DORSEY GOES AFTER HOLLOWAY, CALLED TO STAND FOR FRANK

Portions of E. F. Holloway's testimony were badly shaken Solicitor Dorsey finished a grilling cross-examination of the National Pencity Factory timekeeper and watchman late Friday.

Holloway appeared a very willing witness for the defense and Dorsey went after him viciously as soon as Reuben Arnold was through the direction questioning.

The Solicitor, by his line of questioning, first imputed that Holloway had sought to get Kendrick, a former night watchman to swear that Frank had been in the habit of calling him up at night as he called Newt Lee. Holloway denied this indignantly.

Dorsey next asked Holloway if he had not told L. P. Whitfield, a Pinkerton operaitve, to come around the next day and he was sure the detective would find something. The next day the bloody club was found. Holloway also denied this.

Holloway testified that N. V. Darley left the factory at about 9:20 o'clock. Dorsey showed him his own affidavit saying that Darley left with Frank about 10:45.

Holloway gave Jim Conley the lie when he was recalled to the stand. Under the guidance of Reuben Arnold, he took up Conley's charges of grave misconduct against Frank and denied each one of them.

The day watchman declared that he always had been in the factory at the time Conley testified he had watched at the door for Frank and that he was positive such things never had taken place.

Holloway asserted that Frank never had brought women to his office and that women never were in his office, except members of his family.

Conley Not There Thanksgiving.

Conley when he made his sensational charges of misconduct against Frank, cited Thanksgiving as one of teh days that Frank had women in the factory. Holloway said Conley was not in the factory that day.

Reuben Arnold brought out the striking fact that it was snowing on Thanksgiving Day as a point against Conley's statement that a woman visited the factory that day and that she wore white shoes and white stockings.

That the door leading from the entryway on the first floor, of the National Pencil Factory, which had been nailed up since the first of January, was found broken open shortly after the murder of Mary Phagan was the startling testimony of N. V. Darley at the trial of Leo Frank Friday afternoon.

No testimony of this nature had been presented before and no intimation of such a discovery had been made during the investigation of the murder mystery. Its production, if the statements remain uncontroverted, opens up the possibility that the murderer of Mary Phagan attacked her on the first floor, broke open the door into the rear of the building and threw the body down one of two trap door, one of which opens onto a chute and the other onto a steep stairway.

The defense did not appear to be abandoning its theory that Conley might have attacked Mary Phagan and thrown her down the leevator shaft only a few feet distant or down the scuttlehole right by the elevator. On the contrary, Reuben Arnold in questioning Darley and other witnesses emphasized the ease with which such a deed might have been accomplished. It seemed to be the effort of the defense at this time not to center upon any one theory, but to show the jurors that the negro might have perpetrated the crime and disposed of the body in any one of four or five ways.

Darley, in advancing the striking possibility that the body had been carried through the door on the first floor into the rear of the building, said that the door had been nailed up again a few days after the crime as mysteriously as it had been broken open.

Darley Suspected Conley.

Darley said that he had kept watch of employees after the murder and that his suspicion immediately had fastened upon Conley because of the negro's peculiar actions. He said he had detailed the day watchman to montain an espionage over Conley.

C. B. Dalton's story recevied a severe blow at the hands of Darley. Darley said that no negro night watchman had been employed at the factory before April, 1913. Dalton tlod of night visits at the factory prior to this time and said he was met by a negro night watchman.

Solicitor Dorsey, cross-examining Darley, made the witness admit that detectives had been in the factory after the crime and might themselves have broken open the door.

The solicitor has brought out that if the body had been thrown

GEN. HUERTA IS ARMING JINGOES

Hatred Against Americans in Capital Stirred by President—Lind Warned Not to Come.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The administration to-day decided to ignore entirely the note sent by President Huerta to the American government and to direct Special Envoy Lind to proceed to Mexico City without delay on his arrival at Vera Cruz to-night, unless he be held back by armed force.

"The President declines to be bluffed," stated a prominent government official to-day.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 8.—With the approval of Provisional President Huerta, arms were issued to-day to the students of the National Military Academy, who yesterday drafted a resolution praising Huerta for declaring John Lind, the special American envoy, persona non grata to the Mexican Government.

A number of residents in the American colony, who have fortunes invested in Mexico, are planning to make a demonstration Sunday when protests will be lodged against the action of President Wilson in sending a personal representative to Mexico City and urging that the Mexican Government be upheld.

Foreign Minister Aldape and other members of the Cabinet are doing all in their power to arouse the patriotism and enthusiasm of the people.

Meetings of young hot bloods, who are standing up for President Huerta in his defiance of the Stars and Stripes, are being encouraged.

Mexican secret service agents have been detailed to watch every movement that Mr. Lind makes here and the envoy will be under constant surveillance.

The newspapers to-day carried flaming stories of "Yankee interference," and warned the State Department to recall Mr. Lind from Vera Cruz and not allow him to come to Mexico City.

Direful consequences are promised if President Wilson and Secretary Bryan continue their present course of trying to settle the internal affairs of Mexico while withholding official recognition of the Huerta administration.

All the papers carry warm words of praise for Huerta and promise that he will stand like a rock in behalf of his policy of "Mexicans for Mexican affairs."

United States warships in the harbor at Vera Cruz were in wireless communication with the New Hampshire, upon which Mr. Lind, is coming, and it is expected that the New Hampshire will reach Vera Cruz about 9 o'clock to-night.

Some Would Ignore Lind.

There was a gathering of Cabinet Ministers and Huerta adherents in Congress at the National Palace to-day, at which the existing American-Mexican situation was thoroughly discussed. Some are for completely ignoring Mr. Lind, while the radicals insist that he shall be expelled un-

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Edwin Gould to-day severely criticized present street attire and one-piece bathing suits for women.

"The extreme slit skirt to which objection has been taken in various parts of the country is not worn in New York by any of my friends. Nor do I know of any one who appears at bathing beaches in one-piece suits such as Chicago has forbidden."

DAISY HOPKINS DENIES VISITING PENCIL FACTORY WITH DALTON.

Girl Mentioned by Conley Swears That Leo Frank Never Spoke to Her

STREET CAR CREW TELL OF MARY PHAGAN'S LAST RIDE TO PENCIL FACTORY

down the chute in the rear of the factory, it would have dropped behind a pile of boxes where it would have been more effectively hidden than where it was discovered by Newt Lee. The solicitor claimed that the trap door over the rear stairway into the basement was nailed.

The attorneys for Frank vigorously assailed Friday the stories of two of the State's of two of the State's negro witnesses, Jim Conley, the accuser of Frank, and Albert McKnight, who said he saw Frank at the Selig home Saturday afternoon, April 26.

The motorman and conductor of the street car on which Mary Phagan is believed to have come to town the day of her death both testified that they knew the girl and that she was on their car which arrived at Broad and Hunter Streets not before 12:07 o'clock. She stayed on the car, they said, until the car reached Broad and Hunter Streets, which was about 12:10 o'clock. Consequently, it would have been impossible for her to reach the factory before 12:11 or 12:12 o'clock.

If the testimony of the two street car employees is accurate, it completely upsets Jim Conley's story that he saw Mary Phagan enter the factory before Monteen Stover came in. By the Stover girl's own testimony she entered the factory at 12:05 o'clock and left at 12:10 o'clock. Thus, she had gone by the time the Phagan girl arrived.

It also serves to destroy the significance of the Stover girl's testimony that Frank was absent from his office when she arrived there. As Mary Phagan had not yet arrived, according to the testimony of the street car men, it could hardly be regarded as a suspicious circumstance that Frank was not in his office, if it develops that he really was not. The defense also contends that Miss Stover, who admits she did not enter the inner office, could have looked through the doorway without seeing Frank.

Soon after court reconvened in the afternoon, H. J. Hinchey, of No. 391 Peachtree street, manager of the South Atlanta Blowpipe Company, appeared at the courthouse under subpen of the defense to discredit the story of Albert McKnight. McKnight testified that he was at Frank's home the afternoon of the murder and that he saw Frank board a Georgi avenue cr to return to the fctory.

Hinchey stated before he went on the stand that he was riding in his automobile on Washington street Memorial Day and at 2:15 o'clock he saw Frank get off a Washington street car at Washington and Hunter streets when the car was stalled by the parade. Frank then was on his way to the factory.

Earlier in the day the defense introduced other evidence to discredit McKnight. Photographs and blue prints of the Selig home were displayed to show that it would have been practically impossible for McKnight to see Frank at the sideboard, as the negro testified when he was on the stand.

Photos and Models Introduced.

Photographs and blue prints of the pencil factory also were put in evidence and in the afternoon a large sized model of the pencil factory, constructed on a scale of three-eighths of an inch to the foot, was brought into the court room. It was made by T. H. Willett, a patternmaker, of No. 100 Highland avenue, and John Cox, an attache of Reuben Arnold's office.

The model and blue prints were submitted in an effort to demonstrate that the State's theory of the crime is unreasonable and preposterous, and to illustrate the theory that the defense holds.

Attorney Arnold, who was conducting the examination during the forenoon, sought also to throw a deep shadow of suspicion upon the story of young George Epps, ho testified that he rode uptown with Mary Phagan the day she was killed.

Matthews said that another girl was seated with Mary the latter part of the ride to town. He did not recollect that Epps was on the car at all. The motorman said that he was relieved at Broad and Marietta streets and that he sat behind Mary and her companion all the way to Hunter street. He said the two alighted at Hunter street and proceeded toward Forsyth, on which the factory is located.

This is in direct contradiction to the story of Epps, who testified that he and Mary left the car at Forsyth and Marietta streets and that he walked with her toward the factory as far as the viaduct.

Didn't See Epps.

Hollis did not remember seeing Epps on the car. He said Mary was alone when he collected her fare after the car got on English avenue. He left the car at Forsyth and Marietta streets and did not see Mary Phagan alight there.

Albert Kauffman, an architect, was called to discredit several of the State's witnesses. He had blueprints of the Selig home which he displayed to the jury to show that it was impossible for Albert McKnight to have seen from the kitchen into the dining room, as he testified he did, on the Saturday afternoon that Frank came home from the factory.

His testimony was to the effect that Monteen Stover could not have seen over the safe door into Frank's office at the time she declared she was unable to find him on her visit to the factory.

He said that there was room for several bodies to pass down the scuttle hole into the basement. He exhibited a diagram of the factory to show that Frank could have sat in his office and not been aware of anything taking place beyond the time clock—for example, anyone coming up or going down the stairs.

Miss Daisy Hopkins, who C. B. Dalton said was his companion on visits to the factory basement, was called by the defense and denied Dalton's statements.

She said she never had spoken to Frank, and that Frank never had spoken to her.

Solicitor Dorsey made an attack on her character and forced her to admit she had been in jail on a statutory charge. It was brought out, however, that she was released without trial.

Frank, for the first time during the trial, took ana ctive part in helping direct the course his case was taking. He arose from his seat several times to make suggestions to his lawyers, and at his request certain questions were put.

Before Daisy Hopkins was called Solicitor Dorsey said he wanted to ask Harry Scott one more question. Attorney Rosser said he also wanted to ask one more question of Boots Rogers, Detective J. M. Starnes and George Epps. Detective Scott was the first witness called.

Dorsey asked:

Q. Mr. Scott, how long did it take you to get Jim Conley to write after he had admitted that he could write and you dictated it to him without delay?—A. Two or three minutes.

Q. Did you introduce him to Mr. Frank?—A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever go into the factory and go into the basement with Dalton?—A. No, I don't even know where the basement is. I never have been in it.

Q. What time did you reach that point?—A. About two and one-half minutes later. It took that long on account of the crowds.

Q. It took that long?—A. Yes. I was not running the car then. I was sitting behind Mary Phagan. There was a little girl on the seat with her.

Q. Where did she get off?—A. At Broad and Hunter streets.

Q. What time was it than?—A. 12:10 as near as I could recollect.

Q. Didn't you tell Detective Whitfield, of the Pinkertons, that you might have been three or four minutes ahead of schedule?—A. No.

Q. You are sure you never told him that?—A. No.

Q. How is it that you are willing to tell this jury that Mary Phagan did not get off at Marietta and Broad streets?—A. Wait a minute and I will tell you. There was an ex-conductor sitting by me. He had a pin on his coat. I took it off and leaning over to Mary Phagan I said: "Little girl, this is your picture." She said: "No, it ain't." That made me positive.

Q. Tell me how these little girls were dressed?—A. I don't remember, except they were dressed in something light.

Q. Well, tell us anything that Mary Phagan had on?—A. I don't know anything except she had on a dress and hat.

Q. Yes, she had on shoes and stockings, too?—A. Yes, and her dress was light colored.

Q. You didn't see George Epps?—A. No, I didn't see him.

Q. What did you say light color for? Come, don't——

Arnold Calls Halt.

Attorney Arnold interrupted.

"Just wait a minute. That is not the form to question him."

"All right, I'll put the question differently," said Dorsey.

Q. Mr. Matthews, you did not observe what color her clothes were?

A. No, sir.

Q. What time did you hear about her murder?—A. Sunday morning.

Fails on Color of Hat.

Attorney Arnold took the witness and showed him the dress Mary Phagan wore.

Q. Was this the dress she wore that day?—A. I am not sure, but it looks like it might have been.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness. He showed the witness Mary Phagan's hat.

Q. Is this the light hat you just now told the jury Mary Phagan had on? (The hat was of dark lavender material.)

Q. The girl you saw had on a light hat?—A. That's what I remember.

The witness was excused, and W. T. Hollis, conductor on the English avenue car on which the Phagan girl rode to town Saturday, April 26, took the witness stand. Arnold examined him.

Q. What is your business?—A. Street car conductor.

Q. Are you ever late?—A. Yes; sometimes.

Q. Which end of the car did she get on?—A. The front end.

Q. Which end were you on?—A. The back end.

Q. And you say you overheard a conversation between her and the motorman?—A. Yes; he asked her if she was mad, and she said yes, she was late.

Said She Was Late.

Q. She went down early in the morning, as a rule? Yet, when she said she was late, it was ten minutes to 12 o'clock?—A. Yes.

Attorney Arnold took the witness on the redirect examination.

Q. Are the cars on this line long or short?—A. Short cars.

Q. Was there any difficulty in hearing what was said on the front end when the car was standing still? A. No.

Q. No such thing as being ahead of time ever happens?—A. No, sir; it is against the rules of the company.

Attorney Hooper took the witness again.

Q. Do you mean to say that you obey the rules of the company so well that you are never ahead of time nor never a little late?—A. It isn't against the rules of the company to be late.

Q. Then you are never early—not even when going to the barn?—A. It isn't against the rules of the company to come in ahead of time when going to the barn, so long as you don't run reckless.

Q. And that day you brought Mary Phagan in was your last trip?—A. Yes.

STATE IS FORCED TO PIN HOPES ON CONLEY

Must Stand By While Defense Seeks Weak Link in the Negro's Story.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

As the defense in the Frank case gets under way, it is evident enough, as it has been from the beginning of this case, that there is but one big, tremendously compelling task before it—the annihilation of Conley's ugly story!

The State climaxed its case thrillingly and with deadly effect in the negro.

He came through the fire of cross-examination, exhaustive and thorough, in remarkably good shape, all things considered. He unfolded a story even more horrible than was anticipated. Certainly, in every conceivable way, he has sought to damage the defendant—even going to the extent of lodging against him another crime than murder!

Through the cross-examination, however, there ran an evident vein of deadly purpose upon the part of the defense. Conley was given full limit to go his length. He went it—no disputing that!

The question is, did he go TOO FAR?

Did he, in his last minute effort to get in EVERYTHING that possibly might work against the defendant, tell things, or say things, that eventually will rise to plague him to his utter undoing?

That is the defense's task—THE UNDOING OF CONLEY.

Conley the State's All.

Conley is the heart and soul of the State's case—without Conley, the State is rendered helpless. He is the Alpha and the Omega of the charge against Leo Frank.

That great detective, William J. Burns, says "they always—criminals—leave something out of gear in the stories they tell."

Burns declares there never was a lie told to shield a criminal that did not have in it SOMEWHERE a fatal weakness, that might be located if patiently sought for. The more elaborate the tale the criminal relates, the more chance there is, no matter how infinitely shrewd he may seem to be, that he will be discovered.

To-day is the defense's day in court—during its progress, which may be for a week or more, even as the State's day lasted 240 hours, Leo Frank must break down the awful story of Jim Conley, and prove himself innocent, if he can, of all the various charges brought against him.

Can he do it?

Well, maybe he can, and maybe he can not—at least, in the name of justice and decency and all that is right, he must have full and free OPPORTUNITY.

One Side of the Case.

During the progress of the State's case, the defense was led far into the gloom. People began to doubt Frank's innocence—people of poise and fair minds, desirous of seeing the truth prevail though the heavens fall. Even these people found themselves staggering and groping as the hideous and sinister charges fell from the lips of the negro.

Could Leo Frank, of previous good reputation, of fair name and unblemished integrity, college bred and studious in habit, so far as the public knew or suspected, be the monster responsible for little Mary Phagan's death, and also—the other unspeakable thing?

In a rather remarkable interview Mrs. Leo Frank gave The Sunday American some few weeks ago, she said this of Frank and herself: "As sweethearts, we went hand in hand, and intruded ourselves upon no person; as man and wife we have gone hand in hand, and we have intruded ourselves upon no person!"

They still are going "hand in hand," the man and the woman, the husband and the wife—the one holding up as best he can under the terrible charge of murder, the other there beside him—"for better or worse, in sickness and in health, for richer or poorer"—until death, or worse than death, shall sever the tie that binds.

That is something steadying to think about!

It is the defendant's day in court—and he is entitled to fair play and a fair chance!

To some it may seem that the burden has shifted, that it is up to the defense now, notwithstanding the more or less fictitious presumption of innocence the law jealously has established in his favor, to PROVE his innocence.

Be that as it may—even as the gloom has closed about him and all he holds most dear in this world—he still is a human being, in very dire distress, as yet unconvicted; and it is only right that the public should be patient, as he sets forth HIS side of this terrible affair.

And I give it as my opinion here and now, for whatever it is worth, that the case against Leo Frank yet may be far from conclusive—and it may never be made conclusive.

Conley's Tale Impossible?

Suppose the defense is able to show, by a sequence of logical, orderly and honorably sustained witnesses, that the tale Jim Conley tells is utterly absurd—and IMPOSSIBLE?

What then?

Will you be prepared, if forced to a conviction against your will, if it be that way with you, to say to Frank: "All right, you came through the fire, at times seemingly sure to consume you, unhurt and unscorched, but you came through, and I am content."

Conley's story has not YET been broken down—no. But it MAY be broken down.

In an article a few days ago, I said this, and I feel like repeating it now:

> In judging this Frank case, purely from the State's own standpoint, there is nothing so important as the TIME ELEMENT in which the State uncompromisingly claims the crime was committed.

In another article a few days thereafter, I said this, and this I also feel like repeating now:

> If the Conley story is a lie, if it has been TOO CLEVERLY "framed up"—if and a thousand other "ifs"—what matters that?
> It matters this: If it be a lie, it MUST break down, somewhere, sometime; if it be the truth, it will stand against ALL the assaults made upon it!

State Tied by Conley.

Remember, unless Conley's story holds together, the case against Frank goes to pieces. Everybody who has read the evidence and who still is capable of rendering just judgment will admit that.

Suppose it can be shown, and is shown, that the story Conley told CAN NOT be true?

The defense MUST show that, or Frank is lost!

Can the defense do that?

The State has pinned itself down to exact and definite propositions. Remember, the defense has hardly started its story yet—it may be able to make absurd those very propositions the State has set up.

The crime, according to the State's witnesses, MUST have been committed thus and so, in exact order, and just as stated—or Conley's story falls down.

The biggest element in the State's case is the time element—mark that!

Upon it the State will stand or fall eventually.

If Mary Phagan was NOT killed before 12:05, then Leo Frank didn't kill her. If she was not killed at that time, Conley's story will not do.

Then is when the State says she was killed—THEN and not at any other time. Conley's story ALL leads up to and away from that.

Remember, too, that the only witness who swears to knowledge or suspicion of any unspeakable conduct upon the part of Frank is—again—Conley.

Dalton a Tame Witness.

When it came to corroborating Conley, Dalton proved a tame corroborator. The ugly, nasty charge of perversion and degeneracy, glibly dropped from the lips of Conley, rests ENTIRELY AND ALTOGETHER on Conley's word.

If Conley's story of the murder is shown to be IMPOSSIBLE AND ABSURD, will you then reverse your other opinion concerning Frank—if you have accepted Conley's word as to that—and agree that Conley, having lied to send Frank to the gallows, would have lied as readily to besmirch him with unmentionable scandal otherwise?

Shall not Frank have the right, unchallenged and fair, to clear himself of every charge lodged against him?

To-day is his day in court—will any living person begrudge him, sore pressed, one moment of it?

Will, in the end, he be able to read and take to himself, happily and serenely, Tennyson's beautiful poem ending—

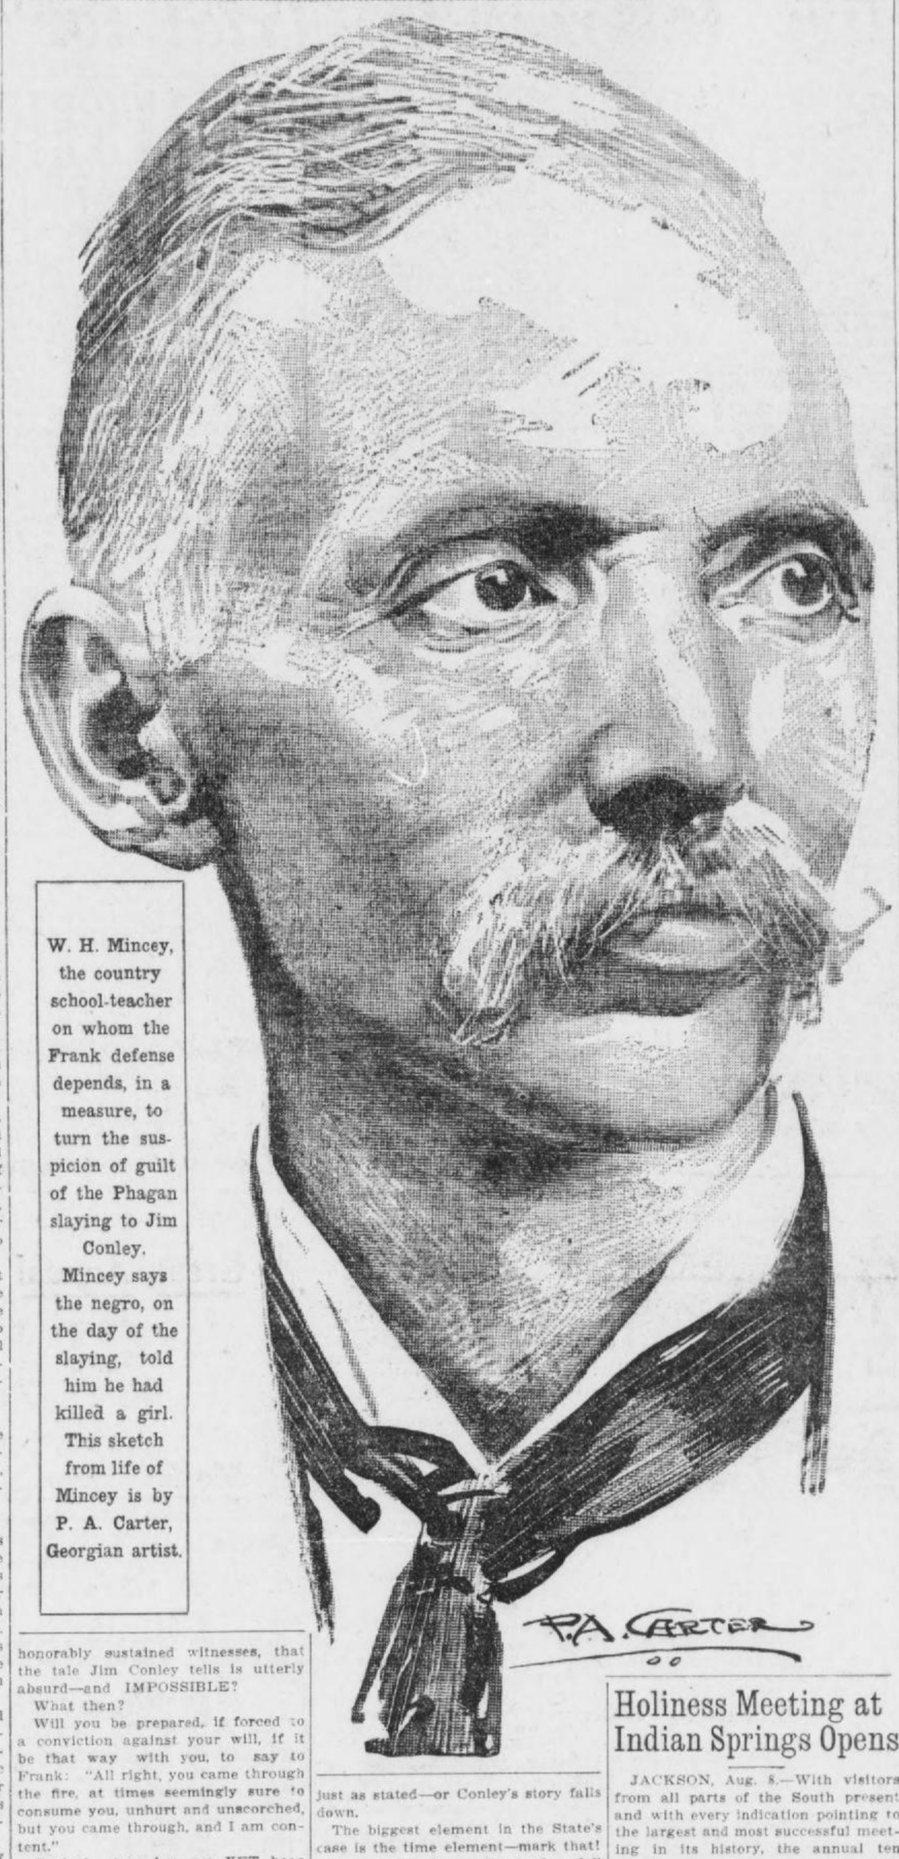
"And now it is daylight everywhere!"

Will he?

We shall see.

At least, he is entitled to his day in court—and it is at hand!

MAN WHO SAYS NEGRO JIM CONLEY CONFESSED SLAYING OF LITTLE GIRL



W. H. Mincey, the country school-teacher on whom the Frank defense depends, in a measure, to turn the suspicion of guilt of the Phagan slaying to Jim Conley. Mincey says the negro, on the day of the slaying, told him he had killed a girl. This sketch from life of Mincey is by P. A. Carter, Georgian artist.

STATE SEES BITS OF EVIDENCE AS ROPE STRANDS

Chain as Strong as Its Weakest Link, but Cord Must Be Cut Thread by Thread.

By O. B. KEELER.

They call it a chain that the State has forged, or has tried to forge, to hold Leo Frank to the murder of Mary Phagan.

But isn't it a rope?

A chain, you know, is as strong as its weakest link. Take one link out, and the chain comes apart.

With a rope, it's different.

Strand after strand might be cut or broken, and the rope still holds a certain weight. Then might come a time when the cutting of one more strand would cause the rope to break.

The point is, the finished rope will sustain a weight that would instantly snap any one of its several strands.

Bits of Evidence Threads.

And that is what the various bits of circumstantial evidence might better be called—strands or threads.

Edgar Allen Poe, in "The Mystery of Marie Roget," has nearly exhausted the philosophical phase of accumulative circumstance and its relation to evidence.

Applying the system of the well-known Dupin to the case in point—and REGARDING IT, BE IT UNDERSTOOD, STRICTLY FROM THE STATE'S VIEWPOINT—an analysis of part of the evidence against Leo Frank follows:

First off, the isolated circumstance of Conley's ability to write would seem as futile as a smoke wreath in sustaining any weight of evidence, except against Conley himself.

But to that fact is added the fact that Frank knew Conley could write.

Still, the thread is flimsy, and, even connected with the case against Frank, would appear worthless.

Six Deductions Seen.

But when it develops that Frank, knowing Conley could write, and knowing the police were trying to find the author of the murder notes—when Frank, well aware of these things, did not inform the police that Conley was lying when he said he could not write, the following deductions appear:

(1) That Frank did not want to connect Conley with the murder notes, which (2) would have been the natural and prompt inclination of a suspected man who knew nothing of the crime himself, so that (3) it appeared Frank knew something of the murder, and (4) knew that Conley knew he knew something of the murder, which (5) justified the conclusion on the part of the State that Frank feared to implicate Conley, lest (6) Conley, in turn, tell something that would implicate him.

Of course, this strand may be broken entirely by the defense, showing Frank never knew the police were ignorant of Conley's ability to write before the police learned it themselves.

But there is one pretty substantial strand of evidence, as the State sees it—and all having its genesis in the simple fact that Conley knew how to write, and at first denied it.

But that strand of itself surely would fail to carry the burden of the case. There must be others.

Even Conley's story is strong only by reason of many strands that surround and support it. Presented to a jury, round and unvarnished—tainted by the reek of false affidavits and weakened by the dry-rot of self-interest, Conley's story never would win a verdict against Leo Frank.

But there is the shred of the murder notes—Conley's story draws support from that. There is the time factor brought out by the expert testimony—Conley's story twines itself about the prop of science. There is the agitation of Frank noticed by Newt Lee in the middle of the afternoon—Conley's story provides for that. There is the visit of Monteen Stover, a tiny circumstance of itself—but of vast importance just so far as it strengthens Conley's recollection of exact time.

And it is by reason of the rope already well along in the twisting that a hundred other little circumstances become significant that of themselves would be lighter than the air-drawn dagger that troubled the dreams of Macbeth.

They fit in with the twisting of the rope.

Will the Rope Hold?

There is Frank's agitation at home and at the factory. There is the ugly story of habitual "chats" at the factory, guarded by Conley as watchman. And the sending away of Newt Lee that afternoon. And the seeing of Conley by Mrs. White, "loitering" at the place he fixes for himself as watchman, and at the time. And the alleged reluctance of Frank to confront Conley at the jail.

And all the rest of it.

So many little incidents, and most of them small to triviality in themselves.

The point is, each strengthens the other, until the fragile threads become a rope.

Will it hold after Frank's lawyers have presented their side of the case?

The jury must decide.

LEO FRANK AIDS HIS LAWYERS IN QUESTIONING OF WITNESSES

For First Time Prisoner Takes Active Interest in Trial for His Life

ARCHITECT IS QUIZZED TO REFUTE TESTIMONY OF NEGRO IN FRANK'S HOME

ing a cot, a bed or a sofa?—A. No.

Q. Did you find anything that looked like a bedroom, except the ladies' room?—A. No.

Hooper Cross-Examines.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Who told you the location of the body?—A. Mr. Schiff.

Q. He was under Mr. Frank in the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Then if that location was wrong all of your measurements were wrong?

Arnold objected and his objection was sustained.

Q. You based all your measurements on Mr. Schiff's location of the body?—A. Yes.

Q. If that was wrong, all of your measurements were wrong—I mean about lines of vision, etc.?—A. Yes.

Q. You found a gas jet burning in the basement? Where was it?—A. Near the front.

Q. On the third floor you depended for light on the front doors and windows?—A. Yes.

Q. These are all glass?—A. Yes.

Q. There is also a gas jet farther back?—A. I didn't see any.

Q. On the first floor you say there is a trap door near the elevator two feet by two feet three inches, leading to the basement?—A. Yes.

Trap Door Small.

Q. A man of your size would have a hard time getting through there, wouldn't he?—A. Yes.

Q. Two people couldn't get through? A. No.

Q. The scuttle hole back on the first floor leads to the basement?—A. Yes, to the dustpan in the back.

Q. A man doesn't look in a curved line, does he?—A. No, sir.

Q. Well, what do these curved lines on the second floor mean?—A. Those indicate the direction he probably walked.

Several of the jurymen were inattentive to these demonstrations.

Q. Anyone coming into this office could see if anyone was in there, couldn't he, if the door adjoining was open?—A. Yes.

Q. Nobody standing on the fourth floor at the head of the stairway could see down to the second floor?—A. I don't think they could.

Q. Don't you know they couldn't?—A. They might have a little view.

Frank Suggests Query.

Arnold took the witness on the redirect examination.

At the suggestion of Frank, Arnold asked the witness how near Frank's office there was a lavatory.

The witness did not know. Arnold also asked him at Frank's suggestion how far it was from the back of the stairs on the first floor to the top of the stairs at the second floor. The answer was 27 feet.

The identification of the plant and the measurements were carried on with the jury grouped around the witness on the edge of the jury box. Frank arose and walked over to Mr. Rosser to make his suggestions. Rosser whispered the questions to Arnold, who was making the examination.

Q. You did not make any test to see whether a person could view from the third to the fourth floor?—A. Yes.

Q. Would there be any trouble dropping a body down that scuttle hole?—A. No.

Q. Mr. Hooper asked you if it was dark by the elevator, was it?—A. Rather dark.

Might See Mirror.

Hooper took the wttness.

Q. This is your diagram—that block on Georgia avenue?—A. Yes.

Q. This is your diagram of the Selig home, isn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. Where was the refrigerator in the kitchen?—A. Right here.

Q. How far is it from this corner of the room to the kitchen door?—A. About four feet.

Q. A man sitting in this corner could see that mirror, could he not?—A. He might.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Could a person standing or sitting anywhere near this kitchen door see the mirror or any part of it?—A. No.

The witness was then excused.

Attorney Arnold tendered as evidence the diagram of the factory, the plat of the Selig home with reference to Pulliam, Washington and Gleen streets and Georgia avenue.

Solictor Dorsey made no objection. J. G. Adams, a photographer, was next called to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Did you go to the Selig home and take some pictures?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you take a couple of photographs, one from the kitchen door on the outside and one from the hallway looking into the dining room?—A. Only a portion of the window.

Q. Could you see the mirror from this view?—A. No.

Q. Did you take one from the inside of the door?—A. Yes.

Arnold addressed the court:

"Your honor, may I show these pictures to the jury as we go along?"

Dorsey—It's against the rule, your honor. They would not let me do it.

Rosser—Oh, get the witness down off the stand and come before the jury. You can do it that way. Don't bother about Hugh.

Shows Photos to Jury.

The witness presented pictures of the open door of the safe in the outer office, excluding the view into the inner office. He also showed a picture taken outside of the outer office which showed that, with the safe door open, the view into the inner office was excluded. He showed pictures of the basement and a series of views of the elevator shaft on the second floor. He showed pictures of where Jim Conley is said to have sat on the first floor; also pictures of the plating room and a box near where Conley said he got the cloth in which he wrapped the Phagan girl's body. He showed a picture of the lathe where some hair was found.

Q. Did you take a picture of the path a person would take coming from the metal room down the steps?—A. I did.

Mr. Arnold—I want to show the extent of the machinery in this metal room.

The attorney passed a number of photographs before the jury.

Q. In every one of these instances, Mr. Adams, did you make as accurate photographs as possible?—A. I did.

Hooper Quizzes Picture Man.

Attorney Hooper took up the cross-examination.

Q. How long since you took these photographs?—A. About a month.

Mr. Hooper went over the diagram of the Selig home with the witness.

Q. When did you take a photograph of the Selig home?—A. That was more recent.

Q. A slight change of the position of that sideboard would have made the whole room visible through the mirror?—A. It would have made some of it visible.

Q. Wouldn't it have made it all visible?—A. I can't say.

The witness was excused. All of the photographs taken by him were offered as evidence without objection on the part of the State.

Court then took a recess until 2 o'clock.

Call for George Epps.

At the opening of the afternoon session, George Epps, the newsboy who declared that he came downtown on the same car with Mary Phagan, was recalled by the defense, but was not in court. Mr. Arnold addressed the court:

"Your honor," he said, "we are very anxious to get this boy here. I understand he said he is not coming."

Judge Roan said he would issue an attachment for him.

H. J. Hinchey, manager of the Southern Blow Pipe Company, residing at 391 Peachtree street, was called. Attorney Arnold questioned him.

Q. Do you know Leo M. Frank?—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. Four or five years.

Q. What is your business?—A. Mechanical engineer with the Southern Blow Pipe Company.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank on Memorial Day?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. Near the Capitol. I was in an automobile and he was on a Washington street car. At least the car was on Washington street.

Q. What time was it?—A. Between 2 and 2:15 o'clock.

How He Remembered.

Q. How did you know that it was that time?—A. When he was accused I became very much interested and remembered doing certain things on Memorial Day. I left home between 1 and 1:10 o'clock and went through the same maneuvers to determine just what time I would have reached the Capitol.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. How many times did you see Mr. Frank as you were making the trip?—A. Just once.

Q. He was on the inside of the car?—A. Yes.

Q. You had your hands full, didn't you?—A. Not altogether. I am an expert driver.

Q. You didn't see anybody else that you recognized on the car, did you?—A. No.

Discussed It With Frank.

Q. How many times have you seen Mr. Frank in jail?—A. Only once.

Q. Did you discuss this thing with him?—A. Yes.

Q. Was it before or after the Coroner's inquest?—A. It was a long time after that.

Q. Who else did you tell of this?—A. Several other people besides him. Many of them before I even saw the lawyers.

Q. What was the object of your visit? Were you subpenaed then?—A. No. I knew that I would be. My attorney, Leonard Haas, asked me if I would be a witness.

Q. Is he an attorney for Frank?—A. No; he is our attorney.

Q. What is your company?—A. South Atlanta Blow Pipe Company.

Q. Tell me, now, why you went down there to the jail?—A. I had an interest in the case. Mr. Frank was never a personal friend of mine, although I have known him in a business way for five years. I was interested in the case purely because I knew Mr. Frank in a business way.

The witness was excused.

Model of Factory Shown.

The defense's model of the National Pencil Company's building was brought in. It was a pasteboard affair, with wooden staves, built on a scale of 3-8 inch to a foot. It displayed the basement, first and second floors. It was made by P. H. Willet, a pettern maker, and John Cox, of Arnold & Arnold law office, who is also a pattern maker. It is without exterior walls and has all the various departments and little blocks of wood indicating the machinery and other furniture on different floors. Mr. Willet was called to the stand. Attorney Arnold examined him.

Q. You had the dimensions of the National Pencil Company's building in making this model, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. Followed the proportions in making this model?—A. Yes.

Q. You did not try to make fully any model, did you—I mean you did not make it complete?—A. Not entirely.

Q. Did you make any measurements of the factory?—A. Not myself.

Q. Did Mr. Coughlin furnish you his blue prints?—A. No, Mr. Scott gave me the blue prints.

Finds Errors in Plans.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Didn't you make this front door exactly as it is?—A. I made it according to the blue prints.

Q. You don't pretend to say that the windows in the front of the third floor are at all correct?—A. I did not make them.

Here the court stenographer complained that he could not understand the witness.

Hooper: "It is not our fault that he won't talk out."

The witness finally said that the windows had been put in since he finished his design.

Q. Mr. Willet, how do you get the height from a blue print?—A. We don't get it unless it is given.

Q. Was the height given in this case?—A. For the ground floor it was.

Q. You just put in the height for the other floors?—A. I elected those heights.

Q. Look at this trapdoor hole leading into the basement. You don't mean to tell this jury it was cut in the same proportion of 3-8 inch to a foot?—A. I could not tell without measuring it.

Least Bit Out of Proportion.

The witness was given a rule to make the measurements. He said it was a least bit out of proportion.

Q. Isn't it true that the same kind of looseness applies to various parts of this model?—A. No.

Q. Is that the only mistake you made?

Arnold interrupted. "I object to him calling it a mistake," Arnold said.

Attorney Hooper said he was through with the witness, and Arnold took him on the redirect examination.

Q. Does this purport to represent the height?—A. No, it is only the ground plan.

Q. Were you given instructions to correctly follow this ground plan?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you do so?—A. Yes.

Darley Looks at Model.

N. V. Darley, assistant superintendent of the National Pencil Company, was recalled to the stand. Attorney Arnold questioned him.

Q. I wish you would examine this model and tell me whether or not it fairly represents a ground plan of the National Pencil Factory.

With Mr. Arnold questioning him, Darley pointed out the important points of the inside of the factory, as represented in the model.

Q. Is that chute that leads to the basement large enough for a body to pass through?—A. Yes.

Q. How far from where Mary Phagan's body was found would a body have been that fell through the chute?—A. Thirty or forty feet.

Q. If anybody would come down those stairs from the second floor, how far would you have to take them to throw them down the elevator shaft?—A. About 12 feet.

Door Broken Open.

Q. How about the door leading to the woodenware department? How did you find it?—A. It was broken open after the murder.

Q. Had you noticed it before?—A. No.

Q. Sitting in Mr. Frank's office, can you see the time clock?—A. About half of it.

Q. Could you see into Mr. Frank's office from the outer office door, with the safe door open?—A. Standing at the door, I would have to stand on tiptoe to see over it.

Was Dark and Cloudy Day.

Q. Is there any way of locking or bolting the door opening to the metal room from the inside?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is there a bed or a cot or anything of the sort in the whole building?—A. Only two boxes in the basement with dirty sacks on them.

Q. Do you remember the machine little Mary Phagan worked on?—A. I don't remember seeing her at it, but I remember which one it was.

Q. If those doors to the stairway, leading up to the third floor, were open, one could get into the metal room from the rear, couldn't they?—A. Yes.

Q. Is this a good model?—A. It is.

Q. What kind of a day was April 26?—A. Cloudy and dark.

Q. Was the space around the front door darker than usual?—A. Yes.

Q. Sitting in Mr Frank's office, can you see the time clock?—A. About half of it.

Q. Could you see into Mr. Frank's office from the outer office door with the safe door open?—A. Standing at the door, I would have to stand on tiptoe to see over it.

Left Factory With Frank.

Q. What time did you leave the factory Saturday morning, April 26?—A. About 9:40 o'clock.

Q. If Jim Conley said you left at 11 o'clock, is it true, or not?—A. It is not true.

Q. Is it true that Conley said that you came to the factory after 10:30 o'clock, just after Conley arrived?

Hooper interrupted: "The Supreme Court has held that one witness cannot pass on the truthfulness of another. I object to both of these questions."

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Q. Who left the factory with you?—A. Mr. Leo Frank.

Q. Did you see Jim Conley?—A. No.

Q. Where did you go?—A. Mr. Frank went to Montag's and I went to the Montgomery Theater.

Q. Did you take a drink of soda water together?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever call upon Saturday afternoons?—A. Yes, almost every Saturday. I called to find out about the finance sheet.

Q. Was Frank always there?—A. Always, but one time.

Conley Looked Suspicious.

Q. Mr. Dalton testified that last year he came in contact with a negro night watchman there. Did you have a negro night watchman then?—A. We always had a white night watchman until about April 1.

Q. I will ask you if the finance sheet was not always made up on Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see this negro Conley there Monday?—A. I did.

Q. How did he appear?—A. He looked excited. So much so that I told the watchman to keep an eye on him.

Dorsey objected: "I object to what he told someone else."

Judge Roan sustained the objection over the protest of the defense.

Q. Did you ever pinch or joke with Conley?—A. I didn't call it joking. I have kicked him when I found him loafing. He always laughed.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank joke him him?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Did you contribute to the fund to defend Frank?—A. No.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins?—A. I never heard of her until yesterday.

Q. Are you acquainted with her general reputation?—A. No.

Q. When did you find that door open?—A. Three days after the crime.

Q. People were going in and out of the factory all the time, were they not?—A. Yes.

Body in Public Place.

Q. Detectives were all over the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. They went through the door, didn't they?—A. Yes.

Q. Don't you know this trap door was nailed down until the insurance people went through there?—A. No.

Q. Don't you remember two or three days after the murder you saw me go up those steps and find the door nailed?—A. I don't recall what door. I found it open.

Q. Don't you know that if a person had dropped a body down that chute, it would have been a better hiding place for it than anywhere else in the factory?

Arnold: I object to the question.

Dorsey changed the question.

Q. Well, then, which is the most public, this spot where the body was found, or back behind the boxes at the chute?—A. Where the body was found.

WOMAN DENIES SHE EVER VISITED PENCIL PLANT WITH DALTON

Miss Daisy Hopkins contradicts his story told to corroborate Conley.

The Frank trial audience laughed when C. B. Dalton said he didn't know where he was born.

Sheriff Mangum Answers Handcuffing Criticism.

Sheriff Mangum issued the following announcement to-day:

To the Public and Citizens of Fulton County:

Some complaints are being made in regard to the handcuffing of a prisoner while being transported to and from the Tower to court.

When only one prisoner is to be handled, if he is not violent or unruly he is allowed to go with an officer or officers without being handcuffed, be he white, black or any other color known on earth, regardless of sex, creed or nationality.

The Sheriff and his deputies are responsible for the safe handling of a prisoner and my belief is that the people of Fulton County have confidence in their Sheriff and his men.

Respectfully,

PARIS, Aug. 8.—Mme. Crespy, the poetess, charged with the murder of Abbe Chassaign, a young priest, with whom she was infatuated, was acquitted in the Criminal Court at Agen to-day.

Her defense was that the priest committed suicide, but the prosecution contended that the woman killed her sweetheart in a jealous rage.

Recovered From Severe Lung Trouble

Plenty of fresh air and good food are necessary to persons suffering from lung trouble, but something more is needed to bring about full health. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for throat and lung troubles, and so many reports have been received showing that it brought about good results in a number of cases which were declared hopeless, that all sufferers who are not benefiting otherwise should at least investigate what it has done for others. Madison Lake, Minn.

"Gentlemen: In December, 1908, March, 1909, and September, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs which confined me several weeks, each time to my bed. My doctor advised me to go West.

"In November I started for Denver, Colo. After my arrival I met Michael Brody, who upon learning of my condition, urged me to take Eckman's Alterative. In about two months I began to feel better. I kept on taking the medicine and improved fast. In March, 1910, I returned home. I think I am entirely well, have a good appetite and sleep well. When I left Denver my weight was 138 pounds. I now weigh 165, my normal weight. I thank God and your Alterative for my health."

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drug stores and other leading druggists. CONLEY'S STORY PUT IN PECULIAR LIGHT WHEN DEFENSE CALLS SCOTT

Harry Scott, of the Pinkerton agency, showed up the "confessions" of Conley in a peculiar light when he was called to the stand by the Frank defense Thursday afternoon.

The detective, questioned by Luther Rosser, told the jury that Conley, when he "had told everything," when he had accused Frank of the killing and had made himself an accessory after the fact by declaring that he assisted in the disposal of the body; when every motive for holding anything back had been swept away by his third affidavit, still denied to him (Scott) many of the alleged circumstances to which he testified while he was on the stand the first three days of the week.

It will be the contention of the defense that these many additions to Conley's tale, inasmuch as all reason for concealing them had passed after Conley had come out with his accusations against Frank and his confession of his own part in the crime, are pure fabrications of the black man's imagination, as are the other details of his tale.

Scott said that he had grilled and badgered Conley repeatedly about seeing Mary Phagan enter the factory. Even after the negro had made all his incriminating statements, he steadfastly denied seeing the girl victim go up the stairs to the second floor.

Denied He Had Seen Purse.

He denied also to Scott, the detective said, that he ever had seen the girl's mesh bag or parasol, or that he ever had heard a girl's scream while he was sitting on the first floor. He told the detectives that he did not see Lemmie Quinn or Monteen Stover enter the factory, although he later declared he had seen them both and so testified on the stand.

Conley said on the stand when he was questioned by Rosser that he thought he had told all these things to Scott and John Black while he was making his third and final affidavit. Scott was called to testify that Conley not only had failed to tell them, but for the most part had made strenuous denials when asked about them. It was expected that Black would be called early Friday to testify on the same matter.

Rosser, in his examination of Detective Scott, sought to create in the minds of the jury the impression that Conley had been guided and directed by the detectives in the framing of his string of statements and affidavits.

Scott admitted that the improbabilities in the negro's statements had been pointed out to him, and that, with these suggestions, Conley proceeded to doctor up his affidavits until they harmonized better with the circumstances of the day.

Solicitor Dorsey was loath to let any statement get into the record which indicated that Conley had been coached by the detectives, and he got Scott to say that no one had put the words in the negro's mouth.

"But you would say," shouted Rosser, "'That don't fit, Jim,' and Jim would get something that did fit; isn't that so?"

It takes a baby a year or more to get six teeth.

In a year or less six of your teeth may be seriously damaged by lack of proper care. Proper care does not mean that you have to spend an hour a day scrubbing your teeth. Just two or three minutes in the morning and two or three at night.

And the care that you give your teeth is an investment that comes back a hundred fold in better health, and a better chance to make your mark in the world.

A few cents invested in a delicious dentifrice that gets you into the regular habit of teeth care, is common sense invested for your entire future life,

Sheriff Mangum Answers Handcuffing Criticism.

Sheriff Mangum issued the following announcement to-day:

To the Public and Citizens of Fulton County:

Some complaints are being made in regard to the handcuffing of a prisoner while being transported to and from the Tower to court.

When only one prisoner is to be handled, if he is not violent or unruly he is allowed to go with an officer or officers without being handcuffed, be he white, black or any other color known on earth, regardless of sex, creed or nationality.

The Sheriff and his deputies are responsible for the safe handling of a prisoner and my belief is that the people of Fulton County have confidence in their Sheriff and his men.

Respectfully,
C. W. MANGUM, Sheriff.

Bell Buzzard Found! No, Not at Winsted

FORSYTH, Aug. 8.—The bell buzzard has been discovered again.

Roger H. Taylor, of this county, is sponsor for the story that on last Wednesday a buzzard, with a bell around its neck, passed through the settlement known as Northwest Corner and was seen by several reputable citizens.

Lighting on a tree in the settlement the buzzard attracted considerable attention, and it is claimed that the bell was not only visible, but the sound of the tinkle was unmistakable.

Two Die from Gases At Bottom of Well

ROME, Aug. 8.—Overcome by gas in the bottom of a well on Sheldon Simm's farm near Rome, Tom Lowry and Hugh Floyd expired before they could be rescued.

Lowry was at the bottom of the well cleaning it out when he yelled that gas was about to overcome him. A bucket was let down and he was drawn to the top. Just as he reached for support he missed the outstretched hands and fell to the bottom of the well.

Floyd tried to rescue him and as he clung to the bucket to be lowered, he, too, fell, and was killed.

Anti-American Feeling Stirred by Huerta as United States Envoy Nears Capital.

der section 33 of the Mexican Constitution unless he makes out his mission to be favorable to Huerta's aims.

Section 33 provides that persons of suspicious intentions shall be driven from the country and not be allowed to return except on special permission from the Government.

It was decided that no official greeting shall be extended to Mr. Lind, thus breaking a tradition which is as immemorial as diplomacy itself.

After the conference Senor Aldape said:

"The Government has decided upon a definite course of action to be followed in the present situation, and we believe that it will be approved by all persons of justice. President Huerta is striving to re-establish order in Mexico, and he believes that outside interference, unless invited, would do more harm than good. President Huerta has the good of Mexico at heart, and I know that he would make great sacrifices in behalf of his country."

Mexico's Defy Ignored Until Lind Delivers Note.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Pending the arrival in Mexico of John Lind, special and personal representative of President Wilson, this Government will take no action with respect to the defy issued by the Mexican foreign office threatening to deport former Governor Lind as an undesirable alien.

Offical confirmation of the issuance of the threat has reached the State Department, but Secretary Bryan and other Government officials say the United States will make no move until it is seen whether the Mexican Government intends to carry out its threat.

Former Governor Lind is due to reach Vera Cruz to-night. If he makes good connections he should get to Mexico City in time for a conference with President Huerta to-morrow afternoon. It is believed here the Mexican President will be forced to confer with President Wilson's representative, if only to discover the nature of the communication it has been admitted the former Governor of Minnesota carries with him.

Should President Huerta deem it best to expel Mr. Lind, the United States may be forced to take drastic measures, but it is hoped at the State Department that this undesirable alternative will be avoided by a change of front on the part of the Mexican President after he receives Lind's message from President Wilson, the contents of which is unknown here to anyone save the President and Secretary Bryan.

After a conference with the President, Secretary Bryan to-day announced that the statement sent to the American Embassy at Mexico City for the Mexican foreign office that Special Ambassador Lind would be persona non grata to the Mexican Government unless he brought the proper credentials with him, had been received at the State Department to-day and that the President now has it under consideration.

At the request of the State Department, the battleship Michigan to-day was moved from Vera Cruz to Ciudad Del Carmen, Mexico. It was feared that the arrival of the battleship New Hampshire at Vera Cruz to-day might give rise to a report that the United States was preparing for active intervention and the Michigan, therefore, was moved farther down the coast, where she will remain for further orders.

SEN. JOHNSTON OF ALABAMA IS DEAD

United States Senator Victim of Pneumonia After Nine Days' Illness at Capital.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Senator Joseph F. Johnston, of Alabama, died at 9 o'clock this morning at his apartment in the Brighton.

Senator Johnston had been ill for eight days, suffering from pneumonia.

As a mark of respect to the memory of Senator Johnston, the Senate adjourned almost immediately after assembling at noon.

Senator Overman offered a resolution for the appointment of a committee of Senators to take part in the funeral ceremonies and to accompany the body to Birmingham, where burial is to be made.

The Vice President appointed the following committee: Senators Bankhead, of Alabama; Bacon, Overman, Chamberlain, Hitchcock, Clarke, of Arkansas; Vardaman, Johnson, Swanson, Smith, of South Carolina; Thornton, Warren, Bristow, Gallinger, Catron, Bradley and Kenyon.

The funeral party will leave here to-night, and is expected to reach Birmingham to-morrow night. The funeral will take place Sunday morning.

Senator Joseph Forney Johnston, of Birmingham, was born in North Carolina in 1843. He served in the Confederate army from the beginning of the war to its conclusion, and was wounded four times. He rose from a private to the rank of captain, and was frequently mentioned honorably for gallant conduct.

Senator Johnston served four years as Governor of Alabama, before his election to the Senate in 1907. His first election to the Senate was to the unexpired term of Senator E. W. Pettus, deceased. He was re-elected in 1909 to his present term.

Senator Johnston's death at this time undoubtedly will bring about an acute political crisis in Alabama. His seat was being contested at the time of his death by Congressman R. P. Hobson, and the fight between them had grown very bitter. It is practically certain that Hobson will not be permitted, now that Johnston is dead, to have the succession uncontested.

There has been talk of Congressman Underwood as a candidate against Mr. Hobson, and the death of Senator Johnston likely will revive that.

His immediate successor will be named by Governor O'Neal, which means that Mr. Hobson will not get the immediate appointment.

He had been in poor health for several weeks.

Mrs. Johnston was with her husband when he died, as well as Forney Johnston, his son, who arrived from his home in Birmingham yesterday.

Mobile Offers Stevens To Fill Vacancy.

MOBILE, Aug. 8.—Mobile will ask Governor O'Neal to appoint State Senator T. M. Stevens to the vacant place in the United States Senate, caused by the death of Senator Joseph F. Johnston.

Stevens was the O'Neal administration leader at the last session of the Alabama Legislature. The man who will be appointed will not be a candidate for the place at the next election.

Immediate Election May Be Necessary.

MONTGOMERY, Aug. 8.—Governor O'Neal may be compelled to call an extra session of the Alabama Legislature to order an election at once to fill the vacancy in the United States Senate, as it is generally believed at the Capitol here to-day that under the Seventeenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution the Governor has not the power to appoint a successor to the late Senator J. E. Johnston, who died in Washington to-day.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

At the Grand.

Pictures at the Grand are becoming more and more popular every day. Commencing next Monday, the policy will be to present pictures daily from 2:30 until 10:30, with complete new programs each day, at 10 cents admission for the best seats, and children at half price.

Forsyth Bill Pleases.

Every performance this week at the Forsyth has attracted almost the holding capacity in the busy theater. While it is a fact that the show is without a headliner or a feature that may have been advertised, it is nevertheless a combination of pleasing talent that has won applause from every gathering.

Next week's star will be Ralph Herz, the musical comedy character comedian, who has been a late star with "Dr. Duluth," and who was one of the big features with "Madame Sherry" and "The Charity Girl."

At the Bijou.

"Along the Pike" is drawing the biggest audiences of the season to the Bijou this week. The attraction has made good beyond the expectations of the management.

The Bijou will close its doors on Saturday for two weeks, during which time the painters will overhaul the little theater, preparatory to the opening of the fall season on August 25.

CAREY, REBUKED, HITS AT BOARD OF PARKS

Manager Says Factionalism Bars New Ideas—Declares He Is Serving Last Term.

Dan Carey, General Manager of Parks, declared Friday that factionalism in the Park Board had reached such a degree that the exploitation of any new ideas absolutely was prevented and that he was serving his last term under such conditions.

Authentic reports from the faction opposed to him are that plans are being made to drop him at the end of his term, January 1, 1915.

The old-time factionalism reached an acute stage at a meeting Thursday afternoon because Manager Carey had not consulted President J. O. Cochran about contracts for an underground conduit for the lighting of Piedmont Park.

Board Censures Mr. Carey.

President Cochran, with the balance of power in the board, has been supporting Manager Carey. But when Manager Carey took action on his own initiative he switched to the anti-Carey faction led by M. B. Young and R. A. Burnett and resolutions were adopted by a vote of 9 to 3 reprimanding Mr. Carey for making contracts without consulting the board.

Tangle Over "Loaned Stone."

Manager Carey also asked the board to straighten out an agreement between President Cochran and Engineer Nym Hurt, of the City Construction Department, about some crushed stone. Manager Carey said the minutes of the board showed that President Cochran had represented to the board that the stone had been given, while Mr. Hurt claims that it was only loaned and he wanted it back.

President Cochran said he understood that the stone had been loaned, and if he had represented that it had been given to the department he had made a mistake.

"It seems that a member of the board can do anything, but anything the general manager does is wrong," said Mr. Carey.

Commissioners Frank Reynolds, William Van Houten and Councilman Sam Shepard stoutly defended Manager Carey, but they were outvoted.

What the Charges Are.

Here are the specific charges brought by President Cochran against Manager Carey:

That the board appropriated $200 to remove the Erskine fountain to Grant Park and that Manager Carey spent $600 on it.

That negligence resulted in $22 demurrage collected on cars of stone one time and $17 another.

That he has given contracts for $800 for underground wiring of Piedmont Park, and that all of these expenditures were contracted for without the knowledge or consent of the board.

Manager Carey explained that the wiring contracts were made as a result of a misunderstanding between himself and City Electrician R. C. Turner.

Girl Accuses Rich Fiance of Slaying

CLINTON, KY., Aug. 8.—May Copeland, held here as the confessed slayer of her brother-in-law, Hugh Atkinson, at Bardwell, to-day startled the jail authorities by making another confession, saying the killing was done by Lucien Turk, the wealthy fiance of the Copeland girl. Turk is being held at Paducah as an accessory.

In her statement to the police here the girl said that Turk killed her brother-in-law because Atkinson, according to May Copeland's admission to him, had wronged her. J. W. Turk, her fiance's father, the girl said, promised to give her $20,000 if she would confess the killing herself, and pay attorneys who would obtain her freedom under an unwritten law plea.

SCREWS, VETERAN JOURNALIST, DEAD

Noted Alabama Editor Stricken Suddenly at Country Home Near Montgomery.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 8.—From an attack of acute indigestion, Major William Wallace Screws, the veteran editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, died suddenly Thursday night at his country home in Coosada, fourteen miles from Montgomery. Major Screws was 74 years old, and while his health had not been very good for several months, his death was unexpected. With him at the time of his death were his two sons, Benjamin Screws and Holt Screws, and his wife.

"The most beloved man in Alabama," was a title often given Major Screws, who despite the many bitter political fights he entered, always held the highest respect of both sides. He became connected with The Advertiser shortly after the war, and in a short while became sole owner of the paper. A few years later he sold half interest in the paper to Frank P. Glass, and under their combined directorship The Advertiser progressed to one of the foremost morning papers in the South.

Major Screws was born February 25, 1839, in Barbour County, Alabama, and attended school at Glennville. In 1859 he took up the study of law with the famous law firm of Watts, Judge and Jackson in Montgomery and was admitted to the bar in 1859 at the age of 20 years.

Though opposed to secession, Major Screws fought for his State, and went with the first troops to Pensacola. There he participated in the capture of Fort Barancas. He fought throughout the entire war, being captured in Virginia during the last few weeks of the struggle. He acted as correspondent for The Advertiser for the four years of the great struggle.

He held many offices of honor and was a prominent Mason, being grand high priest, Grand Chapter Royal Arch Masons of Alabama. He was Secretary of State for Alabama from 1878 to 1882, postmaster at Montgomery from 1893 to 1897, served a term as president of the National Editorial Association, and was connected in an official capacity with many other large associations.

Despite his years, Major Screws had retained a perfect control of his faculties, and until recently his physical condition was of the best.

Funeral arrangements have not been made yet.

Stage Ambitions of 2 Youths Shattered

Recorder Pro Tem. Preston Friday morning wrecked the stage ambitions of Joe Welch, of Center Hill, and Garland Hensley, of Fort McPherson, when he advised them to give up their ideas of show life and "go on and work for a living."

The two boys were found early Friday asleep in a box car in the Southern Railway yards. They explained they were out Thursday night at a rehearsal for a show and stayed too late to catch a car home. Judge Preston dismissed the cases.

Railroad Travel's Greatest Peril Is the Open Switch

The toll of lives taken each year by this ever-present danger has been enormous.

For years the inventive genius at the command of every great railroad system has been devoted to solving this question.

The question has been solved. The danger has been removed. The open switch is closed. The Shepherd Automatic Switch Company has answered the problem. Its safety device has removed the peril from the open switch as thoroughly as the removal of a serpent's fangs destroys his sting.

By a non-electrical mechanical device the main line is closed as soon as the last truck of a car has crossed the switch. It can be opened when the engineer throws a lever on entering the siding.

The danger of open and split switches is absolutely eliminated. As a time-saver this device will remove from a third to a half of the number of stops and operations of switchmen in taking and leaving siding.

The value of the Shepherd Automatic Switch will be shown by a special demonstration to-morrow (Saturday), August 9, at 3 p. m., on a spur track of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, at the Atlanta Manufacturing Supply Company's shop in Oakland City, on the East Point car line.

The public is urged to view the practical demonstration of this wonderful invention.

Detailed information as to the Shepherd Automatic Switch will be gladly furnished by W. R. Green, at the Aragon Hotel, or W. C. Warfield, 706 Fourth National Bank Building.

Remember, the demonstration begins promptly at 3 p. m. tomorrow at Oakland City.

Take East Point car.

ORGANIZATION OF DEALERS MADE PERMANENT

Dixie's Merchants Take Important Step in Convention—Georgia Man President.

Convinced of the value of their annual gatherings, the merchants in convention at the Auditorium Friday morning organized a permanent body, the Southern States Merchants' Association, which will perpetuate these meetings and "co-operate in all ways calculated to advance the interests of its members."

J. W. Vaughn, of Cartersville, Ga., is to be president of the association, at least until the next convention in February, 1914. Other officers are: Vice presidents, R. O. Crouch, of Griffin, Ga., and T. E. Smith, of Greer, S. C.; secretary-treasurer, H. T. Moore.

Resolutions binding delegates to refuse credit to farmers who will not diversify their crops was not adopted. In modified form, simply indorsing diversification, the resolutions were passed.

Stock Raising Indorsed.

The convention further indorsed the raising of live stock and the improvement of the lower Missippi River. The bills fathered by the Georgia Retailers also were approved.

There will be one more session of the convention Saturday. Entertainment features, however, continue another week.

"The farmer's not has proven so good in 100 country banks and 1,000,000 transactions that we are almost ready to say that we have lost more money on the obligations of the United States in the recent decline of its bonds than we have lost in dealing with the farmer," said W. S. Witham, resenting the "prevalent condescending and patronizing" attitude toward the farmer.

Mr. Witham explained and praised the farm loan banks of Europe.

Jones on Store Discipline.

Boling H. Jones, chairman, took the subject of store discipline and management. His suggestions were eminently practical. For eight years he ran a chain of six retail stores, and from this experience cited seevral lessons in storekeeping.

Failure of clerks to charge goods sold, through lack of system, he believes is responsible for a 3 per cent leakage in many stores. A test convinced him of this, he said.

Mr. Jones preached strongly against price cutting. The remedy is close buying, and manufacturers would prefer small and frequent orders, he said.

"Give your clehks responsibility. Let them do their own buying, and they'll work harder to do the selling. Back up your clerks. Never quote a lower price than you allow them to make," he concluded.

Complete Bookkeeping Urged.

"You need ne expert to supervise your accounts," said C. E. Pollard, of the American Audit Company. "What you need are records so complete and so simple that they speak for themselves. I plead for complete books, to show costs of every kind in detail. Very seldom, indeed, can too many details be shown. Uusually, too few details are shown."

L. C. Upshaw, of Douglasville, Ga., talked on credits and collections. At the start he made many amusing characterizations of various "poor pay" types—"movers," "scientific" cranks of no real judgment, and "pony sawmill" men.

Of the sawmill men, he said: "Here is a safe rule. If a pony sawmill man owns one outfit, sell him cash. If he aowns two outfits—don't sell him at all."

Fire Insurance Needed.

H. E. Choate reminded the delegates that the United States pays $690,000 daily to the "demon fire"—about $2.50 per capita per year.

"No merchant can be without fire insurance," he said. "We hear dealers say rates are too high. Rates are high because hazard iss great, which is the best reason for insurance. We call many men unfortunate when they really are improvident."

He concluded with a plea for fire prevention.

C. W. McClure urged the value of organization, and advised delegates to form associations in every small town to watch credits and study merchandising.

He suggested farmers' conventions on the lines of the retailers' convention.

"Neither my husband nor I have ever kissed any one. We believe kissing a menace to good health, and persons indulging should be punished by law."

MACON, GA., Aug. 8.—Macon's municipal campaign will open next week with the announcement of the Aldermanic tickets by City Clerk Bridges Smith and Alderman A. L. Dasher, who are opposing candidates for the mayoralty. It developed to-day that Colonel W. A. Huff, who was mayor for ten years, would have been a candidate but for the entry of Mr. Dasher, whom he agreed not to oppose. Mr. Smith offered to stay out of the race if Colonel Huff desired to run, but the latter said he was debarred by reason of Mr. Dasher's candidacy.

The administration party is supporting Mr. Smith. He and Mr. Dasher both state that their tickets will be announced next week.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—Mr. and Mrs. Jack Borron and George Pratt came from Macon, Mo., to-day to buy an automobile for the Borron family. Pratt carried the money that was to be paid for it. Borron had a certificate of deposit for $1,500, a gift of Pratt.

Seven years ago George Pratt was on his way to the Klondike. He became stranded in Macon, Mo., stopped at the Borron home and begged food and lodging. He was given the best food in the poor household and in the night he became violently ill. Mr. and Mrs. Borron cared for him through an illness that lasted more than a month. They gave him railroad fare to Kansas City. When Pratt left he said:

"If I strike it in the gold fields, I'll not forget you. I'll be back this way."

Borron last evening answered a knock and at the door faced a stranger. He did not remember Pratt, who was dressed in clothes of the latest fashion. Pratt extended a hand filled with gold certificates.

"I'm George Pratt," he said. "Here's $1,500. Stick it in your jeans. I struck it rich in the Klondike. We'll get ready early in the morning to buy an automobile. I have waited until I could buy you one before I tried to enjoy a ride."

People ate soda crackers in the old days, it is true—but they bought them from a barrel or box and took them home in a paper bag, their crispness and flavor all gone.

THE HEART OF GEORGIA

HEROD'S HOG AND HEROD'S SON

A Roman cynic said:

"Rather be Herod's hog than be Herod's son."

Herod's boys—

They were dead.

Herod's heartlessness—

His cruel indifference had killed them.

The children had displeased Herod—

But the hog—he was alive.

When Herod died his hog and gold went not with his soul.

To-day the heart of Georgia stirs—

Not with the lust and greed which brought shameful fame to Herod of old—

But with the pity—

The tenderness—

The love which nineteen hundred years ago began to flow from Christ crucified, our Lord.

You will not return to our great Mother, the State, and say:

"Behold, this we have done for our fields, our cows and hogs—

"For our girls and boys—

"We had neither the time to consider,

"Nor the funds to provide."

For to-day Georgia holds flesh and blood as of greater value than swine and kine—

To-day the tears and suffering of one little girl whose life and honor might have been saved had you made the provision—these are worth more to your State than all the money, about which we chatter and talk forgetting that lives are being lost.

And you are Georgia.

Your heart is hers—

Her heart is yours, as is her power.

And you will not neglect—

You will take the time.

You will never whine:

"WE HAVE NO MONEY FOR THESE."

When you are spending money on cows and hogs.

You will provide.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XVI.

THE first year of Mary Danforth's life in the business world dragged its dreary length away. In the beginning there had been some excitement attendant upon the new experience, and this had buoyed her up. To be sure there had been a great wrench in giving up the home of which she and her mother were so fond, but for her mother's sake the girl put her own griefs in the background. She remembered that once, several years ago, her father had said to his wife:

"She is singularly dependent and sensitive, Mary. If anything should happen to me you must look after her as tenderly as I have tried to do. I depend upon you for that."

The words recurred to the girl often through the wearisome months that followed upon her father's death, when she saw the elderly woman's sad face grow sadder as she tried to accustom herself to changed conditions. When Mary left home each morning it was with the appreciation that her mother must be both housekeeper and houseworker, and that she was not used to such toil. The girl would rise early in order that she herself might make her own bed and set her own room to rights, then help about the breakfast.

Yet in spite of these efforts on her part there were the dishes to be washed, the tiny flat to be swept and dusted, and the meals to be prepared by the widow. Mary would urge her to eat a substantial luncheon, yet she always feared that her own ideas of what "substantial" meant in this connection and her mother's interpretation of the word differed as soon as the daughter was out of sight. Therefore she would order from the butcher on her way downtown a chop or some other nourishing tidbit for her mother. Delicacies were a strain upon Mary Danforth's small purse, but her parent's strength must be kept up. Yet, do what the girl would, she was sure that when night came the patient widow was too tired or too depressed to sleep. She also knew—better than did her mother—that she herself, often went without food at the noon hour to save the price of a luncheon. A few crackers slipped into her bag before she left home would take the place of the noon-day meal.

In spite of these economies the family finances were very low. More than once Mrs. Danforth had been forced to use a little of what she called her "insurance money" to get herself some necessary bit of clothing. Each time this was done Mary was impressed afresh with the hopelessness of her efforts to support two women decently on her small salary.

Business was dull in all branches, and real estate was not booming. James Pearson, her employer, had a wife with enough money in her own right to support herself and her husband, so the success of his enterprise was not essential to his existence. He kept the business because he liked to feel that he was not dependent upon his wife. Mary often wished fervently that she was in the employ of some man to whom work was a necessity and who would be energetic and progressive. But she dared not abandon a certainty for an uncertainty.

It was at this juncture that Herbert Fischer ("Bert" as his friends called him), got into the habit of coming to Pearson's office to talk over a possible real estate deal. At first the girl barely noticed him, so absorbed was she in the many duties that fell to her lot, for she soon discovered that she was not only stenographer and typewriter, but assistant bookkeeper and office boy combined. Night found her jaded and nervous, looking forward eagerly to the sitter from Gordon Craig that often awaited her when she returned to her flat.

Twice Fletcher, who had remained in the inner office talking to Pearson, came into the outer office just as Mary was putting on her coat and hat, and offered to escort her to the elevated where she was to take the train uptown. Both times the girl had declined coldly, yet the second time she did this her heart smote her as she saw his disappointed expression. Somehow, she thought, as she walked toward the Cortlandt street station, the look in the man's eyes reminded her of that in a faithful dog's eyes. She was so lonely that even the thought of a dog's devotion would comfort her, she said to herself with whimsical humor. Yet this man Fletcher was a common kind of a person, she decided—not a bit like the men of her world.

Then she smiled bitterly. At least not like the men of the world she used to live in. Perhaps, after all, a girl who worked in a little office on a mean salary, and who lived in a five-room apartment in the poorest section of West Eighty-fourth street, could hardly afford to sneer at anything just because he was not educated to the standard that had once been hers, and had not the refinement that was traditional in the circle of which she had once formed a part. That circle had melted away since her father's death. She could not keep pace with her friends, and one by one they had dropped out of her life. She did not care, she muttered untruthfully to herself. When one declares bitterly that she "does not care" that is usually when really "cares" most.

And that night there was no letter from Craig. He usually wrote her three times a week, but this was the fourth time in six weeks that his letter had not come on the day that she expected it.

"Never mind, dearest," she said to her mother, who commented on the non-arrival of the expected epistle and who remarked that "it was queer that Gordon had not written regularly lately," and "hoped that nothing was wrong" with her daughter's lover. "Gordon and I understand each other, and he is extremely busy just now. One can hardly expect a man to write as often as a woman does, you know."

Her mother kissed the speaker tenderly. "That's so, darling," she assented, "and the busier Gordon is the more work he will do, and the sooner he will come for you, dearie—and for me."

"Yes!" the girl assented, bravely. "That is true, dear mother."

But in her heart she was saying: "How can I stand this kind of life unless he comes soon! How can I stand it!"

Lady Constance Stewart Richardson on How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

The first figure is a dainty and simple pose, but it works beautifully into any of the dances that are so popular to-day, for, as we all know, dancing is coming into its own, and one of the most beautiful and widely neglected arts is now making a place for itself.

In this, as in so many dancing movements, the figure must be poised lightly on the ball of the foot.

The second figure (2B) is an exercise that must bring to the body the lightness of flying, and when once it is mastered you will find that you have true grace at your command.

FIGURE TWO.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

Copyright 1913 by International News Service.

WHEN I was a child of 11 I used to go out in the gardens of my English home and study the statues and statuettes that decorated it. For hours at a time I used to copy the poses of those lovely classical statues, and I found the greatest entertainment and joy in trying to imitate those beautiful poses. This was the beginning of my dancing, and from the taste I acquired for classical pose and movement has come, I feel sure, whatever measure of bodily grace is mine.

Dancing is essentially feeling, and the expression of that feeling well up in movement and rhythm. It makes for grace and for strong, healthy bodies as no other form of exercise can, because no other form of exercise is as universally possible, as entirely within the reach of all, as this natural expression of the poetry we all have down in our natures.

To-day I am giving you two exercises that express the joy of living to a wonderful extent and give the body much to rejoice in, for they make for grace, for lightness and for the universally desired bodily beauty.

The First Figure.

The first figure is a dainty and simple pose, but it works beautifully into any of the dances that are so popular to-day, for, as we all know, dancing is coming into its own, and one of the most beautiful and widely neglected arts is now making a place for itself. This figure (1B) may be learned with the support of a wall, but it should be worked out in such perfection that it can be done with absolute poise. It will strengthen weak ankles and insteps while it is developing power for grace in arms and legs. Here is my method of practicing it: Point the toes of the right foot straight forward and balance the weight firmly on that foot. Now raise the left leg slowly from the floor, keeping the foot almost at right angles to the other foot. Lift the arms slowly, keeping the right arm held in one continuous line, while the left is curved at the elbow and raised at the wrist. The fingers are held lightly and well apart. The whole body inclines slightly toward the left when the left arm and leg are expressing the greater amount of action, and when the weight falls in the alternate pose I always recommend the body sways to the raised right foot.

This exercise, like all other dancing movements, must express lightness and joy, for dancing is dancing only when it comes as an expression of a happy spirit. It must express personality and yet conform to true ideals of grace and beauty, and thus in time it will bring the body to grace and beauty, too.

Figure Two.

The second figure (2B) is an exercise that must bring to the body the lightness of flying, and when once it is mastered you will find that you have true grace at your command. In this, as in so many dancing movements, the figure must be poised lightly on the ball of the foot. Just such simple movements as poising the body lightly on the toes or ball of the foot will help avoid civilization's arch enemy, flatfoot, and will help in the acquisition of a light, springy walk.

Poise the body lightly on the right foot, with a general inclination toward the right. Stretch the right arm up and out and droop the left arm from shoulder to just below the waist in one long curve. Even while the body is swaying in this position, lift the left leg from the hip and sway it backward from the knee, making one line from knee to toes and bringing the foot almost on a level with the knee. Now stand on the left foot and alternate from side to side.

This exercise is by no means easy to master, but there is no movement of which I know that can be more absolutely counted on to bring the figure into the long, graceful, undulating lines we all so much admire.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

JULY 6.—"Tell me your name, Little Girl," said the woman who had rolled out such expressions as "the fundamental principles of liberty" as naturally as an entirely different type of woman rolls out the words "darlingest" and "cute," showing to which class she belonged.

Manette looked at me. I nodded my head. Then, to my surprise, the child told her real name—my name, and the name I was trying to keep secret.

"Blake," I hastily added. "Blake," she repeated after me.

The visitor looked grimly satisfied. Her suspicions were confirmed!

"You are Manette H——, the little heiress. You are not Manette Blake at all, and if you will come with me I will take you to your guardian. If you," turning to me, "interfere, I will have you arrested."

I laughed. "I hope," I said, putting fresh bait on my hook, and casting it out into the water, "that I will live long enough to see your sex in power. You are so inconsequential, so altogether unreasoning, and so cocksure that you are right that we will no longer be forced to turn to the joke books for amusement. The Congressional Records, in that glorious period, will cause a laugh to ring around the world."

"When the women are in power," she retorted, "idlers like you who go around insulting women will be dogged."

This was growing interesting. "I am not idle," I replied. "I am fishing. I have been fishing for three hours and haven't had a bite. That indicates persistence, steadfastness of purpose and ambition that will not be discouraged. As for being insulting——"

A Bluff Called.

I turned and looked her square in the face. "I don't see," I said, slowly, and as if giving it deep thought, "why you used that word. To insult you I should have to regard you or your intentions seriously. Believe me, madame, I had not done that."

I drew my line carefully in and packed up my box of fishing tackle. "Come, Manette," I said to the child, "let us go and be arrested. Are you ready?" turning to the very red-faced woman who stood beside me.

"If you will walk with us as far as the cottage I will get a horse, or do you prefer to have the child ride with with you and have me tied to your horse's tail and dragged as captives were in the olden times?"

I had called her bluff! "I want nothing," in anger, "but to see that child restored to its guardian."

"Then rest easy," I replied, taking off my hat and bowing. "She is with her guardian now."

"If you are Mr. Max——" she began, and could say no more, for she realized what a spectacle she had made of herself.

I bowed again and turned away. A moment later she came running after me. "I hope," she stammered, "that you will forgive me, but your looks——"

I cut her short with a bow, and, picking Manette up in my arms, turned on to a narrow wooded path, and was soon out of sight.

"She is the kind of woman," I mused, "that thinks that to be a man is prima facie evidence of guilt. And the trouble is, her number is increasing."

A New Spot.

July 16.—Manette and I have found a new picnic spot, and for several days we had eluded the interloper, but on the fourth day I found her sitting on the porch when we got home. She had come, she said, to borrow Manette to take part in a tableaux to be given for the cause. "She would make," she said, "such a pretty little Goddess of Liberty. Besides," she argued, "the change would do her good. She needs a little civilization."

That made me smile. "Civilization" of the brand found at summer resorts, consists in sitting around on hotel verandas, comparing surgical operations and crochet patterns and branding as "bold" and "scheming" the woman who receives the attention of the only man at the place. I could imagine Manette being passed around by the crochet cut-ups who would speculate on the price of her clothes, her uncle's wealth, and seek to secure through her childish frankness the key to my family secrets.

I refused. "The child," I explained, "is dearer to me than the Cause. She is in bed by 8 every night and has never been permited to stay up late and grow feverish and excited taking part like a manikin in some foolish show. I know that mothers let their children do it, but I am not a mother. I am only a man."

"And the rudest man that ever lived," she retorted, striding out to get on her horse.

I did not offer to assist her. I never have. It would be inconsistent for her to accept.

July 28.—I am writing this while lying in bed, and somewhere in the room, I don't know where, for I can't easily turn my head to see, there is a trained nurse.

I do not know how she got here nor when. All I know is that her attentions are very grateful to me, and that there have been days when I seemed to be slipping away from everyone into nowhere, and only the firm, cool touch of her hand held me.

I think I was conscious of her hand and its helpfulness and soothing magic for days before I opened my eyes wide enough to look her in the face. Even now I do not know what she looks like, and am not interested. I lie for hours with my eyes closed, asking nothing more in life than that a pair of very strong hands, white and soft and gentle, be there to turn my head when the pain of one position is too great, to smooth my pillow, and I hear a voice somewhere murmur, "Poor boy, poor boy!"

July 29.—Richards is here. I do not know when she came. I only know that every few hours she comes from some remote place—the next room is remote in my present condition—and helps The Hands move me to an easier position, and that with her coming all concern for Manette has left me.

Fall Guy.

A gentleman in a club had formed the hopeless and harmful habit of taking too much to drink—alcoholically speaking—before he went home every evening.

"How does he know what time to go home?" asked a stranger in the club one night.

"It's this way," explained a member. "He goes to the head of that long flight of stairs leading to the street. If he falls down them, he knows it's time to go home."

A Ready Proof.

Father—Just fancy, Willie, all these fields used to be under the sea, and fish were swimming about where we are standing.

Willie—Yes, dad; here's an empty salmon tin.

What chance has sane, sensible reason against the fortified power of a wild habit?

Loss is unpleasant—but it never rises to the dignity of calamity unless it is the loss of self-respect.

There is more real joy in carrying out intentions than in merely planning to do it.

A good way to be at peace with the world is to expect little of it, to be unafraid of it, to see some good in it, and to give much to it!

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from Jacobs' Pharmacy and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Mother and Father

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

FATHER'S idea of good luck is winning a lottery ticket. Mother's is to find a pair of stockings that do not need darning.

It is father who hopes at the beginning of impracticable schemes, and mother who cheers when things go wrong in the end. It is father who is depressed and exaggerates what is lost, and mother who is cheerful in counting what is left.

Mother is proud to be told that the homeliest child in the family resembles her. Father isn't.

Here of late the children put the dependence in father's money that some generations ago was put in mother's prayers.

It is father, never mother, who expects the children to assume the burden as they get older. Mother, if she had her way, would carry it till the day of her death.

Once upon a time father called mother and the children together and said in the very wisest way: "This house would be conducted better if business principles were applied. Your system," frowning at mother, "would throw a peanut stand into the court of bankruptcy. I have opened what I will call a trouble book. Every member of the family will make entries in it of troubles, worries, etc., and we will meet at the end of the week to discuss the entries and act upon any suggestions for reform."

Then he frowned at mother again and went to his office. A week later the trouble book was opened.

"Mother won't let me go swimming." "Mother refuses to let me have any spending money; I suggest a needed reform here." "Mother wouldn't let me wear my best dress to play in," etc., etc., appeared in the handwriting of the children, and in father's handwriting there appeared: "Mother had the steak too well done"; "Mother is neglecting her personal appearance; I recall twenty years ago when she took more pride in doing her hair"; "Mother asked for money to-day to get Willie new shoes; I must look into her extravagance," etc., etc., from father and the children, but not one complaint from mother!

Passing between Scylla and Charybdis is no feat compared with the daily position of the mother whose children are always demanding more money of her, and whose husband is always telling her she must get along with less.

Before the oldest girl in the family is sixteen her father finds his throne tottering, and by the time she is eighteen he hasn't enough authority left to order a favorite old picture left on the parlor wall.

When father scolds and goes out slamming the door, the daughter sighs that she could have a man like that for a husband about a minute, and she'd cure him, and her mother tells her she will have a chance some day.

It is not very creditable to those children who live and grow up, but in the years to come the mother finds her greatest comfort in the thought that the child that would have always been appreciative and kind, and never have hurt her, is the one that died when it was a baby.

WARMED OVER LOVE

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PUZZLED writes as follows:

"I am a young girl 20 years of age and am deeply in love with a man eight years my senior, who reciprocates my love twice-fold. He has a very good position in business and is all that can be expected from a well-bred, respectable man. My only objection to him is that he is a widower and has two small children. My parents also object for this reason, and it is their only reason. If they thought the union would make me happy I am quite sure they would not stand in my way. I have met other young men, but can not seem to care for any of them."

The experience of wooing and winning a wife, of tasting the joy of being the head of one's own home, the creature comforts that domesticity means for a man, the broadening of heart and sympathies when the wife goes bravely alone to the shadow of death and returns with a child in her arms, the anguish of spirit when the mother falls sick and the desolation of the home when she is taken out of it forever, all tend to make a man more tender and considerate.

Though his home may have had its discomforts, he learns to regard it as his home; not his father's, or his mother's, but his own home. He also learned what an unimportant factor he was in its making, and realized the value of the WOMAN as he never realized it in his bachelor days.

That the experience is educational in a way that means more love, more consideration and an easing of the burden for the second wife, I am so certain that I wonder that the greater eligibility of the widower over the bachelor has not become an accepted fact.

Not Recognized.

Older women recognize it. Younger women do not because of the pretty sentiment they attach to being a man's first love.

The only objection to this man, then, is that he has two small children. Poor little motherless babes! I hope this little girl who has won this man's love has a heart broad enough to take in his children; a courage that will sustain her when, as a stepmother, she is maligned and misunderstood; and a charity that is big enough to cover their faults as effectually as if they were her own children.

Someone must mother the motherless, and the task is hard at its best, but one that is made light in the all-sustaining power of Love. If this man and his girl have for each other a love that will stand the strain, their union will be happy though he had ten children.

Learns Something.

His previous experience has made him dependent, tender and broader and considerate. He has two children and he knows that the woman he takes to the altar promises more than to be a loyal wife. She promises to be a loving mother to his children, to accept their resentment and ingratitude without complaint, and to know that hereafter to the end of her days criticism will be her lot.

He knows all this, and is grateful. On his first wedding day he regarded himself as a prize; the second time he goes to the altar with two children at his heels he knows, if he is a man and knows anything, that the prize is the brave-hearted girl who accompanies him.

He was confident on his first wedding day that he was dividing his joys. He knows on his second wedding day that he is dividing his burdens and sorrows, and the knowledge makes him humble.

You love him, my dear; you have met no other man you could love. He loves you, and I am sure your love is big enough to take in his children.

Nothing counts for as much as love. If you love, you know no burden. When you love, there is no sorrow too hard to bear. Marry him, go on loving him, and so long as you love him, you will be happy.

Not Alone.

An old Indian man, selling baskets, called at Mrs. Allen's one morning. He was very anxious to make a sale, and, after considerable parleying, he said: "Make me an offer, madam, and see if I don't take you up."

Little 5-year-old Bertha was a spectator to the interview, and when the man made this remark she threw her arms around her mother, crying: "Mother, if he takes you, I'll go, too."

When the Sun Rose

IT was absolutely still in the large, dark room where the patient lay.

A small lamp with a dark shade faintly illuminated the heavy silk curtains which covered the windows. In a corner of the room stood the little bed in which a small feverish body was struggling with death. A beautiful young woman was sitting at the bedside, her eyes anxiously followed every movement of the sick child.

Her costly evening gown showed that she had returned direct from some society affair. Her gloves and fan she had thrown carelessly on the table.

A few hours ago she had been sitting at the dinner table covered with flowers and surrounded by merry people, when a messager had arrived with the word that her little boy had suddenly been taken ill.

She hurried home as fast as her big car could carry her and now she was sitting here full of anxiety and despair.

Over and over again, she asked herself if it could really be possible that she was about to lose her fair-haired little darling. Oh no, God could not be so cruel! The boy was her greatest, her only joy! She realized that more than ever now, when she was in danger of losing him.

She wondered if she had always thought so, and her whole past life came back to her mind.

She saw herself as a happy, lively and spoiled girl, whose every wish was gratified. She saw herself surrounded by admirers and suitors, who flattered and envied her, but she never felt, not even for a short single moment, the real, true joy which fills and takes possession of your heart and soul.

No Love.

Then the learned and famous Professor Bornemann was introduced in her parents' home. He fell in love with the young, lively girl and she accepted him, though he was twenty years older than she.

Did she love him then?

No, unfortunately, not.

Rich as she was, she decorated her home with every possible luxury and comfort and filled it with guests, balls and dinners in endless succession.

For a time her husband let her do as she pleased, but one day he took both her hands and looked earnestly into her eyes, while he said in his gentle voice:

"Let us be done with all these empty pleasures, and let me see that I have a splendid little wife, who cares more for her husband and her baby than for all the dances and dinners in the world."

At first she stared at him in surprise, unable to understand him. Then she tore her hands away and answered angrily:

"I do not see how you can make such a request. You are old and have enjoyed all the pleasures of life, while I am young yet and have a right to enjoy myself."

He looked at her sadly, then he turned away and left the room without another word. And since then her life had been one mad round of pleasures, while her husband and child were left to take care of themselves.

And had she then found the happiness she sought?

No, not for a single minute.

* * *

The child in the bed moved again.

"Mama," the little feverish lips whispered.

She bent forward and stroked his hot forehead with her cool hand.

"Mama," he moaned once more.

Anxious Moments.

She felt a cruel pain in her heart. Had she done anything to deserve to be called Mama? She bent lower still and two big tears fell on the golden curls on the white pillow.

The door opened. Her husband entered, followed by the doctor. Her eyes sought his, which looked deep, deep into her soul.

The doctor felt the boy's pulse and shook his head gravely.

"I can not say anything now. I shall return in an hour, when the crisis is due. Until then we have hope." With a silent bow, he left the room.

The professor had sat down on a chair on the opposite side of the bed. His gray eyes looked at the little figure in the bed with infinite tenderness. The young wife fell down on her knees at her son's bedside.

The boy tossed about restlessly, while the minutes dragged along slowly.

In a quarter of an hour, then—

It was the same thought that filled the minds of husband and wife as they looked at each other across their little son's bed. Then both looked at the hands of the clock.

The child was still restless and feverish. Over and over again the mother stroked her boy's forehead with her cool hand. Then she let it slide down on the silk cover and inch by inch it crept closer to a strong, manly hand, until she took courage and touched it.

Their eyes met and a new sacred silent understanding was born.

The clock struck 6. The boy was resting easily, his breathing regular and his cheeks lost their feverish color. The crisis was over. The child's life was out of danger.

The professor stood up, went over to the window, drew the curtains aside and opened it. Then he went back to the bed and kneeled down at his wife's side.

The fresh air filled the room—and then the sun rose.

When the Whistle Blows

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says

YOU lift your eyes to the great clock in the white tower and see six o'clock marked with widespread hands. You hear the chimes and whistles clamoring over all the choked streets. Six o'clock! And the girls who smile all day long as steadily as any chorus girl is bidden to do, who haul down enough yards of stuff in a day to tie a sash around this vain old world, who try debutante dancing-frocks on fat relics who've seen forty summer moons or more, who get down endless "middies" for lean little girls, whose too flat pay envelope is sometimes the fortune of the family, all those who need and earn a thicker pay envelope and electric fans, all these bits of womanhood who go to make up the brave army that work in shops pour out of the employes' door and out under the clamor of "six by the clock." The blonde hat model, in her sleazy, slippery, little black gown, the close-tailored girl who sells suits, with her crinkly hair and big black purse like a baby kit-bag, all there—and HAPPY! Have you noticed that? And PRETTY! Have you noticed that? They have many good excuses not to be the first—but they laugh and laugh—and you hear little things like this: "He said to her—and she said to him." "Isn't that great?" and "What are you going to wear?" and "I had the time of my life!" And pretty—they'd have a heap of excuses not to be that, too—what with trying to stretch a bill longer and greener than it is, and standing on their two feet all day long, and smiling long and sweet at grouches. But they are. Among them you find the trimmest girls in town. And some of their faces make a society belle's wish it could go back to Heaven and get made all over again.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LEAVE THAT TO HER.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am twenty-one and in love with a girl of nineteen, and she loves me. Another man, who is much older, is trying to win her love, but she doesn't care for him. At present I am not settled, and it may take about three years before I can marry, while the other man can support her quite nicely. Have I the right to ask her to wait? S. J.

She loves you. She doesn't love the other man. If she is worthy of a good man's love she will wait indefinitely for him in preference to marrying a man she does not care for. Give her the right to decide, and see that you don't make her time of waiting too long.

SHE IS IN THE WRONG.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a young lady for the last seven months. About a week ago I escorted her to a dance where she met some of her old gentlemen friends, who received her attention all the evening. When the time came to go home I asked her to go home with me, but she refused, saying she could go home with others. I then left her. Did I do proper in leaving her? Who should apologize? RICHARD.

She refused to let you escort her home though you had taken her there. Under the circumstances there was nothing for you to do but leave her. You owe her no apology.

KEEPING EVERLASTINGLY AT IT

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am nineteen, and dearly in love with a girl two years my junior, whom I have known for the past seven years. Some time ago she met a young man at a wedding, and has since been devoting all of her attention to him. I love her dearly and would ask you how I can win her love again.

F. B. T.

Your seven years' devotion merits better returns. Be devoted and persistent, and if this fails change your tactics to indifference. The appearance of your rival stirred you. Has it occurred to you that if she found she had a rival it might renew her interests?

YOU WERE RIGHT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am sixteen and have been keeping company with a young man about three months. He has bee sick and he telephoned and asked me to come and see him. I told him it was improper for a girl to go to a man's house, and he got angry. Was I right? R. M.

Don't worry, my dear, you did just right. I don't admire him because of his request of his reception of your refusal. Never go to see a man under any circumstances unless your mother goes with you.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A little boy of four years of age, on noticing for the first time a lock of gray hair on his father's head, asked:

"Papa, why are some of your hairs gray?"

Thinking to drive home a moral lesson, the father answered:

"Papa has a new gray hair every time his little boy is naughty."

The child seemed lost in thought, but, after a pause, said gravely:

"Then grandpa must have had awful naughty boys."

It was after a junior league match, in which the home side lost eight goals to nil. The goalkeeper was naturally blamed for the disaster, and overhearing that things were being said about him, went straight to the captain and inquired:

"Did you tell Bill that I was the worst goalkeeper in the village?"

"No, I didn't. I thought he knew," was the reply.

"What's the matter, dear?" asked a woman of her troubled looking husband.

"Oh, I'm worried about the money market," he testily responded.

"And I'm bothered about the market money," quietly replied the woman, as she counted the contents of her purse.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

But this young man was not one to be easily daunted. "Do you wish me to make up an article out of surmises?" he inquired. "A young girl of this city has died in a carriage and the people have a right to know how. Shall I say by use of the knife or——"

"Scoundrel!" came from Dr. Molesworth's lips. "You deserve chastising, but I shall simply see that you do, what you have probably never done before, tell the exact truth." And, turning to the detective at his side, he exclaimed, "Note what I tell the fellow. If he alters a word or interposes one item that is not borne out by what he observes and hears here, I will see that he is discharged from his place. I know what paper he is on, and I know the editor, and my threat is no idle one. Now let him listen. This young lady, Mildred Farley by name, was engaged to marry me to-night. Being an orphan without friends—pardon me, Mrs. Olney, I should have said relatives, perhaps—and not being well, she thought a private marriage at a hotel would be most suitable. I agreed with her and the arrangements were all made for the ceremony. But she was sicger than I supposed. The symptoms of fever which I had perceived in her this afternoon increased rapidly on my departure and when I returned, before the specified hour to marry her, I found she had fled, leaving an incoherent note behind, which so alarmed me that I went out at once, and jumping into my phaeton, drove up and down the streets searching for her.

The End of It.

"I did not find her, of course; and remembering an important prescription I had promised to send a patient of mine, I dispatched my driver with it, and was taking my phaeton home myself, when I suddenly detected a woman seated on one of the steps in Twenty-second street whose appearance struck me as familiar. Though no believer in miracles, I accepted this one without scruple, and, jumping from my carriage, went up to her and soon saw that I was right in supposing I had found Miss Farley. She was very ill, and did not know me. 'I am sleepy,' she said, and dropped her head on my shoulder as I lifted her up. At the same moment I heard the sound of breaking glass, as if a small vial had slipped to the sidewalk and been shivered, while a pungent odor arose to my nostrils so suggestive of the poison known as prussic acid that I felt greatly alarmed, and hastily carrying her to my phaeton I put her in and drove as fast as I could toward home. But soon her increasing pallor and general condition convinced me that death was near, and I stopped at the drug store on the corner of Nineteenth street, and, leaving her in the phaeton, ran in and asked one of the clerks to assist me in bringing her into the store. He consented, and we went back to the phaeton, but only to find that I was too late. She had died in my absence."

"Horrible!" burst from the landlady's lips, and even the callous porter looked shocked and a trifle ashamed.

"Where she got the poison," continued the doctor, "remains to be found out. Perhaps she bought it after leaving the hotel; perhaps she had had it with her there as a medicine. If so, she may have taken an overdose without being conscious of her danger. I only know I was her physician and had never prescribed it for her, nor did I know she suffered from any ailment that required such a tonic."

"And is that all? Will you tell me nothing more?"

"You have a very good article," remarked the doctor, dryly. "Leave something for the future."

And the reporter had to be content, and the detectives, too.

The reporter gone, Dr. Molesworth turned again toward Mr. Gryce.

"And who are you?" he asked.

"I was going to say I didn't know," answered the seemingly trembling old man. "I am in pain and want to get home. Will one of you help me down the steps?"

"In pain!" repeated the doctor, who was not by any means a hard-hearted man.

"Yes, rheumatism in the stomach, I think. I came for some opium, but I won't wait any longer. They will worry about me at home. Besides, I feel a bit better now."

His manner was so natural, his look so in accordance with the character he had assumed, that Dr. Molesworth suspected nothing and kindly held out his arm. But he found the alleged detective had forestalled him.

"Let me do this business," he entreated, with a great show of good-nature and respect. "I have nothing else to do and am used to old men." And, nodding graciously to his superior, he led him carefully out, whispering as soon as the lintel of the door had hidden them from view, "What orders? Dou kou smell anything wrong here?"

"Watch," was the quiet but emphatic command. "Note everything, even to the lifting of an eyelid, but say nothing and do not seem to watch."

Then as they reached the front door, "Don't be hurt if I send some one else here. They know your character too well." And with this the elder man went out with a slow and hobbling step. The pain and distress of that evening had not been altogether assumed.

Some Points.

MR. GRYCE had only a look to go upon, but it was a look that spoke volumes. When a man shrinks from the eye of a detective, he has something to conceal, and when that something is connected with the death of a young girl by poison, it behooves an officer of the law to follow that man till he finds out what that something is.

It was therefore with some interest that he received in the early morning a summons from the gentleman who held the office of Coroner at this time, to come down to his office and have a talk with him concerning this case of Mildred Farley; nor was it long before he presented himself at the place designated. He found the Coroner alone and the following conversation ensued:

"Well, Gryce," said the latter, "I have just come from the house where you played the part of a sick patient so successfully last night. May I ask how you chanced to be so prompt on the scene of action? Do you scent out mysterious cases or had you any knowledge which led you to that especial spot just at the moment when your presence was possibly most required?"

"Both," was the good-natured reply. "Something which I call curiosity, but which I am fain now to consider instinct, made me an intruder in Dr. Molesworth's home last night. But I had a bit of knowledge to start with that roused his curiosity, and it is of this I want to speak, if you think the subject worthy of discussion or Dr. Molesworth anything but what he seems, a good, honest and reliable man."

"I think," returned the Coroner, slowly, "any subject of this kind worthy of discussion; and as for Dr. Molesworth, he stands high, but so do a great many others whose testimony we are called upon to question every day of our lives. You need not stop on his account if you have seen or discovered anything which contradicts his story."

"What is his story?"

"Didn't you hear it? I understood that he told all he had to tell in your presence."

"He told two stories."

"How two?"

"One with his lips, another with his face; that's what makes me doubt him."

"You do doubt him, then?"

Gryce's Story.

Mr. Gryce tapped the table before him with an abstracted air, murmured some unintelligible words and looked as if he thought he had replied.

"Come," cried the other, "your reasons? You usually have good ones."

"Yes," assented Mr. Gryce, "I usually have, but in this case it would be hard for me to tell you just what they are. I feel that there is something back of this affair which we do not see, but I am not ready as yet to go any further or even express any suspicions—say that I have any. The facts which I have been able to glean in the short space of time we have had are meager, but interesting. Perhaps you can add to them; if so, our conference may lead to something. This is what I know." And he related first what Dr. Molesworth had to say about the matter the evening before. When he had finished, he asked, "Does this story agree with what he told you this morning?"

"Exactly."

"Very good. So much for so much. Now for the side lights. I saw the girl myself yesterday afternoon."

"You?"

"Yes; I saw her, but I did not speak to her, nor did I recognize her for the person she was. Indeed, I took her for another woman whom she greatly resembled. It was at the C—— Hotel."

"Ah!"

"I need not enter into any further particulars about this circumstance, as it does not concern the affair before us, which stands quite apart by itself. Enough that for reasons of my own I played the spy on this young woman and saw her when she thought herself alone, in the privacy of her own apartment. This was some time after noon and the great fact which I wish to bring before you is this, that she was then to all appearance (and my eye is accustomed to read countenances) perfectly happy and had not in face or bearing the least trace of sickness."

"That is a point, certainly."

"Note it, and then add to it this, that being still under the error of which I have spoken, I went back to the hotel some three or four hours later, and wishing to confirm a former suspicion, sought my vantage spot again, and in conjunction with another witness whose testimony you will not need, looked in upon this Miss Farley again, when I perceived that a great change had passed over her. But it was not that of sickness. From happiness she had descended to misery, and in her pallor and wild, unrestrained attitudes I could detect the expression of despair, but none of bodily suffering or mental disorder.

"Now, what had occasioned this change in her in a space of time so short? I think I can answer that it was an interview with Dr. Molesworth. For, according to his own story and that of the hotel clerk, he was with her for a half hour or so in the afternoon; and though upon going out he told the hotel clerk he was coming back in the evening to marry her, something in his determination or in what had taken place at their interview had destroyed in her every vestige of hope and happiness. For it was anything but an expectant bride whom I saw after this visit, as it had been anything but an anxious woman whom I had seen before it.

"So! so!"

HARRY GLENN IS OUT TO CINCH 25-MILE TITLE

THE Atlanta Motordrome will be the scene of some interesting races to-night. The feature event will be a 25-mile race between the ten riders here at the present time, and the speed demons should furnish enough excitement in this race to last the fans for some time.

All the riders claim they have their machines working faster than ever, and it would not surprise many to see some dark horse win the long grind. Harry Glenn's great race last Tuesday has made him the talk of the town with motorcycle fans. Most of them want to see Harry win to-night and prove that his great riding Tuesday was not a fluke.

THE 25-mile race is for the championship of the South. To have an Atlanta boy capture this title would be a great honor to the city. Harry Glenn realizes this and it is a sure bet that Harry will be trying every minute of the time.

Richards, Graves, McNeil and Renel are also anxious to take the big event. Richards' machine was not going good Tuesday, but he says it is in great shape now. Graves is not saying much but Morty is out for some glory. McNeil and Renel can also be counted on to be in the race from start to finish.

THE Motordrome Purse will open the card. There will be three heats of one mile and a final of two miles. A special match race between Glenn and Lockner, best two in three heats, is also attracting much attention. The five-mile invitation race, open to all comers, fills out the program.

Following is the complete card for to-night:

First Event.
Motordrome Purse (qualifying heats, one mile; final, two miles; winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat to qualify). First Heat—Richards, Lockner, Graves.

YANKEE OWNER PUTS IN CLAIM FOR CUBAN STARS

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—President Frank Farrell, of the New York American League club, will appeal to the National Commission to set aside the sale of three Cuban players of the Long Branch team, of the New York and New Jersey League, to the Boston Nationals. The players are Pitcher Laqua, Shortstop Arragon and Outfielder Padran, according to Farrell. Owner Henriques, of the Long Branch team, recently offered to sell him these players. Farrell agreed to take them, and the price was fixed.

According to the verbal agreement, the three players were to report to Manager Chance yesterday. Instead of the players reporting, Henriques sold them to President Gaffney, of the Braves. Farell says he has several witnesses to the deal.

Kniseley on Southern Hurlers

Explains Peculiarity of Hitters

PETE KNISELEY, outfielder for Birmingham, undertakes to explain the good showing some of the pitchers make in this circuit, only to fall down when they get into the big show; also why Southern leaguers hit well in the majors. Says Pete:

"The Southern League is the hardest place in the country to bat up in the .300 list. No wonder a player hits higher in the major league than in the Southern.

"In the majors, the pitchers do not exert themselves until real danger faces them. When the game is progressing without heavy hitting, the pitchers serve the ball over and give you a chance to swat it, hoping that it will go into one of the fielders' hands. But not here.

"From the beginning of the game until the finish, the Southern League pitchers work at top speed. As the result, the batter has a poorer opportunity to make a high mark. But I attribute the many ascensions in the Southern to this fact. Unless a man is of wonderful physique, he is unable to twirl nine innings, putting his greatest effort on every toss. There are a few who are able to stand the pace. Elmer Brown is a twirler of this class, while Bill Prough is another.

"But the average pitcher is able to stand the gaff for six or seven innings. Then when he weakens the batters feast on the offerings and frequently drive him from the mound. But, of course, there are clever pitchers in the Southern. Hardgrove and Foxen do not pitch hard until there is danger and are very successful.

"I believe that a .300 batsman in the Southern can duplicate the feat in the majors."

KNISELEY speaks truly both in respect to the pitching and batting. It has long been noted as a peculiar fact that recruits from the Southern League and the Pacific Coast League seldom have batted less in the majors than in the minors. Under ordinary circumstances, it would be fair to discount the average recruit's minor league batting by 10 to 20 points when he gets to the real class, but Daubert and Wheat both have batted better in fast company than they did in the bushes; Charles Stengel has become one of the heaviest clouters in the National and Red Smith is holding his own.

All of them are from the Southern, and probably Kniseley has the right answer. The explanation of the ability of Coast leaguers to hit in the majors up to their Coast standards has been that the heavy winds in some cities and the dampness in others on the Coast keep the batting down to a minimum, and a man who can hit in that country can hit anywhere.

THE tendency of young pitchers from the South to throw their whole strength into every ball delivered, has also been noted by many observers. Brooklyn has an illustration of that very mistake in Frank Allen, who persists in working with all his might in every inning, with the result that when he is in a tight place he has comparatively little reserve strength with which to extricate himself.

An even more pronounced case of the same sort was furnished by Bill Burrus, who is a native of Texas, but got his start on the Coast. Bill was one of the most powerful men that ever broke into baseball, but he did not know how to conserve his energy. He was at different periods with Washington, Detroit and Cincinnati, and with all his record was the same. He had the habit of blowing up at the end of the seventh or eighth inning, and, if the game ever went more than nine innings, it was a dead sure bet that Bill had nothing but his glove and spikes left for the tenth.

Nap Rucker used to fall for the same foolish policy in his callow days, but Nap has become old and wise and uses no more exertion now than is necessary, although he admits it took years for the light to break on him.

M'GRAW HINTS THAT GOLF COST MATHEWSON BEATING

PITTSBURG, PA., Aug. 8.—One of Giants was asked just before the New York team left Pittsburg for Cincinnati why McGraw did not take Mathewson out of the box in the fifth inning Wednesday, when seven runs were batted off his delivery.

"I think Mac wanted to impress something on Christy," said the Giant. "McGraw has been arguing all along against his pitchers playing golf. He does not object to the sport for infielders or outfielders, but he claims it does the pitchers no good, and he has tried to make Matty cut it out. McGraw claims that handling a golf stick tires the muscles in a pitcher's hands and wrists."

JACK JOHNSON BARRED FROM BOXING IN PARIS

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—Jack Johnson will not be permitted to box in this country. The "American Boxing Federation" has requested the French Federation of prohibit Johnson, the American negro pugilist, from fighting in France and that body has decided to grant the request.

FIGHT MANAGER IMPROVING.

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 8.—Larney Lichtenstein, local manager of fighters, who on Monday underwent an operation at the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, where he had two ribs taken out, is recovering so rapidly that he intends making the trip to Winnipeg on August 14 to be with Steve Ketchel for his fight there. Doc Briggs performed the operation, and it was very successful.

THOMPSON OR LOVE TO PITCH SECOND GAME.

By Joe Agler.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 8.—Manager Smith hasn't decided whether Thompson or Love will pitch against the Vols to-day, but it will be one of them. Slim is eager for another crack at the enemy, and is sure he can lick them without trouble. Chapman will catch.

We lost another tough one yesterday, and it looks as if the jinx were closing in on us again. With the score tied up in the tenth inning, Dent was taken out to allow Price, a left-hander, to pitch to Callahan and Spratt, both batting on that side, with Williams on second and one out.

The move looked like the proper one, but Callahan spoiled everything with a long drive that scored Williams and knocked us ou of a hard-fought game. Dent pitched his usual fine game, and Harry Holland's hit drove in our only tally.

Yesterday was "Business Men's Day," and there was a big parade of automobiles, and the players of both teams and a band. About 4,000 were at the park, where some field day events were put on before the game. Tommy Long beat Dave Callahan in the 100-yard dash, doing it in 11 seconds, which is some fast time without sprinting togs on. Harry Chapman won the throwing contest from Smith, of Atlanta, and Young and Beck, of Nashville.

JOCKEY CLAIMS HE WAS OFFERED $1,000 TO 'PULL'

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Jockey Wilson threw a commotion into sporting circles here to-day by declaring that he had been approached with an offer of a bribe to throw a race recently at the Belmont track meeting.

The stewards refused to comment upon it, as the matter will be sifted by the officials. The story involves another jockey, a friend of Wilson, who acted as an intermediary, and a well-known Bowery politician.

Wilson's specific statement was to the effect that a man named Reed, who has been warned off the track a number of times, approached him at the Belmont track and offered him $1,000 to pull Working Lad in a race on June 24. The stewards, it is said, have exonerated Wilson. No action has as yet been taken against the Bowery politician, but it is known that if he can not clear himself he will be asked to absent himself in future from all meetings given under the association's auspices.

COLE QUITS COLUMBUS TEAM; MAY JOIN FEDERALS

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. 8.—Because Manager Hinchman fined and chased him off the field here, after Umpire Cahill had lifted him from the game, "King" Cole to-day asserted that he was done with pitching for the Columbus team. He says he's going to a nunnamed Federal League club.

TOMMY DIXON FALLS FROM RING IN SEVENTH ROUND

JOPLIN, MO., Aug. 8.—An injury received by Tommy Dixon, of Kansas City, during a fight here last night with Freddie Cole, of Indianapolis, caused the contest, scheduled for fifteen rounds, to terminate in the seventh round. Dixon fell through the ropes to the floor, injuring his arm.

RED SOX RECALL PLAYERS.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The Boston Red Sox to-day exercised their right of option on three players in the American Association. Infielder Krug, of the Indianapolis team, and Infielder Scott and Pitcher Brant, of St. Paul, recently sold with the right of repurchase, were recalled.

DENT PASSES 3 BATTERS IN 53 INNINGS

WHEN Elliott Dent walked Jack Spratt in the first inning of yesterday's game in Nashville, the Atlanta pitcher interrupted slightly the progress of a very fine bit of record-making in this league.

It was his third base on balls in fifty-three innings.

Before the game started yesterday, Dent's record, beginning July 18, was two bases on balls in forty-four innings. This included a "long run" of thirty-three innings, or practically three full games, without a walk being issued.

The big right-hander is going at top speed just now, and his control is well-nigh perfect. He doesn't get himself in the hole very often, either, and it is a rare thing for the batsman to be able to take a tight grip on terra firma and wait confidently for the next one to come over. Only the roughest kind of luck and very feeble hitting support cost the big boy another win yesterday.

RED SOX RECALL FOUR; BUY CATCHER M'NALLY

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The Boston Red Sox to-day exercised their right of option on three players in the American Association. Infielder Krug, of the Indianapolis team, and Infielder Scott and Pitcher Brant, of St. Paul, recently sold with the right of repurchase, were recalled.

Michael J. McNally, shortstop for the Utica team, New York State League, also was bought by the Red Sox.

LANGFORD AND JEANNETTE TO CLASH IN LONG BOUT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8.—Promoter McCarey last night received messages from Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette accepting his terms for a twenty-round bout. In all probability the date set for the heavyweight event will be October 7.

"I would like to see the question of supremacy between Langford and Jeannette settled," explained the promoter. "That's my reason for making the match. In a scheduled twenty-round go in my ring with Eyton refereeing, the two blacks will have to extend themselves. I will never stage a mixed match between a black and a white boxer. So long as the colored men battle among themselves I will put no handicap in their way."

All doubt as to Wolgast's willingness to box on the September date was removed yesterday when the former lightweight champion telegraphed as follows:

"Will positively meet the winner of the Dundee-White fight of August 12. Hope it will be Dundee, as I want to show the public the difference between a real fighter and a jumping jack."

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

HOW SWEET.

How sweet to be a manager and run a baseball team—
At least when you are winning games it is a blissful dream.
But when the team is losing, is his job a thing of joy?
Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi!

Whether Ed Reulbach or Eddie Stack is the better athlete is yet to be determined, but it is a well-known fact that the Cubs never again will own Reulbach's equal as a badger fighter.

We are in receipt of a song written by that far-famed pugilist, Packey McFarland. The song is entitled, "I'd Like to Know." So would a whole lot of promoters, pugilists, managers and other insects.

Not that we are an expert on songology, but after reading Sir. McFarland's ballad we are convinced that he is a lightweight.

If Joe Jackson were to do all his batting at Shibe Park he would be chased to the minors or (worse yet) to St. Louis.

It is said that the said Joe Jackson has hit over .400 at the White Sox Park this season. Joe never would be mistaken for a White Sock—not even by a blind man.

There is charity even in baseball. For instance, Tom Lynch has handed a protested game to Joe Tinker.

Horace Fogel avers that he wants to put a baseball team in New York. This leads one to suspect that Horace has not heard of the adventures of Frank Chance.

Washington fans having presented Walter Johnson with a loving cup filled with money, it is said that Columbus fans will hand King Cole a shaving mug filled with lather.

It is said that fighters can't come back, but every day we note otherwise. For instance, there is Jack Heimen, the heavyweight. As he was leaving the place some philanthropist said: "Wait a minute, Jack! We're going to buy another." He came back.

ONLY THREE LEFT OF CUBS' OLD GUARD

By O. B. Keeler.

A COUPLE of days ago the papers carried a bit of baseball news to the effect that Edward Reulbach had been traded by the Cubs for Eddie Stack, of Brooklyn.

Of itself, that wasn't a very exciting bit of information. Neither Mr. Stack nor Mr. Reulbach has been exceeding any speed limits this year—even in Philadelphia.

But aside from that—

Say, did you notice a queer little nip of regret when you read that small item?

IT just marked the passing of one more of the few remaining original Cubs; the wonderful clan gathered by Frank Selee and molded by Frank Chance into what many will always believe to have been the greatest baseball machine of all time. And those who sing the praises of the Athletics and the rest have at last to admit that Connie Mack and the others have yet to win 116 games in a season.

• • •

BUT that's by the way.

You remember the Original Cubs, don't you? Let's see—can we recall the line-up of the smashing years of 1906-7-8?

Well, back of the wood was Johnny Kling, aided and abetted by Pat Moran—what little aiding and abetting Johnny needed in those halcyon days.

The slab staff? We'll match that, now, against any in history. Brown, Reulbach, Overall and Pfeister for the regulars, with Chick Frazer and Carl Lundgren in reserve. Frazer was a celebrated chicken fancier, you remember, and Carl could pitch better with the thermometer at 32 than most pitchers could on July 4.

The Infield—Chance and Evers and Tinker and Steinfeldt; and the rip and swing of the old Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance that made the pace for all their day.

The Outfield—Schulte and Slagle and Sheckard; the celebrated S. S. S. combination, with the Rabbit to top the batting list and Artie Hofman to fill in on occasion.

WELL, well—we'll take stock of the remains.

Schulte and Evers, and Orvie Overall, who is plugging along on the come-back trail after a couple of years' defection.

Reulbach made the fourth of the Old Guard, until the other day. Big Ed hadn't done much the last few years. But don't forget that three times Big Ed topped the whole list of slabmen in the National League, and that when Brown and Mathewson were in their prime.

Four fighting Grizzlies,
Sturdy as can be—
Big Ed was traded,
Then there were three.

Who'll be the next of the Old Guard to pass on?

WITH brief reference to the latest chapter in that sad serial, "Losing 'Em by One Run," it appears from a somewhat scrambled telegraphic account that Bill Smith and Gilbert Price came together in a bean-on collision after yesterday's game in Nashville.

Price appears to have been the one to bounce back. In fact, the report has it that Smith ordered him out of his uniform indefinitely.

The row was about the curve ball Price dealt to Callahan in the tenth inning, on which Dave Callahan doubled for the winning run.

At this distance, far be it from us to make wise criticisms of either Price or his manager.

Except this much.

If Price crossed up the manager on explicit instructions, he deserves all he got.

On the other hand, if Smith took out on his pitcher the soreness incident to losing a hard-fought battle—Price having been sent in cold and doing his best—it looks as if the manager was overly severe.

CHANCE TURNS ACTOR WITH MOVING PICTURE CONCERN

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Frank Chance, manager of the Highlanders, is now an actor. He has been engaged by a moving picture company to take the leading part in a scenario entitled "The Peerless Leader," some of the scenes of which will be laid at the Polo Grounds, New York. Chance has been rehearsing the role in a Jersey City studio since Monday. Catcher Sweeney, Outfielder Daniels and Hartzell will also appear in the film.

Frank Whitney Due Here To-day

Charley White Arrives Saturday

By Left Hook.

FRANK WHITNEY, the fighting carpenter from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is due here at 11 o'clock this morning for his coming 10-round bout with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night.

A wire from Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, informs us that the Chicago boy will be here to-morrow morning. With both fighters on the battle ground local fans will have a chance to see the coming rivals in their training grind.

Whitney will pitch his tent at once in the Atlanta Athletic Club, where he intends to do the rest of his preliminary work for what he considers to be the most important fight of his career. Frank will do most of his boxing with Jimmy Perry, and the welterweight should be a valuable aid to him. The Cedar Rapids boy will also get a couple of lighter boys to box with.

WHAT Whitney is after is speed. Frank learned while in Chicago that his coming opponent is about the best piece of fighting machinery in the world. He also realizes that a victory over Charley will put him among the leaders of the 133-pounders. Chances of this kind don't come to boxers every day. The promoters of the Atlanta Athletic Association have given Whitney the opportunity he has been pinning for during the past year.

ON the other hand, Charley White is now the most watched boxer in the world to-day. Tom McCarey has his eyes on him. Tom is seriously thinking of putting White on with the winner of the Cross-Rivers setto on Labor Day, and a victory over Whitney will be another feather in the Chicago boy's cap. Jim Coffroth wants White to box Tommy Murphy in his arena, but is awaiting the outcome of Charley's scrap with Whitney. The Western promoters have been after White for the past year, but Nate Lewis wants his protege to pick up a few pounds in weight before sending him after the bigger boys.

CHARLEY is still young and has a bright future. White was 22 years old March 25 and has been boxing five years. During that period never has a boxer succeeded in stopping him, or better than that, no boxer has ever even floored him.

When it is taken into consideration that White has met the toughest lightweights in the world, this record is surely a remarkable one.

WHITNEY is a fighter of the opposite type to Charley. Frank loves to bore in and fight at close quarters. Once inside a man's guard he works his hands like a pair of piston rods, hoping to bring his man to the canvas.

It is also a fact that Whitney is a much improved boxer over the boy who was seen here about a year ago. Since leaving here Frank had about ten battles and managed to win them all.

THE Cedar Rapids boy is also aware of the fact that he is getting along in years and knows that if he intends to get any place in the boxing world now is the time. Next Wednesday Whitney will get his chance. If he loses, fans can rest assured that he will give them the very best he has. Whitney has yet to disappoint a fight gathering. This afternoon Whitney will be at the Atlanta Athletic Club working out for the match.

Charley will arrive here to-morrow morning and arrangements have already been made to have him do his training in the Ponce De Leon ball park.

THE other two bouts to be staged Wednesday have been completed. Charley Lee and Kid Young signed for their return engagement yesterday and these boys are expected to put up a corking mill.

The semi-wind-up will be between Mike Saul and Eddie Hanlon. The boys have agreed to weigh 138 pounds at 6 o'clock, and at this weight Mike should have a great chance of winning. Both bouts are scheduled to go 10 rounds, making 30 rounds of boxing for the evening's entertainment.

Tickets for the boxing show were placed on sale yesterday. Prices, $1, $1.50 and $2.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Gunboat Smith, of California, and Fireman Jim Flynn, of Pueblo, Colo., will clash in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden, New York, to-night. Betting fans have made Smith a 6 to 5 favorite, but admirers of Flynn think that the fireman's bulldog courage will carry him through to victory.

Frank Whitney is expected to arrive to-day for his 10-round engagement with Charlie White at the Auditorium-Armory on Wednesday, August 13. White will be here some time to-morrow.

Eddie Hanlon started hard work yesterday for his coming 10-round set-to with Mike Saul next Wednesday. Hanlon wants to be in the best of shape as he realizes that a victory over Mike will put him in line for some big matches. They have posted a $50 forfeit to weigh 138 pounds at 6 o'clock.

Mike Kelly, Indianapolis featherweight, is in Atlanta at the present time in search of matches with some of our 122-pounders. Kelly says he is willing to meet some of the lesser lights first in order to prove to local fans that he is made of the right stuff.

Coast fans are showing much interest in the coming Jack White-Johnny Kilbane bout scheduled to take place in Tom McCarey's arena on August 12. These two boys put up a corking mill for twenty rounds about a month ago. Ad Wolgast has agreed to meet the winner some time in September.

Billy Nolan, former manager of Willie Ritchie, says that the champion will never meet Ad Wolgast. Nolan says that Willie fears Ad and does not want any more of his game.

• • •

Over in Paris they are certainly picking the lemons for Georges Carpentier. Yesterday they pitted the Frenchman against a boxer named Williams and Carpentier stopped him in four rounds. Who next?

Leach Cross and Rivers have agreed to weigh 135 pounds ringside for their 20-round affair at Los Angeles on Labor Day. Each boxer is to receive 30 per cent of the gross receipts. The winner will probably be sent against Willie Ritchie.

Jack (Twin) Sullivan, of Boston, has signed articles to box Soldier Kearns, the Brooklyn heavyweight, in a 10-round go at the Queensberry A. C., Philadelphia, on the night of August 22.

• • •

Kid Young is getting into great shape for his coming battle with Charlie Lee. The "fighting newsboy" is doing his boxing with Mike Saul and they certainly are going at it in real fashion.

GILBERT PRICE SUSPENDED AFTER GAME

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 8.—It is understood nere that Manager Billy Smith of the Crackers and Gilbert Price, his star left-hand hurler, had a warm argument after yesterday's game, regarding the curve ball which Price pitched to Callahan in the tenth inning. Dave pasted the pill for a couple of bases and the winning run. Price had been sent in by Smith to take Dent's place in front of Callahan, who is a left-hand hitter, and Spratt, also batting from that side.

It is not plain just what the contention was, but it seems the manager told Price at the end of it that he was under suspension. Price went to the slab without much time to warm up, and that was the reason generally ascribed to his lack of effectiveness, but Smith seemed to take another view of it.

Smith had a short conference with Manager Schwartz concerning Jud Daley, but the boss of the Vols was not in the mood to shake up his team, and the result of the first game probably cemented that position.

Timid Kid Asked Griff for a Job

Engel Promises to Become a Star

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—During the early spring days of 1912 a young ball tosser applied for admittance to the ball park in Washington, where Clark Griffith, Walter Johnson, Herman Schaefer and other Nationals were romping about. He was too bashful to speak to anybody, just watched the athletes perform.

The next morning the same kid was on hand. He had read about the great Johnson, Walsh, Coombs, Bender, Wood and other pitchers. He was a pitcher, too. Rather, on the lots in Washington he curved 'em for the semi-pro teams, and as he usually won, he thought he'd like to become acquainted with the big leaguers.

The kid chatted with members of the Nationals, asked who was manager, and if, he could talk to him. "Griffith is manager; he's standing over there," informed one athlete to the youngster. The kid walked over to Griffith.

"I'm a pitcher. I'd like to toss a few to your hitters," was his opening sentence to Griffith.

"Where do you hail from?" flashed back the Fox.

"Right here! Pitch on Saturdays and haven't lost a game for a year," returned the youngster.

"Go to the dressing room, put on a suit and let me take a look at you," answered Griffith.

THE youth appeared, went to the hill and pitched during the batting practice.

The players gave Griff the merry ha-ha. They wanted to know where the boss plucked the novice. When the ball came near the plate usually the sluggers lifted it over the heads of the outfielders.

All the time, though, Griff was watching his new entrant. He saw that he had a lot of speed and a fast breaking curve. But the kid was awkward and didn't have the proper delivery.

As the youngster improved with each day and began to show dazzling speed, he was introduced to his idol, Walter Johnson. Always chummy with aspiring kids, Johnson took an interest in the new acquisition. He showed him how to throw the fast one, the movement with the shoulder, how to curve the one down around the knees and the fast break high on the inside.

After a few lessons Griff and the players were surprised. In a few weeks the batters began popping the fast ones and hitting easy grounders on the curves.

WHEN it came time to make the first trip Griffith asked his strange tosser how he'd like to make a trip with the team.

"Do you think I can pitch?" was his answer.

"I don't know; I'll try you out," returned the boss.

The Nationals made several trips, and when a game was practically lost the kid got a chance to show himself. Sometimes he got away all right, sometimes he didn't.

The 1912 season was over. The kid had a bunch of experience. This past spring he was a regular member of the team, was along on the practice tour and watched every movement made by his favorite, Johnson.

Finally the kid got a chance to show himself at the start. He won, allowing only a few hits and a run or two. Then it was that Griffith realized he had a wonderful pitcher.

Recently Joe Engel beat the St. Louis Browns 2 to 1 with three scattered hits, and, according to press accounts of the game, showed almost as much stuff as Walter Johnson. Joe Engel was the timid kid who introduced himself to Griffith in the spring of 1912.

MAJOR CALLAWAY OFF TO SEE CLARK GRIFFITH NOW

Major Frank Callaway, president of the Atlanta ball club, is a lively little traveler these days.

Yesterday Major Callaway, who had just returned from Chattanooga, set out for Washington to confer with Clark Griffith concerning the terms of the agreement now existing between the Senators and the Crackers.

It is not understood that there is any disputed point to be settled, or that anything is to be done with reference to Clark and Long, but that with the claiming date close at hand Major Callaway wished to be in perfect accord with the Old Fox as to all the provisions of the treaty, so that the Atlanta club could deal intelligently with all its players.

ANOTHER PHENOM MAY GO UP TO MAJOR LEAGUES

CALGARY, ALBERTA, Aug. —Jack Roche, Calgary catcher, seems sure to go to one of the big league teams. The White Sox, Cubs, Cardinals and Yankees are all bidding for the youngster. He is batting .354 and fielding .986. Comiskey made the first bid, but no price was set. Murphy has since requested the price, but has been asked to make an offer. Indianapolis, Louisville, Mobile and Los Angeles also are after him. The sale is likely to be made to-day.

BURWELL VICTOR OVER FOES OF TAX REFORM

Combine of 'Drys' With Anti-Revisionists Broken When House Votes to Reconsider Bills.

The combination formed by "dry" members of the House and the members who oppose all tax revision to defeat bills favored by Speaker W. H. Burwell and Governor Slaton was broken, for the present at least, Friday morning, when the House voted to reconsider its action Wednesday in defeating the constitutional amendments limiting the school levy to 2 1-2 mills and the pension levy to 1 1-2 mills.

The votes on the motions to reconsider, which were offered by Fullbright, of Burke, were 86 to 57 and 89 to 58, respectively.

The action of the House is regarded as a victory for Speaker Burwell, and indicates that some of his bills, which are administration measures, may be passed in spite of the opposition tax reform foes and "dry" members said to be moved by a desire for revenge because of failure to get the Webb bill out of committee.

Bills To Be Put on Passage.

With the action of the House reconsidered, the two bills—the school levy and the pension levy—undoubtedly will be brought up for passage at this session. It is understood they may be placed on the calendar for Saturday or Monday. The placing of the bill is solely in the hands of the Rules Committee, and while its members would not convict themselves, one member stated positively that the House would be given an opportunity to pass the bills during the present session.

Speaker Burwell has been hard at work trying to heal the wounds caused by his ruling Wednesday, when he declared the Kidd resolution, calling the Hixon-Searcy bill out of committee, out of order, and indications are he has succeeded.

The fight against Fullbright's motion to reconsider was feeble, though its voting strength was fairly large. Wallace Miller, of Bibb County, led the opposition to the motion. He declared the fixing of 2 1-2 mills as the limit of levy for school purposes would result in appropriating that amount each year, inasmuch as money is always appropriated up to the limit.

Mr. Kidd Is Turned Down.

Mr. Fullbright made but a short speech in favor of his motion, declaring the opponents of the bills had defeated them by spreading the erroneous impression that they would increase taxation.

Mr. Kidd, of Baker, tried to lead a fight against Speaker Burwell at the opening of the Friday morning session. His effort failed, because Speaker Burwell refused to recognize Mr. Kidd. When the report of the Rules Committee was submitted to the House, the Speaker asked the usual question: "Is there objection to the adoption of the report?"

"I object," shouted Mr. Kidd, in a tone that could have been heard a block.

"The Chair hears none," announced the Speaker.

Had Mr. Kidd been able to defeat the report of the Rules Committee, which fixes the work for the day, it was his evident intention to attempt to again introduce his resolution calling the Hixon-Searcy bill out of committee.

3,000 EXPECTED AT GROCERS' OUTING

Elaborate Program of Recreation to Make Warm Springs Picnic Greatest Ever Held.

Plans are being made for the annual excursion to Warm Springs, Ga., Wednesday, August 13, of the Retail Grocers and Marketmen's Association. It is expected the outing will be the greatest the organization has ever held. Francis J. Kamper, chairman of the committee on arrangements, has issued an announcement of the picnic.

Nothing has been left undone by the committee. They expect more than 3,000 persons to attend the outing, and have made arrangements to care for all. Many family picnics have been arranged. There will be bathing, bowling, dancing and a baseball game between the associated grocers and the clothiers' league.

Through the efforts of Mr. Kamper and his committee, special arrangements have been made for women and children. The management of the Warm Springs Hotel has offered the use of the hotel to the crowds, and those who do not care for the more strenuous pastimes of baseball, bowling and bathing, can spend the day on the wide verandas and shady walks of the hotel and grounds.

Special trains to carry the crowds will leave Union Station, on the A., B. and A. Railroad for Warm Springs Wednesday morning at 7 and 7:15 o'clock. A round trip fare of $1 for adults and 50 cents for children will be charged.

Pigs Gorge Candy As Children Envy

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—The Refuge Home Farm, a municipal charity for homeless children, has a fine lot of thoroughbred pigs, which are to be gorged daily with chocolates and other choice confectionery, as a result of recent raids by the food inspection division of the Health Department.

To-day the refuge farm wagon carted to the farm for their delectation, nearly 1,500 pounds of milk chocolates, 3,000 pounds of peanuts, 850 pounds of shelled cocoanuts, 15 barrels of sugar and about 20 barrels of other odds and ends, including flavoring extracts used in making candy. These represented some of the condemnations made at several candy factories last week.

SOFIA, Aug. 8.—In a communication issued to-day by the Bulgarian Government it was announced that "Bulgaria will begin demobilization of her army as soon as a peace treaty is signed, upon the understanding that the powers favor the Enos-Midia line as the southern Bulgarian boundary." This would give Adrianople to Bulgaria.

It is doubtful if Bulgaria could carry on another war against Turkey. She has lost 100,000 men and her national treasury is depleted.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 8.—The Turkish Government to-day issued a manifesto calling upon the nation to oppose vigorously the evacuation of Adrianople.

Queen Mary Stops Gambling at Court

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The gambling lid is on at Buckingham Palace. The quiet little games with which the servants were wont to while away their time and spare farthings are no more. As a result, grumblings are loud and frequent. This is due to rules issued by Queen Mary, whose anti-gambling views are well known in court circles.

A strike of all the servants at the palace was narrowly averted a few days ago when the Queen decided to permit the servants to draw lots to see who shall accompany her on the royal yacht.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines.

It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed conterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.

Letters from Prominent Druggists addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Central Drug Co., of Detroit, Mich., says: "We consider your Castoria in a class distinct from patent medicines and commend it."

Christy Drug Stores, of Pittsburg, Pa., say: "We have sold your Castoria for so many years with such satisfactory results that we cannot refrain from saying a good word for it when we get a chance."

Jacob Bros., of Philadelphia, Pa., say: "We take pleasure in recommending Fletcher's Castoria as one of the oldest and best of the preparations of the kind upon the market."

Hess & McCann, of Kansas City, Mo., say: "Your Castoria always gives satisfaction. We have no substitute for it and only sell 'The Kind You Have Always Bought,' the original."

The Voegeli Bros., of Minneapolis, Minn., say: "We wish to say that we have at all times a large demand for Fletcher's Castoria at all of our three stores and that it gives universal satisfaction to our trade."

Polk Miller Drug Co., of Richmond, Va., says: "Your Castoria is one of the most satisfactory preparations we have ever handled. It seems to satisfy completely the public demand for such an article and is steadily creating a growing sale by its merit."

P. A. Capdau, of New Orleans, La., says: "We handle every good home remedy demanded by the public and while our shelves are thoroughly equipped with the best of drugs and proprietary articles, there are few if any which have the unceasing sale that your Castoria has."

M. C. Dow, of Cincinnati, Ohio, says: "When people in increasing numbers purchase a remedy and continue buying it for years; when it passes the fad or experimental stage and becomes a household necessity, then it can be said its worth has been firmly established. We can and do gladly offer this kind of commendation to Fletcher's Castoria."

Smallest Kingdom

Monaco is the smallest kingdom in the world. It is only fifty-three and a quarter miles in circuit, including Monte Carlo. The capital is Monaco, perched on a rocky promontory rising 200 feet above the sea level.

Monaco has undergone fifty-eight sieges, but has never lost her independence except for a few years at a time. In 500 B. C. Hectate of Miletus wrote an account of the city now called Monaco, and declared it to be so old that the people had lost all tradition of its origin.

Monte Carlo is famous for its magnificent casino, the most gorgeous gambling establishment in the world. The town of Monte Carlo in winter is a health resort, and in summer is noted for its bathing.

East Point Oil Mill Sold for $157,500; Lease $140,000

Swift & Co. Trade With Southern Cotton Oil Co.—50-Year Tenancy on Railroad Lot—Other Notes.

The Southern Cotton Oil Company has sold to Swift & Co., packers, its small mill at East Point, together with 13 55-100 acres of land, for $157,500. The sale was handled direct. Report of it was confirmed Friday by W. M. Hutchinson, manager of the Southern Cotton Oil Company.

The oil concern retains its larger mill at Fort McPherson. It has 80 mills in various parts of the South.

Located on the north side of the Central of Georgia Railway, the tract is at the dividing line of the tract formerly owned by the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company and the property of the Gate City Oil Company. The line extends 1,200 feet to the property of the Old Dominion Guano Company, northerly 263 feet, easterly 1,203, southerly 719. An adjoining tract, 63 by 206 feet, in Land Lot 131, Fourteenth District, is included.

Will Lease for Fifty Years.

Judge William T. Newman signed an order in the United States District Court Friday approving the lease for 50 years of a tract of railroad frontage on Nelson street, near Mangum, from the Georgia Terminal Company to the Investment Company of the South. The terms of the lease are $2,500 for the first ten years, $3,500 for the second ten years and $4,000 for the last twenty years, or an aggregate rental of $140,000.

The condition is inserted that the lessee is to erect certain warehouses which shall be bought at the end of the period by the Georgia Terminal Company at the then market value. The plot has 350 feet of frontage.

The Georgia Terminal Company is a sort of holding company for the A., B. & A. Railroad, and the Investment Company of the South is the concern interested in the Walker street development.

Currier Parcel Transferred.

W. Bayne Gibson and A. B. Chapman have sold to Mrs. Flora M. Smedley for $10,500 a 57 by 165-foot property on Currier street, 200 feet east of Courtland, having bought the same recently from J. Fred Lewis for $6,000. The place is 45 Currier street.

Transfer on West Peachtree.

Dr. J. Cheston King has given a warranty deed to the West End Bank on his recently completed house on the west side of West Peachtree, 130 feet north of Twelfth street, for $5,000. The lot is 50 by 200 feet.

Frank West's Return.

H. F. West, of the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency, has returned from an extensive trip through Canada and the West and was back in his office Friday ready for business. Mr. West visited Winnipeg before the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, and inspected numerous properties in the various cities which he touched.

To Bid on Comfort Station.

Local contractors are considering the preparation of estimates on the cost of erecting a public comfort station at the Peters Building over the Whitehall street viaduct. L. C. Green and others who have been working for the station think the structure can be built for about $8,000. It is the intention to start work January 1, 1914. The local park board had indorsed the project.

Comment on Deposit Plan.

Commenting on the suggestion of Robert F. Maddox at Washington that the Government money to be placed in Atlanta banks will not be used for speculative purposes, a leading real estate man said:

"I know of no chance to use any of this money in speculative transactions. This money is primarily for moving the crops, and when the crops are moved there will be plenty of money for the real estate market. There is no doubt about that, and the autumn business should be unusually good."

Mr. Maddox has been conferring with other bankers and Secretary McAdoo on the plan to place $50,000,000 in Southern and Western banks. He is asking for $2,500,000 for Atlanta banks. The vast agricultural sections, he points out, are easily accessible to Atlanta, and it is appropriate that Atlanta banks should handle the money.

FIGHT BITTER ON COMPULSORY EDUCATION

Senate Takes No Action on a Motion to Table Sweat's School Measure.

With the motion before it to table Senator Sweat's compulsory education bill, which precipitated a bitter fight led by Senators McNeill and Allen, the Senate adjourned Friday afternoon shortly before 1 o'clock without taking any action on the bill.

Both Senators McNeill and Allen made a vigorous attack on the bill, the former charging that its only effect would be to let down the flood gates for the entrance of negro children into the public schools. Senator Sweat, the author of the bill, denied this, whereupon Senator Allen charged that the bill was illegally constituted in that case, as it discriminated between white and black, which is contrary to the laws of the State. The consideration of the bill will be continued Friday afternoon.

The Senate Friday morning passed unanimously the new charter for Atlanta, with amendments providing for the submission of the initiative, referendum and recall clause and the proposed limitation of the Recorder's power to the people before enaction into law.

Abolishes Clerk's Office.

The new charter as amended provides for the abolition of the present office of chief clerk of the city tax department and substitutes therefor a board of tax assessors and receivers, who shall nominate a chief clerk, subject to the confirmation first by the tax committee of the General Council and ultimately by the General Council. This provision will not be submitted to the vote of the people. The bill provides further for the initiative and referendum and the recall of all heads of departments, including the Mayor and members of the Council, upon the petition of a certain percentage of registered voters, and for the proper inspection of all elevators and boilers within the city limits.

The new charter, as passed by the Senate, will be sent back to the House for its approval preparatory to final submission to the Governor.

The Senate also passed Mr. McGregor's bill providing for a hearing by the Governor before trustees of public institutions shall be dismissed. According to the provisions of the bill such dismissal can be made only upon the recommendation of a majority of the members of the board of trustees of the institution affected.

New Bills in Senate.

Among the new bills introduced in the Senate Friday morning was a resolution by Senators Allen and McGregor, requesting the State Board of Education to investigate the advisability of introducing in the schools of the State "Webster's Blue Back Speller," which was used in the common schools a half century ago and "is still better than those used today," according to Major McGregor. Senator Oliff, of the Fourth, also introduced a resolution requesting the United States Government to make an appropriation to preserve Fort Frederick, on St. Simons Island, a relic of the days of General Oglethorpe, first Governor of Georgia.

The Senate Committee on Constitutional Amendments, headed by Senator Harrell, of the Twelfth, reported favorably Friday the two constitutional amendment taxing measures which were introduced at the instance of Governor Slaton. The bill creating a commission to investigate the release of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, which was defeated Thursday, was also reported on favorably following recommitment.

In addition to the general bills, the Senate passed the House bill giving the secret ballot to the city of Augusta.

Orient Road Shows $160,000 in Earnings

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Bondholders and noteholders of the Kansas City and Orient Railway have received a circular from the reorganization committee stating that the plan which the committee had hoped to issue earlier in the year had to be amended owing to the financial situation abroad and in America.

The committee reports that earnings of the line in the United States from June 30, 1912, to June 30, 1913, will approximate $160,000. The committee feels justified in adopting a policy of building into Kansas City as soon as possible.

Buried in Socks Made For Father Years Ago

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 8.—James H. Williams, of the town of Jerusalem, was buried with his feet encased in a pair of socks knitted for his father 82 years ago.

Shortly before James was born his mother knitted a pair of socks for his father, but the socks were never worn by the father. They decended to the son, who carefully preserved them and expressed a desire to be buried with them on.

COTTON GOSSIP

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma clear and hot."

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows part cloudy over eastern half of belt and south Texas; generally fair elsewhere; general showers in eastern half of belt; none in western half. Indications are still for some rain coming in the west over Sunday.

Rainfall The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "After making full allowance for the fact that cotton is a dry weather plant and thrives on sunshine, the talent is forced to admit that drouth in parts of Oklahoma and Texas, accompanied by such high temperatures as those of yesterday, is injuring the crop every day. However, most traders on the short side have learned not to accept damage reports at face value, and when, in the face of a fair forecast for the west, the barometer lines revealed low pressure of the Gulf of Mexico, the talent promptly exploited storm formation as a promise of rain and weather students on the floor helped by asserting that extremely hot weather in Oklahoma is simply a forerunner of rain and lower temperatures. Thus the market worked down after the bulge of Wednesday.

"Meanwhile, Manchester is not sending any encouraging reports though Liverpool managed to sell 10,000 bales on the spot yesterday, while this time any lack of evidence of trade activity is apt to tell on the raw cotton market, because just now slack demand for the actual makes a poor showing when contrasted with the keen demand in evidence during the past two years.

"The road is very dull and very narrow; speculation has been reduced to a minimum and neither talent nor trade is in a humor to display enterprise. Increasing spot sales at Galveston and Houston indicate that the new crop market is opening up."

The market was sold off after the opening on unofficial reports of rain at Galveston. The early weather map shows no rain and weather experts could not see any in sight, which resulted in an active wave of buying at the outset.

On the call, Flinn and Gifford bought August. Black, Mendelberg, Hentz and Harlen sold. Wilson, Mitchell, Gifford, Flinn and Black bought October. McElroy, Bashford and Hentz sold. Flinn, Wiggin, Watkins, Ralt and Gifford bought December. Rothschild, Rosenberg, Black and Orvis sold. Hicks bought January. Bashford, Hentz and Schley sold.

Noon Texas weather: Galveston cloudy, 78; good shower this morning; Taylor, Waco, McKinney, Denison clear, 70; Houston clear, 87; San Antonio cloudy, 92; Austin, Little Rock clear, 85; Belton clear, 93; Dallas clear, 93; Fort Worth clear, 98; Sherman clear, 92; Paris, Fort Smith, Ark., clear, 97; Texarkana clear, 101; Ardmore clear, 98; Chickasha, Oklahoma City, Tulsa clear, 95; Muskogee clear, 99; McAlester clear, 94; Shreveport part cloudy, 93; rained at New Orleans half hour; now clearing.

MODERN MILLER CROP REPORT.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—The hot and dry weather which prevailed over a large part of the country this week, while injuring the growing crops, was favorable for harvesting, storage and marketing of winter wheat, but delayed plowing of land for seeding of wheat in the fall. However, there is no apprehension felt, as there still is ample time for this work with favorable weather conditions. That there is more attention being given to the preparations of the soil and selection of seed is indicated by the larger yields and better quality of winter wheat. Thrashings continue to show larger yields than has been expected and the quality of the grain is of the best.

There is still a steady movement of wheat to market, as the yield is so much larger than has been estimated and that most farmers are willing to part with at least a portion of their crop.

ABSENCE OF RAINS SENDS COTTON UP

Heavy Buying Based on Deterioration Reports From West—Offerings Extremely Light.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Uneasiness was again expressed to-day over weather conditions in Texas, and when the cotton market opened, prices were at a net advance of 5 to 11 points from Thursday's final. New crops were the strongest, August showing an advance of 15 points immediately after the opening. The opening quotation was 11.75 and the next figure was 11.85.

There was no rain shown on the map, as had been generally expected and local weather experts failed to find any in sight just at present and the market was bought freely from strong sources. Shorts were also good buyers, but on the rally there seemed to be some cotton for sale as sentiment continues very bearish. Later the market eased off sharply on reports of rain at Galveston and El Paso and less support was in evidence.

Because the detailed weather map failed to show any rains over the western belt, and private reports of deteriorations in Arkansas and Oklahoma caused by the high temperatures and dry weather, the market developed a steady tone during the afternoon session, resulting in a rapid advance in prices from the early low point. Some of the large spot interests continue to buy on all reactions, which is encouraging to the bull element.

The bulls contend rain does not come in the West within the next week that very serious damage will result and the feeling is now becoming more bullish. The market is very easily influenced on any weather news and prices will be governed accordingly.

