OVER HALF OF SHRINE VOTE PLEDGED TO ATLANTA

Contestants for 1914 Convention Have Narrowed Down to This City and Memphis.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

DALLAS, TEXAS, May 12.—Atlanta now claims, as pledged, 250 of the 460 votes in the Imperial Council for the 1914 meeting place. Memphis still is alive and the fight has seemingly narrowed down to the two cities. If Atlanta should lose the committee's recommendation the Georgians will carry the fight to the convention floor.

Potentate Forrest Adair declares it is all over but the shouting. "Atlanta will be the Shrine Mecca in 1914, unless I am very badly mistaken," he said.

The first cheering news received by Atlanta when the delegation arrived Sunday morning was that the seventeen votes of Texas are "sewed up" for Georgia. Then followed Oklahoma, New York, Pennsylvania, Oregon, British Columbia and Honolulu to the Georgia standard.

Memphis, however, still is a menace to Atlanta's chances. The Tennesseeans claim that they were first in the field for the meeting, and they are using this argument constantly.

Memphis' tactics may result in a dark horse selection. The committee on the next meeting place will make its selection Tuesday and inform the Imperial Council of its action either Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning.

Make Big Noise for Atlanta.

If there is anybody in Dallas who does not know that Yaarab Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, is here, and has come to bring the Imperial Council to Atlanta in 1914, he must be deaf, dumb and blind.

The campaign on behalf of Atlanta was started the very minute Illustrious Potentate Forrest Adair stepped off the train in this town, the head and front of the most enthusiastic and determined delegation that ever went out of Atlanta after something the town wanted or needed in its business.

To be sure, the immediate thing in hand is the session of the Imperial Council now on in Dallas, but the first thing an Atlanta delegate says to a brother Noble, after making himself known, is "How about this Imperial Council thing for Atlanta next year?"

Atlanta Best Advertised.

Far and away the best advertised bidder for the honor of entertaining the Shrine next year is Atlanta. The fame of the Yaarab Temple has been perfectly secure in Shrinedom for many moons, and there isn't a visiting Shriner in this Texas metropolis who hasn't heard of that great "Atlanta spirit," and the amazing things it has accomplished heretofore.

There is a feeling in the atmosphere that everything is about over, so far as next year's session is concerned, except the hurrahing for and congratulating of Atlanta.

Still, nobody is resting. There will be no sort of let up, not so much as a hint of it, until after the vote has been taken in the Imperial Council, and Atlanta officially declared the winner.

Forrest Adair's Nobles have undertaken to convince the Shriners of two things. First, that Atlanta wants the Imperial Council to be its guest next year, sincerely and earnestly, and second, that Atlanta can and will entertain and take care of the gatherinz most handsomely.

"We have convinced them that we have the hotel accommodations," said

BURNS CALLED INTO PHAGAN MYSTERY; ON WAY FROM EUROPE

Famous American Detective Cables He Will Return Immediately In Response to Col. Felder's Plea For His Services to Capture Slayer.

William J. Burns, the world-famed detective, probably will take charge of the Phagan case.

The man who unearthed the dynamite outrages and brought the McNamara brothers to justice, will in all probability come to Atlanta within the next few days and lend his efforts toward clearing up the mystery of the death by strangulation of Mary Phagan.

This information was made public Monday following correspondence between Colonel Thomas B. Felder and Mr. Burns since the discovery of the body in the pencil factory.

Mr. Burns is now on his way from Europe, and will arrive on Tuesday or the following day. Upon his arrival in New York he will confer with detectives there and then proceed to Atlanta.

Credit Largely Due Felder.

The services of Mr. Burns have been secured largely through Mr. Felder's efforts, it has developed. Upon Mr. Felder's retention by the citizens of Marietta and relatives of the slain girl to work on the case he journeyed to New York for a conference with Raymond Burns, son of William J. Burns, on the case with a view to getting the great detective to come here.

At that time the elder Burns was in Europe investigating the disappearance of Wilberforce Martin, and upon being cabled of Mr. Felder's desires replied that he would return immediately.

Monday it was announced that Burns was on his way to America and that Colonel Felder would take up the Phagan case with him. Felder, it is understood, will give up his own fee to employ Burns and will assist in raising funds for the purpose.

Mr. Burns' warm personal friendship for Mr. Felder has served in a large measure to draw the wizard into the local mystery investigation. The history of their acquaintance leads back to the South Carolina dispensary graft case, which Mr. Felder prosecuted and on which the detective was employed. It was there the two met.

When the Phagan murder was committed and its baffling details confronted Atlanta police, Mr. Felder lost no time in communicating with his friend. That the man who has struck terror to the hearts of criminals by his marvelous knowledge of their ways and his wonderful deductive powers will quickly clear up the mystery is declared certain by those who have followed his work.

With the final rounding up of the evidence against Leo M. Frank and Newt Lee nearing completion, Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey on Monday began the process of elimination of unimportant matter and the shaping of the case for presentation to the Grand Jury.

Waits to Arrange Evidence.

Whether the case will be ready for that tribunal this week is a matter of doubt. The great mass of testimony presents a tangle which will require some time before it is straightened out and arranged properly. Solicitor Dorsey declared Monday morning that he would not present the matter to the Grand Jury until it has been put into a clear, concise form and can be easily handled.

Quick disposition of the cases of the accused men is assured once the matter is placed before the Grand Jury. Should that body find the evidence sufficient to hold Frank and Lee to trial, their cases will be taken up immediately before Judge L. S. Roan, who will open the Criminal Court division of the Fulton County Superior Court on next Monday.

The evidence against both men will be placed before the Grand Jury simultaneously, according to Mr. Dorsey.

Sleuth Leaves Mysteriously.

Much importance is attached to the departure of Solicitor Dorrey's detective Monday morning for parts unknown. While the Solicitor, when questioned as to the destination and purpose of the detective's trip, would give no direct answer, it is believed that the mission is in connection with some clew in the Phagan case which has been unearthed by the mysterious investigator.

The fact that a large number of "character witnesses" are now being interrogated in Brooklyn, N. Y., the former home of Frank, and in other parts of the country bears out this supposition.

That the detective has not confined himself to the theory followed by city police officials in their accumulation of evidence against Frank and Lee, however, was admitted by Solicitor Dorsey and also the possibility that he has stumbled upon an important clew.

Wife Sees Frank in Tower.

While police are exhausting every available source of information to unravel the mystery, Frank and Lee remain in their cells in the Tower chafing with impatience.

Mrs. Frank went to the Tower on Sunday afternoon, paying her first visit to her husband since his arrest nearly two weeks ago. Mrs. Frank was accompanied to the jail by her father, Emil Selig, of 68 East Georgia Avenue. They remained in consultation with the prisoner for nearly an hour.

It was definitely learned Monday that Chief Lanford had not completely eliminated Newt Lee, the negro night watchman of the pencil factory, and that there still exists a suspicion that he may know something of the crime.

In fact, the night watchman has come to be regarded as the real puzzle in the case.

Chief Lanford is not satisfied as to Lee and any possible part he may have played in the tragedy. He declared he had lain awake at night trying to figure out satisfactorily the negro's position.

First Words Still Puzzle.

The point that prevents detectives from eliminating Lee is his first statements to officers following his discovery of the dead girl's body. When he first called the police station, he said he had found a "white woman dead in the basement." The officers who hastened to the factory declared it would have been impossible for him to have discerned whether the girl was white or black from his position when he found her.

When the officers arrived, Lee told them the girl was lying flat of her back. They went into the basement and found the dead girl lying face downward. Lee also told them that the girl had a wound in the back of the head.

Detectives say it is possible that the negro, in the excitement of finding the body, may have been honestly mistaken as to its position, but, at

TAG DAY RECEIPTS CERTAIN TO ESTABLISH NEW RECORD; ATLANTA GIVES LIBERALLY

Atlanta capitulated Monday to an irresistible force of the city's fairest young women. It was a willing, but costly surrender.

Each of the thousands of captives, as a token of surrender, gave up some part of his or her hard-earned money and received a tag which indicated the money was for the benefit of the Sheltering Arms Orphans' Home.

One of these tags was supposed to insure the "taggee" against being surrounded again by a group of the fair soldiers and submitting to another depletion of his exchequer.

But it didn't.

The person who had any appearance of prosperity was a marked man. Few escaped without the signs of repeated surrender. Many proudly wore as many as a half dozen of the lavender tags.

Records Sure to Go.

Before the Tag Day campaign was in progress long it became known that all records would be broken. The record last year was $5,100. By noon Monday the girls were bringing in buckets full of nickels, dimes and dollars to headquarters in the Peters Building. The huge display of wealth was soon tied up in bags and the officers began to take on the appearance of the Bank of England.

The campaign was well organized. Before the average business man had finished his breakfast, the girls were being mobilized at headquarters. By the time that this same business man was in the street car or in his automobile en route to his office, the maidens armed with hundreds of tags were in waiting for him.

There was no escape. On every corner there was one or more of the attractive, smiling girls stationed. If a person succeeded in getting by one of them without buying a tag it was only to be repeatedly stopped until he finally gave in.

The girls stood at the doors of all the public buildings. They swarmed into the offices in droves. Not many attempted to make any resistance. He who did was not wise. He spent an uncomfortable day. They even invaded the Capitol, tagging everyone from Governor Brown down to the most humble attache.

"I am sure we are going to break a record for the amount of money taken in," said Mrs. W. S. Elkin, of the central committee. "Even if we don't we will have broken one record and that is in the number of pretty girls we have had to tag the people. I never saw so many in my life.

Money Is Flowing in.

"The money is simply flowing in from all directions and the returns up to the present are very encouraging. We can scarcely keep up with the demand for more buckets and tags. Everybody seems enthusiastic and those who are giving are doing so cheerfully and a great many have stopped in and made voluntary subscriptions of very substantial amounts."

Mrs. J. Frank Meador, stationed at the entrance to the Atlanta National Bank, was apparently vying with the tellers laboring in the banking room.

"Business is fine," she smiled. "I have nearly $100 already in my bucket and everyone seems willing and anxious to contribute. I have just gotten one donation of $20 and any number of others ranging from $1 to $5."

Buckets Get Too Heavy.

Mrs. Frank Dabney, Mrs. L. C. McKinney and Mrs. James Ison, stationed at the Steiner-Emery Building, were getting the money by the bucket full and during the morning it became necessary for them to make frequent trips to headquarters, across the street, in order to relieve themselves of the weight of silver.

A particularly attractive group of girls is that on the Aragon Hotel block. Mrs. Charles Godfrey is in charge there, and she says that this Tag Day is much better than last year's.

Miss Maude Arthurs Weir, a pretty Canadian girl, came all the way from Toronto to help the "taggers." Miss Weir was here last year and said she would not miss an Atlanta Tag Day for worlds. Her contributions have ranged from 3 cents to $1.

Miss Cobbie Vaughan says the men call her "girlie," "bright eyes" and "cutie"—but they pay for the privilege. Misses Annie Sykes Rice, Douglass and Edith Dunson all agree that the men are "perfectly nice and sweet."

One Policeman is Lucky.

The policeman in front of the Candler Building says he has the prettiest girls in town on his beat. Mrs. Massengale is chaperoning this group. She says receipts are much larger than they were in 1912. Miss Mainer Lee Hardin is of the opinion that the men would have a Tag Day, too, if they knew how much fun it is. Miss Marian Perdue finds the men very nice and generous, not one in a hundred refusing to help.

Mrs. W. B. Seabrook is at the Empire Life Building, in charge of a party of girls. She expresses herself as delighted with the contributions. Miss Frances Seabrook, of Westminster, Md., is helping her, and says that the Atlanta men are much more liberal than those of Baltimore.

Facts Hard to Explain.

"There are many apparently little things in this case that become veritable mountains when we try to get over them. Newt Lee's statements may have been entirely innocent—if they were, they are hard to explain and get out of the way."

The Chief smilingly added:

"If a fellow doesn't care to become gray-haired or land in the insane asylum, he'd better not spend too much time trying to figure out the truth of this mystery and reconcile all of its varied phases and features."

The Pinkertons have instructions to find the murderer, no matter who he may be. Operatives of the agency employed by the National Pencil Company recently put the matter squarely up to Luther Rosser, the company's attorney. He said:

Urge Diligent Search.

"Find the murderer of Mary Phagan. Work in co-operation with the police, work with anyone, work any way that might lead you to success; let your chips fall where they may. You are employed to hunt the murderer until he is found and convicted. It matters not who is guilty."

Five men from the detective agency are working on the case, under the direction of Assistant Superintendent Harry Scott. Through City Detective Black the Pinkertons work in connection with the city police.

Leo M. Frank was visited by Mr Rosser at his cell in the Tower Sunday. They were together only a short while. Mr. Rosser stated he had only paid a "social visit" and had not discussed the case.

Chief of Detectives Lanford said Monday that he was satisfied with the progress of the case so far. He said that the investigation unavoidably had been slow and burdened with a mass of evidence, much of which would have to be eliminated in the final consideration of the case. He was pleased with the new developments which he said added much strength to the line of evidence his men are building up.

SHRINERS WIRE THEY'LL BRING BACK "BACON"

Mr. Adair to me to-day. "That seems to be the only thing that ever has gotten on anybody's nerves with respect to Atlanta's chances of getting the meeting next year.

"There is no difficulty in convincing people that Atlanta is a fine place to visit at any time and for any purpose. Everybody has heard of Atlanta, and knows it is a great city. The very term 'the Atlanta spirit' comes readily to the lips of people living many miles away. Some few have wondered, however, if a city the size of Atlanta can take care of the Imperial Council, and the big influx of visitors it brings into a city always.

"When I show them that we are prepared to take care of 60,000 visitors in first class shape, however, they get away from that hotel doubt in a hurry. The crowds attending the Imperial Council gatherings generally run around forty thousand.

"I hope the folks back home understand how enthusiastic our bunch is. We have come here to land the next year's meeting, and we are going to land it. You wire the Georgian that I say we are coming home with the bacon."

Working in Pairs.

It is herewith wired.

And I believe it.

Certainly there isn't a man in this outfit that isn't rooting and boosting to beat the band for the Atlanta meeting next year. Generally, the delegation works in pairs. In this fashion, they scatter all over Dallas, and stop to orate wherever a bunch of Shriners can be located.

The big guns of the Imperial Council have had Atlanta and 1914 drummed into their heads ever since they came to town.

The conviction is deepening every minute that Atlanta is to win out. Forrest Adair already has outlined a real, sure enough Georgia barbecue and a lot of other things as inducements to visitors to go to Atlanta next year.

From all quarters, I hear nothing but praise of Atlanta and its pluck in raising approximately $100,000 in twelve hours for the Imperial Council's entertainment in 1914.

CITIZENS OF CALIFORNIA TO VOTE ON JAPANESE LAND LAW

SACREMENTO, May 12.—That pressure from the national administration had forced a delay in the anti-alien land legislation and that the legislature would at once order a special election in October to consider the anti-alien bill under the referendum and more drastic measures under the initiative, was reported here this afternoon. It was reported that Governor Johnson had agreed to this plan, but he would make no statement regarding the subject.

SACRAMENTO, May 12.—Referendum of the anti-alien bill to the people of California has been determined on by the Democratic leaders of the State.

This was learned to-day following the receipt of a telegram from President Wilson to Governor Johnson asking him to veto the measure.

The bill was scheduled to reach Governor Johnson to-day from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, where it has been held up.

The session of the Legislature ends to-day, and under the provisions of the constitution 30 days ensue during which time the Governor may sign or veto the bill. At the end of that time if it receives no action at the hands of the Executive it becomes a law.

Governor Stays Silent.

The Governor to-day admitted receiving the message from President Wilson, transmitted through Secretary of State Bryan, but refused to comment on it. It was generally believed here that eventually he would sign the measure. Theodore A. Bell, national Democratic committeeman, is here watching the situation closely. He is the leader of the referendum plan.

It was learned that petitions calling for a referendum vote on the measure have been prepared and sent to various central points in the State. The moment the anti-alien land bill becomes a law these petitions will be circulated. It is confidently expected that a sufficient number of names to insure the call of a referendum election will be secured within a few hours after the circulation of the petition starts.

The result of a referendum would be to delay the whole matter until 1914, unless a special election were called. This would have to be authorized by the Legislature, and a special session will be necessary to call the election. It is believed that Governor Johnson will call a special session to hold an election if the referendum petition goes through.

Wilson Asks Johnson To Veto Anti-Alien Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson, through Secretary of State Bryan, has made a formal plea to Governor Johnson, of California, to veto the alien-land bill.

The message to California's Governor was framed at the White House last night. It sets forth in diplomatic language the urgency of the situation created by the demands of Viscount Chinda, the Japanese Ambassador.

The message to Governor Johnson follows:

Two Courses Open.

The President directs me to express his appreciation of your courtesy in delaying action on the land bill now before you, until its provisions could be communicated to the Japanese Government and considered by it.

His Excellency, Baron Chinda, has, on behalf of his Government, presented an earnest protest against the measure. As you have before you but two alternatives, viz, to approve or to veto, it will avail nothing to recall to your attention the amendments suggested to the Legislature; and as the President has already laid before you his views upon the subject, it is unnecessary to reiterate them.

He passes over the questions affecting treaty rights for two reasons; first, because the bill passed by the Legislature is avowedly intended to conform to treaty obligations, and, second, because any conflict complained of would be a matter for the courts, but the President feels justified in expressing again his desire that action on the subject be deferred for this session, and he expresses the desire the more freely because the Legislatur can be reconvened at any time if the welfare of the State requires it.

He is fully alive to the importance of removing any root of discord which may create antagonism between American citizens and the subjects of Oriental nations residing here, but he is impelled by a sense of duty to express the hope that you will see fit to allow time for diplomatic effort. The nations affected by the proposed law are friendly nations—nations that have shown themselves willing to co-operate in the establishment of harmonious relations between their people and ours.

President Offers Aid.

If a postponement commends itself to your judgment the President will be pleased to co-operate in a systematic effort to discover and correct any evils that may exist in connection with land ownership by aliens.

The decision of the administration to urge Governor Johnson to use his power of veto to postpone any land legislation was reached after a series of conferences between the President, Secretary Bryan and John Bassett Moore, counselor of the State Department, and frequent calls at the department by Ambassador Chinda. It was realized that any further attempt to have the bill enacted by the California Legislature amended would be fruitless, since Secretary Bryan's trip to Sacramento was unavailing and the Legislature is to adjourn next Tuesday.

Until Governor Johnson's reply is received the Government probably will make no reply to the protest of Japan further than to acquaint the Ambassador with the fact that every possible effort has been made to have action in California delayed, pending a settlement of the problems involved by diplomacy.

Navy Short of Coal, Battleships and Men.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Alarming developments at the State Department and the White House following the delivery of Japan's protest against the California alien land bill, regarded practically as an ultimatum, has called attention to the unpreparedness of the two offensive and defensive arms of the Government.

Summarized, the unpreparedness of the United States, as obtained from these sources, consists in the following detail:

First. There is only a deceptive preponderance of fighting strength in ships as between Japan and the United States.

Second. There is not coal enough in the Pacific coaling stations to maintain a battle fleet for one month on cruise.

Third. No preparation has been made by the Navy Department since the Japanese situation became acute to remedy the fatal negligence by establishing a sufficient coaling base anywhere outside the limits of the United States proper.

Fourth. The United States will be forced, in case of hostilities in the Pacific, to make its base at San Francisco or at Puget Sound, and it has not one-fifth the coal there that should be there.

Fifth. The Navy Department has a working arrangement with five transcontinental railroads by which they could be utilized in emergency, but, so far, no specific contract for the shipment of coal to the Pacific Coast has been made.

Sixth. The total coal on hand in the navy on July 1 last was 361,757 tons. There were contracted for 63,499 tons. Since that time, according to officials of the Navy Department competent to know, there has been no effort to get larger deliveries or to get options on coal steamers or to make preparation for the rush of material to the Pacific Coast.

Seventh. There are at least eighteen vessels of the battleship type which have been held in reserve and others in ordinary which would be necessary to put in complete commission in case the Atlantic fleet of battleships now equipped were sent to the Pacific. These battleships in reserve need about 10,000 men to fill up their complements, and Congress has not been asked for authority to recruit sufficient men for a fleet. The law limits the enrollment of the navy to 51,500 men. The present enrollment is about 47,000, and if completed up to 51,000 men would scarcely be more than sufficient to equip the emergency fleet of battleships which would have to be sent to the Pacific.

The condition of the Navy Department, as summarized above, was obtained to-day from three of the experts in the Navy Department upon whom the Government would have to depend in case there were a call to arms.

Senators Applaud Plea for Bigger Navy.

NEW YORK, May 12.—"Any man who will put in the way of the United States the slightest obstruction, either by his voice or vote, to a progressive national defense program, who can see that our safety, the peace we love so much and the peace of the world depends on a navy larger than the navies of Europe, is lacking in true patriotism."

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs, sitting at luncheon on Vincent Astor's yacht, Noma, at West Point, heard this statement from the lips of Representative Robert F. Broussard, of Louisiana. The committee, just about to land on the rocky slope of the war academy on annual inspection, applauded Broussard to the echo. He continued:

"International peace—yea, even the solid establishment of international arbitration will never be realized until the United States adopts a naval program that will push our navy ahead of the navies of Europe and keep it there. And that President who adopts and prosecutes such a policy will be heralded by the country and the world as a greater world benefactor than either Washington or Lincoln.

"I have just listened to Senator Johnson, of Alabama, a member of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, declare that he was not in favor of a larger army, but in favor of a larger and better trained militia, that might combine at a moment's notice with the regular army.

Wants Cadet Corps Enlarged.

"I quite agree with him, provided we so train our militiamen to work harmoniously with the regulars. Likewise, with the committee whose guest I have the honor to be now, I agree that the cadet corps here at West Point should be enlarged, whether we need them or not. It is well to be prepared. No greater insurance of peace may be found than preparedness for war.

"But how about the navy? Such a policy will do nothing to help the navy. It comes to my notice always that the men in Congress who show the greatest opposition to provisions for an adequate navy are the first in an emergency to cry for war, war, war.

"I saw men at Baltimore oppose a greater navy plank and I now hear them demand that we go to war. They talk with the wisdom of Bourke Cockran, who, once when a member of the House, declared the United States need fear no invasion because right in his city were men who with cobblestones could repel any invading army of aliens.

"Block Navy; Cry for War."

"This idea of blocking the navy and then clamoring for the defense of our national honor was well exemplified recently in Congress when one of my colleagues, a man very dear to me and a sterling American citizen, made a fiery demand that we gird up our loins in defense of our honor. Yet this same man was opposed to a progressive battleship building policy.

"For ten consecutive terms I have been selected secretary of the American group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union for International Arbitration. This will bear me out, I think, when I claim for myself a love of peace."

Wilson's Veto Request Ends Jap Bill Efforts.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—His final message on the California-Japanese situation dispatched, President Wilson to-day plainly indicated to visitors that the administration considers it has concluded its share in the land bill embroglio and will not meddle further.

State Wins Point in Railway Tax Fight

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 12.—The state of Georgia won a point over the railroads Monday when Attorney General Thomas S. Felder obtained from the supreme court an order for a review of a decision that the Atlantic Coast Line and the Louisville and Nashville Railroad were not to be taxed on property leased for 99 years from the Georgia Railroad.

Comptroller General William A. Wright, of Georgia, by his issuance of tax executions against the two railroads precipitated the case several months ago. The roads procured an injunction and the state carried the case to the circuit court of appeals.

Rich Stock Trader Wounds Assailant

MOULTRIE, Ga., May 12.—W. P. Brown was shot and seriously wounded this afternoon in an altercation with Joseph J. Battle, one of the wealthiest live stock men of the state. The shooting took place at Battle's stable. According to an eyewitness Brown went to the stable and accused Battle of stealing from him, and after applying a vile epithet, struck Battle several hard blows. Then Battle drew his pistol and fired.

Recently Battle prosecuted and convicted Brown, for removing from the state property to which he did not hold legal title. Brown is now out under bond, pending a hearing for a new trial.

Battle has not been arrested.

BULL MOOSERS ASK G. O. P. TO CONVENE FOR REUNION

CHICAGO, May 12.—Representatives of the Progressive forces of the Republican party meeting in Chicago to-day voted to ask the Republican National Committee to call a national convention at as early a date as practicable to consider matters of party reorganization.

The resolution was voted through, following its advocacy by former Governor Herbert S. Hadley, of Missouri; Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa, and other Progressive leaders. Senator William D. Borah, of Idaho, opposed the resolution.

After the resolution was adopted a formal statement was issued by State Senator James S. Trautman, of Kansas, a member of the program committee. The statement follows:

Move Is Explained.

At an informal conference of Republicans from eleven States, held in Chicago May 12, 1913, it was voted that it be submitted to the National Republican Committee as the opinion of those present that a national convention of the party should be held this year at as early a date as may be practicable for the purpose of considering the expediency of changing the basis of representation at future conventions so that delegates shall proportionately represent Republican voters and not the general population to the end that the will of the members of the party may be more accurately determined; also for the purpose of changing the rules relating to delegates and members of the national committee so that the primary election laws of the various States shall be recognized and have full force, and also for the purpose of making such other changes in the method of conducting national conventions and campaigns as shall conduce to giving the utmost possible effect to the principles and policies of the party.

For Reuniting the Party.

It was further the opinion that such a convention might properly and usefully take any other action desirable to reunite the party and to give assurance that it stands for constructive and progressive activity in the affairs of government to the end that the common welfare may be advanced.

It was the unanimous belief of those present that the changes suggested should be made forthwith and that the National Committee be strongly urged to take steps to such an end.

Six Republican Senators who opposed the nomination of President Taft last year are attending the conference, which began yesterday in the Congress Hotel, in the same room where six Governors met and signed letters to Colonel Roosevelt, asking that he become a presidential candidate.

Seventy-five other Republicans who favor a reorganization of the party also attended the first session.

The Senators are Sherman, Illinois; Cummins and Kenyon, Iowa; Borah, Idaho; Crawford, South Dakota, and Gronna, North Dakota.

Second Lieutenant H. C. Norman, Troop B, McIntosh.

Second Lieutenant M. S. Levy, Troop K, Augusta.

The officers selected will report to the commanding officer of the post the morning of June 10.

DANIELS RETURNS EAST AFTER SAVANNAH VISIT

SAVANNAH, GA., May 12.—Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, arrived in Savannah yesterday afternoon from Port Royal, completing an inspection of the navy yards on the South Atlantic and Gulf coasts. He left at midnight for Washington via Raleigh, N. C., his home. The party was entertained informally in Savannah.

Fair South Carolinan Lauds Georgia Barbecue

The famed Georgia barbecue has won another enthusiastic friend.

The latest ally is beautiful Miss Marie Fisher, of Charleston, S. C. Miss Fisher was at a barbecue prepared in her honor at the Kimballville farm of her cousin, Will V. Zimmer, and it was here she declared that she never had tasted anything so good in her life.

"If we could transplant these typical Georgia barbecues into South Carolina we would have such an era of good-fellowship there that Governor Blease and all his opponents would become fast friends and we'd have no more of those terrible fusses."

So said Miss Fisher as she poised a cleaver preparatory to bringing it down upon a particularly juicy piece of meat. For, with white-plumed hat slightly a-tilt and face flushed with happiness, she was entering right into the spirit of the occasion and busily assisting in serving.

"The nearest we have to a barbecue in South Carolina is a fish fry, and that's no fun at all compared to a Georgia barbecue," she complained.

Miss Fisher is of a wealthy South Carolina family and has been visiting relatives in Atlanta for several weeks. She will return home Thursday.

PERTH, SCOTLAND, May 12.—Disastrous floods are ravaging the southeastern part of Perthshire, doing extensive damage. A great inland sea, 2 1-2 miles broad, has been formed near Blairgowrie on Lach Erich. Bridges and railroad tracks have been washed away and roads are impassable.

Crops have been damaged greatly and much live stock has been killed.

Working on Decree in "Hearst Coal Cases"

Additional Suits Against the Trust Will Be Deferred for a Time.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Preparations for framing a decree carrying out the Supreme Court's decision in the "Hearst coal cases" have been made by the Department of Justice.

The decree, which will cancel the so-called 65 per cent. contracts of the coal carrying railroads and coal companies and terminate the railroad control of the Temple Iron Company, will be submitted to the United States District Court at Philadelphia during the last week of May.

While it is the intention of Attorney General McReynolds to file more suits against the Coal Trust, attacking the relationship, direct and indirect, of coal carrying railroads and coal mining companies by means of both the Sherman Anti-Trust law and the commodities clause of the Interstate Commerce act, it is not likely that any further move will be made until the decree in the Temple iron case has been entered.

Cafe Manager, Cut By Boy, Near Death

The condition of Owen Gilbert, manager of Scherrer's cafe, who was seriously stabbed Saturday afternoon in a Peachtree Street pool room by Arthur Bridwell, is reported practically unchanged.

At Grady Hospital, where the wounded man was taken immediately after the affray, it was said his condition is critical and that it will be several days before they can say if he will survive.

Arthur Bridwell, the 18-year-old youth who stabbed Gilbert, following an altercation that arose over some remark Gilbert is said to have made about Bridwell's mother, is being held by the police, charged with assault with intent to murder.

SINGING LESSONS BY TELEPHONE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, May 12.—Steps were taken to-day to stop the practice of using the telephone for instructing pupils in singing and the hearing of recitations in languages. The discovery of these uses of telephones was made by a city telephone expert, who is helping the telephone companies to cut down their expenses in order to increase the wages of girl operators.

WILSON SURE OF CURRENCY LAW AT THIS SESSION

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The Wilson currency bill will follow swiftly upon the Wilson-Underwood tariff. The President has said it, and there will be no failure to do his will.

With the tariff bill disposed of by the House, the Chief Executive has set his representatives to work, and by the time the House returns to its regular sessions three weeks hence, it will have for immediate consideration a bill that will embody the Wilson view of the currency.

Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, is chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, and Carter Glass, of Virginia, will be the chairman of the House Committee as soon as that position is filled.

The President expresses full confidence that he will be able to press this currency bill to enactment before the special session adjourns. He goes the full length of positive speech in declaring it will be a law before the general session of Congress. He is fully as emphatic about it as he was about the tariff bill.

Plan for Regional Banks.

Division of the entire country into fifteen clearing house districts, each district to have its own reserve association, or regional bank, is contemplated in currency reform legislation at the present session.

President Wilson, Representative Underwood and Representative Carter Glass, who will be chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee of the House, have reached an agreement as to the main features of this proposed legislation. They are to have further conferences to settle the details.

In the message to be sent to Congress shortly after June 1 there will be outlined the general principles of currency reforms he will favor, but will not specify details. No legislation for the Federal control of stock exchanges will be sanctioned by the President, although three members of the Banking and Currency Committee will strive to have this reform included in the bill. Glass is opposed to such legislation.

The members of the committee who favor Federal control of the Stock Exchange will seek an alliance with radical Republicans on this question and force a vote on it. They are believed to be hopelessly in the minority, but will rely on the report of the money trust investigating committee to sustain them.

Features of Reform Plan.

The general reform principles agreed to by Underwood and the President include:

Establishment of fifteen reserve associations, or regional banks under boards of control, the operation of each association to be under the clearing house system.

Each board of control to consist of nine members, three to be of local selection, three to be designated by the President and three others, one each to represent the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Agriculture. Each association may transact a general banking business under the supervision of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Each association to circulate its notes under prescribed conditions, the basis for these notes to be commercial securities of a recognized stability as well as Government, State and municipal bonds. All national banks may obtain membership in the associations and such other banks as the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller may prescribe.

The allotment of territory to each of these associations will be left in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency.

Senators See Free Wool and Sugar Defeat.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Sugar and wool Senators confidently predict that these two schedules would not be free on the tariff bill finally passed by the Senate. To-day they said enough Democrats had been lined up to defeat the Underwood program with regard to both these commodities, naming Senators Newlands and Pittman, Nevada; Shafroth, Colorado; Chamberlain, Oregon; Walsh, Montana, and Ransdell and Thornton, Louisiana, as among those who would vote against free sugar and wool.

The fight, it was declared, would come on the floor of the Senate, the Underwood bill being scheduled to go through the Senate Finance Committee without a change in either of the commodities.

It was also expected to-day that changes would be made in tariff rates on cattle, wheat, oats and many other commodities. The Democratic majority believes that cattle, wheat and oats should be put on the free list.

Manufacturers Heard In Secret on Tariff.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Members of the Senate Finance Committee have had private conferences with representatives of manufacturers on practically all of the 600 paragraphs of the Underwood tariff bill.

The privacy that has attended these conferences will be made the subject of Republican attack in the Senate.

Republicans continued to assert they will have enough Democratic support to compel the committee to listen to the pleas of manufacturers.

Wilson Predicts No Changes in Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson is not worrying about the passage of the Underwood tariff bill by the Senate. He told the members of the "newspaper cabinet" at the semi-weekly meeting to-day there was no "rough water ahead," as reported from the upper house of Congress and that he anticipated the adoption of the bill in its present form after comparatively little argument.

Cyclone and Hail Do Damage in France

Vineyards Suffer Loss, Workers Injured and Aviators Are Dashed to Earth.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 12.—A terrific cyclone swept parts of the Department of Marne to-day, doing extensive damage. Following a cloudburst, there was a heavy fall of hail. Many workers in the fields were hurt by being struck by the huge stones. Serious loss was caused to the vineyards.

Two aviators flying near Epernay, were blown to earth and suffered injuries which may prove fatal.

K. of C. Convention Tuesday.

SAVANNAH.—The State Convention of the Knights of Columbus will meet here Tuesday morning. The convention will be in session only one day.

Her 'Fatal Beauty' Costs Actress Job

NEW YORK, May 10.—Evelyn Carter Carrington was "so handsome" she was discharged from the "Firefly Theatrical Company and she has a judgment of $166 against Arthur Hammerstein to prove it.

Miss Carrington agreed to assume the character—a widow of uncertain years—for $100 a week. She appeared once, then was dropped, and sued for two weeks' salary minus an advance.

"When Miss Carrington was engaged for the role," said Mr. Hammerstein on the witness stand, "we thought she could make up to look old, but her loveliness stuck out through the make-up and she attracted attention from the other characters when she was supposed to have only a minor part."

House Begins Task of Naming Committees

WASHINGTON, May 12.—With practically the entire membership of the House clamoring for choice places, the Ways and Means Committee essayed to-day the gigantic task of making the committee assignments for the Sixty-third Congress.

The Banking and Currency Committee, which is to frame the kind of currency measure wanted by the President, will be among the first committees named by the steering committee. President Wilson himself is expected to express a preference regarding the formation of this committee.

There are 56 standing committees in the House, and of these only five have been organized.

The Semi-Yearly Disposal of the Famous

Royal Society Finished Art Pieces

At Just Half Usual Prices

Starts to-morrow morning at 8:30. Women who have attended the previous sales will need no second invitation to share.

For the benefit of others we say that these are the sample handworked pieces from which the Royal Society Company took orders. Naturally each piece is finished as perfectly as expert needleworkers know how.

The Royal Society Company are now booking orders for Fall, hence they favor us—their largest Southern customer—with these Spring samples.

Upward of forty years of fair and honorable dealing with manufacturers and wholesalers brings us many favors—but we count this lot of Royal Society Samples as the BEST. See them in the window; glad to have you confirm our judgment.

As shown there are centerpieces, scarfs, squares, pillow tops, baby dresses, towels, pin-cushions, combinations, nightgowns and shirt waists. Judge of the variety by the fact that in centerpieces alone there are 22, 25, 27 and 36-inch sizes. The materials are white and brown linens and white nainsooks, for underwear and lingerie, variously embroidered in French, eyelet and punch work. Roman cutout work, the new tapestry stitch, etc.

Regular prices are $2, $3.00, $4, up to $18
Now just half: Pay $1, $1.50, $2, up to $ 9

New 50c, 75c & $1 Fabric Gloves 25c

Better Reach Out for Them To-morrow
We'll Never Have Them to Hand Out Again

"To-day is yesterday's pupil."

So we learn to-day about gloves what we didn't know yesterday.

We thought other fabric gloves were as good as Kayser's.

In the meantime—what about these other gloves? They're the identical makes that other good merchants are offering to-day at full price. Let them do it—our mind is made up.

Starting to-morrow

Every Fabric Glove in Stock (Save Kayser's) Must Go

All the gloves are spick, span, new. There are lisle gloves, Milanese lisle gloves and Chamoisette gloves. All two-clasp style, in white, black, tan, grey, mode. Full line of sizes in each color. Up to to-day their prices were 50c, 75c and $1. To-morrow the price will be 25c.

These are in 16-button length, in same colors and materials as above. All sizes. Sale starts at 9 a. m., with full line of sizes and colors. No phone orders, exchanges, try ons or approvals. Extra salespeople in attendance.

A Snowdrift of Laces and Embroideries Is Melting Away Under the Spell of May Prices

It is fairly snowing laces and embroideries. They're piled heaping high on the counters, on tables, everywhere.

Scissors snipping gaily, women buying freely, complimentary remarks flying---a gay, happy throng sharing the best lace and embroidery bargains we've had in many a day.

But there will be plenty left for to-morrow, and the day after. Told yesterday how we secured these thousands of yards; to-day we can only recapitulate.

Prices run like this:

$1 to $2 allover embroideries and flouncings	59c	35c to 50c Cluny laces	19c
		75c to $1 allover laces	49c
$3 to $5 Shadow, Chantilly and Darn lace bands	$1.69	15c to 25c Shadow laces	10c

Winner of 'Racer' Now in Competition for Beautiful Shetland Pony

Youngster is Spurred on By Success in Previous Contest

STANDING OF CONTESTANTS IN RACE FOR PONY OUTFITS SHOWS NUMEROUS CHANGES

"I was a winner of one of your 'racers' last year, and hope to work hard now, and also to be a winner in this pony contest," writes one of the contestants for The Georgian and American pony outfits.

"We take your paper, and think it the best paper going. You shall hear from me again," the letter concludes.

Those who have won Georgian prizes in the past are pleased with them, it is plain. They have no misgivings as to the quality of the rewards offered now—they know The Georgian and American keep faith with their readers.

Meanwhile, the votes roll in.

The standing of contestants is published again today, and those in the race can see how their rivals are faring. It is plain that many are "holding back" votes. This is poor policy, for the "other fellow" can do the same thing.

Besides, nothing succeeds like success, and the fact that your name in the published list is followed by a big total of votes encourages your friends to help you. No use backing a straggler at the tailend, you know.

WOODBERRY HOLDS FINALS THIS WEEK

The fifth annual commencement exercises of Miss Woodberry's School will be a feature in educational circles this week. The program will begin Friday with a recital. It will conclude the following Monday with the graduation of one of the largest classes in the history of the institution.

There will be a lawn fete and musical complimentary to the alumnae Sunday. The commencement sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. C. T. A. Pise. Following class day exercises at noon Monday on the lawn, there will come the delivery of diplomas at 8 o'clock in the evening.

The valedictory address will be made by Miss Amelia Carney Malone; Miss Elliott Beattie Johnson will render a violin solo; prayers and benediction will be said by the Right Rev. C. K. Nelson, bishop of Atlanta.

Old Ireland Forever! Postcards to Be Green

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Hereafter Uncle Sam will have green postal cards. Postmaster General Albert S. Burleson has so ordered.

The domestic library size one-cent postal card will be printed pale green to conform to the idea of the International Postal Union.

Foreign countries print cards of the lowest denominations in green. Mr. Burleson ordered a similar color to help foreign-born Americans who are familiar with the green card.

Coffee, Tea and Condiments Also Taboo at Big Conference in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Delegates and visitors are coming from nearly all the countries of the world to attend the thirty-eighth session of the general conference of the Seventh Day Adventists, which will be held in a city of tents here.

No flesh foods of any kind will be served and there will be no coffee or tea there, nor condiments such as vinegar, mustard, catsup or pepper.

The first meeting will be held Thursday.

Two Slaying Cases To Be Tried.

COLUMBUS.—Superior Court of Muscogee County began its May term Monday. Bill Creen will be tried for killing Otis D. Kitchens, while Jennie Mae Radcliff will answer for the death of her husband, George M. Radcliff.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

"My sister's husband had an attack of rheumatism in his arm," writes a well-known resident of Newton, Iowa. "I gave him a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment, which he applied to his arm, and on the next morning the rheumatism was gone." For chronic muscular rheumatism you will find nothing better than Chamberlain's Liniment. Sold by all dealers.

Good Home Made Bread

Put 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon Silver-Leaf Lard, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1½ teaspoon salt in large bowl. Pour on 1 pint boiling water and 1 pint scalded milk, when luke warm add 1 dissolved yeast cake and 1 quart of flour. Stir until thoroughly mixed. Add 2 quarts of flour, mix and turn on floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic and until bubbles appear under the surface. Cover and set in a warm place to raise. Cut down, knead, shape into loaves, place in greased pans, cover and let raise to double bulk. Bake in hot oven.

A good recipe, closely followed and good materials will give you good, sweet, wholesome, fine grained, tender bread.

Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard

is the best shortening you can use in your bread. It is Government inspected, guaranteed pure, put up in tight covered, new tin pails to keep it sweet and clean, until the last spoonful is used.

Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard is always good and will give you uniform, good results in baking.

Use Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard for tasty pastry.

Straighten That Lame Back

There's too much suffering among older folks from achy, stiff, lame backs, distressing urinary disorders, weak eyes, dropsy and rheumatic joints.

These are signs of kidney weakness, which, in youth or age, poisons the blood, disorders the urine and lames the limbs or back.

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

ATLANTA PROOF

Testimony of a Resident of Whitehall Street

James J. Fennell, 173 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga., says: "Since 1907, I have not had an attack of backache or any other symptom of kidney complaint. Doan's Kidney Pills made a positive cure in my case. I suffered a great deal from kidney trouble and it was not until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills that I found permanent relief."

Strike in Cincinnati Stops Every Trolley

CINCINNATI, May 12.—Completely crippled and paralyzed by the strike of its motormen and conductors, no attempt was made to-day by the Cincinnati Traction Company to operate a single car. The company is preparing to break the strike with imported men.

Mayor Hunt is still waiting for his reply to the letter sent to W. Kesley Schoepf, president of the company, demanding that the company arbitrate the differences with the men. If the company does not answer by 6 o'clock this afternoon, the Mayor will begin court proceedings to annul the franchise.

OWNER INJURED DRIVING CAR FROM BURNING GARAGE

G. C. Rogers was suffering from painful burns about the face and hands Monday, received when he drove his automobile from a burning garage at 521 Peachtree Street Sunday night.

Two automobiles, valued at about $5,000, were destroyed. One was a Chalmers belonging to Arthur Reed, and the other an Everett owned by Carl Witt.

BALKAN WAR IS ENDED; PEACE TREATY DRAWN

Combatants Officially Promise to Cease Hostilities—Arbiters to Meet in London.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, May 12.—The war between Turkey and the states of the Balkan Confederation is at an end. The only thing which remains to be done now is the formulation of a treaty of peace.

The reply of the Balkan allies to the recent representations of the powers was handed in to-day and it contains a definite promise on the part of the Balkan states and Greece to cease all hostilities until a peace treaty can be drawn up.

Notification was sent to the powers from Sofia, Belgrade, Cettinje and Athens that peace plenipotentiaries will be dispatched immediately to London.

It is expected that the peace negotiations will be renewed in London within a fortnight.

France Spain's Ally In Proposed Treaty.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 12.—Formal announcement of the inception of a treaty which w make Spain an ally of France is expected as soon as the result of the visit of King Alfonso and Premier Romanson of Spain to France is known.

It was learned to-day from an official source that Alfonso made representations to President Poincare to show that Spain is anxious to enter into negotiations without delay.

The press believes the French Foreign Office views the offer favorably.

WOMEN'S PAPER LOSES IN FIGHT FOR EQUAL RIGHTS

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The long fight of the Lewis Publishing Company, of St. Louis, to have the Woman's Magazine placed on a par and accorded similar privileges with other newspapers by the Postoffice Department, was lost to-day by a final decision of the United States Supreme Court.

COUNTESS HAS DANCED 15,000 MILES, SHE SAYS

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian

ST. PETERSBURG, May 12.—Countess Lamadorff declares she has danced 15,000 miles and claims the world's record. All told, the countess has danced 7,934 times, with 1,700 different partners.

Calls Persian Tunic Best Garb for Women

Wife of Lecturer Who Has Visited All Lands Adopts That Costume.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Mrs. R. G. Knowles, wife of the explorer and lecturer, is inclined to the belief after visiting every country in the world that for combination of art and comfort no dress excels that of the women of Persia.

To back up her opinion Mrs. Knowles has appeared at some of her soirees and afternoon receptions attired in the unusual dress of the grande dame of Persia.

It consists of a draped divided tunic, which looks like, but is not exactly, the Eastern "bloomers." The garment is of heavy silken striped material in wonderful colors. Mrs. Knowles has added an Occidental touch to this costume by wearing silk stockings and satin slippers instead of sandals.

Woman, 93, Races in Auto and Wins

Defeats Woman of Twenty-five in Twenty Miles—Shopping Tour Expenses the Stake.

DELMONT, PA., May 12.—As the result of some good-natured bantering over the speed of their motor cars and their ability as drivers, Mrs. George Wallace, ninety-three, and Mrs. Harry Leordon, twenty-five, raced twenty miles to Greensburg, the stakes being the expenses of a shopping tour in the latter town.

The start was made at 8:30 a. m., and 53 minutes later the elder woman drove her car into Greensburg. Two minutes later Mrs. Leordon arrived. Mrs. Wallace had never once slackened speed, and according to Mr. and Mrs. William Blose, her passengers, she took the curves and corners with the daring of an Oldfield.

FOUR HURT IN WRECK ON CENTRAL NEAR COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, GA., May 12.—Wrecking crews this morning cleared the track, after working yesterday afternoon and last night, near Columbus, where Central of Georgia passenger train No. 1 was wrecked at 4:05 o'clock yesterday. The combination baggage and smoking car was overturned and the engine and three steel coaches were derailed. Roy Williams, of Columbus, and three negroes were injured, Williams being seriously hurt.

U. D. C. RECORDS DAMAGED BY FLOODS IN KENTUCKY

Members of the Atlanta Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, have been sent the following notice by Mrs. W. S. Coleman, recording secretary:

"On account of the recent floods in Kentucky, the home of Mrs. Roy McKinney, recording secretary general, of Paducah, Ky., has been inundated and her papers confused and damaged. She will send out the certificates for membership just as soon as she is able to resume business."

Delegates Here for Assemblies Come From All Parts of World

Missionary Conference Is First

From every State in the Union and practically every country in the world delegates are arriving in Atlanta to attend the great joint Presbyterian Assembly. The first "long distance" delegate reached here Monday in the person of Rev. Thomas G. Albert, commissioner from Salem, Oreg. Before night the number is expected to swell to several hundred, and from now until Thursday morning every train will bring in its quota.

Dr. B. P. Fullerton, of Philadelphia, field secretary of the U. S. A. Church in the South, has arrived and is particularly busy arranging for the Pre-Assembly Missionary Conference, which will take up the entire day Wednesday. This will be one of the most important meetings of the joint gathering. The morning session begins at 9 o'clock and the afternoon meeting at 2:15 o'clock. Both meetings will be held in the Harris Street Presbyterian Church, while the evening session will be held in the First Presbyterian Church at 8 o'clock.

Notables to Give Talks.

Several world-famous missionaries and clergymen will make addresses at this conference. Two of the most noted are the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin, of New York, and the Rev. S. Hall Young, of Alaska. Of particular discussion will be the simultaneous church-wide every-member campaign which the representatives of the United Presbyterian Church will present.

Among other prominent arrivals this morning was Rev. E. R. Sterretts, of Philadelphia, treasurer of the board of education. Like Dr. Fullerton, he found himself a busy man as soon as he reached Atlanta.

Real work of the joint assembly begins Thursday. There will be three distinct conventions with joint meetings in the evenings at the Auditorium. Meetings of the U. S. A. Church will be held in the Baptist Tabernacle; the Southern Presbyterians will gather in the North Avenue Presbyterian Church, while the United Presbyterians will meet in the Central Presbyterian Church.

Big Meeting Wednesday.

Special interest attaches to the all-day conference of the Permanent Committees of Foreign Missions from the various Presbyteries, including the committees of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, which is to be held on Wednesday, the day preceding the opening of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church. This conference will be held in the First Presbyterian Church.

The meeting of the General Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement Wednesday will be one of marked importance from more than one point of view. This meeting will mark the sixth anniversary of the Laymen's Movement in the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Business sessions will be held during the morning and afternoon, the Laymen's Movement joining with the pre-assembly conference on foreign missions; and in the evening from 6 to 8 o'clock a banquet will be held in connection with the closing business session. An inspirational meeting will follow the banquet and close the all-day conference.

Facts on Southern Church.

North Avenue Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, will be the meeting place of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, which will convene Thursday morning. Everything is in readiness in this church for the entertainment of the highest court of Southern Presbyterians.

There are fourteen synods in the territory of the Southern Presbyterian church, 83 Presbyteries, 465 candidates for the ministry, 41 licentiates, 1,734 ministers, 3,392 churches, 61 licensures. During last year there were 50 ordinations, 231 installations, 231 ministers died, the pastoral relations between 186 ministers and churches were dissolved, 31 ministers were received from other denominations and 11 ministers were dismissed to other denominations.

ART GEM MAKES COMSTOCK BLUSH

Garbless Girl Wader in "September Morn'" Shocks Guardian of New York Morals.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Anthony Comstock, head of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, today concurred with "Bathhouse" John Coughlin, of Chicago, and opposed judgment passed by the French Academy, by declaring "September Morn," the masterpiece of M. Chabas, to be "highly indecent and totally unfit for public exhibition."

While strolling along West Forty-sixth Street this morning, the guardian of New York's morals glanced in the window of a prominent art store. The first and only thing Mr. Comstock's eye could see was the famous painting of the nude girl splashing in the cool shadows of a mountain lake.

"Take it out immediately," ordered Mr. Comstock.

"But that is 'September Morn,'" declared the art dealer.

"It should be pitch dark for a girl to go in wading in that undressed condition," announced Mr. Comstock. "Take it away immediately or I shall confiscate your entire stock."

The picture came out, but was returned a few hours later. In the meantime, art critics are weighing the combined judgment of Anthony Comstock and "Bathhouse" John against that of the judges of the French Academy, who are on record as saying that "September Morn" is one of the world's art treasures.

BACKACHE A WARNING ALL SHOULD HEED

It Is One of the First Signs of Kidney Troubles, if Neglected Serious Diseases Follow.

No one can be well and healthy unless the kidneys work properly and keep the blood pure. When they become clogged up and inactive, nature has a way of warning you.

Backache is one of the first symptoms. You may also be troubled with disagreeable, annoying bladder disorders; have attacks of lumbago or rheumatism; become nervous, tired, and feel all worn out; puffy swellings show under the eyes or in the feet and ankles; and many other symptoms are noticed. If they are neglected, dropsy, diabetes, or Bright's disease, which so often prove fatal, may result.

It is not only dangerous, but needless, for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely ends all such misery.

There is no more effective remedy known for the prompt cure of all such troubles than this new scientific preparation, because it removes the cause. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the clogged-up pores; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter and sift the poison out of the blood and drive it from the system.

You will find Croxone different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to cure the worst backache, relieve rheumatic pains, or overcome urinary disorders.

Widow in White for Titanic-Lost Husband

Material Still Crepe—Black Given Up on Anniversary of Disaster.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—"White Widow of the Titanic" is the title Mrs. Lucien D. Smith, the bereaved girl wife of one of the heroes of the disaster, has earned through wearing white mourning instead of black.

On the anniversary of the sinking of the Titanic, Mrs. Smith put aside her black clothes and appeared in white crepe from head to foot. The pocketbook she carried is of the same material, and her shoes are also white.

Mrs. Smith has an infant daughter born several months after the tragic loss of its father. The widow is popular socially, and forms a picturesque figure at the quiet events she attends.

MISTAKES NEIGHBOR FOR BURGLAR AND SHOOTS HIM

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—August Retting, member of a prominent family here, while attempting to enter a front window of the home of Charles Scheuermann, on fashionable Government Street, was mistaken for a burglar and shot three times. He screamed and Scheuermann, on going to him, recognized who he was.

The Retting home was two blocks away from the shooting. The wounded man had his shoes off and said he did not want his father to know he was out so late. He had mistaken the house. Scheuermann was not arrested.

RELATIVES TO CONTEST WILL OF MRS. DODD

Fight Over $100,000 Fortune Left to Mercer Will Cause Executor Currier to Quit.

Relatives of the late Mrs. Barbara E. Dodd will contest her will which bequeathed the bulk of her fortune, approximately $100,000, to Mercer University. Charles E. Currier, executor, has been informed of the proposed contest by Mrs. Fannie T. Ackerman, of New York, sister of Mrs. Dodd.

A breach with her relatives several years ago caused Mrs. Dodd, widow of the late Philip Dodd, a wealthy Atlantan, to destroy a will executed in 1906, in which a considerable sum was set aside for her brother and sister and their children. It is said a disagreement following the establishment of a sanitarium at Mrs. Dodd's old residence on Whitehall Street, by the sons of Henry S. Dibble, her brother, led to the estrangement.

Attorney C. P. Goree, who drew the last will, said it was clearly Mrs. Dodd's intention that little be left her relatives.

"Mrs. Dodd had considerable trouble with her nephews about a loan on a sanitarium established some years ago," said Mr. Goree. "In fact, she had to take the matter into the courts for a settlement.

"That is why the Mercer bequest was not in the form of an endowment, but as a fund to be loaned deserving young men. I have not been informed of any intention to contest the will and I can not see what grounds the contest will be based upon."

It is recalled that Mrs. Dodd bequeathed to her brother, Henry S. Dibble, $5,000 to be held in trust, that he was to receive only the proceeds from its investment, and that at his death the amount was to revert to the Mercer fund. To her sister, Mrs. Fannie T. Ackerman, was left a similar sum, without incumbrance.

Charles E. Currier, president of the Atlanta National Bank, executor of the will, said Monday that if a contest is made he will quit.

Carnegie Aids Ghent Memorial Project

Agrees to Help Pay Expense of Preserving Room in Which Treaty Was Signed.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Andrew Carnegie, in Washington as conferee on the treaty of Ghent centenary, has agreed to bear a portion of the expense of setting aside as a permanent peace memorial the room in the Carthusian Monastery in Ghent in which the famous treaty was signed on Christmas eve, 1814. Portraits of the participants, famous facsimiles and historic paintings and other objects are to be placed in the room.

Mr. Carnegie is the guest of Mrs. Oliver Ricketson here. Lord Weardale, Neil Primrose, M.P., son of Lord Rosebery, and Sir George Reed, the British conferees, also are in the city.

'Woody Tiger' Is New White House Mascot

Mrs. Wade Hampton Substitutes Wilson Administration Toy for 'Teddy Bear' and 'Billy Possum.'

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The "Woody Tiger" made its official debut to-day as the official toy of the Wilson administration. As this new monarch of childhood entered the front door of the White House, escorted by Mrs. Wade Hampton, the originator of the novel idea, "Teddy Bear" and "Billy Possum," mascots of previous times looked on with brimming eyes.

Underwood Boomed for President in 1916

His Friends Believe That the Tariff Bill Will Make Him Popular Candidate.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Representative Oscar W. Underwood's friends have started to boom him for the Presidential nomination in 1916. They assert that tariff bills have made Presidents and that Mr. Underwood will come to the front on the bill that passed the House last week.

They are backing Mr. Underwood upon the theory that the people will abide by the intent of the Baltimore convention platform which declared in favor of a single term.

These friends of Underwood are confident the Underwood tariff bill will prove acceptable to the country and will grant relief to the masses from heavy burdens of taxation.

TEDDY'S TRIUMPH

A Comic Series That Actually Happened.

The Georgian the other day told in brief form the story of Teddy.

The story of Teddy was so remarkable that one of The Georgian's artists has depicted it as "a comic series that actually happened." His pictures appear below, preceded by a brief introduction:

Mrs. H. E. Grantner, of Hammond, Ind., saw a little 3-year-old boy who was homeless. She pitied him and offered him food and a bed in her home. He looked perfectly demure and harmless.

And he made no trouble at all when sleeping, which he proceeded to do shortly after reaching the house.

But when Teddy (as he was nicknamed) awoke at 5:30 o'clock the next morning, he got busy, and in the course of 60 minutes accomplished the following:

1.—Turned the hose on Mr. Grantner, who was planting sweet peas.

4.—Hit Forrest Grantner, aged 7, with baseball bat, blow landing in pit of stomach. Whipped Ellis Grantner who came to rescue of Forrest.

5.—Then, while the household was recuperating from these blows, Teddy, placed for safekeeping in a room, combined a box of matches and several lace curtains, achieving a first-class bonfire. The damage was $150.

Valdosta Thief Caught.

VALDOSTA.—Abe Courie, a Syrian, who is charged with the robbery of John Manson's fruit store and saloon here, was caught at Jacksonville, and all of the $265 stolen was recovered within a few hours after the robbery. He was brought back to Valdosta Monday.

BAPTISTS LOSE IN MEMBERSHIP RACE

Preparations are under way for the great picnic to be given the First Christian Sunday School by the Second Baptist, the loser in the membership campaign that closed Sunday. The final score of the two schools was First Christian, 60,358; Second Baptist, 52,074.

At the First Christian Church Sunday morning Superintendent C. V. LeCraw, of the winning school, introduced to his audience the superintendent of the Second Baptist, John S. Spalding, who spoke on "What I Think About the First Christian Sunday School."

"You have beaten us," said Mr. Spalding, "but you had to break a world's record to do it. I want to offer the most cordial congratulations of the entire Second Baptist Sunday School."

The contest standing the closing day was:

	Second Baptist.	First Christian.
Attendance	1,233	1,673
Points scored	3,988	5,014
Final standing	52,074	60,358

It is probable that both contestants will enter another campaign with other schools in similar races for membership. To discuss this a meeting of Baptist pastors and superintendents was held Sunday afternoon.

Freight Car Bulletin Shows Trade Is Brisk

Decrease of 17,799 Idle Pieces of Rolling Stock Regarded as a Good Sign.

No slackening in general trade is reflected by the American Railway Association's bulletin on the number of idle freight cars in the United States and Canada on May 1.

On the contrary, a decrease of 17,799, as compared with April 15, would indicate a quickening of business. The decrease for the two weeks is the largest reported since the early part of June, 1912.

On May 1 there was a total of 39,799 idle cars, compared with a shortage of 51,169 on November 7, when the railroads were congested and in need of rolling stock. A year ago idle cars numbered 138,881.

The shrinkage in cars was due largely to the brisk demand for coal cars, which caused a shrinkage in that class of rolling stock from 19,649 to 8,510 cars.

Charles Smith Butts Tree While Looking to See How Far Chief Was Behind.

If Charles Smith, a negro, had not become possessed with an inane curiosity to see how far behind him Chief of Detectives Lanford was Sunday night, when that officer was giving chase to him, he might have escaped. Smith did turn his head, however, rammed a tree and fell unconscious.

Now he is at police headquarters awaiting trial for careless driving.

Smith, in a two-horse rig, while dashing down Hunter Street, nearly collided with the chief, who was driving home. Lanford gave pursuit to the negro, who abandoned his buggy and took to his heels, with Chief Lanford after him.

