OIL LETTERS KILLED HIM POLITICALLY, SAYS FORAKER

Exposes by William Randolph Hearst Responsible for Downfall, Declares Former Senator Before Senate Lobby Inquiry.

Official of National Manufacturers' Association Writes Democratic Simplicity Will Mean Union Label on U. S. Stationery.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Former Senator Foraker admitted to the Senate Lobby Committee to-day publication by William Randolph Hearst of the famous Standard Oil letters killed Foraker's chances for re-election to the Senate in 1908.

After identifying a letter received from Martin M. Mitchell, the confessed ex-lobbyist, making a report of political activities in Ohio in Foraker's behalf, the former Senator said:

"It was the morning of the day Mr. Hearst's disclosure was made public. An attack had been made on me by Mr. Hearst which destroyed my chances of election, saying I had acted as counsel for the Standard Oil Company. This had created a sentiment in our State very prejudicial to me. I continued as a candidate in the campaign only because to retire from it after I had become a candidate would look like an admission that there was some justification for the attack, whereas there was not any."

Senator Foraker said Muhall, whom he had known thirty years, greatly overestimated his own importance.

No Aid From N. A. M.

Foraker said he had never received aid from the National Association of Manufacturers and while he received a fee of $500 for the part he played in the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1896, he was not in the employ of either David Lamar or Edward Lauterbach in an injunction case against the Union Pacific in 1903.

The House Investigating Committee opened its probe with introduction of correspondence showing the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers in fighting labor legislation in Congress and various attempts to have "conservative" men named as members of House committees.

Discussing the recent sundry civil bill, with its provision prohibiting the expenditure of certain funds for the prosecution of farmers and labor unions under the Sherman law, James A. Emery, counsel of the N. A. M., wrote to President John Kirby, Jr., of the association, on March 7, 1913, after President Taft had vetoed the bill:

"I want to emphasize as hard as I can the importance of lining up for a tremendous demonstration when this bill reaches President Wilson, as it undoubtedly will, with the same provision in it. You will then have an early opportunity to decide whether the glittering Democratic motto, 'Equal right for all and special privilege for none,' means anything or whether the Administration has surrendered completely or will merely turn over the Department of Labor.

Objection to Secretary Wilson.

"I note, by the way, your reference to a letter from C. W. Post on the question of a protest over the appointment of Wilson (Secretary of Labor). A protest on this subject is a mere waste of breath, and on the whole I am inclined to think the whole purpose of this department will be shown up quicker with the unions in control of it than in any other way. Gompers will run it characteristically with a high hand, and if the whole thing does not smell to Heaven within a year I shall be very much astonished.

"By that time Democratic simplicity will probably mean a union label on the White House stationery and the President conferring with the Waiters' Union over the appointment of his steward. At present we have nothing more startling in Jeffersonian simplicity than the news Mrs. Bryan is making a new suit for the Secretary of State, and cakes and ginger ale will be served at the dinner for the British Ambassador. Toothpicks will, of course, be an after dinner course at all Cabinet receptions, and the demand for dress suits will be confined to waiters in the hotels."

In this same letter Emery advised Kirby, "if you have any idea Taft would have vetoed this bill of his own motion, get over it. A list of public men who had 'pie' in this $113,000,000 appropriation bill included many prominent men in both Houses."

Folly of Suffrage Shown by Dresses, Says Mrs. Marshall

Vice President's Wife Believes Women Can Do More Good Correcting Cabarets.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Slashed skirts with the silhouette gown and other freaks of modern fashion are the worst enemies of the newly made voters of Illinois, and the cabaret and the turkey trot are more in need of reform than Chicago's First Ward, in the opinion of Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, who was in Chicago with her husband.

Mrs. Marshall declared frankly that she was opposed to the municipal power recently granted to the women of Illinois. Mrs. Marshall said:

"I have never been a suffragist. To me the fashions of to-day ought to convince any one that a woman is not fit to vote. Some women's dress is not only extreme, it is objectionable. A woman would do more good by correcting the dances in our cafes and cabarets than in running for office.

"The women in the East are not strongly in favor of the ballot, and none of the Cabinet women seems to favor it, with the exception, perhaps, of the President's daughter, Miss Jessie Wilson."

Manuel Pawns His Father's Decorations

Former King of Portugal Unable to Struggle Along on Income of $100,000 a Year.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Despite his allowance of $50,000 a year from King George and at least that sum from private sources, it is learned that former King Manuel, of Portugal, has been forced to pawn the decorations once belonging to his father. One of these decorations, a diamond cross with a large sapphire in the center, is still in the hands of a pawnbroker near Richmond, where Manuel is now staying with his mother, Queen Amelie.

The fortunes of the dethroned monarch will be recouped by his approaching marriage. It is known that he is very extravagant and his mother is none too practical.

The German Emperor has settled the puzzling question of how to treat the exiled monarch's marriage to a German princess. He will allow Prince Eitel Frederick to attend as a special guest, but not as his personal representative.

Callie Hoke Smith Capital Debutante

Make-up of First Democratic "Bud Bouquet" Puzzles Washington's Younger Set.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The make-up of Washington first Democratic debutante bouquet is the question that is agitating the younger set. It is confidently expected that Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, daughter of the Speaker, will be one of the buds, and Miss Frances Moore, the daughter of Clarence R Moore, one of the Titanic heroes, another.

Resident society will furnish two attractive debutantes, who are not only socially prominent, but from Democratic families as well. They are Miss Margaret Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Britton and Miss Beatrice Clover, the youngest daughter of Rear Admiral Clover.

A debutante from the Congressional set will be Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia. Other Congressional buds are the Misses Weaver, Church and Duval.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst Y. W. C. A. Benefactor

Dedicates Camp at Pacific Grove, Cal., Which Her Generosity Made Possible.

DEL MONTE, CAL., Aug. 9.—Asilomar, the splendid new conference grounds of the California, Arizona and Nevada Young Women's Christian Association, which occupies 30 acres of ground on the ocean shore near Pacific Grove, was formally dedicated with a beautiful ceremony, including a pageant of 400 girls, typifying association work.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, of San Francisco, whose generous assistance last year and this did much to make a permanent camp possible, gave the dedicatory address and gave the conference grounds the name of Asilomar, which means "retreat."

'Uncle Joe' Shocks Staid 'Down Easters'

Inquires if John Quincy Adams Were Sport, Then Changes the Subject.

QUITMAN, MASS., Aug. 9.—Uncle Joe Cannon, former Speaker of the House of Representatives, who is a visitor here, shocked the natives by casually inquiring if "one of these immortals had not been somewhat of a sport."

He referred to John Quincy Adams, but the shocked expressions and uplifted hands showed him at once that he was treading on dangerous ground, whereat Mr. Cannon quickly changed the subject.

Reporters on local newspapers tried in vain to get Uncle Joe's opinion of present day politics.

WOMAN DEITY CREATED MAN, SAYS TABLET

New Version of Genesis Found in University of Pennsylvania Nippur Collection.

DATE IS FIXED AT 2100 B. C.

Dr. Arno Poebel's Discovery Is Regarded as Oldest Story of Origin of World.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—It was a woman who created mankind, according to a tablet 4,000 years old just deciphered at the Pennsylvania University Museum by Dr. Arno Poebel, who is at work translating the tablets dug up in Nippur some years ago by the museum expeditions.

About 37 years ago George Smith, the English scholar and explorer, brought back from Babylonia the cylinders which gave a Babylonian account of the origin of mankind and much of his early history, and these not only excited great interest but had a profound effect upon the theological teachings. The parallelism between the Babylonian story and that of Genesis developed a new school in theological criticism. But the cylinders of Smith only dated back to the reign of Assurbanipal in the seventh century B. C. The university museum tablet dates back possibly to 2500 B. C., and it is reasonably certain to be no later than the reign of Hamurabi, about 2100 B. C.

Female Deity Created Man.

The new account of the creation and the flood throws much new light on the early ideas of the Babylonians and Sumerians.

The striking novel features of the new tablet are these:

That it was a female deity who created mankind, known as "the blackheaded," from the color of the hair.

That new deities or new characteristics of the gods are discovered in the original document, although they have been hinted at in other ways. The character of the female goddess is now made important from the earliest times and equal with the two male ruler gods. Later tablets speak of these as unimportant.

That the first seven prediluvian cities and the special god of each are discovered.

That the older Babylonian name of the Scriptural Noah is Zingidda.

That deluge ruins of the prediluvian cities were not all destroyed, some not until historic times. There is historic basis to much of the statement in this epic.

Opens With Poem.

Dr. Poebel has prepared a careful literal translation of the tablet. It originally was about seven inches square, but on such a surface the ancients could write in ideographic signs a long epic poem, and that is what this table contained. Like the first chapter of Genesis, the story opens with a great poem on the origin of the heavens as well as of the earth. It appears that Nintu, a female god, created mankind, and she is found lamenting that the other gods seem bent on the destruction of her subjects. She speaks of the human beings as "my creations." It appears that Anu and Enlil were the chief gods of power, although they were among seven of equal rank, the first being god of heaven and the second god of earth. Then comes the story of the creation:

"Nintu created the blackheaded," (human race.) * * * "The fields of the ground produced abundance, the cattle and the four-legged beasts of the field artfully they (the gods) called into existence."

Slit Skirts Furnish Mosquito Clan With Choicest Barbecue

Trainload of Winsome Stenographers and Milliners Have to Tramp Through Stegomyla Belt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"All those in favor of slit skirts, please stand up."

Millions of full grown mosquitoes and three or four little fellers were rushing wildly out of their apartment houses on he Flushing Meadows, about 7 o'clock last night, and took part in the most rollicking barbacue ever held in the East.

Right in the middle of the salt grass waste were five cars of a Long Island Railroad train, stalled. The lights were out, men were running up and down shouting orders and Flushing was two miles away. After the train had stood for a few minutes, out of the passenger cars poured the choicest morsels of humanity that Mr. and Mrs. Culex Pungens and the little Pungenses ever saw. There were stenographers, typewriters, cashiers, millinery attaches and buxom matrons. Slit skirts were numerous.

In an endless procession the five hundred and more suburbanites trailed over the ties toward Flushing. There is some style in the mosquito belt and every member of the family seemed to know at once which of the passengers was dressed a la mode. The squeals and slaps of the fair ones as they tried to stop the onslaught sounded like a tattoo.

The procession lasted for more than two hours and when the last stenographer reached home a unanimous vote was taken declaring the mosquito a pest. Of course, there were some men along, but what self-respecting mosquito would bother with them at such a time?

NEGRO FIRM IN ACCUSING FRANK

He Describes Slaying of Mary Phagan

Defense Begins Its Battle for Lite

Leo Frank in his seat in the court-room where he is fighting for life.

The prisoner is shown in the unconcerned attitude he assumes most of the time.

Not a move escapes this man's restless eyes, though his face is calm.

Although Conley Admits Some Lying He Sticks to the Main Story Under Terrific Cross-Examination---Heat Causes Suffering in the Court.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

Leo Frank's lawyers, beginning their fight in his defense, directed their case into an attack on the testimony of the State's witnesses. Most of the testimony they produced was in contradiction to the circumstantial evidence brought to bear by the prosecution, and in denial of many statements already made.

The State practically closed its case with the evidence of Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, who declared that he helped Frank dispose of the body of Mary Phagan, the girl whom he swore Frank killed. The testimony of the few State witnesses who followed the negro was much of an anti-climax, coming as it did after a story that was thrilling in the extreme.

C. B. Dalton, who said he had been with Frank in several escapades in which girls were concerned, and Dr. H. F. Harris, of the State Board of Health, who testified as to the condition of Mary Phagan's body, were the important witnesses who followed Conley for the State.

Negro Endures Ordeal.

But Conley's testimony embodied the prosecution's strength. The negro, a man of the most common African type, burly, thick-lipped, anthropoidal, sat for three days in the witnesse's chair, and endured the most exacting ordeal ever forced upon a witness in a court of law. The cross-examination of Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, lawyers for the defense, was savage and pitiless at times. The negro, in spite of an apparent lack of intelligence and brain-force, showed the strain. He sat unmoved of body, but perspiration beaded his face. The examination told on him.

But he stuck persistently to the main part of his story. Coolly, calmly, almost nonchalantly, he admitted that he had lied time and again in his testimony, that he had not told the truth in making affidavits damaging to Frank during the investigations preliminary to the trial. But his significant accusations against the white man, his former "boss," he maintained were true.

Of his testimony that remained unshaken when he finally was discharged Wednesday afternoon, these facts were prominent:

On the morning of April 26, at Frank's behest, he had taken his station at the door of the National Pencil Company building, to watch.

Frank was upstairs in his office, at the front of the building.

Mary Phagan entered at his door and went upstairs.

He heard footsteps as if someone walked from the front of the building to the rear, upstairs.

Soon after he was summoned by Frank, who told him that a girl was hurt.

He found Mary Phagan in the lathe room, at the rear of the building, dead.

Together he and Frank bore the body to the cellar.

With numerous details the negro embellished this story. Time and again Luther Rosser forced the negro to admit that he had lied about this fact or that, but, although coaxed and browbeaten, the negro maintained steadfastly his main charge against Frank.

Words Have Dramatic Force.

He repeated it persistently, with the appearance of earnestness that is common to the ignorant members of his race. He talked and gesticulated in a manner to show that he was indeed illiterate and ignorant. But in the very simplicity of his words and manner there was a dramatic force, particularly when he was telling his story under the direction of the Solicitor General.

"I wrapped up her body like a bundle of dirty clothes," he said. It was one of many of his statements that, told with simple directness, thrilled those that heard.

The prosecution allowed him to tell his story unchecked. But

ADMITS HE'S DECENT IN ANSWERING MARRIAGE AD

YONKERS, Aug. 9.—Reginald P. Shennan, editor of The Rye Courier, already has received one reply to the advertisement inserted in his paper by a "gentlewoman with large tract of land not far from Port Chester," who is seeking "an unselfish, decent, self-supporting man for a husband."

He turned the letter over to the advertiser, whose identity is being guarded carefully. The letter bore a Brooklyn postmark.

AUTOS EMPTY CHURCHES, SAY COUNTRY PREACHERS

MANHATAN, KANS., Aug. 9.—The dwindling of the congregations of country churches, due to the new era of automobiles, which makes it easy for the rural residents to attend services in nearby towns and cities, will be discussed at the Conference of Rural Leaders, July 21 to 25, at the Kansas Agricultural College. Members of the organization declare that Kansas now has about 1,200 abandoned churches in the farming districts.

Jack London Puts Joke on His Appendix

Novelist Tells the Latest on Former Part of Himself and What's Left.

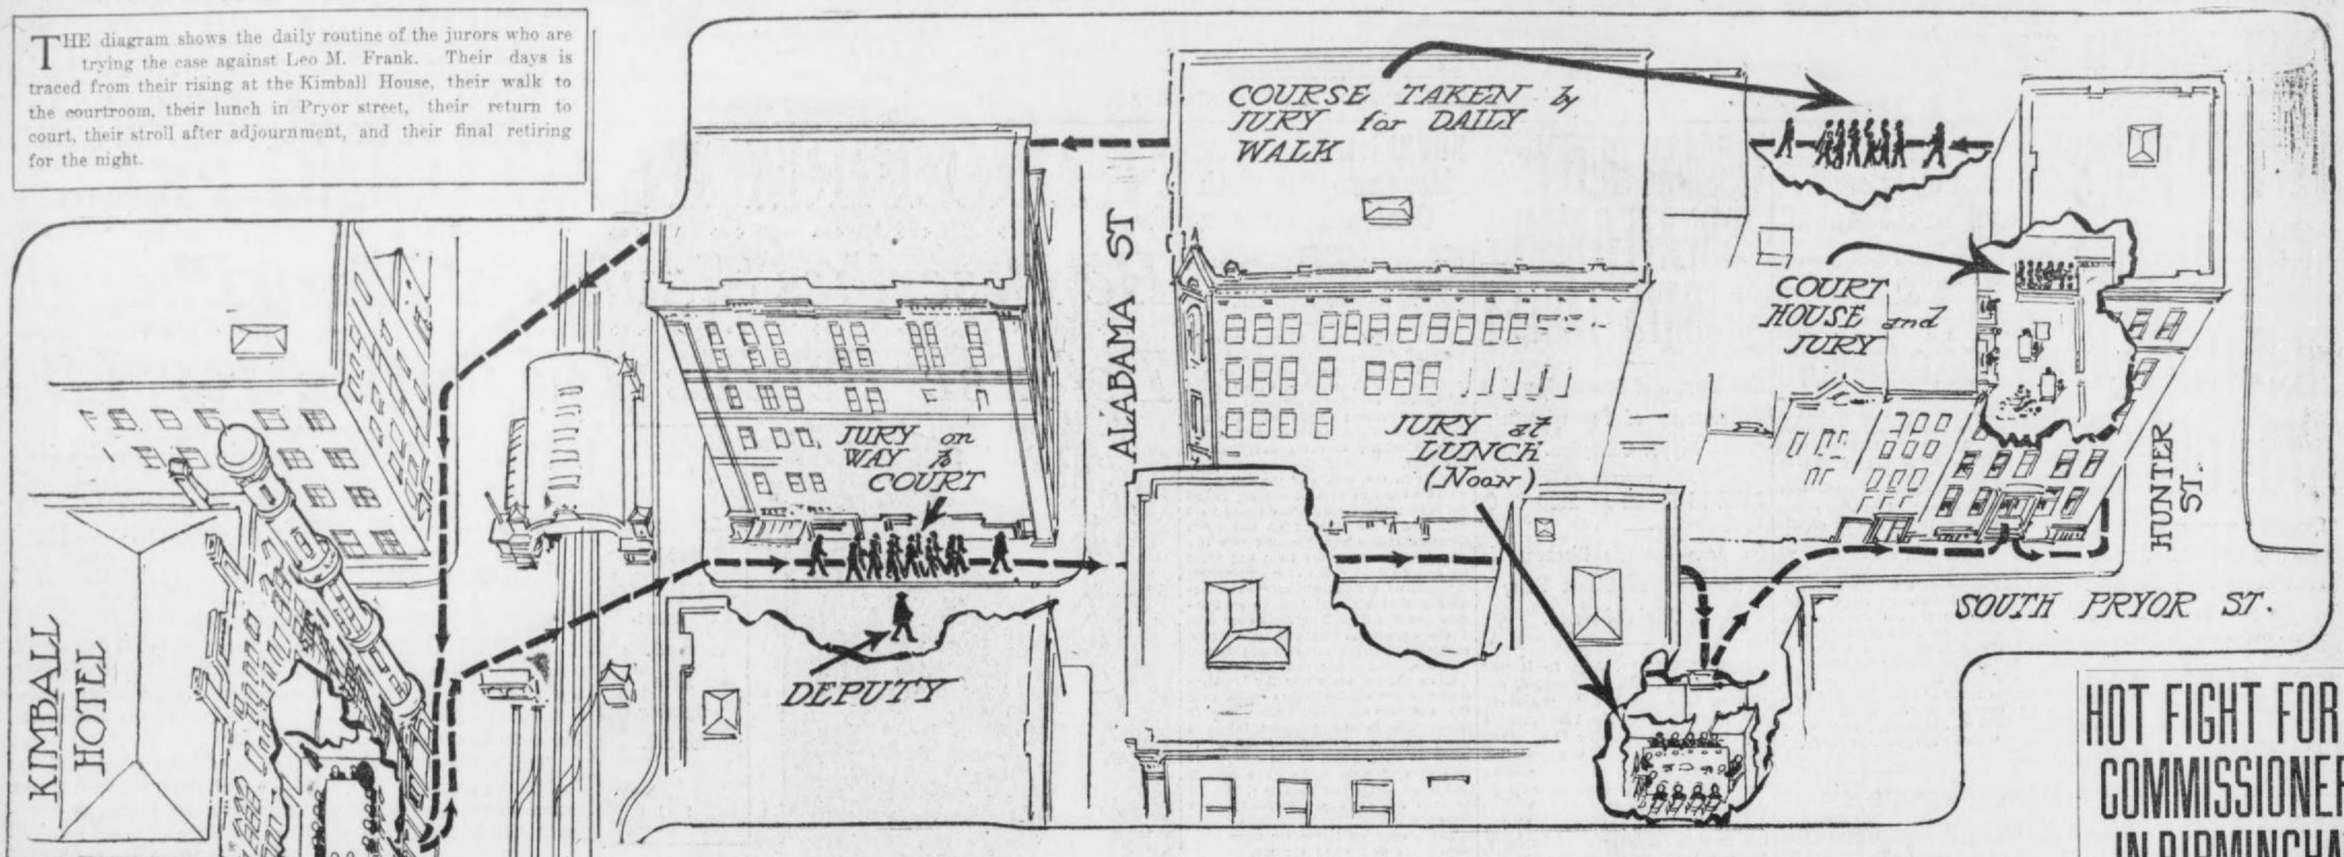
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Here is the latest joke Jack London, the famous author, is telling on himself:

London was operated on recently for appendicitis. After the ordeal the surgeon held up the severed appendix in his fingers for the patient to see. The author looked at it thoughtfully, then grinned and said:

"It was a case of all alone in London, wasn't it, doc?"

VISITS OF GIRLS TO FRANK'S FACTORY REVEALED

THE diagram shows the daily routine of the jurors who are trying the case against Leo M. Frank. Their days is traced from their rising at the Kimball House, their walk to the courtroom, their lunch in Pryor street, their return to court, their stroll after adjournment, and their final retiring for the night.



Phagan Trial Makes Eleven "Widows"

But Jurors' Wives Are Peeresses Also

By L. F. WOODRUFF

ELEVEN widows were made in Atlanta in a day without the assistance of the Grim Reaper, a trip to Reno, pallbearers or affinity stories in the newspapers.

And there is but one drop of consolation in their cup. When they were made widows they automatically became peeresses, for which privilege many American girls have caused their fathers large sums of good American money and themselves heartache and their pictures to be printed between the story of the rabbit that chased the boa constrictor and the life narrative of Sophie, the Shop Girl, who in a night became a stage star.

They also had the satisfaction of having their husbands officially proclaimed good men and true, which they may have questioned when the pay envelope was brought home with $10 missing and unaccounted for, just as all wives have questioned.

They'll Be Brides Again.

If there is any balm in it, the widows know that it will not be long before they can doff their weeds and once more don their bridal gowns. Their husbands will return to them just as soon as they have decided whether or not Leo Frank is guilty of the murder of Mary Phagan.

For it is due to the fact that their husbands are jurors that Atlanta had eleven widows made in a day, that eleven peeresses were added to Atlanta's list and that eleven wives had the glory of hearing their husbands called "good" without suspecting there was hidden meaning in the compliment.

The peerage and the official compliment as to character and $2 a day are the emoluments of a juror of Georgia. A juror in the Frank case gets a little more. He gets his keep, a place to sleep, and a deputy sheriff to keep him out of trouble, read his letters, inspect his laundry and keep him company during all his waking hours.

Scant Solace for Widows.

The emoluments are considerable, but how about the widows?

Men must work and women must weep to the tuneful accompaniment of the doleful mourning of the harbor bar is the first thought.

But there is some solace in the lot of the eleven Frank case widows.

Not every woman can know the thrill of widowhood and at the same time have absolute assurance that she is not going to remain in single blessedness the rest of her life.

And then there's no disputing the fact that they are peeresses. A juror is given his coronet when he takes his oath of office. Of course, in a criminal case he is usually paid the doubtful compliment of being termed the peer of a safe cracker, a short change artist, a blind tiger operator, or a gentleman skilled in the art of getting good money on bad paper, but just the same the juror is a peer. And just the same Mrs. Juror is a peeress.

Only One Single Juror.

In the rapid selection of the Frank jury, it was remarkable that but one single man was selected to decide a mystery that has puzzled the master minds of the Atlanta detective bureau for more than three months. The State probably wanted married men, who would sympathize with the mother robbed of a daughter's life. The defense probably wanted married men who would sympathize with the wife of the accused and his mother. Single men are supposed to be as lacking in the natural supply of the milk of human kindness as a laughing hyena. The single man on the jury looks like he's married. Probably that's why he was accepted by both sides.

And when they held up their right hands and swore to "well and truly try, etc." without objection to the split infinitive, the eleven "good men and true" were as completely divorced as if the judge had ordered them to pay alimony and had forbidden another marriage in a year's time.

The divorce pro tem. has been absolute. The widows cannot speak with their husbands. Nobody else can for that matter except a court attache.

Deputy Reads All Mail.

Writing them is practically prohibited. Every letter mailed a juror has to be read by a deputy sheriff and properly censored by him before it reaches the eyes of the trial man.

And what wife would like to call her beloved "snooky" and have a deputy sheriff first assimilate the tenderness of the term? What wife would like to write for $8.67 to pay the butcher bill and have a deputy sheriff become thus acquainted with the condition of the family larder and the connubial purse?

She may kiss the clean collar when she sends it to him every day, but what assurance has she that he will not think that the Chinaman has bungled in his work?

She may send him a pair of freshly darned socks, but how does she know that the deputy will not see a mysterious message in the needle work and appropriate the hosiery to his own pedal purposes?

No, there are eleven new widows in Atlanta, but there is no doubt but there are eleven new peeresses. The only trouble is, no one can marry any of them for their titles.

WIFE IS OVERCOME BY CHARGES AGAINST FRANK

the defense, taking him on cross-examination, bridled his glibness with many searching questions. At first the negro was sullen under the examination.

"I disremember," was his usual response to the lawyers' inquiries. Later he was forced from that defense, and admitted that in some of the details he had been mistaken. Then he said he lied.

Conley had told in detail the circumstances of the day, and of his every movement. Later, Lawyer Rosser got him to say that he lied about the time he got up, about the time he left home, about the time he first went to the factory, about the time he bought a flask of whisky, about the time he first met Frank, about the time Frank stayed away from the office, about the time various persons left the factory building, about the previous affidavits he had made incriminating Frank, and about a number of details that had come out.

He Explains His Falsehoods.

"Why didn't you tell the whole truth in your last affidavit, Jim?" asked Mr. Rosser. "You said then that it was the whole truth."

"I didn't want to tell it all at once," replied the negro.

That was his explanation of the many falsehoods: that he didn't want to tell all he knew at once.

The very evident attempt of the defense was to establish with the jury the fact that the negro was not to be believed in the main when he so admittedly had lied in the details.

The negro came on the stand early Monday morning, and during the morning and the early afternoon he told a direct story, with little questioning. Then the defense took him. The cross-examination started early, without apparent point, almost with irrelevancy. Rosser questioned him about his daily actions in the factory, about little incidents and conversations that the negro found it hard to remember. Then, gradually, almost imperceptibly, the force of the lawyer's questions was heightened, until they drifted into a savageness that was powerless, however, to shake the sensational story of the negro.

Heat Is Intense in Court.

The week was a period of acute physical suffering. The heat in the courtroom was intense, and the mental strain which spectators and principals alike underwent was terrific. Dramatic indeed was the story of the negro and of other witnesses. More dramatic, however, was the subtle battle of wits between the lawyers and the witness, and among the lawyers over the witness and his words. Everybody hung breathless on the course of the trial at times.

The strain told. Conley bore up because he was supported by doses of strychnine. Others, without this exhilaration, suffered. Dr. Harris, testifying, collapsed on the witness stand. Mrs. Frank, the prisoner's wife, who was calm and unshaken during the first days of the trial, gave way to the strain when the examination of Conley was at its height, and succumbed to a fit of racking sobs. Reuben Arnold, lawyer for the defense, was overcome by a faint spell, and was forced to ask Judge Roan's permission to argue from his seat. Jurors strained and twisted in their seats, exhausted by the demands on mind and body.

Even the spectators, always eager, always pushing into the courtroom long before the time for the beginning of the trial, were moved. When, after a long period of consideration, Judge Roan denied the request of the defense to eliminate a great part of Conley's testimony, a number of the spectators applauded. Court officials, mentioning this, declared their opinion that it was due largely to the mental excitation under which many of the watchers labored.

The applause was startling, and revealed the temper of the public as unfriendly to Frank. When it came, the jury was not in the courtroom, having withdrawn during the argument of lawyers over the admissibility of Conley's evidence. In spite of the fact that the jurors were absent, however, Lawyer Arnold threatened to move for a mistrial, fearing the effect of the applause on their mental state in event they heard it in the next room.

During the hubbub, in fact, he made the motion, but later withdrew it.

Tells of Girl's Visits.

The testimony to which the defense objected was drawn from the negro in the State's attempt to prove Frank a moral degenerate. Conley told of the visits of girls and women to the factory, and of Frank's association with them in an unusual manner. He named C. B. Dalton as a man who was with Frank on several escapades in the factory.

Over this testimony there was a heated fight, the defense arguing for its inadmissibility, the State sustaining it as legal.

"The testimony is admissible because it indicates the very purpose, motive and intent the defendant had in getting that poor little girl into the metal room. It is admissible as indicating a general practice of course of conduct," said Solicitor Dorsey. "The importance of this evidence, disgusting and abhorrent though it may be, is going to be made more manifest as the case proceeds."

The Solicitor promised then that witnesses would be called to substantiate what Conley charged regarding Frank's conduct prior to the day of the killing.

Mrs. Frank Overcome.

When the charges were made of practices by Frank, the prisoner's wife was overcome. She hung her head, her face flushed, and, unable longer the endure the situation, she left the courtroom. She walked out with eyes averted, and returned later with the traces on her face of a terrific struggle to be calm. Her eyes were red and her face puffed and swollen, as if she had just braved a storm of tears and sobbing. She resumed her seat, and remained immovable almost with eyes unblinking, during the remainder of the day's session.

The prisoner's mother, also, was perturbed. She moved restlessly in her seat at Conley's testimony, and then rose from her chair. She moved across the courtroom as if unable to control herself, and then returned to take her seat near her son.

All the testimony to which the defense objected had to do with a period before the day of the muder. Conley had said that he often watched at the door while Frank had girls in his office. To this the defense objected, also.

Reuben Arnold argued that it was inadmissible because irrelevant and immaterial, and that it was a violation of the general principle in law that because a man committed a crime before, that crime can not be introduced to show that he had done a different thing of which he might be accused.

Defense Shows Anxiety.

But the testimony was admitted, and the defense's lawyers retired, something of anxiety plain on their faces. The victory for the State was significant.

Conley was called from the stand Wednesday afternoon. He had been in the witness chair for fifteen and one-half hours during which time he was in the hands of the Solicitor only two hours. The other time had been torture to him.

However, wearied as he was on the stand, he showed plainly that his balance was restored when he came down. He was even cheerful and laughed when he pulled off his coat in the ante-room. He begged for a cigarette and a newspaper.

Dr. H. F. Harris followed Conley on the stand for the State. He reiterated testimony formerly given that Mary Phagan had been killed within an hour after she had eaten dinner. Of this, he said, he was practically certain, because of the evidence borne by undigested bits of cabbage and bread in the girl's stomach.

Dr. Harris was minutely examined by Reuben Arnold, for the defense, who revealed considerable knowledge of the materia medica. However, the testimony he gave was unshaken by the inquisition.

Admits Visiting Factory.

C. B. Dalton followed Dr. Harris. His testimony was to a large extent corroborative of Conley's. He had visited the factory in company with girls, he admitted, while Conley watched at the door, and from his testimony the story of immoral practices in the factory was drawn. He told of visits to the plant with a young woman named Daisy Hopkins.

Detective Rosser took the stand after Dalton, and with his testimony the case of the State was closed, after a formidable chain of circumstantial evidence had been woven about the prisoner.

Witnesses introduced by the State when court opened Friday, and those who followed Friday and Saturday revealed little of direct contradiction or refutation to the case which the State made out.

Resigns One Place; Then Loses Other

Mayor Quits Office to Become Collector of Port, but Suffers From Curtailment.

PORT HURON, MICH., Aug. 9.—The order of Secretary McAdoo abolishing the office of collector of customs at this port has thrown former Mayor John J. Bell out into the cold.

When Mr. Bell received his appointment a few years ago he resigned as the city's chief executive, and Commissioner Dixon was chosen as his successor. Then Mr. Bell appointed William R. Chadwick as his deputy.

Now the order from Washington puts Mr. Chadwick in charge of the local part. Mr. Bell finds he has resigned himself out of one job and appointed himself out of another.

Thief Since Child; Boasts of 500 Crimes

Boy Declares That He Is Beyond Reformation, and Welcomes the Gallows.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Walter Novak, 20, arrested with four companions after they had fatally wounded Patrolman Samuel W. Sowers and beaten Patrolman Frank Walpole, admitted having taken part in more than thirty robberies in two months and boasted of his career.

"I was born a thief, and I've been a thief ever since," said Novak. "I don't care whether I go to the gallows. I started when I was nine stealing pennies. I have been put in all kinds of institutions to reform me, but they only made me worse. I don't want any member of my family to come and see me. If they come, I will kick them out.

"I suppose I have committed more than 500 robberies."

$640 Average Income Of American Farmer

Government Report Declares There Are Many Who Make far Smaller Sum.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Farming is not the most profitable business in the world, railroad press agents to the contrary notwithstanding, according to a bulletin of the Department of Agriculture.

For the first time in the history of farming in the United States the department has managed to get accurate data on the subject.

It reports that the average income of the American farmer is $640.40 a year. "It is reasonable to infer," says the department, "that at least half of the farmers in this country have even smaller incomes."

Feudist's Daughter Shouts at Conviction

Woman Obtains Practically All the Evidence Produced in Court Against Slayers.

WINCHESTER, KY., Aug. 9.—The work of Mrs. Lillian Gross, daughter of Ed Callahan, of Breathitt County, former Sheriff and noted feud leader, was rewarded to-day, when a jury returned a verdict finding Andrew Johnson, 19, guilty of having murdered Callahan.

The jury fixed Johnson's punishment at life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

When the verdict was given out, Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Timandy Callahan, young widow of the feudist, shouted for joy.

The evidence was secured almost entirely by Mrs. Gross.

Twelve witnesses, who swore that they saw Johnson at Jackson, 12 miles from the scene of the shooting, are under indictment for perjury.

POLITICS MIXED IN ALABAMA AS JOHNSTON DIES

Underwood May Be Drawn Into Senate Race—Knox and DeGraffenreid Mentioned.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 9.—The death of Senator Joseph Forney Johnston has precipitated in Alabama a political problem. He was seized by the fatal attack of illness at the time when he was in the midst of a fight with Congressman Richmond P. Hobson to retain his seat in the Senate, and Hobson thus is left without opposition.

The dominant political powers in Alabama, it is generally recognized, are not altogether friendly to the Hobson interests, and a man as powerful as Johnston undoubtedly will be brought forward to oppose the hero of the Merrimac.

Who will it be?

Eyes Are on Underwood.

All eyes turn to Oscar Underwood as the likely opponent of Hobson. Here near the end of the session of Congress, with his work well toward completion, it is conceded that Underwood can relinquish with safety his grasp on affairs in the House and step into the higher place in the Senate. A movement already is felt that may have its effect in bringing him out as a candidate.

Meanwhile Governor O'Neal must appoint a successor to Senator Johnston to fill his seat for the two years yet remaining of his term. And, unless by previous agreement otherwise, the appointee probably will be a candidate for the coming term.

If Governor O'Neal appoints Colonel John B. Knox, of Anniston, to the place, Knox certainly will be a candidate for the long term, his health permitting. Knox for years has had ambition to enter the Senate. Twice he has been a candidate, losing in 1907, when Johnston and Bankhead were named pravisional Senators to succeed Pettus and Morgan, who then were near death, and again in 1910, when he opposed Bankhead.

Knox a Brilliant Figure.

Knox is a brilliant, eloquent, altogether spectacular figure. The Governor may not feel disposed toward his appointment on one ground, however. One year ago occurred a vacancy on the bench of the State Supreme Court, and Governor O'Neal tendered Knox the appointment. After weeks of deliberation the Anniston man declined it. Political gossip at that time was heard to the effect that the Governor was placed in an inconvenient position because of the refusal, and he was forced to take Judge E. D. DeGraffenreid from the bench of the Court of Appeals to place him in the Supreme Court.

DeGraffenreid is O'Neal's closest friend and political adviser. That he should be in line for the Senate appointment is not considered unlikely in a number of places. In event he is appointed, it is unlikely that he will make the race for the long term, and the Underwood shadow looms up again.

The death of Senator Johnston, occurring almost simultaneously with that of his present political ally and personal friend, Major W. W. Screws, editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, is regarded in Alabama as a startling coincidence. Major Screws was Johnston's firmest supporter in his race against Hobson.

AGED HUSBAND SUES GIRL WIFE WHO SPENT FORTUNE

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—Joseph Walters, aged 70, a prominent McKeesport man, who married Ruth Henderson when she was 17 years old, filed a suit in Divorce Court, asking a decree because his wife, after forcing him to spend his fortune of $100,000 on her, "ran away."

GERMANS RAP U. S. POLICY IN PLEA TO KAISER

Consuls Complain This Country Has Failed to Protect Foreigners in Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—M. A. Leach, of San Francisco, who, as an eyewitness to the sacking of Durango, Mexico, by a rebel force gave Secretary Bryan a sensational account of the looting of banks, stores and residences and the ravishing of women which followed the capture of the city, left Washington for Chicago, after having repeated his story to Senator William Alden Smith, Senator Works and several others.

Mr. Leach said two German Consuls left Northern Mexico two weeks ago for Germany, carrying with them reports on the conditions which exist in the southern republic, with particular reference to the losses and indignities suffered by German residents.

They complain that the American Government has not moved to remedy conditions, and they will strongly urge the German Government to come to the relief of its subjects in Mexico.

Mr. Leach said that, as all his possessions in Mexico have been destroyed, he is in a position to talk freely of conditions and that the fear of further damage has kept Americans and other foreigners in Mexico silent. He says all foreigners and 90 per cent of the better element of Mexicans see no settlement of Mexico's troubles except through intervention by the United States, and that a crime against the United States will be committed if the border is thrown open to the indiscriminate shipment of arms into Mexico.

He declares this will be arming the Mexicans for the inevitable conflict with the United States or with foreign powers. He declares a policy of letting the Mexicans fight it out does not meet with the approval of the European governments interested in Mexico, and that if this policy is adopted by the United States it means the Monroe Doctrine must be abandoned and European nations allowed to enter.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Major Miguel Lebrija, head of the aviation corps of the Mexican army, sailed on the Torraine, French Line, yesterday to buy twenty aeroplanes and two dirigibles for his Government. On the machines and their accessories the major expects to spend nearly $1,000,000.

The aviator expressed his conviction that aeroplanes could sink within an hour any battleship ever built, by dropping bombs on its decks. On account of the altitude of the City of Mexico, the machines which he is going to purchase will have to be far more powerful and will have greater wing surfaces than those ordinarily used at sea level.

Among his fellow passengers were Rene Bazin, Rear Admiral Aaron Ward and Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Wade.

HOT FIGHT FOR COMMISSIONER IN BIRMINGHAM

Recorder Wood, "People's Candidate," Denounces Opponent as Champion of Interests.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Clement R. Wood and George B. Ward are engaged in the most spectacular campaign for President of the Commission of Birmingham ever waged in this city.

Wood, as the "candidate of the people," is making many and varied charges against the political element supporting his opponent, Mr. Ward. He charges that he (Wood) was removed as Recorder by the Commission for sending one of their friends to the stockade and insisting on his serving his time, as he did in similar cases.

He also charges that Ward represents the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company and the Birmingham Loan and Discount Company. He charges that the managing editor of one of Birmingham's afternoon papers was forced out of the race under penalty of losing his position on the paper.

He claims that many other prospective candidates have been eliminated from the race by the powerful hand of the interests, and calls on the "common people" to assert themselves in the defeat of Ward.

Ward claims that Wood was discouraged by the Commission because of incompetency, and makes many other charges and insinuations in his speeches and newspaper cards.

Meetings are being held almost every night, and music from brass bands and the orations of the spellbinders are to be heard on every corner.

It is impossible to get a complete line-up, but it can be said with certainty that the race will be close, and that the result will be known only after every vote has been counted.

WHITE SLAVE CASE WHICH INVOLVES U.S. GOES TO TRIAL

Diggs Faces a Jury and Caminetti Will Later Fight Charge of Taking Girls to Reno, Leaving Their Wives in State of California.

After Five Months of Delay and Scandal Involving National Officials, Special Prosecutors Are Appearing for the Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—All California anticipates becoming the unsavory center of the nation's attention for the next three weeks or a month, probably, during the trial of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave cases, arrangements for the beginning of which to-day are complete, after many months of controversy, postponement and of turmoil that threatened to disrupt President Wilson's cabinet.

The jury to hear the case of Maury I. Diggs, former State Architect, one of the two defendants, was announced complete to-day, after considerable difficulty in selecting the twelve members. Exhaustive examination of 96 veniremen was necessary before the twelve were chosen.

The first witness was called. He was F. J. Peck, a Reno real estate dealer, by whom the defense sought to show that the bungalow occupied by the defendants in Reno had been rented with no view to concealment.

Prejudice against the defendants runs high, rendering exceedingly difficult the task of picking a jury. Of the twelve men chosen, eight are married and have children, two are married, but childless, and two are single men, living with their parents. Indicative of the general temper of San Francisco was the reply upon examination of Philip Woolsey, who afterward was chosen as a member of the jury. He expressed his prejudice against "any married man who will abandon his wife and babies and run off on a spree with another woman," but said he could, however, render a verdict strictly in accordance with the evidence.

Cases Come Up Separately.

The cases against Diggs and Caminetti will be tried separately because the prosecution feels it has made out the stronger case against Diggs, and because the defense in this case will assume a course different from that in Caminetti's.

Diggs and F. Drew Caminetti, son of former Congressman and present Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti, are charged with luring Miss Marsha Warrington and Miss Lola Norris from California to Nevada for immoral purposes. Both are married men.

Diggs, the prosecution will attempt to show, financed the trip to Reno, where the girls were taken, and rented there a cottage in which the party lived.

Diggs, against whom the charges are made in relation to Miss Marsha Warrington, is said to be contemplating a fierce attack on the character of the girl. He has subpenaed habitues of the "Barbary Coast", resorts of this city and twenty witnesses from Sacramento's tenderloin. Caminetti is making no such move against Miss Norris. The Government asserts her character to be unblemished.

Mrs. Caminetti Relentless.

Caminetti's wife is relentless in her attitude toward her young husband. She said that despite the disgrace it may bring on their children, she thinks, for the protection of other married women, her husband should be made an example.

Mrs. Diggs, also, is bitter toward her husband. The defenders of both men, however, to-day are claiming a complete reconciliation of the defendants with their wives, and declare that when the trial gets fully under way both Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti will be seen sitting at their husbands' sides, a spectacle which, the defense calculates, will have an effect to their advantage on the jury.

Diggs and Caminetti both are free from custody, having taken advantage of the $10,000 bail offered them. At first they feared freedom, as violence was anticipated, but later this fear was overcome.

Diggs appears to be cheerful to-day, taking matters easily. He is scrupulously dressed. He came into the courtroom, with his flock of attorneys, bearing a cheerful smile, and bowed a dozen times to familiar faces that he saw near. Caminetti, on the other hand, seemed deeply worried. He was pallid and palpably very nervous. His father, the Commissioner General of Immigration, did not make his appearance, and probably will not be seen at the trial.

Two Special Prosecuters.

The trial is being held in the Federal Court before Judge Van Fleet. Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore R. Roche, president of the San Francisco Police Commission, have been appointed special prosecutors by Attorney General McReynolds, to take the place of District Attorney Gavin McNab, who resigned with the announcement that undue influence was being brought to bear from Washington to prevent the trial of the two men.

Arrayed with the special prosecutors are Archie Johnson, son of Governor Johnson, and Acting District Attorneys Benjamin L. McKinley and Thomas H. Salvage.

Diggs and Caminetti have an equally impressive line-up of legal defenders, including Robert L. Devlin and Marshall B. Woodworth, both former United States District Attorneys; Nate Coghlan and S. Luke Howe.

A heavy guard is thrown around the courtroom because feeling runs high against the two defendants. The two girls involved were high school students of Sacramento and of estimable families. Both attorneys for the Government announce, will be ready to take the stand against the men.

The Government will charge that Diggs and Caminetti, both married men, had drawn the girls into a liaison; that they terrified the girls into the belief that their wives, having discovered their infidelity, intended to have the girls arrested, and that to escape this imaginary danger the girls accompanied the men to Reno, Nev.

McNab Outlines His Case Against the Defendants

In his report Mr. McNab gives the following pen picture of Caminetti and Diggs:

"The defendant Diggs was a draughtsman in the office of the State Capitol in Sacramento. He is married and has two young children.

"But a short time before the actions hereinafter narrated he was involved in a forgery charge, and for a long time, by common repute, easily substantiated by evidence, he maintained what has been denominated as a 'private harem' at his rooms in a downtown block in Sacramento. Here, according to charges laid before me, he enticed many young women to go to serve his immoral purposes.

"Caminetti was his bosom companion. The defendant Caminetti has a vicious reputation for seducing girls, and I have shocking instances which I can produce to establish this fact.

"The two girls in question, both of whom are about 19 years of age, come of most respectable families. Marsha Warrington is the only daughter of the agent of the Santa Fe Railroad. Lola Norris is the only daughter of a retired business man of Sacramento.

"After going with the young women for some months the two defendants, who had determined to entice the girls away from home and take them to another State, began a systematic campaign of coercion and inducement to get them to flee the State with them.

Their Stories to the Girls.

They told the young women that what was to be done with them, the young women were told that their ruin was complete; that they would not desert them, but that the young women were to continue to live with them as their mistresses, and that they would take them to Salt Lake, where they would go into a 'house.'

"The Grand Jury had ample evidence before it in these statements to decide that the intent was to put them in a public place.

Barely Escaped Lynching.

"The defendants were secretly taken from the train and brought to Sacramento by auto to avoid lynching by the enraged citizens. Defendants procured counsel. Among these is Charles Harris, of the Sacramento bar. He and Diggs immediately set about to defeat justice by corrupting a witness. Diggs wrote an appealing letter to Miss Warrington under an assumed name, urging her to stand by a certain agreed story he had drilled her in while in Reno. The letter is in my possession.

"The Grand Jury has indicted Harris and Diggs for conspiracy to suborn perjury.

"The friends of the defendants are reported to have stated repeatedly that they could 'easily fix the case;' that they had too much money and too much influence at command to cause them to worry. This seems to have come principally from the Diggs end of the case."

Foundling Is Heiress To $100,000 Fortune

Father Makes Wealth After He Had Left Baby in Michigan Institution.

CADILLAC, MICH., Aug. 9.—Sheriff Chamberlain has been asked by an attorney in Corning, N. Y., to locate Bessie Weaver, who was adopted by a Manton, Mich., family from a New York foundling home over twenty years ago, and a few days ago became heir to $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weaver, of Manton, who adopted the child when on a trip through New York, returned her to the home five years later. Since that time nothing has been heard from her. The father of Bessie Weaver, or Bessie Clark, as she was known in New York, made his fortune after placing his child in the home, but has been unable to locate her since she was taken back from Michigan. He recently died, leaving his fortune to his only child.

GIRL HELPS FATHER IN BUILDING NEW HOUSE

HARTFORD, MICH., Aug. 9.—One year ago S. H. Atkins and family came to this city and built a house in a field of rye in the outskirts of the city. Recently they sold the home, and with the proceeds purchased four adjoining lots. They are now building a much larger house, which will be the sixth they have erected since the little home was built.

The scarcity of carpenters caused the mother and daughter to assist Mr. Atkins in the building of his new home. The mother and 9-year-old daughter did all of the lathing.

Nearly Five Months to Bring Caminetti and Diggs to Trial

MARCH 10.

Diggs, married, ex-State Architect, about twenty-eight, and Marsha Warrington, nineteen, unmarried, all of Sacramento, go to Reno, register under assumed names, rent a cottage later, and live four days together when arrested. The men assert they are unhappy and intend to marry the girls after securing divorces.

MAY 19.

The men are indicted for violating the Mann white slave law, put under bonds of $10,000 and their cases put on the calendar for trial in June. Citizens all over California appeal to U. S. District Attorney John L. McNab to push the cases.

MAY 27.

United States Attorney McNab wires Attorney General McReynolds that both prisoners were boasting of their "influence at Washington," and that strenuous efforts were being made to secure postponement of trials; also that bribery and perjury were being used in their behalf.

JUNE 18.

Secretary of Labor Wilson telephones McReynolds "that Commissioner of Immigration Caminetti, who has applied for leave of absence to attend the trial of his son, can not be spared."

JUNE 19.

McReynolds telegraphs McNab to postpone the cases till fall.

The President accepts McNab's resignation with a rebuke for giving "his resignation the form of an inexcusable intimation of injustice and wrongdoing." In a letter to McReynolds he says: "I am entirely satisfied that the course you took in these cases was prompted by sound and impartial judgment and a clear insight for what was fair and right."

Big Illuminating Power Now Carried on Engines Is Worry to Summer Boarders.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad has placed monster 1,220-candlepower electric searchlights on the observation cars of the Pioneer Limited.

COLLEGE HEN MISSES LAYING 1 DAY IN 100

Champion Barnyard Producer Rests Only When Commencement Season Arrives.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CORVALLIS, OREG., Aug. 9. A college hen, which laid 99 eggs in 100 days and observed Commencement Day by taking a single day's vacation, is a new claimant for prominence in the chicken world.

The newly heralded layer is three-quarters White Leghorn and one-quarter Barred Plymouth Rock, descending from several generations of heavy layers bred at the Oregon Agricultural College experiment station.

The 99 eggs were laid during the 100 days ended June 8, as follows: Thirty-one in March, 29 in April, 31 in May and 8 in the first 8 days in June.

Not only is this the best record ever secured at Oregon Agricultural College for the same length of time, but a careful perusal of authentic records from other stations on file fails to reveal an equal performance.

The result of breeding as shown in the egg production of this one hen is only an isolated example of what Professor James Dryden's extensive experiments are proving to be possible.

Up to date the records show clearly the beneficial effect in egg yield, and when the year's experiments are concluded in the fall some interesting statistics will be available for the use of poultrymen who are raising chickens for egg production.

What to Drink—Soft, non-alcoholic cooling drinks; buttermilk and sweet milk (the certified kind); alcoholic drinks in greatest moderation.

What to Wear—White outer clothes; blue underwear; soft collars; straw hats; good, old, easy shoes.

Gives Check for Fine, Then Stops Payment

Fisherman, Who Unintentionally Violated Law, Skips State, and Justice of Peace Suffers.

CRANE, MO., Aug. 9.—A resident of Crane has given a new turn to the long struggle for fees and fines by petty officers along the State line. This man was arrested, with his family, on charges of violating the fishing laws, pleaded guilty, was fined, paid the fines and fees with a check, then he hustled across the State line and stopped payment on the check.

The violation of the law was unintentional, as the Missouri family were floating down White River and did not note the change of State jurisdiction until the constable arrested them for a manner of fishing which had been legal a few miles back.

The only regret Missourians have over the incident is that the same justice probably cannot be fooled twice.

ROMANCE LEADS TO HEIR'S EXILE FROM GERMANY

Lieutenant in the Kaiser's Army Comes to Chicago and Joins U. S. Cavalry.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Because his love for a pretty German actress resulted in his squandering an inheritance of $32,000 in one year, Dr. Otto Gordon Goldfield, scion of a wealthy family, a lieutenant in the German cavalry and a graduate of Gottigen University, was forced by his father to come to the United States and join the army here as a private. The young German is now in barracks here.

Ruth Werner, German dancer and singer, charmed the young man when in Vienna. His grandfather had just died and left him $32,000. Within a year this was gone, and after numerous appeals to his father, Dr. Goldfield was forced to come here.

Told to Give Up Girl.

His father, who is the vice president of the Corporation of Hamburg, told him to give up the girl, his commission in the army and go to America.

"I fell in love with the girl," explained "Private" Goldfield, "and spent all my money on her. She was beautiful. If she wanted jewels I bought jewels. We were at Monte Carlo. She wanted to play the games. She was beautiful, and I loved her, so why should she not be happy?

"We were in Paris, at the Horse Show in London, and many other places. She had automobiles and fine horses.

"And then my money gave out. My parents refused to give me more, and my father forced me to come to the United States and try for a commission in the army.

"Will I go back?" responded Dr. Goldfield in answer to a question. "Yes, when I get my commission here I will go back and the girl and I will be married. But not until then. I must stay in the army here until I am a lieutenant.

Likes Open Air Life.

"It's the open air, and beautiful I like here more than anything else. That is why I have come to the West.

"And your soldiers—well, next to the French dragoons they are about the best in the world, in my opinion, and I have seen the troops of all the larger countries. That's why I am enlisting as a private here, for I like the life and will stay anyway until I get my naturalization papers."

Goldfield is twenty-five, and has served the last four years in the German cavalry as a lieutenant. He is an experienced horseman, and says he was the winner of the championship at the International Horse Show held in London two years ago, riding the horses from his father's stables.

Jacob Goldfield, father of the young army officer, besides being vice president of the Hamburg Corporation, is a well-known German jurist, as is also his brother, Rudolph Goldfield.

Wind Saves Life of Baby Caught by Kite

String on Toy Encircles Throat of Child and Lifts Him From Earth.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Except for the timely intervention of a gust of wind, Baby Allen McNaughton, 15 months old, might have been hanged by a box kite string until he was dead yesterday afternoon in the presence of his 12-year-old brother, Monroe, and a group of boy friends. As it was he was hanged until he was black in the face, and the string circled his throat with a gash that barely missed the jugular vein. Just as the kite went up the string slackened and twined about the baby's throat. The child was lifted from the ground and was being borne aloft when a sudden cross current slackened the string again. Monroe quickly cut it, releasing the kite and his brother at the same time.

EVERY LUXURY PROVIDED FOR 12 PRIZE DOGS

Private Room, Electric Fans, Leather Chairs, Etc., for Each of Dozen Pomeranians.

BROKTON, MASS., Aug. 9.—Twelve Pomeranians—each with a whole room to himself, and housed in a house which they have all to themselves, likewise—take he prize for dog luxury, Brockton folks believe. Besides a house of their own, the dogs have:

A valet, electric fan, individual beds, a bath twice a day, a back yard to play in, leather chairs and soft rugs (the latter to try their teeth on).

Mrs. E. V. Graves, a leading business woman, owns the dogs. She is successful as the head of a factory here. Brockton folks say she is more attentive to the dogs than Mrs William Carter, of Newport, who got four doctors when her Pomeranian was nervous.

During the hot days the valet, Mr. Beals, fans the little fellows with a specially made $18 electric fan and each dog is given a cold bath at frequent intervals.

"They are all as jealous as can be," says Mrs. Graves. "If you make more of one than another there is a terrible howl and often a fight. They are friendly to children as a general rule. The dogs are worth anywhere from $150 to $1,000 each, but I do not care to sell them. They are a great comfort to me."

LANE TAKES UP CUDGELS IN WAR FOR FARMERS

Secretary of the Interior Has Begun Long Battle on Land Grabbers.

VAST TRACTS ARE INVOLVED

Ninety-five Per Cent of Territory Held by Speculators, Who Charge Excessive Rates.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane has started a little war on the land grabbers west of the Mississippi River.

He has taken up the cudgels of the farmer and the homesteader in the great West. His efforts in this direction materially effect the pocketbook of every man, women and child.

Incidentally, he is "bucking" the land speculator. These land "grabbers" have quietly been acquiring vast tracts of land in the West on which the people of the United States have spent over $75,000,000 in irrigation projects. The homesteader has either been ousted through excessive water rate charges or becomes a tenant of the land companies.

Speculators Hold Land.

Secretary Lane finds that the projects were planned for the purpose of aiding the small farmer in tilling his ground, but that in reality 95 per cent of the land is held by speculators, who are charging excessive rates for water which has been sluiced to the land by the Government.

The other 5 per cent of the acreage is owned by the small farmer, but even Government water rates are held by Mr. Lane to be excessively high. Building notes for dam canal and sluice ways add to the cost of upkeep of the farm and conditions, Westerners say, are becoming intolerable.

By going into the question from the very first day that he entered his office, Mr. Lane has become intimately acquainted with conditions obtaining in the West. Daily conferences have been had with delegations from the West. Even the land speculator had his day in court, and his contentions and views were placed before the Secretary.

Farmer Needs Help.

In this connection Mr. Lane announced: "I am for the farmer, first, last and at all times. Naturally handicapped by lack of sufficient funds to carry on expensive farming under the conditions that obtain in the West, the farmer must receive support and co-operation from the Government, if the great West is to be settled and made to be as productive as the East.

"Expensive water will ruin the small farmers and ranchmen. They must have cheap rates and long-time notes, the Government must back them up an extend them credit, helping them over the rough places if necessary, if the various projects designed to benefit the whole people are to accomplish the purposes for which they were constructed.

"Why should this Government spend $75,000,000 for the benefit of private capital? Why should the Government adopt a hard and fast policy, such as has existed in the past, which has kept the small farmer from going into the new regions and taking up Government land? Isn't it time for the United States to extend to the Westerners a little paternal patience, a little more consideration, a helping hand?"

KANSAS SHERIFF RETALIATES FOR HIS ARREST ON SUNDAY

HUTCHINSON, KANS., Aug. 9.—Following his arrest on a charge of violating the Sunday labor ordinance, Koon C. Beck, sheriff of Reno County, announced that he would stop all Sunday labor in this city.

He swore out complaints against 350 persons who work on Sunday, including all street car employees. Beck and a brother are proprietors of an amusement park and shows have been given there on Sunday. Local ministers and church members made the complaint against the park.

Finds Honeymoon Land, Then the Man

Society Girl and New Husband Are Now on Their Way to Tahiti.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Miss Luella Hayne, a pretty Chicago girl, is now, as the bride of Dr. Frank Vance, of Enid, Okla., on her way to spend her honeymoon in Tahiti. Miss Hayne had chosen the spot for the honeymoon before she found the man.

Miss Hayne went through a finishing school which prepared her for all the conventionalities of a reigning position in the smart set, but after a brief whirl this life proved tiresome and she started out on the road that leads "back to nature."

The romance was begun at a house party in New York city given by Miss Hayne's sister.

In talking about Tahiti before she sailed she said:

"The people who are most successful in our centers of civilization are most fettered by it. The reason why people plunge so madly into the economic struggle is largely that they may free themselves from its conditions. Why should not a civilized man be as happy as a native of Tahiti? We are going to find out."

Western Canada to Honor First Farmer

Three-Day Celebration Planned as Tribute to Memory of Chevalier LaCorne.

MELFORT, SASK., Aug. 9.—Western Canada is to honor the memory of Captain Louis Luc De La Corne, the first farmer of Western Canada. Chevalier LaCorne introduced agriculture in the Carrot River valley, Saskatchewan, in 1754. At Melfort, in the heart of the Carrot River District, a three-day celebration, August 1, 2 and 3, 1914, will commemorate the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of the first farming in Western Canada.

The business men of Melfort and the surrounding territory have organized to arrange for the celebration, and committees are already at work. The celebration will be unusual and will include a pageant, in which 2,000 Indians will participate. This pageant will typify the agricultural growth of Western Canada, from the days before Chevalier LaCorne explored the Carrot River valley to the present time.

Honeymoon Trip on Motorcycle Planned

Bride Will Be Guide on Romantic Journey Through Rockies on Tandem.

GRAND JUNCTION, COLO., Aug. 9.—A trip across the Rockies from Grand Junction to Denver on a motorcycle will be the novel honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Carson, of this city. They leave in a few days. Mrs. Carson will guide the machine on the entire journey. She was formerly Miss Ethel Kelso, daughter of a prominent Grand Junction fruit grower, and is an expert motorcyclist. Carson will ride on the tandem seat.

The first woman to attempt to ride across the Rockies on a motorcycle is Mrs. E. Frank Winfield, who made the trip with her husband last summer.

Fright Kills Hero as He Tries to Save Life

Man Leaps Into Water After Drowning Woman and Heart Stops From Scare.

STROUDSBURG, PA., Aug. 9.—Mrs. E. A. Keesing, of No. 693 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., was seized with heart failure to-day bathing in Cherry Creek, Delaware Water Gap. David J. Dickenson, a hotel porter, went to her rescue.

Dickenson was unable to swim, and sank with Mrs. Keesing. Both were taken from the water dead.

Two physicians said there was no water in the lungs of either, and that Mrs. Keesing died of heart failure and Dickenson of fright.

Portland People Believe She Has Settled in Quiet Town to Start Divorce Suit.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 9.—From the gay life of a popular society woman, a leader in the smartest affairs of New York, Newport and Bar Harbor to pursue an existence in a quiet city, is a change just made by the dashing Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, the former Kitty Duer.

"Why do you suppose she's here?" all Portland is asking.

What can she do with herself all day long, for she is never seen out, save to take a drive, and then always wearing a heavy white veil. Is she here to secure a divorce and will she live that dreary life for one whole year—that's how the gossip runs.

Perhaps she's writing another book. She did write one once, "The Crystal Ball." But while the world conjectures, Mrs. Mackay denies herself to all.

Divorce is without doubt her idea in burying herself here, where she has been ever since her millionaire husband sailed for Europe with their three children.

Mrs Mackay is occupying the home of Adam P. Leighton on Western Promenade, a cottage in comparison with the mansions she has been used to occupying.

It was on June 25 that Mr. Mackay sailed for Europe on the Imperator, taking his children on board from New Jersey, where they had been in his control for several days. He went abroad with never a word to the wife and mother.

So mysterious was the departure that it attracted wide attention. They boarded the ship at night; a detective squad was serving to protect the children from any attempt to prevent their departure and the father registered under an assumed name. The children, who are no doubt longing for their mother as she is longing for them, are still abroad and it is said they will be there for months.

ORPHAN SOUGHT AS WIFE BY MAN WRITING POLICE

Would-Be Benedict Gives Evidence in Letter That He Fears Mother-in-Law.

OAKLAND, CAL., Aug. 9.—J. Keler, of Fresno, is a marrying man. He proved it by writing a letter to "the Chief of Police or the City Marshal of Oakland" and entreating that official to find him a wife. He wants a wife who has means equal to his own—amount not stated—and indicates in his letter that he would expect her to assist him in his merchandise business. He assures all responsible applicants that he is sober and industrious and hasn't a single bad habit.

If you are a maid, a girl or a widow who reads this, you stand a chance of winning the prize, and if you are an orphan, get busy and send your picture to Keler at once. He takes kindly to orphans, as is evidenced from the following excerpt from his letter:

"Will answer all questions and letters from girls, maids and widows, but would prefer to wed an orphan. Will give my business to the one I wed, that she may know I am a square man and will do right."

The following notice was inclosed, with the request that the official post it in a conspicuous place:

"Temperate gentleman would be pleased to form the acquaintance of ladies matrimonially inclined. Give description and full particulars in first letter. Send photo, which will be returned, if desired."

Collects Slow Debts By Parcel Post C.O.D.

Merchant Strikes Novel Plan to Realize On a Number of Old Accounts.

WICHITA, KANS., Aug. 9.—A Wichita merchant has found a new use for the parcel post. This merchant is in a line of business where he carries a large number of small accounts, which the debtors frequently overlook.

When the C. O. D. feature of the parcel post went into effect July 1, the merchant hit upon the idea of using it to collect his small debts. A large number of small boxes were obtained. These were filled with waste paper and on top was placed a receipted bill. Each box was neatly wrapped and tied and addressed.

A 5-cent stamp was required to carry each box and the C. O. D. fee was 10 cents on each package. The next day the returns began to come in, and in nearly every case the debtor paid the amount, supposing that somebody had sent something of value.

2,000 Bees Stampede Crowd at Ferry Slip

Hives Fall From Boxes and Enraged Insects at Once Charge on Commuters.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Two thousand busy little bees raised much turmoil and excitement at the Market street ferry this afternoon. A large packing box containing two hives with 50,000 bees was being shipped to Paulsboro, N. J. When the draymen reached the ferryhouse the box slipped off and fell to the street and burst open.

The enraged bees at once mixed with a crowd of 4,000 commuters and then action began. Lieutenant Buehler on a spirited horse rode into the fray. His steed was stung and tried to stampede into the crowd.

Finally the crate was pulled on the ferryboat Camden and when she left her slip the 2,000 bees flew after it, making life uncomfortable for everybody on the boat.

Get Ready for End of the World

Flying Rollers Expect It Soon

So Members of This Queer Cult Await With Uncut Hair and Much Footwashing.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—"Now, brethren, watch night and day, for ye know not when the end of the world draws nigh. It may be tomorrow; at least it will come before the year 1920. It is probably much nearer than that," says Brother Lucien I. Pingree. With long flowing beard that has never been profaned by scissors and with silken locks which also have never been clipped, this resident of Stoneham thus warns all those who would be ready when the First Resurrection occurs. "It is coming soon—very soon—very soon," he asserts. Brother Pingree and his band of adherents all are sure of it. The end of the world is close at hand, they all say.

For this reason the Flying Rollers are launcing a great religious crusade which they hope will awaken men and women to a knowledge of their evil ways and will prepare them for the near-at-hand millennium.

Keep on Living.

If you are one of the elect and alive when this auspicious day comes Mr. Pingree says that you will never die. Your body will take on eternal life and though you will be otherwise possessed of man's normal anatomy and will go right on through million of years living in the mortal mold.

Brother Pingree, who is agent and teacher of the Flying Roller faith in this vicinity, lives at No. 1 Forrest street, Stoneham. His church until recently has been at No. 117 Hancock street, Everett. Now the Flying Rollers are to pitch their tent in Malden and launch a propaganda which aims to halt the world in its mad round of pleasure, barber shops and picture galleries.

It is not such a hardship for the women to belong to the Flying Rollers church, but the men have troubles of their own. Their discipline forbids anyone to have his hair cut or to enjoy the pleasure of lying back in a tonsorial chair while the artist with the razor does the rest.

Males Never Cut Hair.

The male brethren never have the corners of their hair or of their flowing beards rounded. "Thou shalt not," says the church discipline. Then there is the ceremony of the washing of feet, which takes place on certain occasions, when elders and elderesses lave each other's pedal extremities and thus conform to other Biblical injunctions. The Flying Roll is a book written by the great Roller prophet, Jezreel, mentioned in the Scriptures as "to come on earth." He came and was here in 1875, wrote the Roll and died about twenty years ago. Since then the Flying Rollers have read his text with scrupulous care and followed closely in his teachings.

The Flying Rollers believe in the law and gospel. That is, they follow literally the teachings of the Bible. A man who is faithful to the end will live forever. The Bible says that and the Rollers take it literally.

144,000 in the Elect.

Of all the people alive, 144,000 (mentioned in Revelations, Chapter 14) shall be the elect who are to live during the thousand years when Christ is again to be on earth (during the First Resurrection). Then this chosen 144,000 shall enjoy Heaven still with their earthly bodies while the rest of humanity that was, shall minister to them as "ministering spirits."

"The world of wickedness will soon cease. A new world will appear as soon as Christ comes, which will be very soon (I can not give the exact date, but it will be before 1920, there is no doubt about that)," says Pastor Pingree. "In that world there will be no longer this struggle for life. Wonderful fruits and flowers will grow everywhere along the road sides—fruits and flowers more wonderful than we get from hothouses now. Then the earth will be Heaven for a thousand years.

"We believe that those who are faithful to the teachings of our religion will share that thousand years with Christ, wearing their mortal bodies, then clothed in immortality.

"It is no hardship not to cut your hair or trim your beard," says Mr. Pingree. "We tie it up and tuck it in, and by not cutting it or rounding the corners in any way, we are obeying the letter of divine law."

Here Are the Tenets of the Flying Rollers

Thou shalt not shave.

Thou shalt not cut thy hair.

Thou shalt not have thy picture taken.

Be faithful and thou shalt join the 144,000 true believers who will live forever.

Remember that the millenium will be here—probably in a year or so.

Thou shalt not tattoo thy arms.

The prophet is James J. Jezreel. Follow his teachings.

Feet washing among the brethren and sisters is practiced faithfully as the Bible and extracts from the "Flying Roll" dictate.

Prepare for the first resurrection which is coming soon.

Use of Fireproofed Cotton Goods Urged

State Fire Marshal Says Stores in Kansas Sell No Other Kind.

TOPEKA, Aug. 9.—Harrison Parkman, State Fire Marshal, believes that stores ought to sell only fireproof cotton goods.

In the new State fire textbook the Fire Marshal is urging that every Kansas man and woman refuse to buy any but fireproof cotton goods and that they adopt the German method and fireproof all cotton materials.

The Fire Marshal believes that this action would decrease the number of deaths by fire in Kansas fully 50 per cent and it would make a big decrease in the number of fires in the homes of the State.

WOMEN BUY LAND ONE-THIRD CHEAPER THAN MEN

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 9.—After hearing from women of the Council of Clubs the Finance Committee of the upper house of the Council has killed the ordinance to advance $1,000 of the $12,000 set apart for the purpose of making a start on the contemplated women's reformatory at Leeds.

It developed that the $1,000 had been asked by the Board of Public Welfare as a first payment on thirteen acres of ground it proposed to buy at Leeds at $500 an acre.

The women made fun of the business abilities of the Welfare Board, and said that they had already secured an option on 96 acres close by the thirteen at $171 an acre.

U. S. EDUCATION EXPERT SAYS ILLITERACY GROWS

BOULDER, COLO., Aug. 9.—That in only two States of the Union has the ideal democracy in education been even approximated; that every year in the United States almost 70,000 illiterates are sent out into the world to make their way; that there are in the country to-day 5,615,000 persons over the age of ten who can neither read nor write and that almost 50 per cent of the rural teachers of the country have not had a high school education, were among the startling statements made by United States Commissioner of Education Claxton in an address on "Democracy and Education."

It is indeed a source of pleasure to the young ladies to tour over the beautiful, picturesque bituilthic roads of Fulton County, and a source of education for them to see the model farms, poultry plants, factories and industries of many kinds.

All summer long the workmen have been busy, renovating and remodeling the building from bottom to top and the work on the campus has added much to its neat and attractive appearance.

The registration for the coming session is larger at this season than for many years. It is estimated that before school opens, rooms will be at a premium.

To keep well abreast of the times, Cox College has added some splendid teachers to its already strong faculty in both literary and conservatory departments.

WOMEN WHO JOG WIFE UPON A RAIL AWAIT SHERIFF

Illino's State's Attorney Says Volo Vigilantes Who Maltreated the Town Beauty Must Answer.

HUSBAND OF VICTIM TALKS

Believes in Wife and Laments the Fact That His Illness Made Him Powerless to Aid Her.

VOLO, ILL., Aug. 9.—Here in Volo, Lake County, Ill., the women who rode Mrs. John Richardson, the town beauty, on a rail will have to answer to the grand jury. The State's Attorney Ralph Dady, says so.

Gossip caused the trouble. Mrs. Richardson is pretty. Her husband, who keeps the small country store, is a cripple. William Dunnill, a brother-in-law of the wife, was a frequent caller.

The village women descended on the Richardson store, dragged her out on July 14 in the evening, set her astride a rail and bore her, struggling, screaming, almost raving, through the main street of the little town, climaxing the incident by dumping her into a mud puddle by a roadside and warning her to "pack up her traps and go," meaning thereby an ultimatum that she must forever leave Volo.

And, paradoxical as it may seem, all of this happened within forty miles of Chicago.

Slips Away During Night.

After the vigilantes had dumped Mrs. Richardson into one of the various mud puddles which abound in the vicinity, the victim emerged from her oozy bath, went by a circuitous route back to her husband's store, conferred with him and slipped away during the night.

It was impossible to employ an automobile, buggy or other conveyance the night she left, and to remain over until daylight was out of the question, because members of the mob had warned Mrs. Richardson that if the sun rose upon her in Volo again they would tar and feather her.

Her husband witnessed the abduction of his wife, but, being unable to rise, could render her no assistance.

It is estimated that at least half the male population of Volo witnessed the hazing of Mrs. Richardson. In fact, 't is said that the women who committed the outrage had previously taken their husbands and brothers into their confidence and that the proposition had been indorsed in family council.

It was expected that Will Dunnill, brother-in-law of Mrs. Richardson, would interfere in her behalf, but he left Volo a few hours before the attack. Therefore, Mrs. Richardson's husband being disabled, and her brother-in-law being absent, she was without champion.

Husband Defends Her.

Just before Mrs. Richardson's flight from Vdo, her husband gave her $1,500.

To a newspaper man, Richardson said:

"My wife is a good woman. She is not guily of the charges the other women make. I won't believe it. A woman who has cared for me during my invalidism for the last nine years, who married me when I was an invalid, knowing there was no hope of my recovery, would not be guilty of what they charge.

"And to think that I was helpless to save her from the indignities which were heaped upon her. Her clothing was half torn from her and amid jers and cheers and the throwing of mud and stones, she was ridden though the streets. It was an act of Middle-Age barbarism and hardly worthy of women of Illinois, who have just obtained the right to vote."

Meanwhile the women of Volo, who are supposed to have played the role of vigilantes, are calmly awaiting developments.

"At time the Sheriff wants us he knows the road to Volo. We're not goin to run away," they say.

Heiress on Lone Hunt for Gold Seeks Mine Grandfather Found Plans to Do Own Prospecting

Miss Frances Leighton, an heiress of California, who is prospecting through a section of the Sierra Madre Mountains in search of a gold mine which she believes her grandfather, a "Forty-niner," discovered, but never made known. Recently she heard of the reported "find" and, securing a miner's outfit ,stated alone on the perilous trip through the mountainous wilds in search of it.

Miss Frances Leighton Shows Same Intrepid Spirit of the Argonauts of '49.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—With the same dauntless spirit exhibited by her grandfather during the California gold rush of '49, Miss Frances Leighton, one of the wealthiest and most prominent socially of the younger generation of Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, is on a prospecting tour through the Sierra Madre Mountains to-day in search of a gold mine she had learned her grandfather discovered but never developed.

For many months Miss Leighton planned the prospecting tour before leaving to carry it out. Topographical bureaus supplied her with maps of the mountainous territory through which she planned to make her tour and several veterans of the gold stampede not only advised her against the foolhardiness of the prospective journey, but told her that there was one chance in a thousand of ever greeting civilization again if she lost herself in several untraveled sections of the mountain region that as yet have never been thoroughly explored.

Nevertheless, Miss Leighton had great confidence in the belief that her grandfather did find the mine somewhere in the mountain fastness and she determined to find it, if it did exist, at any cost and without taking into consideration the hardships that confront her.

Miss Leighton, according to reports which have reached her home town, is to-day prospecting at or near the West Fork Canyon, twelve miles beyond Mount Wilson.

Grandfather Killed.

Her grandfather, John Easton, was one of the first of the thousands of New Englanders to reach California, after a perilous journey across the prairies following the report of the discovery of gold in that State.

Soon after reaching San Francisco, he left with his wife and daughter and a partner and established a camp at Sierra Madre. Easton left the camp one day on a prospecting tour and never returned. Three days later his partner went out to search for him. He was found crushed to death by falling rock.

Before his death, however, he managed to draw roughly on a piece of paper what is now believed to be the location of the mine his intrepid young granddaughter is searching for.

Miss Leighton some years ago received a letter from her grandfather's former partner containing the piece of paper on which he had drawn the outline of the supposed mine. It was on receipt of this letter and diagram that Miss Leighton planned to go in search of the hidden gold.

After months of careful study of the many maps, topographical bureau reports and advice from old-time miners, Miss Leighton treated herself to a complete miner's outfit and started on her tedious journey up the mountain.

To Work Alone.

She will do the entire work alone, staking her own camp, preparing her meals, making surveys and using the pick and shovel whenever she believes she has struck the right trail.

Her outfit includes several changes of clothes, a heavy pick and shovel, a mountain mule, or pack animal as they are called in that section of the country, a complete dining and cooking outfit, a pack of playing cards which will afford her her only amusement while practically a prisoner in the wilds, needles, thread and many other useful and necessary articles.

She wears most all the time a pair of regulation top trousers, similar to riding breeches, with canvas leggings and a plain but heavy mountain shirt.

If the gold mine really exists, every one of the young woman's friends believe that she will not return until it has been found.

Raze House While Occupant Is Away

Workmen of Grade Crossing Commission Destroy House of Man Who Blocked Work.

CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Aug. 9.—While John Barber was in Boston this afternoon, a wrecking crew, under orders of the special grade crossing commission for Central Falls, demolished a cottage house he owned on Cross street, and then started in to saw off a corner of the Barber Livery Stable nearby. When his land was condemned, Barber demanded $5,000 for the property, but was allowed only $3,500. The grade crossing commissioners sold the cottage to Nicolas Bertozzi, but Barber would not let Bertozzi on the premises.

DENVER IS READY TO GIVE KNIGHTS ROYAL GREETING

Thousands of Templars Pour Into City, Which Is Lavishly Decorated for Conclave.

DENVER, Aug. 9.—Thousands of Knights Templar are already here for the thirty-second triennial convention, and it is estimated that when the convention formally opens Tuesday next more than 100,000 Knights and their friends will have arrived.

All buildings are decorated in honor of the Knights, as are private dwellings. The municipal and other public buildings have been elaborately ornamented and great arches have been built over many of the streets. Thousands have been spent upon decorations and illumination. Denver has spent more than fifteen times as much on its plans for the Knights Templar than it ever before expended upon any one convention.

Sun to Shine All Night.

At Eighteenth and Champa streets the huge figure of a Knight more than 60 feet in height has been erected. A searchlight will play upon it all night. At Fourteenth and Champa streets a "Colorado Sunset," a marvelous electrical display, has been built. It shows the sun sinking below the rim of the mountains. Twenty monster searchlights are placed behind the "sun," throwing their rays into the sky to resemble the rays of the sinking sun.

Over the Isle of Safety at Broadway and Sixteenth street, a reproduction of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem will astonish the visitors. It measures 50 by 60 feet, and is lighted by searchlights on the tops of nearby buildings.

Every arrangement possible has been made by the railroads to bring the Knights and their friends into Denver. More special trains will enter Denver than entered Washington in the same space of time for the inauguration. The Pullman Company has reserved large space of ground on the outskirts of the city for a "Car City," where the special cars and special trains will be parked, and where those Knights who so wish may live in the cars. Sanitary arrangements will be perfect. Stores of various kinds for the convenience of the car dwellers have been established.

Two trainloads of automobiles from New York, sent here by New York Knights, have already arrived, and carloads of automobiles from other cities are arriving daily. These have also been parked on the outskirts of the city. More than 500 special trains and cars have already arrived. According to the railroad schedules, when the visitors really commence to flock in a special train will arrive every eight minutes for forty-eight hours.

Every State Represented.

From August 1 to-day more than 2,000 automobiles reached this city. More than 1,000 other cars are on their way here. The delegates to the convention are from every State in the Union, and from Alaska, Honolulu, Philippines, Canada, England, Scotland and Ireland.

As the special trains began to arrive, some 2,000 Colorado Knights ranged themselves at the station to escort the new arrivals safely to their hotels. Every hotel room in Denver has been rented.

On Tuesday next the grand parade will be held. More than 50,000 Knights will be in line. Their white plumes, costing $15 each, will altogether be worth $600,000. The regalia of the Knights on parade will be worth more than $1,000,000. Sixty-five bands will march with the Knights, the fees to the bands alone amounting to $22,000. Some 600 Knights' commanders will be mounted on picked horses from the ranches of Colorado and Wyoming.

Men's Farewell Kiss Mistaken for Fight

Ardent Osculation at Railroad Station Causes Commotion Among Passengers at Gate.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Smack!"

A score of persons hurrying to and fro in the Pennsylvania Railroad station yesterday stopped short.

"Smack!"

The sound was repeated. Turning in the direction from which it seemed to emanate, the curious among the persons in the station saw two well-dressed young men in each other's arms.

Both men were of athletic build and none of the persons who stopped to watch their antics from a distance cared to interfere. When it seemed as if the taller of the two was about to be thrown, they separated suddenly.

Then the gates to the train shed were thrown open and an announcer called upon all intending passengers bound for Jamaica, L. I., and points east to go aboard the waiting train.

That seemed to be a signal for a recommencement of hostilities.

"Smack!"

Sure enough. It sounded again distinctly, but there was no mystery about the cause this time.

"Good-bye, Pierre," said the taller man; "don't forget to write." And a fourth time they kissed before parting.

Mends Own Socks To Let Wife Vote

Illinois Husband Consents to Do Washing to Prove Housekeeping Isn't Hard.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Just to prove to an expectant world that he was a good husband, Wayne Colby stayed home, mended the socks, tended the children and washed dishes while his wife cast her vote in the first election under the universal suffrage law recently enacted.

"Just to show that it is not such a terrible thing for a man to stay at home and do the housework on the occasional voting day," said Colby, "I thought I would help Mrs. Colby out with the washing."

The first woman to cast her vote in the State was Mrs. Fannie Coleman, of Wamac, near Central Illinois. She was accompanied to the polls by her husband, O. W. Coleman, and both voted for Village Trustees.

NATURE AIDS IN BEAUTY DISPLAY AT PACIFIC FAIR

Picturesque Location Will Add to Grandeur of Palaces of Mammoth Panama Exhibition.

By HAMILTON WRIGHT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—The palaces of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition have been planned upon a massive scale to conform with their impressive natural surroundings. The site of the exposition at Harbor View lies within the city limits as a crescent upon the shores of San Francisco Bay, just inside the Golden Gate.

No more picturesque location, nor one more appropriate to the celebration of a great maritime event could be imagined. On the south, east and west the grounds are encircled by towering hills of varying contours rising successively from 250 to 900 feet above the sea level. Upon the north the site opens out upon the harbor of San Francisco.

Site Natural Amphitheater.

The central portion of the site lies slightly above the sea and is encircled on three sides by gently sloping ground; within a short distance from the boundaries of the site these slopes change to steep hillsides and thus the site becomes the floor of a huge amphitheater from whose sides the exposition will be seen stretched out below. To the east and south the residence section encircles the exposition grounds, and to the west and southwest the site embraced by the wooded slopes of the Presidio military reservation, dark with cypress and eucalyptus and interspersed with occasional vistas of green valleys.

The exposition buildings, built upon an axis east and west, will face the bay upon the north; they will parallel the stream of the great incoming traffic of the world through the western gate of the United States. Ships entering the harbor will pass before the exposition grounds.

The harbor itself will be a part of the great theater upon which will be staged the world's jubilee and the Golden Gate will be the entrance to the theater.

A marvelous panorama will be afforded visitors on ships coming through the Golden Gate. As one looks from the harbor he will see there main groups of exposition buildings. There will be the great central group comprising the fourteen exposition palaces to be devoted to general exhibits; there will be the group upon the left hand or east end devoted to amusement concessions and covering sixty-five acres; this will be the "midway." The right-hand group upon the Presidio Military reservation and nearest the Golden Gate will be devoted to the pavilions of the States and foreign nations.

Tropical Boulevard Feature.

The main group of buildings will lie between a tropical garden or boulevard running east and west along the fringe of hills nearest the city upon the south, and the esplanade along the shores of San Francisco Bay upon the north.

The tropical boulevard, to be known as the "Alameda," will be 1,800 feet in length and 300 feet wide; it will be glowing with fountains, lagoons, statuary peristyles and arcades and, secluded from the winds of the bay, it will be transplanted with a profusion of semi-tropical trees, plants and flowers, including the orange, banana, olive, myrtle and every variety of palm. The east end of the Alameda will open out with a plaza upon Van Ness Avenue, one of the principal boulevards of San Francisco. The west end upon the Presidio will be surmounted by a commemorative arch of triumph.

The prevailing color tone of the exposition will be an ochre, a tawny buff, several shades removed from white, but in the distance giving the effect of white, but will not be glaring under the brilliant sunlight of California. In the courts there will be a marvelous blending of colors; Pompeiian red, strong Italian blues, vermilion and orange will predominate. The court system is unique in that it will permit each architect, artist or sculptor to present some distinct conception without clashing with the exposition architecture and coloring in its entirety.

City Babies Win Over Those From Country

Score Highest In Physical and Mental Efficiency Tests at Chautauqua Show.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—City-bred babies triumphed over those from the country in the Twentieth Century Baby Show held at Piasa Chautauqua near Alton, Ill. The prizes went not to the prettiest babies, but to those who scored highest in physical and mental efficiency.

First place in Class A for babies from eighteen months to three years, was won by Cooper Stanton White, of Alton. In Class B for babies from six to eighteen months the winner was Gilbert Craig, of East St. Louis.

Of the eighteen babies entered, none scored less than 945. None of the country babies entered won a prize.

Uses Boot as Strop; Shaves With Knife

Pioneer Indiana Man Has Never Owned Razor, Mug or Barber Soap.

CONNERSVILLE, IND., Aug. 9.—Zaccheus Adams, Jackson Township, Fayette County, has shaved himself twice a week for 54 years, but never owned a shaving mug, a razor, a strop or a hone. It is Mr. Adams' pride that he keeps his razor, an old Wade & Butcher cleaver, twice as big as a common razor, in the finest trim with the least trouble of any man in the county.

He wears old style, high-toped boots and still has one pair which he bought 25 years ago. Wishing to shave, Mr. Adams first puts on these boots. He then smacks the razor blade back and forth along the leather leg of the left one for a minute or two. His next operation is to moisten his face with rainwater—no perfumed soap for him—and then he just shaves.

Prince Chased by Laundress She Asks $50,000 on Love Notes He Is Gone on His Honeymoon

Miss Freese, a California girl, who at a Secret Marriage Became the bride of Prince Sultkowski, of Austria, and a Snapshot of the Prince.

Sultkowski, Who Won Rich Girl and Had His $100,000 Debts Paid, Is Accused.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—An angry laundress from Vienna is in Los Angeles looking for Prince Stanislaus Sultkowski, the noble Austrian who came here several months ago, wooed in his gallant way and won the beautiful Miss Marie Louise Freese, had his debts of $100,000 paid by Father-in-Law Freese, and received from the same source an annuity of $20,000.

The laundress, Mrs. Clara Melcher, declares that the Prince brought her to this country on the promise that he would marry her.

After a hasty, private marriage, the noble Prince and his American Princess disappeared. The father-in-law says they are "not in the country," and no more.

Los Angeles society wondered at the quiet wedding. An elaborate church ceremony had been planned, but the plans were abandoned at short notice.

She Asks Federal Aid.

Society was in the midst of this wonder when entered Mrs. Melcher. She appealed with her story to the United States Immigration Inspector, and was supported by Adolph Danzieger, a lawyer. The Prince declared, Danzieger said, that the woman had annoyed his family in Austria, and to get her away from Vienna so he could return home with his American wife, he had written her to come to America.

An attorney, who was first approached by Mrs. Melcher and then retained by the Prince, said he suggested to Mr. Freese, the Prince's father-in-law, a payment of five or ten thousand dollars in settlement of the woman's claims, but Mrs. Melcher, through her lawyer, declared that she would have $50,000 or nothing. She has love letters which she says prove her claims.

The Prince and his American bride are believed to be on their way to Austria where Stanislaus is taking his Princess without fear of being molested by the insistent laundress.

Prince Lauds Girls Here.

The Prince is lieutenant of the Second Dragoons of the army of the Austrian empire. He came to America in December and lost his heart to the girls of America, whom he likened to "the flowers of the spring." He is a nephew of the Grand Duke of Biritz. His home is the Castle Trestenitz, near Markburg, Austria.

The following tribute to American girls, of which the Prince delivered himself, was widely published:

"They are splendid, charming, graceful and fresh, like the flowers of the spring. The girls of Europe generally have followed outdoor sports. They are mostly large and strong, often the equal of their husbands in strength.

"My idea of a girl is found right here in America. I have been most hospitably received and have met many of them. Their sweetness, their trimness and the wonderful manner in which they wear their clothes have 'got me going,' as you say. Their figures and their style surpass the Europeans. Their dignity and grace and the democracy I have found in so many are winning, and I do not blame Europe's noblemen for coming to America for their brides."

ALL STATES TO SHOW POULTRY AT KNOXVILLE

Exhibition of Best Breeds To Be Feature of National Conservation Exposition.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Aug. 9.—Birds for the poultry show that is to be held in connection with the National Conservation Exposition in this city during the months of September and October are coming to Knoxville all the way from California. Word of the coming of the California birds has just been received by the poultry department.

Interest in the poultry show is country-wide. From almost every State in the Union will be brought to Knoxville poultry of different kinds. Already it is assured that the poultry show will be the biggest thing of its kind ever held in the South. It will be in fact as well as name "The Madison Square Garden Show of the South."

Textile Exhibit a Feature.

A most comprehensive exhibit of the great textile industry of the South is assured for the exposition. Progressive manufacturers of Greenville, S. C., have just signed up for a large amount of exhibit space in the All-South building of the exposition and the greater part of that space will be devoted to the textile industry.

In addition to the Greenville textile manufacturers a number of other concerns of like nature in the South, from Knoxville and elsewhere, will make exhibits, and thus this industry, constantly increasing in importance in the South, will receive great attention. The different processes through which cotton goes from the seed to the loom and after will be strikingly shown in the different exhibits.

Veterans to Visit Fair.

The Department of Massachusetts, Grand Army of the Republic, will spend at least two days in this city in September. The stop will be made by the Union veterans either on their way to the G. A. R. encampment in Chattanooga or while returning from that city.

Word of the intention of the Massachusetts men to visit Knoxville has been received from General Thomas J. Ames, of Leominster, commander of the department. For General Ames the visit to Knoxville will have an added interest. Fifty years ago he participated in some of the engagements in the vicinity of Knoxville, and since that time never has been back to see where he fought.

The Department of Massachusetts is coming South in two special trains from Boston. The veterans will travel in style. They will be extensively entertained during their stay in the exposition city. It is planned to have a large number of veterans of the Confederate army in Knoxville on those days so that they may extend to the men from the North the right hand of fellowship and greeting.

The acceptance of the Massachusetts men to visit the National Conservation Exposition is only one of a number of acceptances received by the management to the invitations sent out by them generally to G. A. R. men, posts and departments.

BACHELOR, 107 YEARS OLD, GIVES SINGLE LIFE CREDIT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Daniel Turner, a veteran of the Civil War, residing at Santa Monica, who celebrated his one hundred and seventh birthday to-day, thanks his judgment in remaining single for his long life and apparent good health at this advanced age.

"My life was never blighted by worry or sickness because I never married," said "Uncle" Dan. "Married men die younger than bachelors. Sometimes death is a welcome relief to the man who gets a modern wife."

For MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

BELTS of white kid, lined with colored ribbons or silk, are dainty accessories to the all-white outdoor costume. One style, a wide belt of dull kid, which fastens together with pearl snap fasteners and has two wide sashes at the side, is lined with shell-pink taffeta ribbon. Another sort of white lined belt shows a piped edge of colored kid to match the lining, and a white kid buckle piped with color.

No more than in grown-ups is there any lack of variety in wearing apparel for children. Coats, frocks, hats —each shows interesting little touches and carefully worked-out details.

Children of all ages are wearing their skirts unusually short just now, while as for the waist line, it may be anywhere above or below the normal waist line, for the use of the normal line has a tendency to make the figure look older, and the chief characteristic of any frock between 4 and 16 year sizes should be its youthfulness.

* * *

Women of to-day love to array themselves in fragile robes of white tulle bordered with white fox and to load their necks with pearls. It is in a way a white season, and all the white things that are now most fashionable are expensive. I never remember having seen so many necklaces and ropes of pearls worn in the daytime as now; it is a sort of mania with women of fashion.

* * *

An automobile rainproof (waterproof) and dustproof silk lap robe is a beautiful affair—green on the one side and white on the other and bound with green leather. It is so light that it could be used in summer without giving warmth and yet would furnish the desired protection for dresses. In winter it would be just as useful spread over a heavier robe.

* * *

This reminds me of the latest raincoat—the lightest (in weight) article of its kind—made of silk mounted on a rubber lining. It is very soft and folds easily into a little pocket-case six inches long. It is of a beautiful shade of dark blue and most elegantly made.

* * *

One of the most beautiful felt hats I have seen for men came with the latest importation from England. The felt has body yet it is the softest, silkiest and smoothest of felts, folding easily into any sort of a lump without a wrinkle to tell of its rough usage afterward. It is for the traveler, and is to be carried in a case three by four inches—a regular vest pocket affair. It takes but an instant to pat it into shape, and it retains its form perfectly until refolded.

* * *

Black velvet neckbands in the Marie Antoinette style are as popular as ever, but some of the great art jewelers of Paris are making some attractive bands in deep blue velvet rimmed with sapphires. Needless to say, these neckbands are exceedingly expensive, quite as expensive as an ordinary necklace of precious stones, but then they are immensely chic and with white summer dresses they give the most artistic effects it is possible to imagine.

* * *

The fashion for thin white frocks made of plain and colored materials has had extensive vogue this summer, and many of these gowns made of costly and admirable material are now to be had for a few dollars. Think what good-looking house gowns they make for the winter evening; they also serve for day hours when one must attend weddings or receive at afternoon teas, and the women who do few of these things find such gowns excellent for informal theater parties.

Even the much abused white skirt with its flowered taffeta coat can be utilized all next winter for the theater and for restaurant dinners and suppers if its sleeves are made elbow length and its neck is cut open in front.

* * *

Inexpensive glass beads can be worn to give the right tone of color to the all-white costume. Opaque beads are sold in chains sufficiently long to go about the neck and drop in a V-line in front—a line which is artistic and much more becoming than the round neck line. These beads come in various shades of green and are especially effective in jade color. They are also sold in yellow, red and blue.

* * *

Attractive evening caps are made of white tulle. They consist of a puffed crown, edged with a box-plaited frill that turns smartly back from the face. They are trimmed with pompons of stiff tulle at the side. Other pretty evening caps for summer wear are made of silver or gold tissue, mounted on China silk, and banded with fluffy, soft white marabou.

* * *

There was a time when the making of a fashionable girdle was a feat for the nimble fingered. Now the most modish girdle is made of a strip of taffeta silk, plainly fastened about the waist, edged on each side with an inch-wide frill of knife-pleated silk. The girdle is made without folds, and is loosely worn. It hooks in the back, under a flat bow or buckle, and is eight or ten inches wide.

* * *

The "bungalow apron" is popular with the brides who like to appear "housewifely." It is an all-enveloping apron, with elbow sleeves and square neck, which buttons from neck to hem in the back and is neatly belted in at the waist. It can be worn over the frock to keep it spotless, or, if the day is sultry, it can be worn instead of a frock and thus serve the purpose of two garments in one.

These aprons are made generally of plain, serviceable materials. One attractive sort is of khaki, the belt, pocket, cuffs and neck piped with red cotton. Another is of thin blue and white gingham with pipings of blue lawn.

The Fad of White Mourning

White mourning, which has been gaining ground for months, is a sensible fashion for the sultry days of August, and is worn more naturally now than it was in the winter and spring. Then it attracted attention, and was therefore shunned by many women of conservative taste. Now, when all the world wears white—all the American world, at any rate—white crepe and other mourning fabrics are inconspicuous.

The woman who wears white mourning must remember that she must wear nothing but white. White and black in no wise indicate mourning, and no matter how many attractive frocks she sees which combine white with black, she must remember that white mourning must be all white.

The use of white mourning crepe for trimming should be as cautiously indulged in as that of black. Too much crepe suggests showiness. But as for trimming material, and one of the few allowed to the women in mourning, crepe holds an important place.

'HAREM GOWN' IS NOW RAGE DRAPED TROUSERS GIVE NAME

Greek and Orient Combined in Costume; More for Drawing Room Than Street.

The latest Parisian gown for women, the "Harem," is here. It is illusive, alluring and bewildering, this gown of cobwebby tissues which is worked out in an exquisite maze—the color of California poppies dripping with dew—the dew being illustrated by quantities of the finest cut crystal trimming.

The Princess of Arabian Night fame may have worn some such a costume when she weaved the various legends which saved her from being tied in a sack with three or four raging cats and tossed into the Bosphorus.

The gown, which combines the most ultra of Parisian modishness with the languor of the Orient, is not planned for street wear, it is rather for the drawing room or boudoir.

Sheer and transparent voluminous trousers disclose white silk stockings heavily embroidered in brilliants. The trousers are not gathered at the instep, but edged with the same crystal trimming which falls over extremely high-heeled, cloth-of-gold slippers. The only note of contrasting color is in the draperies of the bodice.

The gown has its greatest charms when the wearer is seen in silhouette against a brilliant light. Then there is all the grace and beauty of the Greek dancing figure.

These same costumes, made up in more opaque and darger materials are being worn on the boulevards and in the cafes of the French capital. But it is not expected they will become of general vogue in America.

SHOCKING DRESS AMMUNITION IN DUEL OF WOMEN

At Least That's the Opinion of London Writer in Discussing Craze for Display.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Since a woman correspondent in The Times wrote at length of the "orgy of undressing" among women it has been rather amusing to note the different theories put forward by men and women in newspapers to account for the feminine fashion to wear fewer clothes. Side by side with comment for and against on the craze for "leaving off" have been remarks on the daring character of modern modes and the airy fashions that obtain for women.

Stockings of diaphanous silk, slashings and liftings of the skirt to display the leg halfway to the knee, showing every movement, and the low necked afternoon frock with a V shaped opening filled with filmy lace have all been under discussion.

One correspondent suggested that women were engaged on "an extensive advertising campaign."

Two women writers have referred respectively to "the return of the prude" and "the triumph of common sense," while a third has taunted men with regretting the passing of the petticoat because there is for the male no piquancy and mystery about the tight skirt. Man prefers, she implies, the fiting provocative skirt.

The most novel explanation, however, is advanced by Mr. Godfrey Dean in The Daily Dispatch, which no other has yet offered.

"The explanation is," he writes, "that the woman-feminine, as I may so call her, finds it necessary—owing to the changed attitude of men toward women brought about by militant suffragism—to distinguish herself by a definite display and assertion of her essential femininity from the woman suffragist, or at least, the suffragist of advanced or militant opinions.

"I do not for a moment think that in thus calling on masculine attention by making the most of her physical charms the woman-feminine is acting deliberately on conscious thought. On the contrary, I think this alluring display of feminine curves and form by means of transparent and clinging gowns is sub-consciously inspired by the events of the last twelve months or so, which have made men more critical of women.

"In her natural repugnance to being mistaken for what she is not—a suffragist—the woman feminine is displaying her charms. She cannot very well wear a label; she cannot very well declare herself to strange fellow travelers for what she is; but she can and does endeavor to distinguish herself from women of whose conduct she disapproves.

"The more the woman suffragist asserts herself the more necessary it is for the woman-feminine to assert herself. If is woman's silent duel, and dress, or should I say undress, is playing a big part in it.

Many Lives Saved As Train Is Ditched

Forethought of Towerman Averts Crash Between Specials by Taking Chance on Tragedy.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Scores of lives were saved to-day when a towerman in Burnham, Ill., threw the Ohio River special on the Pennsylvania Railroad into a derail and averted its collision with a through Wabash train from St. Louis. The train took the ditch at high speed. The Pennsylvania locomotive was overturned in the crash, but aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman, no one was hurt.

A moment after the Pennsylvania train hit the derailer the Wabash train clicked across the frogs at the track intersection less than 1,000 feet away.

Kneeless Stocking Now California Fad

Pasadena Society Women Emulate Example of Co-eds of Leading Eastern Universities.

PASADENA, CAL., Aug. 9.—Emulating the fair co-eds of some of the leading Eastern universities, a number of Pasadena society women are now wearing the kneeless stocking and the custom gives all promise of becoming the fad in the Crown City's smartest set before the opening of the coming winter social season.

The "kneeless stocking" is nothing more or less than men's half hose, and, according to those who have discarded the ordinary long feminine stocking, so much comfort and satisfaction is being derived by the wearers of the kneeless hose, which comes no higher than the calf of the leg, that it is doubtful if they ever return to the usual style of stockings worn by the fair sex.

With the adoption of the new fad, men's furnishing stores in Pasadena have had a rush of business in half hose, with the fair sex of Pasadena the purchasers. At the department stores the finest grade of men's silken hosiery is being shown, with the bright colors most in demand.

Among those who have discarded the full length for the kneeless stocking none are more enthusiastic over the superiority of this style than Mrs. J. Marcus Rothingwall, president of the Pasadena Pansy Club.

$16,500,000 Gems in Buckingham Palace

Extraordinary Precautions Are Taken to Protect Jewels Against Burglars.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—King George has a great idea of his responsibility in regard to the jewels at the various royal palaces, and from time to time has them recatalogued and revalued. Those at Buckingham Palace were recently assessed and declared to be worth $16,500,000.

It is said that there is scarcely an object in the whole collection with which the Queen is not familiar. New measures safety have been adopted and it would now be impossible for the cleverest burglar in Europe to make an entrance without attracting attention.

An electric alarm was recently added. The police guard around the palace has also been increased.

Town to Draw Rules On Woman's Dress

Morals Efficiency Committee Is Raised to Take Matter Up With Burgess.

ROCHESTER, PA., Aug. 9.—Following suggestions made by D. W. Denton, president of the Rochester Council, Burgess J. M. Cargo will be asked to formulate a set of rules regulating wearing apparel of women who appear on the streets of Rochester.

Denton's suggestions were made on complaints he said had been made to him about the transparency of the gowns worn by young women. A Morals Efficiency Committee was named to take the matter up with the Burgess.

Dressmaking Class To Cut Cost of Living

Paterson, New Jersey, High School Will Make Every Girl Graduate a Modiste.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 9.—To combat the high cost of living the Paterson Board of Education has established a dressmaking department. In the future every girl graduate will be a trained modiste.

The question of advanced sewing in the high school has been under consideration for some time, but the authorities have not before been in a position to spend the amount of money necessary to carry out their project. A large, light room, equipped with sewing machines, dress forms, electric irons, ironing boards and cutting tables, has been set aside for the new department.

GAY GOWNS ARE SEEN AT PICNICS ON THE THAMES

Net and Lace Are in High Favor Right Now—Telling Effects in Black and White.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—However overelaborated may be the fashions as worn by the "Upper Ten," the women of the stage nowadays set the example of being always appropriately dressed, whether the function be a river picnic or a race meeting.

Some of the frocks seen on the upper reaches of the Thames are particularly attractive. One greatly admired gown was of white voile, worn by Miss Cooper, with a close allover pattern of blue and a center panel of fine embroidered batiste, with the undercollar and pipings of a darker blue. The prettiest black velvet bows finished both the neck and waist.

Another of dainty pink had broad insertions of embroidery and a black suede belt, while a third was of Paisley voile in blue and fawn. Still another, perhaps the prettiest of all, was of white Irish linen with insertions of lace. The lower half of the skirt and the front of the bodice were in broderie Anglaise, and again there appeared the chic black belt and bow.

Blouses have become more diaphanous; net and lace are all the rage just now, some specially pretty frocks having touches of black on collar and jabot, while others of white French voile are most fascinating.

Watermelons to Reduce Living Cost

Greatest Supply Ever Known Now Being Consumed—Chicago Eats 100 Carloads a Day.

Ham bone am sweet, bacon am good,
Possum fat am very, very fine;
But gimme, oh, gimme,
Oh, how I wish you would,
That watermillion hangin' on the vine.
—OLD SOUTHERN MELODY.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Want to reduce the high cost of living? Eat watermelons—better and bigger and cheaper than they have been for years. The year 1913 is the greatest watermelon year ever known. The crop is moving into town at the rate of 100 cars a day of the juciest, most delicious melons that ever were plugged.

The Florida melons are gone. The Georgia and Alabama bumper crops are fast disappearing. Alabama and Texas are keeping the world happy now counting the slippery black seeds. Next week hurrah for Mississouri and Oklahoma watermelons, and they will linger until September.

Parrot Jests Judge; Then Makes Ruling

Bird Calls Bachelor Jurist 'Papa' and Asks Him 'How's the Baby?'

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—"Hello, papa; how's the baby?"

A parrot decided its ownership in the private chambers of Judge Wade, in the Chicago Avenue Court, by perching on the head of one of two women, who were fighting for the custody of the bird, and directing the foregoing query at the judge.

Judge Wade incidentally is a bachelor. He smiled good-naturedly. Spectators laughed. The two women giggled.

The bird was awarded to Mrs. Clara Gunn, who had been arrested on complaint of Mrs. Mary Krippels. Mrs. Gunn took the bird out of the basement of the Krippels home July 8. She testified the parrot was stolen from her four weeks ago.

Slit Trousers Man Mobbed by Newsboys

W. Lefflingwell Doak, of Pittsburg, a Martyr to the Cause of Fashion.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—A martyr to fashion, W. Leffingwell Doak, of the North Side fashionable set, was this afternoon mobbed by newsboys in Fifth avenue when he appeared in slit trousers.

Mr. Doak's trousers were of a light check material. The slit extended from the bottom of the legs on the outside to within about six inches of the knee. A glimpse of bright green hosiery, of the long feminine variety, was disclosed. Mr. Doak carried a light bamboo cane and a handkerchief was tucked in the cuff of his right sleeve. He was the first follower here of the style predicated at the National Convention of Tailors at Cedar Point, Ohio, last week.

Doak bore the clamorings of the boys until they began to kick him in the shins. He called for a policeman, and when one appeared the boys scattered. Doak took a car, announcing that he would go right home and change his clothes.

$350 for a Dress Held Not Too Much

Mrs. John Francis Yawger, Prominent Clubwoman, Thinks Sum Is Not Extravagant.

Should a woman be considered extravagant because she spends $350 for a dress? Mrs. John Francis Yawger, secretary of the Federation of New York Women's Clubs and member of many other civic and social organizations, does not think so. "When a woman spends large sums of money on her personal appearance she is reflecting as much credit on her husband as on herself," says Mrs. Yawger. "If her husband can afford to allow her to pay $350 for a dress the public has no call to describe the woman as extravagant."

'Dressed-Up Dude' Thrashed by Woman

Though Man Was Roughly Handled, Judge Fines Masher $25 in Addition.

JERSEY CITY, Aug. 9.—"The women of Jersey City must be protected from dressed-up dudes, who insult them in the street," yesterday said Judge O'Brien, in imposing a $25 fine upon Irving Bendar, of No. 112 Mercer street, Jersey City.

In this case it was the defendant who needed protection. His eye was discolored, his nose swollen and his lip cut, the result of his encounter with Ms. Viola Brophy, of No. 401 Ocean avenue, Jersey City, whom he had accosted.

LIVE LORD JOINS IN A REAL PLOT OF GAIETY GIRLS

Film Play Proves a Success, but London Is Startled Because It Contains an Idea.

By ALAN DALE.
Special Correspondent of The Sunday American.

LONDON, July 25.—There's a real lord in the production of "The Girl on the Film" at the Gaiety Theater. He is programmed as Arthur Wellesley, but in real life he is Lord Langan, and—"a charming chap," as they say over here. I mention this circumstance, you see, conspicuously, because it's good to get anything real in musical comedy, even a lord. But the "nobility" can do no better than stick to George Edwardes. He not only provides brides for the nobility, but he gets the nobility into his cast.

Lord Langan seems to be a pleasant young man. Nobody could possibly guess that he is more than the program says he is. It is a great thing to be able to conceal one's nobility, isn't it? Mr. Wellesley does it. He is blithe and debonair, and he wears evening clothes, with a gray stripe down the trousers. Perhaps a gray stripe down the trousers is a secret emblem of nobility.

There is a plot in "The Girl on the Film"—a real, solid, substantial, made-in-Germany plot—and this is so unusual that George Edwardes provides a booklet for each person, setting forth his plot in narrative form. You get so in the habit of "dropping in" at any old time to a George Edwardes show that you never dream of a plot. Why a plot? Lest you should miss this one, Mr. George Edwardes places it under your very eyes, as it were. It begins like this: "Max Daly (Mr. George Grossmith), manager, author and actor, is preparing a new play for the cinema theaters, under the title of 'Napoleon and the Miller's Daughter,' in which he is to represent Napoleon. His manageress and leading comedienne is Miss Euphemia Knox (Miss Connie Ediss)." Simple, isn't it? Almost guilelessly Gaiety!

The musical comedy is rather interesting, because it deals with the cinema business, which, as you know, IS quite a business. A "Vioscope" company arrives, and arrangements are made for taking the film of the picture drama, "Napoleon and the Miller's Daughter." You assist at the making of the film, and in the last act you see the very film cinema'd that you've watched in the making. This struck me as a mighty good idea and quite a novelty for a musical show. In fact, I've heard many people declare that they didn't care overweeningly for "The Girl on the Film," and I attribute this to the fact that it contains an idea. How is it that a musical comedy dares to contain an idea?

Moreover, this film-taking business contains the plot. The leading lady, who is to play the miller's daughter, throws up her part, and Freddy, the heroine, takes her place and is recognized later by an irate father. Freddy is a very pretty girl, disguised as a boy, so—you see your Gaiety! I apologize for even suggesting as much as I have done of the plot. But I felt it was me dooty, inasmuch as "The Girl on the Film" is novel.

It is almost sauerkrautishly German in its presentment of sponsors—"from the German Rudolf Bernauer and Rudolf Schanzer, with music by Walter Kollo. Willy Bredschneider and Albert Stromay!" Poor George Edwardes, who has to make a bluff of doing something English for English people, heads all these names with "A" musical farce by James T. Tanner." The music is not as good as the plot. It is not epoch-making by any means, but rather pleasant and enervating, as it were. It was being done in Berlin while I was there as the "Flimzauber." I carefully avoided it there.

Little Miss Emmy Wehlen, with whom I chatted recently, is very charming ideed as Freddy, the heroine, and is getting quite Gaietyfied. I prophesy that she will become a great favorite in London, because, like a clever girl, she seems to know exactly what London wants. Connie Ediss is all to the fore again with her inexhaustible, warranted-never-to-wear-out cockney dialect and all her old mannerisms. Then there is a somewhat handsome woman called Madeleine Seymour, who is of the large and languorous type. Charles Maude, a relative of Cyril; George Barrett, Robert Nainby and George Grossmith are the best of the men. Mr. Grossmith is an agile and as like himself as ever. All these people, if they dared to try and be like anybody else, would be horribly unrecognized. If you once make a hit at the Gaiety you are O. K. for life, provided you never try to do anything different. Novelty and versatility are fatal. You must be yourself until you fall by the wayside.

It's a nice performance, take it all in all, and I'm bound to say I was agreeably surprised, for I had heard that it was not a nice performance. You see, it had a plot to contend with, and in London they are used to aimless philandering. Also, it is German, and English is, of course, more popular.

There was an "ad" on the program that amused me a lot. Really, they are as "ad"-ridden and indiscriminate in London as they are in New York. This was the ad: "So-and-So, Inquiry Agent to the Nobility and Gentry, intrusted with divorce and delicate negotiations in all parts of the world. Go to him if blackmailed, or in difficulties." I thought that almost whimsically amusing.

But "The Girl on the Film" is better than some of the Gaiety Girls, and it seems to have caught on here.

Prince John Is Infant Terrible of Royal Family Finds Dark Secret of Peeress' Peerless Curls

COPYRIGHT INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

Youngest Son of King George Is Fear and Joy of Monarch's Household.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—A British prototype of that well-known pair of juvenile stars, the Katzenjammer Kids, is nobody less than Prince John, the youngest son of King George of England. The young Prince is the infant terrible of that tight little island, and mothers and fathers are discussing his widely heralded pranks with horror or with glee, according to the varied temperament of mothers and fathers.

The last story is the best. The newspapers have told it, and it must be so, that a certain lady of high degree was invited to have tea with Queen Mary. It was a pleasant occasion, indeed, taking tea with the Queen.

But when the peeress arose from the table she discovered with horror that golden ringlets of hair, ringlets that had been highly praised by friends and sung by poets as her chiefest beauty, were lying on the floor at the back of her chair.

The Prince, investigating the beautiful ringlets, found out what had been lost to the discriminating eyes of friends and poets. The ringlets came off too easily.

That is only one story. The other day he told his nurse, without so much persiflage, to go to a certain place where snow is unknown. The nurse, instead, went to the Queen with her complaint, and the royal mother ordered her son to apologize. He did. It was a royal apology.

"You needn't go," said he to the nurse.

The boy Prince is very democratic, and when offered his choice of outings he selects visits to public parks, donkey rides, elbow brushing with boys and girls of the middle and lower classes.

The two other sons of the King of England, Prince Henry and the Prince of Wales, are comparatively staid youths. Henry is going soon to Eton, where he will live the life of the ordinary English schoolboy. The Prince of Wales will join a cavalry regiment, with sorrow in his 19-year-old heart that he can not rear a mustache.

HEART IS STARTED AFTER VICTIM DIES

French Physician Tells How Action of Organ Was Resumed by Massage Treatment.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Dr. Bouchon, following in the footsteps of Dr. Carrel, recently succeeded in reviving the normal action of the heart ten minutes after death. In a paper which he will read at the next meeting of the Academy of Medicine Dr. Bouchon says:

"After a motor car accident I was called in and immediately perceived that the victim had been killed instantaneously. Despite my assurance that there was no doubt as to his death, the friends of the victim insisted that a desperate attempt should be made at resuscitation, and about ten minutes after the last breath I decided upon a surgical operation having diagnosed traumatic rupture of the heart.

"I opened the thorax and in 50 seconds laid the heart bare. I immediately found about a pint of blood in the pericardium and a heart wound about two and one-half inches long on the inner surface of the left ventricle. After suture, I proceeded to apply my method of reviving heart action.

"After filling all the cardiac cavities with a special organic liquid, I made a rapid tacheotomy and introduced oxygen by the tracheal tube, while my assistant performed artificial respiration tractions.

"I then began alternate auricular massage of the heart, and at the end of about a minute I clearly perceived that the heart had resumed tonicity, and, to my great surprise, it continued to contract by its own true action.

"Radical pulsation then became perceptible, and after I had closed the thoracic flap the heart continued to contract for 35 minutes. At the end of this time the contractions suddenly ceased, and all subsequent efforts to re-establish them were in vain."

High though the remuneration was, Mr. Bourchier found the task not so easy as he had expected it would be. He complains that he had to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning in order to catch the proper light, and that the necessity of waiting about in costume for hours was most unpleasant.

JAPANESE PLAN TO MAKE TOKIO BUSINESS CITY

Mayor Would Have Capital Become Industrial Center of the Empire in Near Future.

Special Cable to The American.

TOKIO, Aug. 9.—A bigger and busier industrial Tokio is the dream of Baron Sakatani, Mayor of the capital of the Japanese Empire. Osaka, great industrial city to the south, has made giant strides as a world port, and Mayor Sakatani is anxious that Tokio should show more rivalry to Osaka, which he calls the Manchester of Japan.

The Baron is convinced that China offers a great field for Japanese enterprise, and that the commercial development of Tokio is necessary so that Japan may take advantage of this field. Manchuria and Korea also loom up as possibilities for increased Japanese commerce, but in order to get this trade Tokio must devise some more convenient means of transportation than by Kobe or Tsuruga.

Would Open New Port.

The first step, the Mayor thinks, should be the opening of a new port at Nayoyetsu, in Echigo, north of Tokio. In its commercial development Tokio suffers from the disadvantage of higher wages and more extravagant habits of living. Tokio has been a city of consumption rather than of production, and it is the national center of ease and pleasure.

"Everything comes to Tokio," Mayor Sakatani says, "but seldom is anything sent from Tokio elsewhere. The disadvantages to be overcome are the high cost of fuel and labor. If Tokio is to secure the Chinese field for her manufactures, we will have to improve our system of water communication and settle various phases of the local labor question."

Since the revolution in China the demand for foreign manufactures has grown enormously, and Japan should be in a position to take her share, according to Mayor Sakytani. An important step to that end is the making of Tokio a greater commercial and industrial center and cultivation of the friendship of China by promoting mutual understanding between the merchants of both countries.

Explore for Colony.

Scrutiny of the Pacific coast of North and South America and the South Sea Islands for the promotion of productive colonization, is the announced object of the Japan Exploration Society, recently formed for the general purpose of inaugurating Japanese exploration.

The first expedition will leave in September for a two years' cruise on a 115-ton schooner. The course for the cruise includes the Izu and Bonin Islands, the South Sea Islands, the coasts of Brazil and Chile and the Pacific shores of North and south America. The schooner will then visit Cuba and the coast of Africa, and later make her way through the Mediterranean Sea. On the homeward trip she will touch at several points in India and Australia. S. Takeda, a graduate of the Japanese Nautical College and a seasoned sailor, will be the captain of the little vessel.

The Exploration Society is composed of a number of influential Japanese and it has the support of Fleet Admiral Ito.

ROME, Aug. 9.—There was a bad slump in this week in the market for old coins, which has been very active, owing to the interest taken by King Victor Emmanuel.

In digging a trench here for a sewer, a laborer struck and broke a large clay pot. A stream of coins poured out. He filled his pockets and ran away, but was caught.

Altogether there were 7,600 coins of the early consular period, dating back about 2,500 years, and all well preserved.

AVIATOR LATEST SUITOR OF FAIR IRISH PEERESS

London Society Is Interested in Hamel's Attempt to Win Heart of Lady Victoria Pery.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Whether an engagement caps the romance of Lady Victoria Pery, the fascinating daughter of the Earl and Countess of Limerick, and Gustav Hamel, the aviator, remains to be seen, but the mother publicly smiles on the young flying man and the progress of the courtship is watched with interest.

During the spring the peer's daughter went to London to fly and the good looking Hamel escorted Lady Victoria cloudwards for $25. Soon afterward, society was mildly thrilled to see Hamel in the train of Lady Limerick and her daughter at many smart balls.

Lady Limerick invariably asked for invitations for Hamel and he was always seen dancing and supping with the mother and daughter. Little serious import was placed on the strange combination until the last night of the opera. A prominent box party at Covent Garden comprised Lady Victoria and Hamel in front, with Lady Limerick chaperoning beamingly in the background.

Since then gossip has engaged the young people, but no announcement is forthcoming from the family.

Lady Victoria has been one of the most conspicuous girls in society since her debut. In one year she was engaged twice; once to Duke San Antona and afterward to the Hon. Luke White, Lord Annaly's son. Both engagements were abandoned and the Irish beauty continued her career of heart breaking.

Young Marquis Still Loves Daisy Markham

Northampton, Who Paid Actress $250,000 Heart Balm, Writes Letters That Shock Family.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—The actions of the young Marquis of Northampton, who recently paid Daisy Markham, actress, $250,000 as a balm for her wounded affections, is giving his noble relatives a great deal of concern of late.

It is an open secret among members of his family that the Marquis is still in love with the young actress.

A few days after his refusal to bid her good-bye in the high court the day of the trial he sent her a note bearing the seal of Northampton, which was full of good wishes and hopes for her future and profuse apologies for his apparent ill treatment. He impressed on her that what he had done had been due to great pressure and was not dictated by his heart.

According to one report current here, he has been meeting the actress, but the young woman declined to renew their former friendship. It is known that three weeks ago he surprised and shocked his sister, Lady Loch, by announcing that he intended to rent the old family estates and give up society for three years.

FRANCIS JOSEPH BEST LINGUIST OF ALL RULERS

Austrian Monarch Speaks Eleven Languages Well—Emperor William Ranks Second.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.
Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Statistics just published here by an investigator show that Francis Joseph, of Austria, is the greatest linguist of all reigning sovereigns. He speaks eleven languages fluently. They are German, French, Hungarian, Czech, Polish, Servian, Croatian, Ruthenian, Dalmatian, Roumanian and Italian. All these living languages he needs for practical purposes within his own patchwork empire.

It was in view of preparing him for his high position that as a boy 70 years ago he was taught the tongues of all his subjects. He also acquired a gentleman's knowledge of Greek, Hebrew and Latin.

German Emperor Second.

The German Emperor comes second as a royal linguist, being master of German, English, French, Russian, Polish and Latin. He holds, however, that the German is the only language in which to express a great mission.

Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria knows all the Slavic dialects, but not many languages. He speaks French, English, German and Russian. King Peter of Servia is similarly equipped.

King Nicholas of Montenegro is not a linguist. He has, however, a sufficiently liberal education to have been able to act as tutor for his own five daughters and two sons. The Greek King Constantine's linguistic attainments are not of a high order, although he speaks French, English and German in a halting way.

Alfonso Speaks Only Three.

King Alfonso of Spain was educated like an English prince, more attention being given to sports than languages. He speaks French, English and German. The Czar of Russia is not much better equipped except in Slavic dialects.

The three worst linguists are the Pope, the King of Italy and King George of England. Pius X never expected to be Pope and was not trained for the position. King Victor Emmanuel has not the language faculty. King George thought that the education of an English gentleman consisted in being able to read Horace and ride to hounds. Had he not the venerable authority of Oxford for this?

How to Lose Your Tan, Freckles or Wrinkles

(From Woman's Tribune.)

A day's motoring, an afternoon on the tennis ground or golf links, a sunbath on the beach or exposure on a sea trip, often brings on a deep tan or vivid crimson or, more perplexing still, a vigorous crop of freckles. A very necessary thing then is mercolized wax, which removes tan, redness or freckles quite easily. It literally peels off the affected skin—just a little at a time, so there's no hurt or injury. As the skin comes off in almost invisible flaky particles, no trace of the treatment is shown. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at your druggist's and use this nightly as you would cold cream, washing it off mornings. In a week or so you will have an entirely new skin, beautifully clear, transparent and of a most delicate whiteness.

Wrinkles, so apt to form at this season, may be easily and quickly removed by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 ounce dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pint. This is not only a valuable astringent, but has a beneficial tonic effect also.—(Adv.)

GENERAL DEVELOPMENT THEME OF JOE BEAN IN NEW SET OF EXERCISES

If You Weary of Special Treatment for Abdomen, Back, Waist and So on, Here Are Some Fine New Stunts That Will Help You All Over.

By JOE BEAN.

SO far in my little specifications for building men, I have prescribed exercises that would take care of and improve some particular part of the body, showing just how that exercise would do the work and explaining its benefits.

And now there appears to be a growing demand among people who know me and are interested in my work for some general exercises that will be of universal benefit to the digestion, the muscular system, and, in fact, to the entire anatomy.

So I am going to give my readers a series of articles on general exercises.

At that, it must be understood that in taking abdominal exercises, or waist exercises, or back exercises, the part specifically brought into play is by no means the only part benefited. The arms and the legs, and frequently the neck, all profit by the strenuous work imposed on the waist or other sections.

As regards typically general exercises, there are many games that might come well under that head. Home work—pottering about the garden, mowing the lawn, and all that sort of thing—also may be regarded as general exercises.

A "Setting Up" Drill.

Following is a list of excellent general exercises, of the "setting up" style so much favored in the army and navy as a means of keeping the men in fine trim from head to heels. I don't know any set of exercises that will prove of more benefit to the entire body than these.

No. 1. With the hands on the hips crouch on the left leg, bending the knees and then extending the right leg to the front, keeping the body rigidly erect and maintaining the balance by carefully applied muscular effort. At first you may have to hold on to something, but that should be abandoned as soon as possible. Always bend the knees as far as possible before straightening out the right leg, and in rising bring that leg back to the bending position and then rise to the full height again. This should be repeated, extending the left leg an equal number of times, after which the exercises should be alternated. It will be sure to result in soreness of the thighs and hips at first, as no man regularly applies any such exercise as this except in this way. It's a great thing for bodily poise and balance.

Take a "Full Squat."

No. 2. Bend the knees as far as possible, to the "full squat" position, it is called, and at the same time raise both arms high above the head. Then rise to the first position, lowering the arms as you straighten the legs. This is fine for practically every set of muscles in the legs, feet and ankles. Also, it expands the chest, and the balancing necessary to accomplish the feat brings out much development of the muscles in the stomach, waist, back and shoulders. Even the neck comes in for its part, holding the head erect and not permitting it to bob forward, as you will find it inclined to do.

No. 3. The same as No. 2, except that the arms are extended horizontally while the "squat" is being accomplished. It is peculiarly adapted to the development of the chest, arms and shoulders, also the back and neck muscles. That part of the drill may be taken standing up, but in conjunction with the "squat" it is a far better all-around exercise. In all these exercises be sure to hold the body rigidly erect, and strive to acquire "form" and grace in the work. The head should not be ducked or bobbed forward; the shoulders should not be humped or drooped, and there should be a certain snap and style about the whole thing that is not only good to look at, but also aids greatly in the development.

And Some Jumping Here.

No. 4. Start in the usual position, arms at sides, heels together, toes turned slightly outward. Jump the feet apart, about three feet, landing on the balls of the feet, and at the same time swing the arms outward and upward. Then with another jump bring the feet together and swing the arms down to the sides, resuming the first position. Repeat about 20 times. It's great for the legs, trunk and shoulders and makes the blood dance in the arteries in a very comforting manner. Also, it is fine for the breathing apparatus.

DILLON TO BOX KLAUS IN TWELVE-ROUND BOUT

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 9.—Jack Dillon yesterday accepted terms for a 12-round bout with Frank Klaus at Boston, August 26. These men have been recognized generally as the best of the middleweights during the last year. Klaus defeated Dillon in San Francisco, the bout being a 20-round affair, and Dillon squarely beat the Pittsburg champion here in a 10-round bout last May.

JOE BUSH FIELDS WELL.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—One thing Leslie Joe Bush, of the Athletics, can do just a little better than anything else except pitch and sing is cover first on awkward hits to McInnes. He fields his position as well as any hurler in the American League.

UMPIRES OFFER AID TO M'NULTY IN LEGAL FIGHT

Many Officials Willing to Render Financial Assistance Against Jack O'Connor.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—The ever-present "baseball war"—manager-player vs. umpire—may be blasted should ex-Arbitrator Jack McNulty win the $35,000 assault suit against Manager Jack O'Connor, of the St. Louis Federal club. Umpires all over the country have rend news items of the O'Connor-McNulty run-in on June 28. Said officials also have learned of the heavy damage suit filed by McNulty against the Federal League of St. Louis, charging that the blows delivered by O'Connor have permanently retired him from the national pastime.

The indicator handlers, according to a statement by Jack McNulty, further averred by his attorney, George Burleigh, have offered McNulty financial assistance in fighting his cause for the small fortune to pay for the punches whipped over by the Federal manager. The major league arbitrators, backed by umpires in the minor and semi-pro associations, combined in subscribing a large sum to benefit the cause of McNulty.

The men behind the plate, in dire sympathy with the former field judge, have written McNulty many letters, requesting him to accept financial aid. But McNulty or Burleigh will not deny or affirm the query that they have granted the request.

Verdict Will Be Important.

McNulty, as far as publicity is concerned, is as much in the dark as a cave without a light. Jack refuses to be interviewed. His spirits seem crushed, while the old happy-go-lucky greeting formerly delivered by Mac has passed to anywhere but McNulty.

When asked regarding the aid offered by his associates in the profession, McNulty replied: "You've got the dope. Why should I say anything?" That was all. McNulty positively refuses to announce the names of his non-invited rescuers, but from a little slip it is learned that such prominent judgment passers as "Hank" O'Day, "Silk" O'Loughlin, Klem, Rigler and other big arena caverters are in direct sympathy with McNulty's pursuit for justice.

Should McNulty be returned the victor in the $35,000 damage suit, it is generally supposed that managers, whether owning teams in a third league or in the big stadium, will act a bit more carefully before attempting to down the reign of the field officials.

Baseball mixups between managers, players and umpires date back to Noah's Ark. The most recent bit of thrills to greet St. Louis fans was the Stovall-Ferguson affair. George was barred from the field for a lengthy period and fined $100. In 1912 Klem and Roger Bresnahan had a fistic encounter.

Magee in Mixup.

Again, in 1911, Sherwood Magee and Finneran exchanged wallops. Mr. Umpire received a few knocks which deprived him of several teeth, while the triumphant boxer paid for his actions by the usual publicity, suspension and diminishing of the bank roll.

It is not always the team managers who go after an umpire's scalp and life. Wrathed players seldom fail to take their inning with the arbitrator should the official seemingly rob the athlete of a point. The fact that the umpires have come to the assistance of McNulty proves that the fraternity of field Pooh-bahs is a most outreaching body.

Should the preliminary tactics favor the former fall guy, there's a good chance for the war on umpires to cease forever.

McNulty firmly believes that he's through with the game forever. Suffering from severe headaches and intense internal pain, Mac declares he will never be the same jolly fellow as of old.

SUPERBAS KEEP STORK BUSY.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 9.—Zach Wheat, Carlisle Smith and Herb Moran, of Brooklyn, have all become proud fathers since the season opened. Taking it all around, the ball players have kept Dr. Stork busy this year.

AND NOW SOME EXERCISES THAT WILL BENEFIT ALL PORTIONS OF MUSCULAR SYSTEM AT ONCE

NO. 1. Hands on hips, heels together. Bend the knees to the "full squat," and then extend the right leg to the front. Draw back the extended leg and rise on both legs to first position. Same exercise with left leg extended. Then alternate.

NO. 2—Hands at sides, bend the knees in the "full squat," at the same time raising the arms above the head. Resume first position, maintaining a rigid balance of the body, head and neck.

NO. 3. Hands at sides, heels together, toes out. Come to "full squat," raising arms rigidly to a horizontal position. Rise to first position, lowering arms smartly.

NO. 4. Hands at sides, heels together. Jump the feet apart about a yard, lighting on the balls of the feet, and swing the arms up sharply from the sides. With another jump, bring the heels together again and bring the arms down to the sides at the same time.

GEORGE DIXON BEST FIGHTER, SAYS NAUGHTON

Bob Fitzsimmons Was a Close Second, in the Opinion of Dean of Experts.

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Now it is a "fight fan" living in Windsor, Ont., who wishes to draw me out on certain points.

In a letter dated July 15, he says: "Seeing in last Sunday's paper that you answered a question put by some fight fan as to who, in your opinion, was the most perfect Australian boxer, I wish to ask who you consider was the greatest fighter of all time. If you do not care to answer that, would you please state who you consider the greatest negro fighter of all time?"

I'll do the best I can, and to show you I am not inclined to shirk the issue I will answer both your questions.

It so happens that in replying to the question I reply to both, for the greatest fighter who ever lived, according to my idea, was a negro. And his name was George Dixon.

It will be as well for you to remember, Mr. Fight Fan, that this is merely an expression of individual opinion. There are no standards by which these questions can be worked out and settled with mathematical exactness. Nor is there anything on the face of the earth on which both laymen and experts disagree more than the question of merit in pugilists. This because fighting appeals to the emotions. It arouses enthusiasm and creates heroes and ideals.

I have no doubt there is still in existence a smattering of very old-timers who will snort at the idea of Tom Sayers and Ned O'Baldwin and Donnelly and Cooper being passed over in a discussion of this kind for a slim-limbed yellow skin like little Dixon. But he is my choice. And I feel that Bob Fitzsimmons runs him a close second.

* * *

I NAME George Dixon because I believe he triumphed over a greater number of formidable opponents than any other man I ever heard of.

Some fighters had their run for the championship goal when the men they had to cope with were on the downward grade. This was notably the case with Jim Jeffries. He defeated Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Corbett and Peter Jackson when each of these was well past his prime in a fighting sense. Whether or not he could have beaten them had he met them at their best I do not know.

I do know, however, that the world was raked and scraped for opponents for little Chocolate Dixon. He met the best men of the various fight-fostering countries when they held the championships of their various sections, and when it was made as clear as possible that there was nothing left in their own countries that could compare with them. And he went through them all like sunlight through a chink in a barn.

The same arguments apply largely in the case of Fitzsimmons. Taking his opponents man by man he can not show so big an army of worthy conquests as Dixon, probably, but old Bob overcame more handicaps than any other fighter I have knowledge of. For this reason I consider he falls very little short of George Dixon in point of distinction as the world's greatest fighter.

* * *

HERE is one fired at me from a point nearer home:

"How does Willie Ritchie compare with the lightweight champions who preceded him?"

Up to date he does not begin to compare in the slightest. Ritchie is still young and lacking in experience, however, and may loom up as more of a world-figure in pugilism when he has pitted himself against men like Tommy Murphy, Freddy Welsh and Leach Cross. Wolgast, who preceded, as a champion was a wonderful fighter bfore appendicitis marked him for its own. His handling of Battling Nelson on Richmond Field was something to live in memory even if little Ad had never accomplished anything else.

Battling Nelson in his prime was an interesting performer. And it was his negative qualities that made him worth while. There never was a man within twenty pounds of his weight who could stand such rough usage and keep pressing steadily forward. He wasn't the most gainly fighter of his class by long odds, but his powers of assimilation covered a multitude of defects.

* * *

JOE GANS was a thorough workman, and a fight of him in action was as great a treat as a student of boxing could desire. He stepped around in a soft-footed way and was never out of position. His manner of ending it all with a downward clip of the right, delivered without drawing back the elbow, was well worth the price of admission.

KELLY AND SHEEHAN SIGN FOR TEN-ROUND FIGHT

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—"Spike" Kelly and Tommy Sheehan, Chicago welterweights, yesterday were matched to fight ten rounds in Superior, Wis., on Labor Day night. They agreed to weigh 145 at 6 o'clock. Fred Gilmore signed the papers for Kelly, who has been idle since he beat Billy Walters at Kenosha.

CUBS BUY NEW OUTFIELDER.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Outfielder Charlie Stewart was purchased by the Cubs yesterday. He comes from the Indianapolis American Association club, and is considered a promising youngster. He will report next week.

KNOCKOUT OF LORE WAS ONE OF RING'S QUEEREST

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—Not a few strange knockouts have been recorded since boxing was first inaugurated, but that one at New Orleans recently when Frankie Russell was given a K. O. victory over Johnny Lore, of New York, was as queer as any.

Perhaps it was the first time in ring history that a man was counted out while outside the ring. Lore was dropped twice by Russell and the next time was pushed through the ropes. His feet caught on the lower rope as he went through, and that much of him remained in the ring, but his body was in the laps of ringside spectators.

Referee Burke started counting the minute Lore's body shot through the ropes. At the count of five Lore was on his feet and at the seven count he had partly clambered in the ring again. He got to his feet and inside the ring just in time to hear the cry of "10 and out" given by the referee.

REDS AFTER HAGEMAN.

DENVER, Aug. 9.—The Cincinnati Reds are after Pitcher Casey Hageman and Second Baseman Hank Butcher, of the local club. Neither Magnate Jimmy McGill nor Manager Jack Hendricks are in any haste to name a price upon these performers.

MAURICE M'LOUGHLIN TOOK UP TENNIS AT AGE OF 13

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Maurice E. McLoughlin, who has made complete the supremacy of the Californians on the lawn tennis courts and rounding out his career by returning the Dwight F. Davis international challenge cup to this country, is a thoroughly representative American player. He is but 23 years of age and he fulfilled his brilliant promises by winning the All-Comers national championship at Newport last August.

McLoughlin was born at Carson City, Nev., January 7, 1890. It was when 12 years of age that he took up the game in which he has won the highest American honors by taking both the national singles and doubles in the same year. This has not happened since 1905, when Beals C. Wright scored on both titles. In the doubles, having Holcombe Ward as his partner, McLoughlin early in his career began to win championships, beginning with the junior titles in San Francisco. In 1905 he entered the California State championship, but did not win an important title until 1907, when he took the San Francisco city championship, and from that time on his rise has been rapid.

PITCHER MARTINA SUSPENDED.

BEAUMONT, TEXAS, Aug. 9.—Joe Martina, pitcher for the Beaumont team, has been suspended for the rest of the season and fined $50 for his indifferent work in a recent game.

Cal Delaney Breaks With Jimmy Dunn

Fighter and Manager Have Hot Argument and Decide to Break Company.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—Cal Delaney, Cleveland's best featherweight outside of championship company, and Jimmy Dunn are no longer boxer and manager. They have severed business and social relations for all time. Henceforth it's one road for one and a different highway for the other.

The climax to the partnership was the leading feature of the Put-in-Bay's gay and sumptuous celebration. That's when the split occurred and where Dunn and Delaney had a feverish argument that lasted several minutes and the result was that Jim refused to have anything more to do with the West Side blonde boy. He claimed that Delaney was becoming more and more unmanageable. Cal debated that he was not a boy any longer and refused to be bossed.

JOHNSON WILL DRAW $10,000 NEXT SEASON

Walter's Contract Expires in October—Little Trouble Expected in Signing Twirler for 1914.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The task of signing Sir Walter Johnson, the famed flinger of the local American League team, will be up to Manager Griffith after October, 1913. But the job will not be a big one, in the opinion of those who know Griffith and Johnson.

Right now Johnson is serving the last stanza of his three-year contract with the Senators. He signed the document at the beginning of the 1911 season, after a misunderstanding with James R. McAleer, then manager of the Capital crew.

* * *

JOHNSON is drawing $31,000 for three years' work. He signed that contract after he had reported to the training camp, returned to his Coffeyville, Kans., home and then rejoined the team in the East after the season had opened.

Johnson's value to the Washington club is generally rated more than Ty Cobb's usefulness to the Detroit team. But Johnson will hardly draw down $12,500, the salary Tyrus is alleged to be receiving from the Tigers this season.

* * *

IT wouldn't be surprising if Johnson is slipped a contract calling for $10,000 salary for 1914, or one for $30,000 for service during the next three years. Sir Walter is worth almost any price he asks.

It is Johnson's disposition, as well as his wonderful speed and curves, that makes him a valuable member of the Washington team. The local players have it sized up pretty well, too. As one member of the party said:

* * *

"AS long as Johnson is a member of the team there isn't another player on it who is going to get swellheaded. He's the big noise and is modest about it. For that reason no other fellow on our club, no matter how good he is, or what he does, will have a chance to crow."

POISONING FROM FOOD

Every Bite May Poison—All Could Be Methuselahs If We Did Not Shorten Life by Self-Poisoning.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system. This is termed Autotoxemia, or Self-Poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition result. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and bowels, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and with the consciousness that your health is safeguarded against any indiscretion in eating.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. No other liver medicine is equal to it; don't take the inferior substitute that may be offered. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT, 25c. If yours can not supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage prepaid.—(Advt.)

BIG THREE NOW HOVERING OVER SPORT WORLD

Tom McCarey, Ban Johnson and James E. Sullivan Are Big Powers in Athletic World.

DETROIT, Aug. 9.—Uncle Sam puts it over Russia in several ways. Not the least interesting fact to note, in this connection, is that whereas the most despotic of all great civilized governments has only one czar, the United States at present has no less than three.

First, we have Byron Bancroft Johnson, "Capital I" Ban, dictator in the baseball world; next we have James E. Sullivan, "First Person Singular" Jim, who makes us forget that a sporting goods concern controls our amateur sports; and of late we have Thomas McCarty, of Edwardsville and Los Angeles, "I'm There" Tom, who creates a new champion in pugilism whenever followers of boxing on the coast begin to dig a little reluctantly for their pocketbooks.

Sullivan and Johnson are too well known to need further exploitation, but the rise of McCarey to fame has not been accompanied by any fanfare. Thomas has been gaining notoriety as chief agitator of pugilism out in Los Angeles for six or more years.

His first big move was to bid for the Jeffries-Johnson fight. He next graduated into the clairvoyant world by predicting the downfall of Bat Nelson, a few months before it occurred.

But it 's only in the last two or three years that he has set himself up as a king maker. In this field, McCarey has now reached the stage where he can start a new championship contest regardless of the whether a living title holder is one of the principals.

* * *

M'CAREY did this twice and he's about to pull it again. He began by hanging up a championship belt in the bantamweight division for Monte Attell and Frankie Conley, the latter winning by a knockout. The new title didn't stick because the public had previously come to believe Johnny Coulon was the title holder.

Later, however, he put up a heavyweight championship belt, while Jack Johnson was till conscious and able to be about, without inviting that champion to compete. Lute McCarty won it and a lot of fame, and was on the verge of being recognized as the real thing, when his untimely end occurred at Calgary.

Now McCarney is going into championship making again. Although Johnny Coulon is still alive and is still the accepted titleholder in the bantamweight division, McCarney donated a diamond championship belt to Kid Williams for defeating the French champion, Charles Ledoux.

* * *

SOME class to McCarney's nerve, all right, especially as Eddie Campi has a look-in at the title. Nevertheless the conditions governing the donation of the new belt make for action in the boxing world and for less four-flushing on the part of future champions. The conditions governing the retention of the belt and title compel the holder to defend his honors not less than once every six months in a twenty-round fight.

Also McCarney has amputated another canker from the bantamweight situation in stipulating that 116 pounds ringside shall be the championship figure. Almost every fighter who has sought an engagement with Coulon has come to grief on the weight question. It is interesting to note, however, that McCarney's is the figure for which Coulon has nearly always held out.

* * *

M'CAREY'S attempt to create a new champion in the little men's division, regardless of the existence of a titleholder, will not meet with general approval, however. Coulon is one of the best liked little men in the game and until he resigns or is beaten many will decline to credit a successor.

BRANNIGAN WILL BATTLE MEXICAN IN LONG BOUT

NEWCASTLE, Aug. 9.—Jimmy Dime and Patsy Brannigan left last night for Denver, where, on August 11, Brannigan meets Benny Chavez, Western bantam, in a scheduled twenty-round bout.

Brannigan knocked Chavez out in six rounds in Trinidad, Colo., about three years ago, but the Western sports believe the Mexican has improved enough since to beat Dime's lad. The bout is for a side bet of $1,000.

Before returning home, Dime will get in touch with "Uncle" Tom McCarey, of the Pacific Coast Athletic Club, at Los Angeles, in reference to a bout on the coast between Brannigan and Campi, the native son who has been cleaning up generally on the aspirants for Coulon's crown. If satisfactory arrangements are made, Dime and Brannigan will proceed immediately to the coast.

STAR COLLEGE ATHLETE IS DISCOVERED BY NAPS

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—William ("Hiker") Joy, the Holy Cross pitcher, who joined the Naps, is one of the greatest all-around athletes who has ever been a member of the Naps. Pitching is one of his accomplishments in the realm of athletics.

Joy also played halfback on the varsity eleven, was a forward on the basket ball team and the crack sprinter and hurdler of the college. Incidentally, he was captain of all four teams in his senior year, 1912.

While pitching for his team he also batted in the clean-up position. His last football eleven won eight and lost three games, losing only to Harvard, Yale and Princeton. On the track he won a heat in the New England intercollegiate league games by sprinting in 10 1-5. He was barred from the final because of professionalism.

CATCHER HENRY OUT OF GAME.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—John Henry, Griffith's first-string catcher, will be out of the game for at least a week on account of an injury to his instep. He was struck by a batted ball Thursday.

JACKSON DOES BEST HITTING ON4DIAMONDS

Joe Does Best Clouting Playing on Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit and Boston Fields.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 9.—Joe Jackson has hit .400 or better on four diamonds this year, the fields being those of Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit and Boston. At home the Slugging Southerner up to last Wednesday had piled up an average of .441, in the Windy City his record was .419, and in Detroit and Boston it was an even .400. Jackson, on his visits to St. Louis, has walloped the sphere at a .303 clip; at the Polo Grounds his record is .333 and at Shibe Park it is .133.

The Clouting Clevelander, who ranked ninth in the competition for the Chalmers car last season and who is likely to rank higher this season if he keeps up his present timely stickwork, possibly would set a world's record for a batting percentage could he stay at home and bat only against the Washington pitcher. Jackson has torn off 16 safeties in the seven games the Senators have played in Cleveland this year and he only has been at the bat 23 times, the extremely high percentage of .634 being the result of his activities against Walter Johnson & Co. Jackson collected five hits in the two full games the Idaho Phenom pitched against the Naps in Cleveland and his percentage for the season against Sir Walter is .456.

JACKSON has hit at a .531 clip against the Browns on his home field, .471 against Boston, 412 against New York, .400 against Detroit, 296 against Chicago and .286 against Philadelphia. Up to last Monday he had made 40 runs and 79 hits in the Forest City and 24 tallies and 39 safeties on foreign diamonds. Of the 44 long wallops then to his credit, 28 were manufactured in Charles W. Somers' ball orchard and the rest in other parks.

* * *

Jackson has twice this year come to the bat with the bases full and emptied the sacks of all their inhabitants. The first cruel blow the Southerner struck was in the game of May 10 with the Boston Red Sox. Then he tripled against Charley Hall. The next day the Highlanders played the Naps and in the first inning Jackson hit for the circuit against Heinie Schulz, making two clean-up clouts for him in as many days. On April 30 Jackson drove in both the runs his team made in the game with Chicago which the Naps won, 2 to 1, and on May 19 he was responsible for three of his team's four tallies against Washington, this also being a Cleveland victory.

Jackson last season led his team in driving in runs and this season it looks as if he would again show the way to his mates. Thus far this season he has put the finishing touches to 58 counters, batting in 52 of these on safe hits, two on sacrifice flies and four on infield outs.

If Cleveland fans want to honor their eminent slugologist their attention is respectively called to the fact that on August 25 Jackson will celebrate his fourth major league birthday. The Naps will then be at home playing the Highlanders. Joe broke into the American League on August 25, 1908, playing with the Athletics against Cleveland in a game that the Naps won, 3 to 2. He made one hit off Rube Vickers in four times at bat and accepted three out of four chances in the field.

MATHEWSON IS GREATEST MAN IN BASEBALL

So Declare Newspaper Scribes at Recent Gathering Held in New York City.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—At an informal gathering of newspaper men in New York the other day the topic of baseball was being discussed. The name of Mathewson figured prominently in the conversation, as is inevitable whenever the national pastime is the theme. After most of the scribes had borne their testimony as to the personal and professional worth of "Big Six," an old baseball reporter put a cap on the eulogies by remarking:

"Matty isn't a mere baseball player —he's an institution."

That remarkable tribute was hailed with delight, as being a most apt explanation of the Giants' great twirler.

There are a number of stars in baseball at the present time who have made and are making a marvelous stand against the inroads of time. Prominent among these may be mentioned Hans Wagner, Napoleon Lajoie, Eddie Plank and Mordecai Brown.

But of them all Matty is putting up the most brilliant opposition to the ravages of the years. The best that the others are doing just now is holding their own. They are holding Father Time off at arm's length, but the old fellow is close enough to them to worry them in their playing. But in the case of Mathewson it is different. Instead of stopping to spar with the old gentleman with the scythe, he is going steadily on—improving his game—mastering his technique and acquiring the supreme artistry of the mound.

This year of 1913, which many had thought would mark the last of his active service, finds Mathewson again at the zenith of his prowess with a little added craftiness. He is an artist and all true artists never cease striving to improve their art—and they never cease loving it. Who can look upon the eager, smiling and boyish countenance of Matty as he stands in the box and say that he does not love the game?

The position he holds in the esteem of the baseball fans and the public at large, which, of course, is the same thing, is unique. If a vote were taken to-morrow to settle the question as to who is the most popular man in organized baseball, there is no doubt that Matty would carry the election by a large majority.

* * *

"WHAT would happen to McGraw?" asked this same old scribe, who had characterized Matty as an institution, "if he were to incontinently fire Mathewson after the manner of Murphy in giving old Mordecai Brown the gate?"

The consensus of opinion was that if McGraw did such a thing he might just as well lock up the Polo Grounds. That is just how close "Big Six" is to the hearts of the baseball public.

But there is no danger of John J. ever doing such a thing. In the first place he is not a Murphy in any corpuscle of his compact being, and in the second place Matty's art will continue in his head long after it has departed from his arm, and as a mere instructor he would be more valuable to McGraw than the average twirler is on the mound.

Why Is a Hard-Working Player? He Isn't---If He Loves the Game

By O. B. Keeler.

KNOCKING about with a professional ball club, you get one ear full after another concerning "work," "business," "toil," "drudgery," and so forth. And so on.

You might get the hunch that the athletes had set out from very early in their young lives determined to hammer out a living by working at baseball.

That is, you might get the hunch if you didn't travel with them more than one day, and never sat on the bench during a game, and never looked at a game very understandingly, anyway.

In that case you might feel sorry for the hard-working ball player, under contract providing that he must play in order to eat, but not play for any other club than the party of the second part, or whatever party the party of the second part shall assign him to play with.

A good many rather well-meaning and entirely sap-headed persons these days are wasting perfectly good sorrow over the assumed grievous lot of the toiling ball player.

They seem to get the idea that he is playing ball because he has to.

* * *

NOW, take it from one who has seen some little chapters in the life of a professional ball player, the said ball player is playing ball for money because he can make more money that way than he can any other way.

And, above all, he is playing ball because he likes to play ball.

* * *

I RECALL in particular one "Chick" Autrey, first baseman for St. Paul, in the American Association, and the least shade under big league caliber in hitting.

Chick is an extreme sample of the ball player who likes to play ball. When the club is at home, Chick is out on the field in uniform half an hour before his mates get to the clubhouse to dress, playing catch or batting up flies with any stray youngsters he can find about the lot.

* * *

Chick is the first one to start the regular practice. As soon as two or three of the other players get out on the field, Chick gets them lined up for the little bunting game—three or four arrayed in front of a batter, tossing him the ball, which he hits sharply back at them, when they chuck it at each other, under and over and from all sides.

Chick is the liveliest of the bunch, slapping the ball like a juggler; jumping, stretching, scooping—laughing like a kid most of the time.

Chick would practice four hours before the game, if anybody would keep him company.

In the game, he is at the opposition every moment. He is left-handed and fields the bag like Hal Chase—and in every move you read the snap and dash that can come only from a love of the game.

All around the circuit, Chick is known as "that St. Paul guy that loves to play baseball."

Frank Bowerman was the same way when he was with the Giants. Later, when in the Association, the grizzled veteran earned the name of "Young Mike" by his evident keen enjoyment of the sport and his stentorian vocal encouragement of his mates while the game was on.

* * *

A FINE example nearer home is Joe Agler. Joe never could work around that old first sack the way he plays around it. The class of the Southern League in fielding, Joe performs with a speed and dash that can spring only from a real joy in the game. Watch him, next time you go to see the Crackers play ball.

And see if you can imagine Joe as a mere hireling, plugging along to earn his daily bread with the same ambition as a man with a heavy hammer making little ones out of big ones.

Eight out of ten professional ball players enjoy the game of baseball in the same way a sunburned kid on a vacant lot enjoys playing the game. They would be playing baseball for fun if they weren't making a living at it.

Max Carey said of "Big Six" Mathewson the other day:

"Matty always looks as if he'd rather be out there pitching than doing anything else in the world. I never have seen him in a game when I didn't think of that. After thirteen years of baseball as a profession, baseball still is Mathewson's favorite sport."

* * *

I BELIEVE that goes for eight out of ten ball players, certainly for the ball players who are the most successful. They don't "slow up" quickly, these men who love the game. "Slowing up" may be due in some cases to failing legs or dimming eyes. But in other cases it is due to getting stale in the game, because the first incentive is gone—the keen edge worn off.

But take it from the ball players themselves, if you please, no man ever set out deliberately to earn a living by working at baseball.

Every single professional ball player in this country started out in the beginning for one and the same reason.

And that reason was because he loved to play ball.

RITCHIE'S FATHER STAYS IN CHURCH WHEN WILLIE HAS RING ENGAGEMENT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 5.—Willie Ritchie's father, who is down here with his son on an automobile tour, has never seen Willie in a ring.

Mr. Steffens (Willie Ritchie's real name is Geary Steffen), is of a devoutly religious nature and has very serious doubts as to the propriety of prize fighting. As long as Willie is in the business, however, the old man wants him to win.

Whenever Willie is in the ring, his father is in church. He won't go to the ringside for fear of seeing his boy hurt and he can't stay at home with anxiety for society; so he always goes to church and remains there until the battle is over.

MINOR MANAGERS ARE AFTER CAL'S CASTOFFS

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Some one called Manager Callahan, of the Chicago White Sox, the "David Harum" of organized baseball after Frank Chance complained that he was "stung" in the Hal Chase-Borton-Zelder deal, but despite that act minor league managers were in Boston recently to try their hand at swapping with the White Sox leader.

White Tells How He Expects to Win Bout

Whitney Says He Will Make Rushing Attack

By Left Hook.

"I AM out to win the lightweight title," said Charley White yesterday, "but I have a tough 'bird' to beat in Frank Whitney here next Wednesday night. Of course I expect to win, but I fully realize what a worthy opponent I am going to be stacked up against in the ring at the Auditorium-Armory.

"Do you know that up around Chicago all the experts look on Whitney as one of the toughest trial horses in the game. He is a hard man to hit, can take an awful mess of punishment and at the same time is so awkwardly clever that he is hard to make a showing against.

"I saw Frank work with Packey McFarland in McConnell's Gymnasium last Wednesday. Why he gave Packey an awful time for the four rounds they worked.

"After the session was over Packey came over to me and said: 'Charley, old pal, that young fellow will give you a rough voyage when you meet in Atlanta, or I'm a bum judge of a scrapper.'

"Packey didn't have to tell me that. I was a spectator, although Whitney didn't know it.

"But, do you know, I am glad that I saw Whitney work out against McFarland. I got a good line on his style. And I am going to tell you just how I intend to beat him.

"Frank is a rushing fighter. Well, let him start leading and I will counter so fast that he won't know where he is at. I believe that I can pick off or stop any of his leads and counter so hard that he will be willing to let me do some of the heavy work before the scrap has gone over three or four rounds."

With that Charley left us to go back to his training.

WHITE hadn't eased his way out of the office over ten or fifteen minutes before Whitney came in. When he was told that White had seen him work out against McFarland Frank laughed.

"So he thinks that he can stop me from leading and rushing, eh?" remarked the 'Fighting Carpenter.' "Well, I'll make him travel faster than he ever traveled before. I have never been floored yet, and if Mr. White thinks that he can stop me I'll bet him my end of the purse on it. And take it from me, I will make a rushing scrap of it, too.

"I'll stick on top of him and keep flaying away with so much speed that he'll wish he was back in that dear old Chicago. He is going to pick off my leads and counter? That's what he said. I should worry. He will have a fine time picking 'em off.

"I was never in better condition in my life and I'll keep going at top speed from the first round to the end. And the end——

"Well, I've got a hunch that I am going to put over a decisive punch. The mill may go the entire ten rounds; but not if I can help it.

"All I ask of White to do is to stand toe to toe with me right in the center of the ring, and if he does I'll guarantee that I'll prove I have a better kick than the one he possesses.

"He says he is going to be the next lightweight champion? Say, I have got that same hunch about myself."

UNUSUAL RULES AND PLAYS IN BASEBALL

(No. 5.) By J. W. Heisman.

NOWADAYS no substitute can get in the game without first reporting to the umpire, and the umpire first announcing to the public and the scorers who the newcomer is and whose place he takes. This rule is all right, but it has only been in existence a couple of years.

Once upon a time, a long, long time ago, the umpire in a big league game had the time of his life in a dispute over this very point with the great and only Mike Kelly. The "King" wasn't catching that day, on account of a bad finger. He always hated to ornament the bench when playing was going on, and as the game was a close one, he was having considerable difficulty in maintaining his patience: in fact, he was looking for most any provocation to jump into the game.

Directly there went up a high foul that went sailing away over toward the stands, obviously quite out of reach of either Mike's substitute catcher or of the first baseman. Instantly Mike sprang from the bench and yelled to the umpire that he was putting the other catcher out of the game and that he was going in at once. After delivering this charming BON MOT—or, rather, simultaneously with it—he took out after the crazy foul and neatly pulled it down. Coming in with the ball he picked up his mask and protector on the way to the plate, and with superb nonchalance proceeded to signal his pitcher for what he wanted.

But the umpire said nay! This was not according to the law and the prophets. Mike dared him to show any rule to the contrary. The umpire couldn't show any, but refused to let Mike make any such dramatic entrance just the same. In spite of the lack of law, Mike finally lost the case before the supreme court of baseball; but one can't help admire his quickness of thought under the circumstances.

* * *

WHEN the batter has made a foul, the base-runner must go back and touch the base he left. If the foul fly was caught, he must also touch all bases intervening between him and the base he left, and if while doing this the opponents get the ball back to the base he left before he arrives there he is out. But if the foul fly was not caught, he need not touch intervening bases.

The runner is, however, supposed to go back to the base he left with reasonable dispatch, and if he does so, the pitcher must wait for him. If the pitcher will not wait for him, but goes ahead with his delivery, the runner has the right to start again for the next base ahead, right where he is and without losing the time to go back to the base he started from. Most pitchers do not seem to be aware that the base-runner has this right, and they do a very dangerous thing when they start in their delivery without giving the runner a reasonable time to go back.

* * *

AFTER the pitcher has taken his position in the box ready to pitch, the batter is not permitted to cross over from one side of the plate to the other. If he does so, he may be called out.

Should the batsman desire to cross over to the other side after the pitcher is in his box, the only way he can safely do so is to step backward out of the box he is in and go around behind the catcher.

* * *

NOT only should the outfield fence not be less than 235 feet from the plate, but the backstop should not be less than 90 feet distant from the plate. This is the rule, but most people are agreed that for the good of the game it is better to have the spectators closer to the field of play than this. It is more interesting and inspiring both to players and spectators to get closer when possible.

But if the backstop is less than 90 feet behind the home plate, special ground rules are an absolute necessity. Now, it would surprise you greatly to know how many captains of amateur teams fail to grasp the significance of this lessened distance and what the appropriate rule should be in such case.

When the backstop is 90 feet back, a runner is entitled to as many bases as he can make, but he runs entirely at his own peril. If the passed ball has sufficient force to carry it clear to the backstop, it is clear that the runner should be able to make at least one base while the ball is being recovered, for he can certainly run 90 feet from one base to another while the catcher is running 90 feet after the ball and throwing it back to the diamond. If the passed ball doesn't go as far as the backstop, the runner must use his judgment.

Now, if the backstop is less than 90 feet back, and a passed ball hits it, the high probabilities are that it had sufficient force to have gone on to a backstop 90 feet away had the backstop been back that far. In other words, had the backstop been at the regulation distance, the runner could no doubt easily have made one base on that passed ball. Then why shouldn't he be given the one base?

* * *

STRANGE to say, most captains of fields where the backstop is less than 90 feet away seem to think that in this case also the runner should be made to run at his own peril, when it is their fault, not his, that the field was not laid out according to rule specifications. It must be clear that if the pitcher is so wild, or the catcher so unskillful, as to have a passed ball at a time when there is an opposing runner on base they should certainly be charged up with a demerit for such bad play, and what demerit should or could this be but for the opponents to get at least one base out of it, as they certinly would on a regulation field? But to make him run at his own peril with the backstop, say, within 30 feet of the place means that when the fielding team makes a bad play and has a passed ball that passed ball will very likely hit that near backstop with such force as to cause it to rebound right back to the catcher, and thereby he is enabled either to keep the runner on third or, worse still, to put him out at the plate even, and this on their own bad play and solely through the unmerited help of an illegally-placed backstop. Clearly the runner should be given the one base and be entirely free from the liability of being put out.

Chess Champion Returns to Cuba

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Jose R. Capablanca, who equalled Dr. Lasker's record last week by winning thirteen straight games in the Masters' Tournament at the Rice Chess Club, left yesterday for Havana.

The Cuban champion expects to spend about a fortnight at his home, and is due to return to New York early in September. If then arrangements are made for a series between him and O. S. Duras, of Prague, whom he defeated in the recent tournament after a struggle lasting seventy-five moves, the young master will tarry long enough for that purpose. After that he will depart for Europe.

Frank J. Marshall, the United States champion, is in receipt of an urgent invitation to play in the international tournament from P. P. Saboureff, former president of the St. Petersburg Chess Club.

Rivers and Wolgast Both After Ritchie

Fighters Agree to Meet Champion For Nothing—Ad Wild To Get On.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Aug. 9.—A unique situation exists in the fight game in Los Angeles. Both Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast, former champion, want to meet Champion Ritchie and have started bidding for the fight.

"All I want is to get into the ring with Ritchie again," said Wolgast. "Any promoter who can stage a bout can name his own terms as far as I'm concerned. If I win, he can give me anything he likes. I don't ask a cent."

"Same here, win or lose," said Rivers. "Whoever stages the contest can keep my share or give it to Ritchie."

In the meantime Champion Ritchie, who is now in the city, says it makes no difference to him whom he fights just so long as he gets his price.

COULON TO DEFEND TITLE AGAINST BOBBY BURNS

ST. JOSEPH, MO., August 9.—Bobby Burns, of Dallas, Texas, signed articles here yesterday for a ten-round boxing contest with Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion, at Omaha September 12.

Burns and Jones in Battle of Invectives

Managers of Arthur Pelky and Jess Willard Laugh at Each Other's Claims.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Tommy Burns, manager of Arthur Pelky, and Tom Jones, who looks after the interests of Jess Willard, are booked to hook up in an interesting battle of invectives and near blows within a day or two.

Jones wants to match Willard against Pelky, but Burns in a telegram yesterday said that Willard must go get a reputation before presuming to challenge a champion.

"Gunboat Smith is the man Pelky wants to meet," said Burns. "Smith beat Willard, and then, again, Charley Miller shaded the Kansas scrapper. Let him get a 'rep' for himself."

This sort of language is the sort that makes Jones glad he is alive, for he thrives on argument.

"When did Pelky whip Willard, or anybody of consequence, until he landed a lucky punch on Luther McCarty?" asks Jones. "Willard can whip Pelky, and Burns can name his own terms. Pelky took one beating from Willard and wants no more."

As Willard holds a decision over Pelky, it is probable that Jones will work that argument and a side bet proposition overtime until Burns agrees to a match between the rival white hopes.

NUMBER FOOTBALL PLAYERS.

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 9.—If the coaches of other colleges agree to it, Coach Al Sharpe, of Cornell, will number his football players next fall. Sharpe is said to be highly in favor of the innovation suggested by Parke H. Davis, Princeton representative on the rules committee. Dr. Sharpe believes that the reform must come.

REDS CAN USE THIS ONE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—President Lynch, of the National League, in a decision to-day holds that the result of the protested Brooklyn-Cincinnati games of July 11, of which Cincinnati won, 5 to 3, stands as played.

Broken Fingers Can't Stop Cy Falkenberg

Cleveland Twirler Has Been Hurt Three Times This Year, But Continues Work.

CLEVELAND, OHIO., Aug. 9.—Falkenberg has been hurt three times this year, but has not lost a turn in the box because of his injuries. Boehler, of Detroit, hit him on the pitching arm in April, but Cy kept on winning. Then he had a finger on his left hand broken, but he continued to win. Last week he broke another digit on his left whip, yet has won two games since.

MACK WANTS NEW RULE TO PROTECT BASE RUNNERS

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Aug. 9.—Connie Mack has a new rule to suggest when the baseball magnates gather in the fall. The sphinxlike leader of the Athletics would have the base-runners given more protection and have infielders restricted in blocking tactics.

When an infielder has deliberately blocked the path, Mack believes that the umpire should grant the runner his base. He claims that the use of shin guards by catchers and other protection by infielders makes it next to impossible for a base-runner to get the goal sought unless he has sufficient weight to bowl over the opposing infielder.

OLMSTEAD IS RELEASED.

SPOKANE, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Olmstead who was obtained recently from the Oakland Coast League club, was released to-day by the local baseball club. In his try-out yesterday Olmstead did not show to advantage.

TIGERS GET TWIRLER.

OTTUMWA, IOWA, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Loranzen, a left-hander of the Ottumwa club in the Central Association, was sold to the Detroit Americans for $2,500.

Jeff Smith to Get Big French Plum

Al Palzer May Lose Chance to Box Georges Carpentier in Paris.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—It is reported here that Al Palzer is not to get the chance to fight Carpentier in France this fall, the plum going to Jeff Smith, the Bayonne, N. J., middleweight.

A wire says they are to meet on October 20 in the Circus de Paris, the weight to be 170 and the distance 20 rounds. Al Lippe, manager for Smith, it is said, put one over on Tom O'Rourke, who may have something to say about the fight. Smith, however, is a good card in Paris, where he beat Adrian Hogan, Willie Lewis, M. Bernard and made Harry Mansfield quit in seven rounds. In fact, only Mike Gibbons has the honor of hanging a decision on Smith.

Carpentier will probably outweigh Smith about 20 pounds at the agreed weight, but this will not be such a handicap, according to Smith's admirers.

GABBY STREET WILL BE BACK IN MAJOR LEAGUES

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 9.—Chattanooga fans are already beginning to look over the prospects of 1914. The continued absence of Elberfeld from the battle array has exploded all hopes of a pennant this season.

There is every possibility that Gabby Street will be drafted or sold outright to a major league club, but if he is not it is a certainty that he will not play another season in a league where the maximum salary is but $300 per month. Street is in as good condition as ever in life, and he realizes that he is worth more than the local club can pay him.

CLUBS AFTER CATCHER.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Aug. 9.—White Sox officials have made telegraphic offers for Catcher Hargrove, of the Terre Haute club. Pittsburg, the Highlanders and the Cubs also have asked for terms on him, as has an American Association club.

Pittsburg Citizen Doesn't Know Hans

Smoky City Scribe Claims He Is Dr. W. J. Holland, Director of Carnegie Museum.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—Help! Help! There's a citizen at Pittsburg—a prominent citizen at that—who doesn't know Honus Wagner, of Carnegie, Pa.

"Wagner? Wagner? Is he really, as you allege, a baseball player?"

This was Dr. William J. Holland's reply to a question propounded by David Davies, of The Pittsburg Dispatch. Dr. Holland is director of Carnegie Museum and was said to have received from the king of ball players a letter offering to sell an old uniform for $15. This information came from New York, the editor of one Gotham daily being quite hysterical over the "possibilities" of the story, to use his own words.

When Dr. Holland was approached on the matter he was surprised. "I don't know Wagner," he said, "and we are not conducting a hero fund at the museum. No doubt this Mr. Wagner is quite a wonder in his chosen line of endeavor, and I suppose it is my misfortune never to have made his acquaintance."

"But, Doctor," protested the writer, "did you receive an offer from Wagner—did you receive any old kind of an offer?"

"Man alive!" came the crushing reply; "haven't I just told you that I never spoke to Mr. Wagner, that I never heard him speak, that I never received a letter from him, that I never was called on the 'phone by him—and that I never have given the subject of his old uniforms any consideration at all? Next thing I know they'll be making an old-clothes man out of me."

Dr. Holland was positive that there was no chance of Honus' discarded raiment finding repose within the classic confines of the big building erected at Mr. Carnegie's expense.

"The whole thing is arrant nonsense," he said. "I don't know who is responsible for the circulation of the 'story' (I believe you newspaper chaps call it that); but I do know that the entire yarn has been made out of whole cloth."

Poor old Honus doesn't know where he is since the circulation of this uniform-museum story. Vowing that he never has made any tender of his worn-out scenery, he said yesterday that he guessed "somebody was trying to kid him."

"When I get through with a uniform," said he, "there's not much left of it. Still, if Dr. Holland, the Carnegie Museum or any other body or place wants what remains, I'll sell for $15. And I'll be making money at that."

WENDELL, WELL KNOWN ATHLETE, QUITS FOR GOOD

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., Aug. 9.—James I. Wendell, Wesleyan, 1913, a member of the American team at the Olympic games in Sweden, announced here to-day that he had decided to withdraw from athletics. He said he wished to retire while "good" rather than to be forced out by declining ability.

He has accepted a position to teach at Pottstown, Pa., next year.

HEAVYWEIGHTS TO MIX IN 20-ROUND GO ON SEPT. 23

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Aug. 6—Arthur Pelkey, white heavyweight champion of the world, to-day matched to meet Charley Miller, the San Francisco motorman, in a 20-round bout at Vernon, Cal., on the night of September 23.

This will be Pelkey's first engagement since his bout with Luther McCarty in Calgary, which ended in the death of the latter.

Luck Begins to Break for Griff

Injuries Gave Boehling a Start

By W. J. McBeth.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Manager Clark Griffith of the Washingtons is a firm believer in luck, at least as applied to baseball. The "Old Fox" certainly has had his share of bumps. With the least iota of breaks or good fortune he would have landed at least two pennants for Frank Farrell. This year he might have driven the Athletics to cover had his fine, aggressive young team not been so seriously handicapped by injuries to players.

Griffith has had some pretty tough luck in his career, and particularly this sason. He seems a man destined to always be on the threshold of great fame without being able to find the latchstring. He has had many buffets; but he has likewise enjoyed some few favors of fickle fortune. These came along now and then as blessings in disguise. And not the least of the lot by any means has been Joe Boehling, the young southpaw who so far has been the sensation of the major leagues this season.

It was only last spring that the "Old Fox" deplored the decay of competent left-handed pitching. "Fork-hand fling," opined Griff, "has become a dead art." Why Griff should have been so melancholy on the subject when two such able experts as "Rube" Marquard and Eddie Plank were on hand to refute the insinuation is very hard to figure. It may have been that all his life Griffith had been disappointed in digging up a portside of real merit when at times such a one would have spelled victory.

* * *

BUT at the time when the "Old Fox" was grieving most sorely over his years of disappointment, he had with him a young man who in a very few months to blossom out into one of the real wonders of baseball. Not since Russell Ford, of the Yankees, and "King" Cole, of the Cubs, in 1910, averaged well above the .800 mark in victory percentage for over thirty games their first season in fast company has any youngster displayed the class of Washington's prize southpaw.

Boehling reeled off eleven straight victories.

Boehling is going to be of great help to Griffith and Washington. The team is pretty well out of the race now, yet still has an outside chance. Certainly next year, unless Mack braces his pitching staff, the Old Fox is likely to give the Athletics a fight to the last ditch. Walter Johnson and Joe Boehling form a pretty good pitching staff as modern hurling corps go. And Griff has several other young men, among them Engel, who can give a pretty fair account of themselves in the box.

But getting back to Boehling. He has divided in hearts of loyal Washington fandom a place this year usurped by the great and only Walter Johnson. His advent to fame has been more or less of an accident. But for the fact that Griffith was forced to utilize him in the face of injuries to seasoned twirlers, young Joe might now be wasting his sweetness on the desert air of some bush league.

* * *

HERE is his history:

Only back in the year 1911, when Dr. William H. Parker, the dean of amateur athletics in the Keystone City of the South, kindled an interest in amateur athletics of every sort, particularly devoting himself to amateur baseball, the medical man of cherubic countenance, who is also a police commissioner in Richmond, formed and managed the Battle Axe team, which won the championship of the city in a league comprised of eight clubs. Joe Boehling and Bill Kay formed the star battery of the Battle Axe team, which lost but two games out of sixteen played.

Succeeding the amateur baseball season, an intercity championship series was arranged with the winners of similar championships in Washington and Baltimore, in which the championship was won by the Pepcos of Washington, the games directing attention to the splendid battery work of the Battle Axes. Bill Peet, of the Washington Herald, was the wide-eyed visual artist who saw in Boehling possibilities sufficient to convince "Old Fox" Griffith of the advisability of adding Boehling to the staff headed by that strong-armed genius, Walter Johnson.

* * *

DURING the training trip of 1912, Washington scribes proclaimed the worth of Boehling and predicted that he would prove a tower of strength for the Climbers. The brilliant attack of the Senators during 1912, during which they rolled up a succession of sixteen successive victories—which record was ruined in the seventeenth effort by "Home Run" Baker, of the Athletics—prevented Griffith from risking the club's climb with a game pitched by Boehling, so Griff farmed him out to Chattanooga.

Climatic conditions there hindered the upbuilding of the youngster, and Kid Elberfeld returned the youngster to Washington, when Griff turned him over to Worcester, where, under Jesse Burkett, he achieved a winning percentage of .636.

Again to Charlottesville and under the tutelage of Griffith and Jack Ryan the experience gained assterted itself. A boy of big frame and intelligently acquisitive, Boehling earned his right to stay with the Senators, and Griff, while bemoaning the dearth of good left-handed pitchers, intrusted the fortunes of one game to the youngster, who returned it as a victory.

LANGFORD AGREES TO BOX JACK JOHNSON IN PARIS

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Sam Langford, the Boston tar baby, through his manager, Joe Woodman, to-day confirmed the report that he had agreed to meet Jack Johnson in Paris this fall to settle the question of the heavyweight championship of the world.

According to the announcement, the fight is to go twenty rounds. Johnson is to receive $30,000 guarantee, win, lose or draw, and Langford is to receive 25 per cent of the gross receipts. Leading fight promoters estimate that the fight will draw more than $100,000 at the gate.

WINTER SPORTS ARE BARRED BY BOSS OF 'CARDS'

President Britton Puts Ban on Indoor Baseball, Soccer and Others for Athletes.

By Sid C. Keener.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 9.—Indoor baseball, soccer football, basket ball, or, in fact, all winter sports where there are chances of broken ankles, twisted knees, sprained arms, etc., will not be allowed for the Cardinals this winter. President Schuyler P. Britton has clamped the lid on all winter pastimes for his athletes as a result of the injury to Shortstop Arnold Hauser.

There is no such clause in any of the present contracts, but when school is over this October, President Britton intends to issue strict orders to all the players that the ban has been placed on indoor baseball, soccer football, basket ball and others. And if the command is not obeyed, Britton has plans that will alter the present conditions.

Hauser's loss has been a severe jolt to the Cardinals this year. He has played in only a few games, still he is being paid his salary every 1st and every 15th. And that isn't all.

Pays $1,000 in Doctor Bills.

Since the training trip of last March when Hauser was sent home from Columbus, Ga., President Britton has paid more than $1,000 in doctor bills for Hauser. At present, Arnold is recovering from an operation at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, and all the expenses are being paid by the president of the Cardinals.

"I'd be willing to pay more than $5,000 if I thought Hauser would be as good as ever," states Britton. "You can't buy shortstops like him for $5,000."

There's also a funny angle concerning the bills which have been paid by Britton. During Arnold's stay in St. Louis several months ago, he was being treated by several experts. The bills always were mailed to Robison Field and one day Britton received a bill from a doctor who was not hired.

"I opened the envelope and saw a bill which read: 'For services to Arnold Hauser, $200.' I asked Hauser about it and he said that he never heard of the physician."

The athletes, as well as the magnates, suffer when one is injured during some winter pastime. The average ball player makes enough in the summer and finds some other occupation to live on during the winter. There isn't much financial gain playing soccer, basket ball or indoor baseball, and the athlete is taking a great chance to ruin himself.

Winter Sport Without Gain.

While Hauser's injury is attributed to the day he slid into second base at Columbus, Ga., it is thought that the start came when he twisted his knee sliding on a wooden floor playing indoor baseball last winter.

It also will be remembered that in the winter of 1911-1912 a gathering of diamond stars held an indoor series at the Jai Alai. In the line-up were Hauser, Bobby Byrne, Larry Doyle, Ed Konetchy, Lefty Leifield and a few more major leaguers.

The games were well advertised, but didn't appeal to the real baseball fans, and when the receipts were divided each athlete drew down something less than $5 for three nights' play.

Where would the Giants be to-day had Larry Doyle been permanently injured? The same for Bobby Byrne and the Pirates. Ed Konetchy has quit of his own will and says that it will be hunting, fishing and other amusements this winter and thereafter. Maybe some business investment for the big fellow, but no more indoor baseball.

It's pretty soft for the athlete to draw his full season's salary and have his doctor bills paid by the magnate. Britton is quite right in placing the ban on winter sports, and no doubt the players will obey the ruling.

International Scope For Athletic Meet

James E. Sullivan Goes Abroad With Invitations From Panama Exposition.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—James E. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States and director of athletics at the Panama Pacific International Exposition, left last Tuesday on the Kronprinzessin Cecelle to attend the International Federation of the athletic governing bodies of the world which is to be held in Berlin, Germany, August 20 and 21.

While at this congress Director Sullivan will extend invitations to the foreign governing bodies to send teams to the Panama Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco in 1915. All the sports at the exposition are to be international in character, and, as a matter of fact, teams have already been promised from many of the foreign countries. After a conference with the officials of the different governing bodies of sport in America, a lengthy program of sports was prepared.

It is planned to have the important international championships in the early spring and fall—February, March, April, October, November and December. The events now planned will, of course, be subject as to dates and regulations to the receiving of official sanction and approval from all the associations that are interested.

STANDS HURT OUTFIELDING.

PITTSBURG, PA., Aug. 9.—"Have you noticed that the present day outfielders do not judge fly balls as quickly as the old-timers did?" asked Manager Clarke, of the Pirates, today. "The stands at most of the parks are huge, dark affairs and when they are filled with spectators it is difficult to tell which is the ball and which are the faces of the fans, until or unless the sphere rises clear above the roof."

MORE PRAISE FOR M'LOUGHLIN FROM CRITICS

British Writers Still Boosting the Great Californian for His Excellent Playing.

MAURICE E. M'LOUGHLIN, who did so much in helping the American team capture the Davis Cup, made a lasting impression on the critics abroad.

Writing of the American champion one of the foremost London critics says:

"The arrival of a new master in any game is always important, for it is by a succession of masters that the art itself is developed. No two men play alike, and when the difference due to individuality is considerable, new methods are the outcome, and the possibilities of the game are enlarged. Lawn tennis, like other games, has been made by its personalities—a Renshaw, a Doherty, a Brookes. If his promise materializes fully McLoughlin may figure among the makers of epochs. The personality of the young Californian is a striking one. Both in name and in blood he is Irish. A blonde, with reddish hair and freckled face, he is a true specimen of the fair Hibernian type. In repose his mouth generally wears a smile.

A Great Athlete.

"When driving his hardest or when serving, he shows his teeth. Set like a vise, they give a touch of ferocity and of deadly purpose. The great breadth of his square shoulders makes him look less tall than he is. You will not often see a more finely built figure of an athlete. He has the straight and well-shaped legs that spell litheness of movement; his carriage on the court is rhythmical. The combination of limberness and apparent looseness of joint, with steel-like tension during the stroke, is characteristic of many great athletes. That much abused term 'grace' applies in its proper sense to McLoughlin's movement and his play alike.

"Out of the personality comes the play. Like the man, it is dynamic, swift and strong. He attacks whenever he can, and his weapons of offense are all severe in the extreme. His service is probably the fastest ever seen. It is graded from a slightly breaking ball, which keeps low, to a very strong American break. His pose when preparing to serve suggests a general's summing up of the situation. The man's poise is mechanically perfect. His forehand drive at its swiftest is possibly harder than that of S. H. Smith. It carries considerable top spin, and is hit with the full reach of the arm, preferably with a horizontal racquet. The sound of it is a crash. With this stroke, as well as with his severe smashing, he can kill a ball from the extremity of the court. The drive keeps low; its trajectory is flat.

Cuts His Backhand.

"His backhand is cut, and the ball when hit is in front of his body. This is his weakest department, but it has winning moments. Low volleys he often misses; he prefers the higher and winning position. Extraordinary activity is combined with splendid footwork. He can leap from the center to the side line and cut off a drive with a stop volley. When a ball suits him and he can time it as he pleases, he generally hits it with full strength. His speed on the court is great; his control over the ball and himself is remarkable. To beat Barrett when the latter was two sets to one shows great determination, as it shows good brains. To beat Parke in three sets reveals consistency; survive a field of all comers, over a hundred strong, at the age of 23, on his first visit to England, makes McLoughlin famous indeed."

BELMONT GETS NEW TRAINER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—It is learned that August Belmont has engaged Sam Hildreth to train his American racing stable. Some time ago Hildreth sold his own string of horses to the late Charles Kohler and went abroad, the latter's stable manager scoring many successes on the French turf.

Innis Brown Talks on Football

Heisman Faces Difficult Task

By Innis Brown.

"THE king is dead. Long live the king."

No doubt it is a bit early to begin chanting any funeral dirge over the demise of the present baseball season and cut loose a host of happy huzzas over the near entry of football. In fact, the real big noise with the horsehide is yet to be sprung, and a majority of the baseball populace is really just beginning to admit that the impending problem of the coming world series is whether it will be Bender vs. Mathewson or Plank vs. Marquard.

For all of that, however, the old season is well on its way, and it is merely a matter of a little more than a month until ye crafty football instructors will once more be on the job. Some five weeks more and managers will begin to dig out the musty, moldy regalia of the season past, followed shortly by the loss of large gobs of cuticle from the manly forms of numerous chesty young athletes while engaged in the rather monotonous preliminaries of falling on the ball and tackling a dummy.

* * *

THE return of the season of glory of the knights of the pigskin will no doubt find a rousing welcome among local enthusiasts in the gridiron game. It will also awaken a bit of curiosity as to what local and other teams will be able to show when the count is held.

Out at Tech, Coach Heisman is going to find his legions somewhat shot to pieces by graduation and other more speedy methods of depletion. Captain Leuhrmann will not be back, and Montague and Colley may also be lost. The return of some of the others is uncertain. However, he will have on hand Cook, Scrappy Moore, Loeb, Hutton, Means, with possibly one or two other regulars. Should McDonald return, a fair basis for a backfield may be counted on. In addition to these, it is understood that several promising freshmen have signified an intention of joining the Smithies. Should the Tech pilot draw a couple of good linemen along with one dependable back, opponents of the Jackets may count on a strenuous combat when they line up on Grant Field.

* * *

OVER at Athens, the outlook is a bit unsettled. It is certain that Captain Bob McWhorter will be on the job. With him will be Big John Henderson and probably Paddock, Hitchcock, Powell and Conklin. Timon Bowden has ended his football career by playing professional baseball during the present season in the Empire League. Lucas and Peacock are through, and the return of Wild Arnette, who terrified Auburn on Thanksgiving Day, is doubtful. However, there were a number of good prep men turned out last season in these parts, and the Red and Black will no doubt gather a fair share of these. Besides, the Athenians were rather bountifully supplied with substitutes last year, nad should develop two or three good performers for regular berths.

AT Vanderbilt Commodore Dan McGugin will face the job of picking up two backs and three linemen. The big loss will be in Collins and Hardage, leaving only Sikes of the back trio, with Curlin to fill in at quarter. In the line Swofford, Daves and Shipp will be among the missing. In other words, the Gold and Black skipper will begin with Morgan and Tom Brown of his line; Noch Brown and Turner at ends, and Sikes and Curlin in the back field.

In addition to these, he will have a youngster by the name of Boensch, who should land the quarterback job over Zack Curlin, whose chief bid for fame seems to be the fact that he once jumped into the game in a crisis and kicked a field goal against Michigan. However, about all that can be counted on to date in the line, in addition to the two regulars returned, is Reyer, a sub on last year's team. He will doubtless draw further assistance from the incoming freshman class. To date no relief has shown up to fill in the loss caused by the departure of Collins and Hardage.

* * *

OVER at Auburn Mike Donohue will have to base his calculations minus the services of Rip Majors at quarter, "Sheep" Lamb at tackle and Doctor Ressijac at fullback. However, he can count on Captain Kirk Newell in the back field, along with Arnold and Christopher, while in the line he will have Meadows, Thigpen, Louisell and Pitts. He will also have good flank defense in the persons of Robinson and Kearley. It appears that the genial Mike will start the season with more than his usual strength of seasoned material, which forebodes worry a plenty for his opponents.

* * *

NOT a great deal is known of what Harris Cope may count on at Sewanee just yet. He will lose one of his mainstays in Jim Stoney at center. He will also lose a serviceable and promising player in Sheldon, who put up a sensational game at half in several contests last season. More serious, however, than either of the above will be the loss of Jenks Gillem at end. It will doubtless be a long time before the Tiger squad picks up as valuable all-round man again.

On the other hand, he will have Tolley, Hammond and Parker in the back field, Captain McCallum and probably Magwood, Dobbins and Moore in the line. This force will no doubt be augmented by the addition of two or three good new men, together with a promotion to the varsity of one or two subs on last year's team.

* * *

FROM the above it would appear that neither of these squads will have anything special to begin the season above the average. It will, therefore, be a matter of developing new material, together with good luck in keeping old men in condition, in deciding the relative strength of these teams for the coming season, as compared with past years. But few changes have been made in the playing rules, and with this advantage coaches can begin early to get down to real business in developing their charges. With the schedules that more than one of the above have cut out for themselves it is a cinch bet that no time will be lost when once a start is made.

LARRY SEES VISIONS OF WORLD SERIES FOR NAPS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Spend just a few minutes with big Nap Lajoie during these riotous days. Your time won't be wasted. Larry is one continuous walking smile. Like a charger scenting the smoke of battle, Larry is scenting the smoke of a world's series.

The big fellow has never battled in a world's contest. The greatest player never before has had an opportunity. But he feels that the Naps have a chance now and he's breaking his neck to bring about the realization of dreams of years.

Larry is his same old self again. Completely recovered from the injuries which handicapped him when he was traveling along at such a wonderful clip earlier in the season, he is showing the way to Birmy's ambitious youngsters and causing them to be consumed by the pennant fever.

Larry is playing a wonderful game in the field and his bat is playing an important part in every Nap victory. This may be the big fellow's last chance to be on a club that has a chance for the flag, and he is making the best of his opportunity.

"Keep your lamps on us," says Larry. "We are either going to pass those Athletics or make them think they have been side-swiped by a machine traveling at a two-mile-a-minute clip."

MILWAUKEE FANS AFTER PRESIDENT CHIVINGTON

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 9.—Milwaukee baseball fans and owners of the local club are up in arms against President Chivington, of the American Association, for his action in suspending Manager Clark, of the Brewers, because of a verbal argument with Mike Cantillon, of Minneapolis. They claim it is a deliberate plan to weaken Milwaukee in the pennant race.

A report that George Tebeau is ready to quit the Association and join hands with the Federal League is given more than passing credence here. It also is claimed others are ready to follow suit. Pitcher Slapnicka may be sold to Cincinnati by Milwaukee.

CHANCE FARMS TWIRLER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Watkins, who recently was purchased by Chance from the Youngstown (Ohio) club, has been sent to the New London club of the Eastern Association, so that he can get more experience.

NEW PLAYER FOR COAST.

KEOKUK, IOWA, Aug. 9.—The local Central Association club was yesterday offered $1,000 for Catcher Joe Jenkins by the Oakland, Cal., club. Outfielder Hilly and Shortstop McGraffigan also will go to the Coast League if negotiations now on are completed.

LARGE PRICE BIG HANDICAP TO CHAPPELLE

$18,000 Youngster Forced to Go Against Strongest Pitching in American League.

By Bill Bailey.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Did it ever occur to you that Larry Chappelle was a marked man and that it was more difficult for him to get a base hit than for any other player on the Sox team?

It never did? It's a fact just the same. Chappelle goes against the strongest pitching in the game. Doesn't make any difference what the score is when Chappelle goes to bat, does not make a particle of difference whether there be a man on base, and it doesn't make any difference whether there be two or none out, the opposing twirler shoots across his very best when the youngster walks to the plate.

The reason? The fact that the youngster cost $18,000.

Here is what happens when this youngster walks up there. He is recognized by the fans.

"Do you think he's worth all that coin?" queries one fan of another.

"Don't look like that much money to me," is usually the answer when the team is playing on foreign territory.

"Fan him!" howls the fan to the pitcher.

"Show him up!" howls another bug. "Strike him out!" howls a third.

In a minute all the fans are after the twirler to show up this fellow who cost all that money. And it develops into a duel between the batter and the pitcher.

* * *

YOU know what happens under ordinary conditions when the home team is leading by a large score and the end of the game is near. The pitcher lets up a bit. He figures that there is no use pitching his arm out when he has his game won. You know what happens when two are down and an average batter is up. The twirler is quite willing to let the batter hit. He doesn't put much on the ball, for the reason he figures the man will go out anyway. Then what is the use? It isn't likely that a rally will be started.

* * *

BUT with Chappelle? The pitcher wants to fan him. There is a lot of satisfaction in downing a batter when the eyes of the fans are centered upon you. Then a pitcher can't figure why any batter should cost all that money. And then again, a twirler receives much fame if he strikes out the high-priced youngster.

Chappelle never gets an easy chance at bat. Any time that he steps into that box he knows that the pitcher is going to put everything he possesses on that ball and that regardless of whether the pitcher eases up when the other fellows go up. Chappelle knows that he will get speed and a curve ball.

Oh, it's fine advertising you receive when you cost a lot of money. But you can wager that it does not aid your batting average. You're the mark all along the line. The infielders and outfielders play just twice as hard for you. The pitcher just works twice as hard. Any time that Chappelle receives any credit you can wager that he earns it. For somehow or other every ball player entertains just a bit of envy for the youngster who cost a small fortune.

KAISERLING SIGNS WITH FEDS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—George Kaiserling, the hurler recently released to San Francisco in the Pacific Coast League by the local (A. A.) club, yesterday signed to pitch for the local Federals. He will join his new mates to-day.

LATEST STORIES FROM THE MAJOR LEAGUES

IN the third game of the world's series, two years ago, Jack Coombs was pitching for the Athletics when Josh Devore came to bat. Coombs remembered what Plank, who had pitched for the Athletics the day before, told him of Devore's batting weakness.

"He's helpless before a wide curve," Plank had said.

When Devore came to bat, Coombs soon had two strikes on him. Lapp signaled for a fast ball for the next attempt, but Coombs shook his head, calling for a new signal.

Lapp then called for a slow one. Again Coombs shook his head. There was but one other signal for Lapp to spring—to call for a curve ball. He did.

Coombs bent over a wide curve and Devore swung and missed it a mile. It was a clean strike-out. Lapp gravely took off his mask, walked down to the pitcher's box and whispered in Coombs' ear:

"That's the time WE used OUR head, old top."

* * *

THE talk drifted around to natural sluggers.

"There never was a greater one than Ed Delehanty," said Tim Hurst, the once famous prize ring referee and major league baseball umpire. "And that reminds me of a story.

"It was in the old National League days of the twelve-club circuit," continued Tim. "A promising young third baseman named Flaherty was breaking in for Washington. I took a train with the Senators one night, jumping east from Chicago. Flaherty consulted me about one of his weaknesses.

"'My arm is all right,' said he, 'but I often find that, hurry as I will, I am unable to get my man at first on a bunt or a slow roller.' 'Why, my dear boy,' says I, 'you probably play too deep. Whenever you expect a bunt, sneak up with the pitch.'

"I saw Flaherty about three weeks later in Washington hobbling down Pennsylvania avenue on crutches. I had missed him from the box scores, but thought he had probably been chased back to the sticks. I asked him what had happened.

"'Mr. Hurst,' he said, in the most rueful tone I ever heard, 'I took your advice. I started in on Ed Delehanty, but I woke up in the ambulance, convinced that I was never cut out for third baseman.'"

* * *

BILLY MURRAY, former manager of the Phillies, who is now scouting for Pittsburg, was fanning with some friends at the Polo Grounds the other afternoon.

"I do not believe that anyone except a manager can appreciate how much 'bone' there is in the big leagues," he said. "You remember Coveleskie, the big Pole southpaw who beat the Giants three straight games and kept them from the pennant in 1908? I actually believe he often forgot he was playing baseball.

"In a tight game at Chicago one day he passed Evers with none out. Johnny stole second while Coveleskie held the ball. Catcher Charlie Dooln and all the Quaker infield tried in vain to bring the big pitcher out of his trance.

"When Coveleskie came back to the bench I was pretty nearly sore enough to strangle him. 'Didn't you know there was a runner on first?' I asked, as sarcastically as I could. 'Why, no; I didn't,' he admitted.

"You could have knocked me down with a feather. And Coveleskie was in dead earnest. Turning to Kitty Bransfield, my first baseman, in the most injured tone I could assume, I asked: 'What's the matter with you infielders? Can't you remember to tip iff Coveleskie, whenever there are runners at your bases?'

"Do you know," concluded Murray, "that big 'bonehead' of a Pole never tumbled to the fact that he was being kidded."

Scout After Syracuse Pitcher for Red Sox

Patsy Donovan After Twirler Who Recently Held Athletics to Seven Hits.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Patsy Donovan, the Boston American scout, left here yesterday for Binghamton to look over Pitcher Rankin Johnson, of the Syracuse team, who recently held the Athletics to seven hits in an exhibition game here.

It is understood that two other major league clubs are after Johnson.

PLANK IS SLOWEST HURLER IN THE AMERICAN LEAGUE

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—The slowest pitcher in the world has been discovered. He is Eddie Plank, the Athletics' veteran. Just for curiosity, and to settle an argument, a telegraph operator in Philadelphia held the watch on Plank when he pitched against the Browns in a recent series.

After Stovall made a double he consumed 30 seconds throwing the first ball to Pratt. This period elapsed after he received the ball from the catcher and before he delivered it to the bat. The next pitch required 25 seconds. Pratt hit this ball.

In the same inning he took 25 seconds throwing the first ball to Williams. Three pitches to Balenti required 28, 35 and 30 seconds. Plank pulls down his cap, hitches up his trousers, wiggles his left foot and buries it in the pitcher's box like an old hen going to roost. Then he carefully scrutinizes the bases and the outfielders and by the time he gets around to pitch the batter is half fidgeted to death.

That's the system of his stalling—to get the other fellow overanxious.

HERRMANN SENDS OUT CALL FOR YOUNG HURLERS

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—With Southpaw "Rube" Benton practically lost to the Reds for the remainder of the season, President Garry Herrmann has wired around the country for twirlers. He sent messages to Pitcher Harrington, of Lynn, Mass.; Pitcher Robertson, of Savannah, Ga., and several others to join the Reds immediately.

Herrman has tried to arrange a deal with a National League club, offering an outfielder and an infielder for a pitcher, and it may be put through in a few days.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

ATLANTA PLANS WORLD'S FINEST COTTON SHOW

Prominent Display to Include All Phases of Plant From Raw Material to Finished Product.

At a meeting of the cotton products committee of the Manufacturers' Exposition Association yesterday morning the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce took steps toward the establishment in the new Chamber of Commerce Building of the largest and most complete permanent exhibition of cotton and cotton products in the world.

It is proposed to devote an entire floor of the new Chamber of Commerce Building to this exhibit. It will show cotton and cotton products of all kinds in every phase from the growing plant to the finished product. Soil, fertilizer, the proper planting and cultivation of cotton will all be shown as a sort of a prologue to the other exhibits. Cotton lint and all its various products will be shown and the processes explained. Fifty different kinds of cotton cloth and similar products will be shown. The cotton seed will be taken up in the same way, and all its products and by-products exhibited, including hulls, meal, crude oil, fine oil, cooking oil, soap, etc.

Complete exhibits of this kind have been temporarily established at some of the great world's expositions before, but this is the first proposal to establish a permanent one. The exhibit will be in connection with the Merchants and Manufacturers' Exposition. The committee meeting at which the project was put under way was attended by Chairman M. R. Wilkinson, W. M. Hutchinson, W. H. Schroder and H. E. Watkins, who represented E. P. McBurney.

A subcommittee was appointed, with Mr. Hutchinson as chairman and Messrs. Schroder and Watkins members. This committee will discuss the details necessary to raising money by subscription and getting up the exhibit, and will report back to the cotton products committee at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. They will confer with the cotton crushers and oil mill men in the meantime, and the cotton spinners will be invited to attend the Tuesday meeting.

Special invitations to attend this meeting will be extended to Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price, Mayor Woodward, members of the Fulton County Board of Commissioners and others interested.

Raw Silks Higher; Canton Stock Small

Advancing Prices Recorded Both in Eastern and European Markets. Buyers Busy.

"The Yokohama raw silk market is still advancing on account of good buying from both Europe and this country," said A. P. Villa & Bros., in their special report. "Canton is very firm, and the stock there is reported to be very small. Estimates of the fourth crop place it at 6,000 bales.

"Lower prices for tsatless and steam filatures at Shanghai have attracted a large number of buyers and that market is stiffening up again as a result. Tussahs remain unchanged. European manufacturers are buying Italian silks well, and reelers are taking a decidedly optimistic view of the future. Higher prices are expected at Milan shortly.

"The settlement of the strike at Paterson has resulted in some buying at New York. The market is quiet, but firm generally."

GEORGIA APPLE CROP CONDITION PUT AT .52

The Government's report on the apple crop in Georgia for July follows:

For the year 1913, 52 per cent; 1912, 64 per cent; 1911, 40 per cent.

Habersham County reports that apples promise 75 per cent normal yield, which is 50 per cent more than last year. Probably 12 cars will be shipped, mostly Bens, Winesaps and Terrys. Fruit is of better quality than last year. As the orchards are young, not many apples have been shipped.

Users of Mica Against Increase in Tariff

Electrical Manufacturers Say the Raise Is Unnecessary and Not Fair to Them.

Electrical manufacturers and other users of mica are exercised over the action of the Senate Finance Committee in inserting in the pending tariff bill a provision raising the duty on mica above the rates provided in the measure as it was passed by the House of Representatives. Under the tariff act of 1897, and under that of 1909, the present law, complaint has been made that the duty on rough mica, approximating 4,000 per cent, was both unfair and absurd, especially in view of the fact that ten times as much mica is used here as can be produced in this country. As amended by the Senate, the pending tariff bill will provide for practically no reduction of the duty on the product.

A representative of one of the largest electrical manufacturing concerns in the United States said that the blame for increasing the duty on mica in the Senate rests on Senator Simmons, chairman of the Finance Committee. Most of the mica produced in this country, he says, is found in the Senator's own State, North Carolina. As an evidence of the injustice of the prevailing, and proposed, rates of duty on mica in the rough, a recent test case was cited. This case involved importations from Canada. The judges of both the Board of General Appraisers and of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, while confirming the high assessment, condemned the hardship imposed on importers by such an unreasonable duty. Telegrams have been sent by many of the electrical manufacturers to their Senators asking that the Simmons amendment be dropped from the bill now before the Senate, and that the rates in the Underwood bill, or lower rates, be substituted.

Silk Handbags Are Replacing Leather

Knitted Girdles Three Yards Long and Eight Inches Wide Also Are Featured.

The fancy goods and notions trade reports general activity. Buyers now in the market are ordering freely and prices are about the same as prevailed last season.

Knitted girdles in high colors, about three yards long and eight inches wide, are being featured. Cape-girdle effects in solid colors are also well thought of. One importer says that silk handbags in color combinations would largely replace leather varieties, although a good selling movement is reported in the latter in the new envelope-shape bags.

Another leather bag shown is circular in shape and has a single pannier handle in the center. A new style in belts is the wide seven-inch girdle effect, fastened with one large buckle or two smaller ones. New bead necklaces are 27 inches long and are shown in coral and amber. Bandeaux of aluminum and others with beaded and rhinestone effects are leading features among the newer hair ornaments.

Detours on Hartford Greenfield Route

An Automobile Club of America road car has just traversed the main route from Hartford, Conn., to Greenfield, Mass., and the crew reports poor going, the road undergoing construction at four different places.

Leaving Hartford, rough and worn macadam is followed for seven miles. Here the road is under construction for one mile, but is open on the side. Fair macadam, with short rutted stretches, is encountered to Windsor Locks. Mostly good macadam, with some rough spots, leads to Springfield. The next nine and one-half miles to Holyoke is fair macadam and followed along the Connecticut River a worn stretch about one mile long.

From Holyoke good macadam is to Mount Tom, and from Mount Tom to Northampton the road is entirely closed and will not be open all summer. A detour is necessary over rough dirt and worn macadam via Easthampton. Now comes three miles of rough and worn macadam, and then a detour is necessary over a rutted sandy road to Hatfield. Eight miles of good macadam is then followed to South Deerfield, where a detour is made over a poor sandy road to Hatfield. Eight miles of good macadam is then followed to South Deerfield, where a detour is made over a poor sandy road to Wapping.

TRADE IN KNIT GOODS SUFFERS MANY ABUSES

Retailers Know No Limit in Asking for Credit on Returned Goods.

According to one of the best known knit goods wholesalers, there is apparently nothing in the way of illegitimate business that is not done in that field. To illustrate how things went on there, he cited the following instances:

"A small local retailer came into this store the other day with eighteen dozen pairs of hose that he had bought from us about January 1 of last year, and which had actually lain on his shelves since the middle of February, 1912. Apparently without the least sense of doing anything out of the ordinary he told me that the goods were rotten and that he was returning them and wanted credit.

He would not accept my side of the matter at all, and when I refused to credit him for the goods he vowed that he was through buying from us. The goods were rotten, all right. They were in perfect condition when they left us, but we were unable to convince him that we were not responsible for their condition after they had lain on his shelves for seventeen months.

"In another instance a case of hosiery was returned to us with the complaint that they were not like the sample from which they were sold. It happened, however, that these samples had been taken from the very case which was shipped him after the sale was made, had been returned to the case, and shipped with the balance of the goods. There was absolutely no justification for the claim made, but the account being very good, we could do nothing but take the goods back.

"Here is another case: Late last season we bought a heavy bill of silk hose from a prominent New England manufacturer at $7.50 a dozen, which was a good reduction from the manufacturer's regular price. The goods did not move well, however, and, getting a chance to dispose of fifty dozen of them to a retailer in the Middle West, I made a price of $6.75 on them. I was willing to lose 75 cents a dozen to 'get from under.' Imagine my surprise to-day, when I got a letter from this retailer saying that we were in error on the price we had billed him. He maintained that the salesman had made the price $6.50. To settle the matter in as friendly a way as possible he notified me that he could get the same hose from another source at $6, and suggested that I tell him by return mail that this price would be satisfactory to me. The goods are now on the way back to New York, and that account is crossed off the books."

Shadow and Oriental Laces Lead Market

Regular Embroidery Lines Opening Well, as Are Many of the Novelties.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Fall buying in the lace and embroidery market is opening well, and dealers expect a good season. On account of light duplicating during the spring, orders are being booked at satisfactory rates, making the merchandise very tempting to buyers. Most trading done so far has been with merchants in the region from Denver west to the coast, although buyers from the Middle West are coming in.

Many novel effects in lace are shown, and reported to be taking well. Lightweight shadow and Oriental effects in allovers and flounces are also in demand. Regular embroidery lines are opening well, as are the many novelties in various designs of Swiss embroidery in edgings and sets. The high-color Balkan effects are not moving strongly with the dealers this season.

QUITS BIG EXCHANGE; BUYS CONSOLIDATED SEAT

A. R. Allan, of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Maynard & Allan, which was dissolved, purchased a seat on the Consolidated Stock Exchange for $1,200, including the transfer fee.

This is the first time in a long while that a member of a New York Stock Exchange firm has secured a membership on the "Little Board."

HAVE NO FEAR OF SUTHERLAND TARIFF CHANGE

Evasion Simple Through Sending Goods Abroad Again and Reimporting Them.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Few of the importers owning the seventy-odd million dollars' worth of merchandise that is now lying in bonded warehouses in this city waiting the passage of the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill regard seriously the amendment offered by Senator Sutherland, of Utah, to make these goods dutiable on entrance at the rates prevailing under the present law.

There is a strong feeling that the amendment will never be taken up for serious consideration by Congress. There is a stronger feeling that if it should be passed by any chance it would prove inadequate to do the work that was intended for it by its sponsor.

To justify the first contention it is pointed out that never in the history of the country has any merchandise brought in under a new tariff been dutiable at the rates of the old. To prove the second, it is argued that, the goods never having been entered and no duties paid on them, it will be a comparatively easy matter to export them to their original shipping point, or some foreign port nearer by, and reimport them under the new rate.

This is an especially attractive way of "beating" the measure for importers who bring in goods on which the duties are lowered sharply in the new bill.

Discussing this phase of the question, E. H. VanIngen, of E. H. VanIngen & Co., importers of woolens, said yesterday.

"On every thousand dollars' worth of woolen goods, foreign cost, the duty under the present law is over $900. Under the Underwood-Simmons bill the duty would be $350. What would the loss of time for three weeks and the cost of two freights amount to compared with the $550 saved by exporting and reimporting the goods?"

The following is the way one specific case of reimporting would work out. In figuring it a foreign invoice covering a shipment of several cases of woolen goods was chosen:

The foreign invoice value of the goods in question was $4,055, and the original freight charge on them was slightly over $75. The duty on them under the present act (based on an average duty of 90 per cent) would be $3,649.50, making the full landing cost $7,779.50. If brought in under the new tariff at a duty of 35 per cent, the tax would be $1,419.25 and the full landing cost would be $5,549.25, or a saving of $2,230.25. If the goods now entered in bond were exported and shipped back to this country under the new tariff, this saving would be diminished only by about $150 for freight and some incidental warehousing charges.

On bulky goods, which would mean greater freight charges, and on goods where the reduction in duty is not great, this method of avoiding the power of the Sutherland measure would not result in savings so great as those in the illustration, but in any event the importers see little reason for worry in the Senator's attempt to save the Government several million dollars in revenue that would be lost under the present provisions of the new tariff.

Small Rubber Tires For Teething Babes

G. A. Sohl, manager of the local branch of the Republic Rubber Company, is distributing a novel souvenir among the automobile owners of Atlanta. It is a miniature Staggard Tread Republic tire. The tire is about five inches in diameter and can be worn as a watch fob or makes a very serviceable paperweight.

Mr. Sohl recommends the little tire very highly as a teething ring for babies, claiming that his two little

Mill and School Are Run in Conjunction

Disadvantages of Child Labor Offset by System Adopted by English Concern.

In view of the widespread agitation against child labor, interest attaches to a recent report by Consul Franklin D. Hale at Huddersfield, England, on a plan providing education and employment for children at the same time:

"One of the English district factory inspectors reports specially in regard to half-time labor of children of school age, taking one instance of a school in connection with a textile factory where 35 children attend school two and a half hours daily and work in the mill five hours, with a complete rest every alternate week after 3 p. m. and from Friday until 9 a. m. the following Monday. The inspector noted the bright, healthy and intelligent appearance of the children, and says:

"'The schoolmistress informed me that these children made as much progress in their education as the ordinary full-time scholars and invariably earned the full Government grant which depends both on attendance and scholarship, and obtained very good reports from the inspector of schools. They are necessarily very regular in their school attendance, because lost attendance has to be made up before they can renew their work at the mill. The fact that they earn $1.10 a week probably accounts for their being better fed and clothed than other children of the same class.'"

Cheaper Carpets in Good Demand Now

Higher Grades of Goods Quiet. Trade Comes Chiefly From Mail Order Houses.

Trading in better grade carpets and rugs is quiet, although the cheaper grades are active. The demand for the latter is chiefly from large mail order houses and considerably exceeds the supply, according to a prominent New York selling agent.

Lower grade goods are principally in the jobbers' hands, and they are selling freely at a small margin. Stocks in retailers' hands are light. There is a shortage reported in small rugs. Nearly all looms working low-end seamless tapestries and velvets are sold up to their capacity.

Unique Auto Record By Denver Concern

As an indication of the constant improvement of the automobile business, the Willys-Overland Company, of Toledo, Ohio, points to the record established by its Denver distributor, the Overland Auto Company, during the season of 1913. The Western concern's original order for 1913 Overlands called for 400 cars, but within a very short time after the announcement of the model this was increased to 500, with a request that if possible it was to be allowed 100 additional cars.

Because of the great demand for Overlands, the extra allotments could not be made. On July 4 the factory received word from Denver that but 22 of the 500 Overlands remained unsold.

"These will be gone long before the new cars come. We will need a greatly increased allotment for 1914 and are telling you about it this early so that we will not be overlooked," wrote W. J. Carter, of the Denver firm.

HERE IS BEST WAY TO APPLY A TIRE.

Before applying tires, remove rust and all other foreign matter. If the tire has been ridden deflated at any time, mud may have accumulated on the rim and unless this is removed the tire can not adjust itself properly. Soapstone dusted on the rim will act as a lubricant and make it much easier for the tire beads to slip into their correct position, thereby reducing the danger of pinching the inner tube.

Before placing the inner tube inside of case, inflate just enough to round it out. Do not use a tube of the wrong size and be sure that the spreader of the valve is adapted for the particular type of case, whether regular clincher, quick detachable clincher or Q. D. cable base. Dust tube and inside of case with talc, which will reduce the friction and prevent adhesion of the tube to case after heated in service. If too much talc is used, however, and any water should work its way on the inside of the tire, there is danger of grit and attending injury to the tube. Powdered graphite is not quite so nice to handle as talc but is a much more durable lubricant.

PERU CLEANING UP; WANTS OUR SANITARY WARE

English Engineer Says Americans Are Neglecting Profitable and Growing Close Market.

A big market for certain lines of goods of American manufacture is lying undeveloped in Peru, according to Richard T. Hird, sanitary engineer for the Provincial Council of Callao. Mr. Hird says that a demand has sprung up for all sorts of sanitary materials and appliances, and that absolutely no attempt has been made by American manufacturers to cater to it.

Mr. Hird, who is an Englishman, has been working on the new water and sewage works of the port of Callao, which have just been completed. Every coast town in Peru, he says, is getting ready for the opening of the Panama Canal, and the whole country expects tremendous benefits from the completion of the great waterway.

"Callao has been making provision for the commerce which it is believed will come to it," said Mr. Hird. "The improvements which have just been finished are based on a population of 50,000. At the present time there are about 34,000 inhabitants.

Ships Not To Be Delayed.

"Now the authorities are started on a general clearing up of the town, in fact, of all the coast towns. It is realized that ships must be able to proceed straight from Callao to Panama without having to be delayed by long stops in quarantine.

"One thing the city of Callao itself is about to do is to put in modern street paving and a modern slaughter house, the latter with a capacity of 45,000 cattle per annum. Most of the animals that will be slaughtered here will be Peruvian or Chilean cattle, which will come to Callao from the smaller ports to the south.

Sanitary Materials Needed.

"While there is a good number of Englishmen and Americans down there, there is now a distinct trend of Germans to the country. What I would like to see now is something like active appreciation on the part of American manufacturers of sanitary materials, and of the great opportunity Peru now presents for the sale of their products. There is a great dearth of sanitary material to be had in the country. There is a first-class opportunity down there now for sanitary wares of various kinds. The Government is insistent that sanitary works be installed, and no matter which party has been in office, we have never had any difficulty in getting money to prosecute the works we have been carrying on. We are carrying a loan of $500,000 furnished mainly by French, Peruvian, and English capitalists. Most of the piping material for general work we have been using has been of English manufacture, though we have had to get not a little from Austria. We have installed a hydro-pneumatic pumping station for getting rid of the sewage, which is assembled in two distinct sections and thrown out on two sides of the town, thence going by gravity to the sea.

"There is a big chance down there for some American company that would like to undertake the repaving of cities. Not only the whole city of Callao is to be repaved, but other towns will make similar improvements."

CROPS DOING WELL.

COLUMBUS, GA., Aug. 2.—The condition of crops has improved wonderfully during the past ten days, since the rainy weather began. Where it was thought impossible to make a crop of corn, planted early, it now looks as if the yield will be heavy, while late corn is doing remarkably well. Throughout 30 counties embraced in the Columbus territory, it is considered that the rains have improved the condition of cotton materially, and that where it was at least two weeks late prior to the rains, is now about as forward as usual.

CUBISTS IN MILLINERY FIELD.

Cubist roses are the newest thing in the millinery world. These are silk flowers with square petals and foliage. Part of the rose is in one color and the rest of another shade. The color schemes are varied, and various shadings are grouped, sometimes harmoniously and sometimes in a way to create a clash of colors. The cubist wing has also made its appearance, and some observers look for a season of "square" millinery ornamentation.

Kid Glove Makers in Midst of Big Season

Fall Buying Greatly in Excess of Expectations—Sales Are Double Last Year's.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Manufacturers of kid gloves are experiencing trouble making deliveries, as the fall selling has greatly exceeded expectations. One maker says his sales were double those of 1912. Lamb skins are scarce and high, necessitating large advances. Kid skins are plentiful, but no lower. Raw materials here are thought to be fairly well sold up.

On account of the tariff bill, it is said that strikes are prevalent in Europe, the strikers wanting to share the increased profits made possible by the lower tariff. According to another dealer, if the bill is not passed by September 15 the losses to manufacturers in America will be heavy. Importers are unwilling to deliver goods and stand any advance in tariff, and retailers will not take merchandise unless they get the benefit of any downward revision.

Road business coming into the fabric glove market for 1914 shows a considerable increase over last year, the demand for lisle and chamoisette goods being especially large. White goods are most in demand, but there is little or no activity in colors.

Plan to Mark Sizes On Shoes Is Opposed

Most Retailers Appear to Prefer Code Instead of Plain Figures and Letters.

Shoe manufacturers and retailers have joined in a movement to have sizes and widths marked in shoes by a plain and uniform system.

There is apparently a little reluctance on the part of the retailers to abandon wholly the system of "blind" or code markings, which mean nothing to the ultimate consumer, in favor of the system of plain markings, with the various sizes and widths indicated by numerals and letters.

The national organization of retailers has adopted resolutions favoring uniformity, but also asking the manufacturers "to select the most practical code, preferably the one most commonly used at this time, as a general code for retailers, who prefer to have the sizes on their shoes indicated by a code, instead of a plain marking."

ROAD UNDER CONSTRUCTION.

The touring department of the Automobile Club of America reports a road under construction from Millwood, N. Y., through Chappaqua, connecting with King street for Portchester.

The road is to be macadamized and when completed will afford a direct connection from lower Long Island Sound points to the Harlem Valley and along the Hudson River.

Long Island motorists will also benefit greatly by the new road, since connection can be made from Long Island by the Rye-Seacliff ferry.

SEVERE TESTS HELD IN STORE FOR NEW MEN

Many Concerns Purposely Make Tryout of Employees Harder Than Regular Work.

A prominent manufacturer says that fully 90 per cent of the men that prove satisfactory during the first few weeks of their employment can afterward keep their positions as long as they desire. Most houses have tests to try out new employees, and these are nearly always more severe than the work they are required to do regularly.

"In my offices," he said, "new men are required to do disagreeable, unimportant tasks. I give some the privilege of straightening out the most disagreeable complaints that come in. It shows whether they have any executive ability.

"Many take positions believing that it is not well to set an example for hard work because the employer will think better of them if the work is done easily. A man must work hard at a new job at first because he has friction with older employees and lack of knowledge of numerous details of the work to contend with. I think more of the new man for working overtime trying to overcome these obstacles than of the man who apparently goes through his work with no effort.

"I recall the case of a man who made a good record in a position where a number had failed before him. He studied the business, and interviewed as many of his predecessors as possible to ask their reasons for quitting before he made his try at it. After making notes of the others' reasons he went to work well fortified with a knowledge of the existing conditions and made good in a big way.

IRISH LACE INDUSTRY.

"It may not be known generally," says Dress Essentials, "that modern Irish lace making had its origin in the failure of the potato crop that caused the famine in 1846. The abbess of a convent in County Cork, looking about for some lucrative employment to help the half-starved children who attended her schools, unraveled, thread by thread, a scrap of Point de Milan, and finally mastered the complicated details. She then selected the girls who were quickest at needlework, and taught them what she had so painfully learned. The new industry prospered, and one of the pupils, in a characteristic 'bull,' declared that 'if it had not been for the famine we would all have been starved.'"

BRADY'S DEATH MARKS PASSING OF GREAT MAN

Cashier of Barber Shop Rose To Be Ranked With Morgan and E. H. Harriman.

KEPT HIS FOLLOWING INTACT

Inspired Unswerving Loyalty by His Faith in Men—At His Best as a Builder

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Wall Street lacks leadership and the recent demise of Anthony N. Brady removed another great figure from the financial galaxy depleted by the deaths of E. H. Harriman, J. P. Morgan, John W. Gates and Edwin Hawley. As a financier of great ability, his leadership in commercial enterprises was made pre-eminent by the success he attained in building up Brooklyn Rapid Transit. Consolidated and People's Gas, American Tobacco and United States Rubber, for which he made conspicuous markets during periods of activity in stocks.

His constructive ability appeared to be limitless and his policies had a wide following, particularly in public utility operations. At the time of his death, he was a director in sixty corporations. Mr. Brady's first important business transaction was the acquisition and consolidation of traction companies in and about Albany. He built these up to a high degree of public efficiency, as well as profit to stockholders, and eventually sold them at good terms to the Delaware and Hudson. Similarly with the Providence Tractions, which he sold to the New Haven.

He Trusted Men.

Loyalty to his friends and business associates and scrupulous honor in keeping agreements made him one of the great powers of finance, but he went further than that. He trusted men, believing that those with whom he chose to do business would be as highly honorable as himself. In his relations with his friends he was not alone loyal.

He went out of his way to help them. The result was that most of them were ever on the alert to help him. Wall Street never heard as much as a rumor of dissension in the Brady party, nor as much as an idle report of financial troubles among any of Mr. Brady's associates. But it does know of wealthy men in Albany who were Mr. Brady's friends in early days and business associates in New York and elsewhere who have become both wealthy and prominent by his guidance. It knows also that no Wall Street party ever held closer together or ever transacted such important matters of business with so little noise or criticism.

Loyal as Morgan.

"Mr. Brady stuck by his companies," said one of his business associates, "and he stuck by his friends. Toward them his loyalty was of the intensity of Mr. Morgan. Like Mr. Morgan, he never withdrew from a transaction once he had given his word that he would participate. He was a man of high honor in his dealings with all his associates and it was to his loyalty to them and their loyalty and admiration for him that his success was largely due."

In his management of Consolidated Gas and its subsidiary, the New York Edison Company, companies which were formerly bitterly assailed, Mr. Brady's policy was liberal to the point where it eventually disarmed criticism. It was through him that George B. Cortelyou, on his retirement from the Cabinet, was persuaded to accept the presidency of Consolidated Gas and he collaborated with Mr. Cortelyou in settling all the mass of litigation with New York City and State. As a builder and a man of constructive policy Mr. Brady's work was before every one in the development of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit.

The company had been exploited in the stock market before he acquired control and had never paid a dividend. Since that time it steadily developed along straight business lines, placed on a 6 per cent dividend basis and is an important factor in the rapid transit work now under way in Greater New York.

Made Money in Tea.

His career in the world in business began in a barber shop in Albany, N. Y., as cashier. Later he started a small tea business. In that he showed the remarkable business ability through which he accumulated a fortune. He established a chain of stores in several cities in the northern part of New York, and, it was said, through this enterprise he obtained the capital with which he began his early operations on a larger scale. His next enterprise was to manipulate a corner in quinine. Then he obtained stock in the Albany Gas Company and began his operations as a promoter. Soon after he had become connected with the gas interests he bought several large granite quarries, which he disposed of at a big profit, and again turned his attention to gas and secured several large interests in Albany, Troy and Chicago.

Studied Gas Chemistry.

When he had become interested in gas Mr. Brady began a systematic study of the business in all of its phases. He devoted weeks to the study of chemistry as applied to the manufacture of gas and finally adopted the De Mote plan. To make the improvements he needed additional capital, so he took his plans to Roswell P. Flower and Edward Murphy. They interested E. C. Benedict and Grover Cleveland and entered into a deal by which the gas plants of Albany were purchased outright. He went into the oil business and organized the Manhattan Oil Company, of Lima, Ohio, selling its output to the Chicago Gas Company.

Big Money in South's Sweet Potato Crop if Properly Stored and Marketed

Value of Sweet Potatoes Increases 80 Per Cent During Last Ten Years—Ninety Per Cent of Crop Grown in South Atlantic States. Great Demand Not Supplied.

CHARLES A. WHITTLE.
Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Speaking of big money-making crops suited to the South, what is the matter with the sweet potato?

For sure corps, good returns and a growing market, take your hat off to the sweet potato patch. Georgia is "pulling down" some $5,000,000, Alabama some $4,000,000, Mississippi $3,500,000, Louisiana $3,000,000, Tennessee $4,000,000, North Carolina $5,000,000, South Carolina $3,000,000, Virginia $3,000,000, Kentucky $1,000,000, Arkansas $2,000,000, Texas $2,500,000, Florida $2,000,000 in sweet potatoes each year.

Ask any groceryman if he ever has enough sweet potatoes to supply the demand. If he has, he is the exception to the rule.

The South is the natural habitat of the sweet potato. It is up to the Southern States to supply the demand. The demand is growing, the sweet potato patches are growing, but the demand is quite a lap ahead and gaining. In fact, there is a wide-open, attractive opportunity for the Southern farmer in growing sweet potatoes. Why not "go to it"?

The Spread of the Potato Patch.

Under the inspiration of a growing price and an enlarging market, the sweet potato patches have extended their area during the census decade previous to 1909 39.3 per cent for the country as a whole. While the Southern States have them all beaten in advantages, every State in the Union is growing potatoes and only four are falling away from the habit and show a decrease in the decade period mentioned. These are Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois and Texas.

Georgia takes first place in the amount of revenue derived from the sweet potato according to census figures. Other Southern States in their order are North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Virginia, South Carolina, Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee, Arkansas, Florida and Kentucky.

The increase which the census shows for the last report for each State is as follows: Louisiana 174 per cent, Oklahoma 155 per cent, Arkansas 154 per cent, Alabama 112 per cent, Mississippi 110 per cent, North Carolina 104 per cent, Georgia 85 per cent, Tennessee 84 per cent, South Carolina 70 per cent, Kentucky 66 per cent, Virginia 56 per cent, Florida 37 per cent.

The Southern States grow a very great part of all the sweet potatoes, and will continue to grow them for the special reason that the soil, climate and long growing season favor this kind of tuber. Therefore, the increase in acreage and revenue from this source will belong to the South in the future as in the past.

Increase in Price.

The census report tells us that for the last decade reported that the value of the sweet potato crop in 1909 in the South Atlantic States was three-fourths greater than it was in 1899; in the West South Central States nearly twice as great. Since the South Atlantic States grow over 90 per cent of the sweet potato crop, it is important that particular reference should be made to this territory.

In Georgia, for instance, the average value of a bushel of potatoes increased 13 cents during the census decade and has increased more since then. In North Carolina the increase in price per bushel during the last census decade was 14 cents. In Alabama the increase has been 18 cents per bushel, in Louisiana 9 cents per bushel, in Mississippi 17 cents.

The increase in the value of sweet potatoes in the country as a whole for the last census decade was 13 cents per bushel, or 30 per cent. The increase has been continuing. While there has been a general increase in the value of all crops of the United States, contributing to the higher cost of living, yet the larger demand for the sweet potato has pushed ahead of the general average considerably.

While values have been estimated in generalities of a census report, it goes without saying that the intelligent, thrifty farmer has little to do with such general averages. They are very far beneath him. His yields per acre, his returns per bushel are always much in excess of the general average. It is possible for the intelligent farmer, planting on good land, to grow from 100 to 300 bushels of sweet potatoes per acre. It is easy enough to average from 75 cents to $1 per bushel. It is possible by good storing to get from $2 to $3 per bushel or even more by home canning.

Profits Can Easily Be Increased.

When a farmer finds the local markets flooded at potato gathering time, and can get only 50 cents a bushel, he is disposed to believe that there is not much in the sweet potato business. A great many growers are content to market their crops under such unfavorable conditions, rather than go to a little more trouble and get much better prices.

In some of the potato-growing sections of the South the co-operative marketing societies which have handled the strawberry, cantaloupe, beans or other early crops, also handle the sweet potato crop in its season, shipping to some Northern market. Usually better prices can be had in the Northern market than prevails in the local Southern markets.

Where canneries have been established an increasing amount of sweet potatoes are being canned each year, netting the farmer who knows how to can successfully large returns. Even where the potatoes are turned over to the commercial canning plants the revenue is larger as a rule than is to be obtained upon a flooded market.

Storing is the Best Method.

More can be obtained from sweet potatoes by storing them than by any other method, with the possible exception of canning. Since canned sweet potatoes are not in as great demand as the natural tuber, of course, there is a danger of overdoing the canning business at the first.

A very valuable bulletin has just been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled "Storing and Marketing Sweet Potatoes," by H. C. Thompson. This has appeared as Farmers' Bulletin 548, and should be in the hands of every farmer in the South who is interested in growing and marketing sweet potatoes. Its particular value is in its information as to how to store sweet potatoes. It is well known to every grower of sweet potatoes that the storing proposition is quite different from that of the Irish potato. Many methods have been used for storing the sweet potato in the South. Some of them are successful, but most are not.

The usual method is to bank them—that is, bed them in straw and cover up with dirt, preferably under a shed, but if in the open, the mound is covered with boards. This method, while serving well for the Irish potato, is not so good for the sweet potato, which carries a greater percentage of water in its makeup.

It is for the purpose of giving the farmers who grow sweet potatoes a practical, workable storage plan that the bulletin referred to has been issued.

Many Potatoes Spoil.

The writer says that from 25 to 50 per cent of the sweet potatoes stored in pits or banks spoil, and those that remain are not to be considered of first-class quality. He says that the only safe and practical method of storing sweet potatoes is in a storage house.

To keep sweet potatoes in good condition they must be well matured before digging, carefully handled, well dried or cured after being put in the house, and kept at a uniform temperature after they are cured.

A potato is ready to be dug when after breaking one, the exposed broken surface dries in a few minutes. If it remains moist, the potato is not mature.

The potato should be carefully handled when it is intended for storage. It should be put in baskets or boxes and placed in the bins with the least jolting and bruising possible. If stored in the kind of house which is suggested, they can there be properly cured.

The Best Storage House.

While a cheap storage house can be made to serve the purpose, experience has taught that to maintain right temperature the cost of fuel and the trouble will soon offset the extra cost of erecting a good house at the start.

A desirable wooden house is preferable because it is cheaper and easier to keep dry. It should be built on posts or piers to admit of the circulation of air all around it. The "dug-out" or house partly built underground is advised against for use in the South because of the practical impossibility of keeping such a house dry. Moisture, of course, means rot.

For building a storage house that will hold 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of potatoes, a house 20 by 40 feet may be erected. On the sleepers a rough floor can be laid, and on top of this a layer of heavy building paper placed, and on top of this matched flooring.

The walls can be built by putting on the outside of the studding board an inch thick nailed on diagonally. Over this a layer of building paper should be put, and then matched siding. On the inside of the studding a layer of ceiling should be placed; on top of this a layer of building paper, and then matched board of wainscoting. In the lower South it is claimed that the first layer of ceiling on the studding inside may be omitted.

The sides should be well tied together with scantlings four feet part so as to be over the partitions for the bins. Any kind of roof may be used provided it be made tight to keep out the cold. Galvanized iron is preferable. A layer of roofing paper over the rafters will serve to keep the cold air out.

Coat of Paper Needed.

On the lower sides of the rafters should be put a coat of building paper and on this a layer of matched material.

The space between the walls should be left open. No filling serves as well as the air itself for keeping the building free from moisture.

Thorough ventilation is necessary. Put three windows on each side, a door in each end and at least two ventilators in the top of the roof. The windows should be within 18 inches or two feet of the floor and windows and doors should be made to fit tight and keep out the cold. Where glass windows are used, outside shutters should be employed. It is needful that there should be one or more glass windows to admit light, while working inside in the winter. Ventilators in the roof must also be provided with coverings to keep out the cold.

The bins should have movable floors, made of slats one inch thick and four wide, leaving one inch space between each slat. The same is true of the walls of the bins. The purpose in making a movable floor in the bin is to admit of removing, cleaning and disinfecting it during the summer. Between 6 and 12 inches of space should be left in the walls and the bins to admit of the circulation of air. In slatting up the bins, space to the width of the separating scantling can also be made, that is, each bin should have a separate end.

Log House Can Be Used.

Instead of going to the expense of erecting the building described, many Southern farms will be found a tenant house, perhaps a log house, which can be converted into a sweet potato house at little cost, remembering to make it as air-tight as far as possible and introduce the ventilation features which have been described.

After the potatoes have been put in the storage house the temperature should be maintained from 80 to 85 degrees Fahrenheit for ten days or two weeks, depending on weather conditions. Ventilation is absolutely necessary at this period and whether the temperature can be maintained at the height mentioned or not, it is better to keep all windows and ventilators open to drive out the moisture-ladened air. If moisture collects on the wall or ceiling at this period a fire must be built at once to dry it out.

When the potatoes are thoroughly dried or cured the temperature should be gradually reduced and kept as near as possible around 55 degree during the storage season. If the temperature goes below 48 degrees a fire should be made in the house, or the house opened in the middle of the day if the temperature is high enough. If the temperature in the house goes above 60 degrees, the house should be opened in the cool of the day to lower the temperature to 54 or 55. The house should have some ventilation every day.

Secret of High Prices.

Potatoes bruised and cut during the digging and handling accounts for the poor price which many of them bring. The secret of getting high prices is to carefully clean and pack and to put on the market when there is a good demand. The storage house will provide for the latter.

Potatoes requires very little trouble but it pays. To pack the right kind of potatoes is easy enough when proper precautions are taken. First it is better to use plows with rolling colters on the beam to cut the vines, and with rods attached to the mold board to free the roots from the soil and vine. The potatoes can then be taken from the ground with hand and should be sorted at this time. Those of uniform size and good quality should go into one pile for the market, those selected for seed in another and the remainder can be canned or fed to stock. Potatoes should not be tossed from row to row, nor packed in bags even to haul to the storage house. It is better to handle them in baskets or boxes to storage and to market and thus save waste from bruises and rotting.

Some Sweet Potato Facts.

Based upon the discussion of the bulletin referred to in this article certain conclusions have been summarized as follows:

The value of the sweet potato has increased about 80 per cent in the last ten years. With methods of storing and marketing the present value could be doubled.

Sweet potatoes can be kept satisfactorily in a storage house where the temperature and moisture conditions can be controlled.

Sweet potatoes to keep well must be well matured, carefully handled, thoroughly cured and kept at a uniform temperature while in storage.

Thorough ventilation is essential during the curing period.

The temperature should be kept at about 80 degrees or 85 degrees Fahrenheit during the curing period and reduced gradually to 55 degrees after the potatoes are cured. Fluctuations of temperature should be avoided throughout the storage period.

The potatoes should be carefully graded, cleaned and packed in neat and attractive packages.

Sweet potatoes should never be marketed in bags nor in bulk.

Veneer barrels or bushel hampers are desirable packages to use during mild weather and double-headed stave barrels or tight boxes in cold weather.

U. S. Makes Big Gain In Trade to South

Exports $10,000,000 More Than Previous Year—Imports Remain Almost the Same.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—While trade between the United States and five of the principal South American countries, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Uruguay, still is in favor of the southern republics, this country made a considerable gain during the past fiscal year. It reduced by $10,000,000 the wide margin of difference between its imports from and exports to those countries.

Imports valued at $187,000,000 are the same as in 1912. In exports the United States gained, shipping $126,000,000 of merchandise this year against $116,000,000 last year. Increases were made in shipments to all countries named, except Argentina.

In the past year Argentina bought $53,000,000 and sold $27,000,000; Brazil, $43,000,000 bought, $120,000,000 sold; Chile, $16,000,000 bought, $28,000,000 sold; Peru, $7,000,000 bought; $10,000,000 sold; Uruguay, $2,000,000 bought, $7,000,000 sold.

Auto Exports Grow Forty-fold in Decade

Canada Alone Takes Cars, Parts and Accessories Valued at $9,200,000 in Year.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Automobiles and automobile parts to the value of $40,000,000 were shipped from the United States in the past fiscal year, as against $1,000,000 in 1902, a decade ago, according to figures by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Of last years shipments, $28,500,000 were in finished automobiles.

Canada was the largest buyer, with 7,200 cars, worth $9,200,000, while England bought 4,000, valued at $3,000,000.

Less than 52,000,000 worth of automobiles were imported, at an average price of $2,300, while in 1907 more than $4,000,000 worth were brought in at an average price of $2,400.

COAL TRADE PROSPERITY.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—The semi-annual report made up of official and semi-official figures indicates that the coal production in Alabama in 1913 will go between 18,000,000 and 20,000,000 tons, the largest in the history of the industry in this State. Several of the larger coal mining companies in Alabama have orders in hand which will warrant the operation of coal mines through the balance of the year.

DAWES SEES IN CURRENCY BILL FINANCIAL RUIN

Chicago Banker, Former Comptroller, Says Administration Act Would Bring Disaster.

That the enactment of the administration currency bill would be the forerunner of commercial disaster by placing the banking system under the control of politics, is the prediction of Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois and formerly Comptroller of the Currency.

Mr. Dawes issued a critical review of the chief feature of the bill. He is the first State banker to discuss the measure in detail.

"The industry and capital of the country must awaken now to the menace that confronts them in the administration currency bill," he warns, "and not wait until after they have paid the price of prosperity for the knowledge which experience would bring."

Objections to Bill.

His principal objections to the bill are summarized in the following paragraphs:

"This plan compelling the national banks to furnish to competitors (the proposed Federal reserve banks) both capital and business, and divorcing ownership from control by putting these competitors under the control of political appointees, brings the banking system of this country into the situation again from which it emerged after Andrew Jackson, backed by the State banks on one hand and the radical politicians on the other, ruined the Second Bank of the United States and plunged the country into the devastating and terrible panic of 1837.

Says It Will Repeat History.

"If this bill is passed our banking system is again projected into politics. If one would know what this means to the business and prosperity of the nation, let him read the financial history of the United States from 1830 to 1840."

"While it is so constructed as to appear on its face less radical in its grants of centralized power than the Aldrich bill, is, in fact, much more radical in its grants of such power. Such of the advantages of the Aldrich bill—as, for instance, the provisions for elasticity in our currency and for the mobilization of bank reserves—which it seeks to retain, it offsets by other provisions which will entail greater evils than the ones from which we now suffer.

Must Furnish Capital.

"This bill proposes to compel the national banks to furnish the capital for a number of Federal reserve banks without any ultimate control of government appointees, which reserve banks, under the provisions of the law, become competitors of the national banks and State banks.

"Besides their capital, it compels the national banks to turn over to these competitors several hundred millions of reserve deposit—in other words, to contribute to them both capital and business. As the Federal reserve banks pay no interest on these forced reserve deposits, they will be no mean competitors in their use in open market operations.

No Limit to Loss.

"No limit is put to the extent of loss which the national banks may suffer on their investment in Federal reserve bank stock, but they are limited to a 5 per cent return as possible profits.

"The Government which has received par for its 2 per cent bonds, deposited by the national banks to secure their circulation, if this law is passed threatens with loss any national bank which has outstanding circulation and desires to retire from the system.

The real reason why no adequate protection against the fall in price of the 2s, due to the withdrawal of the currency privilege, is given to outstanding holders of them seems to be to make it expensive for national banks having a large circulation to join the exodus from the national system which will occur if this bill passes into law in its present form. It is not apparently a matter of oversight or carelessness that the interests of outside holders of 2 per cent bonds are thus disregarded.

Say U. S. Loans May Tighten Money

Bankers Declare Funds Will Come to New York, and Not Aid Crop Movement.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Bank officers in the financial district took exception to the statement by Senator Tillman that they had ruined the Southern farmer, and in answer to this said loans to the South this spring had been about 50 per cent greater than in the corresponding period last year.

One said: "Government aid might seriously tighten money, as out-of-town bankers who get the money at 2 per cent would immediately pay off New York loans carrying 5 to 5 1-2 per cent, so that the money would find its way to New York and not meet any commercial or agricultural needs.

Another bank head said: "Banks of New York City have loaned more money this year to the South by a good sight than last year. This bank, for instance, loaned 50 per cent more to the South than last year.

"To-day we loaned $5,000,000 more to our banking correspondents in the South than on the same day last year."

J. S. Alexander, vice president of the National Bank of Commerce, said:

"No borrower from the South, West, North or locally has requested loans from the National Bank of Commerce without receiving the fullest consideration and treatment satisfactory to himself."

WESTERN BELT DRY; EAST NOW IS DOING WELL

Cotton Traders Keenly Absorbed in Weather Maps as the Critical Month Progresses.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 9.—Observing the weather map and trying to get a line on its indications is a favorite occupation for many people in the cotton belt at this time. The occasion for such keen interest is that August is perhaps the most crucial single month of the season, for loss sustained therein is permanent. So far the present month has brought no developments of unusual character, but it is a mooted question whether the crop has lost condition enough to be serious. There is no trouble starting an argument when the question is sprung, and around it has hinged in a large measure the fluctuation in the speculative market.

The only sources of a crop scare yet have been Texas and Oklahoma, which usually contribute their share of such scares, though rarely failing to have satisfactory crops as a whole. Lack of sufficient moisture is the trouble, and the rains received about the last of last week afforded but partial relief. They were very welcome and some sections can go for quite a while longer without suffering, but there are large areas which still are suffering and seem to be losing some of their recent promise. Only in the past few days has Oklahoma figured much in complaints, but temperatures have been very high and some sections for weeks have not had enough moisture. Part of the wave that was so disastrous to the corn belt reached into the cotton belt and caused deterioration.

Weevils Cause Trouble.

The central belt has not contributed any complaints worth while, most reports having been glowing in character, though the weevil sections have been suffering as expected. The recent showers tended to stimulate the pest to renewed activity and to increase their number, and it is feared they will take very heavy toll from the crop.

While there was for several days fear of the eastern belt getting too much rain for the crop to do its best, such fears have dwindled since showers have become less frequent, and it now is felt that without something happening during the next few weeks, and provided there is not early frost, the yield will be ahead of last year by a goodly margin.

The market, working down to around 11 cents and a little lower for futures, has not been surprising, in view of the character of advices coming from trade centers. At the same time it is regarded as significant that the disposition to sell as it nears 11 cents was appreciably lessened and buying orders increased, indicating a feeling among spinners and others that prices were low enough until more light could be had as to consumptive requirements and probable supply. The fact that contract prices were $7.50 a bale under what they were a year ago also acted as a stay against pressure.

Spinners May Buy Soon.

There is still little light on the important question of what spinners are going to do about buying their early supplies. Conditions and other things seem to indicate the probability of them becoming free buyers just as soon as offerings are large enough to interest them, but inquiry elicits the information that the forward commitments by buyers to the spinners are not as heavy as they have been in the past.

It may be that the spinners have provided against some of their requirements by the purchase of October and December futures, for it has been thought for quite a while that support to the market around the bottom levels was coming from the consumers.

Movement of the new crop is not increasing as fast as some predicted, for receipts are much behind two years ago and are very little ahead of last year. The present weather in Texas, however, will force maturity of the crop and hasten movement.

No Money to Move Big Canadian Crops

Funds Harder to Get Than Ever Before—Government Urged to Furnish $10,000,000.

CALGARY, ALB., Aug. 9.—Western Canada now faces a peculiar financial situation. With the biggest crops in history, ready for harvesting in two weeks, money is tighter than ever known here.

Newspapers are urging the Dominion Government to loan $10,000,000 in Alberta either to farmers or by taking up provincial or city bond issues. Banks claim they have no funds to loan.

Within ten days two daily papers in Alberta have temporarily suspended publication, expecting to resume in the fall. English banks are coming to the aid of farmers in marketing crops.

Atchison, Kansas, Must Pay Its Bonds

New York Concerns Get State Supreme Court Writ of Mandamus.

TOPEKA, Aug. 9.—The Kansas Supreme Court has issued an order granting an alternate writ of mandamus against the city of Atchison to make the city pay off the $246,000 of bonds which fell due July 1, and for which no provision had been made to pay.

The court was asked to grant the writ by E. D. Levison & Co. and the Columbia Knickerbocker Trust Company, of New York, holders of $70,000 worth of the bonds. A restraining order against the city making any tax levy unless it includes a levy for the payment of the bonds was also issued.

Under the order of court, Atchison must either pay the bonds in November or refund them at the current rates instead of 4 per cent.

Uses Parcel Post To Collect Debts

Keen Kansas Merchant Sends C. O. D. Packages and Gets Money on Stale Accounts.

A Kansas merchant has found a new use for the parcel post. When the C. O. D. feature went into effect, on July 1, he hit upon an idea to collect a number of small accounts which he had been carrying for some time, and which had caused considerable loss during a period of several years.

A number of small boxes were obtained and filled with waste paper, and on the top was placed a receipted bill for the proper amount. A five-cent stamp was required for each box, and the C. O. D. fee was 10 cents for each package. The next day the returns began to come in, and nearly every case the debtor paid the amount, supposing that the package contained something of value, but, of course, not being permitted to confirm this suspicion before opening it.

NEW ORLEANS EXCHANGE MAY GAIN PRESTIGE

Substitute for Clarke Bill Aimed at New York but Not at the Southern Center.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—The weekly weather report, issued Tuesday, did not entirely confirm the private reports of heavy rains in Texas. According to the Government, rains were still needed over large portions of Texas, and in Oklahoma it was stated that vegetation was suffering from lack of moisture and that general rains were much needed.

The weak tone exhibited by Liverpool, which reopened Tuesday morning after a holiday extending from the previous Friday, encouraged bears to disregard the unfavorable character of the Government weather report. Consequently, prices were hammered rather aggressively after the report came out, and the market closed with October and December contracts selling practically at the level of 11 cents, although middling cotton still holds steady at 12 cents.

Continued high temperatures in Texas and Oklahoma Wednesday, with no rains reported or in sight, gave a better tone to the market, which has since recovered part of the decline established in the early part of the week. Many reports of crop deterioration are coming in from the western belt, and even from Arkansas reports of damage by the prolonged spell of hot, dry weather have been received. Should reports of this character continue for a few days more, a real crop scare might develop.

Fear Clarke Bill.

No advance of consequence is likely, however, as, with the Clarke bill hanging over the market, no bull campaign can be inaugurated. Considering the extent of the short interest that has recently been created, an advance of a cent a pound would be nothing, were the drouth in Texas and Oklahoma to remain unbroken for another week and were Washington to flash out the news that the Clarke bill would not pass.

The news received here from Washington regarding the Clarke bill is considered more encouraging by local cotton interests. The plan that is now being considered by prominent Southern Senators, among whom Senator Hoke Smith and Senator Gore are numbered, is to amend the Smith bill, which specifies the grades to be delivered on contract and calls for commercial differences. To the Smith bill, thus amended, it is proposed to add the Clarke amendment as a penalty.

Favors South.

In this way, the New York Cotton Exchange would be compelled to comply with the regulations proposed by the Government, or else that market would be taxed out of existence. The New Orleans Cotton Exchange, which is only too willing to do business under the terms proposed by the Government and has already adopted the Government standard of types, would thus be able to continue, while New York, being an artificial market, would be practically wiped out of existence. The cotton business of the entire country would thus center in this market, just as the wheat business centers in Chicago.

In anticipation of such an outcome of the proposed legislation at Washington, New Orleans Cotton Exchange shares are being quietly sought. Recently a share sold below $1,500, but now $1,500 is being bid, with no shares offering below $2,000.

LIND CALLS ADMIRAL IN CONFERENCE AT VERA CRUZ

Ambassador Sends Mysterious Message to Commander of Fleet for Meeting Immediately on His Arrival at the Mexican Port.

Huerta Maintains Iron-Hand Attitude in Spite of International Menace From Revolutionary Armies and Threatened Coercion.

Special Cable to The American.

VERA CRUZ, MEX., Aug. 9.—John E. Lind, special envoy to Mexico, arrived here at 1 o'clock this afternoon on the battleship New Hampshire. He was at once transferred to the battleship Louisiana.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 9.—Captain Snowden, of the battleship New Hampshire, at the direction of John Lind, Special Ambassador from President Wilson to Mexico, to-day sent the following wireless to Admiral Fletcher, commander of the flotilla of United States warships in the harbor here:

"Governor Lind wishes to see the United States Consul and Admiral Fletcher immediately upon his arrival at Vera Cruz Saturday. Governor Lind will not go to Mexico City until Sunday."

Sensational rumors were circulated as to the cause for the conference. The New Hampshire will probably arrive this evening.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Maintaining his iron hand attitude in spite of international menace from revolutionary armies and threatened coercion, Provisional President Huerta to-day continued his diplomatic battle with the United States by giving orders to draft another note of protest against the coming of Special Ambassador Lind, unless the United States recognizes Mexico or halts Mr. Lind before he arrives in this city.

Situation Is Tense.

A tense situation exists here pending the arrival of Mr. Lind, who has been retarded by the State Department at Washington.

Huerta's hope that defiance of the United States might break down the revolutionary spirit in the north seems to have been futile, according to a message from General Venustiano Carranza, leader of the rebels.

This was a reply to overtures to Carranza to join his forces to the regular army in the event of a "foreign invasion." However, Huerta has gained fresh followers among the radical element by his defiance of President Wilson. Supporters of the provisional president charge that the United States is preparing to act as it did in Cuba.

Sensational reports were current today relative to the diplomatic mission of General Felix Diaz to Tokio. Ostensibly Diaz is going to thank the Japanese Government for its representation at the Mexican centennial, but the belief is growing that Japan has consented to make a treaty with Mexico, and that Diaz is really a special ambassador. This treaty, it is reported, has to do with a league of common interests and not with commercial right. It follows the movement of the Government to invite 50,000 Japanese emigrants here to colonize the state of Morelos, which has been nearly depopulated by the rebellion.

Insists on Recognition.

Whether Huerta has any more cards to play in his diplomatic fight against outside interference with Mexican affairs is a question known only to the provisional President and his closest advisers. Huerta insists on "recognition and no parley," but the Government is not in condition to enforce his threat by war.

The national treasury is nearly depleted, and the army material of the country has been thinned to a minimum by three years of revolution.

By diplomacy, however, he might still be able, by playing upon the Latin-American republics' fear of annexation and upon the hostility of foreign powers to the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine, to force the United States into a compromising position.

Even Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy here, is not acquainted with the details of Mr. Lind's mission. He has so informed the Mexican Foreign Minister.

Sulzer Used Funds Of Campaign to Play Market, Is Charge

Chairman Frawley, of Investigating Committee, Says This Is Enough to Warrant Impeachment.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Governor William Sulzer, of New York, was nearly $50,000 in debt as the result of stock market speculations at the time of his nomination, and used contributions to his campaign fund to make additional purchases of stocks while this debt was hanging over him, according to testimony presented to the Frawley committee of the Legislature.

The evidence is sufficient to warrant proceedings to impeach the Governor for violation of the corrupt practices act, Chairman Frawley declares. A decision as to the committee's recommendation is expected by Monday.

The Governor, according to the evidence, had dealings with three different stock exchange firms and was saved from being sold out by one firm by L. N. Josephthal, a Wall Street banker, and a member of the Governor's staff as naval reserve aide. Josephthal, it was brought out, paid a debit balance of $26,739 still standing against the account on July 15 last. This was after the Governor had received repeated calls for more margin.

The Governor's transactions with other firms were for cash, and it was in connection with one of these that Governor Sulzer, according to the evidence, used campaign contributions.

DEL MONTE, CAL., Aug. 9.—Asilomar, the splendid new conference grounds of the California, Arizona and Nevada Young Women's Christian Association, which occupies 30 acres of ground on the ocean shore near Pacific Grove, was formally dedicated with a beautiful ceremony, including a pageant of 400 girls, typifying association work.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, of San Francisco, whose generous assistance last year and this did much to make a permanent camp possible, gave the dedicatory address and gave the conference grounds the name of Asilomar, which means "retreat."

Callie Hoke Smith Capital Debutante

Make-up of First Democratic "Bud Bouquet" Puzzles Washington's Younger Set.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The make-up of Washington first Democratic debutante bouquet is the question that is agitating the younger set. It is confidently expected that Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, daughter of the Speaker, will be one of the buds, and Miss Frances Moore, the daughter of Clarence R Moore, one of the Titanic heroes, another.

Resident society will furnish two attractive debutantes, who are not only socially prominent, but from Democratic families as well. They are Miss Margaret Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Britton and Miss Beatrice Clover, the youngest daughter of Rear Admiral Clover.

A debutante from the Congressional set will be Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia. Other Congressional buds are the Misses Weaver, Church and Duval.

Manuel Pawns His Father's Decorations

Former King of Portugal Unable to Struggle Along on Income of $100,000 a Year.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Despite his allowance of $50,000 a year from King George and at least that sum from private sources, it is learned that former King Manuel, of Portugal, has been forced to pawn the decorations once belonging to his father. One of these decorations, a diamond cross with a large sapphire in the center, is still in the hands of a pawnbroker near Richmond, where Manuel is now staying with his mother, Queen Amelie.

The fortunes of the dethroned monarch will be recouped by his approaching marriage. It is known that he is very extravagant and his mother is none too practical.

The German Emperor has settled the puzzling question of how to treat the exiled monarch's marriage to a German princess. He will allow Prince Eitel Frederick to attend as a special guest, but not as his personal representative.

GIVES OWN LIFE TO SAVE THOSE ABOARD BOAT

Divers Exploring Wreck of Steamboat Peters Lee Find Modern Jim Bludsoe in Hold.

ALL THE PASSENGERS ESCAPE

Engineer Kept Craft's Nose Stuck in Mud Until All Save He Were Safe on Shore.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 9.—Divers who explored the steamboat Peters Lee on the bottom of the Mississippi River at Lake Providence, La., to-day reported finding the body of Engineer Frank O'Neil, his hand holding the engine throttle.

He died there when the boat sank last night, having stayed at his post and held the boat's nose against the shore until the last of the 50 passengers, most of them women, were helped ashore.

O'Neil's act is practically a realization of the martyrdom of Jim Bludsoe, famed in the poem as the steamboat engineer who held her nose to the bank till all were saved, then was burned to death at his post.

A dance was on when the Peters Lee struck a sunken coal barge. A hole was torn in her side. The captain ordered the pilot to steer for the shore. The boat struck the mud, and officers and crew began taking off the passengers.

Frank O'Neil in the engine room kept the stern wheel churning while the water poured into the hold.

A negro shouted through the engine room door that the boat was sinking.

"I know it!" shouted O'Neil. "You fellows get on up front where you can get off! I'll hold her nose against the shore!"

The last passenger was safely landed when the boat sank in 40 feet of water.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Sir Oliver Lodge, whose researches into the unknown world made him famous, will assert at the meeting of the British Association on September 10 a belief in "an ultimate continuity of existence before and after death as essential to science."

It is inferred he has at least new evidence to offer of immortality.

He once told the world "the boundary between life and death is still substantial, but is wearing thin in places."

Slit Skirts Furnish Mosquito Clan With Choicest Barbecue

Trainload of Winsome Stenographers and Milliners Have to Tramp Through Stegomyia Belt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"All those in favor of slit skirts, please stand up."

Millions of full grown mosquitoes and three or four little fellers were rushing wildly out of their apartment houses on he "Flushing Meadows, about 7 o'clock last night, and took part in the most rollicking barbacue ever held in the East.

Right in the middle of the salt grass waste were five cars of a Long Island Railroad train, stalled. The lights were out, men were running up and down shouting orders and Flushing was two miles away. After the train had stood for a few minutes, out of the passenger cars poured the choicest morsels of humanity that Mr. and Mrs. Culex Pungens and the little Pungenses ever saw. There were stenographers, typewriters, cashiers, millinery attaches and buxom matrons. Slit skirts were numerous.

In an endless procession the five hundred and more suburbanites trailed over the ties toward Flushing. There is some style in the mosquito belt and every member of the family seemed to know at once which of the passengers was dressed a la mode. The squeals and slaps of the fair ones as they tried to stop the onslaught sounded like a tattoo.

The procession lasted for more than two hours and when the last stenographer reached home a unanimous vote was taken declaring the mosquito a pest. Of course, there were some men along, but what self-respecting mosquito would bother with them at such a time?

FRANK OR CONLEY? STILL QUESTION

Issue Firmly Drawn Between Two Men

Crime Definitely Fixed on One of Pair

Famous Case to Solve Mystery of Slaying of Mary Phagan Enters Its Third Week With Public Opinion Constantly Shifting.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The second week of the trial of Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan in the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26, came to a close Saturday noon.

The State's case has been entirely made up in its primary aspects, and the defense has gone into its story of the great crime sufficiently to make clear both its theory and probable line of pleading.

The public, as the case has progressed, has been swayed this way and that, and to-day the remarkable mystery of Mary Phagan's untimely and tragic end remains, in hundreds of minds, quite as much of a mystery as ever.

The Battle Is a See-Saw.

The State has had its good days and its bad days, and the defense has met the same fate. At times things have seemed dismally dark and gloomy for Frank, while at other times the clouds apparently have lifted from about him decidedly.

This much has been made clear:

Either Leo Frank will be shown to be responsible for the death of Mary Phagan, or Jim Conley will.

The one is the heart and soul of the State's contention, and the other is the heart and soul of the defense's contention.

Frank is battling not only to clear himself but to convict Conley.

Conley is battling not only to clear himself, but to convict Frank.

The only difference is that Conley, although not yet indicted, expects to be convicted as an accessory after the fact of the murder, in any event, whereas Frank, already indicted, expects to come absolutely clear and free of all possible connection with the crime.

The one has a heretofore good name to restore in all of its unblemished integrity, the other has merely his present reputation for criminal inclination to preserve against sinister enlargement.

The issue has been sharply and indelibly drawn—it is either Leo Frank's life for Mary Phagan's, or it is Jim Conley's.

The State has shown, or has endeavored to show the following things:

THAT Frank, shortly after noon on April 26, and before five minutes past noon, lured Mary Phagan, for an immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory, and there, because she would not yield to his desires and demands, he knocked her down and immediately thereafter strangled her to death with a small cord, about one-eighth of an inch in thickness.

THAT after strangling her, Frank remained with her dead body until after a girl caller in his office had departed, when he tiptoed to the front of the floor whereupon the murder had been consummated, and secured the help of a negro sweeper, Jim Conley, employed about the place, to dispose of the body.

THAT Conley, under the direction of Frank, wrapped the dead body in a piece of heavy cloth, carried it to the elevator, and thence on the elevator to the basement, where it was placed in an obscure corner in the rear, later to be found by Newt Lee, a negro night watchman, generally held guiltless of direct connection with the crime itself.

THAT Frank, after hiding the body, with Conley's assistance, then induced Conley to write and place beside the dead girl certain illiterate notes fixing the crime, in so far as they might, upon some other person than either Frank or Conley, and that Frank for Conley's services, paid him the sum of $2.50, but not until he had first paid him $200, which was withdrawn under promise to restore that sum later.

THAT Frank had an understanding with Conley, whereby Conley was to return to the factory later in the afternoon on Saturday and burn the body in the basement furnace, but that Conley

YONKERS, Aug. 9.—Reginald P. Shennan, editor of The Rye Courier, already has received one reply to the advertisement inserted in his paper by a "gentlewoman with large tract of land not far from Port Chester," who is seeking "an unselfish, decent, self-supporting man for a husband."

He turned the letter over to the advertiser, whose identity is being guarded carefully. The letter bore a Brooklyn postmark.

AUTOS EMPTY CHURCHES, SAY COUNTRY PREACHERS

MANHATAN, KANS., Aug. 9.—The dwindling of the congregations of country churches, due to the new era of automobiles, which makes it easy for the rural residents to attend services in nearby towns and cities, will be discussed at the Conference of Rural Leaders, July 21 to 25, at the Kansas Agricultural College. Members of the organization declare that Kansas now has about 1,200 abandoned churches in the farming districts.

Jack London Puts Joke on His Appendix

Novelist Tells the Latest on Former Part of Himself and What's Left.

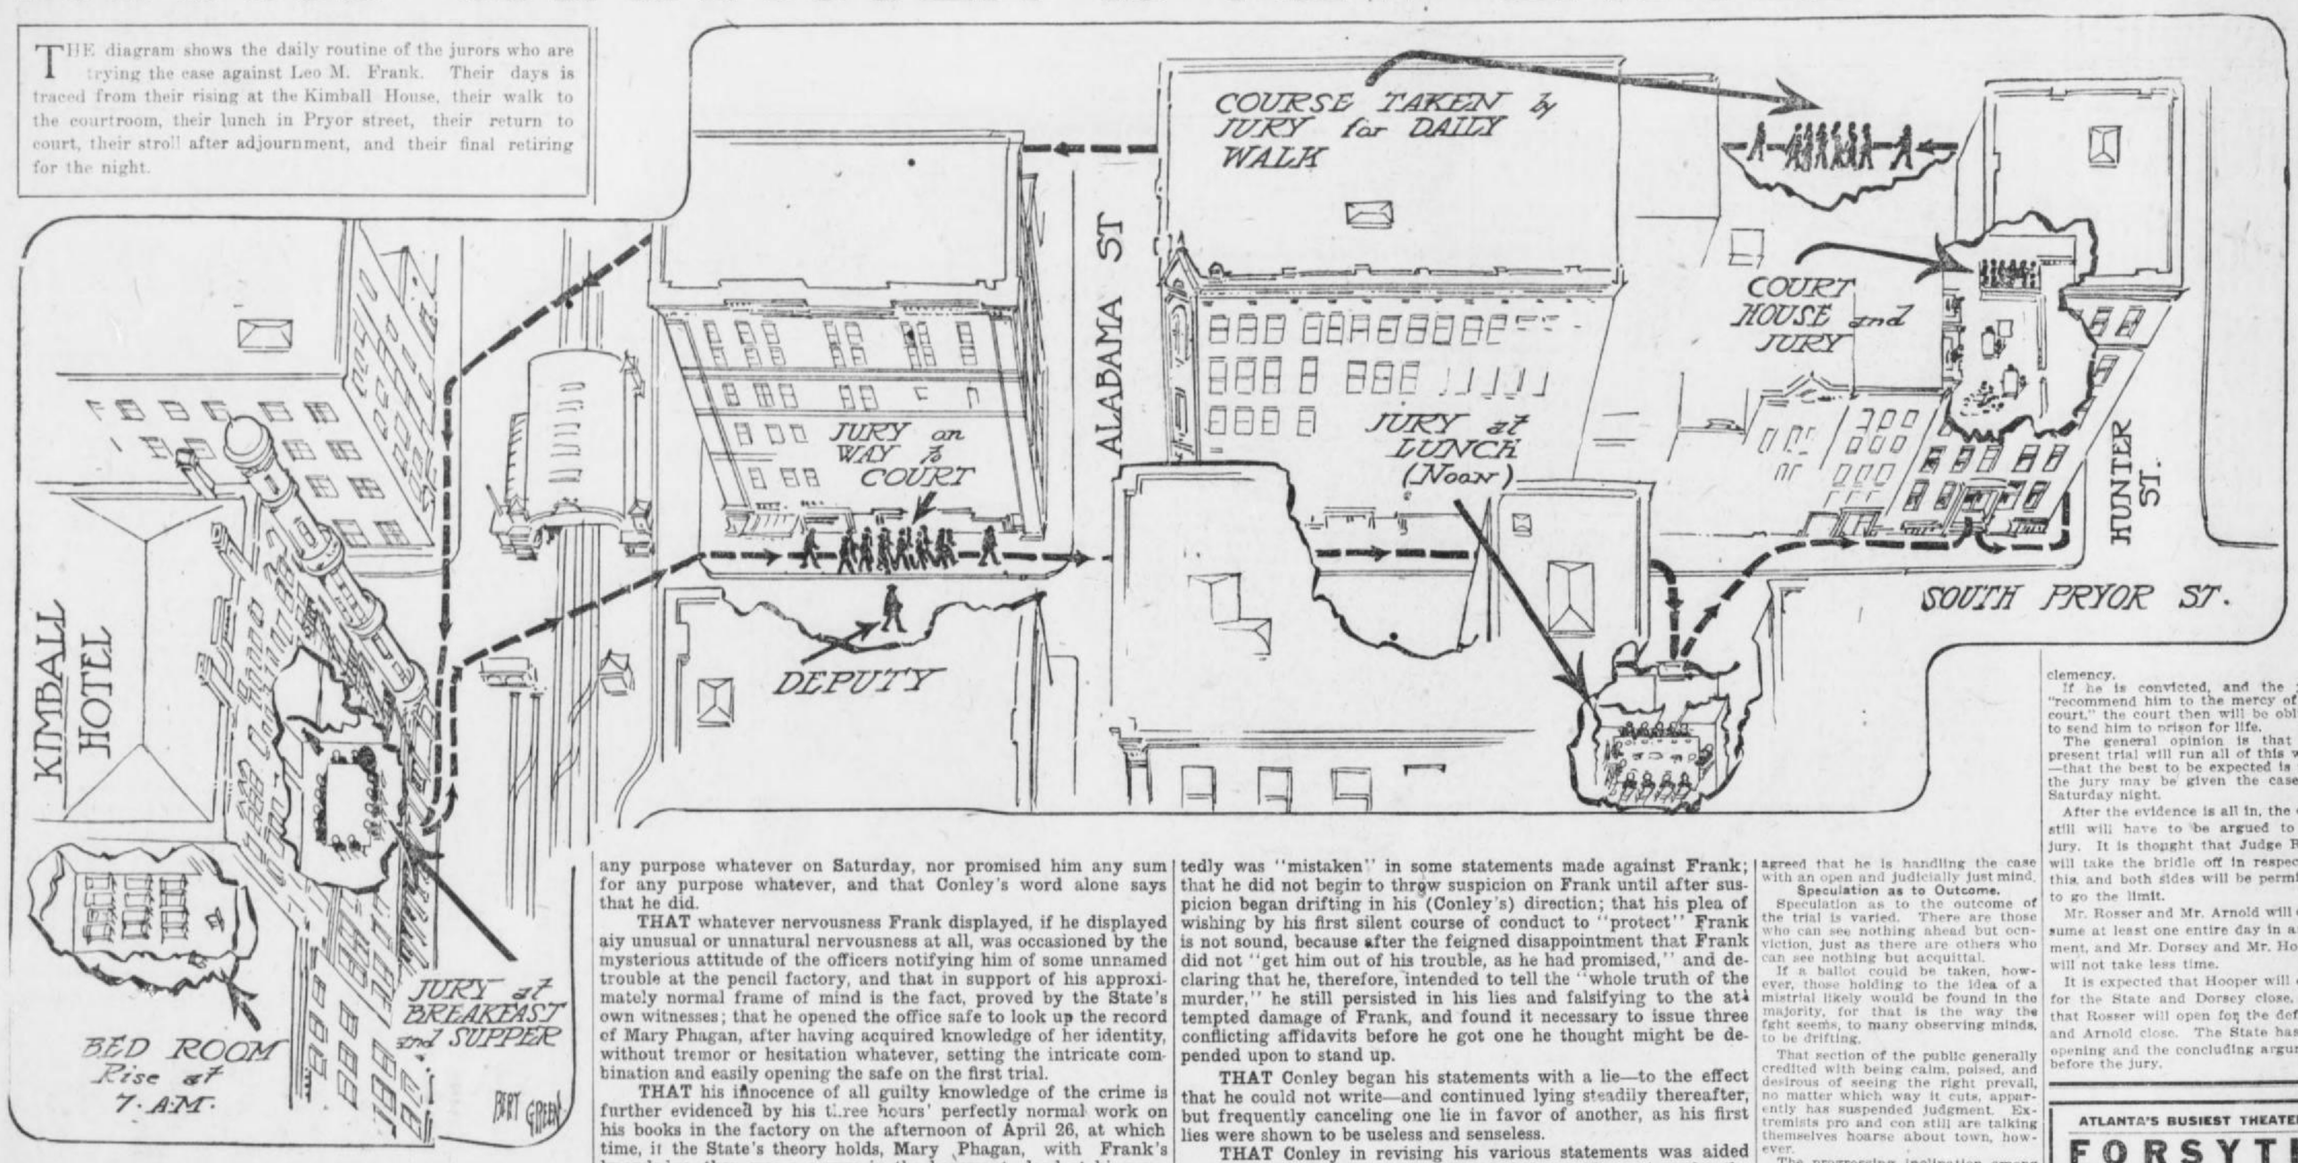
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Here is the latest joke Jack London, the famous author, is telling on himself:

London was operated on recently for appendicitis. After the ordeal the surgeon held up the severed appendix in his fingers for the patient to see. The author looked at it thoughtfully then grinned and said:

"It was a case of all alone in London, wasn't it, doc?"

FRANK'S CHARACTER IS NEW BATTLE GROUND

THE diagram shows the daily routine of the jurors who are trying the case against Leo M. Frank. Their days is traced from their rising at the Kimball House, their walk to the courtroom, their lunch in Pryor street, their return to court, their stroll after adjournment, and their final retiring for the night.



DEFENSE HAS TO CLEAR NAME OF TWO CHARGES

went to sleep in the afternoon and neglected to perform this service.

THAT Frank, called to the factory early in the morning of Sunday, April 27, displaying great nervousness, and while on his way to the factory without having been informed of the dead girl's identity, declined, or at least failed and neglected, to look upon her features at the undertaker's, notwithstanding the fact that he later admitted her identity without having seen her dead.

THAT at the factory, at the place of the crime, his nervousness continued, and that next morning (Monday), when called to the police station for further questioning, he had secured counsel to defend him, notwithstanding the fact that he then had not been placed under arrest.

THAT after having been placed under arrest and indicted for murder, he persistently refused to meet his chief accuser, Jim Conley, face to face, or to discuss any features of the charges lodged against him.

THAT in addition to the crime of murder, as set forth in the indictment, Frank is a dissolute character, practicing the most depraved and perverted crimes with persons of loose morals, and that Jim Conley, on more than one occasion, acted as "lookout" for Frank on the first floor of the factory, while unspeakable and unmentionable things were being enacted above.

The State, in setting up the foregoing allegations, summoned as its principal and all-important witness, Jim Conley, who already made public affidavits to all of the charges set forth, except the one of perversion and the exact time of the crime charged.

Conley, after four or five changed statements theretofore made, set up in his final statement on the stand many other seemingly minor dtails not contained in any previous statement.

The foregoing is the State's case in completed form, except that it yel will have the right to produce witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's witnesses; the defense, in its turn, having the right to a further rebuttal of the State's rebuttal.

The defense has contended, or will contend:

THAT Conley's story is a tissue of frightful lies from start to finish, and that he himself really committed the crime charged against Frank, and that the defense will so demonstrate.

THAT Mary Phagan was not killed as early as 12:05 on the afternoon of April 26, but was, as a matter of fact, killed at least fifteen minutes later than that, if, as a matter of still further fact she wa snot disabled hopelessly about that time, and actually killed even later.

THAT if she was not killed previous to 12:05, as set forth, by the State, that contention being uncompromisingly claimed by the State's own witnesses—Jim Conley and Monteen Stover—then Conley's story is impossible and absurd, and Monteen Stover's evidence entirely negligible.

THAT Frank did not lure Mary Phagan to the rear of the second floor, or to any other place, for any purpose whatever, and that she was only on the second floor sufficiently long to get her pay from the hands of Frank, and that she immediately thereafter left the second floor, going down to the first floor to meet her death at the hands of Conley.

THAT Frank never asked for or received the assistance of Jim Conley in disposing of the body of Mary Phagan, because he was in utter and entire ignorance of the murder until apprised of it Sunday morning.

THAT Frank had nothing whatever to do with the framing of the nates found beside the dead girl, and that in support of such a charge the State has only the word of Jim Conley, intensely interested in shifting the blame from his own guilty shoulders and on to the shoulders of Frank.

THAT Frank never paid Jim Conley any sum of money for any purpose whatever on Saturday, nor promised him any sum for any purpose whatever, and that Conley's word alone says that he did.

THAT whatever nervousness Frank displayed, if he displayed aiy unusual or unnatural nervousness at all, was occasioned by the mysterious attitude of the officers notifying him of some unnamed trouble at the pencil factory, and that in support of his approximately normal frame of mind is the fact, proved by the State's own witnesses; that he opened the office safe to look up the record of Mary Phagan, after having acquired knowledge of her identity, without tremor or hesitation whatever, setting the intricate combination and easily opening the safe on the first trial.

THAT his innocence of all guilty knowledge of the crime is further evidenced by his three hours' perfectly normal work on his books in the factory on the afternoon of April 26, at which time, if the State's theory holds, Mary Phagan, with Frank's knowledge, then was a corpse in the basement, dead at his murderous hands.

THAT Frank, instead of declining to look upon the face of the dead girl at the undertaker's while on his way to the factory Monday morning, did, as a matter of fact, look upon her face and recognized her.