At the close the market was steady with July at unchanged quotation and other positions at a net advance of 8 to 11 points from the final quotations of Thursday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—The map shows cloudy weather prevailing over the eastern half of the belt and south Texas; generally fair elsewhere. Showers were quite general east of the River, but none are shown west. Indications are for increasing cloudiness with prospects for precipitation to come on the eastern States over Sunday. Cloudy and showery weather in indicated for the central and eastern States.

Liverpool was poor at first but rallied on the absence of rain in the West. Spot prices 6 points lower; sales 8,000 bales. Trade traders here were at an advance of about 6 points on nervous covering by shorts on the Government forecast of fair weather to-day and tomorrow in Oklahoma and Texas, but prices soon dropped to last night's closing figures when Galveston reported heavy rain. New York says the declining tendency is due more to the difference of speculation to furnish support than to weather prospects.

Trading is very quiet, waiting for weather developments in the western States over Sunday.

Spot people report the inquiry for early new shipments is still disappointingly slow

Marked Improvement Noted in Wool Trade

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—More inquiry has developed in the wool market during the past week, probably stimulated by the increased demand for lightweight goods, following the recent openings by leading mills. Total sales are estimated at fully 2,000,000 pounds, the business being distributed among the leading houses and covering most of the desirable grades. Primary markets are now well cleaned up, except in Ohio, but even there very little is doing and buyers are coming home. Prices here are unchanged.

Liquidation of holdings wherever a profit is shown is the policy in favor and some transfers, it is said, have been made at a very small margin.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX WRITES OF "THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME," BY HALL CAINE

The Brilliant American Poetess Analyzes the Tragedy of the Woman Whose Child Had No Father, the Horror of Her Loveless Marriage and the Great Problem of This Day.

HALL CAINE'S latest work of fiction, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," is a striking illustration of the change which has taken place in the world of literature during the last score of years.

For frank realism and courageous attacks upon time-worn traditions, it takes the lead of all other books written by all other authors.

The heroine of this novel is a young English girl, reared by an angelic mother and a traditionally brutal British father.

The father is a self-made man, who attains great wealth, and who marries his daughter to a debauched man of title.

The girl's feelings and ideas are not taken into consideration in the least. Neither has she been instructed regarding the meaning of marriage. The death of her mother when she was a mere child deprived her of the one tender tie, and left her with only the companionship of disagreeable relatives or paid attendants.

From the hour of her marriage the trials and problems of life begin to present themselves to this young girl. With the first approach of the husband as a lover, all her womanly instincts arise in revolt and the bride refuses to become a wife.

Father, aunt, and clergymen are called into consultation, to small avail. Afraid as the girl is of her father, she is still more terrified at the thought of giving herself to her husband.

She insists upon returning home to her father, but is finally prevailed upon to go away with the husband, if he will leave her undisturbed until he can win her affections.

To this situation the husband consents, wishing to avoid a public scandal. However, his method of winning his bride's affections is not a successful one. Intemperance and vulgarity are among his characteristics and the young wife finds herself growing more and more disgusted with him, daily.

Then comes the designing adventuress, in the guise of an old school friend and relative, who enters the home and becomes the mistress of the husband.

Bad as the man is, by nature and habit, one cannot help feeling that his position in his own home was a sorry one, and his affiliation with a woman of his own type does not seem at all surprising.

However, it ends all possibility of his ever winning the heart of his wife. Just at this moment the ideal man enters upon the scene and new complications arise.

Heart, soul, brain and body awaken simultaneously in the young wife, and it is quite naturally a blow to the husband's pride and to his self-conceit when he discovers that the chaste Diana, who has refused her husband's kiss, is an expectant mother.

The wife runs away, alone, and goes to London, where her child is born, and where, in the present phase of the story now running in Hearst's Magazine, she is facing poverty and despair in her efforts to support herself and child.

We must remember that she was a very young and perfectly ignorant girl, knowing nothing of life, of the world, or of human nature, when she was plunged into all these distressing situations. All her instincts were high and fine, yet through the curious complications of her destiny, she became the mother of a child of a man she loved while married to a man she loathed.

Mighty problems face her in this situation

Everywhere she sees women respected by society and religious institutions, who are mothers of undesired children of detested men, simply because they are married to them.

Everywhere she sees women despised and shunned because they have brought forth children with love only to legitimatize birth.

Her young mind is torn and tortured with all the great problems suggested by these experiences. Meantime, the lover she believes to be dead is sailing on the high seas searching for strange goals and wholly unconscious of all that has happened to the woman of his heart.

Besides these two central figures are several other very interesting characters; one a beautiful young woman who elopes with a clergyman connected with the school where this young girl was educated. In the midst of her great distress, in her efforts to make a living for her child, she comes upon them in the slums of London; the clergyman dying and the woman selling herself, soul and body, to supply him with the necessities of life.

Just how Mr. Caine is going to deal with all these characters eventually is a question to all readers of his remarkable novel.

No amount of brilliant writing and no amount of realistic pen pictures can change to any marked degree the situation of a woman who becomes a mother without the sanction of the law.

Birth needs, first and foremost, both the legitimate call of love and the sanction of marriage to make it ideal and beautiful.

When either element is lacking the child is not well-born in the fullest meaning of that word.

Physically, mentally and morally the child may be perfectly equipped to meet the demands of life, with only love as a dower from both parents; but we live in a world which has been obliged to make social laws to protect its social rights; and where there is a flaw in the birth certificate of a child, in this respect, it is sure to cause suffering and trouble sooner or later for all concerned.

But Mr. Caine's story will set people to thinking along broader and kinder lines regarding these topics.

It presents great subjects for the mature deliberation of all classes and the followers of all creeds. The methods of public charitable institutions toward erring women are fully illustrated in this novel, and will no doubt lead to much discussion and many protests. Read the great story, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

Hall Caine's extraordinary novel, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," may be begun in the number of Hearst's Magazine now on the newsstands. A complete synopsis of previous chapters is printed in the magazine.

HALL CAINE.

Look at the Picture Below, Then Look at Yourself.

You Can Find in This Picture More Information About "How to Succeed" Than Carnegie or Rockefeller Could Give You in Two Hours' Talk.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Work, hurry, plan, achieve—while the others rest.

That is the big secret of success.

The turtle won the race against the hare in the fable, because the turtle walked ALL THE TIME.

He could not run very fast but HE KNEW ENOUGH NOT TO LIE DOWN AND GO TO SLEEP.

Take a lesson from that turtle.

Take a lesson from this picture.

Your competitors are asleep on the grass.

They are thinking that it is too hot to work. They are pitying themselves. They will have more cause to pity themselves later for having pitied themselves so much NOW.

Don't envy the man who is paddling a canoe and telling some young person with a high color what wonderful things he is going to do NEXT WINTER.

Let him paddle his canoe and talk about himself.

YOU WORK NOW.

Lucky the man who works in August, lucky the man who is found by the hottest sun's rays ATTENDING TO BUSINESS.

When you are racing side by side with others, and when all are running, you can not do more than keep even.

Now, while others rest, is your chance to get ahead. Take it.

Don't pick this up and say to yourself that it is a rather nice picture, and put it down again. LOOK at it, study it.

THEN LOOK AT YOURSELF.

Ask yourself, and don't deceive yourself in the answer, whether you are the man WALKING in this picture, or whether you are one of those figures lying asleep on the grass.

The answer to that question will answer your question as to what your probable position will be in the world a few years from now.

There is a better sermon on success in this picture by Tad than in all the nice interviews given out by Mr. Rockefeller telling how he saved his first dollar, or by Mr. Carnegie saying what a wonderful thing it is to give away libraries WITH NO BOOKS IN THE LIBRARIES.

July is gone. If you wasted that month, don't waste more time now in regret. Start off in the right way in August. WALK fast, WORK hard, THINK for yourself, look ahead.

Remember that no man ever hurt himself with too much work.

IT'S WHAT YOU DO BETWEEN WORKING HOURS THAT HURTS YOU.

Remember, also, that no man cheats his employer. You can only cheat yourself by doing a thing less well than you know how to do it.

Be the steady walker, be the man who gains time while others rest, be the man who gets ahead.

And if you really try, good luck to you, for the man WHO REALLY TRIES doesn't fail.

The Time to Get Ahead Is Now

The man who travels and works in these hot and lazy days, while others rest and think it over, is the man that WILL WIN.

Young men that have ambition, and old men too, CAN GET SUCH A START BY DOING THE RIGHT KIND OF WORK NOW THAT THE OTHERS RESTING AND THINKING HOW HOT IT IS WILL NEVER CATCH YOU. August, September, October—they are the months of the winning workingman. (See Editorial.)

Frederick the Great

By REV. THOS. B. GREGORY.

FREDERICK THE GREAT became King of Prussia one hundred and seventy-three years ago—May 31, 1740. It was not much of a Prussia then, but the little man in the blue coat with the red trimmings made it one of the first powers of the Continent.

A very lovable old fellow, in many ways, was Frederick the Great. Underneath the king there was ever visible the man. After he had conquered his political position he made his nobles and aristocrats treat the common people fairly. He personally saw to it that just laws were instituted. He mortally hated fanaticism and bigotry. When the churchmen attempted to inveigle him into religious persecution, he replied: "Let the parsons go to Heaven their own way, and let everybody else do the same."

At heart he was favorable to democratic institutions. When King George wanted to hire soldiers of him to fight the Americans he indignantly spurned the proposition, and refused to let the Hessians pass through his territory on their way to join the British. He admired the things for which the Americans were fighting as ardently as he did the personal qualities and soldierly parts of the man who led their armies.

The Woman With the Secret Eyes

By WINIFRED BLACK.

SHE lives down in the valley by the running water, the woman with the secret eyes. She has three children, a boy and two girls; her husband has gone away, they say.

She is poor—and she is angry about it. She does not like the old house by the running water and she hates the song the water sings all day and all night.

"If I could only get up on the hill," she says whenever a neighbor will stop to talk with her, "it would be better up there. See what gay lives the people on the hill live. They have company and the lights shine through their windows far, far into the night, and they laugh and sing, and down here, where I live, we hear only the water—all day and all night the water.

And He's Smart.

"My children don't like it here, either. I am going to send them away so they won't hear it—all day and all night, the running of the water there by the door.

"The boy is going away to the city. Did you see the new suit I bought him? Oh, I can manage when I have to, and the new shoes, too, and the hat? Nothing better in town than those clothes—he's 'as good as the rest now.'

"And he's smart, too; he will make his way, and then we will live on the hill, too, maybe.

"The girls are going, too. I shall see to that. Did you notice the pretty new hats I have bought them? Not a girl in town has prettier ones—and their stockings, too. Some day they shall have a piano like the little girls up there on the hill. I will get it for them. You'll see; you'll see. They won't always be so poor."

Last night when I took a walk by the rushing water I met the three children, far, far out on the road toward town, and I saw a man slink through the low trees to the door of the woman with the secret eyes. I heard the woman's voice. She was laughing a cruel, wicked laugh, a dangerous laugh like the warning of a snake, and the man laughed, too.

To-morrow the three children will have more new things to make them look like the children in the houses up there on the hill—and the woman with the secret eyes will laugh again and be proud of the fine showing her children make—and all the time she is digging, digging, digging a pit for their poor little feet; for the people of the town are beginning to whisper.

They nod together, the old women; they grin together, the old men—and the children wonder why it is that people look so strangely at them when they put on their new finery and go out—to be seen.

"As good as the rest!" Poor woman with the secret eyes, don't you know, can't you understand that those children would be better off if they went barefoot, ragged and had too little to eat, and carried with them into the comprehension of growing youth no secret wonder, no half-hidden doubt of you and the way you earn the money to spend so freely on them?

The boy who's going to the city soon, what can he ever be with such a mother? The little girl, with the soft eyes there, how can she ever hold up her head—when she remembers and understands? The slender child with the puzzled eyes, what will she care what dresses she wore—when she lived down by the rushing waters? All she will know is that there was something "queer" about her mother.

Can't Hide Her Story.

Oh, woman with the secret eyes, work, scrub, starve, do anything honest, anything decent, and give your children a memory of you that will keep them straight when their own feet begin to wander. Your eyes are secret, but they can not hide your story. Some day, some day these little ones of yours will know it, strive as you may to keep it hidden. Then what of your dreams—of houses on the hill and friends and joy?

Hark, how the water runs through the fringing willows. "To-morrow," it says, "to-morrow"—do you never listen to the warning it is trying to give?

GEN. HUERTA IS ARMING JINGOES

Hatred Against Americans in Capital Stirred by President—Lind Warned Not to Come.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The administration to-day decided to ignore entirely the note sent by President Huerta to the American government and to direct Special Envoy Lind to proceed to Mexico City without delay on his arrival at Vera Cruz to-night, unless he be held back by armed force.

"The President declines to be bluffed," stated a prominent government official to-day.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 8.—With the approval of Provisional President Huerta, arms were issued to-day to the students of the National Military Academy, who yesterday drafted a resolution praising Huerta for declaring John Lind, the special American envoy, persona non grata to the Mexican Government.

A number of residents in the American colony, who have fortunes invested in Mexico, are planning to make a demonstration Sunday when protests will be lodged against the action of President Wilson in sending a personal representative to Mexico City and urging that the Mexican Government be upheld.

Foreign Minister Aldape and other members of the Cabinet are doing all in their power to arouse the patriotism and enthusiasm of the people.

Meetings of young hot bloods, who are standing up for President Huerta in his defiance of the Stars and Stripes, are being encouraged.

Mexican secret service agents have been detailed to watch every movement that Mr. Lind makes here and the envoy will be under constant surveillance.

The newspapers to-day carried flaming stories of "Yankee interference," and warned the State Department to recall Mr. Lind from Vera Cruz and not allow him to come to Mexico City.

Direful consequences are promised if President Wilson and Secretary Bryan continue their present course of trying to settle the internal affairs of Mexico while withholding official recognition of the Huerta administration.

All the papers carry warm words of praise for Huerta and promise that he will stand like a rock in behalf of his policy of "Mexicans for Mexican affairs."

United States warships in the harbor at Vera Cruz were in wireless communication with the New Hampshire, upon which Mr. Lind, is coming, and it is expected that the New Hampshire will reach Vera Cruz about 9 o'clock to-night.

Some Would Ignore Lind.

There was a gathering of Cabinet Ministers and Huerta adherents in Congress at the National Palace today, at which the existing American-Mexican situation was thoroughly discussed. Some are for completely ignoring Mr. Lind, while the radicals insist that he shall be expelled un-

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—State Department advices received from the battleship New Hampshire, via Vera Cruz to-day stated that the battleship carrying former Governor Lind will not reach Vera Cruz before to-morrow afternoon. Habeas Corpus to Free Lee Sought In Superior Court

Charging that Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, is being given all the liberties of a "detailed guest" while confined in prison, while the negro Newt Lee, who is held as a witness only, is being treated as a criminal, Attorneys Graham and Chappell, representing Lee, late Friday afternoon swore out a writ of habeas corpus for the release of Lee. The hearing has been set for Saturday morning at 10 o'clock before Judge George L. Bell, of the Superior Court.

The petitioners set forth that Sheriff Mangum is treating Newt Lee as an ordinary criminal, despite the alleged fact that he is only a witness in the Mary Phagan case, having been released from the charge of murder by order of Judge Ellis, who, it is claimed, ordered the sheriff on disposition of a former writ not to confine Lee as a criminal but as a witness.

The petitioners set forth further that Frank, who is charged with the murder from which Lee was released, is being given all the liberties and privileges of a "detained guest, even being allowed to visit the dining room where he takes his meals."

It was charged this afternoon that this latest move is part of a general attack on the Sheriff inspired by political motives.

FOREMAN OF FACTORY GIVES STARTLING NEW EVIDENCE FOR FRANK

Portions of E. F. Holloway's testimony were badly shaken Solicitor Dorsey finished a grilling cross-examination of the National Pencity Factory timekeeper and watchman late Friday.

Holloway appeared a very willing witness for the defense and Dorsey went after him viciously as soon as Reuben Arnold was through the direction questioning.

The Solicitor, by his line of questioning, first imputed that Holloway had sought to get Kendrick, a former night watchman to swear that Frank had been in the habit of calling him up at night as he called Newt Lee. Holloway denied this indignantly.

Dorsey next asked Holloway if he had not told L. P. Whitfield, a Pinkerton operaitve, to come around the next day and he was sure the detective would find something. The next day the bloody club was found. Holloway also denied this.

Holloway testified that N. V. Darley left the factory at about 9:20 o'clock. Dorsey showed him his own affidavit saying that Darley left with Frank about 10:45.

Holloway gave Jim Conely the lie when he was recalled to the stand. Under the guidance of Reuben Arnold, he took up Conley's charges of grave misconduct against Frank and denied each one of them.

The day watchman declared that he always had been in the factory at the time Conley testified he had watched at the door for Frank and that he was positive such things never had taken place.

Holloway asserted that Frank never had brought women to his office and that women never were in his office, except members of his family.

Conley when he made his sensational charges of misconduct against Frank, cited Thanksgiving as one of the days that Frank had women in the factory. Holloway said Conley was not in the factory that day.

Reubne Arnold brought out the striking fact that it was snowing on Thanksgiving Day as a point against Conley's statement that a woman visited the factory that day and that she wore white shoes and white stockings.

Failure of George Epps, the 14-year-old newsboy, to appear in response to the call of the defense led Attorney Arnold to ask Judge Roan if he could not get an attachment for the lad. It was explained that the court deputies merely had been unable to locate the missing witness and that he would be brought into court the first thing in the morning.

That the door leading from the entryway on the first floor of the National Pencil Factory, which had been nailed up since the first of January, was found broken open shortly after the murder of Mary Phagan was the startling testimony of N. V. Darley at the trial of Leo Frank Friday afternoon.

No testimony of this nature had been presented before and no intimation of such a discovery had been made during the investigation of the murder mystery. Its production, if the statements remain uncontroverted, opens up the possibility that the murderer of Mary Phagan attacked her on the first floor, broke open the door into the rear of the building and threw the body down one of two trap door, one of which opens onto a chute and the other onto a steep stairway.

The defense did not appear to be abandoning its theory that Conley might have attacked Mary Phagan and thrown her down the leevator shaft only a few feet distant or down the scuttlehole right by the elevator. On the contrary, Reuben Arnold in questioning Darley and other witnesses emphasized the ease with which such a deed might have been accomplished. It seemed to be the effort of the defense at this time not to center upon any one theory, but to show the jurors that the negro might have perpetrated the crime and disposed of the body in any one of four or five ways.

Darley, in advancing the striking possibility that the body had been carried through the door on the first floor into the rear of the building, said that the door had been nailed up again a few days after the crime as mysteriously as it had been broken open.

Darley said that he had kept watch of employees after the murder and that his suspicion immediately had fastened upon Conley because of the negro's peculiar actions. He said he had detailed the day watchman to montain an espionage over Conley.

C. B. Dalton's story recevied a severe blow at the hands of Darley. Darley said that no negro night watchman had been employed at the factory before April, 1913. Dalton tlod of night visits at the factory prior to this time and said he was met by a negro night watchman.

Solicitor Dorsey, cross-examining Darley, made the witness admit that detectives had been in the factory after the crime and might themselves have broken open the door.

The solicitor has brought out that if the body had been thrown down the chute in the rear of the factory, it would have dropped behind a pile of boxes where it would have been more effectively hidden than where it was discovered by Newt Lee. The solicitor claimed that the trap door over the rear stairway into the basement was nailed.

The attorneys for Frank vigorously assailed Friday the stories of two of the State's of two of the State's negro witnesses, Jim Conley, the accuser of Frank, and Albert McKnight, who said he saw Frank at the Selig home Saturday afternoon, April 26.

The motorman and conductor of the street car on which Mary Phagan is believed to have come to town the day of her death both testified that they knew the girl and that she was on their car which arrived at Broad and Hunter Streets not before 12:07 o'clock. She stayed on the car, they said, until the car reached Broad and Hunter Streets, which was about 12:10 o'clock. Consequently, it would have been impossible for her to reach the factory before 12:11 or 12:12 o'clock.

If the testimony of the two street car employees is accurate, it completely upsets Jim Conley's story that he saw Mary Phagan enter the factory before Monteen Stover came in. By the Stover girl's own testimony she entered the factory at 12:05 o'clock and left at 12:10 o'clock. Thus, she had gone by the time the Phagan girl arrived.

It also serves to destroy the significance of the Stover girl's testimony that Frank was absent from his office when she arrived there. As Mary Phagan had not yet arrived, according to the testimony of the street car men, it could hardly be regarded as a suspicious circumstance that Frank was not in his office, if it develops that he really was not. The defense also contends that Miss Stover, who admits she did not enter the inner office, could have looked through the doorway without seeing Frank.

Soon after court reconvened in the afternoon, H. J. Hinchey, of No. 391 Peachtree street, manager of the South Atlanta Blowpipe Company, appeared at the courthouse under subpen of the defense to discredit the story of Albert McKnight. McKnight testified that he was at Frank's home the afternoon of the murder and that he saw Frank board a Georgi avenue cr to return to the fctory.

Hinchey stated before he went on the stand that he was riding in his automobile on Washington street Memorial Day and at 2:15 o'clock he saw Frank get off a Washington street car at Washington and Hunter streets when the car was stalled by the parade. Frank then was on his way to the factory.

Earlier in the day the defense introduced other evidence to discredit McKnight. Photographs and blue prints of the Selig home were displayed to show that it would have been practically impossible for McKnight to see Frank at the sideboard, as the negro testified when he was on the stand.

Photos and Models Introduced.

Photographs and blue prints of the pencil factory also were put in evidence and in the afternoon a large sized model of the pencil factory, constructed on a scale of three-eights of an inch to the foot, was brought into the court room. It was made by T. H. Willett, a patternmaker, of No. 100 Highland avenue, and John Cox, an attache of Reuben Arnold's office.

The model and blue prints were submitted in an effort to demonstrate that the State's theory of the crime is unreasonable and preposterous, and to illustrate the theory that the defense holds.

Attorney Arnold, who was conducting the examination during the forenoon, sought also to throw a deep shadow of suspicion upon the story of young George Epps, ho testified that he rode uptown with Mary Phagan the day she was killed.

Matthews said that another girl was seated with Mary the latter part of the ride to town. He did not recollect that Epps was on the car at all. The motorman said that he was relieved at Broad and Marietta streets and that he sat behind Mary and her companion all the way to Hunter street. He said the two alighted at Hunter street and proceeded toward Forsyth, on which the factory is located.

This is in direct contradiction to the story of Epps, who testified that he and Mary left the car at Forsyth and Marietta streets and that he walked with her toward the factory as far as the viaduct.

Didn't See Epps.

Hollis did not remember seeing Epps on the car. He said Mary was alone when he collected her fare after the car got on English avenue. He left the car at Forsyth and Marietta streets and did not see Mary Phagan alight there.

Albert Kauffman, an architect, was called to discredit several of the State's witnesses. He had blueprints of the Selig home which he displayed to the jury to show that it was impossible for Albert McKnight to have seen from the kitchen into the dining room, as he testified he did, on the Saturday afternoon that Frank came home from the factory.

His testimony was to the effect that Monteen Stover could not have seen over the safe door into Frank's office at the time she declared she was unable to find him on her visit to the factory.

He said that there was room for several bodies to pass down the scuttle hole into the basement. He exhibited a diagram of the factory to show that Frank could have sat in his office and not been aware of anything taking place beyond the time clock—for example, anyone coming up or going down the stairs.

Miss Daisy Hopkins, who C. B. Dalton said was his companion on visits to the factory basement, was called by the defense and denied Dalton's statements.

She said she never had spoken to Frank, and that Frank never had spoken to her.

Solicitor Dorsey made an attack on her character and forced her to admit she had been in jail on a statutory charge. It was brought out, however, that she was released without trial.

Frank, for the first time during the trial, took ana ctive part in helping direct the course his case was taking. He arose from his seat several times to make suggestions to his lawyers, and at his request certain questions were put.

Before Daisy Hopkins was called Solicitor Dorsey said he wanted to ask Harry Scott one more question. Attorney Rosser said he also wanted to ask one more question of Boots Rogers, Detective J. M. Starnes and George Epps. Detective Scott was the first witness called.

STATE IS FORCED TO PIN HOPES ON CONLEY

Must Stand By While Defense Seeks Weak Link in the Negro's Story.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

As the defense in the Frank case gets under way, it is evident enough, as it has been from the beginning of this case, that there is but one big, tremendously compelling task before it—the annihilation of Conley's ugly story!

The State climaxed its case thrillingly and with deadly effect in the negro.

He came through the fire of cross-examination, exhaustive and thorough, in remarkably good shape, all things considered. He unfolded a story even more horrible than was anticipated. Certainly, in every conceivable way, he has sought to damage the defendant—even going to the extent of lodging against him another crime than murder!

Through the cross-examination, however, there ran an evident vein of deadly purpose upon the part of the defense. Conley was given full limit to go his length. He went it—no disputing that!

The question is, did he go TOO FAR?

Did he, in his last minute effort to get in EVERYTHING that possibly might work against the defendant, tell things, or say things, that eventually will rise to plague him to his utter undoing?

That is the defense's task—THE UNDOING OF CONLEY.

Conley the State's All.

Conley is the heart and soul of the State's case—without Conley, the State is rendered helpless. He is the Alpha and the Omega of the charge against Leo Frank.

That great detective, William J. Burns, says "they always—criminals—leave something out of gear in the stories they tell."

Burns declares there never was a lie told to shield a criminal that did not have in it SOMEWHERE a fatal weakness, that might be located if patiently sought for. The more elaborate the tale the criminal relates, the more chance there is, no matter how infinitely shrewd he may seem to be, that he will be discovered.

To-day is the defense's day in court—during its progress, which may be for a week or more, even as the State's day lasted 240 hours, Leo Frank must break down the awful story of Jim Conley, and prove himself innocent, if he can, of all the various charges brought against him.

Can he do it?

Well, maybe he can, and maybe he can not—at least, in the name of justice and decency and all that is right, he must have full and free OPPORTUNITY.

One Side of the Case.

During the progress of the State's case, the defense was led far into the gloom. People began to doubt Frank's innocence—people of poise and fair minds, desirous of seeing the truth prevail though the heavens fall. Even these people found themselves staggering and groping as the hideous and sinister charges fell from the lips of the negro.

Could Leo Frank, of previous good reputation, of fair name and unblemished integrity, college bred and studious in habit, so far as the public knew or suspected, be the monster responsible for little Mary Phagan's death, and also—the other unspeakable thing?

In a rather remarkable interview Mrs. Leo Frank gave The Sunday American some few weeks ago, she said this of Frank and herself: "As sweethearts, we went hand in hand, and intruded ourselves upon no person; as man and wife we have gone hand in hand, and we have intruded ourselves upon no person!"

They still are going "hand in hand," the man and the woman, the husband and the wife—the one holding up as best he can under the terrible charge of murder, the other there 'beside him—"for better or worse, in sickness and in health, for richer or poorer"—until death, or worse than death, shall sever the tie that binds.

That is something steadying to think about!

It is the defendant's day in court—and he is entitled to fair play and a fair chance!

To some it may seem that the burden has shifted, that it is up to the defense now, notwithstanding the more or less fictitious presumption of innocence the law jealously has established in his favor, to PROVE his innocence.

Be that as it may—even as the gloom has closed about him and all he holds most dear in this world—he still is a human being, in very dire distress, as yet unconvicted; and it is only right that the public should be patient, as he sets forth HIS side of this terrible affair.

And I give it as my opinion here and now, for whatever it is worth, that the case against Leo Frank yet may be far from conclusive—and it may never be made conclusive.

Conley's Tale Impossible?

Suppose the defense is able to show, by a sequence of logical, orderly and honorably sustained witnesses, that the tale Jim Conley tells is utterly absurd—and IMPOSSIBLE?

What then?

Will you be prepared, if forced to a conviction against your will, if it be that way with you, to say to Frank: "All right, you came through the fire, at times seemingly sure to consume you, unhurt and unscorched, but you came through, and I am content."

Conley's story has not YET been broken down—no. But it MAY be broken down.

In an article a few days ago, I said this, and I feel like repeating it now:

In judging this Frank case, purely from the State's own standpoint, there is nothing so important as the TIME ELEMENT in which the State uncompromisingly claims the crime was committed.

In another article a few days thereafter, I said this, and this I also feel like repeating now:

If the Conley story is a lie, if it has been TOO CLEVERLY "framed up"—if and a thousand other "ifs"—what matters that?

It matters this: If it be a lie, it MUST break down, somewhere, sometime; if it be the truth, it will stand against ALL the assaults made upon it!

State Tied by Conley.

Remember, unless Conley's story holds together, the case against Frank goes to pieces. Everybody who has read the evidence and who still is capable of rendering just judgment will admit that.

Suppose it can be shown, and is shown, that the story Conley told CAN NOT be true?

The defense MUST show that, or Frank is lost!

Can the defense do that?

The State has pinned itself down to exact and definite propositions. Remember, the defense has hardly started its story yet—it may be able to make absurd those very propositions the State has set up.

The crime, according to the State's witnesses, MUST have been committed thus and so, in exact order, and just as stated—or Conley's story falls down.

The biggest element in the State's case is the time element—mark that!

Upon it the State will stand or fall eventually.

If Mary Phagan was NOT killed before 12:05, then Leo Frank didn't kill her. If she was not killed at that time, Conley's story will not do.

Then is when the State says she was killed—THEN and not at any other time. Conley's story ALL leads up to and away from that.

Remember, too, that the only witness who swears to knowledge or suspicion of any unspeakable conduct upon the part of Frank is—again—Conley.

Dalton a Tame Witness.

When it came to corroborating Conley, Dalton proved a tame corroborator. The ugly, nasty charge of perversion and degeneracy, glibly dropped from the lips of Conley, rests ENTIRELY AND ALTOGETHER on Conley's word.

If Conley's story of the murder is shown to be IMPOSSIBLE AND ABSURD, will you then reverse your other opinion concerning Frank—if you have accepted Conley's word as to that—and agree that Conley, having lied to send Frank to the gallows, would have lied as readily to besmirch him with unmentionable scandal otherwise?

Shall not Frank have the right, unchallenged and fair, to clear himself of every charge lodged against him?

To-day is his day in court—will any living person begrudge him, sore pressed, one moment of it?

Will, in the end, he be able to read and take to himself, happily and serenely, Tennyson's beautiful poem ending—

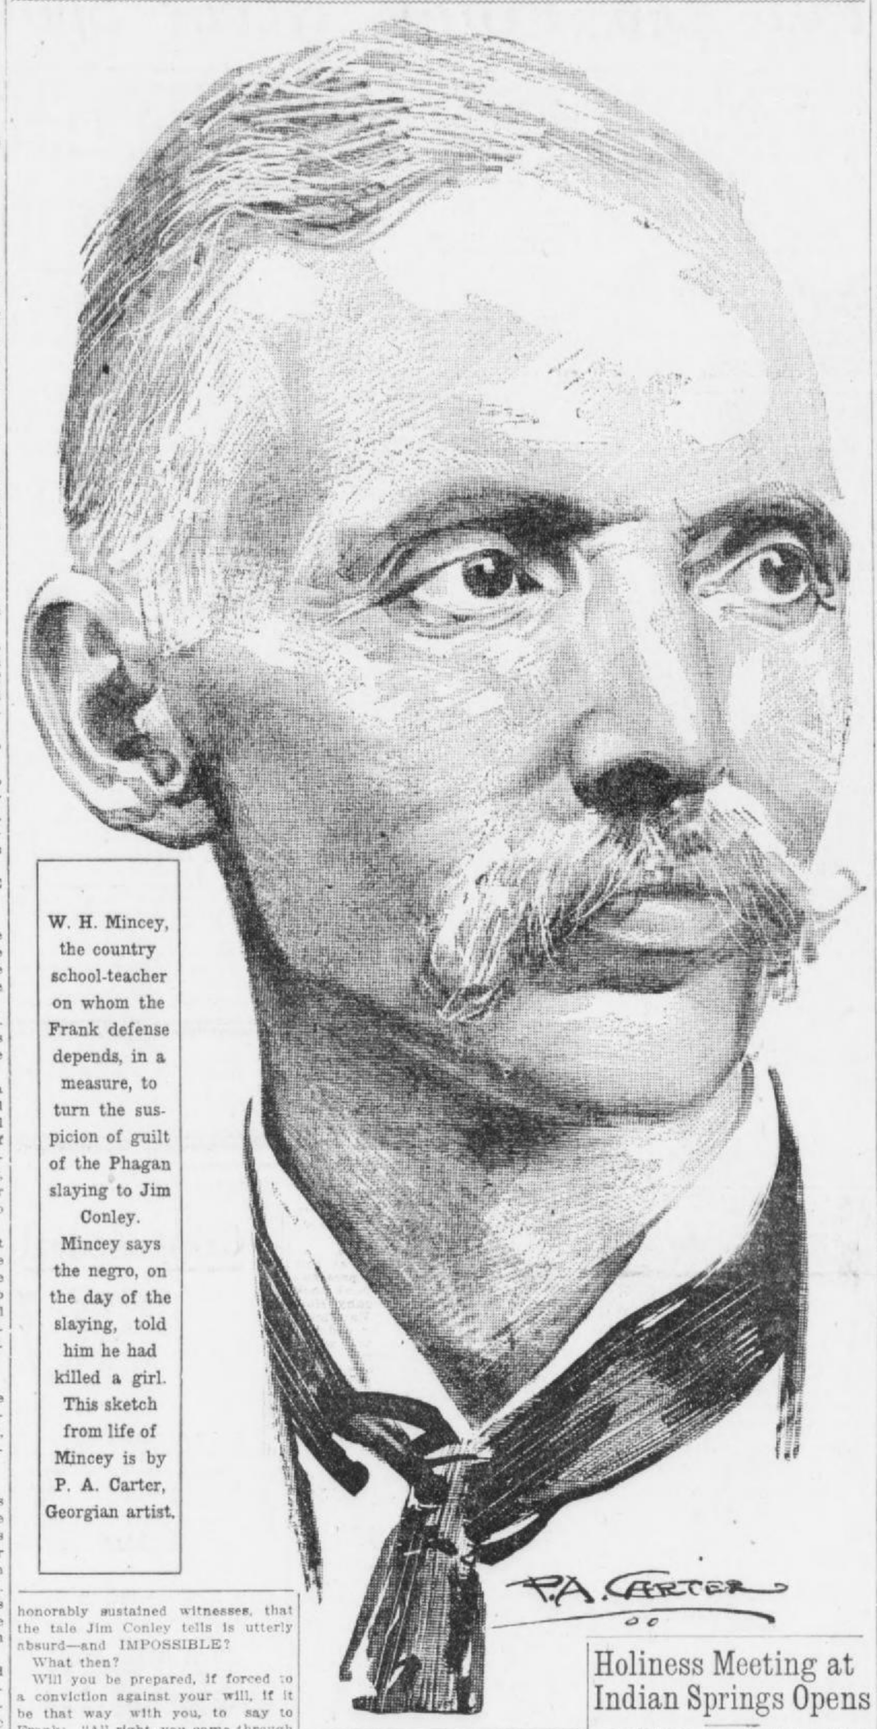
"And now it is daylight everywhere!"

Will he?

We shall see.

At least, he is entitled to his day in court—and it is at hand!

MAN WHO SAYS NEGRO JIM CONLEY CONFESSED SLAYING OF LITTLE GIRL



W. H. Mincey, the country school-teacher on whom the Frank defense depends, in a measure, to turn the suspicion of guilt of the Phagan slaying to Jim Conley. Mincey says the negro, on the day of the slaying, told him he had killed a girl. This sketch from life of Mincey is by P. A. Carter, Georgian artist.

STATE SEES BITS OF EVIDENCE AS ROPE STRANDS

Chain as Strong as Its Weakest Link, but Cord Must Be Cut Thread by Thread.

By O. B. KEELER.

They call it a chain that the State has forged, or has tried to forge, to hold Leo Frank to the murder of Mary Phagan.

But isn't it a rope?

A chain, you know, is as strong as its weakest link. Take one link out, and the chain comes apart.

With a rope, it's different.

Strand after strand might be cut or broken, and the rope still holds a certain weight. Then might come a time when the cutting of one more strand would cause the rope to break.

The point is, the finished rope will sustain a weight that would instantly snap any one of its several strands.

Bits of Evidence Threads.

And that is what the various bits of circumstantial evidence might better be called—strands or threads.

Edgar Allen Poe, in "The Mystery of Marie Roget," has nearly exhausted the philosophical phase of accumulative circumstance and its relation to evidence.

Applying the system of the well-known Dupin to the case in point—and REGARDING IT, BE IT UNDERSTOOD, STRICTLY FROM THE STATE'S VIEWPOINT—an analysis of part of the evidence against Leo Frank follows:

First off, the isolated circumstance of Conley's ability to write would seem as futile as a smoke wreath in sustaining any weight of evidence, except against Conley himself.

But to that fact is added the fact that Frank knew Conley could write.

Still, the thread is flimsy, and, even connected with the case against Frank, would appear worthless.

Six Deductions Seen.

But when it develops that Frank, knowing Conley could write, and knowing the police were trying to find the author of the murder notes—when Frank, well aware of these things, did not inform the police that Conley was lying when he said he could not write, the following deductions appear:

(1) That Frank did not want to connect Conley with the murder notes, which (2) would have been the natural and prompt inclination of a suspected man who knew nothing of the crime himself, so that (3) it appeared Frank knew something of the murder, and (4) knew that Conley knew he knew something of the murder, which (5) justified the conclusion on the part of the State that Frank feared to implicate Conley, lest (6) Conley, in turn, tell something that would implicate him.

Of course, this strand may be broken entirely by the defense, showing Frank never knew the police were ignorant of Conley's ability to write before the police learned it themselves.

But there is one pretty substantial strand of evidence, as the State sees it—and all having its genesis in the simple fact that Conley knew how to write, and at first denied it.

But that strand of itself surely would fail to carry the burden of the case. There must be others.

Even Conley's story is strong only by reason of many strands that surround and support it. Presented to a jury, round and unvarnished—tainted by the reek of false affidavits and weakened by the dry-rot of self-interest, Conley's story never would win a verdict against Leo Frank.

But there is the shred of the murder notes—Conley's story draws support from that. There is the time factor brought out by the expert testimony—Conley's story twines itself about the prop of science. There is the agitation of Frank noticed by Newt Lee in the middle of the afternoon—Conley's story provides for that. There is the visit of Monteen Stover, a tiny circumstance of itself—but of vast importance just so far as it strengthens Conley's recollection of exact time.

And it is by reason of the rope already well along in the twisting that a hundred other little circumstances become significant that of themselves would be lighter than the air-drawn dagger that troubled the dreams of Macbeth.

They fit in with the twisting of the rope.

Will the Rope Hold?

There is Frank's agitation at home and at the factory. There is the ugly story of habitual "chats" at the factory, guarded by Conley as watchman. And the sending away of Newt Lee that afternoon. And the seeing of Conley by Mrs. White, "loitering" at the place he fixes for himself as watchman, and at the time. And the alleged reluctance of Frank to confront Conley at the jail.

And all the rest of it.

So many little incidents, and most of them small to triviality in themselves.

The point is, each strengthens the other, until the fragile threads become a rope.

Will it hold after Frank's lawyers have presented their side of the case? The jury must decide.

LEO FRANK AIDS HIS LAWYERS IN QUESTIONING OF WITNESSES

For First Time Prisoner Takes Active Interest in Trial for His Life

ing a cot, a bed or a sofa?—A. No.

Q. Did you find anything that looked like a bedroom, except the ladies' room?—A. No.

Hooper Cross-Examines.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Who told you the location of the body?—A. Mr. Schiff.

Q. He was under Mr. Frank in the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Then if that location was wrong all of your measurements were wrong?

Arnold objected and his objection was sustained.

Q. You based all your measurements on Mr. Schiff's location of the body?—A. Yes.

Q. If that was wrong, all of your measurements were wrong—I mean about lines of vision, etc.?—A. Yes.

Q. You found a gas jet burning in the basement? Where was it?—A. Near the front.

Q. On the third floor you depended for light on the front doors and windows?—A. Yes.

Q. These are all glass?—A. Yes.

Q. There is also a gas jet farther back?—A. I didn't see any.

Q. On the first floor you say there is a trap door near the elevator two feet by two feet, three inches, leading to the basement?—A. Yes.

Trap Door Small.

Q. A man of your size would have a hard time getting through there, wouldn't he?—A. Yes.

Q. Two people couldn't get through? A. No.

Q. The scuttle hole back on the first floor leads to the basement?—A. Yes, to the dustpan in the back.

Q. A man doesn't look in a curved line, does he?—A. No, sir.

Q. Well, what do these curved lines on the second floor mean?—A. Those indicate the direction he probably walked.

Several of the jurymen were inattentive to these demonstrations.

Q. Anyone coming into this office could see if anyone was in there, couldn't he, if the door adjoining was open?—A. Yes.

Q. Nobody standing on the fourth floor at the head of the stairway could see down to the second floor?—A. I don't think they could.

Q. Don't you know they couldn't?—A. They might have a little view.

Frank Suggests Query.

Arnold took the witness on the redirect examination.

At the suggestion of Frank, Arnold asked the witness how near Frank's office there was a lavatory.

The witness did not know. Arnold also asked him at Frank's suggestion how far it was from the back of the stairs on the first floor to the top of the stairs at the second floor. The answer was 27 feet.

The identification of the plant and the measurements were carried on with the jury grouped around the witness on the edge of the jury box. Frank arose and walked over to Mr. Rosser to make his suggestions. Rosser whispered the questions to Arnold, who was making the examination.

Q. You did not make any test to see whether a person could view from the third to the fourth floor?—A. Yes.

Q. Would there be any trouble dropping a body down that scuttle hole?—A. No.

Q. Mr. Hooper asked you if it was dark by the elevator, was it?—A. Rather dark.

Might See Mirror.

Hooper took the witness.

Q. This is your diagram—that block on Georgia avenue?—A. Yes.

Q. This is your diagram of the Selig home, isn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. Where was the refrigerator in the kitchen?—A. Right here.

Q. How far is it from this corner of the room to the kitchen door?—A. About four feet.

Q. A man sitting in this corner could see that mirror, could he not?—A. He might.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Could a person standing or sitting anywhere near this kitchen door see the mirror or any part of it?—A. No.

The witness was then excused.

Attorney Arnold tendered as evidence the diagram of the factory, the plat of the Selig home with reference to Pulliam, Washington and Gleen streets and Georgia avenue.

Solictor Dorsey made no objection.

J. G. Adams, a photographer, was next called to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Did you go to the Selig home and take some pictures?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you take a couple of photographs, one from the kitchen door on the outside and one from the hallway looking into the dining room?—A. Only a portion of the window.

Q. Could you see the mirror from this view?—A. No.

Q. Did you take one from the inside of the door?—A. Yes.

Arnold addressed the court:

"Your honor, may I show these pictures to the jury as we go along?"

Dorsey—It's against the rule, your honor. They would not let me do it.

Rosser—Oh, get the witness down off the stand and come before the jury. You can do it that way. Don't bother about Hugh.

Shows Photos to Jury.

The witness presented pictures of the open door of the safe in the outer office, excluding the view into the inner office. He also showed a picture taken outside of the outer office which showed that, with the safe door open, the view into the inner office was excluded. He showed pictures of the basement and a series of views of the elevator shaft on the second floor. He showed pictures of where Jim Conley is said to have sat on the first floor; also pictures of the plating room and a box near where Conley said he got the cloth in which he wrapped the Phagan girl's body. He showed a picture of the lathe where some hair was found.

Q. Did you take a picture of the path a person would take coming from the metal room down the steps?—A. I did.

Mr. Arnold—I want to show the extent of the machinery in this metal room.

The attorney passed a number of photographs before the jury.

Q. In every one of these instances, Mr. Adams, did you make as accurate photographs as possible?—A. I did.

Hooper Quizzes Picture Man.

Attorney Hooper took up the cross-examination.

Q. How long since you took these photographs?—A. About a month.

Mr. Hooper went over the diagram of the Selig home with the witness.

Q. When did you take a photograph of the Selig home?—A. That was more recent.

Q. A slight change of the position of that sideboard would have made the whole room visible through the mirror?—A. It would have made some of it visible.

Q. Wouldn't it have made it all visible?—A. I can't say.

The witness was excused. All of the photographs taken by him were offered as evidence without objection on the part of the State.

Court then took a recess until 2 o'clock.

Call for George Epps.

At the opening of the afternoon session, George Epps, the newsboy who declared that he came downtown on the same car with Mary Phagan, was recalled by the defense, but was not in court. Mr. Arnold addressed the court:

"Your honor," he said, "we are very anxious to get this boy here. I understand he said he is not coming."

Judge Roan said he would issue an attachment for him.

H. J. Hinchey, manager of the Southern Blow Pipe Company, residing at 391 Peachtree street, was called. Attorney Arnold questioned him.

Q. Do you know Leo M. Frank?—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. Four or five years.

Q. What is your business?—A. Mechanical engineer with the Southern Blow Pipe Company.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank on Memorial Day?—A. Yes.

Q. Where?—A. Near the Capitol. I was in an automobile and he was on a Washington street car. At least the car was on Washington street.

Q. What time was it?—A. Between 2 and 2:15 o'clock.

How He Remembered.

Q. How did you know that it was that time?—A. When he was accused I became very much interested and remembered doing certain things on Memorial Day. I left home between 1 and 1:10 o'clock and went through the same maneuvers to determine just what time I would have reached the Capitol.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. How many times did you see Mr. Frank as you were making the trip?—A. Just once.

Q. He was on the inside of the car?—A. Yes.

Q. You had your hands full, didn't you?—A. Not altogether. I am an expert driver.

Q. You didn't see anybody else that you recognized on the car, did you?—A. No.

Discussed It With Frank.

Q. How many times have you seen Mr. Frank in jail?—A. Only once.

Q. Did you discuss this thing with him?—A. Yes.

Q. Was it before or after the Coroner's inquest?—A. It was a long time after that.

Q. Who else did you tell of this?—A. Several other people besides him. Many of them before I even saw the lawyers.

Q. What was the object of your visit? Were you subpenaed then?—A. No. I knew that I would be. My attorney, Leonard Haas, asked me if I would be a witness.

Q. Is he an attorney for Frank?—A. No; he is our attorney.

Q. What is your company?—A. South Atlanta Blow Pipe Company.

Q. Tell me, now, why you went down there to the jail?—A. I had an interest in the case. Mr. Frank was never a personal friend of mine, although I have known him in a business way for five years. I was interested in the case purely because I knew Mr. Frank in a business way.

The witness was excused.

Model of Factory Shown.

The defense's model of the National Pencil Company's building was brought in. It was a pasteboard affair, with wooden staves, built on a scale of 3-8 inch to a foot. It displayed the basement, first and second floors. It was made by P. H. Willet, a pattern maker, and John Cox, of Arnold & Arnold law office, who is also a pattern maker. It is without exterior walls and has all the various departments and little blocks of wood indicating the machinery and other furniture on different floors. Mr. Willet was called to the stand. Attorney Arnold examined him.

Q. You had the dimensions of the National Pencil Company's building in making this model, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. Followed the proportions in making this model?—A. Yes.

Q. You did not try to make fully any model, did you—I mean you did not make it complete?—A. Not entirely.

Q. Did you make any measurements of the factory?—A. Not myself.

Q. Did Mr. Coughlin furnish you his blue prints?—A. No, Mr. Scott gave me the blue prints.

Finds Errors in Plans.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Didn't you make this front door exactly as it is?—A. I made it according to the blue prints.

Q. You don't pretend to say that the windows in the front of the third floor are at all correct?—A. I did not make them.

Here the court stenographer complained that he could not understand the witness.

Hooper: "It is not our fault that he won't talk out."

The witness finally said that the windows had been put in since he finished his design.

Q. Mr. Willet, how do you get the height from a blue print?—A. We don't get it unless it is given.

Q. Was the height given in this case?—A. For the ground floor it was.

Q. You just put in the height for the other floors?—A. I elected those heights.

Q. Look at this trapdoor hole leading into the basement. You don't mean to tell this jury it was cut in the same proportion of 3-8 inch to a foot?—A. I could not tell without measuring it.

Least Bit Out of Proportion.

The witness was given a rule to make the measurements. He said it was a least bit out of proportion.

Q. Isn't it true that the same kind of looseness applies to various parts of this model?—A. No.

Q. Is that the only mistake you made?

Arnold interrupted. "I object to him calling it a mistake," Arnold said.

Attorney Hooper said he was through with the witness, and Arnold took him on the redirect examination.

Q. Does this purport to represent the height?—A. No, it is only the ground plan.

Q. Were you given instructions to correctly follow this ground plan?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you do so?—A. Yes.

Darley Looks at Model.

N. V. Darley, assistant superintendent of the National Pencil Company, was recalled to the stand. Attorney Arnold questioned him.

Q. I wish you would examine this model and tell me whether or not it fairly represents a ground plan of the National Pencil Factory.

With Mr. Arnold questioning him, Darley pointed out the important points of the inside of the factory, as represented in the model.

Q. Is that chute that leads to the basement large enough for a body to pass through?—A. Yes.

Q. How far from where Mary Phagan's body was found would a body have been that fell through the chute?—A. Thirty or forty feet.

Q. If anybody would come down those stairs from the second floor, how far would you have to take them to throw them down the elevator shaft?—A. About 12 feet.

Door Broken Open.

Q. How about the door leading to the woodenware department? How did you find it?—A. It was broken open after the murder.

Q. Had you noticed it before?—A. No.

Q. Sitting in Mr. Frank's office, can you see the time clock?—A. About half of it.

Q. Could you see into Mr. Frank's office from the outer office door, with the safe door open?—A. Standing at the door, I would have to stand on tiptoe to see over it.

Was Dark and Cloudy Day.

Q. Is there any way of locking or bolting the door opening to the metal room from the inside?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is there a bed or a cot or anything of the sort in the whole building?—A. Only two boxes in the basement with dirty sacks on them.

Q. Do you remember the machine little Mary Phagan worked on?—A. I don't remember seeing her at it, but I remember which one it was.

Q. If those doors to the stairway, leading up to the third floor, were open, one could get into the metal room from the rear, couldn't they?—A. Yes.

Q. Is this a good model?—A. It is.

Q. What kind of a day was April 26?—A. Cloudy and dark.

Q. Was the space around the front door darker than usual?—A. Yes.

Q. Sitting in Mr Frank's office, can you see the time clock?—A. About half of it.

Q. Could you see into Mr. Frank's office from the outer office door with the safe door open?—A. Standing at the door, I would have to stand on tiptoe to see over it.

Left Factory With Frank.

Q. What time did you leave the factory Saturday morning, April 26?—A. About 9:40 o'clock.

Q. If Jim Conley said you left at 11 o'clock, is it true, or not?—A. It is not true.

Q. Is it true that Conley said that you came to the factory after 10:30 o'clock, just after Conley arrived?

Hooper interrupted: "The Supreme Court has held that one witness cannot pass on the truthfulness of another. I object to both of these questions."

Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Q. Who left the factory with you?—A. Mr. Leo Frank.

Q. Did you see Jim Conley?—A. No.

Q. Where did you go?—A. Mr. Frank went to Montag's and I went to the Montgomery Theater.

Q. Did you take a drink of soda water together?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever call upon Saturday afternoons?—A. Yes, almost every Saturday. I called to find out about the finance sheet.

Q. Was Frank always there?—A. Always, but one time.

Conley Looked Suspicious.

Q. Mr. Dalton testified that last year he came in contact with a negro night watchman there. Did you have a negro night watchman then?—A. We always had a white night watchman until about April 1.

Q. I will ask you if the finance sheet was not always made up on Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see this negro Conley there Monday?—A. I did.

Q. How did he appear?—A. He looked excited. So much so that I told the watchman to keep an eye on him.

Dorsey objected: "I object to what he told someone else."

Judge Roan sustained the objection over the protest of the defense.

Q. Did you ever pinch or joke with Conley?—A. I didn't call it joking. I have kicked him when I found him loafing. He always laughed.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Frank joke him him?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Did you contribute to the fund to defend Frank?—A. No.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins?—A. I never heard of her until yesterday.

Q. Are you acquainted with her general reputation?—A. No.

Q. When did you find that door open?—A. Three days after the crime.

Q. People were going in and out of the factory all the time, were they not?—A. Yes.

Body in Public Place.

Q. Detectives were all over the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. They went through the door, didn't they?—A. Yes.

Q. Don't you know this trap door was nailed down until the insurance people went through there?—A. No.

Q. Don't you remember two or three days after the murder you saw me go up those steps and find the door nailed?—A. I don't recall what door. I found it open.

Q. Don't you know that if a person had dropped a body down that chute, it would have been a better hiding place for it than anywhere else in the factory?

Arnold: I object to the question.

Dorsey changed the question.

Q. Well, then, which is the most public, this spot where the body was found, or back behind the boxes at the chute?—A. Where the body was found.

Recovered From Severe Lung Trouble

Plenty of fresh air and good food are necessary to persons suffering from lung trouble, but something more is needed to bring about full health. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for throat and lung troubles, and so many reports have been received showing that it brought about good results in a number of cases which were declared hopeless, that all sufferers who are not benefiting otherwise should at least investigate what it has done for others. Investigate this case:

Madison Lake, Minn.

"Gentlemen: In December, 1908, March, 1909, and September, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs which confined me several weeks, each time to my bed. My doctor advised me to go West.

"In November I started for Denver, Colo. After my arrival I met Michael Brody, who upon learning of my condition, urged me to take Eckman's Alterative. In about two months I began to feel better. I kept on taking the medicine and improved fast. In March, 1910, I returned home. I think I am entirely well, have a good appetite and sleep well. When I left Denver my weight was 130 pounds. I now weigh 165, my normal weight. I thank God and your Alterative for my health."

CONLEY'S STORY PUT IN PECULIAR LIGHT WHEN DEFENSE CALLS SCOTT

Harry Scott, of the Pinkerton agency, showed up the "confessions" of Conley in a peculiar light when he was called to the stand by the Frank defense Thursday afternoon.

The detective, questioned by Luther Rosser, told the jury that Conley, when he "had told everything;" when he had accused Frank of the killing and had made himself an accessory after the fact by declaring that he assisted in the disposal of the body; when every motive for holding anything back had been swept away by his third affidavit, still denied to him (Scott) many of the alleged circumstances to which he testified while he was on the stand the first three days of the week.

It will be the contention of the defense that these many additions to Conley's tale, inasmuch as all reason for concealing them had passed after Conley had come out with his accusations against Frank and his confession of his own part in the crime, are pure fabrications of the black man's imagination, as are the other details of his tale.

Scott said that he had grilled and badgered Conley repeatedly about seeing Mary Phagan enter the factory. Even after the negro had made all his incriminating statements, he steadfastly denied seeing the girl victim go up the stairs to the second floor.

Denied He Had Seen Purse.

He denied also to Scott, the detective said, that he ever had seen the girl's mesh bag or parasol, or that he ever had heard a girl's scream while he was sitting on the first floor. He told the detectives that he did not see Lemmie Quinn or Monteen Stover enter the factory, although he later declared he had seen them both and so testified on the stand.

Conley said on the stand when he was questioned by Rosser that he thought he had told all these things to Scott and John Black while he was making his third and final affidavit. Scott was called to testify that Conley not only had failed to tell them, but for the most part had made strenuous denials when asked about them. It was expected that Black would be called early Friday to testify on the same matter.

Rosser, in his examination of Detective Scott, sought to create in the minds of the jury the impression that Conley had been guided and directed by the detectives in the framing of his string of statements and affidavits.

Scott admitted that the improbabilities in the negro's statements had been pointed out to him, and that, with these suggestions, Conley proceeded to doctor up his affidavits until they harmonized better with the circumstances of the day.

Solicitor Dorsey was loath to let any statement get into the record which indicated that Conley had been coached by the detectives, and he got Scott to say that no one had put the words in the negro's mouth.

"But you would say," shouted Rosser, "'That don't fit, Jim,' and Jim would get something that did fit; isn't that so?"

Q. You tell this jury you nailed that door leading into the woodenware place Monday?—A. I did.

Q. Do you undertake to qualify as an expert on woman's wear?—A. I never pay any attention to it.

Q. Do you know whether fancy women wear white uppers to shoes to match white furs?

"I object to that question as irrevelent," interrupted Arnold.

Dorsey: "Your Honor, Mr. Arnold supplied the snow for a Thanksgiving Day and had this man give an opinion as to the kind of shoes women wear."

Arnold: "But, your Honor, he is talking about fancy women."

Dorsey: "That's just the kind I want to show went there, but I will not press the question."

Negro Loafers Barred.

Q. Were you pretty strict about negroes being in there when they did not have business there?—A. I never allowed negroes like that in there.

Q. If Mr. Frank had told Jim Conley to watch, and you or Mr. Darley had seen him, would you have put him out?—A. Yes.

Q. Did a peg-legged negro come ther Saturday to get his pay?—A. If he did any hauling, he did.

Q. Well, why did you swear just now that he was there?—A. I am not sure.

Q. Why did you swear he was there?—A. I don't remember, but if I said he was there, he was there. If I said he was not there, he was not there.

Deputy Plennie Minor had to rap to stop the laugh which went the rounds of the courtroom crowd.

Q. What do you say now? Was he there or not there?—A. I do not remember.

Q. You say Conley was not at his work and followed the detectives around? Did not everybody else do that? Was anybody at work up there that day?—A. Everybody was excused after 9 o'clock.

Q. Do you know Daisy Hopkins' character?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you say that all you heard of her was heard on the outside?—A. I did not.

At this point court adjourned until 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

LIND TO LAND ON MEXICAN SOIL TO-NIGHT

der section 33 of the Mexican Constitution unless he makes out his mission to be favorable to Huerta's aims.

Section 33 provides that persons of suspicious intentions shall be driven from the country and not be allowed to return except on special permission from the Government.

It was decided that no official greeting shall be extended to Mr. Lind, thus breaking a tradition which is as immemorial as diplomacy itself.

After the conference Senor Aldape said:

"The Government has decided upon a definite course of action to be followed in the present situation, and we believe that it will be approved by all persons of justice. President Huerta is striving to re-establish order in Mexico, and he believes that outside interference, unless invited, would do more harm than good. President Huerta has the good of Mexico at heart, and I know that he would make great sacrifices in behalf of his country."

Mexico's Defy Ignored Until Lind Delivers Note.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Pending the arrival in Mexico of John Lind, special and personal representative of President Wilson, this Government will take no action with respect to the defy issued by the Mexican foreign office threatening to deport former Governor Lind as an undesirable alien.

Offical confirmation of the issuance of the threat has reached the State Department, but Secretary Bryan and other Government officials say the United States will make no move until it is seen whether the Mexican Government intends to carry out its threat.

Former Governor Lind is due to reach Vera Cruz to-night. If he makes good connections he should get to Mexico City in time for a conference with President Huerta to-morrow afternoon. It is believed here the Mexican President will be forced to confer with President Wilson's representative, if only to discover the nature of the communication it has been admitted the former Governor of Minnesota carries with him.

Should President Huerta deem it best to expel Mr. Lind, the United States may be forced to take drastic measures, but it is hoped at the State Department that this undesirable alternative will be avoided by a change of front on the part of the Mexican President after he receives Lind's message from President Wilson, the contents of which is unknown here to anyone save the President and Secretary Bryan.

After a conference with the President, Secretary Bryan to-day announced that the statement sent to the American Embassy at Mexico City for the Mexican foreign office that Special Ambassador Lind would be persona non grata to the Mexican Government unless he brought the proper credentials with him, had been received at the State Department to-day and that the President now has it under consideration.

At the request of the State Department, the battleship Michigan to-day was moved from Vera Cruz to Ciudad Del Carmen, Mexico. It was feared that the arrival of the battleship New Hampshire at Vera Cruz to-day might give rise to a report that the United States was preparing for active intervention and the Michigan, therefore, was moved farther down the coast, where she will remain for further orders.

SEN. JOHNSTON OF ALABAMA IS DEAD

United States Senator Victim of Pneumonia After Nine Days' Illness at Capital.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Senator Joseph F. Johnston, of Alabama, died at 9 o'clock this morning at his apartment in the Brighton.

Senator Johnston had been ill for eight days, suffering from pneumonia.

As a mark of respect to the memory of Senator Johnston, the Senate adjourned almost immediately after assembling at noon.

Senator Overman offered a resolution for the appointment of a committee of Senators to take part in the funeral ceremonies and to accompany the body to Birmingham, where burial is to be made.

The Vice President appointed the following committee: Senators Bankhead, of Alabama; Bacon, Overman, Chamberlain, Hitchcock, Clarke, of Arkansas; Vardaman, Johnson, Swanson, Smith, of South Carolina; Thornton, Warren, Bristow, Gallinger, Catron, Bradley and Kenyon.

The funeral party will leave here to-night, and is expected to reach Birmingham to-morrow night. The funeral will take place Sunday morning.

Senator Joseph Forney Johnston, of Birmingham, was born in North Carolina in 1843. He served in the Confederate army from the beginning of the war to its conclusion, and was wounded four times. He rose from a private to the rank of captain, and was frequently mentioned honorably for gallant conduct.

Senator Johnston served four years as Governor of Alabama, before his election to the Senate in 1907. His first election to the Senate was to the unexpired term of Senator E. W. Pettus, deceased. He was re-elected in 1909 to his present term.

Senator Johnston's death at this time undoubtedly will bring about an acute political crisis in Alabama. His seat was being contested at the time of his death by Congressman R. P. Hobson, and the fight between them had grown very bitter. It is practically certain that Hobson will not be permitted, now that Johnston is dead, to have the succession uncontested.

There has been talk of Congressman Underwood as a candidate against Mr. Hobson, and the death of Senator Johnston likely will revive that.

His immediate successor will be named by Governor O'Neal, which means that Mr. Hobson will not get the immediate appointment.

He had been in poor health for several weeks.

Mrs. Johnston was with her husband when he died, as well as Forney Johnston, his son, who arrived from his home in Birmingham yesterday.

Mobile Offers Stevens To Fill Vacancy.

MOBILE, Aug. 8.—Mobile will ask Governor O'Neal to appoint State Senator T. M. Stevens to the vacant place in the United States Senate, caused by the death of Senator Joseph F. Johnston.

Stevens was the O'Neal administration leader at the last session of the Alabama Legislature. The man who will be appointed will not be a candidate for the place at the next election.

Immediate Election May Be Necessary.

MONTGOMERY, Aug. 8.—Governor O'Neal may be compelled to call an extra session of the Alabama Legislature to order an election at once to fill the vacancy in the United States Senate, as it is generally believed at the Capitol here to-day that under the Seventeenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution the Governor has not the power to appoint a successor to the late Senator J. E. Johnston, who died in Washington to-day.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

At the Grand.

Pictures at the Grand are becoming more and more popular every day. Commencing next Monday, the policy will be to present pictures daily from 2:30 until 10:30, with complete new programs each day, at 10 cents admission for the best seats, and children at half price.

Forsyth Bill Pleases.

Every performance this week at the Forsyth has attracted almost the holding capacity in the busy theater. While it is a fact that the show is without a headliner or a feature that may have been advertised, it is nevertheless a combination of pleasing talent that has won applause from every gathering.

Next week's star will be Ralph Herz, the musical comedy character comedian, who has been a late star with "Dr. Duluth," and who was one of the big features with "Madame Sherry" and "The Charity Girl."

At the Bijou.

"Along the Pike" is drawing the biggest audiences of the season to the Bijou this week. The attraction has made good beyond the expectations of the management.

The Bijou will close its doors on Saturday for two weeks, during which time the players will overhaul the little theater preparatory to the opening of the fall season on August 25.

CAREY, REBUKED, HITS AT BOARD OF PARKS

Dan Carey, General Manager of Parks, declared Friday that factionalism in the Park Board had reached such a degree that the exploitation of any new ideas absolutely was prevented and that he was serving his last term under such conditions.

Authentic reports from the faction opposed to him are that plans are being made to drop him at the end of his term, January 1, 1915.

The old-time factionalism reached an acute stage at a meeting Thursday afternoon because Manager Carey had not consulted President J. O. Cochran about contracts for an underground conduit for the lighting of Piedmont Park.

Board Censures Mr. Carey.

President Cochran, with the balance of power in the board, has been supporting Manager Carey. But when Manager Carey took action on his own initiative he switched to the anti-Carey faction led by M. B. Young and R. A. Burnett and resolutions were adopted by a vote of 9 to 3 reprimanding Mr. Carey for making contracts without consulting the board.

Tangle Over "Loaned Stone."

Manager Carey also asked the board to straighten out an agreement between President Cochran and Engineer Nym Hurt, of the City Construction Department, about some crushed stone. Manager Carey said the minutes of the board showed that President Cochran had represented to the board that the stone had been given, while Mr. Hurt claims that it was only loaned and he wanted it back.

President Cochran said he understood that the stone had been loaned, and if he had represented that it had been given to the department he had made a mistake.

"It seems that a member of the board can do anything, but anything the general manager does is wrong," said Mr. Carey.

Commissioners Frank Reynolds, William Van Houten and Councilman Sam Shepard stoutly defended Manager Carey, but they were outvoted.

What the Charges Are.

Here are the specific charges brought by President Cochran against Manager Carey:

That the board appropriated $200 to remove the Erskine fountain to Grant Park and that Manager Carey spent $600 on it.

That negligence resulted in $22 demurrage collected on cars of stone one time and $17 another.

That he has given contracts for $800 for underground wiring of Piedmont Park, and that all of these expenditures were contracted for without the knowledge or consent of the board.

Manager Carey explained that the wiring contracts were made as a result of a misunderstanding between himself and City Electrician R. C. Turner.

Alabama Double of Croker Not Boasting

ANNISTON, Aug. 8.—Anniston, which has become famous for its doubles, having a man who looks like Roosevelt, one who looks like Wilson and a double of Napoleon in the person of State Senator T. E. Kilby, has still another in Dr. J. Q. Dixon, who admitted that he had frequently been taken for Andrew Carnegie, the late King Edward of England and Richard Croker.

He said he was willing to plead guilty to the likeness of all except Croker.

Lady Sackville's Daughter to Wed

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The Honorable Victoria Mary Sackville-West, whose engagement to Harold Nicholson, an attache of the British embassy at Constantinople, has been announced, is the daughter of Lady Sackville, who recently won a clear title to the vast fortune of Sir John Murray Scott.

Miss Sackville-West is the only child of Lord and Lady Sackville and she will succeed to the Scott fortune.

MEDICAL BILL IS PASSED, WITH AMENDMENT

After a bitter fight in which Representative Wohlwender, of Muscogee, charged under influence by advocates of the measure, the House of Represenatives Friday morning passed the Garlington medical bill, known as the medical practices act, by a vote of 121 to 3, amended so as t prevent the members of the allopathic school of medicine having a majority of the proposed State Board of Medical Examiners. The original bill provided for a board of five allopaths, two eclectics and one homeopath.

The original bill, it was alleged by its opponents, was drawn by representatives of the American Medical Association, referred to on the floor of the House as the "medical trust." It was favorably reported by the committee, and a minority report condemning the bill was offered by R. J. Arnold, of Henry County, a member of the Hygiene and Sanitation Committee.

Chairman Breaks Tie.

Representative Hardeman, of Jefferson, who occupyed the Speaker's chair during the early part of the consideration of the bill, broke a tie vote on the amendment of Conner of Spalding to add two more members to the eight provided by the original bill. The chairman's vote carried the amendment.

The bill as amended and passed provides for a State board to consist of five allopaths, three eclectics and two homeopaths, thus preventing any arbitrary ruling based on dislike of any school of medicine, save through a combination that it is thought impossible to effect. The amended bill was approved by both factions.

The bill will raise the standard of physicians in Georgia.

40 per cent. It provides that applicants for licenses as practicing physicians must have attended a recognized school of medicine for four terms of eight months each, whereas the old laws required only three terms of seven months each.

Christian Scientists Not Barred.

Prior to the discussion of the bill the impression was that it would bar Christian Scientists and mental healers. An amendment was introduced by McCarthy, of Chatham, providing for this school of healing, but it was lost. The bill, however, takes care of them in the following language:

"The provisions of this bill shall not be construed as to interfere with the practices and beliefs of any religious sect, nor with the practice of osteopaths."

Garlington, of Richmond, the author of the bill, asserted that the minority report submitted by Arnold, of Henry, was drawn by physicians opposed to the passage of the bill.

Wohlwender, of Muscogee, declared the methods of the advocates of the bill were the worst he ever had seen in his experience as a member of the Legislature. He declared they had endeavored to reach him through the medium of his own family physician.

Girl Accuses Rich Fiance of Slaying

CLINTON, KY., Aug. 8.—May Copeland, held here as the confessed slayer of her brother-in-law, Hugh Atkinson, at Bardwell, to-day startled the jail authorities by making another confession, saying the killing was done by Lucien Turk, the wealthy fiance of the Copeland girl. Turk is being held at Paducah as an accessory.

In her statement to the police here the girl said that Turk killed her brother-in-law because Atkinson, according to May Copeland's admission to him, had wronged her. J. W. Turk, her fiance's father, the girl said, promised to give her $20,000 if she would confess the killing herself, and pay attorneys who would obtain her freedom under an unwritten law plea.

Anti-Drug Bill Is Defeated in House

The drug bill introduced in the House by Mr. Shuptrine of Chatham County, designed to regulate the sale of cocaine, morphine and other narcotics, was deefated by a vote of 85 to 71.

The bill provided that no druggist shall sell any of the drugs named in the act without a physician's prescription, and that each druggist pay $10 a year license. The bill also created the office of State Drug Commissioner, and provided for drug inspectors.

Mr. Shuptrine declared that the use of cocaine and morphine is greatly increasing in Georgia and should be regulated.

SCREWS, VETERAN JOURNALIST, DEAD

Noted Alabama Editor Stricken Suddenly at Country Home Near Montgomery.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 8.—From an attack of acute indigestion, Major William Wallace Screws, the veteran editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, died suddenly Thursday night at his country home in Coosada, fourteen miles from Montgomery. Major Screws was 74 years old, and while his health had not been very good for several months, his death was unexpected. With him at the time of his death were his two sons, Benjamin Screws and Holt Screws, and his wife.

"The most beloved man in Alabama," was a title often given Major Screws, who despite the many bitter political fights he entered, always held the highest respect of both sides. He became connected with The Advertiser shortly after the war, and in a short while became sole owner of the paper. A few years later he sold half interest in the paper to Frank P. Glass, and under their combined directorship The Advertiser progressed to one of the foremost morning papers in the South.

Major Screws was born February 25, 1839, in Barbour County, Alabama, and attended school at Glennville. In 1859 he took up the study of law with the famous law firm of Watts, Judge and Jackson in Montgomery and was admitted to the bar in 1859 at the age of 20 years.

Though opposed to secession, Major Screws fought for his State, and went with the first troops to Pensacola. There he participated in the capture of Fort Barancas. He fought throughout the entire war, being captured in Virginia during the last few weeks of the struggle. He acted as correspondent for The Advertiser for the four years of the great struggle.

He held many offices of honor and was a prominent Mason, being grand high priest, Grand Chapter Royal Arch Masons of Alabama. He was Secretary of State for Alabama from 1878 to 1882, postmaster at Montgomery from 1893 to 1897, served a term as president of the National Editorial Association, and was connected in an official capacity with many other large associations.

Despite his years, Major Screws had retained a perfect control of his faculties, and until recently his physical condition was of the best.

Funeral arrangements have not been made yet.

Fowls Socialistic; 3 Kinds Share Nest

FORSYTH, Aug. 8.—A guinea nest is supposed to be hard to find, but a resident of Dillars, this county, while walking through a patch of woods found a nest which is shared in true communistic style by a guinea, a hen and a partridge. At the time the discovery was made there were three partridge, two guinea and six hen eggs in the nest.

What hours had been agreed upon by the sharers of the nest during which they are to keep house is unknown.

Nine Ears to Stalk In Forsyth Cornfield

FORSYTH, Aug. 8.—Nine ears of corn to a stalk is most unusual, but Jesse Childs, of near Rogers Church, in this county, is exhibiting around Forsyth a stalk on which there are nine well-matured ears.

He planted a prolific variety of corn, and claims that whil he has discovered no other stalk on which there are nine ears, six ears, and even seven, to the stalk are not unusual in his field. This corn was raised on thin upland soil.

75 Canning Clubs to Feature State Fair

MACON, Aug. 8.—The first annual assembly of the girls and boys of the 75 County Canning Clubs of the State will be held here on October 27 and 28 as one of the special features of the Georgia State Fair. Not only will exhibits be made of the fruits and vegetables canned during the season, but actual demonstrations will be given by each of the clubs, under the direction of Miss Mary Creswell, of the State College of Agriculture. Over 700 boys and girls are expected to attend.

The State fair has announced a liberal award of prizes.

Stage Ambitions of 2 Youths Shattered.

Recorder Pro Tem. Preston Friday morning wrecked the stage ambitions of Joe Welch, of Center Hill, and Garland Hensley, of Fort McPherson, when he advised them to give up their ideas of show life and "go on and work for a living."

The two boys were found early Friday asleep in a box car in the Southern Railway yards. They explained they were out Thursday night at a rehearsal for a show and stayed too late to catch a car home. Judge Preston dismissed the cases.

Railroad Travel's Greatest Peril Is the Open Switch

The toll of lives taken each year by this ever-present danger has been enormous.

For years the inventive genius at the command of every great railroad system has been devoted to solving this question.

The question has been solved. The danger has been removed. The open switch is closed. The Shepherd Automatic Switch Company has answered the problem. Its safety device has removed the peril from the open switch as thoroughly as the removal of a serpent's fangs destroys his sting.

By a non-electrical mechanical device the main line is closed as soon as the last truck of a car has crossed the switch. It can be opened when the engineer throws a lever on entering the siding.

The danger of open and split switches is absolutely eliminated. As a time-saver this device will remove from a third to a half of the number of stops and operations of switchmen in taking and leaving siding.

The value of the Shepherd Automatic Switch will be shown by a special demonstration to-morrow (Saturday), August 9, at 3 p. m., on a spur track of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, at the Atlanta Manufacturing Supply Company's shop in Oakland City, on the East Point car line.

The public is urged to view the practical demonstration of this wonderful invention.

Detailed information as to the Shepherd Automatic Switch will be gladly furnished by W. R. Green, at the Aragon Hotel, or W. C. Warfield, 706 Fourth National Bank Building.

Remember, the demonstration begins promptly at 3 p. m. tomorrow at Oakland City.

Take East Point car.

Dixie's Merchants Take Important Step in Convention—Georgia Man President.

Convinced of the value of their annual gatherings, the merchants in convention at the Auditorium Friday morning organized a permanent body, the Southern States Merchants' Association, which will perpeuate these meetings and "co-operate in all ways calculated to advance the interests of its members."

J. W. Vaughn, of Cartersville, Ga., is to be president of the association, at least until the next convention in February, 1914. Other officers are: Vice presidents, R. O. Crouch, of Griffin, Ga., and T. E. Smith, of Greer, S. C.; secretary-treasurer, H. T. Moore.

Resolutions binding delegates to refuse credit to farmers who will not diversify their crops was not adopted. In modified form, simply indorsing diversification, the resolutions were passed.

Stock Raising Indorsed.

The convention further indorsed the raising of live stock and the improvement of the lower Missippi River. The bills fathered by the Georgia Retailers also were approved.

There will be one more session of the convention Saturday. Entertainment features, however, continue another week.

"The farmer's not has proven so good in 100 country banks and 1,000,000 transactions that we are almost ready to say that we have lost more money on the obligations of the United States in the recent decline of its bonds than we have lost in dealing with the farmer," said W. S. Witham, resenting the "prevalent condescending and patronizing" attitude toward the farmer.

Mr. Witham explained and praised the farm loan banks of Europe.

Jones on Store Discipline.

Boling H. Jones, chairman, took the subject of store discipline and management. His suggestions were eminently practical. For eight years he ran a chain of six retail stores, and from this experience cited seevral lessons in storekeeping.

Failure of clerks to charge goods sold, through lack of system, he believes is responsible for a 3 per cent leakage in many stores. A test convinced him of this, he said.

Mr. Jones preached strongly against price cutting. The remedy is close buying, and manufacturers would prefer small and frequent orders, he said.

"Give your clehks responsibility. Let them do their own buying, and they'll work harder to do the selling. Back up your clerks. Never quote a lower price than you allow them to make," he concluded.

Complete Bookkeeping Urged.

"You need no expert to supervise your accounts," said C. E. Pollard, of the American Audit Company. "What you need are records so complete and so simple that they speak for themselves. I plead for complete books, to show costs of every kind in detail. Very seldom, indeed, can too many details be shown. Unusually, too few details are shown."

L. C. Upshaw, of Douglasville, Ga., talked on credits and collections. At the start he made many amusing characterizations of various "poor pay" types—"movers," "scientific" cranks of no real judgment, and "pony sawmill" men.

Of the sawmill men, he said: "Here is a safe rule. If a pony sawmill man owns one outfit, sell him cash. If he aowns two outfits—don't sell him at all."

Fire Insurance Needed.

H. E. Choate reminded the delegates that the United States pays $600,000 daily to the "demon fire"—about $2.50 per capita per year.

"No merchant can be without fire insurance," he said. "We hear dealers say rates are too high. Rates are high because hazard iss great, which is the best reason for insurance. We call many men unfortunate when they really are improvident."

He concluded with a plea for fire prevention.

C. W. McClure urged the value of organization, and advised delegates to form associations in every small town to watch credits and study merchandising.

He suggested farmers' conventions on the lines of the retailers' convention.

2 Candidates For Macon Mayoralty

MACON, GA., Aug. 8.—Macon's municipal campaign will open next week with the announcement of the Aldermanic tickets by City Clerk Bridges Smith and Alderman A. L. Dasher, who are opposing candidates for the mayoralty. It developed to-day that Colonel W. A. Huff, who was mayor for ten years, would have been a candidate but for the entry of Mr. Dasher, whom he agreed not to oppose. Mr. Smith offered to stay out of the race if Colonel Huff desired to run, but the latter said he was debarred by reason of Mr. Dasher's candidacy.

The administration party is supporting Mr Smith. He and Mr. Dasher both state that their tickets will be announced next week.

Klondike Miner Gives Cash and Auto to Couple Who Fed Him When Tramp.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—Mr. and Mrs. Jack Borron and George Pratt came from Macon, Mo., to-day to buy an automobile for the Borron family. Pratt carried the money that was to be paid for it. Borron had a certificate of deposit for $1,500, a gift of Pratt.

Seven years ago George Pratt was on his way to the Klondike. He became stranded in Macon, Mo., stopped at the Borron home and begged food and lodging. He was given the best food in the poor household and in the night he became violently ill. Mr. and Mrs. Borron cared for him through an illness that lasted more than a month. They gave him railroad fare to Kansas City. When Pratt left he said:

"If I strike it in the gold fields, I'll not forget you. I'll be back this way."

Borron last evening answered a knock and at the door faced a stranger. He did not remember Pratt, who was dressed in clothes of the latest fashion. Pratt extended a hand filled with gold certificates.

"I'm George Pratt," he said. "Here's $1,500. Stick it in your jeans. I struck it rich in the Klondike. We'll get ready early in the morning to buy an automobile. I have waited until I could buy you one before I tried to enjoy a ride."

THE HEART OF GEORGIA

HEROD'S HOG AND HEROD'S SON

A Roman cynic said:

"Rather be Herod's hog than be Herod's son."

Herod's boys—

They were dead.

Herod's heartlessness—

His cruel indifference had killed them.

The children had displeased Herod—

But the hog—he was alive.

When Herod died his hog and gold went not with his soul.

To-day the heart of Georgia stirs—

Not with the lust and greed which brought shameful fame to Herod of old—

But with the pity—

The tenderness—

The love which nineteen hundred years ago began to flow from Christ crucified, our Lord.

You will not return to our great Mother, the State, and say:

"Behold, this we have done for our fields, our cows and hogs—

"For our girls and boys—

"We had neither the time to consider,

"Nor the funds to provide."

For to-day Georgia holds flesh and blood as of greater value than swine and kine—

To-day the tears and suffering of one little girl whose life and honor might have been saved had you made the provision—these are worth more to your State than all the money, about which we chatter and talk forgetting that lives are being lost.

And you are Georgia.

Your heart is hers—

Her heart is yours, as is her power.

And you will not neglect—

You will take the time.

You will never whine:

"WE HAVE NO MONEY FOR THESE."

When you are spending money on cows and hogs.

You will provide.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE first year of Mary Danforth's life in the business world dragged its dreary length away. In the beginning there had been some excitement attendant upon the new experience, and this had buoyed her up. To be sure there had been a great wrench in giving up the home of which she and her mother were so fond, but for her mother's sake the girl put her own griefs in the background. She remembered that once, several years ago, her father had said to his wife:

"She is singularly dependent and sensitive, Mary. If anything should happen to me you must look after her as tenderly as I have tried to do. I depend upon you for that."

The words recurred to the girl often through the wearisome months that followed upon her father's death, when she saw the elderly woman's sad face grow sadder as she tried to accustom herself to changed conditions. When Mary left home each morning it was with the appreciation that her mother must be both housekeeper and housewor ker, and that she was not used to such toil. The girl would rise early in order that she herself might make her own bed and set her own room to rights, then help about the breakfast.

Yet in spite of these efforts on her part there were the dishes to be washed, the tiny flat to be swept and dusted, and the meals to be prepared by the widow. Mary would urge her to eat a substantial luncheon, yet she always feared that her own ideas of what "substantial" meant in this connection and her mother's interpretation of the word differed as soon as the daughter was out of sight. Therefore she would order from the butcher on her way downtown a chop or some other nourishing tidbit for her mother. Delicacies were a strain upon Mary Danforth's small purse, but her parent's strength must be kept up. Yet, do what the girl would, she was sure that when night came the patient widow was too tired or too depressed to sleep. She also knew—better than did her mother—that she herself, often went without food at the noon hour to save the price of a luncheon. A few crackers slipped into her bag before she left home would take the place of the noon-day meal.

In spite of these economies the family finances were very low. More than once Mrs. Danforth had been forced to use a little of what she called her "insurance money" to get herself some necessary bit of clothing. Each time this was done Mary was impressed afresh with the hopelessness of her efforts to support two women decently on her small salary.

Business was dull in all branches, and real estate was not booming. James Pearson, her employer, had a wife with enough money in her own right to support herself and her husband, so the success of his enterprise was not essential to his existence. He kept the business because he liked to feel that he was not dependent upon his wife. Mary often wished fervently that she was in the employ of some man to whom work was a necessity and who would be energetic and progressive. But she dared not abandon a certainty for an uncertainty.

It was at this juncture that Herbert Fischer ("Bert" as his friends called him), got into the habit of coming to Pearson's office to talk over a possible real estate deal. At first the girl barely noticed him, so absorbed was she in the many duties that fell to her lot, for she soon discovered that she was not only stenographer and typewriter, but assistant bookkeeper and office boy combined. Night found her jaded and nervous, looking forward eagerly to the letter from Gordon Craig that often awaited her when she returned to her flat.

Twice Fletcher, who had remained in the inner office talking to Pearson, came into the outer office just as Mary was putting on her coat and hat, and offered to escort her to the elevated where she was to take the train uptown. Both times the girl had declined coldly, yet the second time she did this her heart smote her as she saw his disappointed expression. Somehow, she thought, as she walked toward the Cortlandt street station, the look in the man's eyes reminded her of that in a faithful dog's eyes. She was so lonely that even the thought of a dog's devotion would comfort her, she said to herself with whimsical humor. Yet this man Fletcher was a common kind of a person, she decided—not a bit like the men of her world.

Then she smiled bitterly. At least not like the men of the world she used to live in. Perhaps, after all, a girl who worked in a little office on a mean salary, and who lived in a five-room apartment in the poorest section of West Eighty-fourth street, could hardly afford to sneer at anything just because he was not educated to the standard that had once been hers, and had not the refinement that was traditional in the circle of which she had once formed a part. That circle had melted away since her father's death. She could not keep pace with her friends, and one by one they had dropped out of her life. She did not care, she muttered untruthfully to herself. When one declares bitterly that she "does not care" that is usually when really "cares" most.

And that night there was no letter from Craig. He usually wrote her three times a week, but this was the fourth time in six weeks that his letter had not come on the day that she expected it.

"Never mind, dearest," she said to her mother, who commented on the non-arrival of the expected epistle and who remarked that "it was queer that Gordon had not written regularly lately," and "hoped that nothing was wrong" with her daughter's lover. "Gordon and I understand each other, and he is extremely busy just now. One can hardly expect a man to write as often as a woman does, you know."

Her mother kissed the speaker tenderly. "That's so, darling," she assented, "and the busier Gordon is the more work he will do, and the sooner he will come for you, dearie—and for me."

"Yes!" the girl assented, bravely. "That is true, dear mother."

But in her heart she was saying: "How can I stand this kind of life unless he comes soon! How can I stand it!"

.:. Mother and Father .:.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

FATHER'S idea of good luck is winning a lottery ticket. Mother's is to find a pair of stockings that do not need darning.

It is father who hopes at the beginning of impracticable schemes, and mother who cheers when things go wrong in the end. It is father who is depressed and exaggerates what is lost, and mother who is cheerful in counting what is left.

Mother is proud to be told that the homeliest child in the family resembles her. Father isn't.

Here of late the children put the dependence in father's money that some generations ago was put in mother's prayers.

It is father, never mother, who expects the children to assume the burden as they get older. Mother, if she had her way, would carry it till the day of her death.

Once upon a time father called mother and the children together and said in the very wisest way: "This house would be conducted better if business principles were applied. Your system," frowning at mother, "would throw a peanut stand into the court of bankruptcy. I have opened what I will call a trouble book. Every member of the family will make entries in it of troubles, worries, etc., and we will meet at the end of the week to discuss the entries and act upon any suggestions for reform."

Then he frowned at mother again and went to his office. A week later the trouble book was opened.

"Mother won't let me go swimming." "Mother refuses to let me have any spending money; I suggest a needed reform here." "Mother wouldn't let me wear my best dress to play in," etc., etc., appeared in the handwriting of the children, and in father's handwriting there appeared: "Mother had the steak too well done"; "Mother is neglecting her personal appearance; I recall twenty years ago when she took more pride in doing her hair"; "Mother asked for money to-day to get Willie new shoes; I must look into her extravagance," etc., etc., from father and the children, but not one complaint from mother!

Passing between Scylla and Charybdis is no feat compared with the daily position of the mother whose children are always demanding more money of her, and whose husband is always telling her she must get along with less.

Before the oldest girl in the family is sixteen her father finds his throne tottering, and by the time she is eighteen he hasn't enough authority left to order a favorite old picture left on the parlor wall.

When father scolds and goes out slamming the door, the daughter wishes she could have a man like that for a husband about a minute, and she'd cure him, and her mother tells her she will have a chance some day.

It is not very creditable to those children who live and grow up, but in the years to come the mother finds her greatest comfort in the thought that the child that would have always been appreciative and kind, and never have hurt her, is the one that died when it was a baby.

The first figure is a dainty and simple pose, but it works beautifully into any of the dances that are so popular to-day, for, as we all know, dancing is coming into its own, and one of the most beautiful and widely neglected arts is now making a place for itself.

The second figure (2B) is an exercise that must bring to the body the lightness of flying, and when once it is mastered you will find that you have true grace at your command.

In this, as in so many dancing movements, the figure must be poised lightly on the ball of the foot.

FIGURE TWO.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

Copyright 1913 by International News Service.

WHEN I was a child of 11 I used to go out in the gardens of my English home and study the statues and statuettes that decorated it. For hours at a time I used to copy the poses of those lovely classical statues, and I found the greatest entertainment and joy in trying to imitate those beautiful poses. This was the beginning of my dancing, and from the taste I acquired for classical pose and movement has come, I feel sure, whatever measure of bodily grace is mine.

Dancing is essentially feeling, and the expression of that feeling well up in movement and rhythm. It makes for grace and for strong, healthy bodies as no other form of exercise can, because no other form of exercise is as universally possible, as entirely within the reach of all, as this natural expression of the poetry we all have down in our natures.

To-day I am giving you two exercises that express the joy of living to a wonderful extent and give the body much to rejoice in, for they make for grace, for lightness and for the universally desired bodily beauty.

The First Figure.

The first figure is a dainty and simple pose, but it works beautifully into any of the dances that are so popular to-day, for, as we all know, dancing is coming into its own, and one of the most beautiful and widely neglected arts is now making a place for itself. This figure (1B) may be learned with the support of a wall, but it should be worked out in such perfection that it can be done with absolute poise. It will strengthen weak ankles and insteps while it is developing power for grace in arms and legs. Here is my method of practicing it: Point the toes of the right foot straight forward and balance the weight firmly on that foot. Now raise the left leg slowly from the floor, keeping the foot almost at right angles to the other foot. Lift the arms slowly, keeping the right arm held in one continuous line, while the left is curved at the elbow and raised at the wrist. The fingers are held lightly and well apart. The whole body inclines slightly toward the left when the left arm and leg are expressing the greater amount of action, and when the weight falls in the alternate pose I always recommend the body sways to the raised right foot.

This exercise, like all other dancing movements, must express lightness and joy, for dancing is dancing only when it comes as an expression of a happy spirit. It must express personality and yet conform to true ideals of grace and beauty, and thus in time it will bring the body to grace and beauty, too.

Figure Two.

The second figure (2B) is an exercise that must bring to the body the lightness of flying, and when once it is mastered you will find that you have true grace at your command. In this, as in so many dancing movements, the figure must be poised lightly on the ball of the foot. Just such simple movements as poising the body lightly on the toes or ball of the foot will help avoid civilization's arch enemy, flatfoot, and will help in the acquisition of a light, springy walk.

Poise the body lightly on the right foot, with a general inclination toward the right. Stretch the right arm up and out and droop the left arm from shoulder to just below the waist in one long curve. Even while the body is swaying in this position, lift the left leg from the hip and sway it backward from the knee, making one line from knee to toes and bringing the foot almost on a level with the knee. Now stand on the left foot and alternate from side to side.

This exercise is by no means easy to master, but there is no movement of which I know that can be more absolutely counted on to bring the figure into the long, graceful, undulating lines we all so much admire.

WARMED OVER LOVE .:. By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PUZZLED writes as follows:

"I am a young girl 20 years of age and am deeply in love with a man eight years my senior, who reciprocates my love twice-fold. He has a very good position in business and is all that can be expected from a well-bred, respectable man. My only objection to him is that he is a widower and has two small children. My parents also object for this reason, and it is their only reason. If they thought the union would make me happy I am quite sure they would not stand in my way. I have met other young men, but can not seem to care for any of them."

The experience of wooing and winning a wife, of tasting the joy of being the head of one's own home, the creature comforts that domesticity means for a man, the broadening of heart and sympathies when the wife goes bravely alone to the shadow of death and returns with a child in her arms, the anguish of spirit when the mother falls sick and the desolation of the home when she is taken out of it forever, all tend to make a man more tender and considerate.

Though his home may have had its discomforts, he learns to regard it as his home; not his father's, or his mother's, but his own home. He also learned what an unimportant factor he was in its making, and realized the value of the WOMAN as he never realized it in his bachelor days.

That the experience is educational in a way that means more love, more consideration and an easing of the burden for the second wife, I am so certain that I wonder that the greater eligibility of the widower over the bachelor has not become an accepted fact.

Not Recognized.

Older women recognize it. Younger women do not because of the pretty sentiment they attach to being a man's first love.

The only objection to this man, then, is that he has two small children. Poor little motherless babes! I hope this little girl who has won this man's love has a heart broad enough to take in his children; a courage that will sustain her when, as a stepmother, she is maligned and misunderstood; and a charity that is big enough to cover their faults as effectually as if they were her own children.

Someone must mother the motherless, and the task is hard at its best, but one that is made light in the all-sustaining power of Love. If this man and his girl have for each other a love that will stand the strain, their union will be happy though he had ten children.

Learns Something.

His previous experience has made him dependent, tender and broader and considerate. He has two children and he knows that the woman he takes to the altar promises more than to be a loyal wife. She promises to be a loving mother to his children, to accept their resentment and ingratitude without complaint, and to know that hereafter to the end of her days criticism will be her lot.

He knows all this, and is grateful. On his first wedding day he regarded himself as a prize; the second time he goes to the altar with two children at his heels he knows, if he is a man and knows anything, that the prize is the brave-hearted girl who accompanies him.

He was confident on his first wedding day that he was dividing his joys. He knows on his second wedding day that he is dividing his burdens and sorrows, and the knowledge makes him humble.

You love him, my dear; you have met no other man you could love. He loves you, and I am sure your love is big enough to take in his children.

Nothing counts for as much as love. If you love, you know no burden. When you love, there is no sorrow too hard to bear. Marry him, go on loving him, and so long as you love him, you will be happy.

Not Alone.

An old Indian man, selling baskets, called at Mrs. Allen's one morning. He was very anxious to make a sale, and, after considerable parleying, he said:

"Make me an offer, madam, and see if I don't take you up."

Little 5-year-old Bertha was a spectator to the interview, and when the man made this remark she threw her arms around her mother, crying:

"Mother, if he takes you, I'll go, too."

MAIDEN MUSINGS.

What chance has sane, sensible reason against the fortified power of a wild habit?

Loss is unpleasant—but it never rises to the dignity of calamity unless it is the loss of self-respect.

There is more real joy in carrying out intentions than in merely planning to do it.

A good way to be at peace with the world is to expect little of it, to be unafraid of it, to see some good in it, and to give much to it!

By MAX.

JULY 6.—"Tell me your name, Little Girl," said the woman who had rolled out such expressions as "the fundamental principles of liberty" as naturally as an entirely different type of woman rolls out the words "darlingest" and "cute," showing to which class she belonged.

Manette looked at me. I nodded my head. Then, to my surprise, the child told her real name—my name, and the name I was trying to keep secret.

"Blake," I hastily added. "Blake," she repeated after me.

The visitor looked grimly satisfied. Her suspicions were confirmed!

"You are Manette H——, the little heiress. You are not Manette Blake at all, and if you will come with me I will take you to your guardian. If you," turning to me, "interfere, I will have you arrested."

I laughed. "I hope," I said, putting fresh bait on my hook, and casting it out into the water, "that I will live long enough to see your sex in power. You are so inconsequential, so altogether unreasoning, and so cocksure that you are right that we will no longer be forced to turn to the joke books for amusement. The Congressional Records, in that glorious period, will cause a laugh to ring around the world."

"When the women are in power," she retorted, "idlers like you who go around insulting women will be flogged."

This was growing interesting. "I am not idle," I replied. "I am fishing. I have been fishing for three hours and haven't had a bite. That indicates persistence, steadfastness of purpose and ambition that will not be discouraged. As for being insulting——"

A Bluff Called.

I turned and looked her square in the face. "I don't see," I said, slowly, and as if giving it deep thought, "why you used that word. To insult you I should have to regard you or your intentions seriously. Believe me, madame, I had not done that."

I drew my line carefully in and packed up my box of fishing tackle. "Come, Manette," I said to the child, "let us go and be arrested. Are you ready?" turning to the very red-faced woman who stood beside me.

"If you will walk with us as far as the cottage I will get a horse, or do you prefer to have the child ride with you and have me tied to your horse's tail and dragged as captives were in the olden times?"

I had called her bluff! "I want nothing," in anger, "but to see that child restored to its guardian."

"Then rest easy," I replied, taking off my hat and bowing. "She is with her guardian now."

"If you are Mr. Max——" she began, and could say no more, for she realized what a spectacle she had made of herself.

I bowed again and turned away. A moment later she came running after me. "I hope," she stammered, "that you will forgive me, but your looks——"

I cut her short with a bow, and picking Manette up in my arms, turned on to a narrow wooded path, and was soon out of sight.

"She is the kind of woman," I mused, "that thinks that to be a man is prima facie evidence of guilt. And the trouble is, her number is increasing."

A New Spot.

July 16.—Manette and I have found a new picnic spot, and for several days we had eluded the interloper, but on the fourth day I found her sitting on the porch when we got home. She had come, she said, to borrow Manette to take part in a tableaux to be given for the cause. "She would make," she said, "such a pretty little Goddess of Liberty. Besides," she argued, "the change would do her good. She needs a little civilization."

That made me smile. "Civilization" of the brand found at summer resorts consists in sitting around on hotel verandas, comparing surgical operations and crochet patterns and branding as "bold" and "scheming" the woman who receives the attention of the only man at the place. I could imagine Manette being passed around by the crochet cut-ups who would speculate on the price of her clothes, her uncle's wealth, and seek to secure through her childish frankness the key to my family secrets.

I refused. "The child," I explained, "is dearer to me than the Cause. She is in bed by 8 every night and has never been permited to stay up late and grow feverish and excited taking part like a manikin in some foolish show. I know that mothers let their children do it, but I am not a mother, I am only a man."

"And the rudest man that ever lived," she retorted, striding out to get on her horse.

I did not offer to assist her. I never have. It would be inconsistent for her to accept.

July 28.—I am writing this while lying in bed, and somewhere in the room, I don't know where, for I can't easily turn my head to see, there is a trained nurse.

I do not know how she got here nor when. All I know is that her attentions are very grateful to me, and that there have been days when I seemed to be slipping away from everyone into nowhere, and only the firm, cool touch of her hand held me.

I think I was conscious of her hand and its helpfulness and soothing magic for days before I opened my eyes wide enough to look her in the face. Even now I do not know what she looks like, and am not interested. I lie for hours with my eyes closed, asking nothing more in life than that a pair of very strong hands, white and soft and gentle, be there to turn my head when the pain of one position is too great, to smooth my pillow, and I hear a voice somewhere murmur, "Poor boy, poor boy!"

July 29.—Richards is here. I do not know when she came. I only know that every few hours she comes from some remote place—the next room is remote in my present condition—and helps The Hands move me to an easier position, and that with her coming all concern for Manette has left me.

Fall Guy.

A gentleman in a club had formed the hopeless and harmful habit of taking too much to drink—alcoholically speaking—before he went home every evening.

"How does he know what time to go home?" asked a stranger in the club one night.

"It's this way," explained a member. "He goes to the head of that long flight of stairs leading to the street. If he falls down them, he knows it's time to go home."

A Ready Proof.

Father—Just fancy, Willie, all these fields used to be under the sea, and fish were swimming about where we are standing.

Willie—Yes, dad; here's an empty salmon tin.

When the Sun Rose

IT was absolutely still in the large, dark room where the patient lay.

A small lamp with a dark shade faintly illuminated the heavy silk curtains which covered the windows. In a corner of the room stood the little bed in which a small feverish body was struggling with death. A beautiful young woman was sitting at the bedside, her eyes anxiously followed every movement of the sick child.

Her costly evening gown showed that she had returned direct from some society affair. Her gloves and fan she had thrown carelessly on the table.

A few hours ago she had been sitting at the dinner table covered with flowers and surrounded by merry people, when a messager had arrived with the word that her little boy had suddenly been taken ill.

She hurried home as fast as her big car could carry her and now she was sitting here full of anxiety and despair.

Over and over again, she asked herself if it could really be possible that she was about to lose her fair-haired little darling. Oh no, God could not be so cruel! The boy was her greatest, her only joy! She realized that more than ever now, when she was in danger of losing him.

She wondered if she had always thought so, and her whole past life came back to her mind.

She saw herself as a happy, lively and spoiled girl, whose every wish was gratified. She saw herself surrounded by admirers and suitors, who flattered and envied her, but she never felt, not even for a short single moment, the real, true joy which fills and takes possession of your heart and soul.

No Love.

Then the learned and famous Professor Bornemann was introduced in her parents' home. He fell in love with the young, lively girl and she accepted him, though he was twenty years older than she.

Did she love him then?

No, unfortunately, not.

Rich as she was, she decorated her home with every possible luxury and comfort and filled it with guests, balls and dinners in endless succession.

For a time her husband let her do as she pleased, but one day he took both her hands and looked earnestly into her eyes, while he said in his gentle voice:

"Let us be done with all these empty pleasures, and let me see that I have a splendid little wife, who cares more for her husband and her baby than for all the dances and dinners in the world."

At first she stared at him in surprise, unable to understand him. Then she tore her hands away and answered angrily:

"I do not see how you can make such a request. You are old and have enjoyed all the pleasures of life, while I am young yet and have a right to enjoy myself."

He looked at her sadly, then he turned away and left the room without another word. And since then her life had been one mad round of pleasures, while her husband and child were left to take care of themselves.

And had she then found the happiness she sought?

No, not for a single minute.

* * *

The child in the bed moved again.

"Mama," the little feverish lips whispered.

She bent forward and stroked his hot forehead with her cool hand.

"Mama," he moaned once more.

Anxious Moments.

She felt a cruel pain in her heart. Had she done anything to deserve to be called Mama? She bent lower still and two big tears fell on the golden curls on the white pillow.

The door opened. Her husband entered, followed by the doctor. Her eyes sought his, which looked deep, deep into her soul.

The doctor felt the boy's pulse and shook his head gravely.

"I can not say anything now. I shall return in an hour, when the crisis is due. Until then we have hope." With a silent bow, he left the room.

The professor had sat down on a chair on the opposite side of the bed. His gray eyes looked at the little figure in the bed with infinite tenderness. The young wife fell down on her knees at her son's bedside.

The boy tossed about restlessly, while the minutes dragged along slowly.

In a quarter of an hour, then——

It was the same thought that filled the minds of husband and wife as they looked at each other across their little son's bed. Then both looked at the hands of the clock.

The child was still restless and feverish. Over and over again the mother stroked her boy's forehead with her cool hand. Then she let it slide down on the silk cover and inch by inch it crept closer to a strong, manly hand, until she took courage and touched it.

Their eyes met and a new sacred silent understanding was born.

The clock struck 6. The boy was resting easily, his breathing regular and his cheeks lost their feverish color. The crisis was over. The child's life was out of danger.

The professor stood up, went over to the window, drew the curtains aside and opened it. Then he went back to the bed and kneeled down at his wife's side.

The fresh air filled the room—and then the sun rose.

When the Whistle Blows

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says

YOU lift your eyes to the great clock in the white tower and see six o'clock marked with widespread hands. You hear the chimes and whistles clamoring over all the choked streets. Six o'clock! And the girls who smile all day long as steadily as any chorus girl is bidden to do, who haul down enough yards of stuff in a day to tie a sash around this vain old world, who try debutante dancing-frocks on fat relics who've seen forty summer moons or more, who get down endless "middies" for lean little girls, whose too flat pay envelope is sometimes the fortune of the family, all those who need and earn a thicker pay envelope and electric fans, all these bits of womanhood who go to make up the brave army that work in shops pour out of the employes' door and out under the clamor of "six by the clock." The blonde hat model, in her sleazy, slippery, little black gown, the close-tailored girl who sells suits, with her crinkly hair and big black purse like a baby kit-bag, all there—and HAPPY! Have you noticed that? And PRETTY! Have you noticed that? They have many good excuses not to be the first—but they laugh and laugh—and you hear little things like this: "He said to her—and she said to him." "Isn't that great?" and "What are you going to wear?" and "I had the time of my life!" And pretty—they'd have a heap of excuses not to be that, too—what with trying to stretch a bill longer and greener than it is, and standing on their two feet all day long, and smiling long and sweet at grouches. But they are. Among them you find the trimmest girls in town. And some of their faces make a society belle's wish it could go back to Heaven and get made all over again.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A little boy of four years of age, on noticing for the first time a lock of gray hair on his father's head, asked:

"Papa, why are some of your hairs gray?"

Thinking to drive home a moral lesson, the father answered:

"Papa has a new gray hair every time his little boy is naughty."

The child seemed lost in thought, but, after a pause, said gravely:

"Then grandpa must have had awful naughty boys."

"No, I didn't. I thought he knew," was the reply.

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

But this young man was not one to be easily daunted. "Do you wish me to make up an article out of surmises?" he inquired. "A young girl of this city has died in a carriage and the people have a right to know how. Shall I say by use of the knife or——"

"Scoundrel!" came from Dr. Molesworth's lips. "You deserve chastising, but I shall simply see that you do, what you have probably never done before, tell the exact truth." And, turning to the detective at his side, he exclaimed, "Note what I tell the fellow. If he alters a word or interposes one item that is not borne out by what he observes and hears here, I will see that he is discharged from his place. I know what paper he is on, and I know the editor, and my threat is no idle one. Now let him listen. This young lady, Mildred Farley by name, was engaged to marry me to-night. Being an orphan without friends—pardon me, Mrs. Olney, I should have said relatives, perhaps—and not being well, she thought a private marriage at a hotel would be most suitable. I agreed with her and the arrangements were all made for the ceremony. But she was sicker than I supposed. The symptoms of fever which I had perceived in her this afternoon increased rapidly on my departure and when I returned, before the specified hour to marry her, I found she had fled, leaving an incoherent note behind, which so alarmed me that I went out at once, and jumping into my phaeton, drove up and down the streets searching for her.

The End of It.

"I did not find her, of course; and remembering an important prescription I had promised to send a patient of mine, I dispatched my driver with it, and was taking my phaeton home myself, when I suddenly detected a woman seated on one of the steps in Twenty-second street whose appearance struck me as familiar. Though no believer in miracles, I accepted this one without scruple, and, jumping from my carriage, went up to her and soon saw that I was right in supposing I had found Miss Farley. She was very ill, and did not know me. 'I am sleepy,' she said, and dropped her head on my shoulder as I lifted her up. At the same moment I heard the sound of breaking glass, as if a small vial had slipped to the sidewalk and been shivered, while a pungent odor arose to my nostrils so suggestive of the poison known as prussic acid that I felt greatly alarmed, and hastily carrying her to my phaeton I put her in and drove as fast as I could toward home. But soon her increasing pallor and general condition convinced me that death was near, and I stopped at the drug store on the corner of Nineteenth street, and, leaving her in the phaeton, ran in and asked one of the clerks to assist me in bringing her into the store. He consented, and we went back to the phaeton, but only to find that I was too late. She had died in my absence."

"Horrible!" burst from the landlady's lips, and even the callous porter looked shocked and a trifle ashamed.

"Where she got the poison," continued the doctor, "remains to be found out. Perhaps she bought it after leaving the hotel; perhaps she had had it with her there as a medicine. If so, she may have taken an overdose without being conscious of her danger. I only know I was her physician and had never prescribed it for her, nor did I know she suffered from any ailment that required such a tonic."

"And is that all? Will you tell me nothing more?"

"You have a very good article," remarked the doctor, dryly: "Leave something for the future."

And the reporter had to be content, and the detectives, too.

The reporter gone, Dr. Molesworth turned again toward Mr. Gryce.

"And who are you?" he asked.

"I was going to say I didn't know," answered the seemingly trembling old man. "I am in pain and want to get home. Will one of you help me down the steps?"

"In pain!" repeated the doctor, who was not by any means a hard-hearted man.

"Yes, rheumatism in the stomach, I think. I came for some opium, but I won't wait any longer. They will worry about me at home. Besides, I feel a bit better now."

His manner was so natural, his look so in accordance with the character he had assumed, that Dr. Molesworth suspected nothing and kindly held out his arm. But he found the alleged detective had forestalled him.

"Let me do this business," he entreated, with a great show of good-nature and respect. "I have nothing else to do and am used to old men." And, nodding graciously to his superior, he led him carefully out, whispering as soon as the lintel of the door had hidden them from view, "What orders? Dou kou smell anything wrong here?"

"Watch," was the quiet but emphatic command. "Note everything, even to the lifting of an eyelid, but say nothing and do not seem to watch."

Then as they reached the front door, "Don't be hurt if I send some one else here. They know your character too well." And with this the elder man went out with a slow and hobbling step. The pain and distress of that evening had not been altogether assumed.

Some Points.

MR. GRYCE had only a look to go upon, but it was a look that spoke volumes. When a man shrinks from the eye of a detective, he has something to conceal, and when that something is connected with the death of a young girl by poison, it behooves an officer of the law to follow that man till he finds out what that something is.

It was therefore with some interest that he received in the early morning a summons from the gentleman who held the office of Coroner at this time, to come down to his office and have a talk with him concerning this case of Mildred Farley; nor was it long before he presented himself at the place designated. He found the Coroner alone and the following conversation ensued:

"Well, Gryce," said the latter, "I have just come from the house where you played the part of a sick patient so successfully last night. May I ask how you chanced to be so prompt on the scene of action? Do you scent out mysterious cases or had you any knowledge which led you to that especial spot just at the moment when your presence was possibly most required?"

"Both," was the good-natured reply. "Something which I call curiosity, but which I am fain now to consider instinct, made me an intruder in Dr. Molesworth's home last night. But I had a bit of knowledge to start with that roused his curiosity, and it is of this I want to speak, if you think the subject worthy of discussion or Dr. Molesworth anything but what he seems, a good, honest and reliable man."

"I think," returned the Coroner, slowly, "any subject of this kind worthy of discussion; and as for Dr. Molesworth, he stands high, but so do a great many others whose testimony we are called upon to question every day of our lives. You need not stop on his account if you have seen or discovered anything which contradicts his story."

"What is his story?"

"Didn't you hear it? I understood that he told all he had to tell in your presence."

"He told two stories."

"How two?"

"One with his lips, another with his face; that's what makes me doubt him."

"You do doubt him, then?"

Gryce's Story.

Mr. Gryce tapped the table before him with an abstracted air, murmured some unintelligible words and looked as if he thought he had replied.

"Come," cried the other, "your reasons? You usually have good ones."

"Yes," assented Mr. Gryce, "I usually have, but in this case it would be hard for me to tell you just what they are. I feel that there is something back of this affair which we do not see, but I am not ready as yet to go any further or even express any suspicions—say that I have any. The facts which I have been able to glean in the short space of time we have had are meager, but interesting. Perhaps you can add to them; if so, our conference may lead to something. This is what I know." And he related first what Dr. Molesworth had to say about the matter the evening before. When he had finished, he asked, "Does this story agree with what he told you this morning?"

"Exactly."

"Very good. So much for so much. Now for the side lights. I saw the girl myself yesterday afternoon."

"You?"

"Yes; I saw her, but I did not speak to her, nor did I recognize her for the person she was. Indeed, I took her for another woman whom she greatly resembled. It was at the C—— Hotel."

"Ah!"

"I need not enter into any further particulars about this circumstance, as it does not concern the affair before us, which stands quite apart by itself. Enough that for reasons of my own I played the spy on this young woman and saw her when she thought herself alone, in the privacy of her own apartment. This was some time after noon and the great fact which I wish to bring before you is this, that she was then to all appearance (and my eye is accustomed to read countenances) perfectly happy and had not in face or bearing the least trace of sickness."

"That is a point, certainly."

"Note it, and then add to it this, that being still under the error of which I have spoken, I went back to the hotel some three or four hours later, and wishing to confirm a former suspicion, sought my vantage spot again, and in conjunction with another witness whose testimony you will not need, looked in upon this Miss Farley again, when I perceived that a great change had passed over her. But it was not that of sickness. From happiness she had descended to misery, and in her pallor and wild, unrestrained attitudes I could detect the expression of despair, but none of bodily suffering or mental disorder.

"Now, what had occasioned this change in her in a space of time so short? I think I can answer that it was an interview with Dr. Molesworth. For, according to his own story and that of the hotel clerk, he was with her for a half hour or so in the afternoon; and though upon going out he told the hotel clerk he was coming back in the evening to marry her, something in his determination or in what had taken place at their interview had destroyed in her every vestige of hope and happiness. For it was anything but an expectant bride whom I saw after this visit, as it had been anything but an anxious woman whom I had seen before it.

"So! so!"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LEAVE THAT TO HER.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am twenty-one and in love with a girl of nineteen, and she loves me. Another man, who is much older, is trying to win her love, but she doesn't care for him. At present I am not settled, and it may take about three years before I can marry, while the other man can support her quite nicely. Have I the right to ask her to wait? S. J.

She loves you. She doesn't love the other man. If she is worthy of a good man's love she will wait indefinitely for him in preference to marrying a man she does not care for. Give her the right to decide, and see that you don't make her time of waiting too long.

SHE IS IN THE WRONG.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a young lady for the last seven months. About a week ago I escorted her to a dance where she met some of her old gentlemen friends, who received her attention all the evening. When the time came to go home I asked her to go home with me, but she refused, saying she could go home with others. I then left her. Did I do proper in leaving her? Who should apologize? RICHARD.

She refused to let you escort her home though you had taken her there. Under the circumstances there was nothing for you to do but leave her. You owe her no apology.

KEEPING EVERLASTINGLY AT IT

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am nineteen, and dearly in love with a girl two years my junior, whom I have known for the past seven years. Some time ago she met a young man at a wedding, and has since been devoting all of her attention to him. I love her dearly and would ask you how I can win her love again.

F. B. T.

Your seven years' devotion merits better returns. Be devoted and persistent, and if this fails change your tactics to indifference. The appearance of your rival stirred you. Has it occurred to you that if she found she had a rival it might renew her interests?

YOU WERE RIGHT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am sixteen and have been keeping company with a young man about three months. He has bee sick and he telephoned and asked me to come and see him. I told him it was improper for a girl to go to a man's house, and he got angry. Was I right? R. M.

Don't worry, my dear, you did just right. I don't admire him because of his request of his reception of your refusal. Never go to see a man under any circumstances unless your mother goes with you.

HARRY GLENN IS OUT TO CINCH 25-MILE TITLE

THE Atlanta Motordrome will be the scene of some interesting races to-night. The feature event will be a 25-mile race between the ten riders here at the present time, and the speed demons should furnish enough excitement in this race to last the fans for some time.

All the riders claim they have their machines working faster than ever, and it would not surprise many to see some dark horse win the long grind. Harry Glenn's great race last Tuesday has made him the talk of the town with motorcycle fans. Most of them want to see Harry win to-night and prove that his great riding Tuesday was not a fluke.

THE 25-mile race is for the championship of the South. To have an Atlanta boy capture this title would be a great honor to the city. Harry Glenn realizes this and it is a sure bet that Harry will be trying every minute of the time.

Richards, Graves, McNeil and Renel are also anxious to take the big event. Richards' machine was not going good Tuesday, but he says it is in great shape now. Graves is not saying much but Morty is out for some glory. McNeil and Renel can also be counted on to be in the race from start to finish.

THE Motordrome Purse will open the card. There will be three heats of one mile and a final of two miles. A special match race between Glenn and Lockner, best two in three heats, is also attracting much attention. The five-mile invitation race, open to all comers, fills out the program.

Following is the complete card for to-night:

First Event.
Motordrome Purse (qualifying heats, one mile; final, two miles; winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat to qualify). First Heat—Richards, Lockner, Graves.

Second Event.
Motordrome Purse—Second Heat—Glenn, Renel, Swartz.

Third Event.
Motordrome Purse—Third Heat—McNeil, Lewis, Luther, Shields.

Fourth Event.
Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Lockner.
(Two-mile heats; two best in three.)

Fifth Event.
Motordrome Purse—Final heat.

Sixth Event.
Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Lockner.

Seventh Event.
Invitation Race—Distance, 5 miles. Open to all comers.

Eighth Event.
Special Match Race—Third heat, if necessary.

Ninth Event.
Twenty-five-mile race for championship of the South—Graves, Swartz, Shields, Lockner, Richards, Luther, Renel, McNeil, Lewis, Glenn.

YANKEE OWNER PUTS IN CLAIM FOR CUBAN STARS

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—President Frank Farrell, of the New York American League club, will appeal to the National Commission to set aside the sale of three Cuban players of the Long Branch team, of the New York and New Jersey League, to the Boston Nationals. The players are Pitcher Laqua, Shortstop Arragon and Outfielder Padran, according to Farrell. Owner Henriques, of the Long Branch team, recently offered to sell him these players. Farrell agreed to take them, and the price was fixed.

According to the verbal agreement, the three players were to report to Manager Chance yesterday. Instead of the players reporting, Henriques sold them to President Gaffney, of the Braves. Farell says he has several witnesses to the deal.

CLEVELAND BUYS CATCHER BOWMAN; PAYS $2,500

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Aug. 8.—The Grand Rapids club, of the Central League, announces the sale of Pitcher "Abe" Bowman to the Cleveland American League club. The price is given out at $2,500. Bowman will report to the Naps at the close of the Central season.

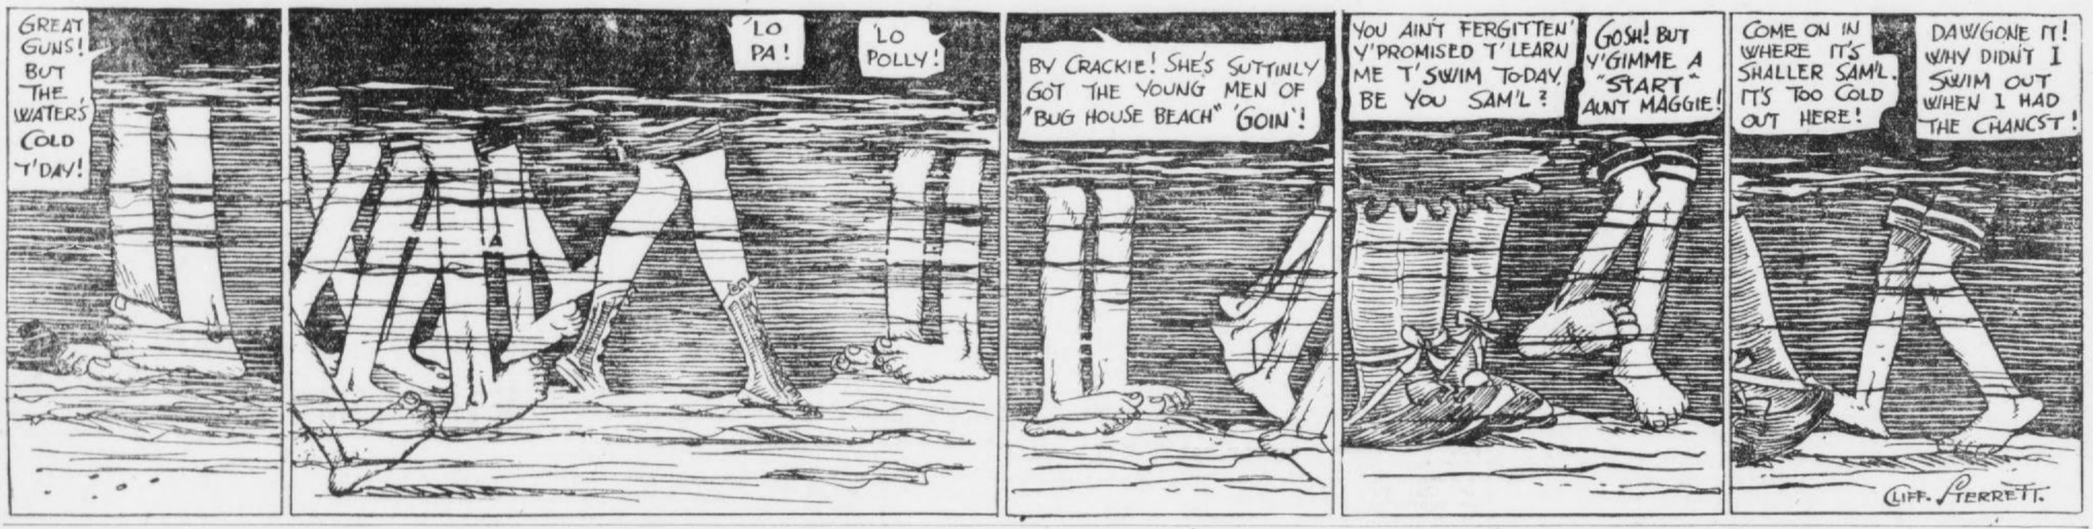
Just a Little Glimpse Below the Surface



Kniseley on Southern Hurlers

Explains Peculiarity of Hitters

PETE KNISELEY, outfielder for Birmingham, undertakes to explain the good showing some of the pitchers make in this circuit, only to fall down when they get into the big show; also why Southern leaguers hit well in the majors. Says Pete:

"The Southern League is the hardest place in the country to bat up in the .300 list. No wonder a player hits higher in the major league than in the Southern.

"In the majors, the pitchers do not exert themselves until real danger faces them. When the game is progressing without heavy hitting, the pitchers serve the ball over and give you a chance to swat it, hoping that it will go into one of the fielders' hands. But not here.

"From the beginning of the game until the finish, the Southern League pitchers work at top speed. As the result, the batter has a poorer opportunity to make a high mark. But I attribute the many ascensions in the Southern to this fact. Unless a man is of wonderful physique, he is unable to twirl nine innings, putting his greatest effort on every toss. There are a few who are able to stand the pace. Elmer Brown is a twirler of this class, while Bill Prough is another.

"But the average pitcher is able to stand the gaff for six or seven innings. Then when he weakens the batters feast on the offerings and frequently drive him from the mound. But, of course, there are clever pitchers in the Southern. Hardgrove and Foxen do not pitch hard until there is danger and are very successful.

"I believe that a .300 batsman in the Southern can duplicate the feat in the majors."

KNISELEY speaks truly both in respect to the pitching and batting. It has long been noted as a peculiar fact that recruits from the Southern League and the Pacific Coast League seldom have batted less in the majors than in the minors. Under ordinary circumstances, it would be fair to discount the average recruit's minor league batting by 10 to 20 points when he gets to the real class, but Daubert and Wheat both have batted better in fast company than they did in the bushes; Charles Stengel has become one of the heaviest clouters in the National and Red Smith is holding his own.

All of them are from the Southern, and probably Kniseley has the right answer. The explanation of the ability of Coast leaguers to hit in the majors up to their Coast standards has been that the heavy winds in some cities and the dampness in others on the Coast keep the batting down to a minimum, and a man who can hit in that country can hit anywhere.

THE tendency of young pitchers from the South to throw their whole strength into every ball delivered has also been noted by many observers. Brooklyn has an illustration of that very mistake in Frank Allen, who persists in working with all his might in every inning, with the result that when he is in a tight place he has comparatively little reserve strength with which to extricate himself.

An even more pronounced case of the same sort was furnished by Bill Burns, who is a native of Texas, but got his start on the Coast. Bill was one of the most powerful men that ever broke into baseball, but he did not know how to conserve his energy. He was at different periods with Washington, Detroit and Cincinnati, and with all his record was the same. He had the habit of blowing up at the end of the seventh or eighth inning, and, if the game ever went more than nine innings, it was a dead sure bet that Bill had nothing but his glove and spikes left for the tenth.

Nap Rucker used to fall for the same foolish policy in his callow days, but Nap has become old and wise and uses no more exertion now than is necessary, although he admits it took years for the light to break on him.

M'GRAW HINTS THAT GOLF COST MATHEWSON BEATING

PITTSBURG, PA., Aug. 8.—One of Giants was asked just before the New York team left Pittsburg for Cincinnati why McGraw did not take Mathewson out of the box in the fifth inning Wednesday, when seven runs were batted off his delivery.

"I think Mac wanted to impress something on Christy," said the Giant. "McGraw has been arguing all along against his pitchers playing golf. He does not object to the sport for infielders or outfielders, but he claims it does the pitchers no good, and he has tried to make Matty cut it out. McGraw claims that handling a golf stick tires the muscles in a pitcher's hands and wrists."

JACK JOHNSON BARRED FROM BOXING IN PARIS

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—Jack Johnson will not be permitted to box in this country. The "American Boxing Federation" has requested the French Federation ot prohibit Johnson, the American negro pugilist, from fighting in France and that body has decided to grant the request.

FIGHT MANAGER IMPROVING.

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 8.—Larney Lichtenstein, local manager of fighters, who on Monday underwent an operation at the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, where he had two ribs taken out, is recovering so rapidly that he intends making the trip to Winnipeg on August 14 to be with Steve Ketchel for his fight there. Doc Briggs performed the operation, and it was very successful.

THOMPSON OR LOVE TO PITCH SECOND GAME

By Joe Agler.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 8.—Manager Smith hasn't decided whether Thompson or Love will pitch against the Vols to-day, but it will be one of them. Slim is eager for another crack at the enemy, and is sure he can lick them without trouble. Chapman will catch.

We lost another tough one yesterday, and it looks as if the jinx were closing in on us again. With the score tied up in the tenth inning, Dent was taken out to allow Price, a left-hander, to pitch to Callahan and Spratt, both batting on that side, with Williams on second and one out.

The move looked like the proper one, but Callahan spoiled everything with a long drive that scored Williams and knocked us ou of a hard-fought game. Dent picked his usual fine game, and Harry Holland's hit drove in our only tally.

Yesterday was "Business Men's Day," and there was a big parade of automobiles, and the players of both teams and a band. About 4,000 were at the park, where some field day events were put on before the game. Tommy Long beat Dave Callahan in the 100-yard dash, doing it in 11 seconds, which is some fast time without sprinting togs on. Harry Chapman won the throwing contest from Smith, of Atlanta, and Young and Beck, of Nashville.

JOCKEY CLAIMS HE WAS OFFERED $1,000 TO 'PULL'

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Jockey Wilson threw a commotion into sporting circles here to-day by declaring that he had been approached with an offer of a bribe to throw a race recently at the Belmont track meeting.

The stewards refused to comment upon it, as the matter will be sifted by the officials. The story involves another jockey, a friend of Wilson, who acted as an intermediary, and a well-known Bowery politician.

Wilson's specific statement was to the effect that a man named Reed, who has been warned off the track a number of times, approached him at the Belmont track and offered him $1,000 to pull Working Lad in a race on June 24. The stewards, it is said, have exonerated Wilson. No action has as yet been taken against the Bowery politician, but it is known that if he can not clear himself he will be asked to absent himself in future from all meetings given under the association's auspices.

Diamond News and Gossip

A conference between Manager Tinker, of the Cincinnati Reds, and Manager McGraw, of the New York Giants, renewed reports of a Herzog-Bescher trade. Herzog has threatened to give up baseball and retire to his Maryland farm if McGraw trades him.

Harry Williams, who made his debut as first baseman for the New York Yankees, won the hearts of the Gotham fans by pounding out a home run.

Ed Stack, the pitcher recently obtained by the Cubs from Brooklyn in exchange for Ed Reulbach, pitched Chicago to victory in his first appearance in a Cub uniform.

The White Sox made it three out of four in their series with the Washington Senators.

"Home Run" Baker, in four trips to the plate in the Philadelphia-Cleveland game yesterday, pounded out two doubles and a single and scored or sent in six runs.

By beating the Cincinnati Reds, the Giants increased their lead in the National League to seven games.

The Athletics are leading the American League by eight and a half games.

A wild heave by Pitcher Allen in the first inning was responsible for the defeat of the Brooklyn Dodgers by the St. Louis Cardinals.

Mike Mitchell, former Red and former Cub, made his debut in a Pittsburg uniform yesterday.

Fred Smith, a Boston outfielder, was hit behind the ear with a ball thrown by George Gibson, the Pirate catcher, and badly hurt.

COLE QUITS COLUMBUS TEAM; MAY JOIN FEDERALS

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. 8.—Because Manager Hinchman fined and chased him off the field here, after Umpire Cahill had lifted him from the game, "King" Cole to-day asserted that he was done with pitching for the Columbus team. He says he's going to a nunnamed Federal League club.

TOMMY DIXON FALLS FROM RING IN SEVENTH ROUND

JOPLIN, MO., Aug. 8.—An injury received by Tommy Dixon, of Kansas City, during a fight here last night with Freddie Cole, of Indianapolis, caused the contest, scheduled for fifteen rounds, to terminate in the seventh round. Dixon fell through the ropes to the floor, injuring his arm.

RED SOX RECALL PLAYERS.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The Boston Red Sox to-day exercised their right of option on three players in the American Association. Infielder Krug, of the Indianapolis team, and Infielder Scott and Pitcher Brant, of St. Paul, recently sold with the right of repurchase, were recalled.

DENT PASSES 3 BATTERS IN 53 INNINGS

WHEN Elliott Dent walked Jack Spratt in the first inning of yesterday's game in Nashville, the Atlanta pitcher interrupted slightly the progress of a very fine bit of record-making in this league.

It was his third base on balls in fifty-three innings.

Before the game started yesterday, Dent's record, beginning July 18, was two bases on balls in forty-four innings. This included a "long run" of thirty-three innings, or practically three full games, without a walk being issued.

The big right-hander is going at top speed just now, and his control is well-nigh perfect. He doesn't get himself in the hole very often, either, and it is a rare thing for the batsman to be able to take a tight grip on terra firma and wait confidently for the next one to come over. Only the toughest kind of luck and very feeble hitting support cost the big boy another win yesterday.

RED SOX RECALL FOUR; BUY CATCHER M'NALLY

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The Boston Red Sox to-day exercised their right of option on three players in the American Association. Infielder Krug, of the Indianapolis team, and Infielder Scott and Pitcher Brantt, of St. Paul, recently sold with the right of repurchase, were recalled.

Michael J. McNally, shortstop for the Utica team, New York State League, also was bought by the Red Sox.

LANGFORD AND JEANNETTE TO CLASH IN LONG BOUT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8.—Promoter McCarey last night received messages from Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette accepting his terms for a twenty-round bout. In all probability the date set for the heavyweight event will be October 7.

"I would like to see the question of supremacy between Langford and Jeannette settled," explained the promoter. "That's my reason for making the match. In a scheduled twenty-round go in my ring with Eyton refereeing, the two blacks will have to extend themselves. I will never stage a mixed match between a black and a white boxer. So long as the colored men battle among themselves I will put no handicap in their way."

All doubt as to Wolgast's willingness to box on the September date was removed yesterday when the former lightweight champion telegraphed as follows:

"Will positively meet the winner of the Dundee-White fight of August 12. Hope it will be Dundee, as I want to show the public the difference between a real fighter and a jumping jack."

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

HOW SWEET.

How sweet to be a manager and run a baseball team—
At least when you are winning games it is a blissful dream.
But when the team is losing, is his job a thing of joy?
Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi!

Whether Ed Reulbach or Eddie Stack is the better athlete is yet to be determined, but it is a well-known fact that the Cubs never again will own Reulbach's equal as a badger fighter.

We are in receipt of a song written by that far-famed pugilist, Packey McFarland. The song is entitled, "I'd Like to Know." So would a whole lot of promoters, pugilists, managers and other insects.

Not that we are an expert on song-ology, but after reading Mr. McFarland's ballad we are convinced that he is a lightweight.

If Joe Jackson were to do all his batting at Shibe Park he would be chased to the minors or (worse yet) to St. Louis.

It is said that the said Joe Jackson has hit over .400 at the White Sox Park this season. Joe never would be mistaken for a White Sock—not even by a blind man.

There is charity even in baseball. For instance, Tom Lynch has handed a protested game to Joe Tinker.

Horace Fogel avers that he wants to put a baseball team in New York. This leads one to suspect that Horace has not heard of the adventures of Frank Chance.

Washington fans having presented Walter Johnson with a loving cup filled with money, it is said that Columbus fans will hand King Cole a shaving mug filled with lather.

It is said that fighters can't come back, but every day we note otherwise. For instance, there is Jack Helmen, the heavyweight. As he was leaving the place some philanthropist said: "Wait a minute, Jack! We're going to buy another." He came back.

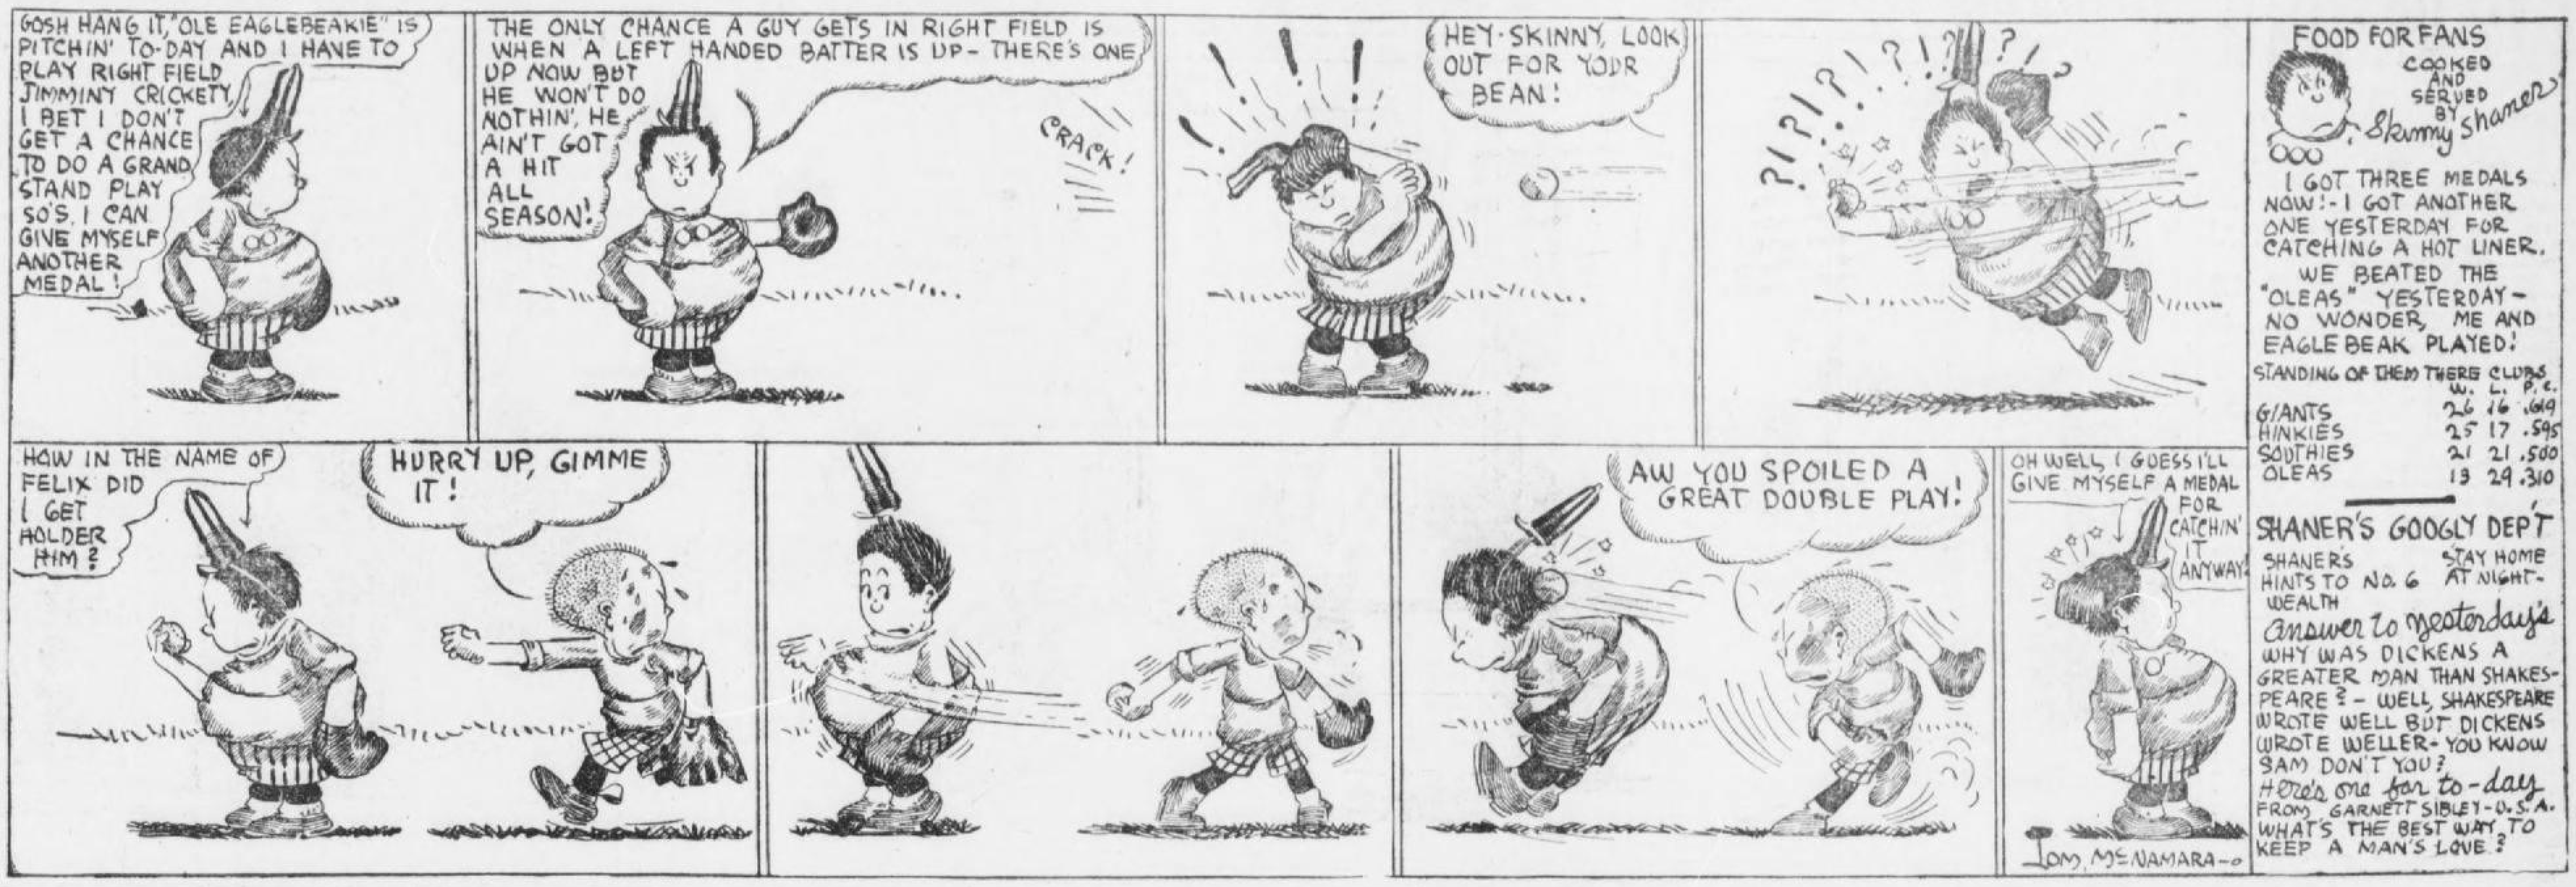
Skinny Missed a Chance for TWO Medals



KRAZY KAT :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: Krazy Sure Is a Fool Cat

ONLY THREE LEFT OF CUBS' OLD GUARD

By O. B. Keeler.

A COUPLE of days ago the papers carried a bit of baseball news to the effect that Edward Reulbach had been traded by the Cubs for Eddie Stack, of Brooklyn.

Of itself, that wasn't a very exciting bit of information. Neither Mr. Stack nor Mr. Reulbach has been exceeding any speed limits this year—even in Philadelphia.

But aside from that—

Say, did you notice a queer little nip of regret when you read that small item?

* * *

IT just marked the passing of one more of the few remaining original Cubs; the wonderful clan gathered by Frank Selee and molded by Frank Chance into what many will always believe to have been the greatest baseball machine of all time. And those who sing the praises of the Athletics and the rest have at last to admit that Connie Mack and the others have yet to win 116 games in a season.

* * *

BUT that's by the way.

You remember the Original Cubs, don't you? Let's see—can we recall the line-up of the smashing years of 1906-7-8?

Well, back of the wood was Johnny Kling, aided and abetted by Pat Moran—what little aiding and abetting Johnny needed in those halcyon days.

The slab staff? We'll match that, now, against any in history. Brown, Reulbach, Overall and Pfeister for the regulars, with Chick Frazer and Carl Lundgren in reserve. Frazer was a celebrated chicken fancier, you remember, and Carl could pitch better with the thermometer at 32 than most pitchers could on July 4.

The Infield—Chance and Evers and Tinker and Steinfeldt; and the rip and swing of the old Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance that made the pace for all their day.

The Outfield—Schulte and Slagle and Sheckard; the celebrated S. S. S. combination, with the Rabbit to top the batting list and Artie Hofman to fill in on occasion.

WELL, well—we'll take stock of the remains.

Schulte and Evers, and Orval Overall, who is plugging along on the come-back trail after a couple of years' defection.

Reulbach made the fourth of the Old Guard, until the other day. Big Ed hadn't done much the last few years. But don't forget that three times Big Ed topped the whole list of slabmen in the National League, and that when Brown and Mathewson were in their prime.

Four fighting Grizzlies,
Sturdy as can be—
Big Ed was traded,
Then there were three.

Who'll be the next of the Old Guard to pass on?

* * *

WITH brief reference to the latest chapter in that sad serial, "Losing 'Em by One Run," it appears from a somewhat scrambled telegraphic account that Bill Smith and Gilbert Price came together in a bean-on collision after yesterday's game in Nashville.

Price appears to have been the one to bounce back. In fact, the report has it that Smith ordered him out of his uniform indefinitely.

The row was about the curve ball Price dealt to Callahan in the tenth inning, on which Dave Callahan doubled for the winning run.

At this distance, far be it from us to make wise criticisms of either Price or his manager.

Except this much.

If Price crossed up the manager on explicit instructions, he deserves all he got.

On the other hand, if Smith took out on his pitcher the soreness incident to losing a hard-fought battle—Price having been sent in cold and doing his best—it looks as if the manager was overly severe.

CHANCE TURNS ACTOR WITH MOVING PICTURE CONCERN

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Frank Chance, manager of the Highlanders, is now an actor. He has been engaged by a moving picture company to take the leading part in a scenario entitled "The Peerless Leader," some of the scenes of which will be laid at the Polo Grounds, New York. Chance has ben rehearsing the role in a Jersey City studio since Monday. Catcher Sweeney, Outfielder Daniels and Hartzell will also appear in the film.

Frank Whitney Due Here To-day

Charley White Arrives Saturday

By Left Hook.

FRANK WHITNEY, the fighting carpenter from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is due here at 11 o'clock this morning for his coming 10-round bout with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night.

A wire from Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, informs us that the Chicago boy will be here to-morrow morning. With both fighters on the battle ground local fans will have a chance to see the coming rivals in their training grind.

Whitney will pitch his tent at once in the Atlanta Athletic Club, where he intends to do the rest of his preliminary work for what he considers to be the most important fight of his career. Frank will do most of his boxing with Jimmy Perry, and the welterweight should be a valuable aid to him. The Cedar Rapids boy will also get a couple of lighter boys to box with.

WHAT Whitney is after is speed. Frank learned while in Chicago that his coming opponent is about the best piece of fighting machinery in the world. He also realizes that a victory over Charley will put him among the leaders of the 133-pounders. Chances of this kind don't come to boxers every day. The promoters of the Atlanta Athletic Association have given Whitney the opportunity he has been pinning for during the past year.

ON the other hand, Charley White is now the most watched boxer in the world to-day. Tom McCarey has his eyes on him. Tom is seriously thinking of putting White on with the winner of the Cross-Rivers set-to on Labor Day, and a victory over Whitney will be another feather in the Chicago boy's cap. Jim Coffroth wants White to box Tommy Murphy in his arena, but is awaiting the outcome of Charley's scrap with Whitney. The Western promoters have been after White for the past year, but Nate Lewis wants his protege to pick up a few pounds in weight before sending him after the bigger boys.

CHARLEY is still young and has a bright future. White was 22 years old March 25 and has been boxing five years. During that period never has a boxer succeeded in stopping him, or better than that, no boxer has ever even floored him.

When it is taken into consideration that White has met the toughest lightweights in the world, this record is surely a remarkable one.

WHITNEY is a fighter of the opposite type to Charley. Frank loves to bore in and fight at close quarters. Once inside a man's guard he works his hands like a pair of piston rods, hoping to bring his man to the canvas.

It is also a fact that Whitney is a much improved boxer over the boy who was seen here about a year ago. Since leaving here Frank had about ten battles and managed to win them all.

THE Cedar Rapids boy is also aware of the fact that he is getting along in years and knows that if he intends to get any place in the boxing world now is the time. Next Wednesday Whitney will get his chance. If he loses, fans can rest assured that he will give them the very best he has. Whitney has yet to disappoint a fight gathering. This afternoon Whitney will be at the Atlanta Athletic Club working out for the match.

Charley will arrive here to-morrow morning and arrangements have already been made to have him do his training in the Ponce De Leon ball park.

THE other two bouts to be staged Wednesday have been completed. Charley Lee and Kid Young signed for their return engagement yesterday and these boys are expected to put up a corking mill.

The semi-wind-up will be between Mike Saul and Eddie Hanlon. The boys have agreed to weigh 138 pounds at 6 o'clock, and at this weight Mike should have a great chance of winning. Both bouts are scheduled to go 10 rounds, making 30 rounds of boxing for the evening's entertainment.

Tickets for the boxing show were placed on sale yesterday. Prices, $1, $1.50 and $2.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Gunboat Smith, of California, and Fireman Jim Flynn, of Pueblo, Colo., will clash in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden, New York, to-night. Betting fans have made Smith a 6 to 5 favorite, but admirers of Flynn think that the fireman's buildog courage will carry him through to victory.

Frank Whitney is expected to arrive to-day for his 10-round engagement with Charlie White at the Auditorium-Armory on Wednesday, August 13. White will be here some time to-morrow.

Eddie Hanlon started hard work yesterday for his coming 10-round set-to with Mike Saul next Wednesday. Hanlon wants to be in the best of shape as he realizes that a victory over Mike will put him in line for some big matches. They have posted a $50 forfeit to weigh 138 pounds at 6 o'clock.

* * *

Mike Kelly, Indianapolis featherweight, is in Atlanta at the present time in search of matches with some of our 122-pounders. Kelly says he is willing to meet some of the lesser lights first in order to prove to local fans that he is made of the right stuff.