Lightning Kills Five In Oil Field Tornado

TULSA, OKLA., May 12.—At least five men were killed by lightning, many oil tanks and wells set on fire, power plants damaged and other havoc wrought by a terrific electrical and wind storm that swept over the Tulsa oil district early to-day.

At Collinsville, 20 miles north of here, five pipe line builders, employed by the Texas company, were killed when a bolt of lightning struck their vehicle, en route to oil fields. The wagon was demolished and horses killed.

THREW BRICK AT NEGRO HE MISTOOK FOR PUGILIST

CHICAGO, May 12.—Mistaking a negro in a lunch room for Jack Johnson, the pugilist, on trial for violating the white slave law, Amos Geiger hurled a brick through the plate glass front of the restaurant. Geiger was taken to a police station, where he begged the police to release him that he might "get" Johnson.

FRATERNITY WILL FEAST NEWSBOYS

Young Men's Uplift Organization to Give Banquet and Entertainment Tuesday Night.

Extensive preparations are being made for the feast to be tendered the newsboys of Atlanta Tuesday night by the S. V. D., a fraternity composed of young men of the city for the betterment of conditions for young men and boys.

A feature of the program will be child impersonations by Miss Mary Roberta Steadwell, a society girl of Nashville.

More than 500 'newsies' will be guests at the affair, which will be staged in the Y. M. C. A. assembly hall.

Interesting addresses by leading Atlanta citizens, including Dr. J. Wade Conkling, Major R. J. Guinn and others, will be made on the subjects of character building and future citizenship.

Officers of the S. V. D. include S. S. Swilling, president, who will act as toastmaster at the feast; Conrad Soleskey, vice president; Vernon Frank, treasurer, and Allen Callahan, secretary. The fraternity was organized five years ago.

SEQUEL TO LOVE FOR DOLL

Maternal Instinct Greatly Developed by Teaching Children to Love Their Dolls.

The little child's doll is mother to the most romantic fairy. And in the years that pass, the doll fades into the petals of a June rose, to evolve the most wondrous of all transformations.

And now comes a more serious period when the joy of real motherhood should be as tranquil as best effort can provide.

This is accomplished with a wonderful remedy known as Mother's Friend, an external application so penetrating in its nature as to thoroughly lubricate every cord, nerve, muscle and tendon involved.

There will be no pain, none of that nausea or morning sickness, no sensation of distress or strain of expanding muscles. The nerves, too, will be calm, thus making the period one of restful days, of peaceful nights and a source of happiest anticipation.

The young, expectant mother must be carefully watchful lest she become absorbed in those mental distresses which ill prepare her for the most important event in her life.

Mother's Friend enables her to avoid all sensation of dread, worry or pain, and thus she is prescribed in health and strength to take up the joyful task of motherhood.

You will find Mother's Friend on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle. Do not fail to use it regularly as directed. Write to-day to Bradfield Regulator Company, 135 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., for their most valuable little guide book for expectant mothers.

MONEY REFUNDED WITH A SMILE

Leading Drug Store Will Give Money Back Should There Ever Be a Case Where Dodson's Liver Tone Fails.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a mild vegetable Liver Tonic which operates so successfully in cases of constipation, torpid liver or biliousness that it has practically taken the place of calomel—the drug which is so often dangerous. All druggists who sell Dodson's Liver Tone recommend it as a reliever of constipation, sour stomach, biliousness and sluggish liver. It works gently, surely and harmlessly. If a bottle should ever fail to give satisfaction any dealer will refund the price paid without question.

The price of Dodson's Liver Tone is 50 cents per bottle. Be sure you get Dodson's Liver Tone and not some medicine put up in imitation that is not backed up by a guarantee and that may contain harmful drugs.

The Summer Garden

A Unique and Attractive Display of Summer Furniture

Second Floor—Furniture Store

You are invited to enjoy The Summer Garden of Summer Furniture that we have transformed the second floor of our Furniture Store into.

Those planning to make their homes as comfortable as possible against the warm weather will find this display their first aid.

The splendid Crex Furniture—for which we hold the exclusive agency in Atlanta—is here in great variety, chairs, rockers, tables, settees and swings, in green and the baronial brown that blends so well with mahogany and that therefore can be used after the summer season in living rooms.

—Natural finished maple chairs and rockers for porches, at $1.25 to $5.00.

—French willow furniture in green and baronial brown, upholstered richly, chairs, rockers, tables, settees and swings.

—And the new Barnegat Cedar Summer Furniture, new this season. The posts of the chairs, rockers, settees and tables are bark-covered, sweet-smelling cedar. More fitting furniture could hardly be found for the porch of a rustic summer home.

But see all the different kinds—that is your privilege here.

Make Summer Dresses With Aid of

Pneu Form

The Pneumatic Dress Form

PNEU FORM is the only Dress Form that shows you exactly as you are. It will stand for you while you study your own figure, create new designs, make alterations, change trimmings, drape or redrape last year's gown. Women who possess a Pneu Form, and who have their dressmaking done at home or at the dressmaker's, need not stand for hours, nor dress and undress forty times a day at the request, "Just let me try this once more, please."

Pneu Form is the only Dress Form in existence which will reproduce absolutely any figure. There is no guesswork about it. It duplicates your exact figure by means of an individual lining made to fit you. This lining is fitted snugly over the corset, reproducing faithfully any variation in size of shoulders or hips. Pneu Form is inflated within this lining.

If your dress fits your Pneu Form it will fit you. The air is contained in a rubber cloth bag, having the general curves, etc., of the human form.

Pneu Form is a skirt form, as the lining is made well down over the largest part of the hips, giving an exact model over which skirts may be fitted and draped. Adjustable rod gives skirt length.

It is the most helpful and satisfactory dress form we have ever seen.

Ask at the pattern counter to have it demonstrated to you.

MILITANT RIOTS GIVE BIG BOOST TO INSURANCE

Damage Already Reaches Into Millions—Golf Links Are Protected Against Loss.

LONDON, May 12.—Inquiries instituted at Lloyd's have developed the fact that the insurance companies are reaping a golden harvest as a result of suffragette depredations. Business has received a great impetus both from the insurance of golf links as well as from fire risks.

Numerous golf clubs have insured against revenue losses as the result of militant interference, while others have taken out policies insuring golf greens against damage by suffragettes. The premiums charged are $5 per green per annum, the limit of the underwriters' liability being $250 on each green.

These insurances, however, were mostly for three months, because it is believed that the trouble will be settled in that time either by a triumph of the militants or by the suppression of their campaign.

Insurance against fire has been equally brisk, but owing to the great competition in this business rates have not been affected.

Damage to Date $5,000,000.

Estimates of the financial loss caused by suffragette outrages, prepared for the Home Secretary, put the amount as $5,000,000. This sum does not include the expense of employing large numbers of extra police, detectives and watchmen to protect Ministers, public buildings and meetings.

Three detectives have been assigned to protect each Cabinet Minister at all times. All suspected persons are shadowed by plainclothes men and all public buildings are under special guard.

Since the defeat of the woman suffrage bill large numbers of former constitutional suffragists have joined the militant movement. An attack on the House of Lords is one of the new plans, and this is to be accomplished by means of a suffragette typist who could get a position on the reporting staff of the upper house.

Arrests Check Riots.

In spite of the sensational outrages of the past week and although the militants are keeping up a strong bluff, their organization has been shaken by recent arrests of leaders. The militant acts now being committed are the handiwork of suffragettes working independently, and the authorities believe that the removing of the central controlling influences will soon break up the campaign of destruction.

This optimistic view is not shared by politicians generally, who believe that as long as money is forthcoming crimes will be committed.

Militants Start Week By Burning Boat Club.

LONDON, May 12.—Another week of violence was to-day ushered in by suffragettes. Militant women burned the building of the Nottingham Boat Club, damaging a number of boats. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

The police found evidences of incendiarism. A copy of the official organ of the Women's Social and Political Union, The Suffragette, was discovered near by.

Game Warden Plans 'Transplanting' Quail

Birds Trapped Where They're Plentiful Will Be Turned Loose in Counties Where There Are Few.

He hit upon the novel scheme as a means of equalizing the distribution of partridges through the State. In some counties there are few of the birds. From others complaints are pouring into the game warden's office that quail are pulling up corn almost as rapidly as it is planted.

When he found in his mail Monday morning a letter signed by three farmers from Seville, Wilcox County, who said they had been compelled to make three plantings of corn because of voracious quail, Mr. Mercer at once dictated a letter giving them permission to trap as many as they wished.

"Trap them," he said, "and I shall take them to other parts of the State."

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

Oh, Joy! Ice Wagon Really Turns Over.

Out in West End the ice wagons which ply that thriving section for trade usually are followed about from street to street by children who are looking for small bits of the congealed moisture when chipped off by the icemen. The drivers of these wagons seem to be on the job from season to season and come to know all the children by name.

Several days ago, when the weather was rather warm, a joyous catastrophe happened on Culberson Street. One of the big wagons was on the street when the mules attached to it became frightened at a piece of paper which was fluttered about under their noses by a sudden gust of wind. The mules bolted.

Down the street they tore at breakneck speed. Then one of the wheels hit an electric wire pole and the wagon promptly turned over, breaking the wagon tongue and strewing the street with big cakes of ice. The children viewed the affair with squeals of delight. Not only had they been treated to a sure enough runaway, but here was enough ice on the ground to make their little tummies cool for a week.

So down they swooped on the wreckage. They were met by one of the icemen who politely but firmly informed the kiddies there was nothing doing. The ice, he said, still belonged to the company and he'd protect it with his life. That started something. The children surrounded him and filched bits of ice when he wasn't looking. The driver had gone to a nearby telephone to have another wagon sent out to carry off the remains of the load.

The man on guard had his hands full and realizing he was no match for the horde of youngsters, he bargained with them. Everybody got a big chunk of ice provided they'd promise to go 'way and let the rest of it alone. And the kiddies kept their promise.

Wore a Flower For Mother's Sake.

It was Mothers' Day in Atlanta, and all over the country, yesterday and lots of men wore a white flower for mother's sake. Many of the Atlanta florists anticipated a demand for flowers and laid in a big supply of white carnations.

For a long time in Atlanta men didn't like to wear flowers. The only explanation is that they might be taken for weaklings; the habit, they figured, was one for women, not men. There is one man in the city, however, who for thirty years has always worn a little buttonhole bouquet, summer and winter.

He is the confidential man for one of the big drygoods concerns and although he celebrated his seventy-seconth birthday yesterday—he is as straight and active as a man of half that age. He is passionately fond of flowers and if he were to be without his little bouttonniere it is likely that the day would seem all wrong to him. His wife has made it her special duty to see that his bouquet is ready each morning, usually placing it beside his plate at breakfast.

His bouquet yesterday was a beautiful white carnation, a little token of love for the old mother who died a good many years ago in Ireland.

"Woman's Dress Fad Makes Living High"

Professor Sargent Says Americans Adopt Grotesque Styles.

DES MOINES, IA., May 12.—"The mad pursuit of American women for the varying fads of dress and their acceptance of designs from the European fashion centers as mandates in technique of dress are directly responsible for the high cost of living in this country to-day." So declared Prof. Walter Sargent, of the school of education of the University of Chicago in an address before the convention of the Western Drawing and Manual Training Association.

"The French send dress and home art designs to America which they themselves will not accept. One does not see those grotesque styles in Paris.

"We need in America an established bureau of design."

Macon Union Depot Prospects Brighter

Central and Southern to Decide by May 27 on Joint or Separate Terminals.

Prospects are that Macon will get a union passenger station.

Officials of the Central of Georgia and the Southern Railways went over the situation at length with the Georgia Railroad Commission on Monday.

The Central submitted blue prints and terms under which it is willing to join with the Southern in building a union station.

The Southern officials asked for fifteen days in which to submit the proposal to the heads of the system in Washington. This was granted, with the proviso that if the Southern does not answer definitely on May 27, both sides shall have ready plans for individual stations.

Girl With $700,000 Will Stay at Work

Stenographer for Curtiss Aeroplane Company Inherits Fortune, But Likes 'Job.'

BATH, N. Y., May 12.—Although Miss Helen Klecker, a pretty 17-year-old stenographer of the Curtiss Aeroplane Company, has fallen heir to a $700,000 estate, she likes her "job" so well that she is loath to quit and announced to-day that she intends to stick as long as she can.

Miss Klecker received the property, which is in New York and at Havre DeGrace, Md., from her mother's family. Her mother, who has been dead several years, was the direct descendant of a Russian who came to this country a number of years ago and accumulated a large fortune estimated at $7,000,000.

Employees of Hotel Testify for O'Hara

CHICAGO, May 12.—Denials that Lieutenant Governor Barrett O'Hara was a member of a party of four at the Hotel Sherman for three days in January were made to-day to the Senate's sub-committee investigating charges of immorality against the Lieutenant Governor.

Employees of the hotel told of serving drinks and food to a party of three, two women and one man, in a suit there. Members of the Chicago Press Club testified that they saw O'Hara at the club on the night of January 17 and the two subsequent nights.

ESTHETIC THIEF IN BEAUTY SHOP RAID

Mr. "Nancy" Burglar Shows a Fondness for Hair Nets, Rouge and Nail Bleach.

Ladies and Gentlemen: Permit us to introduce Mr. "Nancy" Burglar.

He is conspicuous among the crowd by his powdered face, his curled hair, rouged cheeks and manicured nails. If you see him, notify the police, as he is wanted for rifling the Bookhammer hair-dressing parlors, 71½ Whitehall Street, Sunday night.

Secures Beautifying Outfit.

One gross of hair nets; a box of eyebrow pencils; one dozen orange sticks; eight jars of cuticle ice; one dozen boxes of face powder; ten brilliant bandeaux; two bottles of brilliantine; four fancy barettes; several jars of rouge; manicure sets; cuticle knives; a gas hair-curling stove, and a large quantity of nail bleach.

Robbery Puzzles Chief.

Police Chief Beavers, when informed of the amazing robbery, scratched his head and thought for a long time.

"Now who would have thought that a thief could stoop so low as to raid a hair-dressing establishment?" he finally exclaimed in disgust. "No doubt he's going to get all 'dolled up' and parade down Peachtree Street. Will wonders never cease?"

CLERGYMAN PRAISES ECKMAN'S ALTERATIVE

People who have lung trouble are often filled with bright hopes of recovery, only to realize that improvement is but temporary. Those who had it and used Eckman's Alterative can testify to its beneficial effects. No one need doubt it—there is plenty of evidence from live witnesses. Investigate the following:

Amenia, N. Y.

"Gentlemen: On February 9, 1908, I came to Amenia, suffering with tuberculosis, that originated in a severe case of lagrippe. My physician gave me little encouragement. I was having terrible night sweats and midday chills and losing flesh rapidly, having gone from 155 to 135 pounds. I coughed and raised continually and became so weak that walking a few feet exhausted me. My father, who is a clergyman, heard of Eckman's Alterative and induced me to take it. The night sweats and chills disappeared, my cough became easier and gradually diminished and in a few days I developed an appetite, the first in months. I am now in perfect health, back to 155 pounds. I feel certain that I owe my life to Eckman's Alterative."

(Signed) E. H. COWLES.

"Gentlemen: I wish to add my indorsement to every word of his testimonial."

(Signed) REV. J. J. COWLES, Pastor Presbyterian Church.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe throat and lung affections, bronchitis, bronchial asthma, stubborn colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drug stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

DELAY IN CHURCH UNION COUNSELED

Dr. Matthews, Northern Presbyterian Moderator, Fights Merger Move in Assemblies Here.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 12. "I do not think the question of a union of the several branches of the Presbyterian Church should be broached at this time, as our assembly is to be the guest of the Southern Presbyterians," said Dr. Mark Allison Matthews, of Seattle, Wash., moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. (Northern Division), here to-day. "We have always stood for closer co-operation, but we do not want to be indelicate and present the question when we are the guests of our Southern friends."

Dr. Matthews came here from Dalton, Ga., where he preached yesterday to a former congregation. He will go to Atlanta Wednesday.

"No doctrinal controveries whatever will come before our assembly," said Dr. Matthews. "The elect infant clause will not be an issue with us, as our doctrine is that every infant dying in infancy is saved. Our questions will be mostly administrative and constructive.

"We shall consider the increase of missionary efforts, enlarging the scope of the college work, larger endowments for colleges, ministerial relief, extension of the home mission work and establishing and building new churches.

"This year we plan to raise a $10,000,000 permanent endowment for ministerial relief, so that every aged minister of the echurch may receive at least $500 to $600 a year, and that widows and orphans of ministers may be provided for."

OVER $2,000 AN ARISTOCRAT.—"If your pay exceeds $2,000 you are an aristocrat," said Professor T. S. Adams, of the Wisconsin Tax Commission, at Madison, in discussing the proposed income tax. He would lower the tax exemption to a $2,000 limit.

$30,000,000 FIRM BARS 'CIGS.'—Clarence S. Funk, of Chicago, new president of the Rumeley Company, a reorganized $30,000,000 farm implements manufacturing concern, announced that his firm would not employ young men who had the cigarette habit.

ZANDERO AND CHRISTIE TO MEET IN 10-ROUND GO

CHICAGO, ILL., May 12.—Ernie Zanders, globe-trotting middleweight star of this city, has grabbed off a nice match at last. He clinched up a 10-round contest with Gus Christie of Milwaukee last night, the affair to be decided in the baseball park at Madison, Wis., on the night of May 20. There is to be no decision if the men are both on their feet at the finish. The weight has not yet been decided upon but probably will be 156 pounds at 3 in the afternoon. There is a big convention there at the time.

Diplomas Needed to Avoid Teachers' Test

High School Instructors Not Having Degrees Must Take Exams Under New System.

A large number of Georgia's 1,500 high school teachers are squirming uncomfortably on the anxious seat as a result of the new system of certification that will become operative with the new school year.

M. L. Brittain, State Superintendent of Schools, said Monday that many teachers were inquiring as to their status under the new regulations, which for the first time require examinations for high school teachers.

The fears of some of the teachers will be allayed by the information that the degrees from accredited institutions will be accepted in lieu of examinations. Most of the others will have to submit to tests.

3 Railroads Fined $1,300 in U. S. Court

Fines amounting to $1,300 were imposed Monday in the United States District Court on the Atlantic Coast Line and Louisville and Nashville Railway Companies, lessees of the Georgia Railroad, and the Southern Railway Company for violating the sixteen-hour and safety appliance laws.

Nineteen causes of action were included in the indictment of the Georgia Railroad lessees. The charge was that employees were forced to work more than eighteen hours. The total fine was $950.

It was shown that five Southern employees worked 22 hours. This company was fined $250.

The Atlantic Coast Line and the Louisville and Nashville were fined $100 for violating the safety appliance act.

To-morrow Brings One of Our Notable Twice-a-Year Events, The Semi-Annual

Half-Price Millinery Sale

Maybe you have been awaiting this event---well you might. It is the "Grand Prix" of all millinery sales.

Nothing Atlanta knows approximates it. The hats it offers are those accepted as fashionable this season; correct, smart in unusual ways. The greater part---about all of them---comes from the little shop, Estelle Mershon, in the very center of fastidious New York, 20 E. 46th St.

Included are

Street, Traveling and Dress Hats

Until Now $12.00 to $30.00

Now $6.00 to $15.00

Some one hundred and fifty in all---no describing them---but so varied are the shapes and trimmings that it will be like choosing from regular stock and paying just half.

Is the first spring hat beginning to look a little faded, are you going away this summer, does a newly acquired suit or dress call for a hat to match? Here are splendid affirmative answers for these questions.

The selling begins at eight o'clock when the store opens.

SENATE WILL DEMAND REAL RECIPROCITY

Makeshift Written Into Wilson-Underwood Bill Arouses Bitter Opposition.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Genuine reciprocity, and not the makeshift written into the Wilson-Underwood bill, Senators believe, will be demanded and insisted upon by the Senate. Majority members of the Finance Committee are now endeavoring to see just how far they may go in rewriting the sections of the House bill to make it conform to what they believe the underlying principle of all reciprocal agreements should be.

Chairman Simmons, of the Finance Committee, and Senator Hoke Smith, one of the most influential members of the committee, have expressed their adherence to the doctrine of reciprocity.

Both have said they hoped the bill when it became a law would provide machinery that would enable the President to negotiate reciprocity agreements and that rates would be so arranged that the President would have an effective weapon at his command to compel concessions. The details of whatever plans they may have in mind have not been worked out.

Many Amendments Certain.

Every majority member of the committee has stated amendments to the bill and that in many items the rates will be increased.

The methods of procedure of the Senate Committee and the House differ radically.

Senator Kern, majority leader, moved last week that when the Senate adjourn it be until next Tuesday afternoon. This prevailed, and at the very threshold of debate on the tariff, by Democratic votes, a delay of three days was ordered in the face of the demand of President Wilson that not a moment be lost in rushing through the bill in the Senate.

In the Senate the Democrats are taking into consideration the difference on the cost of production here and abroad in fixing their rates. A number of articles that have been put on the free list will be shifted back to the dutiable, and a few articles made dutiable in the House will be made free. Dye stuffs and pigments are notable instances of the differences between the two houses.

The rates on high grade cotton are to be raised and a new classification arranged.

Window and plate glass as fixed by the House are deemed to be too low and will be raised.

All these changes afford opportunity of subsequent reductions under reciprocal trade agreements in line with the real Democratic tariff idea.

Senator Smith, of Michigan, bases caustic criticisms on the sugar schedule, the manufacture of beef sugar being a great industry of his State.

"After the trust has run its competitors out of business, as they will under this law," says Mr. Smith, "and competition no longer exist, the price of sugar will be increased to what it was before beet sugar was discovered. If you intend to withdraw from circulation all the money invested in sugar production and turn it over to foreigners, it ought to be done in the open. Give the people a chance to be heard, and do not do this in the dark and gloom of a secret chamber."

Can't Lose "Wilson."

Senator Smith says it is singular that all the Democratic tariff bills looking to free trade bore the name of Wilson.

"I saw Bryan help carry William L. Wilson on his shoulder from the house on the day of his 'great triumph.' It was not very long before these same shoulders carried a weight so heavy that it has taken twenty years to regain the confidence of the people.

"I don't believe that prosperity can continue under this law. In your hearts you don't believe it or you would not be so worried as you are. It was faith in your promised good works that put you in power.

"If this question were to be submitted to the people to-day you would be repudiated and thrown from office. The American people are not for free trade, and that's what you are endeavoring to force upon them."

The fight to order public hearings will come up again Tuesday.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Are You a Mason?" at Atlanta.

This week's offering at the Atlanta Theater by the Miss Billy Long Company, "Are You a Mason?" will be given its first performance at a matinee this afternoon. The management has decided to have three matinees a week—Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. "Are You a Mason?" is a farce and is said to be very funny. It was adapted from the German and the plot is a complicated one, giving abundant opportunity for amusing situations.

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

Paul Dickey, the famous football star, heads this week's bill of Keith vaudeville at the Forsyth. Other numbers are the Apollo Trio, that pose as bronze statues; Billy K. Wells, character comedian; Clarence Wilbur and the Sunny Folks in a school-room sketch; Newhoff and Phels, in new comedy idea; Mayo and Allman, singers; Macleavy's Marvel, jumper, and motion pictures. Matinee this afternoon.

Family Vaudeville at Bijou.

Four acts of family vaudeville and worth-while motion pictures make up the bill this week at the Bijou. The Four Wilhats, novelty bicycle and auto act, is the headliner. Novelty is the keynote of the bill. Two matinees today: 2:30 and 4.

Police Hold Mob Bent on Lynching

Negroes Threaten to Take Black Slayer of Negro Boy From Three County Officers.

Members of the County Police Department are Monday congratulating Lieutenant J. M. Carroll and Policemen J. W. Williams and L. W. Allen on their escape from a mob of 200 negroes, who Sunday afternoon threatened their lives when they refused to hand over Doc Burnett, the negro slayer of a fifteen-year-old colored boy, Charlie Simon. The mob was bent on lynching Burnett.

The mob approached the officers on the Marietta Road as they were waiting for a street car to take their prisoner to the Tower.

"We are going to get that nigger even if we have to kill you," the leaders shouted to Lieutenant Carroll. "He stabbed Simon in cold blood and we are going to string him up."

The officers drew their revolvers and took their positions ready to fight to a finish. The negroes retired.

Burnett, in the Tower, later declared the trouble had been caused by an argument about a girl. Eyewitnesses, though, declared Burnett drew a knife and stabbed the boy without provocation. He died before medical aid could reach him.

Thousands Observe Mothers' Day Here

Throngs Wear Flowers and Attend Special Services—Donations to Old Women's Home Generous.

"Mothers' Day" has passed and the world has resumed the burden of life. However, following the celebration people are finding the load not half so heavy as before it.

Thousands of white flowers apepared on the streets of Atlanta Sunday. Florists report an enormous sale of carnations and roses, the emblems worn by the celebrants.

Returns from the contribution boxes placed in hotel lobbies and other public places show generous donations for the benefit of the Home for Old Women. Throngs attended the churches and heard sermons and music appropriate for the occasion.

Dispatches from all over the United States declare that the day had been the most successful in the history of "Mothers' Day" celebration.

Called From Bride By 'Irritable Papa'

Costa Rican, Parting From Canadian Girl, Explains, 'Father Kills Men When He's Angry.'

NEW YORK, May 12.—A cablegram from the bridegroom's father containing the word "scoundrel" caused Theodore Gonzales, of San Jose, Costa Rica, to part from his bride of a few hours, who was Miss Maxine Seagrave, of Toronto, after they had boarded the steamer Carrillo for a honeymoon trip to Central America.

Gonzales explained to his bride that his father was irritable at times; in fact, he had once killed a man when irritated, and the young man thought it best that he go to Port Limon alone and meet his father.

STELZLE URGES RECREATION TO KEEP OUT VICE

Commission Is Recommended to Provide Wholesome Amusement for the Masses in Atlanta.

Dr. Charles Stelzle, of New York, who will be one of the big figures in the Presbyterian assembles, and who organized the work of the Men and Religion Forward Movement in Atlanta, declared Monday there is a vast difference in the moral tone of the Atlanta to-day and the Atlanta of a year ago. But he insisted that reform go further—that the city name a recreation commission to provide amusements to take the place of harmful forms of recreation, recognized as contributory to vice conditions.

Dr. Stelzle said he did not wish to detract in the slightest measure from the great work already accomplished, but he explained that the city would be most safe from a recurrence of vice evils if it provides wholesome amusements.

"I am amazed at the results of the work," declared Dr. Stelzle. "From my observations during the few days that I have been in the city, I do not hesitate to say Atlanta is now one of the most moral cities in the South, and will rank, morally, with any city in the United States.

"A year ago vice flourished in the city and the street crowds reflected its influences. The change is apparent to even the most casual observer. Morality is in the air in Atlanta and the moral atmosphere of the city is infinitely better."

Though gratified that the movement which he organized should have been so successful in ridding Atlanta of vice, Dr. Stelzle declared the city could not continue to be morally clean unless present conditions are made more attractive to the average man. Clean, wholesome recreation he declared to be the best solution of the problem.

"I would suggest the appointment of a recreation commission," he said. "This commission shoud be composed of men who have given some study to the amusement needs of the city. This commission could call in outside recreation experts to its conferences and get the benefits of the work that has been done in other cities.

"Atlanta seems to be lacking in opportunities for the amusement of the average person, especially on Sunday. The opportunities that are here could, however, be enlarged and made more attractive. For instance, the Auditorium should be a rallying place every Sunday afternoon for several thousand people. The recitals and programs given there should be thoroughly advertised and the people should be urged to attend.

Phone Report Inconclusive.

VALDOSTA.—The committee from the Valdosta Chamber of Commerce which went to Atlanta to investigate the claims of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company relative to an increase in telephone rates here has returned and has made an inconclusive report.

Quick Thinking Wins

At a dinner not long ago Thomas W. Lawson was talking on the subject of success.

"Success in finance," said Mr. Lawson, "is due in a great measure to prompt action. The doubting, hesitating, Hamlet type of man had best keep out of finance. He is quite sure to be swamped."

Keen Brains Count

Keep on with your "bacon and soggy pancake breakfast" if you choose, and stay in the Hamlet class, but if you really want to get ahead, just begin to live right.

A good start is to cut out the heavy, indigestible breakfast and have a dish of

Grape-Nuts

and Cream

Analysis shows that Albumen, Water and Phosphate of Potash are the three principal essentials for building up one's thinking outfit—the Brain. You get the first two in everyday food, but the third, the vital organic Phosphate of Potash, is often lacking.

Grape-Nuts Food made of whole wheat and malted barley is rich in this vital, brain-building element.

A good, healthy working brain can be built up on right food. That's why Tens of Thousands of get-ahead Americans eat their regular morning dish of this distinctively American food.

The World of Society

The largest affair of Monday was the bridge given by Miss Laura Ansley at her home in Ansley Park. Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York, who has been tendered a series of parties as Miss Helen Dargan's guest, was the honoree, and invited to meet her were Misses Helen Dargan, Mary Helen Moody, Annie Lee McKenzie, Emily Winship, Jennie D. Harris, Ruth Stallings, Caroline Muse, Isabel Kuhrt, Carolyn King, Flora Bewick, Esther Smith, Passie May Ottley, Marjorie Brown, Harriet Calhoun, Katherine Ellis, Margaret Hawkins, Emma Kate Amorous, Helen Hawkins, Charles Owens, Elizabeth High, Constance Knowles and her guest, Mrs. Echols, of Virginia; Kathryn Gordon, Marion Goldsmith, Hildreth Burton-Smith, Mary Butler and her guest, Agnes Jones, of Albany; Sara Rawson, Aurelia Speer, Frances Ansley, Mamie Ansley, Mrs. Bates Block and her guests, Misses Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Caroline Scott, of Arkansas; Lula Dean Jones, Mrs. Robert Woodruff, Mrs. Forrest Adair, Jr., and Mrs. John J. Woodside, Jr.

The card tables were placed in the drawing room, the library and the sun parlor, where the decorations were of pink and white sweetpeas, pink peonies and garden roses. The prize for top score was a friendship circle of gold, the consolation a collar and cuff set, and the honor guest was given a silver traveling cup.

For Mrs. Dillard.

Miss Annie May Hardin gave a theater party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon for Mrs. James Spotswood Dillard, of Lynchburg, Va., who is visiting Mrs. Clarence Wickersham, in College Park. Her guests included Mrs. Dillard, Mrs. Wickersham, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Mrs. I. C. McCrory, Mrs. Alfred Murrell, and Mrs. J. B. Hardin.

Festival Postponed.

Owing to the weather, the ice cream festival which was to have been given Tuesday afternoon and night by the Ladies' Guild on the lawn of the Church of the Holy Comforter has been postponed until Friday.

At the Driving Club.

Mrs. James Hook Spratling, of Macon, was with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Collier. Miss Robyn Young, of Washington, D. C., was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. William A. Wimbish. Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York, Miss Helen Dargan's guest, was the central figure in a small party. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Smith Pickett, Judge and Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, Misses Annie Lee McKenzie, May Atkinson, Marion Achison, Messrs. Charles Sciple, Milton Dargan, Jr., Dozier Lowndes, Madison Bell, Hugh Adams and Charles Ryan.

At the dinner-dance Saturday evening one of the largest parties was that of 30 covers given by Dr. and Mrs. Bates Block for their guests, Misses Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Caroline Scott, of Arkansas. Three large silver loving cups, filled with white sweetpeas, adorned the table, with a corsage bouquet at each girl's place and boutenmier of the same flowers at each man's place. For Mrs. McFarlan.

Mrs. R. L. Walker was hostess at bridge this afternoon in honor of her guest, Mrs. J. E. McFarlan, of Connorsville, Ind. Thirty women were invited to participate in the game and several others called for tea. The house was elaborately decorated in wild azaleas, daisies and sweetpeas.

For Miss Phinizy.

Miss Josephine Stoney's informal bridge of three tables Tuesday afternoon will compliment Miss Marian Phinizy, of Augusta, Mrs. A. W. Calhoun's guest.

Exhibition of Paintings.

The return of Mr. H. H. Osgood from a winter's sketching in the South is signalized by the exhibition of 50 oil and water colors. The Cole Book Company has given space for a few days for this interesting collection of marines, landscapes, etc., painted in and around Savannah, Jacksonville and St. Augustine.

Miss Black Hostess.

Miss Anita Black will entertain informally at tea Tuesday afternoon on

LILLIAN RUSSELL IS A FOE TO DRINK

NEW YORK, May 12.—At last Lillian Russell has answered the question of how she retains her youth and beauty. Miss Russell says: "Alcohol is death to the beauty of mind, body and soul."

Miss Russell's lines in her monologue in regard to drink are such a hit that she says if she could she would like to go out and do nothing but preach temperance while she is on the stage

"I never have drunk anything stronger than a little Madeira, the lightest of wines, and I have given that up," she says. "People regard it as remarkable that I have kept my good looks and my youth. You can't keep your health unless you live in harmony with nature.

"Most women need exercise, nourishing food and a proper amount of sleep. People who stay up until all hours do not get the proper amount of sleep, nor do they get it at the right time. I have always loathed champagne and other strong drinks and fought against the cultivation of a taste for liquor.

"Girls who refuse to touch liquor get along. Those who begin with light drinks finally cultivate appetites for whiskey and wine, and are pitiable things to behold."

Important Sayings

"The cancer death rate in the United States is increasing at the rate of 2½ per cent a year, and a corresponding increase is occurring practically throughout the world. The average age at death in cancer of all forms is 58 years—60.4 years for men and 58.2 for women. Of the total mortality from cancer 90 per cent of the victims are forty years old or more."—Frederick J. Hoffman, statistician of one of America's biggest insurance companies.

"The American college of to-day is between the upper and nether millstones. The German-American university has now become the home of scholarship and research. If the American college is to repeat in the twentieth century the inestimable service it rendered to American civilization in the nineteenth century it must recognize the dawn of a new era. Let the typical graduate be trained not only in scholarships and culture, but how to loaf wisely."—Henry Louis Smith, president of Washington and Lee University.

"In my judgment everything which occurs in court should be open to public hearing. The fact that an action for divorce is pending should be given the widest publicity to prevent fraud and injury to those who are innocent. I do not think, however, that the loathsome details—more humiliating generally to the innocent than guilty—should be published."—Justice Guy of the New York State Supreme Court.

"I feel as if I am making a twentieth century flight into another world. Comparisons are impossible; it will take me some time to get my breath. What a lot Europe might learn from wondrous America! But then one must consider; it is much easier to build up a new country than to change an old one."—C. de Bruyne, an Alderman of Ghent, Belgium, who is visiting New York.

WASHINGTON ATTRACTS EUROPE AS ART CENTER

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Washington's advancement as an art center has brought it to the attention of Europe strongly in the past few years, according to Seymour J. Thurber, a collector of Chicago. The masterpieces of the Old World adorn Washington salons, and the capital now is considered one of the most prominent art markets, he says.

'Private John' Allen Explains His Title

Cited War Record(Too, When Political Opponent, a General, Asked Veterans' Vote in Campaign.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Private John Allen, who for many years represented Mississippi in the House, has explained how he got his title. He declared that when he first was a candidate for Congress he was opposed for nomination by a Confederate general.

The general and he addressed a crowd at a town around which a battle of the war had been fought. The general told how he had fought and won that engagement and appealed for votes on that score.

Allen then spoke and declared he, too, had fought there, but as a private. He added that after the battle he had stood sentinel while the general slept. He asked that all generals vote for his opponent and all privates for him. They did so.

Thief Turns Poet to Sound a Warning

Benefit of "Going Straight" Told by One Who Admits "Going Wrong."

NEW YORK, May 12.—Robert J. Lawrence, formerly a bank messenger, was brought here from Los Angeles, Cal., charged with stealing $1,400. On his trip across the continent he wrote the following:

If you want a red nose and dim, bleary eyes,
If you wish to be one whom all men despise,
If you wish to be ragged and weary, and sad,
If you wish, in a word, to go to the bad—
Go wrong.

If your tastes don't agree with the "ifs" as above,
If you'd rather have life full of brightness and love,
If you care not to venture or find out too soon
That the gateway to hell lies through the tombs—
Go straight.

DRIVERS BEGIN PRACTICE FOR CLIMB OF HILL

NEXT Saturday afternoon the old Stewart Avenue hill will again become a scene of lively interest when the big, powerful stripped cars tear up the mile long incline in daring attempts to lower the records set last year by L. S. Crane's Pope-Hartford and George Hanson's Studebakers.

All the latter part of this week the course will be alive with contestants on practice sprints, for the Board of County Commissioners have allowed the Automobile Association to have exclusive use of the hill on the days of May 14, 15, 16 between the hours of one and three. This generous arrangement will allow ample time for tuning up of cars and motorcycles and give the drivers an opportunity to become familiar with the road.

Entries for the contest are coming in at a rapid rate and from present indications the second annual hill climb of the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory Association will eclipse all former events.

Entries to Date.

L. S. Crane—Pope-Hartford, "Betsy."
Studebaker Co.—Three cars.
Travis & Jones—Columbia.
Johnson Co.—Stoddard-Dayton.
Atlanta Auto Sales Co.—National.
W. J. Stoddard—Lion.
Harold McKenzie—Knight Special.
Ellis Car Co., Greenville, S. C.—(Name of car not given.)
I. O. Toasley, Alpharetta—Ford.
T. B. Goodloe—Locomobile.
Stearns Co.—Stearns.

This list will be swelled to about three times the number by the closing time for entries. Secretary Elleby, of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., is receiving all applications.

Handsome Prizes Offered.

In addition to the association cup and the E. Rivers Realty cup, donations have been received that will make an attractive array of trophies. Following is the list.

Prizes and cups in automobile events have been donated as follows:
Atlanta Constitution—Silver cup.
Durham Jewelry Co.—Silver cup.
Elyea-Austell Co.—Silver cup.
Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.—Silver cup.

Fighter, With Stiff Punch, Passes

Scrapper of To-day a Scientist

By H. M. Walker.

The "killer" has disappeared along with the lightning rod, horse car and Republican vote. In his place we have the clever boxer, scientific, but punchless, remarkably fast on his feet, but over careful with his hands.

When Ad Wolgast hit the derailing switch he left the lightweight title in the hands of a young man with but five "K's" in his whole record. And this young man, since having the championship wished on him, has done nothing but take a daily decision over a T-bone steak, and practice the toe dance.

It's the same way all along the line, from the bantam babes to the bull neck heavies. The present day boxer is light on his feet, runs well both backward and forward, is kind and considerate with his opponents, and will fight if forced—perhaps.

* * *

WHEN it comes to playing a good stiff game of tag, our bantams have the world by the windpipe.

Three more clever boxers than Johnnie Coulon, the fight fear champion, and his two trailers, Johnnie Williams and Eddie Campi, never borrowed bathrobes.

* * *

THESE Boys make the hummingbird look like a barnyard duck for speed, but if they had to win their fights with one punch they would be to the fight game what the Yankees are to the American League.

FEATHERWEIGHTS Johnnie Kilbane and Johnnie Dundee gave us twenty rounds of fast and furious waltzing. Had they been using palm leaf fans instead of decorative gloves the Vernon pavilion would have been blown over into Arizona.

After watching this exhibition I believe that it is no more than right that Kilbane should be credited with originating the "Swat-the-fly" idea.

Dundee claims to carry a knockout shot but from what we have seen of the little banana tamer he is badly in need of target practice.

WILLIE RITCHIE accuses himself of being the lightweight champion of the world. A careful search of his record shows the San Francisco lad to possess the punch of a paralytic. In forty ring engagements he has floored but five, stopping such terribles as Monk Enochs, Kid French, Tony Josephs, Tommy McFarland and Yankee Schwartz.

Freddie Welsh totes the lightweight championship titles of both England and Australia, but his system is perfectly free of the knockout stuff. Frederick can use "Yankee Doodle" on an oppenent's ribs and jab him on the nose three hundred and sixty-four times to the round without letting the other fellow know that he is in trouble.

And there's Packey McFarland, our 138-pound "lightweight." With the benefit of his extra poundage Packy is unable to break into the knockout column. He's fast, clever and has a beautiful baritone voice.

We have hope for the 133-pound division, though. Joe Rivers is great on the marble slab thing, and Leach Cross has both the punch and the control to put it over the plate. "Bud" Anderson, at present in the squab stage, can win with one slam and he doesn't require over six inches of space to work in.

THE welters and middleweights—why dig up the dead?

New Trainer of Cubs Never Saw Ball Game

President Murphy Tells of Meeting Between Dr. Frederick Alex Hart and Evers.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Dr. Frederick Axel Hart, new trainer of the Cubs, never saw a ball game, according to President Charles W. Murphy, but has an unbroken record of successes in handling athletes since he left an institute in Stockholm, Sweden. This is Murphy's version of the meeting of Manager John Evers and the trainer:

Evers—Ever play ball?

Hart—I never saw a game, but I can perform an operation for appendicitis.

Evers—So can I. But the patient would die.

Hart succeeds Doc Semmens, who severed his connection with the Cubs the same day he struck Manager Evers.

GRIFFIN SUCCEEDS WEBER AS AMERICUS MANAGER

AMERICUS, GA., May 12.—The Americus ball team left yesterday for Waycross in charge of First Baseman Hal Griffin as temporary manager. Thoroughly tired of continued defeat sustained by the Americus aggregation, the directors met this morning and relieved Manager Harry Weber of that office, temporarily at least, putting Griffin in charge.

Americus has lost seven of the nine games played already, and while Manager Weber ascribes defeat to bad luck, local fans are less charitably inclined. It is generally suspected here that the salary limit rule is not being observed by all of the clubs of the league, and as Americus is living within the salary limits she is placed at disadvantage in employment of proficient players.

Ill luck of the Americus team recently has caused interest in baseball to flag perceptibly, although a winning streak would quickly restore enthusiasm.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 12.—After the first week of the invasion of the East by the Western clubs of the National League, one thing is very apparent. The East, as a whole, is stronger than the West this year, but that does not necessarily indicate the pennant winner will be a product of the East.

At first, it was thought there would be only two clubs in the East that could put up any kind of a front against the Western teams which were rated to be strong. These two were New York and Philadelphia, but now Brooklyn has come through with the best-looking team that has been developed in years across the bridge. Boston is also playing good enough ball.

* * *

I WANT to pause for a minute to discuss Boston and Pittsburg. Behind the Beaneaters this year is a shrewd manager, one who is building. "Chief" Stallings is picking up all the likely ball players he can find around loose, and then sorting them out as they come. He is constructing; and out of the twisted mass of baseball junk which he took over at the beginning of the season, he is going to have a smooth-running machine soon. The Boston club, although many good hitters have resided on the team from time to time, has long been the victim of its own sluggishness. Stallings is trying to add a little speed to his club. He realizes its value. With this notion in mind, he went out and signed Mann to play in the outfield. Stallings thinks the boy will make a great ball player if given time.

"He's the fastest man in baseball," the "Chief" told us when we were in Boston in the early part of the season, and he wasn't punning on the name, either.

* * *

STALLINGS has also picked up "Dick" Rudolph, the pitcher of the International League, and once a member of the Giants for a brief period. Rudolph will win a lot of games for Stallings. Then there is a different spirit manifested by the club now, which is a reflection of the Stallings style. When the game gets hard, the boys do not abandon the pursuit of victory and blow up as former Boston teams did. No, sir. It is in there fighting, as proved by the fact they took two extra inning games from the Pirates last week, with Wagner in both battles.

* * *

ABOUT the Pittsburg club, I do not know what to say. I have not seen the team play this year so far, but from the gossip in the league and the box scores, it is evident that the club is all off its balance. The return of Wagner is going to help the team a whole lot, but Clarke's greatest disappointment is the failure of his pitchers to come through. Before the season, the Pittsburg pitching staff was regarded as one of the best in the league, if not the very best, both by the players themselves and by the newspaper writers who follow the teams. Many times ball players will approve a man whom the general public and the writers cannot see. For instance, Fletcher, formerly the shortstop of the Giants, was generally rated more highly by ball players than by the general public and writers. They know his ground-covering ability, and he has the finest pair of hands I ever saw on a ball player.

* * *

BUT, to return to the Pittsburg staff, Hendrix, who led the league last year; Adams, Robinson, O'Toole and Camnitz sound like a collection of world beaters. You'd think it would only be necessary to have one of those names announced as the Pittsburg pitcher, and the game would be over. Not one of these men has been going smoothly this year. Hendrix has been wild, and O'Toole has been wild, and the staff has been generally out of shape. O'Toole is back at his old job of losing games by one run. I guess he holds the record for this jointly with "Nap" Rucker.

* * *

THE Pirates were rated as a great slugging team before the season. It was on the peerless pitching and slambang slugging they were to ride through the league to an early pennant, because even the members of the club themselves concede that the team lacks speed. But the pitchers would hold the opposing teams to one or two runs, and the Pittsburg boys would pile up many with their bats, and there would be a nice little ball game for Mr. Clarke all wrapped up in cotton batting and tin foil to be put in the moth balls. However, the pitchers have been permitting many runs, and the batters have not been slugging; and the race is not destroyed yet.

"The Pirates condition slowly. Wait until the warm weather sets in," a Pittsburg rooter whispered into my ear the other day.

It will do the team little good to round into form along in September. It is my honest opinion that the club is going to get on the move one of these days and kick up a lot of dust. It yet will be a trouble-maker in the league, because those pitchers are sure to begin to twirl and the batters to hit. Therefore, it pleases the Giants imniensely to see the Pirates crowded down as far as possible at this stage, especially as we are not up any too high in the ladder of the club standing ourselves.

Gunboat Smith stops at nothing. Word was received from San Francisco last night that Smith sent Jim Jeffries the following telegram. "Do you want to come up North and act as my sparring partner? Answer immediately."

* * *

Smith is training for his match with Jess Willard, which will be fought in San Francisco on May 17. The winner will probably be matched to box Luther McCarty for the white heavyweight championship of the world on July 4.

* * *

Willard has engaged five sparring partners, while Smith up to date has only the veteran, Bob Armstrong to work with.

* * *

Buck Crouse and Blink McCloskey will clash in a six-round battle at Pittsburg May 19. Articles were signed yesterday.

* * *

Matty McCue and Jeff O'Connell are rounding into great shape for their ten-round scrap at Racine, Wis., Thursday night. Both boys are training for the bout in Chicago. Joe Sullivan, manager of O'Connell, writes that his protege is in the best shape of his life and is sure to cop the long end of the purse.

* * *

Pittsburg is after a bout between Bat Nelson and Ray Parker. Parks is a rough, rugged fellow and has been defeating all his opponents in decisive fashion.

* * *

* * *

Kid Young is a frequent visitor at George Gaelelis' shoe shining parlors. Young is busy telling the various fight fans what he will do to the next boy who musters up enough courage to meet him in the roped arena.

* * *

Illinois boxing fans are clamoring louder than ever for a boxing bill. Recently Mayor Harrison, Barrett O'Hara and other officials witnessed several sparring exhibitions at Springfield and were loud in their praise for the manly art.

* * *

Nate Lewis, manager of Charlie White, writes from Chicago that his protege is getting into fine shape for his return match with Joe Thomas at New Orleans, May 19. Lewis says White is sure to beat Thomas again. White will go after Jack Britton if he succeeds in defeating Thomas.

Fight Referee Usually Correct

Floto Defends Charley Eyton

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, May 12.—Voicing their opinions. That's the privilege of every gathering where boxing bouts are decided. Yet how often have we found the great majority in error while taking issue with the judge who renders the decision. Many and many a time have I seen the third man in the ring absolutely correct in his judgment, and yet the crowd howled its disapproval. Then also have I seen the referee quite wrong and the crowd give him great applause for the verdict. It's all the way you look at it; it's the angle from which you view the contest.

And yet with it all I'll wager that the man in the ring is more often correct than the crowd seated about the arena. The official in the inclosure is generally one supposed to know the game, the tricks, advantages that score points and everything else that becomes necessary to make him a fair and impartial judge. For that reason he is better able to reach a correct verdict than the outsider, who comes only on occasions to view the fights, and who nine times out of ten is prejudiced. Of course, when an incompetent man officiates, then our argument is dashed to the ground—we are left without a leg to stand upon.

HOW many times have you sat at the ringside when one man's friends seemed in the majority? You've seen this favorite beaten a mile, and yet the referee, for fear of adverse criticism, either calls the bout a "draw" or awards the decision to the man whose friends are shouting for him and yet who failed to win. I've seen this occur time and again, and so have you.

Just now Charley Eyton of Los Angeles is being "panned" for calling the Dundee-Kilbane bout a draw. The press reports tell us that the verdict was unpopular and that Kilbane won. Perhaps so. But we have always found Eyton quite correct in his decisions. For years he has officiated in Los Angeles, and no complaint has been heard. He may have erred this time for all we know. But wait until the smoke of battle clears away and you'll find that his verdict wasn't so far amiss. That, at any rate, is my guess.

* * *

IF the verdict was not in accordance with the facts, then Kilbane has but himself to blame. His stalling tactics are quite unbecoming for a champion and have got him in bad in the East until his last fight, when he redeemed himself with a knockout and regain some of his standing. A champion is supposed to carry the brunt of the battle. If he allows his opponent to assume the aggressive from start to finish, how can he hope to gain the favor of the referee? Isn't the fellow who rushes the battle and makes it possible for the spectators to see real action entitled to something?

WE WILL GET LEAD WHEN WE RETURN HOME

—JOE AGLER.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 12.—Billy Smith will use Chappelle or Brady to open up the Memphis series, with Graham catching.

The Crackers romped on the Billiken hurlers yesterday and scored an easy victory. Gilbert Price won both games won by the Crackers in this series.

We hit the ball to all corners of the lot, for home runs, three-base hits, two-base hits and singles.

Harry Welchonce had a great day, both at bat and in the field. He got four hits out of four trips to the plate, one being a home run, and pulled down line drives that looked impossible. He had a great day.

Tommy Long nearly hit the "bull" again. His home run just missed the big sign by inches.

Bill Bailey got back in the game and was robbed of a home run by a great catch by Kutina.

Take it all in all, the Crackers hit the ball as they should, and we feel confident we will keep going, now that we have started.

Wally Smith turned his ankle and will probably be out of the game for a few days. George Rohe will go to third until Wally is able to cavort around his old position.

The Crackers travel nearly 1,400 miles in the next week, including Montgomery to Memphis, then to New Orleans and back to Atlanta.

The Crackers do not hope to regain first position till we reach home, but will hold second place, and when Mobile gets on the road they will not win so many games. With us at home we should regain the position Billy Smith's ball club should hold.

Season's Sensation Is W. Johnson

Dodgers Stir Things Up a Bit, Too

By Percy H. Whiting.

FAR be it from us to embark on that time-honored and worn argument as to the Greatest Pitcher in the World, BUT—

Just back from a chain-lightning jaunt through the upper right-hand corner of the big league territory, we voice one fact-proved conclusion: that Walter Johnson is the only genuine sensation of a good, brisk season.

When Johnson at Chicago Saturday completed 52 2-3 innings without allowing a run he added further proof to a well-known fact, said w.-k. fact being that there's only one greatest pitcher in the world alive to-day, and his initials are W. J.

Don't forget, in giving Johnson his due that Walter's support is nothing amazing. The Senators lack about ten ball players of having a great ball club. The catching staff has wabbled for years. Schaeffer at first is no Daubert. Laporte is—well, he's just Laporte, which isn't anything so marvelous. The outfield consists largely of Milan. McBride is a grand fielder, but a fright at hitting.

When Walter Johnson wins a ball game he wins it all by himself. And it takes a pretty good pitcher to do that in anybody's league.

* * *

Sure they do. Why shouldn't they? Any old team can play pretty good ball behind a pitcher who NEVER flickers. But it is thunder to pitch ball all the time that's air-tight.

That's the advantage Matthewson has had all these years. His team now and then won a game FOR HIM. Johnson, when he does win, takes no chances, but keeps 'em won all the way.

Three and a third more runless innings and Johnson reaches Doc White's world's record.

* * *

NEW YORK, it appeared to me as a bit bilious on the subject of baseball. With the Yanks last, the Giants nowhere and Brooklyn beneath their dignity, the fans of the metropolis haven't a blamed thing to console them.

The opinion prevails that the Giants are a problem. As for the Yanks, everybody seems to feel that Chance will make a team of them in due time. It really is amazing the confidence they feel in the Peerless Leader.

As to just what's the matter with the Yanks, not even Chance himself seems to know. They are joyscouting a trifle too much, no doubt. Chance's recent order against morning poker games took out one of the many kinks. The team was bottling itself up every morning and absorbing too much tobacco smoke and too little oxygen.

The real trouble with the Yanks lies deep. It must be due to rotten spirit somewhere. Chance will fire a lot of men or throw the fear of Gehenna into them before he gets a ball club.

* * *

MAYBE you don't think that placid burg of Brooklyn isn't "hawg wild" over its Dixie-developed ball club. The idea of Brooklyn sticking right up around the top, with the season a month advanced, is hard to appreciate.

About all Dahlin needs now is for "Red" Smith's annual hitting streak to crop out. That is all that is lacking. Jake Daubert and Zack Wheat, two other former Southern Leaguers on the same team, are decidedly off in hitting, too; but they are the sort who always manage to get back on after a bit. Jake is suffering from an attack of "lambasteit," and when he eases off a shade in his efforts, his average will go up like a baloon—and stay up.

Bob Fisher, the Nashville kid, is not only as good as he ever was, but he's considerably better. The stride he is hitting now will bring him high honors.

Of Rucker, nothing need be said, except that he shows no sign whatever of fading. Lefty Allen, late of Mobile, is rather better this year than ever. Strange to say, these grand southpaws have not won a game yet. Rucker has dropped three tough ones. Allen is always a slow starter.

Dahlen still believes he can make something out of "Bull" Wagner, his New Orleans recruit. This one is big and tough, and may develop.

Of all the Southerners on Dahlen's staff, none has been quite the surprise this season that Charley Stengel, the ex-Billikin, has. This lad has won several games with timely, screaming hits; has cracked out two that nicked the "bull" sign and has fielded sensationally.

I can't help feeling that Stengel is playing a good bit over his stride and is due a slump. But, then, you can't tell. No rules hold in Brooklyn. Look at Zack Wheat as an example—a shine in the Southern, a star in the National.

It would be a fine, amazing thing if the Brooklyn club should make a big showing. But, then, Washington did last year, so you never can tell.

FODDER FOR FANS

By shutting out the White Sox Saturday Walter Johnson, of the Senators, increased a record of 52 2-3 scoreless innings, breaking the old record of 45. But just as soon as Johnson had turned the trick somebody in Chicago declared that "Doc" White, nine years ago, had pitched 54 or 56 innings without being scored upon.

* * *

Joe Jackson, of the Naps, hammered out a four-base swat yesterday when the bases were filled. He also got a double and two singles out of four times up.

* * *

For the benefit of those interested it may be said that C. Webb Murphy has not as yet looped the loop from the top of the Brooklyn grandstand, in keeping with his promise. Nor is there any reason to hope that he will.

* * *

Otis Clymer's inability to play with the Cubs Saturday was due to the fact that he ate a $3 steak in one of the gilded grills in New York and right away got ptomaine poisoning.

* * *

The Naps so far have refused to "crack," as has been widely predicted. Maybe, after all, they've discarded their old and famous trick, and will become real pennant contenders. While discussing the Naps, it might be well to look into the record of one J. Birmingham, manager.

* * *

When Birmingham took charge of the Naps late last season they were trying their hardest to skid out of the percentage column. Immediately thereafter they started to win and when the season ended they had a record of 26 victories against 6 defeats.

* * *

Jack Coombs, the star twirler of the Athletics, is recovering from his illness, but will not be able to get back into the game until June.

* * *

The Red Sox came up from behind in the game with the Tigers yesterday, making three runs, tying the score in the ninth inning. They scored the winning run in the tenth.

* * *

Falkenberg's victory for the Naps over the Yankees yesterday makes his sixth straight win of the season. Only Walter Johnson, of the Senators, with seven victories, leads this twirling record.

* * *

The showing Jim Thorpe, the disqualified Olympic athlete, has made in exhibition games has caused Giant fans to beg McGraw to place him in the regular line-up.

* * *

Shouldn't the Cubs be called the veterans? In their line-up are Schulte, Evers, Reulbach, Ritchie, Archer, Corriden, Bresnahan and a few others who have been playing for several generations.

* * *

Speaker, Lewis and Hendriksen, of the Red Sox, are poling for a combined average of about .360, yet the team is down in sixth place.

* * *

The Browns, without the aid of their suspended manager, George Stovall, had an easy time trimming the Senators yesterday.

* * *

SIX THOUSAND FANS TURN OUT AT MOBILE

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—Mobile and Chattanooga broke even in yesterday's double-header. The crowd was almost equal to that of the Sunday's opener between Atlanta and the locals. It was estimated at nearly 6,000. Chattanooga took the first game by a score of 1 to 0, while the last was a veritable batfest for the locals, who garnered hit after hit from Troy's delivery and piled up thirteen. Hogg lost his first game of the season. He was found for five singles, fanned four and walked three.

Sporting Food

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

HAS BEEN.

Time was when Jimmy Sheckard took his stand
And lowbrows hit the ball to beat the band.
He never moved, but stood there with a smile

Time was when Mordy Brown stood on the mound;
The sacks were full and no one could be found
To stop the swats—he shot them at the plate
And Cobb and Crawford rolled them on the ground.

I sit to-day and freeze my youthful frame,
And yell till my esophagus is lame,
But, Oh! to see Jim Sheckard out in left
As Brown comes walking in to save the game.

There are several things which fail to excite our ambition, one of which is to throw the first ball at the first game of the Federal League.

George Stovall is a rude person and all that. The chief fault to be found with him is that he played with the wrong team.

If Mr. Stovall had been playing with a New York team he would have been slapped on the wrist and suspended a whole day—if the day happened to fall on Sunday.

It is well to make an example of a ball player if he plays for a magnate who will stand for it.

The fact that St. Louis lost the first game in the Federal League is merely a reversion to type. St. Louis does not feel comfortable unless it is at the bottom of things.

One is not surprised to hear that Ritchie demands $15,000 for a conflict in New York. If Willie does not have a care he may get himself into a fight.

We are about to have motorcycle races in our midst. We presume that they will be attended by the same persons who pay regular money to see wrestling matches.

It is getting so these days that a team that Frank Chance beats is accused of having the milk of human kindness.

Bonesetter Reese bursts out with the information that dandelion greens will cure liver trouble, but he fails to state what will cure dandelion greens.

Frank Chance arises to remark that he will not trade Hal Chase for Ty Cobb. Even David Harum would find it hard to trade a jackknife for a Derby winner.

There are various reasons why Charlie Dooin's team should win this year, one of which is that Horace Fogel is not in the way.

"A club owner must think," quoth Charles Webb Murphy. If Charles thinks before he speaks he does a heluva lot of thinking.

Some day we shall scrape up nerve enough to ask a motorcyclist whether he has been sentenced to it or whether it is his own free will.

THE ANCIENT MARINER.

It is an ancient mariner;

To slip you any salve,
But I am deeply jealous of
The cargo that you have."