THAT Frank had no counsel until after his retention at police headquarters had been publicly made known, and when he was notoriously under suspicion, and that even then counsel was sent to him by some outside friends, and did not come at his invitation paid off by Frank upstairs, hit her a violent blow upon her head, snatched her purse from her hand, and at once threw her body into the cellar by way of a nearby open space, for fear of someone coming into the building; that likely the blow first delivered was not sufficient to kill, and that her actual death was hastened, or may have been hastened later in the cellar below, by means of strangulation, there being always there an abundance of the very cord employed or supposed to have been employed in that act. or by his direction.

THAT Frank's refusal to meet Jim Conley, his lying accuser, was natural and proper in the circumstances, and that such a course was persisted in by the particular advice of his counsel; that Frank was under no moral or legal obligation to discuss his case with Conley, or with any other witness for the State.

THAT Frank, far from being a dissolute character, is a man of unblemished integrity, happily married; that he never has practiced depraved and perverted crimes, because such things would be and are entirely foreign to his nature; that he never has associatd with immoral persons anywhere, at any time; that neither Jim Conley nor any other person ever acted as "lookout" for him for any purpose whatsoever—and that every monstrous and untrue charge or suggestion of immorality and degeneracy rests absolutely and finally upon the unsupported word of Conley, and not otherwise.

THAT there has been no tenable motive assigned to Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan; that the girl was not sexually violated or in any manner lacerated; that Frank had only the most casual acquaintance with her, and that of a perfectly natural business sort, and that he could not have had, and did not have, any reason whatever for desiring her death.

THAT, in truth and reality, the motive prompting the murder of Mary Phagan was robbery upon the part of Conley, and that for the purpose of securing her pittance of money, contained in a mesh purse, he did murder her and concealed her body in the basement.

THAT, as a matter of fact, Mary Phagan reached the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26 about 12:12 or 12:15; that she came up the steps directly to Frank's office, and received her pay for the time due her, in amount $1.20; that she at once departed Frank's office, without comment of any sort, and that Frank never saw her alive thereafter; that going down the steps, with her silver mesh bag in her hand, she had to pass Jim Conley, recently aroused from a drunken doze; that in attempting to get from the foot of the stairs, where Conley was sitting, to the door, some 20 feet away, she had to traverse a gloomy walkway, more than ordinarily gloomy at the time because the day was a legal holiday and the doors were closed, but not locked; that in traversing this walkway her back was toward Conley; that Conley, without money and craving more liquor, saw the unprotected little girl with the enticing silver bag in her hand, and surmising that she had been

THAT after accomplishing his bloody deed Conley escaped by withdrawing the inside staple from the basement back door only a few feet away from the place where the dead girl subsequently was found; and that tracings of Conley during the afternoon of April 26 at various saloons about town show that he spent then an amount of money approximately that which Mary Phagan is supposed to have had in her purse at the time of her murder.

That of all her possessions the purse alone, notwithstanding exhaustive inquiry, never was accounted for until the last day Conley was on the stand, when he stated that Frank had had the purse in his possession just after the murder, and that he had concealed it in his safe. This allegation, the defense points out, is sustained, as are the other most damaging allegations, by Conley's unsupported word entirely.

THAT Conley, the State's main witness, is a notoriously dissolute character, by his own admission seven times a jailbird, many times a liar, even under oath and on the witness stand, and admittedly was "mistaken" in some statements made against Frank; that he did not begin to throw suspicion on Frank until after suspicion began drifting in his (Conley's) direction; that his plea of wishing by his first silent course of conduct to "protect" Frank is not sound, because after the feigned disappointment that Frank did not "get him out of his trouble, as he had promised," and declaring that he, therefore, intended to tell the "whole truth of the murder," he still persisted in his lies and falsifying to the attempted damage of Frank, and found it necessary to issue three conflicting affidavits before he got one he thought might be depended upon to stand up.

THAT Conley began his statements with a lie—to the effect that he could not write—and continued lying steadily thereafter, but frequently canceling one lie in favor of another, as his first lies were shown to be useless and senseless.

THAT Conley in revising his various statements was aided and abetted by various police officials, presumably anxious for the reward offered for the apprehension and conviction of Mary Phagan's murderer, and that these officers pointed out to Conley the discrepancies as they arose from time to time, and that without this aid Conley's story never could have been made to hold together even as well as it did; that notwithstanding this prejudicing aid, however, Conley's story still is impossible and absurd, and of no account whatever against Frank.

The foregoing, in general, is the theory of the defense, as already set up and as yet to be developed, and along that line it will fight its battle to the end.

The defense is heavily equipped with witnesses to sustain its every contention, and these will be offered, in their ordr, to brak down the contrary theory of the State, as hereinbefore outlined, and upon th relative strength of the two showings depends, of course, the verdict.

Of absorbing interest now is the seeming determination of the defense to put Leo Frank's character frankly and fearlessly in evidence.

In a former article in The Sunday American several weeks ago I predicted that the defense would do this—and the then apparent determination of the defense along that line shows no symptoms of having been deviated fro min the slightest.

When Conley made his additional unanticipated attack on Frank's character from the witness stand, it was rather freely predicted about the streets that Frank never would, after that, agree to have his character put in evidence. Under the law, the State can not put the defendant's character in evidence—if it is put in at all it must be put in by the defendant voluntarily. Once in, however, it may be riddled by the State, if the State is able to riddle it.

The determination, therefore, of the defense to put Frank's character in evidence is being accepted generally as indicating an unfaltering confidence upon the part of the defense that Frank may be able thereby to overcome the terrible and prejudicial charge of degeneracy, as well as the charge of murder, both resting so largely upon Conley, and Conley alone; and it also indicates a belief upon the part of the defense that the State already has done its worst in the matter of attacking Frank's character.

MUST REFUTE TWO CHARGES.

The fact that Frank is now engaged in refuting two charges instead of one makes his case double unique in Georgia, as it is contrary to the unbroken theory of the law heretofore.

In Georgia, the courts uniformly have held that a man can not be tried for more than one offense at one time—that is, that he can not be charged with murder, and in the same trial be called to account for another felonious crime.

The charge of degeneracy, however, got into the case without objection, and Frank's lawyers cross-examined the witness making it. The judge, therefore, although a motion was made afterward to strike out this evidence, ruled taht it was too late to expunge it, and that it should go in for what it was worth.

This ruling, while in a way more or less unprecedented, was, in the main, by the public seemingly approved, upon the idea that it was fairer to both the State and the defense that the horrible charge, having been made, be thrashed out.

Should Frank be convicted, it is practically certain that a new trial will be asked on this very point, and it is not at all improbable that Judge Roan will grant it, although this conjecture is purely and absolutely speculative, of course.

The defense has summoned some seventy character witnesses, among whom are more than two scora femal employes of the National Pencil Factory, all of whom will swear, it is said, to the defendant's decent and gentlemanly conduct at all times in their presence and during their varied terms of service in the factory, running from one to five years.

INTENSE INTEREST HOLDS.

Besides these, a score or more of Atlanta's most prominent business and professional men have been cited to come to court and testify in behalf of Frank's good name.

Rarely before, if ever, has there been as intense interest in a murder trial as there unquestionably is in the Frank case.

The crowds attending the trial have been enormous, the officers finding it necessary every day to turn away hundreds of anxious would-be spectators.

Public sentiment has swung back and forth—to-day inclined to believe Frank may be innocent, to-morrow sternly the reverse.

The jury, sitting there in the courthouse, day after day, has been the subjective study of hundreds of real and near analytical minds—and the answer?

Every fellow answers for himself. The jury is imperturable, unreadable, almost seemingly indifferent at times, indeed—but always keenly keyed to intense interest, nevertheless!

One might as well undertake to read the riddle of the Spinx as to read the riddle of the Frank case in the minds of the jury trying it. It looks as if it is a jury well above the average—and that is about the beginning and the end of an intelligent guess as to what it will do.

Judge Roan is as baffling as the rest of the case, too, when it comes to speculating upon what he may or may not think of it all.

He is rated one of the very best Superior Court judges in the State, unusually able, certainly fearless, and agreed to be utterly fair and impartial.

At times, his rulings have seemed to favor the defense, and at other times they have seemed to favor the State; but, withal, the public seems agreed that he is handling the case with an open and judicially just mind.

Speculation as to Outcome.

Speculation as to the outcome of the trial is varied. There are those who can see nothing ahead but conviction, just as there are others who can see nothing but acquittal.

If a ballot could be taken, however, those holding to the idea of a mistrial likely would be found in the majority, for that is the way the fght seems, to many observing minds, to be drifting.

That section of the public generally credited with being calm, poised, and desirous of seeing the right prevail, no matter which way it cuts, apparently has suspended judgment. Extremists pro and con still are talking themselves hoarse about town, however.

The progressing inclination among the people seems to be to let the jury settle it, and then to call that as near right as abstract justice and human ingenuity can make it.

In the event of an acquittal, the case ends. The State has no appeal. It must win on the first round, or it loses for all time.

The defense ,on the other hand, if it loses, may move for a new trial, upon proper assignment of error in the first trial. The judge of original jurisdiction passes upon this motion—he may grant it or not, as his discretion directs.

The general policy of judges is to refuse motions for new trials, but it is not an unbroken policy, by any means.

If the new trial motion is denied, the case goes to a court of review—either the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals. If one error or several be found in the original rulings of the court below, the case will be remanded back for a new trial, the judgment thus having been reversed and set aside.

Then the case begins all over again, practically as if it never had been tried.

In the event of maters taking that course, Frank hardly could be tried again before next year, 1914, and perhaps not before spring.

Conley Indictment Likely.

If Frank is acquitted, there is hardly a doubt that Jim Conley will be promptly indicted for the murder of Mary Phagan, and brought to trial later.

In the event of Frank's final conviction, Conley will be indicted as an accessory after the fact. This would mean a sentence of not more than three years in the State penitentiary for him.

If Frank is convicted, he can be convicted only of murder—the jury will not be permitted, under the form of the indictment, to find him guilty of a lesser crime.

The judge will have no discretion in sentencing him.

If found guilty, without a recommendation to mercy, he must hang, unless the Governor should subsequently interfere and order executive clemency.

If he is convicted, and the jury "recommend him to the mercy of the court," the court then will be obliged to send him to prison for life.

The general opinion is that the present trial will run all of this week—that the best to be expected is that the jury may be given the case by Saturday night.

After the evidence is all in, the case still will have to be argued to the jury. It is thought that Judge Roan will take the bridle off in respect of this, and both sides will be permitted to go the limit.

Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold will consume at least one entire day in argument, and Mr. Dorsey and Mr. Hooper will not take less time.

It is expected that Hooper will open for the State and Dorsey close, and that Rosser will open for the defense and Arnold close. The State has the opening and the concluding argument before the jury.

WHITE SLAVE CASE WHICH INVOLVES U.S. GOES TO TRIAL

Diggs Faces a Jury and Caminetti Will Later Fight Charge of Taking Girls to Reno, Leaving Their Wives in State of California.

After Five Months of Delay and Scandal Involving National Officials, Special Prosecutors Are Appearing for the Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Marsha Warrington and Ida Norris, the Sacramento high school girls alleged to have been taken to Reno in November by Maury I Diggs and Drew Caminetti for immoral purposes, will take the stand against Diggs when his trial is resumed Tuesday. No session of the Diggs trial was held today. Diggs and Caminetti will take the stand before the trial is concluded.

Judge Van Fleet dealt the defense a hard blow yesterday when he announced that the jury would not consider the willingness or unwillingness of the two girls to accompany Diggs and Caminetti.

The jury to hear the case of Diggs, the former State Architect, was announced complete after considerable difficulty in selecting the twelve members. Exhaustive examination of 96 veniremen was necessary before the twelve were chosen.

The first witness was called. He was F. J. Peck, a Reno real estate dealer, by whom the defense sought to show that the bungalow occupied by the defendants in Reno had been rented with no view to concealment.

Prejudice against the defendants runs high, rendering exceedingly difficult the task of picking a jury. Of the twelve men chosen, eight are married and have children, two are married, but childless, and two are single men, living with their parents. Indicative of the general temper of San Francisco was the reply upon examination of Philip Woolsey, who afterward was chosen as a member of the jury. He expressed his prejudice against "any married man who will abandon his wife and babies and run off on a spree with another woman," but said he could, however, render a verdict strictly in accordance with the evidence.

Cases Come Up Separately.

The cases against Diggs and Caminetti will be tried separately because the prosecution feels it has made out the stronger case against Diggs, and because the defense in this case will assume a course different from that in Caminetti's.

Diggs and F. Drew Caminetti, son of former Congressman and present Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti, are charged with luring Miss Marsha Warrington and Miss Lola Norris from California to Nevada for immoral purposes. Both are married men.

Diggs, the prosecution will attempt to show, financed the trip to Reno, where the girls were taken, and rented there a cottage in which the party lived.

Diggs, against whom the charges are made in relation to Miss Marsha Warrington, is said to be contemplating a fierce attack on the character of the girl. He has subpenaed habitues of the "Barbary Coast" resorts of this city and twenty witnesses from Sacramento's tenderloin. Caminetti is making no such move against Miss Norris. The Government asserts her character to be unblemished.

Mrs. Caminetti Relentless.

Caminetti's wife is relentless in her attitude toward her young husband. She said that despite the disgrace it may bring on their children, she thinks, for the protection of other married women, her husband should be made an example.

Mrs. Diggs, also, is bitter toward her husband. The defenders of both men, however, to-day are claiming a complete reconciliation of the defendants with their wives, and declare that when the trial gets fully under way both Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti will be seen sitting at their husbands' sides, a spectacle which, the defense calculates, will have an effect to their advantage on the jury.

Diggs and Caminetti both are free from custody, having taken advantage of the $10,000 bail offered them. At first they feared freedom, as violence was anticipated, but later this fear was overcome.

Diggs appears to be cheerful to-day, taking matters easily. He is scrupulously dressed. He came into the courtroom, with his flock of attorneys, bearing a cheerful smile, and bowed a dozen times to familiar faces that he saw near. Caminetti, on the other hand, seemed deeply worried. He was pallid and palpably very nervous. His father, the Commissioner General of Immigration, did not make his appearance, and probably will not be seen at the trial.

Two Special Prosecutors.

The trial is being held in the Federal Court before Judge Van Fleet. Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore R. Roche, president of the San Francisco Police Commission, have been appointed special prosecutors by Attorney General McReynolds, to take the place of District Attorney Gavin McNab, who resigned with the announcement that undue influence was being brought to bear from Washington to prevent the trial of the two men.

Arrayed with the special prosecutors are Archie Johnson, son of Governor Johnson, and Acting District Attorneys Benjamin L. McKinley and Thomas H. Salvage.

Diggs and Caminetti have an equally impressive line-up of legal defenders, including Robert L. Devlin and Marshall B. Woodworth, both former United States District Attorneys; Nate Coghlan and S. Luke Howe.

A heavy guard is thrown around the courtroom because feeling runs high against the two defendants. The two girls involved were high school students of Sacramento and of estimable families. Both, attorneys for the Government announce, will be ready to take the stand against the men.

The Government will charge that Diggs and Caminetti, both married men, had drawn the girls into a liaison; that they terrified the girls into the belief that their wives, having discovered their infidelity, intended to have the girls arrested, and that to escape this imaginary danger the girls accompanied the men to Reno, Nev.

what was to be done with them, the young women were told that their ruin was complete; that they would not desert them, but that the young women were to continue to live with them as their mistresses, and that they would take them to Salt Lake, where they would go into a 'house.'

"The Grand Jury had ample evidence before it in these statements to decide that the intent was to put them in a public place.

Barely Escaped Lynching.

"The defendants were secretly taken from the train and brought to Sacramento by auto to avoid lynching by the enraged citizens. Defendants procured counsel. Among these is Charles Harris, of the Sacramento bar. He and Diggs immediately set about to defeat justice by corrupting a witness. Diggs wrote an appealing letter to Miss Warrington under an assumed name, urging her to stand by a certain agreed story he had drilled her in while in Reno. The letter is in my possession.

"The Grand Jury has indicted Harris and Diggs for conspiracy to suborn perjury.

"The friends of the defendants are reported to have stated repeatedly that they could 'easily fix the case;' that they had too much money and too much influence at command to cause them to worry. 'This seems to have come principally from the Diggs end of the case.'

Nearly Five Months to Bring Caminetti and Diggs to Trial

MARCH 10.

Farley Drew Caminetti, married, twenty-seven, son of U. S. Commissioner of Immigration Caminetti, with Lola Norris, nineteen, unmarried, and Maurice I. Diggs, married, ex-State Architect, about twenty-eight, and Marsha Warrington, nineteen, unmarried, all of Sacramento, go to Reno, register under assumed names, rent a cottage later, and live four days together when arrested. The men assert they are unhappy and intend to marry the girls after securing divorces.

MAY 19.

The men are indicted for violating the Mann white slave law, put under bonds of $10,000 and their cases put on the calendar for trial in June. Citizens all over California appeal to U. S. District Attorney John L. McNab to push the cases.

MAY 27.

United States Attorney McNab wires Attorney General McReynolds that both prisoners were boasting of their "influence at Washington," and that strenuous efforts were being made to secure postponement of trials; also that bribery and perjury were being used in their behalf.

JUNE 18.

Secretary of Labor Wilson telephones McReynolds "that Commissioner of Immigration Caminetti, who has applied for leave of absence to attend the trial of his son, can not be spared."

JUNE 19.

McReynolds telegraphs McNab to postpone the cases till fall.

JUNE 21.

McNab sends in resignation to President Wilson.

JUNE 22.

McReynolds' comment: "I'm not shedding any tears; he is a Republican."

JUNE 23.

Secretary of Labor Wilson assumes responsibility for McReynolds' action. A Cabinet meeting is called and President Wilson overrules McReynolds and orders the cases rushed.

JUNE 24.

The President accepts McNab's resignation with a rebuke for giving "his resignation the form of an inexcusable intimation of injustice and wrongdoing." In a letter to McReynolds he says: "I am entirely satisfied that the course you took in these cases was prompted by sound and impartial judgment and a clear insight for what was fair and right."

JUNE 28.

James C. Mann, Republican leader, bitterly attacks McReynolds and Secretary Wilson, both Cabinet officers.

JULY 6.

The Hearst papers print the suppressed correspondence between McReynolds and McNab and others, showing the Attorney General knew of the seriousness of the case.

Republicans start a filibuster in House to secure a full discussion of the case.

JULY 26.

Filibuster ends with victory for Republicans.

Case of Diggs comes to trial August 5.

McNab Outlines His Case Against the Defendants

In his report Mr. McNab gives the following pen picture of Caminetti and Diggs:

"The defendant Diggs was a draughtsman in the office of the State Capitol in Sacramento. He is married and has two young children.

"But a short time before the actions hereinafter narrated he was involved in a forgery charge, and for a long time, by common repute, easily substantiated by evidence, he maintained what has been denominated as a 'private harem' at his rooms in a downtown block in Sacramento. Here, according to charges laid before me, he enticed many young women to go to serve his immoral purposes.

"Caminetti was his bosom companion. The defendant Caminetti has a vicious reputation for seducing girls, and I have shocking instances which I can produce to establish this fact.

"The two girls in question, both of whom are about 19 years of age, come of most respectable families. Marsha Warrington is the only daughter of the agent of the Santa Fe Railroad. Lola Norris is the only daughter of a retired business man of Sacramento.

"After going with the young women for some months the two defendants, who had determined to entice the girls away from home and take them to another State, began a systematic campaign of coercion and inducement to get them to flee the State with them.

Their Stories to the Girls.

They told the young women that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti had found out about their relations and had procured warrants for their arrest from the Juvenile Court and were only awaiting the appropriate time to serve them; that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti were relentless and intended to expose the whole matter, and that the families of the girl would be disgraced and ruined; that the only way to save the girls from disgrace was secretly to leave the city and go to another State, where they would acquire a residence, the men would divorce their wives and marry the girls, etc.

"The young women were in absolute terror. They repeatedly appealed to the defendants to allow them to remain at home and not to disgrace them, and begged to be allowed to unbosom their indiscretions to their parents and have their advice.

"Up to this time, according to the uncontradicted evidence, Diggs had been unduly intimate with Miss Warrington for a few weeks; the Norris girl had never been violated before this trip to Reno.

"On arrival at Reno they were assigned to bedrooms, Diggs and Miss Warrington occupying one room and Caminetti and Miss Norris the other. According to the testimony of the young women, they were wholly in the hands of their male companions. They had never been away from home or their parents before and felt that they were powerless to save themselves.

Foundling Is Heiress To $100,000 Fortune

Father Makes Wealth After He Had Left Baby in Michigan Institution.

CADILLAC, MICH., Aug. 9.—Sheriff Chamberlain has been asked by an attorney in Corning, N. Y., to locate Bessie Weaver, who was adopted by a Manton, Mich., family from a New York foundling home over twenty years ago, and a few days ago became heir to $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weaver, of Manton, who adopted the child when on a trip through New York, returned her to the home five years later. Since that time nothing has been heard from her. The father of Bessie Weaver, or Bessie Clark, as she was known in New York, made his fortune after placing his child in the home, but has been unable to locate her since she was taken back from Michigan. He recently died, leaving his fortune to his only child.

GIRL HELPS FATHER IN BUILDING NEW HOUSE

HARTFORD, MICH., Aug. 9.—One year ago S. H. Atkins and family came to this city and built a house in a field of rye in the outskirts of the city. Recently they sold the home, and with the proceeds purchased four adjoining lots. They are now building a much larger house, which will be the sixth they have erected since the little home was built.

The scarcity of carpenters caused the mother and daughter to assist Mr. Atkins in the building of his new home. The mother and 9-year-old daughter did all of the lathing.

Ban on Tobacco Seen By Prohibitionists

Smoking and Drinking Are Blamed for Increase in Chronic Diseases in America.

BATTLECREEK, MICH., Aug. 9.—That tobacco as well as liquor will be placed under national prohibition before the end of another generation, is the assertion made here by Irving Fisher. Fisher blames liquor, tobacco, overuse of meat and too strenuous life for the terrible increase of chronic diseases in America.

Spooners Protest Against Headlights

Big Illuminating Power Now Carried on Engines Is Worry to Summer Boarders.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad has placed monster 1,220-candle-power electric searchlights on the observation cars of the Pioneer Limited.

ORPHAN SOUGHT AS WIFE BY MAN WRITING POLICE

Would-Be Benedict Gives Evidence in Letter That He Fears Mother-in-Law.

OAKLAND, CAL., Aug. 9.—J. Keler, of Fresno, is a marrying man. He proved it by writing a letter to "the Chief of Police or the City Marshal of Oakland" and entreating that official to find him a wife. He wants a wife who has means equal to his own—amount not stated—and indicates in his letter that he would expect her to assist him in his merchandise business. He assures all responsible applicants that he is sober and industrious and hasn't a single bad habit.

If you are a maid, a girl or a widow who reads this, you stand a chance of winning the prize, and if you are an orphan, get busy and send your picture to Keler at once. He takes kindly to orphans, as is evidenced from the following excerpt from his letter:

"Will answer all questions and letters from girls, maids and widows, but would prefer to wed an orphan. Will give my business to the one I wed, that she may know I am a square man and will do right."

The following notice was inclosed, with the request that the official post it in a conspicuous place:

"Temperate gentleman would be pleased to form the acquaintance of ladies matrimonially inclined. Give description and full particulars in first letter. Send photo, which will be returned, if desired."

SHEDS TOENAILS BIENNIALLY.

BEDFORD, IND., Aug. 9.—J. W. Mundy, of this city, sheds the nails from his toes every two years, and this has occurred since he was a child. When asked to see his foot, Mundy bared his left foot and showed the old nails barely hanging to the toes, and the new nails growing under the old ones.

ALL STATES TO SHOW POULTRY AT KNOXVILLE

Exhibition of Best Breeds To Be Feature of National Conservation Exposition.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Aug. 9.—Birds for the poultry show that is to be held in connection with the National Conservation Exposition in this city during the months of September and October are coming to Knoxville all the way from California. Word of the coming of the California birds has just been received by the poultry department.

Interest in the poultry show is country-wide. From almost every State in the Union will be brought to Knoxville poultry of different kinds. Already it is assured that the poultry show will be the biggest thing of its kind ever held in the South. It will be in fact as well as name "The Madison Square Garden Show of the South."

A most comprehensive exhibit of the great textile industry of the South is assured for the exposition. Progressive manufacturers of Greenville, S. C., have just signed up for a large amount of exhibit space in the All-South building of the exposition and the greater part of that space will be devoted to the textile industry.

In addition to the Greenville textile manufacturers a number of other concerns of like nature in the South, from Knoxville and elsewhere, will make exhibits, and thus this industry, constantly increasing in importance in the South, will receive great attention. The different processes through which cotton goes from the seed to the loom and after will be strikingly shown in the different exhibits.

Buys a $4,000 Auto To Use Cheap Gas

When Ex-Senator Scott Has Burned 60,000 Gallons He Will Have Saved Cost of Car.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The house of Senator Nathan Bay Scott, of West Virginia, is divided against itself, with automobiles as they issue. The Senator and Mrs. Scott are devoted to each other. They attend the same dinners, theaters and social functions together, but they arrive and depart in separate motor cars. It came about this way:

The senator has been paying 22 cents a gallon for gasoline to propel the family machine. He discovered a place where the price was 17 cents. With much glee he informed Oscar, the family chauffeur, of his discovery and directed that Oscar purchase gasoline there.

Oscar demurred because the gasoline emporium was too far from the family mansion. Mrs. Scott backed him up. Whereupon Senator Scott bought himself a $4,000 machine, acquired a chauffeur to navigate it and divorced himself from the old machine and Oscar.

After Senator Scott has burned 60,000 gallons of gasoline he will have saved the cost of the car. But he doesn't have to ride with Oscar.

Prizes are offered for organizations as well as individual contestants.

Men or women interested in their church, lodge, chapter, social or charitable organization or any recognized body may name their organization as a contestant, form teams for work and win something worth while. The first prize for organizations will be One Thousand Dollars in gold.

It is expected that a number of organizations will enlist clubs of enthusiastic members who will go after that $1,000 grand prize.

The classification of prizes will give the boys and girls as good an opportunity to win as the grown-ups, though if a boy or girl tops the whole list he or she will be entitled to the automobile or trip to California just the same as though a grown person had led the contestants.

See Want Ad Man.

The Want Ad Man wants to talk to every contestant Monday. He has engaged the fourth floor of the Foote & Davies building, Edgewood avenue and North Pryor street, for his offices, and will be at his desk from 8 o'clock in the morning to 5 o'clock in the afternoon every day. Prince Chased by Laundress

She Asks $50,000 on Love Notes

He Is Gone on His Honeymoon

Miss Freese, a California girl, who at a Secret Marriage Became the bride of Prince Sultkowski, of Austria, and a Snapshot of the Prince.

Sultkowski, Who Won Rich Girl and Had His $100,000 Debts Paid, Is Accused.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—An angry laundress from Vienna is in Los Angeles looking for Prince Stanislaus Sultkowski, the noble Austrian who came here several months ago, wooed in his gallant way and won the beautiful Miss Marie Louise Freese, had his debts of $100,000 paid by Father-in-Law Freese, and received from the same source an annuity of $20,000.

The laundress, Mrs. Clara Melcher, declares that the Prince brought her to this country on the promise that he would marry her.

After a hasty, private marriage, the noble Prince and his American Princess disappeared. The father-in-law says they are "not in the country," and no more.

Los Angeles society wondered at the quiet wedding. An elaborate church ceremony had been planned, but the plans were abandoned at short notice.

She Asks Federal Aid.

Society was in the midst of this wonder when entered Mrs. Melcher. She appealed with her story to the United States immigration inspector, and was supported by Adolph Danzieger, a lawyer. The Prince declared, Danzieger said, that the woman had annoyed his family in Austria, and to get her away from Vienna so he could return home with his American wife, he had written her to come to America.

An attorney, who was first approached by Mrs. Melcher and then retained by the Prince, said he suggested to Mr. Freese, the Prince's father-in-law, a payment of five or ten thousand dollars in settlement of the woman's claims, but Mrs. Melcher, through her lawyer, declared that she would have $50,000 or nothing. She has love letters which she says prove her claims.

The Prince and his American bride are believed to be on their way to Austria where Stanislaus is taking his Princess without fear of being molested by the insistent laundress.

Prince Lauds Girls Here.

The Prince is lieutenant of the Second Dragoons of the army of the Austrian empire. He came to America in December and lost his heart to the girls of America, whom he likened to "the flowers of the spring." He is a nephew of the Grand Duke of Birlitz. His home is the Castle Tresternitz, near Markburg, Austria.

The following tribute to American girls, of which the Prince delivered himself, was widely published:

"They are splendid, charming, graceful and fresh, like the flowers of the spring. The girls of Europe generally have followed outdoor sports. They are mostly large and strong, often the equal of their husbands in strength.

"My idea of a girl is found right here in America. I have been most hospitably received and have met many of them. Their sweetness, their trimness and the wonderful manner in which they wear their clothes have 'got me going,' as you say. Their figures and their style surpass the Europeans. Their dignity and grace and the democracy I have found in so many are winning, and I do not blame Europe's noblemen for coming to America for their brides."

Folly of Suffrage Shown by Dresses, Says Mrs. Marshall

Vice President's Wife Believes Women Can Do More Good Correcting Cabarets.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Slashed skirts with the silhouette gown and other freaks of modern fashion are the worst enemies of the newly made voters of Illinois, and the cabaret and the turkey trot are more in need of reform than Chicago's First Ward, in the opinion of Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, who was in Chicago with her husband.

Mrs. Marshall declared frankly that she was opposed to the municipal power recently granted to the women of Illinois. Mrs. Marshall said:

"I have never been a suffragist. To me the fashions of to-day ought to convince any one that a woman is not fit to vote. Some women's dress is not only extreme, it is objectionable. A woman would do more good by correcting the dances in our cafes and cabarets than in running for office.

"The women in the East are not strongly in favor of the ballot, and none of the Cabinet women seems to favor it, with the exception, perhaps, of the President's daughter, Miss Jessie Wilson."

NEWPORT TOLD THAT U. S. NEEDS AN ARISTOCRACY

NEWPORT, Aug. 9.—William MacDonald, professor of American history at Brown University, delivering the principal address before the Rhode Island Society of the Cincinnati, gave expression to some startling new ideas. The topic of his address was, "An Aristocracy in a Democracy." He said:

"There is needed an aristocracy to lead, a government of the best men. Not an aristocracy of vulgar wealth or hereditary descent, but an aristocracy made up of sound physique, disciplined, intelligent and trained, public-spirited, of cosmopolitan taste and unpretentious good manners."

DIVORCE DEFENDANT SAYS HUSBAND IS NON-RESIDENT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Mrs. M. A. Perdue has filed a jurisdictional plea in the Superior Court in the divorce suit recently instituted against her by A. W. Perdue. She declares Perdue is not a resident of Georgia and asks the court to dismiss the suit.

POLITICS MIXED IN ALABAMA AS JOHNSTON DIES

Underwood May Be Drawn Into Senate Race—Knox and DeGraffenreid Mentioned.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 9.—The death of Senator Joseph Forney Johnston has precipitated in Alabama a political problem. He was seized by the fatal attack of illness at the time when he was in the midst of a fight with Congressman Richmond P. Hobson to retain his seat in the Senate, and Hobson thus is left without opposition.

The dominant political powers in Alabama, it is generally recognized, are not altogether friendly to the Hobson interests, and a man as powerful as Johnston undoubtedly will be brought forward to oppose the hero of the Merrimac.

Who will it be?

Eyes Are on Underwood.

All eyes turn to Oscar Underwood as the likely opponent of Hobson. Here near the end of the session of Congress, with his work well toward completion, it is conceded that Underwood can relinquish with safety his grasp on affairs in the House and step into the higher place in the Senate. A movement already is felt that may have its effect in bringing him out as a candidate.

Meanwhile, Governor O'Neal must appoint a successor to Senator Johnston to fill his seat for the two years yet remaining of his term. And, unless by previous agreement otherwise, the appointee probably will be a candidate for the coming term.

If Governor O'Neal appoints Colonel John B. Knox, of Anniston, to the place, Knox certainly will be a candidate for the long term, his health permitting. Knox for years has had ambition to enter the Senate. Twice he has been a candidate, losing in 1907, when Johnston and Bankhead were named provisional Senators to succeed Pettus and Morgan, who then were near death, and again in 1910, when he opposed Bankhead.

Knox a Brilliant Figure.

Knox is a brilliant, eloquent, altogether spectacular figure. The Governor may not feel disposed toward his appointment on one ground, however. One year ago occurred a vacancy on the bench of the State Supreme Court, and Governor O'Neal tendered Knox the appointment. After weeks of deliberation the Anniston man declined it. Political gossip at that time was heard to the effect that the Governor was placed in an inconvenient position because of the refusal, and he was forced to take Judge E. B. DeGraffenreid from the bench of the Court of Appeals to place him in the Supreme Court.

DeGraffenreid is O'Neal's closest friend and political adviser. That he should be in line for the Senate appointment is not considered unlikely in a number of places. In event he is appointed, it is unlikely that he will make the race for the long term, and the Underwood shadow looms up again.

The death of Senator Johnston, occurring almost simultaneously with that of his present political ally and personal friend, Major W. W. Screws, editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, is regarded in Alabama as a startling coincidence. Major Screws was Johnston's firmest supporter in his race against Hobson.

Friedmann Has to Face New Charges

Originator of Tuberculosis Serum Is Accused of Unprofessional Conduct by Assistant.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Charges of unprofessional conduct have been preferred against Dr. Friedrich F. Friedmann, originator of tuberculosis serum, and he may have to defend his conduct before a court of honor of physicians and surgeons. Julius Benjamin, father of Dr. Harry Benjamin, who went to the United States with Friedmann as the latter's assistant, and who, as a result of his association with the creator of the tuffle tubercular vaccine, was left stranded in New York City without funds, is pressing the charges.

TYBEE'S CATHOLIC CHURCH TOO SMALL FOR TOURISTS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Plans are being considered for enlarging the Roman Catholic chapel at Tybee.

This season the attendance has been so large that men and boys have had to stand. The summer communicants have been most generous in their contributions to the enlargement fund. They have also raised a fund for the purchase of new vestments for the priest.

LOS ANGELES TO AID IN EXAMINER SITE DEDICATION

Civic Bodies and Officials to Participate in Cornerstone Laying of Great Newspaper Plant.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—On Monday at 12 o'clock will commence the ceremony of the placing of the cornerstone of the new Los Angeles Examiner building at Eleventh and Broadway.

Because the spirit of California has made this building possible, part of this ceremony will be the raising of the California Bear flag over the great edifice now already partically completed. The event will mark the progress of a great newspaper in a great city. Planned under the auspices of the Advertising Club of Los Angeles, and representative business men, the program for the cornerstone laying reaches broad and comprehensive proportions.

Great Chorus to Sing.

The music of four great massed bands will sound patriotically at the appearance of the flag. Madame Esther Palliser, the famous prima donna, will sing the new song of Southland progress written for the occasion by Miles Overholt, and a chorus of 100 trained voices will mark the laying of the cornerstone.

From the lips of one who has made a great mark in America's history will come the final address of faith in Los Angeles and its people—William Randolph Hearst.

There will come, too, during this ceremony a novel procedure calculated to remind the younger generation of the event. A motion picture will be taken of the event, showing the ceremony and surrounding throng. Immediately after the picture has been taken, the film will be developed with all haste and within a few hours a hermetically sealed canister will be placed in the cornerstone.

To William Randolph Hearst will be presented by Mayor Rose the silver trowel of the cornerstone laying. The opening words of the ceremony will be spoken by the Rev. Charles Edward Locke, who will be presented by Ernest Ingold. Then James R. H Wagner will come to the platform and present to A. W. Kinney, president of the Chamber of Commerce on behalf of the people of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Examiner, the California Bear flag.

Mr. Hearst to Speak.

After Mr. Kinney's reply to this, the Rev. George Donanue, acting for Bishop Conaly, will speak. The Rt. Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop, of Los Angeles, will give an address. After the speech of Mr Hearst, Dr. Sigmund Hecht will say the closing word.

Before the ceremony at the new building, an escort with Chief of Police Sebastian acting as grand marshal will proceed from Central Park to the old Examiner building at Fifth and Broadway. Here Mayor Rose, the speakers and Mr. Hearst will join the party and be escorted down Broadway to The Examiner's new site and the scene of the cornerstone laying.

No Duke Available For Edna Goodrich

London Society Much Amused by Actress' Announcement She Is to Wed Peer.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Great amusement has been created by a cabled report of Edna Goodrich's announcement that she is to marry an English duke.

"It is a pretty story," comments The London Daily Mirror, "but of the 26 dukes, nineteen are married and five are widowers, the youngest being 67 years old.

"Of the remaining two, the actress couldn't have met them on a houseboat at Henley."

Of course there is the Duke of Westminster, whose penchant for charming actresses is well known, but he is not free to marry again, not yet.

Pavlowa Strikes Her Partner; Stops Dance

Quarrel With Novikoff on London Stage Is Like Falling Out With Mordkin.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Pavlowa caused a sensation at the Palace Theater tonight by an open quarrel with her dancing partner, Novikoff, the incident being parallel with her rupture with Mordkin last year.

While dancing Adagio, Pavlowa suddenly hit Novikoff a smart blow on the shoulder. Novikoff immediately left the stage while Pavlowa walked off by the opposite side, the orchestra finishing the piece to an empty stage. Pavlowa afterward performed two solo dances, but Novikoff did not appear again.

Thief Since Child; Boasts of 500 Crimes

Boy Declares That He Is Beyond Reformation, and Welcomes the Gallows.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Walter Novak, 20, arrested with four companions after they had fatally wounded Patrolman Samuel W. Sowers and beaten Patrolman Frank Walpole, admitted having taken part in more than thirty robberies in two months and boasted of his career.

"I was born a thief, and I've been a thief ever since," said Novak. "I don't care whether I go to the gallows. I started when I was nine stealing pennies. I have been put in all kinds of institutions to reform me, but they only made me worse. I don't want any member of my family to come and see me. If they come, I will kick them out.

"I suppose I have committed more than 500 robberies."

COLLEGE HEN MISSES LAYING 1 DAY IN 100

Champion Barnyard Producer Rests Only When Commencement Season Arrives.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CORVALLIS, OREG., Aug. 9. A college hen, which laid 99 eggs in 100 days and observed Commencement Day by taking a single day's vacation, is a new claimant for prominence in the chicken world.

The newly heralded layer is three-quarters White Leghorn and one-quarter, Barred Plymouth Rock, descending from several generations of heavy layers bred at the Oregon Agricultural College experiment station.

The 99 eggs were laid during the 100 days ended June 8, as follows: Thirty-one in March, 29 in April, 31 in May and 8 in the first 8 days in June.

Not only is this the best record ever secured at Oregon Agricultural College for the same length of time, but a careful perusal of authentic records from other stations on file fails to reveal an equal performance.

The result of breeding as shown in the egg production of this one hen is only an isolated example of what Professor James Dryden's extensive experiments are proving to be possible.

Up to date the records show clearly the beneficial effect in egg yield, and when the year's experiments are concluded in the fall some interesting statistics will be available for the use of poultrymen who are raising chickens for egg production.

Owes Her Good Health to Duffy's

MRS. MARY CARMODY.

"About a year ago I was down with a very heavy cold and I had a bad pain under my shoulder blades. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand, and I could not keep anything on my stomach. A druggist near where I lived advised taking a tablespoonful of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey with an egg in milk before meals, and after following his advice I found that I could eat, I overcame my weakness, and gradually gained in weight. I believe that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as a tonic for run down people is a great thing, and I recommend it to my many friends in Brooklyn and New York. I can not praise Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey too much."—Mrs. Mary Carmody, 116 N. Elliott Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

$640 Average Income Of American Farmer

Government Report Declares There Are Many Who Make far Smaller Sum.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Farming is not the most profitable business in the world, railroad press agents to the contrary notwithstanding, according to a bulletin of the Department of Agriculture.

For the first time in the history of farming in the United States the department has managed to get accurate data on the subject.

It reports that the average income of the American farmer is $640.40 a year. "It is reasonable to infer," says the department, "that at least half of the farmers in this country have even smaller incomes."

Feudist's Daughter Shouts at Conviction

Woman Obtains Practically All the Evidence Produced in Court Against Slayers.

WINCHESTER, KY., Aug. 9.—The work of Mrs. Lillian Gross, daughter of Ed Callahan, of Breathitt County, former Sheriff and noted feud leader, was rewarded to-day, when a jury returned a verdict finding Andrew Johnson, 19, guilty of having murdered Callahan.

The jury fixed Johnson's punishment at life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

When the verdict was given out, Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Timandy Callahan, young widow of the feudist, shouted for joy.

The evidence was secured almost entirely by Mrs. Gross.

Twelve witnesses, who swore that they saw Johnson at Jackson, 12 miles from the scene of the shooting, are under indictment for perjury.

Wind Saves Life of Baby Caught by Kite

String on Toy Encircles Throat of Child and Lifts Him From Earth.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Except for the timely intervention of a gust of wind, Baby Allen McNaughton, 15 months old, might have been hanged by a box kite string until he was dead yesterday afternoon in the presence of his 12-year-old brother, Monroe, and a group of boy friends. As it was he was hanged until he was black in the face, and the string circled his throat with a gash that barely missed the jugular vein. Just as the kite went up the string slackened and twined about the baby's throat. The child was lifted from the ground and was being borne aloft when a sudden cross current slackened the string again. Monroe quickly cut it, releasing the kite and his brother at the same time.

FARMERS QUIT COTTON TO GROW WATERMELONS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9—The biggest watermelon crop on record is being moved along the Savannah and Statesboro Railroad. Already more than 650 cars have been hauled. Bennett Maas, commercial agent for the Macon Dublin and Savannah, reports that farmers are so well pleased with their melon crops that some of them will abandon cotton-planting and go in for melons entirely.

Mayor Quits Office to Become Collector of Port, but Suffers From Curtailment.

PORT HURON, MICH., Aug. 9.—The order of Secretary McAdoo abolishing the office of collector of customs at this port has thrown former Mayor John J. Bell out into the cold.

When Mr. Bell received his appointment a few years ago he resigned as the city's chief executive, and Commissioner Dixon was chosen as his successor. Then Mr. Bell appointed William R. Chadwick in charge of the local part. Mr. Bell finds he has resigned himself out of one job and appointed himself out of another.

Steamer's Crew Deny Sighting 'Titanic'

Officers Say Wreckage They Saw Was Sixty Miles South of Disaster Scene.

Special Cable to The American.

SOUTH SHIELD, Aug. 9.—Officers of the steamer Lucilline, which has arrived here, deny the report that they saw the Titanic wreck apparently resting on top of a ledge of rocks. What they saw during their trip from Bordeaux to Philadelphia was some wreckage consisting of a part of a mast and some gear that was probably attached to a submerged object. They were 60 miles south of the scene of the Titanic disaster, although in the same longitude. They discredit the supposition that the Titanic rests upon a submerged reef.

Many Lives Saved As Train Is Ditched

Forethought of Towerman Averts Crash Between Specials by Taking Chance on Tragedy.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Scores of lives were saved to-day when a towerman in Burnham, Ill., threw the Ohio River special on the Pennsylvania Railroad into a siding and averted its collision with a through Wabash train from St. Louis. The train took the ditch at high speed. The Pennsylvania locomotive was overturned in the crash, but aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman, no one was hurt.

A moment after the Pennsylvania train hit Wabash train was derailed and clicked across the frogs at the track intersection less than 1,000 feet away.

Getting Acquainted With Your Own City!

Atlanta has grown so rapidly that Mr. Busyman, engrossed in the "moil" of his own restricted environments, rarely "glimpses" beyond the horizon of his personal sphere of activity. "HE KNOWS SHE GROWS"—but his knowledge of the INDIVIDUALITY of her growth is entirely beyond his "ken." Old industries double their capacity—NEW ones rear their walls. The BYRD PRINTING COMPANY is an instance of BOTH OF THESE CONDITIONS. They DOUBLED THEIR CAPACITY, and MOVED INTO A NEW ESPECIALLY BUILT FIVE-STORY CONCRETE BUILDING; and for absolutely MODERN equipment, and completeness in every department, no plant in America is superior. You should come down and "get acquainted"—see one of Atlanta's best achievements at its best. We'll be glad to show you over the plant. It's very interesting.

OIL LETTERS KILLED HIM POLITICALLY, SAYS FORAKER

Exposes by William Randolph Hearst Responsible for Downfall, Declares Former Senator Before Senate Lobby Inquiry.

Official of National Manufacturers' Association Writes Democratic Simplicity Will Mean Union Label on U.S. Stationery.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Former Senator Foraker admitted to the Senate Lobby Committee to-day publication by William Randolph Hearst of the famous Standard Oil letters killed Foraker's chances for re-election to the Senate in 1908.

After identifying a letter received from Martin M. Mitchell, the confessed ex-lobbyist, making a report of political activities in Ohio in Foraker's behalf, the former Senator said:

"It was the morning of the day Mr. Hearst's disclosure was made public. An attack had been made on me by Mr. Hearst which destroyed my chances of election, saying I had acted as counsel for the Standard Oil Company. This had created a sentiment in our State very prejudicial to me. I continued as a candidate in the campaign only because to retire from it after I had become a candidate would look like an admission that there was some justification for the attack, whereas there was not any."

Senator Foraker said Muhall, whom he had known thirty years, greatly overestimated his own importance.

No Aid From N. A. M.

Foraker said he had never received aid from the National Association of Manufacturers and while he received a fee of $500 for the part he played in the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1896, he was not in the employ of either David Lamar or Edward Lauterbach in an injunction case against the Union Pacific in 1903.

The House Investigating Committee opened its probe with introduction of correspondence showing the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers in fighting labor legislation in Congress and various attempts to have "conservative" men named as members of House committees.

Discussing the recent sundry civil bill, with its provision prohibiting the expenditure of certain funds for the prosecution of farmers and labor unions under the Sherman law, James A. Emery, counsel of the N. A. M., wrote to President John Kirby, Jr., of the association, on March 7, 1913, after President Taft had vetoed the bill:

"I want to emphasize as hard as I can the importance of lining up for a tremendous demonstration when this bill reaches President Wilson, as it undoubtedly will, with the same provision in it. You will then have an early opportunity to decide whether the glittering Democratic motto, 'Equal right for all and special privilege for none,' means anything or whether the Administration has surrendered completely or will merely turn over the Department of Labor.

Objection to Secretary Wilson.

"I note, by the way, your reference to a letter from C. W. Post on the question of a protest over the appointment of Wilson (Secretary of Labor). A protest on this subject is a mere waste of breath, and on the whole I am inclined to think the whole purpose of this department will be shown up quicker with the unions in control of it than in any other way. Gompers will run it characteristically with a high hand, and if the whole thing does not smell to Heaven within a year I shall be very much astonished.

"By that time Democratic simplicity will probably mean a union label on the White House stationery and the President conferring with the Waiters' Union over the appointment of his steward. At present we have nothing more startling in Jeffersonian simplicity than the news Mrs. Bryan is making a new suit for the Secretary of State, and cakes and ginger ale will be served at the dinner for the British Ambassador. Toothpicks will, of course, be an after dinner course at all Cabinet receptions, and the demand for dress suits will be confined to waiters in the hotels."

In this same letter Emery advised Kirby, "if you have any idea Taft would have vetoed this bill of his own motion, get over it. A list of public men who had 'pie' in this $113,000,000 appropriation bill included many prominent men in both Houses."

LOSES ELOPEMENT RACE.

IRONTON, OHIO, Aug. 9.—George Alexander, of Floyd County, Kentucky, arrived here to-day in pursuit of his daughter, Miss Oma Alexander, five minutes after she had been married to Lawrence Jenkins. The father said the girl was only 15 years old and that Jenkins had induced her to elope with him when she was on her way to school this morning.

Finds Honeymoon Land, Then the Man

Society Girl and New Husband Are Now on Their Way to Tahiti.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Miss Luella Hayne, a pretty Chicago girl, is now, as the bride of Dr. Frank Vance, of Enid, Okla., on her way to spend her honeymoon in Tahiti. Miss Hayne had chosen the spot for the honeymoon before she found the man.

Miss Hayne went through a finishing school which prepared her for all the conventionalities of a reigning position in the smart set, but after a brief whirl this life proved tiresome and she started out on the road that leads "back to nature."

The romance was begun at a house party in New York city given by Miss Hayne's sister.

In talking about Tahiti before she sailed she said:

"The people who are most successful in our centers of civilization are most fettered by it. The reason why people plunge so madly into the economic struggle is largely that they may free themselves from its conditions. Why should not a civilized man be as happy as a native of Tahiti? We are going to find out."

Princeton Students Are Rivals for Hands of Daughter of Late President.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 9.—Herman Stump and H. Gordon Ewing, filled with a youthful ardor to win the hand of Miss Esther Cleveland, second daughter of Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., and the late President Cleveland, are rivals in "a race for love" which is interesting Baltimore society.

Stump is a son of Judge and Mrs. H. Arthur Stump. Ewing is a son of Mr and Mrs. William Jackson Ewing, of Roland Park.

The two wooers are members of the senior class at Princeton University and both have been guests at Miss Cleveland's home.

Mrs. Mackay Leads Hermit Life

Society Leader Pines for Children

Seldom Stirs From Maine Home

Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay with her children, who were taken from her when her husband left on mysterious trip to Europe.

Portland People Believe She Has Settled in Quiet Town to Start Divorce Suit.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 9.—From the gay life of a popular society woman, a leader in the smartest affairs of New York, Newport and Bar Harbor to pursue an existence in a quiet city, is a change just made by the dashing Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, the former Kitty Duer.

"Why do you suppose she's here?" all Portland is asking.

What can she do with herself all day long, for she is never seen out, save to take a drive, and then always wearing a heavy white veil. Is she here to secure a divorce and will she live that dreary life for one whole year—that's how the gossip runs.

Perhaps she's writing another book. She did write one once, "The Crystal Ball." But while the world conjectures, Mrs. Mackay denies herself to all.

Divorce is without doubt her idea in burying herself here, where she has been ever since her millionaire husband sailed for Europe with their three children.

Mrs Mackay is occupying the home of Adam P. Leighton on Western Promenade, a cottage in comparison with the mansions she has been used to occupying.

It was on June 25 that Mr. Mackay sailed for Europe on the Imperator, taking his children on board from New Jersey, where they had been in his control for several days. He went abroad with never a word to the wife and mother.

So mysterious was the departure that it attracted wide attention. They boarded the ship at night; a detective squad was serving to protect the children from any attempt to prevent their departure and the father, registered under an assumed name. The children, who are no doubt longing for their mother as she is longing for them, are still abroad and it is said they will be there for months.

Western Canada to Honor First Farmer

Three-Day Celebration Planned as Tribute to Memory of Chevalier LaCorne.

MELFORT, SASK., Aug. 9.—Western Canada is to honor the memory of Captain Louis Luc De La Corne, the first farmer of Western Canada. Chevalier LaCorne introduced agriculture in the Carrot River valley, Saskatchewan, in 1754. At Melfort, in the heart of the Carrot River District, a three-day celebration, August 1, 2 and 3, 1914, will commemorate the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of the first farming in Western Canada.

The business men of Melfort and the surrounding territory have organized to arrange for the celebration, and committees are already at work. The celebration will be unusual and will include a pageant, in which 2,000 Indians will participate. This pageant will typify the agricultural growth of Western Canada, from the days before Chevalier LaCorne explored the Carrot River valley to the present time.

GRAND JUNCTION, COLO., Aug. 9.—A trip across the Rockies from Grand Junction to Denver on a motorcycle will be the novel honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Carson, of this city. They leave in a few days. Mrs. Carson will guide the machine on the entire journey. She was formerly Miss Ethel Kelso, daughter of a prominent Grand Junction fruit grower, and is an expert motorcyclist. Carson will ride on the tandem seat.

The first woman to attempt to ride across the Rockies on a motorcycle is Mrs. E. Frank Winfield, who made the trip with her husband last summer.

Dickenson was unable to swim, and sank with Mrs. Keesing. Both were taken from the water dead.

Two physicians said there was no water in the lungs of either, and that Mrs. Keesing died of heart failure and Dickenson of fright.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—City-bred babies triumphed over those from the country in the Twentieth Century Baby Show held at Piasa Chautauqua near Alton, Ill. The prizes went not to the prettiest babies, but to those who scored highest in physical and mental efficiency.

First place in Class A for babies from eighteen months to three years, was won by Cooner Stanton White, of Alton. In Class B for babies from six to eighteen months the winner was Gilbert Craig, of East St. Louis.

Of the eighteen babies entered, none scored less than 946. None of the country babies entered won a prize.

Uses Boot as Strop; Shaves With Knife

Pioneer Indiana Man Has Never Owned Razor, Mug or Barber Soap.

CONNERSVILLE, IND., Aug. 9.—Zaccheus Adams, Jackson Township, Fayette County, has shaved himself twice a week for 54 years, but never owned a shaving mug, a razor, a strop or a hone. It is Mr. Adams' pride that he keeps his razor, an old Wade & Butcher cleaver, twice as big as a common razor, in fine shape without trouble of any man in the county.

He wears old style, high-toped boots and still has one pair which he bought 36 years ago. Wishing to shave, Mr. Adams first puts on these boots. He then smacks the razor blade back and forth along the leather leg of the left one for a minute or two. His next operation is to moisten his face with rainwater—no perfumed soap for him—and then he just shaves.

NATURE AIDS IN BEAUTY DISPLAY AT PACIFIC FAIR

Picturesque Location Will Add to Grandeur of Palaces of Mammoth Panama Exhibition.

By HAMILTON WRIGHT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—The palaces of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition have been planned upon a massive scale to conform with their impressive natural surroundings. The site of the exposition at Harbor View lies within the city limits as a crescent upon the shores of San Francisco Bay, just inside the Golden Gate.

No more picturesque location, nor one more appropriate to the celebration of a great maritime event could be imagined. On the south, east and west the grounds are encircled by towering hills of varying contours rising successively from 250 to 900 feet above the sea level. Upon the north the site opens out upon the harbor of San Francisco.

Site Natural Amphitheater.

The central portion of the site lies slightly above the sea and is encircled on three sides by gently sloping ground; within a short distance from the boundaries of the site these slopes change to steep hillsides and thus the site becomes the floor of a huge amphitheater from whose sides the exposition will be seen stretched out below. To the east and south the residence section encircles the exposition grounds, and to the west and southwest the site embraced by the wooded slopes of the Presidio military reservation, dark with cypress and eucalyptus and interspersed with occasional vistas of green valleys.

The exposition buildings, built upon an axis east and west, will face the bay upon the north; they will parallel the stream of the great incoming traffic of the world through the western gate of the United States. Ships entering the harbor will pass before the exposition grounds.

The harbor itself will be a part of the great theater upon which will be staged the world's jubilee and the Golden Gate will be the entrance to the theater.

A marvelous panorama will be afforded visitors on ships coming through the Golden Gate. As one looks from the harbor he will see there main groups of exposition buildings. There will be the great central group comprising the fourteen exposition palaces to be devoted to general exhibits; there will be the group upon the left hand or east end devoted to amusement concessions and covering sixty-five acres; this will be the "midway." The right-hand group upon the Presidio Military reservation and nearest the Golden Gate will be devoted to the pavilions of the States and foreign nations.

Tropical Boulevard Feature.

The main group of buildings will lie between a tropical garden or boulevard running east and west along the fringe of hills nearest the city upon the south, and the esplanade along the shores of San Francisco Bay upon the north.

The tropical boulevard, to be known as the "Alameda," will be 1,800 feet in length and 300 feet wide; it will be glowing with fountains, lagoons, statuary peristyles and arcades and, secluded from the winds of the bay, it will be transplanted with a profusion of semi-tropical trees, plants and flowers, including the orange, banana, olive, myrtle and every variety of palm. The east end of the Alameda will open out with a plaza upon Van Ness Avenue, one of the principal boulevards of San Francisco. The west end upon the Presidio will be surmounted by a commemorative arch of triumph.

The prevailing color tone of the exposition will be an ochre, a tawny buff, several shades removed from white, but in the distance giving the effect of white, but will not be glaring under the brilliant sunlight of California. In the courts there will be a marvelous blending of colors; Pompeiian red, strong Italian blues, vermilion and orange will predominate. The court system is unique in that it will permit each architect, artist or sculptor to present some distinct conception without clashing with the exposition architecture and coloring in its entirety.

Get Ready for End of the World

Flying Rollers Expect It Soon

So Members of This Queer Cult Await With Uncut Hair and Much Footwashing.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—"Now, brethren, watch night and day, for ye know not when the end of the world draws nigh. It may be tomorrow; at least it will come before the year 1920. It is probably much nearer than that," says Brother Lucien I. Pingree. With long flowing beard that has never been profaned by scissors and with silken locks which also have never been clipped, this resident of Stoneham thus warns all those who would be ready when the First Resurrection occurs. "It is coming soon—very soon—very soon," he asserts. Brother Pingree and his band of adherents all are sure of it. The end of the world is close at hand, they all say.

For this reason the Flying Rollers are launcing a great religious crusade which they hope will awaken men and women to a knowledge of their evil ways and will prepare them for the near-at-hand millennium.

Keep on Living.

If you are one of the elect and alive when this auspicious day comes Mr. Pingree says that you will never die. Your body will take on eternal life and though you will be otherwise possessed of man's normal anatomy and will go right on through million of years living in the mortal mold.

Brother Pingree, who is agent and teacher of the Flying Roller faith in this vicinity, lives at No. 1 Forrest street, Stoneham. His church until recently has been at No. 117 Hancock street, Everett. Now the Flying Rollers are to pitch their tent in Malden and launch a propaganda which aims to halt the world in its mad round of pleasure, barber shops and picture galleries.

It is not such a hardship for the women to belong to the Flying Rollers church, but the men have troubles of their own. Their discipline forbids anyone to have his hair cut or to enjoy the pleasure of lying back in a tonsorial chair while the artist with the razor does the rest.

Males Never Cut Hair.

The male brethren never have the corners of their hair or of their flowing beards rounded. "Thou shalt not," says the church discipline. Then there is the ceremony of the washing of feet, which takes place on certain occasions, when elders and elderesses lave each other's pedal extremities and thus conform to other Biblical injunctions. The Flying Roll is a book written by the great Roller prophet, Jezreel, mentioned in the Scriptures as "to come on earth." He came and was here in 1875, wrote the Roll and died about twenty years ago.

Here Are the Tenets of the Flying Rollers

Thou shalt not shave.
Thou shalt not cut thy hair.
Thou shalt not have thy picture taken.
Be faithful and thou shalt join the 144,000 true believers who will live forever.
Remember that the millenium will be here—probably in a year or so.
Thou shalt not tattoo thy arms.
The prophet is James J. Jezreel.
Follow his teachings.
Feet washing among the brethren and sisters is practiced faithfully as the Bible and extracts from the "Flying Roll" dictate.
Prepare for the first resurrection which is coming soon.

Since then the Flying Rollers have read his text with scrupulous care and followed closely in his teachings.

The Flying Rollers believe in the law and gospel. That is, they follow literally the teachings of the Bible. A man who is faithful to the end will live forever. The Bible says that and the Rollers take it literally.

144,000 in the Elect.

Of all the people alive, 144,000 (mentioned in Revelations, Chapter 14) shall be the elect who are to live during the thousand years when Christ is again to be on earth (during the First Resurrection). Then this chosen 144,000 shall enjoy Heaven still with their earthly bodies while the rest of humanity that was, shall minister to them as "ministering spirits."

"The world of wickedness will soon cease. A new world will appear as soon as Christ comes, which will be very soon (I can not give the exact date, but it will be before 1920, there is no doubt about that)," says Pastor Pingree. "In that world there will be no longer this struggle for life. Wonderful fruits and flowers will grow everywhere along the roadsides—fruits and flowers more wonderful than we get from hothouses now. Then the earth will be Heaven for a thousand years.

"We believe that those who are faithful to the teachings of our religion will share that thousand years with Christ, wearing their mortal bodies, then clothed in immortality.

"It is no hardship not to cut your hair or trim your beard," says Mr. Pingree. "We tie it up and tuck it in, and by not cuttin' it or rounding the corners in any way, we are obeying the letter of divine law."

EVERY LUXURY PROVIDED FOR 12 PRIZE DOGS

Private Room, Electric Fans, Leather Chairs, Etc., for Each of Dozen Pomeranians.

BROKTON, MASS., Aug. 9.—Twelve Pomeranians—each with a whole room to himself, and housed in a house which they have all to themselves, likewise—take he prize for dog luxury, Brockton folks believe. Besides a house of their own, the dogs have:

A valet, electric fan, individual beds, a bath twice a day, a back yard to play in, leather chairs and soft rugs (the latter to try their teeth on).

Mrs. E. V. Graves, a leading business woman, owns the dogs. She is successful as the head of a factory here. Brockton folks say she is more attentive to the dogs than Mrs William Carter, of Newport, who got four doctors when her Pomeranian was nervous.

During the hot days the valet, Mr. Beals, fans the little fellows with a specially made $18 electric fan and each dog is given a cold bath at frequent intervals.

"They are all as jealous as can be," says Mrs. Graves. "If you make more of one than another there is a terrible howl and often a fight. They are friendly to children as a general rule. The dogs are worth anywhere from $150 to $1,000 each, but I do not care to sell them. They are a great comfort to me."

HOT FIGHT FOR COMMISSIONER IN BIRMINGHAM

Recorder Wood, "People's Candidate," Denounces Opponent as Champion of Interests.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Clement R. Wood and George B. Ward are engaged in the most spectacular campaign for President of the Commission of Birmingham ever waged in this city.

Wood, as the "candidate of the people," is making many and varied charges against the political element supporting his opponent, Mr. Ward. He charges that he (Wood) was removed as Recorder by the Commission for sending one of their friends to the stockade and insisting on his serving his time, as he did in similar cases.

He also charges that Ward represents the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company and the Birmingham Loan and Discount Company. He charges that the managing editor of one of Birmingham's afternoon papers was forced out of the race under penalty of losing his position on the paper.

He claims that many other prospective candidates have been eliminated from the race by the powerful hand of the interests, and calls on the "common people" to assert themselves in the defeat of Ward.

Ward claims that Wood was discouraged by the Commission because of incompetency, and makes many other charges and insinuations in his speeches and newspaper cards.

Meetings are being held almost every night, and music from brass bands and the orations of the spellbinders are to be heard on every corner.

It is impossible to get a complete line-up, but it can be said with certainty that the race will be close, and that the result will be known only after every vote has been counted.

WOMEN BUY LAND ONE-THIRD CHEAPER THAN MEN

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 9.—After hearing from women of the Council of Clubs the Finance Committee of the upper house of the Council has killed the ordinance to advance $1,000 of the $12,000 set apart for the purpose of making a start on the contemplated women's reformatory at Leeds.

It developed that the $1,000 had been asked by the Board of Public Welfare as a first payment on thirteen acres of ground it proposed to buy at Leeds at $500 an acre.

The women made fun of the business abilities of the Welfare Board, and said that they had already secured an option on 96 acres close by the thirteen at $171 an acre.

Heiress on Lone Hunt for Gold Seeks Mine Grandfather Found Plans to Do Own Prospecting

Miss Frances Leighton, an heiress of California, who is prospecting through a section of the Sierra Madre Mountains in search of a gold mine which she believes her grandfather, a "Forty-niner," discovered, but never made known. Recently she heard of the reported "find" and, securing a miner's outfit ,staked alone on the perilous trip through the mountainous wilds in search of it.

Miss Frances Leighton Shows Same Intrepid Spirit of the Argonauts of '49.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—With the same dauntless spirit exhibited by her grandfather during the California gold rush of '49, Miss Frances Leighton, one of the wealthiest and most prominent socially of the younger generation of Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, is on a prospecting tour through the Sierra Madre Mountains to-day in search of a gold mine she had learned her grandfather discovered but never developed.

For many months Miss Leighton planned the prospecting tour before leaving to carry it out. Topographical bureaus supplied her with maps of the mountainous territory through which she planned to make her tour and several veterans of the gold stampede not only advised her against the foolhardiness of the prospective journey, but told her that there was one chance in a thousand of ever greeting civilization again if she lost herself in several untraveled sections of the mountain region that as yet have never been thoroughly explored.

Nevertheless, Miss Leighton had great confidence in the belief that her grandfather did find the mine somewhere in the mountain fastness and she determined to find it, if it did exist, at any cost and without taking into consideration the hardships that confront her.

Miss Leighton, according to reports which have reached her home town, is to-day prospecting at or near the West Fork Canyon, twelve miles beyond Mount Wilson.

Grandfather Killed.

Her grandfather, John Easton, was one of the first of the thousands of New Englanders to reach California, after a perilous journey across the prairies following the report of the discovery of gold in that State.

Soon after reaching San Francisco, he left with his wife and daughter and a partner and established a camp at Sierra Madre. Easton left the camp one day on a prospecting tour and never returned. Three days later his partner went out to search for him. He was found crushed to death by falling rock.

Before his death, however, he managed to draw roughly on a piece of paper what is now believed to be the location of the mine his intrepid young granddaughter is searching for.

Miss Leighton some years ago received a letter from her grandfather's former partner containing the piece of paper on which he had drawn the outline of the supposed mine. It was on receipt of this letter and diagram that Miss Leighton planned to go in search of the hidden gold.

After months of careful study of the many maps, topographical bureau reports and advice from old-time miners, Miss Leighton treated herself to a complete miner's outfit and started on her tedious journey up the mountain.

To Work Alone.

She will do the entire work alone, staking her own camp, preparing her meals, making surveys and using the pick and shovel whenever she believes she has struck the right trail.

Her outfit includes several changes of clothes, a heavy pick and shovel, a mountain mule, or pack animal as they are called in that section of the country, a complete dining and cooking outfit, a pack of playing cards which will afford her her only amusement while practically a prisoner in the wilds, needles, thread and many other useful and necessary articles.

She wears most all the time a pair of regulation top trousers, similar to riding breeches, with canvas leggings and a plain but heavy mountain shirt.

If the gold mine really exists, every one of the young woman's friends believe that she will not return until it has been found.

U. S. EDUCATION EXPERT SAYS ILLITERACY GROWS

BOULDER, COLO., Aug. 9.—That in only two States of the Union has the ideal democracy in education been even approximated; that every year in the United States almost 70,000 illiterates are sent out into the world to make their way; that there are in the country to-day 5,615,000 persons over the age of ten who can neither read nor write and that almost 50 per cent of the rural teachers of the country have not had a high school education, were among the startling statements made by United States Commissioner of Education Claxton in an address on "Democracy and Education."

DENVER IS READY TO GIVE KNIGHTS ROYAL GREETING

Thousands of Templars Pour Into City, Which Is Lavishly Decorated for Conclave.

DENVER, Aug. 9.—Thousands of Knights Templar are already here for the thirty-second triennial convention, and it is estimated that when the convention formally opens Tuesday next more than 100,000 Knights and their friends will have arrived.

All buildings are decorated in honor of the Knights, as are private dwellings. The municipal and other public buildings have been elaborately ornamented and great arches have been built over many of the streets. Thousands have been spent upon decorations and illumination. Denver has spent more than fifteen times as much on its plans for the Knights Templar than it ever before expended upon any one convention.

Sun to Shine All Night.

At Eighteenth and Champa streets the huge figure of a Knight more than 60 feet in height has been erected. A searchlight will play upon it all night. At Fourteenth and Champa streets a "Colorado Sunset," a marvelous electrical display, has been built. It shows the sun sinking below the rim of the mountains. Twenty monster searchlights are placed behind the "sun," throwing their rays into the sky to resemble the rays of the sinking sun.

Over the Isle of Safety at Broadway and Sixteenth street, a reproduction of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem will astonish the visitors. It measures 50 by 60 feet, and is lighted by searchlights on the tops of nearby buildings.

Every arrangement possible has been made by the railroads to bring the Knights and their friends into Denver. More special trains will enter Denver than entered Washington in the same space of time for the inauguration. The Pullman Company has reserved large space of ground on the outskirts of the city for a "Car City," where the special cars and special trains will be parked, and where those Knights who so wish may live in the cars. Sanitary arrangements will be perfect. Stores of various kinds for the convenience of the car dwellers have been established.

Two trainloads of automobiles from New York, sent here by New York Knights, have already arrived, and carloads of automobiles from other cities are arriving daily. These have also been parked on the outskirts of the city. More than 500 special trains and cars have already arrived. According to the railroad schedules, when the visitors really commence to flock in a special train will arrive every eight minutes for forty-eight hours.

Every State Represented.

From August 1 to-day more than 2,000 automobiles reached this city. More than 1,000 other cars are on their way here. The delegates to the convention are from every State in the Union, and from Alaska, Honolulu, Philippines, Canada, England, Scotland and Ireland.

As the special trains began to arrive, some 2,000 Colorado Knights ranged themselves at the station to escort the new arrivals safely to their hotels. Every hotel room in Denver has been rented.

On Tuesday next the grand parade will be held. More than 50,000 Knights will be in line. Their white plumes, costing $15 each, will altogether be worth $600,000. The regalia of the Knights on parade will be worth more than $1,000,000. Sixty-five bands will march with the Knights, the fees to the bands alone amounting to $22,000. Some 600 Knights' commanders will be mounted on picked horses from the ranches of Colorado and Wyoming.

KANSAS SHERIFF RETALIATES FOR HIS ARREST ON SUNDAY

HUTCHINSON, KANS., Aug. 9.—Following his arrest on a charge of violating the Sunday labor ordinance, Koon C. Beck, sheriff of Reno County, announced that he would stop all Sunday labor in this city.

He swore out complaints against 350 persons who work on Sunday, including all street car employees. Beck and a brother are proprietors of an amusement park and shows have been given there on Sunday. Local ministers and church members made the complaint against the park.

LANE TAKES UP CUDGELS IN WAR FOR FARMERS

Secretary of the Interior Has Begun Long Battle on Land Grabbers.

the Interior Franklin K. Lane has started a little war on the land grabbers west of the Mississippi River.

He has taken up the cudgels of the farmer and the homesteader in the great West. His efforts in this direction materially effect the pocketbook of every man, women and child.

Incidentally, he is "bucking" the land speculator. These land "grabbers" have quietly been acquiring vast tracts of land in the West on which the people of the United States have spent over $75,000,000 in irrigation projects. The homesteader has either been ousted through excessive water rate charges or becomes a tenant of the land companies.

Speculators Hold Land.

Secretary Lane finds that the projects were planned for the purpose of aiding the small farmer in tilling his ground, but that in reality 95 per cent of the land is held by speculators, who are charging excessive rates for water which has been sluiced to the land by the Government.

The other 5 per cent of the acreage is owned by the small farmer, but even Government water rates are held by Mr. Lane to be excessively high. Building notes for dam canal and sluice ways add to the cost of upkeep of the farm and conditions, Westerners say, are becoming intolerable.

By going into the question from the very first day that he entered his office, Mr. Lane has become intimately acquainted with conditions obtaining in the West. Daily conferences have been had with delegations from the West. Even the land speculator had his day in court, and his contentions and views were placed before the Secretary.

Farmer Needs Help.

In this connection Mr. Lane announced: "I am for the farmer, first, last and at all times. Naturally handicapped by lack of sufficient funds to carry on expensive farming under the conditions that obtain in the West, the farmer must receive support and co-operation from the Government, if the great West is to be settled and made to be as productive as the East.

"Expensive water will ruin the small farmers and ranchmen. They must have cheap rates and long-time notes, the Government must back them up an extend them credit, helping them over the rough places if necessary, if the various projects designed to benefit the whole people are to accomplish the purposes for which they were constructed.

"Why should this Government spend $75,000,000 for the benefit of private capital? Why should the Government adopt a hard and fast policy, such as has existed in the past, which has kept the small farmer from going into the new regions and taking up Government land? Isn't it time for the United States to extend to the Westerners a little paternal patience, a little more consideration, a helping hand?"

MEN AND RELIGION No. 73

CHILDREN OF GEORGIA

"AND THEY ALL WITH ONE CONSENT BEGAN TO MAKE EXCUSE."

Luke 14:18.

They were at dinner.

Jesus said:

"When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind,

"And thou shalt be blessed."

One at the table pretended to be in sympathy. He began smugly:

"Happy is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God."

The hypocrisy of the man and all others like him was unmasked in the answer made by Jesus. He said:

"A certain man made a great supper and bade many—

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse."

One said one thing, another another.

With one it was a field; with another it was new oxen.

In the end, the Lord said:

"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

And from the highways and the hedges called He His guests.

Are you a maker of hypocritcal phrases as was the man at the Pharisee's dinner table—pretending a love for that which is just and right?

Or, to-day, are you trying to do the will, not of man or men, but of Him who died for you?

Let us have done with excuses!

While spending thousands on fields, hogs and cattle, say not:

"We are unable—

"We can not give proper care to these girls—

"These children must go down in shame because of our lack of money—

"But our beasts we must protect whatever the cost."

If animals are more valuable than girls, let us say frankly: but you know that this is untrue.

You know what Georgia would do.

Consider, then!

The Bill in the House providing a Reformatory for Girls is No. 4—ahead of any other measure appropriating money.

The Penitentiary Committee has approved it.

Unanimously the Appropriations Committee has recommended that it pass.

Why, then, should beasts and fields be provided for by later bills and nothing done for Georgia's wayward and delinquent girls?

BURWELL of Hancock, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman and the vice-chairman, BLACKBURN of Fulton, HARDEMAN of Jefferson, MILLER of Bibb, NUNNALLY of Floyd, PAULK of Berrien, RAGLAND of Talbot, REDWINE of Fayette, RHODES of Clarke, SHUPTRINE of Chatham and SLADE of Muscogee constitute the Rules Committee of the House.

The Bill is in their hands.

Monday is the final day in which the measure can be heard and enacted into law at this session of the Legislature.

These eleven men, THE RULES COMMITTEE, will not prevent a hearing, say their friends. We believe that they will do more, that they will help to pass the Bill.

For they know the worth of a girl-child of ten to fourteen.

And they can appraise a cow or hog.

WOMAN DEITY CREATED MAN, SAYS TABLET

New Version of Genesis Found in University of Pennsylvania Nippur Collection.

DATE IS FIXED AT 2100 B. C.

Dr. Arno Poebel's Discovery Is Regarded as Oldest Story of Origin of World.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—It was a woman who created mankind, according to a tablet 4,000 years old just deciphered at the Pennsylvania University Museum by Dr. Arno Poebel, who is at work translating the tablets dug up in Nippur some years ago by the museum expeditions.

About 37 years ago George Smith, the English scholar and explorer, brought back from Babylonia the cylinders which gave a Babylonian account of the origin of mankind and much of his early history, and these not only excited great interest but had a profound effect upon the theological teachings. The parallelism between the Babylonian story and that of Genesis developed a new school in theological criticism. But the cylinders of Smith only dated back to the reign of Assurbanipal in the seventh century B. C. The university museum tablet dates back possibly to 2500 B. C., and it is reasonably certain to be no later than the reign of Hamurabi, about 2100 B. C.

Female Deity Created Man.

The new account of the creation and the flood throws much new light on the early ideas of the Babylonians and Sumerians.

The striking novel features of the new tablet are these:

That it was a female deity who created mankind, known as "the blackheaded," from the color of the hair.

That new deities or new characteristics of the gods are discovered in the original document, although they have been hinted at in other ways. The character of the female goddess is now made important from the earliest times and equal with the two male ruler gods. Later tablets speak of these as unimportant.

That the first seven prediluvian cities and the special god of each are discovered.

That the older Babylonian name of the Scriptural Noah is Zingidda.

That deluge ruins of the predeluvian cities were not all destroyed, some not until historic times. There is historic basis to much of the statement in this epic.

Opens With Poem.

Dr. Poebel has prepared a careful literal translation of the tablet. It originally was about seven inches square, but on such a surface the ancients could write in ideographic signs a long epic poem, and that is what this table contained. Like the first chapter of Genesis, the story opens with a great poem on the origin of the heavens as well as of the earth. It appears that Nintu, a female god, created mankind, and she is found lamenting that the other gods seem bent on the destruction of her subjects. She speaks of the human beings as "my creations." It appears that Anu and Enlil, were the chief gods of power, although they were among seven of equal rank, the first being god of heaven and the second god of earth. Then comes the story of the creation:

"Nintu created the blackheaded," (human race.) * * * "The fields of the ground produced abundance, the cattle and the four-legged beasts of the field artfully they (the gods) called into existence."

Use of Fireproofed Cotton Goods Urged

State Fire Marshal Says Stores in Kansas Sell No Other Kind.

TOPEKA, Aug. 9.—Harrison Parkman, State Fire Marshal, believes that stores ought to sell only fireproof cotton goods.

In the new State fire textbook the Fire Marshal is urging that every Kansas man and woman refuse to buy any but fireproof cotton goods and that they adopt the German method and fireproof all cotton materials.

The Fire Marshal believes that this action would decrease the number of deaths by fire in Kansas fully 50 per cent and it would make a big decrease in the number of fires in the homes of the State.

Raze House While Occupant Is Away

Workmen of Grade Crossing Commission Destroy House of Man Who Blocked Work.

CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Aug. 9.—While John Barber was in Boston this afternoon, a wrecking crew, under orders of the special grade crossing commission for Central Falls, demolished a cottage house he owned on Cross street, and then started in to saw off a corner of the Barber Livery Stable nearby. When his land was condemned, Barber demanded $5,000 for the property, but was allowed only $3,500. The grade crossing commissioners sold the cottage to Nicolas Bertozzi, but Barber would not let Bertozzi on the premises.

25,562,650 VOTES FOR PONIES

Astounding Mark Reached in Great Contest

Race, Thrillingly Close to the Last, Showed Courage and Ability of Boys and Girls.

MISS ROBERT JESTER HARBOUR, 340 Ponce DeLeon avenue, who polled largest number of votes in Georgian and American's great Pony Contest.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American Pony Contest polled the astounding total of 25,562,650 votes.

Miss Robert Harbour, of District No. 2, won first honors with 647,175 votes. She had first choice of the ponies, and took the little black pony coveted by many others—"Queen Bess."

Winner of first prize is shown driving "Queen Bess," the little Shetland most coveted in the contest.

Totals of more than a half-million votes were made by George Rosser in District No. 1, and Fannie Mae Cook in District No. 4.

Four others, Charles E. Kelly, of Cartersville, with 480,460; Frank Ison, Jr., of College Park, with 474,090; William Turner, with 439,930, and Ross Greer, with 440,925, climbed over the 400,000 mark, and neared the half-million level.

All Had Big Totals.

All the others had big total votes—large enough to win in any ordinary contest. But this was no ordinary contest. It was harder fought than any competition of the kind in the history of Atlanta. This was inevitable, because the prizes were more attractive to children than any which any Atlanta newspaper ever before had offered.

A remarkable feature is the way the contestants were "bunched" at the finish. In many districts there are five, six and even ten who were serious contenders for the prizes up to the very count.

Some of those who were fifth in their own districts would have won a pony, or at least a watch, in some other district. This seems hard, but it is the fate of war, so to speak. Presumably those in the same districts had even chances, and should not be permitted to compete with the boys and girls working in a region where the going, perhaps, was much more difficult.

Credit to the Losers.

Hats off to the losers!

Every one of them is "game." There has not been a complaint of unfairness—not a single kick at the method in which the contest was conducted. Nothing but a spirit of fair play, and the motto, "Let the best man win," has prevailed.

There is this much consolation—the boys and girls who worked sincerely in the contest have gained experience which will be invaluable to them in later life—an insight into business methods worth more than any prize.

Then, too, they have the satisfaction of knowing that they have aided in introducing Atlanta's best newspapers into homes where they were strangers before.

Mends Own Socks To Let Wife Vote

Illinois Husband Consents to Do Washing to Prove Housekeeping Isn't Hard.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Just to prove to an expectant world that he was a good husband, Wayne Colby stayed home, mended the socks, tended the children and washed dishes while his wife cast her vote in the first election under the universal suffrage law recently enacted.

"Just to show that it is not such a terrible thing for a man to stay at home and do the housework on the occasional voting day," said Colby, "I thought I would help Mrs. Colby out with the washing."

The first woman to cast her vote in the State was Mrs. Fannie Coleman, of Wamac, near Central Illinois. She was accompanied to the polls by her husband, O. W. Coleman, and both voted for Village Trustees.

WOMEN WHO JOG WIFE UPON A RAIL AWAIT SHERIFF

Illinois State's Attorney Says Volo Vigilantes Who Maltreated the Town Beauty Must Answer.

VOLO, ILL., Aug. 9.—Here in Volo, Lake County, Ill., the women who rode Mrs. John Richardson, the town beauty, on a rail will have to answer to the grand jury. The State's Attorney Ralph Dady, says so.

Gossip caused the trouble. Mrs. Richardson is pretty. Her husband, who keeps the small country store, is a cripple. William Dunnill, a brother-in-law of the wife, was a frequent caller.

The village women descended on the Richardson store, dragged her out on July 14 in the evening, set her astride a rail and bore her, struggling, screaming, almost raving, through the main street of the little town, climaxing the incident by dumping her into a mud puddle by a roadside and warning her to "pack up her traps and go," meaning thereby an ultimatum that she must forever leave Volo.

And, paradoxical as it may seem, all of this happened within forty miles of Chicago.

Slips Away During Night.

After the vigilantes had dumped Mrs. Richardson into one of the various mud puddles which abound in the vicinity, the victim emerged from her oozy bath, went by a circuitous route back to her husband's store, conferred with him and slipped away during the night.

It was impossible to employ an automobile, buggy or other conveyance the night she left, and to remain over until daylight was out of the question, because members of the mob had warned Mrs. Richardson that if the sun rose upon her in Volo again they would tar and feather her.

Her husband witnessed the abduction of his wife, but, being unable to rise, could render her no assistance.

It is estimated that at least half the male population of Volo witnessed the hazing of Mrs. Richardson. In fact, it is said that the women who committed the outrage had previously taken their husbands and brothers into their confidence and that the proposition had been indorsed in family council.

It was expected that Will Dunnill, brother-in-law of Mrs. Richardson, would interfere in her behalf, but he left Volo a few hours before the attack. Therefore, Mrs. Richardson's husband being disabled, and her brother-in-law being absent, she was without champion.

Husband Defends Her.

Just before Mrs. Richardson's flight from Volo, her husband gave her $1,500.

To a newspaper man, Richardson said:

"My wife is a good woman. She is not guilty of the charges the other women make. I won't believe it. A woman who has cared for me during my invalidism for the last nine years, who married me when I was an invalid, knowing there was no hope of my recovery, would not be guilty of what they charge.

"And to think that I was helpless to save her from the indignities which were heaped upon her. Her clothing was half torn from her and amid jeers and cheers and the throwing of mud and stones, she was ridden through the streets. It was an act of Middle-Age barbarism and hardly worthy of women of Illinois, who have just obtained the right to vote."

Meanwhile the women of Volo, who are supposed to have played the role of vigilantes, are calmly awaiting developments.

Husband Says She Kissed Count's Foot

Wife Brings Counter Charge That He Is Unduly Friendly With Stepmother.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Counter suits have been instituted in divorce proceedings by Harold D. Johnson, of the Colonial Life Insurance Company, and his wife, Mrs. Harriet L. Johnson, in the Supreme Court at White Plains.

The husband alleges that his wife is so infatuated with a certain Italian count that she frequently kissed his foot.

Mrs. Johnson alleges undue intimacy on the part of her husband with her stepmother, who is designated in the complaint as "one Anna J. R."

Johnson has entered a general denial to his wife's charges, while the wife's attorney, Mirabeau Towns, ridiculed the foot-kissing episodes complained of by Johnson.

No More Matrimony For Julia Sanderson

Former Wife of Tod Sloan Says She Will Never Tire of Single Life.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Never again." This was the terse reply of Julia Sanderson, the actress, when she arrived here on the steamship Adriatic and was asked if the reports that she intended to marry again were true.

After dealing that solar plexus blow to the matrimonial rumor, the former wife of Tod Sloan gave out her ideas on marriage.

"When a girl is free and single she can have all the fun in the world," she said. "It is different when you are married. Nobody wants to talk to you. Nobody wants to see you. No more barriers for me."

Twin Boys' Skin Is Turning to Black

Eighteen-Month-Old Babies Are Suffering From Rare Malady Known as Hodgkin's Disease.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black. The disease is pseudo leucaemia, or Hodgkin's disease, and is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpuscles greatly diminished.

The twins are the children of Anthony Amato and they were born eighteen months ago. They were then white. Then their skin began growing dark.

Men's Farewell Kiss Mistaken for Fight

Ardent Osculation at Railroad Station Causes Commotion Among Passengers at Gate.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Smack!"

A score of persons hurrying to and fro in the Pennsylvania Railroad station yesterday stopped short.

"Smack!"

The sound was repeated. Turning in the direction from which it seemed to emanate, the curious among the persons in the station saw two well-dressed young men in each other's arms.

Both men were of athletic build and none of the persons who stopped to watch their antics from a distance cared to interfere. When it seemed as if the taller of the two was about to be thrown, they separated suddenly.

Then the gates to the train shed were thrown open and an announcer called upon all intending passengers bound for Jamaica, L. I., and points east to go aboard the waiting train.

That seemed to be a signal for a recommencement of hostilities.

"Smack!"

Sure enough. It sounded again distinctly, but there was no mystery about because this time.

"Good-bye, Pierre," said the taller man; "don't forget to write." And a fourth time they kissed before parting.

ROMANCE LEADS TO HEIR'S EXILE FROM GERMANY

Lieutenant in the Kaiser's Army Comes to Chicago and Joins U. S. Cavalry.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Because his love for a pretty German actress resulted in his squandering an inheritance of $32,000 in one year, Dr. Otto Gordon Goldfield, scion of a wealthy family, a lieutenant in the German cavalry and a graduate of Gottigen University, was forced by his father to come to the United States and join the army here as a private. The young German is now in barracks here.

Ruth Werner, German dancer and singer, charmed the young man when in Vienna. His grandfather had just died and left him $32,000. Within a year this was gone, and after numerous appeals to his father, Dr. Goldfield was forced to come here.

Told to Give Up Girl.

His father, who is the vice president of the Corporation of Hamburg, told him to give up the girl, his commission in the army and go to America.

"I fell in love with the girl," explained "Private" Goldfield, "and spent all my money on her. She was beautiful. If she wanted jewels I bought jewels. We were at Monte Carlo. She wanted to play the games. She was beautiful, and I loved her, so why should she not be happy?

"We were in Paris, at the Horse Show in London, and many other places. She had automobiles and fine horses.

"And then my money gave out. My parents refused to give me more, and my father forced me to come to the United States and try for a commission in the army.

"Will I go back?" responded Dr. Goldfield in answer to a question. "Yes, when I get my commission here. I will go back and the girl and I will be married. But not until then. I must stay in the army here until I am a lieutenant.

Likes Open Air Life.

"It's the open air, and beautiful I like here more than anything else. That is why I have come to the West.

"And your soldiers—well, next to the French dragoons they are about the best in the world, in my opinion, and I have seen the troops of all the larger countries. That's why I am enlisting as a private here, for I like the life and will stay anyway until I get my naturalization papers."

Goldfield is twenty-five, and has served the last four years in the German cavalry as a lieutenant. He is an experienced horseman, and says he was the winner of the championship at the International Horse Show held in London two years ago, riding the horses from his father's stables.

Jacob Goldfield, father of the young army officer, besides being vice president of the Hamburg Corporation, is a well-known German jurist, as is also his brother, Rudolph Goldfield.

FIGHT FOR LIFE OF CARMACK IS ON THIS WEEK

Prominent Young Alabaman Is Accused of Slaying Confederate Veteran Near Columbus.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—The fight to save the life of Homer Carmack, a member of one of the most prominent families of East Alabama, from the gallows will begin Tuesday.

Carmack will be put on trial at Opelika, the county site of Lee County, Alabama, on a charge of murdering J. J. Folke, an aged Phenix City merchant, on Sunday night, June 25. The body of Folke, who was a Confederate veteran, and who lived in his store alone, was found early on the morning of June 26 when customers went to the store to make purchases.

At first glance it seemed that there was absolutely no clew to the slayer, but before noon officers had succeeded in arresting Carmack and had traced the greater part of an amount which the old man had and which it is believed Carmack got to when Carmack had paid debts. He was arrested at the Union Depot in Columbus as he was preparing to leave the city.

The crime was one of the most revolting ever committed in this section, as the aged veteran was literally hacked to pieces. Indignation ran high for several days, but Carmack was taken to Opelika, where he has been held in jail pending his trial. He belongs to one of the oldest and most prominent families in this section, his father having been a county official for many years. He has already been indicted and able counsel has been employed to represent him.

Grade Crossing Row Continues to Bob Up

Columbus City Council and Railroads Unable to Settle Eleventh Street Problem.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—The Eleventh street grade crossing, in this city, like Banquo's ghost, has bobbed up again. The city and railroads can not agree on the manner in which the grade crossing can be eliminated. A proposition has been submitted for building a viaduct at a cost estimated at $200,000, but the Central of Georgia is not favorably inclined to the proposition, because it would have to pay about half of the amount. Another proposition has been to build an underpass, but this is not considered advisable.

Mayor Chappell has been of the opinion that by properly engineering the scheme, he could force the railroads to build it without the city being compelled to do its part, but it seems that the railroads do not propose to fight such a move.

Manufacturers Say Roads Act Unfairly

Columbus Brick Makers Appeal to Railroad Commission, Charging Discrimination.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—A number of local brick manufacturers and dealers have filed complaints with the State Railroad Commission, alleging that the railroads of Columbus are discriminating against them to the injury of their business. September 2 has been named by the commission for the manufacturers to present their argument.

Another case of alleged discrimination by a Columbus manufacturer is that of the Columbus Iron Works Company, one of the largest concerns of the kind in the South, which alleges that the company has been forced to pay a higher freight rate on three cars of plow points to Tyler, Texas, than was charged on the same class of goods from Wilmington, Del., to Tyler.

COLUMBUS FAIR SUFFERS LOSS OF BEST SUPPORT

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—Columbus probably will not hold a fair the coming fall. The merchants had expressed themselves favorably toward the proposition, but in an effort to reorganize the old Georgia-Alabama Fair Association, the officers failed to arouse any enthusiasm, and it may be that the entire matter will be allowed to drop.

STRIKING PLUMBERS NOT GUILTY OF INTIMIDATION

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—At a preliminary hearing before Judge Philip Elder, four plumbers, Charles Stoffel, Mark Garrett, C. E. Cooper and J. R. Forbes, all charged with intimidating plumbers, who refused to strike with them, were released. The trouble grew out of a demand made by the plumbers for a $5 scale, an increase of 50 cents per day.

COLUMBUS SCHOOL FUND SHOWS HEALTHY BALANCE

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—The annual report of Henry R. Goetchius, president of the board of trustees of the Columbus public schools, shows that the total receipts of the public school fund during the year ending July 1, 1913, were $81,367.13, leaving a balance on hand of $1,100.

Family Sees Woman Drain Poison Bottle

Little Credence Given Her Despondent Threats to Take Her Own Life.

VALDOSTA, Aug. 9.—Mrs. Will McDonald, of this city, took an overdose of a narcotic last night, it is believed, with suicidal intent. She had been in a despondent condition and had threatened to kill herself, though her family and friends seemingly attached little importance to her threats.

She was seen by members of her family to swallow the poison, and a physician was hurriedly summoned. Her condition was very grave, but the doctor succeeded in arousing her from the stupor. It is believed today that she will recover.

BANKRUPTCY SUIT FILED AGAINST BREWING PLANT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—An involuntary bankruptcy suit has been filed against the Consumers' Brewing Company. The moving creditors are M. S. and D. A. Byck, the Herman Coal and Wood Company and J. H. Illfelt.

The Consumers' Brewing Company was organized about a year ago to take over and operate the old brewing plant left by Herman Winter, near the Cathedral Cemetery. The company started off with elaborate plans, and intended making a stupendous amusement park of the grounds, but business was disappointingly bad.

ACQUITTED OF HOMICIDE, HELD ON WEAPON CHARGE

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—When Lathrop George, slayer of Henry McClelland, the man whom he charged with despoiling his home, walked out of the Superior Court a free man with all his troubles at an end, as he thought, he reckoned without those whose duty it is to enforce the law, as a warrant has been taken out charging him with carrying a revolver without a license.

George was unable to arrange bail and was recommitted to jail.

50 MARKSMEN COMPETE FOR LABOR DAY SHOOT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—About 50 men from the First Regiment Infantry, National Guard of Georgia, are taking daily rifle practice in an effort to secure ten men to compete in the Labor Day shoot at the Rose Dhu Range.

Several valuable trophies are offered. The DeRenne trophy, valued at $2,000, is the most coveted.

2 States Co-operate For Fair in Valdosta

Lowndes County Organization Organizes and Plans for Yearly Festive Week.

VALDOSTA, Aug. 9.—The formal organization and election of officers for the Lowndes County Fair Association was completed at a meeting last night. G. W. Varn is president; S. L. Dowling, vice president; J. M. Ashley, secretary and manager; Paul Myddleton, treasurer.

The association will hold the Georgia-Florida Fair in this city from November 4 to 8. The association is a regularly chartered institution and was incorporated with the idea of holding fairs in this city every year.

MOTHER-IN-LAW; TROUBLE; SLAPPING; DIVORCE SUIT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Too much mother-in-law was a disrupting element in the marital affairs of Mrs. Emma E. Chance and R. E. Chance, who have projected their disagreement into the divorce branch of the Chatham Superior Court.

The suit is filed by the wife. One of her grounds of complaint is that her husband forced her to allow his mother to live with them. But that wasn't the worst of it. She charges that her husband on one occasion held her while her mother-in-law slapped her for some alleged dereliction of wifely duties.

CHATHAM ARTILLERY TO ORGANIZE NEW BATTERY

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Steps looking to the organization of a second battery of the Chatham Artillery have already been taken. First Lieutenant Ed G. Thomson will command the new battery and Lieutenant E. D. Wells the old one. Captain Richard J. Davant, Mayor of Savannah, and at present commanding officer of the Chashams, will be chosen for the majority.

SEABOARD SPECIAL AGENT RESIGNS HIS POSITION

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Thomas Ballantyne, former chief of the Savannah fire department, but for several months special agent of the Seaboard Air Line Railway on the Hutchinson Island terminals, has resigned, and J. R. Whitten, of New Orleans, has been named to succeed him. It is understood that Ballantyne will accept a position as chief of a department in a neighboring city.

STREET GRADING HALTS CORDELE IN PAVING WORK

$40,000 in Bonds Has Already Been Voted for Improvement, but Complications Arise.

CORDELE, Aug. 9.—The delay in getting the streets of Cordele paved, for which $40,000 of bonds were voted fourteen months ago, may be prolonged by a complication which is expected to arise over making the street gradings to provide this improvement. The total amount to be expended for street paving is $120,000, of which $80,000 is to be paid by the property holders.

It appears that because of the lack of proper judgment of a former city engineer in setting out the grades for the streets several years ago will cause the new grades to work a hardship on the property holders. It is claimed that if the grades are made according to present plans, some sidewalks will have to be raised, while others will have to be lowered by several feet.

The Streets Committee of the City Council was named at a recent meeting of that body to act with Mayor Harder in getting a profile showing the proper grade, which work, the Bond Commission claims, is already being carried on by their engineer.

LAD LEARNS WHETHER STEAM CAN HURT HIM

AMERICUS, Aug. 9.—Curiosity as to whether scalding steam issuing from an engine pipe of a construction plant would hurt him caused the rather painful injury of little Willie McNeill, son of W. W. McNeill, to-day. The boy placed a foot on the escape pipe and the hot steam scalded the limb to the knee before he could remove it.

Waltz and Swo-Step Enough for Cordele

Chaperones Put Ban on Hugs, Tangos, Trots and Other New Steps.

CORDELE, Aug. 9.—The bunny hug, tango, turkey trot and other modern dances are entirely too immodest in the opinion of the fair sex of Cordele who are accustomed to the waxed floors. Like the silt skirt, such dances will probably not come in popular favor at any early time in this city.

Chaperons at local balls recently have positively forbidden the new dances, and the young folk, no matter how ardently, but perhaps secretly, they may desire to introduce them, must let the waltz and two-step still suffice.

LATE REGISTRATION FOR LABORERS TO QUALIFY

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Beginning on Thursday, the registration books for the auditorium bond election will be kept open until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, until they are finally closed on August 15. An order to this effect has been issued by Mayor Richard J. Davant.

The request that the books be kept open until a late hour in the afternoon came from the Chamber of Commerce in order that working men might have a better opportunity of registering. Heretofore they have been closed at 2 o'clock each day.

FORT SCREVEN BAND TO PLAY FOR SAVANNAHANS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Arrangements have been made for public concerts Monday and Thursday evenings each week by the band at Fort Screven.

Because of objections raised by the Musicians' union, the Fort Screven band has been prevented from playing at Tybee this summer, previous similar objections not having been effective. This year the band was permitted to give only a few concerts at the pavilions.

CONFESSES TO SLAYING WHEN REFUSED PARDON

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Frank Collier, a negro whose application for pardon was refused by the Prison Commission in Atlanta, to-day broke down and made a complete confession of his responsibility in the murder of Lewis Robinson, another negro, pleading only that Robinson was attempting to slay him with a knife. Collier has heretofore maintained innocence.

SAVANNAH WIVES SUE BROTHERS FOR DIVORCE

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Alleging cruel treatment and statutory causes, Mrs. Frances Zipperer has filed suit for divorce against Robert Zipperer in the Superior Court of Chatham County. This is the second divorce petition filed by a Mrs. Zipperer in two weeks. Mrs. Aline Zipperer, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Frances Zipperer, filed the other.

Lee County to Build Colony Tract Roads

Eight Miles of Highways To Be Constructed Through Central of Georgia Property.

LEESBURG, Aug. 9.—The Board of Commissioners of Lee County have decided to build modern sand-clay roads through the 4,000-acre tract of land, near the Dougherty line, recently acquired by the Central of Georgia Railroad for colonization purposes. The proposition was presented to the Lee County commissioners by representatives of the Albany Chamber of Commerce. This action is the last preliminary step in the development of this tract of land. The railroad will divide it into small farms to be sold to settlers from the North and Northwest.

The roads to be built will be about eight miles in length. They will traverse the tract in various directions, connecting with the main road between Albany and Leesburg.

Want Street Paved At Albany Station

Councilmen Urge Improvement Before New Depot Is Opened—Now Unsightly Thoroughfare.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—That North street should be paved before the new terminal station is opened is the consensus of opinion of members of City Council.

The Atlantic Compress Company some years ago was allowed to build sidetracks in North street and the sidewalk was moved out to the center of the street to make room for the tracks. The new compress north of town was completed almost a year ago, and the old plant abandoned. The tracks have been removed, but the city has never moved the sidewalk or graded the street as it should be.

$100,000 Fertilizer Plant Is Under Way

Contractors Begin Work at Albany in Twenty-four Hours After Swift Makes Award.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—Ground has been broken and work is progressing on the new fertilizer plant of Swift & Co. At a meeting in Atlanta this week, the contract was given the Griffin Construction Company, of Atlanta. Within twenty-four hours workmen were on the job and teams were hauling dirt, excavating for the foundations.

The new plant will be located just north of Albany, on the 10-acre site recently purchased. The investment of the company in site and factory will be considerably more than $100,000, it is stated.

Snap Bean Farming On Big Scale Planned

Pensacola Merchants Agree to Aid in Finding Most Profitable Marketing Points.

PENSACOLA, Aug. 9.—At an enthusiastic meeting of farmers of the Roberts-Gonzales community, this county, last night, at which experts made addresses, it was decided that an experiment will be made in the cultivation of snap beans on a large scale in that locality. Several farmers agreed to plant a certain number of acres each on the co-operative plan and ship to Northern markets. The crop will be planted during the present month. Business men of this city agreed to aid the farmers in securing a market.

It is thought that this will prove one of the most successful crops for this section, as experts say the soil is peculiarly adapted and that climatic conditions are ideal.

OLDEST U. S. CITY MAY ADOPT COMMISSION FORM

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 8.—Sentiment has suddenly focused in St. Augustine upon commission form of government for America's oldest city. A wrangle in City Council which resulted in some Aldermen nearly coming to blows and in which one said he was "in a crowd of sharps" was the final straw, and a movement is now on foot to call an election to vote upon a charter change.

St. Augustine voted down such a change two years ago, but other local issues at the time beclouded the main question.

HOME OF CUBAN LIBERTY AT TAMPA TO BE RAZED

TAMPA, Aug. 9.—The old Criterion Theater, famous during the period preceding the Spanish-American war as the place where many of the Cuban plots against Spain were hatched, is to be torn down to make way for a new vaudeville theater, announcement just being made by Lee Dekle. The old Criterion was a great gathering place for the Cuban patriots in the early nineties and was famous or infamous even as far as Madrid.

CAMPHOR TREE RAISING TO BE TRIED IN FLORIDA

BRADENTOWN, Aug. 9.—Two 20-acre tracts have been donated to the United States Department of Agriculture for experimental farm will be established here. Professor Stockberger and Professor Hood have been here and the Board of Trade has made arrangements for money to aid in the experiments. Experiments in growing camphor trees, which it is believed can be made a profitable industry in Florida, will be among the first made.

TAMPA WANTS BRANCH OF COLORADO SPRINGS HOME

TAMPA, Aug. 9.—Tampa will try for the establishment of a branch of the Union Printers' Home at Colorado Springs, the union typos being anxious to have a sea level branch somewhere. The City Tax Assesor, a former linotype operator, will lay the matter before the convention in Nashville.

JOINS TAMPA TEAM.

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 9.—Newt Mabry, one of Tallahassee's fast amateur ball players, left this week for Tampa, where he has accepted a position on the Tampa team. Another of Tallahassee's players, Ira Watson, is playing in that city.

BODDIFORD GIRLS RECOVER FROM NEGRO'S ATTACK

Victims of Cairo Tragedy in Hospital at Thomasville, Anxious to Return Home.

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 9.—The two Boddiford girls, Mary and Rhoda, who were among the victims of the attack of the negro Ed LeConte near Cairo last week, are still here at the City Hospital and are improving.

Both girls when brought here had high temperatures and their condition seemed serious, but it is believed now that they will recover and be able shortly to return home.

Mary, the older girl, whose nose was partly cut off, will, of course, suffer from some disfigurement. She also lost six front teeth and had some slight scalp wounds.

Rhoda, the young girl, who suffered a severe scalp wound and was considered in a more serious condition than her sister, is also recovering. Both are very anxious to get back to their parents and the young children that they feel need their care.

Reports from the bedside of Mr. and Mrs. Boddiford, at Cairo, show them still holding their own, but with no certainty of recovery. The skulls of both have been trepanned and upon the outcome of the operation within the next few days will depend their chances for recovery. The younger children are being cared for by some of their neighbors.

$57,357 Increase in Tift County Returns

Tax Receiver Fletcher Finds 6,000 Acres of Land Not on the Books.

TIFTON, Aug. 9.—Tift County tax returns for the present year show an increase of $57,357 over the returns of last year. Figures were compiled by Tax Receiver George W. Fletcher. Three districts, Chula, Omega and Eldorado, show increases, while five Tifton, Tyty, Brookfield, Brighton and Desosia, show a decrease.

will be cleared in four days.

An interesting fact concerning the returns was that nearly 6,000 acres of unreturned land were found by the tax receiver and placed upon the books. This in part accounts for the increase in returns. The increase in 1912 was $15,945.

Atlantan's Fiancee Injured in Runaway

Miss Emma Lou Hilsman, Driving With J. C. Edmunson, Thrown From Buggy in Albany.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—As J. C. Edmunson, of Atlanta, and Miss Emma Lou Hilsman, of Albany, whose engagement has been announced, were driving through an alley, taking a short cut from Jackson to Washington street, near the Albany Produce Company's warehouse, the horse became frightened at an automobile and ran away. The buggy crashed against a telephone pole and Miss Hilsman was thrown out, her head striking the pole. It was at first thought she was seriously hurt, but later she was found to be only bruised. She was carried to a doctor's office and later to her home.

FARMERS MAKE MONEY ON HAY AND FODDER CROPS

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 9.—This is fodder pulling time in South Georgia, and in Thomas County the crop is the largest known in many years. The corn crop is almost unprecedented.

Farmers who have finished fodder pulling have begun on their hay cutting, and that crop, too, is a good one. In view of the high prices of Western hay the farmers in this section have devoted more time and land to growing hay than formerly.

IN PRISON SEVEN HOURS; SUES FOR $300 DAMAGES

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Charging that he was arrested without justification, J. L. Rushin has filed suit for $300 damages in the Superior Court of Chatham County against Patrolman C. R. Long, of the local force, and W. R. Warren, of Washington County.

Rushin was exonerated in Police Court on a disturbing and swindling charge, but he had already been incarcerated for seven hours.

MARKETS 1912 COTTON AFTER '13 SEASON IS ON

AMERICUS, Aug. 9.—Just to show how independent many farmers of this section are, Farmer Hart, of Schley County, rolled into Americus to-day on a wagon loaded with four bales of last year's cotton. Though the first bales of the season are coming in fast, Mr. Hart brought a load that he had not been compelled to sell and received an extra good price for it.

CONGRESSMAN RODDENBERY REGAINS HIS STRENGTH

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 9.—Congressman S. A. Roddenbery, who was reported ill in Washington, has about recovered from his indisposition, which was only temporary. Albany Bankers Ask Part of $50,000,000

Want Government Money to Aid in Moving Southwest Georgia Cotton Crop.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—That the Albany banks should receive a portion of the $50,000,000 Government money that is to be placed for the marketing of cotton in the South is the general feeling among Albany bankers. Two banks here are United States depositories and are called upon to furnish money for the marketing of cotton several weeks earlier than the banks in Macon, Atlanta and Savannah.

J. S. Davis, vice president of the Citizens First National Bank, has requested L. P. Hillyer, president of the Georgia Bankers' Association, to make a personal appeal to the proper authorities in Washington for a portion of this money to be used in Southwest Georgia.

Albany Sees Value in River Improvements

Chamber of Commerce Committee Named to Keep in Touch With Work.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—With the purpose of keeping close tab on the work that is done to improve the Flint River and to see that money appropriated and spent is used to the best advantage, President J. A. Davis, of the Albany Chamber of Commerce, has appointed a committee to look after the matter. The committee is composed of H. A. Tarver, J. E. Toole and T. M. Tieknor.

The Chamber of Commerce and the people of Albany have been brought to a realization of the importance of the Flint River in its influence on freight rates, and is determined that it shall no longer be neglected as it has in the past.

Farmers Organize For Tift County Fair

Planters Take Lead of Project Given Up by Merchants and Former Promoters.

TIFTON, Aug. 9.—At a meeting of Tift County farmers to-day the holding of a Tift County fair this year was discussed and with great enthusiasm. Permanent organization was effected and the matter will be pushed by the farmers.

The fair association which has lost money on two fairs held in Tifton was unwilling to undertake another and as the merchants were slow about raising the money, the farmers took the matter in their own hands.

TRUCKERS ORGANIZE TO EXPLOIT SOUTH GEORGIA

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 9.—The adaptability of South Georgia soil and climate for truck farming is being shown more and more every year and there is no doubt that in the near future there will be great developments in this section along this line. A truckers' association is being planned. The organization will be perfected in a short time and its officers and plans made public.

SEABOARD OFFICIAL IS PREPARING FOR REMOVAL

AMERICUS, Aug. 9.—H. B. Grimshaw, superintendent of this division of the Seaboard, is in Americus supervising the renovation of the offices which he will occupy here beginning August 16. The offices will be re-established in the Seaboard shops, whence they were removed to Savannah several years ago.

DOUGHERTY NOW SEEKS TO HAVE COURT OF OWN

Movement to Take Albany Out of Present Judicial Circuit Will Come Up Again.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—That the movement to take Albany out of the Albany Judicial Circuit was not entirely abandoned when Senator Ford withdrew his county removal bill from the Senate has become quite apparent since that time by the discussion of those who attended the committee hearing in favor of the bill among other friends of the movement here.

A plan is now on foot whereby an effort will be made to create a new superior judgeship for Dougherty County alone, the idea being to abolish the City Court of Albany, and have the new court judge to do the work of both courts.

Those who favor the movement contend that Albany is large enough now to have a court of its own.

It is argued that Albany and Dougherty County have enough court business to justify such a move. It is proposed, in the event this plan meets with favor among the people of Albany, that a bill to create the new judgeship be introduced in the Legislature at its next session, as there is hardly time to perfect the plans and get such a bill through at the present session.

It would be necessary to have an election, or at least a petition signed by a majority of the voters of the county, and that also will require considerable time.

LEAVES LIGHTS BURNING AND GASOLINE EXPLODES

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—As Sam Jay, an employee of the Standard Oil Company, was filling a tank of a runabout on which the tail lights were burning, the can, which contained about five gallons, exploded. Jay was severely burned about the arms. He saws he knows now that lamps should be extinguished before the fiery liquid is handled.

SPEER RESENTS CRITICISM AND PASSES UP SUIT

Beach Manufacturing Company Bankruptcy Case Goes to Judge Newman's Court.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—That Judge Emory Speer, of the United States Court, has "washed his hands" of the Beach Manufacturing Company bankruptcy proceedings, and desires that Judge Newman, in Atlanta, take over the entire case, is shown in an opinion, a copy of which has been received in the bankruptcy court office here.

It appears from the record that the Beach Manufacturing Company moved to have Judge Speer disqualified from considering a certain phase of the case because the judge's son-in-law, A. H. Heyward, Jr., is one of the attorneys for the receiver of the alleged bankrupt. This motion appears to have annoyed the judge, causing him to express the following opinion:

"There was a petition filed in this cause in behalf of the Beach Manufacturing Company to restrain the receiver from cutting certain timber for crossties for the purpose of raising money to feed the live stock, and when the matter came on to be heard there was some discussion as to whether the Judge of the Southern District of Georgia was qualified.

"I do not think I am disqualified in any matters in which Mr. Heyward does not have a pecuniary interest. He does not have any pecuniary interest as to whether the mules are fed from the proceeds of crossties or whether they are fed from the grass and reeds along the swamps or otherwise, but as there is obviously some little maneuvering one way or the other, I don't know how, which raises the question of my qualification, I wash my hands of the whole thing.

"I will have nothing to do with it. Since he kindly expresses his willingness to try it, you can go to Judge Newman with the entire case."

Public Inquiry Into Railroad Accident

Central of Georgia Inaugurates New Policy of Investigations of Mishaps on Its Lines.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—For the first time in this section of the country, and in furtherance of a rule established by the Illinois Central, the controlling line, that all accidents to passenger trains where passengers are injured, be publicly investigated at the scene of the mishap, the Central of Georgia Railway made an inquiry into the accident at Oliver Tuesday morning, when seventeen passengers were more or less badly hurt. The inquiry was conducted by disinterested parties selected by the railroad. They were Marion Lucas and John Kennedy, of Savannah, and Dr. A. D. Kanler, of Oliver.

It was decided after full investigation that the accident was due to some obstruction, presumably the tie bar from the front truck under the tank of the engine which was pulling the train. The tie bar fell and was dragged through the frog, breaking the frog and causing the derailment. The track at the point of the accident was laid with 80-pound rails, on pine and cypress ties. The switch ties, which were of oak, were also found in good condition.

91-year-old Order In Chatham Court

Judge Charlton Passes Paper Authorized by Grandfather in Same Court.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—An order signed in the cause of Harry Haupt and others against John Haupt in the Superior Court of Chatham County, July 24, 1822, was before Judge Walter G. Charlton, in the same court, this week.

The old order was passed by Judge Charlton's grandfather, Judge Thomas U. P. Charlton. In tracing a record Edmund H. Abrahams discovered that through an inadvertence the then clerk of the court had neglected to put the old order on the minute book.

Abrahams obtained an order nunc pro tunc from Judge Charlton to have the decree recorded on the current minute book of the court. This was done. The old decree was written with pen and ink in an old-fashioned handwriting. There were no typewriters in those days.

WAYCROSS HOSTELRY PUT UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Effective today W. A. Jones, Jr., became manager of the Virdie Hotel, succeeding N. H. Slaughter, who will return to his home in North Carolina. Mr. Jones conducted a boarding house which was recently destroyed by fire here. He proposes to make extensive improvements at once on the Virdie.

WAYCROSS CITY COUNCIL TO NOMINATE RECORDER

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—The new act creating a Recorder's Court here provides that City Council shall elect a recorder to serve until the next city election, and it is probable that City Council will choose the temporary Recorder at the next regular meeting. Several men are prospective candidates and are running for the place, which can not pay more than $75 a month.

THIEF STEALS WARDROBE OF WAYCROSS CANDIDATE

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Alderman Scott T. Beaton, of the Fourth ward, a probable candidate for mayor, is on the warpath. During his vacation at Mayport some one entered his home on Gilmore street and went off with his best clothes, a lot of silverware, some of his wife's dresses and a shotgun he had just purchased. The kitchen window was smashed with an ax and whoever robbed the place made a good job.

Must Not Tie Barges To Government Piling

U. S. Engineer at Savannah Says Wornout Hulks Rot at Moorings.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Because owners of disabled barges and other vessels persist in tying them up to the Government piling in the Savannah harbor, it is probable they will be arraigned in the United States Court and subjected to a heavy fine.

Speaking of this violation of the Federal law, Colonel Dan C. Kingman, United States engineer for this district, said:

"Uncle Sam is patient and long suffering. He puts up with a lot of annoyance rather than be disagreeable. But finally spurred into action, he is likely to make things lively. It looks to me as if something of this kind is about to happen here pretty soon on account of the action of certain imprudent owners of vessels and barges who persist in tying them up to the pilings forming a part of the training wall of Savannah harbor, and leaving them until they sink. These vessels are not only unsightly, but are a great menace to navigation."

Savannah Platoons To Get Gun Practice

Dummy Mortar from Government Arsenal To Be Mounted by the Regulars.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Reaching Savannah from the Government Arsenal at Augusta, and carried to the Park extension by the Gadsden Contracting Company, the mortar for the dummy emplacements of the Savannah Volunteer Guards is now resting on the ground ready to be mounted.

This dummy mortar is an exact replica of the most modern 12-inch mortar in use anywhere in coast defense work, with the exception that it is too lightly constructed to be actually loaded and fired. The Guards will use it in practice firing.

The mortar pit is on the Whitaker Street side of the park extension. The mortar will be mounted by a special detail of officers and men from Fort Screven as soon as the carriages arrive.

High Life Lands Boys In Jail at Waycross

Youngsters Went to Brunswick and 'Splurged' on Lacy Green's Money.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Fast and reckless living for a day in Brunswick caused the arrest of two youngsters of Waycross, Archie Dougherty and Mason Walker, both 15 years old, and they are in jail pending an effort to get bond.

The boys got a sum of money said to have amounted to between $30 and $50 from Lacey Green last Sunday night and left Waycross the next morning to enjoy life. They stopped at the most expensive hotel in Brunswick, rode about in an auto, bought new clothes and had the best time possible off the money they secured. A relative heard of their whereabouts and they were brought back to Waycross.

The preliminary hearing given before Judge Harry M. Wilson resulted in their being bound over to City Court for trial.

Tybee Season May Include September

Central of Georgia Willing to Run Trains Another Month if Travel Justifies.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—The Central of Georgia Railway will continue summer schedules to Tybee island through September if assurances are given that the cottagers and others will remain at the resort in sufficient numbers to justify the expense.

The Central has, in fact, been willing to prolong the season for several years, but the people invariably return to the city during the latter part of August, which means that there will not be sufficient daily traffic to justify the extra trains. It has heretofore been the invariable custom to officially close the Tybee season after Labor Day. An agitation on the subject is now on among the people at Tybee. The season at the resort is now in full swing.

Bacon's Man Named Savannah Collector

David C. Barrow Is Son of Confederate Soldier and Well-Known Lawyer.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—David C. Barrow has been appointed Collector of Customs at Savannah to succeed William R. Leaken.

The nominee is the personal choice of Senator Bacon. Leaken's term of office expires about the middle of the month. It is thought that Barrow will be confirmed by that time.

Barrow is a member of a very distinguished Georgia family. He is a son of the late Pope Barrow, who was judge of the Superior Court of Chatham County, a member of the Georgia Legislature in 1880, and a lieutenant in the Confederate army. He is a nephew of Chancellor Barrow, of the University of Georgia. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia, a practicing attorney in Savannah, and was assistant city attorney under the last Tiedeman administration. For several years he has been prominent in Savannah politics.

Stage Door 'Johnny' Has Fractured Skull

Theatrical Man at Savannah Hits Loiterer With Revolver—Now Under Arrest.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—George Prince, director of a theatrical company playing at the Princess Theater, is under arrest charged with assaulting W. P. Kehoe, who is suffering with a fractured skull.

According to Prince, Kehoe, with other young men had been loitering at the rear of the theater, annoying the performers. He warned them to stay away. Kehoe, he says, attempted to strike him when he hit Kehoe over the head with a stage revolver. At first Kehoe was not thought to be seriously hurt. Not only is his skull fractured, but there is probably concussion of the brain.

PIERCE INSTITUTE HAS FLATTERING PROSPECTS

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—According to President W. A. Huckabee, Pierce Collegiate Institute, Georgia's newest college, located at Blackshear, east of Waycross, will open in September with a very flattering attendance. The college is a Methodist institution and owns buildings valued at $60,000.

MODEL HIGHWAY TO REACH TYBEE NOW ADVOCATED

Commercial Leaders of Savannah Urge Extension of Estill Avenue to Resort.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Probability of the Chatham County Commissioners issuing bonds for the extension of Estill avenue to Thunderbolt, making it a model highway throughout, has brought forth two suggestions—one from Joseph F. Gray, executive officer of the Chamber of Commerce, and the other from Arthur W. Solomon, secretary of the Savannah Automobile Club and a member of the board of directors of the trade body.

"The extension of Estill avenue to Thunderbolt as a model road," said Secretary Solomon, "is a splendid idea, and I hope the plan will be carried through. The county owes only $25,000 in bonds. Why can not the new issue be made for $1,000,000 if necessary? Then we could extend Estill avenue on to Tybee Island, by the Wilmington Island route, making a fine automobile road to that resort. This would be a splendid thing for the development of a vast territory as a farming country and trade center easily accessible to the local merchants when it becomes settled, which would result in a short while if there was easy vehicle access to and from the city."

Thunderbolt Has Road.

"The plan to improve the road from the terminus of Estill avenue to Thunderbolt is a splendid idea," said Executive Officer Gray. "But there is already a fine road to Thunderbolt. It certainly would be a great thing for the County Commissioners to build a model road from Savannah to Tybee by the Wilmington Island route. But if bonds are issued to put through the whole scheme, let's start the work from Tybee to Savannah. When we get the road to Thunderbolt it will be plenty of time to build from Savannah to that point."

Secretary Solomon in urging the Tybee highway scheme points out that Tampa, Fla., has just authorized the construction of a brick highway 27 miles out of that city to meet the southern terminus of the road which is being built out of Jacksonville. He thinks if the people of the county in which Tampa is located can appropriate money for a 27-mile highway the people of Chatham, a much more wealthy and prosperous county, could provide for a road from Savannah to Tybee, a distance of eighteen miles.

Solomon Revived Scheme.

The matter of building a road to Tybee was revived some time ago by Secretary Solomon, as a director in the Chamber of Commerce. The proposition was at that time referred to a special committee. The matter at present remains in statu quo. However, it is quite likely that the scheme to have the County Commissioners issue bonds for the Thunderbolt and Tybee road will be brought to the attention of this special committee.

The is now no intercourse with Tybee except by the Central of Georgia Railway. Tybee Beach is the most popular summer resort on the Georgia coast. Such a road as proposed would immediately become popular with automobilists. Tourists also would take advantage of the opportunity to visit the resort.

Negro Gun 'Parties' Denounced by Judge

Judge Charlton Suggests Militia Kill Everybody Found on Festive Battlefields.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—In sentencing a man in the Superior Court for shooting another not in his own defense, Judge Walter G. Charlton denounced in strong terms certain places in the county where colored people congregate and fight.

The particular trouble before him occurred at Crescent Park, near Sandfly Station.

These places are a terror to the community," declared the Court. "It would be a good idea to have the militia ordered out sometimes to kill everybody who is found at these places."

Monteith, Woodsville, Baker's Crossing and several other places of equal familiarity in court records were mentioned by the Court in the course of his remarks.

The jury did not think the crime was assault with intent to murder, and so found the defendant guilty of shooting at another not in his own defense, recommending that he be punished as for a misdemeanor. The Court disregarded the recommendation and sentenced the prisoner to two years in the penitentiary.

The prisoner was William Jones. He and John Pauline were conducting a dancing pavilion at Sandfly, and Jones shot Pauline while trying to wing another negro.

WAITER SLAPS MESSENGER; IS HELD ON TWO CHARGES

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Because he attacked a messenger boy of the Western Union Telegraph Company here two charges have been preferred against C. G. Metotis, a waiter.

The waiter slapped Thornton Staley, claiming that the boy had killed a pet cat. Later he said he was merely playing, but the affair created considerable excitement at the time. An older brother of Staley wanted to handle the waiter personally, but friends interfered.

WAYCROSS PAVING LAWS HIT ATLANTIC COAST LINE

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Because its tracks pierce the heart of Waycross and are paralleled in almost every instance by some of the main streets, the Atlantic Coast Line is being put to heavy expense by the sidewalk and street paving campaign. The latest paving ordinance, covering Plant avenue from Butler street to the city limits, will cause the Coast Line to pay a third of the cost for the entire distance, the avenue running along the road's right of way. The other portion of Plant that is paved is of ... and the Coast Line paid a third of that.

HEART OF TOWN SOUGHT IN SUIT IN BANKRUPTCY

Trustee After $30,000 of Wesley Realty Transferred to Wife of Failed Merchant.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Suit for the recovery of a large part of an incorporated town in Emanuel County, as a bankruptcy asset, has been filed in the United States Court by R. A. Flanders, trustee in bankruptcy for Cook and Fountain. The property was transferred to Mrs. Hattie Fountain, wife of one of the parties, a short while before the bankruptcy petition was filed.

The real estate involved is situated in Wesley, a township located about halfway between Swainsboro and Vidalia. There are nineteen town blocks in the tract, much of which is improved. The postoffice has been erected on one of the lots, and there are numbers of residences going up on others. As soon as suit was filed J. Ben Wilson, deputy marshal, went to Wesley to serve the papers on Mrs. Fountain.

Land Worth $30,000.

It is estimated that under fair market conditions the land sought to be recovered would bring $30,000, in which case all of the creditors would be paid in full. But there is certain to be a lively fight unless a compromise is effected.

Cook and Fountain, merchants, failed last December. Their petition was filed at that time, and Flanders was appointed trustee. The liabilities of the firm as scheduled amounted to about $20,000. There were only about $2,000 n assets. None of the land named in the suit now filed was scheduled. It did not develop until some time later that this property figured in the case.

Trustee Charges Plot.

It has been now ascertained that almost immediately prior to the filing of the suit in bankruptcy the firm had deeded to Mrs. Fountain, wife of one of its members, the parcel of land which constitutes practically the heart of Wesley. Under the law assets transferred within four months of the date of filing a bankruptcy petition may be recovered. The contention is made that Cook and Fountain were insolvent when the deed to Mrs. Fountain was made.

The charge is made by the trustee that the transfer was made with the intention of hindering, delaying or defrauding the general creditors.

Million Dollar Gain In Ware County Taxes

Collector Chases Dodgers and Announces Intention of Making a Perfect Record.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—From his hasty examination of the 1913 tax returns for Ware County, Tax Collector J. T. Strickland is confident a large amount of property subject to taxation has not been returned and he announced to-day that he intended getting every bit of it on the tax books within a few months. That his work will give Ware an increase of at least $1,000,00 0is practically certain. As the report now stands the returns for 1913 show an increase of $646,349 over 1912.

The big growth of Waycross is the main cause for the gain shown.

The tax rate, now $13 a thousand, will probably be reduced to $10. The collector says he thinks he will make a collection record for the year of 100 per cent, something that has not been done in this county up to date.

New York Gas 'Tips' Wasted on Waycross

City Council Ignores Wall Street Promoter's Proposal to Build Plant.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Aldermen of Waycross have evidently had enough of the gas proposition, judging by the lack of interest taken by City Council in a communication from a New Yorker showing how the city could build a gas plant and operate it at a profit instead of giving a franchise to outsiders.

The proposition was made to the city when it was learned that a bond of $2,500 given by George W. Deen and L. M. Aldrich as evidence of their intention to spend no less than $20,000 within a year, had been declared forfeited.

By spending $85,000, the New Yorker claimed, Waycross would have a money-making plant. The success of the municipal gas plant at Albany was given as an illustration. The Waycross City Council ignored the proposal.

SENTENCE OF YEAR FOR CONVICTED GUN TOTERS

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Judge John C. McDonald has shown that he proposes to stick to the twelve-month sentence for persons found guilty of carrying concealed weapons. Clifford Johnson, a negro, is the latest to find that it means a year's job with the county chaingang to carry a gun. Hardly a case of this kind has been disposed of in City Court without the twelve-month sentence being imposed, and the gun-toting habit is said to be declining rapidly as a result.

BRUNSWICK BOY CHOSEN FOR WEST POINT CADET

White Way Proposed On Brunswick Street

Landowners and Merchants to Form Stock Company and Install Lighting System.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 9.—The efforts made the past week to put in a white way along Newcastle street no doubt will culminate in this improvement being made in the near future.

It is the intention of those working for the white way to form a stock company composed of the landowners and merchants along the street, who will be called upon to take an amount of stock on the basis of the frontage of their buildings. The movement has met with considerable encouragement, and it is now considered a certainty that the principal business street of the city will take on this improvement in the next two months.

Southern to Improve Brunswick Terminals

Railway to Spend $20,000 on Buildings to Handle Naval Stores Business.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 9.—Extensive improvements will be made by the Southern Railway upon its buildings in the local yards and docks, for which an appropriation of $20,000 has been made. Cement foundations will be built under the buildings at the Turtle River docks, and other improvements will be made on the other docks of the company in the city.

It is the purpose of the company to rebuild its present facilities and put them in the best of condition so as to be able to handle the increased traffic which will come through Brunswick owing to the changes in the naval stores business.

Killing of Bachelor Mystifies Officers

Despite Strong Alibi, Tom Bullard Is Held for Death of Farmer Mack Spain.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Whether or not Mack Spain, the eccentric bachelor farmer of Mexico, a small place west of Waycross, was really murdered and robbed or committed suicide in a fit of despondency, is a question that has arisen in view of the alibi offered by Tom Bullard at the preliminary hearing given him this week, but in spite of which he was bound over to the fall term of Superior Court.

Bullard asked a friend to kill Spain and get all his money, but claims the statebent was made merely as a joke. Spain's body was found in a small pond 2 miles from his home three weeks after his disappearance. Bullard himself found the body, which fact argued in his favor, although the testimony of witnesses was to the effect that no one could have seen the body in the pond without having had previous knowledge of its whereabouts.

A careful search has so far failed to find any of the money the farmer had with him and at his home.

Too Much Money to Spend in Waycross

City's Income More Than Pays All Expenses—Tax Rate To Be Cut Down.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—With a $780 appropriation for twelve months, the committee on parks and cemeteries of Waycross City Council expended only $1.30, according to the financial statement for the first six months of the year just issued.

Practically every department of the city is keeping within its budget, and will end the year with a balance to its credit. The engineering department, with $14,454 available, has spent only $6,911.96. Out of an appropriation of $10,280 the fire department has spent but $3,855.38.

The revised estimate of income places the total for 1913 at $156,442.42. The estimate when the year's appropriations were made was $121,000. The expected increase will therefore leave the city a neat balance to start 1914 with.

In addition to these expenditures the city is spending $100,000 in permanent improvements, this money coming from a bond issue voted last year.

$5,498 Suit Brought For Rescuing Dredge

Owners of Tug Columbia Dragged the Maryland Out of Beaufort Harbor.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Claiming $5,498.50 damages and salvage, a libel has been filed in the United States Court by R. S. Salas and F. H. Meader against the dredge Maryland.

Salas, as chief owner and president of the Standard Fuel and Supply Company, and Meader, as master of the tugboat Columbia, claim this sum of money for time, labor and material expended by the tug in hauling the dredge in and out of the harbor at Beaufort, S. C., and claim $3,500 of this amount for the work of salvage or rescue done by the tug.

The dredge, which is said in the libel to be worth $50,000, was towed out of New York harbor on May 27 last by the tug under contract between the Home Dredging Company and the Standard Fuel and Supply Company, the latter being the owners of the tug. The contract price for taking the dredge from New York to Savannah was $1,500.

The dredge Maryland is now in the Savannah River. The libel will be tried at the coming term of the United States Court.

The libel recites a full account of the rescue of the dredge on her way down the coast.

NEWSPAPER MAN AT SAVANNAH IS SEEKING OFFICE

City Editor Lucas of The Morning News Wants to Succeed Baker as Postmaster.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—On the supposition that Marcus S. Baker, postmaster at Savannah, who has recently been investigated by the Postoffice Department in Washington, is about to be retired as a result of that investigation, Democratic candidates for the position are becoming active.

Among these is Marion Lucas, at present city editor of The Savannah Morning News, who seems to have the lead over prospective opponents, both in the energy with which he is working and the political support which is behind him.

Lucas was active in the last municipal campaign, and stands well with the present Administration. There is scarcely any doubt that he will secure the backing of the Administration. It also is said that he will have the indorsement of Congressman Charles G. Edwards, although the latter has stated that he is not promised to any candidate and will not advocate anyone for the position until he has conferred with the President on the subject.

Lucas has addressed a circular letter to practically all Democratic voters in Savannah asking for their support. He has a great many friends among the rank and file of the people. Lucas himself says that he has the promise of sufficient support to land the job.

It is believed that the retirement of Postmaster Baker will be in effect within the next 30 days.

Efficiency Idea in Vogue in Savannah

Auditor's Report Expected to Start General Shakeup Among City Officeholders.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Because of the absence of Chairman W. J. Pierpont, of the Finance Committee, the report on the audit of the city's books was not submitted to Council this week.

Before the report goes to Council it will be considered by the Finance Committee. Chairman Pierpont is now on a vacation. A special meeting of Council will likely be called to act upon the report.

The auditors have suggested that a controller be appointed and placed in charge of the administration of the financial affairs of the city. This will do away with the office of City Treasurer. In all probability Captain C. S. Hardee, who has served the city efficiently for over 30 years, will be retired on a pension.

All departments of the city that are not managed properly are criticised in the report. The auditors have found, for one thing, that the office of Tax Assessor can be greatly improved. It is also pointed out that the work in this office does not require the appointment of three assessors.

SLAYER TAKEN AFTER SEARCH OF 16 YEARS

Brother's Tireless Quest Results in Capture of Negro Who Killed B. C. Booth.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—After eluding officers and the persistent search maintained by a brother of the man he killed at Manor January 25, 1897, Will Eady, a negro, has been apprehended near Blountstown, Fla., and unless he demands requisition papers, will be lodged in Ware County jail within the next week.

Eady shot and instantly killed B. C. Booth at Manor when Booth called at his home to see him about a debt of $12. The negro went into the house on seeing Booth approach and refused to reply to his calls. Thinking the negro would try to out of the back door, Booth started from the front of the house toward the rear. As he turned a corner he was shot down by Eady, who stood by a window and fired three shots from a revolver.

Negro Makes Escape.

An hour's start enabled the negro to escape, despite the vigorous efforts to overtake him. At the April term of Ware Superior Court that year an indictment charging Eady with murder was returned, and on this he will be tried at the next term of Superior Court.

From the time it was known the negro had gotten away until his capture near Blountstown a brother of the slain man, W. S. Booth, kept up a search for the negro. Probably 50 negroes arrested in various sections as suspects have been viewed by Booth.

It was learned to-day that since his murder at Manor, Eady was involved in another crime in Florida at a place known as Cooks on St. Andrews Bay, twelve years ago. Eady's father-in-law, a negro named Giles, had a dispute with a white man named Smith, whose home was at Valdosta, and shot him. While Smith was in a dying condition on the ground Eady approached and kicked him, saying that the man was not dead and asked for the gun.

With an oath, he then fired three shots into the white man's body. Eady and Giles went into Alabama, where a search covering several months was conducted without success. As far as is known, Giles is still in Alabama.

Eady Reported Lynched.

But for a report that Eady had been lynched shortly after the shooting of Booth it is believed the officers would have located the negro and brought him to trial. As it was, the report was believed and people who had been aiding in the search stopped and returned home.

W. S. Booth has kept a standing reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest of Eady, and it is thought that the State's reward of a like amount, while not now standing, will be renewed and paid to those responsible for the finding of Eady.

Big Money in South's Sweet Potato Crop if Properly Stored and Marketed

Value of Sweet Potatoes Increases 80 Per Cent During Last Ten Years—Ninety Per Cent of Crop Grown in South Atlantic States. Great Demand Not Supplied.

CHARLES A. WHITTLE.
Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Speaking of big money-making crops suited to the South, what is the matter with the sweet potato?

For sure corps, good returns and a growing market, take your hat off to the sweet potato patch. Georgia is "pulling down" some $5,000,000, Alabama some $4,000,000, Mississippi $3,500,000, Louisiana $3,000,000, Tennessee $4,000,000, North Carolina $5,000,000, South Carolina $3,000,000, Virginia $3,000,000, Kentucky $1,000,000, Arkansas $2,000,000, Texas $2,500,000, Florida $2,000,000 in sweet potatoes each year.

Ask any groceryman if he ever has enough sweet potatoes to supply the demand. If he has, he is the exception to the rule.

The South is the natural habitat of the sweet potato. It is up to the Southern States to supply the demand. The demand is growing, the sweet potato patches are growing, but the demand is quite a lap ahead and gaining. In fact, there is a wide-open, attractive opportunity for the Southern farmer in growing sweet potatoes. Why not "go to it"?

The Spread of the Potato Patch.

Under the inspiration of a growing price and an enlarging market, the sweet potato patches have extended their area during the census decade previous to 1909 39.3 per cent for the country as a whole. While the Southern States have them all beaten in advantages, every State in the Union is growing potatoes and only four are falling away from the habit and show a decrease in the decade period mentioned. These are Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois and Texas.

Georgia takes first place in the amount of revenue derived from the sweet potato according to census figures. Other Southern States in their order are North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Virginia, South Carolina, Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee, Arkansas, Florida and Kentucky.

The increase which the census shows for the last report for each State is as follows: Louisiana 174 per cent, Oklahoma 155 per cent, Arkansas 154 per cent, Alabama 112 per cent, Mississippi 110 per cent, North Carolina 104 per cent, Georgia 85 per cent, Tennessee 84 per cent, South Carolina 70 per cent, Kentucky 66 per cent, Virginia 56 per cent, Florida 37 per cent.

The Southern States grow a very great part of all the sweet potatoes, and will continue to grow them for the special reason that the soil, climate and long growing season favor this kind of tuber. Therefore, the increase in acreage and revenue from this source will belong to the South in the future as in the past.

Increase in Price.

The census report tells us that for the last decade reported that value of the sweet potato crop in 1909 in the South Atlantic States was three-fourths greater than it was in 1899; in the West South Central States nearly twice as great. Since the South Atlantic States grow over 90 per cent of the sweet potato crop, it is important that particular reference should be made to this territory.

In Georgia, for instance, the average value of a bushel of potatoes increased 13 cents during the census decade and has increased more since then. In North Carolina the increase in price per bushel during the last census decade was 14 cents. In Alabama the increase has been 18 cents per bushel, in Louisiana 9 cents per bushel, in Mississippi 17 cents.

The increase in the value of sweet potatoes in the country as a whole for the last census decade was 13 cents per bushel, or 30 per cent. The increase has been continuing. While there has been a general increase in the value of all crops of the United States, contributing to the higher cost of living, yet the larger demand for the sweet potato has pushed ahead of the general average considerably.

While values have been estimated in generalities of a census report, it goes without saying that the intelligent, thrifty farmer has little to do with such general averages. They are very far beneath him. His yields per acre, his returns per bushel are always much in excess of the general average. It is possible for the intelligent farmer, planting on good land, to grow from 100 to 300 bushels of sweet potatoes per acre. It is easy enough to average from 75 cents to $1 per bushel. It is possible by good storing to get from $2 to $3 per bushel or even more by home canning.

Profits Can Easily Be Increased.

When a farmer finds the local markets flooded at potato gathering time, and can get only 50 cents a bushel, he is disposed to believe that there is not much in the sweet potato business. A great many growers are content to market their crops under such unfavorable conditions, rather than go to a little more trouble and get much better prices.

In some of the potato-growing sections of the South the co-operative marketing societies which have handled the strawberry, cantaloupe, beans or other early crops, also handle the sweet potato crop in its season, shipping to some Northern market. Usually better prices can be had in the Northern market than prevails in the local Southern markets.

Where canneries have been established an increasing amount of sweet potatoes are being canned each year, netting the farmer who knows how to can successfully large returns. Even where the potatoes are turned over to the commercial canning plants the revenue is larger as a rule than is to be obtained upon a flooded market.

Storing Is the Best Method.

More can be obtained from sweet potatoes by storing them than by any other method, with the possible exception of canning. Since canned sweet potatoes are not in as great demand as the natural tuber, of course, there is a danger of overdoing the canning business at the first.

A very valuable bulletin has just been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled, "Storing and Marketing Sweet Potatoes," by H. C. Thompson. This has appeared as Farmers' Bulletin 548, and should be in the hands of every farmer in the South who is interested in growing and marketing sweet potatoes. Its particular value is in its information as to how to store sweet potatoes. It is well known to every grower of sweet potatoes that the storing proposition is quite different from that of the Irish potato. Many methods have been used for storing the sweet potato in the South. Some of them are successful, but most are not.

The usual method is to bank them—that is, bed them in straw and cover up with dirt, preferably under a shed, but if in the open, the mound is covered with boards. This method, while serving well for the Irish potato, is not so good for the sweet potato, which carries a greater percentage of water in its makeup.

It is for the purpose of giving the farmers who grow sweet potatoes a practical, workable storage plan that the bulletin referred to has been issued.

Many Potatoes Spoil.

The writer says that from 25 to 50 per cent of the sweet potatoes stored in pits or banks spoil, and those that remain are not to be considered of first-class quality. He says that the only safe and practical method of storing sweet potatoes is in a storage house.

To keep sweet potatoes in good condition they must be well matured before digging, carefully handled, well dried or cured after being put in the house, and kept at a uniform temperature after they are cured.

A potato is ready to be dug when after breaking one, the exposed broken surface dries in a few minutes. If it remains moist, the potato is not mature.

The potato should be carefully handled when it is intended for storage. It should be put in baskets or boxes and placed in the bins with the least jolting and bruising possible. If stored in the kind of house which is suggested, they can there be properly cured.

The Best Storage House.

While a cheap storage house can be made to serve the purpose, experience has taught that to maintain right temperature the cost of fuel and the trouble will soon offset the extra cost of erecting a good house at the start.

A desirable wooden house is preferable because it is cheaper and easier to keep dry. It should be built on posts or piers to admit of the circulation of air all around it. The "dug-out" or house partly built underground is advised against for use in the South because of the practical impossibility of keeping such a house dry. Moisture, of course, means rot.

For building a storage house that will hold 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of potatoes, a house 20 by 40 feet may be erected. On the sleepers a rough floor can be laid, and on top of this a layer of heavy building paper placed, and on top of this matched flooring.

The walls can be built by putting on the outside of the studding board an inch thick nailed on diagonally. Over this a layer of building paper should be put, and then matched siding. On the inside of the studding a layer of ceiling should be placed; on top of this a layer of building paper, and then matched board of wainscoting. In the lower South it is claimed that the first layer of ceiling on the studding inside may be omitted.

The sides should be well tied together with scantlings four feet part so as to be over the partitions for the bins. Any kind of roof may be used provided it be made tight to keep out the cold. Galvanized iron is preferable. A layer of roofing paper over the rafters will serve to keep the cold air out.

Coat of Paper Needed.

On the lower sides of the rafters should be put a coat of building paper and on this a layer of matched material.

The space between the walls should be left open. No filling serves as well as the air itself for keeping the building free from moisture.

Thorough ventilation is necessary. Put three windows on each side, a door in each end and at least two ventilators in the top of the roof. The windows should be within 18 inches or two feet of the floor and windows and doors should be made to fit tight and keep out the cold. Where glass windows are used, outside shutters should be employed. It is needful that there should be one or more glass windows to admit light, while working inside in the winter. Ventilators in the roof must also be provided with coverings to keep out the cold.

The bins should have movable floors, made of slats one inch thick and four wide, leaving one inch space between each slat. The same is true of the walls of the bins. The purpose in making a movable floor in the bin is to admit of removing, cleaning and disinfecting it during the summer. Between 6 and 12 inches of space should be left in the walls and the bins to admit of the circulation of air. In slatting up the bins, space to the width of the separating scantling can also be made, that is, each bin should have a separate end.

Log House Can Be Used.

Instead of going to the expense of erecting the building described, many Southern farms will be found a tenant house, perhaps a log house, which can be converted into a sweet potato house at little cost, remembering to make them air-tight as far as possible and introduce the ventilation features which have been described.

After the potatoes have been put in the storage house the temperature should be maintained from 80 to 85 degrees Fahrenheit for ten days or two weeks, depending on weather conditions. Ventilation is absolutely necessary at this period and whether the temperature can be maintained at the height mentioned or not, it is better to keep all windows and ventilators open to drive out the moisture-ladened air. If moisture collects on the wall or ceiling at this period a fire must be built at once to dry it out.

When the potatoes are thoroughly dried or cured the temperature should be gradually reduced and kept as near as possible around 55 degree during the storage season. If the temperature goes below 48 degrees a fire should be made in the house, or the house opened in the middle of the day if the temperature is high enough. If the temperature in the house goes above 60 degrees the house should be opened in the cool of the day to lower the temperature to 54 or 55. The house should have some ventilation every day.

Secret of High Prices.

Potatoes bruised and cut during the digging and handling accounts for the poor price which many of them bring. The secret of getting high prices is to carefully clean and pack and to put on the market when there is a good demand. The storage house will provide for the latter.

To clean potatoes requires very little trouble but it pays. To pack the right kind of potatoes is easy enough when proper precautions are taken. First it is better to use plows with rolling colters on the beam to cut the vines, and with rods attached to the mold board to free the roots from the soil and vine. The potatoes can then be taken from the ground with hand and should be sorted at this time. Those of uniform size and good quality should go into one pile for the market, those selected for seed in another and the remainder can be canned or fed to stock. Potatoes should not be tossed from row to row, nor packed in bags even to haul to the storage house. It is better to handle them in baskets or boxes to storage and to market and thus save waste from bruises and rotting.

Some Sweet Potato Facts.

Based upon the discussion of the bulletin referred to in this article certain conclusions have been summarized as follows:

The value of the sweet potato has increased about 80 per cent in the last ten years. With methods of storing and marketing the present value could be doubled.

Sweet potatoes can be kept satisfactorily in a storage house where the temperature and moisture conditions can be controlled.

Sweet potatoes to keep well must be well matured, carefully handled, thoroughly cured and kept at a uniform temperature while in storage.

Thorough ventilation is essential during the curing period.

The temperature should be kept at about 80 degrees or 85 degrees Fahrenheit during the curing period and reduced gradually to 55 degrees after the potatoes are cured. Fluctuations of temperature should be avoided throughout the storage period.

The potatoes should be carefully graded, cleaned and packed in neat and attractive packages.

Sweet potatoes should never be marketed in bags nor in bulk.

Veneer barrels or bushel hampers are desirable packages to use during mild weather and double-headed stave barrels or tight boxes in cold weather.

SEEK MORE PARKS FOR PLAYGROUNDS

Leading Citizens After Tract for Mothers and Children of Crowded East Side of Manhattan.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 9.—The park idea is gaining ground in New York. Not only has the city laid off many acres in parks, but more tracts are coming to join Central Park, Bronx Park, Washington Park and a score of others.

When the Board of Estimate met on July 31 a large delegation of Queens Borough residents was present to assist the members of the board in making their decision on the acquisition of the proposed East River Park for a public playground.

The desire to add this enjoyable spot to the park property of the city is great, especially among the residents of Long Island City and the nearby districts. A number of the most prominent settlement workers in Manhattan are co-operating with the people of Queens in their endeavor to obtain this park, for these workers see in the park a recreation place for the mothers and children from the crowded uptown East Side Manhattan section under their care.

Tract of 56 Acres.

The territory covered by the park contains about fifty-six acres. It has a waterfront of about 2,800 feet, with a shady beach, where the bathing is delightful.

Many families take advantage of this place now, and once improvements have been made there that will make the beach more convenient and safer for the bathers it will become one of the most popular bathing beaches on the north shore.

One of the advantages of this spot is the fact that the water is never contaminated by sewage. It is only a short distance above where the tides of the Sound and the East River meet, making in part the whirlpools of Hell Gate, and for this reason sewage from the city and the settlements further along the Sound can not possibly contaminate the waters.

A number of landscape artists who have looked at the proposed park have said that with a little expenditure of time and money the place could be made a beautiful recreation ground. Grassy slopes, covered with trees and shrubs, rise from the river bank, and it has such natural possibilities that it could easily be made one of the noted parks in the city.

An additional attraction to the park, should it become one, will be the great steel viaduct of the New York Connecting Railroad, which will pass through it and will give a constant view of the incoming commerce from the New England States.

Another continuously changing picture will be the view of the river traffic. Vessels of all kinds are almost always in sight from the small rowboats to the stately Sound steamers. Many trim and graceful yachts of millionaires pass by, and heavily laden barges move slowly past towed by chugging tugboats. Railroad barges, carrying whole railroad trains, are another sight frequently seen on the river.

The lessees have for several years been associated in the management of hotels at Edgemere.

Real Estate Owners See Welcome Relief In Numerous Movements for Tax Reform

Income and Inheritance Measures Taken as Good Sign of Better Times for Land—Suggestion Is Made That Homeowners be Exempt.

Tax reform measures which have recently been passed over the country have given hope to holders of real estate that eventually land will be relieved from what is now characterized as an "unjust burden." In other words, Federal, State and municipal governments are shifting some of the load where realty owners believe it belongs—to the shoulders of bondholders and others who have managed to escape just taxation. These governments need a certain amount of money each year to defray the expenses of such governments. This must come from somewhere. Real estate is convenient, but owners have been paying what they consider to be too large a proportion.

Income and inheritance taxes are part of the general scheme to distribute the weight which has borne so heavily on land. Once a complete schedule is arranged, declare property owners, rates on land can be reduced considerably.

Will Home-Owners Be Exempt?

"I firmly believe that before many years the home-owner will be entirely exempt from taxation on his home," declared a leading Atlanta real estate agent Saturday. "The taxes will come from other sources, and not from the man who is enterprising enough to build a house. This is as it should be. Why shouldn't we encourage such enterprise? As things are now, we are doing what is calculated to drive out the man who wants to establish himself in the community as a desirable citizen.

"Take another class—the millionaire who has invested in non-taxable stocks and bonds. He may have hundreds of thousands in securities, but frequently he doesn't pay on them or on anything else as much tax as the city fireman or policeman pays on a modest home. That can be proven by municipal records.

Shifting Load From Realty.

"The millionaire sails away to Europe. He doesn't even stay in the home that he has created. Tax assessors search for his securities, but can't find them. Nothing that he has seems taxable.

"What good does the big factory do a community? It makes one millionaire and 1,500 paupers. Then the millionaire does not return it at fair valuation, and he yells 'confiscation,' if the assessors insist on a raise.

"Now the tendency is to work a reform in taxes that will place more of the load where it belongs—on the big fellow—and lighten up correspondingly on the little fellow. When this is done, the home of the $15-a-week man can be exempt and real estate owners in general will benefit greatly."

North End of County Soon To Be Toured

Several County Commissioners will accompany Chairman Shelby Smith early this week on a tour of inspection of the northern end of Fulton County, a similar trip having been taken on the south side some weeks ago. The idea is to see what the various gangs are doing in roadmaking and to get a glimpse into the camps.

The trip to the southern end of the county revealed that the convicts were accomplishing wonders with good thoroughfares, and the commissioners expect to find the same situation north of the railroad tracks.

One of the most important jobs on the North Side has been the repair work on Peachtree from Fifteenth street to Buckhead. This is now nearly done. Only about six blocks remain uncompleted.

BAN PLACED ON SIGNS OF REAL ESTATE FIRMS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 9.—Vigorous enforcement of the law recently passed by Congress prohibiting the placing of more than three real estate signs on any lot or parcel of land in the District of Columbia has been begun by order of the District Commissioners.

Instructions have been issued to the police department to report all lots and premises which contain more than three advertisements of this character, and warrants will be issued for all the agents of such property whose signs appear.

ROSWELL ROAD WIDENING DEPENDS ON ONE OWNER

The widening of the Roswell road from Buckhead northwest to Piedmont avenue depends on one property owner, it was announced Saturday. An arrangement is being made to acquire part of a triangle where the Peachtree and Roswell roads intersect, either by purchase or by changing the original plan so as to cut off the point at a different angle.

E. T. Luckie, the well-known real estate man, is working on the improvement, and he reports that all other property owner have signed, and in cases where both sides of the road couldn't be secured, owners have given all of the twenty feet needed.

White and Glover Think Delegation Will Win Big Meet

Two Local Realty Officials Confident of Outcome in 1916—On Way Home From Winnipeg.

SAVANNAH, GA., Aug. 9.—Harris G White, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, and Charles P. Glover, former president and now vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, arrived in Savannah by steamer from New York and were given an enthusiastic reception by local capitalists and real estate agents. They are on their way home to Atlanta.

Mr White and Mr. Glover gave glowing accounts of their trip to Winnipeg, and expressed the belief that in 1915 the delegates at Los Angeles would vote the 1916 convention to the Gate City. They declared that they were confident that a delegation of twelve land brokers would be sent from Atlanta to Los Angeles to formally present Atlanta's invitation.

Progress Claiming Historic Old Sites

and use the dirt on Ivy street, but the several Brooklyn landmarks will soon be covered with modern buildings. During the past week not less than three figured prominently in the trading.

The O'Berry house was demolished to make way for the erection of four two-story stores; the site of the old Marietta mansion at the corner of Gates and Bushwick avenues was purchased by Masons of the Eastern District for improvement with a three-story brick building, to contain a banquet hall, auditorium and meeting rooms, and a Flatbush landmark adjoining the Erasmus Hall High School is to give way to a business building.

The old building on Flatbush avenue which is being demolished is believed to have been built before the American Revolution. Documents found in the attic bore the date of 1784, and carpenters making repairs found wooden pegs and hand-made nails which they said were at least a century old.

The sites of the landmarks and other parcels purchased, with the proposed improvements, will cost considerably more than $150,000.

Park Board Wants Secretary of Play

The Park Board is seeking to create the position of secretary of recreation and to pay a man something like $1,800 a year. Who wants the job? Applicants should see the members of the Park Board—not now, but as soon as Council authorizes the position, if it finally does.

At a meeting last week a resolution was offered by President J. O. Cochran to put the matter before Council. At first the resolution called for an $1,800 a year salary, but the figure was later stricken out.

In explaining the work Mr. Cochran declared that "Atlanta has good parks, but she has no person to stay around them to instruct children in games, and how to play properly to develop themselves. We need such a man to give this his entire time and attention."

TO DISCUSS CONVENTION AT NEXT REALTY DINNER

Charles P. Glover, Harris G. White, S. B. Turman and Fitzhugh Knox are expected to tell of the Winnipeg convention of real estate men at the next monthly dinner of the Atlanta Real Estate Board. At this time a plan of action will probably be adopted in the fight for the ninth annual convention of real estate men in 1916.

Memphis is supposed to be after this convention, and local land campaign is expected to start an early campaign. Los Angeles is due to have the convention when the 1916 award is made, and it is the desire of local land brokers to have as large a committee there as possible.

GREAT PROBLEM IN ENGINEERING

New Equitable Building, 200,000 Tons, Will Tax Foundations. Rock Found Like Atlanta's.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Some of the greatest problems in engineering history are confronting local engineers who have sought to lay foundations for the new Equitable Building, which is to be 32 stories high and of such size at the base that it will be probably the heaviest office building in New York City. This structure will take the place of the old Equitable Building which was destroyed by fire two years ago, and will be located on the old site in the entire block bounded by Broadway, Cedar, Pine and Nassau streets.

Fortunately the engineers have found a rock bed similar to that which supports several office buildings in Atlanta, and they are confident that with this as a base the heavy structure will be stable. There are twenty buildings in lower Manhattan which rest on bedrock.

When it is realized that the new Equitable will weigh more than 200,000 tons, as against 103,000 tons of the Woolworth Building, 82,500 tons of the Metropolitan Building, 188,500 tons of the Municipal Building, 82,580 tons of the Singer Building, it will be seen that the foundations must be absolutely solid. The steel framework is now being forged and rolled at the mills, and will weigh approximately 45,000 tons when in position, as against 25,000 tons of the Woolworth Building, 23,000 tons of the Municipal Building, 6,100 tons of the Singer Building, and 7,000 tons of the Metropolitan Building.

The cofferdam, when completed, will be a solid concrete wall, six feet broad and eighty feet deep, strengthened or reinforced by heavy steel rods.

Objection Is Voiced To Regrading Plan

Leading Realty Operator Believes Repaving Sufficient—W. Peachtree as a Relief to Traffic Congestion.

Although members of the West Peachtree Improvement Club are heartily in favor of the regrading as well as the repaving of West Peachtree, one or two outside protests have been heard.

"I don't see any use in spending so much money," declared a prominent real estate dealer the other day. "Look at the engineering feat which removed the hump from Peachtree at Baker street, what a lot of trouble and expense it was. It seems to me the best thing to do is to repave West Peachtree and not to regrade it. Make the thoroughfare travelable from one end to the other and I guarantee that as many people will use it as now use Peachtree. I prefer to travel it now. That is, where I can ride the car tracks with my automobile. The grades don't worry me—it's the cobblestones!"

People who favor the project have no such misgivings. They believe that the regrading of West Peachtree will be a permanent improvement of lasting benefit to the city in helping to relieve Peachtree congestion and in making a travelable thoroughfare straight to Brookwood and saving a quarter to a half mile which lies in the winding curves of Peachtree.

PLEDGE OF GOVERNMENT AID IN MOVING CROPS EASES MONEY CONDITIONS

South and West Give Hearty Approval to Secretary McAdoo's Policy, but the East Looks Askance at Proposal—Low Balance in Treasury To Be Result.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Monetary conditions have been strengthened by the Government's proposition to supply treasury funds to aid the movement of crops next fall. The business outlook is steadily brightening, but the situation is not entirely free from uneasiness owing to the insistent demand for new capital in this country and Europe.

In the domestic market the total of new issues recorded for July was over $95,000,000, an increase of more than $64,000,000 compared with a year ago. A considerable portion of this sum, about $60,000,000, was issued to take up maturing obligations, and the maturities this month are expected to reach nearly $25,000,000, so that the net amount of new capital applications must be considerably below a year ago.

The phenomenal report of the steel corporation had much to do with the strengthening confidence in the general market. The large receipts of grain induced by good crop conditions and close money will furnish increased traffic to the railroads, stimulate exports, provide a good supply of exchange, strengthen our credit abroad and make gold exports more difficult, if not impossible. In fact, before long this country probably will be importing gold.

Secretary McAdoo's announcement that he would place from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 of treasury funds in the national banks of the South and West created the same impression on New York bankers as his statement June 12 that he would not hesitate to issue $500,000,000 of emergency currency under the Aldrich-Vreeland act if the banks so desired. On that occasion the Eastern bankers considered the Secretary's announcement uncalled for and likely to create misgivings in the minds of many regarding financial conditions. Worse than that, the statement was thought to be ill-advised at the time, as it might undo all the good that had been done by the preaching of economy and retrenchment on the part of leading bankers.

The South and West, however, looked upon Mr. McAdoo's plan as beneficial to the agricultural districts in relieving the strain on finance at a critical period. Not only bankers, but prominent merchants and manufacturers, commended the Government's move. A concrete opinion of the policy announced was that it came at an opportune moment and averted a period of stringency by the application of sound judgment.

Acceptance of commercial paper by the Government established a precedent. The wording of section 5153 of the Revised Statutes providing that the Secretary of the Treasury shall accept "United States bonds and otherwise" as security for the deposit of Government funds has been the subject of much controversy. Prior to 1902 all public funds carried with national banks had been secured by United States bonds exclusively. References to the Congressional Record disclosed the fact that the framers of the national banking act in 1864 intended that United States bonds and, if necessary, additional security in the shape of personal bonds were to be offered by the depository banks. For years afterward this was the interpretation of the law.

In 1902, however, Secretary Shaw, among his other innovations in the administration of the Treasury, began to accept other bonds besides United States bonds from depository banks. He took the ground that the wording of the act clothed him with the requisite authority to do this. His decision provoked criticism at the time from those who contended that he had placed a distorted construction upon the statute. It was, they said, as though the law read "United States bonds or otherwise." Again in 1906 Secretary Shaw resorted to this expedient to relieve the monetary strain.

In 1907 Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou, in the throes of the panic, followed his predecessor's example and received territorial, State, municipal and railroad bonds as security. But after the panic the Government began to draw down its balances in the banks and ordered those bonds to be taken up first that were known as "other bonds."

There is just as much merit in accepting commercial paper against Treasury deposits as accepting paper as security for circulation. Especially in the present condition of the commercial paper market this may contribute relief to the situation. In this respect it may demonstrate the ability of the proposed new currency system where the intended circulation will be based upon paper, and this feature is pleasing to students of finance.

The general funds of the United States Treasury at the end of July showed total assets of $307,000,000. This includes the $58,200,000 of United States funds in national bank depositories. Deducting current liabilities of $170,900,000 makes the net balance in the general fund $131,000,000. This figure does not represent the free available surplus which the Secretary could draw upon for making further deposits in the banks. As $58,000,000 is already in the banks, the Treasury has actually free in its possession $73,000,000. From this is to be deducted the balance in the Treasury offices, representing limited tender or practically unavailable silver bullion and subsidiary silver coin approximately $24,000,000. There is, therefore, about $49,000,000 actually available in the Treasury of the United States for further deposits in the banks.

The last time the Treasury's working balance was reduced to uncomfortable proportions was during the 1907 panic. In November of that year the working balance at one time fell to approximately $5,000,000. On that occasion, however, the Government had as much as $250,000,000 in the depository banks.

London's Weakness Makes Tone Heavy On Stock Exchange

English Sentiment Is Bearishly Affected by Crop Figures—Close Little Changed.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—A heavy tone prevailed in the stock market at the opening to-day, although some of the issues made substantial gains on speculative buying. The market here followed the lead of American shares in the London market, weakness having been caused there by crop figures.

Among the losses here were: Amalgamated Copper, ½; American Car and Foundry, ¼; Canadian Pacific, ½; Utah Copper, ⅝; Steel common, ¼; Reading, ¼; Norfolk and Western, ¼; Erie ⅛, and first preferred, ⅝.

Delaware and Hudson made the best gain, advancing 1 point. Wabash was up ⅝. The Harrimans were steady, Southern Pacific advancing ⅜ and Union Pacific ¼.

The curb was irregular.

American railroad shares in London were irregular and mostly lower on account of figures in the American corn crop report.

The stock market closed steady.

Government bonds unchanged. Other bonds strong.

News and Notes Of Grain Crops

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Speculation has drifted from the wheat pit over into corn. All the big players of the country are to be seen in the pit presided over by Andrew Brennan, and they have found that it is only necessary to make purchases of this grain on weak spots and await an opportunity to rake in a handsome profit on the advance. The crop reports from the corn belt have continued to show further and marked deterioration and not only the city speculator but also the countryman has come into the market on a large scale and on the buying side.

* * *

Such big men in the Southwest as Jacob Schreiner, Sr., J. T. Milliken and others have purchased goodly quantities of corn at Chicago owing to the burning up of the crop in their immediate vicinity. The speculative world at Kansas City has taken on corn at Chicago and sold it at a profit. The same may be said of New York and Baltimore speculators. Even the speculators at Minneapolis, who seldom know the price of corn or the action of the market, have taken to the bull side of that cereal and made money accordingly.

* * *

The losers are scattered from one end of the country to the other and they have been largely men who expected to be able to secure the actual corn for delivery, but this they have been unable to do. Foreigners have taken a whirl in corn and they have lost heavily. Wall street won early and lost later. The greater the crop losses throughout the belt the tighter the holders grasp the corn now in the cribs on the farms and in country elevators.

* * *

There is no export business in corn. Argentina is underselling us on both corn and oats and there is no Eastern trade in this grain worthy of mention. Stocks at Chicago are larger than they were last year, but they are not a "drop in the bucket," when compared with the shortage known to exist in the September future.

* * *

The only loophole the bears in corn have left to them is to secure the actual grain and deliver it. Heavy rains would let down the price somewhat and allow them to save part of their speculative cuticle, but they face heavy losses on crop deterioration.

* * *

The wheat market has narrowed down to small proportions because of the falling off in the export demand for that grain and the fact that millers are no longer to be seen at Chicago as buyers. Millers in the interior are now enabled to secure all the grain needed at home and this condition will continue for some time to come.

* * *

Thrashing returns on oats are still unfavorable but stocks are large at Chicago as well as in the "visible," and the demand is only fair for the cash article.

OCCASIONAL OBSERVATIONS

Young Morgan is said to be "growing" wonderfully.

James J. Hill has stopped swinging red lights.

A taxidermist is now taking care of the trophies recently shot in Africa by A. Barton Hepburn, chairman of the Chase National Bank and chairman of the Currency Committee of the American Bankers' Association. Among the animals brought down by the banker are gazelles, elands, wildbeast, lions, heartbeasts, rhinoceros, alligator and many specimens of horned animals. One of the two lion skins measures 9 feet 8 inches.

Howard Elliott, in addition to running a railroad, is a tennis crack.

Very amusing was the news that a Vulcan Detinning Company director who owned outright two shares of stock had solemnly pledged himself to his co-directors thus:

"I will not sell a single share of my holdings so long as I remain a member of this directorate."

A member of the party of President Brown, of the National Railways of Mexico, thinks the one thing lacking in the present tangle in the land across the Texas border is "personalisme." In Spanish the word means everything that is included in Anglo-Saxon individuality, personality and initiative. It is suggested that a citizen of staid Sagamore Hill would consider himself just the man for the job.

Pig Iron Sales Fall To Smaller Volume

Price of $11 Per Ton Likely To Be Firm for the Rest of the Year.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 9.—Pig iron selling still is going on, though not in as great volume as was noted last week, as the quotations have landed on an average of $11 per ton, No. 2 foundry.

The make is holding its own as compared to what it was during the past week. Figures as to production for the month of July show little difference as compared to the month previous. The manufacturers are looking to a curtailment of production.

Pig iron being sold now is mainly for delivery during the last three months of the year, and some for export. It is understood that more than 22,500 tons of pig iron will be exported from the Southern territory during the balance of the year. There is to be considerable iron delivered into the Chicago district. Consumers there have not been able to get all the iron they need in the home territory. The belief is now expressed that the $11 per ton quotation is likely to remain firm until the end of the year.

Charcoal iron commands $23 per ton.

Steel market conditions are still active, so far as operations go, and the product is moving steadily.

WESTERN BELT DRY; EAST NOW IS DOING WELL

Cotton Traders Keenly Absorbed in Weather Maps as the Critical Month Progresses.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 9.—Observing the weather map and trying to get a line on its indications is a favorite occupation for many people in the cotton belt at this time. The occasion for such keen interest is that August is perhaps the most crucial single month of the season, for loss sustained therein is permanent. So far the present month has brought no developments of unusual character, but it is a mooted question whether the crop has lost condition enough to be serious. There is no trouble starting an argument when the question is sprung, and around it has hinged in a large measure the fluctuation in the speculative market.

The only sources of a crop scare yet have been Texas and Oklahoma, which usually contribute their share of such scares, though rarely failing to have satisfactory crops as a whole. Lack of sufficient moisture is the trouble, and the rains received about the last of last week afforded but partial relief. They were very welcome and some sections can go for quite a while longer without suffering, but there are large areas which still are suffering and seem to be losing some of their recent promise. Only in the past few days has Oklahoma figured much in complaints, but temperatures have been very high and some sections of weeks have not had enough moisture. Part of the wave that was so disastrous to the corn belt reached into the cotton belt and caused deterioration.

Weevils Cause Trouble.

The central belt has not contributed any complaints worth while, most reports having been glowing in character, though the weevil sections have been suffering as expected. The recent showers tended to stimulate the pest to renewed activity and to increase their number, and it is feared they will take very heavy toll from the crop.

While there was for several days fear of the eastern belt getting too much rain for the crop to do its best, such fears have dwindled since showers have become less frequent, and it now is felt that without something happening during the next few weeks, and provided there is not early frost, the yield will be ahead of last year by a goodly margin.

The market, working down to around 11 cents and a little lower for futures, has not been surprising, in view of the character of advices coming from trade centers. At the same time it is regarded as significant that the disposition to sell as 11 cents was approached lessened and buying orders increased, indicating a feeling among spinners and others that prices were low enough until more light could be had as to consumptive requirements and probable supply. The fact that contract prices were $7.50 a bale under what they were a year ago also acted as a stay against pressure.

Spinners May Buy Soon.

There is still little light on the important question of what spinners are going to do about buying their early supplies. Conditions and other things seem to indicate the probability of them becoming free buyers just as soon as offerings are large enough to interest them, but inquiry elicits the information that the forward commitments by buyers to the spinners are not as heavy as they have been in the past.

It may be that the spinners have provided against some of their requirements by the purchase of October and December futures, for it has been thought for quite a while that support to the market around the bottom levels was coming from the consumers.

Movement of the new crop is not increasing as fast as some predicted, for receipts are much behind two years ago and are very little ahead of last year. The present weather in Texas, however, will force maturity of the crop and hasten movement.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

George F. Jones & Son: We expect prices to do better until the drouth is generally broken.

Norden & Co.: We believe that the most reasonable course of cotton is to make use of fluctuations that may be caused by daily weather conditions and the technical position of the market.

Logan & Bryan: Weather conditions in Texas and Oklahoma are the dominating influences, and should that section receive beneficial moisture, lower range of prices will doubtless be seen.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—With the exception of August, which opened 5 points higher on covering, the cotton market opened easier to-day with other options at a net decline of 4 to 13 points from Friday's final. On the opening the selling was general on a few light showers shown on the map over the western belt and local weather people believed that the barometers in the Southwest point to showery conditions over Texas and Oklahoma over Sunday. There was considerable selling by traders who went long on dry weather talk yesterday.

Futures and spots in Liverpool were quiet.

The buying was extremely light and scattered, being confined mainly to a few large spot houses.

The Government reports showed temperatures in Oklahoma yesterday averaged 104 degrees and Texas 98 degrees; with fifteen stations 100, five 102, two 104 and one station 106 degrees.

As the session wore on the selling became heavy. Little or no support was in evidence. The lack of substantial buying power caused a further reaction in values by dropping 7 to 18 points under the opening quotations. Every option established new low lines not witnessed in many months. August was as low as 11.57; September, 10.96; October 10.92; December, 10.81, and January, 10.92. These declines failed to bring out any fresh demand and the market closed practically at the bottom, showing net losses of 13 to 20 points from the final quotations of Friday.

U. S. Makes Big Gain In Trade to South

Exports $10,000,000 More Than Previous Year—Imports Remain Almost the Same.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—While trade between the United States and five of the principal South American countries, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Uruguay, still is in favor of the southern republics, this country made a considerable gain during the past fiscal year. It reduced by $10,000,000 the wide margin of difference between its imports from and exports to those countries.

Imports valued at $187,000,000 are the same as in 1912. In exports the United States gained, shipping $126,000,000 of merchandise this year against $116,000,000 last year. Increases were made in shipments to all countries named, except Argentina.

In the past year Argentina bought $53,000,000 and sold $27,000,000; Brazil, $43,000,000 bought, $120,000,000 sold; Chile, $16,000,000 bought, $28,000,000 sold; Peru, $7,000,000 bought; $10,000,000 sold; Uruguay, $2,000,000 bought, $7,000,000 sold.

EASTERN BELT FARING BETTER THAN RIVALS

Cotton Crop Looks Better Every Day, Experts Agree—Trade Shows Big Expansion.

By M. A. ROSE.

Every day sees the cotton crop in the Southeast looking better.

Traveling men, merchants, farmers, traders—all these who know anything at all about cotton make the same report.

The gloom of the early season, when a delayed start, too much rain, cold weather and then drouth gave crop killers their golden opportunity—this is gone and optimism rules.

It is admitted that cotton is somewhat late, but not enough to matter unless nature violates all precedents and brings an abnormally early frost.

Indeed, from trailing along behind the procession the Southeast has progressed until its crop prospects are better than those of the Central or Western belt. In the Central belt the boll weevil is on the rampage. In the Western belt rain is sorely needed.

All signs point of a good price for the crop this fall. Who knows? Conditions may be completely reversed this year, and Georgia may have a splendid yield at good prices, instead of Texas, which this year has been gloating in its "pot full of money."

The deadlock between the cotton shippers and the steamship lines continues, and the Clarke bill has not been killed by the Senate. These two clouds hang over the spot and futures markets.

Both seem destined to favor the "big fellow" instead of the "under dog." For instance, it now is suggested that the banks accept a guarantee of reimbursement for damage claims from the largest cotton exporters—men of undoubted stability. In this way, the financial institutions might see their way clear to handle the bills of lading for export even with the exceptions on them that the steamship companies propose to inflict.

This lets the small cotton buyer out as effectually as the Clarke bill strangles the small dealer when it comes to "hedging" facilities.

"The farmer may well say with the philosopher, 'God, deliver me from my friends,'" remarked a cotton man the other day. "Here are two schemes designed to help him, and both certainly are boomerangs."

Money continues in lively demand, but no strain is being felt. Possibly it will be the middle of October before the crop movement begins to make its annual grab for the nation's currency, all of which, as Joseph A. McCord pointed out the other day, is sheer foolishness, as general use of the check system would entirely obviate the evil.

Secretary McAdoo's promise to loan the South its share of $50,000,000 has brought excellent results—largely sentimental, but business is all sentiment.

Wholesale and retail trade is showing revival. It was predicted that when it became possible to see what promise the crop held forth trade would expand. This is just what has happened.

Wheat—No. 2 red .....85¾@87½
Corn—No. 2 .....74 @75
Oats—No. 2 42

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Corn was up as much as 1 cent for the September option early, but it broke ⅞ on predictions of rain in many sections of the corn belt, with sales from 73 down to 72⅛. The other months acted in sympathy, December selling at 68 down to 66⅝, and May 69½ to 68⅝, compared to closing prices of yesterday, 67⅛ and 69 respectively.

The Government crop report on corn was considered bullish, but the figures which were made up August 1 failed to reflect the damage as a whole.

Wheat was ⅛ to ⅜ higher at the start, but this and ½ more was lost before the session was more than half an hour old.

Oats were higher early, but sold off with other grains and showed a weakening tendency after the decline.

Hogs were higher and provisions were higher in sympathy.

NEW ORLEANS EXCHANGE MAY GAIN PRESTIGE

Substitute for Clarke Bill Aimed at New York but Not at the Southern Center.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—The weekly weather report, issued Tuesday, did not entirely confirm the private reports of heavy rains in Texas. According to the Government, rains were still needed over large portions of Texas, and in Oklahoma it was stated that vegetation was suffering from lack of moisture and that general rains were much needed.

The weak tone exhibited by Liverpool, which reopened Tuesday morning after a holiday extending from the previous Friday, encouraged bears to disregard the unfavorable character of the Government weather report. Consequently, prices were hammered rather aggressively after the report came out, and the market closed with October and December contracts selling practically at the level of 11 cents, although middling cotton still holds steady at 12 cents.

Continued high temperatures in Texas and Oklahoma Wednesday, with no rains reported or in sight, gave a better tone to the market, which has since recovered part of the decline established in the early part of the week. Many reports of crop deterioration are coming in from the western belt, and even from Arkansas reports of damage by the prolonged spell of hot, dry weather have been received. Should reports of this character continue for a few days more, a real crop scare might develop.

Fear Clarke Bill.

No advance of consequence is likely, however, as, with the Clarke bill hanging over the market, no bull campaign can be inaugurated. Considering the extent of the short interest that has recently been created, an advance of a cent a pound would be nothing, were the drouth in Texas and Oklahoma to remain unbroken for another week and were Washington to flush out the news that the Clarke bill would not pass.

The news received here from Washington regarding the Clarke bill is considered more encouraging by local cotton interests. The plan that is being considered by prominent Southern Senators, among whom Senator Hoke Smith and Senator Gore are numbered, is to amend the Smith bill, which specifies the grades to be delivered on contract and calls for commercial differences. To the Smith bill, thus amended, it is proposed to add the Clarke amendment as a penalty.

Favors South.

In this way, the New York Cotton Exchange would be compelled to comply with the regulations proposed by the Government, or else that market would be taxed out of existence. The New Orleans Cotton Exchange, which is only too willing to do business under the terms proposed by the Government and has already adopted the Government standard of types, would thus be able to continue, while New York, being an artificial market, would be practically wiped out of existence. The cotton business of the entire country would thus center in this market, just as the wheat business centers in Chicago.

In anticipation of such an outcome of the proposed legislation at Washington, New Orleans Cotton Exchange shares are being quietly sought. Recently a share sold below $1,500, but now $1,500 is being bid, with no shares offering below $2,000.

OIL LETTERS KILLED HIM POLITICALLY, SAYS FORAKER

Exposes by William Randolph Hearst Responsible for Downfall, Declares Former Senator Before Senate Lobby Inquiry.

Official of National Manufacturers' Association Writes Democratic Simplicity Will Mean Union Label on U.S. Stationery.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Former Senator Foraker admitted to the Senate Lobby Committee to-day publication by William Randolph Hearst of the famous Standard Oil letters killed Foraker's chances for re-election to the Senate in 1908.

After identifying a letter received from Martin M. Mitchell, the confessed ex-lobbyist, making a report of political activities in Ohio in Foraker's behalf, the former Senator said:

"It was the morning of the day Mr. Hearst's disclosure was made public. An attack had been made on me by Mr. Hearst which destroyed my chances of election, saying I had acted as counsel for the Standard Oil Company. This had created a sentiment in our State very prejudicial to me. I continued as a candidate in the campaign only because to retire from it after I had become a candidate would look like an admission that there was some justification for the attack, whereas there was not any."

Senator Foraker said Muhall, whom he had known thirty years, greatly overestimated his own importance.

No Aid From N. A. M.

Foraker said he had never received aid from the National Association of Manufacturers and while he received a fee of $500 for the part he played in the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1896, he was not in the employ of either David Lamar or Edward Lauterbach in an injunction case against the Union Pacific in 1903.

The House Investigating Committee opened its probe with introduction of correspondence showing the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers in fighting labor legislation in Congress and various attempts to have "conservative" men named as members of House committees.

Discussing the recent sundry civil bill, with its provision prohibiting the expenditure of certain funds for the prosecution of farmers and labor unions under the Sherman law, James A. Emery, counsel of the N. A. M., wrote to President John Kirby, Jr., of the association, on March 7, 1913, after President Taft had vetoed the bill:

"I want to emphasize as hard as I can the importance of lining up for a tremendous demonstration when this bill reaches President Wilson, as it undoubtedly will, with the same provision in it. You will then have an early opportunity to decide whether the glittering Democratic motto, 'Equal right for all and special privilege for none,' means anything or whether the Administration has surrendered completely or will merely turn over the Department of Labor.

Objection to Secretary Wilson.

"I note, by the way, your reference to a letter from C. W. Post on the question of a protest over the appointment of Wilson (Secretary of Labor). A protest on this subject is a mere waste of breath, and on the whole I am inclined to think the whole purpose of this department will be shown up quicker with the unions in control of it than in any other way. Gompers will run it characteristically with a high hand, and if the whole thing does not smell to Heaven within a year I shall be very much astonished.

"By that time Democratic simplicity will probably mean a union label on the White House stationery and the President conferring with the Waiters' Union over the appointment of his steward. At present we have nothing more startling in Jeffersonian simplicity than the news Mrs. Bryan is making a new suit for the Secretary of State, and cakes and ginger ale will be served at the dinner for the British Ambassador. Toothpicks will, of course, be an after dinner course at all Cabinet receptions, and the demand for dress suits will be confined to waiters in the hotels."

In this same letter Emery advised Kirby, "if you have any idea Taft would have vetoed this bill of his own motion, get over it. A list of public men who had 'pie' in this $113,000,000 appropriation bill included many prominent men in both Houses."

Folly of Suffrage Shown by Dresses, Says Mrs. Marshall

Vice President's Wife Believes Women Can Do More Good Correcting Cabarets.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Slashed skirts with the silhouette gown and other freaks of modern fashion are the worst enemies of the newly made voters of Illinois, and the cabaret and the turkey trot are more in need of reform than Chicago's First Ward, in the opinion of Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, who was in Chicago with her husband.

Mrs. Marshall declared frankly that she was opposed to the municipal power recently granted to the women of Illinois. Mrs. Marshall said:

"I have never been a suffragist. To me the fashions of to-day ought to convince any one that a woman is not fit to vote. Some women's dress is not only extreme, it is objectionable. A woman would do more good by correcting the dances in our cafes and cabarets than in running for office.

"The women in the East are not strongly in favor of the ballot, and none of the Cabinet women seems to favor it, with the exception, perhaps, of the President's daughter. Miss Jessie Wilson."

Two Young Women Steal Trolley Car

Girls Abandon It After It Catches Fire on Their Morning Joy-Ride.

LOWELL, MASS., Aug 9.—The police are searching the city for two well-dressed young women, who, it is alleged, stole an electric car from the corner of Pawtucket and Middlesex streets, early to-day, drove it nearly a mile into Middlesex Village, and then abandoned it after it was in flames.

The car, with a score of others, was left on the tracks near the car barns of the Bay State Company. It was missed shortly before 2 a. m. and within a few minutes an alarm of fire was pulled in. At the same time two young women were seen running from the place.

Persons living in the vicinity state that they saw the blazing car whirl past their homes, and that they heard women laughing as it passed.

Beats His Wife to Get Up an Appetite

Husband Confesses in Court That He Used This Exercise Before Eating Meals.

NEW YORK, Aug 9.—Convicted for the sixth time in three years for beating his wife, Peter Pellerine, 43 years old, of No. 1407 Third avenue, was sentenced to the workhouse for six months in the Harlem Police Court yesterday.

According to Mrs. Pellerine, her husband came home early on July 3, declaring that he was hungry, and beat her with a stick until she prepared breakfast, saying that the exercise afforded him an excellent appetite. He then disappeared, returning home on Thursday morning to repeat the beating.

Pellerine pleaded guilty and acknowledged five previous convictions for the same offense.

Here's How to Make Congressional Salad

Wife of Representative Smith of Minnesota Invents Dish Popular in Capital.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Mrs. George R. Smith, wife of Representative Smith, of Minneapolis, whose husband is a neophyte in the Sixty-third Congress, has invented a new salad called the Congressional salad, which has grown in vogue among the hostesses here.

This is how she makes it:

One grapefruit, one orange, one pine apple, or two apples, nuts according to taste and a pinch of salt. To this chopped up fruit she adds cream doubly whipped. The salad is served on squares of buttered toast or browned crackers.

Philadelphia Women Gamble on Baseball

Vice Squad Detective Finds Hundreds of Them Taking Chances in Pool.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Three hundred women gamblers, working in mills and spending their money on baseball pools, have been counted by Detective Charles Lee, head of the vice squad here. Harry Reed, of No. 4470 Germantown avenue, has been held in bail by Magistrate Coward, having been charged with operating a pool. Lee says 1,800 persons gambled on ball games in Reed's place each week, most of whom were women. The chances cost 25c each.

AGED HUSBAND SUES GIRL WIFE WHO SPENT FORTUNE

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—Joseph Walters, aged 70, a prominent McKeesport man, who married Ruth Henderson when she was 17 years old, filed a suit in Divorce Court, asking a decree because his wife, after forcing him to spend his fortune of $100,000 on her, "ran away."

WOMAN DEITY CREATED MAN, SAYS TABLET

New Version of Genesis Found in University of Pennsylvania Nippur Collection.

DATE IS FIXED AT 2100 B. C.

Dr. Arno Poebel's Discovery Is Regarded as Oldest Story of Origin of World.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—It was a woman who created mankind, according to a tablet 4,000 years old just deciphered at the Pennsylvania University Museum by Dr. Arno Poebel, who is at work translating the tablets dug up in Nippur some years ago by the museum expeditions.

About 37 years ago George Smith, the English scholar and explorer, brought back from Babylonia the cylinders which gave a Babylonian account of the origin of mankind and much of his early history, and these not only excited great interest but had a profound effect upon the theological teachings. The parallelism between the Babylonian story and that of Genesis developed a new school in theological criticism. But the cylinders of Smith only dated back to the reign of Assurbanipal in the seventh century B. C. The university museum tablet dates back possibly to 2500 B. C., and it is reasonably certain to be no later than the reign of Hamurabi, about 2100 B. C.

Female Deity Created Man.

The new account of the creation and the flood throws much new light on the early ideas of the Babylonians and Sumerians.

The striking novel features of the new tablet are these:

That it was a female deity who created mankind, known as "the blackheaded," from the color of the hair.

That new deities or new characteristics of the gods are discovered in the original document, although they have been hinted at in other ways. The character of the female goddess is now made important from the earliest times and equal with the two male ruler gods. Later tablets speak of these as unimportant.

That the first seven prediluvian cities and the special god of each are discovered.

That the older Babylonian name of the Scriptural Noah is Zingidda.

That deluge ruins of the prediluvian cities were not all destroyed, some not until historic times. There is historic basis to much of the statement in this epic.

Opens With Poem.

Dr. Poebel has prepared a careful literal translation of the tablet. It originally was about seven inches square, but on such a surface the ancients could write in ideographic signs a long epic poem, and that is what this table contained. Like the first chapter of Genesis, the story opens with a great poem on the origin of the heavens as well as of the earth. It appears that Nintu, a female god, created mankind, and she is found lamenting that the other gods seem bent on the destruction of her subjects. She speaks of the human beings as "my creations." It appears that Anu and Enlil were the chief gods of power, although they were among seven of equal rank, the first being god of heaven and the second god of earth. Then comes the story of the creation:

"Nintu created the blackheaded," (human race.) * * * "The fields of the ground produced abundance, the cattle and the four-legged beasts of the field artfully they (the gods) called into existence."

Slit Skirts Furnish Mosquito Clan With Choicest Barbecue

Trainload of Winsome Stenographers and Milliners Have to Tramp Through Stegomyia Belt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"All those in favor of slit skirts, please stand up."

Millions of full grown mosquitoes and three or four little fellers were rushing wildly out of their apartment houses on he Flushing Meadows, about 7 o'clock last night, and took part in the most rollicking barbacue ever held in the East.

Right in the middle of the salt grass waste were five cars of a Long Island Railroad train, stalled. The lights were out, men were running up and down shouting orders and Flushing was two miles away. After the train had stood for a few minutes, out of the passenger cars poured the choicest morsels of humanity that Mr. and Mrs. Culex Pungens and the little Pungenses ever saw. There were stenographers, typewriters, cashiers, millinery attaches and buxom matrons. Slit skirts were numerous.

In an endless procession the five hundred and more suburbanites trailed over the ties toward Flushing. There is some style in the mosquito belt and every member of the family seemed to know at once which of the passengers was dressed a la mode. The squeals and slaps of the fair ones as they tried to stop the onslaught sounded like a tattoo.

The procession lasted for more than two hours and when the last stenographer reached home a unanimous vote was taken declaring the mosquito a pest. Of course, there were some men along, but what self-respecting mosquito would bother with them at such a time?

ADMITS HE'S DECENT IN ANSWERING MARRIAGE AD

YONKERS, Aug. 9.—Reginald P. Shennan, editor of The Rye Courier, already has received one reply to the advertisement inserted in his paper by a "gentlewoman with large tract of land not far from Port Chester," who is seeking "an unselfish, decent, self-supporting man for a husband."

He turned the letter over to the advertiser, whose identity is being guarded carefully. The letter bore a Brooklyn postmark.

AUTOS EMPTY CHURCHES, SAY COUNTRY PREACHERS

MANHATAN, KANS., Aug. 9.—The dwindling of the congregations of country churches, due to the new era of automobiles, which makes it easy for the rural residents to attend services in nearby towns and cities, will be discussed at the Conference of Rural Leaders, July 21 to 25, at the Kansas Agricultural College. Members of the organization declare that Kansas now has about 1,200 abandoned churches in the farming districts.

NEGRO FIRM IN ACCUSING FRANK

He Describes Slaying of Mary Phagan

Defense Battles for Lite This Week

Leo Frank in his seat in the court-room where he is fighting for life.

The prisoner is shown in the unconcerned attitude he assumes most of the time.

Not a move escapes this man's restless eyes, though his face is calm.

Although Conley Admits Some Lying He Sticks to the Main Story Under Terrific Cross-Examination---Heat Causes Suffering in the Court.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

Leo Frank's lawyers promise that with the beginning of the third week of his trial the full force of their defensive evidence will be displayed. Little testimony of significance was offered in Frank's behalf during the brief period following the termination of the State's case last week.

The State practically closed its case with the evidence of Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, who declared that he helped Frank dispose of the body of Mary Phagan, the girl whom he swore Frank killed. The testimony of the few State witnesses who followed the negro was much of an anti-climax, coming as it did after a story that was thrilling in the extreme.

C. B. Dalton, who said he had been with Frank in several escapades in which girls were concerned, and Dr. H. F. Harris, of the State Board of Health, who testified as to the condition of Mary Phagan's body, were the important witnesses who followed Conley for the State.

Negro Endures Ordeal.

But Conley's testimony embodied the prosecution's strength. The negro, a man of the most common African type, burly, thick-lipped, anthropoidal, sat for three days in the witnesse's chair, and endured the most exacting ordeal ever forced upon a witness in a court of law. The cross-examination of Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, lawyers for the defense, was savage and pitiless at times. The negro, in spite of an apparent lack of intelligence and brainforce, showed the strain. He sat unmoved of body, but perspiration beaded his face. The examination told on him.

But he stuck persistently to the main part of his story. Coolly, calmly, almost nonchalantly, he admitted that he had lied time and again in his testimony, that he had not told the truth in making affidavits damaging to Frank during the investigations preliminary to the trial. But his significant accusations against the white man, his former "boss," he maintained were true.

Of his testimony that remained unshaken when he finally was discharged Wednesday afternoon, these facts were prominent:

On the morning of April 26, at Frank's behest, he had taken his station at the door of the National Pencil Company building, to watch.

Frank was upstairs in his office, at the front of the building.

Mary Phagan entered at his door and went upstairs.

He heard footsteps as if someone walked from the front of the building to the rear, upstairs.

Soon after he was summoned by Frank, who told him that a girl was hurt.

He found Mary Phagan in the lathe room, at the rear of the building, dead.

Together he and Frank bore the body to the cellar.

With numerous details the negro embellished this story. Time and again Luther Rosser forced the negro to admit that he had lied about this fact or that, but, although coaxed and browbeaten, the negro maintained steadfastly his main charge against Frank.

Words Have Dramatic Force.

He repeated it persistently, with the appearance of earnestness that is common to the ignorant members of his race. He talked and gesticulated in a manner to show that he was indeed illiterate and ignorant. But in the very simplicity of his words and manner there was a dramatic force, particularly when he was telling his story under the direction of the Solicitor General.

"I wrapped up her body like a bundle of dirty clothes," he said. It was one of many of his statements that, told with simple directness, thrilled those that heard.

The prosecution allowed him to tell his story unchecked. But

Jack London Puts Joke on His Appendix

Novelist Tells the Latest on Former Part of Himself and What's Left.

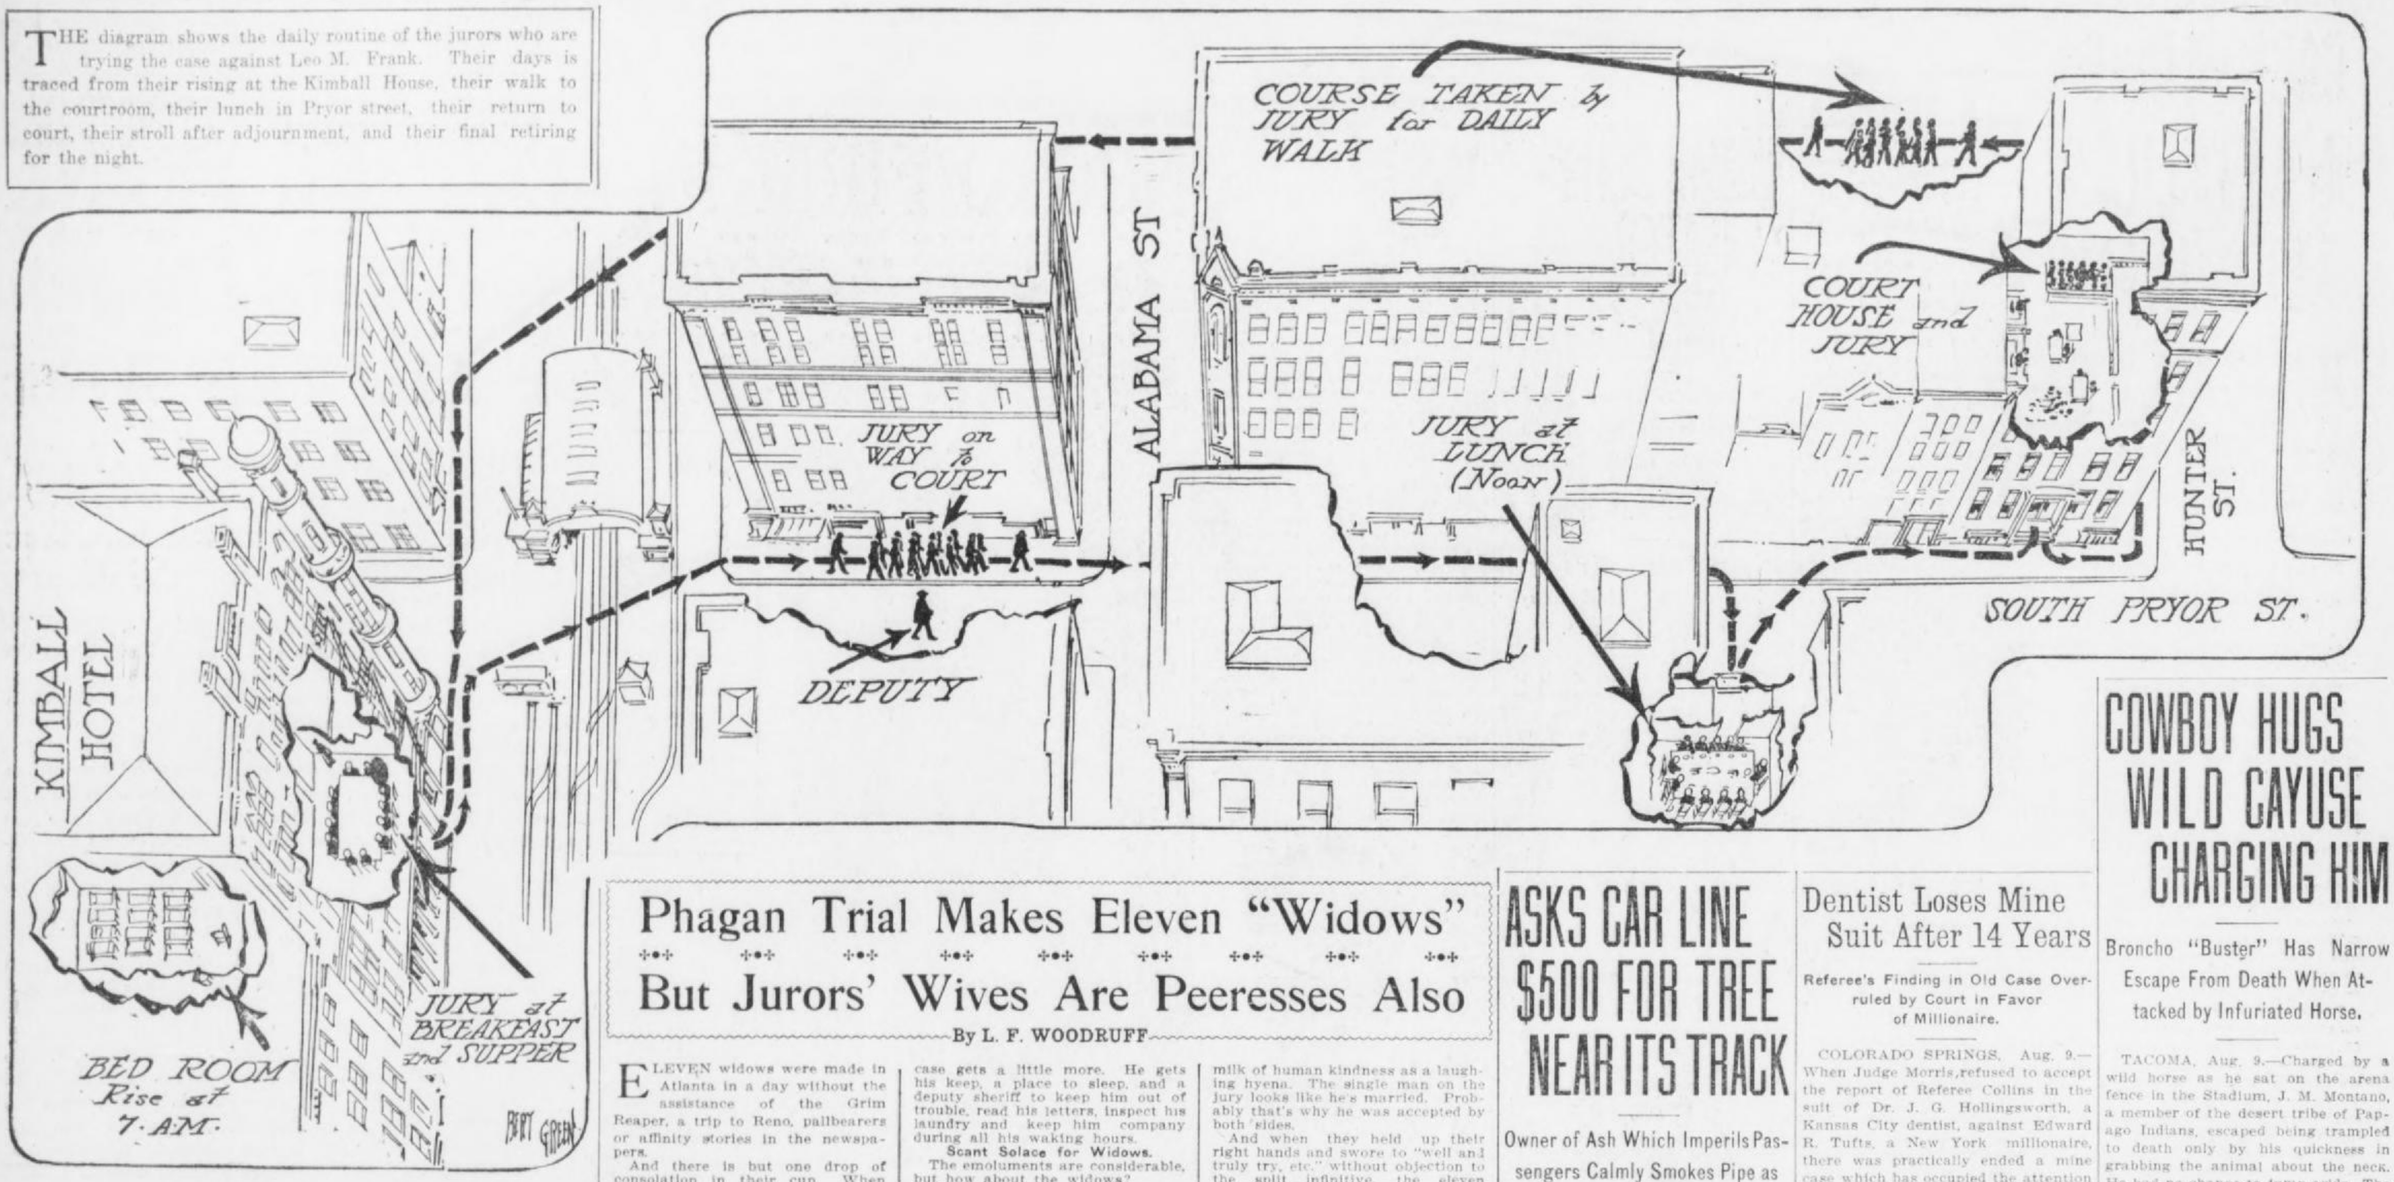
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Here is the latest joke Jack London, the famous author, is telling on himself:

London was operated on recently for appendicitis. After the ordeal the surgeon held up the severed appendix in his fingers for the patient to see. The author looked at it thoughtfully then grinned and said:

"It was a case of all alone in London, wasn't it, doc?"

VISITS OF GIRLS TO FRANK'S FACTORY REVEALED

THE diagram shows the daily routine of the jurors who are trying the case against Leo M. Frank. Their days is traced from their rising at the Kimball House, their walk to the courtroom, their lunch in Pryor street, their return to court, their stroll after adjournment, and their final retiring for the night.



Phagan Trial Makes Eleven "Widows"

But Jurors' Wives Are Peeresses Also

By L. F. WOODRUFF

ELEVEN widows were made in Atlanta in a day without the assistance of the Grim Reaper, a trip to Reno, pallbearers or affinity stories in the newspapers.

And there is but one drop of consolation in their cup. When they were made widows they automatically became peeresses, for which privilege many American girls have caused their fathers large sums of good American money and themselves heartache and their pictures to be printed between the story of the rabbit that chased the boa constrictor and the life narrative of Sophie, the Shop Girl, who in a night became a stage star.

They also had the satisfaction of having their husbands officially proclaimed good men and true, which they may have questioned when the pay envelope was brought home with $10 missing and unaccounted for, just as all wives have questioned.

They'll Be Brides Again.

If there is any balm in it, the widows know that it will not be long before they can doff their weeds and once more don their bridal gowns. Their husbands will return to them just as soon as they have decided whether or not Leo Frank is guilty of the murder of Mary Phagan.

For it is due to the fact that their husbands are jurors that Atlanta had eleven widows made in a day, that eleven peeresses were added to Atlanta's list and that eleven wives had the glory of hearing their husbands called "good" without suspecting there was hidden meaning in the compliment.

The peerage and the official compliment as to character and $2 a day are the emoluments of a juror of Georgia. A juror in the Frank case gets a little more. He gets his keep, a place to sleep, and a deputy sheriff to keep him out of trouble, read his letters, inspect his laundry and keep him company during all his waking hours.

Scant Solace for Widows.

The emoluments are considerable, but how about the widows?

Men must work and women must weep to the tuneful accompaniment of the doleful mourning of the harbor bar is the first thought.

But there is some solace in the lot of the eleven Frank case widows.

Not every woman can know the thrill of widowhood and at the same time have absolute assurance that she is not going to remain in single blessedness the rest of her life.

And then there's no disputing the fact that they are peeresses. A juror is given his coronet when he takes his oath of office. Of course, in a criminal case he is usually paid the doubtful compliment of being termed the peer of a safe cracker, a short change artist, a blind tiger operator, or a gentleman skilled in the art of getting good money on bad paper, but just the same the juror is a peer. And just the same Mrs. Juror is a peeress.

Only One Single Juror.

In the rapid selection of the Frank jury, it was remarkable that but one single man was selected to decide a mystery that has puzzled the master minds of the Atlanta detective bureau for more than three months. The State probably wanted married men, who would sympathize with the mother robbed of a daughter's life. The defense probably wanted married men who would sympathize with the wife of the accused and his mother. Single men are supposed to be as looking in the natural supply of the milk of human kindness as a laughing hyena. The single man on the jury looks like he's married. Probably that's why he was accepted by both sides.

And when they held up their right hands and swore to "well and truly try, etc." without objection to the split infinitive, the eleven "good men and true" were as completely divorced as if the judge had ordered them to pay alimony and had forbidden another marriage in a year's time.

The divorce pro tem. has been absolute. The widows cannot speak with their husbands. Nobody else can for that matter except a court attache.

Deputy Reads All Mail.

Writing them is practically prohibited. Every letter mailed a juror has to be read by a deputy sheriff and properly censored by him before it reaches the eyes of the trial man.

And what wife would like to call her beloved "snooky" and have a deputy sheriff first assimilate the tenderness of the term? What wife would like to write for $8.67 to pay the butcher bill and have a deputy sheriff become thus acquainted with the condition of the family larder and the connubial purse?

She may kiss the clean collar when she sends it to him every day, but what assurance has she that he will not think that the Chinaman has bungled in his work?

She may send him a pair of freshly darned socks, but how does she know that the deputy will not see a mysterious message in the needle work and appropriate the hosiery to his own pedal purposes?

No, there are eleven new widows in Atlanta, but there is no doubt but there are eleven new peeresses. The only trouble is, no one can marry any of them for their titles.

WIFE IS OVERCOME BY CHARGES AGAINST FRANK

the defense, taking him on cross-examination, bridled his glibness with many searching questions. At first the negro was sullen under the examination.

"I disremember," was his usual response to the lawyers' inquiries. Later he was forced from that defense, and admitted that in some of the details he had been mistaken. Then he said he lied.

Conley had told in detail the circumstances of the day, and of his every movement. Later, Lawyer Rosser got him to say that he lied about the time he got up, about the time he left home, about the time he first went to the factory, about the time he bought a flask of whisky, about the time he first met Frank, about the time Frank stayed away from the office, about the time various persons left the factory building, about the previous affidavits he had made incriminating Frank, and about a number of details that had come out.

He Explains His Falsehoods.

"Why didn't you tell the whole truth in your last affidavit, Jim?" asked Mr. Rosser. "You said then that it was the whole truth."

"I didn't want to tell it all at once," replied the negro.

That was his explanation of the many falsehoods: that he didn't want to tell all he knew at once.

The very evident attempt of the defense was to establish with the jury the fact that the negro was not to be believed in the main when he so admittedly had lied in the details.

The negro came on the stand early Monday morning, and during the morning and the early afternoon he told a direct story, with little questioning. Then the defense took him. The cross-examination started early, without apparent point, almost with irrelevancy. Rosser questioned him about his daily actions in the factory, about little incidents and conversations that the negro found it hard to remember. Then, gradually, almost imperceptibly, the force of the lawyer's questions was heightened, until they drifted into a savageness that was powerless, however, to shake the sensational story of the negro.

Heat Is Intense in Court.

The week was a period of acute physical suffering. The heat in the courtroom was intense, and the mental strain which spectators and principals alike underwent was terrific. Dramatic indeed was the story of the negro and of other witnesses. More dramatic, however, was the subtle battle of wits between the lawyers and the witness, and among the lawyers over the witness and his words. Everybody hung breathless on the course of the trial at times.

The strain told. Conley bore up because he was supported by doses of strychnine. Others, without this exhiliration, suffered. Dr. Harris, testifying, collapsed on the witness stand. Mrs. Frank, the prisoner's wife, who was calm and unshaken during the first days of the trial, gave way to the strain when the examination of Conley was at its height, and succumbed to a fit of racking sobs. Reuben Arnold, lawyer for the defense, was overcome by a faint spell, and was forced to ask Judge Roan's permission to argue from his seat. Jurors strained and twisted in their seats, exhausted by the demands on mind and body.

Even the spectators, always eager, always pushing into the courtroom long before the time for the beginning of the trial, were moved. When, after a long period of consideration, Judge Roan denied the request of the defense to eliminate a great part of Conley's testimony, a number of the spectators applauded. Court officials, mentioning this, declared their opinion that it was due largely to the mental excitation under which many of the watchers labored.

The applause was startling, and revealed the temper of the public as unfriendly to Frank. When it came, the jury was not in the courtroom, having withdrawn during the argument of lawyers over the admissibility of Conley's evidence. In spite of the fact that the jurors were absent, however, Lawyer Arnold threatened to move for a mistrial, fearing the effect of the applause on their mental state in event they heard it in the next room.

During the hubbub, in fact, he made the motion, but later withdrew it.

Tells of Girl's Visits.

The testimony to which the defense objected was drawn from the negro in the State's attempt to prove Frank a moral degenerate. Conley told of the visits of girls and women to the factory, and of Frank's association with them in an unusual manner. He named C. B. Dalton as a man who was with Frank on several escapades in the factory.

Over this testimony there was a heated fight, the defense arguing for its inadmissibility, the State sustaining it as legal.

"The testimony is admissible because it indicates the very purpose, motive and intent the defendant had in getting that poor little girl into the metal room. It is admissible as indicating a general practice of course of conduct," said Solicitor Dorsey. "The importance of this evidence, disgusting and abhorrent thought it may be, is going to be made more manifest as the case proceeds."

The Solicitor promised then that witnesses would be called to substantiate what Conley charged regarding Frank's conduct prior to the day of the killing.

Mrs. Frank Overcome.

When the charges were made of practices by Frank, the prisoner's wife was overcome. She hung her head, her face flushed, and, unable longer the endure the situation, she left the courtroom. She walked out with eyes averted, and returned later with the traces on her face of a terrific struggle to be calm. Her eyes were red and her face puffed and swollen, as if she had just braved a storm of tears and sobbing. She resumed her seat, and remained immovable, almost with eyes unblinking, during the remainder of the day's session.

The prisoner's mother, also, was perturbed. She moved restlessly in her seat at Conley's testimony, and then rose from her chair. She moved across the courtroom as if unable to control herself, and then returned to take her seat near her son.

All the testimony to which the defense objected had to do with a period before the day of the muder. Conley had said that he often watched at the door while Frank had girls in his office. To this the defense objected, also.

Reuben Arnold argued that it was inadmissible because irrelevant and immaterial, and that it was a violation of the general principle in law that because a man committed a crime before, that crime can not be introduced to show that he had done a different thing of which he might be accused.

Defense Shows Anxiety.

But the testimony was admitted, and the defense's lawyers retired, something of anxiety plain on their faces. The victory for the State was significant.

Conley was called from the stand Wednesday afternoon. He had been in the witness chair for fifteen and one-half hours, during which time he was in the hands of the Solicitor only two hours. The other time had been torture to him.

However, wearied as he was on the stand, he showed plainly that his balance was restored when he came down. He was even cheerful and laughed when he pulled off his coat in the ante-room. He begged for a cigarette and a newspaper.

Dr. H. F. Harris followed Conley on the stand for the State. He reiterated testimony formerly given that Mary Phagan had been killed within an hour after she had eaten dinner. Of this, he said, he was practically certain, because of the evidence borne by undigested bits of cabbage and bread in the girl's stomach.

Dr. Harris was minutely examined by Reuben Arnold, for the defense, who revealed considerable knowledge of the materia medica. However, the testimony he gave was unshaken by the inquisition.

Admits Visiting Factory.

C. B. Dalton followed Dr. Harris. His testimony was to a large extent corroborative of Conley's. He had visited the factory in company with girls, he admitted, while Conley watched at the door, and from his testimony the story of immoral practices in the factory was drawn. He told of visits to the plant with a young woman named Daisy Hopkins.

Detective Rosser took the stand after Dalton, and with his testimony the case of the State was closed, after a formidable chain of circumstantial evidence had been woven about the prisoner.

Witnesses introduced by the State when court opened Friday, and those who followed Friday and Saturday revealed little of direct contradiction or refutation to the case which the State made out.

ASKS CAR LINE $500 FOR TREE NEAR ITS TRACK

Owner of Ash Which Imperils Passengers Calmly Smokes Pipe as He Awaits Company's Offer.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—"Look out for the tree," warns every conscientious street car conductor as his crowded car approaches the corner of Hillman Avenue and Cemetery Lane, on the West View line. There an ash tree grows within nine inches of the running board.

Meanwhile old Gottlieb Eltinger, who owns the tree, which grows just outside his fence, smokes and smiles on his doorstep.

Awaits Money From Tree.

"One funny old tree, ain't it?" chuckles Gottlieb frequently, as he chuckled again to-day. "You can't kill him, and maybe some day he bring me money—and maybe not. I don't know."

Growing so close to the railway track that passengers standing on the running boards of passing street cars are sometimes unable to escape being bumped, the tree is scored as a nuisance by all the car men on the route. But whether the Pittsburg Railways Company ever will succeed in removing the tree remains to be seen.

"'How much will you take for that tree?' asked the head man of the car company, who was in my place three years ago," explained Gottlieb.

"'Five hundred dollars,' speaks up my wife, who was here then. Well, the man just looked and said nothing. Then he went away and he never came back or sent any word. Maybe he thought the wife's price too steep; I don't know. But the tree, he still stands, and I won't chop him down. He's a great tree, and after they chopped off his roots on one side and laid the iron rails up close to him he still lived on just the same."

Many Bumped Off.

While no street car passenger has ever been reported seriously injured by the tree in the ten years during which the West View car line has been in operation, many boys and men crowded on the running boards of street cars have been scratched and bumped. Anyhow, the tree is a source of constant irritation to the motormen, who have to run their cars slowly passing it, and to the conductors, who have to warn passengers against being bumped.

"Blamed old tree," mutters one conductor. "Wish someone would come out here some night and hack it all down. It wouldn't do any hurt to nick it some, anyway. Maybe it would die then."

But old Gottlieb Eltinger still sits in his dooryard and smiles at his tree, at the street cars and the whole world in general.

"He's a good old tree," says Gottlieb.

Dentist Loses Mine Suit After 14 Years

Referee's Finding in Old Case Overruled by Court in Favor of Millionaire.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Aug. 9.—When Judge Morris refused to accept the report of Referee Collins in the suit of Dr. J. G. Hollingsworth, a Kansas City dentist, against Edward R. Tufts, a New York millionaire, there was practically ended a mine case which has occupied the attention of Colorado courts at various times since 1899.

The referee's decision was in favor of Hollingsworth, awarding him 1,500,000 shares of Grand Union Mining Company stock, worth about $1,500,000, and a personal judgment against Tufts for $350,000. But by the judge's refusal to accept the report Hollingsworth loses at present, although he may ask for a rehearing.

Mouth Is Plastered To Preserve Voice

Teacher of Oratory Declares Lips Should Always Be Sealed While Sleeping.

BERKELEY, CAL., Aug. 9.—Professor Robert Irving Fulton, dean of the College of Oratory at the Ohio Wesleyan University, who is lecturing on public speaking at the summer session of the University of California, advocates the use of common sticking plaster over the mouth during sleep to keep the voice in good condition. To his class he said: "Get a yard of sticking plaster, a whole yard, no less, and cut it in pieces half an inch wide and an inch long. Then put one of the pieces over the lips every night, keeping them in their proper shape, and you will sleep like a baby. In the morning wash it off. This is the secret of keeping the voice in condition, and it is the most economical way in the world, for it costs only 50 cents a year."

COWBOY HUGS WILD CAYUSE CHARGING HIM

Broncho "Buster" Has Narrow Escape From Death When Attacked by Infuriated Horse.

TACOMA, Aug. 9.—Charged by a wild horse as he sat on the arena fence in the Stadium, J. M. Montano, a member of the desert tribe of Papago Indians, escaped being trampled to death only by his quickness in grabbing the animal about the neck. He had no chance to jump aside. The horse, at full gallop, dragged him nearly 50 yards, then again darted against the fence.

The impact loosened Montano's hold and he was thrown aside after the animal had trampled on his leg. His face was badly bruised by the fence, and he received other bruises in the body.

Montano is one of the picturesque bronco busters of the Stampede. He sat down on the fence to rest for a few moments. Another bronco buster vaulted onto the wild horse without bridle or saddle and the animal, enraged, promptly lowered its head and raced into the fence. Its head struck Montano in the chest, and involuntarily he threw his arms around its neck and hung on for dear life. The horse tried to shake him loose as it careened about the arena, but he hung on until it hit the fence the second time.

Mayor Quits Office to Become Collector of Port, but Suffers From Curtailment.

PORT HURON, MICH., Aug. 9.—The order of Secretary McAdoo abolishing the office of collector of customs at this port has thrown former Mayor John J. Bell out into the cold.

When Mr. Bell received his appointment a few years ago he resigned as the city's chief executive, and Commissioner Dixon was chosen as his successor. Then Mr. Bell appointed William R. Chadwick as his deputy.

Now the order from Washington puts Mr. Chadwick in charge of the local part. Mr. Bell finds he has resigned himself out of one job and appointed himself out of another.

Thief Since Child; Boasts of 500 Crimes

Boy Declares That He Is Beyond Reformation, and Welcomes the Gallows.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Walter Novak, 20, arrested with four companions after they had fatally wounded Patrolman Samuel W. Sowers and beaten Patrolman Frank Walpole, admitted having taken part in more than thirty robberies in two months and boasted of his career.

"I was born a thief, and I've been a thief ever since," said Novak. "I don't care whether I go to the gallows. I started when I was nine stealing pennies. I have been put in all kinds of institutions to reform me, but they only made me worse. I don't want any member of my family to come and see me. If they come, I will kick them out.

"I suppose I have committed more than 500 robberies."

$640 Average Income Of American Farmer

Government Report Declares There Are Many Who Make far Smaller Sum.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Farming is not the most profitable business in the world, railroad press agents to the contrary notwithstanding, according to a bulletin of the Department of Agriculture.

For the first time in the history of farming in the United States the department has managed to get accurate data on the subject.

It reports that the average income of the American farmer is $640.40 a year. "It is reasonable to infer," says the department, "that at least half of the farmers in this country have even smaller incomes."

Feudist's Daughter Shouts at Conviction

Woman Obtains Practically All the Evidence Produced in Court Against Slayers.

WINCHESTER, KY., Aug. 9.—The work of Mrs. Lillian Gross, daughter of Ed Callahan, of Breathitt County, former Sheriff and noted feud leader, was rewarded to-day, when a jury returned a verdict finding Andrew Johnson, 19, guilty of having murdered Callahan.

The jury fixed Johnson's punishment at life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

When the verdict was given out, Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Timandy Callahan, young widow of the feudist, shouted for joy.

The evidence was secured almost entirely by Mrs. Gross.

Twelve witnesses, who swore that they saw Johnson at Jackson, 12 miles from the scene of the shooting, are under indictment for perjury.

Dostal ate nothing but steak and drank nothing but coffee.

WHITE SLAVE CASE WHICH INVOLVES U.S. GOES TO TRIAL

Diggs Faces a Jury and Caminetti Will Later Fight Charge of Taking Girls to Reno, Leaving Their Wives in State of California.

After Five Months of Delay and Scandal Involving National Officials, Special Prosecutors Are Appearing for the Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—All California anticipates becoming the unsavory center of the nation's attention for the next three weeks or a month, probably, during the trial of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave cases, arrangements for the beginning of which to-day are complete, after many months of controversy, postponement and of turmoil that threatened to dsirupt President Wilson's cabinet.

The jury to hear thee ase of Maury I. Diggs, former State Architect, one of the two defendants, was announced complete to-day, after considerable difficulty in selecting the twelve members. Exhaustive examination of 96 veniremen was necessary before the twelve were chosen.

Prejudice against the defendants runs high, rendering exceedingly difficult the task of picking a jury. Of the first eleven men chosen, seven are married and have children, one is married, but childless, and three are single men, living with their parents. Indicative of the general temper of San Francisco was the reply upon examination of Philip Woolsey, who afterwrad was chosen as a member of the jury. He expressed his prejudice against "any married man who will abandon his wife and babies and run off on a spree with another woman," but said he could, however, render a verdict strictly in accordance with the evidence.

Cases Come Up Separately.

The cases against Diggs and Caminetti will be tried separately because the prosecution feels it has made out the stronger case against Diggs, and because the defense in this case will assume a course different from that in Caminetti's.

Diggs and F. Drew Caminetti, son of former Congressman and present Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti, are charged with luring Miss Martha Warrinton and Miss Lola Norris from California to Nevada for immoral purposes. Both are married men.

Diggs, the prosecution will attempt to show, financed the trip to Reno, where the girls were taken, and rented there a cottage in which the party lived.

Diggs, against whom the charges are made in relation to Miss Marsha Warrington, is said to be contemplating a fierce attack on the character of the girl. He has subpenaed habitues of the "Barbary Coast" sorts of this city and twenty witnesses from Sacramento's tenderloin. Caminetti is making no such move against Miss Norris. The Government asserts her character to be unblemished.

Mrs. Caminetti Relentless.

Caminetti's wife is relentless in her attitude toward her young husband. She said that despite the disgrace it may bring on their children, she thinks, for the protection of other married women, her husband should be made an example.

Mrs. Diggs, also, is bitter toward her husband. The defenders of both men, however, to-day arec laiming a complete reconciliation of the defendants with their wives, and declare that when the trial gets fully under way both Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti will be seen sitting at their husbands' sides, a spectacle which, the defense calculates, will have an effect to their advantage on the jury.

Diggs and Caminetti both are free from custody, having taken advantage of the $10,000 bail offered them. At first they feared freedom, as violence was anticipated, but later this fear was overcome.

Diggs appears to be cheerful to-day, taking matters easily. He is scrupulously dressed. He came into the courtroom, with his flock of attorneys, bearing a cheerful smile, and bowed a dozen times to familiar faces that he saw near. Caminetti, on the other hand, seemed deeply worried. He was pallid and palpably very nervous. His father, the Commissioner General of Immigration, did not make his appearance, and probably will not be seen at the trial.

Two Special Prosecutors.

The trial is being held in the Federal Court before Judge Van Fleet. Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore R. Roche, president of the San Francisco Police Commission, have been appointed special prosecutors by Attorney General McReynolds, to take the place of District Attorney Gavin McNab, who resigned with the announcement that undue influence was being brought to bear from Washington to prevent the trial of the two men.

Arrayed with the special prosecutors are Archie Johnson, son of Governor Johnson, and Acting District Attorneys Benjamin L. McKinley and Thomas H. Salvage.

Diggs and Caminetti have an equally impressive line-up of legal defenders, including Robert L. Devlin and Marshal B. Woodworth, both former United States District Attorneys; Nate Coghlan and S. Luke Howe.

A heavy guard is thrown around the courtroom because feeling runs high against the two defendants. The two girls involved were high school students of Eacramento and of estimable families. Both, attorneys for the Government announce, will be ready to take the stand against the men.

The Government will charge that Diggs and Caminetti, both married men, had drawn the girls into a liaison; that they terrified the girls into the belief that their wives, having discovered their infidelity, intended to have the girls arrested, and that to escape this imaginary danger the girls accompanied the men to Reno, Nev. what was to be done with them, the young women were told that their ruin was complete; that they would not desert them, but that the young women were to continue to live with them as their mistresses, and that they would take them to Salt Lake, where they would go into a 'house.'

"The Grand Jury had ample evidence before it in these statements to decide that the intent was to put them in a public place.

Barely Escaped Lynching.

"The defendants were secretly taken from the train and brought to Sacramento by auto to avoid lynching by the enraged citizens. Defendants procured counsel. Among these is Charles Harris, of the Sacramento bar. He and Diggs immediately set about to defeat justice by corrupting a witness. Diggs wrote an appealing letter to Miss Warrington under an assumed name, uring her to stand by a certain agreed story he had drilled her in while in Reno. The letter is in my possession.

"The Grand Jury has indicted Harris and Diggs for conspiracy to suborn perjury.

"The friends of the defendants are reported to have stated repeatedly that they could 'easily fix the case;' that they had too much money and too much influence at command to cause them to worry. This seems to have come principally from the Diggs end of the case."

Farley Drew Caminetti, married, twenty-seven, son of U. S. Commissioner of Immigration Caminetti, with Lola Norris, nineteen, unmarried, and Maurice I. Diggs, married, ex-State Architect, about twenty-eight, and Marsha Warrington, nineteen, unmarried, all of Sacramento, go to Reno, register under assumed names, rent a cottage later, and live four days together when arrested. The men assert they are unhappy and intend to marry the girls after securing divorces.

MAY 19.

The men are indicted for violating the Mann white slave law, put under bonds of $10,000 and their cases put on the calendar for trial in June. Citizens all over California appeal to U. S. District Attorney John L. McNab to push the cases.

United States Attorney McNab wires Attorney General McReynolds that both prisoners were boasting of their "influence at Washington," and that strenuous efforts were being made to secure postponement of trials; also that bribery and perjury were being used in their behalf.

JUNE 18.

Secretary of Labor Wilson telephones McReynolds "that Commissioner of Immigration Caminetti, who has applied for leave of absence to attend the trial of his son, can not be spared."

JUNE 19.

McReynolds telegraphs McNab to postpone the cases till fall.

The President accepts McNab's resignation with a rebuke for giving "his resignation the form of an inexcusable intimation of injustice and wrongdoing." In a letter to McReynolds he says: "I am entirely satisfied that the course you took in these cases was prompted by sound and impartial judgment and a clear insight for what was fair and right."

McNab Outlines His Case Against the Defendants

In his report Mr. McNab gives the following pen picture of Caminetti and Diggs:

"The defendant Diggs was a draughtsman in the office of the State Capitol in Sacramento. He is married and has two young children.

"But a short time before the actions hereinafter narrated he was involved in a forgery charge, and for a long time, by common repute, easily substantiated by evidence, he maintained what has been denominated as a 'private harem' at his rooms in a downtown block in Sacramento. Here, according to charges laid before me, he enticed many young women to go to serve his immoral purposes.

"Caminetti was his bosom companion. The defendant Caminetti has a vicious reputation for seducing girls, and I have shocking instances which I can produce to establish this fact.

"The two girls in question, both of whom are about 19 years of age, come of most respectable families. Marsha Warrington is the only daughter of the agent of the Santa Fe Railroad. Lola Norris is the only daughter of a retired business man of Sacramento.

"After going with the young women for some months the two defendants, who had determined to entice the girls away from home and take them to another State, began a systematic campaign of coercion and inducement to get them to flee the State with them.

Their Stories to the Girls.

They told the young women that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti had found out about their relations and had procured warrants for their arrest from the Juvenile Court and were only awaiting the appropriate time to serve them; that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti were relentless and intended to expose the whole matter, and that the families of the girl would be disgraced and ruined; that the only way to save the girls from disgrace was secretly to leave the city and go to another State, where they would acquire a residence, the men would divorce their wives and marry the girls, etc.

"The young women were in absolute terror. They repeatedly appealed to the defendants to allow them to remain at home and not to disgrace them, and begged to be allowed to unbosom their indiscretions to their parents and have their advice.

"Up to this time, according to the uncontradicted evidence, Diggs had been unduly intimate with Miss Warrington for a few weeks; the Norris girl had never been violated before this trip to Reno.

"On arrival at Reno they were assigned to bedrooms, Diggs and Miss Warrington occupying one room and Caminetti and Miss Norris the other. According to the testimony of the young women, they were wholly in the hands of their male companions. They had never been away from home or their parents before and felt that they were powerless to save themselves.

Foundling Is Heiress To $100,000 Fortune

Father Makes Wealth After He Had Left Baby in Michigan Institution.

CADILLAC, MICH., Aug. 9.—Sheriff Chamberlain has been asked by an attorney in Corning, N. Y., to locate Bessie Weaver, who was adopted by a Manton, Mich., family from a New York foundling home over twenty years ago, and a few days ago became heir to $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weaver, of Manton, who adopted the child when on a trip through New York, returned her to the home five years later. Since that time nothing has been heard from her. The father of Bessie Weaver, or Bessie Clark, as she was known in New York, made his fortune after placing his child in the home, but has been unable to locate her since she was taken back from Michigan. He recently died, leaving his fortune to his only child.

GIRL HELPS FATHER IN BUILDING NEW HOUSE

HARTFORD, MICH., Aug. 9.—One year ago S. H. Atkins and family came to this city and built a house in a field of rye in the outskirts of the city. Recently they sold the home, and with the proceeds purchased four adjoining lots. They are now building a much larger house, which will be the sixth they have erected since the little home was built.

The scarcity of carpenters caused the mother and daughter to assist Mr. Atkins in the building of his new home. The mother and 9-year-old daughter did all of the lathing.

Ban on Tobacco Seen By Prohibitionists

Smoking and Drinking Are Blamed for Increase in Chronic Diseases in America.

BATTLECREEK, MICH., Aug 9.—That tobacco as well as liquor will be placed under national prohibition before the end of another generation, is the assertion made here by Irving Fisher. Fisher blames liquor, tobacco, overuse of meat and too strenuous life for the terrible increase of chronic diseases in America.

ROMANCE LEADS TO HEIR'S EXILE FROM GERMANY

Lieutenant in the Kaiser's Army Comes to Chicago and Joins U. S. Cavalry.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Because his love for a pretty German actress resulted in his squandering an inheritance of $32,000 in one year, Dr. Otto Gordon Goldfield, scion of a wealthy family, a lieutenant in the German cavalry and a graduate of Gottigen University, was forced by his father to come to the United States and join the army here as a private. The young German is now in barracks here.

Ruth Werner, German dancer and singer, charmed the young man when in Vienna. His grandfather had just died and left him $32,000. Within a year this was gone, and after numerous appeals to his father, Dr. Goldfield was forced to come here.

Told to Give Up Girl.

His father, who is the vice president of the Corporation of Hamburg, told him to give up the girl, his commission in the army and go to America.

"I fell in love with the girl," explained "Private" Goldfield "and spent all my money on her. She was beautiful. If she wanted jewels I bought jewels. We were at Monte Carlo. She wanted to play the games. She was beautiful, and I loved her, so why should she not be happy?

"We were in Paris, at the Horse Show in London, and many other places. She had automobiles and fine horses.

"And then my money gave out. My parents refused to give me more, and my father forced me to come to the United States and try for a commission in the army.

"Will I go back?" responded Dr. Goldfield in answer to a question. "Yes, when I get my commission here I will go back and the girl and I will be married. But not until then. I must stay in the army here until I am a lieutenant.

Likes Open Air Life.

"It's the open air, and beautiful I like here more than anything else. That is why I have come to the West.

"And your soldiers—well, next to the French dragoons they are about the best in the world, in my opinion, and I have seen the troops of all the larger countries. That's why I am enlisting as a private here, for I like the life and will stay anyway until I get my naturalization papers."

Goldfield is twenty-five, and has served the last four years in the German cavalry as a lieutenant. He is an experienced horseman, and says he was the winner of the championship at the International Horse Show held in London two years ago, riding the horses from his father's stables.

Jacob Goldfield, father of the young army officer, besides being vice president of the Hamburg Corporation, is a well-known German jurist, as is also his brother, Rudolph Goldfield.

COLLEGE HEN MISSES LAYING 1 DAY IN 100

Champion Barnyard Producer Rests Only When Commencement Season Arrives.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CORVALLIS, OREG., Aug. 9. A college hen, which laid 99 eggs in 100 days and observed Commencement Day by taking a single day's vacation, is a new claimant for prominence in the chicken world.

The newly heralded layer is three-quarters White Leghorn and one-quarter Barred Plymouth Rock, descending from several generations of heavy layers bred at the Oregon Agricultural College experiment station.

The 99 eggs were laid during the 100 days ended June 8, as follows: Thirty-one in March, 29 in April, 31 in May and 8 in the first 8 days in June.

Not only is this the best record ever secured at Oregon Agricultural College for the same length of time, but a careful perusal of authentic records from other stations on file fails to reveal an equal performance.

The result of breeding as shown in the egg production of this one hen is only an isolated example of what Professor James Dryden's extensive experiments are proving to be possible.

Up to date the records show clearly the beneficial effect in egg yield, and when the year's experiments are concluded in the fall some interesting statistics will be available for the use of poultrymen who are raising chickens for egg production.

Gives Check for Fine, Then Stops Payment

Fisherman, Who Unintentionally Violated Law, Skips State, and Justice of Peace Suffers.

CRANE, MO., Aug. 9.—A resident of Crane has given a new turn to the long struggle for fees and fines by petty officers along the State line. This man was arrested, with his family, on charges of violating the fishing laws, pleaded guilty, was fined, paid the fine and fees with a check, then he hustled across the State line and stopped payment on the check.

The violation of the law was unintentional, as the Missouri family were floating down White River and did not note the change of State jurisdiction until the constable arrested them for a manner of fishing which had been legal a few miles back.

The only regret Missourians have over the incident is that the same Justice probably cannot be fooled twice.

EVERY LUXURY PROVIDED FOR 12 PRIZE DOGS

Private Room, Electric Fans, Leather Chairs, Etc., for Each of Dozen Pomeranians.

BROKTON, MASS., Aug. 9.—Twelve Pomeranians—each with a whole room to himself, and housed in a house which they have all to themselves, likewise—take he prize for dog luxury, Brockton folks believe. Besides a house of their own, the dogs have:

A valet, electric fan, individual beds, a bath twice a day, a back yard to play in, leather chairs and soft rugs (the latter to try their teeth on).

Mrs. E. V. Graves, a leading business woman, owns the dogs. She is successful as the head of a factory here. Brockton folks say she is more attentive to the dogs than Mrs William Carter, of Newport, who got four doctors when her Pomeranian was nervous.

During the hot days the valet, Mr. Beals, fans the little fellows with a specially made $18 electric fan and each dog is given a cold bath at frequent intervals.

The dogs are very active and destructive. They have made away with a big leather covered chair in two days.

"They are all as jealous as can be," says Mrs. Graves. "If you make more of one than another there is a terrible howl and often a fight. They are friendly to children as a general rule. The dogs are worth anywhere from $150 to $1,000 each, but I do not care to sell them. They are a great comfort to me."

MUNCY, PA., Aug. 9.—Rural nursing, which has been tried out successfully in New York and Massachusetts, will be taken up by the women of Muncy and the surrounding country, who have organized the first State Rural Visiting Nurse Associations.

At a meeting held last week Mrs. Julius Smith, president of the Rural Progress Association, was elected president of the association, which is composed of leading women of the town. The offer of the position of nurse was made to Miss Woodward, of this place.

The association proposes to maintain the nurse for the benefit of farmers and those living in isolated parts not financially able to get a trained nurse in time of sickness and yet who need the services of a scientific and skilled attendant.

NEWPORT TOLD THAT U. S. NEEDS AN ARISTOCRACY

NEWPORT, Aug. 9.—William MacDonald, professor of American history at Brown University, delivering the principal address before the Rhode Island Society of the Cincinnati, gave expression to some startling new ideas. The topic of his address was, "An Aristocracy in a Democracy." He said:

"There is needed an aristocracy to lead, a government of the best men. Not an aristocracy of vulgar wealth or hereditary descent, but an aristocracy made up of sound physique, disciplined, intelligent and trained, public-spirited, of cosmopolitan taste and unpretentious good manners."

Girl's Sisters Chase Suitor With Brooms

Dislike Their Prospective Brother-in-Law and Twice Break Up Wedding Ceremony.

CARMI, ILL., Aug. 9.—Twice repulsed in his matrimonial advances, Dan Kelton finds himself owner of a marriage license that may not draw a prize from Cupid's lottery. Taking with him H. H. Clark, Justice of the Peace, Kelton a few nights ago sought to marry Miss Maude Grubbs. The young woman had consented and the Magistrate was getting out his eyeglasses to read the service when two older sisters of the bride-elect appeared on the porch.

The two girls made for their prospective brother-in-law with broomsticks. Kelton in his haste to escape left his hat, and the Justice ran so fast that he overlook the boy.

After a wait of a week Kelton again sought out the girl he loved. He was met at the front gate this time and struck on the head with a broom. The sisters say Maude is under age and that she shall not marry Kelton.

Wind Saves Life of Baby Caught by Kite

String on Toy Encircles Throat of Child and Lifts Him From Earth.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Except for the timely intervention of a gust of wind, Baby Allen McNaughton, 15 months old, might have been hanged by a box kite string until he was dead yesterday afternoon in the presence of his 12-year-old brother, Monroe, and a group of boy friends. As it was he was hanged until he was black in the face, and the string circled his throat with a gash that barely missed the jugular vein. Just as the kite went up the string slackened and twined about the baby's throat. The child was lifted from the ground and was being borne aloft when a sudden cross current slackened the string again. Monroe quickly cut it, releasing the kite and his brother at the same time.

Woman Is Elevator 'Boy' for Apartments

Success in Position Taken as Another Example of Upward Trend of Sex.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—Male residents of the Forbes apartments in Oakland discovered to-day when they entered the elevator that a woman was at the lever. Miss Jeanne Batter, a Forbes employee, had assumed the dtuies of elevator operator this morning.

"Why, how does this come about?" inquired Charles J. Murray, a clubman, as he entered the elevator, suit case in hand, on his way to the Great Lakes on a vacation trip.

"I am running the elevator," answered Miss Batter.

"This is unheard of. Can you run the thing?"

"Well, I'm learning, and I guess I'll get along all right."

Mr. Murray showed relief as he left the car at the first floor, and remarked, as Miss Batter took the car up: "Another example of the upward trend of women."

LANE TAKES UP CUDGELS IN WAR FOR FARMERS

Secretary of the Interior Has Begun Long Battle on Land Grabbers.

VAST TRACTS ARE INVOLVED

Ninety-five Per Cent of Territory Held by Speculators, Who Charge Excessive Rates.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane has started a little war on the land grabbers west of the Mississippi River.

He has taken up the cudgels of the farmer and the homesteader in the great West. His efforts in this direction materially effect the pocketbook of every man, women and child.

Incidentally, he is "bucking" the land speculator. These land "grabbers" have quietly been acquiring vast tracts of land in the West on which the people of the United States have spent over $75,000,000 in irrigation projects. The homesteader has either been ousted through excessive water rate charges or becomes a tenant of the land companies.

Speculators Hold Land.

Secretary Lane finds that the projects were planned for the purpose of aiding the small farmer in tilling his ground, but that in reality 95 per cent of the land is held by speculators, who are charging excessive rates for water which has been sluiced to the land by the Government.

The other 5 per cent of the acreage is owned by the small farmer, but even Government water rates are held by Mr. Lane to be excessively high. Building notes for dam canal and sluice ways add to the cost of upkeep of the farm and conditions, Westerners say, are becoming intolerable.

By going into the question from the very first day that he entered his office, Mr. Lane has become intimately acquainted with conditions obtaining in the West. Daily conferences have been had with delegations from the West. Even the land speculator had his day in court, and his contentions and views were placed before the Secretary.

Farmer Needs Help.

In this connection Mr. Lane announced: "I am for the farmer, first, last and at all times. Naturally handicapped by lack of sufficient funds to carry on expensive farming under the conditions that obtain in the West, the farmer must receive support and co-operation from the Government, if the great West is to be settled and made to be as productive as the East.

"Expensive water will ruin the small farmers and ranchmen. They must have cheap rates and long-time notes, the Government must back them up an extend them credit, helping them over the rough places if necessary, if the various projects designed to benefit the whole people are to accomplish the purposes for which they were constructed.

"Why should this Government spend $75,000,000 for the benefit of private capital? Why should the Government adopt a hard and fast policy, such as has existed in the past, which has kept the small farmer from going into the new regions and taking up Government land? Isn't it time for the United States to extend to the Westerners a little paternal patience, a little more consideration, a helping hand?"

KANSAS SHERIFF RETALIATES FOR HIS ARREST ON SUNDAY

HUTCHINSON, KANS., Aug. 9.—Following his arrest on a charge of violating the Sunday labor ordinance, Koon C. Beck, sheriff of Reno County, announced that he would stop all Sunday labor in this city.

He swore out complaints against 150 persons who work on Sunday, including all street car employees. Beck and a brother are proprietors of an amusement park and shows have been given there on Sunday. Local ministers and church members made the complaint against the park.

Finds Honeymoon Land, Then the Man

Society Girl and New Husband Are Now on Their Way to Tahiti.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Miss Luella Hayne, a pretty Chicago girl, is now, as the bride of Dr. Frank Vance, of Enid, Okla., on her way to spend her honeymoon in Tahiti. Miss Hayne had chosen the spot for the honeymoon before she found the man.

Miss Hayne went through a finishing school which prepared her for all the conventionalities of a reigning position in the smart set, but after a brief whirl this life proved tiresome and she started out on the road that leads "back to nature."

The romance was begun at a house party in New York city given by Miss Hayne's sister.

In talking about Tahiti before she sailed she said:

"The people who are most successful in our centers of civilization are most fettered by it. The reason why people plunge so madly into the economic struggle is largely that they may free themselves from its conditions. Why should not a civilized man be as happy as a native of Tahiti? We are going to find out."

Esther Cleveland Is Prize in 'Love Race'

Princeton Students Are Rivals for Hands of Daughter of Late President.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 9.—Herman Stump and H. Gordon Ewing, filled with a youthful ardor to win the hand of Miss Esther Cleveland, second daughter of Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., and the late President Cleveland, are rivals in "a race for love" which is interesting Baltimore society.

Stump is a son of Judge and Mrs. H. Arthur Stump. Ewing is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson Ewing, of Roland Park.

The two wooers are members of the senior class at Princeton University and both have been guests at Miss Cleveland's home.

Western Canada to Honor First Farmer

Three-Day Celebration Planned as Tribute to Memory of Chevalier LaCorne.

MELFORT, SASK., Aug. 9.—Western Canada is to honor the memory of Captain Louis Luc De La Corne, the first farmer of Western Canada. Chevalier LaCorne introduced agriculture in the Carrot River valley, Saskatchewan, in 1754. At Melfort, in the heart of the Carrot River District, a three-day celebration, August 1, 2 and 3, 1914, will commemorate the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of the first farming in Western Canada.

The business men of Melfort and the surrounding territory have organized to arrange for the celebration, and committees are already at work. The celebration will be unusual and will include a pageant, in which 2,000 Indians will participate. This pageant will typify the agricultural growth of Western Canada, from the days before Chevalier LaCorne explored the Carrot River valley to the present time.

Honeymoon Trip on Motorcycle Planned

Bride Will Be Guide on Romantic Journey Through Rockies on Tandem.

GRAND JUNCTION, COLO., Aug. 9.—A trip across the Rockies from Grand Junction to Denver on a motorcycle will be the novel honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Carson, of this city. They leave in a few days. Mrs. Carson will guide the machine on the entire journey. She was formerly Miss Ethel Kelso, daughter of a prominent Grand Junction fruit grower, and is an expert motorcyclist. Carson will ride on the tandem seat.

The first woman to attempt to ride across the Rockies on a motorcycle is Mrs. E. Frank Windeld, who made the trip with her husband last summer.

Fright Kills Hero as He Tries to Save Life

Man Leaps Into Water After Drowning Woman and Heart Stops From Scare.

STROUDSBURG, PA., Aug. 9.—Mrs. F. A. Keesing, of No. 693 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., was seized with heart failure to-day bathing in Cherry Creek, Delaware Water Gap. David J. Dickenson, a hotel porter, went to her rescue.

Dickenson was unable to swim, and sank with Mrs. Keesing. Both were taken from the water dead.

Two physicians said there was no water in the lungs of either, and that Mrs. Keesing died of heart failure and sickenson of fright.

Portland People Believe She Has Settled in Quiet Town to Start Divorce Suit.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 9.—From the gay life of a popular society woman, a leader in the smartest affairs of New York, Newport and Bar Harbor to pursue an existence in a quiet city, is a change just made by the dashing Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, the former Kitty Duer.

"Why do you suppose she's here?" all Portland is asking.

What can she do with herself all day long, for she is never seen out, save to take a drive, and then always wearing a heavy white veil. Is she here to secure a divorce and will she live that dreary life for one whole year—that's how the gossip runs.

Perhaps she's writing another book. She did write one once, "The Crystal Ball." But while the world conjectures, Mrs. Mackay denies herself to all.

Divorce is without doubt her idea in burying herself here, where she has been ever since her millionaire husband sailed for Europe with their three children.

Mrs Mackay is occupying the home of Adam P. Leighton on Western Promenade, a cottage in comparison with the mansions she has been used to occupying.

It was on June 25 that Mr. Mackay sailed for Europe on the Imperator, taking his children on board from New Jersey, where they had been in his control for several days. He went abroad with never a word to the wife and mother.

So mysterious was the departure that it attracted wide attention. They boarded the ship at night; a detective squad was serving to protect the children from any attempt to prevent their departure and the father registered under an assumed name. The children, who are no doubt longing for their mother as she is longing for them, are still abroad and it is said they will be there for months.

ARCH CREEK, FLA., Aug. 9.—George W. Oden will experiment on banana culture in this county. The numerous demonstrations and experiments in Dade County have been very successful and Mr. Oden is pretty well satisfied that bananas will do well here.

ORPHAN SOUGHT AS WIFE BY MAN WRITING POLICE

Would-Be Benedict Gives Evidence in Letter That He Fears Mother-in-Law.

OAKLAND, CAL., Aug. 9.—J. Keler, of Fresno, is a marrying man. He proved it by writing a letter to "the Chief of Police or the City Marshal of Oakland" and entreating that official to find him a wife. He wants a wife who has means equal to his own—amount not stated—and indicates in his letter that he would expect her to assist him in his merchandise business. He assures all responsible applicants that he is sober and industrious and hasn't a single bad habit.

If you are a maid, a girl or a widow who reads this, you stand a chance of winning the prize, and if you are an orphan, get busy and send your picture to Keler at once. He takes kindly to orphans, as is evidenced from the following excerpt from his letter:

"Will answer all questions and letters from girls, maids and widows, but would prefer to wed an orphan. Will give my business to the one I wed, that she may know I am a square man and will do right."

The following notice was inclosed, with the request that the official post it in a conspicuous place:

"Temperate gentleman would be pleased to form the acquaintance of ladies matrimonially inclined. Give description and full particulars in first letter. Send photo, which will be returned, if desired."

Collects Slow Debts By Parcel Post C.O.D.

Merchant Strikes Novel Plan to Realize On a Number of Old Accounts.

WICHITA, KANS., Aug. 9.—A Wichita merchant has found a new use for the parcel post. This merchant is in a line of business where he carries a large number of small accounts, which the debtors frequently overlook.

When the C. O. D. feature of the parcel post went into effect July 1, the merchant hit upon the idea of using it to collect his small debts. A large number of small boxes were obtained. These were filled with waste paper and on top was placed a receipted bill. Each box was neatly wrapped and tied and addressed.

A 5-cent stamp was required to carry each box and the C. O. D. fee was 10 cents on each package. The next day the returns began to come in, and in nearly every case the debtor paid the amount, supposing that somebody had sent something of value.

2,000 Bees Stampede Crowd at Ferry Slip

Hives Fall From Boxes and Enraged Insects at Once Charge on Commuters.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Two thousand busy little bees raised much turmoil and excitement at the Market street ferry this afternoon. A large packing box containing two hives with 2,000 bees was being shipped to Paulsboro, N. J. When the drayman reached the ferryhouse the box slipped off and fell to the street and burst open.

The enraged bees at once mixed with a crowd of 4,000 commuters and then action began. Lieutenant Butler on a spirited horse rode into the fray. His steed was stung and tried to stampede into the crowd.

Finally the crate was pulled on the ferryboat Camden and when she left her slip the 2,000 bees flew after it, making life uncomfortable for everybody on the boat.

Get Ready for End of the World

Flying Rollers Expect It Soon

So Members of This Queer Cult Await With Uncut Hair and Much Footwashing.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—"Now, brethren, watch night and day, for ye know not when the end of the world draws nigh. It may be tomorrow; at least it will come before the year 1920. It is probably much nearer than that," says Brother Lucien I. Pingree. With long flowing beard that has never been profaned by scissors and with silken locks which also have never been clipped, this resident of Stoneham thus warns all those who would be ready when the First Resurrection occurs. "It is coming soon—very soon—very soon," he asserts. Brother Pingree and his band of adherents all are sure of it. The end of the world is close at hand, they all say.

For this reason the Flying Rollers are launcing a great religious crusade which they hope will awaken men and women to a knowledge of their evil ways and will prepare them for the near-at-hand millennium.

Keep on Living.

If you are one of the elect and alive when this auspicious day comes Mr. Pingree says that you will never die. Your body will take on eternal life and though you will be otherwise possessed of man's normal anatomy and will go right on through million of years living in the mortal mold.

Brother Pingree, who is agent and teacher of the Flying Roller faith in this vicinity, lives at No. 1 Forrest street, Stoneham. His church until recently has been at No. 117 Hancock street, Everett. Now the Flying Rollers are to pitch their tent in Malden and launch a propaganda which aims to halt the world in its mad round of pleasure, barber shops and picture galleries.

It is not such a hardship for the women to belong to the Flying Rollers church, but the men have troubles of their own. Their discipline forbids anyone to have his hair cut or to enjoy the pleasure of lying back in a tonsorial chair while the artist with the razor does the rest.

Males Never Cut Hair.

The male brethren never have the corners of their hair or of their flowing beards rounded. "Thou shalt not," says the church discipline. Then there is the ceremony of the washing of feet, which takes place on certain occasions, when elders and elderesses lave each other's pedal extremities and thus conform to other Biblical injunctions. The Flying Roll is a book written by the great Roller prophet, Jexreel, mentioned in the Scriptures as "to come on earth." He came and was here in 1875, wrote the Roll and died about twenty years ago. Since then the Flying Rollers have read his text with scrupulous care and followed closely in his teachings.

The Flying Rollers believe in the law and gospel. That is, they follow literally the teachings of the Bible. A man who is faithful to the end will live forever. The Bible says that, and the Rollers take it literally.

144,000 in the Elect.

Of all the people alive, 144,000 (mentioned in Revelations, Chapter 14) shall be the elect who are to live during the thousand years when Christ is again to be on earth (during the First Resurrection). Then this chosen 144,000 shall enjoy Heaven still with their earthly bodies while the rest of humanity that was, shall minister to them as "ministering spirits."

"The world of wickedness will soon cease. A new world will appear as soon as Christ comes, which will be very soon (I can not give the exact date, but it will be before 1920, there is no doubt about that)," says Pastor Pingree. "In that world there will be no longer this struggle for life. Wonderful fruits and flowers will grow everywhere along the road sides—fruits and flowers more wonderful than we get from hothouses now. Then the earth will be Heaven for a thousand years.

"We believe that those who are faithful to the teachings of our religion will share that thousand years with Christ, wearing their mortal bodies, then clothed in immortality.

"It is no hardship not to cut your hair or trim your beard," says Mr. Pingree. "We tie it up and tuck it in, and by not cutting it or rounding the corners in any way, we are obeying the letter of divine law."

Here Are the Tenets of the Flying Rollers

Thou shalt not shave.

Thou shalt not cut thy hair.

Thou shalt not have thy picture taken.

Be faithful and thou shalt join the 144,000 true believers who will live forever.

Remember that the millenium will be here—probably in a year or so.

Thou shalt not tattoo thy arms.

The prophet is James J. Jezreel. Follow his teachings.

Feet washing among the brethren and sisters is practiced faithfully as the Bible and extracts from the "Flying Roll" dictate.

Prepare for the first resurrection which is coming soon.

Use of Fireproofed Cotton Goods Urged

State Fire Marshal Says Stores in Kansas Sell No Other Kind.

TOPEKA, Aug. 9.—Harrison Parkman, State Fire Marshal, believes that stores ought to sell only fireproof cotton goods.

In the new State fire textbook the Fire Marshal is urging that every Kansas man and woman refuse to buy any but fireproof cotton goods and that they adopt the German method and fireproof all cotton materials.

The Fire Marshal believes that this action would decrease the number of deaths by fire in Kansas fully 50 per cent and it would make a big decrease in the number of fires in the homes of the State.

WOMEN BUY LAND ONE-THIRD CHEAPER THAN MEN

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 9.—After hearing from women of the Council of Clubs the Finance Committee of the upper house of the Council has killed the ordinance to advance $1,000 of the $12,000 set apart for the purpose of making a start on the contemplated women's reformatory at Leeds.

It developed that the $1,000 had been asked by the Board of Public Welfare as a first payment on thirteen acres of ground it proposed to buy at Leeds at $500 an acre.

The women made fun of the business abilities of the Welfare Board, and said that they had already secured an option on 96 acres close by the thirteen at $171 an acre.

U. S. EDUCATION EXPERT SAYS ILLITERACY GROWS

BOULDER, COLO., Aug. 9.—That in only two States of the Union has the ideal democracy in education been even approximated; that every year in the United States almost 70,000 illiterates are sent out into the world to make their way; that there are in the country to-day 5,615,000 persons over the age of ten who can neither read not write and that almost 50 per cent of the rural teachers of the country have not had a high school education, were among the startling statements made by United States Commissioner of Education Claxton in an address on "Democracy and Education."

For MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

BELTS of white kid, lined with colored ribbons or silk, are dainty accessories to the all-white outdoor costume. One style, a wide belt of dull kid, which fastens together with pearl snap fasteners and has two wide sashes at the side, is lined with shell-pink taffeta ribbon. Another sort of white lined belt shows a piped edge of colored kid to match the lining, and a white kid buckle piped with color.

No more than in grown-ups is there any lack of variety in wearing apparel for children. Coats, frocks, hats—each shows interesting little touches and carefully worked-out details.

Children of all ages are wearing their skirts unusually short just now, while as for the waist line, it may be anywhere above or below the normal waist line, for the use of the normal line has a tendency to make the figure look older, and the chief characteristic of any frock between 4 and 16 year sizes should be its youthfulness.

* * *

Women of to-day love to array themselves in fragile robes of white tulle bordered with white fox and to load their necks with pearls. It is in a way a white season, and all the white things that are now most fashionable are expensive. I never remember having seen so many necklaces and ropes of pearls worn in the daytime as now; it is a sort of mania with women of fashion.

* * *

An automobile rainproof (waterproof) and dustproof silk lap robe is a beautiful affair—green on the one side and white on the other and bound with green leather. It is so light that it could be used in summer without giving warmth and yet would furnish the desired protection for dresses. In winter it would be just as useful spread over a heavier robe.

* * *

This reminds me of the latest raincoat—the lightest (in weight) article of its kind—made of silk mounted on a rubber lining. It is very soft and folds easily into a little pocket-case six inches long. It is of a beautiful shade of dark blue and most elegantly made.

* * *

One of the most beautiful felt hats I have seen for men came with the latest importation from England. The felt has body, yet it is the softest, silkiest and smoothest of felts, folding easily into any sort of a lump without a wrinkle to tell of its rough usage afterward. It is for the traveler, and is to be carried in a case three by four inches—a regular vest pocket affair. It takes but an instant to pat it into shape, and it retains its form perfectly until refolded.

Black velvet neckbands in the Marie Antoinette style are as popular as ever, but some of the great art jewelers of Paris are making some attractive bands in deep blue velvet rimmed with sapphires. Needless to say, these neckbands are exceedingly expensive, quite as expensive as an ordinary necklace of precious stones, but then they are immensely chic and with white summer dresses they give the most artistic effects it is possible to imagine.

* * *

The fashion for thin white frocks made of plain and colored materials has had extensive vogue this summer, and many of these gowns made of costly and admirable material are now to be had for a few dollars. Think what good-looking house gowns they make for the winter evening; they also serve for day hours when one must attend weddings or receive at afternoon teas, and the women who do few of these things find such gowns excellent for informal theater parties.

Even the much abused white skirt with its flowered taffeta coat can be utilized all next winter for the theater and for restaurant dinners and suppers if its sleeves are made elbow length and its neck is cut open in front.

* * *

Inexpensive glass beads can be worn to give the right tone of color to the all-white costume. Opaque beads are sold in chains sufficiently long to go about the neck and drop in a V-line in front—a line which is artistic and much more becoming than the round neck line. These beads come in various shades of green and are especially effective in jade color. They are also sold in yellow, red and blue.

* * *

Attractive evening caps are made of white tulle. They consist of a puffed crown, edged with a box-plaited frill that turns smartly back from the face. They are trimmed with pompons of stiff tulle at the side. Other pretty evening caps for summer wear are made of silver or gold tissue, mounted on China silk, and banded with fluffy, soft white marabou.

* * *

There was a time when the making of a fashionable girdle was a feat for the nimble fingered. Now the most modish girdle is made of a strip of taffeta silk, plainly fastened about the waist, edged on each side with an inch-wide frill of knife-pleated silk. The girdle is made without folds, and is loosely worn. It hooks in the back, under a flat bow or buckle, and is eight or ten inches wide.

* * *

The "bungalow apron" is popular with the brides who like to appear "housewifely." It is an all-enveloping apron, with elbow sleeves and square neck, which buttons from neck to hem in the back and is neatly belted in at the waist. It can be worn over the frock to keep it spotless, or, if the day is sultry, it can be worn instead of a frock and thus serve the purpose of two garments in one.

These aprons are made generally of plain, serviceable materials. One attractive sort is of khaki, the belt, pocket, cuffs and neck piped with red cotton. Another is of thin blue and white gingham with pipings of blue lawn.

The Fad of White Mourning

White mourning, which has been gaining ground for months, is a sensible fashion for the sultry days of August, and is worn more naturally now than it was in the winter and spring. Then it attracted attention, and was therefore shunned by many women of conservative taste. Now, when all the world wears white—all the American world, at any rate—white crepe and other mourning fabrics are inconspicuous.

The woman who wears white mourning must remember that she must wear nothing but white. White and black in no wise indicate mourning, and no matter how many attractive frocks she sees which combine white with black, she must remember that white mourning must be all white.

The use of white mourning crepe for trimming should be as cautiously indulged in as that of black. Too much crepe suggests showiness. But as for trimming material, and one of the few allowed to the women in mourning, crepe holds an important place.

'HAREM GOWN' IS NOW RAGE DRAPED TROUSERS GIVE NAME

Greek and Orient Combined in Costume; More for Drawing Room Than Street.

The latest Parisian gown for women, the "Harem," is here. It is illusive, alluring and bewildering, this gown of cobwebby tissues which is worked out in an exquisite maze—the color of California poppies dripping with dew—the dew being illustrated by quantities of the finest cut crystal trimming.

The Princess of Arabian Night fame may have worn some such a costume when she weaved the various legends which saved her from being tied in a sack with three or four raging cats and tossed into the Bosphorus.

The gown, which combines the most ultra of Parisian modishness with the languor of the Orient, is not planned for street wear, it is rather for the drawing room or boudoir.

Sheer and transparent voluminous trousers disclose white silk stockings heavily embroidered in brilliants. The trousers are not gathered at the instep, but edged with the same crystal trimming which falls over extremely high-heeled, cloth-of-gold slippers. The only note of contrasting color is in the draperies of the bodice.

The gown has its greatest charms when the wearer is seen in silhouette against a brilliant light. Then there is all the grace and beauty of the Greek dancing figure.

These same costumes, made up in more opaque and darger materials are being worn on the boulevards and in the cafes of the French capital. But it is not expected they will become of general vogue in America.

SHOCKING DRESS AMMUNITION IN DUEL OF WOMEN

At Least That's the Opinion of London Writer in Discussing Craze for Display.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Since a woman correspondent in The Times wrote at length of the "orgy of undressing" among women it has been rather amusing to note the different theories put forward by men and women in newspapers to account for the feminine fashion to wear fewer clothes. Side by side with comment for and against on the craze for "leaving off" have been remarks on the daring character of modern modes and the airy fashions that obtain for women.

Stockings of diaphanous silk, slashings and liftings of the skirt to display the leg halfway to the knee, showing every movement, and the low necked afternoon frock with a V shaped opening filled with filmy lace have all been under discussion.

One correspondent suggested that women were engaged on "an extensive advertising campaign."

Two women writers have referred respectively to "the return of the prude" and "the triumph of common sense," while a third has taunted men with regretting the passing of the petticoat because there is for the male no piquancy and mystery about the tight skirt. Man prefers, she implies, the fiting provocative skirt.

The most novel explanation, however, is advanced by Mr. Godfrey Dean in The Daily Dispatch, which no other has yet offered.

"The explanation is," he writes, "that the woman-feminine, as I may so call her, finds it necessary—owing to the changed attitude of men toward women brought about by militant suffragism—to distinguish herself by a definite display and assertion of her essential femininity from the woman suffragist, or at least, the suffragist of advanced or militant opinions.

"I do not for a moment think that in thus calling on masculine attention by making the most of her physical charms the woman-feminine is acting deliberately on conscious thought. On the contrary, I think this alluring display of feminine curves and form by means of transparent and clinging gowns is sub-consciously inspired by the events of the last twelve months or so, which have made men more critical of women.

"In her natural repugnance to being mistaken for what she is not—a suffragist—the woman feminine is displaying her charms. She cannot very well wear a label; she cannot very well declare herself to strange fellow travelers for what-she is; but she can and does endeavor to distinguish herself from women of whose conduct she disapproves.

"The more the woman suffragist asserts herself the more necessary it is for the woman-feminine to assert herself. It is woman's silent duel, and dress, or should I say undress, is playing a big part in it.

Many Lives Saved As Train Is Ditched

Forethought of Towerman Averts Crash Between Specials by Taking Chance on Tragedy.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Scores of lives were saved to-day when a towerman in Burnham, Ill., threw the Ohio River special on the Pennsylvania Railroad into a derail and averted its collision with a through Wabash train from St. Louis. The train took the ditch at high speed. The Pennsylvania locomotive was overturned in the crash, but aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman, no one was hurt.

A moment after the Pennsylvania train hit the derailer the Wabash train clicked across the frogs at the track intersection less than 1,000 feet away.

Kneeless Stocking Now California Fad

Pasadena Society Women Emulate Example of Co-eds of Leading Eastern Universities.

PASADENA, CAL., Aug. 9.—Emulating the fair co-eds of some of the leading Eastern universities, a number of Pasadena society women are now wearing the kneeless stocking and the custom gives all promise of becoming the fad in the Crown City's smartest set before the opening of the coming winter social season.

The "kneeless stocking" is nothing more or less than men's half hose, and, according to those who have discarded the ordinary long feminine stocking, so much comfort and satisfaction is being derived by the wearers of the kneeless hose, which comes no higher than the calf of the leg, that it is doubtful if they ever return to the usual style of stockings worn by the fair sex.

With the adoption of the new fad, men's furnishing stores in Pasadena have had a rush of business in half hose, with the fair sex of Pasadena the purchasers. At the department stores the finest grade of men's silken hosiery is being shown, with the bright colors most in demand.

Among those who have discarded the full length for the kneeless stocking none are more enthusiastic over the superiority of this style than Mrs. J. Marcus Rothingwall, president of the Pasadena Pansy Club.

$16,500,000 Gems in Buckingham Palace

Extraordinary Precautions Are Taken to Protect Jewels Against Burglars.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—King George has a great idea of his responsibility in regard to the jewels at the various royal palaces, and from time to time has them recatalogued and revalued. Those at Buckingham Palace were recently assessed and declared to be worth $16,500,000.

It is said that there is scarcely an object in the whole collection with which the Queen is not familiar. New measures safety have been adopted and it would now be impossible for the cleverest burglar in Europe to make an entrance without attracting attention.

An electric alarm was recently added. The police guard around the palace has also been increased.

Town to Draw Rules On Woman's Dress

Morals Efficiency Committee Is Raised to Take Matter Up With Burgess.

ROCHESTER, PA., Aug. 9.—Following suggestions made by D. W. Denton, president of the Rochester Council, Burgess J. M. Cargo will be asked to formulate a set of rules regulating wearing apparel of women who appear on the streets of Rochester.

Denton's suggestions were made on complaints he said had been made to him about the transparency of the gowns worn by young women. A Morals Efficiency Committee was named to take the matter up with the Burgess.

Dressmaking Class To Cut Cost of Living

Paterson, New Jersey, High School Will Make Every Girl Graduate a Modiste.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 9.—To combat the high cost of living the Paterson Board of Education has established a dressmaking department. In the future every girl graduate will be a trained modiste.

The question of advanced sewing in the high school has been under consideration for some time, but the authorities have not before been in a position to spend the amount of money necessary to carry out their project. A large, light room, equipped with sewing machines, dress forms, electric irons, ironing boards and cutting tables, has been set aside for the new department.

GAY GOWNS ARE SEEN AT PICNICS ON THE THAMES

Net and Lace Are in High Favor Right Now—Telling Effects in Black and White.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—However overelaborated may be the fashions as worn by the "Upper Ten," the women of the stage nowadays set the example of being always appropriately dressed, whether the function be a river picnic or a race meeting.

Some of the frocks seen on the upper reaches of the Thames are particularly attractive. One greatly admired gown was of white voile, worn by Miss Cooper, with a close allover pattern of blue and a center panel of fine embroidered batiste, with the undercollar and pipings of a darker blue. The prettiest black velvet bows finished both the neck and waist.

Another of dainty pink had broad insertions of embroidery and a black suede belt, while a third was of Paisley voile in blue and fawn. Still another, perhaps the prettiest of all, was of white Irish linen with insertions of lace. The lower half of the skirt and the front of the bodice were in broderie Anglaise, and again there appeared the chic black belt and bow.

Blouses have become more diaphanous; net and lace are all the rage just now, some specially pretty frocks having touches of black on collar and jabot, while others of white French voile are most fascinating.

Watermelons to Reduce Living Cost

Greatest Supply Ever Known Now Being Consumed—Chicago Eats 100 Carloads a Day.

Ham bone am sweet, bacon am good,
Possum fat am very, very fine;
But gimme, oh, gimme,
Oh, how I wish you would,
That watermillion hangin' on the vine.
—OLD SOUTHERN MELODY.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Want to reduce the high cost of living? Eat watermelons—better and bigger and cheaper than they have been for years. The year 1913 is the greatest watermelon year ever known. The crop is moving into town at the rate of 100 cars a day of the juciest, most delicious melons that ever were plugged.

The Florida melons are gone. The Georgia and Alabama bumper crops are fast disappearing. Alabama and Texas are keeping the world happy now counting the slippery black seeds. Next week hurrah for Mississouri and Oklahoma watermelons, and they will linger until September.

Parrot Jests Judge; Then Makes Ruling

Bird Calls Bachelor Jurist 'Papa' and Asks Him 'How's the Baby?'

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—"Hello, papa; how's the baby?"

A parrot decided its ownership in the private chambers of Judge Wade, in the Chicago Avenue Court, by perching on the head of one of two women, who were fighting for the custody of the bird, and directing the foregoing query at the judge.

Judge Wade incidentally is a bachelor. He smiled good-naturedly. Spectators laughed. The two women giggled.

The bird was awarded to Mrs. Clara Gunn, who had been arrested on complaint of Mrs. Mary Krippels. Mrs. Gunn took the bird out of the basement of the Krippels home July 8. She testified the parrot was stolen from her four weeks ago.

Slit Trousers Man Mobbed by Newsboys

W. Lefflingwell Doak, of Pittsburg, a Martyr to the Cause of Fashion.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—A martyr to fashion, W. Lefflingwell Doak, of the North Side fashionable set, was this afternoon mobbed by newsboys in Fifth avenue when he appeared in slit trousers.

Mr. Doak's trousers were of a light check material. The slit extended from the bottom of the legs on the outside to within about six inches of the knee. A glimpse of bright green hosiery, of the long feminine variety, was disclosed. Mr. Doak carried a light bamboo cane and a handkerchief was tucked in the cuff of his right sleeve. He was the first follower here of the style predicated at the National Convention of Tailors at Cedar Point, Ohio, last week.

Doak bore the clamorings of the boys until they began to kick him in the shins. He called for a policeman, and when one appeared the boys scattered. Doak took a car, announcing that he would go right home and change his clothes.

$350 for a Dress Held Not Too Much

Mrs. John Francis Yawger, Prominent Clubwoman, Thinks Sum Is Not Extravagant.

Should a woman be considered extravagant because she spends $350 for a dress? Mrs. John Francis Yawger, secretary of the Federation of New York Women's Clubs and member of many other civic and social organizations, does not think so. "When a woman spends large sums of money on her personal appearance she is reflecting as much credit on her husband as on herself," says Mrs. Yawger. "If her husband can afford to allow her to pay $350 for a dress the public has no call to describe the woman as extravagant."

'Dressed-Up Dude' Thrashed by Woman

Though Man Was Roughly Handled, Judge Fines Masher $25 in Addition.

JERSEY CITY, Aug. 9.—"The women of Jersey City must be protected from dressed-up dudes, who insult them in the street," yesterday said Judge O'Brien, in imposing a $25 fine upon Irving Bendar, of No. 112 Mercer street, Jersey City.

In this case it was the defendant who needed protection. His eye was discolored, his nose swollen and his lip cut, the result of his encounter with Mrs. Viola Brophy, of No. 401 Ocean avenue, Jersey City, whom he had accosted.

WOMEN WHO JOG WIFE UPON A RAIL AWAIT SHERIFF

Illinois State's Attorney Says Volo Vigilantes Who Maltreated the Town Beauty Must Answer.

HUSBAND OF VICTIM TALKS

Believes in Wife and Laments the Fact That His Illness Made Him Powerless to Aid Her.

VOLO, ILL., Aug. 9.—Here in Volo, Lake County, Ill., the women who rode Mrs. John Richardson, the town beauty, on a rail will have to answer to the grand jury. The State's Attorney Ralph Dady, says so.

Gossip caused the trouble. Mrs. Richardson is pretty. Her husband, who keeps the small country store, is a cripple. William Dunnill, a brother-in-law of the wife, was a frequent caller.

The village women descended on the Richardson store, dragged her out on July 14 in the evening, set her astride a rail and bore her, struggling, screaming, almost raving, through the main street of the little town, climaxing the incident by dumping her into a mud puddle by a roadside and warning her to "pack up her traps and go," meaning thereby an ultimatum that she must forever leave Volo.

And, paradoxical as it may seem, all of this happened within forty miles of Chicago.

Slips Away During Night.

After the vigilantes had dumped Mrs. Richardson into one of the various mud puddles which abound in the vicinity, the victim emerged from her oozy bath, went by a circuitous route back to her husband's store, conferred with him and slipped away during the night.

It was impossible to employ an automobile, buggy or other conveyance the night she left, and to remain over until daylight was out of the question, because members of the mob had warned Mrs. Richardson that if the sun rose upon her in Volo again they would tar and feather her.

Her husband witnessed the abduction of his wife, but, being unable to rise, could render her no assistance.

It is estimated that at least half the male population of Volo witnessed the hazing of Mrs. Richardson. In fact, it is said that the women who committed the outrage had previously taken their husbands and brothers into their confidence and that the proposition had been indorsed in family council.

It was expected that Will Dunnill, brother-in-law of Mrs. Richardson would interfere in her behalf, but he left Volo a few hours before the attack. Therefore, Mrs. Richardson's husband being disabled, and her brother-in-law being absent, she was without champion.

Husband Defends Her.

Just before Mrs. Richardson's flight from Volo, her husband gave her $1,500.

To a newspaper man, Richardson said:

"My wife is a good woman. She is not guilty of the charges the other women make. I won't believe it. A woman who has cared for me during my invalidism for the last nine years, who married me when I was an invalid, knowing there was no hope of my recovery, would not be guilty of what they charge.