Coast fans are showing much interest in the coming Jack White-Johnny Kilbane bout scheduled to take place in Tom McCarey's arena on August 12. These two boys put up a corking mill for twenty rounds about a month ago. Ad Wolgast has agreed to meet the winner some time in September.

* * *

Billy Nolan, former manager of Willie Ritchie, says that the champion will never meet Ad Wolgast. Nolan says that Willie fears Ad and does not want any more of his game.

* * *

Over in Paris they are certainly picking the lemons for Georges Carpentier. Yesterday they pitted the Frenchman against a boxer named Williams and Carpentier stopped him in four rounds. Who next?

Leach Cross and Rivers have agreed to weigh 135 pounds ringside for their 20-round affair at Los Angeles on Labor Day. Each boxer is to receive 30 per cent of the gross receipts. The winner will probably be sent against Willie Ritchie.

Jack (Twin) Sullivan, of Boston, has signed articles to box Soldier Kearns, the Brooklyn heavyweight, in a 10-round go at the Queensberry A. C., Philadelphia, on the night of August 22.

* * *

Kid Young is getting into great shape for his coming battle with Charlie Lee. The "fighting newsboy" is doing his boxing with Mike Saul and they certainly are going at it in real fashion.

GILBERT PRICE SUSPENDED AFTER GAME

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 8.—It is understood nere that Manager Billy Smith of the Crackers and Gilbert Price, his star left-hand hurler, had a warm argument after yesterday's game, regarding the curve ball which Price pitched to Callahan in the tenth inning. Dave pasted the pill for a couple of bases and the winning run. Price had been sent in by Smith to take Dent's place in front of Callahan, who is a left-hand hitter, and Spratt, also batting from that side.

It is not plain just what the contention was, but it seems the manager told Price at the end of it that he was under suspension. Price went to the slab without much time to warm up, and that was the reason generally ascribed to his lack of effectiveness, but Smith seemed to take another view of it.

Smith had a short conference with Manager Schwartz concerning Jud Daley, but the boss of the Vols was not in the mood to shake up his team, and the result of the first game probably cemented that position.

Timid Kid Asked Griff for a Job

Engel Promises to Become a Star

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—During the early spring days of 1912 a young ball tosser applied for admittance to the ball park in Washington, where Clark Griffith, Walter Johnson, Herman Schaefer and other Nationals were romping about. He was too bashful to speak to anybody, just watched the athletes perform.

The next morning the same kid was on hand. He had read about the great Johnson, Walsh, Coombs, Bender, Wood and other pitchers. He was a pitcher, too. Rather, on the lots in Washington he curved 'em for the semi-pro teams, and as he usually won, he thought he'd like to become acquainted with the big leaguers.

The kid chatted with members of the Nationals, asked who was manager, and if he could talk to him. "Griffith is manager; he's standing over there," informed one athlete to the youngster. The kid walked over to Griffith.

"I'm a pitcher. I'd like to toss a few to your hitters," was his opening sentence to Griffith.

"Where do you hail from?" flashed back the Fox.

"Right here! Pitch on Saturdays and haven't lost a game for a year," returned the youngster.

"Go to the dressing room, put on a suit and let me take a look at you," answered Griffith.

THE youth appeared, went to the hill and pitched during the batting practice.

The players gave Griff the merry ha-ha. They wanted to know where the boss plucked the novice. When the ball came near the plate usually the sluggers lifted it over the heads of the outfielders.

All the time, though, Griff was watching his new entrant. He saw that he had a lot of speed and a fast breaking curve. But the kid was awkward and didn't have the proper delivery.

As the youngster improved with each day and began to show dazzing speed, he was introduced to his idol, Walter Johnson. Always chummy with aspiring kids, Johnson took an interest in the new acquisition. He showed him how to throw the fast one, the movement with the shoulder, how to curve the one down around the knees and the fast break high on the inside.

After a few lessons Griff and the players were surprised. In a few weeks the batters began popping the fast ones and hitting easy grounders on the curves.

* * *

WHEN it came time to make the first trip Griffith asked his strange tosser how he'd like to make a trip with the team.

"Do you think I can pitch?" was his answer.

"I don't know; I'll try you out," returned the boss.

The Nationals made several trips, and when a game was practically lost the kid got a chance to show himself. Sometimes he got away all right, sometimes he didn't.

The 1912 season was over. The kid had a bunch of experience. This past spring he was a regular member of the team, was along on the practice tour and watched every movement made by his favorite, Johnson.

Finally the kid got a chance to show himself at the start. He won, allowing only a few hits and a run or two. Then it was that Griffith realized he had a wonderful pitcher.

Recently Joe Engel beat the St. Louis Browns 2 to 1 with three scattered hits, and, according to press accounts of the game, showed almost as much stuff as Walter Johnson. Joe Engel was the timid kid who introduced himself to Griffith in the spring of 1912.

MAJOR CALLAWAY OFF TO SEE CLARK GRIFFITH NOW

Major Frank Callaway, president of the Atlanta ball club, is a lively little traveler these days.

Yesterday Major Callaway, who had just returned from Chattanooga, set out for Washington to confer with Clark Griffith concerning the terms of the agreement now existing between the Senators and the Crackers.

It is not understood that there is any disputed point to be settled, or that anything is to be done with reference to Clark and Long, but that with the claiming date close at hand Major Callaway wished to be in perfect accord with the Old Fox as to all the provisions of the treaty, so that the Atlanta club could deal intelligently with all its players.

ANOTHER PHENOM MAY GO UP TO MAJOR LEAGUES

CALGARY, ALBERTA, Aug. ..—Jack Roche, Calgary catcher, seems sure to go to one of the big league teams. The White Sox, Cubs, Cardinals and Yankees are all bidding for the youngster. He is batting .354 and fielding .986. Comiskey made the first bid, but no price was set. Murphy has since requested the price, but has been asked to make an offer. Indianapolis, Louisville, Mobile and Los Angeles also are after him. The sale is likely to be made to-day.

BURWELL VICTOR OVER FOES OF TAX REFORM

Combine of 'Drys' With Anti-Revisionists Broken When House Votes to Reconsider Bills.

The combination formed by "dry" members of the House and the members who oppose all tax revision to defeat bills favored by Speaker W. H. Burwell and Governor Slaton was broken, for the present at least, Friday morning, when the House voted to reconsider its action Wednesday in defeating the constitutional amendments limiting the school levy to 2 1-2 mills and the pension levy to 1 1-2 mills.

The votes on the motions to reconsider, which were offered by Fullbright, of Burke, were 86 to 57 and 89 to 58, respectively.

The action of the House is regarded as a victory for Speaker Burwell, and indicates that some of his bills, which are administration measures, may be passed in spite of the opposition tax reform foes and "dry" members said to be moved by a desire for revenge because of failure to get the Webb bill out of committee.

Bills To Be Put on Passage.

With the action of the House reconsidered, the two bills—the school levy and the pension levy—undoubtedly will be brought up for passage at this session. It is understood they may be placed on the calendar for Saturday or Monday. The placing of the bill is solely in the hands of the Rules Committee, and while its members would not convict themselves, one member stated positively that the House would be given an opportunity to pass the bills during the present session.

Speaker Burwell has been hard at work trying to heal the wounds caused by his ruling Wednesday, when he declared the Kidd resolution, calling the Hixon-Searcy bill out of committee, out of order, and indications are he has succeeded.

The fight against Fullbright's motion to reconsider was feeble, though its voting strength was fairly large. Wallace Miller, of Bibb County, led the opposition to the motion. He declared the fixing of 2 1-2 mills as the limit of levy for school purposes would result in appropriating that amount each year, inasmuch as money is always appropriated up to the limit.

Mr. Kidd Is Turned Down.

Mr. Fullbright made but a short speech in favor of his motion, declaring the opponents of the bills had defeated them by spreading the erroneous impression that they would increase taxation.

Mr. Kidd, of Baker, tried to lead a fight against Speaker Burwell at the opening of the Friday morning session. His effort failed, because Speaker Burwell refused to recognize Mr. Kidd. When the report of the Rules Committee was submitted to the House, the Speaker asked the usual question: "Is there objection to the adoption of the report?"

"I object," shouted Mr. Kidd, in a tone that could have been heard a block.

"The Chair hears none," announced the Speaker.

Had Mr. Kidd been able to defeat the report of the Rules Committee, which fixes the work for the day, it was his evident intention to attempt to again introduce his resolution calling the Hixon-Searcy bill out of committee.

Queen Mary Stops Gambling at Court

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The gambling lid is on at Buckingham Palace. The quiet little games with which the servants were wont to while away their time and spare farthings are no more. As a result, grumblings are loud and frequent. This is due to rules issued by Queen Mary, whose anti-gambling views are well known in court circles.

A strike of all the servants at the palace was narrowly averted a few days ago when the Queen decided to permit the servants to draw lots to see who shall accompany her on the royal yacht.

Town's Water So Bad Court Lifts Beer Lid

PITTSBURG, KANS., Aug. 8.—The water is so bad in Chapman, a mining camp near here, that beer is used in its place, and the people are so generous they give the substitute away.

A Girard man accused of selling "spiked" cider was freed on the theory that one man's word is as good as another's. These incidents were brought out in Crawford County courts.

Bulgars Insist Turks Evacuate Adrianople

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, Aug. 8.—In a communication issued to-day by the Bulgarian Government it was announced that "Bulgaria will begin demobilization of her army as soon as a peace treaty is signed, upon the understanding that the powers favor the Enos-Midia line as the southern Bulgarian boundary." This would give Adrianople to Bulgaria.

It is doubtful if Bulgaria could carry on another war against Turkey. She has lost 100,000 men and her national treasury is depleted.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 8.—The Turkish Government to-day issued a manifesto calling upon the nation to oppose vigorously the evacuation of Adrianople.

State Wins Point in Diggs Slavery Case

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—The fourth day of the trial of Maury I. Diggs, former State Architect charged with white slavery, began to-day with the defense laboring under a decided handicap. The first witnesses were on hand ready to testify as to the trip to Reno on which Diggs and Drew Caminetti, son of the Commissioner General of Immigration, are charged with taking Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris for immoral purposes.

Judge Van Fleet ruled that the characters and reputations of the two girls would have no bearing on the case.

3,000 EXPECTED AT GROCERS' OUTING

Elaborate Program of Recreation to Make Warm Springs Picnic Greatest Ever Held.

Plans are being made for the annual excursion to Warm Springs, Ga., Wednesday, August 13, of the Retail Grocers and Marketmen's Association. It is expected the outing will be the greatest the organization has ever held. Francis J. Kamper, chairman of the committee on arrangements, has issued an announcement of the picnic.

Nothing has been left undone by the committee. They expect more than 3,000 persons to attend the outing, and have made arrangements to care for all. Many family picnics have been arranged. There will be bathing, bowling, dancing and a baseball game between the associated grocers and the clothiers' league.

Through the efforts of Mr. Kamper and his committee, special arrangements have been made for women and children. The management of the Warm Springs Hotel has offered the use of the hotel to the crowds, and those who do not care for the more strenuous pastimes of baseball, bowling and bathing, can spend the day on the wide verandas and shady walks of the hotel and grounds.

Special trains to carry the crowds will leave Union Station, on the A., B. and A. Railroad for Warm Springs Wednesday morning at 7 and 7:15 o'clock. A round trip fare of $1 for adults and 50 cents for children will be charged.

Pigs Gorge Candy As Children Envy

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—The Refuge Home Farm, a municipal charity for homeless children, has a fine lot of thoroughbred pigs, which are to be gorged daily with chocolates and other choice confectionery, as a result of recent raids by the food inspection division of the Health Department.

To-day the refuge farm wagon carted to the farm for their delectation, nearly 1,500 pounds of milk chocolates, 3,000 pounds of peanuts, 850 pounds of shelled cocoanuts, 15 barrels of sugar and about 20 barrels of other odds and ends, including flavoring extracts used in making candy. The Kind You Have Always Bought.

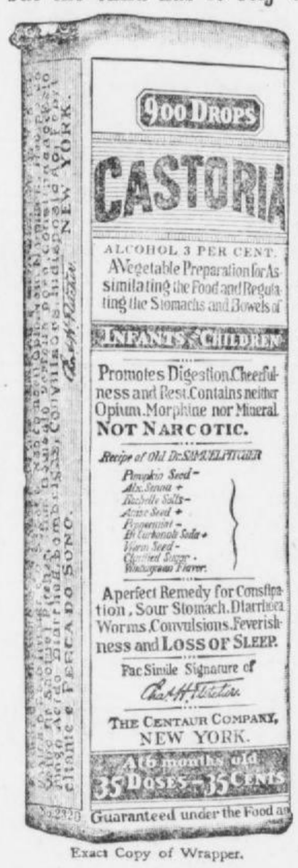
THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines.

It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed conterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Letters from Prominent Druggists addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Central Drug Co., of Detroit, Mich., says: "We consider your Castoria in a class distinct from patent medicines and commend it."

Christy Drug Stores, of Pittsburg, Pa., say: "We have sold your Castoria for so many years with such satisfactory results that we cannot refrain from saying a good word for it when we get a chance."

Jacob Bros., of Philadelphia, Pa., say: "We take pleasure in recommending Fletcher's Castoria as one of the oldest and best of the preparations of the kind upon the market."

Hess & McCann, of Kansas City, Mo., say: "Your Castoria always gives satisfaction. We have no substitute for it and only sell 'The Kind You Have Always Bought,' the original."

The Voegeli Bros., of Minneapolis, Minn., say: "We wish to say that we have at all times a large demand for Fletcher's Castoria at all of our three stores and that it gives universal satisfaction to our trade."

Polk Miller Drug Co., of Richmond, Va., says: "Your Castoria is one of the most satisfactory preparations we have ever handled. It seems to satisfy completely the public demand for such an article and is steadily creating a growing sale by its merit."

P. A. Capdau, of New Orleans, La., says: "We handle every good home remedy demanded by the public and while our shelves are thoroughly equipped with the best of drugs and proprietary articles, there are few if any which have the unceasing sale that your Castoria has."

M. C. Dow, of Cincinnati, Ohio, says: "When people in increasing numbers purchase a remedy and continue buying it for years; when it passes the fad or experimental stage and becomes a household necessity, then it can be said its worth has been firmly established. We can and do gladly offer this kind of commendation to Fletcher's Castoria."

CAN'T HELP BUT ADMIRE BABIES

Every Woman Casts Loving Glance at The Nestling Cuddled in Its Bonnet.

A woman's heart naturally responds to the charm and sweetness of a pretty child, and more to-day than ever before since the advent of Mother's Friend.

This is a most wonderful external help to the muscles and tendons. It penetrates the tissues, makes them pliant to readily yield to nature's demand for expansion, so there is no longer a period of pain, discomfort, straining, nausea or other symptoms so often distressing during the anxious weeks of expectancy.

Mother's Friend prepares the system for the coming event, and its use brings comfort, rest and repose during the term. This has a most marked influence upon the baby, since it thus inherits a splendid growing system of nerves and digestive function.

And particularly to young mothers is this famous remedy of invaluable value. It enables her to preserve her health and strength, and she remains a pretty mother by having avoided all the suffering and danger that would otherwise accompany such an occasion. Mother's Friend thoroughly lubricates every nerve, tendon and muscle involved, and is a sure preventive for caking of the breasts.

You will find this splendid remedy on sale at all drug stores at $1.00 a bottle, and is highly recommended for the purpose.

Write Bradfield Regulator Co., 384 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and they will mail you, sealed, a very instructive book for expectant mothers.

Smallest Kingdom

Monaco is the smallest kingdom in the world. It is only fifty-three and a quarter miles in circuit, including Monte Carlo. The capital is Monaco, perched on a rocky promontory rising 200 feet above the sea level.

Monaco has undergone fifty-eight sieges, but has never lost her independence except for a few years at a time. In 500 B. C. Hectate of Miletus wrote an account of the city now called Monaco, and declared it to be so old that the people had lost all tradition of its origin.

Monte Carlo is famous for its magnificent casino, the most gorgeous gambling establishment in the world. The town of Monte Carlo in winter is a health resort, and in summer is noted for its bathing.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

East Point Oil Mill Sold for $157,500; Lease $140,000

Swift & Co. Trade With Southern Cotton Oil Co.—50-Year Tenancy on Railroad Lot—Other Notes.

The Southern Cotton Oil Company has sold to Swift & Co., packers, its small mill at East Point, together with 13 55-100 acres of land, for $157,500. The sale was handled direct. Report of it was confirmed Friday by W. M. Hutchinson, manager of the Southern Cotton Oil Company.

The oil concern retains its larger mill at Fort McPherson. It has 80 mills in various parts of the South.

Located on the north side of the Central of Georgia Railway, the tract is at the dividing line of the tract formerly owned by the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company and the property of the Gate City Oil Company. The line extends 1,200 feet to the property of the Old Dominion Guano Company, northerly 263 feet, easterly 1,203, southerly 719. An adjoining tract, 63 by 206 feet, in Land Lot 131, Fourteenth District, is included.

Will Lease for Fifty Years.

Judge William T. Newman signed an order in the United States District Court Friday approving the lease for 50 years of a tract of railroad frontage on Nelson street, near Mangum, from the Georgia Terminal Company to the Investment Company of the South. The terms of the lease are $2,500 for the first ten years, $3,500 for the second ten years and $4,000 for the last twenty years, or an aggregate rental of $140,000.

The condition is inserted that the lessee is to erect certain warehouses which shall be bought at the end of the period by the Georgia Terminal Company at the then market value. The plot has 350 feet of frontage.

The Georgia Terminal Company is a sort of holding company for the A., B. & A. Railroad, and the Investment Company of the South is the concern interested in the Walker street development.

Currier Parcel Transferred.

W. Bayne Gibson and A. B. Chapman have sold to Mrs. Flora M. Smedley for $10,500 a 57 by 165-foot property on Currier street, 200 feet east of Courtland, having bought the same recently from J. Fred Lewis for $6,000. The place is 45 Currier street.

Transfer on West Peachtree.

Dr. J. Cheston King has given a warranty deed to the West End Bank on his recently completed house on the west side of West Peachtree, 130 feet north of Twelfth street, for $5,000. The lot is 50 by 200 feet.

Frank West's Return.

H. F. West, of the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency, has returned from an extensive trip through Canada and the West and was back in his office Friday ready for business. Mr. West visited Winnipeg before the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, and inspected numerous properties in the various cities which he touched.

To Bid on Comfort Station.

Local contractors are considering the preparation of estimates on the cost of erecting a public comfort station at the Peters Building over the Whitehall street viaduct. L. C. Green and others who have been working for the station think the structure can be built for about $8,000. It is the intention to start work January 1, 1914. The local park board had indorsed the project.

Comment on Deposit Plan.

Commenting on the suggestion of Robert F. Maddox at Washington that the Government money to be placed in Atlanta banks will not be used for speculative purposes, a leading real estate man said:

"I know of no chance to use any of this money in speculative transactions. This money is primarily for moving the crops, and when the crops are moved there will be plenty of money for the real estate market. There is no doubt about that, and the autumn business should be unusually good."

Mr. Maddox has been conferring with other bankers and Secretary McAdoo on the plan to place $50,000,000 in Southern and Western banks. He is asking for $2,500,000 for Atlanta banks. The vast agricultural sections, he points out, are easily accessible to Atlanta, and it is appropriate that Atlanta banks should handle the money.

FIGHT BITTER ON COMPULSORY EDUCATION

Senate Takes No Action on a Motion to Table Sweat's School Measure.

With the motion before it to table Senator Sweat's compulsory education bill, which precipitated a bitter fight led by Senators McNeill and Allen, the Senate adjourned Friday afternoon shortly before 1 o'clock without taking any action on the bill.

Both Senators McNeill and Allen made a vigorous attack on the bill, the former charging that its only effect would be to let down the flood gates for the entrance of negro children into the public schools. Senator Sweat, the author of the bill, denied this, whereupon Senator Allen charged that the bill was illegally constituted in that case, as it discriminated between white and black, which is contrary to the laws of the State. The consideration of the bill will be continued Friday afternoon.

The Senate Friday morning passed unanimously the new charter for Atlanta, with amendments providing for the submission of the initiative, referendum and recall clause and the proposed limitation of the Recorder's power to the people before enaction into law.

Abolishes Clerk's Office.

The new charter as amended provides for the abolition of the present office of chief clerk of the city tax department and substitutes therefor a board of tax assessors and receivers, who shall nominate a chief clerk, subject to the confirmation first by the tax committee of the General Councnil and ultimately by the General Council. This provision will not be submitted to the vote of the people. The bill provides further for the initiative and referendum and the recall of all heads of departments, including the Mayor and members of the Council, upon the petition of a certain percentage of registered voters, and for the proper inspection of all elevators and boilers within the city limits.

The new charter, as passed by the Senate, will be sent back to the House for its approval preparatory to final submission to the Governor.

The Senate also passed Mr. McGregor's bill providing for a hearing by the Governor before trustees of public institutions shall be dismissed. According to the provisions of the bill such dismissal can be made only upon the recommendation of a majority of the members of the board of trustees of the institution affected.

New Bills in Senate.

Among the new bills introduced in the Senate Friday morning was a resolution by Senators Allen and McGregor, requesting the State Board of Education to investigate the advisability of introducing in the schools of the State "Webster's Blue Back Speller," which was used in the common schools a half century ago and "is still better than those used today," according to Major McGregor.

Senator Oliff, of the Fourth, also introduced a resolution requesting the United States Government to make an appropriation to preserve Fort Frederick, on St. Simons Island, a relic of the days of General Oglethorpe, first Governor of Georgia.

The Senate Committee on Constitutional Amendments, headed by Senator Harrell, of the Twelfth, reported favorably Friday the two constitutional amendment taxing measures which were introduced at the instance of Governor Slaton. The bill creating a commission to investigate the release of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, which was defeated Thursday, was also reported on favorably following recommitment.

In addition to the general bills, the Senate passed the House bill giving the secret ballot to the city of Augusta.

Orient Road Shows $160,000 in Earnings

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Bondholders and noteholders of the Kansas City and Orient Railway have received a circular from the reorganization committee stating that the plan which the committee had hoped to issue earlier in the year had to be amended owing to the financial situation abroad and in America.

The committee reports that earnings of the line in the United States from June 30, 1912, to June 30, 1913, will approximate $160,000. The committee feels justified in adopting a policy of building into Kansas City as soon as possible.

All Crops Fall Off From 1912 Figures

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The crop reporting board, Department of Agriculture, to-day made the following estimates of the condition of crops on August 1:

	Condition August 1, 1913.	1912.
Corn	74.1	90.4
Spring wheat	73.7	90.3
Oats	74.9	89.1

The yields indicated by the condition of crops on August 1, 1913, follow: Corn, 2,672,000,000; spring wheat, 233,000,000; oats, 1,028,000,000.

Buried in Socks Made For Father Years Ago

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 8.—James H. Williams, of the town of Jerusalem, was buried with his feet encased in a pair of socks knitted for his father 82 years ago.

Shortly before James was born his mother knitted a pair of socks for his father, but the socks were never worn by the father. They decended to the son, who carefully preserved them and expressed a desire to be buried with them on.

COTTON GOSSIP

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma clear and hot."

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows part cloudy over eastern half of belt and south Texas; generally fair elsewhere; general showers in eastern half of belt; none in western half. Indications are still for some rain coming in the west over Sunday.

Rainfall The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "After making full allowance for the fact that cotton is a dry weather plant and thrives on sunshine, the talent is forced to admit that drouth in parts of Oklahoma and Texas, accompanied by such high temperatures as those of yesterday, is injuring the crop every day. However, most traders on the short side have learned not to accept damage reports at face value, and when, in the face of a fair forecast for the west, the barometer lines revealed low pressure off the Gulf of Mexico, the talent promptly exploited storm formation as a promise of rain and weather students on the floor helped by asserting that extremely hot weather in Oklahoma is simply a forerunner of rain and lower temperatures. Thus the market worked down after the bulge of Wednesday.

"Meanwhile, Manchester is not sending any encouraging reports, though Liverpool managed to sell 10,000 bales on the spot yesterday. At this time any lack of evidence of trade activity is apt to tell on the raw cotton market, because just now slack demand for the actual makes a poor showing when contrasted with the keen demand in evidence during the past two years.

"The market is very dull and very narrow; speculation has been reduced to a minimum and neither talent nor trade is in a humor to display enterprise. Increasing spot sales at Galveston and Houston indicate that the new crop market is opening up."

The market was sold off after the opening on unofficial reports of rain at Galveston. The early weather map shows no rain and weather experts could not see any in sight, which resulted in an active wave of buying at the outset.

On the call, Flinn and Gifford bought August. Black, Seidenberg, Hentz and Harden sold. Wilson, Mitchell, Gifford, Flinn and Black bought October. McElroy, Bashford and Hentz sold. Flinn, Wiggin, Watkins, Ralt and Gifford bought December. Rothschild, Rosenberg, Black and Orvis sold. Hicks bought January. Bashford, Hentz and Schley sold.

MODERN MILLER CROP REPORT.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—The hot and dry weather which prevailed over the large part of the country this week, while injuring the growing crops, was favorable for harvesting, storage and marketing of winter wheat, but delayed plowing of land for seeding of wheat in the fall. However, there is no apprehension felt, as there will be ample time for this work with favorable weather conditions. That there is more attention being given to the preparations of the soil and selection of seed is indicated by the larger yields and better quality of winter wheat. Thrashings continue to show larger yields than has been expected and the quality of the grain is of the best.

There is still a steady movement of wheat to market, as the yield is so much larger than has been estimated and that most farmers are willing to part with at least a portion of their crop.

ABSENCE OF RAINS SENDS COTTON UP

Heavy Buying Based on Deterioration Reports From West—Offerings Extremely Light.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Uneasiness was again expressed to-day over weather conditions in Texas, and when the cotton market opened, prices were at a net advance of 5 to 11 points from Thursday's final. New crops were the strongest, August showing an advance of 15 points immediately after the opening. The opening quotation was 11.75 and the next figure was 11.85.

There was no rain shown on the map, as had been generally expected and local weather experts failed to see any in sight just at present and the market was bought freely from strong sources. Shorts were also good buyers, but on the rally there seemed to be some cotton for sale as sentiment continues very bearish. Later the market eased off sharply on reports of rain at Galveston and El Paso and less support was in evidence.

Because the detailed weather map failed to show any rains over the western belt, and private reports of deteriorations in Arkansas and Oklahoma caused by the high temperatures and dry weather, the market developed a steady tone during the afternoon session, resulting in a rapid advance in prices from the early low point. Some of the large spot interests continue to buy on all reactions, which is encouraging to the bull elements.

The bulls contend if rain does not come in the West within the next week that very serious damage will result and the feeling is now becoming more bullish. The market is very easily influenced on any weather news and prices will be governed accordingly.

At the close the market was steady with July at unchanged quotation and other positions at a net advance of 8 to 11 points from the final quotations of Thursday.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: August, 11.41; October, 11.11; December, 11.10; January, 11.11; March, 11.19.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—The map shows cloudy weather prevailing over the eastern half of the belt and south Texas; generally fair elsewhere. Showers were quite general east of the River, but none are shown on the maps. Indications are for increasing cloudiness with prospects for precipitation to come on the eastern States over Sunday. Cloudy and showery weather in indicated for the central and eastern States.

Liverpool was poor at first but rallied on the absence of rain in the West. Spot prices 6 points lower; sales 8,000 bales. First traders here were at an advance of about 6 points on nervous covering by shorts on the Government forecast of fair weather to-day and to-morrow in Oklahoma and Texas, but prices soon dropped to last night's closing figures when Galveston reported heavy rain. New York says the declining tendency is due more to the difference of speculation to furnish support than to weather prospects.

Trading is very quiet, waiting for weather developments in the western States over Sunday.

Spot people report the inquiry for early new shipments is still disappointingly slow.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 8.—Continued high temperatures in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas are giving rise to numerous complaints of crop deterioration, some of which are well founded, as numerous sections of this territory have been without rain for weeks. The market does not advance materially because of brilliant reports from the eastern belt, but trade is beginning to note more attentively the complaints and the tone is steady.

Marked Improvement Noted in Wool Trade

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—More inquiry has developed in the wool market during the past week, probably stimulated by the increased demand for lightweight goods, following the recent openings by leading mills. Total sales are estimated at fully 2,000,000 pounds, the business being distributed among the leading houses and covering most of the desirable grades. Primary markets are now well cleaned up, except in Ohio, but even there very little is doing and buyers are coming home. Prices here are unchanged.

Liquidation of holdings wherever a profit is shown is the policy in favor and some transfers, it is said, have been made at a very small margin.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX WRITES OF "THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME," BY HALL CAINE

The Brilliant American Poetess Analyzes the Tragedy of the Woman Whose Child Had No Father, the Horror of Her Loveless Marriage and the Great Problem of This Day.

HALL CAINE'S latest work of fiction, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," is a striking illustration of the change which has taken place in the world of literature during the last score of years.

For frank realism and courageous attacks upon time-worn traditions, it takes the lead of all other books written by all other authors.

The heroine of this novel is a young English girl, reared by an angelic mother and a traditionally brutal British father.

The father is a self-made man, who attains great wealth, and who marries his daughter to a debauched man of title.

The girl's feelings and ideas are not taken into consideration in the least. Neither has she been instructed regarding the meaning of marriage. The death of her mother when she was a mere child deprived her of the one tender tie, and left her with only the companionship of disagreeable relatives or paid attendants.

From the hour of her marriage the trials and problems of life begin to present themselves to this young girl. With the first approach of the husband as a lover, all her womanly instincts arise in revolt and the bride refuses to become a wife.

Father, aunt, and clergymen are called into consultation, to small avail. Afraid as the girl is of her father, she is still more terrified at the thought of giving herself to her husband.

She insists upon returning home to her father, but is finally prevailed upon to go away with the husband, if he will leave her undisturbed until he can win her affections.

To this situation the husband consents, wishing to avoid a public scandal. However, his method of winning his bride's affections is not a successful one. Intemperance and vulgarity are among his characteristics and the young wife finds herself growing more and more disgusted with him, daily.

Then comes the designing adventuress, in the guise of an old school friend and relative, who enters the home and becomes the mistress of the husband.

Bad as the man is, by nature and habit, one cannot help feeling that his position in his own home was a sorry one, and his affiliation with a woman of his own type does not seem at all surprising.

However, it ends all possibility of his ever winning the heart of his wife. Just at this moment the ideal man enters upon the scene and new complications arise.

Heart, soul, brain and body awaken simultaneously in the young wife, and it is quite naturally a blow to the husband's pride and to his self-conceit when he discovers that the chaste Diana, who has refused her husband's kiss, is an expectant mother.

The wife runs away, alone, and goes to London, where her child is born, and where, in the present phase of the story now running in Hearst's Magazine, she is facing poverty and despair in her efforts to support herself and child.

We must remember that she was a very young and perfectly ignorant girl, knowing nothing of life, of the world, or of human nature, when she was plunged into all these distressing situations. All her instincts were high and fine, yet through the curious complications of her destiny, she became the mother of a child of a man she loved while married to a man she loathed.

Mighty problems face her in this situation

Everywhere she sees women respected by society and religious institutions, who are mothers of undesired children of detested men, simply because they are married to them.

Everywhere she sees women despised and shunned because they have brought forth children with love only to legitimatize birth.

Her young mind is torn and tortured with all the great problems suggested by these experiences. Meantime, the lover she believes to be dead is sailing on the high seas searching for strange goals and wholly unconscious of all that has happened to the woman of his heart.

Besides these two central figures are several other very interesting characters; one a beautiful young woman who elopes with a clergyman connected with the school where this young girl was educated. In the midst of her great distress, in her efforts to make a living for her child, she comes upon them in the slums of London; the clergyman dying and the woman selling herself, soul and body, to supply him with the necessities of life.

Just how Mr. Caine is going to deal with all these characters eventually is a question to all readers of his remarkable novel.

No amount of brilliant writing and no amount of realistic pen pictures can change to any marked degree the situation of a woman who becomes a mother without the sanction of the law.

Birth needs, first and foremost, both the legitimate call of love and the sanction of marriage to make it ideal and beautiful.

When either element is lacking the child is not well-born in the fullest meaning of that word.

Physically, mentally and morally the child may be perfectly equipped to meet the demands of life, with only love as a dower from both parents; but we live in a world which has been obliged to make social laws to protect its social rights; and where there is a flaw in the birth certificate of a child, in this respect, it is sure to cause suffering and trouble sooner or later for all concerned.

But Mr. Caine's story will set people to thinking along broader and kinder lines regarding these topics.

It presents great subjects for the mature deliberation of all classes and the followers of all creeds. The methods of public charitable institutions toward erring women are fully illustrated in this novel, and will no doubt lead to much discussion and many protests. Read the great story, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

Frederick the Great

By REV. THOS. B. GREGORY.

FREDERICK THE GREAT became King of Prussia one hundred and seventy-three years ago—May 31, 1740. It was not much of a Prussia then, but the little man in the blue coat with the red trimmings made it one of the first powers of the Continent.

A very lovable old fellow, in many ways, was Frederick the Great. Underneath the king there was ever visible the man. After he had conquered his political position he made his nobles and aristocrats treat the common people fairly. He personally saw to it that just laws were instituted. He mortally hated fanaticism and bigotry. When the churchmen attempted to inveigle him into religious persecution, he replied: "Let the parsons go to Heaven their own way, and let everybody else do the same."

At heart he was favorable to democratic institutions. When King George wanted to hire soldiers of him to fight the Americans he indignantly spurned the proposition, and refused to let the Hessians pass through his territory on their way to join the British. He admired the things for which the Americans were fighting as ardently as he did the personal qualities and soldierly parts of the man who led their armies.

You Can Find in This Picture More Information About "How to Succeed" Than Carnegie or Rockefeller Could Give You in Two Hours' Talk.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Work, hurry, plan, achieve—while the others rest.

That is the big secret of success.

The turtle won the race against the hare in the fable, because the turtle walked ALL THE TIME.

He could not run very fast but HE KNEW ENOUGH NOT TO LIE DOWN AND GO TO SLEEP.

Take a lesson from that turtle.

Take a lesson from this picture.

Your competitors are asleep on the grass.

They are thinking that it is too hot to work. They are pitying themselves. They will have more cause to pity themselves later for having pitied themselves so much NOW.

Don't envy the man who is paddling a canoe and telling some young person with a high color what wonderful things he is going to do NEXT WINTER.

Let him paddle his canoe and talk about himself.

YOU WORK NOW.

Lucky the man who works in August, lucky the man who is found by the hottest sun's rays ATTENDING TO BUSINESS.

When you are racing side by side with others, and when all are running, you can not do more than keep even.

Now, while others rest, is your chance to get ahead. Take it.

Don't pick this up and say to yourself that it is a rather nice picture, and put it down again. LOOK at it, study it.

THEN LOOK AT YOURSELF.

Ask yourself, and don't deceive yourself in the answer, whether you are the man WALKING in this picture, or whether you are one of those figures lying asleep on the grass.

The answer to that question will answer your question as to what your probable position will be in the world a few years from now.

There is a better sermon on success in this picture by Tad than in all the nice interviews given out by Mr. Rockefeller telling how he saved his first dollar, or by Mr. Carnegie saying what a wonderful thing it is to give away libraries WITH NO BOOKS IN THE LIBRARIES.

July is gone. If you wasted that month, don't waste more time now on regret. Start off in the right way in August. WALK fast, WORK hard, THINK for yourself, look ahead.

Remember that no man ever hurt himself with too much work.

IT'S WHAT YOU DO BETWEEN WORKING HOURS THAT HURTS YOU.

Remember, also, that no man cheats his employer. You can only cheat yourself by doing a thing less well than you know how to do it.

Be the steady walker, be the man who gains time while others rest, be the man who gets ahead.

And if you really try, good luck to you, for the man WHO REALLY TRIES doesn't fail.

The Time to Get Ahead Is Now

The man who travels and works in these hot and lazy days, while others rest and think it over, is the man that WILL WIN.

Young men that have ambition, and old men too, CAN GET SUCH A START BY DOING THE RIGHT KIND OF WORK NOW THAT THE OTHERS RESTING AND THINKING HOW HOT IT IS WILL NEVER CATCH YOU. August, September, October—they are the months of the winning workingman. (See Editorial.)

The Woman With the Secret Eyes

By WINIFRED BLACK.

SHE lives down in the valley by the running water, the woman with the secret eyes. She has three children, a boy and two girls; her husband has gone away, they say.

She is poor—and she is angry about it. She does not like the old house by the running water and she hates the song the water sings all day and all night.

"If I could only get up on the hill," she says whenever a neighbor will stop to talk with her, "it would be better up there. See what gay lives the people on the hill live. They have company and the lights shine through their windows far, far into the night, and they laugh and sing, and down here, where I live, we hear only the water—all day and all night the water.

And He's Smart.

"My children don't like it here, either. I am going to send them away so they won't hear it—all day and all night, the running of the water there by the door.

"The boy is going away to the city. Did you see the new suit I bought him? Oh, I can manage when I have to, and the new shoes, too, and the hat? Nothing better in town than those clothes—he's 'as good as the rest now.'

"And he's smart, too; he will make his way, and then we will live on the hill, too, maybe.

"The girls are going, too. I shall see to that. Did you notice the pretty new hats I have bought them? Not a girl in town has prettier ones—and their stockings, too. Some day they shall have a piano like the little girls up there on the hill. I will get it for them. You'll see; you'll see. They won't always be so poor."

Last night when I took a walk by the rushing water I met the three children, far, far out on the road toward town, and I saw a man slink through the low trees to the door of the woman with the secret eyes. I heard the woman's voice. She was laughing a cruel, wicked laugh, a dangerous laugh like the warning of a snake, and the man laughed, too.

To-morrow the three children will have more new things to make them look like the children in the houses up there on the hill—and the woman with the secret eyes will laugh again and be proud of the fine showing her children make—and all the time she is digging, digging, digging a pit for their poor little feet; for the people of the town are beginning to whisper.

They nod together, the old women; they grin together, the old men—and the children wonder why it is that people look so strangely at them when they put on their new finery and go out—to be seen.

"As good as the rest!" Poor woman with the secret eyes, don't you know, can't you understand that those children would be better off if they went barefoot, ragged and had too little to eat, and carried with them into the comprehension of growing youth no secret wonder, no half-hidden doubt of you and the way you earn the money to spend so freely on them?

The boy who's going to the city soon, what can he ever be with such a mother? The little girl, with the soft eyes there, how can she ever hold up her head—when she remembers and understands? The slender child with the puzzled eyes, what will she care what dresses she wore—when she lived down by the rushing waters? All she will know is that there was something "queer" about her mother.

Can't Hide Her Story.

Oh, woman with the secret eyes, work, scrub, starve, do anything honest, anything decent, and give your children a memory of you that will keep them straight when their own feet begin to wander. Your eyes are secret, but they can not hide your story. Some day some day these little ones of yours will know it, strive as you may to keep it hidden. Then what of your dreams—of houses on the hill and friends and joy?

Hark, how the water runs through the fringing willows. "To-morrow," it says, "to-morrow"—do you never listen to the warning it is trying to give?

Three Called to Break Down Negro's Stories

GEN. HUERTA IS ARMING JINGOES

Hatred Against Americans in Capital Stirred by President—Lind Warned Not to Come.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The administration to-day decided to ignore entirely the note sent by President Huerta to the American government and to direct Special Envoy Lind to proceed to Mexico City without delay on his arrival at Vera Cruz to-night, unless he be held back by armed force.

"The President declines to be bluffed," stated a prominent government official to-day.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 8.—With the approval of Provisional President Huerta, arms were issued to-day to the students of the National Military Academy, who yesterday drafted a resolution praising Huerta for declaring John Lind, the special American envoy, persona non grata to the Mexican Government.

A number of residents in the American colony, who have fortunes invested in Mexico, are planning to make a demonstration Sunday when protests will be lodged against the action of President Wilson in sending a personal representative to Mexico City and urging that the Mexican Government be upheld.

Foreign Minister Aldape and other members of the Cabinet are doing all in their power to arouse the patriotism and enthusiasm of the people.

Meetings of young hot bloods, who are standing up for President Huerta in his defiance of the Stars and Stripes, are being encouraged.

Mexican secret service agents have been detailed to watch every movement that Mr. Lind makes here and the envoy will be under constant surveillance.

The newspapers to-day carried flaming stories of "Yankee interference," and warned the State Department to recall Mr. Lind from Vera Cruz and not allow him to come to Mexico City.

Direful consequences are promised if President Wilson and Secretary Bryan continue their present course of trying to settle the internal affairs of Mexico while withholding official recognition of the Huerta administration.

All the papers carry warm words of praise for Huerta and promise that he will stand like a rock in behalf of his policy of "Mexicans for Mexican affairs."

United States warships in the harbor at Vera Cruz were in wireless communication with the New Hampshire, upon which Mr. Lind, is coming, and it is expected that the New Hampshire will reach Vera Cruz about 9 o'clock to-night.

Some Would Ignore Lind.

There was a gathering of Cabinet Ministers and Huerta adherents in Congress at the National Palace today, at which the existing American-Mexican situation was thoroughly discussed. Some are for completely ignoring Mr. Lind, while the radicals insist that he shall be expelled un-

JOHNSTON OF ALABAMA IS DEAD

United States Senator Victim of Pneumonia After Nine Days' Illness at Capital.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Senator Joseph F. Johnston, of Alabama, died at 9 o'clock this morning at his apartment in the Brighton.

Senator Johnston had been ill for eight days, suffering from pneumonia.

Senators to Attend Funeral.

As a mark of respect to the memory of Senator Johnston, the Senate adjourned almost immediately after assembling at noon.

Senator Overman offered a resolution for the appointment of a committee of Senators to take part in the funeral ceremonies and to accompany the body to Birmingham, where burial is to be made.

The Vice President appointed the following committee: Senators Bankhead, of Alabama; Bacon, Overman, Chamberlain, Hitchcock, Clarke, of Arkansas; Vardaman, Johnson, Swanson, Smith, of South Carolina; Thornton, Warren, Bristow, Gallinger, Catron, Bradley and Kenyon.

The funeral party will leave here to-night, and is expected to reach Birmingham to-morrow night. The funeral will take place Sunday morning.

Senator Joseph Forney Johnston, of Birmingham, was born in North Carolina in 1843. He served in the Confederate army from the beginning of the war to its conclusion, and was wounded four times. He rose from a private to the rank of captain, and was frequently mentioned honorably for gallant conduct.

Senator Johnston served four years as Governor of Alabama, before his election to the Senate in 1907. His first election to the Senate was to the unexpired term of Senator E. W. Pettus, deceased. He was re-elected in 1909 to his present term.

Senator Johnston's death at this time undoubtedly will bring about an acute political crisis in Alabama. His seat was being contested at the time of his death by Congressman R. P. Hobson, and the fight between them had grown very bitter. It is practically certain that Hobson will not be permitted, now that Johnston is dead, to have the succession uncontested.

There has been talk of Congressman Underwood as a candidate against Mr. Hobson, and the death of Senator Johnston likely will revive that.

His immediate successor will be named by Governor O'Neal, which means that Mr. Hobson will not get the immediate appointment.

He had been in poor health for several weeks.

Mrs. Johnston was with her husband when he died, as well as Forney Johnston, his son, who arrived from his home in Birmingham yesterday.

Mobile Offers Stevens To Fill Vacancy.

MOBILE, Aug. 8.—Mobile will ask Governor O'Neal to appoint State Senator T. M. Stevens to the vacant place in the United States Senate, caused by the death of Senator Joseph F. Johnston.

Stevens was the O'Neal administration leader at the last session of the Alabama Legislature. The man who will be appointed will not be a candidate for the place at the next election.

Immediate Election May Be Necessary.

MONTGOMERY, Aug. 8.—Governor O'Neal may be compelled to call an extra session of the Alabama Legislature to order an election at once to fill the vacancy in the United States Senate, as it is generally believed at the Capitol here to-day that under the Seventeenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution the Governor has not the power to appoint a successor to the late Senator J. E. Johnston, who died in Washington to-day.

Suffragette, Denied Liquor and Cigars, Says U. S. Is Horrid

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Ruth Grayson, socialist, suffragette and writer, is angry at the United States and scoffs at the idea that it is a free country. In detailing her grievance to-day, she said:

"I have just returned from the United States and intend to unmask the ridiculous idea that it is a land of freedom. It is a terrible place. Why, they refused to let me smoke cigarettes in the hotels and when I tried to get into the smoking compartment of a train to smoke a cigar I was refused.

"But that was not the worst. When I went into a saloon they refused to serve me at the bar. At a beach resort I was reprimanded for not wearing stockings. I think the United States with its so-called freedom is a horrid place."

Mrs. Gould Against The High Slit Skirt

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Edwin Gould to-day severely criticized present street attire and one-piece bathing suits for women.

"I am not in favor of freak or suggestive modes," said Mrs. Gould. "The extreme slit skirt to which objection has been taken in various parts of the country is not worn in New York by any of my friends. Nor do I know of any one who appears at bathing beaches in one-piece suits such as Chicago has forbidden."

Kansas' Heat Record 108; Missouri's 109

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 8.—Records for heat were threatened to-day following yesterday's high temperatures, which exceeded all previous marks in parts of Kansas.

At Leavenworth the highest mark reported to-day was 108. At Emporia and Ottawa the temperature reached 107.

Temperatures of 109 were recorded at Mexico, Mo., and Chickasha, Okla.

Paris Gown Saves Life of Vanderbilt

LONG BEACH, N. Y., Aug 8.—That William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., had a narrow escape from death in the automobile accident that claimed the life of S. Osgood Pell and William Laimbeer because of the fact that he wished to protect a Parisian gown worn by Mrs. Pell, became known when he testified at the inquest.

He would have been in the machine had he not stopped to secure a linen duster with which to cover Mrs. Pell's gown.

The rest of the party went on without waiting for the couple, who took another car and followed.

'Side-Door Pullman' Improvement Urged

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—At the first day's session of the annual convention of the Intinerant Workers' Association to-day a request was formulated to be presented to the Interstate Commerce Commission to compel railroads to put some modern improvements on freight cars.

They say ocean steamships now are provided with gymnasiums, sun parlors and golf links; that Pullman cars have sanitary cups which the porter provides on request, but that freight car roads are still as "hard as the heart of the railroad detective."

Offers $200 For Old War Engine's Whistle

DALTON, Aug. 8.—An offer of $200 for the whistle taken from the engine "General" when it was captured by Andrews' Raiders has been made to James Barry, of Dalton, who owns the whistle. He announced recently that he intended to sell it and give the money to the orphans' home at Decatur.

The offer comes from H. T. Thomason, of Clyde, Ohio, who says in his letter that one of his uncles was a member of the Federal band that undertook to escape with the famous engine.

Record Auto Trip Is Made in Alaska

VALDEZ, Aug. 8.—The first automobile trip from Fairbanks to the coast was completed to-day when Robert Sheldon drove his five-passenger car into Valdez, having covered the 363 miles in 54 hours, actual running time.

England Rapidly Is Besting Demon Rum, King's Doctor Avers

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—In addressing the International Medical Congress to-day Sir Thomas Barlow, M. D., personal physician to King George and president of the congress, declared that England is rapidly becoming the most temperate nation in the world. He declared that the use of alcohol in the army and navy is diminishing at a fast rate.

Dr. Beale, of Texas, one of the American delegates, in speaking of pellagra, said it cost 3,000 lives in America in 1912, and that there were fully 50,000 persons afflicted with the disease.

Professor Pasteur told the congress that the use of radium as a cure for cancer has proven successful and probably will come into general use.

Farmer's Beans Are Cooked by Lightning

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—William Williams, a truck farmer, went out to gather some string beans for the family table the other day. Much to his surprise, he discovered that they were deliciously cooked.

He thought for a time that he had out-Burbanked Burbanks, but a little reflection divulged the reason. In planting he had placed wires between the poles, and during a recent storm lightning struck the wires and cooked the beans.

Ostend Bathing Suits In U.S.? Goodness, No!

NARRAGANSETT PIER, Aug. 8.—"Any woman who takes surf baths may for a trifling amount of money appear to advantage on the beach—an accomplishment not to be held lightly, as all women know," says Mrs. Henry Hutt, former wife of the artist.

"At Ostend, where women go to the beach in coats, one-piece bathing suits may be all right, but in America, where we lounge so much upon the beach, they would cause riots."

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Santo Putarro and his son were ordered deported by immigration officials here because they had flat feet.

PORTUGAL BANISHES ASSASSIN.

LISBON, Aug. 8.—Cunha Neves, who attempted to assassinate the Portuguese Premier, to-day was banished for ten years from Portugal.

Embezzling Governor Now Is a Swineherd

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 8.—An extraordinary story of the downfall of a high official in Russia is told here to-day. Some time ago the Governor of the Province of the Don Cossacks hired a swineherd for his farm at Miatopolsk. Shortly after the servants told him that the new employee made the most extraordinary statements when he was in a drunken condition, and used to say that he was really Governor of the Don Cossacks province.

Investigation showed the guardian of the pigs eight years ago was Governor, but had been recalled and sent to prison for embezzlement.

Sues Wire Company For 'Pert' Telegram

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 8.—H. C. Furstenberg, manager of a business concern, is plaintiff in an action in which he seeks $2,000 damages from the Western Union Telegraph Company for the following message, purporting to be from his landlord, Robert Moser:

"Unless you call at once at our flat, pay arrears rent, make arrangements to take care of damage caused by your dog, yourself and wife, will swear out criminal warrant to-morrow charging you with malicious destruction of property."

The company admits transmitting the message, but denies responsibility.

Shower Routs Heat; Cool Spell Promised

The heavy downpour of rain late Thursday afternoon broke up the hot wave that for the past week has been causing Atlantans to wish they were Polar explorers. Thursday night was cool, and at 7 o'clock Friday morning the Government thermometer registered 71 degrees. At 1 o'clock it had climbed to only 84, about five degrees lower than at the same time the past several days.

Plenty of cool breezes and occasional showers will keep Friday night and Saturday comfortable, according to the official forecast.

DISCREPANCY SHOWN BY CAR CREW AS TO TIME OF THE TRAGEDY

The attorneys for Leo Frank vigorously assailed Friday the stories of two of the State's negro witnesses, Jim Conley, the accuser of Frank, and Albert McKnight, who said he saw Frank at the Selig home Saturday afternoon, April 26.

The motorman and conductor of the street car on which Mary Phagan is believed to have come to town the day of her death both testified that they knew the girl and that she was on their car which arrived at Broad and Hunter streets not before 12:07 o'clock. She stayed on the car, they said, until the car reached Broad and Hunter streets, which was about 12:10 o'clock. Consequently, it would have been impossible for her to reach the factory before 12:11 or 12:12 o'clock.

If the testimony of the two street car employees is accurate, it completely upsets Jim Conley's story that he saw Mary Phagan enter the factory before Monteen Stover came in. By the Stover girl's own testimony she entered the factory at 12:05 o'clock and left at 12:10 o'clock. Thus, she had gone by the time the Phagan girl arrived.

It also serves to destroy the significance of the Stover girl's testimony that Frank was absent from his office when she arrived there. As Mary Phagan had not yet arrived, according to the testimony of the street car men, it could hardly be regarded as a suspicious circumstance that Frank was not in his office, if it develops that he really was not. The defense also contends that Miss Stover, who admits she did not enter the inner office, could hav looked through the doorway without seeing Frank.

Witness Refutes McKnight's Story.

Soon after court reconvened in the afternoon, H. J. Hinchey, of 391 Peachtree street, manager of the South Atlanta Blowpipe Company, appeared at the court house under subpena of the defense to discredit the story of Albert McKnight. McKnight testified that he was at Frank's home the afternoon of the murder, and that he saw Frank board a Georgia Avenue car to return to the factory.

Hinchey stated before he went on the stand that he was riding in his automobile on Washington street Memorial day and at 2:15 o'clock he saw Frank get off a Washington street car at Washington and Hunter streets when the car was stalled by the parade. Frank then was on his way to the factory.

Earlier in the day the defense introduced other evidence to discredit McKnight. Photographs and blue prints of the Selig home were displayed to show that it would have been practically impossible for McKnight to see Frank at the sideboard, as the negro testified when he was on the stand.

Photos, Blueprints and Model Introduced.

Photographs and blue prints of the pencil factory also were put in evidence and in the afternoon a large sized model of the pencil factory, constructed on a scale of three-eighths of an inch to the foot was brought into the court room. It was made by T. H. Willett, a patternmaker, of 100 Highland avenue, and John Cox, an attache of Reuben Arnold's office.

The model and blue prints were submitted in an effort to demonstrate that the State's theory of the crime is unreasonable and preposterous, and to illustrate the theory that the defense holds.

Attorney Arnold, who was conducting the examination during the forenoon, sought also to throw a deep shadow of suspicion upon the story of young George Epps, who testified that he rode uptown with Mary Phagan the day she was killed.

Matthews said that another girl was seated with Mary the latter part of the ride to town. He did not recollect that Epps was on the car at all. The motorman said that he was relieved at Broad and Marietta streets and that he sat behind Mary and her companion all the way to Hunter street. He said the two alighted at Hunter street and proceeded toward Forsyth, on which the factory is located.

This is in direct contradiction to the story of Epps, who testified that he and Mary left the car at Forsyth and Marietta streets and that he walked with her toward the factory as far as the viaduct.

Hollis did not remember seeing Epps on the car. He said Mary was alone when he collected her fare after the car got on English avenue. He left the car at Forsyth and Marietta streets and did not see Mary Phagan alight there.

Albert Kauffman, an architect, was called to discredit several of the State's witnesses. He had blue prints of the Selig home which he displayed to the jury to show that it was impossible for Albert McKnight to have seen from the kitchen into the dining room, as he testified he did, on the Saturday afternoon that Frank came home from the factory.

His testimony was to the effect that Monteen Stover could not have seen over the safe door into Frank's office at the time she declared she was unable to find him on her visit to the factory.

Shows Diagram to Aid Frank.

He said that there was room for several bodies to pass down the scuttle hole into the basement. He exhibited a diagram of the factory to show that Frank could have sat in his office and not been aware of anything taking place beyond the time clock—for example, anyone coming up or going down the stairs.

Miss Daisy Hopkins, who C. B. Dalton said was his companion on visits to the factory basement, was called by the defense and denied Dalton's statements.

She said she never had spoken to Frank, and that Frank never had spoken to her.

Solicitor Dorsey made an attack on her character and forced her to admit she had been in jail on a statutory charge. It was brought out, however, that she was released without trial.

Frank, for the first time during the trial, took an active part in helping direct the course his case was taking. He arose from his seat several times to make suggestions to his lawyers, and at his request certain questions were put.

Before Daisy Hopkins was called Solicitor Dorsey said he wanted to ask Harry Scott one more question. Attorney Rosser said he also wanted to ask one more question of Boots Rogers, Detective J. M. Starnes and George Epps. Detective Scott was the first witness called.

Dorsey asked:

Q. Mr. Scott, how long did it take you to get Jim Conley to write after he had admitted that he could write and you dictated it to him without delay?—A. Two or three minutes.

Q. Did you introduce him to Mr. Frank?—A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever go into the factory and go into the basement with Dalton?—A. No, I don't even know where the basement is. I never have been in it.

Q. You are sure you never told him that?—A. No.

Q. How is it that you are willing to tell this jury that Mary Phagan did not get off at Marietta and Broad streets?—A. Wait a minute and I will tell you. There was an ex-conductor sitting by me. He had a pin on his coat. I took it off and leaning over to Mary Phagan I said: "Little girl, this is your picture." She said: "No, it ain't." That made me positive.

Q. Tell me how these little girls were dressed?—A. I don't remember, except they were dressed in something light.

Q. Well, tell us anything that Mary Phagan had on?—A. I don't know anything except she had on a dress and hat.

Fails on Color of Hat.

Attorney Arnold took the witness and showed him the dress Mary Phagan wore.

Q. Was this the dress she wore that day?—A. I am not sure, but it looks like it might have been.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness. He showed the witness Mary Phagan's hat.

Q. Is this the light hat you just now told the jury Mary Phagan had on? (The hat was of dark lavender material.)

Q. The girl you saw had on a light hat?—A. That's what I remember.

The witness was excused, and W. T. Hollis, conductor on the English avenue car on which the Phagan girl rode to town Saturday, April 26, took the witness stand. Arnold examined him.

Q. Then you are never early—not even when going to the barn?—A. It isn't against the rules of the company to come in ahead of time when going to the barn, so long as you don't run reckless.

STATE IS FORCED TO PIN HOPES ON CONLEY

Must Stand By While Defense Seeks Weak Link in the Negro's Story.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

As the defense in the Frank case gets under way, it is evident enough, as it has been from the beginning of this case, that there is but one big, tremendously compelling task before it—the annihilation of Conley's ugly story!

The State climaxed its case thrillingly and with deadly effect in the negro.

He came through the fire of cross-examination, exhaustive and thorough, in remarkably good shape, all things considered. He unfolded a story even more horrible than was anticipated. Certainly, in every conceivable way, he has sought to damage the defendant—even going to the extent of lodging against him another crime than murder!

Through the cross-examination, however, there ran an evident vein of deadly purpose upon the part of the defense. Conley was given full limit to go his length. He went it—no disputing that!

The question is, did he go TOO FAR?

Did he, in his last minute effort to get in EVERYTHING that possibly might work against the defendant, tell things, or say things, that eventually will rise to plague him to his utter undoing?

That is the defense's task—THE UNDOING OF CONLEY.

Conley the State's All.

Conley is the heart and soul of the State's case—without Conley, the State is rendered helpless. He is the Alpha and the Omega of the charge against Leo Frank.

That great detective, William J. Burns, says "they always—criminals—leave something out of gear in the stories they tell."

Burns declares there never was a lie told to shield a criminal that did not have in it SOMEWHERE a fatal weakness, that might be located if patiently sought for. The more elaborate the tale the criminal relates, the more chance there is, no matter how infinitely shrewd he may seem to be, that he will be discovered.

To-day is the defense's day in court—during its progress, which may be for a week or more, even as the State's day lasted 240 hours, Leo Frank must break down the awful story of Jim Conley, and prove himself innocent, if he can, of all the various charges brought against him.

Can he do it?

Well, maybe he can, and maybe he can not—at least, in the name of justice and decency and all that is right, he must have full and free OPPORTUNITY.

One Side of the Case.

During the progress of the State's case, the defense was led far into the gloom. People began to doubt Frank's innocence—people of poise and fair minds, desirous of seeing the truth prevail though the heavens fall. Even these people found themselves staggering and groping as the hideous and sinister charges fell from the lips of the negro.

Could Leo Frank, of previous good reputation, of fair name and unblemished integrity, college bred and studious in habit, so far as the public knew or suspected, be the monster responsible for little Mary Phagan's death, and also—the other unspeakable thing?

In a rather remarkable interview Mrs. Leo Frank gave The Sunday American some few weeks ago, she said this of Frank and herself: "As sweethearts, we went hand in hand, and intruded ourselves upon no person; as man and wife we have gone hand in hand, and we have intruded ourselves upon no person!"

They still are going "hand in hand," the man and the woman, the husband and the wife—the one holding up as best he can under the terrible charge of murder, the other there beside him—"for better or worse, in sickness and in health, for richer or poorer"—until death, or worse than death, shall sever the tie that binds.

That is something steadying to think about!

It is the defendant's day in court—and he is entitled to fair play and a fair chance!

To some it may seem that the burden has shifted, that it is up to the defense now, notwithstanding the more or less fictitious presumption of innocence the law jealously has established in his favor, to PROVE his innocence.

Be that as it may—even as the gloom has closed about him and all he holds most dear in this world—he still is a human being, in very dire distress, as yet unconvicted; and it is only right that the public should be patient, as he sets forth HIS side of this terrible affair.

And I give it as my opinion here and now, for whatever it is worth, that the case against Leo Frank yet may be far from conclusive—and it may never be made conclusive.

Conley's Tale Impossible?

Suppose the defense is able to show, by a sequence of logical, orderly and honorably sustained witnesses, that the tale Jim Conley tells is utterly absurd—and IMPOSSIBLE?

What then?

Will you be prepared, if forced to a conviction against your will, if it be that way with you, to say to Frank: "All right, you came through the fire, at times seemingly sure to consume you, unhurt and unscorched, but you came through, and I am content."

Conley's story has not YET been broken down—no. But it MAY be broken down.

In an article a few days ago, I said this, and I feel like repeating it now:

> In judging this Frank case, purely from the State's own standpoint, there is nothing so important as the TIME ELEMENT in which the State uncompromisingly claims the crime was committed.

In another article a few days thereafter, I said this, and this I also feel like repeating now:

> If the Conley story is a lie, if it has been TOO CLEVERLY "framed up"—if and a thousand other "ifs"—what matters that?
> It matters this: If it be a lie, it MUST break down, somewhere, sometime; if it be the truth, it will stand against ALL the assaults made upon it!

State Tied by Conley.

Remember, unless Conley's story holds together, the case against Frank goes to pieces. Everybody who has read the evidence and who still is capable of rendering just judgment will admit that.

Suppose it can be shown, and is shown, that the story Conley told CAN NOT be true?

The defense MUST show that, or Frank is lost!

Can the defense do that?

The State has pinned itself down to exact and definite propositions. Remember, the defense has hardly started its story yet—it may be able to make absurd those very propositions the State has set up.

The crime, according to the State's witnesses, MUST have been committed thus and so, in exact order, and just as stated—or Conley's story falls down.

The biggest element in the State's case is the time element—mark that!

Upon it the State will stand or fall eventually.

If Mary Phagan was NOT killed before 12:05, then Leo Frank didn't kill her. If she was not killed at that time, Conley's story will not do.

Then is when the State says she was killed—THEN and not at any other time. Conley's story ALL leads up to and away from that.

Remember, too, that the only witness who swears to knowledge or suspicion of any unspeakable conduct upon the part of Frank is—again—Conley.

Dalton a Tame Witness.

When it came to corroborating Conley, Dalton proved a tame corroborator. The ugly, nasty charge of perversion and degeneracy, glibly dropped from the lips of Conley, rests ENTIRELY AND ALTOGETHER on Conley's word.

If Conley's story of the murder is shown to be IMPOSSIBLE AND ABSURD, will you then reverse your other opinion concerning Frank—if you have accepted Conley's word as to that—and agree that Conley, having lied to send Frank to the gallows, would have lied as readily to besmirch him with unmentionable scandal otherwise?

Shall not Frank have the right, unchallenged and fair, to clear himself of every charge lodged against him?

To-day is his day in court—will any living person begrudge him, sore pressed, one moment of it?

Will, in the end, he be able to read and take to himself, happily and serenely, Tennyson's beautiful poem ending—

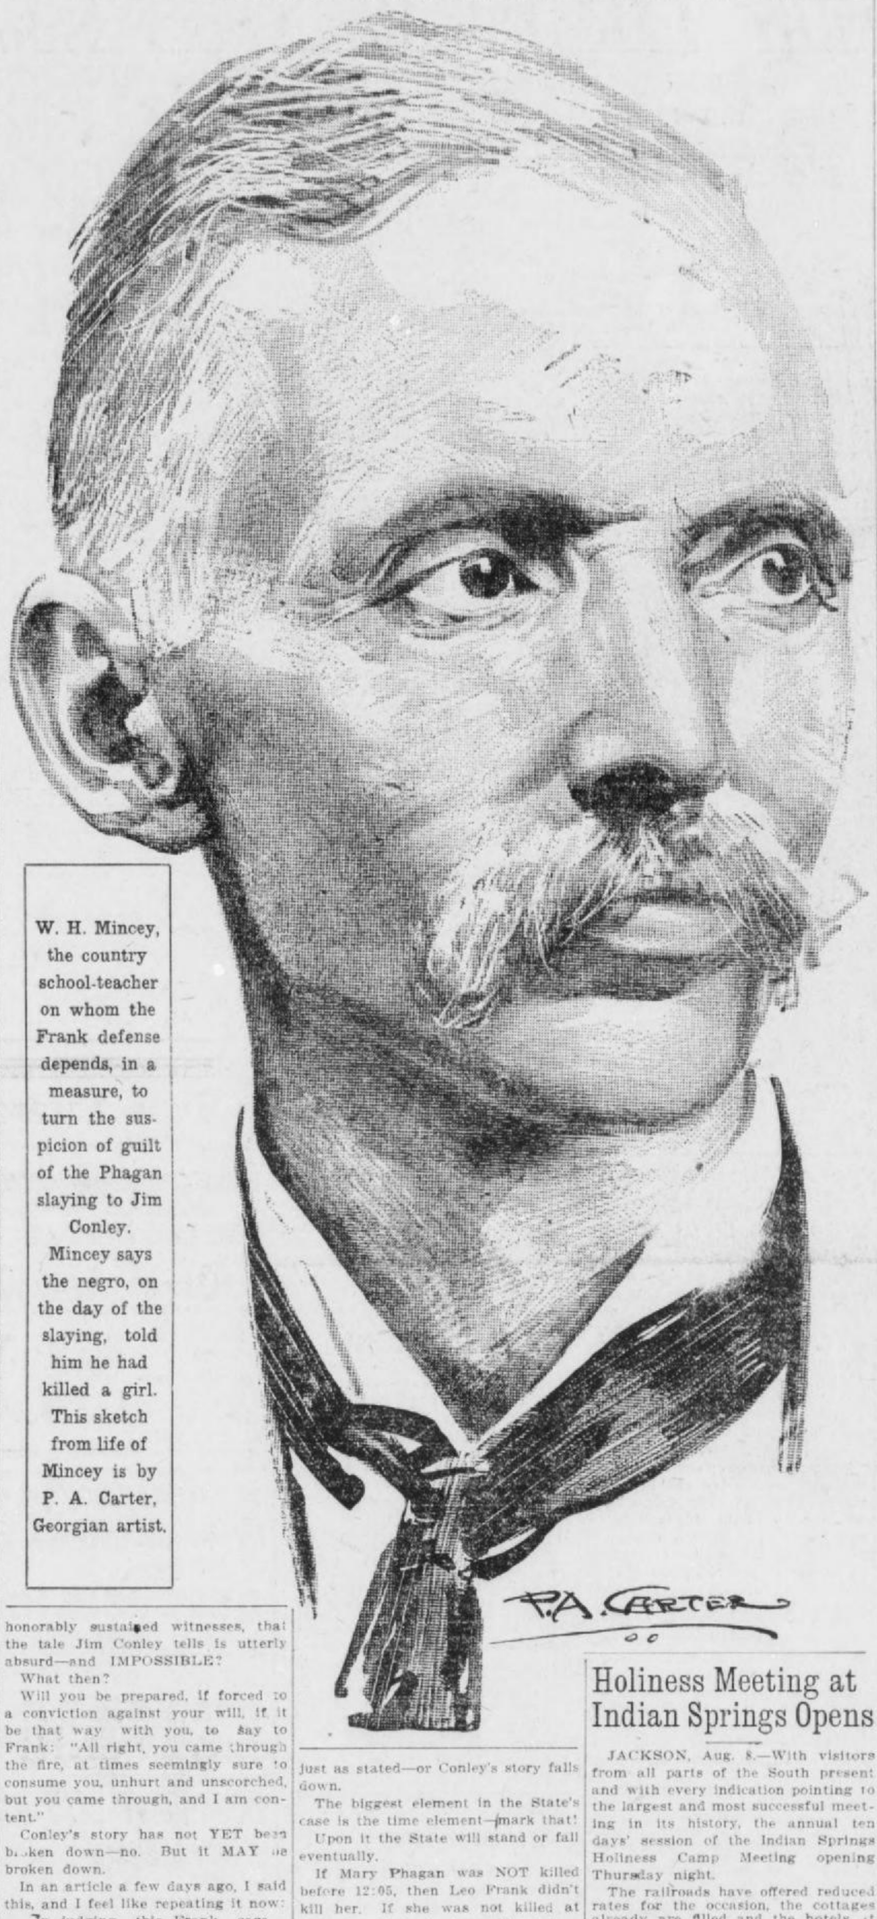
"And now it is daylight everywhere!"

Will he?

We shall see.

At least, he is entitled to his day in court—and it is at hand!

MAN WHO SAYS NEGRO JIM CONLEY CONFESSED SLAYING OF LITTLE GIRL



W. H. Mincey, the country school-teacher on whom the Frank defense depends, in a measure, to turn the suspicion of guilt of the Phagan slaying to Jim Conley. Mincey says the negro, on the day of the slaying, told him he had killed a girl. This sketch from life of Mincey is by P. A. Carter, Georgian artist.

STATE SEES BITS OF EVIDENCE AS ROPE STRANDS

Chain as Strong as Its Weakest Link, but Cord Must Be Cut Thread by Thread.

By O. B. KEELER.

They call it a chain that the State has forged, or has tried to forge, to hold Leo Frank to the murder of Mary Phagan.

But isn't it a rope?

A chain, you know, is as strong as its weakest link. Take one link out, and the chain comes apart.

With a rope, it's different.

Strand after strand might be cut or broken, and the rope still holds a certain weight. Then might come a time when the cutting of one more strand would cause the rope to break.

The point is, the finished rope will sustain a weight that would instantly snap any one of its several strands.

Bits of Evidence Threads.

And that is what the various bits of circumstantial evidence might better be called—strands or threads.

Edgar Allen Poe, in "The Mystery of Marie Roget," has nearly exhausted the philosophical phase of accumulative circumstance and its relation to evidence.

Applying the system of the well-known Dupin to the case in point—and REGARDING IT, BE IT UNDERSTOOD, STRICTLY FROM THE STATE'S VIEWPOINT—an analysis of part of the evidence against Leo Frank follows:

First off, the isolated circumstance of Conley's ability to write would seem as futile as a smoke wreath in sustaining any weight of evidence, except against Conley himself.

But to that fact is added the fact that Frank knew Conley could write.

Still, the thread is flimsy, and, even connected with the case against Frank, would appear worthless.

Six Deductions Seen.

But when it develops that Frank, knowing Conley could write, and knowing the police were trying to find the author of the murder notes—when Frank, well aware of these things, did not inform the police that Conley was lying when he said he could not write, the following deductions appear:

(1) That Frank did not want to connect Conley with the murder notes, which (2) would have been the natural and prompt inclination of a suspected man who knew nothing of the crime himself, so that (3) it appeared Frank knew something of the murder, and (4) knew that Conley knew he knew something of the murder, which (5) justified the conclusion on the part of the State that Frank feared to implicate Conley, lest (6) Conley, in turn, tell something that would implicate him.

Of course, this strand may be broken entirely by the defense, showing Frank never knew the police were ignorant of Conley's ability to write before the police learned it themselves.

But there is one pretty substantial strand of evidence, as the State sees it—and all having its genesis in the simple fact that Conley knew how to write, and at first denied it.

But that strand of itself surely would fail to carry the burden of the case. There must be others.

Even Conley's story is strong only by reason of many strands that surround and support it. Presented to a jury, round and unvarnished—tainted by the reek of false affidavits and weakened by the dry-rot of self-interest, Conley's story never would win a verdict against Leo Frank.

But there is the shred of the murder notes—Conley's story draws support from that. There is the time factor brought out by the expert testimony—Conley's story twines itself about the prop of science. There is the agitation of Frank noticed by Newt Lee in the middle of the afternoon—Conley's story provides for that. There is the visit of Monteen Stover, a tiny circumstance of itself—but of vast importance just so far as it strengthens Conley's recollection of exact time.

And it is by reason of the rope already well along in the twisting that a hundred other little circumstances become significant that of themselves would be lighter than the air-drawn dagger that troubled the dreams of Macbeth.

They fit in with the twisting of the rope.

Will the Rope Hold?

There is Frank's agitation at home and at the factory. There is the ugly story of habitual "chats" at the factory, guarded by Conley as watchman. And the sending away of Newt Lee that afternoon. And the seeing of Conley by Mrs. White, "loitering" at the place he fixes for himself as watchman, and at the time. And the alleged reluctance of Frank to confront Conley at the jail.

And all the rest of it.

So many little incidents, and most of them small to triviality in themselves.

The point is, each strengthens the other, until the fragile threads become a rope.

Will it hold after Frank's lawyers have presented their side of the case?

The jury must decide.

LEO FRANK AIDS HIS LAWYERS IN QUESTIONING OF WITNESSES

For First Time Prisoner Takes Active Interest in Trial for His Life

ARCHITECT IS QUIZZED TO REFUTE TESTIMONY OF NEGRO IN FRANK'S HOME

ing a cot, a bed or a sofa?—A. No.

Q. Did you find anything that looked like a bedroom, except the ladies' room?—A. No.

Hooper Cross-Examines.

Attorney Hooper took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Who told you the location of the body?—A. Mr. Schiff.

Q. He was under Mr. Frank in the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Then if that location was wrong all of your measurements were wrong?

Arnold objected and his objection was sustained.

Q. You based all your measurements on Mr. Schiff's location of the body?—A. Yes.

Q. If that was wrong, all of your measurements were wrong—I mean about lines of vision, etc.?—A. Yes.

Q. You found a gas jet burning in the basement? Where was it?—A. Near the front.

Q. On the third floor you depended for light on the front doors and windows?—A. Yes.

Q. These are all glass?—A. Yes.

Q. There is also a gas jet farther back?—A. I didn't see any.

Q. On the first floor you say there is a trap door near the elevator two feet by two feet three inches, leading to the basement?—A. Yes.

Trap Door Small.

Q. A man of your size would have a hard time getting through there, wouldn't he?—A. Yes.

Q. Two people couldn't get through? A. No.

Q. The scuttle hole back on the first floor leads to the basement?—A. Yes, to the dustpan in the back.

Q. A man doesn't look in a curved line, does he?—A. No, sir.

Q. Well, what do these curved lines on the second floor mean?—A. Those indicate the direction he probably walked.

Several of the jurymen were inattentive to these demonstrations.

Q. Anyone coming into this office could see if anyone was in there, couldn't he, if the door adjoining was open?—A. Yes.

Q. Nobody standing on the fourth floor at the head of the stairway could see down to the second floor?—A. I don't think they could.

Q. Don't you know they couldn't?—A. They might have a little view.

Frank Suggests Query.

Arnold took the witness on the redirect examination.

At the suggestion of Frank, Arnold asked the witness how near Frank's office there was a lavatory.

The witness did not know. Arnold also asked him at Frank's suggestion how far it was from the back of the stairs on the first floor to the top of the stairs at the second floor. The answer was 27 feet.

The identification of the plant and the measurements were carried on with the jury grouped around the witness on the edge of the jury box. Frank arose and walked over to Mr. Rosser to make his suggestions. Rosser whispered the questions to Arnold, who was making the examination.

Q. You did not make any test to see whether a person could view from the third to the fourth floor?—A. Yes.

Q. Would there be any trouble dropping a body down that scuttle hole?—A. No.

Q. Mr. Hooper asked you if it was dark by the elevator, was it?—A. Rather dark.

Might See Mirror.

Hooper took the witness.

Q. This is your diagram—that block on Georgia avenue?—A. Yes.

Q. This is your diagram of the Selig home, isn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. Where was the refrigerator in the kitchen?—A. Right here.

Q. How far is it from this corner of the room to the kitchen door?—A. About four feet.

Q. A man sitting in this corner could see that mirror, could he not?—A. He might.

Arnold took the witness.

Q. Could a person standing or sitting anywhere near this kitchen door see the mirror or any part of it?—A. No.

The witness was then excused.

Attorney Arnold tendered as evidence the diagram of the factory, the plat of the Selig home with reference to Pulliam, Washington and Gleen streets and Georgia avenue.

Solictor Dorsey made no objection.

J. G. Adams, a photographer, was next called to the stand. Arnold questioned him.

Q. Did you go to the Selig home and take some pictures?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you take a couple of photographs, one from the kitchen door on the outside and one from the hallway looking into the dining room?—A. Only a portion of the window.

Q. Did you take one from the inside of the door?—A. Yes.

Q. Could you see the mirror from this view?—A. No.

Arnold addressed the court:

"Your honor, may I show these pictures to the jury as we go along?"

Dorsey—It's against the rule, your honor. They would not let me do it.

Rosser—Oh, get the witness down off the stand and come before the jury. You can do it that way. Don't bother about Hugh.

Shows Photos to Jury.

The witness presented pictures of the open door of the safe in the outer office, excluding the view into the inner office. He also showed a picture taken outside of the outer office which showed that, with the safe door open, the view into the inner office was excluded. He showed pictures of the basement and a series of views of the elevator shaft on the second floor. He showed pictures of where Jim Conley is said to have sat on the first floor; also pictures of the plating room and a box near where Conley said he got the cloth in which he wrapped the Phagan girl's body. He showed a picture of the lathe where some hair was found.

Q. Did you take a picture of the path a person would take coming from the metal room down the steps?—A. I did.

Mr. Arnold—I want to show the extent of the machinery in this metal room.

The attorney passed a number of photographs before the jury.

Q. In every one of these instances, Mr. Adams, did you make as accurate photographs as possible?—A. I did.

Hooper Quizzes Picture Man.

Attorney Hooper took up the cross-examination.

Q. How long since you took these photographs?—A. About a month.

Mr. Hooper went over the diagram of the Selig home with the witness.

Q. When did you take a photograph of the Selig home?—A. That was more recent.

Q. A slight change of the position of that sideboard would have made the whole room visible through the mirror?—A. It would have made some of it visible.

Q. Wouldn't it have made it all visible?—A. I can't say.

The witness was excused. All of the photographs taken by him were offered as evidence without objection on the part of the State.

Court then took a recess until 2 o'clock.

WOMAN DENIES SHE EVER VISITED PENCIL PLANT WITH DALTON

Miss Daisy Hopkins contradicts his story told to corroborate Conley.

The Frank trial audience laughed when C. B. Dalton said he didn't know where he was born.

Medical Bill Is Passed in House With Amendments

resentative Wohlwender, of Muscogee, charged under influence by advocates of the measure, the House of Represenatives Friday morning passed the Garlington medical bill, known as the Medical Practices Act, by a vote of 121 to 3, amended so as to prevent the members of the Allopath School of Medicine having a majority of the proposed State Board of Medical Examiners. The original bill provided for a board of five allopaths, two eclectics and one homeopth.

The original bill, it was alleged by its apponents, was drawn by Representatives of the American Medical Association, referred to on the floor of the House as the "Medical Trust." It was favorably reported by the committee, and a minority report condemning the bill was offered by R. J. Arnold, of Henry County, a member of the Hygiene and Sanitation Committee.

Chairman Breaks Tie.

Representative Hardeman, of Jefferson, who occupyed the Speaker's chair during the early part of the consideration of the bill, broke a tie vote on the amendment of Conner of Spalding, to add two more members to the eight provided by the original bill. The Chairman's vote carried the amendment.

The bill as amended and passed provides for a State board to consist of five allopaths, three eclectics and two homeopaths, thus preventing any arbitrary ruling based on dislike of any school of medicine, save through a combination that it is thought impossible to effect. The amended bill was approved by both factions.

The bill will raise the standard of physicians in Georgia.

40 per cent. It provides that applicants for licenses as practicing physicians must have attended a recognized school of medicine for four terms of eight months each, whereas the old laws required only three terms of seven months each.

Christian Scientists Not Barred.

Prior to the discussion of the bill the impression was that it would bar Christian Scientists and mental healers. An amendment was introduced by McCarthy, of Chatham, providing for this school of healing, but it was lost. The bill, however, takes care of them in the followin language:

"The provision of this bill shall not be construed as to interfere with the practices and beliefs of any religious sect, nor with the practice of osteopathe."

Garlington, of Richmond, the author of the bill, asserted that the minority report submitted by Arnold, of Henry, was drawn by physicians opposed to the passage of the bill.

Wohlwender, of Muscogee, declared the methods of the advocates of the bill were the worst he ever had seen in his experience as a member of the Legislature. He declared they had endeavored to reach him through the medium of his own family physician.

Nearly a hundred physicians sat in the galleries during the debate. Thursday afternoon many of the invaded the floor of the House and were expelled by the Speaker. Friday the doors of the hall were locked and all persons except Representatives and newspaper men were excluded.

County Tax Returns Alter $500,000 Loss To $1,308,275 Gain

County tax returns received at the Comptroller General's office Friday morning changed the decrease of $500,000 to more than a $2,300,000 increase.

Among the leaders were DeKalb County with an increase alone of $1,308,275. This tremendous gain, it is said, is the result of the recent efforts of the DeKalb County tax assessor, who made a thorough supervision of the entire tax assessments.

Other counties showing gains are Bibb, with an increase of $1,557,575, not yet reported officially; Ware, with a gain of $546,349; Columbia with an increase of $213,291. Only two of the twelve counties reported Thursday and Friday showed losses and these were small.

$100,000,000 Ready For Crops if Needed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Assistant Secretary Williams to-day repeated to 30 Western bankers the Treasury Department's plans for the loan of $50,000,000 for moving crops, which were explained to 100 Southern bankers yesterday. Each Western banker applied for a share of the Government loan.

Assistant Secretary Williams announced that even $100,000,000 of Government funds may be loaned to the banks if it be found that this amount is needed to move crops.

CONLEY'S STORY PUT IN PECULIAR LIGHT WHEN DEFENSE CALLS SCOTT

Harry Scott, of the Pinkerton agency, showed up the "confessions" of Conley in a peculiar light when he was called to the stand by the Frank defense Thursday afternoon.

The detective, questioned by Luther Rosser, told the jury that Conley, when he "had told everything;" when he had accused Frank of the killing and had made himself an accessory after the fact by declaring that he assisted in the disposal of the body; when every motive for holding anything back had been swept away by his third affidavit, still denied to him (Scott) many of the alleged circumstances to which he testified while he was on the stand the first three days of the week.

It will be the contention of the defense that these many additions to Conley's tale, inasmuch as all reason for concealing them had passed after Conley had come out with his accusations against Frank and his confession of his own part in the crime, are pure fabrications of the black man's imagination, as are the other details of his tale.

Scott said that he had grilled and badgered Conley repeatedly about seeing Mary Phagan enter the factory. Even after the negro had made all his incriminating statements, he steadfastly denied seeing the girl victim go up the stairs to the second floor.

Denied He Had Seen Purse.

He denied also to Scott, the detective said, that he ever had seen the girl's mesh bag or parasol, or that he ever had heard a girl's scream while he was sitting on the first floor. He told the detectives that he did not see Lemmie Quinn or Monteen Stover enter the factory, although he later declared he had seen them both and so testified on the stand.

Conley said on the stand when he was questioned by Rosser that he thought he had told all these things to Scott and John Black while he was making his third and final affidavit. Scott was called to testify that Conley not only had failed to tell them, but for the most part had made strenuous denials when asked about them. It was expected that Black would be called early Friday to testify on the same matter.

Rosser, in his examination of Detective Scott, sought to create in the minds of the jury the impression that Conley had been guided and directed by the detectives in the framing of his string of statements and affidavits.

Scott admitted that the improbabilities in the negro's statements had been pointed out to him, and that, with these suggestions, Conley proceeded to doctor up his affidavits until they harmonized better with the circumstances of the day.

Solicitor Dorsey was loath to let any statement get into the record which indicated that Conley had been coached by the detectives, and he got Scott to say that no one had put the words in the negro's mouth.

"But you would say," shouted Rosser, "'That don't fit, Jim,' and Jim would get something that did fit; isn't that so?"

MAY PROBE CHARGE OF LOBBY

Senate May Heed W. Alden's Smith Allegation That Administration Is Inuenced.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The Senate Lobby Inquiry Committee to-day runs the risk of having its burdens increased by an inquiry into the Mexican lobby which Senator William Alden Smith charged during debate yesterday exists in Washington and which is furnishing "hearsay, haphazard propaganda," on which, he declared, President Wilson and Secretary Bryan are basing their Mexican policy.

When the committee met, Senator Cummins inquired of James A. Emery, chief lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers, about the formation of the National Tariff Commission Association in 1909. Emery explained that it was the outgrowth of sentiment expressed by members of the N. A. M. and was organized by James W. VanCleave. Members contributed money to press their propaganda. They opposed the Beveridge tariff commission bill, said Emery.

Senator Nelson asked Emery whether James Watson was employed by the N. A. M. and of the National Council of Industrial Defense.

"Neither."

"Was he employed by the Tariff Commission Association?"

"He told me so himself."

The N. A. M. contributed to the Ntional Tariff Association, but did not directly employ Watson, the witness declared.

On account of the death of Senator Johnston, of Alabama, the committee adjourned till Monday.

LIND TO LAND ON MEXICAN SOIL TO-NIGHT

Anti-American Feeling Stirred by Huerta as United States Envoy Nears Capital.

der section 33 of the Mexican Constitution unless he makes out his mission to be favorable to Huerta's aims.

Section 33 provides that persons of suspicious intentions shall be driven from the country and not be allowed to return except on special permission from the Government.

It was decided that no official greeting shall be extended to Mr. Lind, thus breaking a tradition which is as immemorial as diplomacy itself.

After the conference Senor Aldape said:

"The Government has decided upon a definite course of action to be followed in the present situation, and we believe that it will be approved by all persons of justice. President Huerta is striving to re-establish order in Mexico, and he believes that outside interference, unless invited, would do more harm than good. President Huerta has the good of Mexico at heart, and I know that he would make great sacrifices in behalf of his country."

Mexico's Defy Ignored Until Lind Delivers Note.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Pending the arrival in Mexico of John Lind, special and personal representative of President Wilson, this Government will take no action with respect to the defy issued by the Mexican foreign office threatening to deport former Governor Lind as an undesirable alien.

Offical confirmation of the issuance of the threat has reached the State Department, but Secretary Bryan and other Government officials say the United States will make no move until it is seen whether the Mexican Government intends to carry out its threat.

Former Governor Lind is due to reach Vera Cruz to-night. If he makes good connections he should get to Mexico City in time for a conference with President Huerta tomorrow afternoon. It is believed here the Mexican President will be forced to confer with President Wilson's representative, if only to discover the nature of the communication it has been admitted the former Governor of Minnesota carries with him.

Should President Huerta deem it best to expel Mr. Lind, the United States may be forced to take drastic measures; but it is hoped at the State Department that this undesirable alternative will be avoided by a change of front on the part of the Mexican President after he receives Lind's message from President Wilson, the contents of which is unknown here to anyone save the President and Secretary Bryan.

After a conference with the President, Secretary Bryan to-day announced that the statement sent to the American Embassy at Mexico City for the Mexican foreign office that Special Ambassador Lind would be persona non grata to the Mexican Government unless he brought the proper credentials with him, had been received at the State Department to-day and that the President now has it under consideration.

At the request of the State Department, the battleship Michigan to-day was moved from Vera Cruz to Ciudad Del Carmen, Mexico. It was feared that the arrival of the battleship New Hampshire at Vera Cruz to-day might give rise to a report that the United States was peparaing for active intervention and the Michigan, therefore, was moved farther down the coast, where she will remain for further orders.

PLANE LOSES TO TRAIN IN RACE TO CAPITAL

Fog and Motor Trouble Hold Back Aviator Wood After He Outspeeds Special.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Aviator C. Mervin Wood, who started from Hempstead, L. I., to-day to race a special train on the Pennsylvania Railroad to Washington and back, lost the first half of his contest owing to fog and motor trouble, after having the train beaten to a frazzle.

Wood was compelled to land at Gaithersburg, Md., after losing his way in the fog, and immediately after resuming his journey toward Fort Myer, the local end of the journey, had to alight a second time, but said he would resume as soon as he could make repairs.

At Baltimore, Wood was 35 minutes ahead of the train, but the latter arrived here at 9:43, leaving the aeroplane helpless in a Maryland village. The special train broke all records between Philadelphia and Washington, making the 135 miles in 139 minutes.

The flight was made to determine the worth of the Moissant monoplanes for scout duty in the army.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Aug. 8.—Wood left Hempstead in a heavy fog at 4:36 a. m. He did not care to risk a trip over New York City, especially in such heavy weather.

Wood, who hails from Kansas City, Mo., is over 6 feet tall, but weighs only 160 pounds.

The aviator spent nearly an hour testing every part of the machine before he started.

"I don't want to duplicate Cody's feat," said he.

Aviator and machine weighed 1,208 pounds. In addition to 25 1-2 gallons of gasoline, Wood carried 8 1-2 gallons of castor oil with him. The fog caused some trepidation, but Wood said that he could find his way all right, and at 4:30 he gave the word to his mechanician that he was ready. There was a few minutes' delay, and it was 4:36 before the car shot away on its journey. Wood made a wide circle over Westbury tio get his bearings. The car was soon lost to view, but the humming of the propeller could be heard through the fog.

Immediately upon leaving, the airman began to ascend and was soon traveling at an altitude of 1,500 feet.

Army Men See Flight.

In the meantime the special train was racing westward over the Pennsylania tracks bearing a corps of newspaper men, representatives of the Aero Club of America and army officers.

At Trenton, N. J., where Wood was sighted at 5:55 o'clock, he was fourteen minutes behind the train. Wood lost time there, getting lost in the fog.

Wood was still out of sight when the special train reached Philadelphia. Persons who were watching for the airman at Philadelphia did not see him pass over the city, and it was figured out that he had either lost his way again or had taken another course to avoid the air pockets which generally infest the atmosphere above the cities.

Leaving Philadelphia, the engine driver sent the locomotive ahead at 80 miles an hour, while those on board strained their eyes through binoculars to get a glimpse of the aerial flyer.

Lost in Maryland Fogs.

Philadelphia is 120 miles from the aviator's starting point, and Wood had covered the distance in two hours and fourteen minutes.

Wood passed Wilmington, Del., at 7:35 o'clock, 35 minutes ahead of the train. At Wilmington the machine was so high in the air it could hardly be seen.

Baltimore was pessed by Wood at 8:10 o'clock. At that point he was still 35 minutes ahead of the special train. The aviator was still maintaining a tremendouos altitude.

Wood encountered the heaviest fog of the trip over some parts of Maryland. At Gaithersburg, Md., the aviator again got lost and decided that he could save time by landing and making inquiries. This he did, touching earth at 9:15. After getting his route straightened out, he again arose and proceeded in the direction of Fort Myer, Va.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

At the Grand.

Pictures at the Grand are becoming more and more popular every day. Commencing next Monday, the policy will be to present pictures daily from 2:30 until 10:30, with complete new programs each day, at 10 cents admission for the best seats, and children at half price.

Forsyth Bill Pleases.

Every performance this week at the Forsyth has attracted almost the holding capacity in the busy theater. While it is a fact that the show is without a headliner or a feature that may have been advertised, it is nevertheless a combination of pleasing talent that has won applause from every gathering.

Next week's star will be Ralph Herz, the musical comedy character comedian, who has been a late star with "Dr. Duluth," and who was one of the big features with "Madame Sherry" and "The Charity Girl."

At the Bijou.

"Along the Pike" is drawing the biggest audiences of the season to the Bijou this week. The attraction has made good beyond the expectations of the management.

The Bijou will close its doors on Saturday for two weeks, during which time the painters will overhaul the little theater, preparatory to the opening of the fall season on August 25.

CAREY, REBUKED, HITS AT BOARD OF PARKS

Manager Says Factionalism Bars New Ideas—Declares He Is Serving Last Term.

Dan Carey, General Manager of Parks, declared Friday that factionalism in the Park Board had reached such a degree that the exploitation of any new ideas absolutely was prevented and that he was serving his last term under such conditions.

Authentic reports from the faction opposed to him are that plans are being made to drop him at the end of his term, January 1, 1915.

The old-time factionalism reached an acute stage at a meeting Thursday afternoon because Manager Carey had not consulted President J. O. Cochran about contracts for an underground conduit for the lighting of Piedmont Park.

Board Censures Mr. Carey.

President Cochran, with the balance of power in the board, has been supporting Manager Carey. But when Manager Carey took action on his own initiative he switched to the anti-Carey faction led by M. B. Young and R. A. Burnett and resolutions were adopted by a vote of 9 to 3 reprimanding Mr. Carey for making contracts without consulting the board.

Tangle Over "Loaned Stone."

Manager Carey also asked the board to straighten out an agreement between President Cochran and Engineer Nym Hurt, of the City Construction Department, about some crushed stone. Manager Carey said the minutes of the board showed that President Cochran had represented to the board that the stone had been given, while Mr. Hurt claims that it was only loaned and he wanted it back.

President Cochran said he understood that the stone had been loaned, and if he had represented that it had been given to the department he had made a mistake.

"It seems that a member of the board can do anything, but anything the general manager does is wrong," said Mr. Carey.

Commissioners Frank Reynolds, William Van Houten and Councilman Sam Shepard stoutly defended Manager Carey, but they were outvoted.

What the Charges Are.

Here are the specific charges brought by President Cochran against Manager Carey:

That the board appropriated $200 to remove the Erskine fountain to Grant Park and that Manager Carey spent $600 on it.

That negligence resulted in $22 demurrage collected on cars of stone one time and $17 another.

That he has given contracts for $800 for underground wiring of Piedmont Park, and that all of these expenditures were contracted for without the knowledge or consent of the board.

Manager Carey explained that the wiring contracts were made as a result of a misunderstanding between himself and City Electrician R. C. Turner.

Girl Accuses Rich Fiance of Slaying

CLINTON, KY., Aug. 8.—May Copeland, held here as the confessed slayer of her brother-in-law, Hugh Atkinson, at Bardwell, to-day startled the jail authorities by making another confession, saying the killing was done by Lucien Turk, the wealthy fiance of the Copeland girl. Turk is being held at Paducah as an accessory.

In her statement to the police here the girl said that Turk killed her brother-in-law because Atkinson, according to May Copeland's admission to him, had wronged her. J. W. Turk, her fiance's father, the girl said, promised to give her $20,000 if she would confess the killing herself, and pay attorneys who would obtain her freedom under an unwritten law plea.

SCREWS, VETERAN JOURNALIST, DEAD

Noted Alabama Editor Stricken Suddenly at Country Home Near Montgomery.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 8.—From an attack of acute indigestion, Major William Wallace Screws, the veteran editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, died suddenly Thursday night at his country home in Coosada, fourteen miles from Montgomery. Major Screws was 74 years old, and while his health had not been very good for several months, his death was unexpected. With him at the time of his death were his two sons, Benjamin Screws and Holt Screws, and his wife.

"The most beloved man in Alabama," was a title often given Major Screws, who despite the many bitter political fights he entered, always held the highest respect of both sides. He became connected with The Advertiser shortly after the war, and in a short while became sole owner of the paper. A few years later he sold half interest in the paper to Frank P. Glass, and under their combined directorship The Advertiser progressed to one of the foremost morning papers in the South.

Major Screws was born February 25, 1839, in Barbour County, Alabama, and attended school at Glennville. In 1859 he took up the study of law with the famous law firm of Watts, Judge and Jackson in Montgomery and was admitted to the bar in 1859 at the age of 20 years.

Though opposed to secession, Major Screws fought for his State, and went with the first troops to Pensacola. There he participated in the capture of Fort Barancas. He fought throughout the entire war, being captured in Virginia during the last few weeks of the struggle. He acted as correspondent for The Advertiser for the four years of the great struggle.

He held many offices of honor and was a prominent Mason, being grand high priest, Grand Chapter Royal Arch Masons of Alabama. He was Secretary of State for Alabama from 1878 to 1882, postmaster at Montgomery from 1893 to 1897, served a term as president of the National Editorial Association, and was connected in an official capacity with many other large associations.

Despite his years, Major Screws had retained a perfect control of his faculties, and until recently his physical condition was of the best.

Funeral arrangements have not been made yet.

Stage Ambitions of 2 Youths Shattered

Recorder Pro Tem. Preston Friday morning wrecked the stage ambitions of Joe Welch, of Center Hill, and Garland Hensley, of Fort McPherson, when he advised them to give up their ideas of show life and "go on and work for a living."

The two boys were found early Friday asleep in a box car in the Southern Railway yards. They explained they were out Thursday night at a rehearsal for a show and stayed too late to catch a car home. Judge Preston dismissed the cases.

Railroad Travel's Greatest Peril Is the Open Switch

The toll of lives taken each year by this ever-present danger has been enormous.

For years the inventive genius at the command of every great railroad system has been devoted to solving this question.

The question has been solved. The danger has been removed. The open switch is closed. The Shepherd Automatic Switch Company has answered the problem. Its safety device has removed the peril from the open switch as thoroughly as the removal of a serpent's fangs destroys his sting.

By a non-electrical mechanical device the main line is closed as soon as the last truck of a car has crossed the switch. It can be opened when the engineer throws a lever on entering the siding.

The danger of open and split switches is absolutely eliminated. As a time-saver this device will remove from a third to a half of the number of stops and operations of switchmen in taking and leaving siding.

The value of the Shepherd Automatic Switch will be shown by a special demonstration to-morrow (Saturday), August 9, at 3 p. m., on a spur track of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, at the Atlanta Manufacturing Supply Company's shop in Oakland City, on the East Point car line.

The public is urged to view the practical demonstration of this wonderful invention.

Detailed information as to the Shepherd Automatic Switch will be gladly furnished by W. R. Green, at the Aragon Hotel, or W. C. Warfield, 706 Fourth National Bank Building.

Remember, the demonstration begins promptly at 3 p. m. to-morrow at Oakland City.

Take East Point car.

ORGANIZATION OF DEALERS MADE PERMANENT

Dixie's Merchants Take Important Step in Convention—Georgia Man President.

Convinced of the value of their annual gatherings, the merchants in convention at the Auditorium Friday morning organized a permanent body, the Southern States Merchants' Association, which will perpeuate these meetings and "co-operate in all ways calculated to advance the interests of its members."

J. W. Vaughn, of Cartersville, Ga., is to be president of the association, at least until the next convention in February, 1914. Other officers are: Vice presidents, R. O. Crouch, of Griffin, Ga., and T. E. Smith, of Greer, S. C.; secretary-treasurer, H. T. Moore.

Resolutions binding delegates to refuse credit to farmers who will not diversify their crops was not adopted. In modified form, simply indorsing diversification, the resolutions were passed.

Stock Raising Indorsed.

The convention further indorsed the raising of live stock and the improvement of the lower Missippi River. The bills fathered by the Georgia Retailers also were approved.

There will be one more session of the convention Saturday. Entertainment features, however, continue another week.

"The farmer's not has proven so good in 100 country banks and 1,000,000 transactions that we are almost ready to say that we have lost more money on the obligations of the United States in the recent decline of its bonds than we have lost in dealing with the farmer," said W. S. Witham, resenting the "prevalent condescending and patronizing" attitude toward the farmer.

Mr. Witham explained and praised the farm loan banks of Europe.

Jones on Store Discipline.

Boling H. Jones, chairman, took the subject of store discipline and management. His suggestions were eminently practical. For eight years he ran a chain of six retail stores, and from this experience cited seevral lessons in storekeeping.

Failure of clerks to charge goods sold, through lack of system, he believes is responsible for a 3 per cent leakage in many stores. A test convinced him of this, he said.

Mr. Jones preached strongly against price cutting. The remedy is close buying, and manufacturers would prefer small and frequent orders, he said.

"Give your clerks responsibility. Let them do their own buying, and they'll work harder to do the selling. Back up your clerks. Never quote a lower price than you allow them to make," he concluded.

Complete Bookkeeping Urged.

"You need no expert to supervise your accounts," said C. E. Pollard, of the American Audit Company. "What you need are records so complete and so simple that they speak for themselves. I plead for complete books, to show costs of every kind in detail. Very seldom, indeed, can too many details be shown. Ususually, too few details are shown."

L. C. Upshaw, of Douglasville, Ga., talked on credits and collections. At the start he made many amusing characterizations of various "poor pay" types—"movers," "scientific" cranks of no real judgment, and "pony sawmill" men.

Of the sawmill men, he said: "Here is a safe rule. If a pony sawmill man owns one outfit, sell him cash. If he aowns two outfits—don't sell him at all."

Fire Insurance Needed.

H. E. Choate reminded the delegates that the United States pays $690,000 daily to the "demon fire"—about $2.56 per capita per year.

"No merchant can be without fire insurance," he said. "We hear dealers say rates are too high. Rates are high because hazard iss great, which is the best reason for insurance. We call many men unfortunate when they really are improvident."

He concluded with a plea for fire prevention.

C. W. McClure urged the value of organization, and advised delegates to form associations in every small town to watch credits and study merchandising.

He suggested farmers' conventions on the lines of the retailers' convention.

"Neither my husband nor I have ever kissed any one. We believe kissing a menace to good health, and persons indulging should be punished by law."

MACON, GA., Aug. 8.—Macon's municipal campaign will open next week with the announcement of the Aldermanic tickets by City Clerk Bridges Smith and Alderman A. L. Dasher, who are opposing candidates for the mayoralty. It developed to-day that Colonel W. A. Huff, who was mayor for ten years, would have been a candidate but for the entry of Mr. Dasher, whom he agreed not to oppose. Mr. Smith offered to stay out of the race if Colonel Huff desired to run, but the latter said he was debarred by reason of Mr. Dasher's candidacy.

The administration party is supporting Mr. Smith. He and Mr. Dasher both state that their tickets will be announced next week.

Klondike Miner Gives Cash and Auto to Couple Who Fed Him When Tramp.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—Mr. and Mrs. Jack Borron and George Pratt came from Macon, Mo., to-day to buy an automobile for the Borron family. Pratt carried the money that was to be paid for it. Borron had a certificate of deposit for $1,500, a gift of Pratt.

Seven years ago George Pratt was on his way to the Klondike. He became stranded in Macon, Mo., stopped at the Borron home and begged food and lodging. He was given the best food in the poor household and in the night he became violently ill. Mr. and Mrs. Borron cared for him through an illness that lasted more than a month. They gave him railroad fare to Kansas City. When Pratt left he said:

"If I strike it in the gold fields, I'll not forget you. I'll be back this way."

Borron last evening answered a knock and at the door faced a stranger. He did not remember Pratt, who was dressed in clothes of the latest fashion. Pratt extended a hand filled with gold certificates.

"I'm George Pratt," he said. "Here's $1,500. Stick it in your jeans. I struck it rich in the Klondike. We'll get ready early in the morning to buy an automobile. I have waited until I could buy you one before I tried to enjoy a ride."

THE HEART OF GEORGIA

HEROD'S HOG AND HEROD'S SON

A Roman cynic said:

"Rather be Herod's hog than be Herod's son."

Herod's boys—

They were dead.

Herod's heartlessness—

His cruel indifference had killed them.

The children had displeased Herod—

But the hog—he was alive.

When Herod died his hog and gold went not with his soul.

To-day the heart of Georgia stirs—

Not with the lust and greed which brought shameful fame to Herod of old—

But with the pity—

The tenderness—

The love which nineteen hundred years ago began to flow from Christ crucified, our Lord.

You will not return to our great Mother, the State, and say:

"Behold, this we have done for our fields, our cows and hogs—

"For our girls and boys—

"We had neither the time to consider,

"Nor the funds to provide."

For to-day Georgia holds flesh and blood as of greater value than swine and kine—

To-day the tears and suffering of one little girl whose life and honor might have been saved had you made the provision—these are worth more to your State than all the money, about which we chatter and talk forgetting that lives are being lost.

And you are Georgia.

Your heart is hers—

Her heart is yours, as is her power.

And you will not neglect—

You will take the time.

You will never whine:

"WE HAVE NO MONEY FOR THESE."

When you are spending money on cows and hogs.

You will provide.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE first year of Mary Danforth's life in the business world dragged its dreary length away. In the beginning there had been some excitement attendant upon the new experience, and this had buoyed her up. To be sure there had been a great wrench in giving up the home of which she and her mother were so fond, but for her mother's sake the girl put her own griefs in the background. She remembered that once, several years ago, her father had said to his wife:

"She is singularly dependent and sensitive, Mary. If anything should happen to me you must look after her as tenderly as I have tried to do. I depend upon you for that."

The words recurred to the girl often through the wearisome months that followed upon her father's death, when she saw the elderly woman's sad face grow sadder as she tried to accustom herself to changed conditions. When Mary left home each morning it was with the appreciation that her mother must be both housekeeper and houseworker, and that she was not used to such toil. The girl would rise early in order that she herself might make her own bed and set her own room to rights, then help about the breakfast.

Yet in spite of these efforts on her part there were the dishes to be washed, the tiny flat to be swept and dusted, and the meals to be prepared by the widow. Mary would urge her to eat a substantial luncheon, yet she always feared that her own ideas of what "substantial" meant in this connection and her mother's interpretation of the word differed as soon as the daughter was out of sight. Therefore she would order from the butcher on her way downtown a chop or some other nourishing tidbit for her mother. Delicacies were a strain upon Mary Danforth's small purse, but her parent's strength must be kept up. Yet, do what the girl would, she was sure that when night came the patient widow was too tired or too depressed to sleep. She also knew—better than did her mother—that she herself, often went without food at the noon hour to save the price of a luncheon. A few crackers slipped into her bag before she left home would take the place of the noon-day meal.

In spite of these economies the family finances were very low. More than once Mrs. Danforth had been forced to use a little of what she called her "insurance money" to get herself some necessary bit of clothing. Each time this was done Mary was impressed afresh with the hopelessness of her efforts to support two women decently on her small salary.

Business was dull in all branches, and real estate was not booming. James Pearson, her employer, had a wife with enough money in her own right to support herself and her husband, so the success of his enterprise was not essential to his existence. He kept the business because he liked to feel that he was not dependent upon his wife. Mary often wished fervently that she was in the employ of some man to whom work was a necessity and who would be energetic and progressive. But she dared not abandon a certainty for an uncertainty.

It was at this juncture that Herbert Fischer ("Bert" as his friends called him), got into the habit of coming to Pearson's office to talk over a possible real estate deal. At first the girl barely noticed him, so absorbed was she in the many duties that fell to her lot, for she soon discovered that she was not only stenographer and typewriter, but assistant bookkeeper and office boy combined. Night found her jaded and nervous, looking forward eagerly to the letter from Gordon Craig that often awaited her when she returned to her flat.

Twice Fletcher, who had remained in the inner office talking to Pearson, came into the outer office just as Mary was putting on her coat and hat, and offered to escort her to the elevated where she was to take the train uptown. Both times the girl had declined coldly, yet the second time she did this her heart smote her as she saw his disappointed expression. Somehow, she thought, as she walked toward the Cortlandt street station, the look in the man's eyes reminded her of that in a faithful dog's eyes. She was so lonely that even the thought of a dog's devotion would comfort her, she said to herself with whimsical humor. Yet this man Fletcher was a common kind of a person, she decided—not a bit like the men of her world.

Then she smiled bitterly. At least not like the men of the world she used to live in. Perhaps, after all, a girl who worked in a little office on a mean salary, and who lived in a five-room apartment in the poorest section of West Eighty-fourth street, could hardly afford to sneer at anything just because he was not educated to the standard that had once been hers, and had not the refinement that was traditional in the circle of which she had once formed a part. That circle had melted away since her father's death. She could not keep pace with her friends, and one by one they had dropped out of her life. She did not care, she muttered untruthfully to herself. When one declares bitterly that she "does not care" that is usually when really "cares" most.

And that night there was no letter from Craig. He usually wrote her three times a week, but this was the fourth time in six weeks that his letter had not come on the day that she expected it.

"Never mind, dearest," she said to her mother, who commented on the non-arrival of the expected epistle and who remarked that "it was queer that Gordon had not written regularly lately," and "hoped that nothing was wrong" with her daughter's lover. "Gordon and I understand each other, and he is extremely busy just now. One can hardly expect a man to write as often as a woman does, you know."

Her mother kissed the speaker tenderly. "That's so, darling," she assented, "and the busier Gordon is the more work he will do, and the sooner he will come for you, dearie—and for me."

"Yes!" the girl assented, bravely. "That is true, dear mother."

But in her heart she was saying: "How can I stand this kind of life unless he comes soon! How can I stand it!"

.:. Mother and Father .:.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

FATHER'S idea of good luck is winning a lottery ticket. Mother's is to find a pair of stockings that do not need darning.

It is father who hopes at the beginning of impracticable schemes, and mother who cheers when things go wrong in the end. It is father who is depressed and exaggerates what is lost, and mother who is cheerful in counting what is left.

Mother is proud to be told that the homeliest child in the family resembles her. Father isn't.

Here of late the children put the dependence in father's money that some generations ago was put in mother's prayers.

It is father, never mother, who expects the children to assume the burden as they get older. Mother, if she had her way, would carry it till the day of her death.

Once upon a time father called mother and the children together and said in the very wisest way: "This house would be conducted better if business principles were applied. Your system," frowning at mother, "would throw a peanut stand into the court of bankruptcy. I have opened what I will call a trouble book. Every member of the family will make entries in it of troubles, worries, etc., and we will meet at the end of the week to discuss the entries and act upon any suggestions for reform."

Then he frowned at mother again and went to his office. A week later the trouble book was opened.

"Mother won't let me go swimming." "Mother refuses to let me have any spending money; I suggest a needed reform here." "Mother wouldn't let me wear my best dress to play in," etc., etc., appeared in the handwriting of the children, and in father's handwriting there appeared: "Mother had the steak too well done"; "Mother is neglecting her personal appearance; I recall twenty years ago when she took more pride in doing her hair"; "Mother asked for money to-day to get Willie new shoes; I must look into her extravagance," etc., etc., from father and the children, but not one complaint from mother!

Passing between Scylla and Charybdis is no feat compared with the daily position of the mother whose children are always demanding more money of her, and whose husband is always telling her she must get along with less.

Before the oldest girl in the family is sixteen her father finds his throne tottering, and by the time she is eighteen he hasn't enough authority left to order a favorite old picture left on the parlor wall.

When father scolds and goes out slamming the door, the daughter wishes she could have a man like that for a husband about a minute, and she'd cure him, and her mother tells her she will have a chance some day.

It is not very creditable to those children who live and grow up, but in the years to come the mother finds her greatest comfort in the thought that the child that would have always been appreciative and kind, and never have hurt her, is the one that died when it was a baby.

Lady Constance Stewart Richardson on How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

The first figure is a dainty and simple pose, but it works beautifully into any of the dances that are so popular to-day, for, as we all know, dancing is coming into its own, and one of the most beautiful and widely neglected arts is now making a place for itself.

In this, as in so many dancing movements, the figure must be poised lightly on the ball of the foot.

The second figure (2B) is an exercise that must bring to the body the lightness of flying, and when once it is mastered you will find that you have true grace at your command.

FIGURE TWO.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

Copyright 1913 by International News Service.

WHEN I was a child of 11 I used to go out in the gardens of my English home and study the statues and statuettes that decorated it. For hours at a time I used to copy the poses of those lovely classical statues, and I found the greatest entertainment and joy in trying to imitate those beautiful poses. This was the beginning of my dancing, and from the taste I acquired for classical pose and movement has come, I feel sure, whatever measure of bodily grace is mine.

Dancing is essentially feeling, and the expression of that feeling well up in movement and rhythm. It makes for grace and for strong, healthy bodies as no other form of exercise can, because no other form of exercise is as universally possible, as entirely within the reach of all, as this natural expression of the poetry we all have down in our natures.

To-day I am giving you two exercises that express the joy of living to a wonderful extent and give the body much to rejoice in, for they make for grace, for lightness and for the universally desired bodily beauty.

The First Figure.

The first figure is a dainty and simple pose, but it works beautifully into any of the dances that are so popular to-day, for, as we all know, dancing is coming into its own, and one of the most beautiful and widely neglected arts is now making a place for itself. This figure (1B) may be learned with the support of a wall, but it should be worked out in such perfection that it can be done with absolute poise. It will strengthen weak ankles and insteps while it is developing power for grace in arms and legs. Here is my method of practicing it: Point the toes of the right foot straight forward and balance the weight firmly on that foot. Now raise the left leg slowly from the floor, keeping the foot almost at right angles to the other foot. Lift the arms slowly, keeping the right arm held in one continuous line, while the left is curved at the elbow and raised at the wrist. The fingers are held lightly and well apart. The whole body inclines slightly toward the left when the left arm and leg are expressing the greater amount of action, and when the weight falls in the alternate pose I always recommend the body sways to the raised right foot.

This exercise, like all other dancing movements, must express lightness and joy, for dancing is dancing only when it comes as an expression of a happy spirit. It must express personality and yet conform to true ideals of grace and beauty, and thus in time it will bring the body to grace and beauty, too.

Figure Two.

The second figure (2B) is an exercise that must bring to the body the lightness of flying, and when once it is mastered you will find that you have true grace at your command. In this, as in so many dancing movements, the figure must be poised lightly on the ball of the foot. Just such simple movements as poising the body lightly on the toes or ball of the foot will help avoid civilization's arch enemy, flatfoot, and will help in the acquisition of a light, springy walk.

Poise the body lightly on the right foot, with a general inclination toward the right. Stretch the right arm up and out and droop the left arm from shoulder to just below the waist in one long curve. Even while the body is swaying in this position, lift the left leg from the hip and sway it backward from the knee, making one line from knee to toes and bringing the foot almost on a level with the knee. Now stand on the left foot and alternate from side to side.

This exercise is by no means easy to master, but there is no movement of which I know that can be more absolutely counted on to bring the figure into the long, graceful, undulating lines we all so much admire.

WARMED OVER LOVE .:. By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PUZZLED writes as follows:

"I am a young girl 20 years of age and am deeply in love with a man eight years my senior, who reciprocates my love twice-fold. He has a very good position in business and is all that can be expected from a well-bred, respectable man. My only objection to him is that he is a widower and has two small children. My parents also object for this reason, and it is their only reason. If they thought the union would make me happy I am quite sure they would not stand in my way. I have met other young men, but can not seem to care for any of them."

The experience of wooing and winning a wife, of tasting the joy of being the head of one's own home, the creature comforts that domesticity means for a man, the broadening of heart and sympathies when the wife goes bravely alone to the shadow of death and returns with a child in her arms, the anguish of spirit when the mother falls sick and the desolation of the home when she is taken out of it forever, all tend to make a man more tender and considerate.

Though his home may have had its discomforts, he learns to regard it as his home; not his father's, or his mother's, but his own home. He also learned what an unimportant factor he was in its making, and realized the value of the WOMAN as he never realized it in his bachelor days.

That the experience is educational in a way that means more love, more consideration and an easing of the burden for the second wife, I am so certain that I wonder that the greater eligibility of the widower over the bachelor has not become an accepted fact.

Not Recognized.

Older women recognize it. Younger women do not because of the pretty sentiment they attach to being a man's first love.

The only objection to this man, then, is that he has two small children. Poor little motherless babes! I hope this little girl who has won this man's love has a heart broad enough to take in his children; a courage that will sustain her when, as a stepmother, she is maligned and misunderstood; and a charity that is big enough to cover their faults as effectually as if they were her own children.

Someone must mother the motherless, and the task is hard at its best, but one that is made light in the all-sustaining power of Love. If this man and his girl have for each other a love that will stand the strain, their union will be happy though he had ten children.

Learns Something.

His previous experience has made him dependent, tender and broader and considerate. He has two children and he knows that the woman he takes to the altar promises more than to be a loyal wife. She promises to be a loving mother to his children, to accept their resentment and ingratitude without complaint, and to know that hereafter to the end of her days criticism will be her lot.

He knows all this, and is grateful. On his first wedding day he regarded himself as a prize; the second time he goes to the altar with two children at his heels he knows, if he is a man and knows anything, that the prize is the brave-hearted girl who accompanies him.

He was confident on his first wedding day that he was dividing his joys. He knows on his second wedding day that he is dividing his burdens and sorrows, and the knowledge makes him humble.

You love him, my dear; you have met no other man you could love. He loves you, and I am sure your love is big enough to take in his children.

Nothing counts for as much as love. If you love, you know no burden. When you love, there is no sorrow too hard to bear. Marry him, go on loving him, and so long as you love him, you will be happy.

Not Alone.

An old Indian man, selling baskets, called at Mrs. Allen's one morning. He was very anxious to make a sale, and, after considerable parleying, he said:

"Make me an offer, madam, and see if I don't take you up."

Little 5-year-old Bertha was a spectator to the interview, and when the man made this remark she threw her arms around her mother, crying:

"Mother, if he takes you, I'll go, too."

Perspiring Feet Ache

The feet perspire abnormally in warm weather, get tired, ache, burn and jump with shooting pains. Poisonous exudations, moisture-soaked stockings, clogged pores, poor circulation, and the millions of foot nerves respond with burning, jumping and other torturing miseries. Dissolve Jacobs' Foot Relief Tablets in a warm foot bath, and instantly all poisonous matter is drawn out and the feet feel eased and rested. It prevents unhealthy sweats and odors, and keeps the feet feeling good. Unquestionably a wonderful preparation for the feet. 18c, by mail 20c.

.:. A Bachelor's Diary .:.

By MAX.

JULY 6.—"Tell me your name, Little Girl," said the woman who had rolled out such expressions as "the fundamental principles of liberty" as naturally as an entirely different type of woman rolls out the words "darlingest" and "cute," showing to which class she belonged.

Manette looked at me. I nodded my head. Then, to my surprise, the child told her real name—my name, and the name I was trying to keep secret.

"Blake," I hastily added. "Blake," she repeated after me.

The visitor looked grimly satisfied. Her suspicions were confirmed!

"You are Manette H——, the little heiress. You are not Manette Blake at all, and if you will come with me I will take you to your guardian. If you," turning to me, "interfere, I will have you arrested."

I laughed. "I hope," I said, putting fresh bait on my hook, and casting it out into the water, "that I will live long enough to see your sex in power. You are so inconsequential, so altogether unreasoning, and so cocksure that you are right that we will no longer be forced to turn to the joke books for amusement. The Congressional Records, in that glorious period,' will cause a laugh to ring around the world."

"When the women are in power," she retorted, "idlers like you who go around insulting women will be flogged."

This was growing interesting. "I am not idle," I replied. "I am fishing. I have been fishing for three hours and haven't had a bite. That indicates persistence, steadfastness of purpose and ambition that will not be discouraged. As for being insulting——"

A Bluff Called.

I turned and looked her square in the face. "I don't see," I said, slowly, and as if giving it deep thought, "why you used that word. To insult you I should have to regard you or your intentions seriously. Believe me, madame, I had not done that."

I drew my line carefully in and packed up my box of fishing tackle. "Come, Manette," I said to the child, "let us go and be arrested. Are you ready?" turning to the very red-faced woman who stood beside me.

"If you will walk with us as far as the cottage I will get a horse, or do you prefer to have the child ride with with you and have me tied to your horse's tail and dragged as captives were in the olden times?"

I had called her bluff! "I want nothing," in anger, "but to see that child restored to its guardian."

"Then rest easy," I replied, taking off my hat and bowing. "She is with her guardian now."

"If you are Mr. Max——" she began, and could say no more, for she realized what a spectacle she had made of herself.

I bowed again and turned away. A moment later she came running after me. "I hope," she stammered, "that you will forgive me, but your looks——"

I cut her short with a bow, and, picking Manette up in my arms, turned on to a narrow wooded path, and was soon out of sight.

"She is the kind of woman," I mused, "that thinks that to be a man is prima facie evidence of guilt. And the trouble is, her number is increasing."

A New Spot.

July 16.—Manette and I have found a new picnic spot, and for several days we had eluded the interloper, but on the fourth day I found her sitting on the porch when we got home. She had come, she said, to borrow Manette to take part in a tableaux to be given for the cause. "She would make," she said, "such a pretty little Goddess of Liberty. Besides," she argued, "the change would do her good. She needs a little civilization."

That made me smile. "Civilization" of the brand found at summer resorts consists in sitting around on hotel verandas, comparing surgical operations and crochet patterns and branding as "bold" and "scheming" the woman who receives the attention of the only man at the place. I could imagine Manette being passed around by the crochet cut-ups who would speculate on the price of her clothes, her uncle's wealth, and seek to secure through her childish frankness the key to my family secrets.

I refused. "The child," I explained, "is dearer to me than the Cause. She is in bed by 8 every night and has never been permited to stay up late and grow feverish and excited taking part like a manikin in some foolish show. I know that mothers let their children do it, but I am not a mother, I am only a man."

"And the rudest man that ever lived," she retorted, striding out to get on her horse.

I did not offer to assist her. I never have. It would be inconsistent for her to accept.

July 28.—I am writing this while lying in bed, and somewhere in the room, I don't know where, for I can't easily turn my head to see, there is a trained nurse.

I do not know how she got here nor when. All I know is that her attentions are very grateful to me, and that there have been days when I seemed to be slipping away from everyone into nowhere, and only the firm, cool touch of her hand held me.

I think I was conscious of her hand and its helpfulness and soothing magic for days before I opened my eyes wide enough to look her in the face. Even now I do not know what she looks like, and am not interested. I lie for hours with my eyes closed, asking nothing more in life than that a pair of very strong hands, white and soft and gentle, be there to turn my head when the pain of one position is too great, to smooth my pillow, and I hear a voice somewhere murmur, "Poor boy, poor boy!"

July 29.—Richards is here. I do not know when she came. I only know that every few hours she comes from some remote place—the next room is remote in my presnt condition—and helps The Hands move me to an easier position, and that with her coming all concern for Manette has left me.

Fall Guy.

A gentleman in a club had formed the hopeless and harmful habit of taking too much to drink—alcoholically speaking—before he went home every evening.

"How does he know what time to go home?" asked a stranger in the club one night.

"It's this way," explained a member. "He goes to the head of that long flight of stairs leading to the street. If he falls down them, he knows it's time to go home."

A Ready Proof.

Father—Just fancy, Willie, all these fields used to be under the sea, and fish were swimming about where we are standing.

Willie—Yes, dad; here's an empty salmon tin.

When the Sun Rose

IT was absolutely still in the large, dark room where the patient lay.

A small lamp with a dark shade faintly illuminated the heavy silk curtains which covered the windows. In a corner of the room stood the little bed in which a small feverish body was struggling with death. A beautiful young woman was sitting at the bedside, her eyes anxiously followed every movement of the sick child.

Her costly evening gown showed that she had returned direct from some society affair. Her gloves and fan she had thrown carelessly on the table.

A few hours ago she had been sitting at the dinner table covered with flowers and surrounded by merry people, when a messager had arrived with the word that her little boy had suddenly been taken ill.

She hurried home as fast as her big car could carry her and now she was sitting here full of anxiety and despair.

Over and over again, she asked herself if it could really be possible that she was about to lose her fair-haired little darling. Oh no, God could not be so cruel! The boy was her greatest, her only joy! She realized that more than ever now, when she was in danger of losing him.

She wondered if she had always thought so, and her whole past life came back to her mind.

She saw herself as a happy, lively and spoiled girl, whose every wish was gratified. She saw herself surrounded by admirers and suitors, who flattered and envied her, but she never felt, not even for a short single moment, the real, true joy which fills and takes possession of your heart and soul.

No Love.

Then the learned and famous Professor Bornemann was introduced in her parents' home. He fell in love with the young, lively girl and she accepted him, though he was twenty years older than she.

Did she love him then?

No, unfortunately, not.

Rich as she was, she decorated her home with every possible luxury and comfort and filled it with guests, balls and dinners in endless succession.

For a time her husband let her do as she pleased, but one day he took both her hands and looked earnestly into her eyes, while he said in his gentle voice:

"Let us be done with all these empty pleasures, and let me see that I have a splendid little wife, who cares more for her husband and her baby than for all the dances and dinners in the world."

At first she stared at him in surprise, unable to understand him. Then she tore her hands away and answered angrily:

"I do not see how you can make such a request. You are old and have enjoyed all the pleasures of life, while I am young yet and have a right to enjoy myself."

He looked at her sadly, then he turned away and left the room without another word. And since then her life had been one mad round of pleasures, while her husband and child were left to take care of themselves.

And had she then found the happiness she sought?

No, not for a single minute.

* * *

The child in the bed moved again.

"Mama," the little feverish lips whispered.

She bent forward and stroked his hot forehead with her cool hand.

"Mama," he moaned once more.

Anxious Moments.

She felt a cruel pain in her heart. Had she done anything to deserve to be called Mama? She bent lower still and two big tears fell on the golden curls on the white pillow.

The door opened. Her husband entered, followed by the doctor. Her eyes sought his, which looked deep, deep into her soul.

The doctor felt the boy's pulse and shook his head gravely.

"I can not say anything now. I shall return in an hour, when the crisis is due. Until then we have hope." With a silent bow, he left the room.

The professor had sat down on a chair on the opposite side of the bed. His gray eyes looked at the little figure in the bed with infinite tenderness. The young wife fell down on her knees at her son's bedside.

The boy tossed about restlessly, while the minutes dragged along slowly.

In a quarter of an hour, then——

It was the same thought that filled the minds of husband and wife as they looked at each other across their little son's bed. Then both looked at the hands of the clock.

The child was still restless and feverish. Over and over again the mother stroked her boy's forehead with her cool hand. Then she let it slide down on the silk cover and inch by inch it crept closer to a strong, manly hand, until she took courage and touched it.

Their eyes met and a new sacred silent understanding was born.

The clock struck 6. The boy was resting easily, his breathing regular and his cheeks lost their feverish color. The crisis was over. The child's life was out of danger.

The professor stood up, went over to the window, drew the curtains aside and opened it. Then he went back to the bed and kneeled down at his wife's side.

The fresh air filled the room—and then the sun rose.

When the Whistle Blows

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says

YOU lift your eyes to the great clock in the white tower and see six o'clock marked with widespread hands. You hear the chimes and whistles clamoring over all the choked streets. Six o'clock! And the girls who smile all day long as steadily as any chorus girl is bidden to do, who haul down enough yards of stuff in a day to tie a sash around this vain old world, who try debutante dancing-frocks on fat relics who've seen forty summer moons or more, who get down endless "middies" for lean little girls, whose too flat pay envelope is sometimes the fortune of the family, all those who need and earn a thicker pay envelope and electric fans, all these bits of womanhood who go to make up the brave army that work in shops pour out of the employes' door and out under the clamor of "six by the clock." The blonde hat model, in her sleazy, slippery, little black gown, the close-tailored girl who sells suits, with her crinkly hair and big black purse like a baby kit-bag, all there—and HAPPY! Have you noticed that? And PRETTY! Have you noticed that? They have many good excuses not to be the first—but they laugh and laugh—and you hear little things like this: "He said to her—and she said to him." "Isn't that great?" and "What are you going to wear?" and "I had the time of my life!" And pretty—they'd have a heap of excuses not to be that, too—what with trying to stretch a bill longer and greener than it is, and standing on their two feet all day long, and smiling long and sweet at grouches. But they are. Among them you find the trimmest girls in town. And some of their faces make a society belle's wish it could go back to Heaven and get made all over again.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A little boy of four years of age, on noticing for the first time a lock of gray hair on his father's head, asked:

"Papa, why are some of your hairs gray?"

Thinking to drive home a moral lesson, the father answered:

"Papa has a new gray hair every time his little boy is naughty."

The child seemed lost in thought, but, after a pause, said gravely:

"Then grandpa must have had awful naughty boys."

It was after a junior league match, in which the home side lost eight goals to nil. The goalkeeper was naturally blamed for the disaster, and overhearing that things were being said about him, went straight to the captain and inquired:

"Did you tell Bill that I was the worst goalkeeper in the village?"

"No, I didn't. I thought he knew," was the reply.

Even doctors are not always literal in their prescriptions.

"You must take exercise," said the doctor to a patient. "The motor car in a case like yours gives the best exercise that——"

"But I can't afford a car, on insurance pay," the patient growled.

"Don't buy one; just dodge 'em!" said the doctor.

"What's the matter, dear?" asked a woman of her troubled looking husband.

"Oh, I'm worried about the money market," he testily responded.

"And I'm bothered about the market money," quietly replied the woman, as she counted the contents of her purse.

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

But this young man was not one to be easily daunted. "Do you wish me to make up an article out of surmises?" he inquired. "A young girl of this city has died in a carriage and the people have a right to know how. Shall I say by use of the knife or——"

"Scoundrel!" came from Dr. Molesworth's lips. "You deserve chastising, but I shall simply see that you do, what you have probably never done before, tell the exact truth." And, turning to the detective at his side, he exclaimed, "Note what I tell the fellow. If he alters a word or interposes one item that is not borne out by what he observes and hears here, I will see that he is discharged from his place. I know what paper he is on, and I know the editor, and my threat is no idle one. Now let him listen. This young lady, Mildred Farley by name, was engaged to marry me to-night. Being an orphan without friends—pardon me, Mrs. Olney, I should have said relatives, perhaps—and not being well, she thought a private marriage at a hotel would be most suitable. I agreed with her and the arrangements were all made for the ceremony. But she was sicker than I supposed. The symptoms of fever which I had perceived in her this afternoon increased rapidly on my departure and when I returned, before the specified hour to marry her, I found she had fled, leaving an incoherent note behind, which so alarmed me that I went out at once, and jumping into my phaeton, drove up and down the streets searching for her.

The End of It.

"I did not find her, of course; and remembering an important prescription I had promised to send a patient of mine, I dispatched my driver with it, and was taking my phaeton home myself, when I suddenly detected a woman seated on one of the steps in Twenty-second street whose appearance struck me as familiar. Though no believer in miracles, I accepted this one without scruple, and, jumping from my carriage, went up to her and soon saw that I was right in supposing I had found Miss Farley. She was very ill, and did not know me. 'I am sleepy,' she said, and dropped her head on my shoulder as I lifted her up. At the same moment I heard the sound of breaking glass, as if a small vial had slipped to the sidewalk and been shivered, while a pungent odor arose to my nostrils so suggestive of the poison known as prussic acid that I felt greatly alarmed, and hastily carrying her to my phaeton I put her in and drove as fast as I could toward home. But soon her increasing pallor and general condition convinced me that death was near, and I stopped at the drug store on the corner of Nineteenth street, and, leaving her in the phaeton, ran in and asked one of the clerks to assist me in bringing her into the store. He consented, and we went back to the phaeton, but only to find that I was too late. She had died in my absence."

"Horrible!" burst from the landlady's lips, and even the callous porter looked shocked and a trifle ashamed.

"Where she got the poison," continued the doctor, "remains to be found out. Perhaps she bought it after leaving the hotel; perhaps she had had it with her there as a medicine. If so, she may have taken an overdose without being conscious of her danger. I only know I was her physician and had never prescribed it for her, nor did I know she suffered from any ailment that required such a tonic."

"And is that all? Will you tell me nothing more?"

"You have a very good article," remarked the doctor, dryly. "Leave something for the future."

And the reporter had to be content, and the detectives, too.

The reporter gone, Dr. Molesworth turned again toward Mr. Gryce.

"And who are you?" he asked.

"I was going to say I didn't know," answered the seemingly trembling old man. "I am in pain and want to get home. Will one of you help me down the steps?"

"In pain!" repeated the doctor, who was not by any means a hard-hearted man.

"Yes, rheumatism in the stomach, I think. I came for some opium, but I won't wait any longer. They will worry about me at home. Besides, I feel a bit better now."

His manner was so natural, his look so in accordance with the character he had assumed, that Dr. Molesworth suspected nothing and kindly held out his arm. But he found the alleged detective had forestalled him.

"Let me do this business," he entreated, with a great show of good-nature and respect. "I have nothing else to do and am used to old men." And, nodding graciously to his superior, he led him carefully out, whispering as soon as the lintel of the door had hidden them from view, "What orders? Dou kou smell anything wrong here?"

"Watch," was the quiet but emphatic command. "Note everything, even to the lifting of an eyelid, but say nothing and do not seem to watch."

Then as they reached the front door, "Don't be hurt if I send some one else here. They know your character too well." And with this the elder man went out with a slow and hobbling step. The pain and distress of that evening had not been altogether assumed.

Some Points.

MR. GRYCE had only a look to go upon, but it was a look that spoke volumes. When a man shrinks from the eye of a detective, he has something to conceal, and when that something is connected with the death of a young girl by poison, it behooves an officer of the law to follow that man till he finds out what that something is.

It was therefore with some interest that he received in the early morning a summons from the gentleman who held the office of Coroner at this time, to come down to his office and have a talk with him concerning this case of Mildred Farley; nor was it long before he presented himself at the place designated. He found the Coroner alone and the following conversation ensued:

"Well, Gryce," said the latter, "I have just come from the house where you played the part of a sick patient so successfully last night. May I ask how you chanced to be so prompt on the scene of action? Do you scent out mysterious cases or had you any knowledge which led you to that especial spot just at the moment when your presence was possibly most required?"

"Both," was the good-natured reply. "Something which I call curiosity, but which I am fain now to consider instinct, made me an intruder in Dr. Molesworth's home last night. But I had a bit of knowledge to start with that roused his curiosity, and it is of this I want to speak, if you think the subject worthy of discussion or Dr. Molesworth anything but what he seems, a good, honest and reliable man."

"I think," returned the Coroner, slowly, "any subject of this kind worthy of discussion; and as for Dr. Molesworth, he stands high, but so do a great many others whose testimony we are called upon to question every day of our lives. You need not stop on his account if you have seen or discovered anything which contradicts his story."

"What is his story?"

"Didn't you hear it? I understood that he told all he had to tell in your presence."

"He told two stories."

"How two?"

"One with his lips, another with his face; that's what makes me doubt him."

"You do doubt him, then?"

Gryce's Story.

Mr. Gryce tapped the table before him with an abstracted air, murmured some unintelligible words and looked as if he thought he had replied.

"Come," cried the other, "your reasons? You usually have good ones."

"Yes," assented Mr. Gryce, "I usually have, but in this case it would be hard for me to tell you just what they are. I feel that there is something back of this affair which we do not see, but I am not ready as yet to go any further or even express any suspicions—say that I have any. The facts which I have been able to glean in the short space of time we have had are meager, but interesting. Perhaps you can add to them; if so, our conference may lead to something. This is what I know." And he related first what Dr. Molesworth had to say about the matter the evening before. When he had finished, he asked, "Does this story agree with what he told you this morning?"

"Exactly."

"Very good. So much for so much. Now for the side lights. I saw the girl myself yesterday afternoon."

"You?"

"Yes; I saw her, but I did not speak to her, nor did I recognize her for the person she was. Indeed, I took her for another woman whom she greatly resembled. It was at the C—— Hotel."

"Ah!"

"I need not enter into any further particulars about this circumstance, as it does not concern the affair before us, which stands quite apart by itself. Enough that for reasons of my own I played the spy on this young woman and saw her when she thought herself alone, in the privacy of her own apartment. This was some time after noon and the great fact which I wish to bring before you is this, that she was then to all appearance (and my eye is accustomed to read countenances) perfectly happy and had not in face or bearing the least trace of sickness."

"That is a point, certainly."

"Note it, and then add to it this, that being still under the error of which I have spoken, I went back to the hotel some three or four hours later, and wishing to confirm a former suspicion, sought my vantage spot again, and in conjunction with another witness whose testimony you will not need, looked in upon this Miss Farley again, when I perceived that a great change had passed over her. But it was not that of sickness. From happiness she had descended to misery, and in her pallor and wild, unrestrained attitudes I could detect the expression of despair, but none of bodily suffering or mental disorder.

"Now, what had occasioned this change in her in a space of time so short? I think I can answer that it was an interview with Dr. Molesworth. For, according to his own story and that of the hotel clerk, he was with her for a half hour or so in the afternoon; and though upon going out he told the hotel clerk he was coming back in the evening to marry her, something in his determination or in what had taken place at their interview had destroyed in her every vestige of hope and happiness. For it was anything but an expectant bride whom I saw after this visit, as it had been anything but an anxious woman whom I had seen before it.

"So! so!"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LEAVE THAT TO HER.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am twenty-one and in love with a girl of nineteen, and she loves me. Another man, who is much older, is trying to win her love, but she doesn't care for him. At present I am not settled, and it may take about three years before I can marry, while the other man can support her quite nicely. Have I the right to ask her to wait? S. J.

She loves you. She doesn't love the other man. If she is worthy of a good man's love she will wait indefinitely for him in preference to marrying a man she does not care for. Give her the right to decide, and see that you don't make her time of waiting too long.

SHE IS IN THE WRONG.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a young lady for the last seven months. About a week ago I escorted her to a dance where she met some of her old gentlemen friends, who received her attention all the evening. When the time came to go home I asked her to go home with me, but she refused, saying she could go home with others. I then left her. Did I do proper in leaving her? Who should apologize? RICHARD.

She refused to let you escort her home though you had taken her there. Under the circumstances there was nothing for you to do but leave her. You owe her no apology.

KEEPING EVERLASTINGLY AT IT

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am nineteen, and dearly in love with a girl two years my junior, whom I have known for the past seven years. Some time ago she met a young man at a wedding, and has since been devoting all of her attention to him. I love her dearly and would ask you how I can win her love again. F. B. T.

Your seven years' devotion merits better returns. Be devoted and persistent, and if this fails change your tactics to indifference. The appearance of your rival stirred you. Has it occurred to you that if she found she had a rival it might renew her interests?

YOU WERE RIGHT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am sixteen and have been keeping company with a young man about three months. He has bee sick and he telephoned and asked me to come and see him. I told him it was improper for a girl to go to a man's house, and he got angry. Was I right? R. M.

Don't worry, my dear, you did just right. I don't admire him because of his request or his reception of your refusal. Never go to see a man under any circumstances unless your mother goes with you.

HARRY GLENN IS OUT TO CINCH 25-MILE TITLE

THE Atlanta Motordrome will be the scene of some interesting races to-night. The feature event will be a 25-mile race between the ten riders here at the present time, and the speed demons should furnish enough excitement in this race to last the fans for some time.

All the riders claim they have their machines working faster than ever, and it would not surprise many to see some dark horse win the long grind. Harry Glenn's great race last Tuesday has made him the talk of the town with motorcycle fans. Most of them want to see Harry win to-night and prove that his great riding Tuesday was not a fluke.

THE 25-mile race is for the championship of the South. To have an Atlanta boy capture this title would be a great honor to the city. Harry Glenn realizes this and it's a sure bet that Harry will be trying every minute of the time.

Richards, Graves, McNeil and Renel are also anxious to take the big event. Richards' machine was not going good Tuesday, but he says it is in great shape now. Graves is not saying much but Morty is out for some glory. McNeil and Renel can also be counted on to be in the race from start to finish.

THE Motordrome Purse will open the card. There will be three heats of one mile and a final of two miles. A special match race between Glenn and Lockner, best two in three heats, is also attracting much attention. The five-mile invitation race, open to all comers, fills out the program.

Following is the complete card for to-night:

First Event.
Motordrome Purse (qualifying heats, one mile; final, two miles; winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat to qualify). First Heat—Richards, Lockner, Graves.

Second Event.
Motordrome Purse—Second Heat—Glenn, Renel, Swartz.

Third Event.
Motordrome Purse—Third Heat—McNeil, Lewis, Luther, Shields.

Fourth Event.
Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Lockner.
(Two-mile heats; two best in three.)

Fifth Event.
Motordrome Purse—Final heat.

Sixth Event.
Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Lockner.

Seventh Event.
Invitation Race—Distance, 5 miles. Open to all comers.

Eighth Event.
Special Match Race—Third heat, if necessary.

Ninth Event.
Twenty-five-mile race for championship of the South—Graves, Swartz, Shields, Lockner, Richards, Luther, Renel, McNeil, Lewis, Glenn.

YANKEE OWNER PUTS IN CLAIM FOR CUBAN STARS

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—President Frank Farrell, of the New York American League club, will appeal to the National Commission to set aside the sale of three Cuban players of the Long Branch team, of the New York and New Jersey League, to the Boston Nationals. The players are Pitcher Laqua, Shortstop Arragon and Outfielder Padman, according to Farrell. Owner Henriques, of the Long Branch team, recently offered to sell him these players. Farrell agreed to take them, and the price was fixed.

According to the verbal agreement, the three players were to report to Manager Chance yesterday. Instead of the players reporting, Henriques sold them to President Gaffney, of the Braves. Farell says he has several witnesses to the deal.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Aug. 8.—The Grand Rapids club, of the Central League, announces the sale of Pitcher "Abe" Bowman to the Cleveland American League club. The price is given out at $2,500. Bowman will report to the Naps at the close of the Central season.

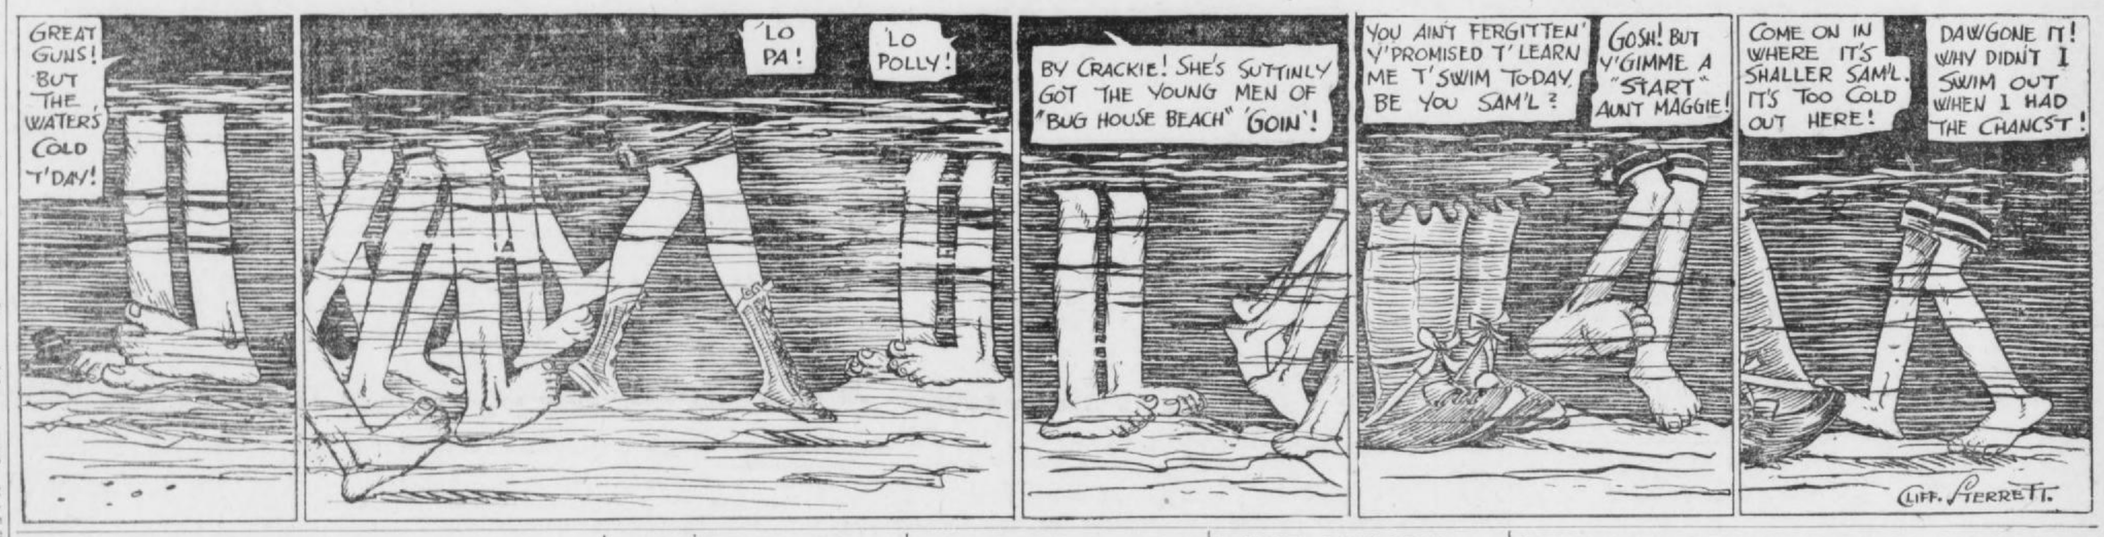
Just a Little Glimpse Below the Surface



Kniseley on Southern Hurlers Explains Peculiarity of Hitters

PETE KNISELEY, outfielder for Birmingham, undertakes to explain the good showing some of the pitchers make in this circuit, only to fall down when they get into the big show; also why Southern leaguers hit well in the majors. Says Pete:

"The Southern League is the hardest place in the country to bat up in the .300 list. No wonder a player hits higher in the major league than in the Southern.

"In the majors, the pitchers do not exert themselves until real danger faces them. When the game is progressing without heavy hitting, the pitchers serve the ball over and give you a chance to swat it, hoping that it will go into one of the fielders' hands. But not here.

"From the beginning of the game until the finish, the Southern League pitchers work at top speed. As the result, the batter has a poorer opportunity to make a high mark. But I attribute the many ascensions in the Southern to this fact. Unless a man is of wonderful physique, he is unable to twirl nine innings, putting his greatest effort on every toss. There are a few who are able to stand the pace. Elmer Brown is a twirler of this class, while Bill Prough is another.

"But the average pitcher is able to stand the gaff for six or seven innings. Then when he weakens the batters feast on the offerings and frequently drive him from the mound. But, of course, there are clever pitchers in the Southern. Hardgrove and Foxen do not pitch hard until there is danger and are very successful.

"I believe that a .300 batsman in the Southern can duplicate the feat in the majors."

KNISELEY speaks truly both in respect to the pitching and batting. It has long been noted as a peculiar fact that recruits from the Southern League and the Pacific Coast League seldom have batted less in the majors than in the minors. Under ordinary circumstances, it would be fair to discount the average recruit's minor league batting by 10 to 20 points when he gets to the real class, but Daubert and Wheat both have batted better in fast company than they did in the bushes; Charles Stengel has become one of the heaviest clouters in the National and Red Smith is holding his own.

All of them are from the Southern, and probably Kniseley has the right answer. The explanation of the ability of Coast leaguers to hit in the majors up to their Coast standards has been that the heavy winds in some cities and the dampness in others on the Coast keep the batting down to a minimum, and a man who can hit in that country can hit anywhere.