CRIMSON-TIGER-PENNSY BOAT RACE IS ON TO-DAY

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., May 12.—The triangular Harvard-Princeton-University of Pennsylvania race, postponed from Saturday, will be rowed to-day at 4 p. m. Dr. Spaeth, of Princeton, early to-day endeavored to persuade Dean Briggs, of Harvard, to allow the race to be rowed at 7 or 10 a. m. All three crews were willing to row at the last mentioned time.

GEORGIA-TECH TRACK MEET AT ATHENS IS OFF

ATHENS, GA., May 12.—The track meet between Tech and Georgia, scheduled to be held at Athens this afternoon, has been postponed until next week. The meet was called off by Georgia faculty, who base their claim on the fact that most of the track stars are on the baseball team and a meet at this time would interfere with the team's chances in the games with Tech in Atlanta next Friday and Saturday. The Georgia boys have devoted most of their time to baseball practice and the track team is not in shape to meet any one right now.

FOUR MOTORCYCLE RIDERS ARRIVE FOR THE BIG MEET

Four of the speed merchants who will compete on Jack Prince's motorcycle track on the old circus grounds arrived in the city Sunday, and were on the roads around Atlanta all during the day, tuning up their racing machines.

The one-quarter-mile saucer will be in readiness for them to practice on by Friday. Mr. Prince announced last night that he would have the track proper completed by that time and would then start work on the seating.

Most of the famous motorcycle riders of this country will be in Atlanta for the race meet, and some fine sport is promised. Records are also sure to go glimmering.

Mr. Prince estimates that the riders will average 90 miles an hour on the saucer.

SHERIDAN DECIDES TO GIVE UP ALL ATHLETICS

NEW YORK, May 12.—Because it interferes with his job, Martin Sheridan, policeman, former champion discus thrower, has decided to drop out of athletics.

"You can state positively for me," Sheridan is accredited with saying, "that I am through with competition for good. I would like to take part in the games, but I find it interferes with my job, so I have decided to cut it out. There is no doubt I could go back into competition and do as well as I did. I went out to Celtic Park the other day and threw the discus 13 feet with all my clothes on. I will probably go out there sometimes for exercise, but that will be all.

ELBERFELD ATTACKED BY FANS; "KID" WINS

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—Fred Murphy and Sam Pritchard, two young white men, were arrested on the other side of the ball park yesterday after the double-header, and docketed for disorderly conduct at the police station. It seems the men took it upon themselves to get at Manager Elberfeld, of the Chattanooga team, for the mixup with Stock in the game, and assailed him. Some of the onlookers stated the men rushed Elberfeld and that he struck one of them after they had tackled him. Elberfeld denied having made any demonstration and his statement was verified.

EDDIE M'GOORTY SIGNS FOR BOUT WITH HOUCK

DENVER, COLO., May 12.—Eddie McGoorty, of Oshkosh, has signed to meet Leo Houck, of Boston, in a 10-round bout May 27. The weight agreed upon is 160 pounds at 3 o'clock. Rudy Unholz is working with McGoorty at the Arvada training quarters.

Evans Writes of Eyesight in Golf

Most Players Depend On One Optic

By "Chick" Evans.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 10.—There has been a great deal of discussion of late in the British golf magazines and newspapers concerning what is called the "master eye in golf." This phrase seems to indicate that each player has one eye which serves better than the other in the all-important act of keeping the eye on the ball. British periodicals therefore discourse at length upon the subject and advise a study of one's best optic. An unintentional experiment was made in England a short time ago during a team match by a member of the Cambridge University team. One eye of the gentleman had been undergoing medical treatment and at the time of the competition was bandaged closely. In spite of this handicap he haived the match with his opponent and played splendid golf at times; on occasion, however, he found difficulty in judging distances.

* * *

BEING interested in the subject I made a few experiments myself to determine which was my master eye, and I have concluded that it is my left. Perhaps I cock my head back a little on the back swing and on the down swing to the actual hitting; at any rate, I seemed in my experiment to make a greater use of my left eye. I think Valle's weight testing machine could be used profitably in this discussion, because if a player sways backward the line from his left eye to the ball is shorter and less oblique. In any inclination there is a tendency to shorten the line from the left eye to the ball. Of course, I am arguing from the standpoint of a right-handed golfer. I should think the right eye would be more important to the left-handed player.

In the execution of the longer shots the ball is played so far away from the body that one can not get both eyes immediately over the ball and allow the club to lie naturally, which, by the way, is one of the most important things to be borne in mind. In cases where there is a marked discrepancy in the strength of the eyes the stronger must be necessarily most favored.

* * *

ONE of my great little rules has always been to keep my eyes in such a position that lines of equal length drawn from each eye will meet at a certain point on the ball. In this case, of course, no eye can be called the master eye. In putting, the hardest shot of the game, I try to keep my eyes directly over the ball. The stroke is so short that it would be hard for me to tell which eye is the better one. Maybe I could do better with only one eye; that seems to be the only thing I have not tried in my fruitless efforts to learn how to putt.

Those players who wear glasses must have special difficulties to overcome when playing golf, and it would be enlightening to know what these are and how they are surmounted; for the whole subject of the application of sight to golf playing is an interesting one.

PREP LEAGUE NOTES

Boys High and Tech High will meet for the second time this season on Wednesday. The last game resulted in a win for Boys High and the chances are that the team will repeat.

* * *

The race for second place in the local Prep League now lies between Marist and Tech High, with the percentage of games won and lost slightly in favor of the Culverites. They have won four and lost two games. Marist has won three and lost two.

* * *

There were no games played Saturday by local prep teams. A number of the members of the Boys High nine journeyed to Athens to see the second game of the Tech-Georgia series.

Meyers, of Tech High, proved a sensation in the pole vault in the Prep meet last Friday. He had been practicling for this event only two weeks and never tried to vault before. He just barely missed winning the event Friday.

* * *

A tennis tournament between the winners of the Peacock meet and the winners of the Boys High tournament will be held at East Lake some time next week. Starr, Harris, Candler and Jones are the crack players at Boys High. Sims, Sams and Black are the champions at Peacock.

The G. M. A. Cadets who were encamped at Lakewood are planing on a water polo team. The boys have been swimming during the past week and Coach Griffin says there are a number of expert swimmers in the camp.

Marist College will hold its annual field day exercises the first week in June. A medal will be given to the highest point winner. The fight for this honor will be a lively one between Allen, Lewis and Fowler.

If an all-prep track team is picked this season Marist will have its share of men on it. Allen, Lewis and Fowler are all good men and would give any prep school athlete a hard job to beat them.

M'CARTY THINKS LITTLE OF FIGHT WITH PELKEY

CHICAGO, May 12.—Luther McCarty's bout with Arthur Pelkey at Calgary on May 24, will be nothing more than a training stunt, according to the champion, who is in Chicago with Manager McCarney.

On his arrival here, McCarney found telegrams awaiting him from Promoters Coffroth and McCarney of the Pacific Coast clubs asking the champion to meet the winner of the "Gunboat" Smith-Jess Willard fight to be staged in San Francisco, May 17. McCarney said he thought Smith no great attraction on the coast, and that of the two fighters he preferred to have his man meet Willard.

A CHILD SAVED FROM A HORRIBLE DEATH

LITTLE ANNIE DONALDSON, AGE 8 YEARS, NO. 7 RICHARDS ST., CORNER TOMBLIN ST., LITTLE DAUGHTER OF MR. AND MRS. S. P. DONALDSON, AFTER 3 YEARS' BATTLE SAVED AS IF BY A MIRACLE.

Words can not describe or express the supreme feeling of joy and happiness which to-day filled the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Donaldson, who reside at No. 7 Richards Street, New Era division, this city. Little Annie, 8 years old, not larger than an ordinary child of 5 years, was saved from death and restored to perfect health in a seemingly miraculous manner. For three years this little child has been suffering from some inexplainable cause. Her stomach would at times bloat to immense proportions, high fevers would frequently attack her, followed by dreadful chills or bilious attacks, her mind was clear, but her memory weak, her sleep restless, sometimes screaming out, almost frightened to death. Her breath, especially in the mornings, was very foul, dark circles under the eyes, very nervous, her appetite was changeable, ravenously hungry at times, at other times the sight of food was nauseating. All the careful attention which loving parents could bestow was given to her, and all modest attempts were resorted to, but the child's condition grew worse. The mother did what hundreds of other people were doing. She called at Coursey & Munn's drug store and obtained a treatment of the Quaker Extract. With anxious mind she watched for results, after the child began taking the wonderful remedy, and what were the results? To the amazement of the whole family, the child expelled a monster tapeworm, head and all complete, alive and squirming. It is hard to believe this monster is 41 feet in length. How many children and people are being tortured by parasites, and how they go on for years dosing and doping for what they think is some form of stomach trouble when it really is worms of some kind that is causing all your trouble! If it is worms, Quaker Extract will expel them. If it is caused from other causes, such as catarrh, indigestion, constipation, the Quaker Extract will do more for you than any other remedies on the market to-day.

This case is so remarkable that many people will doubt it, yet all are at liberty to investigate, write, phone, wire or call at the child's residence, the above address. The father is a carpenter by occupation, was born and lived most of his life here in Atlanta, and he has a host of friends and they will vouch for his word. The Health Teacher said the people would soon realize the power of the Quaker Remedies, and such cases as this should certainly convince every sensible person. Once more the Health Teacher recommends the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm to any person who may suffer with rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder or blood trouble, and will expel worms.

So call to-day at Coursey & Munn's drug store, 29 Marietta Street, and obtain these wonderful Quaker Remedies. We prepay express charges on all orders of $3 or over.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"THAT must be some interesting, that novel you are reading there," remarked the Head Barber. "You ain't had your nose out of it all the forenoon."

"It is a beautiful story, George. I almost cry in some parts of it, and when the laughs come they are sure great. I didn't skip a line of it, either, and I have just finished the last page. The title of it is 'Starflower,' and it was wrote by Mrs. Eleanor Shirley Dewflicker. And then they say that women can't write! Maybe some women writes stories that is kind of punk and then gets made fun of by the critics, but this woman that wrote 'Starflower' is some queen of a writer. Gee, there is some love passages that is simply superfluous and almost sublimate. 'Starflower' is the name of the heroine, a little girl that always lived in the northern part of Pennsylvania. She is so pretty and sweet that she has lovers come from everywhere to try to win her hand, but she loves only one, a young man who is doing scientific farming near her father's home. Of course science is a great thing, George, and I suppose if it helps raise big crops it must help a man to make love, too. Anyhow, she loves him and some day they are to wed. Just listen to this part, where they are engaged:

Very Pathetic.

"'Starflower,' whispered Robert, placing her little trembling palm in his strong right hand. 'Little girl, I am plain and direct in my speech, as you know. I can't write poetry for you, little girl, like the Byron poems you read to me out in the orchard, and I ain't no Tennyson, but I am a man with a man's heart and two willing hands. I love you!'

"'And I love you, Bob,' murmured Starflower, bewildered by the wonderful rush of happiness that swept over her lithe form and suffused her cheeks with the first flush of girlish love.

"An oriole flashed brightly through the crimson sumac and the brook rippled along like some soft accompaniment to the oldest, sweetest story in the world."

"Gee, George; ain't that some writing?"

"Did he marry her and make a lot of kale?" asked the practical Head Barber.

"No, George," replied the Manicure Lady. "That is the pitiful part of it. A young bridge builder named Walter Orr came to the little town where Starflower dwelt, and he kind of dazzled her with his fine English and his wonderful piano playing. He was a college man, and her Robert didn't know nothing about Virgil or Horace or Rameses or any of them old-timers. Orr knew all about them all, and he could change his voice until it got as soft as the rustling of the breeze through the autumn leaves. When he was talking to his men he spoke kind of commanding, but when he spoke to her he always spoke with the soft pedal. One night, George, she agreed to run away with him, and the next morning they were gone. Just after they eloped Orr got fired and had to take a position that paid him about one-quarter as much money as her former sweetheart made every week out of his registered milk from his registered cows.

It Sounds All Right.

"When she saw poverty staring her in the face she took some kind of a powder and they found her still in death with a note to Robert pinned on her night robe. Then Robert heard about it and went so insane that he called all his cows Starflower."

"It sounds all right," said the Head Barber, "but I wouldn't go nuts over no girl that threw me down!"

Quite Taxable

William Jennings Bryan once visited Cornell University, and while being entertained to dinner by a prominent member of the legal fraternity he told the following story:

"Once out in Nebraska I went to protest against my real estate assessment, and one of the things of which I particularly complained was assessing a goat at $25. I claimed that a goat was not real property in the legal sense of the word, and should not be assessed. One of the assessors, a very pleasant-faced old man, very obligingly said that I could go upstairs with him, and together we would look over the rules and regulations and see what could be done. We looked over the rules, and finally the old man asked:

"'Does your goat run loose on this road?'

"'Well, sometimes,' said I, wondering what the penalty was for that dreadful offense.

"'Does he butt?' again queried the old man.

"'Yes,' I answered, 'he butts.'

"'Well,' said the old man, looking at me, 'this rule says tax all property running and abutting on the highway. I don't see that I can do anything for you. Good day, sir.'"

A Charming Midsummer Hat

By OLIVETTE

A DAINTY little model this for wear with the lacy gowns of July and August. All in pure white, it tones well with the bright eyes and softly flushed cheeks of midsummer days. Draw folds of soft chiffon or mousselaine de soie over the crown and brim of a small milk-white straw shape—chip will do, though milan is better and "horsehair" best of all. Around the crown draw taffeta ribbon finishing in a "pump bow" directly in front. From under this bow, in either direction, lay sheafs of wheat in the prevailing tone of white. And now the final touch is given by the coquettish ruches of soft chiffon that face the entire under brim and appear softly at the back where the brim has a decided upward roll.

Sister's Engagement

TO-DAY'S COMPLETE STORY.

THE daughter of the household, aged 11, looked up from her book as the man caller came into the library.

"How do you do, Mr. Dearmore," she said, getting up politely. "You might as well take a comfortable chair because sister won't be down for ages. She is always slow about getting dressed and I supposed now she'll be slower than ever because she won't care if she does keep you waiting."

"Well, why shouldn't she care, I'd like to know?" inquired the caller with an assumption of surprise designed to be comic.

The young person hitched a little closer to him in her eagerness. "I just found out," she told him, "tonight. I guess they weren't going to tell me, but sister was so interested in brushing out her switch that she didn't notice me, and mother said, 'You might have done better if you'd had more ambition, but, thank heaven, you're engaged at last!' And sister said yes, it was time and she'd have to make the best of it. Why, she's engaged! Don't you understand?"

"You surprise me," said the caller, with interest.

Very Exciting.

The young person nodded her head. "It's awfully exciting to have an engaged person in the family. We never had one before. I held my hand over my mouth to keep from asking right out who it was, but I knew if I spoke they'd make me go away—and then all they said was that where the trooser was coming from if dad didn't make a killing goodness only knew. What's a trooser?"

"A sort of feminine delirium, I believe," the young man told her. Wouldn't you like to read out loud to me from your book?"

"Not when I can talk," the young person assured him, promptly. "I'd think it was Bob Samson, only he hasn't been here for ages. He's riding around a ranch out West now and he always brought me chocolates and petted the dog and waited hours and hours for sister. Mother told her one day for goodness sake when she got her hands on that huge old Samson house to burn it down and put up another one with a French gray drawing room and other things, but I guess Bob slipped a cog somehow"——

"Er—what?"

"Well, Aunt Clara said to mother that a cog in the wheels must have slipped somehow, and how did he ever get away, and wasn't it a pity! So I suppose Bob did it. I always liked his chocolates—he bought me just as good ones as he bought sister. Sometimes they try to pass off cheap candy on me, but I know! Then I feed it to the dog.

"I'm glad it wasn't that Siddens man. He always called me 'little one' and patted my head and he had bronchitis and always coughed before he spoke, and sister said she didn't care if he was rich, but she couldn't endure a man who wore brown ties and ate grapefruit with a fork and anyhow he gave her the shivers. That was the time mother scolded so and sister went to Aunt Clara's for a month.

"I'm surprised at her getting engaged, because she'll have to have a house and meals then and she says picking out things to eat is simply awful and she wouldn't wear her life away keeping down the grocery bills for any man and he might as well make up his mind to it. Anyhow, sister never loses her head, because mother says so, and she'll make him toe the mark. Mother says that with her sweet smile sister could make a man believe white was black, but that seems foolish. Wouldn't you know black if you saw it?"

"I used to think I was able to distinguish colors," admitted the caller.

A Surprise.

"But you're different," said the young person. "It isn't as though you were one of sister's trailers—that's what dad calls 'em. It doesn't make any difference to you. Only I thought if I told you about it you'd understand why she didn't hurry to get down here, now she's interested in one particular man."

"Well," said the caller, "I'll tell you a secret. I'm the particular man!"

The young person's eyes bulged. "Honest?" she squealed. "Why, I was never so sur-r-p-prised in my l-l-life! And you never petted the dog once! My, but you're quiet!"

RECIPE FOR WRITING.

THE one way to write is to do it. Sit down to your typing machine and rattle the keys till a poem slips out where mere space has just been. Sounds simple—well, listen; it isn't; it's only the way you should write. Do I do it? Well, no. I'm confessing that it's not thus my songs I indite. But I take up my little tan Faber, and cudgel my little gray brain, and I cover great sheets of white paper right over and over again with lead marks of black and with smudges which mean that I had to erase. Each "I just dashed off" chap really drudges. He denies? Then he's paid for his "space!"

Of each day's growing—and so,
Good-morrow!

A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing! And so—
Good-bye!

:: REMEMBERING ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

IF I could just remember, when the past is on parade,
Some little deed of merit for each big mistake I've made,
The other days, long vanished, would be glad days to recall,
But Memory leans toward wilder scenes—and I can see them all.

If I could just remember, counting back a score of years,
One act that made a loved one smile—not ten that prompted tears—
I'd dream the past dreams over and forget the wasted wine,
But Memory loves to taunt me with the errors that were mine.

If I could just remember, in the twilight of my life,
One speech that made for peace and love—not ten that hastened strife—
The future might seem dreary and the present might be bare,
But the past would be an orchard with a thousand songbirds there.

How to Manage a Husband

By DOROTHY DIX.

THEY had admired all of the little bride's wedding finery, and had finally drifted over to where the tea table was set by an open window.

"Well, my dear," said the woman in the soft white gown, "I hope you are going to be as happy as the days are long, and I am sure you will, for Jack is a fine fellow, and he is well to do, and an orphan, so you are going to escape hard times and mothers-in-law, two of the principal snags that are most apt to make a big dent in the barque of matrimony, even when they don't wreck it.

"Still, you must not expect to find everything plain sailing. There are a good many storms on even the calmest sea of wedlock, and you are going to find out that lots of things that you expected to happen won't happen, and a lot of things that you were positive couldn't occur, do occur with amazing frequency.

"Also, you are going to discover, and it will give you the jar of your life, that the noble ideal of perfect manhood that you are tying up with has got faults, and peculiarities, and whims, and crochets that you have never suspected concealed about his person.

"Now you take it from me, that the great thing in married life is for the wife to begin right, to get off on the right foot, so to speak, for every man can be managed, and brought to eat out of his wife's hand, if only she goes about it in the proper manner."

The Best Way.

"Well," replied the woman in the soft white gown, "I can't do better than relate to you the experiences of two friends of mine, both of whom married good men, but men who were high tempered, and tyrannical, and cross—the sort of men you know who possess all of the virtues and none of the lovable qualities of life. They are the kind of husbands who are too much gentlemen ever to strike a woman with their hand, but who leave her bruised and bleeding, and wounded to death in spirit after they have stabbed her with their tongues.

"There are lots of men like that, my dear, and when I get elected to the Legislature the very first thing I am going to do is to bring in a bill to make a man's disposition, instead of his morals, a cause for divorce.

"But back to my story. One of these women whom I am telling you is named Bertha, and she is one of those gentle, suave women who are born salve spreaders. Anything like a jolt in the domestic machinery hurts her to the very core of her being. She isn't weak. Oh, dear no. She would hang on to a principle, or a conviction, to eternity, and be loyal to one she loved to the death itself, and if you pushed her to the wall she'd fight until there wasn't an enemy left alive, but she would never argue a question with you, or say a thing that would hurt your feelings, or do anything to make the slightest unpleasantness.

"Well, when the rosy mists of the honeymoon rolled up and she discovered that she was married to a man who was twin brother to the fretful porcupine, and whose prejudices simply strewed the ground around him, she undertook to manage him by tact.

What She Did.

"She only conversed upon the subjects that she knew he agreed with her upon. She devoted her days to rubbing his fur down the right way. She kept everything that was unpleasant, and that could possibly ruffle him, hidden out of sight, and spent her life tip-toeing on eggs for fear of rousing him and exploding his infernal machine of a temper. In short, in order to keep the peace and make her home happy, she went through a very martyrdom of sacrifice of all of her desires and inclinations.

"H'm," said the little bride, "and how did the other woman manage her husband?"

"The other woman," replied the woman of the soft, white dress, "was of a different type. She had a red-headed temper of her own that was a dead ringer for her husband's, besides which she loved a scrap for the pure fun of the thing. She didn't dodge the issue when her husband flung a debatable subject into the family arena. She simply rolled up her sleeves and sailed in, and when the domestic mix-up was over she wasn't always the one who was on the mat.

"She was a good woman, and a good wife and mother, who did her full duty by her family, and she stood pat on her record. She didn't waste any time trying to jolly or cajole her husband as poor Bertha did. If he didn't like the way she did things, and her opinions, why he could lump it, that was all. She was an independent, free spoken woman, and she didn't see why she should wear herself out flattering any old husband into doing the things he ought to do, anyway.

"And she didn't mind expressing these sentiments, but the result was that their house was a dark and bloody battle ground, with no day without its spat. But, that was her way of managing a husband."

"Which one of the systems work?" asked the little bride with a troubled air.

Flying Men's Mascots

CURIOUS SUPERSTITIONS OF AVIATORS.

LUCK plays a big part in the life of an aviator, and for this reason most airmen are very superstitious. The majority of aviators carry mascots when they fly, and the cleverer the pilot the more the luck-bringing emblems he seems to possess. Vedrines, the crack French flyer, always has a miniature of the famous picture "Mona Lisa" fastened to the side of his aeroplane when he starts on a flight. He carried this picture on his racing monoplane recently when he won the cup at a record speed of 105 miles an hour. Grahame-White does not trouble about mascots to any great extent, but he invariably wears a pair of check riding breeches under his flying overalls when he makes a flight. These garments are popularly supposed to be lucky, and many other aviators have adopted a similar flying garb. Notable among these is Biolovoucic, the young Peruvian airman, who recently flew over the Alps.

A Lion's Tooth.

Another favorite mascot is a little Teddy bear which is strapped to one of the wing stays on the machine. In naval flying circles a lion's tooth is considered to be a lucky mascot for airmen—a fashion created by the late Lieutenant Parke, for with such an emblem he came out of many serious smashes unscathed. Lewis Turner, the well-known pilot instructor, who flies the Caudron biplanes, has so many mascots that he is generally in doubt as to which he shall take up with him. He recently remarked that were he to wear all his mascots at once he would be mistaken for a toy dealer.

There are many quaint superstitions in vogue at the aerodromes. Chief among these is that should a pilot have one smash he will have two others on the same day if he continues flying. This belief is so firmly rooted in the minds of most aviators that after a mishap they seldom again trust themselves on a machine until twenty-four hours have passed.

Unlucky Thirteen.

Many airmen also have a superstitious dislike of flying in bright sunshine. But there is a substratum of common sense running through this belief. The hot rays of the sun when shining on a damp ground cause heat eddies in the air, which are very dangerous to flying men. These are known as air pockets, which are holes in the air that contain no support for machine or man.

Flying on the thirteenth day of the month is in great disfavor amongst many airmen. And this superstition is largely due to the fact that so many fatal accidents have occurred to airmen on this date. Last year ten pilots were killed whilst flying on the thirteenth of the different months and already this year three airmen have been killed, two on the thirteenth of January and one on the thirteenth of February.

Airmen are also influenced by the behavior of animals on the ground when they are flying over them. If horses or cattle appear terrified at a pilot's approach, and utter warning cries, then this is regarded as an omen of ill-luck. But if the animals over which he is passing are not alarmed to any extent by his approach, then he has little fear that his flight will be anything but successful.

Another bad omen is the stopping of a watch on an aeroplane when it is aloft.

Lady passengers are popularly supposed to ensure the success of an aeroplane flight. One of the most consistent luck-bringers in this respect, is Miss Trehawke Davies. She invariably brings luck to the pilot who takes her on a flight. She recently accompanied Hammel in the Aerial Flying Derby round London when he obtained the second place after a magnificent flight. Miss Davies flew on several occasions with the late Mr. Astley. A few days before his death this airman, whilst flying with Miss Davies, fell in his monoplane from a height of nearly a hundred feet. Both pilot and passenger escaped with a shaking. A few days later Mr. Astley, when flying alone on a similar machine in Ireland, sideslipped in the air at a low altitude and was killed on the spot.

Got It Regular Then.

Mrs. Subbub: "I wonder what's come over your master this morning, Sarah? Instead of being cross, as usual, he started off happy and whistling like a bird."

Sarah (the new "general"): "I'm afraid it's my fault, mum. I got the wrong package, and gave him bird seed for breakfast food."

The Girl With the Monocle

No, This Isn't English, Y'Know; It's the Rage in Paris

SURPRISING as it may seem, this is not an English fad at all, although London society is always given the credit—or discredit—for styles in monocles, but it is a novelty taken up by "smart" Parisiennes.

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON has an affectionate disposition.

On rare occasions he has given her money as he was leaving, and when in her alacrity to accept it she has forgotten to kiss him he has been grievously pained. He has never experienced that feeling of momentary reprieve which comes to colder-hearted husbands on such occasions.

He was in a tender mood the other evening, and sought to put his arm around his wife's waist. Alas for the ignorance of man and the tyranny of fashion! He couldn't find it!

He stepped back and looked at her in a puzzled way. Then he followed the line laid out by the dressmaker and slid his arm gently around under her armpits.

The next evening, still tender and loving, this being the springtime of the year, he again put his arm under his wife's armpits, but her waist was not there!

He scratched his head in a puzzled fashion and felt a momentary rebuff. But his love is not of the kind that brooks discouragement, and, after a moment's survey of her form divine, he got down on the floor and put his arm around her ankle, the dressmaker having located her waist there in the dress she was then wearing.

The following evening Lysander John looked before he attempted to embrace, and found her waist was not at her ankles! It had been moved up to her knees!

It was then that he was overcome with a sense of the helplessness of man when opposed to the tyranny of fashion, and he bowed his head in anguish and cried aloud.

"It used to be so simple a matter," he cried, beating his hands on his breast, "for a man to put his arms around the waist of the woman he loved, but alas! it is a simple matter no longer!

"It has become a movable sacrament of love!"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

GO TO AN ARTIST.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Not a day that goes by that I am not told of the wonderfully beautiful hand I have. Artists have stopped me and apologized in the cars and commented on my beautiful hand. Of course, I paid no attention to these comments, but it seems that if I could obtain some revenue through having my hand posed I should like to avail myself of the opportunity. MISS R.

Have your mother go with you to the studio of some reputable artist and ask his opinion.

I am sure, however, that there are many ways more lucrative and ennobling by which your hands can earn you a living. Have you tried them?

DON'T GIVE IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is it proper for a young man of 18 to present his lady friend with a diamond ring on her sixteenth birthday? We are not engaged, but the love between us could not be broken, as we have known each other for four years. V. A. H. F.

Eighteen and sixteen often decide their "bond of love can't be broken," and change their minds ten times before they are old enough to marry. Your love may develop into a sentiment more lasting, but don't give diamond rings till you are older, and know.

THE OUTSIDE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"A" said that when a man is walking with two girl friends he must walk in the center. "B" said when a man is walking with two girls he must walk on the outside. H. N. L. M.

A gentleman should always take the outside of the walk.

Wouldn't Be Done

Robbie met a neighbor who was smoking some fine, fragrant tobacco sent by his son in America. He took out his own pipe ostentatiously.

"Hae you a match, Sandy?" he inquired.

The match was forthcoming, but nothing more.

"I do believe," said Robbie, "I hae left ma tobacco at hame."

"Then," said Sandy, after a silence, "ye mich' gie me back ma match."

From Innocence of Thought

By Virginia Terhune Van De Water

MUCH has been written and said within the past few years in commendation of the broad lines on which the training and education of the modern girl is conducted. To add further approval to this twentieth century method would be platitudinous. To cast a slur upon it, or to hint that the latest ideal in the upbringing of women has its attendant drawbacks, is to lay one's self open to the onus of being old-fashioned.

It is a sin in the minds of most people of this generation to be old-fashioned or behind the times in ideals and theories. Yet some of us conservatives still cling to certain of the tenets that were instilled into us 20 and 30 years ago. The memory of our own girlhood sometimes leads us to compare the girl of the period with the "young person" of our early days, and the modern product does not emerge unscathed from the comparison.

It would be carrying conservatism to the limits of folly not to admit the tremendous value of the broader, and deeper, and franker training which the modern girl receives over that of her prototype of a quarter century ago. It would be the height of bigotry not to admit that by her twentieth century education, she has become a clearer thinking, more self-reliant, more useful member of society than her parent was. Yet there are some things missing in the character of the "young person" of to-day which make her elders regret that a modern education could not be absorbed by her without a radical alteration taking place in her character.

Our girl has lost much of the sentimental appeal that belonged to her aunt's or mother's girlhood days. I do not mean by sentiment the mawkish superconsciousness of sex which sometimes masquerades under that name and which can not be too soon stamped out as a menace to all that is best in womanhood. But I do mean that she has lost much of her one-time ability to call forth the highest and best in young mankind by her fresh, untarnished view of the world.

Shrugged His Shoulders.

A youth of my acquaintance called recently on a girl with whom he was much smitten—after the fashion of the male young of the species. The girl was college-bred and had the sophistication of her type. The young man was fond of reading, and the talk drifted into literature. The girl advanced her own theories concerning Brieux and other constructive European writers with absolute frankness, and before the evening ended had aired all her ideas and opinions on the white slave question. When the young man mentioned the conversation to me my face must have betrayed some surprise, for he shrugged his shoulders and laughed a little bitterly.

"Girls have changed since your day, I guess," he remarked—"more's the pity!"

They have changed since that day. They have changed for the better in many things. To a person with entirely modern views they may have improved in all things. Yet it seems a pity that in her intellectual advance our girl should have failed to retain much of the grace and sweetness that served as an inspiration to the men who were youths 20 and 30 years ago.

The Exchange.

In the course of her evolution the "young person" of to-day has exchanged innocence of thought for consciousness of morality. She no longer has manners—she has Manner. She had transformed what was once poise into Pose.

Yet the characteristics which some of us are so narrow as to deplore are doubtless only indications of the advance in the evolution of a woman far broader and better than her predecessors were. Yet, as old-fashioned folk, some of us recall the girls we knew when we were young, and sigh—but very softly, lest the Young Person of To-day should hear—and censure—us.

No Fail for Recipe.

She—I sent a dollar to a young woman for a recipe to make me look young.

"What did you get?"

"A card saying, 'Always associate with women twenty years older than yourself.'"

Making Mother Over

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

WHEN a girl reaches 16, and her head is turned as easily as thistledown, for the reason that it is almost as light, she becomes possessed with the belief that she is superior to her family, a delusion in which her foolishly fond parents unconsciously encourage her.

She is her parents' own child; that is a stubborn fact that even romantic theories of being the stolen offspring of royalty, of which she has read in the fairy tales, can't conquer. She is a rare blossom on a parent stem that looks like a weed, and she wonders that there is no explanation of such a phenomenon.

She learns at an earlier age than one would guess that she can't change her father. She can rule him, and does, but, being a man, he is satisfied to be what he is. He admits his offspring is a rare blossom, but does not for a moment think that the father stem is a weed.

Mother is different. One reason is that she is a woman and knows not that self-content that is wrapped around a man like the bandages around a mummy. And a greater reason is that she is Mother, and, therefore, humble. She also recognizes that her offspring is a rare blossom, the quick eyes of her love making this discovery the moment her baby daughter was first laid in her arms. Because of her love she makes humble comparison, and knows also that she is a weed.

She doesn't resent her daughter's air of superiority, but weakly and foolishly encourages it, thereby turning that little thistledown head a little further out of place.

She Is Displeased.

Naturally the conditions that exist in a home where a girl has been permitted to think she is a princess do not please her, and she begins the process of making over, alternating her work of reformation between the parlor and mother, the former receiving serious attention when she expects company and the latter engaging her energies all the time.

Mother's methods of pronunciation are not those in use now, and she is corrected and called old-fashioned, a term that loses its sweetness when a princess daughter applies it. Mother is too tired when night comes to put on more becoming clothes, and daughter begins at the wrong end of the reformation by complaining about her mother's appearance instead of attaining the same end by making the work lighter.

The family purse will not support more than one peacock. Mother is glad to give daughter that royal plumage, and the girl accepts, and later complains when she struts around that her mother is not dressed as well as other mothers she knows, forgetting that in those families there are no peacocks and the sum alloted for royal plumage is more justly divided.

I do not want girls to cease in this reform of making mother over, but I want them to go at it in a better way. One can't change a mother's old-style clothes into new by complaining, but the change can be wrought by buying mother new clothes. If $10 is given a girl for a new hat and mother says she will make last season's do, the daughter can make mother over by giving her the new hat and wearing the old herself.

Another Way.

If mother shows the unbecoming traces of hard labor, another way is offered for making her over by taking the burden of the home off her shoulders.

If the latest whim in a ribbon, a tie, hat, gloves, dress or shoes will improve daughter, wouldn't they also improve mother, and isn't her need of improvement greater? One has the adornment of youth and needs little; the other is showing all the disfiguring marks of time and needs every assistance pretty clothes may give.

Make mother over by making her think more of herself and less of others! Such a reformation will be good for the whole family, but don't, girls, I implore, go at this reformation in a high-handed, selfish way. Have pride in her and she will begin to have the pride in herself of which many years of monotonous and unappreciated household work have robbed her.

Make her over! Make her young and pretty and carefree again, and use in working the transformation the fairy wand of Love!

Seeing the Pictures

WOMAN with Cerise Hat (embracing woman with headgear of bright violet)—Oh, aren't the pictures too dear? I'm crazy about them, Agnes! Just a little bit of powder on the side of your nose, dear. There—it's off, but you rubbed off the rouge, too. Such atmosphere, don't you think? No, of course, I can't make out what that one means that looks like a mud puddle stirred up with a stick, but I am sure it is something perfectly wonderful if only I could comprehend it!"

Woman with Bright Violet Hat—It certainly makes one feel so advanced to see things like these! Why, I can remember when I used to think a picture should really be a picture of something instead of merely a symbol of a thought. Goodness! Will you look at that dress—the one just coming in! Such things ought to be restricted by law!

Second Sweet Young Thing—So do I. Isn't it glorious to think there is an artist living who can paint a bale of shingles? If you look at it hard enough with your head tilted you get the queerest sort of feeling! Something like being seasick and falling out of a window at the same time! The man who did that is a genius. Wouldn't you simply love to know him?"

On His Nerves.

Square Shouldered Man (with an expression of pain on his face)—Let's get out of here, Genevieve. If I stay any longer I'll say things, and then the long-haired freaks sprinkled about would hang me to one of the staircase pillars and put a frame around me and call the result an impressionistic study of an apple pie. I expect I'd look just as much like a pie as a human being. Oh, help! See that one in the corner—the purple woman with blue spots on her against a scrambled background."

Genevieve—"For goodness' sake, hush! Don't let people know you're so absolutely ignorant, George! You've got to see this exhibit, because you've got to be able to talk about it, and the sooner you do so the quicker you'll be through! You don't suppose any one really likes these pictures, do you? You're not the only one that's suffering! Come on!"

Angel Child—"Ma, I want a drink, I want a drink, ma! Say, ma, why can't I have a dr"——

His Mother (jerking him along)—"Willie, if I hear another word out of you I'll take you into a corner and whip you good! Here, I left all that sewing and brought you just for your own good, so you'd love pictures, and then you act this way! Look at the pictures and"——

Angel Child—"Aw, I'd rather go to a nickel show! Say, I want a drink"——

Confiding Young Creature (attended by pale youth in extreme garb)——"But when your pictures are exhibited, Arthur, is the time we'll see crowds! If they only knew what a genius you are! The idea of these daubs, when you have done such marvelous things!"

Pale Youth (modestly)—"Well, it'd be kind of tough on these chaps if I spring them now. Let them have their day—I can afford to wait!"

Confiding Young Creature—"Arthur, you are the noblest man alive! You need some one to push you forward—you never do justice to yourself or to your art!"

It Was Plenty.

Woman with Cerise Hat—"There, I've made the rounds. My head aches, but I don't see why. Do you know, there are three pictures back there which I am sure hung upside down?"

Woman with Bright Violet Hat—"I don't care if they are—my shoe hurts awfully. I don't mind saying that I think the pictures are crazy, and we are all geese for wasting time looking at 'em!"

Woman with Cerise Hat—"And you the president of our culture club! My dear! I think it's just your shoe."

Woman with Bright Velvet Hat—"Well, it's something—and whatever it is, it's plenty!"

Visitor—I understand that you had an amateur dramatic performance in the town hall last night?

Native—Yes; the Sock and Buskin Club played "Little Mae, or the Mountain Mystery."

"Ah! And what was the mystery?"

"As near as I could make out, the mystery was how the audience stood it till the last act was over."

BEAUTY SECRETS OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Little Viola Dana, "The Poor Little Rich Girl," Talks to Girls in Their 'Teens

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

IF you were only fifteen and had already begun climbing the high ladder that leads to success, would you be simple and natural and truly sweet? Little Viola Dana has not come to the lofty estate of "Sweet Sixteen" yet, but she has already worked her way from music hall dancing and "movies" and vaudeville skits to the enviable position of "A regular Broadway star." And the earnest little girl means to climb higher and higher, and be right at the top of her chosen profession some day if hard work can win her way to the top.

In her dainty pink dressing room at the Hudson Theater in New York the 15-year-old star of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" looks like a real little rosebud of a girl—just as real a little girl as the Gwendolyn whose life she has stepped out of after living it for three hours.

She was pulling black silk stockings over little bare feet and ankles as I came in, and with the sweetest, unself-consciousness she shook back her soft brown curls and rose to greet me with a mixture of childish enthusiasm and womanly grace.

"Did Gwenny make you cry?" she asked.

"YOU did," I answered, deliberately.

"Oh, that was Gwenny," said little Miss Dana. "It isn't Viola Dana out there in the play—she just gets to be Gwendolyn."

Not Self-Conscious.

"Then, of course, you aren't self-conscious if you are living your part?" I questioned with assurance.

"Oh, no. Children on the stage have to be so careful about that," said this naive child. "Some of them do well, and they are told so, and think about it all the time, and get to be such stilted little things. They just MINCE through their parts and act affected everywhere you meet them. That isn't a bit attractive—do you think so?"

"What do you think of simplicity and sweetness and naturalness as prime necessities for attractiveness? That takes in your 'unself-consciousness,' I said.

Miss Viola gave the matter her earnest consideration. She is to all intents and purposes a dear child—but ten years of stage experience—ten years of work with growing ideals and ambitions have given her a serious quality bespeaking delightfully the woman she will be in a few years.

"I think they are all very important, and if you keep busy and live sensibly and think nice thoughts perhaps you can get to be simple and sweet—for, of course, no girl who is unnatural is a bit attractive."

"Then you believe in simple clothes for young girls?"

"Yes, indeed—but I do like pretty clothes—clothes that suit you. Are mine simple enough, do you think?" pointing to a dainty little green frock and a soft greatcoat of brown that just matched her own chestnut curls. A very girly leghorn hat went with it—and I could fancy Miss Viola looking like the dear little girl she is. Instead of the silly, near-young-lady that some girls fancy they can ape more successfully than they can realize the flowerlike sweetness of their own precious never-to-come-again-youth.

"Girls have to be serious about the qualities they want to cultivate," I said, after I had paid due tribute to the embryo woman wanting sartorial praise. "Does keeping well and strong require constant attention and sacrifice?"

"Well, I think you can't have everything. You can't have all the fun you want and do well the thing you want to do, too. Now, I have to have lots of sleep, and if I go along to a party after the theater my voice Voices need such a lot of care to keep them in good condition. I take a sounds strained and horrid next day. glass of malted milk before the theater and another afterward and give up the things I like—chocolate frappes, and foolish combinations, like lobster salad and lemonade, won't do for the girl who wants to accomplish things."

"Do you call late suppers and chocolate frappes a great sacrifice?" I inquired.

"Well, I like things that aren't good for me," was the frank answer; "but I think it's worth while giving up all the little separate pleasures that only stay a minute in order to have a clear complexion, and a clear voice and a well body.

"You see, I truly want to be great some day; I want to go on and on and be some one who counts. And I'm dreaming of that sometimes even when I'm with my books or playing my violin.

"I know that if I truly want to get on I shall have to DO it. Just wishing about it won't work."

Deep Philosophy.

Deep philosophy for fifteen; and yet the girls who are soon to be women must all choose whether they will live for the joy of a fleeting second or for the "durable satisfactions" that make life worth while.

"Have you set some one as your model?" I asked. "Are you working toward a goal, or have you a live ideal whose success you want to equal?"

"Not a bit of it," said Viola Dana. "I've got to be myself, anyway—and I'd lots rather be truly myself, I don't want to imitate. I just want to make my own self do bigger and bigger things all the time.

"People ought to express themselves all the time, I think, instead of imitating some one else—in clothes and voices and thoughts. Thoughts are so wonderful, I think—nice ones give such a sweet expression to the eyes—they just shine through them. I love strong, interesting faces—the kind that belong to people who do things. Girls who are willing to just stand still aren't ever truly pretty, are they?"

The little star's eyes glowed with earnestness.

Yes, those wonderful, deep eyes are green, and she frankly confesses it.

"Maybe that's jealousy," she laughed. "I am jealous if the people I love don't love me enough and show it. You have to be worthy of it, or you don't get it. And some day every girl wants to be found worthy of the biggest love. She wants to marry. I do!"

"You are planning an even fuller and fuller life, aren't you? Work—great success—and marriage?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," said this rich little wise girl. "I want to keep my body well and strong, and to train my mind to get a great deal out of life—and to put something into it, too."

The Tyranny of Criticism

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE Kingdom of Childhood is peopled with wicked elves, ghosts, ogres and hobgoblins, and we hide our heads under the bed covers and long to be grown up that we may vanquish them, little knowing that the Land of Grown-Ups has a greater terror.

It is the tyranny of criticism, and its name is "What Will Folks Say?"

"No," a girl says, "I am not going to the party. I want to go, but I would have to wear my last season's party dress, and what would folks say?"

"We can not afford to give that dinner," a woman will frankly confess, "but if I don't pay my social obligations what will folks say?"

The sickness had been long, painful and costly, and when at last the sufferer was mercifully released the family realized that the long siege had materially diminished the bank account. There were doctors', druggists', undertaker's and nurses' bills to pay, leaving scant protection against want. "But we must buy mourning," the family declares, "for if we don't, what will folks say?"

Once Again.

A girl realizes that her lover has grown cold. Perhaps, down in her heart, she also realizes that she is not so fond of him, but she refuses to give him up as long as cajolery and tears will hold him. "I don't want any one to think I have been jilted," she says, "and if he stops coming here what will folks say?"

It is this tyranny of criticism that is the hobgoblin of the grown-ups, as fearful and real as the ghosts that clanked their chains about our beds in childhood. We hide our trembling heads under the covers, just as we did then, and lose all sense of reason because of the great ogre we have foolishly conjured to torment us.

We are not honest, we are not natural, we are distressingly self-conscious, we are not kind, we are cowardly hypocrites in the presence of a hobgoblin that has no real existence. "What will folks say?" you plead in defense of foolishness. Did you ever realize that you are of the "folks" to whom you credit such powers of condemnation? And do you, as one of the "folks," despise and condemn the woman who wears an old garment because she can not afford a new? Do you look with an air of superiority at any honesty that dares to be honest? Don't you really envy the spirit of the woman who can rise above all consciousness of clothes?

Your Reply.

You will reply that you don't condemn such a person, but that others do. And in saying this, you declare you are better than others. My dear, you are not. We are all very much alike. No one who is worth knowing puts the outward show above the inward worth. If your friends are more friendly when you are a coward, a hypocrite, and extravagant, then they are not the kind of friends worth having, and it is cheapening a very precious word to call them so.

If you meet a woman you like, and whom you would enjoy knowing better, and hesitate to invite that woman to your house because hers is finer, then you do not give her credit for being broad-minded, and are narrow-gauged yourself. It is the personality that counts; not its background or adornment.

And unless you can show yourself so strong, so broad, so big, that your test question is "Is it right?" and not "What will folks say?" you are no further advanced mentally than the child that hides its head under the covers at every unusual sound.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intringe and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, becoming an orphan, is thrown on her own resources. She finds work at the Emporium, a department store owned by Edward Gilder; is accused of the theft of silks, and sent to prison, though innocent. She tells George Demarest, Gilder's head lawyer, that the way to stop thievery is to pay a living wage. In prison she learned from fellow convicts why girls go wrong. She understands their point of view and sympathizes with them. Aggie Lynch, a convict friend of Mary's at Burnsing, sees good "possibilities" for her in the world of crime. Upon Mary's release the slogan "once a criminal always one," prevents her from securing work. She is continually hounded and in desperation throws herself into the North River. Joe Garson, a forger, rescues her and keeps her and Aggie in luxury, though living chaste lives. Mary reads that a famous financier escapes prison through keeping within the letter of the law. She follows his example and becomes the leader of a band of swindlers, robbing only the unscrupulous. Gilder's son Dick meets and loves Mary, who seeks to wreak vengeance on the father through the son. Aggie poses as her cousin, and they pretend to be respectable. They are visited by Detective Cassidy, who tries to scare Mary into leaving town through threats. He is laughed at for his pains, because she was "within the law." The detective, before leaving again, tells Aggie and Joe Garson that "there'll be trouble" for them unless they get out of town.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

There was not the change of a feature in the face of the woman who listened to the accusation. Her eyes steadfastly retained their clear gaze into his; her voice was still coldly formal, as before.

"If it's blackmail, Mr. Irwin, why don't you consult the police?" she inquired, with manifest disdain. Mary turned to the maid, who now entered in response to the bell she had sounded a minute before. "Fanny, will you ask Miss Lynch to come in, please?" Then she faced the lawyer again, with an aloofness of manner that was contemptuous. "Really, Mr. Irwin," she drawled, "why don't you take this matter to the police?"

The reply was uttered with conspicuous exasperation.

Police Wouldn't Keep It Secret.

"You know perfectly well," the lawyer said bitterly, "that General Hastings can not afford such publicity. His position would be jeopardized."

"Oh, as for that," Mary suggested evenly, and now there was a trace of dippancy in her fashion of speaking, "I am sure the police would keep your complaint a secret. Really, you know, Mr. Irwin, I think you had better take your trouble to the police, rather than to me. You will get much more sympathy from them."

"Very well, I will then," he declared, sternly. "I will."

Mary, from her vantage point at the desk across from him, smiled a smile that would have been very engaging to any man under more favorable circumstances, and she pushed in his direction the telephone that stood there.

"3100 Spring," she remarked encouragingly, "will bring an officer almost immediately." She leaned back in her chair and surveyed the baffled man amusedly.

The lawyer was furious over the failure of his effort to intimidate this extraordinarily self-possessed young woman, who made a mock of his every thrust. But he was by no means at the end of his resources.

"Nevertheless," he rejoined, "you know perfectly well that General Hastings never promised to marry this girl. You know——" He broke off as Aggie entered the drawing room.

Now, the girl was demure in seeming almost beyond belief, a childish creature, very fair and dainty, guileless surely, with those untroubled eyes of blue, those softly curving lips of warmest red and the more delicate bloom in the rounded cheeks. There were the charms of innocence and simplicity in the manner of her as she stopped just within the doorway, whence she regarded Mary with a timid, pleading gaze, her slender little form poised lightly as if for flight.

"Did you want me, dear?" she asked. There was something half-plaintive in the modulated cadences of the query.

"Agnes," Mary answered affectionately, "this is Mr. Irwin, who has come to see you in behalf of General Hastings."

"Oh!" the girl murmured, her voice quivering a little, as the lawyer, after a short nod, dropped again into his seat; "oh, I'm so frightened!" She hurried, fluttering, to a low stool behind the desk, beside Mary's chair, and there she sank down, drooping slightly, and catching hold of one of Mary's hands as if in mute pleading for protection against the fear that beset her chaste soul.

"Nonsense!" Mary exclaimed soothingly. "There's really nothing at all to be frightened about, my dear child." Her voice was that with which one seeks to cajole a terrified infant. "You mustn't be afraid, Agnes. Mr. Irwin says that General Hastings did not promise to marry you. Of course, you understand, my dear, that under no circumstances must you say anything that isn't strictly true and that, if he did not promise to marry you, you have no case—none at all. Now, Agnes, tell me; did General Hastings promise to marry you?"

"Oh, yes—oh, yes, indeed!" Aggie cried, falteringly. "And I wish he would. He's such a delightful old gentleman!" As she spoke, the girl let go Mary's hand and clasped her own together ecstatically.

He Scowled Disgustedly.

"Was that promise made in writing?"

"No," Aggie answered, gushingly. "But all his letters were in writing, you know. Such wonderful letters!" She raised her blue eysh toward the ceiling in a naive rapture. "So tender and so—er—interesting!" Somehow, the inflection on the last word did not altogether suggest the ingenuous.

"Yes, yes, I dare say," Irwin agreed, hastily, with some evidences of chagrin. He had no intention of dwelling on that feature of the letters, concerning which he had no doubt whatsoever, since he knew the amorous general very well, indeed. They would be interesting, beyond shadow of questioning, horridly interesting. Such was the confessed opinion of the swain himself who had written them in his folly—horribly interesting to all the reading public of the country, since the general was a conspicuous figure.

"But you're quite sure, Agnes," she questioned gently, "that General Hastings did promise to marry you?" The candor of her manner was perfect.

And the answer of Aggie was given with a like convincing emphasis.

"Oh, yes!" she declared, tensely. "Why, I would swear to it." The limpid eyes, so appealing in their soft lusters, went first to Mary, then gazed trustingly into those of the routed attorney.

"You see, Mr. Irwin, she would swear to that," emphasized Mary.

"We're beaten," he confessed, dejectedly, turning his glance toward Mary, whom, plainly, he regarded as his real adversary in the combat on his client's behalf. "I'm going to be quite frank with you, Miss Turner, quite frank," he stated with more geniality, though with a very crestfallen air. Somehow, indeed, there was just a shade too much of the crestfallen in the fashion of his utterance, and the woman whom he addressed watched warily as he continued. "We can't afford any scandal, so we're going to settle at your own terms." He paused expectantly, but Mary offered no comment; only maintained her alert scrutiny of the man. The lawyer, therefore, leaned forward with a semblance of frank eagerness. Instantly, Aggie had become agog with greedily blissful anticipations, and she uttered a slight ejaculation of joy; but Irwin paid no heed to her. He was occupied in taking from his pocket a thick bill case, and from this presently a sheaf of banknotes, which he laid on the desk before Mary, with a little laugh of discomfiture over having been beaten in the contest.

As he did so, Aggie thrust forth an avaricious hand, but it was caught and held by Mary before it reached above the top of the desk, and the avaricious gesture passed unobserved by the attorney.

"We can't fight where ladies are concerned," he went on, assuming, as best he might contrive, a chivalrous tone. "So, if you will just hand over General Hastings' letters, why, here's your money."

Much to the speaker's surprise, there followed an interval of silence, and his puzzlement showed in the knitting of his brows. "You have the letters, haven't you?" he demanded, abruptly.

Aggie coyly took a thick bundle from its resting place on her rounded bosom.

"They never leave me," she murmured, with dulcet passion. There was in her voice a suggestion of desolation—a desolation that was the blighting effect of letting the cherished missives go from her.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

WOMAN'S DANGER PERIOD

is said to be from 45 to 50. What should be a most natural change in a woman's life, is, on account of modern methods of living, fraught with most annoying and painful symptoms. Women when passing through this critical period should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it has proved wonderfully successful in carrying women safely through the change of life.

The Vicious Little Moon

To-day's Complete Short Story

THEY emerged from the ground, one, two, three, six, under the deluge of rain in darkness.

One might have believed that they came out of the water, for the torrents of rain, which had been falling incessantly for more than a month, had made the plain around Adrianople and Devanjaros look like a sea.

In the uncertain twilight each of them looked like an immense bundle of sheepskin, out of which emerged the barrel of a rifle. All six wore caps of green velvet bordered with astrakhan.

It was a patrol of Macedonians enrolled in the Bulgarian army passing through the line of outposts. Hesitating and uncertain, they moved their long arms like windmills, made the sign of the cross, pointed right and left and peered about cautiously.

A Branch for a Signal.

Fifty paces away a branch stuck into into the ground and reflected in a pool of water began to move back and forth. The Macedonians started toward the hole from which this signal was given. It was the abandoned trench. Sergeant Naritch and his five Bulgarian soldiers were down there and had given them the signal.

The six Bulgarians loved the six Macedonians.

Since the beginning of the investment these twelve men were in the habit of meeting in the hour of twilight when the guns became blind.

They met in the abandoned trench which was no longer used. There they sat down close together in the deep mud. They exchanged only few words: "The war is going to last a long time!" or "May the Lord give the Turks into our hands," was the burden of their remarks.

Then they sat silent and pondered until it was time to separate and each party went back to its camp.

Depressed and Melancholy.

On this night they felt unusually depressed and melancholy. The incessant rain, the everlasting cold and the enforced idleness and hopelessness overwhelmed them.

"The war will never end," said Kaloub, making a wry face.

"Never," said Naziff, and yawned like a hungry wolf.

They all bowed their heads and spat into the mud, then, as always happens when men are downhearted and depressed, they began to talk about mysterious things.

"The moon looks like a crescent tonight," said Kaloub.

"A bad sign," said Alexis, the venerable brigand, who knew everything between life and death. "It is a vicious little moon."

And he told the legend of the vicious little moon which kills all those upon whom it looks.

They raised their heads and gazed furtively toward the sky.

"One must not tempt the moon," said Petrof, who was newly married, although his hair was gray. "Woe unto us all."

"I am sleepy," said Reff plaintively, like a child.

Let Us Go Back.

The Macedonians left one at a time. The Bulgarians looked after them and regretted they had let them go. They remaned in the abandoned trench, oppressed by a vague sense of danger, afraid of the moon that was looking down upon them, half senseless with fatigue and superstition.

Each was dreaming his own dreams.

Sergeant Naritch saw his litle house and his wife in her gayly colored dress. He saw her looking at a golden-haired girl. He felt the fragrance of the flowering hedges and saw the long rows of willow trees standing like sentries along the bank of the brook.

Suddenly he raised his head with a jerk and rubbed his eyes. He could see nothing now but the darkness and the slender crescent of the moon.

He shook himself. What were they thinking of? It was late. Little Father Colonel would surely hear them coming back.

"Come along, boys; we must get back to camp," he said.

Crawled From the Trench.

They marched through the muddy pools with the rain beating into their faces and soaking the fur of their heavy sheepskin coats. From time to time they glanced at the moon.

They stopped. They had lost their way. It was the moon, the vicious little moon, which had led them astray with its treacherous light.

They shuddered and started again, tramping through the mud. Time and again they nearly fell into the deep mudholes made by the bursting shells. Half an hour passed and still no sign of lights or campfires.

Suddenly a shot rang out.

The sergeant raised his head, looked about and listened.

"We are inside the Turkish lines," he said.

"We ought to have set out when the Macedonians left," growled Kaloub; "they know their way here and would not have wandered astray."

"Look," said Diplovitch, "there are some soldiers over there watching us."

Felt Like Howling.

And at the faint light of the moon they dimly made out some figures a short distance away. The Bulgarians, now quite convinced that the vicious little moon had led them into an ambush, felt like howling with superstitious fear.

In a low voice Naritch commanded: "Fire!"

The enemy was quicker and fired first.

With a groan, Petrof, the newly married, fell to the ground like a log.

The firing was kept up by both sides, and men dropped where they stood.

The last man to remain standing finally sank to the ground. He thought he heard somebody whisper his name from among those he had shot down. Then everything was silent.

Toward morning a passing patrol found the dead bodies of six Macedonians and six Bulgarians, who had been led astray by the vicious little moon, that kills those upon whom it looks.

SHORTS STRUGGLE FOR JULY OPTION

Fear of "Squeeze" and of Bullish Weather Report Cause of Lively Demand.

NEW YORK, May 12.—As the result of bullish weather reports the cotton market opened firm to-day, first prices ranging from unchanged to 7 points higher. Brown and Hayne, the big traders of New York and New Orleans, were on the floor of the exchange, but traders did not attribute the ruling strength in certain months to their presence.

There was no market in Liverpool, this being a holiday there.

Trading was light on and after the call. The principal feature was the strength of July. There was suspicion of bull operations against the short interest and a bullish weekly report on the weather, especially on the Eastern belt, where rains are badly needed, was expected.

The market during the forenoon trading was steady with July 10 points higher; May and other positions 4 to 5 points higher than the initial level.

Offerings were light and scattered, said to be profit-taking.

July continued under persistent demand by the same brokers who have been absorbing July contracts daily, believed to be for McFadden and other large spot interests. Shorts were nervous and the impending "squeeze" in that option is becoming more obvious day after day. The local stock is being depleted daily.

Some scattered rains fell over the eastern belt last night, but not so much as first predicted. Indications point to more showers.

Owing to the holiday in Liverpool, business was extremely light. The buying was aggressive, while the selling was light and scattered. During the afternoon session the market maintained the advancing tendency and each option increased its gain over the previous close. May was 8, July 9, October 12, December 11 and January 9 points higher than Saturday's final.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 4 to 5 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, May 12.—General showers fell over Arkansas during the past forty-eight hours and scattered showers occurred in the Atlantics. Indications are for continued showery weather in the eastern States. Dry, warm weather continued in the western half of the belt. Temperatures were right in the eastern half of the belt also, except in Northeast Tennessee and North Carolina, which had a cold spell, but the warmer weather will become weather there soon. Showers have been general in the dry eastern belt since the date of Habersham King's circular.

New York dry goods reports are better, a broader demand and steadier prices being reported.

Our market opened slightly lower, but showed no selling pressure and ruled very steady. it is thought that to-morrow's weekly weather report might be bullish in the eastern States, owing to the dry weather, and apprehension exists of bullish operations directed against the technical condition of the market, prevailing opinion being that the short interest is large.

Logan & Bryan: Weather will be the dominating influence.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Sentiment is too bearish.

Miller & Co.: We believe it will require decidedly bad crop news to sustain any advance.

STOCKS ARE DULL THROUGHOUT DAY

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Sentiment was mixed at the opening of stock market to-day and the list had an irregular appearance. Union Pacific was one of the firmest issues on the list, advancing ½ to 149. American Can preferred was about the weakest, declining a point to 92⅜.

The market was without outside influences, the Stock Exchange in London and the Bourses in Berlin and Paris being closed.

Amalgamated Copper began ¼ lower, but recovered its loss and gained fractionally. Reading also began lower, but made up its loss of ⅜ and within half an hour ruled fractionally above Saturday's final.

