncle Billy" declines and refuses to get excited about anything, and always takes life as easy as he knows how. He does not look upon a Legislator's job as one removing him very far from the ranks of just ordinary folks, and therefore he never takes himself too seriously.

"I love all the boys, and in the main they are good boys," said "Uncle Billy." "If they make mistakes, they generally are mistakes of the head and not of the heart!"

Louis E. Wisdom, of Forsyth, who is altogether 22 years of age but not much more, notwithstanding the fact that he looks every day of 17, had trouble with a new doorkeeper in the House of Representatives the other day.

Wisdom didn't know there was a new doorkeeper on the job until, accompanied by two friends of the female persuasion, he approached the door during a session for admittance.

"Hey, you, kiddo!" stage-whispered the doorkeeper, "you can't get in here!"

"The h—um—deuce, I can't!" said Wisdom, in a loud and commanding tone of voice. "I'm a member of the House!"

"Run along, buddy, and let your pipe go out—you can't put that over me! If you had claimed to be a page, all right, I might have fallen for it, but a person must be at least twenty-one to get in here as a member!" replied the doorkeeper, as he pushed Wisdom gently back.

Then Wisdom quit arguing, and went around to another door with his lady friends, where he stood in with the doorkeeper, and everything was all right.

When the new doorkeeper found out what he had done, he was much chagrined and attempted to apologize to Wisdom, but Wisdom is a good little fellow and wouldn't stand for any apologies. He admitted that he hardly looked the part of a mature and experienced statesman, anyway, and said he could and did understand the situation.

If it just hadn't been for the ladies—!

General West Gets Gettysburg Medal

A silver medal bearing the inscription "1863-1913, Fiftieth Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg," the gift of Governor Tener of Pennsylvania, has been received by General A. J. West, the Georgia Gettysburg Commissioner.

Accompanying the beautiful gift was a letter from Governor Tener in which he expresses his sincere appreciation for the active interest of General West in the celebration.

The medal has the kneeling figures of two veterans, blue and gray, on one side and on the reverse side two hands tightly clasped.

LAGRANGE GREETS WEEKLY EDITORS

Largest Attendance in 27 Years at Annual Georgia Press Convention.

LAGRANGE, July 22.—With 75 more delegates attending than at any previous convention, the twenty-seventh annual session of the Georgia Weekly Press Association opened here this morning. The delegates number 250 and represent 150 papers.

The convention assembled in the Troup County courthouse. After a solo by Miss Ruth Oppenheim, of Atlanta, and the invocation by the Rev. E. B. Vaughn, pastor of the First Baptist Church, LaGrange, Mayor John M. Edmondson and President W. A. Reeves, of the LaGrange Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the visitors. W. S. Coleman, of The Cedartown Standard, responded. Mrs. John N. Holder read a paper prepared by her husband, editor of The Jackson Herald, who was unable to attend. The theme was "The Influence of the Georgia Press on the Government of the State."

At 11:50 o'clock the convention delegates left for West Point, where a big barbecue was tendered this afternoon, followed by a reception at the home of W. Trox Bankston, editor of The West Point News. They return to LaGrange this afternoon.

300 Pellagra Cases In Flooded Counties

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—The State Board of Health to-day issued a report declaring that more than 300 cases of pellagra have been discovered in Mississippi counties that were overflowed during the spring floods.

In Washington County 125 cases were reported.

MAYOR BALKS AT DICTOGRAPH CHECK

Refuses to Sign $19 Voucher for Use of Very Machine That Trapped Him.

Mayor Woodward again is refusing to sign checks.

From the Police Department has come a voucher for $19 to pay the expense of the very dictograph that entrapped Mayor Woodward, Colonel T. B. Felder and others in the Williams House No. 2. Chairman A. R. Colcord, of the Council Police Committee, hesitated at approving this voucher and Mayor Woodward scoffs at the idea of him signing the check.

Also, he explained, he is not inclined to throw away $5 on an option on an electric feature to the new crematory. He sent the resolution providing this back to Council without acting on it. The lower branch of Council passed it up again by a vote of 15 to 2.

Although Council easily overrode Mayor Woodward the thirty-third time on the tax office merger issue the bill must be passed by the Legislature to become effective. It will have to be attached as a rider to the other charter amendments and then submitted to a vote of the people along with the other amendments.

MEN AND RELIGION BULLETIN NO. 65

CHAINGANGS IN GEORGIA

Breaking Rocks, Breaking Men, and a Death in Camp

Last Thursday night a man slept chained to others.

Doubtless the drag of the shackle on his leg disturbed his rest.

In the cool of Friday morning he shuffled out of the convict camp.

Linked with clinking steel to others, he came through the woods to the rock quarry.

The guard unlocked the gang chain.

The man scrambled down into the pit.

Work started.

The sun mounted higher.

Its beams sought and found the laborers.

Men began to feel it as they toiled.

Twelve pounds is the weight of the ordinary quarry hammer.

Theirs weigh forty-nine pounds in this quarry.

One, buying them for the county, said:

"Strength is not required to crush stone with these. They come down of their own weight. THE ROCK BREAKS."

YES, AND SO DO MEN!

Forty-nine pounds to the hammer!

You could scarcely raise one.

Consider, then, what you do when you force the man to do that which you could not endure—

Lifting this hammer—crushing stone with it when the thermometer registers nearly one hundred degrees!

And doing this at the bottom of a funnel-shaped pit of stone into which the sun's rays pour and beat, enveloping in wave on wave of agonizing heat the suffering striped and shackled working men!

Friday each minute the heat grew worse.

The atmosphere quivered with it.

The quarry became a pit of torment.

From its depths, to his keeper, the man cried:

"I am sick."

The guard replied:

"You didn't say so this morning."

Later the man fell fainting at his work.

Stripe-clad, shackled men lifted him tenderly.

They carried him out.

Through the woods a jolting springless wagon bore the dying man to the convict camp, where he died.

The man had not been condemned to death.

He was only a misdemeanor convict.

The utmost punishment provided by your law for him was twelve months in the chaingang, six months in jail and a fine of one thousand dollars.

And you had no wish to kill him.

BUT THE MAN IS DEAD.

Across the ages rings the question of God:

"What mean you that you break my people to pieces, and grind the faces of the poor?"

Down the centuries comes the voice of Jesus, saying:

"Woe unto you, for you load men with burdens grievous to be borne and you yourself touch not the burden with one of your fingers."

Do not deny responsibility for the man's death.

Your laws—our laws—placed him in the convict camp.

Your servant, a public official, made him work the day he died.

He feared your lash—our lash.

God will require of you and of us his blood and the blood of others.

The Executive Committee of The Men and Religion Forward Movement

WANT AD RACE TO BEGIN ON THURSDAY

Contestants and Those Who Expect to Enter Must See Want Ad Man on Wednesday.

Well, we're ready to start. Are you?

The Want Ad Contest will begin Thursday morning. Long before noon the doorbells will begin to tinkle and housewives will be saying to contestants:

"Why, yes; I do want something. I need a better washerwoman. You can print an advertisement for one, and here's the money. Oh, there's something else. Perhaps a want ad will help me sell my old piano. You can put that in, too."

There's no limit to the number of things a want ad will do to make housekeeping easier, to fill a need. Here are just a few of them:

Find a cook or housegirl.

Sell an automobile, furniture, eggs, flowers.

Rent a room, furnished or unfurnished.

Find an apartment just like you want.

Get you boarders or find you a boarding house.

Sell your house or vacant lot, or find the kind of home you wish to rent or purchase.

Sell that fancy poultry to eager purchasers.

Find a lost handbag, a strayed family pet.

Locate missing persons.

Find a position if you're out of a job.

Get an Early Start.

But if you don't get an early start you'll be handicapped. No use in letting other folks get ahead of you. There are many contestants entered and ready to work, but not so many that your chances will be hurt. Atlanta is a big city, and there is room for everybody to have a chance to win.

If you already have entered, come to see the Want Ad Man to-morrow (Wednesday) sure. If you haven't entered yet, clip out the nomination blank in the big advertisement in to-day's issue of this paper, have it filled out, and bring it to the Want Ad Man early Wednesday. He will tell you everything you wish to know, put you under the direction of a skilled and experienced district manager, and start you in the race for that automobile.

Prizes Worth While.

Look over the prizes in the advertisement to-day. An automobile, a piano, a trip to California, motorcycles, bicycles, watches, diamonds—something worth trying for. And the contest will not cost you a cent. There's no gamble in it, no guesswork—nothing but the use of brains and energy.

You'll find the Want Ad Man at 403 Foote & Davies Building, Edgewood avenue and North Pryor street. You'll be mighty glad you met him!

Mother Fights for Custody of Children

AUGUSTA, July 22.—Mrs. Mary W. Zachry, wife of Julian J. Zachry, a well-known attorney and business man of this city and Harlem, Ga., has appealed from the decision of the Ordinary, who awarded the custody of the Zachry children to the father. The case will be heard before Judge Hammond, of the Superior Court.

Zachry and his wife were married here about four years ago, a few weeks after his first wife died. The second Mrs. Zachry was his stenographer. Several months ago the couple separated after a rather stormy married life. The wife took the two children. Zachry sued out writs of habeas corpus and obtained possession of them.

Woman in Charge Of 1,000 Convicts

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—Mrs. O. M. Spickard, a frail middle-aged woman, to-day is in charge of the Mississippi State penitentiary. She exercises control over more than 1,000 prisoners, including more than 100 murderers and burglars. Governor Brewer to-day said he would appoint Mrs. Spickard to a position on the Prison Board.

Mrs. Spickard became secretary of the board when Lawrence Yerger was convicted in the wholesale prison graft trials recently, and became head of the prison system when President C. C. Smith was convicted and removed.

Anyone Seen Nogi? His Pal Is Grieving

"Nogi" is gone and now, after a futile search throughout the city, his little master gives up his quest heartbroken. Nogi is a fox terrier and pal of a little boy over on the South Side Last Wednesday he disappeared down Whitehall street and has not been found since.

A reward of $10 has been offered by Jack Roberts, of the Guthman Steam Laundry, and L. P. Hoppe, of the Southern Flour and Grain Company, for his recovery.

ATLANTA BALKS AT NOSE VEIL; MUST SEE ALL OF PRETTY FACE

Miss Nancy Reed, first girl to wear the nose veil here.

She says it will not do for Atlanta beauties at all.

Fair Sponsor of Arabian Style Admits New Fad Is Doomed Here.

At last Dame Fashion seems to have overstepped the line in freakish wearing apparel for women, so far as Atlanta is concerned.

The Arabian nose veil, an importation now much in vogue in Newport and other Eastern centers of all that is fashionable, has met a sharp rebuff here.

The veil in use is drawn taut over the tip of the nose and covers the mouth and chin. One sees but the eyes of the wearer. Mrs. French Vanderbilt, Mrs. William Goadby and others are its sponsors in the East.

Miss Nancy Reed, a former Atlanta girl, now visiting Mrs. George Spier in Twelfth street, is among the first here to attempt the nose veil.

"It won't do for Atlanta girls," she declared, and her decision seems to have been sustained, especially by the men of the city, who enjoy seeing all of a pretty face.

FATHER SHIELDS GIRL ARRESTED WITH DOCTOR

Grief of Forgiveness Displayed When Effie McCalmon Meets Parent and Brother.

The grief of forgiveness was pathetically displayed in Chief of Police Beavers' office Tuesday morning when Effie McCalmon, the country girl from near Carrollton, arrested Monday with Dr. M. W. Lewis, a prominent physician of that town, in a raid on the Scoville Hotel, met her father and brother, and begged to be taken home.

The girl's pathetic plight was more than the irate father and brother could endure. Simultaneously they clasped her in their arms. Then she was taken by them in an automobile to the station. The trio departed at 11 o'clock for home.

J. M. McCalmon, father of the girl, a prominent planter, and his son Emory, ticket agent at Bowden Junction, both told Chief Beavers they would return when the physician's case comes up to prosecute Lewis to the full extent of the law. They also declared they would bring the girl back to Atlanta and let her tell her story to the court.

"This man has cast shame on my home which can never be forgotten," declared the father. "He has blighted my daughter's future. Restitution by punishment of the law is a poor substitute, but I will have it."

Lewis was released Monday night, after he had secured the $1,000 bond under which he was bound over by Judge Broyles during the afternoon. Immediately afterward he disappeared.

Lewis and the girl were registered at the hotel as man and wife.

AGED ATHENS WOMAN DEAD.

ATHENS.—Mrs. Sarah Brandt, widow of Rudolph Brandt, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Koch. She was 74 years old and is survived by three sons, Rudolph and Charles Brandt, of Athens, and J. E. Brandt, of Ilion, N. Y., and her daughter, Mrs. Koch.

Photographers of U. S. May Come to Atlanta Next Year

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 22.—With a dozen boosters putting forth the brand of effort that captured the big Shriners' convention, Atlanta's chances of getting the next gathering of the Photographers' Association of America, now in session here, are growing better every hour.

The Atlantans have opened an office in the convention hall and a display in the lobby of the Hotel Baltimore, where the delegates are entertained and provided with literature descriptive of the Gate City. There are about 800 delegates here now, with several hundred more coming.

Harry Goodhart, L. D. Hicks and Fred Houser, who head the Atlanta delegation, are confident that the Georgia city will secure the next convention.

Mr. Goodhart declared this morning that "there is nothing to it but Atlanta. I have talked to several hundred delegates and they all want to come to the 'New York of the South.'"

Mississippi Tries to Break Rail Merger

CLARKSDALE, MISS., July 22.—Suits are prepared for filing to-day against the Illinois Central and Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroads, demanding penalties of nearly $50,000,000 and a dissolution of an alleged unlawful merger.

Infractions of the State anti-trust laws, charged by Attorney General Ross A. Collins, were given as reasons for ousting the Illinois Central from the State, and taking the charter from the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley.

Electric Vote Device Planned for House

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The House Rules Committee to-day began an investigation of the feasibility of installing an electrical voting system in the House to avoid the long delays consequent upon the calling of the roll by the reading clerk.

Representative Walsh, of New Jersey, appeared before the committee to explain an electric system of voting he has proposed.

DIXIE IS DELUGED BY PROSPERITY, SAYS HARDY

Retailers' President Declares Business Is Better and Georgia Is Forging Into Lead.

"Dixie is bubbling over with prosperity."

That is the characteristic way in which J. W. S. Hardy, of Waycross, president of the Retail Merchants' Association, defined commercial conditions in the South when seen by The Georgian at the association's convention headquarters in the Hotel Ansley.

"But we can better the present condition and our merchants in all parts of Georgia have come to the realization that by individual effort and plugging in the right direction we can make Georgia the foremost State in the Union," declared Mr. Hardy.

"To this end the convention was called," said Mr. Hardy, "to meet in Atlanta while the Legislature is in session, so that merchants can be in close touch with their Representatives and exercise every influence in their power to get them to support and vote for the garnishment and fraudulent check bills.

"This is a business meeting of business men, and in no sense is it for the purpose of boosting Atlanta interests. Its only purpose is to work for the best interests of the merchants of Georgia.

"We are in an era of good business that is unrivaled. Competition is keen, but it is also true that competition is the life of trade and progress.

"From all parts of the State come encouraging assertions that this year has been a little better than last. Even a little is better than no increase at all. But I am inclined to believe that business this year is infinitely more than a little better than last in all lines."

General Harris to Inspect Second at St. Simons Friday

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 22.—The Second Georgia Regiment is making extensive preparations for the visit to camp of Brigadier General Walter A. Harris and staff on Friday, when a special dress parade will be held in his honor.

The big battle of the maneuvers was fought this morning, the men having to cut their way with bayonets through the matted underbrush of a swamp to get to the firing lines, but, according to the instructors, they did it like veterans. More "casualties" were caused by the barbed points of sandspurs than by the enemy.

Rain fell yesterday for the first time and the men were compelled to drill in ponchos. Forsyth defeated Columbus in a ball game, 14 to 4. To-day's officer of the day was Captain John T. Aycock, and the officer of the guard Lieutenant H. A. Dickens, both of Monroe.

Mrs. Rufus J. Woodstock, of Asheville, N. C., who has been tendered a series of parties as the guest of Miss Lillian Logan, was the honor guest at an informal bridge party Tuesday morning, given by Mrs. Robert K. Rambo.

Old-fashioned garden flowers, zinnias, crepe myrtle, and althea formed the decorations throughout Mrs. Rambo's home, and pretty fans were given for top score, for consolation and for the honor guest. A dainty luncheon was served on the card tables at the close of the game.

Mrs. Rambo wore a morning gown of pink linen. Invited to meet Mrs. Woodstock were Mrs. Charles Shelton, Mrs. Linton Baker, of Augusta; Mrs. Julian Prade, Mrs. Robert McCord, Mrs. Albert Herring, of Mississippi; Mrs. Robert Burgess, Mrs. John Charles Wheatley, Mrs. H. B. Odell, Mrs. George K. Selden, Mrs. Blair Armstrong and Miss Lillian Logan.

Mrs. Cutter Hostess.

Mrs. Harry Stotesbury Cutter gave an informal bridge party Tuesday afternoon in compliment to Miss Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, the guest of Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, and for Miss Fannie Neal Anderson, of Athens, who is with her cousin, Miss Margaret Ashford.

The house was tastefully decorated with nasturtiums and potted flowers. The prizes were a pearl bar pin for high score. To the honor guests were given books.

Mrs. Cutter wore pink charmeuse draped with crepe.

The party included Misses Willie Loyless, Grace Thorn, Elizabeth Parker, Helen Thorn, Ethel Tutwiler, Mrs. Victor R. Smith, Mrs. Edward Malone, Mrs. Berrien Moore, Mrs. Carter Colquitt Cole, Mrs. Wilson Runette, Mrs. Robert Hopkins, Mrs. Clarence Angier, Mrs. Howard Parker and Mrs. J. P. B. Allan.

Children's Party.

Mrs. Robert Foreman was hostess at a children's party Tuesday afternoon, when 24 little guests were entertained. Miss Betty Pou, of Columbus, the guest of Mrs. Dozier Pou, and Miss Louise Martin, of Augusta, the guest of Mrs. Albert Howell, were the guests of honor. The feature of the afternoon was the reading of a number of stories of adventure and of Indian legends by Mrs. Charles Goodman. Later refreshments were served. The decorations were of garden flowers.

Mrs. Ayer Hostess.

Mrs. C. K. Ayer entertained at an informal bridge party Saturday evening in compliment to her guest, Miss Ethel Tye Wright, of McDonough, and Mrs. Robert Barnwell, a bride.

The house was decorated with garden flowers. The prizes were won by Mrs. Laura Cawthorne and Mr. J. W. White.

Mrs. J. W. White entertained at tea Monday afternoon at the Piedmont Club for Mrs. Ayer's guests.

Dance at Crystal Palace.

The young men of the Tech Summer School will give a subscription dance Friday evening at the Crystal Palace, inviting a number of young women to be their guests.

Miss Walker Hostess.

Miss Eloise Walker gave a matinee party at the Forsyth Tuesday afternoon for Miss Clio Carmichael, of Jackson, who is visiting Miss Margaret Rushton at the home of her sister, Mrs. Clyde King, in Ponce DeLeon avenue.

The party included Misses Clio Carmichael, Margaret Rushton, Evelyn Ragland and Cullen Battle.

After the matinee the party had tea at Hotel Ansley.

For Miss Carmichael.

Miss Clio Carmichael, of Jackson, is being entertained as the guest of Miss Margaret Rushton.

Tuesday afternoon Miss Eloise Walker gave a box party in her honor. Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Clyde King will entertain at an afternoon tea for Miss Rushton and her guest.

Mrs. Graham Williams will give a bridge party Thursday morning at her home on Tenth street.

Miss Marian Fielder has invited a number of her friends to meet Miss Carmichael at a bridge party Friday morning, and in the afternoon Mrs. John Ray Pattillo will give a bridge party.

For Miss Julia Black.

Mrs. Eugene Black entertained 30 children Tuesday afternoon at her home on Peachtree road, in honor of her little daughter, Julia.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Forsyth Bill High Class.

First nighters at the Forsyth Monday evening were given a real thrill by the aquatic feats of John F. Conroy and his two diving girls. The act is exceptionally good and the scenery is striking.

The remainder of the bill is excellent. In Diero is the masterhand of the piano-accordion. From the classic music to ragtime the musician is a wonder. He was repeatedly recalled for encores. A trio of comedians that handed over some very funny stuff included Smith Cook and Marie Brandon. Lester is an entertaining ventriloquist. Another big drawing card, especially for the children, was Jack Auger, "Jack the Giant Killer." The BeAnos, a novelty gymnastic act, opened the bill. Shriner and Richards, in songs and dances, were good.

"Les Miserables" a Hit.

In the pictured dramatization of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," playing this week at the Grand Theater, Atlanta is offered another of the mammoth film productions like "Quo Vadis."

"Les Miserables" had its Atlanta premiere Monday night. In coloring the picture is perfect; however, its action in a few spots lags a bit, as though the producer leaned too much to detail to bring forth realism. However, the play does not lack tenseness and thrills. Prospective auditors are advised to arrive before the first flash on the screen, as the presentation of the escape from the prison, in the first film, is, without doubt, the cream of all that is exciting in the play.

In the cast of characters are seen some of France's most noted actors. The stage setting is minute and lavish to the last detail. Manager Cordoza is to be congratulated upon his battle with the heat. The Grand in hot weather is like an oasis in the desert.

'OLD HOSS' JUDGE SAYS PONIES ARE GREAT

Pick of Mountain Herd Ordered to Make Out Prizes for Georgian Contestants.

Telegrams Monday ordered John G. Mobley, of Winnsboro, S. C., to ship the thirteen ponies necessary to complete the herd of 22 which The Georgian and American will give away after the close of its contest, July 31.

Within a few days, the special car bringing the Shetlands should arrive. According to the expert who went to Winnsboro and picked them out, they are a feast for the eyes.

Mr. Mobley has a plantation of 1,400 acres. Of this area, 450 acres of wood lot are used as a pony farm. Just now, he has 100 head of ponies, which have been roaming the woods and the rich pasture, and, these hot days, seeking the shady tangles.

The Georgian and American were offered their pick of the entire five-score ponies. Twenty negroes, mounted on mules, started at 8 o'clock in the morning to round them up. By 1 o'clock they had the 100 little fellows on the summit of a hill where Mr. Mobley is accustomed to give them salt. From this knoll they were driven to the pens, and the best fifteen were selected. All are sound, gentle, affectionate and well trained. They vary sufficiently in markings, colors and size to please all tastes. Perhaps the pick of the bunch is "Flash," who looks like a race horse, and is as fast as his name.

Every one of the ponies is worth well above $100, and with each goes a guarantee of good health and freedom from blemish.

If the boys and girls are enthusiastic about the ponies already in Atlanta, they will be wildly excited over the newcomers, it is predicted, for they are believed to be, if anything, a little better than those first purchased.

Pastors to Speak at Hearing on Bible Bill

The hearing on the bill requiring the reading of the Bible in the public schools will be resumed before the Senate Education Committee Tuesday afternoon. Following the hearing the committee probably will agree whether to report favorably or unfavorably to the Senate Wednesday.

Among the speakers will be leading ministers of Atlanta in addition to members of the committee.

SUDDENLY BOTH HEARD THE SOUND OF MUFFLED FOOTSTEPS, AS IF SOME ONE WERE RUNNING ON HEAVY CARPET, AND THEY KNEW THERE WAS NO CARPET IN ALL THE VAST STONE HALLS. BEFORE THEY COULD ATTEMPT TO LOCATE THE SOUND THERE CAME TWO THUDS, ONE LIGHT AND ONE HEAVY, AS IF OF A BLOW AND A FALL, AND THEN A LOW HEART CHILLING MOAN THAT SEEMED TO COME NOT FROM ONE OF ALL THE HALLS, BUT ALL OF THEM. THIS WAS IMMEDIATELY ANSWERED BY A MOAN THAT CAME UNMISTAKABLY FROM RUSTY.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Moaning feebly, Rusty shook his gray head.

"I'se so scairt I don' remember nothin'."

"They're nothing but suits of armor. Stay on your pins and don't bump into me again. The next one of those rear-end collisions and I'm liable to let some moonlight into you. You've been treading on my heels every step I take and when I stop you bump into me."

"I'm powerful scairt I might lose you."

"A fine chance!" snorted his master. He swung the lantern about and peered into the corners of the apartment.

"Well, Rusty," he went on in his natural voice, "we've been through this old castle pretty thoroughly now from dungeon to tower, and not a sign of Duke or Prince or anyone else—unless they pound or carry a smoky lantern. It's a clew, Rusty; it's a clew. We'll stick right here till we find out where it leads. I'll swear the Duke never went to Madrid, but came right here from the inn. Get away from me, I tell you!"

A Little Cheer.

He struck a match and resumed his examination of the fireplace, holding the light well inside.

"There's a fine chance for a fire. The chimney's clear. Now then, but up that little table and start a fire. You won't feel half so scared when you've got a good blaze behind you."

By virtue of his great weight Rusty reduced the old table to firewood by the simple process of sitting on it. As he was building the fire, Jarvis suggested that he would scout around a bit.

"Don't you do no scoutin' outside of this here room!" ordered the old darky, straightening up. Jarvis laughed and told him to go on with the fire. He sat down on the stone floor and began removing his shoe with many groans.

"Now, what's the matter? What's wrong with your shoe?"

"'Tain't my shoe—it's my foot," grunted Rusty. "You know, when I was holdin' the hosses an' waitin' an' waitin' fer you to come out—dem guns went off and all dem hosses jumped right on me!"

"There were only two horses, Rusty," smiled the young man.

"I was countin' dey feet," grumbled the servant, as he bent over the fire once more. He had sufficiently recovered from his fright to be disgruntled and make pertinent addenda to his master's comments on the lay of the land.

"This way leads to the main gate," remarked Jarvis, thoughtfully, peering through the other door.

"That's where dat black thing followed me," grumbled Rusty. He appeared to locate every inch of the castle through its connection with some personal disaster.

The Death Trap.

"Well, there's been a black thing following me," retorted Jarvis, "treading on my heels every step I've taken. Hm! And that door goes to the armory."

"That's where I fell down dem slippery stairs."

Suddenly Jarvis stopped and stared intently into a far corner beyond the fireplace. There was a small door partly opened, as though some one had pulled it hastily behind him as he darted through.

"That's it!" he exclaimed, triumphantly, darting forward. "Where can that lead——"

His foot went down suddenly through the floor. He hurled himself forward and the floor seemed to rise and strike him violently in the chest. The next instant he rolled to one side and was on his feet.

"My God!" he muttered brokenly, the cold sweat bathing his face. "My God! That was a close one!"

"Lordy, Marse Warren—wha' dat?" cried Rusty, starting to his feet. Warren's lantern had been dashed against the wall and he stood in the uncertain firelight.

"Get back!" he ordered sharply. Light that other lantern."

Rusty cautiously approached with the lighted lantern. Warren took it in his left hand and held out his right.

"Take a good grip, Rusty. Can you hold me?"

"Yas, sah!" Rusty crouched back and set himself.

Jarvis cautiously stepped out with his left foot. A four-foot strip of the floor sank under the light weight and the other end of the trap, the end nearest the wall, rose. If he had been walking at an ordinary gait nothing could have saved him. The speed of his rush and his remarkable agility carried forward far enough for the weight of his upper body to strike the rising end of the trap and thus shut it again.

"God! I thought so!" he murmured as he stepped back after a timid peep into the black pit below. He wiped his face and his hand trembled slightly for the first time that night. "Water and a long drop! No wonder people disappear in this castle. Good Lord! What if her brother went down there! Rusty! Whatever happens, keep clear of this. If you step on this you'll never see Kentucky again for sure!"

Rusty opened his ample lips, but before the second speak a groan came from beyond the wall they were facing. It sounded nearer and more human than ever. But it trailed off into a sound like the winds among the empty echoing towers.

"It certainly sounded like a groan," muttered Jarvis, tip-toeing cautiously around the trap toward the little door. "Shut up, Rusty!"

The faithful but terrified servitor was giving vent to sounds more dreadful than those that issued from the walls.

"Marse Warren! look out!" he begged.

The Portrait.

"Listen!" He stood for a few moments in silence, peering in at a little flight of stone steps that led up through the wall. Then he turned back to the fireplace.

"I guess it's the wind. This place is getting on our nerves."

"This warn't no wind, Marse Warren," protested Rusty, solemnly. "Ah hope to die if dat warn't a sure-nuff groan. An' ah wants to tell you somethin' else." He turned and stared accusingly at a large portrait of some grandee of Charles V.'s time which hung beside the broad steps that mounted to the corridor of the armory. "Hab you ever been in church or somewhere an' all of a sudden a feelin' come over you that there was eyes starin' at the back o' your haid? You just knowed it?—until you couldn' stan' it no longer and just had to turn 'round and see who it was?"

"Why, yes, Rusty," agreed Jarvis wonderingly. "I've had that happen. Why?"

"That's just the way I feel now—like they was eyes lookin' at me. You see dat picture? Seems like dat feller was lookin' at me—like he'd step right out o' de frame; or dem two battleship boogies"—he pointed to the knights beside the staircase—"jump right down here!"

"It's been a good many hundred years since those boys jumped, Rusty," smiled his master. Sh-h! Listen!" There was the sound of swift footsteps again. Jarvis softly cocked his pistol. "Somebody running—coming this way."

Again it ended in the two thuds, like a blow and fall. And all was still. Jarvis swore.

"I wanna go home," moaned the darky.

His master set his teeth. "What do you know about that?" He had walked swiftly to the little door in the wall and was peering in.

"I don't know nothin' about."

"I thought so!" exclaimed Jarvis and he whistled softly, as if in utter amazement. Rusty's curiosity again overcame his terror and he drew near. Besides, it was more comfortable in the shelter of his master's 45.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Rusty, this man with the smoky lantern has been up these stairs!"

"You ain't a-goin' up?" protested the old darky.

"I am not!" was the emphatic reply, "'cause the Duke or some of his men are probably at the top of the stairs with a long gun—and I'm no book hero."

"Supposin' it am the Prince," suggested Rusty with awe.

"Well, suppose it is the Prince. He might blow my head off because he doesn't know what I came for. And if it's some one else—they'll blow my head off because they do know."

Without warning the sound of the running feet reached them again, but now it seemed to come from every quarter of the surrounding area. Jarvis, with Rusty cowering at his elbow, backed out into the center of the room, the long blue barrel of his revolver making quick play in all directions.

A Bachelor's Diary

He Is Mistaken for a Kidnapper

By MAX.

JULY 1.—Our days are so monotonous that if I were to attempt to set down in detail what happens, it would sound like a chapter from Genesis: And Arpasha begat Shelah, and Shelah begat Eber, and Eber begat Joktan, and Joktan begat Almodad, etc., etc., an endless chain of begats.

For I would relate in the same sing-song strain that a bath in the lake followed getting up and breakfast follows the bath, and a nap follows breakfast, and lunch follows the nap, and a walk in the woods follows the lunch, etc., etc., a monotony that is growing pleasing to me now that I have learned to find thrills of excitement in Mrs. Allen's daily report at breakfast that she found a rat in the trap. I do not recall a market report in six months previous that has excited me more.

Manette is growing brown and fat and sturdy, and with no one near to remind us that she has a delicate stomach, all such trouble has passed away, proving my contention that we keep our physical ailments alive by recognition of their existence. If Richards could see us eating our picnic lunches off a log in the woods, stopping occasionally to brush off an inquisitive ant or a ladybug that is lost from home, and regarding these little creatures of another world as friends, instead of germ-infested enemies, she would steal the child from me and bring suit in the court charging that I am not fit to be its guardian.

Her Future.

"I am convinced," I said gravely to Manette this afternoon, taking a chicken sandwich from her hands, for she is always the hostess at our picnics, "that a man-cared-for child is healthier than one that is cared for by a woman. She is neither nagged nor pampered so much. Now, if Richards were here she would make you throw away that sandwich because there is an ant on it—brush it off, my dear—and she would worry you because there is a streak of dirt on your cheek and a rip in your dress. I don't. I just let you forget all those things and be happy. I never want you, my baby, to be so much of a woman that you can't enjoy the Lord's big outdoors because you have left your powder rag at home. You must rise above yourself, little one."

She looked at me gravely with those big blue eyes, and then, robbing her sandwich of the meat that she might temporarily rid the brown-eyed pup of the look of longing he had fastened on her, said, "When I get big, I won't be a woman at all. I'll just be your wife."

"How I wish you were old enough," I replied fervently.

That would be a glorious thing, Diary. To take a child and train her in the ways one desired, and then marry her when she is grown.

"You will marry some nice young man," I argued, "and go away and leave your Uncle Max. It is the way of nature, and I can't keep you always."

I suppose I unconsciously sighed, for in another moment she was on my lap, rubbing a greasy sandwich down the back of my neck, while she protested between hugs and crumby kisses that she never intended to leave me, unless, and it gave me a twinge to hear her say it, "Lisbeth sent for her."

I was holding her tight with one hand, and with the other was trying to make the brown-eyed pup leap over our heads for a piece of chicken when I heard the sound of approaching horses, and a girl's merry laugh.

There was an abrupt turn in the bridal path near us, and a minute later they appeared in view, all unconscious of three interested listeners, for the pup had also paused in his play to cock wise-looking ears their way.

"I don't," the girl was saying, "believe in the kind of love you talk about. It would make of woman a sort of domestic chattel, like a cook-stove or a table. The fundamental principles of liberty—here her attention was attracted to us by the pup's shrill bark—I think that term, "fundamental principles," made him fear a procession of women were coming—and she stopped abruptly, staring at us with eyes that were first astonished, and that changed to admiration when she saw Manette.

An Admirer.

"What a beautiful child," she said, swinging lightly from her horse, and coming across the grass toward us, her horse following, with his nose pressed lovingly against her shoulder.

"Whose is she," impatiently, "and what is she doing here in these wilds alone with a man like you?"

My disguise was plainly perfect. I hadn't shaved in three weeks, and wore that morning a suit of Allen's overalls, for we contemplated a jaunt across the lake in an improvised raft.

I laughed. I do not know when I was more amused.

"That," I replied, making no attempt to rise or remove my hat, "is not the affair of every wayfarer on the road."

She colored angrily. "I intend to make it my affair. Look at her shoes with holes in the toes, and the scratches on her poor little arms and legs. You poor baby," getting down on her knees, "has that man been abusing you?"

I do not think at first Manette comprehended what the girl meant, and when it dawned upon her, her indignation was fine to see.

"I am not a poor child," she cried. "I am a rich child; everyone says so. Nurse says I'll be worth millions some day; and I don't want them. I want only my Uncle Max!"

I think there flashed across her brain a recollection of the woman who kidnaped her, for in a frenzy she threw her arms around my neck and screamed: "Make her go 'way! Make her go 'way! I'm afraid; I'm afraid!"

I was amused no longer, for the child was plainly suffering. Rising to my feet, I lifted my hat and said very coldly:

"You are trespassing on private property. Please ride on."

"We will go," she answered, angrily, "but this doesn't end here. I will find out who this Uncle Max is the child wants, and take steps to restore her to her guardian. She plainly doesn't belong to a man like you."

He Laughs.

Then, though Manette still whimpered I threw back my head and laughed till the woods rang with it. I had a vision of what my friends and associates in the city would say if they knew some pert young suffragette was preparing to have me arrested for a tramp and abductor of small children. It even flashed across my mind that if those men afflicted with the kind of softening of the brain that fits them for getting out the Sunday papers knew of it, they would give it three pages, with pictures of all of us, including the pup and the sandwich Manette still held in her grimy fingers. They might even give a picture in magnified proportions of the ant that this little baby-heiress to millions had brushed off her bread.

I laughed so long that Manette stopped whimpering, and lifting her face from my shoulder said in tones that breathed defiance, "Go 'way, please. I want my Uncle Max."

The girl turned to her escort, who had jumped from his horse when I began to laugh, and said something I did not catch. Evidently his reply restrained her from tearing the child from my arms, for with a protesting air she suffered herself to be helped to her horse, and they rode away.

The last look I had of her was of a face crimson with indignation and anger. The last she had of me was of a man doubled up with laughter.

"Manette," I said gravely, taking my share of the lemon cake, "those briar scratches you got on your arms and legs yesterday are giving your Uncle Max a bad name."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET YOUR MOTHER DECIDE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young man with whom I have been keeping company for quite some time. We have broken off friedship for a while, and my mother strongly objects to his return. I love him. Can you tell me what is best to do? H. V. E.

Mother always knows best, particularly when the girl is very young, which I am judging is your case.

If he is worthy of you he will wait. Believe me, my dear, if he is the man set aside to be your mate he will not be easily discouraged.

THAT IS HIS PLACE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX;

Will you kindly enlighten me as to whether it is proper to thank the gentlemen after returning form a show or a ball? BABY.

The good old-fashioned courtesy makes all the pleasure his. He owes you the delight he has had in your company.

LET YOUR MOTHER KNOW.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am sixteen and deeply in love with a man two years my senior. For six months he took me home from school, and after I was graduated he expressed his love for me. He has given me a ring. The only thing that makes me hesitate is that we are of a different religion. ESTELLE.

Your mother should know of your love affair at once. Not only because of the difference in religion, but because of your extreme youth.

DUTY, MY DEAR.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been engaged to a young man two years. The man is 23 years old. We love each other very much. Owing to our aged mothers, we think it's impossible to get married, as he is the only support of his mother and I am the only child left at home to take care of my mother, who is 85. Between love and duty, which will we do? M. S.

Your mothers are so old that your time of waiting will be very short. I am sure if either of you failed in your duty you would live to regret it. Unless you can marry and take your mothers with you, which is not advisable, postpone your marriage till you can enter it feeling that your happiness is not purchased with another's woe.

LET THE MATTER END.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had the pleasure of meeting a young man at a public dance. He asked to see me home and I consented. He made an appointment with me that we both kept. When he left me he failed to set a definite time for a next meeting, saying he would try to visit a place where I frequented. Now, do you think that I should have anything to do with him in the form of writing, etc., or drop him, as I am positive that he never will visit this place? ANXIOUS.

You are very sure he will not keep any appointments he makes, so why concern yourself about him? Let the acquaintance drop before it is more serious.

No Tunes Allowed.

Not long ago a certain brass band, which shall be nameless, was engaged to play at a local village feast. On the way there the conducter suggested that they should "have a tune," but the driver of the wagonette at once objected to the project.

"No toons while I drive," he remarked.

"But, why?" persisted the conductor. "Surely the horses wouldn't run away?"

"No," said the driver, "they wouldn't."

"Then why object?"

"Simply becos the poor beggars could not run away if they tried," was the grim retort. "Their running away days is over, an' so long as I drives you ain't a-going to take no mean advantage of 'em. That's why I sez no toons."

The conductor subsided, and there were "no toons" on that journey.

:: The Temper Curse :-: By DOROTHY DIX. ::

THE real problems of life are not the big problems, nor are its tragedies the great sorrows of existence. The conundrums that nobody can answer are offered by just little everyday complications, and the things that break our hearts, and wreck homes, are not great sins, or afflictions, but small, miserable, sordid worries and aggravations that blot out the sunshine and take all the joy out of life for us.

As an example of this I submit the case of one of my correspondents. She is a good, conscientious woman, married to a good man, and they have had a happy home. Recently, however, the woman's mother has died and she had to offer the shelter of her home to a young sister, a beautiful and talented girl of 20, who has the temper of a virago.

The girl has nowhere else to go, for although she is amply fitted by her abilities to support herself, she can keep no situation because of her uncontrolled temper and tongue. To have to support her is a burden on her sister, but the worst feature of it is that the girl has made a peaceful and happy home such a storm center that it is wrecking it, and the woman's husband is very naturally threatening to send the sister away.

Fears the Worst.

The poor wife and sister is between two fires. She fears the worst for her sister if the girl, young and beautiful and headstrong, is deprived of all guardianship and restraint, and even of shelter, and at the same time she feels the injustice of sacrificing her husband and her home to the girl's tantrums, and she asks what she had best do under the circumstances.

I side with the husband. I think that there is nothing else in the world in which the most of us show ourselves so cowardly as in the craven, meachin' way in which we give into people with tempers and let them ride roughshod over us. Before a redheaded temper and a venomous tongue we are all arrant cowards, and that is why the possessors of tempers don't try to control them.

Among my acquaintances there is a certain child who holds the world's championship for crying. She shrieks and shrieks until she maddens everybody about her. Not long ago, catching her for once in a smiling mood, I said, "Mabel, why do you cry so much?" She looked at me in round-eyed amazement and calmly replied, "Why, if I didn't cry, how would I get anything I want?"

That is the philosophy of the individuals with high tempers. They know that the balance of us are so terrified at the thought of their raging that we will give into them without an argument; that we will walk on eggs to try to keep from ruffling their sensibilities, and that we will put up with any injustice or imposition rather than go through a scene with them.

So They Rage.

Therefore they rage. It's the easiest way to get what they want, for the person without a temper is no more fitted to cope with the individual with a temper than an infant in arms is to engage in a prize fight with Jack Johnson.

Every one of us knows some great, big, strong, splendid man who is so afraid of his wife's temper that he lies to her about having to see some man downtown if he wants to stay out a few minutes longer than the curfew she rings on him, and who doesn't dare to even treat an old woman friend with common civility if he meets her when wife is along.

All of us know women who live in such terror of their husband's temper that they tremble at the very sound of his keys in the front door, and who spend their lives in falsifying household accounts, and trying to conceal everything that happens in the household that could possibly vex their violent spouses.

Ordinarily these men and women are not cowards. They have the courage to lead a charge in battle, or face death without a tremor. They even have the moral courage to endure their hell-on-earth of being married to a high tempered wife or husband, yet before that temper they become abject worms of the dust, without a fight in them.

So far as I know, no psychologist has ever attempted to explain the fear we have of the tempers of those with whom we must live. Perhaps the struggle for existence takes so much out of us that we have no strength left with which to wage a perpetual battle at home. Perhaps we have a sense of decency that the high tempered lack which keeps us from retaliating in kind. Perhaps no real lady or gentleman is fitted to deal with the woman or man who has not the finer instincts that consideration for other people and self-mastery give.

At any rate the fact remains that we all do stand in such shaking, quivering fear of the high tempered that we encourage them in giving full reign to their evil dispositions. This makes us to a degree accessory before the crime. We need more grit and backbone in dealing with them, and it's dollars to doughnuts that if the evil tempered knew that they would be chucked out of house and home unless they controlled themselves they would curb their passions.

Temper should be made the first cause for divorce.

If every woman was perfectly aware that she would have to be gentle and amiable in order to hold down her job, and have a husband to pay her bills for her instead of having to hustle to support herself, there would be no more shrewish women, nor men who had heart failure every time they thought of what their wives would say to them when they got home.

If every man knew that he would have to answer to a divorce summons and pay alimony if he didn't make himself pleasant and agreeable at home, we should have no more domestic bullies and tyrants who talk to their wives as they would not dare speak to any husky man who could knock them down.

And if all of our sisters, and our cousins, and our aunts, and our mothers-in-law, who come and live on us, and who keep us dodging their ways, and trying to keep from precipitating an avalanche of fury and abuse on our hearthstones, were perfectly sure that they would either have to be good-natured or get out, we should see such a sweetening up of dispositions as the world has never known.

For the person with the temper is never anything but a selfish bully. We could call his, or her bluff, if we had the nerve to do it.

Just Sampling It.

For a long time the pale-faced man regarded the sandwich on the counter before him suspiciously. At length he carefully lifted off the top slice of bread, took out a piece of ham, ate it, and replaced as before. In a few seconds he again removed the top piece, extracted another piece of meat this time, and replaced the top again; and again the performance was repeated until the ham had gone. A bystander tapped him on the shoulder.

"Excuse me," said the inquisitive one, "but why don't you eat up your sandwich, instead of picking at it in that fashion?"

"Well, you see," whispered back the other, glaring around suspiciously. "I can not very well eat it. It isn't my sandwich."

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE long winter and spring months devoted by Daysey Mayme Appleton to instructing spinsters in the care of infants, to fighting for the ballot for mothers, and to relegating to his place among the worms of the dust that monster called Man, had taken the starch out of her ambition and the curl out of her hair.

She realized that though it would fall with a crash fatal to its inhabitants, she must drop the world she was carrying on her shoulders.

She must go away from kin and friends, seeking some holy spot of solitude where she might renew the fagged impulses of her soul, and decide what degree of blonde would be most becoming to her for next season.

"I am going to spend the summer at Lake Skodunk," she announced one afternoon to her friends.

"Oh," replied seventeen of them, "how nice! We will go with you!"

Then immediately they began to seek for railroad pamphlets telling about the beauties of Lake Skodunk, to write for reservations at the hotel, and to pack their trunks.

Daysey Mayme is an easy mark among her friends. All women are easy marks among their friends. Or else they have no friends! There was only one thing to do: She must not offend her friends; she must give up Lake Skodunk.

She had found at the last moment, she said when seeing them on their train, that she could not go. She might join them later.

Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea looked good on the map. "I will go to Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea," she said, wearily, to a third cousin, "where my soul may commune alone with the sad sea waves."

The third cousin looked interested. She hurried away to tell the other kin.

That evening seven cousins, five uncles, eleven aunts and nine in-laws called Daysey Mayme to the telephone. "We think," each one cried, "that it would be fine to have a family reunion at Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea, and we are all going with you."

The next day Daysey Mayme Appleton was missing, and no one could learn her whereabouts. She had pulled down the blinds to give the impression that the house was abandoned for the summer and had locked herself in.

Every morning she dressed while balancing on one foot on a piano stool in a very small closet, to simulate the experience in the dressing car on a Pullman, and every night she slept on the pantry shelf.

"In this way," she said, putting a cinder in her eye, "I experience all the joys of travel and escape my dear relatives and friends."

MRS. MANGES ESCAPES OPERATION

How She Was Saved From Surgeon's Knife by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mogadore, Ohio.—"The first two years I was married I suffered so much from female troubles and bear-down pains that I could not stand on my feet long enough to do my work. The doctor said I would have to undergo an operation, but my husband wanted me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound first. I took three bottles and it made me well and strong, and I avoided a dreadful operation. I now have two fine, healthy children, and I can not say too much about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. Lee Manges, R. F. D. 10, Mogadore, Ohio.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A Charming Summer Gown Fully Described by Olivette

HERE is a little summer costume that may be truly called a "confection," though we generally prefer not to use that gastronomic term in the description of even the dreams of the sartorial realm.

White or shell pink is the foundation of heavy grade china or shantung silk. There is an eight-inch slit over the left ankle, and all about the hem tiny pink wild roses are set at equal intervals. The overskirt is of wide shadow lace, falling to the knees at the front and lengthening some eight inches under the caught-in drapery at the back. A garland of the roses peeks from under this, and another surmounts the wide girdle and rises to meet the square-cut vest of filmy white chiffon. Both waist and puff sleeves are of the lace, and another garland of the dear little wild roses nestles under the sleeve at the elbow.

The hat is a great round white Neapolitan, covered with frill after frill of white accordion plaited maline, with a monster pink rose crushing in all the filminess at the left.

Dainty white slippers and silk stockings, and a filmy parasol with a wide border of chiffon printed in great pink roses, complete an absolutely ideal summer costume.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

Walker had accompanied his wife on an excursion to the realms of bargains, and in the enormous building, with its many departments, had become separated from his better half.

For an hour at least he remained lounging impatiently at the junction of many ways, where lifts, stairs and passages met, and then, tired and angry, he approached an irreproachable shopwalker.

"Sir," he said to the frock-coated and suave attendant, in tones of righteous indignation, "I've lost my wife."

Back came the reply, with stunning force: "Third floor over the bridge for the mourning department!"

* * *

It was in a country village that the swain had proposed for the hand of the village beauty, and had been accepted.

He had bought the engagement ring and was hurrying to the home of his adored one. A friend stopped him to make inquiry concerning his haste.

"Hullo, there, Bob! Is there a fire?"

"Yes," replied Bob, with what breath he had left, "my heart's on fire and I'm going now to ring the village belle."

Peter Burrowes, a well-known member of the Irish bar, was on one occasion counsel for the prosecution at an important trial for murder. Burrowes had a severe cold and opened his speech with a box of lozenges in one hand and in the other a small pistol bullet by which the man had met his death. Between the pauses of his address he kept supplying himself with a lozenge. But at last, in the very middle of a high-falutin' period, he stopped. His legal chest heaved, his eyes seemed starting from his head, and in a voice tremulous with fright he exclaimed:

"Oh-h-h! Gentlemen, gentlemen, I've swallowed the bul-let!"

"Mr. Chairman," said the orator, who had already occupied the platform for twenty minutes, amid many interjections from the audience. "Mr. Chairman, may I appeal on a point of order? There is really so much resultory conversation going on in parts of the hall that it is impossible for me to hear a word I am saying."

Voice from the back of the hall: "Don't be downhearted. You're not missing much."

A Pledge of Spinisterhood

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM a young man of nineteen," writes X. Y. Z., "and in love with a girl of seventeen who has signed an old-maid pledge, about which she seems to be serious. I have been paying her attention for the past six months, and would like to know whether to continue."

Following is the pledge of spinsterhood which this wise old dame of seventeen has signed:

"We, the undersigned, vow in all good faith that we shall, for the convenience of ourselves and the good of the world, live as Old Maids.

"We, the said undersigned, do agree that we will work honestly and faithfully until, if our lives are spared, we have accumulated a sum requisite for purchasing and maintaining a small house in the suburbs, where the said undersigned shall reside.

"We shall have freedom to visit, entertain, etc., such of our friends as we desire. There is to be no restriction, except that we shall deport ourselves in all manner, and under all circumstances, as ladies.

"It is also agreed by the undersigned that when we reach the age of 40, with consent of the majority, we shall each adopt a child from the asylum.

"If any of this charmed and secret circle should commit the grievous error of marrying, the penalty will be expulsion from the aforesaid circle, and she MUST HAND HER FIANCE THIS PLEDGE BEFORE THE COMMITTEE, TO BE TORN UP BY THE SAID FIANCE."

No Sense of Humor.

The young have no sense of humor. It requires adversity, humiliation, disappointment and grief to make one philosophical, and philosophy is the parent of wit. If the young had a sense of humor, X. Y. Z. would carry this pledge about with him that he may have something to smile about when things go wrong, and the girl who has signed it would laugh herself to death.

What does it amount to? Less than the paper it is written on!

Imagine, if you can, a lot of kittens agreeing what they will do and be when they are old tabby cats!

Conceive, if you can, of the kind of a girl who will deny herself the frivolities of youth, the pretty ribbons and feathers and clothes, the theater, the dance, the love that is looking her way, that she may some day have a home in which she will enjoy the glorious privilege of shriveling up as an old maid!

No girl makes that pledge for herself, my dear young man. She looks at the other girls, and sees that they are plain, and not so attractive as herself. "They know they will be old maids," every girl says, "and are making their plans so that it will look as if they WANTED to be. Of course, I'll sign the pledge. It may please them and won't hurt ME!"

And every girl signs, each with the secret assurance that SHE will not be an old maid.

They agree to deny themselves, that they may purchase a home. This is the story of every good woman's life: A self-denial in the hope that some day she may own a home, but it is a self-denial that is a joy because it has its origin in LOVE. A woman loves a man and sentences herself to a lifetime of self-denial when she marries. She loves her children, and thereafter knows not what the word "SELF" means.

Wait Awhile.

She pinches and skimps and scrapes and makes over with "Love's old sweet song" ringing in her ears, and knows neither discouragement nor regret. But can anyone imagine that the same noble effort and sacrifice are possible when the goal is a home where a lot of spinsters may abide in about as much peace as so many tabby cats?

Believe me, my dear young man, your sweetheart would work harder to stay out of such a place than to enter it. Let me assure you that she would know neither peace of mind nor rest if she thought for a moment that a home with no one in it but WOMEN was to be her refuge.

If she thinks so now, it is because she is 17. When she is 27, she will be in a panic because her steps seem to be turning that way.

Encourage your sweetheart. Let her know that when she is safely within the walls of this retreat, you will drive by with your wife some day and perhaps name one of your babies for her.

It will prove a sure cure.

-:- The Amulets -:-

A Tragic Short Story Complete.

THE cattle dealer opened the door of the taproom of the roadside inn and ordered a liter of cider.

"You must be thirsty, Brunier, or you would not order a whole liter," said the innkeeper.

"You bet I am, but I can afford a thirst on a day like this, when I have four thousand francs in my pocket. Four nice, crisp brown bills, and almost half of it is clear profit."

"But are you not afraid to walk home alone with that much money in your pocket?"

"Afraid! With fists and arms like mine! Not a bit of it, and besides I wear two amulets guaranteed to guard you against any danger."

He opened his shirt and showed two greenish-looking copper medals hanging on a string on his broad breast.

"Look at these," he said, "this one is the holy Benoit's, the patron of all travelers, and the other St. Antoine's, the protector of the poor. These saints have never failed, and I feel as safe as if I were already at home, though it will be a dark night to-night."

The innkeeper laughed.

"Is it really possible," he asked, "that a sensible fellow like you, who gets the best of everybody in any deal, can really believe in two old copper medals?"

"Well, I do believe in them," said Brunier, "you have to believe in something; you surely do yourself."

"I don't believe in anything," said the innkeeper, and offered his customer a drink before he started.

He Starts.

"Well, I don't mind; I still feel a little dusty in my throat."

Half an hour later when the sun had set and darkness was setting in, Brunier started homeward. He carried his hat in his hand and the evening wind played with his heavy dark curls, cooling his hot head. The innkeeper stood looking after him with a frown on his face and his lips pressed tightly together. Then he called his sons.

"Did you see that big fellow?" he asked. "That is Brunier, the cattle dealer, going home from market."

The two boys looked like retrievers scenting the game.

"You understand what I mean," said the father. "And if you two are not fools you will cut across the fields to the crossroads near the forester's house. You will get there at least a half hour ahead of Brunier. In two hours you ought to be back here with 4,000 francs in your pockets."

The brothers did not waste any time. The younger armed himself with a heavy crowbar and the older with a hunting knife.

"Do you think we ought to kill him?" asked the younger.

The innkeeper was silent for a moment, then he nodded.

* * *

How long Brunier had been lying there he did not know. He felt sore all over and felt the blood trickling from his forehead. His coat was torn, the pockets rifled, his heart was beating hard against his ribs, and his arms were so stiff that he could scarcely move them.

After many attempts he succeeded in getting on his feet, and when he had bathed his face in a spring close by he felt much better and began to think of what he ought to do. He was not strong enough to reach home so he decided to return to the inn.

Blood was still flowing from the gaping wound, but he walked ahead without minding. It was quite clear to him who had played the dirty trick on him. It must be some cattle driver or woodchopper. But, thank God, he was still alive and had his money yet. He pulled forth his amulets and kissed them fervently, thanking the saints who had so wonderfully preserved his life.

* * *

"So you expect me to believe you did not find any money, you scoundrels," roared the innkeeper to his sons.

"No. And still we searched everywhere, in the pockets, coat, vest, shirt and stockings."

"Then you are bigger fools than I thought you were," the father shouted.

Suddenly there was a knock at the window. The door was opened, and a ghastly silence followed the loud quarrel when the bloodstained Brunier entered. The two sons turned pale as ghosts and beads of cold perspiration stood on their foreheads. The innkeeper stood motionless in the middle of the floor staring at his guest.

Brunier dropped into a chair and gased: "Give me a glass of brandy, and I shall be all right. Somebody tried to kill me attacking me from behind, but they did not succeed. I am still alive and have my money yet. Unfortunately I did not get a chance to see who they were."

The three men breathed easier. He had not recognized them, so the matter was not serious.

"Well," said Brunier to the inn keeper, "perhaps you will believe in my amulets now."

The Hiding Place.

He did not notice the innkeeper's vicious scowl.

"But where did you hide your money, Brunier?" he asked in a trembling voice.

"Inside the lining of my hat."

Brunier then asked for a room and said he wanted to sleep.

"I'll give you my own bed," said the innkeeper, and conducted him to a room above the taproom. Brunier undressed and went to bed, but could not sleep. His wound was very painful, so he decided to go down and get some oil for a dressing. In the darkness he felt his way and was about to open the door of the taproom when he heard somebody mention his name. He listened, and what he heard made him shiver. He had to sit down on the step not to fall. They were planning to kill him yet.

He sneaked back to his room. Flight was out of the question, but he would sell his life dearly. He had no weapon, not even his cane, which he had left below, but in a cupboard he found a half-filled siphon of seltzer, a dreadful weapon in the hand of a determined man.

He posted himself behind the door and waited. A few moments later he heard sneaking steps on the creaking stairs. It was the innkeeper. He stopped a moment on the top step and then opened the door. As he was approaching the bed the siphon came down on his head and he dropped without a sound.

"You have got what you deserved," said Brunier. Then he picked up his hat and ran toward the village, while the two sons were busy digging a grave for his body in the garden.

It was almost daylight when he reached the village and told what had happened. An hour later the house was surrounded by gendarmes. They found the two boys still digging in the garden.

In the room above the innkeeper was found. He confessed his crime before he died.

Some time later Brunier had two gold cases made for the amulets which had twice saved his life.

Professional Rivalry.

Everything in the street was dim and quiet, for the thoroughfare was in a highly respectable neighborhood, and the hour was 2 a. m. In fact, save for a stray, wandering cat, and a constable, now rounding a corner in the far distance, there were no signs of life or animation anywhere.

William Sikes stepped out from the shadow of a friedly tree, glanced furtively around him, and then assisted Tom Crooke, his bosom friend and partner, to alight from the drawing room window of No. 63.

"Well, old pal, what luck?" he whispered.

"No luck at all," growled Tom. "The bloke what likes there is a lawyer."

William looked apprehensive.

"Then 'ow much 'ave you lost?" he asked.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

They Would Get Along Somehow

WHEN the boss sent for Jennie to come to his private office he told her the old story about it being the dull season and that he would have to let her go at the end of the week, and when she reminded him that he had always kept her before during the dull season he told her that he had noticed a decided lack of interest in her work compared to the way she used to work, and, besides, that he had heard stories about her being out with men at night, etc.

So Jennie was sure that her former girl friend had kept her word about getting even with Jennie for—as she thought—stealing her fellow away from her.

Coming out of the office, she wanted to cry, but held in so as not to give the girl the satisfaction of seeing her. As it was, she thought she noticed a flicker of a satisfied smile on the girl's face.

What now of paying the weekly instalments on her clothes—and they were the only ones she had—and what of the money that was so badly needed at home? When Jennie reached home, her friend, the boarding house keeper, was surprised to see her so early, and asked her what was the matter, and when Jennie told she had been "let out" at the office, the good woman, instead of deriding Jennie for losing her position, tried to sympathize with her and took her head on her breast, saying they would get along SOMEHOW until Jennie could get another job. But in her heart she didn't see how they could.

Jennie went up to her room and, flinging herself on the bed, had a good cry. When she quieted down and thought it all over she remembered the fellow she had been out with and his offer to furnish up a flat for her. She shrank at the mere thought of it, but wondered if it wouldn't be the EASIEST WAY at that.

.:. The Head Waitress .:.

By HANK.

"WHAT'S this I hear about you and Marie having a date?" asked the Head Waitress of the Steady Customer in the Cafe L'Enfant.

"Nothing to it," he replied. "Where did you get it?"

"From Mr. Flakes, the manager," said the Head Waitress, "and he told me he had it straight, too. He said that Marie asked for an hour off so she could get all dolled up to go out with you. Of course, it ain't none of my business, and——"

"Cut it out," interrupted the Steady Customer. "Mr. Flakes is kidding you, or Marie is kidding him. Not that I wouldn't dearly love to take both you and Marie out any time, but I'm getting too old to go gallivanting around with two such beauteous dames."

"I guess Marie was kidding," said the Head Waitress. "All them cashiers is great kidders, especially the blondes. You see, every guy that goes up to the desk hands out something foolish while he's paying his check, and Marie has to take their money with one hand and wave to them with the other or they'd be broken-hearted. I don't see much nourishment in it myself, but all those poor boobs act as if one smile from the cashier had taken ten years off their age, and they go out simpering like a lot of love-sick swines."

"Swains, I suppose you mean," corrected the Steady Customer.

"Have it your own way," said the Head Waitress, "you literary guys is great sticklers for correct pronouncements, ain't you? Well, I'm glad to hear you ain't fallen for no blonde because I've taken an interest in you and I'd hate to see you going nutty over a pair of big eyes and a golden dome. Not that Marie ain't a nice girl, and one of the nicest I ever seen, but she shouldn't be wasting her time with any of you newspaper guys."

"What's the matter with us?" asked the Steady Customer. "I'm surprised to hear you talk that way, Louise."

"Are you?" she said. "Well, long ago in the dim, distant past, I showered my young and innocent affections on one of you literary blokes, and for a time I was in the seventh heaven of happiness. He used to write me poems, too, real love ones. I remember one that went something like this:

"Louise, Louise, you little tease,
I'm really mad about you;
You say you truly love me, dear,
I'd hate to ever doubt you;
Some day, we'll married be, and then
Our lives we'll link together
And travel down the broad highway
No matter what the weather."

"Pretty good," said the Steady Customer.

"Oh, yes, I raved about it," said the Head Waitress, "until I found out that he was traveling down the 'broad highway' with about nine others."

"But that's no reason why you should be down on all literary lights," exclaimed the Steady Customer.

"A child once stung, never goes back to the beehive, as Kipling says," replied Louise, "and believe me, Kipling was right."

Nil Desperandum.

Percy Parkington arose and brushed the dust from his knees. Then, drawing himself up to his full height, he gazed resentfully upon the farm of Miss Muriel Muggins, who nonchalantly fanned herself the while.

"Very well, Miss Muggins," came in bitter tones from Percy. "Oh, very well! You have spurned me, it is true! Indeed, you have spurned me twice! But, though despair eats my heart, I shall not die! I mean to go into the busy world. I will fight! I will win! My name shall become known and my riches shall become envied—"

"Pardon me for interrupting you, Mr. Parkington," interjected Miss Muggins, "but when you have accomplished all that you may try me again."

Couldn't Understand It.

Local "Terrier:" "Well, uncle, how do I look as a soldier?"

Farmer Giles: "Foine, my boy! But blessed if Oi can think 'ow yer git them twisted trousers on!"

PITCHER PRICE SENT HOME BY MANAGER SMITH

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN, July 22.—Two things happened to Gilbert Price yesterday in this town. The Turtles got to him in the second inning of the ball game and hammered him fiercely to the bench. Then after the game, Manager Smith told the pitcher to pack his duds and get aboard a train for Atlanta.

The reason for the move is not known, but it must be a pretty sound one, or Billy Smith never would have dispensed with the services of one of his regular slabmen with two tough series left to play after the Crackers are done with the Turtles.

* * *

JOE CONZELMAN went in after the game was hopelesly lost, as it turned out, and showed his usual class against the Turtles, stopping the scoring handily. He held them so close that had it not been for the air-tight work of Rube Kissinger, who was having one of his good days, the Smithies might have overcome the handicap and won out even at that stage.

But Kissinger was mighty good. At that, the boys were hitting the ball right on the nose only luck would direct it straight at some Memphis fielder. That is all in the breaks, however, and some time, when the breaks are our way, the other pitcher is going to pay for all of it.

The Turtles are going fine just now and are playing the kind of scrappy baseball that earns a fair share of the breaks.

* * *

WALLY SMITH still is in the grasp of one of the worst hitting slumps he ever has had, and we are missing his long wallops greatly. When he starts hitting again—and he is bound to do that—he is going to help the club out a lot.

Dent and Dunn are scheduled to work in the game to-day.

BAN WILL NOT RECOGNIZE COMPLAINT OF F. CHANCE

CHICAGO, July 22.—No official action will be taken by the American League in connection with Frank Chance's complaint charging the Chicago Americans with misrepresenting the physical condition of Zeider and the playing ability of Borton, for whom Chance traded Hal Chase. Ban Johnson so announced yesterday.

"It will be impossible to take action compensating New York for alleged loss," said Johnson, "for the reason that Chance wanted Zeider more than any other man. He had his choice of at least six Chicago players and picked Zeider and Borton."

CRACKED THUMB WILL KEEP WOOD OUT SEVERAL WEEKS

BOSTON, July 22.—Joe Wood, star pitcher of the Boston Americans, will be out of the game for several weeks. Examination of his injured right thumb under the X-ray to-day showed that there was a crack in the end of the big bone, and the indications are now that a piece of the bone has been chipped off.

Unusual care is being taken in the treatment of the injury to guard against stiffness in the joint, which would put an end to Wood's career.

MADE 103 CONSECUTIVE BULL'S-EYES AT 300 YARDS

WAKEFIELD, MASS., July 22.—All records for consecutive bull's-eyes at 800 yards were broken here in the ninth annual meeting of the New England Military Riflemen's Association when Captain Stuart W. Wise, of the Bay State team, made 103 perfect shots.

The previous record for consecutive bull's-eyes at 800 yards was made by J. W. Hessian, of New York, at Seagirt last year.

Atlanta Wins Leifield Argument

Herrmann and Murphy Disagree

By O. B. Keeler.

COMES now the august Augustus Herrmann, of the Supreme Court of baseball, and hands down an opinion in the Leifield controversy decidedly favorable to our Major Frank E. Callaway. By the same token, the same opinion may be construed as somewhat of a reproof to our amiable little friend C. Webb Murphy, of the Cubs.