THE tendency of young pitchers from the South to throw their whole strength into every ball delivered has also been noted by many observers. Brooklyn has an illustration of that very mistake in Frank Allen, who persists in working with all his might in every inning, with the result that when he is in a tight place he has comparatively little reserve strength with which to extricate himself.

An even more pronounced case of the same sort was furnished by Bill Burns, who is a native of Texas, but got his start on the Coast. Bill was one of the most powerful men that ever broke into baseball, but he did not know how to conserve his energy. He was at different periods with Washington, Detroit and Cincinnati, and with all his record was the same. He had the habit of blowing up at the end of the seventh or eighth inning, and, if the game ever went more than nine innings, it was a dead sure bet that Bill had nothing but his glove and spikes left for the tenth.

Nap Rucker used to fall for the same foolish policy in his callow days, but Nap has become old and wise and uses no more exertion now than is necessary, although he admits it took years for the light to break on him.

M'GRAW HINTS THAT GOLF COST MATHEWSON BEATING

PITTSBURG, PA., Aug. 8.—One of Giants was asked just before the New York team left Pittsburg for Cincinnati why McGraw did not take Mathewson out of the box in the fifth inning Wednesday, when seven runs were batted off his delivery.

"I think Mac wanted to impress something on Christy," said the Giant. "McGraw has been arguing all along against his pitchers playing golf. He does not object to the sport for infielders or outfielders, but he claims it does the pitchers no good, and he has tried to make Matty cut it out. McGraw claims that handling a golf stick tires the muscles in a pitcher's hands and wrists."

JACK JOHNSON BARRED FROM BOXING IN PARIS

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—Jack Johnson will not be permitted to box in this country. The "American Boxing Federation" has requested the French Federation of prohibit Johnson, the American negro pugilist, from fighting in France and that body has decided to grant the request.

FIGHT MANAGER IMPROVING.

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 8.—Larney Lichtenstein, local manager of fighters, who on Monday underwent an operation at the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, where he had two ribs taken out, is recovering so rapidly that he intends making the trip to Winnipeg on August 14 to be with Steve Ketchel for his fight there. Doc Briggs performed the operation, and it was very successful.

THOMPSON OR LOVE TO PITCH SECOND GAME

By Joe Agler.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 8.—Manager Smith hasn't decided whether Thompson or Love will pitch against the Vols to-day, but it will be one of them. Slim is eager for another crack at the enemy, and is sure he can lick them without trouble. Chapman will catch.

We lost another tough one yesterday, and it looks as if the jinx were closing in on us again. With the score tied up in the tenth inning, Dent was taken out to allow Price, a left-hander, to pitch to Callahan and Spratt, both batting on that side, with Williams on second and one out.

The move looked like the proper one, but Callahan spoiled everything with a long drive that scored Williams and knocked us ou of a hard-fought game. Dent pitched his usual fine game, and Harry Holland's hit drove in our only tally.

Yesterday was "Business Men's Day," and there was a big parade of automobiles, and the players of both teams and a band. About 4,000 were at the park, where some field day events were put on beforé the game. Tommy Long beat Dave Callahan in the 100-yard dash, doing it in 11 seconds, which is some fast time without sprinting togs on. Harry Chapman won the throwing contest from Smith, of Atlanta, and Young and Beck, of Nashville.

JOCKEY CLAIMS HE WAS OFFERED $1,000 TO 'PULL'

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Jockey Wilson threw a commotion into sporting circles here to-day by declaring that he had been approached with an offer of a bribe to throw a race recently at the Belmont track meeting.

The stewards refused to comment upon it, as the matter will be sifted by the officials. The story involves another jockey, a friend of Wilson, who acted as an intermediary, and a well-known Bowery politician.

Wilson's specific statement was to the effect that a man named Reed, who has been warned off the track a number of times, approached him at the Belmont track and offered him $1,000 to pull Working Lad in a race on June 24. The stewards, it is said, have exonerated Wilson. No action has as yet been taken against the Bowery politician, but it is known that if he can not clear himself he will be asked to absent himself in future from all meetings given under the association's auspices.

COLE QUITS COLUMBUS TEAM; MAY JOIN FEDERALS

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. 8.—Because Manager Hinchman fined and chased him off the field here, after Umpire Cahill had lifted him from the game, "King" Cole to-day asserted that he was done with pitching for the Columbus team. He says he's going to a nunnamed Federal League club.

TOMMY DIXON FALLS FROM RING IN SEVENTH ROUND

JOPLIN, MO., Aug. 8.—An injury received by Tommy Dixon, of Kansas City, during a fight here last night with Freddie Cole, of Indianapolis, caused the contest, scheduled for fifteen rounds, to terminate in the seventh round. Dixon fell through the ropes to the floor, injuring his arm.

RED SOX RECALL PLAYERS.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The Boston Red Sox to-day exercised their right of option on three players in the American Association. Infielder Krug, of the Indianapolis team, and Infielder Scott and Pitcher Brant, of St. Paul, recently sold with the right of repurchase, were recalled.

DENT PASSES 3 BATTERS IN 53 INNINGS

WHEN Elliott Dent walked Jack Spratt in the first inning of yesterday's game in Nashville, the Atlanta pitcher interrupted slightly the progress of a very fine bit of record-making in this league.

It was his third base on balls in fifty-three innings.

Before the game started yesterday, Dent's record, beginning July 18, was two bases on balls in forty-four innings. This included a "long run" of thirty-three innings, or practically three full games, without a walk being issued.

The big right-hander is going at top speed just now, and his control is well-nigh perfect. He doesn't get himself in the hole very often, either, and it is a rare thing for the batsman to be able to take a tight grip on terra firma and wait confidently for the next one to come over. Only the toughest kind of luck and very feeble hitting support cost the big boy another win yesterday.

RED SOX RECALL FOUR; BUY CATCHER M'NALLY

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The Boston Red Sox to-day exercised their right of option on three players in the American Association. Infielder Krug, of the Indianapolis team, and Infielder Scott and Pitcher Brantt, of St. Paul, recently sold with the right of repurchase, were recalled.

Michael J. McNally, shortstop for the Utica team, New York State League, also was bought by the Red Sox.

LANGFORD AND JEANNETTE TO CLASH IN LONG BOUT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8.—Promoter McCarey last night received messages from Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette accepting his terms for a twenty-round bout. In all probability the date set for the heavyweight event will be October 7.

"I would like to see the question of supremacy between Langford and Jeannette settled," explained the promoter. "That's my reason for making the match. In a scheduled twenty-round go in my ring with Eyton refereeing, the two blacks will have to extend themselves. I will never stage a mixed match between a black and a white boxer. So long as the colored men battle among themselves I will put no handicap in their way."

All doubt as to Wolgast's willingness to box on the September date was removed yesterday when the former lightweight champion telegraphed as follows:

"Will positively meet the winner of the Dundee-White fight of August 12. Hope it will be Dundee, as I want to show the public the difference between a real fighter and a jumping jack."

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

HOW SWEET.

How sweet to be a manager and run
a baseball team—
At least when you are winning games it is a blissful dream.
But when the team is losing, is his job a thing of joy?
Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi,
Oi yoi, Oi yoi!

Whether Ed Reulbach or Eddie Stack is the better athlete is yet to be determined, but it is a well-known fact that the Cubs never again will own Reulbach's equal as a badger fighter.

We are in receipt of a song written by that far-famed pugilist, Packey McFarland. The song is entitled, "I'd Like to Know." So would a whole lot of promoters, pugilists, managers and other insects.

Not that we are an expert on songology, but after reading Mr. McFarland's ballad we are convinced that he is a lightweight.

If Joe Jackson were to do all his batting at Shibe Park he would be chased to the minors or (worse yet) to St. Louis.

It is said that the said Joe Jackson has hit over .400 at the White Sox Park this season. Joe never would be mistaken for a White Sock—not even by a blind man.

There is charity even in baseball. For instance, Tom Lynch has handed a protested game to Joe Tinker.

Horace Fogel avers that he wants to put a baseball team in New York. This leads one to suspect that Horace has not heard of the adventures of Frank Chance.

Washington fans having presented Walter Johnson with a loving cup filled with money, it is said that Columbus fans will hand King Cole a shaving mug filled with lather.

It is said that fighters can't come back, but every day we note otherwise. For instance, there is Jack Helmen, the heavyweight. As he was leaving the place some philanthropist said: "Wait a minute, Jack! We're going to buy another." He came back.

KRAZY KAT :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: Krazy Sure Is a Fool Cat

ONLY THREE LEFT OF CUBS' OLD GUARD

By O. B. Keeler.

A COUPLE of days ago the papers carried a bit of baseball news to the effect that Edward Reulbach had been traded by the Cubs for Eddie Stack, of Brooklyn.

Of itself, that wasn't a very exciting bit of information. Neither Mr. Stack nor Mr. Reulbach has been exceeding any speed limits this year—even in Philadelphia.

But aside from that—

Say, did you notice a queer little nip of regret when you read that small item?

• • •

IT just marked the passing of one more of the few remaining original Cubs; the wonderful clan gathered by Frank Selee and molded by Frank Chance into what many will always believe to have been the greatest baseball machine of all time. And those who sing the praises of the Athletics and the rest have at last to admit that Connie Mack and the others have yet to win 116 games in a season.

• • •

BUT that's by the way.

You remember the Original Cubs, don't you? Let's see—can we recall the line-up of the smashing years of 1906-7-8?

Well, back of the wood was Johnny Kling, aided and abetted by Pat Moran—what little aiding and abetting Johnny needed in those halcyon days.

The slab staff? We'll match that, now, against any in history. Brown, Reulbach, Overall and Pfeister for the regulars, with Chick Frazer and Carl Lundgren in reserve. Frazer was a celebrated chicken fancier, you remember, and Carl could pitch better with the thermometer at 32 than most pitchers could on July 4.

The Infield—Chance and Evers and Tinker and Steinfeldt; and the rip and swing of the old Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance that made the pace for all their day.

The Outfield—Schulte and Slagle and Sheckard; the celebrated S. S. S. combination, with the Rabbit to top the batting list and Artie Hofman to fill in on occasion.

• • •

WELL, well—we'll take stock of the remains.

Schulte and Evers, and Orvie Overall, who is plugging along on the come-back trail after a couple of years' defection.

Reulbach made the fourth of the Old Guard, until the other day. Big Ed hadn't done much the last few years. But don't forget that three times Big Ed topped the whole list of slabmen in the National League, and that when Brown and Mathewson were in their prime.

Four fighting Grizzlies,
Sturdy as can be—
Big Ed was traded,
Then there were three.

Who'll be the next of the Old Guard to pass on?

• • •

WITH brief reference to the latest chapter in that sad serial, "Losing 'Em by One Run," it appears from a somewhat scrambled telegraphic account that Bill Smith and Gilbert Price came together in a bean-on collision after yesterday's game in Nashville.

Price appears to have been the one to bounce back. In fact, the report has it that Smith ordered him out of his uniform indefinitely.

The row was about the curve ball Price dealt to Callahan in the tenth inning, on which Dave Callahan doubled for the winning run.

At this distance, far be it from us to make wise criticisms of either Price or his manager.

Except this much.

If Price crossed up the manager on explicit instructions, he deserves all he got.

On the other hand, if Smith took out on his pitcher the soreness incident to losing a hard-fought battle—Price having been sent in cold and doing his best—it looks as if the manager was overly severe.

CHANCE TURNS ACTOR WITH MOVING PICTURE CONCERN

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Frank Chance, manager of the Highlanders, is now an actor. He has been engaged by a moving picture company to take the leading part in a scenario entitled "The Peerless Leader," some of the scenes of which will be laid at the Polo Grounds, New York. Chance has ben rehearsing the role in a Jersey City studio since Monday. Catcher Sweeney, Outfielder Daniels and Hartzell will also appear in the film.

Frank Whitney Due Here To-day

Charley White Arrives Saturday

By Left Hook.

FRANK WHITNEY, the fighting carpenter from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is due here at 11 o'clock this morning for his coming 10-round bout with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night.

A wire from Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, informs us that the Chicago boy will be here to-morrow morning. With both fighters on the battle ground local fans will have a chance to see the coming rivals in their training grind.

Whitney will pitch his tent at once in the Atlanta Athletic Club, where he intends to do the rest of his preliminary work for what he considers to be the most important fight of his career. Frank will do most of his boxing with Jimmy Perry, and the welterweight should be a valuable aid to him. The Cedar Rapids boy will also get a couple of lighter boys to box with.

WHAT Whitney is after is speed. Frank learned while in Chicago that his coming opponent is about the best piece of fighting machinery in the world. He also realizes that a victory over Charley will put him among the leaders of the 133-pounders. Chances of this kind don't come to boxers every day. The promoters of the Atlanta Athletic Association have given Whitney the opportunity he has been pinning for during the past year.

• • •

ON the other hand, Charley White is now the most watched boxer in the world to-day. Tom McCarey has his eyes on him. Tom is seriously thinking of putting White on with the winner of the Cross-Rivers set-to on Labor Day, and a victory over Whitney will be another feather in the Chicago boy's cap. Jim Coffroth wants White to box Tommy Murphy in his arena, but is awaiting the outcome of Charley's scrap with Whitney. The Western promoters have been after White for the past year, but Nate Lewis wants his protege to pick up a few pounds in weight before sending him after the bigger boys.

CHARLEY is still young and has a bright future. White was 22 years old March 25 and has been boxing five years. During that period never has a boxer succeeded in stopping him, or better than that, no boxer has ever even floored him.

When it is taken into consideration that White has met the toughest lightweights in the world, this record is surely a remarkable one.

WHITNEY is a fighter of the opposite type to Charley. Frank loves to bore in and fight at close quarters. Once inside a man's guard he works his hands like a pair of piston rods, hoping to bring his man to the canvas.

It is also a fact that Whitney is a much improved boxer over the boy who was seen here about a year ago. Since leaving here Frank had about ten battles and managed to win them all.

• • •

THE Cedar Rapids boy is also aware of the fact that he is getting along in years and knows that if he intends to get any place in the boxing world now is the time. Next Wednesday Whitney will get his chance. If he loses, fans can rest assured that he will give them the very best he has. Whitney has yet to disappoint a fight gathering. This afternoon Whitney will be at the Atlanta Athletic Club working out for the match.

Charley will arrive here to-morrow morning and arrangements have already been made to have him do his training in the Ponce De Leon ball park.

THE other two bouts to be staged Wednesday have been completed. Charley Lee and Kid Young signed for their return engagement yesterday and these boys are expected to put up a corking mill.

The semi-wind-up will be between Mike Saul and Eddie Hanlon. The boys have agreed to weigh 133 pounds at 6 o'clock, and at this weight Mike should have a great chance of winning. Both bouts are scheduled to go 10 rounds, making 30 rounds of boxing for the evening's entertainment.

Tickets for the boxing show were placed on sale yesterday. Prices, $1, $1.50 and $2.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Gunboat Smith, of California, and Fireman Jim Flynn, of Pueblo, Colo., will clash in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden, New York, to-night. Betting fans have made Smith a 6 to 5 favorite, but admirers of Flynn think that the fireman's bulldog courage will carry him through to victory.

Frank Whitney is expected to arrive to-day for his 10-round engagement with Charlie White at the Auditorium-Armory on Wednesday, August 13. White will be here some time to-morrow.

Eddie Hanlon started hard work yesterday for his coming 10-round set-to with Mike Saul next Wednesday. Hanlon wants to be in the best of shape as he realizes that a victory over Mike will put him in line for some big matches. They have posted a $50 forfeit to weigh 138 pounds at 6 o'clock.

• • •

Mike Kelly, Indianapolis featherweight, is in Atlanta at the present time in search of matches with some of our 122-pounders. Kelly says he is willing to meet some of the lesser lights first in order to prove to local fans that he is made of the right stuff.

• • •

Coast fans are showing much interest in the coming Jack White-Johnny Kilbane bout scheduled to take place in Tom McCarey's arena on August 12. These two boys put up a corking mill for twenty rounds about a month ago. Ad Wolgast has agreed to meet the winner some time in September.

• • •

Billy Nolan, former manager of Willie Ritchie, says that the champion will never meet Ad Wolgast. Nolan says that Willie fears Ad and does not want any more of his game.

• • •

Over in Paris they are certainly picking the lemons for Georges Carpentier. Yesterday they pitted the Frenchman against a boxer named Williams and Carpentier stopped him in four rounds Who next?

• • •

Leach Cross and Rivers have agreed to weigh 135 pounds ringside for their 20-round affair at Los Angeles on Labor Day. Each boxer is to receive 30 per cent of the gross receipts. The winner will probably be sent against Willie Ritchie.

Jack (Twin) Sullivan, of Boston, has signed articles to box Soldier Kearns, the Brooklyn heavyweight, in a 10-round go at the Queensberry A. C., Philadelphia, on the night of August 22.

• • •

Kid Young is getting into great shape for his coming battle with Charlie Lee. The "fighting newsboy" is doing his boxing with Mike Saul and they certainly are going at it in real fashion.

KRAMER BEATS CLARKE.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 8.—Frank Kramer, the world's champion cyclist, proved his right to the title when he deffeated Jackie Clarke, the Australian "Rocket" in two out of three heats of a one-mile match race at the Veldrome here last night.

GILBERT PRICE SUSPENDED AFTER GAME

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 8.—It is understood nere that Manager Billy Smith of the Crackers and Gilbert Price, his star left-hand hurler, had a warm argument after yesterday's game, regarding the curve ball which Price pitched to Callahan in the tenth inning. Dave pasted the pill for a couple of bases and the winning run. Price had been sent in by Smith to take Dent's place in front of Callahan, who is a left-hand hitter, and Spratt, also batting from that side.

It is not plain just what the contention was, but it seems the manager told Price at the end of it that he was under suspension. Price went to the slab without much time to warm up, and that was the reason generally ascribed to his lack of effectiveness, but Smith seemed to take another view of it.

Smith had a short conference with Manager Schwartz concerning Jud Daley, but the boss of the Vols was not in the mood to shake up his team, and the result of the first game probably cemented that position.

JACK BARRY FIRST OF MACKMEN TO BE HURT

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—The first serious accident of the season to Connie Mack's famous infield has resulted in Shortstop Jack Barry being put on the hospital list with a bad shoulder, caused by his bumping into Catcher O'Neil at the plate in Wednesday's game. Sports and Such

NOT TRUE.

ONE day I wrote a story—a real pippin, on the square—
And clubs were formed to root for me; they boosted me for fair.
They bought up all the papers and wrote letters to my Boss;
They told him how they loved me and how much they'd feel my loss.
I had a fair young "sal'ry"—it was doubled twice and thrice;
They presented me with autos and tons of shirt-front ice;
I had eleven loving cups, a house and lot—a prize—
And I was chased with offers from a lot of vaudeville guys.
Then Senator O'Gorman, with another tony gent,
Insisted I should call at once upon the President.
I just was mitting Woodrow, when I heard the bell-hop's call!
I'd dreamed, instead of batting dope, that I could bat a ball.

Timid Kid Asked Griff for a Job

Engel Promises to Become a Star

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—During the early spring days of 1912 a young ball tosser applied for admittance to the ball park in Washington, where Clark Griffith, Walter Johnson, Herman Schaefer and other Nationals were romping about. He was too bashful to speak to anybody, just watched the athletes perform.

The next morning the same kid was on hand. He had read about the great Johnson, Walsh, Coombs, Bender, Wood and other pitchers. He was a pitcher, too. Rather, on the lots in Washington he curved 'em for the semi-pro teams, and as he usually won, he thought he'd like to become acquainted with the big leaguers.

The kid chatted with members of the Nationals, asked who was manager, and if he could talk to him. "Griffith is manager; he's standing over there," informed one athlete to the youngster. The kid walked over to Griffith.

"I'm a pitcher. I'd like to toss a few to your hitters," was his opening sentence to Griffith.

"Where do you hail from?" flashed back the Fox.

"Right here! Pitch on Saturdays and haven't lost a game for a year," returned the youngster.

"Go to the dressing room, put on a suit and let me take a look at you," answered Griffith.

• • •

THE youth appeared, went to the hill and pitched during the batting practice.

The players gave Griff the merry ha-ha. They wanted to know where the boss plucked the novice. When the ball came near the plate usually the sluggers lifted it over the heads of the outfielders.

All the time, though, Griff was watching his new entrant. He saw that he had a lot of speed and a fast breaking curve. But the kid was awkward and didn't have the proper delivery.

As the youngster improved with each day and began to show dazzing speed, he was introduced to his idol, Walter Johnson. Always chummy with aspiring kids, Johnson took an interest in the new acquisition. He showed him how to throw the fast one, the movement with the shoulder, how to curve the one down around the knees and the fast break high on the inside.

After a few lessons Griff and the players were surprised. In a few weeks the batters began popping the fast ones and hitting easy grounders on the curves.

• • •

WHEN it came time to make the first trip Griffith asked his strange tosser how he'd like to make a trip with the team.

"Do you think I can pitch?" was his answer.

"I don't know; I'll try you out," returned the boss.

The Nationals made several trips, and when a game was practically lost the kid got a chance to show himself. Sometimes he got away all right, sometimes he didn't.

The 1912 season was over. The kid had a bunch of experience. This past spring he was a regular member of the team, was along on the practice tour and watched every movement made by his favorite, Johnson.

Finally the kid got a chance to show himself at the start. He won, allowing only a few hits and a run or two. Then it was that Griffith realized he had a wonderful pitcher.

Recently Joe Engel beat the St. Louis Browns 2 to 1 with three scattered hits, and, according to press accounts of the game, showed almost as much stuff as Walter Johnson. Joe Engel was the timid kid who introduced himself to Griffith in the spring of 1912.

MAJOR CALLAWAY OFF TO SEE CLARK GRIFFITH NOW

Major Frank Callaway, president of the Atlanta ball club, is a lively little traveler these days.

Yesterday Major Callaway, who had just returned from Chattanooga, set out for Washington to confer with Clark Griffith concerning the terms of the agreement now existing between the Senators and the Crackers.

It is not understood that there is any disputed point to be settled, or that anything is to be done with reference to Clark and Long, but that with the claiming date close at hand Major Callaway wished to be in perfect accord with the Old Fox as to all the provisions of the treaty, so that the Atlanta club could deal intelligently with all its players.

ANOTHER PHENOM MAY GO UP TO MAJOR LEAGUES

CALGARY, ALBERTA, Aug. —Jack Roche, Calgary catcher, seems sure to go to one of the big league teams. The White Sox, Cubs, Cardinals and Yankees are all bidding for the youngster. He is batting .354 and fielding .986. Comiskey made the first bid, but no price was set. Murphy has since requested the price, but has been asked to make an offer. Indianapolis, Louisville, Mobile and Los Angeles also are after him. The sale is likely to be made to-day.

BURWELL VICTOR OVER FOES OF TAX REFORM

Combine of 'Drys' With Anti-Revisionists Broken When House Votes to Reconsider Bills.

The combination formed by "dry" members of the House and the members who oppose all tax revision to defeat bills favored by Speaker W. H. Burwell and Governor Slaton was broken, for the present at least, Friday morning, when the House voted to reconsider its action Wednesday in defeating the constitutional amendments limiting the school levy to 2 1-2 mills and the pension levy to 1 1-2 mills.

The votes on the motions to reconsider, which were offered by Fullbright, of Burke, were 86 to 57 and 89 to 58, respectively.

The action of the House is regarded as a victory for Speaker Burwell, and indicates that some of his bills, which are administration measures, may be passed in spite of the opposition tax reform foes and "dry" members said to be moved by a desire for revenge because of failure to get the Webb bill out of committee.

Bills To Be Put on Passage.

With the action of the House reconsidered, the two bills—the school levy and the pension levy—undoubtedly will be brought up for passage at this session. It is understood they may be placed on the calendar for Saturday or Monday. The placing of the bill is solely in the hands of the Rules Committee, and while its members would not convict themselves, one member stated positively that the House would be given an opportunity to pass the bills during the present session.

Speaker Burwell has been hard at work trying to heal the wounds caused by his ruling Wednesday, when he declared the Kidd resolution, calling the Hixon-Searcy bill out of committee, out of order, and indications are he has succeeded.

The fight against Fullbright's motion to reconsider was feeble, though its voting strength was fairly large. Wallace Miller, of Bibb County, led the opposition to the motion. He declared the fixing of 2 1-2 mills as the limit of levy for school purposes would result in appropriating that amount each year, inasmuch as money is always appropriated up to the limit.

Mr. Kidd Is Turned Down.

Mr. Fullbright made but a short speech in favor of his motion, declaring the opponents of the bills had defeated them by spreading the erroneous impression that they would increase taxation.

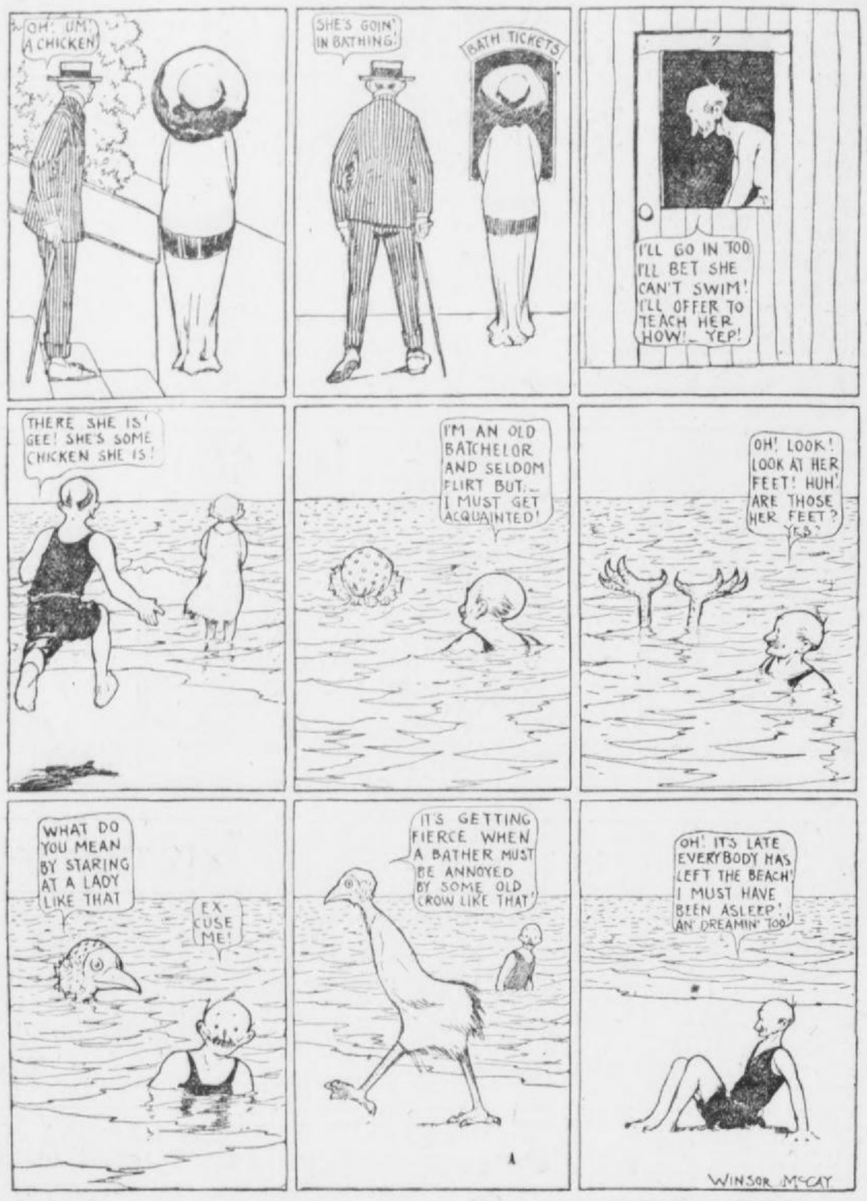
Mr. Kidd, of Baker, tried to lead a fight against Speaker Burwell at the opening of the Friday morning session. His effort failed, because Speaker Burwell refused to recognize Mr. Kidd. When the report of the Rules Committee was submitted to the House, the Speaker asked the usual question: "Is there objection to the adoption of the report?"

"I object," shouted Mr. Kidd, in a tone that could have been heard a block.

"The Chair hears none," announced the Speaker.

Had Mr. Kidd been able to defeat the report of the Rules Committee, which fixes the work for the day, it was his evident intention to attempt to again introduce his resolution calling the Hixon-Searcy bill out of committee.

MIDSUMMER DAY DREAMS



3,000 EXPECTED AT GROCERS' OUTING

Elaborate Program of Recreation to Make Warm Springs Picnic Greatest Ever Held.

Plans are being made for the annual excursion to Warm Springs, Ga., Wednesday, August 13, of the Retail Grocers and Marketmen's Association. It is expected the outing will be the greatest the organization has ever held. Francis J. Kamper, chairman of the committee on arrangements, has issued an announcement of the picnic.

Nothing has been left undone by the committee. They expect more than 3,000 persons to attend the outing, and have made arrangements to care for all. Many family picnics have been arranged. There will be bathing, bowling, dancing and a baseball game between the associated grocers and the clothiers' league.

Through the efforts of Mr. Kamper and his committee, special arrangements have been made for women and children. The management of the Warm Springs Hotel has offered the use of the hotel to the crowds, and those who do not care for the more strenuous pastimes of baseball, bowling and bathing, can spend the day on the wide verandas and shady walks of the hotel and grounds.

Special trains to carry the crowds will leave Union Station, on the A., B. and A. Railroad for Warm Springs Wednesday morning at 7 and 7:15 o'clock. A round trip fare of $1 for adults and 50 cents for children will be charged.

Pigs Gorge Candy As Children Envy

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—The Refuge Home Farm, a municipal charity for homeless children, has a fine lot of thoroughbred pigs, which are to be gorged daily with chocolates and other choice confectionery, as a result of recent raids by the food inspection division of the Health Department.

To-day the refuge farm wagon carted to the farm for their delectation, nearly 1,500 pounds of milk chocolates, 3,000 pounds of peanuts, 850 pounds of shelled cocoanuts, 15 barrels of sugar and about 20 barrels of other odds and ends, including flavoring extracts used in making candy. These represented some of the condemnations made at several candy factories last week.

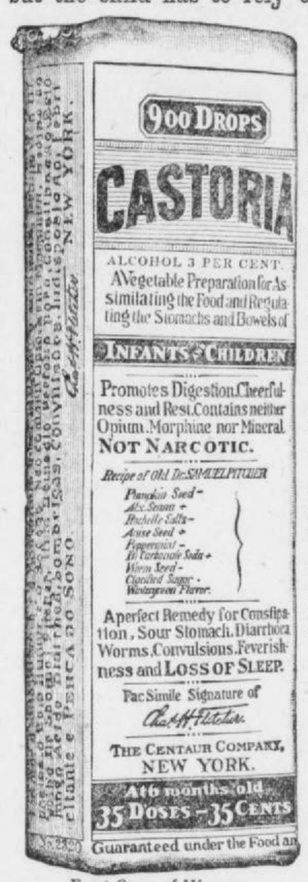
The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines.

It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed conterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Letters from Prominent Druggists addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Central Drug Co., of Detroit, Mich., says: "We consider your Castoria in a class distinct from patent medicines and commend it."

Christy Drug Stores, of Pittsburg, Pa., say: "We have sold your Castoria for so many years with such satisfactory results that we cannot refrain from saying a good word for it when we get a chance."

Jacob Bros., of Philadelphia, Pa., say: "We take pleasure in recommending Fletcher's Castoria as one of the oldest and best of the preparations of the kind upon the market."

Hess & McCann, of Kansas City, Mo., say: "Your Castoria always gives satisfaction. We have no substitute for it and only sell 'The Kind You Have Always Bought,' the original."

The Voegeli Bros., of Minneapolis, Minn., say: "We wish to say that we have at all times a large demand for Fletcher's Castoria at all of our three stores and that it gives universal satisfaction to our trade."

Polk Miller Drug Co., of Richmond, Va., says: "Your Castoria is one of the most satisfactory preparations we have ever handled. It seems to satisfy completely the public demand for such an article and is steadily creating a growing sale by its merit."

P. A. Capdau, of New Orleans, La., says: "We handle every good home remedy demanded by the public and while our shelves are thoroughly equipped with the best of drugs and proprietary articles, there are few if any which have the unceasing sale that your Castoria has."

M. C. Dow, of Cincinnati, Ohio, says: "When people in increasing numbers purchase a remedy and continue buying it for years; when it passes the fad or experimental stage and becomes a household necessity, then it can be said its worth has been firmly established. We can and do gladly offer this kind of commendation to Fletcher's Castoria."

Bulgars Insist Turks Evacuate Adrianople

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, Aug. 8.—In a communication issued to-day by the Bulgarian Government it was announced that "Bulgaria will begin demobilization of her army as soon as a peace treaty is signed, upon the understanding that the powers favor the Enos-Midia line as the southern Bulgarian boundary." This would give Adrianople to Bulgaria.

It is doubtful if Bulgaria could carry on another war against Turkey. She has lost 100,000 men and her national treasury is depleted.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 8.—The Turkish Government to-day issued a manifesto calling upon the nation to oppose vigorously the evacuation of Adrianople.

Queen Mary Stops Gambling at Court

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The gambling lid is on at Buckingham Palace. The quiet little games with which the servants were wont to while away their time and spare farthings are no more. As a result, grumblings are loud and frequpent. This is due to rules issued by Queen Mary, whose anti-gambling views are well known in court circles.

A strike of all the servants at the palace was narrowly averted a few days ago when the Queen decided to permit the servants to draw lots to see who shall accompany her on the royal yacht.

State Wins Point in Diggs Slavery Case

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—The fourth day of the trial of Maury I. Diggs, former State Architect charged with white slavery, began to-day with the defense laboring under a decided handicap. The first witnesses were on hand ready to testify as to the trip to Reno on which Diggs and Drew Caminetti, son of the Commissioner General of Immigration, are charged with taking Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris for immoral purposes.

Judge Van Fleet ruled that the characters and reputations of the two girls would have no bearing on the case.

Man, 81, Has Kept Diary For 59 Years

SPOKANE, Aug. 8.—Henry Ballinger, an old-time resident of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, a man close to eighty-one years of age, to-day offers a challenge to the world for having kept a diary continuously for the longest period of time.

His record reaches if short while over fifty-nine years.

Smallest Kingdom

Monaco is the smallest kingdom in the world. It is only fifty-three and a quarter miles in circuit, including Monte Carlo. The capital is Monaco, perched on a rocky promontory rising 200 feet above the sea level.

Monaco has undergone fifty-eight sieges, but has never lost her independence except for a few years at a time. In 500 B. C. Hectate of Miletus wrote an account of the city now called Monaco, and declared it to be so old that the people had lost all tradition of its origin.

Monte Carlo is famous for its magnificent casino, the most gorgeous gambling establishment in the world. The town of Monte Carlo in winter is a health resort, and in summer is noted for its bathing.

East Point Oil Mill Sold for $157,500; Lease $140,000

Swift & Co. Trade With Southern Cotton Oil Co.—50-Year Tenancy on Railroad Lot—Other Notes.

The Southern Cotton Oil Company has sold to Swift & Co., packers, its small mill at East Point, together with 13 55-100 acres of land, for $157,500. The sale was handled direct. Report of it was confirmed Friday by W. M. Hutchinson, manager of the Southern Cotton Oil Company.

The oil concern retains its larger mill at Fort McPherson. It has 80 mills in various parts of the South.

Located on the north side of the Central of Georgia Railway, the tract is at the dividing line of the tract formerly owned by the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company and the property of the Gate City Oil Company. The line extends 1,200 feet to the property of the Old Dominion Guano Company, northerly 263 feet, easterly 1,203, southerly 719. An adjoining tract, 63 by 206 feet, in Land Lot 131, Fourteenth District, is included.

Will Lease for Fifty Years.

Judge William T. Newman signed an order in the United States District Court Friday approving the lease for 50 years of a tract of railroad frontage on Nelson street, near Mangum, from the Georgia Terminal Company to the Investment Company of the South. The terms of the lease are $2,500 for the first ten years, $3,500 for the second ten years and $4,000 for the last twenty years, or an aggregate rental of $140,000.

The condition is inserted that the lessee is to erect certain warehouses which shall be bought at the end of the period by the Georgia Terminal Company at the then market value. The plot has 350 feet of frontage.

The Georgia Terminal Company is a sort of holding company for the A., B. & A. Railroad, and the Investment Company of the South is the concern interested in the Walker street development.

Currier Parcel Transferred.

W. Bayne Gibson and A. B. Chapman have sold to Mrs. Flora M. Smedley for $10,500 a 57 by 165-foot property on Currier street, 200 feet east of Courtland, having bought the same recently from J. Fred Lewis for $6,000. The place is 45 Currier street.

Transfer on West Peachtree.

Dr. J. Cheston King has given a warranty deed to the West End Bank on his recently completed house on the west side of West Peachtree, 130 feet north of Twelfth street, for $5,000. The lot is 50 by 200 feet.

Frank West's Return.

H. F. West, of the A. J. & H. F. West Real Estate Agency, has returned from an extensive trip through Canada and the West and was back in his office Friday ready for business. Mr. West visited Winnipeg before the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, and inspected numerous properties in the various cities which he touched.

To Bid on Comfort Station.

Local contractors are considering the preparation of estimates on the cost of erecting a public comfort station at the Peters Building over the Whitehall street viaduct. L. C. Green and others who have been working for the station think the structure can be built for about $8,000. It is the intention to start work January 1, 1914. The local park board had indorsed the project.

Comment on Deposit Plan.

Commenting on the suggestion of Robert F. Maddox at Washington that the Government money to be placed in Atlanta banks will not be used for speculative purposes, a leading real estate man said:

"I know of no chance to use any of this money in speculative transactions. This money is primarily for moving the crops, and when the crops are moved there will be plenty of money for the real estate market. There is no doubt about that, and the autumn business should be unusually good."

Mr. Maddox has been conferring with other bankers and Secretary McAdoo on the plan to place $50,000,000 in Southern and Western banks. He is asking for $2,500,000 for Atlanta banks. The vast agricultural sections, he points out, are easily accessible to Atlanta, and it is appropriate that Atlanta banks should handle the money.

PROPERTY TRANSFERS.

Warranty Deeds.

Orient Road Shows $160,000 in Earnings

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Bondholders and noteholders of the Kansas City and Orient Railway have received a circular from the reorganization committee stating that the plan which the committee had hoped to issue earlier in the year had to be amended owing to the financial situation abroad and in America.

The committee reports that earnings of the line in the United States from June 30, 1912, to June 30, 1913, will approximate $160,000. The committee feels justified in adopting a policy of building into Kansas City as soon as possible.

COTTON GOSSIP

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma clear and hot."

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows part cloudy over eastern half of belt and south Texas; generally fair elsewhere; general showers in eastern half of belt; none in western half. Indications are still for some rain coming in the west over Sunday.

Rainfall The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "After making full allowance for the fact that cotton is a dry weather plant and thrives on sunshine, the talent is forced to admit that drouth in parts of Oklahoma and Texas, accompanied by such high temperatures as those of yesterday, is injuring the crop every day. However, most traders on the short side have learned not to accept damage reports at face value, and when, in the face of a fair forecast for the west, the barometer lines revealed low pressure of the Gulf of Mexico, the talent promptly exploited storm formation as a promise of rain and weather students on the floor helped by asserting that extremely hot weather in Oklahoma is simply a forerunner of rain and lower temperatures. Thus the market worked down after the bulge of Wednesday.

"Meanwhile, Manchester is not sending any encouraging reports, though Liverpool managed to sell 10,000 bales on the spot yesterday. At this time any lack of evidence of trade activity is apt to tell on the raw cotton market, because just now slack demand for the actual makes a poor showing when contrasted with the keen demand in evidence during the past two years.

"The market is very dull and very narrow, speculation has been reduced to a minimum and neither talent nor trade is in a humor to display enterprise. Increasing spot sales at Galveston and Houston indicate that the new crop market is opening up."

The market was sold off after the opening on unofficial reports of rain at Galveston. The early weather map shows no rain and weather experts could not see any in sight, which resulted in an active wave of buying at the outset.

* * *

On the call, Flinn and Gifford bought August. Black, Seidenberg, Hentz and Harden sold. Wilson, Mitchell, Gifford, Flinn and Black bought October. McElroy, Bashford and Hentz sold. Flinn, Wiggin, Watkins, Rait and Gifford bought December. Rothschild, Rosenberg, Black and Orrin sold. Hicks bought January. Bashford, Hentz and Schley sold.

Noon Texas weather: Galveston cloudy, 78; good shower this morning; Taylor, Waco, McKinney, Denison clear, 70; Houston clear, 87. MODERN MILLER CROP REPORT.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—The hot and dry weather which prevailed over a large part of the country this week, while injuring the growing crops, was favorable for harvesting, storage and marketing of winter wheat, and delayed the plowing of land for seeding of wheat in the fall. However, there is no apprehension felt, as there still is ample time for this work with favorable weather conditions. That there is more attention being given to the preparations of the soil and selection of seed is indicated by the larger yields and better quality of winter wheat. Thrashings continue to show larger yields than has been expected and the quality of the grain is of the best.

There is still a steady movement of wheat to market, as the yield is so much larger than has been estimated and that most farmers are willing to part with at least a portion of their crop.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Further liquidation o near positions on a heavy scale caused another bad break this morning in the cotton seed oil market, but shorts bought freely at the decline, particularly of late months, causing the decline.

ABSENCE OF RAINS SENDS COTTON UP

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Uneasiness was again expressed to-day over weather conditions in Texas, and when the cotton market opened, prices were at a net advance of 5 to 11 points from Thursday's final. New crops were the strongest, August showing an advance of 15 points immediately after the opening. The opening quotation was 11.75 and the next figure was 11.85.

There was no rain shown on the map, as had been generally expected and local weather experts failed to see any in sight just at present and the market was bought freely from strong sources. Shorts were also good buyers, and on the rally there seemed to be some cotton for sale as sentiment continues very bearish. Later the market eased off sharply on reports of rain at Galveston and El Paso and less support was in evidence.

Because the detailed weather map failed to show any rains over the western belt, and private reports of deteriorations in Arkansas and Oklahoma caused by the high temperatures and dry weather, the market developed a steady tone during the afternoon session, resulting in a rapid advance in prices from the early low point. Some of the large spot interests continue to buy on all reactions, which is encouraging to the bull element.

The bulls contend if rain does not come in the West within the next week that very serious damage will result and the feeling is now becoming more bullish. The market is very easily influenced on any weather news and prices will be governed accordingly.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—The map shows cloudy weather prevailing over the eastern half of the belt and south Texas; generally fair elsewhere. Showers were quite general east of the River, but none are shown west. Indications are for increasing cloudiness with prospects for precipitation to come on the eastern States over Sunday. Cloudy and showery weather in indicated for the central and eastern States.

Liverpool was poor at first, but rallied on the report of rain in the West. Spot prices 6 points lower; sales 8,000 bales. First traders here were at an advance of about 6 points on nervous covering by shorts on the Government forecast of fair weather to-day and to-morrow in Oklahoma and Texas, but prices soon dropped to last night's closing figures when Galveston reported heavy rain. New York says the declining tendency is due more to the difference of speculation to furnish support than to weather prospects.

Trading is very quiet, waiting for weather developments in the western States over Sunday.

Spot people report the inquiry for early new shipments is still disappointingly slow.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 8.—Continued high temperatures in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas are giving rise to numerous complaints of crop deterioration, some of which are well founded, as numerous sections of this territory have been without rain for weeks. The market does not advance materially because of brilliant reports from the eastern belt, but trade is beginning to note more attentively the complaints and the tone is steady.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We expect lower prices if the rains predicted for the southwest materialize.

Logan & Bryan: In the event of good general rains in the southwest, lower prices will doubtless result.

Miller & Co.: We can see nothing in the situation different from what we have been saying for the past few days, to the effect that this is distinctly a weather market.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The North disturbance will move slowly eastward, causing showers to-night in the Lake region and the Ohio Valley, and on Saturday in the North and Middle Atlantic States. Occasional showers will continue in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States. Temperature changes will not be important during the next thirty-six hours in the region east of the Mississippi River.

General Forecast.

Tennessee—Fair in west, showers in east portion to-night or Saturday; warmer in northeast portion to-night.

Louisiana—Fair in north and west, showers in southeast portion to-night or Saturday.

Texas—Fair to-night and Saturday.

GEORGIA BALE BRINGS 20c.

CORDELE, Aug. 8.—Cordele received its first bale of cotton this morning. It was grown by W. A. Holt, of Crisp County, and easily classed as good middling. The Georgia Cotton Company bid it in for 20 cents.

The ginning season is expected to be well under way in a few days.

Marked Improvement Noted in Wool Trade

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—More inquiry has developed in the wool market during the past week, probably stimulated by the increased demand for lightweight goods, following the recent openings by leading mills. Total sales are estimated at fully 2,000,000 pounds, the business being distributed among the leading houses and covering most of the desirable grades. Primary markets are now well cleaned up except in Ohio, but even there very little is doing and buyers are coming home. Prices here are unchanged.

Liquidation of holdings wherever a profit is shown is the policy in favor and some transfers, it is said, have been made at a very small margin.

Receipts in pounds for the week ended and including Wednesday were as follows:

STOCK MARKET

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Considerable interest was attached to dealings in Union Pacific at the opening of the stock market to-day, this issue beginning ¾ higher. Trading in this stock was very active, but at the end of a half hour all advance had been lost. At the end of forty-five minutes, Union Pacific was ¾ under Thursday's closing.

The list was irregular and the undertone showed uncertainty. Amalgamated Copper advanced ¼, then lost its gain. Steel common was unchanged from Thursday's final, but subsequently declined ⅜.

Among the advances were Utah Copper, ½; Southern Pacific, ¼; Republic Iron and Steel, ¾; Reading, ¼; Pennsylvania, ¼; Denver and Rio Grande, ½; American Locomotive, ½; American Smelting, ¼.

Canadian Pacific advanced a point and then lost ½.

New Haven declined ½ to 100¼. Atchison also shaded. Lehigh Valley began unchanged, then declined.

The curb market was quiet.

Americans in London were quiet, above New York parity.

Business in the late forenoon was dull with prices moving irregularly within a narrow range. Utah Copper was under pressure, declining ½ to 50, while a further decline of ⅝ was recorded in New Haven. Slight fractional losses were sustained by Southern Pacific, Steel common, American Can, St. Paul and Canadian Pacific. American Smelting was exceptionally strong, moving up ¾ to 65⅝. The Wabash issues also displayed strength.

Call money loaned and renewed at 2¼ per cent.

The Government crop report will be published at 2:15 to-day. It will be a very important market factor, as it gives the condition of corn to August 1. General estimates put the condition of corn at 75, but I believe this is too low and anything above that figure will be considered bullish on stocks. However, there may be some hesitation in prices before the figures are published.—G. D. Potter.

The stock market shows some hesitation pending the publication of the Government crop report on grain. Should the estimate on corn be above 75, we believe it would be construed as moderately bullish on the stock market. The large interests have the market well in hand, and unless reports of serious damage to the corn crop are confirmed, we believe that stocks will continue to advance.—G. D. Potter.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX WRITES OF "THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME," BY HALL CAINE

The Brilliant American Poetess Analyzes the Tragedy of the Woman Whose Child Had No Father, the Horror of Her Loveless Marriage and the Great Problem of This Day.

HALL CAINE'S latest work of fiction, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," is a striking illustration of the change which has taken place in the world of literature during the last score of years.

For frank realism and courageous attacks upon time-worn traditions, it takes the lead of all other books written by all other authors.

The heroine of this novel is a young English girl, reared by an angelic mother and a traditionally brutal British father.

The father is a self-made man, who attains great wealth, and who marries his daughter to a debauched man of title.

The girl's feelings and ideas are not taken into consideration in the least. Neither has she been instructed regarding the meaning of marriage. The death of her mother when she was a mere child deprived her of the one tender tie, and left her with only the companionship of disagreeable relatives or paid attendants.

From the hour of her marriage the trials and problems of life begin to present themselves to this young girl. With the first approach of the husband as a lover, all her womanly instincts arise in revolt and the bride refuses to become a wife.

Father, aunt, and clergymen are called into consultation, to small avail. Afraid as the girl is of her father, she is still more terrified at the thought of giving herself to her husband.

She insists upon returning home to her father, but is finally prevailed upon to go away with the husband, if he will leave her undisturbed until he can win her affections.

To this situation the husband consents, wishing to avoid a public scandal. However, his method of winning his bride's affections is not a successful one. Intemperance and vulgarity are among his characteristics and the young wife finds herself growing more and more disgusted with him, daily.

Then comes the designing adventuress, in the guise of an old school friend and relative, who enters the home and becomes the mistress of the husband.

Bad as the man is, by nature and habit, one cannot help feeling that his position in his own home was a sorry one, and his affiliation with a woman of his own type does not seem at all surprising.

However, it ends all possibility of his ever winning the heart of his wife. Just at this moment the ideal man enters upon the scene and new complications arise.

Heart, soul, brain and body awaken simultaneously in the young wife, and it is quite naturally a blow to the husband's pride and to his self-conceit when he discovers that the chaste Diana, who has refused her husband's kiss, is an expectant mother.

The wife runs away, alone, and goes to London, where her child is born, and where, in the present phase of the story now running in Hearst's Magazine, she is facing poverty and despair in her efforts to support herself and child.

We must remember that she was a very young and perfectly ignorant girl, knowing nothing of life, of the world, or of human nature, when she was plunged into all these distressing situations. All her instincts were high and fine, yet through the curious complications of her destiny, she became the mother of a child of a man she loved while married to a man she loathed.

Mighty problems face her in this situation

Everywhere she sees women respected by society and religious institutions, who are mothers of undesired children of detested men, simply because they are married to them.

Everywhere she sees women despised and shunned because they have brought forth children with love only to legitimatize birth.

Her young mind is torn and tortured with all the great problems suggested by these experiences. Meantime, the lover she believes to be dead is sailing on the high seas searching for strange goals and wholly unconscious of all that has happened to the woman of his heart.

Besides these two central figures are several other very interesting characters; one a beautiful young woman who elopes with a clergyman connected with the school where this young girl was educated. In the midst of her great distress, in her efforts to make a living for her child, she comes upon them in the slums of London; the clergyman dying and the woman selling herself, soul and body, to supply him with the necessities of life.

Just how Mr. Caine is going to deal with all these characters eventually is a question to all readers of his remarkable novel.

No amount of brilliant writing and no amount of realistic pen pictures can change to any marked degree the situation of a woman who becomes a mother without the sanction of the law.

Birth needs, first and foremost, both the legitimate call of love and the sanction of marriage to make it ideal and beautiful.

When either element is lacking the child is not well-born in the fullest meaning of that word.

Physically, mentally and morally the child may be perfectly equipped to meet the demands of life, with only love as a dower from both parents; but we live in a world which has been obliged to make social laws to protect its social rights; and where there is a flaw in the birth certificate of a child, in this respect, it is sure to cause suffering and trouble sooner or later for all concerned.

But Mr. Caine's story will set people to thinking along broader and kinder lines regarding these topics.

It presents great subjects for the mature deliberation of all classes and the followers of all creeds. The methods of public charitable institutions toward erring women are fully illustrated in this novel, and will no doubt lead to much discussion and many protests. Read the great story, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

Hall Caine's extraordinary novel, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," may be begun in the number of Hearst's Magazine now on the newsstands. A complete synopsis of previous chapters is printed in the magazine.

Frederick the Great

By REV. THOS. B. GREGORY.

FREDERICK THE GREAT became King of Prussia one hundred and seventy-three years ago—May 31, 1740. It was not much of a Prussia then, but the little man in the blue coat with the red trimmings made it one of the first powers of the Continent.

A very lovable old fellow, in many ways, was Frederick the Great. Underneath the king there was ever visible the man. After he had conquered his political position he made his nobles and aristocrats treat the common people fairly. He personally saw to it that just laws were instituted. He mortally hated fanaticism and bigotry. When the churchmen attempted to inveigle him into religious persecution, he replied: "Let the parsons go to Heaven their own way, and let everybody else do the same."

At heart he was favorable to democratic institutions. When King George wanted to hire soldiers of him to fight the Americans he indignantly spurned the proposition, and refused to let the Hessians pass through his territory on their way to join the British. He admired the things for which the Americans were fighting as ardently as he did the personal qualities and soldierly parts of the man who led their armies.

Work, hurry, plan, achieve—while the others rest.

That is the big secret of success.

The turtle won the race against the hare in the fable, because the turtle walked ALL THE TIME.

He could not run very fast but HE KNEW ENOUGH NOT TO LIE DOWN AND GO TO SLEEP.

Take a lesson from that turtle.

Take a lesson from this picture.

Your competitors are asleep on the grass.

They are thinking that it is too hot to work. They are pitying themselves. They will have more cause to pity themselves later for having pitied themselves so much NOW.

Don't envy the man who is paddling a canoe and telling some young person with a high color what wonderful things he is going to do NEXT WINTER.

Let him paddle his canoe and talk about himself.

YOU WORK NOW.

Lucky the man who works in August, lucky the man who is found by the hottest sun's rays ATTENDING TO BUSINESS.

When you are racing side by side with others, and when all are running, you can not do more than keep even.

Now, while others rest, is your chance to get ahead. Take it.

Don't pick this up and say to yourself that it is a rather nice picture, and put it down again. LOOK at it, study it.

THEN LOOK AT YOURSELF.

Ask yourself, and don't deceive yourself in the answer, whether you are the man WALKING in this picture, or whether you are one of those figures lying asleep on the grass.

The answer to that question will answer your question as to what your probable position will be in the world a few years from now.

There is a better sermon on success in this picture by Tad than in all the nice interviews given out by Mr. Rockefeller telling how he saved his first dollar, or by Mr. Carnegie saying what a wonderful thing it is to give away libraries WITH NO BOOKS IN THE LIBRARIES.

July is gone. If you wasted that month, don't waste more time now on regret. Start off in the right way in August. WALK fast, WORK hard, THINK for yourself, look ahead.

Remember that no man ever hurt himself with too much work.

IT'S WHAT YOU DO BETWEEN WORKING HOURS THAT HURTS YOU.

Remember, also, that no man cheats his employer. You can only cheat yourself by doing a thing less well than you know how to do it.

Be the steady walker, be the man who gains time while others rest, be the man who gets ahead.

And if you really try, good luck to you, for the man WHO REALLY TRIES doesn't fail.

The Time to Get Ahead Is Now

The man who travels and works in these hot and lazy days, while others rest and think it over, is the man that WILL WIN.

Young men that have ambition, and old men too, CAN GET SUCH A START BY DOING THE RIGHT KIND OF WORK NOW THAT THE OTHERS RESTING AND THINKING HOW HOT IT IS WILL NEVER CATCH YOU. August, September, October—they are the months of the winning workingman. (See Editorial.)

The Woman With the Secret Eyes

By WINIFRED BLACK.

SHE lives down in the valley by the running water, the woman with the secret eyes. She has three children, a boy and two girls; her husband has gone away, they say.

She is poor—and she is angry about it. She does not like the old house by the running water and she hates the song the water sings all day and all night.

"If I could only get up on the hill," she says whenever a neighbor will stop to talk with her, "it would be better up there. See what gay lives the people on the hill live. They have company and the lights shine through their windows far, far into the night, and they laugh and sing, and down here, where I live, we hear only the water—all day and all night the water.

And He's Smart.

"My children don't like it here, either. I am going to send them away so they won't hear it—all day and all night, the running of the water there by the door.

"The boy is going away to the city. Did you see the new suit I bought him? Oh, I can manage when I have to, and the new shoes, too, and the hat? Nothing better in town than those clothes—he's 'as good as the rest now.'

"And he's smart, too; he will make his way, and then we will live on the hill, too, maybe.

"The girls are going, too. I shall see to that. Did you notice the pretty new hats I have bought them? Not a girl in town has prettier ones—and their stockings, too. Some day they shall have a piano like the little girls up there on the hill. I will get it for them. You'll see; you'll see. They won't always be so poor."

Last night when I took a walk by the rushing water I met the three children, far, far out on the road toward town, and I saw a man slink through the low trees to the door of the woman with the secret eyes. I heard the woman's voice. She was laughing a cruel, wicked laugh, a dangerous laugh like the warning of a snake, and the man laughed, too.

To-morrow the three children will have more new things to make them look like the children in the houses up there on the hill—and the woman with the secret eyes will laugh again and be proud of the fine showing her children make—and all the time she is digging, digging, digging a pit for their poor little feet; for the people of the town are beginning to whisper.

They nod together, the old women; they grin together, the old men—and the children wonder why it is that people look so strangely at them when they put on their new finery and go out—to be seen.

"As good as the rest!" Poor woman with the secret eyes, don't you know, can't you understand that those children would be better off if they went barefoot, ragged and had too little to eat, and carried with them into the comprehension of growing youth no secret wonder, no half-hidden doubt of you and the way you earn the money to spend so freely on them?

The boy who's going to the city soon, what can he ever be with such a mother? The little girl, with the soft eyes there, how can she ever hold up her head—when she remembers and understands? The slender child with the puzzled eyes, what will she care what dresses she wore—when she lived down by the rushing waters? All she will know is that there was something "queer" about her mother.

Can't Hide Her Story.

Oh, woman with the secret eyes, work, scrub, starve, do anything honest, anything decent, and give your children a memory of you that will keep them straight when their own feet begin to wander. Your eyes are secret, but they can not hide your story. Some day, some day these little ones of yours will know it, strive as you may to keep it hidden. Then what of your dreams—of houses on the hill and friends and joy?

Hark, how the water runs through the fringing willows. "To-morrow," it says, "to-morrow"—do you never listen to the warning it is trying to give?

U. S. HATRED STIRRED BY HUERTA

Mexico City Breathlessly Awaits Arrival of Envoy Lind—Anti-American Feeling Grows.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 8.—Despite the optimistic belief in Washington that Provisional President Huerta is posing in his defiance of the United States, there were developments here to-day which show that the Mexican national executive is exerting every diplomatic agency in a campaign against the American Government.

Huerta's envoys in the Central American States are attempting to work up the Latin-American Governments with declarations that the United States has designs on all territory lying north of the Panama Canal.

Diplomatic bureaus, aside from the regularly accredited plenipotentiaries, have been opened in London and Paris.

Lind Due to Arrive To-morrow.

President Huerta, realizing that Mexico is no match for the United States in warfare, is resorting to the only other method possible of combating American influence—arousing antagonism. Senor Aldape, the Mexican Foreign Minister, is in daily communication with his agents abroad, as is the President.

The arrival here to-morrow of John Lind, special envoy of President Wilson, is expected to bring to a head the crisis which threatens to cause a clean break between the United States and Mexico.

United States warships in the harbor at Vera Cruz were in wireless communication with the New Hampshire, upon which Mr. Lind, is coming, and it is expected that the New Hampshire will reach Vera Cruz about 9 o'clock to-night.

In view of the stories which have been circulated to arouse anti-American feeling, a bodyguard of marines may accompany Mr. Lind to this city. However, in view of the impression which this might create, it is doubtful if Mr. Lind would consent to have a bodyguard, no matter how great the personal danger.

Some Would Ignore Lind.

There was a gathering of Cabinet Ministers and Huerta adherents in Congress at the National Palace to-day, at which the existing American-Mexican situation was thoroughly discussed. Some are for completely ignoring Mr. Lind, while the radicals insist that he shall be expelled under section 33 of the Mexican Constitution unless he makes out his mission to be favorable to Huerta's aims.

Section 33 provides that persons of suspicious intentions shall be driven from the country and not be allowed to return except on special permission from the Government.

It was decided that no official greeting shall be extended to Mr. Lind, thus breaking a tradition which is as immemorial as diplomacy itself.

After the conference Senor Aldape said:

"The Government has decided upon a definite course of action to be followed in the present situation, and we believe that it will be approved by all persons of justice. President Huerta is striving to re-establish order in Mexico, and he believes that outside interference, unless invited, would do more harm than good. President Huerta has the good of Mexico at heart, and I know that he would make great sacrifices in behalf of his country."

Mexico's Defy Ignored Until Lind Delivers Note.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Pending the arrival in Mexico of John Lind, special and personal representative of President Wilson, this Government will take no action with respect to the defy issued by the Mexican foreign office threatening to deport former Governor Lind as an undesirable alien.

Offical confirmation of the issuance of the threat has reached the State Department, but Secretary Bryan and other Government officials say the

Suffragette, Denied Liquor and Cigars, Says U. S. Is Horrid

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Ruth Grayson, socialist, suffragette and writer, is angry at the United States and scoffs at the idea that it is a free country. In detailing her grievance to-day, she said:

"I have just returned from the United States and intend to unmask the ridiculous idea that it is a land of freedom. It is a terrible place. Why, they refused to let me smoke cigarettes in the hotels and when I tried to get into the smoking compartment of a train to smoke a cigar I was refused.

"But that was not the worst. When I went into a saloon they refused to serve me at the bar. At a beach resort I was reprimanded for not wearing stockings. I think the United States with its so-called freedom is a horrid place."

Embezzling Governor Now Is a Swineherd

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 8.—An extraordinary story of the downfall of a high official in Russia is told here to-day. Some time ago the Governor of the Province of the Don Cossacks hired a swineherd for his farm at Miatopolsk. Shortly after the servants told him that the new employee made the most extraordinary statements when he was in a drunken condition, and used to say that he was really Governor of the Don Cossacks province.

Investigation showed the guardian of the pigs eight years ago was Governor, but had been recalled and sent to prison for embezzlement.

Mrs. Gould Against The High Slit Skirt

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Edwin Gould to-day severely criticized present street attire and one-piece bathing suits for women.

"I am not in favor of freak or suggestive modes," said Mrs. Gould. "The extreme slit skirt to which objection has been taken in various parts of the country is not worn in New York by any of my friends. Nor do I know of any one who appears at bathing beaches in one-piece suits such as Chicago has forbidden."

JOHNSTON OF ALABAMA IS DEAD

United States Senator Victim of Pneumonia After Nine Days' Illness at Capital.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Senator Joseph F. Johnston, of Alabama, died at 9 o'clock this morning at his apartment in the Brighton.

Senator Johnston had been ill for eight days, suffering from pneumonia.

Senator Joseph Forney Johnston, of Birmingham, was born in North Carolina in 1843. He served in the Confederate army from the beginning of the war to its conclusion, and was wounded four times. He rose from a private to the rank of captain, and was frequently mentioned honorably for gallant conduct.

Senator Johnston served four years as Governor of Alabama, before his election to the Senate in 1907. His first election to the Senate was to the unexpired term of Senator E. W. Pettus, deceased. He was re-elected in 1909 to his present term.

Senator Johnston's death at this time undoubtedly will bring about an acute political crisis in Alabama. His seat was being contested at the time of his death by Congressman R. P. Hobson, and the fight between them had grown very bitter. It is practically certain that Hobson will not be permitted, now that Johnston is dead, to have the succession uncontested.

There has been talk of Congressman Underwood as a candidate against Mr. Hobson, and the death of Senator Johnston likely will revive that.

His immediate successor will be named by Governor O'Neal, which means that Mr. Hobson will not get the immediate appointment.

He had been in poor health for several weeks.

Mrs. Johnston was with her husband when he died, as well as Forney Johnston, his son, who arrived from his home in Birmingham yesterday.

Paris Gown Saves Life of Vanderbilt

LONG BEACH, N. Y., Aug 8.—That William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., had a narrow escape from death in the automobile accident that claimed the life of S. Osgood Pell and William Laimbeer because of the fact that he wished to protect a Parisian gown worn by Mrs. Pell, became known when he testified at the inquest.

He would have been in the machine had he not stopped to secure a linen duster with which to cover Mrs. Pell's gown.

The rest of the party went on without waiting for the couple, who took another car and followed.

'Side-Door Pullman' Improvement Urged

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—At the first day's session of the annual convention of the Intinerant Workers' Association to-day a request was formulated to be presented to the Interstate Commerce Commission to compel railroads to put some modern improvements on freight cars.

They say ocean steamships now are provided with gymnasiums, sun parlors and golf links; that Pullman cars have sanitary cups which the porter provides on request, but that freight car roads are still as "hard as the heart of the railroad detective."

Farmer's Beans Are Cooked by Lightning

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—William Williams, a truck farmer, went out to gather some string beans for the family table the other day. Much to his surprise, he discovered that they were deliciously cooked.

He thought for a time that he had out-Burbanked Burbanks, but a little reflection divulged the reason. In planting he had placed wires between the poles, and during a recent storm lightning struck the wires and cooked the beans.

Ostend Bathing Suits In U.S.? Goodness, No!

NARRAGANSETT PIER, Aug. 8.—"Any woman who takes surf baths may for a trifling amount of money appear to advantage on the beach—an accomplishment not to be held lightly, as all women know," says Mrs. Henry Hutt, former wife of the artist.

"At Ostend, where women go to the beach in coats, one-piece bathing suits may be all right, but in America, where we lounge so much upon the beach, they would cause riots."

SCREWS, VETERAN JOURNALIST, DEAD

Noted Alabama Editor Stricken Suddenly at Country Home Near Montgomery.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 8.—From an attack of acute indigestion, Major William Wallace Screws, the veteran editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, died suddenly Thursday night at his country home in Coosada, fourteen miles from Montgomery. Major Screws was 74 years old, and while his health had not been very good for several months, his death was unexpected. With him at the time of his death were his two sons, Benjamin Screws and Holt Screws, and his wife.

"The most beloved man in Alabama," was a title often given Major Screws, who despite the many bitter political fights he entered, always held the highest respect of both sides. He became connected with The Advertiser shortly after the war, and in a short while became sole owner of the paper. A few years later he sold half interest in the paper to Frank P. Glass, and under their combined directorship The Advertiser progressed to one of the foremost morning papers in the South.

Major Screws was born February 25, 1839, in Barbour County, Alabama, and attended school at Glennville. In 1859 he took up the study of law with the famous law firm of Watts, Judge and Jackson in Montgomery and was admitted to the bar in 1859 at the age of 20 years.

Though opposed to secession, Major Screws fought for his State, and went with the first troops to Pensacola. There he participated in the capture of Fort Barancas. He fought throughout the entire war, being captured in Virginia during the last few weeks of the struggle. He acted as correspondent for The Advertiser for the four years of the great struggle.

FRANK TAKES ACTIVE INTEREST IN CASE AND ASSISTS HIS LAWYERS

The vital time element which may serve alone to convict Leo Frank or set him free, entered largely into the evidence presented Friday by the defense at the trial of the factory superintendent.

Two witnesses testified that Mary Phagan did not arrive at Broad and Marietta streets the day she was murdered until about 12:07½ o'clock, the time the English Avenue car on which she rod efrom home was due there. One witness, W. M. Matthews, motorman on the car, testified that Mary did not get off at Forsyth and Marietta, but continued on the car and rode as far as Broad and Hunter where the car arrives at about 12:10 o'clock, he conductor corroborated Matthews.

This testimony stronglyy supports the contention of the defense that Mary Phagan did not enter the factory until after 12:10 o'clock and that Monteen Stover, therefore, was in the factory and had left before the Phagan girl ever entered the doors. If the defense succeeds in establishing this, the visit of the Stover girl to the factory will be of tremendous significance because it is in direct conflict with the explicit testimony of James Conley that Mary Phagan entered the factory and supposedly was strangled before the Stover girl went up the stairs. Miss Stover testified that she did not see Frank in his office, but admitted she did not enter the inner office and he defens will try to show Frank could have been writing at his desk and the girl not have seen him.

Seeks to Discredit Epp's Story.

Arnold Throws Doubt on Epps.

Attorney Arnold, who was conducting the examination during the forenoon, sought aslo, to throw a deep shadow of suspicion upon the story of young George Epp's, who testified that he rode uptown with Mary Phagan the day she was killed.

Matthews said that another girl was seated with Mary the latter part of the ride to own. He did not recollect that Epp's was on the car at all. The motorman said that he was relieved at Broad and Marietta streets and that he sat behind Mary and her companion all the way to Hunter Street. He said the two alighted at Hunter Street and proceded toward Forsyth on which the factory is located.

This is in direct contradiction to the story of Epps, who testified that he and Mary left the car at Forsyth and Marietta streets and that he walked with her toward the factory as far as the viaduct.

Hollis did not remember seeing Epps on the car. He said Mary was alone when he collected her fare after the car got on English avenue. He left the car at Forsyth and Marietta streets and did not see Mary Phagan alight there.

Albert Kauffman, an architect, was called to discredit several of the State's witnesses. He had blue prints of the Selig home which he displayed to the jury to show that it was impossible for Albert McKnight to have seen from the kitchen into the dining room as he testified he did on the Saturday afternoon that Frank came home from the factory.

Denies Stover Girl's Story.

His testimony was to the effect that Monteen Stover could not have seen over the safe door into Frank's office at the time she declared she was unable to find him on her visit to the factory.

He said that there was room for several bodies to pass down the scuttle hole into the basement. He exhibited a diagram of the factory to show that Frank could have sat in his office and not been aware of anything taking place beyond the time clock, for example, anyone coming up or going down the stairs.

Miss Daisy Hopkins, who, C. B. Dalton said, was his companion on visits to the factory basement, was called by the defense and denied Dalton's statements.

She said she never had spoken to Frank, and that Frank never had spoken to her.

Solicitor Dorsey made an attack on her character and forced her to admit she had been in jail on a statutory chrge. It was brought out, however, that she was released without trial.

Frank, for the first time during the trial, took an active part in helping direct the course his case was taking. He arose from his seat several times to make suggestions to his lawyers, and at his request certain questions were put.

Before Daisy Hopkins was called Solicitor Dorsey said he wanted to ask Harry Scott one more question. Attorney Rosser said he also wanted to ask one more question of Boots Rogers, Detective J. M. Starnes and George Epps. Detective Scott was the first witness called.

Dorsey asked:

Q. There is also a gas jet further back?—A. I didn't see any.

Q. On the first floor you say there is a trap door near the elevator two feet by two feet three inches, leading to the basement?—A. Yes.

Trap Door Small.

Q. A man of your size would have a hard time getting through there, wouldn't he?—A. Yes.

Q. Two people couldn't get through? A. No.

Q. The scuttle hole back on the first floor leads to the basement?—A. Yes, to the dustpan in the back.

Q. A man doesn't look in a curved line, does he?—A. No, sir.

Q. Well, what do these curved lines on the second floor mean?—A. Those indicate the direction he probably walked.

Several of the jurymen were inattentive to these demonstrations.

Q. Anyone coming into this office could see if anyone was in there, couldn't he, if the door adjoining was open?—A. Yes.

Q. Nobody standing on the fourth floor at the head of the stairway could see down to the second floor?—A. I don't think they could.

Q. Don't you know they couldn't?—A. They might have a little view.

Bell Buzzard Found! No, Not at Winsted

FORSYTH, Aug. 8.—The bell buzzard has been discovered again.

Roger H. Taylor, of this county, is sponsor for the story that on last Wednesday a buzzard, with a bell around its neck, passed through the settlement known as Northwest Corner and was seen by several reputable citizens.

Lighting on a tree in the settlement the buzzard attracted considerable attention, and it is claimed that the bell was not only visible, but the sound of the tinkle was unmistakable.

LIND TO LAND ON MEXICAN SOIL TO-NIGHT

Anti-American Feeling Stirred by Huerta as United States Envoy Nears Capital.

United States will make no move until it is seen whether the Mexican Government intends to carry out its threat.

Former Governor Lind is due to reach Vera Cruz to-night. If he makes good connections he should get to Mexico City in time for a conference with President Huerta tomorrow afternoon. It is believed here the Mexican President will be forced to confer with President Wilson's representative, if only to discover the nature of the communication it has been admitted the former Governor of Minnesota carries with him.

Should President Huerta deem it best to expel Mr. Lind, the United States may be forced to take drastic measures, but it is hoped at the State Department that this undesirable alternative will be avoided by a change of front on the part of the Mexican President after he receives Lind's message from President Wilson, the contents of which is unknown here to anyone save the President and Secretary Bryan.

After a conference with the President, Secretary Bryan to-day announced that the statement sent to the American Embassy at Mexico City for the Mexican foreign office that Special Ambassador Lind would be persona non grata to the Mexican Government unless he brought the proper credentials with him, had been received at the State Department to-day and that the President now has it under consideration.

At the request of the State Department, the battleship Michigan to-day was moved from Vera Cruz to Ciudad Del Carmen, Mexico. It was feared that the arrival of the battleship New Hampshire at Vera Cruz to-day might give rise to a report that the United States was preparing for active intervention and the Michigan, therefore, was moved farther down the coast, where she will remain for further orders.

STATE, TIED BY CONLEY'S STORY, NOW MUST STAND STILL UNDER HOT FIRE

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

As the defense in the Frank case gets under way, it is evident enough, as it has been from the beginning of this case, that there is but one big, tremendously compelling task before it—the annihilation of Conley's ugly story!

The State climaxed its case thrillingly and with deadly effect in the negro.

He came through the fire of cross-examination, exhaustive and thorough, in remarkably good shape, all things considered. He unfolded a story even more horrible than was anticipated. Certainly, in every conceivable way, he has sought to damage the defendant—even going to the extent of lodging against him another crime than murder!

Through the cross-examination, however, there ran an evident vein of deadly purpose upon the part of the defense. Conley was given full limit to go his length. He went it—no disputing that!

The question is, did he go TOO FAR?

Did he, in his last minute effort to get in EVERYTHING that possibly might work against the defendant, tell things, or say things, that eventually will rise to plague him to his utter undoing?

That is the defense's task—THE UNDOING OF CONLEY.

Conley the State's All.

Conley is the heart and soul of the State's case—without Conley, the State is rendered helpless. He is the Alpha and the Omega of the charge against Leo Frank.

That great detective, William J. Burns, says "they always—criminals—leave something out of gear in the stories they tell."

Burns declares there never was a lie told to shield a criminal that did not have in it SOMEWHERE a fatal weakness, that might be located if patiently sought for. The more elaborate the tale the criminal relates, the more chance there is, no matter how ingenuously shrewd he may seem to be, that he will be discovered.

To-day is the defense's day in court—during its progress, which may be for a week or more, even as the State's day lasted 240 hours, Leo Frank must break down the awful story of Jim Conley, and prove himself innocent, if he can, of all the various charges brought against him.

Can he do it?

Well, maybe he can, and maybe he can not—at least, in the name of justice and decency and all that is right, he must have full and free OPPORTUNITY.

One Side of the Case.

During the progress of the State's case, the defense was led far into the gloom. People began to doubt Frank's innocence—people of poise and fair minds, desirous of seeing the truth prevail though the heavens fall. Even these people found themselves staggering and groping as the hideous and sinister charges fell from the lips of the negro.

Could Leo Frank, of previous good reputation, of fair name and unblemished integrity, college bred and studious in habit, so far as the public knew or suspected, be the monster responsible for little Mary Phagan's death, and also—the other unspeakable thing?

In a rather remarkable interview Mrs. Leo Frank gave The Sunday American some few weeks ago, she said this of Frank and herself: "As sweethearts, we went hand in hand, and intruded ourselves upon no person; as man and wife we have gone hand in hand, and we have intruded ourselves upon no person!"

They still are going "hand in hand," the man and the woman, the husband and the wife—the one holding up as best he can under the terrible charge of murder, the other there beside him—"for better or worse, in sickness and in health, for richer or poorer"—until death, or worse than death, shall sever the tie that binds.

That is omething steadying to think about!

It is the defendant's day in court—and he is entitled to fair play and a fair chance!

To some it may seem that the burden has shifted, that it is up to the defense now, notwithstanding the more or less fictitious presumption of innocence the law jealously has established in his favor, to PROVE his innocence.

Be that as it may—even as the gloom has closed about him and all he holds most dear in this world—he still is a human being, in very dire distress, as yet unconvicted; and it is only right that the public should be patient, as he sets forth HIS side of this terrible affair.

And I give it as my opinion here and now, for whatever it is worth, that the case against Leo Frank yet may be far from conclusive—and it may never be made conclusive.

Conley's Tale Impossible?

Suppose the defense is able to show, by a sequence of logical, orderly and honorably sustained witnesses, that the tale Jim Conley tells is utterly absurd—and IMPOSSIBLE?

What then?

Will you be prepared, if forced to a conviction against your will, if it be that way with you, to say to Frank: "All right, you came through the fire, at times seemingly sure to consume you, unhurt and unscorched, but you came through, and I am content."

Conley's story has not YET been broken down—no. But it MAY be broken down.

In an article a few days ago, I said this, and I feel like repeating it now:

> In judging this Frank case, purely from the State's own standpoint, there is othing so important as the TIME ELEMENT in which the State uncompromisingly claims the crime was committed.

In another article a few days thereafter, I said this, and this I also feel like repeating now:

> If the Conley story is a lie, if it has been TOO CLEVERLY "framed up"—if and a thousand other "ifs"—what matters that?
>
> It matters this: If it be a lie, it MUST break down, somewhere, sometime; if it be the truth, it will stand against ALL the assaults made upon it!

State Tied by Conley.

Remember, unless Conley's story holds together, the case against Frank goes to pieces. Everybody who has read the evidence and who still is capable of rendering just judgment will admit that.

Suppose it can be shown, and is shown, that the story Conley told CAN NOT be true?

The defense MUST show that, or Frank is lost!

Can the defense do that?

The State has pinned itself down to exact and definite propositions. Remember, the defense has hardly started its story yet—it may be able to make absurd those very propositions the State has set up.

The crime, according to the State's witnesses, MUST have been committed thus and so, in exact order, and just as stated—or Conley's story falls down.

The biggest element in the State's case is the time element—mark that!

Upon it the State will stand or fall eventually.

If Mary Phagan was NOT killed before 12:05, then Leo Frank didn't kill her. If she was not killed at that time, Conley's story will not do.

Then is when the State says she was killed—THEN and not at any other time. Conley's story ALL leads up to and away from that.

Remember, too, that the only witness who swears to knowledge or suspicion of any unspeakable conduct upon the part of Frank is—again—Conley.

Dalton a Tame Witness.

When it came to corroborating Conley, Dalton proved a tame corroborator. The ugly, nasty charge of perversion and degeneracy, glibly dropped from the lips of Conley, rests ENTIRELY AND ALTOGETHER on Conley's word.

If Conley's story of the murder is shown to be IMPOSSIBLE AND ABSURD, will you then reverse your other opinion concerning Frank—if you have accepted Conley's word as to that—and agree that Conley, having lied to send Frank to the gallows, would have lied as readily to besmirch him with unmentionable scandal otherwise?

Shall not Frank have the right, unchallenged and fair, to clear himself of every charge lodged against him?

To-day is his day in court—will any living person begrudge him, sore pressed, one moment of it?

Will, in the end, he be able to read and take to himself, happily and serenely, Tennyson's beautiful poem ending—

"And now it is daylight everywhere!"

Will he?

We shall see.

At least, he is entitled to his day in court—and it is at hand!

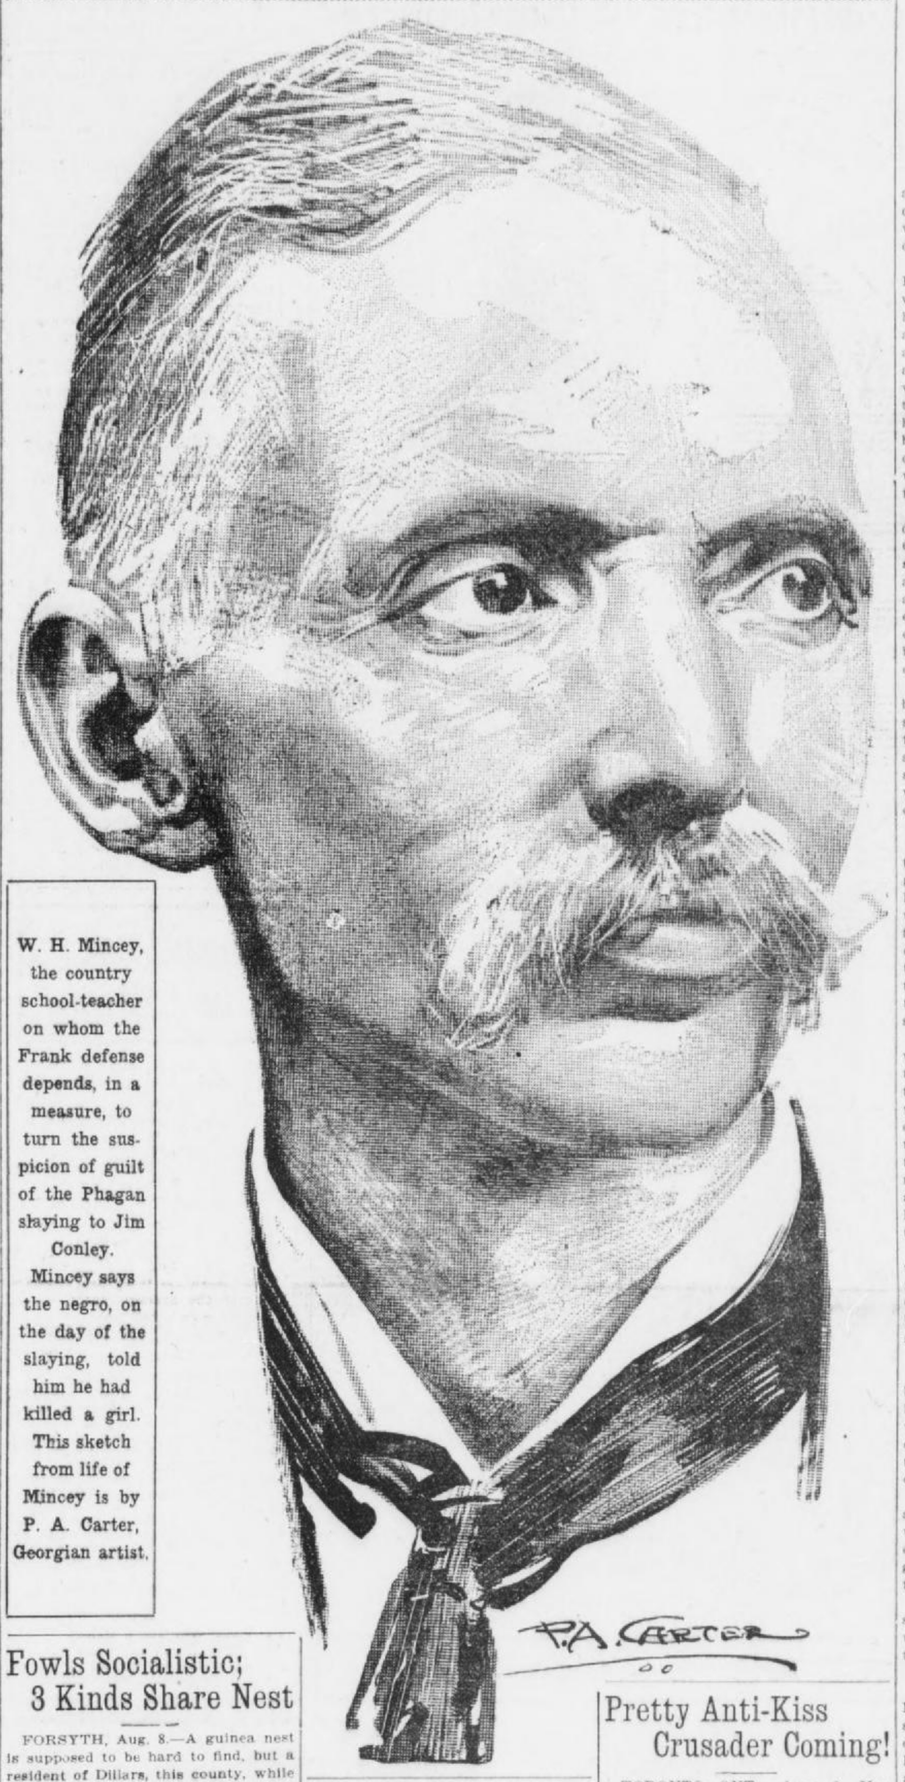
MAN WHO SAYS NEGRO JIM CONLEY CONFESSED SLAYING OF LITTLE GIRL



W. H. Mincey, the country school-teacher on whom the Frank defense depends, in a measure, to turn the suspicion of guilt of the Phagan slaying to Jim Conley. Mincey says the negro, on the day of the slaying, told him he had killed a girl. This sketch from life of Mincey is by P. A. Carter, Georgian artist.

Fowls Socialistic; 3 Kinds Share Nest

At the time the discovery was made there were three partridge, two guinea and six hen eggs in the nest.

What hours had been agreed upon by the sharers of the nest during which they are to keep house is unknown.

Nine Ears to Stalk In Forsyth Cornfield

FORSYTH, Aug. 8.—Nine ears of corn to a stalk is most unusual, but Jesse Childs, of near Rogers Church, in this county, is exhibiting around Forsyth a stalk on which there are nine well-matured ears.

He planted a prolific variety of corn, and claims that whil he has discovered no other stalk on which there are nine ears, six ears, and even seven, to the stalk are not unusual in his field. This corn was raised on thin upland soil.

2 Candidates For Macon Mayoralty

MACON, GA., Aug. 8.—Macon's municipal campaign will open next week with the announcement of the Aldermanic tickets by City Clerk Bridges Smith and Alderman A. L. Dasher, who are opposing candidates for the mayoralty. It developed to-day that Colonel W. A. Huff, who was mayor for ten years, would have been a candidate but for the entry of Mr. Dasher, whom he agreed not to oppose. Mr. Smith offered to stay out of the race if Colonel Huff desired to run, but the latter said he was debarred by reason of Mr. Dasher's candidacy.

The administration party is supporting Mr. Smith. He and Mr. Dasher both state that their tickets will be announced next week.

Pretty Anti-Kiss Crusader Coming!

TORONTO, ONT., Aug. 8.—Men delegates to the International Congress of Geologists here marvel at the record of Dr. Annie T. Quensel, a delegate from Sweden, of being an unkissed wife, for she is strikingly beautiful.

Dr. Quensel will lecture in the United States in the interests of an international anti-kissing crusade. She says:

"Neither my husband nor I have ever kissed any one. We believe kissing a menace to good health, and persons indulging should be punished by law."

Offers $200 For Old War Engine's Whistle

DALTON, Aug. 8.—An offer of $200 for the whistle taken from the engine "General" when it was captured by Andrews' Raiders has been made to James Barry, of Dalton, who owns the whistle. He announced recently that he intended to sell it and give the money to the orphans' home at Decatur.

The offer comes from H. T. Thomason, of Clyde, Ohio, who says in his letter that one of his uncles was a member of the Federal band that undertook to escape with the famous engine.

Mercer Head To Be Chosen Next Week

MACON, Aug. 8.—Another meeting will be held next week by the special committee delegated to choose a president for Mercer University, and it is probable the place will be offered to either the Rev. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville, Ky., or the Rev. W. L. Pickard, of Savannah.

The Rev. T. W. O'Kelley, of Raleigh, N. C., has declined the presidency, yielding to the insistence of his congregation that he remain as pastor of their church.

SCOTT PUT CONLEY'S STORY IN STRANGE LIGHT

Harry Scott, of the Pinkerton agency, showed up the "confessions" of Conley in a peculiar light when he was called to the stand by the Frank defense Thursday afternoon.

The detective, questioned by Luther Rosser, told the jury that Conley, when he "had told everything," when he had accused Frank of the killing and had made himself an accessory after the fact by declaring that he assisted in the disposal of the body; when every motive for holding anything back had been swept away by his third affidavit, still denied to him (Scott) many of the alleged circumstances to which he testified while he was on the stand the first three days of the week.

It will be the contention of the defense that these many additions to Conley's tale, inasmuch as all reason for concealing them had passed after Conley had come out with his accusations against Frank and his confession of his own part in the crime, are pure fabrications of the black man's imagination, as are the other details of his tale.

Scott said that he had grilled and badgered Conley repeatedly about seeing Mary Phagan enter the factory. Even after the negro had made all his incriminating statements, he steadfastly denied seeing the girl victim go up the stairs to the second floor.

Denied He Had Seen Purse.

He denied also to Scott, the detective said, that he ever had seen the girl's mesh bag or parasol, or that he ever had heard a girl's scream while he was sitting on the first floor. He told the detectives that he did not see Lemmie Quinn or Monteen Stover enter the factory, although he later declared he had seen them both and so testified on the stand.

Conley said on the stand when he was questioned by Rosser that he thought he had told all these things to Scott and John Black while he was making his third and final affidavit. Scott was called to testify that Conley not only had failed to tell them, but for the most part had made strenuous denials when asked about them. It was expected that Black would be called early Friday to testify on the same matter.

Rosser, in his examination of Detective Scott, sought to create in the minds of the jury the impression that Conley had been guided and directed by the detectives in the framing of his string of statements and affidavits.

Negro's Story in Own Words.

Scott admitted that the improbabilities in the negro's statements had been pointed out to him, and that, with these suggestions, Conley proceeded to doctor up his affidavits until they harmonized better with the circumstances of the day.

Solicitor Dorsey was loath to let any statement get into the record which indicated that Conley had been coached by the detectives, and he got Scott to say that no one had put the words in the negro's mouth.

"But you would say," shouted Rosser, "'That don't fit, Jim,' and Jim would get something that did fit; isn't that so?"

Scott said that this was the truth.

The testimony of Scott and that of Dr. L. W. Childs, a physician and surgeon, marked the opening of the defense's fight for the life of Leo Frank. The State rested its case against the factory superintendent at noon and Dr. Childs was called at once to testify in rebuttal of Dr. H. F. Harris, the State's principal medical expert.

Childs Attacks Harris.

Dr. Childs declared boldly that Dr. Harris' conclusions were the wildest sort of guesses. He said that Harris had made statements with no dependable data on which to base them.

Dr. Harris' declaration that Mary Phagan came to her death within half or three-quarters of an hour after eating her dinner, an assumption he made because the cabbage in her stomach hardly had begun to digest, the expert of the defense characterized as nothing more than conjecture.

"I have seen cabbage that had been in a person's stomach twelve hours that was less changed than that," he asserted.

Solicitor Dorsey, when he got hold of the witness, confined himself mainly to an attempt to discredit Dr. Childs as an expert. He brought to the attention of the jury that the physician was only 31 years old, that he had been graduated from a medical school only seven years and that he was a general practitioner, rather than a specialist or laboratory man like Dr. Harris.

Childs Not a Specialist.

The Solicitor then propounded a number of highly scientific medical questions to the witness—questions furnished by the Solictor's brother, Dr. R. T. Dorsey—and Dr. Childs was soon forced to reply that only a specialist could answer such a line of interrogation.

Those who expected some sensational testimony from C. B. Dalton, the first of the State's witnesses Friday, were disappointed. Dalton's story was more in the nature of a confession of his own derelictions than an expose of misconduct on the part of Frank. Dalton testified that he had seen women in Frank's office on various occasions. Who they were he did not know. He had witnessed no compromising situations.

Dalton was mentioned in Conley's story and to that extent corroborated the negro.

BITS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE, AS VIEWED BY STATE, STRANDS IN ROPE

By O. B. KEELER.

They call it a chain that the State has forged, or has tried to forge, to hold Leo Frank to the murder of Mary Phagan.

But isn't it a rope?

A chain, you know, is as strong as its weakest link. Take one link out, and the chain comes apart.

With a rope, it's different.

Strand after strand might be cut or broken, and the rope still holds a certain weight. Then might come a time when the cutting of one more strand would cause the rope to break.

The point is, the finished rope will sustain a weight that would instantly snap any one of its several strands.

Bits of Evidence Threads.

And that is what the various bits of circumstantial evidence might better be called—strands or threads.

Edgar Allen Poe, in "The Mystery of Marie Roget," has nearly exhausted the philosophical phase of accumulative circumstance and its relation to evidence.

Applying the system of the well-known Dupin to the case in point—and REGARDING IT, BE IT UNDERSTOOD, STRICTLY FROM THE STATE'S VIEWPOINT—an analysis of part of the evidence against Leo Frank follows:

First off, the isolated circumstance of Conley's ability to write would seem as futile as a smoke wreath in sustaining any weight of evidence, except against Conley himself.

But to that fact is added the fact that Frank knew Conley could write.

Still, the thread is flimsy, and, even connected with the case against Frank, would appear worthless.

Six Deductions Seen.

But when it develops that Frank, knowing Conley could write, and knowing the police were trying to find the author of the murder notes—when Frank, well aware of these things, did not inform the police that Conley was lying when he said he could not write, the following deductions appear:

(1) That Frank did not want to connect Conley with the murder notes, which (2) would have been the natural and prompt inclination of a suspected man who knew nothing of the crime himself, so that (3) it appeared Frank knew something of the murder, and (4) knew that Conley knew he knew something of the murder, which (5) justified the conclusion on the part of the State that Frank feared to implicate Conley, lest (6) Conley, in turn, tell something that would implicate him.

Of course, this strand may be broken entirely by the defense, showing Frank never knew the police were ignorant of Conley's ability to write before the police learned it themselves.

But there is one pretty substantial strand of evidence, as the State sees it—and all having its genesis in the simple fact that Conley knew how to write, and at first denied it.

But that strand of itself surely would fail to carry the burden of the case. There must be others.

Even Conley's story is strong only by reason of many strands that surround and support it. Presented to a jury, round and unvarnished—tainted by the reek of false affidavits and weakened by the dry-rot of self-interest, Conley's story never would win a verdict against Leo Frank.

But there is the shred of the murder notes—Conley's story draws support from that. There is the time factor brought out by the expert testimony—Conley's story twines itself about the prop of science. There is the agitation of Frank noticed by Newt Lee in the middle of the afternoon—Conley's story provides for that. There is the visit of Monteen Stever, a tiny circumstance of itself—but of vast importance just so far as it strengthens Conley's recollection of exact time.

And it is by reason of the rope already well along in the twisting that a hundred other little circumstances become significant that of themselves would be lighter than the air-drawn dagger that troubled the dreams of Macbeth.

They fit in with the twisting of the rope.

Will the Rope Hold?

There is Frank's agitation at home and at the factory. There is the ugly story of habitual "chats" at the factory, guarded by Conley as watchman. And the sending away of Newt Lee that afternoon. And the seeing of Conley by Mrs. White, "loitering" at the place he fixes for himself as watchman, and at the time. And the alleged reluctance of Frank to confront Conley at the jail.

And all the rest of it.

So many little incidents, and most of them small in triviality in themselves.

The point is, each strengthens the other, until the fragile threads become a rope.

Will it hold after Frank's lawyers have presented their side of the case?

The jury must decide.

Railroad Travel's Greatest Peril Is the Open Switch

The toll of lives taken each year by this ever-present danger has been enormous.

For years the inventive genius at the command of every great railroad system has been devoted to solving this question.

The question has been solved. The danger has been removed. any has answered the problem. e Shepherd Automatic Switch Com- The open switch is closed. Thits safety device has removed the peril from the open switch as thoroughly as the removal of a serpent's fangs destroys his sting.

By a non-electrical mechanical device the main line is closed as soon as the last truck of a car has crossed the switch. It can be opened when the engineer throws a lever on entering the siding.

The danger of open and split switches is absolutely eliminated. As a time-saver this device will remove from a third to a half of the number of stops and operations of switchmen in taking and leaving siding.

The value of the Shepherd Automatic Switch will be shown by a special demonstration to-morrow (Saturday), August 9, at 3 p. m., on a spur track of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, at the Atlanta Manufacturing Supply Company's shop in Oakland City, on the East Point car line.

The public is urged to view the practical demonstration of this wonderful invention.

Detailed information as to the Shepherd Automatic Switch will be gladly furnished by W. R. Green, at the Aragon Hotel, or W. C. Warfield, 706 Fourth National Bank Building.

Remember, the demonstration begins promptly at 3 p. m. tomorrow at Oakland City.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE first year of Mary Danforth's life in the business world dragged its dreary length away. In the beginning there had been some excitement attendant upon the new experience, and this had buoyed her up. To be sure there had been a great wrench in giving up the home of which she and her mother were so fond, but for her mother's sake the girl put her own griefs in the background. She remembered that once, several years ago, her father had said to his wife:

"She is singularly dependent and sensitive, Mary. If anything should happen to me you must look after her as tenderly as I have tried to do. I depend upon you for that."

The words recurred to the girl often through the wearisome months that followed upon her father's death, when she saw the elderly woman's sad face grow sadder as she tried to accustom herself to changed conditions. When Mary left home each morning it was with the appreciation that her mother must be both housekeeper and houseworker, and that she was not used to such toil. The girl would rise early in order that she herself might make her own bed and set her own room to rights, then help about the breakfast.

Yet in spite of these efforts on her part there were the dishes to be washed, the tiny flat to be swept and dusted, and the meals to be prepared by the widow. Mary would urge her to eat a substantial luncheon, yet she always feared that her own ideas of what "substantial" meant in this connection and her mother's interpretation of the word differed as soon as the daughter was out of sight. Therefore she would order from the butcher on her way downtown a chop or some other nourishing tidbit for her mother. Delicacies were a strain upon Mary Danforth's small purse, but her parent's strength must be kept up. Yet, do what the girl would, she was sure that when night came the patient widow was too tired or too depressed to sleep. She also knew—better than did her mother—that she herself, often went without food at the noon hour to save the price of a luncheon. A few crackers slipped into her bag before she left home would take the place of the noon-day meal.

In spite of these economies the family finances were very low. More than once Mrs. Danforth had been forced to use a little of what she called her "insurance money" to get herself some necessary bit of clothing. Each time this was done Mary was impressed afresh with the hopelessness of her efforts to support two women decently on her small salary.

Business was dull in all branches, and real estate was not booming. James Pearson, her employer, had a wife with enough money in her own right to support herself and her husband, so the success of his enterprise was not essential to his existence. He kept the business because he liked to feel that he was not dependent upon his wife. Mary often wished fervently that she was in the employ of some man to whom work was a necessity and who would be energetic and progressive. But she dared not abandon a certainty for an uncertainty.

It was at this juncture that Herbert Fischer ("Bert" as his friends called him), got into the habit of coming to Pearson's office to talk over a possible real estate deal. At first the girl barely noticed him, so absorbed was she in the many duties that fell to her lot, for she soon discovered that she was not only stenographer and typewriter, but assistant bookkeeper and office boy combined. Night found her jaded and nervous, looking forward eagerly to the sitter from Gordon Craig that often awaited her when she returned to her flat.

Twice Fletcher, who had remained in the inner office talking to Pearson, came into the outer office just as Mary was putting on her coat and hat, and offered to escort her to the elevated where she was to take the train uptown. Both times the girl had declined coldly, yet the second time she did this her heart smote her as she saw his disappointed expression. Somehow, she thought, as she walked toward the Cortlandt street station, the look in the man's eyes reminded her of that in a faithful dog's eyes. She was so lonely that even the thought of a dog's devotion would comfort her, she said to herself with whimsical humor. Yet this man Fletcher was a common kind of a person, she decided—not a bit like the men of her world.

Then she smiled bitterly. At least not like the men of the world she used to live in. Perhaps, after all, a girl who worked in a little office on a mean salary, and who lived in a five-room apartment in the poorest section of West Eighty-fourth street, could hardly afford to sneer at anything just because he was not educated to the standard that had once been hers, and had not the refinement that was traditional in the circle of which she had once formed a part. That circle had melted away since her father's death. She could not keep pace with her friends, and one by one they had dropped out of her life. She did not care, she muttered untruthfully to herself. When one declares bitterly that she "does not care" that is usually when really "cares" most.

And that night there was no letter from Craig. He usually wrote her three times a week, but this was the fourth time in six weeks that his letter had not come on the day that she expected it.

"Never mind, dearest," she said to her mother, who commented on the non-arrival of the expected epistle and who remarked that "it was queer that Gordon had not written regularly lately," and "hoped that nothing was wrong" with her daughter's lover. "Gordon and I understand each other, and he is extremely busy just now. One can hardly expect a man to write as often as a woman does, you know."

Her mother kissed the speaker tenderly. "That's so, darling," she assented, "and the busier Gordon is the more work he will do, and the sooner he will come for you, dearie—and for me."

"Yes!" the girl assented, bravely. "That is true, dear mother."

But in her heart she was saying: "How can I stand this kind of life unless he comes soon! How can I stand it!"

.:. Mother and Father .:.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

FATHER'S idea of good luck is winning a lottery ticket. Mother's is to find a pair of stockings that do not need darning.

It is father who hopes at the beginning of impracticable schemes, and mother who cheers when things go wrong in the end. It is father who is depressed and exaggerates what is lost, and mother who is cheerful in counting what is left.

Mother is proud to be told that the homeliest child in the family resembles her. Father isn't.

Here of late the children put the dependence in father's money that some generations ago was put in mother's prayers.

It is father, never mother, who expects the children to assume the burden as they get older. Mother, if she had her way, would carry it till the day of her death.

Once upon a time father called mother and the children together and said in the very wisest way: "This house would be conducted better if business principles were applied. Your system," frowning at mother, "would throw a peanut stand into the court of bankruptcy. I have opened what I will call a trouble book. Every member of the family will make entries in it of troubles, worries, etc., and we will meet at the end of the week to discuss the entries and act upon any suggestions for reform."

Then he frowned at mother again and went to his office. A week later the trouble book was opened.

"Mother won't let me go swimming." "Mother refuses to let me have any spending money; I suggest a needed reform here." "Mother wouldn't let me wear my best dress to play in," etc., etc., appeared in the handwriting of the children, and in father's handwriting there appeared: "Mother had the steak too well done"; "Mother is neglecting her personal appearance; I recall twenty years ago when she took more pride in doing her hair"; "Mother asked for money to-day to get Willie new shoes; I must look into her extravagance," etc., etc., from father and the children, but not one complaint from mother!

Passing between Scylla and Charybdis is no feat compared with the daily position of the mother whose children are always demanding more money of her, and whose husband is always telling her she must get along with less.

Before the oldest girl in the family is sixteen her father finds his throne tottering, and by the time she is eighteen he hasn't enough authority left to order a favorite old picture left on the parlor wall.

When father scolds and goes out slamming the door, the daughter wishes she could have a man like that for a husband about a minute, and she'd cure him, and her mother tells her she will have a chance some day.

It is not very creditable to those children who live and grow up, but in the years to come the mother finds her greatest comfort in the thought that the child that would have always been appreciative and kind, and never have hurt her, is the one that died when it was a baby.

Lady Constance Stewart Richardson on How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

The first figure is a dainty and simple pose, but it works beautifully into any of the dances that are so popular to-day, for, as we all know, dancing is coming into its own, and one of the most beautiful and widely neglected arts is now making a place for itself.

In this, as in so many dancing movements, the figure must be poised lightly on the ball of the foot.

The second figure (2B) is an exercise that must bring to the body the lightness of flying, and when once it is mastered you will find that you have true grace at your command.

FIGURE TWO.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

Copyright 1913 by International News Service.

WHEN I was a child of 11 I used to go out in the gardens of my English home and study the statues and statuettes that decorated it. For hours at a time I used to copy the poses of those lovely classical statues, and I found the greatest entertainment and joy in trying to imitate those beautiful poses. This was the beginning of my dancing, and from the taste I acquired for classical pose and movement has come, I feel sure, whatever measure of bodily grace is mine.

Dancing is essentially feeling, and the expression of that feeling well up in movement and rhythm. It makes for grace and for strong, healthy bodies as no other form of exercise can, because no other form of exercise is as universally possible, as entirely within the reach of all, as this natural expression of the poetry we all have down in our natures.

To-day I am giving you two exercises that express the joy of living to a wonderful extent and give the body much to rejoice in, for they make for grace, for lightness and for the universally desired bodily beauty.

The First Figure.

The first figure is a dainty and simple pose, but it works beautifully into any of the dances that are so popular to-day, for, as we all know, dancing is coming into its own, and one of the most beautiful and widely neglected arts is now making a place for itself. This figure (1B) may be learned with the support of a wall, but it should be worked out in such perfection that it can be done with absolute poise. It will strengthen weak ankles and insteps while it is developing power for grace in arms and legs. Here is my method of practicing it: Point the toes of the right foot straight forward and balance the weight firmly on that foot. Now raise the left leg slowly from the floor, keeping the foot almost at right angles to the other foot. Lift the arms slowly, keeping the right arm held in one continuous line, while the left is curved at the elbow and raised at the wrist. The fingers are held lightly and well apart. The whole body inclines slightly toward the left when the left arm and leg are expressing the greater amount of action, and when the weight falls in the alternate pose I always recommend the body sways to the raised right foot.

This exercise, like all other dancing movements, must express lightness and joy, for dancing is dancing only when it comes as an expression of a happy spirit. It must express personality and yet conform to true ideals of grace and beauty, and thus in time it will bring the body to grace and beauty, too.

Figure Two.

The second figure (2B) is an exercise that must bring to the body the lightness of flying, and when once it is mastered you will find that you have true grace at your command. In this, as in so many dancing movements, the figure must be poised lightly on the ball of the foot. Just such simple movements as poising the body lightly on the toes or ball of the foot will help avoid civilization's arch enemy, flatfoot, and will help in the acquisition of a light, springy walk.

Poise the body lightly on the right foot, with a general inclination toward the right. Stretch the right arm up and out and droop the left arm from shoulder to just below the waist in one long curve. Even while the body is swaying in this position, lift the left leg from the hip and sway it backward from the knee, making one line from knee to toes and bringing the foot almost on a level with the knee. Now stand on the left foot and alternate from side to side.

This exercise is by no means easy to master, but there is no movement of which I know that can be more absolutely counted on to bring the figure into the long, graceful, undulating lines we all so much admire.

WARMED OVER LOVE .:. By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PUZZLED writes as follows:

"I am a young girl 20 years of age and am deeply in love with a man eight years my senior, who reciprocates my love twice-fold. He has a very good position in business and is all that can be expected from a well-bred, respectable man. My only objection to him is that he is a widower and has two small children. My parents also object for this reason, and it is their only reason. If they thought the union would make me happy I am quite sure they would not stand in my way. I have met other young men, but can not seem to care for any of them."

The experience of wooing and winning a wife, of tasting the joy of being the head of one's own home, the creature comforts that domesticity means for a man, the broadening of heart and sympathies when the wife goes bravely alone to the shadow of death and returns with a child in her arms, the anguish of spirit when the mother falls sick and the desolation of the home when she is taken out of it forever, all tend to make a man more tender and considerate.

Though his home may have had its discomforts, he learns to regard it as his home; not his father's, or his mother's, but his own home. He also learned what an unimportant factor he was in its making, and realized the value of the WOMAN as he never realized it in his bachelor days.

That the experience is educational in a way that means more love, more consideration and an easing of the burden for the second wife, I am so certain that I wonder that the greater eligibility of the widower over the bachelor has not become an accepted fact.

Not Recognized.

Older women recognize it. Younger women do not because of the pretty sentiment they attach to being a man's first love.

The only objection to this man, then, is that he has two small children. Poor little motherless babes! I hope this little girl who has won this man's love has a heart broad enough to take in his children; a courage that will sustain her when, as a stepmother, she is maligned and misunderstood; and a charity that is big enough to cover their faults as effectually as if they were her own children.

Someone must mother the motherless, and the task is hard at its best, but one that is made light in the all-sustaining power of Love. If this man and his girl have for each other a love that will stand the strain, their union will be happy though he had ten children.

Learns Something.

His previous experience has made him dependent, tender and broader and considerate. He has two children and he knows that the woman he takes to the altar promises more than to be a loyal wife. She promises to be a loving mother to his children, to accept their resentment and ingratitude without complaint, and to know that hereafter to the end of her days criticism will be her lot.

He knows all this, and is grateful. On his first wedding day he regarded himself as a prize; the second time he goes to the altar with two children at his heels he knows, if he is a man and knows anything, that the prize is the brave-hearted girl who accompanies him.

He was confident on his first wedding day that he was dividing his joys. He knows on his second wedding day that he is dividing his burdens and sorrows, and the knowledge makes him humble.

You love him, my dear; you have met no other man you could love. He loves you, and I am sure your love is big enough to take in his children.

Nothing counts for as much as love. If you love, you know no burden. When you love, there is no sorrow too hard to bear. Marry him, go on loving him, and so long as you love him, you will be happy.

Not Alone.

An old Indian man, selling baskets, called at Mrs. Allen's one morning. He was very anxious to make a sale, and, after considerable parleying, he said:

"Make me an offer, madam, and see if I don't take you up."

Little 5-year-old Bertha was a spectator to the interview, and when the man made this remark she threw her arms around her mother, crying:

"Mother, if he takes you, I'll go, too."

.:. A Bachelor's Diary .:.

By MAX.

JULY 6.—"Tell me your name, Little Girl," said the woman who had rolled out such expressions as "the fundamental principles of liberty" as naturally as an entirely different type of woman rolls out the words "darlingest" and "cute," showing to which class she belonged.

Manette looked at me. I nodded my head. Then, to my surprise, the child told her real name—my name, and the name I was trying to keep secret.

"Blake," I hastily added. "Blake," she repeated after me.

The visitor looked grimly satisfied. Her suspicions were confirmed!

"You are Manette H——, the little heiress. You are not Manette Blake at all, and if you will come with me I will take you to your guardian. If you," turning to me, "interfere, I will have you arrested."

I laughed. "I hope," I said, putting fresh bait on my hook, and casting it out into the water, "that I will live long enough to see your sex in power. You are so inconsequential, so altogether unreasoning, and so cocksure that you are right that we will no longer be forced to turn to the joke books for amusement. The Congressional Records, in that glorious period, will cause a laugh to ring around the world."

"When the women are in power," she retorted, "idlers like you who go around insulting women will be flogged."

This was growing interesting. "I am not idle," I replied. "I am fishing. I have been fishing for three hours and haven't had a bite. That indicates persistence, steadfastness of purpose and ambition that will not be discouraged. As for being insulting——"

A Bluff Called.

I turned and looked her square in the face. "I don't see," I said, slowly, and as if giving it deep thought, "why you used that word. To insult you I should have to regard you or your intentions seriously. Believe me, madame, I had not done that."

I drew my line carefully in and packed up my box of fishing tackle. "Come, Manette." I said to the child, "let us go and be arrested. Are you ready?" turning to the very red-faced woman who stood beside me.

"If you will walk with us as far as the cottage I will get a horse, or do you prefer to have the child ride with with you and have me tied to your horse's tail and dragged as captives were in the olden times?"

I had called her bluff! "I want nothing," in anger, "but to see that child restored to its guardian."

"Then rest easy," I replied, taking off my hat and bowing. "She is with her guardian now."

"If you are Mr. Max——" she began, and could say no more, for she realized what a spectacle she had made of herself.

I bowed again and turned away. A moment later she came running after me. "I hope," she stammered, "that you will forgive me, but your looks——"

I cut her short with a bow, and, picking Manette up in my arms, turned on to a narrow wooded path, and was soon out of sight.

"She is the kind of woman," I mused, "that thinks that to be a man is prima facie evidence of guilt. And the trouble is, her number is increasing."

A New Spot.

July 16.—Manette and I have found a new picnic spot, and for several days we had eluded the interloper, but on the fourth day I found her sitting on the porch when we got home. She had come, she said, to borrow Manette to take part in a tableaux to be given for the cause. "She would make," she said, "such a pretty little Goddess of Liberty. Besides," she argued, "the change would do her good. She needs a little civilization."

That made me smile. "Civilization" of the brand found at summer resorts, consists in sitting around on hotel verandas, comparing surgical operations and crochet patterns and branding as "bold" and "scheming" the woman who receives the attention of the only man at the place. I could imagine Manette being passed around by the crochet cut-ups who would speculate on the price of her clothes, her uncle's wealth, and seek to secure through her childish frankness the key to my family secrets.

I refused. "The child," I explained, "is dearer to me than the Cause. She is in bed by 8 every night and has never been permited to stay up late and grow feverish and excited taking part like a manikin in some foolish show. I know that mothers let their children do it, but I am not a mother, I am only a man."

"And the rudest man that ever lived," she retorted, striding out to get on her horse.

I did not offer to assist her. I never have. It would be inconsistent for her to accept.

July 28.—I am writing this while lying in bed, and somewhere in the room, I don't know where, for I can't easily turn my head to see, there is a trained nurse.

I do not know how she got here nor when. All I know is that her attentions are very grateful to me, and that there have been days when I seemed to be slipping away from everyone into nowhere, and only the firm, cool touch of her hand held me.

I think I was conscious of her hand and its helpfulness and soothing magic for days before I opened my eyes wide enough to look her in the face. Even now I do not know what she looks like, and am not interested. I lie for hours with my eyes closed, asking nothing more in life than that a pair of very strong hands, white and soft and gentle, be there to turn my head when the pain of one position is too great, to smooth my pillow, and I hear a voice somewhere murmur, "Poor boy, poor boy!"

July 29.—Richards is here. I do not know when she came. I only know that every few hours she comes from some remote place—the next room is remote in my present condition—and helps The Hands move me to an easier position, and that with her coming all concern for Manette has left me.

Fall Guy.

A gentleman in a club had formed the hopeless and harmful habit of taking too much to drink—alcoholically speaking—before he went home every evening.

"How does he know what time to go home?" asked a stranger in the club one night.

"It's this way," explained a member. "He goes to the head of that long flight of stairs leading to the street. If he falls down them, he knows it's time to go home."

A Ready Proof.

Father—Just fancy, Willie, all these fields used to be under the sea, and fish were swimming about where we are standing.

Willie—Yes, dad; here's an empty salmon tin.

MAIDEN MUSINGS.

What chance has sane, sensible reason against the fortified power of a wild habit?

Loss is unpleasant—but it never rises to the dignity of calamity unless it is the loss of self-respect.

There is more real joy in carrying out intentions than in merely planning to do it.

A good way to be at peace with the world is to expect little of it, to be unafraid of it, to see some good in it, and to give much to it!

When the Sun Rose

IT was absolutely still in the large, dark room where the patient lay.

A small lamp with a dark shade faintly illuminated the heavy silk curtains which covered the windows. In a corner of the room stood the little bed in which a small feverish body was struggling with death. A beautiful young woman was sitting at the bedside, her eyes anxiously followed every movement of the sick child.

Her costly evening gown showed that she had returned direct from some society affair. Her gloves and fan she had thrown carelessly on the table.

A few hours ago she had been sitting at the dinner table covered with flowers and surrounded by merry people, when a messager had arrived with the word that her little boy had suddenly been taken ill.

She hurried home as fast as her big car could carry her and now she was sitting here full of anxiety and despair.

Over and over again, she asked herself if it could really be possible that she was about to lose her fair-haired little darling. Oh no, God could not be so cruel! The boy was her greatest, her only joy! She realized that more than ever now, when she was in danger of losing him.

She wondered if she had always thought so, and her whole past life came back to her mind.

She saw herself as a happy, lively and spoiled girl, whose every wish was gratified. She saw herself surrounded by admirers and suitors, who flattered and envied her, but she never felt, not even for a short single moment, the real, true joy which fills and takes possession of your heart and soul.

No Love.

Then the learned and famous Professor Bornemann was introduced in her parents' home. He fell in love with the young, lively girl and she accepted him, though he was twenty years older than she.

Did she love him then?

No, unfortunately, not.

Rich as she was, she decorated her home with every possible luxury and comfort and filled it with guests, balls and dinners in endless succession.

For a time her husband let her do as she pleased, but one day he took both her hands and looked earnestly into her eyes, while he said in his gentle voice:

"Let us be done with all these empty pleasures, and let me see that I have a splendid little wife, who cares more for her husband and her baby than for all the dances and dinners in the world."

At first she stared at him in surprise, unable to understand him. Then she tore her hands away and answered angrily:

"I do not see how you can make such a request. You are old and have enjoyed all the pleasures of life, while I am young yet and have a right to enjoy myself."

He looked at her sadly, then he turned away and left the room without another word. And since then her life had been one mad round of pleasures, while her husband and child were left to take care of themselves.

And had she then found the happiness she sought?

No, not for a single minute.

* * *

The child in the bed moved again.

"Mama," the little feverish lips whispered.

She bent forward and stroked his hot forehead with her cool hand.

"Mama," he moaned once more.

Anxious Moments.

She felt a cruel pain in her heart. Had she done anything to deserve to be called Mama? She bent lower still and two big tears fell on the golden curls on the white pillow.

The door opened. Her husband entered, followed by the doctor. Her eyes sought his, which looked deep, deep into her soul.

The doctor felt the boy's pulse and shook his head gravely.

"I can not say anything now. I shall return in an hour, when the crisis is due. Until then we have hope." With a silent bow, he left the room.

The professor had sat down on a chair on the opposite side of the bed. His gray eyes looked at the little figure in the bed with infinite tenderness. The young wife fell down on her knees at her son's bedside.

The boy tossed about restlessly, while the minutes dragged along slowly.

In a quarter of an hour, then——

It was the same thought that filled the minds of husband and wife as they looked at each other across their little son's bed. Then both looked at the hands of the clock.

The child was still restless and feverish. Over and over again the mother stroked her boy's forehead with her cool hand. Then she let it slide down on the silk cover and inch by inch it crept closer to a strong, manly hand, until she took courage and touched it.

Their eyes met and a new sacred silent understanding was born.

* * *

The clock struck 6. The boy was resting easily, his breathing regular and his cheeks lost their feverish color. The crisis was over. The child's life was out of danger.

The professor stood up, went over to the window, drew the curtains aside and opened it. Then he went back to the bed and kneeled down at his wife's side.

The fresh air filled the room—and then the sun rose.

When the Whistle Blows

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says

YOU lift your eyes to the great clock in the white tower and see six o'clock marked with widespread hands. You hear the chimes and whistles clamoring over all the choked streets. Six o'clock! And the girls who smile all day long as steadily as any chorus girl is bidden to do, who haul down enough yards of stuff in a day to tie a sash around this vain old world, who try debutante dancing-frocks on fat relics who've seen forty summer moons or more, who get down endless "middies" for lean little girls, whose too flat pay envelope is sometimes the fortune of the family, all those who need and earn a thicker pay envelope and electric fans, all these bits of womanhood who go to make up the brave army that work in shops pour out of the employes' door and out under the clamor of "six by the clock." The blonde hat model, in her sleazy, slippery, little black gown, the close-tailored girl who sells suits, with her crinkly hair and big black purse like a baby kit-bag, all there—and HAPPY! Have you noticed that? And PRETTY! Have you noticed that? They have many good excuses not to be the first—but they laugh and laugh—and you hear little things like this: "He said to her—and she said to him." "Isn't that great?" and "What are you going to wear?" and "I had the time of my life!" And pretty—they'd have a heap of excuses not to be that, too—what with trying to stretch a bill longer and greener than it is, and standing on their two feet all day long, and smiling long and sweet at grouches. But they are. Among them you find the trimmest girls in town. And some of their faces make a society belle's wish it could go back to Heaven and get made all over again.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A little boy of four years of age, on noticing for the first time a lock of gray hair on his father's head, asked:

"Papa, why are some of your hairs gray?"

Thinking to drive home a moral lesson, the father answered:

"Papa has a new gray hair every time his little boy is naughty."

The child seemed lost in thought, but, after a pause, said gravely:

"Then grandpa must have had awful naughty boys."

It was after a junior league match, in which the home side lost eight goals to nil. The goalkeeper was naturally blamed for the disaster, and overhearing that things were being said about him, went straight to the captain and inquired:

"Did you tell Bill that I was the worst goalkeeper in the village?"

"No, I didn't. I thought he knew," was the reply.

Even doctors are not always literal in their prescriptions.

"You must take exercise," said the doctor to a patient. "The motor car in a case like yours gives the best exercise that——"

"But I can't afford a car, on insurance pay," the patient growled.

"Don't buy one; just dodge 'em!" said the doctor.

"What's the matter, dear?" asked a woman of her troubled looking husband.

"Oh, I'm worried about the money market," he testily responded.

"And I'm bothered about the market money," quietly replied the woman, as she counted the contents of her purse.

"Will you give me something to drink?" he asked faintly of the nurse.

"Certainly," said the nurse, offering him a glass of water.

He put his hand feebly.

"Give it to me in a teaspoon, please," he whispered, huskily, "until I get used to it."

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

But this young man was not one to be easily daunted. "Do you wish me to make up an article out of surmises?" he inquired. "A young girl of this city has died in a carriage and the people have a right to know how. Shall I say by use of the knife or——"

"Scoundrel!" came from Dr. Molesworth's lips. "You deserve chastising, but I shall simply see that you do, what you have probably never done before, tell the exact truth." And, turning to the detective at his side, he exclaimed, "Note what I tell the fellow. If he alters a word or interposes one item that is not borne out by what he observes and hears here, I will see that he is discharged from his place. I know what paper he is on, and I know the editor, and my threat is no idle one. Now let him listen. This young lady, Mildred Farley by name, was engaged to marry me to-night. Being an orphan without friends—pardon me, Mrs. Olney, I should have said relatives, perhaps—and not being well, she thought a private marriage at a hotel would be most suitable. I agreed with her and the arrangements were all made for the ceremony. But she was sicker than I supposed. The symptoms of fever which I had perceived in her this afternoon increased rapidly on my departure and when I returned, before the specified hour to marry her, I found she had fled, leaving an incoherent note behind, which so alarmed me that I went out at once, and jumping into my phaeton, drove up and down the streets searching for her.

The End of It.

"I did not find her, of course; and remembering an important prescription I had promised to send a patient of mine, I dispatched my driver with it, and was taking my phaeton home myself, when I suddenly detected a woman seated on one of the steps in Twenty-second street whose appearance struck me as familiar. Though no believer in miracles, I accepted this one without scruple, and, jumping from my carriage, went up to her and soon saw that I was right in supposing I had found Miss Farley. She was very ill, and did not know me. 'I am sleepy,' she said, and dropped her head on my shoulder as I lifted her up. At the same moment I heard the sound of breaking glass, as if a small vial had slipped to the sidewalk and been shivered, while a pungent odor arose to my nostrils so suggestive of the poison known as prussic acid that I felt greatly alarmed, and hastily carrying her to my phaeton I put her in and drove as fast as I could toward home. But soon her increasing pallor and general condition convinced me that death was near, and I stopped at the drug store on the corner of Nineteenth street, and, leaving her in the phaeton, ran in and asked one of the clerks to assist me in bringing her into the store. He consented, and we went back to the phaeton, but only to find that I was too late. She had died in my absence."

"Horrible!" burst from the landlady's lips, and even the callous porter looked shocked and a trifle ashamed.

"Where she got the poison," continued the doctor, "remains to be found out. Perhaps she bought it after leaving the hotel; perhaps she had had it with her there as a medicine. If so, she may have taken an overdose without being conscious of her danger. I only know I was her physician and had never prescribed it for her, nor did I know she suffered from any ailment that required such a tonic."

"And is that all? Will you tell me nothing more?"

"You have a very good article," remarked the doctor, dryly. "Leave something for the future."

And the reporter had to be content, and the detectives, too.

The reporter gone, Dr. Molesworth turned again toward Mr. Gryce.

"And who are you?" he asked.

"I was going to say I didn't know," answered the seemingly trembling old man. "I am in pain and want to get home. Will one of you help me down the steps?"

"In pain!" repeated the doctor, who was not by any means a hard-hearted man.

"Yes, rheumatism in the stomach, I think. I came for some opium, but I won't wait any longer. They will worry about me at home. Besides, I feel a bit better now."

His manner was so natural, his look so in accordance with the character he had assumed, that Dr. Molesworth suspected nothing and kindly held out his arm. But he found the alleged detective had forestalled him.

"Let me do this business," he entreated, with a great show of good-nature and respect. "I have nothing else to do and am used to old men." And, nodding graciously to his superior, he led him carefully out, whispering as soon as the lintel of the door had hidden them from view, "What orders? Dou kou smell anything wrong here?"

"Watch," was the quiet but emphatic command. "Note everything, even to the lifting of an eyelid, but say nothing and do not seem to watch."

Then as they reached the front door, "Don't be hurt if I send some one else here. They know your character too well." And with this the elder man went out with a slow and hobbling step. The pain and distress of that evening had not been altogether assumed.

Some Points.

MR. GRYCE had only a look to go upon, but it was a look that spoke volumes. When a man shrinks from the eye of a detective, he has something to conceal, and when that something is connected with the death of a young girl by poison, it behooves an officer of the law to follow that man till he finds out what that something is.

It was therefore with some interest that he received in the early morning a summons from the gentleman who held the office of Coroner at this time, to come down to his office and have a talk with him concerning this case of Mildred Farley; nor was it long before he presented himself at the place designated. He found the Coroner alone and the following conversation ensued:

"Well, Gryce," said the latter, "I have just come from the house where you played the part of a sick patient so successfully last night. May I ask how you chanced to be so prompt on the scene of action? Do you scent out mysterious cases or had you any knowledge which led you to that especial spot just at the moment when your presence was possibly most required?"

"Both," was the good-natured reply. "Something which I call curiosity, but which I am fain now to consider instinct, made me an intruder in Dr. Molesworth's home last night. But I had a bit of knowledge to start with that roused his curiosity, and it is of this I want to speak, if you think the subject worthy of discussion or Dr. Molesworth anything but what he seems, a good, honest and reliable man."

"I think," returned the Coroner, slowly, "any subject of this kind worthy of discussion; and as for Dr. Molesworth, he stands high, but so do a great many others whose testimony we are called upon to question every day of our lives. You need not stop on his account if you have seen or discovered anything which contradicts his story."

"What is his story?"

"Didn't you hear it? I understood that he told all he had to tell in your presence."

"He told two stories."

"How two?"

"One with his lips, another with his face; that's what makes me doubt him."

"You do doubt him, then?"

Gryce's Story.

Mr. Gryce tapped the table before him with an abstracted air, murmured some unintelligible words and looked as if he thought he had replied.

"Come," cried the other, "your reasons? You usually have good ones."

"Yes," assented Mr. Gryce, "I usually have, but in this case it would be hard for me to tell you just what they are. I feel that there is something back of this affair which we do not see, but I am not ready as yet to go any further or even express any suspicions—say that I have any. The facts which I have been able to glean in the short space of time we have had are meager, but interesting. Perhaps you can add to them; if so, our conference may lead to something. This is what I know." And he related first what Dr. Molesworth had to say about the matter the evening before. When he had finished, he asked, "Does this story agree with what he told you this morning?"

"Exactly."

"Very good. So much for so much. Now for the side lights. I saw the girl myself yesterday afternoon."

"You?"

"Yes; I saw her, but I did not speak to her, nor did I recognize her for the person she was. Indeed, I took her for another woman whom she greatly resembled. It was at the C—— Hotel."

"Ah!"

"I need not enter into any further particulars about this circumstance, as it does not concern the affair before us, which stands quite apart by itself. Enough that for reasons of my own I played the spy on this young woman and saw her when she thought herself alone, in the privacy of her own apartment. This was some time after noon and the great fact which I wish to bring before you is this, that she was then to all appearance (and my eye is accustomed to read countenances) perfectly happy and had not in face or bearing the least trace of sickness."

"That is a point, certainly."

"Note it, and then add to it this, that being still under the error of which I have spoken, I went back to the hotel some three or four hours later, and wishing to confirm a former suspicion, sought my vantage spot again, and in conjunction with another witness whose testimony you will not need, looked in upon this Miss Farley again, when I perceived that a great change had passed over her. But it was not that of sickness. From happiness she had descended to misery, and in her pallor and wild, unrestrained attitudes I could detect the expression of despair, but none of bodily suffering or mental disorder.

"Now, what had occasioned this change in her in a space of time so short? I think I can answer that it was an interview with Dr. Molesworth. For, according to his own story and that of the hotel clerk, he was with her for a half hour or so in the afternoon; and though upon going out he told the hotel clerk he was coming back in the evening to marry her, something in his determination or in what had taken place at their interview had destroyed in her every vestige of hope and happiness. For it was anything but an expectant bride whom I saw after this visit, as it had been anything but an anxious woman whom I had seen before it.

"So! so!"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LEAVE THAT TO HER.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am twenty-one and in love with a girl of nineteen, and she loves me. Another man, who is much older, is trying to win her love, but she doesn't care for him. At present I am not settled, and it may take about three years before I can marry, while the other man can support her quite nicely. Have I the right to ask her to wait? S. J.

She loves you. She doesn't love the other man. If she is worthy of a good man's love she will wait indefinitely for him in preference to marrying a man she does not care for. Give her the right to decide, and see that you don't make her time of waiting too long.

SHE IS IN THE WRONG.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a young lady for the last seven months. About a week ago I escorted her to a dance where she met some of her old gentlemen friends, who received her attention all the evening. When the time came to go home I asked her to go home with me, but she refused, saying she could go home with others. I then left her. Did I do proper in leaving her? Who should apologize? RICHARD.

She refused to let you escort her home though you had taken her there. Under the circumstances there was nothing for you to do but leave her. You owe her no apology.

KEEPING EVERLASTINGLY AT IT

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am nineteen, and dearly in love with a girl two years my junior, whom I have known for the past seven years. Some time ago she met a young man at a wedding, and has since been devoting all of her attention to him. I love her dearly and would ask you how I can win her love again. F. B. T.

Your seven years' devotion merits better returns. Be devoted and persistent, and if this fails change your tactics to indifference. The appearance of your rival stirred you. Has it occurred to you that if she found she had a rival it might renew her interests?

YOU WERE RIGHT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am sixteen and have been keeping company with a young man about three months. He has bee sick and he telephoned and asked me to come and see him. I told him it was improper for a girl to go to a man's house, and he got angry. Was I right? R. M.

Don't worry, my dear, you did just right. I don't admire him because of his request of his reception of your refusal. Never go to see a man under any circumstances unless your mother goes with you.

HARRY GLENN IS OUT TO CINCH 25-MILE TITLE

THE Atlanta Motordrome will be the scene of some interesting races to-night. The feature event will be a 25-mile race between the ten riders here at the present time, and the speed demons should furnish enough excitement in this race to last the fans for some time.

All the riders claim they have their machines working faster than ever, and it would not surprise many to see some dark horse win the long grind. Harry Glenn's great race last Tuesday has made him the talk of the town with motorcycle fans. Most of them want to see Harry win to-night and prove that his great riding Tuesday was not a fluke.

THE 25-mile race is for the championship of the South. To have an Atlanta boy capture this title would be a great honor to the city. Harry Glenn realizes this and it is a sure bet that Harry will be trying every minute of the time.

Richards, Graves, McNeil and Renel are also anxious to take the big event. Richards' machine was not going good Tuesday, but he says it is in great shape now. Graves is not saying much but Morty is out for some glory. McNeil and Renel can also be counted on to be in the race from start to finish.

* * *

THE Motordrome Purse will open the card. There will be three heats of one mile and a final of two miles. A special match race between Glenn and Lockner, best two in three heats, is also attracting much attention. The five-mile invitation race, open to all comers, fills out the program.

Following is the complete card for to-night:

First Event.
Motordrome Purse (qualifying heats, one mile; final, two miles; winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat to qualify). First Heat—Richards, Lockner, Graves.

Second Event.
Motordrome Purse—Second Heat—Glenn, Renel, Swartz.

Third Event.
Motordrome Purse—Third Heat—McNeil, Lewis, Luther, Shields.

YANKEE OWNER PUTS IN CLAIM FOR CUBAN STARS

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—President Frank Farrell, of the New York American League club, will appeal to the National Commission to set aside the sale of three Cuban players of the Long Branch team, of the New York and New Jersey League, to the Boston Nationals. The players are Pitcher Laqua, Shortstop Arragon and Outfielder Padran, according to Farrell. Owner Henriques, of the Long Branch team, recently offered to sell him these players. Farrell agreed to take them, and the price was fixed.

According to the verbal agreement, the three players were to report to Manager Chance yesterday. Instead of the players reporting, Henriques sold them to President Gaffney, of the Braves. Farrell says he has several witnesses to the deal.

Just a Little Glimpse Below the Surface

Kniseley on Southern Hurlers

Explains Peculiarity of Hitters

PETE KNISELEY, outfielder for Birmingham, undertakes to explain the good showing some of the pitchers make in this circuit, only to fall down when they get into the big show; also why Southern leaguers hit well in the majors. Says Pete:

"The Southern League is the hardest place in the country to bat up in the .300 list. No wonder a player hits higher in the major league than in the Southern.

"In the majors, the pitchers do not exert themselves until real danger faces them. When the game is progressing without heavy hitting, the pitchers serve the ball over and give you a chance to swat it, hoping that it will go into one of the fielders' hands. But not here.

"From the beginning of the game until the finish, the Southern League pitchers work at top speed. As the result, the batter has a poorer opportunity to make a high mark. But I attribute the many ascensions in the Southern to this fact. Unless a man is of wonderful physique, he is unable to twirl nine innings, putting his greatest effort on every toss. There are a few who are able to stand the pace. Elmer Brown is a twirler of this class, while Bill Prough is another.

"But the average pitcher is able to stand the gaff for six or seven innings. Then when he weakens the batters feast on the offerings and frequently drive him from the mound. But, of course, there are clever pitchers in the Southern. Hardgrove and Foxen do not pitch hard until there is danger and are very successful.

"I believe that a .300 batsman in the Southern can duplicate the feat in the majors."

KNISELEY speaks truly both in respect to the pitching and batting. It has long been noted as a peculiar fact that recruits from the Southern League and the Pacific Coast League seldom have batted less in the majors than in the minors. Under ordinary circumstances, it would be fair to discount the average recruit's minor league batting by 10 to 20 points when he gets to the real class, but Daubert and Wheat both have batted better in fast company than they did in the bushes; Charles Stengel has become one of the heaviest clouters in the National and Red Smith is holding his own.

All of them are from the Southern, and probably Kniseley has the right answer. The explanation of the ability of Coast leaguers to hit in the majors up to their Coast standards has been that the heavy winds in some cities and the dampness in others on the Coast keep the batting down to a minimum, and a man who can hit in that country can hit anywhere.

THE tendency of young pitchers from the South to throw their whole strength into every ball delivered has also been noted by many observers. Brooklyn has an illustration of that very mistake in Frank Allen, who persists in working with all his might in every inning, with the result that when he is in a tight place he has comparatively little reserve strength with which to extricate himself.

An even more pronounced case of the same sort was furnished by Bill Burns, who is a native of Texas, but got his start on the Coast. Bill was one of the most powerful men that ever broke into baseball, but he did not know how to conserve his energy. He was at different periods with Washington, Detroit and Cincinnati, and with all his record was the same. He had the habit of blowing up at the end of the seventh or eighth inning, and, if the game ever went more than nine innings, it was a dead sure bet that Bill had nothing but his glove and spikes left for the tenth.

Nap Rucker used to fall for the same foolish policy in his callow days, but Nap has become old and wise and uses no more exertion now than is necessary, although he admits it took years for the light to break on him.

M'GRAW HINTS THAT GOLF COST MATHEWSON BEATING

PITTSBURG, PA., Aug. 8.—One of Giants was asked just before the New York team left Pittsburg for Cincinnati why McGraw did not take Mathewson out of the box in the fifth inning Wednesday, when seven runs were batted off his delivery.

"I think Mac wanted to impress something on Christy," said the Giant. "McGraw has been arguing all along against his pitchers playing golf. He does not object to the sport for infielders or outfielders, but he claims it does the pitchers no good, and he has tried to make Matty cut it out. McGraw claims that handling a golf stick tires the muscles in a pitcher's hands and wrists."

JACK JOHNSON BARRED FROM BOXING IN PARIS

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—Jack Johnson will not be permitted to box in this country. The "American Boxing Federation" has requested the French Federation ot prohibit Johnson, the American negro pugilist, from fighting in France and that body has decided to grant the request.

FIGHT MANAGER IMPROVING.

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 8.—Larney Lichtenstein, local manager of fighters, who on Monday underwent an operation at the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, where he had two ribs taken out, is recovering so rapidly that he intends making the trip to Winnipeg on August 14 to be with Steve Ketchel for his fight there. Doc Briggs performed the operation, and it was very successful.

THOMPSON OR LOVE TO PITCH SECOND GAME

By Joe Agler.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 8.—Manager Smith hasn't decided whether Thompson or Love will pitch against the Vols to-day, but it will be one of them. Slim is eager for another crack at the enemy, and is sure he can lick them without trouble. Chapman will catch.

We lost another tough one yesterday, and it looks as if the jinx were closing in on us again. With the score tied up in the tenth inning, Dent was taken out to allow Price, a left-hander, to pitch to Callahan and Spratt, both batting on that side, with Williams on second and one out.

The move looked like the proper one, but Callahan spoiled everything with a long drive that scored Williams and knocked us ou of a hard-fought game. Dent pitched his usual fine game, and Harry Holland's hit drove in our only tally.

Yesterday was "Business Men's Day," and there was a big parade of automobiles, and the players of both teams and a band. About 4,000 were at the park, where some field day events were put on before the game. Tommy Long beat Dave Callahan in the 100-yard dash, doing it in 11 seconds, which is some fast time without sprinting togs on. Harry Chapman won the throwing contest from Smith, of Atlanta, and Young and Beck, of Nashville.

JOCKEY CLAIMS HE WAS OFFERED $1,000 TO 'PULL'

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Jockey Wilson threw a commotion into sporting circles here to-day by declaring that he had been approached with an offer of a bribe to throw a race recently at the Belmont track meeting.

The stewards refused to comment upon it, as the matter will be sifted by the officials. The story involves another jockey, a friend of Wilson, who acted as an intermediary, and a well-known Bowery politician.

Wilson's specific statement was to the effect that a man named Reed, who has been warned off the track a number of times, approached him at the Belmont track and offered him $1,000 to pull Working Lad in a race on June 24. The stewards, it is said, have exonerated Wilson. No action has as yet been taken against the Bowery politician, but it is known that if he can not clear himself he will be asked to absent himself in future from all meetings given under the association's auspices.

Harry Williams, who made his debut as first baseman for the New York Yankees, won the hearts of the Gotham fans by pounding out a home run.

Ed Stack, the pitcher recently obtained by the Cubs from Brooklyn in exchange for Ed Reulbach, pitched Chicago to victory in his first appearance in a Cub uniform.

"Home Run" Baker, in four trips to the plate in the Philadelphia-Cleveland game yesterday, pounded out two doubles and a single and scored or sent in six runs.

The Athletics are leading the American League by eight and a half games.

COLE QUITS COLUMBUS TEAM; MAY JOIN FEDERALS

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. 8.—Because Manager Hinchman fined and chased him off the field here, after Umpire Cahill had lifted him from the game, "King" Cole to-day asserted that he was done with pitching for the Columbus team. He says he's going to a nunnamed Federal League club.

TOMMY DIXON FALLS FROM RING IN SEVENTH ROUND

JOPLIN, MO., Aug. 8.—An injury received by Tommy Dixon, of Kansas City, during a fight here last night with Freddie Cole, of Indianapolis, caused the contest, scheduled for fifteen rounds, to terminate in the seventh round. Dixon fell through the ropes to the floor, injuring his arm.

RED SOX RECALL PLAYERS.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The Boston Red Sox to-day exercised their right of option on three players in the American Association. Infielder Krug, of the Indianapolis team, and Infielder Scott and Pitcher Brant, of St. Paul, recently sold with the right of repurchase, were recalled.

DENT PASSES 3 BATTERS IN 53 INNINGS

WHEN Elliott Dent walked Jack Spratt in the first inning of yesterday's game in Nashville, the Atlanta pitcher interrupted slightly the progress of a very fine bit of record-making in this league.

It was his third base on balls in fifty-three innings.

Before the game started yesterday, Dent's record, beginning July 18, was two bases on balls in forty-four innings. This included a "long run" of thirty-three innings, or practically three full games, without a walk being issued.

The big right-hander is going at top speed just now, and his control is well-nigh perfect. He doesn't get himself in the hole very often, either, and it is a rare thing for the batsman to be able to take a tight grip on terra firma and wait confidently for the next one to come over. Only the toughest kind of luck and very feeble hitting support cost the big boy another win yesterday.

RED SOX RECALL FOUR; BUY CATCHER M'NALLY

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The Boston Red Sox to-day exercised their right of option on three players in the American Association. Infielder Krug, of the Indianapolis team, and Infielder Scott and Pitcher Brant, of St. Paul, recently sold with the right of repurchase, were recalled.

Michael J. McNally, shortstop for the Utica team, New York State League, also was bought by the Red Sox.

LANGFORD AND JEANNETTE TO CLASH IN LONG BOUT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8.—Promoter McCarey last night received messages from Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette accepting his terms for a twenty-round bout. In all probability the date set for the heavyweight event will be October 7.

"I would like to see the question of supremacy between Langford and Jeannette settled," explained the promoter. "That's my reason for making the match. In a scheduled twenty-round go in my ring with Eyton refereeing, the two blacks will have to extend themselves. I will never stage a mixed match between a black and a white boxer. So long as the colored men battle among themselves I will put no handicap in their way."

All doubt as to Wolgast's willingness to box on the September date was removed yesterday when the former lightweight champion telegraphed as follows:

"Will positively meet the winner of the Dundee-White fight of August 12. Hope it will be Dundee, as I want to show the public the difference between a real fighter and a jumping jack."

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

HOW SWEET.

How sweet to be a manager and run a baseball team—
At least when you are winning games it is a blissful dream.
But when the team is losing, is his job a thing of joy?
Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi!

Whether Ed Reulbach or Eddie Stack is the better athlete is yet to be determined, but it is a well-known fact that the Cubs never again will own Reulbach's equal as a badger fighter.

We are in receipt of a song written by that far-famed pugilist, Packey McFarland. The song is entitled, "I'd Like to Know." So would a whole lot of promoters, pugilists, managers and other insects.

Not that we are an expert on songology, but after reading Sir. McFarland's ballad we are convinced that he is a lightweight.

If Joe Jackson were to do all his batting at Shibe Park he would be chased to the minors or (worse yet) to St. Louis.

It is said that the said Joe Jackson has hit over .400 at the White Sox Park this season. Joe never would be mistaken for a White Sock—not even by a blind man.

There is charity even in baseball. For instance, Tom Lynch has handed a protested game to Joe Tinker.

Horace Fogel avers that he wants to put a baseball team in New York. This leads one to suspect that Horace has not heard of the adventures of Frank Chance.

Washington fans having presented Walter Johnson with a loving cup filled with money, it is said that Columbus fans will hand King Cole a shaving mug filled with lather.

It is said that fighters can't come back, but every day we note otherwise. For instance, there is Jack Heimen, the heavyweight. As he was leaving the place some philanthropist said: "Wait a minute, Jack! We're going to buy another." He came back.

ONLY THREE LEFT OF CUBS' OLD GUARD

By O. B. Keeler.

A COUPLE of days ago the papers carried a bit of baseball news to the effect that Edward Reulbach had been traded by the Cubs for Eddie Stack, of Brooklyn.

Of itself, that wasn't a very exciting bit of information. Neither Mr. Stack nor Mr. Reulbach has been exceeding any speed limits this year—even in Philadelphia.

But aside from that—

Say, did you notice a queer little nip of regret when you read that small item?

• • •

IT just marked the passing of one more of the few remaining original Cubs; the wonderful clan gathered by Frank Selee and molded by Frank Chance into what many will always believe to have been the greatest baseball machine of all time. And those who sing the praises of the Athletics and the rest have at last to admit that Connie Mack and the others have yet to win 116 games in a season.

• • •

BUT that's by the way.

You remember the Original Cubs, don't you? Let's see—can we recall the line-up of the smashing years of 1906-7-8?

Well, back of the wood was Johnny Kling, aided and abetted by Pat Moran—what little aiding and abetting Johnny needed in those halcyon days.

The slab staff? We'll match that, now, against any in history. Brown, Reulbach, Overall and Pfeister for the regulars, with Chick Frazer and Carl Lundgren in reserve. Frazer was a celebrated chicken fancier, you remember, and Carl could pitch better with the thermometer at 32 than most pitchers could on July 4.

The Infield—Chance and Evers and Tinker and Steinfeldt; and the rip and swing of the old Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance that made the pace for all their day.

The Outfield—Schulte and Slagle and Sheckard; the celebrated S. S. S. combination, with the Rabbit to top the batting list and Artie Hofman to fill in on occasion.

• • •

WELL, well—we'll take stock of the remains.

Schulte and Evers, and Orvie Overall, who is plugging along on the come-back trail after a couple of years' defection.

Reulbach made the fourth of the Old Guard, until the other day. Big Ed hadn't done much the last few years. But don't forget that three times Big Ed topped the whole list of slabmen in the National League, and that when Brown and Mathewson were in their prime.

Four fighting Grizzlies,
Sturdy as can be—
Big Ed was traded,
Then there were three.

Who'll be the next of the Old Guard to pass on?

• • •

WITH brief reference to the latest chapter in that sad serial, "Losing 'Em by One Run," it appears from a somewhat scrambled telegraphic account that Bill Smith and Gilbert Price came together in a bean-on collision after yesterday's game in Nashville.

Price appears to have been the one to bounce back. In fact, the report has it that Smith ordered him out of his uniform indefinitely.

The row was about the curve ball Price dealt to Callahan in the tenth inning, on which Dave Callahan doubled for the winning run.

At this distance, far be it from us to make wise criticisms of either Price or his manager.

Except this much.

If Price crossed up the manager on explicit instructions, he deserves all he got.

On the other hand, if Smith took out on his pitcher the soreness incident to losing a hard-fought battle—Price having been sent in cold and doing his best—it looks as if the manager was overly severe.