United States Steel common was ¼ lower on first sales, but subsequently recovered. Southern Pacific, Erie, Lehigh Valley and American Can common were fractionally lower. Canadian Pacific advanced ¼, but soon lost its gain.

The curb was dull, but steady.

The market was irregular during the forenoon, with many of the leading issues on a downward movement. New Haven advanced ½ to 104. Lehigh Valley, Southern Pacific and Pennsylvania were off ¼. Copper and Steel were off ⅛. Union Pacific was up ½. Reading was unchanged.

Call money loaning at 2¾.

Stocks receded fractionally in the last hour. Amalgamated Copper ruled around 74⅜c for the loss of ½ from the midday level. Union Pacific was sold in considerable quantity, losing a point. United States Steel sold under 59 but later rallied. Reading was 1¼c under its midday price. Fractional declines were also scored by Lehigh Valley and St. Paul.

The market closed dull. Governments unchanged. Other bonds dull.

Condition of Oats Bad; Season Late

CHICAGO, May 12.—B. W. Snow says:

"During the past week I covered the principal oats district in Central and Eastern Illinois and West Central Indiana. These sections include the important territory in both States. Practically all of the crop was seeded late, went into ground that was wet and as a result the plant is very small and condition bad. The surface of the ground is rough and cloddy, leaving it full of cracks through which the air and drying winds draw moisture from around the roots of the plant.

"There has been no drouth and there is plenty of subsoil moisture, but the rough top is drying badly and roots of the plant not developed enough to reach the moisture, and as a result the plant is standing still in growth, losing color and getting an unthrifty start.

"Unless there is good rainfall very soon, the situation will quickly become serious."

DRY GOODS TRADE REVIEW.

Sales and shipments for this month up to date indicate conditions better than normal in the dry goods trade. Future business continues to show an increase over that of a year ago. Seeding conditions have been excellent in practically all sections of the country and there are very few spots from which any but the best reports have been heard. The status of growing crops is such as to inspire confidence in trade. Merchants' stocks are turning satisfactorily and reorders on most lines promise to leave wholesale stocks in good condition for the turn of the year.

Salesmen are finding buyers responsive to the offerings in wool dress goods for Fall and sales are well ahead of the corresponding period in 1912. On the most desirable worsteds, mills have sold their output and in many cases are oversold and have been obliged to cut down original orders and reorders can not be placed except for October and November deliveries.

Merchants are buying worsted yarns for home knitting purposes freely. Proposed changes in the tariff schedule have already been anticipated in the wool market. Wools in this country of medium and fine grades are on practically a London basis and a tariff change will simply transfer this staple from a cost to a world market.

ATLANTA LIVE STOCK MARKET.

(By W. H. White, Jr., of the White Provision Company.)

Cattle receipts are heavier than usual. The market is 25 to 50 cents lower on the middle grades, with a heavy supply. Tops and choice in good demand and market steady.

One load of the E. T. Comer cattle were on the market this week and brought $7.37½ per cwt., this being the top price for the week. These were mixed highbred Short Horn and Hereford young steers, fat and prime, bred and raised on the Comer farm at Millhaven, Ga., and reflect much credit to any beef producing section.

With the exception of this load and two loads of Short Horn steers from A. N. Brown at McDonough, all of which were sold to the Atlanta packer, the run was badly mixed, consisting principally of country pick up bunches of all sizes and kinds, which sold at prices fully as irregular as were the cattle.

Hogs continue to come freely. Market has ranged lower in symphty with the Western markets.

Choice to good steers, 1,000 to 1,200, 5.75@6.50; good steers, 800 to 1,000, 5.50@6.00; medium to good steers, 700 to 850, 5.00@5.75; medium to good cows, 700 to 800, 4.50@5.00; good to choice beef cows, 800 to 900, 4.75@5.75; medium to good heifers, 650 to 750, 4.25@4.75; good to choice heifers, 750 to 850, 4.75@5.75.

Medium to common steers, if fat, 800 to 900, 4.50@5.50; medium to common cows, if fat, 700 to 800, 4.25@5.25; mixed common, 600 to 800, 3.25@4.00; good butcher bulls, 3.50@4.00.

Prime hogs, 160 to 200 average, 8.30@8.50; good butcher hogs, 140 to 160, 8.10@8.30; good butcher pigs, 100 to 140, 7.75@8.00; light pigs, 80 to 100, 7.00@7.50; heavy rough hogs, 200 to 250, 7.50@8.25.

Above quotations apply to corn-fed hogs, mash and peanut-fattened hogs, 1 to 1½c under.

METAL MARKET.

NEW YORK, May 12.—The metal market was firm to-day. Copper, spot and May, 15¾; June-July, 15.40@15.75; lead, 4.30 bid; spelter and zinc, 5.45@5.55; tin, 43.95@50.25.

Liverpool closed.

* * *

* * *

It is said the strength in July option is due to the reduction of the local stock and fear of a "squeeze" in that option. Shorts are not inclined to be caught with many large lines and they have been covering heavily during the past week or two.

* * *

Sentiment is equally divided at the moment and the majority of traders forecast an explosion of fireworks in July and fear that the new crop is suffering considerably from the lack of moisture.

* * *

It is believed the English operators will be strong for a bull card. It is a known fact that Liverpool has tried over and over to bull the market. From the New York stock, 12,000 bales were shipped out Thursday and 6,000 bales were exported Friday. This made the short end holders believe that there was danger and they covered.

* * *

The Fall River Iron Works Mills will close for an indefinite period, beginning to-day. This will reduce stocks about 70,000 pieces weekly. Other curtailment is under consideration.

* * *

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, May 12.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows cloudy in the eastern half of the belt, generally fair in the western half, rather general light showers in the southwestern quarter. There was a good rain in the Montgomery, Ala., section and it still is raining there. There were no rains in the west. It is warm everywhere except in North Carolina, where it is unseasonably cool. Indications are for continued unsettled and showery weather in Alabama and the South Atlantics; generally fair elsewhere.

* * *

Washington forecast for week: "West of the Mississippi River generally fair weather; east of the river local thundershowers the first half of the week, generally fair the second half. Normal temperatures."

* * *

Selma, Ala., says light but general rains fell throughout Central Alabama and have proven of great benefit to the cotton and corn crops.

* * *

Habersham King's latest circular: "Facts show that temperatures have been favorable to the entire belt, while rains were in excess of needs in Western States and practically absent in Eastern belt, they were just about right in the Middle States, and the week's developments have been favorable over the entire belt. Showers have been general in the dry Eastern belt, since the date reached by this circular."

Cotton Stands Poor; Expect Short Yield

Reports From Georgia to Agricultural Department Indicate Total Crop Will Show Decrease.

Reports from all over Georgia to the State Department of Agriculture show that the stands of cotton are unusually poor this year. This condition indicates that the first estimates of the cotton crop in Georgia for 1913 did not allow for a sufficient decrease.

J. J. Connor, head of the department, thinks the decrease in acreage this year would amount to more than the 3 per cent estimated by agricultural journals. This fact, taken in connection with the prospects for a yield per acre below the average, corroborates the opinions of experts that the total yield will show a marked decrease.

The officials of the Agricultural Department Monday attributed the poor stands to the long period of dry weather which has followed the earlier torrential rains.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Serious Mistakes Of the Beginner in Poultry Business

Safe Road as Well as the One To Be Avoided—Pure Stock Necessary.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

A great many serious mistakes are being made by beginners in the poultry business from ignorance. The experience is a very good and safe teacher, but often very expensive in both time and money.

It is for this reason we desire to point out the safe road as well as the one to be avoided.

An idea prevalent with beginners in starting with thoroughbred stock is that all that is necessary is that stock be pure, so-called. In other words they purchase stock of a neighbor who says his stock is pure, but when the expert breeder or judge looks at the stock he finds that it is anything but what high-class standard bred stock should be.

But you ask, if it is pure what can be the matter with it? A great many things can be the matter with it. The most common source of breeding disaster carelessness. Failure is in letting all classes of the breed run in the breeding pen.

For example, take the Barred Rock, which is quite familiar, in a certain way, to almost everyone. Upon the premises of this careless breeder we find hens of forty different shades and shades of color, from light to almost solid black. These are running promiscuously with a half dozen others, all different in color and style of make-up. If you stop to think for a moment, can't you imagine what such a combination would produce? As the Dutchman said, "what would not produce?" We can not look for anything in the shape of uniformity of the young stock we raise from all sizes, shapes and colors we followed to run together and form the breeding stock.

Culls Bound to Come.

That the best and selected stock will breed some culls no experienced breeder of any breed will deny. They are bound to come. That tendency is downward instead of upward, if no culling is done, will also be readily admitted by the experienced. Consequently, if we expect to improve or even maintain a high standard of excellence, we must breed from only the choicest specimens, putting those of uniform color and breeding types into the same pens. This plan, and this alone, will prove satisfactory.

Eggs at $2 and $3 seem unreasonable and too high to the average farmer or villager who has made no study of the conditions, and the temptation to buy the cheapest eggs he can get is generally more than he can stand. If he be at all progressive in his make-up, and has any idea of eventually getting the best, the change will come sooner or later when this cheap stock will be disposed of and a fresh start made. But this is expensive in both time and money wasted. True, a man might take quite a low-grade of stock and with years of patient culling and breeding get to where it would make a pretty good showing. But my, what a long and tedious road to travel!

Now, friends, you who are starting or getting ready to invest in pure bred stock and have an eye to the beautiful and the best, take my advice and open your purse wide enough to get something good. If you do not get just what you thought you would, try it again and keep on until you succeed.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Highland Avenue Sales Net $20,200

Three Brick Stores Change Hands. Workmen Demolish 301 Peachtree for Improvements.

The Realty Mortgage Company sold to a client of the Charles P. Glover real estate agency to-day the southwest corner of Highland and Greenwood Avenues, three brick stores, for $15,000, and two 20x90-foot lots adjoining the stores on Highland Avenue for $2,000, and two 80x102-foot lots adjoining the stores on Greenwood Avenue for $3,200, making a total in the three parcels of $20,200.

Peachtree Home Demolished.

Workmen began to-day tearing down 301 Peachtree Street to make way for business improvements. This property has had an interesting history in the real estate market. Luther Z. Rosser bought it several years ago for $20,000 and the Forrest & George Adair agency sold it for Mr. Rosser in the middle of March to J. S. Floyd for $100,500, or at the rate of $1,605 a front foot.

The frontage is 62 feet on Peachtree and 74 feet on Ivy Street, and the depth is 260.5 feet. The Peachtree dwelling is two stories and has been used as a boarding house. The property is on the east side of the street, half a block north of Baker Street.

The People Must Now Depend

It is upon the Senate that the people must depend for genuine reciprocity provisions in the tariff bill.

The Senate will not be driven into line by a caucus whip. It will have a chance to treat a serious matter with the deliberation it deserves.

There are good reasons for believing that the Senate has ceased to be what it once was—the stronghold of party regularity and of those special interests that have for so long practiced the arts of party regimentation and applied the strangulation of the party gag. There are good reasons for believing that the Senate will respond to the well-nigh unanimous popular demand for real and efficient reciprocity.

The tariff bill was sent to the Senate tagged with the empty NAME of reciprocity, but with no SUBSTANCE of reciprocity in it. It would give away—ABSOLUTELY AND WITHOUT CONDITION—to Canada and other nations trade privileges and immunities that ought to be reserved and kept for the present in our own hands AS A BASIS FOR TARIFF BARGAINING. It would fling a long "free list" at the feet of our trade rivals—WITHOUT ASKING ANY FREEDOM FOR OUR OWN COMMERCE IN RETURN.

Thus the tariff as it stands is not merely wrong in a hundred details. It is wrong in principle. It flouts the very principle that it so loudly proclaims. It makes a mockery of reciprocity.

The fact that the tariff bill in its present shape is not only unreasonable, but in many namable respects CONSCIOUSLY and RECKLESSLY unreasonable, may be illustrated by the particular status of the schedule that has to do with the various grain staples—wheat, oats, rye, buckwheat—and their manufactured products.

When the bill first went to caucus a tax of 10 per cent or so was placed on all these staples, while in every case the foodstuffs made from them by various manufacturing processes WERE ALL PUT UPON THE FREE LIST.

The obvious effect of such an arrangement would be TO DRIVE MOST OF OUR FOOD MANUFACTURING BUSINESS INTO CANADA—with very damaging consequences not only to our manufacturers, but also to our farmers.

Now note the reckless and irresponsible character of the House's tariff tinkering, as shown in this grain schedule. It turns out that the House has been driven by pressure from certain quarters to put natural rye and buckwheat, as well as their manufactured products, on the free list. BUT IT HAS ALLOWED THE 10 PER CENT TAX TO STAND AGAINST NATURAL UNMANUFACTURED WHEAT AND OATS.

There is no earthly reason why this discrimination should have been made—at least no reason fit to print.

The whole grain schedule in its original form was topsy-turvy and preposterous—damaging to every legitimate American interest. As it now stands it outrages every principle of reciprocity and has, besides, lost the consistency and logicality of its original foolishness.

IS THERE ANY MEMBER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES WHO WILL DARE STAND UP AND JUSTIFY THE GRAIN SCHEDULE ON GROUNDS OF RECIPROCITY—OR OF RATIONALITY?

Some More Law on Canal Tolls

In a leading editorial expression in the current Bench and Bar the editors declare, as legal experts, that the provision of the Panama Canal bill to exempt from tolls American coastwise shipping does not seem to contravene any article of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. They say:

"We confess to having been much impressed by Senator O'Gorman's address before the Senate, in which the position was taken that the provision of the canal bill to exempt from tolls American coastwise shipping is not in contravention of Article III of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

"That is to say, as there is nothing to prevent the other nations, including Great Britain, from remitting or reimbursing by subsidy or otherwise all tolls paid by their citizens or subjects for vessels making use of the canal, it is unreasonable to suppose that the United States, by whose money and genius the canal was made possible, may not do likewise with reference to its own citizens.

"In other words, we can see no great difference, in principle, between the right of the United States to reimburse and its right to remit or exempt, and to hold that this country might not exempt its own shipping from tolls would, it seems to us, be to deprive it of a power which clearly resides in every other nation which may make use of the canal."

.:. Sending Messages and Carrying Them .:.

By ELBERT HUBBARD.

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

IT is, of course, very necessary that when you are intrusted with a message you shall deliver it to the right party in the least possible space of time.

The man, however, who intrusts another with a message has a duty to perform quite as much as the man who is given one.

There are men who can never get messages carried, and other men there be who inspire messengers with loyalty, fidelity and courage.

It is a somewhat curious thing that the most able men are never good teachers. "The great teacher," says Emerson, "is not the man who supplies the most facts, but the one in whose presence we become different people."

Too much individuality repels, overawes, subdues. An overpowering personality is a willopus-wallopus—in other words, a steam-roller that flattens anything and everybody in the vicinity.

Making Merchants.

In the United States there are a few merchants who are discoverers of genius, but most are served by the mediocre, not to mention the time-server, the flunkey, the hypocrite and the lickspittle.

One great merchant in the United States lives in history, not only because he was a great merchant, but because he discovered to the world fully a half-dozen other great merchants. That is, he took young men, gave them an opportunity, and under his beneficent guiding influence these country boys bloomed and blossomed.

When you expect a messenger to deliver a message it is well not to hamper him with too many instructions, nor scare him into innocuous desuetude by retailing the dangers that he will encounter, describing for him the punishment he will receive if he fails to deliver the message.

It is a great man who knows when to place reliance in another, to relegate and delegate and keep discipline out of sight. To let one line of figures at the bottom of the balance sheet tell the tale. This is genius.

Genius in Selection.

Of course, if you repose confidence in the wrong man you will rue it, but genius turns on selection. Big men, nowadays, are big because they get others to do their work.

Napoleon said: "I win my battles with my marshals!" And then when he was asked where he got his marshals, he said: "I make them out of mud!"

What he meant was that he took obscure men and lifted them into positions of prominence by throwing responsibility on them.

Note the loyalty and love of Bertrand, who followed his master to St. Helena, giving up home, religion, family and all of his own private interests that he might serve his master—even refusing to leave his master when he was dead, but remaining at St. Helena in order that his own dust might mingle in the grave with this man he loved.

Any one who can inspire another with such love cannot be obliterated by the scratch of the pen or the shrug of a shoulder.

Napoleon certainly had personality; at the same time he did not use it to destroy the personality of others.

Ben Lindsey's Boys.

Great is the man—supremely great—who does not bestride the narrow world like a colossus and cause other men to run and peep about under his huge legs to find themselves dishonorable graves.

The world is big enough for all of us, and a very good slogan is: "Make room! Make room!" And if you are bound to give an order, let it be this: "Open up that gangway!"

Ben Lindsey has entrusted a thousand boys, each with a message, and the message he gave them was their commitment papers.

These boys carried the message; and out of the thousand a scant half dozen proved derelict. And just remember that all of these boys belonged to the "criminal class!"

Let us here quote Napoleon again, who said: "The criminal class? Ah, yes, I fight my battles with the criminal class!"

To entrust a message to a messenger with the full confidence that he will do naught else but deliver it to the proper person, and this expeditiously, is a fine art that employers would do well to acquire.

A breath of suspicion will taint the whole fabric of trust. If Ben Lindsey doubted that his boys would go where they were sent, very few of them would ever reach the iron gates and hear their clanging welcome.

A Fine Idea.

The secret of Ben Lindsey's success is simple: he believes in his boys. And that is why the boys believe in him.

Ben Lindsey kissing the cheek of a bad boy and sending the lad away to prison alone, unattended, uncoerced, is a finer thing to me than Napoleon's habit of pulling down the head of one of his marshals and kissing the bearded cheek.

"Know thyself!" said Socrates.

"Trust thyself!" said Emerson.

"Trust others!" says Ben Lindsey.

When President McKinley gave that message to Rowan he trusted Rowan to carry it. There were no instructions, no threats, no implied doubts, no injunctions, Rowan asked no questions; neither did McKinley.

The big man is not the man who wants to live not only his own life but the life of others, but he is great who reposes faith in others, and thus brings out the best that is in them, that which was often before unguessed.

The Country as Seen by a City Man

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

FAR from the glad cries of the traffic policeman to the patient truck driver the pleasant perfume of the gas mains, and the joyous tumult of the shoppers' crush is a strange, weird region called The Country.

Keep away from it! For miles and miles you may wander its monotonous green wastes and never hear the reverberating music of a trolley car rounding a curve.

You will miss the kindly warning of the chauffeur as you crawl from beneath the wheels of his car; your heart will be heavy with homesickness for the freshly turned earth on the torn up streets, and the dainty plank walks around excavations for new buildings.

No Safes Going Up.

There are no flats in the country. There are no gala block-long displays of family washing swung between brick dwellings, like the fluttering pennants on a holiday-dressed man-of-war. No safes destined for the thirty-second story of a highly thatched skyscraper part their hawsers and come hurtling down to the pavement, to provide edification to all nearby populace save that portion that happens to be directly underneath. Never does a fire chief drive unconventionally down the sidewalk execrating the fleeing public as he sweeps by. Never does an ambulance on its splendid errand of mercy crash madly through a crowd, and make business for the other ambulances that follow in its wake.

Evil and savage beasts confront you at every turn. Horned monsters that cry "Moo" and leer at you with lambent fire in their fearsome brown eyes; reptiles that sit on logs chorusing "cheep, cheep," until you approach, and then plunge suspiciously into pools as if distrustful of your presence; long-eared, white-tailed creatures that flicker across your path like flashes of light or peer at you silent and sinister from behind stone walls; winged creatures with plumage copied from women's hats, that chatter in the boughs of trees at sunset, and are up at the first blush of dawn to break your rest with their shrill piping.

All Poets Are Mad!

From the earth and from the dark green woods come scents that startle and disquiet you—not the familiar smells of banana peels, and coal smoke and sewer manholes, but disturbing, unrecognized odors that proceed from tawdry, flimsy creations called flowers, that have their roots in the common dingy ground.

A mad poet—all poets are mad, but this one was madder than most of his fellows—once wrote:

"They come, the merry summer months, with beauty, song and flowers,
They come, the gladsome months that bring thick leafiness to bowers,
Up! Up! My soul, and walk abroad; fling cark and care aside;
Seek silent woods, or rest thyself where peaceful waters glide;
Or underneath the shadow vast of patriarchal tree
Scan through its leaves the boundless sky, in rapt tranquillity."

Pay no attention to this lunatic rhapsody. Keep away from The Country—especially in spring.

England's Insurance Against Attack

R R

No Nation Would Ever Attack This Country, He Says, if Our Navy Were Ample For Self-Defense—If It were Large Enough to Protect Both Our Atlantic and Pacific Coasts.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

DR. LYMAN ABBOTT is receiving the merited congratulations of his countrymen for the level-headed common sense of his position as an advocate of universal peace.

Dr. Abbott is constitutionally an advocate of peace. He is temperamentally a man of common sense.

And the peace societies which have sought to discipline him by dismissing him from their membership have emphasized in a very great degree the eminent soundness of Dr. Abbott's method of promoting universal peace.

The best way to promote peace is to be prepared for war.

There was never a sounder maxim in history or experience. England has been for four hundred years the prophet and exponent of that doctrine among nations. And England's evangel has gone far as the curse of war is found and has presented a great example as the vindication of a wise and far-seeing policy.

Immune From Attacks.

There can be no answer by the "peace-at-any-price" men to the fact that with the greatest navy in the world England has been absolutely immune from attacks by any foreign nation and absolutely exempt from any war which she did not choose to make.

No nation has attacked England within these four centuries. No nation would attack any other country that had as great a navy as England. No nation would ever attack this country if our navy were ample for self-defense—if it were large enough to protect both our Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

This fact is so true and so self-evident that it is worthy to be an axiom. It is so true and has been so conspicuously vindicated as true that it is simply wonderful that other nations, and particularly our own nation, has not had the common sense to follow it.

Our Own Navy.

The present size of our navy, inadequate as it is, will explain the fact that we have enjoyed a comparative exemption so long as we had no navy, and England one hundred years ago took advantage of our poverty in warships, sailed up our majestic Potomac and laid the capital of this Republic in ashes.

Germany, the most martial of European nations, realizes the common sense which Dr. Abbott has so placidly expressed, and is constantly building its navy to the standard of preserving peace.

Japan has expressed every progressive step in its modern development by the yearly reinforcement of its navy. The teachable genius of Japan is vigorously illustrated in the fact that its answer to the suggestions of the present controversy with the United States is to give an order for three great battleships at once.

For Universal Peace.

There are no sincerer advocates of universal peace than the Hearst newspapers. The editorial page of The New York American contained the article written three years ago on Christmas Day which revived the sentiment for universal peace throughout the world. Copies of that editorial were sent by distinguished hands to the rulers and chief authorities of every great kingdom in the world. It represented, I think, the spirit of the Hearst newspapers. And it was regarded and reproduced as one of the soundest and most effective arguments ever written for universal peace.

But the spirit of that utterance, like the spirit of Lyman Abbott, was the spirit of prudence and of common sense. It realized the fact that no nation can fold its hands and throw away its fighting power while other nations increase their fighting power. Dr. Abbott expressed it in an effective epigram:

An Alternative.

"There are two ways in which a nation can maintain peace. Either by being so weak that it can not fight, or by being so strong that nobody wants to fight it. Our nation should be so strong it will never have to fight."

By and by, when the great nations fully realize that each one is in the race of great navies to stay as long as the others stay, the universal common sense will bring about the universal agreement of nations to cease the building of navies and to submit all quarrels to just tribunals for decision.

But until that day there is no wise or patriotic thing to do but to keep the pace and keep up with the procession, and, as far as national resources will allow, to lead the procession as the United States can do.

The United States Congress will demonstrate the narrowness of its judgment, the weakness of its comprehension and the lack of patriotism in its ranks, if it fails to keep this country side by side with every other great country so long as great navies are the only peace-makers and the only insurance policies against the destruction of war.

We are able to pay $20,000,000 a year as an insurance against war. Let this Congress take out the policy.

The Story of the Loyalists

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE hundred and thirty-five years ago a little company of men, women and children, numbering altogether some hundred and ninety-six souls, turned and struck out for the wilds of Canada.

It was the beginning of the exodus of the "Tories," or, as they called themselves, the "Loyalists." Starting soon after the American Declaration of Independence, the movement broadened and deepened until it took in tens of thousands. It has been estimated that more than one hundred thousand American colonists took refuge in Canada between 1778 and 1784.

These Tories, or Loyalists, were to be found in all the colonies, and in large numbers. Some authorities of acknowledged respectability declare that they were as numerous as the Patriots and in many localities outnumbered them. They were strong in New York State, in North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

In wealth, education and social standing they were far superior to the Whigs, or Patriots. To them belonged nearly all of the "leading families" and "distinguished individuals" of the time. The ancestors of many of the prominent New Yorkers and other influential Americans of to-day were among those who emigrated to Canada rather than live under the banner of the rebeldom.

One of the good things about Time is that it heals wounds, cools passion and opens the eyes of the understanding, so that we can see with unclouded vision the things to which we were once blinded.

The Tories believed that it was their duty to be loyal to the British King and nation, and in obedience to that conviction they stood ready to sacrifice the most precious things that "mortal time affords"—home, wealth, comfort, the good will of their neighbors—yes, and life itself.

From a sense of duty the Loyalists forsook all these things and cast themselves into the bleak, wild, inhospitable wilderness of the North, to suffer unspeakable privations and perils; and small is the mind that is not able to see in all this the highest and grandest of manhood—the Manhood of Principle, the manhood which cheerfully accepts the work in order that it may be faithful to that which it believes to be right.

Absolute truth and right is a mere chimera. The only truth and right that mortals can know anything about, or should be at all concerned about, is that which really and truly commends itself to them as such. The Eternal alone knows what is actually right, and the only thing for us to do is to stand true to that which we honestly feel to be right.

That's what the Tories did. That's what the Patriots did. And they were both right.

OVER HALF OF SHRINE VOTE PLEDGED TO ATLANTA

Contestants for 1914 Convention Have Narrowed Down to This City and Memphis.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

DALLAS, TEXAS, May 12.—Atlanta now claims, as pledged, 250 of the 460 votes in the Imperial Council for the 1914 meeting place. Memphis still is alive and the fight has seemingly narrowed down to the two cities. If Atlanta should lose the committee's recommendation the Georgians will carry the fight to the convention floor.

Potentate Forrest Adair declares it is all over but the shouting. "Atlanta will be the Shrine Mecca in 1914, unless I am very badly mistaken," he said.

The first cheering news received by Atlanta when the delegation arrived Sunday morning was that the seventeen votes of Texas are "sewed up" for Georgia. Then followed Oklahoma, New York, Pennsylvania, Oregon, British Columbia and Honolulu to the Georgia standard.

Memphis, however, still is a menace to Atlanta's chances. The Tennesseeans claim that they were first in the field for the meeting, and they are using this argument constantly.

Memphis' tactics may result in a dark horse selection. The committee on the next meeting place will make its selection Tuesday and inform the Imperial Council of its action either Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning.

Make Big Noise for Atlanta.

If there is anybody in Dallas who does not know that Yaarab Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, is here, and has come to bring the Imperial Council to Atlanta in 1914, he must be deaf, dumb and blind.

The campaign on behalf of Atlanta was started the very minute Illustrious Potentate Forrest Adair stepped off the train in this town, the head and front of the most enthusiastic and determined delegation that ever went out of Atlanta after something the town wanted or needed in its business.

To be sure, the immediate thing in hand is the session of the Imperial Council now on in Dallas, but the first thing an Atlanta delegate says to a brother Noble, after making himself known, is "How about this Imperial Council thing for Atlanta next year?"

Atlanta Best Advertised.

Far and away the best advertised bidder for the honor of entertaining the Shrine next year is Atlanta. The fame of the Yaarab Temple has been perfectly secure in Shrinedom for many moons, and there isn't a visiting Shriner in this Texas metropolis who hasn't heard of that great "Atlanta spirit," and the amazing things it has accomplished heretofore.

There is a feeling in the atmosphere that everything is about over, so far as next year's session is concerned, except the hurrahing for and congratulating of Atlanta.

Still, nobody is resting. There will be no sort of let up, not so much as a hint of it, until after the vote has been taken in the Imperial Council, and Atlanta officially declared the winner.

Forrest Adair's Nobles have undertaken to convince the Shriners of two things. First, that Atlanta wants the Imperial Council to be its guest next year, sincerely and earnestly, and second, that Atlanta can and will entertain and take care of the gathering most handsomely.

"We have convinced them that we have the hotel accommodations," said

ESCAPED CONVICT ROBS BANK AND STORE; IN JAIL

MACON, GA., May 12.—Will Harrold, who escaped from the Jasper County gang last Friday and robbed the Jones County Bank and R. H. Kingman's store at Haddock last night, was captured to-day near Macon. He is now in the Bibb County jail.

Harrold was convicted in Augusta of bank robbery and given six years.

BURNS CALLED INTO PHAGAN MYSTERY; ON WAY FROM EUROPE

Famous American Detective Cables He Will Return Immediately In Response to Col. Felder's Plea For His Services to Capture Slayer.

William J. Burns, the world-famed detective, probably will take charge of the Phagan case.

The man who unearthed the dynamite outrages and brought the McNamara brothers to justice, will in all probability come to Atlanta within the next few days and lend his efforts toward clearing up the mystery of the death by strangulation of Mary Phagan.

This information was made public Monday following correspondence between Colonel Thomas B. Felder and Mr. Burns since the discovery of the body in the pencil factory.

Mr. Burns is now on his way from Europe, and will arrive on Tuesday or the following day. Upon his arrival in New York he will confer with detectives there and then proceed to Atlanta.

Credit Largely Due Felder.

The services of Mr. Burns have been secured largely through Mr. Felder's efforts, it has developed. Upon Mr. Felder's retention by the citizens of Marietta and relatives of the slain girl to work on the case he journeyed to New York for a conference with Raymond Burns, son of William J. Burns, on the case with a view to getting the great detective to come here.

At that time the elder Burns was in Europe investigating the disappearance of Wilberforce Martin, and upon being cabled of Mr. Felder's desires replied that he would return immediately.

Monday it was announced that Burns was on his way to America and that Colonel Felder would take up the Phagan case with him. Felder, it is understood, will give up his own fee to employ Burns and will assist in raising funds for the purpose.

Mr. Burns' warm personal friendship for Mr. Felder has served in a large measure to draw the wizard into the local mystery investigation. The history of their acquaintance leads back to the South Carolina dispensary graft case, which Mr. Felder prosecuted and on which the detective was employed. It was there the two met.

When the Phagan murder was committed and its baffling details confronted Atlanta police, Mr. Felder lost no time in communicating with his friend. That the man who has struck terror to the hearts of criminals by his marvelous knowledge of their ways and his wonderful deductive powers will quickly clear up the mystery is declared certain by those who have followed his work.

With the final rounding up of the evidence against Leo M. Frank and Newt Lee nearing completion, Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey on Monday began the process of elimination of unimportant matter and the shaping of the case for presentation to the Grand Jury.

Waits to Arrange Evidence.

Whether the case will be ready for that tribunal this week is a matter of doubt. The great mass of testimony presents a tangle which will require some time before it is straightened out and arranged properly. Solicitor Dorsey declared Monday morning that he would not present the matter to the Grand Jury until it has been put into a clear, concise form and can be easily handled.

Quick disposition of the cases of the accused men is assured once the matter is placed before the Grand Jury. Should that body find the evidence sufficient to hold Frank and Lee to trial, their cases will be taken up immediately before Judge L. S. Roan, who will open the Criminal Court division of the Fulton County Superior Court on next Monday.

The evidence against both men will be placed before the Grand Jury simultaneously, according to Mr. Dorsey.

Sleuth Leaves Mysteriously.

Much importance is attached to the departure of Solicitor Dorsey's detective Monday morning for parts unknown. While the Solicitor, when questioned as to the destination and purpose of the detective's trip, would give no direct answer, it is believed that the mission is in connection with some clew in the Phagan case which has been unearthed by the mysterious investigator.

The fact that a large number of "character witnesses" are now being interrogated in Brooklyn, N. Y., the former home of Frank, and in other parts of the country bears out this supposition.

That the detective has not confined himself to the theory followed by city police officials in their accumulation of evidence against Frank and Lee, however, was admitted by Solicitor Dorsey and also the possibility that he has stumbled upon an important clew.

Wife Sees Frank in Tower.

While police are exhausting every available source of information to unravel the mystery, Frank and Lee remain in their cells in the Tower chafing with impatience.

Mrs. Frank went to the Tower on Sunday afternoon, paying her first visit to her husband since his arrest nearly two weeks ago. Mrs. Frank was accompanied to the jail by her father, Emil Selig, of 68 East Georgia Avenue. They remained in consultation with the prisoner for nearly an hour.

It was definitely learned Monday that Chief Lanford had not completely eliminated Newt Lee, the negro night watchman of the pencil factory, and that there still exists a suspicion that he may know something of the crime.

In fact, the night watchman has come to be regarded as the real puzzle in the case.

Chief Lanford is not satisfied as to Lee and any possible part he may have played in the tragedy. He declared he had lain awake at night trying to figure out satisfactorily the negro's position.

First Words Still Puzzle.

The point that prevents detectives from eliminating Lee is his first statements to officers following his discovery of the dead girl's body. When he first called the police station, he said he had found a "white woman dead in the basement." The officers who hastened to the factory declared it would have been impossible for him to have discerned whether the girl was white or black from his position when he found her.

When the officers arrived, Lee told them the girl was lying flat of her back. They went into the basement and found the dead girl lying face downward. Lee also told them that the girl had a wound in the back of the head.

Detectives say it is possible that the negro, in the excitement of finding the body, may have been honestly mistaken as to its position, but, at

TAG DAY RECEIPTS CERTAIN TO ESTABLISH NEW RECORD; ATLANTA GIVES LIBERALLY

Atlanta capitulated Monday to an irresistible force of the city's fairest young women. It was a willing, but costly surrender.

Each of the thousands of captives, as a token of surrender, gave up some part of his or her hard-earned money and received a tag which indicated the money was for the benefit of the Sheltering Arms Orphans' Home.

One of these tags was supposed to insure the "taggee" against being surrounded again by a group of the fair soldiers and submitting to another depletion of his exchequer.

But it didn't.

The person who had any appearance of prosperity was a marked man. Few escaped without the signs of repeated surrender. Many proudly wore as many as a half dozen of the lavender tags.

Records Sure to Go.

Before the Tag Day campaign was in progress long it became known that all records would be broken. The record last year was $5,100. By noon Monday the girls were bringing in buckets full of nickels, dimes and dollars to headquarters in the Peters Building. The huge display of wealth was soon tied up in bags and the office force began to take on the appearance of the Bank of England.

The campaign was well organized. Before the average business man had finished his breakfast, the girls were being mobilized at headquarters. By the time that this same business man was in the street car or in his automobile en route to his office, the maidens armed with hundreds of tags were in waiting for him.

There was no escape. On every corner there was one or more of the attractive, smiling girls stationed. If a person succeeded in getting by one of them without buying a tag it was only to be repeatedly stopped until he finally gave in.

The girls stood at the doors of all the public buildings. They swarmed into the offices in droves. Not many attempted to make any resistance. He who did was not wise. He spent an uncomfortable day. They even invaded the Capitol, tagging everyone from Governor Brown down to the most humble attache.

"I am sure we are going to break a record for the amount of money taken in," said Mrs. W. S. Elkin, of the central committee. "Even if we don't we will have broken one record and that is in the number of pretty girls we have had to tag the people. I never saw so many in my life.

Money Is Flowing in.

"The money is simply flowing in from all directions and the returns up to the present are very encouraging. We can scarcely keep up with the demand for more buckets and tags. Everybody seems enthusiastic and those who are giving are doing so cheerfully and a great many have stopped in and made voluntary subscriptions of very substantial amounts."

Mrs. J. Frank Meador, stationed at the entrance to the Atlanta National Bank, was apparently vying with the tellers laboring in the banking room.

"Business is fine," she smiled. "I have nearly $100 already in my bucket and everyone seems willing and anxious to contribute. I have just gotten one donation of $20 and any number of others ranging from $1 to $5."

Buckets Get Too Heavy.

Mrs. Frank Dabney, Mrs. L. C. McKinney and Mrs. James Ison, stationed at the Steiner-Emery Building, were getting the money by the bucket full and during the morning it became necessary for them to make frequent trips to headquarters, across the street, in order to relieve themselves of the weight of silver.

A particularly attractive group of girls is that on the Aragon Hotel block. Mrs. Charles Godfrey is in charge there, and she says that this Tag Day is much better than last year's.

Miss Maude Arthurs Weir, a pretty Canadian girl, came all the way from Toronto to help the "taggers." Miss Weir was here last year and said she would not miss an Atlanta Tag Day for worlds. Her contributions have ranged from 3 cents to $1.

Miss Cobble Vaughan says the men call her "girlie," "bright eyes" and "cutie"—but they pay for the privilege. Misses Annie Sykes Rice, Douglass and Edith Dunson all agree that the men are "perfectly nice and sweet."

One Policeman is Lucky.

The policeman in front of the Candler Building says he has the prettiest girls in town on his beat. Mrs. Massengale is chaperoning this group. She says receipts are much larger than they were in 1912. Miss Mainer Lee Hardin is of the opinion that the men would have a Tag Day, too, if they knew how much fun it is. Miss Marian Perdue finds the men very nice and generous, not one in a hundred refusing to help.

Mrs. W. B. Seabrook is at the Empire Life Building, in charge of a party of girls. She expresses herself as delighted with the contributions. Miss Frances Seabrook, of Westminster, Md., is helping her, and says that the Atlanta men are much more liberal than those of Baltimore.

LEO M. FRANK, the pencil factory superintendent, held in the Phagan mystery, in a new photograph. Mrs. Frank yesterday visited her husband in the Tower, where he is a prisoner pending the action of the Grand Jury.

BURNS CALLED ON TO CAPTURE PHAGAN SLAYER

Facts Hard to Explain.

"There are many apparently little things in this case that become veritable mountains when we try to get over them. Newt Lee's statements may have been entirely innocent—if they were, they are hard to explain and get out of the way."

The Chief smilingly added:

"If a fellow doesn't care to become gray-haired or land in the insane asylum, he'd better not spend too much time trying to figure out the truth of this mystery and reconcile all of its varied phases and features."

The Pinkertons have instructions to find the murderer, no matter who he may be. Operatives of the agency employed by the National Pencil Company recently put the matter squarely up to Luther Rosser, the company's attorney. He said:

Urge Diligent Search.

"Find the murderer of Mary Phagan. Work in co-operation with the police, work with anyone, work any way that might lead you to success, let your chips fall where they may. You are employed to hunt the murderer until he is found and convicted. It matters not who is guilty."

Five men from the detective agency are working on the case, under the direction of Assistant Superintendent Harry Scott. Through City Detective Black the Pinkertons work in connection with the city police.

Leo M. Frank was visited by Mr. Rosser at his cell in the Tower Sunday. They were together only a short while. Mr. Rosser stated he had only paid a "social visit" and had not discussed the case.

Chief of Detectives Lanford said Monday that he was satisfied with the progress of the case so far. He said that the investigation unavoidably had been slow and burdened with a mass of evidence, much of which would have to be eliminated in the final consideration of the case. He was pleased with the new developments which he said added much strength to the line of evidence his men are building up.

Mr. Adair to me to-day. "That seems to be the only thing that ever has gotten on anybody's nerves with respect to Atlanta's chances of getting the meeting next year.

"There is no difficulty in convincing people that Atlanta is a fine place to visit at any time and for any purpose. Everybody has heard of Atlanta, and knows it is a great city. The very term 'the Atlanta spirit' comes readily to the lips of people living many miles away. Some few have wondered, however, if a city the size of Atlanta can take care of the Imperial Council, and the big influx of visitors it brings into a city always.

"When I show them that we are prepared to take care of 60,000 visitors in first class shape, however, they get away from that hotel doubt in a hurry. The crowds attending the Imperial Council gatherings generally run around forty thousand.

"I hope the folks back home understand how enthusiastic our bunch is. We have come here to land the next year's meeting, and we are going to land it. You wire the Georgian that I say we are coming home with the bacon."

Working in Pairs.

It is herewith wired.

And I believe it.

Certainly there isn't a man in this outfit that isn't rooting and boosting to beat the band for the Atlanta meeting next year. Generally, the delegation works in pairs. In this fashion, they scatter all over Dallas, and stop to orate wherever a bunch of Shriners can be located.

The big guns of the Imperial Council have had Atlanta and 1914 drummed into their heads ever since they came to town.

The conviction is deepening every minute that Atlanta is to win out. Forrest Adair already has outlined a real, sure enough Georgia barbecue and a lot of other things as inducements to visitors to go to Atlanta next year.

From all quarters, I hear nothing but praise of Atlanta and its pluck in raising approximately $100,000 in twelve hours for the Imperial Council's entertainment in 1914.

CITIZENS OF CALIFORNIA TO VOTE ON JAPANESE LAND LAW

SACRAMENTO, May 12.—That pressure from the national administration had forced a delay in the anti-alien land legislation and that the legislature would at once order a special election in October to consider the anti-alien bill under the referendum and more drastic measures under the initiative, was reported here this afternoon. It was reported that Governor Johnson had agreed to this plan, but he would make no statement regarding the subject.

SACRAMENTO, May 12.—Referendum of the anti-alien bill to the people of California has been determined on by the Democratic leaders of the State.

This was learned to-day following the receipt of a telegram from President Wilson to Governor Johnson asking him to veto the measure.

The bill was scheduled to reach Governor Johnson to-day from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, where it has been held up.

The session of the Legislature ends to-day, and under the provisions of the constitution 30 days ensue during which time the Governor may sign or veto the bill. At the end of that time if it receives no action at the hands of the Executive it becomes a law.

Governor Stays Silent.

The Governor to-day admitted receiving the message from President Wilson, transmitted through Secretary of State Bryan, but refused to comment on it. It was generally believed here that eventually he would sign the measure. Theodore A. Bell, national Democratic committeeman, is here watching the situation closely. He is the leader of the referendum plan.

It was learned that petitions calling for a referendum vote on the measure have been prepared and sent to various central points in the State. The moment the anti-alien land bill becomes a law these petitions will be circulated. It is confidently expected that a sufficient number of names to insure the call of a referendum election will be secured within a few hours after the circulation of the petition starts.

The result of a referendum would be to delay the whole matter until 1914 unless a special election were called. This would have to be authorized by the Legislature, and a special session will be necessary to call the election. It is believed that Governor Johnson will call a special session to hold an election if the referendum petition goes through.

Wilson Asks Johnson To Veto Anti-Alien Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson, through Secretary of State Bryan, has made a formal plea to Governor Johnson, of California, to veto the alien-land bill.

The message to California's Governor was framed at the White House last night. It sets forth in diplomatic language the urgency of the situation created by the demands of Viscount Chinda, the Japanese Ambassador.

The message to Governor Johnson follows:

Two Courses Open.

The President directs me to express his appreciation of your courtesy in delaying action on the land bill now before you, until its provisions could be communicated to the Japanese Government and considered by it.

His Excellency, Baron Chinda, has, on behalf of his Government, presented an earnest protest against the measure. As you have before you but two alternatives, viz, to approve or to veto, it will avail nothing to recall to your attention the amendments suggested to the Legislature; and as the President has already laid before you his views upon the subject, it is unnecessary to reiterate them.

He passes over the questions affecting treaty rights for two reasons; first, because the bill passed by the Legislature is avowedly intended to conform to treaty obligations, and, second, because any conflict complained of would be a matter for the courts, but the President feels justified in expressing again his desire that action on the subject be deferred for this session, and he expresses the desire the more freely because the Legislatur can be reconvened at any time if the welfare of the State requires it.

He is fully alive to the importance of removing any root of discord which may create antagonism between American citizens and the subjects of Oriental nations residing here, but he is impelled by a sense of duty to express the hope that you will see fit to allow time for diplomatic effort. The nations affected by the proposed law are friendly nations—nations that have shown themselves willing to co-operate in the establishment of harmonious relations between their people and ours.

President Offers Aid.

If a postponement commends itself to your judgment the President will be pleased to co-operate in a systematic effort to discover and correct any evils that may exist in connection with land ownership by aliens.

The decision of the administration to urge Governor Johnson to use his power of veto to postpone any land legislation was reached after a series of conferences between the President, Secretary Bryan and John Bassett Moore, counselor of the State Department, and frequent calls at the department by Ambassador Chinda. It was realized that any further attempt to have the bill enacted by the California Legislature amended would be fruitless, since Secretary Bryan's trip to Sacramento was unavailing and the Legislature is to adjourn next Tuesday.

Until Governor Johnson's reply is received the Government probably will make no reply to the protest of Japan further than to acquaint the Ambassador with the fact that every possible effort has been made to have action in California delayed, pending a settlement of the problems involved by diplomacy.

Navy Short of Coal, Battleships and Men.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Alarming developments at the State Department and the White House following the delivery of Japan's protest against the California alien land bill, regarded practically as an ultimatum, has called attention to the unpreparedness of the two offensive and defensive arms of the Government.

Summarized, the unpreparedness of the United States, as obtained from these sources, consists in the following detail:

First. There is only a deceptive preponderance of fighting strength in ships as between Japan and the United States.

Second. There is not coal enough in the Pacific coaling stations to maintain a battle fleet for one month on cruise.

Third. No preparation has been made by the Navy Department since the Japanese situation became acute to remedy the fatal negligence by establishing a sufficient coaling base anywhere outside the limits of the United States proper.

Fourth. The United States will be forced, in case of hostilities in the Pacific, to make its base at San Francisco or at Puget Sound, and it has not one-fifth the coal there that should be there.

Fifth. The Navy Department has a working arrangement with five transcontinental railroads by which they could be utilized in emergency, but, so far, no specific contract for the shipment of coal to the Pacific Coast has been made.

Sixth. The total coal on hand in the navy on July 1 last was 361,757 tons. There were contracted for 63,499 tons. Since that time, according to officials of the Navy Department competent to know, there has been no effort to get larger deliveries or to get options on coal steamers or to make preparation for the rush of material to the Pacific Coast.

Seventh. There are at least eighteen vessels of the battleship type which have been held in reserve and others in ordinary which would be necessary to put in complete commission in case the Atlantic fleet of battleships now equipped were sent to the Pacific. These battleships in reserve need about 10,000 men to fill up their complements, and Congress has not been asked for authority to recruit sufficient men for a fleet. The law limits the enrollment of the navy to 51,500 men. The present enrollment is about 47,000, and if completed up to 51,000 men would scarcely be more than sufficient to equip the emergency fleet of battleships which would have to be sent to the Pacific.

The condition of the Navy Department, as summarized above, was obtained to-day from three of the experts in the Navy Department upon whom the Government would have to depend in case there were a call to arms.

Senators Applaud Plea for Bigger Navy.

NEW YORK, May 12.—"Any man who will put in the way of the United States the slightest obstruction, either by his voice or vote, to a progressive national defense program, who can see that our safety, the peace we love so much and the peace of the world depends on a navy larger than the navies of Europe, is lacking in true patriotism."

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs, sitting at luncheon on Vincent Astor's yacht, Noma, at West Point, heard this statement from the lips of Representative Robert F. Broussard, of Louisiana. The committee, just about to land on the rocky slope of the war academy 'on annual inspection, applauded Broussard to the echo. He continued:

"International peace—yea, even the solid establishment of international arbitration will never be realized until the United States adopts a naval program that will push our navy ahead of the navies of Europe and keep it there. And that President who adopts and prosecutes such a policy will be heralded by the country and the world as a greater world benefactor than either Washington or Lincoln.

"I have just listened to Senator Johnson, of Alabama, a member of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, declare that he was not in favor of a larger army, but in favor of a larger and better trained militia, that might combine at a moment's notice with the regular army.

Wants Cadet Corps Enlarged.

"I quite agree with him, provided we so train our militiamen to work harmoniously with the regulars. Likewise, with the committee whose guest I have the honor to be now, I agree that the cadet corps here at West Point should be enlarged, whether we need them or not. It is well to be prepared. No greater insurance of peace may be found than preparedness for war.

"But how about the navy? Such a policy will do nothing to help the navy. It comes to my notice always that the men in Congress who show the greatest opposition to provisions for an adequate navy are the first in an emergency to cry for war, war, war.

"I saw men at Baltimore oppose a greater navy plank and I now hear them demand that we go to war. They talk with the wisdom of Bourke Cockran, who, once when a member of the House, declared the United States need fear no invasion because right in his city were men who with cobblestones could repel any invading army of aliens.

"Block Navy; Cry for War."

"This idea of blocking the navy and then clamoring for the defense of our national honor was well exemplified recently in Congress when one of my colleagues, a man very dear to me and a sterling American citizen, made a fiery demand that we gird up our loins in defense of our honor. Yet this same man was opposed to a progressive battleship building policy.

"For ten consecutive terms I have been selected secretary of the American group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union for International Arbitration. This will bear me out, I think, when I claim for myself a love of peace."

Wilson's Veto Request Ends Jap Bill Efforts.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—His final message on the California-Japanese situation dispatched, President Wilson to-day plainly indicated to visitors that the administration considers it has concluded its share in the land bill embroglio and will not meddle further.

State Wins Point in Railway Tax Fight

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 12.—The state of Georgia won a point over the railroads Monday when Attorney General Thomas S. Felder obtained from the supreme court an order for a review of a decision that the Atlantic Coast Line and the Louisville and Nashville Railroad were not to be taxed on property leased for 99 years from the Georgia Railroad.

Comptroller General William A. Wright, of Georgia, by his issuance of tax executions against the two railroads precipitated the case several months ago. The roads procured an injunction and the state carried the case to the circuit court of appeals.

Rich Stock Trader Wounds Assailant

MOULTRIE, Ga., May 12.—W. P. Brown was shot and seriously wounded this afternoon in an altercation with Joseph J. Battle, one of the wealthiest live stock men of the state. The shooting took place at Battle's stable. According to an eyewitness Brown went to the stable and accused Battle of stealing from him, and after applying a vile epithet, struck Battle several hard blows. Then Battle drew his pistol and fired.

Recently Battle prosecuted and convicted Brown, for removing from the state property to which he did not hold legal title. Brown is now out under bond, pending a hearing for a new trial.

Battle has not been arrested.

BULL MOOSERS ASK G. O. P. TO CONVENE FOR REUNION

CHICAGO, May 12.—Representatives of the Progressive forces of the Republican party meeting in Chicago to-day voted to ask the Republican National Committee to call a national convention at as early a date as practicable to consider matters of party reorganization.

The resolution was voted through, following its advocacy by former Governor Herbert S. Hadley, of Missouri; Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa, and other Progressive leaders. Senator William D. Borah, of Idaho, opposed the resolution.

After the resolution was adopted a formal statement was issued by State Senator James S. Trautman, of Kansas, a member of the program committee. The statement follows:

Move Is Explained.

At an informal conference of Republicans from eleven States, held in Chicago May 12, 1913, it was voted that it be submitted to the National Republican Committee as the opinion of those present that a national convention of the party should be held this year at as early a date as may be practicable for the purpose of considering the expediency of changing the basis of representation at future conventions so that delegates shall proportionately represent Republican voters and not the general population to the end that the will of the members of the party may be more accurately determined; also for the purpose of changing the rules relating to delegates and members of the national committee so that the primary election laws of the various States shall be recognized and have full force, and also for the purpose of making such other changes in the method of conducting national conventions and campaigns as shall conduce to giving the utmost possible effect to the principles and policies of the party.

For Reuniting the Party.

It was further the opinion that such a convention might properly and usefully take any other action desirable to reunite the party and to give assurance that it stands for constructive and progressive activity in the affairs of government to the end that the common welfare may be advanced.

It was the unanimous belief of those present that the changes suggested should be made forthwith and that the National Committee be strongly urged to take steps to such an end.

Six Republican Senators who opposed the nomination of President Taft last year are attending the conference, which began yesterday in the Congress Hotel, in the same room where six Governors met and signed letters to Colonel Roosevelt, asking that he become a presidential candidate.

Seventy-five other Republicans who favor a reorganization of the party also attended the first session.

The officers selected will report to the commanding officer of the post the morning of June 10.

DANIELS RETURNS EAST AFTER SAVANNAH VISIT

SAVANNAH, GA., May 12.—Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, arrived in Savannah yesterday afternoon from Port Royal, completing an inspection of the navy yards on the South Atlantic and Gulf coasts. He left at midnight for Washington via Raleigh, N. C., his home. The party was entertained informally in Savannah.

Fair South Carolinan Lauds Georgia Barbecue Sure One Would Reconcile Blease and His Foes

The famed Georgia barbecue has won another enthusiastic friend.

The latest ally is beautiful Miss Marie Fisher, of Charleston, S. C. Miss Fisher was at a barbecue prepared in her honor at the Kimballville farm of her cousin, Will V. Zimmer, and it was here she declared that she never had tasted anything so good in her life.

"If we could transplant these typical Georgia barbecues into South Carolina we would have such an era of good-fellowship there that Governor Blease and all his opponents would become fast friends and we'd have no more of those terrible fusses."

So said Miss Fisher as she poised a cleaver preparatory to bringing it down upon a particularly juicy piece of meat. For, with white-plumed hat slightly a-tilt and face flushed with happiness, she was entering right into the spirit of the occasion and busily assisting in serving.

"The nearest we have to a barbecue in South Carolina is a fish fry, and that's no fun at all compared to a Georgia barbecue," she complained.

Miss Fisher is of a wealthy South Carolina family and has been visiting relatives in Atlanta for several weeks. She will return home Thursday.

Disastrous Floods Sweeping Scotland

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PERTH, SCOTLAND, May 12.—Disastrous floods are ravaging the southeastern part of Perthshire, doing extensive damage. A great inland sea, 2 1-2 miles broad, has been formed near Blairgowria on Lach Erich. Bridges and railroad tracks have been washed away and roads are impassable.

Crops have been damaged greatly and much live stock has been killed.

Working on Decree in "Hearst Coal Cases"

Additional Suits Against the Trust Will Be Deferred for a Time.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Preparations for framing a decree carrying out the Supreme Court's decision in the "Hearst coal cases" have been made by the Department of Justice.

The decree, which will cancel the so-called 65 per cent. contracts of the coal carrying railroads and coal companies and terminate the railroad control of the Temple Iron Company, will be submitted to the United States District Court at Philadelphia during the last week of May.

While it is the intention of Attorney General McReynolds to file more suits against the Coal Trust, attacking the relationship, direct and indirect, of coal carrying railroads and coal mining companies by means of both the Sherman Anti-Trust law and the commodities clause of the Interstate Commerce act, it is not likely that any further move will be made until the decree in the Temple iron case has been entered.

Wife Says Husband Is Crazy.

SAVANNAH.—At the instance of his wife, Mrs. Florence Meachum, J. Homer Meachum, an actor at the Princess Theater, who attempted to commit suicide by drinking wood alcohol, has been transferred from the hospital to the jail on a writ of lunacy.

Cafe Manager, Cut By Boy, Near Death

The condition of Owen Gilbert, manager of Scherrer's cafe, who was seriously stabbed Saturday afternoon in a Peachtree Street pool room by Arthur Bridwell, is reported practically unchanged.

At Grady Hospital, where the wounded man was taken immediately after the affray, it was said his condition is critical and that it will be several days before they can say if he will survive.

Arthur Bridwell, the 18-year-old youth who stabbed Gilbert, following an altercation that arose over some remark Gilbert is said to have made about Bridwell's mother, is being held by the police, charged with assault with intent to murder.

SINGING LESSONS BY TELEPHONE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, May 12.—Steps were taken to-day to stop the practice of using the telephone for instructing pupils in singing and the hearing of recitations in languages. The discovery of these uses of telephones was made by a city telephone expert who is helping the telephone companies to cut down their expenses in order to increase the wages of girl operators.

WILSON SURE OF CURRENCY LAW AT THIS SESSION

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The Wilson currency bill will follow swiftly upon the Wilson-Underwood tariff. The President has said it, and there will be no failure to do his will.

With the tariff bill disposed of by the House, the Chief Executive has set his representatives to work, and by the time the House returns to its regular sessions three weeks hence, it will have for immediate consideration a bill that will embody the Wilson view of the currency.

Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, is chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, and Carter Glass, of Virginia, will be the chairman of the House Committee as soon as that position is filled.

The President expresses full confidence that he will be able to press this currency bill to enactment before the special session adjourns. He goes the full length of positive speech in declaring it will be a law before the general session of Congress. He is fully as emphatic about it as he was about the tariff bill.

Plan for Regional Banks.

Division of the entire country into fifteen clearing house districts, each district to have its own reserve association, or regional bank, is contemplated in currency reform legislation at the present session.

President Wilson, Representative Underwood and Representative Carter Glass, who will be chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee of the House, have reached an agreement as to the main features of this proposed legislation. They are to have further conferences to settle the details.

In the message to be sent to Congress shortly after June 1 there will be outlined the general principles of currency reforms he will favor, but will not specify details. No legislation for the Federal control of stock exchanges will be sanctioned by the President, although three members of the Banking and Currency Committee will strive to have this reform included in the bill. Glass is opposed to such legislation.

The members of the committee who favor Federal control of the Stock Exchange will seek an alliance with radical Republicans on this question and force a vote on it. They are believed to be hopelessly in the minority, but will rely on the report of the money trust investigating committee to sustain them.

Features of Reform Plan.

The general reform principles agreed to by Underwood and the President include:

Establishment of fifteen reserve associations, or regional banks under boards of control, the operation of each association to be under the clearing house system.

Each board of control to consist of nine members, three to be of local selection, three to be designated by the President and three others, one each to represent the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Agriculture. Each association may transact a general banking business under the supervision of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Each association to circulate its notes under prescribed conditions, the basis for these notes to be commercial securities of a recognized stability as well as Government, State and municipal bonds. All national banks may obtain membership in the associations and such other banks as the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller may prescribe.

The allotment of territory to each of these associations will be left in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency.

Senators See Free Wool and Sugar Defeat.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Sugar and wool Senators confidently predict that these two schedules would not be free on the tariff bill finally passed by the Senate. To-day they said enough Democrats had been lined up to defeat the Underwood program with regard to both these commodities, naming Senators Newlands and Pittman, Nevada; Shafroth, Colorado; Chamberlain, Oregon; Walsh, Montana, and Ransdell and Thornton, Louisiana, as among those who would vote against free sugar and wool.

The fight, it was declared, would come on the floor of the Senate, the Underwood bill being scheduled to go through the Senate Finance Committee without a change in either of the commodities.

It was also expected to-day that changes would be made in tariff rates on cattle, wheat, oats and many other commodities. The Democratic majority believes that cattle, wheat and oats should be put on the free list.

Manufacturers Heard In Secret on Tariff.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Members of the Senate Finance Committee have had private conferences with representatives of manufacturers on practically all of the 600 paragraphs of the Underwood tariff bill.

The privacy that has attended these conferences will be made the subject of Republican attack in the Senate.

Republicans continued to assert they will have enough Democratic support to compel the committee to listen to the pleas of manufacturers.

Wilson Predicts No Changes in Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson is not worrying about the passage of the Underwood tariff bill by the Senate. He told the members of the "newspaper cabinet" at the semi-weekly meeting to-day there was no "rough water ahead," as reported from the upper house of Congress and that he anticipated the adoption of the bill in its present form after comparatively little argument.