The idea is dual. It is granted (1) that if Mr. Lefty Leifield doesn't choose to play ball for Atlanta, Atlanta doesn't have to argue the question with Mr. Leifield, and (2) that if Mr. Leifield isn't going to play ball for Atlanta, Atlanta doesn't have to pay Mr. Murphy for Mr. Leifield.

Which does look fair enough.

And, anyway, that's the view the Hon. Herrmann takes of the case in a letter to Mr. Murphy, a copy of which was received by Major Callaway yesterday.

Incidentally, the Hon. Herrmann's opinion is of considerable weight in balancing the little problems of baseball.

* * *

HERE is a chronological sketch of the incidents:

Rather less than two weeks ago, Mr. Murphy and Major Callaway were dickering about Leifield, who (Mr. Murphy fancied) would be just the cog to round out a pennant racing machine in this town.

Mr. Murphy also fancied Mr. Leifield's value as a cog would be about $2,500.

Major Callaway revised that estimate downward somewhat and made the Cub owner an offer, conditional upon Leifield's willingness to play with Atlanta at a stipulated salary.

There was the rub.

Mr. Murphy accepted the offer, "with all conditions," and wired that he had ordered Leifield to report. Then he added a message that an explanatory letter was on the way.

The explanatory letter explained that Mr. Leifield was balking; had balked, in fact, all the way to St. Louis, where he lived and where he proposed to remain.

In fine, it appeared that if Mr. Leifield was to play in the Southern League, that institution would have to be moved over to St. Louis.

Mr. Murphy suggested that Major Callaway write to the Missouri Balkan and try to reason with him.

Major Callaway suggested that he had other things to do.

Further, he suggested that the deal was entirely off.

That suggestion extracted from Mr. Murphy a flat-footed declaration that the deal couldn't be called off in that manner. He countered with a promise to tell the National Commission on Major Callaway.

The Major promptly replied that the deal already was off, and therefore not subject to further calling. If Mr. Murphy cared to consult the commission, he had Major Callaway's full permission—even his earnest request—to do so.

It seems Mr. Murphy did.

And it also seems (from the Hon. Herrmann's letter) that he did not get very far with it.

* * *

THAT "optional agreement" thing is all very fine in its way. But it does have a certain effect on the lucrative sales Southern League clubs have been accustomed to count on for star players developed during the season.

There is the crack battery of Prough and Mayer, of the Barons. The pitcher is slated for sale, and should yield a good price. But the receiving end was placed on an optional agreement by the White Sox, and it is pretty well assured that Callahan will yank him in when the yanking season opens.

Of the Crackers, Conzelman and Long are the property of big league clubs.

In the matter of outright sales, the Lookouts probably will get the big slice of the circuit in disposing of Coveleskie and Street.

* * *

DON'T blame Cholly Frank for gravitating swiftly toward cynicism, pessimism, fatalism, and any other isms that convey the idea of bursting bubbles and lost illusions.

Here's just a sample of the wretched Dutchman's luck this year.

Cholly swapped Snedecor to Montgomery for Kutina and Bagby, and when he made the Billiken management go through with the deal, it was generally regarded as a regular David Harum coup.

But Kutina refused to report, and now Bagby is out of the game with a broken wrist, while Snedecor is playing great ball for the Billies.

Don't blame Cholly, then.

ENTRIES AT TERRE HAUTE.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 22.—Harness racing began here to-day with a field of good horses. The number of entries is unexpectedly large. In a number of events the purses are $1,000. Many of the 3-year-olds entered in this year's entries will make their first start at this meeting.

WOOD, HUNTER AND PHELPS LOW IN WESTERN TOURNEY

FLOSSMOOR CLUB, CHICAGO, July 22.—Three local players tied at 18 holes in the eliminating round of the fourteenth annual championship of the Western Golf Association this morning.

Warren K. Wood, of Homewood; Paul Hunter, of Midlothian, and Mason Phelps, another Midlothian player, were the players who led the 134 starters this morning. Warren Wood, as well as Paul Hunter, made the first nine in 37 and the last nine in 40, while Phelps negotiated the first nine holes in 39 strokes and the last nine in 38.

Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, the present title holder, had the next best score, with a 78. He took 40 strokes for the first nine holes and 38 for the last half.

OMAHA RELEASES ARBOGAST.

OMAHA, NEBR., July 22.—President W. R. Rourke, of the Omaha Western League club, has announced the release of Charles Arbogast, who has been manager of the Omaha team for the last two seasons. Rourke will manage the team himself. Arbogast goes to the Los Angeles team of the Pacific Coast League.

Lives of managers remind us
That we must stay on the job.
Counting on the work behind us
Means a swift slam on the knob.

* * *

THE BROWNS' PROTEST OF a recent game with the Yankees reminds us of the controversy over the "white heavyweight championship."

* * *

THE DEBUT OR MR. ARTHUR Pelky on the vaudeville stage ought to suggest something to young Mr. Mahoney, of Europe. "The Only Man Bombardier Wells Can Lick" would pack the house.

* * *

"THERE ISN'T ANYTHING I can do about it," says Ban Johnson, regarding the Stahl matter, as he speeds across Ohio. Which shows the difference between a man's conversation on Broadway at night and in the dairy farm country the next morning.

* * *

THE FURTHER WE GO INTO it the more the "ethics" of organized baseball resemble the code of the police graft ring. Mr. Comiskey says of the recent goldbricking of the New York club in the Chase deal that "they ought to take their medicine gracefully." In other words, no matter what is handed to you, don't squeal, for the good of the game.

* * *

THIS GIVES RISE TO THE question as to whether Horace Fogel was kicked out of big league baseball for saying the umpiring was crooked when it wasn't or for making public the fact that it was.

* * *

SIR THOMAS LIPTON CABles that "negotiations" anent his challenge for the America's Cup are still proceeding. As negotiators, the New York Yacht Club numbers the best yachtsmen in the world.

* * *

"I EXPECT THE ATHLETICS to win barely half of their remaining games," says Clark Griffith, of the Senators. A modest little expectation and one certain of complete realization.

* * *

JOE RIVERS SAYS THAT HE is going to post $5,000 as a forfeit and offer a side bet for a return match with Champion Ritchie, but will stipulate that the weight must be 133 pounds at the ringside. This is an excellent way of showing that he is not afraid of Ritchie and at the same time cutting off any possibility of a fight with him.

* * *

"I INSIST THAT I DID NOT resign. I was fired," declares Jake Stahl. All right—but why boast about it?

* * *

MR. EBBETS WAS NOT TALKing loosely when he said that the high cost of baseball was increasing. If he has many more "openings" and "dedications" we should think it would be well-nigh prohibitive.

* * *

BILLY GIBSON THINKS THAT Cross-Ritchie would draw $35,000 in New York, and he says that he is certain Richie will box for him because they are old friends. It only shows what sacrifices even a champion is compelled to make in the name of friendship.

News of the Ring Game

Spider Britt, the local bantamweight, is ready to don the padded mitts again. Britt is particularly anxious to get on with either Charlie Lee or Kid Young. Spider says he never felt better in his life than he does at the present time and is positive he can defeat either of the above mentioned boys.

* * *

Eddie Hanlon, who recently defeated Terry Nelson, is anxious to get on with some other boy of his weight. A match between Hanlon and Mike Saul ought to prove a corker.

* * *

Charlie White, pound for pound the greatest little battler in this country, will probably be seen in action on the coast some time this fall. Tom McCarey has been thinking of putting White on with the winner of the Wolgast-Dundee bout, scheduled to take place at Los Angeles next month.

* * *

Mariel Thomas, French welterweight, and Mike Glover will clash in a ten-round set-to at Boston on Tuesday night. Glover has made a good impression among the "Beantown" fans, where he has won his last five fights.

* * *

Tommy Buck, of Philadelphia, and Patsy Kline, the Newark featherweight, have been matched to box ten rounds at New York on August 1. They have agreed to weigh 122 pounds at 3 o'clock.

* * *

Cal Delaney, sparring partner of Johnny Kilbane, has signed articles to box Kid Julien in a twelve-round go next Saturday night. Both boys are featherweights.

* * *

Bob McAllister has finally decided to see a crack at the twenty-round game. The Western middleweight has agreed to take on Ed Petroskey before Jim Coffroth's club at Frisco some time next month.

* * *

Jake Abel has departed for his home in Chattanooga. Before he left Jake stated that Charlie White was without a doubt the heaviest puncher he has ever met. Yes, several other boys hold the same opinion as Abel. For reference apply to Joe Thomas.

* * *

Although Charlie Lee was given the verdict over Kid Young on a foul last week, there are many of the opinion that Young can take the measure of the tall featherweight if he would only get into condition. Young has promised to train as he never has before if given another chance at his conqueror.

* * *

Danny Morgan, the talkative manager, is still keeping his press agent busy trying to force Willie Ritchie into a match. Britton is one boxer who is entitled to a chance at the title.

* * *

Carl Morris, the Sapulpa heavyweight, is to battle Al Benedict, of Hoboken, N. J., in a 15-round encounter at Joplin, Mo., Friday night.

* * *

Lest we forget, Meyer Pries wishes us to announce that he is still alive. Meyer is yearning for a return engagement with Spider Britt. Pries is certainly one game youngster.

"ZEIDER SICK, IS BETTER THAN CHASE."—CHANCE

CLEVELAND, July 22.—Frank Chance, manager of the Yankees, in speaking of the Zeider-Chase deal, slips the following knock to Chase.

"We're perfectly satisfied with this deal. I wouldn't give Zeider when right for three Chases. I think he's a better man than Chase at his best. And Zeider in a hospital is of more value to the New York club than Hal Chase would be to-day.

"There's no chance in the world for us to ask that the trade by which we gave Chase for Zeider and Borton be canceled. We don't want the deal canceled, but we are asking that the Chicago club be required to pay the salary of Zeider and to pay his doctor's bills until such time as he is able to play."

Big Marathon Grind On To-night

Ten Riders in Sensational Race

MOTORCYCLE fans in Atlanta are to be given a real treat at the Motordrome to-night. The best card of the season is to be put on, and some thrilling races are bound to be the result.

The big Marathon race is easily the feature. The sight of ten riders, all being on the track at the same time, each trying his hardest to get into the lead, should be a scene well worth watching. The riders are to cover 26 miles 385 yards.

As the leaders in a long race have a great advantage, there is bound to be a hot scramble throughout the long grind. The riders out in front invariably cover the track so as to keep their opponents from getting ahead. Mixups of some sort are usually the result, and if some spills are not recorded it will surely be a big surprise.

Tex Richards and Jock McNeil, the favorites, have their machines in the best of shape, and are out to set a record. They have been practicing daily, and wise ones are looking for these two to fight it out to a finish. However, both these speed demons may be beaten out by a dark horse. Morty Graves has his machine in good working order, and it would not surprise many to see him win out.

Big Cash Prize to Winner.

A cash prize of $500 is to go to the winner. This is enough to make any of them take some daring chances to cop the big event. Each rider will have a pit in front of the paddock, where he can change a tire or wheel in a very few minutes and continue on his journey.

The Motordrome Sweepstakes should also afford some excellent racing. The riders will be trying out their machines for the big event, and some fast racing should be witnessed.

New Sweaters for Riders.

To-night each rider will have a new sweater, a different colored one for each. This is after the plan used on the metropolitan racing tracks, so that each mount and his jockey is distinguishable no matter how far away from the spectators.

Following are the colors that will be worn by the motor demons to-night:

No. 1, Morty Graves, black; No. 2, Harry Schwartz, green; No. 3, Billy Shields, orange; No. 4, George Lockner, black with red stripes; No. 5, Tex Richards, bright red; No. 6, Freddie Luther, maroon; No. 7, George Renel, red with white stripe; No. 8, Jock McNeil, white; No. 9, Henry Lewis, light blue; No. 10, Harry Glenn, dark red.

Here is the complete program:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves; time, 38 4-5 seconds.

MOTORDROME SWEEPSTAKES.

One mile to qualify for two-mile final. Two to qualify in each heat, and three in fastest heat.

First Heat—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Second Heat—No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Harry Glenn vs. Harry Schwartz. (Special match race). Two miles, best two out of three heats.

Final heat of Motordrome Sweepstakes—Two miles.

Second heat of special match race—Glenn vs. Schwartz.

Third heat of special match race, if necessary.

Big Marathon Race—26 miles 385 yards. Ten riders to compete. Each rider will have to ride 105 times around the track.

INTERSTATE BALL LEAGUE GOES TO SMASH AGAIN

ERIE, PA., July 22.—The reorganized Interstate League season came to an unexpected ending here, with the Erie team a second pennant-winner, finishing the abbreviated schedule with a percentage of 1.000. The four-club circuit, composed of Youngstown, Akron, Wheeling and Erie, proved a losing proposition.

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR

If there were no Fords, automobiling would be like yachting---the sport of rich men. But by centering his effort upon the production of one good car, Henry Ford has brought the price down within reason---and the easy reach of the many.

Here's the test: 300,000 Fords now in service. Runabout $525; Touring Car $600; Town Car $800—f. o. b. Detroit, with all equipment. Get catalogue and all particulars from Ford Motor Company, 311 Peachtree St., Atlanta.

LOOKOUTS NEED GOOD HITTER TO PULL THROUGH

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 22. That the immediate addition of material strength is absolutely necessary not only to keep the Lookouts in the race, but moreover to make them a first-division club, is being gradually conceded locally.

The showing of the Lookouts in the week just passed, and, in fact, during the long home stay which closed with the Gulls, gave conclusive proof that the club does not possess the strength and stamina not only to rise in the percentage ladder, but even to hold its present position.

Realizing the general weakness of the club for the final spurt, Elberfeld has secured Dee Walsh from the St. Louis Browns, but the acquisition of the league's fielding sensation is not going to help the club to any material extent, as offensive strength is what is needed. Walsh can not be expected to hit over .250, although he will surpass Williams in fielding.

Alberfeld and Elston, who represent about 50 per cent of the club's offensive strength, can not be depended upon to any degree of certainty, because of their injuries. Elston has a bad leg, which has worried him for three seasons, and the member forces him to lay out so long that his batting eye is continually off form. The beaning of Elberfeld will undoubtedly affect him to some extent throughout the entire season.

The Lookouts must get another good hitter to pull through.

It is being gradually conceded here that Atlanta and Birmingham, although there is considerable prejudice against both clubs, are the two teams which are to be the ultimate grapplers for the rag. They seem to possess the greatest strength, and are not being forced to spurt now as are Montgomery and Mobile.

LANGFORD-MILLER GO OFF; NEGRO MAY BE BARRED

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Sam Langford has been stamped an undesirable in this city, so far as ring engagements are concerned. The board of supervisors have notified Promoter J. T. Mitchell, of the National A. C., who planned to stage a four-round bout between Charlie Miller and Langford here Friday, that the colored heavyweight would not be permitted to enter the ring.

This action was taken under a ruling of the Police Commission, in charge of boxing contests, that fighters whose names appear on the professional "list" can not take part in the "amateur" four-round bouts. Langford's name appears on the Police Commission's "professional list." It was not made clear whether Sam might box in longer contests, though it is taken he has been barred from all bouts.

YALE TEAM TO GET BUSY.

SIASCONSETT, MASS., July 22.—Arrangements have been completed by Cautain Ketcham, of the Yale football team for the early training of the linemen. Twenty-five men will begin preliminary practice at the Siasconsett Cottage Club here about September 1.

Look Out For Poison Ivy

Strolling through the woods or clearing brush, picnickers, hunters, fishermen—look out for poison ivy. And in the meantime keep your blood pure by using S. S. S. If your skin is rough with eczema, pimples or any other eruption, S. S. S. stimulates the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to dry up and heal all sore spots. S. S. S. will do this positively. It dominates the principle of osmosis, stimulates the cells of the skin to select their own nutriment from the blood, made pure and healing by the wonderful medicinal ingredients of this famous blood purifier. It is a safe remedy, as it contains no minerals, and yet its action is a marvel.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting any one to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 186 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

J. M'ALEER TELLS HOW JAKE STAHL QUIT BOSTONS

CLEVELAND, July 22.—James McAleer, president of the Boston Americans, refused to discuss the statement of Ban Johnson given out in New York, in which the league leader severely criticised Jimmy for his action in releasing Jake Stahl.

"There is nothing to say on the Stahl matter," said McAleer.

"The change in the club was precipitated by Stahl himself.

"'Are you figuring on making a change in the managership of the team,' he asked me in Chicago.

"'Not this season,' I replied.

"'At the end of the year?' he asked.

"'It is possible there may be a change then,' I replied.

"'Well, in that case,' said Stahl, 'I might as well get through now.'

"'Do you mean that you wish to resign?' I asked.

"'Pay me to the end of the season and I'm through,' was the answer.

"So I gave him the money he would have drawn had he gone all the way through to his release."

McAleer stated that Carrigan will continue to manage the Red Sox the remainder of this season.

"Whether or not he will manage the team in 1914 depends entirely upon himself," said the club president. McAleer said there was absolutely no truth in the story that Fielder Jones had been offered the management of ths club.

SEC. FARRELL ISSUES NEW RULING ON OPTIONAL MEN

AUBURN, N. Y., July 22.—Chairman Farrell, of the National Board of Arbitration governing minor baseball, to-day gave out the following orders relative to the sale and trading of players among major and minor leagues:

"All optional agreements must be exercised on or before August 15.

"The sale or the release of players within twenty days of the commencement of the major league drafting period or within twenty days of the close of the season of the club disposing of the player is prohibited.

"The sale of a player's release by one national association to another shall be null and void against the selection by draft of the player by a major league club from the selling club, unless he be in the actual service of the purchasing club for twenty days before the opening of the drafting season for major league clubs."

Discovers he is Stung and throws a Fit.
He throws a Dozen Fits and even more,
But all they Hand him is the Frozen Mitt.

A Book of Baseball lurks beneath my Brow;
I know the Why, the Wherefore and the How,
And yet those Gold Brick Merchants make me feel
Like some poor Yokel underneath the Bough.

Quoth a tale from Boston: "Johnny Evers was in bad humor to-day." When Johnny Evers is discovered in good humor it will be time to get out an extra.

One lesson to be learned from the Stahl case is that solid ivory is not confined entirely to the playing end of the game.

The double play is one of the most thrilling features of baseball, but there is nothing particularly thrilling about the double cross.

It is true that there is no gambling at Mineral Springs. Neither is he a gambler who plies his trade with three shells and an elusive little pea.

We are heroes while we shine,
But departing, feel behind us
Footprints planted on our spine.

IDOLS.

In days of old,
When foes grew bold
And slammed the ball about,
The crowd would rise
And rend the skies
Till Walsh came strolling out.

No more they rise
To rend the skies
When Edward makes his bow.
They pass him by
With frigid eye
And yell for Russell now.

The idols rear,
The lowbrows cheer,
And then the downfall comes.
The gents who play
Like stars to-day
To-morrow may be bums.

SPEAKING OF CHASE.

Who stung Frank Chance?
"I," said J. Cal.
"I copped his Hal—
I stung Frank Chance."

Who saw him stung?
"I," said Frank Farrell.
"I lost a barrel—
I saw him stung."

Who'll fix it up?
"I," said Big Ban;
"If any one can,
I'll fix it up."

There was no deception used in the Chase trade. Each was trying to trim the other and naturally one of them lost.

And it is nothing more,
Alas, 'tis nothing more!

Earl Moore refuses to join the Cardinals, the inference being that he prefers to remain with a big league team.

Reading the newspapers, one is led to believe that as pugilists those Cards are great little ball players.

One is glad to learn from Ban Johnson that the gents who control baseball are actuated by a spirit of philanthropy. But it would be hard to convince Artie Hofman or Mordecai Brown of said fact.

HOME AGAIN.

Beneath a spreading tropic tree
The foreign wrestler sits.
And frequently a smile of glee
Across his visage flits.
A proud and happy man is he
With money in his mitts.

And as he counts his pile of dough
He looks across the sea,
And sings: "When Autumn breezes blow
I must return to thee,
America, where boneheads grow—
Sweet land of ivory!"

PLAY CAREFULLY FIRST SHOTS, IS EVANS' ADVICE

By Chick Evans.

TO PLAY golf well, one must keep everlastingly at it. This is a rather hard thing to do, for a golfer may play regularly for a certain length of time, and then not see a club for a week, or a month. This is particularly true of the business man who finds it hard to get out to play on regular days. The lack of regular practice adds to the difficulty and uncertainty of the first few shots of one's game. Golf is at all times the most uncertain of games; perhaps in this uncertainty lies its fascination.

Early Shots Are Important.

Even the expert can not judge what scores or strokes the day's play or the next round holds for him, but the first few shots in a round of golf, especially the first tee shots, are apt to be indicative of the day's play. The first drive is usually played to a gallery, either of spectators or waiting players, and for that reason I have formulated a few rules which I endeavor to use when I play a new course, or hit my first balls after an absence from the game.

Judgment of distance does not mean so much to me at the start as the desire to hit the ball fairly and squarely in the right manner. If one takes great care in the hitting of the first few shots, he will find the path around the course much smoother than if he is careless and misses the first few. A player should learn to hit a ball fairly and squarely, so that the muscles will work in rhythmical assistance. I have frequently gone along teeing and heeling my shots and then at last struck a square blow, and at once felt my muscles respond to the clean impact.

Player Should Study Shots.

I am a firm believer in the habit of hitting a few practice shots before starting to play, and my chief rule is: Keep your eye on the ball and see that your clubhead traverses the imaginary line to the hole.

Judge John Barton Payne once said to me:

"Every shot should be made as if one were making his will."

That is not putting it too strong.

COTTON DROPS AS LONGS LIQUIDATE

New Crops Heavily Sold on Propitious Weather and Absence of Support.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The cotton market opened fairly active to-day, and first prices were 1 to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The steadiness was attributed mainly to firm cables. The fact that dry weather still prevailed over the Central and Western belt also led to supporting orders in the new crop positions. After the call the ring was inclined to sell on reports of further rains in Texas, which relieved the intense heat of the past several days. In many localities the rainfall was heavy. As sentiment is against the market, the selling became rather general, resulting in a rapid decline of 2 to 6 points from the initial level. New crops were the heaviest pressed options. October lost 6 points, while December declined 5 points.

During the late forenoon active buying by the larger spot interests gave the market a steady tone, resulting in prices recovering. Trading was light and the market ruled dull, but steady.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.20; August, 12.06; October, 11.54; January, 11.41.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.34; August, 11.97; October, 11.58; January, 11.57.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, July 22.—This market was due to open unchanged on old crop positions, ¼ point lower on October and 1½ points higher on January, but opened quiet but steady, generally 1 point higher. At 12:15 p. m. the market was steady, at a net advance of 2½ to 3 points. Later the market declined ½ point from 12:15 p. m.

Spot cotton in good demand at unchanged prices; middling 6.72d; sales, 10,000 bales, including 8,700 American bales; imports 15,000, of which 1,000 were American bales.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net gain of 2½ to 3½ points from the closing quotations of Monday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 22.—The weather map presents very favorable conditions; cooler over the entire belt, with a splendid rainfall in the Eastern States, particularly in Georgia, South Carolina and parts of Alabama. Indications are for increasing cloudiness, with prospects of showers in the Central and Western States, while in the Atlantics after to-day the tendency will be for clearing weather.

Liverpool was due 5 points higher, but failed to advance; spots were unchanged; sales, 10,000 bales.

Private advices from Paris, Texas, report good rains in that section. Ballinger, Texas, also reported rain, and at Ardmore, Okla., over one inch July 20.

This market opened lower on the favorable weather map, but there was no pressure to sell, owing to anticipation of a bullish weekly weather report at 11 a. m., and a disposition to advance the market reflected by New York quotations.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, July 22. — Mean temperature ranged from one to six degrees above normal, except on the Texas coast, where there was a deficiency of from one to three degrees. The greatest excess in mean temperature occurred over extreme Southeastern Tennessee and Central Georgia.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 76 to 86 degrees over the Eastern, from 82 to 84 over Central and from 82 to 86 degrees over the Western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 76 degrees occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 86 at Fort Smith, Ark., Fort Worth, Texas, Thomasville, Macon and Augusta, Ga.

Precipitation occurred generally over the Eastern portion of the cotton growing States, over Southern Louisiana, along the coast of Texas and in the Northern and Northeastern portions of Texas, Southern Oklahoma and in a few localities in Arkansas. Elsewhere there was no rain during the week. The percipitation was unevenly distributed and generally light, the heaviest amounts being reported from the Carolinas. More than two inches occurred in parts of Louisiana, Georgia, Florida and the Carolinas.

The greatest weekly amount, 4.70 inches, occurred at Newbern, N. C.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The October delivery was the center of attraction in the cotton seed oil market to-day. Demand from shorts and refiners, induced by the scarcity of crude offerings, served to force that month up 22 points. Old crop oil was in demand. There was very little doing in the late positions.

COTTON GOSSIP

Trading was light and there was no feature to the opening, except some buying on firm cables. The ring sold early, and on the decline Mitchell and Gwathmey became buyers. Mitchell purchased January freely, while Riordan bought December. The market was steady, but sentiment was against the advance.

* * *

The market during the past several days has been almost featureless. There has been some selling on reported rains in Texas, but a few buying orders start the market on a upward scale. However, should rain come over the Western belt it is believed the market will be sold to a lower level. On the other hand, if the rains should not materialize, a higher market is looked for. Sentiment at the moment is very much mixed.

* * *

In reply to inquiries for opinions most traders are replying that values depend on the weather and legislative developments at Washington.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma—generally clear."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, July 22.—Hayward & Clark: The map shows splendid weather, part cloudy to fair in the Central and Western States. Cloudy in Alabama and the Atlantics, raining now in Georgia, some showers in Texas. Indications are for increasing cloudiness, showers in Western and Central belt, tendency toward clearing in Atlantics.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "In the face of lower temperatures, a spreading rain area and a more rapidly increasing early movement than last year, yesterday's cotton market reflected a character of steadiness that surprised both factions. In the adjustment of parities in the New Orleans ring made a more bullish showing than did New York, but in any event, the contract markets reflected a will of their own, which did not harmonize with the talent's interpretation of the things, crop and trade wise.

Over in Texas active ginning operations are now beginning to be reported. Thus far nine new bales have been definitely acounted for. On July 29 last year only twelve new bales had been reported. Much talk has been heard of boll-weevil in Mississippi, but the fact that the farmers in the fertile and highly productive delta country have had very little to say on this subject is significant.

"The Central and Atlantic States have been enjoying just as favorable weather as could be expected, even though a short spell of very high temperature has been reported by some sections. Thus, all in all, the crop seems to be progressing at a rapid pace, and a larger out-turn than that of 1912-13 is likely to prove. On the other hand, steamship men estimate that freight room out of the cotton ports thus far engaged to January 1914 does not exceed half a million bales. Of course, this need not mean that only half a million bales have been sold for forward delivery to Europe, but it at least sugests the probability that foreign consumers are awaiting the outcome of the legislative situation at Washington, in hope that prohibitive legislation will shift market control from America to Europe.

BIG CASH BUSINESS IS DONE IN WHEAT

Chicago Sales Reach Half Million Bushels—Fifty Boat Loads for Export.

CHICAGO, July 22.—There was an enormous business in cash wheat to-day, the total transactions here amounting to 50,000 bushels, all of which was for export. The seaboard reported fifty boat loads or 40,000 bushels taken by exporters, and in addition to this vessel room was engaged for twenty loads for August shipment, with the rate of freight favorable to the shipper.

Prices for wheat closed ¼ to ⅜ cent lower for the day; corn was off ½ to ⅝ and oats were ⅜ to ½ cent lower. Cash sales of corn were 190,000 bushels and of oats 170,000 bushels.

Hog products were lower on selling by those wanting profits.

A message from one of the crop experts now in the Northwest, says that the black rust scare is at an end and that wheat is ripening rapidly and that the harvesting of the same will soon be on.

Louisiana—Fair in North and West, showers in Southeast portion to-night or Wednesday.

Texas—Fair to-night and Wednesday.

NEW YORK COFFEE MARKET.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Underlying sentiment was still rather bullish and it was rumored that this morning's decline in the price of coffee was only natural after the recent rally of a cent a pound, while moreover developments in the spot position have been of a character to encourage holders.

CROP PROSPECTS ADVANCE STOCKS

Large Interests Absorb Issues on All Recessions, Giving Market Brighter Appearance.

BY CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The strong tone which characterized the opening of the stock market to-day was not well maintained, and before the end of the fifteen minutes, sharp recessions were in order. Union Pacific lost its advance of 5-8 and a reaction of a point was recorded in Canadian Pacific.

The traders were disapointed at the action of the market in failing to follow the strong tone in London.

There was no change in Amalgamated Copper, American Can and Reading Steel was off ⅛, while the other changes were about equally divided between gains and losses.

Although trading was slow in London, the tone was strong, with the American shares the leading feature. The curb market opened easier.

After the first few minutes, business was quieter than at any time for over a week past. New Haven was about the most important factor, including 2⅞ to 102⅛. Practically all of the early gains were lost and the tone remained dull. Southern Pacific and steel dropped ⅜. Canadian Pacific declined ⅛ to 219 and Reading lost ¼. Call money loaning at 2½ per cent.

Republic Steel Co. Makes Good Report

NEW YORK, July 22.—The report of the Republic Iron and Steel Company for the six months ended June 30 last shows net earnings applicable to dividends of $1,972,421. Finished and semi-finished unfilled tonnage increased 49,967 tons.

Net assets June 30 were $85,470,663, an increase of $2,403,156 over the same date in 1912.

STOCK GOSSIP

The Financial Bureau says: "Information channels expect to see a continued improvement in the stock market. There is, however, sufficient uncertainty in the situation to warrant reasonable caution, except where investment purchases are made. Would not reach for stocks, but would buy on moderate setbacks. Cotton is bought conservatively on reactions. Wheat and corn are considered cheap, but are offered on advances for trading profits."

* * *

It looks as if this advance has only started. Would increase holdings on any recession in stocks like Union Pacific, Reading, Copper issues and Steel common.—G. D. Potter.

The Bankers Trust Company certificates of deposit for the St. Louis and San Francisco general lien 5 per cent bonds have been listed on the Stock Exchange. It is understood the total amount deposited under the agreement with Speyer & Co. in New York and in Europe is more than $25,000,000. No call has yet been made for the deposit of the French bonds amounting to $23,000,000. Of the remaining balance, a clear majority has been deposited under the Speyer bondholders' agreement.

There has been but little progress made so far in the railway trainmen dispute.

The Consolidation Stock Exchange will open a branch exchange in Chicago.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "The wheat market is regarded as largely a merchandising proposition. It was noticed that some of the leading bears who sold early were buying at the close. Traders who were short of corn and long of oats were closing their spreads yesterday. One line of 250,000 bushels of corn was bought in and the oats sold. There is a lot of this business opening. There are also a lot of shorts in September corn who are long in December corn who have not started to cover."

* * *

Aberdeen, S. Dak., wires: "Commencing in western Clark County running through Spink and southern Brown Counties, extending west to the river, covering over 500,000 acres, 90 per cent total failure. East and north from Aberdeen about 10 per cent abandoned."

* * *

Bradley, S. Dak., wires: "Every field of velvet and blue stem wheat in this section has the little brown specks on the main stem of the wheat, some spots in the fields, the leaves of the wheat entirely dead from it. There is no damage yet, but this is unmistakably the first symptom of black rust. Red rust is very bad over the three States, and it is a short step from red rust to black rust."

* * *

B. W. Snow wires from Omaha, July 21: "The corn crop in Nebraska, south of the Platte and west of Lincoln, already has hurt badly and in a critical position. Portion of the Republican Valley received some rain and the crop is holding out, but fully one-fourth of the State is over the danger line and losing ground fast. From Hastings to Holdredge and south to St. Cloud fields are largely fired. I have seen places to-day where hot winds last week killed the leaves on trees. From Hastings to Crete the corn is showing white, and now is coming to tassel at four feet. East of Lincoln there is small damage, but some white heads are showing. The hopeful possibility lies in the fact that the crop was not in tassel during last week's blistering weather, but many tassels now are coming white. The section of the State I covered is in no worse shape than Northern Kansas."

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "Wheat—We look for a steady market to-day and are inclined to think prices will gradually harden.

"Corn—We can see nothing but higher prices.

"Oats—In our opinion the market is in a strong position, with a comparatively limited long interest and more new buying apparent.

"Provisions—The strength in corn is helping prices, and while there is more or less realizing, new buying appears to be on the increase."

Kansas City says: "The corn and wheat region bulletin shows no rain. Maximum temperatures yesterday 85 to 98 degrees. Minneapolis says rainfall at Campbell, Minn., 70; Crookston, .24; Grafton, N. Dak., .15; Grand Forks, .44; Jamestown, .20; Winnipeg cloudy, 56; Duluth cloudy, 58; Inglewood cloudy, 60; hard rain this morning; Bismarck clear, 61; Harvey cloudy, 60; light shower last night."

* * *

Advices from the largest corn counties in Kansas, which normally produce 55,000,000 bushels: Three reports from Atchison County show loss of 30 per cent; two from Hrabor show loss of 60 per cent; two from Red Cloud show loss of 75 per cent; two from Dickinson show loss of 100 per cent; Jewell County shows loss of 65 per cent; Lyon County shows loss of 50 per cent; Kingman loss of 95 per cent; Sedgwick, 75 per cent; Marshall, 55 per cent; Butler, 95 per cent; Mitchell, 75 per cent; Washington, 80 per cent, and Reno, 80 per cent.

* * *

Lyle wires Chapin from Norton, Kans.: "The important corn counties of Kansas, which is Nebraska line, east of Bellville, crop in normal promise, with light exceptions. West of Belleville there is some damage that may be 25 per cent in some fields. Most of the fields are not much hurt, not much in tassel. Five per cent generally applied will cover all apparent damage to date."

Iowa weather and crop bulletin says: "First four days of week excessively hot. Daily maximum temperatures 100 to 104 degrees over Southern counties on one or more days, and as rainfall was inappreciable over the larger prt of the State, crops beginning to feel the effect of the dry hot weather. Late oats are already damaged to some extent by heat and lack of moisture. In some localities corn is beginning to curl during the day. Corn on good soil holding up well and making rapid growth."

200 METAL WORKERS TO MEET IN ATLANTA

The annual convention of the International Alliance of Sheet Metal Workers will be held at the Piedmont Hotel during the week of August 4.

In a letter received Tuesday morning by the management of the hotel, John E. Gray, general secretary, states that there will be about 200 delegates in attendance. A meeting of the twelve members of the Executive Board will be held the week prior to the convention.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red.....84½@85½
Corn—No. 2.....66 @66½
Oats—No. 2.....39

CHICAGO, July 22.—Wheat was not as strong as shown at the close last night and the feeling was hardly as bullish. Weather in the Northwest is cooler and the crop is progressing rapidly. Northwestern receipts were larger than either a year or a week go. The Russian grain crops were construed by the trade here as quite bearish.

Corn was ⅛ to ⅜c better at the opening, but soon eased off under selling pressure.

Oats were a little bit unsettled, but prices were narrow.

Provisions were easey.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Viaduct Is Wanted For Spring Street

Old Agitation To Be Renewed. Brown Building Changes—Home for Druid Hills.

Things are shaping up in such a way, say well-informed real estate men, that remarkable developments may be expected shortly on the west side of the city. A good deal has been said of late about railroad operations, the proposed Bleckley plaza, which will extend to Forsyth street, and of proposed manufactories along railroad rights of way. Now comes the announcement that the Spring street viaduct project has been revived.

A well-known citizen is telling his friends that he will make the race for council with the Spring street viaduct as one of his platform planks.

A survey of the ground necessary for this improvement was made by Captain R. M. Clayton, Chief of Construction, and the idea is for the south end of the bride to strike Madison avenue.

There has been a growing tendency to bring the Terminal Station nearer the center of the city and nearer the Union Station and advocates of the Spring street viaduct anticipate that such an improvement will contribute largely to this effect. The Bleckley Plaza would also serve this end.

The Spring street bridge would be several hundred feet long and the idea would be to make it uniform in height with the other viaducts. The Forsyth street bridge is now highest, with the Broad and Whitehall structures about on a line.

Brown Building Alterations.

The block of buildings of the Joseph E. Brown Company, on the north side of Wall street, opposite the Union Depot, is undergoing repairs to cost about $500, the metal cornices having been condemned by Building Inspector Hays. The old cornices will be replaced with brick and cement.

To Build in Druid Hills.

Charles T. Hopkins, the well-known attorney, will soon sell his home at 403 North Boulevard, it was learned Tuesday, and will erect a handsome home in Druid Hills. The Hopkins home is one of the oldest in the neighborhood, and is located on a lot 150 by 160 feet. It is at the corner of Angier avenue.

Loan Money at 7 Per Cent.

There is no lack of loan money at 7 per cent on all kinds of Atlanta property, according to S. B. McKinney, of the loan department of the Edwin P. Ansley Real Estate Agency.

"Real estate is the best security for money," declared Mr. McKinney, "and I would loan on any kind of Atlanta property that was worth anything. We are getting money regularly from several States of the Union, and this looks like a good sign to me. Frequently the loan agents don't recommend loans on anything except central and semi-central property, but I consider the suburban property around Atlanta splendid security."

To Fix Price for Floors.

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company are meeting Tuesday afternoon to fix a price on four floors of the chamber home at the southeast corner of North Pryor street and Auburn avenue, a request for such a price having come from the committee looking for a site for the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association exhibit building. Real estate men are watching the outcome with interest, inasmuch as the building will be a distinct addition to whatever district it adorns.

Application for Dormitory.

An application was filed Tuesday with Building Inspector Hays for a permit to build a three-story dormitory for the Marist College on the east side of Ivy street, near Peachtree, at a cost of $40,000. The Mackle-Crawford Construction Company have the contract.

Plans for Exhibit Building.

Among the propositions for a site for the permanent exhibit building of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association is one by L. O. Turner, the well-known real estate man, who would locate this structure on the west side of South Pryor street, 95 feet south of East Mitchell street. The lot is 105 by 185 feet, and a client of Mr. Turner's would sell it for $80,000, on terms acceptable to the Chamber of Commerce.

J. R. Smith's proposition was to erect a $100,000 building at the northwest corner of Bartow and Walton streets on a lot fronting 100 feet on Walton and 95 feet on Bartow. Mr. Smith and associates would lease this property ten years at $18,000 a year, payable $1,500 monthly, with an option to purchase at the end of a year for $185,000. A loan of about $75,000 would have to be assumed and five annual notes of $17,000 would be given at 6 per cent, $25,000 to be cash.

East Lake Sales.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. report the sale of three building lots in the subdivision of the East Lake Drive, Land and Improvement Company for an aggregate of about $2,100. These are in block 2 and just off Lakeview drive. Several new homes are going up in this subdivision.

Mims Parcel Brings $10,937.

W. N. Gary has bought from the estate of Sue Harper Mims, through the L. C. Green Realty Company, a 60 by 145 foot lot on Peachtree Circle, in Ansley Park, for $10,937. This is known as lot 2 of block 13.

Resume Healey Work.

Work was again taken up Tuesday on the Healey Building, following a ten-day strike, and prospects point to satisfactory progress from now on. The Healey lost 60 days at the start because her giant cranes failed to arrive, and thus fell far behind the Hurt Building and the Winecoff Hotel. The latter are due to be completed October 1, but the Healey Building will not be ready for tenants until after January 1, 1914.

Millions of Americans Are Saving---Millions of Americans Need to Borrow---Farmers Especially

Isn't It Possible for the Government to Put Those That Are SAVING In Touch With Those That Need to BORROW. Must the Blood-Sucker Always Play His Game of Usury Between Them?

(Copyright, 1913.)

In this country millions of industrious, careful human beings, anxious to provide for the future, are willing to save—and it is practically impossible for them to get a decent rate of interest on their savings and NOT risk being robbed at the same time.

In this country, where the millions are anxious to save, you have millions of farmers and small business men who are compelled to borrow—as their operations for the year exceed necessarily at one time or another the amount of money that they have on hand.

You have the savers on the one hand getting only 2 per cent if they put their money in the United States Postal Bank. And even then they are limited as to the amount they can put in. They get 3 per cent if they put their money in private savings banks—and take the usual risk of having the money lost through dishonesty or withheld from them in time of panic.

You have the farmers, upon whose labor and intelligence the nation depends, compelled to borrow for the purchase of seeds, of machinery. And, while the SAVING, careful American who accumulates his earnings can get only 2 per cent or 3 per cent interest, THE FARMER MUST PAY, ON THE AVERAGE, EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT FOR THE MONEY THAT HE BORROWS.

Isn't there some way of getting the AMERICAN WHO SAVES and the AMERICAN WHO BORROWS closer together?

Is it not an outrage that the hundreds of millions that the careful American saves should be lent to the hard-working farmer with SOME BANKING ORGANIZATION BETWEEN THE TWO GETTING A "RAKE OFF" OF FIVE AND A HALF PER CENT ON THE MONEY?

That is exactly what happens.

The money that the bankers are lending is simply the money that others have SAVED.

And the money that the farmers are borrowing is simply the money that the savers have deposited in the banks.

The people who save in this country get 3 per cent at most on their savings. And the farmers who borrow pay 8½ per cent.

And in the process 5½ per cent goes to build up a non-producing class THAT IS NOT NECESSARY.

Why should not the Government of the United States pay a decent rate of interest to the American citizen for his savings, and lend to the farmers at a fair rate of interest when the farmers need to borrow?

It doesn't cost 5½ per cent to handle money, to take it in with one hand and lend it with the other.

The United States Government might well afford to pay the careful, saving American 3 per cent on his money and LEND THAT SAME MONEY TO THE FARMER AT 4 PER CENT.

This would give the Government a margin of 1 per cent to cover expenses.

Why isn't it possible to do this?

It isn't possible for various reasons.

The first reason is that the finances of the United States are usually run by bankers for bankers.

The second reason is that the banking class represents Government, which in this country means money.

The little man who is saving his few hundred dollars and who must be content to get 3 per cent and risk losing it, and the farmer who is borrowing his few thousand dollars and who must go almost on his knees to get it, AND THEN PAY EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT—those two classes are not the Government.

The Government of this country is the banking class, the money class, the money itself.

And therefore the man who saves must accept 3 per cent interest and worry about his money's safety.

And the farmer who borrows must pay 8½ per cent and worry about his payments promptly on time, and pay a commission for extensions, and find himself sold out in time of panics.

And those who profit are the middlemen, the NON-PRODUCERS, the parasites, the blood-suckers of the community.

When will the people find a leader big enough and able enough to hand the savings of the frugal workmen in the shape of a loan to the equally frugal and valuable farmer, and take from both of them ONLY ENOUGH TO PAY FOR THE TRANSACTION?

They do these things in other countries.

In Germany and France they lend thousands of millions to the farmers at 4 per cent a year and less.

The farmers of this country borrow thousands of millions of dollars THROUGH A PRIVATE EXTORTIONATE BANKING SYSTEM AND THE AVERAGE CHARGE IS EIGHT AND ONE-HALF PER CENT.

Eight and one-half per cent on one thousand millions is eighty-five millions of dollars. And this is, at the least, FIFTY MILLIONS MORE THAN THE FARMERS SHOULD PAY.

Money is as much a TOOL in these days as any other.

If you make money, the most important tool, expensive for the farmer, YOU MAKE LIVING AND THE COST OF LIVING EXPENSIVE FOR ALL.

This nation should let the farmers have cheap money, and at the same time give to the saving mechanic a fair rate of interest AND ABSOLUTE SAFETY WITH A GOVERNMENT GUARANTEE.

That can be done, if MONEY will permit the people of this country to run the Government and the finances of the country for the benefit of the people—and not for the benefit of the blood-sucking middleman, called the banking system.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Horses and Camels Lived in Frozen North, Once a Mild Tropical Region, and Believed to Have Been Original Home of Man.

By GARRET P. SERVISS

HARDLY have the eyes of the world been opened, as never before, to the fascinating mysteries of the South Pole and its wonderful surrounding continent, than its great rival of the north makes new claims upon our attention.

North Pole Once a Mild, If Not Tropical, Region.

One of the strangest problems that science has to face is that presented by the fast accumulating evidence that, in former times, possibly before man had developed into his present physical form, a mild, if not a tropical, climate prevailed in those vast northern regions which are now buried, most of the time, under snow and ice. There is even reason to think that this strange condition may have existed up to the very Pole!

The period generally fixed by geologists for the existence of this state of things within the Arctic Circle is what is known as the Pleistocene (from the Greek pleistos, "most," and kainos, "recent," the meaning being that it was the most recent period of the great Tertiary Age). Any attempt to fix in years the distance of that time from ours is merely guesswork. It has been said that history reckons by years and geology by ages. It may be that the Pleistocene dates back a hundred thousand, and, perhaps, two or three hundred thousand years.

Anyhow, in Pleistocene times animals and plants, some of which are extinct and others of which are now found only in temperate or tropical regions, existed, apparently in abundance, in the polar regions of the north.

The latest discoveries concerning these vanished inhabitants of a land that has now become frigid and inhospitable relate to camels and horses. The presence of the camel in Alaska, not as a curiosity in a traveling menagerie, but as a regular inhabitant of the land, is astonishing to think of. We know the camel as a desert animal, a lover of the Sahara, with its waterless expanses of wind-driven, sun-blasted sand, but here he appears, dwelling before the two-legged animal that was to become his master had been introduced upon the planet, in a region which, in its present condition, would be almost as inappropriate a place of residence for him as the moon would be for men!

But he has left his fossilized bones there, and science has discovered them. We can not contradict such evidence.

Science Discovers That Horse Lived in Alaska.

Then, too, the horse existed in Alaska in that same strange age. Its remains have been found in so many places that it is impossible to conclude, otherwise than that horses ranged freely over immense expanses within the Arctic Circle where now the sub-soil is a frozen mass that never melts. At that time great prairies of luscious grass must have existed there at nearly all times of the year, for horses do not store up food to last through a long, pitiless winter.

Mammoths and Bison Roamed Frozen North.

Somewhere about the same time mammoths, bisons and other strange animals also roamed that part of the world, finding an abundance of food about them. If there were men in existence at that time, they, too, may have been polar inhabitants!

The great question now is: What caused the change? Why were the Arctic regions warm and genial at that time, and how have they come into the state which we now find?

Some have suggested that the earth has partly tipped over, its axis of rotation, or the line joining its poles, assuming a different position. But this would involve a tremendous catastrophe, throwing the oceans out of their beds and producing disastrous changes all over the globe, and evidence of such a universal catastrophe is lacking. Moreover, there is hardly anything known to science more stable than an axis of rotation. Once set a body spining about a particular axis and it is extremely difficult to change the direction or slope of that axis. The whole form of the earth plainly indicates that it has been turning for countless ages about the same poles, and must have begun to so turn when it was yet plastic, or molten, for it has bulged at the equator, just as any mass of that kind must do under the influence of centrifugal force.

A more probable hypothesis is that the change of climate has been caused by elevations and subsidences of the earth's crust. The presence of horses and camels in Alaska has been ascribed to the former existence of a great "land bridge" connecting Asia with North America. Horses did not exist in America at the time of its discovery, and camels have never inhabited this Continent, except in Pleistocene times.

In view of the facts that I have been reciting, one can not but think of the strange theory, which has been strongly advocated in the past, though never accepted by science.

Many Believe Home of Race Was North Pole.

Not a few students believe that the original home of the present inhabitants of our hemisphere, and perhaps of the whole human race, was around the North Pole, from which they were driven by climatic changes. If that were so, then what is now the Arctic Ocean must have been a land "flowing with milk and honey," in the old Scriptural sense.

The Mad Monarch

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

HIS subjects may be found in every clime;
From every source they crawl to lick his hand.
His home in Hell is wonderfully planned
To welcome slaves that die from time to time.
His nag daughter is Lust. His son is Crime.
He has a solid throne in every land.
And what with hearts to break and serfs to brand,
He goes but seldom to his couch of slime.

He slays men's brains and deadens baby lives.
Oh, the vast pyramids this king could build
Were he to use the bones of starving wives
Who sigh to join the victims he has killed!
Mockingly glow in his grim diadem
Three big ruby letters—R-U-M.

Certified Brides and Bridegrooms

"I Know Dozens of People," She Says, "Who Would Never Have Been Born If This Health Idea Had Been Strictly Carried Out ---and Somehow I Don't Think the World Would Have Been Much Better Off For That."

By WINIFRED BLACK.

ONCE there was a clever little boy who was always taking clocks to pieces and meddling with locks and making wheels, and inventing ways of shutting the old door so that it wouldn't be locked and yet the dog could spring the latch—such a clever, clever boy—but I always hated to have him come to visit at our house.

You see, he could take a clock to pieces wonderfully well and put it together—just moderately well. The clock would go after he had put it together again, but somehow there was always something wrong with it some way. Sometimes it told the time all right, but struck wrong. Sometimes it struck all right, but told the hour wrong, and then again it was the alarm that never quite got over the clever boy's handling.

Sometimes I wonder about him—he's a doctor now, a very successful surgeon; always taking people to pieces. I wonder if they run quite so well when he is through with them as they did before he touched them—he and his "science."

Wants to Regulate All the Marriages.

I see he read a paper at a great medical convention yesterday—it was all about "eliminating the unfit."

He doesn't want anyone to marry but people in perfect health. He thinks physicians should regulate marriage—and regulate it legally. No one should be allowed to marry at all without the "yes, indeed," of the whole medical profession. Fine idea, progressive, and all that. I wonder if it is quite practical?

Now, there's the doctor himself, for instance. I happen to know that his mother was an old-fashioned consumptive. She took twenty years a-dying, and one of his brothers died of the old-fashioned illness out in Colorado not so many weeks ago.

The doctor is alive yet, and very lively, too, thank you. He would not be here at all if his advice had been taken thirty years ago—and just think how we should have missed him and his experiments with the clocks and with people's internals.

We knew a good many of the same people, the doctor and I, when he was taking clocks to pieces.

One of them died of cancer; her mother died of it, too; and she married and had three children. One of them is the cleverest, all-around woman I know, one is mediocre and one has made a fortune in a country town and is spending it helping sick babies get well. Now if that woman had not been allowed to marry, what then?

The best family in the town where we both lived had three sons—every one of them has turned out a failure. One's an invalid, one's a criminal and one's a drunkard. Father was sound as a hickory nut, and mother never had an ill day in her life. How about that family?

How far back have you got to go to get at the source of infection and who's going to do the "going?"

"Somebody 'Queer' In Every Family."

"I can find enough degenerates in any family on earth to get any client off for murder in the first degree," said a clever lawyer to me just the other day. "I don't suppose there's a family in America without somebody 'queer' in it."

Just how "queer" have you got to be and who's going to decide about it when you try to get a marriage license and can't?

"Eliminate the unfit"—well, well, Mr. Physician, who are the unfit?

There's Robert Louis Stevenson, for instance. He never drew a breath of good health in his life. Would you have "eliminated" him?

How about Julius Caesar, how about Napoleon, how about Mohammed, how about Daniel Webster, how about St. Paul?

Unfit—every one of them—from the doctor's point of view, and there are still more illustrious examples of the unfit who survived and made the world over just to suit their own ideas while the "fit" stood around and looked on and wondered about it.

It's a glorious idea you have, doctor, and one that every civilized nation should study carefully—but are you quite sure how you are going to manage it?

I got the "sterilized" fad once and wouldn't let anyone have a drop of water that wasn't boiled; till my old doctor came along and told me I had boiled all the life out of it, and he said he'd risk a few germs if he were me—on the principle that he'd rather be an aquarium than a cemetery—and I got over my fad.

"Drink water all you can," shouts the water-cure fiend.

"Don't touch water till you have to," insists the new specialist.

"When your brain is tired, work your body," advises the doctor who is supposed to know.

"Don't overwork a tired system," says his neighbor. "Rest is the only thing to cure fatigue."

Owe Their Existence To Old-Time Laws.

And so it goes—we're all so interested—in this "eliminate the unfit" idea, and yet when I look around among my friends, a pretty decent lot of people as the world goes, I can see dozens of them who would never have been born at all if this idea had been strictly carried out, and somehow I can't think the world would have been much better off for that.

Take the old clock to pieces, doctor, all you will, but please, good friend, be quite sure you know how to put it together again so it will strike twelve at midnight and not at eight of the morning.

:-: Marshal D'Ancre :-:

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE execution, 296 years ago, of Leonora Galigai, wife of the Marshal D'Ancre, was the wind-up of one of the most remarkable life stories in French history.

In 1610 the fanatical Ravaillac plunged his dagger into the heart of Henry Fourth, and Mary de Medici was proclaimed Regent. At the time of her marriage to Henry Mary brought with her from Florence her nurse's daughter, Leonora Galigai, and her husband, Concino Concini, son of a Florentine notary. By these creatures the Regent was completely hypnotized, and in a trice the nurse's daughter and the notary's son became the most consequential personages in France. Mary, besides making the pair her confidential advisers, gave them every opportunity for advancing their material fortunes, with the result that, in addition to wielding great power at court, they grew immensely wealthy. The well-filled strong box left by the great King was pilfered right and left, and in a little while Concini was able to say: "When I came to France I was not worth a sou, now I am worth eight millions." His wife also laid by a splendid wad of the "needful," besides supplying herself with the plate, wardrobe and jewels that were the wonder of her time.

Purchasing the Marquisate of Ancre and a marshalship, the notary's son was now the Marshal D'Ancre, and as for the nurse's daughter—she was pretty nearly the "whole thing," for she dominated both Mary and D'Ancre.

But alas, for the "best laid plans of mice and men!" One day, after some seven years of prosperity, the Marshal D'Ancre was shot down like a dog by the order, or with the consent, of the young King, Louis Thirteenth, and not long thereafter the court creatures seized D'Ancre's widow and took her before the bar of the Parliament, by which body she was unceremoniously sentenced to the block. The last words of the dashing adventuress, as she looked out upon the sea of humanity that had gathered to witness her execution, were:

"What a lot of people to look at one poor creature die!"

35 CONVICTS BURN TO DEATH

Nina Formby Says She Will Testify Against Frank

DEMAND FOR INTERVENTION MADE IN HOUSE

COURT READY TO DRAW VENIRE

Jury to Try Factory Head Likely To Be Completed by Wednesdty Night.

Despite the reported repudiation of her sensational affidavit that eLo M. Frank had tried repeatedly on the night of the Mary Phagan murder to secure a room in which to bring a girl, Mrs. Nina Formby declared in Chattanooga Tuesday that she would be in Atlanta on July 28 to testify to her statements when the trial of the pencil factory superintendent opens.

According to a dispatch from Chattanooga, where the woman has been for several weeks, Mrs. Formby denies having ever retracted from her original declarations which she made to the police, and further stated that she would repeat them on the witness stand.

The police have asserted that Mrs. Formby has been eliminated from the case.

Superior Judge John T. Pendleton prepared Tuesday to draw the 150 veniremen for the trial of Leo M. Frank. This venire will be called next Monday morning unless the weather is unusually warm.

The jury, in all probability, will be selected and served before Wednesday night, according to Judge Pendleton.

Attorney Reuben R. Arnold stated Tuesday morning that he probably would ask Judge Pendleton to draw the venire from the Grand Jury box, and that he felt confident he could cite enough law on the subject to sustain his point.

Solicitor to Fight Move.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey stated that the procedure was altogether irregular, if not illegal, and that he would oppose such a move as strongly as he fought the attempt on the part of the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley over his protest.

The attorneys on both sides will be notified by telephone when Judge Pendleton begins to draw the venire, and he will allow them to be heard.

Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside at the Frank trial, will not return to Atlanta from Covington until Friday. He announced to a correspondent of The Georgian in Covington that the Frank trial would be called next Monday sure, but he would not commit himself as to whether he would consider any move for postponement after the case was called.

Before leaving for Covington he remarked that if the weather was as hot next Monday as it was last week he would welcome some sufficient ground for postponement.

Both Sides Are Ready.

Attorneys Arnold and Rosser admit they would like to se the trial postponed to escape the ordeal of a hard fight in torrid weather, but state they will be reluctant to ask for delay unless there is some very excellent reason why the case should not go to trial.

Both sides are ready. All the witnesses who will be used are within the jurisdiction of the court and able to attend. The inability of any one of the more than 100 to be in court on the day the case is called would sustain a request for postponement, but the attorneys for the defense made it clear that if any move for postponement for any other reason than the absence of a witness was made, it would come from the other side, or the judge.

Attorney Arnold stated that the failure of the Grand Jury to indict Conley had made little difference to their case, because it had been built before any known move was made to bring about the indictment.

"It made absolutely no difference to us," he said. "It was purely a technical point in the trial that would have been in our favor. As to the negro's character and standing, it would make little difference to a fair-minded [illegible] whether he were indicted."

General Harris to Inspect Second at St. Simons Friday

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 22.—The Second Georgia Regiment is making extensive preparations for the visit to camp of Brigadier General Walter A. Harris and staff on Friday, when a special dress parade will be held in his honor.

The big battle of the maneuvers was fought this morning, the men having to cut their way with bayonets through the matted underbrush of a swamp to get to the firing lines, but, according to the instructors, they did it like veterans. More "casualties" were caused by the barbed points of sandspurs than by the enemy.

Rain fell yesterday for the first time and the men were compelled to drill in ponchos. Forsyth defeated Columbus in a ball game, 14 to 4. To-day's officer of the day was Captain John T. Aycock, and the officer of the guard Lieutenant H. A. Dickens, both of Monroe.

Obsolete Laws to Be Stricken From Atlanta City Code

Through the efforts of Councilman Claude L. Ashley, the City Council has appointed a special committee to strike all persiflage from the City Code. He said it is full of obsolete laws, and gives the following examples:

No public meeting shall be held in Atlanta without twelve hours' notice to the Chief of Police.

Pigs shall not be allowed to run loose in the streets.

It shall be unlawful to trap mockingbirds within the city limits.

It shall be unlawful to auction off mules at the corner of Broad and [illegible] streets.

Clark Makes White Suits Congress Fad

WASHINGTON, July 22.—If Mark Twain could return to earth and come to Congress he would be immensely gatified by the unanimity with which distinguished statesmen have adopted his fad of wearing white.

Over on the House side, Speaker Champ Clark, looking like a huge mountain of ice cream, is resplendent in white from his snowy hair to his immaculate white ties. Since he has set the fashion there, it has spread like wildfire over the chamber.

$5,000 Raised to Free Socialist Riot Chief

GIRARD, KANS., July 21.—The Appeal to Reason has forwarded the $5,000 cash necessary to obtain the release of Patrick Quinlan, a socialist of Paterson, N. J., sent to the penitentiary for inciting a riot during the strike here.

The money was raised by subscription, and will secure Quinlan's release until the case can be carried to a higher court.

BILL GRANTS WAR POWER TO WILSON

Murray of Oklahoma Would Hasten Relief to Americans and Europeans in Mexico.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A sensational resolution demanding intervention in Mexico within 30 days unless peace be restored, and denouncing the Heutra regime as one of "brute force, incendiarism, rapine and murder," was introduced in the House to-day by Representative William H. Murray, of Oklahoma, a Democrat.

The resolution provides that the President shal notify Mexico that peace must be restored and that the lives and property of American citizens and all foreigners sojourning in Mexico shall be respected.

If disorder in the Mexican republic continues for another 30 days the resolution provides the President shall intervent, "establish peace and order and civil government, and take possession of all public property of the former republic of Mexico and hold the same until every item of expense and all damages for the deprivation of liberty or the destruction of property of any American citizen or citizens of any other nation has been fully compensated out of the Mexican revenues."

Gives President War Power.

It is also demanded that in the event of intervention the President is empowered to rehabilitate the Mexican Government, prepare the Mexicans for self-government and restore law and order, "and the President is authorized to use the land and naval forces of the United States for the accomplishment of all such purposes."

The preamble of the resolution defends the Monroe Doctrine and asserts that the United States is in duty bound to protect its own citizens in Mexico as wel as the citizens of other nations. The refusal of this country to carry out the Monroe Doctrine, the resolution says, might justify foreign intervention.

Mr. Murrays resolution refers to President Huerta as "the usurping marauder." Huerta, the resolution recites, "has nullified the Constitution, destroyed all lawful authority and government and has committed upon the persons of the President (Madero) and his femily, a blackhanded murder, paralleled in all history only by the cruelty of the dark ages, with all its superstititions and dastardly deeds of rapine and murder."

"There remains in Mexico neither rights of government nor of belliger-

Bryan Naps in Depot; Buys 45-Cent Lunch For 5; All on $12,000!

CHICAGO, July 22.—For two hours early to-day Secretary of State Bryan sat nearly upright in a railroad station seat and slept. When his train was called he entered a drawing room and prepared to awake in Oelwein, Iowa, where he was scheduled to give a chautauqua lecture this afternoon.

Before his nap Secretary Bryan entertained four newspaper men at a midnight lunch which cost him 45 cents. He ate cantaloupe off a dairy lunch chair. Three others of the party ate canteloupe and one reporter drank buttermilk.

Glass Tries to Quiet Money Board Strife

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Representative Ragsdale, of South Carolina, the member of the House Banking and Currency Committee who suddenly quit the committee because Chairman Glass could not furnish copies of certain amendments to the currency bill that Ragsdale demanded, returned to the conference on the bill with his Democratic colleagues to-day.

Glass made strenuous effort to preserve harmony in the committee.

LAY SERIES OF CRIMES TO GANG

Police Capture Pair in Carroll Street Store Just in Time to Save Clerk.

In the arrest of T. W. Reeves and R. W. Miller after they had knocked senseless an employee in the store of R. A. Gober, No. 30 Carroll street, and as they were attempting to open the safe last night, the police declare they have uncovered a series of daring and cleverly planned burglaries and thefts covering a period of several months.

The capture of the two men, who are said to be desperate criminals, came only after they had been shadowed for more than six weeks by members of the detective department.

Their alleged attempt at looting the Gober store came nearly being fatal to Edward M. Davis, who works on Saturdays and occasionally at other times for Gober.

Davis was beaten unconscious and carried, bound, into the ice box in the rear of the store.

Near Death When Found.

The door was clamped shut on him, and when he recovered consciousness, he found that he was suffocating. Had not the detectives been close on the trail of the robbers, a few more minutes would have resulted in the death of the young man.

Despite the assertion of the detectives that they have connected the men with a chain of robberies and suit case thefts extending over a considerable time, both Reeves and Mill-

BRIDE TELLS HOW TO MANAGE A HUSBAND

Mrs. Frank Wyncoff Who Gives Atlanta Wives Some Interesting Advice.

If a Husband's Worth Having He's Worth Keeping, She Says.

"Always Keep Him Guessing Just a Little," Advises Mrs. Frank Wyncoff.

"I believe a woman should make a study of her husband—always—if she expects to realize a happy and ideal marriage."

That is Mrs. Frank Wyncoff's idea of how to be happy though married. Mrs. Wyncoff, who was Miss Bess Wall before her recent marriage, is the wife of Frank Wyncoff, the well-known real estate operator.

"A wife is supposed to be a helpmate," continued Mrs. Wyncoff, with a bewitching smile, "and what is a helpmate but a person to help solve and cope with difficulties? And how can a wife help her husband if she does not understand and feel in perfect sympathy with him? If husband and wife start out by being frank and confidential with each other, there is little chance of their matrimonial craft being wrecked on the shoals of divorce.

"I believe a wife should be a companion and a chum to her husband. And she should always try to be different, and not fall into a rut. Flirt with him—don't let him think he knows you absolutely, and always keep him guesing a little. But be a chum to him, and make him know that he is the only man in the world.

"At meal time I think a wife should be bright and attractive, telling her husband cheerful, pleasant things.

Avoid petty neighborhood gossip—no woman can be a good wife and a neighborhood gossip at the same time. And a man don't want to hear gossip on coming home from his office.

"It requires art to manage a husband, but if one is worth having, he is worth keeping. So study him, and what will charm and attract him, and one's married life will be harmonious, and not a series of wrangles."

Huge Cofferdam on Ohio River Breaks

HENDERSON, KY., July 22.—Heavy piledrivers and barges were tossed about on the Ohio River like skiffs to-day when 200 feet of the cofferdam on the Government's $1,000,000 dam just below here washed out.

Scores of workmen were swept into the rushing waters, but late reports said none drowned.

Militants Are Fined; Burn Another House

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 22.—Following the severe battle between the militant suffragettes and the police, when the later arrested Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and six of her followers, the rioters were arraigned in police court to-day. Two were fined and two others were ordered to furnish bond to keep the peace.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, July 22.—The suffragettes' "arson squad" resumed operations here to-day. A house valued at $2,000 was destroyed by fire.

16 Considered for Mercer President

MACON, July 22.—Dr. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist Church; the Rev. P. H. Mell, former president of Clemson College, and Professor M. L. Brittain, State Superintendent of Schools, all of Atlanta, are among the sixteen ministers and educators considered for the presidency of Mercer University.

Others considered are Rev. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville; Rev. John Roach Straton, of Baltimore; Rev. W. L. Pickard, of Savannah, and E. T. Holmes, president of Gordon Institute, Barnesville.

MISSISSIPPI PRISONERS PERISH IN CAGE

Flames Start in Hay Stored Under the Sleeping Quarters on Oakley Farm.

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—Thirty-five convicts, sleeping on the second floor of a wooden cage at the Oakley convict farm 20 miles southwest of Jackson, were burned to death early this morning.