CHANCE TURNS ACTOR WITH MOVING PICTURE CONCERN

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Frank Chance, manager of the Highlanders, is now an actor. He has been engaged by a moving picture company to take the leading part in a scenario entitled "The Peerless Leader," some of the scenes of which will be laid at the Polo Grounds, New York. Chance has been rehearsing the role in a Jersey City studio since Monday. Catcher Sweeney, Outfielder Daniels and Hartzell will also appear in the film

Frank Whitney Due Here To-day

Charley White Arrives Saturday

By Left Hook.

FRANK WHITNEY, the fighting carpenter from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is due here at 11 o'clock this morning for his coming 10-round bout with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night.

A wire from Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, informs us that the Chicago boy will be here to-morrow morning. With both fighters on the battle ground local fans will have a chance to see the coming rivals in their training grind.

Whitney will pitch his tent at once in the Atlanta Athletic Club, where he intends to do the rest of his preliminary work for what he considers to be the most important fight of his career. Frank will do most of his boxing with Jimmy Perry, and the welterweight should be a valuable aid to him. The Cedar Rapids boy will also get a couple of lighter boys to box with.

WHAT Whitney is after is speed. Frank learned while in Chicago that his coming opponent is about the best piece of fighting machinery in the world. He also realizes that a victory over Charley will put him among the leaders of the 133-pounders. Chances of this kind don't come to boxers every day. The promoters of the Atlanta Athletic Association have given Whitney the opportunity he has been pinning for during the past year.

• • •

ON the other hand, Charley White is now the most watched boxer in the world to-day. Tom McCarey has his eyes on him. Tom is seriously thinking of putting White on with the winner of the Cross-Rivers set-to on Labor Day, and a victory over Whitney will be another feather in the Chicago boy's cap. Jim Coffroth wants White to box Tommy Murphy in his arena, but is awaiting the outcome of Charley's scrap with Whitney. The Western promoters have been after White for the past year, but Nate Lewis wants his protege to pick up a few pounds in weight before sending him after the bigger boys.

CHARLEY is still young and has a bright future. White was 22 years old March 25 and has been boxing five years. During that period never has a boxer succeeded in stopping him, or better than that, no boxer has ever even floored him.

When it is taken into consideration that White has met the toughest lightweights in the world, this record is surely a remarkable one.

• • •

WHITNEY is a fighter of the opposite type to Charley. Frank loves to bore in and fight at close quarters. Once inside a man's guard he works his hands like a pair of piston rods, hoping to bring his man to the canvas.

It is also a fact that Whitney is a much improved boxer over the boy who was seen here about a year ago. Since leaving here Frank had about ten battles and managed to win them all.

• • •

THE Cedar Rapids boy is also aware of the fact that he is getting along in years and knows that if he intends to get any place in the boxing world now is the time. Next Wednesday Whitney will get his chance. If he loses, fans can rest assured that he will give them the very best he has. Whitney has yet to disappoint a fight gathering. This afternoon Whitney will be at the Atlanta Athletic Club working out for the match.

Charley will arrive here to-morrow morning and arrangements have already been made to have him do his training in the Ponce De Leon ball park.

THE other two bouts to be staged Wednesday have been completed. Charley Lee and Kid Young signed for their return engagement yesterday and these boys are expected to put up a corking mill.

The semi-wind-up will be between Mike Saul and Eddie Hanlon. The boys have agreed to weigh 138 pounds at 6 o'clock, and at this weight Mike should have a great chance of winning. Both bouts are scheduled to go 10 rounds, making 30 rounds of boxing for the evening's entertainment.

Tickets for the boxing show were placed on sale yesterday. Prices, $1, $1.50 and $2.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Gunboat Smith, of California, and Fireman Jim Flynn, of Pueblo, Colo., will clash in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden, New York, to-night. Betting fans have made Smith a 6 to 5 favorite, but admirers of Flynn think that the fireman's bulldog courage will carry him through to victory.

• • •

Frank Whitney is expected to arrive to-day for his 10-round engagement with Charlie White at the Auditorium-Armory on Wednesday, August 13. White will be here some time to-morrow.

• • •

Eddie Hanlon started hard work yesterday for his coming 10-round set-to with Mike Saul next Wednesday. Hanlon wants to be in the best of shape as he realizes that a victory over Mike will put him in line for some big matches. They have posted a $50 forfeit to weigh 138 pounds at 6 o'clock.

• • •

Mike Kelly, Indianapolis featherweight, is in Atlanta at the present time in search of matches with some of our 122-pounders. Kelly says he is willing to meet some of the lesser lights first in order to prove to local fans that he is made of the right stuff.

• • •

Coast fans are showing much interest in the coming Jack White-Johnny Kilbane bout scheduled to take place in Tom McCarey's arena on August 12. These two boys put up a corking mill for twenty rounds about a month ago. Ad Wolgast has agreed to meet the winner some time in September.

• • •

Billy Nolan, former manager of Willie Ritchie, says that the champion will never meet Ad Wolgast. Nolan says that Willie fears Ad and does not want any more of his game.

• • •

Over in Paris they are certainly picking the lemons for Georges Carpentier. Yesterday they pitted the Frenchman against a boxer named Williams and Carpentier stopped him in four rounds. Who next?

• • •

Leach Cross and Rivers have agreed to weigh 135 pounds ringside for their 20-round affair at Los Angeles on Labor Day. Each boxer is to receive 30 per cent of the gross receipts. The winner will probably be sent against Willie Ritchie.

• • •

Jack (Twin) Sullivan, of Boston, has signed articles to box Soldier Kearns, the Brooklyn heavyweight, in a 10-round go at the Queensberry A. C., Philadelphia, on the night of August 22.

• • •

Kid Young is getting into great shape for his coming battle with Charlie Lee. The "fighting newsboy" is doing his boxing with Mike Saul and they certainly are going at it in real fashion.

KRAMER BEATS CLARKE.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 8.—Frank Kramer, the world's champion cyclist, proved his right to the title when he defeated Jackie Clarke, the Australian "Rocket" in two out of three heats of a one-mile match race at the Velodrome here last night.

GILBERT PRICE SUSPENDED AFTER GAME

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 8.—It is understood here that Manager Billy Smith of the Crackers and Gilbert Price, his star left-hand hurler, had a warm argument after yesterday's game, regarding the curve ball which Price pitched to Callahan in the tenth inning. Dave pasted the pill for a couple of bases and the winning run. Price had been sent in by Smith to take Dent's place in front of Callahan, who is a left-hand hitter, and Spratt, also batting from that side.

It is not plain just what the contention was, but it seems the manager told Price at the end of it that he was under suspension. Price went to the slab without much time to warm up, and that was the reason generally ascribed to his lack of effectiveness, but Smith seemed to take another view of it.

Smith had a short conference with Manager Schwartz concerning Jud Daley, but the boss of the Vols was not in the mood to shake up his team, and the result of the first game probably cemented that position.

JACK BARRY FIRST OF MACKMEN TO BE HURT

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—The first serious accident of the season to Connie Mack's famous infield has resulted in Shortstop Jack Barry being put on the nospital list with a bad shoulder, caused by his bumping into Catcher O'Neil at the plate in Wednesday's game. Barry probably will be unable to play for a week.

Sports and Such

NOT TRUE.

ONE day I wrote a story—a real pippin, on the square—
And clubs were formed to root for me; they boosted me for fair.
They bought up all the papers and wrote letters to my Boss;
They told him how they loved me and how much they'd feel my loss.
I had a fair young "sal'ry"—it was doubled twice and thrice;
They presented me with autos and tons of shirt-front ice;
I had eleven loving cups, a house and lot—a prize—
And I was chased with offers from a lot of vaudeville guys.
Then Senator O'Gorman, with another tony gent,
Insisted I should call at once upon the President.
I just was mitting Woodrow, when
I heard the bell-hop's call!
I'd dreamed, instead of batting dope, that I could bat a ball.

Timid Kid Asked Griff for a Job

Engel Promises to Become a Star

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—During the early spring days of 1912 a young ball tosser applied for admittance to the ball park in Washington, where Clark Griffith, Walter Johnson, Herman Schaefer and other Nationals were romping about. He was too bashful to speak to anybody, just watched the athletes perform.

The next morning the same kid was on hand. He had read about the great Johnson, Walsh, Coombs, Bender, Wood and other pitchers. He was a pitcher, too. Rather, on the lots in Washington he curved 'em for the semi-pro teams, and as he usually won, he thought he'd like to become acquainted with the big leaguers.

The kid chatted with members of the Nationals, asked who was manager, and if he could talk to him. "Griffith is manager; he's standing over there," informed one athlete to the youngster. The kid walked over to Griffith.

"I'm a pitcher. I'd like to toss a few to your hitters," was his opening sentence to Griffith.

"Where do you hail from?" flashed back the Fox.

"Right here! Pitch on Saturdays and haven't lost a game for a year," returned the youngster.

"Go to the dressing room, put on a suit and let me take a look at you," answered Griffith.

• • •

THE youth appeared, went to the hill and pitched during the batting practice.

The players gave Griff the merry ha-ha. They wanted to know where the boss plucked the novice. When the ball came near the plate usually the sluggers lifted it over the heads of the outfielders.

All the time, though, Griff was watching his new entrant. He saw that he had a lot of speed and a fast breaking curve. But the kid was awkward and didn't have the proper delivery.

As the youngster improved with each day and began to show dazzling speed, he was introduced to his idol, Walter Johnson. Always chummy with aspiring kids, Johnson took an interest in the new acquisition. He showed him how to throw the fast one, the movement with the shoulder, how to curve the one down around the knees and the fast break high on the inside.

After a few lessons Griff and the players were surprised. In a few weeks the batters began popping the fast ones and hitting easy grounders on the curves.

• • •

WHEN it came time to make the first trip Griffith asked his strange tosser how he'd like to make a trip with the team.

"Do you think I can pitch?" was his answer.

"I don't know; I'll try you out," returned the boss.

The Nationals made several trips, and when a game was practically lost the kid got a chance to show himself. Sometimes he got away all right, sometimes he didn't.

The 1912 season was over. The kid had a bunch of experience. This past spring he was a regular member of the team, was along on the practice tour and watched every movement made by his favorite, Johnson.

Finally the kid got a chance to show himself at the start. He won, allowing only a few hits and a run or two. Then it was that Griffith realized he had a wonderful pitcher.

Recently Joe Engel beat the St. Louis Browns 2 to 1 with three scattered hits, and, according to press accounts of the game, showed almost as much stuff as Walter Johnson. Joe Engel was the timid kid who introduced himself to Griffith in the spring of 1912.

MAJOR CALLAWAY OFF TO SEE CLARK GRIFFITH NOW

Major Frank Callaway, president of the Atlanta ball club, is a lively little traveler these days.

Yesterday Major Callaway, who had just returned from Chattanooga, set out for Washington to confer with Clark Griffith concerning the terms of the agreement now existing between the Senators and the Crackers.

It is not understood that there is any disputed point to be settled, or that anything is to be done with reference to Clark and Long, but that with the claiming date close at hand Major Callaway wished to be in perfect accord with the Old Fox as to all the provisions of the treaty, so that the Atlanta club could deal intelligently with all its players.

ANOTHER PHENOM MAY GO UP TO MAJOR LEAGUES

CALGARY, ALBERTA, Aug. —Jack Roche, Calgary catcher, seems sure to go to one of the big league teams. The White Sox, Cubs, Cardinals and Yankees are all bidding for the youngster. He is batting .354 and fielding .986. Comiskey made the first bid, but no price was set. Murphy has since requested the price, but has been asked to make an offer. Indianapolis, Louisville, Mobile and Los Angeles also are after him. The sale is likely to be made to-day.

TAX BILLS REACH CRUCIAL STAGE IN ASSEMBLY

Senate Will Pass Them, but the House Must Change Front if They Become Laws.

With the Senate substitute for Representative Sheppard's tax reform bill delivered in printed form to the Senate and the two Administration bills, providing a pro rata ad valorem tax for pensions and common schools, in the hands of the Committee on Constitutional Amendments, State Senators Friday morning prepared for the most important legislation of the session.

Senator Miller, chairman of the Finance Committee and joint author of all three bills, declared Friday morning the legislation would be hastened. He indicated further that all three bills would be well on their way toward passage by Monday afternoon.

The substitute for the Sheppard bill has been favorably reported by the Finance Committee, and the two Administration bills, which were defeated in the House and presented in the Senate Thursday, were considered by the Committee on Constitutional Amendments, of which Senator Harrell is chairman, Friday morning. The two bills, it is understood, will receive the indorsement of the committee.

Senate Will Pass Them.

The champions of the two Administration bills declare the bills will meet with little opposition in the Senate, as this body has taken a decided stand on tax reform which will relieve the State's financial embarrassment.

The two bills, which are similar to those presented in the House by Speaker Burwell, were drawn at the instance of the Governor and provide that the General Assembly shall not appropriate for any one year for common schools a sum in excess of that raised by levying two and one-half mills, nor any in excess of one and one-half mills for pensions.

Both bills are constitutional amendments and will require a two-thirds vote in the Senate. Should the Upper House indorse the measures they will be sent back to the House, where, unless there is a change of front, they will again be defeated.

Two Other Bills Tabled.

The Senate's decks are clear now for the consideration of these three bills. Thursday afternoon the Foster-Bush-Searcy white slavery bill was passed by unanimous vote, and two bills—one by President Anderson and Senator Huie, of the Thirty-fifth, providing an increase in State Senatorial Districts, and the other, by Senator McNeill, amending the section of the code so as to permit the running of through freight trains on Sunday—were tabled.

The Anderson-Huie bill resulted in sharp debate between President Anderson and Senator Tarver. The latter charged the bill was an attempt to increase the representation of the cities at the expense of the rural districts. The bill, it is understood, was tabled by friends of the measure so as to allow further consideration.

Queen Mary Stops Gambling at Court

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The gambling lid is on at Buckingham Palace. The quiet little games with which the servants were wont to while away their time and spare farthings are no more. As a result, grumblings are loud and frequent. This is due to rules issued by Queen Mary, whose anti-gambling views are well known in court circles.

A strike of all the servants at the palace was narrowly averted a few days ago when the Queen decided to permit the servants to draw lots to see who shall accompany her on the royal yacht.

Mrs. Susie Wright Dies While on Visit

FORSYTH, Aug. 8.—News has reached here of the death of Mrs. Susie Wright, of Macon, widow of Dr. W. P. Wright, of Barnesville, which occurred while she was visiting at the home of her brother, Mr. Ben Manry at Goggansville, in this county. Mrs. Wright was ill only a few hours.

Mrs. Wright is survived by two sons, W. P. Wright, who is an editorial writer on The New York Herald, and Dupont Wright, night editor of The Rome Tribune-Herald, and one daughter.

The funeral was held from the Manry residence yesterday.

Town's Water So Bad Court Lifts Beer Lid

PITTSBURG, KANS., Aug. 8.—The water is so bad in Chapman, a mining camp near here, that beer is used in its place, and the people are so generous they give the substitute away.

A Girard man accused of selling "spiked" cider was freed on the theory that one man's word is as good as another's. These incidents were brought out in Crawford County courts.

Bulgars Insist Turks Evacuate Adrianople

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, Aug. 8.—In a communication issued to-day by the Bulgarian Government it was announced that "Bulgaria will begin demobilization of her army as soon as a peace treaty is signed, upon the understanding that the powers favor the Enos-Midia line as the southern Bulgarian boundary." This would give Adrianople to Bulgaria.

It is doubtful if Bulgaria could carry on another war against Turkey. She has lost 100,000 men and her national treasury is depleted.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 8.—The Turkish Government to-day issued a manifesto calling upon the nation to oppose vigorously the evacuation of Adrianople.

State Wins Point in Diggs Slavery Case

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—The fourth day of the trial of Maury I. Diggs, former State Architect charged with white slavery, began to-day with the defense laboring under a decided handicap. The first witnesses were on hand ready to testify as to the trip to Reno on which Diggs and Drew Caminetti, son of the Commissioner General of Immigration, are charged with taking Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris for immoral purposes.

Judge Van Fleet ruled that the characters and reputations of the two girls would have no bearing on the case.

Chicken Frying Race By Congress Wives

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The mooted question, "Who is the best chicken fryer in the Congressional set?" will be fought out by two of the dealers, Mrs. Champ Clark and Mrs. William A. Cullop, wife of Representative Cullop of Indiana.

Mrs. Cullop will celebrate her fiftieth wedding anniversary with the contest in her apartment. Each contestant will fry a chicken according to her pet recipe.

It is understood that Speaker Clark, Senator Tillman and other Congressmen have applied for the position of judges.

Man, 81, Has Kept Diary For 59 Years

SPOKANE, Aug. 8.—Henry Ballinger, an old-time resident of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, a man close to eighty-one years of age, to-day offers a challenge to the world for having kept a diary continuously for the longest period of time.

His record reaches a short while over fifty-nine years.

Judge Given Divorce Decree in Own Court

DANVILLE, ILL., Aug. 8.—Judge E. R. E. Kimbrough mounted the circuit bench here to-day after having been granted a divorce in his own court. Mrs. Emma Fountain Kimbrough, who now is living in Los Angeles, did not contest the judge's suit. Judge Kimbrough asked the decree on the grounds of desertion.

For many years Judge Kimbrough was a law partner of former Speaker Joseph G. Cannon.

CAN'T HELP BUT ADMIRE BABIES

Every Woman Casts Loving Glance at The Nestling Cuddled in Its Bonnet.

A woman's heart naturally responds to the charm and sweetness of a pretty child, and more to-day than ever before since the advent of Mother's Friend.

This is a most wonderful external help to the muscles and tendons. It penetrates the tissues, makes them pliant to readily yield to nature's demand for expansion, so there is no longer a period of pain, discomfort, straining, nausea or other symptoms so often distressing during the anxious weeks of expectancy.

Mother's Friend prepares the system for the coming event, and its use brings comfort, rest and repose during the term. This has a most marked influence upon the baby, since it thus inherits a splendid growing system of nerves and digestive function.

And particularly to young mothers is this famous remedy of inestimable value. It enables her to preserve her health and strength, and she remains a pretty mother by having avoided all the suffering and danger that would otherwise accompany such an occasion. Mother's Friend thoroughly lubricates every nerve, tendon and muscle involved, and is a sure preventive for caking of the breasts.

You will find this splendid remedy on sale at all drug stores at $1.00 a bottle, and is highly recommended for the purpose.

Write Bradfield Regulator Co., 124 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and they will mail you, sealed, a very instructive book for expectant mothers.

STRONG LOCAL BODIES URGED ON DEALERS

C. W. McClure Discusses Important Topic Before the South's Merchants.

A discussion of the value of local commercial organization by C. W. McClure, of Atlanta, president of the McClure Ten Cent Store Company, was a big feature of the Friday morning session of the Southern Merchants' Convention at the Auditorium.

In his address Mr. McClure developed the idea that conditions could be bettered and improvements brought about by local organizations of commercial associations.

The Friday session, which will be the last of the week, will be one of the most important of the convention. In addition to the address by Mr. McClure, talks by other leaders in the commercial life of Georgia were scheduled. C. E. Pollard, of the American Audit Company, will speak on proper accounting methods as a factor in business success, and L. C. Upshaw, of Douglasville, Ga., will speak on credits and collections.

Stock insurance will be the subject of an address by H. E. Choate, of the J. K. Orr Shoe Company, of Atlanta, and F. G. Coker, of Dublin, will discuss the questions before the convention from the standpoint of a banker.

Following the address by Mr. McClure, there was an open parliament on the subject. Store discipline and management also was discussed.

Pigs Gorge Candy As Children Envy

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—The Refuge Home Farm, a municipal charity for homeless children, has a fine lot of thoroughbred pigs, which are to be gorged daily with chocolates and other choice confectionery, as a result of recent raids by the food inspection division of the Health Department.

To-day the refuge farm wagon carted to the farm for their delectation, nearly 1,500 pounds of milk chocolates, 3,000 pounds of peanuts, $50 pounds of shelled cocoanuts, 15 barrels of sugar and about 20 barrels of other odds and ends, including flavoring extracts used in making candy. These represented some of the condemnations made at several candy factories last week.

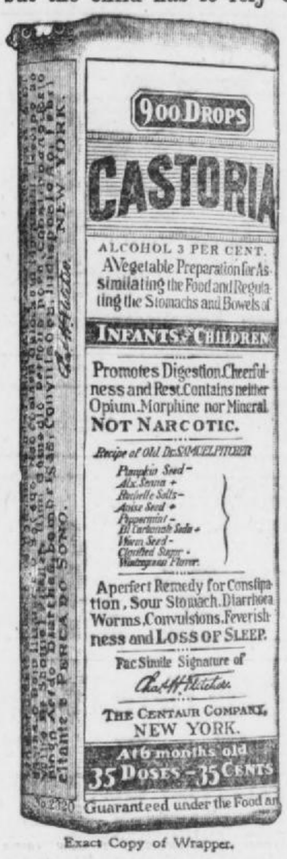
The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines.

It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed conterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Letters from Prominent Druggists addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Central Drug Co., of Detroit, Mich., says: "We consider your Castoria in a class distinct from patent medicines and commend it."

Christy Drug Stores, of Pittsburg, Pa., say: "We have sold your Castoria for so many years with such satisfactory results that we cannot refrain from saying a good word for it when we get a chance."

Jacob Bros., of Philadelphia, Pa., say: "We take pleasure in recommending Fletcher's Castoria as one of the oldest and best of the preparations of the kind upon the market."

Hess & McCann, of Kansas City, Mo., say: "Your Castoria always gives satisfaction. We have no substitute for it and only sell 'The Kind You Have Always Bought,' the original."

The Voegeli Bros., of Minneapolis, Minn., say: "We wish to say that we have at all times a large demand for Fletcher's Castoria at all of our three stores and that it gives universal satisfaction to our trade."

Polk Miller Drug Co., of Richmond, Va., says: "Your Castoria is one of the most satisfactory preparations we have ever handled. It seems to satisfy completely the public demand for such an article and is steadily creating a growing sale by its merit."

P. A. Capdau, of New Orleans, La., says: "We handle every good home remedy demanded by the public and while our shelves are thoroughly equipped with the best of drugs and proprietary articles, there are few if any which have the unceasing sale that your Castoria has."

M. C. Dow, of Cincinnati, Ohio, says: "When people in increasing numbers purchase a remedy and continue buying it for years; when it passes the fad or experimental stage and becomes a household necessity, then it can be said its worth has been firmly established. We can and do gladly offer this kind of commendation to Fletcher's Castoria."

Peachtree Road Parcel Also Bought. 80-Acre Tract of City Leased. Seventeen Loan Deeds.

A number of interesting realty sales were reported Thursday, among the transfers being a Peachtree road parcel, an Ormewood property and a West Peachtree parcel, all for good prices.

W. S. Witham has sold to John C. Wayt an irregular-shaped lot on the west side of Peachtree road adjoining the Witham place on one side and the property of Harriet Wayt on the other, for $4,410.

A. L. Bartlett has bought from the West End Bank a West Peachtree lot 130 feet north of Twelfth street, for $5,000, or $100 a front foot. The lot is 50 by 200 feet.

Hugh T. Burton has bought from R. D. Hicks, of Ohio, the northeast corner of Oglethorpe avenue and Lawton street, 64 by 140 feet, for $3,250.

Bruno Bukofzer has bought from A. D. Thomson and Carlos Lynes the southwest corner of Ormewood and South Moreland avenues, 70 by 129 1-2, for $3,500.

City Acreage at Work.

Eighty acres which the City of Atlanta bought some time ago on the Collier road will soon be made to yield an income. The tract has been leased to the Autodrome Association for $750 a year as a site for the automobile racing track which will soon be built by John S. Cohen, John Aldredge and others. The situation is about one-quarter of a mile west of Peachtree road, in the Brookwood section.

This property was bought by the city as a site for a sewage disposal plant, but has never been used.

The presence of a motordrome in this section, by the way, is expected to draw great crowds of people toward Brookwood, and to make the street car business profitable. Real estate men have not decided what the effect on property will be, but they expect some development on the road leading to the track.

Paving for Penn Street.

Bituminous macadam and not chert is to be the material used to pave Penn street, according to announcement of Street Engineer Hurt. The original intention was to use chert or rock, but this plan has been changed. The engineering department has decided that it will be cheaper to put down binder roads such as were built in West End Park.

Loan Funds Hold Up.

Loan funds for local real estate continue to hold up steady. Last week the loans printed in The Fulton County Report were not numerous enough to attract attention, but this week there have been an unusually large number. Early in the week there were 32 deeds in small amounts, one insurance company making six, and Wednesday there were 17. The latter varied in amounts from $150 to $4,000. Real estate men take this condition as a good sign. When there is a wide range of loans, the indication is that money is easy and there is plenty of confidence.

Referring to the 32 loans of Monday, a well-known realty man declared he had never seen a greater number recorded in a day, and he has been in the business here about fifteen years.

New Ansley Park Home.

Building Inspector Ed H. Hays has issued a permit to W. W. Brown to build a two-story brick-veneer dwelling at 96 Prado, Ansley Park. The house will cost $7,200. John Starr has the contract to build it.

To Renew Mansion Fight.

Although the matter of disposing of the present Governor's Mansion at Peachtree and Cain streets has been set aside by the State Senate, there is every probability that the question will be reopened at the next session of the Legislature, and will be presented until something is done.

Citizens comment daily on the inadequacy of the present mansion and say a better place must be provided, and these expressions have had as much effect in keeping the matter open as the desire of people to effect a trade with the State.

The Senate voted 21 to 19 against the creation of a commission composed of the Governor, the Speaker of the House, the President of the Senate and others to sell or exchange the site. This action was taken in spite of the declaration of Senator Miller that the mansion must be sold sometime, and it might as well be sold now.

Probably a dozen attractive and interesting propositions were brewing among the real estate men, and these will be shelved until the question is taken up again.

CAREY, REBUKED, HURLS CHARGE AT COCHRAN

Park Manager Scores Chief and Factionalism — Says He Is Serving Last Term.

Dan Carey, General Manager of Parks, declared Friday that factionalism in the Park Board had reached such a degree that the exploitation of any new ideas absolutely was prevented and that he was serving his last term under such conditions.

Authentic reports from the faction opposed to him are that plans are being made to drop him at the end of his term, January 1, 1915.

The old-time factionalism reached an acute stage at a meeting Thursday afternoon because Manager Carey had not consulted President J. O. Cochran about contracts for an underground conduit for the lighting of Piedmont Park.

Board Censures Mr. Carey.

President Cochran, with the balance of power in the board, has been supporting Manager Carey. But when Manager Carey took action on his own initiative he switched to the anti-Carey faction led by M. B. Young and R. A. Burnett and resolutions were adopted by a vote of 9 to 3 reprimanding Mr. Carey for making contracts without consulting the board.

Tangle Over "Loaned Stone."

Manager Carey also asked the board to straighten out an agreement between President Cochran and Engineer Nym Hurt, of the City Construction Department, about some crushed stone. Manager Carey said the minutes of the board showed that President Cochran had represented to the board that the stone had been given, while Mr. Hurt claims that it was only loaned and he wanted it back.

President Cochran said he understood that the stone had been loaned, and if he had represented that it had been given to the department he had made a mistake.

"It seems that a member of the board can do anything, but anything the general manager does is wrong," said Mr. Carey.

Commissioners Frank Reynolds, William Van Houten and Councilman Sam Shepard stoutly defended Manager Carey, but they were outvoted.

What the Charges Are.

Here are the specific charges brought by President Cochran against Manager Carey:

That the board appropriated $200 to remove the Erskine fountain to Grant Park and that Manager Carey spent $600 on it.

That negligence resulted in $22 demurrage collected on cars of stone one time and $17 another.

That he has given contracts for $800 for underground wiring of Piedmont Park, and that all of these expenditures were contracted for without the knowledge or consent of the board.

Manager Carey explained that the wiring contracts were made as a result of a misunderstanding between himself and City Electrician R. C. Turner.

Alabama Double of Croker Not Boasting

ANNISTON, Aug. 8.—Anniston, which has become famous for its doubles, having a man who looks like Roosevelt, one who looks like Wilson and a double of Napoleon in the person of State Senator T. E. Kilby, has still another in Dr. J. Q. Dixon, who admitted that he had frequently been taken for Andrew Carnegie, the late King Edward of England and Richard Croker.

He said he was willing to plead guilty to the likeness of all except Croker.

Lady Sackville's Daughter to Wed

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The Honorable Victoria Mary Sackville-West, whose engagement to Harold Nicholson, an attache of the British embassy at Constantinople, has been announced, is the daughter of Lady Sackville, who recently won a clear title to the vast fortune of Sir John Murray Scott.

Miss Sackville-West is the only child of Lord and Lady Sackville and she will succeed to the Scott fortune.

Cody To Be Buried With Military Honors

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

The funeral will be semi-military in character and the coffin will be escorted by troops.

FOUR SEEK CITY COURT PLACE.

MACON, Aug. 8.—The creation of the new municipal court to take the place of the Justice of the Peace courts provides an attractive office. Lloyd Moore, and Judge J. T. Burnett already are candidates, and Walter Defore and S. A. Crump are expected to announce.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Uneasiness was again expressed to-day over weather conditions in Texas, and when the cotton market opened, prices were at a net advance of 5 to 11 points from Thursday's final. New crops were the strongest, August showing an advance of 15 points immediately after the opening. The opening quotation was 11.75 and the next figure was 11.85.

There was no rain shown on the map, as had been generally expected and local weather experts failed to see any in sight just at present and the market was bought freely from strong sources. Shorts were also good buyers, but on the rally there seemed to be some cotton for sale as sentiment continues very bearish. Later the market eased off sharply on reports of rain at Galveston and El Paso and less support was in evidence.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: August, 11.67; October, 11.10; December, 11.05; January, 10.96; March, 11.05.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: August, 11.41; October, 11.11; December, 11.10; January, 11.11; March, 11.19.

Fair business doing in spot cotton at 6 points decline; middling 6.43d; sales 8,000 bales, including 7,200 American bales; imports none.

COTTON GOSSIP

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma clear and hot."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows part cloudy over eastern half of belt and south Texas; generaly fair elsewhere; general showers in eastern half of belt; none in western half. Indications are still for some rain coming in the west over Sunday.

Rainfall The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "After making full allowance for the fact that cotton is a dry weather plant and thrives on sunshine, the talent is forced to admit that drouth in parts of Oklahoma and Texas, accompanied by such high temperatures as those of yesterday, is injuring the crop every day. However, most traders on the short side have learned not to accept damage reports at face value, and when, in the face of a fair forecast for the west, the barometer lines revealed low pressure of the Gulf of Mexico, the talent promptly exploited storm formation as a promise of rain and weather students on the floor helped by asserting that extremely hot weather in Oklahoma is simply a forerunner of rain and lower temperatures. Thus the market worked down after the bulge of Wednesday.

"Meanwhile, Manchester is not sending any encouraging reports, though Liverpool managed to sell 10,000 bales on the spot yesterday. At this time any lack of evidence of trade activity is apt to tell on the raw cotton market, because just now slack demand for the actual makes a poor showing when contrasted with the keen demand in evidence during the past two years.

"The market is very dull and very narrow; speculation has been reduced to a minimum and neither talent nor trade is in a humor to display enterprise. Increasing spot sales at Galveston and Houston indicate that the new crop market is opening up."

The market was sold off after the opening on unofficial reports of rain at Galveston. The early weather map shows no rain and weather experts could not see any in sight, which resulted in an active wave of buying at the outset.

* * *

On the call, Flinn and Gifford bought August. Black, Seidenberg, Hentz and Harden sold. Wilson, Mitchell, Gifford, Flinn and Black bought October. McElroy, Bashford and Hentz sold. Flinn, Wiggin, Watkins, Ralt and Gifford bought December. Rothschild, Rosenberg, Black and Orvis sold. Hicks bought January. Bashford, Hentz and Schley sold.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We expect lower prices if the rains predicted for the southwest materialize.

Logan & Bryan: In the event of good general rains in the southwest, lower prices will doubtless result.

Miller & Co.: We can see nothing in the situation different from what we have been saying for the past few days, to the effect that this is distinctly a weather market.

Buried in Socks Made For Father Years Ago

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 8.—James H. Williams, of the town of Jerusalem, was buried with his feet encased in a pair of socks knitted for his father 82 years ago.

Shortly before James was born his mother knitted a pair of socks for his father, but the socks were never worn by the father. They decended to the son, who carefully preserved them and expressed a desire to be buried with them on.

HELD FOR SLAYING BOY, 8.

LEXINGTON, KY., Aug. 8.—Mrs. Matilda Shelton and John Brown were arrested to-day at Monticello, Ky., charged with slaying the woman's 8-year-old brother, Roy Neal, with a brick.

Marked Improvement Noted in Wool Trade

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—More inquiry has developed in the wool market during the past week, probably stimulated by the increased demand for lightweight goods, following the recent openings by leading mills. Total sales are estimated at fully 2,000,000 pounds, the business being distributed among the leading houses and covering most of the desirable grades. Primary markets are now well cleaned up, except in Ohio, but even there very little is doing and buyers are coming home. Prices here are unchanged.

Liquidation of holdings wherever a profit is shown is the policy in favor and some transfers, it is said, have been made at a very small margin.

STOCK MARKET

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug 8.—Considerable interest was attached to dealings in Union Pacific at the opening of the stock market to-day, this issue beginning ⅜ higher. Trading in this stock was very active, but at the end of a half hour all advance had been lost. At the end of forty-five minutes, Union Pacific was ⅜ under Thursday's closing.

The list was irregular and the undertone showed uncertainty. Amalgamated Copper advanced ¼, then lost its gain. Steel common was unchanged from Thursday's final, but subsequently declined ⅜.

Among the advances were Utah Copper, ½; Southern Pacific, ¼; Republic Iron and Steel, ⅛; Reading, ¼; Pennsylvania, ¼; Denver and Rio Grande, ½; American Locomotive, ½; American Smelting, ¼.

Canadian Pacific advanced a point and then lost ½.

New Haven declined ¼ to 100⅛. Atchison also shaded. Lehigh Valley began unchanged, then declined

The curb market was quiet.

Americans in London were quiet, above New York parity.

The Government crop report will be published at 2:15 to-day. It will be a very important market factor, as it gives the condition of corn to August 1. General estimates put the condition of corn at 75, but I believe this is too low and anything above that figure will be considered bullish on stocks. However, there may be some hesitation in prices before the figures are published.—G. D. Potter.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—The weather over the greater portion of the corn belt was again hot and dry, although in sections of Nebraska and Iowa it was reported as cooler. Northeastern and eastern Iowa, as well as northern and central Illinois were visited by rains last night, but as an offset to this a message was received from Kansas City saying that in some sections of Missouri the crop will be a total failure, and that in others it will not average over 50 per cent. The forecast of the weather bureau up to tomorrow evening shows no relief in sight for the corn crop. News of this nature, as well as generally bullish feeling in the corn market brought further upturns of ½@¾c at the opening this morning.

The strength in the corn market carried wheat ¼@⅜c higher at the opening, in spite of the generally bearish news received from the Old World as well as our own and the Canadian Northwest. Weather in Europe was favorable for harvesting and movement, and cargoes at Liverpool were freely offered at concessions. Fine general rains were reported in the Canadian Northwest, which are good for the filling of the crops, and beneficial rains were reported in our own Northwest.

The corn market had a strengthening influence on oats and sales were made at higher levels.

Trading in provisions was rather light early, but the market had a stronger undertone, being influenced to some extent by the strength in coarse grains and the higher market for hogs at the yards.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter-Ocean says: "Many wheat traders regard the market as a carrying charge proposition and say that unless there is a material improvement in the export demand, which has flattened out of late, prices may go lower. Corn prices are so high that even many of the boldest operators are timid about going long, except on sharp breaks; they are easily scared by reports of rain. A Government report is due to-day at 1:15 p. m. It is expected to lower the condition of corn 10 points or over from that of 86.9 last month.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

At the Grand.

Pictures at the Grand are becoming more and more popular every day. Commencing next Monday, the policy will be to present pictures daily from 2:30 until 10:30, with complete new programs each day, at 10 cents admission for the best seats, and children at half price.

Forsyth Bill Pleases.

Every performance this week at the Forsyth has attracted almost the holding capacity in the busy theater. While it is a fact that the show is without a headliner or a feature that may have been advertised, it is nevertheless a combination of pleasing talent that has won applause from every gathering.

Next week's star will be Ralph Herz, the musical comedy character comedian, who has been a late star with "Dr. Duluth," and who was one of the big features with "Madame Sherry" and "The Charity Girl."

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX WRITES OF "THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME," BY HALL CAINE

The Brilliant American Poetess Analyzes the Tragedy of the Woman Whose Child Had No Father, the Horror of Her Loveless Marriage and the Great Problem of This Day.

HALL CAINE'S latest work of fiction, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," is a striking illustration of the change which has taken place in the world of literature during the last score of years.

For frank realism and courageous attacks upon time-worn traditions, it takes the lead of all other books written by all other authors.

The heroine of this novel is a young English girl, reared by an angelic mother and a traditionally brutal British father.

The father is a self-made man, who attains great wealth, and who marries his daughter to a debauched man of title.

The girl's feelings and ideas are not taken into consideration in the least. Neither has she been instructed regarding the meaning of marriage. The death of her mother when she was a mere child deprived her of the one tender tie, and left her with only the companionship of disagreeable relatives or paid attendants.

From the hour of her marriage the trials and problems of life begin to present themselves to this young girl. With the first approach of the husband as a lover, all her womanly instincts arise in revolt and the bride refuses to become a wife.

Father, aunt, and clergymen are called into consultation, to small avail. Afraid as the girl is of her father, she is still more terrified at the thought of giving herself to her husband.

She insists upon returning home to her father, but is finally prevailed upon to go away with the husband, if he will leave her undisturbed until he can win her affections.

To this situation the husband consents, wishing to avoid a public scandal. However, his method of winning his bride's affections is not a successful one. Intemperance and vulgarity are among his characteristics and the young wife finds herself growing more and more disgusted with him, daily.

Then comes the designing adventuress, in the guise of an old school friend and relative, who enters the home and becomes the mistress of the husband.

Bad as the man is, by nature and habit, one cannot help feeling that his position in his own home was a sorry one, and his affiliation with a woman of his own type does not seem at all surprising.

However, it ends all possibility of his ever winning the heart of his wife. Just at this moment the ideal man enters upon the scene and new complications arise.

Heart, soul, brain and body awaken simultaneously in the young wife, and it is quite naturally a blow to the husband's pride and to his self-conceit when he discovers that the chaste Diana, who has refused her husband's kiss, is an expectant mother.

The wife runs away, alone, and goes to London, where her child is born, and where, in the present phase of the story now running in Hearst's Magazine, she is facing poverty and despair in her efforts to support herself and child.

We must remember that she was a very young and perfectly ignorant girl, knowing nothing of life, of the world, or of human nature, when she was plunged into all these distressing situations. All her instincts were high and fine, yet through the curious complications of her destiny, she became the mother of a child of a man she loved while married to a man she loathed.

Mighty problems face her in this situation

Everywhere she sees women respected by society and religious institutions, who are mothers of undesired children of detested men, simply because they are married to them.

Everywhere she sees women despised and shunned because they have brought forth children with love only to legitimatize birth.

Her young mind is torn and tortured with all the great problems suggested by these experiences. Meantime, the lover she believes to be dead is sailing on the high seas searching for strange goals and wholly unconscious of all that has happened to the woman of his heart.

Besides these two central figures are several other very interesting characters; one a beautiful young woman who elopes with a clergyman connected with the school where this young girl was educated. In the midst of her great distress, in her efforts to make a living for her child, she comes upon them in the slums of London; the clergyman dying and the woman selling herself, soul and body, to supply him with the necessities of life.

Just how Mr. Caine is going to deal with all these characters eventually is a question to all readers of his remarkable novel.

No amount of brilliant writing and no amount of realistic pen pictures can change to any marked degree the situation of a woman who becomes a mother without the sanction of the law.

Birth needs, first and foremost, both the legitimate call of love and the sanction of marriage to make it ideal and beautiful.

When either element is lacking the child is not well-born in the fullest meaning of that word.

Physically, mentally and morally the child may be perfectly equipped to meet the demands of life, with only love as a dower from both parents; but we live in a world which has been obliged to make social laws to protect its social rights; and where there is a flaw in the birth certificate of a child, in this respect, it is sure to cause suffering and trouble sooner or later for all concerned.

But Mr. Caine's story will set people to thinking along broader and kinder lines regarding these topics.

It presents great subjects for the mature deliberation of all classes and the followers of all creeds. The methods of public charitable institutions toward erring women are fully illustrated in this novel, and will no doubt lead to much discussion and many protests. Read the great story, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

Look at the Picture Below, Then Look at Yourself.

You Can Find in This Picture More Information About "How to Succeed" Than Carnegie or Rockefeller Could Give You in Two Hours' Talk.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Work, hurry, plan, achieve—while the others rest.

That is the big secret of success.

The turtle won the race against the hare in the fable, because the turtle walked ALL THE TIME.

He could not run very fast but HE KNEW ENOUGH NOT TO LIE DOWN AND GO TO SLEEP.

Take a lesson from that turtle.

Take a lesson from this picture.

Your competitors are asleep on the grass.

They are thinking that it is too hot to work. They are pitying themselves. They will have more cause to pity themselves later for having pitied themselves so much NOW.

Don't envy the man who is paddling a canoe and telling some young person with a high color what wonderful things he is going to do NEXT WINTER.

Let him paddle his canoe and talk about himself.

YOU WORK NOW.

Lucky the man who works in August, lucky the man who is found by the hottest sun's rays ATTENDING TO BUSINESS.

When you are racing side by side with others, and when all are running, you can not do more than keep even.

Now, while others rest, is your chance to get ahead. Take it.

Don't pick this up and say to yourself that it is a rather nice picture, and put it down again. LOOK at it, study it.

THEN LOOK AT YOURSELF.

Ask yourself, and don't deceive yourself in the answer, whether you are the man WALKING in this picture, or whether you are one of those figures lying asleep on the grass.

The answer to that question will answer your question as to what your probable position will be in the world a few years from now.

There is a better sermon on success in this picture by Tad than in all the nice interviews given out by Mr. Rockefeller telling how he saved his first dollar, or by Mr. Carnegie saying what a wonderful thing it is to give away libraries WITH NO BOOKS IN THE LIBRARIES.

July is gone. If you wasted that month, don't waste more time now on regret. Start off in the right way in August. WALK fast, WORK hard, THINK for yourself, look ahead.

Remember that no man ever hurt himself with too much work.

IT'S WHAT YOU DO BETWEEN WORKING HOURS THAT HURTS YOU.

Remember, also, that no man cheats his employer. You can only cheat yourself by doing a thing less well than you know how to do it.

Be the steady walker, be the man who gains time while others rest, be the man who gets ahead.

And if you really try, good luck to you, for the man WHO REALLY TRIES doesn't fail.

Frederick the Great

By REV. THOS. B. GREGORY.

FREDERICK THE GREAT became King of Prussia one hundred and seventy-three years ago—May 31, 1740. It was not much of a Prussia then, but the little man in the blue coat with the red trimmings made it one of the first powers of the Continent.

A very lovable old fellow, in many ways, was Frederick the Great. Underneath the king there was ever visible the man. After he had conquered his political position he made his nobles and aristocrats treat the common people fairly. He personally saw to it that just laws were instituted. He mortally hated fanaticism and bigotry. When the churchmen attempted to inveigle him into religious persecution, he replied: "Let the parsons go to Heaven their own way, and let everybody else do the same."

At heart he was favorable to democratic institutions. When King George wanted to hire soldiers of him to fight the Americans he indignantly spurned the proposition, and refused to let the Hessians pass through his territory on their way to join the British. He admired the things for which the Americans were fighting as ardently as he did the personal qualities and soldierly parts of the man who led their armies.

The Time to Get Ahead Is Now

The man who travels and works in these hot and lazy days, while others rest and think it over, is the man that WILL WIN.

Young men that have ambition, and old men too, CAN GET SUCH A START BY DOING THE RIGHT KIND OF WORK NOW THAT THE OTHERS RESTING AND THINKING HOW HOT IT IS WILL NEVER CATCH YOU. August, September, October—they are the months of the winning workingman. (See Editorial.)

The Woman With the Secret Eyes

By WINIFRED BLACK.

SHE lives down in the valley by the running water, the woman with the secret eyes. She has three children, a boy and two girls; her husband has gone away, they say.

She is poor—and she is angry about it. She does not like the old house by the running water and she hates the song the water sings all day and all night.

"If I could only get up on the hill," she says whenever a neighbor will stop to talk with her, "it would be better up there. See what gay lives the people on the hill live. They have company and the lights shine through their windows far, far into the night, and they laugh and sing, and down here, where I live, we hear only the water—all day and all night the water.

And He's Smart.

"My children don't like it here, either. I am going to send them away so they won't hear it—all day and all night, the running of the water there by the door.

"The boy is going away to the city. Did you see the new suit I bought him? Oh, I can manage when I have to, and the new shoes, too, and the hat? Nothing better in town than those clothes—he's 'as good as the rest now.'

"And he's smart, too; he will make his way, and then we will live on the hill, too, maybe.

"The girls are going, too. I shall see to that. Did you notice the pretty new hats I have bought them? Not a girl in town has prettier ones—and their stockings, too. Some day they shall have a piano like the little girls up there on the hill. I will get it for them. You'll see; you'll see. They won't always be so poor."

Last night when I took a walk by the rushing water I met the three children, far, far out on the road toward town, and I saw a man slink through the low trees to the door of the woman with the secret eyes. I heard the woman's voice. She was laughing a cruel, wicked laugh, a dangerous laugh like the warning of a snake, and the man laughed, too.

To-morrow the three children will have more new things to make them look like the children in the houses up there on the hill—and the woman with the secret eyes will laugh again and be proud of the fine showing her children make—and all the time she is digging, digging, digging a pit for their poor little feet; for the people of the town are beginning to whisper.

They nod together, the old women; they grin together, the old men—and the children wonder why it is that people look so strangely at them when they put on their new finery and go out—to be seen.

"As good as the rest!" Poor woman with the secret eyes, don't you know, can't you understand that those children would be better off if they went barefoot, ragged and had too little to eat, and carried with them into the comprehension of growing youth no secret wonder, no half-hidden doubt of you and the way you earn the money to spend so freely on them?

The boy who's going to the city soon, what can he ever be with such a mother? The little girl, with the soft eyes there, how can she ever hold up her head—when she remembers and understands? The slender child with the puzzled eyes, what will she care what dresses she wore—when she lived down by the rushing waters? All she will know is that there was something "queer" about her mother.

Can't Hide Her Story.

Oh, woman with the secret eyes, work, scrub, starve, do anything honest, anything decent, and give your children a memory of you that will keep them straight when their own feet begin to wander. Your eyes are secret, but they can not hide your story. Some day, some day these little ones of yours will know it, strive as you may to keep it hidden. Then what of your dreams—of houses on the hill and friends and joy?

Hark, how the water runs through the fringing willows. "To-morrow," it says, "to-morrow"—do you never listen to the warning it is trying to give?

JOHNSTON OF ALABAMA IS DEAD

United States Senator Victim of Pneumonia After Nine Days' Illness at Capital.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Senator Joseph F. Johnston, of Alabama, died at 9 o'clock this morning at his apartment in the Brighton.

Senator Johnston had been ill for eight days, suffering from pneumonia.

Senator Joseph Forney Johnston, of Birmingham, was born in North Carolina in 1843. He served in the Confederate army from the beginning of the war to its conclusion, and was wounded four times. He rose from a private to the rank of captain, and was frequently mentioned honorably for gallant conduct.

Senator Johnston served four years as Governor of Alabama, before his election to the Senate in 1907. His first election to the Senate was to the unexpired term of Senator E. W. Pettus, deceased. He was re-elected in 1909 to his present term.

Senator Johnston's death at this time undoubtedly will bring about an acute political crisis in Alabama. His seat was being contested at the time of his death by Congressman R. P. Hobson, and the fight between them had grown very bitter. It is practically certain that Hobson will not be permitted, now that Johnston is dead, to have the succession uncontested.

There has been talk of Congressman Underwood as a candidate against Mr. Hobson, and the death of Senator Johnston likely will revive that.

His immediate successor will be named by Governor O'Neal, which means that Mr. Hobson will not get the immediate appointment.

He had been in poor health for several weeks.

Mrs. Johnston was with her husband when he died, as well as Forney Johnston, his son, who arrived from his home in Birmingham yesterday.

Mrs. Susie Wright Dies While on Visit

FORSYTH, Aug. 8.—News has reached here of the death of Mrs. Susie Wright, of Macon, widow of Dr. W. P. Wright, of Barnesville, which occurred while she was visiting at the home of her brother, Mr. Ben Manry at Goggansville, in this county. Mrs. Wright was ill only a few hours.

Mrs. Wright is survived by two sons, W. P. Wright, who is an editorial writer on The New York Herald, and Dupont Wright, night editor of The Rome Tribune-Herald, and one daughter.

The funeral was held from the Manry residence yesterday.

Queen Mary Stops Gambling at Court

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The gambling lid is on at Buckingham Palace. The quiet little games with which the servants were wont to while away their time and spare farthings are no more. As a result, grumblings are loud and frequpent. This is due to rules issued by Queen Mary, whose anti-gambling views are well known in court circles.

A strike of all the servants at the palace was narrowly averted a few days ago when the Queen decided to permit the servants to draw lots to see who shall accompany her on the royal yacht.

Man, 81, Has Kept Diary For 59 Years

SPOKANE, Aug. 8.—Henry Ballinger, an old-time resident of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, a man close to eighty-one years of age, to-day offers a challenge to the world for having kept a diary continuously for the longest period of time.

His record reaches a short while over fifty-nine years.

Pigs Gorge Candy As Children Envy

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—The Refuge Home Farm, a municipal charity for homeless children, has a fine lot of thoroughbred pigs, which are to be gorged daily with chocolates and other choice confectionery, as a result of recent raids by the food inspection division of the Health Department.

To-day the refuge farm wagon carted to the farm for their delectation, nearly 1,500 pounds of milk chocolates, 3,000 pounds of peanuts, 850 pounds of shelled cocoanuts, 15 barrels of sugar and about 20 barrels of other odds and ends, including flavoring extracts used in making candy. These represented some of the condemnations made at several candy factories last week.

Chicken Frying Race By Congress Wives

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. — The mooted question, "Who is the best chicken fryer in the Congressional set?" will be fought out by two of the dealers, Mrs. Champ Clark and Mrs. William A. Cullop, wife of Representative Cullop of Indiana.

Mrs. Cullop will celebrate her fiftieth wedding anniversary with the contest in her apartment. Each contestant will fry a chicken according to her pet recipe.

It is understood that Speaker Clark, Senator Tillman and other Congressmen have applied for the position of judges.

'Side-Door Pullman' Improvement Urged

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—At the first day's session of the annual convention of the Intinerant Workers' Association to-day a request was formulated to be presented to the Interstate Commerce Commission to compel railroads to put some modern improvements on freight cars.

They say ocean steamships now are provided with gymnasiums, sun parlors and golf links; that Pullman cars have sanitary cups which the porter provides on request, but that freight car roads are still as "hard as the heart of the railroad detective."

Farmer's Beans Are Cooked by Lightning

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—William Williams, a truck farmer, went out to gather some string beans for the family table the other day. Much to his surprise, he discovered that they were deliciously cooked.

He thought for a time that he had out-Burbanked Burbanks, but a little reflection divulged the reason. In planting he had placed wires between the poles, and during a recent storm lightning struck the wires and cooked the beans.

Ostend Bathing Suits In U.S.? Goodness, No!

NARRAGANSETT PIER, Aug. 8.—"Any woman who takes surf baths may for a trifling amount of money appear to advantage on the beach—an accomplishment not to be held lightly, as all women know," says Mrs. Henry Hutt, former wife of the artist.

"At Ostend, where women go to the beach in coats, one-piece bathing suits may be all right, but in America, where we lounge so much upon the beach, they would cause riots."

Town's Water So Bad Court Lifts Beer Lid

PITTSBURG, KANS., Aug. 8.—The water is so bad in Chapman, a mining camp near here, that beer is used in its place, and the people are so generous they give the substitute away.

A Girard man accused of selling "spiked" cider was freed on the theory that one man's word is as good as another's. These incidents were brought out in Crawford County courts.

CAREY UNDER FIRE; RAPS COCHRAN

Park Manager Scores Chief and Factionalism — Says He Is Serving Last Term.

Dan Carey, General Manager of Parks, declared Friday that factionalism in the Park Board had reached such a degree that the exploitation of any new ideas absolutely was prevented and that he was serving his last term under such conditions.

Authentic reports from the faction opposed to him are that plans are being made to drop him at the end of his term, January 1, 1915.

The old-time factionalism reached an acute stage at a meeting Thursday afternoon because Manager Carey had not consulted President J. O. Cochran about contracts for an underground conduit for the lighting of Piedmont Park.

Board Censures Mr. Carey.

President Cochran, with the balance of power in the board, has been supporting Manager Carey. But when Manager Carey took action on his own initiative he switched to the anti-Carey faction led by M. B. Young and R. A. Burnett and resolutions were adopted by a vote of 9 to 3 reprimanding Mr. Carey for making contracts without consulting the board.

Immediately Manager Carey developed the fact that President Cochran had been making contracts without the approval of the board. One related to a bill for $26 for automobile hire from Atlanta to Lithonia.

President Cochran said that C. F. Blount, a wranite dealer, has promised to pay for the automobile as soon as the department gave him contracts for 2,000 tons of stone.

Tangle Over "Loaned Stone."

Manager Carey also asked the board to straighten out an agreement between President Cochran and Engineer Nym Hurt, of the City Construction Department, about some crushed stone. Manager Carey said the minutes of the board showed that President Cochran had represented to the board that the stone had been given, while Mr. Hurt claims that it was only loaned and he wanted it back.

President Cochran said he understood that the stone had been loaned, and if he had represented that it had been given to the department he had made a mistake.

"It seems that a member of the board can do anything, but anything the General Manager does is wrong," said Mr. Carey.

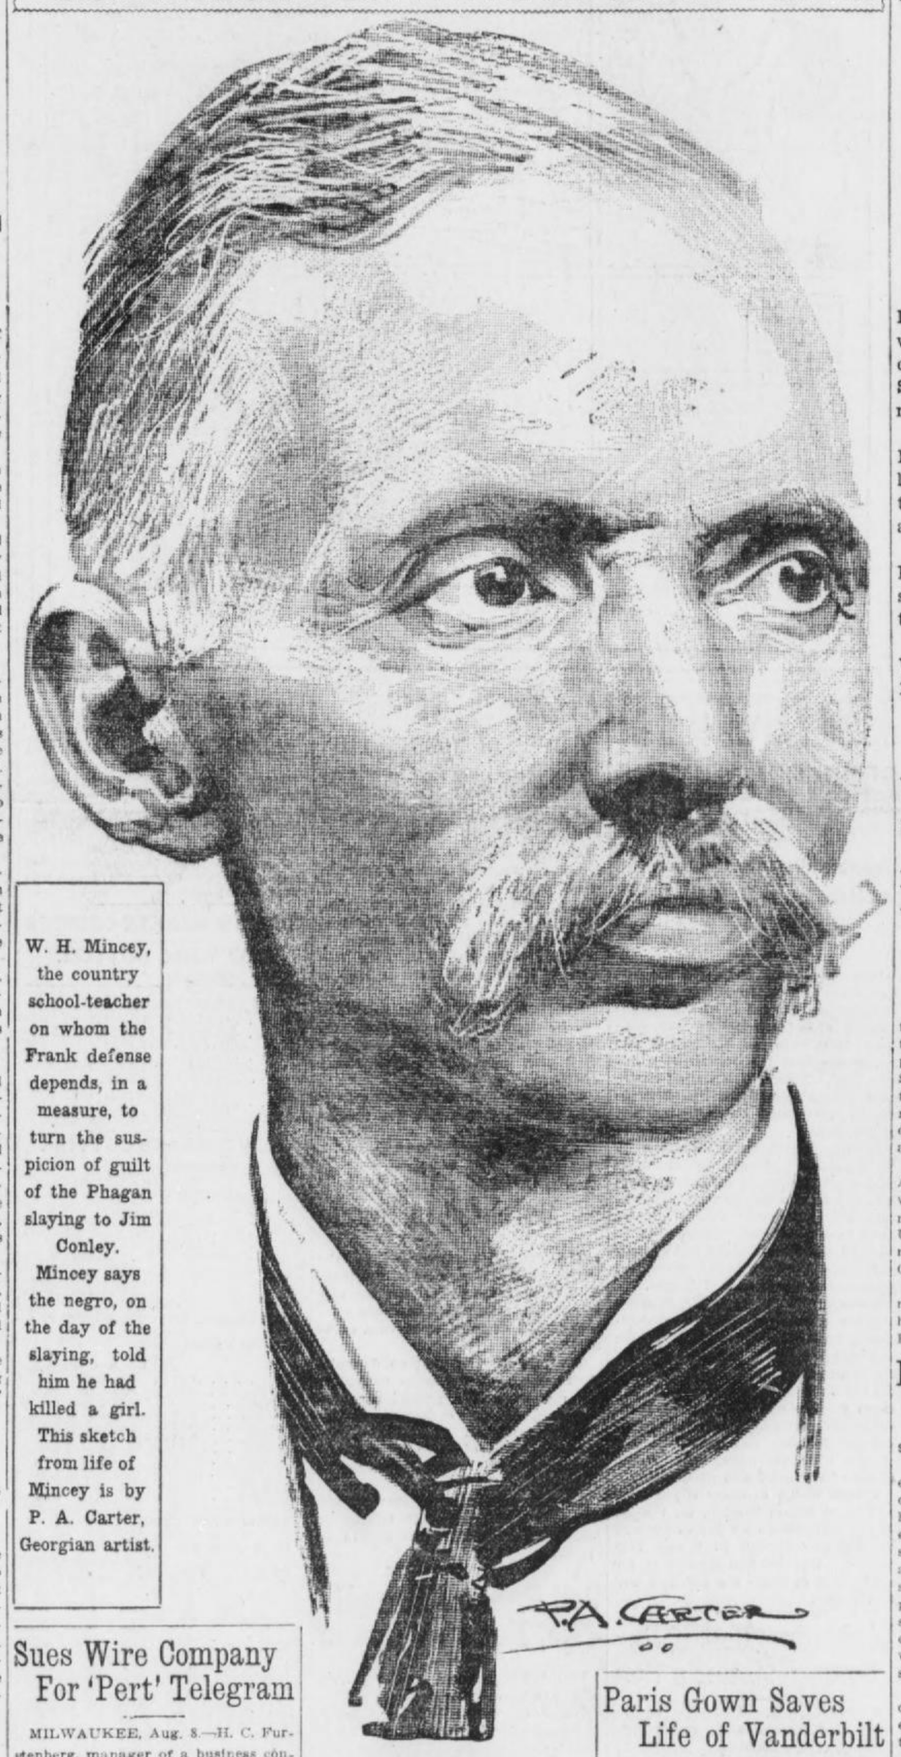
MAN WHO SAYS NEGRO JIM CONLEY CONFESSED SLAYING OF LITTLE GIRL



W. H. Mincey, the country school-teacher on whom the Frank defense depends, in a measure, to turn the suspicion of guilt of the Phagan slaying to Jim Conley. Mincey says the negro, on the day of the slaying, told him he had killed a girl. This sketch from life of Mincey is by P. A. Carter, Georgian artist.

Paris Gown Saves Life of Vanderbilt

LONG BEACH, N. Y., Aug 8.—That William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., had a narrow escape from death in the automobile accident that claimed the life of S. Osgood Pell and William Laimbeer because of the fact that he wished to protect a Parisian gown worn by Mrs. Pell, became known when he testified at the inquest.

He would have been in the machine had he not stopped to secure a linen duster with which to cover Mrs. Pell's gown.

The rest of the party went on without waiting for the couple, who took another car and followed.

BAPTIZE 21 IN PRISON.

KANSAS CITY, Aug 8.—Twenty-three convicts in the Kansas penitentiary were baptized in the prison laundry to-day after professing religion at revival services.

GIRL DENIES SHE EVER WENT TO THE PENCIL PLANT WITH DALTON

Another attack on Jim Conley's story was contemplated by Leo Frank's attorneys when court reopened Friday morning. It was announced that the defense during the day again would exercise the privilege of recalling and cross-examining several of the State's witnesses as it had done with Harry Scott Thursday afternoon.

The defense sprang a complete surprise Friday by calling Miss Daisy Hopkins, the girl mentioned in the stories of Jim Conley and C. B. Dalton. Dalton had testified that he visited the factory with Miss Hopkins and Conley had sworn that he saw Dalton and the girl enter the place and had "watched" for them.

Miss Hopkins is a woman of very small features, with bright, keen eyes and wore a cotton striped dress that looked a bit too short. She wore white shoes and stockings. Mr. Arnold began the questioning:

Q. Did you ever work for the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes, I went to work there about October 1, 1911, and quit June 1, 1912.

Q. What department?—A. Packing department.

Q. What floor?—A. Second floor.

Q. How many other girls worked there?—A. Sometimes there were as many as ten.

Q. Did you know Leo M. Frank?—A. I knew him when I saw him. I saw him pass around the factory.

Q. Did he ever speak to you?—A. No, never in my life.

Denies Drinking in Frank's Office.

Q. Did you ever go into Frank's office and drink beer and cold drinks with other women?—A. No, I never went into his office and I don't drink.

Q. Do you know C. B. Dalton?—A. I know him when I see him.

Q. Did you ever speak to him?—A. I went to his home once to see his sister and spoke to him. That is the only time.

Q. Did you ever go to the pencil factory with Dalton?—A. No, I never did.

Q. Did you introduce him to Mr. Frank?—A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you ever go into the factory and go into the basement with Dalton?—A. No, I don't even know where the basement is. I never have been in it.

Scott's testimony showed up the "confessions" of the negro in a peculiar light.

The detective, questioned by Luther Rosser, told the jury that Conley, when he "had told everything," when he had accused Frank of the killing and had made himself an accessory after the fact by declaring that he assisted in the disposal of the body; when every motive for holding anything back had been swept away by his third affidavit, still denied to him (Scott) many of the alleged circumstances to which he testified while he was on the stand the first three days of the week.

It will be the contention of the defense that these many additions to Conley's tale, inasmuch as all reason for concealing them had passed after Conley had come out with his accusations against Frank and his confession of his own part in the crime, are pure fabrications of the black man's imagination, as are the other details of his tale.

Scott said that he had grilled and badgered Conley repatedly about seeing Mary Phagan enter the factory. Even after the negro had made all his incriminating statements, he steadfastly denied seeing the girl victim go up the stairs to the second floor.

Denied He Had Seen Purse.

He denied also to Scott, the detective said, that he ever had seen the girl's mesh bag or parasol, or that he ever had heard a girl's scream while he was sitting on the first floor. He told the detectives that he did not see Lemmie Quinn or Monteen Stover enter the factory, although he later declared he had seen them both and so testified on the stand.

Conley said on the stand when he was questioned by Rosser that he thought he ad told all these things to Scott and John Black while he was making his third and final affidavit. Scott was called to testify

Huerta Trying to Rouse S. America Against Uncle Sam

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 8.—Despite the optimistic belief in Washington that Provisional President Huerta is posing in his defiance of the United States, there were developments here to-day which show that the Mexican national executive is exerting every diplomatic agency in a campaign against the American Government.

Huerta's envoys in the Central American States are attempting to work up the Latin-American Governments with declarations that the United States has designs on all territory lying north of the Panama Canal.

Diplomatic bureaus, aside from the regularly accredited plenipotentiaries, have been opened in London and Paris.

Embezzling Governor Now a Swineherd

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 8.—An extraordinary story of the downfall of a high official in Russia is told here to-day. Some time ago the Governor of the Province of the Don Cossacks hired a swineherd for his farm at Miatopolsk. Shortly after the servants told him that the new employee made the most extraordinary statements when he was in a drunken condition, and used to say that he was really Governor of the Don Cossacks province.

Investigation showed the guardian of the pigs eight years ago was Governor, but had been recalled and sent to prison for embezzlement.

Mrs. Gould Against The High Slit Skirt

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Edwin Gould to-day severely criticized present street attire and one-piece bathing suits for women.

"I am not in favor of freak or suggestive modes," said Mrs. Gould. "The extreme slit skirt to which objection has been taken in various parts of the country is not worn in New York by any of my friends. Nor do I know of any one who appears at bathing beaches in one-piece suits such as Chicago has forbidden."

FIRE LADDIES ON VACATION.

DALTON, Aug. 8.—Sixteen members of the Dalton fire department, headed by Chief W. H. Perry, left here Thursday afternoon for Tampa, Fla., on their annual two weeks' outing.

SCOTT USED BY DEFENSE IN EFFORT TO TEAR DOWN EVIDENCE OF JIM CONLEY

that Conley not only had failed to tell them, but for the most part had made strenuous denials when asked about them. It was expected that Black would be called early Friday to testify on the same matter.

Rosser, in his examination of Detective Scott, sought to create in the minds of the jury the impression that Conley had been guided and directed by the dectives in the framing of his string of statements and affidavits.

Negro's Story in Own Words.

Scott admitted that the improbabilities in the negro's statements had been pointed out to him, and that, with these suggestions, Conley proceeded to doctor up his affidavits until they harmonized better with the circumstances of the day.

Solicitor Dorsey was loath to let any statement get into the record which indicated that Conley had been coached by the detectives, and he got Scott to say that no one had put the words in the negro's mouth.

"But you would say," shouted Rosser, "'That don't fit, Jim,' and Jim would get something that did fit; isn't that so?"

Scott said that this was the truth.

The testimony of Scott and that of Dr. L. W. Childs, a physician and surgeon, marked the opening of the defense's fight for the life of Leo Frank. The State rested its case against the factory superintendent at noon and Dr. Childs was called at once to testify in rebuttal of Dr. H. F. Harris, the State's principal medical expert.

Childs Attacks Harris.

Dr. Childs declared boldly that Dr. Harris' conclusions were the wildest sort of guesses. He said that Harris had made statements with no dependable data on which to base them.

Dr. Harris' declaration that Mary Phagan came to her death within half or three-quarters of an hour after she met her death, an assumption he made because the cabbage in her stomach hardly had begun to digest, the expert of the defense characterized as nothing more than conjecture.

"I have seen cabbage that had been in a person's stomach twelve hours that was less changed than that," he asserted.

Solicitor Dorsey, when he got hold of the witness, confined himself mainly to an attempt to discredit Dr. Childs as an expert. He brought to the attention of the jury that the physician was only 31 years old, that he had geen graduated from a medical school only seven years and that he was a general practitioner, rather than a specialist od laboratory man like Dr. Harris.

Childs Not a Specialist.

The Solicitor then propounded a number of highly scientific medical questions to the witness—questions furnished by the Solictor's brother, Dr. R. T. Dorsey—and Dr. Childs was soon forced to reply that only a specialist could answer such a line of interrogation.

Those who expected some sensational testimony from C. B. Dalton, the first of the State's witnesses Friday, were disappointed. Dalton's story was more in the nature of a confession of his own derelictions than an expose of misconduct on the part of Frank. Dalton testified that he had seen women in Frank's office on various occasions. Who they were he did not know. He had witnessed no compromising situations.

Dalton was mentioned in Conley's story and to that extent corroborated the negro.

TAX BILLS REACH CRUCIAL STAGE IN ASSEMBLY

Senate Will Pass Them, but the House Must Change Front if They Become Laws.

With the Senate substitute for Representative Sheppard's tax reform bill delivered in printed form to the Senate and the two Administration bills, providing a pro rata ad valorem tax for pensions and common schools, in the hands of the Committee on Constitutional Amendments, State Senators Friday morning prepared for the most important legislation of the session.

Senator Miller, chairman of the Finance Committee and joint author of all three bills, declared Friday morning the legislation would be hastened. He indicated further that all three bills would be well on their way toward passage by Monday afternoon.

The substitute for the Sheppard bill has been favorably reported by the Finance Committee, and the two Administration bills, which were defeated in the House and presented in the Senate Thursday, were considered by the Committee on Constitutional Amendments, of which Senator Harrell is chairman, Friday morning. The two bills, it is understood, will receive the indorsement of the committee.

Senate Will Pass Them.

The champions of the two Administration bills declare the bills will meet with little opposition in the Senate, as this body has taken a decided stand on tax reform which will relieve the State's financial embarrassment.

The two bills, which are similar to those presented in the House by Speaker Burwell, were drawn at the instance of the Governor and provide that the General Assembly shall not appropriate for any one year for common schools a sum in excess of that raised by levying two and one-half mills, nor any in excess of one and one-half mills for pensions.

Both bills are constitutional amendments and will require a two-thirds vote in the Senate. Should the Upper House indorse the measures they will be sent back to the House, where, unless there is a change of front, they will again be defeated.

Two Other Bills Tabled.

The Senate's decks are clear now for the consideration of these three bills. Thursday afternoon the Foster-Bush-Searcy white slavery bill was passed by unanimous vote, and two bills—one by President Anderson and Senator Hule, of the Thirty-fifth, providing an increase in State Senatorial Districts, and the other, by Senator McNeill, amending the section of the code so as to permit the running of through freight trains on Sunday—were tabled.

The Anderson-Hule bill resulted in sharp debate between President Anderson and Senator Tarver. The latter charged the bill was an attempt to increase the representation of the cities at the expense of the rural districts. The bill, it is understood, was tabled by friends of the measure so as to allow further consideration.

3,000 EXPECTED AT GROCERS' OUTING

Elaborate Program of Recreation to Make Warm Springs Picnic Greatest Ever Held.

Plans are being made for the annual excursion to Warm Springs, Ga., Wednesday, August 1, of the Retail Grocers and Marketmen's Association. It is expected the outing will be the greatest the organization has ever held. Francis J. Kamper, chairman of the committee on arrangements, has issued an announcement of the picnic.

Nothing has been left undone by the committee. They expect more than 3,000 persons to attend the outing, and have made arrangements to care for all. Many family picnics have been arranged. There will be bathing, bowling, dancing and a baseball game between the associated grocers and the clothiers' league.

Through the efforts of Mr. Kamper and his committee, special arrangements have been made for women and children. The management of the Warm Springs Hotel has offered the use of the hotel to the crowds, and those who do not care for the more strenuous pastimes of baseball, bowling and bathing, can spend the day on the wide verandas and shady walks of the hotel and grounds.

Special trains to carry the crowds will leave Union Station, on the A., B. and A. Railroad for Warm Springs Wednesday morning at 7 and 7:15 o'clock. A round trip fare of $1 for adults and 50 cents for children will be charged.

Anti-Drug Bill Is Defeated in House

The drug bill introduced in the House by Mr. Shuptrine of Chatham County, designed to regulate the sale of cocaine, morphine and other narcotics, was defeated by a vote of 85 to 71.

The bill provided that no druggist shall sell any of the drugs named in the act without a physician's prescription, and that each druggist pay $10 a year license. The bill also created the office of State Drug Commissioner, and provided for drug inspectors.

Mr. Shuptrine declared that the use of cocaine and morphine is greatly increasing in Georgia and should be regulated.

Recovered From Severe Lung Trouble

Plenty of fresh air and good food are necessary to persons suffering from lung trouble, but something more is needed to bring about full health. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for throat and lung troubles, and so many reports have been received showing that it brought about good results in a number of cases which were declared hopeless, that all sufferers who are not benefiting otherwise should at least investigate what it has done for others. Investigate this case:

Madison Lake, Minn.

"Gentlemen: In December, 1908, March, 1909, and September, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs which confined me several weeks, each time to my bed. My doctor advised me to go West.

"In November I started for Denver, Colo. After my arrival I met Michael Brody, who upon learning of my condition, urged me to take Eckman's Alterative. In about two months I began to feel better. I kept on taking the medicine and improved fast. In March, 1910, I returned home. I think I am entirely well, have a good appetite and sleep well. When I left Denver my weight was 130 pounds. I now weigh 165, my normal weight. I thank God and your Alterative for my health."

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drug stores and other leading druggists. STATE, TIED BY CONLEY'S STORY, NOW MUST STAND STILL UNDER HOT FIRE

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

As the defense in the Frank case gets under way, it is evident enough, as it has been from the beginning of this case, that there is but one big, tremendously compelling task before it—the annihilation of Conley's ugly story!

The State climaxed its case thrillingly and with deadly effect in the negro.

He came through the fire of cross-examination, exhaustive and thorough, in remarkably good shape, all things considered. He unfolded a story even more horrible than was anticipated. Certainly, in every conceivable way, he has sought to damage the defendant—even going to the extent of lodging against him another crime than murder!

Through the cross-examination, however, there ran an evident vein of deadly purpose upon the part of the defense. Conley was given full limit to go his length. He went it—no disputing that!

The question is, did he go TOO FAR?

Did he, in his last minute effort to get in EVERYTHING that possibly might work against the defendant, tell things, or say things, that eventually will rise to plague him to his utter undoing?

That is the defense's task—THE UNDOING OF CONLEY.

Conley the State's All.

Conley is the heart and soul of the State's case—without Conley, the State is rendered helpless. He is the Alpha and the Omega of the charge against Leo Frank.

That great detective, William J. Burns, says "they always—criminals—leave something out of gear in the stories they tell."

Burns declares there never was a lie told to shield a criminal that did not have in it SOMEWHERE a fatal weakness, that might be located if patiently sought for. The more elaborate the tale the criminal relates, the more chance there is, no matter how infinitely shrewd he may seem to be, that he will be discovered.

To-day is the defense's day in court—during its progress, which may be for a week or more, even as the State's day lasted 240 hours, Leo Frank must break down the awful story of Jim Conley, and prove himself innocent, if he can, of all the various charges brought against him.

Can he do it?

Well, maybe he can, and maybe he can not—at least, in the name of justice and decency and all that is right, he must have full and free OPPORTUNITY.

One Side of the Case.

During the progress of the State's case, the defense was led far into the gloom. People began to doubt Frank's innocence—people of poise and fair minds, desirous of seeing the truth prevail though the heavens fall. Even these people found themselves staggering and groping as the hideous and sinister charges fell from the lips of the negro.

Could Leo Frank, of previous good reputation, of fair name and unblemished integrity, college bred and studious in habit, so far as the public knew or suspected, be the monster responsible for little Mary Phagan's death, and also—the other unspeakable thing?

In a rather remarkable interview Mrs. Leo Frank gave The Sunday American some few weeks ago, she said this of Frank and herself: "As sweethearts, we went hand in hand, and intruded ourselves upon no person; as man and wife we have gone hand in hand, and we have intruded ourselves upon no person!"

They still are going "hand in hand," the man and the woman, the husband and the wife—the one holding up as best he can under the terrible charge of murder, the other there beside him—"for better or worse, in sickness and in health, for richer or poorer"—until death, or worse than death, shall sever the tie that binds.

That is omething steadying to think about!

It is the defendant's day in court—and he is entitled to fair play and a fair chance!

To some it may seem that the burden has shifted, that it is up to the defense now, notwithstanding the more or less fictitious presumption of innocence the law jealously has established in his favor, to PROVE his innocence.

Be that as it may—even as the gloom has closed about him and all he holds most dear in this world—he still is a human being, in very dire distress, as yet unconvicted; and it is only right that the public should be patient, as he sets forth HIS side of this terrible affair.

And I give it as my opinion here and now, for whatever it is worth, that the case against Leo Frank yet may be far from conclusive—and it may never be made conclusive.

Conley's Tale Impossible?

Suppose the defense is able to show, by a sequence of logical, orderly and honorably sustained witnesses, that the tale Jim Conley tells is utterly absurd—and IMPOSSIBLE?

What then?

Will you be prepared, if forced to a conviction against your will, if it be that way with you, to say to Frank: "All right, you came through the fire, at times seemingly sure to consume you, unhurt and unscorched, but you came through, and I am content."

Conley's story has not YET been broken down—no. But it MAY be broken down.

In an article a few days ago, I said this, and I feel like repeating it now:

In judging this Frank case, purely from the State's own standpoint, there is othing so important as the TIME ELEMENT in which the State uncompromisingly claims the crime was committed.

In another article a few days thereafter, I said this, and this I also feel like repeating now:

If the Conley story is a lie, if it has been TOO CLEVERLY "framed up"—if and a thousand other "ifs"—what matters that?

It matters this: If it be a lie, it MUST break down, somewhere, sometime; if it be the truth, it will stand against ALL the assaults made upon it!

State Tied by Conley.

Remember, unless Conley's story holds together, the case against Frank goes to pieces. Everybody who has read the evidence and who still is capable of rendering just judgment will admit that.

Suppose it can be shown, and is shown, that the story Conley told CAN NOT be true?

The defense MUST show that, or Frank is lost!

Can the defense do that?

The State has pinned itself down to exact and definite propositions. Remember, the defense has hardly started its story yet—it may be able to make absurd those very propositions the State has set up.

The crime, according to the State's witnesses, MUST have been committed thus and so, in exact order, and just as stated—or Conley's story falls down.

The biggest element in the State's case is the time element—mark that!

Upon it the State will stand or fall eventually.

If Mary Phagan was NOT killed before 12:05, then Leo Frank didn't kill her. If she was not killed at that time, Conley's story will not do.

Then is when the State says she was killed—THEN and not at any other time. Conley's story ALL leads up to and away from that.

Remember, too, that the only witness who swears to knowledge or suspicion of any unspeakable conduct upon the part of Frank is—again—Conley.

Dalton a Tame Witness.

When it came to corroborating Conley, Dalton proved a tame corroborator. The ugly, nasty charge of perversion and degeneracy, glibly dropped from the lips of Conley, rests ENTIRELY AND ALTOGETHER on Conley's word.

If Conley's story of the murder is shown to be IMPOSSIBLE AND ABSURD, will you then reverse your other opinion concerning Frank—if you have accepted Conley's word as to that—and agree that Conley, having lied to send Frank to the gallows, would have lied as readily to besmirch him with unmentionable scandal otherwise?

Shall not Frank have the right, unchallenged and fair, to clear himself of every charge lodged against him?

To-day is his day in court—will any living person begrudge him, sore pressed, one moment of it?

Will, in the end, he be able to read and take to himself, happily and serenely, Tennyson's beautiful poem ending—

"And now it is daylight everywhere!" Italics

Will he?

We shall see.

At least, he is entitled to his day in court—and it is at hand!

The Frank trial audience laughed when this witness said he didn't know where he was born.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, Aug. 8.—In a communication issued to-day by the Bulgarian Government it was announced that "Bulgaria will begin demobilization of her army as soon as a peace treaty is signed, upon the understanding that the powers favor the Enos-Midia line as the southern Bulgarian boundary." State Wins Point in Diggs Slavery Case

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—The fourth day of the trial of Maury I. Diggs, former State Architect charged with white slavery, began to-day with the defense laboring under a decided handicap. The first witnesses were on hand ready to testify as to the trip to Reno on which Diggs and Drew Caminetti, son of the Commissioner General of Immigration, are charged with taking Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris for immoral purposes.

Judge Van Fleet ruled that the characters and reputations of the two girls would have no bearing on the case.

BITS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE, AS VIEWED BY STATE, STRANDS IN ROPE

By O. B. KEELER.

They call it a chain that the State has forged, or has tried to forge, to hold Leo Frank to the murder of Mary Phagan.

But isn't it a rope?

A chain, you know, is as strong as its weakest link. Take one link out, and the chain comes apart.

With a rope, it's different.

Strand after strand might be cut or broken, and the rope still holds a certain weight. Then might come a time when the cutting of one more strand would cause the rope to break.

The point is, the finished rope will sustain a weight that would instantly snap any one of its several strands.

Bits of Evidence Threads.

And that is what the various bits of circumstantial evidence might better be called—strands or threads.

Edgar Allen Poe, in "The Mystery of Marie Roget," has nearly exhausted the philosophical phase of accumulative circumstance and its relation to evidence.

Applying the system of the well-known Dupin to the case in point—and REGARDING IT, BE IT UNDERSTOOD, STRICTLY FROM THE STATE'S VIEWPOINT—an analysis of part of the evidence against Leo Frank follows:

First off, the isolated circumstance of Conley's ability to write would seem as futile as a smoke wreath in sustaining any weight of evidence, except against Conley himself.

But to that fact is added the fact that Frank knew Conley could write.

Still, the thread is flimsy, and, even connected with the case against Frank, would appear worthless.

Six Deductions Seen.

But when it develops that Frank, knowing Conley could write, and knowing the police were trying to find the author of the murder notes—when Frank, well aware of these things, did not inform the police that Conley was lying when he said he could not write, the following deductions appear:

(1) That Frank did not want to connect Conley with the murder notes, which (2) would have been the natural and prompt inclination of a suspected man who knew nothing of the crime himself, so that (3) it appeared Frank knew something of the murder, and (4) knew that Conley knew he knew something of the murder, which (5) justified the conclusion on the part of the State that Frank feared to implicate Conley, lest (6) Conley, in turn, tell something that would implicate him.

Of course, this strand may be broken entirely by the defense, showing Frank never knew the police were ignorant of Conley's ability to write before the police learned it themselves.

And there is one pretty substantial strand of evidence, as the State sees it—and all having its genesis in the simple fact that Conley knew how to write, and at first denied it.

But that strand of itself surely would fail to carry the burden of the case. There must be others.

Story Itself Not Convincing.

Even Conley's story is strong only by reason of many strands that surround and support it. Presented to a jury, round and unvarnished—tainted by the reek of false affidavits and weakened by the dry-rot of self-interest, Conley's story never would win a verdict against Leo Frank.

But there is the shred of the murder notes—Conley's story draws support from that. There is the time factor brought out by the expert testimony—Conley's story twines itself about the prop of science. There is the agitation of Frank noticed by Newt Lee in the middle of the afternoon—Conley's story provides for that. There is the visit of Monteen Stover, a tiny circumstance of itself—but of vast importance just so far as it strengthens Conley's recollection of exact time.

And it is by reason of the rope already well along in the twisting that a hundred other little circumstances become significant that of themselves would be lighter than the air-drawn dagger that troubled the dreams of Macbeth.

They fit in with the twisting of the rope.

Will the Rope Hold?

There is Frank's agitation at home and at the factory. There is the ugly story of habitual "chats" at the factory, guarded by Conley as watchman. And the sending away of Newt Lee that afternoon. And the seeing of Conley by Mrs. White, "loitering" at the place he fixes for himself as watchman, and at the time. And the alleged reluctance of Frank to confront Conley at the jail.

And all the rest of it.

So many little incidents, and most of them small to triviality in themselves.

The point is, each strengthens the other, until the fragile threads become a rope.

Will it hold after Frank's lawyers have presented their side of the case?

The jury must decide.

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XVI.

THE first year of Mary Danforth's life in the business world dragged its dreary length away. In the beginning there had been some excitement attendant upon the new experience, and this had buoyed her up. To be sure there had been a great wrench in giving up the home of which she and her mother were so fond, but for her mother's sake the girl put her own griefs in the background. She remembered that once, several years ago, her father had said to his wife:

"She is singularly dependent and sensitive, Mary. If anything should happen to me you must look after her as tenderly as I have tried to do. I depend upon you for that."

The words recurred to the girl often through the wearisome months that followed upon her father's death, when she saw the elderly woman's sad face grow sadder as she tried to accustom herself to changed conditions. When Mary left home each morning it was with the appreciation that her mother must be both housekeeper and houseworker, and that she was not used to such toil. The girl would rise early in order that she herself might make her own bed and set her own room to rights, then help about the breakfast.

Yet in spite of these efforts on her part there were the dishes to be washed, the tiny flat to be swept and dusted, and the meals to be prepared by the widow. Mary would urge her to eat a substantial luncheon, yet she always feared that her own ideas of what "substantial" meant in this connection and her mother's interpretation of the word differed as soon as the daughter was out of sight. Therefore she would order from the butcher on her way downtown a chop or some other nourishing tidbit for her mother. Delicacies were a strain upon Mary Danforth's small purse, but her parent's strength must be kept up. Yet, do what the girl would, she was sure that when night came the patient widow was too tired or too depressed to sleep. She also knew—better than did her mother—that she herself, often went without food at the noon hour to save the price of a luncheon. A few crackers slipped into her bag before she left home would take the place of the noon-day meal.

In spite of these economies the family finances were very low. More than once Mrs. Danforth had been forced to use a little of what she called her "insurance money" to get herself some necessary bit of clothing. Each time this was done Mary was impressed afresh with the hopelessness of her efforts to support two women decently on her small salary.

Business was dull in all branches, and real estate was not booming. James Pearson, her employer, had a wife with enough money in her own right to support herself and her husband, so the success of his enterprise was not essential to his existence. He kept the business because he liked to feel that he was not dependent upon his wife. Mary often wished fervently that she was in the employ of some man to whom work was a necessity and who would be energetic and progressive. But she dared not abandon a certainty for an uncertainty.

It was at this juncture that Herbert Fischer ("Bert" as his friends called him), got into the habit of coming to Pearson's office to talk over a possible real estate deal. At first the girl barely noticed him, so absorbed was she in the many duties that fell to her lot, for she soon discovered that she was not only stenographer and typewriter, but assistant bookkeeper and office boy combined. Night found her jaded and nervous, looking forward eagerly to the letter from Gordon Craig that often awaited her when she returned to her flat.

Twice Fletcher, who had remained in the inner office talking to Pearson, came into the outer office just as Mary was putting on her coat and hat, and offered to escort her to the elevated where she was to take the train uptown. Both times the girl had declined coldly, yet the second time she did this her heart smote her as she saw his disappointed expression. Somehow, she thought, as she walked toward the Cortlandt street station, the look in the man's eyes reminded her of that in a faithful dog's eyes. She was so lonely that even the thought of a dog's devotion would comfort her, she said to herself with whimsical humor. Yet this man Fletcher was a common kind of a person, she decided—not a bit like the men of her world.

Then she smiled bitterly. At least not like the men of the world she used to live in. Perhaps, after all, a girl who worked in a little office on a mean salary, and who lived in a five-room apartment in the poorest section of West Eighty-fourth street, could hardly afford to sneer at anything just because he was not educated to the standard that had once been hers, and had not the refinement that was traditional in the circle of which she had once formed a part. That circle had melted away since her father's death. She could not keep pace with her friends, and one by one they had dropped out of her life. She did not care, she muttered untruthfully to herself. When one declares bitterly that she "does not care" that is usually when really "cares" most.

And that night there was no letter from Craig. He usually wrote her three times a week, but this was the fourth time in six weeks that his letter had not come on the day that she expected it.

"Never mind, dearest," she said to her mother, who commented on the non-arrival of the expected epistle and who remarked that "it was queer that Gordon had not written regularly lately," and "hoped that nothing was wrong" with her daughter's lover. "Gordon and I understand each other, and he is extremely busy just now. One can hardly expect a man to write as often as a woman does, you know."

Her mother kissed the speaker tenderly. "That's so, darling," she assented, "and the busier Gordon is the more work he will do, and the sooner he will come for you, dearie—and for me."

"Yes!" the girl assented, bravely. "That is true, dear mother."

But in her heart she was saying: "How can I stand this kind of life unless he comes soon! How can I stand it!"

Lady Constance Stewart Richardson on How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

The first figure is a dainty and simple pose, but it works beautifully into any of the dances that are so popular to-day, for, as we all know, dancing is coming into its own, and one of the most beautiful and widely neglected arts is now making a place for itself.

In this, as in so many dancing movements, the figure must be poised lightly on the ball of the foot.

The second figure (2B) is an exercise that must bring to the body the lightness of flying, and when once it is mastered you will find that you have true grace at your command.

FIGURE TWO.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

Copyright 1913 by International News Service.

WHEN I was a child of 11 I used to go out in the gardens of my English home and study the statues and statuettes that decorated it. For hours at a time I used to copy the poses of those lovely classical statues, and I found the greatest entertainment and joy in trying to imitate those beautiful poses. This was the beginning of my dancing, and from the taste I acquired for classical pose and movement has come, I feel sure, whatever measure of bodily grace is mine.

Dancing is essentially feeling, and the expression of that feeling well up in movement and rhythm. It makes for grace and for strong, healthy bodies as no other form of exercise can, because no other form of exercise is as universally possible, as entirely within the reach of all, as this natural expression of the poetry we all have down in our natures.

To-day I am giving you two exercises that express the joy of living to a wonderful extent and give the body much to rejoice in, for they make for grace, for lightness and for the universally desired bodily beauty.

The First Figure.

The first figure is a dainty and simple pose, but it works beautifully into any of the dances that are so popular to-day, for, as we all know, dancing is coming into its own, and one of the most beautiful and widely neglected arts is now making a place for itself. This figure (1B) may be learned with the support of a wall, but it should be worked out in such perfection that it can be done with absolute poise. It will strengthen weak ankles and insteps while it is developing power for grace in arms and legs. Here is my method of practicing it: Point the toes of the right foot straight forward and balance the weight firmly on that foot. Now raise the left leg slowly from the floor, keeping the foot almost at right angles to the other foot. Lift the arms slowly, keeping the right arm held in one continuous line, while the left is curved at the elbow and raised at the wrist. The fingers are held lightly and well apart. The whole body inclines slightly toward the left when the left arm and leg are expressing the greater amount of action, and when the weight falls in the alternate pose I always recommend the body sways to the raised right foot.

This exercise, like all other dancing movements, must express lightness and joy, for dancing is dancing only when it comes as an expression of a happy spirit. It must express personality and yet conform to true ideals of grace and beauty, and thus in time it will bring the body to grace and beauty, too.

Figure Two.

The second figure (2B) is an exercise that must bring to the body the lightness of flying, and when once it is mastered you will find that you have true grace at your command. In this, as in so many dancing movements, the figure must be poised lightly on the ball of the foot. Just such simple movements as poising the body lightly on the toes or ball of the foot will help avoid civilization's arch enemy, flatfoot, and will help in the acquisition of a light, springy walk.

Poise the body lightly on the right foot, with a general inclination toward the right. Stretch the right arm up and out and droop the left arm from shoulder to just below the waist in one long curve. Even while the body is swaying in this position, lift the left leg from the hip and sway it backward from the knee, making one line from knee to toes and bringing the foot almost on a level with the knee. Now stand on the left foot and alternate from side to side.

This exercise is by no means easy to master, but there is no movement of which I know that can be more absolutely counted on to bring the figure into the long, graceful, undulating lines we all so much admire.

.:. A Bachelor's Diary .:.

By MAX.

JULY 6.—"Tell me your name, Little Girl," said the woman who had rolled out such expressions as "the fundamental principles of liberty" as naturally as an entirely different type of woman rolls out the words "darlingest" and "cute," showing to which class she belonged.

Manette looked at me. I nodded my head. Then, to my surprise, the child told her real name—my name, and the name I was trying to keep secret.

"Blake," I hastily added. "Blake," she repeated after me.

The visitor looked grimly satisfied. Her suspicions were confirmed!

"You are Manette H——, the little heiress. You are not Manette Blake at all, and if you will come with me I will take you to your guardian. If you," turning to me, "interfere, I will have you arrested."

I laughed. "I hope," I said, putting fresh bait on my hook, and casting it out into the water, "that I will live long enough to see your sex in power. You are so inconsequential, so altogether unreasoning, and so cocksure that you are right that we will no longer be forced to turn to the joke books for amusement. The Congressional Records, in that glorious period, will cause a laugh to ring around the world."

"When the women are in power," she retorted, "idlers like you who go around insulting women will be flogged."

This was growing interesting. "I am not idle," I replied. "I am fishing. I have been fishing for three hours and haven't had a bite. That indicates persistence, steadfastness of purpose and ambition that will not be discouraged. As for being insulting——"

A Bluff Called.

I turned and looked her square in the face. "I don't see," I said, slowly, and as if giving it deep thought, "why you used that word. To insult you I should have to regard you or your intentions seriously. Believe me, madame, I had not done that."

I drew my line carefully in and packed up my box of fishing tackle. "Come, Manette." I said to the child, "let us go and be arrested. Are you ready?" turning to the very red-faced woman who stood beside me.

"If you will walk with us as far as the cottage I will get a horse, or do you prefer to have the child ride with you and have me tied to your horse's tail and dragged as captives were in the olden times?"

I had called her bluff! "I want nothing," in anger, "but to see that child restored to its guardian."

"Then rest easy," I replied, taking off my hat and bowing. "She is with her guardian now."

"If you are Mr. Max——" she began, and could say no more, for she realized what a spectacle she had made of herself.

I bowed again and turned away. A moment later she came running after me. "I hope," she stammered, "that you will forgive me, but your looks——"

I cut her short with a bow, and, picking Manette up in my arms, turned on to a narrow wooded path, and was soon out of sight.

"She is the kind of woman," I mused, "that thinks that to be a man is prima facie evidence of guilt. And the trouble is, her number is increasing."

A New Spot.

July 16.—Manette and I have found a new picnic spot, and for several days we had eluded the interloper, but on the fourth day I found her sitting on the porch when we got home. She had come, she said, to borrow Manette to take part in a tableaux to be given for the cause. "She would make," she said, "such a pretty little Goddess of Liberty. Besides," she argued, "the change would do her good. She needs a little civilization."

That made me smile. "Civilization" of the brand found at summer resorts, consists in sitting around on hotel verandas, comparing surgical operations and crochet patterns and branding as "bold" and "scheming" the woman who receives the attention of the only man at the place. I could imagine Manette being passed around by the crochet cut-ups who would speculate on the price of her clothes, her uncle's wealth, and seek to secure through her childish frankness the key to my family secrets.

I refused. "The child," I explained, "is dearer to me than the Cause. She is in bed by 8 every night and has never been permited to stay up late and grow feverish and excited taking part like a manikin in some foolish show. I know that mothers let their children do it, but I am not a mother. I am only a man."

"And the rudest man that ever lived," she retorted, striding out to get on her horse.

I did not offer to assist her. I never have. It would be inconsistent for her to accept.

July 28.—I am writing this while lying in bed, and somewhere in the room, I don't know where, for I can't easily turn my head to see, there is a trained nurse.

I do not know how she got here nor when. All I know is that her attentions are very grateful to me, and that there have been days when I seemed to be slipping away from everyone into nowhere, and only the firm, cool touch of her hand held me.

I think I was conscious of her hand and its helpfulness and soothing magic for days before I opened my eyes wide enough to look her in the face. Even now I do not know what she looks like, and am not interested. I lie for hours with my eyes closed, asking nothing more in life than that a pair of very strong hands, white and soft and gentle, be there to turn my head when the pain of one position is too great, to smooth my pillow, and I hear a voice somewhere murmur, "Poor boy, poor boy!"

July 29.—Richards is here. I do not know when she came. I only know that every few hours she comes from some remote place—the next room is remote in my present condition—and helps The Hands move me to an easier position, and that with her coming all concern for Manette has left me.

Fall Guy.

A gentleman in a club had formed the hopeless and harmful habit of taking too much to drink—alcoholically speaking—before he went home every evening.

"How does he know what time to go home?" asked a stranger in the club one night.

"It's this way," explained a member. "He goes to the head of that long flight of stairs leading to the street. If he falls down them, he knows it's time to go home."

A Ready Proof.

Father—Just fancy, Willie, all these fields used to be under the sea, and fish were swimming about where we are standing.

Willie—Yes, dad; here's an empty salmon tin.

What chance has sane, sensible reason against the fortified power of a wild habit?

Loss is unpleasant—but it never rises to the dignity of calamity unless it is the loss of self-respect.

.:. Mother and Father .:.

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

FATHER'S idea of good luck is winning a lottery ticket. Mother's is to find a pair of stockings that do not need darning.

It is father who hopes at the beginning of impracticable schemes, and mother who cheers when things go wrong in the end. It is father who is depressed and exaggerates what is lost, and mother who is cheerful in counting what is left.

Mother is proud to be told that the homeliest child in the family resembles her. Father isn't.

Here of late the children put the dependence in father's money that some generations ago was put in mother's prayers.

It is father, never mother, who expects the children to assume the burden as they get older. Mother, if she had her way, would carry it till the day of her death.

Once upon a time father called mother and the children together and said in the very wisest way: "This house would be conducted better if business principles were applied. Your system," frowning at mother, "would throw a peanut stand into the court of bankruptcy. I have opened what I will call a trouble book. Every member of the family will make entries in it of troubles, worries, etc., and we will meet at the end of the week to discuss the entries and act upon any suggestions for reform."

Then he frowned at mother again and went to his office. A week later the trouble book was opened.

"Mother won't let me go swimming." "Mother refuses to let me have any spending money; I suggest a needed reform here." "Mother wouldn't let me wear my best dress to play in," etc., etc., appeared in the handwriting of the children, and in father's handwriting there appeared: "Mother had the steak too well done"; "Mother is neglecting her personal appearance; I recall twenty years ago when she took more pride in doing her hair"; "Mother asked for money to-day to get Willie new shoes; I must look into her extravagance," etc., etc., from father and the children, but not one complaint from mother!

Passing between Scylla and Charybdis is no feat compared with the daily position of the mother whose children are always demanding more money of her, and whose husband is always telling her she must get along with less.

Before the oldest girl in the family is sixteen her father finds his throne tottering, and by the time she is eighteen he hasn't enough authority left to order a favorite old picture left on the parlor wall.

When father scolds and goes out slamming the door, the daughter wishes she could have a man like that for a husband about a minute, and she'd cure him, and her mother tells her she will have a chance some day.

It is not very creditable to those children who live and grow up, but in the years to come the mother finds her greatest comfort in the thought that the child that would have always been appreciative and kind, and never have hurt her, is the one that died when it was a baby.

WARMED OVER LOVE. .:. By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PUZZLED writes as follows:

"I am a young girl 20 years of age and am deeply in love with a man eight years my senior, who reciprocates my love twice-fold. He has a very good position in business and is all that can be expected from a well-bred, respectable man. My only objection to him is that he is a widower and has two small children. My parents also object for this reason, and it is their only reason. If they thought the union would make me happy I am quite sure they would not stand in my way. I have met other young men, but can not seem to care for any of them."

The experience of wooing and winning a wife, of tasting the joy of being the head of one's own home, the creature comforts that domesticity means for a man, the broadening of heart and sympathies when the wife goes bravely alone to the shadow of death and returns with a child in her arms, the anguish of spirit when the mother falls sick and the desolation of the home when she is taken out of it forever, all tend to make a man more tender and considerate.

Though his home may have had its discomforts, he learns to regard it as his home; not his father's, or his mother's, but his own home. He also learned what an unimportant factor he was in its making, and realized the value of the WOMAN as he never realized it in his bachelor days.

That the experience is educational in a way that means more love, more consideration and an easing of the burden for the second wife, I am so certain that I wonder that the greater eligibility of the widower over the bachelor has not become an accepted fact.

Not Recognized.

Older women recognize it. Younger women do not because of the pretty sentiment they attach to being a man's first love.

The only objection to this man, then, is that he has two small children. Poor little motherless babes! I hope this little girl who has won this man's love has a heart broad enough to take in his children; a courage that will sustain her when, as a stepmother, she is maligned and misunderstood; and a charity that is big enough to cover their faults as effectually as if they were her own children.

Someone must mother the motherless, and the task is herd at its best, but one that is made light in the all-sustaining power of Love. If this man and his girl have for each other a love that will stand the strain, their union will be happy though he had ten children.

Learns Something.

His previous experience has made him dependent, tender and broader and considerate. He has two children and he knows that the woman he takes to the altar promises more than to be a loyal wife. She promises to be a loving mother to his children, to accept their resentment and ingratitude without complaint, and to know that hereafter to the end of her days criticism will be her lot.

He knows all this, and is grateful. On his first wedding day he regarded himself as a prize; the second time he goes to the altar with two children at his heels he knows, if he is a man and knows anything, that the prize is the brave-hearted girl who accompanies him.

He was confident on his first wedding day that he was dividing his joys. He knows on his second wedding day that he is dividing his burdens and sorrows, and the knowledge makes him humble.

You love him, my dear; you have met no other man you could love. He loves you, and I am sure your love is big enough to take in his children.

Nothing counts for as much as love. If you love, you know no burden. When you love, there is no sorrow too hard to bear. Marry him, go on loving him, and so long as you love him, you will be happy.

Not Alone.

An old Indian man, selling baskets, called at Mrs. Allen's one morning. He was very anxious to make a sale, and, after considerable parleying, he said:

"Make me an offer, madam, and see if I don't take you up."

Little 5-year-old Bertha was a spectator to the interview, and when the man made this remark she threw her arms around her mother, crying:

"Mother, if he takes you, I'll go, too."

When the Sun Rose

IT was absolutely still in the large, dark room where the patient lay.

A small lamp with a dark shade faintly illuminated the heavy silk curtains which covered the windows. In a corner of the room stood the little bed in which a small feverish body was struggling with death. A beautiful young woman was sitting at the bedside, her eyes anxiously followed every movement of the sick child.

Her costly evening gown showed that she had returned direct from some society affair. Her gloves and fan she had thrown carelessly on the table.

A few hours ago she had been sitting at the dinner table covered with flowers and surrounded by merry people, when a messager had arrived with the word that her little boy had suddenly been taken ill.

She hurried home as fast as her big car could carry her and now she was sitting here full of anxiety and despair.

Over and over again, she asked herself if it could really be possible that she was about to lose her fair-haired little darling. Oh no, God could not be so cruel! The boy was her greatest, her only joy! She realized that more than ever now, when she was in danger of losing him.

She wondered if she had always thought so, and her whole past life came back to her mind.

She saw herself as a happy, lively and spoiled girl, whose every wish was gratified. She saw herself surrounded by admirers and suitors, who flattered and envied her, but she never felt, not even for a short single moment, the real, true joy which fills and takes possession of your heart and soul.

No Love.

Then the learned and famous Professor Bornemann was introduced in her parents' home. He fell in love with the young, lively girl and she accepted him, though he was twenty years older than she.

Did she love him then?

No, unfortunately, not.

Rich as she was, she decorated her home with every possible luxury and comfort and filled it with guests, balls and dinners in endless succession.

For a time her husband let her do as she pleased, but one day he took both her hands and looked earnestly into her eyes, while he said in his gentle voice:

"Let us be done with all these empty pleasures, and let me see that I have a splendid little wife, who cares more for her husband and her baby than for all the dances and dinners in the world."

At first she stared at him in surprise, unable to understand him. Then she tore her hands away and answered angrily:

"I do not see how you can make such a request. You are old and have enjoyed all the pleasures of life, while I am young yet and have a right to enjoy myself."

He looked at her sadly, then he turned away and left the room without another word. And since then her life had been one mad round of pleasures, while her husband and child were left to take care of themselves.

And had she then found the happiness she sought?

No, not for a single minute.

* * *

The child in the bed moved again.

"Mama," the little feverish lips whispered.

She bent forward and stroked his hot forehead with her cool hand.

"Mama," he moaned once more.

Anxious Moments.

She felt a cruel pain in her heart. Had she done anything to deserve to be called Mama? She bent lower still and two big tears fell on the golden curls on the white pillow.

The door opened. Her husband entered, followed by the doctor. Her eyes sought his, which looked deep, deep into her soul.

The doctor felt the boy's pulse and shook his head gravely.

"I can not say anything now. I shall return in an hour, when the crisis is due. Until then we have hope." With a silent bow, he left the room.

The professor had sat down on a chair on the opposite side of the bed. His gray eyes looked at the little figure in the bed with infinite tenderness. The young wife fell down on her knees at her son's bedside.

The boy tossed about restlessly, while the minutes dragged along slowly.

In a quarter of an hour, then——

It was the same thought that filled the minds of husband and wife as they looked at each other across their little son's bed. Then both looked at the hands of the clock.

The child was still restless and feverish. Over and over again the mother stroked her boy's forehead with her cool hand. Then she let it slide down on the silk cover and inch by inch it crept closer to a strong, manly hand, until she took courage and touched it.

Their eyes met and a new sacred silent understanding was born.

* * *

The clock struck 6. The boy was resting easily, his breathing regular and his cheeks lost their feverish color. The crisis was over. The child's life was out of danger.

The professor stood up, went over to the window, drew the curtains aside and opened it. Then he went back to the bed and kneeled down at his wife's side.

The fresh air filled the room—and then the sun rose.

When the Whistle Blows

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says

YOU lift your eyes to the great clock in the white tower and see six o'clock marked with widespread hands. You hear the chimes and whistles clamoring over all the choked streets. Six o'clock! And the girls who smile all day long as steadily as any chorus girl is bidden to do, who haul down enough yards of stuff in a day to tie a sash around this vain old world, who try debutante dancing-frocks on fat relics who've seen forty summer moons or more, who get down endless "middies" for lean little girls, whose too flat pay envelope is sometimes the fortune of the family, all those who need and earn a thicker pay envelope and electric fans, all these bits of womanhood who go to make up the brave army that work in shops pour out of the employes' door and out under the clamor of "six by the clock." The blonde hat model, in her sleazy, slippery, little black gown, the close-tailored girl who sells suits, with her crinkly hair and big black purse like a baby kit-bag, all there—and HAPPY! Have you noticed that? And PRETTY! Have you noticed that? They have many good excuses not to be the first—but they laugh and laugh—and you hear little things like this: "He said to her—and she said to him." "Isn't that great?" and "What are you going to wear?" and "I had the time of my life!" And pretty—they'd have a heap of excuses not to be that, too—what with trying to stretch a bill longer and greener than it is, and standing on their two feet all day long, and smiling long and sweet at grouches. But they are. Among them you find the trimmest girls in town. And some of their faces make a society belle's wish it could go back to Heaven and get made all over again.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LEAVE THAT TO HER.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am twenty-one and in love with a girl of nineteen, and she loves me. Another man, who is much older, is trying to win her love, but she doesn't care for him. At present I am not settled, and it may take about three years before I can marry, while the other man can support her quite nicely. Have I the right to ask her to wait? S. J.

She loves you. She doesn't love the other man. If she is worthy of a good man's love she will wait indefinitely for him in preference to marrying a man she does not care for. Give her the right to decide, and see that you don't make her time of waiting too long.

SHE IS IN THE WRONG.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a young lady for the last seven months. About a week ago I escorted her to a dance where she met some of her old gentlemen friends, who received her attention all the evening. When the time came to go home I asked her to go home with me, but she refused, saying she could go home with others. I then left her. Did I do proper in leaving her? Who should apologize? RICHARD.

She refused to let you escort her home though you had taken her there. Under the circumstances there was nothing for you to do but leave her. You owe her no apology.

KEEPING EVERLASTINGLY AT IT

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am nineteen, and dearly in love with a girl two years my junior, whom I have known for the past seven years. Some time ago she met a young man at a wedding, and has since been devoting all of her attention to him. I love her dearly and would ask you how I can win her love again. F. B. T.

Your seven years' devotion merits better returns. Be devoted and persistent, and if this fails change your tactics to indifference. The appearance of your rival stirred you. Has it occurred to you that if she found she had a rival it might renew her interests?

YOU WERE RIGHT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am sixteen and have been keeping company with a young man about three months. He has bee sick and he telephoned and asked me to come and see him. I told him it was improper for a girl to go to a man's house, and he got angry. Was I right? R. M.

Don't worry, my dear, you did just right. I don't admire him because of his request of his reception of your refusal. Never go to see a man under any circumstances unless your mother goes with you.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A little boy of four years of age, on noticing for the first time a lock of gray hair on his father's head, asked:

"Papa, why are some of your hairs gray?"

Thinking to drive home a moral lesson, the father answered:

"Papa has a new gray hair every time his little boy is naughty."

The child seemed lost in thought, but, after a pause, said gravely:

"Then grandpa must have had awful naughty boys."

It was after a junior league match, in which the home side lost eight goals to nil. The goalkeeper was naturally blamed for the disaster, and overhearing that things were being said about him, went straight to the captain and inquired:

"Did you tell Bill that I was the worst goalkeeper in the village?"

"No, I didn't. I thought he knew," was the reply.

Even doctors are not always literal in their prescriptions.

"You must take exercise," said the doctor to a patient. "The motor car in a case like yours gives the best exercise that——"

"But I can't afford a car, on insurance pay," the patient growled.

"Don't buy one; just dodge 'em!" said the doctor.

"What's the matter, dear?" asked a woman of her troubled looking husband.

"Oh, I'm worried about the money market," he testily responded.

"And I'm bothered about the market money," quietly replied the woman, as she counted the contents of her purse.

"Will you give me something to drink?" he asked faintly of the nurse.

"Certainly," said the nurse, offering him a glass of water.

He put his hand feebly.

"Give it to me in a teaspoon, please," he whispered, huskily, "until I get used to it."

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

But this young man was not one to be easily daunted. "Do you wish me to make up an article out of surmises?" he inquired. "A young girl of this city has died in a carriage and the people have a right to know how. Shall I say by use of the knife or——"

"Scoundrel!" came from Dr. Molesworth's lips. "You deserve chastising, but I shall simply see that you do, what you have probably never done before, tell the exact truth." And, turning to the detective at his side, he exclaimed, "Note what I tell the fellow. If he alters a word or interposes one item that is not borne out by what he observes and hears here, I will see that he is discharged from his place. I know what paper he is on, and I know the editor, and my threat is no idle one. Now let him listen. This young lady, Mildred Farley by name, was engaged to marry me to-night. Being an orphan without friends—pardon me, Mrs. Olney, I should have said relatives, perhaps—and not being well, she thought a private marriage at a hotel would be most suitable. I agreed with her and the arrangements were all made for the ceremony. But she was sicger than I supposed. The symptoms of fever which I had perceived in her this afternoon increased rapidly on my departure and when I returned, before the specified hour to marry her, I found she had fled, leaving an incoherent note behind, which so alarmed me that I went out at once, and jumping into my phaeton, drove up and down the streets searching for her.

The End of It.

"I did not find her, of course; and remembering an important prescription I had promised to send a patient of mine, I dispatched my driver with it, and was taking my phaeton home myself, when I suddenly detected a woman seated on one of the steps in Twenty-second street whose appearance struck me as familiar. Though no believer in miracles, I accepted this one without scruple, and, jumping from my carriage, went up to her and soon saw that I was right in supposing I had found Miss Farley. She was very ill, and did not know me. 'I am sleepy,' she said, and dropped her head on my shoulder as I lifted her up. At the same moment I heard the sound of breaking glass, as if a small vial had slipped to the sidewalk and been shivered, while a pungent odor arose to my nostrils so suggestive of the poison known as prussic acid that I felt greatly alarmed, and hastily carrying her to my phaeton I put her in and drove as fast as I could toward home. But soon her increasing pallor and general condition convinced me that death was near, and I stopped at the drug store on the corner of Nineteenth street, and, leaving her in the phaeton, ran in and asked one of the clerks to assist me in bringing her into the store. He consented, and we went back to the phaeton, but only to find that I was too late. She had died in my absence."

"Horrible!" burst from the landlady's lips, and even the callous porter looked shocked and a trifle ashamed.

"Where she got the poison," continued the doctor, "remains to be found out. Perhaps she bought it after leaving the hotel; perhaps she had had it with her there as a medicine. If so, she may have taken an overdose without being conscious of her danger. I only know I was her physician and had never prescribed it for her, nor did I know she suffered from any ailment that required such a tonic."

"And is that all? Will you tell me nothing more?"

"You have a very good article," remarked the doctor, dryly. "Leave something for the future."

And the reporter had to be content, and the detectives, too.

The reporter gone, Dr. Molesworth turned again toward Mr. Gryce.

"And who are you?" he asked.

"I was going to say I didn't know," answered the seemingly trembling old man. "I am in pain and want to get home. Will one of you help me down the steps?"

"In pain!" repeated the doctor, who was not by any means a hard-hearted man.

"Yes, rheumatism in the stomach, I think. I came for some opium, but I won't wait any longer. They will worry about me at home. Besides, I feel a bit better now."

His manner was so natural, his look so in accordance with the character he had assumed, that Dr. Molesworth suspected nothing and kindly held out his arm. But he found the alleged detective had forestalled him.

"Let me do this business," he entreated, with a great show of good-nature and respect. "I have nothing else to do and am used to old men." And, nodding graciously to his superior, he led him carefully out, whispering as soon as the lintel of the door had hidden them from view, "What orders? Dou kou smell anything wrong here?"

"Watch," was the quiet but emphatic command. "Note everything, even to the lifting of an eyelid, but say nothing and do not seem to watch."

Then as they reached the front door, "Don't be hurt if I send some one else here. They know your character too well." And with this the elder man went out with a slow and hobbling step. The pain and distress of that evening had not been altogether assumed.

Some Points.

MR. GRYCE had only a look to go upon, but it was a look that spoke volumes. When a man shrinks from the eye of a detective, he has something to conceal, and when that something is connected with the death of a young girl by poison, it behooves an officer of the law to follow that man till he finds out what that something is.

It was therefore with some interest that he received in the early morning a summons from the gentleman who held the office of Coroner at this time, to come down to his office and have a talk with him concerning this case of Mildred Farley; nor was it long before he presented himself at the place designated. He found the Coroner alone and the following conversation ensued:

"Well, Gryce," said the latter, "I have just come from the house where you played the part of a sick patient so successfully last night. May I ask how you chanced to be so prompt on the scene of action? Do you scent out mysterious cases or had you any knowledge which led you to that especial spot just at the moment when your presence was possibly most required?"

"Both," was the good-natured reply. "Something which I call curiosity, but which I am fain now to consider instinct, made me an intruder in Dr. Molesworth's home last night. But I had a bit of knowledge to start with that roused his curiosity, and it is of this I want to speak, if you think the subject worthy of discussion or Dr. Molesworth anything but what he seems, a good, honest and reliable man."

"I think," returned the Coroner, slowly, "any subject of this kind worthy of discussion; and as for Dr. Molesworth, he stands high, but so do a great many others whose testimony we are called upon to question every day of our lives. You need not stop on his account if you have seen or discovered anything which contradicts his story."

"What is his story?"

"Didn't you hear it? I understood that he told all he had to tell in your presence."

"He told two stories."

"How two?"

"One with his lips, another with his face; that's what makes me doubt him."

"You do doubt him, then?"

Gryce's Story.

Mr. Gryce tapped the table before him with an abstracted air, murmured some unintelligible words and looked as if he thought he had replied.

"Come," cried the other, "your reasons? You usually have good ones."

"Yes," assented Mr. Gryce, "I usually have, but in this case it would be hard for me to tell you just what they are. I feel that there is something back of this affair which we do not see, but I am not ready as yet to go any further or even express any suspicions—say that I have any. The facts which I have been able to glean in the short space of time we have had are meager, but interesting. Perhaps you can add to them; if so, our conference may lead to something. This is what I know." And he related first what Dr. Molesworth had to say about the matter the evening before. When he had finished, he asked, "Does this story agree with what he told you this morning?"

"Exactly."

"Very good. So much for so much. Now for the side lights. I saw the girl myself yesterday afternoon."

"You?"

"Yes; I saw her, but I did not speak to her, nor did I recognize her for the person she was. Indeed, I took her for another woman whom she greatly resembled. It was at the C—— Hotel."

"Ah!"

"I need not enter into any further particulars about this circumstance, as it does not concern the affair before us, which stands quite apart by itself. Enough that for reasons of my own I played the spy on this young woman and saw her when she thought herself alone, in the privacy of her own apartment. This was some time after noon and the great fact which I wish to bring before you is this, that she was then to all appearance (and my eye is accustomed to read countenances) perfectly happy and had not in face or bearing the least trace of sickness."

"That is a point, certainly."

"Note it, and then add to it this, that being still under the error of which I have spoken, I went back to the hotel some three or four hours later, and wishing to confirm a former suspicion, sought my vantage spot again, and in conjunction with another witness whose testimony you will not need, looked in upon this Miss Farley again, when I perceived that a great change had passed over her. But it was not that of sickness. From happiness she had descended to misery, and in her pallor and wild, unrestrained attitudes I could detect the expression of despair, but none of bodily suffering or mental disorder.

"Now, what had occasioned this change in her in a space of time so short? I think I can answer that it was an interview with Dr. Molesworth. For, according to his own story and that of the hotel clerk, he was with her for a half hour or so in the afternoon; and though upon going out he told the hotel clerk he was coming back in the evening to marry her, something in his determination or in what had taken place at their interview had destroyed in her every vestige of hope and happiness. For it was anything but an expectant bride whom I saw after this visit, as it had been anything but an anxious woman whom I had seen before it.

"So! so!"

HARRY GLENN IS OUT TO CINCH 25-MILE TITLE

THE Atlanta Motordrome will be the scene of some interesting races to-night. The feature event will be a 25-mile race between the ten riders here at the present time, and the speed demons should furnish enough excitement in this race to last the fans for some time.

All the riders claim they have their machines working faster than ever, and it would not surprise many to see some dark horse win the long grind. Harry Glenn's great race last Tuesday has made him the talk of the town with motorcycle fans. Most of them want to see Harry win to-night and prove that his great riding Tuesday was not a fluke.

THE 25-mile race is for the championship of the South. To have an Atlanta boy capture this title would be a great honor to the city. Harry Glenn realizes this and it is a sure bet that Harry will be trying every minute of the time.

Richards, Graves, McNeil and Renel are also anxious to take the big event. Richards' machine was not going good Tuesday, but he says it is in great shape now. Graves is not saying much but Morty is out for some glory. McNeil and Renel can also be counted on to be in the race from start to finish.

* * *

THE Motordrome Purse will open the card. There will be three heats of one mile and a final of two miles. A special match race between Glenn and Lockner, best two in three heats, is also attracting much attention. The five-mile invitation race, open to all comers, fills out the program.

Following is the complete card for to-night:

First Event.
Motordrome Purse (qualifying heats, one mile; final, two miles; winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat to qualify). First Heat—Richards, Lockner, Graves.

Second Event.
Motordrome Purse—Second Heat—Glenn, Renel, Swartz.

Third Event.
Motordrome Purse—Third Heat—McNeil, Lewis, Luther, Shields.

Fifth Event.
Motordrome Purse—Final heat.

Sixth Event.
Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Lockner.

Seventh Event.
Invitation Race—Distance, 5 miles. Open to all comers.

YANKEE OWNER PUTS IN CLAIM FOR CUBAN STARS

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—President Frank Farrell, of the New York American League club, will appeal to the National Commission to set aside the sale of three Cuban players of the Long Branch team, of the New York and New Jersey League, to the Boston Nationals. The players are Pitcher Laqua, Shortstop Arragon and Outfielder Padran, according to Farrell. Owner Henriques, of the Long Branch team, recently offered to sell him these players. Farrell agreed to take them, and the price was fixed.

According to the verbal agreement, the three players were to report to Manager Chance yesterday. Instead of the players reporting, Henriques sold them to President Gaffney, of the Braves. Farell says he has several witnesses to the deal.

Kniseley on Southern Hurlers Explains Peculiarity of Hitters

PETE KNISELEY, outfielder for Birmingham, undertakes to explain the good showing some of the pitchers make in this circuit, only to fall down when they get into the big show; also why Southern leaguers hit well in the majors. Says Pete:

"In the majors, the pitchers do not exert themselves until real danger faces them. When the game is progressing without heavy hitting, the pitchers serve the ball over and give you a chance to swat it, hoping that it will go into one of the fielders' hands. But not here.

"From the beginning of the game until the finish, the Southern League pitchers work at top speed. As the result, the batter has a poorer opportunity to make a high mark. But I attribute the many ascensions in the Southern to this fact. Unless a man is of wonderful physique, he is unable to twirl nine innings, putting his greatest effort on every toss. There are a few who are able to stand the pace. Elmer Brown is a twirler of this class, while Bill Prough is another.

"But the average pitcher is able to stand the gaff for six or seven innings. Then when he weakens the batters feast on the offerings and frequently drive him from the mound. But, of course, there are clever pitchers in the Southern. Hardgrove and Foxen do not pitch hard until there is danger and are very successful.

"I believe that a .300 batsman in the Southern can duplicate the feat in the majors."

KNISELEY speaks truly both in respect to the pitching and batting. It has long been noted as a peculiar fact that recruits from the Southern League and the Pacific Coast League seldom have batted less in the majors than in the minors. Under ordinary circumstances, it would be fair to discount the average recruit's minor league batting by 10 to 20 points when he gets to the real class, but Daubert and Wheat both have batted better in fast company than they did in the bushes; Charles Stengel has become one of the heaviest clouters in the National and Red Smith is holding his own.

All of them are from the Southern, and probably Kniseley has the right answer. The explanation of the ability of Coast leaguers to hit in the majors up to their Coast standards has been that the heavy winds in some cities and the dampness in others on the Coast keep the batting down to a minimum, and a man who can hit in that country can hit anywhere.

THE tendency of young pitchers from the South to throw their whole strength into every ball delivered has also been noted by many observers. Brooklyn has an illustration of that very mistake in Frank Allen, who persists in working with all his might in every inning, with the result that when he is in a tight place he has comparatively little reserve strength with which to extricate himself.

An even more pronounced case of the same sort was furnished by Bill Burns, who is a native of Texas, but got his start on the Coast. Bill was one of the most powerful men that ever broke into baseball, but he did not know how to conserve his energy. He was at different periods with Washington, Detroit and Cincinnati, and with all his record was the same. He had the habit of blowing up at the end of the seventh or eighth inning, and, if the game ever went more than nine innings, it was a dead sure bet that Bill had nothing but his glove and spikes left for the tenth.

Nap Rucker used to fall for the same foolish policy in his callow days, but Nap has become old and wise and uses no more exertion now than is necessary, although he admits it took years for the light to break on him.

M'GRAW HINTS THAT GOLF COST MATHEWSON BEATING

PITTSBURG, PA., Aug. 8.—One of Giants was asked just before the New York team left Pittsburg for Cincinnati why McGraw did not take Mathewson out of the box in the fifth inning Wednesday, when seven runs were batted off his delivery.

"I think Mac wanted to impress something on Christy," said the Giant. "McGraw has been arguing all along against his pitchers playing golf. He does not object to the sport for infielders or outfielders, but he claims it does the pitchers no good, and he has tried to make Matty cut it out. McGraw claims that handling a golf stick tires the muscles in a pitcher's hands and wrists."

JACK JOHNSON BARRED FROM BOXING IN PARIS

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—Jack Johnson will not be permitted to box in this country. The "American Boxing Federation" has requested the French Federation of prohibit Johnson, the American negro pugilist, from fighting in France and that body has decided to grant the request.

FIGHT MANAGER IMPROVING.

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 8.—Larney Lichtenstein, local manager of fighters, who on Monday underwent an operation at the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, where he had two ribs taken out, is recovering so rapidly that he intends making the trip to Winnipeg on August 14 to be with Steve Ketchel for his fight there. Doc Briggs performed the operation, and it was very successful.

THOMPSON OR LOVE TO PITCH SECOND GAME

By Joe Agler.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 8.—Manager Smith hasn't decided whether Thompson or Love will pitch against the Vols to-day, but it will be one of them. Slim is eager for another crack at the enemy, and is sure he can lick them without trobue. Chapman will catch.

We lost another tough one yesterday, and it looks as if the jinx was closing in on us again. With the score tied up in the tenth inning, Dent was taken out to allow Price, a lefthander, to pitch to Callahan and Spratt, both batting on that side, with Williams on second and one out.

The move looked like the proper noe, bue Callahan spolled everything with a long drive that scored Williams and knock us out of a hard-fought game. Dent pitched his usual fine game, and Harry Holland's hit drove in our only tally.

Yesterday was "Business Men's Day," and there was a big parade of automobiles, and the players of both teams and a band. About 4,000 were at the park, where some field day events were put on before the game. Tommy Long beat Dave Callahan in the 100-yard dash, doing it in 11 seconds, which is some fast time without sprinting togs on. Harry Chapman won the throwing contest from Smith, of Atlanta, and Young and Beck, of Nashville.

JOCKEY CLAIMS HE WAS OFFERED $1,000 TO 'PULL'

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Jockey Wilson threw a commotion into sporting circles here to-day by declaring that he had been approached with an offer of a bribe to throw a race recently at the Belmont track meeting.

The stewards refused to comment upon it, as the matter will be sifted by the officials. The story involves another jockey, a friend of Wilson, who acted as an intermediary, and a well-known Bowery politician.

Wilson's specific statement was to the effect that a man named Reed, who has been warned off the track a number of times, approached him at the Belmont track and offered him $1,000 to pull Working Lad in a race on June 24. The stewards, it is said, have exonerated Wilson. No action has as yet been taken against the Bowery politician, but it is known that if he can not clear himself he will be asked to absent himself in future from all meetings given under the association's auspices.

COLE QUITS COLUMBUS TEAM; MAY JOIN FEDERALS

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. 8.—Because Manager Hinchman fined and chased him off the field here, after Umpire Cahill had lifted him from the game, "King" Cole to-day asserted that he was done with pitching for the Columbus team. He says he's going to a nunnamed Federal League club.

TOMMY DIXON FALLS FROM RING IN SEVENTH ROUND

JOPLIN, MO., Aug. 8.—An injury received by Tommy Dixon, of Kansas City, during a fight here last night with Freddie Cole, of Indianapolis, caused the contest, scheduled for fifteen rounds, to terminate in the seventh round. Dixon fell through the ropes to the floor, injuring his arm.

RED SOX RECALL PLAYERS.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The Boston Red Sox to-day exercised their right of option on three players in the American Association. Infielder Krug, of the Indianapolis team, and Infielder Scott and Pitcher Brant, of St. Paul, recently sold with the right of repurchase, were recalled.

DENT PASSES 3 BATTERS IN 53 INNINGS

WHEN Elliott Dent walked Jack Spratt in the first inning of yesterday's game in Nashville, the Atlanta pitcher interrupted slightly the progress of a very fine bit of record-making in this league.

It was his third base on balls in fifty-three innings.

Before the game started yesterday, Dent's record, beginning July 18, was two bases on balls in forty-four innings. This included a "long run" of thirty-three innings, or practically three full games, without a walk being issued.

The big right-hander is going at top speed just now, and his control is well-nigh perfect. He doesn't get himself in the hole very often, either, and it is a rare thing for the batsman to be able to take a tight grip on terra firma and wait confidently for the next one to come over. Only the toughest kind of luck and very feeble hitting support cost the big boy another win yesterday.

RED SOX RECALL FOUR; BUY CATCHER M'NALLY

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The Boston Red Sox to-day exercised their right of option on three players in the American Association. Infielder Krug, of the Indianapolis team, and Infielder Scott and Pitcher Brantt, of St. Paul, recently sold with the right of repurchase, were recalled.

Michael J. McNally, shortstop for the Utica team, New York State League, also was bought by the Red Sox.

LANGFORD AND JEANNETTE TO CLASH IN LONG BOUT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8.—Promoter McCarey last night received messages from Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette accepting his terms for a twenty-round bout. In all probability the date set for the heavyweight event will be October 7.

"I would like to see the question of supremacy between Langford and Jeannette settled," explained the promoter. "That's my reason for making the match. In a scheduled twenty-round go in my ring with Eyton refereeing, the two blacks will have to extend themselves. I will never stage a mixed match between a black and a white boxer. So long as the colored men battle among themselves I will put no handicap in their way."

All doubt as to Wolgast's willingness to box on the September date was removed yesterday when the former lightweight champion telegraphed as follows:

"Will positively meet the winner of the Dundee-White fight of August 12. Hope it will be Dundee, as I want to show the public the difference between a real fighter and a jumping jack."

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

HOW SWEET.

How sweet to be a manager and run a baseball team—
At least when you are winning games it is a blissful dream.
But when the team is losing, is his job a thing of joy?
Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi, Oi yoi!

Whether Ed Reulbach or Eddie Stack is the better athlete is yet to be determined, but it is a well-known fact that the Cubs never again will own Reulbach's equal as a badger fighter.

We are in receipt of a song written by that far-famed pugilist, Packey McFarland. The song is entitled, "I'd Like to Know." So would a whole lot of promoters, pugilists, managers and other insects.

Not that we are an expert on songology, but after reading Mr. McFarland's ballad we are convinced that he is a lightweight.

If Joe Jackson were to do all his batting at Shibe Park he would be chased to the minors or (worse yet) to St. Louis.

It is said that the said Joe Jackson has hit over .400 at the White Sox Park this season. Joe never would be mistaken for a White Sock—not even by a blind man.

There is charity even in baseball. For instance, Tom Lynch has handed a protested game to Joe Tinker.

Horace Rogel avers that he wants to put a baseball team in New York. This leads one to suspect that Horace has not heard of the adventures of Frank Chance.

Washington fans having presented Walter Johnson with a loving cup filled with money, it is said that Columbus fans will hand King Cole a shaving mug filled with lather.

It is said that fighters can't come back, but every day we note otherwise. For instance, there is Jack Helmen, the heavyweight. As he was leaving the place some philanthropist said: "Wait a minute, Jack! We're going to buy another." He came back.

ONLY THREE LEFT OF CUBS' OLD GUARD

By O. B. Keeler.

A COUPLE of days ago the papers carried a bit of baseball news to the effect that Edward Reulbach had been traded by the Cubs for Eddie Stack, of Brooklyn.

Of itself, that wasn't a very exciting bit of information. Neither Mr. Stack nor Mr. Reulbach has been exceeding any speed limits this year—even in Philadelphia.

But aside from that—

Say, did you notice a queer little nip of regret when you read that small item?

* * *

IT just marked the passing of one more of the few remaining original Cubs; the wonderful clan gathered by Frank Selee and molded by Frank Chance into what many will always beleive to have been the greatest baseball machine of all time. And those who sing the praises of the Athletics and the rest have at last to admit that Connie Mack and the others have yet to win 116 games in a season.

* * *

BUT that's by the way.

You remember the Original Cubs, don't you? Let's see—can we recall the line-up of the smashing years of 1906-7-8?

Well, back of the wood was Johnny Kling, aided and abetted by Pat Moran—what little aiding and abetting Johnny needed in those halcyon days.

The slab staff? We'll match that, now, against any in history. Brown, Reulbach, Overall and Pfiester for the regulars, with Chick Frazer and Carl Lundgren in reserve. Frazer was a celebrated chicken fancier, you remember, and Carl could pitch better with the thermometer at 32 than most pitchers could on July 4.

The Infield—Chance and Evers and Tinker and Steinfeldt; and the rip and swing of the old Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance that made the pace for all their day.

The Outfield—Schulte and Slagle and Sheckard; the celebrated S. S. S. combination, with the Rabbit to top the batting list and Artie Hofman to fill in on occasion.

* * *

WELL, well—we'll take stock of the remains.

Schulte and Evers, and Orvie Overall, who is plugging along on the come-back trail after a couple of years' defection.

Reulbach made the fourth of the Old Guard, until the other day. Big Ed hadn't done much the last few years. But don't forget that three times Big Ed topped the whole list of slabmen in the National League, and that when Brown and Mathewson were in their prime.

Four fighting Grizzlies,
Sturdy as can be—
Big Ed was traded,
Then there were three.

Who'll be the next of the Old Guard to pass on?

* * *

WITH brief reference to the latest chapter in that sad serial, "Losing 'Em by One Run," it appears from a somewhat scrambled telegraphic account that Bill Smith and Gilbert Price came together in a bean-on collision after yesterday's game in Nashville.

Price appears to have been the one to bounce back. In fact, the report has it that Smith ordered him out of his uniform indefinitely.

The row was about the curve ball Price dealt to Callahan in the tenth inning, on which Dave Callahan doubled for the winning run.

At this distance, far be it from us to make wise criticisms of either Price or his manager.

Except this much.

If Price crossed up the manager on explicit instructions, he deserves all he got.

On the other hand, if Smith took out on his pitcher the soreness incident to losing a hard-fought battle—Price having been sent in cold and doing his best—it looks as if the manager was overly severe.

CHANCE TURNS ACTOR WITH MOVING PICTURE CONCERN

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Frank Chance, manager of the Highlanders, is now an actor. He has been engaged by a moving picture company to take the leading part in a scenario entitled "The Peerless Leader," some of the scenes of which will be laid at the Polo Grounds, New York. Chance has been rehearsing the role in a Jersey City studio since Monday. Catcher Sweeney, Outfielder Daniels and Hartzell will also appear in the film

Frank Whitney Due Here To-day

Charley White Arrives Saturday

By Left Hook.

FRANK WHITNEY, the fighting carpenter from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is due here at 11 o'clock this morning for his coming 10-round bout with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night.

A wire from Nate Lewis, manager of Charley White, informs us that the Chicago boy will be here to-morrow morning. With both fighters on the battle ground local fans will have a chance to see the coming rivals in their training grind.

Whitney will pitch his tent at once in the Atlanta Athletic Club, where he intends to do the rest of his preliminary work for what he considers to be the most important fight of his career. Frank will do most of his boxing with Jimmy Perry, and the welterweight should be a valuable aid to him. The Cedar Rapids boy will also get a couple of lighter boys to box with.

* * *

WHAT Whitney is after is speed. Frank learned while in Chicago that his coming opponent is about the best piece of fighting machinery in the world. He also realizes that a victory over Charley will put him among the leaders of the 133-pounders. Chances of this kind don't come to boxers every day. The promoters of the Atlanta Athletic Association have given Whitney the opportunity he has been pinning for during the past year.

* * *

ON the other hand, Charley White is now the most watched boxer in the world to-day. Tom McCarey has his eyes on him. Tom is seriously thinking of putting White on with the winner of the Cross-Rivers set-to on Labor Day, and a victory over Whitney will be another feather in the Chicago boy's cap. Jim Coffroth wants White to box Tommy Murphy in his arena, but is awaiting the outcome of Charley's scrap with Whitney. The Western promoters have been after White for the past year, but Nate Lewis wants his protege to pick up a few pounds in weight before sending him after the bigger boys.

CHARLEY is still young and has a bright future. White has 22 years old March 25 and has been boxing five years. During that period never has a boxer succeeded in stopping him, or better than that, no boxer has ever even floored him.

When it is taken into consideration that White has met the toughest lightweights in the world, this record is surely a remarkable one.

* * *

WHITNEY is a fighter of the opposite type to Charley. Frank loves to bore in and fight at close quarters. Once inside a man's guard he works his hands like a pair of piston rods, hoping to bring his man to the canvas.

It is also a fact that Whitney is a much improved boxer over the boy who was seen here about a year ago. Since leaving here Frank had about ten battles and managed to win them all.

* * *

THE Cedar Rapids boy is also aware of the fact that he is getting along in years and knows that if he intends to get any place in the boxing world now is the time. Next Wednesday Whitney will get his chance. If he loses, fans can rest assured that he will give them the very best he has. Whitney has yet to disappoint a fight gathering. This afternoon Whitney will be at the Atlanta Athletic Club working out for the match.

Charley will arrive here to-morrow morning and arrangements have already been made to have him do his training in the Ponce De Leon ball park.

* * *

THE other two bouts to be staged Wednesday have been completed. Charley Lee and Kid Young signed for their return engagement yesterday and these boys are expected to put up a corking mill.

The semi-wind-up will be between Mike Saul and Eddie Hanlon. The boys have agreed to weigh 138 pounds at 6 o'clock, and at this weight Mike should have a great chance of winning. Both bouts are scheduled to go 10 rounds, making 30 rounds of boxing for the evening's entertainment.

Tickets for the boxing show were placed on sale yesterday. Prices, $1, $1.50 and $2.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Gunboat Smith, of California, and Fireman Jim Flynn, of Pueblo, Colo., will clash in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden, New York, to-night. Betting fans have made Smith a 6 to 5 favorite, but admirers of Flynn think that the fireman's bulldog courage will carry him through to victory.

* * *

Frank Whitney is expected to arrive to-day for his 10-round engagement with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory on Wednesday, August 13. White will be here some time to-morrow.

* * *

Eddie Hanlon started hard work yesterday for his coming 10-round set-to with Mike Saul next Wednesday. Hanlon wants to be in the best of shape as he realizes that a victory over Mike will put him in line for some big matches. They have posted a $50 forfeit to weigh 138 pounds at 6 o'clock.

* * *

Mike Kelly, Indianapolis featherweight, is in Atlanta at the present time in search of matches with some of our 122-pounders. Kelly says he is willing to meet some of the lesser lights first in order to prove to local fans that he is made of the right stuff.

* * *

Coast fans are showing much interest in the coming Jack White-Johnny Kilbane bout scheduled to take place in Tom McCarey's arena on August 12. [illegible] for twenty rounds about a month ago. Ad Wolgast has agreed to meet the winner some time in September.

* * *

Billy Nolan, former manager of Willie Ritchie, says that the champion will never meet Ad Wolgast. Nolan says that Willie fears Ad and does not want any more of his game.

* * *

Over in Paris they are certainly picking the lemons for Georges Carpentier. Yesterday they pitted the Frenchman against a boxer named Williams and Carpentier stopped him in four rounds. Who next?

* * *

Leach Cross and Rivers have agreed to weigh 135 pounds ringside for their 20-round affair at Los Angeles on Labor Day. Each boxer is to receive 20 per cent of the gross receipts. The winner will probably be sent against Willie Ritchie.

* * *

Jack (Twin) Sullivan, of Boston, has signed articles to box Soldier Kearns, the Brooklyn heavyweight, in a 10-round go at the Queensberry A. C., Philadelphia, on the night of August 22.

* * *

Kid Young is getting into great shape for his coming battle with Charlie Lee. The "fighting newsboy" is going [illegible] boxing with Mike Saul and they certainly [illegible]

GILBERT PRICE SUSPENDED AFTER GAME

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 8.—It is understood here that Manager Billy Smith of the Crackers and Gilbert Price, his star left-hand hurler, had a warm argument after yesterday's game, regarding the curve ball which Price pitched to Callahan in the tenth inning. Dave pasted the pill for a couple of bases and the winning run. Price had been sent in by Smith to take Dent's place in front of Callahan, who is a left-hand hitter, and Spratt, also batting from that side.

It is not plain just what the contention was, but it seems the manager old Price a the end of it that he was under suspension. Price went to the slab without much time to warm up, and that was the reason generally ascribed o his lack of effectiveness, but Smith seemed to take another view of it.

Smith had a short confrence with Manager Schwartz concerning Jud Daley, but the boss of the Vols was not in the mood to shake up his team, and the result of the first game probably cemented that position.

JACK BARRY FIRST OF MACKMEN TO BE HURT

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—The first serious accident of the season to Connie Mack's famous infield has resulted in Shortstop Jack Barry being put on the hospital list with a bad shoulder, caused by his bumping into Catcher O'Neil at the plate in Wednesday's game. Barry probably will be unable to play for a week.

Sports and Such

NOT TRUE.

ONE day I wrote a story—a real pippin, on the square—
And clubs were formed to root for me; they boosted me for fair.
They bought up all the papers and wrote letters to my Boss;
They told him how they loved me and how much they'd feel my loss.
I had a fair young "sal'ry"—it was doubled twice and thrice;
They presented me with autos and tons of shirt-front ice;
I had eleven loving cups, a house and lot—a prize—
And I was chased with offers from a lot of vaudeville guys.
Then Senator O'Gorman, with another tony gent,
Insisted I should call at once upon the President.
I just was mitting Woodrow, when I heard the bell-hop's call!
I'd dreamed, instead of batting dope, that I could bat a ball.

Timid Kid Asked Griff for a Job

Engel Promises to Become a Star

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—During the early spring days of 1912 a young ball tosser applied for admittance to the ball park in Washington, where Clark Griffith, Walter Johnson, Herman Schaefer and other Natlonals were romping about. He was too bashful to speak to anybody, just watched the athletes perform.

The next morning the same kid was on hand. He had read about the great Johnson, Walsh, Coombs, Bender, Wood and other pitchers. He was a pitcher, too. Rather, on the lots in Washington he curved 'em for the semi-pro teams, and as he usually won, he thought he'd like to become acquainted with the big leaguers.

The kid chatted with members of the Nationals, asked who was manager, and if he could talk to him. "Griffith is manager; he's standing over there," informed one athlete to the youngster. The kid walked over to Griffith.

"I'm a pitcher. I'd like to toss a few to your hitters," was his opening sentence to Griffith.

"Where do you hail from?" flashed back the Fox.

"Right here! Pitch on Saturdays and haven't lost a game for a year," returned the youngster.

"Go to the dressing room, put on a suit and let me take a look at you," answered Griffith.

* * *

THE youth appeared, went to the hill and pitched during the batting practice.

The players gave Griff the merry ha-ha. They wanted to know where the boss plucked the novice. When the ball came near the plate usually the sluggers lifted it over the heads of the outfielders.

All the time, though, Griff was watching his new entrant. He saw that he had a lot of speed and a fast breaking curve. But the kid was awkward and didn't have the proper delivery.

As the youngster improved with each day and began to show dazzing speed, he was introduced to his idol, Walter Johnson. Always chummy with aspiring kids, Johnson took an interest in the new acquisition. He showed him how to throw the fast one, the movement with the shoulder, how to curve the one down around the knees and the fast break high on the inside.

After a few lessons Griff and the players were surprised. In a few weeks the batters began popping the fast ones and hitting easy grounders on the curves.

* * *

WHEN it came time to make the first trip Griffith asked his strange tosser how he'd like to make a trip with the team.

"Do you think I can pitch?" was his answer.

"I don't know; I'll try you out," returned the boss.

The Nationals made several trips, and when a game was practically lost the kid got a chance to show himself. Sometimes he got away all right, sometimes he didn't.

The 1912 season was over. The kid had a bunch of experience. This past spring he was a regular member of the team, was along on the practice tour and watched every movement made by his favorite, Johnson.

Finally the kid got a chance to show himself at the start. He won, allowing only a few hits and a run or two. Then it was that Griffith realized he had a wonderful pitcher.

Recently Joe Engel beat the St. Louis Browns 2 to 1 with three scattered hits, and, according to press accounts of the game, showed almost as much stuff as Walter Johnson. Joe Engel was the timid kid who introduced himself to Griffith in the spring of 1912.

MAJOR CALLAWAY OFF TO SEE CLARK GRIFFITH NOW

Major Frank Callaway, president of the Atlanta ball club, is a lively little traveler these days.

Yesterday Major Callaway, who had just returned from Chattanooga, set out for Washington to confer with Clark Griffith concerning the terms of the agreement now existing between the Senators and the Crackers.

It is not understood that there is any disputed point to be settled, or that anything is to be done with reference to Clark and Long, but that with the claiming date close at hand Major Callaway wished to be in perfect accord with the Old Fox as to all the provisions of the treaty, so that the Atlanta club could deal intelligently with all its players.

ANOTHER PHENOM MAY GO UP TO MAJOR LEAGUES

CALGARY, ALBERTA, Aug. .—Jack Roche, Calgary catcher, seems sure to go to one of the big league teams. The White Sox, Cubs, Cardinals and Yankees are all bidding for the youngster. He is batting .354 and fielding .988. Comiskey made the first bid, but no price was set. Murphy has since requested the price, but has been asked to make an offer. Indianapolis, Louisville, Mobile and Los Angeles also are after him. The sale is likely to be made to-day.

DEFENSE OF FRANK BEGINS

Experts Called to Attack Dr. Harris' Testimony

HUERTA TO DEPORT ENVOY LIND

Mexican President Declares U. S. Representative Must Bear Recognition of New Regime.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 7.—John Lind, now on his way to Mexico City as special representative of the United States, will not be received by President Huerta unless he presents credentials from the President of the United States, accompanied by recognition of the present government of Mexico.

Official announcement of this was made to-day by President Huerta. The statement was delivered to Charge O'Shaughnessy at the American Embassy by Manuel Garza Aldape, Acting Minister of Foreign Affairs of Mexico. It was also sent to Washington and to the powers of Europe.

Lind, Huerta's announcement said, will be expelled from the country as an undesirable alien unless he goes before the Mexican government and explains his official character and intentions or else brings official recognition of the Huerta administration from the Wilson Administration in Washington.

This is the boldest and most belligerent course yet taken by Huerta, and if the Mexican President carries out his threat Mexico will have accomplished what, in the eyes of international usuage, usually constitutes a casus belli.

In accord with the new aggressive policy of the Mexican government a delegation will wait upon Mr. Lind upon his arrival in this city, probably Saturday, and the attitude of the Mexican government toward the United States will be outlined then in unmistakable terms. The United States battleship carrying Mr. Lind is expected at Vera Cruz to-morrow night.

Must Bear Credentials.

The following official statement was issued to the press to-day by Senor Aldape:

The Mexican Department of Foreign Affairs has sent a note to Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affairs of the United States, stating by order of the President that, if Mr. John Lind, who, the Mexican government is informed, is to come to Mexico intrusted with a mission from President Wilson, does not establish in due manner his official character before the Mexican chancellery, or if he is not the bearer of recognition of the Mexican government by that of the United States, his sojourn in this Republic will not be grateful nor satisfactory to this government.

This was the first time that Huerta formally recognized Mr. Lind as an Ambassador from the United States President.

To some extent the action of Huerta has the approval of some of the Americans here because it establishes plainly the position of the Mexican Government. Otherwise the suspense attending the coming of Mr. Lind and the consequences which may follow would only be prolonged.

In addition to coming as a special

ANNISTON, ALA., Aug. 7.—W. H. Cooper, Probate Judge of Calhoun County, died in a Birmingham hospital Thursday morning, following an operation for cancer of the stomach. The body will be brought back here for burial.

Judge Cooper's ancestors came over in the Phoenix with Oglethorpe and the family has long been active in affairs in Alabama and Georgia. Both Judge Cooper and his father were members of the Alabama Legislature.

Governor O'Neal will appoint Judge Cooper's successor. He was elected last year over J. J. Arnold, who was appointed while a member of the Legislature by the Governor to succeed E. F. Crook, who resigned on account of illness.