Cyclone and Hail Do Damage in France

Vineyards Suffer Loss, Workers Injured and Aviators Are Dashed to Earth.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 12.—A terrific cyclone swept parts of the Department of Marne to-day, doing extensive damage. Following a cloudburst, there was a heavy fall of hail. Many workers in the fields were hurt by being struck by the huge stones. Serious loss was caused to the vineyards.

Two aviators flying near Epernay, were blown to earth and suffered injuries which may prove fatal.

K. of C. Convention Tuesday.

SAVANNAH.—The State Convention of the Knights of Columbus will meet here Tuesday morning. The convention will be in session only one day.

Her 'Fatal Beauty' Costs Actress Job

NEW YORK, May 10.—Evelyn Carter Carrington was "so handsome" she was discharged from the "Firefly Theatrical Company and she has a judgment of $166 against Arthur Hammerstein to prove it.

Miss Carrington agreed to assume the character—a widow of uncertain years—for $100 a week. She appeared once, then was dropped, and sued for two weeks' salary minus an advance.

"When Miss Carrington was engaged for the role," said Mr. Hammerstein on the witness stand, "we thought she could make up to look old, but her loveliness stuck out through the make-up and she attracted attention from the other characters when she was supposed to have only a minor part."

House Begins Task of Naming Committees

WASHINGTON, May 12.—With practically the entire membership of the House clamoring for choice places, the Ways and Means Committee essayed to-day the gigantic task of making the committee assignments for the Sixty-third Congress.

The Banking and Currency Committee, which is to frame the kind of currency measure wanted by the President, will be among the first committees named by the steering committee. President Wilson himself is expected to express a preference regarding the formation of this committee.

There are 56 standing committees in the House, and of these only five have been organized.

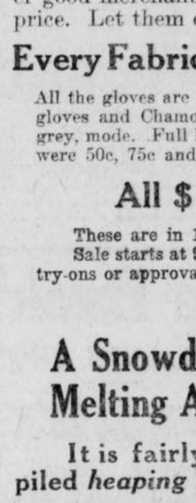
The Semi-Yearly Disposal of the Famous

Royal Society Finished Art Pieces

At Just Half Usual Prices



Starts to-morrow morning at 8:30. Women who have attended the previous sales will need no second invitation to share.

For the benefit of others we say that these are the sample handworked pieces from which the Royal Society Company took orders. Naturally each piece is finished as perfectly as expert needleworkers knew how.

The Royal Society Company are now booking orders for Fall, hence they favor us—their largest Southern customer—with these Spring samples.

Upward of forty years of fair and honorable dealing with manufacturers and wholesalers brings us many favors—but we count this lot of Royal Society Samples as the BEST. See them in the window; glad to have you confirm our judgment.

As shown there are centerpieces, scarfs, squares, pillow tops, baby dresses, towels, pin-cushions, combinations, nightgowns and shirt waists. Judge of the variety by the fact that in centerpieces alone there are 22, 25, 27 and 36-inch sizes. The materials are white and brown linens and white nainsooks, for underwear and lingerie, variously embroidered in French, eyelet and punch work. Roman cutout work, the new tapestry stitch, etc.

Regular prices are $2, $3.00, $4, up to $18
Now just half: Pay $1, $1.50, $2, up to $ 9

New 50c, 75c & $1 Fabric Gloves 25c

Better Reach Out for Them To-morrow
We'll Never Have Them to Hand Out Again

"To-day is yesterday's pupil."

So we learn to-day about gloves what we didn't know yesterday.

We thought other fabric gloves were as good as Kayser's.

In the meantime—what about these other gloves? They're the identical makes that other good merchants are offering to-day at full price. Let them do it—our mind is made up.

Starting to-morrow

Every Fabric Glove in Stock (Save Kayser's) Must Go

All the gloves are spick, span, new. There are lisle gloves, Milanese lisle gloves and Chamoisette gloves. All two-clasp style, in white, black, tan, grey, mode. Full line of sizes in each color. Up to to-day their prices were 50c, 75c and $1. To-morrow the price will be 25c. 25c

These are in 16-button length, in same colors and materials as above. All sizes. Sale starts at 9 a. m., with full line of sizes and colors. No phone orders, exchanges, try-ons or approvals. Extra salespeople in attendance.

(Main Floor, Left Aisle)

A Snowdrift of Laces and Embroideries Is Melting Away Under the Spell of May Prices

It is fairly snowing laces and embroideries. They're piled heaping high on the counters, on tables, everywhere.

Scissors snipping gaily, women buying freely, complimentary remarks flying---a gay, happy throng sharing the best lace and embroidery bargains we've had in many a day.

But there will be plenty left for to-morrow, and the day after. Told yesterday how we secured these thousands of yards; to-day we can only recapitulate.

Prices run like this:

$1 to $2 allover embroideries and flouncings	59c	35c to 50c Cluny laces	19c
$3 to $5 Shadow, Chantilly and Darn lace bands	$1.69	75c to $1 allover laces	49c

Winner of 'Racer' Now in Competition for Beautiful Shetland Pony

Youngster is Spurred on By Success in Previous Contest

STANDING OF CONTESTANTS IN RACE FOR PONY OUTFITS SHOWS NUMEROUS CHANGES

"I was a winner of one of your 'racers' last year, and hope to work hard now, and also to be a winner in this pony contest," writes one of the contestants for The Georgian and American pony outfits.

"We take your paper, and think it the best paper going. You shall hear from me again," the letter concludes.

Those who have won Georgian prizes in the past are pleased with them, it is plain. They have no misgivings as to the quality of the rewards offered now—they know The Georgian and American keep faith with their readers.

Meanwhile, the votes roll in.

The standing of contestants is published again today, and those in the race can see how their rivals are faring. It is plain that many are "holding back" votes. This is poor policy, for the "other fellow" can do the same thing.

Besides, nothing succeeds like success, and the fact that your name in the published list is followed by a big total of votes encourages your friends to help you. No use backing a straggler at the tailend, you know.

WOODBERRY HOLDS FINALS THIS WEEK

The fifth annual commencement exercises of Miss Woodberry's School will be a feature in educational circles this week. The program will begin Friday with a recital. It will conclude the following Monday with the graduation of one of the largest classes in the history of the institution.

There will be a lawn fete and musical complimentary to the alumnae Sunday. The commencement sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. C. T. A. Pise. Following class day exercises at noon Monday on the lawn, there will come the delivery of diplomas at 8 o'clock in the evening.

The valedictory address will be made by Miss Amelia Carney Malone; Miss Elliott Beattie Johnson will render a violin solo; prayers and benediction will be said by the Right Rev. C. K. Nelson, bishop of Atlanta.

Old Ireland Forever! Postcards to Be Green

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Hereafter Uncle Sam will have green postal cards. Postmaster General Albert S. Burleson has so ordered.

The domestic library size one-cent postal card will be printed pale green to conform to the idea of the International Postal Union.

Foreign countries print cards of the lowest denominations in green. Mr. Burleson ordered a similar color to help foreign-born Americans who are familiar with the green card.

Walks 600 Miles to Have Girl Arrested

Alaska Miner Accuses His Former Fiancee of Stealing $5,000 in Gold Dust.

TACOMA, WASH., May 12.—Traveling afoot night and day, Ben Dahl, a Koyukuk miner of Hammond, reached Fairbanks, 600 miles away, in time to cause the arrest of Norah Moore, whom he accused of stealing $5,000 in gold dust.

He said she had promised to marry him and invest the money in real estate. Instead she decamped in the night for Fairbanks with a fast dog team.

Meat Is Barred at Adventist Council

Coffee, Tea and Condiments Also Taboo at Big Conference in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Delegates and visitors are coming from nearly all the countries of the world to attend the thirty-eighth session of the general conference of the Seventh Day Adventists, which will be held in a city of tents here.

No flesh foods of any kind will be served and there will be no coffee or tea there, nor condiments such as vinegar, mustard, catsup or pepper.

The first meeting will be held Thursday.

Two Slaying Cases To Be Tried.

COLUMBUS.—Superior Court of Muscogee County began its May term Monday. Bill Creen will be tried for killing Otis D. Kitchens, while Jennie Mae Radcliff will answer for the death of her husband, George M. Radcliff.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

"My sister's husband had an attack of rheumatism in his arm," writes a well-known resident of Newton, Iowa. "I gave him a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment, which he applied to his arm, and on the next morning the rheumatism was gone." For chronic muscular rheumatism you will find nothing better than Chamberlain's Liniment. Sold by all dealers.

Good Home Made Bread

Put 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1½ teaspoon salt in large bowl. Pour on 1 pint boiling water and 1 pint scalded milk, when luke warm add 1 dissolved yeast cake and 1 quart of flour. Stir until thoroughly mixed. Add 2 quarts of flour, mix and turn on floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic and until bubbles appear under the surface. Cover and set in a warm place to raise. Cut down, knead, shape into loaves, place in greased pans, cover and let raise to double bulk. Bake in hot oven.

A good recipe, closely followed and good materials will give you good, sweet, wholesome, fine grained, tender bread.

Straighten That Lame Back

There's too much suffering among older folks from achy, stiff, lame backs, distressing urinary disorders, weak eyes, dropsy and rheumatic joints.

These are signs of kidney weakness, which, in youth or age, poisons the blood, disorders the urine and lames the limbs or back.

There's help for weakened kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills have brought relief to thousands. Here's Atlanta testimony.

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

ATLANTA PROOF

Testimony of a Resident of Whitehall Street

James J. Fennell, 173 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga., says: "Since 1907, I have not had an attack of backache or any other symptom of kidney complaint. Doan's Kidney Pills made a positive cure in my case. I suffered a great deal from kidney trouble and it was not until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills that I found permanent relief."

Strike in Cincinnati Stops Every Trolley

CINCINNATI, May 12.—Completely crippled and paralyzed by the strike of its motormen and conductors, no attempt was made to-day by the Cincinnati Traction Company to operate a single car. The company is preparing to break the strike with imported men.

Mayor Hunt is still waiting for his reply to the letter sent to W. Kesley Schoepf, president of the company, demanding that the company arbitrate the differences with the men. If the company does not answer by 6 o'clock this afternoon, the Mayor will begin court proceedings to annul the franchise.

OWNER INJURED DRIVING CAR FROM BURNING GARAGE

G. C. Rogers was suffering from painful burns about the face and hands Monday, received when he drove his automobile from a burning garage at 521 Peachtree Street Sunday night.

Two automobiles, valued at about $5,000, were destroyed. One was a Chalmers belonging to Arthur Reed, and the other an Everett owned by Carl Witt.

BALKAN WAR IS ENDED; PEACE TREATY DRAWN

Combatants Officially Promise to Cease Hostilities—Arbiters to Meet in London.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, May 12.—The war between Turkey and the states of the Balkan Confederation is at an end. The only thing which remains to be done now is the formulation of a treaty of peace.

The reply of the Balkan allies to the recent representations of the powers was handed in to-day and it contains a definite promise on the part of the Balkan states and Greece to cease all hostilities until a peace treaty can be drawn up.

Notification was sent to the powers from Sofia, Belgrade, Cettinje and Athens that peace plenipotentiaries will be dispatched immediately to London.

It is expected that the peace negotiations will be renewed in London within a fortnight.

France Spain's Ally In Proposed Treaty.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 12.—Formal announcement of the inception of a treaty which will make Spain an ally of France is expected as soon as the result of the visit of King Alfonso and Premier Romanson of Spain to France is known.

It was learned to-day from an official source that Alfonso made representations to President Poincare to show that Spain is anxious to enter into negotiations without delay.

The press believes the French Foreign Office views the offer favorably.

WOMEN'S PAPER LOSES IN FIGHT FOR EQUAL RIGHTS

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The long fight of the Lewis Publishing Company, of St. Louis, to have the Woman's Magazine placed on a par and accorded similar privileges with other newspapers by the Postoffice Department, was lost to-day by a final decision of the United States Supreme Court.

Calls Persian Tunic Best Garb for Women

Wife of Lecturer Who Has Visited All Lands Adopts That Costume.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Mrs. R. G. Knowles, wife of the explorer and lecturer, is inclined to the belief after visiting every country in the world, that for combination of art and comfort no dress excels that of the women of Persia.

To back up her opinion Mrs. Knowles has appeared at some of her soirees and afternoon receptions attired in the unusual dress of the grande dame of Persia.

It consists of a draped divided tunic, which looks like, but is not exactly, the Eastern "bloomers." The garment is of heavy silken striped material in wonderful colors. Mrs. Knowles has added an Occidental touch to this costume by wearing silk stockings and satin slippers instead of sandals.

Woman, 93, Races in Auto and Wins

Defeats Woman of Twenty-five in Twenty Miles—Shopping Tour Expenses the Stake.

DELMONT, PA., May 12.—As the result of some good-natured bantering over the speed of their motor cars and their ability as drivers, Mrs. George Wallace, ninety-three, and Mrs. Harry Leordon, twenty-five, raced twenty miles to Greensburg, the stakes being the expenses of a shopping tour in the latter town.

The start was made at 8:30 a. m., and 53 minutes later the elder woman drove her car into Greensburg. Two minutes later Mrs. Leordon arrived. Mrs. Wallace had never once slackened speed, and according to Mr. and Mrs. William Blose, her passengers, she took the curves and corners with the daring of an Oldfield.

FOUR HURT IN WRECK ON CENTRAL NEAR COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, GA., May 12.—Wrecking crews this morning cleared the track, after working yesterday afternoon and last night, near Columbus, where Central of Georgia passenger train No. 1 was wrecked at 4:05 o'clock yesterday. The combination baggage and smoking car was overturned and the engine and three steel coaches were derailed. Roy Williams, of Columbus, and three negroes were injured, Williams being seriously hurt.

U. D. C. RECORDS DAMAGED BY FLOODS IN KENTUCKY

"On account of the recent floods in Kentucky, the home of Mrs. Roy McKinney, recording secretary general, of Paducah, Ky., has been inundated and her papers confused and damaged. She will send out the certificates for membership just as soon as she is able to resume business."

Delegates Here for Assemblies Come From All Parts of World

Missionary Conference Is First

From every State in the Union and practically every country in the world delegates are arriving in Atlanta to attend the great joint Presbyterian Assembly. The first "long distance" delegate reached here Monday in the person of Rev. Thomas G. Albert, commissioner from Salem, Oreg. Before night the number is expected to swell to several hundred, and from now until Thursday morning every train will bring in its quota.

Dr. B. P. Fullerton, of Philadelphia, field secretary of the U. S. A. Church in the South, has arrived and is particularly busy arranging for the Pre-Assembly Missionary Conference, which will take up the entire day Wednesday. This will be one of the most important meetings of the joint gathering. The morning session begins at 9 o'clock and the afternoon meeting at 2:15 o'clock. Both meetings will be held in the Harris Street Presbyterian Church, while the evening session will be held in the First Presbyterian Church at 8 o'clock.

Notables to Give Talks.

Several world-famous missionaries and clergymen will make addresses at this conference. Two of the most noted are the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin, of New York, and the Rev. S. Hall Young, of Alaska. Of particular discussion will be the simultaneous church-wide every-member campaign which the representatives of the United Presbyterian Church will present.

Among other prominent arrivals this morning was Rev. E. R. Sterretts, of Philadelphia, treasurer of the board of education. Like Dr. Fullerton, he found himself a busy man as soon as he reached Atlanta.

Real work of the joint assembly begins Thursday. There will be three distinct conventions with joint meetings in the evenings at the Auditorium. Meetings of the U. S. A. Church will be held in the Baptist Tabernacle; the Southern Presbyterians will gather in the North Avenue Presbyterian Church, while the United Presbyterians will meet in the Central Presbyterian Church.

Big Meeting Wednesday.

Special interest attaches to the all-day conference of the Permanent Committees of Foreign Missions from the various Presbyteries, including the committees of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, which is to be held on Wednesday, the day preceding the opening of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church. This conference will be held in the First Presbyterian Church.

The meeting of the General Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement Wednesday will be one of marked importance from more than one point of view. This meeting will mark the sixth anniversary of the Laymen's Movement in the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Business sessions will be held during the morning and afternoon, the Laymen's Movement joining with the pre-assembly conference on foreign missions; and in the evening from 6 to 8 o'clock a banquet will be held in connection with the closing business session. An inspirational meeting will follow the banquet and close the all-day conference.

Facts on Southern Church.

North Avenue Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, will be the meeting place of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, which will convene Thursday morning. Everything is in readiness in this church for the entertainment of the highest court of Southern Presbyterians.

There are fourteen synods in the territory of the Southern Presbyterian church, 83 Presbyteries, 465 candidates for the ministry, 41 licentiates, 1,734 ministers, 3,392 churches, 61 licensures. During last year there were 50 ordinations, 231 installations, 231 ministers died, the pastoral relations between 186 ministers and churches were dissolved, 31 ministers were received from other denominations and 11 ministers were dismissed to other denominations.

ART GEM MAKES COMSTOCK BLUSH

Garbless Girl Wader in "September Morn'" Shocks Guardian of New York Morals.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Anthony Comstock, head of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, today concurred with "Bathhouse" John Coughlin, of Chicago, and opposed judgment passed by the French Academy, by declaring "September Morn," the masterpiece of M. Chabas, to be "highly indecent and totally unfit for public exhibition."

While strolling along West Forty-sixth Street this morning, the guardian of New York's morals glanced in the window of a prominent art store. The first and only thing Mr. Comstock's eye could see was the famous painting of the nude girl splashing in the cool shadows of a mountain lake.

"Take it out immediately," ordered Mr. Comstock.

"But that is 'September Morn,'" declared the art dealer.

"It should be pitch dark for a girl to go in wading in that undressed condition," announced Mr. Comstock. "Take it away immediately or I shall confiscate your entire stock."

The picture came out, but was returned a few hours later. In the meantime, art critics are weighing the combined judgment of Anthony Comstock and "Bathhouse" John against that of the judges of the French Academy, who are on record as saying that "September Morn" is one of the world's art treasures.

BACKACHE A WARNING ALL SHOULD HEED

It Is One of the First Signs of Kidney Troubles, if Neglected Serious Diseases Follow.

No one can be well and healthy unless the kidneys work properly and keep the blood pure. When they become clogged up and inactive, nature has a way of warning you.

Backache is one of the first symptoms. You may also be troubled with disagreeable, annoying bladder disorders; have attacks of lumbago or rheumatism; become nervous, tired, and feel all worn out; puffy swellings show under the eyes or in the feet and ankles; and many other symptoms are noticed. If they are neglected, dropsy, diabetes, or Bright's disease, which so often prove fatal, may result.

It is not only dangerous, but needless, for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely ends all such misery.

There is no more effective remedy known for the prompt cure of all such troubles than this new scientific preparation, because it removes the cause. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the clogged-up pores; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter and sift the poison out of the blood and drive it from the system.

You will find Croxone different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to cure the worst backache, relieve rheumatic pains, or overcome urinary disorders.

Widow in White for Titanic-Lost Husband

Material Still Crepe—Black Given Up on Anniversary of Disaster.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—"White Widow of the Titanic" is the title Mrs. Lucien D. Smith, the bereaved girl wife of one of the heroes of the disaster, has earned through wearing white mourning instead of black.

On the anniversary of the sinking of the Titanic, Mrs. Smith put aside her black clothes and appeared in white crepe from head to foot. The pocketbook she carried is of the same material, and her shoes are also white.

Mrs. Smith has an infant daughter born several months after the tragic loss of its father. The widow is popular socially, and forms a picturesque figure at the quiet events she attends.

MISTAKES NEIGHBOR FOR BURGLAR AND SHOOTS HIM

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—August Retting, member of a prominent family here, while attempting to enter a front window of the home of Charles Scheuermann, on fashionable Government Street, was mistaken for a burglar and shot three times. He screamed and shot three times. He screamed and Scheuermann, on going to him, recognized who he was.

The Retting home was two blocks away from the shooting. The wounded man had his shoes off and said he did not want his father to know he was out so late. He had mistaken the house. Scheuermann was not arrested.

RELATIVES TO CONTEST WILL OF MRS. DODD

Fight Over $100,000 Fortune Left to Mercer Will Cause Executor Currier to Quit.

Relatives of the late Mrs. Barbara E. Dodd will contest her will which bequeathed the bulk of her fortune, approximately $100,000, to Mercer University. Charles E. Currier, executor, has been informed of the proposed contest by Mrs. Fannie T. Ackerman, of New York, sister of Mrs. Dodd.

A breach with her relatives several years ago caused Mrs. Dodd, widow of the late Philip Dodd, a wealthy Atlantan, to destroy a will executed in 1906, in which a considerable sum was set aside for her brother and sister and their children. It is said a disagreement following the establishment of a sanitarium at Mrs. Dodd's old residence on Whitehall Street, by the sons of Henry S. Dibble, her brother, led to the estrangement.

Attorney C. P. Goree, who drew the last will, said it was clearly Mrs. Dodd's intention that little be left her relatives.

"Mrs. Dodd had considerable trouble with her nephews about a loan on a sanitarium established some years ago," said Mr. Goree. "In fact, she had to take the matter into the courts for a settlement.

"That is why the Mercer bequest was not in the form of an endowment, but as a fund to be loaned deserving young men. I have not been informed of any intention to contest the will and I can not see what grounds the contest will be based upon."

It is recalled that Mrs. Dodd bequeathed to her brother, Henry S. Dibble, $5,000 to be held in trust, that he was to receive only the proceeds from its investment, and that at his death the amount was to revert to the Mercer fund. To her sister, Mrs. Fannie T. Ackerman, was left a similar sum, without incumbrance.

Charles E. Currier, president of the Atlanta National Bank, executor of the will, said Monday that if a contest is made he will quit.

Carnegie Aids Ghent Memorial Project

Agrees to Help Pay Expense of Preserving Room in Which Treaty Was Signed.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Andrew Carnegie, in Washington as conferee on the treaty of Ghent centenary, has agreed to bear a portion of the expense of setting aside as a permanent peace memorial the room in the Carthusian Monastery in Ghent in which the famous treaty was signed on Christmas eve, 1814. Portraits of the participants, famous facsimiles and historic paintings and other objects are to be placed in the room.

Mr. Carnegie is the guest of Mrs. Oliver Ricketson here. Lord Weardale, Neil Primrose, M.P., son of Lord Rosebery, and Sir George Reed, the British conferees, also are in the city.

'Woody Tiger' Is New White House Mascot

Mrs. Wade Hampton Substitutes Wilson Administration Toy for 'Teddy Bear' and 'Billy Possum.'

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The "Woody Tiger" made its official debut to-day as the official toy of the Wilson administration. As this new monarch of childhood entered the front door of the White House, escorted by Mrs. Wade Hampton, the originator of the novel idea, "Teddy Bear" and "Billy Possum," mascots of previous times looked on with brimming eyes.

Underwood Boomed for President in 1916

His Friends Believe That the Tariff Bill Will Make Him Popular Candidate.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Representative Oscar W. Underwood's friends have started to boom him for the Presidential nomination in 1916. They assert that tariff bills have made Presidents and that Mr. Underwood will come to the front on the bill that passed the House last week.

They are backing Mr. Underwood because they believe that President Wilson will abide by the intent of the Baltimore convention platform which declared in favor of a single term.

These friends of Underwood are confident the Underwood tariff bill will prove acceptable to the country and will grant relief to the masses from heavy burdens of taxation.

TEDDY'S TRIUMPH

A Comic Series That Actually Happened.

The Georgian the other day told in brief form the story of Teddy.

The story of Teddy was so remarkable that one of The Georgian's artists has depicted it as "a comic series that actually happened." His pictures appear below, preceded by a brief introduction:

Mrs. H. E. Grantner, of Hammond, Ind., saw a little 3-year-old boy who was homeless. She pitied him and offered him food and a bed in her home. He looked perfectly demure and harmless.

And he made no trouble at all when sleeping, which he proceeded to do shortly after reaching the house.

But when Teddy (as he was nicknamed) awoke at 5:30 o'clock the next morning, he got busy, and in the course of 60 minutes accomplished the following:

1.—Turned the hose on Mr. Grantner, who was planting sweet peas.

4.—Hit Forrest Grantner, aged 7, with baseball bat, blow landing in pit of stomach. Whipped Ellis Grantner who came to rescue of Forrest.

5.—Then, while the household was recuperating from these blows, Teddy, placed for safekeeping in a room, combined a box of matches and several lace curtains, achieving a first-class bonfire. The damage was $150.

Valdosta Thief Caught.

VALDOSTA.—Abe Courie, a Syrian, who is charged with the robbery of John Mansor's fruit store and saloon here, was caught at Jacksonville, and all of the $265 stolen was recovered within a few hours after the robbery. He was brought back to Valdosta Monday.

BAPTISTS LOSE IN MEMBERSHIP RACE

Preparations are under way for the great picnic to be given the First Christian Sunday School by the Second Baptist, the loser in the membership campaign that closed Sunday. The final score of the two schools was First Christian, 60,358; Second Baptist, 52,074.

At the First Christian Church Sunday morning Superintendent C. V. LeCraw, of the winning school, introduced to his audience the superintendent of the Second Baptist, John S. Spalding, who spoke on "What I Think About the First Christian Sunday School."

"You have beaten us," said Mr. Spalding, "but you had to break a world's record to do it. I want to offer the most cordial congratulations of the entire Second Baptist Sunday School."

The contest standing the closing day was:

	Second Baptist.	First Christian.
Attendance	1,233	1,673
Points scored	3,988	5,014
Final standing	52,074	60,358

It is probable that both contestants will enter another campaign with other schools in similar races for membership. To discuss this a meeting of Baptist pastors and superintendents was held Sunday afternoon.

Freight Car Bulletin Shows Trade Is Brisk

Decrease of 17,799 Idle Pieces of Rolling Stock Regarded as a Good Sign.

No slackening in general trade is reflected by the American Railway Association's bulletin on the number of idle freight cars in the United States and Canada on May 1.

On the contrary, a decrease of 17,799, as compared with April 15, would indicate a quickening of business. The decrease for the two weeks is the largest reported since the early part of June, 1912.

On May 1 there was a total of 39,799 idle cars, compared with a shortage of 51,169 on November 7, when the railroads were congested and in need of rolling stock. A year ago idle cars numbered 138,881.

The shrinkage in cars was due largely to the brisk demand for coal cars, which caused a shrinkage in that class of rolling stock from 19,649 to 8,519 cars.

Fugitive, Like Lot's Wife, Turned to Jailed

If Charles Smith, a negro, had not become possessed with an inane curiosity to see how far behind him Chief of Detectives Lanford was Sunday night, when that officer was giving chase to him, he might have escaped. Smith did turn his head, however, rammed a tree and fell unconscious.

Now he is at police headquarters awaiting trial for careless driving.

Smith, in a two-horse rig, while dashing down Hunter Street, nearly collided with the chief, who was driving home. Lanford gave pursuit to the negro, who abandoned his buggy and took to his heels, with Chief Lanford after him.

Lightning Kills Five In Oil Field Tornado

TULSA, OKLA., May 12.—At least five men were killed by lightning, many oil tanks and wells set on fire, power plants damaged and other havoc wrought by a terrific electrical and wind storm that swept over the Tulsa oil district early to-day.

At Collinsville, 20 miles north of here, five pipe line builders, employed by the Texas company, were killed when a bolt of lightning struck their vehicle, en route to oil fields. The wagon was demolished and horses killed.

THREW BRICK AT NEGRO HE MISTOOK FOR PUGILIST

CHICAGO, May 12.—Mistaking a negro in a lunch room for Jack Johnson, the pugilist, on trial for violating the white slave law, Amos Geiger hurled a brick through the plate glass front of the restaurant. Geiger was taken to a police station, where he begged the police to release him that he might "get" Johnson.

SEQUEL TO LOVE FOR DOLL

Maternal Instinct Greatly Developed by Teaching Children to Love Their Dolls.

The little child's doll is mother to the most romantic fairy. And in the years that pass, the doll fades into the petals of a June rose, to evolve the most wondrous of all transformations.

And now comes a more serious period when the joy of real motherhood should be as tranquil as best effort can provide.

This is accomplished with a wonderful remedy known as Mother's Friend, an external application so penetrating in its nature as to thoroughly lubricate every cord, nerve, muscle and tendon involved.

There will be no pain, none of that nausea or morning sickness, no sensation of distress or strain of expanding muscles. The nerves, too, will be calm, thus making the period one of restful days, of peaceful nights and a source of happiest anticipation.

The young, expectant mother must be carefully watchful lest she become absorbed in those mental distresses which ill prepare her for the most important event in her life.

Mother's Friend enables her to avoid all sensation of dread, worry or pain, and thus she is preserved in health and strength to take up the joyful task of motherhood.

You will find Mother's Friend on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle. Do not fail to use it regularly as directed. Write to-day to Bradfield Regulator Company, 135 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., for their most valuable little guide book for expectant mothers.

The Summer Garden

A Unique and Attractive Display of Summer Furniture

Second Floor—Furniture Store

You are invited to enjoy The Summer Garden of Summer Furniture that we have transformed the second floor of our Furniture Store into.

Those planning to make their homes as comfortable as possible against the warm weather will find this display their first aid.

The splendid Crex Furniture—for which we hold the exclusive agency in Atlanta—is here in great variety, chairs, rockers, tables, settees and swings, in green and the baronial brown that blends so well with mahogany and that therefore can be used after the summer season in living rooms.

—Natural finished maple chairs and rockers for porches, at $1.25 to $5.00.

—French willow furniture in green and baronial brown, upholstered richly, chairs, rockers, tables, settees and swings.

—And the new Barnegat Cedar Summer Furniture, new this season. The posts of the chairs, rockers, settees and tables are bark-covered, sweet-smelling cedar. More fitting furniture could hardly be found for the porch of a rustic summer home.

But see all the different kinds—that is your privilege here.

Make Summer Dresses With Aid of

Pneu Form

The Pneumatic Dress Form

PNEU FORM is the only Dress Form that shows you exactly as you are. It will stand for you while you study your own figure, create new designs, make alterations, change trimmings, drape or redrape last year's gown. Women who possess a Pneu Form, and who have their dressmaking done at home or at the dressmaker's, need not stand for hours, nor dress and undress forty times a day at the request, "Just let me try this once more, please."

Pneu Form is the only Dress Form in existence which will reproduce absolutely any figure. There is no guesswork about it. It duplicates your exact figure by means of an individual lining made to fit you. This lining is fitted snugly over the corset, reproducing faithfully any variation in size of shoulders or hips. Pneu Form is inflated within this lining.

If your dress fits your Pneu Form it will fit you. The air is contained in a rubber cloth bag, having the general curves, etc., of the human form.

Pneu Form is a skirt form, as the lining is made well down over the largest part of the hips, giving an exact model over which skirts may be fitted and draped. Adjustable rod gives skirt length.

It is the most helpful and satisfactory dress form we have ever seen.

Ask at the pattern counter to have it demonstrated to you.

MILITANT RIOTS GIVE BIG BOOST TO INSURANCE

LONDON, May 12.—Inquiries instituted at Lloyd's have developed the fact that the insurance companies are reaping a golden harvest as a result of suffragette depredations. Business has received a great impetus both from the insurance of golf links as well as from fire risks.

Numerous golf clubs have insured against revenue losses as the result of militant interference, while others have taken out policies insuring golf greens against damage by suffragettes. The premiums charged are $5 per green per annum, the limit of the underwriters' liability being $250 on each green.

These insurances, however, were mostly for three months, because it is believed that the trouble will be settled in that time either by a triumph of the militants or by the suppression of their campaign.

Insurance against fire has been equally brisk, but owing to the great competition in this business rates have not been affected.

Damage to Date $5,000,000.

Estimates of the financial loss caused by suffragette outrages, prepared for the Home Secretary, put the amount as $5,000,000. This sum does not include the expense of employing large numbers of extra police, detectives and watchmen to protect Ministers, public buildings and meetings.

Three detectives have been assigned to protect each Cabinet Minister at all times. All suspected persons are shadowed by plainclothes men and all public buildings are under special guard.

Since the defeat of the woman suffrage bill large numbers of former constitutional suffragists have joined the militant movement. An attack on the House of Lords is one of the new plans, and this is to be accomplished by means of a suffragette typist who could get a position on the reporting staff of the upper house.

Arrests Check Riots.

In spite of the sensational outrages of the past week and although the militants are keeping up a strong bluff, their organization has been shaken by recent arrests of leaders. The militant acts now being committed are the handiwork of suffragettes working independently, and the authorities believe that the removing of the central controlling influences will soon break up the campaign of destruction.

This optimistic view is not shared by politicians generally, who believe that as long as money is forthcoming crimes will be committed.

Militants Start Week By Burning Boat Club.

LONDON, May 12.—Another week of violence was to-day ushered in by suffragettes. Militant women burned the building of the Nottingham Boat Club, damaging a number of boats. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

The police found evidences of incendiarism. A copy of the official organ of the Women's Social and Political Union, The Suffragette, was discovered near by.

Game Warden Plans 'Transplanting' Quail

Birds Trapped Where They're Plentiful Will Be Turned Loose in Counties Where There Are Few.

He hit upon the novel scheme as a means of equalizing the distribution of partridges through the State. In some counties there are few of the birds. From others complaints are pouring into the game warden's office that quail are pulling up corn almost as rapidly as it is planted.

When he found in his mail Monday morning a letter signed by three farmers from Seville, Wilcox County, who said they had been compelled to make three plantings of corn because of voracious quail, Mr. Mercer at once dictated a letter giving them permission to trap as many as they wished.

"Trap them," he said, "and I shall take them to other parts of the State."

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

Oh, Joy! Ice Wagon Really Turns Over.

Out in West End the ice wagons which ply that thriving section for trade usually are followed about from street to street by children who are looking for small bits of the congealed moisture when chipped off by the icemen. The drivers of these wagons seem to be on the job from season to season and come to know all the children by name.

Several days ago, when the weather was rather warm, a joyous catastrophe happened on Culberson Street. One of the big wagons was on the street when the mules attached to it became frightened at a piece of paper which was fluttered about under their noses by a sudden gust of wind. The mules bolted.

Down the street they tore at breakneck speed. Then one of the wheels hit an electric wire pole and the wagon promptly turned over, breaking the wagon tongue and strewing the street with big cakes of ice. The children viewed the affair with squeals of delight. Not only had they been treated to a sure enough runaway, but here was enough ice on the ground to make their little tummies cool for a week.

So down they swooped on the wreckage. They were met by one of the icemen who politely but firmly informed the kiddies there was nothing doing. The ice, he said, still belonged to the company and he'd protect it with his life. That started something. The children surrounded him and filched bits of ice when he wasn't looking. The driver had gone to a nearby telephone to have another wagon sent out to carry off the remains of the load.

The man on guard had his hands full and realizing he was no match for the horde of youngsters, he bargained with them. Everybody got a big chunk of ice provided they'd promise to go 'way and let the rest of it alone. And the kiddies kept their promise.

Wore a Flower For Mother's Sake.

It was Mothers' Day in Atlanta, and all over the country, yesterday and lots of men wore a white flower for mother's sake. Many of the Atlanta florists anticipated a demand for flowers and laid in a big supply of white carnations.

For a long time in Atlanta men didn't like to wear flowers. The only explanation is that they might be taken for weaklings; the habit, they figured, was one for women, not men. There is one man in the city, however, who for thirty years has always worn a little buttonhole bouquet, summer and winter.

He is the confidential man for one of the big drygoods concerns and although he celebrated his seventy-seconth birthday yesterday—he is as straight and active as a man of half that age. He is passionately fond of flowers and if he were to be without his little bouttonniere it is likely that the day would seem all wrong to him. His wife has made it her special duty to see that his bouquet is ready each morning, usually placing it beside his plate at breakfast.

His bouquet yesterday was a beautiful white carnation, a little token of love for the old mother who died a good many years ago in Ireland.

"Woman's Dress Fad Makes Living High"

Professor Sargent Says Americans Adopt Grotesque Styles.

DES MOINES, IA., May 12.—"The mad pursuit of American women for the varying fads of dress and their acceptance of designs from the European fashion centers as mandates in technique of dress are directly responsible for the high cost of living in this country to-day." So declared Prof. Walter Sargent, of the school of education of the University of Chicago in an address before the convention of the Western Drawing and Manual Training Association.

"The French send dress and home art designs to America which they themselves will not accept. One does not see those grotesque styles in Paris.

"We need in America an established bureau of design."

Macon Union Depot Prospects Brighter

Central and Southern to Decide by May 27 on Joint or Separate Terminals.

Prospects are that Macon will get a union passenger station.

Officials of the Central of Georgia and the Southern Railways went over the situation at length with the Georgia Railroad Commission on Monday.

The Central submitted blue prints and terms under which it is willing to join with the Southern in building a union station.

The Southern officials asked for fifteen days in which to submit the proposal to the heads of the system in Washington. This was granted, with the proviso that if the Southern does not answer definitely on May 27, both sides shall have ready plans for individual stations.

Girl With $700,000 Will Stay at Work

BATH, N. Y., May 12.—Although Miss Helen Klecker, a pretty 17-year-old stenographer of the Curtiss Aeroplane Company, has fallen heir to a $700,000 estate, she likes her "job" so well that she is loath to quit and announced to-day that she intends to stick as long as she can.

Miss Klecker received the property, which is in New York and at Havre DeGrace, Md., from her mother's family. Her mother, who has been dead several years, was the direct descendant of a Russian who came to this country a number of years ago and accumulated a large fortune estimated at $7,000,000.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Denials that Lieutenant Governor Barrett O'Hara was a member of a party of four at the Hotel Sherman for three days in January were made to-day to the Senate's sub-committee investigating charges of immorality against the Lieutenant Governor.

Employees of the hotel told of serving drinks and food to a party of three, two women and one man, in a suit there. Members of the Chicago Press Club testified that they saw O'Hara at the club on the night of January 17 and the two subsequent nights.

ESTHETIC THIEF IN BEAUTY SHOP RAID

Mr. "Nancy" Burglar Shows a Fondness for Hair Nets, Rouge and Nail Bleach.

Ladies and Gentlemen: Permit us to introduce Mr. "Nancy" Burglar.

He is conspicuous among the crowd by his powdered face, his curled hair, rouged cheeks and manicured nails. If you see him, notify the police, as he is wanted for rifling the Bookhammer hair-dressing parlors, 71½ Whitehall Street, Sunday night.

Secures Beautifying Outfit.

One gross of hair nets; a box of eyebrow pencils; one dozen orange sticks; eight jars of cuticle ice; one dozen boxes of face powder; ten brilliant bandeaux; two bottles of brilliantine; four fancy barettes; several jars of rouge; manicure sets; cuticle knives; a gas hair-curling stove, and a large quantity of nail bleach.

Robbery Puzzles Chief.

Police Chief Beavers, when informed of the amazing robbery, scratched his head and thought for a long time.

"Now who would have thought that a thief could stoop so low as to raid a hair-dressing establishment?" he finally exclaimed in disgust. "No doubt he's going to get all 'dolled up' and parade down Peachtree Street. Will wonders never cease?"

CLERGYMAN PRAISES ECKMAN'S ALTERATIVE

People who have lung trouble are often filled with bright hopes of recovery, only to realize that improvement is but temporary. Those who had it and used Eckman's Alterative can testify to its beneficial effects. No one need doubt it—there is plenty of evidence from live witnesses. Investigate the following:

Amenia, N. Y.

"Gentlemen: On February 9, 1908, I came to Amenia, suffering with tuberculosis, that originated in a severe case of lagrippe. My physician gave me little encouragement. I was having terrible night sweats and midday chills and losing flesh rapidly, having gone from 155 to 135 pounds. I coughed and raised continually and became so weak that walking a few feet exhausted me. My father, who is a clergyman, heard of Eckman's Alterative and induced me to take it. The night sweats and chills disappeared, my cough became easier and gradually diminished and in a few days I developed an appetite, the first in months. I am now in perfect health, back to 155 pounds. I feel certain that I owe my life to Eckman's Alterative."

(Signed) E. H. COWLES.

"Gentlemen: I wish to add my indorsement to every word of his testimonial."

(Signed) REV. J. J. COWLES.
Pastor Presbyterian Church.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe throat and lung affections, bronchitis, bronchial asthma, stubborn colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drug stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

DELAY IN CHURCH UNION COUNSELED

Dr. Matthews, Northern Presbyterian Moderator, Fights Merger Move in Assemblies Here.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 12. "I do not think the question of a union of the several branches of the Presbyterian Church should be broached at this time, as our assembly is to be the guest of the Southern Presbyterians," said Dr. Mark Allison Matthews, of Seattle, Wash., moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. (Northern Division), here to-day. "We have always stood for closer co-operation, but we do not want to be indelicate and present the question when we are the guests of our Southern friends."

Dr. Matthews came here from Dalton, Ga., where he preached yesterday to a former congregation. He will go to Atlanta Wednesday.

"No doctrinal controveries whatever will come before our assembly," said Dr. Matthews. "The elect infant clause will not be an issue with us, as our doctrine is that every infant dying in infancy is saved. Our questions will be mostly administrative and constructive.

"We shall consider the increase of missionary efforts, enlarging the scope of the college work, larger endowments for colleges, ministerial relief, extension of the home mission work and establishing and building new churches.

"This year we plan to raise a $10,000,000 permanent endowment for ministerial relief, so that every aged minister of the echurch may receive at least $500 to $600 a year, and that widows and orphans of ministers may be provided for."

OVER $2,000 AN ARISTOCRAT.—"If your pay exceeds $2,000 you are an aristocrat," said Professor T. S. Adams, of the Wisconsin Tax Commission, at Madison, in discussing the proposed income tax. He would lower the tax exemption to a $2,000 limit.

$30,000,000 FIRM BARS 'CIGS.'—Clarence S. Funk, of Chicago, new president of the Rumeley Company, a reorganized $30,000,000 farm implements manufacturing concern, announced that his firm would not employ young men who had the cigarette habit.

ZANDERO AND CHRISTIE TO MEET IN 10-ROUND GO

CHICAGO, ILL., May 12.—Ernie Zanders, globe-trotting middleweight star of this city, has grabbed off a nice match at last. He clinched up a 10-round contest with Gus Christie of Milwaukee last night, the affair to be decided in the baseball park at Madison, Wis., on the night of May 20. There is to be no decision if the men are both on their feet at the finish. The weight has not yet been decided upon but probably will be 156 pounds at 3 in the afternoon. There is a big convention there at the time.

Diplomas Needed to Avoid Teachers' Test

High School Instructors Not Having Degrees Must Take Exams Under New System.

A large number of Georgia's 1,500 high school teachers are squirming uncomfortably on the anxious seat as a result of the new system of certification that will become operative with the new school year.

M. L. Brittain, State Superintendent of Schools, said Monday that many teachers were inquiring as to their status under the new regulations, which for the first time require examinations for high school teachers.

The fears of some of the teachers will be allayed by the information that the degrees from accredited institutions will be accepted in lieu of examinations. Most of the others will have to submit to tests.

3 Railroads Fined $1,300 in U. S. Court

Fines amounting to $1,300 were imposed Monday in the United States District Court on the Atlantic Coast Line and Louisville and Nashville Railway Companies, lessees of the Georgia Railroad, and the Southern Railway Company for violating the sixteen-hour and safety appliance laws.

Nineteen causes of action were included in the indictment of the Georgia Railroad lessees. The charge was that employees were forced to work more than eighteen hours. The total fine was $950.

It was shown that five Southern employees worked 22 hours. This company was fined $250.

The Atlantic Coast Line and the Louisville and Nashville were fined $100 for violating the safety appliance act.

To-morrow Brings One of Our Notable Twice-a-Year Events, The Semi-Annual

Half-Price Millinery Sale

Maybe you have been awaiting this event---well you might. It is the "Grand Prix" of all millinery sales.

Nothing Atlanta knows approximates it. The hats it offers are those accepted as fashionable this season; correct, smart in unusual ways. The greater part---about all of them---comes from the little shop, Estelle Mershon, in the very center of fastidious New York, 20 E. 46th St.

Included are

Street, Traveling and Dress Hats

Until Now $12.00 to $30.00

Now $6.00 to $15.00

Some one hundred and fifty in all---no describing them---but so varied are the shapes and trimmings that it will be like choosing from regular stock and paying just half.

Is the first spring hat beginning to look a little faded, are you going away this summer, does a newly acquired suit or dress call for a hat to match? Here are splendid affirmative answers for these questions.

The selling begins at eight o'clock when the store opens.

SENATE WILL DEMAND REAL RECIPROCITY

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Genuine reciprocity, and not the makeshift written into the Wilson-Underwood bill, Senators believe, will e demanded and insisted upon by the Senate. Majority members of the Finance Committee are now endeavoring to see just how far they may go in rewriting the sections of the House bill to make it conform to what they believe the underlying principle of all reciprocal agreements should be.

Chairman Simmons, of the Finance Committee, and Senator Hoke Smith, one of the most influential members of the committee, have expressed their adherence to the doctrine of reciprocity.

Both have said they hoped the bill when it became a law would provide machinery that would enable the President to negotiate reciprocity agreements and that rates would be so arranged that the President would have an effective weapon at his command to compel concessions. The details of whatever plans they may have in mind have not been worked out.

Many Amendments Certain.

Every majority member of the committee has stated amendments to the bill and that in many items the rates will be increased.

The methods of procedure of the Senate Committee and the House differ radically.

Senator Kern, majority leader, moved last week that when the Senate adjourn it be until next Tuesday afternoon. This prevailed, and at the very threshold of debate on the tariff, by Democratic votes, a delay of three days was ordered in the face of the demand of President Wilson that not a moment be lost in rushing through the bill in the Senate.

In the Senate the Democrats are taking into consideration the difference on the cost of production here and abroad in fixing their rates. A number of articles that have been put on the free list will be shifted back to the dutiable, and a few articles made dutiable in the House will be made free. Dye stuffs and pigments are notable instances of the differences between the two houses.

The rates on high grade cotton are to be raised and a new classification arranged.

Window and plate glass as fixed by the House are deemed to be too low and will be raised.

All these changes afford opportunity of subsequent reductions under reciprocal trade agreements in line with the real Democratic tariff idea.

Senator Smith, of Michigan, bases caustic criticisms on the sugar schedule, the manufacture of beef sugar being a great industry of his State.

"After the trust has run its competitors out of business, as they will under this law," says Mr. Smith, "and competition no longer exist, the price of sugar will be increased to what it was before beet sugar was discovered. If you intend to withdraw from circulation all the money invested in sugar production and turn it over to foreigners, it ought to be done in the open. Give the people a chance to be heard, and do not do this in the dark and gloom of a secret chamber."

Can't Lose "Wilson."

Senator Smith says it is singular that all the Democratic tariff bills looking to free trade bore the name of Wilson.

"I saw Bryan help carry William L. Wilson on his shoulder from the house on the day of his 'great triumph.' It was not very long before these same shoulders carried a weight so heavy that it has taken twenty years to regain the confidence of the people.

"I don't believe that prosperity can continue under this law. In your hearts you don't believe it or you would not be so worried as you are. It was faith in your promised good works that put you in power.

"If this question were to be submitted to the people to-day you would be repudiated and thrown from office. The American people are not for free trade, and that's what you are endeavoring to force upon them."

The fight to order public hearings will come up again Tuesday.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Are You a Mason?" at Atlanta.

This week's offering at the Atlanta Theater by the Miss Billy Long Company, "Are You a Mason?" will be given its first performance at a matinee this afternoon. The management has decided to have three matinees a week—Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. "Are You a Mason?" is a farce and is said to be very funny. It was adapted from the German and the plot is a complicated one, giving abundant opportunity for amusing situations.

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

Paul Dickey, the famous football star, heads this week's bill of Keith vaudeville at the Forsyth. Other numbers are the Apollo Trio, that pose as bronze statues; Billy K. Wells, character comedian; Clarence Wilbur and the Sunny Folks in a school-room sketch; Newhoff and Phels, in new comedy idea; Mayo and Allman, singers; Macleavy's Marvel, jumper, and motion pictures. Matinee this afternoon.

Family Vaudeville at Bijou.

Four acts of family vaudeville and worth-while motion pictures make up the bill this week at the Bijou. The Four Wilhats, novelty bicycle and auto act, is the headliner. Novelty is the keynote of the bill. Two matinees to-day: 2:30 and 4.

FROST HITS PENNSYLVANIA.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., May 12.—The worst frost of several years was experienced in this section last night. The damage is estimated in the hundreds of thousands.

Police Hold Mob Bent on Lynching

Members of the County Police Department are Monday congratulating Lieutenant J. M. Carroll and Policemen J. W. Williams and L. W. Allen on their escape from a mob of 200 negroes, who Sunday afternoon threatened their lives when they refused to hand over Doc Burnett, the negro slayer of a fifteen-year-old colored boy, Charlie Simon. The mob was bent on lynching Burnett.

The mob approached the officers on the Marietta Road as they were waiting for a street car to take their prisoner to the Tower.

"We are going to get that nigger even if we have to kill you," the leaders shouted to Lieutenant Carroll. "He stabbed Simon in cold blood and we are going to string him up."

The officers drew their revolvers and took their positions ready to fight to a finish. The negroes retired.

Burnett, in the Tower, later declared the trouble had been caused by an argument about a girl. Eyewitnesses, though, declared Burnett drew a knife and stabbed the boy without provocation. He died before medical aid could reach him.

Thousands Observe Mothers' Day Here

"Mothers' Day" has passed and the world has resumed the burden of life. However, following the celebration people are finding the load not half so heavy as before it.

Thousands of white flowers apeared on the streets of Atlanta Sunday. Florists report an enormous sale of carnations and roses, the emblems worn by the celebrants.

Returns from the contribution boxes placed in hotel lobbies and other public places show generous donations for the benefit of the Home for Old Women. Thrones attended the churches and heard sermons and music appropriate for the occasion.

Dispatches from all over the United States declare that the day had been the most successful in the history of "Mothers' Day" celebration.

Called From Bride By 'Irritable Papa'

NEW YORK, May 12.—A cablegram from the bridegroom's father containing the word "scoundrel" caused Theodore Gonzales, of San Jose, Costa Rica, to part from his bride of a few hours, who was Miss Maxine Seagrave, of Toronto, after they had boarded the steamer Carrillo for a honeymoon trip to Central America.

Gonzales explained to his bride that his father was irritable at times; in fact, he had once killed a man when irritated, and the young man thought it best that he go to Port Limon alone and meet his father.

STELZLE URGES RECREATION TO KEEP OUT VICE

Commission Is Recommended to Provide Wholesome Amusement for the Masses in Atlanta.

Dr. Charles Stelzle, of New York, who will be one of the big figures in the Presbyterian assemblies, and who organized the work of the Men and Religion Forward Movement in Atlanta, declared Monday there is a vast difference in the moral tone of the Atlanta to-day and the Atlanta of a year ago. But he insisted that reform go further—that the city name a recreation commission to provide amusements to take the place of harmful forms of recreation, recognized as contributory to vice conditions.

Dr. Stelzle said he did not wish to detract in the slightest measure from the great work already accomplished, but he explained that the city would be most safe from a recurrence of vice evils if it provides wholesome amusements.

"I am amazed at the results of the work," declared Dr. Stelzle. "From my observations during the few days that I have been in the city, I do not hesitate to say Atlanta is now one of the most moral cities in the South, and will rank, morally, with any city in the United States.

"A year ago vice flourished in the city and the street crowds reflected its influences. The change is apparent to even the most casual observer. Morality is in the air in Atlanta and the moral atmosphere of the city is infinitely better."

Though gratified that the movement which he organized should have been so successful in ridding Atlanta of vice, Dr. Stelzle declared the city could not continue to be morally clean unless present conditions are made more attractive to the average man. Clean, wholesome recreation he declared to be the best solution of the problem.

"I would suggest the appointment of a recreation commission," he said. "This commission shoud be composed of men who have given some study to the amusement needs of the city. This commission could call in outside recreation experts to its conferences and get the benefits of the work that has been done in other cities.

"Atlanta seems to be lacking in opportunities for the amusement of the average person, especially on Sunday. The opportunities that are here could, however, be enlarged and made more attractive. For instance, the Auditorium should be a rallying place every Sunday afternoon for several thousand people. The recitals and programs given there should be thoroughly advertised and the people should be urged to attend.

Phone Report Inconclusive.

VALDOSTA.—The committee from the Valdosta Chamber of Commerce which went to Atlanta to investigate the claims of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company relative to an increase in telephone rates here has returned and has made an inconclusive report.

Quick Thinking Wins

At a dinner not long ago Thomas W. Lawson was talking on the subject of success.

"Success in finance," said Mr. Lawson, "is due in a great measure to prompt action. The doubting, hesitating, Hamlet type of man had best keep out of finance. He is quite sure to be swamped."

The World of Society

The largest affair of Monday was the bridge given by Miss Laura Ansley at her home in Ansley Park. Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York, who has been tendered a series of parties as Miss Helen Dargan's guest, was the honoree, and invited to meet her were Misses Helen Dargan, Mary Helen Moody, Annie Lee McKenzie, Emily Winship, Jennie D. Harris, Ruth Stallings, Caroline Muse, Isabel Kuhrt, Carolyn King, Flora Bewick, Esther Smith, Passie May Ottley, Marjorie Brown, Harriet Calhoun, Katherine Ellis, Margaret Hawkins, Emma Kate Amorous, Helen Hawkins, Charles Owens, Elizabeth High, Constance Knowles and her guest, Mrs. Echols, of Virginia; Kathryn Gordon, Marion Goldsmith, Hildreth Burton-Smith, Mary Butler and her guest, Agnes Jones, of Albany; Sara Rawson, Aurelia Speer, Frances Ansley, Mamie Ansley, Mrs. Bates Block and her guests, Misses Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Caroline Scott, of Arkansas; Lula Dean Jones, Mrs. Robert Woodruff, Mrs. Forrest Adair, Jr., and Mrs. John J. Woodside, Jr.

The card tables were placed in the drawing room, the library and the sun parlor, where the decorations were of pink and white sweetpeas, pink peonies and garden roses. The prize for top score was a friendship circle of gold, the consolation a collar and cuff set, and the honor guest was given a silver traveling cup.

For Mrs. Dillard.

Miss Annie May Hardin gave a theater party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon for Mrs. James Spotswood Dillard, of Lynchburg, Va., who is visiting Mrs. Clarence Wickersham, in College Park. Her guests included Mrs. Dillard, Mrs. Wickersham, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Mrs. I. C. McCrory, Mrs. Alfred Murrell, and Mrs. J. B. Hardin.

Festival Postponed.

Owing to the weather, the ice cream festival which was to have been given Tuesday afternoon and night by the Ladies' Guild on the lawn of the Church of the Holy Comforter has been postponed until Friday.

At the Driving Club.

Mrs. James Hook Spratling, of Macon, was with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Collier. Miss Robyn Young, of Washington, D. C., was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. William A. Wimbish. Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York, Miss Helen Dargan's guest, was the central figure in a small party. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Smith Pickett, Judge and Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, Misses Annie Lee McKenzie, May Atkinson, Marion Achison, Messrs. Charles Sciple, Milton Dargan, Jr., Dozier Lowndes, Madison Bell, Hugh Adams and Charles Ryan.

At the dinner-dance Saturday evening one of the largest parties was that of 30 covers given by Dr. and Mrs. Bates Block for their guests, Misses Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Caroline Scott, of Arkansas. Three large silver loving cups, filled with white sweetpeas, adorned the table, with a corsage bouquet at each girl's place and boutennier of the same flowers at each man's place. LILLIAN RUSSELL IS A FOE TO DRINK

NEW YORK, May 12.—At last Lillian Russell has answered the question of how she retains her youth and beauty. Miss Russell says: "Alcohol is death to the beauty of mind, body and soul."

Miss Russell's lines in her monologue in regard to drink are such a hit that she says if she could she would like to go out and do nothing but preach temperance while she is on the stage.

"I never have drunk anything stronger than a little Madeira, the lightest of wines, and I have given that up," she says. "People regard it as remarkable that I have kept my good looks and my youth. You can't keep your health unless you live in harmony with nature.

"Most women need exercise, nourishing food and a proper amount of sleep. People who stay up until all hours do not get the proper amount of sleep, nor do they get it at the right time. I have always loathed champagne and other strong drinks and fought against the cultivation of a taste for liquor.

"Girls who refuse to touch liquor get along. Those who begin with light drinks finally cultivate appetites for whiskey and wine, and are pitiable things to behold."

"The cancer death rate in the United States is increasing at the rate of 2½ per cent a year, and a corresponding increase is occurring practically throughout the world. The average age at death in cancer of all forms is 59 years—60.4 years for men and 58.2 for women. Of the total mortality from cancer 90 per cent of the victims are forty years old or more."—Frederick J. Hoffman, statistician of one of America's biggest insurance companies.

"The American college of to-day is between the upper and nether millstones. The German-American university has now become the home of scholarship and research. If the American college is to repeat in the twentieth century the inestimable service it rendered to American civilization in the nineteenth century it must recognize the dawn of a new era. Let the typical graduate be trained not only in scholarships and culture, but how to loaf wisely."—Henry Louis Smith, president of Washington and Lee University.

"In my judgment everything which occurs in court should be open to public hearing. The fact that an action for divorce is pending should be given the widest publicity to prevent fraud and injury to those who are innocent. I do not think, however, that the loathsome details—more humiliating generally to the innocent than guilty—should be published."—Justice Guy of the New York State Supreme Court.

"I feel as if I am making a twentieth century flight into another world. Comparisons are impossible; it will take me some time to get my breath. What a lot Europe might learn from wondrous America! But then one must consider; it is much easier to build up a new country than to change an old one."—C. de Bruyne, an Alderman of Ghent, Belgium, who is visiting New York.

WASHINGTON ATTRACTS EUROPE AS ART CENTER

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Washington's advancement as an art center has brought it to the attention of Europe strongly in the past few years, according to Seymour J. Thurber, a collector of Chicago. The masterpieces of the Old World adorn Washington salons, and the capital now is considered one of the most prominent art markets, he says.

'Private John' Allen Explains His Title

Cited War Record(Too, When Political Opponent, a General, Asked Veterans' Vote in Campaign.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Private John Allen, who for many years represented Mississippi in the House, has explained how he got his title. He declared that when he first was a candidate for Congress he was opposed for nomination by a Confederate general.

The general and he addressed a crowd at a town around which a battle of the war had been fought. The general told how he had fought and won that engagement and appealed for votes on that score.

Allen then spoke and declared he, too, had fought there, but as a private. He added that after the battle he had stood sentinel while the general slept. He asked that all generals vote for his opponent and all privates for him. They did so.

Benefit of "Going Straight" Told by One Who Admits "Going Wrong."

NEW YORK, May 12.—Robert L. Lawrence, formerly a bank messenger, was brought here from Los Angeles, Cal., charged with stealing $1,400. On his trip across the continent he wrote the following:

If you want a red nose and dim, bleary eyes,
If you wish to be one whom all men despise,
If you wish to be ragged and weary, and sad,
If you wish, in a word, to go to the bad—
Go wrong.

If your tastes don't agree with the "ifs" as above,
If you'd rather have life full of brightness and love,
If you care not to venture or find out too soon
That the gateway to hell lies through the tombs—
Go straight.