All of the victims were negroes and their bodies were burned beyond recognition. This afternoon their charred bodies were buried in the prison grave yard.

The fire started on the first floor at the stairway landing, cutting off the only avenue of escape. The structure was built ten years ago with lumber taken from the old penitentiary building in Jackson. It burned with astonishing rapidity.

The convict farm is not equipped with any form of fire protection. Two night watchmen are employed at the place, but neither saw the fire until the flames burst through the windows of the lower floor.

The screams of the dying prisoners could be heard for nearly two miles. Farmers in the vicinity hurried to the scene, but were unable to give any assistance. The lower floor of the cage was used as a store building, quantities of hay, corn and molasses being in storage. The hay doubtless caused the fire to spread with added rapidity.

The Oakley farm is in charge of Sergeant S. T. Byrd. The prison hospital also is located at that place, but the convicts who lost their lives were not members of the hospital squad, all of them being employed in the cotton fields. Several noted negro criminals were among those who lost their lives.

Coroner J. W. Beal, accompanied by a jury, went to Oakley this morning to hold an inquest, and endeavor to ascertain the cause of the fire.

Origin of Fire Mystery.

"I can't explain it," said Sergeant Byrd over the long distance telephone this morning. "As to the origin of the fire I haven't the slightest idea. It may have been a match carelessly dropped at the stairway. I can not believe it was of incendiary origin.

"There was never a chance to save any of the prisoners. The blaze was under good headway before anybody discovered it. When we reached the building it was to find that the fire centered around the only stairway leading to the upper floor of the cage. All of the upper windows were covered with heavy iron bars and it was impossible for the convicts to fight their way out.

Fight Was Useless.

"We did everything in our power, but the fight was useless. The building was doomed from the first and the piteous cries of the poor prisoners who were being roasted alive added to the demoralization of our forces. We have no sort of fire protection or fire fighting equipment here, and the buckets of water thrown by other prisoners on the building had no effect whatever."

The first news of the holocaust was received by Mrs. O. M. Spickard, secretary of the State Prison Board, in a telephone message from Mrs. Byrd, wife of the sergeant. Mrs. Byrd was almost hysterical and could give but few of the details. An hour later communication was secured with Sergeant Byrd and a list of the victims obtained. A number of the prisoners were life termers.

Under prison rules, all convicts must be in their cages and lights out by 9 o'clock. The prisoners had been sleeping several hours when they were awakened by the intense heat and clouds of smoke that poured up from below.

TARIFF BILL AIDS 'BEEF BARONS' SAYS SMOOT

Declares Free Importation of Meats and Cattle Will Throttle Competition.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—When the Senate met to-day the tariff debate was resumed, and Senator Smoot, of Utah, completed the address he began yesterday. He attacked first the action of the Democrats in placing meats, cattle, hides, wool, etc., on the free list, declaring that such action is only playing into the hands of the "beef barons" and throttling competition.

The importation of meats and cattle free of duty, he said, will give a tremendous advantage to Canada, Mexico and Argentina at the expense of the American farmer.

Scares Auto Rate Cut.

Senator Smoot argued that the chief advocates of the low rates of tariff, both before the House and the Senate, have been the importers. Of reduced duties upon automobiles, Senator Smoot said:

"Just why the European manufacturers should have any consideration in fixing this or any other duty is beyond the comprehension of any fair-minded American citizen. But they figure very extensively in this fixing of the rates on automobiles, occupying many pages of the hearings, and filing threats which, if made elsewhere by Americans, would be considered insolent."

Gave More Than Asked.

He added that the Italian Chamber of Commerce in New York had asked merely for a reduction of 5 per cent on automobiles, but that the Democrats had conceded 15 per cent.

In the cotton schedule, Senator Smoot insisted that the Northern manufacturers had been discriminated against and the Southern producers had been favored. The Northern manufacturers make the finer grades of goods, he said. He declared that American mill workers must compete with the cheap Asiatic labor of Japan in manufacturing cotton goods.

Says Trusts Won't Suffer.

American clock and watch manufacturers, manufacturers of window glass, of pottery and of gloves, all are treated harshly by the proposed law, said Senator Smoot. The action of the Democrats, he said, meant the loss of work to thousands employed at present in these industries.

"The first industries to suffer from this bill will not be the great trusts, but the independent manufacturers having small capital and making goods requiring the highest type of workmanship," he said.

Electric Vote Device Planned for House

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The House Rules Committee to-day began an investigation of the feasibility of installing an electrical voting system in the House to avoid the long delays consequent upon the calling of the roll by the reading clerk.

Representative Walsh, of New Jersey, appeared before the committee to explain an electric system of voting he has proposed.

Alabama Coal Yield Shows Big Increase

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The coal production of Alabama during 1912 amounted to 16,100,600 short tons, valued at $20,829,252, according to a report of the Geological Survey issued to-day.

This is an increase of 1,079,179 tons, valued at $1,794,303, over the 1911 production.

VATICAN GUARDS RIOT; MENACE POPE PIUS

Mutinous Swiss Soldiers Threaten to Break Into Private Chamber of Pontiff.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, July 22.—After 24 hours of wild rioting by the Pope's Swiss guards, during which the men were shorn of their military powers at the Vatican, order was restored to-day.

The demands of the soldiers, which caused the mutiny, will not be granted. The soldiers had asked concessions raising the embargo against them visiting wine shops and other stores along the Tiber; the right to choose their own commander; the increase of the guards' quota, and a demand that no punishment be meted out to them for their mutinous conduct.

The guards, incensed at the official order depriving them of their military status, stormed the Vatican, and for a time it was feared that the Italian troops quartered in the city would have to be called out to quell the disturbance.

Great alarm was felt among the Vatican officials for fear that the soldiers would force their way into the Pope's private chambers.

Drastic measures were taken to guard His Holiness from the angry soldiers, as grave fears were entertained that the Pontiff, still weakened from the effects of his recent illness, would suffer a relapse should the soldiers force their way into his presence.

What punishment will be meted to the mutineers still is undecided, but it was unofficially stated that severe penalties would be inflicted.

Athens Man Dies in Old Scotland Home

ATHENS, July 22.—A cablegram received here announced the death of D. W. McGregor, at his old home in Dundee, Scotland, early to-day.

Mr. McGregor was the head of the McGregor Book and Stationery Company here and has been a prominent citizen of Athens since emigrating from Scotland 35 years ago. He went back to his old home a few weeks ago, accompanied by his wife and daughter, Miss Jessie McGregor, to recuperate, but failed to find the health sought.

One Man Killed in Duel Over Politics

LEXINGTON, KY., July 22.—After having a fist fight over politics Sunday at Olympia, Bates County, Thurman Pergram and a man named Harris agreed to go home, get their guns and settle it. They met as arranged and shot it out.

Pergram was mortally wounded and died while being taken to a hospital here.

Hundreds to Boost State Trade Chamber

Several hundred enthusiastic boosters are expected in Atlanta Wednesday morning, when the State Convention to discuss the formation of a state Chamber of Commerce will be held under the auspices of the Atlanta Chamber. The invitations have been awarded by city officials and officers of commercial organizations from all over the State.

Among the boosters of the proposed organization are Mayor Woodward, J. A. Davis, Albany; E. W. Stetson, Macon; John W. Callahan and H. H. Coombs, Bainbridge, and R. D. Cole, Newnan.

Council Authorizes 5 Drinking Founts

Council took two steps Monday toward making Atlanta a better place to live in. It appropriated $105 for five drinking founts to be placed around the center of the city and created a special committee to consider the establishment of a public comfort station.

Alderman A. H. VanDyke introduced the resolution to purchase the drinking founts. Councilman Sam Shepard's resolution creating the public comfort committee provided that L. C. Green, J. K. Orr and Lee Barnes should serve with three Councilmen to be appointed by Mayor Woodward.

Pastors to Speak at Hearing on Bible Bill

The hearing on the bill requiring the reading of the Bible in the public schools will be resumed before the Senate Education Committee Tuesday afternoon. Following the hearing the committee probably will agree whether to report favorably or unfavorably to the Senate Wednesday.

Among the speakers will be leading ministers of Atlanta in addition to members of the committee.

AGED ATHENS WOMAN DEAD.

ATHENS.—Mrs. Sarah Brandt, widow of Rudolph Brandt, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Koch. She was 74 years old and is survived by three sons, Rudolph and Charles Brandt, of Athens, and J. E. Brandt, of Ilion, N. Y., and her daughter, Mrs. Koch.

'OLD HOSS' JUDGE SAYS PONIES ARE GREAT

Pick of Mountain Herd Ordered to Make Out Prizes for Georgian Contestants.

Telegrams Monday ordered John G. Mobley, of Winnsboro, S. C., to ship the thirteen ponies necessary to complete the herd of 22 which The Georgian and American will give away after the close of its contest, July 31.

Within a few days, the special car bringing the Shetlands should arrive. According to the expert who went to Winnsboro and picked them out, they are a feast for the eyes.

Mr. Mobley has a plantation of 1,400 acres. Of this area, 450 acres of wood lot are used as a pony farm. Just now, he has 100 head of ponies, which have been roaming the woods and the rich pasture, and, these hot days, seeking the shady tangles.

The Georgian and American were offered their pick of the entire five-score ponies. Twenty negroes, mounted on mules, started at 8 o'clock in the morning to round them up. By 1 o'clock they had the 100 little fellows on the summit of a hill where Mr. Mobley is accustomed to give them salt. From this knoll they were driven to the pens, and the best fifteen were selected. All are sound, gentle, affectionate and well trained. They vary sufficiently in markings, colors and size to please all tastes. Perhaps the pick of the bunch is "Flash," who looks like a race horse, and is as fast as his name.

Every one of the ponies is worth well above $100, and with each goes a guarantee of good health and freedom from blemish.

If the boys and girls are enthusiastic about the ponies already in Atlanta, they will be wildly excited over the newcomers, it is predicted, for they are believed to be, if anything, a little better than those first purchased.

ALLEGED YEGGS DEFY ATLANTA POLICE

Pair Captured in Carrol Street Store Just in Time to Save Clerk.

er emphatically denied Tuesday that they had had anything to do with them and defied the police to prove their charges.

The detectives went to the home of Reeves, 13 Stonewall street, and there found three suit cases, which, they say, are stolen property. Another suit case was found in a woman's room at No. 153 1-2 Whitehall street.

Chief Lanford Tuesday morning said that Reeves and Miller had stolen more than 40 suit cases at the depots in the recent weeks, and also had participated in attempts at safe-cracking and burglary. Detectives Chewning, Davis, Sturdivant and Rosser have taken turns in trailing the men in the last six weeks.

Scared by Clock.

About six weeks ago, Chief Lanford says, they planned to burglarize the Barfield store on West Hunter street, near Chestnut. They are said to have had an expert safe-blower with them at the time. They were just gaining an entrance to the store, according to the police, when an alarm clock in a negro's house near by rang and scared them away. Detectives were only a few feet away and were watching the whole operation.

With a pal, they went to the Gober store at about 11 o'clock last night. Davis was asked to go in and serve them with soft drinks. As the young man neared the cash register, he was felled by a blow from a club in Miller's hand. He was quickly bound and hurried to the ice box. The lights were extinguished and the three started at work on the safe with a large key which was taken from Davis.

The detectives, who had been lying in wait for the trio, noted the suddenness with which the lights went out and rushed for the building. Miller, standing on the outside with the club still in his hand, was overpowered before he could utter a word.

The detectives rushed inside and after a hand-to-hand batle with Reeves slipped the manacles on his wrist. The third member of the gang escaped by diving through a window. The police say they know his identity and will be able to arrest him.

General West Gets Gettysburg Medal

A silver medal bearing the inscription "1863-1913, Fiftieth Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg," the gift of Governor Tener of Pennsylvania, has been received by General A. J. West, the Georgia Gettysburg Commissioner.

Accompanying the beautiful gift was a letter from Governor Tener in which he expresses his sincere appreciation for the active interest of General West in the celebration.

The medal has the kneeling figures of two veterans, blue and gray, on one side and on the reverse side two hands tightly clasped.

BLUE LAWS TOO DRASTIC.

GADSDEN, July 22.—People of Attalla have petitioned the Mayor and Council of that city to be more lenient in the enforcement of the blue laws. Recently all soft drink stands were closed on Sunday and people claim they suffered intensely, because of inability to get cold drinks.

AMERICAN PLEAS FROM MEXICO ALARM U. S.

Washington, Watching Every Phase of Situation, Awaits Arrival of Ambassador Wilson.

ent powers such as could be recognized," continues the Oklahoman's resolution.

Punishment for Guerrillas.

After warning the Mexican Government to restore order and protect the lives of Americans, it is stipulated that this Government "shall pursue to the ends of the earth" any military leader or band who disregards the warning.

With the arrival of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson only two days distant, Washington is on the qui vive for every shift in the Mexican situation.

Predictions are made that, by the time Ambassador Wilson arrives, the Huerta administration will be in such an unstable conditon that the envoy will not recommend that it be recognized, no matter how favorably disposed he may be toward it.

Dispatches of the past two days have caused deep alarm to the State Department because of the insistent appeals for help coming from Americans in the demoralized country.

Tuxpam, on the southeastern coast of Mexico, is now the center of all official eyes. The town was captured by the Constitutionalists, and the battleship Louisiana, with Rear Admiral Fletcher aboard, is speeding toward the port from Vera Cruz to prevent possible depredations on foreign property.

Tuxpam is an oil center and a number of Americans and Englishmen reside there. Lord Coudray has extensive interests in the valley.

'Bomb' for Wilson Was Cake of Soap; Doctor Brought It

WASHINGTON, July 22.—When Dr. Bernard Rachauer, who gave his address at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., called at the White House to-day and demanded to see President Wilson, the secret service men took him into custody long enough to examine a black bag the doctor carried.

The secret service operatives feared a bomb. They found a cake of soap and a roll of bandages.

Dr. Rachauer would not state his business with the President. He was told that the Chief Executive was "not at home."

$500,000 Fine Paid Texas by Oil Trust

GREENEVILLE, TEXAS, July 22. A penalty of $500,00 was paid to-day to the State of Texas by the Magnolia Petroleum Company of Texas under a verdict by which H. C. Folger, Jr., and John D. Archbold submitted to a ruling that they release 21,596 shares of stock in the company to a trustee.

Instructions to pay the penalty were received by officers of the Magnolia Company from the offices of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Chamberlain Decides Not to Oppose Tariff

WASHINGTON, July 22.—That Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, a Democrat, does not intend to vote against the tariff bill because it carries free raw wool and other items objectionable to the West became apparent to-day.

An examination of the Congressional Record shows that the remark he made in the Senate yesterday that he would not support the bill has been revised out of the official record.

FATHER SHIELDS GIRL ARRESTED WITH DOCTOR

Grief of Forgiveness Displayed When Effie McCalmon Meets Parent and Brother.

The grief of forgiveness was pathetically displayed in Chief of Police Beavers' office Tuesday morning when Effie McCalmon, the country girl from near Carrollton, arrested Monday with Dr. M. W. Lewis, a prominent physician of that town, in a raid on the Scoville Hotel, met her father and brother, and begged to be taken home.

The girl's pathetic plight was more than the irate father and brother could endure. Simultaneously they clasped her in their arms. Then she was taken by them in an automobile to the station. The trio departed at 11 o'clock for home.

J. M. McCalmon, father of the girl, a prominent planter, and his son Emory, ticket agent at Bowden Junction, both told Chief Beavers they would return when the physician's case comes up to prosecute Lewis to the full extent of the law. They also declared they would bring the girl back to Atlanta and let her tell her story to the court.

"This man has cast shame on my home which can never be forgotten," declared the father. "He has blighted my daughter's future. Restitution by punishment of the law is a poor substitute, but I will have it."

Lewis was released Monday night, after he had secured the $1,000 bond under which he was bound over by Judge Broyles during the afternoon. Immediately afterward he disappeared.

Lewis and the girl were registered at the Hotel as man and wife.

Mother Fights for Custody of Children

AUGUSTA, July 22.—Mrs. Mary W. Zachry, wife of Julian J. Zachry, a well-known attorney and business man of this city and Harlem, Ga., has appealed from the decision of the Ordinary, who awarded the custody of the Zachry children to the father. The case will be heard before Judge Hammond, of the Superior Court.

Zachry and his wife were married here about four years ago, a few weeks after his first wife died. The second Mrs. Zachry was his stenographer. Several months ago the couple separated after a rather stormy married life. The wife took the two children. Zachry sued out writs of habeas corpus and obtained possession of them.

Said the Bulldog in Tree—Never Again!

CHICAGO, July 22.—"Whitey," a bullpup, loved to sink his teeth into auto tires.

Yesterday he made one lunge at a revolving tire, caught it firmly in his teeth and sailed away into the air. Emil Klank, manager of Frank Gotch, wrestler, climbed into a tree, 20 feet high, and rescued "Whitey"—unhurt, but greatly puzzled.

More than 100 automobiles passed "Whitey's" home to-day. "Whitey" sat on the porch and watched them.

Mississippi Tries to Break Rail Merger

CLARKSDALE, MISS., July 22.—Suits are prepared for filing to-day against the Illinois Central and Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroads, demanding penalties of nearly $50,000,000 and a dissolution of an alleged unlawful merger.

Infractions of the State anti-trust laws, charged by Attorney General Ross A. Collins, were given as reasons for ousting the Illinois Central from the State, and taking the charter from the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley.

Photographers of U. S. May Come to Atlanta Next Year

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 22.—With a dozen boosters putting forth the brand of effort that captured the big Shriners' convention, Atlanta's chances of getting the next gathering of the Photographers' Association of America, now in session here, are growing better every hour.

The Atlantans have opened an office in the convention hall and a display in the lobby of the Hotel Baltimore, where the delegates are entertained and provided with literature descriptive of the Gate City. There are about 800 delegates here now, with several hundred more coming.

Harry Goodhart, L. D. Hicks and Fred Houser, who head the Atlanta delegation, are confident that the Georgia city will secure the next convention.

Mr. Goodhart declared this morning that "there is nothing to it but Atlanta. I have talked to several hundred delegates and they all want to come to the 'New York of the South.'"

LEADERS AGREE TO PUSH BIG FUNDS BILL

Decks Cleared in House and Appriation Measure Will Go to Senate This Week.

When Chairman Wheatley, of the House Appropriations Committee, calls up the general appropriations bill to-day he will ask that it be made a continuing order until it is disposed of in the House and sent to the Senate.

The chairman of the Appropriations Committee has the extraordinary right under the rules of the House of calling up his bill whenever he pleases, and it must have the right of way.

Chairman Wheatley has determined to exercise his right to the limit, and to that end has invited and obtained the promise of Speaker Burwell's earnest and sincere support in putting the bill through.

Trying to Push It Along.

It is the purpose of Chairman Wheatley and the Speaker to have the general appropriations bill in the hands of the Senate at least by the end of this week, and if they succeed they will have the bill in the Senate earlier than it has been since the war, and at least ten days earlier than it has been in thirty years.

When the big bill comes up the House will immediately be resolved in a committee of the whole House, with some member other than the Speaker presiding, as the rules require.

The chairman of the Committee of the Whole House has not yet been announced, but it is likely it will be Mr. McMichael, of Marion, or Mr. Miller, of Bibb.

Both are experienced parliamentarians and either would make a fit and proper person for the work. Both are behind the effort to get the appropriation bill into the hands of the Governor well in advance of adjournment, as the Governor has requested.

General Tax Act Next.

The bill carries the constitutional appropriations, statehouse salaries and the like, which can not be changed by the House, in full, and these items will be quickly disposed of.

The other items will go in in blank, to be filled in by the committee of the whole.

Immediately after the general appropriations bill is disposed of the tax revision bill and the general tax act will come into the House from the Ways and Means Committee, when, at the request of Chairman Aiken, those bills also will be given the right of way. Both should be in the hands of the Senate before the end of next week.

Speed Assured in Senate.

If this is accomplished, another House record will be smashed.

The chairmen of the two big committees and the Speaker of the House have been assured by a large majority of the House that they will be co-operated with in their efforts to expedite legislation.

In the Senate President Anderson is but waiting for the House measures in order that he may duplicate there the program of orderly haste to be enacted in the House. He has assurance of co-operation from a practically solid Senate.

High Cost of Dying Cut by Funeral Bus

CHICAGO, July 22.—The high cost of dying is to be lowered in Chicago with the advent of motor 'buses. The funeral 'bus will have a compartment to the right of the chauffeur's seat for the coffin, and above it a place for flowers. Near the driver will sit the minister and the undertaker, and there will be accommodations for twenty-seven mourners.

The funeral 'bus, it is said, will reduce the transportation cost by $30. Ten of the 'buses are to be in operation soon.

'Woman in the Case' Is a Pet House Fly

PITTSBURG, PA., July 22.—A remarkable suit for divorce was filed here by Attorney A. C. Stein for Mrs Jeanette Helen Janderson against Walter Bradley Janderson, a well-known stock broker of this city.

Mrs. Janderson, who is a pretty and attractive woman with an exquisite figure, gives as a reason for asking the decree that her husband "lavishes all of his affection on a pet housefly which is continually with him no matter where he goes."

New Trolley Cars Easy for 'Hobblers'

CHICAGO, July 22.—Chicago's 1913 model trolley cars will be built to accommodate women. Company officials announced to-day that the steps of the 200 new cars to appear this fall will be two inches nearer the pavement than the steps of the cars now in use.

The new cars are designed especially to accommodate women wearing tight skirts.

Papers for Barber in Crawford Case Will Be Asked After Solicitor Is Named.

No new steps have been taken in the effort to obtain requisition papers for Fred Lumb, the barber alleged to be an accomplice of Mrs. Mary Crawford, and who is said to be in New York. Following the attempt to obtain the papers Monday morning, Attorney J. S. James, counsel for the Crawford heirs, announced that the papers would be asked for after the appointment of a solicitor.

The application of Monday morning was not a formal request for the papers. According to Attorney James he simply asked Governor Slaton if it would be possible to obtain requisition papers for a man before he was indicted. This request, he says, he made several days ago, and Governor Slaton said he would advise him Monday morning.

As Colonel James had made no formal application, the Governor advised him that he could not make a decision.

Judge W. D. Ellis Monday afternoon asked Attorney Lewis Thomas to act as Solicitor in the place of Hugh Dorsey, who is disqualified to handle the Crawford prosecution because he law firm of which he is a member represents one of the parties in the civil case.

Says Modern Man Excels Patriarchs

CHICAGO, July 22.—"David and Solomon and some other patriarchs were excellent men as judged by the standards of their own time, but they would not be admitted to membership in the church of to-day," said the Rev. John Thompson, of Chicago, who contends the world is growing better.

The speaker said the rise of golf, baseball and other outdoor sports was a sign of improving moral standards.

All Missourians to Make Roads 2 Days

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., July 22.—Governor Major issued a proclamation to-day setting apart Wednesday and Thursday, August 20 and 21, as public holidays, to be known as "Good Road Days."

Every able-bodied man in rural districts and cities of the State is to put in these days working upon the public highways.

Fair Sponsor of Arabian Style Admits New Fad Is Doomed Here.

At last Dame Fashion seems to have overstepped the line in freakish wearing apparel for women, so far as Atlanta is concerned.

The Arabian nose veil, an importation now much in vogue in Newport and other Eastern centers of all that is fashionable, has met a sharp rebuff here.

The veil in use is drawn taut over the tip of the nose and covers the mouth and chin. One sees but the eyes of the wearer. Mrs. French Vanderbilt, Mrs. William Goadby and others are its sponsors in the East.

Miss Nancy Reed, a former Atlanta girl, now visiting Mrs. George Spier in Twelfth street, is among the first here to attempt the nose veil.

"It won't do for Atlanta girls," she declared, and her decision seems to have been sustained, especially by the men of the city, who enjoy seeing all of a pretty face.

'Cherry Pie' Made Of Watermelons

—New Version.

HAMMOND, IND., July 22.—Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the Indiana State Board of Health and pure food specialist, is trying to find the Chicago genius who is making cherry pie from watermelon pulp.

Hurty sojourned at a Gary cafe for a meal and ordered cherry pie. He bit into a matermelon seed, and began an investigation. The proprietor threw the burden of the pie on Chicago bakers.

MAYOR BALKS AT DICTOGRAPH CHECK

Refuses to Sign $19 Voucher for Use of Very Machine That Trapped Him.

Mayor Woodward again is refusing to sign checks.

From the Police Department has come a voucher for $19 to pay the expense of the very dictograph that entrapped Mayor Woodward, Colonel T. B. Felder and others in the Williams House No. 2. Chairman A. R. Colcord, of the Council Police Committee, hesitated at approving this voucher and Mayor Woodward scoffs at the idea of him signing the check.

Also, he explained, he is not inclined to throw away $5 on an option on an electric feature to the new crematory. He sent the resolution providing this back to Council without acting on it. The lower branch of Council passed it up again by a vote of 15 to 2.

Although Council easily overrode Mayor Woodward the thirty-third time on the tax office merger issue the bill must be passed by the Legislature to become effective. It will have to be attached as a rider to the other charter amendments and then submitted to a vote of the people along with the other amendments.

DIXIE IS DELUGED BY PROSPERITY, SAYS HARDY

Retailers' President Declares Business Is Better and Georgia Is Forging Into Lead.

"Dixie is bubbling over with prosperity."

That is the characteristic way in which J. W. S. Hardy, of Waycross, president of the Retail Merchants' Association, defined commercial conditions in the South when seen by The Georgian at the association's convention headquarters in the Hotel Ansley.

"But we can better the present condition and our merchants in all parts of Georgia have come to the realization that by individual effort and plugging in the right direction we can make Georgia the foremost State in the Union," declared Mr. Hardy.

"To this end the convention was called," said Mr. Hardy, "to meet in Atlanta while the Legislature is in session, so that merchants can be in close touch with their Representatives and exercise every influence in their power to get them to support and vote for the garnishment and fraudulent check bills.

"This is a business meeting of business men, and in no sense is it for the purpose of boosting Atlanta interests. Its only purpose is to work for the best interests of the merchants of Georgia.

"We are in an era of good business that is unrivaled. Competition is keen, but it is also true that competition is the life of trade and progress.

"From all parts of the State come encouraging assertions that this year has been a little better than last. Even a little is better than no increase at all. But I am inclined to believe that business this year is infinitely more than a little better than last in all lines."

'Slit Skirt O. K. If There Is No Ogling'

CINCINNATI, July 22.—Chief Copelan announced to-day that Cincinnati women may wear the near slit skirts without police interference, provided their garments doesn't cause riots or blocking of traffic.

"I am trusting to the good sense and modesty that I have always observed among Cincinnati women to prevent them from wearing indecent garments," said Chief Copelan.

"I do not set myself up as a dress censor, anyway. So long as the women do not raise a riot, they can dress as they please."

FREED, FORMER ATLANTAN DIES AS CONVICT

Career of Cardenio F. King, Promoter, Begun Here, Closes in Massachusetts Cell.

The climax of a sensational career that started in Atlanta several years ago came at the State farm at Bridgewater, Mass., Monday night, when Cardenio F. King, once a newspaper man and promoter of this city, but later a well-known figure in Boston financial circles, died a convict while Governor Foss was preparing to grant him a pardon.

King was well known in Atlanta, and many of his schemes are remembered here. He came to this city a number of years ago and engaged in newspaper work. After a short time, however, he forsook the newspaper business to embark in a number of promotion schemes, few of which turned out successfully.

Convicted in Boston.

He spent several years here, with varying financial success, then returned to North Carolina. Later he went to Boston, where he became involved in the schemes that brought about his arrest and conviction.

King was prevented from dying a free man only by a legal technicality which made it impossible for the Governor of Massachusetts to grant a pardon over the telephone. King had been suffering from an incurable disease for several months, and word that his condition was hopeless was sent to the Governor Monday morning.

Pardon Came Too Late.

Late in the afternoon Mrs. King, who was at the bedside of her husband, received the news that the Governor had decided to grant her husband a pardon.

Attorney General Swift ruled that the pardon could not be granted by telephone, and Governor Foss sent word to the State farm that the papers would be signed early Tuesday morning. Dr. Emerson, medical head of the State farm, hurried to Bridgewater with the news, but found that King was dead.

Accused Lawson at Trial.

King began his operations in Boston in 1904, shortly after leaving Atlanta. In 1908 he was forced into bankruptcy, when his customers complained that stocks they had purchased from him had never been delivered. A warrant for his arrest was issued and he surrendered in June of 1908. He was convicted and sentenced to serve from ten to fourteen years.

He began his term at Charlestown, but became ill and was removed to Bridgewater. During his trial King created a sensation by declaring that Thomas W. Lawson, the Boston capitalist, had driven him to financial ruin.

Council Serenaded After Aiding Police

Council Monday had just increased the salaries of six roundsmen $5 by changing their names to sergeants and the leaders in the fight were leaning back in satisfaction when the air suddenly was filled with lively dance music.

Custodian Joe Shearer had a phonograph in the adjoining committee room and someone had started it. The councilmen heard all the records before they stopped the machine.

DELLA FOX LEFT $10.000.

NEW YORK, July 22.—In her will filed to-day Mrs. Della Fox Levy, known on the stage as Della Fox, left her entire estate, said to amount to between $10,000 and $15,000, to her father, Andrew J. Fox, of St. Louis.

Joe Hill Hall's Boom Stirs Macon Politics

MACON, July 22.—The announcement from Joe Hill Hall that he is a probable candidate for Mayor has injected considerable interest in the local political situation.

Alderman A. L. Dasher is already in the field on an anti-administration platform, and Bridges Smith, the City Clerk, is on the verge of announcing with a full administration ticket. There is also a possibility of the Law Enforcement League putting out candidates.

Mr. Hall supported the present administration four years ago, but in the last two or three years his feeling toward the Moore party, as it is called, has somewhat cooled.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Moaning feebly, Rusty shook his gray head.

"I'se so scairt I don' remember nothin'."

"They're nothing but suits of armor. Stay on your pins and don't bump into me again. The next one of those rear-end collisions and I'm liable to let some moonlight into you. You've been treading on my heels every step I take and when I stop you bump into me."

"I'm powerful scairt I might lose you."

"A fine chance!" snorted his master. He swung the lantern about and peered into the corners of the apartment.

("Well, Rusty," he went on in his natural voice, "we've been through this old castle pretty thoroughly now from dungeon to tower, and not a sign of Duke or Prince or anyone else—unless they pound or carry a smoky lantern. It's a clew, Rusty; it's a clew. We'll stick right here till we find out where it leads. I'll swear the Duke never went to Madrid, but came right here from the inn. Get away from me, I tell you!"

A Little Cheer.

He struck a match and resumed his examination of the fireplace, holding the light well inside.

"There's a fine chance for a fire. The chimney's clear. Now then, but up that little table and start a fire. You won't feel half so scared when you've got a good blaze behind you."

By virtue of his great weight Rusty reduced the old table to firewood by the simple process of sitting on it. As he was building the fire, Jarvis suggested that he would scout around a bit.

"Don't you do no scoutin' outside of this here room!" ordered the old darky, straightening up. Jarvis laughed and told him to go on with the fire. He sat down on the stone floor and began removing his shoe with many grunts.

"Now, what's the matter? What's wrong with your shoe?"

"'Tain't my shoe—it's my foot," grunted Rusty. "You know, when I was holdin' the hosses an' waitin' an' waitin' fer you to come out—dem guns went off and all dem hosses jumped right on me!"

"There were only two horses, Rusty," smiled the young man.

"I was countin' dey feet," grumbled the servant, as he bent over the fire once more. He had sufficiently recovered from his fright to be disgruntled and make pertinent addenda to his master's comments on the lay of the land.

"This way leads to the main gate," remarked Jarvis, thoughtfully, peering through the other door.

"That's where dat black thing followed me," grumbled Rusty. He appeared to locate every inch of the castle through its connection with some personal disaster.

The Death Trap.

"Well, there's been a black thing following me," retorted Jarvis, "treading on my heels every step I've taken, too! And that door goes to the armory.

"That's where I fell down dem slippery stairs."

Suddenly Jarvis stopped and stared intently into a far corner beyond the fireplace. There was a small door partly opened, as though some one had pulled it hastily behind him as he darted through.

"That's it!" he exclaimed, triumphantly, darting forward. "Where can that lead——"

His foot went down suddenly through the floor. He hurled himself forward and the floor seemed to rise and strike him violently in the chest. The next instant he rolled to one side and was on his feet.

"My God!" he muttered brokenly, the cold sweat bathing his face. "My God! That was a close one!"

"Lordy, Marse Warren—wha' dat?" cried Rusty, starting to his feet. Warren's lantern had been dashed against the wall and he stood in the uncertain firelight.

"Get back!" he ordered sharply. Light that other lantern."

Rusty cautiously approached with the lighted lantern. Warren took it in his left hand and held out his right.

"Take a good grip, Rusty. Can you hold me?"

"Yes, sah!" Rusty crouched back and set himself.

Jarvis cautiously stepped out with his left foot. A four-foot strip of the floor sank under the light weight and the other end of the trap, the end nearest the wall, rose. If he had been walking at an ordinary gait nothing could have saved him. The speed of his rush and his remarkable agility carried forward far enough for the weight of his upper body to strike the rising end of the trap and thus shut it again.

"God! I thought so!" he murmured as he stepped back after a timid peep into the black pit below. He wiped his face and his hand trembled slightly for the first time that night. "Water and a long drop! No wonder people disappear in this castle. Good Lord! What if her brother went down there! Rusty! Whatever happens, keep clear of this. If you step on this you'll never see Kentucky again, for sure!"

Rusty opened his ample lips, but before he could speak a groan came from beyond the wall they were facing. It sounded nearer and more human than ever. But it trailed off into a sound like the winds among the empty echoing towers.

"It certainly sounded like a groan," muttered Jarvis, tip-toeing cautiously around the trap toward the little door. "Shut up, Rusty!"

The faithful but terrified servitor was giving vent to sounds more dreadful than those that issued from the walls.

"Marse Warren! look out!" he begged.

The Portrait.

"Listen!" He stood for a few moments in silence, peering in at a little flight of stone steps that led up through the wall. Then he turned back to the fireplace.

"I guess it's the wind. This place is getting on our nerves."

"This warn't no wind, Marse Warren," protested Rusty, solemnly. "Ah hope to die if dat warn't a sure-nuff groan. An' ah wants to tell you somethin' else." He turned and stared accusingly at a large portrait of some grandee of Charles V.'s time which hung beside the broad steps that mounted to the corridor of the armory. "Hab you ever been in church or somewhere an' all of a sudden a feelin' come over you that there was eyes starin' at the back o' your haid? You just knowed it?—until you couldn't stand it no longer and just had to turn 'round and see who 't was?"

"Why, yes, Rusty," agreed Jarvis wonderingly. "I've had that happen. Why?"

"That's just the way I feel now—like they was eyes lookin' at me. You see dat picture? Seems like dat feller was lookin' at me—like he'd step right out o' de frame; or dem two battleship boogies"—he pointed to the knights beside the staircase—"jump right down here!"

"It's been a good many hundred years since those boys jumped, Rusty," smiled his master. Sh-h! Listen!" There was the sound of swift footsteps again. Jarvis softly cocked his pistol. "Somebody running—coming this way."

Again it ended in the two thuds, like a blow and fall. And all was still. Jarvis swore.

"I wanna go home," moaned the darky.

His master set his teeth. "What do you know about that?" He had walked swiftly to the little door in the wall and was peering in.

"I don't know nothin' about."

"I thought so!" exclaimed Jarvis and he whistled softly, as if in utter amazement. Rusty's curiosity again overcame his terror and he drew near. Besides, it was more comfortable in the shelter of his master's .45.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Rusty, this man with the smoky lantern has been up these stairs!"

"You ain't a-goin' up?" protested the old darky.

"I am not!" was the emphatic reply, "cause the Duke or some of his men are probably at the top of the stairs with a long gun—and I'm no book hero."

"Suppose it am the Prince," suggested Rusty, with awe.

"Well, suppose it is the Prince. He might blow my head off because he doesn't know what I came for. And if it's some one else—they'll blow my head off because they do know."

Without warning the sound of the running feet reached them again, but now it seemed to come from every quarter of the surrounding area. Jarvis, with Rusty cowering at his elbow, backed out into the center of the room, the long blue barrel of his revolver making quick play in all directions.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

A Bachelor's Diary

He Is Mistaken for a Kidnapper

By MAX.

JULY 1.—Our days are so monotonous that if I were to attempt to set down in detail what happens, it would sound like a chapter from Genesis: And Arpasha begat Shelah, and Shelah begat Eber, and Eber begat Joktan, and Joktan begat Almodad, etc., etc., an endless chain of begats.

For I would relate in the same sing-song strain that a bath in the lake followed getting up and breakfast follows the bath, and a nap follows breakfast, and lunch follows the nap, and a walk in the woods follows the lunch, etc., etc., a monotony that is growing pleasing to me now that I have learned to find thrills of excitement in Mrs. Allen's daily report at breakfast that she found a rat in the trap. I do not recall a market report in six months previous that has excited me more.

Manette is growing brown and fat and sturdy, and with no one near to remind us that she has a delicate stomach, all such trouble has passed away, proving my contention that we keep our physical ailments alive by recognition of their existence. If Richards could see us eating our picnic lunches off a log in the woods, stopping occasionally to brush off an inquisitive ant or a ladybug that is lost from home, and regarding these little creatures of another world as friends, instead of germ-infested enemies, she would steal the child from me and bring suit in the court charging that I am not fit to be its guardian.

Her Future.

"I am convinced," I said gravely to Manette this afternoon, taking a chicken sandwich from her hands, for she is always the hostess at our picnics, "that a man-cared-for child is healthier than one that is cared for by a woman. She is neither nagged nor pampered so much. Now, if Richards were here she would make you throw away that sandwich because there is an ant on it—brush it off, my dear—and she would worry you because there is a streak of dirt on your cheek and a rip in your dress. I don't. I just let you forget all those things and be happy. I never want you, my baby, to be so much of a woman that you can't enjoy the Lord's big outdoors because you have left your powder rag at home. You must rise above yourself, little one."

She looked at me gravely with those big blue eyes, and then, robbing her sandwich of the meat that she might temporarily rid the brown-eyed pup of the look of longing he had fastened on her, said, "When I get big, I won't be a woman at all. I'll just be your wife."

"How I wish you were old enough," I replied fervently.

That would be a glorious thing, Diary. To take a child and train her in the ways one desired, and then marry her when she is grown.

"You will marry some nice young man," I argued, "and go away and leave your Uncle Max. It is the way of nature, and I can't keep you always."

I suppose I unconsciously sighed, for in another moment she was on my lap, rubbing a greasy sandwich down the back of my neck, while she protested between hugs and crumby kisses that she never intended to leave me, unless, and it gave me a twinge to hear her say it, "Lisbeth sent for her."

I was holding her tight with one hand, and with the other was trying to make the brown-eyed pup leap over our heads for a piece of chicken when I heard the sound of approaching horses, and a girl's merry laugh.

There was an abrupt turn in the bridal path near us, and a minute later they appeared in view, all unconscious of three interested listeners, for the pup had also paused in his play to cock wise-looking ears their way.

"I don't," the girl was saying, "believe in the kind of love you talk about. It would make of woman a sort of domestic chattel, like a cook-stove or a table. The fundamental principles of liberty—here her attention was attracted to us by the pup's shrill bark—I think that term, "fundamental principles," made him fear a procession of women were coming—and she stopped abruptly, staring at us with eyes that were first astonished, and that changed to admiration when she saw Manette.

An Admirer.

"What a beautiful child," she said, swinging lightly from her horse, and coming across the grass toward us, her horse following, with his nose pressed lovingly against her shoulder.

"Whose is she," impatiently, "and what is she doing here in these wilds alone with a man like you?"

My disguise was plainly perfect. I hadn't shaved in three weeks, and wore that morning a suit of Allen's overalls, for we contemplated a jaunt across the lake in an improvised raft.

I laughed. I do not know when I was more amused.

"That," I replied, making no attempt to rise or remove my hat, "is not the affair of every wayfarer on the road."

She colored angrily. "I intend to make it my affair. Look at her shoes with holes in the toes, and the scratches on her poor little arms and legs. You poor baby," getting down on her knees, "has that man been abusing you?"

I do not think at first Manette comprehended what the girl meant, and when it dawned upon her, her indignation was fine to see.

"I am not a poor child," she cried. "I am a rich child; everyone says so. Nurse says I'll be worth millions some day; and I don't want them. I want only my Uncle Max!"

I think there flashed across her brain a recollection of the woman who kidnaped her, for in a frenzy she threw her arms around my neck and screamed: "Make her go 'way! Make her go 'way! I'm afraid; I'm afraid!"

I was amused no longer, for the child was plainly suffering. Rising to my feet, I lifted my hat and said very coldly:

"You are trespassing on private property. Please ride on."

"We will go," she answered, angrily, "but this doesn't end here. I will find out who this Uncle Max is the child wants, and take steps to restore her to her guardian. She plainly doesn't belong to a man like you."

He Laughs.

Then, though Manette still whimpered I threw back my head and laughed till the woods rang with it. I had a vision of what my friends and associates in the city would say if they knew some pert young suffragette was preparing to have me arrested for a tramp and abductor of small children. It even flashed across my mind that if those men afflicted with the kind of softening of the brain that fits them for getting out the Sunday papers knew of it, they would give it three pages, with pictures of all of us, including the pup and the sandwich Manette still held in her grimy fingers. They might even give a picture in magnified proportions of the ant that this little baby-heiress to millions had brushed off her bread.

I laughed so long that Manette stopped whimpering, and lifting her face from my shoulder said in tones that breathed defiance, "Go 'way, please. I want my Uncle Max."

The girl turned to her escort, who had jumped from his horse when I began to laugh, and said something I did not catch. Evidently his reply restrained her from tearing the child from my arms, for with a protesting air she suffered herself to be helped to her horse, and they rode away.

The last look I had of her was of a face crimson with indignation and anger. The last she had of me was of a man doubled up with laughter.

"Manette," I said gravely, taking my share of the lemon cake, "those briar scratches you got on your arms and legs yesterday are giving your Uncle Max a bad name."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET YOUR MOTHER DECIDE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young man with whom I have been keeping company for quite some time. We have broken off friedship for a while, and my mother strongly objects to his return. I love him. Can you tell me what is best to do? H. V. E.

Mother always knows best, particularly when the girl is very young, which I am judging is your case.

If he is worthy of you he will wait. Believe me, my dear, if he is the man set aside to be your mate he will not be easily discouraged.

THAT IS HIS PLACE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you kindly enlighten me as to whether it is proper to thank the gentlemen after returning form a show or a ball? BABY.

The good old-fashioned courtesy makes all the pleasure his. He owes you the delight he has had in your company.

LET YOUR MOTHER KNOW.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am sixteen and deeply in love with a man two years my senior. For six months he took me home from school, and after I was graduated he expressed his love for me. He has given me a ring. The only thing that makes me hesitate is that we are of a different religion. ESTELLE.

Your mother should know of your love affair at once. Not only because of the difference in religion, but because of your extreme youth.

DUTY, MY DEAR.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been engaged to a young man two years. The man is 33 years old. We love each other very much. Owing to our aged mothers, we think it's impossible to get married, as he is the only support of his mother and I am the only child left at home to take care of my mother, who is 85. Between love and duty, which will we do? M. S.

Your mothers are so old that your time of waiting will be very short. I am sure if either of you failed in your duty you would live to regret it. Unless you can marry and take your mothers with you, which is not advisable, postpone your marriage till you can enter it feeling that your happiness is not purchased with another's woe.

LET THE MATTER END.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had the pleasure of meeting a young man at a public dance. He asked to see me home and I consented. He made an appointment with me that we both kept. When he left me he failed to set a definite time for a next meeting, saying he would try to visit a place where I frequented. Now, do you think that I should have anything to do with him in the form of writing, etc., or drop him, as I am positive that he never will visit this place?

ANXIOUS.

You are very sure he will not keep any appointments he makes, so why concern yourself about him? Let the acquaintance drop before it is more serious.

No Tunes Allowed.

Not long ago a certain brass band, which shall be nameless, was engaged to play at a local village feast. On the way there the conducter suggested that they should "have a tune," but the driver of the wagonette at once objected to the project.

"No toons while I drive," he remarked.

"But, why?" persisted the conductor. "Surely the horses wouldn't run away?"

"No," said the driver, "they wouldn't."

"Then why object?"

"Simply becos the poor beggars could not run away if they tried," was the grim retort. "Their running away days is over, an' so long as I drives you ain't a-going to take no mean advantage of 'em. That's why I sez no toons."

The conductor subsided, and there were "no toons" on that journey.

:: The Temper Curse :-: By DOROTHY DIX. ::

THE real problems of life are not the big problems, nor are its tragedies the great sorrows of existence. The conundrums that nobody can answer are offered by just little everyday complications, and the things that break our hearts, and wreck homes, are not great sins, or afflictions, but small, miserable, sordid worries and aggravations that blot out the sunshine and take all the joy out of life for us.

As an example of this I submit the case of one of my correspondents. She is a good, conscientious woman, married to a good man, and they have had a happy home. Recently, however, the woman's mother has died and she had to offer the shelter of her home to a young sister, a beautiful and talented girl of 20, who has the temper of a virago.

The girl has nowhere else to go, for although she is amply fitted by her abilities to support herself, she can keep no situation because of her uncontrolled temper and tongue. To have to support her is a burden on her sister, but the worst feature of it is that the girl has made a peaceful and happy home such a storm center that it is wrecking it, and the woman's husband is very naturally threatening to send the sister away.

Fears the Worst.

The poor wife and sister is between two fires. She fears the worst for her sister if the girl, young and beautiful and headstrong, is deprived of all guardianship and restraint, and even of shelter, and at the same time she feels the injustice of sacrificing her husband and her home to the girl's tantrums, and she asks what she had best do under the circumstances.

I side with the husband. I think that there is nothing else in the world in which the most of us show ourselves so cowardly as in the craven, meachin' way in which we give into people with tempers and let them ride roughshod over us. Before a redheaded temper and a venomous tongue we are all arrant cowards, and that is why the possessors of tempers don't try to control them.

Among my acquaintances there is a certain child who holds the world's championship for crying. She shrieks and shrieks until she maddens everybody about her. Not long ago, catching her for once in a smiling mood, I said, "Mabel, why do you cry so much?" She looked at me in round-eyed amazement and calmly replied, "Why, if I didn't cry, how would I get anything I want?"

That is the philosophy of the individuals with high tempers. They know that the balance of us are so terrified at the thought of their raging that we will give into them without an argument; that we will walk on eggs to try to keep from ruffling their sensibilities, and that we will put up with any injustice or imposition rather than go through a scene with them.

So They Rage.

Therefore they rage. It's the easiest way to get what they want, for the person without a temper is no more fitted to cope with the individual with a temper than an infant in arms is to engage in a prize fight with Jack Johnson.

Every one of us knows some great, big, strong, splendid man who is so afraid of his wife's temper that he lies to her about having to see some man downtown if he wants to stay out a few minutes longer than the curfew she rings on him, and who doesn't dare to even treat an old woman friend with common civility if he meets her when wife is along.

All of us know women who live in such terror of their husband's temper that they tremble at the very sound of his keys in the front door, and who spend their lives in falsifying household accounts, and trying to conceal everything that happens in the household that could possibly vex their violent spouses.

Ordinarily these men and women are not cowards. They have the courage to lead a charge in battle, or face death without a tremor. They even have the moral courage to endure their hell-on-earth of being married to a high tempered wife or husband, yet before that temper they become abject worms of the dust, without a fight in them.

So far as I know, no psychologist has ever attempted to explain the fear we have of the tempers of those with whom we must live. Perhaps the struggle for existence takes so much out of us that we have no strength left with which to wage a perpetual battle at home. Perhaps we have a sense of decency that the high tempered lack which keeps us from retaliating in kind. Perhaps no real lady or gentleman is fitted to deal with the woman or man who has not the finer instincts that consideration for other people and self-mastery give.

At any rate the fact remains that we all do stand in such shaking, quivering fear of the high tempered that we encourage them in giving full reign to their evil dispositions. This makes us to a degree accessory before the crime. We need more grit and backbone in dealing with them, and it's dollars to doughnuts that if the evil tempered knew that they would be chucked out of house and home unless they controlled themselves they would curb their passions.

Temper should be made the first cause for divorce.

If every woman was perfectly aware that she would have to be gentle and amiable in order to hold down her job, and have a husband to pay her bills for her instead of having to hustle to support herself, there would be no more shrewish women, nor men who had heart failure every time they thought of what their wives would say to them when they got home.

If every man knew that he would have to answer to a divorce summons and pay alimony if he didn't make himself pleasant and agreeable at home, we should have no more domestic bullies and tyrants who talk to their wives as they would not dare speak to any husky man who could knock them down.

And if all of our sisters, and our cousins, and our aunts, and our mothers-in-law, who come and live on us, and who keep us dodging their ways, and trying to keep from precipitating an avalanche of fury and abuse on our hearthstones, were perfectly sure that they would either have to be good-natured or get out, we should see such a sweetening up of dispositions as the world has never known.

For the person with the temper is never anything but a selfish bully. We could call his, or her bluff, if we had the nerve to do it.

Just Sampling It.

For a long time the pale-faced man regarded the sandwich on the counter before him suspiciously. At length he carefully lifted off the top slice of bread, took out a piece of ham, ate it, and replaced as before. In a few seconds he again removed the top piece, extracted another piece of meat this time, and replaced the top again; and again the performance was repeated until the ham had gone. A bystander tapped him on the shoulder.

"Excuse me," said the inquisitive one, "but why don't you eat up your sandwich, instead of picking at it in that fashion?"

"Well, you see," whispered back the other, glaring around suspiciously. "I can not very well eat it. It isn't my sandwich."

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE long winter and spring months devoted by Daysey Mayme Appleton to instructing spinsters in the care of infants, to fighting for the ballot for mothers, and to relegating to his place among the worms of the dust that monster called Man, had taken the starch out of her ambition and the curl out of her hair.

She realized that though it would fall with a crash fatal to its inhabitants, she must drop the world she was carrying on her shoulders.

She must go away from kin and friends, seeking some holy spot of solitude where she might renew the fagged impulses of her soul, and decide what degree of blonde would be most becoming to her for next season.

"I am going to spend the summer at Lake Skodunk," she announced one afternoon to her friends.

"Oh," replied seventeen of them, "how nice! We will go with you!"

Then immediately they began to seek for railroad pamphlets telling about the beauties of Lake Skodunk, to write for reservations at the hotel, and to pack their trunks.

Daysey Mayme is an easy mark among her friends. All women are easy marks among their friends. Or else they have no friends! There was only one thing to do: She must not offend her friends; she must give up Lake Skodunk.

She had found at the last moment, she said when seeing them on their train, that she could not go. She might join them later.

Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea looked good on the map. "I will go to Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea," she said, wearily, to a third cousin, "where my soul may commune alone with the sad sea waves."

The third cousin looked interested. She hurried away to tell the other kin.

That evening seven cousins, five uncles, eleven aunts and nine in-laws called Daysey Mayme to the telephone. "We think," each one cried, "that it would be fine to have a family reunion at Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea, and we are all going with you."

The next day Daysey Mayme Appleton was missing, and no one could learn her whereabouts. She had pulled down the blinds to give the impression that the house was abandoned for the summer and had locked herself in.

Every morning she dressed while balancing on one foot on a piano stool in a very small closet, to simulate the experience in the dressing car on a Pullman, and every night she slept on the pantry shelf.

"In this way," she said, putting a cinder in her eye, "I experience all the joys of travel and escape my dear relatives and friends."

Do You Know---

Frau Emma Giehrl, of Munich, daughter of a former Bavarian Finance Minister, has just celebrated a remarkable jubilee. For fifty years she has not left her sick bed, and to forget her sufferings and to give pleasure to other people she has during this period written stories of mystery and educational works. Her books for women and invalids form quite a library.

At the close of the wedding breakfast a gentleman noted for his lack of tact rose, causing keen anxiety to the bridegroom, who knew his failing.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he cried, genially, "I propose the health of the bridegroom. May he see many days like this!"

MRS. MANGES ESCAPES OPERATION

How She Was Saved From Surgeon's Knife by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mogadore, Ohio.—"The first two years I was married I suffered so much from female troubles and bearing-down pains that I could not stand on my feet long enough to do my work. The doctor said I would have to undergo an operation, but my husband wanted me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound first. I took three bottles and it made me well and strong, and I avoided a dreadful operation. I now have two fine, healthy children, and I can not say too much about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. Lee Manges, R. F. D. 10, Mogadore, Ohio.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A Charming Summer Gown Fully Described by Olivette

HERE is a little summer costume that may be truly called a "confection," though we generally prefer not to use that gastronomic term in the description of even the dreams of the sartorial realm.

White or shell pink is the foundation of heavy grade china or shantung silk. There is an eight-inch slit over the left ankle, and all about the hem tiny pink wild roses are set at equal intervals. The overskirt is of wide shadow lace, falling to the knees at the front and lengthening some eight inches under the caught-in drapery at the back. A garland of the roses peeks from under this, and another surmounts the wide girdle and rises to meet the square-cut vest of filmy white chiffon. Both waist and puff sleeves are of the lace, and another garland of the dear little wild roses nestles under the sleeve at the elbow.

The hat is a great round white Neapolitan, covered with frill after frill of white accordion plaited maline, with a monster pink rose crushing in all the filminess at the left.

Dainty white slippers and silk stockings, and a filmy parasol with a wide border of chiffon printed in great pink roses, complete an absolutely ideal summer costume.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

Walker had accompanied his wife on an excursion to the realms of bargains, and in the enormous building, with its many departments, had become separated from his better half.

For an hour at least he remained lounging impatiently at the junction of many ways, where lifts, stairs and passages met, and then, tired and angry, he approached an irreproachable shopwalker.

"Sir," he said to the frock-coated and suave attendant, in tones of righteous indignation, "I've lost my wife."

Back came the reply, with stunning force: "Third floor over the bridge for the mourning department!"

It was in a country village that the swain had proposed for the hand of the village beauty, and had been accepted.

He had bought the engagement ring and was hurrying to the home of his adored one. A friend stopped him to make inquiry concerning his haste.

"Hullo, there, Bob! Is there a fire?"

"Yes," replied Bob, with what breath he had left, "my heart's on fire and I'm going now to ring the village belle."

Peter Burrowes, a well-known member of the Irish bar, was on one occasion counsel for the prosecution at an important trial for murder. Burrowes had a severe cold and opened his speech with a box of lozenges in one hand and in the other a small pistol bullet by which the man had met his death. Between the pauses of his address he kept supplying himself with a lozenge. But at last, in the very middle of a high-falutin' period, he stopped. His legal chest heaved, his eyes seemed starting from his head, and in a voice tremulous with fright he exclaimed:

"Oh-h-h! Gentlemen, gentlemen, I've swallowed the bul-let!"

"Mr. Chairman," said the orator, who had already occupied the platform for twenty minutes, amid many interjections from the audience, "Mr. Chairman, may I appeal on a point of order? There is really so much resultory conversation going on in parts of the hall that it is impossible for me to hear a word I am saying."

Voice from the back of the hall: "Don't be downhearted. You're not missing much."

A Pledge of Spinisterhood

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM a young man of nineteen," writes X. Y. Z., "and in love with a girl of seventeen who has signed an old-maid pledge, about which she seems to be serious. I have been paying her attention for the past six months, and would like to know whether to continue."

Following is the pledge of spinsterhood which this wise old dame of seventeen has signed:

"We, the undersigned, vow in all good faith that we shall, for the convenience of ourselves and the good of the world, live as Old Maids.

"We, the said undersigned, do agree that we will work honestly and faithfully until, if our lives are spared, we have accumulated a sum requisite for purchasing and maintaining a small house in the suburbs, where the said undersigned shall reside.

"We shall have freedom to visit, entertain, etc., such of our friends as we desire. There is to be no restriction, except that we shall deport ourselves in all manner, and under all circumstances, as ladies.

"It is also agreed by the undersigned that when we reach the age of 40, with consent of the majority, we shall each adopt a child from the asylum.

"If any of this charmed and secret circle should commit the grievous error of marrying, the penalty will be expulsion from the aforesaid circle, and she MUST HAND HER FIANCE THIS PLEDGE BEFORE THE COMMITTEE, TO BE TORN UP BY THE SAID FIANCE."

No Sense of Humor.

The young have no sense of humor. It requires adversity, humiliation, disappointment and grief to make one philosophical, and philosophy is the parent of wit. If the young had a sense of humor, X. Y. Z. would carry this pledge about with him that he may have something to smile about when things go wrong, and the girl who has signed it would laugh herself to death.

What does it amount to? Less than the paper it is written on!

Imagine, if you can, a lot of kittens agreeing what they will do and be when they are old tabby cats!

Conceive, if you can, of the kind of a girl who will deny herself the frivolities of youth, the pretty ribbons and feathers and clothes, the theater, the dance, the love that is looking her way, that she may some day have a home in which she will enjoy the glorious privilege of shriveling up as an old maid!

No girl makes that pledge for herself, my dear young man. She looks at the other girls, and sees that they are plain, and not so attractive as herself. "They know they will be old maids," every girl says, "and are making their plans so that it will look as if they WANTED to be. Of course, I'll sign the pledge. It may please them and won't hurt ME!"

And every girl signs, each with the secret assurance that SHE will not be an old maid.

They agree to deny themselves, that they may purchase a home. This is the story of every good woman's life: A self-denial in the hope that some day she may own a home, but it is a self-denial that is a joy because it has its origin in LOVE. A woman loves a man and sentences herself to a lifetime of self-denial when she marries. She loves her children, and thereafter knows not what the word "SELF" means.

Wait Awhile.

She pinches and skimps and scrapes and makes over with "Love's old sweet song" ringing in her ears, and knows neither discouragement nor regret. But can anyone imagine that the same noble effort and sacrifice are possible when the goal is a home where a lot of spinsters may abide in about as much peace as so many tabby cats?

Believe me, my dear young man, your sweetheart would work harder to stay out of such a place than to enter it. Let me assure you that she would know neither peace of mind nor rest if she thought for a moment that a home with no one in it but WOMEN was to be her refuge.

If she thinks so now, it is because she is 17. When she is 27, she will be in a panic because her steps seem to be turning that way.

Encourage your sweetheart. Let her know that when she is safely within the walls of this retreat, you will drive by with your wife some day and perhaps name one of your babies for her.

It will prove a sure cure.

-:- The Amulets -:-

A Tragic Short Story Complete.

THE cattle dealer opened the door of the taproom of the roadside inn and ordered a liter of cider.

"You must be thirsty, Brunier, or you would not order a whole liter," said the innkeeper.

"You bet I am, but I can afford a thirst on a day like this, when I have four thousand francs in my pocket. Four nice, crisp brown bills, and almost half of it is clear profit."

"But are you not afraid to walk home alone with that much money in your pocket?"

"Afraid! With fists and arms like mine! Not a bit of it, and besides I wear two amulets guaranteed to guard you against any danger."

He opened his shirt and showed two greenish-looking copper medals hanging on a string on his broad breast.

"Look at these," he said, "this one is the holy Benoit's, the patron of all travelers, and the other St. Antoine's, the protector of the poor. These saints have never failed, and I feel as safe as if I were already at home, though it will be a dark night to-night."

The innkeeper laughed.

"Is it really possible," he asked, "that a sensible fellow like you, who gets the best of everybody in any deal, can really believe in two old copper medals?"

"Well, I do believe in them," said Brunier, "you have to believe in something; you surely do yourself."

"I don't believe in anything," said the innkeeper, and offered his customer a drink before he started.

He Starts.

"Well, I don't mind; I still feel a little dusty in my throat."

Half an hour later when the sun had set and darkness was setting in, Brunier started homeward. He carried his hat in his hand and the evening wind played with his heavy dark curls, cooling his hot head. The innkeeper stood looking after him with a frown on his face and his lips pressed tightly together. Then he called his sons.

"Did you see that big fellow?" he asked. "That is Brunier, the cattle dealer, going home from market."

The two boys looked like retrievers scenting the game.

"You understand what I mean," said the father. "And if you two are not fools you will cut across the fields to the crossroads near the forester's house. You will get there at least a half hour ahead of Brunier. In two hours you ought to be back here with 4,000 francs in your pockets."

The brothers did not waste any time. The younger armed himself with a heavy crowbar and the older with a hunting knife.

"Do you think we ought to kill him?" asked the younger.

The innkeeper was silent for a moment, then he nodded.

* * *

How long Brunier had been lying there he did not know. He felt sore all over and felt the blood trickling from his forehead. His coat was torn, the pockets rifled, his heart was beating hard against his ribs, and his arms were so stiff that he could scarcely move them.

After many attempts he succeeded in getting on his feet, and when he had bathed his face in a spring close by he felt much better and began to think of what he ought to do. He was not strong enough to reach home so he decided to return to the inn.

Blood was still flowing from the gaping wound, but he walked ahead without minding. It was quite clear to him who had played the dirty trick on him. It must be some cattle driver or woodchopper. But, thank God, he was still alive and had his money yet. He pulled forth his amulets and kissed them fervently, thanking the saints who had so wonderfully preserved his life.

* * *

"So you expect me to believe you did not find any money, you scoundrels," roared the innkeeper to his sons.

"No. And still we searched everywhere, in the pockets, coat, vest, shirt and stockings."

"Then you are bigger fools than I thought you were," the father shouted.

Suddenly there was a knock at the window. The door was opened, and a ghastly silence followed the loud quarrel when the bloodstained Brunier entered. The two sons turned pale as ghosts and beads of cold perspiration stood on their foreheads. The innkeeper stood motionless in the middle of the floor staring at his guest.

Brunier dropped into a chair and gased: "Give me a glass of brandy, and I shall be all right. Somebody tried to kill me, attacking me from behind, but they did not succeed. I am still alive and have my money yet. Unfortunately I did not get a chance to see who they were."

The three men breathed easier. He had not recognized them, so the matter was not serious.

"Well," said Brunier to the inn keeper, "perhaps you will believe in my amulets now."

The Hiding Place.

He did not notice the innkeeper's vicious scowl.

"But where did you hide your money, Brunier?" he asked in a trembling voice.

"Inside the lining of my hat."

Brunier then asked for a room and said he wanted to sleep.

"I'll give you my own bed," said the innkeeper, and conducted him to a room above the taproom. Brunier undressed and went to bed, but could not sleep. His wound was very painful, so he decided to go down and get some oil for a dressing. In the darkness he felt his way and was about to open the door of the taproom when he heard somebody mention his name. He listened, and what he heard made him shiver. He had to sit down on the step not to fall. They were planning to kill him yet.

He sneaked back to his room. Flight was out of the question, but he would sell his life dearly. He had no weapon, not even his cane, which he had left below, but in a cupboard he found a half-filled siphon of seltzer, a dreadful weapon in the hand of a determined man.

He posted himself behind the door and waited. A few moments later he heard sneaking steps on the creaking stairs. It was the innkeeper. He stopped a moment on the top step and then opened the door. As he was approaching the bed the siphon came down on his head and he dropped without a sound.

"You have got what you deserved," said Brunier. Then he picked up his hat and ran toward the village, while the two sons were busy digging a grave for his body in the garden.

It was almost daylight when he reached the village and told what had happened. An hour later the house was surrounded by gendarmes. They found the two boys still digging in the garden.

In the room above the innkeeper was found. He confessed his crime before he died.

Some time later Brunier had two gold cases made for the amulets which had twice saved his life.

Professional Rivalry.

Everything in the street was dim and quiet, for the thoroughfare was in a highly respectable neighborhood, and the hour was 2 a. m. In fact, save for a stray, wandering cat, and a constable, now rounding a corner in the far distance, there were no signs of life or animation anywhere.

William Sikes stepped out from the shadow of a friedly tree, glanced furtively around him, and then assisted Tom Crooke, his bosom friend and partner, to alight from the drawing room window of No. 62.

"Well, old pal, what luck?" he whispered.

"No luck at all," growled Tom. "The bloke what likes there is a lawyer."

William looked apprehensive.

"Then 'ow much 'ave you lost?" he asked.

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

They Would Get Along Somehow

WHEN the boss sent for Jennie to come to his private office he told her the old story about it being the dull season and that he would have to let her go at the end of the week, and when she reminded him that he had always kept her before during the dull season he told her that he had noticed a decided lack of interest in her work compared to the way she used to work, and, besides, that he had heard stories about her being out with men at night, etc.

So Jennie was sure that her former girl friend had kept her word about getting even with Jennie for—as she thought—stealing her fellow away from her.

Coming out of the office, she wanted to cry, but held in so as not to give the girl the satisfaction of seeing her. As it was, she thought she noticed a flicker of a satisfied smile on the girl's face.

What now of paying the weekly instalments on her clothes—and they were the only ones she had—and what of the money that was so badly needed at home? When Jennie reached home, her friend, the boarding house keeper, was surprised to see her so early, and asked her what was the matter, and when Jennie told she had been "let out" at the office, the good woman, instead of deriding Jennie for losing her position, tried to sympathize with her and took her head on her breast, saying they would get along SOMEHOW until Jennie could get another job. But in her heart she didn't see how they could.

Jennie went up to her room and, flinging herself on the bed, had a good cry. When she quieted down and thought it all over she remembered the fellow she had been out with and his offer to furnish up a flat for her. She shrank at the mere thought of it, but wondered if it wouldn't be the EASIEST WAY at that.