"And to think that I was helpless to save her from the indignities which were heaped upon her. Her clothing was half torn from her and amid jeers and cheers and the throwing of mud and stones, she was ridden through the streets. It was an act of Middle-Age barbarism and hardly worthy of women of Illinois, who have just obtained the right to vote."

Meanwhile the women of Volo, who are supposed to have played the role of vigilantes, are calmly awaiting developments.

"Any time the Sheriff wants us he knows the road to Volo. We're not going to run away," they say.

Heiress on Lone Hunt for Gold Seeks Mine Grandfather Found Plans to Do Own Prospecting

Miss Frances Leighton, an heiress of California, who is prospecting through a section of the Sierra Madre Mountains in search of a gold mine which she believes her grandfather, a "Forty-niner," discovered, but never made known. Recently she heard of the reported "find" and, securing a miner's outfit, staed alone on the perilous trip through the mountainous wilds in search of it.

Miss Frances Leighton Shows Same Intrepid Spirit of the Argonauts of '49.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—With the same dauntless spirit exhibited by her grandfather during the California gold rush of '49, Miss Frances Leighton, one of the wealthiest and most prominent socially of the younger generation of Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, is on a prospecting tour through the Sierra Madre Mountains to-day in search of a gold mine she had learned her grandfather discovered but never developed.

For many months Miss Leighton planned the prospecting tour before leaving to carry it out. Topographical bureaus supplied her with maps of the mountainous territory through which she planned to make her tour and several veterans of the gold stampede not only advised her against the foolhardiness of the prospective journey, but told her that there was one chance in a thousand of ever greeting civilization again if she lost herself in several untraveled sections of the mountain region that as yet have never been thoroughly explored.

Nevertheless, Miss Leighton had great confidence in the belief that her grandfather did find the mine somewhere in the mountain fastness and she determined to find it, if it did exist, at any cost and without taking into consideration the hardships that confront her.

Miss Leighton, according to reports which have reached her home town, is to-day prospecting at or near the West Fork Canyon, twelve miles beyond Mount Wilson.

Grandfather Killed.

Her grandfather, John Easton, was one of the first of the thousands of New Englanders to reach California, after a perilous journey across the prairies following the report of the discovery of gold in that State.

Soon after reaching San Francisco, he left with his wife and daughter and a partner and established a camp at Sierra Madre. Easton left the camp one day on a prospecting tour and never returned. Three days later his partner went out to search for him. He was found crushed to death by falling rock.

Before his death, however, he managed to draw roughly on a piece of paper what is now believed to be the location of the mine his intrepid young granddaughter is searching for.

Miss Leighton some years ago received a letter from her grandfather's former partner containing the piece of paper on which he had drawn the outline of the supposed mine. It was on receipt of this letter and diagram that Miss Leighton planned to go in search of the hidden gold.

After months of careful study of the many maps, topographical bureau reports and advice from old-time miners, Miss Leighton treated herself to a complete miner's outfit and started on her tedious journey up the mountain.

To Work Alone.

She will do the entire work alone, staking her own camp, preparing her meals, making surveys and using the pick and shovel whenever she believes she has struck the right trail.

Her outfit includes several changes of clothes, a heavy pick and shovel, a mountain mule, or pack animal as they are called in that section of the country, a complete dining and cooking outfit, a pack of playing cards which will afford her her only amusement while practically a prisoner in the wilds, needles, thread and many other useful and necessary articles.

She wears most all the time a pair of regulation top trousers, similar to riding breeches, with canvas leggings and a plain but heavy mountain shirt.

If the gold mine really exists, every one of the young woman's friends believe that she will not return until it has been found.

Raze House While Occupant Is Away

Workmen of Grade Crossing Commission Destroy House of Man Who Blocked Work.

CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Aug. 9.—While John Barber was in Boston this afternoon, a wrecking crew, under orders of the special grade crossing commission for Central Falls, demolished a cottage house he owned on Cross street, and then started in to saw off a corner of the Barber Livery Stable nearby. When his land was condemned, Barber demanded $5,000 for the property, but was allowed only $3,500. The grade crossing commissioners sold the cottage to Nicolas Berteozzi, but Barber would not let Berteozzi on the premises.

DENVER IS READY TO GIVE KNIGHTS ROYAL GREETING

Thousands of Templars Pour Into City, Which Is Lavishly Decorated for Conclave.

DENVER, Aug. 9.—Thousands of Knights Templar are already here for the thirty-second triennial convention, and it is estimated that when the convention formally opens Tuesday next more than 100,000 Knights and their friends will have arrived.

All buildings are decorated in honor of the Knights, as are private dwellings. The municipal and other public buildings have been elaborately ornamented and great arches have been built over many of the streets. Thousands have been spent upon decorations and illumination. Denver has spent more than fifteen times as much on its plans for the Knights Templar than it ever before expended upon any one convention.

Sun to Shine All Night.

At Eighteenth and Champa streets the huge figure of a Knight more than 60 feet in height has been erected. A searchlight will play upon it all night. At Fourteenth and Champa streets a "Colorado Sunset," a marvelous electrical display, has been built. It shows the sun sinking below the rim of the mountains. Twenty monster searchlights are placed behind the "sun," throwing their rays into the sky to resemble the rays of the sinking sun.

Over the Isle of Safety at Broadway and Sixteenth street, a reproduction of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem will astonish the visitors. It measures 50 by 80 feet, and is lighted by searchlights on the tops of nearby buildings.

Every arrangement possible has been made by the railroads to bring the Knights and their friends into Denver. More special trains will enter Denver than entered Washington in the same space of time for the inauguration. The Pullman Company has reserved large space of ground on the outskirts of the city for a "Car City," where the special cars and special trains will be parked, and where those Knights who so wish may live in the cars. Sanitary arrangements will be perfect. Stores of various kinds for the convenience of the car dwellers have been established.

Two trainloads of automobiles from New York, sent here by New York Knights, have already arrived, and carloads of automobiles from other cities are arriving daily. These have also been parked on the outskirts of the city. More than 500 special trains and cars have already arrived. According to the railroad schedules, when the visitors really commence to flock in a special train will arrive every eight minutes for forty-eight hours.

Every State Represented.

From August 1 to-day more than 2,000 automobiles reached this city. More than 1,000 other cars are on their way here. The delegates to the convention are from every State in the Union, and from Alaska, Honolulu, Philippines, Canada, England, Scotland and Ireland.

As the special trains began to arrive, some 2,000 Colorado Knights ranged themselves at the station to escort the new arrivals safely to their hotels. Every hotel room in Denver has been rented.

On Tuesday next the grand parade will be held. More than 50,000 Knights will be in line. Their white plumes, costing $15 each, will altogether be worth $600,000. The regalia of the Knights on parade will be worth more than $1,000,000. Sixty-five bands will march with the Knights, the fees to the bands alone amounting to $22,000. Some 600 Knights' commanders will be mounted on picked horses from the ranches of Colorado and Wyoming.

Men's Farewell Kiss Mistaken for Fight

Ardent Osculation at Railroad Station Causes Commotion Among Passengers at Gate.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Smack!"

A score of persons hurrying to and fro in the Pennsylvania Railroad station yesterday stopped short.

"Smack!"

The sound was repeated. Turning in the direction from which it seemed to emanate, the curious among the persons in the station saw two well-dressed young men in each other's arms.

Both men were of athletic build and none of the persons who stopped to watch their antics from a distance cared to interfere. When it seemed as if the taller of the two was about to be thrown, they separated suddenly.

Then the gates to the train shed were thrown open and an announcer called upon all intending passengers bound for Jamaica, L. I., and points east to go aboard the waiting train.

That seemed to be a signal for a recommencement of hostilities.

"Smack!"

Sure enough. It sounded again distinctly, but there was no mystery about the cause this time.

"Good-bye, Pierre," said the taller man; "don't forget to write." And a fourth time they kissed before parting.

Mends Own Socks To Let Wife Vote

Illinois Husband Consents to Do Washing to Prove Housekeeping Isn't Hard.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Just to prove to an expectant world that he was a good husband, Wayne Colby stayed home, mended the socks, tended the children and washed dishes while his wife cast her vote in the first election under the universal suffrage law recently enacted.

"Just to show that it is not such a terrible thing for a man to stay at home and do the housework on the occasional voting day," said Colby, "I thought I would help Mrs. Colby out with the washing."

The first woman to cast her vote in the State was Mrs. Fannie Coleman, of Wamac, near Central Illinois. She was accompanied to the polls by her husband, O. W. Coleman, and both voted for Village Trustees.

NATURE AIDS IN BEAUTY DISPLAY AT PACIFIC FAIR

Picturesque Location Will Add to Grandeur of Palaces of Mammoth Panama Exhibition.

By HAMILTON WRIGHT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—The palaces of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition have been planned upon a massive scale to conform with their impressive natural surroundings. The site of the exposition at Harbor View lies within the city limits as a crescent upon the shores of San Francisco Bay, just inside the Golden Gate.

No more picturesque location, nor one more appropriate to the celebration of a great maritime event could be imagined. On the south, east and west the grounds are encircled by towering hills of varying contours rising successively from 250 to 900 feet above the sea level. Upon the north the site opens out upon the harbor of San Francisco.

Site Natural Amphitheater.

The central portion of the site lies slightly above the sea and is encircled on three sides by gently sloping ground; within a short distance from the boundaries of the site these slopes change to steep hillsides and thus the site becomes the floor of a huge amphitheater from whose sides the exposition will be seen stretched out below. To the east and south the residence section encircles the exposition grounds, and to the west and southwest the site embraced by the wooded slopes of the Presidio military reservation, dark with cypress and eucalyptus and interspersed with occasional vistas of green valleys.

The exposition buildings, built upon an axis east and west, will face the bay upon the north; they will parallel the stream of the great incoming traffic of the world through the western gate of the United States. Ships entering the harbor will pass before the exposition grounds.

The harbor itself will be a part of the great theater upon which will be staged the world's jubilee and the Golden Gate will be the entrance to the theater.

A marvelous panorama will be afforded visitors on ships coming through the Golden Gate. As one looks from the harbor he will see there main groups of exposition buildings. There will be the great central group comprising the fourteen exposition palaces to be devoted to general exhibits; there will be the group upon the left hand or east end devoted to amusement concessions and covering sixty-five acres; this will be the "midway." The right-hand group upon the Presidio Military reservation and nearest the Golden Gate will be devoted to the pavillions of the States and foreign nations.

Tropical Boulevard Feature.

The main group of buildings will lie between a tropical garden or boulevard running east and west along the fringe of hills nearest the city upon the south, and the esplanade along the shores of San Francisco Bay upon the north.

The tropical boulevard, to be known as the "Alameda," will be 1,300 feet in length and 300 feet wide; it will be glowing with fountains, lagoons, statuary peristyles and arcades and, secluded from the winds of the bay, it will be transplanted with a profusion of semi-tropical trees, plants and flowers, including the orange, banana, olive, myrtle and every variety of palm. The east end of the Alameda will open out with a plaza upon Van Ness Avenue, one of the principal boulevards of San Francisco. The west end upon the Presidio will be surmounted by a commemorative arch of triumph.

The prevailing color tone of the exposition will be an ochre, a tawny buff, several shades removed from white, but in the distance giving the effect of white, but will not be glaring under the brilliant sunlight of California. In the courts there will be a marvelous blending of colors; Pompeiian red, strong Italian blues, vermilion and orange will predominate. The court system is unique in that it will permit each architect, artist or sculptor to present some distinct conception without clashing with the exposition architecture and coloring in its entirety.

City Babies Win Over Those From Country

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—City-bred babies triumphed over those from the country in the Twentieth Century Baby Show held at Piasa Chautauqua near Alton, Ill. The prizes went not to the prettiest babies, but to those who scored highest in physical and mental efficiency.

First place in Class A for babies from eighteen months to three years, was won by Cooper Stanton White, of Alton. In Class B for babies from six to eighteen months the winner was Gilbert Craig, of East St. Louis.

Of the eighteen babies entered, none scored less than 946. None of the country babies entered won a prize.

Uses Boot as Strop; Shaves With Knife

Pioneer Indiana Man Has Never Owned Razor, Mug or Barber Soap.

CONNERSVILLE, IND., Aug. 9.—Zaccheus Adams, Jackson Township, Fayette County, has shaved himself twice a week for 54 years, but never owned a shaving mug, a razor, a strop or a hone. It is Mr. Adams' pride that he keeps his razor, an old Wade & Butcher cleaver, twice as big as a common razor, in the finest trim with the least trouble of any man in the county.

He wears old style, high-toped boots and still has one pair which he bought 26 years ago. Wishing to shave, Mr. Adams first puts on these boots. He then smacks the razor blade back and forth along the leather leg of the left one for a minute or two. His next operation is to moisten his face with rainwater—no perfumed soap for him—and then he just shaves.

Prince Chased by Laundress She Asks $50,000 on Love Notes He Is Gone on His Honeymoon

Miss Freese, a California girl, who at a Secret Marriage Became the bride of Prince Sultkowski, of Austria, and a Snapshot of the Prince.

Sultkowski, Who Won Rich Girl and Had His $100,000 Debts Paid, Is Accused.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—An angry laundress from Vienna is in Los Angeles looking for Prince Stanislaus Sultkowski, the noble Austrian who came here several months ago, wooed in his gallant way and won the beautiful Miss Marie Louise Freese, had his debts of $100,000 paid by Father-in-Law Freese, and received from the same source an annuity of $20,000.

The laundress, Mrs. Clara Melcher, declares that the Prince brought her to this country on the promise that he would marry her.

After a hasty, private marriage, the noble Prince and his American Princess disappeared. The father-in-law says they are "not in the country," and no more.

Los Angeles society wondered at the quiet wedding. An elaborate church ceremony had been planned, but the plans were abandoned at short notice.

She Asks Federal Aid.

Society was in the midst of this wonder when entered Mrs. Melcher. She appealed with her story to the United States immigration inspector, and was supported by Adolph Danzieger, a lawyer. The Prince declared, Danzieger said, that the woman had annoyed his family in Austria, and to get her away from Vienna so he could return home with his American wife, he had written her to come to America.

An attorney, who was first approached by Mrs. Melcher and then retained by the Prince, said he suggested to Mr. Freese, the Prince's father-in-law, a payment of five or ten thousand dollars in settlement of the woman's claims, but Mrs. Melcher, through her lawyer, declared that she would have $50,000 or nothing. She has love letters which she says prove her claims.

The Prince and his American bride are believed to be on their way to Austria where Stanislaus is taking his Princess without fear of being molested by the insistent laundress.

Prince Lauds Girls Here.

The Prince is lieutenant of the Second Dragoons of the army of the Austrian empire. He came to America in December and lost his heart to the girls of America, whom he likened to "the flowers of the spring." He is a nephew of the Grand Duke of Biritz. His home is the Castle Tresternitz, near Markburg, Austria.

The following tribute to American girls, of which the Prince delivered himself, was widely published:

"They are splendid, charming graceful and fresh like the flowers of the spring. The girls of Europe generally have followed outdoor sports. They are mostly large and strong often the equal of their husbands in strength.

"My idea of a girl is found right here in America. I have been no hospitable [illegible] many of them [illegible] to trimness and the wonderful manner in which they wear their clothes have 'got me going,' as you say. Their figures and their style surpass the Europeans. Their dignity and grace and the democracy I have found in so many are winning, and I do not blame Europe's noblemen for coming to America for their brides."

ALL STATES TO SHOW POULTRY AT KNOXVILLE

Exhibition of Best Breeds To Be Feature of National Conservation Exposition.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Aug. 9.—Birds for the poultry show that is to be held in connection with the National Conservation Exposition in this city during the months of September and October are coming to Knoxville all the way from California. Word of the coming of the California birds has just been received by the poultry department.

Interest in the poultry show is country-wide. From almost every State in the Union will be brought to Knoxville poultry of different kinds. Already it is assured that the poultry show will be the biggest thing of its kind ever held in the South. It will be in fact as well as name "The Madison Square Garden Show of the South."

Textile Exhibit a Feature.

A most comprehensive exhibit of the great textile industry of the South is assured for the exposition. Progressive manufacturers of Greenville, S. C., have just signed up for a large amount of exhibit space in the All-South building of the exposition and the greater part of that space will be devoted to the textile industry.

In addition to the Greenville textile manufacturers a number of other concerns of like nature in the South, from Knoxville and elsewhere, will make exhibits, and thus this industry, constantly increasing in importance in the South, will receive great attention. The different processes through which cotton goes from the seed to the loom and after will be strikingly shown in the different exhibits.

Veterans to Visit Fair.

The Department of Massachusetts, Grand Army of the Republic, will spend at least two days in this city in September. The stop will be made by the Union veterans either on their way to the G. A. R. encampment in Chattanooga or while returning from that city.

Word of the intention of the Massachusetts men to visit Knoxville has been received from General Thomas J. Ames, of Leominster, commander of the department. For General Ames the visit to Knoxville will have an added interest. Fifty years ago he participated in some of the engagements in the vicinity of Knoxville, and since that time never has been back to see where he fought.

The Department of Massachusetts is coming South in two special trains from Boston. The veterans will travel in style. They will be extensively entertained during their stay in the exposition city. It is planned to have a large number of veterans of the Confederate army in Knoxville on those days so that they may extend to the men from the North the right hand of fellowship and greeting.

The acceptance of the Massachusetts men to visit the National Conservation Exposition is only one of a number of acceptances received by the management to the invitations sent out by them generally to G. A. R. men, posts and departments.

BACHELOR, 107 YEARS OLD, GIVES SINGLE LIFE CREDIT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Daniel Turner, a veteran of the Civil War, residing at Santa Monica, who celebrated his one hundred and seventh birthday to-day, thanks his judgment in remaining single for his long life and apparent good health at this advanced age.

"My life was never blighted by worry or sickness because I never married," said "Uncle" Dan. "Married men die younger than bachelors. Sometimes death is a welcome relief to the man who gets a modern wife."

SUNDAY AMERICAN'S SPECIAL CABLE LETTERS RECEIVED FROM ALL THE GREAT CAPITALS OF EUROPE

LIVE LORD JOINS IN A REAL PLOT OF GAIETY GIRLS

Film Play Proves a Success, but London Is Startled Because It Contains an Idea.

By ALAN DALE.
Special Correspondent of The Sunday American.

LONDON, July 25.—There's a real lord in the production of "The Girl on the Film" at the Gaiety Theater. He is programmed as Arthur Wellesley, but in real life he is Lord Langan, and—"a chaming chap," as they say over here. I mention this circumstance, you see, conspicuously, because it's good to get anything real in musical comedy, even a lord. But the "nobility" can do no better than stick to George Edwardes. He not only provides brides for the nobility, but he gets the nobility into his cast.

Lord Langan seems to be a pleasant young man. Nobody could possibly guess that he is more than the program says he is. It is a great thing to be able to conceal one's nobility, isn't it? Mr. Wellesley does it. He is blithe and debonair, and he wears evening clothes, with a gray stripe down the trousers. Perhaps a gray stripe down the trousers is a secret emblem of nobility.

There is a plot in "The Girl on the Film"—a real, solid, substantial, made-in-Germany plot—and this is so unusual that George Edwardes provides a booklet for each person, setting forth his plot in narrative form. You get so in the habit of "dropping in" at any old time to a George Edwardes show that you never dream of a plot. Why a plot? Lest you should miss this one, Mr. George Edwardes places it under your very eyes, as it were. It begins like this: "Max Daly (Mr. George Grossmith), manager, author and actor, is preparing a new play for the cinema theaters, under the title of 'Napoleon and the Miller's Daughter,' in which he is to represent Napoleon. His manageress and leading comedienne is Miss Euphemia Knox (Miss Connie Ediss)." Simple, isn't it? Almost guilelessly Gaiety!

The musical comedy is rather interesting, because it deals with the cinema business, which, as you know, IS quite a business. A "Vioscope" company arrives, and arrangements are made for taking the film of the picture drama, "Napoleon and the Miller's Daughter." You assist at the making of the film, and in the last act you see the very film cinema'd that you've watched in the making. This struck me as a mighty good idea and quite a novelty for a musical show. In fact, I've heard many people declare that they didn't care overweeningly for "The Girl on the Film," and I attribute this to the fact that it contains an idea. How is it that a musical comedy dares to contain an idea?

Moreover, this film-taking business contains the plot. The leading lady, who is to play the miller's daughter, throws up her part, and Freddy, the heroine, takes her place and is recognized later by an irate father. Freddy is a very pretty girl, disguised as a boy, so—you see your Gaiety I apologize for even suggesting as much as I have done of the plot. But I felt it was me dooty, inasmch as "The Girl on the Film" is novel.

It is almost sauerkrautishly German in its presentment of sponsors—"from the German Rudolf Bernauer and Rdolf Schanzer, with music by Walte Kollo, Willy Bredschneider and Abert Sironay!" Poor George Edwardes, who has to make a bluff of doig something English for English people, heads all these names with a musical farce by James T Tanné." The music is not as good as the plot. It is not epoch-making by any means, but rather pleasant and servating, as it were. It was being done in Berlin while I was there is the "Flimzauber." I carefully avoided it there.

Litte Miss Emmy Wehlen, with whom I chatted recently, is very charming indeed as Freddy, the heroine, and is getting quite Gaietyfied. I prophesy that she will become a great favorite in London, because like a clever girl, she seems to know exactly what London wants. Conns Ediss is all to the fore again with her inexhaustible, warranted-never-to-wear-out cockney dialect and all her old mannerisms. Then there is a somewhat handsome woman called Madeleine Seymour, who is of the large and langurous type. Charles Maude, a relative of Cyril; George Barrett, Robert Nainby and George Grossmith are the best of the men. Mr. Grossmith is an agile and as he himself as ever. All these people, if they dared to try and be like anybody else, would be horribly unrecognized. If you once make a hit at the Gaiety you are O. K. for life provided you never try to do anything different. Novelty and versatility are fatal. You must be yourself until you fall by the wayside.

It's a nice performance, take it all in all, and I'm bound to say I was agreeably surprised, for I had heard that it was not a nice performance. You see, it had a plot to contend with, and in London they are used to aimless philandering. Also, it is German, and English is, of course, more popular.

There was an "ad" on the program that amused me a lot. Really, they are as "ad"-ridden and indiscriminate in London as they are in New York. This was the ad: "So-and-So, Inquiry Agent to the Nobility and Gentry, intrusted with divorce and delicate negotiations in all parts of the world. Go to him if blackmailed, or in difficulties." I thought that almost whimsically amusing.

But "The Girl on the Film" is better than some of the Gaiety Girls, and it seems to have caught on here.

Prince John Is Infant Terrible of Royal Family

Finds Dark Secret of Peeress' Peerless Curls

Youngest Son of King George Is Fear and Joy of Monarch's Household.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—A British prototype of that well-known pair of juvenile stars, the Katzenjammer Kids, is nobody less than Prince John, the youngest son of King George of England. The young Prince is the infant terrible of that tight little island, and mothers and fathers are discussing his widely heralded pranks with horror or with glee, according to the varied temperament of mothers and fathers.

The last story is the best. The newspapers have told it, and it must be so, that a certain lady of high degree was invited to have tea with Queen Mary. It was a pleasant occasion, indeed, taking tea with the Queen.

But when the peeress arose from the table she discovered with horror that golden ringlets of hair, ringlets that had been highly praised by friends and sung by poets as her chiefest beauty, were lying on the floor at the back of her chair.

The Prince, investigating the beautiful ringlets, found out what had been lost to the discriminating eyes of friends and poets. The ringlets came off too easily.

That is only one story. The other day he told his nurse, without so much persiflage, to go to a certain place where snow is unknown. The nurse, instead, went to the Queen with her complaint, and the royal mother ordered her son to apologize. He did. It was a royal apology.

"You needn't go," said he to the nurse.

The boy Prince is very democratic, and when offered his choice of outings he selects visits to public parks, donkey rides, elbow brushing with boys and girls of the middle and lower classes.

The two other sons of the King of England, Prince Henry and the Prince of Wales, are comparatively staid youths. Henry is going soon to Eton, where he will live the life of the ordinary English schoolboy. The Prince of Wales will join a cavalry regiment, with sorrow in his 19-year-old heart that he can not rear a mustache.

HEART IS STARTED AFTER VICTIM DIES

French Physician Tells How Action of Organ Was Resumed by Massage Treatment.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Dr. Bouchon, following in the footsteps of Dr. Carrel, recently succeeded in reviving the normal action of the heart ten minutes after death. In a paper which he will read at the next meeting of the Academy of Medicine Dr. Bouchon says:

"After a motor car accident I was called in and immediately perceived that the victim had been killed instantaneously. Despite my assurance that there was no doubt as to his death, the friends of the victim insisted that a desperate attempt should be made at resuscitation, and about ten minutes after the last breath I decided upon a surgical operation having diagnosed traumatic rupture of the heart.

"I opened the thorax and in 50 seconds laid the heart bare. I immediately found about a pint of blood in the pericardium and a heart wound about two and one-half inches long on the inner surface of the left ventricle. After suture, I proceeded to apply my method of reviving heart action.

"After filling all the cardiac cavities with a special organic liquid, I made a rapid tacheotomy and introduced oxygen by the tracheal tube, while my assistant performed artificial respiration tractions.

'I then began alternate auricular massage of the heart, and at the end of about a minute I clearly perceived that the heart had resumed tonicity, and, to my great surprise, it continued to contract by its own true action.

"Radical pulsation then became perceptible, and after I had closed the thoracic flap the heart continued to contract for 35 minutes. At the end of this time the contractions suddenly ceased, and all subsequent efforts to re-establish them were in vain."

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Arthur Bourchier, the well-known English actor and his wife, whose stage name is Violet Van Brugh, have just returned from Germany, where they played "Macbeth" for cinematograph purposes. It is understood that the couple received $5,000 for their work, which occupied a week.

High though the remuneration was, Mr. Bourchier found the task not so easy as he had expected it would be. He complains that he had to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning in order to catch the proper light, and that the necessity of waiting about in costume for hours was most unpleasant.

JAPANESE PLAN TO MAKE TOKIO BUSINESS CITY

Mayor Would Have Capital Become Industrial Center of the Empire in Near Future.

Special Cable to The American.

TOKIO, Aug. 9.—A bigger and busier industrial Tokio is the dream of Baron Sakatani, Mayor of the capital of the Japanese Empire. Osaka, great industrial city to the south, has made giant strides as a world port, and Mayor Sakatani is anxious that Tokio should show more rivalry to Osaka, which he calls the Manchester of Japan.

The Baron is convinced that China offers a great field for Japanese enterprise, and that the commercial development of Tokio is necessary so that Japan may take advantage of this field. Manchuria and Korea also loom up as possibilities for increased Japanese commerce, but in order to get this trade Tokio must devise some more convenient means of transportation than by Kobe or Tsuruga.

Would Open New Port.

The first step, the Mayor thinks, should be the opening of a new port at Nayoyetsu, in Echigo, north of Tokio. In its commercial development Tokio suffers from the disadvantage of higher wages and more extravagant habits of living. Tokio has been a city of consumption rather than of production, and it is the national center of ease and pleasure.

"Everything comes to Tokio," Mayor Sakatani says, "but seldom is anything sent from Tokio elsewhere. The disadvantages to be overcome are the high cost of fuel and labor. If Tokio is to secure the Chinese field for her manufactures, we will have to improve our system of water communication and settle various phases of the local labor question."

Since the revolution in China the demand for foreign manufactures has grown enormously, and Japan should be in a position to take her share, according to Mayor Sakytani. An important step to that end is the making of Tokio a greater commercial and industrial center and cultivation of the friendship of China by promoting mutual understanding between the merchants of both countries.

Explore for Colony.

Scrutiny of the Pacific coast of North and South America and the South Sea Islands for the promotion of productive colonization, is the announced object of the Japan Exploration Society, recently formed for the general purpose of inaugurating Japanese exploration.

The first expedition will leave in September for a two years' cruise on a 115-ton schooner. The course for the cruise includes the Izu and Bonin Islands, the South Sea Islands, the coasts of Brazil and Chile and the Pacific shores of North and South America. The schooner will then visit Cuba and the coast of Africa, and later make her way through the Mediterranean Sea. On the homeward trip she will touch at several points in India and Australia. S. Takeda, a graduate of the Japanese Nautical College and a seasoned sailor, will be the captain of the little vessel.

The Exploration Society is composed of a number of influential Japanese and it has the support of Fleet Admiral Ito.

Professor Nagelschmidt has used the treatment for reduction of obesity and says that forty patients thus treated were deprived in the aggregate of 500 pounds of unwanted fat.

Laborer in Rome Unearths Huge Quantity of Money Buried 2,500 Years Ago.

ROME, Aug. 9.—There was a bad slump this week in the market for old coins, which has been very active, owing to the interest taken by King Victor Emmanuel.

In digging a trench here for a sewer, a laborer struck and broke a large clay pot. A stream of coins poured out. He filled his pockets and ran away, but was caught.

Altogether there were 7,600 coins of the early consular period, dating back about 2,500 years, and all well preserved.

AVIATOR LATEST SUITOR OF FAIR IRISH PEERESS

London Society Is Interested in Hamel's Attempt to Win Heart of Lady Victoria Pery.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Whether an engagement caps the romance of Lady Victoria Pery, the fascinating daughter of the Earl and Countess of Limerick, and Gustav Hamel, the aviator, remains to be seen, but the mother publicly smiles on the young flying man and the progress of the courtship is watched with interest.

During the spring, the peer's daughter went to London to fly and the good looking Hamel escorted Lady Victoria cloudwards for $25. Soon afterward, society was mildly thrilled to see Hamel in the train of Lady Limerick and her daughter at many smart balls.

Lady Limerick invariably asked for invitations for Hamel and he was always seen dancing and supping with the mother and daughter. Little serious import was placed on the strange combination until the last night of the opera. A prominent box party at Covent Garden comprised Lady Victoria and Hamel in front, with Lady Limerick chaperoning beamingly in the background.

Since then gossip has engaged the young people, but no announcement is forthcoming from the family.

Lady Victoria has been one of the most conspicuous girls in society since her debut. In one year she was engaged twice; once to Duke San Antona and afterward to the Hon. Luke White, Lord Annaly's son. Both engagements were abandoned and the Irish beauty continued her career of heart breaking.

How to Lose Your Tan, Freckles or Wrinkles

(From Woman's Tribune.)

A day's motoring, an afternoon on the tennis ground or golf links, a sunbath on the beach or exposure on a sea trip, often brings on a deep tan or vivid crimson or, more perplexing still, a vigorous crop of freckles. A very necessary thing then is mercolized wax, which removes tan, redness or freckles quite easily. It literally peels off the affected skin—just a little at a time, so there's no hurt or injury. As the skin comes off in almost invisible flaky particles, no trace of the treatment is shown. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at your druggist's and use this nightly as you would cold cream, washing it off mornings. In a week or so you will have an entirely new skin, beautifully clear, transparent and of a most delicate whiteness.

Wrinkles, so apt to form at this season, may be easily and quickly removed by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 ounce dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pint. This is not only a valuable astringent, but has a beneficial tonic effect also.—(Adv.)

Young Marquis Still Loves Daisy Markham

Northampton, Who Paid Actress $250,000 Heart Balm, Writes Letters That Shock Family.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—The actions of the young Marquis of Northampton, who recently paid Daisy Markham, actress, $250,000 as a balm for her wounded affections, is giving his noble relatives a great deal of concern of late.

It is an open secret among members of his family that the Marquis is still in love with the young actress.

A few days after his refusal to bid her good-bye in the high court the day of the trial he sent her a note bearing the seal of Northampton, which was full of good wishes and hopes for her future and profuse apologies for his apparent ill treatment. He impressed on her that what he had done had been due to great pressure and was not dictated by his heart.

According to one report current here, he has been meeting the actress, but the young woman declined to renew their former friendship. It is known that three weeks ago he surprised and shocked his sister, Lady Loch, by announcing that he intended to rent the old family estates and give up society for three years.

FRANCIS JOSEPH BEST LINGUIST OF ALL RULERS

Austrian Monarch Speaks Eleven Languages Well—Emperor William Ranks Second.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.
Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Statistics just published here by an investigator show that Francis Joseph, of Austria, is the greatest linguist of all reigning sovereigns. He speaks eleven languages fluently. They are German, French, Hungarian, Czech, Polish, Servian, Croatian, Ruthenian, Dalmatian, Roumanian and Italian. All these living languages he needs for practical purposes within his own patchwork empire.

It was in view of preparing him for his high position that as a boy 70 years ago he was taught the tongues of all his subjects. He also acquired a gentleman's knowledge of Greek, Hebrew and Latin.

German Emperor Second.

The German Emperor comes second as a royal linguist, being master of German, English, French, Russian, Polish and Latin. He holds, however, that the German is the only language in which to express a great mission.

Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria knows all the Slavic dialects, but not many languages. He speaks French, English, German and Russian. King Peter of Servia is similarly equipped.

King Nicholas of Montenegro is not a linguist. He has, however, a sufficiently liberal education to have been able to act as tutor for his own five daughters and two sons. The Greek King Constantine's linguistic attainments are not of a high order, although he speaks French, English and German in a halting way.

Alfonso Speaks Only Three.

King Alfonso of Spain was educated like an English prince, more attention being given to sports than languages. He speaks French, English and German. The Czar of Russia is not much better equipped except in Slavic dialects.

The three worst linguists are the Pope, the King of Italy and King George of England. Pius X never expected to be Pope and was not trained for the position. King Victor Emmanuel has not the language faculty. King George thought that the education of an English gentleman consisted in being able to read Horace and ride to hounds. Had he not the venerable authority of Oxford for this?

GENERAL DEVELOPMENT THEME OF JOE BEAN IN NEW SET OF EXERCISES

If You Weary of Special Treatment for Abdomen, Back, Waist and So on, Here Are Some Fine New Stunts That Will Help You All Over.

By JOE BEAN.

SO far in my little specifications for building men, I have prescribed exercises that would take care of and improve some particular part of the body, showing just how that exercise would do the work and explaining its benefits.

And now there appears to be a growing demand among people who know me and are interested in my work for some general exercises that will be of universal benefit to the digestion, the muscular system, and, in fact, to the entire anatomy.

So I am going to give my readers a series of articles on general exercises.

At that, it must be understood that in taking abdominal exercises, or waist exercises, or back exercises, the part specifically brought into play is by no means the only part benefited. The arms and the legs, and frequently the neck, all profit by the strenuous work imposed on the waist or other sections.

As regards typically general exercises, there are many games that might come well under that head. Home work—pottering about the garden, mowing the lawn, and all that sort of thing—also may be regarded as general exercises.

A "Setting Up" Drill.

Following is a list of excellent general exercises, of the "setting up" style so much favored in the army and navy as a means of keeping the men in fine trim from head to heels. I don't know any set of exercises that will prove of more benefit to the entire body than these.

No. 1. With the hands on the hips crouch on the left leg, bending the knees and then extending the right leg to the front, keeping the body rigidly erect and maintaining the balance by carefully applied muscular effort. At first you may have to hold on to something, but that should be abandoned as soon as possible. Always bend the knees as far as possible before straightening out the right leg, and in rising bring that leg back to the bending position and then rise to the full height again. This should be repeated, extending the left leg an equal number of times, after which the exercises should be alternated. It will be sure to result in soreness of the thighs and hips at first, as no man regularly applies any such exercise as this except in this way. It's a great thing for bodily poise and balance.

Take a "Full Squat."

No. 2. Bend the knees as far as possible, to the "full squat" position, it is called, and at the same time raise both arms high above the head. Then rise to the first position, lowering the arms as you straighten the legs. This is fine for practically every set of muscles in the legs, feet and ankles. Also, it expands the chest, and the balancing necessary to accomplish the feat brings out much development of the muscles in the stomach, waist, back and shoulders. Even the neck comes in for its part, holding the head erect and not permitting it to bob forward, as you will find it inclined to do.

No. 3. The same as No. 2, except that the arms are extended horizontally while the "squat" is being accomplished. It is peculiarly adapted to the development of the chest, arms and shoulders, also the back and neck muscles. That part of the drill may be taken standing up, but in conjunction with the "squat" it is a far better all-around exercise. In all these exercises be sure to hold the body rigidly erect, and strive to acquire "form" and grace in the work. The head should not be ducked or bobbed forward; the shoulders should not be humped or drooped, and there should be a certain snap and style about the whole thing that is not only good to look at, but also aids greatly in the development.

And Some Jumping Here.

No. 4. Start in the usual position, arms at sides, heels together, toes turned slightly outward. Jump the feet apart, about three feet, landing on the balls of the feet, and at the same time swing the arms outward and upward. Then with another jump bring the feet together and swing the arms down to the sides, resuming the first position. Repeat about 30 times. It's great for the legs, trunk and shoulders and makes the blood dance in the arteries in a very comforting manner. Also, it is fine for the breathing apparatus.

DILLON TO BOX KLAUS IN TWELVE-ROUND BOUT

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 9.—Jack Dillon yesterday accepted terms for a 12-round bout with Frank Klaus at Boston, August 26. Those men have been recognized generally as the best of the middleweights during the last year. Klaus defeated Dillon in San Francisco, the bout being a 20-round affair, and Dillon squarely beat the Pittsburg champion here in a 10-round bout last May.

JOE BUSH FIELDS WELL.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—One thing Leslie Joe Bush, of the Athletics, can do just a little better than anything else except pitch and slug is cover first on a wkward hits to McInnes. He fields his position as well as any hurler in the American League.

UMPIRES OFFER AID TO M'NULTY IN LEGAL FIGHT

Many Officials Willing to Render Financial Assistance Against Jack O'Connor.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—The ever-present "baseball war"—manager-player vs. umpire—may be blasted should ex-Arbitrator Jack McNulty win the $35,000 assault suit against Manager Jack O'Connor, of the St. Louis Federal club. Umpires all over the country have read news items of the O'Connor-McNulty run-in on June 28. Said officials also have learned of the heavy damage suit filed by McNulty against the Federal League of St. Louis, charging that the blows delivered by O'Connor have permanently retired him from the national pastime.

The indicator handlers, according to a statement by Jack McNulty, further averred by his attorney, George Burleigh, have offered McNulty financial assistance in fighting his cause for the small fortune to pay for the punches whipped over by the Federal manager. The major league arbitrators, backed by umpires in the minor and semi-pro associations, combined in subscribing a large sum to benefit the cause of McNulty.

The men behind the plate, in dire sympathy with the former field judge, have written McNulty many letters, requesting him to accept financial aid. But McNulty or Burleigh will not deny or affirm the query that they have granted the request.

Verdict Will Be Important.

McNulty, as far as publicity is concerned, is as much in the dark as a cave without a light. Jack refuses to be interviewed. His spirits seem crushed, while the old happy-go-lucky greeting formerly delivered by Mac has passed to anywhere but McNulty.

When asked regarding the aid offered by his associates in the profession, McNulty replied: "You've got the dope. Why should I say anything?" That was all. McNulty positively refuses to announce the names of his non-invited rescuers, but from a little slip it is learned that such prominent judgment passers as "Hank" O'Day, "Silk" O'Loughlin, Klem, Rigler and other big arena cavorters are in direct sympathy with McNulty's pursuit for justice.

Should McNulty be returned the victor in the $35,000 damage suit, it is generally supposed that managers, whether owning teams in a third league or in the big stadium, will act a bit more carefully before attempting to down the reign of the field officials.

Baseball mixups between managers, players and umpires date back to Noah's Ark. The most recent bit of thrills to greet St. Louis fans was the Stovall-Ferguson affair. George was barred from the field for a lengthy period and fined $100. In 1912 Klem and Roger Bresnahan had a fistic encounter.

Magee in Mixup.

Again, in 1911, Sherwood Magee and Finneran exchanged wallops. Mr. Umpire received a few knocks which deprived him of several teeth, while the triumphant boxer paid for his actions by the usual publicity, suspension and diminishing of the bank roll.

It is not always the team managers who go after an umpire's scalp and life. Wrathed players seldom fail to take their inning with the arbitrator should the official seemingly rob the athlete of a point. The fact that the umpires have come to the assistance of McNulty proves that the fraternity of field Pooh-bahs is a most outreaching body.

Should the preliminary tactics favor the former fall guy, there's a good chance for the war on umpires to cease forever.

McNulty firmly believes that he's through with the game forever. Suffering from severe headaches and intense, internal pain, Mac declares he will never be the same jolly fellow as of old.

SUPERBAS KEEP STORK BUSY.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 9.—Zach Wheat, Carlisle Smith and Herb Moran, of Brooklyn, have all become proud fathers since the season opened. Taking it all around, the ball players have kept Dr. Stork busy this year.

AND NOW SOME EXERCISES THAT WILL BENEFIT ALL PORTIONS OF MUSCULAR SYSTEM AT ONCE

NO. 1. Hands on hips, heels together. Bend the knees to the "full squat," and then extend the right leg to the front. Draw back the extended leg and rise on both legs to first position. Same exercise with left leg extended. Then alternate.

NO. 2—Hands at sides, bend the knees in the "full squat," at the same time raising the arms above the head. Resume first position, maintaining a rigid balance of the body, head and neck.

NO. 3. Hands at sides, heels together, toes out. Come to "full squat," raising arms rigidly to a horizontal position. Rise to first position, lowering arms smartly.

NO. 4. Hands at sides, heels together. Jump the feet apart about a yard, lighting on the balls of the feet, and swing the arms up sharply from the sides. With another jump, bring the heels together again and bring the arms down to the sides at the same time.

GEORGE DIXON BEST FIGHTER, SAYS NAUGHTON

Bob Fitzsimmons Was a Close Second, in the Opinion of Dean of Experts.

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Now it is a "fight fan" living in Windsor, Ont., who wishes to draw me out on certain points.

In a letter dated July 15, he says: "Seeing in last Sunday's paper that you answered a question put by some fight fan as to who, in your opinion, was the most perfect Australian boxer, I wish to ask who you consider was the greatest fighter of all time. If you do not care to answer that, would you please state who you consider the greatest negro fighter of all time?"

I'll do the best I can, and to show you I am not inclined to shirk the issue I will answer both your questions.

It so happens that in replying to the question I reply to both, for the greatest fighter who ever lived, according to my idea, was a negro. And his name was George Dixon.

It will be as well for you to remember, Mr. Fight Fan, that this is merely an expression of individual opinion. There are no standards by which these questions can be worked out and settled with mathematical exactness. Nor is there anything on the face of the earth on which both laymen and experts disagree more than the question of merit in pugilists. This because fighting appeals to the emotions. It arouses enthusiasm and creates heroes and ideals.

I have no doubt there is still in existence a smattering of very old-timers who will snort at the idea of Tom Sayers and Ned O'Baldwin and Donnelly and Cooper being passed over in a discussion of this kind for a slim-limbed yellow skin like little Dixon. But he is my choice. And I feel that Bob Fitzsimmons runs him a close second.

* * *

I NAME George Dixon because I believe he triumphed over a greater number of formidable opponents than any other man I ever heard of."

Some fighters had their run for the championship goal when the men they had to cope with were on the downward grade. This was notably the case with Jim Jeffries. He defeated Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Corbett and Peter Jackson when each of these was well past his prime in a fighting sense. Whether or not he could have beaten them had he met them at their best I do not know.

I do know, however, that the world was raked and scraped for opponents for little Chocolate Dixon. He met the best men of the various fight-fostering countries when they held the championships of their various sections, and when it was made as clear as possible that there was nothing left in their own countries that could compare with them. And he went through them all like sunlight through a chink in a barn.

The same arguments apply largely in the case of Fitzsimmons. Taking his opponents man by man he can not show so big an army of worthy conquests as Dixon, probably, but old Bob overcame more handicaps than any other fighter I have knowledge of. For this reason I consider he falls very little short of George Dixon in point of distinction as the world's greatest fighter.

* * *

HERE is one fired at me from a point nearer home:

"How does Willie Ritchie compare with the lightweight champions who preceded him?"

Up to date he does not begin to compare in the slightest. Ritchie is still young and lacking in experience, however, and may loom up as more of a world-figure in pugilism when he has pitted himself against men like Tommy Murphy, Freddy Welsh and Leach Cross. Wolgast, who preceded, as a champion was a wonderful fighter bfore appendicitis marked him for its own. His handling of Battling Nelson on Richmond Field was something to live in memory even if little Ad had never accomplished anything else.

Battling Nelson in his prime was an interesting performer. And it was his negative qualities that made him worth while. There never was a man within twenty pounds of his weight who could stand such rough usage and keep pressing steadily forward. He wasn't the most gainly fighter of his class by long odds, but his powers of assimilation covered a multitude of defects.

* * *

JOE GANS was a thorough workman, and a sight of him in action was as great a treat as a student of boxing could desire. He stepped around in a soft-footed way and was never out of position. His manner of ending it all with a downward clip of the right, delivered without drawing back the elbow, was well worth the price of admission.

KELLY AND SHEEHAN SIGN FOR TEN-ROUND FIGHT

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—"Spike" Kelly and Tommy Sheehan, Chicago welterweights, yesterday were matched to fight ten rounds in Superior, Wis., on Labor Day night. They agreed to weigh 145 at 6 o'clock. Fred Gilmore signed the papers for Kelly, who has been idle since he beat Billy Walters at Kenosha.

CUBS BUY NEW OUTFIELDER.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Outfielder Charlie Stewart was purchased by the Cubs yesterday. He comes from the Indianapolis American Association club, and is considered a promising youngster. He will report next week.

KNOCKOUT OF LORE WAS ONE OF RING'S QUEEREST

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—Not a few strange knockouts have been recorded since boxing was first inaugurated, but that one at New Orleans recently when Frankie Russell was given a K. O. victory over Johnny Lore, of New York, was as queer as any.

Perhaps it was the first time in ring history that a man was counted out while outside the ring. Lore was dropped twice by Russell and the next time was pushed through the ropes. His feet caught on the lower rope as he went through, and that much of him remained in the ring, but his body was in the laps of ringside spectators.

Referee Burke started counting the minute Lore's body shot through the ropes. At the count of five Lore was on his feet and at nine-count he had partly clambered in the ring again. He got to his feet and inside the ring just in time to hear the cry of "10 and out" given by the referee.

REDS AFTER HAGEMAN.

DENVER, Aug. 9.—The Cincinnati Reds are after Pitcher Casey Hageman and Second Baseman Hank Butcher, of the local club. Neither Magnate Jimmy McGill nor Manager Jack Hendricks are in any haste to name a price upon these performers.

MAURICE M'LOUGHLIN TOOK UP TENNIS AT AGE OF 13

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Maurice E. McLoughlin, who has made complete the supremacy of the Californians on the lawn tennis courts and rounding out his career by returning the Dwight F. Davis international challenge cup to this country, is a thoroughly representative American player. He is but 23 years of age and he fulfilled his brilliant promise by winning the All-Comers national championship at Newport last August.

McLoughlin was born at Carson City, Nev., January 7, 1890. It was when 13 years of age that he took up the game in which he has won the highest American honors by taking both the national singles and doubles in the same year. This has not happened since 1905, when Beals C. Wright scored on both titles, in the doubles, having Holcombe Ward as his partner. McLoughlin early in his career began to win championships, beginning with the junior titles in San Francisco. In 1905 he entered the California State championship, but did not win an important title until 1907, when he took the San Francisco city championship, and from that time on his rise has been rapid.

PITCHER MARTINA SUSPENDED.

BEAUMONT, TEXAS, Aug. 9.—Joe Martina, pitcher for the Beaumont team, has been suspended for the rest of the season and fined $50 for his indifferent work in a recent game.

JOHNSON WILL DRAW $10,000 NEXT SEASON

Walter's Contract Expires in October—Little Trouble Expected in Signing Twirler for 1914.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The task of signing Sir Walter Johnson, the famed flinger of the local American League team, will be up to Manager Griffith after October, 1913. But the job will not be a big one, in the opinion of those who know Griffith and Johnson.

Right now Johnson is serving the last stanza of his three-year contract with the Senators. He signed the document at the beginning of the 1911 season, after a misunderstanding with James R. McAleer, then manager of the Capital crew.

* * *

JOHNSON is drawing $21,000 for three years' work. He signed that contract after he had reported to the training camp, returned to his Coffeyville, Kans., home and then rejoined the team in the East after the season had opened.

Johnson's value to the Washington club is generally rated more than Ty Cobb's usefulness to the Detroit team. But Johnson will hardly draw down $12,500, the salary Tyrus is alleged to be receiving from the Tigers this season.

* * *

IT wouldn't be surprising if Johnson is slipped a contract calling for $10,000 salary for 1914, or one for $30,000 for service during the next three years. Sir Walter is worth almost any price he asks.

It is Johnson's disposition, as well as his wonderful speed and curves, that makes him a valuable member of the Washington team. The local players have it sized up pretty well, too. As one member of the party said:

* * *

"AS long as Johnson is a member of the team there isn't another player on it who is going to get swell-headed. He's the big noise and is modest about it. For that reason no other fellow on our club, no matter how good he is, or what he does, will have a chance to crow."

Cal Delaney Breaks With Jimmy Dunn

Fighter and Manager Have Hot Argument and Decide to Break Company.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—Cal Delaney, Cleveland's best featherweight outside of championship company, and Jimmy Dunn are no longer boxer and manager. They have severed business and social relations for all time. Henceforth it's one road for one and a different highway for the other.

The climax to the partnership was the leading feature of the Put-in-Bay's gay and sumptuous celebration. That's when the split occurred and where Dunn and Delaney had a feverish argument that lasted several minutes and the result was that Jim refused to have anything more to do with the West Side blonde boy. He claimed that Delaney was becoming more and more unmanageable. Cal debated that he was not a boy any longer and refused to be bossed.

POISONING FROM FOOD

Every Bite May Poison—All Could Be Methuselahs If We Did Not Shorten Life by Self-Poisoning.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uic acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system. This is termed Autotoxemia, or Self-Poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousnes, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition result. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushe stomach and bowels, dissolves the uic acid which has accumulated and exels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALTin the morning before breakfast. Youwill do a better day's work, and with te consciousness that your health s safeguarded against any indiscretionn eating.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is bettr than calomel for constipation and illousness. Acts quickly and more throughly, requiring no cleansing afte-dose; causes no after-danger of salvation; never gripes or nauseates. N other liver medicine is equal to it; dot take the inferior substitute that maybe offered. All druggists should hte the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SAL, 25c. If yours can not supply you, full ze jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage prepaid.—(Advt.)

BIG THREE NOW HOVERING OVER SPORT WORLD

Tom McCarey, Ban Johnson and James E. Sullivan Are Big Powers in Athletic World.

DETROIT, Aug. 9.—Uncle Sam puts it over Russia in several ways. Not the least interesting fact to note, in this connection, is that whereas the most despotic of all great civilized governments has only one czar, the United States at present has no less than three.

First, we have Byron Bancroft Johnson, "Capital I" Ban, dictator in the baseball world; next we have James E. Sullivan, "First Person Singular" Jim, who makes us forget that a sporting goods concern controls our amateur sports; and of late we have Thomas McCarty, of Edwardsville and Los Angeles, "I'm There" Tom, who creates a new champion in pugilism whenever followers of boxing on the coast begin to dig a little reluctantly for their pocketbooks.

Sullivan and Johnson are too well known to need further exploitation, but the rise of McCarey to fame has not been accompanied by any fanfare. Thomas has been gaining notoriety as chief agitator of pugilism out in Los Angeles for six or more years.

His first big move was to bid for the Jeffries-Johnson fight. He next graduated into the clairvoyant world by predicting the downfall of Bat Nelson, a few months before it occurred.

But it 's only in the last two or three years that he has set himself up as a king maker. In this field, McCarey has now reached the stage where he can start a new championship contest regardless of the whether a living title holder is one of the principals.

* * *

M'CAREY did this twice and he's about to pull it again. He began by hanging up a championship belt in the bantamweight division for Monte Attell and Frankie Conley, the latter winning by a knockout. The new title didn't stick because the public had previously come to believe Johnny Coulon was the title holder.

Later, however, he put up a heavyweight championship belt, while Jack Johnson was till conscious and able to be about, without inviting that champion to compete. Lute McCarty won it and a lot of fame, and was on the verge of being recognized as the real thing, when his untimely end occurred at Calgary.

Now McCarney is going into championship making again. Although Johnny Coulon is still alive and is still the accepted titleholder in the bantamweight division, McCarney donated a diamond championship belt to Kid Williams for defeating the French champion, Charles Ledoux.

* * *

SOME class to McCarney's nerve, all right, especially as Eddie Campi has a look-in at the title. Nevertheless the conditions governing the donation of the new belt make for action in the boxing world and for less four-flushing on the part of future champions. The conditions governing the retention of the belt and title compel the holder to defend his honors not less than once every six months in a twenty-round fight.

Also McCarney has amputated another canker from the bantamweight situation in stipulating that 116 pounds ringside shall be the championship figure. Almost every fighter who has sought an engagement with Coulon has come to grief on the weight question. It is interesting to note, however, that McCarney's is the figure for which Coulon has nearly always held out.

* * *

M'CAREY'S attempt to create a new champion in the little men's division, regardless of the existence of a titleholder, will not meet with general approval, however. Coulon is one of the best liked little men in the game and until he resigns or is beaten many will decline to credit a successor.

BRANNIGAN WILL BATTLE MEXICAN IN LONG BOUT

NEWCASTLE, Aug. 9.—Jimmy Dime and Patsy Brannigan left last night for Denver, where, on August 11, Brannigan meets Benny Chavez, Western bantam, in a scheduled twenty-round bout.

Brannigan knocked Chavez out in six rounds in Trinidad, Colo., about three years ago, but the Western sports believe the Mexican has improved enough since to beat Dime's lad. The bout is for a side bet of $1,000.

Before returning home, Dime will get in touch with "Uncle" Tom McCarey, of the Pacific Coast Athletic Club, at Los Angeles, in reference to a bout on the coast between Brannigan and Campi, the native son who has been cleaning up generally on the aspirants for Coulon's crown. If satisfactory arrangements are made, Dime and Brannigan will proceed immediately to the coast.

STAR COLLEGE ATHLETE IS DISCOVERED BY NAPS

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—William ("Hiker") Joy, the Holy Cross pitcher, who joined the Naps, is one of the greatest all-around athletes who has ever been a member of the Naps. Pitching is one of his accomplishments in the realm of athletics.

Joy also played halfback on the varsity eleven, was a forward on the basket ball team and the crack sprinter and hurdler of the college. Incidentally, he was captain of all four teams in his senior year, 1912.

While pitching for his team he also batted in the clean-up position. His last football eleven won eight and lost three games, losing only to Harvard, Yale and Princeton. On the track he won a heat in the New England intercollegiate league games by sprinting in 10 1-5. He was barred from the final because of professionalism.

CATCHER HENRY OUT OF GAME.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—John Henry, Griffith's first-string catcher, will be out of the game for at least a week on account of an injury to his instep. He was struck by a batted ball Thursday.

JACKSON DOES BEST HITTING ON 4 DIAMONDS

Joe Does Best Clouting Playing on Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit and Boston Fields.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 9.—Joe Jackson has hit .400 or better on four diamonds this year, the fields being those of Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit and Boston. At home the Slugging Southerner up to last Wednesday had piled up an average of .441, in the Windy City his record was .419, and in Detroit and Boston it was an even .400. Jackson, on his visits to St. Louis, has walloped the sphere at a .303 clip; at the Polo Grounds his record is .333 and at Shibe Park it is .133.

The Clouting Clevelander, who ranked ninth in the competition for the Chalmers car last season and who is likely to rank higher this season if he keeps up his present timely stickwork, possibly would set a world's record for a batting percentage could he stay at home and bat only against the Washington pitcher. Jackson has torn off 16 safeties in the seven games the Senators have played in Cleveland this year and he only has been at the bat 23 times, the extremely high percentage of .694 being the result of his activities against Walter Johnson & Co. Jackson collected five hits in the two full games the Idaho Phenom pitched against the Naps in Cleveland and his percentage for the season against Sir Walter is .456.

* * *

JACKSON has hit at a .531 clip against the Browns on his home field, .471 against Boston, .412 against New York, .400 against Detroit, .296 against Chicago and .286 against Philadelphia. Up to last Monday he had made 40 runs and 79 hits in the Forest City and 24 tallies and 39 safeties on foreign diamonds. Of the 44 long wallops then to his credit, 28 were manufactured in Charles W. Somers' ball orchard and the rest in other parks.

* * *

Jackson has twice this year come to the bat with the bases full and emptied the sacks of all their inhabitants. The first cruel blow the Southerner struck was in the game of May 10 with the Boston Red Sox. Then he tripled against Charley Hall. The next day the Highlanders played the Naps and in the first inning Jackson hit for the circuit against Heinie Schulz, making two clean-up clouts for him in as many days. On April 30 Jackson drove in both the runs his team made in the game with Chicago which the Naps won, 2 to 1, and on May 19 he was responsible for three of his team's four tallies against Washington, this also being a Cleveland victory.

* * *

Jackson last season led his team in driving in runs and this season it looks as if he would again show the way to his mates. Thus far this season he has put the finishing touches to 58 counters, batting in 52 of these on safe hits, two on sacrifice flies and four on infield outs.

If Cleveland fans want to honor their eminent slugologist their attention is respectively called to the fact that on August 25 Jackson will celebrate his fourth major league birthday. The Naps will then be at home playing the Highlanders. Joe broke into the American League on August 25, 1908, playing with the Athletics against Cleveland in a game that the Naps won, 3 to 2. He made one hit off Rube Vickers in four times at bat and accepted three out of four chances in the field.

MATHEWSON IS GREATEST MAN IN BASEBALL

So Declare Newspaper Scribes at Recent Gathering Held in New York City.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—At an informal gathering of newspaper men in New York the other day the topic of baseball was being discussed. The name of Mathewson figured prominently in the conversation, as is inevitable whenever the national pastime is the theme. After most of the scribes had borne their testimony as to the personal and professional worth of "Big Six," an old baseball reporter put a cap on the eulogies by remarking:

"Matty isn't a mere baseball player—he's an institution."

That remarkable tribute was hailed with delight, as being a most apt explanation of the Giants' great twirler.

There are a number of stars in baseball at the present time who have made and are making a marvelous stand against the inroads of time. Prominent among these may be mentioned Hans Wagner, Napoleon Lajoie, Eddie Plank and Mordecai Brown.

But of them all Matty is putting up the most brilliant opposition to the ravages of the years. The best that the others are doing just now is holding their own. They are holding Father Time off at arm's length, but the old fellow is close enough to them to worry them in their playing. But in the case of Mathewson it is different. Instead of stopping to spar with the old gentleman with the scythe, he is going steadily on—improving his game—mastering his technique and acquiring the supreme artistry of the mound.

This year of 1913, which many had thought would mark the last of his active service, finds Mathewson again at the zenith of his prowess with a little added craftiness. He is an artist and all true artists never cease striving to improve their art—and they never cease loving it. Who can look upon the eager, smiling and boyish countenance of Matty as he stands in the box and say that he does not love the game?

The position he holds in the esteem of the baseball fans and the public at large, which, of course, is the same thing, is unique. If a vote were taken to-morrow to settle the question as to who is the most popular man in organized baseball, there is no doubt that Matty would carry the election by a large majority.

* * *

"WHAT would happen to McGraw?" asked this same old scribe, who had characterized Matty as an institution, "if he were to incontinently fire Mathewson after the manner of Murphy in giving old Mordecai Brown the gate?"

The consensus of opinion was that if McGraw did such a thing he might just as well lock up the Polo Grounds. That is just how close "Big Six" is to the hearts of the baseball public.

But there is no danger of John J. ever doing such a thing. In the first place he is not a Murphy in any corpuscle of his compact being, and in the second place Matty's art will continue in his head long after it has departed from his arm, and as a mere instructor he would be more valuable to McGraw than the average twirler is on the mound.

Why Is a Hard-Working Player?

He Isn't---If He Loves the Game

By O. B. Keeler.

KNOCKING about with a professional ball club, you get one ear full after another concerning "work," "business," "toil," "drudgery," and so forth. And so on.

You might get the hunch that the athletes had set out from very early in their young lives determined to hammer out a living by working at baseball.

That is, you might get the hunch if you didn't travel with them more than one day, and never sat on the bench during a game, and never looked at a game very understandingly, anyway.

In that case you might feel sorry for the hard-working ball player, under contract providing that he must play in order to eat, but not play for any other club than the party of the second part, or whatever party the party of the second part shall assign him to play with.

A good many rather well-meaning and entirely sap-headed persons these days are wasting perfectly good sorrow over the assumed grievous lot of the toiling ball player.

They seem to get the idea that he is playing ball because he has to.

* * *

NOW, take it from one who has seen some little chapters in the life of a professional ball player, the said ball player is playing ball for money because he can make more money that way than he can any other way.

And, above all, he is playing ball because he likes to play ball.

* * *

I RECALL in particular one "Chick" Autrey, first baseman for St. Paul, in the American Association, and the least shade under big league caliber in hitting.

Chick is an extreme sample of the ball player who likes to play ball. When the club is at home, Chick is out on the field in uniform half an hour before his mates get to the clubhouse to dress, playing catch or batting up flies with any stray youngsters he can find about the lot.

* * *

Chick is the first one to start the regular practice. As soon as two or three of the other players get out on the field, Chick gets them lined up for the little bunting game—three or four arrayed in front of a batter, tossing him the ball, which he hits sharply back at them, when they chuck it at each other, under and over and from all sides.

Chick is the liveliest of the bunch, slapping the ball like a juggler; jumping, stretching, scooping—laughing like a kid most of the time.

Chick would practice four hours before the game, if anybody would keep him company.

In the game, he is at the opposition every moment. He is left-handed and fields the bag like Hal Chase—and in every move you read the snap and dash that can come only from a love of the game.

All around the circuit, Chick is known as "that St. Paul guy that loves to play baseball."

Frank Bowerman was the same way when he was with the Giants. Later, when in the Association, the grizzled veteran earned the name of "Young Mike" by his evident keen enjoyment of the sport and his stentorian vocal encouragement of his mates while the game was on.

* * *

A FINE example nearer home is Joe Agler. Joe never could work around that old first sack the way he plays around it. The class of the Southern League in fielding, Joe performs with a speed and dash that can spring only from a real joy in the game. Watch him, next time you go to see the Crackers play ball.

And see if you can imagine Joe as a mere hireling, plugging along to earn his daily bread with the same ambition as a man with a heavy hammer making little ones out of big ones.

Eight out of ten professional ball players enjoy the game of baseball in the same way a sunburned kid on a vacant lot enjoys playing the game. They would be playing baseball for fun if they weren't making a living at it.

Max Carey said of "Big Six" Mathewson the other day:

"Matty always looks as if he'd rather be out there pitching than doing anything else in the world. I never have seen him in a game when I didn't think of that. After thirteen years of baseball as a profession, baseball still is Mathewson's favorite sport."

* * *

I BELIEVE that goes for eight out of ten ball players; certainly for the ball players who are the most successful. They don't "slow up" quickly, these men who love the game. "Slowing up" may be due in some cases to failing legs or dimming eyes. But in other cases it is due to getting stale in the game, because the first incentive is gone—the keen edge worn off.

But take it from the ball players themselves, if you please, no man ever set out deliberately to earn a living by working at baseball.

Every single professional ball player in this country started out in the beginning for one and the same reason.

And that reason was because he loved to play ball.

RITCHIE'S FATHER STAYS IN CHURCH WHEN WILLIE HAS RING ENGAGEMENT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 5.—Willie Ritchie's father, who is down here with his son on an automobile tour, has never seen Willie in a ring.

Mr. Steffens (Willie Ritchie's real name is Geary Steffen), is of a devoutly religious nature and has very serious doubts as to the propriety of prize fighting. As long as Willie is in the business, however, the old man wants him to win.

Whenever Willie is in the ring, his father is in church. He won't go to the ringside for fear of seeing his boy hurt and he can't stay at home with anxiety for society; so he always goes to church and remains there until the battle is over.

MINOR MANAGERS ARE AFTER CAL'S CASTOFFS

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Some one called Manager Callahan, of the Chicago White Sox, the "David Harum" of organized baseball after Frank Chance complained that he was "stung" in the Hal Chase-Borton-Zeider deal, but despite that act minor league managers were in Boston recently to try their hand at swapping with the White Sox leader.

White Tells How He Expects to Win Bout

Whitney Says He Will Make Rushing Attack

By Left Hook.

"I AM out to win the lightweight title," said Charley White yesterday, "but I have a tough 'bird' to beat in Frank Whitney here next Wednesday night. Of course I expect to win, but I fully realize what a worthy opponent I am going to be stacked up against in the ring at the Auditorium-Armory.

"Do you know that up around Chicago all the experts look on Whitney as one of the toughest trial horses in the game. He is a hard man to hit, can take an awful mess of punishment and at the same time is so awkwardly clever that he is hard to make a showing against.

"I saw Frank work with Packey McFarland in McConnell's Gymnasium last Wednesday. Why he gave Packey an awful time for the four rounds they worked.

"After the session was over Packey came over to me and said: 'Charley, old pal, that young fellow will give you a rough voyage when you meet in Atlanta, or I'm a bum judge of a scrapper.'

"Packey didn't have to tell me that. I was a spectator, although Whitney didn't know it.

"But, do you know, I am glad that I saw Whitney work out against McFarland. I got a good line on his style. And I am going to tell you just how I intend to beat him.

"Frank is a rushing fighter. Well, let him start leading and I will counter so fast that he won't know where he is at. I believe that I can pick off or stop any of his leads and counter so hard that he will be willing to let me do some of the heavy work before the scrap has gone over three or four rounds."

With that Charley left us to go back to his training.

* * *

WHITE hadn't eased his way out of the office over ten or fifteen minutes before Whitney came in. When he was told that White had seen him work out against McFarland Frank laughed.

"So he thinks that he can stop me from leading and rushing, eh?" remarked the "Fighting Carpenter." "Well, I'll make him travel faster than he ever traveled before. I have never been floored yet, and if Mr. White thinks that he can stop me I'll bet him my end of the purse on it. And take it from me, I will make a rushing scrap of it, too.

"I'll stick on top of him and keep flaying away with so much speed that he'll wish he was back in that dear old Chicago. He is going to pick off my leads and counter? That's what he said. I should worry. He will have a fine time picking 'em off.

"I was never in better condition in my life and I'll keep going at top speed from the first round to the end. And the end——

"Well, I've got a hunch that I am going to put over a decisive punch. The mill may go the entire ten rounds; but not if I can help it.

"All I ask of White to do is to stand toe to toe with me right in the center of the ring, and if he does I'll guarantee that I'll prove I have a better kick than the one he possesses.

"He says he is going to be the next lightweight champion? Say, I have got that same hunch about myself."

UNUSUAL RULES AND PLAYS IN BASEBALL

(No. 5.) By J. W. Heisman.

NOWADAYS no substitute can get in the game without first reporting to the umpire, and the umpire first announcing to the public and the scorers who the newcomer is and whose place he takes. This rule is all right, but it has only been in existence a couple of years.

Once upon a time, a long, long time ago, the umpire in a big league game had the time of his life in a dispute over this very point with the great and only Mike Kelly. The "King" wasn't catching that day, on account of a bad finger. He always hated to ornament the bench when playing was going on, and as the game was a close one, he was having considerable difficulty in maintaining his patience; in fact, he was looking for most any provocation to jump into the game.

Directly there went up a high foul that went sailing away over toward the stands, obviously quite out of reach of either Mike's substitute catcher or of the first baseman. Instantly Mike sprang from the bench and yelled to the umpire that he was putting the other catcher out of the game and that he was going in at once. After delivering this charming BON MOT—or, rather, simultaneously with it—he took out after the crazy foul and neatly pulled it down. Coming in with the ball he picked up his mask and protector on the way to the plate, and with superb nonchalance proceeded to signal his pitcher for what he wanted.

But the umpire said nay! This was not according to the law and the prophets. Mike dared him to show any rule to the contrary. The umpire couldn't show any, but refused to let Mike make any such dramatic entrance just the same. In spite of the lack of law, Mike finally lost the case before the supreme court of baseball; but one can't help admire his quickness of thought under the circumstances.

* * *

WHEN the batter has made a foul, the base-runner must go back and touch the base he left. If the foul fly was caught, he must also touch all bases intervening between him and the base he left, and if while doing this the opponents get the ball back to the base he left before he arrives there he is out. But if the foul fly was not caught, he need not touch intervening bases.

The runner is, however, supposed to go back to the base he left with reasonable dispatch, and if he does so, the pitcher must wait for him. If the pitcher will not wait for him, but goes ahead with his delivery, the runner has the right to start again for the next base ahead, right where he is and without losing the time to go back to the base he started from. Most pitchers do not seem to be aware that the base-runner has this right, and they do a very dangerous thing when they start in their delivery without giving the runner a reasonable time to go back.

* * *

AFTER the pitcher has taken his position in the box ready to pitch, the batter is not permitted to cross over from one side of the plate to the other. If he does so, he may be called out.

Should the batsman desire to cross over to the other side after the pitcher is in his box, the only way he can safely do so is to step backward out of the box he is in and go around behind the catcher.

* * *

NOT only should the outfield fence not be less than 235 feet from the plate, but the backstop should not be less than 90 feet distant from the plate. This is the rule, but most people are agreed that for the good of the game it is better to have the spectators closer to the field of play than this. It is more interesting and inspiring both to players and spectators to get closer when possible.

But if the backstop is less than 90 feet behind the home plate, special ground rules are an absolute necessity. Now, it would surprise you greatly to know how many captains of amateur teams fail to grasp the significance of this lessened dis tance and what the appropriate rule should be in such case.

When the backstop is 90 feet back, a runner is entitled to as many bases as he can make, but he runs entirely at his own peril. If the passed ball has sufficient force to carry it clear to the backstop, it is clear that the runner should be able to make at least one base while the ball is being recovered, for he can certainly run 90 feet from one base to another while the catcher is running 90 feet after the ball and throwing it back to the diamond. If the passed ball doesn't go as far as the backstop, the runner must use his judgment.

Now, if the backstop is less than 90 feet back, and a passed ball hits it, the high probabilities are that it had sufficient force to have gone on to a backstop 90 feet away had the backstop been back that far. In other words, had the backstop been at the regulation distance, the runner could no doubt easily have made one base on that passed ball. Then why shouldn't he be given the one base?

* * *

STRANGE to say, most captains of fields where the backstop is less than 90 feet away seem to think that in this case also the runner should be made to run at his own peril, when it is their fault, not his, that the field was not laid out according to rule specifications. It must be clear that if the pitcher is so wild, or the catcher so unskillful, as to have a passed ball at a time when there is an opposing runner on base they should certainly be charged up with a demerit for such bad play, and what demerit should or could this be but for the opponents to get at least one base out of it, as they certinly would on a regulation field? But to make him run at his own peril with the backstop, say, within 30 feet of the place means that when the fielding team makes a bad play and has a passed ball that passed ball will very likely hit that near backstop with such force as to cause it to rebound right back to the catcher, and thereby he is enabled either to keep the runner on third or, worse still, to put him out at the plate even, and this on their own bad play and solely through the unmerited help of an illegally-placed backstop. Clearly the runner should be given the one base and be entirely free from the liability of being put out.

Chess Champion Returns to Cuba

Jose R. Capablanca Goes Home Before Series in New York With Duras.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Jose R. Capablanca, who equalled Dr. Lasker's record last week by winning thirteen straight games in the Masters' Tournament at the Rice Chess Club, left yesterday for Havana.

The Cuban champion expects to spend about a fortnight at his home, and is due to return to New York early in September. If then arrangements are made for a series between him and O. S. Duras, of Prague, whom he defeated in the recent tournament after a struggle lasting seventy-five moves, the young master will tarry long enough for that purpose. After that he will depart for Europe.

Frank J. Marshall, the United States champion, is in receipt of an urgent invitation to play in the international tournament from P. P. Sabouroff, former president of the St. Petersburg Chess Club.

Rivers and Wolgast Both After Ritchie

Fighters Agree to Meet Champion For Nothing—Ad Wild To Get On.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Aug. 9.—A unique situation exists in the fight game in Los Angeles. Both Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast, former champion, want to meet Champion Ritchie and have started bidding for the fight.

"All I want is to get into the ring with Ritchie again," said Wolgast. "Any promoter who can stage a bout can name his own terms as far as I'm concerned. If I win, he can give me anything he likes. I don't ask a cent."

"Same here, win or lose," said Rivers. "Whoever stages the contest can keep my share or give it to Ritchie."

In the meantime Champion Ritchie, who is now in the city, says it makes no difference to him whom he fights just so long as he gets his price.

COULON TO DEFEND TITLE AGAINST BOBBY BURNS

ST. JOSEPH, MO., August 9.—Bobby Burns, of Dallas, Texas, signed articles here yesterday for a ten-round boxing contest with Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion, at Omaha September 12.

Burns and Jones in Battle of Invectives

Managers of Arthur Pelky and Jess Willard Laugh at Each Other's Claims.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Tommy Burns, manager of Arthur Pelky, and Tom Jones, who looks after the interests of Jess Willard, are booked to hook up in an interesting battle of invectives and near blows within a day or two.

Jones wants to match Willard against Pelky, but Burns in a telegram yesterday said that Willard must go get a reputation before presuming to challenge a champion.

"Gunboat Smith is the man Pelky wants to meet," said Burns. "Smith beat Willard, and then, again, Charley Miller shaded the Kansas scrapper. Let him get a 'rep' for himself."

This sort of language is the sort that makes Jones glad he is alive, for he thrives on argument.

"When did Pelky whip Willard, or anybody of consequence, until he landed a lucky punch on Luther McCarty?" asks Jones. "Willard can whip Pelky, and Burns can name his own terms. Pelky took one beating from Willard and wants no more."

As Willard holds a decision over Pelky, it is probable that Jones will work that argument and a side bet proposition overtime until Burns agrees to a match between the rival white hopes.

NUMBER FOOTBALL PLAYERS.

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 9.—If the coaches of other colleges agree to it, Coach Al Sharpe, of Cornell, will number his football players next fall. Sharpe is said to be highly in favor of the innovation suggested by Parke H. Davis, Princeton's representative on the rules committee. Dr. Sharpe believes that the reform must come.

REDS CAN USE THIS ONE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—President Lynch, of the National League, in a decision to-day holds that the result of the protested Brooklyn-Cincinnati games of July 11, of which Cincinnati won, 5 to 3, stands as played.

Broken Fingers Can't Stop Cy Falkenberg

Cleveland Twirler Has Been Hurt Three Times This Year, But Continues Work.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 9.—Falkenberg has been hurt three times this year, but has not lost a turn in the box because of his injuries. Boehler, of Detroit, hit him on the pitching arm in April, but Cy kept on winning. Then he had a finger on his left hand broken, but he continued to win. Last week he broke another digit on his left whip, yet has won two games since.

MACK WANTS NEW RULE TO PROTECT BASE RUNNERS

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Aug. 9.—Connie Mack has a new rule to suggest when the baseball magnates gather in the fall. The sphinxlike leader of the Athletics would have the base-runners given more protection and have infielders restricted in blocking tactics.

When an infielder has deliberately blocked the path, Mack believes that the umpire should grant the runner his base. He claims that the use of shin guards by catchers and other protection by infielders makes it next to impossible for a base-runner to get the goal sought unless he has sufficient weight to bowl over the opposing infielder.

OLMSTEAD IS RELEASED.

SPOKANE, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Olmstead who was obtained recently from the Oakland Coast League club, was released to-day by the local baseball club. In his try-out yesterday Olmstead did not show to advantage.

TIGERS GET TWIRLER.

OTTUMWA, IOWA, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Loranzen, a left-hander of the Ottumwa club in the Central Association, was sold to the Detroit Americans for $2,500.

Jeff Smith to Get Big French Plum

Al Palzer May Lose Chance to Box Georges Carpentier in Paris.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—It is reported here that Al Palzer is not to get the chance to fight Carpentier in France this fall, the plum going to Jeff Smith, the Bayonne, N. J., middleweight.

A wire says they are to meet on October 20 in the Circus de Paris, the weight to be 170 and the distance 20 rounds. Al Lippe, manager for Smith, it is said, put one over on Tom O'Rourke, who may have something to say about the fight. Smith, however, is a good card in Paris, where he beat Adrian Hogan, Willie Lewis, M. Bernard and made Harry Mansfield quit in seven rounds. In fact, only Mike Gibbons has the honor of hanging a decision on Smith.

Carpentier will probably outweigh Smith about 20 pounds at the agreed weight, but this will not be such a handicap, according to Smith's admirers.

GABBY STREET WILL BE BACK IN MAJOR LEAGUES

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 9.—Chattanooga fans are already beginning to look over the prospects of 1914. The continued absence of Elberfeld from the battle array has exploded all hopes of a pennant this season.

There is every possibility that Gabby Street will be drafted or sold outright to a major league club, but if he is not it is a certainty that he will not play another season in a league where the maximum salary is but $300 per month. Street is in as good condition as ever in life, and he realizes that he is worth more than the local club can pay him.

CLUBS AFTER CATCHER.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Aug. 9—White Sox officials have made telegraphic offers for Catcher Hargreve, of the Terre Haute club. Pittsburg, the Highlanders and the Cubs also have asked for terms on him, as has an American Association club.

Pittsburg Citizen Doesn't Know Hans

Smoky City Scribe Claims He Is Dr. W. J. Holland, Director of Carnegie Museum.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—Help! Help! Help!

There's a citizen at Pittsburg—a prominent citizen at that—who doesn't know Honus Wagner, of Carnegie, Pa.

"Wagner? Wagner? Is he really, as you allege, a baseball player?"

This was Dr. William J. Holland's reply to a question propounded by David Davies, of The Pittsburg Dispatch. Dr. Holland is director of Carnegie Museum and was said to have received from the king of ball players a letter offering to sell an old uniform for $15. This information came from New York, the editor of one Gotham daily being quite hysterical over the "possibilities" of the story, to use his own words.

When Dr. Holland was approached on the matter he was surprised. "I don't know Wagner," he said, "and we are not conducting a hero fund at the museum. No doubt this Mr. Wagner is quite a wonder in his chosen line of endeavor, and I suppose it is my misfortune never to have made his acquaintance."

"But, Doctor," protested the writer, "did you receive an offer from Wagner—did you receive any old kind of an offer?"

"Man alive!" came the crushing reply; "haven't I just told you that I never spoke to Mr. Wagner, that I never heard him speak, that I never received a letter from him, that I never was called on the 'phone by him—and that I never have given the subject of his old uniforms any consideration at all? Next thing I know they'll be making an old-clothes man out of me."

Dr. Holland was positive that there was no chance of Honus' discarded raiment finding repose within the classic confines of the big building erected at Mr. Carnegie's expense.

"The whole thing is arrant nonsense," he said. "I don't know who is responsible for the circulation of the 'story' (I believe you newspaper chaps call it that); but I do know that the entire yarn has been made out of whole cloth."

Poor old Honus doesn't know where he is since the circulation of this uniform-museum story. Vowing that he never has made any tender of his worn-out scenery, he said yesterday that he guessed "somebody was trying to kid him."

"When I get through with a uniform," said he, "there's not much left of it. Still, if Dr. Holland, the Carnegie Museum or any other body or place wants what remains, I'll sell for $15. And I'll be making money at that."

WENDELL, WELL KNOWN ATHLETE, QUITS FOR GOOD

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., Aug. 9.—James I. Wendell, Wesleyan, 1913, a member of the American team at the Olympic games in Sweden, announced here to-day that he had decided to withdraw from athletics. He said he wished to retire while "good" rather than to be forced out by declining ability.

He has accepted a position to teach at Pottstown, Pa., next year.

HEAVYWEIGHTS TO MIX IN 20-ROUND GO ON SEPT. 23

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Aug. 6—Arthur Pelkey, white heavyweight champion of the world, to-day matched to meet Charley Miller, the San Francisco motorman, in a 20-round bout at Vernon, Cal., on the night of September 23.

This will be Pelkey's first engagement since his bout with Luther McCarty in Calgary, which ended in the death of the latter.

Luck Begins to Break for Griff

Injuries Gave Boehling a Start

By W. J. McBeth.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Manager Clark Griffith of the Washingtons is a firm believer in luck, at least as applied to baseball. The "Old Fox" certainly has had his share of bumps. With the least iota of breaks or good fortune he would have landed at least two pennants for Frank Farrell. This year he might have driven the Athletics to cover had his fine, aggressive young team not been so seriously handicapped by injuries to players.

Griffith has had some pretty tough luck in his career, and particularly this sason. He seems a man destined to always be on the threshold of great fame without being able to find the latchstring. He has had many buffets; but he has likewise enjoyed some few favors of fickle fortune. These came along now and then as blessings in disguise. And not the least of the lot by any means has been Joe Boehling, the young southpaw who so far has been the sensation of the major leagues this season.

It was only last spring that the "Old Fox" deplored the decay of competent left-handed pitching. "Fork-hand fling," opined Griff, "has become a dead art." Why Griff should have been so melancholy on the subject when two such able experts as "Rube" Marquard and Eddie Plank were on hand to refute the insinuation is very hard to figure. It may have been that all his life Griffith had been disappointed in digging up a portside of real merit when at times such a one would have spelled victory.

* * *

BUT at the time when the "Old Fox" was grieving most sorely over his years of disappointment, he had with him a young man who in a very few months to blossom out into one of the real wonders of baseball. Not since Russell Ford, of the Yankees, and "King" Cole, of the Cubs, in 1910, averaged well above the .800 mark in victory percentage for over thirty games their first season in fast company has any youngster displayed the class of Washington's prize southpaw.

Boehling reeled off eleven straight victories.

Boehling is going to be of great help to Griffith and Washington. The team is pretty well out of the race now, yet still has an outside chance. Certainly next year, unless Mack braces his pitching staff, the Old Fox is likely to give the Athletics a fight to the last ditch. Walter Johnson and Joe Boehling form a pretty good pitching staff as modern hurling corps go. And Griff has several other young men, among them Engel, who can give a pretty fair account of themselves in the box.

But getting back to Boehling. He has divided in hearts of loyal Washington fandom a place this year usurped by the great and only Walter Johnson. His advent to fame has been more or less of an accident. But for the fact that Griffith was forced to utilize him in the face of injuries to seasoned twirlers, young Joe might now be wasting "his sweetness on the desert air of some bush league.

* * *

HERE is his history:

Only back in the year 1911, when Dr. William H. Parker, the dean of amateur athletics in the Keystone City of the South, kindled an interest in amateur athletics of every sort, particularly devoting himself to amateur baseball, the medical man of cherubic countenance, who is also a police commissioner in Richmond, formed and managed the Battle Axe team, which won the championship of the city in a league comprised of eight clubs. Joe Boehling and Bill Kay formed the star battery of the Battle Axe team, which lost but two games out of sixteen played.

Succeeding the amateur baseball season, an intercity championship series was arranged with the winners of similar championships in Washington and Baltimore, in which the championship was won by the Pepcos of Washington, the games directing attention to the splendid battery work of the Battle Axes. Bill Peet, of the Washington Herald, was the wide-eyed visual artist who saw in Boehling possibilities sufficient to convince "Old Fox" Griffith of the advisability of adding Boehling to the staff headed by that strong-armed genius, Walter Johnson.

* * *

DURING the training trip of 1912, Washington scribes proclaimed the worth of Boehling and predicted that he would prove a tower of strength for the Climbers. The brilliant attack of the Senators during 1912, during which they rolled up a succession of sixteen successive victories—which record was ruined in the seventeenth effort by "Home Run" Baker, of the Athletics—prevented Griffith from risking the club's climb with a game pitched by Boehling, so Griff farmed him out to Chattanooga.

Climatic conditions there hindered the upbuilding of the youngster, and Kid Elberfeld returned the youngster to Washington, when Griff turned him over to Worcester, where, under Jesse Burkett, he achieved a winning percentage of .636.

Again to Charlottesville and under the tutelage of Griffith and Jack Ryan the experience gained asserted itself. A boy of big frame and intelligently acquisitive, Boehling earned his right to stay with the Senators, and Griff, while bemoaning the dearth of good left-handed pitchers, intrusted the fortunes of one game to the youngster, who returned it as a victory.

LANGFORD AGREES TO BOX JACK JOHNSON IN PARIS

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Sam Langford, the Boston tar baby, through his manager, Joe Woodman, to-day confirmed the report that he had agreed to meet Jack Johnson in Paris this fall to settle the question of the heavyweight championship of the world.

According to the announcement, the fight is to go twenty rounds. Johnson is to receive $30,000 guarantee, win, lose or draw, and Langford is to receive 25 per cent of the gross receipts. Leading fight promoters estimate that the fight will draw more than $100,000 at the gate.

WINTER SPORTS ARE BARRED BY BOSS OF 'CARDS'

President Britton Puts Ban on Indoor Baseball, Soccer and Others for Athletes.

By Sid C. Keener.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 9.—Indoor baseball, soccer football, basket ball, or, in fact, all winter sports where there are chances of broken ankles, twisted knees, sprained arms, etc., will not be allowed for the Cardinals this winter. President Schuyler P. Britton has clamped the lid on all winter pastimes for his athletes as a result of the injury to Shortstop Arnold Hauser.

There is no such clause in any of the present contracts, but when school is over this October, President Britton intends to issue strict orders to all the players that the ban has been placed on indoor baseball, soccer football, basket ball and others. And if the command is not obeyed, Britton has plans that will alter the present conditions.

Hauser's loss has been a severe jolt to the Cardinals this year. He has played in only a few games, still he is being paid his salary every 1st and every 15th. And that isn't all.

Pays $1,000 in Doctor Bills.

Since the training trip of last March when Hauser was sent home from Columbus, Ga., President Britton has paid more than $1,000 in doctor bills for Hauser. At present, Arnold is recovering from an operation at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, and all the expenses are being paid by the president of the Cardinals.

"I'd be willing to pay more than $5,000 if I thought Hauser would be as good as ever," states Britton. "You can't buy shortstops like him for $5,000."

There's also a funny angle concerning the bills which have been paid by Britton. During Arnold's stay in St. Louis several months ago, he was being treated by several experts. The bills always were mailed to Robison Field and one day Britton received a bill from a doctor who was not hired.

"I opened the envelope and saw a bill which read: 'For services to Arnold Hauser, $200.' I asked Hauser about it and he said that he never heard of the physician."

The athletes, as well as the magnates, suffer when one is injured during some winter pastime. The average ball player makes enough in the summer and finds some other occupation to live on during the winter. There isn't much financial gain playing soccer, basket ball or indoor baseball, and the athlete is taking a great chance to ruin himself.

Winter Sport Without Gain.

While Hauser's injury is attributed to the day he slid into second base at Columbus, Ga., it is thought that the start came when he twisted his knee sliding on a wooden floor playing indoor baseball last winter.

It also will be remembered that in the winter of 1911-1912 a gathering of diamond stars held an indoor series at the Jai Alai. In the line-up were Hauser, Bobby Byrne, Larry Doyle Ed Koney, Lefty Leifield and a few more major leaguers.

The games were well advertised, but didn't appeal to the real baseball fans, and when the receipts were divided each athlete drew down something less than $5 for three nights' play.

Where would the Giants be to-day had Larry Doyle been permanently injured? The same for Bobby Byrne and the Pirates. Ed Koney has quit of his own will and says that it will be hunting, fishing and other amusements this winter and thereafter. Maybe some business investment for the big fellow, but no more indoor baseball.

It's pretty soft for the athlete to draw his full season's salary and have his doctor bills paid by the magnate. Britton is quite right in placing the ban on winter sports, and no doubt the players will obey the ruling.

International Scope For Athletic Meet

James E. Sullivan Goes Abroad With Invitations From Panama Exposition.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—James E. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States and director of athletics at the Panama Pacific International Exposition, left last Tuesday on the Kronprinzessin Cecelle to attend the International Federation of the athletic governing bodies of the world which is to be held in Berlin, Germany, August 20 and 21.

While at this congress Director Suhivan will extend invitations to the foreign governing bodies to send teams to the Panama Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco in 1915. All the sports at the exposition are to be international in character, and, as a matter of fact, teams have already been promised from many of the foreign countries. After a conference with the officials of the different governing bodies of sport in America, a lengthy program of sports was prepared.

It is planned to have the important international championships in the early spring and fall—February, March, April, October, November and December. The events now planned will, of course, be subject as to dates and regulations to the receiving of official sanction and approval from all the associations that are interested.

STANDS HURT OUTFIELDING.

PITTSBURG, PA., Aug. 9.—"Have you noticed that the present day outfielders do not judge fly balls as quickly as the old-timers did?" asked Manager Clarke, of the Pirates, today. "The stands at most of the parks are huge, dark affairs and when they are filled with spectators it is difficult to tell which is the ball and which are the faces of the fans, until or unless the sphere goes clear above the roof."

MORE PRAISE FOR M'LOUGHLIN FROM CRITICS

British Writers Still Boosting the Great Californian for His Excellent Playing.

MAURICE E. M'LOUGHLIN, who did so much in helping the American team capture the Davis Cup, made a lasting impression on the critics abroad.

Writing of the American champion one of the foremost London critics says:

"The arrival of a new master in any game is always important, for it is by a succession of masters that the art itself is developed. No two men play alike, and when the difference due to individuality is considerable, new methods are the outcome, and the possibilities of the game are enlarged. Lawn tennis, like other games, has been made by its personalities—a Renshaw, a Doherty, a Brookes. If his promise materializes fully McLoughlin may figure among the makers of epochs. The personality of the young Californian is a striking one. Both in name and in blood he is Irish. A blonde, with reddish hair and freckled face, he is a true specimen of the fair Hibernian type. In repose his mouth generally wears a smile.

A Great Athlete.

"When driving his hardest or when serving, he shows his teeth. Set like a vise, they give a touch of ferocity and of deadly purpose. The great breadth of his square shoulders makes him look less tall than he is. You will not often see a more finely built figure of an athlete. He has the straight and well-shaped legs that spell litheness of movement; his carriage on the court is rhythmical. The combination of limberness and apparent looseness of joint, with steel-like tension during the stroke, is characteristic of many great athletes. That much abused term 'grace' applies in its proper sense to McLoughlin's movement and his play alike.

"Out of the personality comes the play. Like the man, it is dynamic, swift and strong. He attacks whenever he can, and his weapons of offense are all severe in the extreme. His service is probably the fastest ever seen. It is graded from a slightly breaking ball, which keeps low, to a very strong American break. His pose when preparing to serve suggests a general's summing up of the situation. The man's poise is mechanically perfect. His forehand drive at its swiftest is possibly harder than that of S. H. Smith. It carries considerable top spin, and is hit with the full reach of the arm, preferably with a horizontal racquet. The sound of it is a crush. With this stroke, as well as with his severe smashing, he can kill a ball from the extremity of the court. The drive keeps low; its trajectory is flat.

Cuts His Backhand.

"His backhand is cut, and the ball when hit is in front of his body. This is his weakest department, but it has winning moments. Low volleys he often misses; he prefers the higher and winning position. Extraordinary activity is combined with splendid footwork. He can leap from the center to the side line and cut off a drive with a stop volley. When a ball suits him and he can time it as he pleases, he generally hits it with full strength. His speed on the court is great; his control over the ball and himself is remarkable. To beat Barrett when the latter was two sets to one shows great determination, as it shows good brains. To beat Parke in three sets reveals consistency; survive a field of all comers, over a hundred strong, at the age of 23, on his first visit to England, makes McLoughlin famous indeed."

BELMONT GETS NEW TRAINER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—It is learned that August Belmont has engaged Sam Hildreth to train his American racing stable. Some time ago Hildreth sold his own string of horses to the late Charles Kohler and went abroad, the latter's stable manager scoring many successes on the French turf.

Innis Brown Talks on Football

Heisman Faces Difficult Task

By Innis Brown.

"THE king is dead. Long live the king."

No doubt it is a bit early to begin chanting any funeral dirge over the demise of the present baseball season and cut loose a host of happy huzzas over the near entry of football. In fact, the real big noise with the horsehide is yet to be sprung, and a majority of the baseball populace is really just beginning to admit that the impending problem of the coming world series is whether it will be Bender vs. Mathewson or Plank vs. Marquard.

For all of that, however, the old season is well on its way, and it is merely a matter of a little more than a month until ye crafty football instructors will once more be on the job. Some five weeks more and managers will begin to dig out the musty, moldy regalia of the season past, followed shortly by the loss of large gobs of cuticle from the manly forms of numerous chesty young athletes while engaged in the rather monotonous preliminaries of falling on the ball and tackling a dummy.

* * *

THE return of the season of glory of the knights of the pigskin will no doubt find a rousing welcome among local enthusiasts in the gridiron game. It will also awaken a bit of curiosity as to what local and other teams will be able to show when the count is held.

Out at Tech, Coach Heisman is going to find his legions somewhat shot to pieces by graduation and other more speedy methods of depletion. Captain Leuhrmann will not be back, and Montague and Colley may also be lost. The return of some of the others is uncertain. However, he will have on hand Cook, Scrappy Moore, Loeb, Hutton, Means, with possibly one or two other regulars. Should McDonald return, a fair basis for a backfield may be counted on. In addition to these, it is understood that several promising freshmen have signified an intention of joining the Smithies. Should the Tech pilot draw a couple of good linemen along with one dependable back, opponents of the Jackets may count on a strenuous combat when they line up on Grant Field.

* * *

OVER at Athens, the outlook is a bit unsettled. It is certain that Captain Bob McWhorter will be on the job. With him will be Big John Henderson and probably Paddock, Hitchcock, Powell and Conklin. Timon Bowden has ended his football career by playing professional baseball during the present season in the Empire League. Lucas and Peacock are through, and the return of Wild Arnette, who terrified Auburn on Thanksgiving Day, is doubtful. However, there were a number of good prep men turned out last season in these parts, and the Red and Black will no doubt gather a fair share of these. Besides, the Athenians were rather bountifully supplied with substitutes last year, nad should develop two or three good performers for regular berths.

AT Vanderbilt Commodore Dan McGugin will face the job of picking up two backs and three linemen. The big loss will be in Collins and Hardage, leaving only Sikes of the back trio, with Curlin to fill in at quarter. In the line Swofford, Daves and Shipp will be among the missing. In other words, the Gold and Black skipper will begin with Morgan and Tom Brown of his line; Noch Brown and Turner at ends, and Sikes and Curlin in the back field.

In addition to these, he will have a youngster by the name of Boensch, who should land the quarterback job over Zack Curlin, whose chief bid for fame seems to be the fact that he once jumped into the game in a crisis and kicked a field goal against Michigan. However, about all that can be countèd on to date in the line, in addition to the two regulars returned, is Reyer, a sub on last year's team. He will doubtless draw further assistance from the incoming freshman class. To date no relief has shown up to fill in the loss caused by the departure of Collins and Hardage.

* * *

OVER at Auburn Mike Donohue will have to base his calculations minus the services of Rip Majors at quarter, "Sheep" Lamb at tackle and Doctor Ressijac at fullback. However, he can count on Captain Kirk Newell in the back field, along with Arnold and Christopher, while in the line he will have Meadows, Thigpen, Louisell and Pitts. He will also have good flank defense in the persons of Robinson and Kearley. It appears that the genial Mike will start the season with more than his usual strength of seasoned material, which forebodes worry a plenty for his opponents.

* * *

NOT a great deal is known of what Harris Cope may count on at Sewanee just yet. He will lose one of his mainstays in Jim Stoney at center. He will also lose a serviceable and promising player in Sheldon, who put up a sensational game at half in several contests last season. More serious, however, than either of the above will be the loss of Jenks Gillem at end. It will doubtless be a long time before the Tiger squad picks up as valuable all-round man again.

On the other hand, he will have Tolley, Hammond and Parker in the back field, Captain McCallum and probably Magwood, Dobbins and Moore in the line. This force will no doubt be augmented by the addition of two or three good new men, together with a promotion to the varsity of one or two subs on last year's team.

* * *

FROM the above it would appear that neither of these squads will have anything special to begin the season above the average. It will, therefore, be a matter of developing new material, together with good luck in keeping old men in condition, in deciding the relative strength of these teams for the coming season, as compared with past years. But few changes have been made in the playing rules, and with this advantage coaches can begin early to get down to real business in developing their charges. With the schedules that more than one of the above have cut out for themselves it is a cinch bet that no time will be lost when once a start is made.

LARRY SEES VISIONS OF WORLD SERIES FOR NAPS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Spend just a few minutes with big Nap Lajoie during these riotous days. Your time won't be wasted. Larry is one continuous walking smile. Like a charger scenting the smoke of battle, Larry is scenting the smoke of a world's series.

The big fellow has never battled in a world's contest. The greatest player never before has had an opportunity. But he feels that the Naps have a chance now and he's breaking his neck to bring about the realization of dreams of years.

Larry is his same old self again. Completely recovered from the injuries which handicapped him when he was traveling along at such a wonderful clip earlier in the season, he is showing the way to Birmy's ambitious youngsters and causing them to be consumed by the pennant fever.

Larry is playing a wonderful game in the field and his bat is playing an important part in every Nap victory. This may be the big fellow's last chance to be on a club that has a chance for the flag, and he is making the best of his opportunity.

"Keep your lamps on us," says Larry. "We are either going to pass those Athletics or make them think they have been side-swiped by a machine traveling at a two-mile-a-minute clip."

MILWAUKEE FANS AFTER PRESIDENT CHIVINGTON

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 9.—Milwaukee baseball fans and owners of the local club are up in arms against President Chivington, of the American Association, for his action in suspending Manager Clark, of the Brewers, because of a verbal argument with Mike Cantillon, of Minneapolis. They claim it is a deliberate plan to weaken Milwaukee in the pennant race.

A report that George Tebeau is ready to quit the Association and join hands with the Federal League is given more than passing credence here. It also is claimed others are ready to follow suit. Pitcher Slapnicka may be sold to Cincinnati by Milwaukee.

CHANCE FARMS TWIRLER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Watkins, who recently was purchased by Chance from the Youngstown (Ohio) club, has been sent to the New London club of the Eastern Association, so that he can get more experience.

NEW PLAYER FOR COAST.

KEOKUK, IOWA, Aug. 9.—The local Central Association club was yesterday offered $1,000 for Catcher Joe Jenkins by the Oakland, Cal., club. Outfielder Hilly and Shortstop McGraffigan also will go to the Coast League if negotiations now on are completed.

LARGE PRICE BIG HANDICAP TO CHAPPELLE

$18,000 Youngster Forced to Go Against Strongest Pitching in American League.

By Bill Bailey.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Did it ever occur to you that Larry Chappelle was a marked man and that it was more difficult for him to get a base hit than for any other player on the Sox team?

It never did? It's a fact just the same. Chappelle goes against the strongest pitching in the game. Doesn't make any difference what the score is when Chappelle goes to bat, does not make a particle of difference whether there be a man on base, and it doesn't make any difference whether there be two or none out, the opposing twirler shoots across his very best when the youngster walks to the plate.

The reason? The fact that the youngster cost $18,000.

Here is what happens when this youngster walks up there. He is recognized by the fans.

"Do you think he's worth all that coin?" queries one fan of another.

"Don't look like that much money to me," is usually the answer when the team is playing on foreign territory.

"Fan him!" howls the fan to the pitcher.

"Show him up!" howls another bug. "Strike him out!" howls a third.

In a minute all the fans are after the twirler to show up this fellow who cost all that money. And it develops into a duel between the batter and the pitcher.

* * *

YOU know what happens under ordinary conditions when the home team is leading by a large score and the end of the game is near. The pitcher lets up a bit. He figures that there is no use pitching his arm out when he has his game won. You know what happens when two are down and an average batter is up. The twirler is quite willing to let the batter hit. He doesn't put much on the ball, for the reason he figures the man will go out anyway. Then what is the use? It isn't likely that a rally will be started.

* * *

BUT with Chappelle? The pitcher wants to fan him. There is a lot of satisfaction in downing a batter when the eyes of the fans are centered upon you. Then a pitcher can't figure why any batter should cost all that money. And then again, a twirler receives much fame if he strikes out the high-priced youngster.

Chappelle never gets an easy chance at bat. Any time that he steps into that box he knows that the pitcher is going to put everything he possesses on that ball and that regardless of whether the pitcher eases up when the other fellows go up. Chappelle knows that he will get speed and a curve ball.

Oh, it's fine advertising you receive when you cost a lot of money. But you can wager that it does not aid your batting average. You're the mark all along the line. The infielders and outfielders play just twice as hard for you. The pitcher just works twice as hard. Any time that Chappelle receives any credit you can wager that he earns it. For somehow or other every ball player entertains just a bit of envy for the youngster who cost a small fortune.

KAISERLING SIGNS WITH FEDS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—George Kaiserling, the hurler recently released to San Francisco in the Pacific Coast League by the local (A. A.) club, yesterday signed to pitch for the local Federals. He will join his new mates to-day.

PLANK IS SLOWEST HURLER IN THE AMERICAN LEAGUE

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—The slowest pitcher in the world has been discovered. He is Eddie Plank, the Athletics' veteran. Just for curiosity, and to settle an argument, a telegraph operator in Philadelphia held the watch on Plank when he pitched against the Browns in a recent series.

After Stovall made a double he consumed 20 seconds throwing the first ball to Pratt. This period elapsed after he received the ball from the catcher and before he delivered it to the bat. The next pitch required 25 seconds. Pratt hit this ball.

In the same inning he took 25 seconds throwing the first ball to Williams. Three pitches to Balenti required 28, 26 and 30 seconds. Plank pulls down his cap, hitches up his trousers, wiggles his left foot and buries it in the pitcher's box like an old hen going to roost. Then he carefully scrutinizes the bases and the outfielders and by the time he gets around to pitch the batter is half fidgeted to death.

That's the system of his stalling—to get the other fellow overanxious.

HERRMANN SENDS OUT CALL FOR YOUNG HURLERS

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—With Southpaw "Rube" Benton practically lost to the Reds for the remainder of the season, President Garry Herrmann has wired around the country for twirlers. He sent messages to Pitcher Harrington, of Lynn, Mass.; Pitcher Robertson, of Savannah, Ga., and several others to join the Reds immediately.

Herrman has tried to arrange a deal with a National League club, offering an outfielder and an infielder for a pitcher, and it may be put through in a few days.

Patsy Donovan After Twirler Who Recently Held Athletics to Seven Hits.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Patsy Donovan, the Boston American scout, left here yesterday for Binghamton to look over Pitcher Rankin Johnson, of the Syracuse team, who recently held the Athletics to seven hits in an exhibition game here.

It is understood that two other major league clubs are after Johnson.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

ATLANTA PLANS WORLD'S FINEST COTTON SHOW

Prominent Display to Include All Phases of Plant From Raw Material to Finished Product.

At a meeting of the cotton products committee of the Manufacturers' Exposition Association yesterday morning the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce took steps toward the establishment in the new Chamber of Commerce Building of the largest and most complete permanent exhibition of cotton and cotton products in the world.

It is proposed to devote an entire floor of the new Chamber of Commerce Building to this exhibit. It will show cotton and cotton products of all kinds in every phase from the growing plant to the finished product. Soil, fertilizer, the proper planting and cultivation of cotton will all be shown as a sort of a prologue to the other exhibits. Cotton lint and all its various products will be shown and the processes explained. Fifty different kinds of cotton cloth and similar products will be shown. The cotton seed will be taken up in the same way, and all its products and by-products exhibited, including hulls, meal, crude oil, fine oil, cooking oil, soap, etc.

Complete exhibits of this kind have been temporarily established at some of the great world's expositions before, but this is the first proposal to establish a permanent one. The exhibit will be in connection with the Merchants and Manufacturers' Exposition. The committee meeting at which the project was put under way was attended by Chairman M. R. Wilkinson, W. M. Hutchinson, W. H. Schroder and H. E. Watkins, who represented E. P. McBurney.

A subcommittee was appointed, with Mr. Hutchinson as chairman and Messrs. Schroder and Watkins members. This committee will discuss the details necessary to raising money by subscription and getting up the exhibit, and will report back to the cotton products committee at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. They will confer with the cotton crushers and oil mill men in the meantime, and the cotton spinners will be invited to attend the Tuesday meeting.

Special invitations to attend this meeting will be extended to Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price, Mayor Woodward, members of the Fulton County Board of Commissioners and others interested.

Raw Silks Higher; Canton Stock Small

Advancing Prices Recorded Both in Eastern and European Markets. Buyers Busy.

"The Yokohama raw silk market is still advancing on account of good buying from both Europe and this country," said A. P. Ville & Bros., in their special report. "Canton is very firm, and the stock there is reported to be very small. Estimates of the fourth crop place it at 6,000 bales.

"Lower prices for tsatlees and steam filatures at Shanghai have attracted a large number of buyers and that market is stiffening up again as a result. Tussahs remain unchanged. European manufacturers are buying Italian silks well, and reelers are taking a decidedly optimistic view of the future. Higher prices are expected at Milan shortly.

"The settlement of the strike at Paterson has resulted in some buying at New York. The market is quiet, but firm generally."

GEORGIA APPLE CROP CONDITION PUT AT .52

The Government's report on the apple crop in Georgia for July follows:

For the year 1913, 52 per cent; 1912, 64 per cent; 1911, 40 per cent.

Habersham County reports that apples promise 75 per cent normal yield, which is 50 per cent more than last year. Probably 12 cars will be shipped, mostly Bens, Winesaps and Terrys. Fruit is of better quality than last year. As the orchards are young, not many apples have been shipped.

Users of Mica Against Increase in Tariff

Electrical Manufacturers Say the Raise Is Unnecessary and Not Fair to Them.

Electrical manufacturers and other users of mica are exercised over the action of the Senate Finance Committee in inserting in the pending tariff bill a provision raising the duty on mica above the rates provided in the measure as it was passed by the House of Representatives. Under the tariff act of 1897, and under that of 1909, the present law, complaint has been made that the duty on rough mica, approximating 4,000 per cent, was both unfair and absurd, especially in view of the fact that ten times as much mica is used here as can be produced in this country. As amended by the Senate, the pending tariff bill will provide for practically no reduction of the duty on the product.

A representative of one of the largest electrical manufacturing concerns in the United States said that the blame for increasing the duty on mica in the Senate rests on Senator Simmons, chairman of the Finance Committee. Most of the mica produced in this country, he says, is found in the Senator's own State, North Carolina. As an evidence of the injustice of the prevailing, and proposed, rates of duty on mica in the rough, a recent test case was cited. This case involved importations from Canada. The judges of both the Board of General Appraisers and of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, while confirming the high assessment, condemned the hardship imposed on importers by such an unreasonable duty. Telegrams have been sent by many of the electrical manufacturers to their Senators asking that the Simmons amendment be dropped from the bill now before the Senate, and that the rates in the Underwood bill, or lower rates, be substituted.

Silk Handbags Are Replacing Leather

Knitted Girdles Three Yards Long and Eight Inches Wide Also Are Featured.

The fancy goods and notions trade reports general activity. Buyers now in the market are ordering freely and prices are about the same as prevailed last season.

Knitted girdles in high colors, about three yards long and eight inches wide, are being featured. Cape-girdle effects in solid colors are also well thought of. One importer says that silk handbags in color combinations would largely replace leather varieties, although a good selling movement is reported in the latter in the new envelope-shape bags.

Another leather bag shown is circular in shape and has a single pannier handle in the center. A new style in belts is the wide seven-inch girdle effect, fastened with one large buckle or two smaller ones. New bead necklaces are 27 inches long and are shown in coral and amber. Bandeaux of aluminum and others with beaded and rhinestone effects are leading features among the newer hair ornaments.

Detours on Hartford Greenfield Route

An Automobile Club of America road car has just traversed the main route from Hartford, Conn., to Greenfield, Mass., and the crew reports poor going, the road undergoing construction at four different places.

Leaving Hartford, rough and worn macadam is followed for seven miles. Here the road is under construction for one mile, but is open on the side. Fair macadam, with short rutted stretches, is encountered to Windsor Locks. Mostly good macadam, with some rough spots, leads to Springfield. The next nine and one-half miles to Holyoke is fair macadam and followed along the Connecticut River a worn stretch about one mile long.

From Holyoke good macadam is to Mount Tom, and from Mount Tom to Northampton the road is entirely closed and will not be open all summer. A detour is necessary over rough dirt and worn macadam via Easthampton. Now comes three miles of rough and worn macadam, and then a detour is necessary over a rutted sandy road to Hatfield. Eight miles of good macadam is then followed to South Deerfield, where a detour is made over a poor sandy road to Hatfield. Eight miles of good macadam is then followed to South Deerfield, where a detour is made over a poor sandy road to Wapping.

TRADE IN KNIT GOODS SUFFERS MANY ABUSES

Retailers Know No Limit in Asking for Credit on Returned Goods.

According to one of the best known knit goods wholesalers, there is apparently nothing in the way of illegitimate business that is not done in that field. To illustrate how things went on there, he cited the following instances:

"A small local retailer came into this store the other day with eighteen dozen pairs of hose that he had bought from us about January 1 of last year, and which had actually lain on his shelves since the middle of February, 1912. Apparently without the least sense of doing anything out of the ordinary he told me that the goods were rotten and that he was returning them and wanted credit.

He would not accept my side of the matter at all, and when I refused to credit him for the goods he vowed that he was through buying from us. The goods were rotten, all right. They were in perfect condition when they left us, but we were unable to convince him that we were not responsible for their condition after they had lain on his shelves for seventeen months.

"In another instance a case of hosiery was returned to us with the complaint that they were not like the sample from which they were sold. It happened, however, that these samples had been taken from the very case which was shipped him after the sale was made, had been returned to the case, and shipped with the balance of the goods. There was absolutely no justification for the claim made, but the account being very good, we could do nothing but take the goods back.

"Here is another case: Late last season we bought a heavy bill of silk hose from a prominent New England manufacturer at $7.50 a dozen, which was a good reduction from the manufacturer's regular price. The goods did not move well, however, and, getting a chance to dispose of fifty dozen of them to a retailer in the Middle West, I made a price of $6.75 on them. I was willing to lose 75 cents a dozen to 'get from under.' Imagine my surprise to-day, when I got a letter from this retailer saying that we were in error on the price we had billed him. He maintained that the salesman had made the price $6.50. To settle the matter in as friendly a way as possible he notified me that he could get the same hose from another source at $6, and suggested that I tell him by return mail that this price would be satisfactory to me. The goods are now on the way back to New York, and that account is crossed off the books."

Shadow and Oriental Laces Lead Market

Regular Embroidery Lines Opening Well, as Are Many of the Novelties.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Fall buying in the lace and embroidery market is opening well, and dealers expect a good season. On acount of light duplicating during the spring, orders are being booked at satisfactory rates, making the merchandise very tempting to buyers. Most trading done so far has been with merchants in the region from Denver west to the coast, although buyers from the Middle West are coming in.

Many novel effects in lace are shown, and reported to be taking well. Lightweight shadow and Oriental effects in allovers and flounces are also in demand. Regular embroidery lines are opening well, as are the many novelties in various designs of Swiss embroidery in edgings and sets. The high-color Balkan effects are not moving strongly with the dealers this season.

QUITS BIG EXCHANGE; BUYS CONSOLIDATED SEAT

A. R. Allan, of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Maynard & Allan, which was dissolved, purchased a seat on the Consolidated Stock Exchange for $1,200, including the transfer fee.

This is the first time in a long while that a member of a New York Stock Exchange firm has secured a membership on the "Little Board."

HAVE NO FEAR OF SUTHERLAND TARIFF CHANGE

Evasion Simple Through Sending Goods Abroad Again and Reimporting Them.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Few of the importers owning the seventy-odd million dollars' worth of merchandise that is now lying in bonded warehouses in this city waiting the passage of the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill regard seriously the amendment offered by Senator Sutherland, of Utah, to make these goods dutiable on entrance at the rates prevailing under the present law.

There is a strong feeling that the amendment will never be taken up for serious consideration by Congress. There is a stronger feeling that if it should be passed by any chance it would prove inadequate to do the work that was intended for it by its sponsor.

To justify the first contention it is pointed out that never in the history of the country has any merchandise brought in under a new tariff been dutiable at the rates of the old. To prove the second, it is argued that the goods never having been entered and no duties paid on them, it will be a comparatively easy matter to export them to their original shipping point, or some foreign port nearer by, and reimport them under the new rates.

This is an especially attractive way of "beating" the measure for importers who bring in goods on which the duties are lowered sharply in the new bill.

Discussing this phase of the question, E. H. Vaningen, of E. H. Vaningen & Co., importers of woolens, said yesterday.

"On every thousand dollars' worth of woolen goods, foreign cost, the duty under the present law is over $900. Under the Underwood-Simmons bill the duty would be $350. What would the loss of time for three weeks and the cost of two freights amount to compared with the $550 saved by exporting and reimporting the goods?"

The following is the way one specific case of reimporting would work out. In figuring it a foreign invoice covering a shipment of several cases of woolen goods was chosen:

The foreign invoice value of the goods in question was $4,055, and the original freight charge on them was slightly over $75. The duty on them under the present act (based on an average duty of 90 per cent) would be $3,649.50, making the full landing cost $7,779.50. If brought in under the new tariff at a duty of 35 per cent, the tax would be $1,419.25 and the full landing cost would be $5,549.25, or a saving of $2,230.25. If the goods now entered in bond were exported and shipped back to this country under the new tariff, this saving would be diminished only by about $150 for freight and some incidental warehousing charges.

On bulky goods, which would mean greater freight charges, and on goods where the reduction in duty is not great, this method of avoiding the power of the Sutherland measure would not result in savings so great as those in the illustration, but in any event the importers see little reason for worry in the Senator's attempt to save the Government several million dollars in revenue that would be lost under the present provisions of the new tariff.

Small Rubber Tires For Teething Babes

G. A. Sohl, manager of the local branch of the Republic Rubber Company, is distributing a novel souvenir among the automobile owners of Atlanta. It is a miniature Staggard Tread Republic tire. The tire is about five inches in diameter and can be worn as a watch fob or makes a very serviceable paperweight.

Mr. Sohl recommends the little tire very highly as a teething ring for babies, claiming that his two little

Mill and School Are Run in Conjunction

Disadvantages of Child Labor Offset by System Adopted by English Concern.

In view of the widespread agitation against child labor, interest attaches to a recent report by Consul Franklin D. Hale at Huddersfield, England, on a plan providing education and employment for children at the same time:

"One of the English district factory inspectors reports specially in regard to half-time labor of children of school age, taking one instance of a school in connection with a textile factory where 35 children attend school two and a half hours daily and work in the mill five hours, with a complete rest every alternate week after 3 p. m. and from Friday until 9 a. m. the following Monday. The inspector noted the bright, healthy and intelligent appearance of the children, and says:

"The schoolmistress informed me that these children made as much progress in their education as the ordinary full-time scholars and invariably earned the full Government grant which depends both on attendance and scholarship, and obtained very good reports from the inspector of schools. They are necessarily very regular in their school attendance, because lost attendance has to be made up before they can renew their work at the mill. The fact that they earn $1.10 a week probably accounts for their being better fed and clothed than other children of the same class.'"

Cheaper Carpets in Good Demand Now

Higher Grades of Goods Quiet. Trade Comes Chiefly From Mail Order Houses.

Trading in better grade carpets and rugs is quiet, although the cheaper grades are active. The demand for the latter is chiefly from large mail order houses and considerably exceeds the supply, according to a prominent New York selling agent.

Lower grade goods are principally in the jobbers' hands, and they are selling freely at a small margin. Stocks in retailers' hands are light. There is a shortage reported in small rugs. Nearly all looms working low-end seamless tapestries and velvets are sold up to their capacity.

Unique Auto Record By Denver Concern

As an indication of the constant improvement of the automobile business, the Willys-Overland Company, of Toledo, Ohio, points to the record established by its Denver distributor, the Overland Auto Company, during the season of 1913. The Western concern's original order for 1913 Overlands called for 400 cars, but within a very short time after the announcement of the model this was increased to 500, with a request that if possible it was to be allowed 100 additional cars.

Because of the great demand for Overlands, the extra allotments could not be made. On July 4 the factory received word from Denver that but 25 of the 500 Overlands remained unsold.

"These will be gone long before the new cars come. We will need a greatly increased allotment for 1914 and are telling you about it this early so that we will not be overlooked," wrote W. J. Carter, of the Denver firm.

HERE IS BEST WAY TO APPLY A TIRE.

Before applying tires, remove rust and all other foreign matter. If the tire has been ridden deflated at any time, mud may have accumulated on the rim and unless this is removed the tire can not adjust itself properly. Soapstone dusted on the rim will act as a lubricant and make it much easier for the tire beads to slip into their correct position, thereby reducing the danger of pinching the inner tube.

Before placing the inner tube inside of case, inflate just enough to round it out. Do not use a tube of the wrong size and be sure that the spreader of the valve is adapted for the particular type of case, whether regular clincher, quick detachable clincher or Q. D. cable base. Dust tube and inside of case with talc, which will reduce the friction and prevent adhesion of the tube to case after heated in service. If too much talc is used, however, and any water should work its way on the inside of the tire, there is danger of grit and attending injury to the tube. Powdered graphite is not quite so nice to handle as talc but is a much more durable lubricant.

PERU CLEANING UP; WANTS OUR SANITARY WARE

English Engineer Says Americans Are Neglecting Profitable and Growing Close Market.

A big market for certain lines of goods of American manufacture is lying undeveloped in Peru, according to Richard T. Hird, sanitary engineer for the Provincial Council of Callao. Mr. Hird says that a demand has sprung up for all sorts of sanitary materials and appliances, and that absolutely no attempt has been made by American manufacturers to cater to it.

Mr. Hird, who is an Englishman, has been working on the new water and sewage works of the port of Callao, which have just been completed. Every coast town in Peru, he says, is getting ready for the opening of the Panama Canal, and the whole country expects tremendous benefits from the completion of the great waterway.

"Callao has been making provision for the commerce which it is believed will come to it," said Mr. Hird. "The improvements which have just been finished are based on a population of 50,000. At the present time there are about 34,000 inhabitants.

Ships Not To Be Delayed.

"Now the authorities are started on a general clearing up of the town, in fact, of all the coast towns. It is realized that ships must be able to proceed straight from Callao to Panama without having to be delayed by long stops in quarantine.

"One thing the city of Callao itself is about to do is to put in modern street paving and a modern slaughter house, the latter with a capacity of 45,000 cattle per annum. Most of the animals that will be slaughtered here will be Peruvian or Chilean cattle, which will come to Callao from the smaller ports to the south.

Sanitary Materials Needed.

"While there is a good number of Englishmen and Americans down there, there is now a distinct trend of Germans to the country. What I would like to see now is something like active appreciation on the part of American manufacturers of sanitary materials, and of the great opportunity Peru now presents for the sale of their products. There is a great dearth of sanitary material to be had in the country. There is a first-class opportunity down there now for sanitary wares of various kinds. The Government is insistent that sanitary works be installed, and no matter which party has been in office, we have never had any difficulty in getting money to prosecute the works we have been carrying on. We are carrying a loan of $500,000 furnished mainly by French, Peruvian, and English capitalists. Most of the piping material for general work we have been using has been of English manufacture, though we have had to get not a little from Austria. We have installed a hydro-pneumatic pumping station for getting rid of the sewage, which is assembled in two distinct sections and thrown out on two sides of the town, thence going by gravity to the sea.

"There is a big chance down there for some American company that would like to undertake the repaving of cities. Not only the whole city of Callao is to be repaved, but other towns will make similar improvements."

CROPS DOING WELL.

COLUMBUS, GA., Aug. 2.—The condition of crops has improved wonderfully during the past ten days, since the rainy weather began. Where it was thought impossible to make a crop of corn, planted early, it now looks as if the yield will be heavy, while late corn is doing remarkably well. Throughout 30 counties embraced in the Columbus territory, it is considered that the rains have improved the condition of cotton materially, and that where it was at least two weeks late prior to the rains, it is now about as forward as usual.

CUBISTS IN MILLINERY FIELD.

Cubist roses are the newest thing in the millinery world. These are silk flowers with square petals and foliage. Part of the rose is in one color and the rest of another shade. The color schemes are varied, and various shadings are grouped, sometimes harmoniously and sometimes in a way to create a clash of colors. The cubist wing has also made its appearance, and some observers look for a season of "square" millinery ornamentation.

Kid Glove Makers in Midst of Big Season

Fall Buying Greatly in Excess of Expectations—Sales Are Double Last Year's.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Manufacturers of kid gloves are experiencing trouble making deliveries, as the fall selling has greatly exceeded expectations. One maker says his sales were double those of 1912. Lamb skins are scarce and high, necessitating large advances. Kid skins are plentiful, but no lower. Raw materials here are thought to be fairly well sold up.

On account of the tariff bill, it is said that strikes are prevalent in Europe, the strikers wanting to share the increased profits made possible by the lower tariff. According to another dealer, if the bill is not passed by September 15 the losses to manufacturers in America will be heavy. Importers are unwilling to deliver goods and stand any advance in tariff, and retailers will not take merchandise unless they get the benefit of any downward revision.

Road business coming into the fabric glove market for 1914 shows a considerable increase over last year, the demand for lisle and chamoisette goods being especially large. White goods are most in demand, but there is little or no activity in colors.

Plan to Mark Sizes On Shoes Is Opposed

Most Retailers Appear to Prefer Code Instead of Plain Figures and Letters.

Shoe manufacturers and retailers have joined in a movement to have sizes and widths marked in shoes by a plain and uniform system.

There is apparently a little reluctance on the part of the retailers to abandon wholly the system of "blind" or code markings, which mean nothing to the ultimate consumer, in favor of the system of plain markings, with the various sizes and widths indicated by numerals and letters.

The national organization of retailers has adopted resolutions favoring uniformity, but also asking the manufacturers "to select the most practical code, preferably the one most commonly used at this time, as a general code for retailers, who prefer to have the sizes on their shoes indicated by a code, instead of a plain marking."

ROAD UNDER CONSTRUCTION.

The touring department of the Automobile Club of America reports a road under construction from Millwood, N. Y., through Chappaqua, connecting with King street for Portchester.

The road is to be macadamized and when completed will afford a direct connection from lower Long Island Sound points to the Harlem Valley and along the Hudson River.

Long Island motorists will also benefit greatly by the new road, since connection can be made from Long Island by the Rye-Seacliff ferry.

SEVERE TESTS HELD IN STORE FOR NEW MEN

Many Concerns Purposely Make Tryout of Employees Harder Than Regular Work.

A prominent manufacturer says that fully 90 per cent of the men that prove satisfactory during the first few weeks of their employment can afterward keep their positions as long as they desire. Most houses have tests to try out new employees, and these are nearly always more severe than the work they are required to do regularly.

"In my offices," he said, "new men are required to do disagreeable, unimportant tasks. I give some the privilege of straightening out the most disagreeable complaints that come in. It shows whether they have any executive ability.

"Many take positions believing that it is not well to set an example for hard work because the employer will think better of them if the work is done easily. A man must work hard at a new job at first because he has friction with older employees and lack of knowledge of numerous details of the work to contend with. I think more of the new man for working overtime trying to overcome these obstacles than of the man who apparently goes through his work with no effort.

"I recall the case of a man who made a good record in a position where a number had failed before him. He studied the business, and interviewed as many of his predecessors as possible to ask their reasons for quitting before he made his try at it. After making notes of the others' reasons he went to work well fortified with a knowledge of the existing conditions and made good in a big way.

IRISH LACE INDUSTRY.

"It may not be known generally," says Dress Essentials, "that modern Irish lace making had its origin in the failure of the potato crop that caused the famine in 1846. The abbess of a convent in County Cork, looking about for some lucrative employment to help the half-starved children who attended her schools, unraveled, thread by thread, a scrap of Point de Milan, and finally mastered the complicated details. She then selected the girls who were quickest at needlework, and taught them what she had so painfully learned. The new industry prospered, and one of the pupils, in a characteristic 'bull,' declared that 'if it had not been for the famine we would all have been starved.'"

BRADY'S DEATH MARKS PASSING OF GREAT MAN

Cashier of Barber Shop Rose To Be Ranked With Morgan and E. H. Harriman.

KEPT HIS FOLLOWING INTACT

Inspired Unswerving Loyalty by His Faith in Men—At His Best as a Builder

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Wall Street lacks leadership and the recent demise of Anthony N. Brady removed another great figure from the financial galaxy depleted by the deaths of E. H. Harriman, J. P. Morgan, John W. Gates and Edwin Hawley. As a financier of great ability, his leadership in commercial enterprises was made pre-eminent by the success he attained in building up Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Consolidated and People's Gas, American Tobacco and United States Rubber, for which he made conspicuous markets during periods of activity in stocks.

His constructive ability appeared to be limitless and his policies had a wide following, particularly in public utility operations. At the time of his death, he was a director in sixty corporations. Mr. Brady's first important business transaction was the acquisition and consolidation of traction companies in and about Albany. He built these up to a high degree of public efficiency, as well as profit to stockholders, and eventually sold them at good terms to the Delaware and Hudson. Similarly with the Providence Tractions, which he sold to the New Haven.

He Trusted Men.

Loyalty to his friends and business associates and scrupulous honor in keeping agreements made him one of the great powers of finance, but he went further than that. He trusted men, believing that those with whom he chose to do business would be as highly honorable as himself. In his relations with his friends he was not alone loyal.

He went out of his way to help them. The result was that most of them were ever on the alert to help him. Wall Street never heard as much as a rumor of dissension in the Brady party, nor as much as an idle report of financial troubles among any of Mr. Brady's associates. But it does know of wealthy men in Albany who were Mr. Brady's friends in early days and business associates in New York and elsewhere who have become both wealthy and prominent by his guidance. It knows also that no Wall Street party ever held closer together or ever transacted such important matters of business with so little noise or criticism.

Loyal as Morgan.

"Mr. Brady stuck by his companies," said one of his business associates, "and he stuck by his friends. Toward them his loyalty was of the intensity of Mr. Morgan. Like Mr. Morgan, he never withdrew from a transaction once he had given his word that he would participate. He was a man of high honor in his dealings with all his associates and it was to his loyalty to them and their loyalty and admiration for him that his success was largely due."

In his management of Consolidated Gas and its subsidiary, the New York Edison Company, companies which were formerly bitterly assailed, Mr. Brady's policy was liberal to the point where it eventually disarmed criticism. It was through him that George B. Cortelyou, on his retirement from the Cabinet, was persuaded to accept the presidency of Consolidated Gas and he collaborated with Mr. Cortelyou in settling all the mass of litigation with New York City and State. As a builder and a man of constructive policy Mr. Brady's work was before every one in the development of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit.

The company had been exploited in the stock market before he acquired control and had never paid a dividend. Since that time it steadily developed along straight business lines, placed on a 6 per cent dividend basis and is an important factor in the rapid transit work now under way in Greater New York.

Made Money in Tea.

His career in the world in business began in a barber shop in Albany, N. Y., as cashier. Later he started a small tea business. In that he showed the remarkable business ability through which he accumulated a fortune. He established a chain of stores in several cities in the northern part of New York, and, it was said, through this enterprise he obtained the capital with which he began his early operations on a larger scale. His next enterprise was to manipulate a corner in quinine. Then he obtained stock in the Albany Gas Company and began his operations as a promoter. Soon after he had become connected with the gas interests he bought several large granite quarries, which he disposed of at a big profit, and again turned his attention to gas and secured several large interests in Albany, Troy and Chicago.

Studied Gas Chemistry.

When he had become interested in gas Mr. Brady began a systematic study of the business in all of its phases. He devoted weeks to the study of chemistry as applied to the manufacture of gas and finally adopted the De Mote plan. To make the improvements he needed additional capital, so he took his plans to Roswell P. Flower and Edward Murphy. They interested E. C. Benedict and Grover Cleveland and entered into a deal by which the gas plants of Albany were purchased outright. He went into the oil business and organized the Manhattan Oil Company, of Lima, Ohio, selling its output to the Chicago Gas Company.

Big Money in South's Sweet Potato Crop if Properly Stored and Marketed

Value of Sweet Potatoes Increases 80 Per Cent During Last Ten Years—Ninety Per Cent of Crop Grown in South Atlantic States. Great Demand Not Supplied.

CHARLES A. WHITTLE.
Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Speaking of big money-making crops suited to the South, what is the matter with the sweet potato?

For sure corps, good returns and a growing market, take your hat off to the sweet potato patch. Georgia is "pulling down" some $5,000,000, Alabama some $4,000,000, Mississippi $3,500,000, Louisiana $3,000,000, Tennessee $4,000,000, North Carolina $5,000,000, South Carolina $3,000,000, Virginia $3,000,000, Kentucky $1,000,000, Arkansas $2,000,000, Texas $2,500,000, Florida $2,000,000 in sweet potatoes each year.

Ask any groceryman if he ever has enough sweet potatoes to supply the demand. If he has, he is the exception to the rule.

The South is the natural habitat of the sweet potato. It is up to the Southern States to supply the demand. The demand is growing, the sweet potato patches are growing, but the demand is quite a lap ahead and gaining. In fact, there is a wide-open, attractive opportunity for the Southern farmer in growing sweet potatoes. Why not "go to it"?

The Spread of the Potato Patch.

Under the inspiration of a growing price and an enlarging market, the sweet potato patches have extended their area during the census decade previous to 1909 39.3 per cent for the country as a whole. While the Southern States have them all beaten in advantages, every State in the Union is growing potatoes and only four are falling away from the habit and show a decrease in the decade period mentioned. These are Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois and Texas.

Georgia takes first place in the amount of revenue derived from the sweet potato according to census figures. Other Southern States in their order are North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Virginia, South Carolina, Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee, Arkansas, Florida and Kentucky.

The increase which the census shows for the last report for each State is as follows: Louisiana 174 per cent, Oklahoma 155 per cent, Arkansas 154 per cent, Alabama 112 per cent, Mississippi 110 per cent, North Carolina 104 per cent, Georgia 85 per cent, Tennessee 84 per cent, South Carolina 70 per cent, Kentucky 66 per cent, Virginia 56 per cent, Florida 37 per cent.

The Southern States grow a very great part of all the sweet potatoes, and will continue to grow them for the special reason that the soil, climate and long growing season favor this kind of tuber. Therefore, the increase in acreage and revenue from this source will belong to the South in the future as in the past.

Increase in Price.

The census report tells us that for the last decade reported that the value of the sweet potato crop in 1909 in the South Atlantic States was three-fourths greater than it was in 1899; in the West South Central States nearly twice as great. Since the South Atlantic States grow over 90 per cent of the sweet potato crop, it is important that particular reference should be made to this territory.

In Georgia, for instance, the average value of a bushel of potatoes increased 13 cents during the census decade and has increased more since then. In North Carolina the increase in price per bushel during the last census decade was 14 cents. In Alabama the increase has been 18 cents per bushel, in Louisiana 9 cents per bushel, in Mississippi 17 cents.

The increase in the value of sweet potatoes in the country as a whole for the last census decade was 13 cents per bushel, or 30 per cent. The increase has been continuing. While there has been a general increase in the value of all crops of the United States, contributing to the higher cost of living, yet the larger demand for the sweet potato has pushed ahead of the general average considerably.

While values have been estimated in generalities of a census report, it goes without saying that the intelligent, thrifty farmer has little to do with such general averages. They are very far beneath him. His yields per acre, his returns per bushel are always much in excess of the general average. It is possible for the intelligent farmer, planting on good land, to grow from 100 to 300 bushels of sweet potatoes per acre. It is easy enough to average from 75 cents to $1 per bushel. It is possible by good storing to get from $2 to $3 per bushel or even more by home canning.

Profits Can Easily Be Increased.

When a farmer finds the local markets flooded at potato gathering time, and can get only 50 cents a bushel, he is disposed to believe that there is not much in the sweet potato business. A great many growers are content to market their crops under such unfavorable conditions, rather than go to a little more trouble and get much better prices.

In some of the potato-growing sections of the South the co-operative marketing societies which have handled the strawberry, cantaloupe, beans or other early crops, also handle the sweet potato crop in its season, shipping to some Northern market. Usually better prices can be had in the Northern market than prevails in the local Southern markets.

Where canneries have been established an increasing amount of sweet potatoes are being canned each year, netting the farmer who knows how to can successfully large returns. Even where the potatoes are turned over to the commercial canning plants the revenue is larger as a rule than is to be obtained upon a flooded market.

Storing Is the Best Method.

More can be obtained from sweet potatoes by storing them than by any other method, with the possible exception of canning. Since canned sweet potatoes are not in as great demand as the natural tuber, of course, there is a danger of overdoing the canning business at the first.

A very valuable bulletin has just been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled, "Storing and Marketing Sweet Potatoes," by H. C. Thompson. This has appeared as Farmers' Bulletin 548, and should be in the hands of every farmer in the South who is interested in growing and marketing sweet potatoes. Its particular value is in its information as to how to store sweet potatoes. It is well known to every grower of sweet potatoes that the storing proposition is quite different from that of the Irish potato. Many methods have been used for storing the sweet potato in the South. Some of them are successful, but most are not.

The usual method is to bank them—that is, bed them in straw and cover up with dirt, preferably under a shed, but if in the open, the mound is covered with boards. This method, while serving well for the Irish potato, is not so good for the sweet potato, which carries a greater percentage of water in its makeup.

It is for the purpose of giving the farmers who grow sweet potatoes a practical, workable storage plan that the bulletin referred to has been issued.

Many Potatoes Spoil.

The writer says that from 25 to 50 per cent of the sweet potatoes stored in pits or banks spoil, and those that remain are not to be considered of first-class quality. He says that the only safe and practical method of storing sweet potatoes is in a storage house.

To keep sweet potatoes in good condition they must be well matured before digging, carefully handled, well dried or cured after being put in the house, and kept at a uniform temperature after they are cured.

A potato is ready to be dug when after breaking one, the exposed broken surface dries in a few minutes. If it remains moist, the potato is not mature.

The potato should be carefully handled when it is intended for storage. It should be put in baskets or boxes and placed in the bins with the least jolting and bruising possible. If stored in the kind of house which is suggested, they can there be properly cured.

The Best Storage House.

While a cheap storage house can be made to serve the purpose, experience has taught that to maintain right temperature the cost of fuel and the trouble will soon offset the extra cost of erecting a good house at the start.

A desirable wooden house is preferable because it is cheaper and easier to keep dry. It should be built on posts or piers to admit of the circulation of air all around it. The "dug-out" or house partly built underground is advised against for use in the South because of the practical impossibility of keeping such a house dry. Moisture, of course, means rot.

For building a storage house that will hold 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of potatoes, a house 20 by 40 feet may be erected. On the sleepers a rough floor can be laid, and on top of this a layer of heavy building paper placed, and on top of this matched flooring.

The walls can be built by putting on the outside of the studding board an inch thick nailed on diagonally. Over this a layer of building paper should be put, and then matched siding. On the inside of the studding a layer of ceiling should be placed; on top of this a layer of building paper, and then matched board of wainscoting. In the lower South it is claimed that the first layer of ceiling on the studding inside may be omitted.

The sides should be well tied together with scantlings four feet part so as to be over the partitions for the bins. Any kind of roof may be used provided it be made tight to keep out the cold. Galvanized iron is preferable. A layer of roofing paper over the rafters will serve to keep the cold air out.

Coat of Paper Needed.

On the lower sides of the rafters should be put a coat of building paper and on this a layer of matched material.

The space between the walls should be left open. No filling serves as well as the air itself for keeping the building free from moisture.

Thorough ventilation is necessary. Put three windows on each side, a door in each end and at least two ventilators in the top of the roof. The windows should be within 18 inches or two feet of the floor and windows and doors should be made to fit tight and keep out the cold. Where glass windows are used, outside shutters should be employed. It is needful that there should be one or more glass windows to admit light, while working inside in the winter. Ventilators in the roof must also be provided with coverings to keep out the cold.

The bins should have movable floors, made of slats one inch thick and four wide, leaving one inch space between each slat. The same is true of the walls of the bins. The purpose in making a movable floor in the bin is to admit of removing, cleaning and disinfecting it durng the summer. Between 6 and 12 inches of space should be left in the walls and the bins to admit of the circulation of air. In slatting up the bins, space to the width of the separating scantling can also be made, that is, each bin should have a separate end.

Log House Can Be Used.

Instead of going to the expense of erecting the building described, many Southern farms will be found a tenant house, perhaps a log house, which can be converted into a sweet potato house at little cost, remembering to make them air-tight as far as possible and introduce the ventilation features which have been described.

After the potatoes have been put in the storage house the temperature should be maintained from 80 to 85 degrees Fahrenheit for ten days or two weeks, depending on weather conditions. Ventilation is absolutely necessary at this period and whether the temperature can be maintained at the height mentioned or not, it is better to keep all windows and ventilators open to drive out the moisture-ladened air. If moisture collects on the wall or ceiling at this period a fire must be built at once to dry it out.

When the potatoes are thoroughly dried or cured the temperature should be gradually reduced and kept as near as possible around 55 degree during the storage season. If the temperature goes below 48 degrees a fire should be made in the house, or the house opened in the middle of the day if the temperature is high enough. If the temperature in the house goes above 60 degrees the house should be opened in the cool of the day to lower the temperature to 54 or 55. The house should have some ventilation every day.

Secret of High Prices.

Potatoes bruised and cut during the digging and handling accounts for the poor price which many of them bring. The secret of getting high prices is to carefully clean and pack and to put on the market when there is a good demand. The storage house will provide for the latter.

To clean potatoes requires very little trouble but it pays. To pack the right kind of potatoes is easy enough when proper precautions are taken. First it is better to use plows with rolling colters on the beam to cut the vines, and with rods attached to the mold board to free the roots from the soil and vine. The potatoes can then be taken from the ground with hand and should be sorted at this time. Those of uniform size and good quality should go into one pile for the market, those selected for seed in another and the remainder can be canned or fed to stock. Potatoes should not be tossed from row to row, nor packed in bags even to haul to the storage house. It is better to handle them in baskets or boxes to storage and to market and thus save waste from bruises and rotting.

Some Sweet Potato Facts.

Based upon the discussion of the bulletin referred to in this article certain conclusions have been summarized as follows:

The value of the sweet potato has increased about 80 per cent in the last ten years. With methods of storing and marketing the present value could be doubled.

Sweet potatoes can be kept satisfactorily in a storage house where the temperature and moisture conditions can be controlled.

Sweet potatoes to keep well must be well matured, carefully handled, thoroughly cured and kept at a uniform temperature while in storage.

Thorough ventilation is essential during the curing period.

The temperature should be kept at about 80 degrees or 85 degrees Fahrenheit during the curing period and reduced gradually to 55 degrees after the potatoes are cured. Fluctuations of temperature should be avoided throughout the storage period.

The potatoes should be carefully graded, cleaned and packed in neat and attractive packages.

Sweet potatoes should never be marketed in bags nor in bulk.

Veneer barrels or bushel hampers are desirable packages to use during mild weather and double-headed stave barrels or tight boxes in cold weather.

U. S. Makes Big Gain In Trade to South

Exports $10,000,000 More Than Previous Year—Imports Remain Almost the Same.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—While trade between the United States and five of the principal South American countries, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Uruguay, still is in favor of the southern republics, this country made a considerable gain during the past fiscal year. It reduced by $10,000,000 the wide margin of difference between its imports from and exports to those countries.

Imports valued at $187,000,000 are the same as in 1912. In exports the United States gained, shipping $126,000,000 of merchandise this year against $116,000,000 last year. Increases were made in shipments to all countries named, except Argentina.

In the past year Argentina bought $53,000,000 and sold $27,000,000; Brazil, $43,000,000 bought, $120,000,000 sold; Chile, $16,000,000 bought, $28,000,000 sold; Peru, $7,000,000 bought; $10,000,000 sold; Uruguay, $2,000,000 bought, $7,000,000 sold.

Auto Exports Grow Forty-fold in Decade

Canada Alone Takes Cars, Parts and Accessories Valued at $9,200,000 in Year.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Automobiles and automobile parts to the value of $40,000,000 were shipped from the United States in the past fiscal year, as against $1,000,000 in 1903, a decade ago, according to figures by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Of last year's shipments, $28,500,000 were in finished automobiles.

Canada was the largest buyer, with 7,200 cars, worth $9,200,000, while England bought 4,000, valued at $2,000,000.

Less than $2,000,000 worth of automobiles were imported, at an average price of $2,200, while in 1907 more than $4,000,000 worth were brought in at an average price of $3,400.

COAL TRADE PROSPERITY.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—The semi-annual report made up of official and semi-official figures indicates that the coal production in Alabama in 1913 will go between 18,000,000 and 20,000,000 tons, the largest in the history of the industry in this State. Several of the larger coal mining companies in Alabama have orders in hand which will warrant the operation of coal mines through the balance of the year.

DAWES SEES IN CURRENCY BILL FINANCIAL RUIN

Chicago Banker, Former Comptroller, Says Administration Act Would Bring Disaster.

That the enactment of the administration currency bill would be the forerunner of commercial disaster by placing the banking system under the control of politics, is the prediction of Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois and formerly Comptroller of the Currency.

Mr. Dawes issued a critical review of the chief feature of the bill. He is the first State banker to discuss the measure in detail.

"The industry and capital of the country must awaken now to the menace that confronts them in the administration currency bill," he warns, "and not wait until after they have paid the price of prosperity for the knowledge which experience would bring."

Objections to Bill.

His principal objections to the bill are summarized in the following paragraphs:

"This plan compelling the national banks to furnish to competitors (the proposed Federal reserve banks) both capital and business, and divorcing ownership from control by putting these competitors under the control of political appointees, brings the banking system of this country into the situation again from which it emerged after Andrew Jackson, backed by the State banks on one hand and the radical politicians on the other, ruined the Second Bank of the United States and plunged the country into the devastating and terrible panic of 1837.

Says It Will Repeat History.

"If this bill is passed our banking system is again projected into politics. If one would know what this means to the business and prosperity of the nation, let him read the financial history of the United States from 1830 to 1840."

"While it is so constructed as to appear on its face less radical in its grant of centralized power than the Aldrich bill, it is, in fact, much more radical in its grants of such power. Such of the advantages of the Aldrich bill—as, for instance, the provisions for elasticity in our currency and for the mobilization of bank reserves—which it seeks to retain, it offsets by other provisions which will entail greater evils than the ones from which we now suffer.

Must Furnish Capital.

"This bill proposes to compel the national banks to furnish the capital for a number of Federal reserve banks under the ultimate control of government appointees, which reserve banks, under the provisions of the law, become competitors of the national banks and State banks.

"Besides their capital, it compels the national banks to turn over to these competitors several hundred millions of reserve deposit—in other words, to contribute to them both capital and business. As the Federal reserve banks pay no interest on these forced reserve deposits, they will be no mean competitors in their use in open market operations.

No Limit to Loss.

"No limit is put to the extent of loss which the national banks may suffer on their investment in Federal reserve bank stock, but they are limited to a 5 per cent return as possible profits.

"The Government which has received par for its 2 per cent bonds, deposited by the national banks to secure their circulation, if this law is passed threatens with loss any national bank which has outstanding circulation and desires to retire from the system.

The real reason why no adequate protection against the fall in price of the 2s, due to the withdrawal of the currency privilege, is given to outstanding holders of them seems to be to make it expensive for national banks having a large circulation to join the exodus from the national system which will occur if this bill passes into law in its present form. It is not apparently a matter of oversight or carelessness that the interests of outside holders of 2 per cent bonds are thus disregarded.

Say U. S. Loans May Tighten Money

Bankers Declare Funds Will Come to New York, and Not Aid Crop Movement.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Bank officers in the financial district took exception to the statement by Senator Tillman that they had ruined the Southern farmer, and in answer to this said loans to the South this spring had been about 50 per cent greater than in the corresponding period last year.

One said Government aid might seriously tighten money, as out-of-town bankers who get the money at 2 per cent would immediately pay off New York loans carrying 5 to 5 1-2 per cent, so that the money would find its way to New York and not meet any commercial or agricultural needs.

Another bank head said: "Banks of New York City have loaned more money this year to the South by a good sight than last year. This bank, for instance, loaned 50 per cent more to the South than last year.

"To-day we loaned $5,000,000 more to our banking correspondents in the South than on the same day last year."

J. S. Alexander, vice president of the National Bank of Commerce, said:

"No borrower from the South, West, North or locally has requested loans from the National Bank of Commerce without receiving the fullest consideration and treatment satisfactory to himself."

FIRST GINNING REPORT COMES IN SEPTEMBER

Census Bureau First to Show Amount to August 31—Dates of Reports.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Earliest ginning operations are about one month distant in the cotton season of 1913-14. Although no official reports will be made public before the early part of the new crop year, the trade is always interested in knowing how freely the new yield moves in the closing weeks of the old season as well as in the early stages of the new year. The census bureau in its earliest announcement will show the amount of cotton ginned up to the end of August, and will make public its first report on September 8 at 10 a. m., it is expected. That will be the first of ten separate reports, extending from that date to March 20 in the following year. These ten reports cover a period of six months or more. There will be two ginning reports in October, two in November and two in December and January.

Dates of Reports.

Below are the official dates for the season:

Report No. 1913-14.	Date to which report relates	Date of Publication (10 a. m.)
1	Aug. 31	Sept. 8
2	Sept. 24	Oct. 2
3	Oct. 17	Oct. 25
4	Oct. 31	Nov. 8
5	Nov. 13	Nov. 21
6	Nov. 30	Dec. 8
7	Dec. 12	Dec. 20
8	Dec. 31	Jan. 9
9	Jan. 15	Jan. 23
10	Feb. 28	Mar. 20

Reports of Consumption.

These reports will show conditions at the close of business on the dates to which they pertain. Besides the reports mentioned above there will be for the second season, monthly reports of cotton consumed, imported, exported, and on hand, and of acting consuming cotton spindles. Each of these will relate to a calendar month and will be published about the 14th of the succeeding month. The date for these reports are gathered in the cotton growing States by the local agents of the bureau, who collect the ginning reports. In all other States the data are secured by correspondents and by special agents detailed from the bureau to canvass the important mill centers. Ginning and consumption reports combined make a total of 22 during the crop year.

Twelve New Banks Chartered in July

Government's Report Shows Total Capital of the Dozen $450,000; 7,498 in Existence.

During July thirteen applications to organize national banks were approved and twelve were authorized to begin business.

The twelve banks which were given permission to begin business have a total capitalization of $450,000, of which eight, with a total capital of $200,000, had individual capital of less than $50,000, and four, with a total capital of $250,000, had individual capital of $50,000 or over.

At the end of July there were 10,427 banks organized, of which 2,929 had discontinued business, leaving in existence 7,498 banks, with authorized capital of $1,065,922,175 and circulation outstanding, secured by bonds, of $738,502,408.

The total amount of national bank circulation outstanding was $759,293,191, of which $20,790,738 was covered by lawful money of a like amount deposited with the Treasurer of the United States on account of liquidating and insolvent national banks and associations which had reduced their circulation.

No Money to Move Big Canadian Crops

Funds Harder to Get Than Ever Before—Government Urged to Furnish $10,000,000.

CALGARY, ALB., Aug. 9.—Western Canada now faces a peculiar financial situation. With the biggest crops in history, ready for harvesting in two weeks, money is tighter than ever known here.

Newspapers are urging the Dominion Government to loan $10,000,000 in Alberta either to farmers or by taking up provincial or city bond issues. Banks claim they have no funds to loan.

Within ten days two daily papers in Alberta have temporarily suspended publication, expecting to resume in the fall. English banks are coming to the aid of farmers in marketing crops.

Atchison, Kansas, Must Pay Its Bonds

New York Concerns Get State Supreme Court Writ of Mandamus.

TOPEKA, Aug. 9.—The Kansas Supreme Court has issued an order granting an alternate writ of mandamus against the city of Atchison to make the city pay off the $266,000 of bonds which fell due July 1, and for which no provision had been made to pay.

The court was asked to grant the writ by E. D. Levison & Co. and the Columbia Knickerbocker Trust Company, of New York, holders of $70,000 worth of the bonds. A restraining order against the city making any tax levy unless it includes a levy for the payment of the bonds was also issued.

Under the order of court, Atchison must either pay the bonds in November or refund them at the current rates instead of 4 per cent.

Uses Parcel Post To Collect Debts

Keen Kansas Merchant Sends C. O. D. Packages and Gets Money on Stale Accounts.

A Kansas merchant has found a new use for the parcel post. When the C. O. D. feature went into effect, on July 1, he hit upon an idea to collect a number of small accounts which he had been carrying for some time, and which had caused considerable loss during a period of several years.

A number of small boxes were obtained and filled with waste paper, and on the top was placed a receipted bill for the proper amount. A five-cent stamp was required for each box, and the C. O. D. fee was 10 cents for each package. The next day the returns began to come in, and nearly every case the debtor paid the amount, supposing that the package contained something of value, but, of course, not being permitted to confirm this suspicion before opening it.

'BABY BONDS' IN STRONG FAVOR WITH PUBLIC

Success of $100 Denomination Issues Leads Big Corporations to Consider Same Policy.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Of great interest recently has been the call for "baby" bonds, that is, the bonds which are issued in $100 units. The success of the small bond has caused many of the larger corporations to consider seriously the issuing of all future bonds in $100 units and the extension of the cutting-up privilege to bonds already outstanding.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company is preparing a thorough analysis of its experience with the baby bonds. Only with the recent issue of bonds did the company enter the $100 bonds class and but one delivery has been completed. The other will be completed in September and the analysis will appear soon after. It was said by one of the higher officials yesterday that the $100 bond unit has come to stay and that the number of applications for the small unit have been very many, greatly exceeding expectations.

Definite data is lacking, but the work of compiling statistics on the first distribution is under way. Very few requests for conversion of $100 unit bonds into $1,000 bonds have been made, purchasers of several thousands of dollars in small-denomination bonds preferring to keep them in the "baby" class, recognizing that thereby a broader market is available.

The Solvay Process, By-Products Coke, Virginian Railway, American Public Service, and City of New Orleans $100 bonds, all 5 per cent bonds with the exception of the By-Products Issue, which bears 6 per cent, are among those for which there have been definite inquiries in the past few days.

Elliott Seems To Be Nemesis of Mellen

Acquaintances Recall How New Head of New Haven Has Dogged Predecessor's Footsteps.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Acquaintances of the president and president-elect of the New York, New Haven and Hartford are smiling at Mr. Mellen's request that he be excused "from answering any questions affecting his own personal movements after September."

To one who does not inquire closely into the situation it might appear from the accounts of the two men's careers that Mr. Elliott had been Mr. Mellen's Nemesis. The latter got out of the Northern Pacific presidency after friction between himself and J. J. Hill, and was succeeded by Mr. Elliott. Now he has stepped out of the New England transportation situation to be succeeded again by Mr. Elliott.

What his future plans are he intends to keep to himself, lest a big shouldered, fresh complexioned gentleman from the Northwest anticipate them. If E. N. Brown's resignation from the National Railways of Mexico should be accepted Mr. Mellen might become accustomed to working in a peaceful community gradually by spending a few months in the revolutionary zone.

After the experience of recent months in the hands of L. D. Brandeis, the stockholders' committee, various public service commissions, the Interstate Commerce Board, the Stamford Coroner, the grand jury and others retirement to peaceful Stockbridge might prove too great a change to be entered into at once.

HUERTA HELD TO ANSWER TO U. S. FOR LIND'S LIFE AND SAFETY

Foreign Relations Committee Told in White House What Wilson's Plans Are to Meet Crisis Now Confronting Nation in Mexico.

Republicans Expected to Cease Harassing Administration Owing to Fact They Are Taken Into Confidence Regarding Situation

DAY'S DEVELOPMENTS IN MEXICAN SITUATION

Special Ambassador John Lind reached Vera Cruz. No demonstration marked his arrival. He is expected to reach Mexico City Sunday.

The United States Government has notified Provisional President Huerta he will be held personally responsible for Lind's protection.

President Wilson summoned the entire Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate and Secretary Bryan to meet him in the White House last night.

Senator William Alden Smith charged on the floor of the Senate that a paid attorney and lobbyist of the Constitutional party in Mexico has the ear of the State Department and is attempting to influence the action of the United States toward Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—President Wilson told the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate to-night exactly what his plans are regarding Mexico. That the President believes a crisis has been reached in the situation was evidenced by the fact that this is the first time that all the members of the committee have been taken into the President's confidence.

At the same time it was made public that provisional President Huerta had been notified by the United States Government that he personally would be held responsible for the safety of Envoy Lind.

Republicans as well as Democrats were invited to the White House conference, that lasted several hours.

The President had hitherto kept Chairman Bacon informed of his aims and hopes, but up to this time he had vouchsafed no information to the Republican members of the committee.

Tells Instructions to Lind.

With Secretary of State Bryan, his chief adviser, at hand, the President went over the situation in detail, telling what in his opinion was necessary to avert a break with Mexico and revealing for the first time the instructions that had been given to Special Envoy Lind.

Senators who attended the conference stated that President Wilson had taken the best step possible to unite the executive and legislative branches of the Government for action. The first outcome of the conference is expected to be a cessation of the attacks made by the Republicans on the Administration since the present crisis developed. The minority has continually harassed the Ad-

Make-up of First Democratic "Bud Bouquet" Puzzles Washington's Younger Set.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The make-up of Washington first Democratic debutante bouquet is the question that is agitating the younger set. It is confidently expected that Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, daughter of the Speaker, will be one of the buds, and Miss Frances Moore, the daughter of Clarence R Moore, one of the Titanic heroes, another.

Resident society will furnish two attractive debutantes, who are not only socially prominent, but from Democratic families as well. They are Miss Margaret Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Britton and Miss Beatrice Clover, the youngest daughter of Rear Admiral Clover.

A debutante from the Congressional set will be Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia. Other Congressional buds are the Misses Weaver, Church and Duval.

Chinda Sees Bryan On Japanese Reply

Ambassador and Secretary Arrange for Formal Discussion of Overdue Rejoinder Next Week.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The Japanese Ambassador called to see Secretary Bryan late to-day, making his second visit within 48 hours.

The former visit of the Ambassador Thursday was explained by the State Department as being the usual call of courtesy on diplomatic day. It was announced, however, that the Japanese reply to the United States is overdue, although it is well known what the reply is.

Baron Chinda, it is understood, made arrangements with Mr. Bryan to-day for a formal discussion of the Japanese rejoiner early next week.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Sir Oliver Lodge, whose researches into the unknown world made him famous, will assert at the meeting of the British Association on September 10 a belief in "an ultimate continuity of existence before and after death as essential to science."

It is inferred he has at least new evidence to offer of immortality.

He once told the world "the boundary between life and death is still substantial, but is wearing thin in places."

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, of San Francisco, whose generous assistance last year and this did much to make a permanent camp possible, gave the dedicatory address and gave the conference grounds the name of Asilomar, which means "retreat."

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Billie Burke sails on the Mauretania to-day, instead of waiting for the Olympic, as arranged. She told The American correspondent to-day that she had been "living on the edge of a volcano for the last few weeks."

"I had a slight attack of appendicitis at Carlsbad a few weeks ago, and when I reached London Sir Alfred Fripp, the King's physician, urged me to undergo an operation because it was inevitable in any event. But I preferred to undergo the ordeal at home, hoping to hold out until I reach New York. I hope everything will come out all right, but I fear the operation is inevitable."

"I HAD TO KILL HIM," SAYS WIFE WHO SLEW HUSBAND

SPENCER, N. C., Aug. 9.—"I had to kill him. It was either his life or mine," Mrs. Emma Grubb, of this place, cried hysterically when examined to-day at the Coroner's inquest over the shooting of her husband, H. Clay Grubb, a well-known distiller of this section, who is said to have been worth $500,000. The Grubb family lived in Churchland, a short distance from Spencer.

DOCTOR READY TO GRAFT NEW LIMBS ON MEN

Surgeon Says Experiments on Animals Has Given Him High Hopes of Success.

TWO PATIENTS ARE WILLING

Necessary to Obtain Legs and Arms From Persons Suddenly Dead or Electrocuted.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—"Within a month after my arrival in New York I expect to be able to prove by actual demonstration that it is possible to graft new limbs on human beings to replace those lost."

The speaker was Dr. A. L. Soresi, of New York, the surgeon whose paper on the transfusion of blood aroused great interest among the members of the International Medical Congress.

Asked for further details about the latest marvel in surgery, the doctor said: "I have already made extensive grafting experiments with animals and with entire success. In fact, there are several dogs running around New York now with legs they did not have when born."

Two Anxious for Test.

Continuing the doctor said: "I have not yet attempted to graft a limb on any human being for the reason that my experimental work was only just satisfactorily concluded before leaving for London, but immediately on my return I shall start preparation for the first human test. I have already two men who are willing and anxious to submit themselves."

Dr. Soresi added that the preparations for the operations may take place some time within a month.

"Both my patients need arms. Obtaining suitable arms is not easy," he said. "I have not yet determined exactly how long life remains in an arm after death.

Death Must Be Sudden.

"Of course you understand that an arm must come from some person who has just met sudden death either by accident or by electrocution. In my experiments with animals I have been able to transfer the limbs without loss of time, but such a proceeding where human beings are concerned is not so simple except in cases of electrocution."

Dr. Soresi said that the results of the experiments would be announced through the Academy of Medicine.

Suddenly the larger of the two swung a right hook to the other's nose. Blood flowed freely. Only the one blow was struck, for bystanders immediately separated the combatants and order was restored. No arrests were made.

FRANK OR CONLEY? STILL QUESTION

Issue Firmly Drawn Between Two Men

Defense Starting to Mould Its Case

Leo Frank in his seat in the court-room where he is fighting for life.

Theory That Negro Attacked Mary Phagan With Motive of Robbing Her Will Be Shown; Two Charges Against Accused Must Be Refuted.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The second week of the trial of Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan in the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26, came to a close Saturday noon.

The State's case has been entirely made up in its primary aspects, and the defense has gone into its story of the great crime sufficiently to make clear both its theory and probable line of pleading.

The public, as the case has progressed, has been swayed this way and that, and to-day the remarkable mystery of Mary Phagan's untimely and tragic end remains, in hundreds of minds, quite as much of a mystery as ever.

The Battle Is a See-Saw.

The State has had its good days and its bad days, and the defense has met the same fate. At times things have seemed dismally dark and gloomy for Frank, while at other times the clouds apparently have lifted from about him decidedly.

Guilt Will Be Fixed On One of Two Men

This much has been made clear:

Either Leo Frank will be shown to be responsible for the death of Mary Phagan, or Jim Conley will.

The one is the heart and soul of the State's contention, and the other is the heart and soul of the defense's contention.

Frank is battling not only to clear himself but to convict Conley.

Conley is battling not only to clear himself, but to convict Frank.

The only difference is that Conley, although not yet indicted, expects to be convicted as an accessory after the fact of the murder, in any event, whereas Frank, already indicted, expects to come absolutely clear and free of all possible connection with the crime.

One of Good Name; Other's Past Shady

The one has a heretofore good name to restore in all of its unblemished integrity, the other has merely his present reputation for criminal inclination to preserve against sinister enlargement.

The issue has been sharply and indelibly drawn—it is either Leo Frank's life for Mary Phagan's, or it is Jim Conley's.

The States has shown, or has endeavored to show the folliwing things:

THAT Frank, shortly after noon on April 26, and before five minutes past noon, lured Mary Phagan, for an immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory, and there, because she would not yield to his desires and demands, he knocked her down and immediately thereafter strangled her to death with a small cord, about one-eighth of an inch in thickness.

THAT after strangling her, Frank remained with her dead body until after a girl caller in his office had departed, when he tiptoed to the front of the floor whereupon the murder had been consummated, and secured the help of a negro sweeper, Jim Conley, employed about the place, to dispose of the body.

Disposition of the Body as Shown by State's Evidence

THAT Conley, under the direction of Frank, wrapped the dead body in a piece of heavy cloth, carried it to the elevator, and thence on the elevator to the basement, where it was placed in an obscure corner in the rear, later to be found by Newt Lee, a negro night watchman, generally held guiltless of direct connection with the crime itself.

THAT Frank, after hiding the body, with Conley's assistance, then induced Conley to write and place beside the dead girl certain illiterate notes fixing the crime, in so far as they might, upon some other person than either Frank or Conley, and that Frank for Conley's services, paid him the sum of $2.50, but not until he had first paid him $200, which was withdrawn under promise to restore that sum later.

DEFENSE BEGINS BUILDING ITS THEORY OF TRAGEDY

THAT Frank had an understanding with Conley, whereby Conley was to return to the factory later in the afternoon on Saturday and burn the body in the basement furnace, but that Conley went to sleep in the afternoon and neglected to perform this service.

THAT Frank, called to the factory early in the morning of Sunday, April 27, displaying great nervousness, and while on his way to the factory without having been informed of the dead, girl's identity, declined, or at least failed and neglected, to look upon her features at the undertaker's, notwithstanding the fact that he later admitted her identity without having seen her dead.

THAT at the factory, at the place of the crime, his nervousness continued, and that next morning (Monday), when called to the police station for further questioning, he had secured counsel to defend him, notwithstanding the fact that he then had not been placed under arrest.

THAT after having been placed under arrest and indicted for the murder, he persistently refused to meet his chief accuser, Jim Conley, face to face, or discuss any feature of the charges lodged against him.

THAT in addition to the crime of murder, as set forth in the indictment, Frank is a dissolute character, practicing the most depraved and perverted crimes with persons of loose morals, and that Jim Conley, on more than one occasion, acted as "lookout" for Frank on the first floor of the factory, while unspeakable and unmentionable things were being enacted above.

Jim Conley Is the State's Principal And All-Important Witness.

The State, in setting up the foregoing allegations, summoned as its principal and all-important witness, Jim Conley, who already had made public affidavits to all of the charges set forth, except the one of perversion and the exact time of the crime charged.

Conley, after four or five changed statements theretofore made, set up in his final statement on the stand many other seemingly minor details not contained in any previous statement.

The foregoing is the State's case in completed form, except that it yet will have the right to produce witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's witnesses; the defense, in its turn, having the right to a further rebuttal of the State's rebuttal.

The defense has contended, or will contend:

THAT Conley's story is a tissue of frightful lies from start to finish, and that he himself really committed the crime charged against Frank, and that the defense will so demonstrate.

THAT Mary Phagan was not killed as early as 12:05 on the afternoon of April 26, but was, as a matter of fact, killed at least fifteen minutes later than that, if, as a matter of still further fact, she was not disabled hopelessly about that time, and actually killed even later.

THAT if she was not killed previous to 12:05, as set forth, by the State, that contention being uncompromisingly claimed by the State's own witnesses—Jim Conley and Monteen Stover—then Conley's story is impossible and absurd, and Monteen Stover's evidence entirely negligible.

THAT Frank did not lure Mary Phagan to the rear of the second floor, or to any other place, for any purpose whatever, and that she was only on the second floor sufficiently long to get her pay from the hands of Frank, and that she immediately thereafter left the second floor, going down to the first floor to meet her death at the hands of Conley.

Defense Holds Frank Had Nothing To Do With the Death Notes.

THAT Frank never asked for or received the assistance of Jim Conley in disposing of the body of Mary Phagan, because he was in utter and entire ignorance of the murder until apprised of it Sunday morning.

THAT Frank had nothing whatever to do with the framing of the notes found beside the dead girl, and that in support of such a charge the State has only the word of Jim Conley, intensely interested in shifting the blame from his own guilty shoulders and on to the shoulders of Frank.

THAT Frank never paid Jim Conley any sum of money for any purpose whatever on Saturday, nor promised him any sum for any purpose whatever, and that Conley's word alone says that he did.

THAT whatever nervousness Frank displayed, if he displayed any unusual or unnatural nervousness at all, was occasioned by the mysterious attitude of the officers notifying him of some unnamed trouble at the pencil factory, and that in support of his approximately normal frame of mind is the fact, proved by the State's own witnesses; that he opened the office safe to look up the record of Mary Phagan, after having acquired knowledge of her identity, without tremor or hesitation whatever, setting the intricate combination easily and opening the safe on the first trial.

THAT his innocence of all guilty knowledge of the crime is further evidenced by his three hours' perfectly normal work on his books in the factory on the afternoon of April 26, at which time, if the State's theory holds, Mary Phagan, with Frank's knowledge, then was a corpse in the basement, dead at his murderous hands.

THAT Frank, instead of declining to look upon the face of the dead girl at the undertaker's while on his way to the factory Monday morning, did, as a matter of fact, look upon her face and recognized her.

Frank's Counsel Was Not Sought by Him, the Defense Contends,

THAT Frank had no counsel until after his retention at police headquarters had been publicly made known, and when he was notoriously under suspicion, and that even then counsel was sent to him by some outside friends, and did not come at his invitation or by his direction.

THAT Frank's refusal to meet Jim Conley, his lying accuser, was natural and proper in the circumstances, and that such a course was persisted in by the particular advice of his counsel; that Frank was under no moral or legal obligation to discuss his case with Conley, or with any other witness for the State.

THAT Frank, far from being a dissolute character, is a man of unblemished integrity, happily married; that he never has practiced depraved and perverted crimes, because such things would be and are entirely foreign to his nature; that he never has associated with immoral persons anywhere, at any time; that neither Jim Conley nor any other person ever acted as "lookout" for him for any purpose whatsoever—and that every monstrous and untrue charge or suggestion of immorality and degeneracy rests absolutely and finally upon the unsupported word of Conley, and not otherwise.

THAT there has been no tenable motive assigned to Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan; that the girl was not sexually violated or in any manner lacerated; that Frank had only the most casual acquaintance with her, and that of a perfectly natural business sort, and that he could not have had, and did not have, any reason whatever for desiring her death.

THAT, in truth and reality, the motive prompting the murder of Mary Phagan was robbery upon the part of Conley, and that for the purpose of securing her pittance of money, contained in a mesh purse, he did murder her and concealed her body in the basement.

Theory of Crime as the Defense Holds That Slaying Occurred.

THAT, as a matter of fact, Mary Phagan reached the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26 about 12:12 or 12:15; that she came up the steps directly to Frank's office, and received her pay for the time due her, in amount $1.20; that she at once departed Frank's office, without comment of any sort, and that Frank never saw her alive thereafter; that going down the steps, with her silver mesh bag in her hand, she had to pass Jim Conley, recently aroused from a drunken doze; that in attempting to get from the foot of the stairs, where Conley was sitting, to the door, some 20 feet away, she had to traverse a gloomy walkway, more than ordinarily gloomy at the time because the day was a legal holiday and the doors were closed, but not locked; that in traversing this walkway her back was toward Conley; that Conley, without money and craving more liquor, saw the unprotected little girl with the enticing silver bag in her hand, and surmising that she had been paid off by Frank upstairs, hit her a violent blow upon her head, snatched her purse from her hand, and at once threw her body into the cellar by way of a nearby open space, for fear of someone coming into the building; that likely the blow first delivered was not sufficient to kill, and that her actual death was hastened, or may have been hastened later in the cellar below, by means of strangulation, there being always there an abundance of the very cord employed or supposed to have been employed in that act.

THAT after accomplishing his bloody deed Conley escaped by withdrawing the inside staple from the basement back door only a few feet away from the place where the dead girl subsequently was found; and that tracings of Conley during the afternoon of April 26 at various saloons about town show that he spent then an amount of money approximating that which Mary Phagan is supposed to have had in her purse at the time of her murder.

Conley Declared to be Jailbird And Notoriously Dissolute Character.

THAT of all her possesions the purse alone, notwithstanding exhaustive inquiry, never was accounted for until the last day Conley was on the stand, when he stated that Frank had had the purse in his possession just after the murder, and that he had concealed it in his safe. This allegation, the defense points out, is sustained, as are the other most damaging allegations, by Conley's unsupported word entirely.

THAT Conley, the State's main witness, is a notoriously dissolute character, by his own admission seven times a jailbird, many times a liar, even under oath and on the witness stand, and admittedly was "mistaken" in some statements made against Frank; that he did not begin to throw suspicion on Frank until after suspicion began drifting in his (Conley's) direction; that his plea of wishing by his first silent course of conduct to "protect" Frank is not sound, bacause after he feigned disappointment that Frank did not "get him out of his trouble, as he had promised," and declaring that he, therefore, intended to tell the "whole truth of the murder," he still persisted in his lies and falsifying to the attempted damage of Frank, and found it necessary to issue three conflicting affidavits before he got one he thought might be depended upon to stand up.

THAT Conley began his statements with a lie—to the effect that he could not write—and continued lying steadily thereafter, but frequently canceling one lie in favor of another, as his first lies were shown to be useless and senseless.

THAT Conley in revising his various statements was aided and abetted by various police officials, presumably anxious for the rewards offered for the apprehension and conviction of Mary Phagan's murderer, and that these officers pointed out to Conley the discrepancies as they arose from time to time, and that without this aid Conley's story never could have been made to hold together even as well as it did; that notwithstanding this prejudicing aid, however, Conley's story still is impossible and absurd, and of no account whatever against Frank.

Defense Heavily Equipped to Sustain Every Contention, It Says.

The foregoing, in general, is the theory of the defense, as already set up and as yet to be developed, and along that line it will fight its battle to the end.

The defense is heavily equipped with witnesses to sustain its every contention, and these will be offered, in their order, to break down the contrary theory of the State, as hereinbefore outlined, and upon the relative strength of the two showings depends, of course, the verdict.

Of absorbing interest now is the seeming determination of the defense to put Leo Frank's character frankly and fearlessly in evidence.

In a former article in The Sunday American several weeks ago I predicted that the defense would do this—and the then apparent determination of the defense along that line shows no symptoms of having been deviated from in the slightest.

When Conley made his additional unanticipated attack on Frank's character from the witness stand, it was rather freely predicted about the streets that Frank never would, after that, agree to have his character put in evidence. Under the law, the State can not put the defendant's character in evidence—if it is put in at all, it must be put in by the defendant voluntarily. Once in, however, it may be riddled by the State, if the State is able to riddle it.

The determination, therefore, of the defense to put Frank's character in evidence is being accepted generally as indicating an unfaltering confidence upon the part of the defense that Frank may be able thereby to overcome the terrible and prejudicial charge of degeneracy, as well as the charge of murder, both resting so largely upon Conley, and Conley alone; and it also indicates a belief upon the part of the defense that the State already has done its worst in the matter of attacking Frank's character.

The fact that Frank is now engaged in refuting two charges instead of one makes his case doubly unique in Georgia, as it is contrary to the unbroken theory of the law heretofore.

In Georgia, the courts uniformly have held that a man can not be tried for more than one offense at one time—that is, that he can not be charged with murder, and in the same trial be called to account for another felonious crime.

The charge of degeneracy, however, got into the case without objection, and Frank's lawyers cross-examined the witness making it. The judge, therefore, although a motion was made afterward to strike out this evidence, ruled that it was too late to expunge it, and that it should go in for what it was worth.

Defense Calls More Than Seventy Character Witnesses.

This ruling, while in a way more or less unprecedented, was, in the main, by the public seemingly approved, upon the idea that it was fairer to both the State and the defense that the horrible charge, having been made, be thrashed out.

Should Frank be convicted, it is practically certain that a new trial will be asked on this very point, and it is not at all improbable that Judge Roan will grant it, although this conjecture is purely and absolutely speculative, of course.

The defense has summoned some seventy character witnesses, among whom are more than twoscore female employes of the National Pencil Factory, all of whom will swear, it is said, to the defendant's decent and gentlemanly conduct at all times in their presence and during their varied terms of service in the factory, running from one to five years.

Besides these, a score or more of Atlanta's most prominent business and professional men have been cited to come to court and testify in behalf of Frank's good name.

Rarely before, if ever, has there been as intense interest in a murder trial as there unquestionably is in the Frank case.

The crowds attending the trial have been enormous, the officers finding it necessary every day to turn away hundreds of anxious would-be spectators.

Public sentiment has swung back and forth—to-day inclined to believe Frank may be innocent, to-morrow sternly the reverse.

The jury, sitting there in the courthouse day after day, has been the objective study of hundreds of real and near analytical minds—and the answer?

Acquittal of Frank Likely Would Bring the Indictment of Conley.

Every fellow answers for himself. The jury is imperturbable, unreadable, almost seemingly indifferent at times, indeed—but always keenly keyed to intense interest, nevertheless!

One might as well undertake to read the riddle of the Sphinx as to read the riddle of the Frank case in the minds of the jury trying it. It looks as if it is a jury well above the average—and that is about the beginning and the end of an intelligent guess as to what it will do.

Judge Roan is as baffling as the rest of the case, too, when it comes to speculating upon what he may or may not think of it all.

He is rated one of the very best Superior Court judges in the State, unusually able, certainly fearless, and agreed to be utterly fair and impartial.

At times, his rulings have seemed to favor the defense, and at other times they have seemed to favor the State; but, withal, the public seems agreed that he is handling the case with an open and judicially just mind.

Speculation as to the outcome of the trial is varied. There are those who can see nothing ahead but conviction, just as there are others who can see nothing but acquittal.

If a ballot could be taken, however, those holding to the idea of a mistrial likely would be found in the majority, for that is the way the fight seems, to many observing minds, to be drifting.

That section of the public generally credited with being calm, poised, and desirous of seeing the right prevail, no matter which way it cuts, apparently has suspended judgment. Extremists pro and con still are talking themselves hoarse about town, however.

The progressing inclination among the people seems to be to let the jury settle it, and then to call that as near right as abstract justice and human ingenuity can make it.

In the event of an acquittal, the case ends. The State has no appeal. It must win on the first round, or it loses for all time.

The defense, on the other hand, if it loses, may move for a new trial, upon proper assignment of error in the first trial. The judge of original jurisdiction passes upon this motion—he may grant it or not, as his discretion directs.

The general policy of judges is to refuse motions for new trials, but it is not an unbroken policy, by any means.

If the new trial motion is denied, the case goes to a court of review—either the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals. If one error or several be found in the original rulings of the court below, the case will be remanded back for a new trial, the judgment thus having been reversed and set aside.

Trial Judge is Considered Absolutely Fair and Fearless.

Then the case begins all over again, practically as if it never had been tried.

In the event of matters taking that course, Frank hardly could be tried again before next year, 1914, and perhaps not before spring.

If Frank is acquitted, there is hardly a doubt that Jim Conley will be promptly indicted for the murder of Mary Phagan, and brought to trial later.

In the event of Frank's final conviction, Conley will be indicted as an accessory after the fact. This would mean a sentence of not more than three years in the State penitentiary for him.

If Frank is convicted, he can be convicted only of murder—the jury will not be permitted, under the form of the indictment, to find him guilty of a lesser crime.

The judge will have no discretion in sentencing him.

If found guilty, without a recommendation to mercy, he must hang, unless the Governor should subsequently interfere and order Executive clemency.

If he is convicted, and the jury "recommend him to the mercy of the court," the court then will be obliged to send him to prison for life.

The general opinion is that the present trial will run all of this week—that the best to be expected is that the jury may be given the case by Saturday night.

After the evidence all is in, the case still will have to be argued to the jury. It is thought that Judge Roan will take the bridle off in respect of this, and both sides will be permitted to go the limit.

Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold will consume at least one entire day in argument, and Mr. Dorsey and Mr. Hooper will not take less time.

It is expected that Hooper will open for the State and Dorsey close, and that Rosser will open for the defense and Arnold close. The State has the opening and the concluding argument before the jury.

If the jury makes a verdict quickly in this case, The American of next Sunday ought to carry it. If it makes a mistrial, or delivers a greatly delayed verdict, it seems certain at this time that neither of those facts can be made known before well into next week.

It is estimated that the trial will have cost the County of Fulton approximately $10,000, if the case ends with this trial. If it does not end with this trial, the eventual expense hardly can be intelligently anticipated now.

DORSEY SATISFIED WITH PROGRESS OF TRIAL; DEFENSE REFUSES TO MAKE ANY STATEMENT

I am very well satisfied with the State's case and do not see that the defense has dealt it any damaging blows in the evidence introduced to date.

Saturday's developments were of no material advantage to either side.

---SOLICITOR HUGH M. DORSEY.

Neither Luther Rosser nor Reuben Arnold, attorneys for Frank, would make any statement on the progress of the trial.

Study of Frank Convicts, Then It Turns and Acquits

Readers of Human Nature See Anything They Want, but Personal Equation Is Forgotten.

By O. B. KEELER.

Leo Frank sits in the prisoner's dock and all men may read his face.

A great many of them do.

Here are two of the things they read:

(1) No innocent man could remain calm under such fearful charges.

(2) No guilty man could remain calm under, etc.

Leo Frank admittedly was nervous and agitated the morning the murder of Mary Phagan was discovered.

There are two inferences drawn from that fact:

(1) A guilty man naturally would be nervous.

(2) An innocent man naturally, etc.

Leo Frank sits there in the prisoner's chair, under the scathe of the State's testimony, apparently unmoved.

Leo Frank sits apparently unmoved as his attorneys attack the mesh of circumstance.

So far as may be foretold, Leo Frank will sit unmoved under the fire of the State's speeches and under the justification of his own counsel.

And there will be at least two interpretations of his calm in the trial, as there were two interpretations of his agitation that April morning.

Let's take a bit of time off from bias and prejudice and try to get a little deeper into the psychology of the thing.

Both Read Same Thing.

Here is one who insists that an innocent man, confronted with evident suspicion of a horrid crime, virtually admits guilt, or at least guilty knowledge, by nervous agitation.

"If innocent and ignorant of the crime, he should appear calm and eager to probe deeper into the mystery," says this one. And usually he adds: "I know I should."

And the same interpreter, speaking of Frank's attitude in the trial, says:

"His calm is the effrontery of a cold-blooded murderer. In his place, and innocent, I could not listen unmoved to the hideous charges aimed at me."

But here is a small breach of logic. This reader of the human mind would have innocence appear calm in its surprise and agitated in its expected ordeal, prepared for weeks in advance.

On the other hand, here is one who would reconcile agitation in April and calmness at the trial with absolute innocence.

Is not that reconciliation equally open to the charge of illogicalness?

Could not the innocent accused properly have remained calm in the first steps of an investigation, he must have been sure would lead away from himself, and yet have been shaken by the manifest danger in the terrific circumstantiality of the case the State presented against him?

Logic Seems To Double.

It would seem that cold, mechanical logic had at least two paths in which to stray from the truth when applied to Leo Frank's attitude.

And that is two too many for the clear intent of logic.

The trouble is, the would-be logicians seem always to overlook the one great point that sets at naught all mechanical logic, applied to criminality.

And that point is the Personal Equation.

You note that the logician inevitably says:

"If I were in his place——"

Right in the premise, then, the reasoner injects his own personal equation into a consideration of Leo Frank and his actions and possible motives.

He attributes to Leo Frank certain characteristics supplied by his own personality, adds the influence of motives whose effect on any other human being he could not possibly know, and then deduces a course of action and behavior, which he sets up as the logical one for Leo Frank.

To conform to the laws of true logic, the reasoner must assume that among the 1,600,000,000 inhabitants of the earth there is one that is identical with himself in temperament, habits, disposition, environment, intellect—in fine, must have the same personal equation.

That in itself would be an assumption far outside the pale of absolute logic.

But granting that, it would still remain to identify with that particular human being the person under consideration.

The chances of failure would be, 1,600,000,000 to 1.

And should the incredibly long shot win, there is yet another trap for the logician who says, "If I were in his place, I would do thus and so."

Experience Is Needed.

Even with the suppositious advantage of being acquainted with his own personal equation, the reasoner does NOT know what he would do under the stress of circumstances, UNLESS HE HAS TRIED IT.

Eliminating, then, from the list of expert readers of the human face those who do not observe strictly the laws of absolute logic, we find that those qualified to pass judgment on Leo Frank by means of his April agitation and his August calmness can be numbered quite conveniently as follows:

O.

Which logical conclusion, however, will in no way embarrass the several hundred thousand persons now daily engaged in flying in the face of a certain admonition, set forth in a certain Good Book, to wit:

"Judge not."

FRANK STRUGGLES TO PROVE HIS CONDUCT WAS BLAMELESS

Co-Workers in the Factory Declare Stories of Factory Revelries Are Beyond Reason

ASSISTANT TELLS HOW ACCUSED MAN MADE OUT COMPLEX ACCOUNTS

Testimony of Newsboy Who Said He Accompanied Mary Phagan On Street Car On Day of the Killing Attacked by Defense's Counsel.

With one set of lawyers fighting to send Leo Frank to the gallows and another struggling just as desperately not only to save him from this fate, but entirely to remove the stigma of the murder charge, the second week of the battle for the young factory superintendent's life ended shortly after noon yesterday.

The defense was only fairly under way in its presentation of evidence. Another week, at least, will be consumed in the examination of witnesses, and it is regarded as not at all unlikely that the jury will receive the case for its verdict not before the latter part of the following week.

More than 100 witnesses will be called to the stand before the defense rests. Some of them will be questioned and cross-questioned at length. Others will be on the stand only a few minutes.

Conduct in Question.

Many who will be called are factory employees. They will be asked in regard to Frank's conduct at the pencil factory. This line of interrogation already has been begun by the defense. E. F. Holloway, day watchman at the factory, and N. V. Darley, general manager, testified Friday that women, aside from those of Frank's family, never visited him at the factory. Herbert G. Schiff, assistant to Frank, who was on the stand during practically all of the Saturday session, testified to the same thing.

Schiff was taken into an exhaustive description of the duties of Frank, which was dry and uninteresting to the casual spectator at the trial. His testimony, however, was regarded by the defense as extremely important. The financial sheet, in particular, on which Frank worked the afternoon of the murder, came up for extended consideration. Schiff told in elaborate detail the complexities of the sheet and the elements that entered into its make-up.

It was the purpose of the defense to show that it would have been entirely out of the realm of human probabilities that Frank, after committing an atrocious and brutal murder, could have sat down and, without a quiver of his pen or a shaking of his hand, put down column after column of figures and made scores of notations with never an error.

Schiff was asked first in regard to Frank's customs and habits about the factory. From his testimony it was developed that Schiff generally was at dinner on Saturdays from 12:30 to 2 o'clock and that Frank ordinarily was away from the factory from 1 o'clock until 3. This made it practically impossible for Frank to have women visitors in his office during the half-holiday without Schiff's knowledge. The witness denied that he ever knew of such occurrences.

Gay Parties Impossible.

He added, under the questioning of Reuben Arnold, that it was not at all uncommon for persons from Montag Bros. to call at the factory on Saturday afternoons, and that gay parties of this sort could not have taken place. Salesmen, too, he said, interrupted the work on Saturday afternoons.

A spike was placed in C. B. Dalton's testimony by Schiff's statement that he was in the invariable habit of working with Frank at the office Saturday afternoons, but that he never saw Dalton before the trial began. Dalton had testified that he was an occasional visitor at Frank's office on Saturdays, and that Frank always had two or three women with him in the afternoon, but that no man was working in the office with him. Schiff also said he never had seen Daisy Hopkins, who Dalton said was his companion, on these visits.

Schiff remembered that last Thanksgiving was cold and rainy and that there was snow on the ground. This evidence was brought out to show the improbability of Conley's story which had a woman wearing summery white slippers and stockings visiting the factory to see Frank that day.

The witness recalled paying Miss Helen Ferguson the afternoon of Friday, April 25. He was positive that she did not ask for the envelope of Mary Phagan and that she would have asked no one else, as no one else had anything to do with the distribution of the pay envelopes. It is a custom at the factory, he said, to give one person's pay to another only on a written order, unless the person making application is a relative.

Frank Easily Disturbed.

Asked in regard to the temperament of Frank, he replied that the superintendent was high strung and nervous and was easily disturbed by little accidents that happened about the factory.

Schiff was shown the financial sheet for the week ending on the Friday of the week the tragedy occurred. He identified it as the work done by Frank Saturday afternoon. He said that the writing was unmistakably that of the young superintendent. Attorney Arnold also had in the courtroom the financial sheet for every week during the year previous to the crime. Schiff identified them all as Frank's work and said that the least complicated of them never took less than two and a half hours to compile. The average time, he thought, was about three hours.

All of the financial sheets will be submitted as evidence to show that the writing of Frank April 26 was not tremulous, irregular or in any way different from his writing in the 51 other financial sheets on file.

The witness explained the highly complex manner in which the financial sheet is made up and narrated that the costs and profits were estimated each week on several thousand gross of pencils of different grades and classifications, including the materials which entered into their composition.

The other witnesses of the day were George W. Epps, the newsboy who had sworn several days previously that he had ridden to town with Mary Phagan the day that she was killed, and J. M. Minar, a reporter on The Georgian.

A degree of suspicion already had been thrown upon the story of Epps by the testimony of the motorman and conductor of the car on which Mary rode that day. Both testified that they did not see the boy on the car. The motorman asserted that another girl rode with the Phagan girl after the car arrived in town.

Boy's Credibility Questioned.

The reporter was called to strengthen further the doubt of the lad's credibility. He related that he had visited the Epps home, No. 246 Fox street, Sunday night, April 27, having learned that the children of the family had been acquaintances of the little girl whose dead body had been found that morning.

He went there, he said, for the purpose of finding who had seen the murdered girl last, and at what time she had been seen. He talked at length both to the boy and his sister. In response to his question as to who had seen Mary Phagan last he said that Vera Epps, the sister, declared that she had played with Mary the Thursday before, and that George only told of occasions when he had ridden to town with Mary when she was going to work in the morning, mentioning not at all that he had ridden with her at noon only the day before when she was on the journey that ended in her death.

The most exhaustive examination of any of the defense's witnesses so far introduced came Saturday with Herbert Schiff on the stand. With an apparently remarkable memory Schiff was able to answer clearly and almost without hesitation a number of detailed questions both by the lawyers for the defense in direct examination, and by the State's attorneys on cross-examination. Even bits of conversation were recalled, notably one between Leo Frank and a Mr. Ursenbach on the afternoon before the day of the killing.

"Do you recall hearing a conversation between Mr. Frank and Mr. Ursenbach Friday about going to the ball game Saturday?" Reuben Arnold asked him.

"Yes," said Schiff, "but not exactly what was said. I heard Mr. Frank say something about 'I will go if I can, Charley.'"

Seeming to refute Monteen Stover's story that she looked into Frank's office and found that he was not within, Schiff testified that it would have been impossible for the girl to see over the open safe door into all the office.

Failed to See Mesh Bag.

Schiff it was who looked into the office safe the Monday following the killing, according to his statement. He said he saw nothing of the silver mesh bag of Mary Phagan, which Jim Conley testified Frank hid in the safe after the removal of Mary Phagan's body.

That Jim Conley was frightened the Tuesday following the murder, when the investigation was at its height, was another bit of Schiff's testimony.

"I saw him near the shipping room," related Schiff. "I asked him what he was doing there, and he said he was afraid to go out. He said he would give a million dollars to be a white man. I answered that that would not do any good, as they had taken Mr. Frank."

Under Solicitor Dorsey's cross-examination, Schiff said that Frank appeared eager to employ the Pinkerton detectives to work toward clearing the mystery, declaring that the young superintendent called him over the telephone two or three times Monday after the murder to talk over various matters, once to suggest the employment of detectives.

"He asked me to take up with Mr. Montag the employment of a private detective," said Schiff, "and suggested the Pinkertons. He said he thought it was only fair to the employees."

At one stage in the examination of Schiff, Judge Roan threatened to have cleared the courtroom. A number of spectators had burst into laughter at a sally between Attorney Arnold and Solicitor Dorsey.

Questions asked Schiff by the defense's lawyers seemed to show that by him they would bolster their theory that Mary Phagan's body was lowered to the factory basement by some means other than the elevator, which the State contends was the means used.

Trapdoor Not Locked.

Schiff testified that not only was there a hole in the rear of the factory leading to the basement, but also a trapdoor, which was not locked. He was asked about the door leading from the National Pencil Factory's space into the room used by the Clark woodenware department from which access to the basement is easy. He said that he noticed the door had been apparently cracked open.

Schiff's testimony was unshaken by cross-examination, and he proved an able witness for the defense, much more so than the other factory employee, E. F. Holloway, who became confused on the witness stand under the grilling cross-examination of Solicitor Dorsey.

The attack of the defense on Conley's character was evident with Schiff on the stand. The witness was asked at length concerning the negro and replied that he was worthless, unreliable and untruthful.

It is likely that Schiff will be called again to the stand when the trial is resumed Monday.

THE WOMAN OF SORROWS---MRS. LEO M. FRANK

Mrs. Frank, the wife of the man on trial for his life, is, next to the defendant himself, the most interesting figure in the case. Each day of the trial she has sat at her husband's elbow, whispering consoling words in his ear when the blackest parts of the testimony have been brought out by the prosecutor. At other times she glares defiance at her husband's accusers. But out of the courtroom she is a sad, heartbroken woman. Her face, as she goes between her home and the courtroom, shows the tragedy that the killing of Mary Phagan has brought into her life. These two pictures were taken yesterday as Mrs. Frank left the courthouse.

CASE NEVER IS DISCUSSED BY FRANK JURORS

Every Man on Panel Has Nickname and Formality Has Been Cast Out.

No member of the jury that is to decide Leo M. Frank's guilt or innocence had expressed an opinion on the case or even one witness' testimony when the second week of the trial ended yesterday afternoon, according to the deputies who have them in charge.

In the court it is an attentive jury. No bit of evidence gets by unnoticed, no wrangle occurs between the attorneys that is not given their undivided attention, and when a person testifies they catch every word—knowing the formal charge that will come from the judge, "You are to believe all of it, or any part of it, or if you see fit so to do take the word of the defendant, who is not under oath."

Out of the court it is altogether a different kind of a jury. Probably it is that its members hear enough of the case during "business hours" and are glad to discuss topics that do not bring in the possibility of weighing a man's life. But not one member of the jury has at any time expressed any opinion. If there is one, it is carefully guarded, but those who have watched the faces during the two weeks said yesterday that it was a jury that was still open to conviction.

The formal "good-morning, Mr. ——," has been abandoned for the more jovial "howdy-do," and every member has a nickname. Friday morning each member came from the hotel with a tiny white flower on his coat. They were the gift from the wife of a newlywed, who would not be on the jury if Judge Roan had listened to his excuses.

Saturday afternoon and Sunday are the days that are really tiresome. They are allowed to communicate with no one, and, save a morning and afternoon constitutional, are not permitted to venture from the three rooms assigned them. Last week the attorneys consented for them to purchase magazines, or any reading matter, to be censored by the Sheriff, and, with the exception of this diversion, a juryman on a two or three week trial has anything but the finest position in Atlanta.

Conley, Unconcerned, Asks Nothing of Trial.

Despite the attacks of the defense in the trial of Leo Frank has made upon his story, Jim Conley—from whose lips fell the most damning and abhorrent testimony a Georgia jury has ever heard—sits calmly in his cell at the Tower, inscrutable and unconcerned.

The negro, for weeks the greatest puzzle in the criminal annals of the State, has become an even greater puzzle since he told his story and was taken back to the gloominess of the jail. The fact that he is an admitted accessory after the fact in the murder of little Mary Phagan does not apparently weigh upon his mind.

He asks no questions about the trial or whether the defense has succeeded in breaking down his remarkable tale, and whenever information is vouchsafd to him he receives it with the same cunning smile that baffled Frank's attorneys and that has baffled students of criminology since the negro became connected with the Phagan case.

FRANK AND CONLEY BATTLING EACH OTHER FOR THEIR LIVES

Guilt of Slaying Little Mary Phagan Will Be Fixed Upon One of Two as Issue Now Is Drawn

DEFENSE BEGINS BUILDING ITS THEORY OF TRAGEDY

he had first paid him $200, which was withdrawn under promise to restore that sum later.

THAT Frank had an understanding with Conley, whereby Conley was to return to the factory later in the afternoon on Saturday and burn the body in the basement furnace, but that Conley went to sleep in the afternoon and neglected to perform this service.

THAT Frank, called to the factory early in the morning of Sunday, April 27, displaying great nervousness, and while on his way to the factory without having been informed of the dead girl's identity, declined, or at least failed and neglected, to look upon her features at the undertaker's, notwithstanding the fact that he later admitted her identity without having seen her dead.

THAT at the factory, at the place of the crime, his nervousness continued, and that next morning (Monday), when called to the police station for further questioning, he had secured counsel to defend him, notwithstanding the fact that he then had not been placed under arrest.

THAT after having been placed under arrest and indicted for the murder, he persistently refused to meet his chief accuser, Jim Conley, face to face, or discuss any feature of the charges lodged against him.

THAT in addition to the crime of murder, as set forth in the indictment, Frank is a dissolute character, practicing the most depraved and perverted crimes with persons of loose morals, and that Jim Conley, on more than one occasion, acted as "lookout" for Frank on the first floor of the factory, while unspeakable and unmentionable things were being enacted above.

Jim Conley Is the State's Principal And All-Important Witness.

The State, in setting up the foregoing allegations, summoned as its principal and all-important witness, Jim Conley, who already had made public affidavits to all of the charges set forth, except the one of perversion and the exact time of the crime charged.

Conley, after four or five changed statements theretofore made, set up in his final statement on the stand many other seemingly minor details not contained in any previous statement.

The foregoing is the State's case in completed form, except that it yet will have the right to produce witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's witnesses; the defense, in its turn, having the right to a further rebuttal of the State's rebuttal.

The defense has contended, or will contend:

THAT Conley's story is a tissue of frightful lies from start to finish, and that he himself really committed the crime charged against Frank, and that the defense will so demonstrate.

THAT Mary Phagan was not killed as early as 12:05 on the afternoon of April 26, but was, as a matter of fact, killed at least fifteen minutes later than that, if, as a matter of still further fact, she was not disabled hopelessly about that time, and actually killed even later.

THAT if she was not killed previous to 12:05, as set forth, by the State, that contention being uncompromisingly claimed by the State's own witnesses—Jim Conley and Monteen Stover—then Conley's story is impossible and absurd, and Monteen Stover's evidence entirely negligible.

THAT Frank did not lure Mary Phagan to the rear of the second floor, or to any other place, for any purpose whatever, and that she was only on the second floor sufficiently long to get her pay from the hands of Frank, and that she immediately thereafter left the second floor, going down to the first floor to meet her death at the hands of Conley.

Defense Holds Frank Had Nothing To Do With the Death Notes.

THAT Frank never asked for or received the assistance of Jim Conley in disposing of the body of Mary Phagan, because he was in utter and entire ignorance of the murder until apprised of it Sunday morning.

THAT Frank had nothing whatever to do with the framing of the notes found beside the dead girl, and that in support of such a charge the State has only the word of Jim Conley, intensely interested in shifting the blame from his own guilty shoulders and on to the shoulders of Frank.

THAT Frank never paid Jim Conley any sum of money for any purpose whatever on Saturday, nor promised him any sum for any purpose whatever, and that Conley's word alone says that he did.

THAT whatever nervousness Frank displayed, if he displayed any unusual or unnatural nervousness at all, was occasioned by the mysterious attitude of the officers notifying him of some unnamed trouble at the pencil factory, and that in support of his approximately normal frame of mind is the fact, proved by the State's own witnesses; that he opened the office safe to look up the record of Mary Phagan, after having acquired knowledge of her identity, without tremor or hesitation whatever, setting the intricate combination easily and opening the safe on the first trial.

THAT his innocence of all guilty knowledge of the crime is further evidenced by his three hours' perfectly normal work on his books in the factory on the afternoon of April 26, at which time, if the State's theory holds, Mary Phagan, with Frank's knowledge, then was a corpse in the basement, dead at his murderous hands.

THAT Frank, instead of declining to look upon the face of the dead girl at the undertaker's while on his way to the factory Monday morning, did, as a matter of fact, look upon her face and recognized her.

Frank's Counsel Was Not Sought by Him, the Defense Contends,

THAT Frank had no counsel until after his retention at police headquarters had been publicly made known, and when he was notoriously under suspicion, and that even then counsel was sent to him by some outside friends, and did not come at his invitation or by his direction.

THAT Frank's refusal to meet Jim Conley, his lying accuser, was natural and proper in the circumstances, and that such a course was persisted in by the particular advice of his counsel; that Frank was under no moral or legal obligation to discuss his case with Conley, or with any other witness for the State.

THAT Frank, far from being a dissolute character, is a man of unblemished integrity, happily married; that he never has practiced depraved and perverted crimes, because such things would be and are entirely foreign to his nature; that he never has associated with immoral persons anywhere, at any time; that neither Jim Conley nor any other person ever acted as "lookout" for him for any purpose whatsoever—and that every monstrous and untrue charge or suggestion of immorality and degeneracy rests absolutely and finally upon the unsupported word of Conley, and not otherwise.

THAT there has been no tenable motive assigned to Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan; that the girl was not sexually violated or in any manner lacerated; that Frank had only the most casual acquaintance with her, and that of a perfectly natural business sort, and that he could not have had, and did not have, any reason whatever for desiring her death.

THAT, in truth and reality, the motive prompting the murder of Mary Phagan was robbery upon the part of Conley, and that for the purpose of securing her pittance of money, contained in a mesh purse, he did murder her and concealed her body in the basement.

Theory of Crime as the Defense Holds That Slaying Occurred.

THAT, as a matter of fact, Mary Phagan reached the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26 about 12:12 or 12:15; that she came up the steps directly to Frank's office, and received her pay for the time due her, in amount $1.20; that she at once departed Frank's office, without comment of any sort, and that Frank never saw her alive thereafter; that going down the steps, with her silver mesh bag in her hand, she had to pass Jim Conley, recently aroused from a drunken doze; that in attempting to get from the foot of the stairs, where Conley was sitting, to the door, some 20 feet away, she had to traverse a gloomy walkway, more than ordinarily gloomy at the time because the day was a legal holiday and the doors were closed, but not locked; that in traversing this walkway her back was toward Conley; that Conley, without money and craving more liquor, saw the unprotected little girl with the enticing silver bag in her hand, and surmising that she had been paid off by Frank upstairs, hit her a violent blow upon her head, snatched her purse from her hand, and at once threw her body into the cellar by way of a nearby open space, for fear of someone coming into the building; that likely the blow first delivered was not sufficient to kill, and that her actual death was hastened, or may have been hastened later in the cellar below, by means of strangulation, there being always there an abundance of the very cord employed or supposed to have been employed in that act.

THAT after accomplishing his bloody deed Conley escaped by withdrawing the inside staple from the basement back door only a few feet away from the place where the dead girl subsequently was found; and that tracings of Conley during the afternoon of April 26 at various saloons about town show that he spent then an amount of money approximating that which Mary Phagan is supposed to have had in her purse at the time of her murder.

Conley Declared to be Jailbird And Notoriously Dissolute Character.

THAT of all her possesions the purse alone, notwithstanding exhaustive inquiry, never was accounted for until the last day Conley was on the stand, when he stated that Frank had had the purse in his possession just after the murder, and that he had concealed it in his safe. This allegation, the defense points out, is sustained, as are the other most damaging allegations, by Conley's unsupported word entirely.

THAT Conley, the State's main witness, is a notoriously dissolute character, by his own admission seven times a jailbird, many times a liar, even under oath and on the witness stand, and admittedly was "mistaken" in some statements made against Frank; that he did not begin to throw suspicion on Frank until after suspicion began drifting in his (Conley's) direction; that his plea of wishing by his first silent course of conduct to "protect" Frank is not sound, bacause after he feigned disappointment that Frank did not "get him out of his trouble, as he had promised," and declaring that he, therefore, intended to tell the "whole truth of the murder," he still persisted in his lies and falsifying to the attempted damage of Frank, and found it necessary to issue three conflicting affidavits before he got one he thought might be depended upon to stand up.

THAT Conley began his statements with a lie—to the effect that he could not write—and continued lying steadily thereafter, but frequently canceling one lie in favor of another, as his first lies were shown to be useless and senseless.

THAT Conley in revising his various statements was aided and abetted by various police officials, presumably anxious for the rewards offered for the apprehension and conviction of Mary Phagan's murderer, and that these officers pointed out to Conley the discrepancies as they arose from time to time, and that without this aid Conley's story never could have been made to hold together even as well as it did; that notwithstanding this prejudicing aid, however, Conley's story still is impossible and absurd, and of no account whatever against Frank.

Defense Heavily Equipped to Sustain Every Contention, It Says.

The foregoing, in general, is the theory of the defense, as already set up and as yet to be developed, and along that line it will fight its battle to the end.

The defense is heavily equipped with witnesses to sustain its every contention, and these will be offered, in their order, to break down the contrary theory of the State, as hereinbefore outlined, and upon the relative strength of the two showings depends, of course, the verdict.

Of absorbing interest now is the seeming determination of the defense to put Leo Frank's character frankly and fearlessly in evidence.

In a former article in The Sunday American several weeks ago I predicted that the defense would do this—and the then apparent determination of the defense along that line shows no symptoms of having been deviated from in the slightest.

When Conley made his additional unanticipated attack on Frank's character from the witness stand, it was rather freely predicted about the streets that Frank never would, after that, agree to have his character put in evidence. Under the law, the State can not put the defendant's character in evidence—if it is put in at all, it must be put in by the defendant voluntarily. Once in, however, it may be riddled by the State, if the State is able to riddle it.

The determination, therefore, of the defense to put Frank's character in evidence is being accepted generally as indicating an unfaltering confidence upon the part of the defense that Frank may be able thereby to overcome the terrible and prejudicial charge of degeneracy, as well as the charge of murder, both resting so largely upon Conley, and Conley alone; and it also indicates a belief upon the part of the defense that the State already has done its worst in the matter of attacking Frank's character.

The fact that Frank is now engaged in refuting two charges instead of one makes his case doubly unique in Georgia, as it is contrary to the unbroken theory of the law heretofore.

In Georgia, the courts uniformly have held that a man can not be tried for more than one offense at one time—that is, that he can not be charged with murder, and in the same trial be called to account for another felonious crime.

The charge of degeneracy, however, got into the case without objection, and Frank's lawyers cross-examined the witness making it. The judge, therefore, although a motion was made afterward to strike out this evidence, ruled that it was too late to expunge it, and that it should go in for what it was worth.

Defense Calls More Than Seventy Character Witnesses.

This ruling, while in a way more or less unprecedented, was, in the main, by the public seemingly approved, upon the idea that it was fairer to both the State and the defense that the horrible charge, having been made, be thrashed out.

Should Frank be convicted, it is practically certain that a new trial will be asked on this very point, and it is not at all improbable that Judge Roan will grant it, although this conjecture is purely and absolutely speculative, of course.

The defense has summoned some seventy character witnesses, among whom are more than twoscore female employes of the National Pencil Factory, all of whom will swear, it is said, to the defendant's decent and gentlemanly conduct at all times in their presence and during their varied terms of service in the factory, running from one to five years.

Besides these, a score or more of Atlanta's most prominent business and professional men have been cited to come to court and testify in behalf of Frank's good name.

Rarely before, if ever, has there been as intense interest in a murder trial as there unquestionably is in the Frank case.

The crowds attending the trial have been enormous, the officers finding it necessary every day to turn away hundreds of anxious would-be spectators.

Public sentiment has swung back and forth—to-day inclined to believe Frank may be innocent, to-morrow sternly the reverse.

The jury, sitting there in the courthouse day after day, has been the objective study of hundreds of real and near analytical minds—and the answer?

Acquittal of Frank Likely Would Bring the Indictment of Conley.

Every fellow answers for himself. The jury is imperturbable, unreadable, almost seemingly indifferent at times, indeed—but always keenly keyed to intense interest, nevertheless!

One might as well undertake to read the riddle of the Sphinx as to read the riddle of the Frank case in the minds of the jury trying it. It looks as if it is a jury well above the average—and that is about the beginning and the end of an intelligent guess as to what it will do.

Judge Roan is as baffling as the rest of the case, too, when it comes to speculating upon what he may or may not think of it all.

He is rated one of the very best Superior Court judges in the State, unusually able, certainly fearless, and agreed to be utterly fair and impartial.

At times, his rulings have seemed to favor the defense, and at other times they have seemed to favor the State; but, withal, the public seems agreed that he is handling the case with an open and judicially just mind.

Speculation as to the outcome of the trial is varied. There are those who can see nothing ahead but conviction, just as there are others who can see nothing but acquittal.

If a ballot could be taken, however, those holding to the idea of a mistrial likely would be found in the majority, for that is the way the fight seems, to many observing minds, to be drifting.

That section of the public generally credited with being calm, poised, and desirous of seeing the right prevail, no matter which way it cuts, apparently has suspended judgment. Extremists pro and con still are talking themselves hoarse about town, however.

The progressing inclination among the people seems to be to let the jury settle it, and then to call that as near right as abstract justice and human ingenuity can make it.

In the event of an acquittal, the case ends. The State has no appeal. It must win on the first round, or it loses for all time.

The defense, on the other hand, if it loses, may move for a new trial, upon proper assignment of error in the first trial. The judge of original jurisdiction passes upon this motion—he may grant it or not, as his discretion directs.

The general policy of judges is to refuse motions for new trials, but it is not an unbroken policy, by any means.

If the new trial motion is denied, the case goes to a court of review—either the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals. If one error or several be found in the original rulings of the court below, the case will be remanded back for a new trial, the judgment thus having been reversed and set aside.

Trial Judge is Considered Absolutely Fair and Fearless.

Then the case begins all over again, practically as if it never had been tried.

In the event of matters taking that course, Frank hardly could be tried again before next year, 1914, and perhaps not before spring.

If Frank is acquitted, there is hardly a doubt that Jim Conley will be promptly indicted for the murder of Mary Phagan, and brought to trial later.

In the event of Frank's final conviction, Conley will be indicted as an accessory after the fact. This would mean a sentence of not more than three years in the State penitentiary for him.

If Frank is convicted, he can be convicted only of murder—the jury will not be permitted, under the form of the indictment, to find him guilty of a lesser crime.

The judge will have no discretion in sentencing him.

If found guilty, without a recommendation to mercy, he must hang, unless the Governor should subsequently interfere and order Executive clemency.

If he is convicted, and the jury "recommend him to the mercy of the court," the court then will be obliged to send him to prison for life.

The general opinion is that the present trial will run all of this week—that the best to be expected is that the jury may be given the case by Saturday night.

After the evidence all is in, the case still will have to be argued to the jury. It is thought that Judge Roan will take the bridle off in respect of this, and both sides will be permitted to go the limit.

Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold will consume at least one entire day in argument, and Mr. Dorsey and Mr. Hooper will not take less time.

It is expected that Hooper will open for the State and Dorsey close, and that Rosser will open for the defense and Arnold close. The State has the opening and the concluding argument before the jury.

If the jury makes a verdict quickly in this case, The American of next Sunday ought to carry it. If it makes a mistrial, or delivers a greatly delayed verdict, it seems certain at this time that neither of those facts can be made known before well into next week.

It is estimated that the trial will have cost the County of Fulton approximately $10,000, if the case ends with this trial. If it does not end with this trial, the eventual expense hardly can be intelligently anticipated now.

DORSEY SATISFIED WITH PROGRESS OF TRIAL; DEFENSE REFUSES TO MAKE ANY STATEMENT

I am very well satisfied with the State's case and do not see that the defense has dealt it any damaging blows in the evidence introduced to date.

Saturday's developments were of no material advantage to either side.

---SOLICITOR HUGH M. DORSEY.

Neither Luther Rosser nor Reuben Arnold, attorneys for Frank, would make any statement on the progress of the trial.

Study of Frank Convicts, Then It Turns and Acquits

Readers of Human Nature See Anything They Want, but Personal Equation Is Forgotten.

By O. B. KEELER.

Leo Frank sits in the prisoner's dock and all men may read his face.

A great many of them do.

Here are two of the things they read:

(1) No innocent man could remain calm under such fearful charges.

(2) No guilty man could remain calm under, etc.

Leo Frank admittedly was nervous and agitated the morning the murder of Mary Phagan was discovered.

There are two inferences drawn from that fact:

(1) A guilty man naturally would be nervous.

(2) An innocent man naturally, etc.

Leo Frank sits there in the prisoner's chair, under the scathe of the State's testimony, apparently unmoved.

Leo Frank sits apparently unmoved as his attorneys attack the mesh of circumstance.

So far as may be foretold, Leo Frank will sit unmoved under the fire of the State's speeches and under the justification of his own counsel.

And there will be at least two interpretations of his calm in the trial, as there were two interpretations of his agitation that April morning.

Let's take a bit of time off from bias and prejudice and try to get a little deeper into the psychology of the thing.

Both Read Same Thing.

Here is one who insists that an innocent man, confronted with evident suspicion of a horrid crime, virtually admits guilt, or at least guilty knowledge, by nervous agitation.

"If innocent and ignorant of the crime, he should appear calm and eager to probe deeper into the mystery," says this one. And usually he adds: "I know I should."

And the same interpreter, speaking of Frank's attitude in the trial, says:

"His calm is the effrontery of a cold-blooded murderer. In his place, and innocent, I could not listen unmoved to the hideous charges aimed at me."

But here is a small breach of logic. This reader of the human mind would have innocence appear calm in its surprise and agitated in its expected ordeal, prepared for weeks in advance.

On the other hand, here is one who would reconcile agitation in April and calmness at the trial with absolute innocence.

Is not that reconciliation equally open to the charge of illogicalness?

Could not the innocent accused properly have remained calm in the first steps of an investigation, he must have been sure would lead away from himself, and yet have been shaken by the manifest danger in the terrific circumstantiality of the case the State presented against him?

Logic Seems To Double.

It would seem that cold, mechanical logic had at least two paths in which to stray from the truth when applied to Leo Frank's attitude.

And that is two too many for the clear intent of logic.

The trouble is, the would-be logicians seem always to overlook the one great point that sets at naught all mechanical logic, applied to criminality.

And that point is the Personal Equation.

You note that the logician inevitably says:

"If I were in his place——"

Right in the premise, then, the reasoner injects his own personal equation into a consideration of Leo Frank and his actions and possible motives.

He attributes to Leo Frank certain characteristics supplied by his own personality, adds the influence of motives whose effect on any other human being he could not possibly know, and then deduces a course of action and behavior, which he sets up as the logical one for Leo Frank.

To conform to the laws of true logic, the reasoner must assume that among the 1,600,000,000 inhabitants of the earth there is one that is identical with himself in temperament, habits, disposition, environment, intellect—in fine, must have the same personal equation.

That in itself would be an assumption far outside the pale of absolute logic.

But granting that, it would still remain to identify with that particular human being the person under consideration.

The chances of failure would be, 1,600,000,000 to 1.

And should the incredibly long shot win, there is yet another trap for the logician who says, "If I were in his place, I would do thus and so."

Experience Is Needed.

Even with the suppositious advantage of being acquainted with his own personal equation, the reasoner does NOT know what he would do under the stress of circumstances, UNLESS HE HAS TRIED IT.

Eliminating, then, from the list of expert readers of the human face those who do not observe strictly the laws of absolute logic, we find that those qualified to pass judgment on Leo Frank by means of his April agitation and his August calmness can be numbered quite conveniently as follows:

O.

Which logical conclusion, however, will in no way embarrass the several hundred thousand persons now daily engaged in flying in the face of a certain admonition, set forth in a certain Good Book, to wit:

"Judge not."

FRANK STRUGGLES TO PROVE HIS CONDUCT WAS BLAMELESS

Co-Workers in the Factory Declare Stories of Factory Revelries Are Beyond Reason

ASSISTANT TELLS HOW ACCUSED MAN MADE OUT COMPLEX ACCOUNTS

Testimony of Newsboy Who Said He Accompanied Mary Phagan On Street Car On Day of the Killing Attacked by Defense's Counsel.

With one set of lawyers fighting to send Leo Frank to the gallows and another struggling just as desperately not only to save him from this fate, but entirely to remove the stigma of the murder charge, the second week of the battle for the young factory superintendent's life ended shortly after noon yesterday.

The defense was only fairly under way in its presentation of evidence. Another week, at least, will be consumed in the examination of witnesses, and it is regarded as not at all unlikely that the jury will receive the case for its verdict not before the latter part of the following week.

More than 100 witnesses will be called to the stand before the defense rests. Some of them will be questioned and cross-questioned at length. Others will be on the stand only a few minutes.

Conduct in Question.

Many who will be called are factory employees. They will be asked in regard to Frank's conduct at the pencil factory. This line of interrogation already has been begun by the defense. E. F. Holloway, day watchman at the factory, and N. V. Darley, general manager, testified Friday that women, aside from those of Frank's family, never visited him at the factory. Herbert G. Schiff, assistant to Frank, who was on the stand during practically all of the Saturday session, testified to the same thing.

Schiff was taken into an exhaustive description of the duties of Frank, which was dry and uninteresting to the casual spectator at the trial. His testimony, however, was regarded by the defense as extremely important. The financial sheet, in particular, on which Frank worked the afternoon of the murder, came up for extended consideration. Schiff told in elaborate detail the complexities of the sheet and the elements that entered into its make-up.

It was the purpose of the defense to show that it would have been entirely out of the realm of human probabilities that Frank, after committing an atrocious and brutal murder, could have sat down and, without a quiver of his pen or a shaking of his hand, put down column after column of figures and made scores of notations with never an error.

Schiff was asked first in regard to Frank's customs and habits about the factory. From his testimony it was developed that Schiff generally was at dinner on Saturdays from 12:30 to 2 o'clock and that Frank ordinarily was away from the factory from 1 o'clock until 3. This made it practically impossible for Frank to have women visitors in his office during the half-holiday without Schiff's knowledge. The witness denied that he ever knew of such occurrences.

Gay Parties Impossible.

He added, under the questioning of Reuben Arnold, that it was not at all uncommon for persons from Montag Bros. to call at the factory on Saturday afternoons, and that gay parties of this sort could not have taken place. Salesmen, too, he said, interrupted the work on Saturday afternoons.

A spike was placed in C. B. Dalton's testimony by Schiff's statement that he was in the invariable habit of working with Frank at the office Saturday afternoons, but that he never saw Dalton before the trial began. Dalton had testified that he was an occasional visitor at Frank's office on Saturdays, and that Frank always had two or three women with him in the afternoon, but that no man was working in the office with him. Schiff also said he never had seen Daisy Hopkins, who Dalton said was his companion, on these visits.

Schiff remembered that last Thanksgiving was cold and rainy and that there was snow on the ground. This evidence was brought out to show the improbability of Conley's story which had a woman wearing summery white slippers and stockings visiting the factory to see Frank that day.

The witness recalled paying Miss Helen Ferguson the afternoon of Friday, April 25. He was positive that she did not ask for the envelope of Mary Phagan and that she would have asked no one else, as no one else had anything to do with the distribution of the pay envelopes. It is a custom at the factory, he said, to give one person's pay to another only on a written order, unless the person making application is a relative.

Frank Easily Disturbed.

Asked in regard to the temperament of Frank, he replied that the superintendent was high strung and nervous and was easily disturbed by little accidents that happened about the factory.

Schiff was shown the financial sheet for the week ending on the Friday of the week the tragedy occurred. He identified it as the work done by Frank Saturday afternoon. He said that the writing was unmistakably that of the young superintendent. Attorney Arnold also had in the courtroom the financial sheet for every week during the year previous to the crime. Schiff identified them all as Frank's work and said that the least complicated of them never took less than two and a half hours to compile. The average time, he thought, was about three hours.

All of the financial sheets will be submitted as evidence to show that the writing of Frank April 26 was not tremulous, irregular or in any way different from his writing in the 51 other financial sheets on file.

The witness explained the highly complex manner in which the financial sheet is made up and narrated that the costs and profits were estimated each week on several thousand gross of pencils of different grades and classifications, including the materials which entered into their composition.

The other witnesses of the day were George W. Epps, the newsboy who had sworn several days previously that he had ridden to town with Mary Phagan the day that she was killed, and J. M. Minar, a reporter on The Georgian.

A degree of suspicion already had been thrown upon the story of Epps by the testimony of the motorman and conductor of the car on which Mary rode that day. Both testified that they did not see the boy on the car. The motorman asserted that another girl rode with the Phagan girl after the car arrived in town.

Boy's Credibility Questioned.

The reporter was called to strengthen further the doubt of the lad's credibility. He related that he had visited the Epps home, No. 246 Fox street, Sunday night, April 27, having learned that the children of the family had been acquaintances of the little girl whose dead body had been found that morning.

He went there, he said, for the purpose of finding who had seen the murdered girl last, and at what time she had been seen. He talked at length both to the boy and his sister. In response to his question as to who had seen Mary Phagan last he said that Vera Epps, the sister, declared that she had played with Mary the Thursday before, and that George only told of occasions when he had ridden to town with Mary when she was going to work in the morning, mentioning not at all that he had ridden with her at noon only the day before when she was on the journey that ended in her death.

The most exhaustive examination of any of the defense's witnesses so far introduced came Saturday with Herbert Schiff on the stand. With an apparently remarkable memory Schiff was able to answer clearly and almost without hesitation a number of detailed questions both by the lawyers for the defense in direct examination, and by the State's attorneys on cross-examination. Even bits of conversation were recalled, notably one between Leo Frank and a Mr. Ursenbach on the afternoon before the day of the killing.

"Do you recall hearing a conversation between Mr. Frank and Mr. Ursenbach Friday about going to the ball game Saturday?" Reuben Arnold asked him.

"Yes," said Schiff, "but not exactly what was said. I heard Mr. Frank say something about 'I will go if I can, Charley.'"

Seeming to refute Monteen Stover's story that she looked into Frank's office and found that he was not within, Schiff testified that it would have been impossible for the girl to see over the open safe door into all the office.

Failed to See Mesh Bag.

Schiff it was who looked into the office safe the Monday following the killing, according to his statement. He said he saw nothing of the silver mesh bag of Mary Phagan, which Jim Conley testified Frank hid in the safe after the removal of Mary Phagan's body.

That Jim Conley was frightened the Tuesday following the murder, when the investigation was at its height, was another bit of Schiff's testimony.

"I saw him near the shipping room," related Schiff. "I asked him what he was doing there, and he said he was afraid to go out. He said he would give a million dollars to be a white man. I answered that that would not do any good, as they had taken Mr. Frank."

Under Solicitor Dorsey's cross-examination, Schiff said that Frank appeared eager to employ the Pinkerton detectives to work toward clearing the mystery, declaring that the young superintendent called him over the telephone two or three times Monday after the murder to talk over various matters, once to suggest the employment of detectives.

"He asked me to take up with Mr. Montag the employment of a private detective," said Schiff, "and suggested the Pinkertons. He said he thought it was only fair to the employees."

At one stage in the examination of Schiff, Judge Roan threatened to have cleared the courtroom. A number of spectators had burst into laughter at a sally between Attorney Arnold and Solicitor Dorsey.

Questions asked Schiff by the defense's lawyers seemed to show that by him they would bolster their theory that Mary Phagan's body was lowered to the factory basement by some means other than the elevator, which the State contends was the means used.

Trapdoor Not Locked.

Schiff testified that not only was there a hole in the rear of the factory leading to the basement, but also a trapdoor, which was not locked. He was asked about the door leading from the National Pencil Factory's space into the room used by the Clark woodenware department from which access to the basement is easy. He said that he noticed the door had been apparently cracked open.

Schiff's testimony was unshaken by cross-examination, and he proved an able witness for the defense, much more so than the other factory employee, E. F. Holloway, who became confused on the witness stand under the grilling cross-examination of Solicitor Dorsey.

The attack of the defense on Conley's character was evident with Schiff on the stand. The witness was asked at length concerning the negro and replied that he was worthless, unreliable and untruthful.

It is likely that Schiff will be called again to the stand when the trial is resumed Monday.

THE WOMAN OF SORROWS---MRS. LEO M. FRANK

Mrs. Frank, the wife of the man on trial for his life, is, next to the defendant himself, the most interesting figure in the case. Each day of the trial she has sat at her husband's elbow, whispering consoling words in his ear when the blackest parts of the testimony have been brought out by the prosecutor. At other times she glares defiance at her husband's accusers. But out of the courtroom she is a sad, heartbroken woman. Her face, as she goes between her home and the courtroom, shows the tragedy that the killing of Mary Phagan has brought into her life. These two pictures were taken yesterday as Mrs. Frank left the courthouse.

CASE NEVER IS DISCUSSED BY FRANK JURORS

Every Man on Panel Has Nickname and Formality Has Been Cast Out.

No member of the jury that is to decide Leo M. Frank's guilt or innocence had expressed an opinion on the case or even one witness' testimony when the second week of the trial ended yesterday afternoon, according to the deputies who have them in charge.

In the court it is an attentive jury. No bit of evidence gets by unnoticed, no wrangle occurs between the attorneys that is not given their undivided attention, and when a person testifies they catch every word—knowing the formal charge that will come from the judge, "You are to believe all of it, or any part of it, or if you see fit so to do take the word of the defendant, who is not under oath."

Out of the court it is altogether a different kind of a jury. Probably it is that its members hear enough of the case during "business hours" and are glad to discuss topics that do not bring in the possibility of weighing a man's life. But not one member of the jury has at any time expressed any opinion. If there is one, it is carefully guarded, but those who have watched the faces during the two weeks said yesterday that it was a jury that was still open to conviction.

The formal "good-morning, Mr. ——," has been abandoned for the more jovial "howdy-do," and every member has a nickname. Friday morning each member came from the hotel with a tiny white flower on his coat. They were the gift from the wife of a newlywed, who would not be on the jury if Judge Roan had listened to his excuses.

Saturday afternoon and Sunday are the days that are really tiresome. They are allowed to communicate with no one, and, save a morning and afternoon constitutional, are not permitted to venture from the three rooms assigned them. Last week the attorneys consented for them to purchase magazines, or any reading matter, to be censored by the Sheriff, and, with the exception of this diversion, a juryman on a two or three week trial has anything but the finest position in Atlanta.

Conley, Unconcerned, Asks Nothing of Trial.

Despite the attacks of the defense in the trial of Leo Frank has made upon his story, Jim Conley—from whose lips fell the most damning and abhorrent testimony a Georgia jury has ever heard—sits calmly in his cell at the Tower, inscrutable and unconcerned.

The negro, for weeks the greatest puzzle in the criminal annals of the State, has become an even greater puzzle since he told his story and was taken back to the gloominess of the jail. The fact that he is an admitted accessory after the fact in the murder of little Mary Phagan does not apparently weigh upon his mind.

He asks no questions about the trial or whether the defense has succeeded in breaking down his remarkable tale, and whenever information is vouchsafd to him he receives it with the same cunning smile that baffled Frank's attorneys and that has baffled students of criminology since the negro became connected with the Phagan case.

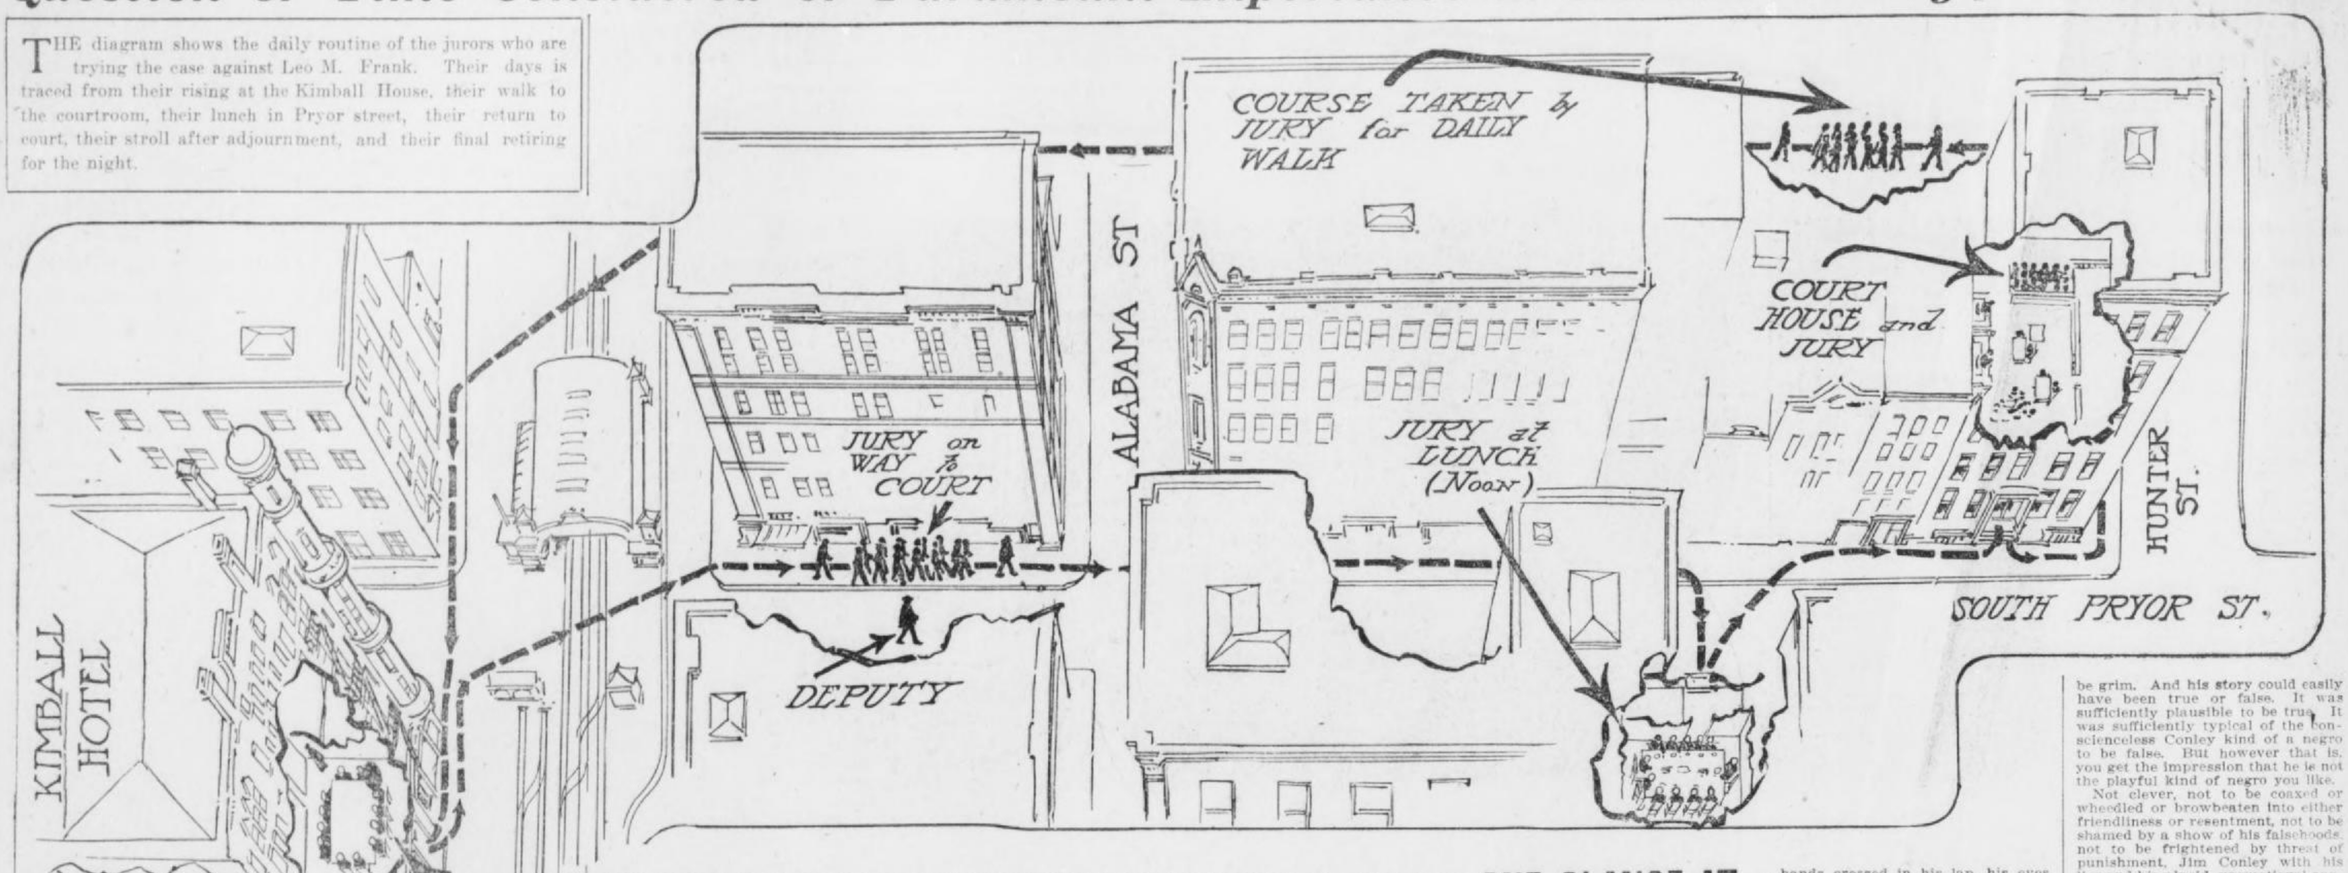
INTEREST IN TRIAL NOW CENTERS IN STORY OF MINCEY

Question of Time Considered of Paramount Importance in Defense Theory of Frank Case

THE diagram shows the daily routine of the jurors who are trying the case against Leo M. Frank. Their days is traced from their rising at the Kimball House, their walk to the courtroom, their lunch in Pryor street, their return to court, their stroll after adjournment, and their final retiring for the night.



EVERY EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO ACCOUNT FOR ALL HIS MOVEMENTS

As all interest centered in the dramatic story of Jim Conley while the case of the prosecution in the Frank trial was being presented, so the public now is awaiting with the keenest expectancy the tale that W. H. Mincey, pedagogue and insurance solicitor, will relate when he is called this week by the attorneys for Leo M. Frank.

Conley swore as glibly as though he were telling of an inconsequential incident in one of his crap games that Frank had confessed to him the killing of Mary Phagan. Then the negro went on in elaborate detail to tell the horrible story of the disposal of the girl's body.

Mincey will tell a similar story, except that Conley will be named as the man confessing the crime and there will be none of the grewsome descriptions of carrying the limp body from second floor to basement in a piece of crocus bagging.

The coming week of the trial will have other witnesses galore. Some of them may be of much more importance than Mincey. Some of them may contribute in a much greater degree to the strength of the defense's case. But the appearance on the stand of no person is being awaited with higher interest than that of Mincey.

The defense has more than a hundred other witnesses on which it may call during the remainder of the trial. Some of them will be on the stand for only a few minutes and others will be questioned and cross-examined at considerable length. It is regarded that when the end of the week arrives there will be still another week ahead before the case is ended and the verdict returned.

Many of the witnesses who have been summoned are character witnesses. The defense is aware that the State has persons to call in rebuttal. It is regarded as highly likely, however, that Frank's lawyers will go ahead and introduce acquaintances and relatives of the accused man who will swear as to his good character and morality.

Had Never Seen Flirting.

Miss Grace Hix, a pretty factory girl, living at No 100 McDonough road, told readily when she was being cross-examined by Luther Rosser that in the five years she had worked at the factory Frank had spoken to her only three times and then only on business. She said she never had seen him trying to flirt with any of the girls.

N. V. Darley, general manager of the factory, denied that he ever had known of any improper conduct on the part of Frank, and E. F. Holloway, day watchman, testified to the same effect.

Other girls will be called during this week. They will be questioned in regard to Frank's attitude toward them and their observation of his attitude toward any of the other employees. Then they will be turned over for the searching cross-examination of Solicitor Dorsey and his associate, Frank A. Hooper.

The time element, which figures so vitally in the murder mystery, will be emphasized when the alibi witnesses are on the stand. The public will learn then for the first time the true strength of Frank's defense. It is possible that his case will stand or fall on the testimony of these very witnesses.

Members of his family will tell of the time he left home Saturday morning. He will be carried along almost minute by minute from this time until he reached the factory, did some work there, went to Montag Bros., Nelson and Forsyth streets, and returned to the pencil factory at about 11 o'clock.

Testify of His Movements.

Persons in the factory will testify as to Frank's movements up until the time they left at or before noon. Mary Phagan was killed shortly after noon. It is during these brief moments that Frank's actions are not known, except upon his own statements. The same is exactly as true as to Jim Conley, who was on the first floor, near the stairs.

Frank says he does not know anything of what transpired then or after of his own personal knowledge.

Conley admits that he does, but in his admission he accuses Frank of knowing all.

He tells a story of Frank directing him to carry the body to the basement and then to write some notes which later were found by the body. He narrates his story in elaborate detail. The defense is said to maintain it would have taken three-quarters of an hour or more to do all he describes.

This is one of the places where the time element enters. Conley says that it was four minutes before 1 o'clock when he went after the cloth in which he wrapped the girl's body to carry her downstairs.

Question of Time Paramount.

Frank was at home by 1:30 o'clock, according to one of the State's witnesses. He was home slightly earlier according to the defense's, Albert McKnight. He would have had to leave the factory at 1:15 or very close to that time to have walked to the street car and arrived home by 1:30, providing he was able to get a car within two or three minutes. Frank and the negro could not have had time to do all Conley edscribed in the nineteen minutes from 12:56 to 1:15, Frank's lawyers contend, particularly in view of the negro's statement that he was hidden in a closet in Frank's room eight minutes of the time.

The statement of Frank's father-in-law, Emil Selig; the servant, Minola McKnight and her husband, Albert McKnight, will be taken to establish the time Frank arrived home that afternoon. H. J. Hinchey has told of the time he saw him returning to the factory on a Washington street car. J. C. Loeb will tell of riding to town with him. Harry Denham will testify as to Frank's arrival at the factory. Newt Lee's testimony will be taken as to his departure. Members of his family will be witnesses to establish the time of his return home at night, and the fact that he remained there until he was awakened by the officers the next morning.

Phagan Trial Makes Eleven "Widows" But Jurors' Wives Are Peeresses Also

By L. F. WOODRUFF

ELEVEN widows were made in Atlanta in a day without the assistance of the Grim Reaper, a trip to Reno, pallbearers or affinity stories in the newspapers.

And there is but one drop of consolation in their cup. When they were made widows they automatically became peeresses, for which privilege many American girls have caused their fathers large sums of good American money and themselves heartache and their pictures to be printed between the story of the rabbit that chased the boa constrictor and the life narrative of Sophie, the Shop Girl, who in a night became a stage star.

They also had the satisfaction of having their husbands officially proclaimed good men and true, which they may have questioned when the pay envelope was brought home with $10 missing and unaccounted for, just as all wives have questioned.

They'll Be Brides Again.

If there is any balm in it, the widows know that it will not be long before they can doff their weeds and once more don their bridal gowns. Their husbands will return to them just as soon as they have decided whether or not Leo Frank is guilty of the murder of Mary Phagan.

For it is due to the fact that their husbands are jurors that Atlanta had eleven widows made in a day, that eleven peeresses were added to Atlanta's list and that eleven wives had the glory of hearing their husbands called "good" without suspecting there was hidden meaning in the compliment.

The peerage and the official compliment as to character and $2 a day are the emoluments of a juror of Georgia. A juror in the Frank case gets a little more. He gets his keep, a place to sleep, and a deputy sheriff to keep him out of trouble, read his letters, inspect his laundry and keep him company during all his waking hours.

Scant Solace for Widows.

The emoluments are considerable, but how about the widows?

Men must work and women must weep to the tuneful accompaniment of the doleful mourning of the harbor bar is the first thought.

But there is some solace in the lot of the eleven Frank case widows.

Not every woman can know the thrill of widowhood and at the same time have absolute assurance that she is not going to remain in single blessedness the rest of her life.

And then there's no disputing the fact that they are peeresses. A juror is given his coronet when he takes his oath of office. Of course, in a criminal case he is usually paid the doubtful compliment of being termed the peer of a safe cracker, a short change artist, a blind tiger operator, or a gentleman skilled in the art of getting good money on bad paper, but just the same the juror is a peer. And just the same Mrs. Juror is a peeress.

Only One Single Juror.

In the rapid selection of the Frank jury, it was remarkable that but one single man was selected to decide a mystery that has puzzled the master minds of the Atlanta detective bureau for more than three months. The State probably wanted married men, who would sympathize with the mother robbed of a daughter's life. The defense probably wanted married men who would sympathize with the wife of the accused and his mother. Single men are supposed to be as laoking in the natural supply of the milk of human kindness as a laughing hyena. The single man on the jury looks like he's married. Probably that's why he was accepted by both sides.

And when they held up their right hands and swore to "well and truly try, etc." without objection to the split infinitive, the eleven "good men and true" were as completely divorced as if the judge had ordered them to pay alimony and had forbidden another marriage in a year's time.

The divorce pro tem. has been absolute. The widows cannot speak with their husbands. Nobody else can for that matter except a court attache.

Deputy Reads All Mail.

Writing them is practically prohibited. Every letter mailed a juror has to be read by a deputy sheriff and properly censored by him before it reaches the eyes of the trial man.

And what wife would like to call her beloved "snooky" and have a deputy sheriff first assimilate the tenderness of the term? What wife would like to write for $8.67 to pay the butcher bill and have a deputy sheriff become thus acquainted with the condition of the family larder and the connubial purse?

She may kiss the clean collar when she sends it to him every day, but what assurance has she that he will not think that the Chinaman has bungled in his work?

She may send him a pair of freshly darned socks, but how does she know that the deputy will not see a mysterious message in the needle work and appropriate the hosiery to his own pedal purposes?

No, there are eleven new widows in Atlanta, but there is no doubt but there are eleven new peeresses. The only trouble is, no one can marry any of them for their titles.

ONE GLANCE AT CONLEY BOOSTS DARWIN THEORY

Frank's Accuser Is Not the Type of Negro White Men Consider Their Friend.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

Jim Conley is a low-browed, thick-lipped, anthropoidal sort of negro. You look at him and your faith in Mr. Darwin's theory goes up like cotton after a boll-weevil scare.

Here is a burly, short-necked black man. On his upper lip is a scanty mustache of the kind that most negroes fondle with the vain hope that it will grow into a bushy thickness. Conley is the most common African type as to physique.

Never a flash of brightness, never a gleam of wit, never the sparkle of unconscious humor came during the three days Conley was on the stand. Newt Lee made the courtroom laugh. Conley didn't. He was always deadly earnest.

This earnestness is common to the most ignorant and illiterate members of the race always, particularly to the negro without a moral sense, without the inkling of a conscience, without scruples.

Delights in Dull Things.

Many people are given over to the fond belief that negroes are happy-go-lucky and irresponsible. Not negroes like Jim Conley. His kind find no pleasure in the simple things. Their recreations are sordid. They find their delight in things that are dull and drab, much as an animal would.

You can well believe that Jim Conley watched at the door while white men and women met secretly.

Jim Conley probably has no convictions concerning a God, nor belief in anything divine. It is this belief that makes the unintelligent negro a lovable person. Jim Conley lacked it, and became repulsive.

Most negroes have a simple faith and an unorthodox theology. Their immorality is ingenuous and childlike, and they err, when they do, through weakness or forgetfulness. Not Jim Conley.

Every Southerner knows Jim Conley's type.

The negro did not laugh in the three days of his ordeal. He never smiled. And it was not because he was afraid; it is just that his type is not given to smiling.

If he had squirmed in his seat or seemed uneasy, if he had revealed the slightest impertinence or the least bit of humor, if his eyes had only once seemed to plead with Luther Rosser to slacken the high tension of the cross-examination, then Jim Conley would have become the kind of negro that white men consider their friend, a human person.

Instead he sat there, his elbows on the arms of the big chair, his hands crossed in his lap, his eyes fixed on the eyes of the man who questioned him, and he answered glibly.

Even when he lied he gave back gaze for gaze, and answered glibly.

This little sketch of Jim Conley has nothing to do with whether his story is true or false. It may be the one or the other. The majority of men who have followed the case are of the opinion that a large part of it is true. Be that as as may. This is an attempted picture of the negro who has become the most notorious negro of Georgia, and it is altogether outside his story.

This is a picture of the negro who watched at the door, who lied, and lied even when he was under oath. His life has been pitched in sordid lines, and he probably forgot long ago that there is such a thing as a conscience or a judgment.

It is just because of this that Conley's story has been the remarkable production it was—a compound of admitted fabrication and probable truth. The negro has no scruples against falsehood. Little of his life, it is likely, has been true, and he could very easily sit unperturbed and tell a story that was false.

Jim Conley is not clever. He was merely running true to form, maintaining his type, when he told his story.

A white man with a similar lack of conscience, and in a similar position could not have been more glib and plausible than Conley. But he would have seemed more clever, and probably would have injured his story because of that cleverness. He would have smiled at times, or appeared careless. Or, if he lacked the temperamental basis of falsehood that Jim Conley undoubtedly has, he would have succumbed and his story would have fallen under the merciless fire of the cross-examination.

Conley Just Unmoral.

Jim Conley was calm, unmoved, unsmiling, even grim—if a negro can be grim. And his story could easily have been true or false. It was sufficiently plausible to be true. It was sufficiently typical of the conscienceless Conley kind of a negro to be false. But however that is, you get the impression that he is not the playful kind of negro you like.

Not clever, not to be coaxed or wheedled or browbeaten into either friendliness or resentment, not to be shamed by a show of his falsehoods, not to be frightened by threat of punishment, Jim Conley with his lies and his placid, unemotional narrative of how he dragged dead Mary Phagan as he would a bundle of rags, gives you to know that the entire sketch of his character may be summed in one word—unmoral.

Dalton Sticks Firmly To Story Told on Stand.

C. B. Dalton, prominent as a witness in the Frank trial, stuck firmly to the story he told in court when he was confronted Saturday by the letter of Miss Laura Atkinson, No. 30 Ella street, one of the young women mentioned in his sensational testimony. She branded his statement concerning her as false.

He maintained that all he said as a witness was true—that he met her, as he had other girls of the pencil factory, and walked home with her from a restaurant near the plant on Forsyth street.

Dalton was emphatic in his reiteration of every detail of the testimony delivered by him from the witness stand.

Here is Miss Atkinson's statement, in full, denying Dalton's testimony:

"Editor The Sunday American: Will you please allow me space to correct a statement made by Mr. C. B. Dalton in his testimony at the Frank trial and published in your paper yesterday? In answer to a question from Mr. Rosser as to whether he ever went to the pencil factory with any one except Miss Daisy Hopkins, he said yes, he used to go to the Busy Bee and wait for the factory to close to walk home with the girls, and gave my name as one of the girls.

"His statement, as I read it in your paper, impressed me as being intended to convey to the minds of those who heard it (and, of course, all who read it) the idea that I was working at the factory at the time he says he went there and that he was in the habit of walking home with me. I have no desire to make any derogatory remarks about Mr. Dalton, but in justice to myself and my good name, I certainly do feel it my duty to say that his statement concerning me is false, and he had not the slightest ground whatever for making it and no right to use my name in any way in his testimony.

"I have known him only about six months, and have never been in his company but three times. On two occasions I was at church with a gentleman friend who was also a friend of his and he walked with us from the church to my home, less than three blocks, and one afternoon while out walking met him and he walked with me a distance of about four blocks. That, and a few conversations over the telephone, probably three or four, mark the extent of my acquaintance with him. I worked at the pencil factory exactly two days the second week in July (last month), and did not even see Mr. Dalton on either one of those days. I had never worked there before nor been there, and have not since.

"Will you please state these facts in your paper and clear up any false impression that may have been made on people's minds concerning me, and the slur I feel has been cast on my good name by having him make such a false statement where it would be published broadcast over the country? I will appreciate it and thank you very much if you will correct the statement. Sincerely,

"LAURA ATKINSON.

"No. 30 Ella Street."

Mary Phagan's Mother To Be Spared at Trial.

A spectator at the trial of Leo M. Frank for the murder of little Mary Phagan remarked:

"I wonder what the mother of the little girl who was so brutally killed thinks of all this?"

Mrs. J. W. Coleman, the mother, was the first witness called at the beginning of the case, now two weeks gone. She was dressed in deep black with a heavy veil about her face. As she pulled back the veil to speak to the jury the expression was calm without a sign of bitterness. And she answered in even tones.

Then the Solicitor opened a little suit case and placed before her the clothes of her little girl.

There was a stifled cry. Those who looked saw a face covered with a handkerchief. That was enough. Solicitor Dorsey put no more questions.

For ten days the grind of the court went on. The mother was forgotten for more immediate things.

Friday she was recalled in the midst of expert testimony on the effect of digestion on cabbage. She came and indifferently told how she had cooked the cabbage that made the last meal of little Mary Phagan. Then she said:

"Mr. Dorsey, will you need me any more? I am so tired. I want to go."

He told her she could go. And it is very probable she will not appear at this trial again.

WIFE QUITTER NOW CHARGED WITH BIGAMY

Search Is Made for Harry Smith, Accused of Having Family in Cincinnati, Ohio.

DURHAM, N. C., Aug. 9.—One of the greatest sensations that ever was known in this city is now drawing to a close, as Harry A. Smith, is charged wife abandonment, is now confronted with a charge of bigamy.

Several days ago Smith was arrested in Rome, Ga., charged with abandoning his wife, formerly Miss Rosalind Wright, who is a member of a prominent family of this city. He was brought back to the city to be tried, and when the time for the case to be completed came a peaceful settlement was made by the parties concerned. Smith promised to take care of his wife and left this city with her for Richmond, Va.

Hardly had the couple left Durham before a message was received here from Cincinnati stating that Smith, up until a few weeks past, had been an employee of a firm there.

After being discharged he left Cincinnati, supposedly in search of another position.

A short while afterward he reached this city and became acquainted with Miss Rosalind Wright. A quiet marriage followed and the couple went on an extended honeymoon, the bride's money being used.

The message from Cincinnati states that Smith has a wife living there and a 9-month-old boy named Banard. Another message unsigned was received by the Chief of Police of Durham, stating that Smith had made a recent visit to Atlanta, and that while there he became engaged to a young woman. No names were were given in the message.

A search is now being made for Smith, who is supposed to be in Richmond, Va., with his Durham wife. The girl's friends here are making every effort to locate the couple.

Ashworth, who has only one leg, requested permission to go into another room and change his clothes, which the bailiff granted. His case is very similar to the disappearance of another Georgia graduate, Harold Telford, who was lost in the Alps several years ago.

Griffin Rector Is Ptomaine Victim

Rev. Clayton Earle Wheat Dangerously Ill From Food Eaten in Atlanta Restaurant.

GRIFFIN, GA., Aug. 9.—Sorrow prevails here this afternoon over the sudden illness of the Rev. Clayton Earle Wheat, rector of St. George Episcopal Church, who is to-day seriously ill with ptomaine poisoning contracted from food eaten in an Atlanta restaurant yesterday afternoon.

The Rev. Mr. Wheat is greatly beloved in Griffin and his illness is all the more distressing because of his recent decision to leave here for a parish in Hingham, Mass. Hundreds of citizens of Griffin in a written request petitioned him to recall his decision and remain here.

It was in preparation for his departure that he went to Atlanta yesterday with his mother, Mrs. Cornette Wheat, to arrange some important business affairs and while there ate the food that resulted in his poisoning. At this time both of them are under the immediate care of physicians and nurses and grave fears are felt for them.

Athens Is Quiet on Test Farm Removal

People Would Like to Have Experiment Station, but Are Not Worrying About It.

ATHENS, Aug. 9.—Athens is quiet on the proposal to move the Georgia Experiment Station from Griffin to the State College of Agriculture. President Andrew M. Soule, of the Agricultural College, is in Niagara Falls for his summer vacation, Professor DeLoach, the new head of the Experiment Station, has gone to Griffin to take up his new work, while Chancellor Barrow announced several months ago that he would oppose, or at least make no move, to have the station moved to Athens.

Of course Athens would like to see the Experiment Station moved here in connection with the State College of Agriculture and most people believe it would be of better service to the State, but no effort will be made to bring the station here.

Griffin Is Fighting To Hold to Station

Delegations Are Sent to Capital to Protest Against Removal to South Georgia.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 9.—The citizens of Griffin and this section have not been unaware of the efforts to take from them the State Experiment Station as evidence of their alertness during the present disturbance over the effort to move it to South Georgia.

Griffin sent from day to day as many as twenty men to Atlanta to appear before the legislative committees and present the claim of Griffin in the matter. The citizens of this county years ago generously gave to the State the land to establish the station and it would manifestly be unjust and unfair now to take the station from Griffin.

It may be taken for granted that Griffin and Spalding County citizens are ready for a good stiff fight over the matter before ever consent will be gained for the station to be moved.

'SHAKING ROCK' ONE OF STATE'S UNIQUE FREAKS

Slight Wind Makes Huge Bowlder in Oglethorpe County Swing Gently as Baby's Crib.

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 9.—One of the natural curiosities of Georgia is to be found in Oglethorpe County half a mile from the courthouse in Lexington. Hundreds have visited Lexington for the sole purpose of seeing the "shaking rock."

In the immediate vicinity of the rock there are many huge granite bowlders. From points near by a number of pieces of granite have been obtained for monuments and buildings. The base to a large shaft erected at Chattanooga was hauled from the quarry here by a special train. Close to "shaking rock" the grounds are beautiful for picnics and dinner parties, and many from Lexington, Athens and other places take advantage of the grounds for occasions of this nature.

"Shaking rock" weighs about twenty tons. It is poised on a triangular base upon another large rock. With several persons seated upon its summit, the mammoth piece of stone can be moved by a slight push. A pressure of this sort sets it moving back and forth a distance of two or three inches.

For 50 years it has been thus standing, and until a few years ago, when the point at the base had become worn, the rock would move backward and forward twice this distance. A wind a little stronger than the ordinary summer zephyr blowing upon the rock from a certain angle would set it to rocking.

LIGHTNING PLAYS PRANKS ON TWO GAINESVILLE MEN

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 9.—Standing in a slaughter house during the progress of an electrical storm, peculiar experiences came to T. S. Jackson and Henry Stephens, two Gainesville men. After the storm was over Stephens discovered that the heel to one of his shoes was clipped off as smoothly as with a sharp knife. Jackson found that his watch-chain had been melted.

Georgia Fruit Men Plan Big Meeting

Horticultural Society Convention at Clayton Sure to Draw Monster Crowd.

ATHENS, Aug. 9.—Plans are being made for the best meeting ever held of the oldest horticultural society in the South, the Georgia Horticultural Society, which will hold its annual meeting at Clayton, in the heart of the commercial apple orchards of North Georgia, August 19 and 20.

C. C. Newman, of the horticultural department of Clemson College, State Commissioner James D. Price, H. R. Hart, president of the Tennessee Horticultural Society; E. J. Watson, commissioner of South Carolina; E. F. Cole, horticulturist for the Southern Railway, will be on the program.

The president of the State organization is R. C. Berkmans, of Augusta, whose father was president many years ago, one of the first presidents the old organization had. There are district vice presidents, but B. W. Hunt, banker and orchardist of Eatonton, is the general vice president. D. T. H. McHatton, professor of horticulture of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, is secretary, and J. B. Wright, of Cairo, is the treasurer.

The selection of the convention place of Clayton with Tallulah Falls nearby and other mountain resort attractions means a big attendance.

Commission Form in Rome Dead This Year

Failure of Representatives to Introduce Resolution in Time Prevents Legislative Sanction.

ROME, Aug. 9.—Commission form of government for Rome is dead for this year, anyway. This comes in face of the fact that an election was held last February, too, when more than 800 votes were cast for the measure and not 100 against it.

Representatives Barry Wright, John C. Foster and W. J. Nunnally failed to get the measure introduced in time for action at this session of the Legislature.

Mr. Wright has drawn up a resolution and will introduce it probably Monday, but he has little hope that it will pass.

PELLAGRA TO BE MAIN THEME AT DOCTORS' MEET

Eighth District Physicians Will Hold an Interesting Session at Elberton.

ELBERTON, Aug. 9.—Pellagra will be a special theme of a series of papers to be read by some of the leading physicians of this section when the Eighth District Medical Association holds its annual meeting in Elberton August 20.

Over several years past the observations and notes of these experts have run, and the papers are, therefore, of greater interest than any other—with the men who made the observations giving their personal experiences with cases in which the patients are well known to many of the members of the association.

Elberton is planning for the entertainment of the visitors and promises splendid social features. There will be practically the entire Clarke County Medical Society in attendance.

The officers of the association of the district are: Dr. W. T. Davis, of Covington, president; Dr. C. C. King, of White Plains, vice president; Dr. Edward M. Coleman, of Athens, secretary and treasurer; and Dr. I. H. Goss, of Athens, district counselor of the State Medical Association.

UNDERWOOD IS MENTIONED FOR SENATE PLACE

Alabama Faces Political Problem as Result of the Death of J. F. Johnston.

HOBSON ALREADY IN RACE

Amendment Providing for Direct Election Causes Doubt as How to Fill Vacancy.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Alabama to-day faces a political problem which is exciting the keenest interest all over the country. With the death of Joseph Forney Johnston, senior United States Senator from Alabama, gossip is rife concerning his successor. Conjecture has been complicated as a result of the recent amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for the popular election of United States Senators.

Despite differences of opinion as to the legality of the proposed election to choose a successor to Senator Johnston, Governor O'Neal has not receded from the position assumed by him in this statement Friday afternoon. He is still of the belief that he is possessed of authority to call such an election, though he has not definitely announced that he will take such action.

Conference With Leaders.

Since there is such marked uncertainty among party leaders as to the legality or expediency of a special election, the Governor will defer issuance of the proclamation pending a conference with members of the Alabama delegation in Congress and other leaders of the party in the State. This conference will be held in Birmingham following the funeral of Senator Joseph Johnston, which will take place here Sunday.

Governor O'Neal arrived in Birmingham to-night. In addition to Senator Bankhead and members of Congress from Alabama, Democratic members of the Senatorial escort accompanying the body of Senator Johnston from Washington will be consulted by the Governor in his effort to arrive at a satisfactory solution of the present complex problem.

In the event that the Legislature is called together in special session there will be further complications. There are about fifteen vacancies in the two branches of the General Assembly which would have to be filled before the election of a new Senator could be legal, according to opinions expressed by State officials.

There is much more at stake than that, however.

The death of Senator Johnston has created an acute situation in the National Senate, where the tariff promoters have but a bare Democratic working majority with which to pass the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill. It has become imperative that every Democratic seat be filled.

O'Neal Asks Advice.

A vacancy exists. Political leaders in the State realize the gravity of the situation and it is for this reason alone that Governor O'Neal telegraphed to Attorney General McReynolds to ascertain the proper procedure in naming a successor. A sealed reply has been received, but its contents are being withheld by Attorney General Brickell until the dead Senator has been buried.

Oscar Underwood, the floor leader in the House, and framer of the present tariff law, is being most prominently mentioned as a successor to Senator Johnston. John B. Knox, a warm friend and supporter of Governor O'Neal, and for a long time prominent in Alabama politics, is another whom the political forecasters are watching closely.

Other Possibilities.

There are still others also. Frank P. Glass, editor of The Birmingham News, and one of the "Original Wilson men," is thought to have a splendid chance at the senatorship in case Governor O'Neal is permitted to appoint, as he is one of O'Neal's warmest friends. J. Thomas Heflin, present Congressman, is another, as are also William D. Jelks, former Governor, and Captain Frank S. White, one of Birmingham's most prominent lawyers.

Of course, there is another possibility—Richmond Pearson Hobson, hero of the Merrimac—who had been conducting a most vigorous campaign to succeed Senator Johnston. Of course Hobson will continue his race—he will not receive the appointment from Governor O'Neal, for they are bitter political enemies.

No Rules Exist in Running Auto

Ask Frank Hammond, He Tried

Mayor's Private Secretary Buys New Car; Nearly Loses His Life and Does Lose Old Friend.

Should you open the subject with Frank Hammond, Mayor Woodward's Napoleonic young secretary, you will come to find out that bridge whist is about the only game that is played according to the rules. In poker, politics, in running an automobile and in most of the others the book of rules doesn't count, Mr. Hammond will assure you.

Particularly, you will be informed is there no Hoyle or Marquis of Queensberry in the motoring game.

And then Mr. Hammond will proceed to tell you of his own exploit, of how he started out on a deed of high emprise, armed with only a book of rules and a knightly heart, to subjugate an untamed automobile. And he will tell you how he came near to being subjugated himself, and how he lost a very good friend.

After the manner of all rising young men, Mr. Hammond decided upon the purchase of an automobile. The first installment paid, the machine duly was delivered.

Smiles on Ownership.

Like a young father or a debutante, Mr. Hammond smiled proudly in the joy of ownership, and called upon his nearest and dearest friends to invite them for a ride. He neglected to mention that all he knew about automobiles was that they had four wheels and were very pretty when new.

Besides, he forgot that he didn't know. A very comprehensive book of rules had come with the car, and, as all the world knows, Frank Hammond is nothing if not conficent.

The automobile came, in charge of a greasy garage man. It was fired up, gasoline stocked and ready for action. The garage man said "good-morning" very politely to the new owner, without warning as to what was coming, and then went back to his greasy shop. Frank Hammond and a trusting friend were alone with the untamed automobile, but unafraid.

Mr. Hammond had seen others do it, and so he spun the crank in front. The engine started. Then, with a surreptitious glance at page 10, book of rules, he manned the wheel, covered as many pedals with his feet as possible, and pulled the lever.

The car jumped ahead. The trusting friend lost his hat. Mr. Hammond almost lost his head, but was sufficiently alert to push the lever far back in the other direction. As the automobile had jumped ahead, now it leaped backwar.

Car Starts Turkey Trot.

With one finger between page 10 and page 11, praying for an opportunity to read, Mr. Hammond jabbed his lever back and forth, experimentally. The car turkey-trotted in the most approved fashion.

"'Smatter?" gasped the friend, his confidence waning.

"Carbureter," gasped Mr. Hammond in reply.

As a matter of fact, his knowledge of the carbureter hardly extended far enough to give him confidence in his spelling of it.

The car stopped of itself. Maybe it was surprised at the startling accusation its owner had just made.

The trusting friend had a brilliant idea. He decided to get out. But Mr. Hammond, still confident, more confident than ever, perhaps, now that he could look at page 11, held him in. The machine was started in a rational manner.

"Fine," remarked Mr. Hammond.

In his path loomed a young woman. The automobile was close upon her, and Mr. Hammond saw with alarm that he must slow up. The machine refused to slow up. It was as obstinate when Mr. Hammond begged it to stop altogether.

He closed his eyes and prayed that the young woman would not leave a house full of motherless children. Maybe she wasn't married at all, he thought, with a throb of relief.

Youn- Woman Escape-

But she saw the automobile in time, and jumped. Just in time she saw it and jumped.

And on the questing automobile sped, out Peachtree road. Angels would not have dared their feat. No, where did they stop or slacken speed, because they couldn't.

They found themselves in the center of the street car track after a while, with a Buckhead car bearing down upon them from the rear, and rapidly coming nearer. The automobile had another stubborn fit, and refused to turn from the strait and narrow path it had found for itself. On came the car.

Mr. Hammond nerved himself for a desperate effort. He rose in his seat and threw all his strength into the strangle hold he had on the steering wheel. The automobile turned sharply and sped to the side of the road. An embankment was there, but this automobile, being a brave little thing, feared embankments no more than it did the threats of the man who owned it and head on into the bank of clay it went, there to stop.

The Buckhead car had stopped, too, and the trusting friend, escaping Mr. Hammond's clutches, boarded it. Mr. Hammond remained to mourn.

But that was some time ago. Now Mr. Hammond knows that it wasn't really the carbureter that was the trouble on the first day.

KENYON CITES PERIL IN TARIFF BILL TO SENATE

Democratic Leaders Despair of Accomplishing Work—Legislation Delayed by Speeches.

WHAT CONGRESS DID TO-DAY.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The Senate met at noon.

President sent special message urging immediate legislation to make effective agreement of The Hague opium conference.

Smith, of Michigan, renewed charges that Mexican lobby is at work here and has influenced the State Department.

Williams, of Mississippi, asserted an organized effort was being made to bring about war between the United States and Mexico.

Kenyon discussed the tariff, declaring it more important to control trusts than revise tariff.

Foreign Relations Committee authorized President to accept bust of William Pitt from British donors and approved nomination of James M. Sullivan to be Minister to Dominican Republic.

The House was not in session. Meets Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Democratic leaders despair of making headway on the pending tariff bill. It was not until after 5 o'clock this evening that consideration of the steel schedule was reached for the first time since the adjournment Thursday evening.

Senator Kenyon addressed the Senate to-day on his amendment to put the metals controlled by trusts and monopolies on the free list. He paid particular attention to the aluminum trust, and read extracts from its contracts and briefs in suits that have been brought against it. He showed that the agreement between the American and European branches of this international trust prohibited the sale of aluminum products by European manufacturers even to the Government of the United States.

Mr. Kenyon showed in detail the character of such supplies used by the army and navy and pointed out that in time of war this Government, through the operation of the contract between the trusts, would be at the mercy of the American corporation. He also disclosed that this whole question had been exploited before the House committee, and in the face of such a showing the committees in the House and Senate had given the products of the aluminum trust a duty that amounted to considerable protection.

Senator Fletcher, who was to have been chairman of the commission that went to Europe to investigate the subject of rural credits, but who was kept here on account of the tariff, spoke at length on that subject. When he had concluded the tariff bill was taken up and one or two minor paragraphs of the steel schedule disposed of.

WEDS PRETTY NURSE WHOSE AID SAVED HIM

West End Merchant Now Blesses Pneumonia Germs Which Brought Him a Bride.

Benjamin C. Harris, a young West End merchant, fervently called for blessings Saturday upon the kind germs that sent him to his bed with a severe spell of pneumonia two months ago. The occasion for the prayer was his marriage to Miss Pearl Goudeloch, a capable young woman who nursed him through his period of illness back to health and to a happiness that he hadn't known before.

They were married by Dr. S. R. Belk, pastor of the Park Avenue Methodist Church, and left Saturday for Gainesville, the home of the bride, whence they will go to Los Angeles.

Miss Goudeloch is a trained nurse of the Wesley Memorial Hospital and the daughter of a prominent family of Gainesville. She first met Mr. Harris as he lay near to death in the home of his friends, Mr. and Mrs. Milton D. Mitchell, in West End.

The attending physician, not liking the turn the pneumonia was taking, called for an efficient nurse. Miss Goudeloch was retained.

Mr. Harris looked up at his nurse with something in his eyes that was more than the awe a trained nurse inspires. Miss Goudeloch returned his glance:

"We'll pull him through, doctor," she said, confidently.

West End is beautiful in the springtime. There are little parks and shaded streets through which a convalescent young man can walk by the side of the trained nurse whom he doesn't really need in a professional capacity any longer, and can talk to her of many things. And what Mr. Harris said didn't make her a bit angry.

The courtship was brief. With the aid of the Mitchells, in whose home they met, the marriage was arranged and together the little party went to the Methodist parsonage for a quiet ceremony.

Getting Acquainted With Your Own City!

Atlanta has grown so rapidly that Mr. Busyman, engrossed in the "moil" of his own restricted environments, rarely "glimpses" beyond the horizon of his personal sphere of activity. "HE KNOWS SHE GROWS"—but his knowledge of the INDIVIDUALITY of her growth is entirely beyond his "ken." Old industries double their capacity—NEW ones rear their walls. The BYRD PRINTING COMPANY is an instance of BOTH OF THESE CONDITIONS. They DOUBLED THEIR CAPACITY, and MOVED INTO A NEW ESPECIALLY BUILT FIVE-STORY CONCRETE BUILDING; and for absolutely MODERN equipment, and completeness in every department, no plant in America is superior. MEN AND RELIGION No. 73

CHILDREN OF GEORGIA

"AND THEY ALL WITH ONE CONSENT BEGAN TO MAKE EXCUSE."

Luke 14:18.

They were at dinner.

Jesus said:

"When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind,

"And thou shalt be blessed."

One at the table pretended to be in sympathy. He began smugly:

"Happy is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God."

The hypocrisy of the man and all others like him was unmasked in the answer made by Jesus. He said:

"A certain man made a great supper and bade many—

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse."

One said one thing, another another.

With one it was a field; with another it was new oxen.

In the end, the Lord said:

"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

And from the highways and the hedges called He His guests.

Are you a maker of hypocritcal phrases as was the man at the Pharisee's dinner table—pretending a love for that which is just and right?

Or, to-day, are you trying to do the will, not of man or men, but of Him who died for you?

Let us have done with excuses!

While spending thousands on fields, hogs and cattle, say not:

"We are unable—

"We can not give proper care to these girls—

"These children must go down in shame because of our lack of money—

"But our beasts we must protect whatever the cost."

If animals are more valuable than girls, let us say frankly: but you know that this is untrue.

You know what Georgia would do.

Consider, then!

The Bill in the House providing a Reformatory for Girls is No. 4—ahead of any other measure appropriating money.

The Penitentiary Committee has approved it.

Unanimously the Appropriations Committee has recommended that it pass.

Why, then, should beasts and fields be provided for by later bills and nothing done for Georgia's wayward and delinquent girls?

BURWELL of Hancock, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman and the vice-chairman, BLACKBURN of Fulton, HARDEMAN of Jefferson, MILLER of Bibb, NUNNALLY of Floyd, PAULK of Berrien, RAGLAND of Talbot, REDWINE of Fayette, RHODES of Clarke, SHUPTRINE of Chatham and SLADE of Muscogee constitute the Rules Committee of the House.

The Bill is in their hands.

Monday is the final day in which the measure can be heard and enacted into law at this session of the Legislature.

These eleven men, THE RULES COMMITTEE, will not prevent a hearing, say their friends. We believe that they will do more, that they will help to pass the Bill.

For they know the worth of a girl-child of ten to fourteen.

And they can appraise a cow or hog.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

CAPT. WILLIAMS' LIFE A STORY OF ACHIEVEMENT

Rose From Turpentine Camp Chopper to Head of World's Greatest Naval Stores Firm.

LEAVES $7,000,000 FORTUNE

Romantic Narrative of Career of Georgian Includes Building of G. F. & A. With Own Cash.

By M. A. ROSE.

Penniless at the age of 23 years, Captain Jesse P. Williams, fresh from the Confederate Army, started work chopping V-shaped gashes in pine trees for $1 per day. He was buried Thursday, leaving an estate variously estimated by close associates at not less than $7,000,000, nor more than $9,000,000.

Here Are Things He Did.

Here are some of the things he did:

He built 250 miles of railroad without borrowing a cent.

He built up the greatest naval stores firm in the world.

He took one man, whose salary was $20 a month, from behind the counter of a store. The man to-day is worth $500,000.

He took one man from between the plow handles of a South Georgia cotton patch. The man to-day is worth $400,000.

He took one man, who was in bankruptcy, with liabilities $40,000 in excess of assets. That man to-day is a millionaire.

No man who followed him but became rich. No man who deserted him but failed.

A Hurricane in Action.

"A hurricane in action, sweet as a girl when the storm was over," say his friends. "Everyone had to do his bidding. He demanded of partners and directors blind faith. But he always divided fairly. He was the lion, but he took no lion's share."

Owning thousands of acres of virgin pine forest, Captain Williams decided to develop the tracts by pushing a railroad through them. In this way he made it possible for turpentine operators to lease orchards and ship their product to market at Savannah.

A short road was built. Turpentine operators leased lands from him, shipped turpentine over his road and consigned to him as factor—three profits for Williams. But this is beside the point.

There came a time when it seemed profitable to undertake to push the road farther, tapping territory the Central of Georgia regarded as its own.

Major Hanson, then the "Great Chief" of the Central, was wroth, not to say indignant. He met Captain Williams in the Knickerbocker Hotel in New York City.