DRIVERS BEGIN PRACTICE FOR CLIMB OF HILL

NEXT Saturday afternoon the old Stewart Avenue hill will again become a scene of lively interest when the big, powerful stripped cars tear up the mile long incline in daring attempts to lower the records set last year by L. S. Crane's Pope-Hartford and George Hanson's Studebakers.

All the latter part of this week the course will be alive with contestants on practice sprints, for the Board of County Commissioners have allowed the Automobile Association to have exclusive use of the hill on the days of May 14, 15, 16 between the hours of one and three. This generous arrangement will allow ample time for tuning up of cars and motorcycles and give the drivers an opportunity to become familiar with the road.

Entries for the contest are coming in at a rapid rate and from present indications the second annual hill climb of the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory Association will eclipse all former events.

Entries to Date.

L. S. Crane—Pope-Hartford, "Betsy."
Studebaker Co.—Three cars.
Travis & Jones—Columbia.
Johnson Co.—Stoddard-Dayton.
Atlanta Auto Sales Co.—National.
W. J. Stoddard—Lion.
Harold McKenzie—Knight Special.
Ellis Car Co., Greenville, S. C.—(Name of car not given.)
I. O. Toasley, Alpharetta—Ford.
T. B. Goodloe—Locomobile.
Stearns Co.—Stearns.

This list will be swelled to about three times the number by the closing time for entries. Secretary Elleby, of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., is receiving all applications.

Handsome Prizes Offered.

In addition to the association cup and the E. Rivers Realty cup, donations have been received that will make an attractive array of trophies. Following is the list.

Prizes and cups in automobile events have been donated as follows:
Atlanta Constitution—Silver cup.

Fighter, With Stiff Punch, Passes Scrapper of To-day a Scientist

By H. M. Walker.

The "killer" has disappeared along with the lightning rod, horse car and Republican vote. In his place we have the clever boxer, scientific, but punchless, remarkably fast on his feet, but over careful with his hands.

When Ad Wolgast hit the derailing switch he left the lightweight title in the hands of a young man with but five "K's" in his whole record. And this young man, since having the championship wished on him, has done nothing but take a daily decision over a T-bone steak, and practice the toe dance.

It's the same way all along the line, from the bantam babes to the bull neck heavies. The present day boxer is light on his feet, runs well both backward and forward, is kind and considerate with his opponents, and will fight if forced—perhaps.

* * *

WHEN it comes to playing a good stiff game of tag, our bantams have the world by the windpipe.

Three more clever boxers than Johnnie Coulon, the fight fear champion, and his two trailers, Johnnie Williams and Eddie Campi, never borrowed bathrobes.

* * *

THESE boys make the hummingbird look like a barnyard duck for speed, but if they had to win their fights with one punch they would be to the fight game what the Yankees are to the American League.

* * *

FEATHERWEIGHTS Johnnie Kilbane and Johnnie Dundee gave us twenty rounds of fast and furious waltzing. Had they been using palm leaf fans instead of decorative gloves the Vernon pavilion would have been blown over into Arizona.

After watching this exhibition I believe that it is no more than right that Kilbane should be credited with originating the "Swat-the-fly" idea.

Dundee claims to carry a knockout shot but from what we have seen of the little banana tamer he is badly in need of target practice.

* * *

WILLIE RITCHIE accuses himself of being the lightweight champion of the world. A careful search of his record shows the San Francisco lad to possess the punch of a paralytic. In forty ring engagements he has floored but five, stopping such terribles as Monk Enochs, Kid French, Tony Josephs, Tommy McFarland and Yankee Schwartz.

Freddie Welsh totes the lightweight championship titles of both England and Australia, but his system is perfectly free of the knockout stuff. Frederick can't "Yankee Doodle" on an opponent's ribs and jab him on the nose three hundred and sixty-four times to the round without letting the other fellow know that he is in trouble.

And there's Packey McFarland, our 138-pound "lightweight." With the benefit of his extra poundage Packy is unable to break into the knockout column. He's fast, clever and has a beautiful baritone voice.

We have hope for the 133-pound division, though. Joe Rivers is great on the marble slab thing, and Leach Cross has both the punch and the control to put it over the plate. "Buck" Anderson, at present in the squab stage, can win with one slam and he doesn't require over six inches of space to work in.

THE welters and middleweights—why dig up the dead?

New Trainer of Cubs Never Saw Ball Game

President Murphy Tells of Meeting Between Dr. Frederick Alex Hart and Evers.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Dr. Frederick Axel Hart, new trainer of the Cubs, never saw a ball game, according to President Charles W. Murphy, but has an unbroken record of successes in handling athletes since he left an institute in Stockholm, Sweden. This is Murphy's version of the meeting of Manager John Evers and the trainer:

Evers—Ever play ball?

Hart—I never saw a game, but I can perform an operation for appendicitis.

Evers—So can I. But the patient would die.

Hart succeeds Doc Semmens, who severed his connection with the Cubs the same day he struck Manager Evers.

GRIFFIN SUCCEEDS WEBER AS AMERICUS MANAGER

AMERICUS, GA., May 12.—The Americus ball team left yesterday for Waycross in charge of First Baseman Hal Griffin as temporary manager. Thoroughly tired of continued defeat sustained by the Americus aggregation, the directors met this morning and relieved Manager Harry Weber of that office, temporarily at least, putting Griffin in charge.

Americus has lost seven of the nine games played already, and while Manager Weber ascribes defeat to bad luck, local fans are less charitably inclined. It is generally suspected here that the salary limit rule is not being observed by all of the clubs of the league, and as Americus is living within the salary limits she is placed at disadvantage in employment of proficient players.

Ill luck of the Americus team recently has caused interest in baseball to flag perceptibly, although a winning streak would quickly restore enthusiasm.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 12.—After the first week of the invasion of the East by the Western clubs of the National League, one thing is very apparent. The East, as a whole, is stronger than the West this year, but that does not necessarily indicate the pennant winner will be a product of the East.

At first, it was thought there would be only two clubs in the East that could put up any kind of a front against the Western teams which were rated to be strong. These two were New York and Philadelphia, but now Brooklyn has come through with the best-looking team that has been developed in years across the bridge. Boston is also playing good enough ball.

* * *

I WANT to pause for a minute to discuss Boston and Pittsburg. Behind the Beaneaters this year is a shrewd manager, one who is building. "Chief" Stallings is picking up all the likely ball players he can find around loose, and then sorting them out as they come. He is constructing; and out of the twisted mass of baseball junk which he took over at the beginning of the season, he is going to have a smooth-running machine soon. The Boston club, although many good hitters have resided on the team from time to time, has long been the victim of its own sluggishness. Stallings is trying to add a little speed to his club. He realizes its value. With this notion in mind, he went out and signed Mann to play in the outfield. Stallings thinks the boy will make a great ball player if given time.

"He's the fastest man in baseball," the "Chief" told us when we were in Boston in the early part of the season, and he wasn't punning on the name, either.

* * *

STALLINGS has also picked up "Dick" Rudolph, the pitcher of the International League, and once a member of the Giants for a brief period. Rudolph will win a lot of games for Stallings. Then there is a different spirit manifested by the club now, which is a reflection of the Stallings style. When the game gets hard, the boys do not abandon the pursuit of victory and blow up as former Boston teams did. No, sir. It is in there fighting, as proved by the fact they took two extra inning games from the Pirates last week, with Wagner in both battles.

* * *

ABOUT the Pittsburg club, I do not know what to say. I have not seen the team play this year so far, but from the gossip in the league and the box scores, it is evident that the club is all off its balance. The return of Wagner is going to help the team a whole lot, but Clarke's greatest disappointment is the failure of his pitchers to come through. Before the season, the Pittsburg pitching staff was regarded as one of the best in the league, if not the very best, both by the players themselves and by the newspaper writers who follow the teams. Many times ball players will approve a man whom the general public and the writers cannot see. For instance, Fletcher, formerly the shortstop of the Giants, was generally rated more highly by ball players than by the general public and writers. They know his ground-covering ability, and he has the finest pair of hands I ever saw on a ball player.

* * *

BUT, to return to the Pittsburg staff, Hendrix, who led the league last year; Adams, Robinson, O'Toole and Camnitz sound like a collection of world beaters. You'd think it would only be necessary to have one of those names announced as the Pittsburg pitcher, and the game would be over. Not one of these men has been going smoothly this year. Hendrix has been wild, and O'Toole has been wild, and the staff has been generally out of shape. O'Toole is back at his old job of losing games by one run. I guess he holds the record for this jointly with "Nap" Rucker.

* * *

THE Pirates were rated as a great slugging team before the season. It was on the peerless pitching and slambang slugging they were to ride through the league to an early pennant, because even the members of the club themselves concede that the team lacks speed. But the pitchers would hold the opposing teams to one or two runs, and the Pittsburg boys would pile up many with their bats, and there would be a nice little ball game for Mr. Clarke all wrapped up in cotton batting and tin foil to be put in the moth balls. However, the pitchers have been permitting many runs, and the batters have not been slugging; and the race is not destroyed yet.

"The Pirates condition slowly. Wait until the warm weather sets in," a Pittsburg rooter whispered into my ear the other day.

It will do the team little good to round into form along in September. It is my honest opinion that the club is going to get on the move one of these days and kick up a lot of dust. It yet will be a trouble-maker in the league, because those pitchers are sure to begin to twirl and the batters to hit. Therefore, it pleases the Giants immensely to see the Pirates crowded down as far as possible at this stage, especially as we are not up any too high in the ladder of the club standing ourselves.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Gunboat Smith stops at nothing. Word was received from San Francisco last night that Smith sent Jim Jeffries the following telegram: "Do you want to come up North and act as my sparring partner? Answer immediately."

* * *

Smith is training for his match with Jess Willard, which will be fought in San Francisco on May 17. The winner will probably be matched to box Luther McCarty for the white heavyweight championship of the world on July 4.

* * *

Willard has engaged five sparring partners, while Smith up to date has only the veteran, Bob Armstrong to work with.

* * *

Buck Crouse and Blink McCloskey will clash in a six-round battle at Pittsburg May 19. Articles were signed yesterday.

* * *

Matty McCue and Jeff O'Connell are rounding into great shape for their ten-round scrap at Racine, Wis., Thursday night. Both boys are training for the bout in Chicago. Joe Sullivan, manager of O'Connell, writes that his protege is in the best shape of his life and is sure to cop the long end of the purse.

* * *

Pittsburg is after a bout between Bat Nelson and Ray Parker. Parks is a rough, rugged fellow and has been defeating all his opponents in decisive fashion.

* * *

* * *

Kid Young is a frequent visitor at George Gaelelis' shoe shining parlors. Young is busy telling the various fight fans what he will do to the next boy who musters up enough courage to meet him in the roped arena.

* * *

Illinois boxing fans are clamoring louder than ever for a boxing bill. Recently Mayor Harrison, Barrett O'Hara and other officials witnessed several sparring exhibitions at Springfield and were loud in their praise for the manly art.

* * *

Nate Lewis, manager of Charlie White, writes from Chicago that his protege is getting into fine shape for his return match with Joe Thomas at New Orleans, May 19. Lewis says White is sure to beat Thomas again. White will go after Jack Britton if he succeeds in defeating Thomas.

Fight Referee Usually Correct Floto Defends Charley Eyton

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, May 12.—Voicing their opinions. That's the privilege of every gathering where boxing bouts are decided. Yet how often have we found the great majority in error while taking issue with the judge who renders the decision. Many and many a time have I seen the third man in the ring absolutely correct in his judgment, and yet the crowd howled its disapproval. Then also have I seen the referee quite wrong and the crowd give him great applause for the verdict. It's all the way you look at it; it's the angle from which you view the contest.

And yet with it all I'll wager that the man in the ring is more often correct than the crowd seated about the arena. The official in the inclosure is generally one supposed to know the game, the tricks, advantages that score points and everything else that becomes necessary to make him a fair and impartial judge. For that reason he is better able to reach a correct verdict than the outsider, who comes only on occasions to view the fights, and who nine times out of ten is prejudiced. Of course, when an incompetent man officiates, then our argument is dashed to the ground—we are left without a leg to stand upon.

HOW many times have you sat at the ringside when one man's friends seemed in the majority? You've seen this favorite beaten a mile, and yet the referee, for fear of adverse criticism, either calls the bout a "draw" or awards the decision to the man whose friends are shouting for him and yet who failed to win. I've seen this occur time and again, and so have you.

Just now Charley Eyton of Los Angeles is being "panned" for calling the Dundee-Kilbane bout a draw. The press reports tell us that the verdict was unpopular and that Kilbane won. Perhaps so. But we have always found Eyton quite correct in his decisions. For years he has officiated in Los Angeles, and no complaint has been heard. He may have erred this time for all we know. But wait until the smoke of battle clears away and you'll find that his verdict wasn't so far amiss. That, at any rate, is my guess.

* * *

IF the verdict was not in accordance with the facts, then Kilbane has but himself to blame. His stalling tactics are quite unbecoming for a champion and have got him in bad in the East until his last fight, when he redeemed himself with a knockout and regain some of his standing. A champion is supposed to carry the brunt of the battle. If he allows his opponent to assume the aggressive from start to finish, how can he hope to gain the favor of the referee? Isn't the fellow who rushes the battle and makes it possible for the spectators to see real action entitled to something?

OVER HALF OF SHRINE VOTE PLEDGED TO ATLANTA

Contestants for 1914 Convention Have Narrowed Down to This City and Memphis.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

DALLAS, TEXAS, May 12.—Atlanta now claims, as pledged, 250 of the 460 votes in the Imperial Council for the 1914 meeting place. Memphis still is alive and the fight has seemingly narrowed down to the two cities. If Atlanta should lose the committee's recommendation the Georgians will carry the fight to the convention floor.

Potentate Forrest Adair declares it is all over but the shouting. "Atlanta will be the Shrine Mecca in 1914, unless I am very badly mistaken," he said.

The first cheering news received by Atlanta when the delegation arrived Sunday morning was that the seventeen votes of Texas are "sewed up" for Georgia. Then followed Oklahoma, New York, Pennsylvania, Oregon, British Columbia and Honolulu to the Georgia standard.

Memphis, however, still is a menace to Atlanta's chances. The Tennesseeans claim that they were first in the field for the meeting, and they are using this argument constantly.

Memphis' tactics may result in a dark horse selection. The committee on the next meeting place will make its selection Tuesday and inform the Imperial Council of its action either Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning.

Make Big Noise for Atlanta.

If there is anybody in Dallas who does not know that Yaarab Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, is here, and has come to bring the Imperial Council to Atlanta in 1914, he must be deaf, dumb and blind.

The campaign on behalf of Atlanta was started the very minute Illustrious Potentate Forrest Adair stepped off the train in this town, the head and front of the most enthusiastic and determined delegation that ever went out of Atlanta after something the town wanted or needed in its business.

To be sure, the immediate thing in hand is the session of the Imperial Council now on in Dallas, but the first thing an Atlanta delegate says to a brother Noble, after making himself known, is "How about this Imperial Council thing for Atlanta next year?"

Atlanta Best Advertised.

Far and away the best advertised bidder for the honor of entertaining the Shrine next year is Atlanta. The fame of the Yaarab Temple has been perfectly secure in Shrinedom for many moons, and there isn't a visiting Shriner in this Texas metropolis who hasn't heard of that great "Atlanta spirit," and the amazing things it has accomplished heretofore.

There is a feeling in the atmosphere that everything is about over, so far as next year's session is concerned, except the hurrahing for and congratulating of Atlanta.

Still, nobody is resting. There will be no sort of let up, not so much as a hint of it, until after the vote has been taken in the Imperial Council, and Atlanta officially declared the winner.

Forrest Adair's Nobles have undertaken to convince the Shriners of two things. First, that Atlanta wants the Imperial Council to be its guest next year, sincerely and earnestly, and second, that Atlanta can and will entertain and take care of the gathering most handsomely.

"We have convinced them that we have the hotel accommodations," said Mr. Adair to me to-day. "That seems to be the only thing that ever has gotten on anybody's nerves with respect to Atlanta's chances of getting the meeting next year.

"There is no difficulty in convincing people that Atlanta is a fine place to visit at any time and for any purpose. Everybody has heard of Atlanta, and knows it is a great city. The very term 'the Atlanta spirit' comes readily to the lips of people living many miles away. Some few have wondered, however, if a city the size of Atlanta can take care of the Imperial Council, and the big influx of visitors it brings into a city always.

"When I show them that we are prepared to take care of 60,000 visitors in first class shape, however they get away from the hotel doors in a hurry. The crowds attending the Imperial Council gatherings generally run around forty thousand.

"I hope the folks back home understand how enthusiastic our bunch is. We have come here to land the next year's meeting, and we are going to land it. You wire the Georgian that I say we are coming home with the bacon."

Working in Pairs.

It is herewith wired.
And I believe it.
Certainly there isn't a man in this outfit that isn't rooting and boosting to beat the band for the Atlanta meeting next year. Generally, the delegation works in pairs. In this fashion, they scatter all over Dallas, and stop to orate wherever a bunch of Shriners can be located.

The big guns of the Imperial Council have had Atlanta and 1914 drummed into their heads ever since they came to town.

The conviction is deepening every minute that Atlanta is to win out. Forrest Adair already has outlined a real, sure enough Georgia barbecue and a lot of other things as inducements to visitors to go to Atlanta next year.

From all quarters, I hear nothing but praise of Atlanta and its pluck in raising approximately $100,000 in twelve hours for the Imperial Council's entertainment in 1914.

U. S. to Prosecute Firms Cutting Pay As Tariff Revenge

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The criminal clauses of the Sherman anti-trust act and the prosecuting powers of the Department of Justice will be used in defense of the reductions in duty prescribed by the Underwood tariff bill.

If combinations are found among employers to restrain trade and intimidate Congress by cutting wages and closing factory doors, criminal suits will be instituted.

This is the frank intimation to-day of Senator John Sharp Williams, of the Senate Finance Committee.

"The protected interests are coming to us with the same old plea that they are threatened with ruin," said Senator Williams. "They threaten to cut wages or assert that it will be necessary to cut them. This is plainly intended to intimidate Congress. If it should be discovered the interests are combining to this purpose, the Sherman anti-trust act is sufficiently broad to cover such acts, and we may land some of these gentlemen behind the bars."

Four Taggers 'Jailed' Just for Five Minutes

Locked In by Mistake, They Try to Get Prisoners to Contribute.

Four charming Atlanta taggers had their first experience behind prison bars Monday. They were not really under arrest, but they were locked in the cell room at police headquarters and couldn't have escaped if they had wanted to.

Mrs. Gilbert Frazer, Miss Anna Green, Miss Mary Dorman and Miss Dorothy Fleischman were the prisoners for five minutes. Then they sought to tag the prisoners.

The turnkey was called out to search a prisoner and he locked the door after him leaving the taggers behind him.

"Girls, we're prisoners," cried Mrs. Frazer just a wee bit startled as the locked iron door barred their progress.

Several of the real prisoners chuckled. The turnkey returned in time to save the day.

"We had decided to appeal for a habeus corpus, whatever that is," he was told as he released the quartette.

Mayor Declares He Earns Pay Watching Council Politicians

Makes Hot Reply to New Attack by Thomson—Breach Continues to Grow.

"If I did nothing more than watch the Council I would more than earn my salary," declared Mayor Woodward Monday in answer to Albert Thomson's charge that the Mayor's office had become a nonenity in the city government.

"As a matter of fact," continued Mr. Woodward, "the charges are not worth the waste of breath in answering them, still I want to assure the people of Atlanta that I have my hands full watching the politicians, and I am going to continue to watch them and their activities."

Councilman Thomson's attack on the Mayor, the second he has made within a fortnight, has been much more discussed than his first, because it follows Council's vindication of the officials accused of graft.

Politicians assert that the breach between the Mayor and a number of the Councilmen is beyond hope of reunion.

Rich Stock Trader Wounds Assailant

MOULTRIE, Ga., May 12.—W. P. Brown was shot and seriously wounded this afternoon in an altercation with Joseph J. Battle, one of the wealthiest live stock men of the state. The shooting took place at Battle's stable. According to an eyewitness Brown went to the stable and accused Battle of stealing from him, and after applying a vile epithet, struck Battle several hard blows. Then Battle drew his pistol and firel.

Recently Battle prosecuted and convicted Brown, for removing from the state property to which he did not hold legal title. Brown is now out under bond, pending a hearing for a new trial.

Battle has not been arrested.

To Decide if Poison May Be Put in Food

Supreme Court Will Determine Case Where Mills Bleached Flour by Chemical Process.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Assistant Attorney General Adkins, of the Department of Justice, filed a writ of certiorari in the Supreme Court today asking a review of the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit in the "bleached flour case." The question involved is whether the food and drugs act prohibit the addition of poisonous ingredients in any quantity to an article of food, or whether poison may be added in the discretion of manufacturers if the quantity added is so small it is not injurious to health.

State Wins Point in Railway Tax Fight

Attorney General Obtains Order for Review in Supreme Court of Georgia Lease Case.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 12.—The state of Georgia won a point over the railroads Monday when Attorney General Thomas S. Felder obtained from the supreme court an order for a review of a decision that the Atlantic Coast Line and the Louisville and Nashville Railroad were not to be taxed on property leased for 99 years from the Georgia Railroad.

Comptroller General William A. Wright, of Georgia, by his issuance of tax executions against the two railroads precipitated the case several months ago. The roads procured an injunction and the state carried the case to the circuit court of appeals.

BURNS CALLED INTO PHAGAN MYSTERY; ON WAY FROM EUROPE

Famous American Detective Cables He Will Return Immediately In Response to Col. Felder's Plea For His Services to Capture Slayer.

William J. Burns, the world-famed detective, probably will take charge of the Phagan case.

The man who unearthed the dynamite outrages and brought the McNamara brothers to justice, will in all probability come to Atlanta within the next few days and lend his efforts toward clearing up the mystery of the death by strangulation of Mary Phagan.

This information was made public Monday following correspondence between Colonel Thomas B. Felder and Mr. Burns since the discovery of the body in the pencil factory.

Mr. Burns is now on his way from Europe, and will arrive on Tuesday or the following day. Upon his arrival in New York he will confer with detectives there and then proceed to Atlanta.

Credit Largely Due Felder.

The services of Mr. Burns have been secured largely through Mr. Felder's efforts, it has developed. Upon Mr. Felder's retention by the citizens of Marietta and relatives of the slain girl to work on the case he journeyed to New York for a conference with Raymond Burns, son of William J. Burns, on the case with a view to getting the great detective to come here.

At that time the elder Burns was in Europe investigating the disappearance of Wilberforce Martin, and upon being cabled of Mr. Felder's desires replied that he would return immediately.

Monday it was announced that Burns was on his way to America and that Colonel Felder would take up the Phagan case with him. Felder, it is understood, will give up his own fee to employ Burns and will assist in raising funds for the purpose.

Mr. Burns' warm personal friendship for Mr. Felder has served in a large measure to draw the wizard into the local mystery investigation. The history of their acquaintance leads back to the South Carolina dispensary graft case, which Mr. Felder prosecuted and on which the detective was employed. It was there the two met.

When the Phagan murder was committed and its baffling details confronted Atlanta police, Mr. Felder lost no time in communicating with his friend. That the man who has struck terror to the hearts of criminals by his marvelous knowledge of their ways and his wonderful deductive powers will quickly clear up the mystery is declared certain by those who have followed his work.

With the final rounding up of the evidence against Leo M. Frank and Newt Lee nearing completion, Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey on Monday began the process of elimination of unimportant matter and the shaping of the case for presentation to the Grand Jury.

Waits to Arrange Evidence.

Whether the case will be ready for that tribunal this week is a matter of doubt. The great mass of testimony presents a tangle which will require some time before it is straightened out and arranged properly. Solicitor Dorsey declared Monday morning that he would not present the matter to the Grand Jury until it has been put into a clear, concise form and can be easily handled.

Quick disposition of the cases of the accused men is assured once the matter is placed before the Grand Jury. Should that body find the evidence sufficient to hold Frank and Lee to trial, their cases will be taken up immediately before Judge L. S. Roan, who will open the Criminal Court division of the Fulton County Superior Court on next Monday.

The evidence against both men will be placed before the Grand Jury simultaneously, according to Mr. Dorsey.

Sleuth Leaves Mysteriously.

Much importance is attached to the departure of Solicitor Dorsey's detective Monday morning for parts unknown. While the Solicitor, when questioned as to the destination and purpose of the detective's trip, would give no direct answer, it is believed that the mission is in connection with some clew in the Phagan case which has been unearthed by the mysterious investigator.

The fact that a large number of "character witnesses" are now being interrogated in Brooklyn, N. Y., the former home of Frank, and in other parts of the country bears out this supposition.

That the detective has not confined himself to the theory followed by city police officials in their accumulation of evidence against Frank and Lee, however, was admitted by Solicitor Dorsey and also the possibility that he has stumbled upon an important clew.

Wife Sees Frank in Tower.

While police are exhausting every available source of information to unravel the mystery, Frank and Lee remain in their cells in the Tower chafing with impatience.

Mrs. Frank went to the Tower on Sunday afternoon, paying her first visit to her husband since his arrest nearly two weeks ago. Mrs. Frank was accompanied to the jail by her father, Emil Selig, of 68 East Georgia Avenue. They remained in consultation with the prisoner for nearly an hour.

It was definitely learned Monday that Chief Lanford had not completely eliminated Newt Lee, the negro night watchman of the pencil factory, and that there still exists a suspicion that he may know something of the crime.

In fact, the night watchman has come to be regarded as the real puzzle in the case.

Chief Lanford is not satisfied as to Lee and any possible part he may have played in the tragedy. He declared he had lain awake at night trying to figure out satisfactorily the negro's position.

First Words Still Puzzle.

The point that prevents detectives from eliminating Lee is his first statements to officers following his discovery of the dead girl's body. When he first called the police station, he said he had found a "white woman dead in the basement." The officers who hastened to the factory declared it would have been impossible for him to have discerned whether the girl was white or black from his position when he found her.

When the officers arrived, Lee told them the girl was lying flat of her back. They went into the basement and found the dead girl lying face downward. Lee also told them that the girl had a wound in the back of the head.

Detectives say it is possible that the negro, in the excitement of finding the body, may have been honestly mistaken as to its position, but, at the same time, they find these statements a stumbling block.

Facts Hard to Explain.

"There are many apparently little things in this case that become veritable mountains when we try to get over them. Newt Lee's statements may have been entirely innocent—if they were, they are hard to explain and get out of the way."

The Chief smilingly added:

"If a fellow doesn't care to become gray-haired or land in the insane asylum, he'd better not spend too much time trying to figure out the truth of this mystery and reconcile all of its varied phases and features."

The Pinkertons have instructions to find the murderer, no matter who he may be. Operatives of the agency employed by the National Pencil Company recently put the matter squarely up to Luther Rosser, the company's attorney. He said:

MYSTERY IN DEATH ON BOAT.

PEORIA, ILL., May 12.—Henry Smith, of St. Louis, was found dead in his state room on the steamer Bald Eagle when it arrived here today. The police are investigating. Smith was superintendent of registration of the St. Louis Postoffice.

"TAG DAY" SECURES LARGE SUMS FOR UNFORTUNATE CHILDREN

TAG DAY RECEIPTS CERTAIN TO ESTABLISH NEW RECORD; ATLANTA GIVES LIBERALLY

Atlanta capitulated Monday to an irresistible force of the city's fairest young women. It was a willing, but costly surrender.

Each of the thousands of captives, as a token of surrender, gave up some part of his or her hard-earned money and received a tag which indicated the money was for the benefit of the Sheltering Arms Orphans' Home.

One of these tags was supposed to insure the "taggee" against being surrounded again by a group of the fair soldiers and submitting to another depletion of his exchequer.

But it didn't.

The person who had any appearance of prosperity was a marked man. Few escaped without the signs of repeated surrender. Many proudly wore as many as a half dozen of the lavender tags.

Records Sure to Go.

Before the Tag Day campaign was in progress long it became known that all records would be broken. The record last year was $5,100. By noon Monday the girls were bringing in buckets full of nickels, dimes and dollars to headquarters in the Peters Building. The huge display of wealth was soon tied up in bags and the office force began to take on the appearance of the Bank of England.

The campaign was well organized. Before the average business man had finished his breakfast, the girls were being mobilized at headquarters. By the time that this same business man was in the street car or in his automobile en route to his office, the maidens armed with hundreds of tags were in waiting for him.

There was no escape. On every corner there was one or more of the attractive, smiling girls stationed. If a person succeeded in getting by one of them without buying a tag it was only to be repeatedly stopped until he finally gave in.

The girls stood at the doors of all the public buildings. They swarmed into the offices in droves. Not many attempted to make any resistance. He who did was not wise. He spent an uncomfortable day. They even invaded the Capitol, tagging everyone from Governor Brown down to the most humble attache.

"I am sure we are going to break a record for the amount of money taken in," said Mrs. W. S. Elkin, of the central committee. "Even if we don't we will have broken one record and that is in the number of pretty girls we have had to tag the people. I never saw so many in my life.

Money Is Flowing in.

"The money is simply flowing in from all directions and the returns up to the present are very encouraging. We can scarcely keep up with the demand for more buckets and tags. Everybody seems enthusiastic and those who are giving are doing so cheerfully and a great many have stopped in and made voluntary subscriptions of very substantial amounts."

Mrs. J. Frank Meador, stationed at the entrance to the Atlanta National Bank, was apparently vying with the tellers laboring in the banking room.

"Business is fine," she smiled. "I have nearly $100 already in my bucket and everyone seems willing and anxious to contribute. I have just gotten one donation of $20 and any number of others ranging from $1 to $5."

Buckets Get Too Heavy.

Mrs. Frank Dabney, Mrs. L. C. McKinney and Mrs. James Ison, stationed at the Steiner-Emery Building, were getting the money by the bucket full and during the morning it became necessary for them to make frequent trips to headquarters, across the street, in order to relieve themselves of the weight of silver.

A particularly attractive group of girls is that on the Aragon Hotel block. Mrs. Charles Godfrey is in charge there, and she says that this Tag Day is much better than last year's.

Miss Maude Arthurs Weir, a pretty Canadian girl, came all the way from Toronto to help the "taggers." Miss Weir was here last year and said she would not miss an Atlanta Tag Day for worlds. Her contributions have ranged from 3 cents to $1.

Miss Cobbie Vaughan says the men call her "girlie," "bright eyes" and "cutie"—but they pay for the privilege. Misses Annie Sykes Rice, Douglass and Edith Dunson all agree that the men are "perfectly nice and sweet."

One Policeman Is Lucky.

The policeman in front of the Candler Building says he has the prettiest girls in town on his beat. Mrs. Massengale is chaperoning this group. She says receipts are much larger than they were in 1912. Miss Mainer Lee Hardin is of the opinion that the men would have a Tag Day, too, if they knew how much fun it is. Miss Marian Perdue finds the men very nice and generous, not one in a hundred refusing to help.

Mrs. W. B. Seabrook is at the Empire Life Building, in charge of a party of girls. She expresses herself as delighted with the contributions. Miss Frances Seabrook, of Westminster, Md., is helping her, and says that the Atlanta men are much more liberal than those of Baltimore.

CITIZENS OF CALIFORNIA TO VOTE ON JAPANESE LAND LAW

SACRAMENTO, May 12.—Referendum of the anti-alien bill to the people of California has been determined on by the Democratic leaders of the State.

This was learned to-day following the receipt of a telegram from President Wilson to Governor Johnson asking him to veto the measure.

The bill was scheduled to reach Governor Johnson to-day from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, where it has been held up.

The session of the Legislature ends to-day, and under the provisions of the constitution 30 days ensue during which time the Governor may sign or veto the bill. At the end of that time if it receives no action at the hands of the Executive it becomes a law.

Governor Stays Silent.

The Governor to-day admitted receiving the message from President Wilson, transmitted through Secretary of State Bryan, but refused to comment on it. It was generally believed here that eventually he would sign the measure. Theodore A. Bell, national Democratic committeeman, is here watching the situation closely. He is the leader of the referendum plan.

It was learned that petitions calling for a referendum vote on the measure have been prepared and sent to various central points in the State. The moment the anti-alien land bill becomes a law these petitions will be circulated. It is confidently expected that a sufficient number of names to insure the call of a referendum election will be secured within a few hours after the circulation of the petition starts.

The result of a referendum would be to delay the whole matter until 1914, unless a special election were called. This would have to be authorized by the Legislature, and a special session will be necessary to call the election. It is believed that Governor Johnson will call a special session to hold an election if the referendum petition goes through.

Wilson Asks Johnson To Veto Anti-Alien Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson, through Secretary of State Bryan, has made a formal plea to Governor Johnson, of California, to veto the alien-land bill.

The message to California's Governor was framed at the White House last night. It sets forth in diplomatic language the urgency of the situation created by the demands of Viscount Chinda, the Japanese Ambassador.

The message to Governor Johnson follows:

Two Courses Open.

The President directs me to express his appreciation of your courtesy in delaying action on the land bill now before you, until its provisions could be communicated to the Japanese Government and considered by it.

His Excellency, Baron Chinda, has, on behalf of his Government, presented an earnest protest against the measure. As you have before you but two alternatives, viz, to approve or to veto, it will avail nothing to recall to your attention the amendments suggested to the Legislature; and as the President has already laid before you his views upon the subject, it is unnecessary to reiterate them.

He passes over the questions affecting treaty rights for two reasons; first, because the bill passed by the Legislature is avowedly intended to conform to treaty obligations, and, second, because any conflict complained of would be a matter for the courts, but the President feels justified in expressing again his desire that action on the subject be deferred for this session, and he expresses the desire the more freely because the Legislatur can be reconvened at any time if the welfare of the State requires it.

He is fully alive to the importance of removing any root of discord which may create antagonism between American citizens and the subjects of Oriental nations residing here, but he is impelled by a sense of duty to express the hope that you will see fit to allow time for diplomatic effort. The nations affected by the proposed law are friendly nations—nations that have shown themselves willing to co-operate in the establishment of harmonious relations between their people and ours.

President Offers Aid.

If a postponement commends itself to your judgment the President will be pleased to co-operate in a systematic effort to discover and correct any evils that may exist in connection with land ownership by aliens.

The decision of the administration to urge Governor Johnson to use his power of veto to postpone any land legislation was reached after a series of conferences between the President, Secretary Bryan and John Bassett Moore, counselor of the State Department, and frequent calls at the department by Ambassador Chinda. It was realized that any further attempt to have the bill enacted by the California Legislature amended would be fruitless, since Secretary Bryan's trip to Sacramento was unavailing and the Legislature is to adjourn next Tuesday.

Until Governor Johnson's reply is received the Government probably will make no reply to the protest of Japan further than to acquaint the Ambassador with the fact that every possible effort has been made to have action in California delayed, pending a settlement of the problems involved by diplomacy.

Steel Exports in 8 Years Are Doubled

James A. Farrell, Testifying in Government Suit, Says Money Value Has More Than Trebled.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Data concerning the business done by the United States Steel Corporation and the United States Steel Products Company, a main subsidiary, was given out to-day by James A. Farrell, president of the corporation, when he took the witness stand at the resumption of the suit charging violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The export business of the steel products concern, according to statistics presented by Farrell, has doubled in tonnage in the past eight years but more than trebled in money value. Farrell said the discrepancy was due to the fact that Europe now uses higher priced steel.

BULL MOOSERS ASK G. O. P. TO CONVENE FOR REUNION

CHICAGO, May 12.—Representatives of the Progressive forces of the Republican party meeting in Chicago to-day voted to ask the Republican National Committee to call a national convention at as early a date as practicable to consider matters of party reorganization.

The resolution was voted through, following its advocacy by former Governor Herbert S. Hadley, of Missouri; Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa, and other Progressive leaders. Senator William D. Borah, of Idaho, opposed the resolution.

After the resolution was adopted a formal statement was issued by State Senator James S. Trautman, of Kansas, a member of the program committee. The statement follows:

Move Is Explained.

At an informal conference of Republicans from eleven States, held in Chicago May 12, 1913, it was voted that it be submitted to the National Republican Committee as the opinion of those present that a national convention of the party should be held this year at as early a date as may be practicable for the purpose of considering the expediency of changing the basis of representation at future conventions so that delegates shall proportionately represent Republican voters and not the general population to the end that the will of the members of the party may be more accurately determined; also for the purpose of changing the rules relating to delegates and members of the national committee so that the primary election laws of the various States shall be recognized and have full force, and also for the purpose of making such other changes in the method of conducting national conventions and campaigns as shall conduce to giving the utmost possible effect to the principles and policies of the party.

For Reuniting the Party.

It was further the opinion that such a convention might properly and usefully take any other action desirable to reunite the party and to give assurance that it stands for constructive and progressive activity in the affairs of government to the end that the common welfare may be advanced.

It was the unanimous belief of those present that the changes suggested should be made forthwith and that the National Committee be strongly urged to take steps to such an end.

Six Republican Senators who opposed the nomination of President Taft last year are attending the conference, which began yesterday in the Congress Hotel, in the same room where six Governors met and signed letters to Colonel Roosevelt, asking that he become a presidential candidate.

Seventy-five other Republicans who favor a reorganization of the party also attended the first session.

The Senators are Sherman, Illinois; Cummins and Kenyon, Iowa; Borah, Idaho; Crawford, South Dakota, and Gronna, North Dakota.

8 Officers Ordered To Cavalry School

Two Captains and Six Lieutenants Will Report at Fort Oglethorpe June 10-20.

Captain W. P. Waite, Troop B, McIntosh.

Captain W. K. Young, Troop K, Augusta.

First Lieutenant T. P. Gordon, Troop B, McIntosh.

First Lieutenant W. E. Williamson, Troop K, Augusta.

First Lieutenant Cecil Neal, Troop F, Gainesville.

First Lieutenant H. C. Ashford, Troop L, Atlanta.

Second Lieutenant H. C. Norman, Troop B, McIntosh.

Second Lieutenant M. S. Levy, Troop K, Augusta.

The officers selected will report to the commanding officer of the post the morning of June 10.

DANIELS RETURNS EAST AFTER SAVANNAH VISIT

SAVANNAH, GA., May 12.—Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, arrived in Savannah yesterday afternoon from Port Royal, completing an inspection of the navy yards on the South Atlantic and Gulf coasts. He left at midnight for Washington via Raleigh, N. C., his home. The party was entertained informally in Savannah.

Fair South Carolinan Lauds Georgia Barbecue

Sure One Would Reconcile Blease and His Foes

The famed Georgia barbecue has won another enthusiastic friend.

The latest ally is beautiful Miss Marie Fisher, of Charleston, S. C. Miss Fisher was at a barbecue prepared in her honor at the Kimballville farm of her cousin, Will V. Zimmer, and it was here she declared that she never had tasted anything so good in her life.

"If we could transplant these typical Georgia barbecues into South Carolina we would have such an era of good-fellowship there that Governor Blease and all his opponents would become fast friends and we'd have no more of those terrible fusses."

So said Miss Fisher as she poised a cleaver, preparatory to bringing it down upon a particularly juicy piece of meat. For, with white-plumed hat slightly a-tilt and face flushed with happiness, she was entering right into the spirit of the occasion and busily assisting in serving.

"The nearest we have to a barbecue in South Carolina is a fish fry, and that's no fun at all compared to a Georgia barbecue," she complained.

Miss Fisher is of a wealthy South Carolina family and has been visiting relatives in Atlanta for several weeks. She will return home Thursday.

Disastrous Floods Sweeping Scotland

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PERTH, SCOTLAND, May 12.—Disastrous floods are ravaging the southeastern part of Perthshire, doing extensive damage. A great inland sea, 2 1-2 miles broad, has been formed near Blairgowrie on Lach Erich. Bridges and railroad tracks have been washed away and roads are impassable.

Crops have been damaged greatly and much live stock has been killed.

Workington Decree in "Hearst Coal Cases"

Additional Suits Against the Trust Will Be Deferred for a Time.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Preparations for framing a decree carrying out the Supreme Court's decision in the "Hearst coal cases" have been made by the Department of Justice.

The decree, which will cancel the so-called 65 per cent. contracts of the coal carrying railroads and coal companies and terminate the railroad control of the Temple Iron Company, will be submitted to the United States District Court at Philadelphia during the last week of May.

While it is the intention of Attorney General McReynolds to file more suits against the Coal Trust, attacking the relationship, direct and indirect, of coal carrying railroads and coal mining companies by means of both the Sherman Anti-Trust law and the commodities clause of the Interstate Commerce act, it is not likely that any further move will be made until the decree in the Temple Iron case has been entered.

Wife Says Husband Is Crazy.

SAVANNAH.—At the instance of his wife, Mrs. Florence Meachum, J. Homer Meachum, an actor at the Princess Theater, who attempted to commit suicide by drinking wood alcohol, has been transferred from the hospital to the jail on a writ of lunacy.

Cafe Manager, Cut By Boy, Near Death

The condition of Owen Gilbert, manager of Scherrer's cafe, who was seriously stabbed Saturday afternoon in a Peachtree Street pool room by Arthur Bridwell, is reported practically unchanged.

At Grady Hospital, where the wounded man was taken immediately after the affray, it was said his condition is critical and that it will be several days before they can say if he will survive.

Arthur Bridwell, the 18-year-old youth who stabbed Gilbert, following an altercation that arose over some remark Gilbert is said to have made about Bridwell's mother, is being held by the police, charged with assault with intent to murder.

SINGING LESSONS BY TELEPHONE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, May 12.—Steps were taken to-day to stop the practice of using the telephone for instructing pupils in singing and the hearing of recitations in languages. The discovery of these uses of telephones was made by a city telephone expert who is helping the telephone companies to cut down their expenses in order to increase the wages of girl operators.

WILSON SURE OF CURRENCY LAW AT THIS SESSION

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The Wilson currency bill will follow swiftly upon the Wilson-Underwood tariff. The President has said it, and there will be no failure to do his will.

With the tariff bill disposed of by the House, the Chief Executive has set his representatives to work, and by the time the House returns to its regular sessions three weeks hence, it will have for immediate consideration a bill that will embody the Wilson view of the currency.

Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, is chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, and Carter Glass, of Virginia, will be the chairman of the House Committee as soon as that position is filled.

The President expresses full confidence that he will be able to press this currency bill to enactment before the special session adjourns. He goes the full length of positive speech in declaring it will be a law before the general session of Congress. He is fully as emphatic about it as he was about the tariff bill.

Plan for Regional Banks.

Division of the entire country into fifteen clearing house districts, each district to have its own reserve association, or regional bank, is contemplated in currency reform legislation at the present session.

President Wilson, Representative Underwood and Representative Carter Glass, who will be chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee of the House, have reached an agreement as to the main features of this proposed legislation. They are to have further conferences to settle the details.

In the message to be sent to Congress shortly after June 1 there will be outlined the general principles of currency reforms he will favor, but will not specify details. No legislation for the Federal control of stock exchanges will be sanctioned by the President, although three members of the Banking and Currency Committee will strive to have this reform included in the bill. Glass is opposed to such legislation.

The members of the committee who favor Federal control of the Stock Exchange will seek an alliance with radical Republicans on this question and force a vote on it. They are believed to be hopelessly in the minority, but will rely on the report of the money trust investigating committee to sustain them.

Features of Reform Plan.

The general reform principles agreed to by Underwood and the President include:

Establishment of fifteen reserve associations, or regional banks under boards of control, the operation of each association to be under the clearing house system.

Each board of control to consist of nine members, three to be of local selection, three to be designated by the President and three others, one each to represent the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Agriculture. Each association may transact a general banking business under the supervision of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Each association to circulate its notes under prescribed conditions, the basis for these notes to be commercial securities of a recognized stability as well as Government, State and municipal bonds. All national banks may obtain membership in the associations and such other banks as the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller may prescribe.

The allotment of territory to each of these associations will be left in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency.

Senators See Free Wool and Sugar Defeat.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Sugar and wool Senators confidently predict that these two schedules would not be free on the tariff bill finally passed by the Senate. To-day they said enough Democrats had been lined up to defeat the Underwood program with regard to both these commodities, naming Senators Newlands and Pittman, Nevada; Shafroth, Colorado; Chamberlain, Oregon; Walsh, Montana, and Ransdell and Thornton, Louisiana, as among those who would vote against free sugar and wool.

The fight, it was declared, would come on the floor of the Senate, the Underwood bill being scheduled to go through the Senate Finance Committee without a change in either of the commodities.

It was also expected to-day that changes would be made in tariff rates on cattle, wheat, oats and many other commodities. The Democratic majority believes that cattle, wheat and oats should be put on the free list.

Manufacturers Heard In Secret on Tariff.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Members of the Senate Finance Committee have had private conferences with representatives of manufacturers on practically all of the 600 paragraphs of the Underwood tariff bill.

The privacy that has attended these conferences will be made the subject of Republican attack in the Senate.

Republicans continued to assert they will have enough Democratic support to compel the committee to listen to the pleas of manufacturers.

Wilson Predicts No Changes in Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson is not worrying about the passage of the Underwood tariff bill by the Senate. He told the members of the "newspaper cabinet" at the semi-weekly meeting to-day there was no "rough water ahead," as reported from the upper house of Congress and that he anticipated the adoption of the bill, in its present form after comparatively little argument.

Cyclone and Hail Do Damage in France

Vineyards Suffer Loss, Workers Injured and Aviators Are Dashed to Earth.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 12.—A terrific cyclone swept parts of the Department of Marne to-day, doing extensive damage. Following a cloudburst, there was a heavy fall of hail. Many workers in the fields were hurt by being struck by the huge stones. Serious loss was caused to the vineyards.

Two aviators, flying near Epernay, were blown to earth and suffered injuries which may prove fatal.

K. of C. Convention Tuesday.

SAVANNAH.—The State Convention of the Knights of Columbus will meet here Tuesday morning. The convention will be in session only one day.

Her 'Fatal Beauty' Costs Actress Job

NEW YORK, May 10.—Evelyn Carter Carrington was "so handsome" she was discharged from the "Firefly Theatrical Company and she has a judgment of $166 against Arthur Hammerstein to prove it.

Miss Carrington agreed to assume the character—a widow of uncertain years—for $100 a week. She appeared once, then was dropped, and sued for two weeks' salary minus an advance.

"When Miss Carrington was engaged for the role," said Mr. Hammerstein on the witness stand, "we thought she could make up to look old, but her loveliness stuck out through the make-up and she attracted attention from the other characters when she was supposed to have only a minor part."

House Begins Task of Naming Committees

WASHINGTON, May 12.—With practically the entire membership of the House clamoring for choice places, the Ways and Means Committee essayed to-day the gigantic task of making the committee assignments for the Sixty-third Congress.

The Banking and Currency Committee, which is to frame the kind of currency measure wanted by the President, will be among the first committees named by the steering committee. President Wilson himself is expected to express a preference regarding the formation of this committee.

There are 56 standing committees in the House, and of these only five have been organized.

The Semi-Yearly Disposal of the Famous

Royal Society Finished Art Pieces

At Just Half Usual Prices

Starts to-morrow morning at 8:30. Women who have attended the previous sales will need no second invitation to share.

For the benefit of others we say that these are the sample handworked pieces from which the Royal Society Company took orders. Naturally each piece is finished as perfectly as expert needle workers knew how.

The Royal Society Company are now booking orders for Fall, hence they favor us—their largest Southern customer—with these Spring samples..

Upward of forty years of fair and honorable dealing with manufacturers and wholesalers brings us many favors—but we count this lot of Royal Society Samples as the BEST. See them in the window; glad to have you confirm our judgment.

As shown there are centerpieces, scarfs, squares, pillow tops, baby dresses, towels, pin-cushions, combinations, nightgowns and shirt waists. Judge of the variety by the fact that in centerpieces alone there are 22, 25, 27 and 36-inch sizes. The materials are white and brown linens and white nainsooks, for underwear and lingerie, variously embroidered in French, eyelet and punch work. Roman cutout work, the new tapestry stitch, etc.

Regular prices are $2, $3.00, $4, up to $18
Now just half: Pay $1, $1.50, $2, up to $ 9

New 50c, 75c & $1 Fabric Gloves 25c

Better Reach Out for Them To-morrow
We'll Never Have Them to Hand Out Again

"To-day is yesterday's pupil."

So we learn to-day about gloves what we didn't know yesterday.

We thought other fabric gloves were as good as Kayser's.

In the meantime—what about these other gloves? They're the identical makes that other good merchants are offering to-day at full price. Let them do it—our mind is made up.

Starting to-morrow

Every Fabric Glove in Stock (Save Kayser's) Must Go

All the gloves are spick, span, new. There are lisle gloves, Milanese lisle gloves and Chamoisette gloves. All two-clasp style, in white, black, tan, grey, mode. Full line of sizes in each color. Up to to-day their prices were 50c, 75c and $1. To-morrow the price will be 25c. 25c

These are in 16-button length, in same colors and materials as above. All sizes. Sale starts at 9 a. m., with full line of sizes and colors. No phone orders, exchanges, try-ons or approvals. Extra salespeople in attendance.

(Main Floor, Left Aisle)

A Snowdrift of Laces and Embroideries Is Melting Away Under the Spell of May Prices

It is fairly snowing laces and embroideries. They're piled heaping high on the counters, on tables, everywhere.

Scissors snipping gaily, women buying freely, complimentary remarks flying---a gay, happy throng sharing the best lace and embroidery bargains we've had in many a day.

But there will be plenty left for to-morrow, and the day after. Told yesterday how we secured these thousands of yards; to-day we can only recapitulate.

Prices run like this:

$1 to $2 allover embroideries and flouncings	59c	35c to 50c Cluny laces	19c
$3 to $5 Shadow, Chantilly and Darn lace bands	$1.69	75c to $1 allover laces	49c

Winner of 'Racer' Now in Competition for Beautiful Shetland Pony

Youngster is Spurred on By Success in Previous Contest

STANDING OF CONTESTANTS IN RACE FOR PONY OUTFITS SHOWS NUMEROUS CHANGES

"I was a winner of one of your 'racers' last year, and hope to work hard now, and also to be a winner in this pony contest," writes one of the contestants for The Georgian and American pony outfits.

"We take your paper, and think it the best paper going. You shall hear from me again," the letter concludes.

Those who have won Georgian prizes in the past are pleased with them, it is plain. They have no misgivings as to the quality of the rewards offered now—they know The Georgian and American keep faith with their readers.

Meanwhile, the votes roll in.

The standing of contestants is published again today, and those in the race can see how their rivals are faring. It is plain that many are "holding back" votes. This is poor policy, for the "other fellow" can do the same thing.

Besides, nothing succeeds like success, and the fact that your name in the published list is followed by a big total of votes encourages your friends to help you. No use backing a straggler at the tailend, you know.

The fifth annual commencement exercises of Miss Woodberry's School will be a feature in educational circles this week. The program will begin Friday with a recital. It will conclude the following Monday with the graduation of one of the largest classes in the history of the institution.

There will be a lawn fete and musical complimentary to the alumnae Sunday. The commencement sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. C. T. A. Pise. Following class day exercises at noon Monday on the lawn, there will come the delivery of diplomas at 8 o'clock in the evening.

The valedictory address will be made by Miss Amelia Carney Malone; Miss Elliott Beattie Johnson will render a violin solo; prayers and benediction will be said by the Right Rev. C. K. Nelson, bishop of Atlanta.

Old Ireland Forever! Postcards to Be Green

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Hereafter Uncle Sam will have green postal cards. Postmaster General Albert S. Burleson has so ordered.

The domestic library size one-cent postal card will be printed pale green to conform to the idea of the International Postal Union.

Foreign countries print cards of the lowest denominations in green. Mr. Burleson ordered a similar color to help foreign-born Americans who are familiar with the green card.

TACOMA, WASH., May 12.—Traveling afoot night and day, Ben Dahl, a Koyukuk miner of Hammond, reached Fairbanks, 600 miles away, in time to cause the arrest of Norah Moore, whom he accused of stealing $5,000 in gold dust.

He said she had promised to marry him and invest the money in real estate. Instead she decamped in the night for Fairbanks with a fast dog team.

Meat Is Barred at Adventist Council

Coffee, Tea and Condiments Also Taboo at Big Conference in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Delegates and visitors are coming from nearly all the countries of the world to attend the thirty-eighth session of the general conference of the Seventh Day Adventists, which will be held in a city of tents here.

No flesh foods of any kind will be served and there will be no coffee or tea there, nor condiments such as vinegar, mustard, catsup or pepper.

The first meeting will be held Thursday.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

"My sister's husband had an attack of rheumatism in his arm," writes a well-known resident of Newton, Iowa. "I gave him a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment, which he applied to his arm, and on the next morning the rheumatism was gone." For chronic muscular rheumatism you will find nothing better than Chamberlain's Liniment. Sold by all dealers.

Good Home Made Bread

Put 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon Silver-Leaf Lard, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1½ teaspoon salt in large bowl. Pour on 1 pint boiling water and 1 pint scalded milk, when luke warm add 1 dissolved yeast cake and 1 quart of flour. Stir until thoroughly mixed. Add 2 quarts of flour, mix and turn on floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic and until bubbles appear under the surface. Cover and set in a warm place to raise. Cut down, knead, shape into loaves, place in greased pans, cover and let raise to double bulk. Bake in hot oven.

A good recipe, closely followed and good materials will give you good, sweet, wholesome, fine grained, tender bread.

Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard

Straighten That Lame Back

There's too much suffering among older folks from achy, stiff, lame backs, distressing urinary disorders, weak eyes, dropsy and rheumatic joints.

These are signs of kidney weakness, which, in youth or age, poisons the blood, disorders the urine and lames the limbs or back.

There's help for weakened kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills have brought relief to thousands. Here's Atlanta testimony.

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

ATLANTA PROOF

Testimony of a Resident of Whitehall Street

James J. Fennell, 173 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga., says: "Since 1907, I have not had an attack of backache or any other symptom of kidney complaint. Doan's Kidney Pills made a positive cure in my case. I suffered a great deal from kidney trouble and it was not until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills that I found permanent relief."

Strike in Cincinnati Stops Every Trolley

CINCINNATI, May 12.—Completely crippled and paralyzed by the strike of its motormen and conductors, no attempt was made to-day by the Cincinnati Traction Company to operate a single car. The company is preparing to break the strike with imported men.

Mayor Hunt is still waiting for his reply to the letter sent to W. Kesley Schoepf, president of the company, demanding that the company arbitrate the differences with the men. If the company does not answer by 6 o'clock this afternoon, the Mayor will begin court proceedings to annul the franchise.

OWNER INJURED DRIVING CAR FROM BURNING GARAGE

G. C. Rogers was suffering from painful burns about the face and hands Monday, received when he drove his automobile from a burning garage at 521 Peachtree Street Sunday night.

Two automobiles, valued at about $5,000, were destroyed. One was a Chalmers belonging to Arthur Reed, and the other an Everett owned by Carl Witt.

BALKAN WAR IS ENDED; PEACE TREATY DRAWN

Combatants Officially Promise to Cease Hostilities—Arbiters to Meet in London.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, May 12.—The war between Turkey and the states of the Balkan Confederation is at an end. The only thing which remains to be done now is the formulation of a treaty of peace.

The reply of the Balkan allies to the recent representations of the powers was handed in to-day and it contains a definite promise on the part of the Balkan states and Greece to cease all hostilities until a peace treaty can be drawn up.

Notification was sent to the powers from Sofia, Belgrade, Cettinje and Athens that peace plenipotentiaries will be dispatched immediately to London.

It is expected that the peace negotiations will be renewed in London within a fortnight.

France Spain's Ally In Proposed Treaty.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 12.—Formal announcement of the inception of a treaty which will make Spain an ally of France is expected as soon as the result of the visit of King Alfonso and Premier Romanson of Spain to France is known.

It was learned to-day from an official source that Alfonso made representations to President Poincare to show that Spain is anxious to enter into negotiations without delay.

The press believes the French Foreign Office views the offer favorably.

WOMEN'S PAPER LOSES IN FIGHT FOR EQUAL RIGHTS

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The long fight of the Lewis Publishing Company, of St. Louis, to have the Woman's Magazine placed on a par and accorded similar privileges with other newspapers by the Post-office Department, was lost to-day by a final decision of the United States Supreme Court.

Calls Persian Tunic Best Garb for Women

Wife of Lecturer Who Has Visited All Lands Adopts That Costume.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Mrs. R. G. Knowles, wife of the explorer and lecturer, is inclined to the belief after visiting every country in the world that for combination of art and comfort no dress excels that of the women of Persia.

To back up her opinion Mrs. Knowles has appeared at some of her soirees and afternoon receptions attired in the unusual dress of the grande dame of Persia.

It consists of a draped divided tunic, which looks like, but is not exactly, the Eastern "bloomers." The garment is of heavy silken striped material in wonderful colors. Mrs. Knowles has added an Occidental touch to this costume by wearing silk stockings and satin slippers instead of sandals.

Woman, 93, Races in Auto and Wins

Defeats Woman of Twenty-five in Twenty Miles—Shopping Tour Expenses the Stake.

DELMONT, PA., May 12.—As the result of some good-natured bantering over the speed of their motor cars and their ability as drivers, Mrs. George Wallace, ninety-three, and Mrs. Harry Leordon, twenty-five, raced twenty miles to Greensburg, the stakes being the expenses of a shopping tour in the latter town.

The start was made at 8:30 a. m., and 53 minutes later the elder woman drove her car into Greensburg. Two minutes later Mrs. Leordon arrived. Mrs. Wallace had never once slackened speed, and according to Mr. and Mrs. William Blose, her passengers, she took the curves and corners with the daring of an Oldfield.

FOUR HURT IN WRECK ON CENTRAL NEAR COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, GA., May 12.—Wrecking crews this morning cleared the track, after working yesterday afternoon and last night, near Columbus, where Central of Georgia passenger train No. 1 was wrecked at 4:05 o'clock yesterday. The combination baggage and smoking car was overturned and the engine and three steel coaches were derailed. Roy Williams, of Columbus, and three negroes were injured, Williams being seriously hurt.

U. D. C. RECORDS DAMAGED BY FLOODS IN KENTUCKY

Members of the Atlanta Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, have been sent the following notice by Mrs. W. S. Coleman, recording secretary:

"On account of the recent floods in Kentucky, the home of Mrs. Roy McKinney, recording secretary general, of Paducah, Ky., has been inundated and her papers confused and damaged. She will send out the certificates for membership just as soon as she is able to resume business."

Delegates Here for Assemblies Come From All Parts of World

Missionary Conference Is First

From every State in the Union and practically every country in the world delegates are arriving in Atlanta to attend the great joint Presbyterian Assembly. The first "long distance" delegate reached here Monday in the person of Rev. Thomas G. Albert, commissioner from Salem, Oreg. Before night the number is expected to swell to several hundred, and from now until Thursday morning every train will bring in its quota.

Dr. B. P. Fullerton, of Philadelphia, field secretary of the U. S. A. Church in the South, has arrived and is particularly busy arranging for the Pre-Assembly Missionary Conference, which will take up the entire day Wednesday. This will be one of the most important meetings of the joint gathering. The morning session begins at 9 o'clock and the afternoon meeting at 2:15 o'clock. Both meetings will be held in the Harris Street Presbyterian Church, while the evening session will be held in the First Presbyterian Church at 8 o'clock.

Notables to Give Talks.