.:. The Head Waitress .:.

By HANK.

"WHAT'S this I hear about you and Marie having a date?" asked the Head Waitress of the Steady Customer in the Cafe L'Enfant.

"Nothing to it," he replied. "Where did you get it?"

"From Mr. Flakes, the manager," said the Head Waitress, "and he told me he had it straight, too. He said that Marie asked for an hour off so she could get all dolled up to go out with you. Of course, it ain't none of my business, and——"

"Cut it out," interrupted the Steady Customer. "Mr. Flakes is kidding you, or Marie is kidding him. Not that I wouldn't dearly love to take both you and Marie out any time, but I'm getting too old to go gallivanting around with two such beauteous dames."

"I guess Marie was kidding," said the Head Waitress. "All them cashiers is great kidders, especially the blondes. You see, every guy that goes up to the desk hands out something foolish while he's paying his check, and Marie has to take their money with one hand and wave to them with the other or they'd be broken-hearted. I don't see much nourishment in it myself, but all those poor boobs act as if one smile from the cashier had taken ten years off their age, and they go out simpering like a lot of love-sick swines."

"Swains, I suppose you mean," corrected the Steady Customer.

"Have it your own way," said the Head Waitress, "you literary guys is great sticklers for correct pronouncements, ain't you? Well, I'm glad to hear you ain't fallen for no blonde because I've taken an interest in you and I'd hate to see you going nutty over a pair of big eyes and a golden dome. Not that Marie ain't a nice girl, and one of the nicest I ever seen, but she shouldn't be wasting her time with any of you newspaper guys."

"What's the matter with us?" asked the Steady Customer. "I'm surprised to hear you talk that way, Louise."

"Are you?" she said. "Well, long ago in the dim, distant past, I showered my young and innocent affections on one of you literary blokes, and for a time I was in the seventh heaven of happiness. He used to write me poems, too, real love ones, I remember one that went something like this:

"Louise, Louise, you little tease,
I'm really mad about you;
You say you truly love me, dear,
I'd hate to ever doubt you;
Some day, we'll married be, and then
Our lives we'll link together
And travel down the broad highway
No matter what the weather."

"Pretty good," said the Steady Customer.

"Oh, yes, I raved about it," said the Head Waitress, "until I found out that he was traveling down the 'broad highway' with about nine others."

"But that's no reason why you should be down on all literary lights," exclaimed the Steady Customer.

"A child once stung, never goes back to the beehive, as Kipling says," replied Louise, "and believe me, Kipling was right."

Nil Desperandum.

Percy Parkington arose and brushed the dust from his knees. Then, drawing himself up to his full height, he gazed resentfully upon the farm of Miss Muriel Muggins, who nonchalantly fanned herself the while.

"Very well, Miss Muggins," came in bitter tones from Percy. "Oh, very well! You have spurned me, it is true! Indeed, you have spurned me twice! But, though despair eats my heart, I shall not die! I mean to go into the busy world. I will fight! I will win! My name shall become known and my riches shall become envied—"

"Pardon me for interrupting you, Mr. Parkington," interjected Miss Muggins, "but when you have accomplished all that you may try me again."

Couldn't Understand It.

HOW ARE YOU FEEDING YOUR CHILDREN?

Are you giving them nourishing food—food that will develop their muscles, bones and flesh—food that is easily digested and cheap?

Ever thought about Spaghetti—Faust Spaghetti? Do you know that a 10c package of Faust Spaghetti contains as much nutrition as 4 lbs. of beef? Your doctor will tell you it does. And Faust Spaghetti costs one-tenth the price of meat. Doesn't that solve a big item in the high cost of living?

You probably haven't served Faust Spaghetti as often as you should because you don't know how many different ways it can be cooked—write for free recipe book to-day and you'll be surprised at the big variety of dishes you can make from this nutritious food. In 5c and 10c packages.

PITCHER PRICE SENT HOME BY MANAGER SMITH

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN, July 22.—Two things happened to Gilbert Price yesterday in this town. The Turtles got to him in the second inning of the ball game and hammered him fiercely to the bench. Then after the game, Manager Smith told the pitcher to pack his duds and get aboard a train for Atlanta.

The reason for the move is not known, but it must be a pretty sound one, or Billy Smith never would have dispensed with the services of one of his regular slabmen with two tough series left to play after the Crackers are done with the Turtles.

* * *

JOE CONZELMAN went in after the game was hopelesly lost, as it turned out, and showed his usual class against the Turtles, stopping the scoring handily. He held them so close that had it not been for the air-tight work of Rube Kissinger, who was having one of his good days, the Smithies might have overcome the handicap and won out even at that stage.

But Kissinger was mighty good. At that, the boys were hitting the ball right on the nose, only luck would direct it straight at some Memphis fielder. That is all in the breaks, however, and some time, when the breaks are our way, the other pitcher is going to pay for all of it.

The Turtles are going fine just now and are playing the kind of scrappy baseball that earns a fair share of the breaks.

* * *

WALLY SMITH still is in the grasp of one of the worst hitting slumps he ever has had, and we are missing his long wallops greatly. When he starts hitting again—and he is bound to do that—he is going to help the club out a lot.

Dent and Dunn are scheduled to work in the game to-day.

BAN WILL NOT RECOGNIZE COMPLAINT OF F. CHANCE

CHICAGO, July 22.—No official action will be taken by the American League in connection with Frank Chance's complaint charging the Chicago Americans with misrepresenting the physical condition of Zeider and the playing ability of Borton, for whom Chance traded Hal Chase. Ban Johnson so announced yesterday.

"It will be impossible to take action compensating New York for alleged loss," said Johnson, "for the reason that Chance wanted Zeider more than any other man. He had his choice of at least six Chicago players and picked Zeider and Borton."

SAM HARRIS GETTING AUTOCRATIC WITH COULON AGAIN

LOS ANGELES, July 22.—Sam Harris, manager of "Kid" Williams, the Baltimore bantam, to-day claimed the bantamweight championship of the world again and announced that Williams would defend his title at least twice a year in 20-round bouts.

"We are tired of waiting for Coulon," said Harris. "I don't believe he ever had any intention of fighting Williams as he knew he couldn't last ten rounds if he did. We don't propose to allow him to stall around any longer."

MADE 103 CONSECUTIVE BULL'S-EYE AT 300 YARDS

WAKEFIELD, MASS., July 22.—All records for consecutive bull's-eyes at 800 yards were broken here in the ninth annual meeting of the New England Military Riflemen's Association when Captain Stuart W. Wise, of the Bay State team, made 103 perfect shots.

The previous record for consecutive bull's-eyes at 800 yards was made by J. W. Hessian, of New York, at Seagirt last year.

Atlanta Wins Leifield Argument

Herrmann and Murphy Disagree

By O. B. Keeler.

COMES now the august Augustus Herrmann, of the Supreme Court of baseball, and hands down an opinion in the Leifield controversy decidedly favorable to our Major Frank E. Callaway. By the same token, the same opinion may be construed as somewhat of a reproof to our amiable little friend C. Webb Murphy, of the Cubs.

The idea is dual. It is granted (1) that if Mr. Lefty Leifield doesn't choose to play ball for Atlanta, Atlanta doesn't have to argue the question with Mr. Leifield, and (2) that if Mr. Leifield isn't going to play ball for Atlanta, Atlanta doesn't have to pay Mr. Murphy for Mr. Leifield.

Which does look fair enough.

And, anyway, that's the view the Hon. Herrmann takes of the case in a letter to Mr. Murphy, a copy of which was received by Major Callaway yesterday.

Incidentally, the Hon. Herrmann's opinion is of considerable weight in balancing the little problems of baseball.

* * *

HERE is a chronological sketch of the incidents:

Rather less than two weeks ago, Mr. Murphy and Major Callaway were dickering about Leifield, who (Mr. Murphy fancied) would be just the cog to round out a pennant racing machine in this town.

Mr. Murphy also fancied Mr. Leifield's value as a cog would be about $3,500.

Major Callaway revised that estimate downward somewhat and made the Cub owner an offer, conditional upon Leifield's willingness to play with Atlanta at a stipulated salary.

There was the rub.

Mr. Murphy accepted the offer, "with all conditions," and wired that he had ordered Leifield to report. Then he added a message that an explanatory letter was on the way.

The explanatory letter explained that Mr. Leifield was balking; had balked, in fact, all the way to St. Louis, where he lived and where he proposed to remain.

In fine, it appeared that if Mr. Leifield was to play in the Southern League, that institution would have to be moved over to St. Louis.

Mr. Murphy suggested that Major Callaway write to the Missouri Balkan and try to reason with him.

Major Callaway suggested that he had other things to do.

Further, he suggested that the deal was entirely off.

That suggestion extracted from Mr. Murphy a flat-footed declaration that the deal couldn't be called off in that manner. He countered with a promise to tell the National Commission on Major Callaway.

The Major promptly replied that the deal already was off, and therefore not subject to further calling. If Mr. Murphy cared to consult the commission, he had Major Callaway's full permission—even his earnest request—to do so.

It seems Mr. Murphy did.

And it also seems (from the Hon. Herrmann's letter) that he did not get very far with it.

* * *

THAT "optional agreement" thing is all very fine, in its way. But it does have a certain effect on the lucrative sales Southern League clubs have been accustomed to count on for star players developed during the season.

There is the crack battery of Prough and Mayer, of the Barons. The pitcher is slated for sale, and should yield a good price. But the receiving end was placed on an optional agreement by the White Sox, and it is pretty well assured that Callahan will yank him in when the yanking season opens.

Of the Crackers, Conzelman and Price are the property of Pittsburg and Washington, respectively, and it looks as if Price will be reclaimed by Griffith.

In the matter of outright sales, the Lookouts probably will get the big slice of the circuit in disposing of Coveleskie and Street.

* * *

DON'T blame Cholly Frank for gravitating swiftly toward cynicism, pessimism, fatalism, and any other isms that convey the idea of bursting bubbles and lost illusions.

Here's just a sample of the wretched Dutchman's luck this year.

Cholly swapped Snedecor to Montgomery for Kutina and Bagby, and when he made the Billiken management go through with the deal, it was generally regarded as a regular David Harum coup.

But Kutina refused to report, and now Bagby is out of the game with a broken wrist, while Snedecor is playing great ball for the Billies.

Don't blame Cholly, then.

ENTRIES AT TERRE HAUTE.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 22.—Harness racing began here to-day with a field of good horses. The number of entries is unexpectedly large. In a number of events the purses are $1,000. Many of the 3-year-olds entered in this year's entries will make their first start at this meeting.

WOOD, HUNTER AND PHELPS LOW IN WESTERN TOURNEY

FLOSSMOOR CLUB, CHICAGO, July 22.—Three local players tied at 18 holes in the eliminating round of the fourteenth annual championship of the Western Golf Association this morning.

Warren K. Wood, of Homewood; Paul Hunter, of Midlothian, and Mason Phelps, another Midlothian player, were the players who led the 134 starters this morning. Warren Wood, as well as Paul Hunter, made the first nine in 37 and the last nine in 40, while Phelps negotiated the first nine holes in 39 strokes and the last nine in 38.

Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, the present title holder, had the next best score, with a 78. He took 40 strokes for the first nine holes and 38 for the last half.

OMAHA RELEASES ARBOGAST.

OMAHA, NEBR., July 22.—President W. R. Rourke, of the Omaha Western League club, has announced the release of Charles Arbogast, who has been manager of the Omaha team for the last two seasons. Rourke will manage the team himself. Arbogast goes to the Los Angeles team of the Pacific Coast League.

BASEBALL

"Hooks" Wiltse tried to pitch his teammates to victory, but was forced to give up in the fourth and "Doc" Crandall pulled the game out of the fire.

* * *

With splendid support behind him Pitcher Seaton twirled the Phillies to another victory over the Reds.

* * *

Refusal to obey orders is given as the reason why Roger Bresnahan, erstwhile Giant backstop and Cardinal manager, has been benched by Manager Evers, of the Cubs.

* * *

Rumor has it that Ty Cobb wants to shake the dust of Detroit, but it is not probable that the Tigers will let the Georgia peach get away.

* * *

Coming from behind, the Superbas won the final game from the Pirates. Twenty-nine players took part in the farce.

* * *

Opportune hitting proved too much for the Braves and the Cubs romped home easy winners.

* * *

Few Yankees got on bases in Jungletown and the Tigers won the second game of the series.

* * *

Although wild, Blanding kept the Red Sox hits well scattered, and the Naps drove Moseley from the mound early in the game, the Naps winning easily.

* * *

The Senators again defeated the White Sox. Walter Johnson pitched. That's the reason.

* * *

One busy inning, the sixth, when the Athletics hammered in seven runs, proved the undoing of the Browns.

* * *

Ban Johnson makes a little statement, "in case the Athletics and the Giants win the pennants in their respective leagues." Why "in case?"

* * *

Also, Bancroft asserts that the championship play in the Big Series this fall will be keener than ever. It always is.

* * *

And (added to that) there comes an application for season tickets to the big show from five Americans now living in Chile, who plan to spend their vacation as spectators at the world's series, provided they are assured of seats.

* * *

There appears to be some little doubt in Chattanooga as to whether the Lookouts are merely sleeping, or really have passed on. Our guess is that Kid Elberfield still is kicking at any rate.

* * *

It remained for Charley Schmidt to revive the ancient and at one time highly honorable custom of inspiring a hand-out of hard and soft money by taging the pil at an opportune juncture. There happened to be two on bases in the second game of the Birmingham-Mobile double-header Saturday, and Gregory made the mistake of walking Robertson to get at Charles. Result: four runs.

* * *

Somebody is compiling a blue book on temperamental ball players who distress their respective managers by outbursts of operatic and erratic behavior. Here are some nominees: Rube Marquard and Art Shafer of the Giants; Earl More and Sherwood Magee, of the Phillies, and T. R. Cobb, who alone is sufficient for H. Jenings to handle. But, say—what about peaceful Heinie Zimmerman?

* * *

Jawn M. McGraw—the "M" standing for Manager and not Muggsy, as you doubtless were figuring—has entered upon his twelfth consecutive year as boss of the New York Giants. He has won four penants in that period, standing in a tie with Mack, Chance and Clarke in that respect. Muggsy bids fair to top the Peerless Leader and the Pirates' leader by copping a fifth flag this season. But Mr. McGillicuddy will keep step. Oh, yes!

TORONTO GETS ALMEIDA; NASHVILLE WANTED HIM

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—Almeida, the Cuban player who has been with the Cincinnati National League club for some time, has been released to the Toronto team of the International League.

Nashville, of the Southern League, was also after the Cuban.

THE DEBUT OR MR. ARTHUR Pelky on the vaudeville stage ought to suggest something to young Mr. Mahoney, of Europe. "The Only Man Bombardier Wells Can Lick" would pack the house.

"THERE ISN'T ANYTHING I can do about it," says Ban Johnson, regarding the Stahl matter, as he speeds across Ohio. Which shows the difference between a man's conversation on Broadway at night and in the dairy farm country the next morning.

* * *

THE FURTHER WE GO INTO it, the more the "ethics" of organized baseball resemble the code of the police graft ring. Mr. Comiskey says of the recent goldbricking of the New York club in the Chase deal that "they ought to take their medicine gracefully." In other words, no matter what is handed to you, don't squeal, for the good of the game.

* * *

JOE RIVERS SAYS THAT HE is going to post $5,000 as a forfeit and offer a side bet for a return match with Champion Ritchie, but will stipulate that the weight must be 133 pounds at the ringside. This is an excellent way of showing that he is not afraid of Ritchie and at the same time cutting off any possibility of a fight with him.

MR. EBBETS WAS NOT TALKing loosely when he said that the high cost of baseball was increasing. If he has many more "openings" and "dedications" we should think it would be well-nigh prohibitive.

News of the Ring Game

Spider Britt, the local bantamweight, is ready to don the padded mitts again. Britt is particularly anxious to get on with either Charlie Lee or Kid Young. Spider says he never felt better in his life than he does at the present time and is positive he can defeat either of the above mentioned boys.

Cal Delaney, sparring partner of Johnny Kilbane, has signed articles to box Kid Julien in a twelve-round go next Saturday night. Both boys are featherweights.

* * *

Bob McAllister has finally decided to take a crack at the twenty-round game. The Western middleweight has agreed to take on Ed Petroskey before Jim Coffroth's club at Frisco some time next month.

* * *

Jake Abel has departed for his home in Chattanooga. Before he left Jake stated that Charlie White was without a doubt the heaviest puncher he has ever met. Yes, several other boys hold the same opinion as Abel. For reference apply to Joe Thomas.

* * *

Although Charlie Lee was given the verdict over Kid Young on a foul last week, there are many of the opinion that Young can take the measure of the tall featherweight if he would only get into condition. Young has promised to train as he never has before if given another chance at his conqueror.

* * *

Danny Morgan, the talkative manager, is still keeping his press agent busy trying to force Willie Ritchie into a match. Britton is one boxer who is entitled to a chance at the title.

* * *

Carl Morris, the Sapulpa heavyweight, is to battle Al Benedict, of Hoboken, N. J., in a 15-round encounter at Joplin, Mo., Friday night.

Lest we forget, Meyer Pries wishes us to announce that he is still alive. Meyer is yearning for a return engagement with Spider Britt. Pries is certainly one game youngster.

"ZEIDER SICK, IS BETTER THAN CHASE."—CHANCE

CLEVELAND, July 22.—Frank Chance, manager of the Yankees, in speaking of the Zeider-Chase deal, slips the following knock to Chase.

"We're perfectly satisfied with this deal. I wouldn't give Zeider when right for three Chases. I think he's a better man than Chase at his best. And Zeider in a hospital is of more value to the New York club than Hal Chase would be to-day.

"There's no chance in the world for us to ask that the trade by which we gave Chase for Zeider and Borton be canceled. We don't want the deal canceled, but we are asking that the Chicago club be required to pay the salary of Zeider and to pay his doctor's bills until such time as he is able to play."

Big Marathon Grind On To-night

Ten Riders in Sensational Race

MOTORCYCLE fans in Atlanta are to be given a real treat at the Motordrome to-night. The best card of the season is to be put on, and some thrilling races are bound to be the result.

The big Marathon race is easily the feature. The sight of ten riders, all being on the track at the same time, each trying his hardest to get into the lead, should be a scene well worth watching. The riders are to cover 26 miles 385 yards.

As the leaders in a long race have a great advantage, there is bound to be a hot scramble throughout the long grind. The riders out in front invariably cover the track so as to keep their opponents from getting ahead. Mixups of some sort are usually the result, and if some spills are not recorded it will surely be a big surprise.

Tex Richards and Jock McNeil, the favorites, have their machines in the best of shape, and are out to set a record. They have been practicing daily, and wise ones are looking for these two to fight it out to a finish. However, both these speed demons may be beaten out by a dark horse. Morty Graves has his machine in good working order, and it would not surprise many to see him win out.

Big Cash Prize to Winner.

A cash prize of $500 is to go to the winner. This is enough to make any of them take some daring chances to cop the big event. Each rider will have a pit in front of the paddock, where he can change a tire or wheel in a very few minutes and continue on his journey.

The Motordrome Sweepstakes should also afford some excellent racing. The riders will be trying out their machines for the big event, and some fast racing should be witnessed.

New Sweaters for Riders.

To-night each rider will have a new sweater, a different colored one for each. This is after the plan used on the metropolitan racing tracks, so that each mount and his jockey is distinguishable no matter how far away from the spectators.

Following are the colors that will be worn by the motor demons to-night:

No. 1, Morty Graves, black; No. 2, Harry Schwartz, green; No. 3, Billy Shields, orange; No. 4, George Lockner, black with red stripes; No. 5, Tex Richards, bright red; No. 6, Freddie Luther, maroon; No. 7, George Renel, red with white stripe; No. 8, Jock McNeil, white; No. 9, Henry Lewis, light blue; No. 10, Harry Glenn, dark red.

Here is the complete program:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves; time, 38 4-5 seconds.

MOTORDROME SWEEPSTAKES.

One mile to qualify for two-mile final. Two to qualify in each heat, and three in fastest heat.

First Heat—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Second Heat—No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Harry Glenn vs. Harry Schwartz. (Special match race). Two miles, best two out of three heats.

Final heat of Motordrome Sweepstakes—Two miles.

Second heat of special match race—Glenn vs. Schwartz.

Third heat of special match race, if necessary.

Big Marathon Race—26 miles 385 yards. Ten riders to compete. Each rider will have to ride 105 times around the track.

THE INTERSTATE LEAGUE GOES TO SMASH AGAIN

ERIE, PA., July 22.—The reorganized Interstate League season came to an unexpected ending here, with the Erie team a second pennant-winner, finishing the abbreviated schedule with a percentage of 1.000. The four-club circuit, composed of Youngstown, Akron, Wheeling and Erie, proved a losing proposition.

LOOKOUTS NEED GOOD HITTER TO PULL THROUGH

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 22. That the immediate addition of material strength is absolutely necessary not only to keep the Lookouts in the race, but moreover to make them a first-division club, is being gradually conceded locally.

The showing of the Lookouts in the week just passed, and, in fact, during the long home stay which closed with the Gulls, gave conclusive proof that the club does not possess the strength and stamina not only to rise in the percentage ladder, but even to hold its present position.

Realizing the general weakness of the club for the final spurt, Elberfeld has secured Dee Walsh from the St. Louis Browns, but the acquisition of the league's fielding sensation is not going to help the club to any material extent, as offensive strength is what is needed. Walsh can not be expected to hit over .250, although he will surpass Williams in fielding.

Alberfeld and Elston, who represent about 50 per cent of the club's offensive strength, can not be depended upon to any degree of certainty, because of their injuries. Elston has a bad leg, which has worried him for three seasons, and the member forces him to lay out so long that his batting eye is continually off form. The beaning of Elberfeld will undoubtedly affect him to some extent throughout the entire season.

The Lookouts must get another good hitter to pull through.

It is being gradually conceded here that Atlanta and Birmingham, although there is considerable prejudice against both clubs, are the two teams which are to be the ultimate grapplers for the rag. They seem to possess the greatest strength, and are not being forced to spurt now as are Montgomery and Mobile.

LANGFORD-MILLER GO OFF; NEGRO MAY BE BARRED

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Sam Langford has been stamped an undesirable in this city, so far as ring engagements are concerned. The board of supervisors have notified Promoter J. T. Mitchell, of the National A. C., who planned to stage a four-round bout between Charlie Miller and Langford here Friday, that the colored heavyweight would not be permitted to enter the ring.

This action was taken under a ruling of the Police Commission, in charge of boxing contests, that fighters whose names appear on the professional "list" can not take part in the "amateur" four-round bouts. Langford's name appears on the Police Commission's "professional list." It was not made clear whether Sam might box in longer contests, though it is taken he has been barred from all bouts.

YALE TEAM TO GET BUSY.

SIASCONSETT, MASS., July 22.—Arrangements have been completed by Cautain Ketcham, of the Yale football team for the early training of the linemen. Twenty-five men will begin preliminary practice at the Siasconsett Cottage Club here about September 1.

Look Out For Poison Ivy

Strolling through the woods or clearing brush, picnickers, hunters, fishermen—look out for poison ivy. And in the meantime keep your blood pure by using S. S. S. If your skin is rough with eczema, pimples or any other eruption, S. S. S. stimulates the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to dry up and heal all sore spots.

S. S. S. will do this positively. It dominates the principle of osmosis, stimulates the cells of the skin to select their own nutriment from the blood, made pure and healing by the wonderful medicinal ingredients of this famous blood purifier. It is a safe remedy, as it contains no minerals, and yet its action is a marvel.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting any one to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 156 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Van Ought to Get Better After This Visit

J. M'ALEER TELLS HOW JAKE STAHL QUIT BOSTONS

CLEVELAND, July 22.—James McAleer, president of the Boston Americans, refused to discuss the statement of Ban Johnson given out in New York, in which the league leader severely criticised Jimmy for his action in releasing Jake Stahl.

"There is nothing to say on the Stahl matter," said McAleer.

"The change in the club was precipitated by Stahl himself.

"'Are you figuring on making a change in the managership of the team,' he asked me in Chicago.

"'Not this season,' I replied.

"'At the end of the year?' he asked.

"'It is possible there may be a change then,' I replied.

"'Well, in that case,' said Stahl, 'I might as well get through now.'

"'Do you mean that you wish to resign?' I asked.

"'Pay me to the end of the season and I'm through,' was the answer.

"So I gave him the money he would have drawn had he gone all the way through to his release."

McAleer stated that Carrigan will continue to manage the Red Sox the remainder of this season.

"Whether or not he will manage the team in 1914 depends entirely upon himself," said the club president. McAleer said there was absolutely no truth in the story that Fielder Jones had been offered the management of the club.

SEC. FARRELL ISSUES NEW RULING ON OPTIONAL MEN

AUBURN, N. Y., July 22.—Chairman Farrell, of the National Board of Arbitration governing minor baseball, to-day gave out the following orders relative to the sale and trading of players among major and minor leagues:

"All optional agreements must be exercised on or before August 15.

"The sale or the release of players within twenty days of the commencement of the major league drafting period or within twenty days of the close of the season of the club disposing of the player is prohibited.

"The sale of a player's release by one national association to another shall be null and void against the selection by draft of the player by a major league club from the selling club, unless he be in the actual service of the purchasing club for twenty days before the opening of the drafting season for major league clubs."

Quoth a tale from Boston: "Johnny Evers was in bad humor to-day." When Johnny Evers is discovered in good humor it will be time to get out an extra.

One lesson to be learned from the Stahl case is that solid ivory is not confined entirely to the playing end of the game.

The double play is one of the most thrilling features of baseball, but there is nothing particularly thrilling about the double cross.

IDOLS.

In days of old,
When foes grew bold
And slammed the ball about,
The crowd would rise
And rend the skies
Till Walsh came strolling out.

No more they rise
To rend the skies
When Edward makes his bow.
They pass him by
With frigid eye
And yell for Russell now.

The idols rear,
The lowbrows cheer,
And then the downfall comes.
The gents who play
Like stars to-day
To-morrow may be bums.

SPEAKING OF CHASE.

Who stung Frank Chance?
"I," said J. Cal.
"I copped his Hal—
I stung Frank Chance."

Who saw him stung?
"I," said Frank Farrell.
"I lost a barrel—
I saw him stung."

Who'll fix it up?
"I," said Big Ban;
"If any one can,
I'll fix it up."

There was no deception used in the Chase trade. Each was trying to trim the other and naturally one of them lost.

Reading the newspapers, one is led to believe that as pugilists those Cards are great little ball players.

One is glad to learn from Ban Johnson that the gents who control baseball are actuated by a spirit of philanthropy. But it would be hard to convince Artie Hofman or Mordecai Brown of said fact.

HOME AGAIN.

Beneath a spreading tropic tree
The foreign wrestler sits.
And frequently a smile of glee
Across his visage flits.
A proud and happy man is he
With money in his mitts.

And as he counts his pile of dough
He looks across the sea,
And sings: "When Autumn breezes blow
I must return to thee,
America, where boneheads grow—
Sweet land of ivory!"

PLAY CAREFULLY FIRST SHOTS, IS EVANS' ADVICE

By Chick Evans.

TO PLAY golf well, one must keep everlastingly at it. This is a rather hard thing to do, for a golfer may play regularly for a certain length of time, and then not see a club for a week, or a month. This is particularly true of the business man who finds it hard to get out to play on regular days. The lack of regular practice adds to the difficulty and uncertainty of the first few shots of one's game. Golf is at all times the most uncertain of games; perhaps in this uncertainty lies its fascination.

Early Shots Are Important.

Even the expert can not judge what scores or strokes the day's play or the next round holds for him, but the first few shots in a round of golf, especially the first tee shots, are apt to be indicative of the day's play. The first drive is usually played to a gallery, either of spectators or waiting players, and for that reason I have formulated a few rules which I endeavor to use when I play a new course, or hit my first balls after an absence from the game.

Judgment of distance does not mean so much to me at the start as the desire to hit the ball fairly and squarely in the right manner. If one takes great care in the hitting of the first few shots, he will find the path around the course much smoother than if he is careless and misses the first few. A player should learn to hit a ball fairly and squarely, so that the muscles will work in rhythmical assistance. I have frequently gone along teeing and heeling my shots and then at last struck a square blow, and at once felt my muscles respond to the clean impact.

Player Should Study Shots.

I am a firm believer in the habit of hitting a few practice shots before starting to play, and my chief rule is: Keep your eye on the ball and see that your clubhead traverses the imaginary line to the hole.

Judge John Barton Payne once said to me:

"Every shot should be made as if one were making his will."

That is not putting it too strong.

PARCEL POST TO CARRY 20-LB. PACKAGES

Rates Also Cut in First and Second Zones—Chart Replaces Map.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The Postoffice Department has announced important changes in the operation of the parcel post system, including an increase in the maximum weight limit on packages from 11 to 20 pounds, a reduction in the rates of postage within the first and second zones and the substitution of a convenient rate chart for the elaborate parcel post map in determining postage rates.

Since the establishment of the parcel post system many requests have been received at the Postoffice Department for an increase in the maximum weight of packages that will be carried and a corresponding reduction in the rates of postage.

The act of August 24, 1912, establishing the system authorizes the Postmaster General, with the consent of the Interstate Commerce Commission, after investigation, to change from time to time, in his discretion, the classification, weight limit, rates or zones, to improve the service.

Changes Effective August 15.

After weeks of consideration, Postmaster General Burleson submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission and got its consent to the following changes, which are to be effective on August 15:

The first zone shall include the territory within the local delivery of any office and the first zone rate of postage will apply to all parcel post mail deposited at any office for local delivery or for delivery by city carrier or on rural routes emanating from that postoffice.

The second zone shall include the remainder of what is now the first zone together with the present second zone, and shall include all the units of area located in whole or in part within a radius of approximately 150 miles from any given postoffice.

The rate of postage on parcels weighing in excess of four ounces in the proposed first zone—that is, for local delivery—will be reduced from 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof, to 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional two pounds or fraction thereof.

Second Zone Rate Reduced.

The rate for the proposed second zone—that is, the territory embraced within a radius of 150 miles from any given postoffice—will be reduced from 5 cents for the first pound and 3 cents for each additional pound (the present first zone rate) or 6 cents for the first pound and 4 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof (the present second zone rate) to 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

The maximum weight of parcel post packages will be increased from 11 pounds to 20 pounds, the increase of weight to apply only to the first and second zones. No change has been made in the restrictions as to the size and form of the package.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Forsyth Bill High Class.

First nighters at the Forsyth Monday evening were given a real thrill by the aquatic feats of John F. Conroy and his two diving girls. The act is exceptionally good and the scenery is striking.

The remainder of the bill is excellent. In Diero is the masterhand of the piano-accordion. From the classic music to ragtime the musician is a wonder. He was repeatedly recalled for encores. A trio of comedians that handed over some very funny stuff included Smith Cook and Marie Brandon. Lester is an entertaining ventriloquist. Another big drawing card, especially for the children, was Jack Auger, "Jack the Giant Killer." The BeAnos, a novelty gymnastic act, opened the bill. Shriner and Richards, in songs and dances, were good.

"Les Miserables" a Hit.

In the pictured dramatization of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," playing this week at the Grand Theater, Atlanta is offered another of the mammoth film productions like "Quo Vadis."

"Les Miserables" had its Atlanta premiere Monday night. In coloring the picture is perfect; however, its action in a few spots lags a bit, as though the producer leaned too much to detail to bring forth realism. However, the play does not lack tenseness and thrills. Prospective auditors are advised to arrive before the first flash on the screen, as the presentation of the escape from the prison, in the first film, is, without doubt, the cream of all that is exciting in the play.

In the cast of characters are seen some of France's most noted actors. The stage setting is minute and lavish to the last detail. Manager Codoza is to be congratulated upon his battle with the heat. The Grand in hot weather is like an oasis in the desert.

Big Damages Asked In Macon Depot Case

MACON, July 22.—The special committees appointed to ascertain the amounts of damages claimed by property owners on Cherry street on account of the closing of the thoroughfare for the building of a union station have submitted their report to the Railroad Commission.

The report shows that the property owners want exceedingly large damages, and that it will take either arbitration or court suits to settle most of the claims.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

Orators within and without the General Assembly, particularly those given to loquacity and frequency of effect, sometimes being more or less hard up for something to say upon the spur of the moment—whatever that is—now and then jump a-straddle of the Grand Old Legislature's grand old neck and dance a hornpipe thereupon!

Always the liviest tune to dance by concerns the Legislature's "do-nothing" inclination, and its proneness to move at a snail's pace. Particularly is this the case when the orator immediately on the job is "a-gin the government, anyway."

An attack upon the present Legislature that it is too slow may be justified. Maybe it is slow—slower than it ought to be. Maybe legislatures ought to do everything right off the reel, and debate the matter afterward, if time holds out. Maybe a lot of things—but the only way to judge one legislature as to its efficiency is by past legislatures; and in the matter of slowness, laziness, pokeasyness, or generel cussedness, the present Legislature is entitled to be judged, perhaps.

The following things are true, as the records will show: Never before within the service of any member of the present General Assembly has a general appropriations bill been reported to the House for action so early as on the twenty-sixth day of its sitting.

And yet, this Legislature, under the direction of the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, will take up that very bill in the whole House today—the twenty-sixth day of its sitting!

The general tax act will be ready for the House before Saturday night—at least ten days earlier than any general tax act has been reported within a decade or more.

The various committees have reported more than 100 bills adversely, and easily as many more favorably. This was made possible by reason of the fact that the committees of both the House and the Senate were appointed this year two days earlier than ever before in thirty years.

In one recent Legislature, the Senate had the general tax act exactly FOUR days—this year it will have some fifteen days before adjournment. It is a well-known parliamentary fact, too, that both these bills have the right of way over all other bills at all times.

It undoubtedly is true that any Legislature would be able to travel much faster than it does were it not for the fact that local bills require almost as elaborate handling as general bills, and a reform in this matter has been urged for years. But since that reform never has been effected, it hardly seems fair to charge the present Legislature with giving to these bills more than the time absolutely necessary to their passage.

And so, while it may be true that the present Legislature is no faster than it should be, it is just as well to remember that the Legislature machine is of an old model, and therefore much out of date, and can not run any faster than it can!

When the State takes the speed limit off its Legislature, it naturally will have to provide a machine capable of making at least a little bit better time than the speed limit, or nothing will happen by way of reform.

The present Legislature may not be a wonder of wonders, but it really is moving along FASTER than usual—and that is the honest truth of it!

Mr. Payton, of Worth, the handsomest man in the last House, and one of the handsomest men in any House, looked in on the General Assembly to-day to see if it was moving along to suit him.

Mr. Payton gave it as his opinion that the present House is all right, so far as he could see, albeit he neglected to bring his eyeglasses along, and wasn't committing himself finally.

"I enjoyed my brief Legislative career," said Mr. Payton, "and made many lasting friendships while it continued. I take great interest in the work of the present House, and believe it will enact some wholesome legislation. I believe it wants to do the right thing, at least. I have met many new members, and the average seems to run rather high. In many ways, however, being a member of the Legislature is more or less a thankless job, and it often happens that the best and most sincere workers fail to get the credit they really are entitled to."

"Uncle Billy" Wilson, of Gwinette, another veteran of the last House, and the prize humorist therein, was talking it over with his former colleagues to-day.

"Uncle Billy" declines and refuses to get excited about anything, and always takes life as easy as he knows how. He does not look upon a Legislator's job as one removing him very far from the ranks of just ordinary folks, and therefore he never takes himself too seriously.

"I love all the boys, and in the main they are good boys," said "Uncle Billy." "If they make mistakes, they generally are mistakes of the head and not of the heart!"

Louis E. Wisdom, of Forsyth, who is altogether 22 years of age but not much more, notwithstanding the fact that he looks every day of 17, had trouble with a new doorkeeper in the House of Representatives the other day.

Wisdom didn't know there was a new doorkeeper on the job until, accompanied by two friends of the female persuasion, he approached the door during a session for admittance.

"Hey, you, kiddo!" stage-whispered the doorkeeper, "you can't get in here!"

"The h—um—deuce, I can't!" said Wisdom, in a loud and commanding tone of voice. "I'm a member of the House!"

"Run along, buddy, and let your pipe go out—you can't put that over me! If you had claimed to be a page, all right, I might have fallen for it, but a person must be at least twenty-one to get in here as a member!" replied the doorkeeper, as he pushed Wisdom gently back.

Then Wisdom quit arguing, and went around to another door with his lady friends, where he stood in with the doorkeeper, and everything was all right.

When the new doorkeeper found out what he had done, he was much chagrined and attempted to apologize to Wisdom, but Wisdom is a good little fellow and wouldn't stand for any apologies. He admitted that he hardly looked the part of a mature and experienced statesman, anyway, and said he could and did understand the situation.

If it just hadn't been for the ladies—!

STOCK MARKET

BY CHAS. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The strong tone which characterized the opening of the stock market to-day was not well maintained, and before the end of the fifteen minutes, sharp recessions were in order. Union Pacific lost its advance of 5-8 and a reaction of a point was recorded in Canadian Pacific.

The traders were disapointed at the action of the market in failing to follow the strong tone in London.

There was no change in Amalgamated Copper, American Can and Reading Steel was off ⅛, while the other changes were about equally divided between gains and losses.

Although trading was slow in London, the tone was strong, with the American shares the leading feature. The curb market opened easier.

STOCK GOSSIP

The Financial Bureau says: "Information channels expect to see a continued improvement in the stock market. There is, however, sufficient uncertainty in the situation to warrant reasonable caution, except where investment purchases are made. Would not reach for stocks, but would buy on moderate setbacks. Cotton is bought conservatively on reactions. Wheat and corn are considered cheap, but are offered on advances for trading profits."

* * *

It looks as if this advance has only started. Would increase holdings on any recession in stocks like Union Pacific, Reading, Copper issues and Steel common.—G. D. Potter.

The Bankers Trust Company certificates of deposit for the St. Louis and San Francisco general lien 5 per cent bonds have been listed on the Stock Exchange. It is understood the total amount deposited under the agreement with Speyer & Co. in New York and in Europe is more than $25,000,000. No call has yet been made for the deposit of the French bonds amounting to $23,000,000. Of the remaining balance, a clear majority has been deposited under the Speyer bondholders' agreement.

Council Gives Auto To City Electrician

If the Aldermanic Board acts as promptly as Council, City Electrician R. C. Turner will have an automobile. Council Monday authorized the expenditure of $750 for a machine.

After the action of the Aldermanic Board Thursday the resolution will go to Mayor Woodward.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, July 22.—The cotton market opened fairly active to-day, and first prices were 1 to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The steadiness was attributed mainly to firm cables. The fact that dry weather still prevailed over the Central and Western belt also led to supporting orders in the new crop positions. After the call the ring was inclined to sell on reports of further rains in Texas, which relieved the intense heat of the past several days. In many localities the rainfall was heavy. As sentiment is against the market, the selling became rather general, resulting in a rapid decline of 2 to 6 points from the initial level. New crops were the heaviest pressed options. October lost 6 points, while December declined 5 points.

During the late forenoon active buying by the larger spot interests gave the market a steady tone, resulting in prices recovering. Trading was light and the market ruled dull but steady.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, July 22.—Wheat opened ⅛ to ¼d higher. At 1:30 p. m. the market was ⅛ to ¼d higher; closed ⅛ to ¼d higher.

Corn opened ¼d higher. At 1:30 p. m. the market was ¼d higher; closed ¼d lower.

Grain Notes

B. W. Snow wires from Omaha, July 21: "The corn crop in Nebraska, south of the Platte and west of Lincoln, already is hurt badly and in a critical position. Portion of the Republican Valley received some rain and the crop is holding out, but fully one-fourth of the State is over the danger line and losing ground fast. From Hastings to Holdredge and south to St. Cloud fields are large y fired. I have seen places to-day where hot winds last week killed the leaves on trees. From Hastings to Crete the corn is showing white, and now is coming to tassel at four feet. East of Lincoln there is small damage, but some white heads are showing. The hopeful possibility lies in the fact that the crop was not in tassel during last week's blistering weather, but many tassels now are coming white. The section of the State I covered is in no worse shape than Northern Kansas."

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "Wheat—We look for a steady market to-day and are inclined to think prices will gradually harden.

"Corn—We can see nothing but higher prices.

"Oats—In our opinion the market is in a strong position, with a comparatively limited long interest and more new buying apparent.

"Provisions—The strength in corn is helping prices, and while there is more or less realizing, new buying appears to be on the increase."

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Profit From Poultry Depends Upon Care

Exercise, Feed, Housing, all Vital . . in Chicken Raising.

Fowls can not care for themselves and produce a profit. The smallest of the individual unit in poultry is what causes people to look upon the business as rather small. However small the individuals may seem in comparison with other live stock they should receive careful attention to insure success.

The poultry keeper, whether making it a side line to his business or a specialty, should have a definite end in view. The purpose should be clearly defined and kept constantly in mind. It is necessary to have orderly plans mapped out in order that the work shall go on regularly.

No kind of business seems to respond more promptly to careful methodical work than the chicken business. Conditions differ on farms and poultry plants, and for that reason each one must in a measure map out his own line of work, but whatever it is it should be done in a systematic manner by the proper person at the proper time.

It is a fortunate condition that permits of caring for the poultry by the interested members of the poultryman's family. Fowls are creatures of habit and dependent upon their keeper. This is especially true in their feeding.

Rich Food Needed.

A 4½-pound Leghorn hen laying 175 eggs per year yields fully five times her weight, and that too, in a concentrated form. Perhaps a good deal of the time she is laying an egg daily. To accomplish this feat the hen must not only have rich food in abundance, but should receive it at regular intervals.

To accomplish regularity in the care of fowls it must be understood whose duty it is to attend to each line of work. Let there be no misunderstanding and consequent neglect by one person thinking that some one else has done the work. Everything should go on like a clock. Learn to save labor and prevent waste in all parts of the business.

Shelter is all important, both to protect your fowls from the cold and rain. You should aim to maintain comfort in your flock at all seasons. Keep water vessels above the dirt and litter of the floor. Have them of such material that they may be cleaned easily. There should be no bad smell about a poultry house. Keepers of small flocks of poultry often become careless and negligent about cleaning their houses and the result is often failure and disgust with no one to blame but themselves.

For those who do not care to go to the trouble to clean out their poultry houses every morning a good plan is to sprinkle over the dropping some dry road dust or sawdust, and clean but once a week. Of course provision must be made for your dust during the summer months. It is the part of good management to have a dry shed for storing the poultry manure to be used as a fertilizer.

A thorough whitewashing inside and out should be given at least twice during the summer months.

Exercise Is Important.

The amount of exercise depends largely upon the breed and the condition of chickens. Overfat fowls should be compelled to work for what they get until they are reduced to a reasonable condition, while thin fowls should not be compelled to scratch for their feed. Fowls that seem inactive and sluggish should have plenty of green stuff and scratch for their food.

Free range always provides plenty of exercise. In close confinement it is different, however, and some ingenuity must be exercised to induce your fowls to take exercise enough to make their blood circulate and produce good health either by scratching for their grain or jumping to secure cabbage hung by a string too high for them to stand and reach it.

The more exercise that is provided the less likely the fowls are to acquire bad habits, such as egg eating, feather pulling, etc. It is always easier to prevent disease than it is to cure it; hence it is advisable to quarantine all purchased fowls for at least ten days until all possibility of infection is passed.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Committee Asks Price On Four Top Floors

Merchants May Be Housed in Chamber Building—Numerous Small Sales Monday.

The Chamber of Commerce committee considering a site for the exhibit of Atlanta-made goods in a permanent building for the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association decided Monday to ask the directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company to submit them a price on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building at the southeast corner of North Pryor and Auburn avenue.

President Moore has accordingly called a meeting of the directors for 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Chamber rooms in the Empire Building.

The committee considered several propositions, but it is known that the members would like to be in the Chamber building if possible, hence the request. The Chamber, in this event, would occupy the first two floors of the six-story building, which is now being renovated.

The action of the committee came as somewhat of a surprise in real estate cricles, since this site had not been seriously considered until it was mentioned Monday. There is nothing to commit the committee in their request. They explained that they only wanted to consider the proposition along with the others.

Numerous Small Sales.

Small sales with a good total proved interesting in Monday's real estate announcements.

The Forrest & George Adair Real Estate Agency have made the following sales:

For Thomas H. Pitt and D. O. Chestnut to F. E. Walthall, No. 114 North Moreland avenue, an eight-room, two-story house on a 40 by 200-foot lot, for $7,000; for Thomas B. Paine to Mrs. V. V. Tilson, a six-room bungalow on the east side of East Lake road, between Fair and Herman streets, 80 by 170 feet, for $5,500; for Mrs. A. W. Mynett to Mrs. Laura Quarles, No. 182 East Pine street, a two-story, seven-room house on the north side of the street and on a 37½ by 150-foot lot, for $3,350.

The house sold for Mr. Paine at East Lake is not the house which is occupied, but one near it which he built to sell.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. have sold for Mrs. Fannie McHenry to Mrs. A. C. Moore, a 25 by 100-foot lot in Mays street, near the railroad tracks, for $650; for O. C. Radford to Mrs. M. P. Beauchamp, a house and lot on the west side of Bates avenue, Kirkwood, 50 by 260 feet, near Boulevard DeKalb, for $3,400; for Mrs. L. C. Carmichael to L. A. Morris, No. 56 Candler street, a six-room bungalow on a 50 by 132-foot lot, between McLendon street and Euclid avenue, for $3,850.

T. M. Cater has bought from J. K. Nicholson through M. P. Tyson, of the Adair & Holt Agency, No. 64 Garden street, an irregular-shaped lot of about 60 feet frontage, for $2,500.

Rent Bulletin Appears.

The Smith, Ewing & Rankin Real Estate and Renting Agency, started publication Monday of a weekly rent bulletin, Mr. Smith explaining that the increased business of the firm made this move necessary.

To Sell Peachtree Lease.

The lease on the space occupied by the Savoy Cafe, at No. 34 Peachtree, has been placed in the hands of E. E. Pomeroy, trustee, for sale. This was determined on Saturday instead of a sale in the office of Referee in Bankruptcy Percy H. Adams, in the Grant Building. The lease has about four years to run. Terms are cash.

Connally Avenue Lot on Sale.

B. S. Bomar, administrator of the estate of the late Mary E. Madden, will sell at auction before the courthouse door Tuesday, August 1, a 50 by 100 foot lot on the west side of Connally avenue, 30 feet from the United States Barracks fence. Grover C. Middlebrooks is the attorney.

East Avenue Purchase.

Mrs. Mary Hunt has bought from E. M. Willingham, through the F. McC. Brown Real Estate Agency, the one-story frame house on the east side of East avenue, near East Fair, for $2,000. The lot is 48 by 138.

Pryor Street Underpass.

According to information obtained Monday, an effort will be made soon to have Council consider a proposition to underpass the Southern Railway tracks at South Pryor and Ridge avenue, while the work of widening, regrading and repaving South Pryor is in progress. This improvement, it is pointed out, would make a continuous smooth thoroughfare to Lakewood. With this work done, it will be possible to connect up Lakewood drive and South Pryor with a roadway that would save many yards in travel about the lake. There is at present no driveway at the north end of the lake, and the addition would put driveways almost entirely around it.

To Build at Brookhaven.

E. L. Bishop is clearing a five-acre tract at Brookhaven, opposite the No. 7 green of the Capital City Country Club golf course, and will soon build a bungalow. Hentz & Reid, architects, are drawing plans. The lot is on Brookhaven Drive, east. J. E. C. Pedder has a lot to the west of Mr. Bishop, and he is also planning a home, it is said.

Ponce DeLeon Projection.

The upper stories of the Ponce DeLeon apartments are all right as regards encroachment on the sidewalk at the southeast corner of Peachtree and Ponce DeLeon, according to Assistant Building Inspector C. J. Bowen. Only about 30 inches from the base upward, consisting of ornamental stone, is in the encroachment, and this can probably be adjusted to the satisfaction of the apartment officials and the city. The projection is about 4 3-4 inches.

Progress on Peachtree.

In about two weeks, according to Shelby Smith, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, repairs to Peachtree will be completed. The stretch from Peachtree Creek to Buckhead is done, and the convicts started Monday working southward from the creek to Fifteenth street. Sixth street to Fifteenth was finished some weeks ago, and the repairs will make a smooth thoroughfare about eight miles in length. The gap between W. S. Witham's and the DeKalb County line, near the Capital City Country Club, will be completed in a few weeks.

Interest in Comfort Station.

Real estate men went over their listings Monday with a view of selecting a site for the city public comfort station, which has been designed by Haralson Bleckley, the well-known architect and author of the plaza plan. This building is to cost $10,000, according to the sketch, and will be located at some point to be chosen by the City Council. Such an institution has been suggested by City Clerk Walter Taylor, Harrison Jones and others.

Activity in Lots.

F. C. Word, of the Southern Railway Company, has refused a $500 profit on six acres of land on Mount Perian road which he bought last week, through J. E. Pritchett, of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency. The land cost him $1,623.

The above agency reports the sale of nearly $50,000 in the past week in its Peachtree Highlands, Clairemont, Woodlawn Park and Peachtreehurst subdivisions, as well as No. 199 North Moreland avenue to Mrs. E. J. Mitchell for the Kelly-Nealy Company, for $7,000; No. 130 Tift avenue to Dixon avenue for a client, $2,400; No. 154 Ormond street, corner of Frazier, to R. T. Harralson for Mrs. Lula Mitchell, for $2,000, and three tracts on the Mount Perian road for $4,680, to people whose names are withheld.

Millions of Americans Are Saving---Millions of Americans Need to Borrow---Farmers Especially

Isn't It Possible for the Government to Put Those That Are SAVING In Touch With Those That Need to BORROW. Must the Blood-Sucker Always Play His Game of Usury Between Them?

(Copyright, 1913.)

In this country millions of industrious, careful human beings, anxious to provide for the future, are willing to save—and it is practically impossible for them to get a decent rate of interest on their savings and NOT risk being robbed at the same time.

In this country, where the millions are anxious to save, you have millions of farmers and small business men who are compelled to borrow—as their operations for the year exceed necessarily at one time or another the amount of money that they have on hand.

You have the savers on the one hand getting only 2 per cent if they put their money in the United States Postal Bank. And even then they are limited as to the amount they can put in. They get 3 per cent if they put their money in private savings banks—and take the usual risk of having the money lost through dishonesty or withheld from them in time of panic.

You have the farmers, upon whose labor and intelligence the nation depends, compelled to borrow for the purchase of seeds, of machinery. And, while the SAVING, careful American who accumulates his earnings can get only 2 per cent or 3 per cent interest, THE FARMER MUST PAY, ON THE AVERAGE, EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT FOR THE MONEY THAT HE BORROWS.

Isn't there some way of getting the AMERICAN WHO SAVES and the AMERICAN WHO BORROWS closer together?

Is it not an outrage that the hundreds of millions that the careful American saves should be lent to the hard-working farmer with SOME BANKING ORGANIZATION BETWEEN THE TWO GETTING A "RAKE OFF" OF FIVE AND A HALF PER CENT ON THE MONEY?

That is exactly what happens.

The money that the bankers are lending is simply the money that others have SAVED.

And the money that the farmers are borrowing is simply the money that the savers have deposited in the banks.

The people who save in this country get 3 per cent at most on their savings. And the farmers who borrow pay 8½ per cent.

And in the process 5½ per cent goes to build up a non-producing class THAT IS NOT NECESSARY.

Why should not the Government of the United States pay a decent rate of interest to the American citizen for his savings, and lend to the farmers at a fair rate of interest when the farmers need to borrow?

It doesn't cost 5½ per cent to handle money, to take it in with one hand and lend it with the other.

The United States Government might well afford to pay the careful, saving American 3 per cent on his money and LEND THAT SAME MONEY TO THE FARMER AT 4 PER CENT.

This would give the Government a margin of 1 per cent to cover expenses.

Why isn't it possible to do this?

It isn't possible for various reasons.

The first reason is that the finances of the United States are usually run by bankers for bankers.

The second reason is that the banking class represents Government, which in this country means money.

The little man who is saving his few hundred dollars and who must be content to get 3 per cent and risk losing it, and the farmer who is borrowing his few thousand dollars and who must go almost on his knees to get it, AND THEN PAY EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT—those two classes are not the Government.

The Government of this country is the banking class, the money class, the money itself.

And therefore the man who saves must accept 3 per cent interest and worry about his money's safety.

And the farmer who borrows must pay 8½ per cent and worry about his payments promptly on time, and pay a commission for extensions, and find himself sold out in time of panics.

And those who profit are the middlemen, the NON-PRODUCERS, the parasites, the blood-suckers of the community.

When will the people find a leader big enough and able enough to hand the savings of the frugal workmen in the shape of a loan to the equally frugal and valuable farmer, and take from both of them ONLY ENOUGH TO PAY FOR THE TRANSACTION?

They do these things in other countries.

In Germany and France they lend thousands of millions to the farmers at 4 per cent a year and less.

The farmers of this country borrow thousands of millions of dollars THROUGH A PRIVATE EXTORTIONATE BANKING SYSTEM AND THE AVERAGE CHARGE IS EIGHT AND ONE-HALF PER CENT.

Eight and one-half per cent on one thousand millions is eighty-five millions of dollars. And this is, at the least, FIFTY MILLIONS MORE THAN THE FARMERS SHOULD PAY.

Money is as much a TOOL in these days as any other.

If you make money, the most important tool, expensive for the farmer, YOU MAKE LIVING AND THE COST OF LIVING EXPENSIVE FOR ALL.

This nation should let the farmers have cheap money, and at the same time give to the saving mechanic a fair rate of interest AND ABSOLUTE SAFETY WITH A GOVERNMENT GUARANTEE.

That can be done, if MONEY will permit the people of this country to run the Government and the finances of the country for the benefit of the people—and not for the benefit of the blood-sucking middleman, called the banking system.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Horses and Camels Lived in Frozen North, Once a Mild Tropical Region, and Believed to Have Been Original Home of Man.

By GARRET P. SERVISS

HARDLY have the eyes of the world been opened, as never before, to the fascinating mysteries of the South Pole and its wonderful surrounding continent, than its great rival of the north makes new claims upon our attention.

North Pole Once a Mild, If Not Tropical, Region.

One of the strangest problems that science has to face is that presented by the fast accumulating evidence that, in former times, possibly before man had developed into his present physical form, a mild, if not a tropical, climate prevailed in those vast northern regions which are now buried, most of the time, under snow and ice. There is even reason to think that this strange condition may have existed up to the very Pole!

The period generally fixed by geologists for the existence of this state of things within the Arctic Circle is what is known as the Pleistocene (from the Greek pleistos, "most," and kainos, "recent," the meaning being that it was the most recent period of the great Tertiary Age). Any attempt to fix in years the distance of that time from ours is merely guesswork. It has been said that history reckons by years and geology by ages. It may be that the Pleistocene dates back a hundred thousand, and, perhaps, two or three hundred thousand years.

Anyhow, in Pleistocene times animals and plants, some of which are extinct and others of which are now found only in temperate or tropical regions, existed, apparently in abundance, in the polar regions of the north.

The latest discoveries concerning these vanished inhabitants of a land that has now become frigid and inhospitable relate to camels and horses. The presence of the camel in Alaska, not as a curiosity in a traveling menagerie, but as a regular inhabitant of the land, is astonishing to think of. We know the camel as a desert animal, a lover of the Sahara, with its waterless expanses of wind-driven, sun-blasted sand, but here he appears, dwelling before the two-legged animal that was to become his master had been introduced upon the planet, in a region which, in its present condition, would be almost as inappropriate a place of residence for him as the moon would be for men!

But he has left his fossilized bones there, and science has discovered them. We can not contradict such evidence.

Science Discovers That Horse Lived in Alaska.

Then, too, the horse existed in Alaska in that same strange age. Its remains have been found in so many places that it is impossible to conclude otherwise than that horses ranged freely over immense expanses within the Arctic Circle where now the sub-soil is a frozen mass that never melts. At that time great prairies of luscious grass must have existed there at nearly all times of the year, for horses do not store up food to last through a long, pitiless winter.

Mammoths and Bison Roamed Frozen North.

Somewhere about the same time mammoths, bisons and other strange animals also roamed that part of the world, finding an abundance of food about them. If there were men in existence at that time, they, too, may have been polar inhabitants!

The great question now is: What caused the change? Why were the Arctic regions warm and genial at that time, and how have they come into the state which we now find?

Some have suggested that the earth has partly tipped over, its axis of rotation, or the line joining its poles, assuming a different position. But this would involve a tremendous catastrophe, throwing the oceans out of their beds and producing disastrous changes all over the globe, and evidence of such a universal catastrophe is lacking. Moreover, there is hardly anything known to science more stable than an axis of rotation. Once set a body spining about a particular axis and it is extremely difficult to change the direction or slope of that axis. The whole form of the earth plainly indicates that it has been turning for countless ages about the same poles, and must have begun to so turn when it was yet plastic, or molten, for it has bulged at the equator, just as any mass of that kind must do under the influence of centrifugal force.

A more probable hypothesis is that the change of climate has been caused by elevations and subsidences of the earth's crust. The presence of horses and camels in Alaska has been ascribed to the former existence of a great "land bridge" connecting Asia with North America. Horses did not exist in America at the time of its discovery, and camels have never inhabited this Continent, except in Pleistocene times.

In view of the facts that I have been reciting, one can not but think of the strange theory, which has been strongly advocated in the past, though never accepted by science.

Many Believe Home of Race Was North Pole.

Not a few students believe that the original home of the present inhabitants of our hemisphere, and perhaps of the whole human race, was around the North Pole, from which they were driven by climatic changes. If that were so, then what is now the Arctic Ocean must have been a land "flowing with milk and honey," in the old Scriptural sense.

The Mad Monarch

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

HIS subjects may be found in every clime;
From every source they crawl to lick his hand.
His home in Hell is wonderfully planned
To welcome slaves that die from time to time.
His nag daughter is Lust. His son is Crime.
He has a solid throne in every land.
And what with hearts to break and serfs to brand,
He goes but seldom to his couch of slime.

He slays men's brains and deadens baby lives.
Oh, the vast pyramids this king could build
Were he to use the bones of starving wives
Who sigh to join the victims he has killed!
Mockingly glow in his grim diadem
Three bloody ruby letters—R-U-M.

Certified Brides and Bridegrooms

"I Know Dozens of People," She Says, "Who Would Never Have Been Born If This Health Idea Had Been Strictly Carried Out ---and Somehow I Don't Think the World Would Have Been Much Better Off For That."

By WINIFRED BLACK.

ONCE there was a clever little boy who was always taking clocks to pieces and meddling with locks and making wheels, and inventing ways of shutting the old door so that it wouldn't be locked and yet the dog could spring the latch—such a clever, clever boy—but I always hated to have him come to visit at our house.

You see, he could take a clock to pieces wonderfully well and put it together—just moderately well. The clock would go after he had put it together again, but somehow there was always something wrong with it some way. Sometimes it told the time all right, but struck wrong. Sometimes it struck all right, but told the hour wrong, and then again it was the alarm that never quite got over the clever boy's handling.

Sometimes I wonder about him—he's a doctor now, a very successful surgeon; always taking people to pieces. I wonder if they run quite so well when he is through with them as they did before he touched them—he and his "science."

Wants to Regulate All the Marriages.

I see he read a paper at a great medical convention yesterday—it was all about "eliminating the unfit."

He doesn't want anyone to marry but people in perfect health. He thinks physicians should regulate marriage—and regulate it legally. No one should be allowed to marry at all without the "yes, indeed," of the whole medical profession. Fine idea, progressive, and all that. I wonder if it is quite practical?

Now, there's the doctor himself, for instance. I happen to know that his mother was an old-fashioned consumptive. She took twenty years a-dying, and one of his brothers died of the old-fashioned illness out in Colorado not so many weeks ago.

The doctor is alive yet, and very lively, too, thank you. He would not be here at all if his advice had been taken thirty years ago—and just think how we should have missed him and his experiments with the clocks and with people's internals.

We knew a good many of the same people, the doctor and I, when he was taking clocks to pieces.

One of them died of cancer; her mother died of it, too; and she married and had three children. One of them is the cleverest, all-around woman I know, one is mediocre and one has made a fortune in a country town and is spending it helping sick babies get well. Now if that woman had not been allowed to marry, what then?

The best family in the town where we both lived had three sons—every one of them has turned out a failure. One's an invalid, one's a criminal and one's a drunkard. Father was sound as a hickory nut, and mother never had an ill day in her life. How about that family?

How far back have you got to go to get at the source of infection and who's going to do the "going?"

"Somebody 'Queer' In Every Family."

"I can find enough degenerates in any family on earth to get any client off for murder in the first degree," said a clever lawyer to me just the other day. "I don't suppose there's a family in America without somebody 'queer' in it."

Just how "queer" have you got to be and who's going to decide about it when you try to get a marriage license and can't?

"Eliminate the unfit"—well, well, Mr. Physician, who are the unfit?

There's Robert Louis Stevenson, for instance. He never drew a breath of good health in his life. Would you have "eliminated" him?

How about Julius Caesar, how about Napoleon, how about Mohammed, how about Daniel Webster, how about St. Paûl?

Unfit—every one of them—from the doctor's point of view, and there are still more illustrious examples of the unfit who survived and made the world over just to suit their own ideas while the "fit" stood around and looked on and wondered about it.

It's a glorious idea you have, doctor, and one that every civilized nation should study carefully—but are you quite sure how you are going to manage it?

I got the "sterilized" fad once and wouldn't let anyone have a drop of water that wasn't boiled; till my old doctor came along and told me I had boiled all the life out of it, and he said he'd risk a few germs if he were me—on the principle that he'd rather be an aquarium than a cemetery—and I got over my fad.

"Drink water all you can," shouts the water-cure fiend.

"Don't touch water till you have to," insists the new specialist.

"When your brain is tired, work your body," advises the doctor who is supposed to know.

"Don't overwork a tired system," says his neighbor. "Rest is the only thing to cure fatigue."

Owe Their Existence To Old-Time Laws.

And so it goes—we're all so interested—in this "eliminate the unfit" idea, and yet when I look around among my friends, a pretty decent lot of people as the world goes, I can see dozens of them who would never have been born at all if this idea had been strictly carried out, and somehow I can't think the world would have been much better off for that.

Take the old clock to pieces, doctor, all you will, but please, good friend, be quite sure you know how to put it together again so it will strike twelve at midnight and not at eight of the morning.

:-: Marshal D'Ancre :-:

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE execution, 296 years ago, of Leonora Galigai, wife of the Marshal D'Ancre, was the wind-up of one of the most remarkable life stories in French history.

In 1610 the fanatical Ravaillac plunged his dagger into the heart of Henry Fourth, and Mary de Medici was proclaimed Regent. At the time of her marriage to Henry Mary brought with her from Florence her nurse's daughter, Leonora Galigai, and her husband, Concino Concini, son of a Florentine notary. By these creatures the Regent was completely hypnotized, and in a trice the nurse's daughter and the notary's son became the most consequential personages in France. Mary, besides making the pair her confidential advisers, gave them every opportunity for advancing their material fortunes, with the result that, in addition to wielding great power at court, they grew immensely wealthy. The well-filled strong-box left by the great King was pilfered right and left, and in a little while Concini was able to say: "When I came to France I was not worth a sou, now I am worth eight millions." His wife also laid by a splendid wad of the "needful," besides supplying herself with the plate, wardrobe and jewels that were the wonder of her time.

Purchasing the Marquisate of Ancre and a marshalship, the notary's son was now the Marshal D'Ancre, and as for the nurse's daughter—she was pretty nearly the "whole thing," for she dominated both Mary and D'Ancre.

But alas, for the "best laid plans of mice and men!" One day, after some seven years of prosperity, the Marshal D'Ancre was shot down like a dog by the order, or with the consent, of the young King, Louis Thirteenth, and not long thereafter the court creatures seized D'Ancre's widow and took her before the bar of the Parliament, by which body she was unceremoniously sentenced to the block. The last words of the dashing adventuress, as she looked out upon the sea of humanity that had gathered to witness her execution, were:

"What a lot of people to look at one poor creature die!"

ATLANTA BALKS AT NOSE VEIL; MUST SEE ALL OF PRETTY FACE

Miss Nancy Reed, first girl to wear the nose veil here.

She says it will not do for Atlanta beauties at all.

At last Dame Fashion seems to have overstepped the line in freakish wearing apparel for women, so far as Atlanta is concerned.

The Arabian nose veil, an importation now much in vogue in Newport and other Eastern centers of all that is fashionable, has met a sharp rebuff here.

The veil in use is drawn taut over the tip of the nose and covers the mouth and chin. One sees but the eyes of the wearer. Mrs. French Vanderbilt, Mrs. William Goadby and others are its sponsors in the East.

Miss Nancy Reed, a former Atlanta girl, now visiting Mrs. George Spier in Twelfth street, is among the first here to attempt the nose veil.

"It won't do for Atlanta girls," she declared, and her decision seems to have been sustained, especially by the men of the city, who enjoy seeing all of a pretty face.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia: Local showers Tuesday and probably Wednesday.

LAY SERIES OF CRIMES TO GANG

Police Capture Pair in Carrol Street Store Just in Time to Save Clerk.

In the arrest of T. W. Reeves and R. W. Miller after they had knocked senseless an employee in the store of R. A. Gober, No. 30 Carroll street, and as they were attempting to open the safe last night, the police declare they have uncovered a series of daring and cleverly planned burglaries and thefts covering a period of several months.