"Stick a spade in the ground beyond your present terminus and I'll break you," Hanson shouted.

"I'm going to do it," replied Captain Williams.

He did.

Does Work in Record Time.

His charter required that a certain number of miles of track be laid by a specified time or the charter became void. The steel was late in coming. Eight days before the expiration date on the charter there were twenty miles of track to be laid.

Three hundred men were put to work, and they toiled in four-hour shifts. With a day and a half to spare, the line was completed and the charter was saved.

But to revert to his career. He was something less than 19 years of age when the first gun was fired at Fort Sumter. He left the Virginia Military Academy, went to his home in North Carolina and raised a company. Politics robbed him of the captaincy and he was to be made a lieutenant. He went back home and raised another company. This time he was captain.

At the end of the war he was penniless and went into the turpentine woods. He began, they say, "chopping boxes"—gashing the pine trees to make ready for the cups which catch the turpentine. This is the roughest form of manual labor. Even now it pays not more than $1.50 a day.

But soon he was buying timber and selling it to sawmills. A little later we find him with a few dollars invested in turpentine orchards and in little country stores.

Starts Naval Stores Firm.

Twenty years of this netted him $40,000, and with this $40,000 he went to Savannah.

He started the J. P. Williams Naval Stores Company, and it grew until, when he sold it, it was the biggest of its kind in the world, and it was appraised for sale at $3,400,000.

This was when he retired, owning the G., F. and A., 300,000 acres of land in Southwest Georgia and Florida, and stock in a dozen or so banks. He had made large gifts to Emory College, had been president of its board of trustees; had become, in short, one of the most prominent and one of the most wealthy men in Georgia.

But his health had failed. His friends, their views perhaps colored by their loyalty to their leader, say that his passing from the world of business was pathetic. The pack turned on the lame lion, they say. He was forced out—though at his own figure. He came to Atlanta six or seven years ago and lived at No. 478 Peachtree street.

He sent a message to the board of directors who forced him out.

"There will come a time," he said, "when you will want my help."

That was five years ago.

He died at 12:15 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. At that minute, in Savannah, in Pensacola and in New Orleans 700 naval stores operators were in conference, their problem how to escape bankruptcy. They had no leader.

"He never was beaten," says his confidential man. "He doesn't know he's beaten yet."

'Boots and Saddles' for Seventeenth's Soldiers

Infantry Post Boasts a Crack Cavalry Squad

Daily Drills in Mounted Duty Are Held at Fort McPherson—Daring Horsemen Perform Startling Feats.

WRESTLING on horseback, a thrilling feat of horsemanship. Privates Voetick and Pryle of the Seventeenth are the contestants.

In this remarkable photograph one of the contestants has been dragged from his horse by his opponent and is clinging desperately to the bridle to keep from being thrown under his horse's hoofs.

It's "boots and saddles" at Fort McPherson nowadays, in spite of the fact that the Seventeenth is an infantry regiment and proud of it. The new order of military things includes a mounted detachment with every infantry regiment, and there are horse soldiers with the Seventeenth now as intrepid as ever were Colonel Roosevelt's Rough Riders.

Daily drills in mounted duty are held at the fort, particularly during the summer months, when the annual school of instruction is under way. The practice includes not only the manual of arms and field maneuvers, but real training in rough riding, wrestling on horseback, obstacle races and cross-country hikes.

Yesterday morning a squad of horsemen moved out on the drill ground. A party of admiring infantrymen watched them from the front porch of the barracks.

"I reckon you'll find some of the best riders in the army in that bunch," spoke out one of the watchers.

Also Carries Artillery.

In the squad were Privates Voetick, Todd, Purdue, Flynn, Williams, Pryde and Reynolds, picked horsemen all of them. At the fort they swear by these men for their ability to ride.

The mounted detachment carries also light artillery equipment, and it is believed that their assignment to service with the infantry has heightened the usefulness of that branch of the service considerably.

Lieutenant Supplee is in command of the mounted detachment, which is yet less than a year old. The men who serve as mounted infantrymen are picked for experience in horsemanship, and no recruits for this branch who have not the ability to handle their mounts under all circumstances.

The same squad of horsemen that were hailed as the best riders in the army were paired Wednesday afternoon for public exhibition of wrestling on horseback. Atlanta was vouchsafed the sight of a new sort of contest, and a thrilling new sport it was at that.

Wrestling Holds Used.

Time and again the wrestlers, locked in the well-known holds of orthodox wrestling, including everything from the hammer lock and half nelson to the new and deadly toe hold, spurred their horse one way or the other in the effort to throw one another to the ground.

Usually the clutches were not so satisfactory, the wrestlers getting their hands merely on the shirts or trousers of their adversaries. Then shirts were torn and trousers, too. In the case of the match between Privates Houston and Reynolds, Houston lost his shirt altogether, and emerged from a desperate clinch bared from the waist up. He blushed, and spurred his mount madly to the stables.

Promise of other matches in the future are held out by the authorities at the post.

Camp Meetin' Hymns Jar Starnes' Nerves

Atlanta Organist Leads Revolt Against 'Throw Out the Life Line' and Others Like It.

Dr. Percy J. Starnes, former city organist of Atlanta, is leading a fight at the National Convention of Organists at Asbury Park, N. J., against the old-time songs and hymns that "ringle and jingle."

Included in the hymns that are slated to be placed under the ban are "Throw Out the Life Line," "The King's Business," and "Hallelujah, Thine the Glory."

The motto of Dr. Starnes and his followers is that anything with a "ringle or a jingle," no matter who wrote it or what its effect may be in revivals and camp meetings, should be omitted from the hymnals and sung no more.

Warrants Served on Four Moose Officers

Dictator of Birmingham Lodge Criticises Coroner's Jury That Probed Initiation Deaths.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—John P. Abbott, dictator of the Birmingham Lodge of Loyal Order of Moose, issued a statement this afternoon, following the serving of warrants on four officers, charging manslaughter in the second degree, in which he criticised the findings of the Coroner's jury that investigated the deaths of Christopher Guzin and Donald Kenny, who were killed during their initiation July 24.

Abbott says the jury only heard expert testimony instead of getting after facts.

Daughters to Unveil Shaft to Col. Sanders

Grandchildren of Confederate Chieftain to Take Part in the Ceremonies.

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 9.—Arrangements are being made by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Longstreet Chapter, for the unveiling of the monument to Colonel C. C. Sanders on the postoffice lot. The memorial was erected several months ago with funds raised by the children of the Confederacy. Colonel Sanders was one of the most beloved men in this entire section.

The life-size statue, in sitting position, was made in Italy and has just arrived. The monument is one of the most beautiful in the State, with marble columns and fountains. Six little grandchildren of Colonel Sanders will likely lift the veil.

Buys a $4,000 Auto To Use Cheap Gas

When Ex-Senator Scott Has Burned 60,000 Gallons He Will Have Saved Cost of Car.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The house of Senator Nathan Bay Scott, of West Virginia, is divided against itself, with automobiles as they issue. The Senator and Mrs. Scott are devoted to each other. They attend the same dinners, theaters and social functions together, but they arrive and depart in separate motor cars. It came about this way:

The senator has been paying 22 cents a gallon for gasoline to propel the family machine. He discovered a place where the price was 17 cents. With much glee he informed Oscar, the family chauffeur, of his discovery and directed that Oscar purchase gasoline there.

Oscar demurred because the gasoline emporium was too far from the family mansion. Mrs. Scott backed him up. Whereupon Senator Scott bought himself a $4,000 machine, acquired a chauffeur to navigate it and divorced himself from the old machine and Oscar.

After Senator Scott has burned 60,000 gallons of gasoline he will have saved the cost of the car. But he doesn't have to ride with Oscar.

Slim Garrison Left At Fort McPherson

Eight Companies of Seventeenth Infantry Assigned to Duty at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Fort McPherson will have but a slender garrison after to-day, with eight companies of the Seventeenth infantry assigned to duty at Camp Perry, Ohio, in connection with the national rifle shoot of the State guardsmen. Five companies will leave Atlanta early to-day to join three companies of the regiment already established at the camp.

The regular ranks of the eight companies are swelled to 65 men each by assignment of men from the other companies, leaving less than 200 soldiers in Atlanta out of the regiment's total field strength of about 709.

The soldiers assigned to duty in Ohio will go with Major Holloway, of the Third Battalion, in command. They will remain at Camp Perry for about a month.

FINAL EXHIBIT PLANS TO BE PERFECTED MONDAY

Final plans for the permanent exhibit of Atlanta manufacturers which it is proposed to establish in the Chamber of Commerce Building, will be perfected at a meeting of the general committee Monday at noon, in the Chamber of Commerce rooms in the Empire Building.

Reports will be heard from the various subcommittees that have charge of the arrangements. W. H. Leahy, acting secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, declares there is no doubt of the success of the exhibit.

MAYOR AVERS HE WILL LEAVE CITY DEBT FREE

Woodward Declares $700,000 Deficit He Faced on Entering Office Will Be Wiped Out.

"Atlanta will not owe one dollar at the end of my term. The $700,000 indebtedness when I took the oath of office will have been paid, and the improvements will not have been retarded to any great extent."

The above statement was made by Mayor Woodward after the conference Saturday afternoon of the Mayor, the Finance Committee and the chief clerk to the Comptroller, which was called by the Mayor to discuss ways and means of raising the extra $13,220.74 apportioned by the Finance Committee on unanticipated receipts.

Locks Financial Door.

"The action of the Supreme Court in the decision handed down in the crematory case gives me the power to lock the door on the finances of the city of Atlanta, and I intend to keep it locked except where expenditures are absolutely necessary," continued the Mayor.

"The Finance Committee, which is acting in accord with this decision and my wishes, will not appropriate one dollar except where the money is in sight to meet the obligation. It is my duty to see that not one obligation of the present Council will fall on the shoulders of the 1914 Council. In this way we will be able to start off the new year in good financial condition.

No Excuse for Debt.

"During my former term as Mayor I was forced to take hold with an indebtedness of approximately $350,000. This was paid before I retired, and I intend to see to it that no money that is not absolutely in sight shall be appropriated by the Finance Committee or the City Council."

The Mayor was convinced that this money could be raised and consented to its appropriation, but he put the committee on notice that in the future whatever money they appropriated they must show where it was coming from.

The meeting was indeed a friendly conference, and every member of the Finance Committee and the Mayor appeared well pleased with the results of the meeting.

HAUPTMANN WRITES PLAY OF MONTEZUMA'S REIGN

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Gerhart Hauptmann is writing a new drama, to be called "The White Saviour," and which deals with the introduction of Christianity into Mexico by the Spaniards under Cortez.

One of the principal characters is its King Montezuma. It is predicted that the play will be a striking piece of Christian symbolism and that it will have some remarkable scenic effects.

DEVICE TESTED TO STOP TRAIN DERAILMENTS

Atlanta and Montgomery Business Men and Railway Heads See Shepherd Invention.

In the presence of representatives from practically every railroad in the South, members of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and a delegation of 35 members of the Montgomery Business Men's League, the Shepherd automatic railroad switch was given an official test at Oakland City Saturday. The demonstration was made on a spur track of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, and among the most interested spectators was C. A. Wickersham, president of the road, who expressed delight at its operation.

The switch, the manufacture of which furnishes Atlanta's newest industry, worked perfectly. Its object is to remedy the open switch evil by closing the switch automatically after a train has passed into a siding. A locomotive and freight car were used in the test, a dozen runs being made through the switch.

M. L. Shepherd, of Montgomery and Atlanta, is the inventor of the test, and through the backing of the Business Men's League of Montgomery a $700,000 corporation has been formed for its manufacture. The name of the concern is the Shepherd Automatic Switch Company and the shop in which the switch used Saturday was made began operations here several weeks ago.

The device works on a combination of locked switch, guard rail and powerful coiled springs. The guard rail runs for a length of 80 feet parallel with the outer rail of the siding track. When entering the siding, the flange on the wheels forces a passage between the outer and guard rails, drawing the guard in about two inches. As the last wheel passes from between the guard and outer rails, the guard is jerked back in close connection with the rail, releasing the lock on the switch and causing it to close, thus leaving the main line clear.

Opening of the switch for the entry of a train into the siding may be handled by the engineer in throwing a lever on the locomotive, or by requiring one of the train crew to unlock the switch. The switch not only closes automatically after a train has entered the siding, but also closes immediately upon the train moving out of it.

Presentation of a silver loving cup to the inventor, Mr. Shepherd, by members of the Montgomery delegation added a pleasant touch to the occasion. General Counsel O. L. Holloway, Montgomery, made the presentation speech.

Laundered Money Counterfeiting Bar

Bureau of Chemistry Urges Its Adoption Upon Secretary of Treasury for This Reason.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Detection of counterfeit money through laundering was to-day announced as an important factor in the fight to have Uncle Sam's bank notes starched and ironed before returning into circulation.

The Bureau of Chemistry has found that laundered money is almost identical with bank notes fresh from the hands of the printer and urges the adoption of the process upon the Secretary of the Treasury.

Whaddye Mean, We May Lose Our Dog?

Walter Taylor, Generalissimo of Crusade Against Curs, Starts Catchers Out Monday.

Walter Taylor, City Clerk, generalissimo of the crusade against stray dogs, issued emphatic instructions to the crews of his dog wagons to start out Monday morning. Blooded and Pomeranians and ring-tailed curs alike are to be impounded and chloroformed if they venture upon the streets or the alleys without a tag attached to their necks.

The tags are the most peculiar Atlanta ever has hung upon the necks of its dogs. A dog's head has been designed so as to form the figure "13" on the little brass disk. The tag is the "open sesame" to the streets of the city, and no dog will be spared who ventures forth without it.

Friedmann Has to Face New Charges

Originator of Tuberculosis Serum Is Accused of Unprofessional Conduct by Assistant.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Charges of unprofessional conduct have been preferred against Dr. Friedrich F. Friedmann, originator of tuberculosis serum, and he may have to defend his conduct before a court of honor of physicians and surgeons. Julius Benjamin, father of Dr. Harry Benjamin, who went to the United States with Friedmann as the latter's assistant, and who, as a result of his association with the creator of the turtle tubercular vaccine, was left stranded in New York City without funds, is pressing the charges.

POISONING FROM FOOD

Every Bite May Poison—All Could Be Methuselahs If We Did Not Shorten Life by Self Poisoning.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system. This is termed Autotoxemia, or Self-Poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition result. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and bowels, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and with the consciousness that your health is safeguarded against any indiscretion in eating.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. No other liver medicine is equal to it; don't take the inferior substitute that may be offered. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT, 25c. If yours can not supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage prepaid.—(ADVT.)

Fight Forecast on Lynch in Typo Meet

Enlargement of Executive Committee Again To Be Issue at Nashville Convention.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 9.—Stormy times are predicted in the International Typographical Union when the fight comes before the annual convention, opening here Monday, on the question of revising the executive policy of the organization. This question precipitated a lively fight at Cleveland last year when the San Francisco delegation led an unsuccessful move to enlarge the executive committee from three to twenty members to be elected from as many districts.

The present board is composed of President James M. Lynch, second Vice President Hugo Miller and Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays. The anti-administration forces will be led, it is said, by Fred Barker, of Spokane, who made the unsuccessful race for president against Lynch.

Waltz and Two-Step Enough for Cordele

Chaperones Put Ban on Hugs, Tangos, Trots and Other New Steps.

CORDELE, Aug. 9.—The bunny hug, tango, turkey trot and other modern dances are entirely too immodest in the opinion of the fair sex of Cordele who are accustomed to the waxed floors. Like the slit skirt, such dances will probably not come in popular favor at any early time in this city.

Chaperons at local balls recently have positively forbidden the new dances, and the young folk, no matter how ardently, but perhaps secretly, they may desire to introduce them, must let the waltz and two-step still suffice.

Twin Boys' Skin Is Turning to Black

Eighteen-Month-Old Babies Are Suffering From Rare Malady Known as Hodgkin's Disease.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black. The disease is pseudo leucaemia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpurcles greatly diminished.

The twins are the children of Anthony Amato and they were born eighteen months ago. They were then white. Then their skin began growing dark.

Odd Nubbin of Maize Produced at Stockade Farm Shown at Police Station.

The city stockade has produced a freak in the shape of a five-fingered ear of corn.

In other words, five well-defined fingers hang from the ear of corn as they do from the hand of a human being.

Candler Is Honored at Agnes Scott College

Handsome Iron Gate a Memorial to Him

Candler Memorial Gate at Agnes Scot College.

A handsome iron gate has been erected at the north entrance to the campus of Agnes Scott College as a memorial to the late Milton A. Candler, of Decatur, for years a trustee of this famous institution.

The gateway is 56 feet wide and has a clearance of 9 feet to the top of the gate, on which, in letters of bronze over a foot tall, is written: "Agnes Scott College." The posts are cast and hte gate's palings are of steel.

On the memorial tablet, which is on the left-hand post, there appears this wording:

"This gateway erected as a memorial of Milton A. Candler, a colaborer in the building of Agnes Scott College and for many years one of its faithful trustees, 1913."

Mr. Candler, whose name is honored, belongs to the famous Candler family of Georgia. He graduated at the University of Georgia and served with signal distinction in the Confederate cavalry. He married in Decatur, and is survived by several children. After being admitted to the bar, he entered upon the practice of law in the firm of Candler & Thompson. He represented the Fifth Congressional District for three terms in Congress and declined to have his name presented at the convention for nomination a fourth time. He was intensely interested in education, a strong Presbyterian, and has been referred to as one of the purest and strongest men the South has ever known.

Agnes Scott College numbers among its valued possessions other handsome memorials. Agnes Scott College is a memorial to the mother of the late Colonel G. W. Scott, and Rebecca Scott Hall is a memorial to the wife of Colonel G. W. Scott. The Jennie Inman Hall is a memorial to the deceased wife of S. M. Inman, of Atlanta. Lowry Science Hall is a gift of Colonel R. J. Lowry, the well-known Atlanta banker, and Carnegie Library is a gift of the famous Scotch Presbyterian, famous for his gifts of libraries.

WILSON SUMMONS SENATORS IN CRISIS

ministration with demands for information.

At the conclusion of the conference shortly before 11 o'clock it was learned that the status of Envoy Lind is as follows:

1. That he has no definite proposal to make to Huerta or anyone else.
2. He will go right on to Mexico City, probably Sunday.
3. He will confer with American Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy and communicate the facts he learns to President Wilson, who will then decide the course to be followed.

The facts show that Uncle Sam has called the bluff of Huerta "that Lind must come bearing recognition or be regarded as a pernicious foreigner," President Wilson's Envoy will carry out the task with which he was charged when he sailed for Mexico, and Huerta and his Government will be held responsible for his protection in carrying out his task.

Held a Counter Blast.

The action of the President in summoning the Foreign Relations Committee was made public in a significant manner, and was construed everywhere as a counter blast to the irritating actions of Huerta. These were denounced to-day by competent State Department officials as intolerable and as those of a reckless politician who is trying to force intervention or war on the United States.

Aside from that official view of the case it was said the President planned for the first time to-day to place the whole Mexican case before both Democrats and Republicans of the powerful Senate committee which has primarily to do with treaties and the recognition of foreign governments and the formulation of new policies.

This invitation of the President was also an answer to the statements by Republicans—and Democrats, too—that both parties in the Senate and House were left in the dark as to the negotiations of Mr. Bryan and the White House in Mexico.

State Department officials intimated that the action of the President in summoning this important committee of Congress could not be separated from the threats of Huerta and the absolute necessity of letting Huerta know that this Government would protect Mr. Lind if there were any doubt at all as to Huerta's ability or will to give the President's personal friend and representative protection.

Diplomatic Move Not New.

There is nothing new in diplomatic usage in the case of a Government which asserts it will hold another Government responsible personally for its personal envoy. The previous Administration announced to one Government that it would hold its President personally responsible for injury to an American citizen should he suffer without fair trial.

The present Administration notified the Federal officials at Chihuahua that they would be held responsible for miscarriages of justice in a case in which the State Department was assured that American citizens had committed no wrong.

In the mind of officials who do not feel themselves bound to make public the acts of the Government, even when Huerta makes his acts public, the impression amounts to a certainty that Charg d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy has been instructed to say on his own behalf that this Government would demand a personal accounting should the American envoy suffer any injury.

These officials say that any persistence in wrong toward Lind by the Huerta Government would be a contingency too fearful to contemplate.

Awaits Lind's Report.

Secretary Bryan corrected the impression to-day that it was proposed to give out simultaneously in Mexico City and at Washington "the proposals" which Envoy Lind is bearing to Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy. Mr. Bryan said that the official statement showed that the purpose of the President was to make it plain that he would only announce a "new policy" with Mexico whenever he had reached one after the arrival of Mr. Lind in Mexico.

Senator William Alden Smith charged on the floor of the Senate that a paid attorney and lobbyist of the Constitutionalist party in Mexico had the ear of the State Department and was attempting to influence the attitude of the United States towards Mexico.

The charges of Senator Smith caused a sensation on the floor of the nation's highest legislative body.

"I say," said Senator Smith, with warmth, "that Sherburne G. Hopkins, an attorney of this city, paid counsel for the Constitutionalists, who drew $50,000 from the Madero administration for services he had the ear of the State Department in the past and present administrations. Herr Summerfeldt, a German citizen, personal friend of President Madero and of his widow, for two years has been lobbying to influence American action in Mexico and is now in Washington assisting in a propaganda on behalf of the Constitutionalists."

Democrats immediately began an effort to stifle discussion of the Mexican question. Senator Smith would not be choked off.

"I claim," he retorted to Democratic protests, "that this attorney has attempted to influence the Department of State. I believe he had much to do with the removal of Ambassador Wilson. If the Senate wants proof, let it summon these two men and expose this junta."

Bryan's Position Questioned.

Senator James characterized the statements of Senator Smith as a serious charge against the State Department. Senator Swanson wanted to know why the matter had not been brought up in the committee on Foreign Relations when Secretary Bryan was present, instead of in the open Senate.

"I said the State Department, not the Secretary," replied Mr. Smith.

"Well, the Senator knows the Secretary runs the department, retorted Mr. Swanson, warmly.

"I have heard it so said, but I am not sure of it," said Mr. Smith.

Chairman Overman, of the Lobby Committee, insisted that Mr. Smith should bring the matter before his committee. Mr. Smith denied the authority of the committee and declared that what he had to say would be submitted on the floor of the Senate.

"It is my opinion," interjected John Sharp Williams, "that there is an organized, syndicated effort with money behind it to bring about intervention in Mexico. The editorials of all the big papers have a suspicious sameness that makes it evident there is a concerted effort with money back of it. It is time we should pause. I do not feel even brave when talking about war with Mexico, a country disrupted and torn with dissensions."

Mr. Smith said his remarks were called forth by misleading statements printed in the Record concerning the Constitutionalists and he was not willing these reports should stand unchallenged.

It was time for the truth to come out, Mr. Smith declared. He said his purpose was to make public on Monday the report of his special committee that investigated conditions along the border, but he subsequently agreed to bring it up in committee first.

Senator Crawford, Republican, counseled moderation of speech in discussing the Mexican question, and by common consent the discussion ended.

At the morning session of the Foreign Relations Committee the Mexican question was referred to only incidentally. If Senator Bacon had anything special to bring up he postponed it because of to-night's White House conference.

MEXICO'S REPLY FAILS TO ASSURE ENVOY LIND OF ADDED PROTECTION

Special Cable to The American.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Replying to-night to a message from Secretary of State Bryan calling attention to reports of threats made against the life of Envoy Lind, Foreign Minister Aldape reiterates the position of the Government in respect to mediation.

Senor Aldape's statement reads:

"Answering your telegram to President Huerta the rumors mentioned are absolutely without foundation. Mr. Lind, like any foreigner, may pass through the country without being subject to any molestation.

"American citizens, like other foreigners, have enjoyed, and will continue to enjoy, the most complete guarantees on the part of the Mexican government and people. All are under the protection of our laws, and the case of Mr. Lind will not modify our intentions and precedents.

"Furthermore, there should exist neither fear nor anxiety respecting the security of foreigners, for which there likewise is no foundation.

"Respecting mediation, of which mention has been made, the government of Mexico already has made its declarations."

No Demonstration as Lind Reaches Mexico.

Special Cable to The American.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 9.—John Lind, personal envoy of President Wilson, arrived here to-day on the United States battleship Louisiana. He had sailed for Mexico from Galveston on the New Hampshire, but was transferred before his arrival here.

There was no excitement among the Mexicans in Vera Cruz over the arrival of the American envoy, whose appearance at Mexico City is expected to bring a culmination of the diplomatic crisis between Huerta and the United States Government.

According to reports current when Mr. Lind arrived here, the American State Department plans to hold him here until Sunday before starting on the final stage of his journey to Mexico City. This trip by train will require twelve hours.

Mr. Lind arrived before he was expected and took by surprise William W. Canada, United States Consul. Mr. Canada took immediate steps to welcome Mr. Lind, and it was understood that the two would confer with Bayard Hale, who has been President Wilson's personal representative.

Though the Mexicans showed no excitement over Mr. Lind's arrival, a thrill was caused among the American colony when it became known that the following wireless dispatch had been flashed ahead of the ship bearing him:

"Governor Lind wishes to see the United States Consul and Admiral Fletcher immediately upon his arrival at Vera Cruz."

No explanation for this conference could be secured before the arrival of Mr. Lind. With the arrival of the Louisiana and New Hampshire here the United States has a formidable naval representation.

When Mr. Lind was seen on board the Louisiana he was reticent as to his plans of action. He intimated, however, that his departure for Mexico City might be deferred until Monday.

Though there was no demonstration when the Louisiana came into port, a large crowd gathered as soon as it became generally known that the envoy was on board. Considerable disappointment was expressed when it became known that he would not land immediately. Whether this decision was reached because of threats against the envoy's life is not known, but such is the current belief.

Lind In No Danger in Mexico, Says DeLa Barra.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Francisco Leon de la Barra, Mexican Ambassador to France, who became Provisional President of Mexico when Diaz was deposed, to-day said that John Lind, President Wilson's personal representative, would be shown every consideration and afforded ample protection in Mexico. Talk of mob violence, he said, is not to be accepted as representing the views of the intelligent people of Mexico.

"Mexico is facing a grave crisis," said Ambassador de la Barra, "but I know my countrymen would be the first to resent any insult that might be offered to Governor Lind."

Mrs. Clark has recently been made an honorary member of the Catherine Montgomery Chapter, D. A. R., of this city.

It was planned to keep the presentation a secret from Mrs. Clark, but somehow or other she found it out and merrily informed the donors that she had begun to worry about some one stealing her diamond pin.

OIL LETTERS KILLED HIM POLITICALLY, SAYS FORAKER

Exposes by William Randolph Hearst Responsible for Downfall, Declares Former Senator Before Senate Lobby Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Former Senator Foraker admitted to the Senate Lobby Committee to-day publication by William Randolph Hearst of the famous Standard Oil letters killed Foraker's chances for re-election to the Senate in 1908.

After identifying a letter received from Martin M. Mitchell, the confessed ex-lobbyist, making a report of political activities in Ohio in Foraker's behalf, the former Senator said:

"It was the morning of the day Mr. Hearst's disclosure was made public. An attack had been made on me by Mr. Hearst which destroyed my chances of election, saying I had acted as counsel for the Standard Oil Company. This had created a sentiment in our State very prejudicial to me. I continued as a candidate in the campaign only because to retire from it after I had become a candidate would look like an admission that there was some justification for the attack, whereas there was not any."

Senator Foraker said Muhall, whom he had known thirty years, greatly overestimated his own importance.

No Aid From N. A. M.

Foraker said he had never received aid from the National Association of Manufacturers and while he received a fee of $500 for the part he played in the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1896, he was not in the employ of either David Lamar or Edward Lauterbach in an injunction case against the Union Pacific in 1903.

The House Investigating Committee opened its probe with introduction of correspondence showing the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers in fighting labor legislation in Congress and various attempts to have "conservative" men named as members of House committees.

Discussing the recent sundry civil bill, with its provision prohibiting the expenditure of certain funds for the prosecution of farmers and labor unions under the Sherman law, James A. Emery, counsel of the N. A. M., wrote to President John Kirby, Jr., of the association, on March 7, 1913, after President Taft had vetoed the bill:

"I want to emphasize as hard as I can the importance of lining up for a tremendous demonstration when this bill reaches President Wilson, as it undoubtedly will, with the same provision in it. You will then have an early opportunity to decide whether the glittering Democratic motto, 'Equal right for all and special privilege for none,' means anything or whether the Administration has surrendered completely or will merely turn over the Department of Labor.

Objection to Secretary Wilson.

"I note, by the way, your reference to a letter from C. W. Post on the question of a protest over the appointment of Wilson (Secretary of Labor). A protest on this subject is a mere waste of breath, and on the whole I am inclined to think the whole purpose of this department will be shown up quicker with the unions in control of it than in any other way. Gompers will run it characteristically with a high hand, and if the whole thing does not smell to Heaven within a year I shall be very much astonished.

"By that time Democratic simplicity will probably mean a union label on the White House stationery and the President conferring with the Waiters' Union over the appointment of his steward. At present we have nothing more startling in Jeffersonian simplicity than the news Mrs. Bryan is making a new suit for the Secretary of State, and cakes and ginger ale will be served at the dinner for the British Ambassador. Toothpicks will, of course, be an after dinner course at all Cabinet receptions, and the demand for dress suits will be confined to waiters in the hotels."

In this same letter Emery advised Kirby, "if you have any idea Taft would have vetoed this bill of his own motion, get over it. A list of public men who had 'pie' in this $113,000,000 appropriation bill included many prominent men in both Houses."

ANNA PAVLOWA, noted Russian dancer, who has quarrel with her dancing partner on London stage.

Pavlowa Strikes Her Partner; Stops Dance

Quarrel With Novikoff on London Stage Is Like Falling Out With Mordkin.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Pavlowa caused a sensation at the Palace Theater tonight by an open quarrel with her dancing partner, Novikoff, the incident being parallel with her rupture with Mordkin last year.

While dancing Adagio, Pavlowa suddenly hit Novikoff a smart blow on the shoulder. Novikoff immediately left the stage while Pavlowa walked off by the opposite side, the orchestra finishing the piece to an empty stage. Pavlowa afterward performed two solo dances, but Novikoff did not appear again.

Organ Concert for Merchant Visitors

Charles A. Sheldon Has Arranged Light Program Especially for Benefit of Visitors.

Business men in attendance on the Southern Merchants' Convention will be given a free organ concert at the Auditorium by Charles A. Sheldon, under the auspices of the Atlanta Music Festival Association Sunday afternoon. The entertainment was inspired by the fact that a great number of visitors are here for the convention who might otherwise find a long, hot Sunday afternoon rather dull.

A program of light and popular airs befitting a warm day has been arranged, including a series of variations of the old melody, "Old Folks at Home," which, it is pronounced, will be the feature. Marches, popular interpretative bits, and but a single classical number, the prelude to "Lohengrin," will make up the program.

Sylvania Sheriff Saves 4 From Mob

Negroes Accused of Slaying of A. J. Joyner Taken to Savannah for Safekeeping.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—While a mob gathered at the county jail at Sylvania bent on lynching four negroes believed to be implicated in the murder of A. J. Joyner, Sheriff Joyner, a relative of the dead man, secretly took the prisoners out of jail and rushed them to Savannah.

The negroes are Chris Green, George Ledbetter, Felix Mitchell and William Lowery. They will be held here until it is thought it is safe to return them to Sylvania. Feeling is running high there now.

LOS ANGELES TO AID IN EXAMINER SITE DEDICATION

Civic Bodies and Officials to Participate in Cornerstone Laying of Great Newspaper Plant.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—On Monday at 12 o'clock will commence the ceremony of the placing of the cornerstone of the new Los Angeles Examiner building at Eleventh and Broadway.

Because the spirit of California has made this building possible, part of this ceremony will be the raising of the California Bear flag over the great edifice now already partically completed. The event will mark the progress of a great newspaper in a great city. Planned under the auspices of the Advertising Club of Los Angeles, and representative business men, the program for the cornerstone laying reaches broad and comprehensive proportions.

Great Chorus to Sing.

The music of four great massed bands will sound patriotically at the appearance of the flag, Madame Esther Palliser, the famous prima donna will sing the new song of Southland progress written for the occasion by Miles Overholt, and a chorus of 100 trained voices will mark the laying of the cornerstone.

From the lips of one who has made a great mark in America's history will come the final address of faith in Los Angeles and its people—William Randolph Hearst.

There will come, too, during this ceremony a novel procedure calculated to remind the younger generation of the event. A motion picture will be taken of the event, showing the ceremony and surrounding trong. Immediately after the picture has been taken, the film will be developed with all haste and within a few hours a hermetically sealed canister will be placed in the cornerstone.

To William Randolph Hearst will be presented by Mayor Rose the silver trowel of the cornerstone laying. The opening words of the ceremony will be spoken by the Rev. Charles Edward Locke, who will be presented by Ernest Ingold. Then James R. H. Wagner will come to the platform and present to A. W. Kinney, president of the Chamber of Commerce on behalf of the people of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Examiner, the California Bear flag.

Mr. Hearst to Speak.

After Mr. Kinney's reply to this, the Rev. George Donahue, acting for Bishop Conaly, will speak. The Rt Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop, of Los Angeles, will give an address. After the speech of Mr. Hearst, Dr. Sigmund Hecht will say the closing word.

Before the ceremony at the new building, an escort with Chief of Police Sebastian acting as grand marshal, will proceed from Central Park to the old Examiner building at Fifth and Broadway. Here Mayor Rose, the speakers and Mr. Hearst will join the party and be escorted down Broadway to The Examiner's new site and the scene of the cornerstone laying.

Husband Says She Kissed Count's Foot

Wife Brings Counter Charge That He Is Unduly Friendly With Stepmother.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Counter suits have been instituted in divorce proceedings by Harold D. Johnson, of the Colonial Life Insurance Company, and his wife, Mrs. Harriet L. Johnson, in the Supreme Court at White Plains.

The husband alleges that his wife is so infatuated with a certain Italian count that she frequently kissed his foot.

Mrs. Johnson alleges undue intimacy on the part of her husband with her stepmother, who is designated in the complaint as "one Anna J. R."

Johnson has entered a general denial to his wife's charges, while the wife's attorney, Mirabeau Towns, ridiculed the foot-kissing episodes complained of by Johnson.

Steamer's Crew Deny Sighting 'Titanic'

Officers Say Wreckage They Saw Was Sixty Miles South of Disaster Scene.

Special Cable to The American.

SOUTH SHIELD, Aug. 9.—Officers of the steamer Lucline, which has arrived here, deny the report that they saw the Titanic wreck apparently resting on top of a ledge of rocks. What they saw during their trip from Bordeaux to Philadelphia was some wreckage consisting of a part of a mast and some gear that was probably attached to a submerged object. They were 60 miles south of the scene of the Titanic disaster, although in the same longitude. They discredit the supposition that the Titanic rests upon a submerged reef.

LEGISLATURE TO LINE UP BEHIND SLATON'S BILLS

Complete Change of Attitude Makes It Probable Governor's Program Will Carry.

Completely changing its attitude toward the reform measures advocated by Governor Slaton, the Georgia Legislature is preparing to line up solidly behind him and put through a portion, at least, of the program of constructive legislation that he advocated in his platform and in his messages.

Administration bills that were defeated last week, following the fight ensuing on the attempt to bring out the Hixon-Searcy liquor bill, and the filibuster that frustrated it, again will be placed on the House calendar before the Legislature adjourns Thursday.

The forces of the administration, led by Speaker Burwell and the members of the Ways and Means Committee, will center their efforts on three bills that were defeated last week. These bills offer the people of the State an opportunity to vote upon constitutional amendments that would, if passed, put the taxation system of the State upon a solid business basis, and that would relieve the unfortunate conditions that have arisen since the State has found itself unable to pay the country school teachers.

Two of these amendments provide that the school levy each year shall be limited to 21-2 mills, and that the pension levy shall not exceed 1 1-2 mills. The third provides for an additional tax levy of 1 mill in 1915 and 1-2 mill in 1916, which would not materially increase the taxes of any property owner in the State.

Introducion Ill-Timed.

Neither of the three bills was defeated overwhelmingly, each lacking only a few votes of receiving the required two-thirds majority. The bills were introduced at an unfortunate time, immediately after the defeat of the Kidd resolution calling the Hixon-Searcy bill out of committee, and many of the extreme prohibitionists in the House allied themselves with the opponents of any kind of tax reform and voted against the measures, through a mistaken idea that Speaker Burwell had not acted according to the rules in declaring the Kidd resolution out of order.

Within the past few days, however, the warring factions have gotten together, and now Mr. Kidd stands almost alone in his desire to get the Hixon-Searcy bill out for action at this session, it being a generally accepted fact that the bill could not by any chance pass the House, and that its introduction would only result in tying up the House and rendering impossible legislation of any kind.

Representative Akin, of Glenn County, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and a member of the Rules Committee, said Saturday that the committee probably would try to bring the school and pension levies before the House Monday or Tuesday. Leaders in the House declare that both the bills have an excellent chance of passing, inasmuch as there is nothing in them to offend the enemies of tax reform, as they neither lower nor raise the present rate of taxation. They merely provide for a businesslike disposition of the revenue.

Seek Reconsideration.

There is more opposition to the proposal for an additional tax levy than there is to the other two bills. An effort probably will be made Monday or Tuesday to induce the House to reconsider its action in defeating this measure, and if this can be done, strenuous efforts will be made to secure its passage when it again is brought before the House. The friends of this bill, if they can secure its reconsideration, probably will gain many votes with the argument that no action the House could take on it would actually call for the additional levy. Its passage by the House would merely give the people of the State an opportunity to vote whether they wished to increase the taxes a small amount in order to pay its teachers, or continue to stand out as the only State in the United that permits its employees to remain unpaid for six and eight months at a time.

The Senate has about cleaned up its work, and is waiting for the action of the House on important measures. The Sheppard substitute to the Lipscomb bill that recently passed the House probably will be taken up by the Senate within a day or two, and indications are that it will be defeated. The Senate committee that considered the bill has prepared a substitute to the Sheppard substitute which provides for a State Tax Commissioner and County Boards of Equalization. This probably will be passed by the Senate.

EDNA GOODRICH, beautiful American actress, who discovers that no duke is available for her to marry.

No Duke Available For Edna Goodrich

London Society Much Amused by Actress' Announcement She Is to Wed Peer.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Great amusement has been created by a cabled report of Edna Goodrich's announcement that she is to marry an English duke.

"It is a pretty story," comments The London Daily Mirror, "but of the 26 dukes, nineteen are married and five are widowers, the youngest being 67 years old.

"Of the remaining two, the actress couldn't have met them on a houseboat at Henley."

Of course there is the Duke of Westminster, whose penchant for charming actresses is well known, but he is not free to marry again, not yet.

CONFESSES TO SLAYING WHEN REFUSED PARDON

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Frank Collier, a negro whose application for pardon was refused by the Prison Commission in Atlanta, to-day broke down and made a complete confession of his responsibility in the murder of Lewis Robinson, another negro, pleading only that Robinson was attempting to cut him with a knife. Collier has heretofore maintained innocence.

CERTIFIED MILK DEPOTS TO BE OPENED SOON

Dairymen Eager to Learn Details of Plan of Commission of Medical Association.

Members of the Certified Milk Commission during the past few days have been approached by dairymen from all parts of Fulton County who are much interested in the movement to provide certified milk.

As outlined in the project, certified milk will command possibly 15 cents per quart. This price has been decided upon by the commission, which was recently appointed by the local medical association. At least three certified milk depots will be opened in Atlanta in a short time. The qualifications of milk necessary to receive certification are many and are based on rigid hygienic conditions of milkers, cows, dairies and milk depots. The cows will all be examined by doctors to ascertain whether or not any tuberculosis infection is present.

Certified milk, it is stated, will keep in cold storage for a period of 30 days. Dr. S. A. Visanska, who has been active in the movement to gain certified milk, stated Saturday that Louisville now had a number of certified milk depots which were doing a thriving business.

"Certified milk was introduced in Louisville several years ago," said Dr. Visanska. "At that time there were only two certified depots, but as the number of certified depots grew, disease of all nature has decreased, especially as regards infants.

"On August 23 and 24 the State Dairy Association will have an exhibit in Atlanta. The exhibit is called the Southern Railroad Dairy Instruction Association. Farmers and dairymen attending will be fully instructed as to just what constitutes ideal conditions which promote health."

PLEDGE OF GOVERNMENT AID IN MOVING CROPS EASES MONEY CONDITIONS

South and West Give Hearty Approval to Secretary McAdoo's Policy, but the East Looks Askance at Proposal—Low Balance in Treasury To Be Result.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Monetary conditions have been strengthened by the Government's proposition to supply treasury funds to aid the movement of crops next fall. The business outlook is steadily brightening, but the situation is not entirely free from uneasiness owing to the insistent demand for new capital in this country and Europe.

In the domestic market the total of new issues recorded for July was over $95,000,000, an increase of more than $64,000,000 compared with a year ago. A considerable portion of this sum, about $60,000,000, was issued to take up maturing obligations, and the maturities this month are expected to reach nearly $25,000,000, so that the net amount of new capital applications must be considerably below a year ago.

The phenomenal report of the steel corporation had much to do with the strengthening confidence in the general market. The large receipts of grain induced by good crop conditions and close money will furnish increased traffic to the railroads, stimulate exports, provide a good supply of exchange, strengthen our credit abroad and make gold exports more difficult, if not impossible. In fact, before long this country probably will be importing gold.

Secretary McAdoo's announcement that he would place from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 of treasury funds in the national banks of the South and West created the same impression on New York bankers as his statement June 12 that he would not hesitate to issue $500,000,000 of emergency currency under the Aldrich-Vreeland act if the banks so desired. On that occasion the Eastern bankers considered the Secretary's announcement uncalled for and likely to create misgivings in the minds of many regarding financial conditions. Worse than that, the statement was thought to be ill-advised at the time, as it might undo all the good that had been done by the preaching of economy and retrenchment on the part of leading bankers.

The South and West, however, looked upon Mr. McAdoo's plan as beneficial to the agricultural districts in relieving the strain on finance at a critical period. Not only bankers, but prominent merchants and manufacturers, commended the Government's move. A concrete opinion of the policy announced was that it came at an opportune moment and averted a period of stringency by the application of sound judgment.

Acceptance of commercial paper by the Government established a precedent. The wording of section 5153 of the Revised Statutes providing that the Secretary of the Treasury shall accept "United States bonds and otherwise" as security for the deposit of Government funds has been the subject of much controversy. Prior to 1902 all public funds carried with national banks had been secured by United States bonds exclusively. References to the Congressional Record disclosed the fact that the framers of the national banking act in 1864 intended that United States bonds and, if necessary, additional security in the shape of personal bonds were to be offered by the depository banks. For years afterward this was the interpretation of the law.

In 1902, however, Secretary Shaw, among his other innovations in the administration of the Treasury, began to accept other bonds besides United States bonds from depository banks. He took the ground that the wording of the act clothed him with the requisite authority to do this. His decision provoked criticism at the time from those who contended that he had placed a distorted construction upon the statute. It was, they said, as though the law read "United States bonds or otherwise." Again in 1906 Secretary Shaw resorted to this expedient to relieve the monetary strain.

In 1907 Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou, in the throes of the panic, followed his predecessor's example and received territorial, State, municipal and railroad bonds as security. But after the panic the Government began to draw down its balances in the banks and ordered those bonds to be taken up first that were known as "other bonds."

There is just as much merit in accepting commercial paper against Treasury deposits as accepting paper as security for circulation. Especially in the present condition of the commercial paper market this may contribute relief to the situation. In this respect it may demonstrate the ability of the proposed new currency system where the intended circulation will be based upon paper, and this feature is pleasing to students of finance.

The general funds of the United States Treasury at the end of July showed total assets of $267,000,000. This includes the $58,200,000 of United States funds in national bank depositories. Deducting current liabilities of $170,900,000 makes the net balance in the general fund $131,000,000. This figure does not represent the free available surplus which the Secretary could draw upon for making further deposits in the banks. As $58,000,000 is already in the banks, the Treasury has actually free in its possession $73,000,000. From this is to be deducted the balance in the Treasury offices, representing limited tender or practically unavailable silver bullion and subsidiary silver coin approximately $24,000,000. There is, therefore, about $49,000,000 actually available in the Treasury of the United States for further deposits in the banks.

The last time the Treasury's working balance was reduced to uncomfortable proportions was during the 1907 panic. In November of that year the working balance at one time fell to approximately $5,000,000. On that occasion, however, the Government had as much as $250,000,000 in the depository banks.

Canadian and Union Pacific Are Leaders in Weakness—Metropolitan Preferred Is Strongest.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Stocks were generally quiet to-day. Attendance on the floor was small and traders were apathetic. Canadian Pacific and Union Pacific were the leaders in weakness here and abroad. Metropolitan preferred was the only one of the ordinary active issues to show any degree of strength. Erie's report for the year aroused favorable comment.

Of the news factors, the Mexican situation was the most interesting, because of suggestions that violence might be expected in Mexico City inside of twenty-four hours.

Before the close the market showed a hardening tendency, but price changes were unimportant.

The steel tonnage figures given out shortly after noon showed, as was expected, a large decrease. The falling off for July amounted to 407,961 tons, bringing the aggregate of orders on July 31 down to 5,339,316 tons.

News and Notes Of Grain Crops

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Speculation has drifted from the wheat pit over into corn. All the big players of the country are to be seen in the pit presided over by Andrew Brennan, and they have found that it is only necessary to make purchases of this grain on weak spots and await an opportunity to rake in a handsome profit on the advance. The crop reports from the corn belt have continued to show further and marked deterioration and not only the city speculator but also the countryman has come into the market on a large scale and on the buying side.

* * *

Such big men in the Southwest as Jacob Schreiner, Sr., Je T. Milliken and others have purchased goodly quantities of corn at Chicago owing to the burning up of the crop in their immediate vicinity. The speculative world at Kansas City has taken on corn at Chicago and sold it at a profit. The same may be said of New York and Baltimore speculators. Even the speculators at Minneapolis, who seldom know the price of corn or the action of the market, have taken to the bull side of that cereal and made money accordingly.

* * *

The losers are scattered from one end of the country to the other and they have been largely men who expected to be able to secure the actual corn for delivery, but this they have been unable to do. Foreigners have taken a whirl in corn and they have lost heavily. Wall street won early and lost later. The greater the crop losses throughout the belt the tighter the holders grasp the corn now in the cribs on the farms and in country elevators.

* * *

The wheat market has narrowed down to small proportions because of the falling off in the export demand for that grain and the fact that millers are no longer to be seen at Chicago as buyers. Millers in the interior are now enabled to secure all the grain needed at home and this condition will continue for some time to come.

Macon Cotton Plan Barred by Arkansas

'Hold for 15 Cents' Movement Fails to Get Past 'Blue Sky' Law of State.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., Aug. 9.—The Southern States Cotton Corporation, with headquarters in Macon, Ga., and which promises to pay farmers 15 cents per pound for their cotton, can not do business in Arkansas under its present contract form, according to State Auditor Coffman, who to-day, under the "blue sky" law, refused to grant it a license.

H. S. Mobley, president of the Farmers' Union of Arkansas, asked if, under the contracts as offered in this State, the farmer would be guaranteed 15 cents per pound for cotton out of the assets of the company or would have to look to the "proceeds of the sale of the cotton" for his pay. He also asked if the farmer would not stand to lose on the cotton held by the corporation and for which "script" had been issued unless cotton itself should bring 15 cents per pound.

Attorney General Moose stated he could not see that the company's contracts bound it to pay 15 cents for cotton for which "script" had been issued unless "proceeds of the sale of the cotton" should meet this amount.

President Mobley to-night issued warning to the farmers of the State, declaring the contract is "highly deceptive" and, "in the hands of persons who might not be disposed to deal friendly with farmers," might cause the farmers loss.

Pig Iron Sales Fall To Smaller Volume

Price of $11 Per Ton Likely To Be Firm for the Rest of the Year.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 9.—Pig iron selling still is going on, though not in as great volume as was noted last week, as the quotations have landed on an average of $11 per ton, No. 2 foundry.

The make is holding its own as compared to what it was during the past week. Figures as to production for the month of July show little difference as compared to the month previous. The manufacturers are looking to a curtailment of production.

Pig iron being sold now is mainly for delivery during the last three months of the year, and some for export. It is understood that more than 22,500 tons of pig iron will be exported from the Southern territory during the balance of the year. There is to be considerable iron delivered into the Chicago district. Consumers there have not been able to get all the iron they need in the home territory. The belief is now expressed that the $11 per ton quotation is likely to remain firm until the end of the year.

Charcoal iron commands $23 per ton.

Steel market conditions are still active, so far as operations go, and the product is moving steadily.

WESTERN BELT DRY; EAST NOW IS DOING WELL

Cotton Traders Keenly Absorbed in Weather Maps as the Critical Month Progresses.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 9.—Observing the weather map and trying to get a line on its indications is a favorite occupation for many people in the cotton belt at this time. The occasion for such keen interest is that August is perhaps the most crucial single month of the season, for loss sustained therein is permanent. So far the present month has brought no developments of unusual character, but it is a mooted question whether the crop has lost condition enough to be serious. There is no trouble starting an argument when the question is sprung, and around it has hinged in a large measure the fluctuation in the speculative market.

The only sources of a crop scare yet have been Texas and Oklahoma, which usually contribute their share of such scares, though rarely failing to have satisfactory crops as a whole. Lack of sufficient moisture is the trouble, and the rains received about the last of last week afforded but partial relief. They were very welcome and some sections can go for quite a while longer without suffering, but there are large areas which still are suffering and seem to be losing some of their recent promise. Only in the past few days has Oklahoma figured much in complaints, but temperatures have been very high and some sections for weeks have not had enough moisture. Part of the wave that was so disastrous to the corn belt reached into the cotton belt and caused deterioration.

Weevils Cause Trouble.

The central belt has not contributed any complaints worth while, most reports having been glowing in character, though the weevil sections have been suffering as expected. The recent showers tended to stimulate the pest to renewed activity and to increase their number, and it is feared they will take very heavy toll from the crop.

While there was for several days fear of the eastern belt getting too much rain for the crop to do its best, such fears have dwindled since showers have become less frequent, and it now is felt that without something happening during the next few weeks, and provided there is not early frost, the yield will be ahead of last year by a goodly margin.

The market, working down to around 11 cents and a little lower for futures, has not been surprising, in view of the character of advices coming from trade centers. At the same time it is regarded as significant that the disposition to sell as 11 cents was approached lessened and buying orders increased, indicating a feeling among spinners and others that prices were low enough until more light could be had as to consumptive requirements and probable supply. The fact that contract prices were $7.50 a bale under what they were a year ago also acted as a stay against pressure.

Spinners May Buy Soon.

There is still little light on the important question of what spinners are going to do about buying their early supplies. Conditions and other things seem to indicate the probability of them becoming free buyers just as soon as offerings are large enough to interest them, but inquiry elicits the information that the forward commitments by buyers to the spinners are not as heavy as they have been in the past.

It may be that the spinners have provided against some of their requirements by the purchase of October and December futures, for it has been thought for quite a while that support to the market around the bottom levels was coming from the consumers.

Movement of the new crop is not increasing as fast as some predicted, for receipts are much behind two years ago and are very little ahead of last year. The present weather in Texas, however, will force maturity of the crop and hasten movement.

Weakness Develops In Cotton Market

Crop Needs Moisture, but Not an Excess of Rain— Week's Fluctuations Narrow.

By EDWARD LOW RANLETT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Considerable weakness was shown in to-day's cotton market. Although scattered Wall Street houses bought to cover short lines, the more prominent interests were disposed to pound prices.

As a result, initial losses of from 5 to 8 points were more than doubled before the end of the first hour. Shorts took profits over the week-end, but otherwise support was light at the close. At the week-end the market showed some resistance to pressure, which had been rather conspicuous previously. The crop as a whole needs moisture, though it is questionable whether an excess of rain even in Texas would not curtail the yield.

The market fluctuations during the week have been within a comparatively narrow range; perhaps 25 points would cover it all. There has been a fairly good undertone, however, mainly because operators were not willing to sell the market against a small New York stock and the near certainty of early deliveries being promptly taken for export and home delivery. This, of course, means that spinners are waiting for new cotton and that buyers of goods are not sufficiently stocked to make them indifferent to the opportunity of the moderate prices now prevailing.

The week-end statistics show a remarkable continuance of the spinners' demand. The world's takings of American cotton amounted to 179,000 bales, against 151,000 for the corresponding week last year. This involves a decrease in the visible supply of 157,000 against 142,000 last year. All this points to a carry-over of the old crop much less than previously estimated, and is certainly not an argument against higher prices.

In cotton goods division of the dry goods market there seems to be nothing to complain of except some lack of activity. This is not unusual at this season of the year, but there is on the other hand no complaint of accumulation of goods or lack of demand in the general volume of business.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Aug. 9.—The cotton market developed an easier tendency to-day. The official forecast was for showers in the western belt over Sunday, inducing considerable short selling during the early trading. Longs, who had previously bought on the expectation of the drouth remaining unbroken for several days longer, liquidated freely at the decline, October contracts selling as low as 11 cents. At that level shorts were inclined to realize quick profits, and a steadier tone developed before the close, which showed a net loss of 11 to 12 points as compared with Friday's close. Spots officially were reported quiet, with quotations unchanged on all grades. Sales amounted to twelve bales on the basis of 11 7-8c for middling. The first new sale from Louisiana arrived to-day.

EASTERN BELT FARING BETTER THAN RIVALS

Cotton Crop Looks Better Every Day, Experts Agree—Trade Shows Big Expansion.

By M. A. ROSE.

Every day sees the cotton crop in the Southeast looking better.

Traveling men, merchants, farmers, traders—all these who know anything at all about cotton make the same report.

The gloom of the early season, when a delayed start, too much rain, cold weather and then drouth gave crop killers their golden opportunity—this is gone and optimism rules.

It is admitted that cotton is somewhat late, but not enough to matter unless nature violates all precedents and brings an abnormally early frost.

Indeed, from trailing along behind the procession the Southeast has progressed until its crop prospects are better than those of the Central or Western belt. In the Central belt the boll weevil is on the rampage. In the Western belt rain is sorely needed.

All signs point of a good price for the crop this fall. Who knows? Conditions may be completely reversed this year, and Georgia may have a splendid yield at good prices, instead of Texas, which this year has been gloating in its "pot full of money."

The deadlock between the cotton shippers and the steamship lines continues, and the Clarke bill has not been killed by the Senate. These two clouds hang over the spot and futures markets.

Both seem destined to favor the "big fellow" instead of the "under dog." For instance, it now is suggested that the banks accept a guarantee of reimbursement for damage claims from the largest cotton exporters—men of undoubted stability. In this way, the financial institutions might see their way clear to handle the bills of lading for export even with the exceptions on them that the steamship companies propose to inflict.

This lets the small cotton buyer out as effectually as the Clarke bill strangles the small dealer when it comes to "hedging" facilities.

"The farmer may well say with the philosopher, 'God, deliver me from my friends,'" remarked a cotton man the other day. "Here are two schemes designed to help him, and both certainly are boomerangs."

Money continues in lively demand, but no strain is being felt. Possibly it will be the middle of October before the crop movement begins to make its annual grab for the nation's currency, all of which, as Joseph A. McCord pointed out the other day, is sheer foolishness, as general use of the check system would entirely obviate the evil.

Secretary McAdoo's promise to loan the South its share of $50,000,000 has brought excellent results—largely sentimental, but business is all sentiment.

Wholesale and retail trade is showing revival. It was predicted that when it became possible to see what promise the crop held forth trade would expand. This is just what has happened.

Forecasts of Rains Cause Sales of Corn

Thorough Wetting of Belt Will Bring Reports of Better Conditions in the Fields.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—According to the weather maps, there will be rains over the greater portion of the corn belt before Monday. This forecast caused considerable selling not only by longs in order to secure profits, but by those who were daring enough to put out short lines. Some of these speculators feel that the reported losses have been partially, if not wholly, discounted by the advance in prices of 2 1-2@4 3-8 cents during the week.

There are now two sides to the corn market, as was shown to-day, when the lowest prices of the week were reached. The corn crop will doubtless be sensationally short, but in case of a thorough wetting of the great belt, reports will commence to pour in of improvements in all sections, and we will hear from fields that were supposed to have been entirely burned up as likely to produce considerable corn.

Exaggerations as to crop losses have come from all sections, and these have helped the bulls in their campaign. Crop loss advices were received from sections of Iowa to-day, and some of these were of the calamity order, as they claimed there is great business depression in the country owing to the partial crop failures.

Cash sales at Chicago to-day again were small—90,000 bushels.

Losses were shown in wheat of 1-8@3-8 cents to-day, but there were some reactions and advances from the lowest levels reached on week-end covering by shorts. Wheat showed losses of 3 5-8@4 cents for the week and the lowest levels were reached on Saturday. According to the primary movement from week to week, there is no likelihood of any great let-up in the run at the present time, as farmers seem to be willing to part with their grain at the present price.

Oats were lower with the other grains.

September and October lard was under selling pressure by longs to-day, and there were sales also of September pork. Cash trade was quiet.

NEW ORLEANS EXCHANGE MAY GAIN PRESTIGE

Substitute for Clarke Bill Aimed at New York but Not at the Southern Center.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—The weekly weather report, issued Tuesday, did not entirely confirm the private reports of heavy rains in Texas. According to the Government, rains were still needed over large portions of Texas, and in Oklahoma it was stated that vegetation was suffering from lack of moisture and that general rains were much needed.

The weak tone exhibited by Liverpool, which reopened Tuesday morning after a holiday extending from the previous Friday, encouraged bears to disregard the unfavorable character of the Government weather report. Consequently, prices were hammered rather aggressively after the report came out, and the market closed with October and December contracts selling practically at the level of 11 cents, although middling cotton still holds steady at 12 cents.

Continued high temperatures in Texas and Oklahoma Wednesday, with no rains reported or in sight, gave a better tone to the market, which has since recovered part of the decline established in the early part of the week. Many reports of crop deterioration are coming in from the western belt, and even from Arkansas reports of damage by the prolonged spell of hot, dry weather have been received. Should reports of this character continue for a few days more, a real crop scare might develop.

Fear Clarke Bill.

No advance of consequence is likely, however, as, with the Clarke bill hanging over the market, no bull campaign can be inaugurated. Considering the extent of the short interest that has recently been created, an advance of a cent a pound would be nothing, were the drouth in Texas and Oklahoma to remain unbroken for another week and were Washington to flash out the news that the Clarke bill would not pass.

The news received here from Washington regarding the Clarke bill is considered more encouraging by local cotton interests. The plan that is now being considered by prominent Southern Senators, among whom Senator Hoke Smith and Senator Gore are numbered, is to amend the Smith bill, which specifies the grades to be delivered on contract and calls for commerical differences. To the Smith bill, thus amended, it is proposed to add the Clarke amendment as a penalty.

Favors South.

In this way, the New York Cotton Exchange would be compelled to comply with the regulations proposed by the Government, or else that market would be taxed out of existence. The New Orleans Cotton Exchange, which is only too willing to do business under the terms proposed by the Government and has already adopted the Government standard of types, would thus be able to continue, while New York, being an artificial market, would be practically wiped out of existence. The cotton business of the entire country would thus center in this market, just as the wheat business centers in Chicago.

In anticipation of such an outcome of the proposed legislation at Washington, New Orleans Cotton Exchange shares are being quietly sought. Recently a share sold below $1,500, but now $1,500 is being bid, with no shares offering below $2,000

The Biggest Cavern

The biggest cavern in the world is the Mammoth Cave in Edmondson County, Kentucky. It is near the Green River, about six miles from Cave City and 28 miles from Bowling Green. This wonderful cave consists of a succession of irregular chambers, some of which are very large and situated on the different levels. There are mysterious subterranean rivers in this cave, one of which, the Styx, is about 450 feet long. The caverns have been explored for many miles. In its great domes the most startling effects are produced by the use of lights and fireworks. Strange blind fish and huge bats live in this Mammoth Cave.

25,562,650 VOTES FOR PONIES

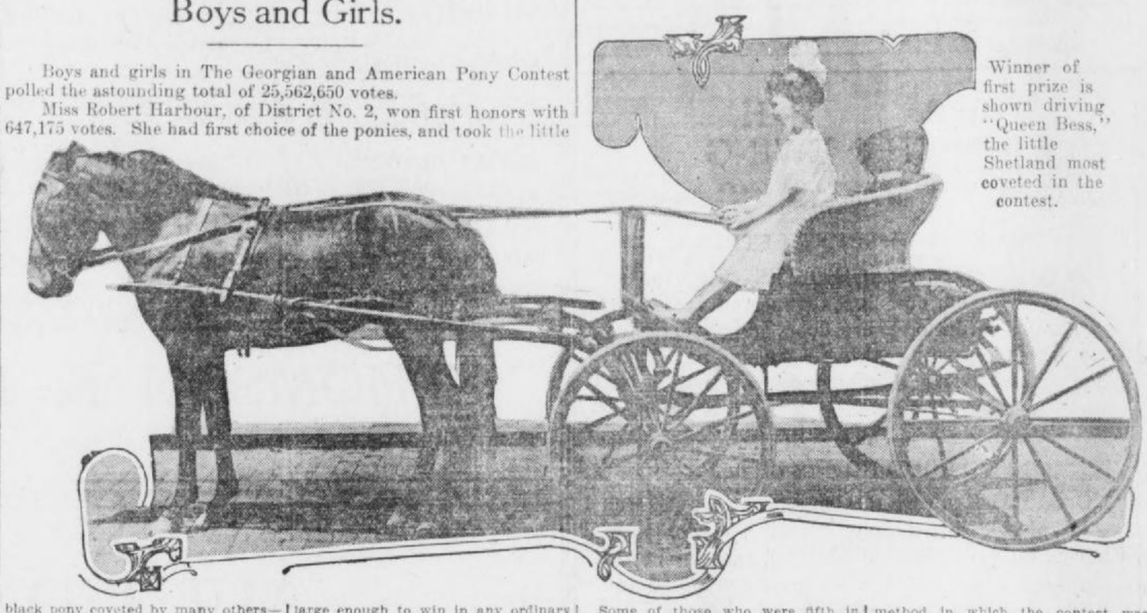
Astounding Mark Reached in Great Contest

Race, Thrillingly Close to the Last, Showed Courage and Ability of Boys and Girls.

MISS ROBERT JESTER HARBOUR, 340 Ponce DeLeon avenue, who polled largest number of votes in Georgian and American's great Pony Contest.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American Pony Contest polled the astounding total of 25,562,650 votes.

Miss Robert Harbour, of District No. 2, won first honors with 647,175 votes. She had first choice of the ponies, and took the little black pony coveted by many others—"Queen Bess."



Winner of first prize is shown driving "Queen Bess," the little Shetland most coveted in the contest.

Totals of more than a half-million votes were made by George Rosser in District No. 3, and Fannie Mae Cook in District No. 4.

Four others, Charles E. Kelly, of Cartersville, with 430,460; Frank Ison, Jr., of College Park, with 474,030; William Turner, with 439,930, and Ross Greer, with 440,925, climbed over the 400,000 mark, and neared the half-million level.

All Had Big Totals.

All the others had big total votes—large enough to win in any ordinary contest. But this was no ordinary contest. It was harder fought than any competition of the kind in the history of Atlanta. This was inevitable, because the prizes were more attractive to children than any which any Atlanta newspaper ever before had offered.

A remarkable feature is the way the contestants were "bunched" at the finish. In many districts there are five, six and even ten who were serious contenders for the prizes up to the very count.

Some of those who were fifth in their own districts would have won a pony, or at least a watch, in some other district. This seems hard, but it is the fate of war, so to speak. Presumably those in the same districts had even chances, and should not be permitted to compete with the boys and girls working in a region where the going, perhaps, was much more difficult.

Hats off to the losers!

Every one of them is "game." There has not been a complaint of unfairness—not a single kick at the method in which the contest was conducted. Nothing but a spirit of fair play, and the motto, "Let the best man win," has prevailed.

There is this much consolation—the boys and girls who worked sincerely in the contest have gained experience which will be invaluable to them in later life—an insight into business methods worth more than any prize.

Then, too, they have the satisfaction of knowing that they have aided in introducing Atlanta's best newspapers into homes where they were strangers before.

Big Money in South's Sweet Potato Crop if Properly Stored and Marketed

Value of Sweet Potatoes Increases 80 Per Cent During Last Ten Years—Ninety Per Cent of Crop Grown in South Atlantic States. Great Demand Not Supplied.

CHARLES A. WHITTLE.
Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Speaking of big money-making crops suited to the South, what is the matter with the sweet potato?

For sure corps, good returns and a growing market, take your hat off to the sweet potato patch. Georgia is "pulling down" some $5,000,000, Alabama some $4,000,000, Mississippi $3,500,000, Louisiana $3,000,000, Tennessee $4,000,000, North Carolina $5,000,000, South Carolina $3,000,000, Virginia $3,000,000, Kentucky $1,000,000, Arkansas $2,000,000, Texas $2,500,000, Florida $2,000,000 in sweet potatoes each year.

Ask any groceryman if he ever has enough sweet potatoes to supply the demand. If he has, he is the exception to the rule.

The South is the natural habitat of the sweet potato. It is up to the Southern States to supply the demand. The demand is growing, the sweet potato patches are growing, but the demand is quite a lap ahead and gaining. In fact, there is a wide-open, attractive opportunity for the Southern farmer in growing sweet potatoes. Why not "go to it"?

The Spread of the Potato Patch.

Under the inspiration of a growing price and an enlarging market, the sweet potato patches have extended their area during the census decade previous to 1909 39.3 per cent for the country as a whole. While the Southern States have them all beaten in advantages, every State in the Union is growing potatoes and only four are falling away from the habit and show a decrease in the decade period mentioned. These are Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois and Texas.

Georgia takes first place in the amount of revenue derived from the sweet potato according to census figures. Other Southern States in their order are North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Virginia, South Carolina, Louisiana, Tennessee, Arkansas, Florida and Kentucky.

The increase which the census shows for the last report for each State is as follows: Louisiana 174 per cent, Oklahoma 155 per cent, Arkansas 154 per cent, Alabama 112 per cent, Mississippi 110 per cent, North Carolina 104 per cent, Georgia 85 per cent, Tennessee 84 per cent, South Carolina 70 per cent, Kentucky 66 per cent, Virginia 56 per cent, Florida 37 per cent.

The Southern States grow a very great part of all the sweet potatoes, and will continue to grow them for the special reason that the soil, climate and long growing season favor this kind of tuber. Therefore, the increase in acreage and revenue from this source will belong to the South in the future as in the past.

Increase in Price.

The census report tells us that for the last decade reported that the value of the sweet potato crop in 1909 in the South Atlantic States was three-fourths greater than it was in 1899; in the West South Central States nearly twice as great. Since the South Atlantic States grow over 90 per cent of the sweet potato crop, it is important that particular reference should be made to this territory.

In Georgia, for instance, the average value of a bushel of potatoes increased 13 cents during the census decade and has increased more since then. In North Carolina the increase in price per bushel during the last census decade was 14 cents. In Alabama the increase has been 18 cents per bushel, in Louisiana 9 cents per bushel, in Mississippi 17 cents.

The increase in the value of sweet potatoes in the country as a whole for the last census decade was 13 cents per bushel, or 30 per cent. The increase has been continuing. While there has been a general increase in the value of all crops of the United States, contributing to the higher cost of living, yet the larger demand for the sweet potato has pushed ahead of the general average considerably.

While values have been estimated in generalities of a census report, it goes without saying that the intelligent, thrifty farmer has little to do with such general averages. They are very far beneath him. His yields per acre, his returns per bushel are always much in excess of the general average. It is possible for the intelligent farmer, planting on good land, to grow from 100 to 300 bushels of sweet potatoes per acre. It is easy enough to average from 75 cents to $1 per bushel. It is possible by good storing to get from $2 to $3 per bushel or even more by home canning.

Profits Can Easily Be Increased.

When a farmer finds the local markets flooded at potato gathering time, and can get only 50 cents a bushel, he is disposed to believe that there is not much in the sweet potato business. A great many growers are content to market their crops under such unfavorable conditions, rather than go to a little more trouble and get much better prices.

In some of the potato-growing sections of the South the co-operative marketing societies which have handled the strawberry, cantaloupe, beans or other early crops, also handle the sweet potato crop in its season, shipping to some Northern market. Usually better prices can be had in the Northern market than prevails in the local Southern markets.

Where canneries have been established an increasing amount of sweet potatoes are being canned each year, netting the farmer who knows how to can successfully large returns. Even where the potatoes are turned over to the commercial canning plants the revenue is larger as a rule than is to be obtained upon a flooded market.

Storing Is the Best Method.

More can be obtained from sweet potatoes by storing them than by any other method, with the possible exception of canning. Since canned sweet potatoes are not in as great demand as the natural tuber, of course, there is a danger of overdoing the canning business at the first.

A very valuable bulletin has just been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled, "Storing and Marketing Sweet Potatoes," by H. C. Thompson. This has appeared as Farmers' Bulletin 548, and should be in the hands of every farmer in the South who is interested in growing and marketing sweet potatoes. Its particular value is in its information as to how to store sweet potatoes. It is well known to every grower of sweet potatoes that the storing proposition is quite different from that of the Irish potato. Many methods have been used for storing the sweet potato in the South. Some of them are successful, but most are not.

The usual method is to bank them—that is, bed them in straw and cover up with dirt, preferably under a shed, but if in the open, the mound is covered with boards. This method, while serving well for the Irish potato, is not so good for the sweet potato, which carries a greater percentage of water in its makeup.

It is for the purpose of giving the farmers who grow sweet potatoes a practical, workable storage plan that the bulletin referred to has been issued.

Many Potatoes Spoil.

The writer says that from 25 to 50 per cent of the sweet potatoes stored in pits or banks spoil, and those that remain are not to be considered of first-class quality. He says that the only safe and practical method of storing sweet potatoes is in a storage house.

To keep sweet potatoes in good condition they must be well matured before digging, carefully handled, well dried or cured after being put in the house, and kept at a uniform temperature after they are cured.

A potato is ready to be dug when after breaking one, the exposed broken surface dries in a few minutes. If it remains moist, the potato is not mature.

The potato should be carefully handled when it is intended for storage. It should be put in baskets or boxes and placed in the bins with the least jolting and bruising possible. If stored in the kind of house which is suggested, they can there be properly cured.

The Best Storage House.

While a cheap storage house can be made to serve the purpose, experience has taught that to maintain right temperature the cost of fuel and the trouble will soon offset the extra cost of erecting a good house at the start.

A desirable wooden house is preferable because it is cheaper and easier to keep dry. It should be built on posts or piers to admit of the circulation of air all around it. The "dug-out" or house partly built underground is advised against for use in the South because of the practical impossibility of keeping such a house dry. Moisture, of course, means rot.

For building a storage house that will hold 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of potatoes, a house 20 by 40 feet may be erected. On the sleepers a rough floor can be laid, and on top of this a layer of heavy building paper placed, and on top of this matched flooring.

The walls can be built by putting on the outside of the studding board an inch thick nailed on diagonally. Over this a layer of building paper should be put, and then matched siding. On the inside of the studding a layer of ceiling should be placed; on top of this a layer of building paper, and then matched board of wainscoting. In the lower South it is claimed that the first layer of ceiling on the studding inside may be omitted.

The sides should be well tied together with scantlings four feet part so as to be over the partitions for the bins. Any kind of roof may be used provided it be made tight to keep out the cold. Galvanized iron is preferable. A layer of roofing paper over the rafters will serve to keep the cold air out.

Coat of Paper Needed.

On the lower sides of the rafters should be put a coat of building paper and on this a layer of matched material.

The space between the walls should be left open. No filling serves as well as the air itself for keeping the building free from moisture.

Thorough ventilation is necessary. Put three windows on each side, a door in each end and at least two ventilators in the top of the roof. The windows should be within 18 inches or two feet of the floor and windows and doors should be made to fit tight and keep out the cold. Where glass windows are used, outside shutters should be employed. It is needful that there should be one or more glass windows to admit light, while working inside in the winter. Ventilators in the roof must also be provided with coverings to keep out the cold.

The bins should have movable floors, made of slats one inch thick and four wide, leaving one inch space between each slat. The same is true of the walls of the bins. The purpose in making a movable floor in the bin is to admit of removing, cleaning and disinfecting it during the summer. Between 6 and 12 inches of space should be left in the walls and the bins to admit of the circulation of air. In slatting up the bins, space to the width of the separating scantling can also be made, that is, each bin should have a separate end.

Log House Can Be Used.

Instead of going to the expense of erecting the building described, many Southern farms will be found a tenant house, perhaps a log house, which can be converted into a sweet potato house at little cost, remembering to make them air-tight as far as possible and introduce the ventilation features which have been described.

After the potatoes have been put in the storage house the temperature should be maintained from 80 to 85 degrees Fahrenheit for ten days or two weeks, depending on weather conditions. Ventilation is absolutely necessary at this period and whether the temperature can be maintained at the height mentioned or not, it is better to keep all windows and ventilators open to drive out the moisture-ladened air. If moisture collects on the wall or ceiling at this period a fire must be built at once to dry it out.

When the potatoes are thoroughly dried or cured the temperature should be gradually reduced and kept as near as possible around 55 degrees during the storage season. If the temperature goes below 48 degrees a fire should be made in the house, or the house opened in the middle of the day if the temperature is high enough. If the temperature in the house goes above 60 degrees, the house should be opened in the cool of the day to lower the temperature to 54 or 55. The house should have some ventilation every day.

Secret of High Prices.

Potatoes bruised and cut during the digging and handling accounts for the poor price which many of them bring. The secret of getting high prices is to carefully clean and pack and to put on the market when there is a good demand. The storage house will provide for the latter.

Some Sweet Potato Facts.

Based upon the discussion of the bulletin referred to in this article certain conclusions have been summarized as follows:

The value of the sweet potato has increased about 80 per cent in the last ten years. With methods of storing and marketing the present value could be doubled.

Sweet potatoes can be kept satisfactorily in a storage house where the temperature and moisture conditions can be controlled.

Sweet potatoes to keep well must be well matured, carefully handled, thoroughly cured and kept at a uniform temperature while in storage.

Thorough ventilation is essential during the curing period.

The temperature should be kept at about 80 degrees or 85 degrees Fahrenheit during the curing period and reduced gradually to 55 degrees after the potatoes are cured. Fluctuations of temperature should be avoided throughout the storage period.

The potatoes should be carefully graded, cleaned and packed in neat and attractive packages.

Sweet potatoes should never be marketed in bags nor in bulk.

Veneer barrels or bushel hampers are desirable packages to use during mild weather and double-headed stave barrels or tight boxes in cold weather.

LIND CALLS ADMIRAL IN CONFERENCE AT VERA CRUZ

Ambassador Sends Mysterious Message to Commander of Fleet for Meeting Immediately on His Arrival at the Mexican Port.

Huerta Maintains Iron-Hand Attitude in Spite of International Menace From Revolutionary Armies and Threatened Coercion.

Special Cable to The American.

VERA CRUZ, MEX., Aug. 9.—John E. Lind, special envoy to Mexico, arrived here at 1 o'clock this afternoon on the battleship New Hampshire. He was at once transferred to the battleship Louisiana.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 9.—Captain Snowden, of the battleship New Hampshire, at the direction of John Lind, Special Ambassador from President Wilson to Mexico, to-day sent the following wireless to Admiral Fletcher, commander of the flotilla of United States warships in the harbor here:

"Governor Lind wishes to see the United States Consul and Admiral Fletcher immediately upon his arrival at Vera Cruz Saturday. Governor Lind will not go to Mexico City until Sunday."

Sensational rumors were circulated as to the cause for the conference. The New Hampshire will probably arrive this evening.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Maintaining his iron hand attitude in spite of international menace from revolutionary armies and threatened coercion, Provisional President Huerta to-day continued his diplomatic battle with the United States by giving orders to draft another note of protest against the coming of Special Ambassador Lind, unless the United States recognizes Mexico or halts Mr. Lind before he arrives in this city.

Situation Is Tense.

A tense situation exists here pending the arrival of Mr. Lind, who has been retarded by the State Department at Washington.

Huerta's hope that defiance of the United States might break down the revolutionary spirit in the north seems to have been futile, according to a message from General Venustiano Carranza, leader of the rebels.

This was a reply to overtures to Carranza to join his forces to the regular army in the event of a "foreign invasion." However, Huerta has gained fresh followers among the radical element by his defiance of President Wilson. Supporters of the provisional president charge that the United States is preparing to act as it did in Cuba.

Sensational reports were current today relative to the diplomatic mission of General Felix Diaz to Tokio. Ostensibly Diaz is going to thank the Japanese Government for its representation at the Mexican centennial, but the belief is growing that Japan has consented to make a treaty with Mexico, and that Diaz is really a special ambassador. This treaty, it is reported, has to do with a league of common interests and not with commercial right. It follows the movement of the Government to invite 50,000 Japanese emigrants here to colonize the state of Morelos, which has been nearly depopulated by the rebellion.

Insists on Recognition.

Whether Huerta has any more cards to play in his diplomatic fight against outside interference with Mexican affairs is a question known only to the provisional President and his closest advisers. Huerta insists on "recognition and no parley," but the Government is not in condition to enforce his threat by war.

The national treasury is nearly depleted, and the army material of the country has been thinned to a minimum by three years of revolution.

By diplomacy, however, he might still be able, by playing upon the Latin-American republics' fear of annexation and upon the hostility of foreign powers to the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine, to force the United States into a compromising position.

Even Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy here, is not acquainted with the details of Mr. Lind's mission. He has so informed the Mexican Foreign Minister.

Sulzer Used Funds Of Campaign to Play Market, Is Charge

Chairman Frawley, of Investigating Committee, Says This Is Enough to Warrant Impeachment.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Governor William Sulzer, of New York, was nearly $50,000 in debt as the result of stock market speculations at the time of his nomination, and used contributions to his campaign fund to make additional purchases of stocks while this debt was hanging over him, according to testimony presented to the Frawley committee of the Legislature.

The evidence is sufficient to warrant proceedings to impeach the Governor for violation of the corrupt practices act, Chairman Frawley declares. A decision as to the committee's recommendation is expected by Monday.

The Governor, according to the evidence, had dealings with three different stock exchange firms and was saved from being sold out by one firm by L. N. Josephthal, a Wall Street banker, and a member of the Governor's staff as naval reserve aide. Josephthal, it was brought out, paid a debit balance of $26,739 still standing against the account on July 15 last. This was after the Governor had received repeated calls for more margin.

The Governor's transactions with other firms were for cash, and it was in connection with one of these that Governor Sulzer, according to the evidence, used campaign contributions.

Dedicates Camp at Pacific Grove, Cal., Which Her Generosity Made Possible.

DEL MONTE, CAL., Aug. 9.—Asilomar, the splendid new conference grounds of the California, Arizona and Nevada Young Women's Christian Association, which occupies 80 acres of ground on the ocean shore near Pacific Grove, was formally dedicated with a beautiful ceremony, including a pageant of 400 girls, typifying association work.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, of San Francisco, whose generous assistance last year and this did much to make a permanent camp possible, gave the dedicatory address and gave the conference grounds the name of Asilomar, which means "retreat."

Callie Hoke Smith Capital Debutante

Make-up of First Democratic "Bud Bouquet" Puzzles Washington's Younger Set.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The make-up of Washington first Democratic debutante bouquet is the question that is agitating the younger set. It is confidently expected that Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, daughter of the Speaker, will be one of the buds, and Miss Frances Moore, the daughter of Clarence R Moore, one of the Titanic heroes, another.

Resident society will furnish two attractive debutantes, who are not only socially prominent, but from Democratic families as well. They are Miss Margaret Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Britton and Miss Beatrice Clover, the youngest daughter of Rear Admiral Clover.

A debutante from the Congressional set will be Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia. Other Congressional buds are the Misses Weaver, Church and Duval.

Manuel Pawns His Father's Decorations

Former King of Portugal Unable to Struggle Along on Income of $100,000 a Year.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Despite his allowance of $50,000 a year from King George and at least that sum from private sources, it is learned that former King Manuel, of Portugal, has been forced to pawn the decorations once belonging to his father. One of these decorations, a diamond cross with a large sapphire in the center, is still in the hands of a pawnbroker near Richmond, where Manuel is now staying with his mother, Queen Amelie.

The fortunes of the dethroned monarch will be recouped by his approaching marriage. It is known that he is very extravagant and his mother is none too practical.

The German Emperor has settled the puzzling question of how to treat the exiled monarch's marriage to a German princess. He will allow Prince Eitel Frederick to attend as a special guest, but not as his personal representative.

GIVES OWN LIFE TO SAVE THOSE ABOARD BOAT

Divers Exploring Wreck of Steamboat Peters Lee Find Modern Jim Bludsoe in Hold.

ALL THE PASSENGERS ESCAPE

Engineer Kept Craft's Nose Stuck in Mud Until All Save He Were Safe on Shore.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 9.—Divers who explored the steamboat Peters Lee on the bottom of the Mississippi River at Lake Providence, La., to-day reported finding the body of Engineer Frank O'Neil, his hand holding the engine throttle.

He died there when the boat sank last night, having stayed at his post and held the boat's nose against the shore until the last of the 50 passengers, most of them women, were helped ashore.

O'Neil's act is practically a realization of the martyrdom of Jim Bludsoe, famed in the poem as the steamboat engineer who held her nose to the bank till all were saved, then was burned to death at his post.

A dance was on when the Peters Lee struck a sunken coal barge. A hole was torn in her side. The captain ordered the pilot to steer for the shore. The boat struck the mud, and officers and crew began taking off the passengers.

Frank O'Neil in the engine room kept the stern wheel churning while the water poured into the hold.

A negro shouted through the engine room door that the boat was sinking.

"I know it!" shouted O'Neil. "You fellows get on up front where you can get off! I'll hold her nose agdinst the shore!"

The last passenger was safely landed when the boat sank in 40 feet of water.

Scientist Hints New Immortality Proof

Sir Oliver Lodge, of London, Will Give World Results of His Researches.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Sir Oliver Lodge, whose researches into the unknown world made him famous, will assert at the meeting of the British Association on September 10 a belief in "an ultimate continuity of existence before and after death as essential to science."

It is inferred he has at least new evidence to offer of immortality.

He once told the world "the boundary between life and death is still substantial, but is wearing thin in places."

Slit Skirts Furnish Mosquito Clan With Choicest Barbecue

Trainload of Winsome Stenographers and Milliners Have to Tramp Through Stegomyia Belt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"All those in favor of slit skirts, please stand up."

Millions of full grown mosquitoes and three or four little fellers were rushing wildly out of their apartment houses on he Flushing Meadows, about 7 o'clock last night, and took part in the most rollicking barbacue ever held in the East.

Right in the middle of the salt grass waste were five cars of a Long Island Railroad train, stalled. The lights were out, men were running up and down shouting orders and Flushing was two miles away. After the train had stood for a few minutes, out of the passenger cars poured the choicest morsels of humanity that Mr. and Mrs. Culex Pungens and the little Pungenses ever saw. There were stenographers, typewriters, cashiers, millinery attaches and buxom matrons. Slit skirts were numerous.

In an endless procession the five hundred and more suburbanites trailed over the ties toward Flushing. There is some style in the mosquito belt and every member of the family seemed to know at once which of the passengers was dressed a la mode. The squeals and slaps of the fair ones as they tried to stop the onslaught sounded like a tattoo.

The procession lasted for more than two hours and when the last stenographer reached home a unanimous vote was taken declaring the mosquito a pest. Of course, there were some men along, but what self-respecting mosquito would bother with them at such a time?

FRANK OR CONLEY? STILL QUESTION

Issue Firmly Drawn Between Two Men

Crime Definitely Fixed on One of Pair

Famous Case to Solve Mystery of Slaying of Mary Phagan Enters Its Third Week With Public Opinion Constantly Shifting.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The second week of the trial of Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan in the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26, came to a close Saturday noon.

The State's case has been entirely made up in its primary aspects, and the defense has gone into its story of the great crime sufficiently to make clear both its theory and probable line of pleading.

The public, as the case has progressed, has been swayed this way and that, and to-day the remarkable mystery of Mary Phagan's untimely and tragic end remains, in hundreds of minds, quite as much of a mystery as ever.

The Battle Is a See-Saw.

The State has had its good days and its bad days, and the defense has met the same fate. At times things have seemed dismally dark and gloomy for Frank, while at other times the clouds apparently have lifted from about him decidedly.

This much has been made clear:

Either Leo Frank will be shown to be responsible for the death of Mary Phagan, or Jim Conley will.

The one is the heart and soul of the State's contention, and the other is the heart and soul of the defense's contention.

Frank is battling not only to clear himself but to convict Conley.

Conley is battling not only to clear himself, but to convict Frank.

The only difference is that Conley, although not yet indicted, expects to be convicted as an accessory after the fact of the murder, in any event, whereas Frank, already indicted, expects to come absolutely clear and free of all possible connection with the crime.

The one has a heretofore good name to restore in all of its unblemished integrity, the other has merely his present reputation for criminal inclination to preserve against sinister enlargement.

The issue has been sharply and indelibly drawn—it is either Leo Frank's life for Mary Phagan's, or it is Jim Conley's.

The State has shown, or has endeavored to show the following things:

THAT Frank, shortly after noon on April 26, and before five minutes past noon, lured Mary Phagan, for an immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory, and there, because she would not yield to his desires and demands, he knocked her down and immediately thereafter strangled her to death with a small cord, about one-eighth of an inch in thickness.

THAT after strangling her, Frank remained with her dead body until after a girl caller in his office had departed, when he tiptoed to the front of the floor whereupon the murder had been consummated, and secured the help of a negro sweeper, Jim Conley, employed about the place, to dispose of the body.

THAT Conley, under the direction of Frank, wrapped the dead body in a piece of heavy cloth, carried it to the elevator, and thence on the elevator to the basement, where it was placed in an obscure corner in the rear, later to be found by Newt Lee, a negro night watchman, generally held guiltless of direct connection with the crime itself.

THAT Frank, after hiding the body, with Conley's assistance, then induced Conley to write and place beside the dead girl certain illiterate notes fixing the crime, in so far as they might, upon some other person than either Frank or Conley, and that Frank for Conley's services, paid him the sum of $2.50, but not until he had first paid him $200, which was withdrawn under promise to restore that sum later.

THAT Frank had an understanding with Conley, whereby Conley was to return to the factory later in the afternoon on Saturday and burn the body in the basement furnace, but that Conley

AUTOS EMPTY CHURCHES, SAY COUNTRY PREACHERS

MANHATAN, KANS., Aug. 9.—The dwindling of the congregations of country churches, due to the new era of automobiles, which makes it easy for the rural residents to attend services in nearby towns and cities, will be discussed at the Conference of Rural Leaders, July 21 to 25, at the Kansas Agricultural College. Members of the organization declare that Kansas now has about 1,200 abandoned churches in the farming districts.

Jack London Puts Joke on His Appendix

Novelist Tells the Latest on Former Part of Himself and What's Left.

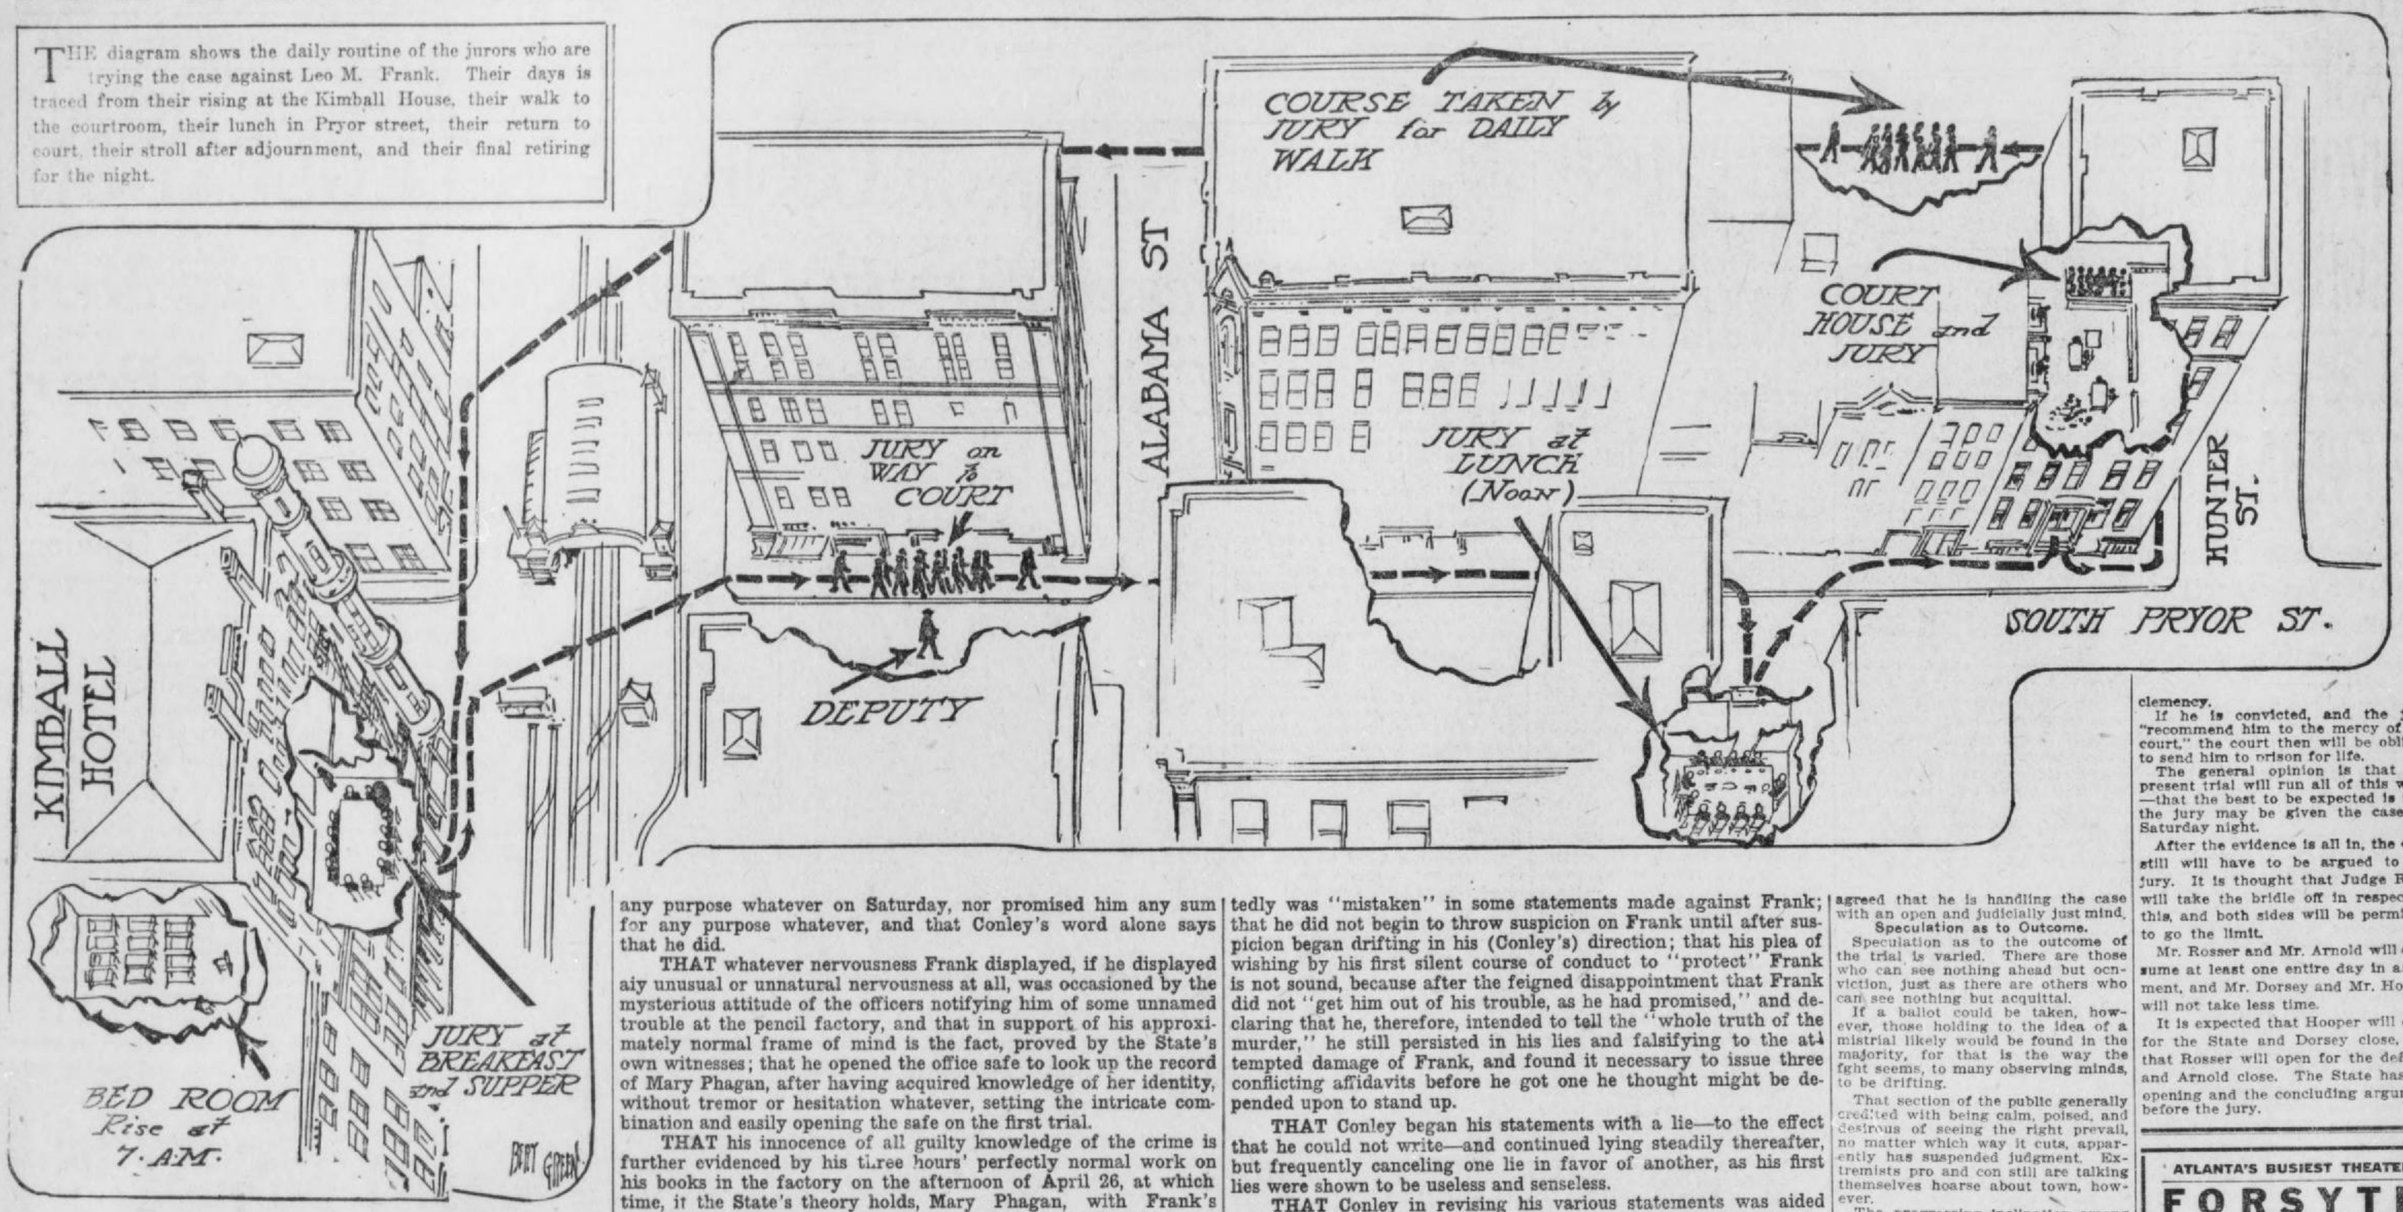
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Here is the latest joke Jack London, the famous author, is telling on himself:

London was operated on recently for appendicitis. After the ordeal the surgeon held up the severed appendix in his fingers for the patient to see. The author looked at it thoughtfully then grinned and said:

"It was a case of all alone in London, wasn't it, doc?"

FRANK'S CHARACTER IS NEW BATTLE GROUND

THE diagram shows the daily routine of the jurors who are trying the case against Leo M. Frank. Their days is traced from their rising at the Kimball House, their walk to the courtroom, their lunch in Pryor street, their return to court, their stroll after adjournment, and their final retiring for the night.



DEFENSE HAS TO CLEAR NAME OF TWO CHARGES

went to sleep in the afternoon and neglected to perform this service.

THAT Frank, called to the factory early in the morning of Sunday, April 27, displaying great nervousness, and while on his way to the factory without having been informed of the dead girl's identity, declined, or at least failed and neglected, to look upon her features at the undertaker's, notwithstanding the fact that he later admitted her identity without having seen her dead.

THAT at the factory, at the place of the crime, his nervousness continued, and that next morning (Monday), when called to the police station for further questioning, he had secured counsel to defend him, notwithstanding the fact that he then had not been placed under arrest.

THAT after having been placed under arrest and indicted for murder, he persistently refused to meet his chief accuser, Jim Conley, face to face, or to discuss any features of the charges lodged against him.

THAT in addition to the crime of murder, as set forth in the indictment, Frank is a dissolute character, practicing the most depraved and perverted crimes with persons of loose morals, and that Jim Conley, on more than one occasion, acted as "lookout" for Frank on the first floor of the factory, while unspeakable and unmentionable things were being enacted above.

The State, in setting up the foregoing allegations, summoned as its principal and all-important witness, Jim Conley, who already made public affidavits to all of the charges set forth, except the one of perversion and the exact time of the crime charged.

Conley, after four or five changed statements theretofore made, set up in his final statement on the stand many other seemingly minor dtails not contained in any previous statement.

The foregoing is the State's case in completed form, except that it yet will have the right to produce witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's witnesses; the defense, in its turn, having the right to a further rebuttal of the State's rebuttal.

The defense has contended, or will contend:

THAT Conley's story is a tissue of frightful lies from start to finish, and that he himself really committed the crime charged against Frank, and that the defense will so demonstrate.

THAT Mary Phagan was not killed as early as 12:05 on the afternoon of April 26, but was, as a matter of fact, killed at least fifteen minutes later than that, if, as a matter of still further fact, she wa snot disabled hopelessly about that time, and actually killed even later.

THAT if she was not killed previous to 12:05, as set forth, by the State, that contention being uncompromisingly claimed by the State's own witnesses—Jim Conley and Monteen Stover—then Conley's story is impossible and absurd, and Monteen Stover's evidence entirely negligible.

THAT Frank did not lure Mary Phagan to the rear of the second floor, or to any other place, for any purpose whatever, and that she was only on the second floor sufficiently long to get her pay from the hands of Frank, and that she immediately thereafter left the second floor, going down to the first floor to meet her death at the hands of Conley.

THAT Frank never asked for or received the assistance of Jim Conley in disposing of the body of Mary Phagan, because he was in utter and entire ignorance of the murder until apprised of it Sunday morning.

THAT Frank had nothing whatever to do with the framing of the nates found beside the dead girl, and that in support of such a charge the State has only the word of Jim Conley, intensely interested in shifting the blame from his own guilty shoulders and on to the shoulders of Frank.

THAT Frank never paid Jim Conley any sum of money for any purpose whatever on Saturday, nor promised him any sum for any purpose whatever, and that Conley's word alone says that he did.

THAT whatever nervousness Frank displayed, if he displayed aiy unusual or unnatural nervousness at all, was occasioned by the mysterious attitude of the officers notifying him of some unnamed trouble at the pencil factory, and that in support of his approximately normal frame of mind is the fact, proved by the State's own witnesses; that he opened the office safe to look up the record of Mary Phagan, after having acquired knowledge of her identity, without tremor or hesitation whatever, setting the intricate combination and easily opening the safe on the first trial.

THAT his innocence of all guilty knowledge of the crime is further evidenced by his three hours' perfectly normal work on his books in the factory on the afternoon of April 26, at which time, if the State's theory holds, Mary Phagan, with Frank's knowledge, then was a corpse in the basement, dead at his murderous hands.

THAT Frank, instead of declining to look upon the face of the dead girl at the undertaker's while on his way to the factory Monday morning, did, as a matter of fact, look upon her face and recognized her.

THAT Frank had no counsel until after his retention at police headquarters had been publicly made known, and when he was notoriously under suspicion, and that even then counsel was sent to him by some outside friends, and did not come at his invitation paid off by Frank upstairs, hit her a violent blow upon her head, snatched her purse from her hand, and at once threw her body into the cellar by way of a nearby open space, for fear of someone coming into the building; that likely the blow first delivered was not sufficient to kill, and that her actual death was hastened, or may have been hastened later in the cellar below, by means of strangulation, there being always there an abundance of the very cord employed or supposed to have been employed in that act. or by his direction.

THAT Frank's refusal to meet Jim Conley, his lying accuser, was natural and proper in the circumstances, and that such a course was persisted in by the particular advice of his counsel; that Frank was under no moral or legal obligation to discuss his case with Conley, or with any other witness for the State.

THAT Frank, far from being a dissolute character, is a man of unblemished integrity, happily married; that he never has practiced depraved and perverted crimes, because such things would be and are entirely foreign to his nature; that he never has associatd with immoral persons anywhere, at any time; that neither Jim Conley nor any other person ever acted as "lookout" for him for any purpose whatsoever—and that every monstrous and untrue charge or suggestion of immorality and degeneracy rests absolutely and finally upon the unsupported word of Conley, and not otherwise.

THAT there has been no tenable motive assigned to Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan; that the girl was not sexually violated or in any manner lacerated; that Frank had only the most casual acquaintance with her, and that of a perfectly natural business sort, and that he could not have had, and did not have, any reason whatever for desiring her death.

THAT, in truth and reality, the motive prompting the murder of Mary Phagan was robbery upon the part of Conley, and that for the purpose of securing her pittance of money, contained in a mesh purse, he did murder her and concealed her body in the basement.

THAT, as a matter of fact, Mary Phagan reached the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26 about 12:12 or 12:15; that she came up the steps directly to Frank's office, and received her pay for the time due her, in amount $1.20; that she at once departed Frank's office, without comment of any sort, and that Frank never saw her alive thereafter; that going down the steps, with her silver mesh bag in her hand, she had to pass Jim Conley, recently aroused from a drunken doze; that in attempting to get from the foot of the stairs, where Conley was sitting, to the door, some 20 feet away, she had to traverse a gloomy walkway, more than ordinarily gloomy at the time because the day was a legal holiday and the doors were closed, but not locked; that in traversing this walkway her back was toward Conley; that Conley, without money and craving more liquor, saw the unprotected little girl with the enticing silver bag in her hand, and surmising that she had been

THAT after accomplishing his bloody deed Conley escaped by withdrawing the inside staple from the basement back door only a few feet away from the place where the dead girl subsequently was found; and that tracings of Conley during the afternoon of April 26 at various saloons about town show that he spent then an amount of money approximately that which Mary Phagan is supposed to have had in her purse at the time of her murder.

That of all her possessions the purse alone, notwithstanding exhaustive inquiry, never was accounted for until the last day Conley was on the stand, when he stated that Frank had had the purse in his possession just after the murder, and that he had concealed it in his safe. This allegation, the defense points out, is sustained, as are the other most damaging allegations, by Conley's unsupported word entirely.

THAT Conley, the State's main witness, is a notoriously dissolute character, by his own admission seven times a jailbird, many times a liar, even under oath and on the witness stand, and admittedly was "mistaken" in some statements made against Frank; that he did not begin to throw suspicion on Frank until after suspicion began drifting in his (Conley's) direction; that his plea of wishing by his first silent course of conduct to "protect" Frank is not sound, because after the feigned disappointment that Frank did not "get him out of his trouble, as he had promised," and declaring that he, therefore, intended to tell the "whole truth of the murder," he still persisted in his lies and falsifying to the attempted damage of Frank, and found it necessary to issue three conflicting affidavits before he got one he thought might be depended upon to stand up.

THAT Conley began his statements with a lie—to the effect that he could not write—and continued lying steadily thereafter, but frequently canceling one lie in favor of another, as his first lies were shown to be useless and senseless.

THAT Conley in revising his various statements was aided and abetted by various police officials, presumably anxious for the reward offered for the apprehension and conviction of Mary Phagan's murderer, and that these officers pointed out to Conley the discrepancies as they arose from time to time, and that without this aid Conley's story never could have been made to hold together even as well as it did; that notwithstanding this prejudicing aid, however, Conley's story still is impossible and absurd, and of no account whatever against Frank.

The foregoing, in general, is the theory of the defense, as already set up and as yet to be developed, and along that line it will fight its battle to the end.

The defense is heavily equipped with witnesses to sustain its every contention, and these will be offered, in their ordr, to brak down the contrary theory of the State, as hereinbefore outlined, and upon th relative strength of the two showings depends, of course, the verdict.

Of absorbing interest now is the seeming determination of the defense to put Leo Frank's character frankly and fearlessly in evidenec.

In a former article in The Sunday American several weeks ago I predicted that the defense would do this—and the then apparent determination of the defense along that line shows no symptoms of having been deviated fro min the slightest.

When Conley made his additional unanticipated attack on Frank's character from the witness stand, it was rather freely predicted about the streets that Frank never would, after that, agree to have his character put in evidence. Under the law, the State can not put the defendant's character in evidence—if it is put in at all, it must be put in by the defendant voluntarily. Once in, however, it may be riddled by the State, if the State is able to riddle it.

The determination, therefore, of the defense to put Frank's character in evidence is being accepted generally as indicating an unfaltering confidence upon the part of the defense that Frank may be able thereby to overcome the terrible and prejudicial charge of degeneracy, as well as the charge of murder, both resting so largely upon Conley, and Conley alone; and it also indicates a belief upon the part of the defense that the State already has done its worst in the matter of attacking Frank's character.

MUST REFUTE TWO CHARGES.

The fact that Frank is now engaged in refuting two charges instead of one makes his case double unique in Georgia, as it is contrary to the unbroken theory of the law heretofore.

In Georgia, the courts uniformly have held that a man can not be tried for more than one offense at one time—that is, that he can not be charged with murder, and in the same trial be called to account for another felonious crime.

The charge of degeneracy, however, got into the case without objection, and Frank's lawyers cross-examined the witness making it. The judge, therefore, although a motion was made afterward to strike out this evidence, ruled taht it was too late to expunge it, and that it should go in for what it was worth.

This ruling, while in a way more or less unprecedented, was, in the main, by the public seemingly approved, upon the idea that it was fairer to both the State and the defense that the horrible charge, having been made, be thrashed out.

Should Frank be convicted, it is practically certain that a new trial will be asked on this very point, and it is not at all improbable that Judge Roan will grant it, although this conjecture is purely and absolutely speculative, of course.

The defense has summoned some seventy character witnesses, among whom are more than two score femal employes of the National Pencil Factory, all of whom will swear, it is said, to the defendant's decent and gentlemanly conduct at all times in their presence and during their varied terms of service in the factory, running from one to five years.

INTENSE INTEREST HOLDS.

Besides these, a score or more of Atlanta's most prominent business and professional men have been cited to come to court and testify in behalf of Frank's good name.

Rarely before, if ever, has there been as intense interest in a murder trial as there unquestionably is in the Frank case.

The crowds attending the trial have been enormous, the officers finding it necessary every day to turn away hundreds of anxious would-be spectators.

Public sentiment has swung back and forth—to-day inclined to believe Frank may be innocent, to-morrow sternly the reverse.

The jury, sitting there in the courthouse day after day, has been the subjective study of hundreds of real and near analytical minds—and the answer?

Every fellow answers for himself. The jury is imperturable, unreadable, almost seemingly indifferent at times, indeed—but always keenly keyed to intense interest, nevertheless!

One might as well undertake to read the riddle of the Spinx as to read the riddle of the Frank case in the minds of the jury trying it. It looks as if it is a jury well above the average—and that is about the beginning and the end of an intelligent guess as to what it will do.

Judge Roan is as baffling as the rest of the case, too, when it comes to speculating upon what he may or may not think of it all.

He is rated one of the very best Superior Court judges in the State, unusually able, certainly fearless, and agreed to be utterly fair and impartial.

At times, his rulings have seemed to favor the defense, and at other times they have seemed to favor the State; but, withal, the public seems agreed that he is handling the case with an open and judicially just mind.

Speculation as to Outcome.

Speculation as to the outcome of the trial is varied. There are those who can see nothing ahead but conviction, just as there are others who can see nothing but acquittal.

If a ballot could be taken, however, those holding to the idea of a mistrial likely would be found in the majority, for that is the way the fight seems, to many observing minds, to be drifting.

That section of the public generally credited with being calm, poised, and desirous of seeing the right prevail, no matter which way it cuts, apparently has suspended judgment. Extremists pro and con still are talking themselves hoarse about town, however.

The progressing inclination among the people seems to be to let the jury settle it, and then to call that as near right as abstract justice and human ingenuity can make it.

In the event of an acquittal, the case ends. The State has no appeal. It must win on the first round, or it loses for all time.

The defense ,on the other hand, if it loses, may move for a new trial, upon proper assignment of error in the first trial. The judge of original jurisdiction passes upon this motion—he may grant it or not, as his discretion directs.

The general policy of judges is to refuse motions for new trials, but it is not an unbroken policy, by any means.

If the new trial motion is denied, the case goes to a court of review—either the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals. If one error or several be found in the original rulings of the court below, the case will be remanded back for a new trial, the judgment thus having been reversed and set aside.

Then the case begins all over again, practically as if it never had been tried.

In the event of maters taking that course, Frank hardly could be tried again before next year, 1914, and perhaps not before spring.

Conley Indictment Likely.

If Frank is acquitted, there is hardly a doubt that Jim Conley will be promptly indicted for the murder of Mary Phagan, and brought to trial later.

In the event of Frank's final conviction, Conley will be indicted as an accessory after the fact. This would mean a sentence of not more than three years in the State penitentiary for him.

If Frank is convicted, he can be convicted only of murder—the jury will not be permitted, under the form of the indictment, to find him guilty of a lesser crime.

The judge will have no discretion in sentencing him.

If found guilty, without a recommendation to mercy, he must hang, unless the Governor should subsequently interfere and order executive clemency.

If he is convicted, and the jury "recommend him to the mercy of the court," the court then will be obliged to send him to prison for life.

The general opinion is that the present trial will run all of this week—that the best to be expected is that the jury may be given the case by Saturday night.

After the evidence is all in, the case still will have to be argued to the jury. It is thought that Judge Roan will take the bridle off in respect of this, and both sides will be permitted to go the limit.

Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold will consume at least one entire day in argument, and Mr. Dorsey and Mr. Hooper will not take less time.

It is expected that Hooper will open for the State and Dorsey close, and that Rosser will open for the defense and Arnold close. The State has the opening and the concluding argument before the jury.

WHITE SLAVE CASE WHICH INVOLVES U.S. GOES TO TRIAL

Diggs Faces a Jury and Caminetti Will Later Fight Charge of Taking Girls to Reno, Leaving Their Wives in State of California.

After Five Months of Delay and Scandal Involving National Officials, Special Prosecutors Are Appearing for the Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Marsha Warrington and Ida Norris, the Sacramento high school girls alleged to have been taken to Reno in November by Maury I Diggs and Drew Caminetti for immoral purposes, will take the stand against Diggs when his trial is resumed Tuesday. No session of the Diggs trial was held today. Diggs and Caminetti will take the stand before the trial is concluded.

Judge Van Fleet dealt the defense a hard blow yesterday when he announced that the jury would not consider the willingness or unwillingness of the two girls to accompany Diggs and Caminetti.

The jury to hear the case of Diggs, the former State Architect, was announced complete after considerable difficulty in selecting the twelve members. Exhaustive examination of 96 veniremen was necessary before the twelve were chosen.

The first witness was called. He was F. J. Peck, a Reno real estate dealer, by whom the defense sought to show that the bungalow occupied by the defendants in Reno had been rented with no view to concealment.

Prejudice against the defendants runs high, rendering exceedingly difficult the task of picking a jury. Of the twelve men chosen, eight are married and have children, two are married, but childless, and two are single men, living with their parents. Indicative of the general temper of San Francisco was the reply upon examination of Philip Woolsey, who afterward was chosen as a member of the jury. He expressed his prejudice against "any married man who will abandon his wife and babies and run off on a spree with another woman," but said he could, however, render a verdict strictly in accordance with the evidence.

Cases Come Up Separately.

The cases against Diggs and Caminetti will be tried separately because the prosecution feels it has made out the stronger case against Diggs, and because the defense in this case will assume a course different from that in Caminetti's.

Diggs and F. Drew Caminetti, son of former Congressman and present Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti, are charged with luring Miss Marsha Warrington and Miss Lola Norris from California to Nevada for immoral purposes. Both are married men.

Diggs, the prosecution will attempt to show, financed the trip to Reno, where the girls were taken, and rented there a cottage in which the party lived.

Diggs, against whom the charges are made in relation to Miss Marsha Warrington, is said to be contemplating a fierce attack on the character of the girl. He has subpenaed habitues of the "Barbary Coast" resorts of this city and twenty witnesses from Sacramento's tenderloin. Caminetti is making no such move against Miss Norris. The Government asserts her character to be unblemished.

Mrs. Caminetti Relentless.

Caminetti's wife is relentless in her attitude toward her young husband. She said that despite the disgrace it may bring on their children, she thinks, for the protection of other married women, her husband should be made an example.

Mrs. Diggs, also, is bitter toward her husband. The defenders of both men, however, to-day are claiming a complete reconciliation of the defendants with their wives, and declare that when the trial gets fully under way both Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti will be seen sitting at their husbands' sides, a spectacle which, the defense calculates, will have an effect to their advantage on the jury.

Diggs and Caminetti both are free from custody, having taken advantage of the $10,000 bail offered them. At first they feared freedom, as violence was anticipated, but later this fear was overcome.

Diggs appears to be cheerful to-day, taking matters easily. He is scrupulously dressed. He came into the courtroom with his flock of attorneys, bearing a cheerful smile, and bowed a dozen times to familiar faces that he saw near. Caminetti, on the other hand, seemed deeply worried. He was pallid and palpably very nervous. His father, the Commissioner General of Immigration, did not make his appearance, and probably will not be seen at the trial.

Two Special Prosecutors.

The trial is being held in the Federal Court before Judge Van Fleet. Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore R. Roche, president of the San Francisco Police Commission, have been appointed special prosecutors by Attorney General McReynolds, to take the place of District Attorney Gavin McNab, who resigned with the announcement that undue influence was being brought to bear from Washington to prevent the trial of the two men.

Arrayed with the special prosecutors are Archie Johnson, son of Governor Johnson, and Acting District Attorneys Benjamin L. McKinley and Thomas H. Salvage.

Diggs and Caminetti have an equally impressive line-up of legal defenders, including Robert L. Devlin and Marshall B. Woodworth, both former United States District Attorneys; Nate Coghlan and S. Luke Howe.

A heavy guard is thrown around the courtroom because feeling runs high against the two defendants. The two girls involved were high school students of Sacramento and of estimable families. Both, attorneys for the Government announce, will be ready to take the stand against the men.

The Government will charge that Diggs and Caminetti, both married men, had drawn the girls into a liaison; that they terrified the girls into the belief that their wives, having discovered their infidelity, intended to have the girls arrested, and that to escape this imaginary danger the girls accompanied the men to Reno, Nev.

what was to be done with them, the young women were told that their ruin was complete; that they would not desert them, but that the young women were to continue to live with them as their mistresses, and that they would take them to Salt Lake, where they would go into a 'house.'

"The Grand Jury had ample evidence before it in these statements to decide that the intent was to put them in a public place.

Barely Escaped Lynching.

"The defendants were secretly taken from the train and brought to Sacramento by auto to avoid lynching by the enraged citizens. Defendants procured counsel. Among these is Charles Harris, of the Sacramento bar. He and Diggs immediately set about to defeat justice by corrupting a witness. Diggs wrote an appealing letter to Miss Warrington under an assumed name, urging her to stand by a certain agreed story he had drilled her in while in Reno. The letter is in my possession.

"The Grand Jury has indicted Harris and Diggs for conspiracy to suborn perjury.

"The friends of the defendants are reported to have stated repeatedly that they could 'easily fix the case;' that they had too much money and too much influence at command to cause them to worry. This seems to have come principally from the Diggs end of the case."

McNab Outlines His Case Against the Defendants

In his report Mr. McNab gives the following pen picture of Caminetti and Diggs:

"The defendant Diggs was a draughtsman in the office of the State Capitol in Sacramento. He is married and has two young children.

"But a short time before the actions hereinafter narrated he was involved in a forgery charge, and for a long time, by common reputed easily substantiated by evidence, he maintained what has been denominated as a 'private harem' at his rooms in a downtown block in Sacramento. Here, according to charges laid before me, he enticed many young women to go to serve his immoral purposes.

"Caminetti was his bosom companion. The defendant Caminetti has a vicious reputation for seducing girls, and I have shocking instances which I can produce to establish this fact.

"The two girls in question, both of whom are about 19 years of age, come of most respectable families. Marsha Warrington is the only daughter of the agent of the Santa Fe Railroad. Lola Norris is the only daughter of a retired business man of Sacramento.

"After going with the young women for some months the two defendants, who had determined to entice the girls away from home and take them to another State, began a systematic campaign of coercion and inducement to get them to flee the State with them.

Their Stories to the Girls.

They told the young women that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti had found out about their relations and had procured warrants for their arrest from the Juvenile Court and were only awaiting the appropriate time to serve them; that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti were relentless and intended to expose the whole matter, and that the families of the girl would be disgraced and ruined; that the only way to save the girls from disgrace was secretly to leave the city and go to another State, where they would acquire a residence, the men would divorce their wives and marry the girls, etc.

"The young women were in absolute terror. They repeatedly appealed to the defendants to allow them to remain at home and not to disgrace them, and begged to be allowed to unbosom their indiscretions to their parents and have their advice.

"Up to this time, according to the uncontradicted evidence, Diggs had been unduly intimate with Miss Warrington for a few weeks; the Norris girl had never been violated before this trip to Reno.

"On arrival at Reno they were assigned to bedrooms, Diggs and Miss Warrington occupying one room and Caminetti and Miss Norris the other. According to the testimony of the young women, they were wholly in the hands of their male companions. They had never been away from home or their parents before and felt that they were powerless to save themselves.

Foundling Is Heiress To $100,000 Fortune

Father Makes Wealth After He Had Left Baby In Michigan Institution.

CADILLAC, MICH., Aug. 9.—Sheriff Chamberlain has been asked by an attorney in Corning, N. Y., to locate Bessie Weaver, who was adopted by a Manton, Mich., family from a New York foundling home over twenty years ago, and a few days ago became heir to $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weaver, of Manton, who adopted the child when on a trip through New York, returned her to the home five years later. Since that time nothing has been heard from her. The father of Bessie Weaver, or Bessie Clark, as she was known in New York, made his fortune after placing his child in the home, but has been unable to locate her since she was taken back from Michigan. He recently died, leaving his fortune to his only child.

GIRL HELPS FATHER IN BUILDING NEW HOUSE

HARTFORD, MICH., Aug. 9.—One year ago S. H. Atkins and family came to this city and built a house in a field of rye in the outskirts of the city. Recently they sold the home, and with the proceeds purchased four adjoining lots. They are now building a much larger house, which will be the sixth they have erected since the little home was built.

The scarcity of carpenters caused the mother and daughter to assist Mr. Atkins in the building of his new home. The mother and 9-year-old daughter did all of the lathing.

Buys a $4,000 Auto To Use Cheap Gas

When Ex-Senator Scott Has Burned 60,000 Gallons He Will Have Saved Cost of Car.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The house of Senator Nathan Bay Scott, of West Virginia, is divided against itself, with automobiles as they issue. The Senator and Mrs. Scott are devoted to each other. They attend the same dinners, theaters and social functions together, but they arrive and depart in separate motor cars. It came about this way:

The senator has been paying 22 cents a gallon for gasoline to propel the family machine. He discovered a place where the price was 17 cents. With much glee he informed Oscar, the family chauffeur, of his discovery and directed that Oscar purchase gasoline there.

Oscar demurred because the gasoline emporium was too far from the family mansion. Mrs. Scott backed him up. Whereupon Senator Scott bought himself a $4,000 machine, acquired a chauffeur to navigate it and divorced himself from the old machine and Oscar.

After Senator Scott has burned 60,000 gallons of gasoline he will have saved the cost of the car. But he doesn't have to ride with Oscar.

PENSIONER, NOT IN WAR, ASKS RAISE OF STIPEND

BIG SANDY, MONT., Aug. 9.—After having enjoyed a pension of $12 per month for sixteen years, John Truax, of this town, confessed that he had never been entitled to the money. He had a preliminary examination before United States Commissioner Ragan and was bound over to the Federal District Court.

Truax might have gone on drawing the pension until death had he not lately made application for an increase.

Ban on Tobacco Seen By Prohibitionists

Smoking and Drinking Are Blamed for Increase in Chronic Diseases in America.

BATTLECREEK, MICH., Aug 9.—That tobacco as well as liquor will be placed under national prohibition before the end of another generation, is the assertion made here by Irving Fisher. Fisher blames liquor, tobacco, overuse of meat and too strenuous life for the terrible increase of chronic diseases in America.

Spooners Protest Against Headlights

Big Illuminating Power Now Carried on Engines Is Worry to Summer Boarders.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad has placed monster 1,220-candle-power electric searchlights on the observation cars of the Pioneer Limited.

Letters have found their way into the general offices of the company signed by summer hotel men, houseboat owners and the public generally, protesting against the innovation. Spooners do not like it.

ORPHAN SOUGHT AS WIFE BY MAN WRITING POLICE

Would-Be Benedict Gives Evidence in Letter That He Fears Mother-in-Law.

OAKLAND, CAL., Aug. 9.—J. Keler, of Fresno, is a marrying man. He proved it by writing a letter to "the Chief of Police or the City Marshal of Oakland" and entreating that official to find him a wife. He wants a wife who has means equal to his own—amount not stated—and indicates in his letter that he would expect her to assist him in his merchandise business. He assures all responsible applicants that he is sober and industrious and hasn't a single bad habit.

If you are a maid, a girl or a widow who reads this, you stand a chance of winning the prize, and if you are an orphan, get busy and send your picture to Keler at once. He takes kindly to orphans, as is evidenced from the following excerpt from his letter:

"Will answer all questions and letters from girls, maids and widows, but would prefer to wed an orphan. Will give my business to the one I wed, that she may know I am a square man and will do right."

The following notice was inclosed, with the request that the official post it in a conspicuous place:

"Temperate gentleman would be pleased to form the acquaintance of ladies matrimonially inclined. Give description and full particulars in first letter. Send photo, which will be returned, if desired."

SHEDS TOENAILS BIENNIALLY.

BEDFORD, IND., Aug. 9.—J. W. Mundy, of this city, sheds the nails from his toes every two years, and this has occurred since he was a child. When asked to see his foot, Mundy bared his left foot and showed the old nails, barely hanging to the toes, and the new nails growing under the old ones.

ALL STATES TO SHOW POULTRY AT KNOXVILLE

Exhibition of Best Breeds To Be Feature of National Conservation Exposition.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Aug. 9.—Birds for the poultry show that is to be held in connection with the National Conservation Exposition in this city during the months of September and October are coming to Knoxville all the way from California. Word of the coming of the California birds has just been received by the poultry department.

Interest in the poultry show is country-wide. From almost every State in the Union will be brought to Knoxville poultry of different kinds. Already it is assured that the poultry show will be the biggest thing of its kind ever held in the South. It will be in fact as well as name "The Madison Square Garden Show of the South."

A most comprehensive exhibit of the great textile industry of the South is assured for the exposition. Progressive manufacturers of Greenville, S. C., have just signed up for a large amount of exhibit space in the All-South building of the exposition and the greater part of that space will be devoted to the textile industry.

In addition to the Greenville textile manufacturers a number of other concerns of like nature in the South, from Knoxville and elsewhere, will make exhibits, and thus this industry, constantly increasing in importance in the South, will receive great attention. The different processes through which cotton goes from the seed to the loom and after will be strikingly shown in the different exhibits.

Prince Chased by Laundress
She Asks $50,000 on Love Notes
He Is Gone on His Honeymoon

Miss Freese, a California girl, who at a Secret Marriage Became the bride of Prince Sultkowski, of Austria, and a Snapshot of the Prince.

Sultkowski, Who Won Rich Girl and Had His $100,000 Debts Paid, Is Accused.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—An angry laundress from Vienna is in Los Angeles looking for Prince Stanislaus Sultkowski, the noble Austrian who came here several months ago, wooed in his gallant way and won the beautiful Miss Marie Louise Freese, had his debts of $100,000 paid by Father-in-Law Freese, and received from the same source an annuity of $20,000.

The laundress, Mrs. Clara Melcher, declares that the Prince brought her to this country on the promise that he would marry her.

After a hasty, private marriage, the noble Prince and his American Princess disappeared. The father-in-law says they are "not in the country," and no more.

Los Angeles society wondered at the quiet wedding. An elaborate church ceremony had been planned, but the plans were abandoned at short notice.

She Asks Federal Aid.

Society was in the midst of this wonder when entered Mrs. Melcher, She appealed with her story to the United States immigration inspector, and was supported by Adolph Danzieger, a lawyer. The Prince declared, Danzieger said, that the woman had annoyed his family in Austria, and to get her away from Vienna so he could return home with his American wife, he had written her to come to America.

An attorney, who was first approached by Mrs. Melcher and then retained by the Prince, said he suggested to Mr. Freese, the Prince's father-in-law, a payment of five or ten thousand dollars in settlement of the woman's claims, but Mrs. Melcher, through her lawyer, declared that she would have $50,000 or nothing. She has love letters which she says prove her claims.

The Prince and his American bride are believed to be on their way to Austria where Stanislaus is taking his Princess without fear of being molested by the insistent laundress.

Prince Lauds Girls Here.

The Prince is lieutenant of the Second Dragoons of the army of the Austrian empire. He came to America in December and lost his heart to the girls of America, whom he likened to "the flowers of the spring." He is a nephew of the Grand Duke of Birlitz. His home is the Castle Trestenitz, near Markburg, Austria.

The following tribute to American girls, of which the Prince delivered himself, was widely published:

"They are splendid, charming, graceful and fresh, like the flowers of the spring. The girls of Europe generally have followed outdoor sports. They are mostly large and strong, often the equal of their husbands in strength.

"My idea of a girl is found right here in America. I have been most hospitably received and have met many of them. Their sweetness, their trimness and the wonderful manner in which they wear their clothes have 'got me going,' as you say. Their figures and their style surpass the Europeans. Their dignity and grace and the democracy I have found in so many are winning, and I do not blame Europe's noblemen for coming to America for their brides."

Folly of Suffrage Shown by Dresses, Says Mrs. Marshall

Vice President's Wife Believes Women Can Do More Good Correcting Cabarets.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Slashed skirts with the silhouette gown and other freaks of modern fashion are the worst enemies of the newly made voters of Illinois, and the cabaret and the turkey trot are more in need of reform than Chicago's First Ward, in the opinion of Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, who was in Chicago with her husband.

Mrs. Marshall declared frankly that she was opposed to the municipal power recently granted to the women of Illinois. Mrs. Marshall said:

"I have never been a suffragist. To me the fashions of to-day ought to convince any one that a woman is not fit to vote. Some women's dress is not only extreme, it is objectionable. A woman would do more good by correcting the dances in our cafes and cabarets than in running for office.

"The women in the East are not strongly in favor of the ballot, and none of the Cabinet women seems to favor it, with the exception, perhaps, of the President's daughter. Miss Jessie Wilson."

NEWPORT TOLD THAT U. S. NEEDS AN ARISTOCRACY

NEWPORT, Aug. 9.—William MacDonald, professor of American history at Brown University, delivering the principal address before the Rhode Island Society of the Cincinnati, gave expression to some startling new ideas. The topic of his address was, "An Aristocracy in a Democracy." He said:

"There is needed an aristocracy to lead, a government of the best men. Not an aristocracy of vulgar wealth or hereditary descent, but an aristocracy made up of sound physique, disciplined, intelligent and trained, public-spirited, of cosmopolitan taste and unpretentious good manners."

DIVORCE DEFENDANT SAYS HUSBAND IS NON-RESIDENT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Mrs. M. A. Perdue has filed a jurisdictional plea in the Superior Court in the divorce suit recently instituted against her by A. W. Perdue. She declares Perdue is not a resident of Georgia and asks the court to dismiss the suit.

POLITICS MIXED IN ALABAMA AS JOHNSTON DIES

Underwood May Be Drawn Into Senate Race—Knox and DeGraffenreid Mentioned.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 9.—The death of Senator Joseph Forney Johnston has precipitated in Alabama a political problem. He was seized by the fatal attack of illness at the time when he was in the midst of a fight with Congressman Richmond P. Hobson to retain his seat in the Senate, and Hobson thus is left without opposition.

The dominant political powers in Alabama, it is generally recognized, are not altogether friendly to the Hobson interests, and a man as powerful as Johnston undoubtedly will be brought forward to oppose the hero of the Merrimac.

Who will it be?

Eyes Are on Underwood.

All eyes turn to Oscar Underwood as the likely opponent of Hobson. Here near the end of the session of Congress, with his work well toward completion, it is conceded that Underwood can relinquish with safety his grasp on affairs in the House and step into the higher place in the Senate. A movement already is felt that may have its effect in bringing him out as a candidate.

Meanwhile, Governor O'Neal must appoint a successor to Senator Johnston to fill his seat for the two years yet remaining of his term. And, unless by previous agreement otherwise, the appointee probably will be a candidate for the coming term.

If Governor O'Neal appoints Colonel John B. Knox, of Anniston, to the place, Knox certainly will be a candidate for the long term, his health permitting. Knox for years has had ambition to enter the Senate. Twice he has been a candidate, losing in 1907, when Johnston and Bankhead were named pravisional Senators to succeed Pettus and Morgan, who then were near death, and again in 1910, when he opposed Bankhead.

Knox a Brilliant Figure.

Knox is a brilliant, eloquent, altogether spectacular figure. The Governor may not feel disposed toward his appointment on one ground, however. One year ago occurred a vacancy on the bench of the State Supreme Court, and Governor O'Neal tendered Knox the appointment. After weeks of deliberation the Anniston man declined it. Political gossip at that time was heard to the effect that the Governor was placed in an inconvenient position because of the refusal, and he was forced to take Judge E. D. DeGraffenreid from the bench of the Court of Appeals to place him in the Supreme Court.

DeGraffenreid is O'Neal's closest friend and political adviser. That he should be in line for the Senate appointment is not considered unlikely in a number of places. In event he is appointed, it is unlikely that he will make the race for the long term, and the Underwood shadow looms up again.

The death of Senator Johnston, occurring almost simultaneously with that of his present political ally and personal friend, Major W. W. Screws, editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, is regarded in Alabama as a startling coincidence. Major Screws was Johnston's firmest supporter in his race against Hobson.

Friedmann Has to Face New Charges

Originator of Tuberculosis Serum Is Accused of Unprofessional Conduct by Assistant.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Charges of unprofessional conduct have been preferred against Dr. Friedrich F. Friedmann, originator of tuberculosis serum, and he may have to defend his conduct before a court of honor of physicians and surgeons. Julius Benjamin, father of Dr. Harry Benjamin, who went to the United States with Friedmann as the latter's assistant, and who, as a result of his association with the creator of the tuftle tubercular vaccine, was left stranded in New York City without funds, is pressing the charges.

TYBEE'S CATHOLIC CHURCH TOO SMALL FOR TOURISTS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Plans are being considered for enlarging the Roman Catholic chapel at Tybee.

This season the attendance has been so large that men and boys have had to stand. The summer communicants have been most generous in their contributions to the enlargement fund. They have also raised a fund for the purchase of new vestments for the priest.

LOS ANGELES TO AID IN EXAMINER SITE DEDICATION

Civic Bodies and Officials to Participate in Cornerstone Laying of Great Newspaper Plant.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—On Monday at 12 o'clock will commence the ceremony of the placing of the cornerstone of the new Los Angeles Examiner building at Eleventh and Broadway.

Because the spirit of California has made this building possible, part of this ceremony will be the raising of the California Bear flag over the great edifice now already partically completed. The event will mark the progress of a great newspaper in a great city. Planned under the auspices of the Advertising Club of Los Angeles, and representative business men, the program for the cornerstone laying reaches broad and comprehensive proportions.

Great Chorus to Sing.

The music of four great massed bands will sound patriotically at the appearance of the flag, Madame Esther Palliser, the famous prima donna will sing the new song of Southland progress written for the occasion by Miles Overholt, and a chorus of 100 trained voices will mark the laying of the cornerstone.

From the lips of one who has made a great mark in America's history will come the final address of faith in Los Angeles and its people—William Randolph Hearst.

There will come, too, during this ceremony a novel procedure calculated to remind the younger generation of the event. A motion picture will be taken of the event, showing the ceremony and surrounding trong. Immediately after the picture has been taken, the film will be developed with all haste and within a few hours a hermetically sealed canister will be placed in the cornerstone.

To William Randolph Hearst will be presented by Mayor Rose the silver trowel of the cornerstone laying. The opening words of the ceremony will be spoken by the Rev. Charles Edward Locke, who will be presented by Ernest Ingold. Then James R. H. Wagner will come to the platform and present to A. W. Kinney, president of the Chamber of Commerce on behalf of the people of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Examiner, the California Bear flag.

Mr. Hearst to Speak.

After Mr. Kinney's reply to this, the Rev. George Donahue, acting for Bishop Conaly, will speak. The Rt. Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop, of Los Angeles, will give an address. After the speech of Mr. Hearst, Dr. Sigmund Hecht will say the closing word.

Before the ceremony at the new building, an escort with Chief of Police Sebastian acting as grand marshal, will proceed from Central Park to the old Examiner building at Fifth and Broadway. Here Mayor Rose, the speakers and Mr. Hearst will join the party and be escorted down Broadway to The Examiner's new site and the scene of the cornerstone laying.

No Duke Available For Edna Goodrich

London Society Much Amused by Actress' Announcement She Is to Wed Peer.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Great amusement has been created by a cabled report of Edna Goodrich's announcement that she is to marry an English duke.

"It is a pretty story," comments The London Daily Mirror, "but of the 26 dukes, nineteen are married and five are widowers, the youngest being 67 years old.

"Of the remaining two, the actress couldn't have met them on a houseboat at Henley."

Of course there is the Duke of Westminster, whose penchant for charming actresses is well known, but he is not free to marry again, not yet.

Quarrel With Novikoff on London Stage Is Like Falling Out With Mordkin.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Pavlowa caused a sensation at the Palace Theater tonight by an open quarrel with her dancing partner, Novikoff, the incident being parallel with her rupture with Mordkin last year.

While dancing Adagio, Pavlowa suddenly hit Novikoff a smart blow on the shoulder. Novikoff immediately left the stage while Pavlowa walked off by the opposite side, the orchestra finishing the piece to an empty stage. Pavlowa afterward performed two solo dances, but Novikoff did not appear again.

Thief Since Child; Boasts of 500 Crimes

Boy Declares That He Is Beyond Reformation, and Welcomes the Gallows.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Walter Novak, 20, arrested with four companions aftter they had fatally wounded Patrolman Samuel W. Sowers and beaten Patrolman Frank Walpole, admitted having taken part in more than thirty robberies in two months and boasted of his career.

"I was born a thief, and I've been a thief ever since," said Novak. "I don't care whether I go to the gallows. I started when I was nine stealing pennies. I have been put in all kinds of institutions to reform me, but they only made me worse. I don't want any member of my family to come and see me. If they come, I will kick them out.

"I suppose I have committed more than 500 robberies."

COLLEGE HEN MISSES LAYING 1 DAY IN 100

Champion Barnyard Producer Rests Only When Commencement Season Arrives.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CORVALLIS, OREG., Aug. 9. A college hen, which laid 99 eggs in 100 days and observed Commencement Day by taking a single day's vacation, is a new claimant for prominence in the chicken world.

The newly heralded layer is three-quarters White Leghorn and one-quarter Barred Plymouth Rock, descending from several generations of heavy layers bred at the Oregon Agricultural College experiment station.

The 99 eggs were laid during the 100 days ended June 8, as follows: Thirty-one in March, 29 in April, 31 in May and 8 in the first 8 days in June.

Not only is this the best record ever secured at Oregon Agricultural College for the same length of time, but a careful perusal of authentic records from other stations on file fails to reveal an equal performance.

The result of breeding as shown in the egg production of this one hen is only an isolated example of what Professor James Dryden's extensive experiments are proving to be possible.

Up to date the records show clearly the beneficial effect in egg yield, and when the year's experiments are concluded in the fall some interesting statistics will be available for the use of poultrymen who are raising chickens for egg production.

$640 Average Income Of American Farmer

Government Report Declares There Are Many Who Make far Smaller Sum.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Farming is not the most profitable business in the world, railroad press agents to the contrary notwithstanding, according to a bulletin of the Department of Agriculture.

For the first time in the history of farming in the United States the department has managed to get accurate data on the subject.

It reports that the average income of the American farmer is $640.40 a year. "It is reasonable to infer," says the department, "that at least half of the farmers in this country have even smaller incomes."

Feudist's Daughter Shouts at Conviction

Woman Obtains Practically All the Evidence Produced in Court Against Slayers.

WINCHESTER, KY., Aug. 9.—The work of Mrs. Lillian Gross, daughter of Ed Callahan, of Breathitt County, former Sheriff and noted feud leader, was rewarded to-day, when a jury returned a verdict finding Andrew Johnson, 19, guilty of having murdered Callahan.

The jury fixed Johnson's punishment at life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

When the verdict was given out, Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Timandy Callahan, young widow of the feudist, shouted for joy.

The evidence was secured almost entirely by Mrs. Gross.

Twelve witnesses, who swore that they saw Johnson at Jackson, 12 miles from the scene of the shooting, are under indictment for perjury.

Wind Saves Life of Baby Caught by Kite

String on Toy Encircles Throat of Child and Lifts Him From Earth.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Except for the timely intervention of a gust of wind, Ruby Allen McNaughton, 15 months old, might have been hanged by a box kite string until he was dead yesterday afternoon in the presence of his 12-year-old brother, Monroe, and a group of boy friends. As it was he was hanged until he was black in the face, and the string circled his throat with a gash that barely missed the jugular vein. Just as the kite went up the string slackened and twined about the baby's throat. The child was lifted from the ground and was being borne aloft when a sudden cross current slackened the string again. Monroe quickly cut it, releasing the kite and his brother at the same time.

FARMERS QUIT COTTON TO GROW WATERMELONS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9—The biggest watermelon crop on record is being moved along the Savannah and Statesboro Railroad. Already more than 600 cars have been hauled. Bennett Maas, commercial agent for the Macon, Dublin and Savannah, reports that farmers are so well pleased with their melon crops that some of them will abandon cotton-planting and go in for melons entirely.

Mayor Quits Office to Become Collector of Port, but Suffers From Curtailment.

PORT HURON, MICH., Aug. 9.—The order of Secretary McAdoo abolishing the office of collector of customs at this port has thrown former Mayor John J. Bell out into the cold.

When Mr. Bell received his appointment a few years ago he resigned as the city's chief executive, and Commissioner Dixon was chosen as his successor. Then Mr. Bell appointed William R. Chadwick as his deputy.

Now the order from Washington puts Mr. Chadwick in charge of the local part. Mr. Bell finds he has resigned himself out of one job and appointed himself out of another.

Steamer's Crew Deny Sighting 'Titanic'

Officers Say Wreckage They Saw Was Sixty Miles South of Disaster Scene.

Special Cable to The American.

SOUTH SHIELD, Aug. 9.—Officers of the steamer Lucilline, which has arrived here, deny the report that they saw the Titanic wreck apparently resting on top of a ledge of rocks. What they saw during their trip from Bordeaux to Philadelphia was some wreckage consisting of a part of a mast and some gear that was probably attached to a submerged object. They were 60 miles south of the scene of the Titanic disaster, although in the same longitude. They discredit the supposition that the Titanic rests upon a submerged reef.

Many Lives Saved As Train Is Ditched

Forethought of Towerman Averts Crash Between Specials by Taking Chance on Tragedy.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Scores of lives were saved to-day when a towerman in Burnham, Ill., threw the Ohio River special on the Pennsylvania Railroad into a derail and averted its collision with a through Wabash train from St. Louis. The train took the ditch at high speed. The Pennsylvania locomotive was overturned in the crash, but aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman, no one was hurt.

A moment after the Pennsylvania train hit the derailer the Wabash train clicked across the frogs at the track intersection less than 1,000 feet away.

Getting Acquainted With Your Own City!

Atlanta has grown so rapidly that Mr. Busyman, engrossed in the "moil" of his own restricted environments, rarely "glimpses" beyond the horizon of his personal sphere of activity. "HE KNOWS SHE GROWS"—but his knowledge of the INDIVIDUALITY of her growth is entirely beyond his "ken." Old industries double their capacity—NEW ones rear their walls. The BYRD PRINTING COMPANY is an instance of BOTH OF THESE CONDITIONS. They DOUBLED THEIR CAPACITY, and MOVED INTO A NEW ESPECIALLY BUILT FIVE-STORY CONCRETE BUILDING; and for absolutely MODERN equipment, and completeness in every department, no plant in America is superior. You should come down and "get acquainted"—see one of Atlanta's best achievements at its best. We'll be glad to show you over the plant. It's very interesting.

OIL LETTERS KILLED HIM POLITICALLY, SAYS FORAKER

Exposes by William Randolph Hearst Responsible for Downfall, Declares Former Senator Before Senate Lobby Inquiry.

Official of National Manufacturers' Association Writes Democratic Simplicity Will Mean Union Label on U.S. Stationery.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Former Senator Foraker admitted to the Senate Lobby Committee to-day publication by William Randolph Hearst of the famous Standard Oil letters killed Foraker's chances for re-election to the Senate in 1908.

After identifying a letter received from Martin M. Mitchell, the confessed ex-lobbyist, making a report of political activities in Ohio in Foraker's behalf, the former Senator said:

"It was the morning of the day Mr. Hearst's disclosure was made public. An attack had been made on me by Mr. Hearst which destroyed my chances of election, saying I had acted as counsel for the Standard Oil Company. This had created a sentiment in our State very prejudicial to me. I continued as a candidate in the campaign only because to retire from it after I had become a candidate would look like an admission that there was some justification for the attack, whereas there was not any."

Senator Foraker said Muhall, whom he had known thirty years, greatly overestimated his own importance.

No Aid from N. A. M.

Foraker said he had never received aid from the National Association of Manufacturers and while he received a fee of $500 for the part he played in the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1896, he was not in the employ of either David Lamar or Edward Lauterbach in an injunction case against the Union Pacific in 1903.

The House Investigating Committee opened its probe with introduction of correspondence showing the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers in fighting labor legislation in Congress and various attempts to have "conservative" men named as members of House committees.

Discussing the recent sundry civil bill, with its provision prohibiting the expenditure of certain funds for the prosecution of farmers and labor unions under the Sherman law, James A. Emery, counsel of the N. A. M., wrote to President John Kirby, Jr., of the association, on March 7, 1913, after President Taft had vetoed the bill:

"I want to emphasize as hard as I can the importance of lining up for a tremendous demonstration when this bill reaches President Wilson, as it undoubtedly will, with the same provision in it. You will then have an early opportunity to decide whether the glittering Democratic motto, 'Equal right for all and special privilege for none,' means anything or whether the Administration has surrendered completely or will merely turn over the Department of Labor.

Objection to Secretary Wilson.

"I note, by the way, your reference to a letter from C. W. Post on the question of a protest over the appointment of Wilson (Secretary of Labor). A protest on this subject is a mere waste of breath, and on the whole I am inclined to think the whole purpose of this department will be shown up quicker with the unions in control of it than in any other way. Gompers will run it characteristically with a high hand, and if the whole thing does not smell to Heaven within a year I shall be very much astonished.

"By that time Democratic simplicity will probably mean a union label on the White House stationery and the President conferring with the Waiters' Union over the appointment of his steward. At present we have nothing more startling in Jeffersonian simplicity than the news Mrs. Bryan is making a new suit for the Secretary of State, and cakes and ginger ale will be served at the dinner for the British Ambassador. Toothpicks will, of course, be an after dinner course at all Cabinet receptions, and the demand for dress suits will be confined to waiters in the hotels."

In this same letter Emery advised Kirby, "if you have any idea Taft would have vetoed this bill of his own motion, get over it. A list of public men who had 'pie' in this $113,000,000 appropriation bill included many prominent men in both Houses."

LOSES ELOPEMENT RACE.

IRONTON, OHIO, Aug. 9.—George Alexander, of Floyd County, Kentucky, arrived here to-day in pursuit of his daughter, Miss Oma Alexander, five minutes after she had been married to Lawrence Jenkins. The father said the girl was only 15 years old and that Jenkins had induced her to elope with him when she was on her way to school this morning.

Finds Honeymoon Land, Then the Man

Society Girl and New Husband Are Now on Their Way to Tahiti.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Miss Luella Hayne, a pretty Chicago girl, is now, as the bride of Dr. Frank Vance, of Enid, Okla., on her way to spend her honeymoon in Tahiti. Miss Hayne had chosen the spot for the honeymoon before she found the man.

Miss Hayne went through a finishing school which prepared her for all the conventionalities of a reigning position in the smart set, but after a brief whirl this life proved tiresome and she started out on the road that leads "back to nature."

The romance was begun at a house party in New York city given by Miss Hayne's sister.

In talking about Tahiti before she sailed she said:

"The people who are most successful in our centers of civilization are most fettered by it. The reason why people plunge so madly into the economic struggle is largely that they may free themselves from its conditions. Why should not a civilized man be as happy as a native of Tahiti? We are going to find out."

Western Canada to Honor First Farmer

Three-Day Celebration Planned as Tribute to Memory of Chevalier LaCorne.

MELFORT, SASK., Aug. 9.—Western Canada is to honor the memory of Captain Louis Lac De La Corne, the first farmer of Western Canada. Chevalier LaCorne introduced agriculture in the Carrot River valley, Saskatchewan, in 1754. At Melfort, in the heart of the Carrot River District, a three-day celebration, August 1, 2 and 3, 1914, will commemorate the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of the first farming in Western Canada.

The business men of Melfort and the surrounding territory have organized to arrange for the celebration, and committees are already at work. The celebration will be unusual and will include a pageant, in which 2,000 Indians will participate. This pageant will typify the agricultural growth of Western Canada, from the days before Chevalier LaCorne explored the Carrot River valley to the present time.

She was formerly Miss Ethel Kelso, daughter of a prominent Grand Junction fruit grower, and is an expert motorcyclist. Carson will ride on the tandem seat.

The first woman to attempt to ride across the Rockies on a motorcycle is Mrs. E. Frank Winfield, who made the trip with her husband last summer.

Fright Kills Hero as He Tries to Save Life

Man Leaps Into Water After Drowning Woman and Heart Stops From Scare.

STROUDSBURG, PA., Aug. 9.—Mrs. F. A. Keesing, of No. 693 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., was seized with heart failure to-day bathing in Cherry Creek, Delaware Water Gap. David J. Dickenson, a hotel porter, went to her rescue.

Dickenson was unable to swim, and sank with Mrs. Keesing. Both were taken from the water dead.

Two physicians said there was no water in the lungs of either, and that Mrs. Keesing died of heart failure and Dickenson of fright.

Portland People Believe She Has Settled in Quiet Town to Start Divorce Suit.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug 9.—From the gay life of a popular society woman, a leader in the smartest affairs of New York, Newport and Bar Harbor to pursue an existence in a quiet city, is a change just made by the dashing Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, the former Kitty Duer.

"Why do you suppose she's here?" all Portland is asking.

What can she do with herself all day long, for she is never seen out, save to take a drive, and then always wearing a heavy white veil. Is she here to secure a divorce and will she live that dreary life for one whole year—that's how the gossip runs.

Perhaps she's writing another book. She did write one once, "The Crystal Ball." But while the world conjectures, Mrs. Mackay denies herself to all.

Divorce is without doubt her idea in burying herself here, where she has been ever since her millionaire husband sailed for Europe with their three children.

Mrs Mackay is occupying the home of Adam P. Leighton on Western Promenade, a cottage in comparison with the mansions she has been used to occupying.

It was on June 25 that Mr. Mackay sailed for Europe on the Imperator, taking his children on board from New Jersey, where they had been in his control for several days. He went abroad with never a word to the wife and mother.

So mysterious was the departure that it attracted wide attention. They boarded the ship at night; a detective squad was serving to protect the children from any attempt to prevent their departure and the father registered under an assumed name. The children, who are no doubt longing for their mother as she is longing for them, are still abroad and it is said they will be there for months.

Of the eighteen babies entered, none scored less than 946. None of the country babies entered won a prize.

Uses Boot as Strop; Shaves With Knife

Pioneer Indiana Man Has Never Owned Razor, Mug or Barber Soap.

CONNERSVILLE, IND., Aug. 9.—Zaccheus Adams, Jackson Township, Fayette County, has shaved himself twice a week for 54 years, but never owned a shaving mug, a razor, a strop or a hone. It is Mr. Adams' pride that he keeps his razor, an old Wade & Butcher cleaver, twice as big as a common razor, in the finest trim with the least trouble of any man in the county.

He wears old style, high-toped boots and still has one pair which he bought 26 years ago. Wishing to shave, Mr. Adams first puts on these boots. He then smacks the razor blade back and forth along the leather leg of the left one for a minute or two. His next operation is to moisten his face with rainwater—no perfumed soap for him—and then he just shaves.

NATURE AIDS IN BEAUTY DISPLAY AT PACIFIC FAIR

Picturesque Location Will Add to Grandeur of Palaces of Mammoth Panama Exhibition.

By HAMILTON WRIGHT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—The palaces of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition have been planned upon a massive scale to conform with their impressive natural surroundings. The site of the exposition at Harbor View lies within the city limits as a crescent upon the shores of San Francisco Bay, just inside the Golden Gate.

No more picturesque location, nor one more appropriate to the celebration of a great maritime event could be imagined. On the south, east and west the grounds are encircled by towering hills of varying contours rising successively from 250 to 900 feet above the sea level. Upon the north the site opens out upon the harbor of San Francisco.

Site Natural Amphitheater.

The central portion of the site lies slightly above the sea and is encircled on three sides by gently sloping ground; within a short distance from the boundaries of the site these slopes change to steep hillsides and thus the site becomes the floor of a huge amphitheater from whose sides the exposition will be seen stretched out below. To the east and south the residence section encircles the exposition grounds, and to the west and southwest the site embraced by the wooded slopes of the Presidio military reservation, dark with cypress and eucalyptus and interspersed with occasional vistas of green valleys.

The exposition buildings, built upon an axis east and west, will face the bay upon the north; they will parallel the stream of the great incoming traffic of the world through the western gate of the United States. Ships entering the harbor will pass before the exposition grounds.

The harbor itself will be a part of the great theater upon which will be staged the world's jubilee and the Golden Gate will be the entrance to the theater.

A marvelous panorama will be afforded visitors on ships coming through the Golden Gate. As one looks from the harbor he will see there main groups of exposition buildings. There will be the great central group comprising the fourteen exposition palaces to be devoted to general exhibits; there will be the group upon the left hand or east end devoted to amusement concessions and covering sixty-five acres; this will be the "midway." The right-hand group upon the Presidio Military reservation and nearest the Golden Gate will be devoted to the pavilions of the States and foreign nations.

Tropical Boulevard Feature.

The main group of buildings will lie between a tropical garden or boulevard running east and west along the fringe of hills nearest the city upon the south, and the esplanade along the shores of San Francisco Bay upon the north.

The tropical boulevard, to be known as the "Alameda," will be 1,800 feet in length and 300 feet wide; it will be glowing with fountains, lagoons, statuary peristyles and arcades and, secluded from the winds of the bay, it will be transplanted with a profusion of semi-tropical trees, plants and flowers, including the orange, banana, olive, myrtle and every variety of palm. The east end of the Alameda will open out with a plaza upon Van Ness Avenue, one of the principal boulevards of San Francisco. The west end upon the Presidio will be surmounted by a commemorative arch of triumph.

The prevailing color tone of the exposition will be an ochre, a tawny buff, several shades removed from white, but in the distance giving the effect of white, but will not be glaring under the brilliant sunlight of California. In the courts there will be a marvelous blending of colors; Pompeiian red, strong Italian blues, vermilion and orange will predominate. The court system is unique in that it will permit each architect, artist or sculptor to present some distinct conception without clashing with the exposition architecture and coloring in its entirety.

BACHELOR, 107 YEARS OLD, GIVES SINGLE LIFE CREDIT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Daniel Turner, a veteran of the Civil War, residing at Santa Monica, who celebrated his one hundred and seventh birthday to-day, thanks his judgment in remaining single for his long life and apparent good health at this advanced age.

"My life was never blighted by worry or sickness because I never married," said "Uncle" Dan. "Married men die younger than bachelors. Sometimes death is a welcome relief to the man who gets a modern wife."

Get Ready for End of the World

Flying Rollers Expect It Soon

So Members of This Queer Cult Await With Uncut Hair and Much Footwashing.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—"Now, brethren, watch night and day, for ye know not when the end of the world draws nigh. It may be tomorrow; at least it will come before the year 1920. It is probably much nearer than that," says Brother Lucien I. Pingree. With long flowing beard that has never been profaned by scissors and with silken locks which also have never been clipped, this resident of Stoneham thus warns all those who would be ready when the First Resurrection occurs. "It is coming soon—very soon—very soon," he asserts. Brother Pingree and his band of adherents all are sure of it. The end of the world is close at hand, they all say.

For this reason the Flying Rollers are launcing a great religious crusade which they hope will awaken men and women to a knowledge of their evil ways and will prepare them for the near-at-hand millennium.

Keep on Living.

If you are one of the elect and alive when this auspicious day comes Mr. Pingree says that you will never die. Your body will take on eternal life and though you will be otherwise possessed of man's normal anatomy and will go right on through million of years living in the mortal mold.

Brother Pingree, who is agent and teacher of the Flying Roller faith in this vicinity, lives at No. 1 Forrest street, Stoneham. His church until recently has been at No. 117 Hancock street, Everett. Now the Flying Rollers are to pitch their tent in Malden and launch a propaganda which aims to halt the world in its mad round of pleasure, barber shops and picture galleries.

It is not such a hardship for the women to belong to the Flying Rollers church, but the men have troubles of their own. Their discipline forbids anyone to have his hair cut or to enjoy the pleasure of lying back in a tonsorial chair while the artist with the razor does the rest.

Males Never Cut Hair.

The male brethren never have the corners of their hair or of their flowing beards rounded. "Thou shalt not," says the church discipline. Then there is the ceremony of the washing of feet, which takes place on certain occasions, when elders and elderesses lave each other's pedal extremities and thus conform to other Biblical injunctions. The Flying Roll is a book written by the great Roller prophet, Jezreel, mentioned in the Scriptures as "to come on earth." He came and was here in 1875, wrote the Roll and died about twenty years ago.

Here Are the Tenets of the Flying Rollers

Thou shalt not shave.
Thou shalt not cut thy hair.
Thou shalt not have thy picture taken.
Be faithful and thou shalt join the 144,000 true believers who will live forever.
Remember that the millenium will be here—probably in a year or so.
Thou shalt not tattoo thy arms.
The prophet is James J. Jezreel. Follow his teachings.
Feet washing among the brethren and sisters is practiced faithfully as the Bible and extracts from the "Flying Roll" dictate.
Prepare for the first resurrection which is coming soon.

Since then the Flying Rollers have read his text with scrupulous care and followed closely in his teachings.

The Flying Rollers believe in the law and gospel. That is, they follow literally the teachings of the Bible. A man who is faithful to the end will live forever. The Bible says that, and the Rollers take it literally.

144,000 in the Elect.

Of all the people alive, 144,000 (mentioned in Revelations, Chapter 14) shall be the elect who are to live during the thousand years when Christ is again to be on earth (during the First Resurrection). Then this chosen 144,000 shall enjoy Heaven still with their earthly bodies while the rest of humanity that was, shall minister to them as "ministering spirits."

"The world of wickedness will soon cease. A new world will appear as soon as Christ comes, which will be very soon (I can not give the exact date, but it will be before 1920, there is no doubt about that)," says Pastor Pingree. "In that world there will be no longer this struggle for life. Wonderful fruits and flowers will grow everywhere along the road sides—fruits and flowers more wonderful than we get from hothouses now. Then the earth will be Heaven for a thousand years.

"We believe that those who are faithful to the teachings of our religion will share that thousand years with Christ, wearing their mortal bodies, then clothed in immortality.

"It is no hardship not to cut your hair or trim your beard," says Mr. Pingree. "We tie it up and tuck it in, and by not cutting it or rounding the corners in any way, we are obeying the letter of divine law."

EVERY LUXURY PROVIDED FOR 12 PRIZE DOGS

Private Room, Electric Fans, Leather Chairs, Etc., for Each of Dozen Pomeranians.

BROKTON, MASS., Aug. 9.—Twelve Pomeranians—each with a whole room to himself, and housed in a house which they have all to themselves, likewise—take he prize for dog luxury, Brockton folks believe. Besides a house of their own, the dogs have:

A valet, electric fan, individual beds, a bath twice a day, a back yard to play in, leather chairs and soft rugs (the latter to try their teeth on).

Mrs. E. V. Graves, a leading business woman, owns the dogs. She is successful as the head of a factory here. Brockton folks say she is more attentive to the dogs than Mrs William Carter, of Newport, who got four doctors when her Pomeranian was nervous.

During the hot days the valet, Mr. Beals, fans the little fellows with a specially made $18 electric fan and each dog is given a cold bath at frequent intervals.

"They are all as jealous as can be," says Mrs. Graves. "If you make more of one than another there is a terrible howl and often a fight. They are friendly to children as a general rule. The dogs are worth anywhere from $150 to $1,000 each, but I do not care to sell them. They are a great comfort to me."

HOT FIGHT FOR COMMISSIONER IN BIRMINGHAM

Recorder Wood, "People's Candidate," Denounces Opponent as Champion of Interests.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Clement R. Wood and George B. Ward are engaged in the most spectacular campaign for President of the Commission of Birmingham ever waged in this city.

Wood, as the "candidate of the people," is making many and varied charges against the political element supporting his opponent, Mr. Ward. He charges that he (Wood) was removed as Recorder by the Commission for sending one of their friends to the stockade and insisting on his serving his time, as he did in similar cases.

He also charges that Ward represents the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company and the Birmingham Loan and Discount Company. He charges that the managing editor of one of Birmingham's afternoon papers was forced out of the race under penalty of losing his position on the paper.

He claims that many other prospective candidates have been eliminated from the race by the powerful hand of the interests, and calls on the "common people" to assert themselves in the defeat of Ward.

Ward claims that Wood was discouraged by the Commission because of incompetency, and makes many other charges and insinuations in his speeches and newspaper cards.

Meetings are being held almost every night, and music from brass bands and the orations of the spellbinders are to be heard on every corner.

It is impossible to get a complete line-up, but it can be said with certainty that the race will be close, and that the result will be known only after every vote has been counted.

WOMEN BUY LAND ONE-THIRD CHEAPER THAN MEN

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 9.—After hearing from women of the Council of Clubs the Finance Committee of the upper house of the Council has killed the ordinance to advance $1,000 of the $12,000 set apart for the purpose of making a start on the contemplated women's reformatory at Leeds.

It developed that the $1,000 had been asked by the Board of Public Welfare as a first payment on thirteen acres of ground it proposed to buy at Leeds at $500 an acre.

The women made fun of the business abilities of the Welfare Board, and said that they had already secured an option on 96 acres close by the thirteen at $171 an acre.

Heiress on Lone Hunt for Gold Seeks Mine Grandfather Found Plans to Do Own Prospecting

Miss Frances Leighton, an heiress of California, who is prospecting through a section of the Sierra Madre Mountains in search of a gold mine which she believes her grandfather, a "Forty-niner," discovered, but never made known. Recently she heard of the reported "find" and, securing a miner's outfit, stated alone on the perilous trip through the mountainous wilds in search of it.

Miss Frances Leighton Shows Same Intrepid Spirit of the Argonauts of '49.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—With the same dauntless spirit exhibited by her grandfather during the California gold rush of '49, Miss Frances Leighton, one of the wealthiest and most prominent socially of the younger generation of Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, is on a prospecting tour through the Sierra Madre Mountains to-day in search of a gold mine she had learned her grandfather discovered but never developed.

For many months Miss Leighton planned the prospecting tour before leaving to carry it out. Topographical bureaus supplied her with maps of the mountainous territory through which she planned to make her tour and several veterans of the gold stampede not only advised her against the foolhardiness of the prospective journey, but told her that there was one chance in a thousand of ever greeting civilization again if she lost herself in several untraveled sections of the mountain region that as yet have never been thoroughly explored.

Nevertheless, Miss Leighton had great confidence in the belief that her grandfather did find the mine somewhere in the mountain fastness and she determined to find it, if it did exist, at any cost and without taking into consideration the hardships that confront her.

Miss Leighton, according to reports which have reached her home town, is to-day prospecting at or near the West Fork Canyon, twelve miles beyond Mount Wilson.

Grandfather Killed.

Her grandfather, John Easton, was one of the first of the thousands of New Englanders to reach California, after a perilous journey across the prairies following the report of the discovery of gold in that State.

Soon after reaching San Francisco, he left with his wife and daughter and a partner and established a camp at Sierra Madre. Easton left the camp one day on a prospecting tour and never returned. Three days later his partner went out to search for him. He was found crushed to death by falling rock.

Before his death, however, he managed to draw roughly on a piece of paper what is now believed to be the location of the mine his intrepid young granddaughter is searching for.

Miss Leighton some years ago received a letter from her grandfather's former partner containing the piece of paper on which he had drawn the outline of the supposed mine. It was on receipt of this letter and diagram that Miss Leighton planned to go in search of the hidden gold.

After months of careful study of the many maps, topographical bureau reports and advice from old-time miners, Miss Leighton treated herself to a complete miner's outfit and started on her tedious journey up the mountain.

To Work Alone.

She will do the entire work alone, staking her own camp, preparing her meals, making surveys and using the pick and shovel whenever she believes she has struck the right trail.

Her outfit includes several changes of clothes, a heavy pick and shovel, a mountain mule, or pack animal as they are called in that section of the country, a complete dining and cooking outfit, a pack of playing cards which will afford her her only amusement while practically a prisoner in the wilds, needles, thread and many other useful and necessary articles.

She wears most all the time a pair of regulation top trousers, similar to riding breeches, with canvas leggings and a plain but heavy mountain shirt.

If the gold mine really exists, every one of the young woman's friends believe that she will not return until it has been found.

U. S. EDUCATION EXPERT SAYS ILLITERACY GROWS

BOULDER, COLO., Aug. 9.—That in only two States of the Union has the ideal democracy in education been even approximated; that every year in the United States almost 70,000 illiterates are sent out into the world to make their way; that there are in the country to-day 5,615,000 persons over the age of ten who can neither read nor write and that almost 50 per cent of the rural teachers of the country have not had a high school education, were among the startling statements made by United States Commissioner of Education Claxton in an address on "Democracy and Education."

DENVER IS READY TO GIVE KNIGHTS ROYAL GREETING

Thousands of Templars Pour Into City, Which Is Lavishly Decorated for Conclave.

DENVER, Aug. 9.—Thousands of Knights Templar are already here for the thirty-second triennial convention, and it is estimated that when the convention formally opens Tuesday next more than 100,000 Knights and their friends will have arrived.

All buildings are decorated in honor of the Knights, as are private dwellings. The municipal and other public buildings have been elaborately ornamented and great arches have been built over many of the streets. Thousands have been spent upon decorations and illumination. Denver has spent more than fifteen times as much on its plans for the Knights Templar than it ever before expended upon any one convention.

Sun to Shine All Night.

At Eighteenth and Champa streets the huge figure of a Knight more than 60 feet in height has been erected. A searchlight will play upon it all night. At Fourteenth and Champa streets a "Colorado Sunset," a marvelous electrical display, has been built. It shows the sun sinking below the rim of the mountains. Twenty monster searchlights are placed behind the "sun," throwing their rays into the sky to resemble the rays of the sinking sun.

Over the Isle of Safety at Broadway and Sixteenth street, a reproduction of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem will astonish the visitors. It measures 50 by 60 feet, and is lighted by searchlights on the tops of nearby buildings.

Every arrangement possible has been made by the railroads to bring the Knights and their friends into Denver. More special trains will enter Denver than entered Washington in the same space of time for the inauguration. The Pullman Company has reserved large space of ground on the outskirts of the city for a "Car City," where the special cars and special trains will be parked, and where those Knights who so wish may live in the cars. Sanitary arrangements will be perfect. Stores of various kinds for the convenience of the car dwellers have been established.

Two trainloads of automobiles from New York, sent here by New York Knights, have already arrived, and carloads of automobiles from other cities are arriving daily. These have also been parked on the outskirts of the city. More than 500 special trains and cars have already arrived. According to the railroad schedules, when the visitors really commence to flock in a special train will arrive every eight minutes for forty-eight hours.

Every State Represented.

From August 1 to to-day more than 2,000 automobiles reached this city. More than 1,000 other cars are on their way here. The delegates to the convention are from every State in the Union, and from Alaska, Honolulu, Philippines, Canada, England, Scotland and Ireland.

As the special trains began to arrive, some 2,000 Colorado Knights ranged themselves at the station to escort the new arrivals safely to their hotels. Every hotel room in Denver has been rented.

On Tuesday next the grand parade will be held. More than 50,000 Knights will be in line. Their white plumes, costing $15 each, will altogether be worth $600,000. The regalia of the Knights on parade will be worth more than $1,000,000. Sixty-five bands will march with the Knights, the fees to the bands alone amounting to $22,000. Some 600 Knights' commanders will be mounted on picked horses from the ranches of Colorado and Wyoming.

KANSAS SHERIFF RETALIATES FOR HIS ARREST ON SUNDAY

HUTCHINSON, KANS., Aug. 9.—Following his arrest on a charge of violating the Sunday labor ordinance, Koon C. Beck, sheriff of Reno County, announced that he would stop all Sunday labor in this city.

He swore out complaints against 350 persons who work on Sunday, including all street car employees. Beck and a brother are proprietors of an amusement park and shows have been given there on Sunday. Local ministers and church members made the complaint against the park.

LANE TAKES UP CUDGELS IN WAR FOR FARMERS

Secretary of the Interior Has Begun Long Battle on Land Grabbers.

the Interior Franklin K. Lane has started a little war on the land grabbers west of the Mississippi River.

He has taken up the cudgels of the farmer and the homesteader in the great West. His efforts in this direction materially effect the pocketbook of every man, women and child.

Incidentally, he is "bucking" the land speculator. These land "grabbers" have quietly been acquiring vast tracts of land in the West on which the people of the United States have spent over $75,000,000 in irrigation projects. The homesteader has either been ousted through excessive water rate charges or becomes a tenant of the land companies.

Speculators Hold Land.

Secretary Lane finds that the projects were planned for the purpose of aiding the small farmer in tilling his ground, but that in reality 95 per cent of the land is held by speculators, who are charging excessive rates for water which has been sluiced to the land by the Government.

The other 5 per cent of the acreage is owned by the small farmer, but even Government water rates are held by Mr. Lane to be excessively high. Building notes for dam canal and sluice ways add to the cost of upkeep of the farm and conditions, Westerners say, are becoming intolerable.

By going into the question from the very first day that he entered his office, Mr. Lane has become intimately acquainted with conditions obtaining in the West. Daily conferences have been had with delegations from the West. Even the land speculator had his day in court, and his contentions and views were placed before the Secretary.

Farmer Needs Help.

In this connection Mr. Lane announced: "I am for the farmer, first, last and at all times. Naturally handicapped by lack of sufficient funds to carry on expensive farming under the conditions that obtain in the West, the farmer must receive support and co-operation from the Government, if the great West is to be settled and made to be as productive as the East.

"Expensive water will ruin the small farmers and ranchmen. They must have cheap rates and long-time notes, the Government must back them up an extend them credit, helping them over the rough places if necessary, if the various projects designed to benefit the whole people are to accomplish the purposes for which they were constructed.

"Why should this Government spend $75,000,000 for the benefit of private capital? Why should the Government adopt a hard and fast policy, such as has existed in the past, which has kept the small farmer from going into the new regions and taking up Government land? Isn't it time for the United States to extend to the Westerners a little paternal patience, a little more consideration, a helping hand?"

MEN AND RELIGION No. 73

CHILDREN OF GEORGIA

"AND THEY ALL WITH ONE CONSENT BEGAN TO MAKE EXCUSE."

Luke 14:18.

They were at dinner.

Jesus said:

"When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind,

"And thou shalt be blessed."

One at the table pretended to be in sympathy. He began smugly:

"Happy is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God."

The hypocrisy of the man and all others like him was unmasked in the answer made by Jesus. He said:

"A certain man made a great supper and bade many—

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse."

One said one thing, another another.

With one it was a field; with another it was new oxen.

In the end, the Lord said:

"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

And from the highways and the hedges called He His guests.

Are you a maker of hypocritcal phrases as was the man at the Pharisee's dinner table—pretending a love for that which is just and right?

Or, to-day, are you trying to do the will, not of man or men, but of Him who died for you?

Let us have done with excuses!

While spending thousands on fields, hogs and cattle, say not:

"We are unable—

"We can not give proper care to these girls—

"These children must go down in shame because of our lack of money—

"But our beasts we must protect whatever the cost."

If animals are more valuable than girls, let us say frankly: but you know that this is untrue.

You know what Georgia would do.

Consider, then!

The Bill in the House providing a Reformatory for Girls is No. 4—ahead of any other measure appropriating money.

The Penitentiary Committee has approved it.

Unanimously the Appropriations Committee has recommended that it pass.

Why, then, should beasts and fields be provided for by later bills and nothing done for Georgia's wayward and delinquent girls?

BURWELL of Hancock, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman and the vice-chairman, BLACKBURN of Fulton, HARDEMAN of Jefferson, MILLER of Bibb, NUNNALLY of Floyd, PAULK of Berrien, RAGLAND of Talbot, REDWINE of Fayette, RHODES of Clarke, SHUPTRINE of Chatham and SLADE of Muscogee constitute the Rules Committee of the House.

The Bill is in their hands.

Monday is the final day in which the measure can be heard and enacted into law at this session of the Legislature.

These eleven men, THE RULES COMMITTEE, will not prevent a hearing, say their friends. We believe that they will do more, that they will help to pass the Bill.

For they know the worth of a girl-child of ten to fourteen.

And they can appraise a cow or hog.

WOMAN DEITY CREATED MAN, SAYS TABLET

New Version of Genesis Found in University of Pennsylvania Nippur Collection.

DATE IS FIXED AT 2100 B. C.

Dr. Arno Poebel's Discovery Is Regarded as Oldest Story of Origin of World.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—It was a woman who created mankind, according to a tablet 4,000 years old just deciphered at the Pennsylvania University Museum by Dr. Arno Poebel, who is at work translating the tablets dug up in Nippur some years ago by the museum expeditions.

About 37 years ago George Smith, the English scholar and explorer, brought back from Babylonia the cylinders which gave a Babylonian account of the origin of mankind and much of his early history, and these not only excited great interest but had a profound effect upon the theological teachings. The parallelism between the Babylonian story and that of Genesis developed a new school in theological criticism. But the cylinders of Smith only dated back to the reign of Assurbanipal in the seventh century B. C. The university museum tablet dates back possibly to 2500 B. C., and it is reasonably certain to be no later than the reign of Hamurabi, about 2100 B. C.

Female Deity Created Man.

The new account of the creation and the flood throws much new light on the early ideas of the Babylonians and Sumerians.

The striking novel features of the new tablet are these:

That it was a female deity who created mankind, known as "the blackheaded," from the color of the hair.

That new deities or new characteristics of the gods are discovered in the original document, although they have been hinted at in other ways. The character of the female goddess is now made important from the earliest times and equal with the two male ruler gods. Later tablets speak of these as unimportant.

That the first seven prediluvian cities and the special god of each are discovered.

That the older Babylonian name of the Scriptural Noah is Zingidda.

That deluge ruins of the predeluvian cities were not all destroyed, some not until historic times. There is historic basis to much of the statement in this epic.

Opens With Poem.

Dr. Poebel has prepared a careful literal translation of the tablet. It originally was about seven inches square, but on such a surface the ancients could write in ideographic signs a long epic poem, and that is what this table contained. Like the first chapter of Genesis, the story opens with a great poem on the origin of the heavens as well as of the earth. It appears that Nintu, a female god, created mankind, and she is found lamenting that the other gods seem bent on the destruction of her subjects. She speaks of the human beings as "my creations." It appears that Anu and Enlil were the chief gods of power, although they were among seven of equal rank, the first being god of heaven and the second god of earth. Then comes the story of the creation:

"Nintu created the blackheaded," (human race.) * * * "The fields of the ground produced abundance, the cattle and the four-legged beasts of the field artfully they (the gods) called into existence."

Use of Fireproofed Cotton Goods Urged

State Fire Marshal Says Stores In Kansas Sell No Other Kind.

TOPEKA, Aug. 9.—Harrison Parkman, State Fire Marshal, believes that stores ought to sell only fireproof cotton goods.

In the new State fire textbook the Fire Marshal is urging that every Kansas man and woman refuse to buy any but fireproof cotton goods and that they adopt the German method and fireproof all cotton materials.

The Fire Marshal believes that this action would decrease the number of deaths by fire in Kansas fully 50 per cent and it would make a big decrease in the number of fires in the homes of the State.

Workmen of Grade Crossing Commission Destroy House of Man Who Blocked Work.

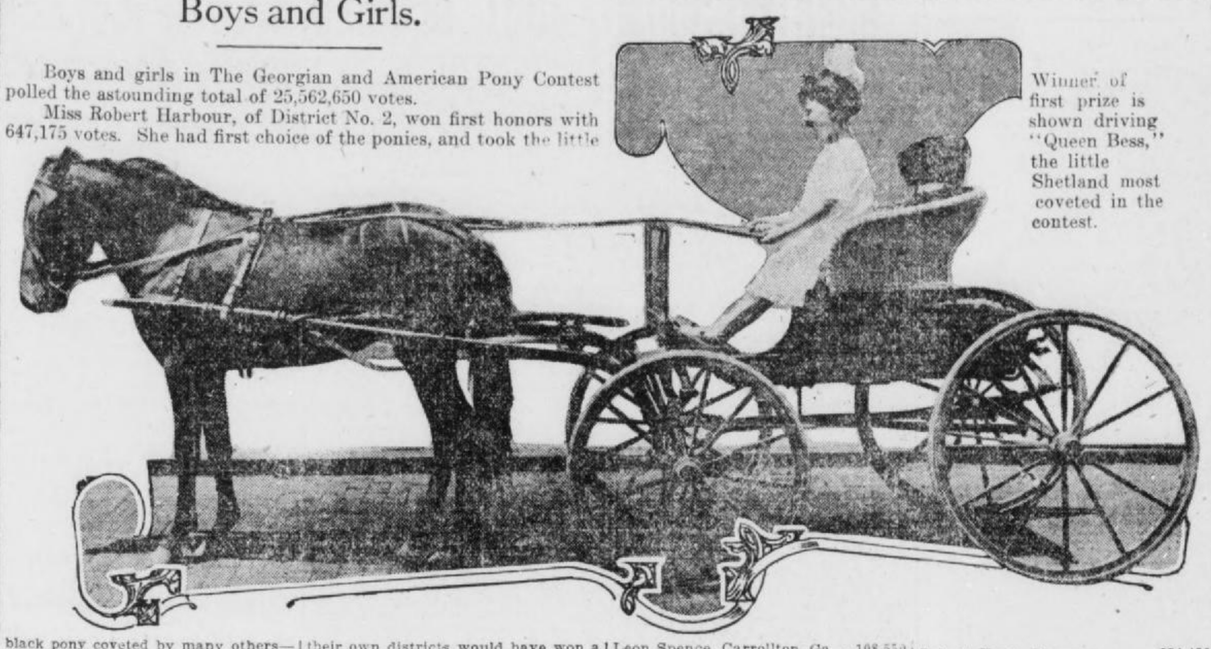
CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Aug. 9.—While John Barber was in Boston this afternoon, a wrecking crew, under orders of the special grade crossing commission for Central Falls, demolished a cottage house he owned on Cross street, and then started in to saw off a corner of the Barber Livery Stable nearby. When his land was condemned, Barber demanded $5,000 for the property, but was allowed only $3,500. The grade crossing commissioners sold the cottage to Nicolas Bertozzi, but Barber would not let Bertozzi on the premises.

25,562,650 VOTES FOR PONIES

Astounding Mark Reached in Great Contest

Race, Thrillingly Close to the Last, Showed Courage and Ability of Boys and Girls.

MISS ROBERT JESTER HARBOUR, 340 Ponce DeLeon avenue, who polled largest number of votes in Georgian and American's great Pony Contest.



Winner of first prize is shown driving "Queen Bess," the little Shetland most coveted in the contest.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American Pony Contest polled the astounding total of 25,562,650 votes.

Miss Robert Harbour, of District No. 2, won first honors with 647,175 votes. She had first choice of the ponies, and took the little black pony coveted by many others—"Queen Bess."

Totals of more than a half-million votes were made by George Rosser in District No. 1, and Fannie Mae Cook in District No. 4.

Four others, Charles E. Kelly, of Cartersville, with 430,460; Frank Ison, Jr., of College Park, with 474,090; William Turner, with 439,930, and Ross Greer, with 440,925, climbed over the 400,000 mark, and neared the half-million level.

All Had Big Totals.

All the others had big total votes—large enough to win in any ordinary contest. But this was no ordinary contest. It was harder fought than any competition of the kind in the history of Atlanta. This was inevitable, because the prizes were more attractive to children than any which any Atlanta newspaper ever before had offered.

A remarkable feature is the way the contestants were "bunched" at the finish. In many districts there are five, six and even ten who were serious contenders for the prizes up to the very count.

Some of those who were fifth in their own districts would have won a pony, or at least a watch, in some other district. This seems hard, but it is the fate of war, so to speak. Presumably those in the other districts had even chances, and should not be permitted to compete with the boys and girls working in a region where the going, perhaps, was much more difficult.

Credit to the Losers.

Hats off to the losers!

Every one of them is "game." There has not been a complaint of unfairness—not a single kick at the method in which the contest was conducted. Nothing but a spirit of fair play, and the motto, "Let the best man win," has prevailed.

There is this much consolation—the boys and girls who worked sincerely in the contest have gained experience which will be invaluable to them in later life—an insight into business methods worth more than any prize.

Then, too, they have the satisfaction of knowing that they have aided in introducing Atlanta's best newspapers into homes where they were strangers before.

Mends Own Socks To Let Wife Vote

Illinois Husband Consents to Do Washing to Prove Housekeeping Isn't Hard.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Just to prove to an expectant world that he was a good husband, Wayne Colby stayed home, mended the socks, tended the children and washed dishes while his wife cast her vote in the first election under the universal suffrage law recently enacted.

"Just to show that it is not such a terrible thing for a man to stay at home and do the housework on the occasional voting day," said Colby, "I thought I would help Mrs. Colby out with the washing."

The first woman to cast her vote in the State was Mrs. Fannie Coleman, of Wamac, near Central Illinois. She was accompanied to the polls by her husband, O. W. Coleman, and both voted for Village Trustees.

WOMEN WHO JOG WIFE UPON A RAIL AWAIT SHERIFF

Illinois State's Attorney Says Volo Vigilantes Who Maltreated the Town Beauty Must Answer.

VOLO, ILL., Aug. 9.—Here in Volo, Lake County, Ill., the women who rode Mrs. John Richardson, the town beauty, on a rail will have to answer to the grand jury. The State's Attorney Ralph Dady, says so.

Gossip caused the trouble. Mrs. Richardson is pretty. Her husband, who keeps the small country store, is a cripple. William Dunnill, a brother-in-law of the wife, was a frequent caller.

The village women descended on the Richardson store, dragged her out on July 14 in the evening, set her astride a rail and bore her, struggling, screaming, almost raving, through the main street of the little town, climaxing the incident by dumping her into a mud puddle by a roadside and warning her to "pack up her traps and go," meaning thereby an ultimatum that she must forever leave Volo.

And, paradoxical as it may seem, all of this happened within forty miles of Chicago.

Slips Away During Night.

After the vigilantes had dumped Mrs. Richardson into one of the various mud puddles which abound in the vicinity, the victim emerged from her oozy bath, went by a circuitous route back to her husband's store, conferred with him and slipped away during the night.

It was impossible to employ an automobile, buggy or other conveyance the night she left, and to remain over until daylight was out of the question, because members of the mob had warned Mrs. Richardson that if the sun rose upon her in Volo again they would tar and feather her.

Her husband witnessed the abduction of his wife, but, being unable to rise, could render her no assistance.

It is estimated that at least half the male population of Volo witnessed the hazing of Mrs. Richardson. In fact, it is said that the women who committed the outrage had previously taken their husbands and brothers into their confidence and that the proposition had been indorsed in family council.

It was expected that Will Dunnill, brother-in-law of Mrs. Richardson would interfere in her behalf, but he left Volo a few hours before the attack. Therefore, Mrs. Richardson's husband being disabled, and her brother-in-law being absent, she was without champion.

Husband Defends Her.

Just before Mrs. Richardson's flight from Volo, her husband gave her $1,500.

To a newspaper man, Richardson said:

"My wife is a good woman. She is not guilty of the charges the other women make. I won't believe it. A woman who has cared for me during my invalidism for the last nine years, who married me when I was an invalid, knowing there was no hope of my recovery, would not be guilty of what they charge.

"And to think that I was helpless to save her from the indignities which were heaped upon her. Her clothing was half torn from her and amid jeers and cheers and the throwing of mud and stones, she was ridden through the streets. It was an act of Middle-Age barbarism and hardly worthy of women of Illinois, who have just obtained the right to vote."

Meanwhile the women of Volo, who are supposed to have played the role of vigilantes, are calmly awaiting developments.

Husband Says She Kissed Count's Foot

Wife Brings Counter Charge That He Is Unduly Friendly With Stepmother.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Counter suits have been instituted in divorce proceedings by Harold D. Johnson, of the Colonial Life Insurance Company, and his wife, Mrs. Harriet L. Johnson, in the Supreme Court at White Plains.

The husband alleges that his wife is so infatuated with a certain Italian count that she frequently kissed his foot.

Mrs. Johnson alleges undue intimacy on the part of her husband with her stepmother, who is designated in the complaint as "one Anna J. R."

Johnson has entered a general denial to his wife's charges, while the wife's attorney, Mirabeau Towns, ridiculed the foot-kissing episodes complained of by Johnson.

No More Matrimony For Julia Sanderson

Former Wife of Tod Sloan Says She Will Never Tire of Single Life.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Never again." This was the terse reply of Julia Sanderson, the actress, when she arrived here on the steamship Adriatic and was asked if the reports that she intended to marry again were true.

After dealing that solar plexus blow to the matrimonial rumor, the former wife of Tod Sloan gave out her ideas on marriage.

"When a girl is free and single she can have all the fun in the world," she said. "It is different when you are married. Nobody wants to talk to you. Nobody wants to see you. No more barriers for me."

Twin Boys' Skin Is Turning to Black

Eighteen-Month-Old Babies Are Suffering From Rare Malady Known as Hodgkin's Disease.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black. The disease is pseudo leucaemia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpurcles greatly diminished.

The twins are the children of Anthony Amato and they were born eighteen months ago. They were then white. Then their skin began growing dark.

Men's Farewell Kiss Mistaken for Fight

Ardent Osculation at Railroad Station Causes Commotion Among Passengers at Gate.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Smack!"

A score of persons hurrying to and fro in the Pennsylvania Railroad station yesterday stopped short.

"Smack!"

The sound was repeated. Turning in the direction from which it seemed to emanate, the curious among the persons in the station saw two well-dressed young men in each other's arms.

Both men were of athletic build and none of the persons who stopped to watch their antics from a distance cared to interfere. When it seemed as if the taller of the two was about to be thrown, they separated suddenly.

Then the gates to the train shed were thrown open and an announcer called upon all intending passengers bound for Jamaica, L. I., and points east to go aboard the waiting train.

That seemed to be a signal for a recommencement of hostilities.

"Smack!"

Sure enough. It sounded again distinctly, but there was no mystery about the cause this time.

"Good-bye, Pierre," said the taller man; "don't forget to write." And a fourth time they kissed before parting.

ROMANCE LEADS TO HEIR'S EXILE FROM GERMANY

Lieutenant in the Kaiser's Army Comes to Chicago and Joins U. S. Cavalry.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Because his love for a pretty German actress resulted in his squandering an inheritance of $32,000 in one year, Dr. Otto Gordon Goldfield, scion of a wealthy family, a lieutenant in the German cavalry and a graduate of Gottigen University, was forced by his father to come to the United States and join the army here as a private. The young German is now in barracks here.

Ruth Werner, German dancer and singer, charmed the young man when in Vienna. His grandfather had just died and left him $32,000. Within a year this was gone, and after numerous appeals to his father, Dr. Goldfield was forced to come here.

Told to Give Up Girl.

His father, who is the vice president of the Corporation of Hamburg, told him to give up the girl, his commission in the army and go to America.

"I fell in love with the girl," explained "Private" Goldfield, "and spent all my money on her. She was beautiful. If she wanted jewels I bought jewels. We were at Monte Carlo. She wanted to play the games. She was beautiful, and I loved her, so why should she not be happy?

"We were in Paris, at the Horse Show in London, and many other places. She had automobiles and fine horses.

"And then my money gave out. My parents refused to give me more, and my father forced me to come to the United States and try for a commission in the army.

"Will I go back?" responded Dr. Goldfield in answer to a question. "Yes, when I get my commission here I will go back and the girl and I will be married. But not until then. I must stay in the army here until I am a lieutenant.

Likes Open Air Life.

"It's the open air, and beautiful I like here more than anything else. That is why I have come to the West.

"And your soldiers—well, next to the French dragoons they are about the best in the world, in my opinion, and I have seen the troops of all the larger countries. That's why I am enlisting as a private here, for I like the life and will stay anyway until I get my naturalization papers."

Goldfield is twenty-five, and has served the last four years in the German cavalry as a lieutenant. He is an experienced horseman, and says he was the winner of the championship at the International Horse Show held in London two years ago, riding the horses from his father's stables.

Jacob Goldfield, father of the young army officer, besides being vice president of the Hamburg Corporation, is a well-known German jurist, as is also his brother, Rudolph Goldfield.

ATTORNEY SAYS TWO DEPUTIES ATTACKED HIM

Lawyer George W. Wood Swears Out Six Warrants for Williams Brothers After Fight.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Attorney George W. Wood this afternoon swore out six warrants against two Deputy Sheriffs, Leland Williams and Lon Williams, brothers. He charges the former with pointing a pistol at him, with carrying a concealed weapon, with assault and battery and with using opprobious language. Lon Williams is charged with assault and battery and the use of opprobrious language.

Mr. Wood claims that the two deputies attacked him unexpectedly, severely beat him with their fists and cursed him and that when he sought to resist them Leland Williams pulled a pistol and pointed it.

Leland Williams admits striking Attorney Wood, but denies that his brother took part in the fight. He also denies displaying the pistol.

The trouble started in the City Court when Deputy Leland Williams reproved Attorney Wood for telling a negro, who had been acquitted, that he could depart. The deputy contended that the negro could not leave until the Sheriff's officers said so.

Attorney Wood declared that no Deputy Sheriff could give him orders, and a lively exchange of words followed. The fight took place across the street from the courthouse.

Mr. Wood is vice president of the Macon Bar Association.

Attempts Suicide as His Wife Is Dying

Macon Husband Grows Despondent When He Is Unable to Care Properly for Invalid.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Despondent because he lacked funds to properly provide for his dying wife, William J. Bettis, formerly in the transfer business, attempted suicide by drinking laudanum and now is in a critical condition at the Macon Hospital.

Mrs. Bettis is a victim of pellagra and is in the last stages of the malady.

After being revived at the hospital, Bettis protested against the attention of the physicians. "I don't want to live if my wife is going to die," he said.

Macon Prepares For City Election

New Executive Committee To Be Named at Mass Meeting Next Thursday Evening.

MACON, Aug. 9.—The citizens of Macon will name a new City Executive Committee at a mass meeting to be held next Thursday night at the city auditorium. This virtually will open the active campaign for Mayor.

The present committee, W. D. Nottingham, chairman, will retire from office, having served for three years, a year longer than the term for which they were elected.

The committee will designate the date for the municipal election and will control its operation.

Alfalfa Growers Will Meet in Macon

Loring Brown Calls Meeting of State Association of Farmers for October 25.

MACON, Aug. 9.—There will be an organization meeting of the Georgia Alfalfa Growers' Association in Macon on Saturday, October 25, during the State Fair, one having been called by Loring Brown, of Smyrna, who is one of the most active workers in the alfalfa movement. It is proposed for the alfalfa growers to make exhibits at the fair, and the fair association will give liberal premiums, consisting of Holstein and Jersey cattle, Tamsworth and Duroc swine, and poultry. This will be the first alfalfa exhibit ever made in this State.

Waltz and Swo-Step Enough for Cordele

Chaperones Put Ban on Hugs, Tangos, Trots and Other New Steps.

CORDELE, Aug. 9.—The bunny hug, tango, turkey trot and other modern dances are entirely too immodest in the opinion of the fair sex of Cordele who are accustomed to the waxed floors. Like the slit skirt, such dances will probably not come in popular favor at any early time in this city.

Chaperons at local balls recently have positively forbidden the new dances, and the young folk, no matter how ardently, but perhaps secretly, they may desire to introduce them, must let the waltz and two-step still suffice.

AUGUSTA DIGEST SHOWS $1,500,000 TAX INCREASE

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—The county tax digest for 1913 has been completed and shows an increase of over $1,000,000 over 1912. Tax Receiver Steed has been extremely busy the past few weeks getting the digest ready. It shows, among other things, that negroes own nearly $3,500,000 worth of property in this county.

The digest for 1913 amounts to approximately $29,500,000.

Bibb Commissioners At Last Pay Voucher

Body Had Held Up Account, as It Questioned Grand Jury's Authority.

MACON, Aug. 9.—The County Commissioners to-day decided to pay the bill of $1,500 made by R. W. Jemison, a public accountant, for auditing the books of three of the county offices, pursuant to a contract with the Grand Jury.

For more than six weeks the Commissioners have refused to pay this bill, notwithstanding that it was ordered by two grand juries and approved by Judge Mathews. They took the position that grand juries had no legal right to make contracts, and especially contracts that would bind the Commissioners.

After a long discussion this morning it was finally decided, on a divided vote, to pay the voucher. Jemison claimed to have worked 100 days on the books. The Commissioners contended that he only worked 15 days.

Jury to Pass on A Bankruptcy Suit

Judge Speer 'Washes Hands' of Beach Manufacturing Company Case—Newman to Preside.

MACON, Aug. 9.—The petition of creditors to put the Beach Manufacturing Company, of Appling County, a half-million dollar company, in bankruptcy, will be heard before Judge Newman, of Atlanta, in the United States Court at Savannah on September 15. The case will be tried before a jury, a demand for jury trial having been made by the company. This is the first demand of that kind ever entered on the records of the court for this district, it being the custom to have the judge try bankruptcy matters.

Judge Speer requested Judge Newman to preside, stating that he would "wash his hands of the case" when the claim was made that he was disqualified because his son-in-law, A. H. Heyward, Jr., is one of the attorneys for the petitioning creditors. The petitioning creditors have claims that aggregate several thousand dollars.

Augusta Rejoicing At New Ballot Bill

Secrecy Enforced by Garlington Measure Expected to Stop Many Prevalent Abuses.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—The passage of the secret ballot bill by the Senate Friday was cheering news to Augustans. The bill was introduced in the House early during the present session by Representative Garlington.

The bill insures the secret ballot in all general and special elections in Augusta in the future. Of course, under the white primary system the secret ballot is not used, but in the general elections here the open ballot is the method.

Mayor Hayne was elected in December by the open ballot after his adherents had refused to allow him to enter the primary.

LATE REGISTRATION FOR LABORERS TO QUALIFY

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Beginning on Thursday, the registration books for the auditorium bond election will be kept open until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, until they are finally closed on August 15. An order to this effect has been issued by Mayor Richard J. Davant.

The request that the books be kept open until a late hour in the afternoon came from the Chamber of Commerce in order that working men might have a better opportunity of registering. Heretofore they have been closed at 2 o'clock each day.

FORT SCREVEN BAND TO PLAY FOR SAVANNAHANS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Arrangements have been made for public concerts Monday and Thursday evenings each week by the band at Fort Screven.

Because of objections raised by the Musicians' union, the Fort Screven band has been prevented from paying at Tybee this summer, previous similar objections not having been effective. This year the band was permitted to give only a few concerts at the pavilions.

JUDGE HENRY C. HAMMOND, of Superior Court at Augusta, who says that a dog is not a good dog unless it is ugly, and who has the same views about umbrellas. When he went on the bench years ago he affected an ugly Airdale terrier and a large ungainly, green sunshade. The terrier died and he got another, but he still has the original "shade." "Rags" is said to be one of the finest Airdale pups in the country.

The Judge, the dog and the umbrella are inseparable companions.

Harvard Negro Held As Pension Swindler

Secret Service Men Locate Him in Sparta and Arrest in Macon Follows.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Herman Watson Grant, a negro graduate of the Harvard School of Medicine, and also the graduate of a school of pharmacy and a law school in Washington, has been arrested here for the authorities in Alexandria, Va., where he is wanted on a charge of embezzlement. There is an indictment, found in the United States Court against him for stealing from the Pension Bureau, where he practiced in the claim department.

Grant jumped bond in Norfolk and Indianapolis, where he was arrested after twice failing to appear for trial in Alexandria. Secret service men located him in Sparta by means of a letter which he wrote to a relative in Augusta. He was conducting a drug store in Sparta.

$57,357 Increase in Tift County Returns

Tax Receiver Fletcher Finds 6,000 Acres of Land Not on the Books.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 9.—Tift County tax returns for the present year show an increase of $57,357 over the returns of last year. Figures were compiled by Tax Receiver George W. Fletcher. Three districts, Chula, Omega and Eldorado, show increases, while five, Tifton, Tyty, Brookfield, Brighton and Dosia, show a decrease.

An interesting fact concerning the returns was that nearly 6,000 acres of unreturned land were found by the tax receiver and placed upon the books. This in part accounts for the increase in returns. The increase in 1912 was $15,945.

SAVANNAH WIVES SUE BROTHERS FOR DIVORCE

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Alleging cruel treatment and statutory causes, Mrs. Frances Zipperer has filed suit for divorce against Robert Zipperer in the Superior Court of Chatham County. This is the second divorce petition filed by a Mrs. Zipperer in two weeks. Mrs. Aline Zipperer, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Frances Zipperer, filed the other.

Wants Civil Service For Public Works

Triennial Shake-up in Augusta Discourages Efficient Men, Says Commissioner.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Nisbet Wingfield, Commissioner of Public Works at Augusta, has come out in favor of the civil service plan for the employees of the public works department.

Now that the policemen and firemen are to be removed from politics, Mr. Wingfield thinks that the city should go a step further and throw the management of protection over efficient employees of the waterworks and other departments.

The public works department receives a shake-up triennially, just as every other department in the city, for a new Mayor gets in every three years and off go the heads of those who happened to vote against him.

Mr. Wingfield argues that Augusta wants just as competent men to look after the water supply as to patrol her streets or fight her fires.

Albany Bankers Ask Part of $50,000,000

Want Government Money to Aid in Moving Southwest Georgia Cotton Crop.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—That the Albany banks should receive a portion of the $50,000,000 Government money that is to be placed for the marketing of cotton in the South is the general feeling among Albany bankers. Two banks here are United States depositories and are called upon to furnish money for the marketing of cotton several weeks earlier than the banks in Macon, Atlanta and Savannah.

J. S. Davis, vice president of the Citizens First National Bank, has requested L. P. Hillyer, president of the Georgia Bankers' Association, to make a personal appeal to the proper authorities in Washington for a portion of this money to be used in Southwest Georgia.

CONFESSES TO SLAYING WHEN REFUSED PARDON

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Frank Collier, a negro whose application for pardon was refused by the Prison Commission in Atlanta, to-day broke down and made a complete confession of his responsibility in the murder of Lewis Robinson, another negro, pleading only that Robinson was attempting to cut him with a knife. Collier has heretofore maintained innocence.

AUGUSTA'S FAIR THIS FALL TO BE GREATER SHOW

Poultry and Live Stock Exhibits Will Again Be Feature of Annual Exposition.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Secretary Frank E. Beane, of the Georgia-Carolina Fair Association, announces that the fall fair at Augusta will be undertaken this year on a far more extensive scale than ever before. The fair will begin November 5 and continue through November 15.

It is expected that at least six of the farmers' clubs of the Savannah River Valley will have exhibits. Those announcing their intention of exhibiting are the Richmond County Agricultural Society, the Beech Island Club, the Schultz Hill Club, the Meriwether Club, the Clark's Hill Agricultural Club, the Aiken Club, and there will also be others. The clubs that win are awarded cash prizes of such amounts as to make competing worth while, and there is always lively competition.

The poultry exhibit by the Augusta Poultry Association is expected to be a big feature, as usual, and more than 2,000 birds are to be on exhibition. From all parts of this section and from a distance birds will be sent here for display, and handsome prizes are given the winners.

The live stock feature, which was such a big attraction at the last fair, will again be splendid. Last year was the first year that a great deal of attention was paid to the live stock display, and it improved the fair fully 50 per cent.

There will be cows, horses, hogs, goats and sheep of the best quality here.

There will be a better midway than ever before and Secretary Beane has already booked a great number of high class shows. He says that this year the Midway will be located between the main fair building and the live stock building, which is far more convenient than the arrangement in the past. The brass band this year is to be a splendid one. It is a band which was organized just prior to the Jamestown Exposition, and it played there and has played every week since that time.

Augusta W. C. T. U. Is On Trail of Saloons

Police Committee of City Council Refuses to Discuss Report It Has Prepared.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Secrecy is the word with regard to the action of the police commitee here yesterday on the matter of enforcing the prohibition law. The City Council referred the matter of closing the saloons to the police committee. This committee had a meeting and the members refuse to discuss their report, although they admit having prepared one.

A few weeks ago Mrs. Mary Harris Armor and a large number of members of the Augusta W. C. T. U. appeared before the council and pleaded for the closing of the saloons. Nothing was done at this meeting and at a meeting held Monday night council was asked what it would do about the matter. A letter was read at that time from Mrs. A. M. Verdery, president of the local W. C. T. U., asking council to state in plain terms what action it would take. The matter was referred to the police committee.

Council has granted licenses to nearly 100 saloons at $500 each, and although there was no expressed agreement, still it was tacitly understood that they were to be allowed to sell liquor without molestation.

New Phone Concern In Central Georgia

Company Will Operate Exchanges in Seven Towns and Later Extend to Macon.

MACON, Aug. 9.—A new Middle Georgia telephone company, which proposes to operate in many of the towns in this section, as well as in Macon, has been organized here, with a paid-in capital of $200,000. J. A. Faucett, of Macon, is president; M. C. Arnold, of Danville, vice president, and H. M. Fleetwood, of Macon, secretary and treasurer.

The company will operate the exchanges in Dublin, Jeffersonville, Dudley, Irwinton, McIntyre, Toomsboro and Cary. Later the service will be extended to Macon, where it is proposed to make a cut of 50 per cent in the prevailing rates.

GIVES UP $1,200 OFFICE TO SEEK ONE PAYING $300

MACON, Aug. 9.—The most interesting political development of recent months in Macon is the announcement that W. H. Fetner, chairman of the Water Board, at a salary of $1,200, will resign that office and run for Council on Bridges Smith's ticket. Aldermen receive $300 per year.

Mr. Fetner was formerly in Council, but resigned two and a half years ago to run for the Water Board, to which he was elected, leading nine candidates.

It is said that it is the plan of the Administration party to run Mr. Fetner for Mayor two years hence, and for that reason his presence in Council was deemed desirable, so that he will stay more conspicuously in the public eye.

RANCOR OF WAR BASIS OF SUIT JUST DECIDED

Heirs of Seaborn Jones Win Long Fight for Large Tract of Land in Jenkins County.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—By a recent decision of the Supreme Court of Georgia the Chew family, prominent people of Eastern Georgia, have recovered 1,200 acres of rich farming land left by their grandfather, the late Seaborn A. Jones, and worth approximately $40,000. The land is located in Jenkins County, near Millen.

Before the Civil War Seaborn A. Jones was one of the wealthiest in this section and was a foremost citizen of Burke County and Waynesboro. Jones married a Northern woman and from this union there were two boys and two girls. When he made his will shortly after the Civil War his heart was heavy and his hatred of the North was intense because of the defeat of the Southern arms.

Forbids Northern Residence.

He stipulated that if his wife should carry his children into the North to live, or if they remained on a visit above Mason and Dixon's line for more than three months at a time, the mother should no longer be guardian for the children.

One of the daughters, Mary, was wooed and won by William H. Chew. The property of the late Seaborn A. Jones was divided equally among his four children and Mrs. Chew decided that she wanted her husband as her trustee instead of the trustee her father had provided under the will.

Chew received an order from the court to be trustee for his wife. To the Chews were born three children, Benjamin A., Hull S. and Ruth.

The property had been left by Seaborn Jones to certain trustees for his daughters, which they were to hold in trust for their use during their lives and at their deaths to their children in fee simple.

William H. Chew sold the land to a Baltimore concern that in turn sold it to W. O. Wadley and thus it remained until the death of Mrs. Mary Jones Chew in 1906, when action was begun by her children to recover the land which their grandfather had intended for them to have.

Sale Declared Illegal.

The suit has been in the courts ever since. It was won by the Chew heirs in the Superior Court of Jenkins County and has been won in the Supreme Court.

Wadley simply purchased land from William H. Chew which Chew had no right to sell and the sale was declared to be illegal despite the fact that Judge Gibson, in chambers at Augusta in March, 1873, passed an order authorizing the sale.

The courts have held that William H. Chew has the right to sell only a life interest in the estate owned by his wife and he was not entitled to sell the realty because it was left to the mother in trust to be held for her children and to be awarded to them in fee simple.

The case created much interest in this section. Pierce Brothers, W. K. Miller and Judge Horace M. Holder represented the Chew heirs, and Judge A. L. Miller, of Macon, represented Wadley.

A basement and a tower of four stories will make up the additional five stories.

The architects are G. Lloyd Preacher, of this city, and W. L. Stoddard of New York. The building is to be ready for occupancy by October 1, 1914.

Augusta's Police To Be Governed By Civil Service

Many Burglaries and Factional Fighting Cause Change in Method of Administration.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Beginning the first of next January the policemen and firemen of Augusta will be under the control of a civil service board.

Just now the department is under fire because of the many burglaries in the city and also because of the refusal of the head of the department to enforce the prohibition law. The civil service board will take the place of the present commission. All of the present members of the force will be retained without examination, but there will be an examination in case of promotion to sergeant's or lieutenant's places.

Under the civil service plan the men are prohibited from taking an active part in politics. It is specifically stated in the act, however, that no policeman or fireman shall be appointed, reduced or removed because of his political beliefs.

City Council on the first Monday in September next will choose a board of civil service commissioners, each to have a term of five years. There will be five members of the board.

The examination will be purely on a competitive basis, the applicants shall be between 21 and 36 years of age and the competitors shall be admitted to the department in the order of their standing in the examinations.

Richmond County to Quit Building Roads

Policy Henceforth Will Be to Keep Highways Already Constructed in Better Shape.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Richmond County is to quit building roads. This was decided at a meeting of the board of commissioners last week. This county now has hundreds of miles of the finest roads in Georgia and there are many more miles of roads built by the county that are not so good.

The policy of the commissioners of roads and revenues in the future will be to have the roads already built better cared for and stop building more.

Roads go out of Augusta into practically every section of the county except one, down the Savannah River valley into the rich alluvial lands of the hay farmers.

Middlebrooks, the county farm demonstrator, and the Bibb County Agricultural Society. Moore's phenomenal success with alfalfa has encouraged the farmers in this section to take an interest in the crop.

MACON GREETS JUNIOR ORDER OF MECHANICS

Benjamin J. Symons of Savanna Will Probably Be Chosen to Head the Council.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Large delegations from all councils of the Junior Order United American Mechanics in Georgia will attend the State convention of the order to be held in Macon Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at which convention Benjamin J. Symons, of Savannah, will be elected State councilor.

Symons will succeed Judge Walter W. Shappard, the present State councilor, who is also a member of one of the Savannah councils. That two Savannah members of the order should successively hold the highest office in the order in the State is thought to be a high compliment to the personnel of the Savannah organization.

The convention, which is held every two years, will convene in Odd Fellows' Hall.

At this convention it is thought that John Stofer, of Savannah, will be indorsed for the position of national councilor. At the last national convention, which was held in June at Fabyans, N. H., Stofer was elected national council warden, and his friends think he is eminently qualified to fill the higher office.

At present the officers of the State council are Judge Walter W. Shappard, of Claxton and Savannah, State councilor; Benjamin S. Symons, of Savannah, State vice councilor; T. D. Ridley, of Macon, junior past State councilor; J. E. Lovelace, of Atlanta, State secretary; O. H. Puckett, of Atlanta, State treasurer; A. B. Coogler, of Riverside, State conductor; John W. PELLAGRA TO BE MAIN THEME AT DOCTORS' MEET

Eighth District Physicians Will Hold an Interesting Session at Elberton.

ELBERTON, Aug. 9.—Pellagra will be a special theme of a series of papers to be read by some of the leading physicians of this section when the Eighth District Medical Association holds its annual meeting in Elberton August 20.

Over several years past the observations and notes of these experts have run, and the papers are, therefore, of greater interest than any other—with the men who made the observations giving their personal experiences with cases in which the patients are well known to many of the members of the association.

Elberton is planning for the entertainment of the visitors and promises splendid social features. There will be practically the entire Clarke County Medical Society in attendance.

The officers of the association of the district are: Dr. W. T. Davis, of Covington, president; Dr. C. C. King, of White Plains, vice president; Dr. Edward M. Coleman, of Athens, secretary and treasurer; and Dr. I. H. Goss, of Athens, district counselor of the State Medical Association.

The memorial was erected several months ago with funds raised by the children of the Confederacy. Colonel Sanders was one of the most beloved men in this entire section.

The life-size statue, in sitting position, was made in Italy and has just arrived. The monument is one of the most beautiful in the State, with marble columns and fountains. Six little grandchildren of Colonel Sanders will likely lift the veil.

White Way Proposed On Brunswick Street

Landowners and Merchants to Form Stock Company and Install Lighting System.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 9.—The efforts made the past week to put in a white way along Newcastle street no doubt will culminate in this improvement being made in the near future.

It is the intention of those working for the white way to form a stock company composed of the landowners and merchants along the street, who will be called upon to take an amount of stock on the basis of the frontage of their buildings. The movement has met with considerable encouragement, and it is now considered a certainty that the principal business street of the city will take on this improvement in the next two months.

Cement foundations will be built under the buildings at the Turtle River docks, and other improvements will be made on the other docks of the company in the city.

It is the purpose of the company to rebuild its present facilities and put them in the best of condition so as to be able to handle the increased traffic which will come through Brunswick owing to the changes in the naval stores business.

Pleasure Tours Ends With News of Death

Mother of Dublin Lad Killed by Lightning With Gay Party in New York.

DUBLIN, Aug. 9.—Mrs. H. M. Stanley, mother of John Stanley, the 13-year-old son of the State Commissioner of Commerce and Labor, who was killed by lightning at Dublin Thursday, was in New York with her daughter at the time the accident occurred. Mrs. Stanley and daughter were members of a party organized by the Rev. L. J. Ballard, pastor of the Albany Methodist Church, to take an extensive pleasure trip.

The party left the first of the month. Besides Mrs. Ballard, it was composed of the following: Mrs. Ballard, Miss Ray Ballard, Master Lee Ballard and Miss Catharine Muse, of this city; Mrs. J. E. Smith and daughter, of Dublin, who joined the party at Macon, and Mrs. H. M. Stanley and daughter, of Decatur, who joined them at Atlanta.

The party went to New York by way of Chattanooga, Cincinnati, Detroit, Buffalo, Niagara Falls and Montreal, Canada.

The party was at the Marlborough Hotel, New York, when the pleasures were sadly broken into by the news of Mrs. Stanley's little boy's sudden death at Dublin. The party had planned to visit Philadelphia, going thence to Washington and then down the Potomac to Norfolk and home by rail, arriving home about August 20.

Killing of Bachelor Mystifies Officers

Despite Strong Alibi, Tom Bullard Is Held for Death of Farmer Mack Spain.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Whether or not Mack Spain, the eccentrac bachelor farmer of Mexico, a small place west of Waycross, was really murdered and robbed or committed suicide in a fit of despondency, is a question that has arisen in view of the alibi offered by Tom Bullard at the preliminary hearing given him this week, but in spite of which he was bound over to the fall term of Superior Court.

Bullard asked a friend to kill Spain and get all his money, but claims the statebent was made merely as a joke. Spain's body was found in a small pond 2 miles from his home three weeks after his disappearance. Bullard himself found the body, which fact argued in his favor, although the testimony of witnesses was to the effect that no one could have seen the body in the pond without having had previous knowledge of its whereabouts.

A careful search has so far failed to find any of the money the farmer had with him and at his home.

The other was found within a mile of Rock Church. It was of 40-gallon capacity.

According to the information received by Mr. Camp, the first still belonged to Mitchell Rhodes and the second to S. P. West. He will have warrants issued for the arrest of these two.

He declares that the Georgia sunlight brings out with remarkable clearness and exactness every detail of the motion pictures. Heretofore most of the moving picture studios have been located in California and in New York. Mr. Seay, who is a native of Rome, is now confident that Georgia is the best place for the work in which he is engaged.

Too Much Money to Spend in Waycross

City's Income More Than Pays All Expenses—Tax Rate To Be Cut Down.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—With a $780 appropriation for twelve months, the committee on parks and cemeteries of Waycross City Council expended only $1.30, according to the financial statement for the first six months of the year just issued.

Practically every department of the city is keeping within its budget, and will end the year with a balance to its credit. The engineering department, with $14,434 available, has spent only $6,011.96. Out of an appropriation of $10,280 the fire department has spent but $3,855.38.

The revised estimate of income places the total for 1913 at $156,442.43. The estimate when the year's appropriations were made was $151,090. The expected increase will therefore leave the city a neat balance to start 1914 with.

In addition to these expenditures the city is spending $100,000 in permanent improvements, this money coming from a bond issue voted last year.

Griffin Rector Is Ptomaine Victim

Rev. Clayton Earle Wheat Dangerously Ill From Food Eaten in Atlanta Restaurant.

GRIFFIN, GA., Aug. 9.—Sorrow prevails here this afternoon over the sudden illness of the Rev. Clayton Earle Wheat, rector of St. George Episcopal Church, who is to-day seriously ill with ptomaine poisoning contracted from food eaten in an Atlanta restaurant yesterday afternoon.

The Rev. Mr. Wheat is greatly beloved in Griffin and his illness is all the more distressing because of his recent decision to leave here for a parish in Hingham, Mass. Hundreds of citizens of Griffin in a written request petitioned him to recall his decision and remain here.

It was in preparation for his departure that he went to Atlanta yesterday with his mother, Mrs. Cornette Wheat, to arrange some important business affairs and while there ate the food that resulted in his poisoning. At this time both of them are under the immediate care of physicians and nurses and grave fears are felt for them.

$5,498 Suit Brought For Rescuing Dredge

Owners of Tug Columbia Dragged the Maryland Out of Beaufort Harbor.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Claiming $5,498.50 damages and salvage, a libel has been filed in the United States Court by R. S. Salas and F. H. Meader against the dredge Maryland.

Salas, as chief owner and president of the Standard Fuel and Supply Company, and Meader, as master of the tugboat Columbia, claim this sum of money for time, labor and material expended by the tug in hauling the dredge in and out of the harbor at Beaufort, S. C., and claim $3,500 of this amount for the work of salvage or rescue done by the tug.

The dredge, which is said in the libel to be worth $50,000, was towed out of New York harbor on May 27 last by the tug under contract between the Home Dredging Company and the Standard Fuel and Supply Company, the latter being the owners of the tug. The contract price for taking the dredge from New York to Savannah was $1,500.

The dredge Maryland is now in the Savannah River. The libel will be tried at the coming term of the United States Court.

The libel recites a full account of the rescue of the dredge on her way down the coast.

SENTENCE OF YEAR FOR CONVICTED GUN TOTERS

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Judge John C. McDonald has shown that he proposes to stick to the twelve-month sentence for persons found guilty of carrying concealed weapons. Clifford Johnson, a negro, is the latest to find that it means a year's job with the county chaingang to carry a gun. Hardly a case of this kind has been disposed of in City Court without the twelve-month sentence being imposed, and the gun-toting habit is said to be declining rapidly as a result.

WAYCROSS PAVING LAWS HIT ATLANTIC COAST LINE

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Because its tracks pierce the heart of Waycross and are paralleled in almost every instance by some of the main streets, the Atlantic Coast Line is being put to heavy expense by the sidewalk and street paving campaign. The latest saving ordinance covering Plant avenue from Butler street to the city limits, will cause the Coast Line to pay a third of the cost for the entire distance, the avenue running along the road's right of way. The other portion of Plant that is paved is of brick and the Coast Line paid a third of that.

Athens Is Quiet on Test Farm Removal

People Would Like to Have Experiment Station, but Are Not Worrying About It.

Soule, of the Agricultural College, is in Niagara Falls for his summer vacation, Professor DeLoach, the new head of the Experiment Station, has gone to Griffin to take up his new work, while Chancellor Barrow announced several months ago that he would not bother, or at least make no move, to have the station moved to Athens.

Of course Athens would like to see the Experiment Station moved here in connection with the State College of Agriculture and most people believe it would be better so to do, but no effort will be made to bring the station here.

'SHAKING ROCK' ONE OF STATE'S UNIQUE FREAKS

Slight Wind Makes Huge Bowlder in Oglethorpe County Swing Gently as Baby's Crib.

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 9.—One of the natural curiosities of Georgia is to be found in Oglethorpe County half a mile from the courthouse in Lexington. Hundreds have visited Lexington for the sole purpose of seeing the "shaking rock."

In the immediate vicinity of the rock there are many huge granite bowlders. From points near by a number of pieces of granite have been obtained for monuments and buildings. The base to a large shaft erected at Chattanooga was hauled from the quarry here by a special train. Close to "shaking rock" the grounds are beautiful for picnics and dinner parties, and many from Lexington, Athens and other places take advantage of the grounds for occasions of this nature.

"Shaking rock" weighs about twenty tons. It is poised on a triangular base upon another large rock. With several persons seated upon its summit, the mammoth piece of stone can be moved by a slight push. A pressure of this sort sets it moving back and forth a distance of two or three inches.

For 50 years it has been thus standing, and until a few years ago, when the point at the base had become worn, the rock would move backward and forward twice this distance. A wind a little stronger than the ordinary summer zephyr blowing upon the rock from a certain angle would set it to rocking.

The rock is upon the property of Dr. W. H. Reynolds, on the estate formerly owned by Governor George R. Gilmer. The people of Lexington take a pride in showing the peculiar freak of nature.

McHatton, professor of horticulture of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, is secretary, and J. B. Wright, of Cairo, is the treasurer.

Ashworth, who has only one leg, requested permission to go into another room and change his clothes, which the bailiff granted. But instead of stopping, he went on through the room and over a high fence in the rear of his yard, making good his escape.

WIFE QUITTER NOW CHARGED WITH BIGAMY

Search Is Made for Harry Smith, Accused of Having Family in Cincinnati, Ohio.

DURHAM, N. C., Aug. 9.—One of the greatest sensations that ever was known in this city is now drawing to a close, as Harry A. Smith, is charged wife abandonment, is now confronted with a charge of bigamy.

Several days ago Smith was arrested in Rome, Ga., charged with abandoning his wife, formerly Miss Rosalind Wright, who is a member of a prominent family of this city. He was brought back to the city to be tried, and when the time for the case to be completed came a peaceful settlement was made by the parties concerned. Smith promised to take care of his wife and left this city with her for Richmond, Va.

Hardly had the couple left Durham before a message was received here from Cincinnati stating that Smith, up until a few weeks past, had been an employee of a firm there.

After being discharged he left Cincinnati, supposedly in search of another position.

A short while afterward he reached this city and became acquainted with Miss Rosalind Wright. A quiet marriage followed and the couple went on an extended honeymoon, the bride's money being used.

The message from Cincinnati states that Smith has a wife living there and a 9-month-old boy named Banard. Another message unsigned was received by the Chief of Police of Durham, stating that Smith had made a recent visit to Atlanta, and that while there he became engaged to a young woman. No names were were given in the message.

A search is now being made for Smith, who is supposed to be in Richmond, Va., with his Durham wife. The girl's friends here are making every effort to locate the couple.

Griffin Is Fighting To Hold to Station

Delegations Are Sent to Capital to Protest Against Removal to South Georgia.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 9.—The citizens of Griffin and this section have not been unaware of the efforts to take from them the State Experiment Station as evidence of their alertness during the present disturbance over the effort to move it to South Georgia.

Griffin sent from day to day as many as twenty men to Atlanta to appear before the legislative committees and present the claim of Griffin in the matter. The citizens of this county years ago generously gave to the State the land to establish the station and it would manifestly be unjust and unfair now to take the station from Griffin.

It may be taken for granted that Griffin and Spalding County citizens are ready for a good stiff fight over the matter before ever consent will be gained for the station to be moved.

LIND CALLS ADMIRAL IN CONFERENCE AT VERA CRUZ

Ambassador Sends Mysterious Message to Commander of Fleet for Meeting Immediately on His Arrival at the Mexican Port.

Huerta Maintains Iron-Hand Attitude in Spite of International Menace From Revolutionary Armies and Threatened Coercion.

Special Cable to The American.

VERA CRUZ, MEX., Aug. 9.—John E. Lind, special envoy to Mexico, arrived here at 1 o'clock this afternoon on the battleship New Hampshire. He was at once transferred to the battleship Louisiana.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 9.—Captain Snowden, of the battleship New Hampshire, at the direction of John Lind, Special Ambassador from President Wilson to Mexico, to-day sent the following wireless to Admiral Fletcher, commander of the flotilla of United States warships in the harbor here:

"Governor Lind wishes to see the United States Consul and Admiral Fletcher immediately upon his arrival at Vera Cruz Saturday. Governor Lind will not go to Mexico City until Sunday."

Sensational rumors were circulated as to the cause for the conference. The New Hampshire will probably arrive this evening.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Maintaining his iron hand attitude in spite of international menace from revolutionary armies and threatened coercion, Provisional President Huerta to-day continued his diplomatic battle with the United States by giving orders to draft another note of protest against the coming of Special Ambassador Lind, unless the United States recognizes Mexico or halts Mr. Lind before he arrives in this city.

Situation Is Tense.

A tense situation exists here pending the arrival of Mr. Lind, who has been retarded by the State Department at Washington.

Huerta's hope that defiance of the United States might break down the revolutionary spirit in the north seems to have been futile, according to a message from General Venustiano Carranza, leader of the rebels.

This was a reply to overtures to Carranza to join his forces to the regular army in the event of a "foreign invasion." However, Huerta has gained fresh followers among the radical element by his defiance of President Wilson. Supporters of the provisional president charge that the United States is preparing to act as it did in Cuba.

Sensational reports were current today relative to the diplomatic mission of General Felix Diaz to Tokio. Ostensibly Diaz is going to thank the Japanese Government for its representation at the Mexican centennial, but the belief is growing that Japan has consented to make a treaty with Mexico, and that Diaz is really a special ambassador. This treaty, it is reported, has to do with a league of common interests and not with commercial right. It follows the movement of the Government to invite 50,000 Japanese emigrants here to colonize the state of Morelos, which has been nearly depopulated by the rebellion.

Insists on Recognition.

Whether Huerta has any more cards to play in his diplomatic fight against outside interference with Mexican affairs is a question known only to the provisional President and his closest advisers. Huerta insists on "recognition and no parley," but the Government is not in condition to enforce his threat by war.

The national treasury is nearly depleted, and the army material of the country has been thinned to a minimum by three years of revolution.

By diplomacy, however, he might still be able, by playing upon the Latin-American republics' fear of annexation and upon the hostility of foreign powers to the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine, to force the United States into a compromising position.

Even Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy here, is not acquainted with the details of Mr. Lind's mission. He has so informed the Mexican Foreign Minister.

Sulzer Used Funds Of Campaign to Play Market, Is Charge

Chairman Frawley, of Investigating Committee, Says This Is Enough to Warrant Impeachment.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Governor William Sulzer, of New York, was nearly $50,000 in debt as the result of stock market speculations at the time of his nomination, and used contributions to his campaign fund to make additional purchases of stocks while this debt was hanging over him, according to testimony presented to the Frawley committee of the Legislature.

The evidence is sufficient to warrant proceedings to impeach the Governor for violation of the corrupt practices act, Chairman Frawley declares. A decision as to the committee's recommendation is expected by Monday.

The Governor, according to the evidence, had dealings with three different stock exchange firms and was saved from being sold out by one firm by L. N. Josephthal, a Wall Street banker, and a member of the Governor's staff as naval reserve aide. Josephthal, it was brought out, paid a debit balance of $26,739 still standing against the account on July 15 last. This was after the Governor had received repeated calls for more margin.

The Governor's transactions with other firms were for cash, and it was in connection with one of these that Governor Sulzer, according to the evidence, used campaign contributions.

Callie Hoke Smith Capital Debutante

Make-up of First Democratic "Bud Bouquet" Puzzles Washington's Younger Set.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The make-up of Washington first Democratic debutante bouquet is the question that is agitating the younger set. It is confidently expected that Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, daughter of the Speaker, will be one of the buds, and Miss Frances Moore, the daughter of Clarence R Moore, one of the Titanic heroes, another.

Resident society will furnish two attractive debutantes, who are not only socially prominent, but from Democratic families as well. They are Miss Margaret Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Britton and Miss Beatrice Clover, the youngest daughter of Rear Admiral Clover.

A debutante from the Congressional set will be Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia. Other Congressional buds are the Misses Weaver, Church and Duval.

Manuel Pawns His Father's Decorations

Former King of Portugal Unable to Struggle Along on Income of $100,000 a Year.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Despite his allowance of $50,000 a year from King George and at least that sum from private sources, it is learned that former King Manuel, of Portugal, has been forced to pawn the decorations once belonging to his father. One of these decorations, a diamond cross with a large sapphire in the center, is still in the hands of a pawnbroker near Richmond, where Manuel is now staying with his mother, Queen Amelie.

The fortunes of the dethroned monarch will be recouped by his approaching marriage. It is known that he is very extravagant and his mother is none too practical.

The German Emperor has settled the puzzling question of how to treat the exiled monarch's marriage to a German princess. He will allow Prince Eitel Frederick to attend as a special guest, but not as his personal representative.

GIVES OWN LIFE TO SAVE THOSE ABOARD BOAT

Divers Exploring Wreck of Steamboat Peters Lee Find Modern Jim Bludsoe in Hold.

ALL THE PASSENGERS ESCAPE

Engineer Kept Craft's Nose Stuck in Mud Until All Save He Were Safe on Shore.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 9.—Divers who explored the steamboat Peters Lee on the bottom of the Mississippi River at Lake Providence, La., to-day reported finding the body of Engineer Frank O'Neil, his hand holding the engine throttle.

He died there when the boat sank last night, having stayed at his post and held the boat's nose against the shore until the last of the 50 passengers, most of them women, were helped ashore.

O'Neil's act is practically a realization of the martyrdom of Jim Bludsoe, famed in the poem as the steamboat engineer who held her nose to the bank till all were saved, then was burned to death at his post.

A dance was on when the Peters Lee struck a sunken coal barge. A hole was torn in her side. The captain ordered the pilot to steer for the shore. The boat struck the mud, and officers and crew began taking off the passengers.

Frank O'Neil in the engine room kept the stern wheel churning while the water poured into the hold.

A negro shouted through the engine room door that the boat was sinking.

"I know it!" shouted O'Neil. "You fellows get on up front where you can get off! I'll hold her nose against the shore!"

The last passenger was safely landed when the boat sank in 40 feet of water.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Sir Oliver Lodge, whose researches into the unknown world made him famous, will assert at the meeting of the British Association on September 10 a belief in "an ultimate continuity of existence before and after death as essential to science."

Trainload of Winsome Stenographers and Milliners Have to Tramp Through Stegomyia Belt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"All those in favor of slit skirts, please stand up."

Millions of full grown mosquitoes and three or four little fellers were rushing wildly out of their apartment houses on he Flushing Meadows, about 7 o'clock last night, and took part in the most rollicking barbacue ever held in the East.

Right in the middle of the salt grass waste were five cars of a Long Island Railroad train, stalled. The lights were out, men were running up and down shouting orders and Flushing was two miles away. After the train had stood for a few minutes, out of the passenger cars poured the choicest morsels of humanity that Mr. and Mrs. Culex Pungens and the little Pungenses ever saw. There were stenographers, typewriters, cashiers, millinery attaches and buxom matrons. Slit skirts were numerous.

In an endless procession the five hundred and more suburbanites trailed over the ties toward Flushing. There is some style in the mosquito belt and every member of the family seemed to know at once which of the passengers was dressed a la mode. The squeals and slaps of the fair ones as they tried to stop the onslaught sounded like a tattoo.

The procession lasted for more than two hours and when the last stenographer reached home a unanimous vote was taken declaring the mosquito a pest. Of course, there were some men along, but what self-respecting mosquito would bother with them at such a time?

ADMITS HE'S DECENT IN ANSWERING MARRIAGE AD

YONKERS, Aug. 9.—Reginald P. Shennan, editor of The Rye Courier, already has received one reply to the advertisement inserted in his paper by a "gentlewoman with large tract of land not far from Port Chester," who is seeking "an unselfish, decent, self-supporting man for a husband."

He turned the letter over to the advertiser, whose identity is being guarded carefully. The letter bore a Brooklyn postmark.

AUTOS EMPTY CHURCHES, SAY COUNTRY PREACHERS

MANHATAN, KANS., Aug. 9.—The dwindling of the congregations of country churches, due to the new era of automobiles, which makes it easy for the rural residents to attend services in nearby towns and cities, will be discussed at the Conference of Rural Leaders, July 21 to 25, at the Kansas Agricultural College. Members of the organization declare that Kansas now has about 1,200 abandoned churches in the farming districts.

Jack London Puts Joke on His Appendix

Novelist Tells the Latest on Former Part of Himself and What's Left.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Here is the latest joke Jack London, the famous author, is telling on himself:

London was operated on recently for appendicitis. After the ordeal the surgeon held up the severed appendix in his fingers for the patient to see. The author looked at it thoughtfully then grinned and said:

"It was a case of all alone in London, wasn't it, doc?"

Famous Case to Solve Mystery of Slaying of Mary Phagan Enters Its Third Week With Public Opinion Constantly Shifting.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The second week of the trial of Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan in the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26, came to a close Saturday noon.

The State's case has been entirely made up in its primary aspects, and the de nse has gone into its story of the great crime sufficiently to make clear both its theory and probable line of pleading.

The public, as the case has progressed, has been swayed this way and that, and to-day the remarkable mystery of Mary Phagan's untimely and tragic end remains, in hundreds of minds, quite as much of a mystery as ever.

The Battle Is a See-Saw.

The State has had its good days and its bad days, and the defense has met the same fate. At times things have seemed dismally dark and gloomy for Frank, while at other times the clouds apparently have lifted from about him decidedly.

This much has been made clear:

Either Leo Frank will be shown to be responsible for the death of Mary Phagan, or Jim Conley will.

The one is the heart and soul of the State's contention, and the other is the heart and soul of the defense's contention.

Frank is battling not only to clear himself but to convict Conley.

Conley is battling not only to clear himself, but to convict Frank.

The only difference is that Conley, although not yet indicted, expects to be convicted as an accessory after the fact of the murder, in any event, whereas Frank, already indicted, expects to come absolutely clear and free of all possible connection with the crime.

The one has a heretofore good name to restore in all of its unblemished integrity, the other has merely his present reputation for criminal inclination to preserve against sinister enlargement.

The issue has been sharply and indelibly drawn—it is either Leo Frank's life for Mary Phagan's, or it is Jim Conley's.

The State has shown, or has endeavored to show the following things:

THAT Frank, shortly after noon on April 26, and before five minutes past noon, lured Mary Phagan, for an immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory, and there, because she would not yield to his desires and demands, he knocked her down and immediately thereafter strangled her to death with a small cord, about one-eighth of an inch in thickness.

THAT after strangling her, Frank remained with her dead body until after a girl caller in his office had departed, when he tiptoed to the front of the floor whereupon the murder had been consummated, and secured the help of a negro sweeper, Jim Conley, employed about the place, to dispose of the body.

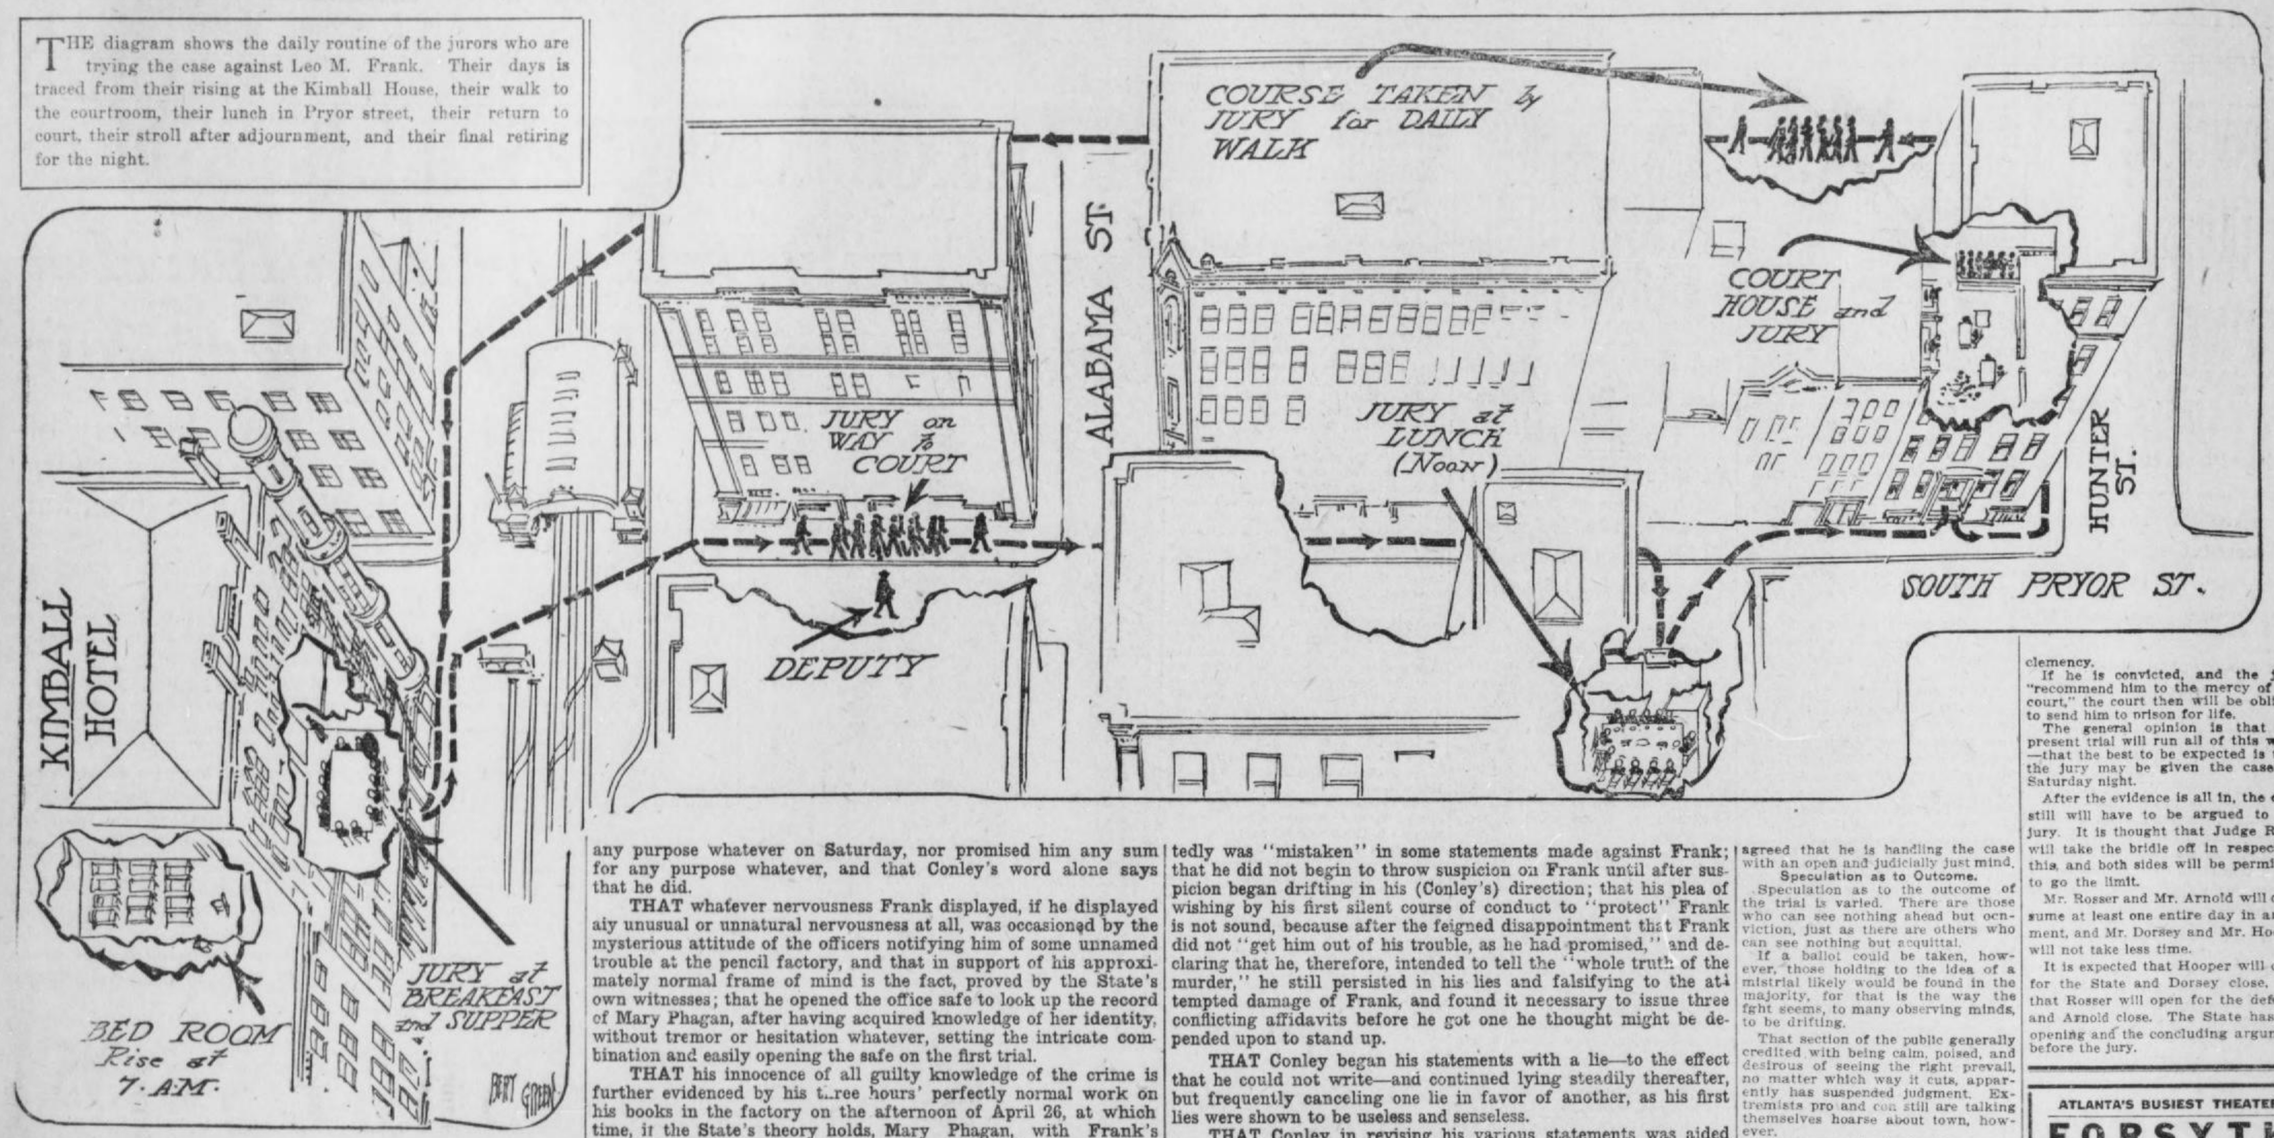
THAT Conley, under the direction of Frank, wrapped the dead body in a piece of heavy cloth, carried it to the elevator, and thence on the elevator to the basement, where it was placed in an obscure corner in the rear, later to be found by Newt Lee, a negro night watchman, generally held guiltless of direct connection with the crime itself.

THAT Frank, after hiding the body, with Conley's assistance, then induced Conley to write and place beside the dead girl certain illiterate notes fixing the crime, in so far as they might, upon some other person than either Frank or Conley, and that Frank for Conley's services, paid him the sum of $2.50, but not until he had first paid him $200, which was withdrawn under promise to restore that sum later.

THAT Frank had an understanding with Conley, whereby Conley was to return to the factory later in the afternoon on Saturday and burn the body in the basement furnace, but that Conley

FRANK'S CHARACTER IS NEW BATTLE GROUND

THE diagram shows the daily routine of the jurors who are trying the case against Leo M. Frank. Their days is traced from their rising at the Kimball House, their walk to the courtroom, their lunch in Pryor street, their return to court, their stroll after adjournment, and their final retiring for the night.



DEFENSE HAS TO CLEAR NAME OF TWO CHARGES

went to sleep in the afternoon and neglected to perform this service.

THAT Frank, called to the factory early in the morning of Sunday, April 27, displaying great nervousness, and while on his way to the factory without having been informed of the dead, girl's identity, declined, or at least failed and neglected, to look upon her features at the undertaker's, notwithstanding the fact that he later admitted her identity without having seen her dead.

THAT at the factory, at the place of the crime, his nervousness continued, and that next morning (Monday), when called to the police station for further questioning, he had secured counsel to defend him, notwithstanding the fact that he then had not been placed under arrest.

THAT after having been placed under arrest and indicted for murder, he persistently refused to meet his chief accuser, Jim Conley, face to face, or to discuss any features of the charges lodged against him.

THAT in addition to the crime of murder, as set forth in the indictment, Frank is a dissolute character, practicing the most depraved and perverted crimes with persons of loose morals, and that Jim Conley, on more than one occasion, acted as "lookout" for Frank on the first floor of the factory, while unspeakable and unmentionable things were being enacted above.

The State, in setting up the foregoing allegations, summoned as its principal and all-important witness, Jim Conley, who already made public affidavits to all of the charges set forth, except the one of perversion and the exact time of the crime charged.

Conley, after four or five changed statements theretofore made, set up in his final statement on the stand many other seemingly minor dtails not contained in any previous statement.

The foregoing is the State's case in completed form, except that it yel will have the right to produce witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's witnesses; the defense, in its turn, having the right to a further rebuttal of the State's rebuttal.

The defense has contended, or will contend:

THAT Conley's story is a tissue of frightful lies from start to finish, and that he himself really committed the crime charged against Frank, and that the defense will so demonstrate.

THAT Mary Phagan was not killed as early as 12:05 on the afternoon of April 26, but was, as a matter of fact, killed at least fifteen minutes later than that, if, as a matter of still further fact, she wa snot disabled hopelessly about that time, and actually killed even later.

THAT if she was not killed previous to 12:05, as set forth, by the State, that contention being uncompromisingly claimed by the State's own witnesses—Jim Conley and Monteen Stover—then Conley's story is impossible and absurd, and Monteen Stover's evidence entirely negligible.

THAT Frank did not lure Mary Phagan to the rear of the second floor, or to any other place, for any purpose whatever, and that she was only on the second floor sufficiently long to get her pay from the hands of Frank, and that she immediately thereafter left the second floor, going down to the first floor to meet her death at the hands of Conley.

THAT Frank never asked for or received the assistance of Jim Conley in disposing of the body of Mary Phagan, because he was in utter and entire ignorance of the murder until apprised of it Sunday morning.

THAT Frank had nothing whatever to do with the framing of the nates found beside the dead girl, and that in support of such a charge the State has only the word of Jim Conley, intensely interested in shifting the blame from his own guilty shoulders and on to the shoulders of Frank.

THAT Frank never paid Jim Conley any sum of money for any purpose whatever on Saturday, nor promised him any sum for any purpose whatever, and that Conley's word alone says that he did.

THAT whatever nervousness Frank displayed, if he displayed aiy unusual or unnatural nervousness at all, was occasioned by the mysterious attitude of the officers notifying him of some unnamed trouble at the pencil factory, and that in support of his approximately normal frame of mind is the fact, proved by the State's own witnesses; that he opened the office safe to look up the record of Mary Phagan, after having acquired knowledge of her identity, without tremor or hesitation whatever, setting the intricate combination and easily opening the safe on the first trial.

THAT his innocence of all guilty knowledge of the crime is further evidenced by his three hours' perfectly normal work on his books in the factory on the afternoon of April 26, at which time, if the State's theory holds, Mary Phagan, with Frank's knowledge, then was a corpse in the basement, dead at his murderous hands.

THAT Frank, instead of declining to look upon the face of the dead girl at the undertaker's while on his way to the factory Monday morning, did, as a matter of fact, look upon her face and recognized her.

THAT Frank had no counsel until after his retention at police headquarters had been publicly made known, and when he was notoriously under suspicion, and that even then counsel was sent to him by some outside friends, and did not come at his invitation paid off by Frank upstairs, hit her a violent blow upon her head, snatched her purse from her hand, and at once threw her body into the cellar by way of a nearby open space, for fear of someone coming into the building; that likely the blow first delivered was not sufficient to kill, and that her actual death was hastened, or may have been hastened later in the cellar below, by means of strangulation, there being always there an abundance of the very cord employed or supposed to have been employed in that act. or by his direction.

THAT Frank's refusal to meet Jim Conley, his lying accuser, was natural and proper in the circumstances, and that such a course was persisted in by the particular advice of his counsel; that Frank was under no moral or legal obligation to discuss his case with Conley, or with any other witness for the State.

THAT Frank, far from being a dissolute character, is a man of unblemished integrity, happily married; that he never has practiced depraved and perverted crimes, because such things would be and are entirely foreign to his nature; that he never has associatd with immoral persons anywhere, at any time; that neither Jim Conley nor any other person ever acted as "lookout" for him for any purpose whatsoever—and that every monstrous and untrue charge or suggestion of immorality and degeneracy rests absolutely and finally upon the unsupported word of Conley, and not otherwise.

THAT there has been no tenable motive assigned to Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan; that the girl was not sexually violated or in any manner lacerated; that Frank had only the most casual acquaintance with her, and that of a perfectly natural business sort, and that he could not have had, and did not have, any reason whatever for desiring her death.

THAT, in truth and reality, the motive prompting the murder of Mary Phagan was robbery upon the part of Conley, and that for the purpose of securing her pittance of money, contained in a mesh purse, he did murder her and concealed her body in the basement.

THAT, as a matter of fact, Mary Phagan reached the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26 about 12:12 or 12:15; that she came up the steps directly to Frank's office, and received her pay for the time due her, in amount $1.20; that she at once departed Frank's office, without comment of any sort, and that Frank never saw her alive thereafter; that going down the steps, with her silver mesh bag in her hand, she had to pass Jim Conley, recently aroused from a drunken doze; that in attempting to get from the foot of the stairs, where Conley was sitting, to the door, some 20 feet away, she had to traverse a gloomy walkway, more than ordinarily gloomy at the time because the day was a legal holiday and the doors were closed, but not locked; that in traversing this walkway her back was toward Conley; that Conley, without money and craving more liquor, saw the unprotected little girl with the enticing silver bag in her hand, and surmising that she had been

THAT after accomplishing his bloody deed Conley escaped by withdrawing the inside staple from the basement back door only a few feet away from the place where the dead girl subsequently was found; and that tracings of Conley during the afternoon of April 26 at various saloons about town show that he spent then an amount of money approximately that which Mary Phagan is supposed to have had in her purse at the time of her murder.

That of all her possessions the purse alone, notwithstanding exhaustive inquiry, never was accounted for until the last day Conley was on the stand, when he stated that Frank had had the purse in his possession just after the murder, and that he had concealed it in his safe. This allegation, the defense points out, is sustained, as are the other most damaging allegations, by Conley's unsupported word entirely.

THAT Conley, the State's main witness, is a notoriously dissolute character, by his own admission seven times a jailbird, many times a liar, even under oath and on the witness stand, and admittedly was "mistaken" in some statements made against Frank; that he did not begin to throw suspicion on Frank until after suspicion began drifting in his (Conley's) direction; that his plea of wishing by his first silent course of conduct to "protect" Frank is not sound, because after the feigned disappointment that Frank did not "get him out of his trouble, as he had promised," and declaring that he, therefore, intended to tell the "whole truth of the murder," he still persisted in his lies and falsifying to the attempted damage of Frank, and found it necessary to issue three conflicting affidavits before he got one he thought might be depended upon to stand up.

THAT Conley began his statements with a lie—to the effect that he could not write—and continued lying steadily thereafter, but frequently canceling one lie in favor of another, as his first lies were shown to be useless and senseless.

THAT Conley in revising his various statements was aided and abetted by various police officials, presumably anxious for the reward offered for the apprehension and conviction of Mary Phagan's murderer, and that these officers pointed out to Conley the discrepancies as they arose from time to time, and that without this aid Conley's story never could have been made to hold together even as well as it did; that notwithstanding this prejudicing aid, however, Conley's story still is impossible and absurd, and of no account whatever against Frank.

The foregoing, in general, is the theory of the defense, as already set up and as yet to be developed, and along that line it will fight its battle to the end.

The defense is heavily equipped with witnesses to sustain its every contention, and these will be offered, in their ordr, to brak down the contrary theory of the State, as hereinbefore outlined, and upon th relative strength of the two showings depends, of course, the verdict.

Of absorbing interest now is the seeming determination of the defense to put Leo Frank's character frankly and fearlessly in evidenec.

In a former article in The Sunday American several weeks ago I predicted that the defense would do this—and the then apparent determination of the defense along that line shows no symptoms of having been deviated fro min the slightest.

When Conley made his additional unanticipated attack on Frank's character from the witness stand, it was rather freely predicted about the streets that Frank never would, after that, agree to have his character put in evidence. Under the law, the State can not put the defendant's character in evidence—if it is put in at all, it must be put in by the defendant voluntarily. Once in, however, it may be riddled by the State, if the State is able to riddle it.

The determination, therefore, of the defense to put Frank's character in evidence is being accepted generally as indicating an unfaltering confidence upon the part of the defense that Frank may be able thereby to overcome the terrible and prejudicial charge of degeneracy, as well as the charge of murder, both resting so largely upon Conley, and Conley alone; and it also indicates a belief upon the part of the defense that the State already has done its worst in the matter of attacking Frank's character.

MUST REFUTE TWO CHARGES.

The fact that Frank is now engaged in refuting two charges instead of one makes his case double unique in Georgia, as it is contrary to the unbroken theory of the law heretofore.

In Georgia, the courts uniformly have held that a man can not be tried for more than one offense at one time—that is, that he can not be charged with murder, and in the same trial be called to account for another felonious crime.

The charge of degeneracy, however, got into the case without objection, and Frank's lawyers cross-examined the witness making it. The judge, therefore, although a motion was made afterward to strike out this evidence, ruled taht it was too late to expunge it, and that it should go in for what it was worth.

This ruling, while in a way more or less unprecedented, was, in the main, by the public seemingly approved, upon the idea that it was fairer to both the State and the defense that the horrible charge, having been made, be thrashed out.

Should Frank be convicted, it is practically certain that a new trial will be asked on this very point, and it is not at all improbable that Judge Roan will grant it, although this conjecture is purely and absolutely speculative, of course.

The defense has summoned some seventy character witnesses, among whom are more than two score femal employes of the National Pencil Factory, all of whom will swear, it is said, to the defendant's decent and gentlemanly conduct at all times in their presence and during their varied terms of service in the factory, running from one to five years.

INTENSE INTEREST HOLDS.

Besides these, a score or more of Atlanta's most prominent business and professional men have been cited to come to court and testify in behalf of Frank's good name.

Rarely before, if ever, has there been as intense interest in a murder trial as there unquestionably is in the Frank case.

The crowds attending the trial have been enormous, the officers finding it necessary every day to turn away hundreds of anxious would-be spectators.

Public sentiment has swung back and forth—to-day inclined to believe Frank may be innocent, to-morrow sternly the reverse.

The jury, sitting there in the courthouse, day after day, has been the subjective study of hundreds of real and near analytical minds—and the answer?

Every fellow answers for himself. The jury is imperturable, unreadable, almost seemingly indifferent at times, indeed—but always keenly keyed to intense interest, nevertheless!

One might as well undertake to read the riddle of the Sphnx as to read the riddle of the Frank case in the minds of the jury trying it. It looks as if it is a jury well above the average—and that is about the beginning and the end of an intelligent guess as to what it will do.

Judge Roan is as baffling as the rest of the case, too, when it comes to speculating upon what he may or may not think of it all.

He is rated one of the very best Superior Court judges in the State, unusually able, certainly fearless, and agreed to be utterly fair and impartial.

At times, his rulings have seemed to favor the defense, and at other times they have seemed to favor the State; but, withal, the public seems agreed that he is handling the case with an open and judicially just mind.

Speculation as to Outcome.

Speculation as to the outcome of the trial is varied. There are those who can see nothing ahead but conviction, just as there are others who can see nothing but acquittal.

If a ballot could be taken, however, those holding to the idea of a mistrial likely would be found in the majority, for that is the way the fight seems, to many observing minds, to be drifting.

That section of the public generally credited with being calm, poised, and desirous of seeing the right prevail, no matter which way it cuts, apparently has suspended judgment. Extremists pro and con still are talking themselves hoarse about town, however.

The progressing inclination among the people seems to be to let the jury settle it, and then to call that as near right as abstract justice and human ingenuity can make it.

In the event of an acquittal, the case ends. The State has no appeal. It must win on the first round, or it loses for all time.

The defense, on the other hand, if it loses, may move for a new trial, upon proper assignment of error in the first trial. The judge of original jurisdiction passes upon this motion—he may grant it or not, as his discretion directs.

The general policy of judges is to refuse motions for new trials, but it is not an unbroken policy, by any means.

If the new trial motion is denied, the case goes to a court of review—either the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals. If one error or several be found in the original rulings of the court below, the case will be remanded back for a new trial, the judgment thus having been reversed and set aside.

Then the case begins all over again, practically as if it never had been tried.

In the event of maters taking that course, Frank hardly could be tried again before next year, 1914, and perhaps not before spring.

Conley Indictment Likely.

If Frank is acquitted, there is hardly a doubt that Jim Conley will be promptly indicted for the murder of Mary Phagan, and brought to trial later.

In the event of Frank's final conviction, Conley will be indicted as an accessory after the fact. This would mean a sentence of not more than three years in the State penitentiary for him.

If Frank is convicted, he can be convicted only of murder—the jury will not be permitted, under the form of the indictment, to find him guilty of a lesser crime.

The judge will have no discretion in sentencing him.

If found guilty, without a recommendation to mercy, he must hang, unless the Governor should subsequently interfere and order executive clemency.

If he is convicted, and the jury "recommend him to the mercy of the court," the court then will be obliged to send him to prison for life.

The general opinion is that the present trial will run all of this week—that the best to be expected is that the jury may be given the case by Saturday night.

After the evidence is all in, the case still will have to be argued to the jury. It is thought that Judge Roan will take the bridle off in respect of this, and both sides will be permitted to go the limit.

Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold will consume at least one entire day in argument, and Mr. Dorsey and Mr. Hooper will not take less time.

It is expected that Hooper will open for the State and Dorsey close, and that Rosser will open for the defense and Arnold close. The State has the opening and the concluding argument before the jury.

WHITE SLAVE CASE WHICH INVOLVES U.S. GOES TO TRIAL

Diggs Faces a Jury and Caminetti Will Later Fight Charge of Taking Girls to Reno, Leaving Their Wives in State of California.

After Five Months of Delay and Scandal Involving National Officials, Special Prosecutors Are Appearing for the Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Marsha Warrington and Ida Norris, the Sacramento high school girls alleged to have been taken to Reno in November by Maury I Diggs and Drew Caminetti for immoral purposes, will take the stand against Diggs when his trial is resumed Tuesday. No session of the Diggs trial was held today. Diggs and Caminetti will take the stand before the trial is concluded.

Judge Van Fleet dealt the defense a hard blow yesterday when he announced that the jury would not consider the willingness or unwillingness of the two girls to accompany Diggs and Caminetti.

The jury to hear the case of Diggs, the former State Architect, was announced complete after considerable difficulty in selecting the twelve members. Exhaustive examination of 96 veniremen was necessary before the twelve were chosen.

The first witness was called. He was F. J. Peck, a Reno real estate dealer, by whom the defense sought to show that the bungalow occupied by the defendants in Reno had been rented with no view to concealment.

Prejudice against the defendants runs high, rendering exceedingly difficult the task of picking a jury. Of the twelve men chosen, eight are married and have children, two are married, but childless, and two are single men, living with their parents. Indicative of the general temper of San Francisco was the reply upon examination of Philip Woolsey, who afterward was chosen as a member of the jury. He expressed his prejudice against "any married man who will abandon his wife and babies and run off on a spree with another woman," but said he could, however, render a verdict strictly in accordance with the evidence.

Cases Come Up Separately.

The cases against Diggs and Caminetti will be tried separately because the prosecution feels it has made out the stronger case against Diggs, and because the defense in this case will assume a course different from that in Caminetti's.

Diggs and F. Drew Caminetti, son of former Congressman and present Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti, are charged with luring Miss Marsha Warrington and Miss Lola Norris from California to Nevada for immoral purposes. Both are married men.

Diggs, the prosecution will attempt to show, financed the trip to Reno, where the girls were taken, and rented there a cottage in which the party lived.

Diggs, against whom the charges are made in relation to Miss Marsha Warrington, is said to be contemplating a fierce attack on the character of the girl. He has subpenaed habitues of the "Barbary Coast" resorts of this city and twenty witnesses from Sacramento's tenderloin. Caminetti is making no such move against Miss Norris. The Government asserts her character to be unblemished.

Mrs. Caminetti Relentless.

Caminetti's wife is relentless in her attitude toward her young husband. She said that despite the disgrace it may bring on their children, she thinks, for the protection of other married women, her husband should be made an example.

Mrs. Diggs, also, is bitter toward her husband. The defenders of both men, however, to-day are claiming a complete reconciliation of the defendants with their wives, and declare that when the trial gets fully under way both Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti will be seen sitting at their husbands' sides, a spectacle which, the defense calculates, will have an effect to their advantage on the jury.

Diggs and Caminetti both are free from custody, having taken advantage of the $10,000 bail offered them. At first they feared freedom, as violence was anticipated, but later this fear was overcome.

Diggs appears to be cheerful to-day, taking matters easily. He is scrupulously dressed. He came into the courtroom, with his flock of attorneys, bearing a cheerful smile, and bowed a dozen times to familiar faces that he saw near. Caminetti, on the other hand, seemed deeply worried. He was pallid and palpably very nervous. His father, the Commissioner General of Immigration, did not make his appearance, and probably will not be seen at the trial.

Two Special Prosecutors.

The trial is being held in the Federal Court before Judge Van Fleet. Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore R. Roche, president of the San Francisco Police Commission, have been appointed special prosecutors by Attorney General McReynolds, to take the place of District Attorney Gavin McNab, who resigned with the announcement that undue influence was being brought to bear from Washington to prevent the trial of the two men.

Arrayed with the special prosecutors are Archie Johnson, son of Governor Johnson, and Acting District Attorneys Benjamin L. McKinley and Thomas H. Salvage.

Diggs and Caminetti have an equally impressive line-up of legal defenders, including Robert L. Devlin and Marshall B. Woodworth, both former United States District Attorneys; Nate Coghlan and S. Luke Howe.

A heavy guard is thrown around the courtroom because feeling runs high against the two defendants. The two girls involved were high school students of Sacramento and of estimable families. Both, attorneys for the Government announce, will be ready to take the stand against the men.

The Government will charge that Diggs and Caminetti, both married men, had drawn the girls into a liaison; that they terrified the girls into the belief that their wives, having discovered their infidelity, intended to have the girls arrested, and that to escape this imaginary danger the girls accompanied the men to Reno, Nev.

McNab Outlines His Case Against the Defendants

In his report Mr. McNab gives the following pen picture of Caminetti and Diggs:

"The defendant Diggs was a draughtsman in the office of the State Capitol in Sacramento. He is married and has two young children.

"But a short time before the actions hereinafter narrated he was involved in a forgery charge, and for a long time, by common repute, easily substantiated by evidence, he maintained what has been denominated as a 'private harem' at his rooms in a downtown block in Sacramento. Here, according to charges laid before me, he enticed many young women to go to serve his immoral purposes.

"Caminetti was his bosom companion. The defendant Caminetti has a vicious reputation for seducing girls, and I have shocking instances which I can produce to establish this fact.

"The two girls in question, both of whom are about 19 years of age, come of most respectable families. Marsha Warrington is the only daughter of the agent of the Santa Fe Railroad. Lola Norris is the only daughter of a retired business man of Sacramento.

"After going with the young women for some months the two defendants, who had determined to entice the girls away from home and take them to another State, began a systematic campaign of coercion and inducement to get them to flee the State with them.

Their Stories to the Girls.

"They told the young women that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti had found out about their relations and had procured warrants for their arrest from the Juvenile Court and were only awaiting the appropriate time to serve them; that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti were relentless and intended to expose the whole matter, and that the families of the girl would be disgraced and ruined; that the only way to save the girls from disgrace was secretly to leave the city and go to another State, where they would acquire a residence, the men would divorce their wives and marry the girls, etc.

"The young women were in absolute terror. They repeatedly appealed to the defendants to allow them to remain at home and not to disgrace them, and begged to be allowed to unbosom their indiscretions to their parents and have their advice.

"Up to this time, according to the uncontradicted evidence, Diggs had been unduly intimate with Miss Warrington for a few weeks; the Norris girl had never been violated before this trip to Reno.

"On arrival at Reno they were assigned to bedrooms, Diggs and Miss Warrington occupying one room and Caminetti and Miss Norris the other. According to the testimony of the young women, they were wholly in the hands of their male companions. They had never been away from home or their parents before and felt that they were powerless to save themselves.

"Appealing to the men to know what was to be done with them, the young women were told that their ruin was complete; that they would not desert them, but that the young women were to continue to live with them as their mistresses, and that they would take them to Salt Lake, where they would go into a 'house.'

"The Grand Jury had ample evidence before it in these statements to decide that the intent was to put them in a public place.

Barely Escaped Lynching.

"The defendants were secretly taken from the train and brought to Sacramento by auto to avoid lynching by the enraged citizens. Defendants procured counsel. Among these is Charles Harris, of the Sacramento bar. He and Diggs immediately set about to defeat justice by corrupting a witness. Diggs wrote an appealing letter to Miss Warrington under an assumed name, uring her to stand by a certain agreed story he had drilled her in while in Reno. The letter is in my possession.

"The Grand Jury has indicted Harris and Diggs for conspiracy to suborn perjury.

"The friends of the defendants are reported to have stated repeatedly that they could 'easily fix the case;' that they had too much money and too much influence at command to cause them to worry. This seems to have come principally from the Diggs end of the case."

Foundling Is Heiress To $100,000 Fortune

Father Makes Wealth After He Had Left Baby In Michigan Institution.

CADILLAC, MICH., Aug. 9.—Sheriff Chamberlain has been asked by an attorney in Corning, N. Y., to locate Bessie Weaver, who was adopted by a Manton, Mich., family from a New York foundling home over twenty years ago, and a few days ago became heir to $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weaver, of Manton, who adopted the child when on a trip through New York, returned her to the home five years later. Since that time nothing has been heard from her. The father of Bessie Weaver, or Bessie Clark, as she was known in New York, made his fortune after placing his child in the home, but has been unable to locate her since she was taken back from Michigan. He recently died, leaving his fortune to his only child.

GIRL HELPS FATHER IN BUILDING NEW HOUSE

HARTFORD, MICH., Aug. 9.—One year ago S. H. Atkins and family came to this city and built a house in a field of rye in the outskirts of the city. Recently they sold the home, and with the proceeds purchased four adjoining lots. They are now building a much larger house, which will be the sixth they have erected since the little home was built.

The scarcity of carpenters caused the mother and daughter to assist Mr. Atkins in the building of his new home. The mother and 9-year-old daughter did all of the lathing.

Nearly Five Months to Bring Caminetti and Diggs to Trial

MARCH 10.

Diggs, married, ex-State Architect, about twenty-eight, and Marsha Warrington, nineteen, unmarried, all of Sacramento, go to Reno, register under assumed names, rent a cottage later, and live four days together when arrested. The men assert they are unhappy and intend to marry the girls after securing divorces.

JUNE 24.

The President accepts McNab's resignation with a rebuke for giving "his resignation the form of an inexcusable intimation of injustice and wrongdoing." In a letter to McReynolds he says: "I am entirely satisfied that the course you took in these cases was prompted by sound and impartial judgment and a clear insight for what was fair and right."

JUNE 28.

James C. Mann, Republican leader, bitterly attacks McReynolds and Secretary Wilson, both Cabinet officers.

Ban on Tobacco Seen By Prohibitionists

Smoking and Drinking Are Blamed for Increase in Chronic Diseases in America.

BATTLECREEK, MICH., Aug 9.—That tobacco as well as liquor will be placed under national prohibition before the end of another generation, is the assertion made here by Irving Fisher. Fisher blames liquor, tobacco, overuse of meat and too strenuous life for the terrible increase of chronic diseases in America.

Buys a $4,000 Auto To Use Cheap Gas

When Ex-Senator Scott Has Burned 60,000 Gallons He Will Have Saved Cost of Car.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The house of Senator Nathan Bay Scott, of West Virginia, is divided against itself, with automobiles as they issue. The Senator and Mrs. Scott are devoted to each other. They attend the same dinners, theaters and social functions together, but they arrive and depart in separate motor cars. It came about this way:

The senator has been paying 22 cents a gallon for gasoline to propel the family machine. He discovered a place where the price was 17 cents. With much glee he informed Oscar, the family chauffeur, of his discovery and directed that Oscar purchase gasoline there.

Oscar demurred because the gasoline emporium was too far from the family mansion. Mrs. Scott backed him up. Whereupon Senator Scott bought himself a $4,000 machine, acquired a chauffeur to navigate it and divorced himself from the old machine and Oscar.

After Senator Scott has burned 60,000 gallons of gasoline he will have saved the cost of the car. But he doesn't have to ride with Oscar.

PENSIONER, NOT IN WAR, ASKS RAISE OF STIPEND

BIG SANDY, MONT., Aug. 9.—After having enjoyed a pension of $12 per month for sixteen years, John Truax, of this town, confessed that he had never been entitled to the money. He had a preliminary examination before United States Commissioner Ragan and was bound over to the Federal District Court.

Truax might have gone on drawing the pension until death had he not lately made application for an increase.

ORPHAN SOUGHT AS WIFE BY MAN WRITING POLICE

Would-Be Benedict Gives Evidence in Letter That He Fears Mother-in-Law.

OAKLAND, CAL., Aug. 9.—J. Keler, of Fresno, is a marrying man. He proved it by writing a letter to "the Chief of Police or the City Marshal of Oakland" and entreating that official to find him a wife. He wants a wife who has means equal to his own—amount not stated—and indicates in his letter that he would expect her to assist him in his merchandise business. He assures all responsible applicants that he is sober and industrious and hasn't a single bad habit.

If you are a maid, a girl or a widow who reads this, you stand a chance of winning the prize, and if you are an orphan, get busy and send your picture to Keler at once. He takes kindly to orphans, as is evidenced from the following excerpt from his letter:

"Will answer all questions and letters from girls, maids and widows, but would prefer to wed an orphan. Will give my business to the one I wed, that she may know I am a square man and will do right."

The following notice was inclosed, with the request that the official post it in a conspicuous place:

"Temperate gentleman would be pleased to form the acquaintance of ladies matrimonially inclined. Give description and full particulars in first letter. Send photo, which will be returned, if desired."

SHEDS TOENAILS BIENNIALLY.

BEDFORD, IND., Aug. 9.—J. W. Mundy, of this city, sheds the nails from his toes every two years, and this has occurred since he was a child. When asked to see his foot, Mundy bared his left foot and showed the old nails, barely hanging to the toes, and the new nails growing under the old ones.

ALL STATES TO SHOW POULTRY AT KNOXVILLE

Exhibition of Best Breeds To Be Feature of National Conservation Exposition.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Aug. 9.—Birds for the poultry show that is to be held in connection with the National Conservation Exposition in this city during the months of September and October are coming to Knoxville all the way from California. Word of the coming of the California birds has just been received by the poultry department.

Interest in the poultry show is country-wide. From almost every State in the Union will be brought to Knoxville poultry of different kinds. Already it is assured that the poultry show will be the biggest thing of its kind ever held in the South. It will be in fact as well as name "The Madison Square Garden Show of the South."

A most comprehensive exhibit of the great textile industry of the South is assured for the exposition. Progressive manufacturers of Greenville, S. C., have just signed up for a large amount of exhibit space in the All-South building of the exposition and the greater part of that space will be devoted to the textile industry.

In addition to the Greenville textile manufacturers a number of other concerns of like nature in the South, from Knoxville and elsewhere, will make exhibits, and thus this industry, constantly increasing in importance in the South, will receive great attention. The different processes through which cotton goes from the seed to the loom and after will be strikingly shown in the different exhibits.

The complete list of prizes in the Want Ad Contest inaugurated by Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian, beginning with $1,000 in cash, is announced to-day.