Striker Arrested on Charge of Assault

MOBILE, Aug. 7.—Joseph Mahler, a union machinist, was arrested here to-day by City Detective J. W. Murphy on a warrant charging him with assaulting William Agnew, a strikebreaker, last night after he left the Home Industry Foundry.

William Kling, operator of the foundry where Agnew was employed, denounced the swearing out of the warrant for disorderly conduct as a farce, as it was purely a case of assault. The police to-day are guarding all the iron plants in anticipation of trouble.

Indictment Found in Postal Fraud Case

GADSDEN, Aug. 7.—The Federal Grand Jury to-day returned a true bill against E. C. Drew, the Fort Payne oil promoter, for using the mail to defraud. There are 47 counts.

Whether Drew will be tried at this term of court is to be determined at the completion of the session to-day.

The indictment was returned in a partial report of the Grand Jury, that body not yet having completed its work. A mistrial resulted in the case of Oscar Ponder, charged with violating the white slave act.

Alderman Accused Of Wasting Funds

COLUMBUS, Aug. 7.—A mild sensation was created in the semi-monthly meeting of Girard Council, when Mayor Marchant announced he had excused Alderman Tillman from further service on the Street Committee, because he had undertaken a job that would cost the city $1,000 more than necessary, because he had not taken the precaution to get competitive prices.

The charge of Mayor Marchant brought forth a tart reply from Alderman Tillman.

Light Money Causes Reduction of Fines

EUFAULA, Aug. 7.—The tight money market is providing a boon to offenders in the city police court. In eight cases this morning Mayor Mercey cut the fines as previously assessed practically in half.

"Money is too scarce just now to place fines at the same figures as during the winter," said the Mayor as he cut them down as low as $2.70.

SCHOOL CHANGES URGED.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 7.—Advocating increased school facilities on Rose Hill and in the northern part of the city in general, and suggesting the present High School building be turned into a grade school and an academic high school established on the grounds of the Columbus Industrial High School, the report of the president of the Board of Trustees of the Columbus Public Schools has been sent to Council.

BILL TO AID TEACHERS KILLED

House Defeats Measure Providing Election on Special Levy to Pay Tutors.

Deaf to the appeals of the country schoolteachers of the State, who have not been paid one cent for more than six months, the Georgia House of Representatives on Thursday morning overwhelmingly defeated a constitutional amendment submitting to the voters of the State a proposition for a special tax levy of 1 mill in 1915 and 1-2 mill in 1916.

The revenue derived from both levies was to be added to the common school fund, and would, advocates of the bill claim, have relieved conditions that exist at present under which the State has permitted its schoolteachers to go unpaid.

The vote was: Ayes, 70; nays, 99. It lacked 53 votes of receiving the requisite two-thirds majority.

Called Slap at Slaton.

Besides being a denial of the request of the schoolteachers that they be paid what is due them, the action of the House in defeating the constitutional amendment is construed as a direct slap at Governor Slaton, inasmuch as the additional tax levy is advocated in his platform, and he has made a special request that the bill be passed, allowing the people to decide whether the teachers shall be paid.

The House by its action put itself on record as being opposed to any measure that will provide for the payment of the teachers.

The defeat of the Governor's constitutional amendment Thursday was accomplished by the same combine that defeated his two bills Wednesday afternoon and which has declared it will fight to the bitter end all efforts to pass measures favored by Speaker Burwell and the Governor.

Hardeman Leads Foes.

The fight against the bill was led by Hardeman, of Jefferson, who declared he was opposed to it because it raised the limit of taxation. Among those who spoke in favor of the bill were Fullbright, of Burke County; Gower, of Crisp; Wall, of Elbert; McMichael, of Marion; Wimberly, of Bibb, and Wheatley, of Sumter.

Prior to the defeat of his constitutional amendment bill Governor Slaton secured the enactment of the first of his measures that the Legislature has seen fit to pass. It was the inheritance tax bill, providing for taxation of legacies ranging from 1 per cent on $5,000 to 6 per cent on $1,000,000. The vote was 135 to 13. An amendment proposd by Greene, of Houston, that all inheritances of whatever amount be taxed was lost.

The House also passed a resolution authorizing the Governor to borrow any amount up to $500,000 necessary to supply the deficit in the State's revenues. The vote was 113 to 0.

TRIPPE AND GIRL GO TO STOCKADE

Salesman Placed on Probation and Typist Are Arrested Together in Macon.

A. M. Trippe, No. 74 Doane street, a salesman, and Miss Beatrice Renfroe, a young typist, both of whom figured in the police spotlight a few weeks ago, Thursday morning were each sentenced by Recorder Pro Tem. Preston to serve fifty days in the city stockade.

Mrs. Trippe, who is the mother of three small children, was in court, but made no statement.

Trippe and the young typist were brought back to Atlanta from Macon early Thursday by Assistant Probation Officer R. L. Hollingsworth.

When they were arraigned the first time, Trippe promised to forget his affinity and support his wife and children, and was placed on probation. Miss Renfroe was sent to the Martha Home. Two or three nights later, she made her escape and went to Macon. Trippe joined her there a week ago.

MACON, Aug. 7.—A. M. Trippe, an Atlanta traveling man, and Miss Beatrice Renfroe, a stenographer, who have been living together here, were taken to Atlanta this morning by Assistant Probation Officer Hollingsworth.

They were arrested yesterday upon the request of Chief Beavers, of Atlanta.

Jockey Aubuchon demanded $25,000.

He charged that Frady began stealing his wife's affections two years ago

DALTON DISAPPOINTS COURT CROWD; ROSSER CALLS DR. L. W. CHILDS

Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold began an assault Thursday noon upon the structure of evidence erected by the State against Leo M. Frank, accused of the murder of Mary Phagan.

It was the first opportunity the defense had been given to employ offensive tactics in the grim battle for Frank's life.

The testimony of Dr. H. F. Harris, who had just left the stand, was made the object of the first battering attack of Frank's determined lawyers.

As Dr. Harris left the stand at 12 o'clock Solicitor Dorsey announced that the State rested.

Dr. L. W. Childs, a physician and surgeon, immediately was called by the defense.

His first testimony of importance, if it was believed by the jury, served utterly to demolish the most sensational declaration of Dr. Harris, who startled his hearers last Friday by announcing with every appearance of certainty that Mary Phagan came to her death probably within 30 minutes of the time she ate her dinner April 26, positively within 45 minutes. Dr. Harris stated that he knew, because the cabbage he found in the girl's stomach hardly had been affected by the digestive juices.

Cabbage No Key to Time of Death.

Attorney Arnold showed Dr. Childs the specimen of cabbage from the Phagan girl's stomach.

The medical expert examined it and said:

"I have seen cabbage less changed by the digestive juices than that which had been in a person's stomach for 12 hours."

Dr. Childs continued his rebuttal of the testimony of Dr. Harris by saying that it was impossible to tell within hours how long any of the carbohydrates, of which cabbage is one, have been in the human stomach.

The digestive processes on carbo-hydrates, he declared, are practically nil while this class of foods is in the stomach. Cabbage, for example, may remain in the stomach for hours with little change from the digestive juices. The digestion, for the most part, occurs after the cabbage has passed into the small intestines, the physician said.

Dr. Harris' estimate, he declared, was only a guess.

He characterized in the same manner Dr. Harris' declaration that the blow Mary Phagan received on the back of the head caused unconsciousness.

Arnold's Hypothetical Question.

Arnold propounded to his witness a hypothetical question based on the circumstances under which Mary Phagan's body was exhumed and examined nine days after burial.

"If, under these circumstances," said Arnold, "there was found a wound on the back of her head which one physician said was 1½ inches long and another said was 2¼ inches, and there was found no fracture of the skull or injury to the brain, and only a drop of blood which exerted no pressure on the brain, would any physician be justified in saying that the person receiving the blow was rendered unconscious?"

"He would have had to guess one way or the other," said Dr. Childs. "There was absolutely no way to tell whether the blow caused unconsciousness."

Arnold also brought out the startling testimony that a wound made from one to three hours after death has the same appearance as a wound shortly before death.

This statement was in direct contradiction of Dr. Harris' testimony and will be used by the defense in strengthening its theory of the manner in which the factory girl came to her death.

After he had reviewed some of the important bits of Dr. Harris' testimony and had put into the record Dr. Childs' testimony in rebuttal, Arnold asked the witness if he, in all his medical experience, had ever known of a physician of repute giving his opinion as to the unconsciousness of a person with no more data than had been in the possession of Dr. Harris.

Dr. Childs replied that he never had.

The mysterious C. B. Dalton, who was expected to make sensational revelations of incidents in which Leo Frank was alleged to have participated in the National Pencil Factory, proved a very tame and commonplace witness when he was called Thursday.

The most that Dalton could say was that, on several of his visits to the factory, he had seen women in Frank's office. He told of no compromising situations. He was not even able to identify the women. He did not know whether or not they were members of Frank's own family. All that he knew was that they did not appear to be stenographers as he never saw them writing.

Dalton, when he was questioned by Luther Rosser, was not even sure of his own birthplace. He thought it was somewhere in Laurens County. He explained his presence by saying that he had gone to the factory with a Miss Daisy Hopkins. He said that he saw Frank in the office with two or three women, and that cool drinks generally were in evidence. On one occasion he said Frank and his visitors were drinking beer.

Detective Rosser on Stand.

Detective Bass Rosser was on the witness stand for a few minutes and was questioned briefly. He testified that when he saw Mrs. Arthur White the Monday after the crime she failed to tell him that she had seen a negro in the factory the Saturday the girl was killed. He said he did not get possession of this information until May 6 or 7. It is the contention of the State that the defense suppressed these facts.

At the conclusion of Detective Rosser's testimony, Solicitor Dorsey announced that he was prepared to rest as soon as Dr. H. F. Harris had completed the testimony which was interrupted by adjournment Wednesday afternoon. Dr. Harris was unable to appear when court opened at 9 o'clock. The prosecution had nothing more to present at 9:45 and a recess was taken until Dr. Harris arrived at 11:10.

Reuben Arnold began at once on a cross-examination of Dr. Harris as soon as the physician took the stand. He forced Dr. Harris to say that there is much uncertainty in drawing conclusions about digestive functions and their time limitations.

Solicitor Dorsey also asked for the submission of the National Pencil Company's cash book and bank book before he rested his case. This was agreed to by Frank's lawyers.

One of the most interesting pieces of evidence for the purpose of demonstration in the possession of the defense is a large-sized model of the National Pencil Company constructed on an accurate scale.

Frank chatted with his wife and mother in the intermission while the court was awaiting Dr. Harris, and a little later engaged in conversation with his attorneys. Dr. Childs entered the courtroom and talked several minutes with the defendant.

Mr. Arnold said:

"Further than this witness I don't know what line we will pursue at present."

"Did you ever work for the National Pencil Company?" was the first question the Solicitor asked Dalton.

Mr. Arnold interrupted.

"Your honor," he said, "we want it understood that we object to this testimony—all of it."

Judge Roan overruled the objection.

"Well, we want our objection recorded," said Rosser.

Dorsey continued his questioning.

"Do you know Leo Frank and Jim Conley?" continued the Solicitor. A. Yes; I know them both.

Q. Were you ever in the factory of the National Pencil Company?—A. Yes; two or three times.

Q. Did you ever go to Frank's office with Miss Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Was in Basement.

Q. Was Frank there?—A. Yes.

Q. Did Frank know you were in the basement?—A. He knew I was in the factory. I don't know whether he knew I was in the basement or not.

Dorsey then turned the witness over to the defense for the cross-examination.

"When was the first time you saw Frank at the pencil factory?" asked Mr. Rosser.

"Last fall some time."

Q. Where was Frank at that time?—A. At his office.

Q. Were you ever in Walton County?—A. I lived there twenty years.

Q. How long were you away from there?—A. I went to Lawrenceville for about a year.

Q. How long ago?—A. I don't know. I forget just how long ago it was.

Q. Did you ever go with anyone to the pencil factory except Miss Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes, I used to go to the Busy Bee and wait for the factory to close to walk home with the girls.

Q. Can you name the girls?—A. Yes; Miss Laura Atkinson and a Miss Laura Smith, of No. 148 South Pryor street.

Q. Do you go there any more?—A. No; I haven't been to the Busy Bee in a long time.

Q. When you first woke up, where were you?—A. Somewhere in Walton County.

Q. As a matter of fact, you know where your family lived when you were born, don't you?—A. Somewhere near Lawrenceville.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness on the redirect examination.

Q. Did you ever give Jim Conley anything?—A. Sometimes I would give him a quarter and sometimes 50 cents. Sometimes they would have cold drinks, and sometimes they would have beer.

Rosser took the witness again.

Q. When did you see beer there?—A. On Saturday afternoons—I don't remember the dates.

Q. Can you name specifically any time last fall that you went there?—A. Not the day, but it was some time after 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Frank would have the cold drinks on a waiter in his office.

Can't Give Women's Names.

Q. And that is as definite as you can fix it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know the women besides the ones you name?—A. No.

Q. Can you describe them?—A. No. "Come down."

City Detective S. L. Rosser took the stand.

Q. Since April 26, have you been engaged in this case?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you visit Mrs. Arthur White subsequent to that date?—A. Yes.

Q. At what time?—A. Monday, April 28.

Q. Did she say anything about seeing a negro at the pencil factory Saturday?—A. No.

Q. What was the first time she mentioned to you seeing a negro at the factory?—A. May 6.

"I want to record an objection to that, your honor," said Rosser.

Rosser took the witness.

She Made Statement.

Q. Did you ask her?—A. No; but she made a statement.

Dorsey took the witness on redirect.

Q. Did you take anything to Dr. Claude Smith?—A. Yes; some chips.

Q. Are these the chips?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you make a search of the areaway around the elevator?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you find anything like this (showing the bludgeon alleged to have been found by the Pinkertons)?—A. No.

Q. Would you have found it?—A. Yes.

Attorney Rosser took the witness again.

Q. Don't you know this roller has been in that factory two years?—A. It may have been, but it was not on the first floor when we made our search.

State Wins Ruling.

Q. You made a good search?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know these are the same chips?—A. Yes, I am sure of that.

The witness was excused.

Dorsey addressed the court:

"I don't know whether we tendered that bloody shirt or not. If we did not, I want to tender it now. I also want to enter these chips."

Attorney Rosser:

"They haven't been identified."

"They were identified by Detective Starnes and Chief Beavers," said Dorsey.

Judge Roan ruled that he would let them go to the jury.

Dorsey:

State's Case Nearly Finished.

"Now, I want the cash book and the bank book of the National Pencil Company."

Arnold said they would be furnished.

Dorsey:

"I want it understood as soon as Dr. Harris is able to complete his testimony the State is ready to rest its case."

"Mr. Dorsey," said Arnold, "will you tell Mr. Dalton not to leave. We may want to recall him."

Judge Roan declared a recess until Dr. Harris could reach the court. He said it would be about 10 o'clock.

Dalton Recalled for Moment.

Dorsey recalled the witness.

Q. Were you ever in the pencil factory with Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you go to the factory with her?—A. Yes.

Q. Where was Frank?—A. In his office.

Q. Where did you go?—A. In the basement.

Q. Did he know you were there?—A. Yes.

Q. Did Conley know you were there?—A. Yes.

Q. Who else?—A. The night watchman at one time.

Court then had a recess until Dr. H. F. Harris, who was excused from the witness stand Wednesday on account of illness, could arrive in court. The recess lasted for more than an hour. Dr. Harris, when he arrived upon the stand, was questioned upon cross-examination by Attorney Reuben Arnold.

Q. Unfavorable circumstances sometimes retard digestion, don't they?—A. Well, that is a very grave matter, and there is so little data on the subject it is hard to answer.

About External Circumstances.

Q. You would not say then that external circumstances, some undue mental excitement, might delay digestion?—A. I really don't know. There was an old Roman proverb that a person should take a walk after eating. Others say sleeping after a meal aids digestion.

Q. Then there is no set rule for digestion? Everybody is a rule unto themselves?—A. Not altogether. The average normal stomach is about the same in digestion.

Q. There is no indication on the outside of the body that would indicate how far digestion has gone?—A. None whatever.

Q. Don't the pulse or temperature show indigestion?—A. No. Very many people have indigestion several years and don't know it. They don't even feel it themselves.

Q. How long does the stomach take to free itself when it is full?—A. That has been investigated rather thoroughly, but it varies. I would say about 7 1-2 hours.

Q. How long does it take some substance that the stomach does not digest to pass out?—A. That is hard to say. They probably pass through in a foreign body.

Q. How long would it take?—A. That depends. The stomach doesn't like to free itself of meat until it is emulsified. Then it goes out very freely.

About Digestion of Cabbage.

Q. That is just the point. Does the stomach emulsify cabbage or corn?—A. Oh, yes; there is always a constant churning motion.

Q. How about corn?—A. It might pass through without emulsifying.

Q. Peas?—A. Yes.

Q. You would not attempt to enumerate what vegetables would pass through the stomach to the intestines?—A. No, I would not.

Q. Is it not a fact that the first knowledge of digestion comes from that Canadian case?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it not a fact that the only experiments before that time were made on rabbits and other animals for vegetables, and animals for meat?—A. Yes.

Q. Is there any animal that eats everything that man does?—A. Yes, the swine.

Q. Any other?—A. I rather think the cat does.

Q. Well, isn't the wildcat a carnivorous animal strictly?—A. I don't know. I never associated with one.

Q. You will admit that the experiments along this line are very limited with the exception of that Canadian case?—A. Yes.

Processes Not All Understood.

Q. It is practically in its infancy?—A. Well, I would not say that. We are fairly familiar with the various juices and the process of digestion. But there is still much to learn.

Q. Just what part does the mouth and saliva play in connection with the stomach and the gastric juices, and the lower bowels? Is not this something that is not definitely known?—A. Yes, that is true.

Q. Don't you practice vivisection on these animals?—A. Yes.

Q. And you have never done it on humans, and you don't know how the processes take place in the human like you do in the animals?—A. Except with the stomach.

Q. What is the hardest vegetables to digest? I mean, leaving your experiments and speaking from the viewpoint of science.—A. I don't know that science has ever determined that.

Q. Isn't cabbage regarded as one of the hardest vegetables to digest?—A. I probably have heard that. It may be that after cabbage has gone through the stomach, trouble may be caused in the small intestines that may be what has given the geenral idea that cabbage is hard to digest.

Q. Didn't you say when you first testified that you couldn't tell anything about the bread in the stomach?—A. I don't think I made that statement.

Mr. Arnold read his testimony previously given.

Dr. Harris: "If I said that, I did not mean it in that sense. I meant that you could tell nothing about it by observing with the naked eye."

Q. You said it was impossible to state absolutely how long that cabbage had been in Mary Phagan's stomach?—A. I meant I could not state within a minute.

Q. Could you tell within two minutes?—A. No, not within 3, or 4, or 5. Probably not within 10 minutes. But I could tell that it was somewhere between 30 and 45 minutes.

Q. Doesn't it all depend on how much digestion is delayed?—A. To an extent.

Q. All you are attempting to say, then, is that the process of digestion had only gone on a certain length of time?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you say that certain circumstances retard digestion?—A. Yes, but I didn't say that anything could retard the flow of the digestive juices. No one has ever shown that anything could retard the process of digestion.

Head Wound Not Serious.

Q. I believe you said that wound on the head did not cause any pressure on the brain?—A. Yes.

Q. Was it cut through to the skull?—A. Yes.

Q. What arteries were there?—A. Only some trifling blood vessels.

Q. I believe you said it might have bled a good deal?—A. Yes, it might. A cut on the head usually causes a good deal of blood to flow.

Q. I believe you said it was not sufficient to have caused death?—A. Yes, I did.

Solicitor Dorsey then took the witness.

Q. Mr. Arnold was asking you yesterday about poisons. Was there any evidence on the mucous membrane of poisons?—A. There could not have been any irritant poisons. Their evidence is always unmistakable.

Dr. Harris was excused.

Dorsey addressed the court: "Your honor, I wish to tender these samples of cabbage as evidence."

Arnold—We want to object to all except that taken from Mary Phagan.

JIM CONLEY, THE EBONY CHEVALIER OF CRIME, IS DARKTOWN'S OWN HERO

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Now that James Conley has been dismissed from the Frank trial, now that he has stood safely the fire of Mr. Rosser's most exhaustive grilling, what of him?

If Frank is convicted, Conley subsequently will be convicted, no doubt, of being an accessory after the fact of Mary Phagan's murder—and that will mean three years, at most, in the penitentiary.

After that—when the Frank trial, more or less, has been forgotten—Conley will be at liberty to come back amongst the people of Atlanta.

Not far from Five Points, a little due east along one of the big thoroughfares meeting there, there is a negro bootblack who now and then, when he is on the job, which frequently he isn't, gives me a "shine" so much to my liking that it brings me back on other days.

He is a sort of Jim Conley negro—at least, he has a smattering of education, an ingratiating air, and is polite, particularly when it pays him to be.

Quite without previous design, I stopped at this negro's stand Wednesday afternoon, and it was not long before he mentioned the famous trial. He having started the conversation, I asked him a few questions—and his replies, given herein in part, rather set me to thinking.

"Complimented on All Sides."

"George," I said—not that I know his name is George, but that it so happens I address negroes unknown of name that way—"what do your friends down on Decatur street think of Jim Conley's story over yonder in the big court? Rather clever, negro, Jim, eh?" said I to this bootblack.

"Well, boss, dat Mr. Rosser ain't made nothing on Jim yit, is he?" replied George.

I ventured the opinion that Mr. Rosser failed, at least, to make Jim out so many different kinds of a liar that his story might not stick in spots.

"Well, boss," continued my bureau of information, "dem niggers down on Decatur street, dey ain't talking of nothing but Jim Conley. He's de most talked about nigger anywhere, I guess. I hears him complimented on all sides!"

"In other words, Jim's a sort of hero along Decatur street nowadays?" said I.

"Yassir, dat's it—Jim's a hero. Niggers all talking about him. He done got de best of de smartest of 'um. Nobody can't fool er nigger like Jim!"

Hero Around "Butt In" Bar.

I presume, too, that something of the same condition prevails over on Peters street—particularly in the neighborhood of the "Butt In" bar over there.

You remember the "Butt In" boozorium in Peters street is the one wherein Conley filled up rather freely on beer, the morning of the Phagan murder, also on beer mixed with wine.

The "Butt In", it also will be recalled, is where Conley obtained a "double-header" beer—"double-headers" being the order of the day always in the "Butt In;" there being, perhaps, some subtly humorous connection between "Butt In" and "double-header!"

It Is Not Improbable.

It is not improbable that many a foaming "double-header" has been dumped into dusky citizens along the way of the "Butt In" of late—in honor of Jim, and the way he "done got de best of de smartest of um over dar in de big court!"

If Jim Conley ever gets back to Decatur street, and hereafter he be permitted to tread the primrose way of the "Butt In" bar over on Peters, in all probability the drinks will not cost him anything for many days.

The proprietor of the "Butt In" doubtless right now would scorn to take Mr. Conley's honest money—the violent presumption being that Jim ever had, or ever will have, that kind of money—even for "double-headers."

Jim has just passed through the fire. And he got through, his reputation more or less damaged for truthfulness, to be sure, but not utterly shattered beyond patching up in such wise that it might be worked one more time, at least, if necessary.

True, Conley already had been in jail seven times that he admits of, and several times more that he can not recall precisely, and that had served to make him something of a hero in darkest Darktown; but Jim's involuntary residence in durance vile heretofore has been in police circles and mere county chaingangs exclusively. So that didn't make him a particularly big hero—albeit it made him a hero not altogether to be sneezed at!

Now, however, Jim has been in "de big court," tangled all up in a murder case, suspected by some of being a principal to the murder, indeed, but cleverly side-stepping that too deadly peril—and his name has been in all the newspapers hundreds of times, and his picture dozens of times, and before he gets through with it, he will be decorated by the State's majesty in stripes—but the latter not so long that it will seriously inconvenience anybody, particularly Jim!

All in all, Jims' a real hero in darkest Darktown, at last—a real ebony chevalier of crime—and those brethren who frequent the "Butt Ins" and the "Butt Outs," and booze dispensaries of like persuasion will bow down and worship Jim—for, in their philosophy, of such as Jim is the Decatur street "kingdom of heaven."

Ruling Generally Approved.

The general impression seems to be that Judge Roan did the right thing in permitting the Conley story to go to the jury in its entirety, inasmuch as it had gone in deadly part, anyway.

Perhaps the evidence fixing upon Leo Frank another crime than the one he stands charged with under the present indictment was, primarily, inadmissible, but there was no way to relieve the jury of the charge Conley made, and it would have been hardly fair either to the jury, the court and even to the defendant, to cut the story off there.

If the State is able to sustain its terrible charge against Frank, it perhaps is common sense now to let it proceed to the corroborating of Conley, if it can corroborate him.

To have left Conley's charge neither contradicted nor corroborated—that would merely have resulted in its probable corroroboration in the minds of the public, if not elsewhere.

The things Conley said to the Frank jury can not be said and then forgotten.

It would have been folly to have ASKED the jury to forget—it would have been imposing upon it an impossible mental task.

Other Charge as Serious.

If it so be that error was committed in not ruling out the story, a new trial will be granted, on appeal, in the event of Frank's conviction—and the trial next time undoubtedly will proceed without this particular evidence in.

The State can, if it fails to sustain eventually its charge of murder, still move against Frank, if it so elects, in the other direction—which crime, under the Code, is quite as serious as murder.

One may feel the injustice of flinging at Frank, while on trial for murder, another capital charge—still, since the additional charge was admitted, with protest, as an original proposition few people will contend strenuously that the State should not be permitted to proceed to the conclusion of a line of evidence begun without protest.

I have heard Judge Roan's ruling discussed about town last night, and to-day, and I heard few who find fault in it.

Indeed, as matter of simple justice to Frank, no less than to the State—and it will not do to forget that the State has large rights at stake in this matter—it seems common sense and elementary justice that the State, having made its awful charge, be required either to corroborate it or not.

That apepars to be the public attitude in the matter.

PROSECUTOR DORSEY SNAPPED IN ACTION

This shows the Solicitor in an argument at the Frank trial.

ROAN'S RULING HEAVY BLOW TO DEFENSE

Judge Declined to Order Out of Record Any of Jim Conley's Testimony.

Judge Roan administered a severe blow to the defense Wednesday when he ruled that all of Conley's story should stand, although portions of it, he acknowledged, would have been inadmissible had objection been made at the time the testimony was offered.

It was a particularly difficult allegation to combat. Unlike many allegations, it was exactly as hard to fight in the event it was false as in case it was founded on fact.

Judge Roan said in regard to the testimony of Dalton that he did not know what it was to be and that he would allow it to be presented so that he might rule on its admissibility as it came up.

Solicitor Dorsey put the final rivet in his case so far as it rested upon the testimony of Conley when at the close of his redirect examination of the negro he brought to light the State's theory of the disposition that had been made of the Phagan girl's mesh bag.

Practically no mention of the mesh bag had been made during the week and a half of the trial. The only reference made to it was in the examination of Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of the slain girl, and of the officers who visited the scene of the crime immediately after police headquarters was called by the negro nightwatchman, Newt Lee.

Tells of Mesh Bag.

Mrs. Coleman testified that Mary left home with the mesh bag in her hand. The detectives and policemen all testified that they were able to find no trace of it either the morning after the crime or in the search that had been conducted since then.

"Did you ever see the murdered girl's mesh bag?" Dorsey asked Conley, just as it appeared that he had finished his questioning.

"Yes, sah, I see it," Conley replied.

"Where was it?"

"It was right on Mr. Frank's desk when I went in there to write the notes."

"Did you see what became of it?"

"Yes, sah; Mr. Frank went and put it in his safe."

Conley left the stand at 11:10 o'clock still sticking to his charge that Leo Frank killed the Phagan girl and that, at Frank's direction, he (Conley) assisted in the disposal of the body. He had been on the stand fifteen and one-half hours and under the grilling cross-examination of Luther Rosser for more than thirteen hours.

Practically the only addition he made to his story as it appeared in his direct examination was his declaration that while he was writing the murder notes Frank took the pencil out of his hand and then an instant later made him rub out the "s" he had written as he spelled out "negros." Conley said he wrote the note at first:

"A long tall black negros did this by hisself."

A long argument over the admissibility of Conley's testimony in regard to Frank's alleged conduct with women previous to the murder of Mary Phagan took place after the jury had been sent from the courtroom at noon. Court recessed before the arguments were concluded, and the debate was resumed in the afternoon.

Reuben Arnold cited opinions from courts in States from the Atlantic to the Pacific, but his arguments were unavailing and the decision went against the defense. There was a murmur of applause and a stamping of feet.

Arnold instantly was on his feet with a motion for a mistrial, but he realized at once that the jury was not present and withdrew the motion. He threatened, however, to make a motion that the courtroom be cleared if such a demonstration occurred again.

Dr. Harris Recalled.

Dr. Harris was recalled to complete the testimony which he was giving when he collapsed on the stand the Friday before. He repeated his assertion as to the time Mary Phagan came to her death after eating dinner at her home in Bellwood Saturday shortly before noon.

"I can say with almost absolute certainty," he declared, "that this little girl was killed within 30 or 40 minutes after she ate her meal that day."

He refused, under cross-examination, to change his testimony in the least in respect to the cause of death.

"It was easily apparent that strangulation was the cause," he declared.

"An examination of the lungs was unnecessary and even useless because of the embalming preparation that had been employed. It was plainly evident that the rope had been placed about the girl's neck before death and the deep indentation showed that it was sufficient to choke off her breath and cause death within a brief time."

Although Arnold was unable to make the physician alter the statement of his opinion, he obtained an admission that a blow on the head sufficient to cause death might immediately precede garroting and still the same manifestations of strangulation exist.

Dr. Harris, however, did not believe that the blow on Mary Phagan's head was enough to cause death. He said that the blow was not severe and that, aside from a little spot of blood on the brain which could not have caused any pressure, the brain was entirely normal.

Attorney Arnold in the latter part of the afternoon session engaged in an exhaustive and highly technical examination of the witness in regard to the action of the digestive juices, the percentages, that were present in Mary Phagan's stomach and the tests that were made for poisons.

FORSYTH NEGRO'S CABIN DYNAMITED

John Woolsey Suffers Broken Leg When Blown Through the Roof of House.

CUMMING, Aug. 7.—John Woolsey, the only negro in Forsyth County, was blown out of bed through the roof of his cabin, eight miles north of Cumming, and suffered a broken leg, when dynamite was set off under the house, according to information that has reached Cumming. The dynamiting took place on the farm of Wyley Smith. The dynamiters cut all telephone wires into that part of the county, which prevented the news reaching here sooner. Woolsey was hurried out of the county to Gainesville by Smith.

The negro had moved to the Smith place just a few days ago. He was warned to leave the county and Smith was warned to get rid of him. Neither took heed. The dynamiting resulted. The cabin occupied by Woolsey was completely wrecked.

Industrial Workers of the World planning the strike, contemplated calling out the dock workers at Two Harbors, Mich.; Superior, Wis.; Ashland, Wis.; Marquette, Mich., and Escanaba, Mich.

MOVE TEST FARM, COMMITTEES ASK

Senate and House Bodies in Joint Meeting Agree to Favor the Ellis Bill.

The bill introduced into the House by Representative Ellis of Tift County to remove the Georgia Experiment Station from Griffin, Ga., to the Southern part of the State, will be recommended for passage by both the Senate Committee on Agriculture and the House Committee No. 2 on Agriculture.

The favorable report on the bill was prepared at a joint meeting of the committees Wednesday afternoon. The bill has been favorably considered once by the Senate Committee, which later voted to reconsider its action when pressure was brought to bear. The House Committee had not acted prior to the Wednesday meeting.

The report is expected to precipitate a fight in the House. It is regarded as unlikely that any definite action on the bill will be taken at this session of the Legislature. Members of the General Assembly who advocate Griffin as the place for the station have been active in their fight on the bill.

The meeting Wednesday was attended by many adherents of Griffin, and a number of those who want the station removed to South Georgia, as well as several who desire its removal to Athens.

Among those who addressed the meeting were Dr. A. C. True, of the Agricultural Department of Washington, who has supervision over all State experiment stations, and Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price. Dr. True said the removal of the station would not affect the Federal appropriation. Mr. Price advocated the present location.

Battlefield of 1763 To Be Memorial Park

GREENSBURG, PA., Aug. 7.—At the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Bushy Run, one of the principal engagements of the French and Indian war here, a movement was started to obtain 25 acres of the famous battlefield for a memorial park, and to erect a bronze statue with a large bronze tablet to Colonel Henry Bouquet.

The historical and patriotic societies of Pennsylvania are behind the movement.

TRIAL AS VARIED AS VAUDEVILLE EXHIBITION

Every Change in Chromatic Scale Rung — All Georgia Types Seen in Court.

By L. F. WOODRUFF.

Every change in the chromatic scale has been rung in the Frank trial. With the single exception of the skyrocket oratory that will mark the last stage of the trial, everything that has ever been done in the trial of a criminal case has been enacted in the fight to fix on the superintendent of the National Pencil Factory the guilt of the murder of Mary Phagan.

There has been comedy. There has been tragedy. There has been periods as dull as a hookworm victim. There have been occasions as startling as the feat of a circus daredevil. There have been pathos and performances worthy of a clown. The somber has been mixed with the gay until the entire trial seems the work of a futurist artist who has had a hard night with the drinking cups before he started the painting.

Jim Conley was on the stand something like sixteen hours. His story was a ragtime composition, with the weirdest syncopations, and then came Dr. Harris right on his heels and gave evidence full of soundness and learnedness. To the spectators it seemed that they had just heard "Alexander's Ragtime Band" played and then a Bach fugue for an encore.

One Simple, Other Complex.

Conley's story was as simple in words as "Old Black Joe," while Dr. Harris' was as complex as a Wagnerian overture.

Jim Conley spoke in terms of the street, of the near-beer saloon, of the blind alley crap game. Dr. Harris spoke in the language of the laboratory and the library.

Jim Conley could not enunciate a word of more than one syllable. Dr. Harris was as polysyllabic as the word "heterogeneous." And the spectators had to gasp after the shift.

Conley's story, while it was as full of contradictions as a hive is of bees, was as easy to understand as a baby's "da-da" is to a fond parent. Dr. Harris evidence was as loaded with medical lore as a physician's library.

And, although it seems impossible, there is more still to come. Before the trial has ended practically every type that Georgia knows will have been paraded in the courtroom.

Types Seen in Court.

Right now, the spectators have seen the scholarly defendant whose court attitude is still an enigma—as unsolvable as the crime with which he is charged. There are his loving mother and his devoted wife.

Here is the massive figure of Luther Rosser, attacking every opponent with a battleax ferocity. Here is the erudite Arnold, with rapier thrusts to send in the death blow when the enemy is beaten down by the more direct assault of his ally.

Here is the young Solicitor, struggling against tremendous odds, upsetting tradition by fighting Rosser with his own weapons, burning Arnold with his own fire.

Here is his learned associate, quick to grasp a point as a drowning man is a straw.

Here are factory girls and business men. Here are the comical figure of Newt Lee and the sinister figure of Jim Conley. Here are the learned scientist and the sleuth hound.

It seems that everything has been shown, but still there will be more. It is impossible that Rosser and Arnold will not show something just as novel and bizarre as the State has presented.

Color for a Dickens.

There is Mincey to come with his startling story—Mincey, as typical of the red clay soil of the Cracker country as peanuts and watermelons; Mincey, so typically the country school teacher that he will have to carry a rod of hickory and a blueback speller to the stand to feel at home while he is giving his evidence.

And there will be a lot more.

Tragic as is the trial, it has been Atlanta's greatest vaudeville show. Dickens could have spent one week in Judge Roan's courtroom and written four novels around the types he saw listening to and playing parts in the drama that hovers around the life and death of a little girl of the factory.

FRANK DEFENSE OPENS WITH ATTACK ON DR. HARRIS' EVIDENCE

Dalton Corroborates Jim Conley's Story of Women Calling at Pencil Factory

OPINIONS AS TO TIME OF GIRL'S DEATH GUESSES, IS DR. CHILDS' TESTIMONY

We don't want to argue it. We just want to be recorded as objecting.

Judge Roan permitted all of the samples to go in.

Solicitor Dorsey asked for the bank book and the cash book of the National Pencil Company. They had not been secured.

Dorsey—We will rest our case, anyway.

The State rested its case exactly at 12 o'clock.

Dr. L. W. Childs, a prominent young surgeon of Atlanta, was the first witness called by the defense.

Attorney Arnold questioned Dr. Childs.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Surgery and general medicine.

Q. Where did you graduate?—A. University of Michigan in 1906.

Q. Where did you practice?—A. I was first assistant at the Michigan University Hospital.

Q. How long have you been in Atlanta?—A. About five years.

Q. A body is found at 3 o'clock in the morning, is not embalmed until 10 o'clock that morning. It is dug up nine days later and a cut is found in back of the head. There is only a drop of blood found on the skull. There was no pressure on the brain. Could a physician have said whether that blow produced unconsciousness? A. He might hazard a guess. He could not tell.

Calls Opinion Mere Guess.

Q. The presence of a drop of blood would have had nothing to do with it? A. Absolutely nothing. There was no pressure, you said.

Q. No pressure at all.—A. Then its effect was negligible.

Q. Now is there any way for a doctor telling definitely whether or not that blow caused unconsciousness?—A. I should say it would be a guess.

Q. Is it possible to tell whether a wound or cut such as I have described with the appearance of blood was inflicted before or after death?—A. If it was inflicted in from one to three hours after death it would have the appearance of having been inflicted just before death.

Q. Would you say that such a wound as I have described could have been inflicted one hour after death?—A. It would practically be a guess to say so.

Q. Would the fact that this body had been embalmed and buried for nine days add to the difficulties of making an examination or not?—A. It would greatly add to the difficulties.

Q. Have you ever heard of a case on record when an opinion on unconsciousness and the length of time the person was unconscious before death was placed on what data we have?—A. Absolutely no.

Blows Often Cause Death.

Q. Have you heard of cases of blows on the head causing death without fracturing the skull?—A. Yes, I have seen several cases of sandbagging where the person would die of concussion of the brain and there would only be a slight swelling where the blow had been struck.

Q. Then there is absolutely no way of telling the exact result of a blow on the head after a post-mortem held nine days after interment?—A. No.

Q. What class of food does cabbage come in?—A. Carbohydrates.

Q. Are they considered hard to digest?—A. As such they are not, but in cabbage the carbohydrate is mixed with cellulose, a woody fiber on which the digestive juices have practically no effect, therefore, it is very hard.

Q. Look at this sample (Arnold showed the witness the cabbage taken from Mary Phagan's stomach). Was that well masticated?—A. Not very well.

Q. Isn't it a fact that cooked cabbage is harder to digest than raw cabbage?—A. Yes; raw cabbage is the easiest of all forms of cabbage to digest.

Cabbage in Digestive State.

Q. What part does the saliva play? A. It acts on the carbohydrates.

Q. What part of the cabbage is the carbohydrates?—A. Seven or eight per cent.

Q. So saliva only affects that part of the cabbage?—A. Yes.

Q. Does the stomach do anything about digesting cabbage?—A. The muscular effect—the churning—might break it up to some extent.

Q. So the juices of the stomach instead of digesting cabbage merely retard it?—A. Yes.

Q. Then where is cabbage really digested?—A. In the small intestines.

Q. How long would it take boiled cabbage to pass out of the stomach? A. About four and one-half hours.

Q. Then when it goes out of the stomach it is really undigested, is it not?—A. Yes. It may pass out of the body entirely in the undigested form.

Digestion Easily Retarded.

Q. Are there not a great many things that retard digestion?—A. Yes, the psychic causes—fright, anger and sudden mental excitement—materially retard it.

Q. Would walking retard it?—A. Yes, if the walking was immediately after the meal, digestion would be retarded. These other causes might totally stop digestion.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you might find substances in a stomach that had laid there quite a while and practically no digestive action had begun?—A. Yes, if the psychic influence had taken place.

Q. Don't stomachs differ as much as minds?—A. Yes. To understand a stomach you must study it as an individual.

Mr. Arnold held up a sample of cabbage taken from the Phagan girl's stomach.

Q. Would you hazard a guess that this cabbage had only been in a stomach one half hour before death—?A. I would not.

Q. Why?—A. For the reasons I have stated. The cause of the psychic influences—I know not of—that might have been brought to bear and because of the varying effects of stomachs on such a substance.

Denies Accurate Opinions.

Q. Do you think a doctor could give an accurate scientific opinion by making such a statement?—A. I do not.

Q. How long would you say it was possible for cabbage like this to stay in the stomach?—A. I have seen cabbage less digested than that which had been in the stomach for twelve hours.

Q. When the process of digestion begins, it begins very slowly, doesn't it?—A. Yes, it is really indeterminate. It has not advanced very far when the food goes to the stomach.

Q. How long would it take wheat bread?—A. I would say about two and one-half hours.

Q. Then solids like cabbage and wheat bread would be at least two and one-half hours passing out of the stomach, would they not?—A. Yes.

At this point court was adjourned until 2 o'clock.

'Blow Would Discolor Eyes.'

Q. Please state whether a bruise could be inflicted over the eye after death similar to a wound in life.—A. Yes, as much after two hours.

Q. Could a blow on the back of the head cause a discolored eye?—A. Yes, or both eyes.

Q. What becomes of that epithelium after death?—A. Before or after embalming?

Q. Would it be decomposed before embalming?—A. It would.

Solicitor Dorsey then took the witness. His brother, Dr. Rufus T. Dorsey, a prominent Atlanta physician, sat by the questioner and frequently coached him in his examination of the witness.

Q. How old are you?—A. 31.

Q. Where have you lived?—A. Ann Arbor and Atlanta.

Q. How long have you practiced?—A. Seven years.

Q. What do you practice?—A. Surgery and general medicine.

Q. Don't most specialists confine themselves to one study and find their hands full?—A. They learn more by branching out.

Q. Do you undertake to tell this jury that digestion begins in the mouth?—A. Yes.

Q. I thought mastication was the office of the mouth?—A. It is.

Q. Then doesn't digestion begin as much when the food begins to cook as in the mouth?—A. No; the digestion begins when the salivary glands begin to yield their juices.

Q. Is a turnip of about the saem property as a cabbage?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you consider Dr. Crittenden, of Yale, an authority?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with his table on the relative properties of food?—A. Yes.

Differs With Authority.

Q. If he says it takes about 3 1-2 hours to digest a cabbage and the same time for a turnip it is about right, is it not?—A. I think he says that he is at variance with the other authorities.

Q. Then you are at variance with him?—A. Yes.

Q. Who is your authority?—A. Dr. Peterson, an eminent medical expert and authority.

Q. In speaking of digestion of cabbage and turnips, you have as a standard, a normal stomach?—A. Yes.

Q. How long after taking food into a stomach would you find pure hydrochloric acid?—A. I tis in the stomach before food is taken in and you will find it there at any stage.

Q. Do you mean to give this as your opinion?—A. It would depend upon the condition of the glands of the gastric membrance.

Q. I am speaking of a normal stomach. Are you familiar with the Ewald breakfast test? According to this test, how long would it be before you would find pure hydrochloric acid?—A. It would depend on the glands.

Q. I am asking you about a normal stomach.

Judge Warns Against Haste.

Arnold objected—He does not give the witness time to answer.

Judge Roan cautioned Dorsey regarding this.

Q. How much acid would occur in a normal stomach one hour after the Ewald breakfast test?—A. About 2 grams.

Q. Give me the amount in degrees. A. That is essentially a question for a laboratory man. We don't use those terms in general practice.

Q. Well, standard authorities use degrees.—A. It is essentially a laboratory test and I would prefer not to answer.

Q. Well, if you can't answer it I will try you on something else. Is this man Hemeter an authority?—A. If he gives any tables he is.

Q. Do you know of him?—A. I have heard of him.

Q. Is he a standard?—A. Yes.

Q. I want you to give this jury the acidity of an Ewald test breakfast one hour after taking.—A. That is a question for a laboratory man.

Q. Well, if you can't that I will ask you something else. Can you give me the percentages of the gastric juices in digestion?—A. No, that is in a branch that is seldom taught.

Q. Don't you know that they teach that as one of the fundamental principles of medicine?—A. I take exception with you on that.

Q. Can you tell me the functions of the gastric juices—A. Yes.

Dr. Childs then gave an extensive scientific explanation, after which Dorsey propounded a long hypothetical question, to bring out, if possible, an admission that the cabbage might not have been in the stomach more than an hour. Dr. Childs replied that it would be the wildest guess to try and place the time within two hours.

Q. I will get you to tell the jury why?—A. I will cite a case that came to my attention when cabbage was taken from a stomach after twelve hours.

Arnold Protests at Mirth.

Q. I am speaking of a normal stomach.—A. That might have been a normal stomach.

Q. Well, it certainly would not have been normal if it was that diseased, so diseased the cabbage had to be taken from it.—A. The structure was normal.

Q. Will you tell the jury that the juices were normal?—A. No.

Dorsey remarked: "Why, of course not," and there was a ripple of laughter in the courtroom when Attorney Arnold jumped to his feet to object to the Solicitor's comment.

"Your honor," Arnold said, "that laughter will have to cease. There is a bunch of hoodlums back there who laugh at my friend's witticisms."

Judge Roan—You will have to keep order in the courtroom, Mr. Sheriff.

Q. What is a normal stomach?—A. A normal stomach is one that is under normal conditions will digest a normal amount of food in a normally accepted time.

Q. Did you ever see any experiments except in that case where you made a man vomit?—A. No, I am not quoting myself.

Scott Called to Stand.

Q. If a little girl were found sixteen to twenty hours after she was murdered with a moist blood spot on her hair, with a scar on the back of her head, deep indentations in her neck, her tongue out, her nails blue, what would you say caused her death?—A. I would certainly say it was not the blow on the head.

The witness was excused.

Harry Scott, the Pinkerton detective employed by the National Pencil Company, who has already appeared as a witness for the prosecution, was called by the defense. Attorney Rosser questioned him.

Q. Mr. Scott, you knew on Monday after the crime that Mrs. Arthur White saw a negro near the stairway on the Saturday before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell the city detectives? A. It is my recollection that I did.

Q. Did you ever ask Mr. Frank if Conley could write?—A. No.

Q. When did you discover Jim Conley could write?—A. Sunday, May 18.

Q. On May 18, you dictated to Conley "that long, tall, black negro did it by hisself." How long did it take him to write it?—A. About six or seven minutes.

Q. You were present when he was brought before Mrs. White?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he move his lips?—A. Yes; he chewed his lips and looked very excited.

Q. Did he look nervous, and, if so, why?—A. Well, he could not stand still. He twirled a cigarette and looked very excited.

Q. Did he deny on May 18 that he had anything to do with the murder or had been to the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you try to make him talk?—A. Yes.

Treated Him 'Pretty Roughly.'

Q. How did you talk to him?—A. I was very stern with him. I tried to get from him a confession of the murder.

Q. Did you give him the third degree?—A. That depends on what you call the third degree.

Q. Well, you tell me what did?—A. Oh, we just talked to him, and cursed him and treated him pretty roughly.

Q. Did you beat him?—A. No.

Q. Just a scientific third degree?—A. Well, we did everything we could.

Q. You and the city detectives worked in harmony, each one giving the other what he had discovered, did you not?—A. Yes.

Mr. Rosser showed Scott the first statement made by Jim Conley.

Q. Did you hear him make this statement?—A. Yes, I wrote it.

Q. Is that all he said?—A. Yes.

Q. You didn't know he could write? A. Yes, I had already discovered he could write.

Q. This information that he could write came from Schiff and Darley, of the pencil factory, didn't it?—A. Yes.

Brings Up Second Statement.

Q. When Conley made that second statement about the notes, was that gone over with Mr. Dorsey?—A. Yes.

Q. He said: "It did not say anything about the little girl's body"?—A. Yes.

Q. He repeated againthe buying of the beer and whisky on Peters street?—A. Yes.

Q. Conley told you the second time he was going to tell the truth?—A. Yes. He sent for Mr. Black and made a voluntary statement.

Q. That was his first sworn statement?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. On May 25, after that statement, you and Black called on Conley again and questioned him, didn't you?—A. Yes. About three hours.

Q. You gave him the same third degree you illustrated just now, didn't you?—A. No, I was stern, but nothing more.

Q. On May 27 you question him again, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. Then you told him Mr. Frank would not have written those notes on Friday and that his story would not fit?—A. Yes.

Q. How long did you question him?—A. Five or six hours.

Q. The next day you had him again, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. How long?—A. About Five or six hours.

Q. And he told you he had already told the truth and would tell no more?—A. Yes.

Changed Day to Saturday.

Q. On May 28, he made you another long statement, after being told that his former statement showed deliberation and would not fit: then he changed the date to Saturday?—A. Yes.

Q. He told you he had made up his mind to tell you the whole truth?—A. Yes.

Q. But he still stuck to the statement that he got up that morning about 9 or 9:30 o'clock and later went to the "Butt In" saloon and bought a glass of beer?—A. Yes.

Q. He told you about writing the notes? How many notes did he say he wrote?—A. He said he wrote three on white paper, as I remember.

Q. Did he say Mr. Frank took a piece of green paper and wrote something like an "M" on it?—A. Yes.

Q. Still, he didn't say anything about seeing the body?—A. No.

Q. Mr. Scott, what sort of a looking negro was Conley the first time you saw him?—A. He was dirty and ragged.

Q. You saw him here the other day and he was spick as an onion, wasn't he?—A. Yes.

Tells of Frank's Arrest.

Q. What time of the day was Frank arrested?—A. About 2 or 3 o'clock.

Q. Didn't you go to the factory and get him at 11:30 o'clock?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it not true that all I did about it was to get him a guard so that he would not be put in a cell?—A. Yes.

Q. Conley told you that the reason he had been washing the shirt was that he had been wearing it three weeks?—A. Yes.

Q. Is it not true that you told Conley every time you thought he was lying, "That won't do you will have to do better than that"?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't he say when he gave you that final affidavit that it was the whole truth?—A. Yes.

The jury at this moment took a five minutes recess, during which time they were served with soft drinks.

Q. Conley stated nothing about Frank asking him to watch for him?—A. No.

Q. He said nothing about seeing Monteen Stover go up to the steps?—A. No.

Q. He said nothing about Mr. Frank stamping for him?—A. No.

Q. He said only that Mr. Frank whistled for him?—A. Yes, that was all.

Q. Did you ever get him to tell you about that little mesh bag?—A. Yes, I did my best.

Q. He never intimated at that time that he saw it in Frank's office?—A. No.

Said Nothing of Parasol.

Q. Did you ever ask him about the parasol?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you he saw it, or not?—A. My memory is not clear.

Q. Do you want to refresh your memory (Rosser handed Scott the affidavit)?—A. No, he did not tell me anything about it.

Rosser paused to partake of a soft drink, smacking his lips, he remarked: "I wish it was a little more sustaining."

Q. Mr. Scott, he didn't tell you anything about Mr. Frank's stumbling on the floor of the elevator and hitting him on the back, did he?—A. No, sir.

Q. How long did he tell you he stayed in that wardrobe?—A. Fifteen or twenty minutes, I think, I am not clear.

Q. In his last statement he said he wrote only one note, didn't he?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long before the beginning of this trial did you cease communicating with Conley?—A. May 29.

Q. He gave you two statements in which he said he told all the truth?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you he had money and cigaettes in a box, or money and cigarettes in a cigarette box?—A. I understood him to say in a cigarette box.

Q. Did he tell you that he never saw Lemmie Quinn go in or out of the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he ever tell you that poor little unfortunate girl was name Mary Perkins?—A. No.

Didn't Tell of Screams.

Q. Did Conley ever tell you he heard screams?—A. No.

Q. Did you ask him?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you Mr. Frank told you he had hit her too hard, or had dropped her?—A. He said he let her fall.

Q. Did he say anything about hearing someone running?—A. No.

Q. Did he tell you Frank stamped first and the next thing he heard was whistling?—A. No.

Q. Did he tell you when he got to the top of the stairs that Frank was standing there with a cord in his hand?—A. No.

Q. Did you find cords like the one we have been exhibiting here?—A. Yes.

Q. He didn't say anything about a rope about the girl's neck, did he?—A. No.

Q. Didn't he say she had a piece of underskirt around her neck?—A. He did not.

Q. What time did he tell you Frank whistled when he went up to steps?—A. Four minutes to 1 o'clock.

While Mr. Rosser studied his notes, Mrs. Leo Frank leaned over and whispered in his ear. Rosser remarked loud enough to be heard at the press table: "No, I won't question him about that."

Looks for Discrepancies.

Q. He told you Frank sent him back there and he hollered back, "This girl is dead," and Frank hollered back, "Bring her up here, anyway." He didn't say he went up to Mr. Frank and told him the girl was dead?—A. That is the way he stated it.

Q. He told you it was a crocus sack that he wrapped her up in, didn't he?—A. Yes.

Q. What did Jim tell——

Dorsey interrupted: "Your honor, if I am not mistaken, Conley has admitted all of this."

Rosser: "No, he didn't. He said he told Mr. Scott and Mr. Black, and I want to show that he didn't if I can."

Q. Did he tell you he put this sack with the girl's body in it over his shoulders and it dangled about his legs?—A. No, sir.

Q. I will get you to state if you said anything about a slipper or a ribbon being near the body upstairs?—A. He mentioned the slipper and the hat, but he didn't say anything about a ribbon.

Q. He told you that Frank stumbled at the top floor and not at the bottom floor, didn't he?—A. Yes.

Q. He didn't tell you anything about Frank leaving the elevator unlocked, did he?—A. No.

Q. Did he say anything to you about complaining to Mr. Frank after he had been in the wardrobe—"you got me in a tight place?"—A. No, he said he told Mr. Frank he was sweaty.

Q. He told you Mr. Frank gave him $200 and then took it back?—A. Yes.

Q. I noticed that in his written statement there is some writing in long hand in addition to the typewritten statement. Explain how that happened.—A. The stenographer took down his statement and wrote it out. I remembered that all of Conley's statement about the $200 was not in it. We had him repeat it and added it to the statement in long hand.

Q. Did you ask him whether there was any thought of burning the body?—A. He said he didn't know anything about that.

Q. Did he tell you that he promised to come back in 40 minutes and burn the body, but he went to sleep and forgot it?—A. No.

Q. Did he say anything about telling Mr. Frank "You are a white man and you done it. You go down there and do it; I am scared?"—A. No.

Q. Did he say anything about getting away?—A. No.

Q. Did he say anything about Frank saying there would be a way for him to get into the factory when he came back?—A. No.

Q. Did he tell you anything about going across to the saloon and taking a fish and liver sandwich and looking up at the clock?—A. No.

Q. Did he tell you the reason he didn't go back and burn the body was that he fell asleep and didn't wake up until 6 o'clock?—A. No.

Q. Did Conley tell you that he talked to Frank on the steps or on the fourth floor?—A. The fourth floor.

Q. Did he tell you that Frank said to him: "If you had come back there Saturday and done what Itold you, there would not have been any trouble?"—A. No.

Q. Describe to me the scene when you convinced Conley he could write?—A. I called him upto Chief Lanford's office and told him I heard he had told Detective Black he could not write. I told him learned he could write and that if he didn't write we would produce the source of our information. He took up a pencil and wrote as I dictated.

Q. You had to convince him you knew he could write before he would write for you?—A. Yes.

Solicitor Dorsey took the witness.

Q. Mr. Scott, did you get any information from the people at the National Pencil Factory about Conley being able to write?—A. Not personally.

Q. Didn't you get it from people wholly disconnected with the factory?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't the National Pencil people know that Conley was arrested May 1?

Rosser objected.

Dorsey said that it was desired to show the connection between these people and the defendant. Judge Roan sustained the objection.

Q. What official did you tell about Mrs. White seeing a negro on the steps?

Says Pinkertons Divided.

Rosser objected again. The objection was overruled.

A. I told Mr. Black, Chief Lanford and Detective Rosser.

Q. Wasn't Attorney Rosser the first man told?—A. He was among the first.

Q. Wasn't it May 7 and wasn't he the first one you told?—A. It was soon after I heard of it. I am not sure of either fact.

Q. What time did the State first learn of this big stick?

Rosser objected and Dorsey said he was trying to show the attitude of "these people."

"I want to prove," he said, "that the Pinkertons were divided. Part of them went with the defense. Mr. Scott is the only one who sought to aid the State."

Q. Were you denied seeing Frank?

Arnold interrupted. "I object to all of this as being irrevelant."

Judge Roan: "He can state when he tried to see him.

A. With Detective Black and Jim Conley I went to the jail. Sheriff Mangum went up to see Frank.

Anold objected and was sustained by Judge Roan, in his objections to statements on the part of the witness that were conclusions.

Q. When was the last time you saw Leo M. Frank?—A. May 3.

Q. Was there any difference in his appearance from the first time you saw him?—A. No.

Conley Made "Things Fit."

Q. Did Conley eliminate any of the statements you objected to?—A. Yes.

Q. Did the changes come from the detectives or from Conley?—A. They came from Conley.

Rosser Took the Witness Again.

Q. You all would say "Jim, this don't fit," and then Jim would change it, wouldn't he?—A. He made changes after we told him his statements wouldn't fit.

Judge Roan said here that he had received a request from the jury to allow three musicians among them to play the piano at the Kimball House. He granted the request.

Court then adjourned until 9 o'clock Friday morning.

CABAL TO BLOCK SLATON TAX ACT IS CHARGED TO 'DRYS' AND REFORM FOES

The "dry" members of the House of Representatives and those members who oppose the enactment of tax reform measures have formed a combine to defeat all bills introduced or favored by Speaker Burwell, because the Speaker ruled that the resolution of Mr. Kidd, of Baker, ordering the Temperance Committee to report the Hixon-Searcy (Webb) bill back to the House was out of order Wednesday morning, after Wohlwender, of Muscogee, had held up the business of the House for an entire day with a filibuster.

The formation of the combine is virtually a defiance of Governor John M. Slaton and a refusal to accede to his wishes that tax reform measures and bills putting the taxation system of the State on a business basis be passed. It is a dare to the Governor to veto the House appropriation bill or call an extra session, both of which the Governor has said he will do if the House does not enact tax reform measures or keep its appropriations within the estimated revenues of the State.

Plan to Resurrect Bill.

In addition to trying to defeat the bills of Speaker Burwell and Governor Slaton, the combine will make every effort possible to resurrect the Hixon-Searcy Senate bill from the pigeonhole to which it has been consigned by the Temperance Committee. Mr. Kidd, the apparent author of the resolution which met such an inglorious finish Wednesday morning, declared that he will try to introduce his resolution at the first opportunity.

"We intend to try in every way possible to get the bill out of the committee and before the House at this session," said Mr. Kidd. "I intend to offer my resolution again, and if I can not do that we will try to find some other means of combating the enemies of the bill. We were not treated right by the Speaker when he ruled my resolution out of order. We are prepared to fight for our rights, and if the bill can not come up for the consideration of this House there are a lot of other measures that will receive scant consideration at the hands of the friends of the measure.

Organized Fight on Burwell.

"We intend to defeat every measure offered or favored by Speaker Burwell or the men who aided in the defeat of the resolution ordering the Temperance Committee to report back the Hixon-Searcy bill. Burwell's bills have no chance of passing this House during the present session. I have nothing personally against any of the Speaker's bills, but we are going to get even for the treatment we got during the consideration of my resolution and for not being given a chance to pass, or at least attempt to pass, the Webb bill that passed the Senate."

The combination of the "dry" forces and those opposed to tax revision was formed the day before the introduction of Mr. Kidd's resolution. Mr. Wohlwender, who started and carried through a successful filibuster, declared Wednesday that the resolution was drawn up by Barry Wright, of Floyd County, one of the prohibition leaders. It was the result of a combination formed at that time between Mr. Wright and other temperance leaders and Messrs. Stovall, of Elbert; Sheppard, of Sumter, and other members who have consistently opposed tax reform measures.

Unite Against Tax Reform.

It was agreed, it is generally understood, that the enemies of tax reform were to support the Kidd resolution on condition that the prohibition members aid them in their efforts to prevent the passage of tax bills. The idea was this:

If the Hixon-Searcy bill were brought out from the committee and consideration of it begun by the House, it would precipitate a "wet" and "dry" fight pure and simple. Debate would naturally wax fast and furious, and the members who oppose tax reform measures figured that the discussion of the bill would occupy the time of the House until adjournment, or at least create such a spirit of unrest and antagonism that the ranks of the tax reformers would be broken.

Then, when Speaker Burwell ruled the Kidd resolution out of order on the grounds that it asked a physical impossibility of the Temperance Committee, the strength of the combine was directed against the presiding officer of the House and his bills, and the bills of others that he favored, and the bills of the other members who opposed the resolution.

Controls Half of House.

The combine at present controls probably half the votes of the House, and renders impossible the passage of any measure that requires a two-thirds vote, and makes exceedingly difficult the passage of any measure requiring even a bare majority. Wednesday afternoon the combine displayed strength enough to defeat two of Speaker Burwell's bills, both constitutional amendments requiring a two-thirds majority to carry. They were administration bills, and the word has been passed among the members of the House that Governor Slaton favored them and desired that they be enacted. Both were overwhelmingly defeated.

The first bill to feel the strength of the combine was Burwell's measure submitting to the qualified voters of the State a proposition to amend the constitution so that the school levy of any one year should not exceed 2 1-2 mills, in addition to the regular school fund provided by the Constitution.

Two of His Measures Beaten.

Though the Speaker himself took the floor and explained the purpose of the bill—that it was merely one of a series of bills designed to place the State on a sound business basis—the bill was defeated by a vote of 106 to 67, lacking by 17 votes the necessary two-thirds majority. The other administration bill, a companion bill to the one defeated first, submitted a proposition that the annual levy for pensions should not exceed 1 1-2 mills. It was defeated, the vote being 79 to 79. It lacked 24 votes of having a two-thirds majority.

Unless the combine can be broken, the result will be that little or no legislation of importance will be enacted during the balance of the session. It means that the Legislature, having already attained the name by doing less than any Legislature in years, will go down in history as a Legislature that did absolutely nothing of importance.

Alabama Sheriff Is Accused as Slaver

GADSDEN, Aug 7.—When the Federal Grand jury adjourns late to-day an indictment is expected to be retudned against Sheriff James Sparks of Marshall County, charging him with violating the Mann White Slave Act.

Miss D. C. King, 16 years old, is the girl in the case. She is in a reformatory near Birmingham. Sparks admitted to-day that witneses have appeared against him and that he expected an indictment would be returned, but said the charges are a "frame up" by enemies to get even with him for prosecutions for violating the prohibition law.

It is charged Sparks took the girl from Guntersville, county seat of Marshall County, to Chattanooga, and kept her at a hotel for three days for an immoral purpose.

Man Smuggled Into U. S. Is Held at Mobile

MOBILE, Aug. 7.—Heiñ Schlova, a Russian who came to Mobile from Gulfport, Miss., was locked in the county jail here Thursday at the instance of the United States immigration authorities. There is doubt as to whether he can legally remain in this country.

Schlova says he paid 150 rubles to to the master of the Norwegian bark Romanoff for passage from Monteleido to Gulfport, Miss., and was told that it was only a short distance from Boston, Mass., where he has relatives, and that the fare would be $4.

Operation Fails to Save Assault Victim

VALDOSTA, Aug. 7.—J. H. Williams, a Florida turpentine man who was brought to Valdosta for medical attention, suffering from a blow on the head and a stab in the body, inflicted by a negro workman, died at midnight Wednesday.

Williams' skull was crushed by the blow of a heavy stick and an operation for his relief was futile. The body will be buried at Mayday, Ga., his former home.

Brothers-in-Law Shoot Each Other

HUNTSVILLE, Aug. 7.—A. L. Wimberly and Milas Lanford, brothers-in-law, engaged in a fight with guns at Leighton as the result of a family quarrel. Wimberly was shot through the arm and Lanford in the head, the latter's wound probably being fatal.

The wives of both men are daughters of Squire Ayers. The trouble had been brewing some time.

Bullard Bound Over As Slayer of Spain

WAYCROSS, Aug. 7.—Following a long hearing before Justice C. H. Smith, Tom Bullard, 20 years old, held for the murder of Mack Spain, near Waycross, a month ago, was bound over to-day for action by the Grand Jury. One of the witnesses testified that Bullard tried to get him to kill Spain. The defense contended that the remark was made in fun.

The plea of suicide was not introduced but probably will figure in Bullard's trial if he is indicted by the Grand Jury.

Troops Go to Camp Without Equipment

ANNISTON, Aug. 7.—Without any equipment, their enthusiasm being their only asset, Company M of Oxford, Fourth Regiment, A. N. G., successors to Company I, Third Regiment, mustered out of service last year, departed Wednesday morning for the encampment at East Lake.

Its officers are Arthur Harrison, captain, a veteran in the service; J. J. Crow, first lieutenant; C. W. Humpheran, second lieutenant. It has 45 men.

Company D, of Anniston, commanded by Captain Lamar Jeffers and Lieutenants Dent and Powell, went to encampment with 38 men. They were accompanied by Dr. T. L. Smith, regiment dental surgeon.

Birmingham Slaying Case Set for Monday

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 7.—The preliminary trial of Ed Ellis, charged with the murder of Loule Rooney, was passed over to-day until Monday afternoon when both sides will be ready for trial.

There was a report this morning that the defense was trying to get a trial at this time because a delay would be costly inasmuch as the Grand Jury will meet the first week in September, and if an indictment is returned it would take a long while to get the prisoner out.

Solicitor Heflin will be on hand to prosecute. Several witnesses have been summoned. The prisoner remains silent, his only statement being that he is confident of being released.

60 Witnesses Called For Hearing of Moon

DOTHAN, Aug. 7.—Preliminary hearing of Robert Moon, charged with the murder of Joe Halsted near Memphis Church, six miles south of Dothan two weeks ago, is being held in Houston County Court. Both were prominent young farmers.

The courthouse is thronged to overflowing. About 60 witnesses are to be examined. Moon was in a row with Jasper Halstead, a brother of Joe Halstead, when the latter interferred and was shot by Moon, according to testimony.

The trial will probably last two days and will be one of the hardest fought habeas corpus cases ever in the county court.

Doctor Is Exonerated For Slaying Burglar

GAINESVILLE, FLA., Aug. 7.—James Splain, white, about 25 years old, was killed at the home of Dr. H. M. Owens, near Tyler. Hearing a noise as thought someone was breaking into the house Dr. Owens fired through the door. The body of Splain was found some distance from the house where he fell.

Splain had removed enough of the door casing to reach in and unfastened the door before he was shot.

Dr. Owens went to Newberry and surrendered to Judge Carter. A Coroner's jury exonorated him.

GETS 10 YEARS FOR KILLING.

MOULTRIE, Aug. 7.—Convicted a week ago of involuntary manslaughter as the result of killing J. M. Harnage, Jim Hart was sentenced by Judge Thomas to-day to ten years in the penitentiary. Jerry Hart, who was acquitted on a charge of murder but found guilty of carrying a concealed pistol, was sentenced to one year on the chaingang.

THOUSAND GIRLS SEE POLO GAME AT FORT

Milton Wise, (left) and F. A. Savage, (right) in action.

Atlanta Team Defeats Soldiers by Score of 2 to 1 in First Match of Sport De Luxe.

With nearly 1,000 pretty girls looking on and applauding, polo, the game de luxe of society, was given its Atlanta premiere at Fort McPherson Wednesday afternoon, and Thursday it was the all-absorbing topic of conversation among the society folk, especially the younger ones, who were thrilled with the riding and dash of the players.

The crowd that saw the Atlanta team defeat the Fort McPherson team, 2 to 1, was one of the largest that has ever been on the parade grounds at the army post. Scores of automobiles lined the sides of the playing field, and a tally-ho filled with hilarious young people added color and gayety to the scene.

The preliminaries, a tug of war on horses and wrestling on horseback, thrilled the spectators. Eight privates, four on a side, engaged in the tug of war. No saddles were used. Private Veotick, Todd, Purdue and Houston dragged Privates Flynn, Williams, Pryde and Reynolds from their horses three times in succession.

Wrestling Bouts Exciting.

The same men engaged in the wrestling on horseback. The contest between Todd and Reynolds was long and strenuous. Purdue and Flynn were evenly matched and it was nip and tuck all the way through. The match between George Veotick and John Pryle was applauded warmly. Pryle finally threw his adversary. At one time their horses galloped the entire length of the field while the wrestlers struggled.

Owing to some misunderstanding, four of the polo contestants failed to appear and the game was called at 4:30 with two men on a side instead of four. J. O. Seamon and F. A. Savage represented Atlanta, while T. C. Miller and Milton Wise represented Fort McPherson. After ten minutes of strenuous play the Atlanta team succeeded in driving the ball through the fort goal twice in quick succession. Not long afterward Milton Wise scored for the Fort.

More Matches Are Planned.

Dr. John A. McLeay, who refereed the game, stated that the exhibition was merely for the purpose of giving Atlanta a sample of what real polo would be like.

"The players are a little out of practice," said he, "but after the newness wears off should be able to give a better account of themselves."

No admission was charged, as this is against the law when Government property is used. It is expected that more games will be arranged.

Shiny Berlin Streets Amaze U. S. Tourists

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, Aug. 7.—American tourists here have succumbed to the cleanliness of Berlin, which they believe is unsurpassed.

"When I rode over the asphalt pavements the night I arrived," said one to-day, "I thought they were glass, so shiny and smoth were they."

The visitors also are impressed with the power-driven street cleaners, which flush and then wipe the streets, making them as clean as a kitchen floor.

MOBILE, Aug. 7.—From Tacoma, Wash., came A. E. Krouse to wed Miss Fannie Walker, of Citronelle, Ala., Thursday. The wedding took place at the German Luthern Church, the Rev. H. H. Henrig, officiating.

The marriage was the culmination of a romance begun several years ago when Mr. Kruse was a resident of Deer Park, Ala. About the middle of the month they will start for Tacoma to reside.

TRADE IS CALLED GREAT POWER FOR UPLIFT

Dixie Merchants Hear Stirring Addresses—Organization and Advertising Emphasized.

Business is a developer of character; business is a science; the great rewards of the future are for business men, and to them the world must look for the economic development which shall eradicate poverty, disease and crime.

These are the messages given by the speakers at the Southern Merchants' Convention Thursday.

It was the second day's session and Wednesday was a holiday for the delegates. Thursday night, at the Piedmont Driving Club, a reception will be held, the delegates going out in special cars which leave from the Equitable Building.

There will be another meeting Friday at which store management will be the theme.

Delegates are in Atlanta from Georgia, the Carolinas, Alabama and Florida. Key West men are the "travelers" of the gathering, having come the greatest distance.

Commerce Builds Character.

W. W. Orr, the first speaker on Thursday, lauded commerce as the means of developing the highest type of character and the keenest intellect. He cited Marshall Field, Harry Selfridge, John Wanamaker and John B. Stetson as examples, and who gave generously of their time, money and thought for aiding the uplift of their employees. He said:

"Marshall Field turned out fourteen junior partners as millionaries. Selfridge employs 10,000 persons who esteem it a privilege to be allowed to work under the ideal conditions he has created. Wanamaker conducts a school for boys and girls, and makes their promotion dependent on school progress as well as efficient work in his store."

Norman Johnson, editor of a Virginia trade publication, declared the merchant to-day must study his business closer than ever before. He urged organization extension.

He has no sympathy for the merchant who wails about the inroads of the catalogue houses.

"If you would climb down off the dry goods box, stop whittling, and go after business with good, hot letters, you would get the trade the mail order houses now get. You can undersell them," he asserted.

Emphasize Need of Advertising.

He spoke of the growth of jobbing in the South, giving as an instance the increase in the number of dry goods wholesalers from 25 to 105 in twenty years.

W. P. Riley, of Evergreen, Ala., talked about combating the catalogue houses.

Paul T. Harbor, of Commerce, Ga., editor of a newspaper, took "Aggressive Advertising" as his theme.

J. H. McGhee, of Lawrenceville, Ga., led the "Open Parliament" discussion.

"Advertising is an absolute essential to the local merchant," he declared. "We must turn trade from the mail order houses back to the local dealer through the greatest advertising campaign the country ever has seen."

Factory Gets Site in Pensacola at Last

PENSACOLA, Aug. 7.—Property owners in the western part of Pensacola to-day consented to the closing of the streets in order to provide a site covering three blocks for the erection of an excelsior factory, and the commissioners will at once order the streets closed.

This assures the erection of the big plant which has been negotiated for a long time. Wisconsin capitalists will establish and operate the factory. The obtaining of the site is all that has held back the enterprise.

Naval Stores Men to Talk Market Control

JACKSONVILLE, Aug. 7.—Producers of naval stores will meet in the Board of Trade Auditorium here Friday to consider plans of the adjustment of the market. Representatives from all parts of the producing belt arrived to-day.

Fear of the Sherman law has prevented organization to curtain production.

The factors will meet with the producers. Several new companies have been organized and the men interested are attempting to settle conditions by buying up over-production.

Sleuths Expect to Nab Robbers Soon

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 7.—Postoffice inspectors have three clews as to who robbed the mail car on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Tuesday night, and expect to make arrests within 24 fours.

Detectives have arrested eight suspects, but all were released, Clerk York failing to identify them.

The reward has been increased to $1,000 each for the men who robbed the car. Six inspectors are now at work in this district. The loss through robbery is estimated at less than $1,000.

Engineer Who Took Bandit Gets $1,000

MOBILE, Aug. 7.—Postoffice inspectors today gave to Engineer Alvin E. Baer a check for $1,000 for capturing Howard Edwards, a train robber, on board a train bound from New York to New Orleans on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad last September.

Edwards, after robbing the passengers and mail car, went to the engine. Catching him off his guard, Baer struck him with his oil can and almost killed him. The railroad company gave Baer $500 as a reward.

ECZEMA ITCHED AND BURNED

On Face and Head. Was Very Disfigured. Hair Fell Out. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Falmouth, Ky. — "Two years ago I was troubled with skin and scalp troubles. I would have pimples that would break out and form sores on my face and head with terrible itching. The eczema on my face and head itched and burned and when I scratched it, it made sores and I was very disfigured for the time being. My head became so sore I could not touch it with a comb; it became a mass of sores. My hair fell out gradually.

"After trying several remedies without much benefit a friend that had been cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment told me and I decided to try them. I was afflicted about a year before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using them three weeks I was getting better and in less than three months, after using eight cakes of Cuticura Soap and five boxes of Cuticura Ointment, I was completely cured of eczema." (Signed) Frank Vastine, Dec. 12, 1912.

If you wish a skin clear of pimples, blackheads and other annoying eruptions, hands soft and white, hair live and glossy, and scalp free from dandruff and itching, begin to-day the regular use of Cuticura Soap for the toilet, bath and shampoo, assisted by occasional light applications of Cuticura Ointment. No other method is so agreeable or economical. Sold everywhere. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

AVIATOR CODY IS KILLED IN FALL IN ENGLAND

Plunges One Thousand Feet to Death With Passenger—Sons See Tragedy.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ALDERSHOT, ENG., Aug. 7.—Colonel Samuel F. Cody, a former citizen of the United States and one of the most famous aviators in the world, and a passenger were killed here to-day while testing a new aeroplane over the military aerodrome.

These two fatalities bring the aviation death list up to 305.

Colonel Cody was one of the pioneer airmen and was commissioned by the British Government to build up the aviation corps of the Imperial army, which he fulfilled to the perfect satisfaction of the War Office. Cody was a relative of William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody, and in appearance he resembled the famous American.

Protested Taking Passenger.

The name of the passenger who was killed with Colonel Cody was Evans. The aviator protested against any one accompanying him, saying that he was going to try out a new machine and the risk would be great. Evans was insistent and finally Cody relented.

After a "grass-cutting" circuit Cody shot the machine upward and soon the car was 1,000 feet in the air. Spectators on the field saw the machine begin to wabble as though one of the planes had buckled. Suddenly it turned over on its side and plunged downward. With a crash the machine struck the earth and the petrol tank burst, scattering the fuel over the bodies of the two men.

Cody and Evans were picked up and rushed to a hospital in the cantonments, but the spark of life already had been extinguished.

How He Got His Title.

The manner in which Cody got his title of "Colonel" is interesting. Shortly after King George ascended the throne he wrote a note of congratulation to Cody for some air feats he had performed and called him "Colonel" Cody, evidently confusing him with "Buffalo Bill." The aviator seized the opportunity to acquire a title and since had styled himself Colonel Cody.

Last August Cody won the British army flying tests, taking $25,000 in prizes.

Before taking up aviation Cody was an aeronaut of note and once made a balloon flight over London.

He planned a trip to India in an aeroplane-balloon of his own invention, but his death cuts off all plans for the future. Cody is survived by a widow, who, like her husband, has always been fond of excitement and adventure. She was the first woman in England to make a flight in an aeroplane and is herself an accomplished air car driver.

Colonel Cody came to England from the United States about ten years ago and became a naturalized British subject.

The ill-fated machine was of Cody's own construction and he had intended to attempt a flight across the Atlantic ocean in it.

Two sons of the dead aviator witnessed the tragedy. One of them rushed forward and threw himself on his father's body.

Medical examination showed that Cody's neck had been broken while one arm and several ribs were fractured. One rib had punctured the lung.

Chicago 'Trilby' Has Most Perfect Foot

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The center of attraction and interest at the meeting of the National Association of Chiropodists at the Hotel Marlborough to-day was the American "Trilby," personified in Miss Clara S. Houston, of Chicago.

Seated in an extremely business-like looking office, Miss Houston exposed for the benefit of visitors her well-shaped foot, which by all experts has been unanimously declared the most perfect in America.

Calls Mosquito King Of Disease Carriers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Mosquitoes were to-day branded the "king disease carriers" of the insect world by Dr. Nelson Du Vaj Breicht, formerly of the Public Health Service.

Besides their implements of torture, these insects carry about with them germs of leprosy, yellow fever, malaria, breakbone fever, typhoid and five other brands of malady. Dr. Breicht awarded the gnat second honors as a disease carrier.

AMERICANS SHOT IN SACKING OF DURANGO

Stores Belonging to Foreigners Burned by Rebels—Women and Girls Attacked.

investigator, Mr. Lind is commissioned to act as a peacemaker between the leaders of the various revolutionary factions, but it is doubtful if Huerta will allow an alien to act in such a capacity.

Huerta Has New Slogan.

"Mexican affairs for Mexicans," was the laconic remark made by President Huerta to-day to his followers in Congress who called at the National Palace.

Previous to the statement issued to-day by the Mexican Minister, the United States Embassy had received the following note from Secretary of State Bryan:

You may say to the Mexican Foreign Minister that Governor Lind comes to Mexico on a mission of peace, and that President Wilson feels that his presence there will contribute toward a settlement of existing difficulties.

The Mexican Government should await the President's communication and not give weight to misrepresentations published in sensational newspapers

Not only in this city but throughout the entire republic increased antagonism toward Americans is being shown Huerta and his advisers believe that if war should be declared it would result in making a unit of all the revolutionary bands so that a solid front could be presented against any foreign foe.

Within the past seven months the Government has placed orders for 100,000 rifles and a commensurate supply of ammunition, as well as mountain and field guns.

President Wilson Will Not Tolerate Insult to Lind.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The American Government and the Huerta government apparently have locked horns over the status which John Lind, the President's special envoy to Mexico, will have when he arrives at the Mexican capital.

Reports from Mexico City show that General Huerta is preparing what officials term a "grandstand" play over the coming of Lind, in an effort to force the latter into an embarrassing position.

Administration officials say that the sensational statement emanating from Huerta to-day is in the nature of a blind, by which he hopes to scare the United States Government out of an aggressive campaign for mediation. They laugh at reports that Mr. Lind will not be treated by Huerta with due respect when he reaches Mexico City.

Anxious as is the President to keep hands off Mexico, officials say he will not tolerate any premeditated humiliation to his personal representative.

Secretary of State Bryan declined to comment in any way upon the reports from Mexico City to-day concerning the decision of President Huerta to bar Governor Lind from Mexico. The Secretary said that the State Department has not been informed of his intended action and that, even if it were informed of it, the United States Government could not take a decisive move until after the personal representative of the President has actually been deported from Mexico or otherwise denied by President Huerta's government.

Senator Bacon, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, refused to make any comment on the ultimatum issued by the Mexican Foreign Minister.

Americans Shot in Sacking of Durango.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—M. A. Leach, a business man of San Francisco, told Secretary of State Bryan to-day a thrilling story of the sacking of the city of Durango by Revolutionists on June 18, which he witnessed.

The entire city was looted, he says, and German, French and American stores were burned, entailing a property loss of more than $5,000,000.

Scores of Mexicans were shot down and dragged through the streets.

Roger Palmer, an Englishman, employed by the Mexican National Railway, was killed because he failed to open a safe.

Carlos Bombrandis, mining man, and L. W. Elder, both Americans, were wounded by a bomb used to force the doors of the McDonald Institute, where many of the foreigners had assembled for protection.

H. W. Stepp, an American civil engineer, was shot through the leg because he failed to deliver 500 pesos he did not have.

Leach says a number of women sought safety in the archbishop's palace but the bishop was taken prisoner and held for ransom of half a million pesos. Hundreds of women and girls were outraged.

Special Envoy Leaves Galveston on Battleship.

GALVESTON, Aug. 7.—John E. Lind, special representative of President Woodrow Wilson, sailed at 10 o'clock this morning on the battleship New Hampshire for Vera Cruz, Mexico. From Vera Cruz he will go direct to Mexico City to lay the message of President Wilson before President Huerta of Mexico.

Former Governor Lind was accompanied by Mrs. Lind. They were delayed by a railroad wreck. A special interurban electric car brought them from Houston.

At the outskirts of the city an automobile was waiting. Mr. and Mrs. Lind entered the machine and were driven to the water front. A tender from the battleship took them to the vessel, anchored four miles out.

On board the special envoy refused to see visitors. On the way from the interurban to the water front Governor Lind consented to see newspaper men.

"I do not know how long I will remain in Mexico," he said. "I do not expect to be offered the permanent Ambassadorship, and if I am, the offer will be declined. My mission in Mexico has already, I believe, been well defined, and I will communicate with no one except the President."

When told of President Huerta's statements as appearing in press dispatches to-day, Governor Lind said he could form no opinion on this matter until thoroughly acquainted with all the facts in the case. Further than that he refused to comment.

Before departing from Galveston, Governor Lind was in communication with the State Department at Washington.

Scholar Says Devil Designed New Styles

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Current fashions in women's gowns are incentives to immorality, according to Professor Allan Hoben, of the University of Chicago School of Divinity, at the Sunday school institute in session at the university. The latest styles, he said, were the devil's designs.

"For any woman to be well dressed to-day," he said, "is for her to be measurably harmful. Women have distracted attention from their faces to their forms. This is distinctly unfortunate."

Militants Active as Mrs. Pankhurst Sinks

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ABERGAVENNY, ENG., Aug. 7.—Militant suffragettes burned a cricket pavilion and a hayrick near here to-day.

Before the pavilion had been fired a big banner was stretched on poles near by, on which was the inscription: "Just to Remind You That Mrs. Pankhurst Is Dying."

STAID OLD NORWICH, TOO.

NORWICH, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Following the appearance here of women wearing a skirt slit to the knees and with nothing under it but flesh-colored tights, Mayor Silas W. Berry has ordered the arrest of any woman who wears the slashed garment.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 7.—Mayor Bading has declared that the women of Milwaukee may wear any kind of bathing suit as long as they wear as much as the men do.

SECOND MOVE TO RESCUE WEBB BILL FAILS

Resolution, Backed by Anti-Slaton Forces in the House, Ruled Out of Order.

A second attempt to rescue the Hixon-Searcy (Webb) bill from the subcommittee to which it has been assigned by the Temperance Committee, was made Thursday morning by Representative Kidd, of Baker County, backed by the combine of the dry and anti-tax reform forces that has declared war on the Speaker and the Governor.

The attempt, which if it had been success would have effectually blocked legislation, was frustrated by Speaker Burwell, who ruled that Mr. Kidd's resolution calling out the bill could not be introduced under the rules of the day. The resolution was prevented from getting to the desk of the Clerk only by about ten minutes. Shortly after the House convened Blackburn introduced an "order of the day," which failed to provide for the introduction of resolutions. Five minutes later Kidd tried to introduce his resolution.

"Resolutions can not be introduced at this time," said Speaker Burwell.

"This is a privilege resolution," Mr. Kidd insisted.

"It makes no difference what kind of a resolution it is," replied the Speaker. "The order of the day has been adopted and resolutions can not be introduced."

The following bills were introduced into the House Thursday morning:

By Wheatley, of Sumter—A bill to appropriate $13,286.80 to pay for work already done on the State Capitol and the Executive Mansion, and work that is to be done.

By Hart, of Warren; Allen, of Blasscock, and Turner, of Bulloch—A bill regulating the inspection of asylums, sanitariums and convents.

Negro Sentenced to Death for Attack

WAYCROSS, Aug. 7.—For attacking a white woman at Homerville early this year, Lige Lane, a negro, will hang at Homerville September 10. He was sentenced at a special session of the Clinch Superior Court to-day by Judge T. A. Parker.

Lane's motion for a new trial was refused by Judge Parker and the Court's position upheld by the Supreme Court.

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 7.—The Masons of the Ninth Congressional District are in annual convention here. Sixty-nine lodges are represented by 100 delegates.

The address by Thomas H. Jeffries, of Atlanta, Past Grand Master, was a public part of the program at Brenau Auditorium Wednesday.

On the stage was Colonel John E. Redwine, of Gainesville, one of the oldest Masons in Georgia. He has held many offices of honor. He is about 80 years old.

Dr. J. C. Bennett, of Jefferson, presided. Business and secret sessions were held, with initiation. A trolley ride to the river with a watermelon cutting was one feature of the entertainment.

K. of C. Debate on $1,000,000 Offices

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—A proposition to move the national headquarters from New Haven, Conn., to Washington and erect a $1,000,000 building at the Capital was the principal subject for consideration at the closing business session to-day of the thirty-first annual convention of the Knights of Columbus. It was predicted the proposition would be defeated as the various councils have rejected the measure in a semi-referendum vote.

Changes in the insurance laws also were considered. One plan was to reduce the assessment paid by the older members, and the other was to issue a paid-up policy to all members who are 70 years old.

The Numbers 4, 11, 21 in Georgia

When you have destroyed the boy's pride and honor,
When you have killed the soul of the girl,
This year,
Next year to adopt
Probation and a home for the wayward
Will not help them or their mothers.
For those now in need we plead.

Cholera serum for hogs has been provided.

Good!

Protection for cows from the tick—

Fine!

Expert knowledge of bugs and chemicals to save and foster our crops—

Splendid!

Higher education for men and boys—

Excellent!

But the miserable—the unfortunate—those who are slipping down into the slime which underlies—what of these?

In one home lives a mother. Her boy cut four stalks of sugarcane and with another boy stole them from a field.

Your court and ours fined them forty dollars apiece.

They were strangers, one nineteen and the other twenty. They had thirty cents between them and no friends. Eight months in our chaingang was their sentence for not having forty dollars each. A minister found them in stripes at Christmas. He got them out. Their parents had not known of their plight.

IS THIS RIGHT? You can—you will prevent the recurrence of such cases. Pass the Probation Bill. Give your Judge the power to save first offenders.

E. C. Branson of the Normal College at Athens states that crime has increased in Georgia since 1880 approximately twice as fast as the population.

Think of this. Then consider Illinois.

In that State, commitments have decreased forty per cent in the ten years since the adoption of the Indeterminate Sentence, despite the great increase of population. Half of the States have incorporated the Indeterminate Sentence in their laws.

Its aim is "to retain the convict in prison until he is fitted for freedom, making such fitness for freedom the condition precedent of his release."

IT WILL ENCOURAGE ROAD BUILDING.

To the fear of the lash it adds the far greater incentive, the hope of winning freedom by good work.

Senate Bill No. 11 provides for Probation. Senate Bill No. 21 covers the Indeterminate Sentence. The Senate has passed both of them without opposition. And the Judiciary Committee of the House has again favorably reported both Bills for passage in the House.

To incorporate them into the laws of Georgia only an opportunity for a vote in the House is needed.

With them goes House Bill No. 4. This provides the home for wayward girls. They to-day are the pressing problem in our courts. They are prisoners. Yet you would not place them in the chaingang or with hardened criminals.

Since you will not do that with a boy under sixteen for whom you provide a home, you can scarcely do it with a girl.

And yet the State has to care for them.

While providing serum for sick hogs, and a tick cure for cattle, and horticulture and entomology for our fields, and college training for our boys, surely you will provide for these, our girls.

The Prison Commission urges this. The Appropriations Committee and the Penitentiary Committee report favorably House Bill No. 4.

THESE NUMBERS, 4, 11 and 21, entitle these bills to a hearing.

But more than this, the meaning of these measures to Georgia and the unfortunate—that there is nothing in them for any one excepting the miserable at the bottom of the pit—these facts make certain, we believe, that they will be heard and made the law of our State.

Stop and think of the homes they touch.

And you will urge and give them the right of way.

Remember the purpose of the Crucified—

Jesus died, not alone that you might live, but "to give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death."

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

SENATE AWAITS BILL PROVIDING TAX REFORM

Miller-Anderson Measure Creating Office of State Assessor Expected to Pass Monday.

The Senate Finance Committee will take the firing line Friday in an effort to have the upper House pass a tax equalization bill revolutionizing the present State taxing methods. The bill, drawn by Chairman Miller and President Anderson, has been agreed upon by the Finance Committee and will be reported upon favorably Friday morning, and probably will be passed not later than Monday.

The bill provides for a State Tax Assessor to be appointed by the Governor for a term of six years, who shall determine if the counties are returning a just amount of taxable property. He will have all the powers outlined for the proposed State Tax Commission.

Should the State Tax Assessor and the county boards fail to agree the bill provides that a hearing may be held before an arbitration board of three members, one to be appointed by the County Board, one by the State Tax Assessor and the third by the Governor. The county boards are to consist of three members.

County Treasurers Hit.

Wednesday afternoon two important bills were passed; the first by Senator Stark providing for the permanent registration of voters, and the other by Senator Watts, giving to counties the option to abolish the office of County Treasurer.

The bill providing for the appointment of a special commission to dispose of the present Governor's mansion was defeated by the close vote of 21 to 19 after a heated debate.

Senator McNeill declared the bill gave too much power to the commission, as $500,000 of the State's money was involved. Senator Harrell declared that a lobby of land dealers favoring the bill had existed a long time.

New Registration Bill Passes.

Senator Stark's permanent registration bill was passed after a vigorous fight by Senator Harrell who declared the measure would tear down the registration laws which keep the negro from voting.

In reply Senator Miller assured the Senate that there were sufficient provisions in the bill to eliminate the negro vote just as it is eliminated now. Senator Burtz's amendment, which was passed, provides that the voter shall be entitled to permanent registration unless registered under the provisions of subsections 1 and 2 of paragraph 4, section of the Code of 1910.

These clauses qualify for voting the Civil War and the Indian war, the Civil War and the Indian Wars and all persons legally descended from these.

Airman's Aide Sues Him for Losing Race

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., Aug. 7.—Roy F. Donaldson, who entered the recent international elimination balloon race at Kansas City, was the defendant today in an unusual suit, the aftermath of Donaldson's mishap in the air race.

Emery F. Lanning, who was aide to Donaldson, filed suit for the return of $150 he contributed as his share of the expenses of the flight. Lanning asserts Donaldson became afflicted with "cold feet." Donaldson in return states Lanning spoiled the flight by dropping several bags of ballast when he was trying to correct a mistake he (Lanning) made.

SAVANNAH EAGLE HONORED.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 7.—Colonel William L. Grayson, of Savannah, who has been active in the affairs of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, has been nominated for Grand Chaplain at the annual convention now in session in Baltimore.

ONION IS A STRONG NAME!

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Edward D. Onion got permission from Justice Guy to change his name to Bartlett, on the plea that his right name brought upon him "jokes, banter and sarcasm."

Woman Admits She Defrauded Veterans

CHATTANOOGA, Aug. 7.—Lying on her deathbed, Mrs. J. K. McCloud, of Charleston, S. C., widow of a Confederate soldier, admitted to-day to J. A. Rector, an attorney of St. Louis, that she had secured thousands of dollars from Confederate organizations of the South posing as a widow of the late J. K. Alcorn, former Governor and United States Senator of Mississippi.

Mrs. McCloud, who is 90 years of age, operated as an imposter in practically every city in the South. Attorney Rector is a grandson of the late Governor Alcorn and tracked the woman all over the South.

Cartersville Pays Sam Jones Tribute

CARTERSVILLE, Aug. 7.—To-morrow will be Sam Jones Memorial Day at Sam Jones Tabernacle. The 10 o'clock service will be given up to the life and work of the evangelist. Talks will be made by "Gypsy" Smith, Bob Jones and John Callahan. This is one of the feature services of the meeting and will be an annual affair.

To-morrow afternoon services will be held at which negro people will have an opportunity to pay tribute to the famous revivalist, who was a great friend of the race.

Non-union Men May Prolong Mine Strike

CALUMET, MICH., Aug. 7.—Indications to-day were that the strike of 18,000 copper miners in the Calumet region would be prolonged.

The non-union miners are united now and are demanding the same concessions from the operators as the striking union men. They wanted an eight-hour day and a minimum wage of $3.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XVI.

THE first year of Mary Danforth's life in the business world dragged its dreary length away. In the beginning there had been some excitement attendant upon the new experience, and this had buoyed her up. To be sure there had been a great wrench in giving up the home of which she and her mother were so fond, but for her mother's sake the girl put her own griefs in the background. She remembered that once, several years ago, her father had said to his wife:

"She is singularly dependent and sensitive, Mary. If anything should happen to me you must look after her as tenderly as I have tried to do. I depend upon you for that."

The words recurred to the girl often through the wearisome months that followed upon her father's death, when she saw the elderly woman's sad face grow sadder as she tried to accustom herself to changed conditions. When Mary left home each morning it was with the appreciation that her mother must be both housekeeper and houseworker, and that she was not used to such toil. The girl would rise early in order that she herself might make her own bed and set her own room to rights, then help about the breakfast.

Yet in spite of these efforts on her part there were the dishes to be washed, the tiny flat to be swept and dusted, and the meals to be prepared by the widow. Mary would urge her to eat a substantial luncheon, yet she always feared that her own ideas of what "substantial" meant in this connection and her mother's interpretation of the word differed as soon as the daughter was out of sight. Therefore she would order from the butcher on her way downtown a chop or some other nourishing tidbit for her mother. Delicacies were a strain upon Mary Danforth's small purse, but her parent's strength must be kept up. Yet, do what the girl would, she was sure that when night came the patient widow was too tired or too depressed to sleep. She also knew—better than did her mother—that she herself, often went without food at the noon hour to save the price of a luncheon. A few crackers slipped into her bag before she left home would take the place of the noon-day meal.

In spite of these economies the family finances were very low. More than once Mrs. Danforth had been forced to use a little of what she called her "insurance money" to get herself some necessary bit of clothing. Each time this was done Mary was impressed afresh with the hopelessness of her efforts to support two women decently on her small salary.

Business was dull in all branches, and real estate was not booming. James Pearson, her employer, had a wife with enough money in her own right to support herself and her husband, so the success of his enterprise was not essential to his existence. He kept the business because he liked to feel that he was not dependent upon his wife. Mary often wished fervently that she was in the employ of some man to whom work was a necessity and who would be energetic and progressive. But she dared not abandon a certainty for an uncertainty.

It was at this juncture that Herbert Fischer ("Herf" as his friends called him), got into the habit of coming to Pearson's office to talk over a possible real estate deal. At first the girl barely noticed him, so absorbed was she in the many duties that fell to her lot, for she soon discovered that she was not only stenographer and typewriter, but assistant bookkeeper and office boy combined. Night found her jaded and nervous, looking forward eagerly to the elder from Gordon Craig that often awaited her when she returned to her flat.

Twice Fletcher, who had remained in the inner office talking to Pearson, came into the outer office just as Mary was putting on her coat and hat, and offered to escort her to the elevated where she was to take the train uptown. Both times the girl had declined coldly, yet the second time she did this her heart smote her as she saw his disappointed expression. Somehow, she thought, as she walked toward the Cortlandt street station, the look in the man's eyes reminded her of that in a faithful dog's eyes. She was so lonely that even the thought of a dog's devotion would comfort her, she said to herself with whimsical humor. Yet this man Fletcher was a common kind of a person, she decided—not a bit like the men of her world.

Then she smiled bitterly. At least not like the men of the world she used to live in. Perhaps, after all, a girl who worked in a little office on a mean salary, and who lived in a five-room apartment in the poorest section of West Eighty-fourth street, could hardly afford to sneer at anything just because he was not educated to the standard that had once been hers, and had not the refinement that was traditional in the circle of which she had once formed a part. That circle had melted away since her father's death. She could not keep pace with her friends, and one by one they had dropped out of her life. She did not care, she muttered untruthfully to herself. When one declares bitterly that she "does not care" that is usually when really "cares" most.

And that night there was no letter from Craig. He usually wrote her three times a week, but this was the fourth time in six weeks that his letter had not come on the day that she expected it.

"Never mind, dearest," she said to her mother, who commented on the non-arrival of the expected epistle and who remarked that "it was queer that Gordon had not written regularly lately," and "hoped that nothing was wrong" with her daughter's lover. "Gordon and I understand each other, and he is extremely busy just now. One can hardly expect a man to write as often as a woman does, you know."

Her mother kissed the speaker tenderly. "That's so, darling," she assented, "and the busier Gordon is the more work he will do, and the sooner he will come for you, dearie—and for me."

"Yes!" the girl assented, bravely. "That is true, dear mother."

But in her heart she was saying: "How can I stand this kind of life unless he comes soon! How can I stand it!"

Mother and Father

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

FATHER'S idea of good luck is winning a lottery ticket. Mother's is to find a pair of stockings that do not need darning.

It is father who hopes at the beginning of impracticable schemes, and mother who cheers when things go wrong in the end. It is father who is depressed and exaggerates what is lost, and mother who is cheerful in counting what is left.

Mother is proud to be told that the homeliest child in the family resembles her. Father isn't.

Here of late the children put the dependence in father's money that some generations ago was put in mother's prayers.

It is father, never mother, who expects the children to assume the burden as they get older. Mother, if she had her way, would carry it till the day of her death.

Once upon a time father called mother and the children together and said in the very wisest way: "This house would be conducted better if business principles were applied. Your system," frowning at mother, "would throw a peanut stand into the court of bankruptcy. I have opened what I will call a trouble book. Every member of the family will make entries in it of troubles, worries, etc., and we will meet at the end of the week to discuss the entries and act upon any suggestions for reform."

Then he frowned at mother again and went to his office. A week later the trouble book was opened.

"Mother won't let me go swimming." "Mother refuses to let me have any spending money; I suggest a needed reform here." "Mother wouldn't let me wear my best dress to play in," etc., etc., appeared in the handwriting of the children, and in father's handwriting there appeared: "Mother had the steak too well done"; "Mother is neglecting her personal appearance; I recall twenty years ago when she took more pride in doing her hair"; "Mother asked for money to-day to get Willie new shoes; I must look into her extravagance," etc., etc., from father and the children, but not one complaint from mother!

Passing between Scylla and Charybdis is no feat compared with the daily position of the mother whose children are always demanding more money of her, and whose husband is always telling her she must get along with less.

Before the oldest girl in the family is sixteen her father finds his throne tottering, and by the time she is eighteen he hasn't enough authority left to order a favorite old picture left on the parlor wall.

When father scolds and goes out slamming the door, the daughter wishes she could have a man like that for a husband about a minute, and she'd cure him, and her mother tells her she will have a chance some day.

It is not very creditable to those children who live and grow up, but in the years to come the mother finds her greatest comfort in the thought that the child that would have always been appreciative and kind, and never have hurt her, is the one that died when it was a baby.

Lady Constance Stewart Richardson on How to Acquire a Beautiful Figure Through Dancing.

The first figure is a dainty and simple pose, but it works beautifully into any of the dances that are so popular to-day, for, as we all know, dancing is coming into its own, and one of the most beautiful and widely neglected arts is now making a place for itself.

In this, as in so many dancing movements, the figure must be poised lightly on the ball of the foot.

The second figure (2B) is an exercise that must bring to the body the lightness of flying, and when once it is mastered you will find that you have true grace at your command.

FIGURE TWO.

By LADY CONSTANCE STEWART RICHARDSON.

Copyright 1913 by International News Service.

WHEN I was a child of 11 I used to go out in the gardens of my English home and study the statues and statuettes that decorated it. For hours at a time I used to copy the poses of those lovely classical statues, and I found the greatest entertainment and joy in trying to imitate those beautiful poses. This was the beginning of my dancing, and from the taste I acquired for classical pose and movement has come, I feel sure, whatever measure of bodily grace is mine.

Dancing is essentially feeling, and the expression of that feeling well up in movement and rhythm. It makes for grace and for strong, healthy bodies as no other form of exercise can, because no other form of exercise is as universally possible, as entirely within the reach of all, as this natural expression of the poetry we all have down in our natures.

To-day I am giving you two exercises that express the joy of living to a wonderful extent and give the body much to rejoice in, for they make for grace, for lightness and for the universally desired bodily beauty.

The First Figure.

The first figure is a dainty and simple pose, but it works beautifully into any of the dances that are so popular to-day, for, as we all know, dancing is coming into its own, and one of the most beautiful and widely neglected arts is now making a place for itself. This figure (1B) may be learned with the support of a wall, but it should be worked out in such perfection that it can be done with absolute poise. It will strengthen weak ankles and insteps while it is developing power for grace in arms and legs. Here is my method of practicing it: Point the toes of the right foot straight forward and balance the weight firmly on that foot. Now raise the left leg slowly from the floor, keeping the foot almost at right angles to the other foot. Lift the arms slowly, keeping the right arm held in one continuous line, while the left is curved at the elbow and raised at the wrist. The fingers are held lightly and well apart. The whole body inclines slightly toward the left when the left arm and leg are expressing the greater amount of action, and when the weight falls in the alternate pose I always recommend the body sways to the raised right foot.

This exercise, like all other dancing movements, must express lightness and joy, for dancing is dancing only when it comes as an expression of a happy spirit. It must express personality and yet conform to true ideals of grace and beauty, and thus in time it will bring the body to grace and beauty, too.

Figure Two.

The second figure (2B) is an exercise that must bring to the body the lightness of flying, and when once it is mastered you will find that you have true grace at your command. In this, as in so many dancing movements, the figure must be poised lightly on the ball of the foot. Just such simple movements as poising the body lightly on the toes or ball of the foot will help avoid civilization's arch enemy, flatfoot, and will help in the acquisition of a light, springy walk.

Poise the body lightly on the right foot, with a general inclination toward the right. Stretch the right arm up and out and droop the left arm from shoulder to just below the waist in one long curve. Even while the body is swaying in this position, lift the left leg from the hip and sway it backward from the knee, making one line from knee to toes and bringing the foot almost on a level with the knee. Now stand on the left foot and alternate from side to side.

This exercise is by no means easy to master, but there is no movement of which I know that can be more absolutely counted on to bring the figure into the long, graceful, undulating lines we all so much admire.

WARMED OVER LOVE

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PUZZLED writes as follows:

"I am a young girl 20 years of age and am deeply in love with a man eight years my senior, who reciprocates my love twice-fold. He has a very good position in business and is all that can be expected from a well-bred, respectable man. My only objection to him is that he is a widower and has two small children. My parents also object for this reason, and it is their only reason. If they thought the union would make me happy I am quite sure they would not stand in my way. I have met other young men, but can not seem to care for any of them."

The experience of wooing and winning a wife, of tasting the joy of being the head of one's own home, the creature comforts that domesticity means for a man, the broadening of heart and sympathies when the wife goes bravely alone to the shadow of death and returns with a child in her arms, the anguish of spirit when the mother falls sick and the desolation of the home when she is taken out of it forever, all tend to make a man more tender and considerate.

Though his home may have had its discomforts, he learns to regard it as his home; not his father's, or his mother's, but his own home. He also learned what an unimportant factor he was in its making, and realized the value of the WOMAN as he never realized it in his bachelor days.

That the experience is educational in a way that means more love, more consideration and an easing of the burden for the second wife, I am so certain that I wonder that the greater eligibility of the widower over the bachelor has not become an accepted fact.

Not Recognized.

Older women recognize it. Younger women do not because of the pretty sentiment they attach to being a man's first love.

The only objection to this man, then, is that he has two small children. Poor little motherless babes! I hope this little girl who has won this man's love has a heart broad enough to take in his children; a courage that will sustain her when, as a stepmother, she is maligned and misunderstood; and a charity that is big enough to cover their faults as effectually as if they were her own children.

Someone must mother the motherless, and the task is hard at its best, but one that is made light in the all-sustaining power of Love. If this man and his girl have for each other a love that will stand the strain, their union will be happy though he had ten children.

Learns Something.

His previous experience has made him dependent, tender and broader and considerate. He has two children and he knows that the woman he takes to the altar promises more than to be a loyal wife. She promises to be a loving mother to his children, to accept their resentment and ingratitude without complaint, and to know that hereafter to the end of her days criticism will be her lot.

He knows all this, and is grateful. On his first wedding day he regarded himself as a prize; the second time he goes to the altar with two children at his heels he knows, if he is a man and knows anything, that the prize is the brave-hearted girl who accompanies him.

He was confident on his first wedding day that he was dividing his joys. He knows on his second wedding day that he is dividing his burdens and sorrows, and the knowledge makes him humble.

You love him, my dear; you have met no other man you could love. He loves you, and I am sure your love is big enough to take in his children.

Nothing counts for as much as love. If you love, you know no burden. When you love, there is no sorrow too hard to bear. Marry him, go on loving him, and so long as you love him, you will be happy.

Not Alone.

An old Indian man, selling baskets, called at Mrs. Allen's one morning. He was very anxious to make a sale, and, after considerable parleying, he said:

"Make me an offer, madam, and see if I don't take you up."

Little 5-year-old Bertha was a spectator to the interview, and when the man made this remark she threw her arms around her mother, crying:

"Mother, if he takes you, I'll go, too."

What chance has sane, sensible reason against the fortified power of a wild habit?

Loss is unpleasant—but it never rises to the dignity of calamity unless it is the loss of self-respect.

There is more real joy in carrying out intentions than in merely planning to do it.

A good way to be at peace with the world is to expect little of it, to be unafraid of it, to see some good in it, and to give much to it!

Perspiring Feet Ache

The feet perspire abnormally in warm weather, get tired, ache, burn and jump with shooting pains. Poisonous exudations, moisture-soaked stockings, clogged pores, poor circulation, and the millions of foot nerves respond with burning, jumping and other torturing miseries. Dissolve Jacobs' Foot Relief Tablets in a warm foot bath, and instantly all poisonous matter is drawn out and the feet feel eased and rested. It prevents unhealthy sweats and odors, and keeps the feet feeling good. Unquestionably a wonderful preparation for the feet. 18c, by mail 20c.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

JULY 6.—"Tell me your name, Little Girl," said the woman who had rolled out such expressions as "the fundamental principles of liberty" as naturally as an entirely different type of woman rolls out the words "darlingest" and "cute," showing to which class she belonged.

Manette looked at me. I nodded my head. Then, to my surprise, the child told her real name—my name, and the name I was trying to keep secret.

"Blake," I hastily added. "Blake," she repeated after me.

The visitor looked grimly satisfied. Her suspicions were confirmed!

"You are Manette H——, the little heiress. You are not Manette Blake at all, and if you will come with me I will take you to your guardian. If you," turning to me, "interfere, I will have you arrested."

I laughed. "I hope," I said, putting fresh bait on my hook, and casting it out into the water, "that I will live long enough to see your sex in power. You are so inconsequential, so altogether unreasoning, and so cocksure that you are right that we will no longer be forced to turn to the joke books for amusement. The Congressional Records, in that glorious period, will cause a laugh to ring around the world."

"When the women are in power," she retorted, "idlers like you who go around insulting women will be flogged."

This was growing interesting. "I am not idle," I replied. "I am fishing. I have been fishing for three hours and haven't had a bite. That indicates persistence, steadfastness of purpose and ambition that will not be discouraged. As for being insulting——"

A Bluff Called.

I turned and looked her square in the face. "I don't see," I said, slowly, and as if giving it deep thought, "why you used that word. To insult you I should have to regard you or your intentions seriously. Believe me, madame, I had not done that."

I drew my line carefully in and packed up my box of fishing tackle. "Come, Manette," I said to the child, "let us go and be arrested. Are you ready?" turning to the very red-faced woman who stood beside me.

"If you will walk with me as far as the cottage I will get a horse, or do you prefer to have the child ride with you and have me tied to your horse's tail and dragged as captives were in the olden times?"

I had called her bluff! "I want nothing," in anger, "but to see that child restored to its guardian."

"Then rest easy," I replied, taking off my hat and bowing. "She is with her guardian now."

"If you are Mr. Max——" she began, and could say no more, for she realized what a spectacle she had made of herself.

I bowed again and turned away. A moment later she came running after me. "I hope," she stammered, "that you will forgive me, but your looks——"

I cut her short with a bow, and, picking Manette up in my arms, turned on to a narrow wooded path, and was soon out of sight.

"She is the kind of woman," I mused, "that thinks that to be a man is prima facie evidence of guilt. And the trouble is, her number is increasing."

A New Spot.

July 16.—Manette and I have found a new picnic spot, and for several days we had eluded the interloper, but on the fourth day I found her sitting on the porch when we got home. She had come, she said, to borrow Manette to take part in a tableaux to be given for the cause. "She would make," she said, "such a pretty little Goddess of Liberty. Besides," she argued, "the change would do her good. She needs a little civilization."

That made me smile. "Civilization" of the brand found at summer resorts, consists in sitting around on hotel verandas, comparing surgical operations and crochet patterns and branding as "bold" and "scheming" the woman who receives the attention of the only man at the place. I could imagine Manette being paraded around by the crochet cut-ups who would speculate on the price of her clothes, her uncle's wealth, and seek to secure through her childish frankness the key to my family secrets.

I refused. "The child," I explained, "is dearer to me than the Cause. She is in bed by 8 every night and has never been permitted to stay up late and grow feverish and excited taking part like a manikin in some foolish show. I know that mothers let their children do it, but I am not a mother. I am only a man."

"And the rudest man that ever lived," she retorted, striding out to get on her horse.

I did not offer to assist her. I never have. It would be inconsistent for her to accept.

July 28.—I am writing this while lying in bed, and somewhere in the room, I don't know where, for I can't easily turn my head to see, there is a trained nurse.

I do not know how she got here nor when. All I know is that her attentions are very grateful to me, and that there have been days when I seemed to be slipping away from everyone into nowhere, and only the firm, cool touch of her hand held me.

I think I was conscious of her hand and its helpfulness and soothing magic for days before I opened my eyes wide enough to look her in the face. Even now I do not know what she looks like, and am not interested. I lie for hours with my eyes closed, asking nothing more in life than that a pair of very strong hands, white and soft and gentle, be there to turn my head when the pain of one position is too great, to smooth my pillow, and I hear a voice somewhere murmur, "Poor boy, poor boy!"

July 29.—Richards is here. I do not know when she came. I only know that every few hours she comes from some remote place—the next room is remote in my present condition—and helps The Hands move me to an easier position, and that with her coming all concern for Manette has left me.

Fall Guy.

A gentleman in a club had formed the hopeless and harmful habit of taking too much to drink—alcoholically speaking—before he went home every evening.

"How does he know what time to go home?" asked a stranger in the club one night.

"It's this way," explained a member. "He goes to the head of that long flight of stairs leading to the street. If he falls down them, he knows it's time to go home."

A Ready Proof.

Father—Just fancy, Willie, all these fields used to be under the sea, and fish were swimming about where we are standing.

Willie—Yes, dad; here's an empty salmon tin.

When the Sun Rose

IT was absolutely still in the large, dark room where the patient lay.

A small lamp with a dark shade faintly illuminated the heavy silk curtains which covered the windows. In a corner of the room stood the little bed in which a small feverish body was struggling with death. A beautiful young woman was sitting at the bedside, her eyes anxiously followed every movement of the sick child.

Her costly evening gown showed that she had returned direct from some society affair. Her gloves and fan she had thrown carelessly on the table.

A few hours ago she had been sitting at the dinner table covered with flowers and surrounded by merry people, when a messager had arrived with the word that her little boy had suddenly been taken ill.

She hurried home as fast as her big car could carry her and now she was sitting here full of anxiety and despair.

Over and over again, she asked herself if it could really be possible that she was about to lose her fair-haired little darling. Oh no, God could not be so cruel! The boy was her greatest, her only joy! She realized that more than ever now, when she was in danger of losing him.

She wondered if she had always thought so, and her whole past life came back to her mind.

She saw herself as a happy, lively and spoiled girl, whose every wish was gratified. She saw herself surrounded by admirers and suitors, who flattered and envied her, but she never felt, not even for a short single moment, the real, true joy which fills and takes possession of your heart and soul.

No Love.

Then the learned and famous Professor Bornemann was introduced in her parents' home. He fell in love with the young, lively girl and she accepted him, though he was twenty years older than she.

Did she love him then?

No, unfortunately, not.

Rich as she was, she decorated her home with every possible luxury and comfort and filled it with guests, balls and dinners in endless succession.

For a time her husband let her do as she pleased, but one day he took both her hands and looked earnestly into her eyes, while he said in his gentle voice:

"Let us be done with all these empty pleasures, and let me see that I have a splendid little wife, who cares more for her husband and her baby than for all the dances and dinners in the world."

At first she stared at him in surprise, unable to understand him. Then she tore her hands away and answered angrily:

"I do not see how you can make such a request. You are old and have enjoyed all the pleasures of life, while I am young yet and have a right to enjoy myself."

He looked at her sadly, then he turned away and left the room without another word. And since then her life had been one mad round of pleasures, while her husband and child were left to take care of themselves.

And had she then found the happiness she sought?

No, not for a single minute.

* * *

The child in the bed moved again.

"Mama," the little feverish lips whispered.

She bent forward and stroked his hot forehead with her cool hand.

"Mama," he moaned once more.

Anxious Moments.

She felt a cruel pain in her heart. Had she done anything to deserve to be called Mama? She bent lower still and two big tears fell on the golden curls on the white pillow.

The door opened. Her husband entered, followed by the doctor. Her eyes sought his, which looked deep, deep into her soul.

The doctor felt the boy's pulse and shook his head gravely.

"I can not say anything now. I shall return in an hour, when the crisis is due. Until then we have hope." With a silent bow, he left the room.

The professor had sat down on a chair on the opposite side of the bed. His gray eyes looked at the little figure in the bed with infinite tenderness. The young wife fell down on her knees at her son's bedside.

The boy tossed about restlessly, while the minutes dragged along slowly.

In a quarter of an hour, then——

It was the same thought that filled the minds of husband and wife as they looked at each other across their little son's bed. Then both looked at the hands of the clock.

The child was still restless and feverish. Over and over again the mother stroked her boy's forehead with her cool hand. Then she let it slide down on the silk cover and inch by inch it crept closer to a strong, manly hand, until she took courage and touched it.

Their eyes met and a new sacred silent understanding was born.

* * *

The clock struck 6. The boy was resting easily, his breathing regular and his cheeks lost their feverish color. The crisis was over. The child's life was out of danger.

The professor stood up, went over to the window, drew the curtains aside and opened it. Then he went back to the bed and kneeled down at his wife's side.

The fresh air filled the room—and then the sun rose.

When the Whistle Blows

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

Nell Brinkley Says

YOU lift your eyes to the great clock in the white tower and see six o'clock marked with widespread hands. You hear the chimes and whistles clamoring over all the choked streets. Six o'clock! And the girls who smile all day long as steadily as any chorus girl is bidden to do, who haul down enough yards of stuff in a day to tie a sash around this vain old world, who try debutante dancing-frocks on fat relics who've seen forty summer moons or more, who get down endless "middies" for lean little girls, whose too flat pay envelope is sometimes the fortune of the family, all those who need and earn a thicker pay envelope and electric fans, all these bits of womanhood who go to make up the brave army that work in shops pour out of the employes' door and out under the clamor of "six by the clock." The blonde hat model, in her sleazy, slippery, little black gown, the close-tailored girl who sells suits, with her crinkly hair and big black purse like a baby kit-bag, all there—and HAPPY! Have you noticed that? And PRETTY! Have you noticed that? They have many good excuses not to be the first—but they laugh and laugh—and you hear little things like this: "He said to her—and she said to him." "Isn't that great?" and "What are you going to wear?" and "I had the time of my life!" And pretty—they'd have a heap of excuses not to be that, too—what with trying to stretch a bill longer and greener than it is, and standing on their two feet all day long, and smiling long and sweet at grouches. But they are. Among them you find the trimmest girls in town. And some of their faces make a society belle's wish it could go back to Heaven and get made all over again.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LEAVE THAT TO HER.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am twenty-one and in love with a girl of nineteen, and she loves me. Another man, who is much older, is trying to win her love, but she doesn't care for him. At present I am not settled, and it may take about three years before I can marry, while the other man can support her quite nicely. Have I the right to ask her to wait? S. J.

She loves you. She doesn't love the other man. If she is worthy of a good man's love she will wait indefinitely for him in preference to marrying a man she does not care for. Give her the right to decide, and see that you don't make her time of waiting too long.

SHE IS IN THE WRONG.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been keeping company with a young lady for the last seven months. About a week ago I escorted her to a dance where she met some of her old gentlemen friends, who received her attention all the evening. When the time came to go home I asked her to go home with me, but she refused, saying she could go home with others. I then left her. Did I do proper in leaving her? Who should apologize? RICHARD.

She refused to let you escort her home though you had taken her there. Under the circumstances there was nothing for you to do but leave her. You owe her no apology.

KEEPING EVERLASTINGLY AT IT

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am nineteen, and dearly in love with a girl two years my junior, whom I have known for the past seven years. Some time ago she met a young man at a wedding, and has since been devoting all of her attention to him. I love her dearly and would ask you how I can win her love again. F. B. T.

Your seven years' devotion merits better returns. Be devoted and persistent, and if this fails change your tactics to indifference. The appearance of your rival stirred you. Has it occurred to you that if she found she had a rival it might renew her interests?

YOU WERE RIGHT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am sixteen and have been keeping company with a young man about three months. He has bee sick and he telephoned and asked me to come and see him. I told him it was improper for a girl to go to a man's house, and he got angry. Was I right? R. M.

Don't worry, my dear, you did just right. I don't admire him because of his request of his reception of your refusal. Never go to see a man under any circumstances unless your mother goes with you.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A little boy of four years of age, on noticing for the first time a lock of gray hair on his father's head, asked:

"Papa, why are some of your hairs gray?"

Thinking to drive home a moral lesson, the father answered:

"Papa has a new gray hair every time his little boy is naughty."

The child seemed lost in thought, but, after a pause, said gravely:

"Then grandpa must have had awful naughty boys."

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

But this young man was not one to be easily daunted. "Do you wish me to make up an article out of surmises?" he inquired. "A young girl of this city has died in a carriage and the people have a right to know how. Shall I say by use of the knife or——"

"Scoundrel!" came from Dr. Molesworth's lips. "You deserve chastising, but I shall simply see that you do, what you have probably never done before, tell the exact truth." And, turning to the detective at his side, he exclaimed, "Note what I tell the fellow. If he alters a word or interposes one item that is not borne out by what he observes and hears here, I will see that he is discharged from his place. I know what paper he is on, and I know the editor, and my threat is no idle one. Now let him listen. This young lady, Mildred Farley by name, was engaged to marry me to-night. Being an orphan without friends—pardon me, Mrs. Olney, I should have said relatives, perhaps—and not being well, she thought a private marriage at a hotel would be most suitable. I agreed with her and the arrangements were all made for the ceremony. But she was sicger than I supposed. The symptoms of fever which I had perceived in her this afternoon increased rapidly on my departure and when I returned, before the specified hour to marry her, I found she had fled, leaving an incoherent note behind, which so alarmed me that I went out at once, and jumping into my phaeton, drove up and down the streets searching for her.

The End of It.

"I did not find her, of course; and remembering an important prescription I had promised to send a patient of mine, I dispatched my driver with it, and was taking my phaeton home myself, when I suddenly detected a woman seated on one of the steps in Twenty-second street whose appearance struck me as familiar. Though no believer in miracles, I accepted this one without scruple, and, jumping from my carriage, went up to her and soon saw that I was right in supposing I had found Miss Farley. She was very ill, and did not know me. 'I am sleepy,' she said, and dropped her head on my shoulder as I lifted her up. At the same moment I heard the sound of breaking glass, as if a small vial had slipped to the sidewalk and been shivered, while a pungent odor arose to my nostrils so suggestive of the poison known as prussic acid that I felt greatly alarmed, and hastily carrying her to my phaeton I put her in and drove as fast as I could toward home. But soon her increasing pallor and general condition convinced me that death was near, and I stopped at the drug store on the corner of Nineteenth street, and, leaving her in the phaeton, ran in and asked one of the clerks to assist me in bringing her into the store. He consented, and we went back to the phaeton, but only to find that I was too late. She had died in my absence."

"Horrible!" burst from the landlady's lips, and even the callous porter looked shocked and a trifle ashamed.

"Where she got the poison," continued the doctor, "remains to be found out. Perhaps she bought it after leaving the hotel; perhaps she had had it with her there as a medicine. If so, she may have taken an overdose without being conscious of her danger. I only know I was her physician and had never prescribed it for her, nor did I know she suffered from any ailment that required such a tonic."

"And is that all? Will you tell me nothing more?"

"You have a very good article," remarked the doctor, dryly. "Leave something for the future."

And the reporter had to be content, and the detectives, too.

The reporter gone, Dr. Molesworth turned again toward Mr. Gryce.

"And who are you?" he asked.

"I was going to say I didn't know," answered the seemingly trembling old man. "I am in pain and want to get home. Will one of you help me down the steps?"

"In pain!" repeated the doctor, who was not by any means a hard-hearted man.

"Yes, rheumatism in the stomach, I think. I came for some opium, but I won't wait any longer. They will worry about me at home. Besides, I feel a bit better now."

His manner was so natural, his look so in accordance with the character he had assumed, that Dr. Molesworth suspected nothing and kindly held out his arm. But he found the alleged detective had forestalled him.

"Let me do this business," he entreated, with a great show of good-nature and respect. "I have nothing else to do and am used to old men." And, nodding graciously to his superior, he led him carefully out, whispering as soon as the lintel of the door had hidden them from view, "What orders? Dou kou smell anything wrong here?"

"Watch," was the quiet but emphatic command. "Note everything, even to the lifting of an eyelid, but say nothing and do not seem to watch."

Then as they reached the front door, "Don't be hurt if I send some one else here. They know your character too well." And with this the elder man went out with a slow and hobbling step. The pain and distress of that evening had not been altogether assumed.

Some Points.

MR. GRYCE had only a look to go upon, but it was a look that spoke volumes. When a man shrinks from the eye of a detective, he has something to conceal, and when that something is connected with the death of a young girl by poison, it behooves an officer of the law to follow that man till he finds out what that something is.

It was therefore with some interest that he received in the early morning a summons from the gentleman who held the office of Coroner at this time, to come down to his office and have a talk with him concerning this case of Mildred Farley; nor was it long before he presented himself at the place designated. He found the Coroner alone and the following conversation ensued:

"Well, Gryce," said the latter, "I have just come from the house where you played the part of a sick patient so successfully last night. May I ask how you chanced to be so prompt on the scene of action? Do you scent out mysterious cases or had you any knowledge which led you to that especial spot just at the moment when your presence was possibly most required?"

"Both," was the good-natured reply. "Something which I call curiosity, but which I am fain now to consider instinct, made me an intruder in Dr. Molesworth's home last night. But I had a bit of knowledge to start with that roused his curiosity, and it is of his I want to speak, if you think the subject worthy of discussion or Dr. Molesworth anything but what he seems, a good, honest and reliable man."

"I think," returned the Coroner, slowly, "any subject of this kind worthy of discussion; and as for Dr. Molesworth, he stands high, but so do a great many others whose testimony we are called upon to question every day of our lives. You need not stop on his account if you have seen or discovered anything which contradicts his story."

"What is his story?"

"Didn't you hear it? I understood that he told all he had to tell in your presence."

"He told two stories."

"How two?"

"One with his lips, another with his face; that's what makes me doubt him."

"You do doubt him, then?"

Gryce's Story.

Mr. Gryce tapped the table before him with an abstracted air, murmured some unintelligible words and looked as if he thought he had replied.

"Come," cried the other, "your reasons? You usually have good ones."

"Yes," assented Mr. Gryce, "I usually have, but in this case it would be hard for me to tell you just what they are. I feel that there is something back of this affair which we do not see, but I am not ready as yet to go any further or even express any suspicions—say that I have any. The facts which I have been able to glean in the short space of time we have had are meager, but interesting. Perhaps you can add to them; if so, our conference may lead to something. This is what I know." And he related first what Dr. Molesworth had to say about the matter the evening before. When he had finished, he asked, "Does this story agree with what he told you this morning?"

"Exactly."

"Very good. So much for so much. Now for the side lights. I saw the girl myself yesterday afternoon."

"You?"

"Yes; I saw her, but I did not speak to her, nor did I recognize her for the person she was. Indeed, I took her for another woman whom she greatly resembled. It was at the C—— Hotel."

"Ah!"

"I need not enter into any further particulars about this circumstance, as it does not concern the affair before us, which stands quite apart by itself. Enough that for reasons of my own I played the spy on this young woman and saw her when she thought herself alone, in the privacy of her own apartment. This was some time after noon and the great fact which I wish to bring before you is this, that she was then to all appearance (and my eye is accustomed to read countenances) perfectly happy and had not in face or bearing the least trace of sickness."

"That is a point, certainly."

"Note it, and then add to it this, that being still under the error of which I have spoken, I went back to the hotel some three or four hours later, and wishing to confirm a former suspicion, sought my vantage spot again, and in conjunction with another witness whose testimony you will not need, looked in upon this Miss Farley again, when I perceived that a great change had passed over her. But it was not that of sickness. From happiness she had descended to misery, and in her pallor and wild, unrestrained attitudes I could detect the expression of despair, but none of bodily suffering or mental disorder.

"Now, what had occasioned this change in her in a space of time so short? I think I can answer that it was an interview with Dr. Molesworth. For, according to his own story and that of the hotel clerk, he was with her for a half hour or so in the afternoon; and though upon going out he told the hotel clerk he was coming back in the evening to marry her, something in his determination or in what had taken place at their interview had destroyed in her every vestige of hope and happiness. For it was anything but an expectant bride whom I saw after this visit, as it had been anything but an anxious woman whom I had seen before it.

"So! so!"

EVANS ADVISES BOYS TO CADDY ON GOLF LINKS

By Chick Evans.

My business takes me to many offices throughout the city, and these little visits bring many interesting experiences. Not long ago, as I was entering a certain office, the boy near the door looked squarely at me for a moment, then brightened up and said: "Hello, Chick, don't you remember me? I caddied for you at Wheaton and you called me Walter." It was a very pleasant memory that the boy evoked and in a moment he was recalling some particular lucky shot that I had played and long ago forgotten. It was a great pleasure to me to be remembered by this young boy and it was a double pleasure to bring to mind once more a very happy occasion.

This little incident, however, merely leads to a subject very near to my heart—the future of the little caddie, for this boy is not the only caddie that I have met in offices in my tramps about the city. What becomes of the caddy when the short, too short, period of his school days is past and he must desert the links for other employment?

Caddie's Work Healthful.

I do not think that there can be a better all-around employment for the small boy than caddying. It is wholesome, outdoor work, and has brought health to many a delicate boy. Almost every other form of labor is injurious to the small boy, and, of course, caddy bags can be cruelly heavy, but as a rule, the player with a heavy bag does not choose a small caddy. The caddy enjoys fresh air and interest in a game which are all the advantages of play. It has always seemed to me that it is more interesting to carry a bag full of clubs when a fine golf match is in progress than to occupy a good seat at a game of baseball or football. From a physical point of view it is certainly better for a boy to tramp happily over yielding turf than to sit in cramped attitude on crowded stands to watch other men exercise. The caddy is really a part of the game; he has the same exercise as his employer; he sees the play and is interested, and is frequently consulted as to choice of club. Furthermore, he has the advantage of association with the members of the golf club, and these members are usually the leading business and professional men of the community.

Most of Them "Making Good."

There is a general belief that club members are dissipated, mere club rounders, in fact. My experience flatly contradicts this. The influence of the golf links is wholesome, physically and morally, and the boy fully enjoys its advantages. When the time comes for the caddy to go to work he usually obtains his first job through the good offices of a club member. I should not like to think that the majority of caddies become professionals, good as that work is, and I believe that only a small percentage do so. It is easy to trace from caddy to office boy, but in higher positions the caddy identity is sometimes hidden. I believe, however, that caddies are to be found in every walk of life, and I am sure that they are "making good."

White Sees Whitney Work Out

Frank Dons Mitts With Packey

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 7.—Has Charley White, pound for pound the best boxer in the game to-day, put one over on Frank Whitney, the fighting carpenter from Cedar Rapids, Iowa? This is the question fans who were at O'Connell's gymnasium yesterday are asking around sporting circles to-day. Whitney and White meet in Atlanta next Wednesday.

Several hundred fans saw Whitney and McFarland box three rounds at breakneck speed yesterday. They were also aware of the fact that Charley was an interested spectator. Probably every one in the gymnasium, with the exception of Whitney, knew this. Maybe, if Frank had known White was present he would have ceased in his grind. But, nevertheless, he didn't and the battle Whitney and McFarland put up was worth any one's time.

THE two boys had a merry battle. They mixed it at close quarters and boxed at long range. Packey wanted the work-out, as he is training for a busy fall campaign. Whitney is a rough and tough scrapper, just the kind McFarland likes to work with. The rounds were full of action and the crowd was on its feet during several stages of the combat.

Two glaring eyes kept watching every move made by the boy from Cedar Rapids. These same eyes also noticed that McFarland, who knows White's style of boxing better than any other ringman in the world, was mixing it with Whitney. He also was aware of the fact that Whitney's defense was kept high and that Packey was having the time of his life trying to get home his left hook.

NOW, every one knows that Charley's best blow is his left hook, followed by a right cross. Whether White beats Whitney or not the writer does not care to predict. But one thing is certain, and that is that Charley will have the time of his life hitting Whitney with this punch.

Whitney knows White's style, and he has solved a defense for the Chicago boy's favorite wallop. Charley saw Whitney box yesterday. Frank didn't know it. He showed everything he had in his scrap with Packey, and White was present to pick up a few pointers. When Whitney jumped out of the ring it was the first time he knew that his coming opponent was an interested spectator. But Frank is not one of those who worries over things of this kind. He simply smiled and stated that he would stroll over to Lewis' gymnasium to-morrow and watch Charley in action.

WHEN White left the gymnasium many of those who were present thought he was bound for home. White evidently wanted them to think so, but he had another errand on. Charley does his boxing at Lewis' gymnasium and that was where he was bound for. The writer knows Charley like a book and thought it best to take a trip to the "gym" and see just what the Chicago boy was going to put over.

Just as we surmised, Charley picked up "Special Delivery" Hirsch, a tough lightweight, on his way to work out, and it wasn't many more minutes before he was hard at work. And it was not long before Hirsch threw up the gloves in disgust. But the blow that made Hirsch quit was not a left hook to the jaw. It was a left to the stomach. It did not take Charley long to find out that he would have to perfect some other punch if he hoped to defeat Whitney. He wanted to try out a new punch, and it is dollars to doughnuts that it will be the left to the stomach instead of a left hook to the jaw that Mr. White uses against Whitney in Atlanta on August 13.

And wrote him a gladsome lay
Of fish that gleam in the woodland stream
And leap in the silver spray.
He sang of musky and bass and trout
And his little canoe of birch,
But the only fish he had ever pulled out
Was a little anemic perch.

He sang a song of the virgin wood,
Of the forest old and sere
Where the hunters creep in the runways deep
And wait for the nimble deer.
He sang of the moose that he longed to pot
As it called in its far-flung tones,
But the only thing he ever shot
Was a pair of the rolling bones.

He sang a song of the bounding main
Where the gulls and the mermaids play,
Of the whistling gale and the bulging sail
And the tang of the drifting spray.
He sang of the joy as he lightly tripped
O'er the sea on his bounding bark,
But the only boat he had ever skipped
Was a rowboat in Piedmont Park.

TWENTY-FIVE MILE RACE AT SAUCER FRIDAY

A TWENTY-FIVE-MILE race is to be the feature event of a swell-looking program that Jack Prince has scheduled at his saucer Friday night. All ten of the famous riders now here will start, and the way their machines are traveling these days it is almost a cinch that a new record will be established for the distance.

This race is for the championship of the South. Richards wants that title, so does McNeil and all the others. And an Atlanta boy, Harry Glenn, has a fine chance of copping this event, too. Harry showed marked improvement last Tuesday night, and he ought to be even better Friday.

By the way, Glenn is to be seen in another match race. He hasn't been defeated yet in a two-handed, or rather a two-machine event. But in George Lockner he is going up against a real racer this time. It will be a two-mile affair, two best heats in three.

The Motordrome Purse will open the card. There will be three heats of one mile and a final of two miles.

Following is the complete program for Friday night:

First Event.

Motordrome Purse (qualifying heats, one mile; final, two miles; winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat to qualify). First Heat—Richards, Lockner, Graves.

Second Event.

Motordrome Purse—Second Heat—Glenn, Renel, Swartz.

Third Event.

Motordrome Purse—Third Heat—McNeil, Lewis, Luther, Shields.

Fourth Event.

Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Lockner.
(Two-mile heats; two best in three.)

Fifth Event.

Motordrome Purse—Final heat.

GRIFFIN AND STRACHM QUALIFY FOR NET TITLE

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Clarence Griffin and John Strachm, of San Francisco, will meet Maurice E. McLoughlin and Thomas Bundas for the national tennis championship in doubles at Newport, R. I., on August 18. They won this right by defeating in straight sets Gustave Touchard and W. M. Washburn, of New York, Eastern tennis champions. The scores in the games yesterday at Onwentsia were 6-1, 8-6 and 6-4. The Easterners were outplayed and outgeneraled in every game.

FITTERY IN NO-HIT GAME.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Aug. 7.—Jake Fittery, pitcher for the Evansville club, of the Central League, yesterday shut out Terre Haute, not allowing a hit during the nine innings. Only four local players reached first, and two went to second, where they were left.

Baby Cross a Real Boxing Fan

Roots for Pa to Capture Title

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—Baby Cross is a boxing fan.

She is not familiar with left hooks and right uppercuts, but she does know her daddy is going to be the next lightweight champion of the world. And all one needs to be convinced is a two-minute talk with her.

Cross has won many friends through his earnest work in the ring, but he has no more enthusiastic admirer than his little daughter. "When daddy is champion" she will reach the mecca of all her dreams, and plans for that day fill many of her waking hours.

Of course, she never has seen daddy in a real battle, but often during training work she and her mother are at the ringside watching him in his practice bouts. She is fond of the rope skipping and weight pulling, and always is interested in the boxing which forms part of the daily program, but most of all she loves the frolic with daddy after his strenuous work is done, and the kiss which is sure to follow the fun.

Baby Has Warm Friends.

Many who have seen Cross work will be glad to see him lightweight champion if he attains that honor, but happiest and proudest of all will be his baby daughter.

Baby Cross was at her father's training camp while he prepared for his bouts with "Bud" Anderson and Matty Baldwin. The New Yorker won both contests, and he says that in future his little daughter will have to accompany him on his tours of the country. In this way he believes that he will never be defeated.

Cross is not the first boxer who has visited the coast that has had a baby daughter for a mascot. Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion, has two baby mascots and they are always at his training camp when he is preparing for a match. It is a pretty picture to see the Cleveland boy playing on the white sand at Venice with his two children while his young wife sits near by.

Cross has hopes of securing a bout with Champion Willie Ritchie. Leach claims that he would be able to defeat the Frisco boy over the 20-round route. He declares that he would surely knock out the champion if he could land his famous right-hand punch which has flattened many a famous ringman.

May Battle Joe Rivers.

If Cross does not get a date with Ritchie, he will probably be signed to clash with Joe Rivers, the Mexican lightweight.

Rivers is a favorite on the coast, even though he was beaten by Ritchie, and he would be a big drawing card if pitted against a boxer of Cross' ability.

In the meantime, Baby Cross is rooting for her dad to become champion. And maybe she wouldn't be glad if Leach would permit her to see a regular ring bout. But the hard-hitting lightweight says that the baby's charm might be broken if she occupied a ringside seat.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Charley White, the Chicago sensation, who meets Frank Whitney at the Auditorium-Armory on August 13, is doing his training at Nate Lewis's gymnasium in Chicago. Charley plans to arrive in Atlanta Saturday morning, one day later than Whitney.

* * *

This will give the fans several days to look over the rival lightweights. Both boys will complete their training grind here. Whitney will work at the Atlanta Athletic Club, while White is expected to train at Ponce DeLeon ball park.

* * *

Despite the fact that Gunboat Smith has won every fight in which he has participated in the past year, experts predict defeat for him when he tackles Jim Flynn on next Friday night at Madison Square Garden, New York. Most of the experts claim that Flynn's experience will bring him home a winner over the Easterner.

* * *

Both Ad Wolgast and Joe Rivers were sidetracked by Willie Ritchie. The champion has decided to defend his title against Freddie Welsh in a 20-round engagement at Vancouver on September 1.

* * *

Wolgast, however, appears to be the big loser. The Mexican has signed articles to meet Leach Cross in Tom McCarey's arena at Los Angeles, and it would not surprise many to see this bout draw as much money as the Ritchie-Welsh set-to. On the other hand, Wolgast must now look for a suitable opponent to meet.

Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, and "Knockout" Brown, of Chicago, may wage battle soon. Nate Lewis, manager of Brown, writes from Chicago that he has signed his protege to box Dillon at Indianapolis. The bout will take place some time next month at Terre Haute, Ind. They have agreed to weigh 158 pounds at 3 o'clock.

Mike Glover, the Boston lightweight, is earnestly striving to get a match with Jack Britton. The former showed much class in his recent mills in the "Bean Town" city.

Packey McFarland wants it to be known that there is no chance to drag him into the welterweight class. He says he is able to do 135 pounds and will continue to box at that weight.

* * *

Jack White has been made an even money bet against Johnny Dundee for the 20-round clash at Los Angeles on August 12. Since Joe Levy has taken hold of Jack he has shown a 50 per cent improvement.

Obstinate Acne Quickly Yields

Fine Remedy That Clears Skin of Pimples on Cheeks, Temples, Sides of Nose and Chin.

Acne attacks the glandular structure of the skin, more particularly those tiny glands that secrete fat.

And it is here that S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, is most active in its influence.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. the purpose of which it is to stimulate the cells in the tissues that thus select from the blood the nutriment that makes new skin and thus eliminates all irritants, acids and parasites that inflame the glands. There is a natural tendency of the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to throw off impurities, but where a persistent inflammatory process has invaded the skin, the natural repair work of the blood is interfered with. It requires the stimulating activity of S. S. S. to overcome such morbid conditions. If you have been troubled with acne, do not despair of a cure.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The great Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 181 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

D. MANCHESTER TOPS JORDAN BY 720 VOTES

Americus Catcher Dashes Ahead of Entire Field; Contest Ends on August 13.

DICK MANCHESTER, the Americus catcher, has hit his true stride and is now the favorite to win the Hearst Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian's contest to decide the most popular player in the Empire State League.

After running a neck and neck race with Otto Jordan, the Valdosta manager, for nearly two weeks, Manchester's admirers got busy yesterday and as a result Dick is leading Otto, his nearest rival, by just 720 votes. Latest figures give Manchester 4,828 votes, while Jordan has 4,108 coupons to his credit.

Race Over August 13.

The race is nearing an end. On Wednesday noon, August 13, the final votes will be totaled and the player having the most votes at that time will receive a handsome loving cup to be donated by this paper. Votes sent in after that time will be worthless.

This means that Manchester's rivals have just six days in which to overhaul the fast flying Americus backstop. The spurt that the Baseball Popularity Editor was expecting one of the players to take was grasped by Manchester. Now it is up to the followers of the contestants to get busy and catch Dick or bow to him as the most popular player in the Empire State League.

Others Can Win Out.

"Goat" Holliday, "Pat" Murphy and H. Champlin are the next players in the contest. They can still win out, but it will take a great deal of hustling to bring them up to an even basis with the two leaders.

Coupon clippers had better sharpen their shears for the final round. Remember Manchester can be overtaken. His admirers will fight doubly hard from now on, but one can not tell what will happen.

Don't hang on to your votes and let them pile up. Rush them in as soon as you clip them. Keep sending in your coupons, as every day counts.

The coupon appears in to-day's paper. Clip it out, fill it and rush it to the Baseball Popularity Editor, Atlanta Georgian, Atlanta, Ga. Remember you can get your friends and neighbors to help you.

CHURCH HEALERS BEGIN FIGHT ON MEDICAL BILL

Christian Scientists Take Campaign Into the House After Defeat in Senate.

Christian Scientists have begun a campaign against those provisions of the Medical Practice bill regulating their methods for healing in Georgia. The Senate has passed the bill and it is expected to come before the House soon. An amendment to the bill framed by Christian Scientists failed in the Senate by three votes.

The amendment is worded similar to the one President Taft added to the Medical Practice bill for the Canal Zone at the request of Christian Scientists there.

Edward H. Carman, of Atlanta, president of the Christian Science State Publication Committee, has sent to Christian Scientists all over Georgia a letter which says in part:

"Get influential members of your church to go to three or four of their good friends—influential men—get them to write or wire their Representative in the lower House of the Legislature asking them to support the following amendment which will be offered to the Medical Practice bill when it comes up:

This act shall not apply to any person who ministers to or treats the sick or suffering by mental or spiritual means, whether gratuitously or for compensation, and without the use of any drug or material remedy.

Mr. Carman Thursday refused to comment on the subject, saying he preferred not to even have it known that Christian Scientists felt any anxiety over the passage of the bill.

It is understood, however, that if the bill is passed without the amendment Christian Scientists will at once declare it unconstitutional and will cite as their authority the Constitution of the United States.

Diving Suit Nearly Coffin for Inventor

SANTA MONICA, CAL., Aug 7.—Tom Yamishi, from Japan, invented a rubber diving suit which, at its trial dive this afternoon, sprung a leak and nearly formed a coffin for the inventor.

J. L. Green, in a rowboat, picked up the Japanese as he was sinking and towed him ashore. After being rolled on a barrel, the inventor left for home.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

At the Forsyth.

At the cool and busy Forsyth Theater this week a seven-act bill is offered that contains a splendid mixture of variety. Every act is making good its indorsement. The Eight Berlin Madcaps, eight bewitching young misses, dance themselves into their audiences' hearts and execute some clever acrobatics.

VanHoven, in his dippy magician act, is met with roars of laughter from the start until the finish of his act. His antics on the stage with two little boys, whom he selects from the audience to assist him in a trick, creates one spasm of laughter after another. Robert Everest has the best monkey act seen on a local stage.

BILL WITHDRAWS TWO PER CENT U. S. BONDS

Senator Owen Offers Plan to Increase Gold Reserve and to Unify Currency.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—A bill providing for increasing the gold reserve in the redemption division of the Treasury, retiring the 2 per cent bonds and unifying the currency issues of the United States, was introduced in the Senate to-day by Senator Owen, of Oklahoma, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee.

The measure provides that the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed, as gold certificates come into the Treasury or subtreasuries of the United States, to have them canceled and the gold represented by such certificates transferred to the redemption division. In place of these canceled gold certificates, the Secretary is to issue treasury notes of the United States, redeemable in gold at the Treasury.

The Secretary is authorized, in his discretion, when requested to do so by national banks having outstanding national bank notes secured by 2 per cent bonds, to purchase these bonds at par and accrued interest, and to assume the redemption at par of the bank notes secured by these bonds, charging the amount of the notes against the proceeds of the 2 per cent bonds and paying the balance in cash to the national banks.

These 2 per cent bonds shall then be canceled, and a like amount of twenty-year 3 per cent bonds shall be placed in the redemption division and the annual interest on them credited to the funds of the redemption division.

When the national bank notes the redemption of which has been assumed shall come into the Treasury they shall be canceled and retired and in place of these notes the Secretary of the Treasury shall issue treasury notes in like amount.

The bill was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Castro Is Denounced By His Namesake

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Cipriano Castro, the would-be dictator of Venezuela, is not a real Castro, or even a gentleman, according to Victor Cita Castro, who reached here on the French liner La Lorraine, and who shouted indignation from all directions when delayed for a time by federal officials in the belief that he was a possible ally of the redoubtable Cipriano.

"I know why you are keeping me here," he said. "You think I am going to participate in the revolt down there. You wound me; you pierce my heart with your words. Oh, vile! He is a peon and a peddler; not a Castro or a gentleman."

Colorado Women Are Asking More Offices

DENVER, Aug. 7.—The victory of Mrs. Ella Flagg Young and the uprising of Chicago women in her behalf have aroused Chicago women voters, who state they will demand their full share of State and city offices.

Find Girls Lost in Snow on Mt. Rainier

TACOMA, WASH., Aug. 7.—Lost in the snow on the Cowlitz trail on Mount Rainier, two school teachers, Miss Kitty Roberts, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Bernice Royce, of San Francisco, were found by rescuers too exhausted to walk.