The capture of the two men, who are said to be desperate criminals, came only after they had been shadowed for more than six weeks by members of the detective department.

Their alleged attempt at looting the Gober store came nearly being fatal to Edward M. Davis, who works on Saturdays and occasionally at other times for Gober.

Davis was beaten unconscious and carried, bound, into the ice box in the rear of the store.

Near Death When Found.

The door was clamped shut on him, and when he recovered consciousness, he found that he was suffocating. Had not the detectives been close on the trail of the robbers, a few more minutes would have resulted in the death of the young man.

Despite the assertion of the detectives that they have connected the men with a chain of robberies and suit case thefts extending over a considerable time, both Reeves and Miller emphatically denied Tuesday that they had had anything to do with them and defied the police to prove their charges.

The detectives went to the home of Reeves, 13 Stonewall street, and there found three suit cases, which, they say, ar stolen property. Another suit case was found in a woman's room at No. 153 1-2 Whitehall street.

Chief Lanford Tuesday morning said that Reeves and Miller had stolen more than 40 suit cases at the depots in the recent weeks, and also had participated in attempts at safe-cracking and burglary. Detectives Chewning, Davis, Sturdivant and Rosser have taken turns in trailing the men in the last six weeks.

Scared by Clock.

About six weeks ago, Chief Lanford says, they planned to burglarize the Barfield store on West Hunter street, near Chestnut. They are said to have had an expert safe-blower with them at the time. They were just gaining an entrance to the store, according to the police, when an alarm clock in a negro's house near by rang and scared them away. Detectives were only a few feet away and were watching the whole operation.

With a pal, they went to the Gober store at about 11 o'clock last night. Davis was asked to go in and serve them with soft drinks. As the young man neared the cash register, he was felled by a blow from a club in Miller's hand. He was quickly bound and hurried to the ice box. The lights were extinguished and the three started at work on the safe with a large key which was taken from Davis.

The detectives, who had been lying in wait for the trio, noted the suddenness with which the lights went out and rushed for the building. Miller, standing on the outside with the club still in his hand, was overpowered before he could utter a word.

The detectives rushed inside and after a hand-to-hand batle with Reeves slipped the manacles on his wrist. The third member of the gang escaped by diving through a window. The police say they know his identity and will be able to arrest him.

'Make-Up' Stone Is Editor's Monument; Bears Epitaph Poem

JEFFERSON, OHIO, July 22.—One of the most remarkable gravestones on record was placed in the cemetery here to-day.

It stands at the head of the grave of J. A. Howells, veteran editor of The Ashtabula Sentinel, who died here recently. It consists of the "make-up" stone used by Mr. Howels for fifty years, during his successive evolutions as printer's devil, printer and editor. It is inscribed with these lines, written by William Dean Howells, a brother of the editor:

Stone, upon which with hands of boy and man,
He framed the history of his time until,
Week after week, the varying record ran,
To its half-centuried tale of well and ill.

Remember now how true through all those days
He was—friend, brother, husband, son—
Fill the whole limit of your space with praise,
There needs no room for blame—blame there was none.

The boyhood of William Dean Howells was spent in the office of The Sentinel. The father of William Dean Howells and J. A. Howells was editor of the paper.

Goes for Five Beers; Quarter Gets Barrel

ST. LOUIS, July 22.—William Tipton, a laborer employed in the excavation work for a new city jail, found a quarter while digging in the rear of the Municipal Courts Building yesterday.

He immediately invited his nearest fellow worker to step across the street and help consume the five "big beers" the coin would buy. It bore the date 1805.

"Will you take enough to buy a barrel of beer for that quarter?" the bystander asked.

"Sure thing," was Tipton's reply. The stranger handed him $6.50 and pocketed the quarter.

Macon Saloonists Start Blacklisting

MACON, July 22.—A stir has been caused by the discharge of Will R. Aven, one of the best known barbers of Macon, because he signed a petition of the Law Enforcement League for the closing of saloons and locker clubs. He is a steward of the Mulberry Street Methodist Church, the pastor of which is Dr. W. N. Ainsmith, leader of the law and order crusade.

It is charged that Aven's discharge is the first move in a boycott and blacklist planned by the saloon men and their friends against those participating in the campaign.

Don't Let the Wife Read This Story!

MUNICE, IND., July 22.—A young Munice business man whose "wife's gone to the country" or the seashore or some place is causing the police concern, not on account of his bad actions, but rather on account of his excessive goodness.

When his work is completed each day the young man reports at central police station and hangs around there until time to go home to bed, all as arranged with his wife, who desires to have an accurate knowledge of her husband's doings while she is enjoying herself.

Penniless 30 Years Ago; Left $300,000

MACON, July 22.—Thirty years ago Ed Welchselbaum, a penniless German boy, drifted into Macon. His will, just filed, discloses that when he died several weeks ago he left an estate valued at $300,000. He provided that his two sister should receive $125 per month during their lives and divided the remainder of the estate between his wife and his son. The boy, now 10 years old, comes into possession of his part when he attains majority.

For six or eight years Mr. Welchselbaum was in the real estate business.

FIRST CLASH DUE OVER DRAWING

List Likely Will Be Completed by Wednesday—Delay of Trial Not Probable.

Superior Judge John T. Pendleton prepared Tuesday morning to draw the 150 veniremen for the trial of Leo M. Frank. This venire will be called next Monday morning unless the weather is unusually warm.

The jury, in all probability, will be selected and served before Wednesday night, according to Judge Pendleton.

The drawing will be the occasion for the first clash in open court between the attorneys for Frank and the State's representatives. Attorney Reuben R. Arnold stated Tuesday morning that he probably would ask Judge Pendleton to draw the venire from the Grand Jury box, and that he felt confident he could cite enough law on the subject to sustain his point.

Solicito rto Fight Move.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey stated that the proceedure was altogether irregular, if not illegal, and that he would oppose such a move as strongly as he fought the attempt on the part of the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley over his protest.

The attorneys on both sides will be notified by telephone when Judge Pendleton begins to draw the venire, and he will allow them to be heard.

Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside at the Frank trial, will not return to Atlanta from Covington until Friday. He announced to a correspondent of The Georgian in Covington that the Frank trial would be called next Monday sure, but he would not commit himself as to whether he would consider any move for postponement after the case was called.

Before leaving for Covington he remarked that if the weather was as hot next Monday as it was last week he would welcome some sufficient ground for postponement.

Both Sides Are Ready.

Attorneys Arnold and Rosser admit they would liek to see the trial postponed to escape the ordeal of a hard fight in torrid weather, but state they will be reluctant to ask for delay unless there is some very excellent reason why the case should not go to trial.

Both sides are ready. All the witnesses who will be used are within the jurisdiction of the court and able to attend. The inability of any one of the more than 100 to be in court on the day the case is called would sustain a request for postponement, but the attorneys for the defense made it clear that if any move for postponement for any other reason than the absence of a witness was made, it would come from the other side, or the judge.

Attorney Arnold stated that the failure of the Grand Jury to indict Conley had made little difference to their case, because it had been built before any known move was made to bring about the indictment.

"It made absolutely no difference to us," he said. "It was purely a technical point in the trial that would have been in our favor. As to the negro's character and standing, it would make little difference to a fair-minded jury whether he were indicted."

One Man Killed in Duel Over Politics

LEXINGTON, KY., July 22.—After having a fist fight over politics Sunday at Olympia, Bates County, Thurman Pergram and a man named Harris agreed to go home, get their guns and settle it. They met as arranged and shot it out.

Pergram was mortally wounded and died while being taken to a hospital here.

LUMB EXTRADITION DELAYED BY HEIRS

No new steps have been taken in the effort to obtain requisition papers for Fred Lumb, the barber alleged to be an accomplice of Mrs. Mary Crawford, and who is said to be in New York. Following the attempt to obtain the papers Monday morning, Attorney J. S. James, counsel for the Crawford heirs, announced that the papers would be asked for after the appointment of a solicitor.

The application of Monday morning was not a formal request for the papers. According to Attorney James he simply asked Governor Slaton if it would be possible to obtain requisition papers for a man before he was indicted. This request, he says, he made several days ago, and Governor Slaton said he would advise him Monday morning.

As Colonel James had made no formal application, the Governor advised him that he could not make a decision.

Judge W. D. Ellis Monday afternoon asked Attorney Lewis Thomas to act as Solicitor in the place of Hugh Dorsey, who is disqualified to handle the Crawford prosecution because the law firm of which he is a member represents one of the parties in the civil case.

20 WOMEN WILL DEBATE SUFFRAGE

The long-heralded "pro" and "con" discussion of the equal suffrage question will take place at Taft Hall Tuesday night, under the auspices of the Habersham Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. William Lawson Peel, prominently connected with the Habersham Chapter and an ardent suffragist, will preside.

Opportunity for the full discussion of both sides of the question will be given. Among the twenty or more speakers who have been listed for the occasion are some of the most ardent anti-suffragists as well as suffragists. Despite her well known views along the line, Mrs. Peel will give to each speaker full opportunity to express his or her views, as she believes in getting at the truth of the matter by debate.

Perhaps the only neutral person present Tuesday night will be Dr. Percy Starnes, the city organist, who will render several choice selections between the arguments.

The big meeting will be called promptly at 7:45 o'clock. Among the speakers will be Mrs. William Lawson Peel, Miss Rosa Woodberry, Mrs. M. C. Hardin, Mrs. M. T. McWhorter, Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, Mrs. W. H. Felton, Mrs. M. L. McClendon, Mrs. Frances Whiteside, Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, J. R. Smith, R. H. Hardeman, Dr. A. M. Hughlett, H. H. Swift, J. L. Hope, W. L. Converse, Louis Wisdom and R. A. Broyles.

JACKSON, MISS., JULY 22.—THIRTY-FIVE NEGRO CONVICTS WERE BURNED TO DEATH WHEN FIRE LAST NIGHT DESTROYED THE PRISON CAGE ON THE STATE CONVICT FARM AT OAKLEY, MISS.

Obsolete Laws to Be Stricken From Atlanta City Code

Through the efforts of Councilman Claude L. Ashley, the City Council has appointed a special committee to strike all persiflage from the City Code. He said it is full of obsolete laws, and gives the following examples:

No public meeting shall be held in Atlanta without twelve hours' notice to the Chief of Police.

Pigs shall not be allowed to run loose in the streets.

It shall be unlawful to trap mockingbirds within the city limits.

It shall be unlawful to auction off mules at the corner of Broad and Marietta streets.

'Cherry Pie' Made Of Watermelons

Can she make a cherry pie,
Billy Boy! Billy Boy?
Can she make a cherry pie,
Charming Billy?
Yes, she can make a cherry pie
If the melon patch is nigh!
She's a young thing and can not leave her mother!

—New Version.

HAMMOND, IND., July 22.—Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the Indiana State Board of Health and pure food specialist, is trying to find the Chicago genius who is making cherry pie from watermelon pulp.

Hurty sojourned at a Gary cafe for a meal and ordered cherry pie. He bit into a matermelon seed, and began an investigation. The proprietor threw the burden of the pie on Chicago bakers.

Clark Makes White Suits Congress Fad

WASHINGTON, July 22.—If Mark Twain could return to earth and come to Congress he would be immensely gatified by the unanimity with which distinguished statesmen have adopted his fad of wearing white.

Over on the House side, Speaker Champ Clark, looking like a huge mountain of ice cream, is resplendent in white from his snowy hair to his immaculate white ties. Since he has set the fashion there, it has spread like wildfire over the chamber.

Bryan Naps 2 Hours In Rail Station Seat

CHICAGO, July 22.—For two hours early to-day Secretary of State Bryan sat nearly upright in a railroad station seat and slept. When his train was called he entered a drawing room and prepared to awake in Oelwein, Iowa, where he was scheduled to give a Chautauqua lecture this afternoon.

Before his nap Secretary Bryan entertained four newspaper men at a midnight lunch which cost him 45 cents. He ate canteloupe off a dairy lunch chair.

$5,000 Raised to Free Socialist Riot Chief

GIRARD, KANS., July 21.—The Appeal to Reason has forwarded the $5,000 cash necessary to obtain the release of Patrick Quinlan, a socialist of Paterson, N. J., sent to the penitentiary for inciting a riot during the strike here.

The money was raised by subscription, and will secure Quinlan's release until the case can be carried to a higher court.

All Missourians to Make Roads 2 Days

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., July 22.—Governor Major issued a proclamation to-day setting apart Wednesday and Thursday, August 20 and 21, as public holidays, to be known as "Good Road Days."

Every able-bodied man in rural districts and cities of the State is to put in these days working upon the public highways.

GUARDS RIOT AT POPE'S ROOMS

Mutinous Swiss Soldiers Threaten to Break Into Private Chamber of Pontiff.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, July 22.—After 24 hours of wild rioting by the Pope's Swiss guards, during which the men were shorn of their military powers at the Vatican, order was restored to-day.

The demands of the soldiers, which caused the mutiny, will not be granted. The soldiers had asked concessions raising the embargo against them visiting wine shops and other stores along the Tiber; the right to choose their own commander; the increase of the guards' quota, and a demand that no punishment be meted out to them for their mutinous conduct.

The guards, incensed at the official order depriving them of their military status, stormed the Vatican, and for a time it was feared that the Italian troops quartered in the city would have to be called out to quell the disturbance.

Great alarm was felt among the Vatican officials for fear that the soldiers would force their way into the Pope's private chambers.

Drastic measures were taken to guard His Holiness from the angry soldiers, as grave fears were entertained that the Pontiff, still weakened from the effects of his recent illness, would suffer a relapse should the soldiers force their way into his presence.

What punishment will be meted to the mutineers still is undecided, but it was unofficialiy stated that severe penalties would be inflicted.

2nd Regiment Boys Real Soldiers Now

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, GA., July 22.—The Second Regiment, National Guard of Georgia, has settled down to the business of soldiering. The men are being given a taste of real military life every day.

Guard mount and the routine of the camp is gone through with every morning, and Monday the first of a series of skirmishes, conducted as nearly as possible under actual war conditions, was held. The skirmishes are followed by two hours of hard work on the firing line.

Suits or Arbitration To Settle Damages

MACON, July 22.—The special committees appointed to ascertain the amounts of damages claimed by property owners on Cherry street on account of the closing of the thoroughfare for the building of a union station have submitted their report to the Railroad Commission.

The report shows that the property owners want exceedingly large damages, and that it will take either arbitration or court suits to settle most of the claims.

Council Gives Auto To City Electrician

If the Aldermanic Board acts as promptly as Council, City Electrician R. C. Turner will have an automobile. Council Monday authorized the expenditure of $750 for a machine.

After the action of the Aldermanic Board Thursday the resolution will go to Mayor Woodward.

LEADERS AGREE TO PUSH BIG FUNDS BILL

Decks Cleared in House and Appriation Measure Will Go to Senate This Week.

When Chairman Crawford, of the House Appropriations Committee, calls up the general appropriations bill to-day he will ask that it be made a continuing order until it is disposed of in the House and sent to the Senate.

The chairman of the Appropriations Committee has the extraordinary right under the rules of the House of calling up his bill whenever he pleases, and it must have the right of way.

Chairman Wheatley has determined to exercise his right to the limit, and to that end has invited and obtained the promise of Speaker Burwell's earnest and sincere support in putting the bill through.

Trying t oPush It Along.

It is the purpose of Chairman Wheatley and the Speaker to have the general appropriations bill in the hands of the Senate at least by the end of this week, and if they succeed they will have the bill in the Senate earlier than it has been since the war, and at least ten days earlier than it has been in thirty years.

When the big bill comes up the House will immediately be resolved in a committee of the whole House, with some member other than the Speaker presiding, as the rules require.

The chairman of the Committee of the Whole House has not yet been announced, but it is likely it will be Mr. McMichael, of Marion, or Mr. Miller, of Bibb.

Both are experienced parliamentarians and either would make a fit and proper person for the work. Both are behind the effort to get the appropriation bill into the hands of the Governor well in advance of adjournment, as the Governor has requested.

General Tax Act Next.

The bill carries the constitutional appropriations, statehouse salaries, and the like, which can not be changed by the House, in full, and these items will be quickly disposed of.

The other items will go in in blank, to be filled in by the committee of the whole.

Immediately after the general aproiations bill is disposed of the tax revision bill and the general tax act will come into the House from the Ways and Means Committee, when, at the request of Chairman Aiken, those bills also will be given the right of way. Both should be in the hands of the Senate before the end of next week.

Speed Assured in Senate.

If this is accomplished, another House record will be smashed.

The chairmen of the two big committees and the Speaker of the House have been assured by a large majority of the House that they will be co-operated with in their efforts to expedite legislation.

In the Senate President Anderson is but waiting for the House measures in order that he may duplicate there the program of orderly haste to be enacted in the House. He has assurance of co-operation from a practically solid Senate.

Again, Out Again, In! In Jail, Out Again, In

MACON, July 22.—Put in jail for failure to pay alimony, released on bond, surrendered by his bondsman and thrust back in a cell, released by one judge on a writ of habeas corpus, only to be sent to jail again by another judge for continued insufficiency of bond, such has been the experience of J. C. Brooks, a railroad conductor, during the last week.

Judge Hodges in the City Court on Monday granted a writ of habeas corpus in his favor, but five minutes later Brooks was rearrested on another warrant sworn out by Mrs. Evelyn Brooks, his 18-year-old wife, who has obtained an alimony decree and is now suing him for divorce. The hearing in this latest case will take place this afternoon.

Motorcyclist Hurt In Auto Collision

Dave Rudisall, of College Park, is in Grady Hospital with a broken leg as a result of a collision between his motorcycle and an automobile near Fort McPherson Monday afternoon.

The automobile was driven by Harry Manning, of East Point. His machine was uninjured and he carried Rudisall to the hospital.

6,500-Pound Cheese Made in New York

UTICA, N. Y., July 22.—The finishing touches on a cheese weighing 6,500 pounds, the largest cheese ever made in New York State, if not in the world, were put on to-day at the Gowdy factory in Martinsburg.

Two days' milk from two factories was required. The cheese will be exhibited at the State fair in Syracuse.

Still Chimes to Let Philadelphia Sleep

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—Because the chimes on the chapel of the Little Sisters of the Poor here disturbed the sleep of persons living in the vicinity, the bells, which were brought from France, will be silent hereafter from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m.

More Battleships to Guard Pacific Coast

PORTLAND, ORE., July 22.—Calling the Pacific Coast the "new frontier," Secretary of the Navy Daniels, in an interview to-day, stated that upon the completion of the Panama Canal the Administration intends keeping a majority of the battleships of the navy on the Pacific Coast.

"This coast faces the largest population of the world," said Daniels, "and as such it is most important that it be adequately defended."

Committee Favors Woman Lawyer Bill

Chances for women lawyers to obtain the right to practice in the courts of Georgia received a boost Monday afternoon when the bill introduced by Representative J. L. Cooper met with a favorable report from General Judiciary Committee No. 1.

For several years the House has been so divided on the question that each time the bill has been killed.

Photographers of U. S. May Come to Atlanta Next Year

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 22.—With a dozen boosters putting forth the brand of effort that captured the big Shriners' convention, Atlanta's chances of getting the next gathering of the Photographers' Association of America, now in session here, are growing better every hour.

The Atlantans have opened an office in the convention hall and a display in the lobby of the Hotel Baltimore, where the delegates are entertained and provided with literature descriptive of the Gate City. There are about 800 delegates here now, with several hundred more coming.

Harry Goodhart, L. D. Hicks and Fred Houser, who head the Atlanta delegation, are confident that the Georgia city will secure the next convention.

Mr. Goodhart declared this morning that "there is nothing to it but Atlanta. I have talked to several hundred delegates and they all want to come to the 'New York of the South.'"

Atlanta Buffaloes Seeking a 'Wallow'

Arrangements for permanent headquarters of the Atlanta Herd No. 150, Benevolent Order of Buffaloes, which was organized Monday night by Senator H. S. Wells, of Indiana, are being made by a committee. The temporary quarters will be at 400 Atlanta Trust Building.

The following officers were named Monday night: A. P. Bayless, past worthy bison; H. T. Kilpatrick, worthy bison; Dr. Dan Y. Sage, vice worthy bison; H. S. Courtney, guide; S. S. Bak, guard; William P. Jones, sentinel, and Dr. J. C. King, J. C. Acton and Henry Muench, trustees. J. W. Leroux, C. O. Duvall, Dr. King, C. F. Hoffman and W. C. Flury were appointed on an organization and boosters' committee.

W. F. Brandt Candidate.

W. F. Brandt announced Tuesday that he would be a candidate in opposition to S. L. Dallas to succeed Roy Albernathy as Councilman from the Seventh Ward. Mr. Abernathy will not stand for re-election.

Hundreds to Boost State Trade Chamber

Several hundred enthusiastic boosters are expected in Atlanta Wednesday morning, when the State Convention to discuss the formation of a state Chamber of Commerce will be held under the auspices of the Atlanta Chamber. The invitations have been awarded by city officials and officers of commercial organizations from all over the State.

Among the boosters of the proposed organization are Mayor Woodward, J. A. Davis, Albany; E. W. Stetson, Macon; John W. Callahan and H. H. Coombs, Bainbridge, and R. D. Cole, Newnan.

Council Authorizes 5 Drinking Fountains

Council took two steps Monday toward making Atlanta a better place to live in. It appropriated $105 for five drinking founts to be placed around the center of the city and created a special committee to consider the establishment of a public comfort station.

Alderman A. H. VanDyke introduced the resolution to purchase the drinking founts. Councilman Sam Shepard's resolution creating the public comfort committee provided that L. C. Green, J. K. Orr and Lee Barnes should serve with three Councilmen to be appointed by Mayor Woodward.

General West Gets Gettysburg Medal

A silver medal bearing the inscription "1863-1913, Fiftieth Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg," the gift of Governor Tener of Pennsylvania, has been received by General A. J. West, the Georgia Gettysburg Commissioner.

Accompanying the beautiful gift was a letter from Governor Tener in which he expresses his sincere appreciation for the active interest of General West in the celebration.

The medal has the kneeling figures of two veterans, blue and gray, on one side and on the reverse side two hands tightly clasped.

'Doc' Stork Alights In Pullman Berth

LOUISVILLE, July 22.—The stork presented Mrs. D. J. Jones, of Johnson City, Tenn., with a girl baby while on a westbound Southern Railway train to join her husband at Colorado Springs.

The youngster arrived en route, between North Vernon, Ind., and Fairfield, Ill. The train was backed to North Vernon, and the mother and baby were taken to a hospital. The husband was notified and is on the way to North Vernon.

Anyone Seen Nogi? His Pal Is Grieving

"Nogi" is gone and now, after a futile search throughout the city, his little master gives up his quest heartbroken. Nogi is a fox terrier and pal of a little boy over on the South Side. Last Wednesday he disappeared down Whitehall street and has not been found since.

A reward of $10 has been offered by Jack Roberts, of the Guthman Steam Laundry, and L. P. Hoppe, of the Southern Flour and Grain Company, for his recovery.

'OLD HOSS' JUDGE SAYS PONIES ARE GREAT

Pick of Mountain Herd Ordered to Make Out Prizes for Georgian Contestants.

Telegrams Monday ordered John G. Mobley, of Winnsboro, S. C., to ship the thirteen ponies necessary to complete the herd of 22 which The Georgian and American will give away after the close of its contest, July 31.

Within a few days, the special car bringing the Shetlands should arrive. According to the expert who went to Winnsboro and picked them out, they are a feast for the eyes.

Mr. Mobley has a plantation of 1,400 acres. Of this area, 450 acres of wood lot are used as a pony farm. Just now, he has 100 head of ponies, which have been roaming the woods and the rich pasture, and, these hot days, seeking the shady tangles.

The Georgian and American were offered their pick of the entire five-score ponies. Twenty negroes, mounted on mules, started at 8 o'clock in the morning to round them up. By 1 o'clock they had the 100 little fellows on the summit of a hill where Mr. Mobley is accustomed to give them salt. From this knoll they were driven to the pens, and the best fifteen were selected. All are sound, gentle, affectionate and well trained. They vary sufficiently in markings, colors and size to please all tastes. Perhaps the pick of the bunch is "Flash," who looks like a race horse, and is as fast as his name.

Every one of the ponies is worth well above $100, and with each goes a guarantee of good health and freedom from blemish.

If the boys and girls are enthusiastic about the ponies already in Atlanta, they will be wildly excited over the newcomers, it is predicted, for they are believed to be, if anything, a little better than those first purchased.

Woman in Charge Of 1,000 Convicts

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—Mrs. O. M. Spickard, a frail middle-aged woman, to-day is in charge of the Mississippi State penitentiary. She exercises control over more than 1,000 prisoners, including more than 100 murderers and burglars. Governor Brewer to-day said he would appoint Mrs. Spickard to a position on the Prison Board.

Mrs. Spickard became secretary of the board when Lawrence Yerger was convicted in the wholesale prison graft trials recently, and became head of the prison system when President C. C. Smith was convicted and removed.

PARCEL POST TO CARRY 20-LB. PACKAGES

Rates Also Cut in First and Second Zones—Chart Replaces Map.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The Postoffice Department has announced important changes in the operation of the parcel post system, including an increase in the maximum weight limit on packages from 11 to 20 pounds, a reduction in the rates of postage within the first and second zones and the substitution of a convenient rate chart for the elaborate parcel post map in determining postage rates.

Since the establishment of the parcel post system many requests have been received at the Postoffice Department for an increase in the maximum weight of packages that will be carried and a corresponding reduction in the rates of postage.

The act of August 24, 1912, establishing the system authorizes the Postmaster General, with the consent of the Interstate Commerce Commission, after investigation, to change from time to time, in his discretion, the classification, weight limit, rates or zones, to improve the service.

Changes Effective August 15.

After weeks of consideration, Postmaster General Burleson submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission and got its consent to the following changes, which are to be effective on August 15:

The first zone shall include the territory within the local delivery of any office and the first zone rate of postage will apply to all parcel post mail deposited at any office for local delivery or for delivery by city carrier or on rural routes emanating from that postoffice.

The second zone shall include the remainder of what is now the first zone together with the present second zone, and shall include all the units of area located in whole or in part within a radius of approximately 150 miles from any given postoffice.

The rate of postage on parcels weighing in excess of four ounces in the proposed first zone—that is, for local delivery—will be reduced from 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof, to 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional two pounds or fraction thereof.

Second Zone Rate Reduced.

The rate for the proposed second zone—that is, the territory embraced within a radius of 150 miles from any given postoffice—will be reduced from 5 cents for the first pound and 3 cents for each additional pound (the present first zone rate) or 6 cents for the first pound and 4 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof (the present second zone rate) to 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

The maximum weight of parcel post packages will be increased from 11 pounds to 20 pounds, the increase of weight to apply only to the first and second zones. No change has been made in the restrictions as to the size and form of the package.

Says Modern Man Excels Patriarchs

CHICAGO, July 22.—"David and Solomon and some other patriarchs were excellent men as judged by the standards of their own time, but they would not be admitted to membership in the church of to-day," said the Rev. John Thompson, of Chicago, who contends the world is growing better.

The speaker said the rise of golf, baseball and other outdoor sports was a sign of improving moral standards.

High Cost of Dying Cut by Funeral Bus

CHICAGO, July 22.—The high cost of dying is to be lowered in Chicago with the advent of motor 'buses. The funeral 'bus will have a compartment to the right of the chauffeur's seat for the coffin, and above it a place for flowers. Near the driver will sit the minister and the undertaker, and there will be accommodations for twenty-seven mourners.

The funeral 'bus, it is said, will reduce the transportation cost by $30. Ten of the 'buses are to be in operation soon.

EVERY HOME NEEDS A HEALING SALVE

None Is More Reliable Than Resinol.

The same soothing, healing, antiseptic medication which makes Resinol Ointment so successful for eczema and other skin eruptions also makes it the ideal household remedy for a score of troubles that constantly arise in every home. It quickly heals burns, scalds and wounds; is an excellent dressing for ulcers, felons, boils and stubborn sores; stops itching at once; gives prompt and permanent relief from piles, and is invaluable for many minor skin troubles such as cold-sores, sunburn, prickly heat, pimples and chafings.

Resinol Ointment positively contains nothing of a harsh or injurious nature. It is absolutely pure and so gentle, yet effective, that it can be used freely on the most inflamed surface or the tenderest skin, even of a tiny baby. Doctors have prescribed it for eighteen years. Trial free; Dept. 10-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md. Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment.

'Slit Skirt O. K. If There Is No Ogling'

CINCINNATI, July 22.—Chief Copelan announced to-day that Cincinnati women may wear the near slit skirts without police interference, provided their garments doesn't cause riots or blocking of traffic.

"I am trusting to the good sense and modesty that I have always observed among Cincinnati women to prevent them from wearing indecent garments," said Chief Copelan.

"I do not set myself up as a dress censor, anyway. So long as the women do not raise a riot, they can dress as they please."

'Woman in the Case' Is a Pet House Fly

PITTSBURG, PA., July 22.—A remarkable suit for divorce was filed here by Attorney A. C. Stein for Mrs Jeanette Helen Janderson against Walter Bradley Janderson, a well-known stock broker of this city.

Mrs. Janderson, who is a pretty and attractive woman with an exquisite figure, gives as a reason for asking the decree that her husband "lavishes all of his affection on a pet housefly which is continually with him no matter where he goes."

Church Is Freed of 'Blind Tiger' Charge

MILWAUKEE, July 22.—Attorneys for the 800 members of St. Joseph's Polish Catholic Church, charged with selling liquor at a picnic, pleaded nolle contendere in police court.

The court dismissed the charges against the congregation and officers of the church upon payment of the costs by the defendants.

U. S. SOIL BOARD TOOK LESSONS FROM IRISH

American Commission Departed For Home, Writes Sir Horace Plunkett, Much Informed.

By SIR HORACE PLUNKETT,
President Irish Agricultural Organization Society.
Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 22.—The American Agricultural Commission has completed its inquiry and sailed from Queenstown by the Cedric to New York. They spent eleven days in the United Kingdom, the first three of which were devoted to London and the surrounding agricultural district.

Everywhere the commission was cordially received, but there was at first considerable doubt just what was the precise scope and aim of the inquiry, doubt which members of the commission did not appear to have been quite able to dispel. Immediately on reaching Ireland, public interest in the proceedings commenced to liven, and the published debates of the commission and those with whom they conferred upon agricultural questions became absorbingly interesting.

Ireland Aids Commission.

Many members of the commission declared before leaving Ireland that they there got nearer to the kernel of their problem than in all their previous European wanderings.

Contrasting continental Europe with American agriculture, I find the outstanding difference lies in the fact that in all progressive countries farmers are combined together for agricultural purposes on a co-operative system, whereas in the United States and English-speaking countries they work separately. This probably places them at greater disadvantage in the United States than in any other country, because all their other industries are highly organized.

When the commission came to Ireland they found that a body of rural reformers had for nearly a quarter of a century been trying to induce Irish farmers to adopt the co-operative measures employed by Continental competitors.

Members of the commission who had seen the marvelous effect of co-operative organization on the Continent were told how it had been introduced into Ireland to supplement the agrarian revolution through which the country had been pasing. They became satisfied that the Irish rural scheme of regeneration was the best that could be devised.

First Grasp of Problem.

They had seen the system in operation in other countries in Europe. They now saw it being gradually and successfully applied to agricultural conditions in an English-speaking country and almost instinctively settled down to the question of how the reform could be put in operation in the United States.

Here for the first time the commissional reached a definite, practical issue, and it was quite clear at the end of the deliberations in Dublin that they were beginning to see their way to follow the Irish lead and gradually reorganize the whole business of farming in the United States and Canada on co-operative lines.

The commission carried away the impression that neglect of the rural side of civilization in the New World had gone too far, and it would not be a very difficult lesson, husbanding agricultural resources in the favorable conditions enjoyed in their great country.

BRIDE TELLS HOW TO MANAGE A HUSBAND

Mrs. Frank Wyncoff Who Gives Atlanta Wives Some Interesting Advice.

If a Husband Worth Having He's Worth Keeping, She Says.

"Always Keep Him Guessing Just a Little," Advises Mrs. Frank Wyncoff.

"I believe a woman should make a study of her husband—always—if she expects to realize a happy and ideal marriage."

That is Mrs. Frank Wyncoff's idea of how to be happy though married. Mrs. Wyncoff, who was Miss Bess Wall before her recent marriage, is the wife of Frank Wyncoff, the well-known real estate operator.

"A wife is supposed to be a helpmate," continued Mrs. Wyncoff, with a bewitching smile, "and what is a helpmate but a person to help solve and cope with difficulties? And how can a wife help her husband if she does not understand and feel in perfect sympathy with him? If husband and wife start out by being frank and confidential with each other, there is little chance of their matrimonial craft being wrecked on the shoals of divorce.

"I believe a wife should be a companion and a chum to her husband. And she should always try to be different, and not fall into a rut. Flirt with him—don't let him think he knows you absolutely, and always keep him guesing a little. But be a chum to him, and make him know that he is the only man in the world.

"At meal time I think a wife should be bright and attractive, telling her husband cheerful, pleasant things.

Avoid petty neighborhood gossip—no woman can be a good wife and a neighborhood gossip at the same time. And a man don't want to hear gossip on coming home from his office.

"It requires art to manage a husband, but if one is worth having, he is worth keeping. So study him, and what will charm and attract him, and one's married life will be harmonious, and not a series of wrangles."

MAYOR BALKS AT DICTOGRAPH CHECK

Refuses to Sign $19 Voucher for Use of Very Machine That Trapped Him.

Mayor Woodward again is refusing to sign checks.

From the Police Department has come a voucher for $19 to pay the expense of the very dictograph that entrapped Mayor Woodward, Colonel T. B. Felder and others in the Williams House No. 2. Chairman A. R. Colcord, of the Council Police Committee, hesitated at approving this voucher and Mayor Woodward scoffs at the idea of him signing the check.

Also, he explained, he is not inclined to throw away $5 on an option on an electric feature to the new crematory. He sent the resolution providing this back to Council without acting on it. The lower branch of Council passed it up again by a vote of 15 to 2.

Although Council easily overrode Mayor Woodward the thirty-third time on the tax office merger issue the bill must be passed by the Legislature to become effective. It will have to be attached as a rider to the other charter amendments and then submitted to a vote of the people along with the other amendments.

New Trolley Cars Easy for 'Hobblers'

CHICAGO, July 22.—Chicago's 1913 model trolley cars will be built to accommodate women. Company officials announced to-day that the steps of the 200 new cars to appear this fall will be two inches nearer the pavement than the steps of the cars now in use.

The new cars are designed especially to accommodate women wearing tight skirts.

FREED, FORMER ATLANTAN DIES AS CONVICT

Career of Cardenio F. King, Promoter, Begun Here, Closes in Massachusetts Cell.

The climax of a sensational career that started in Atlanta several years ago came at the State farm at Bridgewater, Mass., Monday night, when Cardenio F. King, once a newspaper man and promoter of this city, but later a well-known figure in Boston financial circles, died a convict while Governor Foss was preparing to grant him a pardon.

King was well known in Atlanta, and many of his schemes are remembered here. He came to this city a number of years ago and engaged in newspaper work. After a short time, however, he forsook the newspaper business to embark in a number of promotion schemes, few of which turned out successfully.

Convicted in Boston.

He spent several years here, with varying financial success, then returned to North Carolina. Later he went to Boston, where he became involved in the schemes that brought about his arrest and conviction.

King was prevented from dying a free man only by a legal technicality which made it impossible for the Governor of Massachusetts to grant a pardon over the telephone. King had been suffering from an incurable disease for several months, and word that his condition was hopeless was sent to the Governor Monday morning.

Pardon Came Too Late.

Late in the afternoon Mrs. King, who was at the bedside of her husband, received the news that the Governor had decided to grant her husband a pardon.

Attorney General Swift ruled that the pardon could not be granted by telephone, and Governor Foss sent word to the State farm that the papers would be signed early Tuesday morning. Dr. Emerson, medical head of the State farm, hurried to Bridgewater with the news, but found that King was dead.

Accused Lawson at Trial.

King began his operations in Boston in 1904, shortly after leaving Atlanta. In 1908 he was forced into bankruptcy, when his customers complained that stocks they had purchased from him had never been delivered. A warrant for his arrest was issued and he surrendered in June of 1908. He was convicted and sentenced to serve from ten to fourteen years.

He began his term at Charlestown, but became ill and was removed to Bridgewater. During his trial King created a sensation by declaring that Thomas W. Lawson, the Boston capitalist, had driven him to financial ruin.

DIXIE IS DELUGED BY PROSPERITY, SAYS HARDY

Retailers' President Declares Business Is Better and Georgia Is Forging Into Lead.

"Dixie is bubbling over with prosperity."

That is the characteristic way in which J. W. S. Hardy, of Waycross, president of the Retail Merchants' Association, defined commercial conditions in the South when seen by The Georgian at the association's convention headquarters in the Hotel Ansley.

"But we can better the present condition and our merchants in all parts of Georgia have come to the realization that by individual effort and plugging in the right direction we can make Georgia the foremost State in the Union," declared Mr. Hardy.

"To this end the convention was called," said Mr. Hardy, "to meet in Atlanta while the Legislature is in session, so that merchants can be in close touch with their Representatives and exercise every influence in their power to get them to support and vote for the garnishment and fraudulent check bills.

"This is a business meeting of business men, and in no sense is it for the purpose of boosting Atlanta interests. Its only purpose is to work for the best interests of the merchants of Georgia.

"We are in an era of good business that is unrivaled. Competition is keen, but it is also true that competition is the life of trade and progress.

"From all parts of the State come encouraging assertions that this year has been a little better than last. Even a little is better than no increase at all. But I am inclined to believe that business this year is infinitely more than a little better than last in all lines."

Joe Hill Hall's Boom Stirs Macon Politics

MACON, July 22.—The announcement from Joe Hill Hall that he is a probable candidate for Mayor has injected considerable interest in the local political situation.

Alderman A. L. Dasher is already in the field on an anti-administration platform, and Bridges Smith, the City Clerk, is on the verge of announcing with a full administration ticket. There is also a possibility of the Law Enforcement League putting out candidates.

Mr. Hall supported the present administration four years ago, but in the last two or three years his feeling toward the Moore party, as it is called, has somewhat cooled.

Council Serenaded After Aiding Police

Council Monday had just increased the salaries of six roundsmen $5 by changing their names to sergeants and the leaders in the fight were leaning back in satisfaction when the air suddenly was filled with lively dance music.

Custodian Joe Shearer had a phonograph in the adjoining committee room and someone had started it. The councilmen heard all the records before they stopped the machine.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Orators within and without the General Assembly, particularly those given to loquacity and frequency of effect, sometimes being more or less hard up for something to say upon the spur of the moment—whatever that is—now and then jump a-straddle of the Grand Old Legislature's grand old neck and dance a hornpipe thereupon!

Always the liviest tune to dance by concerns the Legislature's "do-nothing" inclination, and its proneness to move at a snail's pace. Particularly is this the case when the orator immediately on the job is "a-gin the government, anyway."

An attack upon the present Legislature that it is too slow may be justified. Maybe it is slow—slower than it ought to be. Maybe legislatures ought to do everything right off the reel, and debate the matter afterward, if time holds out. Maybe a lot of things—but the only way to judge one legislature as to its efficiency is by past legislatures; and in the matter of slowness, laziness, pokeasyness, or generel cussedness, the present Legislature is entitled to be judged, perhaps.

The following things are true, as the records will show: Never before within the service of any member of the present General Assembly has a general appropriations bill been reported to the House for action so early as on the twenty-sixth day of its sitting.

And yet, this Legislature, under the direction of the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, will take up that very bill in the whole House today—the twenty-sixth day of its sitting!

The general tax act will be ready for the House before Saturday night—at least ten days earlier than any general tax act has been reported within a decade or more.

The various committees have reported more than 100 bills adversely, and easily as many more favorably. This was made possible by reason of the fact that the committees of both the House and the Senate were appointed this year two days earlier than ever before in thirty years.

In one recent Legislature, the Senate had the general tax act exactly FOUR days—this year it will have some fifteen days before adjournment. It is a well-known parliamentary fact, too, that both these bills have the right of way over all other bills at all times.

It undoubtedly is true that any Legislature would be able to travel much faster than it does were it not for the fact that local bills require almost as elaborate handling as general bills, and a reform in this matter has been urged for years. But since that reform never has been effected, it hardly seems fair to charge the present Legislature with giving to these bills more than the time absolutely necessary to their passage.

And so, while it may be true that the present Legislature is no faster than it should be, it is just as well to remember that the Legislature machine is of an old model, and therefore much out of date, and can not run any faster than it can!

When the State takes the speed limit off its Legislature, it naturally will have to provide a machine capable of making at least a little bit better time than the speed limit, or nothing will happen by way of reform.

The present Legislature may not be a wonder of wonders, but it really is moving along FASTER than usual—and that is the honest truth of it!

Mr. Payton, of Worth, the handsomest man in the last House, and one of the handsomest men in any House, looked in on the General Assembly to-day to see if it was moving along to suit him.

Mr. Payton gave it as his opinion that the present House is all right, so far as he could see, albeit he neglected to bring his eyeglasses along, and wasn't committing himself finally.

"I enjoyed my brief Legislative career," said Mr. Payton, "and made many lasting friendships while it continued. I take great interest in the work of the present House, and believe it will enact some wholesome legislation. I believe it wants to do the right thing, at least. I have met many new members, and the average seems to run rather high. In many ways, however, being a member of the Legislature is more or less a thankless job, and it often happens that the best and most sincere workers fail to get the credit they really are entitled to."

"Uncle Billy" Wilson, of Gwinette, another veteran of the last House, and the prize humorist therein, was talking it over with his former colleagues to-day.

"Uncle Billy" declines and refuses to get excited about anything, and always takes life as easy as he knows how. He does not look upon a Legislator's job as one removing him very far from the ranks of just ordinary folks, and therefore he never takes himself too seriously.

"I love all the boys, and in the main they are good boys," said "Uncle Billy." "If they make mistakes, they generally are mistakes of the head and not of the heart!"

Louis E. Wisdom, of Forsyth, who is altogether 22 years of age but not much more, notwithstanding the fact that he looks every day of 17, had trouble with a new doorkeeper in the House of Representatives the other day.

Wisdom didn't know there was a new doorkeeper on the job until, accompanied by two friends of the female persuasion, he approached the door during a session for admittance.

"Hey, you, kiddo!" stage-whispered the doorkeeper, "you can't get in here!"

"The h—um—deuce, I can't!" said Wisdom, in a loud and commanding tone of voice. "I'm a member of the House!"

"Run along, buddy, and let your pipe go out—you can't put that over me! If you had claimed to be a page, all right, I might have fallen for it, but a person must be at least twenty-one to get in here as a member!" replied the doorkeeper, as he pushed Wisdom gently back.

Then Wisdom quit arguing, and went around to another door with his lady friends, where he stood in with the doorkeeper, and everything was all right.

When the new doorkeeper found out what he had done, he was much chagrined and attempted to apologize to Wisdom, but Wisdom is a good little fellow and wouldn't stand for any apologies. He admitted that he hardly looked the part of a mature and experienced statesman, anyway, and said he could and did understand the situation.

If it just hadn't been for the ladies—!

Life's Worth Living in Georgia

If you prefer city life, there are no better cities in the world than those in Georgia. If you prefer village life, the smaller towns in Georgia offer every inducement.

If you prefer country or farm life, Georgia offers greater inducements than any State in the Union. Georgia lands work the year round, from two to five crops being gathered off of the same land each year---crops that are profitable.

Climate and Soil

The climate is such that farmers do not have to house stock during the winter, there being good grazing the entire year. For raising cattle and stock Georgia offers greater inducements than can be found elsewhere.

The soil is suited for almost anything that grows and can be utilized the entire year. The prices at which good farm land can be purchased at present in Georgia are so low that it is a matter of comment---some thinking that the land is not so good as stated. The land is good, but there are thousands of acres that are now lying idle and the good people of Georgia are anxious for good farmers to come among them. Consequently the land is cheaper here than elsewhere.

IN THE HAUNTED CASTLE

SUDDENLY BOTH HEARD THE SOUND OF MUFFLED FOOTSTEPS, AS IF SOME ONE WERE RUNNING ON HEAVY CARPET, AND THEY KNEW THERE WAS NO CARPET IN ALL THE VAST STONE HALLS. BEFORE THEY COULD ATTEMPT TO LOCATE THE SOUND THERE CAME TWO THUDS, ONE LIGHT AND ONE HEAVY, AS IF OF A BLOW AND A FALL, AND THEN A LOW HEART CHILLING MOAN THAT SEEMED TO COME NOT FROM ONE OF ALL THE HALLS, BUT ALL OF THEM. THIS WAS IMMEDIATELY ANSWERED BY A MOAN THAT CAME UNMISTAKABLY FROM RUSTY.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Moaning feebly, Rusty shook his gray head.

"I'se so scairt I don' remember nothin'."

"They're nothing but suits of armor. Stay on your pins and don't bump into me again. The next one of those rear-end collisions and I'm liable to let some moonlight into you. You've been treading on my heels every step I take and when I stop you bump into me."

"I'm powerful scairt I might lose you."

"A fine chance!" snorted his master. He swung the lantern about and peered into the corners of the apartment.

"Well, Rusty," he went on in his natural voice, "we've been through this old castle pretty thoroughly now from dungeon to tower, and not a sign of Duke or Prince or anyone else—unless they pound or carry a smoky lantern. It's a clew, Rusty; it's a clew. We'll stick right here till we find out where it leads. I'll swear the Duke never went to Madrid, but came right here from the Inn. Get away from me, I tell you!"

A Little Cheer.

He struck a match and resumed his examination of the fireplace, holding the light well inside.

"There's a fine chance for a fire. The chimney's clear. Now then, but up that little table and start a fire. You won't feel half so scared when you've got a good blaze behind you."

By virtue of his great weight Rusty reduced the old table to firewood by the simple process of sitting on it. As he was building the fire, Jarvis suggested that he would scout around a bit.

"Don't you do no scoutin' outside of this here room!" ordered the old darky, straightening up. Jarvis laughed and told him to go on with the fire. He sat down on the stone floor and began removing his shoe with many groans.

"Now, what's the matter? What's wrong with your shoe?"

"'Tain't my shoe—it's my foot," grunted Rusty. "You know, when I was holdin' the hosses an' waitin' an' waitin' fer you to come out—dem guns went off and all dem hosses jumped right on me!"

"There were only two horses, Rusty," smiled the young man.

"I was countin' dey feet," grumbled the servant, as he bent over the fire once more. He had sufficiently recovered from his fright to be disgruntled and make pertinent addenda to his master's comments on the lay of the land.

"This way leads to the main gate," remarked Jarvis, thoughtfully, peering through the other door.

"That's where dat black thing followed me," grumbled Rusty. He appeared to locate every inch of the castle through its connection with some personal disaster.

The Death Trap.

"Well, there's been a black thing following me," retorted Jarvis, "treading on my heels every step I've taken. Him! And that door goes to the armory."

"That's where I fell down dem slippery stairs."

Suddenly Jarvis stopped and stared intently into a far corner beyond the fireplace. There was a small door partly opened, as though some one had pulled it hastily behind him as he darted through.

"That's it!" he exclaimed, triumphantly, darting forward. "Where can that lead——"

His foot went down suddenly through the floor. He hurled himself forward and the floor seemed to rise and strike him violently in the chest. The next instant he rolled to one side and was on his feet.

"My God!" he muttered brokenly, the cold sweat bathing his face. "My God! That was close, sure!"

"Lordy, Marse Warren—wha' dat?" cried Rusty, starting to his feet. Warren's lantern had been dashed against the wall and he stood in the uncertain firelight.

"Get back!" he ordered sharply. Light that other lantern."

Rusty cautiously approached with the lighted lantern. Warren took it in his left hand and held out his right.

"Take a good grip, Rusty. Can you hold me?"

"Yes, sah!" Rusty crouched back and set himself.

Jarvis cautiously stepped out with his left foot. A four-foot strip of the floor sank under the light weight and the other end of the trap, the end nearest the wall, rose. If he had been walking at an ordinary gait nothing could have saved him. The speed of his rush and his remarkable agility carried forward far enough for the weight of his upper body to strike the rising end of the trap and thus shut it again.

"God! I thought so!" he murmured as he stepped back after a timid peep into the black pit below. He wiped his face and his hand trembled slightly for the first time that night. "Water and a long drop! No wonder people disappear in this castle. Good Lord! What if her brother went down there! Rusty! Whatever happens, keep clear of this. If you step on this you'll never see Kentucky again for sure!"

Rusty opened his ample lips, but before he could speak a groan came from beyond the wall they were facing. It sounded nearer and more human than ever. But it trailed off into a sound like the winds among the empty echoing towers.

"It certainly sounded like a groan," muttered Jarvis, tip-toeing cautiously around the trap toward the little door. "Shut up, Rusty!"

The faithful but terrified servitor was giving vent to sounds more dreadful than those that issued from the walls.

"Marse Warren! look out!" he begged.

The Portrait.

"Listen!" He stood for a few moments in silence, peering in at a little flight of stone steps that led up through the wall. Then he turned back to the fireplace.

"I guess it's the wind. This place is getting on our nerves."

"This warn't no wind, Marse Warren," protested Rusty, solemnly. "Ah hope to die if dat warn't a sure-nuff groan. An' ah wants to tell you somethin' else." He turned and stared accusingly at a large portrait of some grandee of Charles V.'s time which hung beside the broad steps that mounted to the corridor of the armory. "Hab you ever been in church or somewhere an' all of a sudden a feelin' come over you that there was eyes starin' at the back o' your haid? You just knowed it?—until you couldn' stan' it no longer and just had to turn 'round and see who 't was?"

"Why, yes, Rusty," agreed Jarvis wonderingly. "I've had that happen. Why?"

"That's just the way I feel now—like they was eyes lookin' at me. You see dat picture? Seems like dat feller was lookin' at me—like he'd step right out o' de frame; or dem two battleship boogies"—he pointed to the knights beside the staircase—"jump right down here!"

"It's been a good many hundred years since those boys jumped, Rusty," smiled his master. Sh-h! Listen!" There was the sound of swift footsteps again. Jarvis softly cocked his pistol. "Somebody running—coming this way."

Again it ended in the two thuds, like a blow and fall. And all was still. Jarvis swore.

"I wanna go home," moaned the darky.

His master set his teeth. "What do you know about that?" He had walked swiftly to the little door in the wall and was peering in.

"I don't know nothin' about."

"I thought so!" exclaimed Jarvis and he whistled softly, as if in utter amazement. Rusty's curiosity again overcame his terror and he drew near. Besides, it was more comfortable in the shelter of his master's .45.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Rusty, this man with the smoky lantern has been up these stairs!"

"You ain't a-goin' up?" protested the old darky.

"I am not!" was the emphatic reply, "cause the Duke or some of his men are probably at the top of the stairs with a long gun—and I'm no book hero."

"Supposin' it am the Prince," suggested Rusty, with awe.

"Well, suppose it is the Prince. He might blow my head off because he doesn't know what I came for. And if it's some one else—they'll blow my head off because they do know."

Without warning the sound of the running feet reached them again, but now it seemed to come from every quarter of the surrounding area. Jarvis, with Rusty cowering at his elbow, backed out into the center of the room, the long blue barrel of his revolver making quick play in all directions.

A Bachelor's Diary

He Is Mistaken for a Kidnapper

By MAX.

JULY 1.—Our days are so monotonous that if I were to attempt to set down in detail what happens, it would sound like a chapter from Genesis: And Arpasha begat Shelah, and Shelah begat Eber, and Eber begat Joktan, and Joktan begat Almodad, etc., etc., an endless chain of begats.

For I would relate in the same sing-song strain that a bath in the lake followed getting up and breakfast follows the bath, and a nap follows breakfast, and lunch follows the nap, and a walk in the woods follows the lunch, etc., etc., a monotony that is growing pleasing to me now that I have learned to find thrills of excitement in Mrs. Allen's daily report at breakfast that she found a rat in the trap. I do not recall a market report in six months previous that has excited me more.

Manette is growing brown and fat and sturdy, and with no one near to remind us that she has a delicate stomach, all such trouble has passed away, proving my contention that we keep our physical ailments alive by recognition of their existence. If Richards could see us eating our picnic lunches off a log in the woods, stopping occasionally to brush off an inquisitive ant or a ladybug that is lost from home, and regarding these little creatures of another world as friends, instead of germ-infested enemies, she would steal the child from me and bring suit in the court charging that I am not fit to be its guardian.

Her Future.

"I am convinced," I said gravely to Manette this afternoon, taking a chicken sandwich from her hands, for she is always the hostess at our picnics, "that a man-cared-for child is healthier than one that is cared for by a woman. She is neither nagged nor pampered so much. Now, if Richards were here she would make you throw away that sandwich because there is an ant on it—brush it off, my dear—and she would worry you because there is a streak of dirt on your cheek and a rip in your dress. I don't. I just let you forget all those things and be happy. I never want you, my baby, to be so much of a woman that you can't enjoy the Lord's big outdoors because you have left your powder rag at home. You must rise above yourself, little one."

She looked at me gravely with those big blue eyes, and then, robbing her sandwich of the meat that she might temporarily rid the brown-eyed pup of the look of longing he had fastened on her, said, "When I get big, I won't be a woman at all. I'll just be your wife."

"How I wish you were old enough," I replied fervently.

That would be a glorious thing, Diary. To take a child and train her in the ways one desired, and then marry her when she is grown.

"You will marry some nice young man," I argued, "and go away and leave your Uncle Max. It is the way of nature, and I can't keep you always."

I suppose I unconsciously sighed, for in another moment she was on my lap, rubbing a greasy sandwich down the back of my neck, while she protested between hugs and crumby kisses that she never intended to leave me, unless, and it gave me a twinge to hear her say it, "Lisbeth sent for her."

I was holding her tight with one hand, and with the other was trying to make the brown-eyed pup leap over our heads for a piece of chicken when I heard the sound of approaching horses, and a girl's merry laugh.

There was an abrupt turn in the bridal path near us, and a minute later they appeared in view, all unconscious of three interested listeners, for the pup had also paused in his play to cock wise-looking ears their way.

"I don't," the girl was saying, "believe in the kind of love you talk about. It would make of woman a sort of domestic chattel, like a cook-stove or a table. The fundamental principles of liberty—here her attention was attracted to us by the pup's shrill bark—I think that term, "fundamental principles," made him fear a procession of women were coming—and she stopped abruptly, staring at us with eyes that were first astonished, and that changed to admiration when she saw Manette.

An Admirer.

"What a beautiful child," she said, swinging lightly from her horse, and coming across the grass toward us, her horse following, with his nose pressed lovingly against her shoulder.

"Whose is she," impatiently, "and what is she doing here in these wilds alone with a man like you?"

My disguise was plainly perfect. I hadn't shaved in three weeks, and wore that morning a suit of Allen's overalls, for we contemplated a jaunt across the lake in an improvised raft.

I laughed. I do not know when I was more amused.

"That," I replied, making no attempt to rise or remove my hat, "is not the affair of every wayfarer on the road."

She colored angrily. "I intend to make it my affair. Look at her shoes with holes in the toes, and the scratches on her poor little arms and legs. You poor baby," getting down on her knees, "has that man been abusing you?"

I do not think at first Manette comprehended what the girl meant, and when it dawned upon her, her indignation was fine to see.

"I am not a poor child," she cried. "I am a rich child; everyone says so. Nurse says I'll be worth millions some day; and I don't want them. I want only my Uncle Max!"

I think there flashed across her brain a recollection of the woman who kidnaped her, for in a frenzy she threw her arms around my neck and screamed: "Make her go 'way! Make her go 'way! I'm afraid; I'm afraid!"

I was amused no longer, for the child was plainly suffering. Rising to my feet, I lifted my hat and said very coldly:

"You are trespassing on private property. Please ride on."

"We will go," she answered, angrily, "but this doesn't end here. I will find out who this Uncle Max is the child wants, and take steps to restore her to her guardian. She plainly doesn't belong to a man like you."

He Laughs.

Then, though Manette still whimpered I threw back my head and laughed till the woods rang with it. I had a vision of what my friends and associates in the city would say if they knew some pert young suffragette was preparing to have me arrested for a tramp and abductor of small children. It even flashed across my mind that if those men afflicted with the kind of softening of the brain that fits them for getting out the Sunday papers knew of it, they would give it three pages, with pictures of all of us, including the pup and the sandwich Manette still held in her grimy fingers. They might even give a picture in magnified proportions of the ant that this little baby-heiress to millions had brushed off her bread.

I laughed so long that Manette stopped whimpering, and lifting her face from my shoulder said in tones that breathed defiance, "Go 'way, please. I want my Uncle Max."

The girl turned to her escort, who had jumped from his horse when I began to laugh, and said something I did not catch. Evidently his reply restrained her from tearing the child from my arms, for with a protesting air she suffered herself to be helped to her horse, and they rode away.

The last look I had of her was of a face crimson with indignation and anger. The last she had of me was of a man doubled up with laughter.

"Manette," I said gravely, taking my share of the lemon cake, "those briar scratches you got on your arms and legs yesterday are giving your Uncle Max a bad name."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LET YOUR MOTHER DECIDE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young man with whom I have been keeping company for quite some time. We have broken off friedship for a while, and my mother strongly objects to his return. I love him. Can you tell me what is best to do? H. V. E.

Mother always knows best, particularly when the girl is very young, which I am judging is your case.

If he is worthy of you he will wait. Believe me, my dear, if he is the man set aside to be your mate he will not be easily discouraged.

THAT IS HIS PLACE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you kindly enlighten me as to whether it is proper to thank the gentlemen after returning form a show or a ball? BABY.

The good old-fashioned courtesy makes all the pleasure his. He owes you the delight he has had in your company.

LET YOUR MOTHER KNOW.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am sixteen and deeply in love with a man two years my senior. For six months he took me home from school, and after I was graduated he expressed his love for me. He has given me a ring. The only thing that makes me hesitate is that we are of a different religion. ESTELLE.

Your mother should know of your love affair at once. Not only because of the difference in religion, but because of your extreme youth.

DUTY, MY DEAR.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been engaged to a young man two years. The man is 33 years old. We love each other very much. Owing to our aged mothers, we think it's impossible to get married, as he is the only support of his mother and I am the only child left at home to take care of my mother, who is 85. Between love and duty, which will we do? M. S.

Your mothers are so old that your time of waiting will be very short. I am sure if either of you failed in your duty you would live to regret it. Unless you can marry and take your mothers with you, which is not advisable, postpone your marriage till you can enter it feeling that your happiness is not purchased with another's woe.

LET THE MATTER END.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had the pleasure of meeting a young man at a public dance. He asked to see me home and I consented. He made an appointment with me that we both kept. When he left me he failed to set a definite time for a next meeting, saying he would try to visit a place where I frequented. Now, do you think that I should have anything to do with him in the form of writing, etc., or drop him, as I am positive that he never will visit this place?

ANXIOUS.

You are very sure he will not keep any appointments he makes, so why concern yourself about him? Let the acquaintance drop before it is more serious.

No Tunes Allowed.

Not long ago a certain brass band, which shall be nameless, was engaged to play at a local village feast. On the way there the conducter suggested that they should "have a tune," but the driver of the wagonette at once objected to the project.

"No toons while I drive," he remarked.

"But, why?" persisted the conductor. "Surely the horses wouldn't run away?"

"No," said the driver, "they wouldn't."

"Then why object?"

"Simply becos the poor beggars could not run away if they tried," was the grim retort. "Their running away days is over, an' so long as I drives you ain't a-going to take no mean advantage of 'em. That's why I sez no toons."

The conductor subsided, and there were "no toons" on that journey.

The Temper Curse

By DOROTHY DIX.

THE real problems of life are not the big problems, nor are its tragedies the great sorrows of existence. The conundrums that nobody can answer are offered by just little everyday complications, and the things that break our hearts, and wreck homes, are not great sins, or afflictions, but small, miserable, sordid worries and aggravations that blot out the sunshine and take all the joy out of life for us.

As an example of this I submit the case of one of my correspondents. She is a good, conscientious woman, married to a good man, and they have had a happy home. Recently, however, the woman's mother has died and she had to offer the shelter of her home to a young sister, a beautiful and talented girl of 20, who has the temper of a virago.

The girl has nowhere else to go, for although she is amply fitted by her abilities to support herself, she can keep no situation because of her uncontrolled temper and tongue. To have to support her is a burden on her sister, but the worst feature of it is that the girl has made a peaceful and happy home such a storm center that it is wrecking it, and the woman's husband is very naturally threatening to send the sister away.

Fears the Worst.

The poor wife and sister is between two fires. She fears the worst for her sister if the girl, young and beautiful and headstrong, is deprived of all guardianship and restraint, and even of shelter, and at the same time she feels the injustice of sacrificing her husband and her home to the girl's tantrums, and she asks what she had best do under the circumstances.

I side with the husband. I think that there is nothing else in the world in which the most of us show ourselves so cowardly as in the craven, meachin' way in which we give into people with tempers and let them ride roughshod over us. Before a redheaded temper and a venomous tongue we are all arrant cowards, and that is why the possessors of tempers don't try to control them.

Among my acquaintances there is a certain child who holds the world's championship for crying. She shrieks and shrieks until she maddens everybody about her. Not long ago, catching her for once in a smiling mood, I said, "Mabel, why do you cry so much?" She looked at me in round-eyed amazement and calmly replied, "Why, if I didn't cry, how would I get anything I want?"

That is the philosophy of the individuals with high tempers. They know that the balance of us are so terrified at the thought of their raging that we will give into them without an argument; that we will walk on eggs to try to keep from ruffling their sensibilities, and that we will put up with any injustice or imposition rather than go through a scene with them.

So They Rage.

Therefore they rage. It's the easiest way to get what they want, for the person without a temper is no more fitted to cope with the individual with a temper than an infant in arms is to engage in a prize fight with Jack Johnson.

Every one of us knows some great, big, strong, splendid man who is so afraid of his wife's temper that he lies to her about having to see some man downtown if he wants to stay out a few minutes longer than the curfew she rings on him, and who doesn't dare to even treat an old woman friend with common civility if he meets her when wife is along.

All of us know women who live in such terror of their husband's temper that they tremble at the very sound of his keys in the front door, and who spend their lives in falsifying household accounts, and trying to conceal everything that happens in the household that could possibly vex their violent spouses.

Ordinarily these men and women are not cowards. They have the courage to lead a charge in battle, or face death without a tremor. They even have the moral courage to endure their hell-on-earth of being married to a high tempered wife or husband, yet before that temper they become abject worms of the dust, without a fight in them.

So far as I know, no psychologist has ever attempted to explain the fear we have of the tempers of those with whom we must live. Perhaps the struggle for existence takes so much out of us that we have no strength left with which to wage a perpetual battle at home. Perhaps we have a sense of decency that the high tempered lack which keeps us from retaliating in kind. Perhaps no real lady or gentleman is fitted to deal with the woman or man who has not the finer instincts that consideration for other people and self-mastery give.

At any rate the fact remains that we all do stand in such shaking, quivering fear of the high tempered that we encourage them in giving full reign to their evil dispositions. This makes us to a degree accessory before the crime. We need more grit and backbone in dealing with them, and it's dollars to doughnuts that if the evil tempered knew that they would be chucked out of house and home unless they controlled themselves they would curb their passions.

Temper should be made the first cause for divorce.

If every woman was perfectly aware that she would have to be gentle and amiable in order to hold down her job, and have a husband to pay her bills for her instead of having to hustle to support herself, there would be no more shrewish women, nor men who had heart failure every time they thought of what their wives would say to them when they got home.

If every man knew that he would have to answer to a divorce summons and pay alimony if he didn't make himself pleasant and agreeable at home, we should have no more domestic bullies and tyrants who talk to their wives as they would not dare speak to any husky man who could knock them down.

And if all of our sisters, and our cousins, and our aunts, and our mothers-in-law, who come and live on us, and who keep us dodging their ways, and trying to keep from precipitating an avalanche of fury and abuse on our hearthstones, were perfectly sure that they would either have to be good-natured or get out, we should see such a sweetening up of dispositions as the world has never known.

For the person with the temper is never anything but a selfish bully. We could call his, or her bluff, if we had the nerve to do it.

Just Sampling It.

For a long time the pale-faced man regarded the sandwich on the counter before him suspiciously. At length he carefully lifted off the top slice of bread, took out a piece of ham, ate it, and replaced as before. In a few seconds he again removed the top piece, extracted another piece of meat this time, and replaced the top again; and again the performance was repeated until the ham had gone. A bystander tapped him on the shoulder.

"Excuse me," said the inquisitive one, "but why don't you eat up your sandwich, instead of picking at it in that fashion?"

"Well, you see," whispered back the other, glaring around suspiciously. "I can not very well eat it. It isn't my sandwich."

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE long winter and spring months devoted by Daysey Mayme Appleton to instructing spinsters in the care of infants, to fighting for the ballot for mothers, and to relegating to his place among the worms of the dust that monster called Man, had taken the starch out of her amibition and the curl out of her hair.

She realized that though it would fall with a crash fatal to its inhabitants, she must drop the world she was carrying on her shoulders.

She must go away from kin and friends, seeking some holy spot of solitude where she might renew the fagged impulses of her soul, and decide what degree of blonde would be most becoming to her for next season.