Several world-famous missionaries and clergymen will make addresses at this conference. Two of the most noted are the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin, of New York, and the Rev. S. Hall Young, of Alaska. Of particular discussion will be the simultaneous church-wide every-member campaign which the representatives of the United Presbyterian Church will present.

Among other prominent arrivals this morning was Rev. E. R. Sterretts, of Philadelphia, treasurer of the board of education. Like Dr. Fullerton, he found himself a busy man as soon as he reached Atlanta.

Real work of the joint assembly begins Thursday. There will be three distinct conventions with joint meetings in the evenings at the Auditorium. Meetings of the U. S. A. Church will be held in the Baptist Tabernacle; the Southern Presbyterians will gather in the North Avenue Presbyterian Church, while the United Presbyterians will meet in the Central Presbyterian Church.

Big Meeting Wednesday.

Special interest attaches to the all-day conference of the Permanent Committees of Foreign Missions from the various Presbyteries, including the committees of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, which is to be held on Wednesday, the day preceding the opening of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church. This conference will be held in the First Presbyterian Church.

The meeting of the General Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement Wednesday will be one of marked importance from more than one point of view. This meeting will mark the sixth anniversary of the Laymen's Movement in the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Business sessions will be held during the morning and afternoon, the Laymen's Movement joining with the pre-assembly conference on foreign missions, and in the evening from 6 to 8 o'clock a banquet will be held in connection with the closing business session. An inspirational meeting will follow the banquet and close the all-day conference.

Facts on Southern Church.

North Avenue Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, will be the meeting place of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, which will convene Thursday morning. Everything is in readiness in this church for the entertainment of the highest court of Southern Presbyterians.

There are fourteen synods in the territory of the Southern Presbyterian church, 83 Presbyteries, 465 candidates for the ministry, 41 licentiates, 1,734 ministers, 3,392 churches, 61 licensures. During last year there were 50 ordinations, 231 installations, 231 ministers died, the pastoral relations between 186 ministers and churches were dissolved, 31 ministers were received from other denominations and 11 ministers were dismissed to other denominations.

ART GEM MAKES COMSTOCK BLUSH

Garbless Girl Wader in "September Morn'" Shocks Guardian of New York Morals.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Anthony Comstock, head of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, today concurred with "Bathhouse" John Coughlin, of Chicago, and opposed judgment passed by the French Academy, by declaring "September Morn," the masterpiece of M. Chabas, to be "highly indecent and totally unfit for public exhibition."

While strolling along West Forty-sixth Street this morning, the guardian of New York's morals glanced in the window of a prominent art store. The first and only thing Mr. Comstock's eye could see was the famous painting of the nude girl splashing in the cool shadows of a mountain lake.

"Take it out immediately," ordered Mr. Comstock.

"But that is 'September Morn,'" declared the art dealer.

"It should be pitch dark for a girl to go in wading in that undressed condition," announced Mr. Comstock. "Take it away immediately or I shall confiscate your entire stock."

The picture came out, but was returned a few hours later. In the meantime, art critics are weighing the combined judgment of Anthony Comstock and "Bathhouse" John against that of the judges of the French Academy, who are on record as saying that "September Morn" is one of the world's art treasures.

BACKACHE A WARNING ALL SHOULD HEED

It Is One of the First Signs of Kidney Troubles, if Neglected Serious Diseases Follow.

No one can be well and healthy unless the kidneys work properly and keep the blood pure. When they become clogged up and inactive, nature has a way of warning you.

Backache is one of the first symptoms. You may also be troubled with disagreeable, annoying bladder disorders; have attacks of lumbago or rheumatism; become nervous, tired, and feel all worn out; puffy swellings show under the eyes or in the feet and ankles; and many other symptoms are noticed. If they are neglected, dropsy, diabetes, or Bright's disease, which so often prove fatal, may result.

It is not only dangerous, but needless, for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely ends all such misery.

There is no more effective remedy known for the prompt cure of all such troubles than this new scientific preparation, because it removes the cause. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the clogged-up pores; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter and sift the poison out of the blood and drive it from the system.

You will find Croxone different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to cure the worst backache, relieve rheumatic pains, or overcome urinary disorders.

Widow in White for Titanic-Lost Husband

Material Still Crepe—Black Given Up on Anniversary of Disaster.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—"White Widow of the Titanic" is the title Mrs. Lucien D. Smith, the bereaved girl wife of one of the heroes of the disaster, has earned through wearing white mourning instead of black.

On the anniversary of the sinking of the Titanic, Mrs. Smith put aside her black clothes and appeared in white crepe from head to foot. The pocketbook she carried is of the same material, and her shoes are also white.

Mrs. Smith has an infant daughter born several months after the tragic loss of its father. The widow is popular socially, and forms a picturesque figure at the quiet events she attends.

MISTAKES NEIGHBOR FOR BURGLAR AND SHOOTS HIM

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—August Retting, member of a prominent family here, while attempting to enter a front window of the home of Charles Scheuermann, on fashionable Government Street, was mistaken for a burglar and shot three times. He screamed and Scheuermann, on going to him, recognized who he was.

The Retting home was two blocks away from the shooting. The wounded man had his shoes off and said he did not want his father to know he was out so late. He had mistaken the house. Scheuermann was not arrested.

RELATIVES TO CONTEST WILL OF MRS. DODD

Fight Over $100,000 Fortune Left to Mercer Will Cause Executor Currier to Quit.

Relatives of the late Mrs. Barbara E. Dodd will contest her will which bequeathed the bulk of her fortune, approximately $100,000, to Mercer University. Charles E. Currier, executor, has been informed of the proposed contest by Mrs. Fannie T. Ackerman, of New York, sister of Mrs. Dodd.

A breach with her relatives several years ago caused Mrs. Dodd, widow of the late Philip Dodd, a wealthy Atlantan, to destroy a will executed in 1906, in which a considerable sum was set aside for her brother and sister and their children. It is said a disagreement following the establishment of a sanitarium at Mrs. Dodd's old residence on Whitehall Street, by the sons of Henry S. Dibble, her brother, led to the estrangement.

Attorney C. P. Goree, who drew the last will, said it was clearly Mrs. Dodd's intention that little be left her relatives.

"Mrs. Dodd had considerable trouble with her nephews about a loan on a sanitarium established some years ago," said Mr. Goree. "In fact, she had to take the matter into the courts for a settlement.

"That is why the Mercer bequest was not in the form of an endowment, but as a fund to be loaned deserving young men. I have not been informed of any intention to contest the will and I can not see what grounds the contest will be based upon."

It is recalled that Mrs. Dodd bequeathed to her brother, Henry S. Dibble, $5,000 to be held in trust; that he was to receive only the proceeds from its investment, and that at his death the amount was to revert to the Mercer fund. To her sister, Mrs. Fannie T. Ackerman, was left a similar sum, without incumbrance.

Charles E. Currier, president of the Atlanta National Bank, executor of the will, said Monday that if a contest is made he will quit.

Carnegie Aids Ghent Memorial Project

Agrees to Help Pay Expense of Preserving Room in Which Treaty Was Signed.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Andrew Carnegie, in Washington as conferee on the treaty of Ghent centenary, has agreed to bear a portion of the expense of setting aside as a permanent peace memorial the room in the Carthusian Monastery in Ghent in which the famous treaty was signed on Christmas eve, 1814. Portraits of the participants, famous facsimiles and historic paintings and other objects are to be placed in the room.

Mr. Carnegie is the guest of Mrs. Oliver Ricketson here. Lord Weardale, Neil Primrose, M.P., son of Lord Rosebery, and Sir George Reed, the British conferees, also are in the city.

'Woody Tiger' Is New White House Mascot

Mrs. Wade Hampton Substitutes Wilson Administration Toy for 'Teddy Bear' and 'Billy Possum.'

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The "Woody Tiger" made its official debut to-day as the official toy of the Wilson administration. As this new monarch of childhood entered the front door of the White House, escorted by Mrs. Wade Hampton, the originator of the novel idea, "Teddy Bear" and "Billy Possum," mascots of previous times looked on with brimming eyes.

Underwood Boomed for President in 1916

His Friends Believe That the Tariff Bill Will Make Him Popular Candidate.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Representative Oscar W. Underwood's friends have started to boom him for the Presidential nomination in 1916. They assert that tariff bills have made Presidents and that Mr. Underwood will come to the front on the bill that passed the House last week.

They are backing Mr. Underwood because they believe that President Wilson will abide by the intent of the Baltimore convention platform which declared in favor of a single term.

These friends of Underwood are confident the Underwood tariff bill will prove acceptable to the country and will grant relief to the masses from heavy burdens of taxation.

TEDDY'S TRIUMPH

A Comic Series That Actually Happened.

The Georgian the other day told in brief form the story of Teddy.

The story of Teddy was so remarkable that one of The Georgian's artists has depicted it as "a comic series that actually happened." His pictures appear below, preceded by a brief introduction:

Mrs. H. E. Grantner, of Hammond, Ind., saw a little 3-year-old boy who was homeless. She pitied him and offered him food and a bed in her home. He looked perfectly demure and harmless.

And he made no trouble at all when sleeping, which he proceeded to do shortly after reaching the house.

But when Teddy (as he was nicknamed) awoke at 5:30 o'clock the next morning, he got busy, and in the course of 60 minutes accomplished the following:

1.—Turned the hose on Mr. Grantner, who was planting sweet peas.

4.—Hit Forrest Grantner, aged 7, with baseball bat, blow landing in pit of stomach. Whipped Ellis Grantner who came to rescue of Forrest.

5.—Then, while the household was recuperating from these blows, Teddy, placed for safekeeping in a room, combined a box of matches and several lace curtains, achieving a first-class bonfire. The damage was $150.

Valdosta Thief Caught.

BAPTISTS LOSE IN MEMBERSHIP RACE

Preparations are under way for the great picnic to be given the First Christian Sunday School by the Second Baptist, the loser in the membership campaign that closed Sunday. The final score of the two schools was First Christian, 60,358; Second Baptist, 52,074.

At the First Christian Church Sunday morning Superintendent C. V. LeCraw, of the winning school, introduced to his audience the superintendent of the Second Baptist, John S. Spalding, who spoke on "What I Think About the First Christian Sunday School."

"You have beaten us," said Mr. Spalding, "but you had to break a world's record to do it. I want to offer the most cordial congratulations of the entire Second Baptist Sunday School."

The contest standing the closing day was:

	Second Baptist.	First Christian.
Attendance	1,233	1,674
Points scored	3,988	5,014
Final standing	52,074	60,358

It is probable that both contestants will enter another campaign with other schools in similar races for membership. To discuss this a meeting of Baptist pastors and superintendents was held Sunday afternoon.

Freight Car Bulletin Shows Trade Is Brisk

Decrease of 17,799 Idle Pieces of Rolling Stock Regarded as a Good Sign.

No slackening in general trade is reflected by the American Railway Association's bulletin on the number of idle freight cars in the United States and Canada on May 1.

On the contrary, a decrease of 17,799, as compared with April 15, would indicate a quickening of business. The decrease for the two weeks is the largest reported since the early part of June, 1912.

On May 1 there was a total of 39,799 idle cars, compared with a shortage of 51,169 on November 7, when the railroads were congested and in need of rolling stock. A year ago idle cars numbered 138,881.

The shrinkage in cars was due largely to the brisk demand for coal cars, which caused a shrinkage in that class of rolling stock from 19,649 to 8,510 cars.

Fugitive, Like Lot's Wife, Turned—Jailed

If Charles Smith, a negro, had not become possessed with an inane curiosity to see how far behind him Chief of Detectives Lanford was Sunday night, when that officer was giving chase to him, he might have escaped. Smith did turn his head, however, rammed a tree and fell unconscious.

Now he is at police headquarters awaiting trial for careless driving.

Smith, in a two-horse rig, while dashing down Hunter Street, nearly collided with the chief, who was driving home. Lanford gave pursuit to the negro, who abandoned his buggy and took to his heels, with Chief Lanford after him.

Lightning Kills Five In Oil Field Tornado

TULSA, OKLA., May 12.—At least five men were killed by lightning, many oil tanks and wells set on fire, power plants damaged and other havoc wrought by a terrific electrical and wind storm that swept over the Tulsa oil district early to-day.

At Collinsville, 20 miles north of here, five pipe line builders, employed by the Texas company, were killed when a bolt of lightning struck their vehicle, en route to oil fields. The wagon was demolished and horses killed.

THREW BRICK AT NEGRO HE MISTOOK FOR PUGILIST

CHICAGO, May 12.—Mistaking a negro in a lunch room for Jack Johnson, the pugilist, on trial for violating the white slave law, Amos Geiger hurled a brick through the plate glass front of the restaurant. Geiger was taken to a police station, where he begged the police to release him that he might "get" Johnson.

SEQUEL TO LOVE FOR DOLL

Maternal Instinct Greatly Developed by Teaching Children to Love Their Dolls.

The little child's doll is mother to the most romantic fairy. And in the years that pass, the doll fades into the petals of a June rose, to evolve the most wondrous of all transformations.

And now comes a more serious period when the joy of real motherhood should be as tranquil as best effort can provide.

This is accomplished with a wonderful remedy known as Mother's Friend, an external application so penetrating in its nature as to thoroughly lubricate every cord, nerve, muscle and tendon involved.

There will be no pain, none of that nausea or morning sickness, no sensation of distress or strain of expanding muscles. The nerves, too, will be calm, thus making the period one of restful days, of peaceful nights and a source of happiest anticipation.

The young, expectant mother must be carefully watchful lest she become absorbed in those mental distresses which ill prepare her for the most important event in her life.

Mother's Friend enables her to avoid all sensation of dread, worry or pain, and thus she is preserved in health and strength to take up the joyful task of motherhood.

You will find Mother's Friend on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle. Do not fail to use it regularly as directed. Write to-day to Bradfield Regulator Company, 155 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., for their most valuable little guide book for expectant mothers.

The Summer Garden

A Unique and Attractive Display of Summer Furniture

Second Floor—Furniture Store

You are invited to enjoy The Summer Garden of Summer Furniture that we have transformed the second floor of our Furniture Store into.

Those planning to make their homes as comfortable as possible against the warm weather will find this display their first aid.

The splendid Crex Furniture—for which we hold the exclusive agency in Atlanta—is here in great variety, chairs, rockers, tables, settees and swings, in green and the baronial brown that blends so well with mahogany and that therefore can be used after the summer season in living rooms.

—Natural finished maple chairs and rockers for porches, at $1.25 to $5.00.

—French willow furniture in green and baronial brown, upholstered richly, chairs, rockers, tables, settees and swings.

—And the new Barnegat Cedar Summer Furniture, new this season. The posts of the chairs, rockers, settees and tables are bark-covered, sweet-smelling cedar. More fitting furniture could hardly be found for the porch of a rustic summer home.

But see all the different kinds—that is your privilege here.

Make Summer Dresses With Aid of

Pneu Form

The Pneumatic Dress Form

PNEU FORM is the only Dress Form that shows you exactly as you are. It will stand for you while you study your own figure, create new designs, make alterations, change trimmings, drape or redrape last year's gown. Women who possess a Pneu Form, and who have their dressmaking done at home or at the dressmaker's, need not stand for hours, nor dress and undress forty times a day at the request, "Just let me try this once more, please."

ALL ON THE SAME FORM

Pneu Form is the only Dress Form in existence which will reproduce absolutely any figure. There is no guesswork about it. It duplicates your exact figure by means of an individual lining made to fit you. This lining is fitted snugly over the corset, reproducing faithfully any variation in size of shoulders or hips. Pneu Form is inflated within this lining.

If your dress fits your Pneu Form it will fit you. The air is contained in a rubber cloth bag, having the general curves, etc., of the human form.

Pneu Form is a skirt form, as the lining is made well down over the largest part of the hips, giving an exact model over which skirts may be fitted and draped. Adjustable rod gives skirt length.

It is the most helpful and satisfactory dress form we have ever seen.

Ask at the pattern counter to have it demonstrated to you.

MILITANT RIOTS GIVE BIG BOOST TO INSURANCE

LONDON, May 12.—Inquiries instituted at Lloyd's have developed the fact that the insurance companies are reaping a golden harvest as a result of suffragette depredations. Business has received a great impetus both from the insurance of golf links as well as from fire risks.

Numerous golf clubs have insured against revenue losses as the result of militant interference, while others have taken out policies insuring golf greens against damage by suffragettes. The premiums charged are $5 per green per annum, the limit of the underwriters' liability being $250 on each green.

These insurances, however, were mostly for three months, because it is believed that the trouble will be settled in that time either by a triumph of the militants or by the suppression of their campaign.

Insurance against fire has been equally brisk, but owing to the great competition in this business rates have not been affected.

Damage to Date $5,000,000.

Estimates of the financial loss caused by suffragette outrages, prepared for the Home Secretary, put the amount as $5,000,000. This sum does not include the expense of employing large numbers of extra police, detectives and watchmen to protect Ministers, public buildings and meetings.

Three detectives have been assigned to protect each Cabinet Minister at all times. All suspected persons are shadowed by plainclothes men and all public buildings are under special guard.

Since the defeat of the woman suffrage bill large numbers of former constitutional suffragists have joined the militant movement. An attack on the House of Lords is one of the new plans, and this is to be accomplished by means of a suffragette typist who could get a position on the reporting staff of the upper house.

Arrests Check Riots.

In spite of the sensational outrages of the past week and although the militants are keeping up a strong bluff, their organization has been shaken by recent arrests of leaders. The militant acts now being committed are the handiwork of suffragettes working independently, and the authorities believe that the removing of the central controlling influences will soon break up the campaign of destruction.

This optimistic view is not shared by politicians generally, who believe that as long as money is forthcoming crimes will be committed.

Militants Start Week By Burning Boat Club.

LONDON, May 12.—Another week of violence was to-day ushered in by suffragettes. Militant women burned the building of the Nottingham Boat Club, damaging a number of boats. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

The police found evidences of incendiarism. A copy of the official organ of the Women's Social and Political Union, The Suffragette, was discovered near by.

Game Warden Plans 'Transplanting' Quail

Birds Trapped Where They're Plentiful Will Be Turned Loose in Counties Where There Are Few.

He hit upon the novel scheme as a means of equalizing the distribution of partridges through the State. In some counties there are few of the birds. From others complaints are pouring into the game warden's office that quail are pulling up corn almost as rapidly as it is planted.

When he found in his mail Monday morning a letter signed by three farmers from Seville, Wilcox County, who said they had been compelled to make three plantings of corn because of voracious quail, Mr. Mercer at once dictated a letter giving them permission to trap as many as they wished.

"Trap them," he said, "and I shall take them to other parts of the State."

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

Oh, Joy! Ice Wagon Really Turns Over.

Out in West End the ice wagons which ply that thriving section for trade usually are followed about from street to street by children who are looking for small bits of the congealed moisture when chipped off by the icemen. The drivers of these wagons seem to be on the job from season to season and come to know all the children by name.

Several days ago, when the weather was rather warm, a joyous catastrophe happened on Culberson Street. One of the big wagons was on the street, when the mules attached to it became frightened at a piece of paper which was fluttered about under their noses by a sudden gust of wind. The mules bolted.

Down the street they tore at breakneck speed. Then one of the wheels hit an electric wire pole and the wagon promptly turned over, breaking the wagon tongue and strewing the street with big cakes of ice. The children viewed the affair with squeals of delight. Not only had they been treated to a sure enough runaway, but here was enough ice on the ground to make their little tummies cool for a week.

So down they swooped on the wreckage. They were met by one of the icemen who politely but firmly informed the kiddies there was nothing doing. The ice, he said, still belonged to the company and he'd protect it with his life. That started something. The children surrounded him and filched bits of ice when he wasn't looking. The driver had gone to a nearby telephone to have another wagon sent out to carry off the remains of the load.

The man on guard had his hands full and realizing he was no match for the horde of youngsters, he bargained with them. Everybody got a big chunk of ice provided they'd promise to go 'way and let the rest of it alone. And the kiddies kept their promise.

Wore a Flower For Mother's Sake.

It was Mothers' Day in Atlanta, and all over the country, yesterday and lots of men wore a white flower for mother's sake. Many of the Atlanta florists anticipated a demand for flowers and laid in a big supply of white carnations.

For a long time in Atlanta men didn't like to wear flowers. The only explanation is that they might be taken for weaklings; the habit, they figured, was one for women, not men. There is one man in the city, however, who for thirty years has always worn a little buttonhole bouquet, summer and winter.

He is the confidential man for one of the big drygoods concerns and although he celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday yesterday—he is as straight and active as a man of half that age. He is passionately fond of flowers and if he were to be without his little bouttonniere it is likely that the day would seem all wrong to him. His wife has made it her special duty to see that his bouquet is ready each morning, usually placing it beside his plate at breakfast.

His bouquet yesterday was a beautiful white carnation, a little token of love for the old mother who died a good many years ago in Ireland.

"Woman's Dress Fad Makes Living High"

Professor Sargent Says Americans Adopt Grotesque Styles.

DES MOINES, IA., May 12.—"The mad pursuit of American women for the varying fads of dress and their acceptance of designs from the European fashion centers as mandates in technique of dress are directly responsible for the high cost of living in this country to-day." So declared Prof. Walter Sargent, of the school of education of the University of Chicago in an address before the convention of the Western Drawing and Manual Training Association.

"The French send dress and home art designs to America which they themselves will not accept. One does not see those grotesque styles in Paris.

"We need in America an established bureau of design."

Macon Union Depot Prospects Brighter

Central and Southern to Decide by May 27 on Joint or Separate Terminals.

Prospects are that Macon will get a union passenger station.

Officials of the Central of Georgia and the Southern Railways went over the situation at length with the Georgia Railroad Commission on Monday.

The Central submitted blue prints and terms under which it is willing to join with the Southern in building a union station.

The Southern officials asked for fifteen days in which to submit the proposal to the heads of the system in Washington. This was granted, with the proviso that if the Southern does not answer definitely on May 27, both sides shall have ready plans for individual stations.

Girl With $700,000 Will Stay at Work

BATH, N. Y., May 12.—Although Miss Helen Klecker, a pretty 17-year-old stenographer of the Curtiss Aeroplane Company, has fallen heir to a $700,000 estate, she likes her "job" so well that she is loath to quit and announced to-day that she intends to stick as long as she can.

Miss Klecker received the property, which is in New York and at Havre DeGrace, Md., from her mother's family. Her mother, who has been dead several years, was the direct descendant of a Russian who came to this country a number of years ago and accumulated a large fortune estimated at $7,000,000.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Denials that Lieutenant Governor Barrett O'Hara was a member of a party of four at the Hotel Sherman for three days in January were made to-day to the Senate's sub-committee investigating charges of immorality against the Lieutenant Governor.

Employees of the hotel told of serving drinks and food to a party of three, two women and one man, in a suit there. Members of the Chicago Press Club testified that they saw O'Hara at the club on the night of January 17 and the two subsequent nights.

ESTHETIC THIEF IN BEAUTY SHOP RAID

Mr. "Nancy" Burglar Shows a Fondness for Hair Nets, Rouge and Nail Bleach.

Ladies and Gentlemen: Permit us to introduce Mr. "Nancy" Burglar.

He is conspicuous among the crowd by his powdered face, his curled hair, rouged cheeks and manicured nails. If you see him, notify the police, as he is wanted for rifling the Bookhammer hair-dressing parlors, 71½ Whitehall Street, Sunday night.

Secures Beautifying Outfit.

One gross of hair nets; a box of eyebrow pencils; one dozen orange sticks; eight jars of cuticle ice; one dozen boxes of face powder; ten brilliant bandeaux; two bottles of brilliantine; four fancy barettes; several jars of rouge; manicure sets; cuticle knives; a gas hair-curling stove, and a large quantity of nail bleach.

Robbery Puzzles Chief.

Police Chief Beavers, when informed of the amazing robbery, scratched his head and thought for a long time.

"Now who would have thought that a thief could stoop so low as to raid a hair-dressing establishment?" he finally exclaimed in disgust. "No doubt he's going to get all 'dolled up' and parade down Peachtree Street. Will wonders never cease?"

CLERGYMAN PRAISES ECKMAN'S ALTERATIVE

People who have lung trouble are often filled with bright hopes of recovery, only to realize that improvement is but temporary. Those who had it and used Eckman's Alterative can testify to its beneficial effects. No one need doubt it—there is plenty of evidence from live witnesses. Investigate the following:

Amenia, N. Y.

"Gentlemen: On February 9, 1908, I came to Amenia, suffering with tuberculosis, that originated in a severe case of lagrippe. My physician gave me little encouragement. I was having terrible night sweats and midday chills and losing flesh rapidly, having gone from 155 to 135 pounds. I coughed and raised continually and became so weak that walking a few feet exhausted me. My father, who is a clergyman, heard of Eckman's Alterative and induced me to take it. The night sweats and chills disappeared, my cough became easier and gradually diminished and in a few days I developed an appetite, the first in months. I am now in perfect health, back to 155 pounds. I feel certain that I owe my life to Eckman's Alterative."

(Signed) E. H. COWLES.

"Gentlemen: I wish to add my indorsement to every word of his testimonial."

(Signed) REV. J. J. COWLES, Pastor Presbyterian Church.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe throat and lung affections, bronchitis, bronchial asthma, stubborn colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drug stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

DELAY IN CHURCH UNION COUNSELED

Dr. Matthews, Northern Presbyterian Moderator, Fights Merger Move in Assemblies Here.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 12. "I do not think the question of a union of the several branches of the Presbyterian Church should be broached at this time, as our assembly is to be the guest of the Southern Presbyterians," said Dr. Mark Allison Matthews, of Seattle, Wash., moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. (Northern Division), here to-day. "We have always stood for closer co-operation, but we do not want to be indelicate and present the question when we are the guests of our Southern friends."

Dr. Matthews came here from Dalton, Ga., where he preached yesterday to a former congregation. He will go to Atlanta Wednesday.

"No doctrinal controveries whatever will come before our assembly," said Dr. Matthews. "The elect infant clause will not be an issue with us, as our doctrine is that every infant dying in infancy is saved. Our questions will be mostly administrative and constructive.

"We shall consider the increase of missionary efforts, enlarging the scope of the college work, larger endowments for colleges, ministerial relief, extension of the home mission work and establishing and building new churches.

"This year we plan to raise a $10,000,000 permanent endowment for ministerial relief, so that every aged minister of the church may receive at least $500 to $600 a year, and that widows and orphans of ministers may be provided for."

OVER $2,000 AN ARISTOCRAT.—"If your pay exceeds $2,000 you are an aristocrat," said Professor T. S. Adams, of the Wisconsin Tax Commission, at Madison, in discussing the proposed income tax. He would lower the tax exemption to a $2,000 limit.

$30,000,000 FIRM BARS 'CIGS.'—Clarence S. Funk, of Chicago, new president of the Rumeley Company, a reorganized $30,000,000 farm implements manufacturing concern, announced that his firm would not employ young men who had the cigarette habit.

ZANDERO AND CHRISTIE TO MEET IN 10-ROUND GO

CHICAGO, ILL., May 12.—Ernie Zanders, globe-trotting middleweight star of this city, has grabbed off a nice match at last. He clinched up a 10-round contest with Gus Christie of Milwaukee last night, the affair to be decided in the baseball park at Madison, Wis., on the night of May 20. There is to be no decision if the men are both on their feet at the finish. The weight has not yet been decided upon but probably will be 156 pounds at 3 in the afternoon. There is a big convention there at the time.

Diplomas Needed to Avoid Teachers' Test

High School Instructors Not Having Degrees Must Take Exams Under New System.

A large number of Georgia's 1,500 high school teachers are squirming uncomfortably on the anxious seat as a result of the new system of certification that will become operative with the new school year.

M. L. Brittain, State Superintendent of Schools, said Monday that many teachers were inquiring as to their status under the new regulations, which for the first time require examinations for high school teachers.

The fears of some of the teachers will be allayed by the information that the degrees from accredited institutions will be accepted in lieu of examinations. Most of the others will have to submit to tests.

DIAGNOSES HIS OWN CASE.—Diagnosing his ailment as an attack of appendicitis, Dr. Murray B. Kirkpatrick, of Trenton, N. J., drove his automobile to a hospital and then ordered a quick operation upon himself. It was successful.

3 Railroads Fined $1,300 in U. S. Court

Fines amounting to $1,300 were imposed Monday in the United States District Court on the Atlantic Coast Line and Louisville and Nashville Railway Companies, lessees of the Georgia Railroad, and the Southern Railway Company for violating the sixteen-hour and safety appliance laws.

Nineteen causes of action were included in the indictment of the Georgia Railroad lessees. The charge was that employees were forced to work more than eighteen hours. The total fine was $950.

It was shown that five Southern employees worked 22 hours. This company was fined $250.

The Atlantic Coast Line and the Louisville and Nashville were fined $100 for violating the safety appliance act.

To-morrow Brings One of Our Notable Twice-a-Year Events, The Semi-Annual

Half-Price Millinery Sale

Maybe you have been awaiting this event---well you might. It is the "Grand Prix" of all millinery sales.

Nothing Atlanta knows approximates it. The hats it offers are those accepted as fashionable this season; correct, smart in unusual ways. The greater part---about all of them---comes from the little shop, Estelle Mershon, in the very center of fastidious New York, 20 E. 46th St.

Included are

Street, Traveling and Dress Hats

Until Now $12.00 to $30.00

Now $6.00 to $15.00

Some one hundred and fifty in all---no describing them---but so varied are the shapes and trimmings that it will be like choosing from regular stock and paying just half.

Is the first spring hat beginning to look a little faded, are you going away this summer, does a newly acquired suit or dress call for a hat to match? Here are splendid affirmative answers for these questions.

The selling begins at eight o'clock when the store opens.

SENATE WILL DEMAND REAL RECIPROCITY

Makeshift Written Into Wilson-Underwood Bill Arouses Bitter Opposition.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Genuine reciprocity, and not the makeshift written into the WilsonUnderwood bill, Senators believe, will e demanded and insisted upon by the Senate. Majority members of the Finance Committee are now endeavoring to see just how far they may go in rewriting the sections of the House bill to make it conform to what they believe the underlying principle of all reciprocal agreements should be.

Chairman Simmons, of the Finance Committee, and Senator Hoke Smith, one of the most influential members of the committee, have expressed their adherence to the doctrine of reciprocity.

Both have said they hoped the bill when it became a law would provide machinery that would enable the President to negotiate reciprocity agreements and that rates would be so arranged that the President would have an effective weapon at his command to compel concessions. The details of whatever plans they may have in mind have not been worked out.

Many Amendments Certain.

Every majority member of the committee has stated amendments to the bill and that in many items the rates will be increased.

The methods of procedure of the Senate Committee and the House differ radically.

Senator Kern, majority leader, moved last week that when the Senate adjourn it be until next Tuesday afternoon. This prevailed, and at the very threshold of debate on the tariff, by Democratic votes, a delay of three days was ordered in the face of the demand of President Wilson that not a moment be lost in rushing through the bill in the Senate.

In the Senate the Democrats are taking into consideration the difference on the cost of production here and abroad in fixing their rates. A number of articles that have been put on the free list will be shifted back to the dutiable, and a few articles made dutiable in the House will be made free. Dye stuffs and pigments are notable instances of the differences between the two houses.

The rates on high grade cotton are to be raised and a new classification arranged.

Window and plate glass as fixed by the House are deemed to be too low and will be raised.

All these changes afford opportunity of subsequent reductions under reciprocal trade agreements in line with the real Democratic tariff idea.

Senator Smith, of Michigan, bases caustic criticisms on the sugar schedule, the manufacture of beef sugar being a great industry of his State.

"After the trust has run its competitors out of business, as they will under this law," says Mr. Smith, "and competition no longer exist, the price of sugar will be increased to what it was before beet sugar was discovered. If you intend to withdraw from circulation all the money invested in sugar production and turn it over to foreigners, it ought to be done in the open. Give the people a chance to be heard, and do not do this in the dark and gloom of a secret chamber."

Can't Lose "Wilson."

Senator Smith says it is singular that all the Democratic tariff bills looking to free trade bore the name of Wilson:

"I saw Bryan help carry William L. Wilson on his shoulder from the house on the day of his 'great triumph.' It was not very long before these same shoulders carried a weight so heavy that it has taken twenty years to regain the confidence of the people.

"I don't believe that prosperity can continue under this law. In your hearts you don't believe it or you would not be so worried as you are. It was faith in your promised good works that put you in power.

"If this question were to be submitted to the people to-day you would be repudiated and thrown from office. The American people are not for free trade, and that's what you are endeavoring to force upon them."

The fight to order public hearings will come up again Tuesday.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Are You a Mason?" at Atlanta.

This week's offering at the Atlanta Theater by the Miss Billy Long Company, "Are You a Mason?" will be given its first performance at a matinee this afternoon. The management has decided to have three matinees a week—Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. "Are You a Mason?" is a farce and is said to be very funny. It was adapted from the German and the plot is a complicated one, giving abundant opportunity for amusing situations.

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

Paul Dickey, the famous football star, heads this week's bill of Keith vaudeville at the Forsyth. Other numbers are the Apollo Trio, that pose as bronze statues; Billy K. Wells, character comedian; Clarence Wilbur and the Sunny Folks in a school-room sketch; Newhoff and Phels, in new comedy idea; Mayo and Allman, singers; Macleavy's Marvel, jumper, and motion pictures. Matinee this afternoon.

Family Vaudeville at Bijou.

Four acts of family vaudeville and worth-while motion pictures make up the bill this week at the Bijou. The Four Wilhats, novelty bicycle and auto act, is the headliner. Novelty is the keynote of the bill. Two matinees to-day; 2:30 and 4.

FROST HITS PENNSYLVANIA.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., May 12.—The worst frost of several years was experienced in this section last night. The damage is estimated in the hundreds of thousands.

Police Hold Mob Bent on Lynching

Members of the County Police Department are Monday congratulating Lieutenant J. M. Carroll and Policemen J. W. Williams and L. W. Allen on their escape from a mob of 200 negroes, who Sunday afternoon threatened their lives when they refused to hand over Doc Burnett, the negro slayer of a fifteen-year-old colored boy, Charlie Simon. The mob was bent on lynching Burnett.

The mob approached the officers on the Marietta Road as they were waiting for a street car to take their prisoner to the Tower.

"We are going to get that nigger even if we have to kill you," the leaders shouted to Lieutenant Carroll. "He stabbed Simon in cold blood and we are going to string him up."

The officers drew their revolvers and took their positions ready to fight to a finish. The negroes retired.

Burnett, in the Tower, later declared the trouble had been caused by an argument about a girl. Eyewitnesses, though, declared Burnett drew a knife and stabbed the boy without provocation. He died before medical aid could reach him.

Thousands Observe Mothers' Day Here

Throngs Wear Flowers and Attend Special Services—Donations to Old Women's Home Generous.

"Mothers' Day" has passed and the world has resumed the burden of life. However, following the celebration people are finding the load not half so heavy as before it.

Thousands of white flowers apeared on the streets of Atlanta Sunday. Florists report an enormous sale of carnations and roses, the emblems worn by the celebrants.

Returns from the contribution boxes placed in hotel lobbies and other public places show generous donations for the benefit of the Home for Old Women. Throngs attended the churches and heard sermons and music appropriate for the occasion.

Dispatches from all over the United States declare that the day had been the most successful in the history of "Mothers' Day" celebration.

Called From Bride By 'Irritable Papa'

NEW YORK, May 12.—A cablegram from the bridegroom's father containing the word "scoundrel" caused Theodore Gonzales, of San Jose, Costa Rica, to part from his bride of a few hours, who was Miss Maxine Seagrave, of Toronto, after they had boarded the steamer Carrillo for a honeymoon trip to Central America.

Gonzales explained to his bride that his father was irritable at times; in fact, he had once killed a man when irritated, and the young man thought it best that he go to Port Limon alone and meet his father.

STELZLE URGES RECREATION TO KEEP OUT VICE

Commission Is Recommended to Provide Wholesome Amusement for the Masses in Atlanta.

Dr. Charles Stelzle, of New York, who will be one of the big figures in the Presbyterian assembles, and who organized the work of the Men and Religion Forward Movement in Atlanta, declared Monday there is a vast difference in the moral tone of the Atlanta to-day and the Atlanta of a year ago. But he insisted that reform go further—that the city name a recreation commission to provide amusements to take the place of harmful forms of recreation, recognized as contributory to vice conditions.

Dr. Stelzle said he did not wish to detract in the slightest measure from the great work already accomplished, but he explained that the city would be most safe from a recurrence of vice evils if it provides wholesome amusements.

"I am amazed at the results of the work," declared Dr. Stelzle. "From my observations during the few days that I have been in the city, I do not hesitate to say Atlanta is now one of the most moral cities in the South, and will rank, morally, with any city in the United States.

"A year ago vice flourished in the city and the street crowds reflected its influences. The change is apparent to even the most casual observer. Morality is in the air in Atlanta and the moral atmosphere of the city is infinitely better."

Though gratified that the movement which he organized should have been so successful in ridding Atlanta of vice, Dr. Stelzle declared the city could not continue to be morally clean unless present conditions are made more attractive to the average man. Clean, wholesome recreation he declared to be the best solution of the problem.

"I would suggest the appointment of a recreation commission," he said. "This commission shoud be composed of men who have given some study to the amusement needs of the city. This commission could call in outside recreation experts to its conferences and get the benefits of the work that has been done in other cities.

"Atlanta seems to be lacking in opportunities for the amusement of the average person, especially on Sunday. The opportunities that are here could, however, be enlarged and made more attractive. For instance, the Auditorium should be a rallying place every Sunday afternoon for several thousand people. The recitals and programs given there should be thoroughly advertised and the people should be urged to attend.

Phone Report Inconclusive.

VALDOSTA.—The committee from the Valdosta Chamber of Commerce which went to Atlanta to investigate the claims of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company relative to an increase in telephone rates here has returned and has made an inconclusive report.

Quick Thinking Wins

At a dinner not long ago Thomas W. Lawson was talking on the subject of success.

"Success in finance," said Mr. Lawson, "is due in a great measure to prompt action. The doubting, hesitating, Hamlet type of man had best keep out of finance. He is quite sure to be swamped."

Keen Brains Count

Keep on with your "bacon and soggy pancake breakfast" if you choose, and stay in the Hamlet class, but if you really want to get ahead, just begin to live right.

A good start is to cut out the heavy, indigestible breakfast and have a dish of

Grape-Nuts

and Cream

Analysis shows that Albumen, Water and Phosphate of Potash are the three principal essentials for building up one's thinking outfit—the Brain. You get the first two in everyday food, but the third, the vital organic Phosphate of Potash, is often lacking.

Grape-Nuts Food made of whole wheat and malted barley is rich in this vital, brain-building element.

A good, healthy working brain can be built up on right food. That's why Tens of Thousands of get-ahead Americans eat their regular morning dish of this distinctively American food.

LILLIAN RUSSELL IS A FOE TO DRINK

NEW YORK, May 12.—At last Lillian Russell has answered the question of how she retains her youth and beauty. Miss Russell says: "Alcohol is death to the beauty of mind, body and soul."

Miss Russell's lines in her monologue in regard to drink are such a hit that she says if she could she would like to go out and do nothing but preach temperance while she is on the stage.

"I never have drunk anything stronger than a little Madeira, the lightest of wines, and I have given that up," she says. "People regard it as remarkable that I have kept my good looks and my youth. You can't keep your health unless you live in harmony with nature.

"Most women need exercise, nourishing food and a proper amount of sleep. People who stay up until all hours do not get the proper amount of sleep, nor do they get it at the right time. I have always loathed champagne and other strong drinks and fought against the cultivation of a taste for liquor.

"Girls who refuse to touch liquor get along. Those who begin with light drinks finally cultivate appetites for whiskey and wine, and are pitiable things to behold."

"The cancer death rate in the United States is increasing at the rate of 2½ per cent a year, and a corresponding increase is occurring practically throughout the world. The average age at death in cancer of all forms is 59 years—60.4 years for men and 58.2 for women. Of the total mortality from cancer 90 per cent of the victims are forty years old or more."—Frederick J. Hoffman, statistician of one of America's biggest insurance companies.

"The American college of to-day is between the upper and nether millstones. The German-American university has now become the home of scholarship and research. If the American college is to repeat in the twentieth century the inestimable service it rendered to American civilization in the nineteenth century it must recognize the dawn of a new era. Let the typical graduate be trained not only in scholarships and culture, but how to loaf wisely."—Henry Louis Smith, president of Washington and Lee University.

"In my judgment everything which occurs in court should be open to public hearing. The fact that an action for divorce is pending should be given the widest publicity to prevent fraud and injury to those who are innocent. I do not think, however, that the loathsome details—more humiliating generally to the innocent than guilty—should be published."—Justice Guy of the New York State Supreme Court.

"I feel as if I am making a twentieth century flight into another world. Comparisons are impossible; it will take me some time to get my breath. What a lot Europe might learn from wondrous America! But then one must consider; it is much easier to build up a new country than to change an old one."—C. de Bruyne, an Alderman of Ghent, Belgium, who is visiting New York.

WASHINGTON ATTRACTS EUROPE AS ART CENTER

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Washington's advancement as an art center has brought it to the attention of Europe strongly in the past few years, according to Seymour J. Thurber, a collector of Chicago. The masterpieces of the Old World adorn Washington salons, and the capital now is considered one of the most prominent art markets, he says.

'Private John' Allen Explains His Title

Cited War Record(Too, When Political Opponent, a General, Asked Veterans' Vote in Campaign.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Private John Allen, who for many years represented Mississippi in the House, has explained how he got his title. He declared that when he first was a candidate for Congress he was opposed for nomination by a Confederate general.

The general and he addressed a crowd at a town around which a battle of the war had been fought. The general told now he had fought and won that engagement and appealed for votes on that score.

Allen then spoke and declared he, too, had fought there, but as a private. He added that after the battle he had stood sentinel while the general slept. He asked that all generals vote for his opponent and all privates for him. They did so.

DRIVERS BEGIN PRACTICE FOR CLIMB OF HILL

NEXT Saturday afternoon the old Stewart Avenue hill will again become a scene of lively interest when the big, powerful stripped cars tear up the mile long incline in daring attempts to lower the records set last year by L. S. Crane's Pope-Hartford and George Hanson's Studebakers.

All the latter part of this week the course will be alive with contestants on practice sprints, for the Board of County Commissioners have allowed the Automobile Association to have exclusive use of the hill on the days of May 14, 15, 16 between the hours of one and three. This generous arrangement will allow ample time for tuning up of cars and motorcycles and give the drivers an opportunity to become familiar with the road.

Entries for the contest are coming in at a rapid rate and from present indications the second annual hill climb of the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory Association will eclipse all former events.

Entries to Date.

L. S. Crane—Pope-Hartford, "Betsy."
Studebaker Co.—Three cars.
Travis & Jones—Columbia.
Johnson Co.—Stoddard-Dayton.
Atlanta Auto Sales Co.—National.
W. J. Stoddard—Lion.
Harold McKenzie—Knight Special.
Ellis Car Co., Greenville, S. C.—(Name of car not given.)
I. O. Tousley, Alpharetta—Ford.
T. B. Goodloe—Locomobile.
Stearns Co.—Stearns.

This list will be swelled to about three times the number by the closing time for entries. Secretary Elleby, of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., is receiving all applications.

Handsome Prizes Offered.

In addition to the association cup and the E. Rivers Realty cup, donations have been received that will make an attractive array of trophies. Following is the list.

Prizes and cups in automobile events have been donated as follows:

Atlanta Constitution—Silver cup.
Durham Jewelry Co.—Silver cup.
Elyea-Austell Co.—Silver cup.
Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.—Silver cup.
Fisk Rubber Co.—Silver cup.
Republic Rubber Co.—Silver cup.
Studebaker Corporation—Silver Cup.
Stewart-Warner Corporation—Auto speedometer.
Reed Oil Co.—One barrel Triple "E" oil.
Johnson-Gewinner Co.—$15.00 raincoat.
New South Rubber Co.—232x3 1-2 Southern red tubes.
Auto Supply Co.—One pair $3.50 gloves.
Motorcycle Events—
Alexander-Seawald Co.—One pair motorcycle gloves and leggins.
Elyea-Austell Co.—One Troxel motorcycle saddle.
U. S. Tire Co.—Two motorcycle tires.
Hendee Mfg. Co.—One electric motorcycle horn.
Johnson-Gewinner Co.—One pair motorcycle leggins.
Stewart-Warner Corporation—One motorcycle speedometer.
Reed Oil Co.—One-half barrel Triple "E" oil.

Fighter, With Stiff Punch, Passes

Scrapper of To-day a Scientist

By H. M. Walker.

WHERE are the ring "sluggers" of yesterday—the men who could drop a right against the chin, or drive a left to the body and call it a day's work?

* * *

The "killer" has disappeared along with the lightning rod, horse car and Republican vote. In his place we have the clever boxer, scientific, but punchless, remarkably fast on his feet, but over careful with his hands.

When Ad Wolgast hit the derailing switch he left the lightweight title in the hands of a young man with but five "K's" in his whole record. And this young man, since having the championship wished on him, has done nothing but take a daily decision over a T-bone steak, and practice the toe dance.

It's the same way all along the line, from the bantam babes to the bull neck heavies. The present day boxer is light on his feet, runs well both backward and forward, is kind and considerate with his opponents, and will fight if forced—perhaps.

* * *

WHEN it comes to playing a good stiff game of tag, our bantams have the world by the windpipe.

Three more clever boxers than Johnnie Coulon, the fight fear champion, and his two trailers, Johnnie Williams and Eddie Campi, never borrowed bathrobes.

* * *

THESE boys make the hummingbird look like a barnyard duck for speed, but if they had to win their fights with one punch they would be to the fight game what the Yankees are to the American League.

* * *

FEATHERWEIGHTS Johnnie Kilbane and Johnnie Dundee gave us twenty pounds of fast and furious waltzing. Had they been using palm leaf fans instead of decorative gloves the Vernon pavilion would have been blown over into Arizona.

After watching this exhibition I believe that it is no more than right that Kilbane should be credited with originating the "Swat-the-fly" idea.

Dundee claims to carry a knockout shot but from what we have seen of the little banana tamer he is badly in need of target practice.

* * *

WILLIE RITCHIE accuses himself of being the lightweight champion of the world. A careful search of his record shows the San Francisco lad to possess the punch of a paralytic. In forty ring engagements he has floored but five, stopping such terribles as Monk Enochs, Kid French, Tony Josephs, Tommy McFarland and Yankee Schwartz.

Freddie Welsh totes the lightweight championship titles of both England and Australia, but his system is perfectly free of the knockout stuff. Frederick can show "Yankee Doodle" on an opponent's ribs and jab him on the nose three hundred and sixty-four times to the round without letting the other fellow know that he is in trouble.

And there's Packey McFarland, our 133-pound "lightweight." With the benefit of his extra poundage Packey is unable to break into the knockout column. He's fast, clever and has a beautiful baritone voice.

We have hopes for the 133-pound division, though. Joe Rivers is great on the marble slab thing, and Leach Cross has both the punch and the control to put it over the plate. "Bull" Anderson, at present in the squab stage, can win with one slam and he doesn't require over six inches of space to work in.

* * *

THE welters and middleweights—why dig up the dead?

New Trainer of Cubs Never Saw Ball Game

President Murphy Tells of Meeting Between Dr. Frederick Alex Hart and Evers.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Dr. Frederick Axel Hart, new trainer of the Cubs, never saw a ball game, according to President Charles W. Murphy, but has an unbroken record of successes in handling athletes since he left an institute in Stockholm, Sweden. This is Murphy's version of the meeting of Manager John Evers and the trainer:

Evers—Ever play ball?

Hart—I never saw a game, but I can perform an operation for appendicitis.

Evers—So can I. But the patient would die.

Hart succeeds Doc Semmens, who severed his connection with the Cubs the same day he struck Manager Evers.

GRIFFIN SUCCEEDS WEBER AS AMERICUS MANAGER

AMERICUS, GA., May 12.—The Americus ball team left yesterday for Waycross in charge of First Baseman Hal Griffin as temporary manager. Thoroughly tired of continued defeat sustained by the Americus aggregation, the directors met this morning and relieved Manager Harry Weber of that office, temporarily at least, putting Griffin in charge.

Americus has lost seven of the nine games played already, and while Manager Weber ascribes defeat to bad luck, local fans are less charitably inclined. It is generally suspected here that the salary limit rule is not being observed by all of the clubs of the league, and as Americus is living within the salary limits she is placed at disadvantage in employment of proficient players.

Ill luck of the Americus team recently has caused interest in baseball to flag perceptibly, although a winning streak would quickly restore enthusiasm.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 12.—After the first week of the invasion of the East by the Western clubs of the National League, one thing is very apparent. The East, as a whole, is stronger than the West this year, but that does not necessarily indicate the pennant winner will be a product of the East.

At first, it was thought there would be only two clubs in the East that could put up any kind of a front against the Western teams which were rated to be strong. These two were New York and Philadelphia, but now Brooklyn has come through with the best-looking team that has been developed in years across the bridge. Boston is also playing good enough ball.

* * *

I WANT to pause for a minute to discuss Boston and Pittsburg. Behind the Beaneaters this year is a shrewd manager, one who is building. "Chief" Stallings is picking up all the likely ball players he can find around loose, and then sorting them out as they come. He is constructing; and out of the twisted mass of baseball junk which he took over at the beginning of the season, he is going to have a smooth-running machine soon. The Boston club, although many good hitters have resided on the team from time to time, has long been the victim of its own sluggishness. Stallings is trying to add a little speed to his club. He realizes its value. With this notion in mind, he went out and signed Mann to play in the outfield. Stallings thinks the boy will make a great ball player if given time.

"He's the fastest man in baseball," the "Chief" told us when we were in Boston in the early part of the season, and he wasn't punning on the name, either.

* * *

STALLINGS has also picked up "Dick" Rudolph, the pitcher of the International League, and once a member of the Giants for a brief period. Rudolph will win a lot of games for Stallings. Then there is a different spirit manifested by the club now, which is a reflection of the Stallings style. When the game gets hard, the boys do not abandon the pursuit of victory and blow up as former Boston teams did. No, sir. It is in there fighting, as proved by the fact they took two extra inning games from the Pirates last week, with Wagner in both battles.

* * *

ABOUT the Pittsburg club, I do not know what to say. I have not seen the team play this year so far, but from the gossip in the league and the box scores, it is evident that the club is all off its balance. The return of Wagner is going to help the team a whole lot, but Clarke's greatest disappointment is the failure of his pitchers to come through. Before the season, the Pittsburg pitching staff was regarded as one of the best in the league, if not the very best, both by the players themselves and by the newspaper writers who follow the teams. Many times ball players will approve a man whom the general public and the writers cannot see. For instance, Fletcher, formerly the shortstop of the Giants, was generally rated more highly by ball players than by the general public and writers. They know his ground-covering ability, and he has the finest pair of hands I ever saw on a ball player.

* * *

BUT, to return to the Pittsburg staff, Hendrix, who led the league last year; Adams, Robinson, O'Toole and Camnitz sound like a collection of world beaters. You'd think it would only be necessary to have one of those names announced as the Pittsburg pitcher, and the game would be over. Not one of these men has been going smoothly this year. Hendrix has been wild, and O'Toole has been wild, and the staff has been generally out of shape. O'Toole is back at his old job of losing games by one run. I guess he holds the record for this jointly with "Nap" Rucker.

* * *

THE Pirates were rated as a great slugging team before the season. It was on the peerless pitching and slambang slugging they were to ride through the league to an early pennant, because even the members of the club themselves concede that the team lacks speed. But the pitchers would hold the opposing teams to one or two runs, and the Pittsburg boys would pile up many with their bats, and there would be a nice little ball game for Mr. Clarke all wrapped up in cotton batting and tin foil to be put in the moth balls. However, the pitchers have been permitting many runs, and the batters have not been slugging; and the race is not destroyed yet.

"The Pirates condition slowly. Wait until the warm weather sets in," a Pittsburg rooter whispered into my ear the other day.

It will do the team little good to round into form along in September. It is my honest opinion that the club is going to get on the move one of these days and kick up a lot of dust. It yet will be a trouble-maker in the league, because those pitchers are sure to begin to twirl and the batters to hit. Therefore, it pleases the Giants immensely to see the Pirates crowded down as far as possible at this stage, especially as we are not up any too high in the ladder of the club standing ourselves.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Gunboat Smith stops at nothing. Word was received from San Francisco last night that Smith sent Jim Jeffries the following telegram. "Do you want to come up North and act as my sparring partner? Answer immediately."

* * *

Smith is training for his match with Jess Willard, which will be fought in San Francisco on May 17. The winner will probably be matched to box Luther McCarty for the white heavyweight championship of the world on July 4.

* * *

Willard has engaged five sparring partners, while Smith up to date has only the veteran, Bob Armstrong to work with.

* * *

Buck Crouse and Blink McCloskey will clash in a six-round battle at Pittsburg May 19. Articles were signed yesterday.

* * *

Matty McCue and Jeff O'Connell are rounding into great shape for their ten-round scrap at Racine, Wis., Thursday night. Both boys are training for the bout in Chicago. Joe Sullivan, manager of O'Connell, writes that his protege is in the best shape of his life and is sure to cop the long end of the purse.

* * *

Pittsburg is after a bout between Bat Nelson and Ray Parker. Parks is a rough, rugged fellow and has been defeating all his opponents in decisive fashion.

* * *

* * *

Kid Young is a frequent visitor at George Gaelelis' shoe shining parlors. Young is busy telling the various fight fans what he will do to the next boy who musters up enough courage to meet him in the roped arena.

* * *

Illinois boxing fans are clamoring louder than ever for a boxing bill. Recently Mayor Harrison, Barrett O'Hara and other officials witnessed several sparring exhibitions at Springfield and were loud in their praise for the manly art.

* * *

Nate Lewis, manager of Charlie White, writes from Chicago that his protege is getting into fine shape for his return match with Joe Thomas at New Orleans, May 19. Lewis says White is sure to beat Thomas again. White will go after Jack Britton if he succeeds in defeating Thomas.

Fight Referee Usually Correct

Floto Defends Charley Eyton

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, May 12.—Voicing their opinions. That's the privilege of every gathering where boxing bouts are decided. Yet how often have we found the great majority in error while taking issue with the judge who renders the decision. Many and many a time have I seen the third man in the ring absolutely correct in his judgment, and yet the crowd howled its disapproval. Then also have I seen the referee quite wrong and the crowd give him great applause for the verdict. It's all the way you look at it; it's the angle from which you view the contest.

And yet with it all I'll wager that the man in the ring is more often correct than the crowd seated about the arena. The official in the inclosure is generally one supposed to know the game, the tricks, advantages that score points and everything else that becomes necessary to make him a fair and impartial judge. For that reason he is better able to reach a correct verdict than the outsider, who comes only on occasions to view the fights, and who nine times out of ten is prejudiced. Of course, when an incompetent man officiates, then our argument is dashed to the ground—we are left without a leg to stand upon.

* * *

HOW many times have you sat at the ringside when one man's friends seemed in the majority? You've seen this favorite beaten a mile, and yet the referee, for fear of adverse criticism, either calls the bout a "draw" or awards the decision to the man whose friends are shouting for him and yet who failed to win. I've seen this occur time and again, and so have you.

Just now Charley Eyton of Los Angeles is being "panned" for calling the Dundee-Kilbane bout a draw. The press reports tell us that the verdict was unpopular and that Kilbane won. Perhaps so. But we have always found Eyton quite correct in his decisions. For years he has officiated in Los Angeles, and no complaint has been heard. He may have erred this time for all we know. But wait until the smoke of battle clears away and you'll find that his verdict wasn't so far amiss. That, at any rate, is my guess.

* * *

IF the verdict was not in accordance with the facts, then Kilbane has but himself to blame. His stalling tactics are quite unbecoming for a champion and have got him in bad in the East until his last fight, when he redeemed himself with a knockout and regain some of his standing. A champion is supposed to carry the brunt of the battle. If he allows his opponent to assume the aggressive from start to finish, how can he hope to gain the favor of the referee? Isn't the fellow who rushes the battle and makes it possible for the spectators to see real action entitled to something?

WE WILL GET LEAD WHEN WE RETURN HOME

—JOE AGLER.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 12.—Billy Smith will use Chappelle or Brady to open up the Memphis series, with Graham catching.

The Crackers romped on the Billiken hurlers yesterday and scored an easy victory. Gilbert Price won both games won by the Crackers in this series.

We hit the ball to all corners of the lot, for home runs, three-base hits, two-base hits and singles.

Harry Welchonce had a great day, both at bat and in the field. He got four hits out of four trips to the plate, one being a home run, and pulled down line drives that looked impossible. He had a great day.

Tommy Long nearly hit the "bull" again. His home run just missed the big sign by inches.

Bill Bailey got back in the game and was robbed of a home run by a great catch by Kutina.

Take it all in all, the Crackers hit the ball as they should, and we feel confident we will keep going, now that we have started.

Wally Smith turned his ankle and will probably be out of the game for a few days. George Rohe will go to third until Wally is able to cavort around his old position.

The Crackers travel nearly 1,400 miles in the next week, including Montgomery to Memphis, then to New Orleans and back to Atlanta.

The Crackers do not hope to regain first position till we reach home, but will hold second place, and when Mobile gets on the road they will not win so many games. With us at home we should regain the position Billy Smith's ball club should hold.

MANDOT AND ANDERSON WORK HARD FOR SCRAP

LOS ANGELES, May 12.—Joe Mandot and Bud Anderson both went through hard workouts yesterday for their scheduled 20-round contest a week from to-morrow night at Vernon.

Johnny Dundee and his manager, Scotty Monteith, returned yesterday morning from the East. Dundee will shortly take up quarters at Venice to train for his match at Vernon with Ad Wolgast on June 10.

Season's Sensation Is W. Johnson

Dodgers Stir Things Up a Bit, Too

By Percy H. Whiting.

FAR be it from us to embark on that time-honored and worn argument as to the Greatest Pitcher in the World, BUT—

Just back from a chain-lightning jaunt through the upper right-hand corner of the big league territory, we voice one fact-proved conclusion: that Walter Johnson is the only genuine sensation of a good, brisk season.

When Johnson at Chicago Saturday completed 52 2-3 innings without allowing a run he added further proof to a well-known fact, said w.-k. fact being that there's only one greatest pitcher in the world alive to-day, and his initials are W. J.

Don't forget, in giving Johnson his due that Walter's support is nothing amazing. The Senators lack about ten ball players of having a great ball club. The catching staff has wabbled for years. Schaeffer at first is no Daubert. Laporte is—well, he's just Laporte, which isn't anything so marvelous. The outfield consists largely of Milan. McBride is a grand fielder, but a fright at hitting.

When Walter Johnson wins a ball game he wins it all by himself. And it takes a pretty good pitcher to do that in anybody's league.

* * *

Sure they do. Why shouldn't they? Any old team can play pretty good ball behind a pitcher who NEVER flickers. But it is thunder to pitch ball all the time that's air-tight.

That's the advantage Mathewson has had all these years. His team now and then won a game FOR HIM. Johnson, when he does win, takes no chances, but keeps 'em won all the way.

Three and a third more runless innings and Johnson reaches Doc White's world's record.

* * *

NEW YORK, it appeared to me was a bit bilious on the subject of baseball. With the Yanks last, the Giants nowhere and Brooklyn beneath their dignity, the fans of the metropolis haven't a blamed thing to console them.