"SOME SEASON---BELIEVE THE DOC"

Tells How It Feels to Face Death by Rabies

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Facing death from rabies is a grim ordeal. This is the feeling expressed by Elsie Parish, noted writer of children's verses, who confidently awaits the outcome of treatment begun to forestall infection to which she laid herself open by sucking the wounds of two little girls who had been bitten by a rabid dog.

"Did you ever read an improbable story and then say to yourself that it couldn't have happened?" asked Miss Parish. "That's the way I feel. Of course, there is a horror in it all, but I just say, feeling as I do now, that I just know I'm not going to die."

Appeals to Wilson To Save His Teeth

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—Dr. John Grant Lyman, Federal prisoner, charged with misusing the mails, has made an appeal to President Wilson for a hasty trial.

In a night lettergram sent to Washington the physician complained that his teeth have become worn to a razor edge and he is unable to masticate his food.

BROUGHTON RIVAL OF KING IN LONDON

"In London you hear of but two people—King George and Dr. Len G. Broughton—and possibly you hear a little more of the latter than you do of the former," said W. S. Witham, Atlanta banker and church worker, in an address at the Wesley Memorial Church Wednesday night.

The subject of his address was the "Impression of Zurich," and he told of a trip through Europe in connection with the International Sunday School Convention. He declared that Broughton was following out the same line of work which he carried on in Atlanta; that he spoke fearlessly of things politic, and was the most talked of man in the English Capital.

Mr. Witham was discussing the praising of a man's virtues while he lived, and remarked that the trend of the times now is to praise the living more than the dead.

"Why, more people visit the tomb of Pasteur than they do Napoleon's. It is the man who lives for his country who is getting the praise of the world to-day, not the man who dies for it."

Catholic Women To Oppose 'The Cause'

BUFFALO, Aug. 7.—Organization of a Catholic women's league that proposes to counteract the radical tendencies of the women's movement, including their demand for the ballot, marked to-day's session of the German Roman Catholic Central Verein.

"The femininist movement," said Mrs. Joseph Frey, honorary president, "is being promoted by women whose views are decidedly Pagan. If their demands were to be realized the Christian family would cease to exist and woman's condition would lapse into paganism."

Sues as Wife Turns Tango Gown Model

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 7.—Pasquale L. Montani, a musician, says in a divorce complaint filed to-day that his wife told him she preferred to be a living model in a tango gown than live with him.

He says he is fully able to provide for her, but she became a model in a downtown department store, wearing a tango gown which he says in his complaint "is designed to display the leg from the ankle to the knee."

Bedridden 27 Years, Ossified Author Dies

WELLINGTON, MO., Aug. 7.—Thomas F. Lockhart, who spent 27 years in bed, practically in one position, is dead here. His joints were ossified so that he could move only his right shoulder and the middle joints of two fingers.

He wrote many books, among them an autobiography, which brought him enough to pay for a nurse.

Town Terrorized by Fatal Gun Battle

VALDOSTA, Aug. 7.—C. W. Cobb, the Hazlehurt real estate dealer who was seriously wounded in a fight with the Crawford brothers at Moniac, Ga., is doing well. It is believed now he will recover.

The fight, over a realty deal, occurred in the woods some distance from the town, and a report received here to-day from Moniac says that J. M. Crawford, who was shot dead by Cobb, and Cobb, apparently dead, were left out all night, the people in the town being afraid to go out and make an investigation. Another report that a Coroner's jury had rendered a verdict justifying Cobb could not be confirmed to-day.

Society Couple Divide House in Quarantine

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, leaders in the social set of Chicago and prominent in Eastern social circles, are living apart.

The separation is temporary, for it is believed Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor will have recovered from the chickenpox and be released from quarantine within a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor divided their mansion so that half the house belongs to Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor. The husband retained the other half and he meets social and business friends there.

Georgia Slayer Freed By 'Unwritten Law'

SAVANNAH, Aug. 7.—Another homicide was justified under the "unwritten law" here when a jury last night acquitted Lathrop George of the charge of murdering Henry McClellan, who was shot and killed while lying in the bedroom of Mrs. Fannie George, wife of the defendant.

George claimed self-defense in a personal statement to the court, saying McClellan was about to attack him when the fatal shot was fired, but his counsel relied almost entirely upon the theory of justification.

Accused Swindlers Face 28 Warrants

GREENSBORO, Aug. 7.—D. E. Moorefield and G. W. Bishop, arrested in Arcadia, Fla., on charges of cheating and swindling, are in the custody of Sheriff E. C. Hixon, of Greene County.

LONG LOST NANA FOUND IN HOME OF MORGAN

Manuscript of Zola Novel Sought For Years for French Government.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—A nationwide hunt by an American correspondent of Mme. Zola for the manuscript of Emile Zola's novel of Paris gutter life "Nana" has resulted in finding the original copy of this story in the J. P. Morgan collection in this city. "Nana" is the only one of the Zola manuscripts that is not in the possession of the French Government. The others were given by Mme. Zola. Neither she nor the collectors for the Government have yet been informed where the "Nana" manuscript is.

Government Owns Others.

J. P. Morgan said yesterday that the manuscript was in his collection and that according to his records it was the only one not owned by the Government of France. Mme. Zola was looking for the manuscript and that no request for it had ever come to him from the French Government or the widow of the novelist. Mr. Morgan said that he did not know what his attitude would be if such a request should be made. It probably will be made to Mr. Morgan within a few days by Guyot Cameron, formerly professor of French in Princeton University, who has been commissioned by Mme. Zola to locate the manuscript.

An Old Friend of the Zolas.

Mr. Cameron formerly lived in Paris and is an old friend of the Zola family. His search began several years ago with scant clues. The proprietor of a book-shop in Paris remembered having sold the manuscript to an American, and that was about all Mr. Cameron had to work on. He made an exhaustive investigation in this country by correspondence and personal search among dealers and private collectors in various cities; but the discovery finally came when a friend told Mr. Cameron that he had seen the "Nana" manuscript listed in the Morgan collection in a foreign paper at the time of the death of J. P. Morgan, Sr.

He will write the story of its discovery to Mme. Zola and ill probably ask Mr. Morgan for the manuscript in her behalf.

U. S. Leads Europe In Child Welfare Work

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—"American obstetrical methods and child welfare work in general were shown by the papers and discussions at the infant mortality conference just ended in London to be superior to those of England," said Dr. Julius H. Hess, of Chicago, to-day. "Indeed, our child welfare work now surpasses that in Germany, where such work had its origin.

"The methods in the British colonies are also in advance of those in Europe."

Bullfrogs Imported; Skins Used in Purses

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.—Eighteen big mountain frogs have been brought here from the Philippines by Dr. F. M. McAllister, ship's surgeon on the Korea. He will give them to the Park Commission for propagation in Stow Lake.

The mouse-colored skin, mottled with spots of darker hue, may be used for the manufacture of women's purses and chatelaine sacks.

The frogs are edlicate in spite of their size, and five died on the voyage.

STRONG WORDS
From a Doctor with 40 Years Experience.

"In my 40 years' experience as a teacher and practitioner along hygienic lines," says a Calif. physician, "I have never found a food to compare with Grape-Nuts for the benefit of the general health of all classes of people.

"I have recommended Grape-Nuts for a number of years to patients with the greatest success and every year's experience makes me more enthusiastic regarding its use.

"I make it a rule to always recommend Grape-Nuts, and Postum in place of coffee, when giving my patients instructions as to diet, for I know both Grape-Nuts and Postum can be digested by anyone.

"As for myself, when engaged in much mental work my diet twice a day consists of Grape-Nuts and rich cream. I find it just the thing to build up and keep the brain in good working order.

"In addition, Grape-Nuts always keeps the digestive organs in a perfect, healthy tone." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Strong endorsements like the above from physicians all over the country have stamped Grape-Nuts the most scientific food in the world.

Peachtree Road Parcel Also Bought. 80-Acre Tract of City Leased. Seventeen Loan Deeds.

A number of interesting realty sales were reported Thursday, among the transfers being a Peachtree road parcel, an Ormewood property and a West Peachtree parcel, all for good prices.

W. S. Witham has sold to John C. Wayt an irregular-shaped lot on the west side of Peachtree road adjoining the Witham place on one side and the property of Harriet Wayt on the other, for $4,410.

A. L. Bartlett has bought from the West End Bank a West Peachtree lot 130 feet north of Twelfth street, for $5,000, or $100 a front foot. The lot is 50 by 200 feet.

Hugh T. Burton has bought from R. D. Hicks, of Ohio, the northeast corner of Oglethorpe avenue and Lawton street, 64 by 140 feet, for $3,250.

Bruno Bukofzer has bought from A. D. Thomson and Carlos Lynes the southwest corner of Ormewood and South Moreland avenues, 70 by 129 1-2, for $3,500.

City Acreage at Work.

Eighty acres which the City of Atlanta bought some time ago on the Collier road will soon be made to yield an income. The tract has been leased to the Autodrome Association for $750 a year as a site for the automobile racing track which will soon be built by John S. Cohen, John Aldredge and others. The situation is about one-quarter of a mile west of Peachtree road, in the Brookwood section.

This property was bought by the city as a site for a sewage disposal plant, but has never been used.

The presence of a motordrome in this section, by the way, is expected to draw great crowds of people toward Brookwood, and to make the street car business profitable. Real estate men have not decided what the effect on property will be, but they expect some development on the road leading to the track.

Paving for Penn Street.

Bituminous macadam and not chert is to be the material used to pave Penn street, according to announcement of Street Engineer Hurt. The original intention was to use chert or rock, but this plan has been changed. The engineering department has decided that it will be cheaper to put down binder roads such as were built in West End Park.

Loan Funds Hold Up.

Loan funds for local real estate continue to hold up steady. Last week the loans printed in The Fulton County Report were not numerous enough to attract attention, but this week there have been an unusually large number. Early in the week there were 32 deeds in small amounts, one insurance company making six, and Wednesday there were 17. The latter varied in amounts from $150 to $4,000. Real estate men take this condition as a good sign. When there is a wide range of loans, the indication is that money is easy and there is plenty of confidence.

Referring to the 32 loans of Monday, a well-known realty man declared he had never seen a greater number recorded in a day, and he has been in the business here about fifteen years.

New Ansley Park Home.

Building Inspector Ed H. Hays has issued a permit to W. W. Brown to build a two-story brick-veneer dwelling at 96 Prado, Ansley Park. The house will cost $7,200. John Starr has the contract to build it.

To Renew Mansion Fight.

Although the matter of disposing of the present Governor's Mansion at Peachtree and Cain streets has been set aside by the State Senate, there is every probability that the question will be reopened at the next session of the Legislature, and will be presented until something is done.

Citizens comment daily on the inadequacy of the present mansion and say a better place must be provided, and these expressions have had as much effect in keeping the matter open as the desire of people to effect a trade with the State.

The Senate voted 21 to 19 against the creation of a commission composed of the Governor, the Speaker of the House, the President of the Senate and others to sell or exchange the site. This action was taken in spite of the declaration of Senator Miller that the mansion must be sold sometime, and it might as well be sold now.

Probably a dozen attractive and interesting propositions were brewing among the real estate men, and these will be shelved until the question is taken up again.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Lease Business Waking Up.

The approach of autumn always causes extensive preparations for renting and leasing. Some of the most important leases in the city expire September 1 and October 1 and renewals will be in order, or new locations will be taken. Other concerns' leases are up at the end of the year.

The renting business also takes on a roseate hue in the fall. People away at summer resorts are returning by hundreds and changes of residence are in order for a large part of them. Local agencies are accordingly preparing for the rush. Some agencies are extending. Porter & Swift and Hurt & Cone, for instance, have recently installed renting departments.

ZACHRY HEARING IS POSTPONED BY SLATON

Augusta Attorney Denies Blease's Right to Ask Extradition for Alleged Kidnaping.

Declaring that Governor Blease, of South Carolina, was acting under no legal right whatever in demanding his extradition from Georgia, P. B. Zachry, of Harlem, charged with kidnaping his own child in Columbia, S. C., called upon Governor Slaton Thursday morning to arrange for the hearing which will be held Monday morning. Governor Slaton changed the time of the hearing from Friday until Monday upon the request of Mr. Zachry.

Mr. Zachry declared he would fight the requisition to the last ditch. He will be represented at the hearing by Hamilton Phinizy and C. Henry Cohen, of Augusta, and John T. West, of Thomson. The requisition papers of Governor Blease probably will be the only testimony offered by the plaintiffs.

Mr. Zachry told a graphic story of the case Thursday morning. He had been awarded the two children four times, he declared, when Mrs. Zachry left with them on the very day that the Superior Court judge in Augusta upheld the decision of the ordinary favorable to Zachry.

Sued In South Carolina.

It was then, he declared further, that he took his automobile and hastened to South Carolina, where he entered suit again for the children in the Columbia court.

"I did not want to make out requisition papers for Mrs. Zachry," declared Mr. Zachry, "because I do not believe in fighting a woman in that way. That is the reason I instituted court proceedings in South Carolina.

"When I entered the courtroom there was my little daughter Frances, the older of the two, and the first thing she said was 'Hello, papa, are you going to take me?' She always was fond of me and she was the one I wanted. However, according to a previous agreement with Mrs. Zachry, I allowed even this one to visit her mother once a month."

Friends Rally to Aid Him.

Following the decision of Judge Gary awarding the children to him as claimed, Mr. Zachry declared he took the older, just three years of age, in his automobile and started for Georgia. Several times on the way, he says, he was warned that he was being followed, and at a bride near the Georgia line he was fully prepared for interference by the South Carolina authorities acting under orders of Governor Blease.

"They would not have stopped me, though," declared Mr. Zachry, "for I was bound for Georgia with my little girl, and I meant to get there at all odds."

Mr. Zachry is a prominent attorney in Augusta and resides in Harlem, a suburb. Less than a week ago, when Governor Blease demanded the extradition of Zachry, a host of friends of the latter held a mass meeting in Augusta and sent a telegram to Governor Blease requesting a hearing before any decision was made.

COTTON EASIER ON PROMISE OF RAINS

Both Elements Hesitate Pending Texas Weather Outlook—Sentiment Continues Bearish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Continued dry weather over Texas and Oklahoma led to further buying at the opening of the cotton market to-day and first prices were 1 to 5 points higher than the closing quotations of Wednesday. August made the best gain. There was a great deal of warehouse buying. After the call further bullish advices relative to the weather were received and prices advanced still further.

There was no rain shown on the map which was an incentive for buying, but there is disturbance in the Gulf, which local weather experts claim may bring rain in the next two days over the western belt. This is causing hesitancy on the part of bulls to buy aggressively. Every one seemed to await the noon detailed weather report to see how high the temperatures may run and whether or not the local experts are correct in their predictions. The volume of trading was small and the range was very narrow throughout the early session.

The detailed weather record showed temperatures ranging from 100 to 107 degrees and no rain. The temperatures were not so high in the eastern belt and very little rain was shown. These high temperatures are causing uneasiness among the bear forces and some short covering was in evidence about noon. On the other hand, the bull element hesitated when the ring, Wall street and uptown crowd sold the market off a few points. Should rain materialize in the Western belt between now and Sunday undoubtedly it will promote sufficient selling to send the market back into last week's low level.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 5 to 7 points from the final quotations of Wednesday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 7.—Liverpool came in about 2 points lower than due on futures, but shows larger spot sales; total 10,000 bales at 6 points higher quotations. The map shows a generally fair belt. Temperatures entirely normal, except somewhat above in Arkansas and Tennessee. The disturbance in the Gulf remained stationary, holding forth additional promise for a change in the weather in the west.

The market opened at unchanged figures, but soon rallied a few points on the buying in anticipation of a better demand possibly from Europe on the conclusion of peace. The advance was checked by prospects of more favorable weather in the west.

August in New York showed additional strength on a report that 10,000 bales export room had been engaged and that the stock would be reduced to the low figure of 18,000 bales.

The market eased after the close of Liverpool to 12.15 for October, with trading small and waiting for news of weather developments in the west.

The market after the call was sold on forecast of increasing cloudiness in Arkansas and predictions of local weather experts of rain in the next three days for the western belt. The ring crowd were apparently the leading sellers. Montgomery, Dick Bros., Mitchell and Wilson led the buying and bid the market up. Very little cotton was offered at the outset. Weld was reported a good buyer; also the South and West were booked as buyers.

• • •

On the call, Gifford and Schill bought August. Hentz and Rothschild sold. Starr, Rothschild and Lehman bought October. Shantz, Norden and Mitchell sold. Flinn, Starr and Gifford bought December. Shantz, Norden, Burnett and Hentz sold. Starr and Shearson bought January. Rothschild and Bashford sold.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says:

"According to the bears, yesterday's advance was a revival of last week's price boom, which week-end rains had interfered with. According to the bulls, the talent has begun to realize the danger of selling short, because of the continued need of rain in the west, and also because of the approach of a showdown on the Clarke and Smith bills affecting cotton contract trading.

"Meanwhile, the market is very narrow, and a light excess of buying or selling orders serves to move values a little way. Damage reports are beginning to come in from the west in sufficient number to cause some concern, and the Gulf storm, which big-yield men now depend on to bring rains to Texas, is only in process of formation and may not form at all. Dry weather advices are causing some shorts to cover.

"Yesterday exporters and forward sellers received some inquiries from Europe for supplies, but very little business was reported done."

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 7.—Texas at the present time and Oklahoma are dry and hot. This put the market up early, but experts were able to find Gulf storm or other disturbance somewhere, and on their assurance of rain some time in the near future prices declined a few points. It is a dull, pointless market that waits on the weather. Without rain and with the present high temperatures continued considerable deterioration will take place in the Southwest, but if rains come, the situation will be entirely different. Eastern belt reports are brilliant.

STOCKS DULL BUT ARE VERY STRONG

Report of Peace Abroad Causes Steady Buying of Big Issues by Strong Concerns.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Texas Company was the most prominent feature at the opening of the stock market to-day, advancing 2 points to 115. However, nearly all issues were higher following the lead of the foreign markets, which were up on reports of re-established peace in the Balkans.

Among the gains in the New York market were: Amalgamated Copper, ⅜; Steel common, ¼; Western Maryland, ¼; Utah Copper, ⅛; Union Pacific, ⅜; Southern Railway, ¼; Reading, ¼; Pennsylvania, ⅜; New York, New Haven and Hartford, ¼; Missouri Pacific, ¼; Katy, ⅜; Car Foundry, ¼; Great Northern preferred, ¼; Erie, ¼; Chino Copper, ⅜.

Canadian Pacific shaded ½, while American Sugar Refining lost the same amount.

At the end of half an hour Union Pacific was up 1 point.

The transfer books for subscription of Union Pacific close to-day, but the Stock Exchange ruled that sales of the issue during the morning would not be ex-rights, but that a due bill would be given for rights because the company did not announce the price, at which Southern Pacific certificates of interest would be offered.

The curb was strong.

Americans in London were steady in a narrow range.

Trading in the late forenoon was dull and price movements in the leading railroads and industrials were confined within a narrow margin. Union Pacific sold off ½ to 151 and similar recessions were recorded in Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Steel common, Reading, Lehigh Valley, Canadian Pacific and American Smelting. American Writing preferred was under severe pressure, declining 2 points.

Toward the end of the second hour business became more brisk and fractional recoveries were made in many of the leading issues.

Call money is loaning at 2¼ per cent.

The tone was steady in the last hour, with prices generally above the opening. Steel sold around 62¼ for a gain of about half on the day. New Haven sold off and the late quotations were around par. Union Pacific was unusually strong, holding at 152⅛ for a net advance of a point. Missouri Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific and Reading advanced. The tone was strong.

The market closed firm. Governments unchanged; other bonds strong.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red ....85½@86½
Corn—No. 2 ....73½
Oats—No. 2 ....41¾

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—While wheat and corn both closed at lower levels to-day, oats were better. The changes in wheat showed net losses of ¼⅜⅜c, the latter being the May option, which was under considerable pressure. September corn was up ⅛, but the more deferred months were ⅝@⅞c lower. Oats had gains of ⅛@⅜c.

The reports on corn were the worst on th crop, especially those from Kansas and Missouri, but this was overbalanced by scattered rains in the belt and the feeling that corn is high enough. There were cash sales of wheat of only 45,000 bushels at Chicago and export sales were reported as dull.

The sharp break in corn during the morning was the result of profit-taking by one of the largest holders in the trade, and who is located at Fort Worth, Texas.

Provisions closed rather unsettled after a session of dullness.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "Sentiment in wheat is mostly bearish as viewed by local traders on the big receipts and light export business. Shrewd operators, however, only selling on bulges, and say that caution should be used so long as the bull movement in corn continues. While a majority of corn traders are bullish, there are a number who are afraid to follow the advance much further, because prices are unprecedentedly high for this season for December and May. There is a good deal of spreading between corn and wheat, the latter being sold and corn bought on the carrying charge theory.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "Wheat—Weather in Western Europe generally favorable. Partly cloudy conditions prevail in the Northwest this morning, with light rains reported at a number of points in both North and South Dakota. The market shows a rather steadier tone and there seems to be more friendly sentiment to wheat around these prices.

"Corn—According to reports thus far received there have been some light showers in parts of Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and the River Valley, with temperatures running slightly lower. We look for a nervous market to-day, and until general rains occur do not expect any lasting decline.

"Oats—There seems to be more commission house buying, but local professionals work on the short side of the market. Receipts are of fair volume, though offerings of the new crop are moderate.

"Provisions—There was fair realizing on the advance yesterday, but the buying was of a good character. Packers bought October ribs. Cash trade was fair with shipments of lard larger than those of last year."

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX WRITES OF "THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME," BY HALL CAINE

The Brilliant American Poetess Analyzes the Tragedy of the Woman Whose Child Had No Father, the Horror of Her Loveless Marriage and the Great Problem of This Day.

HALL CAINE'S latest work of fiction, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," is a striking illustration of the change which has taken place in the world of literature during the last score of years.

For frank realism and courageous attacks upon time-worn traditions, it takes the lead of all other books written by all other authors.

The heroine of this novel is a young English girl, reared by an angelic mother and a traditionally brutal British father.

The father is a self-made man, who attains great wealth, and who marries his daughter to a debauched man of title.

The girl's feelings and ideas are not taken into consideration in the least. Neither has she been instructed regarding the meaning of marriage. The death of her mother when she was a mere child deprived her of the one tender tie, and left her with only the companionship of disagreeable relatives or paid attendants.

From the hour of her marriage the trials and problems of life begin to present themselves to this young girl. With the first approach of the husband as a lover, all her womanly instincts arise in revolt and the bride refuses to become a wife.

Father, aunt, and clergymen are called into consultation, to small avail. Afraid as the girl is of her father, she is still more terrified at the thought of giving herself to her husband.

She insists upon returning home to her father, but is finally prevailed upon to go away with the husband, if he will leave her undisturbed until he can win her affections.

To this situation the husband consents, wishing to avoid a public scandal. However, his method of winning his bride's affections is not a successful one. Intemperance and vulgarity are among his characteristics and the young wife finds herself growing more and more disgusted with him, daily.

Then comes the designing adventuress, in the guise of an old school friend and relative, who enters the home and becomes the mistress of the husband.

Bad as the man is, by nature and habit, one cannot help feeling that his position in his own home was a sorry one, and his affiliation with a woman of his own type does not seem at all surprising.

However, it ends all possibility of his ever winning the heart of his wife. Just at this moment the ideal man enters upon the scene and new complications arise.

Heart, soul, brain and body awaken simultaneously in the young wife, and it is quite naturally a blow to the husband's pride and to his self-conceit when he discovers that the chaste Diana, who has refused her husband's kiss, is an expectant mother.

The wife runs away, alone, and goes to London, where her child is born, and where, in the present phase of the story now running in Hearst's Magazine, she is facing poverty and despair in her efforts to support herself and child.

We must remember that she was a very young and perfectly ignorant girl, knowing nothing of life, of the world, or of human nature, when she was plunged into all these distressing situations. All her instincts were high and fine, yet through the curious complications of her destiny, she became the mother of a child of a man she loved while married to a man she loathed.

Mighty problems face her in this situation

Everywhere she sees women respected by society and religious institutions, who are mothers of undesired children of detested men, simply because they are married to them.

Everywhere she sees women despised and shunned because they have brought forth children with love only to legitimatize birth.

Her young mind is torn and tortured with all the great problems suggested by these experiences. Meantime, the lover she believes to be dead is sailing on the high seas searching for strange goals and wholly unconscious of all that has happened to the woman of his heart.

Besides these two central figures are several other very interesting characters; one a beautiful young woman who elopes with a clergyman connected with the school where this young girl was educated. In the midst of her great distress, in her efforts to make a living for her child, she comes upon them in the slums of London; the clergyman dying and the woman selling herself, soul and body, to supply him with the necessities of life.

Just how Mr. Caine is going to deal with all these characters eventually is a question to all readers of his remarkable novel.

No amount of brilliant writing and no amount of realistic pen pictures can change to any marked degree the situation of a woman who becomes a mother without the sanction of the law.

Birth needs, first and foremost, both the legitimate call of love and the sanction of marriage to make it ideal and beautiful.

When either element is lacking the child is not well-born in the fullest meaning of that word.

Physically, mentally and morally the child may be perfectly equipped to meet the demands of life, with only love as a dower from both parents; but we live in a world which has been obliged to make social laws to protect its social rights; and where there is a flaw in the birth certificate of a child, in this respect, it is sure to cause suffering and trouble sooner or later for all concerned.

But Mr. Caine's story will set people to thinking along broader and kinder lines regarding these topics.

It presents great subjects for the mature deliberation of all classes and the followers of all creeds. The methods of public charitable institutions toward erring women are fully illustrated in this novel, and will no doubt lead to much discussion and many protests. Read the great story, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

HALL CAINE.

Look at This Picture, Then Look at Yourself.

You Can Find in This Picture More Information About "How to Succeed" Than Carnegie or Rockefeller Could Give You in Two Hours' Talk.

(Copyright, 1912.)

Work, hurry, plan, achieve—while the others rest.

That is the big secret of success.

The turtle won the race against the hare in the fable, because the turtle walked ALL THE TIME.

He could not run very fast but HE KNEW ENOUGH NOT TO LIE DOWN AND GO TO SLEEP.

Take a lesson from that turtle.

Take a lesson from this picture.

Your competitors are asleep on the grass.

They are thinking that it is too hot to work. They are pitying themselves. They will have more cause to pity themselves later for having pitied themselves so much NOW.

Don't envy the man who is paddling a canoe and telling some young person with a high color what wonderful things he is going to do NEXT WINTER.

Let him paddle his canoe and talk about himself.

YOU WORK NOW.

Lucky the man who works in August, lucky the man who is found by the hottest sun's rays ATTENDING TO BUSINESS.

When you are racing side by side with others, and when all are running, you can not do more than keep even.

Now, while others rest, is your chance to get ahead. Take it.

Don't pick this up and say to yourself that it is a rather nice picture, and put it down again. LOOK at it, study it.

THEN LOOK AT YOURSELF.

Ask yourself, and don't deceive yourself in the answer, whether you are the man WALKING in this picture, or whether you are one of those figures lying asleep on the grass.

The answer to that question will answer your question as to what your probable position will be in the world a few years from now.

There is a better sermon on success in this picture by Tad than in all the nice interviews given out by Mr. Rockefeller telling how he saved his first dollar, or by Mr. Carnegie saying what a wonderful thing it is to give away libraries WITH NO BOOKS IN THE LIBRARIES.

July is gone. If you wasted that month, don't waste more time now in regret. Start off in the right way in August. WALK fast, WORK hard, THINK for yourself, look ahead.

Remember that no man ever hurt himself with too much work.

IT'S WHAT YOU DO BETWEEN WORKING HOURS THAT HURTS YOU.

Remember, also, that no man cheats his employer. You can only cheat yourself by doing a thing less well than you know how to do it.

Be the steady walker, be the man who gains time while others rest, be the man who gets ahead.

And if you really try, good luck to you, for the man WHO REALLY TRIES doesn't fail.

The Time to Get Ahead Is Now

The man who travels and works in these hot and lazy days, while others rest and think it over, is the man that WILL WIN.

Young men that have ambition, and old men too, CAN GET SUCH A START BY DOING THE RIGHT KIND OF WORK NOW THAT THE OTHERS RESTING AND THINKING HOW HOT IT IS WILL NEVER CATCH YOU. August, September, October—they are the months of the winning workingman. (See Editorial.)

Frederick the Great

By REV. THOS. B. GREGORY.

FREDERICK THE GREAT became King of Prussia one hundred and seventy-three years ago—May 31, 1740. It was not much of a Prussia then, but the little man in the blue coat with the red trimmings made it one of the first powers of the Continent.

A very lovable old fellow, in many ways, was Frederick the Great. Underneath the king there was ever visible the man. After he had conquered his political position he made his nobles and aristocrats treat the common people fairly. He personally saw to it that just laws were instituted. He mortally hated fanaticism and bigotry. When the churchmen attempted to inveigle him into religious persecution, he replied: "Let the parsons go to Heaven their own way, and let everybody else do the same."

At heart he was favorable to democratic institutions. When King George wanted to hire soldiers of him to fight the Americans he indignantly spurned the proposition, and refused to let the Hessians pass through his territory on their way to join the British. He admired the things for which the Americans were fighting as ardently as he did the personal qualities and soldierly parts of the man who led their armies.

The Woman With the Secret Eyes

By WINIFRED BLACK.

SHE lives down in the valley by the running water, the woman with the secret eyes. She has three children, a boy and two girls; her husband has gone away, they say.

She is poor—and she is angry about it. She does not like the old house by the running water and she hates the song the water sings all day and all night.

"If I could only get up on the hill," she says whenever a neighbor will stop to talk with her, "it would be better up there. See what gay lives the people on the hill live. They have company and the lights shine through their windows far, far into the night, and they laugh and sing, and down here, where I live, we hear only the water—all day and all night the water.

And He's Smart.

"My children don't like it here, either. I am going to send them away so they won't hear it—all day and all night, the running of the water there by the door.

"The boy is going away to the city. Did you see the new suit I bought him? Oh, I can manage when I have to, and the new shoes, too, and the hat? Nothing better in town than those clothes—he's 'as good as the rest now.'

"And he's smart, too; he will make his way, and then we will live on the hill, too, maybe.

"The girls are going, too. I shall see to that. Did you notice the pretty new hats I have bought them? Not a girl in town has prettier ones—and their stockings, too. Some day they shall have a piano like the little girls up there on the hill. I will get it for them. You'll see; you'll see. They won't always be so poor."

Last night when I took a walk by the rushing water I met the three children, far, far out on the road toward town, and I saw a man slink through the low trees to the door of the woman with the secret eyes. I heard the woman's voice. She was laughing a cruel, wicked laugh, a dangerous laugh like the warning of a snake, and the man laughed, too.

To-morrow the three children will have more new things to make them look like the children in the houses up there on the hill—and the woman with the secret eyes will laugh again and be proud of the fine showing her children make—and all the time she is digging, digging, digging a pit for their poor little feet; for the people of the town are beginning to whisper.

They nod together, the old women; they grin together, the old men—and the children wonder why it is that people look so strangely at them when they put on their new finery and go out—to be seen.

"As good as the rest!" Poor woman with the secret eyes, don't you know, can't you understand that those children would be better off if they went barefoot, ragged and had too little to eat, and carried with them into the comprehension of growing youth no secret wonder, no half-hidden doubt of you and the way you earn the money to spend so freely on them?

The boy who's going to the city soon, what can he ever be with such a mother? The little girl, with the soft eyes there, how can she ever hold up her head—when she remembers and understands? The slender child with the puzzled eyes, what will she care what dresses she wore—when she lived down by the rushing waters? All she will know is that there was something "queer" about her mother.

Can't Hide Her Story.

Oh, woman with the secret eyes, work, scrub, starve, do anything honest, anything decent, and give your children a memory of you that will keep them straight when their own feet begin to wander. Your eyes are secret, but they can not hide your story. Some day, some day these little ones of yours will know it, strive as you may to keep it hidden. Then what of your dreams—of houses on the hill and friends and joy?

Hark, how the water runs through the fringing willows. "To-morrow," it says, "to-morrow"—do you never listen to the warning it is trying to give?

ACCUSED COMPOSED ON DAY OF TRAGEDY, ASSISTANT ASSERTS

The second week of the Frank trial ended at 12:30 Saturday with a bitter battle in progress over the testimony of Herbert G. Schiff, assistant superintendent of the National Pencil Factory.

Schiff was called soon after court opened in the forenoon and was on the stand when the adjournment was taken until Monday.

Schiff, besides denying that Frank ever had women in his office, describes in elaborate detail the duties of the superintendent, particularly his work on the afternoon the little Phagan girl came to her death. It was the purpose of the defense to show that it would have been most improbable that Frank, after committing a murder, calmly could have sat down with the burden of guilt resting on his conscience and proceeded with his usual preciseness in the intricate and involved computations required in making out the financial sheet.

Dorsey was given the witness toward the close of the session and started at once to attack Schiff's estimates of time that it would have required for the various details of the work. Schiff made a good witness and the solicitor was able to make little headway in his cross-questioning.

Says Frank Explained Nervousness.

Schiff admitted to Dorsey, however, that Frank was really anxious to get the Pinkertons on the job and that Frank called from his home three times at intervals of little more than half an hour, instructing Schiff to take the matter up with Sig Montag, one of the officers of the pencil factory company. He said Frank declared it to be the factory's duty to its employees.

Schiff also admitted that Frank several times explained his nervousness of Sunday, the day when the body was found, by the abrupt manner in which he had been taken from his house without any breakfast or coffee and by the visit to the morgue where the light suddenly was turned upon the body of the girl victim as she lay before his eyes.

A search Saturday for C. B. Dalton, the man who told of visiting the factory with Miss Daisy Hopkins, developed that he had disappeared from the courthouse. He was called for by the defense when court opened, but did not answer. One of the girls mentioned in his story declares in a letter to The Georgian, that Dalton lied in his statement.

The cross-examination of Schiff will be resumed when court opens Monday morning.

Financial Sheets Put In Evidence.

Reuben Arnold had in court the financial sheet over which there has been much discussion since the murder mystery developed. Schiff identified the series of figures and notations as in Frank's handwriting. Arnold had also every financial sheet for the year previous to the crime, and Schiff identified them all as Frank's work. He said that the least complicated of the financial sheets never took less than 2 1-2 or three hours to compile.

The financial sheet identified as the one Frank prepared the afternoon of April 26, the day of the murder, was displayed as an evidence that the writing of Frank was not tremulous, irregular or in any way different from his handwriting in the 51 other financial sheets on file.

Schiff went into the highly complex methods in which the financial sheet is made up, in order to show for the defense the clarity of mind that was required in order to complete the sheet without mistake or confusion.

He narrated that costs and profits were estimated each week on thousands of pencils of different classifications and grades, on hundreds of gross of rubber plugs, on the various classes of leads, boxes, "skeletons" on which the pencils were arranged and other items of material that entered into the manufacture of the pencils. Schiff also read a number of orders to illustrate the amount of other work that ordinarily is taken care of on Saturdays.

An attack was made upon the testimony of young George Epps when court opened Saturday morning. Epps was called to the stand and made to tell of the visit of a Georgian reporter at his home Sunday eevning, April 27. He was asked why he had not told at that time his story of riding to town with Mary Phagan on the day she was killed. Epps declared that he did not talk to the reporter.

The reporter, John Minar, was called immediately after and testified that he talked at length with both the Epps boy and his sister in an effort to determine who last had seen the murdered girl and when. The reporter declared that the sister replied that she had seen Mary Phagan Thursday before, but that young Epps, although present, said nothing, except that he had seen the girl occastonally. Arnold questioned the boy.

Q. Do you recollect the Sunday the body was found?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember a gentleman, a Mr. Minar, coming to your house and talking to you and your sister?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't he ask you when was the last time either of you had seen Mary

MODERN JIM BLUDSOE DROWNS

Dancers Rush From Sinking Boat While Engineer Holds Prow on Shore, Then Dies.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 9.—Divers who explored the steamboat Peters Lee on the bottom of the Mississippi River at Lake Providence, La., today reported finding the body of Engineer Frank O'Neil, his hand holding the engine throttle.

He died there when the boat sank last night, having stayed at his post and held the boat's nose against the shore until the last of the 50 passengers, most of them women, were helped ashore.

O'Neil's act is practically a realization of the martyrdom of Jim Bludsoe, famed in the poem as the steamboat engineer who held her nose to the bank till all were saved, then was burned to death at his post.

A dance was on when the Peters Lee struck a sunken coal barge. A hole was torn in her side. The captain ordered the pilot to steer for the shore. The boat struck the mud and officers and crew began taking off the passengers.

Frank O'Neil in the engine room kept the stern wheel churning while the water poured into the hold.

A negro shouted through the engine room door that the boat was sinking.

"I know it!" shouted O'Neil. "You fellows get on up front where you can get off! I'll hold her nose against the shore!"

The last passenger was safely landed when the boat sank in 40 feet of water.

New Brain Surgery Device Is Invented

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug 9.—Delegates to the big medical congress are greatly interested in Dr. R. H. Clarke's device for mapping out the brain and removing parts which are perhaps keys to various disorders of the body.

The instrument has a tiny telescopic knife, supported on a miniature bridge, and the direction of the knife and depth to which it goes is regulated to a hair's breadth by a series of scales.

Surgeons who examined the machine are convinced the time is not far distant when they will be able with it to operate for paralysis and insanity.

Lad Didn't Flee Court.

Mr. Dorsey interrupted.

Q. George, has there been any trouble to get you to come to court?—A. No, sir; I was playing ball when they sent for me yesterday and didn't get the message.

Mr. Arnold objected to the question and reply and Mr. Dorsey said:

"Your honor, Mr. Arnold made the impression on this court yesterday that this boy was fleeing from the court. The deputy said he couldn't find him. We just want to show that he was always willing to come."

Judge Roan overruled the objection.

Q. George, you were always willing to come, weren't you?—A. Yes, sir. I got tired hanging around the court, and asked you if I could go. You told me you would send for me when you needed me. I came when I got your message.

Q. Not Frank's money?—A. It certainly was not.

Q. Are these orders correct?—A. Yes.

Q. Look at these letters and see?—A. There is a better proof than that. If they were not correct, we would have heard from them.

Q. Do you know Jim Conley?—A. Yes.

Q. What sort of a negro is he?—A. There isn't much to him.

Arnold showed the witness the murder notes.

Q. Where do you find this paper in the factory?—A. Anywhere from the roof to the basement.

Q. Are they swept into the basement?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see a purse of any kind in the safe?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Jim Conley speak to him?—A. No.

Q. What did Conley say to you that morning?—A. I saw him near the shipping room. I asked him what he was doing there. Q. Do you recall talking to Sam Hewlett, a detective?—A. Only when we employed him as night watchman.

Q. When did you tell the detectives about Mrs. White seeing a negro?

Arnold interrupted. "How can that have anything to do with this case?" he asked.

His objection was sustained.

Employment of Pinkertons.

Q. How many times did Frank phone you Monday?—A. Two or three.

Q. Where was he then?—A. At home.

Q. The factory was full of detectives?—A. Yes.

Q. What did he say?—A. I don't remember. I think once he mentioned how terrible the girl looked. Again about them flashing a light on the body in the dark room.

Complained of Being Upset.

Q. He complained about being terribly upset about being rushed from home, didn't he?—A. He said something about that.

Q. What did he tell you the police told him over the telephone?—A. He said they told him a catastrophe or tragedy—I don't remember the term—had happened.

Q. He told you he asked them if there had been a fire?—A. Yes.

Q. What did he say about his breakfast?—A. He said one reason he was nervous was that he had not had any breakfast and wanted a cup of coffee.

Q. How long would it take a man to enter those eleven orders on a book?—A. An hour and a half.

Q. You have gone up some since you swore before the Coroner?—A. I did not swear before the Coroner, I said I thought.

Q. Didn't you swear that it would take about 30 minutes?

Arnold objected. "He asked it like he means all that work," Arnold said.

Dorsey: "He knows what I am asking." Laughter followed Dorsey's remark and the deputies were forced to rap repeatedly for order.

Arnold: "I am going to move that this courtroom be cleared, if there is any more of this disturbance. If we have got to take all of this crowd in, we might as well try the case out in the open."

Judge Threatens Disturbers.

Judge Roan: "Mr. Sheriff, find out who is creating this distrubance and bring them to me. I will see if I can't stop it."

Dorsey continued his questioning.

Q. You know that Miss Hall made the acknowledgment, don't you?—A. Sometimes.

Q. That would make some little difference wouldn't it?—A. Yes, five or ten minutes.

Q. Will you explain to this jury if you can, how it took 30 minutes to enter the orders and only five minutes to write the acknowledgment?—A. I said it would take an hour and a half to do all the work on that paper.

Q. It took that long to fill out an order, enter the number, etc.

Arnold interrupted: "He has asked the witness that question and got his answer," he said.

The objection was overruled.

Q. I want you to detail the work that it took an hour and a half to do. (Schiff took the order book, the transcriptions to the order blanks the check, and the requisition from the storeroom.) It took 30 minutes to put this much on the book?—A. I don't think so.

Quizzed on Office Details.

Q. Look at this acknowledgment. What are these initials? 'H. H.'?—A. Hattie Hall.

Q. Then she did this?—A. Yes.

Dorsey took an order bearing the initials "H. H." and bearing date of April 26.

Q. Did Miss Hall acknowledge this on April 26?—A. No, I wouldn't think so. It was probably acknowledged Monday or it might have been the day before April 26.

Q. Well, was it the custom to write these before or after they were entered in this book?—A. Either way.

Q. Then you had no regular system?—A. Yes, but one does not hinge on the other. It did not make any big difference how this was done. It had to be done in the regular course of business.

At this point court adjourned until 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Only a Mask.

Men are not being benefited by the summer vacation as they should be. Now, notwithstanding much outdoor life, they are little if any stronger than they were. The tan on their faces is darker and makes them look healthier, but it is only a mask. They are still nervous, easily tired, upset by trifles, and they do not eat nor sleep well. What they need is what tones the nerves, perfects digestion, creates appetite, and makes sleep refreshing, and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Pupils and teachers generally will find the chief purpose of the nation best subserved by this great medicine which, as we know, "builds up the whole system."

Dalton's Testimony False, Girl Named on Stand Says

The Georgian to-day received from Miss Laura Atkinson, of No. 30 Ella street, one of the young women mentioned in C. B. Dalton's testimony, a letter denying absolutely that she had ever walked home with Dalton from the restaurant near the pencil factory, as he swore. Here is Miss Atkinson's letter in full:

Editor The Georgian:

Will you please allow me space to correct a statement made by Mr. C. B. Dalton in his testimony at the Frank trial, and published in your paper yesterday? In answer to a question from Mr. Rosser as to whether he ever went to the pencil factory with any one except Miss Daisy Hopkins he said yes, he used to go to the Busy Bee and wait for the factory to close to walk home with the girls, and gave my name as one of the girls.

His statement, as I read it in your paper, impressed me as being intended to convey to the minds of those who heard it (and of course all who read it) the idea that I was working at the factory at the time he says he went there and that he was in the habit of walking home with me. I have no desire to make any derogatory remarks about Mr. Dalton, but in justice to myself and my good name, I certainly do feel it my duty to say that his statement concerning me is false and he had not the slightest ground whatever for making it and no right to use my name in any way in his testimony.

I have known him only about six months, and have never been in his company but three times. On two occasions I was at church with a gentleman friend who was also a friend of his and he walked with us from the church to my home, less than three blocks, and one afternoon while out walking I met him and he walked with me a distance of about four blocks. That, and a few conversations over the telephone, probably three or four, mark the extent of my acquaintance with him. I worked at the pencil factory exactly two days the second week in July (last month), and did not even see Mr. Dalton on either one of those days. I had never worked there before nor been there, and have not since.

Will you please state these facts in your paper and clear up any false impression that may have been made on people's minds concerning me, and the slur I feel has been cast on my good name by having him make such a false statement where it would be published broadcast over the country? I will appreciate it and thank you very much if you will correct the statement.

Sincerely,

LAURA ATKINSON.

HERE'S THE TIME CLOCK PUZZLE IN FRANK TRIAL; CAN YOU FIGURE IT OUT?

THE RIDDLE OF THE CLOCK IN THE PHAGAN MYSTERY

Jim Conley swears Mary Phagan went up the stairs of the National Pencil factory and was murdered before Monteen Stover arrived. He says he saw Miss Stover go up and leave.

Monteen Stover, State's witness, swears she arrived at 12:05.

George Epps, State's witness, swears he and Mary Phagan arrived at Marietta and Forsyth streets at 12:07.

The car crew, defense's witnesses, swear Mary arrived at Broad and Marietta at 12:07½ and at Broad and Hunter at 12:10.

If Mary Phagan was at Marietta and Forsyth at 12:07, as the State says, or at Broad and Hunter at 12:10, as the defense says, how could she have preceded Monteen Stover, as Jim Conley says, up the factory stairs, when Miss Stover was in the factory at 12:05?

What's the answer?

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Tick-tock! Tick-tock!
Hark to the tale of the old hall clock!
Tick-tock! Tick-tock!
This is the tale of the clock!
—Old English Ballad.

This is a tale of an office clock and a motorman's watch—an office clock in the National Pencil Factory, the first requisite of which, it being a "time" clock, is accuracy, and a motorman's watch.

And this is the story of a clock that may or may not mean life and liberty and a restored good name to Leo Frank, or—a fate infinitely worse than mere death itself!

It is a story involving a young business man of repute and high standing, a college graduate and a husband, a brave, womanly little girl, foully murdered, a motorman known to many Atlantans, a newsboy not so well known, a disinterested working girl, a negro sweeper, a confessed accessory to murder, the dead girl's mother—and an office clock.

What does the story demonstrate? That shall be for the reader to say. Here is the story:

What the State Contends.

The State of Georgia is contending that Leo Frank murdered on April 26, before the hour of 12:05 in the afternoon, Mary Phagan, a 14-year-old working girl, employed in the National Pencil Factory, of which Frank was the superintendent.

It cites, among others, to bear out its contention, James Conley, a negro sweeper in the factory, and Monteen Stover, an employee of the factory.

Miss Stover is a disinterested witness—Conley not only is the star witness against Frank, but is interested in fixing the murder upon Frank.

Here is what the State, by its own witnesses, asserts:

Jim Conley swears that a few minutes before Miss Monteen Stover came into the factory—Miss Stover herself swearing that she entered at 12:05—Mary Phagan entered and passed upstairs and into Leo Frank's office.

Miss Stover, asked how she was positive as to the time she went in and the time she came out, stated that she looked at the time clock both as she came in and as she went out. That fixes the time of her coming and going definitely and exactly.

It was before Miss Stover came in that Conley swears Mary Phagan came in. Therefore, Mary Phagan must have arrived at the factory, according to Conley, at least before 12:05, the moment Miss Stover came in.

Before Miss Stover Entered.

But after Mary came in, and before Miss Stover came in, the murder, still according to Conley, had been effected.

For (a) after Mary went upstairs and before Miss Stover came in, Conley (b) heard pattering footsteps toward the rear of the building, where (c) he says the body was found by him later, and after that (d) a scream, and then (e) a period of silence.

All of this, according to Conley, before Monteen Stover entered the factory—that is, before 12:05 certainly—and, considering the things Conley swears happened, several minutes before 12:05, necessarily.

Mrs. Coleman, Mary's mother, swears that Mary left home "about 11:45" in the morning, and George Epps swears he joined her on the car at 11:50, for he looked at a clock at home just before boarding the car, and that he and Mary arrived at Marietta and Forsyth streets at 12:07, the latter hour not definitely fixed in his mind.

Motorman Remembers Time.

The motorman on that car, however, who swears he knew Mary Phagan, and had seen her board his car frequently, and remembers seeing her board that particular car on that particular day, says that the car arrived at Marietta and Forsyth at 12:7½, as that is the time it is scheduled to arrive there, and he was running on time that day.

The motorman swears Mary and a companion got off at Hunter and Broad about 12:10, that being a few minutes' farther run than Marietta and Forsyth. The conductor corroborates the motorman in an additional statement that the car was not running ahead of schedule, the conductors being particularly required by the company not to run ahead of time.

Mary Phagan left the street car at 12:10, still a block and a half from the pencil factory.

If she walked directly to the factory, she could not have reached there before 12:12, in any event.

If the little victim of this tragedy, Mary Phagan, therefore, DID NOT REACH THE FACTORY UNTIL MANY MINUTES AFTER CONLEY SWEARS SHE DID GET THERE, AND UNTIL AT LEAST TWO MINUTES AFTER MONTEEN STOVER HAD DEPARTED, AND UNTIL AFTER CONLEY SWEARS HE HAD HEARD THE FOOTSTEPS AND THE SCREAM, HOW CAN CONLEY'S STORY BE TRUE?

Slain Before She Arrived?

In other words, how could Mary Phagan have been murdered before she arrived at the factory?

Remember, too, that when Frank was asked at the Coroner's inquest as to the time of Mary Phagan's arrival, he said that it was after 12, because the noon whistle had blown some time before—that she might have arrived at 12:10 or, maybe later, perhaps as late as 12:20 or 12:25.

Conley, also, in fixing the time of Mary Phagan's arrival at the factory, said it was soon after the noon whistle blew, therefore, a little after 12—thus placing Mary's arrival between 12 and the time of Monteen Stover's arrival, which was 12:05.

Now then, take your pencil and paper, and figure this problem out for yourself.

Can you reconcile Conley's story with the other things proved, in the main, by the State's own witnesses?

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Marsha Warrington and Ida Norris, the Sacramento high school girls alleged to have been taken to Reno in November by Maury I. Diggs and Caminetti will take the stand before the trial is concluded.

Judge Van Fleet dealt the defense another hard blow yesterday when he announced that the jury would not consider the willingness or unwillingness of e two girls to accompany Diggs and Caminetti.

HOW TIME HAS BECOME THE CRUCIAL POINT IN THE TRIAL OF LEO M. FRANK

2 Mary boards the Cooper street car at 11:50, according to witnesses for both State and defense.

3 Mary leaves car at 12:07 by State's testimony and 12:10 by witnesses for the defense.

4 Monteen Stover enters factory at 12:05 and leaves at 12:10. She swore she was certain of the time.

1 Mary Phagan leaves her home at 11:45, according to her mother

5 Jim Conley swears he saw Mary Phagan enter and heard her scream BEFORE Monteen Stover came.

Absence of Alienists and The Hypothetical Question Distinguishes Frank Trial

By O. B. KEELER.

There are two things about the Frank trial that entitle it to distinguished consideration.

Thus far not a single alienist has been called to bat, and only the common or domesticated type of the dread Hypothetical Question has appeared.

In most of our great murder trials, the alienist is the last resort, or one of the latest resorts. Usually he is introduced by the defense; anywhere from four to eight of him.

The prosecution promptly counters with an equal number of wheel inspectors.

The defense (vide Thaw case) generally proves to its own satisfaction that the defendant was crazy when he did it, but since has recovered his equilibrium, his alibi and all the rest of his scattered personal effects.

The four to eight experts for the State differ slightly with this finding.

They All Agree.

They report that to the best of their several and collective knowledge and belief, which is considerable, the defendant is the happy possessor of one of the sanest little noodles they ever had the pleasure of sitting on. They say there is practically no chance that any such carefully-geared aggregation of mental sprockets ever slipped a cog.

But they add that, if the defense insists on the accused having been non compos at the time he did it, he most assuredly is in the same condition at present, or more so.

In short, the State contends that the defendant either should be hanged or remanded to the solitary upholstery for the rest of his life, according to which is most highly objectionable to the defense.

Vide Thaw case ad lib.

One Notable Exception.

There is only one case on record where a corps of alienists employed by one side agreed with those hired by the opposition.

It seems that the accused person, without any advice or suggestion from his lawyers, broke out all over with shockingly acute symptoms of dementia soon after he was arrested.

The defense ordered out the alienists.

They reported that the accused unquestionably was insane—remarkably insane.

Then the prosecution recruited its experts to the full war strength and ordered them to advance with caution.

To the intense surprise of everyone, including the defense, they reported that the prisoner was crazy beyond the shadow of a peradventure. They said he couldn't be any crazier without coming apart.

Well, that just about settled it. What prosecution could hold out against the combined forces of two sets of alienists? It was the first time on record that the warring experts had agreed.

And this time they were both wrong.

Inside of a year the record-holder for craziness—sprints, middle distance and Marathon—had got himself out of the bat factory and was enjoying life in a more congenial clime that had no extradition provisions in the treaty, if any.

The Hypothetical Question.

The hypothetical question is used rather more frequently than the alienist, because it is less expensive and embarrassing, while offering no more than an even break to the other side and confusing the jury fully as much as the most complicated alienistic explosions.

When the h. q. is sprung by the defense, an expert of considerable pedigree is propped up in the witness chair and compelled to listen, with the jury and such of the auditors as can stay awake, to a detailed relation of incidents beginning some time before the birth of the accused and extending to the date of the crime, with provisions and qualifications to fill out four hours and a half and eleven columns of "six point."

Then the expert says:

"No."

After which an expert for the other side listens to the same recital, repeated.

And he says:

"Yes."

What the jury says never gets into print.

ATLANTA GIRL IS DROWNED IN SEA

Ethel Edmondson Overwhelmed by Wrightsville Breakers—Attempted Rescue Fails.

Miss Ethel Edmondson, 24, daughter of Mrs. S. P. Fincher, of No. 343 North Jackson street, was drowned at Wrightsville Beach Friday afternoon. She had been at the beach but a few hours when she decided to enter the surf. Scarcely had she reached the water when a huge wave raced in and knocked her down.

Roy Walraven, of Atlanta, who was with Miss Edmondson, was stunned for a moment by the force of the wave, but recovered quickly and went to her rescue. He had a terrific struggle and but for the timely arrival of Life Saver W. E. Watson he probably would have lost his life.

Miss Edmondson left Atlanta on Thursday night with a party of seven for a ten-day stay at the beach.

She was a member of Grace Methodist Church and was employed as a stenographer by the Wester Music Company.

News of her daughter's sudden death almost prostrated Mrs. Fincher. The body is expected to arrive in Atlnata to-day. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

CHARGE SULZER USED FUNDS IN WALL STREET

Chairman of Investigation Committee Hints at Impeachment Proceedings.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Governor William Sulzer, of New York, was nearly $50,000 in debt as the result of stock market speculations at the time of his nomination, and used contributions to his campaign fund to make additional purchases of stocks while this debt was hanging over him, according to testimony presented to the Frawley committee of the Legislature.

The evidence is sufficient to warrant proceedings to impeach the Governor for violation of the corrupt practices act, Chairman Frawley declares. A decision as to the committee's recommendation is expected by Monday.

The Governor, according to the evidence, had dealings with three different stock exchange firms and was saved from being sold out by one firm by L. N. Josephthal, a Wall street banker, and a member of the Governor's staff as naval reserve aide. Josephthal, it was brought out, paid a debit balance of $26,739 still standing against the account on July 15 last. This was after the Governor had received repeated calls for more margin.

Used Campaign Funds.

The Governor's transactions with the other firms were for cash, and it was in connection with one of these that Governor Sulzer, according to the evidence, used campaign contributions.

Arranged chronologically, the testimony appeared to show that on January 1, 1912, there stood on the books of the stock exchange firm of Harris & Fuller an indebtedness of $48,599 against the purchase by Governor Sulzer of 500 shares of "Big Four," 200 shares American Smelting and Refining Company and 100 shares of Southern Pacific. This testimony was given by Melville B. Fuller, a member of the firm who on Wednesday had refused to answer the questions of the committee. Before testifying his counsel announced that the Governor had agreed that "Mr. Fuller's lips should be unsealed."

There were no other purchases of stock recorded on this account, according to the witness, until December 5, 1912, when the Governor bought 100 shares of "Big Four," making 600 in all. On December 11 the firm, according to a letter produced by the witness, made its first call upon the Governor for more margin. The books showed that on November 18 previous the Governor had paid in $10,000 against the account, and that on December 16, apparently in response to the call for margin, he paid in $6,000 more.

During Governor's Campaign.

In October of the same year the evidence indicated that Frederick Colwell, the Governor's alleged "dummy," purchased from Boyer, Griswold & Co., 200 shares of "Big Four" railroad stock outright at 60, for $12,025, the $25 representing commission. This was at the height of Mr. Sulzer's campaign for the governorship and transcripts from the firm's books showed the stock bought on October 16 was paid for partly in checks, at least two of which were identified in the testimony as Sulzer campaign contributions. There were seven checks in all, and the others are charged by Eugene L. Richards, counsel for the committee, as having been also campaign checks.

Senate Enacts Bill For Inspection of Georgia Bakeries

The Georgia Senate Saturday morning concurred in the House amendments to the medical practice bill and passed the Hixon "germ prevention" measure providing for the inspection of canneries and bakeries of the State. The vote on the latter was 34 to 4, the only opposition arising from those who argued that the bill necessitated an unwarranted expense.

Sharp debate took place in the Senate when the Hule-Allen measure providing for an amendment to the law on corporation charters, so as to allow an extension of time of two yeads instead of one for actual construction, was presented.

Senators Harrell and McNeil, opposing the bill, charged it was really aimed to provide an extension of time for a corporation, which, it is said, was originally known as the Georgia-Carolina Electric Railway, and that as such it evidently was for speculating purposes. The bill was passed, 25 to 5, and was transmitted to the House following the defeat of a motion by Senator McNeil to reconsider.

BOOSTERS PLAN DICUSSION OF EXHIBIT

Will Meet to Devise Ways to Sell Space in Atlanta Manufacturers' Show.

The various committees appointed to canvass the Atlanta manufacturers and sell space in the proposed manufacturers' permanent exhibit to occupy the four top floors of the new Chamber of Commerce Building will meet at the Chamber of Commerce rooms Monday noon. About 75 members of the committees will be present. Brooks Morgan is chairman.

At the meeting new ways of interesting manufacturers in the exhibit will be discussed. It is proposed to have a competent custodian to show visitors and buyers through the exhibit and put them in touch with manufacturers.

The exhibit will be advertised in hotels, street cars, railway stations, etc., and will be a show place for Atlantans and visitors. It will serve to acquaint the people of Atlanta with the wide variety of manufacturing enterprises here and will make it easier for visitors to find where just what they want is made.

The Chamber of Commerce has added an industrial and statistical bureau, which is in charge of Wade H. Leahy, former passenger agent of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railway. Statistical bulletins will be published.

Popular Music for Visiting Merchants At Sunday Concert

A light and popular program for the benefit of the visiting merchants and manufacturers will be rendered at the free organ concert Sunday afternoon by Charles A. Sheldon, under the auspices of the Atlanta Music Festival Association.

A wonderful series of variations on the melody, "Old Folks at Home," will be a striking feature of the program. There will be a brilliant military march, a composition of Harry Rowe Shelley's, with imitative passages of trumpets and drums. Another special feature will be Nevin's "A Day in Venice." The only piece of classical music on the program will be the prelude to "Lohengrin," a composition whose beautiful harmonies appeal to all ears

By MAX.

JULY 31.—You are the only relaxation. Diary, that they permit me to have, and my fingers, because of my weakness, feel as clumsy and big as telegraph poles. It is fortunate no one will ever read this scrawl.

I want to tell what happened the last hour before I stopped knowing what was happening.

I was sitting on the end of a log engaged in watching a cork on the water, thinking, as I so often do, of Sally, and longing to see her, when I felt Manette's arms around my neck. She had crawled out on the log, behind me, a perilous thing to do.

"Puppy says," she whispered, making believe as she frequently did that the dog could talk, "that a big black cloud is scaring him."

I looked up and found the skies overcast. There was a muttering threat in the waving of the trees, a sullen roar, and big, heavy drops of rain began to fall.

"Puppy is right," I replied, and turned hastily to carry the child back to shore. The log was old and soft and worn smooth, and my footing, with the child in my arms, was precarious. Ordinarily cautious, I thought only of the need of getting Manette to shelter, missed my step, and remember little else.

I had a feeling that I was plunging down, down, with Manette and the whole universe plunging on top of me. Everything turned black, there was a sudden, sharp pain in my head that seemed to spread over my entire body, and then I lost consciousness.

They tell me that the log, a fallen giant of the woods, must have turned, and that in my effort to save us from falling I caught hold of it and pulled it down on top of me. Then the rain began to fall in torrents.

"It was merciful," said Richard this morning, while hovering around me while the nurse took her morning walk, "that you were unconscious. If you had realized Manette's danger and your helplessness, you'd have gone mad."

Manette, they said, was saved from injury by a miracle. I have a sort of indistinct recollection that when I felt myself crashing down threw her from me. I don't know about that.

No one knows what happened in the next two hours, for it was fully that long till the dog appeared at the door of the kitchen, barking and howling. They had heard him coming, they said, by a half hour before he appeared in sight, and were ready with lanterns to follow him.

They supposed when the storm broke that he had found shelter, and were not worried, as we had been caught in so many storms before, and had always come home when they cleared, laughing and making merry over the experience.

A Friend in Need.

The dog saved us. "You may need him," Sally Spencer had urged when the question of takin him came up. She question of taking him came up. We needed him more than we needed anything else on earth. So many friends, who have brains where he has only dumb intuition, do not meet the hour of need as he met it.

Manette says that when she crawled out of the mud I was lying on the bank flat on my back, with the tree trunk lying across me. She found her way, with the rain beating down on her, to my side, and in her baby way tried to rouse me.

Failing, she seemed to realize that something serious had happened, for she snuggled down beside me, put both arms around my neck, and tried, as best she could with her arms and face, to shelter me from the storm.

Her little skirts were torn into shreds, proving the effort the dog made to pull her to a place of shelter. He pulled and barked and pulled, but she held to me with both arms. I can imagine the scene—the frantic efforts of the dog to get her to a place of safety, for the waters in the lake were rising, and her equally frantic efforts to cling to her Uncle Max.

With a mournful howl, he finally desisted, and started off to secure help for the task he was unable to accomplish alone.

Manette was uninjured, and the cold beating of the rain had no bad effects. Her name was the first I spoke when I found myself in bed with strange faces bending over me, and her arms around my neck, and her face pressed against mine, is the last I remember before I lapsed into unconsciousness again.

Afterwards.

Since then, nothing else has mattered. I know that they secured a physician at the hotel, and that the next day my own doctor came by special train, bringing a nurse and Richards with him, and that he has been here ever since.

"I am not going to leave you, Max," he said, "till I pull you through. It was my fault that you came to this place."

I am not sorry. Even physical suffering has its recompense. I do not concern myself over a thing in the world. Manette is safe, and it seems good to me, after so many years of fighting battles all alone, to have some one now fighting my battles for me. The doctor tells me frankly that this will be a battle. I do not care.

They let me have just enough light to see these pages, and when I have grown tired of writing, and I have paused many times in writing this, Richards takes you away, Diary, locks you up, and then the room is darkened again. That is the reason I have begun to regard The Hands as disembodied.

They float around me in the strangest way sometimes, always, through the long hours of the day and night, moving with quick, deft touches to make me more comfortable. Sometimes I fall asleep holding a hand in mine, and its firm, cool touch seems to give me strength.

"Please," I asked last night, "let me hold your hand. I don't have that horrible feeling of floating off alone to an unknown sea when I have hold of your hand. I have a notion," growing garrulous, for the hours at night are long, "that I would like to be holding your hand when The Pilot calls for me. Somehow I would not hesitate to go."

"The Pilot isn't going to call for you," replied a voice somewhere, I don't know where, she seems such an altogether disembodied person. I wonder sometimes if she is more than Two Hands and a Voice, "and you must go to sleep now and not think of such things."

Modes of the Moment

For the Season.

THE skirt of the very useful and smart afternoon gown illustrated on the left-hand side is slightly draped. A fold of material runs diagonally from the waist to the drapery. The bodice has long sleeves finished off with a row of small buttons and the bodice is cut in jockey style. In the center is shown a charming evening gown carried out in white with a touch of color in the japonica tulle waistband. The foundation is of ivory charmeuse and over this is arranged the crystal-embroidered tulle. Crystal trimming is carried out on the sleeveless bodice. A smart gown with a graceful skirt is illustrated on the right. A tunic or accordion-pleated silk partially covers the charmeuse skirt; the ends of the sash are finished with heavy silk tassels. The collar and cuffs are made of white linen edged with pleated frills.

THE CANNIBAL .:. A True Nature Story Complete

By F. ST. MARS.

THE last sparrow had ceased twittering and tucked his head under his wing for the night; the last blackbird had left off scolding—as blackbirds do when they are going to roost—and the last of the fowls had fluttered up into its perch in the fowl house, when the old buck rat, the master, and for that matter the leader of all the rats in the farmyard, poked his sharp inquisitive nose up out of the hole in the barn floor. He was a very big rat. His ears were like chewed biscuits and his tail was a stump, half of its proper length, because of the many fights he had had. It would have been difficult to find two inches on his body not marred by old scars. You will see, therefore, that his mere survival proved his great cunning and strength.

Having remained quite still for ten minutes, and made certain that the corner where the big cat usually lay in ambush was empty, he made for the sacks of potatoes ranged in a far corner. It was the work of a few minutes to gnaw a hole in one of these and extract the smallest potato he could get. This he carried to his hole in the floor and down beneath where, hidden under the earth, he had a private store of potatoes, nuts, grain, etc., which he visited when there were too many dangers about for him to venture out to feed.

When next the rat appeared it was in the cowyard, close to the water trough. It was a moonlight night, and everything in the yard showed up clearly, for which reason it had taken him something like an hour to work his way from the barn, moving cautiously always in deep shadow. There was a bull in the yard, a huge beast standing in the full glare of the moon, rumbling to himself deep down in his inside, and two bats were playing in and out of the open thatched cowshed. And that was all, or so it seemed.

Like to Drink.

Rats are thirsty creatures, and like to drink every few hours, is possible, otherwise you would never have found our cunning old rascal here out in the open. The trough was in the moonlight, and as he climbed up it he did so with every sense on the alert. So intent was he upon the possibility of danger around that it never struck him to glance inside the trough. In fact, he was actually leaning over the edge to drink before he realized that something was there drinking already beside himself.

A younger and less cunning rat would have started and bolted, and given himself away, but this one instantly stiffened—"froze," they call it in the wild—and lay still as death. There was no mistaking the identity of the drinker. It was a full-grown weasel. None other possessed that long, lithe form, or that cruel gleam in the eyes, except the stoat.

Apparently the weasel had not seen him, for when it had finished drinking it came slowly along the edge of the trough, balancing carefully, straight toward his crouched, motionless form. And then suddenly he saw its head go up, and its burning eyes peer over the edge below to the yard. Next moment it dropped flat and froze, too—not 3 feet away from the rat. Still it had not seen him, and whatever danger had startled it came plainly from below.

You can understand, then, that the old rat was burning anxious to lift his head and peer over the side. It was awful to lie there and await a danger you could not see, but he could not move.

Then, after about five or six minutes of awful, motionless suspense, very, very slowly over the side of the trough a head lifted and peered down upon the grenish water, and the two beasts crouched motionless within a yard of it.

Beyond a slight start when the head appeared, our rat did not move, and as for the weasel, it did not move at all. Very good reason had the rat to start, for the head was that of his wife. Yes, she was looking for him, and he knew it, but not in the way you think.

Slowly, beside hers, another head moved up and peered over, to be followed by another and yet others, till there were ten of them in a row staring with their gleaming eyes. And all the time beneath, both rat and weasel could hear a continuous pattering and rustling, which told of more rats and yet more.

This, seeing that they were of his own kind, ought to have pleased the rat, one would have thought. It did not. It made him tremble from head to foot, and he had not trembled in the least when he thought himself alone with the weasel. He considered himself, in fact, a match for the bloodthirsty little weasel any day, but he knew he was no match for that which was coming.

Flight.

Then all at once he sprang to his feet, and so quickly that none of the other animals had time to move, he raced along the edge of the trough, sprang clean over the astonished weasel, landed on the far side, slipped, recovered and scampered away along the top of the cattle-mangers, and so to the ground and out of the farmyard gate.

It was magnificently done, that amazingly quick retreat, and it showed a certain amount of reasoning. Had he gone any other way he would inevitably have been either surrounded or overtaken by the other rats, but as it was those that poured after him came into collision with the weasel, who, being the rats' hereditary foe and possessed of astonishing courage, naturally fought and checked the pursuit, until overpowered by sheer numbers. Thus, by the time the whole mob of rats had really got well on the trail of our old villain he was some fifty yards down the hedge that bordered the field outside and beyond hope of capture.

Now you will naturally ask why these rats, his relations and neighbors, and especially his own wife, would seek to murder him—and I will whisper to you the reason. When his wife returned to her nest she found two of her babies gone and another one freshly killed, and her nose told her that our old rat was the culprit.

And that is why, if you go to the farm to-day, you will not find the cunning old rat, who knows all about traps, kills the chickens and ducklings, sucks the eggs and is the worst foe his own kind possesses, living on the farm at all, but about a field or two away, within raiding distance.

Household Suggestions

If black kid gloves or calf-kid boots have become hard, put the gloves on the hand and apply in that position (as if washing the hands) as much camphorated oil as the leather will absorb; then take off and hang to dry and also allow the camphor to evaporate. With boots, rub in well with the hand the same kind of oil. This gives the original suppleness to the leather.

To brighten a carpet, take five or six large potatoes and scrape them finely into a pail of water. Stir, then strain. Wring out a cloth in the water and rub the carpet. Rinse the cloth as soon as soiled. Should soot fall on a carpet, sprinkle dry salt thickly over it, leave it for a few minutes, then brush up. No trace of the soot will remain.

Cayenne pepper is excellent to rid cupboards of mice. The floor should be gone over carefully, and each hole stopped up with a piece of rag dipped in water and then in cayenne pepper.

Tar may be removed from the hands by rubbing with the outside of fresh orange or lemon peel and drying immediately. The volatile oils dissolve tar so that it can be rubbed off.

Permanganate of potash will clease dirty filters of all impurities. A solution should be passed through the filter until it comes out as pink as when it was poured in.

To cure a feather that has become damaged with rain or dew, sprinkle it thickly with common salt and shake before a bright fire until dry, when you will find it as good as new.

BOBBIE, sed Pa to me, you & me will go oaver to see Mister Crowley at his country hoam to-day. I always have wanted to see his country hoam, & this will be a fine day. Mister Crowley will be glad to see us.

Get thare two hammers & give them a rest. Now we will work like this, sed Pa, you brake ten big stones into quarters & I will brake the quarters into eighths & then you brake the eights into thirty-seconds, sed Pa.

Let Eddie do that, sed Mister Crowley. No, sed Pa, you have got to work if I do. Eddie and his brother Art have did enuff work for one day.

But I doant care to swing a hammer, sed Mister Crowley, I was meerly overseeing them.

Well, sed Pa, I guess thare will be nothing stirring on my part until you spit on yure hands & show me that you, too, are not afrade of honest labor.

You brake up the big ones first, then, sed Pa's friend.

No, sed Pa, I am better at braking up quarter stones than whole ones. I can maik the cutest eights out of quarters you evver seen, sed Pa. Go ahedd.

So Pa's frend started in, but I cud see that he dident want to. After he had worked awful hard for neerly half an hour he sed to Pa, Now go aheed & finish this job.

& then it beegan to rain hard. Now we will all go in out of the rain, sed Pa.

We doant mind the rain a bit, sed Mister Crowley. You go rite aheed now & do yure share.

I nevver make littel stones out of big ones in a rain storm sed Pa. Why, thay wuddent ask a convict to work in a storm like this.

But I insist, sed Mister Crowley.

No, sed Pa, I am a vary large, powerful man, & if I shud get neumonia I mite as well maik my will & leev all my debts to my creditors. You know what neumonia wud do to a gent like me, Pa sed.

By all meens, sed Missus Crowley. Cum rite in out of that rain, all of you.

So Pa didn't have to brake any rock. Pa is a good skeemer about work.

The Wife Who Spends Her Husband's Money

BY DOROTHY DIX.

WHEN a young man asks a girl's hand in marriage the first question that her father puts to him is, "Can you support my daughter in comfort?"

No kind and thoughtful parent, however, ever, takes the trouble to ask a prospective bride, "Can you spend wisely and judiciously my son's hard-earned money?"

Yet the one thing is just as important as the other, and the happiness and success of any marriage depends just as surely on the wife's ability to get the full purchasing power out of a dollar as it does upon the husband's ability to make that dollar. The ne'er-do-well of a man does not more surely bring a family to want and poverty than the thriftless and wasteful woman does.

There is a homely old proverb that says that a woman can throw more out of the back door with a teaspoon than a man can put in at the front door with a shovel. And it's true. No man, unless he is a financial wizard, can make any headway against the extravagance of a wife. It is his wife's discretion as a spender that settles the average man's fate for him, and determines whether he is to sit on a bookkeeper's stool or stand behind the counter the balance of his life, or whether he is going to be well to do and prosperous when he is middle-aged.

When you see the young wife of a man on a moderate salary always dressed up in the very latest cut in fashion, when you meet her at matinees every week and watch her having tea at a smart hotel afterwards, when you encounter her in the butcher shop negligently ordering sweetbreads and squabs, you don't have to go to any fortune teller to forecast the future of her husband and herself.

You Can Forecast.

You can do that for yourself. You can see a stoop-shouldered man growing more and more discouraged as the years go by, and he has nothing to show for his labor except a mountain of receipted bills, and at the end of it all you see a man dead from overwork or thrown out of his job into hopeless poverty into which he sinks.

On the other hand, when you see the wife of a poor young man who does her own housework and makes her own frocks and who buys the cheap cuts of meat at the butcher shop and is particular about having the bones and the trimmings sent home, you are equally able to forecast the future for her and her husband. And you see diamonds and motor cars festooning her horizon along about the time she is 50.

There is nothing new in these statements. Everybody has seen hundreds of such cases. Everybody can recite to you dozens of instances in their personal knowledge of men who have been ruined by their wives' extravagance or made by their wives' thrift. Every mother and father pray that their own son will get a wife who has the saving bank habit instead of the bargain counter mania, yet nobody raises a finger to prevent a catastrophe that threatens every man who gets married and every family that is started.

When a woman is wasteful and extravagant, and throws her husband's good money away we blame her, and say all the hard things about her that we can think of. It's a cruel injustice. It isn't her fault. It's the fault of the idiotic way in which we bring girls up.

We don't teach them the value of money. We don't teach them how to spend it, and to expect them to make a wise use of it is as unreasonable as to expect a land lubber to know how to pilot a ship.

No Experience.

The average girl, until she gets married, has never had the spending of a dollar. Her father has paid her bills, and her mother has decided what she could buy. A little change for street car and soda water is about all the money that has ever jingled in her purse. She has never had any fixed allowance for her clothes and personal expenses, and so has never realized that if she paid too much for a hat she would have to do without a dress, and that you can't spend your money and have it, too.

Parents are so afraid that their daughters will waste their money that they let the girl learn how to spend on her husband's earnings, which is pretty hard on Friend Husband.

It isn't the girl's fault that she doesn't know how to spend her husband's money wisely. It's the fault of her parents who have not taught her one of the most important lessons in life. That, this is true is abundantly proven by the fact that women who have earned their living before they were married, and who have thus learned how to handle money, are almost invariably economical and thrifty managers and helps to their husbands.

There is no greater injustice in the world than the way women are treated about money. A woman without money is the most forlorn and piteous creature on earth. She is in a thousand times worse plight, and more danger, than a man is under similar circumstances, yet fathers do not concern themselves to try to protect their daughters against such a fate.

Boys are given money of their own when they are little fellows in order that they may learn to handle it, but the little girl is left to find out this important piece of knowledge the best way she can. A boy is fitted for some occupation whereby he may support himself in comfort. A girl's living is left to chance. She isn't taught any way by which she can keep herself out of the poor house if she doesn't marry, or if her husband should die and leave her penniless.

A rich man leaves his daughter a fortune, but he has not taught her one thing about how to take care of it, and she is left to the mercy of executors and lawyers, and she doesn't even know enough to keep herself from being swindled.

Perhaps some day men will realize that the only way to protect themselves is to teach women how to handle money by giving them a definite sum for their own, instead of making them do the mendicant act for every cent they get. Then we shall hear less about extravagant wives. It's ignorance, not viciousness, that makes women waste money.

Things Worth Remembering

Public executions in Paris prove very profitable to the owners of houses commanding the scene. Windows are let out for the occasion, the landlords watching for the first sign of the execution, and then at once sending word to the persons who have hired the room. If an ordinary criminal is executed, the charge is usually about $6 per seat, but should the offender have committed any remarkable crime, the price runs up to as much as $30.

A Pittsburg boy, William A. Davis, reached his thirteenth birthday on Friday, June 13, 1913. He weighed 113 pounds, lived in Taggart street, which has thirteen letters in it, and was in grade thirteen at school. His mother, who was born on December 13, ordered Master Willie to stay in bed on his birthday to insure that no harm should befall him.

Kettlewell, in Yorkshire, possesses the most remarkable electric lighting installation in England. The village is only a tiny place, but the River Wharfe provides it with natural water power, and at a cost of less than $3,000 a lighting plant has been erected, the villagers being the shareholders and the directors of the company.

Now that the large advertising posters that were so great a disfigurement of the country on either side of the French railway lines have been rendered illegal by act of Parliament, advertisers on the Orleans Railway have begun to plant flower beds of brilliant colors in the fields on either side of the line, with the flowers arranged so as to spell the name of the goods to which they are to call attention.

In parts of Australia, where the average yearly rainfall is not more than 10 inches, a square mile will support only eight or nine sheep. In Buenos Ayres the same area, with 34 inches of rain, supports 2,560 sheep.

The average depth of sand in the deserts of Africa is from 30 to 40 feet.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

It Isn't Only Skin Deep, Says Maude Knowlton

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

"BEAUTY is not just skin deep—it goes as deep as muscles and blood and brains," said Maude Knowlton, with the combination of buoyancy and conviction that makes a background of emphasis for her every word. "That is not saying that I think beauty is health, for features and figure and expression all have their part in making beauty; and I never forget that it goes right through the outer shell to the bone!"

In a cozy little flat out in the Eighties I visited the clever girl who, under Henry B. Harris' management, has scored several distinct hits, one of the best remembered of which is her marvelous portrayal of Simpson, the real chorus lady in "The Chorus Lady."

"A girl can't very well choose her birthplace," went on the girl whose clever gift of mental twist and verbal kink throws added glamour of interest over big brown eyes, wavy black hair and a complexion that when it is not covered with healthy summer-sun-and-ocean burn is first cousin to the cream of Miss Knowlton's own Irish meadow lands.

"No, a girl can't choose her own native heath, but if she could, a good starting place would be California. My! the air out there is made of component parts of vim, vigor and vitality—and with a little heredity to back up the H2O combination a start like that gives a girl a tendency to a sane, healthy viewpoint, and that kindly attitude toward life that irradiates even a homely face.

Not Posing.

"Of course, I am not posing as a beauty expert," said modest Miss Maude, "but surely we agree that an actually homely face may have a charm of spirit and intelligence, a magnetic giving out of self to the world (that plays give and take all the time, you know) that a mere beauty shell which thrills you for fifteen minutes could not exert after the first quarter was past. Vim, vigor, vitality, a tolerant spirit toward the world and its inhabitants, and buoyancy to carry you over the jolting rough places, will surely bring out all your good points better than a diet list and a course of facial massage.

"Take buoyancy—it will keep you from getting the wrinkles and lines and spiritless eyes that are foes to beauty; it will put spring into your step. And now I have reached a siding, for I just have to stop and talk about walking and carriage. Miss Beauty Seeker, hearken! You must walk along on the balls of your feet with buoyant spring instead of laggard slouch if you want to be truly attractive. Walk as if you could conquer worlds—and you will conquer hearts.

Swimming Good.

"Swimming helps a lot in the pursuit of proper land movement, for it brings a graceful fluidity of motion—no, I don't mean a fish-walk, but just a flowing, graceful movement in walking that is sure to please every one who sees, and that is sure to make you look fashionably tall and svelte.

"Oh, if you just hold yourself firmly erect on the balls of your feet and carry head and chest high instead of sloppily caved in, you will look twice as attractive, Miss Beauty Seeker—trust me for that!

"Vim to keep you up above the dead level of mediocrity; vigor to carry you on to ambition and achievement, vitality that will make you ready to meet every occasion; buoyancy—of which I have sung at length—and now a tolerant spirit, of which I can not sing at enough length. You know the woman who is always pecking and perking and digging at life, who criticises all the things that fall outside her own interests and inclinations. Her expression and attitude can ruin even a collection of perfect features and coloring."

"The woman who never would do the things New York does, yet who likes to see New York doing them—if it enjoys them," I mused.

"Ex-actly. I'll use that when I interview you," laughed merry Miss Maude. "'Live and let live' is a good motto for living and having the impress of living mark your face in lines of sweetness.

"Now for a background to the vim, vigor and vitality lady—the simplest clothes she dares wear, so she shall not be a mere clothes-horse, but a young-as-possible-attractive girl, whose own sweet nature and expression and well-carried figure are more important than the mere garments in which she is swathed. And there's my ideal of beauty," concluded Miss Knowlton.

And a very ideal Ideal I call it—don't you?

Miss Maude Knowlton.

WOMAN SICK FOURTEEN YEARS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential,) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

MME. ROSE BRASSY opened her autograph album, a masterpiece of morocco and solid gold, and showed its contents to her friend, Mlle. Lili Blanc. The book was full of sketches, drawings and poems by famous men and women, some merry, others grave, but nearly all containing a compliment to the beautiful young matron.

"You have certainly added some very interesting autographs to your collection since I saw it last. But do you know what you ought to have? Lucien Fond's autograph."

"Don't you think I know that," said Mme. Brassy, rather annoyed. "But it is awful difficult to get hold of just as the man himself. M. Brassy has several times invited him to our dinners, but he has always been engaged."

"Of course he is the fashionable poet of the moment," said Lili, "and ever since I have come home from abroad I have heard of nobody else. The great and only Lucien Fond, whose poems are sung everywhere, from Palais Elysees to Montmartre. And that is why you simply must have his autograph in your collection, Rose."

"It is easy enough to say that, Lili."

"I know it is difficult and now more than ever, for Aunt Charlotte told me yesterday that Lucien Fond goes to Versailles every day and spends the whole day with a sick sister. But I must go now, dear. Good-bye. I am coming to tennis on Friday."

When Mme. Brassy was alone she threw herself into a chair and began to think. For a long while she sat in silence, pondering, then she jumped up and said: "I know how it is going to be done."

The next day Lucien Fond drove to the railway station in his car.

He Is Annoyed.

"Call for me her to-night at 10," he said to his chauffeur.

Then he went into the waiting room, where a large portrait of himself made him pull his hat down over his eyes. His popularity annoyed him. He would have given anything to be an unknown traveler who was not made the target of scores of amateur photographers as soon as he left his house.

The train arrived. Fond entered a first-class compartment and was about to close the door behind him when he felt somebody pulling the door from the outside. He growled something between his teeth intended to sound like an apology and retired into the farthest corner and began to look at the landscape, dreading every moment that the young lady who had entered should begin to talk to him. No doubt she was going to pay him one of the compliments which were on everybody's lips and which he hated.

Of course, she was staring at him now. He could just feel it with his nerves without looking up.

But he was evidently mistaken. The young lady did not say a single word. The poet was bored and the sun annoyed him. He rolled down the shade and cast a stolen glance at his companion.

She was exceedingly pretty. Now she took off her veil and hat and arranged her fluffy golden hair. Then she rested her head in her hands and looked as if her thoughts were far away.

Fond, who was a great smoker and who was dying for a cigarette, took out his case.

"May I smoke, mademoiselle?" he asked politely.

She nodded her head and smiled. The poet was surprised. After the way she had looked at him he had expected a volume of words, a repetition of the compliments he was used to hear everywhere, and which he hated. But she said nothing—not a single word. Fond was surprised and just a little bit disappointed.

Her Scheme.

While he was smoking he studied his companion's beautiful profile and slender throat. Suddenly she stood up and tried in vain to open the window. Fond rushed to her side and opened it for her. She thanked him with a graceful nod.

"At last I have met a woman who does not talk too much," he thought. "Perhaps she does not know me—and still the way she looked at me."

And Lucien Fond, who hated strangers to address him, now actually wished she would say something.

He threw away his cigarette.

"I am sure the smoke annoys you, mademoiselle," he said.

The young lady merely smiled. Did she mean yes or no?

More and more puzzled by her smile and her silence the poet said:

"Don't you feel a draught? Don't you want me to close the window on my side?"

The young lady produced a notebook, wrote something and handed it to the astonished poet.

"I am deaf," he read.

Deaf, that beautiful young girl—for of course she could not be married. The poet was deeply touched and wrote in the book:

"Please accept my sincerest sympathy. LUCIEN FOND."

The poor young girl took her notebook, looked at it, smiled and put it into her bag.

* * *

Three days later Mme. Brassy was having a tennis party. Lili played badly and Rose scolded her.

"You must try to play better, Lili."

Her Triumph.

"Where there is a will there is a way, you know."

"Not always Rose—remember Lucien Fond's autograph."

"Oh, I have that."

Rose threw down her racquet, ran up to the house and returned proudly with her album open. A new page had been pasted in, and on this was written:

"Please accept my sincerest sympathy. LUCIEN FOND."

"But how in the world did you get it so quickly, Rose, and why does he write 'sincerest sympathy'?"

Mme. Rose blushed a little and replied:

"That is my secret."

A Tie.

"I took Gladys to the party last night. On the way home I proposed, and she accepted me."

"That's winning in a walk, isn't it?"

"Yes, but it was a neck and neck finish."

A Misfit.

"Wealth has its penalties," said the ready-made philosopher.

"Yes," replied Mr. Cumrox. "I'd rather be back at the dear old factory than learning to pronounce the names of the old masters in my picture gallery."

How Wonderful!

The dumb man saw a wheel and spoke.

The deaf man saw a flock and herd.

The blind man bought a plane and saw.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN.

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Now, when did she fly?" the detective pursued. "Shortly after I saw her last. And how? On foot and quietly. The hall boy saw her go out, and he says she had her little bag on her arm and looked decent and composed; not like a woman in a delirium, nor even like one who meditates any dreadful crime. But then a boy's observation does not go for much, and we will let it pass. What we will remember, though, is this, that she had a veil on which covered her face, and this veil was brown, or, at least, of a very dark color.

"Two persons have told me so; the boy, whose word goes for little, and the chambermaid, who, though she did not see her go out, had had ample opportunity for observing her veil earlier in the afternoon, and whose word on such a subject does go for something. But, and mark the fact well, for it seems to me important, the veil that was clinging to her dress when she was brought into Mrs. Olney's parlor was gray and decidedly light; not the same one at all, according to description, which she wore when she went out of the hotel. What is the conclusion? That she stopped somewhere. Where? Another thing to find out. And now, about the poison. I went through Twenty-second street very soon after leaving Mrs. Olney's last night, and in front of one of the houses between Fifth and Sixth avenues I found a broken phial reeking with the smell of bitter almonds. So that part of his story is true. I have brought the bits of broken glass. Here they are."

The Coroner looked at them curiously, smelled them and glanced up at Mr. Gryce.

"Well!" he suggested, in an inquiring tone. He felt that the detective's silence meant something.

"Don't you notice anything peculiar about these pieces?"

"No; to be frank, I don't."

"Poison that is bought at a drug store usually has a label on the bottle."

"True."

"And this phial once had a label on it."

"I see."

"But it has been washed off; or rather rubbed off by a moistened hand. There are bits of it still remaining."

"I perceive them."

"What inference can we draw? That caution has been used. Now caution is not an attribute of the suicide, whether that suicide was an intentional one or the result of a mistake."

"Humph!"

"And then there is another thing that puzzles me. Dr. Molesworth declares he found her sitting on the steps. I looked at those steps. There was a light snow lying on them and this snow lay white and undisturbed, as it would not have done if a woman had been sitting there. But then some little time had elapsed since he removed her from the spot, and enough fresh snow may have fallen to cover up the traces which her skirts must have left behind her."

"Very possible."

"Only those skirts were not damp about the edges, as they must have been if she had been sitting on a stoop under these circumstances. And this to my mind is good evidence that she did not sit there. I would sooner believe she had been carried down the stoop and placed in the phaeton without putting her foot to the ground. Only it happens to be General ——'s house and the thing is impossible."

"But how could you know about her skirts? You did not go near her."

"But Harrison did, the man you yourself sent there to investigate."

"And you have seen him since?"

"Five minutes after you did, sir."

The coroner laughed. He did not understand such zeal.

"I knew you would send for me," resumed Mr. Gryce, "and I want to have something to talk about."

"I see," said the Coroner, "well, go on."

"I am almost at the end of my rope, only—did you wonder what had become of Miss Farley's bag?"

"I did not know she had any."

The Missing Bag.

"The people at the hotel say she had, and here is the ocular proof of it." And Mr. Gryce produced from under his coat a small but neat handbag of black leather, having on one side two ornamental steel letters, one of which was "M." and the other "F." "The initials of her name, you perceive."

The Coroner nodded.

"You wonder where I got this bag. Why, in the most natural place in the world; it was in the phæton.'

"Ah, in the phæton."

"When I went out of the house last night I found that vehicle standing where it had been left, in front of the steps; and as according to the doctor's story, it had been the real scene of death, I naturally thought you would wish to have a look at it. I accordingly took possession of it and not seeing what else I could do with it at that time of night, drove it into a stable nearby. I expected every moment to be stopped by somebody and so forced to reveal my true character; but circumstances favored me and I got off with my prize unmolested. You will find it in charge of an officer at No. 66 West —— street."

"That is all right, but what about the look you took? You never left that phæton for me to examine first."

Mr. Gryce smiled grimly at the plain gold stud he wore as a cuff button. "I see you understand me." He then admitted apologetically, "'Twas dark and I did not find much. Still, I found something; the bag, for instance."

The Coroner looked at him with a doubtful air. Did he suspect for the first time that the detective was concealing something from him? If so, he said nothing, and Mr. Gryce went on blandly.

"This bag may have stories to tell. Suppose you open it, sir."

The Coroner nodded and did so. A number of toilet articles came to light and some linen. All was fresh and neat.

"Nothing that is likely to help up," asserted the Coroner. "No vestiges of poison, no letters, not even a scrap of writing of any kind."

Mr. Gryce did not commit himself.

"I would like to take an inventory of the articles," said he.

The Coroner allowed him to do so and then inquired:

"What about the witnesses? Have you seen the clerks at the drug store?"

"Yes, they have nothing to add to his story. He stopped there, came in as he said, told his fears and asked for assistance. One of them, Herbert Black by name, at once responded, but before he could reach the door the doctor came rushing back and crying out: 'It is too late; she is dead, led the way to the phæton, where they saw the poor girl tumbled in a heap, white and lifeless. They were young men and did not know enough to take her by the hand and see if she were yet cold. They took him doctor's word for granted, knowing him so well, and feeling a natural indisposition to interfere in a matter at once so horrible and so delicate, only asked what they should do to help him. 'I am going to take her straight home,' he told them, and requested one of them to telephone to you and the other to run along at his side as far as the house. This latter duty fell to Mr. Black, and it was he who helped the doctor carry the poor girl in. That is all. I worked a half hour, but could get no more out of him."

Nine Hours to Work.

"And the clergyman?"

"Has nothing to impart."

"And the driver? You surely have seen the driver, he whom he sent out of the way with a prescription to some patient or other?"

Mr. Gryce's brows knit.

"I have had but nine hours to work in," he said, "and one of them was thrown away on that boy. I set a watch for him in three places and succeeded in getting the first word with him. But he had only one story to tell and told it doggedly. It was in strict accordance with that of Dr. Molesworth. He had been ordered to come to the C—— Hotel at a quarter past 8 to take Mr. Pease home after the expected ceremony. He had gone there on foot, Dr. Molesworth himself having driven Mr. Pease to the hotel, and, finding the phaeton at the door, had waited beside it for the clergyman to come out. But before this could happen the doctor reappeared, and declaring that matters had not gone as he wished, took his place in the phaeton and beckoned him in beside him, after which they rode about the streets until the doctor suddenly stopped the horse somewhere near Union Square and, commanding him to get out, gave him a bit of paper, which he told him to take as quickly as he could to Mr. Monroe, in Seventy-third street. He obeyed him and had only just come back. This is what the boy said and all he could say, but I know as well as I know anything that he did not tell me the truth, for when I asked him what cars he took he stared at me for a moment helplessly, and then said, 'The Madison avenue cars,' which story he stuck to, but as one who is very much frightened sticks to a statement he knows is false but dares not abandon."

"I will make him tell the truth," asserted the Coroner.

"It is to be hoped so. He is not dull, but he is mighty obstinate, and is to all appearance very much afraid of his master."

"I know the species. I can manage him."

Mr. Gryce looked doubtful, but did not pursue the subject. On the contrary, he remarked:

"I forgot to give you another point I have made. Molesworth says that after leaving the hotel he rode through the streets searching for his missing bride. Now, a person who searches goes slowly, and when he finds what he seeks in the condition in which Miss Farley was found, he still goes slowly. But Dr. Molesworth's horse had been driven far and fast, as the state he was in when I drove him into the stable amply showed."

"A point? I should think so."

"And that is not all. Seeing that the horse went a trifle lame, I examined his feet, and there, wedged between the hoof and the shoe of his right forefoot I found a bit of gravel which I dare wager never came from the streets about Madison Square. As the horse was not lame enough for it to have been there long, I drew the inference that Miss Farley was searched for in other regions than those his story would lead you to surmise."

To Be Continued Monday.

.:. Advice to the Lovelorn .:.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"NO" TO ALL.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The other night I attended a mask ball. Through the masking I became acquainted with a young man. Before leaving he asked me for my address, and if he might call.

I am 17. Should I have given him my address? Should I continue the acquaintance without a conventional introduction if he writes, as I know none of his friends? The young man asked me to call him up on the phone. Can I do this? Would it be proper to have him call? Should he ask me to go out with him (for he said something to that effect)? Could I do so without a chaperone? ROBERTA.

Let the matter end right now. You were foolish to give him your address, but it will be nothing more than passing folly if you make no effort to see him again.

ACCEPT HER STATEMENT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Until recently one of the boys in our crowd kept company with a rather pretty girl and through some disagreement discontinued his attentions. All along I have been rather sweet on this same girl and since their disagreement I have been to see her very often.

What I can not understand, is this: It is only two or three months since I have been calling and she says she has learned to love me dearly. This other boy says she has told him that very often, too. Do you really think she could have learned to love me in so short a time?

She has given proof in one way, however. She never went to church before, but now she goes every Sunday night with me.

The boys kid me terribly and I want to hear from some one who is entirely impartial.

WILLIAM.

She may love you. One can not measure love by time, and you say she has given proof. Accept her statements without question and enjoy the present, but make no arrangements for marriage until you are sure that you are more than "rather sweet" on her.

THOMPSON TO TRY TO BREAK JINX TO-DAY

By Joe Agler.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 9.—When a jinx sits down on a ball club like the one that is following us around, there's no certainty of anything connected with baseball, and I reckon we ought to be thankful that we are permitted to keep on living.

Carl Thompson is due to pitch for us to-day, with Chapman catching and if it hadn't been for the games of yesterday and the day before I'd say we had a good chance to win. Of course, we're due to-day—but there's not a thing to being due, or even past due, when a jinx is on you.

WE thought we had that one-run jinx all busted yesterday and we should have except for as big a slice of the old luck I ever saw a ball club handed in one game.

We got into the last of the ninth with the score 4 to 2 in our favor and Love getting along pretty well, though not up to the mark set in his first game. Young got a hit over second and hurt his leg turning first. Daley ran for him and Perry drew a base on balls. Artie Hofman made to attempts to bunt, and then, forced to take a swing at it, slashed one straight at Bisland. It looked like a sure double play, but the ball took a freak hop far over Bisland's head and Daley scored. Long tried to nip him at the plate, which let Perry get to third and Hofman to second. Then Gibson hit for Noyes and singled, and it was all over.

• • •

BUT you can take it from me, the boys are fighting this jinx, and we believe we are bound to bust it soon.

Whitney Arrives for Big Bout

Frank Looks Fit for Tough Go

By Left Hook.

WE have with us to-day Frank Whitney. The fighting carpenter arrived from Chicago yesterday and will be in our midst for several days. In the course of a few hours Charley White will be on the scene. The boys mix in a scheduled 10-round bout at the Auditorium-Armory on Wednesday night.

If Frank ever looked better than he does at the present time we have never had the pleasure of seeing him. The Cedar Rapids boy is the picture of health and says he never felt better in his life. Whitney is already near the weight he has agreed to make, therefore, he will not have to weaken himself by taking off any needed pounds.

FURTHERMORE, Whitney wishes to inform his many admirers here that on Wednesday night he will be ready for the battle of his career. To beat White is a difficult task for any boxer in the world. Whitney knows this and says he will be in the very best condition of his life when he steps into the ring with the Chicago sensation.

"A victory over White means that I will be in line with the topnotchers of my division," chirped Frank yesterday. "This is the chance I have been after for the past two years and, believe me, Charley will be in for the battle of his life. He may beat me, but if he does, it will be only after I have given him the very best that's in me. And, personally, I think that's good enough to win."

Frank spent a couple of days in Chicago before coming here. While there Whitney boxed with several of the tough "Windy City" scrappers, and, according to Frank, they certainly gave him a good work-out.

"I BOXED two days with Packey McFarland, and believe me, I was a pretty busy party," said Frank. "We boxed five rounds on each day and I never had blows showered at me as fast as I did on those occasions. At that, I wanted the experience, as I knew Packey had boxed with White several times and could give me a few pointers."

"They certainly think a great deal of White out West," continued the fighting carpenter. "They are calling him the greatest fighter in the world at his weight and I have already received two offers if I succeed in taking his measure. Kenosha, Wis., has promised me a bout with Leach Cross, while Milwaukee would put me on with Pal Brown."

While here Whitney will train at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Frank expects to spend most of his time boxing as he has already done quite a bit of road work. He expects to start work this afternoon.

WHITE is considered another Packey McFarland in science, speed and cleverness and has something that Packey rarely displays, a knock-out kick. In boxing Charlie, an opponent can not take any chances. Once an opening is left, the Chicago boy is quick to seize an opportunity of sending home his pile-driving blows.

Whitney thinks that the only way to beat White is to keep on top of him and never give him a chance to get set. He will probably map out his campaign on these lines. Frank expects his added weight will be of much advantage to him in this line of battling.

WHILE most of the fans are discussing the White-Whitney battle there are many fans who are giving much attention to the other 10-round battles. The return engagement between Kid Young and Charley Lee is arousing much talk.

Many believe that Young is still the best local boy at his weight when in condition. Lee, however, thinks otherwise and says he will prove for once and all time next Wednesday that he is Young's superior. Both boys are working hard for the go and should put up a corking mill.

THE other mill on the program will be a 10-round affair between Eddie Hanlon and Mike Saul. Mike already holds one victory over Hanlon and is out to prove he can duplicate the performance. Outsiders, however, appear to be stringing with Eddie. The latter's great showing with Terry Nelson has not been forgotten. Eddie fought like a champion the night he defeated Nelson, and if he fights the same way Wednesday, Saul will have his hands full carrying off the lion's share of the purse.

Tickets are on sale at Shepherd's Segar Store, Edgewood avenue and Pryor street.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

MERELY A HECTIC DREAM.

Within the Hall of Fame I saw a noble monument.
It cost ten thousand dollars if it ever
cost a cent.
And breathlessly I asked the guide:
"Who is yon famous gent?"

"That man," he said, "is Adam Umph
—a man whose noble name
Will echo on for countless years and fill the Hall of Fame.
He was a scribe who wrote about the well-known baseball game."

"And why," I said, "should Adam
Umph attain a statue tall
For writing dope about the gents who lean against the ball
When men like Cy and Charlie Dry are given none at all?"

"At writing dope old Charlie Dry can put [illegible] in the shade,
But this is why," he made reply, "his fame will never fade:
"He never canned a manager nor ever made a trade."

In ancient days baseball was our national game, but that was before we took up the pastime of firing managers.

The fabulous sum of $26 is all that is left out of Luther McCarty's $4,000 purse. This explains why some men would rather manage fighters than work for a living.

Horace Fogel has wished himself on the Federal League, but the said league has been up against it so hard that it is too weak to resist.

If it be true that Tom Chivington said "I should worry," we move that he be barred forever from organized baseball.

The rumor that Artie Hofman will be sold to the Yanks leads some one to suspect that some one has an awful grudge against the said Artie.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

When Frank Whitney steps into the ring with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night he will not lack for admirers. Frank's great battles against "Battling" Nelson, Joe Thomas and Jake Abel has made him a popular boy among local fans.

Ad Wolgast, ex-lightweight champion of the world, will probably be seen in action on Labor Day. Tom McCarey yesterday secured Ad's word to meet the winner of the Jack White-Dundee bout on August 12.

• • •

Terry Nelson still thinks he can handle his mitts with the best of them. Terry has issued a challenge to the winner of the Hanlon-Mike Saul bout and says he will let the purse go winner take all if either of these boys will make 135 pounds at 3 o'clock for a night fight.

• • •

Jimmy Johnson, the New York fight promoter, expects a big crowd to attend the Jack Britton-Young Shugrue go next month. Both boys have put up sensational battles in the Eastern cities and are big cards with the fans.

Joe Rivers will have his last chance to make good on the coast on Labor Day when he tackles Leach Cross in a 20-round set-to. If Rivers loses he will be through as a big attraction with the Pacific coasters.

• • •

Joe Mandot, the French baker boy, intends to start a busy campaign on Labor Day. He has already wired Lou Castro, the local promoter, for a chance at the winner of the Whitney-White bout. Mandot ought to be a big card here.

• • •

Everybody is wondering why Knockout Brown is not fighting and whether he is ever going to put on the gloves again. His manager, Danny Morgan, says he'll start again as soon as the hot spell is over. In the meanwhile, Brown is taking daily spins in his new auto and also taking frequent dips in the briny. He should worry.

• • •

Arthur Pelky has refused to meet Jess Willard in a 20-round bout. Instead, he signed to clash with Charlie Miller before Jim Coffroth's club on August 27. Tom Jones, manager of Willard, claims that Pelky was afraid of his protege.

Freddie Luther Wins Long Race

Glenn and Lockner in Dead Heat

FREDDIE LUTHER, of Fort Worth, which is in Texas, earned the rating of pop-pop champion of the South over the 25-mile route, riding a runaway style of race at the Motordrome last night. Jock McNeil was second and Harry Glenn third, but Freddie had a good margin on all of them, though it should be explained that Jock suffered from engine trouble. That circumstance cost him several laps, and he was able to regain all but one and a fraction.

Luther maintained an average of 81.3 miles an hour. Engine trouble caused Morty Graves to drop out rather early in the struggle. Freddie's victory was especially popular in that it was his first victory on the local speedway.

Tex Richards won his customary event in spite of the fact that his own pet machine was in the hospital. This time Tex's victory was in the five-mile invitation race, which he negotiated in the fast time of 3:35.

An unusual finish was noted in the first heat of the special match race between Harry Glenn and George Lockner. The pair finished in a tie so tight that the judges could only call it a dead heat. The race was one of the best pair events yet seen on the speedway, each rider taking one of the two remaining heats. The event will be raced off next Tuesday night.

Following are the summaries:

MOTORDROME PURSE.
(One-Mile Heats; 2 Miles, Final.)

First Heat—Morty Graves, first; Tex Richards, second. Time, :44 2-5.

Second Heat—Harry Swartz, first; Georges Renel, second. Time, :43 2-5.

Third Heat—Jock McNeil, first; Henry Lewis, second. Time, :43 2-5.

Final—Morty Graves, first; Harry Swartz, second; Georges Renel, third. Time, 1:23.

SPECIAL MATCH RACE.
(Between Harry Glenn and George Lockner, best two out of three, 2-mile heats.)

First Heat—Declared dead heat. Time, 1:27 3-5.

Second Heat—Won by Glenn. Time, 1:28 2-5.

Third Heat—Won by Lockner. Time, 1:28 2-5.

INVITATION RACE.
(Five Miles, Open to All Comers.)

Won by Tex Richards; Georges Renel, second. Time, 3:35.

TWENTY-FIVE-MILE RACE.
(Champion of the South.)

Won by Freddie Luther; Jock McNeil, second; Harry Glenn, third. Time, 18:27 2-5.

CHANCE PAYS $17,000 FOR MAISEL, BALTIMORE PLAYER

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Nothing daunted by his recent experience with Jimmy Callahan in the Chase trade, Frank Chance yesterday added to the list of high-priced "beauties" when he paid Baltimore $12,000 in cash and Players Daniels and Midkiff, valued at $5,000, for Ed Maisel, the star shortstop of the Orioles. Maisel is to report to Chance here to-day.

The high-priced infielder has been much sought by the White Sox, the Boston Braves and other clubs, but the Yankees, striving earnestly to get a winning club, outbid the others. The new man plays third base or shortstop with equal facility. Last season he batted .276 in 159 games, fielded .925 in 138 games at short and .927 in 22 games on the hot corner.

SAVAGE AND KUBIAK GO 10 HARD ROUNDS TO A DRAW

WELSH GO NOT LIKELY TO NET RITCHIE MUCH

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Aug. 9.—Willie Ritchie has let it be known that he had accepted the offer of Vancouver promoters for a match with Freddie Welsh on September 1.

This means that Ritchie has little thought of meeting Tommy Murphy, his "logical opponent," in the near future, and judging by remarks heard where sports congregate, Ritchie can prepare himself for a renewal of the criticism he was subjected to while he was touring the footlights and replying vaguely to questions put to him in respect to his ring plans.

There is a whisper around already that the Vancouver offer is not genuine but that Ritchie and Welsh are simply stockholders in a venture which calls for a 20-round bout and the taking of moving pictures. Those who are responsible for this rumor say that the "international aspect" of the bout leads all the parties interested to think that a big clean-up will be made from the "movies."

SENATORS BUY PITCHER.

WINNIPEG, MAN., Aug. 9.—George Ashe, of New York, gamely fought off the vicious attacks of Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, for twelve rounds last night, and the bout was declared a draw. Although Dillon made blood flow in the first round he was unable successfully to continue the advantage.

FORECLOSED ON BRIGHTON BEACH RACING PROPERTY

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The passing of another famous New York race track apparently is forecast in a foreclosure sale of the Brighton Beach property, scheduled for August 28. The action was brought on a second mortgage of approximately $95,000. The first mortgage is $60,000.

To Stop Scaling of Psoriasis

This Troublesome Skin Disease Promptly Checked by a Very Simple Attention.

A lady in Lexington, Ky., says that before she began using S. S. S. psoriasis broke out at frequent intervals where she thought it cured. But by getting her blood under control by the influence, of S. S. S., the disease entirely disappeared and there was never again the slightest sign of it.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from the fine network of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin, is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The great Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 182 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Ax Hangs Over Evers and Callahan

One-Run Jinx Still On the Job

By O. B. Keeler.

SIDE-STEPPING for the moment the somewhat scrambled managerial lay-out in our own tight little league, and placing a large and furry ear in immediate proximity to the Red Old Hills of Georgia, we are able to discern distant rumblings from the general direction of Chicago.

It listens to the effect that Jake Stahl shortly is to welcome distinguished company in the recently organized club of Canned Managers.

Jimmy Callahan, of the White Sox, and Johnny Evers, of the Cubs, are to be up for membership.

ALSO Thomas Chivington, president of the American Association, who likewise lives and moves and opens his protests in Chicago.

We don't know that anybody in this precinct is likely to get much het up over the prospective skids for Mr. Chivington, so long as he doesn't come down here and start an insurrection.

But there will be a good deal of interest in the fate of the Silent Trojan and the man who could see $18,500 in Larry Chappelle.

CALLAHAN'S case is something brand new, while Evers' has been growling and chirping alternately since before the present season opened.

Cal is simply getting the hot end of it from the bugs, the same as any manager in a town accustomed to a winning ball club, when his bunch falls into a losing streak. The bleacher experts in particular are after his scalp.

But that is only incidental.

It is said that Callahan's manner of handling his men, always sharp and dictatorial, is rapidly getting to the bullying and bulldozing stage. If that is true, it is a serious state of affairs. Most ball players are led and kidded, not abused and nagged, into playing their best. A sore bunch of ball players of the best class will put up a much sorrier fight than an inferior team, working and pulling together, and fighting the enemy intead of the manager.

* * *

SWITCHING to Evers, however, we find our o. f., Chubby Cholly Muffy, standing all puffed up in the spotlight and insisting he likes a scrappy club and a scrappy manager.

"I want them to fight—fight each other—fight the manager—fight the other club," says Mr. Muffy. "Johnny Evers has made good. He is there to stay."

But Mr. Muffy said a lot of kind words about F. Chance, too. And M. Brown.

And it is recalled that Roger Bresnahan still is with the Cubs—and that Rajah was pretty well understood to be taken over with the idea that if J. Evers didn't deliver a pennant, he (Rajah) was to have a crack at it.

We don't know about that, except this much:

J. Evers won't win the pennant this year.

AND about Johnny. He's a grand little ball player, but his unruly talking apparatus is getting him in bad. Getting him in worse, it might better be said.

The most ardent Cub fans are getting around to where they want Johnny to play ball. They want him to stay in the game and not spend his valuable time debating with the umpires and walking to the clubhouse.

Johnny may change his tactics.

And he may not.

* * *

FROM what we can gather at this distance, the following points appear in evidence:

The One-Run Jinx sticks on the job.

Providence has its arms around Fleharty.

If Slim Love was looking for a fine place to blow, he certainly found it; also, he did a good job of blowing.

The Volunteers' position in the league standing should be reversed, if the game yesterday was a fair sample of their luck.

Bill Smith had better begin coppering his own bets. In the last four games he has left Thompson and Love in too long and Dent not long enough.

But, at that, had Billy's maneuvers turned out the other way, the bugs would have been wagging their alleged domes of thought and talking about what a wise manager he was.

We still have a chance to make the trip all square at Nashville.

WOLGAST AND RITCHIE IN A MATCH FOR COMING FALL

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Tom Jones is authority for the statement that Champion Willie Ritchie will be seen in action with Ad Wolgast here the last of October or some time in November.

"It is possible," Jones says, "that they may not get together before Thanksgiving, but a return match will be staged here about that time, unless negotiations fall through entirely."

Ad and Tom Jones arrived in town yesterday morning. It is understood that McCarey will make a strong bid for the match and both Ritchie and Wolgast have signified their willingness to be here should the terms be satisfactory.

TEAMS TO PLAY OFF TIE.

There will be a battle royal to-day when the Hallet & Davis and Atlanta National Bank teams of the Manufacturers' League, tie up in the play-off of a tie which now exists between them for first honors. The game will be played at Tenth and Boulevard and called at 3:30 o'clock.

GOLFER MUST BE SUB-CONSCIOUS TO PLAY WELL

By Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—An article in the August Century Magazine by Marshall Whitlack, entitled "Mind versus Muscle in Golf" seems to have attracted much attention. Mr. Whitlack has developed a new theory of play and applied it to his own game. The result has been a marked improvement in his scores. He believes that good golf is played through the lower nerve centers and motor channels, while poor golf is due to the direct interference of the brain or consciousness.

"Apparently we play our good golf in a subconscious condition," he says, "and that is why all interruptions are so disastrous to one's game. According to this theory one must depend upon muscular sense and the preliminary waggle assumes unusual importance, as the right feel must be obtained in action, the waggle must be continued until the muscles feel the balance and poise of the body while in motion."

The chief idea of the whole theory seems to be that the ball must be addressed in motion and not in repose, because in the latter condition the muscles will set and stiffen to the detriment of one's game.

So much for the theory. The other day I met Mr. McCordic, one of Skokie's most prominent golfers, and he asked me if I had read the Century article. He and Douglass Smith read it last Friday night. Saturday morning they went out and made 75 and 77, and attributed that good score to the new idea.

GUS MUDD, one of Beverly's golfers, has sent me the following question:

"What is the penalty when caddy goes into bunker with player in match play or qualifying round?"

I am not an authority on rules, but I have never heard of any penalty attaching to such an act. I consulted Tom Bendelow, who assures me there is no such penalty. If by chance he is mistaken I should be glad to hear from other golfers.

The reason I do not think there is any such ruling as indicated by the question is the enormous size of the bunkers in Great Britain. If a caddy could not go into such a bunker it would work great hardship upon the player.

* * *

CAPTAIN R. H. PETERS, a civil war veteran, and an enthusiastic member of the Ravenswood Golf Club, made a wonderful shot on his home course the other day. He was about twenty yards from the fourth green and his ball lay in a grassy hollow and he had to use a well-lofted club to get out. Undismayed, the captain caught the ball deftly and landed it in the hole. It was a very unusual shot and Captain Peters has every reason to be proud of his achievement.

Schwartz Wants to Quit Vols

Hirsig Stingy With "Coin Bag"

By Paul W. Treanor.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 9.—Flying distress signals from every mast, leaking from stem to stern, the poor old hulk in which the Vols have been floundering about in the rough seas has been deserted by the Voltown bugs, and inquiring glances are being turned to a new and up to date craft to be launched next season. Every hope of landing in even decent company has been abandoned and the only thing left to consider is the building up of a club, out of entirely new material.

On top of the multitude of woes of the Schwartzmen, who have experienced the most appalling disasters on their road trips, comes the well-defined gossip that the Boy Manager has thrown up the sponge and asked to be relieved of the managerial worries in 1914. To the thousands of fans who have long been clamoring for Bill Schwartz's scalp the news will be hailed with wild delight, while to a few more thousand who will never believe that Bill has had a fair chance, his resignation will be a tough blow.

The latter clan are asking just who will be the Moses to lead the Vols back to the top rung of the ladder, of which they clambered by only a toe hold, back in 1908 when Bill Bernhard was the pilot. Where are they going to find a leader who can produce better results than Bill Schwartz, when one pauses to analyze the bunch of has-been and discards with which he has been forced to fight, and echo, always on the job, cuts in with the well-known answer.

Hirsig Pleads With Manager.

President Hirsig, according to the dope going the rounds, has pleaded with the boy pilot to reconsider his retirement from the game and direct the club next season from the bench, at the same time offering Bill a mighty fat job in the big garage which the Alibi Boss is building. Bill is a big ace wherever tires and automobiles are concerned and can hook himself on to a soft job any time he wants to send his uniform to a museum.

If anything will prevail upon Schwartz to once more head the Vols, it is going to be the sting of past defeats which prod his ambition to bring a flag to Voltown, for no man lives who can brand the boy manager as a quitter.

The time for post-mortems passed long ago, likewise the weeps over the upset milk can, but Hirsig doesn't know as much about ball players and how the game should be played as a sparrow does about the Panama toll argument, and he just naturally can't keep from jabbing his fins in the pie and deciding on the merits of ball tossers, some thousand miles or more away from his office.

The Murphy of Southern League.

The man who PRESENTED Harry Welchonce to the Crackers, who passed up a chance early in the year to grab off Third-sacker Dodge from the Reds, when they were crazy to get rid of him, who handed down adverse weights (?) opinions on pitching deals, when the slabbers were cracking, was Hirsig. Time without number he meddled and wrecked the club's chances for the Charles Webb Murphy of the Southern League is about the best little meddler at large.

When the Vols, after a grueling drive and fighting on sheer nerve, crawled into second place, Bill Schwartz, realizing the club was skating on thin ice, went to his boss on his knees for help, pointed out the weak places and faltering twirlers. And did Hirsig heed the warning? With padlocks that would baffle a burglar's kit, he clamped the lid on the strong box and laughed at the fears of the Vols ever slumping.

Some, with more sentiment than brains, are gaping their heads off for Artie Hofman to be elevated from the ranks, but you can go broke that the former Cub wouldn't touch the leadership if Schwartz has any notion of leading another forlorn hope, and even if Bill should lay the spangles aside, Circus Solly is far too wise a ball player to allow the present flock of Vols to be saddled off on him and put more gray hairs on his scalp.

CHURCH BALL PLAYER UNRULY.

CAMBRIDGE, OHIO, Aug. 9.—J. Powers, a member of the United Brethren Church team, is under arrest here on a charge of assault and held by the police under $300 bond.

Powers, it is alleged, assaulted F. S. Pollock, an umpire here, during a ball game, fracturing his skull. The hearing was delayed pending the outcome of Pollock's injuries. The assault took place during a twilight game late yesterday. Powers took exception to a ruling of the umpire and a fight followed.

GUNBOAT SMITH STOPS FLYNN IN FIVE ROUNDS

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Gunboat Smith is believed to have added some slight weight to his claim of the heavyweight title last night when he whipped Jim Flynn so thoroughly in five rounds that Referee Joh stopped the bout, which was scheduled for ten rounds. The Pueblo fireman was knocked down four times in the fifth round, and was battered fiercely throughout the battle after the opening session.

Smith weighed 188 1-2 pounds and Flynn was five pounds heavier. He started rushing at the first gong and crowded Smith back to his corner, working short-arm jabs to the body. Smith broke away and straightened his adversary up with a savage right uppercut. Then he managed to keep the fireman away from him and jabbed him enough to even things in that round.

Smith continued the same tactics in the next three rounds, keeping Flynn away from him and jabbing him viciously. In the fifth round the Gunboat stopped a fierce swing with his ribs, and on recovering he sailed in savagely with a hail of right and left jabs, followed by a right uppercut flush on the jaw that sent the fireman down for the count of eight. He got up and was knocked down again, and when this had been repeated twice more, Joh stopped the fight.

HUERTA ORDERS DRAFTING OF FRESH DEFI

Determined to Refuse to Recognize Lind—Iron Hand Fails to Curb Carranza's Activity.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 9.—Captain Snowden, of the battleship New Hampshire, at the direction of John Lind, Special Ambassador from President Wilson to Mexico, to-day sent the following wireless to Admiral Fletcher, commander of the flotilla of United States warships in the harbor here:

"Governor Lind wishes to see the United States Consul and Admiral Fletcher immediately upon his arrival at Vera Cruz Saturday. Governor Lind will not go to Mexico City until Sunday."

Sensational rumors were circulated as to the cause for the conference. The New Hampshire will probably arrive this evening.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Maintaining his iron hand attitude in spite of international menace from revolutionary armies and threatened coercion, Provisional President Huerta to-day continued his diplomatic battle with the United States by giving orders to draft another note of protest against the coming of Special Ambassador Lind, unless the United States recognizes Mexico or halts Mr. Lind before he arrives in this city.

A tense situation exists here pending the arrival of Mr. Lind, who has been retarded by the State Department at Washington. It is likely that Mr. Lind will not arrive here until Sunday or Monday, if he is not detained en route on orders from Secretary Bryan.

Huerta's hope that defiance of the United States might break down the revolutionary spirit in the north seems to have been futile, according to a message from General Venustiano Carranza, leader of the rebels.

Gains Fresh Followers.

This was a reply to overtures to Carranza to join his forces to the regular army in the event of a "foreign invasion." However, Huerta has gained fresh followers among the radical element by his defiance of President Wilson. Supporters of the provisional president charge that the United States is preparing to act as it did in Cuba.

Sensational reports were current today relative to the diplomatic mission of General Felix Diaz to Tokio. Ostensibly Diaz is going to thank the Japanese Government for its representation at the Mexican centennial, but the belief is growing that Japan has consented to make a treaty with Mexico, and that Diaz is really a special ambassador. This treaty, it is reported, has to do with a league of common interests and not with commercial right. It follows the movement of the Government to invite 50,000 Japanese emigrants here to colonize the state of Morelos, which has been nearly depopulated by the rebellion.

Insists on Recognition.

Whether Huerta has any more cards to play in his diplomatic fight against outside interference with Mexican affairs is a question known only to the provisional President and his closest advisers. Huerta insists on "recognition and no parley," but the Government is not in condition to enforce his threat by war.

The national treasury is nearly depleted and the army material of the country has been thinned to a minimum by three years of revolution.

By diplomacy, however, he might still be able, by playing upon the Latin-American republics' fear of annexation and upon the hostility of foreign powers to the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine, to force the United States into a compromising position.

Even Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy here, is not acquainted with the details of Mr. Lind's mission. He has so informed the Mexican Foreign Minister.

There is a big fleet of United States warships in the harbor at Vera Cruz to welcome the New Hampshire, in which Mr. Lind is traveling. The latest addition to the fleet is the gunboat Wheeling.

Crisis Expected When Lind Presents Message.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—With the issue taut between the United States Government and General Huerta on the question of the diplomatic propriety of John Lind's mission to Mexico, the strain of the Mexican situation in Washington was undiminished today.

With the special envoy not due to arrive at Vera Cruz until late to-day, and with no answer forthcoming to the conciliatory statement given out by Secretary of State Bryan yesterday, conditions remain unchanged.

Washington is waiting to hear what General Huerta's specific course of action toward Lind will be. Huerta probably will not recognize the presence of Mr. Lind in Mexico until the latter attempts to transmit the mediation proposals to him through Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy.

It is believed the crisis then will be precipitated unless Huerta backs down completely from the attitude taken in his recent note. It is not believed he will.

That the New Hampshire was delayed purposely by wireless to give President Huerta every opportunity to reconsider his ban on Lind was learned to-day. No official business will be transacted until Monday, allowing Huerta 48 hours more leeway.

Marked activity was noticeable at both the War and Navy Departments, however, and preparations were made to keep offices in these departments open all Sunday.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels today made sure that the wireless communication between the naval station at Arlington, Va., and the Atlantic fleet, now maneuvering off Newport, R. I., was unbroken and it was rumored that Secretary of War Garrison, now on a tour of inspection of army posts throughout the United States, would return to Washington immediately instead of September 3.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will go to the White House at 8 o'clock to-night for a conference with President Wilson at his invitation. It is expected that the President will tell the committee his plans and policy with reference to Mexico.

WHY RESINOL SOAP KEEPS COMPLEXIONS CLEAR AND HEALTHY

When you wash your face do you realize that it is not enough to remove the dirt—that your skin needs a soothing, healing influence to keep your complexion fresh and free from blemish?

Ordinary toilet soaps do not assert this influence. Many of them contain free alkali which tends to dry the skin and destroy its delicate texture. Even the best of such soaps can only clean, they can not heal and protect the skin. Resinol Soap, besides being an absolutely pure toilet soap, contains the same soothing, healing, antiseptic balsams as Resinol Ointment, the value of which in the treatment of skin affections is known throughout the medical profession. That is why Resinol Soap does for the skin what cosmetics are supposed to do—it insures not only a clean skin, but a healthy skin, and a fair, clear complexion. Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by all druggists. Trial free. Dept. 4-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

MAYOR MUM ON 'HEAP BIG TALK' ON FINANCES

Nothing but Language at Star Chamber Session in His Office, Woodward Asserts.

A star chamber conference or executive session oft he Finance Committee of Council was held Saturday morning at 11 o'clock in the office of Mayor Woodward, at which all citizens, officials and newspaper reporters were excluded.

After a solid hour of work, the committee adjourned and departed almost in a body.

When questioned as to the action taken by the Finance Committee, Chairman Humphrey answered:

"The Mayor requested that all newspaper reporters be referred to him. He will give all the information that is to be given out."

The reporters hastened into the Mayor's office and began to question him as to the weighty matters that had called for closed doors and secret session.

"What action did the committee take in regard to the row in the Park Board? Was Carey and Cochran right?" was asked by two or three at once.

"The matter was not even mentioned," replied the Mayor.

"It was understood that the meeting of the committee was called to settle the row. Was that not the case?"

"No, I tell you that matter was not mentioned," replied the Mayor.

"What was the object of the meeting, and what subject was discussed?"

"We simply met in friendly conference and talked."

"Was the subject the crematory, sewer construction or the public schools?" was asked.

"Neither. I found the City of Atlanta $700,000 in debt when I took charge as Mayor, and I am determined that every cent of it will be paid, and that at the end of my term the city will be out of debt. The action of the Supreme Court gave me the power and I have locked the door and have the key safely in my pocket. The Finance Committee must not anticipate revenue that is likely not to show up. Every sum appropriated must be in sight. No chances will be taken."

"But what did the committee do at the executive session?"

"Talked," was the answer.

Powers Agree to Rob Turks of Adrianople

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, Aug. 9.—Assurances were given to the Bulgarian Government today by the powers that they would serve Turkey with an ultimatum calling for the evacuation of Thrace, which includes Adrianople.

Doubt is growing here whether peace in the Balkans will be lasting. Bulgaria and Montenegro are dissatisfied with the result of the war, while Turkey will probably seize any pretext to resume hostilities.

There is a strong revolutionary party in Albania which will keep the standing army busy.

Flee From Tariff To Rocking Chairs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The north end of the Capitol building looks these days like the upper deck of a summer hotel. The commodious veranda is filled with roomy wicker rocking chairs, occupied by Senators who weary of the tariff debate and seek to get cool.

The idea originated with Sergeant-at-Arms Higgins. He baited the place with two or three rockers and waited to see how the scheme worked. It was so popular that the building could not furnish sufficient chairs to meet the demand.

The bride's father gave up the pursuit at the river bank.

Atlantan in Wreck Recovers Strength

CHILDREN OF GEORGIA

"AND THEY ALL WITH ONE CONSENT BEGAN TO MAKE EXCUSE."

Luke 14:18.

They were at dinner.

Jesus said:

"When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind,

"And thou shalt be blessed."

One at the table pretended to be in sympathy. He began smugly:

"Happy is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God."

The hypocrisy of the man and all others like him was unmasked in the answer made by Jesus. He said:

"A certain man made a great supper and bade many—

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse."

One said one thing, another another.

With one it was a field; with another it was new oxen.

In the end, the Lord said:

"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

And from the highways and the hedges called He His guests.

Are you a maker of hypocritcal phrases as was the man at the Pharisee's dinner table—pretending a love for that which is just and right?

Or, to-day, are you trying to do the will, not of man or men, but of Him who died for you?

Let us have done with excuses!

While spending thousands on fields, hogs and cattle, say not:

"We are unable—

"We can not give proper care to these girls—

"These children must go down in shame because of our lack of money—

"But our beasts we must protect whatever the cost."

If animals are more valuable than girls, let us say frankly: but you know that this is untrue.

You know what Georgia would do.

Consider, then!

The Bill in the House providing a Reformatory for Girls is No. 4—ahead of any other measure appropriating money.

The Penitentiary Committee has approved it.

Unanimously the Appropriations Committee has recommended that it pass.

Why, then, should beasts and fields be provided for by later bills and nothing done for Georgia's wayward and delinquent girls?

BURWELL of Hancock, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman and the vice-chairman, BLACKBURN of Fulton, HARDEMAN of Jefferson, MILLER of Bibb, NUNNALLY of Floyd, PAULK of Berrien, RAGLAND of Talbot, REDWINE of Fayette, RHODES of Clarke, SHUPTRINE of Chatham and SLADE of Muscogee constitute the Rules Committee of the House.

The Bill is in their hands.

Monday is the final day in which the measure can be heard and enacted into law at this session of the Legislature.

These eleven men, THE RULES COMMITTEE, will not prevent a hearing, say their friends. We believe that they will do more, that they will help to pass the Bill.

For they know the worth of a girl-child of ten to fourteen.

And they can appraise a cow or hog.

McCravy Farm of 175 Acres Subdivided—Sales Total $37,050—Suburban Lot $35 a Foot.

J. B. Jackson, agent, will sell before the courthouse door at Marietta at 10 a. m., September 2, acreage tracts of the A. P. McCravy farm, comprising a total of about 175 acres, on terms of half cash and the balance in one and two years at 7 per cent. Mrs. Jane L. McCravy is administratrix.

The tracts will be one to twenty acres. They lie two miles south of Marietta, at Turner's Crossing, on the Marietta car line. Fourteen front the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the electric car line and the public road.

Small Sales Total $37,050.

Real estate agents have been quite busy this week with small sales, three agents announcing Saturday a total of $37,050. Twenty thousand of this was done by Roff Sims & Co., detailed announcement of which will be made later.

B. M. Grant & Co. have sold for Mary Z. Scales to E. V. Carter, Jr., a vacant lot on the east side of Williams street, north of Emmett street, 55 by 170 feet, for $1,400; for J. R. Holliday to F. H. Dobbins, a lot on the south side of Linden street, east of Myrtle street, 50 by 80, for $1,250; for the Walton Realty Company to Mrs. C. G. Hartman, a 100 by 400 foot vacant lot on the Cheshire road, near Peachtree road, for $3,500, or $35 a front foot, and to a client for C. E. Kauffmann, a 70 by 250 foot lot on the north side of Westminster Drive, Ansley Park, for $4,900.

Seventy Acres Bought.

W. A. Williams has sold to C. S. Minor through Robert W. Parris, of the Graham & Merk Real Estate Agency, four acres of land and a seven-room bungalow at Clarkston, near the Stone Mountain car line, for $2,500.

Mr. Parris handled a deal in which J. R. Phillips, of Atlanta, bought 70 acres of land near Bronwood, Terrell County, from Mr. Rodgers for $3,500, or $50 an acre. This land is on the Central of Georgia Railway, in a rich agricultural section.

County Lot Transferred.

A warranty deed on record Saturday tells of an interesting transfer of a small acreage tract on the Roswell road near Piedmont avenue. J. W. Moore gave the county $2,000 for it June 12, 1912, Luther Z. Rosser acting as commissioner, and Mr. Moore sold it recently to David W. Meadow. The consideration was not named.

Ponce DeLeon Place Sale.

J. W. Garland, of Pike County, has given the Cole-Mitchell Company a warranty deed on the property at the northeast corner of Ponce DeLeon place and St. Charles avenue for $6,500, the buyers assuming a loan of $3,000. The dimensions of the lot are 50 by 161.

Nice Profit in Lot.

A profit of $1,200 is represented in a transfer which has just gone to record. John T. Taylor has sold to Homer W. Cothran for $3,700 a property on West Tenth street, 132 feet east of Ridge avenue, having bought it from Dr. Joel T. Daves, of the Smith & Ewing Agency, for $1,503. The lot is irregular in shape.

Seven Apartments Leased.

Albert S. Adams, manager of the renting department of Bryan M. Grant & Co., announced Saturday the lease of seven housekeeping apartments in the Ponce DeLeon, which was recently placed with his firm for renting. Several smaller apartments of two rooms and bath have also been leased.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "A bullish construction was placed on the Government report on corn, while on wheat it was bearish and on oats mixed. Wheat bulls figure that it will be hard to keep prices down, with corn a failure west of the river and with a great scarcity of feedstuffs in the States of largest production."

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says:

"Wheat—Partly cloudy conditions, with scattered light rains, are noted this morning in the Northwest. There was a little better demand yesterday, with shipping sales in our market of 145,000 bushels, the seaboard reporting fifteen loads for export. Yesterday's Government figures were about as expected by the trade, and we doubt if they prove any especially bearish influence on prices.

"Corn—The weather map shows practically no rain in the corn belt, with temperatures still high. The Government figures do not represent present conditions, as since these figures were gathered the deterioration in the crop as a whole has been very great.

"Oats—The Government figures rather exceeded those generally looked for, both as to the probable outturn of the present crop and supplies on hand from the old. We are inclined to think, however, that the showing returns during the coming month may be of a character such as to lower the total yield, as compared with the figures given yesterday.

"Provisions—Packers continue to buy lard. Demand for January good. The market is quiet and featureless at the moment."

Test Arranged for Device to Eliminate Open Switch Danger

A test of the Shepard automatic switch will be given at Oakland City at 3 o'clock this afternoon by the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, which will be witnessed by a large number of railway officials.

The switch is claimed to be a preventive of the open switch evil, and puts the opening and closing of the switch entirely under the control of the engineer. By throwing a lever in the cab the engineer may open the switch, and after his train has passed completely into it the switch automatically closes.

A $700,000 concern has been organized to manufacture the device, the plant being located in Atlanta.

HEAVY SLUMP IN PRICE OF COTTON

Western Rains and Promise of More Cause Heavy Sales. Support Withdrawn.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—With the exception of August, which opened 5 points higher on covering, the cotton market opened easier to-day with other options at a net decline of 4 to 13 points from Friday's final. On the opening the selling was general on a few light showers shown on the map over the western belt and local weather people believed that the barometers in the Southwest point to showery conditions over Texas and Oklahoma over Sunday. There was considerable selling by traders who went long on dry weather talk yesterday.

Futures and spots in Liverpool were quiet.

The buying was extremely light and scattered, being confined mainly to a few large spot houses.

The Government reports showed temperatures in Oklahoma yesterday averaged 104 degrees and Texas 98 degrees; with fifteen stations 100, five 102, two 104 and one station 106 degrees.

As the session wore on the selling became heavy. Little or no support was in evidence. The lack of substantial buying power caused a further reaction in values by dropping 7 to 18 points under the opening quotations. Every option established new low levels not witnessed in many months. August was as low as 11.57; September, 10.96; October 10.92; December, 10.81, and January, 10.92. These declines failed to bring out any fresh demand and the market closed practically at the bottom, showing net losses of 13 to 20 points from the final quotations of Friday.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 9.—Due 1½ points higher, this market opened steady at a net advance of 1 to 2 points. At the close the market was quiet, with prices at a net gain of 1 to 1½ points.

Spot cotton dull at 3 points advance; middling 6.46d; sales 3,000 bales, including 2,000 American bales; speculation and exports 200; imports 4,000 bales, of which 3,000 were American.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—Liverpool is very disappointing with futures 2 to 3 points lower than due; spots 3 points higher; sales, 3,000 bales.

Developments overnight were in favor of unsettled weather, with precipitation coming on the Western States—Arkansas and North Louisiana over Sunday. The map shows increasing cloudiness in Texas and some precipitation in the Northwest and Southeast portions.

Indications are for continued partly cloudy weather in the eastern half with scattered showers. It will become cooler in the northwestern quarter of the belt.

The market opened about 5 points lower, but broke quickly to 11 cents when the Government forecast confirmed private advices of rain prospects over Sunday in the Western States and Oklahoma.

Market prospects next week depend principally on the amount of rainfall in the Western States. The half monthly condition forecasts by the usual private authorities like Giles and others, are expected to show decline, as the rains came too late to affect their condition figures.

Covering by scalpers over Sunday rallied prices in the last hour.

USUAL DULLNESS IN STREET TO-DAY

Market Ruled Within Narrow Range on Weakness of the London Exchange.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—A heavy tone prevailed in the stock market at the opening to-day, although some of the issues made substantial gains on speculative buying. The market here followed the lead of American shares in the London market, weakness having been caused there by crop figures.

Among the losses here were: Amalgamated Copper, ½; American Car and Foundry, ¼; Canadian Pacific, ½; Utah Copper, ⅜; Steel common, ¼; Reading, ¼; Norfolk and Western, ¼; Erie ⅛, and first preferred, ⅜.

Delaware and Hudson made the best gain, advancing 1 point. Wabash was up ⅛. The Harrimans were steady, Southern Pacific advancing ⅜ and Union Pacific ¼.

The curb was irregular.

American railroad shares in London were irregular and mostly lower on account of figures in the American corn crop report.

The stock market closed steady.

Government bonds unchanged. Other bonds strong.

STOCK GOSSIP

The New Hampshire road may sue to enforce payment of $50,000,000 repudiated South Carolina bonds.

The stock market held very well Friday after the publication of the Government crop report on corn. It was about what was generally expected. I believe it has been discounted as a market factor. Powerful interests are behind the advance in stocks, and I believe that on any reaction they are a purchase and will sell higher.—G. D. Potter.

Erie earnings for the year ending June 30 shows over 15 per cent on first preferred and over 4 per cent on all stock outstanding.

* * *

Anent the remarkably good foreign trade exhibit for the fiscal year ended June 30 last, the possible effect of tariff reductions on our foreign trade balance becomes a timely topic for consideration. Last year our foreign trade reached a new zenith with a total of exports and imports of $4,275,000,000, or $421,000,000 more than that of 1912. Exports so far exceeded imports that this vast commerce created a trade balance in our favor abroad of $652,000,000. Can this be maintained next year when a new and much lower tariff is in existence? As the new tariff is likely to become operative next month, the effects of its operations will be reflected in 10 of the 12 months of the current fiscal year. The general expectation is that the drastic tariff reductions will result in a marked increase gain in exports. Of course unless exports enjoyed a corresponding increase the foreign trade balance must be reduced.

* * *

The foreign stocks are very quiet, but a firm tone prevails.

COTTON GOSSIP

The course of the cotton market now depends entirely on the weather, which must be watched closely. On the other hand, there is a bearish element which is waiting for the first signs of rain in the western belt to sell the market short, as it believes it is entirely too high in the face of excellent prospects that have existed up to the present time. The bulls contend that unless we get good rains in the west within the next few days, the market will set new high levels.

Aside from a few purchases and sales of more than 5,000 bales by Shearson, Baruch and McCormick, there were no large trades in yesterday's market. The gain of 10 points is considered a rather poor showing on continued high temperatures in Oklahoma and Texas, and indicates that the world considers the area deteriorating too small, when compared to the whole, to become frightened over. Another reason, of course, is that speculation is seriously curtailed by the tax threat and the abandonment of practically all arbitrage business by the larger straddle interests awaiting developments at Washington, materially reduces the volume of trade and activity of the market. There was no news aside from the weather details and complaints from Arkansas and the southwest. There are very few bulls to be found among the local crowd.

According to The Journal of Commerce the cotton goods trade is on the verge of broad activity, but tariff delay will be dangerous. The retail trade has been in the market in large numbers during the past week, giving evidences of a real need for goods of a staple character.

Dallas wires: "Texas, partly cloudy to clear; rain at Amarillo and Rockland. Oklahoma, generally clear."

* * *

Except fair in Oklahoma and Northwest Texas, the map is partly cloudy to cloudy over the entire belt. Fine rain at Amarillo, Northwest Texas and Galveston. Nice rains also in North Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Atlantic Coast districts. Indications are for unsettled to cooler weather over Sunday in Texas and Oklahoma; also good rain indications for Arkansas, North Louisiana, and showers over the rest of the belt.—Kofler.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—There will be occasional showers during to-night and Sunday in the Lake region and the New England States, while fair weather will prevail elsewhere east of the Mississippi River. The temperatures will be somewhat lower on Sunday in the extreme Northern districts, but the changes in the Atlantic and East Gulf States will not be important.

General Forecast.

General forecast until 7 p. m. Sunday:
Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Sunday.
Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Sunday.
Florida—Fair to-night and probably Sunday.
Alabama and Mississippi—Fair to-night and Sunday.
Louisiana—Showers to-night or Sunday.
East Texas—Fair to-night and Sunday.
West Texas—Fair in south, showers in north portion to-night or Sunday; cooler in north portion Sunday.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

George F. Jones & Son: We expect prices to do better until the drouth is generally broken.

Norden & Co.: We believe that the most reasonable course of cotton is to make use of fluctuations that may be caused by daily weather conditions and the technical position of the market.

Logan & Bryan: Weather conditions in Texas and Oklahoma are the dominating influences, and should that section receive beneficial moisture, lower range of prices will doubtless be seen.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Corn was up as much as 1 cent for the September option early, but it broke ⅞ on predictions of rain in many sections of the corn belt, with sales from 73 down to 72⅛. The other months acted in sympathy, December selling at 68 down to 66⅝ and May 69½ to 68⅝, compared to closing prices of yesterday, 67⅛ and 69 respectively.

The Government crop report on corn was considered bullish, but the figures which were made up August 1 failed to reflect the damage as a whole.

Wheat was ⅛ to ⅜ higher at the start, but this and ½ more was lost before the session was more than half an hour old.

Oats were higher early, but sold off with other grains and showed a weakening tendency after the decline.

Hogs were higher and provisions were higher in sympathy.

Whisky Is a Good Driver.

It Drives Away Friends, Happiness, and From the Mind Drives Confidence and Courage.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Send the picture on this page to some man who needs it.

Many men need it, unfortunately.

As you see this man at the table and the two spirits that leave him, you realize that man is not single, but made up of many elements.

These are firmly compacted in the self-controlled man; they work together to make him what he should be.

But whisky, the drug and poison, has the subtle power to dissolve character and take away from the man who scarcely knows it the best elements in his nature.

Whisky beggars a man! It finds him full of hope and courage and confidence in himself.

It finds him with friends, receiving and giving affection.

And one by one it takes these things from him.

The friends are taken and affection is taken. His strength, his prospects go, little by little, as the whisky fills his tissues, conquers his nerves and rules in the foolish brain which often says so pitifully, "If I had just one more drink, I'd be all right."

Just one more drink, and then another, and dozens and hundreds following.

And at last the unhappy man on whom whisky has fastened its clutch sits like the man in this picture. Of all men he alone does not see his degradation, the brutal defacement of what was once a man.

Have you seen a buzzard, a vulture or a crow picking the skeleton of a horse?

Whisky does its work as vilely and as thoroughly as the meanest buzzard.

Bit by bit it picks from the man all he has that is worth while.

Saddest of all is the scene in this picture, when the two spirits that give man his chief hope leave him—when COURAGE AND SELF-RESPECT PASS OUT OF THE DOOR LEAVING THIS POOR WRECK ALONE AT THE TABLE.

Is it even then too late, and is the case hopeless?

No, fortunately, it is never too late, and no man's case is hopeless.

HE CAN, IF HE WILL, RISE UP AND FOLLOW OUT OF THAT DOOR THE SPIRIT THAT HAS LEFT HIM AND OVERTAKE IT AND MAKE IT HIS OWN.

Some of the world's best work has been done and is done now by those that were once robbed by alcohol of all save the one spark that brings man back to his place WHEN HE WILL.

Many a man sits disconsolate, gazing into space, wondering what is to become of him, bitterly repentant, anxious for those that suffer.

And his hope and courage and confidence disappear in the distance.

Help him if you can. Lift him to his feet, start him in the right road.

He may overtake them, HE CAN IF HE WILL.

Portugal Will Never See King Manuel on the Throne---With Gaby Deslys on the Throne Steps.

The Trouble With Portugal Is Ignorance of the People, INABILITY TO READ, but the Republic Will Live.

(Copyright, 1913.)

News from Portugal, sent out by those that hate republican government and that like ignorance, is to the effect that the Republic of Portugal is in danger.

These reports need not seriously worry those that believe in republican government.

For a good many years there have been periodic reports of the same kind coming from France.

The world has been asked to believe that a French pretender, with a forehead one inch and a half high and the intelligence of a canary bird, would succeed in putting up a throne and ruling the French people.

Everybody knows that that is a pitiful joke.

The French pretenders have about as much chance of ruling in France as they have of ruling in Alaska.

The news from Portugal is disturbing only because of the fact that the system of tyranny, brutality and superstition that ruled there for so long, PURPOSELY KEPT THE PEOPLE IN IGNORANCE AND UNABLE TO READ.

Those that would mislead the people, those that hate the republic and hate government by the people, are helped by the fact that the poor peasants in the country, and the clerks and the workers in the cities and towns, are, as a rule, illiterate, unable to read or to sign their own names.

There is no real danger, however, for the Republic of Portugal. There may be a revolution again, but it will end IN ANOTHER REPUBLIC.

The interesting little Manuel will continue sitting at a little tin table on the French boulevard; he will continue to be a moving picture king—not a real one.

Never again will Portugal see him sitting on the throne, spending the money of a people overtaxed and kept ignorant.

If the present rulers of Portugal are replaced by others, they will be no men of the King Manuel type, but men of greater force than the present rulers, able to continue Portugal as a republic; able to carry on the real business of a republic—THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS, THE ABOLITION OF IGNORANCE AND THE SUPERSTITION AND BRUTALITY THAT GO WITH IGNORANCE.

Do You Know Any Man Ruined by Whisky?

Show him this picture and the two spirits, SELF-RESPECT and COURAGE, walking away from this unhappy victim of his own weakness. This picture may send some drunkard hurrying out of the door to catch up with the friends that have been driven from him. (See Editorial.)

The Trouble with the World Is There Are So Many Teaching the Truth, So Few Living It---Let Your Life Illustrate Your Theories.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

ARE you a student of the power of mind over matter? Are you talking to every one you meet about "Universal Life Principle" and "Vibration" and "Mental and Spiritual Science" and all the other expressions so in vogue to-day among advanced thinkers?

See to It That Your Life Illustrates Your Theories.

If you are, see to it that your life illustrates your theories. Do not let it all end in talk.

I have known a self-supporting woman to use all her income in literature and lectures and lessons on these subjects: "How to Control Destiny," "How to Grow Success," "How to Attain Self-Mastery" and "How to Be Well and Prosperous." Yet she was always ailing. She had not one penny saved, nor respectable clothing in her wardrobe; she slighted her work and forgot her duties and was altogether an unsatisfactory human being.

At almost any gathering of people identified with or interested in Mental, or Christian Science, or New Thought, or any kindred subject, a large majority of the unkempt and nervous and erratic beings are to be encountered. This is true, we know, of all new theories and creeds, for the disappointed and dissatisfied souls of earth naturally turn to new avenues of thought, hoping to find peace. But when we find these unfortunate types representing a religion or a theory and talking its precepts to every passerby, it is a matter of more than temporary regret.

Until you can indicate by your life, your face, your manner and your work that you have found a solution for the problem of existence and a panacea for human ills, do not talk about it. Wait in the silence and grow.

It is a simpler matter to be filled with a conviction than it is to prove that conviction to the world.