Prizes are offered for organizations as well as individual contestants.

Men or women interested in their church, lodge, chapter, social or charitable organization or any recognized body may name their organization as a contestant, form teams for work and win something worth while. The first prize for organizations will be One Thousand Dollars in gold.

The organization running second in the contest will win $500 worth of furniture, designed for lodge, church or any other use, the selection to be left to the contesting organization.

The complete prize list offers an opportunity for loyal lodge members or church people to raise a fund for their organization or secure a complete outfit of furniture for equipping lodge room, church study or residence or the home of any social organization. It is expected that a number of organizations will enlist clubs of enthusiastic members who will go after that $1,000 grand prize.

The classification of prizes will give the boys and girls as good an opportunity to win as the grown-ups, though if a boy or girl tops the whole list he or she will be entitled to the automobile or trip to California just the same as though a grown person had led the contestants.

See Want Ad Man.

The Want Ad Man wants to talk to every contestant Monday. He has engaged the fourth floor of the Foote & Davies building, Edgewood avenue and North Pryor street, for his offices, and will be at his desk from 8 o'clock in the morning to 5 o'clock in the afternoon every day. On Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays he will remain in his office until 8 o'clock in the evening to meet contestants, give them assistance, talk over details and help them generally. He wants to give every contestant every possible aid in the work.

Prince Chased by Laundress
She Asks $50,000 on Love Notes
He Is Gone on His Honeymoon

Miss Freese, a California girl, who at a Secret Marriage Became the bride of Prince Sultkowski, of Austria, and a Snapshot of the Prince.

Sultkowski, Who Won Rich Girl and Had His $100,000 Debts Paid, Is Accused.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—An angry laundress from Vienna is in Los Angeles looking for Prince Stanislaus Sultkowski, the noble Austrian who came here several months ago, wooed in his gallant way and won the beautiful Miss Marie Louise Freese, had his debts of $400,000 paid by Father-in-Law Freese, and received from the same source an annuity of $20,000.

The laundress, Mrs. Clara Melcher, declares that the Prince brought her to this country on the promise that he would marry her.

After a hasty, private marriage, the noble Prince and his American Princess disappeared. The father-in-law says they are "not in the country," and no more.

Los Angeles society wondered at the quiet wedding. An elaborate church ceremony had been planned, but the plans were abandoned at short notice.

She Asks Federal Aid.

Society was in the midst of this wonder when entered Mrs. Melcher. She appealed with her story to the United States immigration inspector, and was supported by Adolph Danzieger, a lawyer. The Prince declared, Danzieger said, that the woman had annoyed his family in Austria, and to get her away from Vienna so he could return home with his American wife, he had written her to come to America.

An attorney, who was first approached by Mrs. Melcher and then retained by the Prince, said he suggested to Mr. Freese, the Prince's father-in-law, a payment of five or ten thousand dollars in settlement of the woman's claims, but Mrs. Melcher, through her lawyer, declared that she would have $50,000 or nothing. She has love letters which she says prove her claims.

The Prince and his American bride are believed to be on their way to Austria where Stanislaus is taking his Princess without fear of being molested by the insistent laundress.

Prince Lauds Girls Here.

The Prince is lieutenant of the Second Dragoons of the army of the Austrian empire. He came to America in December and lost his heart to the girls of America, whom he likened to "the flowers of the spring." He is a nephew of the Grand Duke of Birlitz. His home is the Castle Tresternitz, near Markburg, Austria.

The following tribute to American girls, of which the Prince delivered himself, was widely published:

"They are splendid, charming, graceful and fresh, like the flowers of the spring. The girls of Europe generally have followed outdoor sports. They are mostly large and strong, often the equal of their husbands in strength.

"My idea of a girl is found right here in America. I have been most hospitably received and have met many of them. Their sweetness, their trimness and the wonderful manner in which they wear their clothes have 'got me going,' as you say. Their figures and their style surpass the Europeans. Their dignity and grace and the democracy I have found in so many are winning, and I do not blame Europe's noblemen for coming to America for their brides."

POLITICS MIXED IN ALABAMA AS JOHNSTON DIES

Underwood May Be Drawn Into Senate Race—Knox and DeGraffenreid Mentioned.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 9.—The death of Senator Joseph Forney Johnston has precipitated in Alabama a political problem. He was seized by the fatal attack of illness at the time when he was in the midst of a fight with Congressman Richmond P. Hobson to retain his seat in the Senate, and Hobson thus is left without opposition.

The dominant political powers in Alabama, it is generally recognized, are not altogether friendly to the Hobson interests, and a man as powerful as Johnston undoubtedly will be brought forward to oppose the hero of the Merrimac.

Who will it be?

Eyes Are on Underwood.

All eyes turn to Oscar Underwood as the likely opponent of Hobson. Here near the end of the session of Congress, with his work well toward completion, it is conceded that Underwood can relinquish with safety his grasp on affairs in the House and step into the higher place in the Senate. A movement already is felt that may have its effect in bringing him out as a candidate.

Meanwhile, Governor O'Neal must appoint a successor to Senator Johnston to fill his seat for the two years yet remaining of his term. And, unless by previous agreement otherwise, the appointee probably will be a candidate for the coming term.

If Governor O'Neal appoints Colonel John B. Knox, of Anniston, to the place, Knox certainly will be a candidate for the long term, his health permitting. Knox for years has had ambition to enter the Senate. Twice he has been a candidate, losing in 1907, when Johnston and Bankhead were named provisional Senators to succeed Pettus and Morgan, who then were near death, and again in 1910, when he opposed Bankhead.

Knox a Brilliant Figure.

Knox is a brilliant, eloquent, altogether spectacular figure. The Governor may not feel disposed toward his appointment on one ground, however. One year ago occurred a vacancy on the bench of the State Supreme Court, and Governor O'Neal tendered Knox the appointment. After weeks of deliberation the Anniston man declined it. Political gossip at that time was heard to the effect that the Governor was placed in an inconvenient position because of the refusal, and he was forced to take Judge E. D. DeGraffenreid from the bench of the Court of Appeals to place him in the Supreme Court.

DeGraffenreid is O'Neal's closest friend and political adviser. That he should be in line for the Senate appointment is not considered unlikely in a number of places. In event he is appointed, it is unlikely that he will make the race for the long term, and the Underwood shadow looms up again.

The death of Senator Johnston, occurring almost simultaneously with that of his present political ally and personal friend, Major W. W. Screws, editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, is regarded in Alabama as a startling coincidence. Major Screws was Johnston's firmest supporter in his race against Hobson.

LOS ANGELES TO AID IN EXAMINER SITE DEDICATION

Civic Bodies and Officials to Participate in Cornerstone Laying of Great Newspaper Plant.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—On Monday at 12 o'clock will commence the ceremony of the placing of the cornerstone of the new Los Angeles Examiner building at Eleventh and Broadway.

Because the spirit of California has made this building possible, part of this ceremony will be the raising of the California Bear flag over the great edifice now already partically completed. The event will mark the progress of a great newspaper in a great city. Planned under the auspices of the Advertising Club of Los Angeles, and representative business men, the program for the cornerstone laying reaches broad and comprehensive proportions.

Great Chorus to Sing.

The music of four great massed bands will sound patriotically at the appearance of the flag, Madame Esther Palliser, the famous prima donna will sing the new song of Southland progress written for the occasion by Miles Overholt, and a chorus of 100 trained voices will mark the laying of the cornerstone.

From the lips of one who has made a great mark in America's history will come the final address of faith in Los Angeles and its people—William Randolph Hearst.

There will come, too, during this ceremony a novel procedure calculated to remind the younger generation of the event. A motion picture will be taken of the event, showing the ceremony and surrounding trong. Immediately after the picture has been taken, the film will be developed with all haste and within a few hours a hermetically sealed canister will be placed in the cornerstone.

To William Randolph Hearst will be presented by Mayor Rose the silver trowel of the cornerstone laying. The opening words of the ceremony will be spoken by the Rev. Charles Edward Locke, who will be presented by Ernest Ingold. Then James R. H. Wagner will come to the platform and present to A. W. Kinney, president of the Chamber of Commerce on behalf of the people of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Examiner, the California Bear flag.

Mr. Hearst to Speak.

After Mr. Kinney's reply to this, the Rev. George Donahue, acting for Bishop Conaly, will speak. The Rt. Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop, of Los Angeles, will give an address. After the speech of Mr. Hearst, Dr. Sigmund Hecht will say the closing word.

Before the ceremony at the new building, an escort with Chief of Police Sebastian acting as grand marshal, will proceed from Central Park to the old Examiner building at Fifth and Broadway. Here Mayor Rose, the speakers and Mr. Hearst will join the party and be escorted down Broadway to The Examiner's new site and the scene of the cornerstone laying.

COLLEGE HEN MISSES LAYING 1 DAY IN 100

Champion Barnyard Producer Rests Only When Commencement Season Arrives.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CORVALLIS, OREG., Aug. 9. A college hen, which laid 99 eggs in 100 days and observed Commencement Day by taking a single day's vacation, is a new claimant for prominence in the chicken world.

The newly heralded layer is three-quarters White Leghorn and one-quarter Barred Plymouth Rock, descending from several generations of heavy layers bred at the Oregon Agricultural College experiment station.

The 99 eggs were laid during the 100 days ended June 8, as follows: Thirty-one in March, 29 in April, 31 in May and 8 in the first 8 days in June.

Not only is this the best record ever secured at Oregon Agricultural College for the same length of time, but a careful perusal of authentic records from other stations on file fails to reveal an equal performance.

The result of breeding as shown in the egg production of this one hen is only an isolated example of what Professor James Dryden's extensive experiments are proving to be possible.

Up to date the records show clearly the beneficial effect in egg yield, and when the year's experiments are concluded in the fall some interesting statistics will be available for the use of poultrymen who are raising chickens for egg production.

Pavlowa Strikes Her Partner; Stops Dance

Quarrel With Novikoff on London Stage Is Like Falling Out With Mordkin.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Pavlowa caused a sensation at the Palace Theater tonight by an open quarrel with her dancing partner, Novikoff, the incident being parallel with her rupture with Mordkin last year.

While dancing Adagio, Pavlowa suddenly hit Novikoff a smart blow on the shoulder. Novikoff immediately left the stage while Pavlowa walked off by the opposite side, the orchestra finishing the piece to an empty stage. Pavlowa afterward performed two solo dances, but Novikoff did not appear again.

Thief Since Child; Boasts of 500 Crimes

Boy Declares That He Is Beyond Reformation, and Welcomes the Gallows.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Walter Novak, 20, arrested with four companions after they had fatally wounded Patrolman Samuel W. Sowers and beaten Patrolman Frank Walpole, admitted having taken part in more than thirty robberies in two months and boasted of his career.

"I was born a thief, and I've been a thief ever since," said Novak. "I don't care whether I go to the gallows. I started when I was nine stealing pennies. I have been put in all kinds of institutions to reform me, but they only made me worse. I don't want any member of my family to come and see me. If they come, I will kick them out.

"I suppose I have committed more than 500 robberies."

$640 Average Income Of American Farmer

Government Report Declares There Are Many Who Make far Smaller Sum.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Farming is not the most profitable business in the world, railroad press agents to the contrary notwithstanding, according to a bulletin of the Department of Agriculture.

For the first time in the history of farming in the United States the department has managed to get accurate data on the subject.

It reports that the average income of the American farmer is $640.40 a year. "It is reasonable to infer," says the department, "that at least half of the farmers in this country have even smaller incomes."

Feudist's Daughter Shouts at Conviction

Woman Obtains Practically All the Evidence Produced in Court Against Slayers.

WINCHESTER, KY., Aug. 9.—The work of Mrs. Lillian Gross, daughter of Ed Callahan, of Breathitt County, former Sheriff and noted feud leader, was rewarded to-day, when a jury returned a verdict finding Andrew Johnson, 19, guilty of having murdered Callahan.

The jury fixed Johnson's punishment at life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

When the verdict was given out, Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Timandy Callahan, young widow of the feudist, shouted for joy.

The evidence was secured almost entirely by Mrs. Gross.

Twelve witnesses, who swore that they saw Johnson at Jackson, 12 miles from the scene of the shooting, are under indictment for perjury.

Wind Saves Life of Baby Caught by Kite

String on Toy Encircles Throat of Child and Lifts Him From Earth.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Except for the timely intervention of a gust of wind, Baby Allen McNaughton, 15 months old, might have been hanged by a box kite string until he was dead yesterday afternoon in the presence of his 12-year-old brother Monroe, and a group of boy friends. As it was he was hanged until he was black in the face, and the string circled his throat with a gash that barely missed the jugular vein. Just as the kite went up the string slackened and twined about the baby's throat. The child was lifted from the ground and was being borne aloft when a sudden cross current slackened the string again. Monroe quickly cut it, releasing the kite and his brother at the same time.

FARMERS QUIT COTTON TO GROW WATERMELONS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9—The biggest watermelon crop on record is being moved along the Savannah and Statesboro Railroad. Already more than 650 cars have been hauled. Bennett Maas, commercial agent for the Macon, Dublin and Savannah, reports that farmers are so well pleased with their melon crops that some of them will abandon cotton-planting and go in for melons entirely.

Resigns One Place; Then Loses Other

Mayor Quits Office to Become Collector of Port, but Suffers From Curtailment.

PORT HURON, MICH., Aug. 9.—The order of Secretary McAdoo abolishing the office of collector of customs at this port has thrown former Mayor John J. Bell out into the cold.

When Mr. Bell received his appointment a few years ago he resigned as the city's chief executive, and Commissioner Dixon was chosen as his successor. Then Mr. Bell appointed William R. Chadwick as his deputy.

Now the order from Washington puts Mr. Chadwick in charge of the local part. Mr. Bell finds he has resigned himself out of one job and appointed himself out of another.

Steamer's Crew Deny Sighting 'Titanic'

Officers Say Wreckage They Saw Was Sixty Miles South of Disaster Scene.

Special Cable to The American.

SOUTH SHIELD, Aug. 9.—Officers of the steamer Lucilline, which has arrived here, deny the report that they saw the Titanic wreck apparently resting on top of a ledge of rocks. What they saw during their trip from Bordeaux to Philadelphia was some wreckage consisting of a part of a mast and some gear that was probably attached to a submerged object. They were 60 miles south of the scene of the Titanic disaster, although in the same longitude. They discredit the supposition that the Titanic rests upon a submerged reef.

Many Lives Saved As Train Is Ditched

Forethought of Towerman Averts Crash Between Specials by Taking Chance on Tragedy.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Scores of lives were saved to-day when a towerman in Burnham, Ill., threw the Ohio River special on the Pennsylvania Railroad into a derail and averted its collision with a through Wabash train from St. Louis. The train took the ditch at high speed. The Pennsylvania locomotive was overturned in the crash, but aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman, no one was hurt.

A moment after the Pennsylvania train hit the derailer the Wabash train clicked across the frogs at the track intersection less than 1,000 feet away.

Folly of Suffrage Shown by Dresses, Says Mrs. Marshall

Vice President's Wife Believes Women Can Do More Good Correcting Cabarets.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Slashed skirts with the silhouette gown and other freaks of modern fashion are the worst enemies of the newly made voters of Illinois, and the cabaret and the turkey trot are more in need of reform than Chicago's First Ward, in the opinion of Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, who was in Chicago with her husband.

Mrs. Marshall declared frankly that she was opposed to the municipal power recently granted to the women of Illinois. Mrs. Marshall said:

"I have never been a suffragist. To me the fashions of to-day ought to convince any one that a woman is not fit to vote. Some women's dress is not only extreme, it is objectionable. A woman would do more good by correcting the dances in our cafes and cabarets than in running for office.

"The women in the East are not strongly in favor of the ballot, and none of the Cabinet women seems to favor it, with the exception, perhaps, of the President's daughter, Miss Jessie Wilson."

NEWPORT TOLD THAT U. S. NEEDS AN ARISTOCRACY

NEWPORT, Aug. 9.—William MacDonald, professor of American history at Brown University, delivering the principal address before the Rhode Island Society of the Cincinnati, gave expression to some startling new ideas. The topic of his address was, "An Aristocracy in a Democracy." He said:

"There is needed an aristocracy to lead, a government of the best men. Not an aristocracy of vulgar wealth or hereditary descent, but an aristocracy made up of sound physique, disciplined, intelligent and trained, public-spirited, of cosmopolitan taste and unpretentious good manners."

Friedmann Has to Face New Charges

Originator of Tuberculosis Serum Is Accused of Unprofessional Conduct by Assistant.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Charges of unprofessional conduct have been preferred against Dr. Friedrich F. Friedmann, originator of tuberculosis serum, and he may have to defend his conduct before a court of honor of physicians and surgeons. Julius Benjamin, father of Dr. Harry Benjamin, who went to the United States with Friedmann as the latter's assistant, and who, as a result of his association with the creator of the tuffle tubercular vaccine, was left stranded in New York City without funds, is pressing the charges.

No Duke Available For Edna Goodrich

London Society Much Amused by Actress' Announcement She Is to Wed Peer.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Great amusement has been created by a cabled report of Edna Goodrich's announcement that she is to marry an English duke.

"It is a pretty story," comments The London Daily Mirror, "but of the 26 dukes, nineteen are married and five are widowers, the youngest being 67 years old.

"Of the remaining two, the actress couldn't have met them on a houseboat at Henley."

Of course there is the Duke of Westminster, whose penchant for charming actresses is well known, but he is not free to marry again, not yet.

Getting Acquainted With Your Own City!

Atlanta has grown so rapidly that Mr. Busyman, engrossed in the "moil" of his own restricted environments, rarely "glimpses" beyond the horizon of his personal sphere of activity. "HE KNOWS SHE GROWS"—but his knowledge of the INDIVIDUALITY of her growth is entirely beyond his "ken." Old industries double their capacity—NEW ones rear their walls. The BYRD PRINTING COMPANY is an instance of BOTH OF THESE CONDITIONS. They DOUBLED THEIR CAPACITY, and MOVED INTO A NEW ESPECIALLY BUILT FIVE-STORY CONCRETE BUILDING; and for absolutely MODERN equipment, and completeness in every department, no plant in America is superior. You should come down and "get acquainted"—see one of Atlanta's best achievements at its best. We'll be glad to show you over the plant. It's very interesting.

OIL LETTERS KILLED HIM POLITICALLY, SAYS FORAKER

Exposes by William Randolph Hearst Responsible for Downfall, Declares Former Senator Before Senate Lobby Inquiry.

Official of National Manufacturers' Association Writes Democratic Simplicity Will Mean Union Label on U. S. Stationery.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Former Senator Foraker admitted to the Senate Lobby Committee to-day publication by William Randolph Hearst of the famous Standard Oil letters killed Foraker's chances for re-election to the Senate in 1908.

After identifying a letter received from Martin M. Mitchell, the confessed ex-lobbyist, making a report of political activities in Ohio in Foraker's behalf, the former Senator said:

"It was the morning of the day Mr. Hearst's disclosure was made public. An attack had been made on me by Mr. Hearst which destroyed my chances of election, saying I had acted as counsel for the Standard Oil Company. This had created a sentiment in our State very prejudicial to me. I continued as a candidate in the campaign only because to retire from it after I had become a candidate would look like an admission that there was some justification for the attack, whereas there was not any."

Senator Foraker said Muhall, whom he had known thirty years, greatly overestimated his own importance.

No Aid from N. A. M.

Foraker said he had never received aid from the National Association of Manufacturers and while he received a fee of $500 for the part he played in the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1896, he was not in the employ of either David Lamar or Edward Lauterbach in an injunction case against the Union Pacific in 1903.

The House Investigating Committee opened its probe with introduction of correspondence showing the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers in fighting labor legislation in Congress and various attempts to have "conservative" men named as members of House committees.

Discussing the recent sundry civil bill, with its provision prohibiting the expenditure of certain funds for the prosecution of farmers and labor unions under the Sherman law, James A. Emery, counsel of the N. A. M., wrote to President John Kirby, Jr., of the association, on March 7, 1913, after President Taft had vetoed the bill:

"I want to emphasize as hard as I can the importance of lining up for a tremendous demonstration when this bill reaches President Wilson, as it undoubtedly will, with the same provision in it. You will then have an early opportunity to decide whether the glittering Democratic motto, 'Equal right for all and special privilege for none,' means anything or whether the Administration has surrendered completely or will merely turn over the Department of Labor.

Objection to Secretary Wilson.

"I note, by the way, your reference to a letter from C. W. Post on the question of a protest over the appointment of Wilson (Secretary of Labor). A protest on this subject is a mere waste of breath, and on the whole I am inclined to think the whole purpose of this department will be shown up quicker with the unions in control of it than in any other way. Gompers will run it characteristically with a high hand, and if the whole thing does not smell to Heaven within a year I shall be very much astonished.

"By that time Democratic simplicity will probably mean a union label on the White House stationery and the President conferring with the Waiters' Union over the appointment of his steward. At present we have nothing more startling in Jeffersonian simplicity than the news Mrs. Bryan is making a new suit for the Secretary of State, and cakes and ginger ale will be served at the dinner for the British Ambassador. Toothpicks will, of course, be an after dinner course at all Cabinet receptions, and the demand for dress suits will be confined to waiters in the hotels."

In this same letter Emery advised Kirby, "if you have any idea Taft would have vetoed this bill of his own motion, get over it. A list of public men who had 'pie' in this $113,000,000 appropriation bill included many prominent men in both Houses."

LOSES ELOPEMENT RACE.

IRONTON, OHIO, Aug. 9.—George Alexander, of Floyd County, Kentucky, arrived here to-day in pursuit of his daughter, Miss Oma Alexander, five minutes after she had been married to Lawrence Jenkins. The father said the girl was only 15 years old and that Jenkins had induced her to elope with him when she was on her way to school this morning.

Finds Honeymoon Land, Then the Man

Society Girl and New Husband Are Now on Their Way to Tahiti.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Miss Luella Hayne, a pretty Chicago girl, is now, as the bride of Dr. Frank Vance, of Enid, Okla., on her way to spend her honeymoon in Tahiti. Miss Hayne had chosen the spot for the honeymoon before she found the man.

Miss Hayne went through a finishing school which prepared her for all the conventionalities of a reigning position in the smart set, but after a brief whirl this life proved tiresome and she started out on the road that leads "back to nature."

The romance was begun at a house party in New York city given by Miss Hayne's sister.

In talking about Tahiti before she sailed she said:

"The people who are most successful in our centers of civilization are most fettered by it. The reason why people plunge so madly into the economic struggle is largely that they may free themselves from its conditions. Why should not a civilized man be as happy as a native of Tahiti? We are going to find out."

Princeton Students Are Rivals for Hands of Daughter of Late President.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 9.—Herman Stump and H. Gordon Ewing, filled with a youthful ardor to win the hand of Miss Esther Cleveland, second daughter of Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., and the late President Cleveland, are rivals in "a race for love" which is interesting Baltimore society.

Stump is a son of Judge and Mrs. H. Arthur Stump. Ewing is a son of Mr and Mrs. William Jackson Ewing, of Roland Park.

The two wooers are members of the senior class at Princeton University and both have been guests at Miss Cleveland's home.

Mrs. Mackay Leads Hermit Life

Society Leader Pines for Children

Seldom Stirs From Maine Home

Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay with her children, who were taken from her when her husband left on mysterious trip to Europe.

Portland People Believe She Has Settled in Quiet Town to Start Divorce Suit.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug 9.—From the gay life of a popular society woman, a leader in the smartest affairs of New York, Newport and Bar Harbor to pursue an existence in a quiet city, is a change just made by the dashing Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, the former Kitty Duer.

"Why do you suppose she's here?" all Portland is asking.

What can she do with herself all day long, for she is never seen out, save to take a drive, and then always wearing a heavy white veil. Is she here to secure a divorce and will she live that dreary life for one whole year—that's how the gossip runs.

Perhaps she's writing another book. She did write one once, "The Crystal Ball." But while the world conjectures, Mrs. Mackay denies herself to all.

Divorce is without doubt her idea in burying herself here, where she has been ever since her millionaire husband sailed for Europe with their three children.

Mrs Mackay is occupying the home of Adam P. Leighton on Western Promenade, a cottage in comparison with the mansions she has been used to occupying.

It was on June 25 that Mr. Mackay sailed for Europe on the Imperator, taking his children on board from New Jersey, where they had been in his control for several days. He went abroad with never a word to the wife and mother.

So mysterious was the departure that it attracted wide attention. They boarded the ship at night; a detective squad was serving to protect the children from any attempt to prevent their departure and the father registered under an assumed name. The children, who are no doubt longing for their mother as she is longing for them, are still abroad and it is said they will be there for months.

Western Canada to Honor First Farmer

Three-Day Celebration Planned as Tribute to Memory of Chevalier LaCorne.

MELFORT, SASK., Aug. 9.—Western Canada is to honor the memory of Captain Louis Luc De La Corne, the first farmer of Western Canada. Chevalier LaCorne introduced agriculture in the Carrot River valley, Saskatchewan, in 1754. At Melfort, in the heart of the Carrot River District, a three-day celebration, August 1, 2 and 3, 1914, will commemorate the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of the first farming in Western Canada.

The business men of Melfort and the surrounding territory have organized to arrange for the celebration, and committees are already at work. The celebration will be unusual and will include a pageant, in which 2,000 Indians will participate. This pageant will typify the agricultural growth of Western Canada, from the days before Chevalier LaCorne explored the Carrot River valley to the present time.

She was formerly Miss Ethel Kelso, daughter of a prominent Grand Junction fruit grower, and is an expert motorcyclist. Carson will ride on the tandem seat.

Dickenson was unable to swim, and sank with Mrs. Keesing. Both were taken from the water dead.

Two physicians said there was no water in the lungs of either, and that Mrs. Keesing died of heart failure and Dickenson of fright.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—City-bred babies triumphed over those from the country in the Twentieth Century Baby Show held at Plaza Chautauqua near Alton, Ill. The prizes went not to the prettiest babies, but to those who scored highest in physical and mental efficiency.

First place in Class A for babies from eighteen months to three years, was won by Cooper Stanton White, of Alton. In Class B for babies from six to eighteen months the winner was Gilbert Craig, of East St. Louis.

Of the eighteen babies entered, none scored less than 946. None of the country babies entered won a prize.

Uses Boot as Strop; Shaves With Knife

Pioneer Indiana Man Has Never Owned Razor, Mug or Barber Soap.

CONNERSVILLE, IND., Aug. 9.—Zaccheus Adams, Jackson Township, Fayette County, has shaved himself twice a week for 54 years, but never owned a shaving mug, a razor, a strop or a hone. It is Mr. Adams' pride that he keeps his razor, an old Wade & Butcher cleaver, twice as big as a common razor, in the finest trim with the least trouble of any man in the county.

He wears old style, high-toped boots and still has one pair which he bought 25 years ago. Wishing to shave, Mr. Adams first puts on these boots. He then smacks the razor blade back and forth along the leather leg of the left one for a minute or two. His next operation is to moisten his face with rainwater—no perfumed soap for him—and then he just shaves.

NATURE AIDS IN BEAUTY DISPLAY AT PACIFIC FAIR

Picturesque Location Will Add to Grandeur of Palaces of Mammoth Panama Exhibition.

By HAMILTON WRIGHT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—The palaces of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition have been planned upon a massive scale to conform with their impressive natural surroundings. The site of the exposition at Harbor View lies within the city limits as a crescent upon the shores of San Francisco Bay, just inside the Golden Gate.

No more picturesque location, nor one more appropriate to the celebration of a great maritime event could be imagined. On the south, east and west the grounds are encircled by towering hills of varying contours rising successively from 250 to 900 feet above the sea level. Upon the north the site opens out upon the harbor of San Francisco.

Site Natural Amphitheater.

The central portion of the site lies slightly above the sea and is encircled on three sides by gently sloping ground; within a short distance from the boundaries of the site these slopes change to steep hillsides and thus the site becomes the floor of a huge amphitheater from whose sides the exposition will be seen stretched out below. To the east and south the residence section encircles the exposition grounds, and to the west and southwest the site embraced by the wooded slopes of the Presidio military reservation, dark with cypress and eucalyptus and interspersed with occasional vistas of green valleys.

The exposition buildings, built upon an axis east and west, will face the bay upon the north; they will parallel the stream of the great incoming traffic of the world through the western gate of the United States. Ships entering the harbor will pass before the exposition grounds.

The harbor itself will be a part of the great theater upon which will be staged the world's jubilee and the Golden Gate will be the entrance to the theater.

A marvelous panorama will be afforded visitors on ships coming through the Golden Gate. As one looks from the harbor he will see there main groups of exposition buildings. There will be the great central group comprising the fourteen exposition palaces to be devoted to general exhibits; there will be the group upon the left hand or east end devoted to amusement concessions and covering sixty-five acres; this will be the "midway." The right-hand group upon the Presidio Military reservation and nearest the Golden Gate will be devoted to the pavilions of the States and foreign nations.

Tropical Boulevard Feature.

The main group of buildings will lie between a tropical garden or boulevard running east and west along the fringe of hills nearest the city upon the south, and the esplanade along the shores of San Francisco Bay upon the north.

The tropical boulevard, to be known as the "Alameda," will be 1,800 feet in length and 300 feet wide; it will be glowing with fountains, lagoons, statuary peristyles and arcades and, secluded from the winds of the bay, it will be transplanted with a profusion of semi-tropical trees, plants and flowers, including the orange, banana, olive, myrtle and every variety of palm. The east end of the Alameda will open out with a plaza upon Van Ness Avenue, one of the principal boulevards of San Francisco. The west end upon the Presidio will be surmounted by a commemorative arch of triumph.

The prevailing color tone of the exposition will be an ochre, a tawny buff, several shades removed from white, but in the distance giving the effect of white, but will not be glaring under the brilliant sunlight of California. In the courts there will be a marvelous blending of colors; Pompeiian red, strong Italian blues, vermilion and orange will predominate. The court system is unique in that it will permit each architect, artist or sculptor to present some distinct conception without clashing with the exposition architecture and coloring in its entirety.

BACHELOR, 107 YEARS OLD, GIVES SINGLE LIFE CREDIT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Daniel Turner, a veteran of the Civil War, residing at Santa Monica, who celebrated his one hundred and seventh birthday to-day, thanks his judgment in remaining single for his long life and apparent good health at this advanced age.

"My life was never blighted by worry or sickness because I never married," said "Uncle" Dan. "Married men die younger than bachelors. Sometimes death is a welcome relief to the man who gets a modern wife."

Get Ready for End of the World

Flying Rollers Expect It Soon

So Members of This Queer Cult Await With Uncut Hair and Much Footwashing.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—"Now, brethren, watch night and day, for ye know not when the end of the world draws nigh. It may be tomorrow; at least it will come before the year 1920. It is probably much nearer than that," says Brother Lucien I. Pingree. With long flowing beard that has never been profaned by scissors and with silken locks which also have never been clipped, this resident of Stoneham thus warns all those who would be ready when the First Resurrection occurs. "It is coming soon—very soon—very soon," he asserts. Brother Pingree and his band of adherents all are sure of it. The end of the world is close at hand, they all say.

For this reason the Flying Rollers are launcing a great religious crusade which they hope will awaken men and women to a knowledge of their evil ways and will prepare them for the near-at-hand millennium.

Keep on Living.

If you are one of the elect and alive when this auspicious day comes Mr. Pingree says that you will never die. Your body will take on eternal life and though you will be otherwise possessed of man's normal anatomy and will go right on through million of years living in the mortal mold.

Brother Pingree, who is agent and teacher of the Flying Roller faith in this vicinity, lives at No. 1 Forrest street, Stoneham. His church until recently has been at No. 117 Hancock street, Everett. Now the Flying Rollers are to pitch their tent in Malden and launch a propaganda which aims to halt the world in its mad round of pleasure, barber shops and picture galleries.

It is not such a hardship for the women to belong to the Flying Rollers church, but the men have troubles of their own. Their discipline forbids anyone to have his hair cut or to enjoy the pleasure of lying back in a tonsorial chair while the artist with the razor does the rest.

Males Never Cut Hair.

The male brethren never have the corners of their hair or of their flowing beards rounded. "Thou shalt not," says the church discipline. Then there is the ceremony of the washing of feet, which takes place on certain occasions, when elders and elderesses lave each other's pedal extremities and thus conform to other Biblical injunctions. The Flying Roll is a book written by the great Roller prophet, Jezreel, mentioned in the Scriptures as "to come on earth." He came and was here in 1875, wrote the Roll and died about twenty years ago.

Since then the Flying Rollers have read his text with scrupulous care and followed closely in his teachings.

The Flying Rollers believe in the law and gospel. That is, they follow literally the teachings of the Bible. A man who is faithful to the end will live forever. The Bible says that, and the Rollers take it literally.

144,000 in the Elect.

Of all the people alive, 144,000 (mentioned in Revelations, Chapter 14) shall be the elect who are to live during the thousand years when Christ is again to be on earth (during the First Resurrection). Then this chosen 144,000 shall enjoy Heaven still with their earthly bodies while the rest of humanity that was, shall minister to them as "ministering spirits."

"The world of wickedness will soon cease. A new world will appear as soon as Christ comes, which will be very soon (I can not give the exact date, but it will be before 1920, there is no doubt about that)," says Pastor Pingree. "In that world there will be no longer this struggle for life. Wonderful fruits and flowers will grow everywhere along the road sides—fruits and flowers more wonderful than we get from hothouses now. Then the earth will be Heaven for a thousand years.

"We believe that those who are faithful to the teachings of our religion will share that thousand years with Christ, wearing their mortal bodies, then clothed in immortality.

"It is no hardship not to cut your hair or trim your beard," says Mr. Pingree. "We tie it up and tuck it in, and by not cutting it or rounding the corners in any way, we are obeying the letter of divine law."

Here Are the Tenets of the Flying Rollers

Thou shalt not shave.
Thou shalt not cut thy hair.
Thou shalt not have thy picture taken.
Be faithful and thou shalt join the 144,000 true believers who will live forever.
Remember that the millenium will be here—probably in a year or so.
Thou shalt not tattoo thy arms.
The prophet is James J. Jezreel. Follow his teachings.
Feet washing among the brethren and sisters is practiced faithfully as the Bible and extracts from the "Flying Roll" dictate.
Prepare for the first resurrection which is coming soon.

EVERY LUXURY PROVIDED FOR 12 PRIZE DOGS

Private Room, Electric Fans, Leather Chairs, Etc., for Each of Dozen Pomeranians.

BROKTON, MASS., Aug. 9.—Twelve Pomeranians—each with a whole room to himself, and housed in a house which they have all to themselves, likewise—take he prize for dog luxury, Brockton folks believe. Besides a house of their own, the dogs have:

A valet, electric fan, individual beds, a bath twice a day, a back yard to play in, leather chairs and soft rugs (the latter to try their teeth on).

Mrs. E. V. Graves, a leading business woman, owns the dogs. She is successful as the head of a factory here. Brockton folks say she is more attentive to the dogs than Mrs William Carter, of Newport, who got four doctors when her Pomeranian was nervous.

During the hot days the valet, Mr. Beals, fans the little fellows with a specially made $18 electric fan and each dog is given a cold bath at frequent intervals.

"They are all as jealous as can be," says Mrs. Graves. "If you make more of one than another there is a terrible howl and often a fight. They are friendly to children as a general rule. The dogs are worth anywhere from $150 to $1,000 each, but I do not care to sell them. They are a great comfort to me."

HOT FIGHT FOR COMMISSIONER IN BIRMINGHAM

Recorder Wood, "People's Candidate," Denounces Opponent as Champion of Interests.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Clement R. Wood and George B. Ward are engaged in the most spectacular campaign for President of the Commission of Birmingham ever waged in this city.

Wood, as the "candidate of the people," is making many and varied charges against the political element supporting his opponent, Mr. Ward. He charges that he (Wood) was removed as Recorder by the Commission for sending one of their friends to the stockade and insisting on his serving his time, as he did in similar cases.

He also charges that Ward represents the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company and the Birmingham Loan and Discount Company. He charges that the managing editor of one of Birmingham's afternoon papers was forced out of the race under penalty of losing his position on the paper.

He claims that many other prospective candidates have been eliminated from the race by the powerful hand of the interests, and calls on the "common people" to assert themselves in the defeat of Ward.

Ward claims that Wood was discouraged by the Commission because of incompetency, and makes many other charges and insinuations in his speeches and newspaper cards.

Meetings are being held almost every night, and music from brass bands and the orations of the spellbinders are to be heard on every corner.

It is impossible to get a complete line-up, but it can be said with certainty that the race will be close, and that the result will be known only after every vote has been counted.

WOMEN BUY LAND ONE-THIRD CHEAPER THAN MEN

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 9.—After hearing from women of the Council of Clubs the Finance Committee of the upper house of the Council has killed the ordinance to advance $1,000 of the $12,000 set apart for the purpose of making a start on the contemplated women's reformatory at Leeds.

It developed that the $1,000 had been asked by the Board of Public Welfare as a first payment on thirteen acres of ground it proposed to buy at Leeds at $500 an acre.

The women made fun of the business abilities of the Welfare Board, and said that they had already secured an option on 96 acres close by the thirteen at $171 an acre.

Heiress on Lone Hunt for Gold Seeks Mine Grandfather Found Plans to Do Own Prospecting

Miss Frances Leighton, an heiress of California, who is prospecting through a section of the Sierra Madre Mountains in search of a gold mine which she believes her grandfather, a "Forty-niner," discovered, but never made known. Recently she heard of the reported "find" and, securing a miner's outfit ,staed alone on the perilous trip through the mountainous wilds in search of it.

Miss Frances Leighton Shows Same Intrepid Spirit of the Argonauts of '49.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—With the same dauntless spirit exhibited by her grandfather during the California gold rush of '49, Miss Frances Leighton, one of the wealthiest and most prominent socially of the younger generation of Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, is on a prospecting tour through the Sierra Madre Mountains to-day in search of a gold mine she had learned her grandfather discovered but never developed.

For many months Miss Leighton planned the prospecting tour before leaving to carry it out. Topographical bureaus supplied her with maps of the mountainous territory through which she planned to make her tour and several veterans of the gold stampede not only advised her against the foolhardiness of the prospective journey, but told her that there was one chance in a thousand of ever greeting civilization again if she lost herself in several untraveled sections of the mountain region that as yet have never been thoroughly explored.

Nevertheless, Miss Leighton had great confidence in the belief that her grandfather did find the mine somewhere in the mountain fastness and she determined to find it, if it did exist, at any cost and without taking into consideration the hardships that confront her.

Miss Leighton, according to reports which have reached her home town, is to-day prospecting at or near the West Fork Canyon, twelve miles beyond Mount Wilson.

Grandfather Killed.

Her grandfather, John Easton, was one of the first of the thousands of New Englanders to reach California, after a perilous journey across the prairies following the report of the discovery of gold in that State.

Soon after reaching San Francisco, he left with his wife and daughter and a partner and established a camp at Sierra Madre. Easton left the camp one day on a prospecting tour and never returned. Three days later his partner went out to search for him. He was found crushed to death by falling rock.

Before his death, however, he managed to draw roughly on a piece of paper what is now believed to be the location of the mine his intrepid young granddaughter is searching for.

Miss Leighton some years ago received a letter from her grandfather's former partner containing the piece of paper on which he had drawn the outline of the supposed mine. It was on receipt of this letter and diagram that Miss Leighton planned to go in search of the hidden gold.

After months of careful study of the many maps, topographical bureau reports and advice from old-time miners, Miss Leighton treated herself to a complete miner's outfit and started on her tedious journey up the mountain.

To Work Alone.

She will do the entire work alone, staking her own camp, preparing her meals, making surveys and using the pick and shovel whenever she believes she has struck the right trail.

Her outfit includes several changes of clothes, a heavy pick and shovel, a mountain mule, or pack animal as they are called in that section of the country, a complete dining and cooking outfit, a pack of playing cards which will afford her her only amusement while practically a prisoner in the wilds, needles, thread and many other useful and necessary articles.

She wears most all the time a pair of regulation top trousers, similar to riding breeches, with canvas leggings and a plain but heavy mountain shirt.

If the gold mine really exists, every one of the young woman's friends believe that she will not return until it has been found.

U. S. EDUCATION EXPERT SAYS ILLITERACY GROWS

BOULDER, COLO., Aug. 9.—That in only two States of the Union has the ideal democracy in education been even approximated; that every year in the United States almost 70,000 illiterates are sent out into the world to make their way; that there are in the country to-day 5,615,000 persons over the age of ten who can neither read nor write and that almost 50 per cent of the rural teachers of the country have not had a high school education, were among the startling statements made by United States Commissioner of Education Claxton in an address on "Democracy and Education."

DENVER IS READY TO GIVE KNIGHTS ROYAL GREETING

Thousands of Templars Pour Into City, Which Is Lavishly Decorated for Conclave.

DENVER, Aug. 9.—Thousands of Knights Templar are already here for the thirty-second triennial convention, and it is estimated that when the convention formally opens Tuesday next more than 100,000 Knights and their friends will have arrived.

All buildings are decorated in honor of the Knights, as are private dwellings. The municipal and other public buildings have been elaborately ornamented and great arches have been built over many of the streets. Thousands have been spent upon decorations and illumination. Denver has spent more than fifteen times as much on its plans for the Knights Templar than it ever before expended upon any one convention.

Sun to Shine All Night.

At Eighteenth and Champa streets the huge figure of a Knight more than 60 feet in height has been erected. A searchlight will play upon it all night. At Fourteenth and Champa streets a "Colorado Sunset," a marvelous electrical display, has been built. It shows the sun sinking below the rim of the mountains. Twenty monster searchlights are placed behind the "sun," throwing their rays into the sky to resemble the rays of the sinking sun.

Over the Isle of Safety at Broadway and Sixteenth street, a reproduction of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem will astonish the visitors. It measures 50 by 60 feet, and is lighted by searchlights on the tops of nearby buildings.

Every arrangement possible has been made by the railroads to bring the Knights and their friends into Denver. More special trains will enter Denver than entered Washington in the same space of time for the inauguration. The Pullman Company has reserved large space of ground on the outskirts of the city for a "Car City," where the special cars and special trains will be parked, and where those Knights who so wish may live in the cars. Sanitary arrangements will be perfect. Stores of various kinds for the convenience of the car dwellers have been established.

Two trainloads of automobiles from New York, sent here by New York Knights, have already arrived, and carloads of automobiles from other cities are arriving daily. These have also been parked on the outskirts of the city. More than 500 special trains and cars have already arrived. According to the railroad schedules, when the visitors really commence to flock in a special train will arrive every eight minutes for forty-eight hours.

Every State Represented.

From August 1 to to-day more than 2,000 automobiles reached this city. More than 1,000 other cars are on their way here. The delegates to the convention are from every State in the Union, and from Alaska, Honolulu, Philippines, Canada, England, Scotland and Ireland.

As the special trains began to arrive, some 2,000 Colorado Knights ranged themselves at the station to escort the new arrivals safely to their hotels. Every hotel room in Denver has been rented.

On Tuesday next the grand parade will be held. More than 50,000 Knights will be in line. Their white plumes, costing $15 each, will altogether be worth $600,000. The regalia of the Knights on parade will be worth more than $1,000,000. Sixty-five bands will march with the Knights, the fees to the bands alone amounting to $22,000. Some 600 Knights' commanders will be mounted on picked horses from the ranches of Colorado and Wyoming.

KANSAS SHERIFF RETALIATES FOR HIS ARREST ON SUNDAY

HUTCHINSON, KANS., Aug. 9.—Following his arrest on a charge of violating the Sunday labor ordinance, Koon C. Beck, sheriff of Reno County, announced that he would stop all Sunday labor in this city.

He swore out complaints against 350 persons who work on Sunday, including all street car employees. Beck and a brother are proprietors of an amusement park and shows have been given there on Sunday. Local ministers and church members made the complaint against the park.

LANE TAKES UP CUDGELS IN WAR FOR FARMERS

Secretary of the Interior Has Begun Long Battle on Land Grabbers.

the Interior Franklin K. Lane has started a little war on the land grabbers west of the Mississippi River.

He has taken up the cudgels of the farmer and the homesteader in the great West. His efforts in this direction materially effect the pocketbook of every man, women and child.

Incidentally, he is "bucking" the land speculator. These land "grabbers" have quietly been acquiring vast tracts of land in the West on which the people of the United States have spent over $75,000,000 in irrigation projects. The homesteader has either been ousted through excessive water rate charges or becomes a tenant of the land companies.

Speculators Hold Land.

Secretary Lane finds that the projects were planned for the purpose of aiding the small farmer in tilling his ground, but that in reality 95 per cent of the land is held by speculators, who are charging excessive rates for water which has been sluiced to the land by the Government.

The other 5 per cent of the acreage is owned by the small farmer, but even Government water rates are held by Mr. Lane to be excessively high. Building notes for dam canal and sluice ways add to the cost of upkeep of the farm and conditions, Westerners say, are becoming intolerable.

By going into the question from the very first day that he entered his office, Mr. Lane has become intimately acquainted with conditions obtaining in the West. Daily conferences have been had with delegations from the West. Even the land speculator had his day in court, and his contentions and views were placed before the Secretary.

Farmer Needs Help.

In this connection Mr. Lane announced: "I am for the farmer, first, last and at all times. Naturally handicapped by lack of sufficient funds to carry on expensive farming under the conditions that obtain in the West, the farmer must receive support and co-operation from the Government, if the great West is to be settled and made to be as productive as the East.

"Expensive water will ruin the small farmers and ranchmen. They must have cheap rates and long-time notes, the Government must back them up an extend them credit, helping them over the rough places if necessary, if the various projects designed to benefit the whole people are to accomplish the purposes for which they were constructed.

"Why should this Government spend $75,000,000 for the benefit of private capital? Why should the Government adopt a hard and fast policy, such as has existed in the past, which has kept the small farmer from going into the new regions and taking up Government land? Isn't it time for the United States to extend to the Westerners a little paternal patience, a little more consideration, a helping hand?"

NEW SECURITIES LISTED.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The Stock Exchange has admitted to the list Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway $1,134,200 additional capital stock, and has stricken from the list Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis fully paid subscription receipts for capital stock as well as Mobile and Ohio Railroad and St. Louis and Cairo collateral 4 per cent bonds, due 1930.

ARCH CREEK, FLA., Aug. 9.—George W. Oden will experiment on banana culture in this county. The numerous demonstrations and experiments in Dade County have been very successful and Mr. Oden is pretty well satisfied that bananas will do well here.

MEN AND RELIGION No. 73

CHILDREN OF GEORGIA

"AND THEY ALL WITH ONE CONSENT BEGAN TO MAKE EXCUSE."

Luke 14:18.

They were at dinner.

Jesus said:

"When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind,

"And thou shalt be blessed."

One at the table pretended to be in sympathy. He began smugly:

"Happy is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God."

The hypocrisy of the man and all others like him was unmasked in the answer made by Jesus. He said:

"A certain man made a great supper and bade many—

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse."

One said one thing, another another.

With one it was a field; with another it was new oxen.

In the end, the Lord said:

"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

And from the highways and the hedges called He His guests.

Are you a maker of hypocritcal phrases as was the man at the Pharisee's dinner table—pretending a love for that which is just and right?

Or, to-day, are you trying to do the will, not of man or men, but of Him who died for you?

Let us have done with excuses!

While spending thousands on fields, hogs and cattle, say not:

"We are unable—

"We can not give proper care to these girls—

"These children must go down in shame because of our lack of money—

"But our beasts we must protect whatever the cost."

If animals are more valuable than girls, let us say frankly: but you know that this is untrue.

You know what Georgia would do.

Consider, then!

The Bill in the House providing a Reformatory for Girls is No. 4—ahead of any other measure appropriating money.

The Penitentiary Committee has approved it.

Unanimously the Appropriations Committee has recommended that it pass.

Why, then, should beasts and fields be provided for by later bills and nothing done for Georgia's wayward and delinquent girls?

BURWELL of Hancock, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman and the vice-chairman, BLACKBURN of Fulton, HARDEMAN of Jefferson, MILLER of Bibb, NUNNALLY of Floyd, PAULK of Berrien, RAGLAND of Talbot, REDWINE of Fayette, RHODES of Clarke, SHUPTRINE of Chatham and SLADE of Muscogee constitute the Rules Committee of the House.

The Bill is in their hands.

Monday is the final day in which the measure can be heard and enacted into law at this session of the Legislature.

These eleven men, THE RULES COMMITTEE, will not prevent a hearing, say their friends. We believe that they will do more, that they will help to pass the Bill.

For they know the worth of a girl-child of ten to fourteen.

And they can appraise a cow or hog.

WOMAN DEITY CREATED MAN, SAYS TABLET

New Version of Genesis Found in University of Pennsylvania Nippur Collection.

DATE IS FIXED AT 2100 B. C.

Dr. Arno Poebel's Discovery Is Regarded as Oldest Story of Origin of World.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—It was a woman who created mankind, according to a tablet 4,000 years old just deciphered at the Pennsylvania University Museum by Dr. Arno Poebel, who is at work translating the tablets dug up in Nippur some years ago by the museum expeditions.

About 37 years ago George Smith, the English scholar and explorer, brought back from Babylonia the cylinders which gave a Babylonian account of the origin of mankind and much of his early history, and these not only excited great interest but had a profound effect upon the theological teachings. The parallelism between the Babylonian story and that of Genesis developed a new school in theological criticism. But the cylinders of Smith only dated back to the reign of Assurbanipal in the seventh century B. C. The university museum tablet dates back possibly to 2500 B. C., and it is reasonably certain to be no later than the reign of Hamurabi, about 2100 B. C.

Female Deity Created Man.

The new account of the creation and the flood throws much new light on the early ideas of the Babylonians and Sumerians.

The striking novel features of the new tablet are these:

That it was a female deity who created mankind, known as "the blackheaded," from the color of the hair.

That new deities or new characteristics of the gods are discovered in the original document, although they have been hinted at in other ways. The character of the female goddess is now made important from the earliest times and equal with the two male ruler gods. Later tablets speak of these as unimportant.

That the first seven prediluvian cities and the special god of each are discovered.

That the older Babylonian name of the Scriptural Noah is Zingidda.

That deluge ruins of the prediluvian cities were not all destroyed, some not until historic times. There is historic basis to much of the statement in this epic.

Opens With Poem.

Dr. Poebel has prepared a careful literal translation of the tablet. It originally was about seven inches square, but on such a surface the ancients could write in ideographic signs a long epic poem, and that is what this table contained. Like the first chapter of Genesis, the story opens with a great poem on the origin of the heavens as well as of the earth. It appears that Nintu, a female god, created mankind, and she is found lamenting that the other gods seem bent on the destruction of her subjects. She speaks of the human beings as "my creations." It appears that Anu and Enlil were the chief gods of power, although they were among seven of equal rank, the first being god of heaven and the second god of earth. Then comes the story of the creation:

"Nintu created the blackheaded." (human race.) * * * "The fields of the ground produced abundance, the cattle and the four-legged beasts of the field artfully they (the gods) called into existence."

Use of Fireproofed Cotton Goods Urged

State Fire Marshal Says Stores in Kansas Sell No Other Kind.

TOPEKA, Aug. 9.—Harrison Parkman, State Fire Marshal, believes that stores ought to sell only fireproof cotton goods.

In the new State fire textbook the Fire Marshal is urging that every Kansas man and woman refuse to buy any but fireproof cotton goods and that they adopt the German method and fireproof all cotton materials.

The Fire Marshal believes that this action would decrease the number of deaths by fire in Kansas fully 50 per cent and it would make a big decrease in the number of fires in the homes of the State.

Raze House While Occupant Is Away

Workmen of Grade Crossing Commission Destroy House of Man Who Blocked Work.

CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Aug. 9.—While John Barber was in Boston this afternoon, a wrecking crew, under orders of the special grade crossing commission for Central Falls, demolished a cottage house he owned on Cross street, and then started in to saw off a corner of the Barber Livery Stable nearby. When his land was condemned Barber demanded $5,000 for the property, but was allowed only $3,500. The grade crossing commissioners sold the cottage to Nicolas Bertozzi, but Barber would not let Bertozzi on the premises.

25,562,650 VOTES FOR PONIES

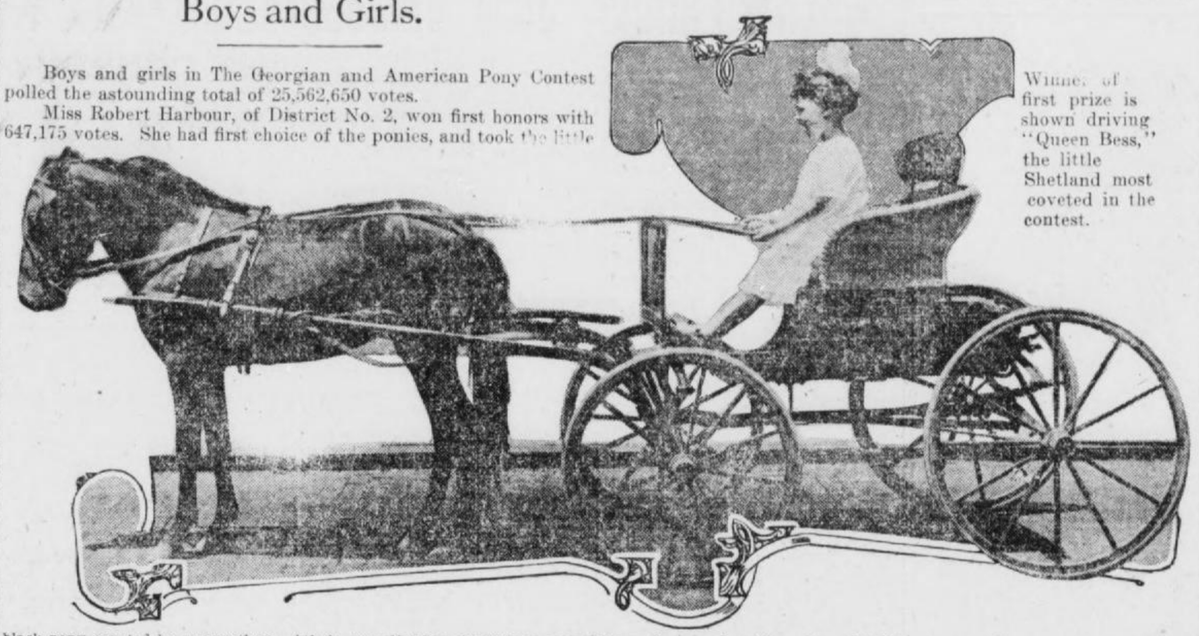
Astounding Mark Reached in Great Contest

Race, Thrillingly Close to the Last, Showed Courage and Ability of Boys and Girls.

MISS ROBERT JESTER HARBOUR, 340 Ponce DeLeon avenue, who polled largest number of votes in Georgian and American's great Pony Contest.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American Pony Contest polled the astounding total of 25,562,650 votes.

Miss Robert Harbour, of District No. 2, won first honors with 647,175 votes. She had first choice of the ponies, and took the little black pony coveted by many others—"Queen Bess."



Winner of first prize is shown driving "Queen Bess," the little Shetland most coveted in the contest.

Totals of more than a half-million votes were made by George Rosser in District No. 1, and Fannie Mae Cook in District No. 4.

Four others, Charles E. Kelly, of Cartersville, with 430,460; Frank Ison, Jr., of College Park, with 474,090; William Turner, with 439,930, and Ross Greer, with 440,925, climbed over the 400,000 mark, and neared the half-million level.

All Had Big Totals.

All the others had big total votes—large enough to win in any ordinary contest. But this was no ordinary contest. It was harder fought than any competition of the kind in the history of Atlanta. This was inevitable, because the prizes were more attractive to children than any which any Atlanta newspaper ever before had offered.

A remarkable feature is the way the contestants were "bunched" at the finish. In many districts there are five, six and even ten who were serious contenders for the prizes up to the very count.

Some of those who were fifth in their own districts would have won a pony, or at least a watch, in some other district. This seems hard, but it is the fate of war, so to speak. Presumably those in the same districts had even chances, and should not be permitted to compete with the boys and girls working in a region where the going, perhaps, was much more difficult.

Credit to the Losers.

Hats off to the losers!

Every one of them is "game." There has not been a complaint of unfairness—not a single kick at the method in which the contest was conducted. Nothing but a spirit of fair play, and the motto, "Let the best man win," has prevailed.

There is this much consolation—the boys and girls who worked sincerely in the contest have gained experience which will be invaluable to them in later life—an insight into business methods worth more than any prize.

Then, too, they have the satisfaction of knowing that they have aided in introducing Atlanta's best newspapers into homes where they were strangers before.

Mends Own Socks To Let Wife Vote

Illinois Husband Consents to Do Washing to Prove Housekeeping Isn't Hard.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Just to prove to an expectant world that he was a good husband, Wayne Colby stayed home, mended the socks, tended the children and washed dishes while his wife cast her vote in the first election under the universal suffrage law recently enacted.

"Just to show that it is not such a terrible thing for a man to stay at home and do the housework on the occasional voting day," said Colby, "I thought I would help Mrs. Colby out with the washing."

The first woman to cast her vote in the State was Mrs. Fannie Coleman, of Wamac, near Central Illinois. She was accompanied to the polls by her husband, O. W. Coleman, and both voted for Village Trustees.

WOMEN WHO JOG WIFE UPON A RAIL AWAIT SHERIFF

Illinois State's Attorney Says Volo Vigilantes Who Maltreated the Town Beauty Must Answer.

VOLO, ILL., Aug. 9.—Here in Volo, Lake County, Ill., the women who rode Mrs. John Richardson, the town beauty, on a rail will have to answer to the grand jury. The State's Attorney Ralph Dady, says so.

Gossip caused the trouble. Mrs. Richardson is pretty. Her husband, who keeps the small country store, is a cripple. William Dunnill, a brother-in-law of the wife, was a frequent caller.

The village women descended on the Richardson store, dragged her out on July 14 in the evening, set her astride a rail and bore her, struggling, screaming, almost raving, through the main street of the little town, climaxing the incident by dumping her into a mud puddle by a roadside and warning her to "pack up her traps and vo," meaning thereby an ultimatum that she must forever leave Volo.

And, paradoxical as it may seem, all of this happened within forty miles of Chicago.

Slips Away During Night.

After the vigilantes had dumped Mrs. Richardson into one of the various mud puddles which abound in the vicinity, the victim emerged from her oozy bath, went by a circuitous route back to her husband's store, conferred with him and slipped away during the night.

It was impossible to employ an automobile, buggy or other conveyance the night she left, and to remain over until daylight was out of the question, because members of the mob had warned Mrs. Richardson that if the sun rose upon her in Volo again they would tar and feather her.

Her husband witnessed the abduction of his wife, but, being unable to rise, could render her no assistance.

It is estimated that at least half the male population of Volo witnessed the hazing of Mrs. Richardson. In fact, it is said that the women who committed the outrage had previously taken their husbands and brothers into their confidence and that the proposition had been indorsed in family council.

It was expected that Will Dunnill, brother-in-law of Mrs. Richardson would interfere in her behalf, but he left Volo a few hours before the attack. Therefore, Mrs. Richardson's husband being disabled, and her brother-in-law being absent, she was without champion.

Husband Defends Her.

Just before Mrs. Richardson's flight from Volo, her husband gave her $1,500.

To a newspaper man, Richardson said:

"My wife is a good woman. She is not guilty of the charges the other women make. I won't believe it. A woman who has cared for me during my invalidism for the last nine years, who married me when I was an invalid, knowing there was no hope of my recovery, would not be guilty of what they charge.

"And to think that I was helpless to save her from the indignities which were heaped upon her. Her clothing was half torn from her and amid jeers and cheers and the throwing of mud and stones, she was ridden through the streets. It was an act of Middle-Age barbarism and hardly worthy of women of Illinois, who have just obtained the right to vote."

Meanwhile the women of Volo, who are supposed to have played the role of vigilantes, are calmly awaiting developments.

Husband Says She Kissed Count's Foot

Wife Brings Counter Charge That He Is Unduly Friendly With Stepmother.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Counter suits have been instituted in divorce proceedings by Harold D. Johnson, of the Colonial Life Insurance Company, and his wife, Mrs. Harriet L. Johnson, in the Supreme Court at White Plains.

The husband alleges that his wife is so infatuated with a certain Italian count that she frequently kissed his foot.

Mrs. Johnson alleges undue intimacy on the part of her husband with her stepmother, who is designated in the complaint as "one Anna J. R."

Johnson has entered a general denial to his wife's charges, while the wife's attorney, Mirabeau Towns, ridiculed the foot-kissing episodes complained of by Johnson.

No More Matrimony For Julia Sanderson

Former Wife of Tod Sloan Says She Will Never Tire of Single Life.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Never again." This was the terse reply of Julia Sanderson the actress, when she arrived here on the steamship Adriatic and was asked if the reports that she intended to marry again were true.

After dealing that solar plexus blow to the matrimonial rumor, the former wife of Tod Sloan gave out her ideas on marriage.

"When a girl is free and single she can have all the fun in the world," she said. "It is different when you are married. Nobody wants to talk to you. Nobody wants to see you. No more barriers for me."

Twin Boys' Skin Is Turning to Black

Eighteen-Month-Old Babies Are Suffering From Rare Malady Known as Hodgkin's Disease.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black. The disease is pseudo leucaemia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpurcles greatly diminished.

The twins are the children of Anthony Amato and they were born eighteen months ago. They were then white. Then their skin began growing dark.

Men's Farewell Kiss Mistaken for Fight

Ardent Osculation at Railroad Station Causes Commotion Among Passengers at Gate.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Smack!"

A score of persons hurrying to and fro in the Pennsylvania Railroad station yesterday stopped short.

"Smack!"

The sound was repeated. Turning in the direction from which it seemed to emanate, the curious among the persons in the station saw two well-dressed young men in each other's arms.

Both men were of athletic build and none of the persons who stopped to watch their antics from a distance cared to interfere. When it seemed as if the taller of the two was about to be thrown, they separated suddenly.

Then the gates to the train shed were thrown open and an announcer called upon all intending passengers bound for Jamaica, L. I., and points east to go aboard the waiting train.

That seemed to be a signal for a recommencement of hostilities.

"Smack!"

Sure enough. It sounded again distinctly, but there was no mystery about the cause this time.

"Good-bye, Pierre," said the taller man; "don't forget to write." And a fourth time they kissed before parting.

ROMANCE LEADS TO HEIR'S EXILE FROM GERMANY

Lieutenant in the Kaiser's Army Comes to Chicago and Joins U. S. Cavalry.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Because his love for a pretty German actress resulted in his squandering an inheritance of $32,000 in one year, Dr. Otto Gordon Goldfield, scion of a wealthy family, a lieutenant in the German cavalry and a graduate of Gottigen University, was forced by his father to come to the United States and join the army here as a private. The young German is now in barracks here.

Ruth Werner, German dancer and singer, charmed the young man when in Vienna. His grandfather had just died and left him $32,000. Within a year this was gone, and after numerous appeals to his father, Dr. Goldfield was forced to come here.

Told to Give Up Girl.

His father, who is the vice president of the Corporation of Hamburg, told him to give up the girl, his commission in the army and go to America.

"I fell in love with the girl," explained "Private" Goldfield, "and spent all my money on her. She was beautiful. If she wanted jewels I bought jewels. We were at Monte Carlo. She wanted to play the games. She was beautiful, and I loved her, so why should she not be happy?

"We were in Paris, at the Horse Show in London, and many other places. She had automobiles and fine horses.

"And then my money gave out. My parents refused to give me more, and my father forced me to come to the United States and try for a commission in the army.

"Will I go back?" responded Dr. Goldfield in answer to a question. "Yes, when I get my commission here I will go back and the girl and I will be married. But not until then. I must stay in the army here until I am a lieutenant.

Likes Open Air Life.

"It's the open air, and beautiful I like here more than anything else. That is why I have come to the West.

"And your soldiers—well, next to the French dragoons they are about the best in the world, in my opinion, and I have seen the troops of all the larger countries. That's why I am enlisting as a private here, for I like the life and will stay anyway until I get my naturalization papers."

Goldfield is twenty-five, and has served the last four years in the German cavalry as a lieutenant. He is an experienced horseman, and says he was the winner of the championship at the International Horse Show held in London two years ago, riding the horses from his father's stables.

Jacob Goldfield, father of the young army officer, besides being vice president of the Hamburg Corporation, is a well-known German jurist, as is also his brother, Rudolph Goldfield.

ATTORNEY SAYS TWO DEPUTIES ATTACKED HIM

Lawyer George W. Wood Swears Out Six Warrants for Williams Brothers After Fight.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Attorney George W. Wood this afternoon swore out six warrants against two Deputy Sheriffs, Leland Williams and Lon Williams, brothers. He charges the former with pointing a pistol at him, with carrying a concealed weapon, with assault and battery and with using opprobious language. Lon Williams is charged with assault and battery and the use of opprobrious language.

Mr. Wood claims that the two deputies attacked him unexpectedly, severely beat him with their fists and cursed him and that when he sought to resist them Leland Williams pulled a pistol and pointed it.

Leland Williams admits striking Attorney Wood, but denies that his brother took part in the fight. He also denies displaying the pistol.

The trouble started in the City Court when Deputy Leland Williams reproved Attorney Wood for telling a negro, who had been acquitted, that he could depart. The deputy contended that the negro could not leave until the Sheriff's officers said so.

Attorney Wood declared that no Deputy Sheriff could give him orders, and a lively exchange of words followed. The fight took place across the street from the courthouse.

Mr. Wood is vice president of the Macon Bar Association.

Attempts Suicide as His Wife Is Dying

Macon Husband Grows Despondent When He Is Unable to Care Properly for Invalid.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Despondent because he lacked funds to properly provide for his dying wife, William J. Bettis, formerly in the transfer business, attempted suicide by drinking laudanum and now is in a critical condition at the Macon Hospital.

Mrs. Bettis is a victim of pellagra and is in the last stages of the malady.

After being revived at the hospital, Bettis protested against the attention of the physicians. "I don't want to live if my wife is going to die," he said.

Macon Prepares For City Election

New Executive Committee To Be Named at Mass Meeting Next Thursday Evening.

MACON, Aug. 9.—The citizens of Macon will name a new City Executive Committee at a mass meeting to be held next Thursday night at the city auditorium. This virtually will open the active campaign for Mayor.

The present committee, W. D. Nottingham, chairman, will retire from office, having served for three years, a year longer than the term for which they were elected.

The committee will designate the date for the municipal election and will control its operation.

Alfalfa Growers Will Meet in Macon

Loring Brown Calls Meeting of State Association of Farmers for October 25.

MACON, Aug. 9.—There will be an organization meeting of the Georgia Alfalfa Growers' Association in Macon on Saturday, October 25, during the State Fair, one having been called by Loring Brown, of Smyrna, who is one of the most active workers in the alfalfa movement. It is proposed for the alfalfa growers to make exhibits at the fair, and the fair association will give liberal premiums, consisting of Holstein and Jersey cattle, Tamsworth and Duroc swine, and poultry. This will be the first alfalfa exhibit ever made in this State.

Waltz and Swo-Step Enough for Cordele

Chaperones Put Ban on Hugs, Tangos, Trots and Other New Steps.

CORDELE, Aug. 9.—The bunny hug, tango, turkey trot and other modern dances are entirely too immodest in the opinion of the fair sex of Cordele who are accustomed to the waxed floors. Like the slit skirt, such dances will probably not come in popular favor at any early time in this city.

Chaperons at local balls recently have positively forbidden the new dances, and the young folk, no matter how ardeatly, but perhaps secretly, they may desire to introduce them, must let the waltz and two-step still suffice.

AUGUSTA DIGEST SHOWS $1,000,000 TAX INCREASE

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—The county tax digest for 1913 has been completed and shows an increase of over $1,000,000 over 1912. Tax Receiver Steed has been extremely busy the past few weeks getting the digest ready. It shows, among other things, that negroes own nearly $500,000 worth of property in this county.

The digest for 1913 amounts to approximately $29,500,000.

Bibb Commissioners At Last Pay Voucher

Body Had Held Up Account, as It Questioned Grand Jury's Authority.

MACON, Aug. 9.—The County Commissioners to-day decided to pay the bill of $1,500 made by R. W. Jemison, a public accountant, for auditing the books of three of the county offices, pursuant to a contract with the Grand Jury.

For more than six weeks the Commissioners have refused to pay this bill, notwithstanding that it was ordered by two grand juries and approved by Judge Mathews. They took the position that grand juries had no legal right to make contracts, and especially contracts that would bind the Commissioners.

After a long discussion this morning it was finally decided, on a divided vote, to pay the voucher. Jemison claimed to have worked 100 days on the books. The Commissioners contended that he only worked 15 days.

Jury to Pass on A Bankruptcy Suit

Judge Speer 'Washes Hands' of Beach Manufacturing Company Case—Newman to Preside.

MACON, Aug. 9.—The petition of creditors to put the Beach Manufacturing Company, of Appling County, a half-million dollar company, in bankruptcy, will be heard before Judge Newman, of Atlanta, in the United States Court at Savannah on September 15. The case will be tried before a jury, a demand for jury trial having been made by the company. This is the first demand of that kind ever entered on the records of the court for this district, it being the custom to have the judge try bankruptcy matters.

Judge Speer requested Judge Newman to preside, stating that he would "wash his hands of the case" when the claim was made that he was disqualified because his son-in-law, A. H. Heyward, Jr., is one of the attorneys for the petitioning creditors. The petitioning creditors have claims that aggregate several thousand dollars.

Augusta Rejoicing At New Ballot Bill

Secrecy Enforced by Garlington Measure Expected to Stop Many Prevalent Abuses.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—The passage of the secret ballot bill by the Senate Friday was cheering news to Augustans. The bill was introduced in the House early during the present session by Representative Garlington.

The bill insures the secret ballot in all general and special elections in Augusta in the future. Of course, under the white primary system the secret ballot is not used, but in the general elections here the open ballot is the method.

Mayor Hayne was elected in December by the open ballot after his adherents had refused to allow him to enter the primary.

LATE REGISTRATION FOR LABORERS TO QUALIFY

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Beginning on Thursday, the registration books for the auditorium bond election will be kept open until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, until they are finally closed on August 15. An order to this effect has been issued by Mayor Richard J. Davant.

The request that the books be kept open until a late hour in the afternoon came from the Chamber of Commerce in order that working men might have a better opportunity of registering. Heretofore they have been closed at 2 o'clock each day.

FORT SCREVEN BAND TO PLAY FOR SAVANNAHANS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Arrangements have been made for public concerts Monday and Thursday evenings each week by the band at Fort Screven.

Because of objections raised by the Musicians' union, the Fort Screven band has been prevented from playing at Tybee this summer, previous similar objections not having been effective. This year the band was permitted to give only a few concerts at the pavilions.

JUDGE HENRY C. HAMMOND, of Superior Court at Augusta, who says that a dog is not a good dog unless it is ugly, and who has the same views about umbrellas. When he went on the bench years ago he affected an ugly Airdale terrier and a large ungainly, green sunshade. The terrier died and he got another, but he still has the original "shade." "Rags" is said to be one of the finest Airdale pups in the country.

The Judge, the dog and the umbrella are inseparable companions.

Harvard Negro Held As Pension Swindler

Secret Service Men Locate Him in Sparta and Arrest in Macon Follows.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Herman Watson Grant, a negro graduate of the Harvard School of Medicine, and also the graduate of a school of pharmacy and a law school in Washington, has been arrested here for the authorities in Alexandria, Va., where he is wanted on a charge of embezzlement. There is an indictment, found in the United States Court against him for stealing from the Pension Bureau, where he practiced in the claim department.

Grant jumped bond in Norfolk and Indianapolis, where he was arrested after twice failing to appear for trial in Alexandria. Secret service men located him in Sparta by means of a letter which he wrote to a relative in Augusta. He was conducting a drug store in Sparta.

$57,357 Increase in Tift County Returns

Tax Receiver Fletcher Finds 6,000 Acres of Land Not on the Books.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 9.—Tift County tax returns for the present year show an increase of $57,357 over the returns of last year. Figures were compiled by Tax Receiver George W. Fletcher. Three districts, Chula, Omega and Eldorado, show increases, while five, Tifton, Tyty, Brookfield, Brighton and Dosia, show a decrease.

An interesting fact concerning the returns was that nearly 6,000 acres of unreturned land were found by the tax receiver and placed upon the books. This in part accounts for the increase in returns. The increase in 1912 was $15,945.

SAVANNAH WIVES SUE BROTHERS FOR DIVORCE

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Alleging cruel treatment and statutory causes, Mrs. Frances Zipperer has filed suit for divorce against Robert Zipperer in the Superior Court of Chatham County. This is the second divorce petition filed by a Mrs. Zipperer in two weeks. Mrs. Aline Zipperer, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Frances Zipperer, filed the other.

Wants Civil Service For Public Works

Triennial Shake-up in Augusta Discourages Efficient Men, Says Commissioner.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Nisbet Wingfield, Commissioner of Public Works at Augusta, has come out in favor of the civil service plan for the employees of the public works department.

Now that the policemen and firemen are to be removed from politics, Mr. Wingfield thinks that the city should go a step further and throw the mantle of protection over efficient employees of the waterworks and other departments.

The public works department receives a shake-up triennially, just as every other department in the city, for a new Mayor gets in cevry three years and off go the heads of those who happened to vote against him.

Mr. Wingfield argues that Augusta wants just as competent men to look after the water supply as to patrol her streets or fight her fires.

Albany Bankers Ask Part of $50,000,000

Want Government Money to Aid in Moving Southwest Georgia Cotton Crop.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—That the Albany banks should receive a portion of the $50,000,000 Government money that is to be placed for the marketing of cotton in the South is the general feeling among Albany bankers. Two banks here are United States depositories and are called upon to furnish money for the marketing of cotton several weeks earlier than the banks in Macon, Atlanta and Savannah.

J. S. Davis, vice president of the Citizens First National Bank, has requested L. P. Hillyer, president of the Georgia Bankers' Association, to make a personal appeal to the proper authorities in Washington for a portion of this money to be used in Southwest Georgia.

CONFESSES TO SLAYING WHEN REFUSED PARDON

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Frank Collier, a negro whose application for pardon was refused by the Prison Commission in Atlanta, to-day broke down and made a complete confession of his responsibility in the murder of Lewis Robinson, another negro, pleading only that Robinson was attempting to cut him with a knife. Collier has heretofore maintained innocence.

AUGUSTA'S FAIR THIS FALL TO BE GREATER SHOW

Poultry and Live Stock Exhibits Will Again Be Feature of Annual Exposition.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Secretary Frank E. Beane, of the Georgia-Carolina Fair Association, announces that the fall fair at Augusta will be undertaken this year on a far more extensive scale than ever before. The fair will begin November 5 and continue through November 15.

It is expected that at least six of the farmers' clubs of the Savannah River Valley will have exhibits. Those announcing their intention of exhibiting are the Richmond County Agricultural Society, the Beech Island Club, the Schultz Hill Club, the Meriwether Club, the Clark's Hill Agricultural Club, the Aiken Club, and there will also be others. The clubs that win are awarded cash prizes of such amounts as to make competing worth while, and there is always lively competition.

The poultry exhibit by the Augusta Poultry Association is expected to be a big feature, as usual, and more than 2,000 birds are to be on exhibition. From all parts of this section and from a distance birds will be sent here for display, and handsome prizes are given the winners.

The live stock feature, which was such a big attraction at the last fair, will again be splendid. Last year was the first year that a great deal of attention was paid to the live stock display, and it improved the fair fully 50 per cent.

There will be cows, horses, hogs, goats and sheep of the best quality here.

There will be a better midway than ever before and Secretary Beane has already booked a great number of high class shows. He says that this year the Midway will be located between the main fair building and the live stock building, which is far more convenient than the arrangement in the past. The brass band this year is to be a splendid one. It is a band which was organized just prior to the Jamestown Exposition, and it played there and has played every week since that time.

Augusta W. C. T. U. Is On Trail of Saloons

Police Committee of City Council Refuses to Discuss Report It Has Prepared.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Secrecy is the word with regard to the action of the police committee here yesterday on the matter of enforcing the prohibition law. The City Council referred the matter of closing the saloons to the police committee. This committee had a meeting and the members refuse to discuss their report, although they admit having prepared one.

A few weeks ago Mrs. Mary Harris Armor and a large number of members of the Augusta W. C. T. U. appeared before the council and pleaded for the closing of the saloons. Nothing was done at this meeting and at a meeting held Monday night council was asked what it would do about the matter. A letter was read at that time from Mrs. A. M. Verdery, president of the local W. C. T. U., asking council to state in plain terms what action it would take. The matter was referred to the police committee.

Council has granted licenses to nearly 100 saloons at $500 each, and although there was no expressed agreement, still it was tacitly understood that they were to be allowed to sell liquor without molestation.

New Phone Concern In Central Georgia

Company Will Operate Exchanges in Seven Towns and Later Extend to Macon.

MACON, Aug. 9.—A new Middle Georgia telephone company, which proposes to operate in many of the towns in this section, as well as in Macon, has been organized here, with a paid-in capital of $200,000. J. A. Faucett, of Macon, is president; M. C. Arnold, of Danville, vice president, and H. M. Fleetwood, of Macon, secretary and treasurer.

The company will operate the exchanges in Dublin, Jeffersonville, Dudley, Irwinton, McIntyre, Toomsboro and Cary. Later the service will be extended to Macon, where it is proposed to make a cut of 50 per cent in the prevailing rates.

GIVES UP $1,200 OFFICE TO SEEK ONE PAYING $300

MACON, Aug. 9.—The most interesting political development of recent months in Macon is the announcement that W. H. Fetner, chairman of the Water Board, at a salary of $1,200, will resign that office and run for Council on Bridges Smith's ticket, Aldermen receive $300 per year.

Mr. Fetner was formerly in Council, but resigned two and a half years ago to run for the Water Board, to which he was elected, leading nine candidates.

It is said that it is the plan of the Administration party to run Mr. Fetner for Mayor two years hence, and for that reason his presence in Council was deemed desirable, so that he will stay more conspicuously in the public eye.

TAMPA BUSINESS MEN TOUR GEORGIA IN AUTO

MACON, Aug. 9.—A party of Tampa business men, who are touring Georgia in an automobile, are spending a day or so in Macon. They will leave to-morrow morning over the National Highway for Atlanta. In the party are T. C. W. M. and E. P. Taliaferro, C. E. Tuft, B. Martin Withers, W. E. Hunt and T. F. Gillett.

RANCOR OF WAR BASIS OF SUIT JUST DECIDED

Heirs of Seaborn Jones Win Long Fight for Large Tract of Land in Jenkins County.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—By a recent decision of the Supreme Court of Georgia the Chew family, prominent people of Eastern Georgia, have recovered 1,200 acres of rich farming land left by their grandfather, the late Seaborn A. Jones, and worth approximately $40,000. The land is located in Jenkins County, near Millen.

Before the Civil War Seaborn A. Jones was one of the wealthiest in this section and was a foremost citizen of Burke County and Waynesboro. Jones married a Northern woman and from this union there were two boys and two girls. When he made his will shortly after the Civil War his heart was heavy and his hatred of the North was intense because of the defeat of the Southern arms.

Forbids Northern Residence.

He stipulated that if his wife should carry his children into the North to live, or if they remained on a visit above Mason and Dixon's line for more than three months at a time, the mother should no longer be guardian for the children.

One of the daughters, Mary, was wooed and won by William H. Chew. The property of the late Seaborn A. Jones was divided equally among his four children and Mrs. Chew decided that she wanted her husband as her trustee instead of the trustee her father had provided under the will.

Chew received an order from the court to be trustee for his wife. To the Chews were born three children, Benjamin A., Hull S. and Ruth.

The property had been left by Seaborn Jones to certain trustees for his daughters, which they were to hold in trust for their use during their lives and at their deaths to their children in fee simple.

William H. Chew sold the land to a Baltimore concern that in turn sold it to W. O. Wadley and thus it remained until the death of Mrs. Mary Jones Chew in 1906, when action was begun by her children to recover the land which their grandfather had intended for them to have.

Sale Declared Illegal.

The suit has been in the courts ever since. It was won by the Chew heirs in the Superior Court of Jenkins County and has been won in the Supreme Court.

Wadley simply purchased land from William H. Chew which Chew had no right to sell and the sale was declared to be illegal despite the fact that Judge Gibson, in chambers at Augusta in March, 1873, passed an order authorizing the sale.

The courts have held that William H. Chew has the right to sell only a life interest in the estate owned by his wife and he was not entitled to sell the realty because it was left to the mother in trust to be held for her children and to be awarded to them in fee simple.

The case created much interest in this section. Pierce Brothers, W. K. Miller and Judge Horace M. Holder represented the Chew heirs, and Judge A. L. Miller, of Macon, represented Wadley.

Empire Life Building Will Be 17 Stories

Augusta Skyscraper Must Be Ready for Occupancy October 1, 1914. Has 250 Offices.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—The Empire Life Insurance Company's building committee has decided on a seventeen-story building in this city, work to commence just as soon after October 1 as the contractors can tear down and remove the present buildings. The new building will have a frontage of 75 feet on Broad street and will run back 125 feet toward Reynolds. There will be 250 offices, three elevators and twelve main floors. A basement and a tower of four stories will make up the additional five stories.

The architects are G. Lloyd Preacher, of this city, and W. L. Stoddard of New York. The building is to be ready for occupancy by October 1, 1914.

BIBB COUNTY JURY LISTS TO BE REVISED

MACON, Aug. 9.—The biennial revision of the jury lists of Bibb County will begin Monday morning, and the new list will be in readiness for use at the fall terms of the courts. W. A. Goodyear and A. R. Willingham are the new members of the jury commission, having been appointed by Judge Mathews.

Augusta's Police To Be Governed By Civil Service

Many Burglaries and Factional Fighting Cause Change in Method of Administration.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Beginning the first of next January the policemen and firemen of Augusta will be under the control of a civil service board.

Just now the department is under fire because of the many burglaries in the city and also because of the refusal of the head of the department to enforce the prohibition law. The civil service board will take the place of the present commission. All of the present members of the force will be retained without examination, but there will be an examination in case of promotion to sergeant's or lieutenant's places.

Under the civil service plan the men are prohibited from taking an active part in politics. It is specifically stated in the act, however, that no policeman or fireman shall be appointed, reduced or removed because of his political beliefs.

City Council on the first Monday in September next will choose a board of civil service commissioners, each to have a term of five years. There will be five members of the board.

The examination will be purely on a competitive basis, the applicants shall be between 21 and 36 years of age and the competitors shall be admitted to the department in the order of their standing in the examinations.

Richmond County to Quit Building Roads

Policy Henceforth Will Be to Keep Highways Already Constructed in Better Shape.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Richmond County is to quit building roads. This was decided at a meeting of the board of commissioners last week. This county now has hundreds of miles of the finest roads in Georgia and there are many more miles of roads built by the county that are not so good.

The policy of the commissioners of roads and revenues in the future will be to have the roads already built better cared for and stop building more.

Roads go out of Augusta into practically every section of the county except one, down the Savannah River valley into the rich alluvial lands of the hay farmers.

BIBB TO HAVE 1,000 ACRES PLANTED IN ALFALFA

Middlebrooks, the county farm demonstrator, and the Bibb County Agricultural Society. At a meeting this morning of the society enough farmers pledged themselves to insure the cultivation of at least the thousand acres in the winter feed crops. Mayor John T. Moore's phenomenal success with alfalfa has encouraged the farmers in this section to take an interest in the crop.

MACON GREETS JUNIOR ORDER OF MECHANICS

Benjamin J. Symons of Savannah Will Probably Be Chosen to Head the Council.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Large delegations from all councils of the Junior Order United American Mechanics in Georgia will attend the State convention of the order to be held in Macon Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at which convention Benjamin J. Symons, of Savannah, will be elected State councilor.

Symons will succeed Judge Walter W. Shappard, the present State councilor, who is also a member of one of the Savannah councils. That two Savannah members of the order should successively hold the highest office in the order in the State is thought to be a high compliment to the personnel of the Savannah organization.

The convention, which is held every two years, will convene in Odd Fellows' Hall.

At this convention it is thought that John Stofer, of Savannah, will be indorsed for the position of national councilor. At the last national convention, which was held in June at Fabyans, N. H., Stofer was elected national council warden, and his friends think he is eminently qualified to fill the higher office.

At present the officers of the State council are Judge Walter W. Shappard, of Claxton and Savannah, State councilor; Benjamin S. Symons, of Savannah, State vice councilor; T. D. Ridley, of Macon, junior past State councilor; J. E. Lovelace, of Atlanta, State secretary; O. H. Puckett, of Atlanta, State treasurer; A. B. Coogler, of Riverside, State conductor; John W. Kersey, of Macon, State warden; E. S. Horton, of Macon, State outside sentinel; Rev. W. E. Porter, of Brunswick, State chaplain.

Eighth District Physicians Will Hold an Interesting Session at Elberton.

ELBERTON, Aug. 9.—Pellagra will be a special theme of a series of papers to be read by some of the leading physicians of this section when the Eighth District Medical Association holds its annual meeting in Elberton August 20.

Elberton is planning for the entertainment of the visitors and promises splendid social features. There will be practically the entire Clarke County Medical Society in attendance.

The officers of the association of the district are: Dr. W. T. Davis, of Covington, president; Dr. C. C. King, of White Plains, vice president; Dr. Edward M. Coleman, of Athens, secretary and treasurer; and Dr. I. H. Goss, of Athens, district counselor, of the State Medical Association.

The memorial was erected several months ago with funds raised by the children of the Confederacy. Colonel Sanders was one of the most beloved men in this entire section.

The life-size statue, in sitting position, was made in Italy and has just arrived. The monument is one of the most beautiful in the State, with marble columns and fountains. Six little grandchildren of Colonel Sanders will likely lift the veil.

White Way Proposed On Brunswick Street

Landowners and Merchants to Form Stock Company and Install Lighting System.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 9.—The efforts made the past week to put in a white way along Newcastle street no doubt will culminate in this improvement being made in the near future.

It is the intention of those working for the white way to form a stock company composed of the landowners and merchants along the street, who will be called upon to take an amount of stock on the basis of the frontage of their buildings. The movement has met with considerable encouragement, and it is now considered a certainty that the principal business street of the city will take on this improvement in the next two months.

Pleasure Tours Ends With News of Death

Mother of Dublin Lad Killed by Lightning With Gay Party in New York.

DUBLIN, Aug. 9.—Mrs. H. M. Stanley, mother of John Stanley, the 13-year-old son of the State Commissioner of Commerce and Labor, who was killed by lightning at Dublin Thursday, was in New York with her daughter at the time the accident occurred. Mrs. Stanley and daughter were members of a party organized by the Rev. L. J. Ballard, pastor of the Albany Methodist Church, to take an extensive pleasure trip.

The party left the first of the month. Besides Mrs. Ballard, it was composed of the following: Mrs. Ballard, Miss Ray Ballard, Master Lee Ballard and Miss Catharine Muse of this city; Mrs. J. E. Smith and daughter, of Dublin, who joined the party at Macon, and Mrs. H. M. Stanley and daughter, of Decatur, who joined them at Atlanta.

The party went to New York by way of Chattanooga, Cincinnati, Detroit, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and Montreal, Canada.

The party was at the Marlborough Hotel, New York, when the pleasures were sadly broken into by the news of Mrs. Stanley's little boy's sudden death at Dublin. The party had planned to visit Philadelphia, going thence to Washington and then down the Potomac to Norfolk and home by rail, arriving home about August 20.

Killing of Bachelor Mystifies Officers

Despite Strong Alibi, Tom Bullard Is Held for Death of Farmer Mack Spain.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Whether or not Mack Spain, the eccentrac bachelor farmer of Mexico, a small place west of Waycross, was really murdered and robbed or committed suicide in a fit of despondency, is a question that has arisen in view of the alibi offered by Tom Bullard at the preliminary hearing given him this week, but in spite of which he was bound over to the fall term of Superior Court.

Bullard asked a friend to kill Spain and get all his money, but claims the statebent was made merely as a joke. Spain's body was found in a small pond 2 miles from his home three weeks after his disappearance. Bullard himself found the body, which fact argued in his favor, although the testimony of witnesses was to the effect that no one could have seen the body in the pond without having had previous knowledge of its whereabouts.

A careful search has so far failed to find any of the money the farmer had with him and at his home.

The other was found within a mile of Rock Church. It was of 40-gallon capacity.

According to the information received by Mr. Camp, the first still belonged to Mitchell Rhodes and the second to S. P. West. He will have warrants issued for the arrest of these two.

He declares that the Georgia sunlight brings out with remarkable clearness and exactness every detail of the motion pictures. Heretofore most of the moving picture studios have been located in California and in New York. Mr. Seay, who is a native of Rome, is now confident that Georgia is the best place for the work in which he is engaged.

Too Much Money to Spend in Waycross

City's Income More Than Pays All Expenses—Tax Rate To Be Cut Down.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—With a $780 appropriation for twelve months, the committee on parks and cemeteries of Waycross City Council expended only $1.30, according to the financial statement for the first six months of the year just issued.

Practically every department of the city is keeping within its budget, and will end the year with a balance to its credit. The engineering department, with $14,454 available, has spent only $6,611.96. Out of an appropriation of $10,280 the fire department has spent but $3,855.38.

The revised estimate of income places the total for 1913 at $156,442.43. The estimate when the year's appropriations were made was $151,099. The expected increase will therefore leave the city a neat balance to start 1914 with.

In addition to these expenditures the city is spending $100,000 in permanent improvements, this money coming from a bond issue voted last year.

Griffin Rector Is Ptomaine Victim

Rev. Clayton Earle Wheat Dangerously Ill From Food Eaten in Atlanta Restaurant.

GRIFFIN, GA., Aug. 9.—Sorrow prevails here this afternoon over the sudden illness of the Rev. Clayton Earle Wheat, rector of St. George Episcopal Church, who is to-day seriously ill with ptomaine poisoning contracted from food eaten in an Atlanta restaurant yesterday afternoon.

The Rev. Mr. Wheat is greatly beloved in Griffin and his illness is all the more distressing because of his recent decision to leave here for a parish in Hingham, Mass. Hundreds of citizens of Griffin in a written request petitioned him to recall his decision and remain here.

It was in preparation for his departure that he went to Atlanta yesterday with his mother, Mrs. Cornette Wheat, to arrange some important business affairs and while there ate the food that resulted in his poisoning. At this time both of them are under the immediate care of physicians and nurses and grave fears are felt for them.

$5,498 Suit Brought For Rescuing Dredge

Owners of Tug Columbia Dragged the Maryland Out of Beaufort Harbor.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Claiming $5,498.50 damages and salvage, a libel has been filed in the United States Court by R. S. Salas and F. H. Meader against the dredge Maryland.

Salas, as chief owner and president of the Standard Fuel and Supply Company, and Meader, as master of the tugboat Columbia, claim this sum of money for time, labor and material expended by the tug in hauling the dredge in and out of the harbor at Beaufort, S. C., and claim $2,500 of this amount for the work of salvage or rescue done by the tug.

The dredge, which is said in the libel to be worth $50,000, was towed out of New York harbor on May 27 last by the tug under contract between the Home Dredging Company and the Standard Fuel and Supply Company, the latter being the owners of the tug. The contract price for taking the dredge from New York to Savannah was $1,500.

The dredge Maryland is now in the Savannah River. The libel will be tried at the coming term of the United States Court.

The libel recites a full account of the rescue of the dredge on her way down the coast.

SENTENCE OF YEAR FOR CONVICTED GUN TOTERS

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Judge John C. McDonald has shown that he proposes to stick to the twelve-month sentence for persons found guilty of carrying concealed weapons. Clifford Johnson, a negro, is the latest to find that it means a year's job with the county chaingang to carry a gun. Hardly a case of this kind has been disposed of in City Court without the twelve-month sentence being imposed, and the gun-toting habit is said to be declining rapidly as a result.

WAYCROSS PAVING LAWS HIT ATLANTIC COAST LINE

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Because its tracks pierce the heart of Waycross and are paralleled in almost every instance by some of the main streets, the Atlantic Coast Line is being put to heavy expense by the sidewalk and street paving campaign. The latest paving ordinance, covering Plant avenue from Butler street to the city limits, will cause the Coast Line to pay a third of the cost for the entire distance, the avenue running along the road's right of way. The other portion of Plant that is paved is of brick and the Coast Line paid a third of that.

'SHAKING ROCK' ONE OF STATE'S UNIQUE FREAKS

Slight Wind Makes Huge Bowlder in Oglethorpe County Swing Gently as Baby's Crib.

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 9.—One of the natural curiosities of Georgia is to be found in Oglethorpe County half a mile from the courthouse in Lexington. Hundreds have visited Lexington for the sole purpose of seeing the "shaking rock."

In the immediate vicinity of the rock there are many huge granite bowlders. From points near by a number of pieces of granite have been obtained for monuments and buildings. The base to a large shaft erected at Chattanooga was hauled from the quarry here by a special train. Close to "shaking rock" the grounds are beautiful for picnics and dinner parties, and many from Lexington, Athens and other places take advantage of the grounds for occasions of this nature.

"Shaking rock" weighs about twenty tons. It is poised on a triangular base upon another large rock. With several persons seated upon its summit, the mammoth piece of stone can be moved by a slight push. A pressure of this sort sets it moving back and forth a distance of two or three inches.

For 50 years it has been thus standing, and until a few years ago, when the point at the base had become worn, the rock would move backward and forward twice this distance. A wind a little stronger than the ordinary summer zephyr blowing upon the rock from a certain angle would set it to rocking.

The rock is upon the property of Dr. W. H. Reynolds, on the estate formerly owned by Governor George R. Gilmer. The people of Lexington take a pride in showing the peculiar freak of nature.

Ashworth, who has only one leg, requested permission to go into another room and change his clothes, which the bailiff granted. WIFE QUITTER NOW CHARGED WITH BIGAMY

Search Is Made for Harry Smith, Accused of Having Family in Cincinnati, Ohio.

DURHAM, N. C., Aug. 9.—One of the greatest sensations that ever was known in this city is now drawing to a close, as Harry A. Smith, is charged wife abandonment, is now confronted with a charge of bigamy.

Several days ago Smith was arrested in Rome, Ga., charged with abandoning his wife, formerly Miss Rosalind Wright, who is a member of a prominent family of this city. He was brought back to the city to be tried, and when the time for the case to be completed came a peaceful settlement was made by the parties concerned. Smith promised to take care of his wife and left this city with her for Richmond, Va.

Hardly had the couple left Durham before a message was received here from Cincinnati stating that Smith, up until a few weeks past, had been an employee of a firm there.

After being discharged he left Cincinnati, supposedly in search of another position.

A short while afterward he reached this city and became acquainted with Miss Rosalind Wright. A quiet marriage followed and the couple went on an extended honeymoon, the bride's money being used.

The message from Cincinnati states that Smith has a wife living there and a 9-month-old boy named Banard. Another message unsigned was received by the Chief of Police of Durham, stating that Smith had made a recent visit to Atlanta, and that while there he became engaged to a young woman. No names were were given in the message.

A search is now being made for Smith, who is supposed to be in Richmond, Va., with his Durham wife. The girl's friends here are making every effort to locate the couple.

Griffin Is Fighting To Hold to Station

Delegations Are Sent to Capital to Protest Against Removal to South Georgia.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 9.—The citizens of Griffin and this section have not been unaware of the efforts to take from them the State Experiment Station as evidence of their alertness during the present disturbance over the effort to move it to South Georgia.

Griffin sent from day to day as many as twenty men to Atlanta to appear before the legislative committees and present the claim of Griffin in the matter. The citizens of this county years ago generously gave to the State the land to establish the station and it would manifestly be unjust and unfair now to take the station from Griffin.

It may be taken for granted that Griffin and Spalding County citizens are ready for a good stiff fight over the matter before ever consent will be gained for the station to be moved.

LIND CALLS ADMIRAL IN CONFERENCE AT VERA CRUZ

Ambassador Sends Mysterious Message to Commander of Fleet for Meeting Immediately on His Arrival at the Mexican Port.

Huerta Maintains Iron-Hand Attitude in Spite of International Menace From Revolutionary Armies and Threatened Coercion.

Special Cable to The American.

VERA CRUZ, MEX., Aug. 9.—John E. Lind, special envoy to Mexico, arrived here at 1 o'clock this afternoon on the battleship New Hampshire. He was at once transferred to the battleship Louisiana.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 9.—Captain Snowden, of the battleship New Hampshire, at the direction of John Lind, Special Ambassador from President Wilson to Mexico, to-day sent the following wireless to Admiral Fletcher, commander of the flotilla of United States warships in the harbor here:

"Governor Lind wishes to see the United States Consul and Admiral Fletcher immediately upon his arrival at Vera Cruz Saturday. Governor Lind will not go to Mexico City until Sunday."

Sensational rumors were circulated as to the cause for the conference. The New Hampshire will probably arrive this evening.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Maintaining his iron hand attitude in spite of international menace from revolutionary armies and threatened coercion, Provisional President Huerta to-day continued his diplomatic battle with the United States by giving orders to draft another note of protest against the coming of Special Ambassador Lind, unless the United States recognizes Mexico or halts Mr. Lind before he arrives in this city.

Situation Is Tense.

A tense situation exists here pending the arrival of Mr. Lind, who has been retarded by the State Department at Washington.

Huerta's hope that defiance of the United States might break down the revolutionary spirit in the north seems to have been futile, according to a message from General Venustiano Carranza, leader of the rebels.

This was a reply to overtures to Carranza to join his forces to the regular army in the event of a "foreign invasion." However, Huerta has gained fresh followers among the radical element by his defiance of President Wilson. Supporters of the provisional president charge that the United States is preparing to act as it did in Cuba.

Sensational reports were current today relative to the diplomatic mission of General Felix Diaz to Tokio. Ostensibly Diaz is going to thank the Japanese Government for its representation at the Mexican centennial, but the belief is growing that Japan has consented to make a treaty with Mexico, and that Diaz is really a special ambassador. This treaty, it is reported, has to do with a league of common interests and not with commercial right. It follows the movement of the Government to invite 50,000 Japanese emigrants here to colonize the state of Morelos, which has been nearly depopulated by the rebellion.

Insists on Recognition.

Whether Huerta has any more cards to play in his diplomatic fight against outside interference with Mexican affairs is a question known only to the provisional President and his closest advisers. Huerta insists on "recognition and no parley," but the Government is not in condition to enforce his threat by war.

The national treasury is nearly depleted, and the army material of the country has been thinned to a minimum by three years of revolution.

By diplomacy, however, he might still be able, by playing upon the Latin-American republics' fear of annexation and upon the hostility of foreign powers to the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine, to force the United States into a compromising position.

Even Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy here, is not acquainted with the details of Mr. Lind's mission. He has so informed the Mexican Foreign Minister.

UNDERWOOD IS MENTIONED FOR SENATE PLACE

Alabama Faces Political Problem as Result of the Death of J. F. Johnston.

HOBSON ALREADY IN RACE

Amendment Providing for Direct Election Causes Doubt as How to Fill Vacancy.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Alabama to-day faces a political problem which is exciting the keenest interest all over the country. With the death of Joseph Forney Johnston, senior United States Senator from Alabama, gossip is rife concerning his successor. Conjecture has been complicated as a result of the recent amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for the popular election of United States Senators.

There is much more at stake than that, however.

The death of Senator Johnston has created an acute situation in the National Senate, where the tariff promoters have but a bare Democratic working majority with which to pass the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill. It has become imperative that every Democratic seat be filled.

O'Neal Asks Advice.

A vacancy exists. Political leaders in the State realize the gravity of the situation and it is for this reason alone that Governor O'Neal telegraphed to Attorney General McReynolds to ascertain the proper procedure in naming a successor. A sealed reply has been received, but its contents are being withheld by Attorney General Brickell until the dead Senator has been buried.

In the meantime politicians are guessing. Some, who keep in close touch with affairs of state, hold that the Governor may make an appointment; while others are of the decided opinion that no such appointment can be made under the present Federal law without the ratification of the Legislature.

In this connection it is pointed out the present Alabama Legislature even if called together might not be able to elect because of existing vacancies.

Oscar Underwood, the floor leader in the House, and framer of the present tariff law, is being most prominently mentioned as a successor to Senator Johnston. John B. Knox, a warm friend and supporter of Governor O'Neal, and for a long time prominent in Alabama politics, is another whom the political forecasters are watching closely.

Although Mr. Knox, who is summering in Massachusetts, has thus far given no indication of being an aspirant, yet it is said to be practically certain that he will be in the race. He was defeated three years ago by Senator Bankhead, junior Alabama Senator.

There are still others also. Frank P. Glass, editor of The Birmingham News, and one of the "Original Wilson men," is thought to have a splendid chance at the senatorship in case Governor O'Neal is permitted to appoint, as he is one of O'Neal's warmest friends. J. Thomas Heflin, present Congressman, is another, as are also William D. Jelks, former Governor, and Captain Frank S. White, one of Birmingham's most prominent lawyers.

Of course, there is another possibility—Richmond Pearson Hobson, hero of the Merrimac—who had been conducting a most vigorous campaign to succeed Senator Johnston. Of course Hobson will continue his race—he will not receive the appointment from Governor O'Neal, for they are bitter political enemies.

Former Governor Comer may make a race against Hobson. Should this happen Alabama will see one of the most spectacular political fights in the history of the State.

Slit Skirts Furnish Mosquito Clan With Choicest Barbecue

Trainload of Winsome Stenographers and Milliners Have to Tramp Through Stegomyia Belt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"All those in favor of slit skirts, please stand up."

Millions of full grown mosquitoes and three or four little fellers were rushing wildly out of their apartment houses on he Flushing Meadows, about 7 o'clock last night, and took part in the most rollicking barbecue ever held in the East.

Right in the middle of the salt grass waste were five cars of a Long Island Railroad train, stalled. The lights were out, men were running up and down shouting orders and Flushing was two miles away. After the train had stood for a few minutes, out of the passenger cars poured the choicest morsels of humanity that Mr. and Mrs. Culex Pungens and the little Pungenses ever saw. There were stenographers, typewriters, cashiers, millinery attaches and buxom matrons. Slit skirts were numerous.

In an endless procession the five hundred and more suburbanites trailed over the ties toward Flushing. There is some style in the mosquito belt and every member of the family seemed to know at once which of the passengers was dressed a la mode. The squeals and slaps of the fair ones as they tried to stop the onslaught sounded like a tattoo.

The procession lasted for more than two hours and when the last stenographer reached home a unanimous vote was taken declaring the mosquito a pest. Of course, there were some men along, but what self-respecting mosquito would bother with them at such a time?

ADMITS HE'S DECENT IN ANSWERING MARRIAGE AD

YONKERS, Aug. 9.—Reginald P. Shennan, editor of The Rye Courier, already has received one reply to the advertisement inserted in his paper by a "gentlewoman with large tract of land not far from Port Chester," who is seeking "an unselfish, decent, self-supporting man for a husband."

He turned the letter over to the advertiser, whose identity is being guarded carefully. The letter bore a Brooklyn postmark.

AUTOS EMPTY CHURCHES, SAY COUNTRY PREACHERS

MANHATAN, KANS., Aug. 9.—The dwindling of the congregations of country churches, due to the new era of automobiles, which makes it easy for the rural residents to attend services in nearby towns and cities, will be discussed at the Conference of Rural Leaders, July 21 to 25, at the Kansas Agricultural College. Members of the organization declare that Kansas now has about 1,200 abandoned churches in the farming districts.

FRANK OR CONLEY? STILL QUESTION

Issue Firmly Drawn Between Two Men

Famous Case to Solve Mystery of Slaying of Mary Phagan Enters Its Third Week With Public Opinion Constantly Shifting.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The second week of the trial of Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan in the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26, came to a close Saturday noon.

The State's case has been entirely made up in its primary aspects, and the defense has gone into its story of the great crime sufficiently to make clear both its theory and probable line of pleading.

The public, as the case has progressed, has been swayed this way and that, and to-day the remarkable mystery of Mary Phagan's untimely and tragic end remains, in hundreds of minds, quite as much of a mystery as ever.

The Battle Is a See-Saw.

The State has had its good days and its bad days, and the defense has met the same fate. At times things have seemed dismally dark and gloomy for Frank, while at other times the clouds apparently have lifted from about him decidedly.

This much has been made clear:

Either Leo Frank will be shown to be responsible for the death of Mary Phagan, or Jim Conley will.

The one is the heart and soul of the State's contention, and the other is the heart and soul of the defense's contention.

Frank is battling not only to clear himself but to convict Conley.

Conley is battling not only to clear himself, but to convict Frank.

The only difference is that Conley, although not yet indicted, expects to be convicted as an accessory after the fact of the murder, in any event, whereas Frank, already indicted, expects to come absolutely clear and free of all possible connection with the crime.

The one has a heretofore good name to restore in all of its unblemished integrity, the other has merely his present reputation for criminal inclination to preserve against sinister enlargement.

The issue has been sharply and indelibly drawn—it is either Leo Frank's life for Mary Phagan's, or it is Jim Conley's.

The State has shown, or has endeavored to show the following things:

THAT Frank, shortly after noon on April 26, and before five minutes past noon, lured Mary Phagan, for an immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory, and there, because she would not yield to his desires and demands, he knocked her down and immediately thereafter strangled her to death with a small cord, about one-eighth of an inch in thickness.

THAT after strangling her, Frank remained with her dead body until after a girl caller in his office had departed, when he tiptoed to the front of the floor whereupon the murder had been consummated, and secured the help of a negro sweeper, Jim Conley, employed about the place, to dispose of the body.

THAT Conley, under the direction of Frank, wrapped the dead body in a piece of heavy cloth, carried it to the elevator, and thence on the elevator to the basement, where it was placed in an obscure corner in the rear, later to be found by Newt Lee, a negro night watchman, generally held guiltless of direct connection with the crime itself.

THAT Frank, after hiding the body, with Conley's assistance, then induced Conley to write and place beside the dead girl certain illiterate notes fixing the crime, in so far as they might, upon some other person than either Frank or Conley, and that Frank for Conley's services, paid him the sum of $2.50, but not until he had first paid him $200, which was withdrawn under promise to restore that sum later.

THAT Frank had an understanding with Conley, whereby Conley was to return to the factory later in the afternoon on Saturday and burn the body in the basement furnace, but that Conley

Jack London Puts Joke on His Appendix

Novelist Tells the Latest on Former Part of Himself and What's Left.

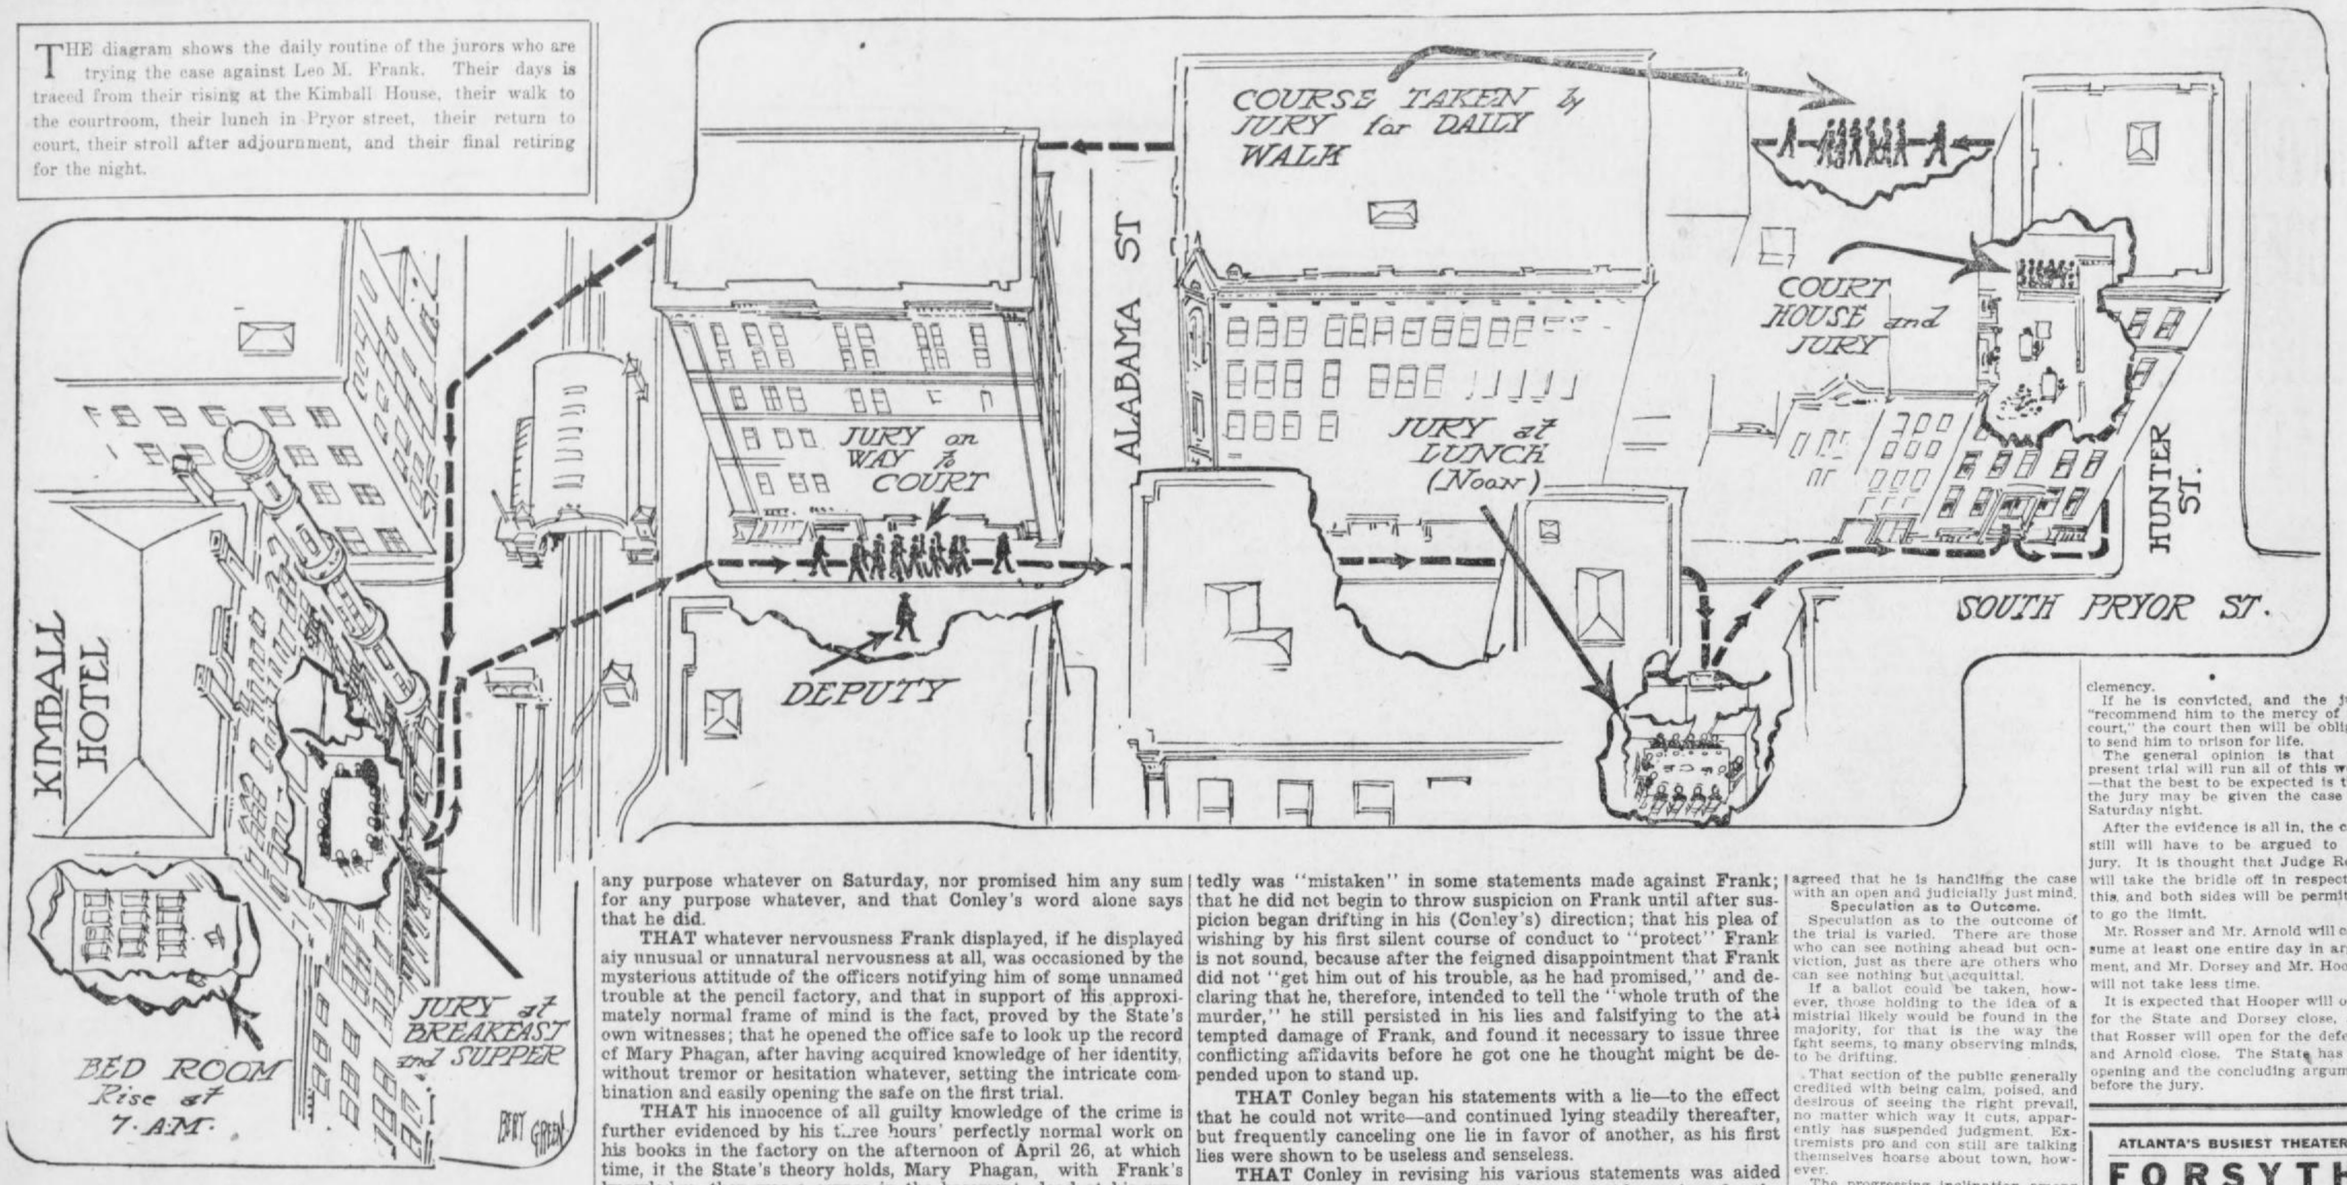
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Here is the latest joke Jack London, the famous author, is telling on himself:

London was operated on recently for appendicitis. After the ordeal the surgeon held up the severed appendix in his fingers for the patient to see. The author looked at it thoughtfully then grinned and said:

"It was a case of all alone in London, wasn't it, doc?"

FRANK'S CHARACTER IS NEW BATTLE GROUND

THE diagram shows the daily routine of the jurors who are trying the case against Leo M. Frank. Their days is traced from their rising at the Kimball House, their walk to the courtroom, their lunch in Pryor street, their return to court, their stroll after adjournment, and their final retiring for the night.



DEFENSE HAS TO CLEAR NAME OF TWO CHARGES

went to sleep in the afternoon and neglected to perform this service.

THAT Frank, called to the factory early in the morning of Sunday, April 27, displaying great nervousness, and while on his way to the factory without having been informed of the dead girl's identity, declined, or at least failed and neglected, to look upon her features at the undertaker's, notwithstanding the fact that he later admitted her identity without having seen her dead.

THAT at the factory, at the place of the crime, his nervousness continued, and that next morning (Monday), when called to the police station for further questioning, he had secured counsel to defend him, notwithstanding the fact that he then had not been placed under arrest.

THAT after having been placed under arrest and indicted for murder, he persistently refused to meet his chief accuser, Jim Conley, face to face, or to discuss any features of the charges lodged against him.

THAT in addition to the crime of murder, as set forth in the indictment, Frank is a dissolute character, practicing the most depraved and perverted crimes with persons of loose morals, and that Jim Conley, on more than one occasion, acted as "lookout" for Frank on the first floor of the factory, while unspeakable and unmentionable things were being enacted above.

The State, in setting up the foregoing allegations, summoned as its principal and all-important witness, Jim Conley, who already made public affidavits to all of the charges set forth, except the one of perversion and the exact time of the crime charged.

Conley, after four or five changed statements theretofore made, set up in his final statement on the stand many other seemingly minor dtails not contained in any previous statement.

The foregoing is the State's case in completed form, except that it yel will have the right to produce witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's witnesses; the defense, in its turn, having the right to a further rebuttal of the State's rebuttal.

The defense has contended, or will contend:

THAT Conley's story is a tissue of frightful lies from start to finish, and that he himself really committed the crime charged against Frank, and that the defense will so demonstrate.

THAT Mary Phagan was not killed as early as 12:05 on the afternoon of April 26, but was, as a matter of fact, killed at least fifteen minutes later than that, if, as a matter of still further fact, she wa snot disabled hopelessly about that time, and actually killed even later.

THAT if she was not killed previous to 12:05, as set forth, by the State, that contention being uncompromisingly claimed by the State's own witnesses—Jim Conley and Monteen Stover—then Conley's story is impossible and absurd, and Monteen Stover's evidence entirely negligible.

THAT Frank did not lure Mary Phagan to the rear of the second floor, or to any other place, for any purpose whatever, and that she was only on the second floor sufficiently long to get her pay from the hands of Frank, and that she immediately thereafter left the second floor, going down to the first floor to meet her death at the hands of Conley.

THAT Frank never asked for or received the assistance of Jim Conley in disposing of the body of Mary Phagan, because he was in utter and entire ignorance of the murder until apprised of it Sunday morning.

THAT Frank had nothing whatever to do with the framing of the nates found beside the dead girl, and that in support of such a charge the State has only the word of Jim Conley, intensely interested in shifting the blame fron his own guilty shoulders and on to the shoulders of Frank.

THAT Frank never paid Jim Conley any sum of money for any purpose whatever on Saturday, nor promised him any sum for any purpose whatever, and that Conley's word alone says that he did.

THAT whatever nervousness Frank displayed, if he displayed aiy unusual or unnatural nervousness at all, was occasioned by the mysterious attitude of the officers notifying him of some unnamed trouble at the pencil factory, and that in support of his approximately normal frame of mind is the fact, proved by the State's own witnesses; that he opened the office safe to look up the record of Mary Phagan, after having acquired knowledge of her identity, without tremor or hesitation whatever, setting the intricate combination and easily opening the safe on the first trial.

THAT his innocence of all guilty knowledge of the crime is further evidenced by his three hours' perfectly normal work on his books in the factory on the afternoon of April 26, at which time, it the State's theory holds, Mary Phagan, with Frank's knowledge, then was a corpse in the basement, dead at his murderous hands.

THAT Frank, instead of declining to look upon the face of the dead girl at the undertaker's while on his way to the factory Monday morning, did, as a matter of fact, look upon her face and recognized her.

THAT Frank had no counsel until after his retention at police headquarters had been publicly made known, and when he was notoriously under suspicion, and that even then counsel was sent to him by some outside friends, and did not come at his invitation paid off by Frank upstairs, hit her a violent blow upon her head, snatched her purse from her hand, and at once threw her body into the cellar by way of a nearby open space, for fear of someone coming into the building; that likely the blow first delivered was not sufficient to kill, and that her actual death was hastened, or may have been hastened later in the cellar below, by means of strangulation, there being always there an abundance of the very cord employed or supposed to have been employed in that act. or by his direction.

THAT Frank's refusal to meet Jim Conley, his lying accuser, was natural and proper in the circumstances, and that such a course was persisted in by the particular advice of his counsel; that Frank was under no moral or legal obligation to discuss his case with Conley, or with any other witness for the State.

THAT Frank, far from being a dissolute character, is a man of unblemished integrity, happily married; that he never has practiced depraved and perverted crimes, because such things would be and are entirely foreign to his nature; that he never has associatd with immoral persons anywhere, at any time; that neither Jim Conley nor any other person ever acted as "lookout" for him for any purpose whatsoever—and that every monstrous and untrue charge or suggestion of immorality and degeneracy rests absolutely and finally upon the unsupported word of Conley, and not otherwise.

THAT there has been no tenable motive assigned to Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan; that the girl was not sexually violated or in any manner lacerated; that Frank had only the most casual acquaintance with her, and that of a perfectly natural business sort, and that he could not have had, and did not have, any reason whatever for desiring her death.

THAT, in truth and reality, the motive prompting the murder of Mary Phagan was robbery upon the part of Conley, and that for the purpose of securing her pittance of money, contained in a mesh purse, he did murder her and concealed her body in the basement.

THAT, as a matter of fact, Mary Phagan reached the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26 about 12:12 or 12:15; that she came up the steps directly to Frank's office, and received her pay for the time due her, in amount $1.20; that she at once departed Frank's office, without comment of any sort, and that Frank never saw her alive thereafter; that going down the steps, with her silver mesh bag in her hand, she had to pass Jim Conley, recently aroused from a drunken doze; that in attempting to get from the foot of the stairs, where Conley was sitting, to the door, some 20 feet away, she had to traverse a gloomy walkway, more than ordinarily gloomy at the time because the day was a legal holiday and the doors were closed, but not locked; that in traversing this walkway her back was toward Conley; that Conley, without money and craving more liquor, saw the unprotected little girl with the enticing silver bag in her hand, and surmising that she had been

THAT after accomplishing his bloody deed Conley escaped by withdrawing the inside staple from the basement back door only a few feet away from the place where the dead girl subsequently was found; and that tracings of Conley during the afternoon of April 26 at various saloons about town show that he spent then an amount of money approximately that which Mary Phagan is supposed to have had in her purse at the time of her murder.

That of all her possessions the purse alone, notwithstanding exhaustive inquiry, never was accounted for until the last day Conley was on the stand, when he stated that Frank had had the purse in his possession just after the murder, and that he had concealed it in his safe. This allegation, the defense points out, is sustained, as are the other most damaging allegations, by Conley's unsupported word entirely.

THAT Conley, the State's main witness, is a notoriously dissolute character, by his own admission seven times a jailbird, many times a liar, even under oath and on the witness stand, and admittedly was "mistaken" in some statements made against Frank; that he did not begin to throw suspicion on Frank until after suspicion began drifting in his (Conley's) direction; that his plea of wishing by his first silent course of conduct to "protect" Frank is not sound, because after the feigned disappointment that Frank did not "get him out of his trouble, as he had promised," and declaring that he, therefore, intended to tell the "whole truth of the murder," he still persisted in his lies and falsifying to the attempted damage of Frank, and found it necessary to issue three conflicting affidavits before he got one he thought might be depended upon to stand up.

THAT Conley began his statements with a lie—to the effect that he could not write—and continued lying steadily thereafter, but frequently canceling one lie in favor of another, as his first lies were shown to be useless and senseless.

THAT Conley in revising his various statements was aided and abetted by various police officials, presumably anxious for the reward offered for the apprehension and conviction of Mary Phagan's murderer, and that these officers pointed out to Conley the discrepancies as they arose from time to time, and that without this aid Conley's story never could have been made to hold together even as well as it did; that notwithstanding this prejudicing aid, however, Conley's story still is impossible and absurd, and of no account whatever against Frank.

The foregoing, in general, is the theory of the defense, as already set up and as yet to be developed, and along that line it will fight its battle to the end.

The defense is heavily equipped with witnesses to sustain its every contention, and these will be offered, in their ordr, to brak down the contrary theory of the State, as hereinbefore outlined, and upon th relative strength of the two showings depends, of course, the verdict.

Of absorbing interest now is the seeming determination of the defense to put Leo Frank's character frankly and fearlessly in evidenec.

In a former article in The Sunday American several weeks ago I predicted that the defense would do this—and the then apparent determination of the defense along that line shows no symptoms of having been deviated fro min the slightest.

When Conley made his additional unanticipated attack on Frank's character from the witness stand, it was rather freely predicted about the streets that Frank never would, after that, agree to have his character put in evidence. Under the law, the State can not put the defendant's character in evidence—if it is put in at all, it must be put in by the defendant voluntarily. Once in, however, it may be riddled by the State, if the State is able to riddle it.

The determination, therefore, of the defense to put Frank's character in evidence is being accepted generally as indicating an unfaltering confidence upon the part of the defense that Frank may be able thereby to overcome the terrible and prejudicial charge of degeneracy, as well as the charge of murder, both resting so largely upon Conley, and Conley alone; and it also indicates a belief upon the part of the defense that the State already has done its worst in the matter of attacking Frank's character.

MUST REFUTE TWO CHARGES.

The fact that Frank is now engaged in refuting two charges instead of one makes his case double unique in Georgia, as it is contrary to the unbroken theory of the law heretofore.

In Georgia, the courts uniformly have held that a man can not be tried for more than one offense at one time—that is, that he can not be charged with murder, and in the same trial be called to account for another felonious crime.

The charge of degeneracy, however, got into the case without objection, and Frank's lawyers cross-examined the witness making it. The judge, therefore, although a motion was made afterward to strike out this evidence, ruled taht it was too late to expunge it, and that it should go in for what it was worth.

This ruling, while in a way more or less unprecedented, was, in the main, by the public seemingly approved, upon the idea that it was fairer to both the State and the defense that the horrible charge, having been made, be thrashed out.

Should Frank be convicted, it is practically certain that a new trial will be asked on this very point, and it is not at all improbable that Judge Roan will grant it, although this conjecture is purely and absolutely speculative, of course.

The defense has summoned some seventy character witnesses, among whom are more than two score femal employes of the National Pencil Factory, all of whom will swear, it is said, to the defendant's decent and gentlemanly conduct at all times in their presence and during their varied terms of service in the factory, running from one to five years.

INTENSE INTEREST HOLDS.

Besides these, a score or more of Atlanta's most prominent business and professional men have been cited to come to court and testify in behalf of Frank's good name.

Rarely before, if ever, has there been as intense interest in a murder trial as there unquestionably is in the Frank case.

The crowds attending the trial have been enormous, the officers finding it necessary every day to turn away hundreds of anxious would-be spectators.

Public sentiment has swung back and forth—to-day inclined to believe Frank may be innocent, to-morrow sternly the reverse.

The jury, sitting there in the courthouse day after day, has been the subjective study of hundreds of real and near analytical minds—and the answer?

Every fellow answers for himself. The jury is imperturable, unreadable, almost seemingly indifferent at times, indeed—but always keenly keyed to intense interest, nevertheless!

One might as well undertake to read the riddle of the Spinx as to read the riddle of the Frank case in the minds of the jury trying it. It looks as if it is a jury well above the average—and that is about the beginning and the end of an intelligent guess as to what it will do.

Judge Roan is as baffling as the rest of the case, too, when it comes to speculating upon what he may or may not think of it all.

He is rated one of the very best Superior Court judges in the State, unusually able, certainly fearless, and agreed to be utterly fair and impartial.

At times, his rulings have seemed to favor the defense, and at other times they have seemed to favor the State; but, withal, the public seems agreed that he is handling the case with an open and judicially just mind.

Speculation as to Outcome.

Speculation as to the outcome of the trial is varied. There are those who can see nothing ahead but conviction, just as there are others who can see nothing but acquittal.

If a ballot could be taken, however, those holding to the idea of a mistrial likely would be found in the majority, for that is the way the fight seems, to many observing minds, to be drifting.

That section of the public generally credited with being calm, poised, and desirous of seeing the right prevail, no matter which way it cuts, apparently has suspended judgment. Extremists pro and con still are talking themselves hoarse about town, however.

The progressing inclination among the people seems to be to let the jury settle it, and then to call that as near right as abstract justice and human ingenuity can make it.

In the event of an acquittal, the case ends. The State has no appeal. It must win on the first round, or it loses for all time.

The defense, on the other hand, if it loses, may move for a new trial, upon proper assignment of error in the first trial. The judge of original jurisdiction passes upon this motion—he may grant it or not, as his discretion directs.

The general policy of judges is to refuse motions for new trials, but it is not an unbroken policy, by any means.

If the new trial motion is denied, the case goes to a court of review—either the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals. If one error or several be found in the original rulings of the court below, the case will be remanded back for a new trial, the judgment thus having been reversed and set aside.

Then the case begins all over again, practically as if it never had been tried.

In the event of maters taking that course, Frank hardly could be tried again before next year, 1914, and perhaps not before spring.

Conley Indictment Likely.

If Frank is acquitted, there is hardly a doubt that Jim Conley will be promptly indicted for the murder of Mary Phagan, and brought to trial later.

In the event of Frank's final conviction, Conley will be indicted as an accessofy after the fact. This would mean a sentence of not more than three years in the State penitentiary for him.

If Frank is convicted, he can be convicted only of murder—the jury will not be permitted, under the form of the indictment, to find him guilty of a lesser crime.

The judge will have no discretion in sentencing him.

If found guilty, without a recommendation to mercy, he must hang, unless the Governor should subsequently interfere and order executive clemency.

If he is convicted, and the jury "recommend him to the mercy of the court," the court then will be obliged to send him to prison for life.

The general opinion is that the present trial will run all of this week—that the best to be expected is that the jury may be given the case by Saturday night.

After the evidence is all in, the case still will have to be argued to the jury. It is thought that Judge Roan will take the bridle off in respect of this, and both sides will be permitted to go the limit.

Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold will consume at least one entire day in argument, and Mr. Dorsey and Mr. Hooper will not take less time.

It is expected that Hooper will open for the State and Dorsey close, and that Rosser will open for the defense and Arnold close. The State has the opening and the concluding argument before the jury.

WHITE SLAVE CASE WHICH INVOLVES U.S. GOES TO TRIAL

Diggs Faces a Jury and Caminetti Will Later Fight Charge of Taking Girls to Reno, Leaving Their Wives in State of California.

After Five Months of Delay and Scandal Involving National Officials, Special Prosecutors Are Appearing for the Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Marsha Warrington and Ida Norris, the Sacramento high school girls alleged to have been taken to Reno in November by Maury I Diggs and Drew Caminetti for immoral purposes, will take the stand against Diggs when his trial is resumed Tuesday. No session of the Diggs trial was held today. Diggs and Caminetti will take the stand before the trial is concluded.

Judge Van Fleet dealt the defense a hard blow yesterday when he announced that the jury would not consider the willingness or unwillingness of the two girls to accompany Diggs and Caminetti.

The jury to hear the case of Diggs, the former State Architect, was announced complete after considerable difficulty in selecting the twelve members. Exhaustive examination of 96 veniremen was necessary before the twelve were chosen.

The first witness was called. He was F. J. Peck, a Reno real estate dealer, by whom the defense sought to show that the bungalow occupied by the defendants in Reno had been rented with no view to concealment.

Prejudice against the defendants runs high, rendering exceedingly difficult the task of picking a jury. Of the twelve men chosen, eight are married and have children, two are married, but childless, and two are single men, living with their parents. Indicative of the general temper of San Francisco was the reply upon examination of Philip Woolsey, who afterward was chosen as a member of the jury. He expressed his prejudice against "any married man who will abandon his wife and babies and run off on a spree with another woman," but said he could, however, render a verdict strictly in accordance with the evidence.

Cases Come Up Separately.

The cases against Diggs and Caminetti will be tried separately because the prosecution feels it has made out the stronger case against Diggs, and because the defense in this case will assume a course different from that in Caminetti's.

Diggs and F. Drew Caminetti, son of former Congressman and present Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti, are charged with luring Miss Marsha Warrington and Miss Lola Norris from California to Nevada for immoral purposes. Both are married men.

Diggs, the prosecution will attempt to show, financed the trip to Reno, where the girls were taken, and rented there a cottage in which the party lived.

Diggs, against whom the charges are made in relation to Miss Marsha Warrington, is said to be contemplating a fierce attack on the character of the girl. He has subpenaed habitues of the "Barbary Coast" resorts of this city and twenty witnesses from Sacramento's tenderloin. Caminetti is making no such move against Miss Norris. The Government asserts her character to be unblemished.

Mrs. Caminetti Relentless.

Caminetti's wife is relentless in her attitude toward her young husband. She said that despite the disgrace it may bring on their children, she thinks for the protection of other married women, her husband should be made an example.

Mrs. Diggs, also, is bitter toward her husband. The defenders of both men, however, to-day are claiming a complete reconciliation of the defendants with their wives, and declare that when the trial gets fully under way both Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti will be seen sitting at their husbands' sides, a spectacle which, the defense calculates, will have an effect to their advantage on the jury.

Diggs and Caminetti both are free from custody, having taken advantage of the $10,000 bail offered them. At first they feared freedom, as violence was anticipated, but later this fear was overcome.

Diggs appears to be cheerful to-day, taking matters easily. He is scrupulously dressed,. He came into the courtroom, with his flock of attorneys, bearing a cheerful smile, and bowed a dozen times to familiar faces that he saw near. Caminetti, on the other hand, seemed deeply worried. He was pallid and palpably very nervous. His father, the Commissioner General of Immigration, did not make his appearance, and probably will not be seen at the trial.

Two Special Prosecutors.

The trial is being held in the Federal Court before Judge Van Fleet. Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore R. Roche, president of the San Francisco Police Commission, have been appointed special prosecutors by Attorney General McReynolds, to take the place of District Attorney Gavin McNab, who resigned with the announcement that undue influence was being brought to bear from Washington to prevent the trial of the two men.

Arrayed with the special prosecutors are Archie Johnson, son of Governor Johnson, and Acting District Attorneys Benjamin L. McKinley and Thomas H. Salvage.

Diggs and Caminetti have an equally impressive line-up of legal defenders, including Robert L. Devlin and Marshall B. Woodworth, both former United States District Attorneys; Nate Coghlan and S. Luke Howe.

A heavy guard is thrown around the courtroom because feeling runs high against the two defendants. The two girls involved were high school students of Sacramento and of estimable families. Both, attorneys for the Government announce, will be ready to take the stand against the men.

The Government will charge that Diggs and Caminetti, both married men, had drawn the girls into a liaison; that they terrified the girls into the belief that their wives, having discovered their infidelity, intended to have the girls arrested, and that to escape this imaginary danger the girls accompanied the men to Reno, Nev.

McNab Outlines His Case Against the Defendants

In his report Mr. McNab gives the following pen picture of Caminetti and Diggs:

"The defendant Diggs was a draughtsman in the office of the State Capitol in Sacramento. He is married and has two young children.

"But a short time before the actions hereinafter narrated he was involved in a forgery charge, and for a long time, by common repute, easily substantiated by evidence, he maintained what has been denominated as a 'private harem' at his rooms in a downtown block in Sacramento. Here, according to charges laid before me, he enticed many young women to go to serve his immoral purposes.

"Caminetti was his bosom companion. The defendant Caminetti has a vicious reputation for seducing girls, and I have shocking instances which I can produce to establish this fact.

"The two girls in question, both of whom are about 19 years of age, come of most respectable families. Marsha Warrington is the only daughter of the agent of the Santa Fe Railroad. Lola Norris is the only daughter of a retired business man of Sacramento.

"After going with the young women for some months the two defendants, who had determined to entice the girls away from home and take them to another State, began a systematic campaign of coercion and inducement to get them to flee the State with them.

Their Stories to the Girls.

They told the young women that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti had found out about their relations and had procured warrants for their arrest from the Juvenile Court and were only awaiting the appropriate time to serve them; that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti were relentless and intended to expose the whole matter, and that the families of the girl would be disgraced and ruined; that the only way to save the girls from disgrace was secretly to leave the city and go to another State, where they would acquire a residence, the men would divorce their wives and marry the girls, etc.

"The young women were in absolute terror. They repeatedly appealed to the defendants to allow them to remain at home and not to disgrace them, and begged to be allowed to unbosom their indiscretions to their parents and have their advice.

"Up to this time, according to the uncontradicted evidence, Diggs had been unduly intimate with Miss Warrington for a few weeks; the Norris girl had never been violated before this trip to Reno.

"On arrival at Reno they were assigned to bedrooms, Diggs and Miss Warrington occupying one room and Caminetti and Miss Norris the other. According to the testimony of the young women, they were wholly in the hands of their male companions. They had never been away from home or their parents before and felt that they were powerless to save themselves.

"Appealing to the men to know what was to be done with them, the young women were told that their ruin was complete; that they would not desert them, but that the young women were to continue to live with them as their mistresses, and that they would take them to Salt Lake, where they would go into a 'house.'

"The Grand Jury had ample evidence before it in these statements to decide that the intent was to put them in a public place.

Barely Escaped Lynching.

"The defendants were secretly taken from the train and brought to Sacramento by auto to avoid lynching by the enraged citizens. Defendants procured counsel. Among these is Charles Harris, of the Sacramento bar. He and Diggs immediately set about to defeat justice by corrupting a witness. Diggs wrote an appealing letter to Miss Warrington under an assumed name, uring her to stand by a certain agreed story he had drilled her in while in Reno. The letter is in my possession.

"The Grand Jury has indicted Harris and Diggs for conspiracy to suborn perjury.

"The friends of the defendants are reported to have stated repeatedly that they could 'easily fix the case;' that they had too much money and too much influence at command to cause them to worry. This seems to have come principally from the Diggs end of the case."

Foundling Is Heiress To $100,000 Fortune

Father Makes Wealth After He Had Left Baby in Michigan Institution.

CADILLAC, MICH., Aug. 9.—Sheriff Chamberlain has been asked by an attorney in Corning, N. Y., to locate Bessie Weaver, who was adopted by a Manton, Mich., family from a New York foundling home over twenty years ago, and a few days ago became heir to $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weaver, of Manton, who adopted the child when on a trip through New York, returned her to the home five years later. Since that time nothing has been heard from her. The father of Bessie Weaver, or Bessie Clark, as she was known in New York, made his fortune after placing his child in the home, but has been unable to locate her since she was taken back from Michigan. He recently died, leaving his fortune to his only child.

GIRL HELPS FATHER IN BUILDING NEW HOUSE

HARTFORD, MICH., Aug. 9.—One year ago S. H. Atkins and family came to this city and built a house in a field of rye in the outskirts of the city. Recently they sold the home, and with the proceeds purchased four adjoining lots. They are now building a much larger house, which will be the sixth they have erected since the little home was built.

The scarcity of carpenters caused the mother and daughter to assist Mr. Atkins in the building of his new home. The mother and 9-year-old daughter did all of the lathing.

Nearly Five Months to Bring Caminetti and Diggs to Trial

MARCH 10.

Diggs, married, ex-State Architect, about twenty-eight, and Marsha Warrington, nineteen, unmarried, all of Sacramento, go to Reno, register under assumed names, rent a cottage later, and live four days together when arrested. The men assert they are unhappy and intend to marry the girls after securing divorces.

MAY 19.

The men are indicted for violating the Mann white slave law, put under bonds of $10,000 and their cases put on the calendar for trial in June. Citizens all over California appeal to U. S. District Attorney John L. McNab to push the cases.

MAY 27.

United States Attorney McNab wires Attorney General McReynolds that both prisoners were boasting of their "influence at Washington," and that strenuous efforts were being made to secure postponement of trials; also that bribery and perjury were being used in their behalf.

JUNE 18.

Secretary of Labor Wilson telephones McReynolds "that Commissioner of Immigration Caminetti, who has applied for leave of absence to attend the trial of his son, can not be spared."

JUNE 19.

McReynolds telegraphs McNab to postpone the cases till fall.

JUNE 21.

McNab sends in resignation to President Wilson.

JUNE 22.

McReynolds' comment: "I'm not shedding any tears; he is a Republican."

JUNE 23.

Secretary of Labor Wilson assumes responsibility for McReynolds' action. A Cabinet meeting is called and President Wilson overrules McReynolds and orders the cases rushed.

JUNE 24.

The President accepts McNab's resignation with a rebuke for giving "his resignation the form of an inexcusable intimation of injustice and wrongdoing." In a letter to McReynolds he says: "I am entirely satisfied that the course you took in these cases was prompted by sound and impartial judgment and a clear insight for what was fair and right."

JUNE 28.

James C. Mann, Republican leader, bitterly attacks McReynolds and Secretary Wilson, both Cabinet officers.

JULY 6.

The Hearst papers print the suppressed correspondence between McReynolds and McNab and others, showing the Attorney General knew of the seriousness of the case.

Ban on Tobacco Seen By Prohibitionists

Smoking and Drinking Are Blamed for Increase in Chronic Diseases in America.

BATTLECREEK, MICH., Aug. 9.—That tobacco as well as liquor will be placed under national prohibition before the end of another generation, is the assertion made here by Irving Fisher. Fisher blames liquor, tobacco, overuse of meat and too strenuous life for the terrible increase of chronic diseases in America.

Spooners Protest Against Headlights

Big Illuminating Power Now Carried on Engines Is Worry to Summer Boarders.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad has placed monster 1,220-candlepower electric searchlights on the observation cars of the Pioneer Limited. Letters have found their way into the general offices of the company signed by summer hotel men, houseboat owners and the public generally, protesting against the innovation. Spooners do not like it.

Buys a $4,000 Auto To Use Cheap Gas

When Ex-Senator Scott Has Burned 60,000 Gallons He Will Have Saved Cost of Car.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The house of Senator Nathan Bay Scott, of West Virginia, is divided against itself, with automobiles as they issue. The Senator and Mrs. Scott are devoted to each other. They attend the same dinners, theaters and social functions together, but they arrive and depart in separate motor cars. It came about this way:

The senator has been paying 22 cents a gallon for gasoline to propel the family machine. He discovered a place where the price was 17 cents. With much glee he informed Oscar, the family chauffeur, of his discovery and directed that Oscar purchase gasoline there.

Oscar demurred because the gasoline emporium was too far from the family mansion. Mrs. Scott backed him up. Whereupon Senator Scott bought himself a $4,000 machine, acquired a chauffeur to navigate it and divorced himself from the old machine and Oscar.

After Senator Scott has burned 60,000 gallons of gasoline he will have saved the cost of the car. But he doesn't have to ride with Oscar.

PENSIONER, NOT IN WAR, ASKS RAISE OF STIPEND

BIG SANDY, MONT., Aug. 9.—After having enjoyed a pension of $12 per month for sixteen years, John Truax, of this town, confessed that he had never been entitled to the money. He had a preliminary examination before United States Commissioner Ragan and was bound over to the Federal District Court.

Truax might have gone on drawing the pension until death had he not lately made application for an increase.

ORPHAN SOUGHT AS WIFE BY MAN WRITING POLICE

Would-Be Benedict Gives Evidence in Letter That He Fears Mother-in-Law.

OAKLAND, CAL., Aug. 9.—J. Keler, of Fresno, is a marrying man. He proved it by writing a letter to "the Chief of Police or the City Marshal of Oakland" and entreating that official to find him a wife. He wants a wife who has means equal to his own—amount not stated—and indicates in his letter that he would expect her to assist him in his merchandise business. He assures all responsible applicants that he is sober and industrious and hasn't a single bad habit.

If you are a maid, a girl or a widow who reads this, you stand a chance of winning the prize, and if you are an orphan, get busy and send your picture to Keler at once. He takes kindly to orphans, as is evidenced from the following excerpt from his letter:

"Will answer all questions and letters from girls, maids and widows, but would prefer to wed an orphan. Will give my business to the one I wed, that she may know I am a square man and will do right."

The following notice was inclosed, with the request that the official post it in a conspicuous place:

"Temperate gentleman would be pleased to form the acquaintance of ladies matrimonially inclined. Give description and full particulars in first letter. Send photo, which will be returned, if desired."

SHEDS TOENAILS BIENNIALLY.

BEDFORD, IND., Aug. 9.—J. W. Mundy, of this city, sheds the nails from his toes every two years, and this has occurred since he was a child. When asked to see his foot, Mundy bared his left foot and showed the old nails, barely hanging to the toes, and the new nails growing under the old ones.

ALL STATES TO SHOW POULTRY AT KNOXVILLE

Exhibition of Best Breeds To Be Feature of National Conservation Exposition.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Aug. 9.—Birds for the poultry show that is to be held in connection with the National Conservation Exposition in this city during the months of September and October are coming to Knoxville all the way from California. Word of the coming of the California birds has just been received by the poultry department.

Interest in the poultry show is country-wide. From almost every State in the Union will be brought to Knoxville poultry of different kinds. Already it is assured that the poultry show will be the biggest thing of its kind ever held in the South. It will be in fact as well as name "The Madison Square Garden Show of the South."

A most comprehensive exhibit of the great textile industry of the South is assured for the exposition. Progressive manufacturers of Greenville, S. C., have just signed up for a large amount of exhibit space in the All-South building of the exposition and the greater part of that space will be devoted to the textile industry.

In addition to the Greenville textile manufacturers a number of other concerns of like nature in the South, from Knoxville and elsewhere, will make exhibits, and thus this industry, constantly increasing in importance in the South, will receive great attention. The different processes through which cotton goes from the seed to the loom and after will be strikingly shown in the different exhibits.

Prince Chased by Laundress
She Asks $50,000 on Love Notes
He Is Gone on His Honeymoon

Miss Freese, a California girl, who at a Secret Marriage Became the bride of Prince Sultkowski, of Austria, and a Snapshot of the Prince.

Sultkowski, Who Won Rich Girl and Had His $100,000 Debts Paid, Is Accused.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—An angry laundress from Vienna is in Los Angeles looking for Prince Stanislaus Sultkowski, the noble Austrian who came here several months ago, wooed in his gallant way and won the beautiful Miss Marie Louise Freese, had his debts of $100,000 paid by Father-in-Law Freese, and received from the same source an annuity of $20,000.

The laundress, Mrs. Clara Melcher, declares that the Prince brought her to this country on the promise that he would marry her.

After a hasty, private marriage, the noble Prince and his American Princess disappeared. The father-in-law says they are "not in the country," and no more.

Los Angeles society wondered at the quiet wedding. An elaborate church ceremony had been planned, but the plans were abandoned at short notice.

She Asks Federal Aid.

Society was in the midst of this wonder when entered Mrs. Melcher. She appealed with her story to the United States Immigration inspector, and was supported by Adolph Danzieger, a lawyer. The Prince declared, Danzieger said, that the woman had annoyed his family in Austria, and to get her away from Vienna so he could return home with his American wife, he had written her to come to America.

An attorney, who was first approached by Mrs. Melcher and then retained by the Prince, said he suggested to Mr. Freese, the Prince's father-in-law, a payment of five or ten thousand dollars in settlement of the woman's claims, but Mrs. Melcher, through her lawyer, declared that she would have $50,000 or nothing. She has love letters which she says prove her claims.

The Prince and his American bride are believed to be on their way to Austria where Stanislaus is taking his Princess without fear of being molested by the insistent laundress.

Prince Lauds Girls Here.

The Prince is lieutenant of the Second Dragoons of the army of the Austrian empire. He came to America in December and lost his heart to the girls of America, whom he likened to "the flowers of the spring." He is a nephew of the Grand Duke of Birlitz. His home is the Castle Tresternitz, near Marksburg, Austria.

The following tribute to American girls, of which the Prince delivered himself, was widely published:

"They are splendid, charming, graceful and fresh, like the flowers of the spring. The girls of Europe generally have followed outdoor sports. They are mostly large and strong, often the equal of their husbands in strength.

"My idea of a girl is found right here in America. I have been most hospitably received and have met many of them. Their sweetness, their trimness and the wonderful manner in which they wear their clothes have 'got me going,' as you say. Their figures and their style surpass the Europeans. Their dignity and grace and the democracy I have found in so many are winning, and I do not blame Europe's noblemen for coming to America for their brides."

GIVES OWN LIFE TO SAVE THOSE ABOARD BOAT

Divers Exploring Wreck of Steamboat Peters Lee Find Modern Jim Bludsoe in Hold.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 9.—Divers who explored the steamboat Peters Lee on the bottom of the Mississippi River at Lake Providence, La., to-day reported finding the body of Engineer Frank O'Neil, his hand holding the engine throttle.

He died there when the boat sank last night, having stayed at his post and held the boat's nose against the shore until the last of the 50 passengers, most of them women, were helped ashore.

O'Neil's act is practically a realization of the martyrdom of Jim Bludsoe, famed in the poem as the steamboat engineer who held her nose to the bank till all were saved, then was burned to death at his post.

A dance was on when the Peters Lee struck a sunken coal barge. A hole was torn in her side. The captain ordered the pilot to steer for the shore. The boat struck the mud, and officers and crew began taking off the passengers.

Frank O'Neil in the engine room kept the stern wheel churning while the water poured into the hold.

A negro shouted through the engine room door that the boat was sinking.

"I know it!" shouted O'Neil. "You fellows get on up front where you can get off. I'll hold her nose against the shore!"

The last passenger was safely landed when the boat sank in 40 feet of water.

Thief Since Child; Boasts of 500 Crimes

Boy Declares That He Is Beyond Reformation, and Welcomes the Gallows.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Walter Novak, 20, arrested with four companions aftter they had fatally wounded Patrolman Samuel W. Sowers and beaten Patrolman Frank Walpole, admitted having taken part in more than thirty robberies in two months and boasted of his career.

"I was born a thief, and I've been a thief ever since," said Novak. "I don't care whether I go to the gallows. I started when I was nine stealing pennies. I have been put in all kinds of institutions to reform me, but they only made me worse. I don't want any member of my family to come and see me. If they come, I will kick them out.

"I suppose I have committed more than 500 robberies."

Feudist's Daughter Shouts at Conviction

Woman Obtains Practically All the Evidence Produced in Court Against Slayers.

WINCHESTER, KY., Aug. 9.—The work of Mrs. Lillian Gross, daughter of Ed Callahan, of Breathitt County, former Sheriff and noted feud leader, was rewarded to-day, when a jury returned a verdict finding Andrew Johnson, 19, guilty of having murdered Callahan.

The jury fixed Johnson's punishment at life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

When the verdict was given out, Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Timandy Callahan, young widow of the feudist, shouted for joy.

The evidence was secured almost entirely by Mrs. Gross.

Twelve witnesses, who swore that they saw Johnson at Jackson, 12 miles from the scene of the shooting, are under indictment for perjury.

Friedmann Has to Face New Charges

Originator of Tuberculosis Serum Is Accused of Unprofessional Conduct by Assistant.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Charges of unprofessional conduct have been preferred against Dr. Friedrich F. Friedmann, originator of tuberculosis serum, and he may have to defend his conduct before a court of honor of physicians and surgeons. Julius Benjamin, father of Dr. Harry Benjamin, who went to the United States with Friedmann as the latter's assistant, and who, as a result of his association with the creator of the turtle tubercular vaccine, was left stranded in New York City without funds, is pressing the charges.

LOS ANGELES TO AID IN EXAMINER SITE DEDICATION

Civic Bodies and Officials to Participate in Cornerstone Laying of Great Newspaper Plant.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—On Monday at 12 o'clock will commence the ceremony of the placing of the cornerstone of the new Los Angeles Examiner building at Eleventh and Broadway.

Because the spirit of California has made this building possible, part of this ceremony will be the raising of the California Bear flag over the great edifice now already partically completed. The event will mark the progress of a great newspaper in a great city. Planned under the auspices of the Advertising Club of Los Angeles, and representative business men, the program for the cornerstone laying reaches broad and comprehensive proportions.

Great Chorus to Sing.

The music of four great massed bands will sound patriotically at the appearance of the flag, Madame Esther Palliser, the famous prima donna will sing the new song of Southland progress written for the occasion by Miles Overholt, and a chorus of 100 trained voices will mark the laying of the cornerstone.

From the lips of one who has made a great mark in America's history will come the final address of faith in Los Angeles and its people—William Randolph Hearst.

There will come, too, during this ceremony a novel procedure calculated to remind the younger generation of the event. A motion picture will be taken of the event, showing the ceremony and surrounding trong. Immediately after the picture has been taken, the film will be developed with all haste and within a few hours a hermetically sealed canister will be placed in the cornerstone.

To William Randolph Hearst will be presented by Mayor Rose the silver trowel of the cornerstone laying. The opening words of the ceremony will be spoken by the Rev. Charles Edward Locke, who will be presented by Ernest Ingold. Then James R. H. Wagner will come to the platform and present to A. W. Kinney, president of the Chamber of Commerce on behalf of the people of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Examiner, the California Bear flag.

Mr. Hearst to Speak.

After Mr. Kinney's reply to this, the Rev. George Donahue, acting for Bishop Conaly, will speak. The Rt. Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop, of Los Angeles, will give an address. After the speech of Mr Hearst, Dr. Sigmund Hecht will say the closing word.

Before the ceremony at the new building, an escort with Chief of Police Sebastian acting as grand marshal, will proceed from Central Park to the old Examiner building at Fifth and Broadway. Here Mayor Rose, the speakers and Mr. Hearst will join the party and be escorted down Broadway to The Examiner's new site and the scene of the cornerstone laying.

No Duke Available For Edna Goodrich

London Society Much Amused by Actress' Announcement She Is to Wed Peer.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Great amusement has been created by a cabled report of Edna Goodrich's announcement that she is to marry an English duke.

"It is a pretty story," comments The London Daily Mirror, "but of the 26 dukes, nineteen are married and five are widowers, the youngest being 67 years old.

"Of the remaining two, the actress couldn't have met them on a houseboat at Henley."

Of course there is the Duke of Westminster, whose penchant for charming actresses is well known, but he is not free to marry again, not yet.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Pavlowa caused a sensation at the Palace Theater tonight by an open quarrel with her dancing partner, Novikoff, the incident being parallel with her rupture with Mordkin last year.

While dancing Adagio, Pavlowa suddenly hit Novikoff a smart blow on the shoulder. Novikoff immediately left the stage while Pavlowa walked off by the opposite side, the orchestra finishing the piece to an empty stage. Pavlowa afterward performed two solo dances, but Novikoff did not appear again.

TYBEE'S CATHOLIC CHURCH TOO SMALL FOR TOURISTS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Plans are being considered for enlarging the Roman Catholic chapel at Tybee.

This season the attendance has been so large that men and boys have had to stand. The summer communicants have been most generous in their contributions to the enlargement fund. They have also raised a fund for the purchase of new vestments for the priest.

COLLEGE HEN MISSES LAYING 1 DAY IN 100

Champion Barnyard Producer Rests Only When Commencement Season Arrives.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CORVALLIS, OREG., Aug. 9. A college hen, which laid 99 eggs in 100 days and observed Commencement Day by taking a single day's vacation, is a new claimant for prominence in the chicken world.

The newly heralded layer is three-quarters White Leghorn and one-quarter Barred Plymouth Rock, descending from several generations of heavy layers bred at the Oregon Agricultural College experiment station.

The 99 eggs were laid during the 100 days ended June 8, as follows: Thirty-one in March, 29 in April, 31 in May and 8 in the first 8 days in June.

Not only is this the best record ever secured at Oregon Agricultural College for the same length of time, but a careful perusal of authentic records from other stations on file fails to reveal an equal performance.

The result of breeding as shown in the egg production of this one hen is only an isolated example of what Professor James Dryden's extensive experiments are proving to be possible.

Up to date the records show clearly the beneficial effect in egg yield, and when the year's experiments are concluded in the fall some interesting statistics will be available for the use of poultrymen who are raising chickens for egg production.

$640 Average Income Of American Farmer

Government Report Declares There Are Many Who Make far Smaller Sum.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Farming is not the most profitable business in the world, railroad press agents to the contrary notwithstanding, according to a bulletin of the Department of Agriculture.

For the first time in the history of farming in the United States the department has managed to get accurate data on the subject.

It reports that the average income of the American farmer is $640.40 a year. "It is reasonable to infer," says the department, "that at least half of the farmers in this country have even smaller incomes."

Mayor Quits Office to Become Collector of Port, but Suffers From Curtailment.

PORT HURON, MICH., Aug. 9.—The order of Secretary McAdoo abolishing the office of collector of customs at this port has thrown former Mayor John J. Bell out into the cold.

When Mr. Bell received his appointment a few years ago he resigned as the city's chief executive, and Commissioner Dixon was chosen as his successor. Then Mr. Bell appointed William R. Chadwick as his deputy.

Now the order from Washington puts Mr. Chadwick in charge of the local part. Mr. Bell finds he has resigned himself out of one job and appointed himself out of another.

Steamer's Crew Deny Sighting 'Titanic'

Officers Say Wreckage They Saw Was Sixty Miles South of Disaster Scene.

Special Cable to The American.

SOUTH SHIELD, Aug. 9.—Officers of the steamer Lucilline, which has arrived here, deny the report that they saw the Titanic wreck apparently resting on top of a ledge of rocks. What they saw during their trip from Bordeaux to Philadelphia was some wreckage consisting of a part of a mast and some gear that was probably attached to a submerged object. They were 60 miles south of the scene of the Titanic disaster, although in the same longitude. They discredit the supposition that the Titanic rests upon a submerged reef.

Many Lives Saved As Train Is Ditched

Forethought of Towerman Averts Crash Between Specials by Taking Chance on Tragedy.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Scores of lives were saved to-day when a towerman in Burnham, Ill., threw the Ohio River special on the Pennsylvania Railroad into a derail and averted its collision with a through Wabash train from St. Louis. The train took the ditch at high speed. The Pennsylvania locomotive was overturned in the crash, but aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman, no one was hurt.

A moment after the Pennsylvania train hit the derailer the Wabash train clicked across the frogs at the track intersection less than 1,000 feet away.

Folly of Suffrage Shown by Dresses, Says Mrs. Marshall

Vice President's Wife Believes Women Can Do More Good Correcting Cabarets.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Slashed skirts with the silhouette gown and other freaks of modern fashion are the worst enemies of the newly made voters of Illinois, and the cabaret and the turkey trot are more in need of reform than Chicago's First Ward, in the opinion of Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, who was in Chicago with her husband.

Mrs. Marshall declared frankly that she was opposed to the municipal power recently granted to the women of Illinois. Mrs. Marshall said:

"I have never been a suffragist. To me the fashions of to-day ought to convince any one that a woman is not fit to vote. Some women's dress is not only extreme, it is objectionable. A woman who will do more good by correcting the dances in our cafes and cabarets than in running for office.

"The women in the East are not strongly in favor of the ballot, and none of the Cabinet women seems to favor it, with the exception, perhaps, of the President's daughter, Miss Jessie Wilson."

NEWPORT TOLD THAT U. S. NEEDS AN ARISTOCRACY

NEWPORT, Aug. 9.—William MacDonald, professor of American history at Brown University, delivering the principal address before the Rhode Island Society of the Cincinnati, gave expression to some startling new ideas. The topic of his address was, "An Aristocracy in a Democracy." He said:

"There is needed an aristocracy to lead, a government of the best men. Not an aristocracy of vulgar wealth or hereditary descent, but an aristocracy made up of sound physique, disciplined, intelligent and trained, public-spirited, of cosmopolitan taste and unpretentious good manners."

Getting Acquainted With Your Own City!

Atlanta has grown so rapidly that Mr. Busyman, engrossed in the "moil" of his own restricted environments, rarely "glimpses" beyond the horizon of his personal sphere of activity. "HE KNOWS SHE GROWS"—but his knowledge of the INDIVIDUALITY of her growth is entirely beyond his "ken." Old industries double their capacity—NEW ones rear their walls. The BYRD PRINTING COMPANY is an instance of BOTH OF THESE CONDITIONS. They DOUBLED THEIR CAPACITY, and MOVED INTO A NEW ESPECIALLY BUILT FIVE-STORY CONCRETE BUILDING; and for absolutely MODERN equipment, and completeness in every department, no plant in America is superior. You should come down and "get acquainted"—see one of Atlanta's best achievements at its best. We'll be glad to show you over the plant. It's very interesting.

OIL LETTERS KILLED HIM POLITICALLY, SAYS FORAKER

Exposes by William Randolph Hearst Responsible for Downfall, Declares Former Senator Before Senate Lobby Inquiry.

Official of National Manufacturers' Association Writes Democratic Simplicity Will Mean Union Label on U.S. Stationery.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Former Senator Foraker admitted to the Senate Lobby Committee to-day publication by William Randolph Hearst of the famous Standard Oil letters killed Foraker's chances for re-election to the Senate in 1908.

After identifying a letter received from Martin M. Mitchell, the confessed ex-lobbyist, making a report of political activities in Ohio in Foraker's behalf, the former Senator said:

"It was the morning of the day Mr. Hearst's disclosure was made public. An attack had been made on me by Mr. Hearst which destroyed my chances of election, saying I had acted as counsel for the Standard Oil Company. This had created a sentiment in our State very prejudicial to me. I continued as a candidate in the campaign only because to retire from it after I had become a candidate would look like an admission that there was some justification for the attack, whereas there was not any."

Senator Foraker said Muhall, whom he had known thirty years, greatly overestimated his own importance.

No Aid From N. A. M.

Foraker said he had never received aid from the National Association of Manufacturers and while he received a fee of $500 for the part he played in the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1896, he was not in the employ of either David Lamar or Edward Lauterbach in an injunction case against the Union Pacific in 1903.

The House Investigating Committee opened its probe with introduction of correspondence showing the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers in fighting labor legislation in Congress and various attempts to have "conservative" men named as members of House committees.

Discussing the recent sundry civil bill, with its provision prohibiting the expenditure of certain funds for the prosecution of farmers and labor unions under the Sherman law, James A. Emery, counsel of the N. A. M., wrote to President John Kirby, Jr., of the association, on March 7, 1913, after President Taft had vetoed the bill:

"I want to emphasize as hard as I can the importance of lining up for a tremendous demonstration when this bill reaches President Wilson, as it undoubtedly will, with the same provision in it. You will then have an early opportunity to decide whether the glittering Democratic motto, 'Equal right for all and special privilege for none,' means anything or whether the Administration has surrendered completely or will merely turn over the Department of Labor.

Objection to Secretary Wilson.

"I note, by the way, your reference to a letter from C. W. Post on the question of a protest over the appointment of Wilson (Secretary of Labor). A protest on this subject is a mere waste of breath, and on the whole I am inclined to think the whole purpose of this department will be shown up quicker with the unions in control of it than in any other way. Gompers will run it characteristically with a high hand, and if the whole thing does not smell to Heaven within a year I shall be very much astonished.

"By that time Democratic simplicity will probably mean a union label on the White House stationery and the President conferring with the Waiters' Union over the appointment of his steward. At present we have nothing more startling in Jeffersonian simplicity than the news Mrs. Bryan is making a new suit for the Secretary of State, and cakes and ginger ale will be served at the dinner for the British Ambassador. Toothpicks will, of course, be an after dinner course at all Cabinet receptions, and the demand for dress suits will be confined to waiters in the hotels."

In this same letter Emery advised Kirby, "If you have any idea Taft would have vetoed this bill of his own motion, get over it. A list of public men who had 'pie' in this $113,000,000 appropriation bill included many prominent men in both Houses."

LOSES ELOPEMENT RACE.

IRONTON, OHIO, Aug. 9.—George Alexander, of Floyd County, Kentucky, arrived here to-day in pursuit of his daughter, Miss Oma Alexander, five minutes after she had been married to Lawrence Jenkins. The father said the girl was only 15 years old and that Jenkins had induced her to elope with him when she was on her way to school this morning.

Finds Honeymoon Land, Then the Man

Society Girl and New Husband Are Now on Their Way to Tahiti.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Miss Luella Hayne, a pretty Chicago girl, is now, as the bride of Dr. Frank Vance, of Enid, Okla., on her way to spend her honeymoon in Tahiti. Miss Hayne had chosen the spot for the honeymoon before she found the man.

Miss Hayne went through a finishing school which prepared her for all the conventionalities of a reigning position in the smart set, but after a brief whirl this life proved tiresome and she started out on the road that leads "back to nature."

The romance was begun at a house party in New York city given by Miss Hayne's sister.

In talking about Tahiti before she sailed she said:

"The people who are most successful in our centers of civilization are most fettered by it. The reason why people plunge so madly into the economic struggle is largely that they may free themselves from its conditions. Why should not a civilized man be as happy as a native of Tahiti? We are going to find out."

Esther Cleveland Is Prize in 'Love Race'

Princeton Students Are Rivals for Hands of Daughter of Late President.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 9.—Herman Stump and H. Gordon Ewing, filled with a youthful ardor to win the hand of Miss Esther Cleveland, second daughter of Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., and the late President Cleveland, are rivals in "a race for love" which is interesting Baltimore society.

Stump is a son of Judge and Mrs. H. Arthur Stump. Ewing is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson Ewing, of Roland Park.

The two wooers are members of the senior class at Princeton University and both have been guests at Miss Cleveland's home.

Mrs. Mackay Leads Hermit Life

Society Leader Pines for Children

Seldom Stirs From Maine Home

Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay with her children, who were taken from her when her husband left on mysterious trip to Europe.

Portland People Believe She Has Settled in Quiet Town to Start Divorce Suit.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 9.—From the gay life of a popular society woman, a leader in the smartest affairs of New York, Newport and Bar Harbor to pursue an existence in a quiet city, is a change just made by the dashing Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, the former Kitty Duer.

"Why do you suppose she's here?" all Portland is asking.

What can she do with herself all day long, for she is never seen out, save to take a drive, and then always wearing a heavy white veil. Is she here to secure a divorce and will she live that dreary life for one whole year—that's how the gossip runs.

Perhaps she's writing another book. She did write one once, "The Crystal Ball." But while the world conjectures, Mrs. Mackay denies herself to all.

Divorce is without doubt her idea in burying herself here, where she has been ever since her millionaire husband sailed for Europe with their three children.

Mrs Mackay is occupying the home of Adam P. Leighton on Western Promenade, a cottage in comparison with the mansions she has been used to occupying.

It was on June 25 that Mr. Mackay sailed for Europe on the Imperator, taking his children on board from New Jersey, where they had been in his control for several days. He went abroad with never a word to the wife and mother.

So mysterious was the departure that it attracted wide attention. They boarded the ship at night; a detective squad was serving to protect the children from any attempt to prevent their departure and the father registered under an assumed name. The children, who are no doubt longing for their mother as she is longing for them, are still abroad and it is said they will be there for months.

Western Canada to Honor First Farmer

Three-Day Celebration Planned as Tribute to Memory of Chevalier LaCorne.

MELFORT, SASK., Aug. 9.—Western Canada is to honor the memory of Captain Louis Lac De La Corne, the first farmer of Western Canada. Chevalier LaCorne introduced agriculture in the Carrot River valley, Saskatchewan, in 1754. At Melfort, in the heart of the Carrot River District, a three-day celebration, August 1, 2 and 3, 1914, will commemorate the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of the first farming in Western Canada.

The business men of Melfort and the surrounding territory have organized to arrange for the celebration, and committees are already at work. The celebration will be unusual and will include a pageant, in which 2,000 Indians will participate. This pageant will typify the agricultural growth of Western Canada, from the days before Chevalier LaCorne explored the Carrot River valley to the present time.

She was formerly Miss Ethel Kelso, daughter of a prominent Grand Junction fruit grower, and is an expert motorcyclist. Carson will ride on the tandem seat.

Two physicians said there was no water in the lungs of either, and that Mrs. Keesing died of heart failure and Dickenson of fright.

Of the eighteen babies entered, none scored less than 946. None of the country babies entered won a prize.

Uses Boot as Strop; Shaves With Knife

Pioneer Indiana Man Has Never Owned Razor, Mug or Barber Soap.

CONNERSVILLE, IND., Aug. 9.—Zaccheus Adams, Jackson Township, Fayette County, has shaved himself twice a week for 54 years, but never owned a shaving mug, a razor, a strop or a hone. It is Mr. Adams' pride that he keeps his razor, an old Wade & Butcher cleaver, twice as big as a common razor, in the finest trim with the least trouble of any man in the county.

He wears old style, high-toped boots and still has one pair which he bought 26 years ago. Wishing to shave, Mr. Adams first puts on these boots. He then smacks the razor blade back and forth along the leather leg of the left one for a minute or two. His next operation is to moisten his face with rainwater—no perfumed soap for him—and then he just shaves.

NATURE AIDS IN BEAUTY DISPLAY AT PACIFIC FAIR

Picturesque Location Will Add to Grandeur of Palaces of Mammoth Panama Exhibition.

By HAMILTON WRIGHT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—The palaces of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition have been planned upon a massive scale to conform with their impressive natural surroundings. The site of the exposition at Harbor View lies within the city limits as a crescent upon the shores of San Francisco Bay, just inside the Golden Gate.

No more picturesque location, nor one more appropriate to the celebration of a great maritime event could be imagined. On the south, east and west the grounds are encircled by towering hills of varying contours rising successively from 250 to 900 feet above the sea level. Upon the north the site opens out upon the harbor of San Francisco.

Site Natural Amphitheater.

The central portion of the site lies slightly above the sea and is encircled on three sides by gently sloping ground; within a short distance from the boundaries of the site these slopes change to steep hillsides and thus the site becomes the floor of a huge amphitheater from whose sides the exposition will be seen stretched out below. To the east and south the residence section encircles the exposition grounds, and to the west and southwest the site embraced by the wooded slopes of the Presidio military reservation, dark with cypress and eucalyptus and interspersed with occasional vistas of green valleys.

The exposition buildings, built upon an axis east and west, will face the bay upon the north; they will parallel the stream of the great incoming traffic of the world through the western gate of the United States. Ships entering the harbor will pass before the exposition grounds.

The harbor itself will be a part of the great theater upon which will be staged the world's jubilee and the Golden Gate will be the entrance to the theater.

A marvelous panorama will be afforded visitors on ships coming through the Golden Gate. As one looks from the harbor he will see there main groups of exposition buildings. There will be the great central group comprising the fourteen exposition palaces to be devoted to general exhibits; there will be the group upon the left hand or east end devoted to amusement concessions and covering sixty-five acres; this will be the "midway." The right-hand group upon the Presidio Military reservation and nearest the Golden Gate will be devoted to the pavilions of the States and foreign nations.

Tropical Boulevard Feature.

The main group of buildings will lie between a tropical garden or boulevard running east and west along the fringe of hills nearest the city upon the south, and the esplanade along the shores of San Francisco Bay upon the north.

The tropical boulevard, to be known as the "Alameda," will be 1,800 feet in length and 300 feet wide; it will be glowing with fountains, lagoons, statuary peristyles and arcades and, secluded from the winds of the bay, it will be transplanted with a profusion of semi-tropical trees, plants and flowers, including the orange, banana, olive, myrtle and every variety of palm. The east end of the Alameda will open out with a plaza upon Van Ness Avenue, one of the principal boulevards of San Francisco. The west end upon the Presidio will be surmounted by a commemorative arch of triumph.

The prevailing color tone of the exposition will be an ochre, a tawny buff, several shades removed from white, but in the distance giving the effect of white, but will not be glaring under the brilliant sunlight of California. In the courts there will be a marvelous blending of colors; Pompeiian red, strong Italian blues, vermillion and orange will predominate. The court system is unique in that it will permit each architect, artist or sculptor to present some distinct conception without clashing with the exposition architecture and coloring in its entirety.

BACHELOR, 107 YEARS OLD, GIVES SINGLE LIFE CREDIT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Daniel Turner, a veteran of the Civil War, residing at Santa Monica, who celebrated his one hundred and seventh birthday to-day, thanks his judgment in remaining single for his long life and apparent good health at this advanced age.

"My life was never blighted by worry or sickness because I never married," said "Uncle" Dan. "Married men die younger than bachelors. Sometimes death is a welcome relief to the man who gets a modern wife."

Get Ready for End of the World

Flying Rollers Expect It Soon

So Members of This Queer Cult Await With Uncut Hair and Much Footwashing.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—"Now, brethren, watch night and day, for ye know not when the end of the world draws nigh. It may be tomorrow; at least it will come before the year 1920. It is probably much nearer than that," says Brother Lucien I. Pingree. With long flowing beard that has never been profaned by scissors and with silken locks which also have never been clipped, this resident of Stoneham thus warns all those who would be ready when the First Resurrection occurs. "It is coming soon—very soon—very soon," he asserts. Brother Pingree and his band of adherents all are sure of it. The end of the world is close at hand, they all say.

For this reason the Flying Rollers are launcing a great religious crusade which they hope will awaken men and women to a knowledge of their evil ways and will prepare them for the near-at-hand millennium.

Keep on Living.

If you are one of the elect and alive when this auspicious day comes Mr. Pingree says that you will never die. Your body will take on eternal life and though you will be otherwise possessed of man's normal anatomy and will go right on through million of years living in the mortal mold.

Brother Pingree, who is agent and teacher of the Flying Roller faith in this vicinity, lives at No. 1 Forrest street, Stoneham. His church until recently has been at No. 117 Hancock street, Everett. Now the Flying Rollers are to pitch their tent in Malden and launch a propaganda which aims to halt the world in its mad round of pleasure, barber shops and picture galleries.

It is not such a hardship for the women to belong to the Flying Rollers church, but the men have troubles of their own. Their discipline forbids anyone to have his hair cut or to enjoy the pleasure of lying back in a tonsorial chair while the artist with the razor does the rest.

Males Never Cut Hair.

The male brethren never have the corners of their hair or of their flowing beards rounded. "Thou shalt not," says the church discipline. Then there is the ceremony of the washing of feet, which takes place on certain occasions, when elders and elderesses lave each other's pedal extremities and thus conform to other Biblical injunctions. The Flying Roll is a book written by the great Roller prophet, Jezreel Lentioned in the Scriptures as "to come on earth." He came and was here in 1875, wrote the Roll and died about twenty years ago.

Since then the Flying Rollers have read his text with scrupulous care and followed closely in his teachings.

The Flying Rollers believe in the law and gospel. That is, they follow literally the teachings of the Bible. A man who is faithful to the end will live forever. The Bible says that and the Rollers take it literally.

144,000 in the Elect.

Of all the people alive, 144,000 (mentioned in Revelations, Chapter 14) shall be the elect who are to live during the thousand years when Christ is again to be on earth (during the First Resurrection). Then this chosen 144,000 shall enjoy Heaven still with their earthly bodies while the rest of humanity that was, shall minister to them as "ministering spirits."

"The world of wickedness will soon cease. A new world will appear as soon as Christ comes, which will be very soon (I can not give the exact date, but it will be before 1920, there is no doubt about that)," says Pastor Pingree. "In that world there will be no longer this struggle for life. Wonderful fruits and flowers will grow everywhere along the road sides—fruits and flowers more wonderful than we get from hothouses now. Then the earth will be Heaven for a thousand years.

"We believe that those who are faithful to the teachings of our religion will share that thousand years with Christ, wearing their mortal bodies, then clothed in immortality.

"It is no hardship not to cut your hair or trim your beard," says Mr. Pingree. "We tie it up and tuck it in, and by not cutting it or rounding the corners in any way, we are obeying the letter of divine law."

Here Are the Tenets of the Flying Rollers

Thou shalt not shave.
Thou shalt not cut thy hair.
Thou shalt not have thy picture taken.

Be faithful and thou shalt join the 144,000 true believers who will live forever.

Remember that the millenium will be here—probably in a year or so.

Thou shalt not tattoo thy arms.

The prophet is James J. Jezreel.

Follow his teachings.

Feet washing among the brethren and sisters is practiced faithfully as the Bible and extracts from the "Flying Roll" dictate.

Prepare for the first resurrection which is coming soon.

EVERY LUXURY PROVIDED FOR 12 PRIZE DOGS

Private Room, Electric Fans, Leather Chairs, Etc., for Each of Dozen Pomeranians.

BROKTON, MASS., Aug. 9.—Twelve Pomeranians—each with a whole room to himself, and housed in a house which they have all to themselves, likewise—take he prize for dog luxury, Brockton folks believe. Besides a house of their own, the dogs have:

A valet, electric fan, individual beds, a bath twice a day, a back yard to play in, leather chairs and soft rugs (the latter to try their teeth on).

Mrs. E. V. Graves, a leading business woman, owns the dogs. She is successful as the head of a factory here. Brockton folks say she is more attentive to the dogs than Mrs William Carter, of Newport, who got four doctors when her Pomeranian was nervous.

During the hot days the valet, Mr. Beals, fans the little fellows with a specially made $18 electric fan and each dog is given a cold bath at frequent intervals.

"They are all as jealous as can be," says Mrs. Graves. "If you make more of one than another there is a terrible howl and often a fight. They are friendly to children as a general rule. The dogs are worth anywhere from $150 to $1,000 each, but I do not care to sell them. They are a great comfort to me."

HOT FIGHT FOR COMMISSIONER IN BIRMINGHAM

Recorder Wood, "People's Candidate," Denounces Opponent as Champion of Interests.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Clement R. Wood and George B. Ward are engaged in the most spectacular campaign for President of the Commission of Birmingham ever waged in this city.

Wood, as the "candidate of the people," is making many and varied charges against the political element supporting his opponent, Mr. Ward. He charges that he (Wood) was removed as Recorder by the Commission for sending one of their friends to the stockade and insisting on his serving his time, as he did in similar cases.

He also charges that Ward represents the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company and the Birmingham Loan and Discount Company. He charges that the managing editor of one of Birmingham's afternoon papers was forced out of the race under penalty of losing his position on the paper.

He claims that many other prospective candidates have been eliminated from the race by the powerful hand of the interests, and calls on the "common people" to assert themselves in the defeat of Ward.

Ward claims that Wood was discouraged by the Commission because of incompetency, and makes many other charges and insinuations in his speeches and newspaper cards.

Meetings are being held almost every night, and music from brass bands and the orations of the spellbinders are to be heard on every corner.

It is impossible to get a complete line-up, but it can be said with certainty that the race will be close, and that the result will be known only after every vote has been counted.

WOMEN BUY LAND ONE-THIRD CHEAPER THAN MEN

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 9.—After hearing from women of the Council of Clubs the Finance Committee of the upper house of the Council has killed the ordinance to advance $1,000 of the $12,000 set apart for the purpose of making a start on the contemplated women's reformatory at Leeds.

It developed that the $1,000 had been asked by the Board of Public Welfare as a first payment on thirteen acres of ground it proposed to buy at Leeds at $500 an acre.

The women made fun of the business abilities of the Welfare Board, and said that they had already secured an option on 98 acres close by the thirteen at $171 an acre.

Heiress on Lone Hunt for Gold

Seeks Mine Grandfather Found

Plans to Do Own Prospecting

Miss Frances Leighton, an heiress of California, who is prospecting through a section of the Sierra Madre Mountains in search of a gold mine which she believes her grandfather, a "Forty-niner," discovered, but never made known. Recently she heard of the reported "find" and, securing a miner's outfit ,staed alone on the perilous trip through the mountainous wilds in search of it.

Miss Frances Leighton Shows Same Intrepid Spirit of the Argonauts of '49.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—With the same dauntless spirit exhibited by her grandfather during the California gold rush of '49, Miss Frances Leighton, one of the wealthiest and most prominent socially of the younger generation of Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, is on a prospecting tour through the Sierra Madre Mountains to-day in search of a gold mine she had learned her grandfather discovered but never developed.

For many months Miss Leighton planned the prospecting tour before leaving to carry it out. Topographical bureaus supplied her with maps of the mountainous territory through which she planned to make her tour and several veterans of the gold stampede not only advised her against the foolhardiness of the prospective journey, but told her that there was one chance in a thousand of ever greeting civilization again if she lost herself in several untraveled sections of the mountain region that as yet have never been thoroughly explored.

Nevertheless, Miss Leighton had great confidence in the belief that her grandfather did find the mine somewhere in the mountain fastness and she determined to find it, if it did exist, at any cost and without taking into consideration the hardships that confront her.

Miss Leighton, according to reports which have reached her home town, is to-day prospecting at or near the West Fork Canyon, twelve miles beyond Mount Wilson.

Grandfather Killed.

Her grandfather, John Easton, was one of the first of the thousands of New Englanders to reach California, after a perilous journey across the prairies following the report of the discovery of gold in that State.

Soon after reaching San Francisco, he left with his wife and daughter and a partner and established a camp at Sierra Madre. Easton left the camp one day on a prospecting tour and never returned. Three days later his partner went out to search for him. He was found crushed to death by falling rock.

Before his death, however, he managed to draw roughly on a piece of paper what is now believed to be the location of the mine his intrepid young granddaughter is searching for.

Miss Leighton some years ago received a letter from her grandfather's former partner containing the piece of paper on which he had drawn the outline of the supposed mine. It was on receipt of this letter and diagram that Miss Leighton planned to go in search of the hidden gold.

After months of careful study of the many maps, topographical bureau reports and advice from old-time miners, Miss Leighton treated herself to a complete miner's outfit and started on her tedious journey up the mountain.

To Work Alone.

She will do the entire work alone, staking her own camp, preparing her meals, making surveys and using the pick and shovel whenever she believes she has struck the right trail.

Her outfit includes several changes of clothes, a heavy pick and shovel, a mountain mule, or pack animal as they are called in that section of the country, a complete dining and cooking outfit, a pack of playing cards which will afford her her only amusement while practically a prisoner in the wilds, needles, thread and many other useful and necessary articles.

She wears most all the time a pair of regulation top trousers, similar to riding breeches, with canvas leggings and a plain but heavy mountain shirt.

If the gold mine really exists, every one of the young woman's friends believe that she will not return until it has been found.

U. S. EDUCATION EXPERT SAYS ILLITERACY GROWS

BOULDER, COLO., Aug. 9.—That in only two States of the Union has the ideal democracy in education been even approximated; that every year in the United States almost 70,000 illiterates are sent out into the world to make their way; that there are in the country to-day 5,615,000 persons over the age of ten who can neither read not write and that almost 50 per cent of the rural teachers of the country have not had a high school education, were among the startling statements made by United States Commissioner of Education Claxton in an address on "Democracy and Education."

DENVER IS READY TO GIVE KNIGHTS ROYAL GREETING

Thousands of Templars Pour Into City, Which Is Lavishly Decorated for Conclave.

DENVER, Aug. 9.—Thousands of Knights Templar are already here for the thirty-second triennial convention, and it is estimated that when the convention formally opens Tuesday next more than 100,000 Knights and their friends will have arrived.

All buildings are decorated in honor of the Knights, as are private dwellings. The municipal and other public buildings have been elaborately ornamented and great arches have been built over many of the streets. Thousands have been spent upon decorations and illumination. Denver has spent more than fifteen times as much on its plans for the Knights Templar than it ever before expended upon any one convention.

Sun to Shine All Night.

At Eighteenth and Champa streets the huge figure of a Knight more than 60 feet in height has been erected. A searchlight will play upon it all night. At Fourteenth and Champa streets a "Colorado Sunset," a marvelous electrical display, has been built. It shows the sun sinking below the rim of the mountains. Twenty monster searchlights are placed behind the "sun," throwing their rays into the sky to resemble the rays of the sinking sun.

Over the Isle of Safety at Broadway and Sixteenth street, a reproduction of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem will astonish the visitors. It measures 50 by 60 feet, and is lighted by searchlights on the tops of nearby buildings.

Every arrangement possible has been made by the railroads to bring the Knights and their friends into Denver. More special trains will enter Denver than entered Washington in the same space of time for the inauguration. The Pullman Company has reserved large space of ground on the outskirts of the city for a "Car City," where the special cars and special trains will be parked, and where those Knights who so wish may live in the cars. Sanitary arrangements will be perfect. Stores of various kinds for the convenience of the car dwellers have been established.

Two trainloads of automobiles from New York, sent here by New York Knights, have already arrived, and carloads of automobiles from other cities are arriving daily. These have also been parked on the outskirts of the city. More than 500 special trains and cars have already arrived. According to the railroad schedules, when the visitors really commence to flock in a special train will arrive every eight minutes for forty-eight hours.

Every State Represented.

From August 1 to to-day more than 2,000 automobiles reached this city. More than 1,000 other cars are on their way here. The delegates to the convention are from every State in the Union, and from Alaska, Honolulu, Philippines, Canada, England, Scotland and Ireland.

As the special trains began to arrive, some 2,000 Colorado Knights ranged themselves at the station to escort the new arrivals safely to their hotels. Every hotel room in Denver has been rented.

On Tuesday next the grand parade will be held. More than 50,000 Knights will be in line. Their white plumes, costing $15 each, will altogether be worth $600,000. The regalia of the Knights on parade will be worth more than $1,000,000. Sixty-five bands will march with the Knights, the fees to the bands alone amounting to $22,000. Some 600 Knights' commanders will be mounted on picked horses from the ranches of Colorado and Wyoming.

KANSAS SHERIFF RETALIATES FOR HIS ARREST ON SUNDAY

HUTCHINSON, KANS., Aug. 9.—Following his arrest on a charge of violating the Sunday labor ordinance, Koon C. Beck, sheriff of Reno County, announced that he would stop all Sunday labor in this city.

He swore out complaints against 350 persons who work on Sunday, including all street car employees. Beck and a brother are proprietors of an amusement park and shows have been given there on Sunday. Local ministers and church members made the complaint against the park.

LANE TAKES UP CUDGELS IN WAR FOR FARMERS

Secretary of the Interior Has Begun Long Battle on Land Grabbers.

the Interior Franklin K. Lane has started a little war on the land grabbers west of the Mississippi River.

He has taken up the cudgels of the farmer and the homesteader in the great West. His efforts in this direction materially effect the pocketbook of every man, women and child.

Incidentally, he is "bucking" the land speculator. These land "grabbers" have quietly been acquiring vast tracts of land in the West on which the people of the United States have spent over $75,000,000 in irrigation projects. The homesteader has either been ousted through excessive water rate charges or becomes a tenant of the land companies.

Speculators Hold Land.

Secretary Lane finds that the projects were planned for the purpose of aiding the small farmer in tilling his ground, but that in reality 95 per cent of the land is held by speculators, who are charging excessive rates for water which has been sluiced to the land by the Government.

The other 5 per cent of the acreage is owned by the small farmer, but even Government water rates are held by Mr. Lane to be excessively high. Building notes for dam canal and sluice ways add to the cost of upkeep of the farm and conditions, Westerners say, are becoming intolerable.

By going into the question from the very first day that he entered his office, Mr. Lane has become intimately acquainted with conditions obtaining in the West. Daily conferences have been had with delegations from the West. Even the land speculator had his day in court, and his contentions and views were placed before the Secretary.

Farmer Needs Help.

In this connection Mr. Lane announced: "I am for the farmer, first, last and at all times. Naturally handicapped by lack of sufficient funds to carry on expensive farming under the conditions that obtain in the West, the farmer must receive support and co-operation from the Government, if the great West is to be settled and made to be as productive as the East.

"Expensive water will ruin the small farmers and ranchmen. They must have cheap rates and long-time notes, the Government must back them up an extend them credit, helping them over the rough places if necessary, if the various projects designed to benefit the whole people are to accomplish the purposes for which they were constructed.

"Why should this Government spend $75,000,000 for the benefit of private capital? Why should the Government adopt a hard and fast policy, such as has existed in the past, which has kept the small farmer from going into the new regions and taking up Government land? Isn't it time for the United States to extend to the Westerners a little paternal patience, a little more consideration, a helping hand?"

MEN AND RELIGION No. 73

CHILDREN OF GEORGIA

"AND THEY ALL WITH ONE CONSENT BEGAN TO MAKE EXCUSE."

Luke 14:18.

They were at dinner.

Jesus said:

"When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind,

"And thou shalt be blessed."

One at the table pretended to be in sympathy. He began smugly:

"Happy is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God."

The hypocrisy of the man and all others like him was unmasked in the answer made by Jesus. He said:

"A certain man made a great supper and bade many—

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse."

One said one thing, another another.

With one it was a field; with another it was new oxen.

In the end, the Lord said:

"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

And from the highways and the hedges called He His guests.

Are you a maker of hypocritcal phrases as was the man at the Pharisee's dinner table—pretending a love for that which is just and right?

Or, to-day, are you trying to do the will, not of man or men, but of Him who died for you?

Let us have done with excuses!

While spending thousands on fields, hogs and cattle, say not:

"We are unable—

"We can not give proper care to these girls—

"These children must go down in shame because of our lack of money—

"But our beasts we must protect whatever the cost."

If animals are more valuable than girls, let us say frankly: but you know that this is untrue.

You know what Georgia would do.

Consider, then!

The Bill in the House providing a Reformatory for Girls is No. 4—ahead of any other measure appropriating money.

The Penitentiary Committee has approved it.

Unanimously the Appropriations Committee has recommended that it pass.

Why, then, should beasts and fields be provided for by later bills and nothing done for Georgia's wayward and delinquent girls?

BURWELL of Hancock, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman and the vice-chairman, BLACKBURN of Fulton, HARDEMAN of Jefferson, MILLER of Bibb, NUNNALLY of Floyd, PAULK of Berrien, RAGLAND of Talbot, REDWINE of Fayette, RHODES of Clarke, SHUPTRINE of Chatham and SLADE of Muscogee constitute the Rules Committee of the House.

The Bill is in their hands.

Monday is the final day in which the measure can be heard and enacted into law at this session of the Legislature.

These eleven men, THE RULES COMMITTEE, will not prevent a hearing, say their friends. We believe that they will do more, that they will help to pass the Bill.

For they know the worth of a girl-child of ten to fourteen.

And they can appraise a cow or hog.

WOMAN DEITY CREATED MAN, SAYS TABLET

New Version of Genesis Found in University of Pennsylvania Nippur Collection.

DATE IS FIXED AT 2100 B. C.

Dr. Arno Poebel's Discovery Is Regarded as Oldest Story of Origin of World.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—It was a woman who created mankind, according to a tablet 4,000 years old just deciphered at the Pennsylvania University Museum by Dr. Arno Poebel, who is at work translating the tablets dug up in Nippur some years ago by the museum expeditions.

About 37 years ago George Smith, the English scholar and explorer, brought back from Babylonia the cylinders which gave a Babylonian account of the origin of mankind and much of his early history, and these not only excited great interest but had a profound effect upon the theological teachings. The parallelism between the Babylonian story and that of Genesis developed a new school in theological criticism. But the cylinders of Smith only dated back to the reign of Assurbanipal in the seventh century B. C. The university museum tablet dates back possibly to 2500 B. C., and it is reasonably certain to be no later than the reign of Hamurabi about 2100 B. C.

Female Deity Created Man.

The new account of the creation and the flood throws much new light on the early ideas of the Babylonians and Sumerians.

The striking novel features of the new tablet are these:

That it was a female deity who created mankind, known as "the blackheaded," from the color of the hair.

That new deities or new characteristics of the gods are discovered in the original document, although they have been hinted at in other ways. The character of the female goddess is now made important from the earliest times and equal with the two male ruler gods. Later tablets speak of these as unimportant.

That the first seven prediluvian cities and the special god of each are discovered.

That the older Babylonian name of the Scriptural Noah is Zingidda.

That deluge ruins of the predeluvian cities were not all destroyed, some not until historic times. There is historic basis to much of the statement in this epic.

Opens With Poem.

Dr. Poebel has prepared a careful literal translation of the tablet. It originally was about seven inches square, but on such a surface the ancients could write in ideographic signs a long epic poem, and that is what this table contained. Like the first chapter of Genesis, the story opens with a great poem on the origin of the heavens as well as of the earth. It appears that Nintu, a female god, created mankind, and she is found lamenting that the other gods seem bent on the destruction of her subjects. She speaks of the human beings as "my creations." It appears that Anu and Enlil were the chief gods of power, although they were among seven of equal rank, the first being god of heaven and the second god of earth. Then comes the story of the creation:

"Nintu created the blackheaded." (human race.) * * * "The fields of the ground produced abundance, the cattle and the four-legged beasts of the field artfully they (the gods) called into existence."

Use of Fireproofed Cotton Goods Urged

State Fire Marshal Says Stores in Kansas Sell No Other Kind.

TOPEKA, Aug. 9.—Harrison Parkman, State Fire Marshal, believes that stores ought to sell only fireproof cotton goods.

In the new State fire textbook the Fire Marshal is urging that every Kansas man and woman refuse to buy any but fireproof cotton goods and that they adopt the German method and fireproof all cotton materials.

The Fire Marshal believes that this action would decrease the number of deaths by fire in Kansas fully 50 per cent and it would make a big decrease in the number of fires in the homes of the State.

Raze House While Occupant Is Away

Workmen of Grade Crossing Commission Destroy House of Man Who Blocked Work.

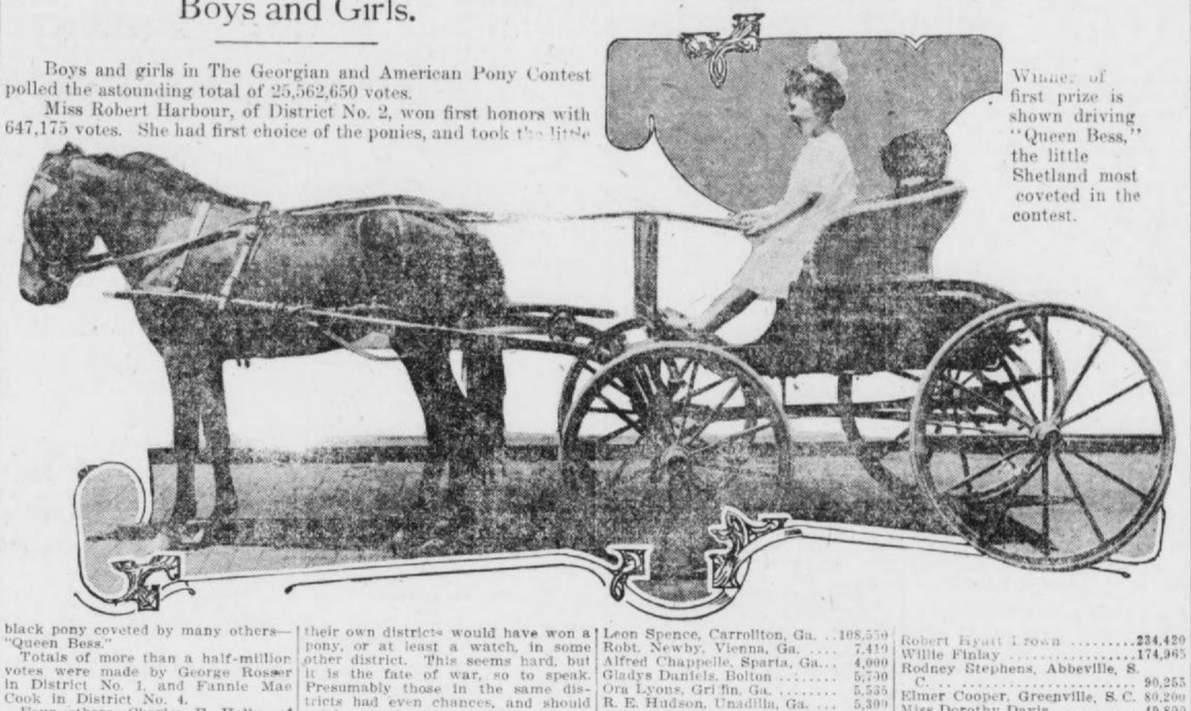
CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Aug. 9.—While John Barber was in Boston this afternoon, a wrecking crew, under orders of the special grade crossing commission for Central Falls, demolished a cottage house he owned on Cross street, and then started in to saw off a corner of the Barber Livery Stable nearby. When his land was condemned, Barber demanded $5,000 for the property, but was allowed only $3,500. The grade crossing commissioners sold the cottage to Nicolas Bertozzi, but Barber would not let Bertozzi on the premises.

25,562,650 VOTES FOR PONIES

Astounding Mark Reached in Great Contest

Race, Thrillingly Close to the Last, Showed Courage and Ability of Boys and Girls.

MISS ROBERT JESTER HARBOUR, 340 Ponce DeLeon avenue, who polled largest number of votes in Georgian and American's great Pony Contest.



Winner of first prize is shown driving "Queen Bess," the little Shetland most coveted in the contest.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American Pony Contest polled the astounding total of 25,562,650 votes.

Miss Robert Harbour, of District No. 2, won first honors with 647,175 votes. She had first choice of the ponies, and took the little black pony coveted by many others—"Queen Bess."

Totals of more than a half-million votes were made by George Rosser in District No. 1, and Fannie Mae Cook in District No. 4.

Four others, Charles E. Kelly, of Cartersville, with 439,460; Frank Ison, Jr., of College Park, with 474,090; William Turner, with 439,930, and Ross Greer, with 440,925, climbed over the 400,000 mark, and neared the half-million level.

All Had Big Totals.

All the others had big total votes—large enough to win in any ordinary contest. But this was no ordinary contest. It was harder fought than any competition of the kind in the history of Atlanta. This was inevitable, because the prizes were more attractive to children than any which any Atlanta newspaper ever before had offered.

A remarkable feature is the way the contestants were "bunched" at the finish. In many districts there are five, six and even ten who were serious contenders for the prizes up to the very count.

Some of those who were fifth in their own districts would have won a pony, or at least a watch, in some other district. This seems hard, but it is the fate of war, so to speak. Presumably those in the same districts had even chances, and should not be permitted to compete with the boys and girls working in a region where the going, perhaps, was much more difficult.

Credit to the Losers.

Hats off to the losers!

Every one of them is "game." There has not been a complaint of unfairness—not a single kick at the method in which the contest was conducted. Nothing but a spirit of fair play, and the motto, "Let the best man win," has prevailed.

There is this much consolation—the boys and girls who worked sincerely in the contest have gained experience which will be invaluable to them in later life—an insight into business methods worth more than any prize.

Then, too, they have the satisfaction of knowing that they have aided in introducing Atlanta's best newspapers into homes where they were strangers before.

Mends Own Socks To Let Wife Vote

Illinois Husband Consents to Do Washing to Prove Housekeeping Isn't Hard.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Just to prove to an expectant world that he was a good husband, Wayne Colby stayed home, mended the socks, tended the children and washed dishes while his wife cast her vote in the first election under the universal suffrage law recently enacted.

"Just to show that it is not such a terrible thing for a man to stay at home and do the housework on the occasional voting day," said Colby, "I thought I would help Mrs. Colby out with the washing."

The first woman to cast her vote in the State was Mrs. Fannie Coleman, of Wamac, near Central Illinois. She was accompanied to the polls by her husband, O. W. Coleman, and both voted for Village Trustees.

HAUPTMANN WRITES PLAY OF MONTEZUMA'S REIGN

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Gerhart Hauptmann is writing a new drama, to be called "The White Saviour," and which deals with the introduction of Christianity into Mexico by the Spaniards under Cortez.

One of the principal characters is its King Montezuma. It is predicted that the play will be a striking piece of Christian symbolism and that it will have some remarkable scenic effects.

WOMEN WHO JOG WIFE UPON A RAIL AWAIT SHERIFF

Illinois State's Attorney Says Volo Vigilantes Who Maltreated the Town Beauty Must Answer.

VOLO, ILL., Aug. 9.—Here in Volo, Lake County, Ill., the women who rode Mrs. John Richardson, the town beauty, on a rail will have to answer to the grand jury. The State's Attorney Ralph Dady, says so.

Gossip caused the trouble. Mrs. Richardson is pretty. Her husband, who keeps the small country store, is a cripple. William Dunnill, a brother-in-law of the wife, was a frequent caller.

The village women descended on the Richardson store, dragged her out on July 14 in the evening, set her astride a rail and bore her, struggling, screaming, almost raving, through the main street of the little town, climaxing the incident by dumping her into a mud puddle by a roadside and warning her to "pack up her traps and go," meaning thereby an ultimatum that she must forever leave Volo.

And, paradoxical as it may seem, all of this happened within forty miles of Chicago.

Slips Away During Night.

After the vigilantes had dumped Mrs. Richardson into one of the various mud puddles which abound in the vicinity, the victim emerged from her oozy bath, went by a circuitous route back to her husband's store, conferred with him and slipped away during the night.

It was impossible to employ an automobile, buggy or other conveyance the night she left, and to remain over until daylight was out of the question, because members of the mob had warned Mrs. Richardson that if the sun rose upon her in Volo again they would tar and feather her.

Her husband witnessed the abduction of his wife, but, being unable to rise, could render her no assistance.

It is estimated that at least half the male population of Volo witnessed the hazing of Mrs. Richardson. In fact, it is said that the women who committed the outrage had previously taken their husbands and brothers into their confidence and that the proposition had been indorsed in family council.

It was expected that Will Dunnill, brother-in-law of Mrs. Richardson would interfere in her behalf, but he left Volo a few hours before the attack. Therefore, Mrs. Richardson's husband being disabled, and her brother-in-law being absent, she was without champion.

Husband Defends Her.

Just before Mrs. Richardson's flight from Volo, her husband gave her $1,500.

To a newspaper man, Richardson said:

"My wife is a good woman. She is not guilty of the charges the other women make. I won't believe it. A woman who has cared for me during my invalidism for the last nine years, who married me when I was an invalid, knowing there was no hope of my recovery, would not be guilty of what they charge.

"And to think that I was helpless to save her from the indignities which were heaped upon her. Her clothing was half torn from her and amid jeers and cheers and the throwing of mud and stones, she was ridden through the streets. It was an act of Middle-Age barbarism and hardly worthy of women of Illinois, who have just obtained the right to vote."

Meanwhile the women of Volo, who are supposed to have played the role of vigilantes, are calmly awaiting developments.

Husband Says She Kissed Count's Foot

Wife Brings Counter Charge That He Is Unduly Friendly With Stepmother.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Counter suits have been instituted in divorce proceedings by Harold D. Johnson, of the Colonial Life Insurance Company, and his wife, Mrs. Harriet L. Johnson, in the Supreme Court at White Plains.

The husband alleges that his wife is so infatuated with a certain Italian count that she frequently kissed his foot.

Mrs. Johnson alleges undue intimacy on the part of her husband with her stepmother, who is designated in the complaint as "one Anna J. R."

Johnson has entered a general denial to his wife's charges, while the wife's attorney, Mirabeau Towns, ridiculed the foot-kissing episodes complained of by Johnson.

No More Matrimony For Julia Sanderson

Former Wife of Tod Sloan Says She Will Never Tire of Single Life.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Never again." This was the terse reply of Julia Sanderson, the actress, when she arrived here on the steamship Adriatic and was asked if the reports that she intended to marry again were true.

After dealing that solar plexus blow to the matrimonial rumor, the former wife of Tod Sloan gave out her ideas on marriage.

"When a girl is free and single she can have all the fun in the world," she said. "It is different when you are married. Nobody wants to talk to you. Nobody wants to see you. No more barriers for me."

Twin Boys' Skin Is Turning to Black

Eighteen-Month-Old Babies Are Suffering From Rare Malady Known as Hodgkin's Disease.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black. The disease is pseudo leucaemia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpurcles greatly diminished.

The twins are the children of Anthony Amato and they were born eighteen months ago. They were then white. Then their skin began growing dark.

Men's Farewell Kiss Mistaken for Fight

Ardent Osculation at Railroad Station Causes Commotion Among Passengers at Gate.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Smack!"

A score of persons hurrying to and fro in the Pennsylvania Railroad station yesterday stopped short.

"Smack!"

The sound was repeated. Turning in the direction from which it seemed to emanate, the curious among the persons in the station saw two well-dressed young men in each other's arms.

Both men were of athletic build and none of the persons who stopped to watch their antics from a distance cared to interfere. When it seemed as if the taller of the two was about to be thrown, they separated suddenly.

Then the gates to the train shed were thrown open and an announcer called upon all intending passengers bound for Jamaica, L. I., and points east to go aboard the waiting train.

That seemed to be a signal for a recommencement of hostilities.

"Smack!"

Sure enough. It sounded again distinctly, but there was no mystery about the cause this time.

"Good-bye, Pierre," said the taller man; "don't forget to write." And a fourth time they kissed before parting.

ROMANCE LEADS TO HEIR'S EXILE FROM GERMANY

Lieutenant in the Kaiser's Army Comes to Chicago and Joins U. S. Cavalry.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Because his love for a pretty German actress resulted in his squandering an inheritance of $32,000 in one year, Dr. Otto Gordon Goldfield, scion of a wealthy family, a lieutenant in the German cavalry and a graduate of Gottigen University, was forced by his father to come to the United States and join the army here as a private. The young German is now in barracks here.

Ruth Werner, German dancer and singer, charmed the young man when in Vienna. His grandfather had just died and left him $32,000. Within a year this was gone, and after numerous appeals to his father, Dr. Goldfield was forced to come here.

Told to Give Up Girl.

His father, who is the vice president of the Corporation of Hamburg, told him to give up the girl, his commission in the army and go to America.

"I fell in love with the girl," explained "Private" Goldfield, "and spent all my money on her. She was beautiful. If she wanted jewels I bought jewels. We were at Monte Carlo. She wanted to play the games. She was beautiful, and I loved her, so why should she not be happy?

"We were in Paris, at the Horse Show in London, and many other places. She had automobiles and fine horses.

"And then my money gave out. My parents refused to give me more, and my father forced me to come to the United States and try for a commission in the army.

"Will I go back?" responded Dr. Goldfield in answer to a question. "Yes, when I get my commission here I will go back and the girl and I will be married. But not until then. I must stay in the army here until I am a lieutenant.

Likes Open Air Life.

"It's the open air, and beautiful I like here more than anything else. That is why I have come to the West.

"And your soldiers—well, next to the French dragoons they are about the best in the world, in my opinion, and I have seen the troops of all the larger countries. That's why I am enlisting as a private here, for I like the life and will stay anyway until I get my naturalization papers."

Goldfield is twenty-five, and has served the last four years in the German cavalry as a lieutenant. He is an experienced horseman, and says he was the winner of the championship at the International Horse Show held in London two years ago, riding the horses from his father's stables.

Jacob Goldfield, father of the young army officer, besides being vice president of the Hamburg Corporation, is a well-known German jurist, as is also his brother, Rudolph Goldfield.

FIGHT FOR LIFE OF CARMACK IS ON THIS WEEK

Prominent Young Alabaman Is Accused of Slaying Confederate Veteran Near Columbus.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—The fight to save the life of Homer Carmack, a member of one of the most prominent families of East Alabama, from the gallows will begin Tuesday.

Carmack will be put on trial at Opelika, the county site of Lee County, Alabama, on a charge of murdering J. J. Folke, an aged Phenix City merchant, on Sunday night, June 25. The body of Folke, who was a Confederate veteran, and who lived in his store alone, was found early on the morning of June 26 when customers went to the store to make purchases.

At first glance it seemed that there was absolutely no clew to the slayer, but before noon officers had succeeded in arresting Carmack and had traced the greater part of an amount which the old man had and which it is believed Carmack got to when Carmack had paid debts. He was arrested at the Union Depot in Columbus as he was preparing to leave the city.

The crime was one of the most revolting ever committed in this section, as the aged veteran was literally hacked to pieces. Indignation ran high for several days, but Carmack was taken to Opelika, where he has been held in jail pending his trial. He belongs to one of the oldest and most prominent families in this section, his father having been a county official for many years. He has already been indicted and able counsel has been employed to represent him.

Grade Crossing Row Continues to Bob Up

Columbus City Council and Railroads Unable to Settle Eleventh Street Problem.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—The Eleventh street grade crossing, in this city, like Banquo's ghost, has bobbed up again. The city and railroads can not agree on the manner in which the grade crossing can be eliminated. A proposition has been submitted for building a viaduct at a cost estimated at $200,000, but the Central of Georgia is not favorably inclined to the proposition, because it would have to pay about half of the amount. Another proposition has been to build an underpass, but this is not considered advisable.

Mayor Chappell has been of the opinion that by properly engineering the scheme, he could force the railroads to build it without the city being compelled to do its part, but it seems that the railroads do not propose to fight such a move.

Manufacturers Say Roads Act Unfairly

Columbus Brick Makers Appeal to Railroad Commission, Charging Discrimination.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—A number of local brick manufacturers and dealers have filed complaints with the State Railroad Commission, alleging that the railroads of Columbus are discriminating against them to the injury of their business. September 2 has been named by the commission for the manufacturers to present their argument.

Another case of alleged discrimination by a Columbus manufacturer is that of the Columbus Iron Works Company, one of the largest concerns of the kind in the South, which alleges that the company has been forced to pay a higher freight rate on three cars of plow points to Tyler, Texas, than was charged on the same class of goods from Wilmington, Del., to Tyler.

COLUMBUS FAIR SUFFERS LOSS OF BEST SUPPORT

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—Columbus probably will not hold a fair the coming fall. The merchants had expressed themselves favorably toward the proposition, but in an effort to reorganize the old Georgia-Alabama Fair Association, the officers failed to arouse any enthusiasm, and it may be that the entire matter will be allowed to drop.

STRIKING PLUMBERS NOT GUILTY OF INTIMIDATION

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—At a preliminary hearing before Judge Philip Elder, four plumbers, Charles Stoffel, Mark Garrett, C. E. Cooper and J. B. Forbes, all charged with intimidating plumbers, who refused to strike with them, were released. The trouble grew out of a demand made by the plumbers for a $5 scale, an increase of 50 cents per day.

COLUMBUS SCHOOL FUND SHOWS HEALTHY BALANCE

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—The annual report of Henry R. Goetchius, president of the board of trustees of the Columbus public schools, shows that the total receipts of the public school fund during the year ending July 1, 1913, were $81,367.13, leaving a balance on hand of $1,100.

TRADE BOARD SECRETARY GIVES CITY NEW SLOGAN

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—A new slogan has been adopted by Columbus, having been suggested by William B. Powell, the new secretary of the Columbus Board of Trade. The slogan is: "The Place With the Push and Power."

Family Sees Woman Drain Poison Bottle

Little Credence Given Her Despondent Threats to Take Her Own Life.

VALDOSTA, Aug. 9.—Mrs. Will McDonald, of this city, took an overdose of a narcotic last night, it is believed, with suicidal intent. She had been in a despondent condition and had threatened to kill herself, though her family and friends seemingly attached little importance to her threats.

She was seen by members of her family to swallow the poison, and a physician was hurriedly summoned. Her condition was very grave, but the doctor succeeded in arousing her from the stupor. It is believed today that she will recover.

BANKRUPTCY SUIT FILED AGAINST BREWING PLANT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—An involuntary bankruptcy suit has been filed against the Consumers' Brewing Company. The moving creditors are M. S. and D. A. Byck, the Herman Coal and Wood Company and J. A. Rimes.

The Consumers' Brewing Company was organized about a year ago to take over and operate the old brewing plant left by Herman Winter, near the Cathedral Cemetery. The company started off with elaborate plans, and intended making a stupendous amusement park of the grounds, but business was disappointingly bad.

ACQUITTED OF HOMICIDE, HELD ON WEAPON CHARGE

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—When Lathrop George, slayer of Henry McClelland, the man whom he charged with despoiling his home, walked out of the Superior Court a free man with all his troubles at an end, as he thought, he reckoned without those whose duty it is to enforce the law, as a warrant has been taken out charging him with carrying a revolver without a license.

George was unable to arrange bail and was recommitted to jail.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—About 50 men from the First Regiment Infantry, National Guard of Georgia, are taking daily rifle practice in an effort to secure ten men to compete in the Labor Day shoot at the Rose Dhu Range.

Several valuable trophies are offered. The DeRonne trophy, valued at $2,000, is the most coveted.

2 States Co-operate For Fair in Valdosta

Lowndes County Organization Organizes and Plans for Yearly Festive Week.

VALDOSTA, Aug. 9.—The formal organization and election of officers for the Lowndes County Fair Association was completed at a meeting last night. G. W. Varn is president; S. L. Dowling, vice president; J. M. Ashley, secretary and manager; Paul Myddleton, treasurer.

The association will hold the Georgia-Florida Fair in this city from November 4 to 8. The association is a regularly chartered institution and was incorporated with the idea of holding fairs in this city every year.

MOTHER-IN-LAW; TROUBLE; SLAPPING; DIVORCE SUIT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Too much mother-in-law was a disrupting element in the marital affairs of Mrs. Emma E. Chance and R. E. Chance, who have projected their disagreement into the divorce branch of the Chatham Superior Court.

The suit is filed by the wife. One of her grounds of complaint is that her husband forced her to allow his mother to live with them. But that wasn't the worst of it. She charges that her husband on one occasion held her while her mother-in-law slapped her for some alleged dereliction of wifely duties.

CHATHAM ARTILLERY TO ORGANIZE NEW BATTERY

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Steps looking to the organization of a second battery of the Chatham Artillery have already been taken. First Lieutenant Ed G. Thomson will command the new battery and Lieutenant E. D. Wells the old one. Captain Richard J. Davant, Mayor of Savannah, and at present commanding officer of the Chathams, will be chosen for the majoralty.

SEABOARD SPECIAL AGENT RESIGNS HIS POSITION

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Thomas Ballantyne, former chief of the Savannah fire department, but for several months special agent of the Seaboard Air Line Railway on the Hutchinson Island terminals, has resigned, and J. R. Whitten, of New Orleans, has been named to succeed him. It is understood that Ballantyne will accept a position as chief of a department in a neighboring city.

STREET GRADING HALTS CORDELE IN PAVING WORK

$40,000 in Bonds Has Already Been Voted for Improvement, but Complications Arise.

CORDELE, Aug. 9.—The delay in getting the streets of Cordele paved, for which $40,000 of bonds were voted fourteen months ago, may be prolonged by a complication which is expected to arise over making the street gradings to provide this improvement. The total amount to be expended for street paving is $120,000, of which $80,000 is to be paid by the property holders.

It appears that because of the lack of proper judgment of a former city engineer in setting out the grades for the streets several years ago will cause the new grades to work a hardship on the property holders. It is claimed that if the grades are made according to present plans, some sidewalks will have to be raised, while others will have to be lowered by several feet.

The Streets Committee of the City Council was named at a recent meeting of that body to act with Mayor Harder in getting a profile showing the proper grade, which work, the Bond Commission claims, is already being carried on by their engineer.

LAD LEARNS WHETHER STEAM CAN HURT HIM

AMERICUS, Aug. 9.—Curiosity as to whether scalding steam issuing from an engine pipe of a construction plant would hurt him caused the rather painful injury of little Willie McNeill, son of W. W. McNeill, to-day. The boy placed a foot on the escape pipe and the hot steam scalded the limb to the knee before he could remove it.

Waltz and Swo-Step Enough for Cordele

Chaperones Put Ban on Hugs, Tangos, Trots and Other New Steps.

CORDELE, Aug. 9.—The bunny hug, tango, turkey trot and other modern dances are entirely too immodest in the opinion of the fair sex of Cordele who are accustomed to the waxed floors. Like the silt skirt, such dances will probably not come in popular favor at any early time in this city.

Chaperons at local balls recently have positively forbidden the new dances, and the young folk, no matter how ardently, but perhaps secretly, they may desire to introduce them, must let the waltz and two-sten still suffice.

LATE REGISTRATION FOR LABORERS TO QUALIFY

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Beginning on Thursday, the registration books for the auditorium bond election will be kept open until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, until they are finally closed on August 15. An order to this effect has been issued by Mayor Richard J. Davant.

The request that the books be kept open until a late hour in the afternoon came from the Chamber of Commerce in order that working men might have a better opportunity of registering. Heretofore they have been closed at 2 o'clock each day.

FORT SCREVEN BAND TO PLAY FOR SAVANNAHANS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Arrangements have been made for public concerts Monday and Thursday evenings each week by the band at Fort Screven.

Because of objections raised by the Musicians' union, the Fort Screven band has been prevented from playing at Tybee this summer, previous similar objections not having been effective. This year the band was permitted to give only a few concerts at the pavilions.

CONFESSES TO SLAYING WHEN REFUSED PARDON

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Frank Collier, a negro whose application for pardon was refused by the Prison Commission in Atlanta, to-day broke down and made a complete confession of his responsibility in the murder of Lewis Robinson, another negro, pleading only that Robinson was attempting to cut him with a knife. Collier has heretofore maintained innocence.

SAVANNAH WIVES SUE BROTHERS FOR DIVORCE

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Alleging cruel treatment and statutory causes, Mrs. Frances Zipperer has filed suit for divorce against Robert Zipperer in the Superior Court of Chatham County. This is the second divorce petition filed by a Mrs. Zipperer in two weeks. Mrs. Aline Zipperer, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Frances Zipperer, filed the other.

Lee County to Build Colony Tract Roads

Eight Miles of Highways To Be Constructed Through Central of Georgia Property.

LEESBURG, Aug. 9.—The Board of Commissioners of Lee County have decided to build modern sand-clay roads through the 4,000-acre tract of land, near the Dougherty line, recently acquired by the Central of Georgia Railroad for colonization purposes. The proposition was presented to the Lee County commissioners by representatives of the Albany Chamber of Commerce. This action is the last preliminary step in the development of this tract of land. The railroad will divide it into small farms to be sold to settlers from the North and Northwest.

The roads to be built will be about eight miles in length. They will traverse the tract in various directions, connecting with the main road between Albany and Leesburg.

Want Street Paved At Albany Station

Councilmen Urge Improvement Before New Depot Is Opened—Now Unsightly Thoroughfare.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—That North street should be paved before the new terminal station is opened is the consensus of opinion of members of City Council.

The Atlantic Compress Company some years ago was allowed to build sidetracks in North street and the sidewalk was moved out to the center of the street to make room for the tracks. The new compress north of town was completed almost a year ago, and the old plant abandoned. The tracks have been removed, but the city has never moved the sidewalk or graded the street as it should be.

$100,000 Fertilizer Plant Is Under Way

Contractors Begin Work at Albany in Twenty-four Hours After Swift Makes Award.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—Ground has been broken and work is progressing on the new fertilizer plant of Swift & Co. At a meeting in Atlanta this week, the contract was given the Griffin Construction Company, of Atlanta. Within twenty-four hours workmen were on the job and teams were hauling dirt, excavating for the foundations.

The new plant will be located just north of Albany, on the 10-acre site recently purchased. The investment of the company in site and factory will be considerably more than $100,000, it is stated.

Snap Bean Farming On Big Scale Planned

Pensacola Merchants Agree to Aid in Finding Most Profitable Marketing Points.

PENSACOLA, Aug. 9.—At an enthusiastic meeting of farmers of the Roberts-Gonzales community, this county, last night, at which experts made addresses, it was decided that an experiment will be made in the cultivation of snap beans on a large scale in that locality. Several farmers agreed to plant a certain number of acres each on the co-operative plan and ship to Northern markets. The crop will be planted during the present month. Business men of this city agreed to aid the farmers in securing a market.

It is thought that this will prove one of the most successful crops for this section, as experts say the soil is peculiarly adapted and that climatic conditions are ideal.

OLDEST U. S. CITY MAY ADOPT COMMISSION FORM

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 8.—Sentiment has suddenly focused in St. Augustine upon commission form of government for America's oldest city. A wrangle in City Council which resulted in some Aldermen nearly coming to blows and in which one said he was "in a crowd of sharps" was the final straw, and a movement is now on foot to call an election to vote upon a charter change.

St. Augustine voted down such a change two years ago, but other local issues at the time beclouded the main question.

HOME OF CUBAN LIBERTY AT TAMPA TO BE RAZED

TAMPA, Aug. 9.—The old Criterion Theater, famous during the period preceding the Spanish-American war as the place where many of the Cuban plots against Spain were hatched, is to be torn down to make way for a new vaudeville theater, announcement just being made by Lee Dekle. The old Criterion was a great gathering place for the Cuban patriots in the early nineties and was famous or infamous even as far as Madrid.

CAMPHOR TREE RAISING TO BE TRIED IN FLORIDA

BRADENTOWN, Aug. 9.—Two 20-acre tracts have been donated to the United States Department of Agriculture and an experimental farm will be established here. Professor Stockberger and Professor Hood have been here and the Board of Trade has made arrangements for money to aid in the experiments. Experiments in growing camphor trees, which it is believed can be made a profitable industry in Florida, will be among the first made.

TAMPA WANTS BRANCH OF COLORADO SPRINGS HOME

TAMPA, Aug. 9.—Tampa will try for the establishment of a branch of the Union Printers' Home at Colorado Springs, the union typos being anxious to have a sea level branch somewhere. The City Tax Assesor, a former linotype operator, will lay the matter before the convention in Nashville.

JOINS TAMPA TEAM.

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 9—Newt Mabry, one of Tallahassee's fast amateur ball players, left this week for Tampa, where he has accepted a position on the Tampa team. Another of Tallahassee's players, Ira Watson, is playing in that city.

BODDIFORD GIRLS RECOVER FROM NEGRO'S ATTACK

Victims of Cairo Tragedy in Hospital at Thomasville Anxious to Return Home.

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 9.—The two Boddiford girls, Mary and Rhoda, who were among the victims of the attack of the negro Ed LeConte near Cairo last week, are still here at the City Hospital and are improving.

Both girls when brought here had high temperatures and their condition seemed serious, but it is believed now that they will recover and be able shortly to return home.

Mary, the older girl, whose nose was partly cut off, will, of course, suffer from some disfigurement. She also lost six front teeth and had some slight scalp wounds.

Rhoda, the young girl, who suffered a severe scalp wound and was considered in a more serious condition than her sister, is also recovering. Both are very anxious to get back to their parents and the young children that they feel need their care.

Reports from the bedside of Mr. and Mrs. Boddiford, at Cairo, show them still holding their own, but with no certainty of recovery. The skulls of both have been trepanned and upon the outcome of the operation within the next few days will depend their chances for recovery. The younger children are being cared for by some of their neighbors.

$57,357 Increase in Tift County Returns

Tax Receiver Fletcher Finds 6,000 Acres of Land Not on the Books.

TIFTON, Aug. 9.—Tift County tax returns for the present year show an increase of $57,357 over the returns of last year. Figures were compiled by Tax Receiver George W. Fletcher. Three districts, Chula, Omega and Eldorado, show increases, while five Tifton, Tyty, Brookfield, Brighton and Dosia, show a decrease.

will be cleared in four days.

An interesting fact concerning the returns was that nearly 6,000 acres of unreturned land were found by the tax receiver and placed upon the books. This in part accounts for the increase in returns. The increase in 1912 was $15,945.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—As J. C. Edmunson, of Atlanta, and Miss Emma Lou Hilsman, of Albany, whose engagement has been announced, were driving through an alley, taking a short cut from Jackson to Washington street, near the Albany Produce Company's warehouse, the horse became frightened at an automobile and ran away. The buggy crashed against a telephone pole and Miss Hilsman was thrown out, her head striking the pole. It was at first thought she was seriously hurt, but later she was found to be only bruised. She was carried to a doctor's office and later to her home.

FARMERS MAKE MONEY ON HAY AND FODDER CROPS

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 9.—This is fodder pulling time in South Georgia, and in Thomas County the crop is the largest known in many years. The corn crop is almost unprecedented.

Farmers who have finished fodder pulling have begun on their hay cutting, and that crop, too, is a good one. In view of the high prices of Western hay the farmers in this section have devoted more time and land to growing hay than formerly.

IN PRISON SEVEN HOURS; SUES FOR $300 DAMAGES

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Charging that he was arrested without justification, J. L. Rushin has filed suit for $300 damages in the Superior Court of Chatham County against Patrolman C. H. Long, of the local force, and W. R. Warren, of Washington County.

Rushin was exonerated in Police Court on a cheating and swindling charge, but he had already been incarcerated for seven hours.

MARKETS 1912 COTTON AFTER '13 SEASON IS ON

AMERICUS, Aug. 9.—Just to show how independent many farmers of this section are, Farmer Hart, of Schley County, rolled into Americus to-day on a wagon loaded with four bales of last year's cotton. Though the first bales of the season are coming in fast, Mr. Hart brought a load that he had not been compelled to sell and received an extra good price for it.

Albany Bankers Ask Part of $50,000,000

Want Government Money to Aid in Moving Southwest Georgia Cotton Crop.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—That the Albany banks should receive a portion of the $50,000,000 Government money that is to be placed for the marketing of cotton in the South is the general feeling among Albany bankers. Two banks here are United States depositories and are called upon to furnish money for the marketing of cotton several weeks earlier than the banks in Macon, Atlanta and Savannah.

J. S. Davis, vice president of the Citizens First National Bank, has requested L. P. Hillyer, president of the Georgia Bankers' Association, to make a personal appeal to the proper authorities in Washington for a portion of this money to be used in Southwest Georgia.

Albany Sees Value in River Improvements

Chamber of Commerce Committee Named to Keep in Touch With Work.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—With the purpose of keeping close tab on the work that is done to improve the Flint River and to see that money appropriated and spent is used to the best advantage, President J. A. Davis, of the Albany Chamber of Commerce, has appointed a committee to look after the matter. The committee is composed of H. A. Tarver, J. E. Tooke and T. M. Ticknor.

The Chamber of Commerce and the people of Albany have been brought to a realization of the importance of the Flint River in its influence on freight rates, and is determined that it shall no longer be neglected as it has in the past.

Farmers Organize For Tift County Fair

Planters Take Lead of Project Given Up by Merchants and Former Promoters.

TIFTON, Aug. 9.—At a meeting of Tift County farmers to-day the holding of a Tift County fair this year was discussed and with great enthusiasm. Permanent organization was effected and the matter will be pushed by the farmers.

The fair association which has lost money on two fairs held in Tifton was unwilling to undertake another and as the merchants were slow about raising the money, the farmers took the matter in their own hands.

TRUCKERS ORGANIZE TO EXPLOIT SOUTH GEORGIA

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 9.—The adaptability of South Georgia soil and climate for truck farming is being shown more and more every year and there is no doubt that in the near future there will be great developments in this section along this line. A truckers' association is being planned. The organization will be perfected in a short time and its officers and plans made public.

SEABOARD OFFICIAL IS PREPARING FOR REMOVAL

AMERICUS, Aug. 9.—H. B. Grimshaw, superintendent of this division of the Seaboard, is in Americus supervising the renovation of the offices which he will occupy here beginning August 16. The offices will be re-established in the Seaboard shops, whence they were removed to Savannah several years ago.

DOUGHERTY NOW SEEKS TO HAVE COURT OF OWN

Movement to Take Albany Out of Present Judicial Circuit Will Come Up Again.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—That the movement to take Albany out of the Albany Judicial Circuit was not entirely abandoned when Senator Ford withdrew his county removal bill from the Senate has become quite apparent since that time by the discussion of those who attended the committee hearing in favor of the bill among other friends of the movement here.

A plan is now on foot whereby an effort will be made to create a new superior judgeship for Dougherty County alone, the idea being to abolish the City Court of Albany, and have the new court judge to do the work of both courts.

Those who favor the movement contend that Albany is large enough now to have a court of its own.

It is argued that Albany and Dougherty County have enough court business to justify such a move. It is proposed, in the event this plan meets with favor among the people of Albany, that a bill to create the new judgeship be introduced in the Legislature at its next session, as there is hardly time to perfect the plans and get such a bill through at the present session.

It would be necessary to have an election, or at least a petition signed by a majority of the voters of the county, and that also will require considerable time.

LEAVES LIGHTS BURNING AND GASOLINE EXPLODES

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—As Sam Jay, an employee of the Standard Oil Company, was filling a tank of a runabout on which the tail lights were burning, the can, which contained about five gallons, exploded. Jay was severely burned about the arms. He saws he knows now that lamps should be extinguished before the fiery liquid is handled.

SPEER RESENTS CRITICISM AND PASSES UP SUIT

Beach Manufacturing Company Bankruptcy Case Goes to Judge Newman's Court.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—That Judge Emory Speer, of the United States Court, has "washed his hands" of the Beach Manufacturing Company bankruptcy proceedings, and desires that Judge Newman, in Atlanta, take over the entire case, is shown in an opinion, a copy of which has been received in the bankruptcy court office here.

It appears from the record that the Beach Manufacturing Company moved to have Judge Speer disqualified from considering a certain phase of the case because the judge's son-in-law, A. H. Heyward, Jr., is one of the attorneys for the receiver of the alleged bankrupt. This motion appears to have annoyed the judge, causing him to express the following opinion:

"There was a petition filed in this cause in behalf of the Beach Manufacturing Company to restrain the receiver from cutting certain timber for crossties for the purpose of raising money to feed the live stock, and when the matter came on to be heard there was some discussion as to whether the Judge of the Southern District of Georgia was qualified.

"I do not think I am disqualified in any matters in which Mr. Heyward does not have a pecuniary interest. He does not have any pecuniary interest as to whether the mules are fed from the proceeds of crossties or whether they are fed from the grass and reeds along the swamps or otherwise, but as there is obviously some little maneuvering one way or the other, I don't know how, which raises the question of my qualification, I wash my hands of the whole thing.

"I will have nothing to do with it. Since he kindly expresses his willingness to try it, you can go to Judge Newman with the entire case."

Public Inquiry Into Railroad Accident

Central of Georgia Inaugurates New Policy of Investigations of Mishaps on Its Lines.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—For the first time in this section of the country, and in furtherance of a rule established by the Illinois Central, the controlling line, that all accidents to passenger trains where passengers are injured, be publicly investigated at the scene of the mishap, the Central of Georgia Railway made an inquiry into the accident at Oliver Tuesday morning, when seventeen passengers were more or less badly hurt. The inquiry was conducted by disinterested parties selected by the railroad. They were Marion Lucas and John Kennedy, of Savannah, and Dr. A. D. Kanler, of Oliver.

It was decided after full investigation that the accident was due to some obstruction, presumably the tie bar from the front truck under the tank of the engine which was pulling the train. The tie bar fell and was dragged through the frog, breaking the frog and causing the derailment. The track at the point of the accident was laid with 80-pound rails, on pine and cypress ties. The switch ties, which were of oak, were also found in good condition.

91-year-old Order In Chatham Court

Judge Charlton Passes Paper Authorized by Grandfather in Same Court.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—An order signed in the cause of Harry Haupt and others against John Haupt in the Superior Court of Chatham County, July 24, 1822, was before Judge Walter G. Charlton, in the same court, this week.

The old order was passed by Judge Charlton's grandfather, Judge Thomas U. P. Charlton. In tracing a record Edmund H. Abrahams discovered that through an inadvertence the then clerk of the court had neglected to put the old order on the minute book.

Abrahams obtained an order nunc pro tunc from Judge Charlton to have the decree recorded on the current minute book of the court. This was done. The old decree was written with pen and ink in an old-fashioned handwriting. There were no typewriters in those days.

WAYCROSS HOSTELRY PUT UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Effective today W. A. Jones, Jr., became manager of the Virdie Hotel, succeeding N. H. Slaughter, who will return to his home in North Carolina. Mr. Jones conducted a boarding house which was recently destroyed by fire here. He proposes to make extensive improvements at once on the Virdie.

THIEF STEALS WARDROBE OF WAYCROSS CANDIDATE

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Alderman Scott T. Beaton, of the Fourth ward, a probable candidate for mayor, is on the warpath. During his vacation at Mayport some one entered his home on Gilmore street and went off with his best clothes, a lot of silverware, some of his wife's dresses and a shotgun he had just purchased. The kitchen window was smashed with an ax and whoever robbed the place made a good job.

Must Not Tie Barges To Government Piling

U. S. Engineer at Savannah Says Wornout Hulks Rot at Moorings.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Because owners of disabled barges and other vessels persist in tying them up to the Government piling in the Savannah harbor, it is probable they will be arraigned in the United States Court and subjected to a heavy fine.

Speaking of this violation of the Federal law, Colonel Dan C. Kingman, United States engineer for this district, said:

"Uncle Sam is patient and long suffering. He puts up with a lot of annoyance rather than be disagreeable. But finally spurred into action, he is likely to make things lively. It looks to me as if something of this kind is about to happen here pretty soon on account of the action of certain imprudent owners of vessels and barges who persist in tying them up to the pilings forming a part of the training wall of Savannah harbor, and leaving them until they sink. These vessels are not only unsightly, but are a great menace to navigation."

Savannah Platoons To Get Gun Practice

Dummy Mortar from Government Arsenal To Be Mounted by the Regulars.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Reaching Savannah from the Government Arsenal at Augusta, and carried to the Park extension by the Gadsden Contracting Company, the mortar for the dummy emplacements of the Savannah Volunteer Guards is now resting on the ground ready to be mounted.

This dummy mortar is an exact replica of the most modern 12-inch mortar in use anywhere in coast defense work with the exception that it is too lightly constructed to be actually loaded and fired. The Guards will use it in practice firing.

The mortar pit is on the Whitaker Street side of the park extension. The mortar will be mounted by a special detail of officers and men from Fort Screven as soon as the carriages arrive.

High Life Lands Boys In Jail at Waycross

Youngsters Went to Brunswick and 'Splurged' on Lacy Green's Money.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Fast and reckless living for a day in Brunswick caused the arrest of two youngsters of Waycross, Archie Douberly and Mason Walker, both 15 years old, and they are in jail pending an effort to get bond.

The boys got a sum of money said to have amounted to between $30 and $50 from Lacey Green last Sunday night and left Waycross the next morning to enjoy life. They stopped at the most expensive hotel in Brunswick, rode about in an auto, bought new clothes and had the best time possible off the money they secured. A relative heard of their whereabouts and they were brought back to Waycross.

The preliminary hearing given before Judge Harry M. Wilson resulted in their being bound over to City Court for trial.

Tybee Season May Include September

Central of Georgia Willing to Run Trains Another Month if Travel Justifies.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—The Central of Georgia Railway will continue summer schedules to Tybee island through September if assurances are given that the cottagers and others will remain at the resort in sufficient numbers to justify the expense.

The Central has, in fact, been willing to prolong the season for several years, but the people invariably return to the city during the latter part of August, which means that there will not be sufficient daily traffic to justify the extra trains. It has heretofore been the invariable custom to officially close the Tybee season after Labor Day. An agitation on the subject is now on among the people at Tybee. The season at the resort is now in full swing.

Bacon's Man Named Savannah Collector

David C. Barrow Is Son of Confederate Soldier and Well-Known Lawyer.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—David C. Barrow has been appointed Collector of Customs at Savannah to succeed William R. Leaken.

The appointee is the personal choice of Senator Bacon. Leaken's term of office expires about the middle of the month. It is thought that Barrow will be confirmed by that time.

Barrow is a member of a very distinguished Georgia family. He is a son of the late Pope Barrow, who was judge of the Superior Court of Chatham County, a member of the Georgia Legislature in 1880, and a lieutenant in the Confederate army. He is a nephew of Chancellor Barrow, of the University of Georgia. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia, a practicing attorney in Savannah, and was assistant city attorney under the last Tiedeman administration. For several years he has been prominent in Savannah politics.

Stage Door 'Johnny' Has Fractured Skull

Theatrical Man at Savannah Hits Loiterer With Revolver—Now Under Arrest.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—George Prince, director of a theatrical company playing at the Princess Theater, is under arrest charged with assaulting W. P. Kehoe, who is suffering with a fractured skull.

According to Prince, Kehoe, with other young men had been loitering at the rear of the theater, annoying the performers. He warned them to stay away. Kehoe, he says, attempted to strike him when he hit Kehoe over the head with a stage revolver. At first Kehoe was not thought to be seriously hurt. Not only is his skull fractured, but there is probably concussion of the brain.

PIERCE INSTITUTE HAS FLATTERING PROSPECTS

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—According to President W. A. Huckabee, Pierce Collegiate Institute, Georgia's newest college, located at Blackshear, east of Waycross, will open in September with a very flattering attendance. The college is a Methodist institution and owns buildings valued at $60,000.

MODEL HIGHWAY TO REACH TYBEE NOW ADVOCATED

Commercial Leaders of Savannah Urge Extension of Estill Avenue to Resort.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Probability of the Chatham County Commissioners issuing bonds for the extension of Estill avenue to Thunderbolt, making it a model highway throughout, has brought forth two suggestions—one from Joseph F. Gray, executive officer of the Chamber of Commerce, and the other from Arthur W. Solomon, secretary of the Savannah Automobile Club and a member of the board of directors of the trade body.

"The extension of Estill avenue to Thunderbolt as a model road," said Secretary Solomon, "is a splendid idea, and I hope the plan will be carried through. The county owes only $25,000 in bonds. Why can not the new issue be made for $1,000,000 if necessary? Then we could extend Estill avenue on to Tybee Island, by the Wilmington Island route, making a fine automobile road to that resort. This would be a splendid thing for the development of a vast territory as a farming country and trade center easily accessible to the local merchants when it becomes settled, which would result in a short while if there was easy vehicle access to and from the city."

Thunderbolt Has Road.

"The plan to improve the road from the terminus of Estill avenue to Thunderbolt is a splendid idea," said Executive Officer Gray. "But there is already a fine road to Thunderbolt. It certainly would be a great thing for the County Commissioners to build a model road from Savannah to Tybee by the Wilmington Island route. But if bonds are issued to put through the whole scheme, let's start the work from Tybee to Savannah. When we get the road to Thunderbolt it will be plenty of time to build from Savannah to that point."

Secretary Solomon in urging the Tybee highway scheme points out that Tampa, Fla., has just authorized the construction of a brick highway 27 miles out of that city to meet the southern terminus of the road which is being built out of Jacksonville. He thinks if the people of the county in which Tampa is located can appropriate money for a 27-mile highway the people of Chatham, a much more wealthy and prosperous county, could provide for a road from Savannah to Tybee, a distance of eighteen miles.

Solomon Revived Scheme.

The matter of building a road to Tybee was revived some time ago by Secretary Solomon, as a director in the Chamber of Commerce. The proposition was at that time referred to a special committee. The matter at present remains in statu quo. However, it is quite likely that the scheme to have the County Commissioners issue bonds for the Thunderbolt and Tybee road will be brought to the attention of this special committee.

There is now no intercourse with Tybee except by the Central of Georgia Railway. Tybee Beach is the most popular summer resort on the Georgia coast. Such a road as proposed would immediately become popular with automobilists. Tourists also would take advantage of the opportunity to visit the resort.

Negro Gun 'Parties' Denounced by Judge

Judge Charlton Suggests Militia Kill Everybody Found on Festive Battlefields.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—In sentencing a man in the Superior Court for shooting another not in his own defense, Judge Walter G. Charlton denounced in strong terms certain places in the county where colored people congregate and fight.

The particular trouble before him occurred at Crescent Park, near Sandfly Station.

These places are a terror to the community," declared the Court. "It would be a good idea to have the militia ordered out sometimes to kill everybody who is found at these places."

Monteith, Woodsville, Baker's Crossing and several other places of equal familiarity in court records were mentioned by the Court in the course of his remarks.

The jury did not think the crime was assault with intent to murder, and so found the defendant guilty of shooting at another not in his own defense, recommending that he be punished as for a misdemeanor. The Court disregarded the recommendation and sentenced the prisoner to two years in the penitentiary.

The prisoner was William Jones. He and John Pauline were conducting a dancing pavilion at Sandfly, and Jones shot Pauline while trying to wing another negro.

WAITER SLAPS MESSENGER; IS HELD ON TWO CHARGES

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Because he attacked a messenger boy of the Western Union Telegraph Company here two charges have been preferred against C. G. Mototis, a waiter.

The waiter slapped Thornton Staley, claiming that the boy had killed a pet cat. Later he said he was merely playing, but the affair created considerable excitement at the time. An older brother of Staley wanted to handle the waiter personally, but friends interfered.

WAYCROSS PAVING LAWS HIT ATLANTIC COAST LINE

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Because its tracks pierce the heart of Waycross and are parallelled in almost every instance by some of the main streets, the Atlantic Coast Line is being put to heavy expense by the sidewalk and street paving campaign. The latest paving ordinance, covering Plant avenue from Butler street to the city limits, will cause the Coast Line to pay a third of the cost for the entire distance, the avenue running along the road's right of way. The other portion of Plant that is paved is of brick and the Coast Line paid a third of that.

HEART OF TOWN SOUGHT IN SUIT IN BANKRUPTCY

Trustee After $30,000 of Wesley Realty Transferred to Wife of Failed Merchant.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Suit for the recovery of a large part of an incorporated town in Emanuel County, as a bankruptcy asset, has been filed in the United States Court by R. A. Flanders, trustee in bankruptcy for Cook and Fountain. The property was transferred to Mrs. Hattie Fountain, wife of one of the parties, a short while before the bankruptcy petition was filed.

The real estate involved is situated in Wesley, a township located about halfway between Swainsboro and Vidalia. There are nineteen town blocks in the tract, much of which is improved. The postoffice has been erected on one of the lots, and there are numbers of residences going up on others. As soon as suit was filed J. Ben Wilson, deputy marshal, went to Wesley to serve the papers on Mrs. Fountain.

Land Worth $30,000.

It is estimated that under fair market conditions the land sought to be recovered would bring $30,000, in which case all of the creditors would be paid in full. But there is certain to be a lively fight unless a compromise is effected.

Cook and Fountain, merchants, failed last December. Their petition was filed at that time, and Flanders was apponted trustee. The liabilities of the firm as scheduled amounted to about $20,000. There were only about $3,000 n assets. None of the land named in the suit now filed was scheduled. It did not develop until some time later that this property figured in the case.

Trustee Charges Plot.

It has been now ascertained that almost immediately prior to the filing of the suit in bankruptcy the firm had deeded to Mrs. Fountain, wife of one of its members, the parcel of land which constitutes practically the heart of Wesley. Under the law assets transferred within four months of the date of filing a bankruptcy petition may be recovered. The contention is made that Cook and Fountain were insolvent when the deed to Mrs. Fountain was made.

The charge is made by the trustee that the transfer was made with the intention of hindering, delaying or defrauding the general creditors.

Million Dollar Gain In Ware County Taxes

Collector Chases Dodgers and Announces Intention of Making a Perfect Record.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—From his hasty examination of the 1913 tax returns for Ware County, Tax Collector J. T. Strickland is confident a large amount of property subject to taxation has not been returned and he announced to-day that he intended getting every bit of it on the tax books within a few months. That his work will give Ware an increase of at least $1,000,00 0is practically certain. As the report now stands the returns for 1913 show an increase of $546,349 over 1912.

The big growth of Waycross is the main cause for the gain shown.

The tax rate, now $15 a thousand, will probably be reduced to $10. The collector says he thinks he will make a collection record for the year of 100 per cent, something that has not been done in this county up to date.

New York Gas 'Tips' Wasted on Waycross

City Council Ignores Wall Street Promoter's Proposal to Build Plant.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Aldermen of Waycross have evidently had enough of the gas proposition, judging by the lack of interest taken by City Council in a communication from a New Yorker showing how the city could build a gas plant and operate it at a profit instead of giving a franchise to outsiders.

The proposition was made to the city when it was learned that a bond of $2,550 given by George W. Deen and L. M. Aldrich as evidence of their intention to spend no less than $20,000 within a year, had been declared forfeited.

By spending $85,000, the New Yorker claimed, Waycross would have a money-making plant. The success of the municipal gas plant at Albany was given as an illustration. The Waycross City Council ignored the proposal.

SENTENCE OF YEAR FOR CONVICTED GUN TOTERS

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Judge John C. McDonald has shown that he proposes to stick to the twelve-month sentence for persons found guilty of carrying concealed weapons. Clifford Johnson, a negro, is the latest to find that it means a year's job with the county chaingang to carry a gun. Hardly a case of this kind has been disposed of in City Court without the twelve-month sentence being imposed, and the gun-toting habit is said to be declining rapidly as a result.

BRUNSWICK BOY CHOSEN FOR WEST POINT CADET

White Way Proposed On Brunswick Street

Landowners and Merchants to Form Stock Company and Install Lighting System.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 9.—The efforts made the past week to put in a white way along Newcastle street no doubt will culminate in this improvement being made in the near future.

It is the intention of those working for the white way to form a stock company composed of the landowners and merchants along the street, who will be called upon to take an amount of stock on the basis of the frontage of their buildings. The movement has met with considerable encouragement, and it is now considered a certainty that the principal business street of the city will take on this improvement in the next two months.

Southern to Improve Brunswick Terminals

Railway to Spend $20,000 on Buildings to Handle Naval Stores Business.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 9.—Extensive improvements will be made by the Southern Railway upon its buildings in the local yards and docks, for which an appropriation of $20,000 has been made. Cement foundations will be built under the buildings at the Turtle River docks, and other improvements will be made on the other docks of the company in the city.

It is the purpose of the company to rebuild its present facilities and put them in the best of condition so as to be able to handle the increased traffic which will come through Brunswick owing to the changes in the naval stores business.

Killing of Bachelor Mystifies Officers

Despite Strong Alibi, Tom Bullard Is Held for Death of Farmer Mack Spain.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Whether or not Mack Spain, the eccentric bachelor farmer of Mexico, a small place west of Waycross, was really murdered and robbed or committed suicide in a fit of despondency, is a question that has arisen in view of the alibi offered by Tom Bullard at the preliminary hearing given him this week, but in spite of which he was bound over to the fall term of Superior Court.

Bullard asked a friend to kill Spain and get all his money, but claims the statement was made merely as a joke. Spain's body was found in a small pond 2 miles from his home three weeks after his disappearance. Bullard himself found the body, which fact argued in his favor, although the testimony of witnesses was to the effect that no one could have seen the body in the pond without having had previous knowledge of its whereabouts.

A careful search has so far failed to find any of the money the farmer had with him and at his home.

Too Much Money to Spend in Waycross

City's Income More Than Pays All Expenses—Tax Rate To Be Cut Down.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—With a $780 appropriation for twelve months, the committee on parks and cemeteries of Waycross City Council expended only $1.30, according to the financial statement for the first six months of the year just issued.

Practically every department of the city is keeping within its budget, and will end the year with a balance to its credit. The engineering department, with $14,454 available, has spent only $6,011.96. Out of an appropriation of $10,240 the fire department has spent but $3,855.38.

The revised estimate of income places the total for 1913 at $156,442.43. The estimate when the year's appropriations were made was $151,960. The expected increase will therefore leave the city a neat balance to start 1914 with.

In addition to these expenditures the city is spending $100,000 in permanent improvements, this money coming from a bond issue voted last year.

$5,498 Suit Brought For Rescuing Dredge

Owners of Tug Columbia Dragged the Maryland Out of Beaufort Harbor.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Claiming $5,498.50 damages and salvage, a libel has been filed in the United States Court by R. S. Salas and F. H. Meader against the dredge Maryland.

Salas, as chief owner and president of the Standard Fuel and Supply Company, and Meader, as master of the tugboat Columbia, claim this sum of money for time, labor and material expended by the tug in hauling the dredge in and out of the harbor at Beaufort, S. C., and claim $3,500 of this amount for the work of salvage or rescue done by the tug.

The dredge, which is said in the libel to be worth $50,000, was towed out of New York harbor on May 27 last by the tug under contract between the Home Dredging Company and the Standard Fuel and Supply Company, the latter being the owners of the tug. The contract price for taking the dredge from New York to Savannah was $1,500.

The dredge Maryland is now in the Savannah River. The libel will be tried at the coming term of the United States Court.

The libel recites a full account of the rescue of the dredge on her way down the coast.

NEWSPAPER MAN AT SAVANNAH IS SEEKING OFFICE

City Editor Lucas of The Morning News Wants to Succeed Baker as Postmaster.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—On the supposition that Marcus S. Baker, postmaster at Savannah, who has recently been investigated by the Postoffice Department in Washington, is about to be retired as a result of that investigation, Democratic candidates for the position are becoming active.

Among these is Marion Lucas, at present city editor of The Savannah Morning News, who seems to have the lead over prospective opponents, both in the energy with which he is working and the political support which is behind him.

Lucas was active in the last municipal campaign, and stands well with the present Administration. There is scarcely any doubt that he will secure the backing of the Administration. It also is said that he will have the indorsement of Congressman Charles G. Edwards, although the latter has stated that he is not promised to any candidate and will not advocate anyone for the position until he has conferred with the President on the subject.

Lucas has addressed a circular letter to practically all Democratic voters in Savannah asking for their support. He has a great many friends among the rank and file of the people. Lucas himself says that he has the promise of sufficient support to land the job.

It is believed that the retirement of Postmaster Baker will be in effect within the next 30 days.

Efficiency Idea in Vogue in Savannah

Auditor's Report Expected to Start General Shakeup Among City Officeholders.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Because of the absence of Chairman W. J. Pierpont, of the Finance Committee, the report on the audit of the city's books was not submitted to Council this week.

Before the report goes to Council it will be considered by the Finance Committee. Chairman Pierpont is now on a vacation. A special meeting of Council will likely be called to act upon the report.

The auditors have suggested that a controller be appointed and placed in charge of the administration of the financial affairs of the city. This will do away with the office of City Treasurer. In all probability Captain C. S. Hardee, who has served the city efficiently for over 30 years, will be retired on a pension.

All departments of the city that are not managed properly are criticised in the report. The auditors have found, for one thing, that the office of Tax Assessor can be greatly improved. It is also pointed out that the work in this office does not require the appointment of three assessors.

SLAYER TAKEN AFTER SEARCH OF 16 YEARS

Brother's Tireless Quest Results in Capture of Negro Who Killed B. C. Booth.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—After eluding officers and the persistent search maintained by a brother of the man he killed at Manor January 25, 1897, Will Eady, a negro, has been apprehended near Blountstown, Fla., and unless he demands requisition papers, will be lodged in Ware County jail within the next week.

Eady shot and instantly killed B. C. Booth at Manor when Booth called at his home to see him about a debt of $12. The negro went into the house on seeing Booth approach and refused to reply to his calls. Thinking the negro would go out of the back door, Booth started from the front of the house toward the rear. As he turned a corner he was shot down by Eady, who stood by a window and fired three shots from a revolver.

Negro Makes Escape.

An hour's start enabled the negro to escape, despite the vigorous efforts to overtake him. At the April term of Ware Superior Court that year an indictment charging Eady with murder was returned, and on this he will be tried at the next term of Superior Court.

From the time it was known the negro had gotten away until his capture near Blountstown a brother of the slain man, W. S. Booth, kept up a search for the negro. Probably 50 negroes arrested in various sections as suspects have been viewed by Booth.

It was learned to-day that since his murder at Manor, Eady was involved in another crime in Florida at a place known as Cooks on St. Andrews Bay, twelve years ago. Eady's father-in-law, a negro named Giles, had a dispute with a white man named Smith, whose home was at Valdosta, and shot him. While Smith was in a dying condition on the ground Eady approached and kicked him, saying that the man was not dead and asked for the gun.

With an oath, he then fired three shots into the white man's body. Eady and Giles went into Alabama, where a search covering several months was conducted without success. As far as is known, Giles is still in Alabama.

Eady Reported Lynched.

But for a report that Eady had been lynched shortly after the shooting of Booth it is believed the officers would have located the negro and brought him to trial. As it was, the report was believed and people who had been aiding in the search stopped and returned home.

W. S. Booth has kept a standing reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest of Eady, and it is thought that the State's reward of a like amount, while not now standing, will be renewed and paid to those responsible for the finding of Eady.

LIND CALLS ADMIRAL IN CONFERENCE AT VERA CRUZ

Ambassador Sends Mysterious Message to Commander of Fleet for Meeting Immediately on His Arrival at the Mexican Port.

Huerta Maintains Iron-Hand Attitude in Spite of International Menace From Revolutionary Armies and Threatened Coercion.

Special Cable to The American.

VERA CRUZ, MEX., Aug. 9.—John E. Lind, special envoy to Mexico, arrived here at 1 o'clock this afternoon on the battleship New Hampshire. He was at once transferred to the battleship Louisiana.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 9.—Captain Snowden, of the battleship New Hampshire, at the direction of John Lind, Special Ambassador from President Wilson to Mexico, to-day sent the following wireless to Admiral Fletcher, commander of the flotilla of United States warships in the harbor here:

"Governor Lind wishes to see the United States Consul and Admiral Fletcher immediately upon his arrival at Vera Cruz Saturday. Governor Lind will not go to Mexico City until Sunday."

Sensational rumors were circulated as to the cause for the conference. The New Hampshire will probably arrive this evening.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Maintaining his iron hand attitude in spite of international menace from revolutionary armies and threatened coercion, Provisional President Huerta to-day continued his diplomatic battle with the United States by giving orders to draft another note of protest against the coming of Special Ambassador Lind, unless the United States recognizes Mexico or halts Mr. Lind before he arrives in this city.

Situation Is Tense.

A tense situation exists here pending the arrival of Mr. Lind, who has been retarded by the State Department at Washington.

Huerta's hope that defiance of the United States might break down the revolutionary spirit in the north seems to have been futile, according to a message from General Venustiano Carranza, leader of the rebels.

This was a reply to overtures to Carranza to join his forces to the regular army in the event of a "foreign invasion." However, Huerta has gained fresh followers among the radical element by his defiance of President Wilson. Supporters of the provisional president charge that the United States is preparing to act as it did in Cuba.

Sensational reports were current today relative to the diplomatic mission of General Felix Diaz to Tokio. Ostensibly Diaz is going to thank the Japanese Government for its representation at the Mexican centennial, but the belief is growing that Japan has consented to make a treaty with Mexico, and that Diaz is really a special ambassador. This treaty, it is reported, has to do with a league of common interests and not with commercial right. It follows the movement of the Government to invite 50,000 Japanese emigrants here to colonize the state of Morelos, which has been nearly depopulated by the rebellion.

Insists on Recognition.

Whether Huerta has any more cards to play in his diplomatic fight against outside interference with Mexican affairs is a question known only to the provisional President and his closest advisers. Huerta insists on "recognition and no parley," but the Government is not in condition to enforce his threat by war.

The national treasury is nearly depleted, and the army material of the country has been thinned to a minimum by three years of revolution.

By diplomacy, however, he might still be able, by playing upon the Latin-American republics' fear of annexation and upon the hostility of foreign powers to the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine, to force the United States into a compromising position.

Even Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy here, is not acquainted with the details of Mr. Lind's mission. He has so informed the Mexican Foreign Minister.

Sulzer Used Funds Of Campaign to Play Market, Is Charge

Chairman Frawley, of Investigating Committee, Says This Is Enough to Warrant Impeachment.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Governor William Sulzer, of New York, was nearly $50,000 in debt as the result of stock market speculations at the time of his nomination, and used contributions to his campaign fund to make additional purchases of stocks while this debt was hanging over him, according to testimony presented to the Frawley committee of the Legislature.

The evidence is sufficient to warrant proceedings to impeach the Governor for violation of the corrupt practices act, Chairman Frawley declares. A decision as to the committee's recommendation is expected by Monday.

The Governor, according to the evidence, had dealings with three different stock exchange firms and was saved from being sold out by one firm by L. N. Josephthal, a Wall Street banker, and a member of the Governor's staff as naval reserve aide. Josephthal, it was brought out, paid a debit balance of $26,739 still standing against the account on July 15 last. This was after the Governor had received repeated calls for more margin.

The Governor's transactions with other firms were for cash, and it was in connection with one of these that Governor Sulzer, according to the evidence, used campaign contributions.

Callie Hoke Smith Capital Debutante

Make-up of First Democratic "Bud Bouquet" Puzzles Washington's Younger Set.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The make-up of Washington first Democratic debutante bouquet is the question that is agitating the younger set. It is confidently expected that Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, daughter of the Speaker, will be one of the buds, and Miss Frances Moore, the daughter of Clarence R Moore, one of the Titanic heroes, another.

Resident society will furnish two attractive debutantes, who are not only socially prominent, but from Democratic families as well. They are Miss Margaret Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Britton and Miss Beatrice Clover, the youngest daughter of Rear Admiral Clover.

A debutante from the Congressional set will be Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia. Other Congressional buds are the Misses Weaver, Church and Duval.

Manuel Pawns His Father's Decorations

Former King of Portugal Unable to Struggle Along on Income of $100,000 a Year.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Despite his allowance of $50,000 a year from King George and at least that sum from private sources, it is learned that former King Manuel, of Portugal, has been forced to pawn the decorations once belonging to his father. One of these decorations, a diamond cross with a large sapphire in the center, is still in the hands of a pawnbroker near Richmond, where Manuel is now staying with his mother, Queen Amelie.

The fortunes of the dethroned monarch will be recouped by his approaching marriage. It is known that he is very extravagant and his mother is none too practical.

The German Emperor has settled the puzzling question of how to treat the exiled monarch's marriage to a German princess. He will allow Prince Eitel Frederick to attend as a special guest, but not as his personal representative.

GIVES OWN LIFE TO SAVE THOSE ABOARD BOAT

Divers Exploring Wreck of Steamboat Peters Lee Find Modern Jim Bludsoe in Hold.

ALL THE PASSENGERS ESCAPE

Engineer Kept Craft's Nose Stuck in Mud Until All Save He Were Safe on Shore.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 9.—Divers who explored the steamboat Peters Lee on the bottom of the Mississippi River at Lake Providence, La., to-day reported finding the body of Engineer Frank O'Neil, his hand holding the engine throttle.

He died there when the boat sank last night, having stayed at his post and held the boat's nose against the shore until the last of the 50 passengers, most of them women, were helped ashore.

O'Neil's act is practically a realization of the martyrdom of Jim Bludsoe, famed in the poem as the steamboat engineer who held her nose to the bank till all were saved, then was burned to death at his post.

A dance was on when the Peters Lee struck a sunken coal barge. A hole was torn in her side. The captain ordered the pilot to steer for the shore. The boat struck the mud, and officers and crew began taking off the passengers.

Frank O'Neil in the engine room kept the stern wheel churning while the water poured into the hold.

A negro shouted through the engine room door that the boat was sinking.

"I know it!" shouted O'Neil. "You fellows get on up front where you can get off! I'll hold her nose against the shore!"

The last passenger was safely landed when the boat sank in 40 feet of water.

Sir Oliver Lodge, of London, Will Give World Results of His Researches.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Sir Oliver Lodge, whose researches into the unknown world made him famous, will assert at the meeting of the British Association on September 10 a belief in "an ultimate continuity of existence before and after death as essential to science."

It is inferred he has at least new evidence to offer of immortality.

He once told the world "the boundary between life and death is still substantial, but is wearing thin in places."

Slit Skirts Furnish Mosquito Clan With Choicest Barbecue

Trainload of Winsome Stenographers and Milliners Have to Tramp Through Stegomyia Belt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"All those in favor of slit skirts, please stand up."

Millions of full grown mosquitoes and three or four little fellers were rushing wildly out of their apartment houses on he Flushing Meadows, about 7 o'clock last night, and took part in the most rollicking barbacue ever held in the East.

Right in the middle of the salt grass waste were five cars of a Long Island Railroad train, stalled. The lights were out, men were running up and down shouting orders and Flushing was two miles away. After the train had stood for a few minutes, out of the passenger cars poured the choicest morsels of humanity that Mr. and Mrs. Culex Pungens and the little Pungenses ever saw. There were stenographers, typewriters, cashiers, millinery attaches and buxom matrons. Slit skirts were numerous.

In an endless procession the five hundred and more suburbanites trailed over the ties toward Flushing. There is some style in the mosquito belt and every member of the family seemed to know at once which of the passengers was dressed a la mode. The squeals and slaps of the fair ones as they tried to stop the onslaught sounded like a tattoo.

The procession lasted for more than two hours and when the last stenographer reached home a unanimous vote was taken declaring the mosquito a pest. Of course, there were some men along, but what self-respecting mosquito would bother with them at such a time?

FRANK OR CONLEY? STILL QUESTION

Issue Firmly Drawn Between Two Men

Crime Definitely Fixed on One of Pair

Leo Frank in his seat in the court-room where he is fighting for life.

The prisoner is shown in the unconcerned attitude he assumes most of the time.

Not a move escapes this man's restless eyes, though his face is calm.

Famous Case to Solve Mystery of Slaying of Mary Phagan Enters Its Third Week With Public Opinion Constantly Shifting.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The second week of the trial of Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan in the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26, came to a close Saturday noon.

The State's case has been entirely made up in its primary aspects, and the defense has gone into its story of the great crime sufficiently to make clear both its theory and probable line of pleading.

The public, as the case has progressed, has been swayed this way and that, and to-day the remarkable mystery of Mary Phagan's untimely and tragic end remains, in hundreds of minds, quite as much of a mystery as ever.

The Battle Is a See-Saw.

The State has had its good days and its bad days, and the defense has met the same fate. At times things have seemed dismally dark and gloomy for Frank, while at other times the clouds apparently have lifted from about him decidedly.

This much has been made clear:

Either Leo Frank will be shown to be responsible for the death of Mary Phagan, or Jim Conley will.

The one is the heart and soul of the State's contention, and the other is the heart and soul of the defense's contention.

Frank is battling not only to clear himself but to convict Conley.

Conley is battling not only to clear himself, but to convict Frank.

The only difference is that Conley, although not yet indicted, expects to be convicted as an accessory after the fact of the murder, in any event, whereas Frank, already indicted, expects to come absolutely clear and free of all possible connection with the crime.

The one has a heretofore good name to restore in all of its unblemished integrity, the other has merely his present reputation for criminal inclination to preserve against sinister enlargement.

The issue has been sharply and indelibly drawn—it is either Leo Frank's life for Mary Phagan's, or it is Jim Conley's.

The State has shown, or has endeavored to show the following things:

THAT Frank, shortly after noon on April 26, and before five minutes past noon, lured Mary Phagan, for an immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory, and there, because she would not yield to his desires and demands, he knocked her down and immediately thereafter strangled her to death with a small cord, about one-eighth of an inch in thickness.

THAT after strangling her, Frank remained with her dead body until after a girl caller in his office had departed, when he tiptoed to the front of the floor whereupon the murder had been consummated, and secured the help of a negro sweeper, Jim Conley, employed about the place, to dispose of the body.

THAT Conley, under the direction of Frank, wrapped the dead body in a piece of heavy cloth, carried it to the elevator, and thence on the elevator to the basement, where it was placed in an obscure corner in the rear, later to be found by Newt Lee, a negro night watchman, generally held guiltless of direct connection with the crime itself.

THAT Frank, after hiding the body, with Conley's assistance, then induced Conley to write and place beside the dead girl certain illiterate notes fixing the crime, in so far as they might, upon some other person than either Frank or Conley, and that Frank for Conley's services, paid him the sum of $2.50, but not until he had first paid him $200, which was withdrawn under promise to restore that sum later.

THAT Frank had an understanding with Conley, whereby Conley was to return to the factory later in the afternoon on Saturday and burn the body in the basement furnace, but that Conley

Jack London Puts Joke on His Appendix

Novelist Tells the Latest on Former Part of Himself and What's Left.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Here is the latest joke Jack London, the famous author, is telling on himself:

LIND CALLS ADMIRAL IN CONFERENCE AT VERA CRUZ

Ambassador Sends Mysterious Message to Commander of Fleet for Meeting Immediately on His Arrival at the Mexican Port.

Huerta Maintains Iron-Hand Attitude in Spite of International Menace From Revolutionary Armies and Threatened Coercion.

Special Cable to The American.

VERA CRUZ, MEX., Aug. 9.—John E. Lind, special envoy to Mexico, arrived here at 1 o'clock this afternoon on the battleship New Hampshire. He was at once transferred to the battleship Louisiana.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 9.—Captain Snowden, of the battleship New Hampshire, at the direction of John Lind, Special Ambassador from President Wilson to Mexico, to-day sent the following wireless to Admiral Fletcher, commander of the flotilla of United States warships in the harbor here:

"Governor Lind wishes to see the United States Consul and Admiral Fletcher immediately upon his arrival at Vera Cruz Saturday. Governor Lind will not go to Mexico City until Sunday."

Sensational rumors were circulated as to the cause for the conference. The New Hampshire will probably arrive this evening.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Maintaining his iron hand attitude in spite of international menace from revolutionary armies and threatened coercion, Provisional President Huerta to-day continued his diplomatic battle with the United States by giving orders to draft another note of protest against the coming of Special Ambassador Lind, unless the United States recognizes Mexico or halts Mr. Lind before he arrives in this city.

Situation Is Tense.

A tense situation exists here pending the arrival of Mr. Lind, who has been retarded by the State Department at Washington.

Huerta's hope that defiance of the United States might break down the revolutionary spirit in the north seems to have been futile, according to a message from General Venustiano Carranza, leader of the rebels.

This was a reply to overtures to Carranza to join his forces to the regular army in the event of a "foreign invasion." However, Huerta has gained fresh followers among the radical element by his defiance of President Wilson. Supporters of the provisional president charge that the United States is preparing to act as it did in Cuba.

Sensational reports were current today relative to the diplomatic mission of General Felix Diaz to Tokio. Ostensibly Diaz is going to thank the Japanese Government for its representation at the Mexican centennial, but the belief is growing that Japan has consented to make a treaty with Mexico, and that Diaz is really a special ambassador. This treaty, it is reported, has to do with a league of common interests and not with commercial right. It follows the movement of the Government to invite 50,000 Japanese emigrants here to colonize the state of Morelos, which has been nearly depopulated by the rebellion.

Insists on Recognition.

Whether Huerta has any more cards to play in his diplomatic fight against outside interference with Mexican affairs is a question known only to the provisional President and his closest advisers. Huerta insists on "recognition and no parley," but the Government is not in condition to enforce his threat by war.

The national treasury is nearly depleted, and the army material of the country has been thinned to a minimum by three years of revolution.

By diplomacy, however, he might still be able, by playing upon the Latin-American republics' fear of annexation and upon the hostility of foreign powers to the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine, to force the United States into a compromising position.

Even Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy here, is not acquainted with the details of Mr. Lind's mission. He has so informed the Mexican Foreign Minister.

Sulzer Used Funds Of Campaign to Play Market, Is Charge

Chairman Frawley, of Investigating Committee, Says This Is Enough to Warrant Impeachment.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Governor William Sulzer, of New York, was nearly $50,000 in debt as the result of stock market speculations at the time of his nomination, and used contributions to his campaign fund to make additional purchases of stocks while this debt was hanging over him, according to testimony presented to the Frawley committee of the Legislature.

The evidence is sufficient to warrant proceedings to impeach the Governor for violation of the corrupt practices act, Chairman Frawley declares. A decision as to the committee's recommendation is expected by Monday.

The Governor, according to the evidence, had dealings with three different stock exchange firms and was saved from being sold out by one firm by L. N. Josephthal, a Wall Street banker, and a member of the Governor's staff as naval reserve aide. Josephthal, it was brought out, paid a debit balance of $26,739 still standing against the account on July 15 last. This was after the Governor had received repeated calls for more margin.

The Governor's transactions with other firms were for cash, and it was in connection with one of these that Governor Sulzer, according to the evidence, used campaign contributions.

Dedicates Camp at Pacific Grove, Cal., Which Her Generosity Made Possible.

DEL MONTE, CAL., Aug. 9.—Asilomar, the splendid new conference grounds of the California, Arizona and Nevada Young Women's Christian Association, which occupies 30 acres of ground on the ocean shore near Pacific Grove, was formally dedicated with a beautiful ceremony, including a pageant of 400 girls, typifying association work.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, of San Francisco, whose generous assistance last year and this did much to make a permanent camp possible, gave the dedicatory address and gave the conference grounds the name of Asilomar, which means "retreat."

Callie Hoke Smith Capital Debutante

Make-up of First Democratic "Bud Bouquet" Puzzles Washington's Younger Set.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The make-up of Washington first Democratic debutante bouquet is the question that is agitating the younger set. It is confidently expected that Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, daughter of the Speaker, will be one of the buds, and Miss Frances Moore, the daughter of Clarence R Moore, one of the Titanic heroes, another.