"I am going to spend the summer at Lake Skodunk," she announced one afternoon to her friends.

"Oh," replied seventeen of them, "how nice! We will go with you!"

Then immediately they began to seek for railroad pamphlets telling about the beauties of Lake Skodunk, to write for reservations at the hotel, and to pack their trunks.

Daysey Mayme is an easy mark among her friends. All women are easy marks among their friends. Or else they have no friends! There was only one thing to do: She must not offend her friends; she must give up Lake Skodunk.

She had found at the last moment, she said when seeing them on their train, that she could not go. She might join them later.

Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea looked good on the map. "I will go to Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea," she said, wearily, to a third cousin, "where my soul may commune alone with the sad sea waves."

The third cousin looked interested. She hurried away to tell the other kin.

That evening seven cousins, five uncles, eleven aunts and nine in-laws called Daysey Mayme to the telephone. "We think," each one cried, "that it would be fine to have a family reunion at Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea, and we are all going with you."

The next day Daysey Mayme Appleton was missing, and no one could learn her whereabouts. She had pulled down the blinds to give the impression that the house was abandoned for the summer and had locked herself in.

Every morning she dressed while balancing on one foot on a piano stool in a very small closet, to simulate the experience in the dressing car on a Pullman, and every night she slept on the pantry shelf.

"In this way," she said, putting a cinder in her eye, "I experience all the joys of travel and escape my dear relatives and friends."

Do You Know---

Frau Emma Giehrl, of Munich, daughter of a former Bavarian Finance Minister, has just celebrated a remarkable jubilee. For fifty years she has not left her sick bed, and to forget her sufferings and to give pleasure to other people she has during this period written stories of mystery and educational works. Her books for women and invalids form quite a library.

At the close of the wedding breakfast a gentleman noted for his lack of tact rose, causing keen anxiety to the bridegroom, who knew his failing.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he cried, genially, "I propose the health of the bridegroom. May he see many days like this!"

MRS. MANGES ESCAPES OPERATION

How She Was Saved From Surgeon's Knife by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mogadore, Ohio.—"The first two years I was married I suffered so much from female troubles and bearing-down pains that I could not stand on my feet long enough to do my work. The doctor said I would have to undergo an operation, but my husband wanted me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound first. I took three bottles and it made me well and strong, and I avoided a dreadful operation. I now have two fine, healthy children, and I can not say too much about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. Lee Manges, R. F. D. 10, Mogadore, Ohio.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A Charming Summer Gown Fully Described by Olivette

HERE is a little summer costume that may be truly called a "confection," though we generally prefer not to use that gastronomic term in the description of even the dreams of the sartorial realm.

White or shell pink is the foundation of heavy grade china or shantung silk. There is an eight-inch slit over the left ankle, and all about the hem tiny pink wild roses are set at equal intervals. The overskirt is of wide shadow lace, falling to the knees at the front and lengthening some eight inches under the caught-in drapery at the back. A garland of the roses peeks from under this, and another surmounts the wide girdle and rises to meet the square-cut vest of filmy white chiffon. Both waist and puff sleeves are of the lace, and another garland of the dear little wild roses nestles under the sleeve at the elbow.

The hat is a great round white Neapolitan, covered with frill after frill of white accordion plaited maline, with a monster pink rose crushing in all the filminess at the left.

Dainty white slippers and silk stockings, and a filmy parasol with a wide border of chiffon printed in great pink roses, complete an absolutely ideal summer costume.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

Walker had accompanied his wife on an excursion to the realms of bargains, and in the enormous building, with its many departments, had become separated from his better half.

For an hour at least he remained lounging impatiently at the junction of many ways, where lifts, stairs and passages met, and then, tired and angry, he approached an irreproachable shopwalker.

"Sir," he said to the frock-coated and suave attendant, in tones of righteous indignation, "I've lost my wife."

Back came the reply, with stunning force: "Third floor over the bridge for the mourning department!"

It was in a country village that the swain had proposed for the hand of the village beauty, and had been accepted.

He had bought the engagement ring and was hurrying to the home of his adored one. A friend stopped him to make inquiry concerning his haste.

"Hullo, there, Bob! Is there a fire?"

"Yes," replied Bob, with what breath he had left, "my heart's on fire and I'm going now to ring the village belle."

Peter Burrowes, a well-known member of the Irish bar, was on one occasion counsel for the prosecution at an important trial for murder. Burrowes had a severe cold and opened his speech with a box of lozenges in one hand and in the other a small pistol bullet by which the man had met his death. Between the pauses of his address he kept supplying himself with a lozenge. But at last, in the very middle of a high-falutin' period, he stopped. His legal chest heaved, his eyes seemed starting from his head, and in a voice tremulous with fright he exclaimed:

"Oh-h-h! Gentlemen, gentlemen, I've swallowed the bul-let!"

"Mr. Chairman," said the orator, who had already occupied the platform for twenty minutes, amid many interjections from the audience. "Mr. Chairman, may I appeal on a point of order? There is really so much resultory conversation going on in parts of the hall that it is impossible for me to hear a word I am saying."

Voice from the back of the hall: "Don't be downhearted. You're not missing much."

A Pledge of Spinisterhood

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM a young man of nineteen," writes X. Y. Z., "and in love with a girl of seventeen who has signed an old-maid pledge, about which she seems to be serious. I have been paying her attention for the past six months, and would like to know whether to continue."

Following is the pledge of spinsterhood which this wise old dame of seventeen has signed:

"We, the undersigned, vow in all good faith that we shall, for the convenience of ourselves and the good of the world, live as Old Maids.

"We, the said undersigned, do agree that we will work honestly and faithfully until, if our lives are spared, we have accumulated a sum requisite for purchasing and maintaining a small house in the suburbs, where the said undersigned shall reside.

"We shall have freedom to visit, entertain, etc., such of our friends as we desire. There is to be no restriction, except that we shall deport ourselves in all manner, and under all circumstances, as ladies.

"It is also agreed by the undersigned that when we reach the age of 40, with consent of the majority, we shall each adopt a child from the asylum.

"If any of this charmed and secret circle should commit the grievous error of marrying, the penalty will be expulsion from the aforesaid circle, and she MUST HAND HER FIANCE THIS PLEDGE BEFORE THE COMMITTEE, TO BE TORN UP BY THE SAID FIANCE."

No Sense of Humor.

The young have no sense of humor. It requires adversity, humiliation, disappointment and grief to make one philosophical, and philosophy is the parent of wit. If the young had a sense of humor, X. Y. Z. would carry this pledge about with him that he may have something to smile about when things go wrong, and the girl who has signed it would laugh herself to death.

What does it amount to? Less than the paper it is written on!

Imagine, if you can, a lot of kittens agreeing what they will do and be when they are old tabby cats!

Conceive, if you can, of the kind of a girl who will deny herself the frivolities of youth, the pretty ribbons and feathers and clothes, the theater, the dance, the love that is looking her way, that she may some day have a home in which she will enjoy the glorious privilege of shriveling up as an old maid!

No girl makes that pledge for herself, my dear young man. She looks at the other girls, and sees that they are plain, and not so attractive as herself. "They know they will be old maids," every girl says, "and are making their plans so that it will look as if they WANTED to be. Of course, I'll sign the pledge. It may please them and won't hurt ME!"

And every girl signs, each with the secret assurance that SHE will not be an old maid.

They agree to deny themselves, that they may purchase a home. This is the story of every good woman's life: A self-denial in the hope that some day she may own a home, but it is a self-denial that is a joy because it has its origin in LOVE. A woman loves a man and sentences herself to a lifetime of self-denial when she marries. She loves her children, and thereafter knows not what the word "SELF" means.

Wait Awhile.

She pinches and skimps and scrapes and makes over with "Love's old sweet song" ringing in her ears, and knows neither discouragement nor regret. But can anyone imagine that the same noble effort and sacrifice are possible when the goal is a home where a lot of spinsters may abide in about as much peace as so many tabby cats?

Believe me, my dear young man, your sweetheart would work harder to stay out of such a place than to enter it. Let me assure you that she would know neither peace of mind nor rest if she thought for a moment that a home with no one in it but WOMEN was to be her refuge.

If she thinks so now, it is because she is 17. When she is 27, she will be in a panic because her steps seem to be turning that way.

Encourage your sweetheart. Let her know that when she is safely within the walls of this retreat, you will drive by with your wife some day and perhaps name one of your babies for her.

It will prove a sure cure.

-:- The Amulets -:-

A Tragic Short Story Complete.

THE cattle dealer opened the door of the taproom of the roadside inn and ordered a liter of cider.

"You must be thirsty, Brunier, or you would not order a whole liter," said the innkeeper.

"You bet I am, but I can afford a thirst on a day like this, when I have four thousand francs in my pocket. Four nice, crisp brown bills, and almost half of it is clear profit."

"But are you not afraid to walk home alone with that much money in your pocket?"

"Afraid! With fists and arms like mine! Not a bit of it, and besides I wear two amulets guaranteed to guard you against any danger."

He opened his shirt and showed two greenish-looking copper medals hanging on a string on his broad breast.

"Look at these," he said, "this one is the holy Benoit's, the patron of all travelers, and the other St. Antoine's, the protector of the poor. These saints have never failed, and I feel as safe as if I were already at home, though it will be a dark night to-night."

The innkeeper laughed.

"Is it really possible," he asked, "that a sensible fellow like you, who gets the best of everybody in any deal, can really believe in two old copper medals?"

"Well, I do believe in them," said Brunier, "You have to believe in something; you surely do yourself."

"I don't believe in anything," said the innkeeper, and offered his customer a drink before he started.

He Starts.

"Well, I don't mind; I still feel a little dusty in my throat."

Half an hour later when the sun had set and darkness was setting in, Brunier started homeward. He carried his hat in his hand and the evening wind played with his heavy dark curls, cooling his hot head. The innkeeper stood looking after him with a frown on his face and his lips pressed tightly together. Then he called his sons.

"Did you see that big fellow?" he asked. "That is Brunier, the cattle dealer, going home from market."

The two boys looked like retrievers scenting the game.

"You understand what I mean," said the father. "And if you two are not fools you will cut across the fields to the crossroads near the forester's house. You will get there at least a half hour ahead of Brunier. In two hours you ought to be back here with 4,000 francs in your pockets."

The brothers did not waste any time. The younger armed himself with a heavy crowbar and the older with a hunting knife.

"Do you think we ought to kill him?" asked the younger.

The innkeeper was silent for a moment, then he nodded.

* * *

How long Brunier had been lying there he did not know. He felt sore all over and felt the blood trickling from his forehead. His coat was torn, the pockets rifled, his heart was beating hard against his ribs, and his arms were so stiff that he could scarcely move them.

After many attempts he succeeded in getting on his feet, and when he had bathed his face in a spring close by he felt much better and began to think of what he ought to do. He was not strong enough to reach home so he decided to return to the inn.

Blood was still flowing from the gaping wound, but he walked ahead without minding. It was quite clear to him who had played the dirty trick on him. It must be some cattle driver or woodchopper. But, thank God, he was still alive and had his money yet. He pulled forth his amulets and kissed them fervently, thanking the saints who had so wonderfully preserved his life.

* * *

"So you expect me to believe you did not find any money, you scoundrels," roared the innkeeper to his sons.

"No. And still we searched everywhere, in the pockets, coat, vest, shirt and stockings."

"Then you are bigger fools than I thought you were," the father shouted.

Suddenly there was a knock at the window. The door was opened, and a ghastly silence followed the loud quarrel when the bloodstained Brunier entered. The two sons turned pale as ghosts and beads of cold perspiration stood on their foreheads. The innkeeper stood motionless in the middle of the floor staring at his guest.

Brunier dropped into a chair and gased: "Give me a glass of brandy, and I shall be all right. Somebody tried to kill me attacking me from behind, but they did not succeed. I am still alive and have my money yet. Unfortunately I did not get a chance to see who they were."

The three men breathed easier. He had not recognized them, so the matter was not serious.

"Well," said Brunier to the inn keeper, "perhaps you will believe in my amulets now."

The Hiding Place.

He did not notice the innkeeper's vicious scowl.

"But where did you hide your money, Brunier?" he asked in a trembling voice.

"Inside the lining of my hat."

Brunier then asked for a room and said he wanted to sleep.

"I'll give you my own bed," said the innkeeper, and conducted him to a room above the taproom. Brunier undressed and went to bed, but could not sleep. His wound was very painful, so he decided to go down and get some oil for a dressing. In the darkness he felt his way and was about to open the door of the taproom when he heard somebody mention his name. He listened, and what he heard made him shiver. He had to sit down on the step not to fall. They were planning to kill him yet.

He sneaked back to his room. Flight was out of the question, but he would sell his life dearly. He had no weapon, not even his cane, which he had left below, but in a cupboard he found a half-filled siphon of seltzer, a dreadful weapon in the hand of a determined man.

He posted himself behind the door and waited. A few moments later he heard sneaking steps on the creaking stairs. It was the innkeeper. He stopped a moment on the top step and then opened the door. As he was approaching the bed the siphon came down on his head and he dropped without a sound.

"You have got what you deserved," said Brunier. Then he picked up his hat and ran toward the village, while the two sons were busy digging a grave for his body in the garden.

It was almost daylight when he reached the village and told what had happened. An hour later the house was surrounded by gendarmes. They found the two boys still digging in the garden.

In the room above the innkeeper was found. He confessed his crime before he died.

Some time later Brunier had two gold cases made for the amulets which had twice saved his life.

Professional Rivalry.

Everything in the street was dim and quiet, for the thoroughfare was in a highly respectable neighborhood, and the hour was 2 a. m. In fact, save for a stray, wandering cat, and a constable, now rounding a corner in the far distance, there were no signs of life or animation anywhere.

William Sikes stepped out from the shadow of a friedly tree, glanced furtively around him, and then assisted Tom Crooke, his bosom friend and partner, to alight from the drawing room window of No. 63.

"Well, old pal, what luck?" he whispered.

"No luck at all," growled Tom. "The bloke what likes there is a lawyer."

William looked apprehensive.

"Then 'ow much 'ave you lost?" he asked.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

They Would Get Along Somehow

WHEN the boss sent for Jennie to come to his private office he told her the old story about it being the dull season and that he would have to let her go at the end of the week, and when she reminded him that he had always kept her before during the dull season he told her that he had noticed a decided lack of interest in her work compared to the way she used to work, and, besides, that he had heard stories about her being out with men at night, etc.

So Jennie was sure that her former girl friend had kept her word about getting even with Jennie for—as she thought—stealing her fellow away from her.

Coming out of the office, she wanted to cry, but held in so as not to give the girl the satisfaction of seeing her. As it was, she thought she noticed a flicker of a satisfied smile on the girl's face.

What now of paying the weekly instalments on her clothes—and they were the only ones she had—and what of the money that was so badly needed at home? When Jennie reached home, her friend, the boarding house keeper, was surprised to see her so early, and asked her what was the matter, and when Jennie told she had been "let out" at the office, the good woman, instead of deriding Jennie for losing her position, tried to sympathize with her and took her head on her breast, saying they would get along SOMEHOW until Jennie could get another job. But in her heart she didn't see how they could.

Jennie went up to her room and, flinging herself on the bed, had a good cry. When she quieted down and thought it all over she remembered the fellow she had been out with and his offer to furnish up a flat for her. She shrank at the mere thought of it, but wondered if it wouldn't be the EASIEST WAY at that.

.:. The Head Waitress .:.

By HANK.

"WHAT'S this I hear about you and Marie having a date?" asked the Head Waitress of the Steady Customer in the Cafe L'Enfant.

"Nothing to it," he replied. "Where did you get it?"

"From Mr. Flakes, the manager," said the Head Waitress, "and he told me he had it straight, too. He said that Marie asked for an hour off so she could get all dolled up to go out with you. Of course, it ain't none of my business, and——"

"Cut it out," interrupted the Steady Customer. "Mr. Flakes is kidding you, or Marie is kidding him. Not that I wouldn't dearly love to take both you and Marie out any time, but I'm getting too old to go gallivanting around with two such beauteous dames."

"I guess Marie was kidding," said the Head Waitress. "All them cashiers is great kidders, especially the blondes. You see, every guy that goes up to the desk hands out something foolish while he's paying his check, and Marie has to take their money with one hand and wave to them with the other or they'd be broken-hearted. I don't see much nourishment in it myself, but all those poor boobs act as if one smile from the cashier had taken ten years off their age, and they go out simpering like a lot of love-sick swines."

"Swains, I suppose you mean," corrected the Steady Customer.

"Have it your own way," said the Head Waitress, "you literary guys is great sticklers for correct pronouncements, ain't you? Well, I'm glad to hear you ain't fallen for no blonde because I've taken an interest in you and I'd hate to see you going nutty over a pair of big eyes and a golden dome. Not that Marie ain't a nice girl, and one of the nicest I ever seen, but she shouldn't be wasting her time with any of you newspaper guys."

"What's the matter with us?" asked the Steady Customer. "I'm surprised to hear you talk that way, Louise."

"Are you?" she said. "Well, long ago in the dim, distant past, I showered my young and innocent affections on one of you literary blokes, and for a time I was in the seventh heaven of happiness. He used to write me poems, too, real love ones. I remember one that went something like this:

"Louise, Louise, you little tease,
I'm really mad about you;
You say you truly love me, dear,
I'd hate to ever doubt you;
Some day, we'll married be, and then
Our lives we'll link together
And travel down the broad highway
No matter what the weather."

"Pretty good," said the Steady Customer.

"Oh, yes, I raved about it," said the Head Waitress, "until I found out that he was traveling down the 'broad highway' with about nine others."

"But that's no reason why you should be down on all literary lights," exclaimed the Steady Customer.

"A child once stung, never goes back to the beehive, as Kipling says," replied Louise, "and believe me, Kipling was right."

Nil Desperandum.

Percy Parkington arose and brushed the dust from his knees. Then, drawing himself up to his full height, he gazed resentfully upon the farm of Miss Muriel Muggins, who nonchalantly fanned herself the while.

"Very well, Miss Muggins," came in bitter tones from Percy. "Oh, very well! You have spurned me, it is true! Indeed, you have spurned me twice! But, though despair eats my heart, I shall not die! I mean to go into the busy world. I will fight! I will win! My name shall become known and my riches shall become envied—"

"Pardon me for interrupting you, Mr. Parkington," interjected Miss Muggins, "but when you have accomplished all that you may try me again."

Couldn't Understand It.

Local "Terrier:" "Well, uncle, how do I look as a soldier?"

Farmer Giles: "Foine, my boy! But blessed if Oi can think 'ow yer git them twisted trousers on!"

PITCHER PRICE SENT HOME BY MANAGER SMITH

By Joe Agler.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 22.—Two things happened to Gilbert Price yesterday in this town. The Turtles got to him in the second inning of the ballgame and hammered him fiercely to the bench. Then after the game, Manager Smith told the pitcher to pack his duds and get aboard a train for Atlanta.

The reason for the move is not known, but it must be a pretty sound one, or Billy Smith never would have dispensed with the services of one of his regular slabmen with two tough series left to play after the Crackers are done with the Turtles.

* * *

JOE CONZELMAN went in after the game was hopelessly lost, as it turned out, and showed his usual class against the Turtles, stopping the scoring handily. He held them so close that had it not been for the air-tight work of Rube Kissinger, who was having one of his good days, the Smithies might have overcome the handicap and won out even at that stage.

But Kissinger was mighty good. At that, the boys were hitting the ball right on the nose, only luck would direct it straight at some Memphis fielder. That is all in the breaks, however, and some time, when the breaks are our way, the other pitcher is going to pay for all of it.

The Turtles are going fine just now and are playing the kind of scrappy baseball that earns a fair share of the breaks.

* * *

WALLY SMITH still is in the grasp of one of the worst hitting slumps he ever has had, and we are missing his long wallops greatly. When he starts hitting again—and he is bound to do that—he is going to help the club out a lot.

Dent and Dunn are scheduled to work in the game to-day.

BAN WILL NOT RECOGNIZE COMPLAINT OF F. CHANCE

CHICAGO, July 22.—No official action will be taken by the American League in connection with Frank Chance's complaint charging the Chicago Americans with misrepresenting the physical condition of Zeider and the playing ability of Borton, for whom Chance traded Hal Chase, Ban Johnson so announced yesterday.

"It will be impossible to take action compensating New York for alleged loss," said Johnson, "for the reason that Chance wanted Zeider more than any other man. He had his choice of at least six Chicago players and picked Zeider and Borton."

SAM HARRIS GETTING AUTOCRATIC WITH COULON AGAIN

LOS ANGELES, July 22.—Sam Harris, manager of "Kid" Williams, the Baltimore bantam, to-day claimed the bantamweight championship of the world again and announced that Williams would defend his title at least twice a year in 20-round bouts.

"We are tired of waiting for Coulon," said Harris. "I don't believe he ever had any intention of fighting Williams, as he knew he couldn't last ten rounds if he did. We don't propose to allow him to stall around any longer."

MADE 103 CONSECUTIVE BULL'S-EYE AT 300 YARDS

WAKEFIELD, MASS., July 22.—All records for consecutive bull's-eyes at 800 yards were broken here in the ninth annual meeting of the New England Military Riflemen's Association when Captain Stuart W. Wise, of the Bay State team, made 103 perfect shots.

The previous record for consecutive bull's-eyes at 800 yards was made by J. W. Hessian, of New York, at Seagirt last year.

BUT DOES HANS WAGNER NEED ANY MORE IMMORTALIZING

PITTSBURG, July 22.—Director Holland, of the Carnegie Museum, would immortalize Honus Wagner, the veteran shortstop of the Pittsburg Pirates. According to an announcement made to-day by the director, he intends to place the "Flying Dutchman's" uniform and famous palmless glove among the relics of distinguished men when the veteran retires.

THE INTERSTATE LEAGUE GOES TO SMASH AGAIN

ERIE, PA., July 22.—The reorganized Interstate League season came to an unexpected ending here, with the Erie team a second pennant-winner, finishing the abbreviated schedule with a percentage of 1.000. The four-club circuit, composed of Youngstown, Akron, Wheeling and Erie, proved a losing proposition.

Atlanta Wins Leifield Argument

Herrmann and Murphy Disagree

By O. B. Keeler.

COMES now the august Augustus Herrmann, of the Supreme Court of baseball, and hands down an opinion in the Leifield controversy decidedly favorable to our Major Frank E. Callaway. By the same token, the same opinion may be construed as somewhat of a reproof to our amiable little friend C. Webb Murphy, of the Cubs.

The idea is dual. It is granted (1) that if Mr. Lefty Leifield doesn't choose to play ball for Atlanta, Atlanta doesn't have to argue the question with Mr. Leifield, and (2) that if Mr. Leifield isn't going to play ball for Atlanta, Atlanta doesn't have to pay Mr. Murphy for Mr. Leifield.

Which does look fair enough.

And, anyway, that's the view the Hon. Herrmann takes of the case in a letter to Mr. Murphy, a copy of which was received by Major Callaway yesterday.

Incidentally, the Hon. Herrmann's opinion is of considerable weight in balancing the little problems of baseball.

* * *

HERE is a chronological sketch of the incidents:

Rather less than two weeks ago, Mr. Murphy and Major Callaway were dickering about Leifield, who (Mr. Murphy fancied) would be just the cog to round out a pennant racing machine in this town.

Mr. Murphy also fancied Mr. Leifield's value as a cog would be about $3,500.

Major Callaway revised that estimate downward somewhat and made the Cub owner an offer, conditional upon Leifield's willingness to play with Atlanta at a stipulated salary.

There was the rub.

Mr. Murphy accepted the offer, "with all conditions," and wired that he had ordered Leifield to report. Then he added a message that an explanatory letter was on the way.

The explanatory letter explained that Mr. Leifield was balking; had balked, in fact, all the way to St. Louis, where he lived and where he proposed to remain.

In fine, it appeared that if Mr. Leifield was to play in the Southern League, that institution would have to be moved over to St. Louis.

Mr. Murphy suggested that Major Callaway write to the Missouri Balkan and try to reason with him.

Major Callaway suggested that he had other things to do.

Further, he suggested that the deal was entirely off.

That suggestion extracted from Mr. Murphy a flat-footed declaration that the deal couldn't be called off in that manner. He countered with a promise to tell the National Commission on Major Callaway.

The Major promptly replied that the deal already was off, and therefore not subject to further calling. If Mr. Murphy cared to consult the commission, he had Major Callaway's full permission—even his earnest request—to do so.

It seems Mr. Murphy did.

And it also seems (from the Hon. Herrmann's letter) that he did not get very far with it.

* * *

THAT "optional agreement" thing is all very fine, in its way. But it does have a certain effect on the lucrative sales Southern League clubs have been accustomed to count on for star players developed during the season.

There is the crack battery of Prough and Mayer, of the Barons. The pitcher is slated for sale, and should yield a good price. But the receiving end was placed on an optional agreement by the White Sox, and it is pretty well assured that Callahan will yank him in when the yanking season opens.

Of the Crackers, Conzelman and Price are the property of Pittsburg and Washington, respectively, and it looks as if Price will be reclaimed by Griffith.

In the matter of outright sales, the Lookouts probably will get the big slice of the circuit in disposing of Coveleskie and Street.

* * *

DON'T blame Cholly Frank for gravitating swiftly toward cynicism, pessimism, fatalism, and any other isms that convey the idea of bursting bubbles and lost illusions.

Here's just a sample of the wretched Dutchman's luck this year.

Cholly swapped Snedecor to Montgomery for Kutina and Bagby, and when he made the Billiken management go through with the deal, it was generally regarded as a regular David Harum coup.

But Kutina refused to report, and now Bagby is out of the game with a broken wrist, while Snedecor is playing great ball for the Billies.

Don't blame Cholly, then.

EIGHTEEN-YEAR-OLD BOY BEATS GUSTAV TOUCHARD

BOSTON, July 22.—In the second round of the Longwood Cricket Club's all-comers tournament for the Longwood cup for lawn tennis singles, W. M. Johnson, the 18-year-old San Franciscan, yesterday eliminated Gustave F. Touchard, the speedy New Yorker, by sensational playing. The score was 2-5, 11-9, 6-4.

Another surprise came in the defeat of Robert Leroy, of New York, by Dean Mathey, the intercollegiate champion, in straight sets.

When the day ended the field of 77 players had been reduced to 30.

CRACKED THUMB WILL KEEP WOOD OUT SEVERAL WEEKS

BOSTON, July 22.—Joe Wood, star pitcher of the Boston Americans, will be out of the game for several weeks. Examination of his injured right thumb under the X-ray to-day showed that there was a crack in the end of the big bone, and the indications are now that a piece of the bone has been chipped off.

Unusual care is being taken in the treatment of the injury to guard against stiffness in the joint, which would put an end to Wood's career.

WOOD, HUNTER AND PHELPS LOW IN WESTERN TOURNEY

FLOSSMOOR CLUB, CHICAGO, July 22.—Three local players tied at 18 holes in the eliminating round of the fourteenth annual championship of the Western Golf Association this morning.

Warren K. Wood, of Homewood; Paul Hunter, of Midlothian, and Mason Phelps, another Midlothian player, were the players who led the 134 starters this morning. Warren Wood, as well as Paul Hunter, made the first nine in 37 and the last nine in 40, while Phelps negotiated the first nine holes in 39 strokes and the last nine in 38.

Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, the present title holder, had the next best score, with a 78. He took 40 strokes for the first nine holes and 38 for the last half.

OMAHA RELEASES ARBOGAST.

OMAHA, NEBR., July 22.—President W. R. Rourke, of the Omaha Western League club, has announced the release of Charles Arbogast, who has been manager of the Omaha team for the last two seasons. Rourke will manage the team himself. Arbogast goes to the Los Angeles team of the Pacific Coast League.

Refusal to obey orders is given as the reason why Roger Bresnahan, erstwhile Giant backstop and Cardinal manager, has been benched by Manager Evers, of the Cubs.

* * *

Rumor has it that Ty Cobb wants to shake the dust of Detroit, but it is not probable that the Tigers will let the Georgia peach get away.

* * *

Coming from behind, the Superbas won the final game from the Pirates. Twenty-nine players took part in the farce.

* * *

Opportune hitting proved too much for the Braves and the Cubs romped home easy winners.

* * *

Few Yankees got on bases in Jungletown and the Tigers won the second game of the series.

* * *

Although wild, Blanding kept the Red Sox hits well scattered, and the Naps drove Moseley from the mound early in the game, the Naps winning easily.

* * *

The Senators again defeated the White Sox. Walter Johnson pitched. That's the reason.

* * *

One busy inning, the sixth, when the Athletics hammered in seven runs, proved the undoing of the Browns.

* * *

Ban Johnson makes a little statement, "in case the Athletics and the Giants win the pennants in their respective leagues." Why "in case?"

* * *

Also, Bancroft asserts that the championship play in the Big Series this fall will be keener than ever. It always is.

* * *

And (added to that) there comes an application for season tickets to the big show from five Americans now living in Chile, who plan to spend their vacation as spectators at the world's series, provided they are assured of seats.

* * *

There appears to be some little doubt in Chattanooga as to whether the Lookouts are merely sleeping, or really have passed on. Our guess is that Kid Elberfield still is kicking at any rate.

* * *

It remained for Charley Schmidt to revive the ancient and at one time highly honorable custom of inspiring a hand-out of hard and soft money by taging the pil at an oportune juncture. There happened to be two on bases in the second game of the Birmingham-Mobile double-header Saturday, and Gregory made the mistake of walking Robertson to get at Charles. Result: four runs.

* * *

Somebody is compiling a blue book on temperamental ball players who distress their respective managers by outbursts of operatic and erratic behavior. Here are some nominees: Rube Marquard and Art Shafer of the Giants; Earl More and Sherwood Magee, of the Phillies, and T. R. Cobb, who alone is sufficient for H. Jennings to handle. But, say—what about peaceful Heinie Zimmerman?

* * *

Jawn M. McGraw—the "M" standing for Manager and not Muggsy, as you doubtless were figuring—has entered upon his twelfth consecutive year as boss of the New York Giants. He has won four penants in that period, standing in a tie with Mack, Chance and Clarke in that respect. Muggsy bids fair to top the Peerless Leader and the Pirates' leader by copping a fifth flag this season. But Mr. McGillicuddy will keep step. Oh, yes!

TORONTO GETS ALMEIDA; NASHVILLE WANTED HIM

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—Almeida, the Cuban player who has been with the Cincinnati National League club for some time, has been released to the Toronto team of the International League.

Nashville, of the Southern League, was also after the Cuban.

"THERE ISN'T ANYTHING I can do about it," says Ban Johnson, regarding the Stahl matter, as he speeds across Ohio. Which shows the difference between a man's conversation on Broadway at night and in the dairy farm country the next morning.

* * *

THE FURTHER WE GO INTO it the more the "ethics" of organized baseball resemble the code of the police graft ring. Mr. Comiskey says of the recent goldbricking of the New York club in the Chase deal that "they ought to take their medicine gracefully." In other words, no matter what is handed to you, don't squeal, for the good of the game.

JOE RIVERS SAYS THAT HE is going to post $5,000 as a forfeit and offer a side bet for a return match with Champion Ritchie, but will stipulate that the weight must be 133 pounds at the ringside. This is an excellent way of showing that he is not afraid of Ritchie and at the same time cutting off any possibility of a fight with him.

News of the Ring Game

Spider Britt, the local bantamweight, is ready to don the padded mitts again. Britt is particularly anxious to get on with either Charlie Lee or Kid Young. Spider says he never felt better in his life than he does at the present time and is positive he can defeat either of the above mentioned boys.

Eddie Hanlon, who recently defeated Terry Nelson, is anxious to get on with some other boy of his weight. A match between Hanlon and Mike Saul ought to prove a corker.

Charlie White, pound for pound the greatest little battler in this country, will probably be seen in action on the coast some time this fall. Tom McCarey has been thinking of putting White on with the winner of the Wolgast-Dundee bout, scheduled to take place at Los Angeles next month.

Tommy Buck, of Philadelphia, and Patsy Kline, the Newark featherweight, have been matched to box ten rounds at New York on August 1. They have agreed to weigh 122 pounds at 3 o'clock.

* * *

Cal Delaney, sparring partner of Johnny Kilbane, has signed articles to box Kid Julian in a twelve-round go next Saturday night. Both boys are featherweights.

* * *

Bob McAllister has finally decided to be a crack at the twenty-round game. The Western middleweight has agreed to take on Ed Petroskey before Jim Coffroth's club at Frisco some time next month.

* * *

Jake Abel has departed for his home in Chattanooga. Before he left Jake stated that Charlie White was without a doubt the heaviest puncher he has ever met. Yes, several other boys hold the same opinion as Abel. For reference apply to Joe Thomas.

* * *

Although Charlie Lee was given the verdict over Kid Young on a foul last week, there are many of the opinion that Young can take the measure of the tall featherweight if he would only get into condition. Young has promised to train as he never has before if given another chance at his conqueror.

* * *

Danny Morgan, the talkative manager, is still keeping his press agent busy trying to force Willie Ritchie into a match. Britton is one boxer who is entitled to a chance at the title.

* * *

Carl Morris, the Sapulpa heavyweight, is to battle Al Benedict, of Hoboken, N. J., in a 15-round encounter at Joplin, Mo., Friday night.

Lest we forget, Meyer Pries wishes us to announce that he is still alive. Meyer is yearning for a return engagement with Spider Britt. Pries is certainly one game youngster.

"ZEIDER SICK, IS BETTER THAN CHASE."—CHANCE

CLEVELAND, July 22.—Frank Chance, manager of the Yankees, in speaking of the Zeider-Chase deal, slips the following knock to Chase.

"We're perfectly satisfied with this deal. I wouldn't give Zeider when right for three Chases. I think he's a better man than Chase at his best. And Zeider in a hospital is of more value to the New York club than Hal Chase would be to-day.

"There's no chance in the world for us to ask that the trade by which we gave Chase for Zeider and Borton be canceled. We don't want the deal canceled, but we are asking that the Chicago club be required to pay the salary of Zeider and to pay his doctor's bills until such time as he is able to play."

Big Marathon Grind On To-night

Ten Riders in Sensational Race

MOTORCYCLE fans in Atlanta are to be given a real treat at the Motordrome to-night. The best card of the season is to be put on, and some thrilling races are bound to be the result.

The big Marathon race is easily the feature. The sight of ten riders, all being on the track at the same time, each trying his hardest to get into the lead, should be a scene well worth watching. The riders are to cover 26 miles 385 yards.

As the leaders in a long race have a great advantage, there is bound to be a hot scramble throughout the long grind. The riders out in front invariably cover the track so as to keep their opponents from getting ahead. Mixups of some sort are usually the result, and if some spills are not recorded it will surely be a big surprise.

Tex Richards and Jock McNeil, the favorites, have their machines in the best of shape, and are out to set a record. They have been practicing daily, and wise ones are looking for these two to fight it out to a finish. However, both these speed demons may be beaten out by a dark horse. Morty Graves has his machine in good working order, and it would not surprise many to see him win out.

Big Cash Prize to Winner.

A cash prize of $500 is to go to the winner. This is enough to make any of them take some daring chances to cop the big event. Each rider will have a pit in front of the paddock, where he can change a tire or wheel in a very few minutes and continue on his journey.

The Motordrome Sweepstakes should also afford some excellent racing. The riders will be trying out their machines for the big event, and some fast racing should be witnessed.

New Sweaters for Riders.

To-night each rider will have a new sweater, a different colored one for each. This is after the plan used on the metropolitan racing tracks, so that each mount and his jockey is distinguishable no matter how far away from the spectators.

Following are the colors that will be worn by the motor demons to-night:

No. 1, Morty Graves, black; No. 2, Harry Schwartz, green; No. 3, Billy Shields, orange; No. 4, George Lockner, black with red stripes; No. 5, Tex Richards, bright red; No. 6, Freddie Luther, maroon; No. 7, George Renel, red with white stripe; No. 8, Jock McNeil, white; No. 9, Henry Lewis, light blue; No. 10, Harry Glenn, dark red.

Here is the complete program:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves; time, 38 4-5 seconds.

MOTORDROME SWEEPSTAKES.

One mile to qualify for two-mile final. Two to qualify in each heat, and three in fastest heat.

First Heat—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Second Heat—No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Harry Glenn vs. Harry Schwartz (Special match race). Two miles, best two out of three heats.

Final heat of Motordrome Sweepstakes—Two miles.

Second heat of special match race—Glenn vs. Schwartz.

Third heat of special match race, if necessary.

Big Marathon Race—26 miles 385 yards. Ten riders to compete. Each rider will have to ride 105 times around the track.

ENTRIES AT TERRE HAUTE.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 22.—Harness racing began here to-day with a field of good horses. The number of entries is unexpectedly large. In a number of events the purses are $1,000. Many of the 3-year-olds entered in this year's entries will make their first start at this meeting.

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR
If there were no Fords, automobiling would be like yachting---the sport of rich men. But by centering his effort upon the production of one good car, Henry Ford has brought the price down within reason---and the easy reach of the many.
Here's the test: 300,000 Fords now in service. Runabout $525; Touring Car $600; Town Car $800—f. o. b. Detroit, with all equipment. Get catalogue and all particulars from Ford Motor Company, 311 Peachtree St., Atlanta.

LOOKOUTS NEED GOOD HITTER TO PULL THROUGH

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 22. That the immediate addition of material strength is absolutely necessary not only to keep the Lookouts in the race, but moreover to make them a first-division club, is being gradually conceded locally.

The showing of the Lookouts in the week just passed, and, in fact, during the long home stay which closed with the Gulls, gave conclusive proof that the club does not possess the strength and stamina not only to rise in the percentage ladder, but even to hold its present position.

Realizing the general weakness of the club for the final spurt, Elberfeld has secured Dee Walsh from the St. Louis Browns, but the acquisition of the league's fielding sensation is not going to help the club to any material extent; as offensive strength is what is needed. Walsh can not be expected to hit over .250, although he will surpass Williams in fielding.

Alberfeld and Elston, who represent about 50 per cent of the club's offensive strength, can not be depended upon to any degree of certainty, because of their injuries. Elston has a bad leg, which has worried him for three seasons, and the member forces him to lay out so long that his batting eye is continually off form. The beaning of Elberfeld will undoubtedly affect him to some extent throughout the entire season.

The Lookouts must get another good hitter to pull through.

It is being gradually conceded here that Atlanta and Birmingham, although there is considerable prejudice against both clubs, are the two teams which are to be the ultimate grapplers for the rag. They seem to possess the greatest strength, and are not being forced to spurt now as are Montgomery and Mobile.

LANGFORD-MILLER GO OFF; NEGRO MAY BE BARRED

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Sam Langford has been stamped an undesirable in this city, so far as ring engagements are concerned. The board of supervisors have notified Promoter J. T. Mitchell, of the National A. C., who planned to stage a four-round bout between Charlie Miller and Langford here Friday, that the colored heavyweight would not be permitted to enter the ring.

This action was taken under a ruling of the Police Commission, in charge of boxing contests, that fighters whose names appear on the professional "list" can not take part in the "amateur" four-round bouts. Langford's name appears on the Police Commission's "professional list." It was not made clear whether Sam might box in longer contests, though it is taken he has been barred from all bouts.

YALE TEAM TO GET BUSY.

SIASCONSETT, MASS. July 22.—Arrangements have been completed by Cautain Ketcham, of the Yale football team for the early training of the linemen. Twenty-five men will begin preliminary practice at the Siasconsett Cottage Club here about September 1.

Look Out For Poison Ivy

Strolling through the woods or clearing brush, picnickers, hunters, fishermen—look out for poison ivy. And in the meantime keep your blood pure by using S. S. S. If your skin is rough with eczema, pimples or any other eruption, S. S. S. stimulates the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to dry up and heal all sore spots.

S. S. S. will do this positively. It dominates the principle of osmosis, stimulates the cells of the skin to select their own nutriment from the blood, made pure and healing by the wonderful medicinal ingredients of this famous blood purifier. It is a safe remedy, as it contains no minerals, and yet its action is a marvel.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting any one to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept. The Swift Specific Company, 186 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

J. M'ALEER TELLS HOW JAKE STAHL QUIT BOSTONS

CLEVELAND, July 22.—James McAleer, president of the Boston Americans, refused to discuss the statement of Ban Johnson given out in New York, in which the league leader severely criticised Jimmy for his action in releasing Jake Stahl.

"There is nothing to say on the Stahl matter," said McAleer.

"The change in the club was precipitated by Stahl himself.

"'Are you figuring on making a change in the managership of the team,' he asked me in Chicago.

"'Not this season,' I replied.

"'At the end of the year?' he asked.

"'It is possible there may be a change then,' I replied.

"'Well, in that case,' said Stahl, 'I might as well get through now.'

"'Do you mean that you wish to resign?' I asked.

"'Pay me to the end of the season and I'm through,' was the answer.

"So I gave him the money he would have drawn had he gone all the way through to his release."

McAleer stated that Carrigan will continue to manage the Red Sox the remainder of this season.

"Whether or not he will manage the team in 1914 depends entirely upon himself," said the club president. McAleer said there was absolutely no truth in the story that Fielder Jones had been offered the management of the club.

SEC. FARRELL ISSUES NEW RULING ON OPTIONAL MEN

AUBURN, N. Y., July 22.—Chairman Farrell, of the National Board of Arbitration governing minor baseball, to-day gave out the following orders relative to the sale and trading of players among major and minor leagues:

"All optional agreements must be exercised on or before August 15.

"The sale or the release of players within twenty days of the commencement of the major league drafting period or within twenty days of the close of the season of the club disposing of the player is prohibited.

"The sale of a player's release by one national association to another shall be null and void against the selection by draft of the player by a major league club from the selling club, unless he be in the actual service of the purchasing club for twenty days before the opening of the drafting season for major league clubs."

The double play is one of the most thrilling features of baseball, but there is nothing particularly thrilling about the double cross.

It is true that there is no gambling at Mineral Springs. Neither is he a gambler who plies his trade with three shells and an elusive little pea.

THE SILHOUETTE.

Little Miss Muffet
Sat on a tuffet;
She was afraid to arise.
"The skirt that I wear
Is as flimsy as air,
And the men have such curious eyes!"

J. STAHL.

Lives of managers remind us
We are heroes while we shine,
But departing, feel behind us
Footprints planted on our spine.

IDOLS.

In days of old,
When foes grew bold
And slammed the ball about,
The crowd would rise
And rend the skies
Till Walsh came strolling out.

No more they rise
To rend the skies
When Edward makes his bow.
They pass him by
With frigid eye
And yell for Russell now.

The idols rear,
The lowbrows cheer,
And then the downfall comes.
The gents who play
Like stars to-day
To-morrow may be bums.

SPEAKING OF CHASE.

Who stung Frank Chance?
"I," said J. Cal.
"I copped his Hat—
I stung Frank Chance."

Who saw him stung?
"I," said Frank Farrell.
"I lost a barrel—
I saw him stung."

Who'll fix it up?
"I," said Big Ban;
"If any one can,
I'll fix it up."

There was no deception used in the Chase trade. Each was trying to trim the other and naturally one of them lost.

Carl Morris announces that he is heavyweight champion of the South, but we have not heard the South boasting about it.

Speaking in the vernacular of the game, it might be said that Artic Hofman hit into a double cross.

THE B. B. ATHLETE.

A contract, when his eye grows dim,
Is but a worthless scrawl to him,
And if is nothing more,
Alas, 'tis nothing more!

Earl Moore refuses to join the Cardinals, the inference being that he prefers to remain with a big league team.

Reading the newspapers, one is led to believe that as pugilists those Cards are great little ball players.

One is glad to learn from Ban Johnson that the gents who control baseball are actuated by a spirit of philanthropy. But it would be hard to convince Artie Hofman or Mordecai Brown of said fact.

HOME AGAIN.

Beneath a spreading tropic tree
The foreign wrestler sits.
And frequently a smile of glee
Across his visage flits.
A proud and happy man is he
With money in his mitts.

And as he counts his pile of dough
He looks across the sea,
And sings: "When Autumn breezes blow
I must return to thee,
America, where bonchends grow—
Sweet land of ivory!"

PLAY CAREFULLY FIRST SHOTS, IS EVANS' ADVICE

By Chick Evans.

TO PLAY golf well, one must keep everlastingly at it. This is a rather hard thing to do, for a golfer may play regularly for a certain length of time, and then not see a club for a week, or a month. This is particularly true of the business man who finds it hard to get out to play on regular days. The lack of regular practice adds to the difficulty and uncertainty of the first few shots of one's game. Golf is at all times the most uncertain of games; perhaps in this uncertainty lies its fascination.

Early Shots Are Important.

Even the expert can not judge what scores or strokes the day's play or the next round holds for him, but the first few shots in a round of golf, especially the first tee shots, are apt to be indicative of the day's play. The first drive is usually played to a gallery, either of spectators or waiting players, and for that reason I have formulated a few rules which I endeavor to use when I play a new course, or hit my first balls after an absence from the game.

Judgment of distance does not mean so much to me at the start as the desire to hit the ball fairly and squarely in the right manner. If one takes great care in the hitting of the first few shots, he will find the path around the course much smoother than if he is careless and misses the first few. A player should learn to hit a ball fairly and squarely, so that the muscles will work in rhythmical assistance. I have frequently gone along teeing and heeling my shots and then at last struck a square blow, and at once felt my muscles respond to the clean impact.

Player Should Study Shots.

I am a firm believer in the habit of hitting a few practice shots before starting to play, and my chief rule is: Keep your eye on the ball and see that your clubhead traverses the imaginary line to the hole.

Judge John Barton Payne once said to me:

"Every shot should be made as if one were making his will."

That is not putting it too strong.

$400,000 Insurance Suit in Chattanooga

CHATTANOOGA, July 22—The suit of C. W. Stevens et al. against the Great Southern Insurance Company, involving more than $400,000 which more than 1,000 stockholders, scattered in all Southern States, are attempting to secure, has been called in Chancery Court. There is $107,000 now in the hands of the Clerk and Master of this County.

C. J. Hebert, of this city, who fought extradition to South Carolina for several years, as the indirect result of this litigation, is vice president of the company.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Profit From Poultry Depends Upon Care

Exercise, Feed, Housing, all Vital in Chicken Raising.

Fowls can not care for themselves and produce a profit. The smallest of the individual unit in poultry is what causes people to look upon the business as rather small. However small the individuals may seem in comparison with other live stock they should receive careful attention to insure success.

The poultry keeper, whether making it a side line to his business or a specialty, should have a definite end in view. The purpose should be clearly defined and kept constantly in mind. It is necessary to have orderly plans mapped out in order that the work shall go on regularly.

No kind of business seems to respond more promptly to careful methodical work than the chicken business. Conditions differ on farms and poultry plants, and for that reason each one must in a measure map out his own line of work, but whatever it is it should be done in a systematic manner by the proper person at the proper time.

It is a fortunate condition that permits of caring for the poultry by the interested members of the poultryman's family. Fowls are creatures of habit and dependent upon their keeper. This is especially true in their feeding.

Rich Food Needed.

A 4½-pound Leghorn hen laying 175 eggs per year yields fully five times her weight, and that too, in a concentrated form. Perhaps a good deal of the time she is laying an egg daily. To accomplish this feat the hen must not only have rich food in abundance, but should receive it at regular intervals.

To accomplish regularity in the care of fowls it must be understood whose duty it is to attend to each line of work. Let there be no misunderstanding and consequent neglect by one person thinking that some one else has done the work. Everything should go on like a clock. Learn to save labor and prevent waste in all parts of the business.

Shelter is all important, both to protect your fowls from the cold and rain. You should aim to maintain comfort in your flock at all seasons. Keep water vessels above the dirt and litter of the floor. Have them of such material that they may be cleaned easily. There should be no bad smell about a poultry house. Keepers of small flocks of poultry often become careless and negligent about cleaning their houses and the result is often failure and disgust with no one to blame but themselves.

For those who do not care to go to the trouble to clean out their poultry houses every morning a good plan is to sprinkle over the dropping some dry road dust or sawdust, and clean but once a week. Of course provision must be made for your dust during the summer months. It is the part of good management to have a dry shed for storing the poultry manure to be used as a fertilizer.

A thorough whitewashing inside and out should be given at least twice during the summer months.

Exercise Is Important.

The amount of exercise depends largely upon the breed and the condition of chickens. Overfat fowls should be compelled to work for what they get until they are reduced to a reasonable condition, while thin fowls should not be compelled to scratch for their feed. Fowls that seem inactive and sluggish should have plenty of green stuff and scratch for their food.

Free range always provides plenty of exercise. In close confinement it is different, however, and some ingenuity must be exercised to induce your fowls to take exercise enough to make their blood circulate and produce good health either by scratching for their grain or jumping to secure cabbage hung by a string too high for them to stand and reach it.

The more exercise that is provided the less likely the fowls are to acquire bad habits, such as egg eating, feather pulling, etc. It is always easier to prevent disease than it is to cure it; hence it is advisable to quarantine all purchased fowls for at least ten days until all possibility of infection is passed.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Committee Asks Price On Four Top Floors

Merchants May Be Housed in Chamber Building—Numerous Small Sales Monday.

The Chamber of Commerce committee considering a site for the exhibit of Atlanta-made goods in a permanent building for the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association decided Monday to ask the directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company to submit them a price on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building at the southeast corner of North Pryor and Auburn avenue.

President Moore has accordingly called a meeting of the directors for 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Chamber rooms in the Empire Building.

The committee considered several propositions, but it is known that the members would like to be in the Chamber building if possible, hence the request. The Chamber, in this event, would occupy the first two floors of the six-story building, which is now being renovated.

The action of the committee came as somewhat of a surprise in real estate circles, since this site had not been seriously considered until it was mentioned Monday. There is nothing to commit the committee in their request. They explained that they only wanted to consider the proposition along with the others.

Numerous Small Sales.

Small sales with a good total proved interesting in Monday's real estate announcements.

The Forrest & George Adair Real Estate Agency have made the following sales:

For Thomas H. Pitt and D. O Chestnut to F. E. Walthall, No. 114 North Moreland avenue, an eight-room, two-story house on a 40 by 200-foot lot, for $7,000; for Thomas B. Paine to Mrs. V. V. Tilson, a six-room bungalow on the east side of East Lake road, between Fair and Herman streets, 80 by 170 feet, for $5,500; for Mrs. A. W. Mynett to Mrs. Laura Quarles, No. 182 East Pine street, a two-story, seven-room house on the north side of the street and on a 37½ by 150-foot lot, for $3,350.

The house sold for Mr. Paine at East Lake is not the house which is occupied, but one near it which he built to sell.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. have sold for Mrs. Fannie McHenry to Mrs. A. C. Moore, a 25 by 100-foot lot in Mays street, near the railroad tracks, for $650; for O. C. Radford to Mrs. M. P. Beauchamp, a house and lot on the west side of Bates avenue, Kirkwood, 50 by 260 feet, near Boulevard DeKalb, for $3,400; for Mrs. L. C. Carmichael to L. A. Morris, No. 54 Candler street, a six-room bungalow on a 50 by 132-foot lot, between McLendon street and Euclid avenue, for $3,850.

T. M. Cater has bought from J. K. Nicholson through M. P. Tyson, of the Adair & Holt Agency, No. 64 Garden street, an irregular-shaped lot of about 60 feet frontage, for $2,500.

Rent Bulletin Appears.

The Smith, Ewing & Rankin Real Estate and Renting Agency, started publication Monday of a weekly rent bulletin. Mr. Smith explaining that the increased business of the firm made this move necessary.

To Sell Peachtree Lease.

The lease on the space occupied by the Savoy Cafe, at No. 34 Peachtree, has been placed in the hands of E. E. Pomeroy, trustee, for sale. This was determined on Saturday instead of a sale in the office of Referee in Bankruptcy Percy H. Adams, in the Grant Building. The lease has about four years to run. Terms are cash.

Connally Avenue Lot on Sale.

B. S. Bomar, administrator of the estate of the late Mary E. Madden, will sell at auction before the courthouse door Tuesday, August 1, a 50 by 100 foot lot on the west side of Connally avenue, 30 feet from the United States Barracks fence. Grover C. Middlebrooks is the attorney.

East Avenue Purchase.

Mrs. Mary Hunt has bought from E. M. Willingham, through the F. McC. Brown Real Estate Agency, the one-story frame house on the east side of East avenue, near East Fair, for $2,000. The lot is 48 by 138.

Pryor Street Underpass.

According to information obtained Monday, an effort will be made soon to have Council consider a proposition to underpass the Southern Railway tracks at South Pryor and Ridge avenue, while the work of widening, regrading and repaving South Pryor is in progress. This improvement, it is pointed out, would make a continuous smooth thoroughfare to Lakewood. With this work done, it will be possible to connect up Lakewood drive and South Pryor with a roadway that would save many yards in travel about the lake. There is at present no driveway at the north end of the lake, and the addition would put driveways almost entirely around it.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

Sharp & Boylston

ANSLEY PARK HOME.

THIS IS a seven-room two-story house with very large sleeping porch. It has hardwood floors and steam heated. It is brand-new and was built for a home, but on account of sickness owner has to sell. It is located near car line and on good, large lot. This is a real bargain at $7,000, and on good terms. See us at once about this, as it will surely sell at this price and terms.

MARIETTA ST. STORE.

ONE-STORY BRICK STORE on lot 47 feet front, running through to railroad. This side of North avenue. Price, $125 per foot—$50 per foot less than adjoining property sold for. Owner needs money for other business.

SHARP & BOYLSTON.
36 S. BROAD STREET.
PHONES 756.

To Build at Brookhaven.

E. L. Bishop is clearing a five-acre tract at Brookhaven, opposite the No. 7 green of the Capital City Country Club golf course, and will soon build a bungalow. Hentz & Reid, architects, are drawing plans. The lot is on Brookhaven Drive, east. J. E. C. Pedder has a lot to the west of Mr. Bishop, and he is also planning a home, it is said.

Ponce DeLeon Projection.

The upper stories of the Ponce DeLeon apartments are all right as regards encroachment on the sidewalk at the southeast corner of Peachtree and Ponce DeLeon, according to Assistant Building Inspector C. J. Bowen. Only about 20 inches from the base upward, consisting of ornamental stone, is in the encroachment, and this can probably be adjusted to the satisfaction of the apartment officials and the city. The projection is about 4 3-4 inches.

Progress on Peachtree.

In about two weeks, according to Shelby Smith, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, repairs to Peachtree will be completed. The stretch from Peachtree Creek to Buckhead is done, and the convicts started Monday working southward from the creek to Fifteenth street. Sixth street to Fifteenth was finished some weeks ago, and the repairs will make a smooth thoroughfare about eight miles in length. The gap between W. S. Witham's and the DeKalb County line, near the Capital City Country Club, will be completed in a few weeks.

Interest in Comfort Station.

Real estate men went over their listings Monday with a view of selecting a site for the city public comfort station, which has been designed by Haralson Bleckley, the well-known architect and author of the plaza plan. This building is to cost $10,000, according to the sketch, and will be located at some point to be chosen by the City Council. Such an institution has been suggested by City Clerk Walter Taylor, Harrison Jones and others.

Activity in Lots.

F. C. Word, of the Southern Railway Company, has refused a $500 profit on six acres of land on Mount Perian road which he bought last week, through J. E. Pritchett, of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency. The land cost him $1,623.

The above agency reports the sale of nearly $50,000 in the past week in its Peachtree Highlands, Clairemont, Woodlawn Park and Peachtreehurst subdivisions, as well as No. 199 North Moreland avenue to Mrs. E. J. Mitchell for the Kelly-Nealy Company, for $7,000; No. 130 Tift avenue to Dixon avenue for a client, $2,400; No. 154 Ormond street, corner of Frazier, to R. T. Harralson for Mrs. Lula Mitchell, for $2,000, and three tracts on the Mount Perian road for $4,680, to people whose names are withheld.

Millions of Americans Are Saving---Millions of Americans Need to Borrow---Farmers Especially

Isn't It Possible for the Government to Put Those That Are SAVING In Touch With Those That Need to BORROW. Must the Blood-Sucker Always Play His Game of Usury Between Them?

(Copyright, 1913.)

In this country millions of industrious, careful human beings, anxious to provide for the future, are willing to save—and it is practically impossible for them to get a decent rate of interest on their savings and NOT risk being robbed at the same time.

In this country, where the millions are anxious to save, you have millions of farmers and small business men who are compelled to borrow—as their operations for the year exceed necessarily at one time or another the amount of money that they have on hand.

You have the savers on the one hand getting only 2 per cent if they put their money in the United States Postal Bank. And even then they are limited as to the amount they can put in. They get 3 per cent if they put their money in private savings banks—and take the usual risk of having the money lost through dishonesty or withheld from them in time of panic.

You have the farmers, upon whose labor and intelligence the nation depends, compelled to borrow for the purchase of seeds, of machinery. And, while the SAVING, careful American who accumulates his earnings can get only 2 per cent or 3 per cent interest, THE FARMER MUST PAY, ON THE AVERAGE, EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT FOR THE MONEY THAT HE BORROWS.

Isn't there some way of getting the AMERICAN WHO SAVES and the AMERICAN WHO BORROWS closer together?

Is it not an outrage that the hundreds of millions that the careful American saves should be lent to the hard-working farmer with SOME BANKING ORGANIZATION BETWEEN THE TWO GETTING A "RAKE OFF" OF FIVE AND A HALF PER CENT ON THE MONEY?

That is exactly what happens.

The money that the bankers are lending is simply the money that others have SAVED.

And the money that the farmers are borrowing is simply the money that the savers have deposited in the banks.

The people who save in this country get 3 per cent at most on their savings. And the farmers who borrow pay 8½ per cent.

And in the process 5½ per cent goes to build up a non-producing class THAT IS NOT NECESSARY.

Why should not the Government of the United States pay a decent rate of interest to the American citizen for his savings, and lend to the farmers at a fair rate of interest when the farmers need to borrow?

It doesn't cost 5½ per cent to handle money, to take it in with one hand and lend it with the other.

The United States Government might well afford to pay the careful, saving American 3 per cent on his money and LEND THAT SAME MONEY TO THE FARMER AT 4 PER CENT.

This would give the Government a margin of 1 per cent to cover expenses.

Why isn't it possible to do this?

It isn't possible for various reasons.

The first reason is that the finances of the United States are usually run by bankers for bankers.

The second reason is that the banking class represents Government, which in this country means money.

The little man who is saving his few hundred dollars and who must be content to get 3 per cent and risk losing it, and the farmer who is borrowing his few thousand dollars and who must go almost on his knees to get it, AND THEN PAY EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT—those two classes are not the Government.

The Government of this country is the banking class, the money class, the money itself.

And therefore the man who saves must accept 3 per cent interest and worry about his money's safety.

And the farmer who borrows must pay 8½ per cent and worry about his payments promptly on time, and pay a commission for extensions, and find himself sold out in time of panics.

And those who profit are the middlemen, the NON-PRODUCERS, the parasites, the blood-suckers of the community.

When will the people find a leader big enough and able enough to hand the savings of the frugal workmen in the shape of a loan to the equally frugal and valuable farmer, and take from both of them ONLY ENOUGH TO PAY FOR THE TRANSACTION?

They do these things in other countries.

In Germany and France they lend thousands of millions to the farmers at 4 per cent a year and less.

The farmers of this country borrow thousands of millions of dollars THROUGH A PRIVATE EXTORTIONATE BANKING SYSTEM AND THE AVERAGE CHARGE IS EIGHT AND ONE-HALF PER CENT.

Eight and one-half per cent on one thousand millions is eighty-five millions of dollars. And this is, at the least, FIFTY MILLIONS MORE THAN THE FARMERS SHOULD PAY.

Money is as much a TOOL in these days as any other.

If you make money, the most important tool, expensive for the farmer, YOU MAKE LIVING AND THE COST OF LIVING EXPENSIVE FOR ALL.

This nation should let the farmers have cheap money, and at the same time give to the saving mechanic a fair rate of interest AND ABSOLUTE SAFETY WITH A GOVERNMENT GUARANTEE.

That can be done, if MONEY will permit the people of this country to run the Government and the finances of the country for the benefit of the people—and not for the benefit of the blood-sucking middleman, called the banking system.

Mysteries of Science and Nature

Horses and Camels Lived in Frozen North, Once a Mild Tropical Region, and Believed to Have Been Original Home of Man.

By GARRET P. SERVISS

HARDLY have the eyes of the world been opened, as never before, to the fascinating mysteries of the South Pole and its wonderful surrounding continent, than its great rival of the north makes new claims upon our attention.

North Pole Once a Mild, If Not Tropical, Region.

One of the strangest problems that science has to face is that presented by the fast accumulating evidence that, in former times, possibly before man had developed into his present physical form, a mild, if not a tropical, climate prevailed in those vast northern regions which are now buried, most of the time, under snow and ice. There is even reason to think that this strange condition may have existed up to the very Pole!

The period generally fixed by geologists for the existence of this state of things within the Arctic Circle is what is known as the Pleistocene (from the Greek pleistos, "most," and kainos, "recent," the meaning being that it was the most recent period of the great Tertiary Age). Any attempt to fix in years the distance of that time from ours is merely guesswork. It has been said that history reckons by years and geology by ages. It may be that the Pleistocene dates back a hundred thousand, and, perhaps, two or three hundred thousand years.

Anyhow, in Pleistocene times animals and plants, some of which are extinct and others of which are now found only in temperate or tropical regions, existed, apparently in abundance, in the polar regions of the north.

The latest discoveries concerning these vanished inhabitants of a land that has now become frigid and inhospitable relate to camels and horses. The presence of the camel in Alaska, not as a curiosity in a travelling menagerie, but as a regular inhabitant of the land, is astonishing to think of. We know the camel as a desert animal, a lover of the Sahara, with its waterless expanses of wind-driven, sun-blasted sand, but here he appears, dwelling before the two-legged animal that was to become his master had been introduced upon the planet, in a region which, in its present condition, would be almost as inappropriate a place of residence for him as the moon would be for men!

But he has left his fossilized bones there, and science has discovered them. We can not contradict such evidence.

Science Discovers That Horse Lived in Alaska.

Then, too, the horse existed in Alaska in that same strange age. Its remains have been found in so many places that it is impossible to conclude otherwise than that horses ranged freely over immense expanses within the Arctic Circle where now the sub-soil is a frozen mass that never melts. At that time great prairies of luscious grass must have existed there at nearly all times of the year, for horses do not store up food to last through a long, pitiless winter.

Mammoths and Bison Roamed Frozen North.

Somewhere about the same time mammoths, bisons and other strange animals also roamed that part of the world, finding an abundance of food about them. If there were men in existence at that time, they, too, may have been polar inhabitants!

The great question now is: What caused the change? Why were the Arctic regions warm and genial at that time, and how have they come into the state which we now find?

Some have suggested that the earth has partly tipped over, its axis of rotation, or the line joining its poles, assuming a different position. But this would involve a tremendous catastrophe, throwing the oceans out of their beds and producing disastrous changes all over the globe, and evidence of such a universal catastrophe is lacking. Moreover, there is hardly anything known to science more stable than an axis of rotation. Once set a body spining about a particular axis and it is extremely difficult to change the direction or slope of that axis. The whole form of the earth plainly indicates that it has been turning for countless ages about the same poles, and must have begun to so turn when it was yet plastic, or molten, for it has bulged at the equator, just as any mass of that kind must do under the influence of centrifugal force.

A more probable hypothesis is that the change of climate has been caused by elevations and subsidences of the earth's crust. The presence of horses and camels in Alaska has been ascribed to the former existence of a great "land bridge" connecting Asia with North America. Horses did not exist in America at the time of its discovery, and camels have never inhabited this Continent, except in Pleistocene times.

In view of the facts that I have been reciting, one can not but think of the strange theory, which has been strongly advocated in the past, though never accepted by science.

Many Believe Home of Race Was North Pole.

Not a few students believe that the original home of the present inhabitants of our hemisphere, and perhaps of the whole human race, was around the North Pole, from which they were driven by climatic changes. If that were so, then what is now the Arctic Ocean must have been a land "flowing with milk and honey," in the old Scriptural sense.

The Mad Monarch

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

HIS subjects may be found in every clime;
From every source they crawl to lick his hand.
His home in Hell is wonderfully planned
To welcome slaves that die from time to time.
His nag daughter is Lust. His son is Crime.
He has a solid throne in every land.
And what with hearts to break and serfs to brand,
He goes but seldom to his couch of slime.

He slays men's brains and deadens baby lives.
Oh, the vast pyramids this king could build
Were he to use the bones of starving wives
Who sigh to join the victim, he has killed!
Mockingly glow in his grim diadem
Three bloody ruby letters—R-U-M.

"I Know Dozens of People," She Says, "Who Would Never Have Been Born If This Health Idea Had Been Strictly Carried Out ---and Somehow I Don't Think the World Would Have Been Much Better Off For That."

By WINIFRED BLACK.

ONCE there was a clever little boy who was always taking clocks to pieces and meddling with locks and making wheels, and inventing ways of shutting the old door so that it wouldn't be locked and yet the dog could spring the latch—such a clever, clever boy—but I always hated to have him come to visit at our house.

You see, he could take a clock to pieces wonderfully well and put it together—just moderately well. The clock would go after he had put it together again, but somehow there was always something wrong with it some way. Sometimes it told the time all right, but struck wrong. Sometimes it struck all right, but told the hour wrong, and then again it was the alarm that never quite got over the clever boy's handling.