But while there are thousands of people to-day talking and writing the philosophy not ten in any thousand are living what they talk. A woman who was all nerves and hysteria and who kept herself and every one about her in confusion and excitement over her troubles and ailments was urged to try Spiritual Science.

"Why, I teach it," she said. "I do not need any one to help me in that way, as I have had a class of young women to whom I have been revealing the truth for some time."

That is the great trouble with the world to-day.

We have so many people teaching and so few living the truth. Because you have gained a little light and begin to understand the philosophy of life do not set yourself up for a teacher or an exhorter until you have proven by your life that what you teach and preach is practicable.

Wait Until You Succeed Before Preaching Success.

Wait until you can keep yourself in health before you begin healing others.

Wait until you are successful in your undertakings before you tell others the way to win success.

Wait until your face expresses peace and calm and happiness before you preach the power of your philosophy to produce these results.

Live first—talk afterward.

DOUBT

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THERE is a devil and his name is Doubt;
The country and the city know him well.
He makes each human mind his citadel
And many an honest aim he puts to rout.
He argues well about it and about—
He kills more love than any tongue can tell;
He leads obedient mortals to his hell
And mocks them when they seek a pathway out.

You do not know him, yet you doubt your friend;
You sneer at him, but doubt a mother's love.
He camps upon your trail until the end,
As smooth as silk, as fluttering as a dove
In every brain he builds his little fires—
He is the truest devil Satan hires.

High Cost of Living and Wasted Crops.

Lack of Transportation and the Clutch of the Middleman, He Declares, Has Left Thousands of Carloads of Garden Produce Rotting on the Ground in Texas This Season.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

DOWN in the beautiful and peaceful Pecos Valley in Texas some months ago I saw tons of luscious strawberries rotting in the field because the markets of the North were overstocked and the berries were not worth the freight, much less the cost of picking.

Southwestern Texas is the country that General Sherman had in mind when he made a certain sarcastic remark that has gone clattering down the centuries like a tin kettle to a dog's tail.

The application, however, of water and intelligent labor to the arid land of Texas has worked such miracles that William Tecumseh's far-flung phrase puts that gentleman's perspicacity in jeopardy.

On a single acre of irrigated land I have seen produced ten tons of onions, cabbages in proportion and spinach enough to fill a silo.

The sunshine, the fertility of the soil and water produce crops which, if the truth were told about them, would qualify the narrator for the Ananias Club in any city of the North, and quickly.

Carloads Rot.

The question, however, is to get these fruits and vegetables on the tables of the people who need them most. Lack of transportation and the clutch of the middleman has left thousands of carloads of garden produce rotting on the ground in Texas this past season.

Here is a question so big and important that it deserves the attention of the most able men in the United States to-day.

It is a somewhat curious fact that our lawmaking is largely the work of amateurs.

The men we send to Washington are not the men who have had experience in the matter of taking care of great and important propositions.

They are for the most part men who have wormed themselves into office.

The business of government falls into the hands of the inexperienced and the unfit.

This thing of government by the selfish, the transient and the irresponsible is the most telling criticism to be made of our so-called Democracy.

There should be a method devised by the Government whereby the services of highly trained men can be secured and utilized. And one of the crying needs of the trained man now is in this matter of getting the desirable food products of the South and West into the hands of the people in the cities of the East who need them most.

The Problem.

With peaches rotting in the orchards in the Yakima Valley, millions of dollars' worth of apples ungathered in Washington—hundreds of carloads of onions, cabbages, spinach, berries in Texas, and thousands of people in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and New York going without fresh vegetables and without fresh fruit—this is the condition that challenges our economic skill.

The solution of the high cost of living lies in getting vegetables and fruit direct from farm to family with least possible expense.

And so here comes an invention successfully utilized and worked out whereby fruits and vegetables can be dehydrated.

Most fruit and vegetables contain from 80 to 92 per cent of water. To eliminate this water so the vegetables and fruits can be kept an indefinite length of time is a most desirable evolution to bring about.

Green peas, rhubarb, spinach, raspberries, blackberries, strawberries should be on Christmas tables fresh in all of the cities of the North, and this at a very reasonable price.

Science to Help.

As it is things have to be shipped in season, in refrigerator cars, rushed through and sold quickly. Otherwise they deteriorate and perish.

The expense of transportation of perishable goods is very much greater than that where the article is dehydrated and prepared so it will keep indefinitely.

By evaporating the water in his products the farmer can find a ready market for a vast quantity of fruits and vegetables which are now practically worthless.

The market where the thing has to be sold quickly places the shipper at a great disadvantage and gives the middleman his chance.

I expect to see the day when the United States Government will co-operate with big business to the end that the vast crops of the irrigated lands of the West and South shall be harvested and marketed to the people who need them most, and this at a minimum of expense.

Washington a Mason

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

IT WAS one hundred and sixty years ago that George Washington was given the well-earned right to look upon the "hieroglyphic light which none but craftsmen ever saw."

The venerable and venerated records of Fredericksburg Lodge show that Washington was initiated on November 4, 1752, passed fellowcraft March 3, 1753, and was raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason August 4, 1753.

Strange to say, it appears to be a fact that the "Father of His Country" was initiated before he had reached the required age of 21 years. Daniel Campbell, Master of the lodge, granted the special dispensation which enabled the candidate to begin his eastward journey while still a minor.

Grand Master French, of the District of Columbia, declared in an address delivered in 1851 that no one stopped to inquire about Washington's age when his petition was presented; that the majestic proportions of the candidate, together with his well-known character and ability, made upon all concerned the impression that might have been made by a thoroughly matured man.

It appears, however, that the dispensation was based upon the fact that the candidate's duties demanded it. So busy a man was to be received when it was convenient for him.

Washington remained a member of the Fredericksburg Lodge to the day of his death. Among the many other distinguished men whose names appear upon the rolls of the lodge are George Weedon, Washington's adjutant-general; General Hugh Mercer, who fell at the battle of Princeton; Jacob VonBraam, Washington's instructor in sword practice, and Fielding Lewis, Washington's brother-in-law.

The Bible that was used at the time Washington was made a Mason is still in possession of the old Virginia lodge, and is guarded with unremitting care and affection. It is said to be 226 years old, and is still in an excellent state of preservation.

In the evil days of the war between the States the old town of Fredericksburg lay between the opposing lines of Lee and Burnside, and while the bloody struggle was on thousands on both sides thought of the little temple and altar and Bible that were so lovingly associated in their recollection with the man who made the nation whose very existence was then trembling in the balance.

MODERN JIM BLUDSOE DROWNS

Dancers Rush From Sinking Boat While Engineer Holds Prow on Shore, Then Dies.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 9.—Divers who explored the steamboat Peters Lee on the bottom of the Mississippi River at Lake Providence, La., today reported finding the body of Engineer Frank O'Neil, his hand holding the engine throttle.

He died there when the boat sank last night, having stayed at his post and held the boat's nose against the shore until the last of the 50 passengers, most of them women, were helped ashore.

O'Neil's act is practically a realization of the martyrdom of Jim Bludsoe, famed in the poem as the steamboat engineer who held her nose to the bank till all were saved, then was burned to death at his post.

A dance was on when the Peters Lee struck a sunken coal barge. A hole was torn in her side. The captain ordered the pilot to steer for the shore. The boat struck the mud and officers and crew began taking off the passengers.

Frank O'Neil in the engine room kept the stern wheel churning while the water poured into the hold.

A negro shouted through the engine room door that the boat was sinking.

"I know it!" shouted O'Neil. "You fellows get on up front where you can get off! I'll hold her nose against the shore!"

The last passenger was safely landed when the boat sank in 40 feet of water.

5-Year-Old Girl Run Down by Doctor Is Only Slightly Hurt

Estie Pierce, 5 years old, daughter of R. E. Pierce, No. 154 Ormond street, had a narrow escape from serious injury Saturday when she was struck by an automobile driven by Dr. E. V. Bailey, whose office is in the Empire Building.

The child in crossing Capitol avenue at Ormond street stopped directly in front of the machine as it rounded the corner. The physician brought his car to a speedy halt and was the first to reach the girl's side. He rushed her in his machine to her home, where it was found she was not badly hurt.

Mrs. Pierce, the mother, declined to make a case against the physician, and Call Officer John West accordingly took no action.

New Brain Surgery Device Is Invented

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, Aug 9.—Delegates to the big medical congress are greatly interested in Dr. R. H. Clarke's device for mapping out the brain and removing parts which are perhaps keys to various disorders of the body.

The instrument has a tiny telescopic knife, supported on a miniature bridge, and the direction of the knife and depth to which it goes is regulated to a hair's breadth by a series of scales.

Surgeons who examined the machine are convinced the time is not far distant when they will be able with it to operate for paralysis and insanity.

SAY SULZER USED FUNDS IN WALL ST.

Chairman of Investigation Committee Hints at Impeachment Proceedings.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Governor William Sulzer, of New York, was nearly $50,000 in debt as the result of stock market speculations at the time of his nomination, and used contributions to his campaign fund to make additional purchases of stocks while this debt was hanging over him, according to testimony presented to the Frawley committee of the Legislature.

The evidence is sufficient to warrant proceedings to impeach the Governor for violation of the corrupt practices act, Chairman Frawley declares. A decision as to the committee's recommendation is expected by Monday.

The Governor, according to the evidence, had dealings with three different stock exchange firms and was saved from being sold out by one firm by L. N. Josephthal, a Wall street banker, and a member of the Governor's staff as naval reserve aide. Josephthal, it was brought out, paid a debit balance of $26,739 still standing against the account on July 15 last. This was after the Governor had received repeated calls for more margin.

Used Campaign Funds.

The Governor's transactions with the other firms were for cash, and it was in connection with one of these that Governor Sulzer, according to the evidence, used campaign contributions.

Arranged chronologically, the testimony appeared to show that on January 1, 1912, there stood on the books of the stock exchange firm of Harris & Fuller an indebtedness of $48,589 against the purchase by Governor Sulzer of 500 shares of "Big Four," 200 shares American Smelting and Refining Company and 100 shares of Southern Pacific. This testimony was given by Melville B. Fuller, a member of the firm who on Wednesday had refused to answer the questions of the committee. Before testifying his counsel announced that the Governor had agreed that "Mr. Fuller's lips should be unsealed."

There were no other purchases of stock recorded on this account, according to the witness, until December 5, 1912, when the Governor bought 100 shares of "Big Four," making 600 in all. On December 11 the firm, according to a letter produced by the witness, made its first call upon the Governor for more margin. The books showed that on November 18 previous the Governor had paid in $10,000 against the account, and that on December 16, apparently in response to the call for margin, he paid in $6,000 more.

During Governor's Campaign.

In October of the same year the evidence indicated that Frederick Colwell, the Governor's alleged "dummy," purchased from Boyer, Griswold & Co., 200 shares of "Big Four" railroad stock outright at 60, for $12,025, the $25 representing commission. This was at the height of Mr. Sulzer's campaign for the governorship and transcripts from the firm's books showed the stock bought on October 16 was paid for partly in checks, at least two of which were identified in the testimony as Sulzer campaign contributions. There were seven checks in all, and the others are charged by Eugene L. Richards, counsel for the committee, as having been also campaign checks.

Senate Enacts Bill For Inspection of Georgia Bakeries

The Georgia Senate Saturday morning concurred in the House amendments to the medical practice bill and passed the Hixon "germ prevention" measure providing for the inspection of canneries and bakeries of the State. The vote on the latter was 34 to 4, the only opposition arising from those who argued that the bill necessitated an unwarranted expense.

Sharp debate took place in the Senate when the Huie-Allen measure providing for an amendment to the law on corporation charters, so as to allow an extension of time of two yeads instead of one for actual construction, was presented.

Senators Harrell and McNeil, opposing the bill, charged it was really aimed to provide an extension of time for a corporation, which, it is said, was originally known as the Georgia-Carolina Electric Railway, and that as such it evidently was for speculating purposes. The bill was passed, 25 to 5, and was transmitted to the House following the defeat of a motion by Senator McNeil to reconsider.

Popular Music for Visiting Merchants At Sunday Concert

A light and popular program for the benefit of the visiting merchants and manufacturers will be rendered at the free organ concert Sunday afternoon by Charles A. Sheldon, under the auspices of the Atlanta Music Festival Association.

A wonderful series of variations on the melody, "Old Folks at Home," will be a striking feature of the program. There will be a brilliant military march, a composition of Harry Rowe Shelley's, with imitative passages of trumpets and drums. Another special feature will be Nevin's "A Day in Venice." The only piece of classical music on the program will be the prelude to "Lohengrin," a composition whose beautiful harmonies appeal to all ears

WOMEN NEVER CAME INTO FACTORY OFFICE, WITNESS TESTIFIES

The second week of the Frank trial ended at 12:30 Saturday with a bitter battle in progress over the testimony of Herbert G. Schiff, assistant superintendent of the National Pencil Factory.

Schiff was called soon after court opened in the forenoon and was on the stand when the adjournment was taken until Monday.

Schiff, besides denying that Frank ever had women in his office, describes in elaborate detail the duties of the superintendent, particularly his work on the afternoon the little Phagan girl came to her death. It was the purpose of the defense to show that it would have been most improbable that Frank, after committing a murder, calmly could have sat down with the burden of guilt, resting on his conscience and proceeded with his usual preciseness in the intricate and involved computations required in making out the financial sheet.

Dorsey was given the witness toward the close of the session and started at once to attack Schiff's estimates of time that it would have required for the various details of the work. Schiff made a good witness and the solicitor was able to make little headway in his cross-questioning.

Says Frank Explained Nervousness.

Schiff admitted to Dorsey, however, that Frank was really anxious to get the Pinkertons on the job and that Frank called from his home three times at intervals of little more than half an hour, instructing Schiff to take the matter up with Sig Montag, one of the officers of the pencil factory company. He said Frank declared it to be the factory's duty to its employees.

Schiff also admitted that Frank several times explained his nervousness of Sunday, the day when the body was found, by the abrupt manner in which he had been taken from his house without any breakfast or coffee and by the visit to the morgue where the light suddenly was turned upon the body of the girl victim as she lay before his eyes.

A search Saturday for C. B. Dalton, the man who told of visiting the factory with Miss Daisy Hopkins, developed that he had disappeared from the courthouse. He was called for by the defense when court opened, but did not answer. One of the girls mentioned in his story declares in a letter to The Georgian, that Dalton lied in his statement.

The cross-examination of Schiff will be resumed when court opens Monday morning.

Financial Sheets Put In Evidence.

Reuben Arnold had in court the financial sheet over which there has been much discussion since the murder mystery developed. Schiff identified the series of figures and notations as in Frank's handwriting. Arnold had also every financial sheet for the year previous to the crime, and Schiff identified them all as Frank's work. He said that the least complicated of the financial sheets never took less than 2 1-2 or three hours to compile.

The financial sheet identified as the one Frank prepared the afternoon of April 26, the day of the murder, was displayed as an evidence that the writing of Frank was not tremulous, irregular or in any way different from his handwriting in the 51 other financial sheets on file.

Schiff went into the highly complex methods in which the financial sheet is made up, in order to show for the defense the clarity of mind that was required in order to complete the sheet without mistake or confusion.

He narrated that costs and profits were estimated each week on thousands of pencils of different classifications and grades, on hundreds of gross of rubber plugs, on the various classes of leads, boxes, "skeletons" on which the pencils were arranged and other items of material that entered into the manufacture of the pencils. Schiff also read a number of orders to illustrate the amount of other work that ordinarily is taken care of on Saturdays.

An attack was made upon the testimony of young George Epps when court opened Saturday morning. Epps was called to the stand and made to tell of the visit of a Georgian reporter at his home Sunday eevning, April 27. He was asked why he had not told at that time his story of riding to town with Mary Phagan on the day she was killed. Epps declared that he did not talk to the reporter.

The reporter, John Minar, was called immediately after and testified that he talked at length with both the Epps boy and his sister in an effort to determine who last had seen the murdered girl and when. The reporter declared that the sister replied that she had seen Mary Phagan Thursday before, but that young Epps, although present, said nothing, except that he had seen the girl occasionally. Arnold questioned the boy.

Q. Do you recollect the Sunday the body was found?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember a gentleman, a Mr. Minar, coming to your house and talking to you and your sister?—A. Yes.

Q. Didn't he ask you when was the last time either of you had seen Mary

Q. Weren't you there?—A. No, I wasn't there. I was in the house.

Q. Weren't you standing by your sister and she said the last time Mary Phagan was seen by her was Thursday before the murder and you stood there and said nothing?—A. No, I didn't hear that. I was in the house, but I didn't hear all he said to her.

"Come down," said Arnold.

Lad Didn't Flee Court.

Mr. Dorsey interrupted.

Q. George, has there been any trouble to get you to come to court?—A. No, sir; I was playing ball when they sent for me yesterday and didn't get the message.

Mr. Arnold objected to the question and reply and Mr. Dorsey said:

"Your honor, Mr. Arnold made the impression on this court yesterday that this boy was fleeing from the court. The deputy said he couldn't find him. We just want to show that he was alwayse willing to come."

Judge Roan overruled the objection.

Q. George, you were always willing to come, weren't you?—A. Yes, sir. I got tired hanging around the court, and asked you if I could go. You told me you would send for me when you needed me. I came when I got your message.

Reporter Placed on Stand.

John Minar, a newspaper reporter, was the next witness.

Q. Were you a reporter for The Georgian in April?—A. I was.

Q. After this girl's body was found did you go out to this boy Epps' home?—A. I did.

Q. What day and time?—A. Sunday evening, April 27, at 8 o'clock.

Q. Did you ask this boy and his sister when they last saw Mary Phagan?—A. Yes.

Q. Were they together?—A. Yes.

Q. Is there any doubt they both heard you?—A. No.

Q. What did they say in reply to your question?—A The girl said she had seen her Thursday.

Q. Did the boy say anything?—A. He said he rode to the city with her in the mornings occasionally.

Q. Did he say anything about riding with her that Saturday?—A. No.

Hooper took the witness on cross-examination, but brought out nothing.

Herbert Schiff, who worked with Frank as office man and salesman, was the next on the stand.

Mr. Arnold questioned Schiff.

Q. You are assistant superintendent of the factory, I believe?—A. I have worked in several capacities.

Schiff Tells of Duties.

Q. What were your exact duties?—A. The duties were divided equally between Frank and myself.

Q. Did you or Mr. Frank have anything to do with the cash?—A. Only the petty cash.

Q. Who did the real handling of the finances?—A. The general manager, Mr. Sig Montag.

Q. Who drew the checks?—A. Mr. Montag.

Q. Did either you or Mr. Frank ever draw any checks?—A. No, we didn't have any authority to.

Q. Do you know how much Mr. Frank made?—A. One hundred and fifty dollars a month.

Q. How much did you get?—A. Eighty dollars.

Q. You said the general manager was Mr. Montag. Did he stay at the factory?—A. No.

Q. Was any of the financing for the factory done at the factory or at Monta's?—A. No.

Q. All you did was to look after manufacturing? A.—Yes.

Q. That financial sheet, what was it for?—To show whether the week was a profit or a loss.

Q. Why did you make it up on Saturday?—A. Because our report never came in until Friday and the pay roll had to be figured in it.

Q. How long have you been making those sheets?—A. Since Frank went to the factory.

Q. Beginning with June, 1912, and running to January, how much time did you miss?—A. None.

Q. When did you take your vacation?—A. That's right, I took a vacation from the last week in July to the first week in August.

Q. I believe you said you went on the road the first Saturday in January?—A. Yes.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. About 5:10 in the afternoon.

Q. Did you go by the factory that day?—A. Yes, I went by and talked with the fellows until about half an hour before train time. Mr. Frank and several went to the train with me.

Q. Have you ever seen this man Dalton?—A. Yes, I saw him for the first time upstairs.

Q. Did you see him around the factory?—A. I did not.

Q. Do you remember Daisy Hopkins?—A. Yes, I would know her if I should see her.

Q. When was she there?—A. The witness referred to his books and replied: "This shows her first as being there on May 21 and last on June 6, 1912."

Remembers Thanksgiving Day.

Q. Did you ever see her around there on Saturday afternoons?—A. I never did.

Q. Do you remember Thanksgiving, 1912?—A. I do.

Q. What sort of a day was it?—A. Cold and rainy. It had snowed.

Q. Do you remember what time he left?—A. Yes, about 10 o'clock.

Q. What time did you and Mr. Frank leave?—A. Shortly after 12 o'clock.

Q. Where did you go?—A. Home. Mr. Frank's Washington street car came before my Whitehall street car, and he got on it.

Q. Do you know of anything he had to do that night?—A. Yes. He was president of B'nai Brith and it was giving an affair that night. He had some packages in his hands, some crackers, and things.

Q. What is the B'nai Brith?—A. It is a charitable organization.

A. What were they going to give that night?—A. An affair at the Orphans' Home.

Q. You went to the car with him?—A. Yes.

Q. At what time?—A. About 12:30.

Q. Who paid off on April 25?—A. I did.

Q. Do you recall a girl, Helen Ferguson, asking for Mary Phagan's pay?—A. No.

Q. Did she ask for her own pay?—A. Yes.

Q. What is the rule as to one employee collecting another employee's pay?—A. They have to bring a note.

Q. Did anyone go to Mr. Frank for pay on Friday?—A. No.

Q. Was there any necessity for anyone going to Frank for their money?—A. No.

Q. Did or did you not see anyone go to Mr. Frank?

Dorsey objected. "Your honor, I object to Mr. Arnold leading this witness," he said. "He is willing enough."

"I move that Mr. Dorsey's statement be ruled from the record," said Mr. Arnold.

Dorsey's objection was sustained.

Q. Did you put posters in the factory when there was a holiday?—A. Yes, twelve of them, notifying the employees they could get their pay the day before.

Q. What time did Frank go home Friday?—A. Six o'clock.

Q. Did you get up any of the financial sheet Friday, as usual?—A. No. It was an unusual week. We had to work very hard to get up the pay roll Friday, and I could not touch it.

Q. Did that put other and additional work on Frank?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you go to the factory Saturday?—A. No.

Q. Why?—A. I overslept myself.

Q. Did anyone call you up?—A. Yes; Mr. Frank called up twice to know where the data for the financial sheet was.

Q. Did you answer the phone?—A. No; the maid did. I only know what she told me.

Q. Then Mr. Frank had to take your data and make up the financial sheet?—A. Yes.

Q. Did that require more than the ordinary amount of work on his part?—A. Yes.

Questions Schiff About Chute.

Mr. Arnold asked Solicitor Dorsey's permission to use the State's diagram of the National Pencil Factory prepared by Bert Green.

"Help yourself," said Dorsey. The diagram, however, did not suit Mr. Arnold, so he had his own model brought in.

Q. Are you familiar with this door that leads into the Clark woodenware department?—A. It was two or three days before I noticed it. It was cracked open.

Q. Is there a hole in the rear of the building leading into the basement?—A. Yes; there is a hole boxed up, but open. It was used to carry waste shavings into the basement.

Q. Was it large enough to put the body of a girl the size of Mary Phagan through?—A. Yes.

Q. Was thede a trapdoor back there?—A. Yes.

Q. Was it nailed?—A. I don't think so.

Q. The door to the department was usually locked?—A. It was nailed up.

Q. When did Mr. Frank first discover that you had not made up your part of the sheet?—A. Saturday when he called me up, I guess.

Q. How long did it usually take you and Mr. Frank to make up that financial sheet?—A. About three hours.

Q. This sheet (handing the witness the sheet Frank made up Saturday afternoon of the murder) was not made up Friday, was it?—A. No, sir.

Q. When did you first see it?—A. The next week, when I got it from the general manager's office.

Says Sheet Is Correct.

Q. Have you looked over it and seen that it was correct?—A. Yes.

Schiff enumerated the various items on the sheet showing the amount of work required to make it up. Frank had to add, divide and multiply various items, the witness said, to arrive at the cost of production during that week.

Q. How many pencils do you produce a week?—A. About 3,500 gross.

Q. How many are in a gross?—A. One hundred and forty-four.

Q. Have you any other places?—A. Slat mill, in Oakland City, and a lead plant on Bell street.

Q. Did he have to do any bookkeeping for these places?—A. Yes.

Q. I will get you to state what that second sheet is?—A. Another financial sheet.

Q. The financial sheet is reduced to one page?—A. Yes.

Q. Is this Frank's handwriting on the sheet of the week of April 26?—A. Yes.

Q. You are familiar with the handwriting?—A. I am.

Q. Is it his usual handwriting?—A. It is.

Q. Was that sheet of the week before made out by Frank?—A. Yes.

Q. How do the handwritings compare?—A. They are the same.

Q. Neither you nor Frank had done any work on that sheet of the 26th—on Friday—had you?—A. We had not.

Q. How long would it have taken him or any other man to have made it out?—A. About three hours.

Dorsey Again Objects.

Q. How does his handwriting here of April 26 compare with his writing of the week before?—A. Almost identical.

Q. Does this one of April 26 show any nervousness?—A. None at all.

Dorsey interrupted. "The jury should decide that, your honor," he said.

His objection was sustained.

Q. Are these the financial sheets for the whole year?—A. Yes.

Q. What is the shortest time you ever saw one of these compiled?—A. It couldn't be done in less than two and one-half hours.

Q. Look at these—June 6, 13, 20, 27. Are they in Frank's handwriting?—A. Yes.

Q. These of July 4, 11, 18, 25?—A. Yes.

Q. August 1, 8, 15, 22, 29, September 5, 12, are they Frank's handwriting?—A. Yes.

Q. These of September 19, 26, October 3, 10, 17, 24, 31, November 7, 14, 21, 28, December 5, 12, 19, 26 and January 2?—A. Yes.

Q. You left the following Saturday to go on the road, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. From May, 1912, to January 2, 1913, did Frank miss making the report on Saturdays?—A. No.

Q. Are these in Frank's handwriting, January 9, 16, 23, 30, February 6, 13, 20, 27, March 6, 13, 20 and 27?—A. Yes.

Q. How about these of April 3 and 10?—A. Yes.

Q. You have in your hand the last two weeks?—A. Yes.

Q. This is the one of April 17?—A. Yes.

Q. And this one of April 26, made out on the day the girl was murdered?—A. Yes.

Q. He has not missed a day?—A. No.

Cash Book Produced.

Attorney Arnold introduced the petty cash book to show the small sums drawn out each week.

Q. How much did you pay out that week?—A. $39.61.

Q. How much did that leave?—A. $30.64.

Q. Not Frank's money?—A. It certainly was not.

The witness was next shown the requisition and the house order books, which he identified as having been used by Frank in compiling the financial sheet. He showed where Frank had made interest on the order book on April 26.

Q. Are these orders correct?—A. Yes.

Q. Look at these letters and see?—A. There is a better proof than that. If they were not correct, we would have heard from them.

Q. Did Mr. Dorsey call for these books?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you hold back or conceal anything?—A. No; we gave them everything they asked for.

Q. After Frank entered the orders on this book, what did he do with them?—A. He put them on these orders here.

Q. Take each one of those eleven orders and see if they were checked in his handwriting.—A. They were.

Frank of Nervous Temperament.

The witness went carefully over each order.

Q. I have asked you about a mass of business relative to some orders. They came on Saturday, didn't they?—A. They did.

Dorsey: "I object. He doesn't know to his personal knowledge."

Schiff: "They were not there Friday night, and they were there Monday."

The objection was overruled.

Q. Was not this work entirely separate from the financial sheet?—A. It was.

Q. Did you know little Mary Phagan?—A. Her name was familiar on the pay roll, but I did not know who she was until after her death.

Q. When did you see Frank after Sunday?—A. I saw him Sunday at Bloomfield's.

Q. Was Mr. Frank of a nervous temperament?—A. He was.

Q. Did anything unusual upset him?—A. Yes. He would go all to pieces and run up and down the office.

Q. When anyone would get cut or hurt, you or Mr. Darley would have to look after him, would you not?—A. We would.

Hooper objected to Arnold leading the witness. Arnold admitted that he was leading the witness.

Q. Do you know Jim Conley?—A. Yes.

Q. What sort of a negro is he?—A. There isn't much to him.

Hooper interrupted: "I object to the form of both of these questions," he said. "I move that they be stricken from the records."

Arnold again admited that he was leading the witness.

Q. What work did he do?—A. Truck and ran the elevator.

Q. Do you know his character and was it good or bad?—A. Very bad.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?—A. I would not.

As to Monteen Stover.

Arnold showed the witness the murder notes.

Q. Where do you find this paper in the factory?—A. Anywhere from the roof to the basement.

Q. Are they swept into the basement?—A. Yes.

Q. Why are they thrown around?—A. We use them for note paper in the different departments because this paper is much cheaper than any other we have.

Q. Do you recall hearing a conversation between Mr. Frank and Mr. Ursenbach Friday about going to the ball game Saturday?—A. Yes, but not exactly what was said. I heard Mr. Frank say something about "I will go if I can, Charley."

Q. Can you sit in Mr. Frank's office at his desk and see the clocks?—A. Only half of one of them.

Q. If that safe door is open, could you see out?—A. No.

Q. Could Monteen Stover have seen over it?—A. It would have been impossible.

Q. How much is that safe kept open?—A. All the time when anyone is working in the office.

Q. Did you return to the factory Monday?—A. Yes.

Q. Who opened the safe?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you look into the safe that day?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see anything of a silver mesh bag in that safe?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever see a purse of any kind in the safe?—A. Yes.

Q. When was it?—A. It was a little leather purse Joe Stelka found in the front of the factory a year ago. It was kept in the safe so that if anybody ever called for it it would be there.

Says Conley Was Scared.

Q. How much money did it have in it?—A. Sixty-five cents.

Q. Did you see Jim Conley at the factory Monday?—A. Yes.

Q. Tuesday?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Mr. Frank when he came back Monday?—A. Yes.

Q. Tuesday?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you recollect him going up to the fourth floor? Were you with him constantly that morning?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he speak to Jim Conley that morning?—A. No.

Q. Did you see Jim Conley speak to him?—A. No.

Q. What did Conley say to you that morning?—A. I saw him near the shipping room. I asked him what he was doing there. He said he was scared to go out—that he would give a million dollars to be a white man. I answered that that would not do any good as they had taken Mr. Frank. I told him to go on down.

Q. Everybody was excited down there, were they not?—A. Yes, the girls were crying. We had to dismiss all the employees for the day, and he had not the slightest ground whatever for making it and no right to use my name in any way in his testimony.

I have known him only about six months, and have never been in his company but three times. On two occasions I was at church with a gentleman friend who was also a friend of his and he walked with us from the church to my home, less than three blocks, and one afternoon while out walking I met him and he walked with me a distance of about four blocks. That, and a few conversations over the telephone, probably three or four, mark the extent of my acquaintance with him. I worked at the pencil factory exactly two days the second week in July (last month), and did not even see Mr. Dalton on either one of those days. I had never worked there before nor been there, and have not since.

Will you please state these facts in your paper and clear up any false impression that may have been made on people's minds concerning me, and the slur I feel has been cast on my good name by having him make such a false statement where it would be published broadcast over the country? I will appreciate it and thank you very much if you will correct the statement.

Sincerely,

LAURA ATKINSON.

No. 30 Ella street.

Q. Were you aware of the fact that this negro Jim Conley sometimes failed to punch the clock?—A. I had gotton after him several times.

Q. You never excused him?—A. No, I docked him.

Q. Did you ever see blood spots on the floor?—A. Yes.

Q. How did blood spots get on the floor?—A. Well, when anyone cut their finger, or anything of that kind, they would come to the office on the second floor to get it fixed.

Q. Would they pass near the ladies' toilet on the second floor on the way to the office?—A. They would in coming from the rear of the second floor.

Q. Have you seen that hair since?—A. No.

Q. Was there any blood under that lathe?—A. No.

Q. Was there any water where this negro said he found the body?—A. No.

Q. Has that place been washed?—A. No.

Dorsey took the witness on cross-examination.

Q. Did you talk to Gheesling at the undertaker's Sunday?—A. No.

Q. Do you recall talking to Sam Hewlett, a detective?—A. Only when we employed him as night watchman.

Q. When did you tell the detectives about Mrs. White seeing a negro?

Arnold interrupted. "How can that have anything to do with this case?" he asked.

His objection was sustained.

Employment of Pinkertons.

Q. How many times did Frank phone you Monday?—A. Two or three.

Q. Where was he then?—A. At home.

Q. The factory was full of detectives?—A. Yes.

Q. What time did he phone you about the Pinkertons?—A. About noon.

Q. What did he say?—A. He asked me to take up with Mr. Montag the employment of a private detective and suggested the Pinkertons. He said he thought it was only fair to the employees.

Q. What time did he call you again?—A. About 1.

Q. What did he want?—A. To know if I had located Mr. Montag.

Q. What did you tell him?—A. I told him I had not been able to get him yet.

Q. In your conversation with Mr. Frank did he say anything about his nervousness?—A. Yes, he spoke of it.

Q. What did he say?—A. I don't remember. I think once he mentioned how terrible the girl looked. Again about them flashing a light on the body in the dark room.

Complained of Being Upset.

Q. He complained about being terribly upset about being rushed from home, didn't he?—A. He said something about that.

Q. What did he tell you the police told him over the telephone?—A. He said they told him a catastrophe or tragedy—I don't remember the term—had happened.

Q. He told you he asked them if there had been a fire?—A. Yes.

Q. What did he say about his breakfast?—A. He said one reason he was nervous was that he had not had any breakfast and wanted a cup of coffee.

Q. How long would it take a man to enter those eleven orders on a book?—A. An hour and a half.

Q. You have gone up some since you swore before the Coroner?—A. I did not swear before the Coroner. I said I thought.

Q. Didn't you swear that it would take about 30 minutes?

Arnold objected. "He asked it like he means all that work," Arnold said.

Dorsey: "He knows what I am asking." Laughter followed Dorsey's remark and the deputies were forced to rap repeatedly for order.

Arnold: "I am going to move that this courtroom be cleared, if there is any more of this disturbance. If we have got to take all of this crowd in, we might as well try the case out in the open."

Judge Threatens Disturbers.

Judge Roan: "Mr. Sheriff, find out who is creating this distrubance and bring them to me. I will see if I can't stop it."

Dorsey continued his questioning.

Q. You know that Miss Hall made the acknowledgment, don't you?—A. Sometimes.

Q. That would make some little difference wouldn't it?—A. Yes, five or ten minutes.

Q. Will you explain to this jury, if you can, how it took 30 minutes to enter the orders and only five minutes to write the acknowledgment?—A. I said it would take an hour and a half to do all the work on that paper.

Q. It took that long to fill out an order, enter the number, etc.

Arnold interrupted: "He has asked the witness that question and got his answer," he said.

The objection was overruled.

Q. I want you to detail the work that it took an hour and a half to do. (Schiff took the order book, the transcriptions to the order blanks, the check, and the requisition from the storeroom.) It took 30 minutes to put this much on the book?—A. I don't think so.

Quizzed on Office Details.

Q. Look at this acknowledgment. What are these initials? 'H. H.'?—A. Hattie Hall.

Q. Then she did this?—A. Yes.

Dorsey took an order bearing the initials "H. H." and bearing date of April 26.

Q. Did Miss Hall acknowledge this on April 26?—A. No, I wouldn't think so. It was probably acknowledged Monday or it might have been the day before April 26.

Q. Well, was it the custom to write these before or after they were entered in this book?—A. Either way.

Q. Then you had no regular system?—A. Yes, but one does not hinge on the other. It did not make any big difference how this was done. It had to be done in the regular course of business.

At this point court adjourned until 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Only a Mask.

Men are not being benefited by the summer vacation as they should be. Now, notwithstanding much outdoor life, they are little if any stronger than they were. The tan on their faces is darker and makes them look healthier, but it is only a mask. They are still nervous, easily tired, upset by trifles, and they do not eat nor sleep well. What they need is what tones the nerves, perfects digestion, creates appetite, and makes sleep refreshing, and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Pupils and teachers generally will find the chief purpose of the vacation best subserved by this great medicine which, as we know, "builds up the whole system."

The motorman and conductor of the car on which Mary Phagan came to town testified she could not have reached the factory at 12:05 o'clock.

Dalton's Testimony False, Girl Named on Stand Says

The Georgian to-day received from Miss Laura Atkinson, of No. 30 Ella street, one of the young women mentioned in C. B. Dalton's testimony, a letter denying absolutely that she had ever walked home with Dalton from the restaurant near the pencil factory, as he swore. Here is Miss Atkinson's letter in full:

Editor The Georgian:

Will you please allow me space to correct a statement made by Mr. C. B. Dalton in his testimony at the Frank trial, and published in your paper yesterday? In answer to a question from Mr. Rosser as to whether he ever went to the pencil factory with any one except Miss Daisy Hopkins he said yes, he used to go to the Busy Bee and wait for the factory to close to walk home with the girls, and gave my name as one of the girls.

His statement, as I read it in your paper, impressed me as being intended to convey to the minds of those who heard it (and of course all who read it) the idea that I was working at the factory at the time he says he went there and that he was in the habit of walking home with me. I have no desire to make any derogatory remarks about Mr. Dalton, but in justice to myself and my good name, I certainly do feel it my duty to say that his statement concerning me is false and he had not the slightest ground whatever for making it and no right to use my name in any way in his testimony.

I have known him only about six months, and have never been in his company but three times. On two occasions I was at church with a gentleman friend who was also a friend of his and he walked with us from the church to my home, less than three blocks, and one afternoon while out walking I met him and he walked with me a distance of about four blocks. That, and a few conversations over the telephone, probably three or four, mark the extent of my acquaintance with him. I worked at the pencil factory exactly two days the second week in July (last month), and did not even see Mr. Dalton on either one of those days. I had never worked there before nor been there, and have not since.

Will you please state these facts in your paper and clear up any false impression that may have been made on people's minds concerning me, and the slur I feel has been cast on my good name by having him make such a false statement where it would be published broadcast over the country? I will appreciate it and thank you very much if you will correct the statement.

HERE'S THE TIME CLOCK PUZZLE IN FRANK TRIAL; CAN YOU FIGURE IT OUT?

THE RIDDLE OF THE CLOCK IN THE PHAGAN MYSTERY

Jim Conley swears Mary Phagan went up the stairs of the National Pencil factory and was murdered before Monteen Stover arrived. He says he saw Miss Stover go up and leave.

Monteen Stover, State's witness, swears she arrived at 12:05.

George Epps, State's witness, swears he and Mary Phagan arrived at Marietta and Forsyth streets at 12:07.

The car crew, defense's witnesses, swear Mary arrived at Broad and Marietta at 12:07½ and at Broad and Hunter at 12:10.

If Mary Phagan was at Marietta and Forsyth at 12:07, as the State says, or at Broad and Hunter at 12:10, as the defense says, how could she have preceded Monteen Stover, as Jim Conley says, up the factory stairs, when Miss Stover was in the factory at 12:05?

What's the answer?

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Tick-tock! Tick-tock!
Hark to the tale of the old hall clock!
Tick-tock! Tick-tock!
This is the tale of the clock!
—Old English Ballad.

This is a tale of an office clock and a motorman's watch—an office clock in the National Pencil Factory, the first requisite of which, it being a "time" clock, is accuracy, and a motorman's watch.

And this is the story of a clock that may or may not mean life and liberty and a restored good name to Leo Frank, or—a fate infinitely worse than mere death itself!

It is a story involving a young business man of repute and high standing, a college graduate and a husband, a brave, womanly little girl, foully murdered, a motorman known to many Atlantans, a newsboy not so well known, a disinterested working girl, a negro sweeper, a confessed accessory to murder, the dead girl's mother—and an office clock.

What does the story demonstrate? That shall be for the reader to say. Here is the story:

What the State Contends.

The State of Georgia is contending that Leo Frank murdered on April 26, before the hour of 12:05 in the afternoon, Mary Phagan, a 14-year-old working girl, employed in the National Pencil Factory, of which Frank was the superintendent.

It cites, among others, to bear out its contention, James Conley, a negro sweeper in the factory, and Monteen Stover, an employee of the factory.

Miss Stover is a disinterested witness—Conley not only is the star witness against Frank, but is interested in fixing the murder upon Frank.

Here is what the State, by its own witnesses, asserts:

Jim Conley swears that a few minutes before Miss Monteen Stover came into the factory—Miss Stover herself swearing that she entered at 12:05—Mary Phagan entered and passed upstairs and into Leo Frank's office.

Miss Stover, asked how she was positive as to the time she went in and the time she came out, stated that she looked at the time clock both as she came in and as she went out. That fixes the time of her coming and going definitely and exactly.

It was before Miss Stover came in that Conley swears Mary Phagan came in. Therefore, Mary Phagan must have arrived at the factory, according to Conley, at least before 12:05, the moment Miss Stover came in.

Before Miss Stover Entered.

But after Mary came in, and before Miss Stover came in, the murder, still according to Conley, had been effected.

For (a) after Mary went upstairs and before Miss Stover came in, Conley (b) heard pattering footsteps toward the rear of the building, where (c) he says the body was found by him later, and after that (d) a scream, and then (e) a period of silence.

All of this, according to Conley, before Monteen Stover entered the factory—that is, before 12:05 certainly—and, considering the things Conley swears happened, several minutes before 12:05, necessarily.

Mrs. Coleman, Mary's mother, swears that Mary left home "about 11:45" in the morning, and George Epps swears he joined her on the car at 11:50, for he looked at a clock at home just before boarding the car, and that he and Mary arrived at Marietta and Forsyth streets at 12:07, the latter hour not definitely fixed in his mind.

Motorman Remembers Time.

The motorman on that car, however, who swears he knew Mary Phagan, and had seen her board his car frequently, and remembers seeing her board that particular car on that particular day, says that the car arrived at Marietta and Forsyth at 12:7½, as that is the time it is scheduled to arrive there, and he was running on time that day.

The motorman swears Mary and a companion got off at Hunter and Broad about 12:10, that being a few minutes' farther run than Marietta and Forsyth. The conductor corroborates the motorman in an additional statement that the car was not running ahead of schedule, the conductors being particularly required by the company not to run ahead of time.

Mary Phagan left the street car at 12:10, still a block and a half from the pencil factory.

If she walked directly to the factory, she could not have reached there before 12:12, in any event.

If the little victim of this tragedy, Mary Phagan, therefore, DID NOT REACH THE FACTORY UNTIL MANY MINUTES AFTER CONLEY SWEARS SHE DID GET THERE, AND UNTIL AT LEAST TWO MINUTES AFTER MONTEEN STOVER HAD DEPARTED, AND UNTIL AFTER CONLEY SWEARS HE HAD HEARD THE FOOTSTEPS AND THE SCREAM, HOW CAN CONLEY'S STORY BE TRUE?

Slain Before She Arrived?

In other words, how could Mary Phagan have been murdered before she arrived at the factory?

Remember, too, that when Frank was asked at the Coroner's inquest as to the time of Mary Phagan's arrival, he said that it was after 12, because the noon whistle had blown some time before—that she might have arrived at 12:10 or, maybe later, perhaps as late as 12:20 or 12:25.

Conley, also, in fixing the time of Mary Phagan's arrival at the factory, said it was soon after the noon whistle blew, therefore, a little after 12—thus placing Mary's arrival between 12 and the time of Monteen Stover's arrival, which was 12:05.

Now then, take your pencil and paper, and figure this problem out for yourself.

Can you reconcile Conley's story with the other things proved, in the main, by the State's own witnesses?

Two Girls to Accuse Diggs and Caminetti

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Marsha Warrington and Ida Norris, the Sacramento high school girls alleged to have been taken to Reno in November by Maury I. Diggs and Drew Caminetti for immoral purposes, will take the stand against Diggs when his trial is resumed Tuesday. No session of the Diggs trial was held to-day. Diggs and Caminetti will take the stand before the trial is concluded.

Judge Van Fleet dealt the defense another hard blow yesterday when he announced that the jury would not consider the willingness or unwillingness of the two girls to accompany Diggs and Caminetti.

HAZELHURST HOME BURNS.

HOW TIME HAS BECOME THE CRUCIAL POINT IN THE TRIAL OF LEO M. FRANK

1 Mary Phagan leaves her home at 11:45, according to her mother.

2 Mary boards the Cooper street car at 11:50, according to witnesses for both State and defense.

3 Mary leaves car at 12:07 by State's testimony and 12:10 by witnesses for the defense.

4 Monteen Stover enters factory at 12:05 and leaves at 12:10. She swore she was certain of the time.

5 Jim Conley swears he saw Mary Phagan enter and heard her scream BEFORE Monteen Stover came.

Absence of Alienists and The Hypothetical Question Distinguishes Frank Trial

By O. B. KEELER.

There are two things about the Frank trial that entitle it to distinguished consideration.

Thus far not a single alienist has been called to bat, and only the common or domesticated type of the dread Hypothetical Question has appeared.

In most of our great murder trials, the alienist is the last resort, or one of the latest resorts. Usually he is introduced by the defense; anywhere from four to eight of him.

The prosecution promptly counters with an equal number of wheel inspectors.

The defense (vide Thaw case) generally proves to its own satisfaction that the defendant was crazy when he did it, but since has recovered his equilibrium, his alibi and all the rest of his scattered personal effects.

The four to eight experts for the State differ slightly with this finding.

They All Agree.

They report that to the best of their several and collective knowledge and belief, which is considerable, the defendant is the happy possessor of one of the sanest little noodles they ever had the pleasure of sitting on. They say there is practically no chance that any such carefully-geared aggregation of mental sprockets ever slipped a cog.

But they add that, if the defense insists on the accused having been non compos at the time he did it, he most assuredly is in the same condition at present, or more so.

In short, the State contends that the defendant either should be hanged or remanded to the solitary upholstery for the rest of his life, according to which is most highly objectionable to the defense.

Vide Thaw case ad lib.

One Notable Exception.

There is only one case on record where a corps of alienists employed by one side agreed with those hired by the opposition.

It seems that the accused person, without any advice or suggestion from his lawyers, broke out all over with shockingly acute symptoms of dementia soon after he was arrested.

The defense ordered out the alienists.

They reported that the accused unquestionably was insane—remarkably insane.

Then the prosecution recruited its experts to the full war strength and ordered them to advance with caution.

To the intense surprise of everyone, including the defense, they reported that the prisoner was crazy beyond the shadow of a peradventure. They said he couldn't be any crazier without coming apart.

Well, that just about settled it. What prosecution could hold out against the combined forces of two sets of alienists? It was the first time on record that the warring experts had agreed.

And this time they were both wrong.

Inside of a year the record-holder for craziness—sprints, middle distance and Marathon—had got himself out of the bat factory and was enjoying life in a more congenial clime that had no extradition provisions in the treaty, if any.

The Hypothetical Question.

The hypothetical question is used rather more frequently than the alienist, because it is less expensive and embarrassing, while offering no more than an even break to the other side and confusing the jury fully as much as the most complicated alienistic explosions.

When the h. q. is sprung by the defense, an expert of considerable pedigree is propped up in the witness chair and compelled to listen, with the jury and such of the auditors as can stay awake, to a detailed relation of incidents beginning some time before the birth of the accused and extending to the date of the crime, with provisions and qualifications to fill out four hours and a half and eleven columns of "six point."

Then the expert says:

"No."

After which an expert for the other side listens to the same recital, repeated.

And he says:

"Yes."

What the jury says never gets into print.

French Tars Flee in Panic.

ATLANTA GIRL IS DROWNED IN SEA

Ethel Edmondson Overwhelmed by Wrightsville Breakers—Attempted Rescue Fails.

Miss Ethel Edmondson, 24, daughter of Mrs. S. P. Fincher, of No. 343 North Jackson street, was drowned at Wrightsville Beach Friday afternoon. She had been at the beach but a few hours when she decided to enter the surf. Scarcely had she reached the water when a huge wave raced in and knocked her down.

Roy Walraven, of Atlanta, who was with Miss Edmondson, was stunned for a moment by the force of the wave, but recovered quickly and went to her rescue. He had a terrific struggle and but for the timely arrival of Life Saver W. E. Watson he probably would have lost his life.

Miss Edmondson left Atlanta on Thursday night with a party of seven for a ten-day stay at the beach.

She was a member of Grace Methodist Church and was employed as a stenographer by the Wester Music Company.

News of her daughter's sudden death almost prostrated Mrs. Fincher. The body is expected to arrive in Atltnata to-day. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

CONFUSION OF HOLLOWAY SPOILS CLOSE OF GOOD DAY FOR THE DEFENSE

What promised to be a very favorable day for the defense in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, was partly spoiled at its close Friday by the bewilderment of E. F. Holloway, day watchman at the pencil factory, in a maze of conflicting statements.

Holloway's confusion under the fire of the Solicitor General was more than offset by the importance of the testimony which had gone before, two of the witnesses giving testimony which was intended to establish that Mary Phagan did not enter the National Pencil Factory on the day of her death until after Monteen Stover had come and gone.

Besides giving the lie direct to Jim Conley's tale, this testimony, if it stands as the truth in the minds of the jurors, upsets the State's theory that Monteen Stover visited the office of Leo Frank while the superintendent was in the metal room with the Phagan girl.

Conley said on the stand that he saw Lemmie Quinn, then Mary Phagan and then Monteen Stover go up to the second floor. The Stover girl said that she entered the factory at 12:05 o'clock. It was 12:10 when she left, she testified. She looked at the time clock both times.

Street Car Men Testify.

W. M. Matthews and W. T. Hollis, the motorman and conductor on the car which brought Mary into town the day that she met her death, testified that she did not leave the car before 12:10 o'clock, the inference from this testimony being that she could not have entered the factory before Monteen Stover and entered and left.

If the testimony of George Epps, the State's witness, is accepted, the defense declares Mary Phagan could not have entered the plant before Monteen Stover.

Matthews said that he knew the girl by sight and frequently spoke to her when she boarded his car. He said that he was relieved at Broad and Marietta streets at 12:07 o'clock the day of the crime and that he went inside the car and sat back of Mary Phagan and a girl companion while they were riding to Broad and Hunter streets. He said they got off at about 12:10 and walked toward the pencil factory.

Matthews' story contradicts that of George Epps, who testified on the stand that he rode to town with Mary, got off the car with her at Forsyth and Marietta streets and walked as far as the viaduct with her on her way to the pencil factory. Matthews and Hollis both said that they had no recollection of Epps being on the car. Hollis said that Mary was sitting alone when he took her fare just after the car got onto English avenue. Matthews said another young girl was sitting with her when the center of town was reached.

Attacks Conley's Story.

The significance of the story of the two street car men is that it seems to add another falsehood to the many that Jim Conley already has told and freely admitted telling.

He did not see Mary Phagan go upstairs to Frank's office, hear the sounds of footsteps going to the metal room, then a girl's scream, and after this witness the entrance and departure of Monteen Stover. On the contrary, the Stover girl was in the factory and gone before Mary Phagan came inside the doors.

Holloway, the day watchman, was called back to the stand by the defense to testify in rebuttal of Conley's testimony in regard to the alleged visits of women to Frank's office. Holloway said that no incidents of this sort ever took place. Conley would have had no opportunity of watching at the door without his (Holloway's) knowing it, he declared.

He denied that Daisy Hopkins ever visited the factory with a man while he was on duty or that immorality of any sort was practiced in the building to his knowledge. He said that Herbert Schiff and Frank were generally in the office together on Saturdays and that neither of them ever had women in the office.

Solicitor Dorsey began cross-examining Holloway in savage fashion and soon had the watchman badly rattled. At one time Holloway refused to commit himself as to what he had testified only a moment before.

"Was that negro drayman there Saturday—you said so awhile ago, didn't you?" asked the Solicitor.

Holloway floundered while Dorsey was insisting on an answer. He could not remember what he had testified. Finally he blurted out:

"If I said he was there, he was. If I said he wasn't there, he wasn't."

Refers to Reward Claim.

"But what is the truth?" persisted Dorsey.

Holloway continued to return the same answer until Judge Roan forced him to make a definite reply. Then he took refuge in the old reliable answer: "I don't remember."

The Solicitor called Holloway's attention to a remark that the watchman was said to have made about Conley being "my nigger" when a reference was made to the rewards offered. He also showed an affidavit signed by Holloway saying that Darley had left the factory the Saturday of the killing at 10:45 in the forenoon. Darley had testified that he left at about 9:30 and Holloway had said only a few minutes before that Darley left about 9:20 or 9:30.

"What did you say 10:45 for in the affidavit you signed for me shortly after the murder?" shouted the Solicitor.

"That was mostly guesswork," explained the witness.

"Did you tell Mr. Arnold that you left the factory every day about 5:30 o'clock?"

"Yes."

Said 3, but Meant 4 o'Clock.

"Didn't you tell me that you left sometimes at 3 o'clock?"

"If I said 3, I meant 4."

"What did you mean by 4:30 just now?"

"That just slipped out."

N. V. Darley, general manager of the factory; H. J. Hinchey, of No. 391 Peachtree street; Harry Scott, "Boots" Rogers, I. U. Kauffman, T. H. Willett and J. Q. Adams were the other witnesses of the day.

Kauffman identified blueprints and drawings he had made of the Selig home and of the pencil factory. Willett explained the pasteboard model of the factory that he had made from the blueprints. Adams identified photographs he had made at the Selig home and the factory.

Hinchey told of seeing Frank coming from home on a Washington street car the afternoon of the crime. This was intended to discredit Albert McKnight, one of the State's witnesses, who said that he saw Frank board a Georgia avenue car when he left home.

Darley was recalled largely to testify to the possibility of various methods which Conley might have employed in disposing of the girl's body in the event he was the murderer of the girl.

New Theory Is Suggested.

The most startling sugestion came from Darley's testimony that a door leading from the entryway on the first floor into the rear of the building was found broken open right after the crime. Two trap doors open into the basement from this rear room. One of them is over a chute. Reuben Arnold, by his line of questioning, showed that the defense seriously had considered the theiry that the girl's murderer had dragged her through this door on the first floor and had dropped her body down the chute.

The Solicitor brought out that the door might have been opened by the detectives in their search of the building and that if the body ever had been dropped down the chute it most probably would have been left there, as it would have been perfectly hidden.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

JULY 31.—You are the only relaxation. Diary, that they permit me to have, and my fingers, because of my weakness, feel as clumsy and big as telegraph poles. It is fortunate no one will ever read this scrawl.

I want to tell what happened the last hour before I stopped knowing what was happening.

I was sitting on the end of a log engaged in watching a cork on the water, thinking, as I so often do, of Sally, and longing to see her, when I felt Manette's arms around my neck. She had crawled out on the log, behind me, a perilous thing to do.

"Puppy says," she whispered, making believe as she frequently did that the dog could talk, "that a big black cloud is scaring him."

I looked up and found the skies overcast. There was a muttering threat in the waving of the trees, a sullen roar, and big, heavy drops of rain began to fall.

"Puppy is right," I replied, and turned hastily to carry the child back to shore. The log was old and soft and worn smooth, and my footing, with the child in my arms, was precarious. Ordinarily cautious, I thought only of the need of getting Manette to shelter, missed my step, and remember little else.

I had a feeling that I was plunging down, down, with Manette and the whole universe plunging on top of me. Everything turned black, there was a sudden, sharp pain in my head that seemed to spread over my entire body, and then I lost consciousness.

They tell me that the log, a fallen giant of the woods, must have turned, and that in my effort to save us from falling I caught hold of it and pulled it down on top of me. Then the rain began to fall in torrents.

"It was merciful," said Richard this morning, while hovering around me while the nurse took her morning walk, "that you were unconscious. If you had realized Manette's danger and your helplessness, you'd have gone mad."

Manette, they said, was saved from injury by a miracle. I have a sort of indistinct recollection that when I felt myself crashing down threw her from me. I don't know about that.

No one knows what happened in the next two hours, for it was fully that long till the dog appeared at the door of the kitchen, barking and howling. They had heard him coming, they said, by a half hour before he appeared in sight, and were ready with lanterns to follow him.

They supposed when the storm broke that he had found shelter, and were not worried, as we had been caught in so many storms before, and had always come home when they cleared, laughing and making merry over the experience.

A Friend in Need.

The dog saved us. "You may need him." Sally Spencer had urged when the question of takin him came up. She question of taking him came up. We needed him more than we needed anything else on earth. So many friends, who have brains where he has only dumb intuition, do not meet the hour of need as he met it.

Manette says that when she crawled out of the mud I was lying on the bank flat on my back, with the tree trunk lying across me. She found her way, with the rain beating down on her, to my side, and in her baby way tried to rouse me.

Failing, she seemed to realize that something serious had happened, for she snuggled down beside me, put both arms around my neck, and tried, as best she could with her arms and face, to shelter me from the storm.

Her little skirts were torn into shreds, proving the effort the dog made to pull her to a place of shelter. He pulled and barked and pulled, but she held to me with both arms. I can imagine the scene—the frantic efforts of the dog to get her to a place of safety, for the waters in the lake were rising, and her equally frantic efforts to cling to her Uncle Max.

With a mournful howl, he finally desisted, and started off to secure help for the task he was unable to accomplish alone.

Manette was uninjured, and the cold beating of the rain had no bad effects. Her name was the first I spoke when I found myself in bed with strange faces bending over me, and her arms around my neck, and her face pressed against mine, is the last I remember before I lapsed into unconsciousness again.

Afterwards.

Since then, nothing else has mattered. I know that they secured a physician at the hotel, and that the next day my own doctor came by special train, bringing a nurse and Richards with him, and that he has been here ever since.

"I am not going to leave you, Max," he said, "till I pull you through. It was my fault that you came to this place."

I am not sorry. Even physical suffering has its recompense. I do not concern myself over a thing in the world. Manette is safe, and it seems good to me, after so many years of fighting battles all alone, to have some one now fighting my battles for me. The doctor tells me frankly that this will be a battle. I do not care.

They let me have just enough light to see these pages, and when I have grown tired of writing, and I have paused many times in writing this, Richards takes you away, Diary, locks you up, and then the room is darkened again. That is the reason I have begun to regard The Hands as disembodied.

They float around me in the strangest way sometimes, always, through the long hours of the day and night, moving with quick, deft touches to make me more comfortable. Sometimes I fall asleep holding a hand in mine, and its firm, cool touch seems to give me strength.

"Please," I asked last night, "let me hold your hand. I don't have that horrible feeling of floating off alone to an unknown sea when I have hold of your hand. I have a notion," growing garrulous, for the hours at night are long, "that I would like to be holding your hand when The Pilot calls for me. Somehow I would not hesitate to go."

"The Pilot isn't going to call for you," replied a voice somewhere. I don't know where, she seems such an altogether disembodied person. I wonder sometimes if she is more than Two Hands and a Voice. "and you must go to sleep now and not think of such things."

Modes of the Moment

For the Season.

THE skirt of the very useful and smart afternoon gown illustrated on the left-hand side is slightly draped. A fold of material runs diagonally from the waist to the drapery. The bodice has long sleeves finished off with a row of small buttons and the bodice is cut in jockey style. In the center is shown a charming evening gown carried out in white with a touch of color in the japonica tulle waistband. The foundation is of ivory charmeuse and over this is arranged the crystal-embroidered tulle. Crystal trimming is carried out on the sleeveless bodice. A smart gown with a graceful skirt is illustrated on the right. A tunic or accordion-pleated silk partially covers the charmeuse skirt; the ends of the sash are finished with heavy silk tassels. The collar and cuffs are made of white linen edged with pleated frills.

THE CANNIBAL .:. A True Nature Story Complete

By F. ST. MARS.

THE last sparrow had ceased twittering and tucked his head under his wing for the night; the last blackbird had left off scolding—as blackbirds do when they are going to roost—and the last of the fowls had fluttered up into its perch in the fowl house, when the old buck rat, the master, and for that matter the leader of all the rats in the farmyard, poked his sharp inquisitive nose up out of the hole in the barn floor. He was a very big rat. His ears were like chewed biscuits, and his tail was a stump, half of its proper length, because of the many fights he had had. It would have been difficult to find two inches on his body not marred by old scars. You will see, therefore, that his mere survival proved his great cunning and strength.

Having remained quite still for ten minutes, and made certain that the corner where the big cat usually lay in ambush was empty, he made for the sacks of potatoes ranged in a far corner. It was the work of a few minutes to gnaw a hole in one of these and extract the smallest potato he could get. This he carried to his hole in the floor and down beneath where, hidden under the earth, he had a private store of potatoes, nuts, grain, etc., which he visited when there were too many dangers about for him to venture out to feed.

When next the rat appeared it was in the cowyard, close to the water trough. It was a moonlight night, and everything in the yard showed up clearly, for which reason it had taken him something like an hour to work his way from the barn, moving cautiously always in deep shadow. There was a bull in the yard, a huge beast standing in the full glare of the moon, rumbling to himself deep down in his inside, and two bats were playing in and out of the open thatched cowshed. And that was all, or so it seemed.

Like to Drink.

Rats are thirsty creatures, and like to drink every few hours, is possible, otherwise you would never have found our cunning old rascal here out in the open. The trough was in the moonlight, and as he climbed up it he did so with every sense on the alert. So intent was he upon the possibility of danger around that it never struck him to glance inside the trough. In fact, he was actually leaning over the edge to drink before he realized that something was there drinking already beside himself.

A younger and less cunning rat would have started and bolted, and given himself away, but this one instantly stiffened—"froze," they call it in the wild—and lay still as death. There was no mistaking the identity of the drinker. It was a full-grown weasel. None other possessed that long, lithe form, or that cruel gleam in the eyes, except the stoat.

Apparently the weasel had not seen him, for when it had finished drinking it came slowly along the edge of the trough, balancing carefully, straight toward his crouched, motionless form. And then suddenly he saw its head go up, and its burning eyes peer over the edge below to the yard. Next moment it dropped flat and froze, too—not 3 feet away from the rat. Still it had not seen him, and whatever danger had startled it came plainly from below.

You can understand, then, that the old rat was burning anxious to lift his head and peer over the side. It was awful to lie there and await a danger you could not see, but he could not move.

Then, after about five or six minutes of awful, motionless suspense, very, very slowly over the side of the trough a head lifted and peered down upon the grenish water, and the two beasts crouched motionless within a yard of it.

Beyond a slight start when the head appeared, our rat did not move, and as for the weasel, it did not move at all. Very good reason had the rat to start, for the head was that of his wife. Yes, she was looking for him, and he knew it, but not in the way you think.

Slowly, beside hers, another head moved up and peered over, to be followed by another and yet others, till there were ten of them in a row staring with their gleaming eyes. And all the time beneath, both rat and weasel could hear a continuous pattering and rustling, which told of more rats and yet more.

This, seeing that they were of his own kind, ought to have pleased the rat, one would have thought. It did not. It made him tremble from head to foot, and he had not trembled in the least when he thought himself alone with the weasel. He considered himself, in fact, a match for the bloodthirsty little weasel any day, but he knew he was no match for that which was coming.

Flight.

Then all at once he sprang to his feet, and so quickly that none of the other animals had time to move, he raced along the edge of the trough, sprang clean over the astonished weasel, landed on the far side, slipped, recovered and scampered away along the top of the cattle-mangers, and so to the ground and out of the farmyard gate.

It was magnificently done, that amazingly quick retreat, and it showed a certain amount of reasoning. Had he gone any other way he would inevitably have been either surrounded or overtaken by the other rats, but as it was those that poured after him came into collision with the weasel, who, being the rats' hereditary foe and possessed of astonishing courage, naturally fought and checked the pursuit, until overpowered by sheer numbers. Thus, by the time the whole mob of rats had really got well on the trail of our old villain he was some fifty yards down the hedge that bordered the field outside and beyond hope of capture.

Now you will naturally ask why these rats, his relations and neighbors, and especially his own wife, would seek to murder him—and I will whisper to you the reason. When his wife returned to her nest she found two of her babies gone and another one freshly killed, and her nose told her that our old rat was the culprit.

And that is why, if you go to the farm to-day, you will not find the cunning old rat, who knows all about traps, kills the chickens and ducklings, sucks the eggs and is the worst foe his own kind possesses, living on the farm at all, but about a field or two away, within raiding distance.

Household Suggestions

If black kid gloves or calf-kid boots have become hard, put the gloves on the hand and apply in that position (as if washing the hands) as much camphorated oil as the leather will absorb; then take off and hang to dry and also allow the camphor to evaporate. With boots, rub in well with the hand the same kind of oil. This gives the original suppleness to the leather.

To brighten a carpet, take five or six large potatoes and scrape them finely into a pail of water. Stir, then strain. Wring out a cloth in the water and rub the carpet. Rinse the cloth as soon as soiled. Should soot fall on a carpet, sprinkle dry salt thickly over it, leave it for a few minutes, then brush up. No trace of the soot will remain.

Cayenne pepper is excellent to rid cupboards of mice. The floor should be gone over carefully, and each hole stopped up with a piece of rag dipped in water and then in cayenne pepper.

Tar may be removed from the hands by rubbing with the outside of fresh orange or lemon peel and drying immediately. The volatile oils dissolve tar so that it can be rubbed off.

Permanganate of potash will clease dirty filters of all impurities. A solution should be passed through the filter until it comes out as pink as when it was poured in.

To cure a feather that has become damaged with rain or dew, sprinkle it thickly with common salt and shake before a bright fire until dry, when you will find it as good as new.

So Pa didn't have to brake any rock. Pa is a good skeemer about work.

The Wife Who Spends Her Husband's Money

BY DOROTHY DIX.

WHEN a young man asks a girl's hand in marriage the first question that her father puts to him is, "Can you support my daughter in comfort?"

No kind and thoughtful parent, however, ever, takes the trouble to ask a prospective bride, "Can you spend wisely and judiciously my son's hard-earned money?"

Yet the one thing is just as important as the other, and the happiness and success of any marriage depends just as surely on the wife's ability to get the full purchasing power out of a dollar as it does upon the husband's ability to make that dollar. The ne'er-do-well of a man does not more surely bring a family to want and poverty than the thriftless and wasteful woman does.

There is a homely old proverb that says that a woman can throw more out of the back door with a teaspoon than a man can put in at the front door with a shovel. And it's true. No man, unless he is a financial wizard, can make any headway against the extravagance of a wife. It is his wife's discretion as a spender that settles the average man's fate for him, and determines whether he is to sit on a bookkeeper's stool or stand behind the counter the balance of his life, or whether he is going to be well to do and prosperous when he is middle-aged.

When you see the young wife of a man on a moderate salary always dressed up in the very latest cut in fashion, when you meet her at matinees every week and watch her having tea at a smart hotel afterwards, when you encounter her in the butcher shop negligently ordering sweetbreads and squabs, you don't have to go to any fortune teller to forecast the future of her husband and herself.

You Can Forecast.

You can do that for yourself. You can see a stoop-shouldered man growing more and more discouraged as the years go by, and he has nothing to show for his labor except a mountain of receipted bills, and at the end of it all you see a man dead from overwork or thrown out of his job into hopeless poverty into which he sinks.

On the other hand, when you see the wife of a poor young man who does her own housework and makes her own frocks and who buys the cheap cuts of meat at the butcher shop and is particular about having the bones and the trimmings sent home, you are equally able to forecast the future for her and her husband. And you see diamonds and motor cars festooning her horizon along about the time she is 50.

There is nothing new in these statements. Everybody has seen hundreds of such cases. Everybody can recite to you dozens of instances in their personal knowledge of men who have been ruined by their wives' extravagance or made by their wives' thrift. Every mother and father pray that their own son will get a wife who has the saving bank habit instead of the bargain counter mania, yet nobody raises a finger to prevent a catastrophe that threatens every man who gets married and every family that is started.

When a woman is wasteful and extravagant, and throws her husband's good money away we blame her, and say all the hard things about her that we can think of. It's a cruel injustice. It isn't her fault. It's the fault of the idiotic way in which we bring girls up.

We don't teach them the value of money. We don't teach them how to spend it, and to expect them to make a wise use of it is as unreasonable as to expect a land lubber to know how to pilot a ship.

No Experience.

The average girl, until she gets married, has never had the spending of a dollar. Her father has paid her bills, and her mother has decided what she could buy. A little change for street car and soda water is about all the money that has ever jingled in her purse. She has never had any fixed allowance for her clothes and personal expenses, and so has never realized that if she paid too much for a hat she would have to do without a dress, and that you can't spend your money and have it, too.

Parents are so afraid that their daughters will waste their money that they let the girl learn how to spend on her husband's earnings, which is pretty hard on Friend Husband.

It isn't the girl's fault that she doesn't know how to spend her husband's money wisely. It's the fault of her parents who have not taught her one of the most important lessons in life. That this is true is abundantly proven by the fact that women who have earned their living before they were married, and who have thus learned how to handle money, are almost invariably economical and thrifty managers and helps to their husbands.

There is no greater injustice in the world than the way women are treated about money. A woman without money is the most forlorn and piteous creature on earth. She is in a thousand times worse plight, and more danger, than a man is under similar circumstances, yet fathers do not concern themselves to try to protect their daughters against such a fate.

Boys are given money of their own when they are little fellows in order that they may learn to handle it, but the little girl is left to find out this important piece of knowledge the best way she can. A boy is fitted for some occupation whereby he may support himself in comfort. A girl's living is left to chance. She isn't taught any way by which she can keep herself out of the poor house if she doesn't marry, or if her husband should die and leave her penniless.

A rich man leaves his daughter a fortune, but he has not taught her one thing about how to take care of it, and she is left to the mercy of executors and lawyers, and she doesn't even know enough to keep herself from being swindled.

Perhaps some day men will realize that the only way to protect themselves is to teach women how to handle money by giving them a definite sum for their own, instead of making them do the mendicant act for every cent they get. Then we shall hear less about extravagant wives. It's ignorance, not viciousness, that makes women waste money.

Things Worth Remembering

Public executions in Paris prove very profitable to the owners of houses commanding the scene. Windows are let out for the occasion, the landlords watching for the first sign of the execution, and then at once sending word to the persons who have hired the room. If an ordinary criminal is executed, the charge is usually about $5 per seat, but should the offender have committed any remarkable crime, the price runs up to as much as $30.

A Pittsburg boy, William A. Davis reached his thirteenth birthday on Friday, June 13, 1913. He weighed 113 pounds, lived in Taggart street, which has thirteen letters in it, and was in grade thirteen at school. His mother, who was born on December 13, ordered Master Willie to stay in bed on his birthday to insure that no harm should befall him.

Kettlewell, in Yorkshire, possesses the most remarkable electric lighting installation in England. The village is only a tiny place, but the River Wharfe provides it with natural water power, and at a cost of less than $3,000 a lighting plant has been erected, the villagers being the shareholders and the directors of the company.

Now that the large advertising posters that were so great a disfigurement of the country on either side of the French railway lines have been rendered illegal by act of Parliament, advertisers on the Orleans Railway have begun to plant flower beds of brilliant colors in the fields on either side of the line, with the flowers arranged so as to spell the name of the goods to which they are to call attention.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

It Isn't Only Skin Deep, Says Maude Knowlton

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

"BEAUTY is not just skin deep—it goes as deep as muscles and blood and brains," said Maude Knowlton, with the combination of buoyancy and conviction that makes a background of emphasis for her every word. "That is not saying that I think beauty is health, for features and figure and expression all have their part in making beauty; and I never forget that it goes right through the outer shell to the bone!"

In a cozy little flat out in the Eighties I visited the clever girl who, under Henry B. Harris' management, has scored several distinct hits, one of the best remembered of which is her marvelous portrayal of Simpson, the real chorus lady in "The Chorus Lady."

"A girl can't very well choose her birthplace," went on the girl whose clever gift of mental twist and verbal kink throws added glamour of interest over big brown eyes, wavy black hair and a complexion that when it is not covered with healthy summer-sun-and-ocean burn is first cousin to the cream of Miss Knowlton's own Irish meadow lands.

"No, a girl can't choose her own native heath, but if she could, a good starting place would be California. My! the air out there is made of component parts of vim, vigor and vitality—and with a little heredity to back up the H2O combination a start like that gives a girl a tendency to a sane, healthy viewpoint, and that kindly attitude toward life that irradiates even a homely face.

Not Posing.

"Of course, I am not posing as a beauty expert," said modest Miss Maude, "but surely we agree that an actually homely face may have a charm of spirit and intelligence, a magnetic giving out of self to the world (that plays give and take all the time, you know) that a mere beauty shell which thrills you for fifteen minutes could not exert after the first quarter was past. Vim, vigor, vitality, a tolerant spirit toward the world and its inhabitants, and buoyancy to carry you over the jolting rough places, will surely bring out all your good points better than a diet list and a course of facial massage.

"Take buoyancy—it will keep you from getting the wrinkles and lines and spiritless eyes that are foes to beauty; it will put spring into your step. And now I have reached a siding, for I just have to stop and talk about walking and carriage, Miss Beauty Seeker, hearken! You must walk along on the balls of your feet with buoyant spring instead of laggard slouch if you want to be truly attractive. Walk as if you could conquer worlds—and you will conquer hearts.

Swimming Good.

"Swimming helps a lot in the pursuit of proper land movement, for it brings a graceful fluidity of motion—no, I don't mean a fish-walk, but just a flowing, graceful movement in walking that is sure to please every one who sees, and that is sure to make you look fashionably tall and svelte.

"Oh, if you just hold yourself firmly erect on the balls of your feet and carry head and chest high instead of sloppily caved in, you will look twice as attractive, Miss Beauty Seeker—trust me for that!

"Vim to keep you up above the dead level of mediocrity; vigor to carry you on to ambition and achievement, vitality that will make you ready to meet every occasion; buoyancy—of which I have sung at length—and now a tolerant spirit, of which I can not sing at enough length. You know the woman who is always pecking and perking and digging at life, who criticises all the things that fall outside her own interests and inclinations. Her expression and attitude can ruin even a collection of perfect features and coloring."

"The woman who never would do

Miss Maude Knowlton.

the things New York does, yet who likes to see New York doing them—if it enjoys them," I mused.

"Ex-actly. I'll use that when I interview you," laughed merry Miss Maude. "'Live and let live' is a good motto for living and having the impress of living mark your face in lines of sweetness.

"Now for a background to the vim, vigor and vitality lady—the simplest clothes she dares wear, so she shall not be a mere clothes-horse, but a young-as-possible-attractive girl, whose own sweet nature and expression and well-carried figure are more important than the mere garments in which she is swathed. And there's my ideal of beauty," concluded Miss Knowlton.

And a very ideal Ideal I call it—don't you?

WOMAN SICK FOURTEEN YEARS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you may have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential,) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

MME. ROSE BRASSY opened her autograph album, a masterpiece of morocco and solid gold, and showed its contents to her friend, Mlle. Lili Blanc. The book was full of sketches, drawings and poems by famous men and women, some merry, others grave, but nearly all containing a compliment to the beautiful young matron.

"You have certainly added some very interesting autographs to your collection since I saw it last. But do you know what you ought to have? Lucien Fond's autograph."

"Don't you think I know that," said Mme. Brassy, rather annoyed. "But it is awful difficult to get hold of just as the man himself. M. Brassy has several times invited him to our dinners, but he has always been engaged."

"Of course he is the fashionable poet of the moment," said Lili, "and ever since I have come home from abroad I have heard of nobody else. The great and only Lucien Fond, whose poems are sung everywhere, from Palais Elysees to Montmartre. And that is why you simply must have his autograph in your collection, Rose."

"It is easy enough to say that, Lili."

"I know it is difficult and now more than ever, for Aunt Charlotte told me yesterday that Lucien Fond goes to Versailles every day and spends the whole day with a sick sister. But I must go now, dear. Good-bye. I am coming to tennis on Friday."

When Mme. Brassy was alone she threw herself into a chair and began to think. For a long while she sat in silence, pondering, then she jumped up and said: "I know how it is going to be done."

The next day Lucien Fond drove to the railway station in his car.

He Is Annoyed.

"Call for me her to-night at 10," he said to his chauffeur.

Then he went into the waiting room, where a large portrait of himself made him pull his hat down over his eyes. His popularity annoyed him. He would have given anything to be an unknown traveler who was not made the target of scores of amateur photographers as soon as he left his house.

The train arrived. Fond entered a first-class compartment and was about to close the door behind him when he felt somebody pulling the door from the outside. He growled something between his teeth intended to sound like an apology and retired into the farthest corner and began to look at the landscape, dreading every moment that the young lady who had entered should begin to talk to him. No doubt she was going to pay him one of the compliments which were on everybody's lips and which he hated.

Of course, she was staring at him now. He could just feel it with his nerves without looking up.

But he was evidently mistaken. The young lady did not say a single word. The poet was bored and the sun annoyed him. He rolled down the shade and cast a stolen glance at his companion.

She was exceedingly pretty. Now she took off her veil and hat and arranged her fluffy golden hair. Then she rested her head in her hands and looked as if her thoughts were far away.

Fond, who was a great smoker and who was dying for a cigarette, took out his case.

"May I smoke, mademoiselle?" he asked politely.

She nodded her head and smiled. The poet was surprised. After the way she had looked at him he had expected a volume of words, a repetition of the compliments he was used to hear everywhere and which he hated. But she said nothing—not a single word. Fond was surprised and just a little bit disappointed.

Her Scheme.

While he was smoking he studied his companion's beautiful profile and slender throat. Suddenly she stood up and tried in vain to open the window. Fond rushed to her side and opened it for her. She thanked him with a graceful nod.

"At last I have met a woman who does not talk too much," he thought. "Perhaps she does not know me—and still the way she looked at me."

And Lucien Fond, who hated strangers to address him, now actually wished she would say something.

He threw away his cigarette.

"I am sure the smoke annoys you, mademoiselle," he said.

The young lady merely smiled. Did she mean yes or no?

More and more puzzled by her smile and her silence the poet said:

"Don't you feel a draught? Don't you want me to close the window on my side?"

The young lady produced a notebook, wrote something and handed it to the astonished poet.

"I am deaf," he read.

Deaf, that beautiful young girl—for of course she could not be married. The poet was deeply touched and wrote in the book:

"Please accept my sincerest sympathy. LUCIEN FOND."

The poor young girl took her notebook, looked at it, smiled and put it into her bag.

* * *

Three days later Mme. Brassy was having a tennis party. Lili played badly and Rose scolded her.

"You must try to play better, Lili."

Her Triumph.

"Where there is a will there is a way, you know."

"Not always Rose—remember Lucien Fond's autograph."

"Oh, I have that."

Rose threw down her racquet, ran up to the house and returned proudly with her album open. A new page had been pasted in, and on this was written:

"Please accept my sincerest sympathy. LUCIEN FOND."

"But how in the world did you get it so quickly, Rose, and why does he write 'sincerest sympathy'?"

Mme. Rose blushed a little and replied:

"That is my secret."

A Tie.

"I took Gladys to the party last night. On the way home I proposed, and she accepted me."

"That's winning in a walk, isn't it?"

"Yes, but it was a neck and neck finish."

A Misfit.

"Wealth has its penalties," said the ready-made philosopher.

"Yes," replied Mr. Cumrox. "I'd rather be back at the dear old factory than learning to pronounce the names of the old masters in my picture gallery."

How Wonderful!

The dumb man saw a wheel and spoke.

The deaf man saw a flock and herd.

The blind man bought a plane and saw.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN.

(Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Now, when did she fly?" the detective pursued. "Shortly after I saw her last. And how? On foot and quietly. The hall boy saw her go out, and he says she had her little bag on her arm and looked decent and composed; not like a woman in a delirium, nor even like one who meditates any dreadful crime. But then a boy's observation does not go for much, and we will let it pass. What we will remember, though, is this, that she had a veil on which covered her face, and this veil was brown, or, at least, of a very dark color.

"Two persons have told me so; the boy, whose word goes for little, and the chambermaid, who, though she did not see her go out, had had ample opportunity for observing her veil earlier in the afternoon, and whose word on such a subject does go for something. But, and mark the fact well, for it seems to me important, the veil that was clinging to her dress when she was brought into Mrs. Olney's parlor was gray and decidedly light; not the same one at all, according to description, which she wore when she went out of the hotel. What is the conclusion? That she stopped somewhere. Where? Another thing to find out. And now, about the poison. I went through Twenty-second street very soon after leaving Mrs. Olney's last night, and in front of one of the houses between Fifth and Sixth avenues I found a broken phial reeking with the smell of bitter almonds. So that part of his story is true. I have brought the bits of broken glass. Here they are."

The Coroner looked at them curiously, smelled them and glanced up at Mr. Gryce.

"Well!" he suggested, in an inquiring tone. He felt that the detective's silence meant something.

"Don't you notice anything peculiar about these pieces?"

"No; to be fronk, I don't."

"Poison that is bought at a drug store usually has a label on the bottle."

"True."

"And this phial once had a label on it."

"I see."

"But it has been washed off; or rather rubbed off by a moistened hand. There are bits of it still remaining."

"I perceive them."

"What inference can we draw? That caution has been used. Now caution is not an attribute of the suicide, whether that suicide was an intentional one or the result of a mistake."

"Humph!"

"And then there is another thing that puzzles me. Dr. Molesworth declares he found her sitting on the steps. I looked at those steps. There was a light snow lying on them and this snow lay white and undisturbed, as it would not have done if a woman had been sitting there. But then some little time had elapsed since he removed her from the spot, and enough fresh snow may have fallen to cover up the traces which her skirts must have left behind her."

"Very possible."

"Only those skirts were not damp about the edges, as they must have been if she had been sitting on a stoop under these circumstances. And this to my mind is good evidence that she did not sit there. I would sooner believe she had been carried down the stoop and placed in the phaeton without putting her foot to the ground. Only it happens to be General ——'s house and the thing is impossible."

"But how could you know about her skirts? You did not go near her."

"But Harrison did, the man you yourself sent there to investigate."

"And you have seen him since?"

"Five minutes after you did, sir."

The coroner laughed. He did not understand such zeal.

"I knew you would send for me," resumed Mr. Gryce, "and I want to have something to talk about."

"I see," said the Coroner, "well, go on."

"I am almost at the end of my rope, only—did you wonder what had become of Miss Farley's bag?"

"I did not know she had any."

The Missing Bag.

"The people at the hotel say she had, and here is the ocular proof of it." And Mr. Gryce produced from under his coat a small but neat handbag of black leather, having on one side two ornamental steel letters, one of which was "M." and the other "F." "The initials of her name, you perceive."

The Coroner nodded.

"You wonder where I got this bag. Why, in the most natural place in the world; it was in the phæton.'

"Ah, in the phæton."

"When I went out of the house last night I found that vehicle standing where it had been left, in front of the steps; and as according to the doctor's story, it had been the real scene of death, I naturally thought you would wish to have a look at it. I accordingly took possession of it and not seeing what else I could do with it at that time of night, drove it into a stable nearby. I expected every moment to be stopped by somebody and so forced to reveal my true character; but circumstances favored me and I got off with my prize unmolested. You will find it in charge of an officer at No. 66 West —— street."

"That is all right, but what about the look you took? You never left that phæton for me to examine first."

Mr. Gryce smiled grimly at the plain gold stud he wore as a cuff button. "I see you understand me." He then admitted apologetically, "'Twas dark and I did not find much. Still, I found something; the bag, for instance."

The Coroner looked at him with a doubtful air. Did he suspect for the first time that the detective was concealing something from him? If so, he said nothing, and Mr. Gryce went on blandly.

"This bag may have stories to tell. Suppose you open it, sir."

The Coroner nodded and did so. A number of toilet articles came to light and some linen. All was fresh and neat.

"Nothing that is likely to help up," asserted the Coroner. "No vestiges of poison, no letters, not even a scrap of writing of any kind."

Mr. Gryce did not commit himself.

"I would like to take an inventory of the articles," said he.

The Coroner allowed him to do so and then inquired:

"What about the witnesses? Have you seen the clerks at the drug store?"

"Yes, they have nothing to add to his story. He stopped there, came in as he said, told his fears and asked for assistance. One of them, Herbert Black by name, at once responded, but before he could reach the door the doctor came rushing back and crying out: 'It is too late; she is dead, led the way to the phæton, where they saw the poor girl tumbled in a heap, white and lifeless. They were young men and did not know enough to take her by the hand and see if she were yet cold. They took him doctor's word for granted, knowing him so well, and feeling a natural indisposition to interfere in a matter at once so horrible and so delicate, only asked what they should do to help him. 'I am going to take her straight home,' he told them, and requested one of them to telephone to you and the other to run along at his side as far as the house. This latter duty fell to Mr. Black, and it was he who helped the doctor carry the poor girl in. That is all. I worked a half hour, but could get no more out of him."

Nine Hours to Work.

"And the clergyman?"

"Has nothing to impart."

"And the driver? You surely have seen the driver, he whom he sent out of the way with a prescription to some patient or other?"

Mr. Gryce's brows knit.

"I have had but nine hours to work in," he said, "and one of them was thrown away on that boy. I set a watch for him in three places and succeeded in getting the first word with him. But he had only one story to tell and told it doggedly. It was in strict accordance with that of Dr. Molesworth. He had been ordered to come to the C—— Hotel at a quarter past 8 to take Mr. Pease home after the expected ceremony. He had gone there on foot, Dr. Molesworth himself having driven Mr. Pease to the hotel, and, finding the phaeton at the door, had waited beside it for the clergyman to come out. But before this could happen the doctor reappeared, and declaring that matters had not gone as he wished, took his place in the phaeton and beckoned him in beside him, after which they rode about the streets until the doctor suddenly stopped the horse somewhere near Union Square and, commanding him to get out, gave him a bit of paper, which he told him to take as quickly as he could to Mr. Monroe, in Seventy-third street. He obeyed him and had only just come back. This is what the boy said and all he could say, but I know as well as I know anything that he did not tell me the truth, for when I asked him what cars he took he stared at me for a moment helplessly, and then said, 'The Madison avenue cars,' which story he stuck to, but as one who is very much frightened sticks to a statement he knows is false but dares not abandon."

"I will make him tell the truth," asserted the Coroner.

"It is to be hoped so. He is not dull, but he is mighty obstinate, and is to all appearance very much afraid of his master."

"I know the species. I can manage him."

Mr. Gryce looked doubtful, but did not pursue the subject. On the contrary, he remarked:

"I forgot to give you another point I have made. Molesworth says that after leaving the hotel he rode through the streets searching for his missing bride. Now, a person who searches goes slowly, and when he finds what he seeks in the condition in which Miss Farley was found, he still goes slowly. But Dr. Molesworth's horse had been driven far and fast, as the state he was in when I drove him into the stable amply showed."

"A point? I should think so."

"And that is not all. Seeing that the horse went a trifle lame, I examined his feet, and there, wedged between the hoof and the shoe of his right forefoot I found a bit of gravel which I dare wager never came from the streets about Madison Square. As the horse was not lame enough for it to have been there long, I drew the inference that Miss Farley was searched for in other regions than those his story would lead you to surmise."

To Be Continued Monday.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"NO" TO ALL.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The other night I attended a mask ball. Through the masking I became acquainted with a young man. Before leaving he asked me for my address, and if he might call.

I am 17. Should I have given him my address? Should I continue the acquaintance without a conventional introduction if he writes, as I know none of his friends? The young man asked me to call him up on the phone. Can I do this? Would it be proper to have him call? Should he ask me to go out with him (for he said something to that effect)? Could I do so without a chaperone? ROBERTA.

Let the matter end right now. You were foolish to give him your address, but it will be nothing more than passing folly if you make no effort to see him again.

ACCEPT HER STATEMENT.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Until recently one of the boys in our crowd kept company with a rather pretty girl and through some disagreement discontinued his attentions. All along I have been rather sweet on this same girl and since their disagreement I have been to see her very often.

What I can not understand, is this: It is only two or three months since I have been calling and she says she has learned to love me dearly. This other boy says she has told him that very often, too. Do you really think she could have learned to love me in so short a time?

She has given proof in one way, however. She never went to church before, but now she goes every Sunday night with me.

The boys kid me terribly and I want to hear from some one who is entirely impartial.

WILLIAM.

She may love you. One can not measure love by time, and you say she has given proof. Accept her statements without question and enjoy the present, but make no arrangements for marriage until you are sure that you are more than "rather sweet" on her.

THOMPSON TO TRY TO BREAK JINX TO-DAY

By Joe Agler.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 9.—When a jinx sits down on a ball club like the one that is following us around, there's no certainty of anything connected with baseball, and I reckon we ought to be thankful that we are permitted to keep on living.

Carl Thompson is due to pitch for us to-day, with Chapman catching and if it hadn't been for the games of yesterday and the day before I'd say we had a good chance to win. Of course, we're due to-day—but there's not a thing to being due, or even past due, when a jinx is on you.

WE thought we had that one-run jinx all busted yesterday and we should have except for as big a slice of the old luck I ever saw a ball club handed in one game.

We got into the last of the ninth with the score 4 to 2 in our favor and Love getting along pretty well, though not up to the mark set in his first game. Young got a hit over second and hurt his leg turning first. Daley ran for him and Perry drew a base on balls. Artie Hofman made to attempts to bunt, and then, forced to take a swing at it, slashed one straight at Bisland. It looked like a sure double play, but the ball took a freak hop far over Bisland's head and Daley scored. Long tried to nip him at the plate, which let Perry get to third and Hofman to second. Then Gibson hit for Noyes and singled, and it was all over.

• • •

BUT you can take it from me, the boys are fighting this jinx, and we believe we are bound to bust it soon.

Whitney Arrives for Big Bout

Frank Looks Fit for Tough Go

By Left Hook.

WE have with us to-day Frank Whitney. The fighting carpenter arrived from Chicago yesterday and will be in our midst for several days. In the course of a few hours Charley White will be on the scene. The boys mix in a scheduled 10-round bout at the Auditorium-Armory on Wednesday night.

If Frank ever looked better than he does at the present time we have never had the pleasure of seeing him. The Cedar Rapids boy is the picture of health and says he never felt better in his life. Whitney is already near the weight he has agreed to make, therefore, he will not have to weaken himself by taking off any needed pounds.

FURTHERMORE, Whitney wishes to inform his many admirers here that on Wednesday night he will be ready for the battle of his career. To beat White is a difficult task for any boxer in the world. Whitney knows this and says he will be in the very best condition of his life when he steps into the ring with the Chicago sensation.

"A victory over White means that I will be in line with the topnotchers of my division," chirped Frank yesterday. "This is the chance I have been after for the past two years and, believe me, Charley will be in for the battle of his life. He may beat me, but if he does, it will be only after I have given him the very best that's in me. And, personally, I think that's good enough to win."

Frank spent a couple of days in Chicago before coming here. While there Whitney boxed with several of the tough "Windy City" scrappers, and, according to Frank, they certainly gave him a good work-out.

"I BOXED two days with Packey McFarland, and believe me, I was a pretty busy party," said Frank. "We boxed five rounds on each day and I never had blows showered at me as fast as I did on those occasions. At that, I wanted the experience, as I knew Packey had boxed with White several times and could give me a few pointers."

"They certainly think a great deal of White out West," continued the fighting carpenter. "They are calling him the greatest fighter in the world at his weight and I have already received two offers if I succeed in taking his measure. Kenosha, Wis., has promised me a bout with Leach Cross, while Milwaukee would put me on with Pal Brown."

While here Whitney will train at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Frank expects to spend most of his time boxing as he has already done quite a bit of road work. He expects to start work this afternoon.

WHITE is considered another Packey McFarland in science, speed and cleverness and has something that Packey rarely displays, a knock-out kick. In boxing Charlie, an opponent can not take any chances. Once an opening is left, the Chicago boy is quick to seize an opportunity of sending home his pile-driving blows.

Whitney thinks that the only way to beat White is to keep on top of him and never give him a chance to get set. He will probably map out his campaign on these lines. Frank expects his added weight will be of much advantage to him in this line of battling.

WHILE most of the fans are discussing the White-Whitney battle there are many fans who are giving much attention to the other 10-round battles. The return engagement between Kid Young and Charley Lee is arousing much talk.

Many believe that Young is still the best local boy at his weight when in condition. Lee, however, thinks otherwise and says he will prove for once and all time next Wednesday that he is Young's superior. Both boys are working hard for the go and should put up a corking mill.

THE other mill on the program will be a 10-round affair between Eddie Hanlon and Mike Saul. Mike already holds one victory over Hanlon and is out to prove he can duplicate the performance. Outsiders, however, appear to be stringing with Eddie. The latter's great showing with Terry Nelson has not been forgotten. Eddie fought like a champion the night he defeated Nelson, and if he fights the same way Wednesday, Saul will have his hands full carrying off the lion's share of the purse.

Tickets are on sale at Shepherd's Segar Store, Edgewood avenue and Pryor street.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

MERELY A HECTIC DREAM.

Within the Hall of Fame I saw a noble monument.
It cost ten thousand dollars if it ever cost a cent.
And breathlessly I asked the guide: "Who is yon famous gent?"

"That man," he said, "is Adam Umph —a man whose noble name
Will echo on for countless years and fill the Hall of Fame.
He was a scribe who wrote about the well-known baseball game."

"And why," I said, "should Adam Umph attain a statue tall
For writing dope about the gents who lean against the ball
When men like Cy and Charlie Dry are given none at all?"

"At writing dope old Charlie Dry can put him in the shade,
But this is why," he made reply, "his fame will never fade:
"He never canned a manager nor ever made a trade."

In ancient days baseball was our national game, but that was before we took up the pastime of firing managers.

The fabulous sum of $26 is all that is left out of Luther McCarty's $4,000 purse. This explains why some men would rather manage fighters than work for a living.

Horace Fogel has wished himself on the Federal League, but the said league has been up against it so hard that it is too weak to resist.

If it be true that Tom Chivington said "I should worry," we move that he be barred forever from organized baseball.

The rumor that Artie Hofman will be sold to the Yanks leads some one to suspect that some one has an awful grudge against the said Artie.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

When Frank Whitney steps into the ring with Charley White at the Auditorium-Armory Wednesday night he will not lack for admirers. Frank's great battles against "Battling" Nelson, Joe Thomas and Jake Abel has made him a popular boy among local fans.

Ad Wolgast, ex-lightweight champion of the world, will probably be seen in action on Labor Day. Tom McCarey yesterday secured Ad's word to meet the winner of the Jack White-Dundee bout on August 12.

• • •

Terry Nelson still thinks he can handle his mitts with the best of them. Terry has issued a challenge to the winner of the Hanlon-Mike Saul bout and says he will let the purse go winner take all if either of these boys will make 135 pounds at 3 o'clock for a night fight.

• • •

Jimmy Johnson, the New York fight promoter, expects a big crowd to attend the Jack Britton-Young Shugrue go next month. Both boys have put up sensational battles in the Eastern cities and are big cards with the fans.

• • •

Joe Rivers will have his last chance to make good on the coast on Labor Day when he tackles Leach Cross in a 20-round set-to. If Rivers loses he will be through as a big attraction with the Pacific coasters.

• • •

Joe Mandot, the French baker boy, intends to start a busy campaign on Labor Day. He has already wired Lou Castro, the local promoter, for a chance at the winner of the Whitney-White bout. Mandot ought to be a big card here.

• • •

Everybody is wondering why Knockout Brown is not fighting and whether he is ever going to put on the gloves again. His manager, Danny Morgan, says he'll start again as soon as the hot spell is over. In the meanwhile, Brown is taking daily spins in his new auto and also taking frequent dips in the briny. He should worry.

• • •

Arthur Pelky has refused to meet Jess Willard in a 20-round bout. Instead, he signed to clash with Charlie Miller before Jim Coffroth's club on August 27. Tom Jones, manager of Willard, claims that Pelky was afraid of his protege.

Freddie Luther Wins Long Race

Glenn and Lockner in Dead Heat

FREDDIE LUTHER, of Fort Worth, which is in Texas, earned the rating of pop-pop champion of the South over the 25-mile route, riding a runaway style of race at the Motordrome last night. Jock McNeil was second and Harry Glenn third, but Freddie had a good margin on all of them, though it should be explained that Jock suffered from engine trouble. That circumstance cost him several laps, and he was able to regain all but one and a fraction.

Luther maintained an average of 81.3 miles an hour. Engine trouble caused Morty Graves to drop out rather early in the struggle. Freddie's victory was especially popular in that it was his first victory on the local speedway.

Tex Richards won his customary event in spite of the fact that his own pet machine was in the hospital. This time Tex's victory was in the five-mile invitation race, which he negotiated in the fast time of 3:35.

An unusual finish was noted in the first heat of the special match race between Harry Glenn and George Lockner. The pair finished in a tie so tight that the judges could only call it a dead heat. The race was one of the best pair events yet seen on the speedway, each rider taking one of the two remaining heats. The event will be raced off next Tuesday night.

Following are the summaries:

MOTORDROME PURSE.
(One-Mile Heats; 2 Miles, Final.)

First Heat—Morty Graves, first; Tex Richards, second. Time, :44 2-5.

Second Heat—Harry Swartz, first; Georges Renel, second. Time, :43 2-5.

Third Heat—Jock McNeil, first; Henry Lewis, second. Time, :43 2-5.

Final—Morty Graves, first; Harry Swartz, second; Georges Renel, third. Time, 1:23.

SPECIAL MATCH RACE.
(Between Harry Glenn and Geprge Lockner, best two out of three, 2-mile heats.)

First Heat—Declared dead heat. Time, 1:27 3-5.

Second Heat—Won by Glenn. Time, 1:27 2-5.

Third Heat—Won by Lockner. Time, 1:28 2-5.

INVITATION RACE.
(Five Miles, Open to All Comers.)

Won by Tex Richards; Georges Renel, second. Time, 3:35.

CHANCE PAYS $17,000 FOR MAISEL, BALTIMORE PLAYER

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Nothing daunted by his recent experience with Jimmy Callahan in the Chase trade, Frank Chance yesterday added to the list of high-priced "beauties" when he paid Baltimore $12,000 in cash and Players Daniels and Middleton at $5,000 for Ed Maisel, the star shortstop of the Orioles. Maisel is to report to Chance here to-day.

The high-priced infielder has been much sought by the White Sox, the Boston Braves and other clubs, but the Yankees, striving earnestly to get a winning club outbid the others. The new man plays third base or shortstop with equal facility. Last season he batted .276 in 159 games, fielded .925 in 138 games at short and .927 in 22 games on the hot corner.

WELSH GO NOT LIKELY TO NET RITCHIE MUCH

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Aug. 9.—Willie Ritchie has let it be known that he had accepted the offer of Vancouver promoters for a match with Freddie Welsh on September 1.

This means that Ritchie has little thought of meeting Tommy Murphy, his "logical opponent," in the near future, and judging by remarks heard where sports congregate, Ritchie can prepare himself for a renewal of the criticism he was subjected to while he was touring the footlights and replying vaguely to questions put to him in respect to his ring plans.

There is a whisper around already that the Vancouver offer is not genuine but that Ritchie and Welsh are simply stockholders in a venture which calls for a 20-round bout and the taking of moving pictures. Those who are responsible for this rumor say that the "international aspect" of the bout leads all the parties interested to think that a big clean-up will be made from the "movies."

DILLON HELD TO DRAW BY ASHE IN 12 ROUNDS

WINNIPEG, MAN., Aug. 9.—George Ashe, of New York, gamely fought off the vicious attacks of Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, for twelve rounds last night, and the bout was declared a draw. Although Dillon made blood flow in the first round he was unable successfully to continue the advantage.

To Stop Scaling of Psoriasis

This Troublesome Skin Disease Promptly Checked by a Very Simple Attention.

A lady in Lexington, Ky., says that before she began using S. S. S. psoriasis broke out at frequent intervals where she thought it cured. But by getting her blood under control by the influence of S. S. S., the disease entirely disappeared and there was never again the slightest sign of it.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from the fine network of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin, is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

This is why skin troubles vanish so readily and why they do not return.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The great Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 182 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Ax Hangs Over Evers and Callahan

One-Run Jinx Still On the Job

By O. B. Keeler.

SIDE-STEPPING for the moment the somewhat scrambled managerial lay-out in our own tight little league, and placing a large and furry ear in immediate proximity to the Red Old Hills of Georgia, we are able to discern distant rumblings from the general direction of Chicago.

It listens to the effect that Jake Stahl shortly is to welcome distinguished company in the recently organized club of Canned Managers.

Jimmy Callahan, of the White Sox, and Johnny Evers, of the Cubs, are to be up for membership.

ALSO Thomas Chivington, president of the American Association, who likewise lives and moves and opens his protests in Chicago.

We don't know that anybody in this precinct is likely to get much het up over the prospective skids for Mr. Chivington, so long as he doesn't come down here and start an insurrection.

But there will be a good deal of interest in the fate of the Silent Trojan and the man who could see $18,500 in Larry Chappelle.

CALLAHAN'S case is something brand new, while Evers' has been growling and chirping alternately since before the present season opened.

Cal is simply getting the hot end of it from the bugs, the same as any manager in a town accustomed to a winning ball club, when his bunch falls into a losing streak. The bleacher experts in particular are after his scalp.

But that is only incidental.

It is said that Callahan's manner of handling his men, always sharp and dictatorial, is rapidly getting to the bullying and bulldozing stage. If that is true, it is a serious state of affairs. Most ball players are led and kidded, not abused and nagged, into playing their best. A sore bunch of ball players of the best class will put up a much sorrier fight than an inferior team, working and pulling together, and fighting the enemy intead of the manager.

* * *

SWITCHING to Evers, however, we find our o. f., Chubby Cholly Muffy, standing all puffed up in the spotlight and insisting he likes a scrappy club and a scrappy manager.

"I want them to fight—fight each other—fight the manager—fight the other club," says Mr. Muffy. "Johnny Evers has made good. He is there to stay."

But Mr. Muffy said a lot of kind words about F. Chance, too. And M. Brown.

And it is recalled that Roger Bresnahan still is with the Cubs—and that Rajah was pretty well understood to be taken over with the idea that if J. Evers didn't deliver a pennant, he (Rajah) was to have a crack at it.

We don't know about that, except this much:

J. Evers won't win the pennant this year.

AND about Johnny. He's a grand little ball player, but his unruly talking apparatus is getting him in bad. Getting him in worse, it might better be said.

The most ardent Cub fans are getting around to where they want Johnny to play ball. They want him to stay in the game and not spend his valuable time debating with the umpires and walking to the clubhouse.

Johnny may change his tactics.

And he may not.

* * *

FROM what we can gather at this distance, the following points appear in evidence:

The One-Run Jinx sticks on the job.

Providence has its arms around Fleharty.

If Slim Love was looking for a fine place to blow, he certainly found it; also, he did a good job of blowing.

The Volunteers' position in the league standing should be reversed, if the game yesterday was a fair sample of their luck.

Bill Smith had better begin coppering his own bets. In the last four games he has left Thompson and Love in too long and Dent not long enough.

But, at that, had Billy's maneuvers turned out the other way, the bugs would have been wagging their alleged domes of thought and talking about what a wise manager he was.

We still have a chance to make the trip all square at Nashville.

WOLGAST AND RITCHIE IN A MATCH FOR COMING FALL

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9—Tom Jones is authority for the statement that Champion Willie Ritchie will be seen in action with Ad Wolgast here the last of October or some time in November.

"It is possible," Jones says, "that they may not get together before Thanksgiving, but a return match will be staged here about that time, unless negotiations fail through entirely."

Ad and Tom Jones arrived in town yesterday morning. It is understood that McCarey will make a strong bid for the match and both Ritchie and Wolgast have signified their willingness to be here should the terms be satisfactory.

GOLFER MUST BE SUB-CONSCIOUS TO PLAY WELL

By Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—An article in the August Century Magazine by Marshall Whitlack, entitled "Mind versus Muscle in Golf" seems to have attracted much attention. Mr. Whitlack has developed a new theory of play and applied it to his own game. The result has been a marked improvement in his scores. He believes that good golf is played through the lower nerve centers and motor channels, while poor golf is due to the direct interference of the brain or consciousness.

"Apparently we play our good golf in a subconscious condition," he says, "and that is why all interruptions are so disastrous to one's game. According to this theory one must depend upon muscular sense and the preliminary waggle assumes unusual importance, as the right feel must be obtained in action, the waggle must be continued until the muscles feel the balance and poise of the body while in motion."

The chief idea of the whole theory seems to be that the ball must be addressed in motion and not in repose, because in the latter condition the muscles will set and stiffen to the detriment of one's game.

So much for the theory. The other day I met Mr. McCordic, one of Skokie's most prominent golfers, and he asked me if I had read the Century article. He and Douglass Smith read it last Friday night. Saturday morning they went out and made 75 and 77, and attributed that good score to the new idea.

GUS MUDD, one of Beverly's golfers, has sent me the following question:

"What is the penalty when caddy goes into bunker with player in match play or qualifying round?"

I am not an authority on rules, but I have never heard of any penalty attaching to such an act. I consulted Tom Bendelow, who assures me there is no such penalty. If by chance he is mistaken I should be glad to hear from other golfers.

The reason I do not think there is any such ruling as indicated by the question is the enormous size of the bunkers in Great Britain. If a caddy could not go into such a bunker it would work great hardship upon the player.

CAPTAIN R. H. PETERS, a civil war veteran, and an enthusiastic member of the Ravenswood Golf Club, made a wonderful shot on his home course the other day. He was about twenty yards from the fourth green and his ball lay in a grassy hollow and he had to use a well-lofted club to get out. Undismayed, the captain caught the ball deftly and landed it in the hole. It was a very unusual shot and Captain Peters has every reason to be proud of his achievement.

Schwartz Wants to Quit Vols

Hirsig Stingy With "Coin Bag"

By Paul W. Treanor.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 9.—Flying distress signals from every mast, leaking from stem to stern, the poor old hulk in which the Vols have been floundering about in the rough seas has been deserted by the Voltown bugs, and inquiring glances are being turned to a new and up to date craft to be launched next season. Every hope of landing in even decent company has been abandoned and the only thing left to consider is the building up of a club, out of entirely new material.

On top of the multitude of woes of the Schwartzmen, who have experienced the most appalling disasters on their road trips, comes the well-defined gossip that the Boy Manager has thrown up the sponge and asked to be relieved of the managerial worries in 1914. To the thousands of fans who have long been clamoring for Bill Schwartz's scalp the news will be hailed with wild delight, while to a few more thousand who will never believe that Bill has had a fair chance, his resignation will be a tough blow.

The latter clan are asking just who will be the Moses to lead the Vols back to the top rung of the ladder, of which they clambered by only a toe hold, back in 1908 when Bill Bernhard was the pilot. Where are they going to find a leader who can produce better results than Bill Schwartz, when one pauses to analyze the bunch of has-been and discards with which he has been forced to fight, and echo, always on the job, cuts in with the well-known answer.

Hirsig Pleads With Manager.

President Hirsig, according to the dope going the rounds, has pleaded with the boy pilot to reconsider his retirement from the game and direct the club next season from the bench, at the same time offering Bill a mighty fat job in the big garage which the Allbi Boss is building. Bill is a big ace wherever tires and automobiles are concerned and can hook himself on to a soft job any time he wants to send his uniform to a museum.

If anything will prevail upon Schwartz to once more head the Vols it is going to be the sting of past defeats which prod his ambition to bring a flag to Voltown, for no man lives who can brand the boy manager as a quitter.

The time for post-mortems passed long ago, likewise the weeps over the upset milk can, but Hirsig doesn't know as much about ball players and how the game should be played as a sparrow does about the Panama toll argument, and he just naturally can't keep from jabbing his fins in the pie and deciding on the merits of ball tossers, some thousand miles or more away from his office.

The Murphy of Southern League.

The man who PRESENTED Harry Welchonce to the Crackers, who passed up a chance early in the year to grab off Third-sacker Dodge from the Reds, when they were crazy to get rid of him, who handed down adverse weighty (?) opinions on pitching deals, when the slabbers were cracking, was Hirsig. Time without number he meddled and wrecked the club's chances, for the Charles Webb Murphy of the Southern League is about the best little meddler at large.

When the Vols, after a grueling drive and fighting on sheer nerve, crawled into second place, Bill Schwartz, realizing the club was skating on thin ice, went to his boss on his knees for help, pointed out the weak places and faltering twirlers. And did Hirsig heed the warning? With padlocks that would baffle a burglar's kit, he clamped the lid on the strong box and laughed at the fears of the Vols ever slumping.

Some, with more sentiment than brains, are gaping their heads off for Artie Hofman to be elevated from the ranks, but you can go broke that the former Cub wouldn't touch the leadership if Schwartz has any notion of leading another forlorn hope, and even if Bill should lay the spangles aside, Circus Solly is far too wise a ball player to allow the present flock of Vols to be saddled off on him and put more gray hairs on his scalp.

CHURCH BALL PLAYER UNRULY.

CAMBRIDGE, OHIO, Aug. 9.—J. Powers, a member of the United Brethren Church team, is under arrest here on a charge of assault and held by the police under $300 bond.

Powers, it is alleged, assaulted F. S. Pollock, an umpire here, during a ball game, fracturing his skull. The hearing was delayed pending the outcome of Pollock's injuries. The assault took place during a twilight game late yesterday. Powers took exception to a ruling of the umpire and a fight followed.

GUNBOAT SMITH STOPS FLYNN IN FIVE ROUNDS

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Gunboat Smith is believed to have added some slight weight to his claim of the heavyweight title last night when he whipped Jim Flynn so thoroughly in five rounds that Referee Joh stopped the bout, which was scheduled for ten rounds. The Pueblo fireman was knocked down four times in the fifth round, and was battered fiercely throughout the battle after the opening session.

Smith weighed 183 1-2 pounds and Flynn was five pounds heavier. He started rushing at the first gong and crowded Smith back to his corner, working short-arm jabs to the body. Smith broke away and straightened his adversary up with a savage right uppercut. Then he managed to keep the fireman away from him and jabbed him enough to even things in that round.

Smith continued the same tactics in the next three rounds, keeping Flynn away from him and jabbing him viciously. In the fifth round the Gunboat stopped a fierce swing with his ribs, and on recovering he sailed in savagely with a hail of right and left jabs, followed by a right uppercut flush on the jaw that sent the fireman down for the count of eight. He got up and was knocked down again, and when this had been repeated twice more, Joh stopped the fight.

HUERTA ORDERS DRAFTING OF FRESH DEFI

Determined to Refuse to Recognize Lind—Iron Hand Fails to Curb Carranza's Activity.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 9.—Captain Snowden, of the battleship New Hampshire, at the direction of John Lind, Special Ambassador from President Wilson to Mexico, to-day sent the following wireless to Admiral Fletcher, commander of the flotilla of United States warships in the harbor here:

"Governor Lind wishes to see the United States Consul and Admiral Fletcher immediately upon his arrival at Vera Cruz Saturday. Governor Lind will not go to Mexico City until Sunday."

Sensational rumors were circulated as to the cause for the conference. The New Hampshire will probably arrive this evening.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Maintaining his iron hand attitude in spite of international menace from revolutionary armies and threatened coercion, Provisional President Huerta to-day continued his diplomatic battle with the United States by giving orders to draft another note of protest against the coming of Special Ambassador Lind, unless the United States recognizes Mexico or halts Mr. Lind before he arrives in this city.

A tense situation exists here pending the arrival of Mr. Lind, who has been retarded by the State Department at Washington. It is likely that Mr. Lind will not arrive here until Sunday or Monday, if he is not detained en route on orders from Secretary Bryan.

Huerta's hope that defiance of the United States might break down the revolutionary spirit in the north seems to have been futile, according to a message from General Venustiano Carranza, leader of the rebels.

Gains Fresh Followers.

This was a reply to overtures to Carranza to join his forces to the regular army in the event of a "foreign invasion." However, Huerta has gained fresh followers among the radical element by his defiance of President Wilson. Supporters of the provisional president charge that the United States is preparing to act as it did in Cuba.

Sensational reports were current today relative to the diplomatic mission of General Felix Diaz to Tokio. Ostensibly Diaz is going to thank the Japanese Government for its representation at the Mexican centennial, but the belief is growing that Japan has consented to make a treaty with Mexico, and that Diaz is really a special ambassador. This treaty, it is reported, has to do with a league of common interests and not with commercial right. It follows the movement of the Government to invite 50,000 Japanese emigrants here to colonize the state of Morelos, which has been nearly depopulated by the rebellion.

Insists on Recognition.

Whether Huerta has any more cards to play in his diplomatic fight against outside interference with Mexican affairs is a question known only to the provisional President and his closest advisers. Huerta insists on "recognition and no parley," but the Government is not in condition to enforce his threat by war.

The national treasury is nearly depleted and the army material of the country has been thinned to a minimum by three years of revolution.

By diplomacy, however, he might still be able, by playing upon the Latin-American republics' fear of annexation and upon the hostility of foreign powers to the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine, to force the United States into a compromising position.

Evan Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy here, is not acquainted with the details of Mr. Lind's mission. He has so informed the Mexican Foreign Minister.

There is a big fleet of United States warships in the harbor at Vera Cruz to welcome the New Hampshire, in which Mr. Lind is traveling. The latest addition to the fleet is the gunboat Wheeling.

Crisis Expected When Lind Presents Message.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—With the issue taut between the United States Government and General Huerta on the question of the diplomatic propriety of John Lind's mission to Mexico, the strain of the Mexican situation in Washington was undiminished today.

With the special envoy not due to arrive at Vera Cruz until late to-day, and with no answer forthcoming to the conciliatory statement given out by Secretary of State Bryan yesterday, conditions remain unchanged.

Washington is waiting to hear what General Huerta's specific course of action toward Lind will be. Huerta probably will not recognize the presence of Mr. Lind in Mexico until the latter attempts to transmit the mediation proposals to him through Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy.

It is believed the crisis then will be precipitated unless Huerta backs down completely from the attitude taken in his recent note. It is not believed he will.

That the New Hampshire was delayed purposely by wireless to give President Huerta every opportunity to reconsider his ban on Lind was learned to-day. No official business will be transacted until Monday, allowing Huerta 48 hours more leeway.

Marked activity was noticeable at both the War and Navy Departments, however, and preparations were made to keep offices in these departments open all Sunday.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels today made sure that the wireless communication between the naval station at Arlington, Va., and the Atlantic fleet, now maneuvering off Newport, R. I., was unbroken and it was rumored that Secretary of War Garrison, now on a tour of inspection of army posts throughout the United States, would return to Washington immediately instead of September 3.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will go to the White House at 8 o'clock to-night for a conference with President Wilson at his invitation. It is expected that the President will tell the committee his plans and policy with reference to Mexico.

WHY RESINOL SOAP KEEPS COMPLEXIONS CLEAR AND HEALTHY

When you wash your face do you realize that it is not enough to remove the dirt—that your skin needs a soothing, healing influence to keep your complexion fresh and free from blemish?

Ordinary toilet soaps do not assert this influence. Many of them contain free alkali which tends to dry the skin and destroy its delicate texture. Even the best of such soaps can only clean, they can not heal and protect the skin. Resinol Soap, besides being an absolutely pure toilet soap, contains the same soothing, healing, antiseptic balsams as Resinol Ointment, the value of which in the treatment of skin affections is known throughout the medical profession. That is why Resinol Soap does for the skin what cosmetics are supposed to do—it insures not only a clean skin, but a healthy skin, and a fair, clear complexion. Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by all druggists. Trial free. Dept. 4-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Dr. Oliver L. Jones, 63, millionaire real estate dealer and father of "General" Rosalie Jones, the suffragette hiker, died from a gunshot wound inflicted in his home yesterday. The police declare it a case of suicide. Dr. Jones, who has been an invalid for two years, owned land in every State in the Union.

MAYOR MUM ON 'HEAP BIG TALK' ON FINANCES

Nothing but Language at Star Chamber Session in His Office, Woodward Asserts.

A star chamber conference or executive session oft he Finance Committee of Council was held Saturday morning at 11 o'clock in the office of Mayor Woodward, at which all citizens, officials and newspaper reporters were excluded.

After a solid hour of work, the committee adjourned and departed almost in a body.

When questioned as to the action taken by the Finance Committee, Chairman Humphrey answered:

"The Mayor requested that all newspaper reporters be referred to him. He will give all the information that is to be given out."

The reporters hastened into the Mayor's office and began to question him as to the weighty matters that had called for closed doors and secret session.

"What action did the committee take in regard to the row in the Park Board? Was Carey and Cochran right?" was asked by two or three at once.

"The matter was not even mentioned," replied the Mayor.

"It was understood that the meeting of the committee was called to settle the row. Was that not the case?"

"No, I tell you that matter was not mentioned," replied the Mayor.

"What was the object of the meeting, and what subject was discussed?"

"We simply met in friendly conference and talked."

"Was the subject the crematory, sewer construction or the public schools?" was asked.

"Neither. I found the City of Atlanta $700,000 in debt when I took charge as Mayor, and I am determined that every cent of it will be paid, and that at the end of my term the city will be out of debt. The action of the Supreme Court gave me the power and I have locked the door and have the key safely in my pocket. The Finance Committee must not anticipate revenue that is likely not to show up. Every sum appropriated must be in sight. No chances will be taken."

"But what did the committee do at the executive session?"

"Talked," was the answer.

'Cutest Dog' Shipped In Plush-Lined Coffin

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Pauline, aged 13 years and 5 months, "the cutest bulldog that ever lived," was placed in a hermetically sealed, galvanized, plush-lined box to be shipped to Los Angeles. Pauline died of pneumonia.

Mrs. N. B. Wilson, Pauline's mistress, did not think it would do Pauline any harm to run in the street for two hours unattended. But it did. Pauline caught cold. That was three days ago. Three physicians tried to save Pauline's life. Mrs. Wilson was prostrated at the news of her dog's death.

Powers Agree to Rob Turks of Adrianople

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, Aug. 9.—Assurances were given to the Bulgarian Government today by the powers that they would serve Turkey with an ultimatum calling for the evacuation of Thrace, which includes Adrianople.

Doubt is growing here whether peace in the Balkans will be lasting. Bulgaria and Montenegro are dissatisfied with the result of the war, while Turkey will probably seize any pretext to resume hostilities.

There is a strong revolutionary party in Albania which will keep the standing army busy.

Flee From Tariff To Rocking Chairs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The north end of the Capitol building looks these days like the upper deck of a summer hotel. The commodious veranda is filled with roomy wicker rocking chairs, occupied by Senators who weary of the tariff debate and seek to get cool.

The idea originated with Sergeant-at-Arms Higgins. He baited the place with two or three rockers and waited to see how the scheme worked. It was so popular that the building could not furnish sufficient chairs to meet the demand.

MEN AND RELIGION No. 73

CHILDREN OF GEORGIA

"AND THEY ALL WITH ONE CONSENT BEGAN TO MAKE EXCUSE."

Luke 14:18.

They were at dinner.

Jesus said:

"When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind,

"And thou shalt be blessed."

One at the table pretended to be in sympathy. He began smugly:

"Happy is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God."

The hypocrisy of the man and all others like him was unmasked in the answer made by Jesus. He said:

"A certain man made a great supper and bade many—

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse."

One said one thing, another another.

With one it was a field; with another it was new oxen.

In the end, the Lord said:

"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

And from the highways and the hedges called He His guests.

Are you a maker of hypocritcal phrases as was the man at the Pharisee's dinner table—pretending a love for that which is just and right?

Or, to-day, are you trying to do the will, not of man or men, but of Him who died for you?

Let us have done with excuses!

While spending thousands on fields, hogs and cattle, say not:

"We are unable—

"We can not give proper care to these girls—

"These children must go down in shame because of our lack of money—

"But our beasts we must protect whatever the cost."

If animals are more valuable than girls, let us say frankly: but you know that this is untrue.

You know what Georgia would do.

Consider, then!

The Bill in the House providing a Reformatory for Girls is No. 4—ahead of any other measure appropriating money.

The Penitentiary Committee has approved it.

Unanimously the Appropriations Committee has recommended that it pass.

Why, then, should beasts and fields be provided for by later bills and nothing done for Georgia's wayward and delinquent girls?

BURWELL of Hancock, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman and the vice-chairman, BLACKBURN of Fulton, HARDEMAN of Jefferson, MILLER of Bibb, NUNNALLY of Floyd, PAULK of Berrien, RAGLAND of Talbot, REDWINE of Fayette, RHODES of Clarke, SHUPTRINE of Chatham and SLADE of Muscogee constitute the Rules Committee of the House.

The Bill is in their hands.

Monday is the final day in which the measure can be heard and enacted into law at this session of the Legislature.

These eleven men, THE RULES COMMITTEE, will not prevent a hearing, say their friends. We believe that they will do more, that they will help to pass the Bill.

For they know the worth of a girl-child of ten to fourteen.

And they can appraise a cow or hog.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Auction Sale Sept. 2 Of Acreage in Cobb

McCravy Farm of 175 Acres Subdivided—Sales Total $37,050—Suburban Lot $35 a Foot.

J. B. Jackson, agent, will sell before the courthouse door at Marietta at 10 a. m., September 2, acreage tracts of the A. P. McCravy farm, comprising a total of about 175 acres, on terms of half cash and the balance in one and two years at 7 per cent. Mrs. Jane L. McCravy is administratrix.

The tracts will be one to twenty acres. They lie two miles south of Marietta, at Turner's Crossing, on the Marietta car line. Fourteen front the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the electric car line and the public road.

Small Sales Total $37,050.

Real estate agents have been quite busy this week with small sales, three agents announcing Saturday a total of $37,050. Twenty thousand of this was done by Roff Sims & Co., detailed announcement of which will be made later.

B. M. Grant & Co. have sold for Mary Z. Scales to E. V. Carter, Jr., a vacant lot on the east side of Williams street, north of Emmett street, 55 by 170 feet, for $1,400; for J. R. Holliday to P. H. Dobbins, a lot on the south side of Linden street, east of Myrtle street, 50 by 80, for $1,250; for the Walton Realty Company to Mrs. C. G. Hartman, a 100 by 400 foot vacant lot on the Cheshire road, near Peachtree road, for $3,500, or $35 a front foot, and to a client for C. E. Kauffmann, a 70 by 250 foot lot on the north side of Westminster Drive, Ansley Park, for $4,900.

Seventy Acres Bought.

W. A. Williams has sold to C. S. Minor through Robert W. Parris, of the Graham & Merk Real Estate Agency, four acres of land and a seven-room bungalow at Clarkston, near the Stone Mountain car line, for $2,500.

Mr. Parris handled a deal in which J. R. Phillips, of Atlanta, bought 70 acres of land near Bronwood, Terrell County, from Mr. Rodgers for $3,500, or $50 an acre. This land is on the Central of Georgia Railway, in a rich agricultural section.

County Lot Transferred.

A warranty deed on record Saturday tells of an interesting transfer of a small acreage tract on the Roswell road near Piedmont avenue. J. W. Moore gave the county $2,000 for it June 12, 1912, Luther Z. Rosser acting as commissioner, and Mr. Moore sold it recently to David W. Meadow. The consideration was not named.

Ponce DeLeon Place Sale.

J. W. Garland, of Pike County, has given the Cole-Mitchell Company a warranty deed on the property at the northeast corner of Ponce DeLeon place and St. Charles avenue for $6,500, the buyers assuming a loan of $3,000. The dimensions of the lot are 50 by 161.

Nice Profit in Lot.

A profit of $1,200 is represented in a transfer which has just gone to record. John T. Taylor has sold to Homer W. Cothran for $3,700 a property on West Tenth street, 132 feet east of Ridge avenue, having bought it from Dr. Joel T. Daves, of the Smith & Ewing Agency, for $1,500. The lot is irregular in shape.

Seven Apartments Leased.

Albert S. Adams, manager of the renting department of Bryan M Grant & Co., announced Saturday the lease of seven housekeeping apartments in the Ponce DeLeon, which was recently placed with his firm for renting. Several smaller apartments of two rooms and bath have also been leased.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "A bullish construction was placed on the Government report on corn, while on wheat it was bearish and on oats mixed. Wheat bulls figure that it will be hard to keep prices down, with corn a failure west of the river and with a great scarcity of feedstuffs in the States of largest production."

* * *

Ohio August report on wheat crop, 101 per cent; July, 94 per cent; last August, 40. The July Government report made it 80. Oat crop, 82 per cent; July, 81; last August, 105. They figure fifteen bushels of wheat and 30 bushels of oats as par. No corn report. Timothy condition, 79.

* * *

The annual convention of the Wisconsin Retail Grocers' Association will be held at Racine on August 11. Sessions will continue to August 13. O. B. M. Glasson, president of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, will deliver an address on "Trade Relations."

* * *

Canadian crops: A Winnipeg dispatch states that remarkable progress has been made the past three weeks in the crop development; harvest is expected to be in full swing in Manitoba the second week in August.

* * *

Denton, of Kansas City, estimates the Kansas corn crop at 50,000,000 bushels.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says:

"Wheat—Partly cloudy conditions, with scattered light rains, are noted this morning in the Northwest. There was a little better demand yesterday, with shipping sales in our market of 145,000 bushels, the seaboard reporting fifteen loads for export. Yesterday's Government figures were about as expected by the trade, and we doubt if they prove any especially bearish influence on prices.

"Corn—The weather map shows practically no rain in the corn belt, with temperatures still high. The Government figures do not represent present conditions, as since these figures were gathered the deterioration in the crop as a whole has been very great.

"Oats—The Government figures rather exceeded those generally looked for, both as to the probable outturn of the present crop and supplies on hand from the old. We are inclined to think, however, that the showing returns during the coming month may be of a character such as to lower the total yield, as compared with the figures given yesterday.

"Provisions—Packers continue to buy lard. Demand for January good. The market is quiet and featureless at the moment."

Test Arranged for Device to Eliminate Open Switch Danger

A test of the Shepard automatic switch will be given at Oakland City at 3 o'clock this afternoon by the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, which will be witnessed by a large number of railway officials.

The switch is claimed to be a preventive of the open switch evil, and puts the opening and closing of the switch entirely under the control of the engineer. By throwing a lever in the cab the engineer may open the switch, and after his train has passed completely into it the switch automatically closes.

A $700,000 concern has been organized to manufacture the device, the plant being located in Atlanta.

HEAVY SLUMP IN PRICE OF COTTON

Western Rains and Promise of More Cause Heavy Sales. Support Withdrawn.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—With the exception of August, which opened 5 points higher on covering, the cotton market opened easier to-day with other options at a net decline of 4 to 13 points from Friday's final. On the opening the selling was general on a few light showers shown on the map over the western belt and local weather people believed that the barometers in the Southwest point to showery conditions over Texas and Oklahoma over Sunday. There was considerable selling by traders who went long on dry weather talk yesterday.

Futures and spots in Liverpool were quiet.

The buying was extremely light and scattered, being confined mainly to a few large spot houses.

The Government reports showed temperatures in Oklahoma yesterday averaged 104 degrees and Texas 98 degrees; with fifteen stations 100, five 102, two 104 and one station 106 degrees.

As the session wore on the selling became heavy. Little or no support was in evidence. The lack of substantial buying power caused a further reaction in values by dropping 7 to 18 points under the opening quotations. Every option established new low levels not witnessed in many months. August was as low as 11.57; September, 10.96; October 10.92; December, 10.81, and January, 10.92. These declines failed to bring out any fresh demand and the market closed practically at the bottom, showing net losses of 13 to 20 points from the final quotations of Friday.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 9.—Due 1½ points higher, this market opened steady at a net advance of 1 to 2 points. At the close the market was quiet, with prices at a net gain of 1 to 1½ points.

Spot cotton dull at 3 points advance; middling 6.46d; sales 3,000 bales, including 2,000 American bales; speculation and exports 200; imports, 4,000 bales, of which 3,000 were American.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—Liverpool is very disappointing with futures 2 to 3 points lower than due; spots 3 points higher; sales, 3,000 bales.

Developments overnight were in favor of unsettled weather, with precipitation coming on the Western States—Arkansas and North Louisiana over Sunday. The map shows increasing cloudiness in Texas and some precipitation in the Northwest and Southeast portions.

Indications are for continued partly cloudy weather in the eastern half with scattered showers. It will become cooler in the northwestern quarter of the belt.

The market opened about 5 points lower, but broke quickly to 11 cents when the Government forecast confirmed private advices of rain prospects over Sunday in the Western States and Oklahoma.

Market prospects next week depend principally on the amount of rainfall in the Western States. The half monthly condition forecasts by the usual private authorities like Giles and others, are expected to show decline, as the rains came too late to affect their condition figures.

Covering by scalpers over Sunday rallied prices in the last hour.

USUAL DULLNESS IN STREET TO-DAY

Market Ruled Within Narrow Range on Weakness of the London Exchange.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—A heavy tone prevailed in the stock market at the opening to-day, although some of the issues made substantial gains on speculative buying. The market here followed the lead of American shares in the London market, weakness having been caused there by crop figures.

Among the losses here were: Amalgamated Copper, ½; American Car and Foundry, ¼; Canadian Pacific, ½; Utah Copper, ¾; Steel common, ¼; Reading, ¼; Norfolk and Western, ¼; Erie ⅛, and first preferred, ¾.

Delaware and Hudson made the best gain, advancing 1 point. Wabash was up ¾. The Harrimans were steady, Southern Pacific advancing ⅝ and Union Pacific ¼.

The curb was irregular.

American railroad shares in London were irregular and mostly lower on account of figures in the American corn crop report.

The stock market closed steady.

Government bonds unchanged. Other bonds strong.

STOCK GOSSIP

The New Hampshire road may sue to enforce payment of $50,000,000 repudiated South Carolina bonds.

* * *

The stock market held very well Friday after the publication of the Government crop report on corn. It was about what was generally expected. I believe it has been discounted as a market factor. Powerful interests are behind the advance in stocks, and I believe that on any reaction they are a purchase and will sell higher.—G. D. Potter.

* * *

Erie earnings for the year ending June 30 shows over 15 per cent on first preferred and over 4 per cent on all stock outstanding.

* * *

Anent the remarkably good foreign trade exhibit for the fiscal year ended June 30 last, the possible effect of tariff reductions on our foreign trade balance becomes a timely topic for consideration. Last year our foreign trade reached a new zenith with a total of exports and imports of $4,275,000,000, or $421,000,000 more than that of 1912. Exports so far exceeded imports that this vast commerce created a trade balance in our favor abroad of $652,000,000. Can this be maintained next year when a new and much lower tariff is in existence? As the new tariff is likely to become operative next month, the effects of its operations will be reflected in 10 of the 12 months of the current fiscal year. The general expectation is that the drastic tariff reductions will result in a marked increase gain in exports. Of course unless exports enjoyed a corresponding increase the foreign trade balance must be reduced.

The foreign stocks are very quiet, but a firm tone prevails.

COTTON GOSSIP

The course of the cotton market now depends entirely on the weather, which must be watched closely. On the other hand, there is a bearish element which is waiting for the first signs of rain in the western belt to sell the market short, as it believes it is entirely too high in the face of excellent prospects that have existed up to the present time. The bulls contend that unless we get good rains in the west within the next few days, the market will set new high levels.

* * *

Aside from a few purchases and sales of more than 5,000 bales by Shearson, Baruch and McCormick, there were no large trades in yesterday's market. The gain of 10 points is considered a rather poor showing on continued high temperatures in Oklahoma and Texas, and indicates that the world considers the area deteriorating too small, when compared to the whole, to become frightened over. Another reason, of course, is that speculation is seriously curtailed by the tax threat and the abandonment of practically all arbitrage business by the larger straddle interests awaiting developments at Washington, materially reduces the volume of trade and activity of the market. There was no news aside from the weather details and complaints from Arkansas and the southwest. There are very few bulls to be found among the local crowd.

* * *

According to The Journal of Commerce the cotton goods trade is on the verge of broad activity, but tariff delay will be dangerous. The retail trade has been in the market in large numbers during the past week, giving evidences of a real need for goods of a staple character.

Dallas wires: "Texas, partly cloudy to clear; rain at Amarillo and Rockland. Oklahoma, generally clear."

* * *

Except fair in Oklahoma and Northwest Texas, the map is partly cloudy to cloudy over the entire belt. Fine rain at Amarillo, Northwest Texas and Galveston. Nice rains also in North Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Atlantic Coast districts. Indications are for unsettled to cooler weather over Sunday in Texas and Oklahoma; also good rain indications for Arkansas, North Louisiana, and showers over the rest of the belt.—Kofler.

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—There will be occasional showers during to-night and Sunday in the Lake region and the New England States, while fair weather will prevail elsewhere east of the Mississippi River. The temperatures will be somewhat lower on Sunday in the extreme Northern districts, but the changes in the Atlantic and East Gulf States will not be important.

General Forecast.

General forecast until 7 p. m. Sunday:

Georgia—Generally fair to-night and Sunday.

Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee—Generally fair to-night and Sunday.

Florida—Fair to-night and probably Sunday.

Alabama and Mississippi—Fair to-night and Sunday.

Louisiana—Showers to-night or Sunday.

East Texas—Fair to-night and Sunday.

West Texas—Fair in south, showers in north portion to-night or Sunday; cooler in north portion Sunday.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

George F. Jones & Son: We expect prices to do better until the drouth is generally broken.

Norden & Co.: We believe that the most reasonable course of cotton is to make use of fluctuations that may be caused by daily weather conditions and the technical position of the market.

Logan & Bryan: Weather conditions in Texas and Oklahoma are the dominating influences, and should that section receive beneficial moisture, lower range of prices will doubtless be seen.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Corn was up as much as 1 cent for the September option early, but it broke ⅞ on predictions of rain in many sections of the corn belt, with sales from 73 down to 72¼. The other months acted in sympathy, December selling at 68 down to 66⅝ and May 69½ to 68⅝, compared to closing prices of yesterday, 67⅛ and 69 respectively.

The Government crop report on corn was considered bullish, but the figures which were made up August 1 failed to reflect the damage as a whole.

Wheat was ¼ to ⅜ higher at the start, but this and ½ more was lost before the session was more than half an hour old.

Oats were higher early, but sold off with other grains and showed a weakening tendency after the decline.

Hogs were higher and provisions were higher in sympathy.

Whisky Is a Good Driver.

It Drives Away Friends, Happiness, and From the Mind Drives Confidence and Courage.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Send the picture on this page to some man who needs it.

Many men need it, unfortunately.

As you see this man at the table and the two spirits that leave him, you realize that man is not single, but made up of many elements.

These are firmly compacted in the self-controlled man; they work together to make him what he should be.

But whisky, the drug and poison, has the subtle power to dissolve character and take away from the man who scarcely knows it the best elements in his nature.

Whisky beggars a man! It finds him full of hope and courage and confidence in himself.

It finds him with friends, receiving and giving affection.

And one by one it takes these things from him.

The friends are taken and affection is taken. His strength, his prospects go, little by little, as the whisky fills his tissues, conquers his nerves and rules in the foolish brain which often says so pitifully, "If I had just one more drink, I'd be all right."

Just one more drink, and then another, and dozens and hundreds following.

And at last the unhappy man on whom whisky has fastened its clutch sits like the man in this picture. Of all men he alone does not see his degradation, the brutal defacement of what was once a man.

Have you seen a buzzard, a vulture or a crow picking the skeleton of a horse?

Whisky does its work as vilely and as thoroughly as the meanest buzzard.

Bit by bit it picks from the man all he has that is worth while.

Saddest of all is the scene in this picture, when the two spirits that give man his chief hope leave him—when COURAGE AND SELF-RESPECT PASS OUT OF THE DOOR LEAVING THIS POOR WRECK ALONE AT THE TABLE.

Is it even then too late, and is the case hopeless?

No, fortunately, it is never too late, and no man's case is hopeless.

HE CAN, IF HE WILL, RISE UP AND FOLLOW OUT OF THAT DOOR THE SPIRIT THAT HAS LEFT HIM AND OVERTAKE IT AND MAKE IT HIS OWN.

Some of the world's best work has been done and is done now by those that were once robbed by alcohol of all save the one spark that brings man back to his place WHEN HE WILL.

Many a man sits disconsolate, gazing into space, wondering what is to become of him, bitterly repentant, anxious for those that suffer.

And his hope and courage and confidence disappear in the distance.

Help him if you can. Lift him to his feet, start him in the right road.

He may overtake them, HE CAN IF HE WILL.

Portugal Will Never See King Manuel on the Throne---With Gaby Deslys on the Throne Steps.

The Trouble With Portugal Is Ignorance of the People, INABILITY TO READ, but the Republic Will Live.

(Copyright, 1913.)

News from Portugal, sent out by those that hate republican government and that like ignorance, is to the effect that the Republic of Portugal is in danger.

These reports need not seriously worry those that believe in republican government.

For a good many years there have been periodic reports of the same kind coming from France.

The world has been asked to believe that a French pretender, with a forehead one inch and a half high and the intelligence of a canary bird, would succeed in putting up a throne and ruling the French people.

Everybody knows that that is a pitiful joke.

The French pretenders have about as much chance of ruling in France as they have of ruling in Alaska.

The news from Portugal is disturbing only because of the fact that the system of tyranny, brutality and superstition that ruled there for so long, PURPOSELY KEPT THE PEOPLE IN IGNORANCE AND UNABLE TO READ.

Those that would mislead the people, those that hate the republic and hate government by the people, are helped by the fact that the poor peasants in the country, and the clerks and the workers in the cities and towns, are, as a rule, illiterate, unable to read or to sign their own names.

There is no real danger, however, for the Republic of Portugal. There may be a revolution again, but it will end IN ANOTHER REPUBLIC.

The interesting little Manuel will continue sitting at a little tin table on the French boulevard; he will continue to be a moving picture king—not a real one.

Never again will Portugal see him sitting on the throne, spending the money of a people overtaxed and kept ignorant.

If the present rulers of Portugal are replaced by others, they will be no men of the King Manuel type, but men of greater force than the present rulers, able to continue Portugal as a republic; able to carry on the real business of a republic—THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS, THE ABOLITION OF IGNORANCE AND THE SUPERSTITION AND BRUTALITY THAT GO WITH IGNORANCE.

Do You Know Any Man Ruined by Whisky?

Show him this picture and the two spirits, SELF-RESPECT and COURAGE, walking away from this unhappy victim of his own weakness. This picture may send some drunkard hurrying out of the door to catch up with the friends that have been driven from him. (See Editorial.)

High Cost of Living and Wasted Crops.

Lack of Transportation and the Clutch of the Middleman, He Declares, Has Left Thousands of Carloads of Garden Produce Rotting on the Ground in Texas This Season.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

DOWN in the beautiful and peaceful Pecos Valley in Texas some months ago I saw tons of luscious strawberries rotting in the field because the markets of the North were overstocked and the berries were not worth the freight, much less the cost of picking.

Southwestern Texas is the country that General Sherman had in mind when he made a certain sarcastic remark that has gone clattering down the centuries like a tin kettle to a dog's tail.

The application, however, of water and intelligent labor to the arid land of Texas has worked such miracles that William Tecumseh's far-flung phrase puts that gentleman's perspicacity in jeopardy.

On a single acre of irrigated land I have seen produced ten tons of onions, cabbages in proportion and spinach enough to fill a silo.

The sunshine, the fertility of the soil and water produce crops which, if the truth were told about them, would qualify the narrator for the Ananias Club in any city of the North, and quickly.

Carloads Rot.

The question, however, is to get these fruits and vegetables on the tables of the people who need them most. Lack of transportation and the clutch of the middleman has left thousands of carloads of garden produce rotting on the ground in Texas this past season.

Here is a question so big and important that it deserves the attention of the most able men in the United States to-day.

It is a somewhat curious fact that our lawmaking is largely the work of amateurs.

The men we send to Washington are not the men who have had experience in the matter of taking care of great and important propositions.

They are for the most part men who have wormed themselves into office.

The business of government falls into the hands of the inexperienced and the unfit.

This thing of government by the selfish, the transient and the irresponsible is the most telling criticism to be made of our so-called Democracy.

There should be a method devised by the Government whereby the services of highly trained men can be secured and utilized. And one of the crying needs of the trained man now is in this matter of getting the desirable food products of the South and West into the hands of the people in the cities of the East who need them most.

The Problem.

With peaches rotting in the orchards in the Yakima Valley, millions of dollars' worth of apples ungathered in Washington—hundreds of carloads of onions, cabbages, spinach, berries in Texas, and thousands of people in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and New York going without fresh vegetables and without fresh fruit—this is the condition that challenges our economic skill.

The solution of the high cost of living lies in getting vegetables and fruit direct from farm to family with least possible expense.

And so here comes an invention successfully utilized and worked out whereby fruits and vegetables can be dehydrated.

Most fruit and vegetables contain from 80 to 92 per cent of water. To eliminate this water so the vegetables and fruits can be kept an indefinite length of time is a most desirable evolution to bring about.

Green peas, rhubarb, spinach, raspberries, blackberries, strawberries should be on Christmas tables fresh in all of the cities of the North, and this at a very reasonable price.

Science to Help.

As it is things have to be shipped in season, in refrigerator cars, rushed through and sold quickly. Otherwise they deteriorate and perish.

The expense of transportation of perishable goods is very much greater than that where the article is dehydrated and prepared so it will keep indefinitely.

By evaporating the water in his products the farmer can find a ready market for a vast quantity of fruits and vegetables which are now practically worthless.

The market where the thing has to be sold quickly places the shipper at a great disadvantage and gives the middleman his chance.

I expect to see the day when the United States Government will co-operate with big business to the end that the vast crops of the irrigated lands of the West and South shall be harvested and marketed to the people who need them most, and this at a minimum of expense.

The Trouble with the World Is There Are So Many Teaching the Truth, So Few Living It---Let Your Life Illustrate Your Theories.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

ARE you a student of the power of mind over matter? Are you talking to every one you meet about "Universal Life Principle" and "Vibration" and "Mental and Spiritual Science" and all the other expressions so in vogue to-day among advanced thinkers?

See to It That Your Life Illustrates Your Theories.

If you are, see to it that your life illustrates your theories. Do not let it all end in talk.

I have known a self-supporting woman to use all her income in literature and lectures and lessons on these subjects: "How to Control Destiny," "How to Grow Success," "How to Attain Self-Mastery" and "How to Be Well and Prosperous." Yet she was always ailing. She had not one penny saved, nor respectable clothing in her wardrobe; she slighted her work and forgot her duties and was altogether an unsatisfactory human being.

At almost any gathering of people identified with or interested in Mental, or Christian Science, or New Thought, or any kindred subject, a large majority of the unkempt and nervous and erratic beings are to be encountered. This is true, we know, of all new theories and creeds, for the disappointed and dissatisfied souls of earth naturally turn to new avenues of thought, hoping to find peace. But when we find these unfortunate types representing a religion or a theory and talking its precepts to every passerby, it is a matter of more than temporary regret.

Until you can indicate by your life, your face, your manner and your work that you have found a solution for the problem of existence and a panacea for human ills, do not talk about it. Wait in the silence and grow.

It is a simpler matter to be filled with a conviction than it is to prove that conviction to the world.

But while there are thousands of people to-day talking and writing the philosophy not ten in any thousand are living what they talk. A woman who was all nerves and hysteria and who kept herself and every one about her in confusion and excitement over her troubles and ailments was urged to try Spiritual Science.

"Why, I teach it," she said. "I do not need any one to help me in that way, as I have had a class of young women to whom I have been revealing the truth for some time."

That is the great trouble with the world to-day.

We have so many people teaching and so few living the truth. Because you have gained a little light and begin to understand the philosophy of life do not set yourself up for a teacher or an exhorter until you have proven by your life that what you teach and preach is practicable.

Wait Until You Succeed Before Preaching Success.

Wait until you can keep yourself in health before you begin healing others.

Wait until you are successful in your undertakings before you tell others the way to win success.

Wait until your face expresses peace and calm and happiness before you preach the power of your philosophy to produce these results.

Live first—talk afterward.

.:. DOUBT .:.

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THERE is a devil and his name is Doubt;
The country and the city know him well.
He makes each human mind his citadel
And many an honest aim he puts to rout.
He argues well, about it and about—
He kills more love than any tongue can tell;
He leads obedient mortals to his hell
And mocks them when they seek a pathway out.

You do not know him, yet you doubt your friend;
You sneer at him, but doubt a mother's love.
He camps upon your trail until the end,
As smooth as silk, as fluttering as a dove
In every brain he builds his little fires—
He is the trustiest devil Satan hires.

Washington a Mason

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

IT WAS one hundred and sixty years ago that George Washington was given the well-earned right to look upon the "hieroglyphic light which none but craftsmen ever saw."

The venerable and venerated records of Fredericksburg Lodge show that Washington was initiated on November 4, 1752, passed fellowcraft March 3, 1753, and was raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason August 4, 1753.

Strange to say, it appears to be a fact that the "Father of His Country" was initiated before he had reached the required age of 21 years. Daniel Campbell, Master of the lodge, granted the special dispensation which enabled the candidate to begin his eastward journey while still a minor.

Grand Master French, of the District of Columbia, declared in an address delivered in 1851 that no one stopped to inquire about Washington's age when his petition was presented; that the majestic proportions of the candidate, together with his well-known character and ability, made upon all concerned the impression that might have been made by a thoroughly matured man.

It appears, however, that the dispensation was based upon the fact that the candidate's duties demanded it. So busy a man was to be received when it was convenient for him.

Washington remained a member of the Fredericksburg Lodge to the day of his death. Among the many other distinguished men whose names appear upon the rolls of the lodge are George Weedon, Washington's adjutant-general; General Hugh Mercer, who fell at the battle of Princeton; Jacob VonBraam, Washington's instructor in sword practice, and Fielding Lewis, Washington's brother-in-law.

The Bible that was used at the time Washington was made a Mason is still in possession of the old Virginia lodge, and is guarded with unremitting care and affection. It is said to be 226 years old, and is still in an excellent state of preservation.

In the evil days of the war between the States the old town of Fredericksburg lay between the opposing lines of Lee and Burnside, and while the bloody struggle was on thousands on both sides thought of the little temple and altar and Bible that were so lovingly associated in their recollection with the man who made the nation whose very existence was then trembling in the balance.