Resident society will furnish two attractive debutantes, who are not only socially prominent, but from Democratic families as well. They are Miss Margaret Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Britton and Miss Beatrice Clover, the youngest daughter of Rear Admiral Clover.

A debutante from the Congressional set will be Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia. Other Congressional buds are the Misses Weaver, Church and Duval.

Manuel Pawns His Father's Decorations

Former King of Portugal Unable to Struggle Along on Income of $100,000 a Year.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Despite his allowance of $50,000 a year from King George and at least that sum from private sources, it is learned that former King Manuel, of Portugal, has been forced to pawn the decorations once belonging to his father. One of these decorations, a diamond cross with a large sapphire in the center, is still in the hands of a pawnbroker near Richmond, where Manuel is now staying with his mother, Queen Amelie.

The fortunes of the dethroned monarch will be recouped by his approaching marriage. It is known that he is very extravagant and his mother is none too practical.

The German Emperor has settled the puzzling question of how to treat the exiled monarch's marriage to a German princess. He will allow Prince Eitel Frederick to attend as a special guest, but not as his personal representative.

GIVES OWN LIFE TO SAVE THOSE ABOARD BOAT

Divers Exploring Wreck of Steamboat Peters Lee Find Modern Jim Bludsoe in Hold.

ALL THE PASSENGERS ESCAPE

Engineer Kept Craft's Nose Stuck in Mud Until All Save He Were Safe on Shore.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 9.—Divers who explored the steamboat Peters Lee on the bottom of the Mississippi River at Lake Providence, La., to-day reported finding the body of Engineer Frank O'Neil, his hand holding the engine throttle.

He died there when the boat sank last night, having stayed at his post and held the boat's nose against the shore until the last of the 50 passengers, most of them women, were helped ashore.

O'Neil's act is practically a realization of the martyrdom of Jim Bludsoe, famed in the poem as the steamboat engineer who held her nose to the bank till all were saved, then was burned to death at his post.

A dance was on when the Peters Lee struck a sunken coal barge. A hole was torn in her side. The captain ordered the pilot to steer for the shore. The boat struck the mud, and officers and crew began taking off the passengers.

Frank O'Neil in the engine room kept the stern wheel churning while the water poured into the hold.

A negro shouted through the engine room door that the boat was sinking.

"I know it!" shouted O'Neil. "You fellows get on up front where you can get off! I'll hold her nose against the shore!"

The last passenger was safely landed when the boat sank in 40 feet of water.

Scientist Hints New Immortality Proof

Sir Oliver Lodge, of London, Will Give World Results of His Researches.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Sir Oliver Lodge, whose researches into the unknown world made him famous, will assert at the meeting of the British Association on September 10 a belief in "an ultimate continuity of existence before and after death as essential to science."

It is inferred he has at least new evidence to offer of immortality.

He once told the world "the boundary between life and death is still substantial, but is wearing thin in places."

Slit Skirts Furnish Mosquito Clan With Choicest Barbecue

Trainload of Winsome Stenographers and Milliners Have to Tramp Through Stegomyia Belt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"All those in favor of slit skirts, please stand up."

Millions of full grown mosquitoes and three or four little fellers were rushing wildly out of their apartment houses on he Flushing Meadows, about 7 o'clock last night, and took part in the most rollicking barbacue ever held in the East.

Right in the middle of the salt grass waste were five cars of a Long Island Railroad train, stalled. The lights were out, men were running up and down shouting orders and Flushing was two miles away. After the train had stood for a few minutes, out of the passenger cars poured the choicest morsels of humanity that Mr. and Mrs. Culex Pungens and the little Pungenses ever saw. There were stenographers, typewriters, cashiers, millinery attaches and buxom matrons. Slit skirts were numerous.

In an endless procession the five hundred and more suburbanites trailed over the ties toward Flushing. There is some style in the mosquito belt and every member of the family seemed to know at once which of the passengers was dressed a la mode. The squeals and slaps of the fair ones as they tried to stop the onslaught sounded like a tattoo.

The procession lasted for more than two hours and when the last stenographer reached home a unanimous vote was taken declaring the mosquito a pest. Of course, there were some men along, but what self-respecting mosquito would bother with them at such a time?

FRANK OR CONLEY? STILL QUESTION

Issue Firmly Drawn Between Two Men

Crime Definitely Fixed on One of Pair

The prisoner is shown in the unconcerned attitude he assumes most of the time.

Not a move escapes this man's restless eyes, though his face is calm.

Famous Case to Solve Mystery of Slaying of Mary Phagan Enters Its Third Week With Public Opinion Constantly Shifting.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The second week of the trial of Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan in the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26, came to a close Saturday noon.

The State's case has been entirely made up in its primary aspects, and the defense has gone into its story of the great crime sufficiently to make clear both its theory and probable line of pleading.

The public, as the case has progressed, has been swayed this way and that, and to-day the remarkable mystery of Mary Phagan's untimely and tragic end remains, in hundreds of minds, quite as much of a mystery as ever.

The Battle Is a See-Saw.

The State has had its good days and its bad days, and the defense has met the same fate. At times things have seemed dismally dark and gloomy for Frank, while at other times the clouds apparently have lifted from about him decidedly.

This much has been made clear:

Either Leo Frank will be shown to be responsible for the death of Mary Phagan, or Jim Conley will.

The one is the heart and soul of the State's contention, and the other is the heart and soul of the defense's contention.

Frank is battling not only to clear himself but to convict Conley.

Conley is battling not only to clear himself, but to convict Frank.

The only difference is that Conley, although not yet indicted, expects to be convicted as an accessory after the fact of the murder, in any event, whereas Frank, already indicted, expects to come absolutely clear and free of all possible connection with the crime.

The one has a heretofore good name to restore in all of its unblemished integrity, the other has merely his present reputation for criminal inclination to preserve against sinister enlargement.

The issue has been sharply and indelibly drawn—it is either Leo Frank's life for Mary Phagan's, or it is Jim Conley's.

The State has shown, or has endeavored to show the following things:

THAT Frank, shortly after noon on April 26, and before five minutes past noon, lured Mary Phagan, for an immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory, and there, because she would not yield to his desires and demands, he knocked her down and immediately thereafter strangled her to death with a small cord, about one-eighth of an inch in thickness.

THAT after strangling her, Frank remained with her dead body until after a girl caller in his office had departed, when he tiptoed to the front of the floor whereupon the murder had been consummated, and secured the help of a negro sweeper, Jim Conley, employed about the place, to dispose of the body.

THAT Conley, under the direction of Frank, wrapped the dead body in a piece of heavy cloth, carried it to the elevator, and thence on the elevator to the basement, where it was placed in an obscure corner in the rear, later to be found by Newt Lee, a negro night watchman, generally held guiltless of direct connection with the crime itself.

THAT Frank, after hiding the body, with Conley's assistance, then induced Conley to write and place beside the dead girl certain illiterate notes fixing the crime, in so far as they might, upon some other person than either Frank or Conley, and that Frank for Conley's services, paid him the sum of $2.50, but not until he had first paid him $200, which was withdrawn under promise to restore that sum later.

THAT Frank had an understanding with Conley, whereby Conley was to return to the factory later in the afternoon on Saturday and burn the body in the basement furnace, but that Conley

ADMITS HE'S DECENT IN ANSWERING MARRIAGE AD

YONKERS, Aug. 9.—Reginald P. Shennan, editor of The Rye Courier, already has received one reply to the advertisement inserted in his paper by a "gentlewoman with large tract of land not far from Port Chester," who is seeking "an unselfish, decent, self-supporting man for a husband."

He turned the letter over to the advertiser, whose identity is being guarded carefully. The letter bore a Brooklyn postmark.

AUTOS EMPTY CHURCHES, SAY COUNTRY PREACHERS

MANHATAN, KANS., Aug. 9.—The dwindling of the congregations of country churches, due to the new era of automobiles, which makes it easy for the rural residents to attend services in nearby towns and cities, will be discussed at the Conference of Rural Leaders, July 21 to 25, at the Kansas Agricultural College. Members of the organization declare that Kansas now has about 1,200 abandoned churches in the farming districts.

Jack London Puts Joke on His Appendix

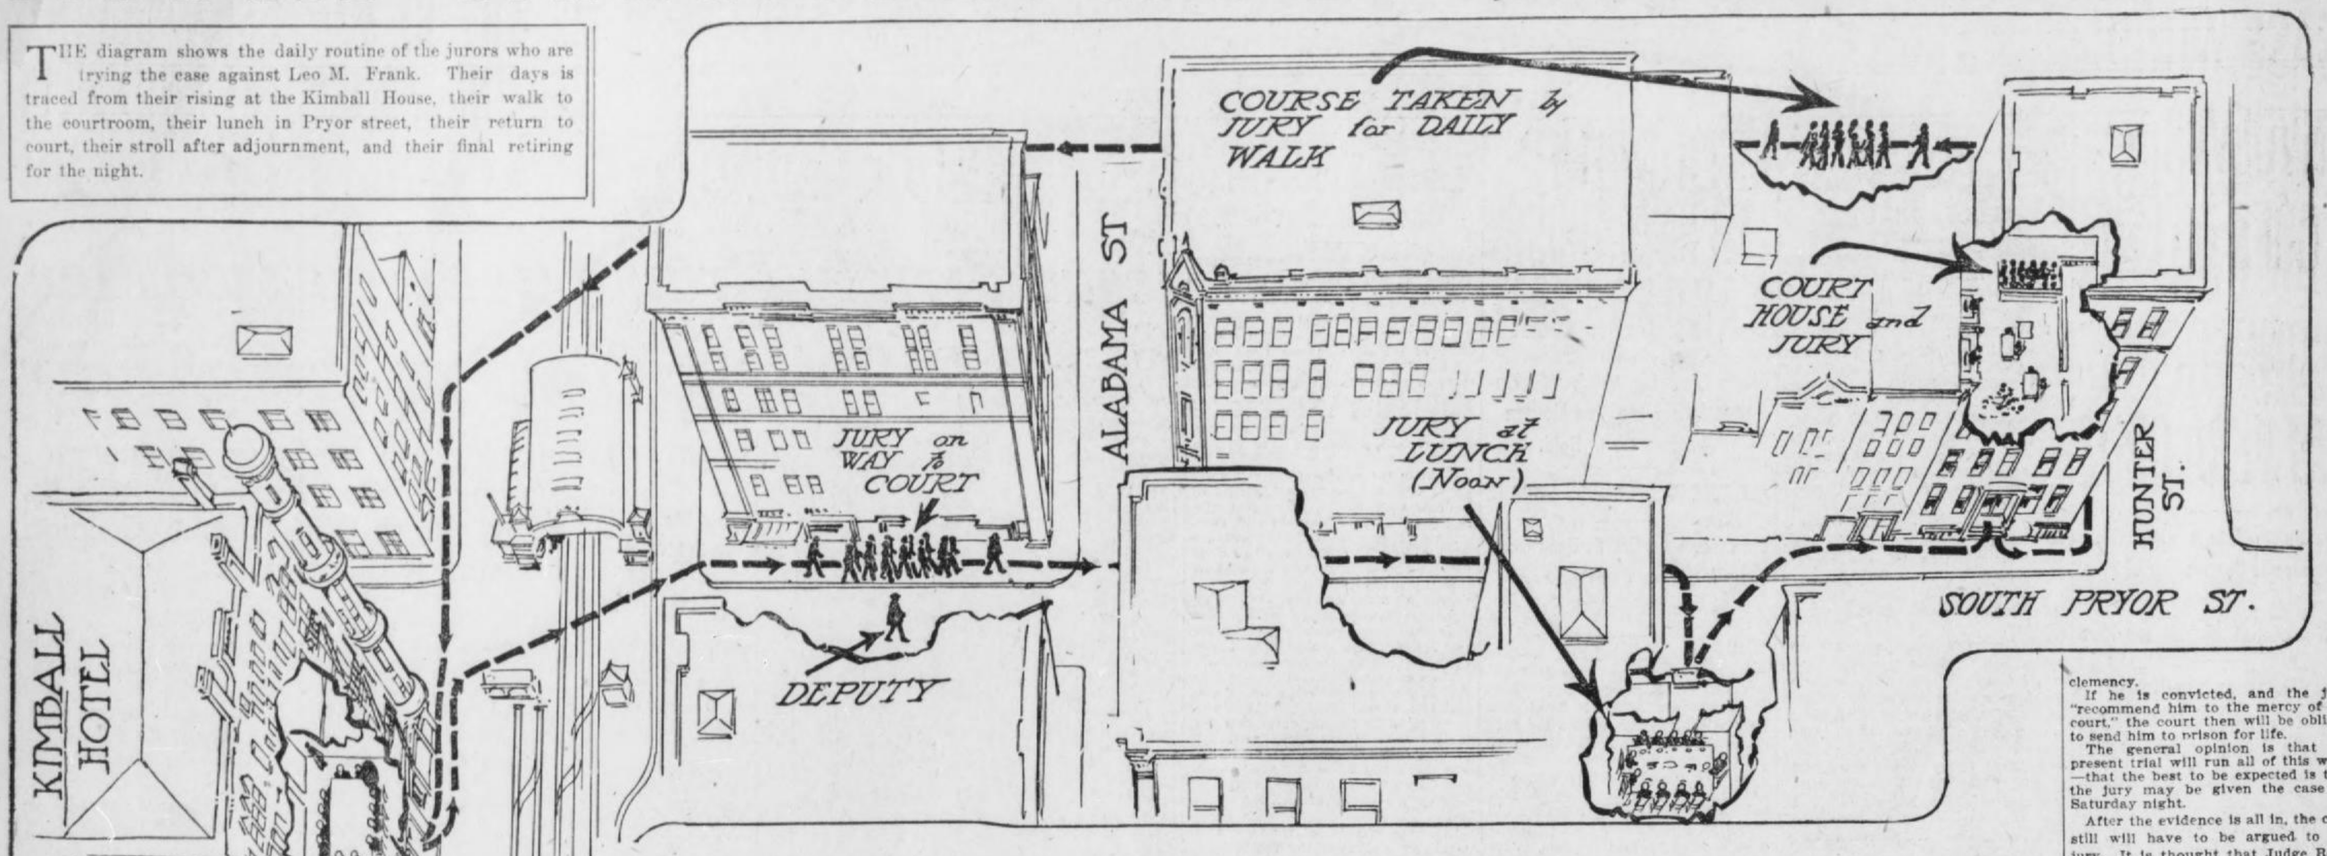
Novelist Tells the Latest on Former Part of Himself and What's Left.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Here is the latest joke Jack London, the famous author, is telling on himself:

London was operated on recently for appendicitis. After the ordeal the surgeon held up the severed appendix in his fingers for the patient to see. The author looked at it thoughtfully then grinned and said: "It was a case of all alone in London, wasn't it, doc?"

FRANK'S CHARACTER IS NEW BATTLE GROUND

THE diagram shows the daily routine of the jurors who are trying the case against Leo M. Frank. Their days is traced from their rising at the Kimball House, their walk to the courtroom, their lunch in Pryor street, their return to court, their stroll after adjournment, and their final retiring for the night.



DEFENSE HAS TO CLEAR NAME OF TWO CHARGES

went to sleep in the afternoon and neglected to perform this service.

THAT Frank, called to the factory early in the morning of Sunday, April 27, displaying great nervousness, and while on his way to the factory without having been informed of the dead girl's identity, declined, or at least failed and neglected, to look upon her features at the undertaker's, notwithstanding the fact that he later admitted her identity without having seen her dead.

THAT at the factory, at the place of the crime, his nervousness continued, and that next morning (Monday), when called to the police station for further questioning, he had secured counsel to defend him, notwithstanding the fact that he then had not been placed under arrest.

THAT after having been placed under arrest and indicted for murder, he persistently refused to meet his chief accuser, Jim Conley, face to face, or to discuss any features of the charges lodged against him.

THAT in addition to the crime of murder, as set forth in the indictment, Frank is a dissolute character, practicing the most depraved and perverted crimes with persons of loose morals, and that Jim Conley, on more than one occasion, acted as "lookout" for Frank on the first floor of the factory, while unspeakable and unmentionable things were being enacted above.

The State, in setting up the foregoing allegations, summoned as its principal and all-important witness, Jim Conley, who already made public affidavits to all of the charges set forth, except the one of perversion and the exact time of the crime charged.

Conley, after four or five changed statements theretofore made, set up in his final statement on the stand many other seemingly minor dtails not contained in any previous statement.

The foregoing is the State's case in completed form, except that it yel will have the right to produce witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's witnesses; the defense, in its turn, having the right to a further rebuttal of the State's rebuttal.

The defense has contended, or will contend:

THAT Conley's story is a tissue of frightful lies from start to finish, and that he himself really committed the crime charged against Frank, and that the defense will so demonstrate.

THAT Mary Phagan was not killed as early as 12:05 on the afternoon of April 26, but was, as a matter of fact, killed at least fifteen minutes later than that, if, as a matter of still further fact, she wa snot disabled hopelessly about that time, and actually killed even later.

THAT if she was not killed previous to 12:05, as set forth, by the State, that contention being uncompromisingly claimed by the State's own witnesses—Jim Conley and Monteen Stover—then Conley's story is impossible and absurd, and Monteen Stover's evidence entirely negligible.

THAT Frank did not lure Mary Phagan to the rear of the second floor, or to any other place, for any purpose whatever, and that she was only on the second floor sufficiently long to get her pay from the hands of Frank, and that she immediately thereafter left the second floor, going down to the first floor to meet her death at the hands of Conley.

THAT Frank never asked for or received the assistance of Jim Conley in disposing of the body of Mary Phagan, because he was in utter and entire ignorance of the murder until apprised of it Sunday morning.

THAT Frank had nothing whatever to do with the framing of the nates found beside the dead girl, and that in support of such a charge the State has only the word of Jim Conley, intensely interested in shifting the blame from his own guilty shoulders and on to the shoulders of Frank.

THAT Frank never paid Jim Conley any sum of money for any purpose whatever on Saturday, nor promised him any sum for any purpose whatever, and that Conley's word alone says that he did.

THAT whatever nervousness Frank displayed, if he displayed aiy unusual or unnatural nervousness at all, was occasioned by the mysterious attitude of the officers notifying him of some unnamed trouble at the pencil factory, and that in support of his approximately normal frame of mind is the fact, proved by the State's own witnesses; that he opened the office safe to look up the record of Mary Phagan, after having acquired knowledge of her identity, without tremor or hesitation whatever, setting the intricate combination and easily opening the safe on the first trial.

THAT his innocence of all guilty knowledge of the crime is further evidenced by his three hours' perfectly normal work on his books in the factory on the afternoon of April 26, at which time, if the State's theory holds, Mary Phagan, with Frank's knowledge, then was a corpse in the basement, dead at his murderous hands.

THAT Frank, instead of declining to look upon the face of the dead girl at the undertaker's while on his way to the factory Monday morning, did, as a matter of fact, look upon her face and recognized her.

THAT Frank had no counsel until after his retention at police headquarters had been publicly made known, and when he was notoriously under suspicion, and that even then counsel was sent to him by some outside friends, and did not come at his invitation paid off by Frank upstairs, hit her a violent blow upon her head, snatched her purse from her hand, and at once threw her body into the cellar by way of a nearby open space, for fear of someone coming into the building; that likely the blow first delivered was not sufficient to kill, and that her actual death was hastened, or may have been hastened later in the cellar below, by means of strangulation, there being always there an abundance of the very cord employed or supposed to have been employed in that act. or by his direction.

THAT Frank's refusal to meet Jim Conley, his lying accuser, was natural and proper in the circumstances, and that such a course was persisted in by the particular advice of his counsel; that Frank was under no moral or legal obligation to discuss his case with Conley, or with any other witness for the State.

THAT Frank, far from being a dissolute character, is a man of unblemished integrity, happily married; that he never has practiced depraved and perverted crimes, because such things would be and are entirely foreign to his nature; that he never has associatd with immoral persons anywhere, at any time; that neither Jim Conley nor any other person ever acted as "lookout" for him for any purpose whatsoever—and that every monstrous and untrue charge or suggestion of immorality and degeneracy rests absolutely and finally upon the unsupported word of Conley, and not otherwise.

THAT there has been no tenable motive assigned to Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan; that the girl was not sexually violated or in any manner lacerated; that Frank had only the most casual acquaintance with her, and that of a perfectly natural business sort, and that he could not have had, and did not have, any reason whatever for desiring her death.

THAT, in truth and reality, the motive prompting the murder of Mary Phagan was robbery upon the part of Conley, and that for the purpose of securing her pittance of money, contained in a mesh purse, he did murder her and concealed her body in the basement.

THAT, as a matter of fact, Mary Phagan reached the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26 about 12:12 or 12:15; that she came up the steps directly to Frank's office, and received her pay for the time due her, in amount $1.20; that she at once departed Frank's office, without comment of any sort, and that Frank never saw her alive thereafter; that going down the steps, with her silver mesh bag in her hand, she had to pass Jim Conley, recently aroused from a drunken doze; that in attempting to get from the foot of the stairs, where Conley was sitting, to the door, some 20 feet away, she had to traverse a gloomy walkway, more than ordinarily gloomy at the time because the day was a legal holiday and the doors were closed, but not locked; that in traversing this walkway her back was toward Conley; that Conley, without money and craving more liquor, saw the unprotected little girl with the enticing silver bag in her hand, and surmising that she had been

THAT after accomplishing his bloody deed Conley escaped by withdrawing the inside staple from the basement back door only a few feet away from the place where the dead girl subsequently was found; and that tracings of Conley during the afternoon of April 26 at various saloons about town show that he spent then an amount of money approximately that which Mary Phagan is supposed to have had in her purse at the time of her murder.

That of all her possessions the purse alone, notwithstanding exhaustive inquiry, never was accounted for until the last day Conley was on the stand, when he stated that Frank had had the purse in his possession just after the murder, and that he had concealed it in his safe. This allegation, the defense points out, is sustained, as are the other most damaging allegations, by Conley's unsupported word entirely.

THAT Conley, the State's main witness, is a notoriously dissolute character, by his own admission seven times a jailbird, many times a liar, even under oath and on the witness stand, and admittedly was "mistaken" in some statements made against Frank; that he did not begin to throw suspicion on Frank until after suspicion began drifting in his (Conley's) direction; that his plea of wishing by his first silent course of conduct to "protect" Frank is not sound, because after the feigned disappointment that Frank did not "get him out of his trouble, as he had promised," and declaring that he, therefore, intended to tell the "whole truth of the murder," he still persisted in his lies and falsifying to the attempted damage of Frank, and found it necessary to issue three conflicting affidavits before he got one he thought might be depended upon to stand up.

THAT Conley began his statements with a lie—to the effect that he could not write—and continued lying steadily thereafter, but frequently canceling one lie in favor of another, as his first lies were shown to be useless and senseless.

THAT Conley in revising his various statements was aided and abetted by various police officials, presumably anxious for the reward offered for the apprehension and conviction of Mary Phagan's murderer, and that these officers pointed out to Conley the discrepancies as they arose from time to time, and that without this aid Conley's story never could have been made to hold together even as well as it did; that notwithstanding this prejudicing aid, however, Conley's story still is impossible and absurd, and of no account whatever against Frank.

The foregoing, in general, is the theory of the defense, as already set up and as yet to be developed, and along that line it will fight its battle to the end.

The defense is heavily equipped with witnesses to sustain its every contention, and these will be offered, in their ordr, to brak down the contrary theory of the State, as hereinbefore outlined, and upon th relative strength of the two showings depends, of course, the verdict.

Of absorbing interest now is the seeming determination of the defense to put Leo Frank's character frankly and fearlessly in evidenec.

In a former article in The Sunday American several weeks ago I predicted that the defense would do this—and the then apparent determination of the defense along that line shows no symptoms of having been deviated fro min the slightest.

When Conley made his additional unanticipated attack on Frank's character from the witness stand, it was rather freely predicted about the streets that Frank never would, after that, agree to have his character put in evidence. Under the law, the State can not put the defendant's character in evidence—if it is put in at all, it must be put in by the defendant voluntarily. Once in, however, it may be riddled by the State, if the State is able to riddle it.

The determination, therefore, of the defense to put Frank's character in evidence is being accepted generally as indicating an unfaltering confidence upon the part of the defense that Frank may be able thereby to overcome the terrible and prejudicial charge of degeneracy, as well as the charge of murder, both resting so largely upon Conley, and Conley alone; and it also indicates a belief upon the part of the defense that the State already has done its worst in the matter of attacking Frank's character.

MUST REFUTE TWO CHARGES.

The fact that Frank is now engaged in refuting two charges instead of one makes his case double unique in Georgia, as it is contrary to the unbroken theory of the law heretofore.

In Georgia, the courts uniformly have held that a man can not be tried for more than one offense at one time—that is, that he can not be charged with murder, and in the same trial be called to account for another felonious crime.

The charge of degeneracy, however, got into the case without objection, and Frank's lawyers cross-examined the witness making it. The judge, therefore, although a motion was made afterward to strike out this evidence, ruled taht it was too late to expunge it, and that it should go in for what it was worth.

This ruling, while in a way more or less unprecedented, was, in the main, by the public seemingly approved, upon the idea that it was fairer to both the State and the defense that the horrible charge, having been made, be thrashed out.

Should Frank be convicted, it is practically certain that a new trial will be asked on this very point, and it is not at all improbable that Judge Roan will grant it, although this conjecture is purely and absolutely speculative, of course.

The defense has summoned some seventy character witnesses, among whom are more than two score femal employes of the National Pencil Factory, all of whom will swear, it is said, to the defendant's decent and gentlemanly conduct at all times in their presence and during their varied terms of service in the factory, running from one to five years.

INTENSE INTEREST HOLDS.

Besides these, a score or more of Atlanta's most prominent business and professional men have been cited to come to court and testify in behalf of Frank's good name.

Rarely before, if ever, has there been as intense interest in a murder trial as there unquestionably is in the Frank case.

The crowds attending the trial have been enormous, the officers finding it necessary every day to turn away hundreds of anxious would-be spectators.

Public sentiment has swung back and forth—to-day inclined to believe Frank may be innocent, to-morrow sternly the reverse.

The jury, sitting there in the courthouse day after day, has been the subjective study of hundreds of real and near analytical minds—and the answer?

Every fellow answers for himself. The jury is imperturable, unreadable, almost seemingly indifferent at times, indeed—but always keenly keyed to intense interest, nevertheless!

One might as well undertake to read the riddle of the Spinx as to read the riddle of the Frank case in the minds of the jury trying it. It looks as if it is a jury well above the average—and that is about the beginning and the end of an intelligent guess as to what it will do.

Judge Roan is as baffling as the rest of the case, too, when it comes to speculating upon what he may or may not think of it all.

He is rated one of the very best Superior Court judges in the State, unusually able, certainly fearless, and agreed to be utterly fair and impartial.

At times, his rulings have seemed to favor the defense, and at other times they have seemed to favor the State; but, withal, the public seems agreed that he is handling the case with an open and judicially just mind.

Speculation as to Outcome.

Speculation as to the outcome of the trial is varied. There are those who can see nothing ahead but ocnviction, just as there are others who can see nothing but acquittal.

If a ballot could be taken, however, those holding to the idea of a mistrial likely would be found in the majority, for that is the way the fght seems, to many observing minds, to be drifting.

That section of the public generally credited with being calm, poised, and desirous of seeing the right prevail, no matter which way it cuts, apparently has suspended judgment. Extremists pro and con still are talking themselves hoarse about town, however.

The progressing inclination among the people seems to be to let the jury settle it, and then to call that as near right as abstract justice and human ingenuity can make it.

In the event of an acquittal, the case ends. The State has no appeal. It must win on the first round, or it loses for all time.

The defense ,on the other hand, if it loses, may move for a new trial, upon proper assignment of error in the first trial. The judge of original jurisdiction passes upon this motion—he may grant it or not, as his discretion directs.

The general policy of judges is to refuse motions for new trials, but it is not an unbroken policy, by any means.

If the new trial motion is denied, the case goes to a court of review—either the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals. If one error or several be found in the original rulings of the court below, the case will be remanded back for a new trial, the judgment thus having been reversed and set aside.

Then the case begins all over again, practically as if it never had been tried.

In the event of maters taking that course, Frank hardly could be tried again before next year, 1914, and perhaps not before spring.

Conley Indictment Likely.

If Frank is acquitted, there is hardly a doubt that Jim Conley will be promptly indicted for the murder of Mary Phagan, and brought to trial later.

In the event of Frank's final conviction, Conley will be indicted as an accessory after the fact. This would mean a sentence of not more than three years in the State penitentiary for him.

If Frank is convicted, he can be convicted only of murder—the jury will not be permitted, under the form of the indictment, to find him guilty of a lesser crime.

The judge will have no discretion in sentencing him.

If found guilty, without a recommendation to mercy, he must hang, unless the Governor should subsequently interfere and order executive clemency.

If he is convicted, and the jury "recommend him to the mercy of the court," the court then will be obliged to send him to prison for life.

The general opinion is that the present trial will run all of this week—that the best to be expected is that the jury may be given the case by Saturday night.

After the evidence is all in, the case still will have to be argued to the jury. It is thought that Judge Roan will take the bridle off in respect of this, and both sides will be permitted to go the limit.

Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold will consume at least one entire day in argument, and Mr. Dorsey and Mr. Hooper will not take less time.

It is expected that Hooper will open for the State and Dorsey close, and that Rosser will open for the defense and Arnold close. The State has the opening and the concluding argument before the jury.

WHITE SLAVE CASE WHICH INVOLVES U.S. GOES TO TRIAL

Diggs Faces a Jury and Caminetti Will Later Fight Charge of Taking Girls to Reno, Leaving Their Wives in State of California.

After Five Months of Delay and Scandal Involving National Officials, Special Prosecutors Are Appearing for the Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Marsha Warrington and Ida Norris, the Sacramento high school girls alleged to have been taken to Reno in November by Maury I Diggs and Drew Caminetti for immoral purposes, will take the stand against Diggs when his trial is resumed Tuesday. No session of the Diggs trial was held today. Diggs and Caminetti will take the stand before the trial is concluded.

Judge Van Fleet dealt the defense a hard blow yesterday when he announced that the jury would not consider the willingness or unwillingness of the two girls to accompany Diggs and Caminetti.

The jury to hear the case of Diggs, the former State Architect, was announced complete after considerable difficulty in selecting the twelve members. Exhaustive examination of 96 veniremen was necessary before the twelve were chosen.

The first witness was called. He was F. J. Peck, a Reno real estate dealer, by whom the defense sought to show that the bungalow occupied by the defendants in Reno had been rented with no view to concealment.

Prejudice against the defendants runs high, rendering exceedingly difficult the task of picking a jury. Of the twelve men chosen, eight are married and have children, two are married, but childless, and two are single men, living with their parents. Indicative of the general temper of San Francisco was the reply upon examination of Philip Woolsey, who afterward was chosen as a member of the jury. He expressed his prejudice against "any married man who will abandon his wife and babies and run off on a spree with another woman," but said he could, however, render a verdict strictly in accordance with the evidence.

Cases Come Up Separately.

The cases against Diggs and Caminetti will be tried separately because the prosecution feels it has made out the stronger case against Diggs, and because the defense in this case will assume a course different from that in Caminetti's.

Diggs and F. Drew Caminetti, son of former Congressman and present Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti, are charged with luring Miss Marsha Warrington and Miss Lola Norris from California to Nevada for immoral purposes. Both are married men.

Diggs, the prosecution will attempt to show, financed the trip to Reno, where the girls were taken, and rented there a cottage in which the party lived.

Diggs, against whom the charges are made in relation to Miss Marsha Warrington, is said to be contemplating a fierce attack on the character of the girl. He has subpenaed habitues of the "Barbary Coast" resorts of this city and twenty witnesses from Sacramento's tenderloin. Caminetti is making no such move against Miss Norris. The Government asserts her character to be unblemished.

Mrs. Caminetti Relentless.

Caminetti's wife is relentless in her attitude toward her young husband. She said that despite the disgrace it may bring on their children, she thinks for the protection of other married women, her husband should be made an example.

Mrs. Diggs, also, is bitter toward her husband. The defenders of both men, however, to-day are claiming a complete reconciliation of the defendants with their wives, and declare that when the trial gets fully under way both Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti will be seen sitting at their husbands' sides, a spectacle which, the defense calculates, will have an effect to their advantage on the jury.

Diggs and Caminetti both are free from custody, having taken advantage of the $10,000 bail offered them. At first they feared freedom, as violence was anticipated, but later this fear was overcome.

Diggs appears to be cheerful to-day, taking matters easily. He is scrupulously dressed. He came into the courtroom, with his flock of attorneys, bearing a cheerful smile, and bowed a dozen times to familiar faces that he saw near. Caminetti, on the other hand, seemed deeply worried. He was pallid and palpably very nervous. His father, the Commissioner General of Immigration, did not make his appearance, and probably will not be seen at the trial.

Two Special Prosecutors.

The trial is being held in the Federal Court before Judge Van Fleet. Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore R. Roche, president of the San Francisco Police Commission, have been appointed special prosecutors by Attorney General McReynolds, to take the place of District Attorney Gavin McNab, who resigned with the announcement that undue influence was being brought to bear from Washington to prevent the trial of the two men.

Arrayed with the special prosecutors are Archie Johnson, son of Governor Johnson, and Acting District Attorneys Benjamin L. McKinley and Thomas H. Salvage.

Diggs and Caminetti have an equally impressive line-up of legal defenders, including Robert L. Devlin and Marshall B. Woodworth, both former United States District Attorneys; Nate Coghlan, and S. Luke Howe.

A heavy guard is thrown around the courtroom because feeling runs high against the two defendants. The two girls involved were high school students of Sacramento and of estimable families. Both, attorneys for the Government announce, will be ready to take the stand against the men.

The Government will charge that Diggs and Caminetti, both married men, had drawn the girls into a liaison; that they terrified the girls into the belief that their wives, having discovered their infidelity, intended to have the girls arrested, and that to escape this imaginary danger the girls accompanied the men to Reno, Nev.

Their Stories to the Girls.

They told the young women that what was to be done with them, the young women were told that their ruin was complete; that they would not desert them, but that the young women were to continue to live with them as their mistresses, and that they would take them to Salt Lake, where they would go into a 'house.'

"The Grand Jury had ample evidence before it in these statements to decide that the intent was to put them in a public place.

Barely Escaped Lynching.

"The defendants were secretly taken from the train and brought to Sacramento by auto to avoid lynching by the enraged citizens. Defendants procured counsel. Among these is Charles Harris, of the Sacramento bar. He and Diggs immediately set about to defeat justice by corrupting a witness. Diggs wrote an appealing letter to Miss Warrington under an assumed name, urging her to stand by a certain agreed story he had drilled her in while in Reno. The letter is in my possession.

"The Grand Jury has indicted Harris and Diggs for conspiracy to suborn perjury.

"The friends of the defendants are reported to have stated repeatedly that they could 'easily fix the case,' that they had too much money and too much influence at command to cause them to worry. This seems to have come principally from the Diggs end of the case."

McNab Outlines His Case Against the Defendants

In his report Mr. McNab gives the following pen picture of Caminetti and Diggs:

"The defendant Diggs was a draughtsman in the office of the State Capitol in Sacramento. He is married and has two young children.

"But a short time before the actions hereinafter narrated he was involved in a forgery charge, and for a long time, by common repute, easily substantiated by evidence, he maintained what has been denominated as a 'private harem' at his rooms in a downtown block in Sacramento. Here, according to charges laid before me, he enticed many young women to go to serve his immoral purposes.

"Caminetti was his bosom companion. The defendant Caminetti has a vicious reputation for seducing girls, and I have shocking instances which I can produce to establish this fact.

"The two girls in question, both of whom are about 19 years of age, come of most respectable families. Marsha Warrington is the only daughter of the agent of the Santa Fe Railroad. Lola Norris is the only daughter of a retired business man of Sacramento.

"After going with the young women for some months the two defendants, who had determined to entice the girls away from home and take them to another State, began a systematic campaign of coercion and inducement to get them to flee the State with them.

"They told the young women that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti had found out about their relations and had procured warrants for their arrest from the Juvenile Court and were only awaiting the appropriate time to serve them; that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti were relentless and intended to expose the whole matter, and that the families of the girl would be disgraced and ruined; that the only way to save the girls from disgrace was secretly to leave the city and go to another State, where they would acquire a residence, the men would divorce their wives and marry the girls, etc.

"The young women were in absolute terror. They repeatedly appealed to the defendants to allow them to remain at home and not to disgrace them, and begged to be allowed to unbosom their indiscretions to their parents and have their advice.

"Up to this time, according to the uncontradicted evidence, Diggs had been unduly intimate with Miss Warrington for a few weeks; the Norris girl had never been violated before this trip to Reno.

"On arrival at Reno they were assigned to bedrooms, Diggs and Miss Warrington occupying one room and Caminetti and Miss Norris the other. According to the testimony of the young women, they were wholly in the hands of their male companions. They had never been away from home or their parents before and felt that they were powerless to save themselves.

Foundling Is Heiress To $100,000 Fortune

Father Makes Wealth After He Had Left Baby in Michigan Institution.

CADILLAC, MICH., Aug. 9.—Sheriff Chamberlain has been asked by an attorney in Corning, N. Y., to locate Bessie Weaver, who was adopted by a Manton, Mich., family from a New York foundling home over twenty years ago, and a few days ago became heir to $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weaver, of Manton, who adopted the child when on a trip through New York, returned her to the home five years later. Since that time nothing has been heard from her. The father of Bessie Weaver, or Bessie Clark, as she was known in New York, made his fortune after placing his child in the home, but has been unable to locate her since she was taken back from Michigan. He recently died, leaving his fortune to his only child.

GIRL HELPS FATHER IN BUILDING NEW HOUSE

HARTFORD, MICH., Aug. 9.—One year ago S. H. Atkins and family came to this city and built a house in a field of rye in the outskirts of the city. Recently they sold the home, and with the proceeds purchased four adjoining lots. They are now building a much larger house, which will be the sixth they have erected since the little home was built.

The scarcity of carpenters caused the mother and daughter to assist Mr. Atkins in the building of his new home. The mother and 9-year-old daughter did all of the lathing.

Ban on Tobacco Seen By Prohibitionists

Smoking and Drinking Are Blamed for Increase in Chronic Diseases in America.

BATTLECREEK, MICH., Aug. 9.—That tobacco as well as liquor will be placed under national prohibition before the end of another generation, is the assertion made here by Irving Fisher. Fisher blames liquor, tobacco, overuse of meat and too strenuous life for the terrible increase of chronic diseases in America.

Spooners Protest Against Headlights

Big Illuminating Power Now Carried on Engines Is Worry to Summer Boarders.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad has placed monster 1,220-candle-power electric searchlights on the observation cars of the Pioneer Limited.

Letters have found their way into the general offices of the company signed by summer hotel men, houseboat owners and the public generally, protesting against the innovation. Spooners do not like it.

ORPHAN SOUGHT AS WIFE BY MAN WRITING POLICE

Would-Be Benedict Gives Evidence in Letter That He Fears Mother-in-Law.

OAKLAND, CAL., Aug. 9.—J. Keler, of Fresno, is a marrying man. He proved it by writing a letter to "the Chief of Police or the City Marshal of Oakland" and entreating that official to find him a wife. He wants a wife who has means equal to his own—amount not stated—and indicates in his letter that he would expect her to assist him in his merchandise business. He assures all responsible applicants that he is sober and industrious and hasn't a single bad habit.

If you are a maid, a girl or a widow who reads this, you stand a chance of winning the prize, and if you are an orphan, get busy and send your picture to Keler at once. He takes kindly to orphans, as is evidenced from the following excerpt from his letter:

"Will answer all questions and letters from girls, maids and widows, but would prefer to wed an orphan. Will give my business to the one I wed, that she may know I am a square man and will do right."

The following notice was inclosed, with the request that the official post it in a conspicuous place:

"Temperate gentleman would be pleased to form the acquaintance of ladies matrimonially inclined. Give description and full particulars in first letter. Send photo, which will be returned, if desired."

SHEDS TOENAILS BIENNIALLY.

BEDFORD, IND., Aug. 9.—J. W. Mundy, of this city, sheds the nails from his toes every two years, and this has occurred since he was a child. When asked to see his foot, Mundy bared his left foot and showed the old nails, barely hanging to the toes, and the new nails growing under the old ones.

ALL STATES TO SHOW POULTRY AT KNOXVILLE

Exhibition of Best Breeds To Be Feature of National Conservation Exposition.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Aug. 9.—Birds for the poultry show that is to be held in connection with the National Conservation Exposition in this city during the months of September and October are coming to Knoxville all the way from California. Word of the coming of the California birds has just been received by the poultry department.

Interest in the poultry show is country-wide. From almost every State in the Union will be brought to Knoxville poultry of different kinds. Already it is assured that the poultry show will be the biggest thing of its kind ever held in the South. It will be in fact as well as name "The Madison Square Garden Show of the South."

A most comprehensive exhibit of the great textile industry of the South is assured for the exposition. Progressive manufacturers of Greenville, S. C., have just signed up for a large amount of exhibit space in the All-South building of the exposition and the greater part of that space will be devoted to the textile industry.

In addition to the Greenville textile manufacturers a number of other concerns of like nature in the South, from Knoxville and elsewhere, will make exhibits, and thus this industry, constantly increasing in importance in the South, will receive great attention. The different processes through which cotton goes from the seed to the loom and after will be strikingly shown in the different exhibits.

Buys a $4,000 Auto To Use Cheap Gas

When Ex-Senator Scott Has Burned 60,000 Gallons He Will Have Saved Cost of Car.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The house of Senator Nathan Bay Scott, of West Virginia, is divided against itself, with automobiles as they issue. The Senator and Mrs. Scott are devoted to each other. They attend the same dinners, theaters and social functions together, but they arrive and depart in separate motor cars. It came about this way:

The senator has been paying 22 cents a gallon for gasoline to propel the family machine. He discovered a place where the price was 17 cents. With much glee he informed Oscar, the family chauffeur, of his discovery and directed that Oscar purchase gasoline there.

Oscar demurred because the gasoline emporium was too far from the family mansion. Mrs. Scott backed him up. Whereupon Senator Scott bought himself a $4,000 machine, acquired a chauffeur to navigate it and divorced himself from the old machine and Oscar.

After Senator Scott has burned 60,000 gallons of gasoline he will have saved the cost of the car. But he doesn't have to ride with Oscar.

Truax might have gone on drawing the pension until death had he not lately made application for an increase.

$1,000 IN GOLD IS FIRST PRIZE FOR ORGANIZATIONS IN BIG WANT AD CONTEST

Everybody, Old and Young, Given Equal Opportunity in Arrangement of Awards—Churches and Lodges Have Splendid Chance.

Well, here's something worth working for!

The complete list of prizes in the Want Ad Contest inaugurated by Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian, beginning with $1,000 in cash, is announced to-day.

Prizes are offered for organizations as well as individual contestants.

Men or women interested in their church, lodge, chapter, social or charitable organization or any recognized body may name their organization as a contestant, form teams for work and win something worth while. The first prize for organizations will be One Thousand Dollars in gold.

The organization running second in the contest will win $500 worth of furniture, designed for lodge, church or any other use, the selection to be left to the contesting organization.

Worth Trying For.

The complete prize list offers an opportunity for loyal lodge members or church people to raise a fund for their organization or secure a complete outfit of furniture for equipping lodge room, church study or residence or the home of any social organization. It is expected that a number of organizations will enlist clubs of enthusiastic members who will go after that $1,000 grand prize.

The classification of prizes will give the boys and girls as good an opportunity to win as the grown-ups, though if a boy or girl tops the whole list he or she will be entitled to the automobile or trip to California just the same as though a grown person had led the contestants.

See Want Ad Man.

The Want Ad Man wants to talk to every contestant Monday. He has engaged the fourth floor of the Foote & Davies building, Edgewood avenue and North Pryor street, for his offices, and will be at his desk from 8 o'clock in the morning to 5 o'clock in the afternoon every day. On Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays he will remain in his office until 8 o'clock in the evening to meet contestants, give them assistance, talk over details and help them generally. He wants to give every contestant every possible aid in the work.

$640 Average Income Of American Farmer

Government Report Declares There Are Many Who Make far Smaller Sum.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Farming is not the most profitable business in the world, railroad press agents to the contrary notwithstanding, according to a bulletin of the Department of Agriculture.

For the first time in the history of farming in the United States the department has managed to get accurate data on the subject.

It reports that the average income of the American farmer is $640.40 a year. "It is reasonable to infer," says the department, "that at least half of the farmers in this country have even smaller incomes."

Feudist's Daughter Shouts at Conviction

Woman Obtains Practically All the Evidence Produced in Court Against Slayers.

WINCHESTER, KY., Aug. 9.—The work of Mrs. Lillian Gross, daughter of Ed Callahan, of Breathitt County, former Sheriff and noted feud leader, was rewarded to-day, when a jury returned a verdict finding Andrew Johnson, 19, guilty of having murdered Callahan.

The jury fixed Johnson's punishment at life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

When the verdict was given out, Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Timandy Callahan, young widow of the feudist, shouted for joy.

The evidence was secured almost entirely by Mrs. Gross.

Twelve witnesses, who swore that they saw Johnson at Jackson, 12 miles from the scene of the shooting, are under indictment for perjury.

Wind Saves Life of Baby Caught by Kite

String on Toy Encircles Throat of Child and Lifts Him From Earth.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Except for the timely intervention of a gust of wind, Baby Allen McNaughton, 15 months old, might have been hanged by a box kite string until he was dead yesterday afternoon in the presence of his 12-year-old brother, Monroe, and a group of boy friends. As it was he was hanged until he was black in the face, and the string circled his throat with a gash that barely missed the jugular vein. Just as the kite went up the string slackened and twined about the baby's throat. The child was lifted from the ground and was being borne aloft when a sudden cross current slackened the string again. Monroe quickly cut it, releasing the kite and his brother at the same time.

FARMERS QUIT COTTON TO GROW WATERMELONS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—The biggest watermelon crop on record is being moved along the Savannah and Statesboro Railroad. Already more than 650 cars have been hauled. Bennett Maas, commercial agent for the Macon Dublin and Savannah, reports that farmers are so well pleased with their melon crops that some of them will abandon cotton-planting and go in for melons entirely.

Resigns One Place; Then Loses Other

Mayor Quits Office to Become Collector of Port, but Suffers From Curtailment.

PORT HURON, MICH., Aug. 9.—The order of Secretary McAdoo abolishing the office of collector of customs at this port has thrown former Mayor John J. Bell out into the cold.

When Mr. Bell received his appointment a few years ago he resigned as the city's chief executive, and Commissioner Dixon was chosen as his successor. Then Mr. Bell appointed William R. Chadwick as his deputy.

Now the order from Washington puts Mr. Chadwick in charge of the local part. Mr. Bell finds he has resigned himself out of one job and appointed himself out of another.

Steamer's Crew Deny Sighting 'Titanic'

Officers Say Wreckage They Saw Was Sixty Miles South of Disaster Scene.

Special Cable to The American.

SOUTH SHIELD, Aug. 9.—Officers of the steamer Luciline, which has arrived here, deny the report that they saw the Titanic wreck apparently resting on top of a ledge of rocks. What they saw during their trip from Bordeaux to Philadelphia was some wreckage consisting of a part of a mast and some gear that was probably attached to a submerged object. They were 60 miles south of the scene of the Titanic disaster, although in the same longitude. They discredit the supposition that the Titanic rests upon a submerged reef.

Blue Underwear Is Hot Weather Relief

Head of U. S. Health Department Recommends It as Means of Keeping Cool.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The head of the Public Health Department gave out to-day instructions on "How to Keep Cool, Happy and Healthy in Summer."

What to Eat—Plenty of fruits; fresh vegetables; as little meat as possible; potatoes and other starchy foods in moderate quantities.

What to Drink—Soft, non-alcoholic cooling drinks; buttermilk and sweet milk (the certified kind); alcoholic drinks in greatest moderation.

What to Wear—White outer clothes; blue underwear; soft collars; straw hats; good, old, easy shoes.

Many Lives Saved As Train Is Ditched

Forethought of Towerman Averts Crash Between Specials by Taking Chance on Tragedy.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Scores of lives were saved to-day when a towerman in Burnham, Ill., threw the Ohio River special on the Pennsylvania Railroad into a derail and averted its collision with a through Wabash train from St. Louis. The train took the ditch at high speed. The Pennsylvania locomotive was overturned in the crash, but aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman, no one was hurt.

A moment after the Pennsylvania train hit the derailer the Wabash train clicked across the frogs at the track intersection less than 1,000 feet away.

Prince Chased by Laundress

She Asks $50,000 on Love Notes

He Is Gone on His Honeymoon

Miss Freese, a California girl, who at a Secret Marriage Became the bride of Prince Sultkowski, of Austria, and a Snapshot of the Prince.

Sultkowski, Who Won Rich Girl and Had His $100,000 Debts Paid, Is Accused.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—An angry laundress from Vienna is in Los Angeles looking for Prince Stanislaus Sultkowski, the noble Austrian who came here several months ago, wooed in his gallant way and won the beautiful Miss Marie Louise Freese, had his debts of $100,000 paid by Father-in-Law Freese, and received from the same source an annuity of $20,000.

The laundress, Mrs. Clara Melcher, declares that the Prince brought her to this country on the promise that he would marry her.

After a hasty, private marriage, the noble Prince and his American Princess disappeared. The father-in-law says they are "not in the country," and no more.

Los Angeles society wondered at this quiet wedding. An elaborate church ceremony had been planned, but the plans were abandoned at short notice.

She Asks Federal Aid.

Society was in the midst of this wonder when entered Mrs. Melcher. She appealed with her story to the United States immigration inspector, and was supported by Adolph Danzieger, a lawyer. The Prince declared, Danzieger said, that the woman had annoyed his family in Austria, and to get her away from Vienna so he could return home with his American wife, he had written her to come to America.

An attorney, who was first approached by Mrs. Melcher and then retained by the Prince, said he suggested to Mr. Freese, the Prince's father-in-law, a payment of five or ten thousand dollars in settlement of the woman's claims, but Mrs. Melcher, through her lawyer, declared that she would have $50,000 or nothing. She has love letters which she says prove her claims.

The Prince and his American bride are believed to be on their way to Austria where Stanislaus is taking his Princess without fear of being molested by the insistent laundress.

Prince Lauds Girls Here.

The Prince is lieutenant of the Second Dragoons of the army of the Austrian empire. He came to America in December and lost his heart to the girls of America, whom he likened to "the flowers of the spring." He is a nephew of the Grand Duke of Birlitz. His home is the Castle Tresternitz, near Markburg, Austria.

The following tribute to American girls, of which the Prince delivered himself, was widely published:

"They are splendid, charming, graceful and fresh, like the flowers of the spring. The girls of Europe generally have followed outdoor sports. They are mostly large and strong, often the equal of their husbands in strength.

"My idea of a girl is found right here in America. I have been most hospitably received and have met many of them. Their sweetness, their trimness and the wonderful manner in which they wear their clothes have 'got me going,' as you say. Their figures and their style surpass the Europeans. Their dignity and grace and the democracy I have found in so many are winning, and I do not blame Europe's noblemen for coming to America for their brides."

Folly of Suffrage Shown by Dresses, Says Mrs. Marshall

Vice President's Wife Believes Women Can Do More Good Correcting Cabarets.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Slashed skirts with the silhouette gown and other freaks of modern fashion are the worst enemies of the newly made voters of Illinois, and the cabaret and the turkey trot are more in need of reform than Chicago's First Ward, in the opinion of Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, who was in Chicago with her husband.

Mrs. Marshall declared frankly that she was opposed to the municipal power recently granted to the women of Illinois. Mrs. Marshall said:

"I have never been a suffragist. To me the fashions of to-day ought to convince any one that a woman is not fit to vote. Some women's dress is not only extreme, it is objectionable. A woman would do more good by correcting the dances in our cafes and cabarets than in running for office.

"The women in the East are not strongly in favor of the ballot, and none of the Cabinet women seems to favor it, with the exception, perhaps, of the President's daughter, Miss Jessie Wilson."

NEWPORT TOLD THAT U. S. NEEDS AN ARISTOCRACY

NEWPORT, Aug. 9.—William MacDonald, professor of American history at Brown University, delivering the principal address before the Rhode Island Society of the Cincinnati, gave expression to some startling new ideas. The topic of his address was, "An Aristocracy in a Democracy." He said:

"There is needed an aristocracy to lead, a government of the best men. Not an aristocracy of vulgar wealth or hereditary descent, but an aristocracy made up of sound physique, disciplined, intelligent and trained, public-spirited, of cosmopolitan taste and unpretentious good manners."

DIVORCE DEFENDANT SAYS HUSBAND IS NON-RESIDENT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Mrs. M. A. Perdue has filed a jurisdictional plea in the Superior Court in the divorce suit recently instituted against her by A. W. Perdue. She declares Perdue is not a resident of Georgia and asks the court to dismiss the suit.

POLITICS MIXED IN ALABAMA AS JOHNSTON DIES

Underwood May Be Drawn Into Senate Race—Knox and DeGraffenreid Mentioned.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 9.—The death of Senator Joseph Forney Johnston has precipitated in Alabama a political problem. He was seized by the fatal attack of illness at the time when he was in the midst of a fight with Congressman Richmond P. Hobson to retain his seat in the Senate, and Hobson thus is left without opposition.

The dominant political powers in Alabama, it is generally recognized, are not altogether friendly to the Hobson interests, and a man as powerful as Johnston undoubtedly will be brought forward to oppose the hero of the Merrimac.

Who will it be?

Eyes Are on Underwood.

All eyes turn to Oscar Underwood as the likely opponent of Hobson. Here near the end of the session of Congress, with his work well toward completion, it is conceded that Underwood can relinquish with safety his grasp on affairs in the House and step into the higher place in the Senate. A movement already is felt that may have its effect in bringing him out as a candidate.

Meanwhile, Governor O'Neal must appoint a successor to Senator Johnston to fill his seat for the two years yet remaining of his term. And, unless by previous agreement otherwise, the appointee probably will be a candidate for the coming term.

If Governor O'Neal appoints Colonel John B. Knox, of Anniston, to the place, Knox certainly will be a candidate for the long term, his health permitting. Knox for years has had ambition to enter the Senate. Twice he has been a candidate, losing in 1907, when Johnston and Bankhead were named pravisional Senators to succeed Pettus and Morgan, who then were near death, and again in 1910, when he opposed Bankhead.

Knox a Brilliant Figure.

Knox is a brilliant, eloquent, altogether spectacular figure. The Governor may not feel disposed toward his appointment on one ground, however. One year ago occurred a vacancy on the bench of the State Supreme Court, and Governor O'Neal tendered Knox the appointment. After weeks of deliberation the Anniston man declined it. Political gossip at that time was heard to the effect that the Governor was placed in an inconvenient position because of the refusal, and he was forced to take Judge E. D. DeGraffenreid from the bench of the Court of Appeals to place him in the Supreme Court.

DeGraffenreid is O'Neal's closest friend and political adviser. That he should be in line for the Senate appointment is not considered unlikely in a number of places. In event he is appointed, it is unlikely that he will make the race for the long term, and the Underwood shadow looms up again.

The death of Senator Johnston, occurring almost simultaneously with that of his present political ally and personal friend, Major W. W. Screws, editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, is regarded in Alabama as a startling coincidence. Major Screws was Johnston's firmest supporter in his race against Hobson.

Friedmann Has to Face New Charges

Originator of Tuberculosis Serum Is Accused of Unprofessional Conduct by Assistant.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Charges of unprofessional conduct have been preferred against Dr. Friedrich F. Friedmann, originator of tuberculosis serum, and he may have to defend his conduct before a court of honor of physicians and surgeons. Julius Benjamin, father of Dr. Harry Benjamin, who went to the United States with Friedmann as the latter's assistant, and who, as a result of his association with the creator of the tuffle tubercular vaccine, was left stranded in New York City without funds, is pressing the charges.

TYBEE'S CATHOLIC CHURCH TOO SMALL FOR TOURISTS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Plans are being considered for enlarging the Roman Catholic chapel at Tybee.

This season the attendance has been so large that men and boys have had to stand. The summer communicants have been most generous in their contributions to the enlargement fund. They have also raised a fund for the purchase of new vestments for the priest.

LOS ANGELES TO AID IN EXAMINER SITE DEDICATION

Civic Bodies and Officials to Participate in Cornerstone Laying of Great Newspaper Plant.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—On Monday at 12 o'clock will commence the ceremony of the placing of the cornerstone of the new Los Angeles Examiner building at Eleventh and Broadway.

Because the spirit of California has made this building possible, part of this ceremony will be the raising of the California Bea flag over the great edifice now already partically completed. The event will mark the progress of a great newspaper in a great city. Planned under the auspices of the Advertising Club of Los Angeles, and representative business men, the program for the cornerstone laying reaches broad and comprehensive proportions.

Great Chorus to Sing.

The music of four great massed bands will sound patriotically at the appearance of the flag, Madame Esther Palliser, the famous prima donna will sing the new song of Southland progress written for the occasion by Miles Overholt, and a chorus of 100 trained voices will mark the laying of the cornerstone.

From the lips of one who has made a great mark in America's history will come the final address of faith in Los Angeles and its people—William Randolph Hearst.

There will come, too, during this ceremony a novel procedure calculated to remind the younger generation of the event. A motion picture will be taken of the event, showing the ceremony and surrounding trons. Immediately after the picture has been taken, the film will be developed with all haste and within a few hours a hermetically sealed canister will be placed in the cornerstone.

To William Randolph Hearst will be presented by Mayor Rose the silver trowel of the cornerstone laying. The opening words of the ceremony will be spoken by the Rev. Charles Edward Locke, who will be presented by Ernest Ingold. Then James R. H Wagner will come to the platform and present to A. W. Kinney, president of the Chamber of Commerce on behalf of the people of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Examiner, the California Bear flag.

Mr. Hearst to Speak.

After Mr. Kinney's reply to this, the Rev. George Donahue, acting for Bishop Conaly, will speak. The Rt. Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop, of Los Angeles, will give an address. After the speech of Mr Hearst, Dr. Sigmund Hecht will say the closing word.

Before the ceremony at the new building, an escort with Chief of Police Sebastian acting as grand marshal, will proceed from Central Park to the old Examiner building at Fifth and Broadway. Here Mayor Rose, the speakers and Mr. Hearst will join the party and be escorted down Broadway to The Examiner's new site and the scene of the cornerstone laying.

No Duke Available For Edna Goodrich

London Society Much Amused by Actress' Announcement She Is to Wed Peer.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Great amusement has been created by a cabled report of Edna Goodrich's announcement that she is to marry an English duke.

"It is a pretty story," comments The London Daily Mirror, "but of the 26 dukes, nineteen are married and five are widowers, the youngest being 67 years old.

"Of the remaining two, the actress couldn't have met them on a houseboat at Henley."

Of course there is the Duke of Westminster, whose penchant for charming actresses is well known, but he is not free to marry again, not yet.

Getting Acquainted With Your Own City!

Atlanta has grown so rapidly that Mr. Busyman, engrossed in the "moil" of his own restricted environments, rarely "glimpses" beyond the horizon of his personal sphere of activity. "HE KNOWS SHE GROWS"—but his knowledge of the INDIVIDUALITY of her growth is entirely beyond his "ken." Old industries double their capacity—NEW ones rear their walls. The BYRD PRINTING COMPANY is an instance of BOTH OF THESE CONDITIONS. They DOUBLED THEIR CAPACITY, and MOVED INTO A NEW ESPECIALLY BUILT FIVE-STORY CONCRETE BUILDING; and for absolutely MODERN equipment, and completeness in every department, no plant in America is superior. You should come down and "get acquainted"—see one of Atlanta's best achievements at its best. We'll be glad to show you over the plant. It's very interesting.

ANNA PAVLOWA, noted Russian dancer, who has quarrel with her dancing partner on London stage.

Pavlowa Strikes Her Partner; Stops Dance

Quarrel With Novikoff on London Stage Is Like Falling Out With Mordkin.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Pavlowa caused a sensation at the Palace Theater tonight by an open quarrel with her dancing partner, Novikoff, the incident being parallel with her rupture with Mordkin last year.

While dancing Adagio, Pavlowa suddenly hit Novikoff a smart blow on the shoulder. Novikoff immediately left the stage while Pavlowa walked off by the opposite side, the orchestra finishing the piece to an empty stage. Pavlowa afterward performed two solo dances, but Novikoff did not appear again.

Boy Declares That He Is Beyond Reformation, and Welcomes the Gallows.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Walter Novak, 20, arrested with four companions aftter they had fatally wounded Patrolman Samuel W. Sowers and beaten Patrolman Frank Walpole, admitted having taken part in more than thirty robberies in two months and boasted of his career.

"I was born a thief, and I've been a thief ever since," said Novak. "I don't care whether I go to the gallows. I started when I was nine stealing pennies. I have been put in all kinds of institutions to reform me, but they only made me worse. I don't want any member of my family to come and see me. If they come, I will kick them out.

COLLEGE HEN MISSES LAYING 1 DAY IN 100

Champion Barnyard Producer Rests Only When Commencement Season Arrives.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CORVALLIS, OREG., Aug. 9. A college hen, which laid 99 eggs in 100 days and observed Commencement Day by taking a single day's vacation, is a new claimant for prominence in the chicken world.

The newly heralded layer is three-quarters White Leghorn and one-quarter Barred Plymouth Rock, descending from several generations of heavy layers bred at the Oregon Agricultural College experiment station.

The 99 eggs were laid during the 100 days ended June 8, as follows: Thirty-one in March, 29 in April, 31 in May and 8 in the first 8 days in June.

Not only is this the best record ever secured at Oregon Agricultural College for the same length of time, but a careful perusal of authentic records from other stations on file fails to reveal an equal performance.

The result of breeding as shown in the egg production of this one hen is only an isolated example of what Professor James Dryden's extensive experiments are proving to be possible.

Up to date the records show clearly the beneficial effect in egg yield, and when the year's experiments are concluded in the fall some interesting statistics will be available for the use of poultrymen who are raising chickens for egg production.

OIL LETTERS KILLED HIM POLITICALLY, SAYS FORAKER

Exposes by William Randolph Hearst Responsible for Downfall, Declares Former Senator Before Senate Lobby Inquiry.

Official of National Manufacturers' Association Writes Democratic Simplicity Will Mean Union Label on U.S. Stationery.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Former Senator Foraker admitted to the Senate Lobby Committee to-day publication by William Randolph Hearst of the famous Standard Oil letters killed Foraker's chances for re-election to the Senate in 1908.

After identifying a letter received from Martin M. Mitchell, the confessed ex-lobbyist, making a report of political activities in Ohio in Foraker's behalf, the former Senator said:

"It was the morning of the day Mr. Hearst's disclosure was made public. An attack had been made on me by Mr. Hearst which destroyed my chances of election, saying I had acted as counsel for the Standard Oil Company. This had created a sentiment in our State very prejudicial to me. I continued as a candidate in the campaign only because to retire from it after I had become a candidate would look like an admission that there was some justification for the attack, whereas there was not any."

Senator Foraker said Muhall, whom he had known thirty years, greatly overestimated his own importance.

No Aid from N. A. M.

Foraker said he had never received aid from the National Association of Manufacturers and while he received a fee of $500 for the part he played in the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1896, he was not in the employ of either David Lamar or Edward Lauterbach in an injunction case against the Union Pacific in 1903.

The House Investigating Committee opened its probe with introduction of correspondence showing the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers in fighting labor legislation in Congress and various attempts to have "conservative" men named as members of House committees.

Discussing the recent sundry civil bill, with its provision prohibiting the expenditure of certain funds for the prosecution of farmers and labor unions under the Sherman law, James A. Emery, counsel of the N. A. M., wrote to President John Kirby, Jr., of the association, on March 7, 1913, after President Taft had vetoed the bill:

"I want to emphasize as hard as I can the importance of lining up for a tremendous demonstration when this bill reaches President Wilson, as it undoubtedly will, with the same provision in it. You will then have an early opportunity to decide whether the glittering Democratic motto, 'Equal right for all and special privilege for none,' means anything or whether the Administration has surrendered completely or will merely turn over the Department of Labor.

Objection to Secretary Wilson.

"I note, by the way, your reference to a letter from C. W. Post on the question of a protest over the appointment of Wilson (Secretary of Labor). A protest on this subject is a mere waste of breath, and on the whole I am inclined to think the whole purpose of this department will be shown up quicker with the unions in control of it than in any other way. Gompers will run it characteristically with a high hand, and if the whole thing does not smell to Heaven within a year I shall be very much astonished.

"By that time Democratic simplicity will probably mean a union label on the White House stationery and the President conferring with the Waiters' Union over the appointment of his steward. At present we have nothing more startling in Jeffersonian simplicity than the news Mrs. Bryan is making a new suit for the Secretary of State, and cakes and ginger ale will be served at the dinner for the British Ambassador. Toothpicks will, of course, be an after dinner course at all Cabinet receptions, and the demand for dress suits will be confined to waiters in the hotels."

In this same letter Emery advised Kirby, "if you have any idea Taft would have vetoed this bill of his own motion, get over it. A list of public men who had 'pie' in this $113,000,000 appropriation bill included many prominent men in both Houses."

LOSES ELOPEMENT RACE.

IRONTON, OHIO, Aug. 9.—George Alexander, of Floyd County, Kentucky, arrived here to-day in pursuit of his daughter, Miss Oma Alexander, five minutes after she had been married to Lawrence Jenkins. The father said the girl was only 15 years old and that Jenkins had induced her to elope with him when she was on her way to school this morning.

Finds Honeymoon Land, Then the Man

Society Girl and New Husband Are Now on Their Way to Tahiti.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Miss Luella Hayne, a pretty Chicago girl, is now, as the bride of Dr. Frank Vance, of Enid, Okla., on her way to spend her honeymoon in Tahiti. Miss Hayne had chosen the spot for the honeymoon before she found the man.

Miss Hayne went through a finishing school which prepared her for all the conventionalities of a reigning position in the smart set, but after a brief whirl this life proved tiresome and she started out on the road that leads "back to nature."

The romance was begun at a house party in New York city given by Miss Hayne's sister.

In talking about Tahiti before she sailed she said:

"The people who are most successful in our centers of civilization are most fettered by it. The reason why people plunge so madly into the economic struggle is largely that they may free themselves from its conditions. Why should not a civilized man be as happy as a native of Tahiti? We are going to find out."

Mrs. Mackay Leads Hermit Life

Society Leader Pines for Children

Seldom Stirs From Maine Home

Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay with her children, who were taken from her when her husband left on mysterious trip to Europe.

Portland People Believe She Has Settled in Quiet Town to Start Divorce Suit.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 9.—From the gay life of a popular society woman, a leader in the smartest affairs of New York, Newport and Bar Harbor to pursue an existence in a quiet city, is a change just made by the dashing Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, the former Kitty Duer.

"Why do you suppose she's here?" all Portland is asking.

What can she do with herself all day long, for she is never seen out, save to take a drive, and then always wearing a heavy white veil. Is she here to secure a divorce and will she live that dreary life for one whole year—that's how the gossip runs.

Perhaps she's writing another book. She did write one once, "The Crystal Ball." But while the world conjectures, Mrs. Mackay denies herself to all.

Divorce is without doubt her idea in burying herself here, where she has been ever since her millionaire husband sailed for Europe with their three children.

Mrs Mackay is occupying the home of Adam P. Leighton on Western Promenade, a cottage in comparison with the mansions she has been used to occupying.

It was on June 25 that Mr. Mackay sailed for Europe on the Imperator, taking his children on board from New Jersey, where they had been in his control for several days. He went abroad with never a word to the wife and mother.

So mysterious was the departure that it attracted wide attention. They boarded the ship at night; a detective squad was serving to protect the children from any attempt to prevent their departure and the father registered under an assumed name. The children, who are no doubt longing for their mother as she is longing for them, are still abroad and it is said they will be there for months.

Western Canada to Honor First Farmer

Three-Day Celebration Planned as Tribute to Memory of Chevalier LaCorne.

MELFORT, SASK., Aug. 9.—Western Canada is to honor the memory of Captain Louis Luc De La Corne, the first farmer of Western Canada. Chevalier LaCorne introduced agriculture in the Carrot River valley, Saskatchewan, in 1754. At Melfort, in the heart of the Carrot River District, a three-day celebration, August 1, 2 and 3, 1914, will commemorate the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of the first farming in Western Canada.

The business men of Melfort and the surrounding territory have organized to arrange for the celebration, and committees are already at work. The celebration will be unusual and will include a pageant, in which 2,000 Indians will participate. This pageant will typify the agricultural growth of Western Canada, from the days before Chevalier LaCorne explored the Carrot River valley to the present time.

Honeymoon Trip on Motorcycle Planned

Bride Will Be Guide on Romantic Journey Through Rockies on Tandem.

GRAND JUNCTION, COLO., Aug. 9.—A trip across the Rockies from Grand Junction to Denver on a motorcycle will be the novel honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Carson, of this city. They leave in a few days. Mrs. Carson will guide the machine on the entire journey. She was formerly Miss Ethel Kelso, daughter of a prominent Grand Junction fruit grower, and is an expert motorcyclist. Carson will ride on the tandem seat.

The first woman to attempt to ride across the Rockies on a motorcycle is Mrs. E. Frank Winfield, who made the trip with her husband last summer.

Fright Kills Hero as He Tries to Save Life

Man Leaps Into Water After Drowning Woman and Heart Stops From Scare.

STROUDSBURG, PA., Aug. 9.—Mrs. F. A. Keesing, of No. 693 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., was seized with heart failure to-day bathing in Cherry Creek, Delaware Water Gap. David J. Dickenson, a hotel porter, went to her rescue.

Dickenson was unable to swim, and sank with Mrs. Keesing. Both were taken from the water dead.

Two physicians said there was no water in the lungs of either, and that Mrs. Keesing died of heart failure and Dickenson of fright.

City Babies Win Over Those From Country

Score Highest in Physical and Mental Efficiency Tests at Chautauqua Show.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—City-bred babies triumphed over those from the country in the Twentieth Century Baby Show held at Piasa Chautauqua near Alton, Ill. The prizes went not to the prettiest babies, but to those who scored highest in physical and mental efficiency.

First place in Class A for babies from eighteen months to three years, was won by Cooper Stanton White, of Alton. In Class B for babies from six to eighteen months the winner was Gilbert Craig, of East St. Louis.

Of the eighteen babies entered, none scored less than 946. None of the country babies entered won a prize.

Uses Boot as Strop; Shaves With Knife

Pioneer Indiana Man Has Never Owned Razor, Mug or Barber Soap.

CONNERSVILLE, IND., Aug. 9.—Zaccheus Adams, Jackson Township, Fayette County, has shaved himself twice a week for 54 years, but never owned a shaving mug, a razor, a strop or a hone. It is Mr. Adams' pride that he keeps his razor, an old Wade & Butcher cleaver, twice as big as a common razor, in the finest trim with the least trouble of any man in the county.

He wears old style, high-toped boots and still has one pair which he bought 26 years ago. Wishing to shave, Mr. Adams first puts on these boots. He then smacks the razor blade back and forth along the leather leg of the left one for a minute or two. His next operation is to moisten his face with rainwater—no perfumed soap for him—and then he just shaves.

NATURE AIDS IN BEAUTY DISPLAY AT PACIFIC FAIR

Picturesque Location Will Add to Grandeur of Palaces of Mammoth Panama Exhibition.

By HAMILTON WRIGHT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—The palaces of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition have been planned upon a massive scale to conform with their impressive natural surroundings. The site of the exposition at Harbor View lies within the city limits as a crescent upon the shores of San Francisco Bay, just inside the Golden Gate.

No more picturesque location, nor one more appropriate to the celebration of a great maritime event could be imagined. On the south, east and west the grounds are encircled by towering hills of varying contours rising successively from 250 to 900 feet above the sea level. Upon the north the site opens out upon the harbor of San Francisco.

Site Natural Amphitheater.

The central portion of the site lies slightly above the sea and is encircled on three sides by gently sloping ground; within a short distance from the boundaries of the site these slopes change to steep hillsides and thus the site becomes the floor of a huge amphitheater from whose sides the exposition will be seen stretched out below. To the east and south the residence section encircles the exposition grounds, and to the west and southwest the site embraced by the wooded slopes of the Presidio military reservation, dark with cypress and eucalyptus and interspersed with occasional vistas of green valleys.

The exposition buildings, built upon an axis east and west, will face the bay upon the north; they will parallel the stream of the great incoming traffic of the world through the western gate of the United States. Ships entering the harbor will pass before the exposition grounds.

The harbor itself will be a part of the great theater upon which will be staged the world's jubilee and the Golden Gate will be the entrance to the theater.

A marvelous panorama will be afforded visitors on ships coming through the Golden Gate. As one looks from the harbor he will see there main groups of exposition buildings. There will be the great central group comprising the fourteen exposition palaces to be devoted to general exhibits; there will be the group upon the left hand or east end devoted to amusement concessions and covering sixty-five acres; this will be the "midway." The right-hand group upon the Presidio Military reservation and nearest the Golden Gate will be devoted to the pavilions of the States and foreign nations.

Tropical Boulevard Feature.

The main group of buildings will lie between a tropical garden or boulevard running east and west along the fringe of hills nearest the city upon the south, and the esplanade along the shores of San Francisco Bay upon the north.

The tropical boulevard, to be known as the "Alameda," will be 1,800 feet in length and 300 feet wide; it will be glowing with fountains, lagoons, statuary peristyles and arcades and, secluded from the winds of the bay, it will be transplanted with a profusion of semi-tropical trees, plants and flowers, including the orange, banana, olive, myrtle and every variety of palm. The east end of the Alameda will open out with a plaza upon Van Ness Avenue, one of the principal boulevards of San Francisco. The west end upon the Presidio will be surmounted by a commemorative arch of triumph.

The prevailing color tone of the exposition will be an ochre, a tawny buff, several shades removed from white, but in the distance giving the effect of white, but will not be glaring under the brilliant sunlight of California. In the courts there will be a marvelous blending of colors; Pompeiian red, strong Italian blues, vermilion and orange will predominate. The court system is unique in that it will permit each architect, artist or sculptor to present some distinct conception without clashing with the exposition architecture and coloring in its entirety.

Get Ready for End of the World

Flying Rollers Expect It Soon

So Members of This Queer Cult Await With Uncut Hair and Much Footwashing.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—"Now, brethren, watch night and day, for ye know not when the end of the world draws nigh. It may be tomorrow; at least it will come before the year 1920. It is probably much nearer than that," says Brother Lucien I. Pingree. With long dowing beard that has never been profaned by scissors and with silken locks which also have never been clipped, this resident of Stoneham thus warns all those who would be ready when the First Resurrection occurs. "It is coming soon—very soon—very soon," he asserts. Brother Pingree and his band of adherents all are sure of it. The end of the world is close at hand, they all say.

For this reason the Flying Rollers are launcing a great religious crusade which they hope will awaken men and women to a knowledge of their evil ways and will prepare them for the near-at-hand millennium.

Keep on Living.

If you are one of the elect and alive when this auspicious day comes Mr. Pingree says that you will never die. Your body will take on eternal life and though you will be otherwise possessed of man's normal anatomy and will go right on through million of years living in the mortal mold.

Brother Pingree, who is agent and teacher of the Flying Roller faith in this vicinity, lives at No. 1 Forest street, Stoneham. His church until recently has been at No. 117 Hancock street, Everett. Now the Flying Rollers are to pitch their tent in Malden and launch a propaganda which aims to halt the world in its mad round of pleasure, barber shops and picture galleries.

It is not such a hardship for the women to belong to the Flying Rollers church, but the men have troubles of their own. Their discipline forbids anyone to have his hair cut or to enjoy the pleasure of lying back in a tonsorial chair while the artist with the razor does the rest.

Males Never Cut Hair.

The male brethren never have the corners of their hair or of their flowing beards rounded. "Thou shalt not," says the church discipline. Then there is the ceremony of the washing of feet, which takes place on certain occasions, when elders and elderesses lave each other's pedal extremities and thus conform to other Biblical injunctions. The Flying Roll is a book written by the great Roller prophet, Jezreel mentioned in the Scriptures as "to come on earth." He came and was here in 1875, wrote the Roll and died about twenty years ago.

Here Are the Tenets of the Flying Rollers

Thou shalt not shave.

Thou shalt not cut thy hair.

Thou shalt not have thy picture taken.

Be faithful and thou shalt join the 144,000 true believers who will live forever.

Remember that the millenium will be here—probably in a year or so.

Thou shalt not tattoo thy arms.

The prophet is James J. Jezreel. Follow his teachings.

Feet washing among the brethren and sisters is practiced faithfully as the Bible and extracts from the "Flying Roll" dictate.

Prepare for the first resurrection which is coming soon.

Since then the Flying Rollers have read his text with scrupulous care and followed closely in his teachings.

The Flying Rollers believe in the law and gospel. That is, they follow literally the teachings of the Bible. A man who is faithful to the end will live forever. The Bible says that, and the Rollers take it literally.

144,000 in the Elect.

Of all the people alive, 144,000 (mentioned in Revelations, Chapter 14) shall be the elect who are to live during the thousand years when Christ is again to be on earth (during the First Resurrection). Then this chosen 144,000 shall enjoy Heaven still with their earthly bodies while the rest of humanity that was, shall minister to them as "ministering spirits."

"The world of wickedness will soon cease. A new world will appear as soon as Christ comes, which will be very soon (I can not give the exact date, but it will be before 1920, there is no doubt about that)," says Pastor Pingree. "In that world there will be no longer this struggle for life. Wonderful fruits and flowers will grow everywhere, along the road sides—fruits and flowers more wonderful than we get from hothouses now. Then the earth will be Heaven for a thousand years.

"We believe that those who are faithful to the teachings of our religion will share that thousand years with Christ, wearing their mortal bodies, then clothed in immortality.

"It is no hardship not to cut your hair or trim your beard," says Mr. Pingree. "We tie it up and tuck it in, and by not cutting it or rounding the corners in any way, we are obeying the letter of divine law."

EVERY LUXURY PROVIDED FOR 12 PRIZE DOGS

Private Room, Electric Fans, Leather Chairs, Etc., for Each of Dozen Pomeranians.

BROKTON, MASS., Aug. 9.—Twelve Pomeranians—each with a whole room to himself, and housed in a house which they have all to themselves, likewise—take the prize for dog luxury, Brockton folks believe. Besides a house of their own, the dogs have:

A valet, electric fan, individual beds, a bath twice a day, a back yard to play in, leather chairs and soft rugs (the latter to try their teeth on).

Mrs. E. V. Graves, a leading business woman, owns the dogs. She is successful as the head of a factory here. Brockton folks say she is more attentive to the dogs than Mrs William Carter, of Newport, who got four doctors when her Pomeranian was nervous.

During the hot days the valet, Mr. Beals, fans the little fellows with a specially made $18 electric fan and each dog is given a cold bath at frequent intervals.

"They are all as jealous as can be," says Mrs. Graves. "If you make more of one than another there is a terrible howl and often a fight. They are friendly to children as a general rule. The dogs are worth anywhere from $150 to $1,000 each, but I do not care to sell them. They are a great comfort to me."

HOT FIGHT FOR COMMISSIONER IN BIRMINGHAM

Recorder Wood, "People's Candidate," Denounces Opponent as Champion of Interests.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Clement R. Wood and George B. Ward are engaged in the most spectacular campaign for President of the Commission of Birmingham ever waged in this city.

Wood, as the "candidate of the people," is making many and varied charges against the political element supporting his opponent, Mr. Ward. He charges that he (Wood) was removed as Recorder by the Commission for sending one of their friends to the stockade and insisting on his serving his time, as he did in similar cases.

He also charges that Ward represents the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company and the Birmingham Loan and Discount Company. He charges that the managing editor of one of Birmingham's afternoon papers was forced out of the race under penalty of losing his position on the paper.

He claims that many other prospective candidates have been eliminated from the race by the powerful hand of the interests, and calls on the "common people" to assert themselves in the defeat of Ward.

Ward claims that Wood was discouraged by the Commission because of incompetency, and makes many other charges and insinuations in his speeches and newspaper cards.

Meetings are being held almost every night, and music from brass bands and the orations of the spellbinders are to be heard on every corner.

It is impossible to get a complete line-up, but it can be said with certainty that the race will be close, and that the result will be known only after every vote has been counted.

WOMEN BUY LAND ONE-THIRD CHEAPER THAN MEN

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 9.—After hearing from women of the Council of Clubs the Finance Committee of the upper house of the Council has killed the ordinance to advance $1,000 of the $12,000 set apart for the purpose of making a start on the contemplated women's reformatory at Leeds.

It developed that the $1,000 had been asked by the Board of Public Welfare as a first payment on thirteen acres of ground it proposed to buy at Leeds at $500 an acre.

The women made fun of the business abilities of the Welfare Board, and said that they had already secured an option on 96 acres close by the thirteen at $171 an acre.

Heiress on Lone Hunt for Gold

Seeks Mine Grandfather Found

Plans to Do Own Prospecting

Miss Frances Leighton, an heiress of California, who is prospecting through a section of the Sierra Madre Mountains in search of a gold mine which she believes her grandfather, a "Forty-niner," discovered, but never made known. Recently she heard of the reported "find" and, securing a miner's outfit, staed alone on the perilous trip through the mountainous wilds in search of it.

Miss Frances Leighton Shows Same Intrepid Spirit of the Argonauts of '49.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—With the same dauntless spirit exhibited by her grandfather during the California gold rush of '49, Miss Frances Leighton, one of the wealthiest and most prominent socially of the younger generation of Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, is on a prospecting tour through the Sierra Madre Mountains to-day in search of a gold mine she had learned her grandfather discovered but never developed.

For many months Miss Leighton planned the prospecting tour before leaving to carry it out. Topographical bureaus supplied her with maps of the mountainous territory through which she planned to make her tour and several veterans of the gold stampede not only advised her against the foolhardiness of the prospective journey, but told her that there was one chance in a thousand of ever greeting civilization again if she lost herself in several untraveled sections of the mountain region that as yet have never been thoroughly explored.

Nevertheless, Miss Leighton had great confidence in the belief that her grandfather did find the mine somewhere in the mountain fastness and she determined to find it, if it did exist, at any cost and without taking into consideration the hardships that confront her.

Miss Leighton, according to reports which have reached her home town, is to-day prospecting at or near the West Fork Canyon, twelve miles beyond Mount Wilson.

Grandfather Killed.

Her grandfather, John Easton, was one of the first of the thousands of New Englanders to reach California, after a perilous journey across the prairies following the report of the discovery of gold in that State.

Soon after reaching San Francisco, he left with his wife and daughter and a partner and established a camp at Sierra Madre. Easton left the camp one day on a prospecting tour and never returned. Three days later his partner went out to search for him. He was found crushed to death by falling rock.

Before his death, however, he managed to draw roughly on a piece of paper what is now believed to be the location of the mine his intrepid young granddaughter is searching for.

Miss Leighton some years ago received a letter from her grandfather's former partner containing the piece of paper on which he had drawn the outline of the supposed mine. It was on receipt of this letter and diagram that Miss Leighton planned to go in search of the hidden gold.

After months of careful study of the many maps, topographical bureau reports and advice from old-time miners, Miss Leighton treated herself to a complete miner's outfit and started on her tedious journey up the mountain.

To Work Alone.

She will do the entire work alone, staking her own camp, preparing her meals, making surveys and using the pick and shovel whenever she believes she has struck the right trail.

Her outfit includes several changes of clothes, a heavy pick and shovel, a mountain mule, or pack animal as they are called in that section of the country, a complete dining and cooking outfit, a pack of playing cards which will afford her her only amusement while practically a prisoner in the wilds, needles, thread and many other useful and necessary articles.

She wears most all the time a pair of regulation top trousers, similar to riding breeches, with canvas leggings and a plain but heavy mountain shirt.

If the gold mine really exists, every one of the young woman's friends believe that she will not return until it has been found.

U. S. EDUCATION EXPERT SAYS ILLITERACY GROWS

BOULDER, COLO., Aug. 9.—That in only two States of the Union has the ideal democracy in education been even approximated; that every year in the United States almost 70,000 illiterates are sent out into the world to make their way; that there are in the country to-day 5,615,000 persons over the age of ten who can neither read nor write and that almost 50 per cent of the rural teachers of the country have not had a high school education, were among the startling statements made by United States Commissioner of Education Claxton in an address on "Democracy and Education."

DENVER IS READY TO GIVE KNIGHTS ROYAL GREETING

Thousands of Templars Pour Into City, Which Is Lavishly Decorated for Conclave.

DENVER, Aug. 9.—Thousands of Knights Templar are already here for the thirty-second triennial convention, and it is estimated that when the convention formally opens Tuesday next more than 100,000 Knights and their friends will have arrived.

All buildings are decorated in honor of the Knights, as are private dwellings. The municipal and other public buildings have been elaborately ornamented and great arches have been built over many of the streets. Thousands have been spent upon decorations and illumination. Denver has spent more than fifteen times as much on its plans for the Knights Templar than it ever before expended upon any one convention.

Sun to Shine All Night.

At Eighteenth and Champa streets the huge figure of a Knight more than 60 feet in height has been erected. A searchlight will play upon it all night. At Fourteenth and Champa streets a "Colorado Sunset," a marvelous electrical display, has been built. It shows the sun sinking below the rim of the mountains. Twenty monster searchlights are placed behind the "sun," throwing their rays into the sky to resemble the rays of the sinking sun.

Over the Isle of Safety at Broadway and Sixteenth street, a reproduction of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem will astonish the visitors. It measures 50 by 60 feet, and is lighted by searchlights on the tops of nearby buildings.

Every arrangement possible has been made by the railroads to bring the Knights and their friends into Denver. More special trains will enter Denver than entered Washington in the same space of time for the inauguration. The Pullman Company has reserved large space of ground on the outskirts of the city for a "Car City," where the special cars and special trains will be parked, and where those Knights who so wish may live in the cars. Sanitary arrangements will be perfect. Stores of various kinds for the convenience of the car dwellers have been established.

Two trainloads of automobiles from New York, sent here by New York Knights, have already arrived, and carloads of automobiles from other cities are arriving daily. These have also been parked on the outskirts of the city. More than 500 special trains and cars have already arrived. According to the railroad schedules, when the visitors really commence to flock in a special train will arrive every eight minutes for forty-eight hours.

Every State Represented.

From August 1 to to-day more than 2,000 automobiles reached this city. More than 1,000 other cars are on their way here. The delegates to the convention are from every State in the Union, and from Alaska, Honolulu, Philippines, Canada, England, Scotland and Ireland.

As the special trains began to arrive, some 2,000 Colorado Knights ranged themselves at the station to escort the new arrivals safely to their hotels. Every hotel room in Denver has been rented.

On Tuesday next the grand parade will be held. More than 50,000 Knights will be in line. Their white plumes, costing $15 each, will altogether be worth $600,000. The regalia of the Knights on parade will be worth more than $1,000,000. Sixty-five bands will march with the Knights, the fees to the bands alone amounting to $22,000. Some 600 Knights' commanders will be mounted on picked horses from the ranches of Colorado and Wyoming.

KANSAS SHERIFF RETALIATES FOR HIS ARREST ON SUNDAY

HUTCHINSON, KANS., Aug. 9.—Following his arrest on a charge of violating the Sunday labor ordinance, Koon C. Beck, sheriff of Reno County, announced that he would stop all Sunday labor in this city.

He swore out complaints against 350 persons who work on Sunday, including all street car employees. Beck and a brother are proprietors of an amusement park and shows have been given there on Sunday. Local ministers and church members made the complaint against the park.

LANE TAKES UP CUDGELS IN WAR FOR FARMERS

Secretary of the Interior Has Begun Long Battle on Land Grabbers.

the Interior Franklin K. Lane has started a little war on the land grabbers west of the Mississippi River.

He has taken up the cudgels of the farmer and the homesteader in the great West. His efforts in this direction materially effect the pocketbook of every man, women and child.

Incidentally, he is "bucking" the land speculator. These land "grabbers" have quietly been acquiring vast tracts of land in the West on which the people of the United States have spent over $75,000,000 in irrigation projects. The homesteader has either been ousted through excessive water rate charges or becomes a tenant of the land companies.

Speculators Hold Land.

Secretary Lane finds that the projects were planned for the purpose of aiding the small farmer in tilling his ground, but that in reality 95 per cent of the land is held by speculators, who are charging excessive rates for water which has been sluiced to the land by the Government.

The other 5 per cent of the acreage is owned by the small farmer, but even Government water rates are held by Mr. Lane to be excessively high. Building notes for dam canal and sluice ways add to the cost of upkeep of the farm and conditions, Westerners say, are becoming intolerable.

By going into the question from the very first day that he entered his office, Mr. Lane has become intimately acquainted with conditions obtaining in the West. Daily conferences have been had with delegations from the West. Even the land speculator had his day in court, and his contentions and views were placed before the Secretary.

Farmer Needs Help.

In this connection Mr. Lane announced: "I am for the farmer, first, last and at all times. Naturally handicapped by lack of sufficient funds to carry on expensive farming under the conditions that obtain in the West, the farmer must receive support and co-operation from the Government, if the great West is to be settled and made to be as productive as the East.

"Expensive water will ruin the small farmers and ranchmen. They must have cheap rates and long-time notes, the Government must back them up an extend them credit, helping them over the rough places if necessary, if the various projects designed to benefit the whole people are to accomplish the purposes for which they were constructed.

"Why should this Government spend $75,000,000 for the benefit of private capital? Why should the Government adopt a hard and fast policy, such as has existed in the past, which has kept the small farmer from going into the new regions and taking up Government land? Isn't it time for the United States to extend to the Westerners a little paternal patience, a little more consideration, a helping hand?"

NEW SECURITIES LISTED.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The Stock Exchange has admitted to the list Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway $1,134,200 additional capital stock, and has stricken from the list Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis fully paid subscription receipts for capital stock as well as Mobile and Ohio Railroad and St. Louis and Cairo collateral 4 per cent bonds, due 1930.

MEN AND RELIGION No. 73

CHILDREN OF GEORGIA

"AND THEY ALL WITH ONE CONSENT BEGAN TO MAKE EXCUSE."

Luke 14:18.

They were at dinner.

Jesus said:

"When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind,

"And thou shalt be blessed."

One at the table pretended to be in sympathy. He began smugly:

"Happy is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God."

The hypocrisy of the man and all others like him was unmasked in the answer made by Jesus. He said:

"A certain man made a great supper and bade many—

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse."

One said one thing, another another.

With one it was a field; with another it was new oxen.

In the end, the Lord said:

"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

And from the highways and the hedges called He His guests.

Are you a maker of hypocritcal phrases as was the man at the Pharisee's dinner table—pretending alove for that which is just and right?

Or, to-day, are you trying to do the will, not of man or men, but of Him who died for you?

Let us have done with excuses!

While spending thousands on fields, hogs and cattle, say not:

"We are unable—

"We can not give proper care to these girls—

"These children must go down in shame because of our lack of money—

"But our beasts we must protect whatever the cost."

If animals are more valuable than girls, let us say frankly: but you know that this is untrue.

You know what Georgia would do.

Consider, then!

The Bill in the House providing a Reformatory for Girls is No. 4—ahead of any other measure appropriating money.

The Penitentiary Committee has approved it.

Unanimously the Appropriations Committee has recommended that it pass.

Why, then, should beasts and fields be provided for by later bills and nothing done for Georgia's wayward and delinquent girls?

BURWELL of Hancock, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman and the vice-chairman, BLACKBURN of Fulton, HARDEMAN of Jefferson, MILLER of Bibb, NUNNALLY of Floyd, PAULK of Berrien, RAGLAND of Talbot, REDWINE of Fayette, RHODES of Clarke, SHUPTRINE of Chatham and SLADE of Muscogee constitute the Rules Committee of the House.

The Bill is in their hands.

Monday is the final day in which the measure can be heard and enacted into law at this session of the Legislature.

These eleven men, THE RULES COMMITTEE, will not prevent a hearing, say their friends. We believe that they will do more, that they will help to pass the Bill.

For they know the worth of a girl-child of ten to fourteen.

And they can appraise a cow or hog.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

WOMAN DEITY CREATED MAN, SAYS TABLET

New Version of Genesis Found in University of Pennsylvania Nippur Collection.

DATE IS FIXED AT 2100 B. C.

Dr. Arno Poebel's Discovery Is Regarded as Oldest Story of Origin of World.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—It was a woman who created mankind, according to a tablet 4,000 years old just deciphered at the Pennsylvania University Museum by Dr. Arno Poebel, who is at work translating the tablets dug up in Nippur some years ago by the museum expeditions.

About 37 years ago George Smith, the English scholar and explorer, brought back from Babylonia the cylinders which gave a Babylonian account of the origin of mankind and much of his early history, and these not only excited great interest but had a profound effect upon the theological teachings. The parallelism between the Babylonian story and that of Genesis developed a new school in theological criticism. But the cylinders of Smith only dated back to the reign of Assurbanipal in the seventh century B. C. The university museum tablet dates back possibly to 2500 B. C., and it is reasonably certain to be no later than the reign of Hamurabi, about 2100 B. C.

Female Deity Created Man.

The new account of the creation and the flood throws much new light on the early ideas of the Babylonians and Sumerians.

The striking novel features of the new tablet are these:

That it was a female deity who created mankind, known as "the blackheaded," from the color of the hair.

That new deities or new characteristics of the gods are discovered in the original document, although they have been hinted at in other ways. The character of the female goddess is now made important from the earliest times and equal with the two male ruler gods. Later tablets speak of these as unimportant.

That the first seven prediluvian cities and the special god of each are discovered.

That the older Babylonian name of the Scriptural Noah is Zingidda.

That deluge ruins of the predeluvian cities were not all destroyed, some not until historic times. There is historic basis to much of the statement in this epic.

Opens With Poem.

Dr. Poebel has prepared a careful literal translation of the tablet. It originally was about seven inches square, but on such a surface the ancients could write in ideographic signs a long epic poem, and that is what this table contained. Like the first chapter of Genesis, the story opens with a great poem on the origin of the heavens as well as of the earth. It appears that Nintu, a female god, created mankind, and she is found lamenting that the other gods seem bent on the destruction of her subjects. She speaks of the human beings as "my creations." It appears that Anu and Enlil were the chief gods of power, although they were among seven of equal rank, the first being god of heaven and the second god of earth. Then comes the story of the creation:

"Nintu created the blackheaded," (human race.) * * * "The fields of the ground produced abundance, the cattle and the four-legged beasts of the field artfully they (the gods) called into existence."

Use of Fireproofed Cotton Goods Urged

State Fire Marshal Says Stores In Kansas Sell No Other Kind.

TOPEKA, Aug. 9.—Harrison Parkman, State Fire Marshal, believes that stores ought to sell only fireproof cotton goods.

In the new State fire textbook the Fire Marshal is urging that every Kansas man and woman refuse to buy any but fireproof cotton goods and that they adopt the German method and fireproof all cotton materials.

The Fire Marshal believes that this action would decrease the number of deaths by fire in Kansas fully 50 per cent and it would make a big decrease in the number of fires in the homes of the State.

Raze House While Occupant Is Away

Workmen of Grade Crossing Commission Destroy House of Man Who Blocked Work.

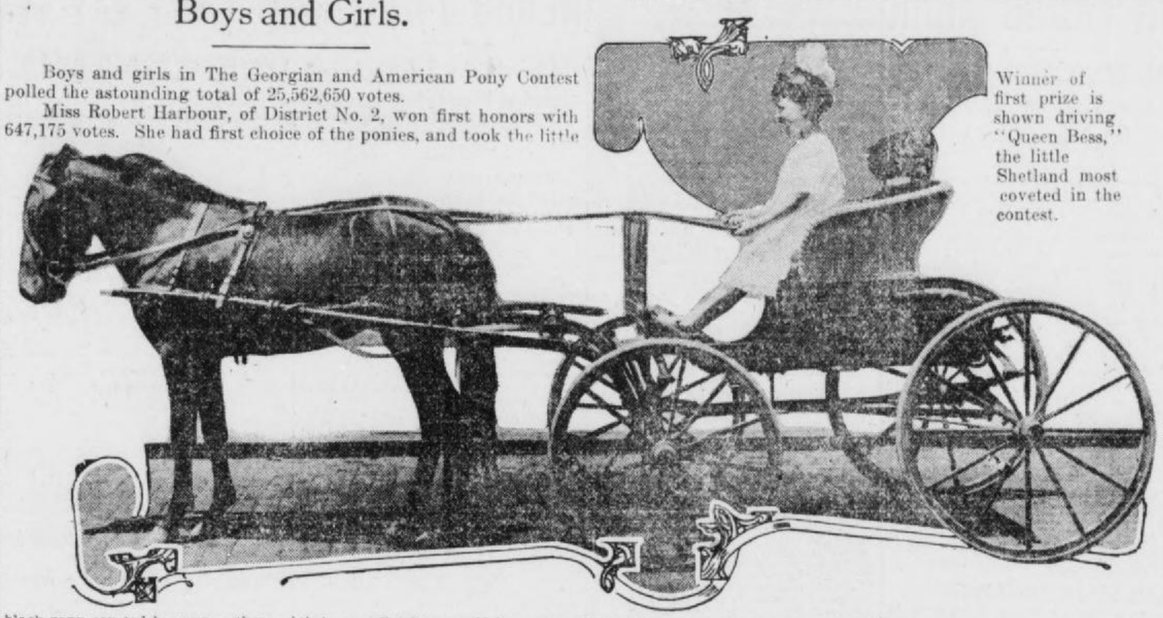
CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Aug. 9.—While John Barber was in Boston this afternoon, a wrecking crew, under orders of the special grade crossing commission for Central Falls, demolished a cottage house he owned on Cross street, and then started in to saw off a corner of the Barber Livery Stable nearby. When his land was condemned, Barber demanded $5,000 for the property, but was allowed only $3,500. The grade crossing commissioners sold the cottage to Nicolas Bertozzi, but Barber would not let Bertozzi on the premises.

25,562,650 VOTES FOR PONIES

Astounding Mark Reached in Great Contest

Race, Thrillingly Close to the Last, Showed Courage and Ability of Boys and Girls.

MISS ROBERT JESTER HARBOUR, 340 Ponce DeLeon avenue, who polled largest number of votes in Georgian and American's great Pony Contest.



Winner of first prize is shown driving "Queen Bess," the little Shetland most coveted in the contest.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American Pony Contest polled the astounding total of 25,562,650 votes.

Miss Robert Harbour, of District No. 2, won first honors with 647,175 votes. She had first choice of the ponies, and took the little black pony coveted by many others—"Queen Bess."

Totals of more than a half-million votes were made by George Rosser in District No. 1, and Fannie Mae Cook in District No. 4.

Four others, Charles E. Kelly, of Cartersville, with 430,460; Frank Ison, Jr., of College Park, with 474,090; William Turner, with 439,930, and Rose Greer, with 440,925, climbed over the 400,000 mark, and neared the half-million level.

All Had Big Totals.

All the others had big total votes—large enough to win in any ordinary contest. But this was no ordinary contest. It was harder fought than any competition of the kind in the history of Atlanta. This was inevitable, because the prizes were more attractive to children than any which any Atlanta newspaper ever before had offered.

A remarkable feature is the way the contestants were "bunched" at the finish. In many districts there are five, six and even ten who were serious contenders for the prizes up to the very count.

Some of those who were fifth in their own districts would have won a pony, or at least a watch, in some other district. This seems hard, but it is the fate of war, so to speak. Presumably those in the same districts had even chances, and should not be permitted to compete with the boys and girls working in a region where the going, perhaps, was much more difficult.

Credit to the Losers.

Hats off to the losers!

Every one of them is "game." There has not been a complaint of unfairness—not a single kick at the method in which the contest was conducted. Nothing but a spirit of fair play, and the motto, "Let the best man win," has prevailed.

There is this much consolation—the boys and girls who worked sincerely in the contest have gained experience which will be invaluable to them in later life—an insight into business methods worth more than any prize.

Then, too, they have the satisfaction of knowing that they have aided in introducing Atlanta's best newspapers into homes where they were strangers before.

Mends Own Socks To Let Wife Vote

Illinois Husband Consents to Do Washing to Prove Housekeeping Isn't Hard.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Just to prove to an expectant world that he was a good husband, Wayne Colby stayed home, mended the socks, tended the children and washed dishes while his wife cast her vote in the first election under the universal suffrage law recently enacted.

"Just to show that it is not such a terrible thing for a man to stay at home and do the housework on the occasional voting day," said Colby, "I thought I would help Mrs. Colby out with the washing."

The first woman to cast her vote in the State was Mrs. Fannie Coleman, of Wamac, near Central Illinois. She was accompanied to the polls by her husband, O. W. Coleman, and both voted for Village Trustees.

WOMEN WHO JOG WIFE UPON A RAIL AWAIT SHERIFF

Illinois State's Attorney Says Volo Vigilantes Who Maltreated the Town Beauty Must Answer.

VOLO, ILL., Aug. 9.—Here in Volo, Lake County, Ill., the women who rode Mrs. John Richardson, the town beauty, on a rail will have to answer to the grand jury. The State's Attorney Ralph Dady, says so.

Gossip caused the trouble. Mrs. Richardson is pretty. Her husband, who keeps the small country store, is a cripple. William Dunnill, a brother-in-law of the wife, was a frequent caller.

The village women descended on the Richardson store, dragged her out on July 14 in the evening, set her astride a rail and bore her, struggling, screaming, almost raving, through the main street of the little town, climaxing the incident by dumping her into a mud puddle by a roadside and warning her to "pack up her traps and go," meaning thereby an ultimatum that she must forever leave Volo.

And, paradoxical as it may seem, all of this happened within forty miles of Chicago.

Slips Away During Night.

After the vigilantes had dumped Mrs. Richardson into one of the various mud puddles which abound in the vicinity, the victim emerged from her oozy bath, went by a circuitous route back to her husband's store, conferred with him and slipped away during the night.

It was impossible to employ an automobile, buggy or other conveyance the night she left, and to remain over until daylight was out of the question, because members of the mob had warned Mrs. Richardson that if the sun rose upon her in Volo again they would tar and feather her.

Her husband witnessed the abduction of his wife, but, being unable to rise, could render her no assistance.

It is estimated that at least half the male population of Volo witnessed the hazing of Mrs. Richardson. In fact, it is said that the women who committed the outrage had previously taken their husbands and brothers into their confidence and that the proposition had been indorsed in family council.

It was expected that Will Dunnill, brother-in-law of Mrs. Richardson, would interfere in her behalf, but he left Volo a few hours before the attack. Therefore, Mrs. Richardson's husband being disabled, and her brother-in-law being absent, she was without champion.

Husband Defends Her.

Just before Mrs. Richardson's flight from Volo, her husband gave her $1,500.

To a newspaper man, Richardson said:

"My wife is a good woman. She is not guilty of the charges the other women make. I won't believe it. A woman who has cared for me during my invalidism for the last nine years, who married me when I was an invalid, knowing there was no hope of my recovery, would not be guilty of what they charge.

"And to think that I was helpless to save her from the indignities which were heaped upon her. Her clothing was half torn from her and amid jeers and cheers and the throwing of mud and stones, she was ridden through the streets. It was an act of Middle-Age barbarism and hardly worthy of women of Illinois, who have just obtained the right to vote."

Meanwhile the women of Volo, who are supposed to have played the role of vigilantes, are calmly awaiting developments.

Husband Says She Kissed Count's Foot

Wife Brings Counter Charge That He Is Unduly Friendly With Stepmother.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Counter suits have been instituted in divorce proceedings by Harold D. Johnson, of the Colonial Life Insurance Company, and his wife, Mrs. Harriet L. Johnson, in the Supreme Court at White Plains.

The husband alleges that his wife is so infatuated with a certain Italian count that she frequently kissed his foot.

Mrs. Johnson alleges undue intimacy on the part of her husband with her stepmother, who is designated in the complaint as "one Anna J. R."

Johnson has entered a general denial to his wife's charges, while the wife's attorney, Mirabeau Towns, ridiculed the foot-kissing episodes complained of by Johnson.

No More Matrimony For Julia Sanderson

Former Wife of Tod Sloan Says She Will Never Tire of Single Life.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Never again." This was the terse reply of Julia Sanderson, the actress, when she arrived here on the steamship Adriatic and was asked if the reports that she intended to marry again were true.

After dealing that solar plexus blow to the matrimonial rumor, the former wife of Tod Sloan gave out her ideas on marriage.

"When a girl is free and single she can have all the fun in the world," she said. "It is different when you are married. Nobody wants to talk to you. Nobody wants to see you. No more barriers for me."

Twin Boys' Skin Is Turning to Black

Eighteen-Month-Old Babies Are Suffering From Rare Malady Known as Hodgkin's Disease.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black. The disease is pseudo leucaemia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpurcles greatly diminished.

The twins are the children of Anthony Amato and they were born eighteen months ago. They were then white. Then their skin began growing dark.

Men's Farewell Kiss Mistaken for Fight

Ardent Osculation at Railroad Station Causes Commotion Among Passengers at Gate.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Smack!"

A score of persons hurrying to and fro in the Pennsylvania Railroad station yesterday stopped short.

"Smack!"

The sound was repeated. Turning in the direction from which it seemed to emanate, the curious among the persons in the station saw two well-dressed young men in each other's arms.

Both men were of athletic build and none of the persons who stopped to watch their antics from a distance cared to interfere. When it seemed as if the taller of the two was about to be thrown, they separated suddenly.

Then the gates to the train shed were thrown open and an announcer called upon all intending passengers bound for Jamaica, L. I., and points east to go aboard the waiting train.

That seemed to be a signal for a recommencement of hostilities.

"Smack!"

Sure enough. It sounded again distinctly, but there was no mystery about the cause this time.

"Good-bye, Pierre," said the taller man; "don't forget to write." And a fourth time they kissed before parting.

ROMANCE LEADS TO HEIR'S EXILE FROM GERMANY

Lieutenant in the Kaiser's Army Comes to Chicago and Joins U. S. Cavalry.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Because his love for a pretty German actress resulted in his squandering an inheritance of $32,000 in one year, Dr. Otto Gordon Goldfield, scion of a wealthy family, a lieutenant in the German cavalry and a graduate of Gottigen University, was forced by his father to come to the United States and join the army here as a private. The young German is now in barracks here.

Ruth Werner, German dancer and singer, charmed the young man when in Vienna. His grandfather had just died and left him $32,000. Within a year this was gone, and after numerous appeals to his father, Dr. Goldfield was forced to come here.

Told to Give Up Girl.

His father, who is the vice president of the Corporation of Hamburg, told him to give up the girl, his commission in the army and go to America.

"I fell in love with the girl," explained "Private" Goldfield, "and spent all my money on her. She was beautiful. If she wanted jewels I bought jewels. We were at Monte Carlo. She wanted to play the games. She was beautiful, and I loved her, so why should she not be happy?

"We were in Paris, at the Horse Show in London, and many other places. She had automobiles and fine horses.

"And then my money gave out. My parents refused to give me more, and my father forced me to come to the United States and try for a commission in the army.

"Will I go back?" responded Dr. Goldfield in answer to a question. "Yes, when I get my commission here I will go back and the girl and I will be married. But not until then. I must stay in the army here until I am a lieutenant.

Likes Open Air Life.

"It's the open air, and beautiful I like here more than anything else. That is why I have come to the West.

"And your soldiers—well, next to the French dragoons they are about the best in the world, in my opinion, and I have seen the troops of all the larger countries. That's why I am enlisting as a private here, for I like the life and will stay anyway until I get my naturalization papers."

Goldfield is twenty-five, and has served the last four years in the German cavalry as a lieutenant. He is an experienced horseman, and says he was the winner of the championship at the International Horse Show held in London two years ago, riding the horses from his father's stables.

Jacob Goldfield, father of the young army officer, besides being vice president of the Hamburg Corporation, is a well-known German jurist, as is also his brother, Rudolph Goldfield.

FIGHT FOR LIFE OF CARMACK IS ON THIS WEEK

Prominent Young Alabaman Is Accused of Slaying Confederate Veteran Near Columbus.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—The fight to save the life of Homer Carmack, a member of one of the most prominent families of East Alabama, from the gallows will begin Tuesday.

Carmack will be put on trial at Opelika, the county site of Lee County, Alabama, on a charge of murdering J. J. Folke, an aged Phenix City merchant, on Sunday night, June 25. The body of Folke, who was a Confederate veteran, and who lived in his store alone, was found early on the morning of June 26 when customers went to the store to make purchases.

At first glance it seemed that there was absolutely no clew to the slayer, but before noon officers had succeeded in arresting Carmack and had traced the greater part of an amount which the old man had and which it is believed Carmack got to where Carmack had paid debts. He was arrested at the Union Depot in Columbus as he was preparing to leave the city.

The crime was one of the most revolting ever committed in this section, as the aged veteran was literally hacked to pieces. Indignation ran high for several days, but Carmack was taken to Opelika, where he has been held in jail pending his trial. He belongs to one of the oldest and most prominent families in this section, his father having been a county official for many years. He has already been indicted and able counsel has been employed to represent him.

Grade Crossing Row Continues to Bob Up

Columbus City Council and Railroads Unable to Settle Eleventh Street Problem.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—The Eleventh street grade crossing, in this city, like Banquo's ghost, has bobbed up again. The city and railroads can not agree on the manner in which the grade crossing can be eliminated. A proposition has been submitted for building a viaduct at a cost estimated at $200,000, but the Central of Georgia is not favorably inclined to the proposition, because it would have to pay about half of the amount. Another proposition has been to build an underpass, but this is not considered advisable.

Mayor Chappell has been of the opinion that by properly engineering the scheme, he could force the railroads to build it without the city being compelled to do its part, but it seems that the railroads do not propose to fight such a move.

Manufacturers Say Roads Act Unfairly

Columbus Brick Makers Appeal to Railroad Commission, Charging Discrimination.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—A number of local brick manufacturers and dealers have filed complaints with the State Railroad Commission, alleging that the railroads of Columbus are discriminating against them to the injury of their business. September 2 has been named by the commission for the manufacturers to present their argument.

Another case of alleged discrimination by a Columbus manufacturer is that of the Columbus Iron Works Company, one of the largest concerns of the kind in the South, which alleges that the company has been forced to pay a higher freight rate on three cars of plow points to Tyler, Texas, than was charged on the same class of goods from Wilmington, Del., to Tyler.

COLUMBUS FAIR SUFFERS LOSS OF BEST SUPPORT

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—Columbus probably will not hold a fair the coming fall. The merchants had expressed themselves favorably toward the proposition, but in an effort to reorganize the old Georgia-Alabama Fair Association, the officers failed to arouse any enthusiasm, and it may be that the entire matter will be allowed to drop.

STRIKING PLUMBERS NOT GUILTY OF INTIMIDATION

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—At a preliminary hearing before Judge Philip Elfler, four plumbers, Charles Stoffel, Mark Garrett, C. E. Cooper and J. B. Forbes, all charged with intimidating plumbers, who refused to strike with them, were released. The trouble grew out of a demand made by the plumbers for a $5 scale, an increase of 50 cents per day.

COLUMBUS SCHOOL FUND SHOWS HEALTHY BALANCE

COLUMBUS, Aug. 9.—The annual report of Henry R. Goetchius, president of the board of trustees of the Columbus public schools, shows that the total receipts of the public school fund during the year ending July 1, 1913, were $81,367.13, leaving a balance on hand of $1,100.

Family Sees Woman Drain Poison Bottle

Little Credence Given Her Despondent Threats to Take Her Own Life.

VALDOSTA, Aug. 9.—Mrs. Will McDonald, of this city, took an overdose of a narcotic last night, it is believed, with suicidal intent. She had been in a despondent condition and had threatened to kill herself, though her family and friends seemingly attached little importance to her threats.

She was seen by members of her family to swallow the poison, and a physician was hurriedly summoned. Her condition was very grave, but the doctor succeeded in arousing her from the stupor. It is believed today that she will recover.

BANKRUPTCY SUIT FILED AGAINST BREWING PLANT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—An involuntary bankruptcy suit has been filed against the Consumers' Brewing Company. The moving creditors are M. S. and D. A. Byck, the Herman Coal and Wood Company and J. A. Rimes.

The Consumers' Brewing Company was organized about a year ago to take over and operate the old brewing plant left by Herman Winter, near the Cathedral Cemetery. The company started off with elaborate plans, and intended making a stupendous amusement park of the grounds, but business was disappointingly bad.

ACQUITTED OF HOMICIDE, HELD ON WEAPON CHARGE

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—When Lathrop George, slayer of Henry McClelland, the man whom he charged with despoiling his home, walked out of the Superior Court a free man with all his troubles at an end, as he thought, he reckoned without those whose duty it is to enforce the law, as a warrant has been taken out charging him with carrying a revolver without a license.

George was unable to arrange bail and was recommitted to jail.

50 MARKSMEN COMPETE FOR LABOR DAY SHOOT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—About 50 men from the First Regiment Infantry, National Guard of Georgia, are taking daily rifle practice in an effort to secure the men to compete in the Labor Day shoot at the Rose Dhu Range.

Several valuable trophies are offered. The DeRonne trophy, valued at $3,000, is the most coveted.

2 States Co-operate For Fair in Valdosta

Lowndes County Organization Organizes and Plans for Yearly Festive Week.

VALDOSTA, Aug. 9.—The formal organization and election of officers for the Lowndes County Fair Association was completed at a meeting last night. G. W. Varn is president; S. L. Dowling, vice president; J. M. Ashley, secretary and manager; Paul Myddleton, treasurer.

The association will hold the Georgia-Florida Fair in this city from November 4 to 8. The association is a regularly chartered institution and was incorporated with the idea of holding fairs in this city every year.

MOTHER-IN-LAW; TROUBLE; SLAPPING; DIVORCE SUIT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Too much mother-in-law was a disrupting element in the marital affairs of Mrs. Emma E. Chance and R. E. Chance, who have projected their disagreement into the divorce branch of the Chatham Superior Court.

The suit is filed by the wife. One of her grounds of complaint is that her husband forced her to allow his mother to live with them. But that wasn't the worst of it. She charges that her husband on one occasion held her while her mother-in-law slapped her for some alleged dereliction of wifely duties.

CHATHAM ARTILLERY TO ORGANIZE NEW BATTERY

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Steps looking to the organization of a second battery of the Chatham Artillery have already been taken. First Lieutenant Ed G. Thomson will command the new battery and Lieutenant E. D. Wells the old one. Captain Richard J. Davant, Mayor of Savannah, and at present commanding officer of the Chathams, will be chosen for the majority.

SEABOARD SPECIAL AGENT RESIGNS HIS POSITION

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Thomas Ballantyne, former chief of the Savannah fire department, but for several months special agent of the Seaboard Air Line Railway on the Hutchinson Island terminals, has resigned, and J. R. Whitten, of New Orleans, has been named to succeed him. It is understood that Ballantyne will accept a position as chief of a department in a neighboring city.

STREET GRADING HALTS CORDELE IN PAVING WORK

$40,000 in Bonds Has Already Been Voted for Improvement, but Complications Arise.

CORDELE, Aug. 9.—The delay in getting the streets of Cordele paved, for which $40,000 of bonds were voted fourteen months ago, may be prolonged by a complication which is expected to arise over making the street gradings to provide this improvement. The total amount to be expended for street paving is $120,000, of which $80,000 is to be paid by the property holders.

It appears that because of the lack of proper judgment of a former city engineer in setting out the grades for the streets several years ago will cause the new grades to work a hardship on the property holders. It is claimed that if the grades are made according to present plans, some sidewalks will have to be raised, while others will have to be lowered by several feet.

The Streets Committee of the City Council was named at a recent meeting of that body to act with Mayor Harder in getting a profile showing the proper grade, which work, the Bond Commission claims, is already being carried on by their engineer.

LAD LEARNS WHETHER STEAM CAN HURT HIM

AMERICUS, Aug. 9.—Curiosity as to whether scalding steam issuing from an engine pipe of a construction plant would hurt him caused the rather painful injury of little Willie McNeill, son of W. W. McNeill, to-day. The boy placed a foot on the escape pipe and the hot steam scalded the limb to the knee before he could remove it.

Waltz and Swo-Step Enough for Cordele

Chaperones Put Ban on Hugs, Tangos, Trots and Other New Steps.

CORDELE, Aug. 9.—The bunny hug, tango, turkey trot and other modern dances are entirely too immodest in the opinion of the fair sex of Cordele who are accustomed to the waxed floors. Like the slit skirt, such dances will probably not come in popular favor at any early time in this city.

Chaperons at local balls recently have positively forbidden the new dances, and the young folk, no matter how ardently, but perhaps secretly, they may desire to introduce them, must let the waltz and two-sten still suffice.

LATE REGISTRATION FOR LABORERS TO QUALIFY

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Beginning on Thursday, the registration books for the auditorium bond election will be kept open until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, until they are finally closed on August 15. An order to this effect has been issued by Mayor Richard J. Davant.

The request that the books be kept open until a late hour in the afternoon came from the Chamber of Commerce in order that working men might have a better opportunity of registering. Heretofore they have been closed at 2 o'clock each day.

FORT SCREVEN BAND TO PLAY FOR SAVANNAHANS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Arrangements have been made for public concerts Monday and Thursday evenings each week by the band at Fort Screven.

Because of objections raised by the Musicians' union, the Fort Screven band has been prevented from playing at Tybee this summer, previous similar objections not having been effective. This year the band was permitted to give only a few concerts at the pavilions.

CONFESSES TO SLAYING WHEN REFUSED PARDON

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Frank Collier, a negro whose application for pardon was refused by the Prison Commission in Atlanta, to-day broke down and made a complete confession of his responsibility in the murder of Lewis Robinson, another negro, pleading only that Robinson was attempting to cut him with a knife. Collier has heretofore maintained innocence.

SAVANNAH WIVES SUE BROTHERS FOR DIVORCE

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Alleging cruel treatment and statutory causes, Mrs. Frances Zipperer has filed suit for divorce against Robert Zipperer in the Superior Court of Chatham County. This is the second divorce petition filed by a Mrs. Zipperer in two weeks. Mrs. Aline Zipperer, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Frances Zipperer, filed the other.

Lee County to Build Colony Tract Roads

Eight Miles of Highways To Be Constructed Through Central of Georgia Property.

LEESBURG, Aug. 9.—The Board of Commissioners of Lee County have decided to build modern sand-clay roads through the 4,000-acre tract of land, near the Dougherty line, recently acquired by the Central of Georgia Railroad for colonization purposes. The proposition was presented to the Lee County commissioners by representatives of the Albany Chamber of Commerce. This action is the last preliminary step in the development of this tract of land. The railroad will divide it into small farms to be sold to settlers from the North and Northwest.

The roads to be built will be about eight miles in length. They will traverse the tract in various directions, connecting with the main road between Albany and Leesburg.

Want Street Paved At Albany Station

Councilmen Urge Improvement Before New Depot Is Opened—Now Unsightly Thoroughfare.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—That North street should be paved before the new terminal station is opened is the consensus of opinion of members of City Council.

The Atlantic Compress Company some years ago was allowed to build sidetracks in North street and the sidewalk was moved out to the center of the street to make room for the tracks. The new compress north of town was completed almost a year ago, and the old plant abandoned. The tracks have been removed, but the city has never moved the sidewalk or graded the street as it should be.

$100,000 Fertilizer Plant Is Under Way

Contractors Begin Work at Albany in Twenty-four Hours After Swift Makes Award.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—Ground has been broken and work is progressing on the new fertilizer plant of Swift & Co. At a meeting in Atlanta this week, the contract was given the Griffin Construction Company, of Atlanta. Within twenty-four hours workmen were on the job and teams were hauling dirt, excavating for the foundations.

The new plant will be located just north of Albany, on the 10-acre site recently purchased. The investment of the company in site and factory will be considerably more than $100,000, it is stated.

Snap Bean Farming On Big Scale Planned

Pensacola Merchants Agree to Aid in Finding Most Profitable Marketing Points.

PENSACOLA, Aug. 9.—At an enthusiastic meeting of farmers of the Roberts-Gonzales community, this county, last night, at which experts made addresses, it was decided that an experiment will be made in the cultivation of snap beans on a large scale in that locality. Several farmers agreed to plant a certain number of acres each on the co-operative plan and ship to Northern markets. The crop will be planted during the present month. Business men of this city agreed to aid the farmers in securing a market.

It is thought that this will prove one of the most successful crops for this section, as experts say the soil is peculiarly adapted and that climatic conditions are ideal.

OLDEST U. S. CITY MAY ADOPT COMMISSION FORM

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 8.—Sentiment has suddenly focused in St. Augustine upon commission form of government for America's oldest city. A wrangle in City Council which resulted in some Aldermen nearly coming to blows and in which one said he was "in a crowd of sharps" was the final straw, and a movement is now on foot to call an election to vote upon a charter change.

St. Augustine voted down such a change two years ago, but other local issues at the time beclouded the main question.

HOME OF CUBAN LIBERTY AT TAMPA TO BE RAZED

TAMPA, Aug. 9.—The old Criterion Theater, famous during the period preceding the Spanish-American war as the place where many of the Cuban plots against Spain were hatched, is to be torn down to make way for a new vaudeville theater, announcement just being made by Lee Dekle. The old Criterion was a great gathering place for the Cuban patriots in the early nineties and was famous or infamous even as far as Madrid.

CAMPHOR TREE RAISING TO BE TRIED IN FLORIDA

BRADENTOWN, Aug. 9.—Two 20-acre tracts have been donated to the United States Department of Agriculture and an experimental farm will be established here. Professor Stockberger and Professor Hood have been here and the Board of Trade has made arrangements for money to aid in the experiments. Experiments in growing camphor trees, which it is believed can be made a profitable industry in Florida, will be among the first made.

TAMPA WANTS BRANCH OF COLORADO SPRINGS HOME

TAMPA, Aug. 9.—Tampa will try for the establishment of a branch of the Union Printers' Home at Colorado Springs, the union typos being anxious to have a sea level branch somewhere. The City Tax Assesor, a former linotype operator, will lay the matter before the convention in Nashville.

JOINS TAMPA TEAM.

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 9.—Newt Mabry, one of Tallahassee's fast amateur ball players, left this week for Tampa, where he has accepted a position on the Tampa team. Another of Tallahassee's players, Ira Watson, is playing in that city.

BODDIFORD GIRLS RECOVER FROM NEGRO'S ATTACK

Victims of Cairo Tragedy in Hospital at Thomasville Anxious to Return Home.

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 9.—The two Boddiford girls, Mary and Rhoda, who were among the victims of the attack of the negro Ed LeConte near Cairo last week, are still here at the City Hospital and are improving.

Both girls when brought here had high temperatures and their condition seemed serious, but it is believed now that they will recover and be able shortly to return home.

Mary, the older girl, whose nose was partly cut off, will, of course, suffer from some disfigurement. She also lost six front teeth and had some slight scalp wounds.

Rhoda, the young girl, who suffered a severe scalp wound and was considered in a more serious condition than her sister, is also recovering. Both are very anxious to get back to their parents and the young children that they feel need their care.

Reports from the bedside of Mr. and Mrs. Boddiford, at Cairo, show them still holding their own, but with no certainty of recovery. The skulls of both have been trepanned and upon the outcome of the operation within the next few days will depend their chances for recovery. The younger children are being cared for by some of their neighbors.

$57,357 Increase in Tift County Returns

Tax Receiver Fletcher Finds 6,000 Acres of Land Not on the Books.

TIFTON, Aug. 9.—Tift County tax returns for the present year show an increase of $57,357 over the returns of last year. Figures were compiled by Tax Receiver George W. Fletcher. Three districts, Chula, Omega and Eldorado, show increases, while five Tifton, Tyty, Brookfield, Brighton and Dosia, show a decrease.

An interesting fact concerning the returns was that nearly 6,000 acres of unreturned land were found by the tax receiver and placed upon the books. This in part accounts for the increase in returns. The increase in 1912 was $15,945.

Atlantan's Fiancee Injured in Runaway

Miss Emma Lou Hilsman, Driving With J. C. Edmunson, Thrown From Buggy in Albany.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—As J. C. Edmunson, of Atlanta, and Miss Emma Lou Hilsman, of Albany, whose engagement has been announced, were driving through an alley, taking a short cut from Jackson to Washington street, near the Albany Produce Company's warehouse, the horse became frightened at an automobile and ran away. The buggy crashed against a telephone pole and Miss Hilsman was thrown out, her head striking the pole. It was at first thought she was seriously hurt, but later she was found to be only bruised. She was carried to a doctor's office and later to her home.

FARMERS MAKE MONEY ON HAY AND FODDER CROPS

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 9.—This is fodder pulling time in South Georgia, and in Thomas County the crop is the largest known in many years. The corn crop is almost unprecedented.

Farmers who have finished fodder pulling have begun on their hay cutting, and that crop, too, is a good one. In view of the high prices of Western hay the farmers in this section have devoted more time and land to growing hay than formerly.

IN PRISON SEVEN HOURS; SUES FOR $300 DAMAGES

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Charging that he was arrested without justification, J. L. Rushin has filed suit for $300 damages in Superior Court of Chatham County against Patrolman C. R. Long, of the local force, and W. R. Warren, of Washington County.

Rushin was exonerated in Police Court on a cheating and swindling charge, but he had already been incarcerated for seven hours.

MARKETS 1912 COTTON AFTER '13 SEASON IS ON

AMERICUS, Aug. 9.—Just to show how independent many farmers of this section are, Farmer Hart, of Schley County, rolled into Americus to-day on a wagon loaded with four bales of last year's cotton. Though the first bales of the season are coming in fast, Mr. Hart brought a load that he had not been compelled to sell and received an extra good price for it.

CONGRESSMAN RODDENBERY REGAINS HIS STRENGTH

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 9.—Congressman S. A. Roddenbery, who was reported ill in Washington, has about recovered from his indisposition, which was only temporary. Mrs. Roddenbery and the children are at home here and will be joined by Mr. Roddenbery when Congress shall have eventually decided to adjourn.

Albany Bankers Ask Part of $50,000,000

Want Government Money to Aid in Moving Southwest Georgia Cotton Crop.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—That the Albany banks should receive a portion of the $50,000,000 Government money that is to be placed for the marketing of cotton in the South is the general feeling among Albany bankers. Two banks here are United States depositories and are called upon to furnish money for the marketing of cotton several weeks earlier than the banks in Macon, Atlanta and Savannah.

J. S. Davis, vice president of the Citizens First National Bank, has requested L. P. Hillyer, president of the Georgia Bankers' Association, to make a personal appeal to the proper authorities in Washington for a portion of this money to be used in Southwest Georgia.

Albany Sees Value in River Improvements

Chamber of Commerce Committee Named to Keep in Touch With Work.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—With the purpose of keeping close tab on the work that is done to improve the Flint River and to see that money appropriated and spent is used to the best advantage, President J. A. Davis, of the Albany Chamber of Commerce, has appointed a committee to look after the matter. The committee is composed of H. A. Tarver, J. E. Toole and T. M. Ticknor.

The Chamber of Commerce and the people of Albany have been brought to a realization of the importance of the Flint River in its influence on freight rates, and is determined that it shall no longer be neglected as it has in the past.

Farmers Organize For Tift County Fair

Planters Take Lead of Project Given Up by Merchants and Former Promoters.

TIFTON, Aug. 9.—At a meeting of Tift County farmers to-day the holding of a Tift County fair this year was discussed and with great enthusiasm. Permanent organization was effected and the matter will be pushed by the farmers.

The fair association which has lost money on two fairs held in Tifton was unwilling to undertake another and as the merchants were slow about raising the money, the farmers took the matter in their own hands.

TRUCKERS ORGANIZE TO EXPLOIT SOUTH GEORGIA

THOMASVILLE, Aug. 9.—The adaptability of South Georgia soil and climate for truck farming is being shown more and more every year and there is no doubt that in the near future there will be great developments in this section along this line. A truckers' association is being planned. The organization will be perfected in a short time and its officers and plans made public.

SEABOARD OFFICIAL IS PREPARING FOR REMOVAL

AMERICUS, Aug. 9.—H. B. Grimshaw, superintendent of this division of the Seaboard, is in Americus supervising the renovation of the offices which he will occupy here beginning August 16. The offices will be re-established in the Seaboard shops, whence they were removed to Savannah several years ago.

DOUGHERTY NOW SEEKS TO HAVE COURT OF OWN

Movement to Take Albany Out of Present Judicial Circuit Will Come Up Again.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—That the movement to take Albany out of the Albany Judicial Circuit was not entirely abandoned when Senator Ford withdrew his county removal bill from the Senate has become quite apparent since that time by the discussion of those who attended the committee hearing in favor of the bill among other friends of the movement here.

A plan is now on foot whereby an effort will be made to create a new superior judgeship for Dougherty County alone, the idea being to abolish the City Court of Albany, and have the new court judge to do the work of both courts.

Those who favor the movement contend that Albany is large enough now to have a court of its own.

It is argued that Albany and Dougherty County have enough court business to justify such a move. It is proposed, in the event this plan meets with favor among the people of Albany, that a bill to create the new judgeship be introduced in the Legislature at its next session, as there is hardly time to perfect the plans and get such a bill through at the present session.

It would be necessary to have an election, or at least a petition signed by a majority of the voters of the county, and that also will require considerable time.

LEAVES LIGHTS BURNING AND GASOLINE EXPLODES

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—As Sam Jay, an employee of the Standard Oil Company, was filling a tank of a runabout on which the tail lights were burning, the can, which contained about five gallons, exploded. Jay was severely burned about the arms. He says he knows now that lamps should be extinguished before the fiery liquid is handled.

SPEER RESENTS CRITICISM AND PASSES UP SUIT

Beach Manufacturing Company Bankruptcy Case Goes to Judge Newman's Court.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—That Judge Emory Speer, of the United States Court, has "washed his hands" of the Beach Manufacturing Company bankruptcy proceedings, and desires that Judge Newman, in Atlanta, take over the entire case, is shown in an opinion, a copy of which has been received in the bankruptcy court office here.

It appears from the record that the Beach Manufacturing Company moved to have Judge Speer disqualified from considering a certain phase of the case because the judge's son-in-law, A. H. Heyward, Jr., is one of the attorneys for the receiver of the alleged bankrupt. This motion appears to have annoyed the judge, causing him to express the following opinion:

"There was a petition filed in this cause in behalf of the Beach Manufacturing Company to restrain the receiver from cutting certain timber for crossties for the purpose of raising money to feed the live stock, and when the matter came on to be heard there was some discussion as to whether the Judge of the Southern District of Georgia was qualified.

"I do not think I am disqualified in any matters in which Mr. Heyward does not have a pecuniary interest. He does not have any pecuniary interest as to whether the mules are fed from the proceeds of crossties or whether they are fed from the grass and reeds along the swamps or otherwise, but as there is obviously some little maneuvering one way or the other, I don't know how, which raises the question of my qualification, I wash my hands of the whole thing.

"I will have nothing to do with it. Since he kindly expresses his willingness to try it, you can go to Judge Newman with the entire case."

Public Inquiry Into Railroad Accident

Central of Georgia Inaugurates New Policy of Investigations of Mishaps on Its Lines.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—For the first time in this section of the country, and in furtherance of a rule established by the Illinois Central, the controlling line, that all accidents to passenger trains where passengers are injured, be publicly investigated at the scene of the mishap, the Central of Georgia Railway made an inquiry into the accident at Oliver Tuesday morning, when seventeen passengers were more or less badly hurt. The inquiry was conducted by disinterested parties selected by the railroad. They were Marion Lucas and John Kennedy, of Savannah, and Dr. A. D. Kanler, of Oliver.

It was decided after full investigation that the accident was due to some obstruction, presumably the tie bar from the front truck under the tank of the engine which was pulling the train. The tie bar fell and was dragged through the frog, breaking the frog and causing the derailment. The track at the point of the accident was laid with 80-pound rails, on pine and cypress ties. The switch ties, which were of oak, were also found in good condition.

91-year-old Order In Chatham Court

Judge Charlton Passes Paper Authorized by Grandfather in Same Court.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—An order signed in the cause of Harry Haupt and others against John Haupt in the Superior Court of Chatham County, July 24, 1822, was before Judge Walter G. Charlton, in the same court, this week.

The old order was passed by Judge Charlton's grandfather, Judge Thomas U. P. Charlton. In tracing a record Edmund H. Abrahams discovered that through an inadvertence the then clerk of the court had neglected to put the old order on the minute book.

Abrahams obtained an order nunc pro tunc from Judge Charlton to have the decree recorded on the current minute book of the court. This was done. The old decree was written with pen and ink in an old-fashioned handwriting. There were no typewriters in those days.

WAYCROSS HOSTELRY PUT UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Effective today W. A. Jones, Jr., became manager of the Virdie Hotel, succeeding N. H. Slaughter, who will return to his home in North Carolina. Mr. Jones conducted a boarding house which was recently destroyed by fire here. He proposes to make extensive improvements at once on the Virdie.

WAYCROSS CITY COUNCIL TO NOMINATE RECORDER

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—The new act creating a Recorder's Court here provides that City Council shall elect a recorder to serve until the next city election, and it is probable that City Council will choose the temporary Recorder at the next regular meeting. Several men are prospective candidates and are running for the place, which can not pay more than $75 a month.

THIEF STEALS WARDROBE OF WAYCROSS CANDIDATE

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Alderman Scott T. Beaton, of the Fourth ward, a probable candidate for mayor, is on the warpath. During his vacation at Mayport some one entered his home on Gilmore street and went off with his best clothes, a lot of silverware, some of his wife's dresses and a shotgun he had just purchased. The kitchen window was smashed with an ax and whoever robbed the place made a good job.

Must Not Tie Barges To Government Piling

U. S. Engineer at Savannah Says Wornout Hulks Rot at Moorings.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Because owners of disabled barges and other vessels persist in tying them up to the Government piling in the Savannah harbor, it is probable they will be arraigned in the United States Court and subjected to a heavy fine.

Speaking of this violation of the Federal law, Colonel Dan C. Kingman, United States engineer for this district, said:

"Uncle Sam is patient and long suffering. He puts up with a lot of annoyance rather than be disagreeable. But finally spurred into action, he is likely to make things lively. It looks to me as if something of this kind is about to happen here pretty soon on account of the action of certain imprudent owners of vessels and barges who persist in tying them up to the pilings forming a part of the training wall of Savannah harbor, and leaving them until they sink. These vessels are not only unsightly, but are a great menace to navigation."

Savannah Platoons To Get Gun Practice

Dummy Mortar from Government Arsenal To Be Mounted by the Regulars.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Reaching Savannah from the Government Arsenal at Augusta, and carried to the Park extension by the Gadsden Contracting Company, the mortar for the dummy emplacements of the Savannah Volunteer Guards is now resting on the ground ready to be mounted.

This dummy mortar is an exact replica of the most modern 12-inch mortar in use anywhere in coast defense work, with the exception that it is too lightly constructed to be actually loaded and fired. The Guards will use it in practice firing.

The mortar pit is on the Whitaker Street side of the park extension. The mortar will be mounted by a special detail of officers and men from Fort Screven as soon as the carriages arrive.

High Life Lands Boys In Jail at Waycross

Youngsters Went to Brunswick and 'Splurged' on Lacy Green's Money.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Fast and reckless living for a day in Brunswick caused the arrest of two youngsters of Waycross, Archie Douberly and Mason Welker, both 15 years old, and they are in jail pending an effort to get bond.

The boys got a sum of money said to have amounted to between $30 and $50 from Lacey Green last Sunday night and left Waycross the next morning to enjoy life. They stopped at the most expensive hotel in Brunswick, rode about in an auto, bought new clothes and had the best time possible off the money they secured. A relative heard of their whereabouts and they were brought back to Waycross.

The preliminary hearing given before Judge Harry M. Wilson resulted in their being bound over to City Court for trial.

Tybee Season May Include September

Central of Georgia Willing to Run Trains Another Month if Travel Justifies.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—The Central of Georgia Railway will continue summer schedules to Tybee Island through September if assurances are given that the cottagers and others will remain at the resort in sufficient numbers to justify the expense.

The Central has, in fact, been willing to prolong the season for several years, but the people invariably return to the city during the latter part of August, which means that there will not be sufficient daily traffic to justify the extra trains. It has heretofore been the invariable custom to officially close the Tybee season after Labor Day. An agitation on the subject is now on among the people at Tybee. The season at the resort is now in full swing.

Bacon's Man Named Savannah Collector

David C. Barrow Is Son of Confederate Soldier and Well-Known Lawyer.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—David C. Barrow has been appointed Collector of Customs at Savannah to succeed William R. Leaken.

The nominee is the personal choice of Senator Bacon. Leaken's term of office expires about the middle of the month. It is thought that Barrow will be confirmed by that time.

Barrow is a member of a very distinguished Georgia family. He is a son of the late Pope Barrow, who was judge of the Superior Court of Chatham County, a member of the Georgia Legislature in 1880, and a lieutenant in the Confederate army. He is a nephew of Chancellor Barrow, of the University of Georgia. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia, a practicing attorney in Savannah, and was assistant city attorney under the last Tiedeman administration. For several years he has been prominent in Savannah politics.

Stage Door 'Johnny' Has Fractured Skull

Theatrical Man at Savannah Hits Loiterer With Revolver—Now Under Arrest.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—George Prince, director of a theatrical company playing at the Princess Theater, is under arrest charged with assaulting W. P. Kehoe, who is suffering with a fractured skull.

According to Prince, Kehoe, with other young men had been loitering at the rear of the theater, annoying the performers. He warned them to stay away. Kehoe, he says, attempted to strike him when he hit Kehoe over the head with a stage revolver. At first Kehoe was not thought to be seriously hurt. Not only is his skull fractured, but there is probably concussion of the brain.

PIERCE INSTITUTE HAS FLATTERING PROSPECTS

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—According to President W. A. Huckabee, Pierce Collegiate Institute, Georgia's newest college, located at Blackshear, east of Waycross, will open in September with a very flattering attendance. The college is a Methodist institution and owns buildings valued at $60,000.

MODEL HIGHWAY TO REACH TYBEE NOW ADVOCATED

Commercial Leaders of Savannah Urge Extension of Estill Avenue to Resort.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Probability of the Chatham County Commissioners issuing bonds for the extension of Estill avenue to Thunderbolt, making it a model highway throughout, has brought forth two suggestions—one from Joseph F. Gray, executive officer of the Chamber of Commerce, and the other from Arthur W. Solomon, secretary of the Savannah Automobile Club and a member of the board of directors of the trade body.

"The extension of Estill avenue to Thunderbolt as a model road," said Secretary Solomon, "is a splendid idea, and I hope the plan will be carried through. The county owes only $25,000 in bonds. Why can not the new issue be made for $1,000,000 if necessary? Then we could extend Estill avenue on to Tybee Island, by the Wilmington Island route, making a fine automobile road to that resort. This would be a splendid thing for the development of a vast territory as a farming country and trade center easily accessible to the local merchants when it becomes settled, which would result in a short while if there was easy vehicle access to and from the city."

Thunderbolt Has Road.

"The plan to improve the road from the terminus of Estill avenue to Thunderbolt is a splendid idea," said Executive Officer Gray. "But there is already a fine road to Thunderbolt. It certainly would be a great thing for the County Commissioners to build a model road from Savannah to Tybee by the Wilmington Island route. But if bonds are issued to put through the whole scheme, let's start the work from Tybee to Savannah. When we get the road to Thunderbolt it will be plenty of time to build from Savannah to that point."

Secretary Solomon in urging the Tybee highway scheme points out that Tampa, Fla., has just authorized the construction of a brick highway 27 miles out of that city to meet the southern terminus of the road which is being built out of Jacksonville. He thinks if the people of the county in which Tampa is located can appropriate money for a 27-mile highway the people of Chatham, a much more wealthy and prosperous county, could provide for a road from Savannah to Tybee, a distance of eighteen miles.

Solomon Revived Scheme.

The matter of building a road to Tybee was revived some time ago by Secretary Solomon, as a director in the Chamber of Commerce. The proposition was at that time referred to a special committee. The matter at present remains in statu quo. However, it is quite likely that the scheme to have the County Commissioners issue bonds for the Thunderbolt and Tybee road will be brought to the attention of this special committee.

There is now no intercourse with Tybee except by the Central of Georgia Railway. Tybee Beach is the most popular summer resort on the Georgia coast. Such a road as proposed would immediately become popular with automobilists. Tourists also would take advantage of the opportunity to visit the resort.

Negro Gun 'Parties' Denounced by Judge

Judge Charlton Suggests Militia Kill Everybody Found on Festive Battlefields.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—In sentencing a man in the Superior Court for shooting another not in his own defense, Judge Walter G. Charlton denounced in strong terms certain places in the county where colored people congregate and fight.

The particular trouble before him occurred at Crescent Park, near Sandfly Station.

These places are a terror to the community," declared the Court. "It would be a good idea to have the militia ordered out sometimes to kill everybody who is found at these places."

Monteith, Woodsville, Baker's Crossing and several other places of equal familiarity in court records were mentioned by the Court in the course of his remarks.

The jury did not think the crime was assault with intent to murder, and so found the defendant guilty of shooting at another not in his own defense, recommending that he be punished as for a misdemeanor. The Court disregarded the recommendation and sentenced the prisoner to two years in the penitentiary.

The prisoner was William Jones. He and John Pauline were conducting a dancing pavilion at Sandfly, and Jones shot Pauline while trying to wing another negro.

WAITER SLAPS MESSENGER; IS HELD ON TWO CHARGES

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Because he attacked a messenger boy of the Western Union Telegraph Company here two charges have been preferred against C. G. Mototis, a waiter.

The waiter slapped Thornton Staley, claiming that the boy had killed a pet cat. Later he said he was merely playing, but the affair created considerable excitement at the time. An older brother of Staley wanted to handle the waiter personally, but friends interfered.

WAYCROSS PAVING LAWS HIT ATLANTIC COAST LINE

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Because its tracks pierce the heart of Waycross and are paralleled in almost every instance by some of the main streets, the Atlantic Coast Line is being put to heavy expense by the sidewalk and street paving campaign. The latest paving ordinance, covering Plant avenue from Butler street to the city limits, will cause the Coast Line to pay a third of the cost for the entire distance, the avenue running along the road's right of way. The other portion of Plant that is paved is of and the Coast Line paid a third of that.

HEART OF TOWN SOUGHT IN SUIT IN BANKRUPTCY

Trustee After $30,000 of Wesley Realty Transferred to Wife of Failed Merchant.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Suit for the recovery of a large part of an incorporated town in Emanuel County, as a bankruptcy asset, has been filed in the United States Court by R. A. Flanders, trustee in bankruptcy for Cook and Fountain. The property was transferred to Mrs. Hattie Fountain, wife of one of the parties, a short while before the bankruptcy petition was filed.

The real estate involved is situated in Wesley, a township located about halfway between Swainsboro and Vidalia. There are nineteen town blocks in the tract, much of which is improved. The postoffice has been erected on one of the lots, and there are numbers of residences going up on others. As soon as suit was filed J. Ben Wilson, deputy marshal, went to Wesley to serve the papers on Mrs. Fountain.

Land Worth $30,000.

It is estimated that under fair market conditions the land sought to be recovered would bring $30,000, in which case all of the creditors would be paid in full. But there is certain to be a lively fight unless a compromise is effected.

Cook and Fountain, merchants, failed last December. Their petition was filed at that time, and Flanders was apponted trustee. The liabilities of the firm as scheduled amounted to about $26,000. There were only about $3,000 n assets. None of the land named in the suit now filed was scheduled. It did not develop until some time later that this property figured in the case.

Trustee Charges Plot.

It has been now ascertained that almost immediately prior to the filing of the suit in bankruptcy the firm had deeded to Mrs. Fountain, wife of one of its members, the parcel of land which constitutes practically the heart of Wesley. Under the law assets transferred within four months of the date of filing a bankruptcy petition may be recovered. The contention is made that Cook and Fountain were insolvent when the deed to Mrs. Fountain was made.

The charge is made by the trustee that the transfer was made with the intention of hindering, delaying or defrauding the general creditors.

Million Dollar Gain In Ware County Taxes

Collector Chases Dodgers and Announces Intention of Making a Perfect Record.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—From his hasty examination of the 1913 tax returns for Ware County, Tax Collector J. T. Strickland is confident a large amount of property subject to taxation has not been returned and he announced to-day that he intended getting every bit of it on the tax books within a few months. That his work will give Ware an increase of at least $1,000,00 0is practically certain. As the report now stands the returns for 1913 show an increase of $546,349 over 1912.

The big growth of Waycross is the main cause for the gain shown.

The tax rate, now $13 a thousand, will probably be reduced to $10. The collector says he thinks he will make a collection record for the year of 100 per cent, something that has not been done in this county up to date.

New York Gas 'Tips' Wasted on Waycross

City Council Ignores Wall Street Promoter's Proposal to Build Plant.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Aldermen of Waycross have evidently had enough of the gas proposition, judging by the lack of interest taken by City Council in a communication from a New Yorker showing how the city could build a gas plant and operate it at a profit instead of giving a franchise to outsiders.

The proposition was made to the city when it was learned that a bond of $2,500 given by George W. Deen and L. M. Aldrich as evidence of their intention to spend no less than $20,000 within a year, had been declared forfeited.

By spending $35,000, the New Yorker claimed, Waycross would have a money-making plant. The success of the municipal gas plant at Albany was given as an illustration. The Waycross City Council ignored the proposal.

SENTENCE OF YEAR FOR CONVICTED GUN TOTERS

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Judge John C. McDonald has shown that he proposes to stick to the twelve-month sentence for persons found guilty of carrying concealed weapons. Clifford Johnson, a negro, is the latest to find that it means a year's job with the county chaingang to carry a gun. Hardly a case of this kind has been disposed of in City Court without the twelve-month sentence being imposed, and the gun-toting habit is said to be declining rapidly as a result.

BRUNSWICK BOY CHOSEN FOR WEST POINT CADET

White Way Proposed On Brunswick Street

Landowners and Merchants to Form Stock Company and Install Lighting System.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 9.—The efforts made the past week to put in a white way along Newcastle street no doubt will culminate in this improvement being made in the near future.

It is the intention of those working for the white way to form a stock company composed of the landowners and merchants along the street, who will be called upon to take an amount of stock on the basis of the frontage of their buildings. The movement has met with considerable encouragement, and it is now considered a certainty that the principal business street of the city will take on this improvement in the next two months.

Southern to Improve Brunswick Terminals

Railway to Spend $20,000 on Buildings to Handle Naval Stores Business.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 9.—Extensive improvements will be made by the Southern Railway upon its buildings in the local yards and docks, for which an appropriation of $20,000 has been made. Cement foundations will be built under the buildings at the Turtle River docks, and other improvements will be made on the other docks of the company in the city.

It is the purpose of the company to rebuild its present facilities and put them in the best of condition so as to be able to handle the increased traffic which will come through Brunswick owing to the changes in the naval stores business.

Killing of Bachelor Mystifies Officers

Despite Strong Alibi, Tom Bullard Is Held for Death of Farmer Mack Spain.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Whether or not Mack Spain, the eccentrac bachelor farmer of Mexico, a small place west of Waycross, was really murdered and robbed or committed suicide in a fit of despondency, is a question that has arisen in view of the alibi offered by Tom Bullard at the preliminary hearing given him this week, but in spite of which he was bound over to the fall term of Superior Court.

Bullard asked a friend to kill Spain and get all his money, but claims the statebent was made merely as a joke. Spain's body was found in a small pond 2 miles from his home three weeks after his disappearance. Bullard himself found the body, which fact argued in his favor, although the testimony of witnesses was to the effect that no one could have seen the body in the pond without having had previous knowledge of its whereabouts.

A careful search has so far failed to find any of the money the farmer had with him and at his home.

Too Much Money to Spend in Waycross

City's Income More Than Pays All Expenses—Tax Rate To Be Cut Down.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—With a $780 appropriation for twelve months, the committee on parks and cemeteries of Waycross City Council expended only $1.30, according to the financial statement for the first six months of the year just issued.

Practically every department of the city is keeping within its budget, and will end the year with a balance to its credit. The engineering department, with $14,434 available, has spent only $6,011.96. Out of an appropriation of $10,300 the fire department has spent but $3,855.38.

The revised estimate of income places the total for 1913 at $156,442.43. The estimate when the year's appropriations were made was $151,000. The expected increase will therefore leave the city a neat balance to start 1914 with.

In addition to these expenditures the city is spending $100,000 in permanent improvements, this money coming from a bond issue voted last year.

$5,498 Suit Brought For Rescuing Dredge

Owners of Tug Columbia Dragged the Maryland Out of Beaufort Harbor.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Claiming $5,498.50 damages and salvage, a libel has been filed in the United States Court by R. S. Salas and F. H. Meader against the dredge Maryland.

Salas, as chief owner and president of the Standard Fuel and Supply Company, and Meader, as master of the tugboat Columbia, claim this sum of money for time, labor and material expended by the tug in hauling the dredge in and out of the harbor at Beaufort, S. C., and claim $3,500 of this amount for the work of salvage or rescue done by the tug.

The dredge, which is said in the libel to be worth $50,000, was towed out of New York harbor on May 27 last by the tug under contract between the Home Dredging Company and the Standard Fuel and Supply Company, the latter being the owners of the tug. The contract price for taking the dredge from New York to Savannah was $1,500.

The dredge Maryland is now in the Savannah River. The libel will be tried at the coming term of the United States Court.

The libel recites a full account of the rescue of the dredge on her way down the coast.

NEWSPAPER MAN AT SAVANNAH IS SEEKING OFFICE

City Editor Lucas of The Morning News Wants to Succeed Baker as Postmaster.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—On the supposition that Marcus S. Baker, postmaster at Savannah, who has recently been investigated by the Postoffice Department in Washington, is about to be retired as a result of that investigation, Democratic candidates for the position are becoming active.

Among these is Marion Lucas, at present city editor of The Savannah Morning News, who seems to have the lead over prospective opponents, both in the energy with which he is working and the political support which is behind him.

Lucas was active in the last municipal campaign, and stands well with the present Administration. There is scarcely any doubt that he will secure the backing of the Administration. It also is said that he will have the indorsement of Congressman Charles G. Edwards, although the latter has stated that he is not promised to any candidate and will not advocate anyone for the position until he has conferred with the President on the subject.

Lucas has addressed a circular letter to practically all Democratic voters in Savannah asking for their support. He has a great many friends among the rank and file of the people. Lucas himself says that he has the promise of sufficient support to land the job.

It is believed that the retirement of Postmaster Baker will be in effect within the next 30 days.

Efficiency Idea in Vogue in Savannah

Auditor's Report Expected to Start General Shakeup Among City Officeholders.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Because of the absence of Chairman W. J. Pierpont, of the Finance Committee, the report on the audit of the city's books was not submitted to Council this week.

Before the report goes to Council it will be considered by the Finance Committee. Chairman Pierpont is now on a vacation. A special meeting of Council will likely be called to act upon the report.

The auditors have suggested that a controller be appointed and placed in charge of the administration of the financial affairs of the city. This will do away with the office of City Treasurer. In all probability Captain C. S. Hardee, who has served the city efficiently for over 30 years, will be retired on a pension.

All departments of the city that are not managed properly are criticised in the report. The auditors have found, for one thing, that the office of Tax Assessor can be greatly improved. It is also pointed out that the work in this office does not require the appointment of three assessors.

SLAYER TAKEN AFTER SEARCH OF 16 YEARS

Brother's Tireless Quest Results in Capture of Negro Who Killed B. C. Booth.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—After eluding officers and the persistent search maintained by a brother of the man he killed at Manor January 25, 1897, Will Eady, a negro, has been apprehended near Blountstown, Fla., and unless he demands requisition papers, will be lodged in Ware County jail within the next week.

Eady shot and instantly killed B. C. Booth at Manor when Booth called at his home to see him about a debt of $12. The negro went into the house on seeing Booth approach and refused to reply to his calls. Thinking the negro would go out of the back door, Booth started from the front of the house toward the rear. As he turned a corner he was shot down by Eady, who stood by a window and fired three shots from a revolver.

Negro Makes Escape.

An hour's start enabled the negro to escape, despite the vigorous efforts to overtake him. At the April term of Ware Superior Court that year an indictment charging Eady with murder was returned, and on this he will be tried at the next term of Superior Court.

From the time it was known the negro had gotten away until his capture near Blountstown a brother of the slain man, W. S. Booth, kept up a search for the negro. Probably 50 negroes arrested in various sections as suspects have been viewed by Booth.

It was learned to-day that since his murder at Manor, Eady was involved in another crime in Florida at a place known as Cooks on St. Andrews Bay, twelve years ago. Eady's father-in-law, a negro named Giles, had a dispute with a white man named Smith, whose home was at Valdosta, and shot him. While Smith was in a dying condition on the ground Eady approached and kicked him, saying that the man was not dead and asked for the gun.

With an oath, he then fired three shots into the white man's body. Eady and Giles went into Alabama, where a search covering several months was conducted without success. As far as is known, Giles is still in Alabama.

Eady Reported Lynched.

But for a report that Eady had been lynched shortly after the shooting of Booth it is believed the officers would have located the negro and brought him to trial. As it was, the report was believed and people who had been aiding in the search stopped and returned home.

W. S. Booth has kept a standing reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest of Eady, and it is thought that the State's reward of a like amount, while not now standing, will be renewed and paid to those responsible for the finding of Eady.

LIND CALLS ADMIRAL IN CONFERENCE AT VERA CRUZ

Ambassador Sends Mysterious Message to Commander of Fleet for Meeting Immediately on His Arrival at the Mexican Port.

Huerta Maintains Iron-Hand Attitude in Spite of International Menace From Revolutionary Armies and Threatened Coercion.

Special Cable to The American.

VERA CRUZ, MEX., Aug. 9.—John E. Lind, special envoy to Mexico, arrived here at 1 o'clock this afternoon on the battleship New Hampshire. He was at once transferred to the battleship Louisiana.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 9.—Captain Snowden, of the battleship New Hampshire, at the direction of John Lind, Special Ambassador from President Wilson to Mexico, to-day sent the following wireless to Admiral Fletcher, commander of the flotilla of United States warships in the harbor here:

"Governor Lind wishes to see the United States Consul and Admiral Fletcher immediately upon his arrival at Vera Cruz Saturday. Governor Lind will not go to Mexico City until Sunday."

Sensational rumors were circulated as to the cause for the conference. The New Hampshire will probably arrive this evening.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Maintaining his iron hand attitude in spite of international menace from revolutionary armies and threatened coercion, Provisional President Huerta to-day continued his diplomatic battle with the United States by giving orders to draft another note of protest against the coming of Special Ambassador Lind, unless the United States recognizes Mexico or halts Mr. Lind before he arrives in this city.

Situation Is Tense.

A tense situation exists here pending the arrival of Mr. Lind, who has been retarded by the State Department at Washington.

Huerta's hope that defiance of the United States might break down the revolutionary spirit in the north seems to have been futile, according to a message from General Venustiano Carranza, leader of the rebels.

This was a reply to overtures to Carranza to join his forces to the regular army in the event of a "foreign invasion." However, Huerta has gained fresh followers among the radical element by his defiance of President Wilson. Supporters of the provisional president charge that the United States is preparing to act as it did in Cuba.

Sensational reports were current today relative to the diplomatic mission of General Felix Diaz to Tokio. Ostensibly Diaz is going to thank the Japanese Government for its representation at the Mexican centennial, but the belief is growing that Japan has consented to make a treaty with Mexico, and that Diaz is really a special ambassador. This treaty, it is reported, has to do with a league of common interests and not with commercial right. It follows the movement of the Government to invite 50,000 Japanese emigrants here to colonize the state of Morelos, which has been nearly depopulated by the rebellion.

Insists on Recognition.

Whether Huerta has any more cards to play in his diplomatic fight against outside interference with Mexican affairs is a question known only to the provisional President and his closest advisers. Huerta insists on "recognition and no parley," but the Government is not in condition to enforce his threat by war.

The national treasury is nearly depleted, and the army material of the country has been thinned to a minimum by three years of revolution.

By diplomacy, however, he might still be able, by playing upon the Latin-American republics' fear of annexation and upon the hostility of foreign powers to the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine, to force the United States into a compromising position.

Even Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy here, is not acquainted with the details of Mr. Lind's mission. He has so informed the Mexican Foreign Minister.

Sulzer Used Funds Of Campaign to Play Market, Is Charge

Chairman Frawley, of Investigating Committee, Says This Is Enough to Warrant Impeachment.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Governor William Sulzer, of New York, was nearly $50,000 in debt as the result of stock market speculations at the time of his nomination, and used contributions to his campaign fund to make additional purchases of stocks while this debt was hanging over him, according to testimony presented to the Frawley committee of the Legislature.

The evidence is sufficient to warrant proceedings to impeach the Governor for violation of the corrupt practices act, Chairman Frawley declares. A decision as to the committee's recommendation is expected by Monday.

The Governor, according to the evidence, had dealings with three different stock exchange firms and was saved from being sold out by one firm by L. N. Josephthal, a Wall Street banker, and a member of the Governor's staff as naval reserve aide. Josephthal, it was brought out, paid a debit balance of $26,739 still standing against the account on July 15 last. This was after the Governor had received repeated calls for more margin.

The Governor's transactions with other firms were for cash, and it was in connection with one of these that Governor Sulzer, according to the evidence, used campaign contributions.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst Y. W. C. A. Benefactor

Dedicates Camp at Pacific Grove, Cal., Which Her Generosity Made Possible.

DEL MONTE, CAL., Aug. 9.—Asilomar, the splendid new conference grounds of the California, Arizona and Nevada Young Women's Christian Association, which occupies 30 acres of ground on the ocean shore near Pacific Grove, was formally dedicated with a beautiful ceremony, including a pageant of 400 girls, typifying association work.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, of San Francisco, whose generous assistance last year and this did much to make a permanent camp possible, gave the dedicatory address and gave the conference grounds the name of Asilomar, which means "retreat."

Callie Hoke Smith Capital Debutante

Make-up of First Democratic "Bud Bouquet" Puzzles Washington's Younger Set.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The make-up of Washington first Democratic debutante bouquet is the question that is agitating the younger set. It is confidently expected that Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, daughter of the Speaker, will be one of the buds, and Miss Frances Moore, the daughter of Clarence R. Moore, one of the Titanic heroes, another.

Resident society will furnish two attractive debutantes, who are not only socially prominent, but from Democratic families as well. They are Miss Margaret Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Britton and Miss Beatrice Clover, the youngest daughter of Rear Admiral Clover.

A debutante from the Congressional set will be Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia. Other Congressional buds are the Misses Weaver, Church and Duval.

Manuel Pawns His Father's Decorations

Former King of Portugal Unable to Struggle Along on Income of $100,000 a Year.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Despite his allowance of $50,000 a year from King George and at least that sum from private sources, it is learned that former King Manuel, of Portugal, has been forced to pawn the decorations once belonging to his father. One of these decorations, a diamond cross with a large sapphire in the center, is still in the hands of a pawnbroker near Richmond, where Manuel is now staying with his mother, Queen Amelie.

The fortunes of the dethroned monarch will be recouped by his approaching marriage. It is known that he is very extravagant and his mother is none too practical.

The German Emperor has settled the puzzling question of how to treat the exiled monarch's marriage to a German princess. He will allow Prince Eitel Frederick to attend as a special guest, but not as his personal representative.

GIVES OWN LIFE TO SAVE THOSE ABOARD BOAT

Divers Exploring Wreck of Steamboat Peters Lee Find Modern Jim Bludsoe in Hold.

ALL THE PASSENGERS ESCAPE

Engineer Kept Craft's Nose Stuck in Mud Until All Save He Were Safe on Shore.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Aug. 9.—Divers who explored the steamboat Peters Lee on the bottom of the Mississippi River at Lake Providence, La., to-day reported finding the body of Engineer Frank O'Neil, his hand holding the engine throttle.

He died there when the boat sank last night, having stayed at his post and held the boat's nose against the shore until the last of the 50 passengers, most of them women, were helped ashore.

O'Neil's act is practically a realization of the martyrdom of Jim Bludsoe, famed in the poem as the steamboat engineer who held her nose to the bank till all were saved, then was burned to death at his post.

A dance was on when the Peters Lee struck a sunken coal barge. A hole was torn in her side. The captain ordered the pilot to steer for the shore. The boat struck the mud, and officers and crew began taking off the passengers.

Frank O'Neil in the engine room kept the stern wheel churning while the water poured into the hold.

A negro shouted through the engine room door that the boat was sinking.

"I know it!" shouted O'Neil. "You fellows get on up front where you can get off! I'll hold her nose against the shore!"

The last passenger was safely landed when the boat sank in 40 feet of water.

Scientist Hints New Immortality Proof

Sir Oliver Lodge, of London, Will Give World Results of His Researches.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Sir Oliver Lodge, whose researches into the unknown world made him famous, will assert at the meeting of the British Association on September 10 a belief in "an ultimate continuity of existence before and after death as essential to science."

It is inferred he has at least new evidence to offer of immortality.

He once told the world "the boundary between life and death is still substantial, but is wearing thin in places."

Slit Skirts Furnish Mosquito Clan With Choicest Barbecue

Trainload of Winsome Stenographers and Milliners Have to Tramp Through Stegomyia Belt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"All those in favor of slit skirts, please stand up."

Millions of full grown mosquitoes and three or four little fellers were rushing wildly out of their apartment houses on he Flushing Meadows, about 7 o'clock last night, and took part in the most rollicking barbacue ever held in the East.

Right in the middle of the salt grass waste were five cars of a Long Island Railroad train, stalled. The lights were out, men were running up and down shouting orders and Flushing was two miles away. After the train had stood for a few minutes, out of the passenger cars poured the choicest morsels of humanity that Mr. and Mrs. Culex Pungens and the little Pungenses ever saw. There were stenographers, typewriters, cashiers, millinery attaches and buxom matrons. Slit skirts were numerous.

In an endless procession the five hundred and more suburbanites trailed over the ties toward Flushing. There is some style in the mosquito belt and every member of the family seemed to know at once which of the passengers was dressed a la mode. The squeals and slaps of the fair ones as they tried to stop the onslaught sounded like a tattoo.

The procession lasted for more than two hours and when the last stenographer reached home a unanimous vote was taken declaring the mosquito a pest. Of course, there were some men along, but what self-respecting mosquito would bother with them at such a time?

FRANK OR CONLEY? STILL QUESTION

Issue Firmly Drawn Between Two Men

Crime Definitely Fixed on One of Pair

Not a move escapes this man's restless eyes, though his face is calm.

Famous Case to Solve Mystery of Slaying of Mary Phagan Enters Its Third Week With Public Opinion Constantly Shifting.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The second week of the trial of Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan in the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26, came to a close Saturday noon.

The State's case has been entirely made up in its primary aspects, and the defense has gone into its story of the great crime sufficiently to make clear both its theory and probable line of pleading.

The public, as the case has progressed, has been swayed this way and that, and to-day the remarkable mystery of Mary Phagan's untimely and tragic end remains, in hundreds of minds, quite as much of a mystery as ever.

The Battle Is a See-Saw.

The State has had its good days and its bad days, and the defense has met the same fate. At times things have seemed dismally dark and gloomy for Frank, while at other times the clouds apparently have lifted from about him decidedly.

This much has been made clear:

Either Leo Frank will be shown to be responsible for the death of Mary Phagan, or Jim Conley will.

The one is the heart and soul of the State's contention, and the other is the heart and soul of the defense's contention.

Frank is battling not only to clear himself but to convict Conley.

Conley is battling not only to clear himself, but to convict Frank.

The only difference is that Conley, although not yet indicted, expects to be convicted as an accessory after the fact of the murder, in any event, whereas Frank, already indicted, expects to come absolutely clear and free of all possible connection with the crime.

The one has a heretofore good name to restore in all of its unblemished integrity, the other has merely his present reputation for criminal inclination to preserve against sinister enlargement.

The issue has been sharply and indelibly drawn—it is either Leo Frank's life for Mary Phagan's, or it is Jim Conley's.

The State has shown, or has endeavored to show the following things:

THAT Frank, shortly after noon on April 26, and before five minutes past noon, lured Mary Phagan, for an immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory, and there, because she would not yield to his desires and demands, he knocked her down and immediately thereafter strangled her to death with a small cord, about one-eighth of an inch in thickness.

THAT after strangling her, Frank remained with her dead body until after a girl caller in his office had departed, when he tiptoed to the front of the floor whereupon the murder had been consummated, and secured the help of a negro sweeper, Jim Conley, employed about the place, to dispose of the body.

THAT Conley, under the direction of Frank, wrapped the dead body in a piece of heavy cloth, carried it to the elevator, and thence on the elevator to the basement, where it was placed in an obscure corner in the rear, later to be found by Newt Lee, a negro night watchman, generally held guiltless of direct connection with the crime itself.

THAT Frank, after hiding the body, with Conley's assistance, then induced Conley to write and place beside the dead girl certain illiterate notes fixing the crime, in so far as they might, upon some other person than either Frank or Conley, and that Frank for Conley's services, paid him the sum of $2.50, but not until he had first paid him $200, which was withdrawn under promise to restore that sum later.

THAT Frank had an understanding with Conley, whereby Conley was to return to the factory later in the afternoon on Saturday and burn the body in the basement furnace, but that Conley

He turned the letter over to the advertiser, whose identity is being guarded carefully. The letter bore a Brooklyn postmark.

AUTOS EMPTY CHURCHES, SAY COUNTRY PREACHERS

MANHATAN, KANS., Aug. 9.—The dwindling of the congregations of country churches, due to the new era of automobiles, which makes it easy for the rural residents to attend services in nearby towns and cities, will be discussed at the Conference of Rural Leaders, July 21 to 25, at the Kansas Agricultural College. Members of the organization declare that Kansas now has about 1,200 abandoned churches in the farming districts.

Jack London Puts Joke on His Appendix

Novelist Tells the Latest on Former Part of Himself and What's Left.

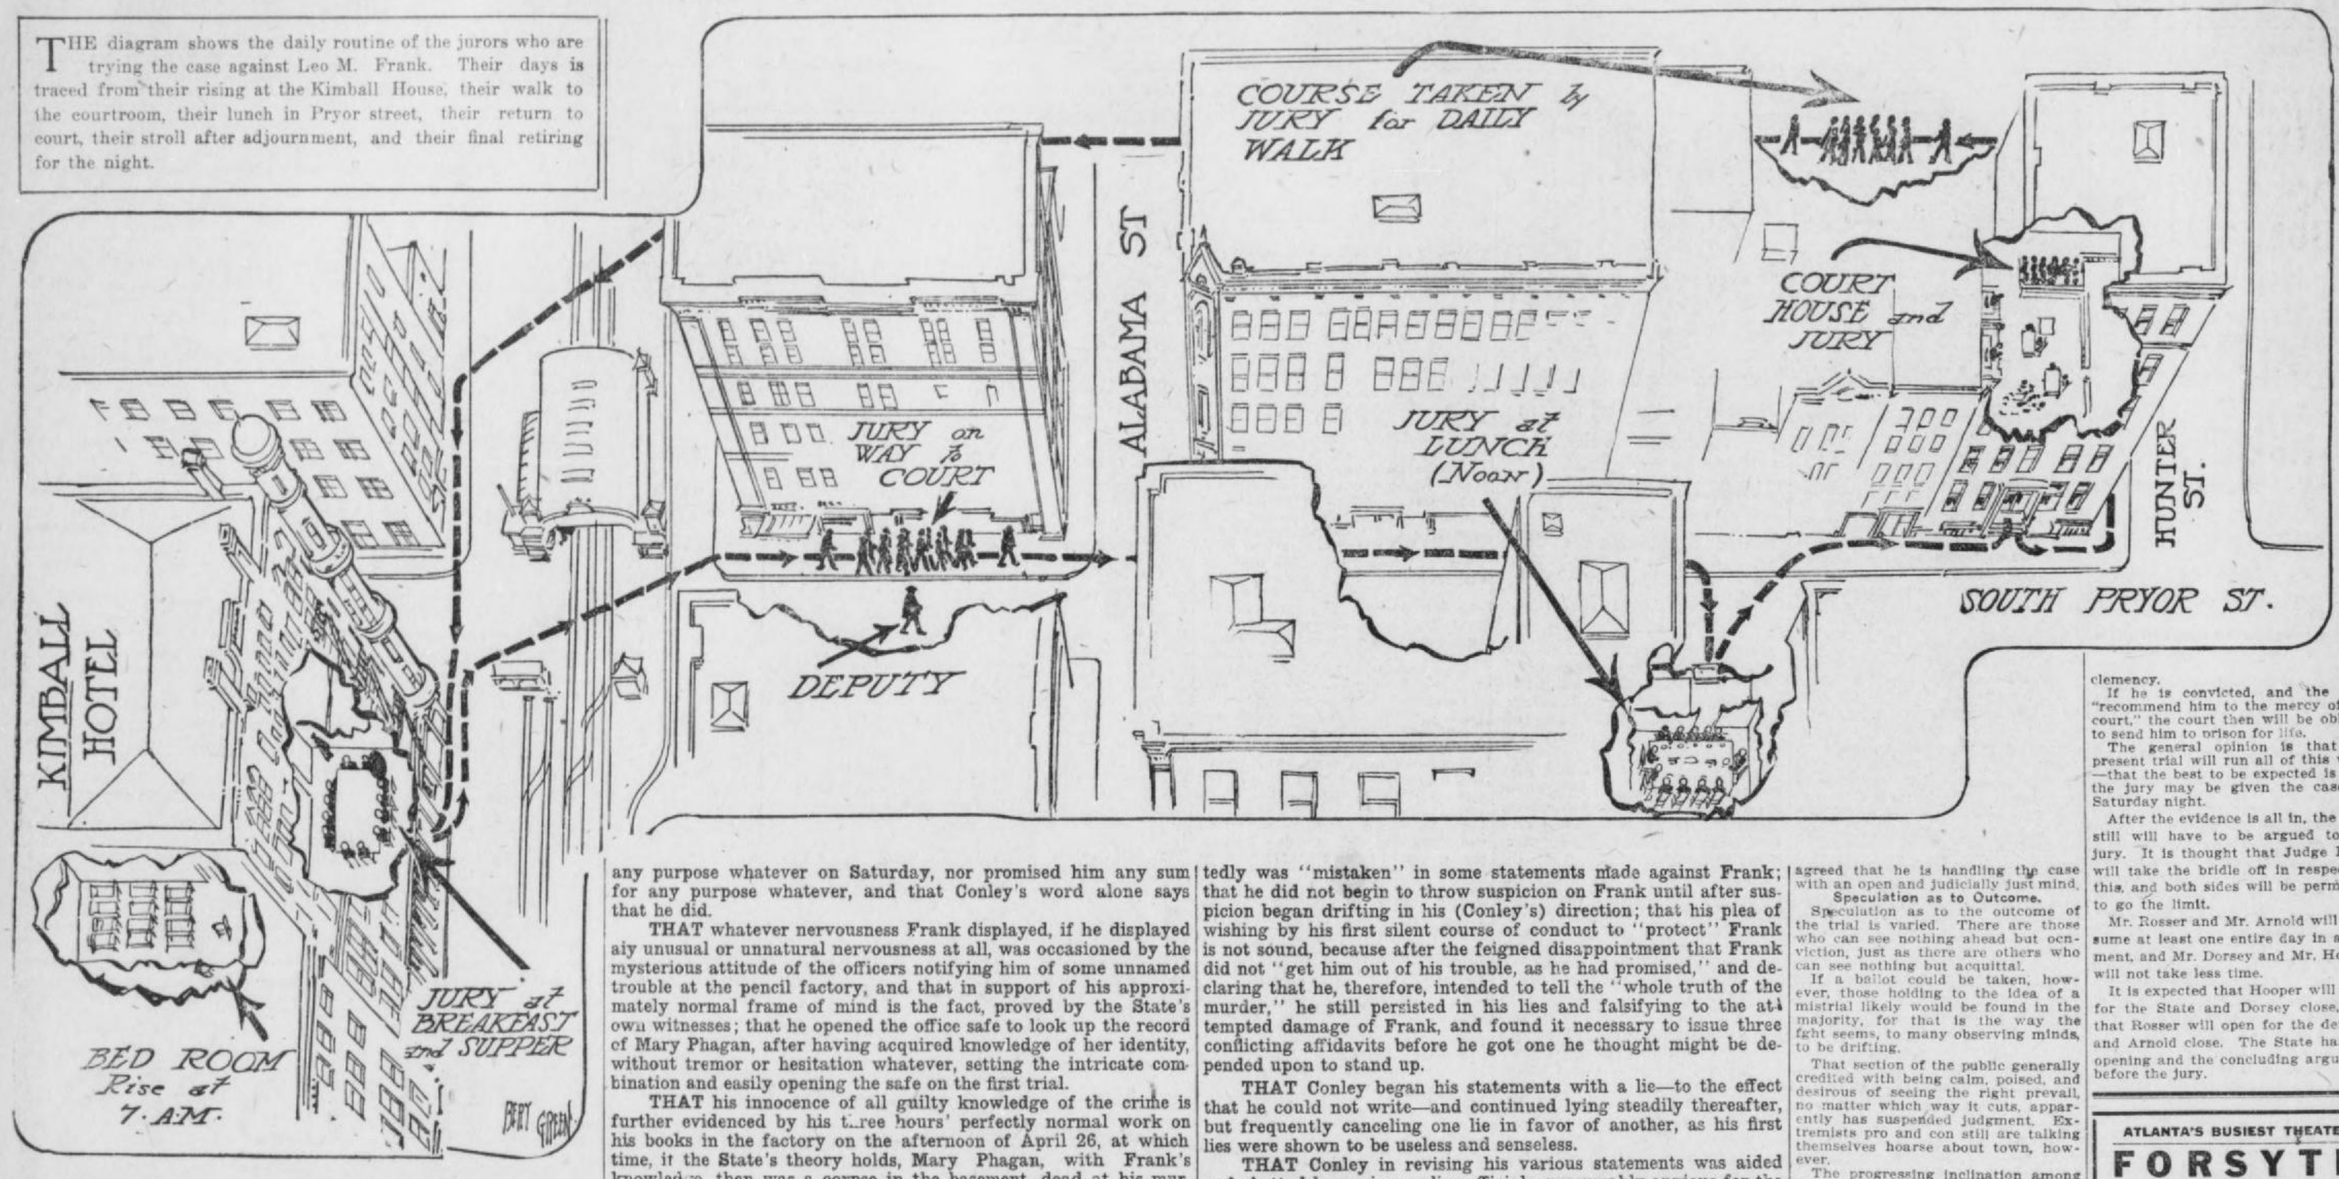
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Here is the latest joke Jack London, the famous author, is telling on himself:

London was operated on recently for appendicitis. After the ordeal the surgeon held up the severed appendix in his fingers for the patient to see. The author looked at it thoughtfully then grinned and said:

"It was a case of all alone in London, wasn't it, doc?"

FRANK'S CHARACTER IS NEW BATTLE GROUND

THE diagram shows the daily routine of the jurors who are trying the case against Leo M. Frank. Their days is traced from their rising at the Kimball House, their walk to the courtroom, their lunch in Pryor street, their return to court, their stroll after adjournment, and their final retiring for the night.



DEFENSE HAS TO CLEAR NAME OF TWO CHARGES

went to sleep in the afternoon and neglected to perform this service.

THAT Frank, called to the factory early in the morning of Sunday, April 27, displaying great nervousness, and while on his way to the factory without having been informed of the dead girl's identity, declined, or at least failed and neglected, to look upon her features at the undertaker's, notwithstanding the fact that he later admitted her identity without having seen her dead.

THAT at the factory, at the place of the crime, his nervousness continued, and that next morning (Monday), when called to the police station for further questioning, he had secured counsel to defend him, notwithstanding the fact that he then had not been placed under arrest.

THAT after having been placed under arrest and indicted for murder, he persistently refused to meet his chief accuser, Jim Conley, face to face, or to discuss any features of the charges lodged against him.

THAT in addition to the crime of murder, as set forth in the indictment, Frank is a dissolute character, practicing the most depraved and perverted crimes with persons of loose morals, and that Jim Conley, on more than one occasion, acted as "lookout" for Frank on the first floor of the factory, while unspeakable and unmentionable things were being enacted above.

The State, in setting up the foregoing allegations, summoned as its principal and all-important witness, Jim Conley, who already made public affidavits to all of the charges set forth, except the one of perversion and the exact time of the crime charged.

Conley, after four or five changed statements theretofore made, set up in his final statement on the stand many other seemingly minor dtails not contained in any previous statement.

The foregoing is the State's case in completed form, except that it yel will have the right to produce witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's witnesses; the defense, in its turn, having the right to a further rebuttal of the State's rebuttal.

The defense has contended, or will contend:

THAT Conley's story is a tissue of frightful lies from start to finish, and that he himself really committed the crime charged against Frank, and that the defense will so demonstrate.

THAT Mary Phagan was not killed as early as 12:05 on the afternoon of April 26, but was, as a matter of fact, killed at least fifteen minutes later than that, if, as a matter of still further fact, she wa snot disabled hopelessly about that time, and actually killed even later.

THAT if she was not killed previous to 12:05, as set forth, by the State, that contention being uncompromisingly claimed by the State's own witnesses—Jim Conley and Monteen Stover—then Conley's story is impossible and absurd, and Monteen Stover's evidence entirely negligible.

THAT Frank did not lure Mary Phagan to the rear of the second floor, or to any other place, for any purpose whatever, and that she was only on the second floor sufficiently long to get her pay from the hands of Frank, and that she immediately thereafter left the second floor, going down to the first floor to meet her death at the hands of Conley.

THAT Frank never asked for or received the assistance of Jim Conley in disposing of the body of Mary Phagan, because he was in utter and entire ignorance of the murder until apprised of it Sunday morning.

THAT Frank had nothing whatever to do with the framing of the nates found beside the dead girl, and that in support of such a charge the State has only the word of Jim Conley, intensely interested in shifting the blame from his own guilty shoulders and on to the shoulders of Frank.

THAT Frank never paid Jim Conley any sum of money for any purpose whatever on Saturday, nor promised him any sum for any purpose whatever, and that Conley's word alone says that he did.

THAT whatever nervousness Frank displayed, if he displayed aiy unusual or unnatural nervousness at all, was occasioned by the mysterious attitude of the officers notifying him of some unnamed trouble at the pencil factory, and that in support of his approximately normal frame of mind is the fact, proved by the State's own witnesses; that he opened the office safe to look up the record of Mary Phagan, after having acquired knowledge of her identity, without tremor or hesitation whatever, setting the intricate combination and easily opening the safe on the first trial.

THAT his innocence of all guilty knowledge of the crime is further evidenced by his t..ree hours' perfectly normal work on his books in the factory on the afternoon of April 26, at which time, it the State's theory holds, Mary Phagan, with Frank's knowledge, then was a corpse in the basement, dead at his murderous hands.

THAT Frank, instead of declining to look upon the face of the dead girl at the undertaker's while on his way to the factory Monday morning, did, as a matter of fact, look upon her face and recognized her.

THAT Frank had no counsel until after his retention at police headquarters had been publicly made known, and when he was notoriously under suspicion, and that even then counsel was sent to him by some outside friends, and did not come at his invitation paid off by Frank upstairs, hit her a violent blow upon her head, snatched her purse from her hand, and at once threw her body into the cellar by way of a nearby open space, for fear of someone coming into the building; that likely the blow first delivered was not sufficient to kill, and that her actual death was hastened, or may have been hastened later in the cellar below, by means of strangulation, there being always there an abundance of the very cord employed or supposed to have been employed in that act. or by his direction.

THAT Frank's refusal to meet Jim Conley, his lying accuser, was natural and proper in the circumstances, and that such a course was persisted in by the particular advice of his counsel; that Frank was under no moral or legal obligation to discuss his case with Conley, or with any other witness for the State.

THAT Frank, far from being a dissolute character, is a man of unblemished integrity, happily married; that he never has practiced depraved and perverted crimes, because such things would be and are entirely foreign to his nature; that he never has associatd with immoral persons anywhere, at any time; that neither Jim Conley nor any other person ever acted as "lookout" for him for any purpose whatsoever—and that every monstrous and untrue charge or suggestion of immorality and degeneracy rests absolutely and finally upon the unsupported word of Conley, and not otherwise.

THAT there has been no tenable motive assigned to Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan; that the girl was not sexually violated or in any manner lacerated; that Frank had only the most casual acquaintance with her, and that of a perfectly natural business sort, and that he could not have had, and did not have, any reason whatever for desiring her death.

THAT, in truth and reality, the motive prompting the murder of Mary Phagan was robbery upon the part of Conley, and that for the purpose of securing her pittance of money, contained in a mesh purse, he did murder her and concealed her body in the basement.

THAT, as a matter of fact, Mary Phagan reached the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26 about 12:12 or 12:15; that she came up the steps directly to Frank's office, and received her pay for the time due her, in amount $1.20; that she at once departed Frank's office, without comment of any sort, and that Frank never saw her alive thereafter; that going down the steps, with her silver mesh bag in her hand, she had to pass Jim Conley, recently aroused from a drunken doze; that in attempting to get from the foot of the stairs, where Conley was sitting, to the door, some 20 feet away, she had to traverse a gloomy walkway, more than ordinarily gloomy at the time because the day was a legal holiday and the doors were closed, but not locked; that in traversing this walkway her back was toward Conley; that Conley, without money and craving more liquor, saw the unprotected little girl with the enticing silver bag in her hand, and surmising that she had been

THAT after accomplishing his bloody deed Conley escaped by withdrawing the inside staple from the basement back door only a few feet away from the place where the dead girl subsequently was found; and that tracings of Conley during the afternoon of April 26 at various saloons about town show that he spent then an amount of money approximately that which Mary Phagan is supposed to have had in her purse at the time of her murder.

That of all her possessions the purse alone, notwithstanding exhaustive inquiry, never was accounted for until the last day Conley was on the stand, when he stated that Frank had had the purse in his possession just after the murder, and that he had concealed it in his safe. This allegation, the defense points out, is sustained, as are the other most damaging allegations, by Conley's unsupported word entirely.

THAT Conley, the State's main witness, is a notoriously dissolute character, by his own admission seven times a jailbird, many times a liar, even under oath and on the witness stand, and admittedly was "mistaken" in some statements made against Frank; that he did not begin to throw suspicion on Frank until after suspicion began drifting in his (Conley's) direction; that his plea of wishing by his first silent course of conduct to "protect" Frank is not sound, because after the feigned disappointment that Frank did not "get him out of his trouble, as he had promised," and declaring that he, therefore, intended to tell the "whole truth of the murder," he still persisted in his lies and falsifying to the attempted damage of Frank, and found it necessary to issue three conflicting affidavits before he got one he thought might be depended upon to stand up.

THAT Conley began his statements with a lie—to the effect that he could not write—and continued lying steadily thereafter, but frequently canceling one lie in favor of another, as his first lies were shown to be useless and senseless.

THAT Conley in revising his various statements was aided and abetted by various police officials, presumably anxious for the reward offered for the apprehension and conviction of Mary Phagan's murderer, and that these officers pointed out to Conley the discrepancies as they arose from time to time, and that without this aid Conley's story never could have been made to hold together even as well as it did; that notwithstanding this prejudicing aid, however, Conley's story still is impossible and absurd, and of no account whatever against Frank.

The foregoing, in general, is the theory of the defense, as already set up and as yet to be developed, and along that line it will fight its battle to the end.

The defense is heavily equipped with witnesses to sustain its every contention, and these will be offered, in their ordr, to brak down the contrary theory of the State, as hereinbefore outlined, and upon th relative strength of the two showings depends, of course, the verdict.

Of absorbing interest now is the seeming determination of the defense to put Leo Frank's character frankly and fearlessly in evidenec.

In a former article in The Sunday American several weeks ago I predicted that the defense would do this—and the then apparent determination of the defense along that line shows no symptoms of having been deviated fro min the slightest.

When Conley made his additional unanticipated attack on Frank's character from the witness stand, it was rather freely predicted about the streets that Frank never would, after that, agree to have his character put in evidence. Under the law, the State can not put the defendant's character in evidence—if it is put in at all, it must be put in by the defendant voluntarily. Once in, however, it may be riddled by the State, if the State is able to riddle it.

The determination, therefore, of the defense to put Frank's character in evidence is being accepted generally as indicating an unfaltering confidence upon the part of the defense that Frank may be able thereby to overcome the terrible and prejudicial charge of degeneracy, as well as the charge of murder, both resting so largely upon Conley, and Conley alone; and it also indicates a belief upon the part of the defense that the State already has done its worst in the matter of attacking Frank's character.

MUST REFUTE TWO CHARGES.

The fact that Frank is now engaged in refuting two charges instead of one makes his case double unique in Georgia, as it is contrary to the unbroken theory of the law heretofore.

In Georgia, the courts uniformly have held that a man can not be tried for more than one offense at one time—that is, that he can not be charged with murder, and in the same trial be called to account for another felonious crime.

The charge of degeneracy, however, got into the case without objection, and Frank's lawyers cross-examined the witness making it. The judge, therefore, although a motion was made afterward to strike out this evidence, ruled taht it was too late to expunge it, and that it should go in for what it was worth.

This ruling, while in a way more or less unprecedented, was, in the main, by the public seemingly approved, upon the idea that it was fairer to both the State and the defense that the horrible charge, having been made, be thrashed out.

Should Frank be convicted, it is practically certain that a new trial will be asked on this very point, and it is not at all improbable that Judge Roan will grant it, although this conjecture is purely and absolutely speculative, of course.

The defense has summoned some seventy character witnesses, among whom are more than two score femal employes of the National Pencil Factory, all of whom will swear, it is said, to the defendant's decent and gentlemanly conduct at all times in their presence and during their varied terms of service in the factory, running from one to five years.

INTENSE INTEREST HOLDS.

Besides these, a score or more of Atlanta's most prominent business and professional men have been cited to come to court and testify in behalf of Frank's good name.

Rarely before, if ever, has there been as intense interest in a murder trial as there unquestionably is in the Frank case.

The crowds attending the trial have been enormous, the officers finding it necessary every day to turn away hundreds of anxious would-be spectators.

Public sentiment has swung back and forth—to-day inclined to believe Frank may be innocent, to-morrow sternly the reverse.

The jury, sitting there in the courthouse, day after day, has been the subjective study of hundreds of real and near analytical minds—and the answer?

Every fellow answers for himself. The jury is imperturable, unreadable, almost seemingly indifferent at times, indeed—but always keenly keyed to intense interest, nevertheless!

One might as well undertake to read the riddle of the Spinx as to read the riddle of the Frank case in the minds of the jury trying it. It looks as if it is a jury well above the average—and that is about the beginning and the end of an intelligent guess as to what it will do.

Judge Roan is as baffling as the rest of the case, too, when it comes to speculating upon what he may or may not think of it all.

He is rated one of the very best Superior Court judges in the State, unusually able, certainly fearless, and agreed to be utterly fair and impartial.

At times, his rulings have seemed to favor the defense, and at other times they have seemed to favor the State; but, withal, the public seems agreed that he is handling the case with an open and judicially just mind.

Speculation as to Outcome.

Speculation as to the outcome of the trial is varied. There are those who can see nothing ahead but conviction, just as there are others who can see nothing but acquittal.

If a ballot could be taken, however, those holding to the idea of a mistrial likely would be found in the majority, for that is the way the fight seems, to many observing minds, to be drifting.

That section of the public generally credited with being calm, poised, and desirous of seeing the right prevail, no matter which way it cuts, apparently has suspended judgment. Extremists pro and con still are talking themselves hoarse about town, however.

The progressing inclination among the people seems to be to let the jury settle it, and then to call that as near right as abstract justice and human ingenuity can make it.

In the event of an acquittal, the case ends. The State has no appeal. It must win on the first round, or it loses for all time.

The defense, on the other hand, if it loses, may move for a new trial, upon proper assignment of error in the first trial. The judge of original jurisdiction passes upon this motion—he may grant it or not, as his discretion directs.

The general policy of judges is to refuse motions for new trials, but it is not an unbroken policy, by any means.

If the new trial motion is denied, the case goes to a court of review—either the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals. If one error or several be found in the original rulings of the court below, the case will be remanded back for a new trial, the judgment thus having been reversed and set aside.

Then the case begins all over again, practically as if it never had been tried.

In the event of maters taking that course, Frank hardly could be tried again before next year, 1914, and perhaps not before spring.

Conley Indictment Likely.

If Frank is acquitted, there is hardly a doubt that Jim Conley will be promptly indicted for the murder of Mary Phagan, and brought to trial later.

In the event of Frank's final conviction, Conley will be indicted as an accessory after the fact. This would mean a sentence of not more than three years in the State penitentiary for him.

If Frank is convicted, he can be convicted only of murder—the jury will not be permitted, under the form of the indictment, to find him guilty of a lesser crime.

The judge will have no discretion in sentencing him.

If found guilty, without a recommendation to mercy, he must hang, unless the Governor should subsequently interfere and order executive clemency.

If he is convicted, and the jury "recommend him to the mercy of the court," the court then will be obliged to send him to prison for life.

The general opinion is that the present trial will run all of this week—that the best to be expected is that the jury may be given the case by Saturday night.

After the evidence is all in, the case still will have to be argued to the jury. It is thought that Judge Roan will take the bridle off in respect of this, and both sides will be permitted to go the limit.

Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold will consume at least one entire day in argument, and Mr. Dorsey and Mr. Hooper will not take less time.

It is expected that Hooper will open for the State and Dorsey close, and that Rosser will open for the defense and Arnold close. The State has the opening and the concluding argument before the jury.

WHITE SLAVE CASE WHICH INVOLVES U.S. GOES TO TRIAL

Diggs Faces a Jury and Caminetti Will Later Fight Charge of Taking Girls to Reno, Leaving Their Wives in State of California.

After Five Months of Delay and Scandal Involving National Officials, Special Prosecutors Are Appearing for the Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Marsha Warrington and Ida Norris, the Sacramento high school girls alleged to have been taken to Reno in November by Maury I Diggs and Drew Caminetti for immoral purposes, will take the stand against Diggs when his trial is resumed Tuesday. No session of the Diggs trial was held today. Diggs and Caminetti will take the stand before the trial is concluded.

Judge Van Fleet dealt the defense a hard blow yesterday when he announced that the jury would not consider the willingness or unwillingness of the two girls to accompany Diggs and Caminetti.

The jury to hear the case of Diggs, the former State Architect, was announced complete after considerable difficulty in selecting the twelve members. Exhaustive examination of 96 veniremen was necessary before the twelve were chosen.

The first witness was called. He was F. J. Peck, a Reno real estate dealer, by whom the defense sought to show that the bungalow occupied by the defendants in Reno had been rented with no view to concealment.

Prejudice against the defendants runs high, rendering exceedingly difficult the task of picking a jury. Of the twelve men chosen, eight are married and have children, two are married, but childless, and two are single men, living with their parents. Indicative of the general temper of San Francisco was the reply upon examination of Philip Woolsey, who afterward was chosen as a member of the jury. He expressed his prejudice against "any married man who will abandon his wife and babies and run off on a spree with another woman," but said he could, however, render a verdict strictly in accordance with the evidence.

Cases Come Up Separately.

The cases against Diggs and Caminetti will be tried separately because the prosecution feels it has made out the stronger case against Diggs, and because the defense in this case will assume a course different from that in Caminetti's.

Diggs and F. Drew Caminetti, son of former Congressman and present Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti, are charged with luring Miss Marsha Warrington and Miss Lola Norris from California to Nevada for immoral purposes. Both are married men.

Diggs, the prosecution will attempt to show, financed the trip to Reno, where the girls were taken, and rented there a cottage in which the party lived.

Diggs, against whom the charges are made in relation to Miss Marsha Warrington, is said to be contemplating a fierce attack on the character of the girl. He has subpenaed habitues of the "Barbary Coast" resorts of this city and twenty witnesses from Sacramento's tenderloin. Caminetti is making no such move against Miss Norris. The Government asserts her character to be unblemished.

Mrs. Caminetti Relentless.

Caminetti's wife is relentless in her attitude toward her young husband. She said that despite the disgrace it may bring on their children, she thinks, for the protection of other married women, her husband should be made an example.

Mrs. Diggs, also, is bitter toward her husband. The defenders of both men, however, to-day are claiming a complete reconciliation of the defendants with their wives, and declare that when the trial gets fully under way both Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti will be seen sitting at their husbands' sides, a spectacle which, the defense calculates, will have an effect to their advantage on the jury.

Diggs and Caminetti both are free from custody, having taken advantage of the $10,000 bail offered them. At first they feared freedom, as violence was anticipated, but later this fear was overcome.

Diggs appears to be cheerful to-day, taking matters easily. He is scrupulously dressed. He came into the courtroom, with his flock of attorneys, bearing a cheerful smile, and bowed a dozen times to familiar faces that he saw near. Caminetti, on the other hand, seemed deeply worried. He was pallid and palpably very nervous. His father, the Commissioner General of Immigration, did not make his appearance, and probably will not be seen at the trial.

Two Special Prosecutors.

The trial is being held in the Federal Court before Judge Van Fleet. Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore R. Roche, president of the San Francisco Police Commission, have been appointed special prosecutors by Attorney General McReynolds, to take the place of District Attorney Gavin McNab, who resigned with the announcement that undue influence was being brought to bear from Washington to prevent the trial of the two men.

Arrayed with the special prosecutors are Archie Johnson, son of Governor Johnson, and Acting District Attorneys Benjamin L. McKinley and Thomas H. Salvage.

Diggs and Caminetti have an equally impressive line-up of legal defenders, including Robert L. Devlin and Marshall B. Woodworth, both former United States District Attorneys; Nate Coghlan and S. Luke Howe.

A heavy guard is thrown around the courtroom because feeling runs high against the two defendants. The two girls involved were high school students of Sacramento and of estimable families. Both, attorneys for the Government announce, will be ready to take the stand against the men.

The Government will charge that Diggs and Caminetti, both married men, had drawn the girls into a liaison; that they terrified the girls into the belief that their wives, having discovered their infidelity, intended to have the girls arrested, and that to escape this imaginary danger the girls accompanied the men to Reno, Nev.

McNab Outlines His Case Against the Defendants

In his report Mr. McNab gives the following pen picture of Caminetti and Diggs:

"The defendant Diggs was a draughtsman in the office of the State Capitol in Sacramento. He is married and has two young children.

"But a short time before the actions hereinafter narrated he was involved in a forgery charge, and for a long time, by common repute, easily substantiated by evidence, he maintained what has been denominated as a 'private harem' at his rooms in a downtown block in Sacramento. Here, according to charges laid before me, he enticed many young women to go to serve his immoral purposes.

"Caminetti was his bosom companion. The defendant Caminetti has a vicious reputation for seducing girls, and I have shocking instances which I can produce to establish this fact.

"The two girls in question, both of whom are about 19 years of age, come of most respectable families. Marsha Warrington is the only daughter of the agent of the Santa Fe Railroad. Lola Norris is the only daughter of a retired business man of Sacramento.

"After going with the young women for some months the two defendants, who had determined to entice the girls away from home and take them to another State, began a systematic campaign of coercion and inducement to get them to flee the State with them.

Their Stories to the Girls.

They told the young women that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti had found out about their relations and had procured warrants for their arrest from the Juvenile Court and were only awaiting the appropriate time to serve them; that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti were relentless and intended to expose the whole matter, and that the families of the girl would be disgraced and ruined; that the only way to save the girls from disgrace was secretly to leave the city and go to another State, where they would acquire a residence, the men would divorce their wives and marry the girls, etc.

"The young women were in absolute terror. They repeatedly appealed to the defendants to allow them to remain at home and not to disgrace them, and begged to be allowed to unbosom their indiscretions to their parents and have their advice.

"Up to this time, according to the uncontradicted evidence, Diggs had been unduly intimate with Miss Warrington for a few weeks; the Norris girl had never been violated before this trip to Reno.

"On arrival at Reno they were assigned to bedrooms, Diggs and Miss Warrington occupying one room and Caminetti and Miss Norris the other. According to the testimony of the young women, they were wholly in the hands of their male companions. They had never been away from home or their parents before and felt that they were powerless to save themselves.

"Appealing to the men to know what was to be done with them, the young women were told that their ruin was complete; that they would not desert them, but that the young women were to continue to live with them as their mistresses, and that they would take them to Salt Lake, where they would go into a 'house.'

"The Grand Jury had ample evidence before it in these statements to decide that the intent was to put them in a public place.

Barely Escaped Lynching.

"The defendants were secretly taken from the train and brought to Sacramento by auto to avoid lynching by the enraged citizens. Defendants procured counsel. Among these is Charles Harris, of the Sacramento bar. He and Diggs immediately set about to defeat justice by corrupting a witness. Diggs wrote an appealing letter to Miss Warrington under an assumed name, urging her to stand by a certain agreed story he had drilled her in while in Reno. The letter is in my possession.

"The Grand Jury has indicted Harris and Diggs for conspiracy to suborn perjury.

"The friends of the defendants are reported to have stated repeatedly that they could 'easily fix the case;' that they had too much money and too much influence at command to cause them to worry. This seems to have come principally from the Diggs end of the case."

Foundling Is Heiress To $100,000 Fortune

Father Makes Wealth After He Had Left Baby in Michigan Institution.

CADILLAC, MICH., Aug. 9.—Sheriff Chamberlain has been asked by an attorney in Corning, N. Y., to locate Bessie Weaver, who was adopted by a Manton, Mich., family from a New York foundling home over twenty years ago, and a few days ago became heir to $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weaver, of Manton, who adopted the child when on a trip through New York, returned her to the home five years later. Since that time nothing has been heard from her. The father of Bessie Weaver, or Bessie Clark, as she was known in New York, made his fortune after placing his child in the home, but has been unable to locate her since she was taken back from Michigan. He recently died, leaving his fortune to his only child.

GIRL HELPS FATHER IN BUILDING NEW HOUSE

HARTFORD, MICH., Aug. 9.—One year ago S. H. Atkins and family came to this city and built a house in a field of rye in the outskirts of the city. Recently they sold this home, and with the proceeds purchased four adjoining lots. They are now building a much larger house, which will be the sixth they have erected since the little home was built.

The scarcity of carpenters caused the mother and daughter to assist Mr. Atkins in the building of his new home. The mother and 9-year-old daughter did all of the lathing.

Ban on Tobacco Seen By Prohibitionists

Smoking and Drinking Are Blamed for Increase in Chronic Diseases in America.

BATTLECREEK, MICH., Aug 9.—That tobacco as well as liquor will be placed under national prohibition before the end of another generation, is the assertion made here by Irving Fisher. Fisher blames liquor, tobacco, overuse of meat and too strenuous life for the terrible increase of chronic diseases in America.

Spooners Protest Against Headlights

Big Illuminating Power Now Carried on Engines Is Worry to Summer Boarders.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad has placed monster 1,220-candle-power electric searchlights on the observation cars of the Pioneer Limited.

ORPHAN SOUGHT AS WIFE BY MAN WRITING POLICE

Would-Be Benedict Gives Evidence in Letter That He Fears Mother-in-Law.

OAKLAND, CAL., Aug. 9.—J. Keler, of Fresno, is a marrying man. He proved it by writing a letter to "the Chief of Police or the City Marshal of Oakland" and entreating that official to find him a wife. He wants a wife who has means equal to his own—amount not stated—and indicates in his letter that he would expect her to assist him in his merchandise business. He assures all responsible applicants that he is sober and industrious and hasn't a single bad habit.

If you are a maid, a girl or a widow who reads this, you stand a chance of winning the prize, and if you are an orphan, get busy and send your picture to Keler at once. He takes kindly to orphans, as is evidenced from the following excerpt from his letter:

"Will answer all questions and letters from girls, maids and widows, but would prefer to wed an orphan. Will give my business to the one I wed, that she may know I am a square man and will do right."

The following notice was inclosed, with the request that the official post it in a conspicuous place:

"Temperate gentleman would be pleased to form the acquaintance of ladies matrimonially inclined. Give description and full particulars in first letter. Send photo, which will be returned, if desired."

SHEDS TOENAILS BIENNIALLY.

BEDFORD, IND., Aug. 9.—J. W. Mundy, of this city, sheds the nails from his toes every two years, and this has occurred since he was a child. When asked to see his foot, Mundy bared his left foot and showed the old nails, barely hanging to the toes, and the new nails growing under the old ones.

ALL STATES TO SHOW POULTRY AT KNOXVILLE

Exhibition of Best Breeds To Be Feature of National Conservation Exposition.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Aug. 9.—Birds for the poultry show that is to be held in connection with the National Conservation Exposition in this city during the months of September and October are coming to Knoxville all the way from California. Word of the coming of the California birds has just been received by the poultry department.

Interest in the poultry show is country-wide. From almost every State in the Union will be brought to Knoxville poultry of different kinds. Already it is assured that the poultry show will be the biggest thing of its kind ever held in the South. It will be in fact as well as name "The Madison Square Garden Show of the South."

A most comprehensive exhibit of the great textile industry of the South is assured for the exposition. Progressive manufacturers of Greenville, S. C., have just signed up for a large amount of exhibit space in the All-South building of the exposition and the greater part of that space will be devoted to the textile industry.

In addition to the Greenville textile manufacturers a number of other concerns of like nature in the South, from Knoxville and elsewhere, will make exhibits, and thus this industry, constantly increasing in importance in the South, will receive great attention. The different processes through which cotton goes from the seed to the loom and after will be strikingly shown in the different exhibits.

Buys a $4,000 Auto To Use Cheap Gas

When Ex-Senator Scott Has Burned 60,000 Gallons He Will Have Saved Cost of Car.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The house of Senator Nathan Bay Scott, of West Virginia, is divided against itself, with automobiles as they issue. The Senator and Mrs. Scott are devoted to each other. They attend the same dinners, theaters and social functions together, but they arrive and depart in separate motor cars. It came about this way:

The senator has been paying 22 cents a gallon for gasoline to propel the family machine. He discovered a place where the price was 17 cents. With much glee he informed Oscar, the family chauffeur, of his discovery and directed that Oscar purchase gasoline there.

Oscar demurred because the gasoline emporium was too far from the family mansion. Mrs. Scott backed him up. Whereupon Senator Scott bought himself a $4,000 machine, acquired a chauffeur to navigate it and divorced himself from the old machine and Oscar.

After Senator Scott has burned 60,000 gallons of gasoline he will have saved the cost of the car. But he doesn't have to ride with Oscar.

Prince Chased by Laundress
She Asks $50,000 on Love Notes
He Is Gone on His Honeymoon

Miss Freese, a California girl, who at a Secret Marriage Became the bride of Prince Sultkowski, of Austria, and a Snapshot of the Prince.

Sultkowski, Who Won Rich Girl and Had His $100,000 Debts Paid, Is Accused.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—An angry laundress from Vienna is in Los Angeles looking for Prince Stanislaus Sultkowski, the noble Austrian who came here several months ago, wooed in his gallant way and won the beautiful Miss Marie Louise Freese, had his debts of $100,000 paid by Father-in-Law Freese, and received from the same source an annuity of $20,000.

The laundress, Mrs. Clara Melcher, declares that the Prince brought her to this country on the promise that he would marry her.

After a hasty, private marriage, the noble Prince and his American Princess disappeared. The father-in-law says they are "not in the country," and no more.

Los Angeles society wondered at the quiet wedding. An elaborate church ceremony had been planned, but the plans were abandoned at short notice.

She Asks Federal Aid.

Society was in the midst of this wonder when entered Mrs. Melcher. She appealed with her story to the United States immigration inspector, and was supported by Adolph Danzieger, a lawyer. The Prince declared, Danzieger said, that the woman had annoyed his family in Austria, and to get her away from Vienna so he could return home with his American wife, he had written her to come to America.

An attorney, who was first approached by Mrs. Melcher and then retained by the Prince, said he suggested to Mr. Freese, the Prince's father-in-law, a payment of five or ten thousand dollars in settlement of the woman's claims, but Mrs. Melcher, through her lawyer, declared that she would have $50,000 or nothing. She has love letters which she says prove her claims.

The Prince and his American bride are believed to be on their way to Austria where Stanislaus is taking his Princess without fear of being molested by the insistent laundress.

Prince Lauds Girls Here.

The Prince is lieutenant of the Second Dragoons of the army of the Austrian empire. He came to America in December and lost his heart to the girls of America, whom he likened to "the flowers of the spring." He is a nephew of the Grand Duke of Birlitz. His home is the Castle Trestenitz, near Markburg, Austria.

The following tribute to American girls, of which the Prince delivered himself, was widely published:

"They are splendid, charming, graceful and fresh, like the flowers of the spring. The girls of Europe generally have followed outdoor sports. They are mostly large and strong, often the equal of their husbands in strength.

"My idea of a girl is found right here in America. I have been most hospitably received and have met many of them. Their sweetness, their trimness and the wonderful manner in which they wear their clothes have 'got me going,' as you say. Their figures and their style surpass the Europeans. Their dignity and grace and the democracy I have found in so many are winning, and I do not blame Europe's noblemen for coming to America for their brides."

Folly of Suffrage Shown by Dresses, Says Mrs. Marshall

Vice President's Wife Believes Women Can Do More Good Correcting Cabarets.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Slashed skirts with the silhouette gown and other freaks of modern fashion are the worst enemies of the newly made voters of Illinois, and the cabaret and the turkey trot are more in need of reform than Chicago's First Ward, in the opinion of Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, who was in Chicago with her husband.

Mrs. Marshall declared frankly that she was opposed to the municipal power recently granted to the women of Illinois. Mrs. Marshall said:

"I have never been a suffragist. To me the fashions of to-day ought to convince any one that a woman is not fit to vote. Some women's dress is not only extreme, it is objectionable. A woman would do more good by correcting the dances in our cafes and cabarets than in running for office.

"The women in the East are not strongly in favor of the ballot, and none of the Cabinet women seems to favor it, with the exception, perhaps, of the President's daughter, Miss Jessie Wilson."

NEWPORT TOLD THAT U. S. NEEDS AN ARISTOCRACY

NEWPORT, Aug. 9.—William MacDonald, professor of American history at Brown University, delivering the principal address before the Rhode Island Society of the Cincinnati, gave expression to some startling new ideas. The topic of his address was, "An Aristocracy in a Democracy." He said:

"There is needed an aristocracy to lead, a government of the best men. Not an aristocracy of vulgar wealth or hereditary descent, but an aristocracy made up of sound physique, disciplined, intelligent and trained, public-spirited, of cosmopolitan taste and unpretentious good manners."

DIVORCE DEFENDANT SAYS HUSBAND IS NON-RESIDENT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Mrs. M. A. Perdue has filed a jurisdictional plea in the Superior Court in the divorce suit recently instituted against her by A. W. Perdue. She declares Perdue is not a resident of Georgia and asks the court to dismiss the suit.

POLITICS MIXED IN ALABAMA AS JOHNSTON DIES

Underwood May Be Drawn Into Senate Race—Knox and DeGraffenreid Mentioned.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 9.—The death of Senator Joseph Forney Johnston has precipitated in Alabama a political problem. He was seized by the fatal attack of illness at the time when he was in the midst of a fight with Congressman Richmond P. Hobson to retain his seat in the Senate, and Hobson thus is left without opposition.

The dominant political powers in Alabama, it is generally recognized, are not altogether friendly to the Hobson interests, and a man as powerful as Johnston undoubtedly will be brought forward to oppose the hero of the Merrimac.

Who will it be?

Eyes Are on Underwood.

All eyes turn to Oscar Underwood as the likely opponent of Hobson. Here near the end of the session of Congress, with his work well toward completion, it is conceded that Underwood can relinquish with safety his grasp on affairs in the House and step into the higher place in the Senate. A movement already is felt that may have its effect in bringing him out as a candidate.

Meanwhile, Governor O'Neal must appoint a successor to Senator Johnston to fill his seat for the two years yet remaining of his term. And, unless by previous agreement otherwise, the appointee probably will be a candidate for the coming term.

If Governor O'Neal appoints Colonel John B. Knox, of Anniston, to the place, Knox certainly will be a candidate for the long term, his health permitting. Knox for years has had ambition to enter the Senate. Twice he has been a candidate, losing in 1907, when Johnston and Bankhead were named provisional Senators to succeed Pettus and Morgan, who then were near death, and again in 1910, when he opposed Bankhead.

Knox a Brilliant Figure.

Knox is a brilliant, eloquent, altogether spectacular figure. The Governor may not feel disposed toward his appointment on one ground, however. One year ago occurred a vacancy on the bench of the State Supreme Court, and Governor O'Neal tendered Knox the appointment. After weeks of deliberation the Anniston man declined it. Political gossip at that time was heard to the effect that the Governor was placed in an inconvenient position because of the refusal, and he was forced to take Judge E. D. DeGraffenreid from the bench of the Court of Appeals to place him in the Supreme Court.

DeGraffenreid is O'Neal's closest friend and political adviser. That he should be in line for the Senate appointment is not considered unlikely in a number of places. In event he is appointed, it is unlikely that he will make the race for the long term, and the Underwood shadow looms up again.

The death of Senator Johnston, occurring almost simultaneously with that of his present political ally and personal friend, Major W. W. Screws, editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, is regarded in Alabama as a startling coincidence. Major Screws was Johnston's firmest supporter in his race against Hobson.

Friedmann Has to Face New Charges

Originator of Tuberculosis Serum Is Accused of Unprofessional Conduct by Assistant.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Charges of unprofessional conduct have been preferred against Dr. Friedrich F. Friedmann, originator of tuberculosis serum, and he may have to defend his conduct before a court of honor of physicians and surgeons. Julius Benjamin, father of Dr. Harry Benjamin, who went to the United States with Friedmann as the latter's assistant, and who, as a result of his association with the creator of the tuffle tubercular vaccine, was left stranded in New York City without funds, is pressing the charges.

TYBEE'S CATHOLIC CHURCH TOO SMALL FOR TOURISTS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Plans are being considered for enlarging the Roman Catholic chapel at Tybee.

This season the attendance has been so large that men and boys have had to stand. The summer communicants have been most generous in their contributions to the enlargement fund. They have also raised a fund for the purchase of new vestments for the priest.

LOS ANGELES TO AID IN EXAMINER SITE DEDICATION

Civic Bodies and Officials to Participate in Cornerstone Laying of Great Newspaper Plant.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—On Monday at 12 o'clock will commence the ceremony of the placing of the cornerstone of the new Los Angeles Examiner building at Eleventh and Broadway.

Because the spirit of California has made this building possible, part of this ceremony will be the raising of the California Bear flag over the great edifice now already partically completed. The event will mark the progress of a great newspaper in a great city. Planned under the auspices of the Advertising Club of Los Angeles, and representative business men, the program for the cornerstone laying reaches broad and comprehensive proportions.

Great Chorus to Sing.

The music of four great massed bands will sound patriotically at the appearance of the flag, Madame Esther Palliser, the famous prima donna will sing the new song of Southland progress written for the occasion by Miles Overholt, and a chorus of 100 trained voices will mark the laying of the cornerstone.

From the lips of one who has made a great mark in America's history will come the final address of faith in Los Angeles and its people—William Randolph Hearst.

There will come, too, during this ceremony a novel procedure calculated to remind the younger generation of the event. A motion picture will be taken of the event, showing the ceremony and surrounding trong. Immediately after the picture has been taken, the film will be developed with all haste and within a few hours a hermetically sealed canister will be placed in the cornerstone.

To William Randolph Hearst will be presented by Mayor Rose the silver trowel of the cornerstone laying. The opening words of the ceremony will be spoken by the Rev. Charles Edward Locke, who will be presented by Ernest Ingold. Then James R. H. Wagner will come to the platform and present to A. W. Kinney, president of the Chamber of Commerce on behalf of the people of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Examiner, the California Bear flag.

Mr. Hearst to Speak.

After Mr. Kinney's reply to this, the Rev. George Donahue, acting for Bishop Conaly, will speak. The Rt. Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop, of Los Angeles, will give an address. After the speech of Mr Hearst, Dr. Sigmund Hecht will say the closing word.

Before the ceremony at the new building, an escort with Chief of Police Sebastian acting as grand marshal, will proceed from Central Park to the old Examiner building at Fifth and Broadway. Here Mayor Rose, the speakers and Mr. Hearst will join the party and be escorted down Broadway to The Examiner's new site and the scene of the cornerstone laying.

No Duke Available For Edna Goodrich

London Society Much Amused by Actress' Announcement She Is to Wed Peer.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Great amusement has been created by a cabled report of Edna Goodrich's announcement that she is to marry an English duke.

"It is a pretty story," comments The London Daily Mirror, "but of the 26 dukes, nineteen are married and five are widowers, the youngest being 67 years old.

"Of the remaining two, the actress couldn't have met them on a houseboat at Henley."

Of course there is the Duke of Westminster, whose penchant for charming actresses is well known, but he is not free to marry again, not yet.

Pavlowa Strikes Her Partner; Stops Dance

Quarrel With Novikoff on London Stage Is Like Falling Out With Mordkin.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Pavlowa caused a sensation at the Palace Theater tonight by an open quarrel with her dancing partner, Novikoff, the incident being parallel with her rupture with Mordkin last year.

While dancing Adagio, Pavlowa suddenly hit Novikoff a smart blow on the shoulder. Novikoff immediately left the stage while Pavlowa walked off by the opposite side, the orchestra finishing the piece to an empty stage. Pavlowa afterward performed two solo dances, but Novikoff did not appear again.

Thief Since Child; Boasts of 500 Crimes

Boy Declares That He Is Beyond Reformation, and Welcomes the Gallows.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Walter Novak, 20, arrested with four companions aftter they had fatally wounded Patrolman Samuel W. Sowers and beaten Patrolman Frank Walpole, admitted having taken part in more than thirty robberies in two months and boasted of his career.

"I was born a thief, and I've been a thief ever since," said Novak. "I don't care whether I go to the gallows. I started when I was nine stealing pennies. I have been put in all kinds of institutions to reform me, but they only made me worse. I don't want any member of my family to come and see me. If they come, I will kick them out.

"I suppose I have committed more than 500 robberies."

COLLEGE HEN MISSES LAYING 1 DAY IN 100

Champion Barnyard Producer Rests Only When Commencement Season Arrives.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CORVALLIS, OREG., Aug. 9. A college hen, which laid 99 eggs in 100 days and observed Commencement Day by taking a single day's vacation, is a new claimant for prominence in the chicken world.

The newly heralded layer is three-quarters White Leghorn and one-quarter Barred Plymouth Rock, descending from several generations of heavy layers bred at the Oregon Agricultural College experiment station.

The 99 eggs were laid during the 100 days ended June 8, as follows: Thirty-one in March, 29 in April, 31 in May and 8 in the first 8 days in June.

Not only is this the best record ever secured at Oregon Agricultural College for the same length of time, but a careful perusal of authentic records from other stations on file fails to reveal an equal performance.

The result of breeding as shown in the egg production of this one hen is only an isolated example of what Professor James Dryden's extensive experiments are proving to be possible.

Up to date the records show clearly the beneficial effect in egg yield, and when the year's experiments are concluded in the fall some interesting statistics will be available for the use of poultrymen who are raising chickens for egg production.

MRS. MARY CARMODY.

"About a year ago I was down with a very heavy cold and I had a bad pain under my shoulder blades. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand, and I could not keep anything on my stomach. A druggist near where I lived advised taking a tablespoonful of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey with an egg in milk before meals, and after following his advice I found that I could eat; I overcame my weakness, and gradually gained in weight. I believe that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as a tonic for run down people is a great thing, and I recommend it to my many friends in Brooklyn and New York. $640 Average Income Of American Farmer

Government Report Declares There Are Many Who Make far Smaller Sum.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Farming is not the most profitable business in the world, railroad press agents to the contrary notwithstanding, according to a bulletin of the Department of Agriculture.

For the first time in the history of farming in the United States the department has managed to get accurate data on the subject.

It reports that the average income of the American farmer is $640.40 a year. "It is reasonable to infer," says the department, "that at least half of the farmers in this country have even smaller incomes."

Feudist's Daughter Shouts at Conviction

Woman Obtains Practically All the Evidence Produced in Court Against Slayers.

WINCHESTER, KY., Aug. 9.—The work of Mrs. Lillian Gross, daughter of Ed Callahan, of Breathitt County, former Sheriff and noted feud leader, was rewarded to-day, when a jury returned a verdict finding Andrew Johnson, 19, guilty of having murdered Callahan.

The jury fixed Johnson's punishment at life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

When the verdict was given out, Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Timandy Callahan, young widow of the feudist, shouted for joy.

The evidence was secured almost entirely by Mrs. Gross.

Twelve witnesses, who swore that they saw Johnson at Jackson, 12 miles from the scene of the shooting, are under indictment for perjury.

Wind Saves Life of Baby Caught by Kite

String on Toy Encircles Throat of Child and Lifts Him From Earth.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Except for the timely intervention of a gust of wind, Baby Allen McNaughton, 15 months old, might have been hanged by a box kite string until he was dead yesterday afternoon in the presence of his 12-year-old brother, Monroe, and a group of boy friends. As it was he was hanged until he was black in the face, and the string circled his throat with a gash that barely missed the jugular vein. Just as the kite went up the string slackened and twined about the baby's throat. The child was lifted from the ground and was being borne aloft when a sudden cross current slackened the string again. Monroe quickly cut it, releasing the kite and his brother at the same time.

FARMERS QUIT COTTON TO GROW WATERMELONS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—The biggest watermelon crop on record is being moved along the Savannah and Statesboro Railroad. Already more than 650 cars have been hauled. Bennett Maas, commercial agent for the Macon, Dublin and Savannah, reports that farmers are so well pleased with their melon crops that some of them will abandon cotton-planting and go in for melons entirely.

Mayor Quits Office to Become Collector of Port, but Suffers From Curtailment.

PORT HURON, MICH., Aug. 9.—The order of Secretary McAdoo abolishing the office of collector of customs at this port has thrown former Mayor John J. Bell out into the cold.

When Mr. Bell received his appointment a few years ago he resigned as the city's chief executive, and Commissioner Dixon was chosen as his successor. Then Mr. Bell appointed William R. Chadwick as his deputy.

Now the order from Washington puts Mr. Chadwick in charge of the local part. Mr. Bell finds he has resigned himself out of one job and appointed himself out of another.

Steamer's Crew Deny Sighting 'Titanic'

Officers Say Wreckage They Saw Was Sixty Miles South of Disaster Scene.

Special Cable to The American.

SOUTH SHIELD, Aug. 9.—Officers of the steamer Lucilline, which has arrived here, deny the report that they saw the Titanic wreck apparently resting on top of a ledge of rocks. What they saw during their trip from Bordeaux to Philadelphia was some wreckage consisting of a part of a mast and some gear that was probably attached to a submerged object. They were 60 miles south of the scene of the Titanic disaster, although in the same longitude. They discredit the supposition that the Titanic rests upon a submerged reef.

Many Lives Saved As Train Is Ditched

Forethought of Towerman Averts Crash Between Specials by Taking Chance on Tragedy.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Scores of lives were saved to-day when a towerman in Burnham, Ill., threw the Ohio River special on the Pennsylvania Railroad into a derail and averted its collision with a through Wabash train from St. Louis. The train took the ditch at high speed. The Pennsylvania locomotive was overturned in the crash, but aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman, no one was hurt.

A moment after the Pennsylvania train hit the derailer the Wabash train clicked across the frogs at the track intersection less than 1,000 feet away.

OIL LETTERS KILLED HIM POLITICALLY, SAYS FORAKER

Exposes by William Randolph Hearst Responsible for Downfall, Declares Former Senator Before Senate Lobby Inquiry.

Official of National Manufacturers' Association Writes Democratic Simplicity Will Mean Union Label on U.S. Stationery.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Former Senator Foraker admitted to the Senate Lobby Committee to-day publication by William Randolph Hearst of the famous Standard Oil letters killed Foraker's chances for re-election to the Senate in 1908.

After identifying a letter received from Martin M. Mitchell, the confessed ex-lobbyist, making a report of political activities in Ohio in Foraker's behalf, the former Senator said:

"It was the morning of the day Mr. Hearst's disclosure was made public. An attack had been made on me by Mr. Hearst which destroyed my chances of election, saying I had acted as counsel for the Standard Oil Company. This had created a sentiment in our State very prejudicial to me. I continued as a candidate in the campaign only because to retire from it after I had become a candidate would look like an admission that there was some justification for the attack, whereas there was not any."

Senator Foraker said Muhall, whom he had known thirty years, greatly overestimated his own importance.

No Aid from N. A. M.

Foraker said he had never received aid from the National Association of Manufacturers and while he received a fee of $500 for the part he played in the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1896, he was not in the employ of either David Lamar or Edward Lauterbach in an injunction case against the Union Pacific in 1903.

The House Investigating Committee opened its probe with introduction of correspondence showing the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers in fighting labor legislation in Congress and various attempts to have "conservative" men named as members of House committees.

Discussing the recent sundry civil bill, with its provision prohibiting the expenditure of certain funds for the prosecution of farmers and labor unions under the Sherman law, James A. Emery, counsel of the N. A. M., wrote to President John Kirby, Jr., of the association, on March 7, 1913, after President Taft had vetoed the bill:

"I want to emphasize as hard as I can the importance of lining up for a tremendous demonstration when this bill reaches President Wilson, as it undoubtedly will, with the same provision in it. You will then have an early opportunity to decide whether the glittering Democratic motto, 'Equal right for all and special privilege for none,' means anything or whether the Administration has surrendered completely or will merely turn over the Department of Labor.

Objection to Secretary Wilson.

"I note, by the way, your reference to a letter from C. W. Post on the question of a protest over the appointment of Wilson (Secretary of Labor). A protest on this subject is a mere waste of breath, and on the whole I am inclined to think the whole purpose of this department will be shown up quicker with the unions in control of it than in any other way. Gompers will run it characteristically with a high hand, and if the whole thing does not smell to Heaven within a year I shall be very much astonished.

"By that time Democratic simplicity will probably mean a union label on the White House stationery and the President conferring with the Waiters' Union over the appointment of his steward. At present we have nothing more startling in Jeffersonian simplicity than the news Mrs. Bryan is making a new suit for the Secretary of State, and cakes and ginger ale will be served at the dinner for the British Ambassador. Toothpicks will, of course, be an after dinner course at all Cabinet receptions, and the demand for dress suits will be confined to waiters in the hotels."

In this same letter Emery advised Kirby, "If you have any idea Taft would have vetoed this bill of his own motion, get over it. A list of public men who had 'pie' in this $113,000,000 appropriation bill included many prominent men in both Houses."

LOSES ELOPEMENT RACE.

IRONTON, OHIO, Aug. 9.—George Alexander, of Floyd County, Kentucky, arrived here to-day in pursuit of his daughter, Miss Oma Alexander, five minutes after she had been married to Lawrence Jenkins. The father said the girl was only 15 years old and that Jenkins had induced her to elope with him when she was on her way to school this morning.

Finds Honeymoon Land, Then the Man

Society Girl and New Husband Are Now on Their Way to Tahiti.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Miss Luella Hayne, a pretty Chicago girl, is now, as the bride of Dr. Frank Vance, of Enid, Okla., on her way to spend her honeymoon in Tahiti. Miss Hayne had chosen the spot for the honeymoon before she found the man.

Miss Hayne went through a finishing school which prepared her for all the conventionalities of a reigning position in the smart set, but after a brief whirl this life proved tiresome and she started out on the road that leads "back to nature."

The romance was begun at a house party in New York city given by Miss Hayne's sister.

In talking about Tahiti before she sailed she said:

"The people who are most successful in our centers of civilization are most fettered by it. The reason why people plunge so madly into the economic struggle is largely that they may free themselves from its conditions. Why should not a civilized man be as happy as a native of Tahiti? We are going to find out."

Princeton Students Are Rivals for Hands of Daughter of Late President.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 9.—Herman Stump and H. Gordon Ewing, filled with a youthful ardor to win the hand of Miss Esther Cleveland, second daughter of Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., and the late President Cleveland, are rivals in "a race for love" which is interesting Baltimore society.

Stump is a son of Judge and Mrs. H. Arthur Stump. Ewing is a son of Mr and Mrs. William Jackson Ewing, of Roland Park.

The two wooers are members of the senior class at Princeton University and both have been guests at Miss Cleveland's home.

Mrs. Mackay Leads Hermit Life

Society Leader Pines for Children

Seldom Stirs From Maine Home

Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay with her children, who were taken from her when her husband left on mysterious trip to Europe.

Portland People Believe She Has Settled in Quiet Town to Start Divorce Suit.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug 9.—From the gay life of a popular society woman, a leader in the smartest affairs of New York, Newport and Bar Harbor to pursue an existence in a quiet city, is a change just made by the dashing Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, the former Kitty Duer.

"Why do you suppose she's here?" all Portland is asking.

What can she do with herself all day long, for she is never seen out, save to take a drive, and then always wearing a heavy white veil. Is she here to secure a divorce and will she live that dreary life for one whole year—that's how the gossip runs.

Perhaps she's writing another book. She did write one once, "The Crystal Ball." But while the world conjectures, Mrs. Mackay denies herself to all.

Divorce is without doubt her idea in burying herself here, where she has been ever since her millionaire husband sailed for Europe with their three children.

Mrs Mackay is occupying the home of Adam P. Leighton on Western Promenade, a cottage in comparison with the mansions she has been used to occupying.

It was on June 25 that Mr. Mackay sailed for Europe on the Imperator, taking his children on board from New Jersey, where they had been in his control for several days. He went abroad with never a word to the wife and mother.

So mysterious was the departure that it attracted wide attention. They boarded the ship at night; a detective squad was serving to protect the children from any attempt to prevent their departure and the father registered under an assumed name. The children, who are no doubt longing for their mother as she is longing for them, are still abroad and it is said they will be there for months.

Western Canada to Honor First Farmer

Three-Day Celebration Planned as Tribute to Memory of Chevalier LaCorne.

MELFORT, SASK., Aug. 9.—Western Canada is to honor the memory of Captain Louis Lac De La Corne, the first farmer of Western Canada. Chevalier LaCorne introduced agriculture in the Carrot River valley, Saskatchewan, in 1754. At Melfort, in the heart of the Carrot River District, a three-day celebration, August 1, 2 and 3, 1914, will commemorate the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of the first farming in Western Canada.

The business men of Melfort and the surrounding territory have organized to arrange for the celebration, and committees are already at work. The celebration will be unusual and will include a pageant, in which 2,000 Indians will participate. This pageant will typify the agricultural growth of Western Canada, from the days before Chevalier LaCorne explored the Carrot River valley to the present time.

Honeymoon Trip on Motorcycle Planned

Bride Will Be Guide on Romantic Journey Through Rockies on Tandem.

GRAND JUNCTION, COLO., Aug. 9.—A trip across the Rockies from Grand Junction to Denver on a motorcycle will be the novel honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Carson, of this city. They leave in a few days. Mrs. Carson will guide the machine on the entire journey. She was formerly Miss Ethel Kelso, daughter of a prominent Grand Junction fruit grower, and is an expert motorcyclist. Carson will ride on the tandem seat.

The first woman to attempt to ride across the Rockies on a motorcycle is Mrs. E. Frank Winfield, who made the trip with her husband last summer.

Dickenson was unable to swim, and sank with Mrs. Keesing. Both were taken from the water dead.

Two physicians said there was no water in the lungs of either, and that Mrs. Keesing died of heart failure and Dickenson of fright.

City Babies Win Over Those From Country

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—City-bred babies triumphed over those from the country in the Twentieth Century Baby Show held at Piasa Chautauqua near Alton, Ill. The prizes went not to the prettiest babies, but to those who scored highest in physical and mental efficiency.

First place in Class A for babies from eighteen months to three years, was won by Cooper Stanton White, of Alton. In Class B for babies from six to eighteen months the winner was Gilbert Craig, of East St. Louis.

Of the eighteen babies entered, none scored less than 946. None of the country babies entered won a prize.

Uses Boot as Strop; Shaves With Knife

Pioneer Indiana Man Has Never Owned Razor, Mug or Barber Soap.

CONNERSVILLE, IND., Aug. 9.—Zaccheus Adams, Jackson Township, Fayette County, has shaved himself twice a week for 54 years, but never owned a shaving mug, a razor, a strop or a hone. It is Mr. Adams' pride that he keeps his razor, an old Wade & Butcher cleaver, twice as big as a common razor, in the finest trim with the least trouble of any man in the county.

He wears old style, high-toped boots and still has one pair which he bought 25 years ago. Wishing to shave, Mr. Adams first puts on these boots. He then smacks the razor blade back and forth along the leather leg of the left one for a minute or two. His next operation is to moisten his face with rainwater—no perfumed soap for him—and then he just shaves.

NATURE AIDS IN BEAUTY DISPLAY AT PACIFIC FAIR

Picturesque Location Will Add to Grandeur of Palaces of Mammoth Panama Exhibition.

By HAMILTON WRIGHT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—The palaces of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition have been planned upon a massive scale to conform with their impressive natural surroundings. The site of the exposition at Harbor View lies within the city limits as a crescent upon the shores of San Francisco Bay, just inside the Golden Gate.

No more picturesque location, nor one more appropriate to the celebration of a great maritime event could be imagined. On the south, east and west the grounds are encircled by towering hills of varying contours rising successively from 250 to 900 feet above the sea level. Upon the north the site opens out upon the harbor of San Francisco.

Site Natural Amphitheater.

The central portion of the site lies slightly above the sea and is encircled on three sides by gently sloping ground; within a short distance from the boundaries of the site these slopes change to steep hillsides and thus the site becomes the floor of a huge amphitheater from whose sides the exposition will be seen stretched out below. To the east and south the residence section encircles the exposition grounds, and to the west and southwest the site embraced by the wooded slopes of the Presidio military reservation, dark with cypress and eucalyptus and interspersed with occasional vistas of green valleys.

The exposition buildings, built upon an axis east and west, will face the bay upon the north; they will parallel the stream of the great incoming traffic of the world through the western gate of the United States. Ships entering the harbor will pass before the exposition grounds.

The harbor itself will be a part of the great theater upon which will be staged the world's jubilee and the Golden Gate will be the entrance to the theater.

A marvelous panorama will be afforded visitors on ships coming through the Golden Gate. As one looks from the harbor he will see there main groups of exposition buildings. There will be the great central group comprising the fourteen exposition palaces to be devoted to general exhibits; there will be the group upon the left hand or east end devoted to amusement concessions and covering sixty-five acres; this will be the "midway." The right-hand group upon the Presidio Military reservation and nearest the Golden Gate will be devoted to the pavilions of the States and foreign nations.

Tropical Boulevard Feature.

The main group of buildings will lie between a tropical garden or boulevard running east and west along the fringe of hills nearest the city upon the south, and the esplanade along the shores of San Francisco Bay upon the north.

The tropical boulevard, to be known as the "Alameda," will be 1,800 feet in length and 300 feet wide; it will be glowing with fountains, lagoons, statuary peristyles and arcades and, secluded from the winds of the bay, it will be transplanted with a profusion of semi-tropical trees, plants and flowers, including the orange, banana, olive, myrtle and every variety of palm. The east end of the Alameda will open out with a plaza upon Van Ness Avenue, one of the principal boulevards of San Francisco. The west end upon the Presidio will be surmounted by a commemorative arch of triumph.

The prevailing color tone of the exposition will be an ochre, a tawny buff, several shades removed from white, but in the distance giving the effect of white, but will not be glaring under the brilliant sunlight of California. In the courts there will be a marvelous blending of colors; Pompeiian red, strong Italian blues, vermilion and orange will predominate. The court system is unique in that it will permit each architect, artist or sculptor to present some distinct conception without clashing with the exposition architecture and coloring in its entirety.

BACHELOR, 107 YEARS OLD, GIVES SINGLE LIFE CREDIT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Daniel Turner, a veteran of the Civil War, residing at Santa Monica, who celebrated his one hundred and seventh birthday to-day, thanks his judgment in remaining single for his long life and apparent good health at this advanced age.

"My life was never blighted by worry or sickness because I never married," said "Uncle" Dan. "Married men die younger than bachelors. Sometimes death is a welcome relief to the man who gets a modern wife."

Get Ready for End of the World

Flying Rollers Expect It Soon

So Members of This Queer Cult Await With Uncut Hair and Much Footwashing.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—"Now, brethren, watch night and day, for ye know not when the end of the world draws nigh. It may be tomorrow; at least it will come before the year 1920. It is probably much nearer than that," says Brother Lucien I. Pingree. With long flowing beard that has never been profaned by scissors and with silken locks which also have never been clipped, this resident of Stoneham thus warns all those who would be ready when the First Resurrection occurs. "It is coming soon—very soon—very soon," he asserts. Brother Pingree and his band of adherents all are sure of it. The end of the world is close at hand, they all say.

For this reason the Flying Rollers are launcing a great religious crusade which they hope will awaken men and women to a knowledge of their evil ways and will prepare them for the near-at-hand millennium.

Keep on Living.

If you are one of the elect and alive when this auspicious day comes Mr. Pingree says that you will never die. Your body will take on eternal life and though you will be otherwise possessed of man's normal anatomy and will go right on through million of years living in the mortal mold.

Brother Pingree, who is agent and teacher of the Flying Roller faith in this vicinity, lives at No. 1 Forrest street, Stoneham. His church until recently has been at No. 117 Hancock street, Everett. Now the Flying Rollers are to pitch their tent in Malden and launch a propaganda which aims to halt the world in its mad round of pleasure, barber shops and picture galleries.

It is not such a hardship for the women to belong to the Flying Rollers church, but the men have troubles of their own. Their discipline forbids anyone to have his hair cut or to enjoy the pleasure of lying back in a tonsorial chair while the artist with the razor does the rest.

Males Never Cut Hair.

The male brethren never have the corners of their hair or of their flowing beards rounded. "Thou shalt not," says the church discipline. Then there is the ceremony of the washing of feet, which takes place on certain occasions, when elders and elderesses lave each other's pedal extremities and thus conform to other Biblical injunctions. The Flying Roll is a book written by the great Roller prophet, Jezreel, mentioned in the Scriptures as "to come on earth." He came and was here in 1875, wrote the Roll and died about twenty years ago. Since then the Flying Rollers have read his text with scrupulous care and followed closely in his teachings.

The Flying Rollers believe in the law and gospel. That is, they follow literally the teachings of the Bible. A man who is faithful to the end will live forever. The Bible says that, and the Rollers take it literally.

144,000 in the Elect.

Of all the people alive, 144,000 (mentioned in Revelations, Chapter 14) shall be the elect who are to live during the thousand years when Christ is again to be on earth (during the First Resurrection). Then this chosen 144,000 shall enjoy Heaven still with their earthly bodies while the rest of humanity that was, shall minister to them as "ministering spirits."

"The world of wickedness will soon cease. A new world will appear as soon as Christ comes, which will be very soon (I can not give the exact date, but it will be before 1920, there is no doubt about that)," says Pastor Pingree. "In that world there will be no longer this struggle for life. Wonderful fruits and flowers will grow everywhere along the road sides—fruits and flowers more wonderful than we get from hothouses now. Then the earth will be Heaven for a thousand years.

"We believe that those who are faithful to the teachings of our religion will share that thousand years with Christ, wearing their mortal bodies, then clothed in immortality.

"It is no hardship not to cut your hair or trim your beard," says Mr. Pingree. "We tie it up and tuck it in, and by not cutting it or rounding the corners in any way, we are obeying the letter of divine law."

Here Are the Tenets of the Flying Rollers

Thou shalt not shave.

Thou shalt not cut thy hair.

Thou shalt not have thy picture taken.

Be faithful and thou shalt join the 144,000 true believers who will live forever.

Remember that the millenium will be here—probably in a year or so.

Thou shalt not tattoo thy arms.

The prophet is James J. Jezreel. Follow his teachings.

Feet washing among the brethren and sisters is practiced faithfully as the Bible and extracts from the "Flying Roll" dictate.

Prepare for the first resurrection which is coming soon.

EVERY LUXURY PROVIDED FOR 12 PRIZE DOGS

Private Room, Electric Fans, Leather Chairs, Etc., for Each of Dozen Pomeranians.

BROKTON, MASS., Aug. 9.—Twelve Pomeranians—each with a whole room to himself, and housed in a house which they have all to themselves, likewise—take the prize for dog luxury, Brockton folks believe. Besides a house of their own, the dogs have:

A valet, electric fan, individual beds, a bath twice a day, a back yard to play in, leather chairs and soft rugs (the latter to try their teeth on).

Mrs. E. V. Graves, a leading business woman, owns the dogs. She is successful as the head of a factory here. Brockton folks say she is more attentive to the dogs than Mrs William Carter, of Newport, who got four doctors when her Pomeranian was nervous.

During the hot days the valet, Mr. Beals, fans the little fellows with a specially made $18 electric fan and each dog is given a cold bath at frequent intervals.

"They are all as jealous as can be," says Mrs. Graves. "If you make more of one than another there is a terrible howl and often a fight. They are friendly to children as a general rule. The dogs are worth anywhere from $150 to $1,000 each, but I do not care to sell them. They are a great comfort to me."

HOT FIGHT FOR COMMISSIONER IN BIRMINGHAM

Recorder Wood, "People's Candidate," Denounces Opponent as Champion of Interests.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Clement R. Wood and George B. Ward are engaged in the most spectacular campaign for President of the Commission of Birmingham ever waged in this city.

Wood, as the "candidate of the people," is making many and varied charges against the political element supporting his opponent, Mr. Ward. He charges that he (Wood) was removed as Recorder by the Commission for sending one of their friends to the stockade and insisting on his serving his time, as he did in similar cases.

He also charges that Ward represents the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company and the Birmingham Loan and Discount Company. He charges that the managing editor of one of Birmingham's afternoon papers was forced out of the race under penalty of losing his position on the paper.

He claims that many other prospective candidates have been eliminated from the race by the powerful hand of the interests, and calls on the "common people" to assert themselves in the defeat of Ward.

Ward claims that Wood was discouraged by the Commission because of incompetency, and makes many other charges and insinuations in his speeches and newspaper cards.

Meetings are being held almost every night, and music from brass bands and the orations of the spellbinders are to be heard on every corner.

It is impossible to get a complete line-up, but it can be said with certainty that the race will be close, and that the result will be known only after every vote has been counted.

WOMEN BUY LAND ONE-THIRD CHEAPER THAN MEN

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 9.—After hearing from women of the Council of Clubs the Finance Committee of the upper house of the Council has killed the ordinance to advance $1,000 of the $12,000 set apart for the purpose of making a start on the contemplated women's reformatory at Leeds.

It developed that the $1,000 had been asked by the Board of Public Welfare as a first payment on thirteen acres of ground it proposed to buy at Leeds at $500 an acre.

The women made fun of the business abilities of the Welfare Board, and said that they had already secured an option on 96 acres close by the thirteen at $171 an acre.

Heiress on Lone Hunt for Gold Seeks Mine Grandfather Found Plans to Do Own Prospecting

Miss Frances Leighton, an heiress of California, who is prospecting through a section of the Sierra Madre Mountains in search of a gold mine which she believes her grandfather, a "Forty-niner," discovered, but never made known. Recently she heard of the reported "find" and, securing a miner's outfit ,staed alone on the perilous trip through the mountainous wilds in search of it.

Miss Frances Leighton Shows Same Intrepid Spirit of the Argonauts of '49.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—With the same dauntless spirit exhibited by her grandfather during the California gold rush of '49, Miss Frances Leighton, one of the wealthiest and most prominent socially of the younger generation of Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, is on a prospecting tour through the Sierra Madre Mountains to-day in search of a gold mine she had learned her grandfather discovered but never developed.

For many months Miss Leighton planned the prospecting tour before leaving to carry it out. Topographical bureaus supplied her with maps of the mountainous territory through which she planned to make her tour and several veterans of the gold stampede not only advised her against the foolhardiness of the prospective journey, but told her that there was one chance in a thousand of ever greeting civilization again if she lost herself in several untraveled sections of the mountain region that as yet have never been thoroughly explored.

Nevertheless, Miss Leighton had great confidence in the belief that her grandfather did find the mine somewhere in the mountain fastness and she determined to find it, if it did exist, at any cost and without taking into consideration the hardships that confront her.

Miss Leighton, according to reports which have reached her home town, is to-day prospecting at or near the West Fork Canyon, twelve miles beyond Mount Wilson.

Grandfather Killed.

Her grandfather, John Easton, was one of the first of the thousands of New Englanders to reach California, after a perilous journey across the prairies following the report of the discovery of gold in that State.

Soon after reaching San Francisco, he left with his wife and daughter and a partner and established a camp at Sierra Madre. Easton left the camp one day on a prospecting tour and never returned. Three days later his partner went out to search for him. He was found crushed to death by falling rock.

Before his death, however, he managed to draw roughly on a piece of paper what is now believed to be the location of the mine his intrepid young granddaughter is searching for.

Miss Leighton some years ago received a letter from her grandfather's former partner containing the piece of paper on which he had drawn the outline of the supposed mine. It was on receipt of this letter and diagram that Miss Leighton planned to go in search of the hidden gold.

After months of careful study of the many maps, topographical bureau reports and advice from old-time miners, Miss Leighton treated herself to a complete miner's outfit and started on her tedious journey up the mountain.

To Work Alone.

She will do the entire work alone, staking her own camp, preparing her meals, making surveys and using the pick and shovel whenever she believes she has struck the right trail.

Her outfit includes several changes of clothes, a heavy pick and shovel, a mountain mule, or pack animal as they are called in that section of the country, a complete dining and cooking outfit, a pack of playing cards which will afford her her only amusement while practically a prisoner in the wilds, needles, thread and many other useful and necessary articles.

She wears most all the time a pair of regulation top trousers, similar to riding breeches, with canvas leggings and a plain but heavy mountain shirt.

If the gold mine really exists, every one of the young woman's friends believe that she will not return until it has been found.

U. S. EDUCATION EXPERT SAYS ILLITERACY GROWS

BOULDER, COLO., Aug. 9.—That in only two States of the Union has the ideal democracy in education been even approximated; that every year in the United States almost 70,000 illiterates are sent out into the world to make their way; that there are in the country to-day 5,615,800 persons over the age of ten who can neither read not write and that almost 50 per cent of the rural teachers of the country have not had a high school education, were among the startling statements made by United States Commissioner of Education Claxton in an address on "Democracy and Education."

DENVER IS READY TO GIVE KNIGHTS ROYAL GREETING

Thousands of Templars Pour Into City, Which Is Lavishly Decorated for Conclave.

DENVER, Aug. 9.—Thousands of Knights Templar are already here for the thirty-second triennial convention, and it is estimated that when the convention formally opens Tuesday next more than 100,000 Knights and their friends will have arrived.

All buildings are decorated in honor of the Knights, as are private dwellings. The municipal and other public buildings have been elaborately ornamented and great arches have been built over many of the streets. Thousands have been spent upon decorations and illumination. Denver has spent more than fifteen times as much on its plans for the Knights Templar than it ever before expended upon any one convention.

Sun to Shine All Night.

At Eighteenth and Champa streets the huge figure of a Knight more than 60 feet in height has been erected. A searchlight will play upon it all night. At Fourteenth and Champa streets a "Colorado Sunset," a marvelous electrical display, has been built. It shows the sun sinking below the rim of the mountains. Twenty monster searchlights are placed behind the "sun," throwing their rays into the sky to resemble the rays of the sinking sun.

Over the Isle of Safety at Broadway and Sixteenth street, a reproduction of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem will astonish the visitors. It measures 50 by 60 feet, and is lighted by searchlights on the tops of nearby buildings.

Every arrangement possible has been made by the railroads to bring the Knights and their friends into Denver. More special trains will enter Denver than entered Washington in the same space of time for the inauguration. The Pullman Company has reserved large space of ground on the outskirts of the city for a "Car City," where the special cars and special trains will be parked, and where those Knights who so wish may live in the cars. Sanitary arrangements will be perfect. Stores of various kinds for the convenience of the car dwellers have been established.

Two trainloads of automobiles from New York, sent here by New York Knights, have already arrived, and carloads of automobiles from other cities are arriving daily. These have also been parked on the outskirts of the city. More than 500 special trains and cars have already arrived. According to the railroad schedules, when the visitors really commence to flock in a special train will arrive every eight minutes for forty-eight hours.

Every State Represented.

From August 1 to to-day more than 2,000 automobiles reached this city. More than 1,000 other cars are on their way here. The delegates to the convention are from every State in the Union, and from Alaska, Honolulu, Philippines, Canada, England, Scotland and Ireland.

As the special trains began to arrive, some 2,000 Colorado Knights ranged themselves at the station to escort the new arrivals safely to their hotels. Every hotel room in Denver has been rented.

On Tuesday next the grand parade will be held. More than 50,000 Knights will be in line. Their white plumes, costing $15 each, will altogether be worth $800,000. The regalia of the Knights on parade will be worth more than $1,000,000. Sixty-five bands will march with the Knights, the fees to the bands alone amounting to $22,000. Some 600 Knights' commanders will be mounted on picked horses from the ranches of Colorado and Wyoming.

KANSAS SHERIFF RETALIATES FOR HIS ARREST ON SUNDAY

HUTCHINSON, KANS., Aug. 9.—Following his arrest on a charge of violating the Sunday labor ordinance, Koon C. Beck, sheriff of Reno County, announced that he would stop all Sunday labor in this city.

He swore out complaints against 350 persons who work on Sunday, including all street car employees. Beck and a brother are proprietors of an amusement park and shows have been given there on Sunday. Local ministers and church members made the complaint against the park.

LANE TAKES UP CUDGELS IN WAR FOR FARMERS

Secretary of the Interior Has Begun Long Battle on Land Grabbers.

the Interior Franklin K. Lane has started a little war on the land grabbers west of the Mississippi River.

He has taken up the cudgels of the farmer and the homesteader in the great West. His efforts in this direction materially effect the pocketbook of every man, women and child.

Incidentally, he is "bucking" the land speculator. These land "grabbers" have quietly been acquiring vast tracts of land in the West on which the people of the United States have spent over $75,000,000 in irrigation projects. The homesteader has either been ousted through excessive water rate charges or becomes a tenant of the land companies.

Speculators Hold Land.

Secretary Lane finds that the projects were planned for the purpose of aiding the small farmer in tilling his ground, but that in reality 95 per cent of the land is held by speculators who are charging excessive rates for water which has been sluiced to the land by the Government.

The other 5 per cent of the acreage is owned by the small farmer, but even Government water rates are held by Mr. Lane to be excessively high. Building notes for dam canal and sluice ways add to the cost of upkeep of the farm and conditions, Westerners say, are becoming intolerable.

By going into the question from the very first day that he entered his office, Mr. Lane has become intimately acquainted with conditions obtaining in the West. Daily conferences have been had with delegations from the West. Even the land speculator had his day in court, and his contentions and views were placed before the Secretary.

Farmer Needs Help.

In this connection Mr. Lane announced: "I am for the farmer, first, last and at all times. Naturally handicapped by lack of sufficient funds to carry on expensive farming under the conditions that obtain in the West, the farmer must receive support and co-operation from the Government, if the great West is to be settled and made to be as productive as the East.

"Expensive water will ruin the small farmers and ranchmen. They must have cheap rates and long-time notes, the Government must back them up an extend them credit, helping them over the rough places if necessary, if the various projects designed to benefit the whole people are to accomplish the purposes for which they were constructed.

"Why should this Government spend $75,000,000 for the benefit of private capital? Why should the Government adopt a hard and fast policy, such as has existed in the past, which has kept the small farmer from going into the new regions and taking up Government land? Isn't it time for the United States to extend to the Westerners a little paternal patience, a little more consideration, a helping hand?"

MEN AND RELIGION No. 73

CHILDREN OF GEORGIA

"AND THEY ALL WITH ONE CONSENT BEGAN TO MAKE EXCUSE."

Luke 14:18.

They were at dinner.

Jesus said:

"When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind,

"And thou shalt be blessed."

One at the table pretended to be in sympathy. He began smugly:

"Happy is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God."

The hypocrisy of the man and all others like him was unmasked in the answer made by Jesus. He said:

"A certain man made a great supper and bade many—

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse."

One said one thing, another another.

With one it was a field; with another it was new oxen.

In the end, the Lord said:

"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

And from the highways and the hedges called He His guests.

Are you a maker of hypocritcal phrases as was the man at the Pharisee's dinner table—pretending a love for that which is just and right?

Or, to-day, are you trying to do the will, not of man or men, but of Him who died for you?

Let us have done with excuses!

While spending thousands on fields, hogs and cattle, say not:

"We are unable—

"We can not give proper care to these girls—

"These children must go down in shame because of our lack of money—

"But our beasts we must protect whatever the cost."

If animals are more valuable than girls, let us say frankly: but you know that this is untrue.

You know what Georgia would do.

Consider, then!

The Bill in the House providing a Reformatory for Girls is No. 4—ahead of any other measure appropriating money.

The Penitentiary Committee has approved it.

Unanimously the Appropriations Committee has recommended that it pass.

Why, then, should beasts and fields be provided for by later bills and nothing done for Georgia's wayward and delinquent girls?

BURWELL of Hancock, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman and the vice-chairman, BLACKBURN of Fulton, HARDEMAN of Jefferson, MILLER of Bibb, NUNNALLY of Floyd, PAULK of Berrien, RAGLAND of Talbot, REDWINE of Fayette, RHODES of Clarke, SHUPTRINE of Chatham and SLADE of Muscogee constitute the Rules Committee of the House.

The Bill is in their hands.

Monday is the final day in which the measure can be heard and enacted into law at this session of the Legislature.

These eleven men, THE RULES COMMITTEE, will not prevent a hearing, say their friends. We believe that they will do more, that they will help to pass the Bill.

For they know the worth of a girl-child of ten to fourteen.

And they can appraise a cow or hog.

WOMAN DEITY CREATED MAN, SAYS TABLET

New Version of Genesis Found in University of Pennsylvania Nippur Collection.

DATE IS FIXED AT 2100 B. C.

Dr. Arno Poebel's Discovery Is Regarded as Oldest Story of Origin of World.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—It was a woman who created mankind, according to a tablet 4,000 years old just deciphered at the Pennsylvania University Museum by Dr. Arno Poebel, who is at work translating the tablets dug up in Nippur some years ago by the museum expeditions.

About 37 years ago George Smith, the English scholar and explorer, brought back from Babylonia the cylinders which gave a Babylonian account of the origin of mankind and much of his early history, and these not only excited great interest but had a profound effect upon the theological teachings. The parallelism between the Babylonian story and that of Genesis developed a new school in theological criticism. But the cylinders of Smith only dated back to the reign of Assurbanipal in the seventh century B. C. The university museum tablet dates back possibly to 2500 B. C., and it is reasonably certain to be no later than the reign of Hamurabi, about 2100 B. C.

Female Deity Created Man.

The new account of the creation and the flood throws much new light on the early ideas of the Babylonians and Sumerians.

The striking novel features of the new tablet are these:

That it was a female deity who created mankind, known as "the blackheaded," from the color of the hair.

That new deities or new characteristics of the gods are discovered in the original document, although they have been hinted at in other ways. The character of the female goddess is now made important from the earliest times and equal with the two male ruler gods. Later tablets speak of these as unimportant.

That the first seven prediluvian cities and the special god of each are discovered.

That the older Babylonian name of the Scriptural Noah is Zingidda.

That deluge ruins of the prediluvian cities were not all destroyed, some not until historic times. There is historic basis to much of the statement in this epic.

Opens With Poem.

Dr. Poebel has prepared a careful literal translation of the tablet. It originally was about seven inches square, but on such a surface the ancients could write in ideographic signs a long epic poem, and that is what this table contained. Like the first chapter of Genesis, the story opens with a great poem on the origin of the heavens as well as of the earth. It appears that Nintu, a female god, created mankind, and she is found lamenting that the other gods seem bent on the destruction of her subjects. She speaks of the human beings as "my creations." It appears that Anu and Enlil were the chief gods of power, although they were among seven of equal rank, the first being god of heaven and the second god of earth. Then comes the story of the creation:

"Nintu created the blackheaded," (human race.) * * * "The fields of the ground produced abundance, the cattle and the four-legged beasts of the field artfully they (the gods) called into existence."

Use of Fireproofed Cotton Goods Urged

State Fire Marshal Says Stores in Kansas Sell No Other Kind.

TOPEKA, Aug. 9.—Harrison Parkman, State Fire Marshal, believes that stores ought to sell only fireproof cotton goods.

In the new State fire textbook the Fire Marshal is urging that every Kansas man and woman refuse to buy any but fireproof cotton goods and that they adopt the German method and fireproof all cotton materials.

The Fire Marshal believes that this action would decrease the number of deaths by fire in Kansas fully 50 per cent and it would make a big decrease in the number of fires in the homes of the State.

Raze House While Occupant Is Away

Workmen of Grade Crossing Commission Destroy House of Man Who Blocked Work.

CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Aug. 9.—While John Barber was in Boston this afternoon, a wrecking crew, under orders of the special grade crossing commission for Central Falls, demolished a cottage house he owned on Cross street, and then started in to saw off a corner of the Barber Livery Stable nearby. When his land was condemned, Barber demanded $5,000 for the property, but was allowed only $3,500. The grade crossing commissioners sold the cottage to Nicolas Bertozzi, but Barber would not let Bertozzi on the premises.

25,562,650 VOTES FOR PONIES

Astounding Mark Reached in Great Contest

Race, Thrillingly Close to the Last, Showed Courage and Ability of Boys and Girls.

MISS ROBERT JESTER HARBOUR, 340 Ponce DeLeon avenue, who polled largest number of votes in Georgian and American's great Pony Contest.

Winner of first prize is shown driving "Queen Bess," the little Shetland most coveted in the contest.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American Pony Contest polled the astounding total of 25,562,650 votes.

Miss Robert Harbour, of District No. 2, won first honors with 647,175 votes. She had first choice of the ponies, and took the little black pony coveted by many others—"Queen Bess."

Totals of more than a half-million votes were made by George Rosser in District No. 1, and Fannie Mae Cook in District No. 4.

Four others, Charles E. Kelly, of Cartersville, with 430,460; Frank Ison, Jr., of College Park, with 474,090; William Turner, with 439,930, and Ross Greer, with 440,925, climbed over the 400,000 mark, and neared the half-million level.

All Had Big Totals.

All the others had big total votes—large enough to win in any ordinary contest. But this was no ordinary contest. It was harder fought than any competition of the kind in the history of Atlanta. This was inevitable, because the prizes were more attractive to children than any which any Atlanta newspaper ever before had offered.

A remarkable feature is the way the contestants were "bunched" at the finish. In many districts there are five, six and even ten who were serious contenders for the prizes up to the very count.

Some of those who were fifth in their own districts would have won a pony, or at least a watch, in some other district. This seems hard, but it is the fate of war, so to speak. Presumably those in the same districts had even chances, and should not be permitted to compete with the boys and girls working in a region where the going, perhaps, was much more difficult.

Credit to the Losers.

Hats off to the losers!

Every one of them is "game." There has not been a complaint of unfairness—not a single kick at the method in which the contest was conducted. Nothing but a spirit of fair play, and the motto, "Let the best man win," has prevailed.

There is this much consolation—the boys and girls who worked sincerely in the contest have gained experience which will be invaluable to them in later life—an insight into business methods worth more than any prize.

Then, too, they have the satisfaction of knowing that they have aided in introducing Atlanta's best newspapers into homes where they were strangers before.

Mends Own Socks To Let Wife Vote

Illinois Husband Consents to Do Washing to Prove Housekeeping Isn't Hard.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Just to prove to an expectant world that he was a good husband, Wayne Colby stayed home, mended the socks, tended the children and washed dishes while his wife cast her vote in the first election under the universal suffrage law recently enacted.

"Just to show that it is not such a terrible thing for a man to stay at home and do the housework on the occasional voting day," said Colby, "I thought I would help Mrs. Colby out with the washing."

The first woman to cast her vote in the State was Mrs. Fannie Coleman, of Wamac, near Central Illinois. She was accompanied to the polls by her husband, O. W. Coleman, and both voted for Village Trustees.

WOMEN WHO JOG WIFE UPON A RAIL AWAIT SHERIFF

Illinois State's Attorney Says Volo Vigilantes Who Maltreated the Town Beauty Must Answer.

VOLO, ILL., Aug. 9.—Here in Volo, Lake County, Ill., the women who rode Mrs. John Richardson, the town beauty, on a rail will have to answer to the grand jury. The State's Attorney Ralph Dady, says so.

Gossip caused the trouble. Mrs. Richardson is pretty. Her husband, who keeps the small country store, is a cripple. William Dunnill, a brother-in-law of the wife, was a frequent caller.

The village women descended on the Richardson store, dragged her out on July 14 in the evening, set her astride a rail and bore her, struggling, screaming, almost raving, through the main street of the little town, climaxing the incident by dumping her into a mud puddle by a roadside and warning her to "pack up her traps and go," meaning thereby an ultimatum that she must forever leave Volo.

And, paradoxical as it may seem, all of this happened within forty miles of Chicago.

Slips Away During Night.

After the vigilantes had dumped Mrs. Richardson into one of the various mud puddles which abound in the vicinity, the victim emerged from her oozy bath, went by a circuitous route back to her husband's store, conferred with him and slipped away during the night.

It was impossible to employ an automobile, buggy or other conveyance the night she left, and to remain over until daylight was out of the question, because members of the mob had warned Mrs. Richardson that if the sun rose upon her in Volo again they would tar and feather her.

Her husband witnessed the abduction of his wife, but, being unable to rise, could render her no assistance.

It is estimated that at least half the male population of Volo witnessed the hazing of Mrs. Richardson. In fact, it is said that the women who committed the outrage had previously taken their husbands and brothers into their confidence and that the proposition had been indorsed in family council.

It was expected that Will Dunnill, brother-in-law of Mrs. Richardson would interfere in her behalf, but he left Volo a few hours before the attack. Therefore, Mrs. Richardson's husband being disabled, and her brother-in-law being absent, she was without champion.

Husband Defends Her.

Just before Mrs. Richardson's flight from Volo, her husband gave her $1,500.

To a newspaper man, Richardson said:

"My wife is a good woman. She is not guilty of the charges the other women make. I won't believe it. A woman who has cared for me during my invalidism for the last nine years, who married me when I was an invalid, knowing there was no hope of my recovery, would not be guilty of what they charge.

"And to think that I was helpless to save her from the indignities which were heaped upon her. Her clothing was half torn from her and amid jeers and cheers and the throwing of mud and stones, she was ridden through the streets. It was an act of Middle-Age barbarism and hardly worthy of women of Illinois, who have just obtained the right to vote."

Meanwhile the women of Volo, who are supposed to have played the role of vigilantes, are calmly awaiting developments.

Husband Says She Kissed Count's Foot

Wife Brings Counter Charge That He Is Unduly Friendly With Stepmother.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Counter suits have been instituted in divorce proceedings by Harold D. Johnson, of the Colonial Life Insurance Company, and his wife, Mrs. Harriet L. Johnson, in the Supreme Court at White Plains.

The husband alleges that his wife is so infatuated with a certain Italian count that she frequently kissed his foot.

Mrs. Johnson alleges undue intimacy on the part of her husband with her stepmother, who is designated in the complaint as "one Anna J. R."

Johnson has entered a general denial to his wife's charges, while the wife's attorney, Mirabeau Towns, ridiculed the foot-kissing episodes complained of by Johnson.

No More Matrimony For Julia Sanderson

Former Wife of Tod Sloan Says She Will Never Tire of Single Life.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Never again." This was the terse reply of Julia Sanderson, the actress, when she arrived here on the steamship Adriatic and was asked if the reports that she intended to marry again were true.

After dealing that solar plexus blow to the matrimonial rumor, the former wife of Tod Sloan gave out her ideas on marriage.

"When a girl is free and single she can have all the fun in the world," she said. "It is different when you are married. Nobody wants to talk to you. Nobody wants to see you. No more barriers for me."

Twin Boys' Skin Is Turning to Black

Eighteen-Month-Old Babies Are Suffering From Rare Malady Known as Hodgkin's Disease.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Homeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black. The disease is pseudo leucaemia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpurcles greatly diminished.

The twins are the children of Anthony Amato and they were born eighteen months ago. They were then white. Then their skin began growing dark.

Men's Farewell Kiss Mistaken for Fight

Ardent Osculation at Railroad Station Causes Commotion Among Passengers at Gate.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Smack!"

A score of persons hurrying to and fro in the Pennsylvania Railroad station yesterday stopped short.

"Smack!"

The sound was repeated. Turning in the direction from which it seemed to emanate, the curious among the persons in the station saw two well-dressed young men in each other's arms.

Both men were of athletic build and none of the persons who stopped to watch their antics from a distance cared to interfere. When it seemed as if the taller of the two was about to be thrown, they separated suddenly.

Then the gates to the train shed were thrown open and an announcer called upon all intending passengers bound for Jamaica, L. I., and points east to go aboard the waiting train.

That seemed to be a signal for a recommencement of hostilities.

"Smack!"

Sure enough. It sounded again distinctly, but there was no mystery about the cause this time.

"Good-bye, Pierre," said the taller man; "don't forget to write." And a fourth time they kissed before parting.

ROMANCE LEADS TO HEIR'S EXILE FROM GERMANY

Lieutenant in the Kaiser's Army Comes to Chicago and Joins U. S. Cavalry.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Because his love for a pretty German actress resulted in his squandering an inheritance of $32,000 in one year, Dr. Otto Gordon Goldfield, scion of a wealthy family, a lieutenant in the German cavalry and a graduate of Gottigen University, was forced by his father to come to the United States and join the army here as a private. The young German is now in barracks here.

Ruth Werner, German dancer and singer, charmed the young man when in Vienna. His grandfather had just died and left him $32,000. Within a year this was gone, and after numerous appeals to his father, Dr. Goldfield was forced to come here.

Told to Give Up Girl.

His father, who is the vice president of the Corporation of Hamburg, told him to give up the girl, his commission in the army and go to America.

"I fell in love with the girl," explained "Private" Goldfield, "and spent all my money on her. She was beautiful. If she wanted jewels I bought jewels. We were at Monte Carlo. She wanted to play the games. She was beautiful, and I loved her, so why should she not be happy?

"We were in Paris, at the Horse Show in London, and many other places. She had automobiles and fine horses.

"And then my money gave out. My parents refused to give me more, and my father forced me to come to the United States and try for a commission in the army.

"Will I go back?" responded Dr. Goldfield in answer to a question. "Yes, when I get my commission here I will go back and the girl and I will be married. But not until then. I must stay in the army here until I am a lieutenant.

Likes Open Air Life.

"It's the open air, and beautiful I like here more than anything else. That is why I have come to the West.

"And your soldiers—well, next to the French dragoons they are about the best in the world, in my opinion, and I have seen the troops of all the larger countries. That's why I am enlisting as a private here, for I like the life and will stay anyway until I get my naturalization papers."

Goldfield is twenty-five, and has served the last four years in the German cavalry as a lieutenant. He is an experienced horseman, and says he was the winner of the championship at the International Horse Show held in London two years ago, riding the horses from his father's stables.

Jacob Goldfield, father of the young army officer, besides being vice president of the Hamburg Corporation, is a well-known German jurist, as is also his brother, Rudolph Goldfield.

ATTORNEY SAYS TWO DEPUTIES ATTACKED HIM

Lawyer George W. Wood Swears Out Six Warrants for Williams Brothers After Fight.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Attorney George W. Wood this afternoon swore out six warrants against two Deputy Sheriffs, Leland Williams and Lon Williams, brothers. He charges the former with pointing a pistol at him, with carrying a concealed weapon, with assault and battery and with using opprobious language. Lon Williams is charged with assault and battery and the use of opprobrious language.

Mr. Wood claims that the two deputies attacked him unexpectedly, severely beat him with their fists and cursed him and that when he sought to resist them Leland Williams pulled a pistol and pointed it.

Leland Williams admits striking Attorney Wood, but denies that his brother took part in the fight. He also denies displaying the pistol.

The trouble started in the City Court when Deputy Leland Williams reproved Attorney Wood for testifying a negro, who had been acquitted, that he could depart. The deputy contended that the negro could not leave until the Sheriff's officers said so.

Attorney Wood declared that no Deputy Sheriff could give him orders, and a lively exchange of words followed. The fight took place across the street from the courthouse.

Mr. Wood is vice president of the Macon Bar Association.

Attempts Suicide as His Wife Is Dying

Macon Husband Grows Despondent When He Is Unable to Care Properly for Invalid.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Despondent because he lacked funds to properly provide for his dying wife, William J. Bettis, formerly in the transfer business, attempted suicide by drinking laudanum and now is in a critical condition at the Macon Hospital.

Mrs. Bettis is a victim of pellagra and is in the last stages of the malady.

After being revived at the hospital Bettis protested against the attention of the physicians. "I don't want to live if my wife is going to die," he said.

Macon Prepares For City Election

New Executive Committee To Be Named at Mass Meeting Next Thursday Evening.

MACON, Aug. 9.—The citizens of Macon will name a new City Executive Committee at a mass meeting to be held next Thursday night at the city auditorium. This virtually will open the active campaign for Mayor.

The present committee, W. D. Nottingham, chairman, will retire from office, having served for three years, a year longer than the term for which they were elected.

The committee will designate the date for the municipal election and will control its operation.

Alfalfa Growers Will Meet in Macon

Loring Brown Calls Meeting of State Association of Farmers for October 25.

MACON, Aug. 9.—There will be an organization meeting of the Georgia Alfalfa Growers' Association in Macon on Saturday, October 25, during the State Fair, one having been called by Loring Brown, of Smyrna, who is one of the most active workers in the alfalfa movement. It is proposed for the alfalfa growers to make exhibits at the fair, and the fair association will give liberal premiums, consisting of Holstein and Jersey cattle, Tamsworth and Duroc swine, and poultry. This will be the first alfalfa exhibit ever made in this State.

Waltz and Swo-Step Enough for Cordele

Chaperones Put Ban on Hugs, Tangos, Trots and Other New Steps.

CORDELE, Aug. 9.—The bunny hug, tango, turkey trot and other modern dances are entirely too immodest in the opinion of the fair sex of Cordele who are accustomed to the waxed floors. Like the silt skirt, such dances will probably not come in popular favor at any early time in this city.

Chaperons at local balls recently have positively forbidden the new dances, and the young folk, no matter how ardently, but perhaps secretly, they may desire to introduce them, must let the waltz and two-step still suffice.

AUGUSTA DIGEST SHOWS $1,000,000 TAX INCREASE

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—The county tax digest for 1913 has been completed and shows an increase of over $1,000,000 over 1912. Tax Receiver Steed has been extremely busy the past few weeks getting the digest ready. It shows, among other things, that negroes own nearly $1,500,000 worth of property in this county.

The digest for 1913 amounts to approximately $29,500,000.

Bibb Commissioners At Last Pay Voucher

Body Had Held Up Account, as It Questioned Grand Jury's Authority.