Sometimes I wonder about him—he's a doctor now, a very successful surgeon; always taking people to pieces. I wonder if they run quite so well when he is through with them as they did before he touched them—he and his "science."

Wants to Regulate All the Marriages.

I see he read a paper at a great medical convention yesterday—it was all about "eliminating the unfit."

He doesn't want anyone to marry but people in perfect health. He thinks physicians should regulate marriage—and regulate it legally. No one should be allowed to marry at all without the "yes, indeed," of the whole medical profession. Fine idea, progressive, and all that. I wonder if it is quite practical?

Now, there's the doctor himself, for instance. I happen to know that his mother was an old-fashioned consumptive. She took twenty years a-dying, and one of his brothers died of the old-fashioned illness out in Colorado not so many weeks ago.

The doctor is alive yet, and very lively, too, thank you. He would not be here at all if his advice had been taken thirty years ago—and just think how we should have missed him and his experiments with the clocks and with people's internals.

We knew a good many of the same people, the doctor and I, when he was taking clocks to pieces.

One of them died of cancer; her mother died of it, too, and she married and had three children. One of them is the cleverest, all-around woman I know, one is mediocre and one has made a fortune in a country town and is spending it helping sick babies get well. Now if that woman had not been allowed to marry, what then?

The best family in the town where we both lived had three sons—every one of them has turned out a failure. One's an invalid, one's a criminal and one's a drunkard. Father was sound as a hickory nut, and mother never had an ill day in her life. How about that family?

How far back have you got to go to get at the source of infection and who's going to do the "going?"

"Somebody 'Queer' In Every Family."

"I can find enough degenerates in any family on earth to get any client off for murder in the first degree," said a clever lawyer to me just the other day. "I don't suppose there's a family in America without somebody 'queer' in it."

Just how "queer" have you got to be and who's going to decide about it when you try to get a marriage license and can't?

"Eliminate the unfit"—well, well, Mr. Physician, who are the unfit?

There's Robert Louis Stevenson, for instance. He never drew a breath of good health in his life. Would you have "eliminated" him?

How about Julius Caesar, how about Napoleon, how about Mohammed, how about Daniel Webster, how about St. Paul?

Unfit—every one of them—from the doctor's point of view, and there are still more illustrious examples of the unfit who survived and made the world over just to suit their own ideas while the "fit" stood around and looked on and wondered about it.

It's a glorious idea you have, doctor, and one that every civilized nation should study carefully—but are you quite sure how you are going to manage it?

I got the "sterilized" fad once and wouldn't let anyone have a drop of water that wasn't boiled; till my old doctor came along and told me I had boiled all the life out of it, and he said he'd risk a few germs if he were me—on the principle that he'd rather be an aquarium than a cemetery—and I got over my fad.

"Drink water all you can," shouts the water-cure fiend.

"Don't touch water till you have to," insists the new specialist.

"When your brain is tired, work your body," advises the doctor who is supposed to know.

"Don't overwork a tired system," says his neighbor. "Rest is the only thing to cure fatigue."

Owe Their Existence To Old-Time Laws.

And so it goes—we're all so interested—in this "eliminate the unfit" idea, and yet when I look around among my friends, a pretty decent lot of people as the world goes, I can see dozens of them who would never have been born at all if this idea had been strictly carried out, and somehow I can't think the world would have been much better off for that.

Take the old clock to pieces, doctor, all you will, but please, good friend, be quite sure you know how to put it together again so it will strike twelve at midnight and not at eight of the morning.

:-: Marshal D'Ancre :-:

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE execution, 296 years ago, of Leonora Galigai, wife of the Marshal D'Ancre, was the wind-up of one of the most remarkable life stories in French history.

In 1610 the fanatical Ravaillac plunged his dagger into the heart of Henry Fourth, and Mary de Medici was proclaimed Regent. At the time of her marriage to Henry Mary brought with her from Florence her nurse's daughter, Leonora Galigai, and her husband, Concino Concini, son of a Florentine notary. By these creatures the Regent was completely hypnotized, and in a trice the nurse's daughter and the notary's son became the most consequential personages in France. Mary, besides making the pair her confidential advisers, gave them every opportunity for advancing their material fortunes, with the result that, in addition to wielding great power at court, they grew immensely wealthy. The well-filled strong box left by the great King was pilfered right and left, and in a little while Concini was able to say: "When I came to France I was not worth a sou, now I am worth eight millions." His wife also laid by a splendid wad of the "needful," besides supplying herself with the plate, wardrobe and jewels that were the wonder of her time.

Purchasing the Marquisate of Ancre and a marshalship, the notary's son was now the Marshal D'Ancre, and as for the nurse's daughter—she was pretty nearly the "whole thing," for she dominated both Mary and D'Ancre.

But alas, for the "best laid plans of mice and men!" One day, after some seven years of prosperity, the Marshal D'Ancre was shot down like a dog by the order, or with the consent, of the young King, Louis Thirteenth, and not long thereafter the court creatures seized D'Ancre's widow and took her before the bar of the Parliament, by which body she was unceremoniously sentenced to the block. The last words of the dashing adventuress, as she looked out upon the sea of humanity that had gathered to witness her execution, were:

"What a lot of people to look at one poor creature die!"

POST TO CARRY 20-LB. PACKAGES

Rates Also Cut in First and Second Zones—Chart Replaces Map.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The Postoffice Department has announced important changes in the operation of the parcel post system, including an increase in the maximum weight limit on packages from 11 to 20 pounds, a reduction in the rates of postage within the first and second zones and the substitution of a convenient rate chart for the elaborate parcel post map in determining postage rates.

Since the establishment of the parcel post system, many requests have been received at the Postoffice Department for an increase in the maximum weight of packages that will be carried and a corresponding reduction in the rates of postage.

The act of August 24, 1912, establishing the system authorizes the Postmaster General, with the consent of the Interstate Commerce Commission, after investigation, to change from time to time, in his discretion, the classification, weight limit, rates or zones, to improve the service.

After weeks of consideration, Postmaster General Burleson submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission and got its consent to the following changes, which are to be effective on August 15:

The first zone shall include the territory within the local delivery of any office and the first zone rate of postage will apply to all parcel post mail deposited at any office for local delivery or for delivery by city carrier or on rural routes emanating from that postoffice.

The second zone shall include the remainder of what is now the first zone together with the present second zone, and shall include all the units of area located in whole or in part within a radius of approximately 150 miles from any given postoffice.

The rate of postage on parcels weighing in excess of four ounces in the proposed first zone—that is, for local delivery—will be reduced from 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof, to 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional two pounds or fraction thereof.

The rate for the proposed second zone—that is, the territory embraced within a radius of 150 miles from any given postoffice—will be reduced from 5 cents for the first pound and 3 cents for each additional pound (the present first zone rate) or 6 cents for the first pound and 4 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof (the present second zone rate) to 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

The maximum weight of parcel post packages will be increased from 11 pounds to 20 pounds, the increase of weight to apply only to the first and second zones. No change has been made in the restrictions as to the size and form of the package.

PRAISES MODERN MEN.

CHICAGO, July 22.—"David and Solomon and some other patriarchs were excellent men as judged by the standards of their own time, but they would not be admitted to membership in the church of to-day," said the Rev. John Thompson, of Chicago, who contends the world is growing better.

The speaker said the rise of golf, baseball and other outdoor sports was a sign of improving moral standards.

"DELUGED WITH PROSPERITY."

"Dixie is bubbling over with prosperity."

That is the characteristic way in which J. W. S. Hardy, of Waycross, president of the Retail Merchants' Association, defined commercial conditions in the South at the association's convention headquarters in the Hotel Ansley.

PHILADELPHIA SLUMBERS.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—Because the chimes on the chapel of the Little Sisters of the Poor here disturbed the sleep of persons living in the vicinity, the bells which were brought from France, will be silent hereafter from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m.

MARTIN W. MULHALL, former lobbyist of National Association of Manufacturers, whose revelations of corruption startled the nation.

6,500-Pound Cheese Made in New York

UTICA, N. Y., July 22.—The finishing touches on a cheese weighing 6,500 pounds, the largest cheese ever made in New York State, if not in the world, were put on to-day at the Gowdy factory in Martinsburg.

Two days' milk from two factories was required. The cheese will be exhibited at the State fair in Syracuse.

POLITICS CAUSES DUEL.

LEXINGTON, KY., July 22.—After having a fist fight over politics Sunday at Olympia, Bates County, Thurman Pergram and a man named Harris agreed to go home, get their guns and settle it. They met as arranged and shot it out.

Pergram was mortally wounded and died while being taken to a hospital here.

35 Negro Convicts Are Burned to Death

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—Thirty-five negro convicts were burned to death when fire last night destroyed the prison cage on the State convict farm at Oakley, Miss.

STORK ALIGHTS ON TRAIN.

LOUISVILLE, July 22.—The stork presented Mrs. D. J. Jones, of Johnson City, Tenn., with a girl baby while on a westbound Southern Railway train to join her husband at Colorado Springs.

The youngster arrived en route, between North Vernon, Ind., and Fairfield, Ill. The train was backed to North Vernon, and the mother and baby were taken to a hospital. The husband was notified and is on the way to North Vernon.

U. S. SOIL BOARD LEARNS LESSONS

American Commissioners Get Important Information in Ireland. Sail for Home.

LONDON, July 22.—The American Agricultural Commission has completed its inquiry and sailed from Queenstown by the Cedric to New York. They spent eleven days in the United Kingdom, the first three of which were devoted to London and the surrounding agricultural district.

Everywhere the commission was cordially received, but there was at first considerable doubt just what was the precise scope and aim of the inquiry, doubt which members of the commission did not appear to have been quite able to dispel. Immediately on reaching Ireland, public interest in the proceedings commenced to liven, and the published debates of the commission and those with whom they conferred upon agricultural questions became absorbingly interesting.

Many members of the commission declared before leaving Ireland that they there got nearer to the kernel of their problem than in all their previous European wanderings.

When the commission came to Ireland they found that a body of rural reformers had for nearly a quarter of a century been trying to induce Irish farmers to adopt the co-operative measures employed by Continental competitors.

Members of the commission who had seen the marvelous effect of co-operative organization on the Continent were told how it had been introduced into Ireland to supplement the agrarian revolution through which the country had been passing. They became satisfied that the Irish rural scheme of regeneration was the best that could be devised.

RIOT AT POPE'S ROOMS.

ROME, July 22.—After 24 hours of wild rioting by the Pope's Swiss guards, during which the men were shorn of their military powers at the Vatican, order was restored to-day.

The demands of the soldiers, which caused the mutiny, will not be granted. The soldiers had asked concession raising the embargo against them visiting wine shops and other stores along the Tiber; the right to choose their own commander; the increase of the guards' quota, and a demand that no punishment be meted out to them for their mutinous conduct.

HIGH COST OF DYING CUT.

CHICAGO, July 22.—The high cost of dying is to be lowered in Chicago with the advent of motor buses. The funeral bus will have a compartment to the right of the chauffeur's seat for the coffin, and above it a place for flowers. Near the driver will sit the minister and the undertaker, and there will be accommodations for 27 mourners.

The funeral bus, it is said, will reduce the transportation cost by $30. Ten of the buses are to be in operation soon.

INTERVENTION DEMANDED.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A sensational resolution demanding intervention in Mexico within 30 days unless peace be restored, and denouncing the Huerta regime as one of "brute force, incendiarism, rapine and murder," was introduced in the House to-day by Representative William H. Murray, of Oklahoma, a Democrat.

The resolution provides that the President shall notify Mexico that peace must be restored and that the lives and property of American citizens and all foreigners sojourning in Mexico shall be respected.

BRYAN TAKES A NAP.

CHICAGO, July 22.—For two hours early to-day Secretary of State Bryan sat nearly upright in a railroad station seat and slept. When his train was called he entered a drawing room and prepared to awake in Oelwein, Iowa, where he was scheduled to give a Chautauqua lecture this afternoon.

Before his nap Secretary Bryan entertained four newspaper men at a midnight lunch which cost him 45 cents. He ate canteloupe off a dairy lunch chair.

WHAT IS AN OPPORTUNITY FOR A YOUNG MAN?

We have received many letters from young men recently complaining of lack of opportunities. One in particular asked this question:

"Are the opportunities for the young man in the present day and generation equal to what they were twenty-five or fifty years ago—the days of his father and grandfather?"

It is a question that is probably asked in this country thousands of times every day. It is an important question to the individual. It is especially important to the nation. For the nation declines in which opportunities for the young diminish.

We feel that we can conscientiously and positively say that REAL opportunities are better to-day, both for young men and young women, than they ever have been.

Opportunities are greater BECAUSE POSSIBILITIES ARE GREATER.

Science, machinery, organization of all kinds, especially widespread publicity, have put into men's hands in less than fifty years a power undreamed of in the boyhood of our grandfathers.

Humanity and the individual are powerful, and their opportunities are great, in proportion to the machinery at their command.

Our opportunities were never so great as now, but this statement is made assuming that our correspondent means real and worthy opportunities.

Unfortunately, in this country, where sudden prosperity, great extravagance and uneasiness as to the future make money all-important, the word "opportunity" is apt to be a synonym for money. Money and opportunity are taken to mean the same thing.

But we purpose to answer this question quite apart from money.

Undoubtedly, the very able money-getter, no matter how humble his start, can build up to-day such a fortune an was unknown fifty years ago—or twenty-five years ago. There are young men without a penny that will earn (or, rather, more or less honestly ACCUMULATE) their hundreds of millions in the next few years, before the common sense of the country shall have realized the importance of regulating accumulation through increased distribution.

There will be, perhaps, fewer small, middle-class fortunes piled up, for there will be fewer men in business on their own account, thanks to the trusts.

Many men will earn very large salaries, ranging from $150,000 a year downward, and there will probably be very many more large INCOMES in the land within the next twenty-five years than there were in the last twenty-five years.

But when men earn SALARIES, they do not keep their money, and of the middle-class fortunes we shall have fewer.

But we trust that our correspondent will agree with us that money is a pretty mean measurement for opportunity.

What do the merely rich men really amount to? When they have been dead two or three years they are as unknown and forgotten as the pigs and chickens that they ate, the horses that they drove, or the flunkies whose time they wasted.

Opportunity means A CHANCE TO DO SOMETHING WORTH WHILE.

And we assure our correspondent that the young man of to-day has a greater chance to do something worth while than a young man has ever had in the history of this country.

Our form of government is changing; the power has practically passed from the hands of the majority of the people into the hands of a majority of trust stockholders.

The young man who has genius and force, the ability to lead, and the character to refuse his share of the spoils, has a great opportunity to-day. It is the opportunity to return the government to the hands of those who are governed.

Working scientists are needed and sadly lacking in all the great departments of human thought. Every one of these new fields of intellectual activity, research and discovery offers unlimited opportunities to young men.

The newspapers, read by millions of human beings every day, enable the man who can think intelligently, the man who will be sincere and interesting at the same time to address (and, if he is able, to convince) a million or two millions of his fellow-citizens every day in the year. Was there ever a greater opportunity than this for influencing the thoughts of other men?

Every page of a scientific newspaper will show to the young man a glorious opportunity.

Every phase of our great industrial organization, every new development in the struggle of manhood against money, offers to the young man a great opportunity for public service.

The horrible poverty and wretchedness in the great cities, contrasting with ignorant and ostentatious wealth, offer opportunities unlimited to him who would help the poor to help themselves, to him able to cajole or frighten the rich into doing their duty.

This is the age of opportunity, but the young man must think for himself, strike out on his own line, make up his mind what to do, and stick at it, INSTEAD OF FOLLOWING ALONG THE USUAL LINES OF LEAST RESISTANCE, doing the same as everybody else does, keeping at nothing in particular, and then wondering what has become of the world's opportunities.

MILLIONS OF AMERICANS NEED TO BORROW—FARMERS ESPECIALLY

In this country millions of industrious, careful human beings, anxious to provide for the future, are willing to save—and it is practically impossible for them to get a decent rate of interest on their savings and NOT risk being robbed at the same time.

In this country, where the millions are anxious to save, you have millions of farmers and small business men who are compelled to borrow—as their operations for the year exceed necessarily at one time or another the amount of money that they have on hand.

You have the savers on the one hand getting only 2 per cent if they put their money in the United States Postal Bank. And even then they are limited as to the amount they can put in. They get 3 per cent if they put their money in private savings banks—and take the usual risk of having the money lost through dishonesty or withheld from them in time of panic.

You have the farmers, upon whose labor and intelligence the nation depends, compelled to borrow for the purchase of seeds, of machinery. And, while the SAVING, careful American who accumulates his earnings can get only 2 per cent or 3 per cent interest, THE FARMER MUST PAY, ON THE AVERAGE, EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT FOR THE MONEY THAT HE BORROWS.

Isn't there some way of getting the AMERICAN WHO SAVES and the AMERICAN WHO BORROWS closer together?

Is it not an outrage that the hundreds of millions that the careful American saves should be lent to the hard-working farmer with SOME BANKING ORGANIZATION BETWEEN THE TWO GETTING A "RAKE OFF" OF FIVE AND A HALF PER CENT ON THE MONEY?

That is exactly what happens.

The money that the bankers are lending is simply the money that others have SAVED.

And the money that the farmers are borrowing is simply the money that the savers have deposited in the banks.

The people who save in this country get 3 per cent at most on their savings. And the farmers who borrow pay 8½ per cent.

And in the process 5½ per cent goes to build up a non-producing class THAT IS NOT NECESSARY.

Why should not the Government of the United States pay a decent rate of interest to the American citizen for his savings, and lend to the farmers at a fair rate of interest when the farmers need to borrow?

It doesn't cost 5½ per cent to handle money, to take it in with one hand and lend it with the other.

The United States Government might well afford to pay the careful, saving American 3 per cent on his money and LEND THAT SAME MONEY TO THE FARMER AT 4 PER CENT.

This would give the Government a margin of 1 per cent to cover expenses.

Why isn't it possible to do this?

It isn't possible for various reasons.

The first reason is that the finances of the United States are usually run by bankers for bankers.

The second reason is that the banking class represents Government, which in this country means money.

The little man who is saving his few hundred dollars and who must be content to get 3 per cent and risk losing it, and the farmer who is borrowing his few thousand dollars and who must go almost on his knees to get it, AND THEN PAY EIGHT AND A HALF PER CENT—those two classes are not the Government.

The Government of this country is the banking class, the money class, the money itself.

And therefore the man who saves must accept 3 per cent interest and worry about his money's safety.

And the farmer who borrows must pay 8½ per cent and worry about his payments promptly on time, and pay a commission for extensions, and find himself sold out in time of panics.

And those who profit are the middlemen, the NON-PRODUCERS, the parasites, the blood-suckers of the community.

When will the people find a leader big enough and able enough to hand the savings of the frugal workmen in the shape of a loan to the equally frugal and valuable farmer, and take from both of them ONLY ENOUGH TO PAY FOR THE TRANSACTION?

They do these things in other countries.

In Germany and France they lend thousands of millions to the farmers at 4 per cent a year and less.

The farmers of this country borrow thousands of millions of dollars THROUGH A PRIVATE EXTORTIONATE BANKING SYSTEM AND THE AVERAGE CHARGE IS EIGHT AND ONE-HALF PER CENT.

Eight and one-half per cent on one thousand millions is eighty-five millions of dollars. And this is, at the least, FIFTY MILLIONS MORE THAN THE FARMERS SHOULD PAY.

Money is as much a TOOL in these days as any other.

If you make money, the most important tool, expensive for the farmer, YOU MAKE LIVING AND THE COST OF LIVING EXPENSIVE FOR ALL.

This nation should let the farmers have cheap money, and at the same time give to the saving mechanic a fair rate of interest AND ABSOLUTE SAFETY WITH A GOVERNMENT GUARANTEE.

That can be done, if MONEY will permit the people of this country to run the Government and the finances of the country for the benefit of the people—and not for the benefit of the blood-sucking middleman, called the banking system.

NEWS OF WEDNESDAY, JULY 16, 1913

MULHALL IS SILENT ON ACCUSATION BY BARRY

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Before facing his daily quiz on the stand before the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee to-day Colonel M. M. Mulhall declared he was too "busy" to reply to the charges of Richard Barry, of New York, that Mulhall demanded $20,000 for the publication of the National Association of Manufacturers' correspondence, that he attempted to sell the letters to the American Federation of Labor, and that he asked Barry if he did not think the national association would pay $150,000 for the files. Barry said Mulhall had 57,000 letters and papers.

Letters read into the record to-day concerned the efforts of the national association to have a tariff commission created.

Mulhall said that during a conference in January, 1908, with the political managers of former Representative James Watson, of Indiana, it was suggested that D. M. Parry become active in that State. Mulhall said this was frowned upon because Parry was "too well known to the labor people."

"The National Association of Manufacturers wanted a tariff commission, of which H. E. Miles, of Racine, Wis., and Fred C. Schwedtman should be members," said Mulhall. "Miles was the head of the tariff committee of the national association, named to come to Washington to lobby for a tariff commission. But he was so radical he was driven from the committee and was replaced by Mr. Tompkins."

Mulhall described the conversation with representatives of Indiana manufacturers, in which he said he thought $100,000 was needed to put Watson across.

The witness said he employed union men to try to swing the labor vote to Watson and to spy upon labor activity.

In a letter to G. S. Boudinot, acting secretary of the national association, Mulhall said:

"I was given plainly to understand some time ago that the political expenditures of the association were about $40,000 a year."

"Senator Foraker wanted me to see the secretary of the United Building Trades of Cincinnati about his chances for re-election for Senator," said Mulhall, in explanation of a letter signed by Foraker. "I think he was considering running for the presidency at that time."

Further light was shed on Indiana politics by other Mulhall letters. C. A. Carlyle, of Studebaker Bros., Indianapolis, wrote to H. E. Miles that "we have a candidate for Governor from this district, Charles W. Miller, of Goshen, Ind. Miller is a man you can absolutely depend upon." The letter indicated that an ineffectual attempt was made to swing Carlyle to Watson.

HURRIES TO SURRENDER.

SWAINSBORO, July 16.—After slaying Edgar Hadden, his nephew, at his home at Wesley, James R. Hadden, an aged Emanuel County truck farmer and canner, caught the first train to Swainsboro and surrendered to Sheriff R. W. Coursey before news of the killing had reached here.

Hadden told the Sheriff that the trouble arose when he asked his nephew, who cursed and threatened the family, struck Mrs. Hadden and broke down the front door with an ax.

As Superior Court is in session, Hadden will likely be tried later this week.

HEALTH BILL FAVORED.

Senator Hixon's bill requiring all would-be-weds to take out medical certificates, constituting one of the most radical marriage contract laws ever proposed in Georgia, has been reported upon favorably by the Senate Committee on Hygiene and Sanitation. The measure was approved without a single dissenting vote, following the speeches of Dr. Floyd Young, Dr. B. L. Embry and Dr. Bates Block in behalf of the bill.

The bill provides that persons contracting a marriage must be of sound mind; if a male, at least 18 years of age, and, if a female, at least 16 years old.

HAS COFFIN "RETOUCHED.'

LANSING, MICH., July 16.—Believing that death is near, James Swan, 89 years old, a pioneer of Ingham County, has sent a coffin, which he had made for himself several years ago, to a painter at Danville to be "retouched."

The coffin is one of three the aged man made from an old cherry tree which stood for years on the homestead he cleared a half century ago.

WIFE STOLE HIS LEG.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Fearing her husband, Anton Kurdiana, a wealthy Italian, would run away and escape service of papers she had filed in a divorce action, Mrs. Kurdiana stole his wooden leg and hid it.

After the papers were read to him she gave back his leg.

IT SUITED HER.

RICHMOND, VA., July 16.—Mayor Ainslie ordered the arrest of Miss Blossom Browning for the wearing of a slit skirt. At the police station sht contended that her gown was the fashion and suited her taste.

She retained counsel to fight the case.

NEVER HAD CAR RIDE.

BURLINGTON, N. J., July 16.—Franklin R. Frazier, 80 years old, who died here, had not set his foot outside his native town in 40 years.

He never had ridden in the local trolley cars nor in an automobile. He last visited Philadelphia prior to the Centennial Exposition.

PASTOR TO USE CHURCH TO END A "WIFE FAMINE"

Because of the alleged "husband and wife famine" in New York City, the Rev. John Gunn, for many years the popular pastor of the Central Baptist Church, of Atlanta, and later superintendent of the Industrial Home for Boys at Macon, declares he intends to establish a sort of matrimonial bureau where the young folks of his church may meet and become acquainted.

The most important question of our present-day civilization," the Rev. Mr. Gunn says, "is that of the sex relation—if the race fails in this it will fail in every other relation Therefore, he proposes to use his church as an instrument to bring about better relations among the young people of his church.

"I am going to take a personal hand in this matter," declared Rev. Gunn, who has made a close study of the social questions, "and if a young man comes to me, as many do, even in New York, and expresses a desire to make the acquaintance of a young woman in the church, I will introduce him, provided the girl is willing, and he gives me absolute assurance of good moral character and honesty of purpose.

"I am not a pessimist. I believe in the law of the survival of the fittest. Eventually we are going to get things right. None too soon are we beginning to apply scientific methods to the most vital and delicate problems of life. Love, courtship and marriage have too long been regarded as merely sentimental and accidental matters. What Cupid should do is to familiarize himself with the facts of science. We need a revival of love, marriage, home and children in the light of modern science."

"That is the reason I am talking on such subjects as 'How to Get a Husband and Keep Him,' and the like. I believe these things to be matters of vital concern demanding the sober consideration of the people."

In regard to the much-talked-of mode of dress for women, the Rev. Mr. Gunn declares he believes women should dress nicely, but modestly, as it is a well-known fact that men do admire a woman when she is really attractive. He says he does not object to women following the latest models and styles in dress, although he thinks the decollete waist and the slit skirt combined are rather extreme. Such feminine exposure, he adds, is not an aid to matrimony, for while men may be fascinated by such attire on the part of women, they do not approve of it in the case of their wives.

WORRY OVER MILEAGE.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Realizing that there is a strong possibility of the present session of Congress continuing until the regular one begins in December, members of the House to-day began to worry over the prospect of losing their mileage fees.

Under the law they are entitled to 20 cents from their home to Washington each session, an allowance of 10 cents a mile each way for their traveling expenses.

HOLDS SEVERED ARTERY.

JOLIET, ILL., July 16.—The Rev. Thomas O'Brien, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, owes his life to the prompt action of a companion who held the loose ends of a severed artery and prevented his bleeding to death.

The priest was thrown against the top of an automobile when it struck a rut in the roadway and his eyeglasses broke. The glass cut a deep gash in his face and severed a large artery.

"BOSS" COX IS FREED.

CINCINNATI, July 16.—Judge Caldwell to-day sustained the order dismissing the indictment against George B. Cox, former officer of a trust company, and ordered Cox's discharge.

This ends the case against the political leader.

SOFT END TO LONG FALL.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Mrs. Ella Koblach slipped through a hole in the fire escape balcony of her home here and fell three stories into an armchair. Her injuries were slight.

LEGISLATOR CONVICTED.

WEBSTER SPRINGS, W. VA., July 16.—Rath Duff, the second legislator on trial for bribery, was convicted this morning.

Pastor Who Plans First Aid to Cupid

THE REV. JOHN GUNN.

TURKEY TRADES ISLANDS FOR NEEDED BATTLESHIPS

ROME, July 16.—Turkey's war preparations took a new turn to-day when negotiations were concluded by which the Ottoman Government gives up several small islands in the Aegean Sea in exchange for Italian battleships.

This makes it evident that Turkey is expecting a renewal of hostilities, and as Greece is the only State in the Balkan League which has a formidable navy, the indications are that Turkey expects to go to war again with the Hellenes.

GREECE LIKELY TO GAIN.

ATHENS, July 16.—The whole northern coast of the Aegean Sea may be annexed by Greece in consequence of her present occupation of the strip, following a brilliant campaign against the Bulgarians.

Following a meeting of the Greek Cabinet to-day Premier Venizelos admitted that Greece contemplated such action. This would cut off Bulgaria, Servia and all Europe, with the exception of Greece, from the Aegean littoral and would give Greece at least 500 additional miles of seacoast.

The Bulgarians took the Aegean seaboard from the Turks at an enormous cost of human life.

KING GOES TO LEAD ARMY.

BUCHAREST, July 16.—King Charles of Roumania left to-day for the Bulgarian frontier to take command of the Roumanian army of invasion.

Although it was announced that the Roumanian army would not march upon Sofia, having entered an agreement with the Bulgarian Government on that point, it appears that the announcement was made for strategic reasons.

It is reported that Roumanian and Greek troops will march upon the Bulgarian capital without aid from the Servians unless armistice negotiations speedily come to a favorable conclusion.

A second Roumanian army has crossed the Danube into Bulgaria. Crown Prince Ferdinand will command it, and King Charles will exercise supreme command over both. It is estimated that there are now 100,000 Roumanian soldiers in Bulgaria.

TRY TO RETAKE ADRIANOPLE.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 16.—The Porte announced to-day that Turkey would try to retake Adrianople from the Bulgarians, in spite of any protests from the powers.

SHE'LL PAY HIS WAY.

YONKERS, N. Y., July 16.—Mrs. John Berger, whose husband was arrested for disorderly conduct, told the court that she would pay his way out of town if he promised not to return.

The court suspended sentence and Mrs. Berger presented her spouse with a railroad ticket.

GERMANY TELLS UNCLE SAM TO END REVOLT IN MEXICO

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The summoning of Ambassador Wilson to Washington to discuss the Mexican situation, it was stated at the White House to-day, was the direct result of a formal demand by Germany that the United States take some immediate step to quiet the disturbance south of the Rio Grande.

Germany, it was learned to-day, has filed a note, drafted by Count Von Heimhusen, counselor of the German Embassy, demanding that the United States do something to protect foreigners in Mexico.

The German Foreign Office does not care whether the administration recognizes the Huerta Government or whether the United States actively intervenes in Mexico.

It was stated merely, in the most emphatic of terms, that Germany demands protection for her subjects and their property and that it is the duty of the United States to provide protection inasmuch as the Monroe Doctrine prohibits European nations from landing troops on the soil of the Western Hemisphere.

It is believed here that Germany's note is only the first of a series of other diplomatic utterances from Europe—notes which will either embroil the United States with Mexico or jeopardize the vitality of the Monroe Doctrine.

The administration is frankly alarmed at the latest developments in the Mexican question, and at the seriousness of the problem now presented.

Ambassador Wilson has been sent for, therefore, to discuss whether it would be better to renounce the administration's Mexican policy and recognize President Huerta, or to intervene south of the border.

The Ambassador is expected by Saturday and on his conference with the President and Secretary Bryan will depend whether the United States is plunged into war with Mexico or whether it will continue its policy of non-intervention at the risk of offending the European nations.

"I do not know whether matters in Mexico are serious or sot," said Senator Bacon, of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, on his return to the Capitol from the White House. "I am not fully enough informed upon affairs in that country to give out a statement.

"If anything is to be said, it will probably come from the State Department or President Wilson. Ambassador Wilson was asked to return to Washington to talk matters over with the administration. Naturally this can be done better at first hand than by telegraph or letter."

The United States not only has a strong force of troops on the Mexican border at the present time, but three battleships of the near dreadnought type, the Minnesota, South Carolina and New Hampshire, now are on the Atlantic Coast of Mexico, dividing their time between Tampico and Vera Cruz, and three gunboats are on the Pacific Coast at Guayamas—the Pittsburg, Glacier and Denver.

There are now approximately 16,000 troops on the Mexican border, 12,000 near Galveston, and the United States could rush at least 20,000 more into the turbulent Republic if necessary. To undertake the subjugation of Mexico so that all its mountain and rural districts would be free of bandit and guerrilla groups would require an expeditionary force of at least 250,000 men, according to the estimate of military experts.

That it would be the greatest military undertaking the United States has had to assume since the war between the States goes without saying. Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt announced recently that Galveston would hereafter be used as a naval base so that battleships could be rushed to Vera Cruz or Tampico on short notice. It is expected that a considerable portion of the North Atlantic fleet would be ordered to Caribbean waters within the next week.

CHICKENS FIND GOLD.

SANTA MONICA, July 16.—J. B. Van Winkle, a realty operator of the San Vicente-Santa Monica district, recently made an excavation during the enlargement of a garage. A number of chickens scratched around in the new dirt.

Yesterday Mr. Van Winkle's mother, while dressing one of the chickens, found nuggets which, when assayed and weighed, were valued by a local jeweler at $5.

CRUSHES MAN'S SKULL.

LOUISVILLE, KY., July 16.—Unconscious and with his skull crushed, Alfred Attebury, a Louisville grocer, is in a local hospital, the victim of a peculiar accident.

Attebury was sitting in front of his store when the wheels of an automobile, running swiftly along the street, caught up a stone about five inches in diameter and hurled it against his head. iHs skull wsa fractured.

TOWN BAKED BY SUN.

WARSAW, OHIO, July 16.—With the thermometer about 100 in the shade, there is in the heart of this city a mountain of ice, 100 feet long, 100 feet wide and 25 feet high. The ice is what remains after the burning of the Marion Ice Company's big house.

The ice has been covered with hay and sawdust in the hope of saving part of it.

WITNESS TO SON'S DEATH.

CHICO, CAL., July 16.—Standing in the doorway of her home, 2 miles from here, Mrs. Thaddeus Kerns saw her son, Thaddeus Kerns, Jr., fall to his death in the wreckage of his aeroplane.

Kerns was completing a pleasure flight of several miles and was descending in a field when the lower plane of his machine collapsed.

NEWS OF THURSDAY, JULY 17, 1913

SAYS TARIFF CONDITIONS DRIVE PLANTS TO CANADA

BOSTON, July 17.—Governor Foss of Massachusetts, who recently announced that a corporation in which he was interested would be moved to Canada because of the Government's policy on reciprocity, has made public a second statement, giving a list of corporations that moved across the border because of tariff conditions. In part he says:

"The movement is going on quietly. Among the big corporations which have built plants in Canada are the General Electric Company, the Westinghouse Company, the Oliver Chilled Plow Company, the International Harvester Company, the American Locomotive Company, the American Blower Company, the Buffalo Forge Company and the Plymouth Cordage Company.

"To complete the list would be impossible, for in many instances the establishments of these factories is not announced and not made a matter of official record. I find that up to January 1, 1913, approximately 175 American companies had established themselves.

"The American Blower Company, the principal competitor of the B. F. Sturtevant Company, built a great plant at Windsor, Ont., two years ago. Secretary of Commerce Redfield, until his appointment to the Cabinet, was vice president of the American Blower Company.

"The recorded amounts of capital invested in the American factories across the border is $279,000,000.

"In many instances the plants which our manufacturers are establishing in Canada are directly owned and financed by the parent concern in this country, and in some instances even the pay roll is met by weekly shipments of funds from the American parent concern to its branches in Canada.

"I believe it conservative to say that $500,000,000 has been poured into Canada for the upbuilding of plants owned in the United States. The development of Canada in the next 25 years will be greater than that of the United States.

"The trouble with Republicans is that they are too selfish. The Democrats are going to the other extreme. The Democrats are giving away our markets and getting nothing in return.

"I have received many letters from business men commending me for my frankness, and I believe that my example in going to Canada will be followed by many others unless the politicians get busy before it is too late."

LAKE VESSELS LOST.

CHICAGO, July 17.—The lives of many passengers on the Goodrich steamship Iowa were endangered at 8 o'clock this morning when the big lake liner was rammed by her sister ship Sheboygan at the mouth of the Chicago River. The Iowa was stove in from her rail to 5 feet below the water line. The Sheboygan also wrecked her bow.

After the passengers and crew of the Iowa had been landed and a part of her cargo had been carried off, the vessel went to the bottom of the Chicago River with $60,000 worth of cargo still on board.

BALLOON NAMED RACE VICTOR.

NEW YORK, July 17.—It was unofficially announced to-day by Secretary Dolan, of the Aero Club of America, that R. A. Upson, in the Goodyear, had won the recent elimination balloon race from Kansas City. Upson's landing place, West Branch, Mich., was 660 miles from the starting point, and his elapsed time was 19 hours 52 minutes.

The second and third men, according to the unofficial announcement, are John Watts, in the Kansas City, and H. E. Honeywell, in The Kansas City Post.

COTTON FUTURES TAX.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Claiming that section 3 of the Underwood tariff bill, which places a tax on cotton futures, threatens to destroy the cotton industry in the United States, David H. Miller and A. R. Marsh, of the New York Cotton Exchange, to-day appealed to President Wilson to modify the section.

The President said he would discuss the matter with Representative Underwood and other Congressmen who had been assisting in framing the bill.

TAKES GIRL OUTCAST IN HOME.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 17.—Eugene Debs, the Socialist leader, has taken a girl outcast into his home from the city jail. He says she must be received by his friends as "one of his children."

The girl is Helen Cox, daughter of a Methodist minister. She eloped, was divorced, and had been warned by the police to keep off the streets or go to the tenderloin.

LOSES BODY OF WIFE.

NEW YORK, July 17.—A man who remarries after the death of his wife severs relationship with the dead woman and therefore has no control over her body.

So ruled Justice Philbin here in deciding that G. B. Stone could not remove the body of his former wife from a plot in Woodlawn Cemetery to a single grave, in order that he might sell the plot.

A HEAVY CORPSE.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., July 17.—A block and tackle were used to lower the coffin of Mrs. Veza Michanski, 88, from the third floor of her home here. The woman weighed about 500 pounds. The coffin and the body weighed about 800 pounds.

It was necessary also to use a block and tackle to lower the body into the grave.

AMBASSADOR WHO IS CALLED FROM MEXICO

HENRY LA NE WILSON.

U. S. TO REMOVE WILSON FROM POST IN MEXICO

WASHINGTON, July 17.—That Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson, now on his way from Mexico City to Washington, never will return to Mexico as the representative of the United States, was stated authoritatively at the White House to-day.

While the Administration is opposed to any act which might be taken as a recognition of the Huerta regime, it is believed that the sudden crisis in Mexican affairs will force Washington to accept Ambassador Wilson's resignation and to appoint his successor within a short time.

Formal recognition of the Huerta Government would be required if the United States were to send an Ambassador to Mexico as a successor of Henry Lane Wilson. This was asserted by State Department officials to-day, who added that there is no way in which the United States can change its attitude toward Mexico at the present time without involving a formal and valid recognition of General Huerta.

There is no middle ground on which the United States could stand, so as to "save its face" in its present embarrassment and at the same time yield to the pressure now being placed upon it by certain European powers.

SOOTHE NERVES WITH CIGARS.

LONDON, July 17.—Copying the customs of certain parts of the Continent, society women here are taking to cigar-smoking. When the fashionable woman soothes her nerves now she does not do it with cigarettes, but with a strong, black cigar.

Queen Mary, who objects to women smoking and drinking, is horrified at the inroads which cigar-smoking is making in court circles.

TO HOLD COTTON CARNIVAL.

GALVESTON, TEXAS, July 17.—On July 24 the Fifth Annual Cotton Carnival will open in this city for eleven days. The art display will be one of the greatest features, with famous paintings valued at more than $75,000.

The Panama Canal model has been secured and this exhibit will show the different parts of the canal in working order.

GETS RICH IN ASYLUM.

DANVILLE, ILL., July 17.—William Silcox, inmate of the Danville Hospital for the Insane for the last twenty years, has started habeas corpus proceedings through his attorney to obtain his liberty.

He testified that during his incarceration in the asylum he had saved several thousand dollars which he earned by solving newspaper puzzles and loaning money.

PHYSICIAN DROPS DEAD.

LAFAYETTE.—Dr. William McWilliams dropped dead at Greenbush late yesterday. He was a prominent citizen, age 55, and unmarried.

MULHALL HEARD THAT T. R. KNUCKLED TO WALL STREET

WASHINGTON, July 17.—With half a carload of account books and files of the National Association of Manufacturers, and 20,000 letters and telegrams made public by M. M. Mulhall, the Overman Lobby Inquiry Committee to-day found itself for the first time in a position to ascertain the whole truth concerning the methods of manufacturers in controlling elections and legislation.

The new mass of testimony is expected to furnish proof or refutation of Mulhall's personal accusations and insinuations.

A letter from Judge William R. Speer, of the Hudson County, N. J., District Court, to former Governor J. Franklin Fort of New Jersey, introducing Colonel Mulhall, was exhibited by the committee. Speer is a nephew of John Kirby, former president of the Manufacturers' Association.

On April 28, 1908, the late Vice President Sherman wrote to Mulhall that it was impossible to get the Littlefield compulsory pilotage bill through the House. Sherman was provoked at the tariff agitation of the National Association, and said it might lead to the election of a Democratic President. Sherman also was angry at the newspaper fight against Speaker Cannon's candidacy for the presidential nomination.

At that time Representative James Watson, of Indiana, according to a letter written by Mulhall, "had a great notion to take the floor before Congress adjourned and expose the whole dirty piece of trickery from start to finish," referring to a statement that the White House, meaning President Roosevelt, was responsible for the newspaper campaign against Cannon.

"Watson states that the President is moving heaven and earth to nominate Taft," wrote Mulhall; "that he is willing to sacrifice the Sherman law and every other law to please the trusts and to please Wall Street, so that he can get their support for his candidate at Chicago."

Colonel Mulhall testified that he had paid money to Henry Neal, Speaker Clark's negro messenger, for "small favors, such as getting people in and out of the Speaker's office."

"I learned," wrote Mulhall, "while at Senator Foraker's home, that the opposition to the President (Roosevelt) intends to let no legislation through which he wishes at this session of Congress, and intends to fight the Taft forces to a finish.

"I met Mr. Beveridge and called his attention to promises he made to Mr. Parry and others in India in regard to the class legislation. Mr. Beveridge told me that he stood strongly in favor of the injunction bill the President wanted."

IT'S A GIRL.

LONDON, July 17.—Lady Maidstone's baby, which was born Sunday, is a girl. The first announcement of the birth said the child was a boy.

GREECE ASKS THE POWERS TO PENALIZE BULGARIA

LONDON, July 17.—A Sofia telegram was received this afternoon from Dr. Daneff, former Bulgarian premier, saying a Turkish army is advancing upon the defenses of Adrianople.

AFTER BULGARIA.

ATHENS, July 17.—Premier Venizelos of Greece is preparing a communication to the world powers demanding, in the name of humanity, that the name of Bulgaria be struck off the list of civilized nations which signed The Hague Convention.

The Greek Premier deciared to-day that the document will be forwarded to the various capitals without delay. The demand has resulted from a remarkable expose of Bulgarian atrocities in Southern Macedonia, sent here by King Constantine.

In conclusion, the Greek King declared that the war will go forward. Among the facts recounted by King Constantine relative to the barbarity of the Bulgarians were the following:

At Demir Hissar the Greek Catholic Metropolitan and two priests were tortured to death. Refugees were burned alive at Doiran.

During the retreat of the Bulgarians women and children were bound and left helpless in their homes to die of starvation. In other instances houses were fired and the defenseless ones were burned to death.

"PEACE" CABINET" DEMAND.

SOFIA, July 17.—Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria has demanded that the next ministry be a "peace cabinet" and M. Malinoff to-day was intrusted with the task of forming a cabinet to succeed the one which resigned yesterday. Dr. Daneff, former Premier, declined it.

"I could not count upon the friendship of Russia," declared Dr. Daneff. "Russia has professed eagerness to see peace in the Balkans, but is doing little or nothing, and we are at the mercy of the powers."

Communication between this city and Varna was cut off by the Roumanians, who tore up railroad tracks and cut telegraph and telephone lines. The only communication with the outside world now is by way of Bucharest and Belgrade.

TURKISH ARMY IN CAMP.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 17.—The Turkish army which occupied Lule Burgas, over the Enos-Midia line, moved on toward Baba Eski today. Baba Eski is 40 miles southeast of Adrianople, and was the scene of a bloody battle during the Turco-Balkan war.

WOMEN O. K. BAN.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The new excise law, which prohibits drinking by women in public places, has greatly interested Washington society. Such prominent leaders as Mrs. Thomas P. Gore, wife of the Oklahoma Senator; Mrs. William Haywood and Mrs. A. S. Burleson, wife of the Postmaster General, express their approval of the new rule. Mrs. Gore said that public indulgence by women in liquor has become a national menace.

297TH VICTIM OF AVIATION.

SALISBURY, ENGLAND, July 17. Major Hewitson, an English army aviator, was killed to-day while making a test flight over the military aerodrome on Salisbury Plain. The machine collapsed in mid-air and fell to earth. The petrol tank exploded, setting the wreckage on fire.

Major Hewitson is the 297th victim of aviation.

FOLSOM GIVES UP OFFICE.

ROCHESTER, July 17.—C. E. Folsom, of Atlanta, retired from the chairmanship of the executive committee of the American Optical Association at the annual convention here.

NEWS OF FRIDAY, JULY 18, 1913

PINKERTONS TRACK MINCEY; POLICE HALT CONLEY GRILL

With Pinkerton detectives taking the trail in search of W. H. Mincey, whose startling accusations against Jim Conley stirred the police department and won the negro another "sweating" from Solicitor Dorsey, the Mincey affidavit Friday became the storm center about which the prosecution and defense in the Frank case waged their battle.

Despite the degree of indifference with which the detectives and prosecuting officials affected to look upon the remarkable statements of Mincey, it became known Friday that every effort was being bent toward locating him and turning the light on his past history.

It is understood that the Pinkertons have obtained information of Mincey's whereabouts, as it has been known since The Georgian published its exclusive story of the affidavit and later Mincey's detailed account of the significant happenings on the day of the murder that he was teaching school in North Georgia.

Although Solicitor Dorsey professes to be not greatly concerned over the effect that the Mincey affidavit may have in his case against Leo M. Frank, it is reported that his office is gathering character witnesses for an attack on Mincey's credibility.

Developments since the publication of the affidavit indicate that the prosecution feels it must absolutely discredit Mincey and his story if there is to be any hope of obtaining a conviction aaginst Frank.

Harry Scott, Pinkerton detective, was denied permission to talk with Jim Conley Friday morning when he went to the police station to see if he could wring any additional admissions from the negro. From the fact that Scott has been working in entire harmony with the city detective department up to this time, this incident led to the rumor that Scott had changed his theory of the crime and was inclined to place the responsibility upon Conley.

Scott refused to say to what extent his theories had been altered, if at all. Chief of Detectives Lanford explained that he had full confidence in Scott, but that the Pinkerton was in the position where he had to report all of his findings to the defense and he did not wish Scott to see Conley in these circumstances.

Attorneys for the defense said in regard to the report that the case might again be postponed, that they knew of no reason why it could not go to trial July 28, the date set by Judge L. S. Roan. They said that their side of the case was complete and that they were prepared to present it to a jury at any time.

As bitter a fight as that brought on by the Mincey affidavit is being waged by the members of the Grand Jury and the Solicitor over the question of investigating Jim Conley's connection with the Phagan murder, with a view of bringing an indictment. A number of the members are said to have declared themselves in favor of reopening the case because of the mass of evidence that has piled up against the negro since he confessed to being in the factory on the day of the crime.

The Solicitor, however, is unalterably opposed to any movement looking toward the indictment of the negro.

JUMPS ON A DARE.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 18.—A pretty girl visitor late last night jumped from the steel pier into the ocean. She was attired in ballroom costume. She was hauled out of the water and whisked away in a waiting automobile.

After an all-day investigation, the police have learned that the girl made a bet on the beach with members of her "crowd" that she would make the leap. The forfeit was a theater party and champagne supper if she didn't do it before midnight. She won.

SENATOR HOKE SMITH SPEAKS.

United States Senator Hoke Smith addressed the two bodies of the Georgia Legislature in joint session at noon Friday in the house.

Conspicuous throughout his address was the strong defense of the national administration, the keynote of which was prophetic of a period of unequaled prosperity throughout the Wilson regime.

Senator Smith declared that the Democrats to-day have enough votes in the Senate to pass the tariff bill. He said that nothwithstanding the cuts made by the national House, the Senate had cut still deeper, and made additions to the free list.

NEGRO RUNS WILD.

CHICAGO, July 18.—Members of the Board of Trade to-day were thrown into a panic when a negro employee went insane.

Shouting and threatening to kill anyone who tried to stop him, the wild negro rushed through the corridors waving a revolver. A squad of policemen arrived after three brokers had overpowered the maniac.

THEY QUIT MEAT.

NEWINGTON, CONN., July 18.—Residents of this town have decided to quit eating meat until there is a fall in the price. Vegetables will be the standby.

As a result of the boycott several butchers have been forced to close up shop.

BUY AVAILABLE RADIUM.

LONDON, July 18.—It is reported that the German emissaries who came to London seeking radium have bought every available gramme of the British supply, which is only an eighth of the quantity wanted. They paid cash down.

The present price of radium is equivalent to $2,400,000 an ounce.

LARGEST WHEAT CARGO.

DULUTH, MINN., July 18.—The largest cargo of wheat ever loaded at the American head of the lakes was taken out on the steamer William P. Snyder—464,000 bushels.

"LOBBY" IS CHARGED WITH SWINGING SALOON VOTE

WASHINGTON, July 18.—How the National Association of Manufacturers lined up the brewers and saloon men of Indiana for the Republicans and Representative James E. Watson in his campaign for Governor was told in a letter written by Colonel Mulhall to F. C. Schwedtman, secretary to President Van Cleave, and read before the Overman lobby investigating committee to-day.

Watson, according to Mulhall's letter, was not so much afraid of the 30,000 votes the brewers could swing against him as he was of the $250,000 they would put into the last part of the campaign.

Accordinf to another letter Mulhall, the field agent of the "invisible government," assured "Uncle Joe Cannon that reports that the association was fighting him were false, and that the association was firmly supporting him.

Mulhall declared he helped Representatives Henry C. Coudrey and Richard Bartholdt, of Missouri, who were re-elected by narrow margins, and also asserted he thought the association deserved the credit for their victories.

Edward Hines, of Chicago, said to have boasted that he "put Lorimer over," came in for notice in connection with a telegram to Mulhall in which he appealed for $1,000 to aid Representative Jenkins, of Wisconsin and offered to supervise the spending of this sum.

"I don't consider Teddy, nor Taft, nor Sherman, nor Foraker equal to VanCleave, Parry, Kirby and the others who have given freely of their energy and their money to the great cause expressed in the principles of the National Association of Manufacturers," wrote Schwedtman to Mulhall August 28.

"There will come a time when the world will know that the Parrys and the VanCleaves of to-day are like John the Baptist of old, speaking thoughtfully of events to come and condemning fearlessly the present wrongs, clearing the way for righteousness and honesty."

In an effort to prevent an enormous waste of time, the committee assigned clerks to examine the 123,000 letters in the file the association turned over to the committee, to cull out those letters which have the greatest bearing on the inquiry. It is proposed to keep Mulhall on the stand until all of the material correspondence has become a part of the record.

DECLARE HE WAS INSANE.

That Joshua B. Crawford was insane at the time he married Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford and had been entirely irresponsible for several months prior to that time, was the testimony of Dr. R. R. Kimes, expert on insanity and abdominal surgery, introduced by Attorney Joe S. James Friday morning in his effort to have the marriage annulled and the $250,000 estate revert to the heirs-at-law.

Dr. Kimes rendered his opinion in reply to a long hypothetical question and was excused without cross-examination.

During the taking of testimony another clash in the courtroom was narrowly averted. George W. Bolden, a character witness for Mrs. Crawford, threatened to thrash Attorney James unless he apologized for what the witness considered an insulting question. Colonel James declined to apologize and order was only restored when Colonel Anderson ordered the witness from the stand, and he was escorted from the courtroom by the lawyers.

"How do you know that Mrs. Crawford is a lady?" interrogated Attorney James.

"I demand that you apologize immediately for asking such a question," exclaimed Bolden.

"I will not apologize. I do not intend to take back anything that I say."

"You will take it back or I will make you, if I have to beat you to do it."

"You are at liberty to try that at any time you see fit."

Colonel Anderson, who had rapped several times for order, stepped between the attorney and the witness just as the latter got from his seat and started toward the attorney.

NOT EVEN A FIG LEAF.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 18.—Not even a smile covered John Dougherty early to-day as he sat in the rear of 233 East Washington street, a square from police headquarters.

He didn't seem to realize that he was shocking the neighborhood. He sat on a box swinging his heels. It might have been the Garden of Eden and he might have been Adam, without even a fig leaf.

In a covering of wrapper paper he was taken to police headquarters charged with "loitering."

It was a hot night.

MRS. HUNTINGTON WEDS.

PARIS, July 18.—Mrs. Arabella D. Huntington, widow of the late Collis P. Huntington, the multi-millionaire American railroad builder, was married in the American Church to Henry E. Huntington, a railroad man, of New York and Los Angeles, Cal.

The bridegroom is a nephew of his wife's first husband.

DIES FROM OVERWORK.

LEXINGTON, July 18.—James Garrard White, aged 67, vice president of Kentucky State University and the last member of the original faculty, having completed his forty-fifth year in June, died to-day of stomach trouble caused by overwork at the university.

COMEDIAN IS FOUND.

CHATTANOOGA, July 18.—Raymond Hitchcock, the comedian, was discovered to-day in a summer retreat on Waldens Ridge. The actor has been in the mountains near here for a week.

ACCUSED WIFE IS RIDDEN ON RAIL BY BAND OF WOMEN

POLO, ILL., July 18.—Suspicious that Mrs. Minnie Richardson, wife of the crippled keeper of a general store here, was more than friendly with her brother-in-law, Will Dunnill, the village stonemason, a band of women of the village kidnaped Mrs. Richardson from her home, rode her on a rail through the town and dumped her in a mud puddle.

After the mud bath they gave her 24 hours to leave the village. Richardson mortgaged his store for $1,500 and gave her money to pay her railroad fare.

When the men of the town went to Dunnill's home, he was not there and his wife said he had left the town. She had mortgaged her home to get money for him.

Mrs. Peter Stansfield, wife of the blacksmith, who was captain of the women "vigilantes," said that the conduct of Mrs. Richardson and Dunnill had been the subject of comment for nearly a year.

The women planned to capture Mrs. Richardson and the men were to take Dunnill, and the rail-riding party was to be a "double-header." The men failed to find their victim and Mrs. Richardson rode alone. The men stood on the sidewalks and cheered.

For ten years Richardson, who is a paralytic, has gone about in a wheel chair. He said to-day:

"They were pretty rough on my wife, but I guess she had not done right. I don't believe she will ever come back."

WILSON ASKS FOR DATA.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—In preparation for the arrival of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson, now on his way from Mexico, President Wilson to-day requested the State Department to furnish him with all the information relative to the troubles in Mexico from the beginning of the Madero revolt.

This mass of material the President intends to read thoroughly, so he will be informed as to all the developments of the Mexican situation before the arrival of Ambassador Wilson.

Secretary Bryan, who returned from the first lap of his Chautauqua lecture tour this morning, called on the President, bringing a large bundle of telegrams and correspondence.

They included dispatches from William Bayard Hale, President Wilson's personal representative in Mexico City, who does not consider the Huerta regime stable, and has advised against recognition.

Suspicions of the sincerity of the representations made by several European nations have been raised in Washington by the trail of high finance running through them all. Allegations are made that the crisis is nothing more nor less than a "bondholders' conspiracy" engineered from Paris.

"PROMOTER" IS ARRESTED.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Edmund Willcox, accused by the Government as a "get-rich-quick Wallingford" in real life, but who claims he has reformed and has been leading a new life with his wife and three children in a modest East Side apartment, was arrested to-day by postoffice inspectors.

Until two years ago Willcox had an office in the Metropolitan Tower, where he posed as a promoter of railroads, banks and mills. When he learned that any new company was being formed, he wrote to the promoters offering to float the stock. After obtaining a retaining fee, it is alleged, nothing more was heard from him.

The specific charge against him is that he obtained $1,000 from Comer L. Peck, of Starke, Fla., who operated a 38-mile railroad line between his home town and Jacksonville.

Willcox claimed, according to the Government charges, that one of his clients, Colonel James M. Smith, of Smithonia, Ga., who owns 100,000 acres of land in Florida, had been persuaded by him to buy 20,000 shares of stock of the Central Bank and Trust Company of Georgia, at $102 a share. Colonel Smith denied that he knew Willcox, and the Government began an investigation.

HUSBAND WAS DEAD.

KENOSHA, WIS., July 18.—Mrs. Frank J. Eaton, while riding with her husband, felt the automobile turn from the roadway as they were going 25 miles an hour. She saw her husband was not holding the wheel. Catching it as the car was on the edge of an embankment, she brought the machine back into the roadway and stopped it.

Her husband had died of heart disease.

WOMEN CONVICT WOMAN.

PETALUMA, CAL., July 18.—A jury of twelve women convicted a woman, Mrs. W. S. Waldorf, upon a charge of battery here. This is the first jury of women that ever tried a case in Sonoma County.

Mrs. Waldorf was accused of having slapped a neighbor's children. The jury was out less than an hour.

GIRL SUES VETERAN.

PATERSON, N. J., July 18.—Miss Emma Mahanney, 16, has sued John Wolf, 70, a war veteran, for breach of promise.

Miss Mahanney's counsel said the couple became engaged and were making arrangements for the wedding when Wolf changed his mind. Miss Mahanney asks for $25,000.

IS POISONED BY CREAM.

MARINETTE, WIS., July 18.—After surprising the medical world by recovering, after his neck was broken in a runaway accident several weeks ago, Hiram Reeves, head of a rural telephone company at Oconto, is dying of ptomaine poisoning from eating ice cream.

HOUSE RATES ARE SLASHED IN TARIFF BILL IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The report to Senator Simmons, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee on the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill as amended by the Senate, was placed before the Upper House at noon today, and debate on the measure immediately was begun.

The report is largely devoted to defense of the Senate Democrats' action in reducing rates under the original House measure and to extensive tables showing the percentage and effect of these rates.

In a brief introduction, Senator Simmons declares that the Senate bill, if enacted into law, "will result in an equitable distribution of burdens and incidental benefits of the Payne-Aldrich system of customs taxation that will tend to disintegrate monopolies built up under a protective tariff; that will reduce the cost of living; that will increase the opportunities of the individual citizen and relieve the people from the burdens of a former scheme of taxation."

The Senator points out that the interests hit by the reduction of duties under the House bill are in almost every instance trusts which have grown rich under a high protective tariff. Among these are the steel, aluminum, cement, callera, asphalt, Standard Oil, sugar, wool and paper trusts.

To counteract the millions in import revenue lost to the Government through the admission of foreign markets under a free list or reduced rate of tariff, taxes have been placed upon bananas solely controlled by a trust, upon gambling in cotton futures, upon the incomes of the rich, upon brandies used in fortifying wines and upon luxuries in general.

The total outcome of the Senate tariff labors is a decrease of 27.64 per cent under the Payne-Aldrich tariff rates and of 4.22 per cent under the House tariff rates. Nevertheless, the report predicts that the business of the Government will be run at a profit.

The official figures, based upon compilations of Treasury experts for the fiscal year 1913, place the total revenue, exclusive of the possible revenue from the Panama Canal, the sinking fund and the national bank note redemption fund, at $996,810,000, against an estimated disbursement of $994,790,000 for the same period. This would leave a surplus of $2,020,000.

Concerning the steel schedule the report says:

"Judged by all available tests, the American iron and steel industry is fully able to sustain itself without Government aid. It has unrivaled supplies of raw material; it has the use of abundant capital; it is able to export in competition with foreign countries; and the industry has the advantage of low costs. For all these reasons it may be regarded as well fitted as an industry, capable of standing tariff rates figured on a strict revenue-producing basis."

COMMENT ON BRYAN.

LONDON, July 18.—The Standard prints an editorial on "Politicians and Their Pay" this morning, in which it refers to the statement of William Jennings Bryan, the American Secretary of State, that he can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year. The Standard says:

"The poor man's champion has discovered that he can not subsist satisfactorily on $12,000 a year. A good many people in a good many countries manage to be comfortable on less than that amount, but since Mr. Bryan first took up socialism as a profession he has done well on the lecture platform.

"He has been making $15,000 every year by denouncing the idle rich. If the Union can not pay the same scale he proposes to increase his emoluments by private exertions, so he will go on tour again."

STANLEY'S SON IS DEAD.

SAULT STE MARIE, July 18.—Jack Stanley, 39, son of the famous explorer, Sir Henry M. Stanley, died here to-day in a lodging house from tuberculosis.

As death hovered near the dying man, he whispered a secret which he had shared only with his wife, formerly Mrs. Violet Lancaster, of Detroit, whom he married on the stage of the Odean Theater, Clarksburg, W. Va., four years ago.

"I am the son of Sir Henry M. Stanley, the famous explorer. Tell mother." With these words he sank into subconsciousness.

WON'T LET HER MARRY.

Despite the pleadings of his aged mother and of Effie Drummond, the girl in the case, who asked that she be allowed to marry him, Joe North, caught by Chief Beavers' vice squad in a raid on the boarding house of Mrs. Lulu Bell at Fair and Peters streets, was held to the Grand Jury by Judge Broyles Thursday, in the sum of $200. The charge, which from the first story told by the Drummond woman, promised to develop into white slavery, was changed to disorderly conduct.

INSURANCE MEN MEET.

MILWAUKEE, July 18.—Sixty men, all prominent in the insurance business, from all parts of the country, were ill to-day following a banquet given during an insurance convention here.

Three varieties of cold fish—pike, salmon and white—were served at the banquet, and it was believed that one of these caused ptomaine poisoning.

CANCER FREE TREATISE
The Leach Sanatorium, Indianapolis, Ind., has published a booklet which gives interesting facts about the cause of Cancer, also tells what to do for pain, bleeding, order, etc. Write for it today, mentioning this paper.

NEWS OF SATURDAY, JULY 19, 1913

U. S. SECRETS TAKEN FROM WIRES BY MEXICO

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A copy of the official code of the State Department, containing information worth thousands of dollars to foreign governments, has fallen into the hands of the Mexican Administration.

It is being used to further the ends of the Huerta regime, it was asserted here to-day.

For some months State Department officials have suspected that the Government telegrams from Mexico City have been tampered with, it is declared, but this was not considered important, as all the dispatches were in code, and, therefore, theoretically illegible.

About three weeks ago, however, Government officials here had their first inkling that the Mexicans were obtaining the gist of the dispatches passing between the State Department and Ambassador Wilson.

At first it was suspected that an employee of the department in this city was to blame, but investigation proved this to be impossible. The telegrams were read only by three persons in Washington—the official telegrapher; Robert Rose, confidential secretary to Secretary of State Bryan, and the Secretary of State himself. All of these were above suspicion.

The agents of the almost unknown "secret service" of the State Department then were put on the trail and evidence was obtained that the Government dispatches had been "lifted" from the wires in Mexico and decoded, the information contained therein being transmitted to President Huerta and his Cabinet.

As this information was, at times, highly uncomplimentary to the present Government in Mexico, the matter at once took on an international aspect, and the efforts of the department's agents to discover the "leak" were redoubled, but in vain.

Every effort will be made to locate the copy of the State Department code and destroy it. It would prove of immense value if it fell into the hands of a hostile nation, as it would be impossible to print another code and to distribute it all over the world in less than six months.

ITALY ORDERS MINISTER HOME.

MEXICO CITY, July 19.—It was learned to-day that the Italian Minister to Mexico secretly left here last night for Vera Cruz. Significance is attached to his departure, as it is believed he was urgently ordered to Rome.

This action is doubly impressive on account of the fact that Francis Stronge, the British Minister, has been succeeded by another and will leave here for London in a few days.

Mexico is becoming the storm center of international diplomacy apparently because of the attitude of the United States and the condition of growing anarchy here.

THINKS HE WILL LOSE POST.

MEXICO CITY, July 19.—Despite the statement of United States Ambassador Wilson that he expects to return here in his official capacity following his conference at Washington, it was learned to-day that the Ambassador secretly believes his days in officialdom are numbered.

Before his departure he ordered the removal of a costly silver service and other valuables from the United States Embassy to a United States warship at Vera Cruz. The families of some of the American attaches of the embassy have been sent to Vera Cruz for safety.

Interest was aroused by the announcement that the Minister of the Interior is working up a plan to concede a big part of the State of Morelos to 50,000 Japanese colonists.

$100,000,000 MERCHANDISE IN NE WYORK WAREHOUSES

NEW YORK, July 19.—More than $100,000,000 worth of merchandise is stored in the bonded warehouses of Greater New York to-day. Never on the face of the globe has there ever before been such an aggregation of everything that the soil yields and human industry produces.

The 56 great bonded warehouses are gorged almost to bursting with silks teas, coffees, spices, oils, rugs, carpets, toys, textile fabrics, knit goods, glassware and pottery, jute, hemp, wool, chemicals—with everything in which the merchants of the world trade.

More than 200,000 tons of sugar, worth over $12,000,000, are in bond. The New York Stock Company alone has 80,000 bags of coffee; its warehouses, with a capacity of 81,000,000 cubic feet, are filled.

Of this $100,000,000 worth of imports $70,000,000 is held pending changes in the tariff; $30,000,000 is made up of working stock which the great industrial plants must use immediately and of goods that come in free. The duties on the $70,000,000 worth that is being held deliberately in bond amount to $35,000,000 under the present tariff law. The owners are waiting to see how much of this $35,000,000 benevolent Uncle Sam will "knock off."

When the new bill becomes law millions of dollars a day will be paid into the Custom House and to railroads, and coasting vessels will be offered an enormous amount of freight. The importer who has his goods on hand will have a great advantage over competitors.