MACON, Aug. 9.—The County Commissioners to-day decided to pay the bill of $1,500 made by R. W. Jemison, a public accountant, for auditing the books of three of the county offices, pursuant to a contract with the Grand Jury.

For more than six weeks the Commissioners have refused to pay this bill, notwithstanding that it was ordered by two grand juries and approved by Judge Mathews. They took the position that grand juries had no legal right to make contracts, and especially contracts that would bind the Commissioners.

After a long discussion this morning it was finally decided, on a divided vote, to pay the voucher. Jemison claimed to have worked 100 days on the books. The Commissioners contended that he only worked 15 days.

Jury to Pass on A Bankruptcy Suit

Judge Speer 'Washes Hands' of Beach Manufacturing Company Case—Newman to Preside.

MACON, Aug. 9.—The petition of creditors to put the Beach Manufacturing Company, of Appling County, a half-million dollar company, in bankruptcy, will be heard before Judge Newman, of Atlanta, in the United States Court at Savannah on September 15. The case will be tried before a jury, a demand for jury trial having been made by the company. This is the first demand of that kind ever entered on the records of the court for this district, it being the custom to have the judge try bankruptcy matters.

Judge Speer requested Judge Newman to preside, stating that he would "wash his hands of the case" when the claim was made that he was disqualified because his son-in-law, A. H. Heyward, Jr., is one of the attorneys for the petitioning creditors. The petitioning creditors have claims that aggregate several thousand dollars.

Augusta Rejoicing At New Ballot Bill

Secrecy Enforced by Garlington Measure Expected to Stop Many Prevalent Abuses.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—The passage of the secret ballot bill by the Senate Friday was cheering news to Augustans. The bill was introduced in the House early during the present session by Representative Garlington.

The bill insures the secret ballot in all general and special elections in Augusta in the future. Of course, under the white primary system the secret ballot is not used, but in the general elections here the open ballot is the method.

Mayor Hayne was elected in December by the open ballot after his adherents had refused to allow him to enter the primary.

LATE REGISTRATION FOR LABORERS TO QUALIFY

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Beginning on Thursday, the registration books for the auditorium bond election will be kept open until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, until they are finally closed on August 15. An order to this effect has been issued by Mayor Richard J. Davant.

The request that the books be kept open until a late hour in the afternoon came from the Chamber of Commerce in order that working men might have a better opportunity of registering. Heretofore they have been closed at 2 o'clock each day.

FORT SCREVEN BAND TO PLAY FOR SAVANNAHANS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Arrangements have been made for public concerts Monday and Thursday evenings each week by the band at Fort Screven.

Because of objections raised by the Musicians' union, the Fort Screven band has been prevented from playing at Tybee this summer, previous similar objections not having been effective. This year the band was permitted to give only a few concerts at the pavilions.

JUDGE HENRY C. HAMMOND, of Superior Court at Augusta, who says that a dog is not a good dog unless it is ugly, and who has the same views about umbrellas. When he went on the bench years ago he affected an ugly Airdale terrier and a large ungainly, green sunshade. The terrier died and he got another, but he still has the original "shade." "Rags" is said to be one of the finest Airdale pups in the country.

The Judge, the dog and the umbrella are inseparable companions.

Harvard Negro Held As Pension Swindler

Secret Service Men Locate Him in Sparta and Arrest in Macon Follows.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Herman Watson Grant, a negro graduate of the Harvard School of Medicine, and also the graduate of a school of pharmacy and a law school in Washington, has been arrested here for the authorities in Alexandria, Va., where he is wanted on a charge of embezzlement. There is an indictment, found in the United States Court against him for stealing from the Pension Bureau where he practiced in the claim department.

Grant jumped bond in Norfolk and Indianapolis, where he was arrested after twice failing to appear for trial in Alexandria. Secret service men located him in Sparta by means of a letter which he wrote to a relative in Augusta. He was conducting a drug store in Sparta.

$57,357 Increase in Tift County Returns

Tax Receiver Fletcher Finds 6,000 Acres of Land Not on the Books.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 9.—Tift County tax returns for the present year show an increase of $57,357 over the returns of last year. Figures were compiled by Tax Receiver George W. Fletcher. Three districts, Chula, Omega and Eldorado, show increases, while five, Tifton, Tyty, Brookfield, Brighton and Dosia, show a decrease.

An interesting fact concerning the returns was that nearly 6,000 acres of unreturned land were found by the tax receiver and placed upon the books. This in part accounts for the increase in returns. The increase in 1912 was $15,945.

SAVANNAH WIVES SUE BROTHERS FOR DIVORCE

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Alleging cruel treatment and statutory causes, Mrs. Frances Zipperer has filed suit for divorce against Robert Zipperer in the Superior Court of Chatham County. This is the second divorce petition filed by a Mrs. Zipperer in two weeks. Mrs. Aline Zipperer, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Frances Zipperer, filed the other.

Wants Civil Service For Public Works

Triennial Shake-up in Augusta Discourages Efficient Men, Says Commissioner.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Nisbet Wingfield, Commissioner of Public Works at Augusta, has come out in favor of the civil service plan for the employees of the public works department.

Now that the policemen and firemen are to be removed from politics, Mr. Wingfield thinks that the city should go a step further and throw the mantle of protection over efficient employees of the waterworks and other departments.

"The public works department receives a shake-up triennially, just as every other department in the city, for a new Mayor gets in every three years and off go the heads of those who happened to vote against him.

Mr. Wingfield argues that Augusta wants just as competent men to look after the water supply as to patrol her streets or fight her fires.

Albany Bankers Ask Part of $50,000,000

Want Government Money to Aid in Moving Southwest Georgia Cotton Crop.

ALBANY, Aug. 9.—That the Albany banks should receive a portion of the $50,000,000 Government money that is to be placed for the marketing of cotton in the South is the general feeling among Albany bankers. Two banks here are United States depositories and are called upon to furnish money for the marketing of cotton several weeks earlier than the banks in Macon, Atlanta and Savannah.

J. S. Davis, vice president of the Citizens First National Bank, has requested L. P. Hillyer, president of the Georgia Bankers' Association, to make a personal appeal to the proper authorities in Washington for a portion of this money to be used in Southwest Georgia.

CONFESSES TO SLAYING WHEN REFUSED PARDON

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Frank Collier, a negro whose application for pardon was refused by the Prison Commission in Atlanta, to-day broke down and made a complete confession of his responsibility in the murder of Lewis Robinson, another negro, pleading only that Robinson was attempting to cut him with a knife. Collier has heretofore maintained innocence.

AUGUSTA'S FAIR THIS FALL TO BE GREATER SHOW

Poultry and Live Stock Exhibits Will Again Be Feature of Annual Exposition.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Secretary Frank E. Beane, of the Georgia-Carolina Fair Association, announces that the fall fair at Augusta will be undertaken this year on a far more extensive scale than ever before. The fair will begin November 5 and continue through November 15.

It is expected that at least six of the farmers' clubs of the Savannah River Valley will have exhibits. Those announcing their intention of exhibiting are the Richmond County Agricultural Society, the Beech Island Club, the Schultz Hill Club, the Meriwether Club, the Clark's Hill Agricultural Club, the Aiken Club, and there will also be others. The clubs that win are awarded cash prizes of such amounts as to make competing worth while, and there is always lively competition.

The poultry exhibit by the Augusta Poultry Association is expected to be a big feature, as usual, and more than 2,000 birds are to be on exhibition. From all parts of this section and from a distance birds will be sent here for display, and handsome prizes are given the winners.

The live stock feature, which was such a big attraction at the last fair, will again be splendid. Last year was the first year that a great deal of attention was paid to the live stock display, and it improved the fair fully 50 per cent.

There will be cows, horses, hogs, goats and sheep of the best quality here.

There will be a better midway than ever before and Secretary Beane has already booked a great number of high class shows. He says that this year the Midway will be located between the main fair building and the live stock building, which is far more convenient than the arrangement in the past. The brass band this year is to be a splendid one. It is a band which was organized just prior to the Jamestown Exposition, and it played there and has played every week since that time.

Augusta W. C. T. U. Is On Trail of Saloons

Police Committee of City Council Refuses to Discuss Report It Has Prepared.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Secrecy is the word with regard to the action of the police committee here yesterday on the matter of enforcing the prohibition law. The City Council referred the matter of closing the saloons to the police committee. This committee had a meeting and the members refuse to discuss their report, although they admit having prepared one.

A few weeks ago Mrs. Mary Harris Armor and a large number of members of the Augusta W. C. T. U. appeared before the council and pleaded for the closing of the saloons. Nothing was done at this meeting and at a meeting held Monday night council was asked what it would do about the matter. A letter was read at that time from Mrs. A. M. Verdery, president of the local W. C. T. U., asking council to state in plain terms what action it would take. The matter was referred to the police committee.

Council has granted licenses to nearly 100 saloons at $500 each, and although there was no expressed agreement, still it was tacitly understood that they were to be allowed to sell liquor without molestation.

The company will operate the exchanges in Dublin, Jeffersonville, Dudley, Irwinton, McIntyre, Toomsboro and Cary. Later the service will be extended to Macon, where it is proposed to make a cut of 50 per cent in the prevailing rates.

GIVES UP $1,200 OFFICE TO SEEK ONE PAYING $300

MACON, Aug. 9.—The most interesting political development of recent months in Macon is the announcement that W. H. Fetner, chairman of the Water Board, at a salary of $1,200, will resign that office and run for Council on Bridges Smith's ticket. Aldermen receive $300 per year.

Mr. Fetner was formerly in Council, but resigned two and a half years ago to run for the Water Board, to which he was elected, leading nine candidates.

It is said that it is the plan of the Administration party to run Mr. Fetner for Mayor two years hence, and for that reason his presence in Council was deemed desirable, so that he will stay more conspicuously in the public eye.

RANCOR OF WAR BASIS OF SUIT JUST DECIDED

Heirs of Seaborn Jones Win Long Fight for Large Tract of Land in Jenkins County.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—By a recent decision of the Supreme Court of Georgia the Chew family, prominent people of Eastern Georgia, have recovered 1,200 acres of rich farming land left by their grandfather, the late Seaborn A. Jones, and worth approximately $40,000. The land is located in Jenkins County, near Millen.

Before the Civil War Seaborn A. Jones was one of the wealthiest in this section and was a foremost citizen of Burke County and Waynesboro. Jones married a Northern woman and from this union there were two boys and two girls. When he made his will shortly after the Civil War his heart was heavy and his hatred of the North was intense because of the defeat of the Southern arms.

Forbids Northern Residence.

He stipulated that if his wife should carry his children into the North to live, or if they remained on a visit above Mason and Dixon's line for more than three months at a time, the mother should no longer be guardian for the children.

One of the daughters, Mary, was wooed and won by William H. Chew. The property of the late Seaborn A. Jones was divided equally among his four children and Mrs. Chew decided that she wanted her husband as her trustee instead of the trustee her father had provided under the will.

Chew received an order from the court to be trustee for his wife. To the Chews were born three children, Benjamin A., Hull S. and Ruth.

The property had been left by Seaborn Jones to certain trustees for his daughters, which they were to hold in trust for their use during their lives and at their deaths to their children in fee simple.

William H. Chew sold the land to a Baltimore concern that in turn sold it to W. O. Wadley and thus it remained until the death of Mrs. Mary Jones Chew in 1906, when action was begun by her children to recover the land which their grandfather had intended for them to have.

Sale Declared Illegal.

The suit has been in the courts ever since. It was won by the Chew heirs in the Superior Court of Jenkins County and has been won in the Supreme Court.

Wadley simply purchased land from William H. Chew which Chew had no right to sell and the sale was declared to be illegal despite the fact that Judge Gibeon, in chambers at Augusta in March, 1873, passed an order authorizing the sale.

The courts have held that William H. Chew has the right to sell only a life interest in the estate owned by his wife and he was not entitled to sell the realty because it was left to the mother in trust to be held for her children and to be awarded to them in fee simple.

The case created much interest in this section. Pierce Brothers, W. K. Miller and Judge Horace M. Holder represented the Chew heirs, and Judge A. L. Miller, of Macon, represented Wadley.

Augusta's Police To Be Governed By Civil Service

Many Burglaries and Factional Fighting Cause Change in Method of Administration.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Beginning the first of next January the policemen and firemen of Augusta will be under the control of a civil service board.

Just now the department is under fire because of the many burglaries in the city and also because of the refusal of the head of the department to enforce the prohibition law. The civil service board will take the place of the present commission. All of the present members of the force will be retained without examination, but there will be an examination in case of promotion to sergeant's or lieutenant's places.

Under the civil service plan the men are prohibited from taking an active part in politics. It is specifically stated in the act, however, that no policeman or fireman shall be appointed, reduced or removed because of his political beliefs.

City Council on the first Monday in September next will choose a board of civil service commissioners, each to have a term of five years. There will be five members of the board.

The examination will be purely on a competitive basis, the applicants shall be between 21 and 36 years of age and the competitors shall be admitted to the department in the order of their standing in the examinations.

Richmond County to Quit Building Roads

Policy Henceforth Will Be to Keep Highways Already Constructed in Better Shape.

AUGUSTA, Aug. 9.—Richmond County is to quit building roads. This was decided at a meeting of the board of commissioners last week. This county now has hundreds of miles of the finest roads in Georgia and there are many more miles of roads built by the county that are not so good.

The policy of the commissioners of roads and revenues in the future will be to have the roads already built better cared for and stop building more.

Roads go out of Augusta into practically every section of the county except one, down the Savannah River valley into the rich alluvial lands of the hay farmers.

Middlebrooks, the county farm demonstrator, and the Bibb County Agricultural Society. At a meeting this morning of the society enough farmers pledged themselves to insure the cultivation of at least the thousand acres in the winter feed crops. Mayor John T. Moore's phenomenal success with alfalfa has encouraged the farmers in this section to take an interest in the crop.

MACON GREETS JUNIOR ORDER OF MECHANICS

Benjamin J. Symons of Savannah Will Probably Be Chosen to Head the Council.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Large delegations from all councils of the Junior Order United American Mechanics in Georgia will attend the State convention of the order to be held in Macon Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at which convention Benjamin J. Symons, of Savannah, will be elected State councilor.

Symons will succeed Judge Walter W. Shappard, the present State councilor, who is also a member of one of the Savannah councils. That two Savannah members of the order should successively hold the highest office in the order in the State is thought to be a high compliment to the personnel of the Savannah organization.

The convention, which is held every two years, will convene in Odd Fellows' Hall.

At this convention it is thought that John Stofer, of Savannah, will be indorsed for the position of national councilor. At the last national convention, which was held in June at Fabyans, N. H., Stofer was elected national council warden, and his friends think he is eminently qualified to fill the higher office.

At present the officers of the State council are Judge Walter W. Shappard, of Claxton and Savannah, State councilor; Benjamin S. Symons, of Savannah, State vice councilor; T. D. Ridley, of Macon, junior past State councilor; J. E. Lovelace, of Atlanta, State secretary; O. H. Puckett, of Atlanta, State treasurer; A. B. Coogler, of Riverside, State conductor; John W. PELLAGRA TO BE MAIN THEME AT DOCTORS' MEET

Eighth District Physicians Will Hold an Interesting Session at Elberton.

ELBERTON, Aug. 9.—Pellagra will be a special theme of a series of papers to be read by some of the leading physicians of this section when the Eighth District Medical Association holds its annual meeting in Elberton August 20.

Over several years past the observations and notes of these experts have run, and the papers are, therefore, of greater interest than any other—with the men who made the observations giving their personal experiences with cases in which the patients are well known to many of the members of the association.

Elberton is planning for the entertainment of the visitors and promises splendid social features. There will be practically the entire Clarke County Medical Society in attendance.

The officers of the association of the district are: Dr. W. T. Davis, of Covington, president; Dr. C. C. King, of White Plains, vice president; Dr. Edward M. Coleman, of Athens, secretary and treasurer; and Dr. I. H. Goss, of Athens, district counselor of the State Medical Association.

Grandchildren of Confederate Chieftain to Take Part in the Ceremonies.

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 9.—Arrangements are being made by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Longstreet Chapter, for the unveiling of the monument to Colonel C. C. Sanders on the postoffice lot. The memorial was erected several months ago with funds raised by the children of the Confederacy. Colonel Sanders was one of the most beloved men in this entire section.

The life-size statue, in sitting position, was made in Italy and has just arrived. The monument is one of the most beautiful in the State, with marble columns and fountains. Six little grandchildren of Colonel Sanders will likely lift the veil.

White Way Proposed On Brunswick Street

Landowners and Merchants to Form Stock Company and Install Lighting System.

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 9.—The efforts made the past week to put in a white way along Newcastle street no doubt will culminate in this improvement being made in the near future.

It is the intention of those working for the white way to form a stock company composed of the landowners and merchants along the street, who will be called upon to take an amount of stock on the basis of the frontage of their buildings. The movement has met with considerable encouragement, and it is now considered a certainty that the principal business street of the city will take on this improvement in the next two months.

Cement foundations will be built under the buildings at the Turtle River docks, and other improvements will be made on the other docks of the company in the city.

It is the purpose of the company to rebuild its present facilities and put them in the best of condition so as to be able to handle the increased traffic which will come through Brunswick owing to the changes in the naval stores business.

Pleasure Tours Ends With News of Death

Mother of Dublin Lad Killed by Lightning With Gay Party in New York.

DUBLIN, Aug. 9.—Mrs. H. M. Stanley, mother of John Stanley, the 13-year-old son of the State Commissioner of Commerce and Labor, who was killed by lightning at Dublin Thursday, was in New York with her daughter at the time the accident occurred. Mrs. Stanley and daughter were members of a party organized by the Rev. L. J. Ballard, pastor of the Albany Methodist Church, to take an extensive pleasure trip.

The party left the first of the month. Besides Mrs. Ballard, it was composed of the following: Mrs. Ballard, Miss Ray Ballard, Master Lee Ballard and Miss Catharine Muse of this city; Mrs. J. E. Smith and daughter, of Dublin, who joined the party at Macon, and Mrs. H. M. Stanley and daughter, of Decatur, who joined them at Atlanta.

The party went to New York by way of Chattanooga, Cincinnati, Detroit, Buffalo, Niagara Falls and Montreal, Canada.

The party was at the Marlborough Hotel, New York, when the pleasures were sadly broken into by the news of Mrs. Stanley's little boy's sudden death at Dublin. The party had planned to visit Philadelphia, going thence to Washington and then down the Potomac to Norfolk and home by rail, arriving home about August 20.

Killing of Bachelor Mystifies Officers

Despite Strong Alibi, Tom Bullard Is Held for Death of Farmer Mack Spain.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Whether or not Mack Spain, the eccentric bachelor farmer of Mexico, a small place west of Waycross, was really murdered and robbed or committed suicide in a fit of despondency, is a question that has arisen in view of the alibi offered by Tom Bullard at the preliminary hearing given him this week, but in spite of which he was bound over to the fall term of Superior Court.

Bullard asked a friend to kill Spain and get all his money, but claims the statebent was made merely as a joke. Spain's body was found in a small pond 2 miles from his home three weeks after his disappearance. Bullard himself found the body, which fact argued in his favor, although the testimony of witnesses was to the effect that no one could have seen the body in the pond without having had previous knowledge of its whereabouts.

A careful search has so far failed to find any of the money the farmer had with him and at his home.

The other was found within a mile of Rock Church. It was of 40-gallon capacity.

According to the information received by Mr. Camp, the first still belonged to Mitchell Rhodes and the second to S. P. West. He will have warrants issued for the arrest of these two.

Expert Says Rome Section Offers Advantages Over New York Studios and California Skies.

ROME, Aug. 9.—According to Charles M. Seay, this part of the State is ideal for taking moving pictures. Recently Mr. Seay was in Rome with a company of photo players and film-makers.

He declares that the Georgia sunlight brings out with remarkable clearness and exactness every detail of the motion pictures. Heretofore most of the moving picture studios have been located in California and in New York. Mr. Seay, who is a native of Rome, is now confident that Georgia is the best place for the work in which he is engaged.

Too Much Money to Spend in Waycross

City's Income More Than Pays All Expenses—Tax Rate To Be Cut Down.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—With a $780 appropriation for twelve months, the committee on parks and cemeteries of Waycross City Council expended only $1.30, according to the financial statement for the first six months of the year just issued.

Practically every department of the city is keeping within its budget, and will end the year with a balance to its credit. The engineering department, with $14,464 available, has spent only $6,911.96. Out of an appropriation of $10,280 the fire department has spent but $3,855.38.

The revised estimate of income places the total for 1913 at $155,442.43. The estimate when the year's appropriations were made was $151,000. The expected increase will therefore leave the city a neat balance to start 1914 with.

In addition to these expenditures the city is spending $100,000 in permanent improvements, this money coming from a bond issue voted last year.

Griffin Rector Is Ptomaine Victim

Rev. Clayton Earle Wheat Dangerously Ill From Food Eaten in Atlanta Restaurant.

GRIFFIN, GA., Aug. 9.—Sorrow prevails here this afternoon over the sudden illness of the Rev. Clayton Earle Wheat, rector of St. George Episcopal Church, who is to-day seriously ill with ptomaine poisoning contracted from food eaten in an Atlanta restaurant yesterday afternoon.

The Rev. Mr. Wheat is greatly beloved in Griffin and his illness is all the more distressing because of his recent decision to leave here for a parish in Hingham, Mass. Hundreds of citizens of Griffin in a written request petitioned him to recall his decision and remain here.

It was in preparation for his departure that he went to Atlanta yesterday with his mother, Mrs. Cornette Wheat, to arrange some important business affairs and while there ate the food that resulted in his poisoning. At this time both of them are under the immediate care of physicians and nurses and grave fears are felt for them.

$5,498 Suit Brought For Rescuing Dredge

Owners of Tug Columbia Dragged the Maryland Out of Beaufort Harbor.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Claiming $5,498.50 damages and salvage, a libel has been filed in the United States Court by R. S. Salas and F. H. Meader against the dredge Maryland.

Salas, as chief owner and president of the Standard Fuel and Supply Company, and Meader, as master of the tugboat Columbia, claim this sum of money for time, labor and material expended by the tug in hauling the dredge in and out of the harbor at Beaufort, S. C., and claim $3,500 of this amount for the work of salvage or rescue done by the tug.

The dredge, which is said in the libel to be worth $50,000, was towed out of New York harbor on May 27 last by the tug under contract between the Home Dredging Company and the Standard Fuel and Supply Company, the latter being the owners of the tug. The contract price for taking the dredge from New York to Savannah was $1,500.

The dredge Maryland is now in the Savannah River. The libel will be tried at the coming term of the United States Court.

The libel recites a full account of the rescue of the dredge on her way down the coast.

SENTENCE OF YEAR FOR CONVICTED GUN TOTERS

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Judge John C. McDonald has shown that he proposes to stick to the twelve-month sentence for persons found guilty of carrying concealed weapons. Clifford Johnson, a negro, is the latest to find that it means a year's job with the county chaingang to carry a gun. Hardly a case of this kind has been disposed of in City Court without the twelve-month sentence being imposed, and the gun-toting habit is said to be declining rapidly as a result.

WAYCROSS PAVING LAWS HIT ATLANTIC COAST LINE

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Because its tracks pierce the heart of Waycross and are paralleled in almost every instance by some of the main streets, the Atlantic Coast Line is being put to heavy expense by the sidewalk and street paving campaign. The latest paving ordinance, covering Plant avenue from Butler street to the city limits, will cause the Coast Line to pay a third of the cost for the entire distance, the avenue running along the road's right of way. The other portion of Plant that is paved is of brick and the Coast Line paid a third of that.

Of course Athens would like to see the Experiment Station moved here in connection with the State College of Agriculture and most people believe it would be of better service to the State, but no effort will be made to bring the station here.

Leckie broke away and they secured nothing from him. He was not injured. The negroes say they formerly lived in Forsyth County.

'SHAKING ROCK' ONE OF STATE'S UNIQUE FREAKS

Slight Wind Makes Huge Bowlder in Oglethorpe County Swing Gently as Baby's Crib.

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 9.—One of the natural curiosities of Georgia is to be found in Oglethorpe County half a mile from the courthouse in Lexington. Hundreds have visited Lexington for the sole purpose of seeing the "shaking rock."

In the immediate vicinity of the rock there are many huge granite bowlders. From points near by a number of pieces of granite have been obtained for monuments and buildings. The base to a large shaft erected at Chattanooga was hauled from the quarry here by a special train. Close to "shaking rock" the grounds are beautiful for picnics and dinner parties, and many from Lexington, Athens and other places take advantage of the grounds for occasions of this nature.

"Shaking rock" weighs about twenty tons. It is poised on a triangular base upon another large rock. With several persons seated upon its summit, the mammoth piece of stone can be moved by a slight push. A pressure of this sort sets it moving back and forth a distance of two or three inches.

For 50 years it has been thus standing, and until a few years ago, when the point at the base had become worn, the rock would move backward and forward twice this distance. A wind a little stronger than the ordinary summer zephyr blowing upon the rock from a certain angle would set it to rocking.

The rock is upon the property of D. W. H. Reynolds, on the estate formerly owned by Governor George R. Gilmer. The people of Lexington take a pride in showing the peculiar freak of nature.

Land Suit Ends as Case Is Withdrawn

WIFE QUITTER NOW CHARGED WITH BIGAMY

Search Is Made for Harry Smith, Accused of Having Family in Cincinnati, Ohio.

DURHAM, N. C., Aug. 9.—One of the greatest sensations that ever was known in this city is now drawing to a close, as Harry A. Smith, is charged wife abandonment, is now confronted with a charge of bigamy.

Several days ago Smith was arrested in Rome, Ga., charged with abandoning his wife, formerly Miss Rosalind Wright, who is a member of a prominent family of this city. He was brought back to the city to be tried, and when the time for the case to be completed came a peaceful settlement was made by the parties concerned. Smith promised to take care of his wife and left this city with her for Richmond, Va.

Hardly had the couple left Durham before a message was received here from Cincinnati stating that Smith, up until a few weeks past, had been an employee of a firm there.

After being discharged he left Cincinnati, supposedly in search of another position.

A short while afterward he reached this city and became acquainted with Miss Rosalind Wright. A quiet marriage followed and the couple went on an extended honeymoon, the bride's money being used.

The message from Cincinnati states that Smith has a wife living there and a 9-month-old boy named Banard. Another message unsigned was received by the Chief of Police of Durham, stating that Smith had made a recent visit to Atlanta, and that while there he became engaged to a young woman. No names were were given in the message.

A search is now being made for Smith, who is supposed to be in Richmond, Va., with his Durham wife. The girl's friends here are making every effort to locate the couple.

Griffin Is Fighting To Hold to Station

Delegations Are Sent to Capital to Protest Against Removal to South Georgia.

GRIFFIN, Aug. 9.—The citizens of Griffin and this section have not been unaware of the efforts to take from them the State Experiment Station as evidence of their alertness during the present disturbance over the effort to move it to South Georgia.

Griffin sent from day to day as many as twenty men to Atlanta to appear before the legislative committees and present the claim of Griffin in the matter. The citizens of this county years ago generously gave to the State the land to establish the station and it would manifestly be unjust and unfair now to take the station from Griffin.

It may be taken for granted that Griffin and Spalding County citizens are ready for a good stiff fight over the matter before ever consent will be gained for the station to be moved.

OIL LETTERS KILLED HIM POLITICALLY, SAYS FORAKER

Exposes by William Randolph Hearst Responsible for Downfall, Declares Former Senator Before Senate Lobby Inquiry.

Official of National Manufacturers' Association Writes Democratic Simplicity Will Mean Union Label on U.S. Stationery.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Former Senator Foraker admitted to the Senate Lobby Committee to-day publication by William Randolph Hearst of the famous Standard Oil letters killed Foraker's chances for re-election to the Senate in 1908.

After identifying a letter received from Martin M. Mitchell, the confessed ex-lobbyist, making a report of political activities in Ohio in Foraker's behalf, the former Senator said:

"It was the morning of the day Mr. Hearst's disclosure was made public. An attack had been made on me by Mr. Hearst which destroyed my chances of election, saying I had acted as counsel for the Standard Oil Company. This had created a sentiment in our State very prejudicial to me. I continued as a candidate in the campaign only because to retire from it after I had become a candidate would look like an admission that there was some justification for the attack, whereas there was not any."

Senator Foraker said Muhall, whom he had known thirty years, greatly overestimated his own importance.

No Aid From N. A. M.

Foraker said he had never received aid from the National Association of Manufacturers and while he received a fee of $500 for the part he played in the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1896, he was not in the employ of either David Lamar or Edward Lauterbach in an injunction case against the Union Pacific in 1903.

The House Investigating Committee opened its probe with introduction of correspondence showing the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers in fighting labor legislation in Congress and various attempts to have "conservative" men named as members of House committees.

Discussing the recent sundry civil bill, with its provision prohibiting the expenditure of certain funds for the prosecution of farmers and labor unions under the Sherman law, James A. Emery, counsel of the N. A. M., wrote to President John Kirby, Jr., of the association, on March 7, 1913, after President Taft had vetoed the bill:

"I want to emphasize as hard as I can the importance of lining up for a tremendous demonstration when this bill reaches President Wilson, as it undoubtedly will, with the same provision in it. You will then have an early opportunity to decide whether the glittering Democratic motto, 'Equal right for all and special privilege for none,' means anything or whether the Administration has surrendered completely or will merely turn over the Department of Labor.

Objection to Secretary Wilson.

"I note, by the way, your reference to a letter from C. W. Post on the question of a protest over the appointment of Wilson (Secretary of Labor). A protest on this subject is a mere waste of breath, and on the whole I am inclined to think the whole purpose of this department will be shown up quicker with the unions in control of it than in any other way. Gompers will run it characteristically with a high hand, and if the whole thing does not smell to Heaven within a year I shall be very much astonished.

"By that time Democratic simplicity will probably mean a union label on the White House stationery and the President conferring with the Waiters' Union over the appointment of his steward. At present we have nothing more startling in Jeffersonian simplicity than the news Mrs. Bryan is making a new suit for the Secretary of State, and cakes and ginger ale will be served at the dinner for the British Ambassador. Toothpicks will, of course, be an after dinner course at all Cabinet receptions, and the demand for dress suits will be confined to waiters in the hotels."

In this same letter Emery advised Kirby, "if you have any idea Taft would have vetoed this bill of his own motion, get over it. A list of public men who had 'pie' in this $113,000,000 appropriation bill included many prominent men in both Houses."

Folly of Suffrage Shown by Dresses, Says Mrs. Marshall

Vice President's Wife Believes Women Can Do More Good Correcting Cabarets.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Slashed skirts with the silhouette gown and other freaks of modern fashion are the worst enemies of the newly made voters of Illinois, and the cabaret and the turkey trot are more in need of reform than Chicago's First Ward, in the opinion of Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, who was in Chicago with her husband.

Mrs. Marshall declared frankly that she was opposed to the municipal power recently granted to the women of Illinois. Mrs. Marshall said:

"I have never been a suffragist. To me the fashions of to-day ought to convince any one that a woman is not fit to vote. Some women's dress is not only extreme, it is objectionable. A woman would do more good by correcting the dances in our cafes and cabarets than in running for office.

"The women in the East are not strongly in favor of the ballot, and none of the Cabinet women seems to favor it, with the exception, perhaps, of the President's daughter, Miss Jessie Wilson."

Manuel Pawns His Father's Decorations

Former King of Portugal Unable to Struggle Along on Income of $100,000 a Year.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Despite his allowance of $50,000 a year from King George and at least that sum from private sources, it is learned that former King Manuel, of Portugal, has been forced to pawn the decorations once belonging to his father. One of these decorations, a diamond cross with a large sapphire in the center, is still in the hands of a pawnbroker near Richmond, where Manuel is now staying with his mother, Queen Amelie.

The fortunes of the dethroned monarch will be recouped by his approaching marriage. It is known that he is very extravagant and his mother is none too practical.

The German Emperor has settled the puzzling question of how to treat the exiled monarch's marriage to a German princess. He will allow Prince Eitel Frederick to attend as a special guest, but not as his personal representative.

Callie Hoke Smith Capital Debutante

Make-up of First Democratic "Bud Bouquet" Puzzles Washington's Younger Set.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The make-up of Washington first Democratic debutante bouquet is the question that is agitating the younger set. It is confidently expected that Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, daughter of the Speaker, will be one of the buds, and Miss Frances Moore, the daughter of Clarence R Moore, one of the Titanic heroes, another.

Resident society will furnish two attractive debutantes, who are not only socially prominent, but from Democratic families as well. They are Miss Margaret Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Britton and Miss Beatrice Clover, the youngest daughter of Rear Admiral Clover.

A debutante from the Congressional set will be Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia. Other Congressional buds are the Misses Weaver, Church and Duval.

Dedicates Camp at Pacific Grove, Cal., Which Her Generosity Made Possible.

DEL MONTE, CAL., Aug. 9.—Asilomar, the splendid new conference grounds of the California, Arizona and Nevada Young Women's Christian Association, which occupies 30 acres of ground on the ocean shore near Pacific Grove, was formally dedicated with a beautiful ceremony, including a pageant of 400 girls, typifying association work.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, of San Francisco, whose generous assistance last year and this did much to make a permanent camp possible, gave the dedicatory address and gave the conference grounds the name of Asilomar, which means "retreat."

'Uncle Joe' Shocks Staid 'Down Easters'

Inquires if John Quincy Adams Were Sport, Then Changes the Subject.

QUITMAN, MASS., Aug. 9.—Uncle Joe Cannon, former Speaker of the House of Representatives, who is a visitor here, shocked the natives by casually inquiring if "one of these immortals had not been somewhat of a sport."

He referred to John Quincy Adams, but the shocked expressions and uplifted hands showed him at once that he was treading on dangerous ground, whereat Mr. Cannon quickly changed the subject.

Reporters on local newspapers tried in vain to get Uncle Joe's opinion of present day politics.

WOMAN DEITY CREATED MAN, SAYS TABLET

New Version of Genesis Found in University of Pennsylvania Nippur Collection.

DATE IS FIXED AT 2100 B. C.

Dr. Arno Poebel's Discovery Is Regarded as Oldest Story of Origin of World.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—It was a woman who created mankind, according to a tablet 4,000 years old just deciphered at the Pennsylvania University Museum by Dr. Arno Poebel, who is at work translating the tablets dug up in Nippur some years ago by the museum expeditions.

About 37 years ago George Smith, the English scholar and explorer, brought back from Babylonia the cylinders which gave a Babylonian account of the origin of mankind and much of his early history, and these not only excited great interest but had a profound effect upon the theological teachings. The parallelism between the Babylonian story and that of Genesis developed a new school in theological criticism. But the cylinders of Smith only dated back to the reign of Assurbanipal in the seventh century B. C. The university museum tablet dates back possibly to 2500 B. C., and it is reasonably certain to be no later than the reign of Hamurabi, about 2100 B. C.

Female Deity Created Man.

The new account of the creation and the flood throws much new light on the early ideas of the Babylonians and Sumerians.

The striking novel features of the new tablet are these:

That it was a female deity who created mankind, known as "the blackheaded," from the color of the hair.

That new deities or new characteristics of the gods are discovered in the original document, although they have been hinted at in other ways. The character of the female goddess is now made important from the earliest times and equal with the two male ruler gods. Later tablets speak of these as unimportant.

That the first seven prediluvian cities and the special god of each are discovered.

That the older Babylonian name of the Scriptural Noah is Zingidda.

That deluge ruins of the prediluvian cities were not all destroyed, some not until historic times. There is historic basis to much of the statement in this epic.

Opens With Poem.

Dr. Poebel has prepared a careful literal translation of the tablet. It originally was about seven inches square, but on such a surface the ancients could write in ideographic signs a long epic poem, and that is what this table contained. Like the first chapter of Genesis, the story opens with a great poem on the origin of the heavens as well as of the earth. It appears that Nintu, a female god, created mankind, and she is found lamenting that the other gods seem bent on the destruction of her subjects. She speaks of the human beings as "my creations." It appears that Anu and Enill were the chief gods of power, although they were among seven of equal rank, the first being god of heaven and the second god of earth. Then comes the story of the creation:

"Nintu created the blackheaded," (human race.) * * * "The fields of the ground produced abundance, the cattle and the four-legged beasts of the field artfully they (the gods) called into existence."

Slit Skirts Furnish Mosquito Clan With Choicest Barbecue

Trainload of Winsome Stenographers and Milliners Have to Tramp Through Stegomyia Belt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"All those in favor of slit skirts, please stand up."

Millions of full grown mosquitoes and three or four little fellers were rushing wildly out of their apartment houses on he Flushing Meadows, about 7 o'clock last night, and took part in the most rollicking barbacue ever held in the East.

Right in the middle of the salt grass waste were five cars of a Long Island Railroad train, stalled. The lights were out, men were running up and down shouting orders and Flushing was two miles away. After the train had stood for a few minutes, out of the passenger cars poured the choicest morsels of humanity that Mr. and Mrs. Culex Pungens and the little Pungenses ever saw. There were stenographers, typewriters, cashiers, millinery attaches and buxom matrons. Slit skirts were numerous.

In an endless procession the five hundred and more suburbanites trailed over the ties toward Flushing. There is some style in the mosquito belt and every member of the family seemed to know at once which of the passengers was dressed a la mode. The squeals and slaps of the fair ones as they tried to stop the onslaught sounded like a tattoo.

The procession lasted for more than two hours and when the last stenographer reached home a unanimous vote was taken declaring the mosquito a pest. Of course, there were some men along, but what self-respecting mosquito would bother with them at such a time?

NEGRO FIRM IN ACCUSING FRANK

He Describes Slaying of Mary Phagan

Defense Begins Its Battle for Life

Leo Frank in his seat in the court-room where he is fighting for life.

The prisoner is shown in the unconcerned attitude he assumes most of the time.

Not a move escapes this man's restless eyes, though his face is calm.

Although Conley Admits Some Lying He Sticks to the Main Story Under Terrific Cross-Examination---Heat Causes Suffering in the Court.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

Leo Frank's lawyers, beginning their fight in his defense, directed their case into an attack on the testimony of the State's witnesses. Most of the testimony they produced was in contradiction to the circumstantial evidence brought to bear by the prosecution, and in denial of many statements already made.

The State practically closed its case with the evidence of Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, who declared that he helped Frank dispose of the body of Mary Phagan, the girl whom he swore Frank killed. The testimony of the few State witnesses who followed the negro was much of an anti-climax, coming as it did after a story that was thrilling in the extreme.

C. B. Dalton, who said he had been with Frank in several escapades in which girls were concerned, and Dr. H. F. Harris, of the State Board of Health, who testified as to the condition of Mary Phagan's body, were the important witnesses who followed Conley for the State.

Negro Endures Ordeal.

But Conley's testimony embodied the prosecution's strength. The negro, a man of the most common African type, burly, thick-lipped, anthropoidal, sat for three days in the witnesse's chair, and endured the most exacting ordeal ever forced upon a witness in a court of law. The cross-examination of Luther Rosser and Reuben Arnold, lawyers for the defense, was savage and pitiless at times. The negro, in spite of an apparent lack of intelligence and brainforce, showed the strain. He sat unmoved of body, but perspiration beaded his face. The examination told on him.

But he stuck persistently to the main part of his story. Coolly, calmly, almost nonchalantly, he admitted that he had lied time and again in his testimony, that he had not told the truth in making affidavits damaging to Frank during the investigations preliminary to the trial. But his significant accusations against the white man, his former "boss," he maintained were true.

Of his testimony that remained unshaken when he finally was discharged Wednesday afternoon, these facts were prominent:

On the morning of April 26, at Frank's behest, he had taken his station at the door of the National Pencil Company building, to watch.

Frank was upstairs in his office, at the front of the building.

Mary Phagan entered at his door and went upstairs.

He heard footsteps as if someone walked from the front of the building to the rear, upstairs.

Soon after he was summoned by Frank, who told him that a girl was hurt.

He found Mary Phagan in the lathe room, at the rear of the building, dead.

Together he and Frank bore the body to the cellar.

With numerous details the negro embellished this story. Time and again Luther Rosser forced the negro to admit that he had lied about this fact or that, but, although coaxed and browbeaten, the negro maintained steadfastly his main charge against Frank.

Words Have Dramatic Force.

He repeated it persistently, with the appearance of earnestness that is common to the ignorant members of his race. He talked and gesticulated in a manner to show that he was indeed illiterate and ignorant. But in the very simplicity of his words and manner there was a dramatic force, particularly when he was telling his story under the direction of the Solicitor General.

"I wrapped up her body like a bundle of dirty clothes," he said. It was one of many of his statements that, told with simple directness, thrilled those that heard.

The prosecution allowed him to tell his story unchecked. But

ADMITS HE'S DECENT IN ANSWERING MARRIAGE AD

YONKERS, Aug. 9.—Reginald P. Shennan, editor of The Rye Courier, already has received one reply to the advertisement inserted in his paper by a "gentlewoman with large tract of land not far from Port Chester," who is seeking "an unselfish, decent, self-supporting man for a husband."

He turned the letter over to the advertiser, whose identity is being guarded carefully. The letter bore a Brooklyn postmark.

AUTOS EMPTY CHURCHES, SAY COUNTRY PREACHERS

MANHATAN, KANS., Aug. 9.—The dwindling of the congregations of country churches, due to the new era of automobiles, which makes it easy for the rural residents to attend services in nearby towns and cities, will be discussed at the Conference of Rural Leaders, July 21 to 25, at the Kansas Agricultural College. Members of the organization declare that Kansas now has about 1,200 abandoned churches in the farming districts.

Jack London Puts Joke on His Appendix

Novelist Tells the Latest on Former Part of Himself and What's Left.

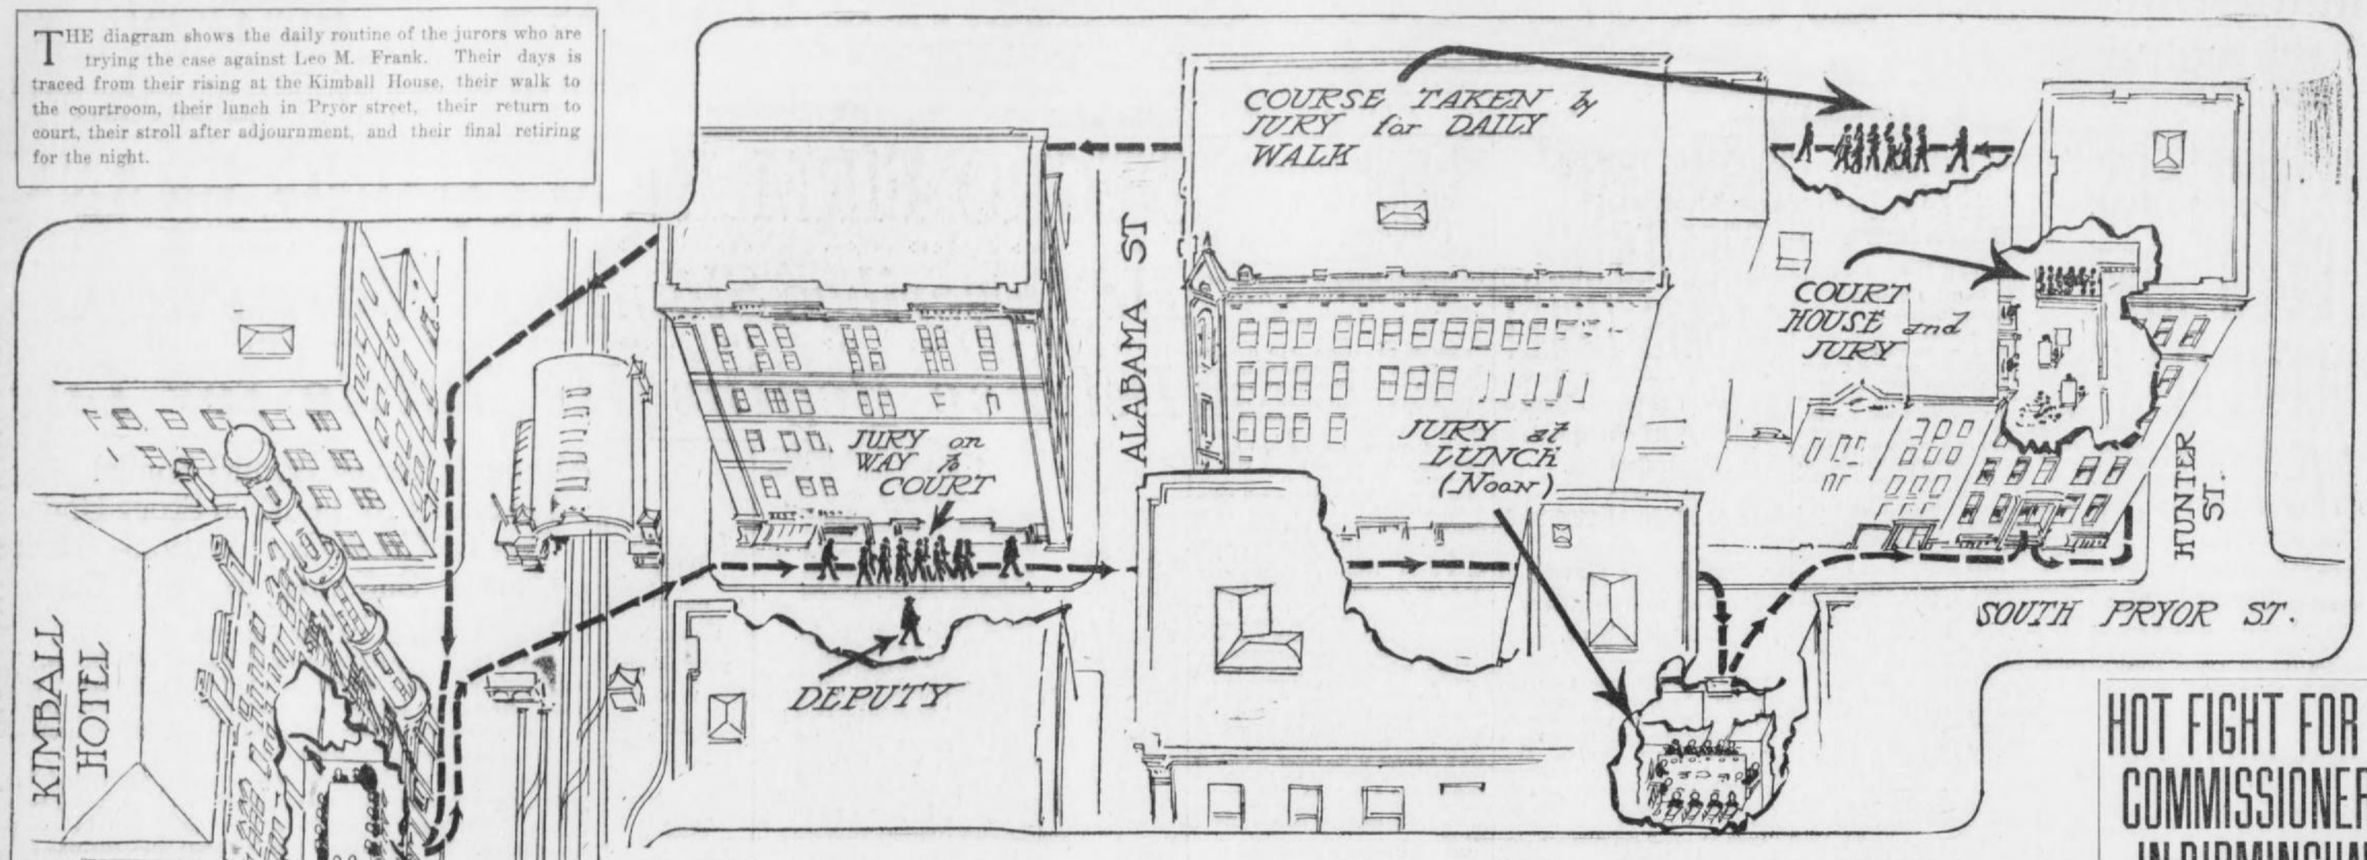
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Here is the latest joke Jack London, the famous author, is telling on himself:

London was operated on recently for appendicitis. After the ordeal the surgeon held up the severed appendix in his fingers for the patient to see. The author looked at it thoughtfully then grinned and said:

"It was a case of all alone in London, wasn't it, doc?"

VISITS OF GIRLS TO FRANK'S FACTORY REVEALED

THE diagram shows the daily routine of the jurors who are trying the case against Leo M. Frank. Their days is traced from their rising at the Kimball House, their walk to the courtroom, their lunch in Pryor street, their return to court, their stroll after adjournment, and their final retiring for the night.



Phagan Trial Makes Eleven "Widows"

But Jurors' Wives Are Peeresses Also

By L. F. WOODRUFF

ELEVEN widows were made in Atlanta in a day without the assistance of the Grim Reaper, a trip to Reno, pallbearers or affinity stories in the newspapers.

And there is but one drop of consolation in their cup. When they were made widows they automatically became peeresses, for which privilege many American girls have caused their fathers large sums of good American money and themselves heartache and their pictures to be printed between the story of the rabbit that chased the boa constrictor and the life narrative of Sophie, the Shop Girl, who in a night became a stage star.

They also had the satisfaction of having their husbands officially proclaimed good men and true, which they may have questioned when the pay envelope was brought home with $10 missing and unaccounted for, just as all wives have questioned.

They'll Be Brides Again.

If there is any balm in it, the widows know that it will not be long before they can doff their weeds and once more don their bridal gowns. Their husbands will return to them just as soon as they have decided whether or not Leo Frank is guilty of the murder of Mary Phagan.

For it is due to the fact that their husbands are jurors that Atlanta had eleven widows made in a day, that eleven peeresses were added to Atlanta's list and that eleven wives had the glory of hearing their husbands called "good" without suspecting there was hidden meaning in the compliment.

The peerage and the official compliment as to character and $2 a day are the emoluments of a juror of Georgia. A juror in the Frank case gets a little more. He gets his keep, a place to sleep, and a deputy sheriff to keep him out of trouble, read his letters, inspect his laundry and keep him company during all his waking hours.

Scant Solace for Widows.

The emoluments are considerable, but how about the widows?

Men must work and women must weep to the tuneful accompaniment of the doleful mourning of the harbor bar is the first thought.

But there is some solace in the lot of the eleven Frank case widows.

Not every woman can know the thrill of widowhood and at the same time have absolute assurance that she is not going to remain in single blessedness the rest of her life.

And then there's no disputing the fact that they are peeresses. A juror is given his coronet when he takes his oath of office. Of course, in a criminal case he is usually paid the doubtful compliment of being termed the peer of a safe cracker, a short change artist, a blind tiger operator, or a gentleman skilled in the art of getting good money on bad paper, but just the same the juror is a peer. And just the same Mrs. Juror is a peeress.

Only One Single Juror.

In the rapid selection of the Frank jury, it was remarkable that but one single man was selected to decide a mystery that has puzzled the master minds of the Atlanta detective bureau for more than three months. The State probably wanted married men, who would sympathize with the mother robbed of a daughter's life. The defense probably wanted married men who would sympathize with the wife of the accused and his mother. Single men are supposed to be as looking in the natural supply of the milk of human kindness as a laughing hyena. The single man on the jury looks like he's married. Probably that's why he was accepted by both sides.

And when they held up their right hands and swore to "well and truly try, etc." without objection to the split infinitive, the eleven "good men and true" were as completely divorced as if the judge had ordered them to pay alimony and had forbidden another marriage in a year's time.

The divorce pro tem. has been absolute. The widows cannot speak with their husbands. Nobody else can for that matter except a court attache.

Deputy Reads All Mail.

Writing them is practically prohibited. Every letter mailed a juror has to be read by a deputy sheriff and properly censored by him before it reaches the eyes of the trial man.

And what wife would like to call her beloved "snooky" and have a deputy sheriff first assimilate the tenderness of the term? What wife would like to write for $8.67 to pay the butcher bill and have a deputy sheriff become thus acquainted with the condition of the family larder and the connubial purse?

She may kiss the clean collar when she sends it to him every day, but what assurance has she that he will not think that the Chinaman has bungled in his work?

She may send him a pair of freshly darned socks, but how does she know that the deputy will not see a mysterious message in the needle work and appropriate the hosiery to his own pedal purposes?

No, there are eleven new widows in Atlanta, but there is no doubt but there are eleven new peeresses. The only trouble is, no one can marry any of them for their titles.

WIFE IS OVERCOME BY CHARGES AGAINST FRANK

the defense, taking him on cross-examination, bridled his gibness with many searching questions. At first the negro was sullen under the examination.

"I disremember," was his usual response to the lawyers' inquiries. Later he was forced from that defense, and admitted that in some of the details he had been mistaken. Then he said he lied.

Conley had told in detail the circumstances of the day, and of his every movement. Later, Lawyer Rosser got him to say that he lied about the time he got up, about the time he left home, about the time he first went to the factory, about the time he bought a flask of whisky, about the time he first met Frank, about the time Frank stayed away from the office, about the time various persons left the factory building, about the previous affidavits he had made incriminating Frank, and about a number of details that had come out.

He Explains His Falsehoods.

"Why didn't you tell the whole truth in your last affidavit, Jim?" asked Mr. Rosser. "You said then that it was the whole truth."

"I didn't want to tell it all at once," replied the negro.

That was his explanation of the many falsehoods; that he didn't want to tell all he knew at once.

The very evident attempt of the defense was to establish with the jury the fact that the negro was not to be believed in the main when he so admittedly had lied in the details.

The negro came on the stand early Monday morning, and during the morning and the early afternoon he told a direct story, with little questioning. Then the defense took him. The cross-examination started early, without apparent point, almost with irrelevancy. Rosser questioned him about his daily actions in the factory, about little incidents and conversations that the negro found it hard to remember. Then, gradually, almost imperceptibly, the force of the lawyer's questions was heightened, until they drifted into a savageness that was powerless, however, to shake the sensational story of the negro.

Heat Is Intense in Court.

The week was a period of acute physical suffering. The heat in the courtroom was intense, and the mental strain which spectators and principals alike underwent was terrific. Dramatic indeed was the story of the negro and of other witnesses. More dramatic, however, was the subtle battle of wits between the lawyers and the witness, and among the lawyers over the witness and his words. Everybody hung breathless on the course of the trial at times.

The strain told. Conley bore up because he was supported by doses of strychnine. Others, without this exhilaration, suffered. Dr. Harris, testifying, collapsed on the witness stand. Mrs. Frank, the prisoner's wife, who was calm and unshaken during the first days of the trial, gave way to the strain when the examination of Conley was at its height, and succumbed to a fit of racking sobs. Reuben Arnold, lawyer for the defense, was overcome by a faint spell, and was forced to ask Judge Roan's permission to argue from his seat. Jurors strained and twisted in their seats, exhausted by the demands on mind and body.

Even the spectators, always eager, always pushing into the courtroom long before the time for the beginning of the trial, were moved. When, after a long period of consideration, Judge Roan denied the request of the defense to eliminate a great part of Conley's testimony, a number of the spectators applauded. Court officials, mentioning this, declared their opinion that it was due largely to the mental excitation under which many of the watchers labored.

The applause was startling, and revealed the temper of the public as unfriendly to Frank. When it came, the jury was not in the courtroom, having withdrawn during the argument of lawyers over the admissibility of Conley's evidence. In spite of the fact that the jurors were absent, however, Lawyer Arnold threatened to move for a mistrial, fearing the effect of the applause on their mental state in event they heard it in the next room.

During the hubbub, in fact, he made the motion, but later withdrew it.

Tells of Girl's Visits.

The testimony to which the defense objected was drawn from the negro in the State's attempt to prove Frank a moral degenerate. Conley told of the visits of girls and women to the factory, and of Frank's association with them in an unusual manner. He named C. B. Dalton as a man who was with Frank on several escapades in the factory.

Over this testimony there was a heated fight, the defense arguing for its inadmissibility, the State sustaining it as legal.

"The testimony is admissible because it indicates the very purpose, motive and intent the defendant had in getting that poor little girl into the metal room. It is admissible as indicating a general practice of course of conduct," said Solicitor Dorsey. "The importance of this evidence, disgusting and abhorrent thought it may be, is going to be made more manifest as the case proceeds."

The Solicitor promised then that witnesses would be called to substantiate what Conley charged regarding Frank's conduct prior to the day of the killing.

Mrs. Frank Overcome.

When the charges were made of practices by Frank, the prisoner's wife was overcome. She hung her head, her face flushed, and, unable longer the endure the situation, she left the courtroom. She walked out with eyes averted, and returned later with the traces on her face of a terrific struggle to be calm. Her eyes were red and her face puffed and swollen, as if she had just braved a storm of tears and sobbing. She resumed her seat, and remained immovable almost with eyes unblinking, during the remainder of the day's session.

The prisoner's mother, also, was perturbed. She moved restlessly in her seat at Conley's testimony, and then rose from her chair. She moved across the courtroom as if unable to control herself, and then returned to take her seat near her son.

All the testimony to which the defense objected had to do with a period before the day of the muder. Conley had said that he often watched at the door while Frank had girls in his office. To this the defense objected, also.

Reuben Arnold argued that it was inadmissible because irrelevant and immaterial, and that it was a violation of the general principle in law that because a man committed a crime before, that crime can not be introduced to show that he had done a different thing of which he might be accused.

Defense Shows Anxiety.

But the testimony was admitted, and the defense's lawyers retired, something of anxiety plain on their faces. The victory for the State was significant.

Conley was called from the stand Wednesday afternoon. He had been in the witness chair for fifteen and one-half hours, during which time he was in the hands of the Solicitor only two hours. The other time had been torture to him.

However, wearied as he was on the stand, he showed plainly that his balance was restored when he came down. He was even cheerful and laughed when he pulled off his coat in the ante-room. He begged for a cigarette and a newspaper.

Dr. H. F. Harris followed Conley on the stand for the State. He reiterated testimony formerly given that Mary Phagan had been killed within an hour after she had eaten dinner. Of this, he said, he was practically certain, because of the evidence borne by undigested bits of cabbage and bread in the girl's stomach.

Dr. Harris was minutely examined by Reuben Arnold, for the defense, who revealed considerable knowledge of the materia medica. However, the testimony he gave was unshaken by the inquisition.

Admits Visiting Factory.

C. B. Dalton followed Dr. Harris. His testimony was to a large extent corroborative of Conley's. He had visited the factory in company with girls, he admitted, while Conley watched at the door, and from his testimony the story of immoral practices in the factory was drawn. He told of visits to the plant with a young woman named Daisy Hopkins.

Detective Rosser took the stand after Dalton, and with his testimony the case of the State was closed, after a formidable chain of circumstantial evidence had been woven about the prisoner.

Witnesses introduced by the State when court opened Friday, and those who followed Friday and Saturday revealed little of direct contradiction or refutation to the case which the State made out.

Mayor Quits Office to Become Collector of Port, but Suffers From Curtailment.

PORT HURON, MICH., Aug. 9.—The order of Secretary McAdoo abolishing the office of collector of customs at this port has thrown former Mayor John J. Bell out into the cold.

When Mr. Bell received his appointment a few years ago he resigned as the city's chief executive, and Commissioner Dixon was chosen as his successor. Then Mr. Bell appointed William R. Chadwick as his deputy. Now the order from Washington puts Mr. Chadwick in charge of the local part. Mr. Bell finds he has resigned himself out of one job and appointed himself out of another.

Thief Since Child; Boasts of 500 Crimes

Boy Declares That He Is Beyond Reformation, and Welcomes the Gallows.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Walter Novak, 20, arrested with four companions after they had fatally wounded Patrolman Samuel W. Sowers and beaten Patrolman Frank Walpole, admitted having taken part in more than thirty robberies in two months and boasted of his career.

"I was born a thief, and I've been a thief ever since," said Novak. "I don't care whether I go to the gallows. I started when I was nine stealing pennies. I have been put in all kinds of institutions to reform me, but they only made me worse. I don't want any member of my family to come and see me. If they come, I will kick them out.

"I suppose I have committed more than 500 robberies."

$640 Average Income Of American Farmer

Government Report Declares There Are Many Who Make far Smaller Sum.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Farming is not the most profitable business in the world, railroad press agents to the contrary notwithstanding, according to a bulletin of the Department of Agriculture.

For the first time in the history of farming in the United States the department has managed to get accurate data on the subject.

It reports that the average income of the American farmer is $640.40 a year. "It is reasonable to infer," says the department, "that at least half of the farmers in this country have even smaller incomes."

Feudist's Daughter Shouts at Conviction

Woman Obtains Practically All the Evidence Produced in Court Against Slayers.

WINCHESTER, KY., Aug. 9.—The work of Mrs. Lillian Gross, daughter of Ed Callahan, of Breathitt County, former Sheriff and noted feud leader, was rewarded to-day, when a jury returned a verdict finding Andrew Johnson, 19, guilty of having murdered Callahan.

The jury fixed Johnson's punishment at life imprisonment in the penitentiary.

When the verdict was given out, Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Timandy Callahan, young widow of the feudist, shouted for joy.

The evidence was secured almost entirely by Mrs. Gross.

Twelve witnesses, who swore that they saw Johnson at Jackson, 12 miles from the scene of the shooting, are under indictment for perjury.

POLITICS MIXED IN ALABAMA AS JOHNSTON DIES

Underwood May Be Drawn Into Senate Race—Knox and DeGraffenreid Mentioned.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 9.—The death of Senator Joseph Forney Johnston has precipitated in Alabama a political problem. He was seized by the fatal attack of illness at the time when he was in the midst of a fight with Congressman Richmond P. Hobson to retain his seat in the Senate, and Hobson thus is left without opposition.

The dominant political powers in Alabama, it is generally recognized, are not altogether friendly to the Hobson interests, and a man as powerful as Johnston undoubtedly will be brought forward to oppose the hero of the Merrimac.

Who will it be?

Eyes Are on Underwood.

All eyes turn to Oscar Underwood as the likely opponent of Hobson. Here near the end of the session of Congress, with his work well toward completion, it is conceded that Underwood can relinquish with safety his grasp on affairs in the House and step into the higher place in the Senate. A movement already is felt that may have its effect in bringing him out as a candidate.

Meanwhile, Governor O'Neal must appoint a successor to Senator Johnston to fill his seat for the two years yet remaining of his term. And, unless by previous agreement otherwise, the appointee probably will be a candidate for the coming term.

If Governor O'Neal appoints Colonel John B. Knox, of Anniston, to the place, Knox certainly will be a candidate for the long term, his health permitting. Knox for years has had ambition to enter the Senate. Twice he has been a candidate, losing in 1907, when Johnston and Bankhead were named pravisional Senators to succeed Pettus and Morgan, who then were near death, and again in 1910, when he opposed Bankhead.

Knox a Brilliant Figure.

Knox is a brilliant, eloquent, altogether spectacular figure. The Governor may not feel disposed toward his appointment on one ground, however. One year ago occurred a vacancy on the bench of the State Supreme Court, and Governor O'Neal tendered Knox the appointment. After weeks of deliberation the Anniston man declined it. Political gossip at that time was heard to the effect that the Governor was placed in an inconvenient position because of the refusal, and he was forced to take Judge E. D. DeGraffenreid from the bench of the Court of Appeals to place him in the Supreme Court.

DeGraffenreid is O'Neal's closest friend and political adviser. That he should be in line for the Senate appointment is not considered unlikely in a number of places. In event he is appointed, it is unlikely that he will make the race for the long term, and the Underwood shadow looms up again.

The death of Senator Johnston, occurring almost simultaneously with that of his present political ally and personal friend, Major W. W. Screws, editor of The Montgomery Advertiser, is regarded in Alabama as a startling coincidence. Major Screws was Johnston's firmest supporter in his race against Hobson.

AGED HUSBAND SUES GIRL WIFE WHO SPENT FORTUNE

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—Joseph Walters, aged 70, a prominent McKeesport man, who married Ruth Henderson when she was 17 years old, filed a suit in Divorce Court, asking a decree because his wife, after forcing him to spend his fortune of $100,000 on her, "ran away."

GERMANS RAP U. S. POLICY IN PLEA TO KAISER

Consuls Complain This Country Has Failed to Protect Foreigners in Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—M. A. Leach, of San Francisco, who, as an eyewitness to the sacking of Durango, Mexico, by a rebel force gave Secretary Bryan a sensational account of the looting of banks, stores and residences and the ravishing of women which followed the capture of the city, left Washington for Chicago, after having repeated his story to Senator William Alden Smith, Senator Works and several others.

Mr. Leach said two German Consuls left Northern Mexico two weeks ago for Germany, carrying with them reports on the conditions which exist in the southern republic, with particular reference to the losses and indignities suffered by German residents.

They complain that the American Government has not moved to remedy conditions, and they will strongly urge the German Government to come to the relief of its subjects in Mexico.

Mr. Leach said that, as all his possessions in Mexico have been destroyed, he is in a position to talk freely of conditions and that the fear of further damage has kept Americans and other foreigners in Mexico silent. He says all foreigners and 90 per cent of the better element of Mexicans see no settlement of Mexico's troubles except through intervention by the United States, and that a crime against the United States will be committed if the border is thrown open to the indiscriminate shipment of arms into Mexico.

He declares this will be arming the Mexicans for the inevitable conflict with the United States or with foreign powers. He declares a policy of letting the Mexicans fight it out does not meet with the approval of the European governments interested in Mexico, and that if this policy is adopted by the United States it means the Monroe Doctrine must be abandoned and European nations allowed to enter.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Major Miguel Lebrija, head of the aviation corps of the Mexican army, sailed on the Torraine, French Line, yesterday to buy twenty aeroplanes and two dirigibles for his Government. On the machines and their accessories the major expects to spend nearly $1,000,000.

The aviator expressed his conviction that aeroplanes could sink within an hour any battleship ever built, by dropping bombs on its decks. On account of the altitude of the City of Mexico, the machines which he is going to purchase will have to be far more powerful and will have greater wing surfaces than those ordinarily used at sea level.

Among his fellow passengers were Rene Bazin, Rear Admiral Aaron Ward and Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Wade.

HOT FIGHT FOR COMMISSIONER IN BIRMINGHAM

Recorder Wood, "People's Candidate," Denounces Opponent as Champion of Interests.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Clement R. Wood and George B. Ward are engaged in the most spectacular campaign for President of the Commission of Birmingham ever waged in this city.

Wood, as the "candidate of the people," is making many and varied charges against the political element supporting his opponent, Mr. Ward. He charges that he (Wood) was removed as Recorder by the Commission for sending one of their friends to the stockade and insisting on his serving his time, as he did in similar cases.

He also charges that Ward represents the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company and the Birmingham Loan and Discount Company. He charges that the managing editor of one of Birmingham's afternoon papers was forced out of the race under penalty of losing his position on the paper.

He claims that many other prospective candidates have been eliminated from the race by the powerful hand of the interests, and calls on the "common people" to assert themselves in the defeat of Ward.

Ward claims that Wood was discouraged by the Commission because of incompetency, and makes many other charges and insinuations in his speeches and newspaper cards.

Meetings are being held almost every night, and music from brass bands and the orations of the spellbinders are to be heard on every corner.

It is impossible to get a complete line-up, but it can be said with certainty that the race will be close, and that the result will be known only after every vote has been counted.

WHITE SLAVE CASE WHICH INVOLVES U.S. GOES TO TRIAL

Diggs Faces a Jury and Caminetti Will Later Fight Charge of Taking Girls to Reno, Leaving Their Wives in State of California.

After Five Months of Delay and Scandal Involving National Officials, Special Prosecutors Are Appearing for the Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—All California anticipates becoming the unsavory center of the nation's attention for the next three weeks or a month, probably, during the trial of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave cases, arrangements for the beginning of which to-day are complete, after many months of controversy, postponement and of turmoil that threatened to disrupt President Wilson's cabinet.

The jury to hear the case of Maury I. Diggs, former State Architect, one of the two defendants, was announced complete to-day, after considerable difficulty in selecting the twelve members. Exhaustive examination of 96 veniremen was necessary before the twelve were chosen.

The first witness was called. He was F. J. Peck, a Reno real estate dealer, by whom the defense sought to show that the bungalow occupied by the defendants in Reno had been rented with no view to concealment.

Prejudice against the defendants runs high, rendering exceedingly difficult the task of picking a jury. Of the twelve men chosen, eight are married and have children, two are married, but childless, and two are single men, living with their parents. Indicative of the general temper of San Francisco was the reply upon examination of Philip Woolsey, who afterward was chosen as a member of the jury. He expressed his prejudice against "any married man who will abandon his wife and babies and run off on a spree with another woman," but said he could, however, render a verdict strictly in accordance with the evidence.

Cases Come Up Separately.

The cases against Diggs and Caminetti will be tried separately because the prosecution feels it has made out the stronger case against Diggs, and because the defense in this case will assume a course different from that in Caminetti's.

Diggs and F. Drew Caminetti, son of former Congressman and present Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti, are charged with luring Miss Marsha Warrington and Miss Lola Norris from California to Nevada for immoral purposes. Both are married men.

Diggs, the prosecution will attempt to show, financed the trip to Reno, where the girls were taken, and rented there a cottage in which the party lived.

Diggs, against whom the charges are made in relation to Miss Marsha Warrington, is said to be contemplating a fierce attack on the character of the girl. He has subpenaed habitues of the "Barbary Coast" resorts of this city and twenty witnesses from Sacramento's tenderloin. Caminetti is making no such move against Miss Norris. The Government asserts her character to be unblemished.

Mrs. Caminetti Relentless.

Caminetti's wife is relentless in her attitude toward her young husband. She said that despite the disgrace it may bring on their children, she thinks, for the protection of other married women, her husband should be made an example.

Mrs. Diggs, also, is bitter toward her husband. The defenders of both men, however, to-day are claiming a complete reconciliation of the defendants with their wives, and declare that when the trial gets fully under way both Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti will be seen sitting at their husbands' sides, a spectacle which, the defense calculates, will have an effect to their advantage on the jury.

Diggs and Caminetti both are free from custody, having taken advantage of the $10,000 bail offered them. At first they feared freedom, as violence was anticipated, but later this fear was overcome.

Diggs appears to be cheerful to-day, taking matters easily. He is scrupulously dressed. He came into the courtroom, with his flock of attorneys, bearing a cheerful smile, and bowed a dozen times to familiar faces that he saw near. Caminetti, on the other hand, seemed deeply worried. He was pallid and palpably very nervous. His father, the Commissioner General of Immigration, did not make his appearance, and probably will not be seen at the trial.

Two Special Prosecutors.

The trial is being held in the Federal Court before Judge Van Fleet. Matt I. Sullivan and Theodore R. Roche, president of the San Francisco Police Commission, have been appointed special prosecutors by Attorney General McReynolds, to take the place of District Attorney Gavin McNab, who resigned with the announcement that undue influence was being brought to bear from Washington to prevent the trial of the two men.

Arrayed with the special prosecutors are Archie Johnson, son of Governor Johnson, and Acting District Attorneys Benjamin L. McKinley and Thomas H. Salvage.

Diggs and Caminetti have an equally impressive line-up of legal defenders, including Robert L. Devlin and Marshall B. Woodworth, both former United States District Attorneys; Nate Coghlan and S. Luke Howe.

A heavy guard is thrown around the courtroom because feeling runs high against the two defendants. The two girls involved were high school students of Sacramento and of estimable families. Both, attorneys for the Government announce, will be ready to take the stand against the men.

The Government will charge that Diggs and Caminetti, both married men, had drawn the girls into a liaison; that they terrified the girls into the belief that their wives, having discovered their infidelity, intended to have the girls arrested, and that to escape this imaginary danger the girls accompanied the men to Reno, Nev.

Their Stories to the Girls.

They told the young women that what was to be done with them, the young women were told that their ruin was complete; that they would not desert them, but that the young women were to continue to live with them as their mistresses, and that they would take them to Salt Lake, where they would go into a house.

The Grand Jury had ample evidence before it in these statements to decide that the intent was to put them in a public place.

Barely Escaped Lynching.

"The defendants were secretly taken from the train and brought to Sacramento by auto to avoid lynching by the enraged citizens. Defendants procured counsel. Among these is Charles Harris, of the Sacramento bar. He and Diggs immediately set about to defeat justice by corrupting a witness. Diggs wrote an appealing letter to Miss Warrington under an assumed name, urging her to stand by a certain agreed story he had drilled her in while in Reno. The letter is in my possession.

"The Grand Jury has indicted Harris and Diggs for conspiracy to suborn perjury.

"The friends of the defendants are reported to have stated repeatedly that they could 'easily fix the case;' that they had too much money and too much influence at command to cause them to worry. This seems to have come principally from the Diggs end of the case."

Farley Drew Caminetti, married, twenty-seven, son of U. S. Commissioner of Immigration Caminetti, with Lola Norris, nineteen, unmarried, and Maurice I. Diggs, married, ex-State Architect, about twenty-eight, and Marsha Warrington, nineteen, unmarried, all of Sacramento, go to Reno, register under assumed names, rent a cottage later, and live four days together when arrested. The men assert they are unhappy and intend to marry the girls after securing divorces.

McNab Outlines His Case Against the Defendants

In his report Mr. McNab gives the following pen picture of Caminetti and Diggs:

"The defendant Diggs was a draughtsman in the office of the State Capitol in Sacramento. He is married and has two young children.

"But a short time before the actions hereinafter narrated he was involved in a forgery charge, and for a long time, by common repute, easily substantiated by evidence, he maintained what has been denominated as a 'private harem' at his rooms in a downtown block in Sacramento. Here, according to charges laid before me, he enticed many young women to go to serve his immoral purposes.

"Caminetti was his bosom companion. The defendant Caminetti has a vicious reputation for seducing girls, and I have shocking instances which I can produce to establish this fact.

"The two girls in question, both of whom are about 19 years of age, come of most respectable families. Marsha Warrington is the only daughter of the agent of the Santa Fe Railroad. Lola Norris is the only daughter of a retired business man of Sacramento.

"After going with the young women for some months the two defendants, who had determined to entice the girls away from home and take them to another State, began a systematic campaign of coercion and inducement to get them to flee the State with them.

Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti had found out about their relations and had procured warrants for their arrest from the Juvenile Court and were only awaiting the appropriate time to serve them; that Mrs. Diggs and Mrs. Caminetti were relentless and intended to expose the whole matter, and that the families of the girl would be disgraced and ruined; that the only way to save the girls from disgrace was secretly to leave the city and go to another State, where they would acquire a residence, the men would divorce their wives and marry the girls, etc.

"The young women were in absolute terror. They repeatedly appealed to the defendants to allow them to remain at home and not to disgrace them, and begged to be allowed to unbosom their indiscretions to their parents and have their advice.

"Up to this time, according to the uncontradicted evidence, Diggs had been unduly intimate with Miss Warrington for a few weeks; the Norris girl had never been violated before this trip to Reno.

"On arrival at Reno they were assigned to bedrooms, Diggs and Miss Warrington occupying one room and Caminetti and Miss Norris the other. According to the testimony of the young women, they were wholly in the hands of their male companions. They had never been away from home or their parents before and felt that they were powerless to save themselves.

Foundling Is Heiress To $100,000 Fortune

Father Makes Wealth After He Had Left Baby in Michigan Institution.

CADILLAC, MICH., Aug. 9.—Sheriff Chamberlain has been asked by an attorney in Corning, N. Y., to locate Bessie Weaver, who was adopted by a Manton, Mich., family from a New York foundling home over twenty years ago, and a few days ago became heir to $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weaver, of Manton, who adopted the child when on a trip through New York, returned her to the home five years later. Since that time nothing has been heard from her. The father of Bessie Weaver, or Bessie Clark, as she was known in New York, made his fortune after placing his child in the home, but has been unable to locate her since she was taken back from Michigan. He recently died, leaving his fortune to his only child.

GIRL HELPS FATHER IN BUILDING NEW HOUSE

HARTFORD, MICH., Aug. 9.—One year ago S. H. Atkins and family came to this city and built a house in a field of rye in the outskirts of the city. Recently they sold the home, and with the proceeds purchased four adjoining lots. They are now building a much larger house, which will be the sixth they have erected since the little home was built.

The scarcity of carpenters caused the mother and daughter to assist Mr. Atkins in the building of his new home. The mother and 9-year-old daughter did all of the lathing.

Ban on Tobacco Seen By Prohibitionists

Smoking and Drinking Are Blamed for Increase in Chronic Diseases in America.

BATTLECREEK, MICH., Aug 9.—That tobacco as well as liquor will be placed under national prohibition before the end of another generation, is the assertion made here by Irving Fisher. Fisher blames liquor, tobacco, overuse of meat and too strenuous life for the terrible increase of chronic diseases in America.

Spooners Protest Against Headlights

Big Illuminating Power Now Carried on Engines Is Worry to Summer Boarders.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad has placed monster 1,220-candlepower electric searchlights on the observation cars of the Pioneer Limited.

Letters have found their way into the general offices of the company signed by summer hotel men, houseboat owners and the public generally, protesting against the innovation. Spooners do not like it.

COLLEGE HEN MISSES LAYING 1 DAY IN 100

Champion Barnyard Producer Rests Only When Commencement Season Arrives.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CORVALLIS, OREG., Aug. 9. A college hen, which laid 99 eggs in 100 days and observed Commencement Day by taking a single day's vacation, is a new claimant for prominence in the chicken world.

The newly heralded layer is three-quarters White Leghorn and one-quarter Barred Plymouth Rock, descending from several generations of heavy layers bred at the Oregon Agricultural College experiment station.

The 99 eggs were laid during the 100 days ended June 8, as follows: Thirty-one in March, 29 in April, 31 in May and 8 in the first 8 days in June.

Not only is this the best record ever secured at Oregon Agricultural College for the same length of time, but a careful perusal of authentic records from other stations on file fails to reveal an equal performance.

The result of breeding as shown in the egg production of this one hen is only an isolated example of what Professor James Dryden's extensive experiments are proving to be possible.

Up to date the records show clearly the beneficial effect in egg yield, and when the year's experiments are concluded in the fall some interesting statistics will be available for the use of poultrymen who are raising chickens for egg production.

What to Drink—Soft, non-alcoholic cooling drinks; buttermilk and sweet milk (the certified kind); alcoholic drinks in greatest moderation.

What to Wear—White outer clothes; blue underwear; soft collars; straw hats; good, old, easy shoes.

Gives Check for Fine, Then Stops Payment

Fisherman, Who Unintentionally Violated Law, Skips State, and Justice of Peace Suffers.

CRANE, MO., Aug. 9.—A resident of Crane has given a new turn to the long struggle for fees and fines by petty officers along the State line. This man was arrested, with his family, on charges of violating the fishing laws, pleaded guilty, was fined, paid the fines and fees with a check, then he hustled across the State line and stopped payment on the check.

The violation of the law was unintentional, as the Missouri family were floating down White River and did not note the change of State jurisdiction until the constable arrested them for a manner of fishing which had been legal a few miles back.

The only regret Missourians have over the incident is that the [illegible] Justice probably cannot be fooled twice.

ROMANCE LEADS TO HEIR'S EXILE FROM GERMANY

Lieutenant in the Kaiser's Army Comes to Chicago and Joins U. S. Cavalry.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Because his love for a pretty German actress resulted in his squandering an inheritance of $32,000 in one year, Dr. Otto Gordon Goldfield, scion of a wealthy family, a lieutenant in the German cavalry and a graduate of Gottingen University, was forced by his father to come to the United States and join the army here as a private. The young German is now in barracks here.

Ruth Werner, German dancer and singer, charmed the young man when in Vienna. His grandfather had just died and left him $32,000. Within a year this was gone, and after numerous appeals to his father, Dr. Goldfield was forced to come here.

Told to Give Up Girl.

His father, who is the vice president of the Corporation of Hamburg, told him to give up the girl, his commission in the army and go to America.

"I fell in love with the girl," explained "Private" Goldfield, "and spent all my money on her. She was beautiful. If she wanted jewels I bought jewels. We were at Monte Carlo. She wanted to play the games. She was beautiful, and I loved her, so why should she not be happy?

"We were in Paris, at the Horse Show in London, and many other places. She had automobiles and fine horses.

"And then my money gave out. My parents refused to give me more, and my father forced me to come to the United States and try for a commission in the army.

"Will I go back?" responded Dr. Goldfield in answer to a question. "Yes, when I get my commission here I will go back and the girl and I will be married. But not until then. I must stay in the army here until I am a lieutenant.

Likes Open Air Life.

"It's the open air and beautiful I like here more than anything else. That is why I have come to the West.

"And your soldiers—well, next to the French dragoons they are about the best in the world, in my opinion, and I have seen the troops of all the larger countries. That's why I am enlisting as a private here, for I like the life and will stay anyway until I get my naturalization papers."

Goldfield is twenty-five, and has served the last four years in the German cavalry as a lieutenant. He is an experienced horseman, and says he was the winner of the championship at the International Horse Show held in London two years ago, riding the horses from his father's stables.

Jacob Goldfield, father of the young army officer, besides being vice president of the Hamburg Corporation, is a well-known German jurist, as is also his brother, Rudolph Goldfield.

Wind Saves Life of Baby Caught by Kite

String on Toy Encircles Throat of Child and Lifts Him From Earth.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Except for the timely intervention of a gust of wind, Baby Allen McNaughton, 15 months old, might have been hanged by a box kite string until he was dead yesterday afternoon in the presence of his 12-year-old brother, Monroe, and a group of boy friends. As it was he was hanged until he was black in the face, and the string circled his throat with a gash that barely missed the jugular vein. Just as the kite went up the string slackened and twined about the baby's throat. The child was lifted from the ground and was being borne aloft when a sudden cross current slackened the string again. Monroe quickly cut it, releasing the kite and his brother at the same time.

EVERY LUXURY PROVIDED FOR 12 PRIZE DOGS

Private Room, Electric Fans, Leather Chairs, Etc., for Each of Dozen Pomeranians.

BROKTON, MASS., Aug. 9.—Twelve Pomeranians—each with a whole room to himself, and housed in a house which they have all to themselves, likewise—take the prize for dog luxury, Brockton folks believe. Besides a house of their own, the dogs have:

A valet, electric fan, individual beds, a bath twice a day, a back yard to play in, leather chairs and soft rugs (the latter to try their teeth on).

Mrs. E. V. Graves, a leading business woman, owns the dogs. She is successful as the head of a factory here. Brockton folks say she is more attentive to the dogs than Mrs William Carter, of Newport, who got four doctors when her Pomeranian was nervous.

During the hot days the valet, Mr. Beals, fans the little fellows with a specially made $18 electric fan and each dog is given a cold bath at frequent intervals.

"They are all as jealous as can be," says Mrs. Graves. "If you make more of one than another there is a terrible howl and often a fight. They are friendly to children as a general rule. The dogs are worth anywhere from $150 to $1,000 each, but I do not care to sell them. They are a great comfort to me."

Owes Her Good Health to Duffy's

MRS. MARY CARMODY.

"About a year ago I was down with a very heavy cold and I had a bad pain under my shoulder blades. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand, and I could not keep anything on my stomach. A druggist near where I lived advised taking a tablespoonful of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey with an egg in milk before meals, and after following his advice I found that I could eat; I overcame my weakness, and gradually gained in weight. I believe that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as a tonic for run down people is a great thing, and I recommend it to my many friends in Brooklyn and New York. I can not praise Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey too much."—Mrs. Mary Carmody, 116 N. Elliott Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

LANE TAKES UP CUDGELS IN WAR FOR FARMERS

Secretary of the Interior Has Begun Long Battle on Land Grabbers.

VAST TRACTS ARE INVOLVED

Ninety-five Per Cent of Territory Held by Speculators, Who Charge Excessive Rates.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane has started a little war on the land grabbers west of the Mississippi River.

He has taken up the cudgels of the farmer and the homesteader in the great West. His efforts in this direction materially effect the pocketbook of every man, women and child.

Incidentally, he is "bucking" the land speculator. These land "grabbers" have quietly been acquiring vast tracts of land in the West on which the people of the United States have spent over $75,000,000 in irrigation projects. The homesteader has either been ousted through excessive water rate charges or becomes a tenant of the land companies.

Speculators Hold Land.

Secretary Lane finds that the projects were planned for the purpose of aiding the small farmer in tilling his ground, but that in reality 95 per cent of the land is held by speculators, who are charging excessive rates for water which has been sluiced to the land by the Government.

The other 5 per cent of the acreage is owned by the small farmer, but even Government water rates are held by Mr. Lane to be excessively high. Building notes for dam canal and sluice ways add to the cost of upkeep of the farm and conditions, Westerners say, are becoming intolerable.

By going into the question from the very first day that he entered his office, Mr. Lane has become intimately acquainted with conditions obtaining in the West. Daily conferences have been had with delegations from the West. Even the land speculator had his day in court, and his contentions and views were placed before the Secretary.

Farmer Needs Help.

In this connection Mr. Lane announced: "I am for the farmer, first, last and at all times. Naturally handicapped by lack of sufficient funds to carry on expensive farming under the conditions that obtain in the West, the farmer must receive support and co-operation from the Government, if the great West is to be settled and made to be as productive as the East.

"Expensive water will ruin the small farmers and ranchmen. They must have cheap rates and long-time notes, the Government must back them up an extend them credit, helping them over the rough places if necessary, if the various projects designed to benefit the whole people are to accomplish the purposes for which they were constructed.

"Why should this Government spend $75,000,000 for the benefit of private capital? Why should the Government adopt a hard and fast policy, such as has existed in the past, which has kept the small farmer from going into the new regions and taking up Government land? Isn't it time for the United States to extend to the Westerners a little paternal patience, a little more consideration, a helping hand?"

Finds Honeymoon Land, Then the Man

Society Girl and New Husband Are Now on Their Way to Tahiti.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Miss Luella Hayne, a pretty Chicago girl, is now, as the bride of Dr. Frank Vance, of Enid, Okla., on her way to spend her honeymoon in Tahiti. Miss Hayne had chosen the spot for the honeymoon before she found the man.

Miss Hayne went through a finishing school which prepared her for all the conventionalities of a reigning position in the smart set, but after a brief whirl this life proved tiresome and she started out on the road that leads "back to nature."

The romance was begun at a house party in New York city given by Miss Hayne's sister.

In talking about Tahiti before she sailed she said:

"The people who are most successful in our centers of civilization are most fettered by it. The reason why people plunge so madly into the economic struggle is largely that they may free themselves from its conditions. Why should not a civilized man be as happy as a native of Tahiti? We are going to find out."

Western Canada to Honor First Farmer

Three-Day Celebration Planned as Tribute to Memory of Chevalier LaCorne.

MELFORT, SASK., Aug. 9.—Western Canada is to honor the memory of Captain Louis Luc De La Corne, the first farmer of Western Canada. Chevalier LaCorne introduced agriculture in the Carrot River valley, Saskatchewan, in 1754. At Melfort, in the heart of the Carrot River District, a three-day celebration, August 1, 2 and 3, 1914, will commemorate the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of the first farming in Western Canada.

The business men of Melfort and the surrounding territory have organized to arrange for the celebration, and committees are already at work. The celebration will be unusual and will include a pageant, in which 2,000 Indians will participate. This pageant will typify the agricultural growth of Western Canada, from the days before Chevalier LaCorne explored the Carrot River valley to the present time.

She was formerly Miss Ethel Kelso, daughter of a prominent Grand Junction fruit grower, and is an expert motorcyclist. Carson will ride on the tandem seat.

The first woman to attempt to ride across the Rockies on a motorcycle is Mrs. E. Frank Winfield, who made the trip with her husband last summer.

Fright Kills Hero as He Tries to Save Life

Man Leaps Into Water After Drowning Woman and Heart Stops From Scare.

STROUDSBURG, PA., Aug. 9.—Mrs. F. A. Keesing, of No. 693 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., was seized with heart failure to-day bathing in Cherry Creek, Delaware Water Gap. David J. Dickenson, a hotel porter, went to her rescue.

Dickenson was unable to swim, and sank with Mrs. Keesing. Both were taken from the water dead.

Two physicians said there was no water in the lungs of either, and that Mrs. Keesing died of heart failure and Dickenson of fright.

Portland People Believe She Has Settled in Quiet Town to Start Divorce Suit.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 9.—From the gay life of a popular society woman, a leader in the smartest affairs of New York, Newport and Bar Harbor to pursue an existence in a quiet city, is a change just made by the dashing Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, the former Kitty Duer.

"Why do you suppose she's here?" all Portland is asking.

What can she do with herself all day long, for she is never seen out, save to take a drive, and then always wearing a heavy white veil. Is she here to secure a divorce and will she live that dreary life for one whole year—that's how the gossip runs.

Perhaps she's writing another book. She did write one once, "The Crystal Ball." But while the world conjectures, Mrs. Mackay denies herself to all.

Divorce is without doubt her idea in burying herself here, where she has been ever since her millionaire husband sailed for Europe with their three children.

Mrs Mackay is occupying the home of Adam P. Leighton on Western Promenade, a cottage in comparison with the mansions she has been used to occupying.

It was on June 25 that Mr. Mackay sailed for Europe on the Imperator, taking his children on board from New Jersey, where they had been in his control for several days. He went abroad with never a word to the wife and mother.

So mysterious was the departure that it attracted wide attention. They boarded the ship at night; a detective squad was serving to protect the children from any attempt to prevent their departure and the father registered under an assumed name. The children, who are no doubt longing for their mother as she is longing for them, are still abroad and it is said they will be there for months.

ORPHAN SOUGHT AS WIFE BY MAN WRITING POLICE

Would-Be Benedict Gives Evidence in Letter That He Fears Mother-in-Law.

OAKLAND, CAL., Aug. 9.—J. Keler, of Fresno, is a marrying man. He proved it by writing a letter to "the Chief of Police or the City Marshal of Oakland" and entreating that official to find him a wife. He wants a wife who has means equal to his own—amount not stated—and indicates in his letter that he would expect her to assist him in his merchandise business. He assures all responsible applicants that he is sober and industrious and hasn't a single bad habit.

If you are a maid, a girl or a widow who reads this, you stand a chance of winning the prize, and if you are an orphan, get busy and send your picture to Keler at once. He takes kindly to orphans, as is evidenced from the following excerpt from his letter:

"Will answer all questions and letters from girls, maids and widows, but would prefer to wed an orphan. Will give my business to the one I wed, that she may know I am a square man and will do right."

The following notice was inclosed, with the request that the official post it in a conspicuous place:

"Temperate gentleman would be pleased to form the acquaintance of ladies matrimonially inclined. Give description and full particulars in first letter. Send photo, which will be returned, if desired."

Collects Slow Debts By Parcel Post C.O.D.

Merchant Strikes Novel Plan to Realize On a Number of Old Accounts.

WICHITA, KANS., Aug. 9—A Wichita merchant has found a new use for the parcel post. This merchant is in a line of business where he carries a large number of small accounts, which the debtors frequently overlook.

When the C. O. D. feature of the parcel post went into effect July 1, the merchant hit upon the idea of using it to collect his small debts. A large number of small boxes were obtained. These were filled with waste paper and on top was placed a receipted bill. Each box was neatly wrapped and tied and addressed.

A 5-cent stamp was required to carry each box and the C. O. D. fee was 10 cents on each package. The next day the returns began to come in, and in nearly every case the debtor paid the amount, supposing that somebody had sent something of value.

2,000 Bees Stampede Crowd at Ferry Slip

Hives Fall From Boxes and Enraged Insects at Once Charge on Commuters.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Two thousand busy little bees raised much turmoil and excitement at the Market street ferry this afternoon. A large packing box containing two hives with 20,000 bees was being shipped to Paulsboro, N. J. When the drayman reached the ferryhouse the box slipped off and fell to the street and burst open.

The enraged bees at once mixed with a crowd of 4,000 commuters and then action began. Lieutenant Buehler on a spirited horse rode into the fray. His steed was stung and tried to stampede into the crowd.

Finally the crate was pulled on the ferryboat Camden and when she left her up the 2,000 bees flew after it, making life uncomfortable for everybody on the boat.

Get Ready for End of the World

Flying Rollers Expect It Soon

So Members of This Queer Cult Await With Uncut Hair and Much Footwashing.

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—"Now, brethren, watch night and day, for ye know not when the end of the world draws nigh. It may be tomorrow; at least it will come before the year 1920. It is probably much nearer than that," says Brother Lucien I. Pingree. With long flowing beard that has never been profaned by scissors and with silken locks which also have never been clipped, this resident of Stoneham thus warns all those who would be ready when the First Resurrection occurs. "It is coming soon—very soon—very soon," he asserts. Brother Pingree and his band of adherents all are sure of it. The end of the world is close at hand, they all say.

For this reason the Flying Rollers are launcing a great religious crusade which they hope will awaken men and women to a knowledge of their evil ways and will prepare them for the near-at-hand millennium.

Keep on Living.

If you are one of the elect and alive when this auspicious day comes Mr. Pingree says that you will never die. Your body will take on eternal life and though you will be otherwise possessed of man's normal anatomy and will go right on through million of years living in the mortal mold.

Brother Pingree, who is agent and teacher of the Flying Roller faith in this vicinity, lives at No. 1 Forrest street, Stoneham. His church until recently has been at No. 117 Hancock street, Everett. Now the Flying Rollers are to pitch their tent in Malden and launch a propaganda which aims to halt the world in its mad round of pleasure, barber shops and picture galleries.

It is not such a hardship for the women to belong to the Flying Rollers church, but the men have troubles of their own. Their discipline forbids anyone to have his hair cut or to enjoy the pleasure of lying back in a tonsorial chair while the artist with the razor does the rest.

Males Never Cut Hair.

The male brethren never have the corners of their hair or of their flowing beards rounded. "Thou shalt not," says the church discipline. Then there is the ceremony of the washing of feet, which takes place on certain occasions, when elders and elderesses lave each other's pedal extremities and thus conform to other Biblical injunctions. The Flying Roll is a book written by the great Roller prophet, Jezreel, mentioned in the Scriptures as "to come on earth." He came and was here in 1875, wrote the Roll and died about twenty years ago. Since then the Flying Rollers have read his text with scrupulous care and followed closely in his teachings.

The Flying Rollers believe in the law and gospel. That is, they follow literally the teachings of the Bible. A man who is faithful to the end will live forever. The Bible says that, and the Rollers take it literally.

144,000 in the Elect.

Of all the people alive, 144,000 (mentioned in Revelations, Chapter 14) shall be the elect who are to live during the thousand years when Christ is again to be on earth (during the First Resurrection). Then this chosen 144,000 shall enjoy Heaven still with their earthly bodies while the rest of humanity that was, shall minister to them as "ministering spirits."

"The world of wickedness will soon cease. A new world will appear as soon as Christ comes, which will be very soon (I can not give the exact date, but it will be before 1920, there is no doubt about that)," says Pastor Pingree. "In that world there will be no longer this struggle for life. Wonderful fruits and flowers will grow everywhere along the road sides—fruits and flowers more wonderful than we get from hothouses now. Then the earth will be Heaven for a thousand years.

"We believe that those who are faithful to the teachings of our religion will share that thousand years with Christ, wearing their mortal bodies, then clothed in immortality.

"It is no hardship not to cut your hair or trim your beard," says Mr. Pingree. "We tie it up and tuck it in, and by not cutting it or rounding the corners in any way, we are obeying the letter of divine law."

Here Are the Tenets of the Flying Rollers

Thou shalt not shave.

Thou shalt not cut thy hair.

Thou shalt not have thy picture taken.

Be faithful and thou shalt join the 144,000 true believers who will live forever.

Remember that the millenium will be here—probably in a year or so.

Thou shalt not tattoo thy arms.

The prophet is James J. Jezreel. Follow his teachings.

Feet washing among the brethren and sisters is practiced faithfully as the Bible and extracts from the "Flying Roll" dictate.

Prepare for the first resurrection which is coming soon.

Use of Fireproofed Cotton Goods Urged

State Fire Marshal Says Stores In Kansas Sell No Other Kind.

TOPEKA, Aug. 9.—Harrison Parkman, State Fire Marshal, believes that stores ought to sell only fireproof cotton goods.

In the new State fire textbook the Fire Marshal is urging that every Kansas man and woman refuse to buy any but fireproof cotton goods and that they adopt the German method and fireproof all cotton materials.

The Fire Marshal believes that this action would decrease the number of deaths by fire in Kansas fully 50 per cent and it would make a big decrease in the number of fires in the homes of the State.

WOMEN BUY LAND ONE-THIRD CHEAPER THAN MEN

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 9.—After hearing from women of the Council of Clubs the Finance Committee of the upper house of the Council has killed the ordinance to advance $1,000 of the $12,000 set apart for the purpose of making a start on the contemplated women's reformatory at Leeds.

It developed that the $1,000 had been asked by the Board of Public Welfare as a first payment on thirteen acres of ground it proposed to buy at Leeds at $500 an acre.

The women made fun of the business abilities of the Welfare Board, and said that they had already secured an option on 96 acres close by the thirteen at $171 an acre.

U. S. EDUCATION EXPERT SAYS ILLITERACY GROWS

BOULDER, COLO., Aug. 9.—That in only two States of the Union has the ideal democracy in education been even approximated; that every year in the United States almost 70,000 illiterates are sent out into the world to make their way; that there are in the country to-day 5,615,000 persons over the age of ten who can neither read nor write and that almost 50 per cent of the rural teachers of the country have not had a high school education; were among the startling statements made by United States Commissioner of Education Claxton in an address on "Democracy and Education."

View From South Walk of Cox College, College Park, Ga.

It is indeed a source of pleasure to the young ladies to tour over the beautiful, picturesque bituilthic roads of Fulton County, and a source of education for them to see the model farms, poultry plants, factories and industries of many kinds.

All summer long the workmen have been busy, renovating and remodeling the building from bottom to top, and the work on the campus has added much to its neat and attractive appearance.

The registration for the coming session is larger at this season than for many years. It is estimated that before school opens, rooms will be at a premium.

To keep well abreast of the times, Cox College has added some splendid teachers to its already strong faculty in both literary and conservatory departments.

The Academy of Cox College furnishes the best preparation for college courses. Fifteen units are required for college entrance.

Next session begins September 10. For beautiful illustrations and catalogue, address, The Secretary.

Good Roads Assured In St. Johns County

Contracts Signed for Hard Surfacing 30 Miles of Roads—Concrete Bridges Planned.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 8.—With signing of contracts for hard surfacing more than 30 miles of highways, the work to be done within three months, the completion of a good system of highways for St. John's County is now assured. Good roads boosters have been working long and hard to bring about this result. Money is raised by the issuing of interest-bearing time warrants, authorized by the last Legislature through the efforts of local good roads advocates.

Within a few weeks it is expected that contracts will also be let for reinforced concrete bridges to replace wooden structures in several sections of the county. This work will total a high figure. Much of the work provided in contracts now signed is upon the John Anderson Boulevard connecting St. Augustine and Jacksonville and St. Augustine and Daytona and comprising a 60-mile link in the Montreal-to-Miami highway, as well as the Atlanta-to-Miami highway.

Railroad Commission Hears 'Class P' Case

Compromise Proposed on Old Order for Reduction of Rates on Heavy Commodities.

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 9.—A hearing was held this week before the Railroad Commissioners on a proposed compromise of what is known as the old Class P case, or Order No. 72, involving a reduction of commodities moving in Florida under Class P, including lumber, crossties, brick, etc.

This was one of the most important hearings of recent years before the Commissioners, and has brought to Tallahassee the largest crowd of shippers appearing at any meeting before the Commissioners in the last five years. The lumber interests of the State were well represented by officials of the Georgia-Florida Sawmill Association and a score or more of individual lumbermen of Florida. The railroads were represented by high officials.

Doctor, Who Eloped With Girl, Returned

Tampa Physician Ran Away With His Thirteen-yearold Sister-in-law.

TAMPA, Aug. 9.—Deputy sheriffs have returned from Groesbeck, Texas, with Dr. Guil M. Howsley and Anita Castellanos, his thirteen-year-old sister-in-law, with whom he eloped in November and with whom he has been living, supposedly as man and wife since.

Howsley left his wife with three small children when he went away and they have been in rather hard circumstances, Mrs. Howsley having just undergone a severe operation at a local hospital.

The Masonic order, to which Howsley once belonged, took the matter up and searched for him, having hired detectives to hunt him down.

Howsley's infatuation for his young sister-in-law had been noticed for some time before he left this city, but no one thought of an elopement on account of the girl's tender years. She was going to school when they ran away together. Howsley's wife is from Mexico, where her people are of the better class.

STUDY PRISON SYSTEMS OF FIVE SOUTHERN STATES

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 9.—W. A. McRae, Commissioner of Agriculture, and J. C. Luning, State Treasurer, members of the Board of State Institutions, and appointed a committee to visit other States and inspect their prison systems, have returned after visiting South Carolina, North Carolina, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas. D. W. Purvis, recently appointed superintendent of the State prison farm, to be located in Bradford County, accompanied them.

JOINS TAMPA TEAM.

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 9—Newt Mabry, one of Tallahassee's fast amateur ball players, left this week for Tampa, where he has accepted a position on the Tampa team. Another of Tallahassee's players, Ira Watson, is playing in that city.

FIGHT IN SIGHT ON CHARTER IN JACKSONVILLE

Central Civic Committee Would Strip Council of Its Power. Election in Fall.

JACKSONVILLE, Aug. 9.—Considerable interest is being manifest here over the outcome of the present charter campaign. The Legislature passed a bill enabling the City Council to draft and submit to the people a new charter. This bill, however, provides that the Council shall not be abolished.

The strong opinion among the voters is that Jacksonville should try the commission form of government. Under the law this cannot be. The Council has named a committee to draft a charter and this bill will be presented to the Council on August 20. It will then be advertised for eight weeks and submitted to the people for a vote early in November.

The committee of councilmen refuses to give out any of the details of the bill being drawn. Great secrecy is being maintained in regard to the provisions of the charter to be proposed.

Civic Committee's Bill.

A subcommittee of the Central Civic Committee has been named and has drawn a charter bill which strips the City Council of much of its power and which calls for a new form of election. The Hare system is to be used according to this plan. The number of elective officers is cut down to a mayor and four commissioners and a municipal judge. The chief of police, chief of the fire department and heads of other departments are to be appointed.

The great question before this committee is, how to get the Council to present this bill to the people. The Council is the only body having the power to submit a new charter to the people. Owing to the fact that the charter of the civic committee strips the Council of much of its power, it is feared that the members will refuse to present the bill.

Threaten War on Council.

Several members of the committee have stated that should the Council refuse to permit the people to have the right to choose between the two measures they will engage in a campaign to defeat the adoption of the Council's charter.

The bond trustees believe that they can defeat the Council's bill, which deprives them of all authority except as to bonds, by suing out a writ of injunction to prevent the holding of the election. The outcome of the fight is very much in doubt and the voters are lining up in two factions for the battle.

Snap Bean Farming On Big Scale Planned

Pensacola Merchants Agree to Aid in Finding Most Profitable Marketing Points.

PENSACOLA, Aug. 9.—At an enthusiastic meeting of farmers of the Roberts-Gonzales community, this county, last night, at which experts made addresses, it was decided that an experiment will be made in the cultivation of snap beans on a large scale in that locality. Several farmers agreed to plant a certain number of acres each on the co-operative plan and ship to Northern markets. The crop will be planted during the present month. Business men of this city agreed to aid the farmers in securing a market.

It is thought that this will prove one of the most successful crops for this section, as experts say the soil is peculiarly adapted and that climatic conditions are ideal.

OLDEST U. S. CITY MAY ADOPT COMMISSION FORM

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 8.—Sentiment has suddenly focused in St. Augustine upon commission form of government for America's oldest city. A wrangle in City Council which resulted in some Aldermen nearly coming to blows and in which one said he was "in a crowd of sharps" was the final straw, and a movement is now on foot to call an election to vote upon a charter change.

St. Augustine voted down such a change two years ago, but other local issues at the time beclouded the main question.

HOME OF CUBAN LIBERTY AT TAMPA TO BE RAZED

TAMPA, Aug. 9.—The old Criterion Theater, famous during the period preceding the Spanish-American war as the place where many of the Cuban plots against Spain were hatched, is to be torn down to make way for a new vaudeville theater, announcement just being made by Lee Dekle. The old Criterion was a great gathering place for the Cuban patriots in the early nineties and was famous or infamous even as far as Madrid.

CAMPHOR TREE RAISING TO BE TRIED IN FLORIDA

BRADENTOWN, Aug. 9.—Two 20-acre tracts have been donated to the United States Department of Agriculture and an experimental farm will be established here. Professor Stockberger and Professor Hood have been here and the Board of Trade has made arrangements for money to aid in the experiments. Experiments in growing camphor trees, which it is believed can be made a profitable industry in Florida, will be among the first made.

CHATHAM ARTILLERY TO ORGANIZE NEW BATTERY

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Steps looking to the organization of a second battery of the Chatham Artillery have already been taken. First Lieutenant Ed G. Thomson will command the new battery and Lieutenant E. D. Wells the old one. Captain Richard J. Davant, Mayor of Savannah, and at present commanding officer of the Chathams, will be chosen for the majoralty.

Social News of Florida

Tampa

TAMPA, Aug. 9.—Miss Roe Ella Bledso and Eustice Knight will be married at the country home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bledso, at Valrico Sunday afternoon. They will make their home at Gainesville, Fla.

Miss Kathleen McDermott has gone to Miami, where she will be the guest of Miss Brosser and Miss Mildred Niles. She will return to Jacksonville in three weeks, where she will join her parents, Dr. and Mrs. B. K. McDermott, and her sister, Miss Helen McDermott. The Misses McDermott will enter Brenau College, at Gainesville, Ga., for the fall and winter term, while Dr. and Mrs. McDermott will go on to Tennessee, where they will visit friends.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Wilson, Jr., of Kissimmee, are now at Wiliwana camp in the Adirondack Mountains, New York, after an extended stay at the Hotel Imperial, New York City. Mrs. Wilson is known in literary circles as Minnie Moore Wilson and has many friends among the newspaper and magazine writers in the metropolis. She has written much about the Seminoles of this State, but is doing little of late except in occasional short story, because of recent ill health. Both Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are gaining in strength and will return to Florida in the fall. Mrs. Wilson has been closer to the home life of the Seminoles than perhaps any other white woman, and writes and talks very entertainingly about this little known fragment of the Indian race.

St. Augustine

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 9.—A charming addition to society circles of this city is Mrs. James Otto Stevenson, of Washington, D. C., the wife of the new secretary of the St. Augustine Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. Stevenson is well known as a worker in the suffragette movement. She is an ardent believer in votes for women. She already has won hosts of friends since her arrival here, and there is no doubt that she will be urged to take a leading part in the movement for woman suffrage in Florida.

Misses Sarah and Theresa Bailey, of Monticello, will arrive next week to visit Miss Arabel Hopkins.

Mrs. G. W. Saxon and daughter, Miss Helen Saxon, left on Tuesday for Atlanta to visit for a week and then go on to Asheville, N. C., to spend the rest of the summer.

G. T. Whitfield and family have returned from Port St. Joe, where they enjoyed a week's outing.

A surprise to their many friends in Tallahassee was the marriage on last Sunday in Hendersonville, N. C., of J. G. Gornto and Miss Ada Moore, of this city. The bride, with her mother, Mrs. M. C. McIntosh, was spending the summer at Hendersonville. Mr. Gornto is a son of J. M. Gornto, of Mayo, who was a member of the last two Florida Legislatures from Lafayette County. He has been in Tallahassee only a few months, in the office of the State Comptroller. The young couple returned from Hendersonville on Tuesday.

The party occupied a cottage near the beach.

ACOSTA BOOSTS ST. JOHNS RIVER BRIDGE PROJECT

Highway Viaduct Now Propose to Connect Jacksonville and Beach Section.

JACKSONVILLE, Aug. 9.—Representative St. Elmo Acosta is trying to get a highway bridge built over the St. Johns River from this city to South Jacksonville. He has organized the St. Johns River Bridge Association. There are now about 2,000 members and several men are busy getting new members every day.

The last Legislature passed an act whereby the county of Duval is given the right to issue bonds to build such a bridge. Most of the people seem to be in favor of this improvement, because it would connect the city with the beaches. At present there is no way of getting to the ocean from Jacksonville except by crossing the ferry or going by train.

This society has written all of the port cities on the Atlantic Coast, the Gulf of Mexico, the Pacific Coast and the Great Lakes. About 60 replies have been received, and in every instance these replies have been favorable to the bridge proposition. About ten letters are expected from the largest ports in England, Scotland, France, Belgium, Spain, Italy and Germany.

This society has also collected data to present to the United States Army engineers in support of the claim that the construction of a bridge here would not injure the harbor or interfere with commerce at this port. There will be a public hearing upon the matter in this city within the next 60 days. At that time a committee of engineers from Washington will be present to hear both sides of the case.

Killing of Bachelor Mystifies Officers

Despite Strong Alibi, Tom Bullard Is Held for Death of Farmer Mack Spain.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Whether or not Mack Spain, the eccentrac bachelor farmer of Mexico, a small place west of Waycross, was really murdered and robbed or committed suicide in a fit of despondency, is a question that has arisen in view of the alibi offered by Tom Bullard at the preliminary hearing given him this week, but in spite of which he was bound over to the fall term of Superior Court.

Bullard asked a friend to kill Spain and get all his money, but claims the statement was made merely as a joke. Spain's body was found in a small pond 2 miles from his home three weeks after his disappearance. Bullard himself found the body, which fact argued in his favor, although the testimony of witnesses was to the effect that no one could have seen the body in the pond without having had previous knowledge of its whereabouts.

A careful search has so far failed to find any of the money the farmer had with him and at his home.

Must Not Tie Barges To Government Piling

U. S. Engineer at Savannah Says Wornout Hulks Rot at Moorings.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Because owners of disabled barges and other vessels persist in tying them up to the Government piling in the Savannah harbor, it is probable they will be arraigned in the United States Court and subjected to a heavy fine.

Speaking of this violation of the Federal law, Colonel Dan C. Kingman, United States engineer for this district, said:

"Uncle Sam is patient and long suffering. He puts up with a lot of annoyance rather than be disagreeable. But finally spurred into action, he is likely to make things lively. It looks to me as if something of this kind is about to happen here pretty soon on account of the action of certain imprudent owners of vessels and barges who persist in tying them up to the pilings forming a part of the training wall of Savannah harbor, and leaving them until they sink. These vessels are not only unsightly, but are a great menace to navigation."

BANKRUPTCY SUIT FILED AGAINST BREWING PLANT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—An involuntary bankruptcy suit has been filed against the Consumers' Brewing Company. The moving creditors are M. S. and D. A. Byck, the Herman Coal and Wood Company and J. A. Rimes.

The Consumers' Brewing Company was organized about a year ago to take over and operate the old brewing plant left by Herman Winter, near the Cathedral Cemetery. The company started off with elaborate plans, and intended making a stupendous amusement park of the grounds, but business was disappointingly bad.

MUNICIPAL BRICK PLANT SUGGESTED FOR ORLANDO

ORLANDO, Aug. 9.—Orange County and the city of Orlando are contemplating bond issues for brick paving, and it is City Engineer Ramsay's idea that the city should put in a brick-making plant, ship in the right sort of shale and make its own paving bricks. He has advanced the idea and will bring it before the Council. He figures that Orlando could not only make its own bricks, but could also supply brick for other cities and counties.

SHERIFF'S SPOTTERS BEAT UP; FIVE JAILED

ST. AUGUSTINE, Aug. 8.—Charged with "ganging," two negroes employed by Sheriff Perry as spotters, five negroes from St. Johns Park are in jail here. The Sheriff has been breaking up blind tigers in the country districts and he sent two negroes to the park section to locate some known to exist there. Negroes there became aware of the fact and badly beat up the two.

FATHER F. X. FINNEGAN, one of three Jesuit priests transferred from Tampa to stations in Alabama and Louisiana. He goes to New Orleans. Father Navin goes to Mobile and Father Higgins to Grand Coteau, La.

Three Jesuit Priests Leave Tampa Church

Fathers Navin, Finnegan and Higgins Sent to Alabama and Louisiana Charges.

TAMPA, Aug. 9.—This city had nearly forgotten that Father John J. Navin was a member of the "wandering" Society of Jesus or Jesuit Fathers and so subject to be moved elsewhere whenever his superiors thought it for the good of the cause, just as a soldier is moved about from post to post.

Father Navin had been here twelve years when the order came last week for him to take charge of Spring Hill College at Mobile. During his residence in this city he built up Sacred Heart College from a small institution to a power among the Catholic people in this section of Florida, and has done a great work here.

Father F. X. Finnegan, who has been Father Navin's chief co-worker here, was also transferred, as was Father Higgins, who has been in charge of the mission work here. Father Finnegan goes to New Orleans and Father Higgins to Grand Coteau, La.

Father Navin's place in Tampa as pastor of Sacred Heart parish is taken by Father M. McNally, who comes here from long service in a Jesuit college in New Orleans.

SEABOARD SPECIAL AGENT RESIGNS HIS POSITION

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Thomas Ballantyne, former chief of the Savannah fire department, but for several months special agent of the Seaboard Air Line Railway on the Hutchinson Island terminals, has resigned, and J. R. Whitten, of New Orleans, has been named to succeed him. It is understood that Ballantyne will accept a position as chief of a department in a neighboring city.

FLORIDA GAME LAW REQUIRES STATE PERMIT

Identification Necessary for All Hunters—Fees Required From Both Residents and Vistors.

JACKSONVILLE, Aug. 9.—When the hunters begin to polish up their guns for a round of sport next winter in Florida they will find that they will be hunting under different conditions than heretofore. A new set of laws has been passed and will be in force this fall.

This new law provides that all hunters must secure a license, but that property owners may hunt upon their own lands without a permit during the open season. All other parties must have either county or State licenses. Residents of the State will have to pay $1 for a county license and $3 for a State license. Non-residents will have to secure a license in the same manner as do residents of the State, but they will have to pay fees of $15.

In the application for a license the party seeking it must show to the county judge who issues the permit that he is able to write his (or her) own name, state his color, color of eyes and hair and give several other marks of identification.

Penalties are provided for all failures to live up to the law. No hunter will be allowed to take more than ten pairs of game birds in one day's shoot. The open and closed seasons are different for the different classes of game and fish. A game protection fund of $5,000 is to be maintained out of the fees and fines collected. All money in excess of that amount is to be turned over to the State school fund once each year.

Too Much Money to Spend in Waycross

City's Income More Than Pays All Expenses—Tax Rate To Be Cut Down.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—With a $780 appropriation for twelve months, the committee on parks and cemeteries of Waycross City Council expended only $1.30, according to the financial statement for the first six months of the year just issued.

Practically every department of the city is keeping within its budget, and will end the year with a balance to its credit. The engineering department, with $14,484 available, has spent only $6,011.96. Out of an appropriation of $10,280 the fire department has spent but $3,855.38.

The revised estimate of income places the total for 1913 at $156,442.43. The estimate when the year's appropriations were made was $151,000. The expected increase will therefore leave the city a neat balance to start 1914 with.

In addition to these expenditures the city is spending $100,000 in permanent improvements, this money coming from a bond issue voted last year.

50 MARKSMEN COMPETE FOR LABOR DAY SHOOT

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—About 50 men from the First Regiment Infantry, National Guard of Georgia, are taking daily rifle practice in an effort to secure ten men to compete in the Labor Day shoot at the Rose Dhu Range.

Several valuable trophies are offered. The DeBonne trophy, valued at $3,000, is the most coveted.

Million Dollar Gain In Ware County Taxes

Collector Chases Dodgers and Announces Intention of Making a Perfect Record.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—From his hasty examination of the 1913 tax returns for Ware County, Tax Collector J. T. Strickland is confident a large amount of property subject to taxation has not been returned and he announced to-day that he intended getting every bit of it on the tax books within a few months. That his work will give Ware an increase of at least $1,000,00 0is practically certain. As the report now stands the returns for 1913 show an increase of $546,349 over 1912.

The big growth of Waycross is the main cause for the gain shown.

The tax rate, now $13 a thousand, will probably be reduced to $10. The collector says he thinks he will make a collection record for the year of 100 per cent, something that has not been done in this county up to date.

THIEF STEALS WARDROBE OF WAYCROSS CANDIDATE

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Alderman Scott T. Beaton, of the Fourth ward, a probable candidate for mayor, is on the warpath. During his vacation at Mayport some one entered his home on Gilmore street and went off with his best clothes, a lot of silverware, some of his wife's dresses and a shotgun he had just purchased. The kitchen window was smashed with an ax and whoever robbed the place made a good job.

PIERCE INSTITUTE HAS FLATTERING PROSPECTS

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—According to President W. A. Huckabee, Pierce Collegiate Institute, Georgia's newest college, located at Blackshear, east of Waycross, will open in September with a very flattering attendance. The college is a Methodist institution and owns buildings valued at $60,000.

New York Gas 'Tips' Wasted on Waycross

City Council Ignores Wall Street Promoter's Proposal to Build Plant.

WAYCROSS, Aug. 9.—Aldermen of Waycross have evidently had enough of the gas proposition, judging by the lack of interest taken by City Council in a communication from a New Yorker showing how the city could build a gas plant and operate it at a profit instead of giving a franchise to outsiders.

The proposition was made to the city when it was learned that a bond of $2,550 given by George W. Deen and L. M. Aldrich as evidence of their intention to spend no less than $20,000 within a year, had been declared forfeited.

By spending $85,000, the New Yorker claimed, Waycross would have a money-making plant. The success of the municipal gas plant at Albany was given as an illustration. The Waycross City Council ignored the proposal.

TYBEE'S CATHOLIC CHURCH TOO SMALL FOR TOURISTS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Plans are being considered for enlarging the Roman Catholic chapel at Tybee.

This season the attendance has been so large that men and boys have had to stand. The summer communicants have been most generous in their contributions to the enlargement fund. They have also raised a fund for the purchase of new vestments for the priest.

FARMERS QUIT COTTON TO GROW WATERMELONS

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9—The biggest watermelon crop on record is being moved along the Savannah and Statesboro Railroad. Already more than 650 cars have been hauled. Bennett Maas, commercial agent for the Macon Dublin and Savannah, reports that farmers are so well pleased with their melon crops that some of them will abandon cotton-planting and go in for melons entirely.

For MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

BELTS of white kid, lined with colored ribbons or silk, are dainty accessories to the all-white outdoor costume. One style, a wide belt of dull kid, which fastens together with pearl snap fasteners and has two wide sashes at the side, is lined with shell-pink taffeta ribbon. Another sort of white lined belt shows a piped edge of colored kid to match the lining, and a white kid buckle piped with color.

No more than in grown-ups is there any lack of variety in wearing apparel for children. Coats, frocks, hats each shows interesting little touches and carefully worked-out details.

Children of all ages are wearing their skirts unusually short just now, while as for the waist line, it may be anywhere above or below the normal waist line, for the use of the normal line has a tendency to make the figure look older, and the chief characteristic of any frock between 4 and 14 year sizes should be its youthfulness.

Women of to-day love to array themselves in fragile robes of white tulle bordered with white fox and to load their necks with pearls. It is in a way a white season, and all the white things that are now most fashionable are expensive. I never remember having seen so many necklaces and ropes of pearls worn in the daytime as now; it is a sort of mania with women of fashion.

* * *

An automobile rainproof (waterproof) and dustproof silk lap robe is a beautiful affair—green on the one side and white on the other and bound with green leather. It is so light that it could be used in summer without giving warmth and yet would furnish the desired protection for dresses. In winter it would be just as useful spread over a heavier robe.

* * *

This reminds me of the latest raincoat—the lightest (in weight) article of its kind—made of silk mounted on a rubber lining. It is very soft and folds easily into a little pocket-case six inches long. It is of a beautiful shade of dark blue and most elegantly made.

* * *

One of the most beautiful felt hats I have seen for men came with the latest importation from England. The felt has body, yet it is the softest, silkiest and smoothest of felts, folding easily into any sort of a lump without a wrinkle to tell of its rough usage afterward. It is for the traveler, and is to be carried in a case three by four inches—a regular vest pocket affair. It takes but an instant to pat it into shape, and it retains its form perfectly until refolded.

Black velvet neckbands in the Marie Antoinette style are as popular as ever, but some of the great art jewelers of Paris are making some attractive bands in deep blue velvet rimmed with sapphires. Needless to say, these neckbands are exceedingly expensive, quite as expensive as an ordinary necklace of precious stones, but then they are immensely chic and with white summer dresses they give the most artistic effects it is possible to imagine.

* * *

The fashion for thin white frocks made of plain and colored materials has had extensive vogue this summer, and many of these gowns made of costly and admirable material are now to be had for a few dollars. Think what good-looking house gowns they make for the winter evening; they also serve for day hours when one must attend weddings or receive at afternoon teas, and the women who do few of these things find such gowns excellent for informal theater parties.

Even the much abused white skirt with its flowered taffeta coat can be utilized all next winter for the theater and for restaurant dinners and suppers if its sleeves are made elbow length and its neck is cut open in front.

* * *

Inexpensive glass beads can be worn to give the right tone of color to the all-white costume. Opaque beads are sold in chains sufficiently long to go about the neck and drop in a V-line in front—a line which is artistic and much more becoming than the round neck line. These beads come in various shades of green and are especially effective in jade color. They are also sold in yellow, red and blue.

* * *

Attractive evening caps are made of white tulle. They consist of a puffed crown, edged with a box-plaited frill that turns smartly back from the face. They are trimmed with pompons of stiff tulle at the side. Other pretty evening caps for summer wear are made of silver or gold tissue, mounted on China silk, and banded with fluffy, soft white marabou.

* * *

There was a time when the making of a fashionable girdle was a feat for the nimble fingered. Now the most modish girdle is made of a strip of taffeta silk, plainly fastened about the waist, edged on each side with an inch-wide frill of knife-pleated silk. The girdle is made without folds, and is loosely worn. It hooks in the back, under a flat bow or buckle, and is eight or ten inches wide.

* * *

The "bungalow apron" is popular with the brides who like to appear "housewifely." It is an all-enveloping apron, with elbow sleeves and square neck, which buttons from neck to hem in the back and is neatly belted in at the waist. It can be worn over the frock to keep it spotless, or, if the day is sultry, it can be worn instead of a frock and thus serve the purpose of two garments in one.

These aprons are made generally of plain, serviceable materials. One attractive sort is of khaki, the belt, pocket, cuffs and neck piped with red cotton. Another is of thin blue and white gingham with pipings of blue lawn.

The Fad of White Mourning

White mourning, which has been gaining ground for months, is a sensible fashion for the sultry days of August, and is worn more naturally now than it was in the winter and spring. Then it attracted attention, and was therefore shunned by many women of conservative taste. Now, when all the world wears white—all the American world, at any rate—white crepe and other mourning fabrics are inconspicuous.

The woman who wears white mourning must remember that she must wear nothing but white. White and black in no wise indicate mourning, and no matter how many attractive frocks she sees which combine white with black, she must remember that white mourning must be all white.

The use of white mourning crepe for trimming should be as cautiously indulged in as that of black. Too much crepe suggests showiness. But as for trimming material, and one of the few allowed to the women in mourning, crepe holds an important place.

'HAREM GOWN' IS NOW RAGE DRAPED TROUSERS GIVE NAME

Greek and Orient Combined in Costume; More for Drawing Room Than Street.

The latest Parisian gown for women, the "Harem," is here. It is illusive, alluring and bewildering, this gown of cobwebby tissues which is worked out in an exquisite maze—the color of California poppies dripping with dew—the dew being illustrated by quantities of the finest cut crystal trimming.

The Princess of Arabian Night fame may have worn some such a costume when she weaved the various legends which saved her from being tied in a sack with three or four raging cats and tossed into the Bosphorus.

The gown, which combines the most ultra of Parisian modishness with the languor of the Orient, is not planned for street wear, it is rather for the drawing room or boudoir.

Sheer and transparent voluminous trousers disclose white silk stockings heavily embroidered in brilliants. The trousers are not gathered at the instep, but edged with the same crystal trimming which falls over extremely high-heeled, cloth-of-gold slippers. The only note of contrasting color is in the draperies of the bodice.

The gown has its greatest charms when the wearer is seen in silhouette against a brilliant light. Then there is all the grace and beauty of the Greek dancing figure.

These same costumes, made up in more opaque and darker materials are being worn on the boulevards and in the cafes of the French capital. But it is not expected they will become of general vogue in America.

SHOCKING DRESS AMMUNITION IN DUEL OF WOMEN

At Least That's the Opinion of London Writer in Discussing Craze for Display.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Since a woman correspondent in The Times wrote at length of the "orgy of undressing" among women it has been rather amusing to note the different theories put forward by men and women in newspapers to account for the feminine fashion to wear fewer clothes. Side by side with comment for and against on the craze for "leaving off" have been remarks on the daring character of modern modes and the airy fashions that obtain for women.

Stockings of diaphanous silk, slashings and liftings of the skirt to display the leg halfway to the knee, showing every movement, and the low necked afternoon frock with a V shaped opening filled with flimy lace have all been under discussion.

One correspondent suggested that women were engaged on "an extensive advertising campaign."

Two women writers have referred respectively to "the return of the prude" and "the triumph of common sense," while a third has taunted men with regretting the passing of the petticoat because there is for the male no piquancy and mystery about the tight skirt. Man prefers, she implies, the fling provocative skirt.

The most novel explanation, however, is advanced by Mr. Godfrey Dean in The Daily Dispatch, which no other has yet offered.

"The explanation is," he writes, "that the woman-feminine, as I may so call her, finds it necessary—owing to the changed attitude of men toward women brought about by militant suffragism—to distinguish herself by a definite display and assertion of her essential femininity from the woman suffragist, or at least, the suffragist of advanced or militant opinions.

"I do not for a moment think that in thus calling on masculine attention by making the most of her physical charms the woman-feminine is acting deliberately on conscious thought. On the contrary, I think this alluring display of feminine curves and form by means of transparent and clinging gowns is sub-consciously inspired by the events of the last twelve months or so, which have made men more critical of women.

"In her natural repugnance to being mistaken for what she is not—a suffragist—the woman feminine is displaying her charms. She cannot very well wear a label; she cannot very well declare herself to strange fellow travelers for what she is; but she can and does endeavor to distinguish herself from women of whose conduct she disapproves.

"The more the woman suffragist asserts herself the more necessary it is for the woman-feminine to assert herself. It is woman's silent duel, and dress, or should I say undress, is playing a big part in it.

Many Lives Saved As Train Is Ditched

Forethought of Towerman Averts Crash Between Specials by Taking Chance on Tragedy.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Scores of lives were saved to-day when a towerman in Burnham, Ill., threw the Ohio River special on the Pennsylvania Railroad into a derail and averted its collision with a through Wabash train from St. Louis. The train took the ditch at high speed. The Pennsylvania locomotive was overturned in the crash, but aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman, no one was hurt.

A moment after the Pennsylvania train hit the derailer the Wabash train clicked across the frogs at the track intersection less than 1,000 feet away.

Kneeless Stocking Now California Fad

Pasadena Society Women Emulate Example of Co-eds of Leading Eastern Universities.

PASADENA, CAL., Aug. 9.—Emulating the fair co-eds of some of the leading Eastern universities, a number of Pasadena society women are now wearing the kneeless stocking and the custom gives all promise of becoming the fad in the Crown City's smartest set before the opening of the coming winter social season.

The "kneeless stocking" is nothing more or less than men's half hose, and, according to those who have discarded the ordinary long feminine stocking, so much comfort and satisfaction is being derived by the wearers of the kneeless hose, which comes no higher than the cuff of the leg, that it is doubtful if they ever return to the usual style of stockings worn by the fair sex.

With the adoption of the new fad, men's furnishing stores in Pasadena have had a rush of business in half hose, with the fair sex of Pasadena the purchasers. At the department stores the finest grade of men's silken hosiery is being shown, with the bright colors most in demand.

Among those who have discarded the full length for the kneeless stocking none are more enthusiastic over the superiority of this style than Mrs. J. Marcus Rothingwall, president of the Pasadena Pansy Club.

$16,500,000 Gems in Buckingham Palace

Extraordinary Precautions Are Taken to Protect Jewels Against Burglars.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—King George has a great idea of his responsibility in regard to the jewels at the various royal palaces, and from time to time has them recatalogued and revalued. Those at Buckingham Palace were recently assessed and declared to be worth $16,500,000.

It is said that there is scarcely an object in the whole collection with which the Queen is not familiar. New measures safety have been adopted and it would now be impossible for the cleverest burglar in Europe to make an entrance without attracting attention.

An electric alarm was recently added. The police guard around the palace has also been increased.

Town to Draw Rules On Woman's Dress

Morals Efficiency Committee Is Raised to Take Matter Up With Burgess.

ROCHESTER, PA., Aug. 9.—Following suggestions made by D. W. Denton, president of the Rochester Council, Burgess J. M. Cargo will be asked to formulate a set of rules regulating wearing apparel of women who appear on the streets of Rochester.

Denton's suggestions were made on complaints he said had been made to him about the transparency of the gowns worn by young women. A Morals Efficiency Committee was named to take the matter up with the Burgess.

Dressmaking Class To Cut Cost of Living

Paterson, New Jersey, High School Will Make Every Girl Graduate a Modiste.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 9.—To combat the high cost of living the Paterson Board of Education has established a dressmaking department. In the future every girl graduate will be a trained modiste.

The question of advanced sewing in the high school has been under consideration for some time, but the authorities have not before been in a position to spend the amount of money necessary to carry out their project. A large, light room, equipped with sewing machines, dress forms, electric irons, ironing boards and cutting tables, has been set aside for the new department.

GAY GOWNS ARE SEEN AT PICNICS ON THE THAMES

Net and Lace Are in High Favor Right Now—Telling Effects in Black and White.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—However overelaborated may be the fashions as worn by the "Upper Ten," the women of the stage nowadays set the example of being always appropriately dressed, whether the function be a river picnic or a race meeting.

Some of the frocks seen on the upper reaches of the Thames are particularly attractive. One greatly admired gown was of white voile, worn by Miss Cooper, with a close allover pattern of blue and a center panel of fine embroidered batiste, with the undercollar and pipings of a darker blue. The prettiest black velvet bows finished both the neck and waist.

Another of dainty pink had broad insertions of embroidery and a black suede belt, while a third was of Paisley voile in blue and fawn. Still another, perhaps the prettiest of all, was of white Irish linen with insertions of lace. The lower half of the skirt and the front of the bodice were in broderie Anglaise, and again there appeared the chic black belt and bow.

Blouses have become more diaphanous; net and lace are all the rage just now, some specially pretty frocks having touches of black on collar and jabot, while others of white French voile are most fascinating.

Watermelons to Reduce Living Cost

Greatest Supply Ever Known Now Being Consumed—Chicago Eats 100 Carloads a Day.

Ham bone am sweet, bacon am good,
Possum fat am very, very fine;
But gimme, oh, gimme,
Oh, how I wish you would,
That watermillion hangin' on the vine.
—OLD SOUTHERN MELODY.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Want to reduce the high cost of living? Eat watermelons—better and bigger and cheaper than they have been for years. The year 1913 is the greatest watermelon year ever known. The crop is moving into town at the rate of 100 cars a day of the juciest, most delicious melons that ever were plugged.

The Florida melons are gone. The Georgia and Alabama bumper crops are fast disappearing. Alabama and Texas are keeping the world happy now counting the slippery black seeds. Next week hurrah for Mississouri and Oklahoma watermelons, and they will linger until September.

Parrot Jests Judge; Then Makes Ruling

Bird Calls Bachelor Jurist 'Papa' and Asks Him 'How's the Baby?'

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—"Hello, papa; how's the baby?"

A parrot decided its ownership in the private chambers of Judge Wade, in the Chicago Avenue Court, by perching on the head of one of two women, who were fighting for the custody of the bird, and directing the foregoing query at the judge.

Judge Wade incidentally is a bachelor. He smiled good-naturedly. Spectators laughed. The two women giggled.

The bird was awarded to Mrs. Clara Gunn, who had been arrested on complaint of Mrs. Mary Krippels. Mrs. Gunn took the bird out of the basement of the Krippels home July 8. She testified the parrot was stolen from her four weeks ago.

Slit Trousers Man Mobbed by Newsboys

W. Leffingwell Doak, of Pittsburg, a Martyr to the Cause of Fashion.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—A martyr to fashion, W. Leffingwell Doak, of the North Side fashionable set, was this afternoon mobbed by newsboys in Fifth avenue when he appeared in slit trousers.

Mr. Doak's trousers were of a light check material. The slit extended from the bottom of the legs on the outside to within about six inches of the knee. A glimpse of bright green hosiery, of the long feminine variety, was disclosed. Mr. Doak carried a light bamboo cane and a handkerchief was tucked in the cuff of his right sleeve. He was the first follower here of the style predicated at the National Convention of Tailors at Cedar Point, Ohio, last week.

Doak bore the clamorings of the boys until they began to kick him in the shins. He called for a policeman, and when one appeared the boys scattered. Doak took a car, announcing that he would go right home and change his clothes.

$350 for a Dress Held Not Too Much

Mrs. John Francis Yawger, Prominent Clubwoman, Thinks Sum Is Not Extravagant.

Should a woman be considered extravagant because she spends $350 for a dress? Mrs. John Francis Yawger, secretary of the Federation of New York Women's Clubs and member of many other civic and social organizations, does not think so. "When a woman spends large sums of money on her personal appearance she is reflecting as much credit on her husband as on herself," says Mrs. Yawger. "If her husband can afford to allow her to pay $350 for a dress the public has no call to describe the woman as extravagant."

'Dressed-Up Dude' Thrashed by Woman

Though Man Was Roughly Handled, Judge Fines Masher $25 In Addition.

JERSEY CITY, Aug. 9.—"The women of Jersey City must be protected from dressed-up dudes, who insult them in the street," yesterday said Judge O'Brien, in imposing a $25 fine upon Irving Bendar, of No. 112 Mercer street, Jersey City.

In this case it was the defendant who needed protection. His eye was discolored, his nose swollen and his lip cut, the result of his encounter with Mrs. Viola Brophy, of No. 401 Ocean avenue, Jersey City, whom he had accosted.

SUNDAY AMERICAN'S SPECIAL CABLE LETTERS RECEIVED FROM ALL THE GREAT CAPITALS OF EUROPE

LIVE LORD JOINS IN A REAL PLOT OF GAIETY GIRLS

Film Play Proves a Success, but London Is Startled Because It Contains an Idea.

By ALAN DALE.
Special Correspondent of The Sunday American.

LONDON, July 25.—There's a real lord in the production of "The Girl on the Film" at the Gaiety Theater. He is programmed as Arthur Wellesley, but in real life he is Lord Langan, and—"a charming chap," as they say over here. I mention this circumstance, you see, conspicuously, because it's good to get anything real in musical comedy, even a lord. But the "nobility" can do no better than stick to George Edwardes. He not only provides brides for the nobility, but he gets the nobility into his cast.

Lord Langan seems to be a pleasant young man. Nobody could possibly guess that he is more than the program says he is. It is a great thing to be able to conceal one's nobility, isn't it? Mr. Wellesley does it. He is blithe and debonair, and he wears evening clothes, with a gray stripe down the trousers. Perhaps a gray stripe down the trousers is a secret emblem of nobility.

There is a plot in "The Girl on the Film"—a real, solid, substantial, made-in-Germany plot—and this is so unusual that George Edwardes provides a booklet for each person, setting forth his plot in narrative form. You get so in the habit of "dropping in" at any old time to a George Edwardes show that you never dream of a plot. Why a plot? Lest you should miss this one, Mr. George Edwardes places it under your very eyes, as it were. It begins like this: "Max Daly (Mr. George Grossmith), manager, author and actor, is preparing a new play for the cinema theaters, under the title of 'Napoleon and the Miller's Daughter,' in which he is to represent Napoleon. His manageress and leading comedienne is Miss Euphemia Knox (Miss Connie Ediss)." Simple, isn't it? Almost gutlelessly Gaiety!

The musical comedy is rather interesting, because it deals with the cinema business, which, as you know, IS quite a business. A "Vioscope" company arrives, and arrangements are made for taking the film of the picture drama, "Napoleon and the Miller's Daughter." You assist at the making of the film, and in the last act you see the very film cinema'd that you've watched in the making. This struck me as a mighty good idea and quite a novelty for a musical show. In fact, I've heard many people declare that they didn't care overweeningly for "The Girl on the Film," and I attribute this to the fact that it contains an idea. How is it that a musical comedy dares to contain an idea?

Moreover, this film-taking business contains the plot. The leading lady, who is to play the miller's daughter, throws up her part, and Freddy, the heroine, takes her place and is recognized later by an irate father. Freddy is a very pretty girl, disguised as a boy, so—you see your Gaiety! I apologize for even suggesting as much as I have done of the plot. But I felt it was me dooty, inasmuch as "The Girl on the Film" is novel.

It is almost sauerkrautishly German in its presentment of sponsors—"from the German Rudolf Bernauer and Rudolf Schanzer, with music by Walter Kollo, Willy Bredschneider and Albert Sironay!" Poor George Edwardes, who has to make a bluff of doing something English for English people, heads all these names with "A" musical farce by James T. Tanner." The music is not as good as the plot. It is not epoch-making by any means, but rather pleasant and enervating, as it were. It was being done in Berlin while I was there as the "Filmzauber." I carefully avoided it there.

Little Miss Emmy Wehlen, with whom I chatted recently, is very charming indeed as Freddy, the heroine, and is getting quite Gaiety-fied. I prophesy that she will become a great favorite in London, because, like a clever girl, she seems to know exactly what London wants. Connie Ediss is all to the fore again with her inexhaustible, warranted-never-to-wear-out cockney dialect and all her old mannerisms. Then there is a somewhat handsome woman called Madeleine Seymour, who is of the large and langurous type. Charles Maude, a relative of Cyril; George Barrett, Robert Nainby and George Grossmith are the best of the men. Mr. Grossmith is an agile and as like himself as ever. All these people, if they dared to try and be like anybody else, would be horribly unrecognized. If you once make a hit at the Gaiety you are O. K. for life, provided you never try to do anything different. Novelty and versatility are fatal. You must be yourself until you fall by the wayside.

It's a nice performance, take it all in all, and I'm bound to say I was agreeably surprised, for I had heard that it was not a nice performance. You see, it had a plot to contend with, and in London they are used to aimless philandering. Also, it is German, and English is, of course, more popular.

There was an "ad" on the program that amused me a lot. Really, they are as "ad"-ridden and indiscriminate in London as they are in New York. This was the ad: "So-and-So, Inquiry Agent to the Nobility and Gentry, intrusted with divorce and delicate negotiations in all parts of the world. Go to him if blackmailed, or in difficulties." I thought that almost whimsically amusing.

But "The Girl on the Film" is better than some of the Gaiety Girls, and it seems to have caught on here.

Prince John Is Infant Terrible of Royal Family

Finds Dark Secret of Peeress' Peerless Curls

Prince John, youngest son of King George, taking a donkey ride "incog" in the London Zoo.

Youngest Son of King George Is Fear and Joy of Monarch's Household.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—A British prototype of that well-known pair of juvenile stars, the Katzenjammer Kids, is nobody less than Prince John, the youngest son of King George of England. The young Prince is the infant terrible of that tight little island, and mothers and fathers are discussing his widely heralded pranks with horror or with glee, according to the varied temperament of mothers and fathers.

The last story is the best. The newspapers have told it, and it must be so, that a certain lady of high degree was invited to have tea with Queen Mary. It was a pleasant occasion, indeed, taking tea with the Queen.

But when the peeress arose from the table she discovered with horror that golden ringlets of hair, ringlets that had been highly praised by friends and sung by poets as her chiefest beauty, were lying on the floor at the back of her chair.

The Prince, investigating the beautiful ringlets, found out what had been lost to the discriminating eyes of friends and poets. The ringlets came off too easily.

That is only one story. The other day he told his nurse, without so much persiflage, to go to a certain place where snow is unknown. The nurse, instead, went to the Queen with her complaint, and the royal mother ordered her son to apologize. He did. It was a royal apology.

"You needn't go," said he to the nurse.

The boy Prince is very democratic, and when offered his choice of outings he selects visits to public parks, donkey rides, elbow brushing with boys and girls of the middle and lower classes.

The two other sons of the King of England, Prince Henry and the Prince of Wales, are comparatively staid youths. Henry is going soon to Eton, where he will live the life of the ordinary English schoolboy. The Prince of Wales will join a cavalry regiment, with sorrow in his 19-year-old heart that he can not rear a mustache.

HEART IS STARTED AFTER VICTIM DIES

French Physician Tells How Action of Organ Was Resumed by Massage Treatment.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Dr. Bouchon, following in the footsteps of Dr. Carrel, recently succeeded in reviving the normal action of the heart ten minutes after death. In a paper which he will read at the next meeting of the Academy of Medicine Dr. Bouchon says:

"After a motor car accident I was called in and immediately perceived that the victim had been killed instantaneously. Despite my assurance that there was no doubt as to his death, the friends of the victim insisted that a desperate attempt should be made at resuscitation, and about ten minutes after the last breath I decided upon a surgical operation having diagnosed traumatic rupture of the heart.

"I opened the thorax and in 50 seconds laid the heart bare. I immediately found about a pint of blood in the pericardium and a heart wound about two and one-half inches long on the inner surface of the left ventricle. After suture, I proceeded to apply my method of reviving heart action.

"After filling all the cardiac cavities with a special organic liquid, I made a rapid tacheotomy and introduced oxygen by the tracheal tube, while my assistant performed artificial respiration tractions.

"I then began alternate auricular massage of the heart, and at the end of about a minute I clearly perceived that the heart had resumed tonicity, and, to my great surprise, it continued to contract by its own true action.

"Radical pulsation then became perceptible, and after I had closed the thoracic flap the heart continued to contract for 35 minutes. At the end of this time the contractions suddenly ceased, and all subsequent efforts to re-establish them were in vain."

Lord Haldane, Its Keeper, Must Go to Montreal Soon to Address Bar Association.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—The Lord Chancellor, Lord Haldane, is to deliver the annual address to the American Bar Association at Montreal on September 1.

This will necessitate his absence from England from August 23 till September 8.

As Lord Chancellor, Lord Haldane is the keeper of the King's Conscience, the outward and visible sign of which is the Great Seal, without which no act of Parliament can receive the royal assent.

The Great Seal travels with Lord Haldane in this country. But it must not leave the United Kingdom, therefore it is to be placed in the custody of three commissioners.

NOTED ACTOR WORN DOWN BY MACBETH FILM POSING

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Arthur Bourchier, the well-known English actor and his wife, whose stage name is Violet Van Brugh, have just returned from Germany, where they played "Macbeth" for cinematograph purposes. It is understood that the couple received $5,000 for their work, which occupied a week.

High though the remuneration was, Mr. Bourchier found the task not so easy as he had expected it would be. He complains that he had to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning in order to catch the proper light, and that the necessity of waiting about in costume for hours was most unpleasant.

JAPANESE PLAN TO MAKE TOKIO BUSINESS CITY

Mayor Would Have Capital Become Industrial Center of the Empire in Near Future.

Special Cable to The American.

TOKIO, Aug. 9.—A bigger and busier industrial Tokio is the dream of Baron Sakatani, Mayor of the capital of the Japanese Empire. Osaka, great industrial city to the south, has made giant strides as a world port, and Mayor Sakatani is anxious that Tokio should show more rivalry to Osaka, which he calls the Manchester of Japan.

The Baron is convinced that China offers a great field for Japanese enterprise, and that the commercial development of Tokio is necessary so that Japan may take advantage of this field. Manchuria and Korea also loom up as possibilities for increased Japanese commerce, but in order to get this trade Tokio must devise some more convenient means of transportation than by Kobe or Tsuruga.

Would Open New Port.

The first step, the Mayor thinks, should be the opening of a new port at Nayoyetsu, in Echigo, north of Tokio. In its commercial development Tokio suffers from the disadvantage of higher wages and more extravagant habits of living. Tokio has been a city of consumption rather than of production, and it is the national center of ease and pleasure.

"Everything comes to Tokio," Mayor Sakatani says, "but seldom is anything sent from Tokio elsewhere. The disadvantages to be overcome are the high cost of fuel and labor. If Tokio is to secure the Chinese field for her manufactures, we will have to improve our system of water communication and settle various phases of the local labor question."

Since the revolution in China the demand for foreign manufactures has grown enormously, and Japan should be in a position to take her share, according to Mayor Sakytani. An important step to that end is the making of Tokio a greater commercial and industrial center and cultivation of the friendship of China by promoting mutual understanding between the merchants of both countries.

Explore for Colony.

Scrutiny of the Pacific coast of North and South America and the South Sea Islands for the promotion of productive colonization, is the announced object of the Japan Exploration Society, recently formed for the general purpose of inaugurating Japanese exploration.

The first expedition will leave in September for a two years' cruise on a 115-ton schooner. The course for the cruise includes the Izu and Bonin Islands, the South Sea Islands, the coasts of Brazil and Chile and the Pacific shores of North and South America. The schooner will then visit Cuba and the coast of Africa, and later make her way through the Mediterranean Sea. On the homeward trip she will touch at several points in India and Australia. S. Takeda, a graduate of the Japanese Nautical College and a seasoned sailor, will be the captain of the little vessel.

The Exploration Society is composed of a number of influential Japanese and it has the support of Fleet Admiral Ito.

Cuts Off Fat With Electric Instrument

Scientist Shows London New Diathermic Treatment Applicable Both In Medicine and Surgery.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9—Professor Nagelschmidt, visiting London, performed two operations yesterday for the London Hospital, using his diathermic treatment, which is applicable to both medicine and surgery. In the former, electric rays of a very high temperature pass through the affected parts and in surgery the current reaches the tissues from the edge of a knifelike instrument and acts as a bloodless cautery. Professor Nagelschmidt has used the treatment for reduction of obesity and says that forty patients thus treated were deprived in the aggregate of 500 pounds of unwanted fat.

Market for Old Coins Is Hit by Discovery

Laborer in Rome Unearths Huge Quantity of Money Buried 2,500 Years Ago.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, Aug. 9.—There was a bad slump this week in the market for old coins, which has been very active, owing to the interest taken by King Victor Emmanuel.

In digging a trench here for a sewer, a laborer struck and broke a large clay pot. A stream of coins poured out. He filled his pockets and ran away, but was caught.

Altogether there were 7,600 coins of the early consular period, dating back about 2,500 years, and all well preserved.

AVIATOR LATEST SUITOR OF FAIR IRISH PEERESS

London Society Is Interested in Hamel's Attempt to Win Heart of Lady Victoria Pery.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Whether an engagement caps the romance of Lady Victoria Pery, the fascinating daughter of the Earl and Countess of Limerick, and Gustav Hamel, the aviator, remains to be seen, but the mother publicly smiles on the young flying man and the progress of the courtship is watched with interest.

During the spring, the peer's daughter went to London to fly and the good looking Hamel escorted Lady Victoria cloudwards for $25. Soon afterward, society was mildly thrilled to see Hamel in the train of Lady Limerick and her daughter at many smart balls.

Lady Limerick invariably asked for invitations for Hamel and he was always seen dancing and supping with the mother and daughter. Little serious import was placed on the strange combination until the last night of the opera. A prominent box party at Covent Garden comprised Lady Victoria and Hamel in front, with Lady Limerick chaperoning beamingly in the background.

Since then gossip has engaged the young people, but no announcement is forthcoming from the family.

Lady Victoria has been one of the most conspicuous girls in society since her debut. In one year she was engaged twice; once to Duke San Antona and afterward to the Hon. Luke White, Lord Annaly's son. Both engagements were abandoned and the Irish beauty continued her career of heart breaking.

How to Lose Your Tan, Freckles or Wrinkles

(From Woman's Tribune.)

A day's motoring, an afternoon on the tennis ground or golf links, a sunbath on the beach or exposure on a sea trip, often brings on a deep tan or vivid crimson or, more perplexing still, a vigorous crop of freckles. A very necessary thing then is mercolized wax, which removes tan, redness or freckles quite easily. It literally peels off the affected skin—just a little at a time, so there's no hurt or injury. As the skin comes off in almost invisible flaky particles, no trace of the treatment is shown. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at your druggist's and use this nightly as you would cold cream, washing it off mornings. In a week or so you will have an entirely new skin, beautifully clear, transparent and of a most delicate whiteness.

Wrinkles, so apt to form at this season, may be easily and quickly removed by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 ounce dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pint. This is not only a valuable astringent, but has a beneficial tonic effect also.—(Adv.)

Young Marquis Still Loves Daisy Markham

Northampton, Who Paid Actress $250,000 Heart Balm, Writes Letters That Shock Family.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—The actions of the young Marquis of Northampton, who recently paid Daisy Markham, actress, $250,000 as a balm for her wounded affections, is giving his noble relatives a great deal of concern of late.

It is an open secret among members of his family that the Marquis is still in love with the young actress.

A few days after his refusal to bid her good-bye in the high court the day of the trial he sent her a note bearing the seal of Northampton, which was full of good wishes and hopes for her future and profuse apologies for his apparent ill treatment. He impressed on her that what he had done had been due to great pressure and was not dictated by his heart.

According to one report current here, he has been meeting the actress, but the young woman declined to renew their former friendship. It is known that three weeks ago he surprised and shocked his sister, Lady Loch, by announcing that he intended to rent the old family estates and give up society for three years.

FRANCIS JOSEPH BEST LINGUIST OF ALL RULERS

Austrian Monarch Speaks Eleven Languages Well—Emperor William Ranks Second.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.
Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Statistics just published here by an investigator show that Francis Joseph, of Austria, is the greatest linguist of all reigning sovereigns. He speaks eleven languages fluently. They are German, French, Hungarian, Czech, Polish, Servian, Croatian, Ruthenian, Dalmatian, Roumanian and Italian. All these living languages he needs for practical purposes within his own patchwork empire.

It was in view of preparing him for his high position that as a boy 70 years ago he was taught the tongues of all his subjects. He also acquired a gentleman's knowledge of Greek, Hebrew and Latin.

German Emperor Second.

The German Emperor comes second as a royal linguist, being master of German, English, French, Russian, Polish and Latin. He holds, however, that the German is the only language in which to express a great mission.

Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria knows all the Slavic dialects, but not many languages. He speaks French, English, German and Russian. King Peter of Servia is similarly equipped.

King Nicholas of Montenegro is not a linguist. He has, however, a sufficiently liberal education to have been able to act as tutor for his own five daughters and two sons. The Greek King Constantine's linguistic attainments are not of a high order, although he speaks French, English and German in a halting way.

Alfonso Speaks Only Three.

King Alfonso of Spain was educated like an English prince, more attention being given to sports than languages. He speaks French, English and German. The Czar of Russia is not much better equipped except in Slavic dialects.

The three worst linguists are the Pope, the King of Italy and King George of England. Pius X never expected to be Pope and was not trained for the position. King Victor Emmanuel has not the language faculty. King George thought that the education of an English gentleman consisted in being able to read Horace and ride to hounds. Had he not the venerable authority of Oxford for this?

GENERAL DEVELOPMENT THEME OF JOE BEAN IN NEW SET OF EXERCISES

If You Weary of Special Treatment for Abdomen, Back, Waist and So on, Here Are Some Fine New Stunts That Will Help You All Over.

By JOE BEAN.

So far in my little specifications for building men, I have prescribed exercises that would take care of and improve some particular part of the body, showing just how that exercise would do the work and explaining its benefits.

And now there appears to be a growing demand among people who know me and are interested in my work for some general exercises that will be of universal benefit to the digestion, the muscular system, and, in fact, to the entire anatomy.

So I am going to give my readers a series of articles on general exercises.

At that, it must be understood that in taking abdominal exercises, or waist exercises, or back exercises, the part specifically brought into play is by no means the only part benefited. The arms and the legs, and frequently the neck, all profit by the strenuous work imposed on the waist or other sections.

As regards typically general exercises, there are many games that might come well under that head. Home work—pottering about the garden, mowing the lawn, and all that sort of thing—also may be regarded as general exercises.

A "Setting Up" Drill.

Following is a list of excellent general exercises, of the "setting up" style so much favored in the army and navy as a means of keeping the men in fine trim from head to heels. I don't know any set of exercises that will prove of more benefit to the entire body than these.

No. 1. With the hands on the hips crouch on the left leg, bending the knees and then extending the right leg to the front, keeping the body rigidly erect and maintaining the balance by carefully applied muscular effort. At first you may have to hold on to something, but that should be abandoned as soon as possible. Always bend the knees as far as possible before straightening out the right leg, and in rising bring that leg back to the bending position and then rise to the full height again. This should be repeated, extending the left leg an equal number of times, after which the exercises should be alternated. It will be sure to result in soreness of the thighs and hips at first, as no man regularly applies any such exercise as this except in this way. It's a great thing for bodily poise and balance.

Take a "Full Squat."

No. 2. Bend the knees as far as possible, to the "full squat" position, it is called, and at the same time raise both arms high above the head. Then rise to the first position, lowering the arms as you straighten the legs. This is fine for practically every set of muscles in the legs, feet and ankles. Also, it expands the chest, and the balancing necessary to accomplish the feat brings out much development of the muscles in the stomach, waist, back and shoulders. Even the neck comes in for its part, holding the head erect and not permitting it to bob forward, as you will find it inclined to do.

No. 3. The same as No. 2, except that the arms are extended horizontally while the "squat" is being accomplished. It is peculiarly adapted to the development of the chest, arms and shoulders, also the back and neck muscles. That part of the drill may be taken standing up, but in conjunction with the "squat" it is a far better all-around exercise. In all these exercises be sure to hold the body rigidly erect, and strive to acquire "form" and grace in the work. The head should not be ducked or bobbed forward; the shoulders should not be humped or drooped, and there should be a certain snap and style about the whole thing that is not only good to look at, but also aids greatly in the development.

And Some Jumping Here.

No. 4. Start in the usual position, arms at sides, heels together, toes turned slightly outward. Jump the feet apart, about three feet, landing on the balls of the feet, and at the same time swing the arms outward and upward. Then with another jump bring the feet together and swing the arms down to the sides, resuming the first position. Repeat about 30 times. It's great for the legs, trunk and shoulders and makes the blood dance in the arteries in a very comforting manner. Also, it is fine for the breathing apparatus.

UMPIRES OFFER AID TO M'NULTY IN LEGAL FIGHT

Many Officials Willing to Render Financial Assistance Against Jack O'Connor.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—The ever-present "baseball war"—manager-player vs. umpire—may be blasted should ex-Arbitrator Jack McNulty win the $35,000 assault suit against Manager Jack O'Connor, of the St. Louis Federal club. Umpires all over the country have read news items of the O'Connor-McNulty run-in on June 28. Said officials also have learned of the heavy damage suit filed by McNulty against the Federal League of St. Louis, charging that the blows delivered by O'Connor have permanently retired him from the national pastime.

The indicator handlers, according to a statement by Jack McNulty, further averred by his attorney, George Burleigh, have offered McNulty financial assistance in fighting his cause for the small fortune to pay for the punches whipped over by the Federal manager. The major league arbitrators, backed by umpires in the minor and semi-pro associations, combined in subscribing a large sum to benefit the cause of McNulty.

The men behind the plate, in dire sympathy with the former field judge, have written McNulty many letters, requesting him to accept financial aid. But McNulty of Burleigh will not deny or affirm the query that they have granted the request.

Verdict Will Be Important.

McNulty, as far as publicity is concerned, is as much in the dark as a cave without a light. Jack refuses to be interviewed. His spirits seem crushed, while the old happy-go-lucky greeting formerly delivered by Mac has passed to anywhere but McNulty.

When asked regarding the aid offered by his associates in the profession, McNulty replied: "You've got the dope. Why should I say anything?" That was all. McNulty positively refuses to announce the names of his non-invited rescuers, but from a little slip it is learned that such prominent judgment passers as "Hank" O'Day, "Silk" O'Loughlin, Klem, Rigler and other big arena cavorters are in direct sympathy with McNulty's pursuit for justice.

Should McNulty be returned the victor in the $35,000 damage suit, it is generally supposed that managers, whether owning teams in a third league or in the big stadium, will act a bit more carefully before attempting to down the reign of the field officials.

Baseball mixups between managers, players and umpires date back to Noah's Ark. The most recent bit of thrills to greet St. Louis fans was the Stovall-Ferguson affair. George was barred from the field for a lengthy period and fined $100. In 1912 Klem and Roger Bresnahan had a fistic encounter.

Magee in Mixup.

Again, in 1911, Sherwood Magee and Finneran exchanged wallops. Mr. Umpire received a few knocks which deprived him of several teeth, while the triumphant boxer paid for his actions by the usual publicity, suspension and diminishing of the bank roll.

It is not always the team managers who go after an umpire's scalp and life. Wrathed players seldom fail to take their inning with the arbitrator should the official seemingly rob the athlete of a point. The fact that the umpires have come to the assistance of McNulty proves that the fraternity of field Pooh-bahs is a most outreaching body.

Should the preliminary tactics favor the former fall guy, there's a good chance for the war on umpires to cease forever.

McNulty firmly believes that he's through with the game forever. Suffering from severe headaches and intense internal pain, Mac declares he will never be the same jolly fellow as of old.

SUPERBAS KEEP STORK BUSY.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 9.—Zach Wheat, Carlisle Smith and Herb Moran, of Brooklyn, have all become proud fathers since the season opened. Taking it all around, the ball players have kept Dr. Stork busy this year.

AND NOW SOME EXERCISES THAT WILL BENEFIT ALL PORTIONS OF MUSCULAR SYSTEM AT ONCE

No. 1. Hands on hips, heels together. Bend the knees to the "full squat," and then extend the right leg to the front. Draw back the extended leg and rise on both legs to first position. Same exercise with left leg extended. Then alternate.

No. 2—Hands at sides, bend the knees in the "full squat," at the same time raising the arms above the head. Resume first position, maintaining a rigid balance of the body, head and neck.

No. 3. Hands at sides, heels together, toes out. Come to "full squat," raising arms rigidly to a horizontal position. Rise to first position, lowering arms smartly.

No. 4. Hands at sides, heels together. Jump the feet apart about a yard, lighting on the balls of the feet, and swing the arms up sharply from the sides. With another jump, bring the heels together again and bring the arms down to the sides at the same time.

GEORGE DIXON BEST FIGHTER, SAYS NAUGHTON

Bob Fitzsimmons Was a Close Second, in the Opinion of Dean of Experts.

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Now it is a "fight fan" living in Windsor, Ont., who wishes to draw me out on certain points.

In a letter dated July 15, he says: "Seeing in last Sunday's paper that you answered a question put by some fight fan as to who, in your opinion, was the most perfect Australian boxer, I wish to ask who you consider was the greatest fighter of all time. If you do not care to answer that, would you please state who you consider the greatest negro fighter of all time?"

I'll do the best I can, and to show you I am not inclined to shirk the issue I will answer both your questions.

It so happens that in replying to the question I reply to both, for the greatest fighter who ever lived, according to my idea, was a negro. And his name was George Dixon.

It will be as well for you to remember, Mr. Fight Fan, that this is merely an expression of individual opinion. There are no standards by which these questions can be worked out and settled with mathematical exactness. Nor is there anything on the face of the earth on which both laymen and experts disagree more than the question of merit in pugilists. This because fighting appeals to the emotions. It arouses enthusiasm and creates heroes and ideals.

I have no doubt there is still in existence a smattering of very old-timers who will snort at the idea of Tom Sayers and Ned O'Baldwin and Donnelly and Cooper being passed over in a discussion of this kind for a slim-limbed yellow skin like little Dixon. But he is my choice. And I feel that Bob Fitzsimmons runs him a close second.

* * *

I NAME George Dixon because I believe he triumphed over a greater number of formidable opponents than any other man I ever heard of.

Some fighters had their run for the championship goal when the men they had to cope with were on the downward grade. This was notably the case with Jim Jeffries. He defeated Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Corbett and Peter Jackson when each of these was well past his prime in a fighting sense. Whether or not he could have beaten them had he met them at their best I do not know.

I do know, however, that the world was raked and scraped for opponents for little Chocolate Dixon. He met the best men of the various fight-fostering countries when they held the championships of their various sections, and when it was made as clear as possible that there was nothing left in their own countries that could compare with them. And he went through them all like sunlight through a chink in a barn.

The same arguments apply largely in the case of Fitzsimmons. Taking his opponents man by man he can not show so big an army of worthy conquests as Dixon, probably, but old Bob overcame more handicaps than any other fighter I have knowledge of. For this reason I consider he falls very little short of George Dixon in point of distinction as the world's greatest fighter.

* * *

HERE is one fired at me from a point nearer home:

"How does Willie Ritchie compare with the lightweight champions who preceded him?"

Up to date he does not begin to compare in the slightest. Ritchie is still young and lacking in experience, however, and may loom up as more of a world-figure in pugilism when he has pitted himself against men like Tommy Murphy, Freddy Welsh and Leach Cross. Wolgast, who preceded, as a champion was a wonderful fighter bfore appendicitis marked him for its own. His handling of Battling Nelson on Richmond Field was something to live in memory even if little Ad had never accomplished anything else.

Battling Nelson in his prime was an interesting performer. And it was his negative qualities that made him worth while. There never was a man within twenty pounds of his weight who could stand such rough usage and keep pressing steadily forward. He wasn't the most gainly fighter of his class by long odds, but his powers of assimiliation covered a multitude of defects.

* * *

JOE GANS was a thorough workman, and a light of him in action was as great a treat as a student of boxing could desire. He stepped around in a soft-footed way and was never out of position. His manner of ending it all with a downward clip of the right, delivered without drawing back the elbow, was well worth the price of admission.

KELLY AND SHEEHAN SIGN FOR TEN-ROUND FIGHT

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—"Spike" Kelly and Tommy Sheehan, Chicago welterweights, yesterday were matched to fight ten rounds in Superior, Wis., on Labor Day night. They agreed to weigh 145 at 6 o'clock. Fred Gilmore signed the papers for Kelly, who has been idle since he beat Billy Walters at Kenosha.

CUBS BUY NEW OUTFIELDER.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Outfielder Charlie Stewart was purchased by the Cubs yesterday. He comes from the Indianapolis American Association club, and is considered a promising youngster. He will report next week.

KNOCKOUT OF LORE WAS ONE OF RING'S QUEEREST

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—Not a few strange knockouts have been recorded since boxing was first inaugurated, but that one at New Orleans recently when Frankie Russell was given a K. O. victory over Johnny Lore, of New York, was as queer as any.

Perhaps it was the first time in ring history that a man was counted out while outside the ring. Lore was dropped twice by Russell and the next time was pushed through the ropes. His feet caught on the lower rope as he went through, and that much of him remained in the ring, but his body was in the laps of ringside spectators.

Referee Burke started counting the minute Lore's body shot through the ropes. At the count of five Lore was on his feet and at the seven count he had partly clambered in the ring again. He got to his feet and inside the ring just in time to hear the cry of "10 and out" given by the referee.

REDS AFTER HAGEMAN.

DENVER, Aug. 9.—The Cincinnati Reds are after Pitcher Casey Hageman and Second Baseman Hank Butcher, of the local club. Neither Magnate Jimmy McGill nor Manager Jack Hendricks are in any haste to name a price upon these performers.

MAURICE M'LOUGHLIN TOOK UP TENNIS AT AGE OF 13

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Maurice E. McLoughlin, who has made complete the supremacy of the Californians on the lawn tennis courts and rounding out his career by returning the Dwight F. Davis international challenge cup to this country, is a thoroughly representative American player. He is but 23 years of age and he fulfilled his brilliant promise by winning the All-Comers national championship at Newport last August.

McLoughlin was born at Carson City, Nev., January 7, 1890. It was when 13 years of age that he took up the game in which he has won the highest American honors by taking both the national singles and doubles in the same year. This has not happened since 1906, when Beals C. Wright scored on both titles, in the doubles, having Holcombe Ward as his partner. McLoughlin early in his career began to win championships, beginning with the junior titles in San Francisco. In 1906 he entered the California State championship, but did not win an important title until 1907, when he took the San Francisco city championship, and from that time on his rise has been rapid.

PITCHER MARTINA SUSPENDED.

BEAUMONT, TEXAS, Aug. 9.—Joe Martina, pitcher for the Beaumont team, has been suspended for the rest of the season and fined $50 for his indifferent work in a recent game.

JOHNSON WILL DRAW $10,000 NEXT SEASON

Walter's Contract Expires in October—Little Trouble Expected in Signing Twirler for 1914.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The task of signing Sir Walter Johnson, the famed flinger of the local American League team, will be up to Manager Griffith after October, 1913. But the job will not be a big one, in the opinion of those who know Griffith and Johnson.

Right now Johnson is serving the last stanza of his three-year contract with the Senators. He signed the document at the beginning of the 1911 season, after a misunderstanding with James R. McAleer, then manager of the Capital crew.

* * *

JOHNSON is drawing $21,000 for three years' work. He signed that contract after he had reported to the training camp, returned to his Coffeyville, Kans., home and then rejoined the team in the East after the season had opened.

Johnson's value to the Washington club is generally rated more than Ty Cobb's usefulness to the Detroit team. But Johnson will hardly draw down $12,500, the salary Tyrus is alleged to be receiving from the Tigers this season.

* * *

IT wouldn't be surprising if Johnson is slipped a contract calling for $10,000 salary for 1914, or one for $30,000 for service during the next three years. Sir Walter is worth almost any price he asks.

It is Johnson's disposition, as well as his wonderful speed and curves, that makes him a valuable member of the Washington team. The local players have it sized up pretty well, too. As one member of the party said:

* * *

"AS long as Johnson is a member of the team there isn't another player on it who is going to get swell-headed. He's the big noise and is modest about it. For that reason no other fellow on our club, no matter how good he is, or what he does, will have a chance to crow."

POISONING FROM FOOD

Every Bite May Poison—All Could Be Methuselahs If We Did Not Shorten Life by Self-Poisoning.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system. This is termed Autotoxemia, or Self-Poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition result. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and bowels, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and with the consciousness that your health is safeguarded against any indiscretion in eating.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. No other liver medicine is equal to it; don't take the inferior substitute that may be offered. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT, 25c. If yours can not supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage prepaid.—(Advt.)

Cal Delaney Breaks With Jimmy Dunn

Fighter and Manager Have Hot Argument and Decide to Break Company.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—Cal Delaney, Cleveland's best featherweight outside of championship company, and Jimmy Dunn are no longer boxer and manager. They have severed business and social relations for all time. Henceforth it's one road for one and a different highway for the other.

The climax to the partnership was the leading feature of the Put-In-Bay's gay and sumptuous celebration. That's when the split occurred and where Dunn and Delaney had a feverish argument that lasted several minutes and the result was that Jim refused to have anything more to do with the West Side blonde boy. He claimed that Delaney was becoming more and more unmanageable. Cal debated that he was not a boy any longer and refused to be bossed.

BIG THREE NOW HOVERING OVER SPORT WORLD

Tom McCarey, Ban Johnson and James E. Sullivan Are Big Powers in Athletic World.

DETROIT, Aug. 9.—Uncle Sam puts it over Russia in several ways. Not the least interesting fact to note, in this connection, is that whereas the most despotic of all great civilized governments has only one czar, the United States at present has no less than three.

First, we have Byron Bancroft Johnson, "Capital I" Ban, dictator in the baseball world; next we have James E. Sullivan, "First Person Singular" Jim, who makes us forget that a sporting goods concern controls our amateur sports; and of late we have Thomas McCarty, of Edwardsville and Los Angeles, "I'm There" Tom, who creates a new champion in pugilism whenever followers of boxing on the coast begin to dig a little reluctantly for their pocketbooks.

Sullivan and Johnson are too well known to need further exploitation, but the rise of McCarey to fame has not been accompanied by any fanfare. Thomas has been gaining notoriety as chief agitator of pugilism out in Los Angeles for six or more years.

His first big move was to bid for the Jeffries-Johnson fight. He next graduated into the clairvoyant world by predicting the downfall of Bat Nelson, a few months before it occurred.

But it 's only in the last two or three years that he has set himself up as a king maker. In this field, McCarey has now reached the stage where he can start a new championship contest regardless of the whether a living title holder is one of the principals.

* * *

M'CAREY did this twice and he's about to pull it again. He began by hanging up a championship belt in the bantamweight division for Monte Attell and Frankie Conley, the latter winning by a knockout. The new title didn't stick because the public had previously come to believe Johnny Coulon was the title holder.

Later, however, he put up a heavyweight championship belt, while Jack Johnson was till conscious and able to be about, without inviting that champion to compete. Lute McCarty won it and a lot of fame, and was on the verge of being recognized as the real thing, when his untimely end occurred at Calgary.

Now McCarney is going into championship making again. Although Johnny Coulon is still alive and is still the accepted titleholder in the bantamweight division, McCarney donated a diamond championship belt to Kid Williams for defeating the French champion, Charles Ledoux.

* * *

SOME class to McCarney's nerve, all right, especially as Eddie Campi has a look-in at the title. Nevertheless the conditions governing the donation of the new belt make for action in the boxing world and for less four-flushing on the part of future champions. The conditions governing the retention of the belt and title compel the holder to defend his honors not less than once every six months in a twenty-round fight.

Also McCarney has amputated another canker from the bantamweight situation in stipulating that 116 pounds ringside shall be the championship figure. Almost every fighter who has sought an engagement with Coulon has come to grief on the weight question. It is interesting to note, however, that McCarney's is the figure for which Coulon has nearly always held out.

* * *

M'CAREY'S attempt to create a new champion in the little men's division, regardless of the existence of a titleholder, will not meet with general approval, however. Coulon is one of the best liked little men in the game and until he resigns or is beaten many will decline to credit a successor.

BRANNIGAN WILL BATTLE MEXICAN IN LONG BOUT

NEWCASTLE, Aug. 9.—Jimmy Dime and Patsy Brannigan left last night for Denver, where, on August 11, Brannigan meets Benny Chavez, Western bantam, in a scheduled twenty-round bout.

Brannigan knocked Chavez out in six rounds in Trinidad, Colo., about three years ago, but the Western sports believe the Mexican has improved enough since to beat Dime's lad. The bout is for a side bet of $1,000.

Before returning home, Dime will get in touch with "Uncle" Tom McCarey, of the Pacific Coast Athletic Club, at Los Angeles, in reference to a bout on the coast between Brannigan and Campi, the native son who has been cleaning up generally on the aspirants for Coulon's crown. If satisfactory arrangements are made, Dime and Brannigan will proceed immediately to the coast.

STAR COLLEGE ATHLETE IS DISCOVERED BY NAPS

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—William ("Hiker") Joy, the Holy Cross pitcher, who joined the Naps, is one of the greatest all-around athletes who has ever been a member of the Naps. Pitching is one of his accomplishments in the realm of athletics.

Joy also played halfback on the varsity eleven, was a forward on the basket ball team and the crack sprinter and hurdler of the college. Incidentally, he was captain of all four teams in his senior year, 1912.

While pitching for his team he also batted in the clean-up position. His last football eleven won eight and lost three games, losing only to Harvard, Yale and Princeton. On the track he won a heat in the New England intercollegiate league games by sprinting in 16 1-5. He was barred from the final because of professionalism.

JACKSON DOES BEST HITTING ON 4 DIAMONDS

Joe Does Best Clouting Playing on Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit and Boston Fields.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 9.—Joe Jackson has hit .400 or better on four diamonds this year, the fields being those of Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit and Boston. At home the Slugging Southerner up to last Wednesday had piled up an average of .441, in the Windy City his record was .419, and in Detroit and Boston it was an even .400. Jackson, on his visits to St. Louis, has walloped the sphere at a .303 clip; at the Polo Grounds his record is .333 and at Shibe Park it is .133.

The Clouting Clevelander, who ranked ninth in the competition for the Chalmers car last season and who is likely to rank higher this season if he keeps up his present timely stickwork, possibly would set a world's record for a batting percentage could he stay at home and bat only against the Washington pitcher. Jackson has torn off 16 safeties in the seven games the Senators have played in Cleveland this year and he only has been at the bat 23 times, the extremely high percentage of .694 being the result of his activities against Walter Johnson & Co. Jackson collected five hits in the two full games the Idaho Phenom pitched against the Naps in Cleveland and his percentage for the season against Sir Walter is .456.

* * *

JACKSON has hit at a .531 clip against the Browns on his home field, .471 against Boston, .412 against New York, .400 against Detroit, .296 against Chicago and .286 against Philadelphia. Up to last Monday he had made 40 runs and 79 hits in the Forest City and 24 tallies and 39 safeties on foreign diamonds. Of the 44 long wallops then to his credit, 28 were manufactured in Charles W. Somers' ball orchard and the rest in other parks.

* * *

Jackson has twice this year come to the bat with the bases full and emptied the sacks of all their inhabitants. The first cruel blow the Southerner struck was in the game of May 10 with the Boston Red Sox. Then he tripled against Charley Hall. The next day the Highlanders played the Naps and in the first inning Jackson hit for the circuit against Heinie Schulz, making two clean-up clouts for him in as many days. On April 30 Jackson drove in both the runs his team made in the game with Chicago which the Naps won, 2 to 1, and on May 19 he was responsible for three of his team's four tallies against Washington, this also being a Cleveland victory.

* * *

Jackson last season led his team in driving in runs and this season it looks as if he would again show the way to his mates. Thus far this season he has put the finishing touches to 58 counters, batting in 52 of these on safe hits, two on sacrifice flies and four on infield outs.

If Cleveland fans want to honor their eminent slugologist their attention is respectively called to the fact that on August 25 Jackson will celebrate his fourth major league birthday. The Naps will then be at home playing the Highlanders. Joe broke into the American League on August 25, 1908, playing with the Athletics against Cleveland in a game that the Naps won, 3 to 2. He made one hit off Rube Vickers in four times at bat and accepted three out of four chances in the field.

MATHEWSON IS GREATEST MAN IN BASEBALL

So Declare Newspaper Scribes at Recent Gathering Held in New York City.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—At an informal gathering of newspaper men in New York the other day the topic of baseball was being discussed. The name of Mathewson figured prominently in the conversation, as is inevitable whenever the national pastime is the theme. After most of the scribes had borne their testimony as to the personal and professional worth of "Big Six," an old baseball reporter put a cap on the eulogies by remarking:

"Matty isn't a mere baseball player—he's an institution."

That remarkable tribute was hailed with delight, as being a most apt explanation of the Giants' great twirler.

There are a number of stars in baseball at the present time who have made and are making a marvelous stand against the inroads of time. Prominent among these may be mentioned Hans Wagner, Napoleon Lajoie, Eddie Plank and Mordecai Brown.

But of them all Matty is putting up the most brilliant opposition to the ravages of the years. The best that the others are doing just now is holding their own. They are holding Father Time off at arm's length, but the old fellow is close enough to them to worry them in their playing. But in the case of Mathewson it is different. Instead of stopping to spar with the old gentleman with the scythe, he is going steadily on—improving his game—mastering his technique and acquiring the supreme artistry of the mound.

This year of 1913, which many had thought would mark the last of his active service, finds Mathewson again at the zenith of his prowess with a little added craftiness. He is an artist and all true artists never cease striving to improve their art—and they never cease loving it. Who can look upon the eager, smiling and boyish countenance of Matty as he stands in the box and say that he does not love the game?

The position he holds in the esteem of the baseball fans and the public at large, which, of course, is the same thing, is unique. If a vote were taken to-morrow to settle the question as to who is the most popular man in organized baseball, there is no doubt that Matty would carry the election by a large majority.

* * *

"WHAT would happen to McGraw?" asked this same old scribe, who had characterized Matty as an institution, "if he were to incontinently fire Mathewson after the manner of Murphy in giving old Mordecai Brown the gate?"

The consensus of opinion was that if McGraw did such a thing he might just as well lock up the Polo Grounds. That is just how close "Big Six" is to the hearts of the baseball public.

But there is no danger of John J. ever doing such a thing. In the first place he is not a Murphy in any corpuscle of his compact being, and in the second place Matty's art will continue in his head long after it has departed from his arm, and as a mere instructor he would be more valuable to McGraw than the average twirler is on the mound.

Why Is a Hard-Working Player?

He Isn't---If He Loves the Game

By O. B. Keeler.

KNOCKING about with a professional ball club, you get one ear full after another concerning "work," "business," "toil," "drudgery," and so forth. And so on.

You might get the hunch that the athletes had set out from very early in their young lives determined to hammer out a living by working at baseball.

That is, you might get the hunch if you didn't travel with them more than one day, and never sat on the bench during a game, and never looked at a game very understandingly, anyway.

In that case you might feel sorry for the hard-working ball player, under contract providing that he must play in order to eat, but not play for any other club than the party of the second part, or whatever party the party of the second part shall assign him to play with.

A good many rather well-meaning and entirely sap-headed persons these days are wasting perfectly good sorrow over the assumed grievous lot of the toiling ball player.

They seem to get the idea that he is playing ball because he has to.

* * *

NOW, take it from one who has seen some little chapters in the life of a professional ball player, the said ball player is playing ball for money because he can make more money that way than he can any other way.

And, above all, he is playing ball because he likes to play ball.

* * *

I RECALL in particular one "Chick" Autrey, first baseman for St. Paul, in the American Association, and the least shade under big league caliber in hitting.

Chick is an extreme sample of the ball player who likes to play ball. When the club is at home, Chick is out on the field in uniform half an hour before his mates get to the clubhouse to dress, playing catch or batting up flies with any stray youngsters he can find about the lot.

* * *

Chick is the first one to start the regular practice. As soon as two or three of the other players get out on the field, Chick gets them lined up for the little bunting game—three or four arrayed in front of a batter, tossing him the ball, which he hits sharply back at them, when they chuck it at each other, under and over and from all sides.

Chick is the liveliest of the bunch, slapping the ball like a juggler; jumping, stretching, scooping—laughing like a kid most of the time.

Chick would practice four hours before the game, if anybody would keep him company.

In the game, he is at the opposition every moment. He is left-handed and fields the bag like Hal Chase—and in every move you read the snap and dash that can come only from a love of the game.

All around the circuit, Chick is known as "that St. Paul guy that loves to play baseball."

Frank Bowerman was the same way when he was with the Giants. Later, when in the Association, the grizzled veteran earned the name of "Young Mike" by his evident keen enjoyment of the sport and his stentorian vocal encouragement of his mates while the game was on.

* * *

A FINE example nearer home is Joe Agler. Joe never could work around that old first sack the way he plays around it. The class of the Southern League in fielding, Joe performs with a speed and dash that can spring only from a real joy in the game. Watch him, next time you go to see the Crackers play ball.

And see if you can imagine Joe as a mere hireling, plugging along to earn his daily bread with the same ambition as a man with a heavy hammer making little ones out of big ones.

Eight out of ten professional ball players enjoy the game of baseball in the same way a sunburned kid on a vacant lot enjoys playing the game. They would be playing baseball for fun if they weren't making a living at it.

Max Carey said of "Big Six" Mathewson the other day:

"Matty always looks as if he'd rather be out there pitching than doing anything else in the world. I never have seen him in a game when I didn't think of that. After thirteen years of baseball as a profession, baseball still is Mathewson's favorite sport."

* * *

I BELIEVE that goes for eight out of ten ball players: certainly for the ball players who are the most successful. They don't "slow up" quickly, these men who love the game. "Slowing up" may be due in some cases to failing legs or dimming eyes. But in other cases it is due to getting stale in the game, because the first incentive is gone—the keen edge worn off.

But take it from the ball players themselves, if you please, no man ever set out deliberately to earn a living by working at baseball.

Every single professional ball player in this country started out in the beginning for one and the same reason.

And that reason was because he loved to play ball.

RITCHIE'S FATHER STAYS IN CHURCH WHEN WILLIE HAS RING ENGAGEMENT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 5.—Willie Ritchie's father, who is down here with his son on an automobile tour, has never seen Willie in a ring.

Mr. Steffens (Willie Ritchie's real name is Geary Steffen), is of a devoutly religious nature and has very serious doubts as to the propriety of prize fighting. As long as Willie is in the business, however, the old man wants him to win.

Whenever Willie is in the ring, his father is in church. He won't go to the ringside for fear of seeing his boy hurt and he can't stay at home with anxiety for society; so he always goes to church and remains there until the battle is over.

MINOR MANAGERS ARE AFTER CAL'S CASTOFFS

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Some one called Manager Callahan, of the Chicago White Sox, the "David Harum" of organized baseball after Frank Chance complained that he was "stung" in the Hal Chase-Borton-Zelder deal, but despite that act minor league managers were in Boston recently to try their hand at swapping with the White Sox leader.

White Tells How He Expects to Win Bout

Whitney Says He Will Make Rushing Attack

By Left Hook.

"I AM out to win the lightweight title," said Charley White yesterday, "but I have a tough 'bird' to beat in Frank Whitney here next Wednesday night. Of course I expect to win, but I fully realize what a worthy opponent I am going to be stacked up against in the ring at the Auditorium-Armory.

"Do you know that up around Chicago all the experts look on Whitney as one of the toughest trial horses in the game. He is a hard man to hit, can take an awful mess of punishment and at the same time is so awkwardly clever that he is hard to make a showing against.

"I saw Frank work with Packey McFarland in McConnell's Gymnasium last Wednesday. Why he gave Packey an awful time for the four rounds they worked.

"After the session was over Packey came over to me and said: 'Charley, old pal, that young fellow will give you a rough voyage when you meet in Atlanta, or I'm a bum judge of a scrapper.'

"Packey didn't have to tell me that. I was a spectator, although Whitney didn't know it.

"But, do you know, I am glad that I saw Whitney work out against McFarland. I got a good line on his style. And I am going to tell you just how I intend to beat him.

"Frank is a rushing fighter. Well, let him start leading and I will counter so fast that he won't know where he is at. I believe that I can pick off or stop any of his leads and counter so hard that he will be willing to let me do some of the heavy work before the scrap has gone over three or four rounds."

With that Charley left us to go back to his training.

* * *

WHITE hadn't eased his way out of the office over ten or fifteen minutes before Waitney came in. When he was told that White had seen him work out against McFarland Frank laughed.

"So he thinks that he can stop me from leading and rushing, eh?" remarked the "Fighting Carpenter." "Well, I'll make him travel faster than he ever traveled before. I have never been floored yet, and if Mr. White thinks that he can stop me I'll bet him my end of the purse on it. And take it from me, I will make a rushing scrap of it, too.

"I'll stick on top of him and keep flaying away with so much speed that he'll wish he was back in that dear old Chicago. He is going to pick off my leads and counter? That's what he said. I should worry. He will have a fine time picking 'em off.

"I was never in better condition in my life and I'll keep going at top speed from the first round to the end. And the end——

"Well, I've got a hunch that I am going to put over a decisive punch. The mill may go the entire ten rounds; but not if I can help it.

"All I ask of White to do is to stand toe to toe with me right in the center of the ring, and if he does I'll guarantee that I'll prove I have a better kick than the one he possesses.

"He says he is going to be the next lightweight champion? Say, I have got that same hunch about myself."

UNUSUAL RULES AND PLAYS IN BASEBALL

(No. 5.) By J. W. Heisman.

NOWADAYS no substitute can get in the game without first reporting to the umpire, and the umpire first announcing to the public and the scorers who the newcomer is and whose place he takes. This rule is all right, but it has only been in existence a couple of years.

Once upon a time, a long, long time ago, the umpire in a big league game had the time of his life in a dispute over this very point with the great and only Mike Kelly. The "King" wasn't catching that day, on account of a bad finger. He always hated to ornament the bench when playing was going on, and as the game was a close one, he was having considerable difficulty in maintaining his patience; in fact, he was looking for most any provocation to jump into the game.

Directly there went up a high foul that went sailing away over toward the stands, obviously quite out of reach of either Mike's substitute catcher or of the first baseman. Instantly Mike sprang from the bench and yelled to the umpire that he was putting the other catcher out of the game and that he was going in at once. After delivering this charming BON MOT—or, rather, simultaneously with it—he took out after the crazy foul and neatly pulled it down. Coming in with the ball he picked up his mask and protector on the way to the plate, and with superb nonchalance proceeded to signal his pitcher for what he wanted.

But the umpire said nay! This was not according to the law and the prophets. Mike dared him to show any rule to the contrary. The umpire couldn't show any, but refused to let Mike make any such dramatic entrance just the same. In spite of the lack of law, Mike finally lost the case before the supreme court of baseball; but one can't help admire his quickness of thought under the circumstances.

WHEN the batter has made a foul, the base-runner must go back and touch the base he left. If the foul fly was caught, he must also touch all bases intervening between him and the base he left, and if while doing this the opponents get the ball back to the base he left before he arrives there he is out. But if the foul fly was not caught, he need not touch intervening bases.

The runner is, however, supposed to go back to the base he left with reasonable dispatch, and if he does so, the pitcher must wait for him. If the pitcher will not wait for him, but goes ahead with his delivery, the runner has the right to start again for the next base ahead, right where he is and without losing the time to go back to the base he started from. Most pitchers do not seem to be aware that the base-runner has this right, and they do a very dangerous thing when they start in their delivery without giving the runner a reasonable time to go back.

* * *

AFTER the pitcher has taken his position in the box ready to pitch, the batter is not permitted to cross over from one side of the plate to the other. If he does so, he may be called out.

Should the batsman desire to cross over to the other side after the pitcher is in his box, the only way he can safely do so is to step backward out of the box he is in and go around behind the catcher.

* * *

NOT only should the outfield fence not be less than 235 feet from the plate, but the backstop should not be less than 90 feet distant from the plate. This is the rule, but most people are agreed that for the good of the game it is better to have the spectators closer to the field of play than this. It is more interesting and inspiring both to players and spectators to get closer when possible.

But if the backstop is less than 90 feet behind the home plate, special ground rules are an absolute necessity. Now, it would surprise you greatly to know how many captains of amateur teams fail to grasp the significance of this lessened distance and what the appropriate rule should be in such case.

When the backstop is 90 feet back, a runner is entitled to as many bases as he can make, but he runs entirely at his own peril. If the passed ball has sufficient force to carry it clear to the backstop, it is clear that the runner should be able to make at least one base while the ball is being recovered, for he can certainly run 90 feet from one base to another while the catcher is running 90 feet after the ball and throwing it back to the diamond. If the passed ball doesn't go as far as the backstop, the runner must use his judgment.

Now, if the backstop is less than 90 feet back, and a passed ball hits it, the high probabilities are that it had sufficient force to have gone on to a backstop 90 feet away had the backstop been back that far. In other words, had the backstop been at the regulation distance, the runner could no doubt easily have made one base on that passed ball. Then why shouldn't he be given the one base?

* * *

STRANGE to say, most captains of fields where the backstop is less than 90 feet away seem to think that in this case also the runner should be made to run at his own peril, when it is their fault, not his, that the field was not laid out according to rule specifications. It must be clear that if the pitcher is so wild, or the catcher so unskillful, as to have a passed ball at a time when there is an opposing runner on base they should certainly be charged up with a demerit for such bad play, and what demerit should or could this be but for the opponents to get at least one base out of it, as they certinly would on a regulation field? But to make him run at his own peril with the backstop, say, within 30 feet of the place means that when the fielding team makes a bad play and has a passed ball that passed ball will very likely hit that near backstop with such force as to cause it to rebound right back to the catcher, and thereby he is enabled either to keep the runner on third or, worse still, to put him out at the plate even, and this on their own bad play and solely through the unmerited help of an illegally-placed backstop. Clearly the runner should be given the one base and be entirely free from the liability of being put out.

Chess Champion Returns to Cuba

Jose R. Capablanca Goes Home Before Series in New York With Duras.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Jose R. Capablanca, who equalled Dr. Lasker's record last week by winning thirteen straight games in the Masters' Tournament at the Rice Chess Club, left yesterday for Havana.

The Cuban champion expects to spend about a fortnight at his home, and is due to return to New York early in September. If then arrangements are made for a series between him and O. S. Duras, of Prague, whom he defeated in the recent tournament after a struggle lasting seventy-five moves, the young master will tarry long enough for that purpose. After that he will depart for Europe.

Frank J. Marshall, the United States champion, is in receipt of an urgent invitation to play in the international tournament from P. P. Saubouroff, former president of the St. Petersburg Chess Club.

Rivers and Wolgast Both After Ritchie

Fighters Agree to Meet Champion For Nothing—Ad Wild To Get On.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Aug. 9.—A unique situation exists in the fight game in Los Angeles. Both Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast, former champion, want to meet Champion Ritchie and have started bidding for the fight.

"All I want is to get into the ring with Ritchie again," said Wolgast. "Any promoter who can stage a bout can name his own terms as far as I'm concerned. If I win, he can give me anything he likes. I don't ask a cent."

"Same here, win or lose," said Rivers. "Whoever stages the contest can keep my share or give it to Ritchie."

In the meantime Champion Ritchie, who is now in the city, says it makes no difference to him whom he fights just so long as he gets his price.

COULON TO DEFEND TITLE AGAINST BOBBY BURNS

ST. JOSEPH, MO., August 9.—Bobby Burns, of Dallas, Texas, signed articles here yesterday for a ten-round boxing contest with Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion, at Omaha September 12.

Burns and Jones in Battle of Invectives

Managers of Arthur Pelky and Jess Willard Laugh at Each Other's Claims.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Tommy Burns, manager of Arthur Pelky, and Tom Jones, who looks after the interests of Jess Willard, are booked to hook up in an interesting battle of invectives and near blows within a day or two.

Jones wants to match Willard against Pelky, but Burns in a telegram yesterday said that Willard must go get a reputation before presuming to challenge a champion.

"Gunboat Smith is the man Pelky wants to meet," said Burns. "Smith beat Willard, and then, again, Charley Miller shaded the Kansas scrapper. Let him get a 'rep' for himself."

This sort of language is the sort that makes Jones glad he is alive, for he thrives on argument.

"When did Pelky whip Willard, or anybody of consequence, until he landed a lucky punch on Luther McCarty?" asks Jones. "Willard can whip Pelky, and Burns can name his own terms. Pelky took one beating from Willard and wants no more."

As Willard holds a decision over Pelky, it is probable that Jones will work that argument and a side bet proposition overtime until Burns agrees to a match between the rival white hopes.

NUMBER FOOTBALL PLAYERS.

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 9.—If the coaches of other colleges agree to it, Coach Al Sharpe, of Cornell, will number his football players next fall. Sharpe is said to be highly in favor of the innovation suggested by Parke H. Davis, Princeton's representative on the rules committee. Dr. Sharpe believes that the reform must come.

REDS CAN USE THIS ONE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—President Lynch, of the National League, in a decision to-day holds that the result of the protested Brooklyn-Cincinnati games of July 11, of which Cincinnati won, 5 to 3, stands as played.

Broken Fingers Can't Stop Cy Falkenberg

Cleveland Twirler Has Been Hurt Three Times This Year, But Continues Work.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 9.—Falkenberg has been hurt three times this year, but has not lost a turn in the box because of his injuries. Boehler, of Detroit, hit him on the pitching arm in April, but Cy kept on winning. Then he had a finger on his left hand broken, but he continued to win. Last week he broke another digit on his left whip, yet has won two games since.

MACK WANTS NEW RULE TO PROTECT BASE RUNNERS

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Aug. 9.—Connie Mack has a new rule to suggest when the baseball magnates gather in the fall. The spindlylike leader of the Athletics would have the base-runners given more protection and have infielders restricted in blocking tactics.

When an infielder has deliberately blocked the path, Mack believes that the umpire should grant the runner his base. He claims that the use of shin guards by catchers and other protection by infielders makes it next to impossible for a base-runner to get the goal sought unless he has sufficient weight to bowl over the opposing infielder.

OLMSTEAD IS RELEASED.

SPOKANE, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Olmstead who was obtained recently from the Oakland Coast League club, was released to-day by the local baseball club. In his try-out yesterday Olmstead did not show to advantage.

TIGERS GET TWIRLER.

OTTUMWA, IOWA, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Lorenzen, a left-hander of the Ottumwa club in the Central Association, was sold to the Detroit Americans for $2,500.

Jeff Smith to Get Big French Plum

Al Palzer May Lose Chance to Box Georges Carpentier in Paris.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—It is reported here that Al Palzer is not to get the chance to fight Carpentier in France this fall, the plum going to Jeff Smith, the Bayonne, N. J., middleweight.

A wire says they are to meet on October 20 in the Circus de Paris, the weight to be 170 and the distance 20 rounds. Al Lippe, manager for Smith, it is said, put one over on Tom O'Rourke, who may have something to say about the fight. Smith, however, is a good card in Paris, where he beat Adrian Hogan, Willie Lewis, M. Bernard and made Harry Mansfield quit in seven rounds. In fact, only Mike Gibbons has the honor of hanging a decision on Smith.

Carpentier will probably outweigh Smith about 20 pounds at the agreed weight, but this will not be such a handicap, according to Smith's admirers.

GABBY STREET WILL BE BACK IN MAJOR LEAGUES

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 9.—Chattanooga fans are already beginning to look over the prospects of 1914. The continued absence of Elberfeld from the battle array has exploded all hopes of a pennant this season.

There is every possibility that Gabby Street will be drafted or sold outright to a major league club, but if he is not it is a certainty that he will not play another season in a league where the maximum salary is but $300 per month.

Street is in as good condition as ever in life, and he realizes that he is worth more than the local club can pay him.

CLUBS AFTER CATCHER.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Aug. 9—White Sox officials have made telegraphic offers for Catcher Hargrove, of the Terre Haute club. Pittsburg, the Highlanders and the Cubs also have asked for terms on him, as has an American Association club.

Pittsburg Citizen Doesn't Know Hans

Smoky City Scribe Claims He Is Dr. W. J. Holland, Director of Carnegie Museum.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—Help! Help! Help!

There's a citizen at Pittsburg—a prominent citizen at that—who doesn't know Honus Wagner, of Carnegie, Pa.

"Wagner? Wagner? Is he really, as you allege, a baseball player?"

This was Dr. William J. Holland's reply to a question propounded by David Davies, of The Pittsburg Dispatch. Dr. Holland is director of Carnegie Museum and was said to have received from the king of ball players a letter offering to sell an old uniform for $15. This information came from New York, the editor of one Gotham daily being quite hysterical over the "possibilities" of the story, to use his own words.

When Dr. Holland was approached on the matter he was surprised. "I don't know Wagner," he said, "and we are not conducting a hero fund at the museum. No doubt this Mr. Wagner is quite a wonder in his chosen line of endeavor, and I suppose it is my misfortune never to have made his acquaintance."

"But, Doctor," protested the writer, "did you receive an offer from Wagner—did you receive any old kind of an offer?"

"Man alive!" came the crushing reply; "haven't I just told you that I never spoke to Mr. Wagner, that I never heard him speak, that I never received a letter from him, that I never was called on the 'phone by him—and that I never have given the subject of his old uniforms any consideration at all? Next thing I know they'll be making an old-clothes man out of me."

Dr. Holland was positive that there was no chance of Honus' discarded raiment finding repose within the classic confines of the big building erected at Mr. Carnegie's expense.

"The whole thing is arrant nonsense," he said. "I don't know who is responsible for the circulation of the 'story' (I believe you newspaper chaps call it that); but I do know that the entire yarn has been made out of whole cloth."

Poor old Honus doesn't know where he is since the circulation of this uniform-museum story. Vowing that he never has made any tender of his worn-out scenery, he said yesterday that he guessed "somebody was trying to kid him."

"When I get through with a uniform," said he, "there's not much left of it. Still, if Dr. Holland, the Carnegie Museum or any other body or place wants what remains, I'll sell for $15. And I'll be making money at that."

WENDELL, WELL KNOWN ATHLETE, QUITS FOR GOOD

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., Aug. 9.—James I. Wendell, Wesleyan, 1913, a member of the American team at the Olympic games in Sweden, announced here to-day that he had decided to withdraw from athletics. He said he wished to retire while "good" rather than to be forced out by declining ability.

He has accepted a position to teach at Pottstown, Pa., next year.

HEAVYWEIGHTS TO MIX IN 20-ROUND GO ON SEPT. 23

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Aug. 6—Arthur Pelkey, white heavyweight champion of the world, to-day matched to meet Charley Miller, the San Francisco motorman, in a 20-round bout at Vernon, Cal., on the night of September 23.

This will be Pelkey's first engagement since his bout with Luther McCarty in Calgary, which ended in the death of the latter.

Luck Begins to Break for Griff

Injuries Gave Boehling a Start

By W. J. McBeth.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Manager Clark Griffith of the Washingtons is a firm believer in luck, at least as applied to baseball. The "Old Fox" certainly has had his share of bumps. With the least iota of breaks or good fortune he would have landed at least two pennants for Frank Farrell. This year he might have driven the Athletics to cover had his fine, aggressive young team not been so seriously handicapped by injuries to players.

Griffith has had some pretty tough luck in his career, and particularly this sason. He seems a man destined to always be on the threshold of great fame without being able to find the latchstring. He has had many buffets; but he has likewise enjoyed some few favors of fickle fortune. These came along now and then as blessings in disguise. And not the least of the lot by any means has been Joe Boehling, the young southpaw who so far has been the sensation of the major leagues this season.

It was only last spring that the "Old Fox" deplored the decay of competent left-handed pitching. "Fork-hand fling," opined Griff, "has become a dead art." Why Griff should have been so melancholy on the subject when two such able experts as "Rube" Marquard and Eddie Plank were on hand to refute the insinuation is very hard to figure. It may have been that all his life Griffith had been disappointed in digging up a portside of real merit when at times such a one would have spelled victory.

* * *

BUT at the time when the "Old Fox" was grieving most sorely over his years of disappointment, he had with him a young man who in a very few months to blossom out into one of the real wonders of baseball. Not since Russell Ford, of the Yankees, and "King" Cole, of the Cubs, in 1910, averaged well above the .800 mark in victory percentage for over thirty games their first season in fast company has any youngster displayed the class of Washington's prize southpaw.

Boehling reeled off eleven straight victories.

Boehling is going to be of great help to Griffith and Washington. The team is pretty well out of the race now, yet still has an outside chance. Certainly next year, unless Mack braces his pitching staff, the Old Fox is likely to give the Athletics a fight to the last ditch. Walter Johnson and Joe Boehling form a pretty good pitching staff as modern hurling corps go. And Griff has several other young men, among them Engel, who can give a pretty fair account of themselves in the box.

But getting back to Boehling. He has divided in hearts of loyal Washington fandom a place this year usurped by the great and only Walter Johnson. His advent to fame has been more or less of an accident. But for the fact that Griffith was forced to utilize him in the face of injuries to seasoned twirlers, young Joe might now be wasting "his sweetness on the desert air of some bush league.

* * *

HERE is his history:

Only back in the year 1911, when Dr. William H. Parker, the dean of amateur athletics in the Keystone City of the South, kindled an interest in amateur athletics of every sort, particularly devoting himself to amateur baseball, the medical man of cherubic countenance, who is also a police commissioner in Richmond, formed and managed the Battle Axe team, which won the championship of the city in a league comprised of eight clubs. Joe Boehling and Bill Kay formed the star battery of the Battle Axe team, which lost but two games out of sixteen played.

Succeeding the amateur baseball season, an intercity championship series was arranged with the winners of similar championships in Washington and Baltimore, in which the championship was won by the Pepcos of Washington, the games directing attention to the splendid battery work of the Battle Axes. Bill Peet, of the Washington Herald, was the wide-eyed visual artist who saw in Boehling possibilities sufficient to convince "Old Fox" Griffith of the advisability of adding Boehling to the staff headed by that strong-armed genius, Walter Johnson.

* * *

DURING the training trip of 1912, Washington scribes proclaimed the worth of Boehling and predicted that he would prove a tower of strength for the Climbers. The brilliant attack of the Senators during 1912, during which they rolled up a succession of sixteen successive victories—which record was ruined in the seventeenth effort by "Home Run" Baker, of the Athletics—prevented Griffith from risking the club's climb with a game pitched by Boehling, so Griff farmed him out to Chattanooga.

Climatic conditions there hindered the upbuilding of the youngster, and Kid Elberfeld returned the youngster to Washington, when Griff turned him over to Worcester, where, under Jesse Burkett, he achieved a winning percentage of .636.

Again to Charlottesville and under the tutelage of Griffith and Jack Ryan the experience gained asserted itself. A boy of big frame and intelligently acquisitive, Boehling earned his right to stay with the Senators, and Griff, while bemoaning the dearth of good left-handed pitchers, intrusted the fortunes of one game to the youngster, who returned it as a victory.

LANGFORD AGREES TO BOX JACK JOHNSON IN PARIS

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Sam Langford, the Boston tar baby, through his manager, Joe Woodman, to-day confirmed the report that he had agreed to meet Jack Johnson in Paris this fall to settle the question of the heavyweight championship of the world.

According to the announcement, the fight is to go twenty rounds. Johnson is to receive $30,000 guarantee, win, lose or draw, and Langford is to receive 25 per cent of the gross receipts. Leading fight promoters estimate that the fight will draw more than $100,000 at the gate.

WINTER SPORTS ARE BARRED BY BOSS OF 'CARDS'

President Britton Puts Ban on Indoor Baseball, Soccer and Others for Athletes.

By Sid C. Keener.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 9.—Indoor baseball, soccer football, basket ball, or, in fact, all winter sports where there are chances of broken ankles, twisted knees, sprained arms, etc., will not be allowed for the Cardinals this winter. President Schuyler P. Britton has clamped the lid on all winter pastimes for his athletes as a result of the injury to Shortstop Arnold Hauser.

There is no such clause in any of the present contracts, but when school is over this October, President Britton intends to issue strict orders to all the players that the ban has been placed on indoor baseball, soccer football, basket ball and others. And if the command is not obeyed, Britton has plans that will alter the present conditions.

Hauser's loss has been a severe jolt to the Cardinals this year. He has played in only a few games, still he is being paid his salary every 1st and every 15th. And that isn't all.

Pays $1,000 in Doctor Bills.

Since the training trip of last March when Hauser was sent home from Columbus, Ga., President Britton has paid more than $1,000 in doctor bills for Hauser. At present, Arnold is recovering from an operation at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, and all the expenses are being paid by the president of the Cardinals.

"I'd be willing to pay more than $5,000 if I thought Hauser would be as good as ever," states Britton. "You can't buy shortstops like him for $5,000."

There's also a funny angle concerning the Bills which have been paid by Britton. During Arnold's stay in St. Louis several months ago, he was being treated by several experts. The bills always were mailed to Robison Field and one day Britton received a bill from a doctor who was not hired.

"I opened the envelope and saw a bill which read: 'For services to Arnold Hauser, $200.' I asked Hauser about it and he said that he never heard of the physician."

The athletes, as well as the magnates, suffer when one is injured during some winter pastime. The average ball player makes enough in the summer and finds some other occupation to live on during the winter. There isn't much financial gain playing soccer, basket ball or indoor baseball, and the athlete is taking a great chance to ruin himself.

Winter Sport Without Gain.

While Hauser's injury is attributed to the day he slid into second base at Columbus, Ga., it is thought that the start came when he twisted his knee sliding on a wooden floor playing indoor baseball last winter.

It also will be remembered that in the winter of 1911-1912 a gathering of diamond stars held an indoor series at the Jai Alai. In the line-up were Hauser, Bobby Byrne, Larry Doyle Ed Koney, Lefty Leifield and a few more major leaguers.

The games were well advertised, but didn't appeal to the real baseball fans, and when the receipts were divided each athlete drew down something less than $5 for three nights' play.

Where would the Giants be to-day had Larry Doyle been permanently injured? The same for Bobby Byrne and the Pirates. Ed Koney has quit of his own will and says that it will be hunting, fishing and other amusements this winter and thereafter. Maybe some business investment for the big fellow, but no more indoor baseball.

It's pretty soft for the athlete to draw his full season's salary and have his doctor bills paid by the magnate. Britton is quite right in placing the ban on winter sports, and no doubt the players will obey the ruling.

International Scope For Athletic Meet

James E. Sullivan Goes Abroad With Invitations From Panama Exposition.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—James E. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States and director of athletics at the Panama Pacific International Exposition, left last Tuesday on the Kronprinzessin Cecelie to attend the International Federation of the athletic governing bodies of the world which is to be held in Berlin, Germany, August 20 and 21.

While at this congress Director Sullivan will extend invitations to the foreign governing bodies to send teams to the Panama Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco in 1915. All the sports at the exposition are to be international in character, and, as a matter of fact, teams have already been promised from many of the foreign countries. After a conference with the officials of the different governing bodies of sport in America, a lengthy program of sports was prepared.

It is planned to have the important international championships in the early spring and fall—February, March, April, October, November and December. The events now planned will, of course, be subject as to dates and regulations to the receiving of official sanction and approval from all the associations that are interested.

STANDS HURT OUTFIELDING.

PITTSBURG, PA., Aug. 9.—"Have you noticed that the present day outfielders do not judge fly balls as quickly as the old-timers did?" asked Manager Clarke, of the Pirates, today. "The stands at most of the parks are huge, dark affairs and when they are filled with spectators it is difficult to tell which is the ball and which are the faces of the fans, until or unless the sphere rises clear above the roof."

MORE PRAISE FOR M'LOUGHLIN FROM CRITICS

British Writers Still Boosting the Great Californian for His Excellent Playing.

MAURICE E. M'LOUGHLIN, who did so much in helping the American team capture the Davis Cup, made a lasting impression on the critics abroad.

Writing of the American champion one of the foremost London critics says:

"The arrival of a new master in any game is always important, for it is by a succession of masters that the art itself is developed. No two men play alike, and when the difference due to individuality is considerable, new methods are the outcome, and the possibilities of the game are enlarged. Lawn tennis, like other games, has been made by its personalities—a Renshaw, a Doherty, a Brookes. If his promise materializes fully McLoughlin may figure among the makers of epochs. The personality of the young Californian is a striking one. Both in name and in blood he is Irish. A blonde, with reddish hair and freckled face, he is a true specimen of the fair Hibernian type. In repose his mouth generally wears a smile.

A Great Athlete.

"When driving his hardest or when serving, he shows his teeth. Set like a vise, they give a touch of ferocity and of deadly purpose. The great breadth of his square shoulders makes him look less tall than he is. You will not often see a more finely built figure of an athlete. He has the straight and well-shaped legs that spell litheness of movement; his carriage on the court is rhythmical. The combination of limberness and apparent looseness of joint, with steel-like tension during the stroke, is characteristic of many great athletes. That much abused term 'grace' applies in its proper sense to McLoughlin's movement and his play alike.

"Out of the personality comes the play. Like the man, it is dynamic, swift and strong. He attacks whenever he can, and his weapons of offense are all severe in the extreme. His service is probably the fastest ever seen. It is graded from a slightly breaking ball, which keeps low, to a very strong American break. His pose when preparing to serve suggests a general's summing up of the situation. The man's poise is mechanically perfect. His forehand drive at its swiftest is possibly harder than that of S. H. Smith. It carries considerable top spin, and is hit with the full reach of the arm, preferably with a horizontal racquet. The sound of it is a crash. With this stroke, as well as with his severe smashing, he can kill a ball from the extremity of the court. The drive keeps low; its trajectory is flat.

Cuts His Backhand.

"His backhand is cut, and the ball when hit is in front of his body. This is his weakest department, but it has winning moments. Low volleys he often misses; he prefers the higher and winning position. Extraordinary activity is combined with splendid footwork. He can leap from the center to the side line and cut off a drive with a stop volley. When a ball suits him and he can time it as he pleases, he generally hits it with full strength. His speed on the court is great; his control over the ball and himself is remarkable. To beat Barrett when the latter was two sets to one shows great determination, as it shows good brains. To beat Parke in three sets reveals consistency; survive a field of all comers, over a hundred strong, at the age of 23, on his first visit to England, makes McLoughlin famous indeed."

BELMONT GETS NEW TRAINER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—It is learned that August Belmont has engaged Sam Hildreth to train his American racing stable. Some time ago Hildreth sold his own string of horses to the late Charles Kohler and went abroad, the latter's stable manager scoring many successes on the French turf.

Innis Brown Talks on Football

Heisman Faces Difficult Task

By Innis Brown.

"THE king is dead. Long live the king."

No doubt it is a bit early to begin chanting any funeral dirge over the demise of the present baseball season and cut loose a host of happy huzzas over the near entry of football. In fact, the real big noise with the horsehide is yet to be sprung, and a majority of the baseball populace is really just beginning to admit that the impending problem of the coming world series is whether it will be Bender vs. Mathewson or Plank vs. Marquard.

For all of that, however, the old season is well on its way, and it is merely a matter of a little more than a month until ye crafty football instructors will once more be on the job. Some five weeks more and managers will begin to dig out the musty, moldy regalia of the season past, followed shortly by the loss of large gobs of cuticle from the manly forms of numerous chesty young athletes while engaged in the rather monotonous preliminaries of falling on the ball and tackling a dummy.

* * *

THE return of the season of glory of the knights of the pigskin will no doubt find a rousing welcome among local enthusiasts in the gridiron game. It will also awaken a bit of curiosity as to what local and other teams will be able to show when the count is held.

Out at Tech, Coach Heisman is going to find his legions somewhat shot to pieces by graduation and other more speedy methods of depletion. Captain Leuhrmann will not be back, and Montague and Colley may also be lost. The return of some of the others is uncertain. However, he will have on hand Cook, Scrappy Moore, Loeb, Hutton, Means, with possibly one or two other regulars. Should McDonald return, a fair basis for a backfield may be counted on. In addition to these, it is understood that several promising freshmen have signified an intention of joining the Smithies. Should the Tech pilot draw a couple of good linemen along with one dependable back, opponents of the Jackets may count on a strenuous combat when they line up on Grant Field.

* * *

OVER at Athens, the outlook is a bit unsettled. It is certain that Captain Bob McWhorter will be on the job. With him will be Big John Henderson and probably Paddock, Hitchcock, Powell and Conklin. Timon Bowden has ended his football career by playing professional baseball during the present season in the Empire League. Lucas and Peacock are through, and the return of Wild Arnette, who terrified Auburn on Thanksgiving Day, is doubtful. However, there were a number of good prep men turned out last season in these parts, and the Red and Black will no doubt gather a fair share of these. Besides, the Athenians were rather bountifully supplied with substitutes last year, nad should develop two or three good performers for regular berths.

AT Vanderbilt Commodore Dan McGugin will face the job of picking up two backs and three linemen. The big loss will be in Collins and Hardage, leaving only Sikes of the back trio, with Curlin to fill in at quarter. In the line Swofford, Daves and Shipp will be among the missing. In other words, the Gold and Black skipper will begin with Morgan and Tom Brown of his line; Noch Brown and Turner at ends, and Sikes and Curlin in the back field.

In addition to these, he will have a youngster by the name of Boensch, who should land the quarterback job over Zack Curlin, whose chief bid for fame seems to be the fact that he once jumped into the game in a crisis and kicked a field goal against Michigan. However, about all that can be counted on to date in the line, in addition to the two regulars returned, is Reyer, a sub on last year's team. He will doubtless draw further assistance from the incoming freshman class. To date no relief has shown up to fill in the loss caused by the departure of Collins and Hardage.

* * *

OVER at Auburn Mike Donohue will have to base his calculations minus the services of Rip Majors at quarter, "Sheep" Lamb at tackle and Doctor Ressijac at fullback. However, he can count on Captain Kirk Newell in the back field, along with Arnold and Christopher, while in the line he will have Meadows, Thigpen, Louisell and Pitts. He will also have good flank defense in the persons of Robinson and Kearley. It appears that the genial Mike will start the season with more than his usual strength of seasoned material, which forebodes worry a plenty for his opponents.

* * *

NOT a great deal is known of what Harris Cope may count on at Sewanee just yet. He will lose one of his mainstays in Jim Stoney at center. He will also lose a serviceable and promising player in Sheldon, who put up a sensational game at half in several contests last season. More serious, however, than either of the above will be the loss of Jenks Gillem at end. It will doubtless be a long time before the Tiger squad picks up as valuable all-round man again.

On the other hand, he will have Tolley, Hammond and Parker in the back field, Captain McCallum and probably Magwood, Dobbins and Moore in the line. This force will no doubt be augmented by the addition of two or three good new men, together with a promotion to the varsity of one or two subs on last year's team.

* * *

FROM the above it would appear that neither of these squads will have anything special to begin the season above the average. It will, therefore, be a matter of developing new material, together with good luck in keeping old men in condition, in deciding the relative strength of these teams for the coming season, as compared with past years. But few changes have been made in the playing rules, and with this advantage coaches can begin early to get down to real business in developing their charges. With the schedules that more than one of the above have cut out for themselves it is a cinch bet that no time will be lost when once a start is made.

LARRY SEES VISIONS OF WORLD SERIES FOR NAPS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Spend just a few minutes with big Nap Lajoie during these riotous days. Your time won't be wasted. Larry is one continuous walking smile. Like a charger scenting the smoke of battle, Larry is scenting the smoke of a world's series.

The big fellow has never battled in a world's contest. The greatest player never before has had an opportunity. But he feels that the Naps have a chance now and he's breaking his neck to bring about the realization of dreams of years.

Larry is his same old self again. Completely recovered from the injuries which handicapped him when he was traveling along at such a wonderful clip earlier in the season, he is showing the way to Birmy's ambitious youngsters and causing them to be consumed by the pennant fever.

Larry is playing a wonderful game in the field and his bat is playing an important part in every Nap victory. This may be the big fellow's last chance to be on a club that has a chance for the flag, and he is making the best of his opportunity.

"Keep your lamps on us," says Larry. "We are either going to pass those Athletics or make them think they have been side-swiped by a machine traveling at a two-mile-a-minute clip."

MILWAUKEE FANS AFTER PRESIDENT CHIVINGTON

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 9.—Milwaukee baseball fans and owners of the local club are up in arms against President Chivington, of the American Association, for his action in suspending Manager Clark, of the Brewers, because of a verbal argument with Mike Cantillon, of Minneapolis. They claim it is a deliberate plan to weaken Milwaukee in the pennant race.

A report that George Tebeau is ready to quit the Association and join hands with the Federal League is given more than passing credence here. It also is claimed others are ready to follow suit. Pitcher Slapnicka may be sold to Cincinnati by Milwaukee.

CHANCE FARMS TWIRLER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Watkins, who recently was purchased by Chance from the Youngstown (Ohio) club, has been sent to the New London club of the Eastern Association, so that he can get more experience.

NEW PLAYER FOR COAST.

KEOKUK, IOWA, Aug. 9.—The local Central Association club was yesterday offered $1,000 for Catcher Joe Jenkins by the Oakland, Cal., club. Outfielder Hilly and Shortstop McGrafligan also will go to the Coast League if negotiations now on are completed.

LARGE PRICE BIG HANDICAP TO CHAPPELLE

$18,000 Youngster Forced to Go Against Strongest Pitching in American League.

By Bill Bailey.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Did it ever occur to you that Larry Chappelle was a marked man and that it was more difficult for him to get a base hit than for any other player on the Sox team?

It never did? It's a fact just the same. Chappelle goes against the strongest pitching in the game. Doesn't make any difference what the score is when Chappelle goes to bat, does not make a particle of difference whether there be a man on base, and it doesn't make any difference whether there be two or none out, the opposing twirler shoots across his very best when the youngster walks to the plate.

The reason? The fact that the youngster cost $18,000.

Here is what happens when this youngster walks up there. He is recognized by the fans.

"Do you think he's worth all that coin?" queries one fan of another.

"Don't look like that much money to me," is usually the answer when the team is playing on foreign territory.

"Fan him!" howls the fan to the pitcher.

"Show him up!" howls another bug. "Strike him out!" howls a third.

In a minute all the fans are after the twirler to show up this fellow who cost all that money. And it develops into a duel between the batter and the pitcher.

* * *

YOU know what happens under ordinary conditions when the home team is leading by a large score and the end of the game is near. The pitcher lets up a bit. He figures that there is no use pitching his arm out when he has his game won. You know what happens when two are down and an average batter is up. The twirler is quite willing to let the batter hit. He doesn't put much on the ball, for the reason he figures the man will go out anyway. Then what is the use? It isn't likely that a rally will be started.

* * *

BUT with Chappelle? The pitcher wants to fan him. There is a lot of satisfaction in downing a batter when the eyes of the fans are centered upon you. Then a pitcher can't figure why any batter should cost all that money. And then again, a twirler receives much fame if he strikes out the high-priced youngster.

Chappelle never gets an easy chance at bat. Any time that he steps into that box he knows that the pitcher is going to put everything he possesses on that ball and that regardless of whether the pitcher eases up when the other fellows go up. Chappelle knows that he will get speed and a curve ball.

Oh, it's fine advertising you receive when you cost a lot of money. But you can wager that it does not aid your batting average. You're the mark all along the line. The infielders and outfielders play just twice as hard for you. The pitcher just works twice as hard. Any time that Chappelle receives any credit you can wager that he earns it. For somehow or other every ball player entertains just a bit of envy for the youngster who cost a small fortune.

KAISERLING SIGNS WITH FEDS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 9.—George Kaiserling, the hurler recently released to San Francisco in the Pacific Coast League by the local (A. A.) club, yesterday signed to pitch for the local Federals. He will join his new mates to-day.

LATEST STORIES FROM THE MAJOR LEAGUES

IN the third game of the world's series, two years ago, Jack Coombs was pitching for the Athletics when Josh Devore came to bat. Coombs remembered what Plank, who had pitched for the Athletics the day before, told him of Devore's batting weakness.

"He's helpless before a wide curve," Plank had said.

When Devore came to bat, Coombs soon had two strikes on him. Lapp signaled for a fast ball for the next attempt, but Coombs shook his head, calling for a new signal.

Lapp then called for a slow one. Again Coombs shook his head. There was but one other signal for Lapp to spring—to call for a curve ball. He did.

Coombs bent over a wide curve and Devore swung and missed it a mile. It was a clean strike-out. Lapp gravely took off his mask, walked down to the pitcher's box and whispered in Coombs' ear:

"That's the time WE used OUR head, old top."

* * *

THE talk drifted around to natural sluggers.

"There never was a greater one than Ed Delehanty," said Tim Hurst, the once famous prize ring referee and major league baseball umpire. "And that reminds me of a story.

"It was in the old National League days of the twelve-club circuit," continued Tim. "A promising young third baseman named Flaherty was breaking in for Washington. I took a train with the Senators one night, jumping east from Chicago. Flaherty consulted me about one of his weaknesses.

"'My arm is all right,' said he, 'but I often find that, hurry as I will, I am unable to get my man at first on a bunt or a slow roller.' 'Why, my dear boy,' says I, 'you probably play too deep. Whenever you expect a bunt, sneak up with the pitch.'

"I saw Flaherty about three weeks later in Washington hobbling down Pennsylvania avenue on crutches. I had missed him from the box scores, but thought he had probably been chased back to the sticks. I asked him what had happened.

"'Mr. Hurst,' he said, in the most rueful tone I ever heard, 'I took your advice. I started in on Ed Delehanty, but I woke up in the ambulance, convinced that I was never cut out for third baseman.'"

BILLY MURRAY, former manager of the Phillies, who is now scouting for Pittsburg, was fanning with some friends at the Polo Grounds the other afternoon.

"I do not believe that anyone except a manager can appreciate how much 'bone' there is in the big leagues," he said. "You remember Coveseiskie, the big Pole southpaw who beat the Giants three straight games and kept them from the pennant in 1908? I actually believe he often forgot he was playing baseball.

"In a tight game at Chicago one day he passed Evers with none out. Johnny stole second while Coveleskie held the ball. Catcher Charlie Dooin and all the Quaker infield tried in vain to bring the big pitcher out of his trance.

"When Coveleskie came back to the bench I was pretty nearly sore enough to strangle him. 'Didn't you know there was a runner on first?' I asked, as sarcastically as I could. 'Why, no; I didn't,' he admitted.

"You could have knocked me down with a feather. And Coveleskie was in dead earnest. Turning to Kitty Bransfield, my first baseman, in the most injured tone I could assume, I asked: 'What's the matter with you infielders? Can't you remember to tip off Coveleskie, whenever there are runners at your bases?'

"Do you know," concluded Murray, "that big 'bonehead' of a Pole never tumbled to the fact that he was being kidded."

Scout After Syracuse Pitcher for Red Sox

Patsy Donovan After Twirler Who Recently Held Athletics to Seven Hits.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Patsy Donovan, the Boston American scout, left here yesterday for Binghamton to look over Pitcher Rankin Johnson, of the Syracuse team, who recently held the Athletics to seven hits in an exhibition game here.

It is understood that two other major league clubs are after Johnson.

PLANK IS SLOWEST HURLER IN THE AMERICAN LEAGUE

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—The slowest pitcher in the world has been discovered. He is Eddie Plank, the Athletics' veteran. Just for curiosity, and to settle an argument, a telegraph operator in Philadelphia held the watch on Plank when he pitched against the Browns in a recent series.

After Stovall made a double he consumed 30 seconds throwing the first ball to Pratt. This period elapsed after he received the ball from the catcher and before he delivered it to the bat. The next pitch required 25 seconds. Pratt hit this ball.

In the same inning he took 25 seconds throwing the first ball to Williams. Three pitches to Baienti required 28, 36 and 30 seconds. Plank pulls down his cap, hitches up his trousers, wiggles his left foot and buries it in the pitcher's box like an old hen going to roost. Then he carefully scrutinizes the bases and the outfielders and by the time he gets around to pitch the batter is half fidgeted to death.

That's the system of his stalling—to get the other fellow overanxious.

HERRMANN SENDS OUT CALL FOR YOUNG HURLERS

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—With Southpaw "Rube" Benton practically lost to the Reds for the remainder of the season, President Garry Herrmann has wired around the country for twirlers. He sent messages to Pitcher Harrington, of Lynn, Mass.; Pitcher Robertson, of Savannah, Ga., and several others to join the Reds immediately.

Herrman has tried to arrange a deal with a National League club, offering an outfielder and an infielder for a pitcher, and it may be put through in a few days.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

ATLANTA PLANS WORLD'S FINEST COTTON SHOW

Prominent Display to Include All Phases of Plant From Raw Material to Finished Product.

At a meeting of the cotton products committee of the Manufacturers' Exposition Association yesterday morning the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce took steps toward the establishment in the new Chamber of Commerce Building of the largest and most complete permanent exhibition of cotton and cotton products in the world.

It is proposed to devote an entire floor of the new Chamber of Commerce Building to this exhibit. It will show cotton and cotton products of all kinds in every phase from the growing plant to the finished product. Soil, fertilizer, the proper planting and cultivation of cotton will all be shown as a sort of a prologue to the other exhibits. Cotton lint and all its various products will be shown and the processes explained. Fifty different kinds of cotton cloth and similar products will be shown. The cotton seed will be taken up in the same way, and all its products and by-products exhibited, including hulls, meal, crude oil, fine oil, cooking oil, soap, etc.

Complete exhibits of this kind have been temporarily established at some of the great world's expositions before, but this is the first proposal to establish a permanent one. The exhibit will be in connection with the Merchants and Manufacturers' Exposition. The committee meeting at which the project was put under way was attended by Chairman M. R. Wilkinson, W. M. Hutchinson, W. H. Schroder and H. E. Watkins, who represented E. P. McBurney.

A subcommittee was appointed, with Mr. Hutchinson as chairman and Messrs. Schroder and Watkins members. This committee will discuss the details necessary to raising money by subscription and getting up the exhibit, and will report back to the cotton products committee at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. They will confer with the cotton crushers and oil mill men in the meantime, and the cotton spinners will be invited to attend the Tuesday meeting.

Special invitations to attend this meeting will be extended to Commissioner of Agriculture J. D. Price, Mayor Woodward, members of the Fulton County Board of Commissioners and others interested.

Raw Silks Higher; Canton Stock Small

Advancing Prices Recorded Both in Eastern and European Markets. Buyers Busy.

"The Yokohama raw silk market is still advancing on account of good buying from both Europe and this country," said A. P. Villa & Bros., in their special report. "Canton is very firm, and the stock there is reported to be very small. Estimates of the fourth crop place it at 6,000 bales.

"Lower prices for tsatlees and steam filatures at Shanghai have attracted a large number of buyers and that market is stiffening up again as a result. Tussahs remain unchanged. European manufacturers are buying Italian silks well, and reelers are taking a decidedly optimistic view of the future. Higher prices are expected at Milan shortly.

"The settlement of the strike at Patterson has resulted in some buying at New York. The market is quiet, but firm generally."

GEORGIA APPLE CROP CONDITION PUT AT .52

The Government's report on the apple crop in Georgia for July follows:

For the year 1913, 52 per cent; 1912, 64 per cent; 1911, 40 per cent.

Habersham County reports that apples promise 75 per cent normal yield, which is 50 per cent more than last year. Probably 12 cars will be shipped, mostly Bens, Winesaps and Terrys. Fruit is of better quality than last year. As the orchards are young, not many apples have been shipped.

Users of Mica Against Increase in Tariff

Electrical Manufacturers Say the Raise Is Unnecessary and Not Fair to Them.

Electrical manufacturers and other users of mica are exercised over the action of the Senate Finance Committee in inserting in the pending tariff bill a provision raising the duty on mica above the rates provided in the measure as it was passed by the House of Representatives. Under the tariff act of 1897, and under that of 1909, the present law, complaint has been made that the duty on rough mica, approximating 4,000 per cent, was both unfair and absurd, especially in view of the fact that ten times as much mica is used here as can be produced in this country. As amended by the Senate, the pending tariff bill will provide for practically no reduction of the duty on the product.

A representative of one of the largest electrical manufacturing concerns in the United States said that the blame for increasing the duty on mica in the Senate rests on Senator Simmons, chairman of the Finance Committee. Most of the mica produced in this country, he says, is found in the Senator's own State, North Carolina. As an evidence of the injustice of the prevailing, and proposed, rates of duty on mica in the rough, a recent test case was cited. This case involved importations from Canada. The judges of both the Board of General Appraisers and of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, while confirming the high assessment, condemned the hardship imposed on importers by such an unreasonable duty. Telegrams have been sent by many of the electrical manufacturers to their Senators asking that the Simmons amendment be dropped from the bill now before the Senate, and that the rates in the Underwood bill, or lower rates, be substituted.

Silk Handbags Are Replacing Leather

Knitted Girdles Three Yards Long and Eight Inches Wide Also Are Featured.

The fancy goods and notions trade reports general activity. Buyers now in the market are ordering freely and prices are about the same as prevailed last season.

Knitted girdles in high colors, about three yards long and eight inches wide, are being featured. Cape-girdle effects in solid colors are also well thought of. One importer says that silk handbags in color combinations would largely replace leather varieties, although a good selling movement is reported in the latter in the new envelope-shape bags.

Another leather bag shown is circular in shape and has a single pannier handle in the center. A new style in belts is the wide seven-inch girdle effect, fastened with one large buckle or two smaller ones. New bead necklaces are 27 inches long and are shown in coral and amber. Bandeaux of aluminum and others with beaded and rhinestone effects are leading features among the newer hair ornaments.

Detours on Hartford Greenfield Route

An Automobile Club of America road car has just traversed the main route from Hartford, Conn., to Greenfield, Mass., and the crew reports poor going, the road undergoing construction at four different places.

Leaving Hartford, rough and worn macadam is followed for seven miles. Here the road is under construction for one mile, but is open on the side. Fair macadam, with short rutted stretches, is encountered to Windsor Locks. Mostly good macadam, with some rough spots, leads to Springfield. The next nine and one-half miles to Holyoke is fair macadam and followed along the Connecticut River a worn stretch about one mile long.

From Holyoke good macadam is to Mount Tom, and from Mount Tom to Northampton the road is entirely closed and will not be open all summer. A detour is necessary over rough dirt and worn macadam via Easthampton. Now comes three miles of rough and worn macadam, and then a detour is necessary over a rutted sandy road to Hatfield. Eight miles of good macadam is then followed to South Deerfield, where a detour is made over a poor sandy road to Hatfield. Eight miles of good macadam is then followed to South Deerfield, where a detour is made over a poor sandy road to Wapping.

TRADE IN KNIT GOODS SUFFERS MANY ABUSES

Retailers Know No Limit in Asking for Credit on Returned Goods.

According to one of the best known knit goods wholesalers, there is apparently nothing in the way of illegitimate business that is not done in that field. To illustrate how things went on there, he cited the following instances:

"A small local retailer came into this store the other day with eighteen dozen pairs of hose that he had bought from us about January 1 of last year, and which had actually lain on his shelves since the middle of February, 1912. Apparently without the least sense of doing anything out of the ordinary he told me that the goods were rotten and that he was returning them and wanted credit.

He would not accept my side of the matter at all, and when I refused to credit him for the goods he vowed that he was through buying from us. The goods were rotten, all right. They were in perfect condition when they left us, but we were unable to convince him that we were not responsible for their condition after they had lain on his shelves for seventeen months.

"In another instance a case of hosiery was returned to us with the complaint that they were not like the sample from which they were sold. It happened, however, that these samples had been taken from the very case which was shipped him after the sale was made, had been returned to the case, and shipped with the balance of the goods. There was absolutely no justification for the claim made, but the account being very good, we could do nothing but take the goods back.

"Here is another case: Late last season we bought a heavy bill of silk hose from a prominent New England manufacturer at $7.50 a dozen, which was a good reduction from the manufacturer's regular price. The goods did not move well, however, and, getting a chance to dispose of fifty dozen of them to a retailer in the Middle West, I made a price of $6.75 on them. I was willing to lose 75 cents a dozen to 'get from under.' Imagine my surprise to-day, when I got a letter from this retailer saying that we were in error on the price we had billed him. He maintained that the salesman had made the price $6.50. To settle the matter in as friendly a way as possible he notified me that he could get the same hose from another source at $6, and suggested that I tell him by return mail that this price would be satisfactory to me. The goods are now on the way back to New York, and that account is crossed off the books."

Shadow and Oriental Laces Lead Market

Regular Embroidery Lines Opening Well, as Are Many of the Novelties.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Fall buying in the lace and embroidery market is opening well, and dealers expect a good season. On account of light duplicating during the spring, orders are being booked at satisfactory rates, making the merchandise very tempting to buyers. Most trading done so far has been with merchants in the region from Denver west to the coast, although buyers from the Middle West are coming in.

Many novel effects in lace are shown, and reported to be taking well. Lightweight shadow and Oriental effects in allovers and flounces are also in demand. Regular embroidery lines are opening well, as are the many novelties in various designs of Swiss embroidery in edgings and sets. The high-color Balkan effects are not moving strongly with the dealers this season.

QUITS BIG EXCHANGE; BUYS CONSOLIDATED SEAT

A. R. Allan, of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Maynard & Allan, which was dissolved, purchased a seat on the Consolidated Stock Exchange for $1,200, including the transfer fee.

This is the first time in a long while that a member of a New York Stock Exchange firm has secured a membership on the "Little Board."

HAVE NO FEAR OF SUTHERLAND TARIFF CHANGE

Evasion Simple Through Sending Goods Abroad Again and Re-importing Them.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Few of the importers owning the seventy-odd million dollars' worth of merchandise that is now lying in bonded warehouses in this city waiting the passage of the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill regard seriously the amendment offered by Senator Sutherland, of Utah, to make these goods dutiable on entrance at the rates prevailing under the present law.

There is a strong feeling that the amendment will never be taken up for serious consideration by Congress. There is a stronger feeling that if it should be passed by any chance it would prove inadequate to do the work that was intended for it by its sponsor.

To justify the first contention it is pointed out that never in the history of the country has any merchandise brought in under a new tariff been dutiable at the rates of the old. To prove the second, it is argued that, the goods never having been entered and no duties paid on them, it will be a comparatively easy matter to export them to their original shipping point, or some foreign port nearer by, and reimport them under the new rates.

This is an especially attractive way of "beating" the measure for importers who bring in goods on which the duties are lowered sharply in the new bill.

Discussing this phase of the question, E. H. Vanlngen, of E. H. Van-Ingen & Co., importers of woolens, said yesterday.

"On every thousand dollars' worth of woolen goods, foreign cost, the duty under the present law is over $900. Under the Underwood-Simmons bill the duty would be $350. What would the loss of time for three weeks and the cost of two freights amount to compared with the $550 saved by exporting and reimporting the goods?"

The following is the way one specific case of reimporting would work out. In figuring it a foreign invoice covering a shipment of several cases of woolen goods was chosen:

The foreign invoice value of the goods in question was $4,055, and the original freight charge on them was slightly over $75. The duty on them under the present act (based on an average duty of 90 per cent) would be $3,649.50, making the full landing cost $7,779.50. If brought in under the new tariff at a duty of 35 per cent, the tax would be $1,419.25 and the full landing cost would be $5,649.25, or a saving of $2,230.25. If the goods now entered in bond were exported and shipped back to this country under the new tariff, this saving would be diminished only by about $150 for freight and some incidental warehousing charges.

On bulky goods, which would mean greater freight charges, and on goods where the reduction in duty is not great, this method of avoiding the power of the Sutherland measure would not result in savings so great as those in the illustration, but in any event the importers see little reason for worry in the Senator's attempt to save the Government several million dollars in revenue that would be lost under the present provisions of the new tariff.

Small Rubber Tires For Teething Babes

G. A. Sohl, manager of the local branch of the Republic Rubber Company, is distributing a novel souvenir among the automobile owners of Atlanta. It is a miniature Staggard Tread Republic tire. The tire is about five inches in diameter and can be worn as a watch fob or makes a very serviceable paperweight.

Mr. Sohl recommends the little tire very highly as a teething ring for babies, claiming that his two little

Mill and School Are Run in Conjunction

Disadvantages of Child Labor Offset by System Adopted by English Concern.

In view of the widespread agitation against child labor, interest attaches to a recent report by Consul Franklin D. Hale at Huddersfield, England, on a plan providing education and employment for children at the same time:

"One of the English district factory inspectors reports specially in regard to half-time labor of children of school age, taking one instance of a school in connection with a textile factory where 35 children attend school two and a half hours daily and work in the mill five hours, with a complete rest every alternate week after 3 p. m. and from Friday until 9 a. m. the following Monday. The inspector noted the bright, healthy and intelligent appearance of the children, and says:

"The schoolmistress informed me that these children made as much progress in their education as the ordinary full-time scholars and invariably earned the full Government grant which depends both on attendance and scholarship, and obtained very good reports from the inspector of schools. They are necessarily very regular in their school attendance, because lost attendance has to be made up before they can renew their work at the mill. The fact that they earn $1.10 a week probably accounts for their being better fed and clothed than other children of the same class.'"

Cheaper Carpets in Good Demand Now

Higher Grades of Goods Quiet. Trade Comes Chiefly From Mail Order Houses.

Trading in better grade carpets and rugs is quiet, although the cheaper grades are active. The demand for the latter is chiefly from large mail order houses and considerably exceeds the supply, according to a prominent New York selling agent.

Lower grade goods are principally in the jobbers' hands, and they are selling freely at a small margin. Stocks in retailers' hands are light. There is a shortage reported in small rugs. Nearly all looms working low-end seamless tapestries and velvets are sold up to their capacity.

Unique Auto Record By Denver Concern

As an indication of the constant improvement of the automobile business, the Willys-Overland Company, of Toledo, Ohio, points to the record established by its Denver distributor, the Overland Auto Company, during the season of 1913. The Western concern's original order for 1913 Overlands called for 400 cars, to be within a very short time after the announcement of the model this was increased to 500, with a request that if possible it was to be allowed 100 additional cars.

Because of the great demand for Overlands, the extra allotments could not be made. On July 4 the factory received word from Denver that but 23 of the 500 Overlands remained unsold.

"These will be gone long before the new cars come. We will need a greatly increased allotment for 1914 and are telling you about it this early so that we will not be overlooked," wrote W. J. Carter, of the Denver firm.

HERE IS BEST WAY TO APPLY A TIRE.

Before applying tires, remove rust and all other foreign matter. If the tire has been ridden deflated at any time, mud may have accumulated on the rim and unless this is removed the tire can not adjust itself properly. Soapstone dusted on the rim will act as a lubricant and make it much easier for the tire beads to slip into their correct position, thereby reducing the danger of pinching the inner tube.

Before placing the inner tube inside of case, inflate just enough to round it out. Do not use a tube of the wrong size and be sure that the spreader of the valve is adapted for the particular type of case, whether regular clincher, quick detachable clincher or Q. D. cable base. Dust tube and inside of case with talc, which will reduce the friction and prevent adhesion of the tube to case after heated in service. If too much talc is used, however, and any water should work its way on the inside of the tire, there is danger of grit and attending injury to the tube. Powdered graphite is not quite so nice to handle as talc but is a much more durable lubricant.

PERU CLEANING UP; WANTS OUR SANITARY WARE

English Engineer Says Americans Are Neglecting Profitable and Growing Close Market.

A big market for certain lines of goods of American manufacture is lying undeveloped in Peru, according to Richard T. Hird, sanitary engineer for the Provincial Council of Callao. Mr. Hird says that a demand has sprung up for all sorts of sanitary materials and appliances, and that absolutely no attempt has been made by American manufacturers to cater to it.

Mr. Hird, who is an Englishman, has been working on the new water and sewage works of the port of Callao, which have just been completed. Every coast town in Peru, he says, is getting ready for the opening of the Panama Canal, and the whole country expects tremendous benefits from the completion of the great waterway.

"Callao has been making provision for the commerce which it is believed will come to it," said Mr. Hird. "The improvements which have just been finished are based on a population of 50,000. At the present time there are about 34,000 inhabitants.

Ships Not To Be Delayed.

"Now the authorities are started on a general clearing up of the town, in fact, of all the coast towns. It is realized that ships must be able to proceed straight from Callao to Panama without having to be delayed by long stops in quarantine.

"One thing the city of Callao itself is about to do is to put in modern street paving and a modern slaughter house, the latter with a capacity of 45,000 cattle per annum. Most of the animals that will be slaughtered here will be Peruvian or Chilean cattle, which will come to Callao from the smaller ports to the south.

Sanitary Materials Needed.

"While there is a good number of Englishmen and Americans down there, there is now a distinct trend of Germans to the country. What I would like to see now is something like active appreciation on the part of American manufacturers of sanitary materials, and of the great opportunity Peru now presents for the sale of their products. There is a great dearth of sanitary material to be had in the country. There is a first-class opportunity down there now for sanitary wares of various kinds. The Government is insistent that sanitary works be installed, and no matter which party has been in office, we have never had any difficulty in getting money to prosecute the works we have been carrying on. We are carrying a loan of $500,000 furnished mainly by French, Peruvian, and English capitalists. Most of the piping material for general work we have been using has been of English manufacture, though we have had to get not a little from Austria. We have installed a hydro-pneumatic pumping station for getting rid of the sewage, which is assembled in two distinct sections and thrown out on two sides of the town, thence going by gravity to the sea.

"There is a big chance down there for some American company that would like to undertake the repaving of cities. Not only the whole city of Callao is to be repaved, but other towns will make similar improvements."

CROPS DOING WELL.

COLUMBUS, GA., Aug. 2.—The condition of crops has improved wonderfully during the past ten days, since the rainy weather began. Where it was thought impossible to make a crop of corn, planted early, it now looks as if the yield will be heavy, while late corn is doing remarkably well. Throughout 20 counties embraced in the Columbus territory, it is considered that the rains have improved the condition of cotton materially, and that where it was at least two weeks late prior to the rains, it is now about as forward as usual.

CUBISTS IN MILLINERY FIELD.

Cubist roses are the newest thing in the millinery world. These are silk flowers with square petals and foliage. Part of the rose is in one color and the rest of another shade. The color schemes are varied, and various shadings are grouped, sometimes harmoniously and sometimes in a way to create a clash of colors. The cubist wing has also made its appearance, and some observers look for a season of "square" millinery ornamentation.

Kid Glove Makers in Midst of Big Season

Fall Buying Greatly in Excess of Expectations—Sales Are Double Last Year's.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Manufacturers of kid gloves are experiencing trouble making deliveries, as the fall selling has greatly exceeded expectations. One maker says his sales were double those of 1912. Lamb skins are scarce and high, necessitating large advances. Kid skins are plentiful, but no lower. Raw materials here are thought to be fairly well sold up.

On account of the tariff bill, it is said that strikes are prevalent in Europe, the strikers wanting to share the increased profits made possible by the lower tariff. According to another dealer, if the bill is not passed by September 15 the losses to manufacturers in America will be heavy. Importers are unwilling to deliver goods and stand any advance in tariff, and retailers will not take merchandise unless they get the benefit of any downward revision.

Road business coming into the fabric glove market for 1914 shows a considerable increase over last year, the demand for lisle and chamoisette goods being especially large. White goods are most in demand, but there is little or no activity in colors.

Plan to Mark Sizes On Shoes Is Opposed

Most Retailers Appear to Prefer Code Instead of Plain Figures and Letters.

Shoe manufacturers and retailers have joined in a movement to have sizes and widths marked in shoes by a plain and uniform system.

There is apparently a little reluctance on the part of the retailers to abandon wholly the system of "blind" or code markings, which mean nothing to the ultimate consumer, in favor of the system of plain markings, with the various sizes and widths indicated by numerals and letters.

The national organization of retailers has adopted resolutions favoring uniformity, but also asking the manufacturers "to select the most practical code, preferably the one most commonly used at this time, as a general code for retailers, who prefer to have the sizes on their shoes indicated by a code, instead of a plain marking."

ROAD UNDER CONSTRUCTION.

The touring department of the Automobile Club of America reports a road under construction from Millwood, N. Y., through Chappaqua, connecting with King street for Portchester.

The road is to be macadamized and when completed will afford a direct connection from lower Long Island Sound points to the Harlem Valley and along the Hudson River.

Long Island motorists will also benefit greatly by the new road, since connection can be made from Long Island by the Rye-Seacliff ferry.

SEVERE TESTS HELD IN STORE FOR NEW MEN

Many Concerns Purposely Make Tryout of Employees Harder Than Regular Work.

A prominent manufacturer says that fully 90 per cent of the men that prove satisfactory during the first few weeks of their employment can afterward keep their positions as long as they desire. Most houses have tests to try out new employees, and these are nearly always more severe than the work they are required to do regularly.

"In my offices," he said, "new men are required to do disagreeable, unimportant tasks. I give some the privilege of straightening out the most disagreeable complaints that come in. It shows whether they have any executive ability.

"Many take positions believing that it is not well to set an example for hard work because the employer will think better of them if the work is done easily. A man must work hard at a new job at first because he has friction with older employees and lack of knowledge of numerous details of the work to contend with. I think more of the new man for working overtime trying to overcome these obstacles than of the man who apparently goes through his work with no effort.

"I recall the case of a man who made a good record in a position where a number had failed before him. He studied the business, and interviewed as many of his predecessors as possible to ask their reasons for quitting before he made his try at it. After making notes of the others' reasons he went to work well fortified with a knowledge of the existing conditions and made good in a big way.

IRISH LACE INDUSTRY.

"It may not be known generally," says Dress Essentials, "that modern Irish lace making had its origin in the failure of the potato crop that caused the famine in 1846. The abbess of a convent in County Cork, looking about for some lucrative employment to help the half-starved children who attended her schools, unraveled, thread by thread, a scrap of Point de Milan, and finally mastered the complicated details. She then selected the girls who were quickest at needlework, and taught them what she had so painfully learned. The new industry prospered, and one of the pupils, in a characteristic 'bull,' declared that 'if it had not been for the famine we would all have been starved.'"

BRADY'S DEATH MARKS PASSING OF GREAT MAN

Cashier of Barber Shop Rose To Be Ranked With Morgan and E. H. Harriman.

KEPT HIS FOLLOWING INTACT

Inspired Unswerving Loyalty by His Faith in Men—At His Best as a Builder

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Wall Street lacks leadership and the recent demise of Anthony N. Brady removed another great figure from the financial galaxy depleted by the deaths of E. H. Harriman, J. P. Morgan, John W. Gates and Edwin Hawley. As a financier of great ability, his leadership in commercial enterprises was made pre-eminent by the success he attained in building up Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Consolidated and People's Gas, American Tobacco and United States Rubber, for which he made conspicuous markets during periods of activity in stocks.

His constructive ability appeared to be limitless and his policies had a wide following, particularly in public utility operations. At the time of his death, he was a director in sixty corporations. Mr. Brady's first important business transaction was the acquisition and consolidation of traction companies in and about Albany. He built these up to a high degree of public efficiency, as well as profit to stockholders, and eventually sold them at good terms to the Delaware and Hudson. Similarly with the Providence Tractions, which he sold to the New Haven.

He Trusted Men.

Loyalty to his friends and business associates and scrupulous honor in keeping agreements made him one of the great powers of finance, but he went further than that. He trusted men, believing that those with whom he chose to do business would be as highly honorable as himself. In his relations with his friends he was not alone loyal.

He went out of his way to help them. The result was that most of them were ever on the alert to help him. Wall Street never heard as much as a rumor of dissension in the Brady party, nor as much as an idle report of financial troubles among any of Mr. Brady's associates. But it does know of wealthy men in Albany who were Mr. Brady's friends in early days and business associates in New York and elsewhere who have become both wealthy and prominent by his guidance. It knows also that no Wall Street party ever held closer together or ever transacted such important matters of business with so little noise or criticism.

Loyal as Morgan.

"Mr. Brady stuck by his companies," said one of his business associates, "and he stuck by his friends. Toward them his loyalty was of the intensity of Mr. Morgan. Like Mr. Morgan, he never withdrew from a transaction once he had given his word that he would participate. He was a man of high honor in his dealings with all his associates and it was to his loyalty to them and their loyalty and admiration for him that his success was largely due."

In his management of Consolidated Gas and its subsidiary, the New York Edison Company, companies which were formerly bitterly assailed, Mr. Brady's policy was liberal to the point where it eventually disarmed criticism. It was through him that George B. Cortelyou, on his retirement from the Cabinet, was persuaded to accept the presidency of Consolidated Gas and he collaborated with Mr. Cortelyou in settling all the mass of litigation with New York City and State. As a builder and a man of constructive policy Mr. Brady's work was before every one in the development of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit.

The company had been exploited in the stock market before he acquired control and had never paid a a dividend. Since that time it steadily developed along straight business lines, placed on a 6 per cent dividend basis and is an important factor in the rapid transit work now under way in Greater New York.

Made Money in Tea.

His career in the world in business began in a barber shop in Albany, N. Y., as cashier. Later he started a small tea business. In that he showed the remarkable business ability through which he accumulated a fortune. He established a chain of stores in several cities in the northern part of New York, and, it was said, through this enterprise he obtained the capital with which he began his early operations on a larger scale. His next enterprise was to manipulate a corner in quinine. Then he obtained stock in the Albany Gas Company and began his operations as a promoter. Soon after he had become connected with the gas interests he bought several large granite quarries, which he disposed of at a big profit, and again turned his attention to gas and secured several large interests in Albany, Troy and Chicago.

Studied Gas Chemistry.

When he had become interested in gas Mr. Brady began a systematic study of the business in all of its phases. He devoted weeks to the study of chemistry as applied to the manufacture of gas and finally adopted the De Mote plan. To make the improvements he needed additional capital, so he took his plans to Roswell P. Flower and Edward Murphy. They interested E. C. Benedict and Grover Cleveland and entered into a deal by which the gas plants of Albany were purchased outright. He went into the oil business and organized the Manhattan Oil Company, of Lima, Ohio selling its output to the Chicago Gas Company.

Big Money in South's Sweet Potato Crop if Properly Stored and Marketed

Value of Sweet Potatoes Increases 80 Per Cent During Last Ten Years—Ninety Per Cent of Crop Grown in South Atlantic States. Great Demand Not Supplied.

CHARLES A. WHITTLE.
Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Speaking of big money-making crops suited to the South, what is the matter with the sweet potato?

For sure corps, good returns and a growing market, take your hat off to the sweet potato patch. Georgia is "pulling down" some $5,000,000, Alabama some $4,000,000, Mississippi $3,500,000, Louisiana $3,000,000, Tennessee $4,000,000, North Carolina $5,000,000, South Carolina $3,000,000, Virginia $3,000,000, Kentucky $1,000,000, Arkansas $2,000,000, Texas $2,500,000, Florida $2,000,000 in sweet potatoes each year.

Ask any groceryman if he ever has enough sweet potatoes to supply the demand. If he has, he is the exception to the rule.

The South is the natural habitat of the sweet potato. It is up to the Southern States to supply the demand. The demand is growing, the sweet potato patches are growing, but the demand is quite a lap ahead and gaining. In fact, there is a wide-open, attractive opportunity for the Southern farmer in growing sweet potatoes. Why not "go to it"?

The Spread of the Potato Patch.

Under the inspiration of a growing price and an enlarging market, the sweet potato patches have extended their area during the census decade previous to 1909 39.3 per cent for the country as a whole. While the Southern States have them all beaten in advantages, every State in the Union is growing potatoes and only four are falling away from the habit and show a decrease in the decade period mentioned. These are Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois and Texas.

Georgia takes first place in the amount of revenue derived from the sweet potato according to census figures. Other Southern States in their order are North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Virginia, South Carolina, Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee, Arkansas, Florida and Kentucky.

The increase which the census shows for the last report for each State is as follows: Louisiana 174 per cent, Oklahoma 155 per cent, Arkansas 154 per cent, Alabama 112 per cent, Mississippi 110 per cent, North Carolina 104 per cent, Georgia 85 per cent, Tennessee 84 per cent, South Carolina 70 per cent, Kentucky 66 per cent, Virginia 56 per cent, Florida 37 per cent.

The Southern States grow a very great part of all the sweet potatoes, and will continue to grow them for the special reason that the soil, climate and long growing season favor this kind of tuber. Therefore, the increase in acreage and revenue from this source will belong to the South in the future as in the past.

Increase in Price.

The census report tells us that for the last decade reported that the value of the sweet potato crop in 1909 in the South Atlantic States was three-fourths greater than it was in 1899; in the West South Central States nearly twice as great. Since the South Atlantic States grow over 90 per cent of the sweet potato crop, it is important that particular reference should be made to this territory.

In Georgia, for instance, the average value of a bushel of potatoes increased 13 cents during the census decade and has increased more since then. In North Carolina the increase in price per bushel during the last census decade was 14 cents. In Alabama the increase has been 18 cents per bushel, in Louisiana 9 cents per bushel, in Mississippi 17 cents.

The increase in the value of sweet potatoes in the country as a whole for the last census decade was 13 cents per bushel, or 30 per cent. The increase has been continuing. While there has been a general increase in the value of all crops of the United States, contributing to the higher cost of living, yet the larger demand for the sweet potato has pushed ahead of the general average considerably.

While values have been estimated in generalities of a census report, it goes without saying that the intelligent, thrifty farmer has little to do with such general averages. They are very far beneath him. His yields per acre, his returns per bushel are always much in excess of the general average. It is possible for the intelligent farmer, planting on good land, to grow from 100 to 300 bushels of sweet potatoes per acre. It is easy enough to average from 75 cents to $1 per bushel. It is possible by good storing to get from $2 to $3 per bushel or even more by home canning.

Profits Can Easily Be Increased.

When a farmer finds the local markets flooded at potato gathering time, and can get only 50 cents a bushel, he is disposed to believe that there is not much in the sweet potato business. A great many growers are content to market their crops under such unfavorable conditions, rather than go to a little more trouble and get much better prices.

In some of the potato-growing sections of the South the co-operative marketing societies which have handled the strawberry, cantaloupe, beans or other early crops, also handle the sweet potato crop in its season, shipping to some Northern market. Usually better prices can be had in the Northern market than prevails in the local Southern markets.

Where canneries have been established an increasing amount of sweet potatoes are being canned each year, netting the farmer who knows how to can successfully large returns. Even where the potatoes are turned over to the commercial canning plants the revenue is larger as a rule than is to be obtained upon a flooded market.

Storing Is the Best Method.

More can be obtained from sweet potatoes by storing them than by any other method, with the possible exception of canning. Since canned sweet potatoes are not in as great demand as the natural tuber, of course, there is a danger of overdoing the canning business at the first.

A very valuable bulletin has just been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, entitled, "Storing and Marketing Sweet Potatoes," by H. C. Thompson. This has appeared as Farmers' Bulletin 548, and should be in the hands of every farmer in the South who is interested in growing and marketing sweet potatoes. Its particular value is in its information as to how to store sweet potatoes. It is well known to every grower of sweet potatoes that the storing proposition is quite different from that of the Irish potato. Many methods have been used for storing the sweet potato in the South. Some of them are successful, but most are not.

The usual method is to bank them—that is, bed them in straw and cover up with dirt, preferably under a shed, but if in the open, the mound is covered with boards. This method, while serving well for the Irish potato, is not so good for the sweet potato, which carries a greater percentage of water in its makeup.

It is for the purpose of giving the farmers who grow sweet potatoes a practical, workable storage plan that the bulletin referred to has been issued.

Many Potatoes Spoil.

The writer says that from 25 to 50 per cent of the sweet potatoes stored in pits or banks spoil, and those that remain are not to be considered of first-class quality. He says that the only safe and practical method of storing sweet potatoes is in a storage house.

To keep sweet potatoes in good condition they must be well matured before digging, carefully handled, well dried or cured after being put in the house, and kept at a uniform temperature after they are cured.

A potato is ready to be dug when after breaking one, the exposed broken surface dries in a few minutes. If it remains moist, the potato is not mature.

The potato should be carefully handled when it is intended for storage. It should be put in baskets or boxes and placed in the bins with the least jolting and bruising possible. If stored in the kind of house which is suggested, they can there be properly cured.

The Best Storage House.

While a cheap storage house can be made to serve the purpose, experience has taught that to maintain right temperature the cost of fuel and the trouble will soon offset the extra cost of erecting a good house at the start.

A desirable wooden house is preferable because it is cheaper and easier to keep dry. It should be built on posts or piers to admit of the circulation of air all around it. The "dug-out" or house partly built underground is advised against for use in the South because of the practical impossibility of keeping such a house dry. Moisture, of course, means rot.

For building a storage house that will hold 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of potatoes, a house 20 by 40 feet may be erected. On the sleepers a rough floor can be laid, and on top of this a layer of heavy building paper placed, and on top of this matched flooring.

The walls can be built by putting on the outside of the studding board an inch thick nailed on diagonally. Over this a layer of building paper should be put, and then matched siding. On the inside of the studding a layer of ceiling should be placed; on top of this a layer of building paper, and then matched board of wainscoting. In the lower South it is claimed that the first layer of ceiling on the studding inside may be omitted.

The sides should be well tied together with scantlings four feet part so as to be over the partitions for the bins. Any kind of roof may be used provided it be made tight to keep out the cold. Galvanized iron is preferable. A layer of roofing paper over the rafters will serve to keep the cold air out.

Coat of Paper Needed.

On the lower sides of the rafters should be put a coat of building paper and on this a layer of matched material.

The space between the walls should be left open. No filling serves as well as the air itself for keeping the building free from moisture.

Thorough ventilation is necessary. Put three windows on each side, a door in each end and at least two ventilators in the top of the roof. The windows should be within 18 inches or two feet of the floor and windows and doors should be made to fit tight and keep out the cold. Where glass windows are used, outside shutters should be employed. It is needful that there should be one or more glass windows to admit light, while working inside in the winter. Ventilators in the roof must also be provided with coverings to keep out the cold.

The bins should have movable floors, made of slats one inch thick and four wide, leaving one inch space between each slat. The same is true of the walls of the bins. The purpose in making a movable floor in the bin is to admit of removing, cleaning and disinfecting it durng the summer. Between 6 and 12 inches of space should be left in the walls and the bins to admit of the circulation of air. In slatting up the bins, space to the width of the separating scantling can also be made, that is, each bin should have a separate end.

Log House Can Be Used.

Instead of going to the expense of erecting the building described, many Southern farms will be found a tenant house, perhaps a log house, which can be converted into a sweet potato house at little cost, remembering to make them air-tight as far as possible and introduce the ventilation features which have been described.

After the potatoes have been put in the storage house the temperature should be maintained from 80 to 85 degrees Fahrenheit for ten days or two weeks, depending on weather conditions. Ventilation is absolutely necessary at this period and whether the temperature can be maintained at the height mentioned or not, it is better to keep all windows and ventilators open to drive out the moisture-ladened air. If moisture collects on the wall or ceiling at this period a fire must be built at once to dry it out.

When the potatoes are thoroughly dried or cured the temperature should be gradually reduced and kept as near as possible around 55 degree during the storage season. If the temperature goes below 48 degrees a fire should be made in the house, or the house opened in the middle of the day if the temperature is high enough. If the temperature in the house goes above 60 degrees, the house should be opened in the cool of the day to lower the temperature to 54 or 55. The house should have some ventilation every day.

Secret of High Prices.

Potatoes bruised and cut during the digging and handling accounts for the poor price which many of them bring. The secret of getting high prices is to carefully clean and pack and to put on the market when there is a good demand. The storage house will provide for the latter.

To clean potatoes requires very little trouble but it pays. To pack the right kind of potatoes is easy enough when proper precautions are taken. First it is better to use plows with rolling colters on the beam to cut the vines, and with rods attached to the mold board to free the roots from the soil and vine. The potatoes can then be taken from the ground with hand and should be sorted at this time. Those of uniform size and good quality should go into one pile for the market, those selected for seed in another and the remainder can be canned or fed to stock. Potatoes should not be tossed from row to row, nor packed in bags even to haul to the storage house. It is better to handle them in baskets or boxes to storage and to market and thus save waste from bruises and rotting.

Some Sweet Potato Facts.

Based upon the discussion of the bulletin referred to in this article certain conclusions have been summarized as follows:

The value of the sweet potato has increased about 80 per cent in the last ten years. With methods of storing and marketing the present value could be doubled.

Sweet potatoes can be kept satisfactorily in a storage house where the temperature and moisture conditions can be controlled.

Sweet potatoes to keep well must be well matured, carefully handled, thoroughly cured and kept at a uniform temperature while in storage.

Thorough ventilation is essential during the curing period.

The temperature should be kept at about 80 degrees or 85 degrees Fahrenheit during the curing period and reduced gradually to 55 degrees after the potatoes are cured. Fluctuations of temperature should be avoided throughout the storage period.

The potatoes should be carefully graded, cleaned and packed in neat and attractive packages.

Sweet potatoes should never be marketed in bags nor in bulk.

Veneer barrels or bushel hampers are desirable packages to use during mild weather and double-headed stave barrels or tight boxes in cold weather.

U. S. Makes Big Gain In Trade to South

Exports $10,000,000 More Than Previous Year—Imports Remain Almost the Same.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—While trade between the United States and five of the principal South American countries, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Uruguay, still is in favor of the southern republics, this country made a considerable gain during the past fiscal year. It reduced by $10,000,000 the wide margin of difference between its imports from and exports to those countries.

Imports valued at $187,000,000 are the same as in 1912. In exports the United States gained, shipping $126,000,000 of merchandise this year against $116,000,000 last year. Increases were made in shipments to all countries named, except Argentina.

In the past year Argentina bought $53,000,000 and sold $27,000,000; Brazil, $43,000,000 bought, $120,000,000 sold; Chile, $16,000,000 bought, $28,000,000 sold; Peru, $7,000,000 bought; $10,000,000 sold; Uruguay, $2,000,000 bought, $7,000,000 sold.

Auto Exports Grow Forty-fold in Decade

Canada Alone Takes Cars, Parts and Accessories Valued at $9,200,000 in Year.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Automobiles and automobile parts to the value of $40,000,000 were shipped from the United States in the past fiscal year, as against $1,000,000 in 1903, a decade ago, according to figures by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Of last year's shipments, $28,590,000 were in finished automobiles.

Canada was the largest buyer, with 7,200 cars, worth $9,200,000, while England bought 4,000, valued at $3,000,000.

Less than $2,000,000 worth of automobiles were imported, at an average price of $2,300, while in 1907 more than $4,000,000 worth were brought in at an average price of $3,400.

COAL TRADE PROSPERITY.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—The semi-annual report made up of official and semi-official figures indicates that the coal production in Alabama in 1913 will go between 18,000,000 and 20,000,000 tons, the largest in the history of the industry in this State. Several of the larger coal mining companies in Alabama have orders in hand which will warrant the operation of coal mines through the balance of the year.

DAWES SEES IN CURRENCY BILL FINANCIAL RUIN

Chicago Banker, Former Comptroller, Says Administration Act Would Bring Disaster.

That the enactment of the administration currency bill would be the forerunner of commercial disaster by placing the banking system under the control of politics, is the prediction of Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois and formerly Comptroller of the Currency.

Mr. Dawes issued a critical review of the chief feature of the bill. He is the first State banker to discuss the measure in detail.

"The industry and capital of the country must awaken now to the menace that confronts them in the administration currency bill," he warns, "and not wait until after they have paid the price of prosperity for the knowledge which experience would bring."

Objections to Bill.

His principal objections to the bill are summarized in the following paragraphs:

"This plan compelling the national banks to furnish to competitors (the proposed Federal reserve banks) both capital and business, and divorcing ownership from control by putting these competitors under the control of political appointees, brings the banking system of this country into the situation again from which it emerged after Andrew Jackson, backed by the State banks on one hand and the radical politicians on the other, ruined the Second Bank of the United States and plunged the country into the devastating and terrible panic of 1837.

Says It Will Repeat History.

"If this bill is passed our banking system is again projected into politics. If one would know what this means to the business and prosperity of the nation, let him read the financial history of the United States from 1830 to 1840."

"While it is so constructed as to appear on its face less radical in its grant of centralized power than the Aldrich bill, it is, in fact, much more radical in its grants of such power. Such of the advantages of the Aldrich bill—as, for instance, the provisions for elasticity in our currency and for the mobilization of bank reserves—which it seeks to retain, it offsets by other provisions which will entail greater evils than the ones from which we now suffer.

Must Furnish Capital.

"This bill proposes to compel the national banks to furnish the capital for a number of Federal reserve banks under the ultimate control of government appointees, which reserve banks, under the provisions of the law, become competitors of the national banks and State banks.

"Besides their capital, it compels the national banks to turn over to these competitors several hundred millions of reserve deposit—in other words, to contribute to them both capital and business. As the Federal reserve banks pay no interest on these forced reserve deposits, they will be no mean competitors in their use in open market operations.

No Limit to Loss.

"No limit is put to the extent of loss which the national banks may suffer on their investment in Federal reserve bank stock, but they are limited to a 5 per cent return as possible profits.

"The Government which has received par for its 2 per cent bonds, deposited by the national banks to secure their circulation, if this law is passed threatens with loss any national bank which has outstanding circulation and desires to retire from the system.

"The real reason why no adequate protection against the fall in price of the 2s, due to the withdrawal of the currency privilege, is given to outstanding holders of them seems to be to make it expensive for national banks having a large circulation to join the exodus from the national system which will occur if this bill passes into law in its present form. It is not apparently a matter of oversight or carelessness that the interests of outside holders of 2 per cent bonds are thus disregarded.

Say U. S. Loans May Tighten Money

Bankers Declare Funds Will Come to New York, and Not Aid Crop Movement.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Bank officers in the financial district took exception to the statement by Senator Tillman that they had ruined the Southern farmer, and in answer to this said loans to the South this spring had been about 50 per cent greater than in the corresponding period last year.

One said Government aid might seriously tighten money, as out-of-town bankers who get the money at 2 per cent would immediately pay off New York loans carrying 5 to 5 1-2 per cent, so that the money would find its way to New York and not meet any commercial or agricultural needs.

Another bank head said: "Banks of New York City have loaned more money this year to the South by a good sight than last year. This bank, for instance, loaned 50 per cent more to the South than last year.

"To-day we loaned $5,000,000 more to our banking correspondents in the South than on the same day last year."

J. S. Alexander, vice president of the National Bank of Commerce, said:

"No borrower from the South, West, North or locally has requested loans from the National Bank of Commerce without receiving the fullest consideration and treatment satisfactory to himself."

WESTERN BELT DRY; EAST NOW IS DOING WELL

Cotton Traders Keenly Absorbed in Weather Maps as the Critical Month Progresses.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 9.—Observing the weather map and trying to get a line on its indications is a favorite occupation for many people in the cotton belt at this time. The occasion for such keen interest is that August is perhaps the most crucial single month of the season, for loss sustained therein is permanent. So far the present month has brought no developments of unusual character, but it is a mooted question whether the crop has lost condition enough to be serious. There is no trouble starting an argument when the question is sprung, and around it has hinged in a large measure the fluctuation in the speculative market.

The only sources of a crop scare yet have been Texas and Oklahoma, which usually contribute their share of such scares, though rarely failing to have satisfactory crops as a whole. Lack of sufficient moisture is the trouble, and the rains received about the last of last week afforded but partial relief. They were very welcome and some sections can go for quite a while longer without suffering, but there are large areas which still are suffering and seem to be losing some of their recent promise. Only in the past few days has Oklahoma figured much in complaints, but temperatures have been very high and some sections for weeks have not had enough moisture. Part of the wave that was so disastrous to the corn belt reached into the cotton belt and caused deterioration.

Weevils Cause Trouble.

The central belt has not contributed any complaints worth while, most reports having been glowing in character, though the weevil sections have been suffering as expected. The recent showers tended to stimulate the pest to renewed activity and to increase their number, and it is feared they will take very heavy toll from the crop.

While there was for several days fear of the eastern belt getting too much rain for the crop to do its best, such fears have dwindled since showers have become less frequent, and it now is felt that without something happening during the next few weeks, and provided there is not early frost, the yield will be ahead of last year by a goodly margin.

The market, working down to around 11 cents and a little lower for futures, has not been surprising, in view of the character of advices coming from trade centers. At the same time it is regarded as significant that the disposition to sell as 11 cents was approached lessened and buying orders increased, indicating a feeling among spinners and others that prices were low enough until more light could be had as to consumptive requirements and probable supply. The fact that contract prices were $7.50 a bale under what they were a year ago also acted as a stay against pressure.

Spinners May Buy Soon.

There is still little light on the important question of what spinners are going to do about buying their early supplies. Conditions and other things seem to indicate the probability of them becoming free buyers just as soon as offerings are large enough to interest them, but inquiry elicits the information that the forward commitments by buyers to the spinners are not as heavy as they have been in the past.

It may be that the spinners have provided against some of their requirements by the purchase of October and December futures, for it has been thought for quite a while that support to the market around the bottom levels was coming from the consumers.

Movement of the new crop is not increasing as fast as some predicted, for receipts are much behind two years ago and are very little ahead of last year. The present weather in Texas, however, will force maturity of the crop and hasten movement.

No Money to Move Big Canadian Crops

Funds Harder to Get Than Ever Before—Government Urged to Furnish $10,000,000.

CALGARY, ALB., Aug. 9.—Western Canada now faces a peculiar financial situation. With the biggest crops in history, ready for harvesting in two weeks, money is tighter than ever known here.

Newspapers are urging the Dominion Government to loan $10,000,000 in Alberta either to farmers or by taking up provincial or city bond issues. Banks claim they have no funds to loan.

Within ten days two daily papers in Alberta have temporarily suspended publication, expecting to resume in the fall. English banks are coming to the aid of farmers in marketing crops.

Atchison, Kansas, Must Pay Its Bonds

New York Concerns Get State Supreme Court Writ of Mandamus.

TOPEKA, Aug. 9.—The Kansas Supreme Court has issued an order granting an alternate writ of mandamus against the city of Atchison to make the city pay off the $266,000 of bonds which fell due July 1, and for which no provision had been made to pay.

The court was asked to grant the writ by E. D. Levison & Co. and the Columbia Knickerbocker Trust Company, of New York, holders of $70,000 worth of the bonds. A restraining order against the city making any tax levy unless it includes a levy for the payment of the bonds was also issued.

Under the order of court, Atchison must either pay the bonds in November or refund them at the current rates instead of 4 per cent.

Uses Parcel Post To Collect Debts

Keen Kansas Merchant Sends C. O. D. Packages and Gets Money on Stale Accounts.

A Kansas merchant has found a new use for the parcel post. When the C. O. D. feature went into effect, on July 1, he hit upon an idea to collect a number of small accounts which he had been carrying for some time, and which had caused considerable loss during a period of several years.

A number of small boxes were obtained and filled with waste paper, and on the top was placed a receipted bill for the proper amount. A five-cent stamp was required for each box, and the C. O. D. fee was 10 cents for each package. The next day the returns began to come in, and nearly every case the debtor paid the amount, supposing that the package contained something of value, but, of course, not being permitted to confirm this suspicion before opening it.

NEW ORLEANS EXCHANGE MAY GAIN PRESTIGE

Substitute for Clarke Bill Aimed at New York but Not at the Southern Center.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—The weekly weather report, issued Tuesday, did not entirely confirm the private reports of heavy rains in Texas. According to the Government, rains were still needed over large portions of Texas, and in Oklahoma it was stated that vegetation was suffering from lack of moisture and that general rains were much needed.

The weak tone exhibited by Liverpool, which reopened Tuesday morning after a holiday extending from the previous Friday, encouraged bears to disregard the unfavorable character of the Government weather report. Consequently, prices were hammered rather aggressively after the report came out, and the market closed with October and December contracts selling practically at the level of 11 cents, although middling cotton still holds steady at 12 cents.

Continued high temperatures in Texas and Oklahoma Wednesday, with no rains reported or in sight, gave a better tone to the market, which has since recovered part of the decline established in the early part of the week. Many reports of crop deterioration are coming in from the western belt, and even from Arkansas reports of damage by the prolonged spell of hot, dry weather have been received. Should reports of this character continue for a few days more, a real crop scare might develop.

Fear Clarke Bill.

No advance of consequence is likely, however, as, with the Clarke bill hanging over the market, no bull campaign can be inaugurated. Considering the extent of the short interest that has recently been created, an advance of a cent a pound would be nothing, were the drouth in Texas and Oklahoma to remain unbroken for another week and were Washington to flash out the news that the Clarke bill would not pass.

The news received here from Washington regarding the Clarke bill is considered more encouraging by local cotton interests. The plan that is now being considered by prominent Southern Senators, among whom Senator Hoke Smith and Senator Gore are numbered, is to amend the Smith bill, which specifies the grades to be delivered on contract and calls for commerical differences. To the Smith bill, thus amended, it is proposed to add the Clarke amendment as a penalty.

Favors South.

In this way, the New York Cotton Exchange would be compelled to comply with the regulations proposed by the Government, or else that market would be taxed out of existence. The New Orleans Cotton Exchange, which is only too willing to do business under the terms proposed by the Government and has already adopted the Government standard of types, would thus be able to continue, while New York, being an artificial market, would be practically wiped out of existence. The cotton business of the entire country would thus center in this market, just as the wheat business centers in Chicago.

In anticipation of such an outcome of the proposed legislation at Washington, New Orleans Cotton Exchange shares are being quietly sought. Recently a share sold below $1,500, but now $1,500 is being bid, with no shares offering below $2,000.

HUERTA HELD TO ANSWER TO U. S. FOR LIND'S LIFE AND SAFETY

Foreign Relations Committee Told in White House What Wilson's Plans Are to Meet Crisis Now Confronting Nation in Mexico.

Republicans Expected to Cease Harassing Administration Owing to Fact They Are Taken Into Confidence Regarding Situation

DAY'S DEVELOPMENTS IN MEXICAN SITUATION

Special Ambassador John Lind reached Vera Cruz. No demonstration marked his arrival. He is expected to reach Mexico City Sunday.

The United States Government has notified Provisional President Huerta he will be held personally responsible for Lind's protection.

President Wilson summoned the entire Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate and Secretary Bryan to meet him in the White House last night.

Senator William Alden Smith charged on the floor of the Senate that a paid attorney and lobbyist of the Constitutional party in Mexico has the ear of the State Department and is attempting to influence the action of the United States toward Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—President Wilson told the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate to-night exactly what his plans are regarding Mexico. That the President believes a crisis has been reached in the situation was evidenced by the fact that this is the first time that all the members of the committee have been taken into the President's confidence.

At the same time it was made public that provisional President Huerta had been notified by the United States Government that he personally would be held responsible for the safety of Envoy Lind.

Republicans as well as Democrats were invited to the White House conference, that lasted several hours.

The President had hitherto kept Chairman Bacon informed of his aims and hopes, but up to this time he had vouchsafed no information to the Republican members of the committee.

Tells Instructions to Lind.

With Secretary of State Bryan, his chief adviser, at hand, the President went over the situation in detail, telling what in his opinion was necessary to avert a break with Mexico and revealing for the first time the instructions that had been given to Special Envoy Lind.

Senators who attended the conference stated that President Wilson had taken the best step possible to unite the executive and legislative branches of the Government for action. The first outcome of the conference is expected to be a cessation of the attacks made by the Republicans on the Administration since the present crisis developed. The minority has continually harassed the Ad-

Callie Hoke Smith Capital Debutante

Make-up of First Democratic "Bud Bouquet" Puzzles Washington's Younger Set.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The make-up of Washington first Democratic debutante bouquet is the question that is agitating the younger set. It is confidently expected that Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, daughter of the Speaker, will be one of the buds, and Miss Frances Moore, the daughter of Clarence R Moore, one of the Titanic heroes, another.

Resident society will furnish two attractive debutantes, who are not only socially prominent, but from Democratic families as well. They are Miss Margaret Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Britton and Miss Beatrice Clover, the youngest daughter of Rear Admiral Clover.

A debutante from the Congressional set will be Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia. Other Congressional buds are the Misses Weaver, Church and Duval.

Chinda Sees Bryan On Japanese Reply

Ambassador and Secretary Arrange for Formal Discussion of Overdue Rejoinder Next Week.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The Japanese Ambassador called to see Secretary Bryan late to-day, making his second visit within 48 hours.

The former visit of the Ambassador Thursday was explained by the State Department as being the usual call of courtesy on diplomatic day. It was announced, however, that the Japanese reply to the United States is overdue, although it is well known what the reply is.

Baron Chinda, it is understood, made arrangements with Mr. Bryan to-day for a formal discussion of the Japanese rejoiner early next week.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Sir Oliver Lodge, whose researches into the unknown world made him famous, will assert at the meeting of the British Association on September 10 a belief in "an ultimate continuity of existence before and after death as essential to science."

It is inferred he has at least new evidence to offer of immortality.

He once told the world "the boundary between life and death is still substantial, but is wearing thin in places."

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Billie Burke sails on the Mauretania to-day, instead of waiting for the Olympic, as arranged. She told The American correspondent to-day that she had been "living on the edge of a volcano for the last few weeks."

"I had a slight attack of appendicitis at Carlsbad a few weeks ago, and when I reached London Sir Alfred Fripp, the King's physician, urged me to undergo an operation because it was inevitable in any event. But I preferred to undergo the ordeal at home, hoping to hold out until I reach New York. I hope everything will come out all right, but I fear the operation is inevitable."

DOCTOR READY TO GRAFT NEW LIMBS ON MEN

Surgeon Says Experiments on Animals Has Given Him High Hopes of Success.

TWO PATIENTS ARE WILLING

Necessary to Obtain Legs and Arms From Persons Suddenly Dead or Electrocuted.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—"Within a month after my arrival in New York I expect to be able to prove by actual demonstration that it is possible to graft new limbs on human beings to replace those lost."

The speaker was Dr. A. L. Soresi, of New York, the surgeon whose paper on the transfusion of blood aroused great interest among the members of the International Medical Congress.

Asked for further details about the latest marvel in surgery, the doctor said: "I have already made extensive grafting experiments with animals and with entire success. In fact, there are several dogs running around New York now with legs they did not have when born."

Two Anxious for Test.

Continuing the doctor said: "I have not yet attempted to graft a limb on any human being for the reason that my experimental work was only just satisfactorily concluded before leaving for London, but immediately on my return I shall start preparation for the first human test. I have already two men who are willing and anxious to submit themselves."

Dr. Soresi added that the preparations for the operations may take place some time within a month.

"Both my patients need arms. Obtaining suitable arms is not easy," he said. "I have not yet determined exactly how long life remains in an arm after death.

Death Must Be Sudden.

"Of course you understand that an arm must come from some person who has just met sudden death either by accident or by electrocution. In my experiments with animals I have been able to transfer the limbs without loss of time, but such a proceeding where human beings are concerned is not so simple except in cases of electrocution."

Dr. Soresi said that the results of the experiments would be announced through the Academy of Medicine.

FRANK OR CONLEY? STILL QUESTION

Issue Firmly Drawn Between Two Men

Defense Starting to Mould Its Case

Leo Frank in his seat in the court-room where he is fighting for life.

The prisoner is shown in the unconcerned attitude he assumes most of the time.

Not a move escapes this man's restless eyes, though his face is calm.

Theory That Negro Attacked Mary Phagan With Motive of Robbing Her Will Be Shown; Two Charges Against Accused Must Be Refuted.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The second week of the trial of Leo Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan in the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26, came to a close Saturday noon.

The State's case has been entirely made up in its primary aspects, and the defense has gone into its story of the great crime sufficiently to make clear both its theory and probable line of pleading.

The public, as the case has progressed, has been swayed this way and that, and to-day the remarkable mystery of Mary Phagan's untimely and tragic end remains, in hundreds of minds, quite as much of a mystery as ever.

The State has had its good days and its bad days, and the defense has met the same fate. At times things have seemed dismally dark and gloomy for Frank, while at other times the clouds apparently have lifted from about him decidedly.

Guilt Will Be Fixed On One of Two Men

This much has been made clear:

Either Leo Frank will be shown to be responsible for the death of Mary Phagan, or Jim Conley will.

The one is the heart and soul of the State's contention, and the other is the heart and soul of the defense's contention.

Frank is battling not only to clear himself but to convict Conley.

Conley is battling not only to clear himself, but to convict Frank.

The only difference is that Conley, although not yet indicted, expects to be convicted as an accessory after the fact of the murder, in any event, whereas Frank, already indicted, expects to come absolutely clear and free of all possible connection with the crime.

One of Good Name; Other's Past Shady

The one has a heretofore good name to restore in all of its unblemished integrity, the other has merely his present reputation for criminal inclination to preserve against sinister enlargement.

The issue has been sharply and indelibly drawn—it is either Leo Frank's life for Mary Phagan's, or it is Jim Conley's.

The States has shown, or has endeavored to show the folliwing things!

THAT Frank, shortly after noon on April 26, and before five minutes past noon, lured Mary Phagan, for an immoral purpose, to the rear of the second floor of the National Pencil Factory, and there, because she would not yield to his desires and demands, he knocked her down and immediately thereafter strangled her to death with a small cord, about one-eighth of an inch in thickness.

THAT after strangling her, Frank remained with her dead body until after a girl caller in his office had departed, when he tiptoed to the front of the floor whereupon the murder had been consummated, and secured the help of a negro sweeper, Jim Conley, employed about the place, to dispose of the body.

Disposition of the Body as Shown by State's Evidence

THAT Conley, under the direction of Frank, wrapped the dead body in a piece of heavy cloth, carried it to the elevator, and thence on the elevator to the basement, where it was placed in an obscure corner in the rear, later to be found by Newt Lee, a negro night watchman, generally held guiltless of direct connection with the crime itself.

THAT Frank, after hiding the body, with Conley's assistance, then induced Conley to write and place beside the dead girl certain illiterate notes fixing the crime, in so far as they might, upon some other person than either Frank or Conley, and that Frank for Conley's services, paid him the sum of $2.50, but not until

BURGLARS ENTER HOME OF EDWIN P. ANSLEY

Residents in the vicinity of the home of Edwin P. Ansley, in Ansley Park, notified the police late Saturday night that strange men were prowling around the Ansley house. Mr. Ansley and his family are out of the city at present.

Policemen found where the men had entered the house through a side window. A search failed to reveal the intruders or that they had taken anything of value.

ATLANTA GIRL BRIDE OF LOOKOUT PITCHER

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 9. Pitcher Burley Grimes, of the Lookouts, was married to-day at the home of Manager "Kid" Elberfield to Miss Florence Patten, of Atlanta. The marriage was the culmination of a romance which originated in Nashville when the present Mrs. Grimes saw her husband win a victory for Chattanooga.

Mad Dog Leaps at Children on Porch

Neighborhood on Lovejoy Street Terrified by Animal Later Killed by Police.

Residents in the proximity of No. 131 Lovejoy street, which is the home of Gerhert H. Meyers, were thrown into a panic Saturday night when a mad dog terrorized the neighborhood.

Foaming at the mouth, the animal ran into Meyers' yard and leaped at two small children who were seated on the back porch. The dog was beaten back by Mrs. Meyers with a broom and lay snarling in a fence corner.

The police were notified. Calimen Schumate and Palmer responded and immediately killed the brute.

FRANK AND CONLEY BATTLING EACH OTHER FOR THEIR LIVES

Guilt of Slaying Little Mary Phagan Will Be Fixed Upon One of Two as Issue Now Is Drawn

DEFENSE BEGINS BUILDING ITS THEORY OF TRAGEDY

he had first paid him $200, which was withdrawn under promise to restore that sum later.

THAT Frank had an understanding with Conley, whereby Conley was to return to the factory later in the afternoon on Saturday and burn the body in the basement furnace, but that Conley went to sleep in the afternoon and neglected to perform this service.

THAT Frank, called to the factory early in the morning of Sunday, April 27, displaying great nervousness, and while on his way to the factory without having been informed of the dead, girl's identity, declined, or at least failed and neglected, to look upon her features at the undertaker's, notwithstanding the fact that he later admitted her identity without having seen her dead.

THAT at the factory, at the place of the crime, his nervousness continued, and that next morning (Monday), when called to the police station for further questioning, he had secured counsel to defend him, notwithstanding the fact that he then had not been placed under arrest.

THAT after having been placed under arrest and indicted for the murder, he persistently refused to meet his chief accuser, Jim Conley, face to face, or discuss any feature of the charges lodged against him.

THAT in addition to the crime of murder, as set forth in the indictment, Frank is a dissolute character, practicing the most depraved and perverted crimes with persons of loose morals, and that Jim Conley, on more than one occasion, acted as "lookout" for Frank on the first floor of the factory, while unspeakable and unmentionable things were being enacted above.

Jim Conley Is the State's Principal And All-Important Witness.

The State, in setting up the foregoing allegations, summoned as its principal and all-important witness, Jim Conley, who already had made public affidavits to all of the charges set forth, except the one of perversion and the exact time of the crime charged.

Conley, after four or five changed statements theretofore made, set up in his final statement on the stand many other seemingly minor details not contained in any previous statement.

The foregoing is the State's case in completed form, except that it yet will have the right to produce witnesses in rebuttal of the defense's witnesses; the defense, in its turn, having the right to a further rebuttal of the State's rebuttal.

The defense has contended, or will contend:

THAT Conley's story is a tissue of frightful lies from start to finish, and that he himself really committed the crime charged against Frank, and that the defense will so demonstrate.

THAT Mary Phagan was not killed as early as 12:05 on the afternoon of April 26, but was, as a matter of fact, killed at least fifteen minutes later than that, if, as a matter of still further fact, she was not disabled hopelessly about that time, and actually killed even later.

THAT if she was not killed previous to 12:05, as set forth, by the State, that contention being uncompromisingly claimed by the State's own witnesses—Jim Conley and Monteen Stover—then Conley's story is impossible and absurd, and Monteen Stover's evidence entirely negligible.

THAT Frank did not lure Mary Phagan to the rear of the second floor, or to any other place, for any purpose whatever, and that she was only on the second floor sufficiently long to get her pay from the hands of Frank, and that she immediately thereafter left the second floor, going down to the first floor to meet her death at the hands of Conley.

Defense Holds Frank Had Nothing To Do With the Death Notes.

THAT Frank never asked for or received the assistance of Jim Conley in disposing of the body of Mary Phagan, because he was in utter and entire ignorance of the murder until apprised of it Sunday morning.

THAT Frank had nothing whatever to do with the framing of the notes found beside the dead girl, and that in support of such a charge the State has only the word of Jim Conley, intensely interested in shifting the blame from his own guilty shoulders and on to the shoulders of Frank.

THAT Frank never paid Jim Conley any sum of money for any purpose whatever on Saturday, nor promised him any sum for any purpose whatever, and that Conley's word alone says that he did.

THAT whatever nervousness Frank displayed, if he displayed any unusual or unnatural nervousness at all, was occasioned by the mysterious attitude of the officers notifying him of some unnamed trouble at the pencil factory, and that in support of his approximately normal frame of mind is the fact, proved by the State's own witnesses; that he opened the office safe to look up the record of Mary Phagan, after having acquired knowledge of her identity, without tremor or hesitation whatever, setting the intricate combination easily and opening the safe on the first trial.

THAT his innocence of all guilty knowledge of the crime is further evidenced by his three hours' perfectly normal work on his books in the factory on the afternoon of April 26, at which time, if the State's theory holds, Mary Phagan, with Frank's knowledge, then was a corpse in the basement, dead at his murderous hands.

THAT Frank, instead of declining to look upon the face of the dead girl at the undertaker's while on his way to the factory Monday morning, did, as a matter of fact, look upon her face and recognized her.

Frank's Counsel Was Not Sought by Him, the Defense Contends,

THAT Frank had no counsel until after his retention at police headquarters had been publicly made known, and when he was notoriously under suspicion, and that even then counsel was sent to him by some outside friends, and did not come at his invitation or by his direction.

THAT Frank's refusal to meet Jim Conley, his lying accuser, was natural and proper in the circumstances, and that such a course was persisted in by the particular advice of his counsel; that Frank was under no moral or legal obligation to discuss his case with Conley, or with any other witness for the State.

THAT Frank, far from being a dissolute character, is a man of unblemished integrity, happily married; that he never has practiced depraved and perverted crimes, because such things would be and are entirely foreign to his nature; that he never has associated with immoral persons anywhere, at any time; that neither Jim Conley nor any other person ever acted as "lookout" for him for any purpose whatsoever—and that every monstrous and untrue charge or suggestion of immorality and degeneracy rests absolutely and finally upon the unsupported word of Conley, and not otherwise.

THAT there has been no tenable motive assigned to Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan; that the girl was not sexually violated or in any manner lacerated; that Frank had only the most casual acquaintance with her, and that of a perfectly natural business sort, and that he could not have had, and did not have, any reason whatever for desiring her death.

THAT, in truth and reality, the motive prompting the murder of Mary Phagan was robbery upon the part of Conley, and that for the purpose of securing her pittance of money, contained in a mesh purse, he did murder her and concealed her body in the basement.

Theory of Crime as the Defense Holds That Slaying Occurred.

THAT, as a matter of fact, Mary Phagan reached the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26 about 12:12 or 12:15; that she came up the steps directly to Frank's office, and received her pay for the time due her, in amount $1.20; that she at once departed Frank's office, without comment of any sort, and that Frank never saw her alive thereafter; that going down the steps, with her silver mesh bag in her hand, she had to pass Jim Conley, recently aroused from a drunken doze; that in attempting to get from the foot of the stairs, where Conley was sitting, to the door, some 20 feet away, she had to traverse a gloomy walkway, more than ordinarily gloomy at the time because the day was a legal holiday and the doors were closed, but not locked; that in traversing this walkway her back was toward Conley; that Conley, without money and craving more liquor, saw the unprotected little girl with the enticing silver bag in her hand, and surmising that she had been paid off by Frank upstairs, hit her a violent blow upon her head, snatched her purse from her hand, and at once threw her body into the cellar by way of a nearby open space, for fear of someone coming into the building; that likely the blow first delivered was not sufficient to kill, and that her actual death was hastened, or may have been hastened later in the cellar below, by means of strangulation, there being always there an abundance of the very cord employed or supposed to have been employed in that act.

THAT after accomplishing his bloody deed Conley escaped by withdrawing the inside staple from the basement back door only a few feet away from the place where the dead girl subsequently was found; and that tracings of Conley during the afternoon of April 26 at various saloons about town show that he spent then an amount of money approximating that which Mary Phagan is supposed to have had in her purse at the time of her murder.

Conley Declared to be Jailbird And Notoriously Dissolute Character.

THAT of all her possesions the purse alone, notwithstanding exhaustive inquiry, never was accounted for until the last day Conley was on the stand, when he stated that Frank had had the purse in his possession just after the murder, and that he had concealed it in his safe. This allegation, the defense points out, is sustained, as are the other most damaging allegations, by Conley's unsupported word entirely.

THAT Conley, the State's main witness, is a notoriously dissolute character, by his own admission seven times a jailbird, many times a liar, even under oath and on the witness stand, and admittedly was "mistaken" in some statements made against Frank; that he did not begin to throw suspicion on Frank until after suspicion began drifting in his (Conley's) direction; that his plea of wishing by his first silent course of conduct to "protect" Frank is not sound, bacause after he feigned disappointment that Frank did not "get him out of his trouble, as he had promised," and declaring that he, therefore, intended to tell the "whole truth of the murder," he still persisted in his lies and falsifying to the attempted damage of Frank, and found it necessary to issue three conflicting affidavits before he got one he thought might be depended upon to stand up.

THAT Conley began his statements with a lie—to the effect that he could not write—and continued lying steadily thereafter, but frequently canceling one lie in favor of another, as his first lies were shown to be useless and senseless.

THAT Conley in revising his various statements was aided and abetted by various police officials, presumably anxious for the rewards offered for the apprehension and conviction of Mary Phagan's murderer, and that these officers pointed out to Conley the discrepancies as they arose from time to time, and that without this aid Conley's story never could have been made to hold together even as well as it did; that notwithstanding this prejudicing aid, however, Conley's story still is impossible and absurd, and of no account whatever against Frank.

Defense Heavily Equipped to Sustain Every Contention, It Says.

The foregoing, in general, is the theory of the defense, as already set up and as yet to be developed, and along that line it will fight its battle to the end.

The defense is heavily equipped with witnesses to sustain its every contention, and these will be offered, in their order, to break down the contrary theory of the State, as hereinbefore outlined, and upon the relative strength of the two showings depends, of course, the verdict.

Of absorbing interest now is the seeming determination of the defense to put Leo Frank's character frankly and fearlessly in evidence.

In a former article in The Sunday American several weeks ago I predicted that the defense would do this—and the then apparent determination of the defense along that line shows no symptoms of having been deviated from in the slightest.

When Conley made his additional unanticipated attack on Frank's character from the witness stand, it was rather freely predicted about the streets that Frank never would, after that, agree to have his character put in evidence. Under the law, the State can not put the defendant's character in evidence—if it is put in at all, it must be put in by the defendant voluntarily. Once in, however, it may be riddled by the State, if the State is able to riddle it.

The determination, therefore, of the defense to put Frank's character in evidence is being accepted generally as indicating an unfaltering confidence upon the part of the defense that Frank may be able thereby to overcome the terrible and prejudicial charge of degeneracy, as well as the charge of murder, both resting so largely upon Conley, and Conley alone; and it also indicates a belief upon the part of the defense that the State already has done its worst in the matter of attacking Frank's character.

The fact that Frank is now engaged in refuting two charges instead of one makes his case doubly unique in Georgia, as it is contrary to the unbroken theory of the law heretofore.

In Georgia, the courts uniformly have held that a man can not be tried for more than one offense at one time—that is, that he can not be charged with murder, and in the same trial be called to account for another felonious crime.

The charge of degeneracy, however, got into the case without objection, and Frank's lawyers cross-examined the witness making it. The judge, therefore, although a motion was made afterward to strike out this evidence, ruled that it was too late to expunge it, and that it should go in for what it was worth.

Defense Calls More Than Seventy Character Witnesses.

This ruling, while in a way more or less unprecedented, was, in the main, by the public seemingly approved, upon the idea that it was fairer to both the State and the defense that the horrible charge, having been made, be thrashed out.

Should Frank be convicted, it is practically certain that a new trial will be asked on this very point, and it is not at all improbable that Judge Roan will grant it, although this conjecture is purely and absolutely speculative, of course.

The defense has summoned some seventy character witnesses, among whom are more than twoscore female employes of the National Pencil Factory, all of whom will swear, it is said, to the defendant's decent and gentlemanly conduct at all times in their presence and during their varied terms of service in the factory, running from one to five years.

Besides these, a score or more of Atlanta's most prominent business and professional men have been cited to come to court and testify in behalf of Frank's good name.

Rarely before, if ever, has there been as intense interest in a murder trial as there unquestionably is in the Frank case.

The crowds attending the trial have been enormous, the officers finding it necessary every day to turn away hundreds of anxious would-be spectators.

Public sentiment has swung back and forth—to-day inclined to believe Frank may be innocent, to-morrow sternly the reverse.

The jury, sitting there in the courthouse day after day, has been the objective study of hundreds of real and near analytical minds—and the answer?

Acquittal of Frank Likely Would Bring the Indictment of Conley.

Every fellow answers for himself. The jury is imperturbable, unreadable, almost seemingly indifferent at times, indeed—but always keenly keyed to intense interest, nevertheless!

One might as well undertake to read the riddle of the Sphinx as to read the riddle of the Frank case in the minds of the jury trying it. It looks as if it is a jury well above the average—and that is about the beginning and the end of an intelligent guess as to what it will do.

Judge Roan is as baffling as the rest of the case, too, when it comes to speculating upon what he may or may not think of it all.

He is rated one of the very best Superior Court judges in the State, unusually able, certainly fearless, and agreed to be utterly fair and impartial.

At times, his rulings have seemed to favor the defense, and at other times they have seemed to favor the State; but, withal, the public seems agreed that he is handling the case with an open and judicially just mind.

Speculation as to the outcome of the trial is varied. There are those who can see nothing ahead but conviction, just as there are others who can see nothing but acquittal.

If a ballot could be taken, however, those holding to the idea of a mistrial likely would be found in the majority, for that is the way the fight seems, to many observing minds, to be drifting.

That section of the public generally credited with being calm, poised, and desirous of seeing the right prevail, no matter which way it cuts, apparently has suspended judgment. Extremists pro and con still are talking themselves hoarse about town, however.

The progressing inclination among the people seems to be to let the jury settle it, and then to call that as near right as abstract justice and human ingenuity can make it.

In the event of an acquittal, the case ends. The State has no appeal. It must win on the first round, or it loses for all time.

The defense, on the other hand, if it loses, may move for a new trial, upon proper assignment of error in the first trial. The judge of original jurisdiction passes upon this motion—he may grant it or not, as his discretion directs.

The general policy of judges is to refuse motions for new trials, but it is not an unbroken policy, by any means.

If the new trial motion is denied, the case goes to a court of review—either the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals. If one error or several be found in the original rulings of the court below, the case will be remanded back for a new trial, the judgment thus having been reversed and set aside.

Trial Judge is Considered Absolutely Fair and Fearless.

Then the case begins all over again, practically as if it never had been tried.

In the event of matters taking that course, Frank hardly could be tried again before next year, 1914, and perhaps not before spring.

If Frank is acquitted, there is hardly a doubt that Jim Conley will be promptly indicted for the murder of Mary Phagan, and brought to trial later.

In the event of Frank's final conviction, Conley will be indicted as an accessory after the fact. This would mean a sentence of not more than three years in the State penitentiary for him.

If Frank is convicted, he can be convicted only of murder—the jury will not be permitted, under the form of the indictment, to find him guilty of a lesser crime.

The judge will have no discretion in sentencing him.

If found guilty, without a recommendation to mercy, he must hang, unless the Governor should subsequently interfere and order Executive clemency.

If he is convicted, and the jury "recommend him to the mercy of the court," the court then will be obliged to send him to prison for life.

The general opinion is that the present trial will run all of this week—that the best to be expected is that the jury may be given the case by Saturday night.

After the evidence all is in, the case still will have to be argued to the jury. It is thought that Judge Roan will take the bridle off in respect of this, and both sides will be permitted to go the limit.

Mr. Rosser and Mr. Arnold will consume at least one entire day in argument, and Mr. Dorsey and Mr. Hooper will not take less time.

It is expected that Hooper will open for the State and Dorsey close, and that Rosser will open for the defense and Arnold close. The State has the opening and the concluding argument before the jury.

If the jury makes a verdict quickly in this case, The American of next Sunday ought to carry it. If it makes a mistrial, or delivers a greatly delayed verdict, it seems certain at this time that neither of those facts can be made known before well into next week.

It is estimated that the trial will have cost the County of Fulton approximately $10,000, if the case ends with this trial. If it does not end with this trial, the eventual expense hardly can be intelligently anticipated now.

DORSEY SATISFIED WITH PROGRESS OF TRIAL; DEFENSE REFUSES TO MAKE ANY STATEMENT

I am very well satisfied with the State's case and do not see that the defense has dealt it any damaging blows in the evidence introduced to date.

Saturday's developments were of no material advantage to either side.

—SOLICITOR HUGH M. DORSEY.

Neither Luther Rosser nor Reuben Arnold, attorneys for Frank, would make any statement on the progress of the trial.

Study of Frank Convicts, Then It Turns and Acquits

Readers of Human Nature See Anything They Want, but Personal Equation Is Forgotten.

By O. B. KEELER.

Leo Frank sits in the prisoner's dock, and all men may read his face.

A great many of them do.

Here are two of the things they read:

(1) No innocent man could remain calm under such fearful charges.

(2) No guilty man could remain calm under, etc.

Leo Frank admittedly was nervous and agitated the morning the murder of Mary Phagan was discovered.

There are two inferences drawn from that fact:

(1) A guilty man naturally would be nervous.

(2) An innocent man naturally, etc.

Leo Frank sits there in the prisoner's chair, under the scathe of the State's testimony, apparently unmoved.

Leo Frank sits apparently unmoved as his attorneys attack the mesh of circumstance.

So far as may be foretold, Leo Frank will sit unmoved under the fire of the State's speeches and under the justification of his own counsel.

And there will be at least two interpretations of his calm in the trial, as there were two interpretations of his agitation that April morning.

Let's take a bit of time off from bias and prejudice and try to get a little deeper into the psychology of the thing.

Both Read Same Thing.

Here is one who insists that an innocent man, confronted with evident suspicion of a horrid crime, virtually admits guilt, or at least guilty knowledge, by nervous agitation.

"If innocent and ignorant of the crime, he should appear calm and eager to probe deeper into the mystery," says this one. And usually he adds: "I know I should."

And the same interpreter, speaking of Frank's attitude in the trial, says:

"His calm is the effrontery of a cold-blooded murderer. In his place, and innocent, I could not listen unmoved to the hideous charges aimed at me."

But here is a small breach of logic. This reader of the human mind would have innocence appear calm in its surprise and agitated in its expected ordeal, prepared for weeks in advance.

On the other hand, here is one who would reconcile agitation in April and calmness at the trial with absolute innocence.

Is not that reconciliation equally open to the charge of illogicalness?

Could not the innocent accused properly have remained calm in the first steps of an investigation, he must have been sure would lead away from himself, and yet have been shaken by the manifest danger in the terrific circumstantiality of the case the State presented against him?

Logic Seems To Double.

It would seem that coid, mechanical logic had at least two paths in which to stray from the truth when applied to Leo Frank's attitude.

And that is two too many for the clear intent of logic.

The trouble is, the would-be logicians seem always to overlook the one great point that sets at naught all mechanical logic, applied to criminality.

And that point is the Personal Equation.

You note that the logician inevitably says:

"If I were in his place——"

Right in the premise, then, the reasoner injects his own personal equation into a consideration of Leo Frank and his actions and possible motives.

He attributes to Leo Frank certain characteristics supplied by his own personality, adds the influence of motives whose effect on any other human being he could not possibly know, and then deduces a course of action and behavior, which he sets up as the logical one for Leo Frank.

To conform to the laws of true logic, the reasoner must assume that among the 1,600,000,000 inhabitants of the earth there is one that is identical with himself in temperament, habits, disposition, environment, intellect—in fine, must have the same personal equation.

That in itself would be an assumption far outside the pale of absolute logic.

But granting that, it would still remain to identify with that particular human being the person under consideration.

The chances of failure would be 1,600,000,000 to 1.

And should the incredibly long shot win, there is yet another trap for the logician who says, "If I were in his place, I would do thus and so."

Experience Is Needed.

Even with the suppositious advantage of being acquainted with his own personal equation, the reasoner does NOT know what he would do under the stress of circumstances, UNLESS HE HAS TRIED IT.

Eliminating, then, from the list of expert readers of the human face those who do not observe strictly the laws of absolute logic, we find that those qualified to pass judgment on Leo Frank by means of his April agitation and his August calmness can be numbered quite conveniently as follows:

O.

Which logical conclusion, however, will in no way embarrass the several hundred thousand persons now daily engaged in flying in the face of a certain admonition, set forth in a certain Good Book, to wit:

"Judge not."

FRANK STRUGGLES TO PROVE HIS CONDUCT WAS BLAMELESS

Co-Workers in the Factory Declare Stories of Factory Revelries Are Beyond Reason

ASSISTANT TELLS HOW ACCUSED MAN MADE OUT COMPLEX ACCOUNTS

Testimony of Newsboy Who Said He Accompanied Mary Phagan On Street Car On Day of the Killing Attacked by Defense's Counsel.

With one set of lawyers fighting to send Leo Frank to the gallows and another struggling just as desperately not only to save him from this fate, but entirely to remove the stigma of the murder charge, the second week of the battle for the young factory superintendent's life ended shortly after noon yesterday.

The defense was only fairly under way in its presentation of evidence. Another week, at least, will be consumed in the examination of witnesses, and it is regarded as not at all unlikely that the jury will receive the case for its verdict not before the latter part of the following week.

More than 100 witnesses will be called to the stand before the defense rests. Some of them will be questioned and cross-questioned at length. Others will be on the stand only a few minutes.

Conduct in Question.

Many who will be called are factory employees. They will be asked in regard to Frank's conduct at the pencil factory. This line of interrogation already has been begun by the defense. E. F. Holloway, day watchman at the factory, and N. V. Darley, general manager, testified Friday that women, aside from those of Frank's family, never visited him at the factory. Herbert G. Schiff, assistant to Frank, who was on the stand during practically all of the Saturday session, testified to the same thing.

Schiff was taken into an exhaustive description of the duties of Frank, which was dry and uninteresting to the casual spectator at the trial. His testimony, however, was regarded by the defense as extremely important. The financial sheet, in particular, on which Frank worked the afternoon of the murder, came up for extended consideration. Schiff told in elaborate detail the complexities of the sheet and the elements that entered into its make-up.

It was the purpose of the defense to show that it would have been entirely out of the realm of human probabilities that Frank, after committing an atrocious and brutal murder, could have sat down and, without a quiver of his pen or a shaking of his hand, put down column after column of figures and made scores of notations with never an error.

Schiff was asked first in regard to Frank's customs and habits about the factory. From his testimony it was developed that Schiff generally was at dinner on Saturdays from 12:30 to 2 o'clock and that Frank ordinarily was away from the factory from 1 o'clock until 2. This made it practically impossible for Frank to have women visitors in his office during the half-holiday without Schiff's knowledge. The witness denied that he ever knew of such occurrences.

Gay Parties Impossible.

He added, under the questioning of Reuben Arnold, that it was not at all uncommon for persons from Montag Bros. to call at the factory on Saturday afternoons, and that gay parties of this sort could not have taken place. Salesmen, too, he said, interrupted the work on Saturday afternoons.

A spike was placed in C. B. Dalton's testimony by Schiff's statement that he was in the invariable habit of working with Frank at the office Saturday afternoons, but that he never saw Dalton before the trial began. Dalton had testified that he was an occasional visitor at Frank's office on Saturdays, and that Frank always had two or three women with him in the afternoon, but that no man was working in the office with him. Schiff also said he never had seen Daisy Hopkins, who Dalton said was his companion, on these visits.

Schiff remembered that last Thanksgiving was cold and rainy and that there was snow on the ground. This evidence was brought out to show the improbability of Conley's story which had a woman wearing summery white slippers and stockings visiting the factory to see Frank that day.

The witness recalled paying Miss Helen Ferguson the afternoon of Friday, April 25. He was positive that she did not ask for the envelope of Mary Phagan and that she would have asked no one else, as no one else had anything to do with the distribution of the pay envelopes. It is a custom at the factory, he said, to give one person's pay to another only on a written order, unless the person making application is a relative.

Frank Easily Disturbed.

Asked in regard to the temperament of Frank, he replied that the superintendent was high strung and nervous and was easily disturbed by little accidents that happened about the factory.

Schiff was shown the financial sheet for the week ending on the Friday of the week the tragedy occurred. He identified it as the work done by Frank Saturday afternoon. He said that the writing was unmistakably that of the young superintendent. Attorney Arnold also had in the courtroom the financial sheet for every week during the year previous to the crime. Schiff identified them all as Frank's work and said that the least complicated of them never took less than two and a half hours to compile. The average time, he thought, was about three hours.

All of the financial sheets will be submitted as evidence to show that the writing of Frank April 26 was not tremulous, irregular or in any way different from his writing in the 51 other financial sheets on file.

The witness explained the highly complex manner in which the financial sheet is made up and narrated that the costs and profits were estimated each week on several thousand gross of pencils of different grades and classifications, including the materials which entered into their composition.

The other witnesses of the day were George W. Epps, the newsboy who had sworn several days previously that he had ridden to town with Mary Phagan the day that she was killed, and J. M. Minar, a reporter on The Georgian.

A degree of suspicion already had been thrown upon the story of Epps by the testimony of the motorman and conductor of the car on which Mary rode that day. Both testified that they did not see the boy on the car. The motorman asserted that another girl rode with the Phagan girl after the car arrived in town.

Boy's Credibility Questioned.

The reporter was called to strengthen further the doubt of the lad's credibility. He related that he had visited the Epps home, No. 246 Fox street, Sunday night, April 27, having learned that the children of the family had been acquaintances of the little girl whose dead body had been found that morning.

He went there, he said, for the purpose of finding who had seen the murdered girl last, and at what time she had been seen. He talked at length both to the boy and his sister. In response to his question as to who had seen Mary Phagan last he said that Vera Epps, the sister, declared that she had played with Mary the Thursday before, and that George only told of occasions when he had ridden to town with Mary when she was going to work in the morning, mentioning not at all that he had ridden with her at noon only the day before when she was on the journey that ended in her death.

The most exhaustive examination of any of the defense's witnesses so far introduced came Saturday with Herbert Schiff on the stand. With an apparently remarkable memory, Schiff was able to answer clearly and almost without hesitation a number of detailed questions both by the lawyers for the defense in direct examination, and by the State's attorneys on cross-examination. Even bits of conversation were recalled, notably one between Leo Frank and a Mr. Ursenbach on the afternoon before the day of the killing.

"Do you recall hearing a conversation between Mr. Frank and Mr. Ursenbach Friday about going to the ball game Saturday?" Reuben Arnold asked him.

"Yes," said Schiff, "but not exactly what was said. I heard Mr. Frank say something about 'I will go if I can, Charley.'"

Seeming to refute Monteen Stover's story that she looked into Frank's office and found that he was not within, Schiff testified that it would have been impossible for the girl to see over the open safe door into all the office.

Failed to See Mesh Bag.

Schiff it was who looked into the office safe the Monday following the killing, according to his statement. He said he saw nothing of the silver mesh bag of Mary Phagan, which Jim Conley testified Frank hid in the safe after the removal of Mary Phagan's body.

That Jim Conley was frightened the Tuesday following the murder, when the investigation was at its height, was another bit of Schiff's testimony.

"I saw him near the shipping room," related Schiff. "I asked him what he was doing there, and he said he was afraid to go out. He said he would give a million dollars to be a white man. I answered that that would not do any good, as they had taken Mr. Frank."

Under Solicitor Dorsey's cross-examination, Schiff said that Frank appeared eager to employ the Pinkerton detectives to work toward clearing the mystery, declaring that the young superintendent called him over the telephone two or three times Monday after the murder to talk over various matters, once to suggest the employment of detectives.

"He asked me to take up with Mr. Montag the employment of a private detective," said Schiff, "and suggested the Pinkertons. He said he thought it was only fair to the employees."

At one stage in the examination of Schiff, Judge Roan threatened to have cleared the courtroom. A number of spectators had burst into laughter at a sally between Attorney Arnold and Solicitor Dorsey.

Questions asked Schiff by the defense's lawyers seemed to show that by him they would bolster their theory that Mary Phagan's body was lowered to the factory basement by some means other than the elevator, which the State contends was the means used.

Trapdoor Not Locked.

Schiff testified that not only was there a hole in the rear of the factory leading to the basement, but also a trapdoor, which was not locked. He was asked about the door leading from the National Pencil Factory's space into the room used by the Clark woodenware department from which access to the basement is easy. He said that he noticed the door had been apparently cracked open.

Schiff's testimony was unshaken by cross-examination, and he proved an able witness for the defense, much more so than the other factory employee, E. F. Holloway, who became confused on the witness stand under the grilling cross-examination of Solicitor Dorsey.

The attack of the defense on Conley's character was evident with Schiff on the stand. The witness was asked at length concerning the negro and replied that he was worthless, unreliable and untruthful.

It is likely that Schiff will be called again to the stand when the trial is resumed Monday.

THE WOMAN OF SORROWS---MRS. LEO M. FRANK

Mrs. Frank, the wife of the man on trial for his life, is, next to the defendant himself, the most interesting figure in the case. Each day of the trial she has sat at her husband's elbow, whispering consoling words in his ear when the blackest parts of the testimony have been brought out by the prosecutor. At other times she glares defiance at her husband's accusers. But out of the courtroom she is a sad, heartbroken woman. Her face, as she goes between her home and the courtroom, shows the tragedy that the killing of Mary Phagan has brought into her life. These two pictures were taken yesterday as Mrs. Frank left the courthouse.

CASE NEVER IS DISCUSSED BY FRANK JURORS

Every Man on Panel Has Nickname and Formality Has Been Cast Out.

No member of the jury that is to decide Leo M. Frank's guilt or innocence had expressed an opinion on the case or even one witness' testimony when the second week of the trial ended yesterday afternoon, according to the deputies who have them in charge.

In the court it is an attentive jury. No bit of evidence gets by unnoticed, no wrangle occurs between the attorneys that is not given their undivided attention, and when a person testifies they catch every word—knowing the formal charge that will come from the judge, "You are to believe all of it, or any part of it, or if you see fit so to do take the word of the defendant, who is not under oath."

Out of the court it is altogether a different kind of a jury. Probably it is that its members hear enough of the case during "business hours" and are glad to discuss topics that do not bring in the possibility of weighing a man's life. But not one member of the jury has at any time expressed any opinion. If there is one, it is carefully guarded, but those who have watched the faces during the two weeks said yesterday that it was a jury that was still open to conviction.

The formal "good-morning, Mr. ——," has been abandoned for the more jovial "howdy-do," and every member has a nickname. Friday morning each member came from the hotel with a tiny white flower on his coat. They were the gift from the wife of a newlywed, who would not be on the jury if Judge Roan had listened to his excuses.

Saturday afternoon and Sunday are the days that are really tiresome. They are allowed to communicate with no one, and, save a morning and afternoon constitutional, are not permitted to venture from the three rooms assigned them. Last week the attorneys consented for them to purchase magazines, or any reading matter, to be censored by the Sheriff, and, with the exception of this diversion, a juryman on a two or three week trial has anything but the finest position in Atlanta.

Conley, Unconcerned, Asks Nothing of Trial.

Despite the attacks of the defense in the trial of Leo Frank has made upon his story, Jim Conley—from whose lips fell the most damning and abhorrent testimony a Georgia jury has ever heard—sits calmly in his cell at the Tower, inscrutable and unconcerned.

The negro, for weeks the greatest puzzle in the criminal annals of the State, has become an even greater puzzle since he told his story and was taken back to the gloominess of the jail. The fact that he is an admitted accessory after the fact in the murder of little Mary Phagan does not apparently weigh upon his mind.

He asks no questions about the trial or whether the defense has succeeded in breaking down his remarkable tale, and whenever information is vouchsafd to him he receives it with the same cunning smile that baffled Frank's attorneys and that has baffled students of criminology since the negro became connected with the Phagan case.

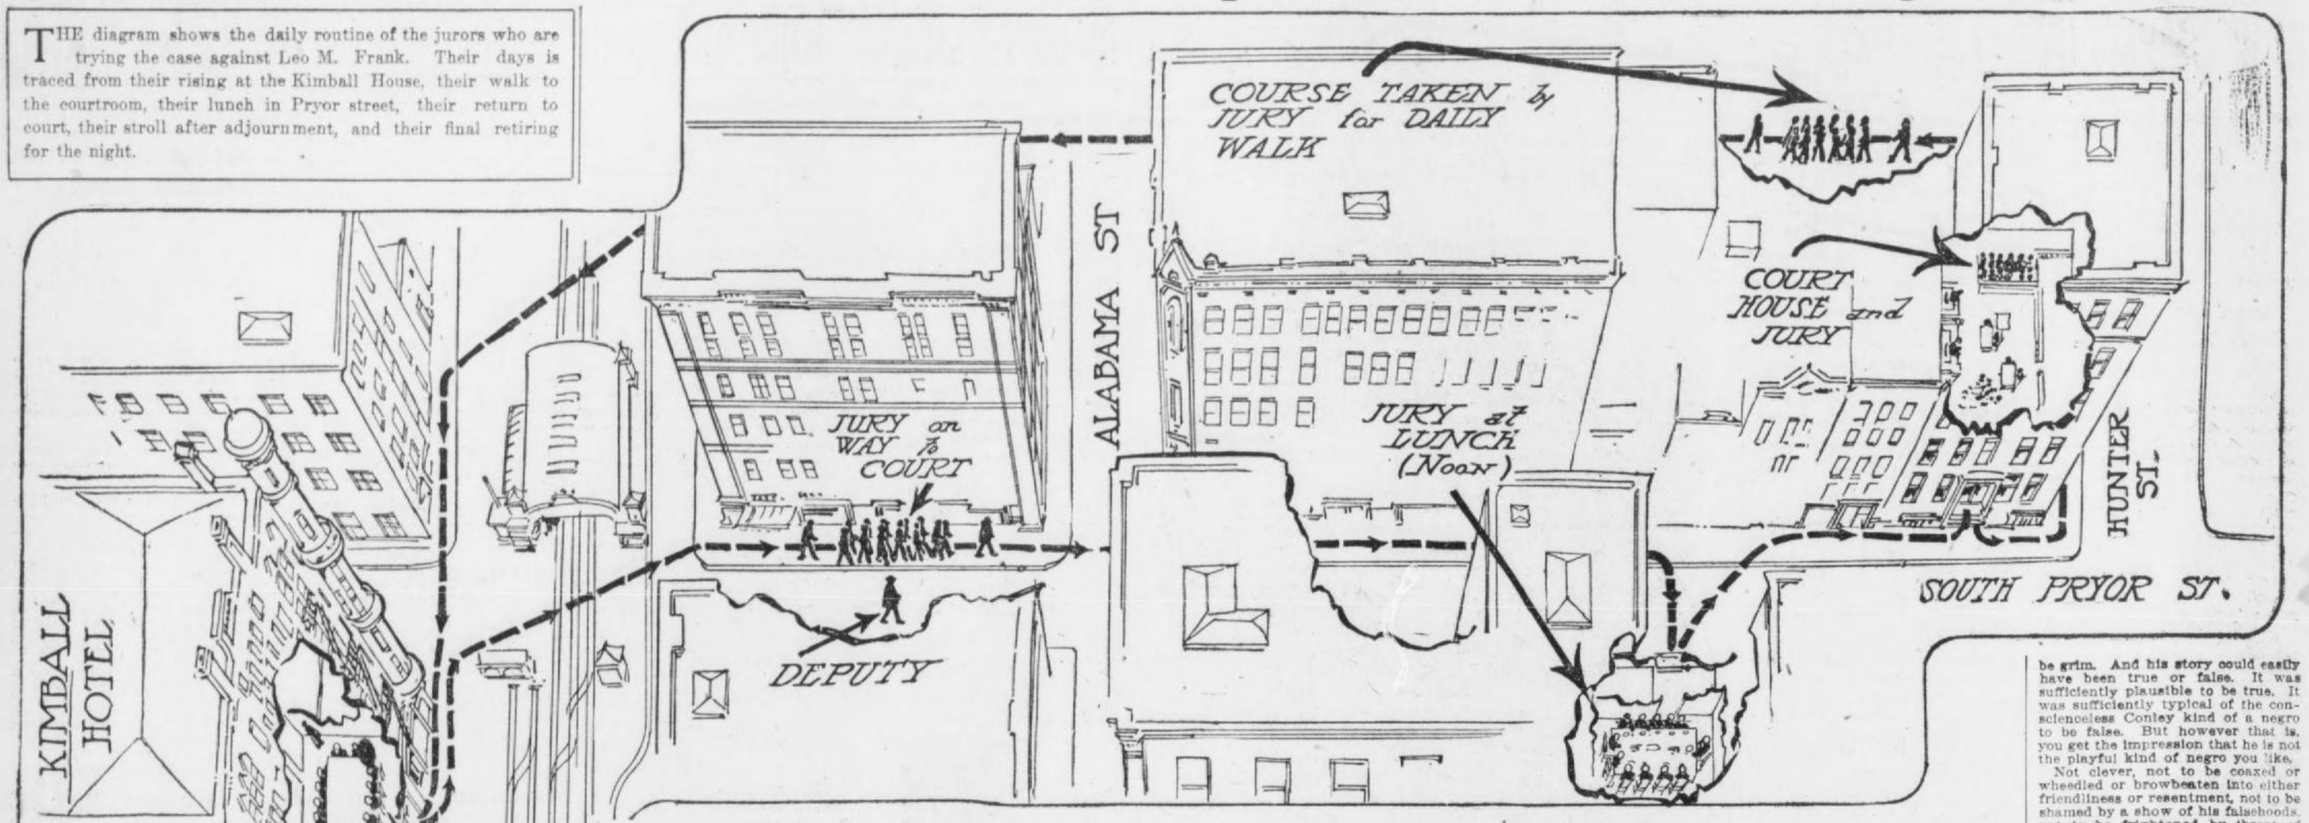
INTEREST IN TRIAL NOW CENTERS IN STORY OF MINCEY

Question of Time Considered of Paramount Importance in Defense Theory of Frank Case

THE diagram shows the daily routine of the jurors who are trying the case against Leo M. Frank. Their days is traced from their rising at the Kimball House, their walk to the courtroom, their lunch in Pryor street, their return to court, their stroll after adjournment, and their final retiring for the night.



EVERY EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO ACCOUNT FOR ALL HIS MOVEMENTS

As all interest centered in the dramatic story of Jim Conley while the case of the prosecution in the Frank trial was being presented, so the public now is awaiting with the keenest expectancy the tale that W. H. Mincey, pedagogue and insurance solicitor, will relate when he is called this week by the attorneys for Leo M. Frank.

Conley swore as glibly as though he were telling of an inconsequential incident in one of his crap games that Frank had confessed to him the killing of Mary Phagan. Then the negro went on in elaborate detail to tell the horrible story of the disposal of the girl's body.

Mincey will tell a similar story, except that Conley will be named as the man confessing the crime and there will be none of the grewsome descriptions of carrying the limp body from second floor to basement in a piece of crocus bagging.

The coming week of the trial will have other witnesses galore. Some of them may be of much more importance than Mincey. Some of them may contribute in a much greater degree to the strength of the defense's case. But the appearance on the stand of no person is being awaited with higher interest than that of Mincey.

The defense has more than a hundred other witnesses on which it may call during the remainder of the trial. Some of them will be on the stand for only a few minutes and others will be questioned and cross-examined at considerable length. It is regarded that when the end of the week arrives there will be still another week ahead before the case is ended and the verdict returned.

Many of the witnesses who have been summoned are character witnesses. The defense is aware that the State has persons to call in rebuttal. It is regarded as highly likely, however, that Frank's lawyers will go ahead and introduce acquaintances and relatives of the accused man who will swear as to his good character and morality.

Had Never Seen Flirting.

Miss Grace Hix, a pretty factory girl, living at No. 100 McDonough road, told readily when she was being cross-examined by Luther Rosser that in the five years she had worked at the factory Frank had spoken to her only three times and then only on business. She said she never had seen him trying to flirt with any of the girls.

N. V. Darley, general manager of the factory, denied that he ever had known of any improper conduct on the part of Frank, and E. F. Holloway, day watchman, testified to the same effect.

Other girls will be called during this week. They will be questioned in regard to Frank's attitude toward them and their observation of his attitude toward any of the other employees. Then they will be turned over for the searching cross-examination of Solicitor Dorsey and his associate, Frank A. Hooper.

The time element, which figures so vitally in the murder mystery, will be emphasized when the alibi witnesses are on the stand. The public will learn then for the first time the true strength of Frank's defense. It is possible that his case will stand or fall on the testimony of these very witnesses.

Members of his family will tell of the time he left home Saturday morning. He will be carried along almost minute by minute from this time until he reached the factory, did some work there, went to Montag Bros., Nelson and Forsyth streets, and returned to the pencil factory at about 11 o'clock.

Testify of His Movements.

Persons in the factory will testify as to Frank's movements up until the time they left at or before noon. Mary Phagan was killed shortly after noon. It is during these brief moments that Frank's actions are not known, except upon his own statements. The same is exactly as true as to Jim Conley, who was on the first floor, near the stairs.

Frank says he does not know anything of what transpired then or after of his own personal knowledge.

Conley admits that he does, but in his admission he accuses Frank of knowing all.

He tells a story of Frank directing him to carry the body to the basement and then to write some notes which later were found by the body. He narrates his story in elaborate detail. The defense is said to maintain it would have taken three-quarters of an hour or more to do all he describes.

This is one of the places where the time element enters. Conley says that it was four minutes before 1 o'clock when he went after the cloth in which he wrapped the girl's body to carry her downstairs.

Question of Time Paramount.

Frank was at home by 1:30 o'clock, according to one of the State's witnesses. He was home slightly earlier according to the defense's, Albert McKnight. He would have had to leave the factory at 1:15 or very close to that time to have walked to the street car and arrived home by 1:30, providing he was able to get a car within two or three minutes. Frank and the negro could not have had time to do all Conley described in the nineteen minutes from 12:56 to 1:15. Frank's lawyers contend, particularly in view of the negro's statement that he was hidden in a closet in Frank's room eight minutes of the time.

The statement of Frank's father-in-law, Emil Selig; the servant, Minola McKnight and her husband Albert McKnight, will be taken to establish the time Frank arrived home that afternoon. H. J. Hinchey has told of the time he saw him returning to the factory on a Washington street car. J. C. Loeb will tell of riding to town with him. Harry Denham will testify as to Frank's arrival at the factory. Newt Lee's testimony will be taken as to his departure. Members of his family will be witnesses to establish the time of his return home at night, and the fact that he remained there until he was awakened by the officers the next morning.

Phagan Trial Makes Eleven "Widows"

But Jurors' Wives Are Peeresses Also

By L. F. WOODRUFF

ELEVEN widows were made in Atlanta in a day without the assistance of the Grim Reaper, a trip to Reno, pallbearers or affinity stories in the newspapers.

And there is but one drop of consolation in their cup. When they were made widows they automatically became peeresses, for which privilege many American girls have caused their fathers large sums of good American money and themselves heartache and their pictures to be printed between the story of the rabbit that chased the boa constrictor and the life narrative of Sophie, the Shop Girl, who in a night became a stage star.

They also had the satisfaction of having their husbands officially proclaimed good men and true, which they may have questioned when the pay envelope was brought home with $10 missing and unaccounted for, just as all wives have questioned.

They'll Be Brides Again.

If there is any balm in it, the widows know that it will not be long before they can doff their weeds and once more don their bridal gowns. Their husbands will return to them just as soon as they have decided whether or not Leo Frank is guilty of the murder of Mary Phagan.

For it is due to the fact that their husbands are jurors that Atlanta had eleven widows made in a day, that eleven peeresses were added to Atlanta's list and that eleven wives had the glory of hearing their husbands called "good" without suspecting there was hidden meaning in the compliment.

The peerage and the official compliment as to character and $2 a day are the emoluments of a juror of Georgia. A juror in the Frank case gets a little more. He gets his keep, a place to sleep, and a deputy sheriff to keep him out of trouble, read his letters, inspect his laundry and keep him company during all his waking hours.

Scant Solace for Widows.

The emoluments are considerable, but how about the widows?

Men must work and women must weep to the tuneful accompaniment of the doleful mourning of the harbor bar is the first thought.

But there is some solace in the lot of the eleven Frank case widows.

Not every woman can know the thrill of widowhood and at the same time have absolute assurance that she is not going to remain in single blessedness the rest of her life.

And then there's no disputing the fact that they are peeresses. A juror is given his coronet when he takes his oath of office. Of course, in a criminal case he is usually paid the doubtful compliment of being termed the peer of a safe cracker, a short change artist, a blind tiger operator, or a gentleman skilled in the art of getting good money on bad paper, but just the same the juror is a peer. And just the same Mrs. Juror is a peeress.

Only One Single Juror.

In the rapid selection of the Frank jury, it was remarkable that but one single man was selected to decide a mystery that has puzzled the master minds of the Atlanta detective bureau for more than three months. The State probably wanted married men, who would sympathize with the mother robbed of a daughter's life. The defense probably wanted married men who would sympathize with the wife of the accused and his mother. Single men are supposed to be as lacking in the natural supply of the milk of human kindness as a laughing hyena. The single man on the jury looks like he's married. Probably that's why he was accepted by both sides.

And when they held up their right hands and swore to "well and truly try, etc." without objection to the split infinitive, the eleven "good men and true" were as completely divorced as if the judge had ordered them to pay alimony and had forbidden another marriage in a year's time.

The divorce pro tem. has been absolute. The widows cannot speak with their husbands. Nobody else can for that matter except a court attache.

Deputy Reads All Mail.

Writing them is practically prohibited. Every letter mailed a juror has to be read by a deputy sheriff and properly censored by him before it reaches the eyes of the trial man.

And what wife would like to call her beloved "snooky" and have a deputy sheriff first assimilate the tenderness of the term? What wife would like to write for $8.67 to pay the butcher bill and have a deputy sheriff become thus acquainted with the condition of the family larder and the connubial purse?

She may kiss the clean collar when she sends it to him every day, but what assurance has she that he will not think that the Chinaman has bungled in his work?

She may send him a pair of freshly darned socks, but how does she know that the deputy will not see a mysterious message in the needle work and appropriate the hosiery to his own pedal purposes?

No, there are eleven new widows in Atlanta, but there is no doubt but there are eleven new peeresses. The only trouble is, no one can marry any of them for their titles.

Dalton Sticks Firmly To Story Told on Stand.

C. B. Dalton, prominent as a witness in the Frank trial, stuck firmly to the story he told in court when he was confronted Saturday by the letter of Miss Laura Atkinson, No. 30 Ella street, one of the young women mentioned in his sensational testimony. She branded his statement concerning her as false.

He maintained that all he said as a witness was true—that he met her, as he had other girls of the pencil factory, and walked home with her from a restaurant near the plant on Forsyth street.

Dalton was emphatic in his reiteration of every detail of the testimony delivered by him from the witness stand.

Here is Miss Atkinson's statement, in full, denying Dalton's testimony:

"Editor The Sunday American: Will you please allow me space to correct a statement made by Mr. C. B. Dalton in his testimony at the Frank trial, and published in your paper yesterday? In answer to a question from Mr. Rosser as to whether he ever went to the pencil factory with any one except Miss Daisy Hopkins, he said yes, he used to go to the Busy Bee and wait for the factory to close to walk home with the girls, and gave my name as one of the girls.

"His statement, as I read it in your paper, impressed me as being intended to convey to the minds of those who heard it (and, of course, all who read it) the idea that I was working at the factory at the time he says he went there and that he was in the habit of walking home with me. I have no desire to make any derogatory remarks about Mr. Dalton, but in justice to myself and my good name, I certainly do feel it my duty to say that his statement concerning me is false, and he had not the slightest ground whatever for making it and no right to use my name in any way in his testimony.

"I have known him only about six months, and have never been in his company but three times. On two occasions I was at church with a gentleman friend who was also a friend of his and he walked with us from the church to my home, less than three blocks, and one afternoon while out walking I met him and he walked with me a distance of about four blocks. That, and a few conversations over the telephone, probably three or four, mark the extent of my acquaintance with him. I worked at the pencil factory exactly two days the second week in July (last month), and did not even see Mr. Dalton on either one of those days. I had never worked there before nor been there, and have not since.

"Will you please state these facts in your paper and clear up any false impression that may have been made on people's minds concerning me, and the slur I feel has been cast on my good name by having him make such a false statement where it would be published broadcast over the country? I will appreciate it and thank you very much if you will correct the statement. Sincerely,

"LAURA ATKINSON.

"No. 30 Ella Street."

Mary Phagan's Mother To Be Spared at Trial.

A spectator at the trial of Leo M. Frank for the murder of little Mary Phagan remarked:

"I wonder what the mother of the little girl who was so brutally killed thinks of all this?"

Mrs. J. W. Coleman, the mother, was the first witness called at the beginnig of the case, now two weeks gone. She was dressed in deep black with a heavy veil about her face. As she pulled back the veil to speak to the jury the expression was calm without a sign of bitterness. And she answered in even tones.

Then the Solicitor opened a little suit case and placed before her the clothes of her little girl.

There was a stifled cry. Those who looked saw a face covered with a handkerchief. That was enough. Solicitor Dorsey put no more questions.

For ten days the grind of the court went on. The mother was forgotten for more immediate things.

Friday she was recalled in the midst of expert testimony on the effect of digestion on cabbage. She came and indifferently told how she had cooked the cabbage that made the last meal of little Mary Phagan. Then she said:

"Mr. Dorsey, will you need me any more? I am so tired. I want to go."

He told her she could go. And it is very probable she will not appear at this trial again.

ONE GLANCE AT CONLEY BOOSTS DARWIN THEORY

Frank's Accuser Is Not the Type of Negro White Men Consider Their Friend.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

Jim Conley is a low-browed, thick-lipped, anthropoidal sort of negro. You look at him and your faith in Mr. Darwin's theory goes up like cotton after a boll-weevil scare.

Here is a burly, short-necked black man. On his upper lip is a scanty mustache of the kind that most negroes fondle with the vain hope that it will grow into a bushy thickness. Conley is the most common African type as to physique.

Never a flash of brightness, never a gleam of wit, never the sparkle of unconscious humor came during the three days Conley was on the stand. Newt Lee made the courtroom laugh. Conley didn't. He was always deadly earnest.

This earnestness is common to the most ignorant and illiterate members of the race always, particularly to the negro without a moral sense, without the inkling of a conscience, without scruples.

Delights in Dull Things.

Many people are given over to the fond belief that negroes are happy-go-lucky and irresponsible. Not negroes like Jim Conley. His kind find no pleasure in the simple things. Their recreations are sordid. They find their delight in things that are dull and drab, much as an animal would.

You can well believe that Jim Conley watched at the door while white men and women met secretly.

Jim Conley probably has no convictions concerning a God, nor belief in anything divine. It is this belief that makes the unintelligent negro a lovable person. Jim Conley lacked it, and became repulsive.

Most negroes have a simple faith and an unorthodox theology. Their immorality is ingenuous and childlike, and they err, when they do, through weakness or forgetfulness. Not Jim Conley.

Every Southerner knows Jim Conley's type.

The negro did not laugh in the three days of his ordeal. He never smiled. And it was not because he was afraid; it is just that his type is not given to smiling.

If he had squirmed in his seat or seemed uneasy, if he had revealed the slightest impertinence or the least bit of humor, if his eyes had only once seemed to plead with Luther Rosser to slacken the high tension of the cross-examination, then Jim Conley would have become the kind of negro that white men consider their friend, a human person.

Instead he sat there, his elbows on the arms of the big chair, his hands crossed in his lap, his eyes fixed on the eyes of the man who questioned him, and he answered glibly.

Even when he lied he gave back gaze for gaze, and answered glibly.

This little sketch of Jim Conley has nothing to do with whether his story is true or false. It may be the one or the other. The majority of men who have followed the case are of the opinion that a large part of it is true. Be that as as may. This is an attempted picture of the negro who has become the most notorious negro of Georgia, and it is altogether outside his story.

This is a picture of the negro who watched at the door, who lied, and lied even when he was under oath. His life has been pitched in sordid lines, and he probably forgot long ago that there is such a thing as a conscience or a judgment.

It is just because of this that Conley's story has been the remarkable production it was—a compound of admitted fabrication and probable truth. The negro has no scruples against falsehood. Little of his life, it is likely, has been true, and he could very easily sit unperturbed and tell a story that was false.

Jim Conley is not clever. He was merely running true to form, maintaining his type, when he told his story.

A white man with a similar lack of conscience, and in a similar position could not have been more glib and plausible than Conley. But he would have seemed more clever, and probably would have injured his story because of that cleverness. He would have smiled at times, or appeared careless. Or, if he lacked the temperamental basis of falsehood that Jim Conley undoubtedly has, he would have succumbed and his story would have fallen under the merciless fire of the cross-examination.

Conley Just Unmoral.

Jim Conley was calm, unmoved, unsmiling, even grim—if a negro can be grim. And his story could easily have been true or false. It was sufficiently plausible to be true. It was sufficiently typical of the conscienceless Conley kind of a negro to be false. But however that is, you get the impression that he is not the playful kind of negro you like.

Not clever, not to be coaxed or wheedled or browbeaten into either friendliness or resentment, not to be shamed by a show of his falsehoods, not to be frightened by threat of punishment, Jim Conley with his lies and his placid, unemotional narrative of how he dragged dead Mary Phagan as he would a bundle of rags, gives you to know that the entire sketch of his character may be summed in one word—unmoral.

SULZER TO CALL TROOPS TO AID IF IMPEACHED

Will Use Force of Arms if Attempt Is Made to Oust Him From Office.

LOOKS HAGGARD AND WAN

Articles Calling for Expulsion Because of Campaign Fund Scandal Are Prepared.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Articles of impeachment of Governor Sulzer are being prepared by Senator Robert N. Wagner and Speaker Smith at Saratoga to-night. They will be presented to the Legislature probably soon after the Frawley committee's report is submitted Monday evening.

While Wagner and Smith, during a brief visit here to-day and a long secret conference to-night, declined to outline the case, the indictments, it is believed, will follow very closely this forecast:

First, that the Governor committed perjury in swearing that he received neither directly or indirectly more than $5,240 for campaign contributions.

Second, that he wrote the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company he had authorized Secretary Sarecky to accept contributions, and that Sarecky had deposited in that bank $12,000 during the campaign.

Third, that the Governor used a number of concealed campaign contributions to speculate in Wall street.

The Governor appeared at the Executive Chamber to-day looking more haggard and wan than he did at the time the Mignon Hopkins suit was brought. "I will make no statement until I have the full stenographic report of the Frawley committee before me," he said.

A friend of the Governor declared that the Executive would resist with the strength and force of the National Guard any attempt to remove him from office.

The Frawley committee report probably will not recommend impeachment, but that it will lay before the Assembly and the Senate the facts.

It will dwell upon the failure of the Governor to account for thousands of dollars received by him for campaign purposes and ignored in his sworn statement of receipts and disbursements filed with the Secretary of State.

Belmont Says He Gave; Doesn't Know How Much.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 9.—August Belmont, who arrived here to-day on his return from a European trip, was interviewed this evening concerning a $5,000 contribution which he is said to have given to Governor Sulzer's campaign.

"I have no knowledge of such a contribution," said Mr. Belmont. "I undoubtedly contributed, but as to the amount and circumstances of said contribution I can not say without referring to such records as my secretary may have. I can offer no opinion as to the impeachment of Governor Sulzer, as I am entirely unfamiliar with the developments of the investigation by the Frawley committee."

A druggist near where I lived advised taking a tablespoonful of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey with an egg in milk before meals, and after following his advice I found that I could eat; I overcame my weakness, and gradually gained in weight. I believe that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as a tonic for run down people is a great thing, and I recommend it to my many friends in Brooklyn and New York. Raw Food Club for Plain Corn on Cob

Organization Is Devoted to Man's Prehistoric Diet and Abolition of Kitchen Range.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Aug. 9.—Dedicated to the purposes of resorting to man's prehistoric diet, eschewing palatable dishes from the kitchen range and resolved to abolish the functions of the modern cook, the Minneapolis Raw Food Club came into existence here to-night.

The meeting was enlivened by an impromptu debate between President Dee Atkinson and Secretary G. Heisser as to the relative merits of raw corn, when eaten off the cob, or when previously scraped from the cob. The verdict rested with the club members and samples of shelled corn, in its raw state, were passed around. Then a cob was produced, and each of the herbivorous disciples took a munch for himself. The cob exponents won.

A raw food banquet is to be given by the club soon.

'Golf Feet' Peril Atlanta Society Science Finds Game's Bugaboo Fair Players Scoff at Scare

Miss Pattie May Holland beginning a drive. The popular young Atlanta golfer is shown addressing the ball. Note the peculiar position of her feet. The three smaller pictures show different positions of the feet taken on one drive and will illustrate the theory that golf tends to make larger and uglier the feet of women.

Doctor Says That Peculiar Positions Assumed by Pedal Extremities of Devotees of Pastime Threaten Size.

Somebody has scared golfers of Atlanta, particularly affecting the women who pursue the ancient game. The word has gone out that the feet, which in golf are twisted and turned and strained more than any other portion of the body, are likely to suffer and maybe—horrors—to grow big.

So far it is nothing but a theory where Atlanta is concerned. You wouldn't dare term the feet of the girl golfers at East Lake or Brookhaven anything else than neat, dainty or beautiful, more beautiful, divine, the adjective altogether depending upon the girl and the way you feel about her.

But in spite of the present beauty of the feet of Atlanta golfers, there is a trepidation. A very cruel medical man has said that the twisting and turning of certain muscles of the feet and ankles has a tendency to maye feet, especially those of young girls and women, to spread and become flat.

Science Watches Feet.

Feet, at the best, are unconventional things, behaving according to their own will. Nobody has ever thought to govern their whims, until now, when science has said that they will bear watching.

Even the scoffers in Atlanta's golf set are sorry that it has been thus announced. Golf, they say, makes girls forget feet and everything else, makes them nonchalant and natural, makes them real girls. And now, they lament——

Watch, for instance, Colonel Bogey's lady in action. Very naive and pensive she bends over the warty little ball when she addresses it, preparatory to the drive. Then suddenly her calm pose is transformed into an eager straining. Her club is swung backward over her left shoulder, her lower lip is caught tensely between her teeth, her feet are flung from their sedate station into a grotesque tangle.

The club swings across, and from behind her right shoulder it is swept in almost a complete circle.

Feet Catch Jerk.

As it sweeps it catches the ball and drives it down the course. As it sweeps, her body turns with a jerk. Much of the jerk is caught by the feet, which serve as the pivot for the turn, and which are moved from the first unusual position to another as unusual. She holds the second position for several seconds, unconscious, while she watches the ball as it flies and bounces over the green. Milady has driven.

The feet, you see, bear the brunt of much of the stroke. Most Atlanta girls on the golf course wear loose shoes, or scant pumps, within which the feet move easily and naturally. The problem has been worked out without much deliberation, for who before this has ever considered the feet as the subject for thought. But now——

Mother Goose Ball Rouses Suffragettes

'Anti' Demonstration Only Shows Need of Reform, Says Mrs. Alice Gardiner Whippler.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Mrs. Alice Gardiner Whippler, a noted Washington suffragette, has issued a philippic against the recent anti-suffrage Mother Goose ball given by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, at Newport.

Mrs. Whippler says that Mrs. Fish's attempt to stop a world-movement by a spectacular presentation of nursery rhymes shows the world's need of the new woman. Mrs. Whippler continued:

"Who were these guests of Mrs. Fish whose wearied minds needed refreshment? It will seem to a casual reader of the list of names that the persons who wear jewels of such enormous value that a cordon of policemen has to be drawn around the wearers as they dance are not much heckled or disturbed by the problems of the business world. The most serious problem which confronts them is a sociological one, and has to do with those plain clothes men and the policemen outside."

Kern Would Rid Navy of Snobbery

Senate Leader Declares Officers Should Realize There Is No Nobility in United States.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Senator Kern, majority leader of the Senate, renewed to-day his attack upon the American naval officers.

"When I referred the other day to 'perfumed naval officers,'" said Senator Kern, "I had reference to the un-American snobs who discriminate against their equals because they are in the ranks of the enlisted service. I believe that the great majority of our naval officers are too brave and too thoroughly American to forget that this country has no order of nobility to which every worthy man is not eligible."

Senator Kern also denied for the Secretary of the Navy, Josephus Daniels, that the latter ever expressed a sentiment indicating that it was his opinion that officers and sailors "should mess together."

MACON GREETS JUNIOR ORDER OF MECHANICS

Benjamin J. Symons of Savannah Will Probably Be Chosen to Head the Council.

MACON, Aug. 9.—Large delegations from all councils of the Junior Order United American Mechanics in Georgia will attend the State convention of the order to be held in Macon Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at which convention Benjamin J. Symons, of Savannah, will be elected State councilor.

Symons will succeed Judge Walter W. Shappard, the present State councilor, who is also a member of one of the Savannah councils. That two Savannah members of the order should successively hold the highest office in the order in the State is thought to be a high compliment to the personnel of the Savannah organization.

The convention, which is held every two years, will convene in Odd Fellows' Hall.

At this convention it is thought that John Stofer, of Savannah, will be indorsed for the position of national councilor. At the last national convention, which was held in June at Fabyans, N. H., Stofer was elected national council warden, and his friends think he is eminently qualified to fill the higher office.

At present the officers of the State council are Judge Walter W. Shappard, of Claxton and Savannah, State councilor; Benjamin S. Symons, of Savannah, State vice councilor; T. D. Ridley, of Macon, junior past State councilor; J. E. Lovelace, of Atlanta, State secretary; O. H. Puckett, of Atlanta, State treasurer; A. B. Coogler, of Riverside, State conductor; John W. Kersey, of Macon, State warden; E. S. Horton, of Macon, State outside sentinel; Rev. W. E. Porter, of Brunswick, State chaplain.

DIGGS SLAVERY CASE TO REACH JURY BY FRIDAY

Warrington and Norris Girls Star Witnesses to Be Called by Prosecution.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—That the fate of Maury I. Diggs, former State architect, charged with violating the Mann white slave act, will be in the hands of the jury in the United States District Court next Friday is the opinion of the opposing attorneys in the case to-day. The prosecution expects to conclude its case on Tuesday, after which the presentation of the defense's evidence will require two days.

The Government's case will be concluded with the testimony of the two star witnesses, Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris, the two Sacramento girls whom Diggs and F. Drew Caminetti are charged with transporting to Reno for immoral purposes.

The defense in its cross-examination of the prosecution's witnesses has shown that it will endeavor to establish that the girls went of their own free will, entering into the escapade as a sort of lark, and heartily enjoying themselves from the time they left Sacramento until they were arrested by Chief of Police Hillhouse from the bungalow where they were living with Diggs and Caminetti in Reno.

Diggs will be called to the stand in his own behalf and his comrade, Caminetti, who is under indictment on the same charge, also will testify for him, according to the present plans of the defense.

Diggs' attorneys also intimated at the conclusion of yesterday's session of court that Mrs. Diggs, wife of the defendant, will be called to testify for her husband.

Southern Chinese Rebels Take Nanking

Report Yang-Tse Valley Indicate Government Is Making Little Progress Against Revolutionists.

Special Cable to The American.

PEKIN, Aug. 9.—It is reliably reported from Nanking that the Southern Chinese rebels last evening occupied the Government house there and are again in command of Nanking.

Consular and other reports from the Yang-Tse Valley indicate that the Chinese Government is making little headway against the rebels at Shanghai. The railway from Tien-Tsin to Pukow is not yet opened.

The revolt at Chung-King, in the province of Sze-Chuen, is regarded as offsetting the minor Government successes of the week, but the rebels have no central organization.

FAMOUS MIMS HOME PILLAGED TO AID CHURCH

'If Motive Is Right, Where Is the Sin?' Asks Negro Preacher Who Took Furniture.

Jeff Peters, a typical negro preacher who might be "Old Black Joe" himself, from all appearances, can not understand why he should be charged with a crime just because he broke into the luxurious home of the late Major Livingston Mims and Mrs. Mims, the Christian Science apostle, at No. 445 Peachtree circle, and took a number of chairs and tables and an amount of valuable bric-a-brac. He had planned to furnish his church at Riverside with the costly furniture from the Mims home.

The old negro was arrested Saturday night by Detectives Davis and Sturdivant and was brought to police headquarters defiant.

"If the motive is right, where is the sin?" he asked loudly and devoutly, over and over again.

The Mims home has been closed and boarded up since the death several months ago of Mrs. Livingston Mims. Her husband, former Mayor of Atlanta, dilettante and patron of local art, literature and the social niceties, has been dead several years.

The house seldom was occupied after his death. Mrs. Mims, a national leader in Christian Science work, a pupil and close personal friend of Mrs. Eddy, being away much of the time. She died in Boston five months ago.

UNDERWOOD IS MENTIONED FOR SENATE PLACE

Alabama Faces Political Problem as Result of the Death of J. F. Johnston.

HOBSON ALREADY IN RACE

Amendment Providing for Direct Election Causes Doubt as How to Fill Vacancy.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Alabama to-day faces a political problem which is exciting the keenest interest all over the country. With the death of Joseph Forney Johnston, senior United States Senator from Alabama, gossip is rife concerning his successor. Conjecture has been complicated as a result of the recent amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for the popular election of United States Senators.

Despite differences of opinion as to the legality of the proposed election to choose a successor to Senator Johnston, Governor O'Neal has not receded from the position assumed by him in this statement Friday afternoon. He is still of the belief that he is possessed of authority to call such an election, though he has not definitely announced that he will take such action.

Conference With Leaders.

Since there is such marked uncertainty among party leaders as to the legality or expediency of a special election, the Governor will defer issuance of the proclamation pending a conference with members of the Alabama delegation in Congress and other leaders of the party in the State. This conference will be held in Birmingham following the funeral of Senator Joseph Johnston, which will take place here Sunday.

Governor O'Neal arrived in Birmingham to-night. In addition to Senator Bankhead and members of Congress from Alabama, Democratic members of the Senatorial escort accompanying the body of Senator Johnston from Washington will be consulted by the Governor in his effort to arrive at a satisfactory solution of the present complex problem.

In the event that the Legislature is called together in special session there will be further complications. There are about fifteen vacancies in the two branches of the General Assembly which would have to be filled before the election of a new Senator could be legal, according to opinions expressed by State officials.

There is much more at stake than that, however.

The death of Senator Johnston has created an acute situation in the National Senate, where the tariff promoters have but a bare Democratic working majority with which to pass the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill. It has become imperative that every Democratic seat be filled.

O'Neal Asks Advice.

A vacancy exists. Political leaders in the State realize the gravity of the situation and it is for this reason alone that Governor O'Neal telegraphed to Attorney General McReynolds to ascertain the proper procedure in naming a successor. A sealed reply has been received, but its contents are being withheld by Attorney General Brickell until the dead Senator has been buried.

Oscar Underwood, the floor leader in the House, and framer of the present tariff law, is being most prominently mentioned as a successor to Senator Johnston. John B. Knox, a warm friend and supporter of Governor O'Neal, and for a long time prominent in Alabama politics, is another whom the political forecasters are watching closely.

Other Possibilities.

There are still others also. Frank P. Glass, editor of The Birmingham News, and one of the "Original Wilson men," is thought to have a splendid chance at the senatorship in case Governor O'Neal is permitted to appoint, as he is one of O'Neal's warmest friends. J. Thomas Heflin, present Congressman, is another, as are also William D. Jelks, former Governor, and Captain Frank S. White, one of Birmingham's most prominent lawyers.

Of course, there is another possibility—Richmond Pearson Hobson, hero of the Merrimac—who had been conducting a most vigorous campaign to succeed Senator Johnston. Of course Hobson will continue his race—he will not receive the appointment from Governor O'Neal, for they are bitter political enemies.

Senator's Funeral Train Is Derailed.

Southern Railway train No. 37, from New York to Birmingham, bearing the body of Senator Johnston and the Congressional memorial committee, was derailed two miles south f Norris, S. C., at 2 p. m. yesterday.

The engine, tender and baggage car turned over. The dining car also left the track. The fireman, a waiter and one of the mail clerks were slightly injured.

None of the passengers were injured, according to reports to Southern Railway offices in Atlanta.

No Rules Exist in Running Auto

Ask Frank Hammond, He Tried

Mayor's Private Secretary Buys New Car; Nearly Loses His Life and Does Lose Old Friend.

Should you open the subject with Frank Hammond, Mayor Woodward's Napoleonic young secretary, you will come to find out that bridge whist is about the only game that is played according to the rules. In poker, politics, in running an automobile and in most of the others the book of rules doesn't count, Mr. Hammond will assure you.

Particularly, you will be informed, is there no Hoyle or Marquis of Queensberry in the motoring game.

And then Mr. Hammond will proceed to tell you of his own exploit, of how he started out on a deed of high emprise, armed with only a book of rules and a knightly heart, to subjugate an untamed automobile. And he will tell you how he came near to being subjugated himself, and how he lost a very good friend.

After the manner of all rising young men, Mr. Hammond decided upon the purchase of an automobile. The first installment paid, the machine duly was delivered.

Smiles on Ownership.

Like a young father or a debutante, Mr. Hammond smiled proudly in the joy of ownership, and called upon his nearest and dearest friends to invite them for a ride. He neglected to mention that all he knew about automobiles was that they had four wheels and were very pretty when new.

Besides, he forgot that he didn't know. A very comprehensive book of rules had come with the car, and, as all the world knows, Frank Hammond is nothing if not confident.

The automobile came, in charge of a greasy garage man. It was first up, gasoline stocked and ready for action. The garage man said "good-morning" very politely to the new owner, without warning as to what was coming, and then went back to his greasy shop. Frank Hammond and a trusting friend were alone with the untamed automobile, but unafraid.

Mr. Hammond had seen others do it, and so he spun the crank in front. The engine started. Then, with a surreptitious glance at page 10, book of rules, he manned the wheel, covered as many pedals with his feet as possible, and pulled the lever.

The car jumped ahead. The trusting friend lost his hat. Mr. Hammond almost lost his head, but was sufficiently alert to push the lever far back in the other direction. As the automobile had jumped ahead, now it leaped backward.

Car Starts Turkey Trot.

With one finger between page 10 and page 11, praying for an opportunity to read, Mr. Hammond jabbed his lever back and forth, experimentally. The car turkey-trotted in the most approved fashion.

"Smarter?" gasped the friend, his confidence waning.

"Carbureter," gasped Mr. Hammond in reply.

As a matter of fact, his knowledge of the carbureter hardly extended far enough to give him confidence in his spelling of it.

The car stopped of itself. Maybe it was surprised at the startling accusation its owner had just made.

The trusting friend had a brilliant idea. He decided to get out. But Mr. Hammond, still confident, more confident than ever, perhaps, now that he could look at page 11, held him in. The machine was started in a rational manner.

"Fine," remarked Mr. Hammond.

In his path loomed a young woman. The automobile was close upon her, and Mr. Hammond saw with alarm that he must slow up. The machine refused to slow up. It was as obstinate when Mr. Hammond begged it to stop altogether.

He closed his eyes and prayed that the young woman would not leave a house full of motherless children. Maybe she wasn't married at all, he thought, with a throb of relief.

Young Woman Escapes.

But she saw the automobile in time, and jumped. Just in time she saw it and jumped.

And on the questing automobilists sped, out Peachtree road. Angels would not have dared their feat. Nowhere did they stop or slacken speed, because they couldn't.

They found themselves in the center of the street car track after a while, with a Buckhead car bearing down upon them from the rear, and rapidly coming nearer. The automobile had another stubborn fit, and refused to turn from the strait and narrow path it had found for itself. On came the car.

Mr. Hammond nerved himself for a desperate effort. He rose in his seat and threw all his strength into the strangle hold he had on the steering wheel. The automobile turned sharply and sped to the side of the road. An embankment was there, but this automobile, being a brave little thing, feared embankments no more than it did the threats of the man who owned it and head on into the bank of clay it went, there to stop.

The Buckhead car had stopped, too, and the trusting friend, escaping Mr. Hammond's clutches, boarded it. Mr. Hammond remained to mourn.

But that was some time ago. Now Mr. Hammond knows that it wasn't really the carbureter that was the trouble on the first day.

KENYON CITES PERIL IN TARIFF BILL TO SENATE

Democratic Leaders Despair of Accomplishing Work—Legislation Delayed by Speeches.

WHAT CONGRESS DID TO-DAY.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The Senate met at noon.

President sent special message urging immediate legislation to make effective agreement of The Hague opium conference.

Smith, of Michigan, renewed charges that Mexican lobby is at work here and has influenced the State Department.

Williams, of Mississippi, asserted an organized effort was being made to bring about war between the United States and Mexico.

Kenyon discussed the tariff, declaring it more important to control trusts than revise tariff.

Foreign Relations Committee authorized President to accept bust of William Pitt from British donors and approved nomination of James M. Sullivan to be Minister to Dominican Republic.

The House was not in session. Meets Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Democratic leaders despair of making headway on the pending tariff bill. It was not until after 5 o'clock this evening that consideration of the steel schedule was reached for the first time since the adjournment Thursday evening.

Senator Kenyon addressed the Senate to-day on his amendment to put the metals controlled by trusts and monopolies on the free list. He paid particular attention to the aluminum trust, and read extracts from its contracts and briefs in suits that have been brought against it. He showed that the agreement between the American and European branches of this international trust prohibited the sale of aluminum products by European manufacturers even to the Government of the United States.

Mr. Kenyon showed in detail the character of such supplies used by the army and navy and pointed out that in time of war this Government, through the operation of the contract between the trusts, would be at the mercy of the American corporation. He also disclosed that this whole question had been exploited before the House committee, and in the face of such a showing the committees in the House and Senate had given the products of the aluminum trust a duty that amounted to considerable protection.

Senator Fletcher, who was to have been chairman of the commission that went to Europe to investigate the subject of rural credits, but who was kept here on account of the tariff, spoke at length on that subject. When he had concluded the tariff bill was taken up and one or two minor paragraphs of the steel schedule disposed of.

WEDS PRETTY NURSE WHOSE AID SAVED HIM

West End Merchant Now Blesses Pneumonia Germs Which Brought Him a Bride.

Benjamin C. Harris, a young West End merchant, fervently called for blessings Saturday upon the kind germs that sent him to his bed with a severe spell of pneumonia two months ago. The occasion for the prayer was his marriage to Miss Pearl Goudeloch, a capable young woman who nursed him through his period of illness back to health and to a happiness that he hadn't known before.

They were married by Dr. S. R. Belk, pastor of the Park Avenue Methodist Church, and left Saturday for Gainesville, the home of the bride, whence they will go to Los Angeles.

Miss Goudeloch is a trained nurse of the Wesley Memorial Hospital and the daughter of a prominent family of Gainesville. She first met Mr. Harris as he lay near to death in the home of his friends, Mr. and Mrs. Milton D. Mitchell, in West End.

The attending physician, not liking the turn the pneumonia was taking, called for an efficient nurse. Miss Goudeloch was retained.

Mr. Harris looked up at his nurse with something in his eyes that was more than the awe a trained nurse inspires. Miss Goudeloch returned his glance:

"We'll pull him through, doctor," she said, confidently.

West End is beautiful in the springtime. There are little parks and shaded streets through which a convalescent young man can walk by the side of the trained nurse whom he doesn't really need in a professional capacity any longer, and can talk to her of many things. And what Mr. Harris said didn't make her a bit angry.

The courtship was brief. With the aid of the Mitchells, in whose home they met, the marriage was arranged, and together the little party went to the Methodist parsonage for a quiet ceremony.

Atlanta has grown so rapidly that Mr. Busyman, engrossed in the "moil" of his own restricted environments, rarely "glimpses" beyond the horizon of his personal sphere of activity. MEN AND RELIGION No. 73

CHILDREN OF GEORGIA

"AND THEY ALL WITH ONE CONSENT BEGAN TO MAKE EXCUSE."

Luke 14:18.

They were at dinner.

Jesus said:

"When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind,

"And thou shalt be blessed."

One at the table pretended to be in sympathy. He began smugly:

"Happy is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God."

The hypocrisy of the man and all others like him was unmasked in the answer made by Jesus. He said:

"A certain man made a great supper and bade many—

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse."

One said one thing, another another.

With one it was a field; with another it was new oxen.

In the end, the Lord said:

"None of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

And from the highways and the hedges called He His guests.

Are you a maker of hypocritcal phrases as was the man at the Pharisee's dinner table—pretending a love for that which is just and right?

Or, to-day, are you trying to do the will, not of man or men, but of Him who died for you?

Let us have done with excuses!

While spending thousands on fields, hogs and cattle, say not:

"We are unable—

"We can not give proper care to these girls—

"These children must go down in shame because of our lack of money—

"But our beasts we must protect whatever the cost."

If animals are more valuable than girls, let us say frankly: but you know that this is untrue.

You know what Georgia would do.

Consider, then!

The Bill in the House providing a Reformatory for Girls is No. 4—ahead of any other measure appropriating money.

The Penitentiary Committee has approved it.

Unanimously the Appropriations Committee has recommended that it pass.

Why, then, should beasts and fields be provided for by later bills and nothing done for Georgia's wayward and delinquent girls?

BURWELL of Hancock, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman and the vice-chairman, BLACKBURN of Fulton, HARDEMAN of Jefferson, MILLER of Bibb, NUNNALLY of Floyd, PAULK of Berrien, RAGLAND of Talbot, REDWINE of Fayette, RHODES of Clarke, SHUPTRINE of Chatham and SLADE of Muscogee constitute the Rules Committee of the House.

The Bill is in their hands.

Monday is the final day in which the measure can be heard and enacted into law at this session of the Legislature.

These eleven men, THE RULES COMMITTEE, will not prevent a hearing, say their friends. We believe that they will do more, that they will help to pass the Bill.

For they know the worth of a girl-child of ten to fourteen.

And they can appraise a cow or hog.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT

CAPT. WILLIAMS' LIFE A STORY OF ACHIEVEMENT

Rose From Turpentine Camp Chopper to Head of World's Greatest Naval Stores Firm.

LEAVES $7,000,000 FORTUNE

Romantic Narrative of Career of Georgian Includes Building of G. F. & A. With Own Cash.

By M. A. ROSE.

Penniless at the age of 23 years, Captain Jesse P. Williams, fresh from the Confederate Army, started work chopping V-shaped gashes in pine trees for $1 per day. He was buried Thursday, leaving an estate variously estimated by close associates at not less than $7,000,000, nor more than $9,000,000.

Here Are Things He Did.

Here are some of the things he did:

He built 250 miles of railroad without borrowing a cent.

He built up the greatest naval stores firm in the world.

He took one man, whose salary was $20 a month, from behind the counter of a store. The man to-day is worth $500,000.

He took one man from between the plow handles of a South Georgia cotton patch. The man to-day is worth $400,000.

He took one man, who was in bankruptcy, with liabilities $40,000 in excess of assets. That man to-day is a millionaire.

No man who followed him but became rich. No man who deserted him but failed.

A Hurricane in Action.

"A hurricane in action, sweet as a girl when the storm was over," say his friends. "Everyone had to do his bidding. He demanded of partners and directors blind faith. But he always divided fairly. He was the lion, but he took no lion's share."

Owning thousands of acres of virgin pine forest, Captain Williams decided to develop the tracts by pushing a railroad through them. In this way he made it possible for turpentine operators to lease orchards and ship their product to market at Savannah.

A short road was built. Turpentine operators leased lands from him, shipped turpentine over his road and consigned to him as factor—three profits for Williams. But this is beside the point.

There came a time when it seemed profitable to undertake to push the road farther, tapping territory the Central of Georgia regarded as its own.

Major Hanson, then the "Great Chief" of the Central, was wroth, not to say indignant. He met Captain Williams in the Knickerbocker Hotel in New York City.

"Stick a spade in the ground beyond your present terminus and I'll break you," Hanson shouted.

"I'm going to do it," replied Captain Williams.

He did.

Does Work In Record Time.

His charter required that a certain number of miles of track be laid by a specified time or the charter became void. The steel was late in coming. Eight days before the expiration date on the charter there were twenty miles of track to be laid.

Three hundred men were put to work, and they toiled in four-hour shifts. With a day and a half to spare, the line was completed and the charter was saved.

But to revert to his career. He was something less than 19 years of age when the first gun was fired at Fort Sumter. He left the Virginia Military Academy, went to his home in North Carolina and raised a company. Politics robbed him of the captaincy and he was to be made a lieutenant. He went back home and raised another company. This time he was captain.

At the end of the war he was penniless and went into the turpentine woods. He began, they say, "chopping boxes"—gashing the pine trees to make ready for the cups which catch the turpentine. This is the roughest form of manual labor. Even now it pays not more than $1.50 a day.

But soon he was buying timber and selling it to sawmills. A little later we find him with a few dollars invested in turpentine orchards and in little country stores.

Starts Naval Stores Firm.

Twenty years of this netted him $40,000, and with this $40,000 he went to Savannah.

He started the J. P. Williams Naval Stores Company, and it grew until, when he sold it, it was the biggest of its kind in the world, and it was appraised for sale at $3,400,000.

This was when he retired, owning the G., F. and A., 200,000 acres of land in Southwest Georgia and Florida, and stock in a dozen or so banks. He had made large gifts to Emory College, had been president of its board of trustees; had become, in short, one of the most prominent and one of the most wealthy men in Georgia.

But his health had failed. His friends, their views perhaps colored by their loyalty to their leader, say that his passing from the world of business was pathetic. The pack turned on the lame lion, they say. He was forced out—though at his own figure. He came to Atlanta six or seven years ago and lived at No. 478 Peachtree street.

He sent a message to the board of directors who forced him out.

"There will come a time," he said, "when you will want my help."

That was five years ago.

He died at 12:15 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. At that minute, in Savannah, in Pensacola and in New Orleans 700 naval stores operators were in conference, their problem how to escape bankruptcy. They had no leader.

"He never was beaten," says his confidential man. "He doesn't know he's beaten yet."

'Boots and Saddles' for Seventeenth's Soldiers

Infantry Post Boasts a Crack Cavalry Squad

Daily Drills in Mounted Duty Are Held at Fort McPherson—Daring Horsemen Perform Startling Feats.

WRESTLING on horseback, a thrilling feat of horsemanship. Privates Voetick and Pryle of the Seventeenth are the contestants.

In this remarkable photograph one of the contestants has been dragged from his horse by his opponent and is clinging desperately to the bridle to keep from being thrown under his horse's hoofs.

It's "boots and saddles" at Fort McPherson nowadays, in spite of the fact that the Seventeenth is an infantry regiment and proud of it. The new order of military things includes a mounted detachment with every infantry regiment, and there are horse soldiers with the Seventeenth now as intrepid as ever were Colonel Roosevelt's Rough Riders.

Daily drills in mounted duty are held at the fort, particularly during the summer months, when the annual school of instruction is under way. The practice includes not only the manual of arms and field maneuvers, but real training in rough riding, wrestling on horseback, obstacle races and cross-country hikes.

Yesterday morning a squad of horsemen moved out on the drill ground. A party of admiring infantrymen watched them from the front porch of the barracks.

"I reckon you'll find some of the best riders in the army in that bunch," spoke out one of the watchers.

Also Carries Artillery.

In the squad were Privates Voetick, Todd, Purdue, Flynn, Williams, Pryde and Reynolds, picked horsemen all of them. At the fort they swear by these men for their ability to ride.

The mounted detachment carries also light artillery equipment, and it is believed that their assignment to service with the infantry has heightened the usefulness of that branch of the service considerably.

Lieutenant Supplee is in command of the mounted detachment, which is yet less than a year old. The men who serve as mounted infantrymen are picked for experience in horsemanship, and no recruits for this branch who have not the ability to handle their mounts under all circumstances.

The same squad of horsemen that were hailed as the best riders in the army were paired Wednesday afternoon for public exhibition of wrestling on horseback. Atlanta was vouchsafed the sight of a new sort of contest, and a thrilling new sport it was at that.

Wrestling Holds Used.

Time and again the wrestlers, locked in the well-known holds of orthodox wrestling, including everything from the hammer lock and half nelson to the new and deadly toe hold, spurred their horse one way or the other in the effort to throw one another to the ground.

Usually the clutches were not so satisfactory, the wrestlers getting their hands merely on the shirts or trousers of their adversaries. Then shirts were torn and trousers, too. In the case of the match between Privates Houston and Reynolds, Houston lost his shirt altogether, and emerged from a desperate clinch bared from the waist up. He blushed, and spurred his mount madly to the stables.

Promise of other matches in the future are held out by the authorities at the post.

MAYOR AVERS HE WILL LEAVE CITY DEBT FREE

Woodward Declares $700,000 Deficit He Faced on Entering Office Will Be Wiped Out.

"Atlanta will not owe one dollar at the end of my term. The $700,000 indebtedness when I took the oath of office will have been paid, and the improvements will not have been retarded to any great extent."

The above statement was made by Mayor Woodward after the conference Saturday afternoon of the Mayor, the Finance Committee and the chief clerk to the Comptroller, which was called by the Mayor to discuss ways and means of raising the extra $13,220.74 apportioned by the Finance Committee on unanticipated receipts.

Locks Financial Door.

"The action of the Supreme Court in the decision handed down in the crematory case gives me the power to lock the door on the finances of the city of Atlanta, and I intend to keep it locked except where expenditures are absolutely necessary," continued the Mayor.

"The Finance Committee, which is acting in accord with this decision and my wishes, will not appropriate one dollar except where the money is in sight to meet the obligation. It is my duty to see that not one obligation of the present Council will fall on the shoulders of the 1914 Council. In this way we will be able to start off the new year in good financial condition.

No Excuse for Debt.

"During my former term as Mayor I was forced to take hold with an indebtedness of approximately $350,000. This was paid before I retired, and I intend to see to it that no money that is not absolutely in sight shall be appropriated by the Finance Committee or the City Council."

The Mayor was convinced that this money could be raised and consented to its appropriation, but he put the committee on notice that in the future whatever money they appropriated they must show where it was coming from.

The meeting was indeed a friendly conference, and every member of the Finance Committee and the Mayor appeared well pleased with the results of the meeting.

HAUPTMANN WRITES PLAY OF MONTEZUMA'S REIGN

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Gerhart Hauptmann is writing a new drama, to be called "The White Saviour," and which deals with the introduction of Christianity into Mexico by the Spaniards under Cortez.

One of the principal characters is its King Montezuma. It is predicted that the play will be a striking piece of Christian symbolism and that it will have some remarkable scenic effects.

DEVICE TESTED TO STOP TRAIN DERAILMENTS

Atlanta and Montgomery Business Men and Railway Heads See Shepherd Invention.

In the presence of representatives from practically every railroad in the South, members of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and a delegation of 35 members of the Montgomery Business Men's League, the Shepherd automatic railroad switch was given an official test at Oakland City Saturday. The demonstration was made on a spur track of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, and among the most interested spectators was C. A. Wickersham, president of the road, who expressed delight at its operation.

The switch, the manufacture of which furnishes Atlanta's newest industry, worked perfectly. Its object is to remedy the open switch evil by closing the switch automatically after a train has passed into a siding. A locomotive and freight car were used in the test, a dozen runs being made through the switch.

M. L. Shepherd, of Montgomery and Atlanta, is the inventor of the test, and through the backing of the Business Men's League of Montgomery a $700,000 corporation has been formed for its manufacture. The name of the concern is the Shepherd Automatic Switch Company and the shop in which the switch used Saturday was made began operations here several weeks ago.

The device works on a combination of locked switch, guard rail and powerful coiled springs. The guard rail runs for a length of 80 feet parallel with the outer rail of the siding track. When entering the siding, the flange on the wheels forces a passage between the outer and guard rails, drawing the guard in about two inches. As the last wheel passes from between the guard and outer rails, the guard is jerked back in close connection with the rail, releasing the lock on the switch and causing it to close, thus leaving the main line clear.

Opening of the switch for the entry of a train into the siding may be handled by the engineer in throwing a lever on the locomotive, or by requiring one of the train crew to unlock the switch. The switch not only closes automatically after a train has entered the siding, but also closes immediately upon the train moving out of it.

Presentation of a silver loving cup to the inventor, Mr. Shepherd, by members of the Montgomery delegation added a pleasant touch to the occasion. General Counsel O. L. Holloway, Montgomery, made the presentation speech.

Whaddye Mean, We May Lose Our Dog?

Walter Taylor, Generalissimo of Crusade Against Curs, Starts Catchers Out Monday.

Walter Taylor, City Clerk, generalissimo of the crusade against stray dogs, issued emphatic instructions to the crews of his dog wagons to start out Monday morning. Blooded and Pomeranians and ring-tailed curs alike are to be impounded and chloroformed if they venture upon the streets or the alleys without a tag attached to their necks.

The tags are the most peculiar Atlanta ever has hung upon the necks of its dogs. A dog's head has been designed so as to form the figure "13" on the little brass disk. The tag is the "open sesame" to the streets of the city, and no dog will be spared who ventures forth without it.

Laundered Money Counterfeiting Bar

Bureau of Chemistry Urges Its Adoption Upon Secretary of Treasury for This Reason.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Detection of counterfeit money through laundering was to-day announced as an important factor in the fight to have Uncle Sam's bank notes starched and ironed before returning into circulation.

The Bureau of Chemistry has found that laundered money is almost identical with bank notes fresh from the hands of the printer and urges the adoption of the process upon the Secretary of the Treasury.

Buys a $4,000 Auto To Use Cheap Gas

When Ex-Senator Scott Has Burned 60,000 Gallons He Will Have Saved Cost of Car.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The house of Senator Nathan Bay Scott, of West Virginia, is divided against itself, with automobiles as they issue. The Senator and Mrs. Scott are devoted to each other. They attend the same dinners, theaters and social functions together, but they arrive and depart in separate motor cars. It came about this way:

The senator has been paying 22 cents a gallon for gasoline to propel the family machine. He discovered a place where the price was 17 cents. With much glee he informed Oscar, the family chauffeur, of his discovery and directed that Oscar purchase gasoline there.

Oscar demurred because the gasoline emporium was too far from the family mansion. Mrs. Scott backed him up. Whereupon Senator Scott bought himself a $4,000 machine acquired a chauffeur to navigate it and divorced himself from the old machine and Oscar.

After Senator Scott has burned 60,000 gallons of gasoline he will have saved the cost of the car. But he doesn't have to ride with Oscar.

Slim Garrison Left At Fort McPherson

Eight Companies of Seventeenth Infantry Assigned to Duty at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Fort McPherson will have but a slender garrison after to-day, with eight companies of the Seventeenth Infantry assigned to duty at Camp Perry, Ohio, in connection with the national rifle shoot of the State guardsmen. Five companies will leave Atlanta early to-day to join three companies of the regiment already established at the camp.

The regular ranks of the eight companies are swelled to 65 men each by assignment of men from the other companies, leaving less than 200 soldiers in Atlanta out of the regiment's total field strength of about 700.

The soldiers assigned to duty in Ohio will go with Major Holloway, of the Third Battalion, in command. They will remain at Camp Perry for about a month.

Camp Meetin' Hymns Jar Starnes' Nerves

Atlanta Organist Leads Revolt Against 'Throw Out the Life Line' and Others Like It.

Dr. Percy J. Starnes, former city organist of Atlanta, is leading a fight at the National Convention of Organists at Asbury Park, N. J., against the old-time songs and hymns that "jingle and jingle."

Included in the hymns that are slated to be placed under the ban are "Throw Out the Life Line," "The King's Business," and "Hallelujah, Thine the Glory."

The motto of Dr. Starnes and his followers is that anything with a "ringle or a jingle," no matter who wrote it or what its effect may be in revivals and camp meetings, should be omitted from the hymnals and sung no more.

Warrants Served on Four Moose Officers

Dictator of Birmingham Lodge Criticises Coroner's Jury That Probed Initiation Deaths.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 9.—John P. Abbott, dictator of the Birmingham Lodge of Loyal Order of Moose, issued a statement this afternoon, following the serving of warrants on four officers, charging manslaughter in the second degree, in which he criticised the findings of the Coroner's jury that investigated the deaths of Christopher Guzin and Donald Kenny, who were killed during their initiation July 24.

Abbott says the jury only heard expert testimony instead of getting after facts.

Say City Was Run On Bankrupt Plan

Auditors Criticise Tiedeman Administration of Savannah as Solely a Vote-Getting System.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—That the city of Savannah, a public service corporation serving 100,000 persons was run during the two years that ended December 31 on principles that would bankrupt a corner grocery store is the substance of a report of special auditors which the present administration empowered to investigate the finances of the city.

It is charged that the Tiedeman administration handled the city's affairs solely for the purpose of securing votes for the men in power during the two years covered by the investigation. The report criticises practically every department in the city.

POISONING FROM FOOD

Every Bite May Poison—All Could Be Methuselahs If We Did Not Shorten Life by Self Poisoning.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system. This is termed Autotoxemia, or Self-Poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition result. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and bowels, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and with the consciousness that your health is safeguarded against any indiscretion in eating.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. No other liver medicine is equal to it; don't take the inferior substitute that may be offered. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT, 25c. If yours can not supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage prepaid.—(Advt.)

Twin Boys' Skin Is Turning to Black

Eighteen-Month-Old Babies Are Suffering From Rare Malady Known as Hodgkin's Disease.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Eighteen-month-old twin boys in the Children's Hemeopathic Hospital are suffering from one of the rarest diseases known to medical science. It has changed their color from white to black. The disease is pseudo leucaemia, or Hodgkin's disease, and it is an affection of the lymphatic glands in which the number of white blood corpuscles is increased and the red blood corpurcles greatly diminished.

The twins are the children of Anthony Amato and they were born eighteen months ago. They were then white. Then their skin began growing dark.

Odd Nubbin of Maize Produced at Stockade Farm Shown at Police Station.

The city stockade has produced a freak in the shape of a five-fingered ear of corn.

The fingered ear is on exhibition at the police station. It was grown on the stockade farm, and was sent to the police station by Superintendent Tom Lanford.

Fight Forecast on Lynch in Typo Meet

Enlargement of Executive Committee Again To Be Issue at Nashville Convention.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 9.—Stormy times are predicted in the International Typographical Union when the fight comes before the annual convention, opening here Monday, on the question of revising the executive policy of the organization. This question precipitated a lively fight at Cleveland last year when the San Francisco delegation led an unsuccessful move to enlarge the executive committee from three to twenty members to be elected from as many districts.

The present board is composed of President James M. Lynch, second Vice President Hugo Miller and Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays. The anti-administration forces will be led, it is said, by Fred Barker, of Spokane, who made the unsuccessful race for president against Lynch.

E. L. Rhodes Given Party by Employees

Home of Atlanta Merchant at Austell Scene of Merry Gathering on His 50th Birthday.

Ernest L. Rhodes, president of the Ernest L. Rhodes Company, was tendered a surprise party on the anniversary of his fiftieth birthday by the employees of the firm at his home at Austell, Ga.

A silver service, consisting of twelve silver plates and a silver serving spoon, was presented Mr. Rhodes in a speech by Claude Jones, ice president of the company, as a gift from the employees. A watermelon cutting upon the lawn was an added pleasure. Mr. Rhodes' mother, Mrs. F. P. Rhodes, of Lexington, Va., assisted Mrs. Rhodes in entertaining the guests.

Waltz and Two-Step Enough for Cordele

Chaperones Put Ban on Hugs, Tangos, Trots and Other New Steps.

CORDELE, Aug. 9.—The bunny hug, tango, turkey trot and other modern dances are entirely too immodest in the opinion of the fair sex of Cordele who are accustomed to the waxed floors. Like the slit skirt, such dances will probably not come in popular favor at any early time in this city.

Chaperons at local balls recently have positively forbidden the new dances, and the young folk, no matter how ardently, but perhaps secretly, they may desire to introduce them, must let the waltz and two-step still suffice.

Candler Is Honored at Agnes Scott College

Handsome Iron Gate a Memorial to Him

Candler Memorial Gate at Agnes Scot College.

A handsome iron gate has been erected at the north entrance to the campus of Agnes Scott College as a memorial to the late Milton A. Candler, of Decatur, for years a trustee of this famous institution.

The gateway is 36 feet wide and has a clearance of 9 feet to the top of the gate, on which, in letters of bronze over a foot tall, is written: "Agnes Scott College." The posts are cast and hte gate's palings are of steel.

On the memorial tablet, which is on the left-hand post, there appears this wording:

"This gateway erected as a memorial of Milton A. Candler, a colaborer in the building of Agnes Scott College and for many years one of its faithful trustees, 1913."

Mr. Candler, whose name is honored, belongs to the famous Candler family of Georgia. He graduated at the University of Georgia and served with signal distinction in the Confederate cavalry. He married in Decatur, and is survived by several children. After being admitted to the bar, he entered upon the practice of law in the firm of Candler & Thompson. He represented the Fifth Congressional District for three terms in Congress and declined to have his name presented at the convention for nomination a fourth time. He was intensely interested in education, a strong Presbyterian, and has been referred to as one of the purest and strongest men the South has ever known.

Agnes Scott College numbers among its valued possessions other handsome memorials. Agnes Scott College is a memorial to the mother of the late Colonel G. W. Scott, and Rebecca Scott Hall is a memorial to the wife of Colonel G. W. Scott. The Jennie Inman Hall is a memorial to the deceased wife of S. M. Inman, of Atlanta. Lowry Science Hall is a gift of Colonel R. J. Lowry, the well-known Atlanta banker, and Carnegie Library is a gift of the famous Scotch Presbyterian, famous for his gifts of libraries.

ministration with demands for information.

At the conclusion of the conference shortly before 11 o'clock it was learned that the status of Envoy Lind is as follows:

1. That he has no definite proposal to make to Huerta or anyone else.

2. He will go right on to Mexico City, probably Sunday.

3. He will confer with American Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy and communicate the facts he learns to President Wilson, who will then decide the course to be followed.

The facts show that Uncle Sam has called the bluff of Huerta "that Lind must come bearing recognition or be regarded as a pernicious foreigner." President Wilson's Envoy will carry out the task with which he was charged when he sailed for Mexico, and Huerta and his Government will be held responsible for his protection in carrying out his task.

Held a Counter Blast.

The action of the President in summoning the Foreign Relations Committee was made public in a significant manner, and was construed everywhere as a counter blast to the irritating actions of Huerta. These were denounced to-day by competent State Department officials as intolerable and as those of a reckless politician who is trying to force intervention or war on the United States.

Aside from that official view of the case it was said the President planned for the first time to-day to place the whole Mexican case before both Democrats and Republicans of the powerful Senate committee which has primarily to do with treaties and the recognition of foreign governments and the formulation of new policies.

This invitation of the President was also an answer to the statements by Republicans—and Democrats, too—that both parties in the Senate and House were left in the dark as to the negotiations of Mr. Bryan and the White House in Mexico.

State Department officials intimated that the action of the President in summoning this important committee of Congress could not be separated from the threats of Huerta and the absolute necessity of letting Huerta know that this Government would protect Mr. Lind if there were any doubt at all as to Huerta's ability or will to give the President's personal friend and representative protection.

Diplomatic Move Not New.

There is nothing new in diplomatic usage in the case of a Government which asserts it will hold another Government responsible personally for its personal envoy. The previous Administration announced to one Government that it would hold its President personally responsible for injury to an American citizen should he suffer without fair trial.

The present Administration notified the Federal officials at Chihuahua that they would be held responsible for miscarriages of justice in a case in which the State Department was assured that American citizens had committed no wrong.

In the mind of officials who do not feel themselves bound to make public the acts of the Government, even when Huerta makes his acts public, the impression amounts to a certainty that Charg d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy has been instructed to say on his own behalf that this Government would demand a personal accounting should the American envoy suffer any injury.

These officials say that any persistence in wrong toward Lind by the Huerta Government would be a contingency too fearful to contemplate.

Awaits Lind's Report.

Secretary Bryan corrected the impression to-day that it was proposed to give out simultaneously in Mexico City and at Washington "the proposals" which Envoy Lind is bearing to Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy. Mr. Bryan said that the official statement showed that the purpose of the President was to make it plain that he would only announce a "new policy" with Mexico whenever he had reached one after the arrival of Mr. Lind in Mexico.

Senator William Alden Smith charged on the floor of the Senate that a paid attorney and lobbyist of the Constitutionalist party in Mexico had the ear of the State Department and was attempting to influence the attitude of the United States toward Mexico.

The charges of Senator Smith caused a sensation on the floor of the nation's highest legislative body.

"I say," said Senator Smith, with warmth, "that Sherburne G. Hopkins, an attorney of this city, paid counsel for the Constitutionalists, who drew $50,000 from the Madero administration for services has had the ear of the State Department in the past and present administrations. Herr Summerfeldt, a German citizen, personal friend of President Madero and of his widow, for two years has been lobbying to influence American action in Mexico and is now in Washington assisting in a propaganda on behalf of the Constitutionalists."

Democrats immediately began an effort to stifle discussion of the Mexican question. Senator Smith would not be choked off.

"I claim," he retorted to Democratic protests, "that this attorney has attempted to influence the Department of State. I believe he had much to do with the removal of Ambassador Wilson. If the Senate wants proof, let it summon these two men and expose this junta."

Bryan's Position Questioned.

Senator James characterized the statements of Senator Smith as a serious charge against the State Department. Senator Swanson wanted to know why the matter had not been brought up in the Committee on Foreign Relations when Secretary Bryan was present, instead of in the open Senate.

"I said the State Department, not the Secretary," replied Mr. Smith.

"Well, the Senator knows the Secretary runs the department, retorted Mr. Swanson, warmly.

"I have heard it so said, but I am not sure of it," said Mr. Smith.

Chairman Overman, of the Lobby Committee, insisted that Mr. Smith should bring the matter before his committee. Mr. Smith denied the authority of the committee and declared that what he had to say would be submitted on the floor of the Senate.

"It is my opinion," interjected John Sharp Williams, "that there is an organized, syndicated effort with money behind it to bring about intervention in Mexico. The editorials of all the big papers have a suspicious sameness that makes it evident there is a concerted effort with money back of it. It is time we should pause. I do not feel even brave when talking about war with Mexico, a country disrupted and torn with dissensions."

Mr. Smith said his remarks were called forth by misleading statements printed in the Record concerning the Constitutionalists and he was not willing these reports should stand unchallenged.

It was time for the truth to come out, Mr. Smith declared. He said his purpose was to make public on Monday the report of his special committee that investigated conditions along the border, but he subsequently agreed to bring it up in committee first.

Senator Crawford, Republican, counseled moderation of speech in discussing the Mexican question, and by common consent the discussion ended.

At the morning session of the Foreign Relations Committee the Mexican question was referred to only incidentally. If Senator Bacon had anything special to bring up he postponed it because of to-night's White House conference.

MEXICO'S REPLY FAILS TO ASSURE ENVOY LIND OF ADDED PROTECTION

Special Cable to The American.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Replying to-night to a message from Secretary of State Bryan calling attention to reports of threats made against the life of Envoy Lind, Foreign Minister Aldape reiterates the position of the Government in respect to mediation.

Senor Aldape's statement reads:

"Answering your telegram to President Huerta the rumors mentioned are absolutely without foundation. Mr. Lind, like any foreigner, may pass through the country without being subject to any molestation.

"American citizens, like other foreigners, have enjoyed, and will continue to enjoy, the most complete guarantees on the part of the Mexican government and people. All are under the protection of our laws, and the case of Mr. Lind will not modify our intentions and precedents.

"Furthermore, there should exist neither fear nor anxiety respecting the security of foreigners, for which there likewise is no foundation.

"Respecting mediation, of which mention has been made, the government of Mexico already has made its declarations."

No Demonstration as Lind Reaches Mexico.

Special Cable to The American.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 9.—John Lind, personal envoy of President Wilson, arrived here to-day on the United States battleship Louisiana. He had sailed for Mexico from Galveston on the New Hampshire, but was transferred before his arrival here.

There was no excitement among the Mexicans in Vera Cruz over the arrival of the American envoy, whose appearance at Mexico City is expected to bring a culmination of the diplomatic crisis between Huerta and the United States Government.

According to reports current when Mr. Lind arrived here, the American State Department plans to hold him here until Sunday before starting on the final stage of his journey to Mexico City. This trip by train will require twelve hours.

Mr. Lind arrived before he was expected and took by surprise William W. Canada, United States Consul. Mr. Canada took immediate steps to welcome Mr. Lind, and it was understood that the two would confer with Bayard Hale, who has been President Wilson's personal representative.

Though the Mexicans showed no excitement over Mr. Lind's arrival, a thrill was caused among the American colony when it became known that the following wireless dispatch had been flashed ahead of the ship bearing him:

"Governor Lind wishes to see the United States Consul and Admiral Fletcher immediately upon his arrival at Vera Cruz."

No explanation for this conference could be secured before the arrival of Mr. Lind. With the arrival of the Louisiana and New Hampshire here the United States has a formidable naval representation.

When Mr. Lind was seen on board the Louisiana he was reticent as to his plans of action. He intimated, however, that his departure for Mexico City might be deferred until Monday.

Though there was no demonstration when the Louisiana came into port, a large crowd gathered as soon as it became generally known that the envoy was on board. Considerable disappointment was expressed when it became known that he would not land immediately. Whether this decision was reached because of threats against the envoy's life is not known, but such is the current belief.

Lind In No Danger in Mexico, Says DeLa Barra.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Francisco Leon de la Barra, Mexican Ambassador to France, who became Provisional President of Mexico when Diaz was deposed, to-day said that John Lind, President Wilson's personal representative, would be shown every consideration and afforded ample protection in Mexico. Talk of mob violence, he said, is not to be accepted as representing the views of the intelligent people of Mexico.

"Mexico is facing a grave crisis," said Ambassador de la Barra, "but I know my countrymen would be the first to resent any insult that might be offered to Governor Lind."

OIL LETTERS KILLED HIM POLITICALLY, SAYS FORAKER

Exposes by William Randolph Hearst Responsible for Downfall, Declares Former Senator Before Senate Lobby Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Former Senator Foraker admitted to the Senate Lobby Committee to-day publication by William Randolph Hearst of the famous Standard Oil letters killed Foraker's chances for re-election to the Senate in 1908.

After identifying a letter received from Martin M. Mitchell, the confessed ex-lobbyist, making a report of political activities in Ohio in Foraker's behalf, the former Senator said:

"It was the morning of the day Mr. Hearst's disclosure was made public. An attack had been made on me by Mr. Hearst which destroyed my chances of election, saying I had acted as counsel for the Standard Oil Company. This had created a sentiment in our State very prejudicial to me. I continued as a candidate in the campaign only because to retire from it after I had become a candidate would look like an admission that there was some justification for the attack, whereas there was not any."

Senator Foraker said Muhall, whom he had known thirty years, greatly overestimated his own importance.

No Aid from N. A. M.

Foraker said he had never received aid from the National Association of Manufacturers and while he received a fee of $500 for the part he played in the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1896, he was not in the employ of either David Lamar or Edward Lauterbach in an injunction case against the Union Pacific in 1903.

The House Investigating Committee opened its probe with introduction of correspondence showing the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers in fighting labor legislation in Congress and various attempts to have "conservative" men named as members of House committees.

Discussing the recent sundry civil bill, with its provision prohibiting the expenditure of certain funds for the prosecution of farmers and labor unions under the Sherman law, James A. Emery, counsel of the N. A. M., wrote to President John Kirby, Jr., of the association, on March 7, 1913, after President Taft had vetoed the bill:

"I want to emphasize as hard as I can the importance of lining up for a tremendous demonstration when this bill reaches President Wilson, as it undoubtedly will, with the same provision in it. You will then have an early opportunity to decide whether the glittering Democratic motto, 'Equal right for all and special privilege for none,' means anything or whether the Administration has surrendered completely or will merely turn over the Department of Labor.

Objection to Secretary Wilson.

"I note, by the way, your reference to a letter from C. W. Post on the question of a protest over the appointment of Wilson (Secretary of Labor). A protest on this subject is a mere waste of breath, and on the whole I am inclined to think the whole purpose of this department will be shown up quicker with the unions in control of it than in any other way. Gompers will run it characteristically with a high hand, and if the whole thing does not smell to Heaven within a year I shall be very much astonished.

"By that time Democratic simplicity will probably mean a union label on the White House stationery and the President conferring with the Waiters' Union over the appointment of his steward. At present we have nothing more startling in Jeffersonian simplicity than the news Mrs. Bryan is making a new suit for the Secretary of State, and cakes and ginger ale will be served at the dinner for the British Ambassador. Toothpicks will, of course, be an after dinner course at all Cabinet receptions, and the demand for dress suits will be confined to waiters in the hotels."

In this same letter Emery advised Kirby, "If you have any idea Taft would have vetoed this bill of his own motion, get over it. A list of public men who had 'pie' in this $113,000,000 appropriation bill included many prominent men in both Houses."

Pavlowa Strikes Her Partner; Stops Dance

Quarrel With Novikoff on London Stage Is Like Falling Out With Mordkin.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Pavlowa caused a sensation at the Palace Theater tonight by an open quarrel with her dancing partner, Novikoff, the incident being parallel with her rupture with Mordkin last year.

While dancing Adagio, Pavlowa suddenly hit Novikoff a smart blow on the shoulder. Novikoff immediately left the stage while Pavlowa walked off by the opposite side, the orchestra finishing the piece to an empty stage. Pavlowa afterward performed two solo dances, but Novikoff did not appear again.

Organ Concert for Merchant Visitors

Charles A. Sheldon Has Arranged Light Program Especially for Benefit of Visitors.

Business men in attendance on the Southern Merchants' Convention will be given a free organ concert at the Auditorium by Charles A. Sheldon, under the auspices of the Atlanta Music Festival Association Sunday afternoon. The entertainment was inspired by the fact that a great number of visitors are here for the convention who might otherwise find a long, hot Sunday afternoon rather dull.

A program of light and popular airs befitting a warm day has been arranged, including a series of variations of the old melody, "Old Folks at Home," which, it is pronounced, will be the feature. Marches, popular interpretative bits, and but a single classical number, the prelude to "Lohengrin," will make up the program.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—While a mob gathered at the county jail at Sylvania bent on lynching four negroes believed to be implicated in the murder of A. J. Joyner, Sheriff Joyner, a relative of the dead man, secretly took the prisoners out of jail and rushed them to Savannah.

The negroes are Chris Green, George Ledbetter, Felix Mitchell and William Lowery. They will be held here until it is thought it is safe to return them to Sylvania. Feeling is running high there now.

LOS ANGELES TO AID IN EXAMINER SITE DEDICATION

Civic Bodies and Officials to Participate in Cornerstone Laying of Great Newspaper Plant.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—On Monday at 12 o'clock will commence the ceremony of the placing of the cornerstone of the new Los Angeles Examiner building at Eleventh and Broadway.

Because the spirit of California has made this building possible, part of this ceremony will be the raising of the California Bea flag over the great edifice now already partically completed. The event will mark the progress of a great newspaper in a great city. Planned under the auspices of the Advertising Club of Los Angeles, and representative business men, the program for the cornerstone laying reaches broad and comprehensive proportions.

Great Chorus to Sing.

The music of four great massed bands will sound patriotically at the appearance of the flag, Madame Esther Palliser, the famous prima donna, will sing the new song of Southland progress written for the occasion by Miles Overholt, and a chorus of 100 trained voices will mark the laying of the cornerstone.

From the lips of one who has made a great mark in America's history will come the final address of faith in Los Angeles and its people—William Randolph Hearst.

There will come, too, during this ceremony a novel procedure calculated to remind the younger generation of the event. A motion picture will be taken of the event, showing the ceremony and surrounding trong. Immediately after the picture has been taken, the film will be developed with all haste and within a few hours a hermetically sealed canister will be placed in the cornerstone.

To William Randolph Hearst will be presented by Mayor Rose the silver trowel of the cornerstone laying. The opening words of the ceremony will be spoken by the Rev. Charles Edward Locke, who will be presented by Ernest Ingold. Then James R. H. Wagner will come to the platform and present to A. W. Kinney, president of the Chamber of Commerce on behalf of the people of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Examiner, the California Bear flag.

Mr. Hearst to Speak.

After Mr. Kinney's reply to this, the Rev. George Donahue, acting for Bishop Conaly, will speak. The Rt. Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, Episcopal Bishop, of Los Angeles, will give an address. After the speech of Mr Hearst, Dr. Sigmund Hecht will say the closing word.

Before the ceremony at the new building, an escort with Chief of Police Sebastian acting as grand marshal, will proceed from Central Park to the old Examiner building at Fifth and Broadway. Here Mayor Rose, the speakers and Mr. Hearst will join the party and be escorted down Broadway to The Examiner's new site and the scene of the cornerstone laying.

Husband Says She Kissed Count's Foot

Wife Brings Counter Charge That He Is Unduly Friendly With Stepmother.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Counter suits have been instituted in divorce proceedings by Harold D. Johnson, of the Colonial Life Insurance Company, and his wife, Mrs. Harriet L. Johnson, in the Supreme Court at White Plains.

The husband alleges that his wife is so infatuated with a certain Italian count that she frequently kissed his foot.

Mrs. Johnson alleges undue intimacy on the part of her husband with her stepmother, who is designated in the complaint as "one Anna J. R."

Johnson has entered a general denial to his wife's charges, while the wife's attorney, Mirabeau Towns, ridiculed the foot-kissing episodes complained of by Johnson.

Steamer's Crew Deny Sighting 'Titanic'

Officers Say Wreckage They Saw Was Sixty Miles South of Disaster Scene.

Special Cable to The American.

SOUTH SHIELD, Aug. 9.—Officers of the steamer Lucilline, which has arrived here, deny the report that they saw the Titanic wreck apparently resting on top of a ledge of rocks. What they saw during their trip from Bordeaux to Philadelphia was some wreckage consisting of a part of a mast and some gear that was probably attached to a submerged object. They were 60 miles south of the scene of the Titanic disaster, although in the same longitude. They discredit the supposition that the Titanic rests upon a submerged reef.

LEGISLATURE TO LINE UP BEHIND SLATON'S BILLS

Complete Change of Attitude Makes It Probable Governor's Program Will Carry.

Completely changing its attitude toward the reform measures advocated by Governor Slaton, the Georgia Legislature is preparing to line up solidly behind him and put through a portion, at least, of the program of constructive legislation that he advocated in his platform and in his messages.

Adminstration bills that were defeated last week, following the fight ensuing on the attempt to bring out the Hixon-Searcy liquor bill, and the filibuster that frustrated it, again will be placed on the House calendar before the Legislature adjourns Thursday.

The forces of the administration, led by Speaker Burwell and the members of the Ways and Means Committee, will center their efforts on three bills that were defeated last week. These bills offer the people of the State an opportunity to vote upon constitutional amendments that would, if passed, put the taxation system of the State upon a solid business basis, and that would relieve the unfortunate conditions that have arisen since the State has found itself unable to pay the country school teachers.

Two of these amendments provide that the school levy each year shall be limited to 2 1-2 mills, and that the pension levy shall not exceed 1 1-2 mills. The third provides for an additional tax levy of 1 mill in 1915 and 1-2 mill in 1916, which would not materially increase the taxes of any property owner in the State.

Introducion Ill-Timed.

Neither of the three bills was defeated overwhelmingly, each lacking only a few votes of receiving the required two-thirds majority. The bills were introduced at an unfortunate time, immediately after the defeat of the Kidd resolution calling the Hixon-Searcy bill out of committee, and many of the extreme prohibitionists in the House allied themselves with the opponents of any kind of tax reform and voted against the measure, through a mistaken idea that Speaker Burwell had not acted according to the rules in declaring the Kidd resolution out of order.

Within the past few days, however, the warring factions have gotten together, and now Mr. Kidd stands almost alone in his desire to get the Hixon-Searcy bill out for action at this session, it being a generally accepted fact that the bill could not by any chance pass the House, and that its introduction would only result in tying up the House and rendering impossible legislation of any kind.

Representative Akin, of Glenn County, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and a member of the Rules Committee, said Saturday that the committee probably would try to bring the school and pension levies before the House Monday or Tuesday. Leaders in the House declare that both the bills have an excellent chance of passing, inasmuch as there is nothing in them to offend the enemies of tax reform, as they neither lower nor raise the present rate of taxation. They merely provide for a businesslike disposition of the revenue.

Seek Reconsideration.

There is more opposition to the proposal for an additional tax levy than there is to the other two bills. An effort probably will be made Monday or Tuesday to induce the House to reconsider its action in defeating this measure, and if this can be done, strenuous efforts will be made to secure its passage when it again is brought before the House. The friends of this bill, if they can secure its reconsideration, probably will gain many votes with the argument that no action the House could take on it would actually call for the additional levy. Its passage by the House would merely give the people of the State an opportunity to vote whether they wished to increase the taxes a small amount in order to pay its teachers, or continue to stand out as the only State in the United that permits its employees to remain unpaid for six and eight months at a time.

The Senate has about cleaned up its work, and is waiting for the action of the House on important measures. The Sheppard substitute to the Lipscomb bill that recently passed the House probably will be taken up by the Senate within a day or two, and indications are that it will be defeated. The Senate committee that considered the bill has prepared a substitute to the Sheppard substitute which provides for a State Tax Commissioner and County Boards of Equalization. This probably will be passed by the Senate.

EDNA GOODRICH, beautiful American actress, who discovers that no duke is available for her to marry.

No Duke Available For Edna Goodrich

London Society Much Amused by Actress' Announcement She Is to Wed Peer.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Great amusement has been created by a cabled report of Edna Goodrich's announcement that she is to marry an English duke.

"It is a pretty story," comments The London Daily Mirror, "but of the 26 dukes, nineteen are married and five are widowers, the youngest being 67 years old.

"Of the remaining two, the actress couldn't have met them on a houseboat at Henley."

Of course there is the Duke of Westminster, whose penchant for charming actresses is well known, but he is not free to marry again, not yet.

CONFESSES TO SLAYING WHEN REFUSED PARDON

SAVANNAH, Aug. 9.—Frank Collier, a negro whose application for pardon was refused by the Prison Commission in Atlanta, to-day broke down and made a complete confession of his responsibility in the murder of Lewis Robinson, another negro, pleading only that Robinson was attempting to cut him with a knife. Collier has heretofore maintained innocence.

CERTIFIED MILK DEPOTS TO BE OPENED SOON

Dairymen Eager to Learn Details of Plan of Commission of Medical Association.

Members of the Certified Milk Commission during the past few days have been approached by dairymen from all parts of Fulton County who are much interested in the movement to provide certified milk.

As outlined in the project, certified milk will command possibly 15 cents per quart. This price has been decided upon by the commission, which was recently appointed by the local medical association. At least three certified milk depots will be opened in Atlanta in a short time. The qualifications of milk necessary to receive certification are many and are based on rigid hygienic conditions of milkers, cows, dairies and milk depots. The cows will all be examined by doctors to ascertain whether or not any tuberculosis infection is present.

Certified milk, it is stated, will keep in cold storage for a period of 30 days. Dr. S. A. Visanska, who has been active in the movement to gain certified milk, stated Saturday that Louisville now had a number of certified milk depots which were doing a thriving business.

"Certified milk was introduced in Louisville several years ago," said Dr. Visanska. "At that time there were only two certified depots, but as the number of certified depots grew, disease of all nature has decreased, especially as regards infants.

"On August 23 and 24 the State Dairy Association will have an exhibit in Atlanta. The exhibit is called the Southern Railroad Dairy Instruction Association. Farmers and dairymen attending will be fully instructed as to just what constitutes ideal conditions which promote health."

PLEDGE OF GOVERNMENT AID IN MOVING CROPS EASES MONEY CONDITIONS

South and West Give Hearty Approval to Secretary McAdoo's Policy, but the East Looks Askance at Proposal—Low Balance in Treasury To Be Result.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Monetary conditions have been strengthened by the Government's proposition to supply treasury funds to aid the movement of crops next fall. The business outlook is steadily brightening, but the situation is not entirely free from uneasiness owing to the insistent demand for new capital in this country and Europe.

In the domestic market the total of new issues recorded for July was over $95,000,000, an increase of more than $64,000,000 compared with a year ago. A considerable portion of this sum, about $60,000,000, was issued to take up maturing obligations, and the maturities this month are expected to reach nearly $25,000,000, so that the net amount of new capital applications must be considerably below a year ago.

The phenomenal report of the steel corporation had much to do with the strengthening confidence in the general market. The large receipts of grain induced by good crop conditions and close money will furnish increased traffic to the railroads, stimulate exports, provide a good supply of exchange, strengthen our credit abroad and make gold exports more difficult, if not impossible. In fact, before long this country probably will be importing gold.

Secretary McAdoo's announcement that he would place from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 of treasury funds in the national banks of the South and West created the same impression on New York bankers as his statement June 12 that he would not hesitate to issue $500,000,000 of emergency currency under the Aldrich-Vreeland act if the banks so desired. On that occasion the Eastern bankers considered the Secretary's announcement uncalled for and likely to create misgivings in the minds of many regarding financial conditions. Worse than that, the statement was thought to be ill-advised at the time, as it might undo all the good that had been done by the preaching of economy and retrenchment on the part of leading bankers.

The South and West, however, looked upon Mr. McAdoo's plan as beneficial to the agricultural districts in relieving the strain on finance at a critical period. Not only bankers, but prominent merchants and manufacturers, commended the Government's move. A concrete opinion of the policy announced was that it came at an opportune moment and averted a period of stringency by the application of sound judgment.

Acceptance of commercial paper by the Government established a precedent. The wording of section 5153 of the Revised Statutes providing that the Secretary of the Treasury shall accept "United States bonds and otherwise" as security for the deposit of Government funds has been the subject of much controversy. Prior to 1902 all public funds carried with national banks had been secured by United States bonds exclusively. References to the Congressional Record disclosed the fact that the framers of the national banking act in 1864 intended that United States bonds and, if necessary, additional security in the shape of personal bonds were to be offered by the depository banks. For years afterward this was the interpretation of the law.

In 1902, however, Secretary Shaw, among his other innovations in the administration of the Treasury, began to accept other bonds besides United States bonds from depository banks. He took the ground that the wording of the act clothed him with the requisite authority to do this. His decision provoked criticism at the time from those who contended that he had placed a distorted construction upon the statute. It was, they said, as though the law read "United States bonds or otherwise." Again in 1906 Secretary Shaw resorted to this expedient to relieve the monetary strain.

In 1907 Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou, in the throes of the panic, followed his predecessor's example and received territorial, State, municipal and railroad bonds as security. But after the panic the Government began to draw down its balances in the banks and order those bonds to be taken up first that were known as "other bonds."

There is just as much merit in accepting commercial paper against Treasury deposits as accepting paper as security for circulation. Especially in the present condition of the commercial paper market this may contribute relief to the situation. In this respect it may demonstrate the ability of the proposed new currency system where the intended circulation will be based upon paper, and this feature is pleasing to students of finance.

The general funds of the United States Treasury at the end of July showed total assets of $307,000,000. This includes the $58,200,000 of United States funds in national bank depositories. Deducting current liabilities of $170,900,000 makes the net balance in the general fund $131,000,000. This figure does not represent the free available surplus which the Secretary could draw upon for making further deposits in the banks. As $58,000,000 is already in the banks, the Treasury has actually free in its possession $73,000,000. From this is to be deducted the balance in the Treasury offices, representing limited tender or practically unavailable silver bullion and subsidiary silver coin approximately $24,000,000. There is, therefore, about $49,000,000 actually available in the Treasury of the United States for further deposits in the banks.

The last time the Treasury's working balance was reduced to uncomfortable proportions was during the 1907 panic. In November of that year the working balance at one time fell to approximately $5,000,000. On that occasion, however, the Government had as much as $260,000,000 in the depository banks.

Unimportant Price Changes in Stocks

Canadian and Union Pacific Are Leaders in Weakness—Metropolitan Preferred Is Strongest.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Stocks were generally quiet to-day. Attendance on the floor was small and traders were apathetic. Canadian Pacific and Union Pacific were the leaders in weakness here and abroad. Metropolitan preferred was the only one of the ordinary active issues to show any degree of strength. Erie's report for the year aroused favorable comment.

Of the news factors, the Mexican situation was the most interesting, because of suggestions that violence might be expected in Mexico City inside of twenty-four hours.

Before the close the market showed a hardening tendency, but price changes were unimportant.

The steel tonnage figures given out shortly after noon showed, as was expected, a large decrease. The falling off for July amounted to 407,961 tons, bringing the aggregate of orders on July 31 down to 5,339,316 tons.

News and Notes Of Grain Crops

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Speculation has drifted from the wheat pit over into corn. All the big players of the country are to be seen in the pit presided over by Andrew Brennan, and they have found that it is only necessary to make purchases of this grain on weak spots and await an opportunity to rake in a handsome profit on the advance. The crop reports from the corn belt have continued to show further and marked deterioration and not only the city speculator but also the countryman has come into the market on a large scale and on the buying side.

* * *

Such big men in the Southwest as Jacob Schreiner, Sr., J. T. Milliken and others have purchased goodly quantities of corn at Chicago owing to the burning up of the crop in their immediate vicinity. The speculative world at Kansas City has taken on corn at Chicago and sold it at a profit. The same may be said of New York and Baltimore speculators. Even the speculators at Minneapolis, who seldom know the price of corn or the action of the market, have taken to the bull side of that cereal and made money accordingly.

* * *

The losers are scattered from one end of the country to the other and they have been largely men who expected to be able to secure the actual corn for delivery, but this they have been unable to do. Foreigners have taken a whirl in corn and they have lost heavily. Wall street won early and lost later. The greater the crop losses throughout the belt the tighter the holders grasp the corn now in the cribs on the farms and in country elevators.

* * *

The wheat market has narrowed down to small proportions because of the falling off in the export demand for that grain and the fact that millers are no longer to be seen at Chicago as buyers. Millers in the interior are now enabled to secure all the grain needed at home and this condition will continue for some time to come.

Macon Cotton Plan Barred by Arkansas

'Hold for 15 Cents' Movenfent Fails to Get Past 'Blue Sky' Law of State.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., Aug. 9.—The Southern States Cotton Corporation, with headquarters in Macon, Ga., and which promises to pay farmers 15 cents per pound for their cotton, can not do business in Arkansas under its present contract form, according to State Auditor Coffman, who to-day, under the "blue sky" law, refused to grant it a license.

H. S. Mobley, president of the Farmers' Union of Arkansas, asked if, under the contracts as offered in this State, the farmer would be guaranteed 15 cents per pound for cotton out of the assets of the company or would have to look to the "proceeds of the sale of the cotton" for his pay. He also asked if the farmer would not stand to lose on the cotton held by the corporation and for which "script" had been issued unless cotton itself should bring 15 cents per pound.

Attorney General Moose stated he could not see that the company's contracts bound it to pay 15 cents for cotton for which "script" had been issued unless "proceeds of the sale of the cotton" should meet this amount.

President Mobley to-night issued warning to the farmers of the State, declaring the contract is "highly deceptive" and, "in the hands of persons who might not be disposed to deal friendly with farmers," might cause the farmers loss.

Pig Iron Sales Fall To Smaller Volume

Price of $11 Per Ton Likely To Be Firm for the Rest of the Year.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Aug. 9.—Pig iron selling still is going on, though not in as great volume as was noted last week, as the quotations have landed on an average of $11 per ton, No. 2 foundry.

The make is holding its own as compared to what it was during the past week. Figures as to production for the month of July show little difference as compared to the month previous. The manufacturers are looking to a curtailment of production.

Pig iron being sold now is mainly for delivery during the last three months of the year, and some for export. It is understood that more than 22,000 tons of pig iron will be exported from the Southern territory during the balance of the year. There is to be considerable iron delivered into the Chicago district. Consumers there have not been able to get all the iron they need in the home territory. The belief is now expressed that the $11 per ton quotation is likely to remain firm until the end of the year.

Charcoal iron commands $23 per ton.

Steel market conditions are still active, so far as operations go, and the product is moving steadily.

WESTERN BELT DRY; EAST NOW IS DOING WELL

Cotton Traders Keenly Absorbed in Weather Maps as the Critical Month Progresses.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 9.—Observing the weather map and trying to get a line on its indications is a favorite occupation for many people in the cotton belt at this time. The occasion for such keen interest is that August is perhaps the most crucial single month of the season, for loss sustained therein is permanent. So far the present month has brought no developments of unusual character, but it is a mooted question whether the crop has lost condition enough to be serious. There is no trouble starting an argument when the question is sprung, and around it has hinged in a large measure the fluctuation in the speculative market.

The only sources of a crop scare yet have been Texas and Oklahoma, which usually contribute their share of such scares, though rarely failing to have satisfactory crops as a whole. Lack of sufficient moisture is the trouble, and the rains received about the last of last week afforded but partial relief. They were very welcome and some sections can go for quite a while longer without suffering, but there are large areas which still are suffering and seem to be losing some of their recent promise. Only in the past few days has Oklahoma figured much in complaints, but temperatures have been very high and some sections for weeks have not had enough moisture. Part of the wave that was so disastrous to the corn belt reached into the cotton belt and caused deterioration.

Weevils Cause Trouble.

The central belt has not contributed any complaints worth while, most reports having been glowing in character, though the weevil sections have been suffering as expected. The recent showers tended to stimulate the pest to renewed activity and to increase their number, and it is feared they will take very heavy toll from the crop.

While there was for several days fear of the eastern belt getting too much rain for the crop to do its best, such fears have dwindled since showers have become less frequent, and it now is felt that without something happening during the next few weeks, and provided there is not early frost, the yield will be ahead of last year by a goodly margin.

The market, working down to around 11 cents and a little lower for futures, has not been surprising, in view of the character of advices coming from trade centers. At the same time it is regarded as significant that the disposition to sell as 11 cents was approached lessened and buying orders increased, indicating a feeling among spinners and others that prices were low enough until more light could be had as to consumptive requirements and probable supply. The fact that contract prices were $7.50 a bale under what they were a year ago also acted as a stay against pressure.

Spinners May Buy Soon.

There is still little light on the important question of what spinners are going to do about buying their early supplies. Conditions and other things seem to indicate the probability of them becoming free buyers just as soon as offerings are large enough to interest them, but inquiry elicits the information that the forward commitments by buyers to the spinners are not as heavy as they have been in the past.

It may be that the spinners have provided against some of their requirements by the purchase of October and December futures, for it has been thought for quite a while that support to the market around the bottom levels was coming from the consumers.

Movement of the new crop is not increasing as fast as some predicted, for receipts are much behind two years ago and are very little ahead of last year. The present weather in Texas, however, will force maturity of the crop and hasten movement.

Weakness Develops In Cotton Market

Crop Needs Moisture, but Not an Excess of Rain— Week's Fluctuations Narrow.

By EDWARD LOW RANLETT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Considerable weakness was shown in to-day's cotton market. Although scattered Wall Street houses bought to cover short lines, the more prominent interests were disposed to pound prices.

As a result, initial losses of from 5 to 8 points were more than doubled before the end of the first hour. Shorts took profits over the week-end, but otherwise support was light at the close. At the week-end the market showed some resistance to pressure, which had been rather conspicuous previously. The crop as a whole needs moisture, though it is questionable whether an excess of rain even in Texas would not curtail the yield.

The market fluctuations during the week have been within a comparatively narrow range; perhaps 25 points would cover it all. There has been a fairly good undertone, however, mainly because operators were not willing to sell the market against a small New York stock and the near certainty of early deliveries being promptly taken for export and home delivery. This, of course, means that spinners are waiting for new cotton and that buyers of goods are not sufficiently stocked to make them indifferent to the opportunity of the moderate prices now prevailing.

The week-end statistics show a remarkable continuance of the spinners' demand. The world's takings of American cotton amounted to 179,000 bales, against 151,000 for the corresponding week last year. This involves a decrease in the visible supply of 157,000 against 142,000 last year. All this points to a carry-over of the old crop much less than previously estimated, and is certainly not an argument against higher prices.

In cotton goods division of the dry goods market there seems to be nothing to complain of except some lack of activity. This is not unusual at this season of the year, but there is on the other hand no complaint of accumulation of goods or lack of demand in the general volume of business.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Aug. 9.—The cotton market developed an easier tendency to-day. The official forecast was for showers in the western belt over Sunday, inducing considerable short selling during the early trading. Longs, who had previously bought on the expectation of the drouth remaining unbroken for several days longer, liquidated freely at the decline, October contracts selling as low as 11 cents. At that level shorts were inclined to realize quick profits, and a steadier tone developed before the close, which showed a net loss of 11 to 12 points as compared with Friday's close. Spots officially were reported quiet, with quotations unchanged on all grades. Sales amounted to twelve bales on the basis of 11 7-8c for middling. The first new sale from Louisiana arrived to-day.

EASTERN BELT FARING BETTER THAN RIVALS

Cotton Crop Looks Better Every Day, Experts Agree—Trade Shows Big Expansion.

By M. A. ROSE.

Every day sees the cotton crop in the Southeast looking better.

Traveling men, merchants, farmers, traders—all these who know anything at all about cotton make the same report.

The gloom of the early season, when a delayed start, too much rain, cold weather and then drouth gave crop killers their golden opportunity—this is gone and optimism rules.

It is admitted that cotton is somewhat late, but not enough to matter unless nature violates all precedents and brings an abnormally early frost.

Indeed, from trailing along behind the procession the Southeast has progressed until its crop prospects are better than those of the Central or Western belt. In the Central belt the boll weevil is on the rampage. In the Western belt rain is sorely needed.

All signs point of a good price for the crop this fall. Who knows? Conditions may be completely reversed this year, and Georgia may have a splendid yield at good prices, instead of Texas, which this year has been gloating in its "pot full of money."

The deadlock between the cotton shippers and the steamship lines continues, and the Clarke bill has not been killed by the Senate. These two clouds hang over the spot and futures markets.

Both seem destined to favor the "big fellow" instead of the "under dog." For instance, it now is suggested that the banks accept a guarantee of reimbursement for damage claims from the largest cotton exporters—men of undoubted stability. In this way, the financial institutions might see their way clear to handle the bills of lading for export even with the exceptions on them that the steamship companies propose to inflict.

This lets the small cotton buyer out as effectually as the Clarke bill strangles the small dealer when it comes to "hedging" facilities.

"The farmer may well say with the philosopher, 'God, deliver me from my friends,'" remarked a cotton man the other day. "Here are two schemes designed to help him, and both certainly are boomerangs."

Money continues in lively demand, but no strain is being felt. Possibly it will be the middle of October before the crop movement begins to make its annual grab for the nation's currency, all of which, as Joseph A. McCord pointed out the other day, is sheer foolishness, as general use of the check system would entirely obviate the evil.

Secretary McAdoo's promise to loan the South its share of $50,000,000 has brought excellent results—largely sentimental, but business is all sentiment.

Wholesale and retail trade is showing revival. It was predicted that when it became possible to see what promise the crop held forth trade would expand. This is just what has happened.

Forecasts of Rains Cause Sales of Corn

Thorough Wetting of Belt Will Bring Reports of Better Conditions In the Fields.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—According to the weather maps, there will be rains over the greater portion of the corn belt before Monday. This forecast caused considerable selling not only by longs in order to secure profits, but by those who were daring enough to put out short lines. Some of these speculators feel that the reported losses have been partially, if not wholly, discounted by the advance in prices of 2 1-2@4 3-8 cents during the week.

There are now two sides to the corn market, as was shown to-day, when the lowest prices of the week were reached. The corn crop will doubtless be sensationally short, but in case of a thorough wetting of the great belt, reports will commence to pour in of improvements in all sections, and we will hear from fields that were supposed to have been entirely burned up as likely to produce considerable corn.

Exaggerations as to crop losses have come from all sections, and these have helped the bulls in their campaign. Crop loss advices were received from sections of Iowa to-day, and some of these were of the calamity order, as they claimed there is great business depression in the country owing to the partial crop failures.

Cash sales at Chicago to-day again were small—90,000 bushels.

Losses were shown in wheat of 1-8@3-8 cents to-day, but there were some reactions and advances from the lowest levels reached on week-end covering by shorts. Wheat showed losses of 3 5-8@4 cents for the week and the lowest levels were reached on Saturday. According to the primary movement from week to week, there is no likelihood of any great let-up in the run at the present time, as farmers seem to be willing to part with their grain at the present price.

Oats were lower with the other grains.

September and October lard was under selling pressure by longs to-day, and there were sales also of September pork. Cash trade was quiet.

NEW ORLEANS EXCHANGE MAY GAIN PRESTIGE

Substitute for Clarke Bill Aimed at New York but Not at the Southern Center.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—The weekly weather report, issued Tuesday, did not entirely confirm the private reports of heavy rains in Texas. According to the Government, rains were still needed over large portions of Texas, and in Oklahoma it was stated that vegetation was suffering from lack of moisture and that general rains were much needed.

The weak tone exhibited by Liverpool, which reopened Tuesday morning after a holiday extending from the previous Friday, encouraged bears to disregard the unfavorable character of the Government weather report. Consequently, prices were hammered rather aggressively after the report came out, and the market closed with October and December contracts selling practically at the level of 11 cents, although middling cotton still holds steady at 12 cents.

Continued high temperatures in Texas and Oklahoma Wednesday, with no rains reported or in sight, gave a better tone to the market, which has since recovered part of the decline established in the early part of the week. Many reports of crop deterioration are coming in from the western belt, and even from Arkansas reports of damage by the prolonged spell of hot, dry weather have been received. Should reports of this character continue for a few days more, a real crop scare might develop.

Fear Clarke Bill.

No advance of consequence is likely, however, as, with the Clarke bill hanging over the market, no bull campaign can be inaugurated. Considering the extent of the short interest that has recently been created, an advance of a cent a pound would be nothing, were the drouth in Texas and Oklahoma to remain unbroken for another week and were Washington to flash out the news that the Clarke bill would not pass.

The news received here from Washington regarding the Clarke bill is considered more encouraging by local cotton interests. The plan that is now being considered by prominent Southern Senators, among whom Senator Hoke Smith and Senator Gore are numbered, is to amend the Smith bill, which specifies the grades to be delivered on contract and calls for commercial differences. To the Smith bill, thus amended, it is proposed to add the Clarke amendment as a penalty.

Favors South.

In this way, the New York Cotton Exchange would be compelled to comply with the regulations proposed by the Government, or else that market would be taxed out of existence. The New Orleans Cotton Exchange, which is only too willing to do business under the terms proposed by the Government and has already adopted the Government standard of types, would thus be able to continue, while New York, being an artificial market, would be practically wiped out of existence. The cotton business of the entire country would thus center in this market, just as the wheat business centers in Chicago.

In anticipation of such an outcome of the proposed legislation at Washington, New Orleans Cotton Exchange shares are being quietly sought. Recently a share sold below $1,500, but now $1,500 is being bid, with no shares offering below $2,000.

B. M'WHORTER, FOOTBALL STAR, WIELDS A PEN

Some New Stunts in the Georgia State Senate for University Athlete.

'YOU HAVE TO KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE BALL,' HE SAYS

But the Great Halfback Tackles the Various Bills and Plugs Away at the Line.

By O. B. Keeler.

OVER in the Senate chamber of the State Capitol a husky youth sits week days at a flat-topped desk, his sleeves well tucked up, writing in the well-known easy, flowing hand that is always used to describe the chirography of the counting room.

He is the Engrossing Clerk.

But he does not look like a clerk.

He looks like Bob McWhorter.

And that's who he is.

It's perfectly true that to about 96 per cent of Bob McWhorter's large assembly of admirers Bob would look unfamiliar in his capacity as Engrossing Clerk.

He wields a fairly heavy pen, but nothing to compare with the bit of cordwood he handles so deftly in the gentle springtime.

He tackles legislative documents with ease and certainty, but he doesn't sweep their props out from under them and stand them on one ear and shake them loose from a pigskin spheroid, so called because it is made of horsehide.

So Bob McWhorter isn't served au naturel as Engrossing Clerk—not to those who have whooped and stood on each other's shoulders and busted each other's hats about his doings in other lines of endeavor.

But he gets away with it just the same.

It's a New Game.

McWhorter of Georgia considered a moment.

"No," he said, reflectively, "I don't know that a course in football and baseball stands me in very much on this job. Except," he added, "you have to keep your eye on the ball, and there seem to be men on bases most of the time. We don't have much trouble with the umpire, though, and that helps."

And Bob goes after the bills, or whatever they are, in an earnest, conscientious, deep-chested sort of way that might be kidded into reminding you of his well-known line plunging at Ponce DeLeon.

Some build on that youth. His chest and shoulders are those of a heavyweight wrestler. Farther south his anatomy is trimly constructed, like that of a middleweight boxer. He looks to weigh about 165 in his clothes, and when he steps on the scales the beam rises at 191. Another mark of the athlete is the fact that the fewer duds he has on the bigger he looks.

In a May morning pose Mr. McWhorter wouldn't make a bad-looking sparring partner for the Hercules Farnese in statuary, and when it came to ground gaining, we'd let Herk take over a job on the scrub.

How He Started.

By the way, did you ever hear how Bob McWhorter started playing football?

As everyone knows, he spent three prep school years at Gordon. He played baseball right from the jump, but he never had tried the rougher sport.

When the second year season came on, Bob and his pal decided to have a shy at the game just for luck. They went over to the training quarters and the coach had just finished giving out all the uniforms.

All but one pair of trousers.

They were too big for anybody in school. And there was no corresponding jersey.

Bob and his pal flipped a quarter to see who got the pants. Bob won. There being no shirt or jersey, Bob reported for practice that afternoon clad principally in the pants. But the pants were very large, and Bob was by no means as husky as he is now.

"To keep from stepping on them, I had to pull 'em clear up to my arm pits," Bob said, and grinned reminiscently. "My waist line was right under my shoulders. So I didn't need any jersey."

Then on to Victory.

The second practice found Bob at guard in the first squad.

The rest was a march of triumph.

Two years of football and three of baseball at the prep school; three years of football and three years of baseball at Georgia; captain of the baseball team in the last season; captain of the football team for the coming fall.

And the record of being Georgia's greatest halfback.

Oh, pretty fair—pretty fair!

And when he gets through with the last year at Georgia, and the baseball and the football, and the 'tween seasons desk of the Engrossing Clerk?

Well, then comes the East, or maybe Michigan, and the finishing touches of Bob's law course.

For brilliantly as Bob McWhorter performs on diamond and gridiron he is of the birth and the breed to realize there is another great game to be well played out before the final whistle—the one that is called Life.

Here Is the Great Bob McWhorter on Football Gridiron and Baseball Field

Probably you have seen Bob McWhorter in scenery similar to one or both of these portraits. And very likely you would recognize Georgia's great halfback and outfielder in the same togs again. But over in the Senate Chamber at the Capitol this session—well, Bob is engrossing clerk over there. And if you were to look right straight at him you might miss him. And yet it could hardly be called a case of clothes making the man.

CONCERNING T. LEACH.

When Cobb was a tadpole and Zim was a fish
(At least in a baseballic sense)
Men spoke of the doings of old Tommy Leach,
Who was hitting 'em out to the fence,

When Cobb is a hasbeen and Heine is through,
And the Speakers and Jacksons are nil,
And the Wagners and Crawfords have passed from the scene,
Tommy Leach will be clouting them still.

Philosophers tell us that Youth will be served,
And that Age always slackens the gait,
But if Youth waits around for Tom Leach to cave in,
It is in for a heluva wait.

A report from Indianapolis informs us that Horace Fogel refuses to discuss his plans, just as if Horace would refuse to discuss anything.

One reason for the recent slump of those Brooklyn athletes is that they do not feel natural unless Charlie Ebbetts is there to dedicate something.

BATTLE CRY OF THE CUBS.

Let us then be up and scrapping
With each other every day,
Howling, growling, beefing, yapping—
We would rather fight than play.

Up to date, Miller Huggins has not been able to trade his team. This is due to the fact that he has not found the necessary blind man.

Having witnessed a rogue match, we are willing to admit that there is something slower than a game between the Cardinals and the Braves.

Our best little tennis players are raised in California. Likewise some of our best little racquets.

No, Rollo, Frank Chance will not quit. But the same can hardly be said of his ball players.

LAMENT.

Slowly is the summer waning
With its superheated rays,
And the Fall is in the offing
With its melancholy days.

Dismal days when leaves are falling,
Days of chills and wind and rain,
When the verdure kicks the bucket
And the wrestlers bloom again.

Tom McCarey avers that he will make a welterweight out of Packey McFarland, but Nature beat him to it by several parasangs.

Ofttimes we are led to wonder how the said McFarland can look a weighing machine in the eye without blushing.

MATTY BALDWIN IS ONE OF FEW FLAT-FOOTED BOXERS

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Aug. 9.—Matty Baldwin is firmly of the opinion that he and Willie Ritchie are the only scrappers now actively engaged in the ring who fight in the style used and made famous by Sam Langford, Joe Gans and Jack Johnson.

These three wonderful fighters all fought flat-footed and circled around their adversaries, forcing them to make their own opening. Also, they were all waiters, holding back and waiting for an opportunity to slip over the punch which should finish the fight.

Baldwin admits that he is not a one-punch fighter. Ritchie, however, is, in his opinion, as he waits patiently for a chance to slip the right across to his opponent's jaw, and when he does, the fight is as good as over. Baldwin says that the fighter of to-day lacks headwork and tries to hit too often.

MAURICE M'LOUGHLIN TOOK UP TENNIS AT AGE OF 13

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Maurice E. McLoughlin, who has made complete the supremacy of the Californians on the lawn tennis courts and rounding out his career by returning the Dwight F. Davis international challenge cup to this country, is a thoroughly representative American player. He is but 22 years of age and he fulfilled his brilliant promise by winning the All-Comers national championship at Newport last August.

McLoughlin was born at Carson City, Nev., January 7, 1890. It was when 13 years of age that he took up the game in which he has won the highest American honors by taking both the national singles and doubles in the same year. This has not happened since 1905, when Beals C. Wright scored on both titles, in the doubles, having Holcombe Ward as his partner. McLoughlin early in his career began to win championships, beginning with the junior titles in San Francisco. In 1905 he entered the California State championship, but did not win an important title until 1907, when he took the San Francisco city championship, and from that time on his rise has been rapid.

Cubs Trade Richie For Vaughn, No-Hit Wild Man of the A. A.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—It was announced here this afternoon that "Lurid Lew" Richie, known last year as the famous Giant Killer of the Cubs, had been traded to the Kansas City club of the American Association for "Big Jim" Vaughn, the wildest southpaw in existence, so far as is known.

Vaughn recently lost a no-hit game by his excessive wildness, and earlier in the season he won another no-hit affair, giving seven bases on balls and fanning twelve batsmen. His work this year has been characterized by terrific speed and a wonderful jump ball, with little control. He formerly pitched for New York and Washington, in the American League.

Scout After Syracuse Pitcher for Red Sox

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Patsy Donovan, the Boston American scout, left here yesterday for Binghamton to look over Pitcher Rankin Johnson, of the Syracuse team, who recently held the Athletics to seven hits in an exhibition game here.

It is understood that two other major league clubs are after Johnson.

KELLY AND SHEEHAN SIGN FOR TEN-ROUND FIGHT

THOMPSON HURLS FINE GAME AND VOLS LOSE IN TENTH INNING, 2-1

Bisland and Welchonce Work Hit-and-Run Play for Winning Tally. Great Fielding in Pinches Marks the Third Contest at Nashville.

By Joe Agler.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 9.—Carl Thompson and Forrest More staged a brilliant ten-inning pitching duel in the third game of the series, the Cracker slabman nosing out a victory by another one-run margin, when Welchonce and Bisland successfully worked the hit-and-run play in the tenth, Harry crossing the platter with the tally which gave Atlanta a pair of runs, while the Vols produced only one.

More deserved a shut-out, costly bobbles in the opening round robbing him of a scoreless game. Thompson, however, held the Schwartzmen to six hits, one a recruit clout by Del. Young, and, coupled with his grand twirling, he was again accorded perfect support.

Bisland, by a remarkable fielding play, pulled the game out of the fire in the ninth, when the Vols threatened to pull another Garrison finish.

Daley had opened the round by beating out a smash to Wally Smith, and after Callahan had forced him at second on his attempted sacrifice, Dave swiped the bag. Long, by a great leaping catch, speared Spratt's drive, and then Gibson cut one at short a mile a minute, making the out at first impossible. Scooping the pill with one hand, Bis tossed to Holland, cutting Callahan down and breaking up the rally.

Crackers Score First.

The Crackers were the first to score, Agler getting a life at first when Lindsay, who had an off day, messed up Joe's roller. He reached second on Long's sacrifice and took third on Welchonce's out to center. Then Wally Smith lifted a skyscraper, which oozed out of Gibson's mitt, Joe sauntering in.

Bisland slashed a two-sacker to the dump, sending Wally to third, and More cracked Holland on the hand, filling the sacks, but Holtz ended the agony, fouling out to first.

With blinding speed, Thompson whiffed four of the first five Vols to face him, Callahan getting the first hit in the fourth, with one out, but died at second.

Young Hit a Homer.

Young opened the count in the fifth with a "once-over." After fouling one over the left field fence, he came right back, pasting the ball not two feet from where the first had fallen foul.

The blow failed to shake Thompson, who took care of Hofman's grounder, and Schwartz, who bounced a single off Holland's glove, was out stealing, while Lindsay fanned.

More pitched himself out of a deep hole in the fourth, after Holtz had opened with a double to right. Chapman fouled to Schwartz, Holtz taking third on the play. Lindsay camped under Thompson's pop, and Agler struck out.

Schwartz called on all his pinch hitters in the tenth after Hofman had started a rally by singling through the box, Holtz having gobbled up Young's long fly to the dump. Artis never budged from second, which he reached on Perry's out to Smith, Carl whipping over three fast strikes on Noyes, batting for Lindsay, who fell a victim to Thompson's curves every time up.

The Vols put a crippled line-up in the field, Hofman working at second in place of Perry, who was nursing a charley horse.

A Great Sprint.

Welchonce's sprint from first to the plate on a single with the winning run was easily the feature of the game, but Holtz contributed two fine catches in right, and Bisland's hitting was hard and timely.

Conzelman and Chapman will work in to-morrow's game.

LUTE M'CARTY SPENT MUCH.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Aug. 9.—In his last month on earth, Luther McCarty spent a little more than $4,000, according to an expense account approved by the administrator of his estate yesterday. The account was filed by Billy McCarney, manager of the dead fighter, to show why only $26 of the $4,300 share of the Calgary receipts remained after his burial at Piqua, Ohio.

Here's Some Pitcher! Blanton Wins Six Games in Five Days

And Trio of These Remarkable Victories Were Scored in Double-Headers.

BOSTON, GA., Aug. 9.—In pitching six ball games in five days Kid Blanton, an amateur pitcher of this town, has no doubt established a new world's record. In two of the six games he shut out his opponents completely, and in another he would have scored a no-hit game had not a grounder took a bad bound after the game had gone into extra innings.

In Perry, Fla., last Monday Blanton worked in a game against the Perry club, which is considered to be the fastest independent club in Florida. Due to the non-arrival of the other pitchers, Blanton was obliged to pitch two games against the Perry team on the next day.

On Wednesday he pitched for Boston against Quitman, Ga. On Thursday he didn't work, but on Friday he went to Camilla, Ga., where he pitched another double-header, winning the first game by a score of 7 to 5 and also the last by a score of 2 to 0.

Crackers Buy Voss, Macon's Star Pitcher, Paying $2,000 for Him

Reinforcements for the Crackers in the person of a new pitcher, John D. Voss, will arrive in Birmingham tomorrow to join the Smith forces. The new hand has been pitching for Macon in the Sally League, where he has made a fine reputation this season. The purchase price is said to have been $2,000.

Voss pitched yesterday for Macon against the Charleston club, winning, 4 to 0, and allowing only three hits. It is probable that the new hurler will be used in one of the games with the Barons, probably taking Price's turn on the rubber while the latter is under suspension.

JENNINGS TALKS OF COBB; TEAM AFTER FOURTH PLACE

DETROIT, MICH., Aug. 9.—"If Ty Cobb is dissatisfied and anxious to be traded he hasn't told me anything about it," said Hughey Jennings, manager of the Tigers.

"Cobb played wonderful ball for us in Washington and he has been doing his level best all season. He was laid up for a time with an injured knee, but he got back into the game at the earliest possible moment. Perhaps the fact that our team is not at the top of the heap may have peeved Ty, because he loves to be with a winner, but at no time has he shirked or sulked.

"The story of a trade involving Cobb and Tris Speaker was a mystery to me. I don't know how it originated. In fact, I've never taken time to consider the merits of such a deal one way or another. I have been trying for two years to reconstruct my team and I believe now that my efforts soon will bear fruit. We have been playing in greatly improved form for the past two months, and we are going to beat out the Red Sox for fourth position. See if we don't."

O'LEARY MAY MEET RUSSELL.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Johnny O'Leary, the San Francisco boxer, is in communication with Promoter Tortorich of New Orleans, and may land a match with Frankie Russell, the Southern lightweight.

If the match is made the boys will meet over the 20-round route late this month.

Innis Brown Talks on Football

Heisman Faces Difficult Task

By Innis Brown.

"THE king is dead. Long live the king."

No doubt it is a bit early to begin chanting any funeral dirge over the demise of the present baseball season and cut loose a host of happy huzzas over the near entry of football. In fact, the real big noise with the horsehide is yet to be sprung, and a majority of the baseball populace is really just beginning to admit that the impending problem of the coming world series is whether it will be Bender vs. Mathewson or Plank vs. Marquard.

For all of that, however, the old season is well on its way, and it is merely a matter of a little more than a month until ye crafty football instructors will once more be on the job. Some five weeks more and managers will begin to dig out the musty, moldy regalia of the season past, followed shortly by the loss of large gobs of cuticle from the manly forms of numerous chesty young athletes while engaged in the rather monotonous preliminaries of falling on the ball and tackling a dummy.

* * *

THE return of the season of glory of the knights of the pigskin will no doubt find a rousing welcome among local enthusiasts in the gridiron game. It will also awaken a bit of curiosity as to what local and other teams will be able to show when the count is held.

Out at Tech, Coach Heisman is going to find his legions somewhat shot to pieces by graduation and other more speedy methods of depletion. Captain Leuhrmann will not be back, and Montague and Colley may also be lost. The return of some of the others is uncertain. However, he will have on hand Cook, Scrappy Moore, Loeb, Hutton, Means, with possibly one or two other regulars. Should McDonald return, a fair basis for a backfield may be counted on. In addition to these, it is understood that several promising freshmen have signified an intention of joining the Smithies. Should the Tech pilot draw a couple of good linemen along with one dependable back, opponents of the Jackets may count on a strenuous combat when they line up on Grant Field.

* * *

OVER at Athens, the outlook is a bit unsettled. It is certain that Captain Bob McWhorter will be on the job. With him will be Big John Henderson and probably Paddock, Hitchcock, Powell and Conklin. Timon Bowden has ended his football career by playing professional baseball during the present season in the Empire League. Lucas and Peacock are through, and the return of Wild Arnette, who terrified Auburn on Thanksgiving Day, is doubtful. However, there were a number of good prep men turned out last season in these parts, and the Red and Black will no doubt gather a fair share of these. Besides, the Athenians were rather bountifully supplied with substitutes last year, and should develop two or three good performers for regular berths.

* * *

AT Vanderbilt Commodore Dan McGugin will face the job of picking up two backs and three linemen. The big loss will be in Collins and Hardage, leaving only Sikes of the back trio, with Curlin to fill in at quarter. In the line Swofford, Davis and Shipp will be among the missing. In other words, the Gold and Black skipper will begin with Morgan and Tom Brown of his line; Noch Brown and Turner at ends, and Sikes and Curlin in the back field.

In addition to these, he will have a youngster by the name of Boensch, who should land the quarterback job over Zack Curlin, whose chief bid for fame seems to be the fact that he once jumped into the game in a crisis and kicked a field goal against Michigan. However, about all that can be counted on to date in the line, in addition to the two regulars returned, is Reyer, a sub on last year's team. He will doubtless draw further assistance from the incoming freshman class. To date no relief has shown up to fill in the loss caused by the departure of Collins and Hardage.

* * *

OVER at Auburn Mike Donohue will have to base his calculations minus the services of Rip Majors at quarter, "Sheep" Lamb at tackle and Doctor Ressijac at fullback. However, he can count on Captain Kirk Newell in the back field, along with Arnold and Christopher, while in the line he will have Meadows, Thigpen, Louisell and Pitts. He will also have good flank defense in the persons of Robinson and Kearley. It appears that the genial Mike will start the season with more than his usual strength of seasoned material, which forebodes worry a plenty for his opponents.

* * *

NOT a great deal is known of what Harris Cope may count on at Sewanee just yet. He will lose one of his mainstays in Jim Stoney at center. He will also lose a serviceable and promising player in Sheldon, who put up a sensational game at half in several contests last season. More serious, however, than either of the above will be the loss of Jenks Gillem at end. It will doubtless be a long time before the Tiger squad picks up as valuable all-round man again.

On the other hand, he will have Tolley, Hammond and Parker in the back field, Captain McCallum and probably Magwood, Dobbins and Moore in the line. This force will no doubt be augmented by the addition of two or three good new men, together with a promotion to the varsity of one or two subs on last year's team.

* * *

FROM the above it would appear that neither of these squads will have anything special to begin the season above the average. It will, therefore, be a matter of developing new material, together with good luck in keeping old men in condition, in deciding the relative strength of these teams for the coming season, as compared with past years. But few changes have been made in the playing rules, and with this advantage coaches can begin early to get down to real business in developing their charges. With the schedules that more than one of the above have cut out for themselves it is a cinch bet that no time will be lost when once a start is made.

LARRY SEES VISIONS OF WORLD SERIES FOR NAPS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Spend just a few minutes with big Nap Lajoie during these riotous days. Your time won't be wasted. Larry is one continuous walking smile. Like a charger scenting the smoke of battle, Larry is scenting the smoke of a world's series.

The big fellow has never battled in a world's contest. The greatest player never before has had an opportunity. But he feels that the Naps have a chance now and he's breaking his neck to bring about the realization of dreams of years.

Larry is his same old self again. Completely recovered from the injuries which handicapped him when he was traveling along at such a wonderful clip earlier in the season, he is showing the way to Birmy's ambitious youngsters and causing them to be consumed by the pennant fever.

Larry is playing a wonderful game in the field and his bat is playing an important part in every Nap victory. This may be the big fellow's last chance to be on a club that has a chance for the flag, and he is making the best of his opportunity.

"Keep your lamps on us," says Larry. "We are either going to pass those Athletics or make them think they have been side-swiped by a machine traveling at a two-mile-a-minute clip."

MILWAUKEE FANS AFTER PRESIDENT CHIVINGTON

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 9.—Milwaukee baseball fans and owners of the local club are up in arms against President Chivington, of the American Association, for his action in suspending Manager Clark, of the Brewers because of a verbal argument with Mike Cantillon, of Minneapolis. They claim it is a deliberate plan to weaken Milwaukee in the pennant race.

A report that George Tebeau is ready to quit the Association and join hands with the Federal League is given more than passing credence here. It also is claimed others are ready to follow suit. Pitcher Slapnicka may be sold to Cincinnati by Milwaukee.

CHANCE FARMS TWIRLER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Watkins, who recently was purchased by Chance from the Youngstown (Ohio) club, has been sent to the New London club of the Eastern Association, so that he can get more experience.

NEW PLAYER FOR COAST.

KEOKUK, IOWA, Aug. 9.—The local Central Association club was yesterday offered $1,000 for Catcher Joe Jenkins by the Oakland, Cal., club. Outfielder Hilly and Shortstop McGraffigan also will go to the Coast League if negotiations now on are completed.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

BRAVES, 3; PIRATES, 2.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—Boston took the third game of the series from Pittsburg here to-day 3 to 2. The Braves scored their runs in the seventh on three hits and an error, and the Pirates scored two in the seventh on two safeties and a sacrifice. The locals had several chances to score, but Tyler tightened in pinches.

Rixey for the Quakers pitched a tight game.

White Tells How He Expects to Win Bout

Whitney Says He Will Make Rushing Attack

By Left Hook.

"I AM out to win the lightweight title," said Charley White yesterday, "but I have a tough 'bird' to beat in Frank Whitney here next Wednesday night. Of course I expect to win, but I fully realize what a worthy opponent I am going to be stacked up against in the ring at the Auditorium-Armory.

"Do you know that up around Chicago all the experts look on Whitney as one of the toughest trial horses in the game. He is a hard man to hit, can take an awful mess of punishment and at the same time is so awkwardly clever that he is hard to make a showing against.

"I saw Frank work with Packey McFarland in McConnell's Gymnasium last Wednesday. Why he gave Packey an awful time for the four rounds they worked.

"After the session was over Packey came over to me and said: 'Charley, old pal, that young fellow will give you a rough voyage when you meet in Atlanta, or I'm a bum judge of a scrapper.'

"Packey didn't have to tell me that. I was a spectator, although Whitney didn't know it.

"But, do you know, I am glad that I saw Whitney work out against McFarland. I got a good line on his style. And I am going to tell you just how I intend to beat him.

"Frank is a rushing fighter. Well, let him start leading and I will counter so fast that he won't know where he is at. I believe that I can pick off or stop any of his leads and counter so hard that he will be willing to let me do some of the heavy work before the scrap has gone over three or four rounds."

With that Charley left us to go back to his training.

* * *

WHITE hadn't eased his way out of the office over ten or fifteen minutes before Whitney came in. When he was told that White had seen him work out against McFarland Frank laughed.

"So he thinks that he can stop me from leading and rushing, eh?" remarked the "Fighting Carpenter." "Well, I'll make him travel faster than he ever traveled before. I have never been floored yet, and if Mr. White thinks that he can stop me I'll bet him my end of the purse on it. And take it from me, I will make a rushing scrap of it, too.

"I'll stick on top of him and keep flaying away with so much speed that he'll wish he was back in that dear old Chicago. He is going to pick off my leads and counter? That's what he said. I should worry. He will have a fine time picking 'em off.

"I was never in better condition in my life and I'll keep going at top speed from the first round to the end. And the end——

"Well, I've got a hunch that I am going to put over a decisive punch. The mill may go the entire ten rounds; but not if I can help it.

"All I ask of White to do is to stand toe to toe with me right in the center of the ring, and if he does I'll guarantee that I'll prove I have a better kick than the one he possesses.

"He says he is going to be the next lightweight champion? Say, I have got that same hunch about myself."

UNUSUAL RULES AND PLAYS IN BASEBALL

(No. 5.) By J. W. Heisman.

NOWADAYS no substitute can get in the game without first reporting to the umpire, and the umpire first announcing to the public and the scorers who the newcomer is and whose place he takes. This rule is all right, but it has only been in existence a couple of years.

Once upon a time, a long, long time ago, the umpire in a big league game had the time of his life in a dispute over this very point with the great and only Mike Kelly. The "King" wasn't catching that day, on account of a bad finger. He always hated to ornament the bench when playing was going on, and as the game was a close one, he was having considerable difficulty in maintaining his patience; in fact, he was looking for most any provocation to jump into the game.

Directly there went up a high foul that went sailing away over toward the stands, obviously quite out of reach of either Mike's substitute catcher or of the first baseman. Instantly Mike sprang from the bench and yelled to the umpire that he was putting the other catcher out of the game and that he was going in at once. After delivering this charming BON MOT—or, rather, simultaneously with it—he took out after the crazy foul and neatly pulled it down. Coming in with the ball he picked up his mask and protector on the way to the plate, and with superb nonchalance proceeded to signal his pitcher for what he wanted.

But the umpire said nay! This was not according to the law and the prophets. Mike dared him to show any rule to the contrary. The umpire couldn't show any, but refused to let Mike make any such dramatic entrance just the same. In spite of the lack of law, Mike finally lost the case before the supreme court of baseball; but one can't help admire his quickness of thought under the circumstances.

* * *

WHEN the batter has made a foul, the base-runner must go back and touch the base he left. If the foul fly was caught, he must also touch all bases intervening between him and the base he left, and if while doing this the opponents get the ball back to the base he left before he arrives there he is out. But if the foul fly was not caught, he need not touch intervening bases.

The runner is, however, supposed to go back to the base he left with reasonable dispatch, and if he does so, the pitcher must wait for him. If the pitcher will not wait for him, but goes ahead with his delivery, the runner has the right to start again for the next base ahead, right where he is and without losing the time to go back to the base he started from. Most pitchers do not seem to be aware that the base-runner has this right, and they do a very dangerous thing when they start in their delivery without giving the runner a reasonable time to go back.

* * *

AFTER the pitcher has taken his position in the box ready to pitch, the batter is not permitted to cross over from one side of the plate to the other. If he does so, he may be called out.

Should the batsman desire to cross over to the other side after the pitcher is in his box, the only way he can safely do so is to step backward out of the box he is in and go around behind the catcher.

* * *

NOT only should the outfield fence not be less than 235 feet from the plate, but the backstop should not be less than 90 feet distant from the plate. This is the rule, but most people are agreed that for the good of the game it is better to have the spectators closer to the field of play than this. It is more interesting and inspiring both to players and spectators to get closer when possible.

But if the backstop is less than 90 feet behind the home plate, special ground rules are an absolute necessity. Now, it would surprise you greatly to know how many captains of amateur teams fail to grasp the significance of this lessened distance and what the appropriate rule should be in such case.

When the backstop is 90 feet back, a runner is entitled to as many bases as he can make, but he runs entirely at his own peril. If the passed ball has sufficient force to carry it clear to the backstop, it is clear that the runner should be able to make at least one base while the ball is being recovered, for he can certainly run 90 feet from one base to another while the catcher is running 90 feet after the ball and throwing it back to the diamond. If the passed ball doesn't go as far as the backstop, the runner must use his judgment.

Now, if the backstop is less than 90 feet back, and a passed ball hits it, the high probabilities are that it had sufficient force to have gone on to a backstop 90 feet away had the backstop been back that far. In other words, had the backstop been at the regulation distance, the runner could no doubt easily have made one base on that passed ball. Then why shouldn't he be given the one base?

* * *

STRANGE to say, most captains of fields where the backstop is less than 90 feet away seem to think that in this case also the runner should be made to run at his own peril, when it is their fault, not his, that the field was not laid out according to rule specifications. It must be clear that if the pitcher is so wild, or the catcher so unskillful, as to have a passed ball at a time when there is an opposing runner on base they should certainly be charged up with a demerit for such bad play, and what demerit should or could this be but for the opponents to get at least one base out of it, as they certinly would on a regulation field? But to make him run at his own peril with the backstop, say, within 30 feet of the place means that when the fielding team makes a bad play and has a passed ball that passed ball will very likely hit that near backstop with such force as to cause it to rebound right back to the catcher, and thereby he is enabled either to keep the runner on third or, worse still, to put him out at the plate even, and this on their own bad play and solely through the unmerited help of an illegally-placed backstop. Clearly the runner should be given the one base and be entirely free from the liability of being put out.

Chess Champion Returns to Cuba

Jose R. Capablanca Goes Home Before Series in New York With Duras.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Jose R. Capablanca, who equalled Dr. Lasker's record last week by winning thirteen straight games in the Masters' Tournament at the Rice Chess Club, left yesterday for Havana.

The Cuban champion expects to spend about a fortnight at his home, and is due to return to New York early in September. If then arrangements are made for a series between him and O. S. Duras, of Prague, whom he defeated in the recent tournament after a struggle lasting seventy-five moves, the young master will tarry long enough for that purpose. After that he will depart for Europe.

Frank J. Marshall, the United States champion, is in receipt of an urgent invitation to play in the international tournament from P. P. Sabouroff, former president of the St. Petersburg Chess Club.

Rivers and Wolgast Both After Ritchie

Fighters Agree to Meet Champion For Nothing—Ad Wild To Get On.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Aug. 9.—A unique situation exists in the fight game in Los Angeles. Both Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast, former champion, want to meet Champion Ritchie and have started bidding for the fight.

"All I want is to get into the ring with Ritchie again," said Wolgast. "Any promoter who can stage a bout can name his own terms as far as I'm concerned. If I win, he can give me anything he likes. I don't ask a cent."

"Same here, win or lose," said Rivers. "Whoever stages the contest can keep my share or give it to Ritchie."

In the meantime Champion Ritchie, who is now in the city, says it makes no difference to him whom he fights just so long as he gets his price.

COULON TO DEFEND TITLE AGAINST BOBBY BURNS

ST. JOSEPH, MO., August 9.—Bobby Burns, of Dallas, Texas, signed articles here yesterday for a ten-round boxing contest with Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion, at Omaha September 12.

Burns and Jones in Battle of Invectives

Managers of Arthur Pelky and Jess Willard Laugh at Each Other's Claims.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Tommy Burns, manager of Arthur Pelky, and Tom Jones, who looks after the interests of Jess Willard, are booked to hook up in an interesting battle of invectives and near blows within a day or two.

Jones wants to match Willard against Pelky, but Burns in a telegram yesterday said that Willard must go get a reputation before presuming to challenge a champion.

"Gunboat Smith is the man Pelky wants to meet," said Burns. "Smith beat Willard, and then, again, Charley Miller shaded the Kansas scrapper. Let him get a 'rep' for himself."

This sort of language is the sort that makes Jones glad he is alive, for he thrives on argument.

"When did Pelky whip Willard, or anybody of consequence, until he landed a lucky punch on Luther McCarty?" asks Jones. "Willard can whip Pelky, and Burns can name his own terms. Pelky took one beating from Willard and wants no more."

As Willard holds a decision over Pelky, it is probable that Jones will work that argument and a side bet proposition overtime until Burns agrees to a match between the rival white hopes.

NUMBER FOOTBALL PLAYERS.

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 9.—If the coaches of other colleges agree to it, Coach Al Sharpe, of Cornell, will number his football players next fall. Sharpe is said to be highly in favor of the innovation suggested by Parke H. Davis, Princeton's representative on the rules committee. Dr. Sharpe believes that the reform must come.

REDS CAN USE THIS ONE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—President Lynch, of the National League, in a decision to-day holds that the result of the protested Brooklyn-Cincinnati games of July 11, of which Cincinnati won, 5 to 3, stands as played.

Broken Fingers Can't Stop Cy Falkenberg

Cleveland Twirler Has Been Hurt Three Times This Year, But Continues Work.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Aug. 9.—Falkenberg has been hurt three times this year, but has not lost a turn in the box because of his injuries. Boehler, of Detroit, hit him on the pitching arm in April, but Cy kept on winning. Then he had a finger on his left hand broken, but he continued to win. Last week he broke another digit on his left whip, yet has won two games since.

MACK WANTS NEW RULE TO PROTECT BASE RUNNERS

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Aug. 9.—Connie Mack has a new rule to suggest when the baseball magnates gather in the fall. The sphinxlike leader of the Athletics would have the base-runners given more protection and have infielders restricted in blocking tactics.

When an infielder has deliberately blocked the path, Mack believes that the umpire should grant the runner his base. He claims that the use of shin guards by catchers and other protection by infielders makes it next to impossible for a base-runner to get the goal sought unless he has sufficient weight to bowl over the opposing infielder.

TIGERS GET TWIRLER.

OTTUMWA, IOWA, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Loranzen, a left-hander of the Ottumwa club in the Central Association, was sold to the Detroit Americans for $2,500.

Jeff Smith to Get Big French Plum

Al Palzer May Lose Chance to Box Georges Carpentier in Paris.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—It is reported here that Al Palzer is not to get the chance to fight Carpentier in France this fall, the plum going to Jeff Smith, the Bayonne, N. J., middleweight.

A wire says they are to meet on October 20 in the Circus de Paris, the weight to be 170 and the distance 20 rounds. Al Lippe, manager for Smith, it is said, put one over on Tom O'Rourke, who may have something to say about the fight. Smith, however, is a good card in Paris, where he beat Adrian Hogan, Willie Lewis, M. Bernard and made Harry Mansfield quit in seven rounds. In fact, only Mike Gibbons has the honor of hanging a decision on Smith.

Carpentier will probably outweigh Smith about 20 pounds at the agreed weight, but this will not be such a handicap, according to Smith's admirers.

OLMSTEAD IS RELEASED.

SPOKANE, Aug. 9.—Pitcher Olmstead who was obtained recently from the Oakland Coast League club, was released to-day by the local baseball club. In his try-out yesterday Olmstead did not show to advantage.

Pittsburg Citizen Doesn't Know Hans

Smoky City Scribe Claims He Is Dr. W. J. Holland, Director of Carnegie Museum.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—Help! Help! Help!

There's a citizen at Pittsburg—a prominent citizen at that—who doesn't know Honus Wagner, of Carnegie, Pa.

"Wagner? Wagner? Is he really, as you allege, a baseball player?"

This was Dr. William J. Holland's reply to a question propounded by David Davies, of The Pittsburg Dispatch. Dr. Holland is director of Carnegie Museum and was said to have received from the king of ball players a letter offering to sell an old uniform for $15. This information came from New York, the editor of one Gotham daily being quite hysterical over the "possibilities" of the story, to use his own words.

When Dr. Holland was approached on the matter he was surprised. "I don't know Wagner," he said, "and we are not conducting a hero fund at the museum. No doubt this Mr. Wagner is quite a wonder in his chosen line of endeavor, and I suppose it is my misfortune never to have made his acquaintance."

"But, Doctor," protested the writer, "did you receive an offer from Wagner—did you receive any old kind of an offer?"

"Man alive!" came the crushing reply; "haven't I just told you that I never spoke to Mr. Wagner, that I never heard him speak, that I never received a letter from him, that I never was called on the 'phone by him—and that I never have given the subject of his old uniforms any consideration at all? Next thing I know they'll be making an old-clothes man out of me."

Dr. Holland was positive that there was no chance of Honus' discarded raiment finding repose within the classic confines of the big building erected at Mr. Carnegie's expense.

"The whole thing is arrant nonsense," he said. "I don't know who is responsible for the circulation of the 'story' (I believe you newspaper chaps call it that); but I do know that the entire yarn has been made out of whole cloth."

Poor old Honus doesn't know where he is since the circulation of this uniform-museum story. Vowing that he never has made any tender of his worn-out scenery, he said yesterday that he guessed "somebody was trying to kid him."

"When I get through with a uniform," said he, "there's not much left of it. Still, if Dr. Holland, the Carnegie Museum or any other body or place wants what remains, I'll sell for $15. And I'll be making money at last."

Luck Begins to Break for Griff

Injuries Gave Boehling a Start

By W. J. McBeth.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Manager Clark Griffith of the Washingtons is a firm believer in luck, at least as applied to baseball. The "Old Fox" certainly has had his share of bumps. With the least iota of breaks or good fortune he would have landed at least two pennants for Frank Farrell. This year he might have driven the Athletics to cover had his fine, aggressive young team not been so seriously handicapped by injuries to players.

Griffith has had some pretty tough luck in his career, and particularly this sason. He seems a man destined to always be on the threshold of great fame without being able to find the latchstring. He has had many buffets; but he has likewise enjoyed some few favors of fickle fortune. These came along now and then as blessings in disguise. And not the least of the lot by any means has been Joe Boehling, the young southpaw who so far has been the sensation of the major leagues this season.

It was only last spring that the "Old Fox" deplored the decay of competent left-handed pitching. "Fork-hand fling," opined Griff, "has become a dead art." Why Griff should have been so melancholy on the subject when two such able experts as "Rube" Marquard and Eddie Plank were on hand to refute the insinuation is very hard to figure. It may have been that all his life Griffith had been disappointed in digging up a portside of real merit when at times such a one would have spelled victory.

* * *

BUT at the time when the "Old Fox" was grieving most sorely over his years of disappointment, he had with him a young man who in a very few months to blossom out into one of the real wonders of baseball. Not since Russell Ford, of the Yankees, and "King" Cole, of the Cubs, in 1910, averaged well above the .800 mark in victory percentage for over thirty games their first season in fast company has any youngster displayed the class of Washington's prize southpaw.

Boehling reeled off eleven straight victories.

Boehling is going to be of great help to Griffith and Washington. The team is pretty well out of the race now, yet still has an outside chance. Certainly next year, unless Mack braces his pitching staff, the Old Fox is likely to give the Athletics a fight to the last ditch. Walter Johnson and Joe Boehling form a pretty good pitching staff as modern hurling corps go. And Griff has several other young men, among them Engel, who can give a pretty fair account of themselves in the box.

But getting back to Boehling. He has divided in hearts of loyal Washington fandom a place this year usurped by the great and only Walter Johnson. His advent to fame has been more or less of an accident. But for the fact that Griffith was forced to utilize him in the face of injuries to seasoned twirlers, young Joe might now be wasting "his sweetness on the desert air of some bush league.

* * *

HERE is his history:

Only back in the year 1911, when Dr. William H. Parker, the dean of amateur athletics in the Keystone City of the South, kindled an interest in amateur athletics of every sort, particularly devoting himself to amateur baseball, the medical man of cherubic countenance, who is also a police commissioner in Richmond, formed and managed the Battle Axe team, which won the championship of the city in a league comprised of eight clubs. Joe Boehling and Bill Kay formed the star battery of the Battle Axe team, which lost but two games out of sixteen played.

Succeeding the amateur baseball season, an intercity championship series was arranged with the winners of similar championships in Washington and Baltimore, in which the championship was won by the Pepcoe of Washington, the games directing attention to the splendid battery work of the Battle Axes. Bill Peet, of the Washington Herald, was the wide-eyed visual artist who saw in Boehling possibilities sufficient to convince "Old Fox" Griffith of the advisability of adding Boehling to the staff headed by that strong-armed genius, Walter Johnson.

* * *

DURING the training trip of 1912, Washington scribes proclaimed the worth of Boehling and predicted that he would prove a tower of strength for the Climbers. The brilliant attack of the Senators during 1912, during which they rolled up a succession of sixteen successive victories—which record was ruined in the seventeenth effort by "Home Run" Baker, of the Athletics—prevented Griffith from risking the club's climb with a game pitched by Boehling, so Griff farmed him out to Chattanooga.

Climatic conditions there hindered the upbuilding of the youngster, and Kid Elberfeld returned the youngster to Washington, when Griff turned him over to Worcester, where, under Jesse Burkett, he achieved a winning percentage of .636.

Again to Charlottesville and under the tutelage of Griffith and Jack Ryan the experience gained asserted itself. A boy of big frame and intelligently acquisitive, Boehling earned his right to stay with the Senators, and Griff, while bemoaning the dearth of good left-handed pitchers, intrusted the fortunes of one game to the youngster, who returned it as a victory.

GENERAL DEVELOPMENT THEME OF JOE BEAN IN NEW SET OF EXERCISES

If You Weary of Special Treatment for Abdomen, Back, Waist and So on, Here Are Some Fine New Stunts That Will Help You All Over.

By JOE BEAN.

SO far in my little specifications for building men, I have prescribed exercises that would take care of and improve some particular part of the body, showing just how that exercise would do the work and explaining its benefits.

And now there appears to be a growing demand among people who know me and are interested in my work for some general exercises that will be of universal benefit to the digestion, the muscular system, and, in fact, to the entire anatomy.

So I am going to give my readers a series of articles on general exercises.

At that, it must be understood that in taking abdominal exercises, or waist exercises, or back exercises, the part specifically brought into play is by no means the only part benefited. The arms and the legs, and frequently the neck, all profit by the strenuous work imposed on the waist or other sections.

As regards typically general exercises, there are many games that might come well under that head. Home work—pottering about the garden, mowing the lawn, and all that sort of thing—also may be regarded as general exercises.

A "Setting Up" Drill.

Following is a list of excellent general exercises, of the "setting up" style so much favored in the army and navy as a means of keeping the men in fine trim from head to heels. I don't know any set of exercises that will prove of more benefit to the entire body than these.

No. 1. With the hands on the hips crouch on the left leg, bending the knees and then extending the right leg to the front, keeping the body rigidly erect and maintaining the balance by carefully applied muscular effort. At first you may have to hold on to something, but that should be abandoned as soon as possible. Always bend the knees as far as possible before straightening out the right leg, and in rising bring that leg back to the bending position and then rise to the full height again. This should be repeated, extending the left leg an equal number of times, after which the exercises should be alternated. It will be sure to result in soreness of the thighs and hips at first, as no man regularly applies any such exercise as this except in this way. It's a great thing for bodily poise and balance.

Take a "Full Squat."

No. 2. Bend the knees as far as possible, to the "full squat" position, it is called, and at the same time raise both arms high above the head. Then rise to the first position, lowering the arms as you straighten the legs. This is fine for practically every set of muscles in the legs, feet and ankles. Also, it expands the chest, and the balancing necessary to accomplish the feat brings out much development of the muscles in the stomach, waist, back and shoulders. Even the neck comes in for its part, holding the head erect and not permitting it to bob forward, as you will find it inclined to do.

No. 3. The same as No. 2, except that the arms are extended horizontally while the "squat" is being accomplished. It is peculiarly adapted to the development of the chest, arms and shoulders also the back and neck muscles. That part of the drill may be taken standing up, but in conjunction with the "squat" it is a far better all-around exercise. In all these exercises be sure to hold the body rigidly erect, and strive to acquire "form" and grace in the work. The head should not be ducked or bobbed forward; the shoulders should not be humped or drooped, and there should be a certain snap and style about the whole thing that is not only good to look at, but also aids greatly in the development.

And Some Jumping Here.

No. 4. Start in the usual position, arms at sides heels together, toes turned slightly outward. Jump the feet apart, about three feet, landing on the balls of the feet, and at the same time swing the arms outward and upward. Then with another jump bring the feet together and swing the arms down to the sides, resuming the first position. Repeat about 30 times. It's great for the legs, trunk and shoulders and makes the blood dance in the arteries in a very comforting manner. Also, it is fine for the breathing apparatus.

DILLON TO BOX KLAUS IN TWELVE-ROUND BOUT

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 9.—Jack Dillon yesterday accepted terms for a 12-round bout with Frank Klaus at Boston, August 26. These men have been recognized generally as the best of the middleweights during the last year. Klaus defeated Dillon in San Francisco, the bout being a 20-round affair, and Dillon squarely beat the Pittsburg champion here in a 10-round bout last May.

JOE BUSH FIELDS WELL.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—One thing Leslie Joe Bush, of the Athletics, can do just a little better than anything else except pitch and sing is cover first on awkward hits to McInnes. He fields his position as well as any hurler in the American League.

AND NOW SOME EXERCISES THAT WILL BENEFIT ALL PORTIONS OF MUSCULAR SYSTEM AT ONCE

NO. 1. Hands on hips, heels together. Bend the knees to the "full squat," and then extend the right leg to the front. Draw back the extended leg and rise on both legs to first position. Same exercise with left leg extended. Then alternate.

NO. 2—Hands at sides, bend the knees in the "full squat," at the same time raising the arms above the head. Resume first position, maintaining a rigid balance of the body, head and neck.

NO. 3. Hands at sides, heels together, toes out. Come to "full squat," raising arms rigidly to a horizontal position. Rise to first position, lowering arms smartly.

NO. 4. Hands at sides, heels together. Jump the feet apart about a yard, lighting on the balls of the feet, and swing the arms up sharply from the sides. With another jump, bring the heels together again and bring the arms down to the sides at the same time.

BILLIKENS, 2; PELICANS, 1.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 9.—Charley Case won his first game in two years from New Orleans this afternoon, scoring Kanupp with two down in the twelfth inning. Montgomery outlucked the Pelicans. Stephenson, recently taken on by the locals, threw splendid ball and but for errors by Adams and Clancy would have won in the regulation nine innings. The box score:

BARONS WIN TWICE.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Aug. 9. Turning the tables on the Lookouts, who defeated them twice yesterday, the Barons grabbed both games of a double-header from the locals this afternoon. In the first game Prough kept Howell from winning his tenth straight victory. He allowed but three hits. Howell and Kroh allowed the Barons only two, but both came in succession in the second inning, following a base on balls, and two runs resulted. In the second game the Barons hit Kroh heavily, scoring almost at will. Hardgrove held the locals safe at all stages, easing up in the closing sessions after he had an insurmountable lead. Carroll and Street each secured three hits out of three times up in the second game. Both frays were seven innings by agreement. The box scores:

GULLS LOSE TWO GAMES.

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 9.—Mobile lost a double-header to Memphis this afternoon through a rally by the visitors in their half of the ninth in the first game, the score being 5 to 4, and in the second the Turtles got on to the delivery of Hogg and won easily, aided by a bad wild throw by Miller in the sixth inning.

Leibhardt up to the seventh inning of the second contest gave up but three hits, and his two-base drive, which cleared the bases, was the feature of the game. Mobile played an uneven game throughout the contest and gave up easily when their pitchers were hit. The box score:

PLANK IS SLOWEST HURLER IN THE AMERICAN LEAGUE

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—The slowest pitcher in the world has been discovered. He is Eddie Plank, the Athletics' veteran. Just for curiosity, and to settle an argument, a telegraph operator in Philadelphia held the watch on Plank when he pitched against the Browns in a recent series.

After Stovall made a double he consumed 30 seconds throwing the first ball to Pratt. This period elapsed after he received the ball from the catcher and before he delivered it to the bat. The next pitch required 25 seconds. Pratt hit this ball.

In the same inning he took 25 seconds throwing the first ball to Williams. Three pitches to Baisnti required 28, 36 and 30 seconds. Plank pulls down his cap, hitches up his trousers, wiggles his left foot and buries it in the pitcher's box like an old hen going to roost. Then he carefully scrutinizes the bases and the outfielders and by the time he gets around to pitch the batter is half fidgeted to death.

That's the system of his stalling—to get the other fellow overanxious.

Cal Delaney Breaks With Jimmy Dunn

Fighter and Manager Have Hot Argument and Decide to Break Company.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—Cal Delaney, Cleveland's best featherweight outside of championship company, and Jimmy Dunn are no longer boxer and manager. They have severed business and social relations for all time. Henceforth it's one road for one and a different highway for the other.

The climax to the partnership was the leading feature of the Put-in-Bay's gay and sumptuous celebration. That's when the split occurred and where Dunn and Delaney had a feverish argument that lasted several minutes and the result was that Jim refused to have anything more to do with the West Side blonde boy. He claimed that Delaney was becoming more and more unmanagable. Cal debated that he was not a boy any longer and refused to be bossed.

The McDonald team of the Baraca League failed to put in appearance, only three men showing up, and the umpire forfeited the game to the Agogas.

International Scope For Athletic Meet

James E. Sullivan Goes Abroad With Invitations From Panama Exposition.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—James E. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States and director of athletics at the Panama Pacific International Exposition, left last Tuesday on the Kronprinzessin Cecelie to attend the International Federation of the athletic governing bodies of the world which is to be held in Berlin, Germany, August 20 and 21.

While at this congress Director Sullivan will extend invitations to the foreign governing bodies to send teams to the Panama Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco in 1915. All the sports at the exposition are to be international in character, and, as a matter of fact, teams have already been promised from many of the foreign countries. After a conference with the officials of the different governing bodies of sport in America, a lengthy program of sports was prepared.

It is planned to have the important international championships in the early spring and fall—February, March, April, October, November and December. The events now planned will, of course, be subject as to dates and regulations to the receiving of official sanction and approval from all the associations that are interested.

STANDS HURT OUTFIELDING.

PITTSBURG, PA., Aug. 9.—"Have you noticed that the present day outfielders do not judge fly balls as quickly as the old-timers did?" asked Manager Clarke, of the Pirates, today. "The stands at most of the parks are huge, dark affairs and when they are filled with spectators it is difficult to tell which is the ball and which are the faces of the fans, until or unless the sphere rises clear above the roof."

BELMONT GETS NEW TRAINER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—It is learned that August Belmont has engaged Sam Hildreth to train his American racing stable. Some time ago Hildreth sold his own string of horses to the late Charles Kohler and went abroad, the latter's stable manager scoring many successes on the French turf.

MATHEWSON IS GREATEST MAN IN BASEBALL

So Declare Newspaper Scribes at Recent Gathering Held in New York City.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—At an informal gathering of newspaper men in New York the other day the topic of baseball was being discussed. The name of Mathewson figured prominently in the conversation, as is inevitable whenever the national pastime is the theme. After most of the scribes had borne their testimony as to the personal and professional worth of "Big Six," an old baseball reporter put a cap on the eulogies by remarking:

"Matty isn't a mere baseball player—he's an institution."

That remarkable tribute was hailed with delight, as being a most apt explanation of the Giants' great twirler.

There are a number of stars in baseball at the present time who have made and are making a marvelous stand against the inroads of time. Prominent among these may be mentioned Hans Wagner, Napoleon Lajoie, Eddie Plank and Mordecal Brown.

But of them all Matty is putting up the most brilliant opposition to the ravages of the years. The best that the others are doing just now is holding their own. They are holding Father Time off at arm's length, but the old fellow is close enough to them to worry them in their playing. But in the case of Mathewson it is different. Instead of stopping to spar with the old gentleman with the scythe, he is going steadily on—improving his game—mastering his technique and acquiring the supreme artistry of the mound.

This year of 1913, which many had thought would mark the last of his active service, finds Mathewson again at the zenith of his prowess with a little added craftiness. He is an artist and all true artists never cease striving to improve their art—and they never cease loving it. Who can look upon the eager, smiling and boyish countenance of Matty as he stands in the box and say that he does not love the game?

The position he holds in the esteem of the baseball fans and the public at large, which, of course, is the same thing, is unique. If a vote were taken to-morrow to settle the question as to who is the most popular man in organized baseball, there is no doubt that Matty would carry the election by a large majority.

* * *

"WHAT would happen to McGraw?" asked this same old scribe, who had characterized Matty as an institution, "if he were to incontinently fire Mathewson after the manner of Murphy in giving old Mordecai Brown the gate?"

The consensus of opinion was that if McGraw did such a thing he might just as well lock up the Polo Grounds. That is just how close "Big Six" is to the hearts of the baseball public.

But there is no danger of John J. ever doing such a thing. In the first place he is not a Murphy in any corpuscle of his compact being, and in the second place Matty's art will continue in his head long after it has departed from his arm, and as a mere instructor he would be more valuable to McGraw than the average twirler is on the mound.

Why Is a Hard-Working Player? He Isn't---If He Loves the Game

By O. B. Keeler.

KNOCKING about with a professional ball club, you get one ear full after another concerning "work," "business," "toil," "drudgery," and so forth. And so on.

You might get the hunch that the athletes had set out from very early in their young lives determined to hammer out a living by working at baseball.

That is, you might get the hunch if you didn't travel with them more than one day, and never sat on the bench during a game, and never looked at a game very understandingly, anyway.

In that case you might feel sorry for the hard-working ball player, under contract providing that he must play in order to eat, but not play for any other club than the party of the second part, or whatever party the party of the second part shall assign him to play with.

A good many rather well-meaning and entirely sap-headed persons these days are wasting perfectly good sorrow over the assumed grievous lot of the toiling ball player.

They seem to get the idea that he is playing ball because he has to.

* * *

NOW, take it from one who has seen some little chapters in the life of a professional ball player, the said ball player is playing ball for money because he can make more money that way than he can any other way.

And, above all, he is playing ball because he likes to play ball.

* * *

I RECALL in particular one "Chick" Autrey, first baseman for St. Paul, in the American Association, and the least shade under big league caliber in hitting.

Chick is an extreme sample of the ball player who likes to play ball. When the club is at home, Chick is out on the field in uniform half an hour before his mates get to the clubhouse to dress, playing catch or batting up flies with any stray youngsters he can find about the lot.

* * *

Chick is the first one to start the regular practice. As soon as two or three of the other players get out on the field, Chick gets them lined up for the little bunting game—three or four arrayed in front of a batter, tossing him the ball, which he hits sharply back at them, when they chuck it at each other, under and over and from all sides.

Chick is the liveliest of the bunch, slapping the ball like a juggler; jumping, stretching, scooping—laughing like a kid most of the time.

Chick would practice four hours before the game, if anybody would keep him company.

In the game, he is at the opposition every moment. He is left-handed and fields the bag like Hal Chase—and in every move you read the snap and dash that can come only from a love of the game.

All around the circuit, Chick is known as "that St. Paul guy that loves to play baseball."

Frank Bowerman was the same way when he was with the Giants. Later, when in the Association, the grizzled veteran earned the name of "Young Mike" by his evident keen enjoyment of the sport and his stentorian vocal encouragement of his mates while the game was on.

* * *

A FINE example nearer home is Joe Agler. Joe never could work around that old first sack the way he plays around it. The class of the Southern League in fielding, Joe performs with a speed and dash that can spring only from a real joy in the game. Watch him, next time you go to see the Crackers play ball.

And see if you can imagine Joe as a mere hireling, plugging along to earn his daily bread with the same ambition as a man with a heavy hammer making little ones out of big ones.

Eight out of ten professional ball players enjoy the game of baseball in the same way a sunburned kid on a vacant lot enjoys playing the game. They would be playing baseball for fun if they weren't making a living at it.

Max Carey said of "Big Six" Mathewson the other day:

"Matty always looks as if he'd rather be out there pitching than doing anything else in the world. I never have seen him in a game when I didn't think of that. After thirteen years of baseball as a profession, baseball still is Mathewson's favorite sport."

* * *

I BELIEVE that goes for eight out of ten of the ball players who are the most successful. They don't "slow up" quickly, these men who love the game. "Slowing up" may be due in some cases to failing legs or dimming eyes. But in other cases it is due to getting stale in the game, because the first incentive is gone—the keen edge worn off.

But take it from the ball players themselves, if you please, no man ever set out deliberately to earn a living by working at baseball.

Every single professional ball player in this country started out in the beginning for one and the same reason.

And that reason was because he loved to play ball.

RITCHIE'S FATHER STAYS IN CHURCH WHEN WILLIE HAS RING ENGAGEMENT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 5.—Willie Ritchie's father, who is down here with his son on an automobile tour, has never seen Willie in a ring.

Mr. Steffens (Willie Ritchie's real name is Geary Steffen), is of a devoutly religious nature and has very serious doubts as to the propriety of prize fighting. As long as Willie is in the business, however, the old man wants him to win.

Whenever Willie is in the ring, his father is in church. He won't go to the ringside for fear of seeing his boy hurt and he can't stay at home with anxiety for society; so he always goes to church and remains there until the battle is over.

MINOR MANAGERS ARE AFTER CAL'S CASTOFFS

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Some one called Manager Callahan, of the Chicago White Sox, the "David Harum" of organized baseball after Frank Chance complained that he was "stung" in the Hal Chase-Borton-Zelder deal, but despite that act minor league managers were in Boston recently to try their hand at swapping with the White Sox leader.

REDS AFTER HAGEMAN.

DENVER, Aug. 9.—The Cincinnati Reds are after Pitcher Casey Hageman and Second Baseman Hank Butcher, of the local club. Neither Magnate Jimmy McGill nor Manager Jack Hendricks are in any haste to name a price upon these performers.

JACKSON HOLDS A 4-POINT LEAD OVER TY COBB

JOE JACKSON, the Naps' slugging outfielder, has a four-point lead over Tyrus Cobb for the batting leadership of the American League. The latest official figure gives Jackson a mark of .393, while Ty is hitting the ball at a .389 clip.

Christy Mathewson Is a Speedy Hurler

"Big Six" Is Greatest Time Saver. His Games Average About 11 Minutes an Inning.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Christy Mathewson is the greatest time-saver of all the pitchers. Games with him pitching, which any sort of opposition has to the other twirler, go through in the smallest possible time. Here are his times for fifteen ful games pitched by him this season: 2:10, 1:55, 1:55, 1:55, 1:35, 1:30, 2:05, 1:40, 1:50, 1:30, 1:50, 1:55, 1:50, 2:10. The 2:10 game was ten innings long, so that only one of his nine-inning game has gone over two hours. That was his opponent in that one.

He pitched a thirteen-inning game against Rucker and Stack in 1:55, remarkably short for a battle of that length in innings. The fifteen games average an hour and forty-two minutes in time. His games average approximately eleven minutes an inning, or five and one-half minutes for his half of the inning, granting, which isn't the case, that opposing pitchers are as fast as he.

GABBY STREET WILL BE BACK IN MAJOR LEAGUES

CHATTANOOGT, TENN., Aug. 9.—Chattanooga fans are already beginning to look over the prospects of 1914. The continued absence of Elberfeld from the battle array has exploded all hopes of a pennant this season.

There is every possibility that Gabby Street will be drafted or sold outright to a major league club but if he is not it is a certainty that he will not play another season in a league where the maximum salary is but $200 per month.

Street is in as good condition as ever in life, and he realizes that he is worth more than the local club can pay him.

PHILLIES GET 12 OF 40 HOMERS AGAINST CARDS

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Saving homers until they face the Cardinals is the habit of Charley Dooin's Phillies. This season the National League second-placers have batted out 40 four-baggers. Twelve have come when they were opposed by the Cardinals.

Five players have been the four-ply batters when facing the Cardinal pitchers. Luderus, Becker, Cravath, Hobert and Paskert find the offerings of the Cardinal pitchers to their liking, and bat out homers.

Cravath, Luderus and Becker have each made three circuit drives, while Hobert has connected for two and Paskert one. In the recent series with the Cards in Philadelphia the Quakers made seven homers, four in one game.

FORECLOSED ON BRIGHTON BEACH RACING PROPERTY

NEW YORK, Aug. 9. The passing of another famous New York race track apparently is forecast in a foreclosure sale of the Brighton Beach property, scheduled for August 28. The action was brought on a second mortgage of approximately $95,000. The first mortgage is $60,000.

CLUBS AFTER CATCHER.

TERRE HAUTE, Aug. 9.—White Sox officials have made telegraphic offers for Catcher Hargrove, of the Terre Haute club. Pittsburg, the Highlanders and the Cubs also have asked for terms on him, as has an American Association club.

J. DAUBERT AND CRAVATH IN A BATTING FIGHT

OUR old friend Jake Daubert, of Brooklyn, still retains the actual leadership of the National League, hitting along at a .359 clip, with Gavvy Cravath, of the Phillies, his nearest real contender, with .334. McDonald, of Boston, who has played in only about half as many games as Jake, continues to top him, and if he keeps up his terrific slugging, may win to the real leadership of the bunch before the season ends.

Following are the figures for the games including those of Wednesday for all who have managed to hit .250 or better.

Suburban Merchant In Hot Competition With City Brother

The suburban merchant, who formerly depended on the horse and wagon for his delivery facilities, is one of the best purchasers of motor trucks in the world. This is the opinion voiced by G. W. Bennett, vice president of the Willys-Overland Company, in commenting on the success with which the Willys utility truck has met since its introduction to the commercial vehicle field, a few weeks ago.

"The truck has revolutionized the business methods of the suburban merchant," he says. "A few years ago, when the suburban business man depended on horses and wagons for his delivery and the big business man in the large city nearby did the same, the former was content. He was getting his share of the patronage of his territory, regardless of whether his deliveries were promptly and economically made.

"But with the introduction of the motor truck he saw his sham was a loser. His city competitor began to encroach on his territory merely because the city man had doubled or trebled his delivery facilities by supplanting horses and wagons with trucks. Day by day the suburbanite saw his business dwindling. Even though he was miles nearer the desirable customer, he could not compete with the city merchant in the matter of delivery. The latter's truck would cover three or four times as much ground in the same time as his horse, and naturally the select trade went to the man who could give the best service.

"But since the suburban merchant has taken to the motor truck there has been a change. He is now getting a large part of the profitable trade which formerly went to the bigger business man. And not only has he won back that business which geographically belonged to him, but the greater speed and economy of the power vehicle has enabled him to branch out to territories heretofore out of his reach entirely."

WENDELL, WELL KNOWN ATHLETE, QUITS FOR GOOD

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., Aug. 9.—James I. Wendell, Wesleyan, 1913, a member of the American team at the Olympic games in Sweden, announced here to-day that he had decided to withdraw from athletics. He said he wished to retire while "good" rather than to be forced out by declining ability.

He has accepted a position to teach at Pottstown, Pa., next year.

SAVAGE AND KUBIAK GO 10 HARD ROUNDS TO A DRAW

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Jim Savage and Al Kubiak, heavyweights, hammered each other for ten rounds to a draw here last night. Both men showed signs of severe punishment when they left the ring.

D. Roberison Still in the Lead

Welchonce Not Far in the Rear

THE slugging Robertson, of the Gulls, continues to stay out in front of all the rest of the Southern League batsmen, while Harry Welchonce maintains a position only seven points in the rear, with Elberfeld and Knisely sandwiched between them in a desperate struggle for first place.

Long, of the Crackers, also is batting well above the .300 mark and stands eighth in the case. Wallop Smith is ninth, five points under the charmed limit, and Joe Agler, with .289, is close up.

Here's How the Athletics Manage to Hit Ball So Hard

For several years it has been charged that the Athletics by some method or other have been stealing the opposing team's battery signals, which has enabled them to hit most any kind of pitching. Whether this is true or not, no one willing to do so is able to say, but there is no doubt that the team has been benefited by the fact that this suspicion exists.

There is one noticeable fact in the offensive work of the Athletics which may to some extent explain their remarkable hitting. It is that in most instances the batters are hitting with two balls and no strikes on them, and frequently with the count three to one in their favor. They are picking the spots when the pitcher is trying to get the ball over the plate and when he is not putting much on the sphere. The Athletics do not do much waiting when there are men on the bases. They are taking their wallops at such times, which may account for the large number of runs they are scoring.

WOLGAST AND RITCHIE IN A MATCH FOR COMING FALL

LOS ANGELES, Aug. .—Tom Jones is authority for the statement that Champion Willie Ritchie will be seen in action with Ad Wolgast here the last of October or some time in November.

"It is possible," Jones says, "that they may not get together before Thanksgiving, but a return match will be staged here about that time, unless negotiations fall through entirely."

Ad and Tom Jones arrived in town yesterday morning. It is understood that McCarey will make a strong bid for the match and both Ritchie and Wolgast have signified their willingness to be here should the terms be satisfactory.

Motor Truck's Work Has Only Started, Says Geo. C. Diehl

"Motor trucks must be reckoned with as factors in transportation. Their economic advantage in short hauls is causing their adoption by hundreds where the roads have been improved; and the vast extension of their use only waits for the roads to be built. Their fullest utilization will come when all the main roads of the country are constructed to accommodate them. In and near the large centers of population they are rapidly displacing horses in the transport of commodities." So declared Chairman George C. Diehl, of the A. A. A. National Good Roads Board.

"Civilization has never witnessed such a change as has taken place in the transportation of persons and goods in the past ten years," said he. "With the railroad for the carriage of through freight, good roads and automobiles will round out and complete a perfect system of transportation, and 'thread together the energies of the nation,' a happy expression used by President Woodrow Wilson in his address to the American Road Congress."

Johnson Will Pitch Every Other Game To End of Season

Volunteers to Finish Schedule and Says He Can Stand it as Well as Radbourne.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—"I will volunteer to pitch every other day from September 1 to the end of the season, if at that time you think we are near enough to race the Athletics for the pennant," said Walter Johnson to Clark Griffith here recently. "Regard that as a promise; know that I will be able to do it without impairing my form, and in the meantime instruct the other fellows to pitch their arms off every time without fear of what shape they will be in later.

"If Radbourne and other old-timers could do it, so can I. You also can call on me for three games in each of the two remaining series with the Athletics."

Nap Lajoie May Set New Baseball Record

Larry Has Been Leading Figure in the Game Since the Season of 1896.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—Nap Lajoie, the greatest second baseman the game has ever seen, balked when Manager Birmingham of the Cleveland Naps sought to bench him. He is still at second.

Larry has been a leading figure in the game since 1896. It was in that year that he was "discovered" on the Fall River club by Philadelphia of the National League and joined the latter team.

With the Phillies in 1896 he hit for an average of .331 and attracted attention in baseball circles everywhere. He was the sensational recruit of the year.

In 1902 Larry, then the idol of the baseball world, came to Cleveland. Here he has been ever since. Soon after his arrival he was made manager of the Naps. His most successful season in thta capacity was in 1908, when the Naps finished second to Detroit by one-half a game. He retired in 1909 as manager.

During his entire seventeen years in the game Larry has never hit below the .300 mark except twice. That was in the 1907 and 1908 seasons.

Larry didn't like the idea that he is through with the big leagues.

"No, I'm not through with baseball," he declared. "I am far from being all in. But I am not going to be driven out by Joe Birmingham.

"Looks as if the hot weather had got someone and that someone is trying to make me the goat because the club has been losing a few games."

According to the announcement, the fight is to go twenty rounds. Johnson is to receive $30,000 guarantee, win, lose or draw, and Langford is to receive 25 per cent of the gross receipts. Leading fight promoters estimate that the fight will draw more than $100,000 at the gate.

-Southern Route Best.

rguson was the first man to by actual try-out, that an ern route to the Pacific Coast nly feasible, but compares n favorably with the North- ern routes. In the list of Mr. Ferguson's activities applicable to this plan are:

Author of the first report ever made on bridges, culverts, roads and soil conditions across the continent by the Northern routes.

Executive official of every large tour and pathfinding held in this country. This embraces nearly 90,000 miles of road in all but three States in this country and Canada.

Manager of the first trans-continental delivery of merchandise by motor truck—getting nine-ton road weight across 4,000 miles.

Transportation and immigration are the great problems of the day—they go hand in hand, and the South to reach its maximum growth, must quickly assert greater interest. Transportation and immigration for ten or more years have followed the trail of the automobile. During the life of the motor car America has enjoyed its greatest road-building career.

The First Ocean-to-Ocean Tour.

It is conservatively estimated that more than 5,000 Eastern tourists will motor to the Pacific Coast exposition in 1915. Last year one tourist met 79 cars between Omaha and Reno. These travelers all moved along Northern roads of travel, because the Northern line is boosted and mapped. They all desire a Southern route, which would permit year-round travel.

Unless another route is laid out—unless widespread publicity is given—all the 1915 traffic must take this established Northern route—through New York, through Chicago and Denver.

Trans-continental routing and road-building are dependent upon State action and interstate interest. Outside the Atlantic coastal region, most of the Southern States are absolutely ignored when motoring is considered or discussed. Every touring bureau in the land is forced to advise its inquirers against any attempts west of Atlanta in the South.

Every Southern city is daily paying for the poor roads in this State, not merely because motor touring is impracticable, but because the farmers can not readily get in touch with the cities.

The all-Southern plan contemplates the establishment of hand-in-hand road building effort all over the South and Southwest at one time.

Awaken Road Improvement Interest.

It will immediately awaken interest in road improvement from Atlanta to California. It will vitally interest the farmers of all sections, the bankers, the real estate owners, the manufacturers and the automobile owners and dealers.

Local organizations will be formed, generally on the country basis, and then embodied in one general association to be known as the All-Southern Trans-Continental Good Roads Association.

The board of managers will be made up from the local organizations.

It is not proposed to build high-cost roads, but to improve local conditions by inexpensive methods, chiefest of which is the use of the long drag. Thousands of miles of roads have demonstrated this as a particularly efficient means at a ridiculously low cost, both in securing first results and in maintaining bettered conditions. It is not the primary purpose to construct a through-line highway of stone or its like, but to use the natural soil conditions in a simple and inexpensive manner that has been "proved."

The All-Southern Route.

The general line of the route will be from Atlanta through Birmingham, Montgomery, Mobile, New Orleans, Beaumont, Houston and Galveston, Austin, Waco, Dallas, Fort Worth, El Paso, Deming, Douglas, Tucson, Phoenix, Yuma and then connect with the California State road system for San Diego and points north.

At the eastern end this will connect the All-Southern Trans-Continental route with the established Dixie trail and Seminole trail, and their feeders in the Southern Atlantic coastal States.

The route will be gone over at least twice by Mr. Ferguson's organization. There will be an interval between the first and second trips of about one month to permit checking of results. This interval will also show wherein local organizations are weak or the route in need of other corrections.

From these surveys accurate maps complete to the fullest detail will be prepared. These will be published in each paper and later arranged in convenient book form, with explanatory data.

After the All-Southern Trans-Continental Route has been surveyed and mapped, it is proposed to hold interstate and through tours. The interstate divisions will be largely local, and for such distances as may be later determined upon. The through tour is planned for those Northern tourists who each year inquire as to the possibility of motoring to the Pacific coast after the Northern routes have been closed by the weather, and for such factors as usually enter these events.

TIRE SERVICE DEPARTMENT FOR STRANDED TRAVELERS

The Johnson-Gewinner Company, the well known accessory dealers, have entered the tire business with a splendid service arrangement for their tire customers. Owners who purchase tires from this firm are protected day and night, every day in the year against tire troubles on the road.

In case of a puncture or blowout, three service cars and two motorcycles are kept in readiness to come to the rescue. Thirty minutes enables them to reach the farthest points.

The company's advertisement announcing this service policy appeared Friday morning and attracted a great deal of attention.

Automobile manufacturers have improved their cars to a point where road trouble is almost a thing of the past. Tires, however, are still an uncertainty and a source of considerable trouble and annoyance.

Goodrich Tires---Best in the Long Run

Tire Prices Down

How We Did It Without Skimping On the Costliest Tire That's Built

Here are a few amazing facts which every tire user should know.

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires used to cost one-fifth more than other standard tires. And yet they gained the topmost place in Tiredom.

Three things caused this extra price.

In the base of each tire we vulcanize six flat bands of 126 braided wires. It is thus that we make a hookless tire—a tire that can't be rim-cut.

Then every No-Rim-Cut gets the "On-Air Cure." It is final-vulcanized on air bags. This is done to save blow-outs. It adds to our tire cost $1,500 per day.

Then we use in each tread base a patent "rivet" fabric. We paid $50,000 for this feature to prevent tread separation.

Not one of these costly features is used in any other make of tire.

Now No Extra Price

Now these same tires, with all of these features, cost you no extra price. Not a standard tire of any type costs you any less.

And these are the reasons:

Our overhead cost, in days of small output, ran as high as thirty per cent.

It is now less than six per cent. Our multiplied output, in this one way, has cut our tire cost twenty-four per cent.

We have built new factories with modern equipment, with every new invention in labor-saving machinery.

We have clung to small capitalization. On this account we can and do keep our profits under 8½ per cent.

All these savings, as fast as we made them, went to users of our tires.

Note What Our Price Includes

Rival makers must in some way meet the Goodyear price. But please consider what our price includes.

A tire that never rim-cuts.

A tire built to save blow-outs, in a way so costly that no one else employs it.

A tire built in our patent way to prevent tread separation. And built in every other way for longest mileage, regardless of the cost.

That's Why They Outsell

Hundreds of thousands now use these tires. They far outsell any other. Yet the demand from users is now growing faster than ever before in our history.

That's for the reasons told you.

Rim-Cutting alone, with old-type tires, ruins 31.8 per cent—almost one tire in three. Blow-outs and loose treads, which our methods combat, are immensely costly items.

You should get these savings---get them all---when you pay the Goodyear price.

Our dealers are everywhere.

JACKSON HOLDS A 4-POINT LEAD OVER TY COBB

JOE JACKSON, the Naps' slugging outfielder, has a four-point lead over Tyrus Cobb for the batting leadership of the American League. The latest official figure gives Jackson a mark of .393, while Ty is hitting the ball at a .389 clip.

Sixteen players in all are pelting the ball over the .300 figure. Danny Murphy, Nap Lajoie, Eddie Gandil, Crawford and Baker are some of the stars hitting in the charmed circle.

Christy Mathewson Is a Speedy Hurler

"Big Six" Is Greatest Time Saver. His Games Average About 11 Minutes an Inning.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Christy Mathewson is the greatest time-saver of all the pitchers. Games with him pitching, with any sort of support by the other twirler, go through in the smallest possible time. Here are his times for fifteen full games pitched by him this season: 2:10, 1:55, 1:55, 1:55, 1:25, 1:55, 2:05, 1:40, 1:50, 1:50, 1:50, 1:35, 1:35, 1:30. The 2:10 game was ten innings long, so that only one of his nine-inning game has gone over two hours. That was his opponent in that one.

He pitched a thirteen-inning game against Rucker and Stack in 1:55, remarkably short for a battle of that length in innings. The fifteen games average an hour and forty-two minutes in time. His games average approximately eleven minutes an inning, or five and one-half minutes for his half of the inning, granting, which isn't the case, that opposing pitchers are as fast as he.

GABBY STREET WILL BE BACK IN MAJOR LEAGUES

CHATTANOOGT, TENN., Aug. 9.—Chattanooga fans are already beginning to look over the prospects of 1914. The continued absence of Elberfeld from the battle array has exploded all hopes of a pennant this season.

There is every possibility that Gabby Street will be drafted or sold outright to a major league club but if he is not it is a certainty that he will not play another season in a league where the maximum salary is but $300 per month. Street is in as good condition as ever in life, and he realizes that he is worth more than the local club can pay him.

PHILLIES GET 12 OF 40 HOMERS AGAINST CARDS

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Saving homers until they face the Cardinals is the habit of Charles Doolin's Phillies. This season the National League second-placers have batted out 40 four-baggers. Twelve have come when they were opposed by the Cardinals.

Five players have been the four-base batters when facing the Cardinal pitchers. Luderus, Becker, Cravath, Lobert and Paskert find the offerings of the Cardinal pitchers to their liking, and bat out homers.

Cravath, Luderus and Becker have each made three circuit drives, while Lobert has connected for two and Paskert one. In the recent series with the Cards in Philadelphia the Quakers made seven homers, four in one game.

FORECLOSED ON BRIGHTON BEACH RACING PROPERTY

NEW YORK, Aug. 9. The passing of another famous New York race track apparently is forecast in a foreclosure sale of the Brighton Beach property, scheduled for August 28. The action was brought on a second mortgage of approximately $95,000. The first mortgage is $60,000.

CLUBS AFTER CATCHER.

TERRE HAUTE, Aug. 9.—White Sox officials have made telegraphic offers for Catcher Hargrove, of the Terre Haute club. Pittsburg, the Highlanders and the Cubs also have asked for terms on him, as has an American Association club.

J. DAUBERT AND CRAVATH IN A BATTING FIGHT

OUR old friend Jake Daubert, of Brooklyn, still retains the actual leadership of the National League, hitting along at a .359 clip, with Gavvy Cravath, of the Phillies, his nearest real contender, with .336. McDonald, of Boston, who has played in only about half as many games as Jake, continues to top him, and if he keeps up his terrific slugging, may win to the real leadership of the bunch before the season ends.

Following are the figures for the games including those of Wednesday for all who have managed to hit .250 or better.

Suburban Merchant In Hot Competition With City Brother

The suburban merchant, who formerly depended on the horse and wagon for his delivery facilities, is one of the best purchasers of motor trucks in the world. This is the opinion voiced by G. W. Bennett, vice president of the Willys-Overland Company, in commenting on the success with which the Willys motor truck has met since its introduction to the commercial vehicle field, a few weeks ago.

"The truck has revolutionized the business methods of the suburban merchant," he says. "A few years ago, when the suburban business man depended on horses and wagons for his delivery and the big business man in the large city rapidly did the same, the former was content. He was getting his share of the patronage of his territory, regardless of whether his deliveries were prompt and economically made.

"But with the introduction of the motor truck, he saw his plan was a loser. His rich competitor began to encroach on his territory merely because the city man had doubled or trebled his delivery facilities by supplanting horses and wagons with trucks. Day by day the suburbanite saw his business dwindling. Even though he was miles nearer the desirable customer, he could not compete with the city merchant in the matter of delivery. The latter's truck would cover three or four times as much ground in the same time as his horse, and naturally the select trade went to the man who could give the best service.

"But since the suburban merchant has taken to the motor truck there has been a change. He is now getting a large part of the profitable trade which formerly went to the bigger business man. And not only has he won back that business which geographically belonged to him, but the greater speed and economy of the power vehicle has enabled him to branch out to territories heretofore out of his reach entirely."

WENDELL, WELL KNOWN ATHLETE, QUITS FOR GOOD

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., Aug. 9.—James L. Wendell, Wesleyan, 1913, a member of the American team at the Olympic games in Sweden, announced here to-day that he had decided to withdraw from athletics. He said he wished to retire while "good" rather than to be forced out by declining ability.

He has accepted a position to teach at Pottstown, Pa., next year.

SAVAGE AND KUBIAK GO 10 HARD ROUNDS TO A DRAW

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Jim Savage and Al Kubiak, heavyweights, hammered each other for ten rounds to a draw here last night. Both men showed signs of severe punishment when they left the ring.

D. Roberison Still in the Lead

Welchonce Not Far in the Rear

THE slugging Robertson, of the Gulls, continues to stay out in front of all the rest of the Southern League batsmen, while Harry Welchonce maintains a position only seven points in the rear, with Elberfeld and Knisely sandwiched between them in a desperate struggle for first place.

Long, of the Crackers, also is batting well above the .300 mark and stands eighth in the race. Wallop Smith is ninth, five points under the charmed limit, and Joe Agler, with .289, is close up.

Here's How the Athletics Manage to Hit Ball So Hard

For several years it has been charged that the Athletics by some method or other have been stealing the opposing team's battery signals, which has enabled them to hit most any kind of pitching. Whether this is true or not, no one willing to do so is able to say, but there is no doubt that the team has been benefited by the fact that this suspicion exists.

There is one noticeable fact in the offensive work of the Athletics which may to some extent explain their remarkable hitting. It is that in most instances the batters are hitting with two balls and no strikes on them, and frequently with the count three to one in their favor. They are picking the spots when the pitcher is trying to get the ball over the plate and when he is not putting much on the sphere. The Athletics do not do much waiting when there are men on the bases. They are taking their wallops at such times, which may account for the large number of runs they are scoring.

WOLGAST AND RITCHIE IN A MATCH FOR COMING FALL

LOS ANGELES, Aug. —Tom Jones is authority for the statement that Champion Willie Ritchie will be seen in action with Ad Wolgast here the last of October or some time in November.

"It is possible," Jones says, "that they may not get together before Thanksgiving, but a return match will be staged here about that time, unless negotiations fall through entirely."

Ad and Tom Jones arrived in town yesterday morning. It is understood that McCarey will make a strong bid for the match and both Ritchie and Wolgast have signified their willingness to be here should the terms be satisfactory.

$1,000 FOR EACH UMPIRE IN THE WORLD SERIES

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—This world's championship series will mean that the clubs of the big organizations, National and American, the great representatives of the national game of baseball, will receive 25 per cent of the share of whatever is earned by the contesting teams in the seven-game series. The umpires will each receive $1,000 for officiating in the deciding games. Should the Athletics of Philadelphia and the New York Giants be the contenders, the teams will play in each city every other day.

GAINESVILLE, GA., Aug. 9.—Gainesville defeated the all star team from Atlanta in an exciting and well played game yesterday by a score of 5 to 4.

STOCK DRAWS SUSPENSION; TO BE OUT FOR TEN DAYS

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 9.—Shortstop Stock, of the Mobile club, on account of a suspension of ten days for fighting with Manager Dobbs, of the Montgomery club, at the latter place, will be out ten days, and Paul Sentell will play short for the Gulls.

At the game to-day Baerwald and Shanley, of the Memphis club, will be presented with checks for $50 for hitting the Bull signs on their home grounds.

HOT RACE ON FOR HURLING HONORS IN BAN'S LEAGUE

WALTER JOHNSON and Boehling, two Washington twirlers, are fighting it out for the pitching honors of Ban Johnson's circuit. Boehling has taken part in thirteen games this season and has managed to put eleven of these on the right side of the ledger. The real honors, however, go to Johnson. The big hurler has won twenty-five games so far this season, while he has tasted defeat but five times.

Brown and Bender, of the Athletics are also showing much class on the firing line. Both have a percentage over the .700 mark.

Motor Truck's Work Has Only Started, Says Geo. C. Diehl

"Motor trucks must be reckoned with as factors in transportation. Their economic advantage in short hauls is causing their adoption by hundreds where the roads have been improved; and the vast extension of their use only waits for the roads to be built. Their fullest utilization will come when all the main roads of the country are constructed to accommodate them. In and near the large centers of population they are rapidly displacing horses in the transport of commodities." So declared Chairman George C. Diehl, of the A. A. A. National Good Roads Board.

"Civilization has never witnessed such a change as has taken place in the transportation of persons and goods in the past ten years," said he. "With the railroad for the carriage of through freight, good roads and automobiles will round out and complete a perfect system of transportation, and 'thread together the energies of the nation,' a happy expression used by President Woodrow Wilson in his address to the American Road Congress."

Johnson Will Pitch Every Other Game To End of Season

Volunteers to Finish Schedule and Says He Can Stand it as Well as Radbourne.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—"I will volunteer to pitch every other day from September 1 to the end of the season, if at that time you think we are near enough to race the Athletics for the pennant," said Walter Johnson to Clark Griffith here recently. "Regard that as a promise; know that I will be able to do it without impairing my form, and in the meantime instruct the other fellows to pitch their arms off every time without fear of what shape they will be in later.

"If Radbourne and other old-timers could do it, so can I. You also can call on me for three games in each of the two remaining series with the Athletics."

Nap Lajoie May Set New Baseball Record

Larry Has Been Leading Figure in the Game Since the Season of 1896.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—Nap Lajoie, the greatest second baseman the game has ever seen, balked when Manager Birmingham of the Cleveland Naps sought to bench him. He is still at second.

Larry has been a leading figure in the game since 1896. It was in that year that he was "discovered" on the Fall River club by Philadelphia of the National League and joined the latter team.

With the Phillies in 1896 he hit for an average of .331 and attracted attention in baseball circles everywhere. He was the sensational recruit of the year.

In 1902 Larry, then the idol of the baseball world, came to Cleveland. Here he has been ever since. Soon after his arrival he was made manager of the Naps. His most successful season in that capacity was in 1908, when the Naps finished second to Detroit by one-half a game. He retired in 1909 as manager.

During his entire seventeen years in the game Larry has never hit below the .300 mark except twice. That was in the 1907 and 1908 seasons.

Larry didn't like the idea that he is through with the big leagues.

"No, I'm not through with baseball," he declared. "I am far from being all in. But I am not going to be driven out by Joe Birmingham.

"Looks as if the hot weather had got someone and that someone is trying to make me the goat because the club has been losing a few games."

LANGFORD AGREES TO BOX JACK JOHNSON IN PARIS

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Sam Langford, the Boston tar baby, through his manager, Joe Woodman, to-day confirmed the report that he had agreed to meet Jack Johnson in Paris this fall to settle the question of the heavyweight championship of the world.

According to the announcement, the fight is to go twenty rounds. Johnson is to receive $30,000 guarantee, win, lose or draw, and Langford is to receive 25 per cent of the gross receipts. Leading fight promoters estimate that the fight will draw more than $100,000 at the gate.

NEW MAXWELL MAKES BIG HIT IN THE SOUTH

Sales Manager Redden Tells the Southern Dealers All About New Line.

The little Maxwell "25"—the car that is declared by the builders to be the car that fills the long-felt want—arrived in Atlanta last week.

Dealers from all points in the South came to see the new car and examine it at close range. Enthusiasm ran high and the Maxwell was launched upon the Southern market in a way that foretells success.

Sales Manager Redden, of the Maxwell Company, was here, and in speaking of the new Maxwell line said:

"The manufacturing facilities of the Maxwell Motor Company, comprising as they do all the plants of the late United States Motors and Flanders Motors Companies, are now greater than any other individual concern in the business. This enables us to manufacture in enormous quantities and thereby successfully meet competition.

"The well-known financial backing this company enjoys enables us to inaugurate and successfully carry out an extensive and aggressive manufacturing and sales campaign.

Lower Price Scale.

"Our 1914 line, comprising as it does three good selling models, each listing at from 15 to 25 per cent below competing cars of similar style and power, insures a big demand for our product. Our policy of standing squarely back of our cars and extending our owners a more liberal treatment and protection than they have generally received from automobile manufacturers in the past, and our liberal policy toward dealers and the friendly co-operation we extend them, constitutes, in our judgment, a policy that stands almost alone.

"We are applying the laws of good merchandising to the automobile business, manufacturing cars the people want to buy, producing them in such quantities that we can undersell our competitors; back them up with a guarantee as good as a Government bond, and protect our dealers with a policy that enables them to protect their customers. The splendid manufacturing facilities we enjoy afford us advantages over almost any other manufacturer.

Faith in Flanders.

"With such a well-known captain of the industry as Mr. Flanders to lead us, with the organization of experts he has placed in the various manufacturing divisions, our agents are assured that they will now get cars, and get them in quantities, and instead of being confronted with expensive and irritating delays, we are now practically ready to make deliveries, and offer our dealers an opportunity to get more than their share of the early fall business."

Cross-Country Tours Brought Big Results To Touring Bureau

Several transcontinental tours so far made by the Touring Information Bureau of the American Automobile Association have been more fruitful in immediate results than any similar trips in the history of motoring. These routes were not chosen haphazard, but choice was made after careful preliminary investigations, based upon close familiarity with the physical and scenic features of each, with due regard for reasonable directness and the ability of the regions traversed to improve their part of the route.

Complete and exhaustive data was gathered. This was no light task, especially when coupled with work among the prominent men to impress upon them the necessity for continual betterment.

Among the important results may be mentioned the forming of an organization to improve a State highway across Wisconsin from Milwaukee to LaCrosse; the prospect of two distinct and different highways in the near future between Yellowstone and Glacier Parks; the building of at least three good highways across the Bitter Root mountains between Montana and Idaho, where none existed before; the abolition of several primitive ferries, replacing them with substantial bridges; the certainty of getting an improved highway built across the Cascade mountains in Washington; the location of a new and shorter route between Salt Lake City and Ely, Nev.

Other features were the avoiding of discomforts and dangers of the intervening desert region; establishing a new and shorter route between Denver and Salt Lake City, and then formation of a vigorous organization for its permanent improvement; the discovery of a route through Nevada which offers splendid desert travel; and not of least importance, the stimulation of healthy rivalry between various routes, which will finally secure the building of at least four standard transcontinental trunk highways.

Small Rubber Tires For Teething Babes

G. A. Sohl, manager of the local branch of the Republic Rubber Company, is distributing a novel souvenir among the automobile owners of Atlanta. It is a miniature Staggard Tread Republic tire. The tire is about five inches in diameter and can be worn as a watch fob or makes a very serviceable paperweight.

Mr. Sohl recommends the little tire very highly as a teething ring for babies, claiming that his two little

ROAD UNDER CONSTRUCTION.

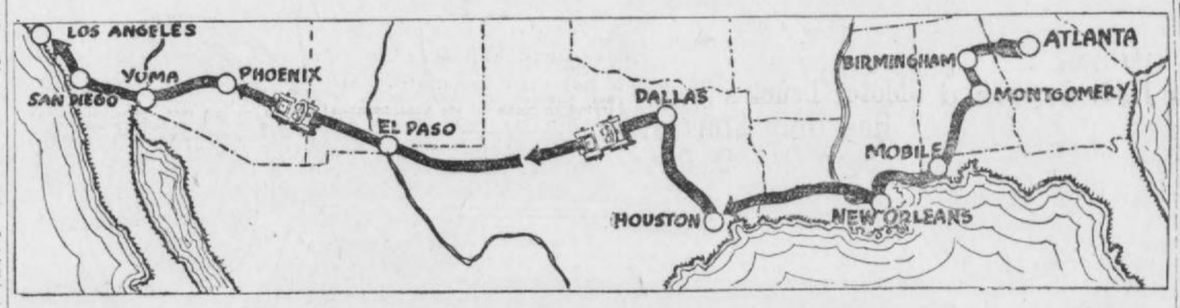
The touring department of the Automobile Club of America reports a road under construction from Millwood, N. Y., through Chappaqua, connecting with King street for Portchester.

The road is to be macadamized and when completed will afford a direct connection from lower Long Island Sound points to the Harlem Valley and along the Hudson River.

Long Island motorists will also benefit greatly by the new road, since connection can be made from Long Island by the Rye-Oakcliff ferry.

Sunday American Will Map Out Southern Coast-to-Coast Route

E. L. FERGUSON, OFFICIAL PATHFINDER AND DIAGRAM OF COURSE HE WILL FOLLOW.



Good Roads Campaign To Be Waged Over Whole Distance.

Hearst's Sunday American will inaugurate on Monday, August 18, a monster campaign to find a new all-Southern, open-the-year-around transcontinental highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast. The proposed route will extend from Atlanta through Birmingham, Montgomery, New Orleans, Houston, Dallas and Los Angeles to San Francisco, the scene in 1915 of the great Panama-Pacific International Exposition, and leading Southern newspapers will cooperate.

The official "campaigner" for the monster project will be E. L. Ferguson, one of the most widely known automobile drivers and "pathfinders" in the United States. Mr. Ferguson arrived in Atlanta Saturday and practically has completed all arrangements for the start.

He will leave Atlanta in a big touring car which he has used in similar trips, on a smaller scale, of course, and will go direct to Birmingham, the first "official" stop. To demonstrate that the South and Southwest offer the most attractive transcontinental coast-to-coast highway for any and all tourists in the country, Mr. Ferguson will take his wife and two small children with him.

In connection with the coast-to-coast tour a "booster" campaign for good roads will be made all the way from Atlanta to San Francisco. Already a movement is on foot in sections of Alabama to have the citizens get out and devote one day to building roads.

Will Preach Good Roads.

Mr. Ferguson declared Saturday he would put forth every effort all along the route, by speechmaking and otherwise, to crystallize a sentiment for good roads, thereby making the great contemplated transcontinental coast-to-coast highway a reality long before the Panama-Pacific Exposition opens in 1915.

The proposed All-Southern route is designed to meet the demands of tourists from all parts of the North, East and South for all the time. It is estimated that something like 5,000 automobile tourists alone will take advantage of the route during the exposition year.

The newspapers besides Hearst's Sunday American which are conducting the campaign are The Birmingham News, The Montgomery Advertiser, The Dallas Times-Herald, The Houston Daily Post and The New Orleans Item.

Each of these newspapers will send along special men with Mr. Ferguson to points agreed upon in a systematic plan, to tell the whole story of the monster tour from coast to coast.

All-Southern Route Best.

Mr. Ferguson was the first man to discover, by actual try-out, that an all-Southern route to the Pacific Coast is not only feasible, but compares more than favorably with the Northern routes. In the list of Mr. Ferguson's activities applicable to this plan are:

Author of the first report ever made on bridges, culverts, roads and soil conditions across the continent by the Northern routes.

Executive official of every large tour and pathfinding held in this country. This embraces nearly 90,000 miles of road in all but three States in this country and Canada.

Manager of the first trans-continental delivery of merchandise by motor truck—getting nine-ton road weight across 4,000 miles.

Transportation and immigration are the great problems of the day—they go hand in hand, and the South to reach its maximum growth, must quickly assert greater interest. Transportation and immigration for ten or more years have followed the trail of the automobile. During the life of the motor car America has enjoyed its greatest road-building career.

The First Ocean-to-Ocean Tour.

It is conservatively estimated that more than 5,000 Eastern tourists will motor to the Pacific Coast exposition in 1915. Last year one tourist met 79 cars between Omaha and Reno. These travelers all moved along Northern roads of travel, because the Northern line is boosted and mapped. They all desire a Southern route, which would permit year-round travel.

Unless another route is laid out—unless widespread publicity is given—all the 1915 traffic must take this established Northern route—through New York, through Chicago and Denver.

Trans-continental routing and road-building are dependent upon State action and interstate interest. Outside the Atlantic coastal region, most of the Southern States are absolutely ignored when motoring is considered or discussed. Every touring bureau in the land is forced to advise its inquirers against any attempts west of Atlanta in the South.

Every Southern city is daily paying for the poor roads in this State, not merely because motor touring is impracticable, but because the farmers can not readily get in touch with the cities.

The all-Southern plan contemplates the establishment of hand-in-hand road building effort all over the South and Southwest at one time.

Awaken Road Improvement Interest.

It will immediately awaken interest in road improvement from Atlanta to California. It will vitally interest the farmers of all sections, the bankers, the real estate owners, the manufacturers and the automobile owners and dealers.

Local organizations will be formed, generally on the country basis, and then embodied in one general association to be known as the All-Southern Trans-Continental Good Roads Association.

The board of managers will be made up from the local organizations.

It is not proposed to build high-cost roads, but to improve local conditions by inexpensive methods, chiefest of which is the use of the long drag. Thousands of miles of roads have demonstrated this as a particularly efficient means at a ridiculously low cost, both in securing first results and in maintaining bettered conditions. It is not the primary purpose to construct a through-line highway of stone or its like, but to use the natural soil conditions in a simple and inexpensive manner that has been "proved."

The All-Southern Route.

The general line of the route will be from Atlanta through Birmingham, Montgomery, Mobile, New Orleans, Beaumont, Houston and Galveston, Austin, Waco, Dallas, Fort Worth, El Paso, Deming, Douglas, Tucson, Phoenix, Yuma and then connect with the California State road system for San Diego and points north.

At the eastern end this will connect the All-Southern Trans-Continental route with the established Dixie trail and Seminole trail, and their feeders in the Southern Atlantic coastal States.

The route will be gone over at least twice by Mr. Ferguson's organization. There will be an interval between the first and second trips of about one month to permit checking of results. This interval will also show wherein local organizations are weak or the route in need of other corrections.

From these surveys accurate maps complete to the fullest detail will be prepared. These will be published in each paper and later arranged in convenient book form, with explanatory data.

After the All-Southern Trans-Continental Route has been surveyed and mapped, it is proposed to hold interstate and through tours. The interstate divisions will be largely local, and for such distances as may be later determined upon. The through tour is planned for those Northern tourists who each year inquire as to the possibility of motoring to the Pacific coast after the Northern routes have been closed by the weather, and for such factors as usually enter these events.

TIRE SERVICE DEPARTMENT FOR STRANDED TRAVELERS

The Johnson-Gewinner Company, the well known accessory dealers, have entered the tire business with a splendid service arrangement for their tire customers. Owners who purchase tires from this firm are protected day and night, every day in the year against tire troubles on the road.

In case of a puncture or blowout, three service cars and two motorcycles are kept in readiness to come to the rescue. Thirty minutes enables them to reach the farthest points.

The company's advertisement announcing this service policy appeared Friday morning and attracted a great deal of attention.

Automobile manufacturers have improved their cars to a point where road trouble is almost a thing of the past. Tires, however, are still an uncertainty and a source of considerable trouble and annoyance.

Goodrich Tires---Best in the Long Run

Tire Prices Down

How We Did It Without Skimping On the Costliest Tire That's Built

Here are a few amazing facts which every tire user should know.

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires used to cost one-fifth more than other standard tires. And yet they gained the topmost place in Tiredom.

Three things caused this extra price.

In the base of each tire we vulcanize six flat bands of 126 braided wires. It is thus that we make a hookless tire—a tire that can't be rim-cut.

Then every No-Rim-Cut gets the "On-Air Cure." It is final-vulcanized on air bags. This is done to save blow-outs. It adds to our tire cost $1,500 per day.

Then we use in each tread base a patent "rivet" fabric. We paid $50,000 for this feature to prevent tread separation.

Not one of these costly features is used in any other make of tire.

Now No Extra Price

Now these same tires, with all of these features, cost you no extra price. Not a standard tire of any type costs you any less.

And these are the reasons:

Our overhead cost, in days of small output, ran as high as thirty per cent.

It is now less than six per cent. Our multiplied output, in this one way, has cut our tire cost twenty-four per cent.

We have built new factories with modern equipment, with every new invention in labor-saving machinery.

We have clung to small capitalization. On this account we can and do keep our profits under 8½ per cent.

All these savings, as fast as we made them, went to users of our tires.

Note What Our Price Includes

Rival makers must in some way meet the Goodyear price. But please consider what our price includes.

A tire that never rim-cuts.

A tire built to save blow-outs, in a way so costly that no one else employs it.

A tire built in our patent way to prevent tread separation. And built in every other way for longest mileage, regardless of the cost.

That's Why They Outsell

Hundreds of thousands now use these tires. They far outsell any other. Yet the demand from users is now growing faster than ever before in our history.

That's for the reasons told you.

Rim-Cutting alone, with old-type tires, ruins 31.8 per cent—almost one tire in three. Blow-outs and loose treads, which our methods combat, are immensely costly items.

You should get these savings---get them all---when you pay the Goodyear price.

Our dealers are everywhere.

Autodrome Plans Bring Joy

Peculiar Thrills Promised

Almost everyone who has seen an automobile race of any length, whether it were a road race such as the Vanderbilt Cup or Grand Prize, a 500-mile ten-hour grind such as the International Sweepstakes at Indianapolis, or any of the smaller, shorter contests that have been pulled off on roads or circular tracks built upon the ground, have wondered just where the excitement lay and have come to the conclusion that automobile racing can be bested by many other sports.

They are right. That is, they are right that automobile road, dirt and cement track racing needs more excitement.

But it has remained for Atlanta to provide a means whereby automobile races will produce thrills every second of the contest.

Autodrome Produced.

The answer is the Atlanta Autodrome. This will be a board track one mile in length, built of two-by-fours, on the triple radius style, with an angle of 45 degrees on the turns and 85 feet in width.

This track will be built. In fact, the organization charter is being applied for, the material has been bought, the site leased and the ground already partly prepared.

Jack Prince had the idea. He presented it to influential business men of Atlanta. They debated the project thoroughly and the verdict was "Jack, you've got a winner!"

Wires were sent all over the country. Manufacturers, officials of the automobile associations and prominent drivers all promised co-operation.

The answer was flashed back from every quarter, "Build it." Drivers, the most prominent in the world, said, "We will bring down our string of cars and drive without a guarantee. Your plan is the solution of the racing problem."

So Prince started to duplicate his track at Los Angeles.

Big Race Disappointing.

There have been various races held on circular tracks, from the short sprints on half-mile courses to the long grinds of the big brick and cement speedways, and they have all fallen more or less short in interest.

Of course the International Sweepstakes, the big annual event at Indianapolis, draws huge crowds and most of them stay all day, but this is because the day is a big holiday and the race is the main event of the year.

At the third annual 500-mile contest last May the stands were filled to capacity by 9 o'clock, but probably 99 per cent of the spectators went back to the city after the winning car came across the tape wondering why people sit all day long on a hard seat, sometimes in the sun, watching powerful automobiles hum down the straightaway only to be lost to view at the turn. The same monotonous grind for eight hours! If any of them think that they really enjoy this kind of race they must be fooling themselves.

Advantage in Prince Track.

Now take the proposed Atlanta Autodrome. A mile board track built on the triple radius plan. Every possible inch of the course in full view of everyone at all times. Cars will mount the course at a speed of 65 miles per hour and work up to a maximum of 120.

Imagine a quartet of powerful racing cars, manned by the most expert drivers in the world, coming down the course at a rate of 110 miles per hour, the huge exhaust pipes shooting a streak of flame, lighting up the faces and disclosing intense effort and a grim determination to win.

The cars are nearing the turn and in full view of everyone they take the 45-degree angle, running four abreast, and plunge into the stretch only to take the other turn in a second. Suddenly one car forges ahead, and speeding up ten miles an hour more takes those steep banks on the wing and with the other three following in close pursuit, car No. 1 sprints into the finish in hair-raising, grandstand style.

Thrills? Why, there will be one every second of the time!

Eighty Acres in Tract.

Eighty acres of land will be contained within the inclosure of the track. This space will be utilized for tennis courts, club houses and other forms of amusement. Colonel Thomas B. Felder has donated 120 acres lying adjacent to the track and this property will be converted into golf links and polo grounds.

The course is to be built on Collier road, one-quarter of a mile from Peachtree road, and the Georgia Railway and Electric Company has offered to build a spur track with a loop all the way around the track. This will make possible a fast schedule of twenty minutes from the heart of the city. The decision of the railway company to make this expenditure only proves that there is no speculation as to the success of the undertaking. It will be the crowning feature of Atlanta's supremacy.

Names of Promoters.

A petition for charter is pending, requested by John S. Cohen, T. B. Felder, D. S. Walraven, M. Nabors, John Aldredge, Jack Prince, Frank Weldon, Wylie West, G. W. Los Angeles Man Declares Tourists Miss Much Pleasure by Neglected De Luxe Sedan.

That it is now not only possible but easy to make a motor trip across the continent in a closed car has just been demonstrated by J. W. Catron, a Los Angeles machinery contractor.

Mr. Catron and his party went to Rochester, N. Y., to attend a family reunion and a wedding celebration, and arrived after their trip from Los Angeles, with a report of de luxe travel that has aroused the envy of all who have heard it.

"My wife and I have always maintained that a one-compartment closed car would be ideal for such a trip," said Mr. Catron. "We bought our Studebaker '35' Sedan in the spring, tried it out in California and found it fully up to our hopes. We laid out a schedule, calling for 103 miles a day and started, the crew being composed of Mrs. Catron, my mother, Mrs. Catron's maid and myself.

"Before we had been long on the road, we revised the schedule to 125 miles a day, and bettered even this figure throughout, making Rochester in 21 running days.

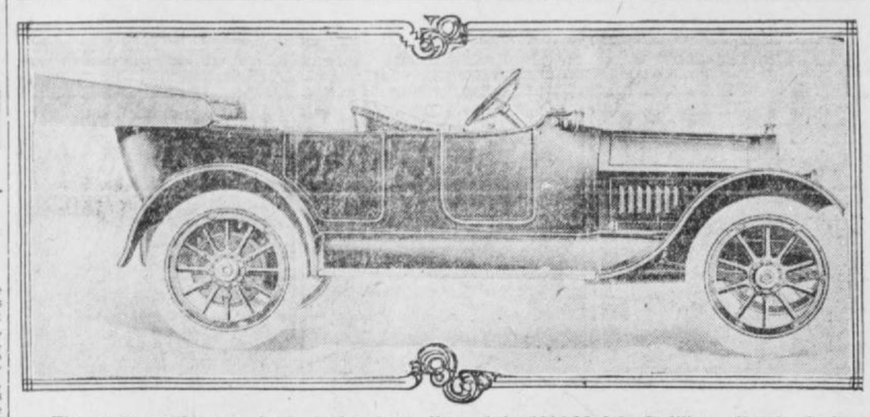
"Those who regard their closed cars as suitable only for pavement driving are missing a large share of the enjoyment that might easily be theirs. I have owned and driven touring cars for many years, but I have never made a trip in such perfect comfort as this one.

"We made no effort at extreme speed; in fact, I never let the car exceed 38 miles an hour. On a turn, a Sedan swings a bit more than a touring car due to its higher center of gravity; so I took all turns, particularly those in the mountains, very carefully.

"We studied the various adjustments for ventilation and found that it was perfectly possible to travel even through the deserts without discomfort, keeping a cool, dustless breeze circulating through the interior of the car at all times. Of course, the Sedan body is impervious to rain and cold.

"A feature that adds much to the comfort of our car is the Studebaker electric equipment. The starter never failed to crank the motor, and the electric lights made travel in the night over strange roads as safe as by daylight. In general, the transcontinental highway is in fine shape now. Except for a few short stretches, the worst roads we found were in the thickly-settled parts of the Middle West."

ATTRACTIVE NEW CADILLAC MODEL



The accompanying cut shows the handsome lines of the 1914 Model Cadillac. Frank Steinhauer, local dealer, has been kept unusually busy of late showing this model, and he declares it is a repetition of Cadillac sensations.

DANGER OF UNDER-INFLATION IN TIRES.

"Some people have an idea that excessive heat causes expansion of air within an automobile tire," says L. C. Rockhill. "They consequently keep their tires under-inflated, being afraid of blow-outs from excessive pressure and resulting injuries. This is a popular fallacy which seems at present to be firmly fixed in the minds of automobile users. There never was a more ridiculous or costly idea entertained by tire users. It is impossible for the air in a tire to expand sufficiently from heat to cause dangerous strain, and no harm need be feared on this score. However, the damage to tires by keeping them under-inflated is tremendous. Tire users should keep their tires at all times inflated to the recommended pressures."

EMPHASIZES GOOD ROADS.

GREENSBORO GA., Aug. 9.—Judge James B. Park, one of the best known citizens in this section of the State, is an ardent advocate of good roads. In his charge to the Greene County Grand Jury he took occasion to stress the value of good roads in the development of citizenship. The Grand Jury accordingly spent nearly a day inspecting the roads in an automobile.

LARGE EXPORTS OF MACHINES IN FISCAL YEAR

$40,000,000 Worth of Automobiles and Parts to Other Countries—Imports $2,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—According to figure compiled by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, $40,000,000 worth of automobiles and parts thereof were sent out of continental United States in the fiscal year 1913, against about $1,000,000 worth in 1903, a decade earlier.

These figures of 1913 include $26,000,000 worth of finished automobiles sent to foreign countries, about $2,500,000 worth to Hawaii and Porto Rico; $4,000,000 worth of tires, $2,000,000 worth of automobile engines and $5,250,000 worth of parts other than tires and engines.

It was only in 1902 that the exports of automobiles became sufficient to justify a separate record of this class of merchandise, the figures for that year, including the separate parts, being less than $1,000,000. In 1907, five years later, they were but $6,000,000, and in 1910 approximately $12,000,000 in value.

The number of machines exported to foreign countries in 1913 was 25,000, against 7,000 in 1910 and a little less than 3,000 in 1907, the first year in which the number was stated in the export records of the country. The average price at which they were exported was about $1,700 each in 1907. The 1913 exports included about 1,000 commercial automobiles at an average of $1,800 each and 24,000 other machines at an average price of about $1,000 each.

Unique Auto Record By Denver Concern

As an indication of the constant improvement of the automobile business, the Willys-Overland Company, of Toledo, Ohio, points to the record established by its Denver distributor, the Overland Auto Company, during the season of 1913. The Western concern's original order for 1913 Overlands called for 400 cars, but within a very short time after the announcement of the model this was increased to 500, with a request that if possible it was to be allowed 100 additional cars.

Because of the great demand for Overlands, the extra allotments could not be made. On July 4 the factory received word from Denver that but 23 of the 500 Overlands remained unsold.

"These will be gone long before the new cars come. We will need a greatly increased allotment for 1914 and are telling you about it this early so that we will not be overlooked," wrote W. J. Carter, of the Denver firm.

HERE IS BEST WAY TO APPLY A TIRE.

Before applying tires, remove rust and all other foreign matter. If the tire has been ridden deflated at any time, mud may have accumulated on the rim and unless this is removed the tire can not adjust itself properly. Soapstone dusted on the rim will act as a lubricant and make it much easier for the tire beads to slip into their correct position, thereby reducing the danger of pinching the inner tube.

Before placing the inner tube inside of case, inflate just enough to round it out. Do not use a tube of the wrong size and be sure that the spreader of the valve is adapted for the particular type of case, whether regular clincher, quick detachable clincher or Q. D. cable base. Dust tube and inside of case with talc, which will reduce the friction and prevent adhesion of the tube to case after heated in service. If too much talc is used, however, and any water should work its way on the inside of the tire, there is danger of grit and attending injury to the tube. Powdered graphite is not quite so nice to handle as talc but is a much more durable lubricant.

POPE-HARTFORD LOWERS RECORD

Run From Oakland to Sacramento Made by Jack Fleming in 145 Minutes—132 Miles.

Another well-known California road record was recently smashed by Jack Fleming, driving a Pope-Hartford car, when he made the mountainous run from Oakland to Sacramento, a distance of 132 miles, in 145 minutes, clipping 21 minutes and 45 seconds from the existing record. The new record is believed to be one that will stand for some time.

Fleming started from the foot of Broadway, Oakland, at 3:55 a. m. and checked in at the State Capitol at 6:20, after one of the fastest exhibitions of road driving ever made in the West. He used the same Pope-Hartford car which he handled in the Panama-Pacific road race.

Winding Roads Encountered.

The run from the foot of Broadway to Stockton was made in 1 hour and 38 minutes, and, considering the fact that a great part of this distance was over winding roads through the Dublin Canyon and between Livermore and Tracy, the average time he maintained is remarkable.

The roads are fine throughout the entire stretch over which Fleming raced, but even with the best of roads such time is easily one of the best demonstrations that has ever been accomplished on the coast. Notwithstanding the terrific pace Fleming held from Oakland to Stockton, he even did better on the long stretch between that place and Sacramento. According to the speedometer on his car, he covered the 47.3 miles in 47 minutes, or better than a mile a minute.

Teams Blocked Way.

Fleming reported after the record-breaking drive that they would have established even better time but for the fact that they encountered several teams near Stockton and had to slow down in order not to take any chances of accidents. He also had one puncture, which cost several minutes of their time. Between Tracy and Stockton Fleming reached a speed of 85 miles an hour, which is as fast, if not faster, than was accomplished in the Panama-Pacific road race.

BEAUTY AS AGENT IN SELLING AUTOS

'Mechanical Age' Has Passed and Finish Is Requisite, Says the Local Hudson Dealer.

It is beauty that sells motor cars. Buyers are fast learning that with a few striking exceptions automobiles are pretty much alike in mechanical excellence. Almost any well-made car put on the market by a responsible company will operate with reasonable satisfaction.

The day when a driver must needs be a mechanical genius has passed. Few owners carry overalls on their cars, as was the custom not very many years ago. The sight of stalled cars by the roadside is to-day infrequent. Buyers now look more to beauty, to comforts, to conveniences, in the engineering department of the manufacturers of the Hudson car, asserts J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., the local Hudson dealer, there are many eminent designers whose sole attention is given to creating lines of beauty in the Hudson cars.

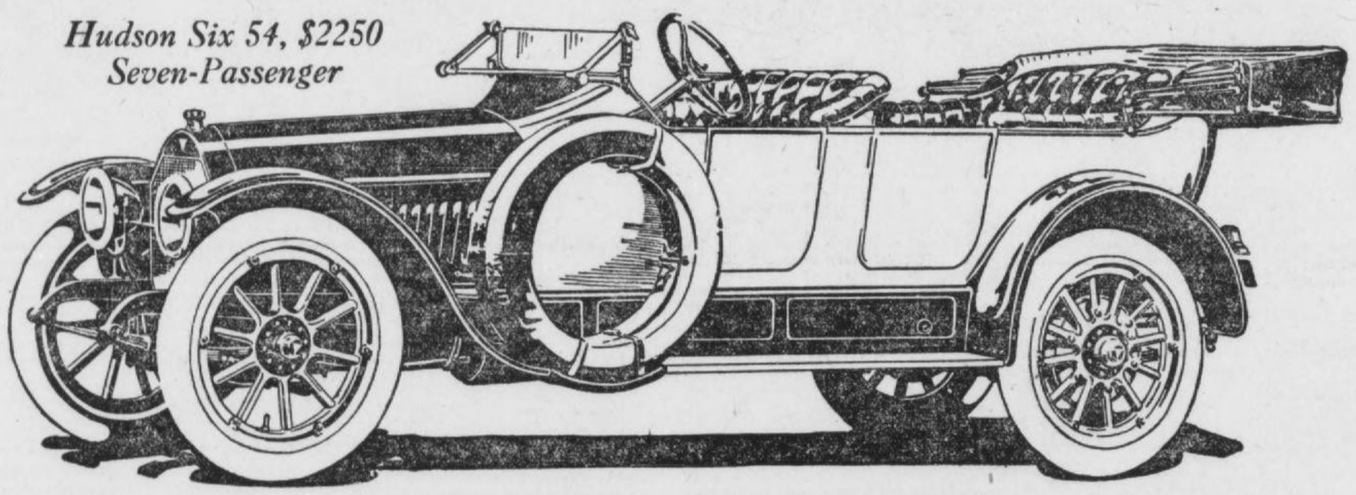
The problem is a difficult one. The steel frames and motors are inflexible. They are full of angles and harshness. To clothe this mass of cold metal with smoothly flowing lines of grace and beauty is no easy task. And to include in a beautiful body the ruggedness and strength that will make it impervious to rain, sun, mud, stones, heat and cold is to accomplish a work of some magnitude.

The fine finish on a piano is readily preserved. The polish on a piece of mahogany furniture need not be weatherproof. These articles are never exposed to elemental damage. But with a motor car its owner expects as fine a finish as on a piano, as perfect a surface as on a piece of mahogany. And with this he demands that his car be out of doors most of its life.

Beauty in a motor car has a cash value. It adds to the satisfaction an owner receives from his car. And it enhances its selling capacity when he is ready for a new car. None save the owner sees the engine or other mechanical parts. All see the outside of the car. All that is usually demanded by the public of an automobile is that it must be beautiful and that it must "go."

The New Ideal of a Distinguished Car

Hudson Six 54, $2250
Seven-Passenger



HERE now is a car which typifies the ideals of the time. This streamline body—this long, sloping hood—this absence of angle at the dash—this low-hung chassis—these crowned fenders—this placing of extra tires so the front doors are left clear—these things belong to the car of today.

The consensus of the world's best opinion is that this type of car marks the coming ideal car. These are radical changes but they are coming as surely as foredoors came—and as suddenly.

All the best foreign cars—English, French and German—will this year exhibit exclusively this new streamline body. And all men know that what they adopt in body design becomes the world-wide vogue.

Our designers have added a hundred minor effects. They have Americanized—have Hudsonized—the type. So the car is distinctive. There will be no other just like it. But it embodies what we regard as the highest conception of the modern trend in bodies.

And we believe that every connoisseur will consider this new HUDSON Six the handsomest car exhibited.

Engineering Pauses

We can claim in this car no great advance as regards fine engineering and no HUDSON owner expects it. Fine engineering has limits. For the past four years Howard E. Coffin and his able engineers have given their best to the HUDSON. Last year they brought Sixes pretty close to perfection. So close that the HUDSON Six jumped in one year into the foremost rank among Sixes.

These men have worked out in this new-model car a vast number of minor engineering improvements. They have added scores of new mechanical features—some of them quite important. But we never expect to build a much better chassis than we built in our last year's Six.

This year's advances lie mainly in beauty, in comfort, in conveniences, in room. We have combined the best in lines, finish and equipment with the best in engineering. We have succeeded in making the HUDSON Six the masterpiece it is.

Now the Ideal Car

We now feel that this HUDSON 54 offers the utmost in every wanted feature. It has the staunchness of steel Pullmans. It has the comfort of Turkish lounging chairs. It has the speed of express trains. It is free from all the troubles which annoy the inexpert.

No man knows how to build a car more handsome and impressive. No conveniences are absent, no modern features lacking.

And all these things are here included in a Six 54, with seven-passenger body, at the record price of $2250 (f. o. b. Detroit, Michigan).

The New Features

These are among the new features we bring out in this model. No mention is here made of the countless features in previous HUDSON models which we still retain.

Seven-passenger body.
135-inch wheelbase.
Left side drive. Right hand control.
36 x 4½-inch tires.

Four forward speeds.
Pure streamline body.
Low-hung body.
No angles at the dash.
Wide tonneau doors.
Gasoline tank in dash.