LIVES ON HIS SALARY.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—While Secretary of State Bryan is reported to be having a hard time to live on $12,000 a year, Secretary of Labor Wilson to-day arranged to purchase a seven-passenger touring car.

The Secretary of Labor declares he can live with ease on his salary as a Cabinet officer.

DEBS AIDS 'MAGDALEN;' REBUKES PHARISEES

HELEN COX

Socialist Leader Takes Into His Home Disgraced Daughter of a Mehtodist Minister.

TERRE HAUTE IND., July 19.—Eugene V. Debs, the Socialist leader, has issued what he terms his "challenge to the Christianity of Terre Haute."

He has taken into his home in the Indiana city Helen Cox, the daughter of a Methodist preacher. She had eloped with a member of a prominent family who divorced her and took their child. She was arrested for immorality. Debs met her on a visit to the jail and, as an emergency probation officer, took her into his home.

"The girl has been persecuted," he announced publicly. "Will Terre Haute help her or will its organized force be used to drive her to desperation? Let Terre Haute ask 'What would Christ do? Our family has opened our home to her.

"There is but one thing remarkable about opening our home to an unfortunate woman," he said later, when his action aroused widespread comment, "and it is that any one should consider it remarkable. This fact is significant. Persecution of these unfortunate girls is the rule, and so common that it attracts no attention. Kindness is so exceptional that it provokes widespread comment.

"The sinful woman is, as a rule, not a wicked woman, but a sick and suffering woman. As to our home, its door is open to the most sinful woman that was ever cast off by the Pharisees, who denied her while profiting by her shame. We believe, my wife and I, that we are not only our brother's keeper, but our sister's keeper as well."

HAD TRANSPARENT SKIRT.

AUGUSTA, GA., July 19.—All Augusta is talking to-day of the arrest of Miss Edith Anderson, 1215 Jones street, Friday afternoon, because she appeared on Broad street, the main thoroughfare of the city, clad in a "transparent skirt," a dainty, filmy creation of lace through which twinkled stockings of a vivid green.

Miss Anderson appeared just as the afternoon dress parade was at its height. A stolid, unemotional copper stood swinging his stick on a busy corner of Broad street when Miss Anderson appeared. The copper saw the crowd coming, he saw men fighting small boys for places in the forefront, and he looked up.

"Why—why!" he stammered, mopping his fevered face. "Why—er—why—because—er—dawgone it!" He pointed downward with his nightstick, "You can't wear things like that in Augusty."

Miss Anderson smiled pityingly upon the officer, but accompanied him to headquarters.

FLIES TO CHARLESTON.

CHARLESTON, July 19.—W. S. Luckey, a Curtiss flier from New York city, who is spending a week at the Isle of Palms on Friday flew in a hydro-aeroplane from the Isle of Palms to Charleston, a distance of about 12 miles, by water, in 8 minutes, a speed of 90 miles an hour.

Luckey also skimmed across the harbor with his main float partly submerged at a rate of 45 miles an hour.

SHE FEARED POISON.

Police investigation of the burning of the home of Mrs. A. C. Klapper, at No. 256 East Hunter street, Saturday morning, for which G. A. Vaughn, an employee of the Boston Trading Company and a roomer at the Klapper home, is held on suspicion of being the incendiary, took a new and unexpected turn Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Klapper, when questioned by Detective Coker, declared that Vaughn tried to poison her one day last week.

Vaughn was taken from his cell and grilled by Detective Coker and Chief of Detectives Lanford for more than an hour Saturday morning, in the hope of getting him to admit some connection with the burning of the Klapper home. He was also asked about Mrs. Klapper's assertion that he tried to poison her.

He admitted taking her the water, but denied that there were any powders in the glass.

SLIT GOWNS FOR OLD FOLKS.

LEXINGTON, KY., July 19.—"Grown-up folks may wear slit gowns, but the young shall not," declared Judge J. P. Scott, of the Juvenile Court, here in sending Margaret Murphy, 16, to a convent for having improper guardianship. The girl was arrested while "joy riding" with a young man. She was dressed in a smart slit gown.

SAYS JURY WON'T INDICT CONLEY BEFORE FRANK TRIAL

Solicitor Dorsey expressed assurance Saturday afternoon that the Grand Jury never would indict Jim Conley before the trial of Leo M. Frank.

At the same time it became known that attorneys for the defense had made the usual move of asking that the jurors to pass on the guilt or innocence of Frank be drawn from the Grand Jury box instead of the petit jury box.

"There is no more chance that Jim Conley will be indicted," said the Solicitor, "than that the judge will accede to the remarkable request of the defense for a jury picked from the Grand Jury box."

The Solicitor already has filed a protest against the proposed procedure which the defense is said to have suggested.

"It is irregular in the extreme," said the Solicitor. "It never has been done before to my knowledge. I am not informed as to its legality. That matter I have not looked up, but I have protested against it and will fight any such move."

The Solicitor's assurance that no indictment would be brought against Conley was taken to mean that he was in possession of evidence which he believed would be sufficient effectively to deter the jurors from charging the negro with the crime.

"I can not believe that any Grand Jury, with the knowledge of the facts before it, could bring an indictment against Conley," he said.

Asked if he thought that a "no bill" on the charge of murder would be brought out against the negro, the Solicitor refused to make further comment.

He intimated, however, that he would be present at the hearing and sulted in the indictment of Leo M. Frank on the charge of slaying Mary Phagan. Solicitor Dorsey will lay before the body for the first time all of his reasons for desiring a postponement of all further investigation until after the trial of Frank.

Should the solicitor be driven back from this position by the Grand Jury again disregarding his wishes and taking up the investigation, he will be forced to take refuge in the last ditch and make his fight against the indictment of Conley.

CIVIL WAR NOW THREATENS IN REPUBLIC OF CHINA

CANTON, CHINA, July 19.—A complete severance of political relations between Northern and Southern China was proclaimed here to-day. Business is at a standstill. Revolutionary leaders are threatening to seize the Government buildings.

A British torpedo boat is proceeding to this port from Hong Kong to protect British lives and interests.

The Governor General of Kwang Tung Province has proclaimed his territory independent of the Pekin Government and declares in the same proclamation that the Provincial Council has nominated him commander-in-chief of the revolutionary army.

That United States diplomacy as well as Japanese is supporting the revolutionaries trying to overthrow President Yuan Shih Kai was claimed by leaders of the Southern rebellion.

The Pekin Government, headed by President Yuan, is receiving the support of England, Germany and France. Developments indicate that the question of the proposed $100,000,000 Chinese loan enters into the situation. England, Germany and France subscribed pro rata shares to the loan, but the United States financiers were not allowed by their Government to participate.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen, one of the leaders in the uprising which overthrew the Manchu Dynasty, and the firsct provisional President of China, and Dr. Wu Ting-fang, former Chinese Minister to the United States, are believed to be lukewarm to the rebel cause.

Dr. Sun has left for Nanking, the provisional republican capital, where he may make open declaration of his loyalty to the southerners.

President Yuan is suspected of being an imperialist at heart. The southerners want a democrat.

Wu Chang remains loyal, but revolutionary sentiment is fast growing there.

Four thousand rebels were decisively defeated by 2,000 Government forces at Hsu-Chow-Fu, north of Kiang Su.

DIG TO GAMBLERS.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 19.—Police dug through a two-foot wall and raided a gambling house on Woodland avenue early to-day. Six men were arrested.

NEWS OF SUNDAY, JULY 20, 1913

REPUBLICANS WON'T DELAY ACTION ON TARIFF BILL

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Republican Senators have served notice upon their Democratic opponents that there is to be no unnecessary delay of the Underwood-Simmons tariff revision bill. While the sharp tongue of Republican criticism and dire prediction is to be loosed throughout the tariff debate, the Republicans do not plan to add any general filibustering tactics or to attempt to hold up final action on tariff revision.

This policy has been partially outlined in the opening speech of the Republican opponents of the Administration bill, in colloquies on the floor of the Senate and in private conferences among Senators. Within the next few days a series of vigorous attacks are to be made on the general principles of the Underwood-Simmons bill, following out the lines of Senator Cummins' speech on Saturday. Senator Burton's address will be the first of these general speeches by regular Republicans.

The general denunciations will be followed by concerted attacks on certain schedules, where the Republicans insist that the new measure will mean ruin to American industries. The Democrats are prepared to meet all the Republican arguments, and will keep up the fire of debate until the Senate is ready to take up the bill section by section for amendment.

When that time arrives, it is understood to be the purpose of the Republicans to make their final fight for amendment of the bill, hoping they can break up the Democratic ranks, particularly on the sugar and wool schedules. If their efforts fail, as Democratic leaders insist they will, it is the present understanding that the Republicans will not interpose any final opposition to a vote on the bill.

Democratic leaders were hopeful to-day, with the opening of the debate out of the way, that Congress could push the tariff revision to an early enactment.

The friends and enemies of the bill have been priming for the fight for some time, and it is believed the speeches will follow in rapid succession. Senators Simmons and Kern and other Democrats who are directing the tariff program are hopeful that the Senate can complete work on the bill late in August, and that but little time will be consumed in adjusting the differences between the two Houses.

Efforts by the House Committee on Banking and Currency to perfect the Administration currency bill have failed to cause an echo of interest in the Senate.

Even the lobby investigation, which occupied the center of interest a week ago, lost much of its life during last week. The Senate committee had not considered a third of the Mulhall letters when it recessed Friday, and the newly appointed House investigators are privately wading through the mass of correspondence, trying to find a place to begin.

BLAMED BY SOCIALISTS.

SEATTLE, July 20.—Responsibility for the riots Friday night in which the headquarters of the Socialists and Industrial Workers of the World were sacked and the furniture burned in the street by mobs of civilians led b sailors from the Pacific reserve fleet, was placed on Secretary of the Navy Daniels in a memorial to President Wilson adopted by the radical wing of the Socialist party to-day. The headquarters of this branch of the Socialists was one of the places wrecked by the mob.

The memorial denounces Secretary Daniels for his speech at the Rainier Thursday night, in which he made a brief reference to patriotism and denounced the red flag and its supporters.

The memorial sets forth "the Socialist party has never advocated violence, attempted or even remotely dreamed of any act of desecration to the flag of the United States or any emblem or insignia thereof."

WIFE SHOOTS HUSBAND.

SAVANNAH, GA., July 20.—During a fight in their home in Yamacraw early this morning, Mrs. Eva Dare sent a bullet crashing over the heart of her husband, Joseph Dare. Although an operation was performed and the bullet removed it is not thought that Dare will live.

The husband made a statement before he was operated on saying that he was fighting with his wife when she shot him. He came home at 4 o'clock in the morning and she upbraided him. This precipitated the fight and shooting.

Suffering from nervous shock, the woman has not made a statement since her arrest. She is under the care of a physician.

Dare is a trainman employed by the Central of Georgia Railway Company. For an escapade in Yamacraw about a year ago Mrs. Dare was sentenced to thirty days in jail by Recorder Schwarz.

DEATH CLAIMS COOLEY.

TOPSFIELD, MASS., July 20.—Alford W. Cooley, formerly Assistant Attorney General of the United States, civil service commissioner and justice of the New Mexican Supreme Court, died of tuberculosis at his summer home last night.

In April Judge Cooley, accompanied by his family and nurses, made a 3,000-mile trip in a special car from Silver City, N. Mex., to Providence, R. I., where he was treated by Dr. Friederich F. Friedmann. Within two hours of his arrival in Providence Judge Cooley received the first treatment.

SHELBY MYRICK PUTS 'LATE' IN 'LEGISLATE'

Representative Shelby Myrick, of Chatham County.

He's the Real Eearly-and-Late Worker of the 1913 Assembly.

The thing that worries Representative Shelby Myrick, of Chatham, more than anything else in his legislative line of duty is the thought that some of these days he may run out of work as chairman of the House Committee on Constitutional Amendments.

At present, Mr. Myrick's committee meets only morning, noon and night, and the thought continually obsesses the gentleman from Chatham that it might, if it tried right hard, meet a little oftener.

All the new county propositions are thrashed out before Myrick's committee, and as there are twenty-odd new counties applying for admission, Myrick and his colleagues frequently are held far into the wee sma' hours of the morning listening to patriotic and liberty-loving sons of Georgia discussing, pro and con, the merits of the proposed Grand Young County of Somethingorother!

BARRED BY CONSCIENCE FROM FOOD OR SLUMBER

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—Declaring his conscience would not permit him to eat or sleep, Alexander S. Woods, of East St. Louis, surrendered to the police here to-day and turned over $4,000 which, he said, he had stolen from the American Express Company in that city last Tuesday.

A police patrol was about to take a prisoner to the station when Woods requested the sergeant to take him, too.

"I'm wanted in East St. Louis for taking funds from the American Express Company. Here's the stuff," said Woods as he shoved a pile of money orders and nearly $200 in cash into the hands of the astonished policeman. "I want to face the music. I want my two little girls to know that even if I made a big mistake, I have tried to make reparation."

He said a man whose note he had indorsed failed to make good, and this had worried him so much that he left East St. Louis with his pickets filled with the Express Company's money.

PERJURY BY CHILDREN.

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 20.—Rev. Marion Capps, of White Bluff, will be free to-morrow of the charge of murdering his two children, when Prosecuting Attorney Paul Little will appear in court at Greenwood and dismiss the case. This announcement was made by Little to-night.

Capps recently was convicted and sentenced to hang on a charge that he burned to death his daughters, Priscilla, 4 years olds, and Rose, 2 years old. The Supreme Court reversed the case and remanded it for new trial.

Prosecutor Little said he was forced to dismiss the case, because his strongest witnesses, Bertha Capps, 15 years old, and Ellis Capps, 14, children of the defendant, had repudiated their former stories and would testify in favor of their father at a second trial.

The children told the jury at the first trial that they were tied in an oil-soaked bed. The girl said when she discovered the fire she saw her father leave their bedroom and lock the door.

Since the conviction of their father the children have made affidavits that they swore falsely at the first trial. The girl says she testified falsely because her father opposed her marriage to a neighbor's son.

U. S. WARSHIPS WANTED TO PROTECT AMERICANS

MEXICO CITY, July 20.—Alarmed by threats of the rebels to attack the port of Frontera, on the east coast, the American Consul has asked Washington to send a gunboat. The rebels have occupied two American-owned plantations near the city and have done much damage.

AMERICANS IN DANGER.

EL PASO, TEX., July 20.—Officials of the Madero Lumber Company to-day appealed to General Francisco Castro, Federal commander in Juarez, and American Consul Thomas D. Edwards to send soldiers to protect the little band of Americans at the Madera lumber camp, 200 miles southwest of El Paso, who are reported to be threatened with massacre by Mexican bandits led by "El Mocho" Martinez.

The lumber company's officials are fearing news of the wholesale killing of their employees. They say the Americans of their district are in greater peril to-day than ever before during the three years of revolution in Chihuahua.

Messengers were dispatched on hand cars over the Northwestern Railroad to learn some news of the besieged town.

FIND WATERY GRAVES.

CINCINNATI, July 20.—Three young pleasure-seekers were drowned here to-day within view of many persons who were standing about the wharf, the victims being carried under a coal fleet so rapidly that any attempt at rescue was prevented.

The drowned are Fred Salzman, 26; Margaret Mullins, 19, and Anna Hall, 20. Salzman was taking his new launch out on its maiden trip. His engine broke down, and the launch drifted against a coal fleet, and all were drawn under.

BULGARIA NOW BEGGING HER ENEMIES FOR PEACE

LONDON, July 20.—The advent of a new Bulgarian Cabinet, comprising a coalition of the Liberal groups, seems to have brought a prospect that peace negotiations soon will be entered into.

After vain attempts to negotiate separately with Roumania, the Bulgarian Government accepted the advice of Russia and Austria and offered to Roumania an important territorial concession. Bulgaria also sent delegates to meet the Servian and Greek and presumably Roumanian reports to Nish to negotiate an armistice and peace. M. Radoslavoff, Liberal leader, is the new Bulgarian Premier.

It is confirmed from Athens that Servia, Greece and Montenegro are ready to participate in these negotiations. Turkey, however, has introduced a new complication, and has notified the European powers of her intention to make the Maritza River the new frontier, giving as her reasons that she always has claimed this frontier, but that the powers set aside the claim in order to expedite peace; that the Porte would be prepared to settle the question by diplomatic means, but that the atrocities and vandalism of the Bulgarians in the occupied territories make it impossible to hope for a settlement, and that new conditions arising from the last war between the allies make it doubly necessary for Turkey to obtain a frontier guaranteeing safely to Constantinople and the Dardanelles.

The Porte promises not to cross the new Maritza frontier, and asks the powers' assistance in establishing it, so as to secure durable relations between Turkey and Bulgaria.

It is not considered likely that Europe will permit the decisions of the London conference thus to be thrust aside.

TURKS TO OCCUPY THRACE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 20.—The Sublime Porte has issued formal orders to the army to occupy Thrace and Adrianople.

In a note acquainting the powers with this decision, it is announced that the new Turco-Bulgerian frontier will be the River Maritza. The Porte saddles Bulgaria with responsibility for any fighting that may ensue.

FREE SPEECHES BY BRYAN.

WARSAW, IND., July 20.—Secretary of State Bryan to-day made two addresses to crowds at the Winona Chautauqua grounds and announced that his speaking dates for next Thursday, Friday and Saturday had been cancelled to enable him to return to Washington for the conference with Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson and President Wilson upon the Mexican question.

"The conference is expected to occur Friday," Mr. Bryan said, "but I am willing to return to my duties at any moment my presence may be needed."

The Secretary received no compensation for the speeches he made today, the crowds being admitted to the grounds free. Mr. Bryan, who is slated to become president of the board of directors of the reorganized Winona Chautauqua Association, said he would return to address the Bible conference August 22.

Secretary Bryan will go to Plymouth, Indiana, to-morrow.

TRAIN KILLS FAMILY.

ST. LOUIS, July 20.—Three persons were killed by a train to-day, while on their way to church a mile south of Jerseyville, Ill. The victims were Mrs. Hallie Ryan, her son, Stewart, 5 years old, and her daughter, Lillian, 3. The buggy in which they were riding was struck by a north-bound train on the Chicago and Alton road.

The engineer fainted and the train sped on about a quarter of a mile before the fireman closed the throttle. The mangled body of the boy and shreds of the buggy were still clinging to the pilot.

POLICE ARE OUTWITTED.

LONDON, July 20.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the suffragette leader, again has outwitted the police. It was thought that she had been arrested last night, but it was another woman, impersonating Mrs. Pankhurst, whom the police arrested in a taxicab and took part of the way to Scotland Yard. Then they discovered the mistake and liberated the prisoner. At first the affair was considered a hoax, but it developed apparently into a well-laid scheme whereby Mrs. Pankhurst could escape from her flat by another passage while her impersonator was luring away the police.

TO-DAY'S HERETICS GET PRAISE

That the heretics of to-day are preachers of to-morrow, and that they are the men the people want to hear, was the striking statement made by Dr. J. B. Robins, pastor of Trinity Church, Atlanta, Sunday morning in an emphatic sermon on the need of the church to meet the new conditions of the present day.

WILL TRY FOR CUP.

LONDON, July 20.—Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht which will try for the American cup in a series of races in 1914, the conditions for which have been signed and forwarded by the Royal Ulster Yacht Club to the New York Yacht Club, will be named Shamrock IV.

KINGDOM IS SHAKEN.

STUTTGART, GERMANY, July 20.—The whole kingdom of Wurttemberg was shaken by a sharp earthquake at 1 o'clock this afternoon. Many chimneys collapsed. At Stuttgart and Strassberg the frightened residents rushed into the streets.

NEWS OF MONDAY, JULY 21, 1913

U. S. WILL NOT RECOGNIZE GOVERNMENT OF HUERTA

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The United States does not intend to recognize the Huerta Government in Mexico, because that administration is reported to be tottering to its ruin and is not expected to last the year out.

This was the gist of President Wilson's discussion of the Mexican situation with the Washington correspondents to-day. The President said that at present he is doing nothing but studying the Mexican problem so as to be able to discuss it thoroughly with Ambassador Wilson when the latter reaches Washington Friday.

But he indicated clearly that the Administration does not intend to recognize Huerta, no matter what advice the Ambassador gives.

The Chief Executive has been advised on the highest authority that President Huerta is losing his grip. It is not considered good policy to recognize a government which has but a short time to live, and the United States will reserve its approbation for another and stronger regime, which, it is hoped, will succeed the Huerta Government.

The President to-day indicated clearly that there would be no further steps in the Mexican matter until after the White House conference scheduled for Friday.

PLANS MASSACRE REPORTED.

EL PASO, July 21.—Efforts were made to-day to obtain news from the Madero lumber camp, 200 miles southwest of here, where a small band of Americans was reported surrounded by Mexican rebels and in danger of being massacred.

Appeals for aid were received by officials of the Madero Lumber Company here, General Francisco Castro, federal commander in Juarez, and American Consul Thomas D. Edwards. General Castro was asked to send rtoops to protect the Americans.

The Madero Lumber Company is an American-Canadian Corporation. It owns a large area of forest lands, controls the Mexican Northwestern Railroad and has built several small towns in Northwestern Mexico.

U. S. WARSHIP AT FRONTERA.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Either a United States battleship or a gunboat will be sent to Frontera, Mexico, in response to a request from the United States Consul there, for the protection of American lives and property, it was said at the Navy Department to-day.

The revolutionists, it is said, have occupied two American-owned plantations there and have threatened to attack the port. The Navy Department will send one of the warships now at Tampico to Frontera as soon as Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt receives the request of the United States Consul from the State Department, which is expected hourly.

At the War Department it was said to-day that permission will be granted to General Obregon, the rebel leader, to visit Los Angeles.

The State Department has received no further dispatches relating to the battle between the federals and constitutionalists yesterday, but it is expected the conflict will be decisive in determining whether this province will be added to the territory now under rebel control.

FREE LAND FOR JAPANESE.

MEXICO CITY, July 21.—A note granting concessions to 50,000 Japanese for free lands in the State of Morelos will be sent to the Mikado of Japan in a few days.

ENCROACHMENT ON CANAL ZONE FEARED BY WILSON

WASHINGTON, July 21.—That the United States fears encroachments by Europeon powers upon the Canal Zone and is therefore preparing to establish an armed protectorate over all Central America was clearly indicated during President Wilson's semi-weekly conference with the "newspaper cabinet" to-day.

Protection of the canal, the President said, is the underlying principle of the Nicaraguan proposal by Secretary of State Bryan as the means for settlement of disputes relative to the canal, and the reason why Nicaragua was selected as the first country to be approached in connection with the policy which is destined to succeed "dollar diplomacy."

The President said the United States desired to render friendly assistance to all Latin America, and indicated that the other republics would be approached when negotiations with Nicaragua had been completed.

Secretary Bryan's Nicaraguan policy is not intended for application to all the Central American republics, but each will be treated with separately.

The Platt amendment giving the United States the right to intervene in all the Latin American countries will be introduced into all the agreements with these nations, and the United States will be enabled to exercise an army protectorate over all Central America, and the Monroe Doctrine will be bolstered in its weakest part.

It is realized that European nations may object to the power of the United States, but their objections merely will be "noted and filed," because the United States believes it is entirely within its rights in defending the Monroe Doctrine as it sees fit.

COLUMBUS FIRST.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Assistant Secretary of State Osborne, as the result of his visit to the Dominican Republic and Hayti, suggests that the bones of Christopher Columbus which are at Santo Domingo City, be placed aboard the first ship to go through the Panama Canal.

THIS DRESS WAS TOO MUCH FOR PRIM RICHMOND

THIS picture shows Miss Flossie Brown in the split skirt which caused so much excitement in Richmond, Va., that the young lady was arrested, fined $25 and given 24 hours in which to leave town. The idea of the slit skirt did not appeal at all to the Virginians, but it has not been received with so much disfavor elsewhere, for Miss Brown, or Blossom Browning, as she prefers to be called, has been invited to wear it in Pittsburg and Baltimore.

MRS. PANKHURST ARRESTED.

LONDON, July 21.—In one of the fiercest riots which has marked the suffragette propaganda in Great Britain, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militants was arrested to-day with six of her followers.

The fight with the detectives came when the officers tried to arrest Mrs. Pankhurst as she was entering the Pavilion Music Hall, where her daughter Sylvia and other prominent suffragettes were holding a meeting.

Mrs. Pankhurst was seized after a violent struggle, and when the frenzied women saw their leader in the hands of the officers they charged upon them, using hatpins and all sorts of weapons to wrest their leader away.

The officers held their prisoner and resisted the attacks of the women. Six other women who were the ringleaders in the attack on the officers also were taken into custody.

Mrs. Pankhurst was taken to Holloway jail.

She escaped from the detectives yesterday by having a fellow militant leave her house deeply veiled. The detectives believed the veiled woman was the militant leader and only after they had forced her into a taxicab did they learn their mistake.

FITE ATTACKS OFFICIALS.

CARTERSVILLE, July 21.—To a crowd that packed his courtroom Judge A. W. Fite spoke to-day denouncing the present city government and openly attacking C. M. Milam, chairman of the City School Board; Mayor Young and others. He charged nepotism in the conduct of the city affairs. He denounced publications regarding him in certain newspapers as "premeditated, willful, wicked and malicious falsehoods."

MUST WALK IN SHADE.

BOULDER, COLO., July 21.—Local officials have ruled that tourists who wear diaphanous gowns must walk on the shady side of the street.

TIE TARIFF VOTE FEARED BY SENATE DEMOCRATS

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, announced to-day that he would not be bound by the Senate Democratic caucus to vote for the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill. This leaves only 48 Democratic Senators upon which the Democrats can rely to support the measure and makes the vote of Vice President Marshall necessary to break a tie if Chamberlain bolts on the final vote.

"I want it understood," said Chamberlain, "that as a Senator from Oregon I am absolutely free to support what is right in this matter. I am not bound to support this or any other measure. What I want is the truth-light."

Chamberlain did not state he would vote against the bill, and his Democratic colleagues were of the opinion that he would be found among the faithful when the bill comes to a vote.

Senator Burton, of Ohio, Republican, attacked in the Senate to-day the ad valorem duties in the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill; denounced as false Democratic predictions that the bill would reduce the cost of living, and critcised the measure for its "free trade tendencies."

Burton declared that members of the Democratic party admitted the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill would not reduce the cost of living. He quoted from a "signed interview" by Secretary of Commerce Redfield, in which Redfield termed the benefit to be derived from the tariff bill "moral and mental," and stated that no "intelligent man expects it (the bill) to be more than a step toward the reduction of the cost of living."

"I believe that the proposed measure is based on theories which are erroneous and that its adoption will prove disastrous to our industrial activites and to the whole framework of our economic and social life," said Burton.

"Furthermore, it will not accomplish the beneficial results which are claimed.

"The business of the country, its industrial life, had adjusted itself to a party of protection. For 50 years the prevailing rates have been high. We can not change from these rates in a single year without widespread injury. The proposed changes are without precedent in the fiscal history of our own or any other country."

BRYAN ON SALARY.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD., July 21.—"If an annual salary of $12,000 for the Secretary of State is not sufficient to maintain him and his family in a manner befitting the dignity of the high office, would you advocate an increase in that salary?"

This question was asked William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of State, after he had delivered a Chautauqua lecture for which he received $250.

"No, I would not advocate an increase," replied Mr. Bryan. "The salary is sufficient to meet the expenses of the Secretary of State when those expenses are confined to his home and official life.

"This, however, is not the case with me. The fact ought not to be overlooked, and it ought not to be necessary for me to mention, that in my life are certain fixed charges which must be met. These charges, with my living expenses and expenses incidental to my position exceed my salary."

SAYS SHE AIDED BURGLAR.

BIRMINGHAM, July 21.—Mrs. Medora Newton, daughter of S. H. McMaster, formerly president of a Mobile bank, is in jail here charged with being an accessory to alleged burglaries by her husband, Louis Kittler, alias Newton. It is said that the young wife, dressed as a man, aided her husband.

Kittler had confessed to seventeen burglaries in and about Birmingham but steadfastly declares his wife was not concerned in any of them.

As a girl Mrs. Newton was a member of one of Mobile's most exclusive society sets.

COUPLE IN SAME CELL.

MACON, July 21.—James D. Nobles and wife, owners of a grocery store in the suburbs, are in the Bibb County jail on the charge of violating the prohibition law. They occupy the same cell.

Mrs. Nobles was arrested a month ago on a similar charge, but gave a $500 bond. Now she and her husband are accused as the result of a basketful of pint bottles of whisky being found behind the counter in their store.

MAYOR OUT ON BAIL.

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, MINN., July 21.—Mayor Edeke, of Ranier, Minn., is out on bail to-day, charged with being an accessory to the murder of F. J. Couture, owner of the Ranier Hotel. James Kelly was in the county jail here, charged with the actual murder.

Couture was beaten to death by a crowd of men after he made a statement that no attempt was being made in Ranier to enforce the saloon-closing laws. Mayor Edeke is charged with being a member of the crowd.

DOGS OF QUALITY.

BROCKTON, MASS., July 21.—Twelve Pomeranians, owned by Mrs. E. V. Graves, a prominent business woman here, have a whole house to themselves. The dogs have individual beds, electric fans, a valet and a bath twice a day.

Each dog has its own room.

SLEEPS 150 HOURS.

ST. LOUIS, July 21.—Miss Christine Fischer, a school teacher, who slept almost uninterruptedly for 150 hours following a tennis game, declared she felt greatly refreshed, though a little weak.

BULGARIAN TROOPS TAMED; TURKS RETAKE ADRIANOPLE

SOFIA, July 21.—Suffering defeat after defeat at the hands of its former allies and friends, the crowning humiliation coming at the hands of the Turks, who recaptured Adrianople without opposition, the warlike spirit of the Bulgarians has been tamed.

With the Roumanian army within a day's march of Sofia, the Bulgars are ready to accept peace at any price.

The retaking of Adrianople by the Turks seems to mark the utter collapse of Bulgaria's resistance to the attacks of its former allies and its former enemy.

Apparently Bulgaria's recent crushing reverses are largely due to dissensions among its commanders in the field and the lack of confidence on the part of the Government in the heads of its army.

From present indications it is likely that Bulgaria will be shorn of the territory which came to it as the result of the victories over the Turks in the recent war.

Already the Sofia Government has offered Roumania an important territorial concession to cease hostilities. It is likely that the other Balkan States will claim a large share of territory as the fruits of victory.

Peace arrangements probably will be made without the assistance of the powers, the Balkan States being insistent upon settling their dispute without outside interference.

READY TO ARBITRATE.

ATHENS, July 21.—If Bulgaria accepts the preliminary conditions of the other Balkan States, the war in the allied States will be brought to a speedy conclusion.

The Greek, Servian and Montenegrin Governments to-day informed the Russian representative that they are ready to negotiate with Bulgaria to end hostilities.

WILLING FOR PEACE PARLEY.

SOFIA, July 21.—The Bulgarian Government to-day officially notified Roumania and the powers that it is willing to conclude peace with the other Balkan States.

The Bulgarian delegates have arrived at Nish, and it is probable that peace negotiations will be begun to-day.

GOMPERS WAS TRAILED.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Colonel Mulhall, testifying to-day before the Lobby Investigation Committee, declared that Judge Davenport, attorney for the Buck's Stove and Range Company of St. Louis, trailed Samuel Gompers during the 1908 campaign with stenographers, who reported all of Gompers' speeches.

The motive, he said, was the hope that Gompers would say something which might be brought to the attention of the Federal courts, which had under consideration the injunction and contempt proceedings against Gompers and the other heads of the American Federation of Labor.

CAN'T SOLVE HER MIND.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Dr. B. R. Logie, Government alienist for the District of Columbia, came right out in a courtroom and said:

"All the ordinary tests fail. No one on earth has ever been able to solve the psychology of the feminine mind."

Dr. Logie was a witness in the legal battle between Mrs. Emma Prall Knorr and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Prall, sisters-in-law, who have been in controversy for ten years over a large estate.

SUE FOR COW'S TAIL.

CINCINNATI, July 21.—Holden Bros., of Kentucky, breeders of thoroughbred cattle, have sued the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet Company for $1,200 for the loss of the end or switch of a registered Jersey cow's tail.

The complaint recites that the cow was shipped from Louisville to Cincinnati on July 6 and that en route the end of her tail was pulled or cut off, making her valueless for prize-winning or show purposes.

WOMEN MAY SMOKE.

CHICAGO, July 21.—Women on transcontinental trains may smoke in the buffet car. The precedent was set by Miss Hester McKay, who said her father was a Chicago manufacturer. She and several other women passengers on a train that was speeding toward Yellowstone Park to-day puffed cigarettes with the men in the buffet car.

Of the twenty male passengers in the car nineteen voted to allow the women to smoke.

CHARGES BOYCOTT.

MACON, July 21.—Dr. W. N. Ainsworth charged from the pulpit at the Mulberry Street Methodist Church last night that the saloon men and their friends have organized a boycott against the fifty members of the Law Enforcement League who last week signed a petition for an injunction against the saloons and social clubs.

GAME WARDEN USES GLASSES.

SAVANNAH, July 21.—From the windows of a business house on Bay Street Charles B. Westcott, State Deputy Fsh and Game Warden, watched a hunter through a pair of field glasses as he came down the Savannah River in a boat, and placed him under arrest when he reached the city.

The hunter, J. W. Cooper, had a gun, ammunition and a bag containing eight picked birds, packed in ice, which Westcott has identified as summer duck.

Market Quotations For Week Ending July 22, 1913

REVIEW OF COTTON MARKET

Sentiment regarding the cotton market is changing and the feeling of optimism is becoming more pronounced each day. The market showed more activity during the week than for several weeks. This probably reflected a reduction of outstanding commitments rather than increasing interest, but Monday there was fresh selling as well as covering by shorts who sold Saturday. The market opened the week's trade with prices generally 5 to 12 points lower than Saturday's close, owing to disappointing cables to the bulls, and selling was rather general throughout the day on reported rains in Texas and the Eastern belt. Lower temperatures was reported over the entire belt. A few Wall street operators were credited with buying on the decline. Many operators who have been booked on the buying side for the past several weeks contend that this is entirely a weather market for the present and further rains in Texas would undoubtedly bring out considerable selling, owing to the excellent crop prospects throughout the country. On the other hand, there are strong interests that are advocating the bull side and some ready to buy on any reaction, declaring that the buying is based not so much on crop conditions as consumption. Consequently, this is causing a dull market and holding it in a narrow rut.

Continued shipments from the stock of cotton in New York have reduced the certificated supply available for delivery on New York contracts to 24,049 bales. These shipments are naturally attributed to the same international interests which first took up cotton on May contracts and then sold July, and whose continued activity in this respect suggests that they are heavily committed to straddles between here and Liverpool entending into the new crop positions, with the long end in the market. Contrary to this there have been rumors to the effect that cotton would be brought back from New York to England for contract delivery before the end of the sumer should there be occasion, and in some quarters figures have been mentioned in this connection, ranging as high as 50,000 bales. These stories, however, are discredited, as New England mills have already lost stock heavily, owing to the continued active consumption and comparatively small takings, but the ultimate outcome of near positions, including October, will doubtless depend to a great extent upon new crop developments.

Toward the end of last week many private wires over the belt reflected a bullish feeling in the market. Reports began to come in from Texas and Oklahoma of shedding—which is a development expected at this season of the year when boll-weevils are in abundance—and of sufficient moisture in Oklahoma, Texas and Central and Eastern beltsThe excessively high temperatures shown by the official weather details for the Eastern belt, as published on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, were perhaps as largely responsible for the nervousness of the trade.

Many wires from Texas and Oklahoma said that deterioration in the crop was covering a large area. However, there was some dispute that any damage had come to the crop as a result of weather conditions, and some maintained that these conditions were exactly what the crop needed, claiming that an extended drouth would be more benefit than good rains, because dry weather prevents the boll weevil spreading while wet weather causes maturity of the pest. A majority of the trade were not inclined to take the chances of leting their short lines run too long with drouth threatening Texas and Oklahoma, and the demand from these sources boosted values.

F. M. Cordill wired from Brownwood, Tex., that from Hempstead and Bryan to near Mexia, old lands have already commenced to deteriorate. And from Mexia, Corsicana to Dallas, nearly perfect crops. Brazos bottoms have magnificent outlook. Dallas, Fort Worth to Brownwood the crop is in good shape, but commencing to need rain badly, showing effect of the dry, hot weather. Taking Texas as a whole the damage so far is neglible and more than offset by destruction of possible weevil damage. Rain is needed in the central belt and old lands have commenced to suffer. Heavy black lands are holding well.

The trade is preparing for an early crop movement in the Southwest, although the crop on the average is considered a rather late one. There has been a big demand for ocean tonnage for August and early fall shipments from Galveston and other Gulf points, and while this has been largely for grains; cotton has not been neglected. Bradstreet's report indicated that the crop has made good progress during the week, except for boll weevil damage in the Mississippi Valey, and a big St. Louis spot house, whose territory includes part of Oklahoma, says the crop is doing well over the entire district.

The Giles report made the condition of the crop, as of July 15, at 83.4, comparing with her report of 84.8, at the end of last month, and 80.4 at the same time last year. The trade has generally anticipated that the condition would show some improvement in the crop since the compilation of the July bureau. The showing of Miss Giles' figures was modified to some extent, probably by the fact that her report as of conditions to June 2. was so much higher than the Government figures, leading to a theory that the statement may reflect a partial readjustment, rather than actual progress of the crop, with a consequent tendency to compare with last year rather than two weeks ago. Government reports for the last ten years show that the crop has improved as frequently as it has deteriorated in July. Last year there was a loss of 3.9 per cent in condition during the month, the July bureau report of 80.4 being followed by an August report of 76.5 per cent. The ten-year average condition for July has been 80.3 and the ten-year average for August has been 80. The value of condition of 100 per cent on July 25 is estimated by the Department of Agriculture at 232 pounds to the acre.

Market prospects during the remainder of the week depend largely on the weather developments. Unless further rains come over the belt, or, at any rate, cooler weather, the fear of crop damage and a lower August bureau would be likely to carry the market much higher.

From the closing quotations of last Tuesday prices only show a net gain of 1 to 6 points on the New York future contract market, while spot quotations are practically unchanged.

Staple cotton goods markets rule quiet, but very steady as to values. Purchases are being made for immediate and nearby deliveries and buyers are not disposed to place late contracts unless for some specialty or odd construction on which production is allowed to run very close to actual consumption.

The scarcity of spot stocks of many staples is the feature of the market and accounts for the steady maintenance of prices at a time when consumption is showing signs of contracting.

Prints are in spasmodic demand, percales are being ordered for the wrapper and cutting trades. Bleached cottons are sold well for the next 45 days and a larger spot business could be done if stocks were not at a minimum with mills. Staple ginghams, tickings, denims and other colored cloths are ordered ahead of the next 60 days and show no price changes. Fine and fancy novelties are being ordered for spring, and other wash fabrics are being ordered only in a careful way.

It is close to the high tide period of uncertainty growing out of tariff matters, and combined with the difficult money markets there is a lack of inducement for speculative purchasing of any character. Jobbers' financial reports, issued for the first six weeks, indicate a still further reduction of merchandise assets throught the conntry.

TUESDAY'S REVIEW.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The cotton market opened fairly active to-day, and first prices were 1 to 4 points higher than the closing quotations of Monday. The steadiness was attributed mainly to firm cables. The fact that dry weather still prevailed over the Central and Western belt also led to supporting orders in the new crop positions. After the call the ring was inclined to sell on reports of further rains in Texas, which relieved the intense heat of the past several days. In many localities the rainfall was heavy. As sentiment is against the market, the selling became rather general, resulting in a rapid decline of 2 to 6 points from the initial level. New crops were the heaviest pressed options. October lost 6 points, while December declined 5 points.

During the late forenoon active buying by the larger spot interests gave the market a steady tone, resulting in prices recovering. Trading was light and the market ruled dull but steady.

Following are 11 a. m bids in New York: July, 12.20; August, 12.06; October, 11.54; January, 11.41.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.34; August, 11.97; October, 11.58; January, 11.57.

Estimated cotton receipts:

NEW ORLEANS, July 22.—The weather map presents very fvorable conditions; cooler over the entire belt, with a splendid rainfall in the Eastern States, particularly in Georgia, South Carolina and parts of Alabama. Indications are for increasing cloudiness, with prospects of showers in the Central and Western States, while in the Atlantics after to-day the tendency will be for clearing weather.

Liverpool was due 5 points higher, but failed to advance; spots were unchanged; sales, 10,000 bales.

Private advices from Paris, Texas, report good rains in that section. Ballinger, Texas, also reported rain, and at Ardmore, Okla., over one inch July 20.

This market opened lower on the favorable weather map, but there was no pressure to sell, owing to anticipation of a bullish weekly weather report at 11 a. m., and a disposition to advance the market reflected by New York quotations.

COTTON GOSSIP

Trading was light and there was no feature to the opening, except some buying on firm cables. The ring sold early, and on the decline Mitchell and Gwathmey became buyers. Mitchell purchased January freely, while Riordan bought December. The market was steady, but sentiment was against the advance.

* * *

The market during the past several days has been almost featureless. There has been some selling on reported rains in Texas, but a few buying orders start the market on a upward scale. However, should rain come over the Western belt it is believed the market will be sold to a lower level. On the other hand,if the rains should not materialize, a higher market is looked for. Sentiment at the moment is very much mixed.

In reply to inquiries for opinions most traders are replying that values depend on the weather and legislative developments at Washington.

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma—generally clear."

NEW ORLEANS, July 22.—Hayward & Clark: The map shows splendid weather, part cloudy to fair in the Central and Western States. Cloudy in Alabama and the Atlantics, raining now in Georgia, some showers in Texas. Indications are for increasing cloudiness, showers in Western and Central belt, tendency toward clearing in Atlantics.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "In the face of lower temperatures, a spreading rain area and a more rapidly increasing early movement than last year, yesterday's cotton market reflected a character of steadiness that surprised both factions. In the adjustment of parities in the New Orlenas ring made a more bullish showing than did New York, but in any event, the contract markets reflected a will of their own, which did not harmonize with the talent's interpretation of the things, crop and trade wise.

Over in Texas active ginning operations are now beginning to be reported. Thus far nine new bales have been definitely acounted for. On July 19 last year only twelve new bales had been reported. Much talk has been heard of boll-weevil in Mississippi, but the fact that the farmers in the fertile and highly productive delta country have had very little to say on this subject is significant.

"The Central and Atlantic States have been enjoying just as favorable weather as could be expected, even though a short spell of very high temperature has been reported by some sections. Thus, all in all, the crop seems to be progressing toward a larger out-turn than that of 1912-13 is likely to prove. On the other hand, steamship men estimate that freight room out of the cotton ports thus far engaged to January 1914 does not exceed half a million bales. Of course, this need not mean that only half a million bales have been sold for forward delivery to Europe, but it at least sugests the probability that foreign consumers are awaiting the outcome of the legislative situation at Washington, in hope that prohibitive legislation will shift market control from America to Europe.

WEEKLY WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, July 22. — Mean temperature ranged from one to six degrees above normal, except on the Texas coast, where there was a deficiency of from one to three degrees. The greatest excess in mean temperature occurred over extreme Southeastern Tennessee and Central Georgia.

Weekly mean temperatures ranged from 76 to 86 degrees over the Eastern, from 82 to 84 over Central and from 82 to 86 degrees over the Western portion of the cotton region. The lowest weekly mean temperature, 76 degrees occurred at Asheville, N. C., and the highest, 86 at Fort Smith , Ark., Fort Worth, Texas, Thomasville, Macon and Augusta, Ga.

Precipitation occurred generally over the Eastern portion of the cotton growing States, over Southern Louisiana, along the coast of Texas and in the Northern and Northeastern portions of Texas, Southern Oklahoma and in a few localities in Arkansas. Elsewhere, there was no rain during the week. The percipitation was unevenly distributed and generally light, the heaviest amounts being reported from the Carolinas. More than two inches occurred in parts of Louisiana, Georgia, Florida and the Carolinas.

The greatest weekly amount, 4.70 inches, occurred at Newbern, N. C.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red.....84½@85½
Corn—No. 2.....66 @66½
Oats—No. 2 39

CHICAGO, July 22.—There was an enormous business in cash wheat today, the total transactions here amounting to 50,000 bushels, all of which was for export. The seaboard reported fifty boat loads or 40,000 bushels taken by exporters, and in addition to this vessel room was engaged for twenty loads for August shipment, with the rate of freight favorable to the shipper.

Prices for wheat closed ¼ to ⅜ cent lower for the day; corn was off ½ to ¾ and oats were ⅜ to ½ cent lower. Cash sales of corn were 190,000 bushels and of oats 170,000 bushels.

Hog products were lower on selling by those wanting profits.

A message from one of the crop experts now in the Northwest, says that the black rust scare is at an end and that wheat is ripening rapidly and that the harvesting of the same will soon be on.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The October delivery was the center of attraction in the cotton seed oil market to-day. Demand from shorts and refiners, induced by the scarcity of crude offerings, served to force that month up 22 points. Old crop oil was in demand. There was very little doing in the late positions.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "The wheat market is regarded as largely a merchandising proposition. It was noticed that some of the leading bears who sold early were buying at the close. Traders who were short of corn and long of oats were closing their spreads yesterday. One line of 250,000 bushels of corn was bought in and the oats sold. There is a lot of this business opening. There are also a lot of shorts in September corn who are long in December corn who have not started to cover."

Aberdeen, S. Dak., wires: "Commencing in western Clark County running through Spink and southern Brown Counties, extending west to the river, covering over 500,000 acres, 90 per cent total failure. East and north from Aberdeen about 10 per cent abandoned."

* * *

Bradley, S. Dak., wires: "Every field of velvet and blue stem wheat in this section has the little brown specks on the main stem of the wheat, some spots in three fields, the leaves of the wheat entirely dead from it. There is no damage yet, but this is unmistakably the first symptom of black rust. Red rust is very bad over the three States, and it is no short step from red rust to black rust."

* * *

B. W. Snow wires from Omaha, July 21: "The corn crop in Nebraska, south of the Platte and west of Lincoln, already is hurt badly and in a critical position. Portion of the Republican Valley received some rain and the crop is holding out, but fully one-fourth of the State is over the danger line and losing ground fast. From Hastings to Holdredge and south to St. Cloud fields are largely fired. I have seen places to-day where hot winds last week killed the leaves on trees. From Hastings to Crete the corn is showing white, and now is coming to tassel at four feet. East of Lincoln there is small damage, but some white heads are showing. The hopeful possibility lies in the fact that the crop was not in tassel during last week's blistering weather, but many tassels now are coming white. The section of the State I covered is in no worse shape than Northern Kansas."

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "Wheat—We look for a steady market to-day and are inclined to think prices will gradually harden.

"Corn—We can see nothing but higher prices.

"Oats—In our opinion the market is in a strong position, with a comparatively limited long interest and more new buying apparent.

"Provisions—The strength in corn is helping prices, and while there is more or less realizing, new buying appears to be on the increase."

Lyle wires Chapin from Norton, Kans.: "The important corn counties of Kansas, along the Nebraska line, east of Bellville, crop in normal promise, with light exceptions. West of Belleville there is some damage that may be 25 per cent in some fields. Most of the fields are not yet hurt, not much in tassel. Five per cent generally applied will cover all apparent damage to date."

Iowa weather and crop bulletin says: "First four days of week excessively hot. Daily maximum temperatures 100 to 104 degrees over Southern counties on one or more days, and as rainfall was inappreciable over the larger prt of the State, crops beginning to feel the effect of the dry hot weather. Late oats are already damaged to some extent by heat and lack of moisture. In some localities corn is beginning to curl during the day. Corn on good soil holding up well and making rapid growth."

STOCK GOSSIP

The market holds advance remarkably wel land there is accumulation of stocks by large interests on all moderate recessions. Confidence in the situation seems to be gradually returning and investors are taking advantage of the present low level of prices to average their holdings. Many railroad issies return over 6 per cent on present prices, while industrials return 70 to 10.

Crop prospects are excellent and earnings should continue far above dividend requirements. Big crops make large earnings and eventually enhance the value of securities.—G. D. Potter.

It looks as if this advance has only started. Would increase holdings on any recession in stocks like Union Pacific, Reading, Copper issues and Steel common.—G. D. Potter.

The Bankers Trust Company certificates of deposit for the St. Louis and San Francisco general lien 5 per cent bonds have been listed on the Stock Exchange. It is understood the total amount deposited under the agreement with Speyer & Co. in New York and in Europe is more than $25,000,000. No call has yet been made for the deposit of the French bonds amounting to $23,000,000. Of the remaining balance, a clear majority has been deposited under the Speyer bondholders' agreement.

"Sinful Pleasures"

A Sermon By REV. W. H. FAUST, Lexington, Ga.

Text: "Demas forsook me, having loved this present world. "—II Timothy iv:10.

In the entire word of God there can be found scarcely a parallel to this sad expression of the Great Apostle to the Gentiles, as he gave the reason for Demas' having forsaken him in his work. But Demas is human and men still follow in his footsteps, and for the love of self or pleasure to-day leave Christ and His service just as he did then without any compunctions of conscience. When asked for a reason for departing from the companionship of Jesus and His followers, they are at a loss to answer. The truth is, they have loved the present world and the things of this present world, and the greatest enemy of Christ life is the world.

In the world, the flesh and the devil operate and put forth their best efforts. The evil one uses great skill and tact in doing his work. He seizes upon every possible advantage and turns it to his account. Pleasure is legitimate and to be desired greatly. But not pleasure where sin is mixed in. Again, in Romans, Paul outlines to us the manner of life for the redeemed man to live, urging that such a one "be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God.

Christians, have you ever stopped to examine yourself and see what God's plan has in your life? Have you ever tried seriously to cause your life to conform to His purpose, and thus be all that He had planned for you? One's mind has to be continuously renewed and old things as well as old opinions and theories must continually be changing. New conditions confront us daily, and from these new viewpoints we must continuously adapt our vision to readjust ourselves after having fallen out of harmony with God's will in our lives is our supreme task. To bring our wills into subjection to His, to put ourselves in tune with the Infinite is a task by no means small, but one that pays not only socially, but spiritually also. When life runs parallel with God's purpose all is well. When life goes across His plans all is ill. No mean ability is required to run with the Master. Anyone following his own evil inclinations may go away from the Lord.

All pleasures and amusements are not sinful. Some are, and when you see them you are more than apt to see the fruits of sin.

The Card Table.

Gambling in any form is hurtful, and as a usual thing the mania starts with cards. Experience plus observation shows the results of sin here in this realm. The story was recently told and went the rounds of a lady who won a pair of silk hose at a bridge whist party and wore them to church to a preaching service. Whether it be true or not is to be left out of the question, but such an attitude is decidedly and distinctly the attitude of the people to-day. Alas! Alas! There are leaders in our missionary work who are also leaders in whist. The most popular and prominent members of our missionary societies are oftentimes the most enthusiastic members of the town's whist club. Such things ought not so to be. They are contrary to reason, to common sense and to the teachings of Christ. One woman may play cards and stop and be personally unhurt; but as a rule the woman who devotes hours to bridge is ignorant, and woefully so, of her Bible. Life is too short, entirely too short, for both. The average bridge player has never read God's word through and is not a student daily of its fundamental principles and teachings. All things are lawful, but not expedient. Pleasure your servant is good, but pleasure your master, your tyrant, is bad. Sin, when it is conceived, bringeth forth sorrow and death. Against one who has been helped by cards I'll place alongside such 50 who have been crippled and seriously hindered by them.

When entering into pleasure it is always well to ask ourselves, "What would Jesus do were He here?" Where He would go we could safely follow. Could He go with the future and present mothers of our country and sit down and engage in a game that has been the downfall of thousands and with which is associated shame, murder and viciousness of all sorts?

No chain is stronger than its weakest link; no man is stronger than his weakest point; no church is stronger than its weakest member. Each one is responsible, in part, for the other. No man liveth unto himself. The hand can not say to the foot, "I have no need of thee." Neither can a man say to his neighbors, "I have no need of you; I can live independent of you." We are as much responsible for our neighbor's environment as he is for ours. The Golden Rule comes in with great force and effect here. "Whatsoever ye would that others should do unto you, do ye even so to them." If eating meat cause your brother to offend, then stop and eat no more meat. If you are strong enough to play cards and be pure and good, then in the name of your brother who is weak and can not, I ask you to refrain for his sake, for in helping him you are perhaps winning a soul, and possibly doing good to a future citizen of the Kingdom of God.

The Theater.

Many of our most learned men (so called) are strenuous advocates of the theater as an educator. But where it has instructed one it has dragged down numbers. The low vaudeville pieces where womanhood is cheapened and a premium is placed upon lewdness should bring shame to all. Even the pictures of some of the actresses and actors in disgraceful poses are against decency and order. Then it is an expensive habit, too, and one that costs much time and money. Life is real and earnest, and tasks are too stupendous to spend time in playing.

"Must I be carried to the skies
On flowery beds of ease,
While others fought to win the prize
And sailed through bloody seas?

Sure I must fight if I would win.
Increase my courage, Lord.
I'll bear the part, endure the pain,
Supported by Thy word."

Often these days you see the question asked, "What would happen were Jesus to visit this or that town?" What in all seriousness would happen should Jesus come and see you in a ballroom! Would you be glad or would you be ashamed?

3. The Dance.

All who advocate it do so under the specious plea of grace and bearing which it gives.

Lord Byron, that brilliant genius who flashed like a meteor across the literary world and who tasted the cup of pleasure to the dregs, said:

"But ye who never felt a single thought
For what our morals are to be, or ought;
Who wisely wrote the charms you need to reap,
Say, would you make those beauties quite so cheap?
Hot from the hands promiscuously applied,
Round the slight waist, or down the flowing side,
Where were the raptures then to clasp the form
From the lewd grasp and lawless contact warm
At once love's most endearing thought resign,
To press the hand so pressed by none but thine;
To gaze upon that eye which never met
Another's ardent look without regret.
Approach the lip which all without restraint,
Come near enough, if not to touch, to taint;
If such thou lovest, love her then no more
Or give like her caresses to a score,
Her mind with these is gone, and with it go
The little left behind it to bestow,
For prurient nature still will storm the breast
Who, tempted thus, can answer for the rest?"

The daughter of Herodias danced off John the Baptist's head. Since then many heads and souls have been danced off into eternal ruin. Ninety per cent of our fallen women entered lives of shame through the dance hall, and to-day are occupying brothels as a result of "tripping the light fantistic toe." Reason is against the promiscuous dancing of the sexes. Sin will enter in when the door is thrown open, and human nature is still the same. The close rhythmic contact of man and woman has never yet been of much benefit to the masses of society. Then again if one can dance to the glory of God, why can't all do so? If your wife or sister or mother were to be found in a bare room with some other man's arms around her, what about it? Could she ever be the same again? If not, why not? Why the dance anyway? Who usually follows it?

4. The Wine Glass.

Listen for a moment to Solomon, the wisest man of all men:

"Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow? Who hath contentions? Who hath complaining? Who hath wounds without cause? Who hath redness of eyes?

"They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek out mixed wine. Look not thou upon the wine when it is red; when it sparkleth in the cup, when it goeth down smoothly; at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

To it our nation pays a great annual toll. Seventy thousand American citizens annually are slain upon its altars.

In this materialistic age we measure the value of a thing by its cost in money. We must value highly this death-dealing curse.

For bread we spend annually $505,000,000.

For meat we spend annually $303,000,000.

For foreign missions we spend annually $11,000,000.

For liquor we spend annually $1,750,000,000.

For tobacco we spend annually $800,000,000.

For poodle dogs we spend annually $10,000,000.

For prostitution we spend annually $3,000,000,000.

What a cost? Unbelief, disobedience, lying, profanity, impurity, covetousness, gambling, murder, drunkenness—all these things like steps go up from liquor. Death and hell enlarge their borders to prepare for the devotees of these sinful pleasures and amusements. Christ came to save from such. He patiently waits to save all who walk the broad way to death, men and women who follow pleasure. Seek that happiness which comes from serving Christ and which will last long, long after all earthly pleasure has passed away. Avoid all that is evil; cling to Christ and the good

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE long winter and spring months devoted by Daysey Mayme Appleton to instructing spinsters in the care of infants, to fighting for the ballot for mothers, and to relegating to his place among the worms of the dust that monster called Man, had taken the starch out of her amibition and the curl out of her hair.

She realized that though it would fall with a crash fatal to its inhabitants, she must drop the world she was carrying on her shoulders.

She must go away from kin and friends, seeking some holy spot of solitude where she might renew the fagged impulses of her soul, and decide what degree of blonde would be most becoming to her for next season.

"I am going to spend the summer at Lake Skodunk," she announced one afternoon to her friends.

"Oh," replied seventeen of them, "how nice! We will go with you!"

Then immediately they began to seek for railroad pamphlets telling about the beauties of Lake Skodunk, to write for reservations at the hotel, and to pack their trunks.

Daysey Mayme is an easy mark among her friends. All women are easy marks among their friends. Or else they have no friends! There was only one thing to do: She must not offend her friends; she must give up Lake Skodunk.

She had found at the last moment, she said when seeing them on their train, that she could not go. She might join them later.

Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea looked good on the map. "I will go to Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea," she said, wearily, to a third cousin, "where my soul may commune alone with the sad sea waves."

The third cousin looked interested. She hurried away to tell the other kin.

That evening seven cousins, five uncles, eleven aunts and nine in-laws called Daysey Mayme to the telephone. "We think," each one cried, "that it would be fine to have a family reunion at Kick-a-poo-by-the-Sea, and we are all going with you."

The next day Daysey Mayme Appleton was missing, and no one could learn her whereabouts. She had pulled down the blinds to give the impression that the house was abandoned for the summer and had locked herself in.

Every morning she dressed while balancing on one foot on a piano stool in a very small closet, to simulate the experience in the dressing car on a Pullman, and every night she slept on the pantry shelf.

"In this way," she said, putting a cinder in her eye, "I experience all the joys of travel and escape my dear relatives and friends."

Items of Interest

Frau Emma Giehrl, of Munich, daughter of a former Bavarian Finance Minister, has just celebrated a remarkable jubilee. For fifty years she has not left her sick bed, and to forget her sufferings and to give pleasure to other people she has during this period written stories of mystery and educational works. Her books for women and invalids form quite a library.

At the close of the wedding breakfast a gentleman noted for his lack of tact rose, causing keen anxiety to the bridegroom, who knew his failing.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he cried, genially, "I propose the health of the bridegroom. May he see many days like this!"

Unter Den Linden, the famous Berlin thoroughfare, is 215 feet wide; the Ringstrasse, in Vienna, is 188 feet; the Paris Grand Boulevard, 122 feet, and the Andrassystrasse, in Budapest, 155 feet wide.

Ninety per cent of English people can write, only 27 per cent in Spain, and but 16 per cent in Russia.

Nil Desperandum.

Percy Parkington arose and brushed the dust from his knees. Then, drawing himself up to his full height, he gazed resentfully upon the farm of Miss Muriel Muggins, who nonchalantly fanned herself the while.

"Very well, Miss Muggins," came in bitter tones from Percy. "Oh, very well! You have spurned me, it is true! Indeed, you have spurned me twice! But, though despair eats my heart, I shall not die! I mean to go into the busy world. I will fight! I will win! My name shall become known and my riches shall become envied—"

"Pardon me for interrupting you, Mr. Parkington," interjected Miss Muggins, "but when you have accomplished all that you may try me again."

Professional Rivalry.

Everything in the street was dim and quiet, for the thoroughfare was in a highly respectable neighborhood, and the hour was 2 a. m. In fact, save for a stray, wandering cat, and a constable, now rounding a corner in the far distance, there were no signs of life or animation anywhere.

William Sikes stepped out from the shadow of a friedly tree, glanced furtively around him, and then assisted Tom Crooke, his bosom friend and partner, to alight from the drawing room window of No. 63.

"Well, old pal, what luck?" he whispered.

"No luck at all," growled Tom. "The bloke what likes there is a lawyer."

William looked apprehensive.

"Then 'ow much 'ave you lost?" he asked.

A Charming Summer Gown Fully Described by Olivette

HERE is a little summer costume that may be truly called a "confection," though we generally prefer not to use that gastronomic term in the description of even the dreams of the sartorial realm.

White or shell pink is the foundation of heavy grade china or shantung silk. There is an eight-inch slit over the left ankle, and all about the hem tiny pink wild roses are set at equal intervals. The overskirt is of wide shadow lace, falling to the knees at the front and lengthening some eight inches under the caught-in drapery at the back. A garland of the roses peeks from under this, and another surmounts the wide girdle and rises to meet the square-cut vest of filmy white chiffon. Both waist and puff sleeves are of the lace, and another garland of the dear little wild roses nestles under the sleeve at the elbow.

The hat is a great round white Neapolitan, covered with frill after frill of white accordion plaited maline, with a monster pink rose crushing in all the filminess at the left.

Dainty white slippers and silk stockings, and a filmy parasol with a wide border of chiffon printed in great pink roses, complete an absolutely ideal summer costume.

HEAT WAVE IN WEST.

CHICAGO, July 17.—The Middle West still is in the grip of a heat wave.

Kansas points suffered most to-day, the mercury ranging between 100 and 112 over the State. Four deaths and a score of prostrations were reported from Kansas City, Two died at Omaha.

HAYDEN NOT NAMED.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Attorney General McReynolds to-day denied that Thomas S. Hayden had been selected to succeed former District Attorney McNab, of San Francisco.

McReynolds said so many protests had been filed that no action would be taken until a thorough investigation had been made.

Up-to-Date Jokes

Walker had accompanied his wife on an excurison to the realms of bargains, and in the enormous building, with its many departments, had become separated from his better half.

For an hour at least he remained lounging impatiently at the junction of many ways, where lifts, stairs and passages met, and then, tired and angry, he approached an irreproachable shopwalker.

"Sir," he said to the frock-coated and suave attendant, in tones of righteous indignation, "I've lost my wife."

Back came the reply, with stunning force: "Third floor over the bridge for the mourning department!"

It was in a country village that the swain had proposed for the hand of the village beauty, and had been accepted.

He had bought the engagement ring and was hurrying to the home of his adored one. A friend stopped him to make inquiry concerning his haste.

"Hullo, there, Bob! Is there a fire?"

"Yes," replied Bob, with what breath he had left, "my heart's on fire and I'm going now to ring the village belle."

Peter Burrowes, a well-known member of the Irish bar, was on one occasion counsel for the prosecution at an important trial for murder. Burrowes had a severe cold and opened his speech with a box of lozenges in one hand and in the other a small pistol bullet by which the man had met his death. Between the pauses of his address he kept supplying himself with a lozenge. But at last, in the very middle of a high-falutin' period, he stopped. His legal chest heaved, his eyes seemed starting from his head, and in a voice tremulous with fright he exclaimed:

"Oh-h-h! Gentlemen, gentlemen, I've swallowed the bul-let!"

"Mr. Chairman," said the orator, who had already occupied the platform for twenty minutes, amid many interjections from the audience. "Mr. Chairman, may I appeal on a point of order? There is really so much resultory conversation going on in parts of the hall that it is impossible for me to hear a word I am saying."

Voice from the back of the hall: "Don't be downhearted. You're not missing much."

Just Sampling It.

For a long time the pale-faced man regarded the sandwich on the counter before him suspiciously. At length he carefully lifted off the top slice of bread, took out a piece of ham, ate it, and replaced as before. In a few seconds he again removed the top piece, extracted another piece of meat this time, and replaced the top again; and again the performance was repeated until the ham had gone. A bystander tapped him on the shoulder.

"Excuse me," said the inquisitive one, "but why don't you eat up your sandwich, instead of picking at it in that fashion?"

"Well, you see," whispered back the other, glaring around suspiciously. "I can not very well eat it. It isn't my sandwich."

WOMEN FIGHT IN STREET.

Dr. J. Robert Smith, house physician at the Kimball Hotel; Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Ina McNeil, of No. 299 Forrest avenue, a saleswoman at a downtown store, engaged in a struggle in front of the Park-Chambers-Hardwick store on Peachtree street Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Mrs. Smith found her husband with Mrs. McNeil.

In the melee Mrs. McNeil received a slight cut on her arm, and Mrs. Smith claims also she gave her a black eye. During the trouble a bottle of what is supposed to have been carbolic acid was thrown by one of the participants, but none of them will admit throwing it. Dr. Smith declares he did not see the acid thrown, and Mrs. Smith will not say whether she threw it or not.

SHORTAGE IS ALLEGED.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane today announced that the First National Bank, of Lafayette, Ga., has been closed by National Bank Examiner Thomas C. Dunlap, with the authority of the board of directors, on account of a large shortage which makes the bank insolvent.

Mr. Kane says he has not received a detailed report of the condition of the bank. Mr. Dunlap has been appointed receiver.

In a telegram from Mr. Dunlap Mr. Kane is advised that steps have been taken to make an arrest.

WOULDN'T CHANGE SHIRT.

JERSEY CITY, July 17.—In her suit for divorce, Mrs. Louisa Peterson, of East Rutherford, declared that her husband's refusal to change his shirt should be considered cruel and inhuman treatment.

Couldn't Understand It.

Local "Terrier:" "Well, uncle, how do I look as a soldier?"

Farmer Giles: "Foine, my boy! But blessed if Oi can think 'ow yer git them twisted trousers on!"