The opinion prevails that the Giants are a problem. As for the Yanks, everybody seems to feel that Chance will make a team of them in due time. It really is amazing the confidence they feel in the Peerless Leader.

As to just what's the matter with the Yanks, not even Chance himself seems to know. They are joy-scouting a trifle too much, no doubt. Chance's recent order against morning poker games took out one of the many kinks. The team was bottling itself up every morning and absorbing too much tobacco smoke and too little oxygen.

The real trouble with the Yanks lies deep. It must be due to rotten spirit somewhere. Chance will fire a lot of men or throw the fear of Gehenna into them before he gets a ball club.

* * *

MAYBE you don't think that placid burg of Brooklyn isn't "hawg wild" over its Dixie-developed ball club. The idea of Brooklyn sticking right up around the top, with the season a month advanced, is hard to appreciate.

About all Dahlin needs now is for "Red" Smith's annual hitting streak to crop out. That is all that is lacking, Jake Daubert and Zack Wheat, two other former Southern Leaguers on the same team, are decidedly off in hitting, too; but they are the sort who always manage to get back on after a bit. Jake is suffering from an attack of "lambasteit," and when he eases off a shade in his efforts, his average will go up like a baloon—and stay up.

Bob Fisher, the Nashville kid, is not only as good as he ever was, but he's considerably better. The stride he is hitting now will bring him high honors.

Of Rucker, nothing need be said, except that he shows no sign whatever of fading. Lefty Allen, late of Mobile, is rather better this year than ever. Strange to say, these grand southpaws have not won a game yet. Rucker has dropped three tough ones. Allen is always a slow starter.

Dahlen still believes he can make something out of "Bull" Wagner, his New Orleans recruit. This one is big and tough, and may develop.

Of all the Southerners on Dahlen's staff, none has been quite the surprise this season that Charley Stengel, the ex-Billikin, has. This lad has won several games with timely, screaming hits; has cracked out two that nicked the "bull" sign and has fielded sensationally.

I can't help feeling that Stengel is playing a good bit over his stride and is due a slump. But, then, you can't tell. No rules hold in Brooklyn. Look at Zack Wheat as an example—a shine in the Southern, a star in the National.

It would be a fine, amazing thing if the Brooklyn club should make a big showing. But, then, Washington did last year, so you never can tell.

FODDER FOR FANS

By shutting out the White Sox Saturday Walter Johnson, of the Senators, annexed a record of 52 2-3 scoreless innings, breaking the old record of 45. But just as soon as Johnson had turned the trick somebody in Chicago declared that "Doc" White, nine years ago, had pitched 54 or 56 innings without being scored upon.

* * *

Joe Jackson, of the Naps, hammered out a four-base swat yesterday when the bases were filled. He also got a double and two singles out of four times up.

* * *

For the benefit of those interested it may be said that C. Webb Murphy has not as yet looped the loop from the top of the Brooklyn grandstand, in keeping with his promise. Nor is there any reason to hope that he will.

* * *

Otis Clymer's inability to play with the Cubs Saturday was due to the fact that he ate a $3 steak in one of the gilded grills in New York and right away got ptomaine poisoning.

* * *

The Naps so far have refused to "crack," as has been widely predicted. Maybe, after all, they've discarded their old and famous trick, and will become real pennant contenders. While discussing the Naps, it might be well to look into the record of one J. Birmingham, manager.

* * *

When Birmingham took charge of the Naps late last season they were trying their hardest to skid out of the percentage column. Immediately thereafter they started to win and when the season ended they had a record of 26 victories against 6 defeats.

* * *

Jack Coombs, the star twirler of the Athletics, is recovering from his illness, but will not be able to get back into the game until June.

* * *

The Red Sox came up from behind in the game with the Tigers yesterday, making three runs, tying the score in the ninth inning. They scored the winning run in the tenth.

* * *

Falkenberg's victory for the Naps over the Yankees yesterday makes his sixth straight win of the season. Only Walter Johnson, of the Senators, with seven victories, leads this twirling record.

* * *

The showing Jim Thorpe, the disqualified Olympic athlete, has made in exhibition games has caused Giant fans to beg McGraw to place him in the regular line-up.

* * *

Shouldn't the Cubs be called the veterans? In their line-up are Schulte, Evers, Reulbach, Ritchie, Archer, Corriden, Bresnahan and a few others who have been playing for several generations.

* * *

Speaker, Lewis and Hendriksen, of the Red Sox, are poling for a combined average of about .360, yet the team is down in sixth place.

* * *

The Browns, without the aid of their suspended manager, George Stovall, had an easy time trimming the Senators yesterday.

* * *

SIX THOUSAND FANS TURN OUT AT MOBILE

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—Mobile and Chattanooga broke even in yesterday's double-header. The crowd was almost equal to that of the Sunday's opener between Atlanta and the locals. It was estimated at nearly 6,000. Chattanooga took the first game by a score of 1 to 0, while the last was a veritable batfest for the locals, who garnered hit after hit from Troy's delivery and piled up thirteen. Hogg lost his first game of the season. He was found for five singles, fanned four and walked three.

HAS BEEN.

Time was when Jimmy Sheckard took his stand
And lowbrows hit the ball to beat the band.
He never moved, but stood there with a smile
And waited as it nestled in his hand.

Time was when Mordy Brown stood on the mound;
The sacks were full and no one could be found
To stop the swats—he shot them at the plate
And Cobb and Crawford rolled them on the ground.

I sit to-day and freeze my youthful frame,
And yell till my esophagus is lame,
But, Oh! to see Jim Sheckard out in left
As Brown comes walking in to save the game.

There are several things which fail to excite our ambition, one of which is to throw the first ball at the first game of the Federal League.

George Stovall is a rude person and all that. The chief fault to be found with him is that he played with the wrong team.

If Mr. Stovall had been playing with a New York team he would have been slapped on the wrist and suspended a whole day—if the day happened to fall on Sunday.

It is well to make an example of a ball player if he plays for a magnate who will stand for it.

The fact that St. Louis lost the first game in the Federal League is merely a reversion to type. St. Louis does not feel comfortable unless it is at the bottom of things.

One is not surprised to hear that Ritchie demands $15,000 for a conflict in New York. If Willie does not have a care he may get himself into a fight.

We are about to have motorcycle races in our midst. We presume that they will be attended by the same persons who pay regular money to see wrestling matches.

It is getting so these days that a team that Frank Chance beats is accused of having the milk of human kindness.

Bonesetter Reese bursts out with the information that dandelion greens will cure liver trouble, but he fails to state what will cure dandelion greens.

Frank Chance arises to remark that he will not trade Hal Chase for Ty Cobb. Even David Harum would find it hard to trade a jackknife for a Derby winner.

There are various reasons why Charlie Dooin's team should win this year, one of which is that Horace Fogel is not in the way.

Some day we shall scrape up nerve enough to ask a motorcyclist whether he has been sentenced to it or, whether it is his own free will.

The cargo that you have."

CRIMSON-TIGER-PENNSY BOAT RACE IS ON TO-DAY

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., May 12.—The triangular Harvard-Princeton-University of Pennsylvania race, postponed from Saturday, will be rowed to-day at 4 p. m. Dr. Spaeth, of Princeton, early to-day endeavored to persuade Dean Briggs, of Harvard, to allow the race to be rowed at 7 or 10 a. m. All three crews were willing to row at the last mentioned time.

The dean refused, claiming that it would hurt the attendance in the college classes.

GEORGIA-TECH TRACK MEET AT ATHENS IS OFF

ATHENS, GA., May 12.—The track meet between Tech and Georgia, scheduled to be held at Athens this afternoon, has been postponed until next week. The meet was called off by Georgia faculty, who base their claim on the fact that most of the track stars are on the baseball team and a meet at this time would interfere with the team's chances in the games with Tech in Atlanta next Friday and Saturday. The Georgia boys have devoted most of their time to baseball practice and the track team is not in shape to meet any one right now.

Four of the speed merchants who will compete on Jack Prince's motorcycle track on the old circus grounds arrived in the city Sunday, and were on the roads around Atlanta all during the day, tuning up their racing machines.

The one-quarter-mile saucer will be in readiness for them to practice on by Friday. Mr. Prince announced last night that he would have the track proper completed by that time and would then start work on the seating.

Most of the famous motorcycle riders of this country will be in Atlanta for the race meet, and some fine sport is promised. Records are also sure to go glimmering.

Mr. Prince estimates that the riders will average 90 miles an hour on the saucer.

SHERIDAN DECIDES TO GIVE UP ALL ATHLETICS

NEW YORK, May 12.—Because it interferes with his job, Martin Sheridan, policeman, former champion discus thrower, has decided to drop out of athletics.

"You can state positively for me," Sheridan is accredited with saying, "that I am through with competition for good. I would like to take part in the games, but I find it interferes with my job, so I have decided to cut it out. There is no doubt I could go back into competition and do as well as I did. I went out to Celtic Park the other day and threw the discus 13 feet with all my clothes on. I will probably go out there sometimes for exercise, but that will be all.

ELBERFELD ATTACKED BY FANS; "KID" WINS

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—Fred Murphy and Sam Pritchard, two young white men, were arrested on the other side of the ball park yesterday after the double-header, and docketed for disorderly conduct at the police station. It seems that in took it upon themselves to get at Manager Elberfeld, of the Chattanooga team, for the mixup with Stock in the game, and assailed him. Some of the onlookers stated the men rushed Elberfeld and that he struck one of them after they had tackled him. Elberfeld denied having made any demonstration and his statement was verified.

EDDIE M'GOORTY SIGNS FOR BOUT WITH HOUCK

DENVER, COLO., May 12.—Eddie McGoorty, of Oshkosh, has signed to meet Leo Houck, of Boston, in a 10-round bout May 27. The weight agreed upon is 160 pounds at 3 o'clock. Rudy Unholz is working with McGoorty at the Arvada training quarters.

Evans Writes of Eyesight in Golf

Most Players Depend On One Optic

By "Chick" Evans.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 10.—There has been a great deal of discussion of late in the British golf magazines and newspapers concerning what is called the "master eye in golf." This phrase seems to indicate that each player has one eye which serves better than the other in the all-important act of keeping the eye on the ball. British periodicals therefore discourse at length upon the subject and advise a study of one's best optic. An unintentional experiment was made in England a short time ago during a team match by a member of the Cambridge University team. One eye of the gentleman had been undergoing medical treatment and at the time of the competition was bandaged closely. In spite of this handicap he halved the match with his opponent and played splendid golf at times; on occasion, however, he found difficulty in judging distances.

* * *

BEING interested in the subject I made a few experiments myself to determine which was my master eye, and I have concluded that it is my left. Perhaps I cock my head back a little on the back swing and on the down swing to the actual hitting; at any rate, I seemed in my experiment to make a greater use of my left eye. I think Valle's weight testing machine could be used profitably in this discussion, because if a player sways backward the line from his left eye to the ball is shorter and less oblique. In any inclination there is a tendency to shorten the line from the left eye to the ball. Of course, I am arguing from the standpoint of a right-handed golfer. I should think the right eye would be more important to the left-handed player.

In the execution of the longer shots the ball is played so far away from the body that one can not get both eyes immediately over the ball and allow the club to lie naturally, which, by the way, is one of the most important things to be borne in mind. In cases where there is a marked discrepancy in the strength of the eyes the stronger must be necessarily most favored.

* * *

ONE of my great little rules has always been to keep my eyes in such a position that lines of equal length drawn from each eye will meet at a certain point on the ball. In this case, of course, no eye can be called the master eye. In putting, the hardest shot of the game, I try to keep my eyes directly over the ball. The stroke is so short that it would be hard for me to tell which eye is the better one. Maybe I could do better with only one eye; that seems to be the only thing I have not tried in my fruitless efforts to learn how to putt.

Those players who wear glasses must have special difficulties to overcome when playing golf, and it would be enlightening to know what these are and how they are surmounted; for the whole subject of the application of sight to golf playing is an interesting one.

PREP LEAGUE NOTES

Boys High and Tech High will meet for the second time this season on Wednesday. The last game resulted in a win for Boys High and the chances are that the team will repeat.

* * *

The race for second place in the local Prep League now lies between Marist and Tech High, with the percentage of games won and lost slightly in favor of the Culverites. They have won four and lost two games. Marist has won three and lost two.

* * *

There were no games played Saturday by local prep teams. A number of the members of the Boys High nine journeyed to Athens to see the second game of the Tech-Georgia series.

* * *

Meyers, of Tech High, proved a sensation in the pole vault in the Prep meet last Friday. He had been practicing for this event only two weeks and never tried to vault before. He just barely missed winning the event Friday.

* * *

A tennis tournament between the winners of the Peacock meet and the winners of the Boys High tournament will be held at East Lake some time next week. Starr, Harris, Candler and Jones are the crack players at Boys High. Sims, Sams and Black are the champions at Peacock.

* * *

The G. M. A. Cadets who were encamped at Lakewood are planing on a water polo team. The boys have been swimming during the past week and Coach Griffin says there are a number of expert swimmers in the camp.

* * *

Marist College will hold its annual field day exercises the first week in June. A medal will be given to the highest point winner. The fight for this honor will be a lively one between Allen, Lewis and Fowler.

* * *

If an all-prep track team is picked this season Marist will have its share of men on it. Allen, Lewis and Fowler are all good men and would give any prep school athlete a hard job to beat them.

* * *

There are about twenty-five amateur baseball teams in this city and many of them play good ball. The city has provided an ample number of diamonds on which these teams can play.

The Marist Specials, a nine made up of boys attending the grammar school and all under 16 years of age, won the championship of the city Public School League Thursday from the Formwalt Street School by the score of 7 to 3. Wrigley, Adair and Lidell were the star performers on the Specials.

M'CARTY THINKS LITTLE OF FIGHT WITH PELKEY

CHICAGO, May 12.—Luther McCarty's bout with Arthur Pelkey at Calgary on May 24, will be nothing more than a training stunt, according to the champion, who is in Chicago with Manager McCarney.

On his arrival here, McCarney found telegrams awaiting him from Promoters Coffroth and McCarney of the Pacific Coast clubs asking the champion to meet the winner of the "Gunboat" Smith-Jess Willard fight to be staged in San Francisco, May 17. McCarney said he thought Smith no great attraction on the coast, and that of the two fighters he preferred to have his man meet Willard.

A CHILD SAVED FROM A HORRIBLE DEATH

LITTLE ANNIE DONALDSON, AGE 8 YEARS, NO. 7 RICHARDS ST., CORNER TOMBLIN ST., LITTLE DAUGHTER OF MR. AND MRS. S. P. DONALDSON, AFTER 3 YEARS' BATTLE SAVED AS IF BY A MIRACLE.

Words can not describe or express the supreme feeling of joy and happiness which to-day filled the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Donaldson, who reside at No. 7 Richards Street, New Era division, this city. Little Annie, 8 years old, not larger than an ordinary child of 5 years, was saved from death and restored to perfect health in a seemingly miraculous manner. For three years this little child has been suffering from some inexplainable cause. Her stomach would at times bloat to immense proportions, high fevers would frequently attack her, followed by dreadful chills or bilious attacks, her mind was clear, but her memory weak, her sleep restless, sometimes screaming out, almost frightened to death. Her breath, especially in the mornings, was very foul, dark circles under the eyes, very nervous, her appetite was changeable, ravenously hungry at times, at other times the sight of food was nauseating. All the careful attention which loving parents could bestow was given to her, and all modest attempts were resorted to, but the child's condition grew worse. The mother did what hundreds of other people were doing. She called at Coursey & Munn's drug store and obtained a treatment of the Quaker Extract. With anxious mind she watched for results, after the child began taking the wonderful remedy, and what were the results? To the amazement of the whole family, the child expelled a monster tapeworm, head and all complete, alive and squirming. It is hard to believe this monster is 41 feet in length. How many children and people are being tortured by parasites, and how they go on for years dosing and doping for what they think is some form of stomach trouble when it really is worms of some kind that is causing all your trouble! If it is worms, Quaker Extract will expel them. If it is caused from other causes, such as catarrh, indigestion, constipation, the Quaker Extract will do more for you than any other remedies on the market to-day.

This case is so remarkable that many people will doubt it, yet all are at liberty to investigate, write, phone, wire or call at the child's residence, the above address. The father is a carpenter by occupation, was born and lived most of his life here in Atlanta, and he has a host of friends and they will vouch for his word. The Health Teacher said the people would soon realize the power of the Quaker Remedies, and such cases as this should certainly convince every sensible person. Once more the Health Teacher recommends the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm to any person who may suffer with rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder or blood trouble, and will expel worms.

So call to-day at Coursey & Munn's drug store, 29 Marietta Street, and obtain these wonderful Quaker Remedies. We prepay express charges on all orders of $3 or over.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"THAT must be some interesting, that novel you are reading there," remarked the Head Barber. "You ain't had your nose out of it all the forenoon."

"It is a beautiful story, George. I almost cry in some parts of it, and when the laughs come they are sure great. I didn't skip a line of it, either, and I have just finished the last page. The title of it is 'Starflower,' and it was wrote by Mrs. Eleanor Shirley Dewflicker. And then they say that women can't write! Maybe some women writes stories that is kind of punk and then gets made fun of by the critics, but this woman that wrote 'Starflower' is some queen of a writer. Gee, there is some love passages that is simply superfluous and almost sublimate. 'Starflower' is the name of the heroine, a little girl that always lived in the northern part of Pennsylvania. She is so pretty and sweet that she has lovers come from everywhere to try to win her hand, but she loves only one, a young man who is doing scientific farming near her father's home. Of course science is a great thing, George, and I suppose if it helps raise big crops it must help a man to make love, too. Anyhow, she loves him and some day they are to wed. Just listen to this part, where they are engaged:

Very Pathetic.

"'Starflower,' whispered Robert, placing her little trembling palm in his strong right hand. 'Little girl, I am plain and direct in my speech, as you know. I can't write poetry for you, little girl, like the Byron poems you read to me out in the orchard, and I ain't no Tennyson, but I am a man with a man's heart and two willing hands. I love you!'

"'And I love you, Bob,' murmured Starflower, bewildered by the wonderful rush of happiness that swept over her lithe form and suffused her cheeks with the first flush of girlish love.

"An oriole flashed brightly through the crimson sumac and the brook rippled along like some soft accompaniment to the oldest, sweetest story in the world."

"Gee, George; ain't that some writing?"

"Did he marry her and make a lot of kale?" asked the practical Head Barber.

"No, George," replied the Manicure Lady. "That is the pitiful part of it. A young bridge builder named Walter Orr came to the little town where Starflower dwelt, and he kind of dazzled her with his fine English and his wonderful piano playing. He was a college man, and her Robert didn't know nothing about Virgil or Horace or Rameses or any of them old-timers. Orr knew all about them all, and he could change his voice until it got as soft as the rustling of the breeze through the autumn leaves. When he was talking to his men he spoke kind of commanding, but when he spoke to her he always spoke with the soft pedal. One night, George, she agreed to run away with him, and the next morning they were gone. Just after they eloped Orr got fired and had to take a position that paid him about one-quarter as much money as her former sweetheart made every week out of his registered milk from his registered cows.

It Sounds All Right.

"When she saw poverty staring her in the face she took some kind of a powder and they found her still in death with a note to Robert pinned on her night robe. Then Robert heard about it and went so insane that he called all his cows Starflower."

"It sounds all right," said the Head Barber, "but I wouldn't go nuts over no girl that threw me down!"

Quite Taxable

William Jennings Bryan once visited Cornell University, and while being entertained to dinner by a prominent member of the legal fraternity he told the following story:

"Once out in Nebraska I went to protest against my real estate assessment, and one of the things of which I particularly complained was assessing a goat at $25. I claimed that a goat was not real property in the legal sense of the word, and should not be assessed. One of the assessors, a very pleasant-faced old man, very obligingly said that I could go upstairs with him, and together we would look over the rules and regulations and see what could be done. We looked over the rules, and finally the old man asked:

"'Does your goat run loose on this road?'

"'Well, sometimes,' said I, wondering what the penalty was for that dreadful offense.

"'Does he butt?' again queried the old man.

"'Yes,' I answered, 'he butts.'

"'Well,' said the old man, looking at me, 'this rule says tax all property running and abutting on the highway. I don't see that I can do anything for you. Good day, sir.'"

A Charming Midsummer Hat

By OLIVETTE

A DAINTY little model this for wear with the lacy gowns of July and August. All in pure white, it tones well with the bright eyes and softly flushed cheeks of midsummer days. Draw folds of soft chiffon or mousselaine de soie over the crown and brim of a small milk-white straw shape—chip will do, though milan is better and "horsehair" best of all. Around the crown draw taffeta ribbon finishing in a "pump bow" directly in front. From under this bow, in either direction, lay sheafs of wheat in the prevailing tone of white. And now the final touch is given by the coquettish ruches of soft chiffon that face the entire under brim and appear softly at the back where the brim has a decided upward roll.

Sister's Engagement

TO-DAY'S COMPLETE STORY.

THE daughter of the household, aged 11, looked up from her book as the man caller came into the library.

"How do you do, Mr. Dearmore," she said, getting up politely. "You might as well take a comfortable chair because sister won't be down for ages. She is always slow about getting dressed and I supposed now she'll be slower than ever because she won't care if she does keep you waiting."

"Well, why shouldn't she care, I'd like to know?" inquired the caller with an assumption of surprise designed to be comic.

The young person hitched a little closer to him in her eagerness. "I just found out," she told him, "tonight. I guess they weren't going to tell me, but sister was so interested in brushing out her switch that she didn't notice me, and mother said, 'You might have done better if you'd had more ambition, but, thank heaven, you're engaged at last!' And sister said yes, it was time and she'd have to make the best of it. Why, she's engaged! Don't you understand?"

"You surprise me," said the caller, with interest.

Very Exciting.

The young person nodded her head. "It's awfully exciting to have an engaged person in the family. We never had one before. I held my hand over my mouth to keep from asking right out who it was, but I knew if I spoke they'd make me go away—and then all they said was that where the trooser was coming from if dad didn't make a killing goodness only knew. What's a trooser?"

"A sort of feminine delirium, I believe," the young man told her. Wouldn't you like to read out loud to me from your book?"

"Not when I can talk," the young person assured him, promptly. "I'd think it was Bob Samson, only he hasn't been here for ages. He's riding around a ranch out West now and he always brought me chocolates and petted the dog and waited hours and hours for sister. Mother told her one day for goodness sake when she got her hands on that huge old Samson house to burn it down and put up another one with a French gray drawing room and other things, but I guess Bob slipped a cog somehow"——

"Er—what?"

"Well, Aunt Clara said to mother that a cog in the wheels must have slipped somehow, and how did he ever get away, and wasn't it a pity! So I suppose Bob did it. I always liked his chocolates—he bought me just as good ones as he bought sister. Sometimes they try to pass off cheap candy on me, but I know! Then I feed it to the dog.

"I'm glad it wasn't that Siddens man. He always called me 'little one' and patted my head and he had bronchitis and always coughed before he spoke, and sister said she didn't care if he was rich, but she couldn't endure a man who wore brown ties and ate grapefruit with a fork and anyhow he gave her the shivers. That was the time mother scolded so and sister went to Aunt Clara's for a month.

"I'm surprised at her getting engaged, because she'll have to have a house and meals then and she says picking out things to eat is simply awful and she wouldn't wear her life away keeping down the grocery bills for any man and he might as well make up his mind to it. Anyhow, sister never loses her head, because mother says so, and she'll make him toe the mark. Mother says that with her sweet smile sister could make a man believe white was black, but that seems foolish. Wouldn't you know black if you saw it?"

"I used to think I was able to distinguish colors," admitted the caller.

A Surprise.

"But you're different," said the young person. "It isn't as though you were one of sister's trailers—that's what dad calls 'em. It doesn't make any difference to you. Only I thought if I told you about it you'd understand why she didn't hurry to get down here, now she's interested in one particular man."

"Well," said the caller, "I'll tell you a secret. I'm the particular man!"

The young person's eyes bulged. "Honest?" she squealed. "Why, I was never so sur-r-p-prised in my l-l-life! And you never petted the dog once! My, but you're quiet!"

RECIPE FOR WRITING.

THE one way to write is to do it. Sit down to your typing machine and rattle the keys till a poem slips out where mere space has just been. Sounds simple—well, listen; it isn't; it's only the way you should write. Do I do it? Well, no. I'm confessing that it's not thus my songs I indite. But I take up my little tan Faber, and cudgel my little gray brain, and I cover great sheets of white paper right over and over again with lead marks of black and with smudges which mean that I had to erase. Each "I just dashed off" chap really drudges. He denies? Then he's paid for his "space!"

Of each day's growing—and so,
Good-morrow!

A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing! And so—
Good-bye!

:: REMEMBERING ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

IF I could just remember, when the past is on parade,
Some little deed of merit for each big mistake I've made,
The other days, long vanished, would be glad days to recall,
But Memory leans toward wilder scenes—and I can see them all.

If I could just remember, counting back a score of years,
One act that made a loved one smile—not ten that prompted tears—
I'd dream the past dreams over and forget the wasted wine,
But Memory loves to taunt me with the errors that were mine.

If I could just remember, in the twilight of my life,
One speech that made for peace and love—not ten that hastened strife—
The future might seem dreary and the present might be bare,
But the past would be an orchard with a thousand songbirds there.

How to Manage a Husband

By DOROTHY DIX.

THEY had admired all of the little bride's wedding finery, and had finally drifted over to where the tea table was set by an open window.

"Well, my dear," said the woman in the soft white gown, "I hope you are going to be as happy as the days are long, and I am sure you will, for Jack is a fine fellow, and he is well to do, and an orphan, so you are going to escape hard times and mothers-in-law, two of the principal snags that are most apt to make a big dent in the barque of matrimony, even when they don't wreck it.

"Still, you must not expect to find everything plain sailing. There are a good many storms on even the calmest sea of wedlock, and you are going to find out that lots of things that you expected to happen won't happen, and a lot of things that you were positive couldn't occur, do occur with amazing frequency.

"Also, you are going to discover, and it will give you the jar of your life, that the noble ideal of perfect manhood that you are tying up with has got faults, and peculiarities, and whims, and crochets that you have never suspected concealed about his person.

"Now you take it from me, that the great thing in married life is for the wife to begin right, to get off on the right foot, so to speak, for every man can be managed, and brought to eat out of his wife's hand, if only she goes about it in the proper manner."

The Best Way.

"Well," replied the woman in the soft white gown, "I can't do better than relate to you the experiences of two friends of mine, both of whom married good men, but men who were high tempered, and tyrannical, and cross—the sort of men you know who possess all of the virtues and none of the lovable qualities of life. They are the kind of husbands who are too much gentlemen ever to strike a woman with their hand, but who leave her bruised and bleeding, and wounded to death in spirit after they have stabbed her with their tongues.

"There are lots of men like that, my dear, and when I get elected to the Legislature the very first thing I am going to do is to bring in a bill to make a man's disposition, instead of his morals, a cause for divorce.

"But back to my story. One of these women whom I am telling you is named Bertha, and she is one of those gentle, suave women who are born salve spreaders. Anything like a jolt in the domestic machinery hurts her to the very core of her being. She isn't weak. Oh, dear no. She would hang on to a principle, or a conviction, to eternity, and be loyal to one she loved to the death itself, and if you pushed her to the wall she'd fight until there wasn't an enemy left alive, but she would never argue a question with you, or say a thing that would hurt your feelings, or do anything to make the slightest unpleasantness.

"Well, when the rosy mists of the honeymoon rolled up and she discovered that she was married to a man who was twin brother to the fretful porcupine, and whose prejudices simply strewed the ground around him, she undertook to manage him by tact.

What She Did.

"She only conversed upon the subjects that she knew he agreed with her upon. She devoted her days to rubbing his fur down the right way. She kept everything that was unpleasant, and that could possibly ruffle him, hidden out of sight, and spent her life tip-toeing on eggs for fear of rousing him and exploding his infernal machine of a temper. In short, in order to keep the peace and make her home happy, she went through a very martyrdom of sacrifice of all of her desires and inclinations.

"H'm," said the little bride, "and how did the other woman manage her husband?"

"The other woman," replied the woman of the soft, white dress, "was of a different type. She had a red-headed temper of her own that was a dead ringer for her husband's, besides which she loved a scrap for the pure fun of the thing. She didn't dodge the issue when her husband flung a debatable subject into the family arena. She simply rolled up her sleeves and sailed in, and when the domestic mix-up was over she wasn't always the one who was on the mat.

"She was a good woman, and a good wife and mother, who did her full duty by her family, and she stood pat on her record. She didn't waste any time trying to jolly or cajole her husband as poor Bertha did. If he didn't like the way she did things, and her opinions, why he could lump it, that was all. She was an independent, free spoken woman, and she didn't see why she should wear herself out flattering any old husband into doing the things he ought to do, anyway.

"And she didn't mind expressing these sentiments, but the result was that their house was a dark and bloody battle ground, with no day without its spat. But that was her way of managing a husband."

"Which one of the systems work?" asked the little bride with a troubled air.

"Neither," replied the woman in the soft, white gown.

Flying Men's Mascots

CURIOUS SUPERSTITIONS OF AVIATORS.

LUCK plays a big part in the life of an aviator, and for this reason most airmen are very superstitious. The majority of aviators carry mascots when they fly, and the cleverer the pilot the more the luck-bringing emblems he seems to possess. Vedrines, the crack French flyer, always has a miniature of the famous picture "Mona Lisa" fastened to the side of his aeroplane when he starts on a flight. He carried this picture on his racing monoplane recently when he won the cup at a record speed of 105 miles an hour. Grahame-White does not trouble about mascots to any great extent, but he invariably wears a pair of check riding breeches under his flying overalls when he makes a flight. These garments are popularly supposed to be lucky, and many other aviators have adopted a similar flying garb. Notable among these is Biolovoucic, the young Peruvian airman, who recently flew over the Alps.

A Lion's Tooth.

Another favorite mascot is a little Teddy bear which is strapped to one of the wing stays on the machine. In naval flying circles a lion's tooth is considered to be a lucky mascot for airmen—a fashion created by the late Lieutenant Parke, for with such an emblem he came out of many serious smashes unscathed. Lewis Turner, the well-known pilot instructor, who flies the Caudron biplanes, has so many mascots that he is generally in doubt as to which he shall take up with him. He recently remarked that were he to wear all his mascots at once he would be mistaken for a toy dealer.

There are many quaint superstitions in vogue at the aerodromes. Chief among these is that should a pilot have one smash he will have two others on the same day if he continues flying. This belief is so firmly rooted in the minds of most aviators that after a mishap they seldom again trust themselves on a machine until twenty-four hours have passed.

Unlucky Thirteen.

Many airmen also have a superstitious dislike of flying in bright sunshine. But there is a substratum of common sense running through this belief. The hot rays of the sun when shining on a damp ground cause heat eddies in the air, which are very dangerous to flying men. These are known as air pockets, which are holes in the air that contain no support for machine or man.

Flying on the thirteenth day of the month is in great disfavor amongst many airmen. And this superstition is largely due to the fact that so many fatal accidents have occurred to airmen on this date. Last year ten pilots were killed whilst flying on the thirteenth of the different months and already this year three airmen have been killed, two on the thirteenth of January and one on the thirteenth of February.

Airmen are also influenced by the behavior of animals on the ground when they are flying over them. If horses or cattle appear terrified at a pilot's approach, and utter warning cries, then this is regarded as an omen of ill-luck. But if the animals over which he is passing are not alarmed to any extent by his approach, then he has little fear that his flight will be anything but successful.

Another bad omen is the stopping of a watch on an aeroplane when it is aloft.

Lady passengers are popularly supposed to ensure the success of an aeroplane flight. One of the most consistent luck-bringers in this respect, is Miss Trehawke Davies. She invariably brings luck to the pilot who takes her on a flight. She recently accompanied Hammel in the Aerial Flying Derby round London when he obtained the second place after a magnificent flight. Miss Davies flew on several occasions with the late Mr. Astley. A few days before his death this airman, whilst flying with Miss Davies, fell in his monoplane from a height of nearly a hundred feet. Both pilot and passenger escaped with a shaking. A few days later Mr. Astley, when flying alone on a similar machine in Ireland, slipped in the air at a low altitude and was killed on the spot.

Got It Regular Then.

Mrs. Subbub: "I wonder what's come over your master this morning, Sarah? Instead of being cross, as usual, he started off happy and whistling like a bird."

Sarah (the new "general"): "I'm afraid it's my fault, mum. I got the wrong package, and gave him bird seed for breakfast food."

The Girl With the Monocle

No, This Isn't English, Y'Know; It's the Rage in Paris

SURPRISING as it may seem, this is not an English fad at all, although London society is always given the credit—or discredit—for styles in monocles, but it is a novelty taken up by "smart" Parisiennes.

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON has an affectionate disposition.

On rare occasions he has given her money as he was leaving, and when in her alacrity to accept it she has forgotten to kiss him he has been grievously pained. He has never experienced that feeling of momentary reprieve which comes to colder-hearted husbands on such occasions.

He was in a tender mood the other evening, and sought to put his arm around his wife's waist. Alas for the ignorance of man and the tyranny of fashion! He couldn't find it!

He stepped back and looked at her in a puzzled way. Then he followed the line laid out by the dressmaker and slid his arm gently around under her armpits.

The next evening, still tender and loving, this being the springtime of the year, he again put his arm under his wife's armpits, but her waist was not there!

He scratched his head in a puzzled fashion and felt a momentary rebuff. But his love is not of the kind that brooks discouragement, and, after a moment's survey of her form divine, he got down on the floor and put his arm around her ankle, the dressmaker having located her waist there in the dress she was then wearing.

The following evening Lysander John looked before he attempted to embrace, and found her waist was not at her ankles! It had been moved up to her knees!

It was then that he was overcome with a sense of the helplessness of man when opposed to the tyranny of fashion, and he bowed his head in anguish and cried aloud.

"It used to be so simple a matter," he cried, beating his hands on his breast, "for a man to put his arms around the waist of the woman he loved, but alas! it is a simple matter no longer!

"It has become a movable sacrament of love!"

From Innocence of Thought

By Virginia Terhune Van De Water

MUCH has been written and said within the past few years in commendation of the broad lines on which the training and education of the modern girl is conducted. To add further approval to this twentieth century method would be platitudinous. To cast a slur upon it, or to hint that the latest ideal in the upbringing of women has its attendant drawbacks, is to lay one's self open to the onus of being old-fashioned.

It is a sin in the minds of most people of this generation to be old-fashioned or behind the times in ideals and theories. Yet some of us conservatives still cling to certain of the tenets that were instilled into us 20 and 30 years ago. The memory of our own girlhood sometimes leads us to compare the girl of the period with the "young person" of our early days, and the modern product does not emerge unscathed from the comparison.

It would be carrying conservatism to the limits of folly not to admit the tremendous value of the broader, and deeper, and franker training which the modern girl receives over that of her prototype of a quarter century ago. It would be the height of bigotry not to admit that by her twentieth century education, she has become a clearer thinking, more self-reliant, more useful member of society than her parent was. Yet there are some things missing in the character of the "young person" of to-day which make her elders regret that a modern education could not be absorbed by her without a radical alteration taking place in her character.

Our girl has lost much of the sentimental appeal that belonged to her aunt's or mother's girlhood days. I do not mean by sentiment the mawkish superconsciousness of sex which sometimes masqueraded under that name and which can not be too soon stamped out as a menace to all that is best in womanhood. But I do mean that she has lost much of her one-time ability to call forth the highest and best in young mankind by her fresh, untarnished view of the world.

Shrugged His Shoulders.

A youth of my acquaintance called recently on a girl with whom he was much smitten—after the fashion of the male young of the species. The girl was college-bred and had the sophistication of her type. The young man was fond of reading, and the talk drifted into literature. The girl advanced her own theories concerning Brieux and other constructive European writers with absolute frankness, and before the evening ended had aired all her ideas and opinions on the white slave question. When the young man mentioned the conversation to me my face must have betrayed some surprise, for he shrugged his shoulders and laughed a little bitterly.

"Girls have changed since your day, I guess," he remarked—"more's the pity!"

They have changed since that day. They have changed for the better in many things. To a person with entirely modern views they may have improved in all things. Yet it seems a pity that in her intellectual advance our girl should have failed to retain much of the grace and sweetness that served as an inspiration to the men who were youths 20 and 30 years ago.

The Exchange.

In the course of her evolution the "young person" of to-day has exchanged innocence of thought for consciousness of morality. She no longer has manners—she has Manner. She had transformed what was once poise into Pose.

Yet the characteristics which some of us are so narrow as to deplore are doubtless only indications of the advance in the evolution of a woman far broader and better than her predecessors were. Yet, as old-fashioned folk, some of us recall the girls we knew when we were young, and sigh—but very softly, lest the Young Person of To-day should hear—and censure—us.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

GO TO AN ARTIST.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
Not a day that goes by that I am not told of the wonderfully beautiful hand I have. Artists have stopped me and apologized in the cars and commented on my beautiful hand. Of course, I paid no attention to these comments, but it seems that if I could obtain some revenue through having my hand posed I should like to avail myself of the opportunity. MISS R.

Have your mother go with you to the studio of some reputable artist and ask his opinion.

I am sure, however, that there are many ways more lucrative and ennobling by which your hands can earn you a living. Have you tried them?

DON'T GIVE IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
Is it proper for a young man of 18 to present his lady friend with a diamond ring on her sixteenth birthday? We are not engaged, but the love between us could not be broken, as we have known each other for four years.
V. A. H. F.

Eighteen and sixteen often decide their "bond of love can't be broken," and change their minds ten times before they are old enough to marry. Your love may develop into a sentiment more lasting, but don't give diamond rings till you are older, and know.

THE OUTSIDE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
"A" said that when a man is walking with two girl friends he must walk in the center. "B" said when a man is walkinw with two girls he must walk on the outside.
H. N. L. M.

A gentleman should always take the outside of the walk.

Wouldn't Be Done

Robbie met a neighbor who was smoking some fine, fragrant tobacco sent by his son in America. He took out his own pipe ostentatiously.

"Hae you a match, Sandy?" he inquired.

The match was forthcoming, but nothing more.

"Then," said Sandy, after a silence, "ye mich' gie me back ma match."

Making Mother Over

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

WHEN a girl reaches 16, and her head is turned as easily as thistledown, for the reason that it is almost as light, she becomes possessed with the belief that she is superior to her family, a delusion in which her foolishly fond parents unconsciously encourage her.

She is her parents' own child; that is a stubborn fact that even romantic theories of being the stolen offspring of royalty, of which she has read in the fairy tales, can't conquer. She is a rare blossom on a parent stem that looks like a weed, and she wonders that there is no explanation of such a phenomenon.

She learns at an earlier age than one would guess that she can't change her father. She can rule him, and does, but, being a man, he is satisfied to be what he is. He admits his offspring is a rare blossom, but does not for a moment think that the father stem is a weed.

Mother is different. One reason is that she is a woman and knows not that self-content that is wrapped around a man like the bandages around a mummy. And a greater reason is that she is Mother, and, therefore, humble. She also recognizes that her offspring is a rare blossom, the quick eyes of her love making this discovery the moment her baby daughter was first laid in her arms. Because of her love she makes humble comparison, and knows also that she is a weed.

She doesn't resent her daughter's air of superiority, but weakly and foolishly encourages it, thereby turning that little thistledown head a little further out of place.

She Is Displeased.

Naturally the conditions that exist in a home where a girl has been permitted to think she is a princess do not please her, and she begins the process of making over, alternating her work of reformation between the parlor and mother, the former receiving serious attention when she expects company and the latter engaging her energies all the time.

Mother's methods of pronunciation are not those in use now, and she is corrected and called old-fashioned, a term that loses its sweetness when a princess daughter applies it. Mother is too tired when night comes to put on more becoming clothes, and daughter begins at the wrong end of the reformation by complaining about her mother's appearance instead of attaining the same end by making the work lighter.

The family purse will not support more than one peacock. Mother is glad to give daughter that royal plumage, and the girl accepts, and later complains when she struts around that her mother is not dressed as well as other mothers she knows, forgetting that in those families there are no peacocks and the sum alloted for royal plumage is more justly divided.

I do not want girls to cease in this reform of making mother over, but I want them to go at it in a better way. One can't change a mother's old-style clothes into new by complaining, but the change can be wrought by buying mother new clothes. If $10 is given a girl for a new hat and mother says she will make last season's do, the daughter can make mother over by giving her the new hat and wearing the old herself.

Another Way.

If mother shows the unbecoming traces of hard labor, another way is offered for making her over by taking the burden of the home off her shoulders.

If the latest whim in a ribbon, a tie, hat, gloves, dress or shoes will improve daughter, wouldn't they also improve mother, and isn't her need of improvement greater? One has the adornment of youth and needs little; the other is showing all the disfiguring marks of time and needs every assistance pretty clothes may give.

Make mother over by making her think more of herself and less of others! Such a reformation will be good for the whole family, but don't, girls, I implore, go at this reformation in a high-handed, selfish way. Have pride in her and she will begin to have the pride in herself of which many years of monotonous and unappreciated household work have robbed her.

Make her over! Make her young and pretty and carefree again, and use in working the transformation the fairy wand of Love!

Seeing the Pictures

WOMAN with Cerise Hat (embracing woman with headgear of bright violet)—Oh, aren't the pictures too dear? I'm crazy about them, Agnes! Just a little bit of powder on the side of your nose, dear. There—it's off, but you rubbed off the rouge, too. Such atmosphere, don't you think? No, of course, I can't make out what that one means that looks like a mud puddle stirred up with a stick, but I am sure it is something perfectly wonderful if only I could comprehend it!"

Woman with Bright Violet Hat—It certainly makes one feel so advanced to see things like these! Why, I can remember when I used to think a picture should really be a picture of something instead of merely a symbol of a thought. Goodness! Will you look at that dress—the one just coming in! Such things ought to be restricted by law!

Sweet Young Thing (in a flimsy floppy suit)—Perfectly beautiful! I simply love that picture!

Second Sweet Young Thing—So do I. Isn't it glorious to think there is an artist living who can paint a bale of shingles? If you look at it hard enough with your head tilted you get the queerest sort of feeling! Something like being seasick and falling out of a window at the same time! The man who did that is a genius. Wouldn't you simply love to know him?"

On His Nerves.

Square Shouldered Man (with an expression of pain on his face)—Let's get out of here, Genevieve. If I stay any longer I'll say things, and then the long-haired freaks sprinkled about would hang me to one of the staircase pillars and put a frame around me and call the result an impressionistic study of an apple pie. I expect I'd look just as much like a pie as a human being. Oh, help! See that one in the corner—the purple woman with blue spots on her against a scrambled background."

Genevieve—"For goodness' sake, hush! Don't let people know you're so absolutely ignorant, George! You've got to see this exhibit, because you've got to be able to talk about it, and the sooner you do so the quicker you'll be through! You don't suppose any one really likes these pictures, do you? You're not the only one that's suffering! Come on!"

Angel Child—"Ma, I want a drink, I want a drink, ma! Say, ma, why can't I have a dr"——

His Mother (jerking him along)—"Willie, if I hear another word out of you I'll take you into a corner and whip you good! Here, I left all that sewing and brought you just for your own good, so you'd love pictures, and then you act this way! Look at the pictures and"——

Angel Child—"Aw, I'd rather go to a nickel show! Say, I want a drink"——

Confiding Young Creature (attended by pale youth in extreme garb)——"But when your pictures are exhibited, Arthur, is the time we'll see crowds! If they only knew what a genius you are! The idea of these daubs, when you have done such marvelous things!"

Pale Youth (modestly)—"Well, it'd be kind of tough on these chaps if I spring them now. Let them have their day—I can afford to wait!"

Confiding Young Creature—"Arthur, you are the noblest man alive! You need some one to push you forward—you never do justice to yourself or to your art!"

It Was Plenty.

Woman with Cerise Hat—"There, I've made the rounds. My head aches, but I don't see why. Do you know, there are three pictures back there which I am sure hung upside down?"

Woman with Bright Violet Hat—"I don't care if they are—my shoe hurts awfully. I don't mind saying that I think the pictures are crazy, and we are all geese for wasting time looking at 'em!"

Woman with Cerise Hat—"And you the president of our culture club! My dear! I think it's just your shoe."

Woman with Bright Velvet Hat—"Well, it's something—and whatever it is, it's plenty!"

BEAUTY SECRETS OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Little Viola Dana, "The Poor Little Rich Girl," Talks to Girls in Their 'Teens

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

IF you were only fifteen and had already begun climbing the high ladder that leads to success, would you be simple and natural and truly sweet? Little Viola Dana has not come to the lofty estate of "Sweet Sixteen" yet, but she has already worked her way from music hall dancing and "movies" and vaudeville skits to the enviable position of "A regular Broadway star." And the earnest little girl means to climb higher and higher, and be right at the top of her chosen profession some day if hard work can win her way to the top.

In her dainty pink dressing room at the Hudson Theater in New York the 15-year-old star of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" looks like a real little rosebud of a girl—just as real a little girl as the Gwendolyn whose life she has stepped out of after living it for three hours.

She was pulling black silk stockings over little bare feet and ankles as I came in, and with the sweetest, unself-consciousness she shook back her soft brown curls and rose to greet me with a mixture of childish enthusiasm and womanly grace.

"Did Gwenny make you cry?" she asked.

"YOU did," I answered, deliberately.

"Oh, that was Gwenny," said little Miss Dana. "It isn't Viola Dana out there in the play—she just gets to be Gwendolyn."

Not Self-Conscious.

"Then, of course, you aren't self-conscious if you are living your part?" I questioned with assurance.

"Oh, no. Children on the stage have to be so careful about that," said this naive child. "Some of them do well, and they are told so, and think about it all the time, and get to be such stilted little things. They just MINCE through their parts and act affected everywhere you meet them. That isn't a bit attractive—do you think so?"

"What do you think of simplicity and sweetness and naturalness as prime necessities for attractiveness? That takes in your 'unself-consciousness,'" I said.

Miss Viola gave the matter her earnest consideration. She is to all intents and purposes a dear child—but ten years of stage experience—ten years of work with growing ideals and ambitions have given her a serious quality bespeaking delightfully the woman she will be in a few years.

"I think they are all very important, and if you keep busy and live sensibly and think nice thoughts perhaps you can get to be simple and sweet—for, of course, no girl who is unnatural is a bit attractive."

"Then you believe in simple clothes for young girls?"

"Yes, indeed—but I do like pretty clothes—clothes that suit you. Are mine simple enough, do you think?" pointing to a dainty little green frock and a soft greatcoat of brown that just matched her own chestnut curls. A very girly leghorn hat went with it—and I could fancy Miss Viola looking like the dear little girl she is, instead of the silly, near-young-lady that some girls fancy they can ape more successfully than they can realize the flowerlike sweetness of their own precious never-to-come-again-youth.

"Girls have to be serious about the qualities they want to cultivate," I said, after I had paid due tribute to the embryo woman wanting sartorial praise. "Does keeping well and strong require constant attention and sacrifice?"

"Well, I think you can't have everything. You can't have all the fun you want and do well the thing you want to do, too. Now, I have to have lots of sleep, and if I go along to a party after the theater my voice Voices need such a lot of care to keep them in good condition. I take a sounds strained and horrid next day. glass of malted milk before the theater and another afterward and give up the things I like—chocolate frappes, and foolish combinations, like lobster salad and lemonade, won't do for the girl who wants to accomplish things."

"Do you call late suppers and chocolate frappes a great sacrifice?" I inquired.

"Well, I like things that aren't good for me," was the frank answer; "but I think it's worth while giving up all the little separate pleasures that only stay a minute in order to have a clear complexion, and a clear voice and a well body.

"You see, I truly want to be great some day; I want to go on and on and be some one who counts. And I'm dreaming of that sometimes even when I'm with my books or playing my violin.

"I know that if I truly want to get on I shall have to DO it. Just wishing about it won't work."

Deep Philosophy.

Deep philosophy for fifteen; and yet the girls who are soon to be women must all choose whether they will live for the joy of a fleeting second or for the "durable satisfactions" that make life worth while.

"Have you set some one as your model?" I asked. "Are you working toward a goal, or have you a live ideal whose success you want to equal?"

"Not a bit of it," said Viola Dana. "I've got to be myself, anyway—and I'd lots rather be truly myself. I don't want to imitate. I just want to make my own self do bigger and bigger things all the time.

"People ought to express themselves all the time, I think, instead of imitating some one else—in clothes and voices and thoughts. Thoughts are so wonderful, I think—nice ones give such a sweet expression to the eyes—they just shine through them. I love strong, interesting faces—the kind that belong to people who do things. Girls who are willing to just stand still aren't ever truly pretty are they?"

The little star's eyes glowed with earnestness.

Yes, those wonderful, deep eyes are green, and she frankly confesses it.

"Maybe that's jealousy," she laughed. "I am jealous if the people I love don't love me enough and show it. You have to be worthy of it, or you don't get it. And some day every girl wants to be found worthy of the biggest love. She wants to marry. I do!"

"You are planning an even fuller and fuller life, aren't you? Work—great success—and marriage?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," said this rich little wise girl. "I want to keep my body well and strong, and to train my mind to get a great deal out of life—and to put something into it, too."

She believes in simple clothes for young girls.

Items of Interest

As an illustration of what the Bible output of the Oxford University Press involves, it might be mentioned that the skins of 100,000 animals are used every year for the covers of Oxford Bibles alone, and 400,000 sheets of gold are required for the gilt lettering.

A stock of handkerchiefs has been purchased for the use of French deputies. Whenever a member has forgotten his handkerchief he will only have to ask an usher for one. There will be no fee, and if the deputy forgets to return the handkerchief nothing will be said.

A wild boar's tusk, on which the Lord's Prayer and the Apostles' Creed had been cut with a kris, or Malayan dagger, was presented as a wedding gift to his American teacher by a young Igorrote Filipino at Dagupan, Luzon.

In France the army death rate is nearly six times as high as our own.

The Tyranny of Criticism

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE Kingdom of Childhood is peopled with wicked elves, ghosts, ogres and hobgoblins, and we hide our heads under the bed covers and long to be grown up that we may vanquish them, little knowing that the Land of Grown-Ups has a greater terror.

It is the tyranny of criticism, and its name is "What Will Folks Say?"

"No," a girl says, "I am not going to the party. I want to; go, but I would have to wear my last season's party dress, and what would folks say?"

"We can not afford to give that dinner," a woman will frankly confess, "but if I don't pay my social obligations what will folks say?"

The sickness had been long, painful and costly, and when at last the sufferer was mercifully released the family realized that the long siege had materially diminished the bank account. There were doctors', druggists', undertaker's and nurses' bills to pay, leaving scant protection against want. "But we must buy mourning," the family declares, "for if we don't, what will folks say?"

Once Again.

A girl realizes that her lover has grown cold. Perhaps, down in her heart, she also realizes that she is not so fond of him, but she refuses to give him up as long as cajolery and tears will hold him. "I don't want any one to think I have been jilted," she says, "and if he stops coming here what will folks say?"

It is this tyranny of criticism that is the hobgoblin of the grown-ups, as fearful and real as the ghosts that clanked their chains about our beds in childhood. We hide our trembling heads under the covers, just as we did then, and lose all sense of reason because of the great ogre we have foolishly conjured to torment us.

We are not honest, we are not natural, we are distressingly self-conscious, we are not kind, we are cowardly hypocrites in the presence of a hobgoblin that has no real existence. "What will folks say?" you plead in defense of foolishness. Did you ever realize that you are of the "folks" to whom you credit such powers of condemnation? And do you, as one of the "folks," despise and condemn the woman who wears an old garment because she can not afford a new? Do you look with an air of superiority at any honesty that dares to be honest? Don't you really envy the spirit of the woman who can rise above all consciousness of clothes?

Your Reply.

You will reply that you don't condemn such a person, but that others do. And in saying this, you declare you are better than others. My dear, you are not. We are all very much alike. No one who is worth knowing puts the outward show above the inward worth. If your friends are more friendly when you are a coward, a hypocrite, and extravagant, then they are not the kind of friends worth having, and it is cheapening a very precious word to call them so.

If you meet a woman you like, and whom you would enjoy knowing better, and hesitate to invite that woman to your house because hers is finer, then you do not give her credit for being broad-minded, and are narrow-gauged yourself. It is the personality that counts; not its background or adornment.

And unless you can show yourself so strong, so broad, so big, that your test question is "Is it right?" and not "What will folks say?" you are no further advanced mentally than the child that hides its head under the covers at every unusual sound.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intringe and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, becoming an orphan, is thrown on her own resources. She finds work at the Emporium, a department store owned by Edward Gilder; is accused of the theft of silks, and sent to prison, though innocent. She tells George Demarest, Gilder's head lawyer, that the way to stop thievery is to pay a living wage. In prison she learned from fellow convicts why girls go wrong. She understands their point of view and sympathizes with them. Aggie Lynch, a convict friend of Mary's at Burnsing, sees good "possibilities" for her in the world of crime. Upon Mary's release the slogan "once a criminal always one," prevents her from securing work. She is continually hounded and in desperation throws herself into the North River. Joe Garson, a forger, rescues her and keeps her and Aggie in luxury, though living chaste lives. Mary reads that a famous financier escapes prison through keeping within the letter of the law. She follows his example and becomes the leader of a band of swindlers, robbing only the unscrupulous. Gilder's son Dick meets and loves Mary, who seeks to wreak vengeance on the father through the son. Aggie poses as her cousin, and they pretend to be respectable. They are visited by Detective Cassidy, who tries to scare Mary into leaving town through threats. He is laughed at for his pains, because she was "within the law." The detective, before leaving again, tells Aggie and Joe Garson that "there'll be trouble" for them unless they get out of town.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

There was not the change of a feature in the face of the woman who listened to the accusation. Her eyes steadfastly retained their clear gaze into his; her voice was still coldly formal, as before.

"If it's blackmail, Mr. Irwin, why don't you consult the police?" she inquired, with manifest disdain. Mary turned to the maid, who now entered in response to the bell she had sounded a minute before. "Fanny, will you ask Miss Lynch to come in, please?" Then she faced the lawyer again, with an aloofness of manner that was contemptuous. "Really, Mr. Irwin," she drawled, "why don't you take this matter to the police?"

The reply was uttered with conspicuous exasperation.

Police Wouldn't Keep It Secret.

"You know perfectly well," the lawyer said bitterly, "that General Hastings can not afford such publicity. His position would be jeopardized."

"Oh, as for that," Mary suggested evenly, and now there was a trace of flippancy in her fashion of speaking, "I am sure the police would keep your complaint a secret. Really, you know, Mr. Irwin, I think you had better take your trouble to the police, rather than to me. You will get much more sympathy from them."

"Very well, I will then," he declared, sternly. "I will."

Mary, from her vantage point at the desk across from him, smiled a smile that would have been very engaging to any man under more favorable circumstances, and she pushed in his direction the telephone that stood there.

"3100 Spring," she remarked encouragingly, "will bring an officer almost immediately." She leaned back in her chair and surveyed the baffled man amusedly.

The lawyer was furious over the failure of his effort to intimidate this extraordinarily self-possessed young woman, who made a mock of his every thrust. But he was by no means at the end of his resources.

"Nevertheless," he rejoined, "you know perfectly well that General Hastings never promised to marry this girl. You know——" He broke off as Aggie entered the drawing room.

Now, the girl was demure in seeming almost beyond belief, a childish creature, very fair and dainty, guileless surely, with those untroubled eyes of blue, those softly curving lips of warmest red and the more delicate bloom in the rounded cheeks. There were the charms of innocence and simplicity in the manner of her as she stopped just within the doorway, whence she regarded Mary with a timid, pleading gaze, her slender little form poised lightly as if for flight.

"Did you want me, dear?" she asked. There was something half-plaintive in the modulated cadences of the query.

"Agnes," Mary answered affectionately, "this is Mr. Irwin, who has come to see you in behalf of General Hastings."

"Oh!" the girl murmured, her voice quivering a little, as the lawyer, after a short nod, dropped again into his seat; "oh, I'm so frightened!" She hurried, fluttering, to a low stool behind the desk, beside Mary's chair, and there she sank down, drooping slightly, and catching hold of one of Mary's hands as if in mute pleading for protection against the fear that beset her chaste soul.

"Nonsense!" Mary exclaimed soothingly. "There's really nothing at all to be frightened about, my dear child." Her voice was that with which one seeks to cajole a terrified infant. "You mustn't be afraid, Agnes. Mr. Irwin says that General Hastings did not promise to marry you. Of course, you understand, my dear, that under no circumstances must you say anything that isn't strictly true and that, if he did not promise to marry you, you have no case—none at all. Now, Agnes, tell me; did General Hastings promise to marry you?"

"Oh, yes—oh, yes, indeed!" Aggie cried, falteringly. "And I wish he would. He's such a delightful old gentleman!" As she spoke, the girl let go Mary's hand and clasped her own together ecstatically.

He Scowled Disgustedly.

The legal representative of the delightful old gentleman scowled disgustedly at this outburst. His voice was portentous, as he put a question.

"Was that promise made in writing?"

"No," Aggie answered, gushingly. "But all his letters were in writing, you know. Such wonderful letters!" She raised her blue eyes toward the ceiling in a naive rapture. "So tender and so—er—interesting!" Somehow, the inflection on the last word did not altogether suggest the ingenuous.

"Yes, yes, I dare say," Irwin agreed, hastily, with some evidences of chagrin. He had no intention of dwelling on that feature of the letters, concerning which he had no doubt whatsoever, since he knew the amorous general very well, indeed. They would be interesting, beyond shadow of questioning, horridly interesting. Such was the confessed opinion of the swain himself who had written them in his folly—horribly interesting to all the reading public of the country, since the general was a conspicuous figure.

Mary intervened with a suavity that infuriated the lawyer almost beyond endurance.

"But you're quite sure, Agnes," she questioned gently, "that General Hastings did promise to marry you?" The candor of her manner was perfect.

And the answer of Aggie was given with a like convincing emphasis.

"Oh, yes!" she declared, tensely. "Why, I would swear to it." The limpid eyes, so appealing in their soft lusters, went first to Mary, then gazed trustingly into those of the routed attorney.

"You see, Mr. Irwin, she would swear to that," emphasized Mary.

"We're beaten," he confessed, dejectedly, turning his glance toward Mary, whom, plainly, he regarded as his real adversary in the combat on his client's behalf. "I'm going to be quite frank with you, Miss Turner, quite frank," he stated with more geniality, though with a very crestfallen air. Somehow, indeed, there was just a shade too much of the crestfallen in the fashion of his utterance, and the woman whom he addressed watched warily as he continued. "We can't afford any scandal, so we're going to settle at your own terms." He paused expectantly, but Mary offered no comment; only maintained her alert scrutiny of the man. The lawyer, therefore, leaned forward with a semblance of frank eagerness. Instantly, Aggie had become agog with greedily blissful anticipations, and she uttered a slight ejaculation of joy; but Irwin paid no heed to her. He was occupied in taking from his pocket a thick bill case, and from this presently a sheaf of banknotes, which he laid on the desk before Mary, with a little laugh of discomfiture over having been beaten in the contest.

As he did so, Aggie thrust forth an avaricious hand, but it was caught and held by Mary before it reached above the top of the desk, and the avaricious gesture passed unobserved by the attorney.

"We can't fight where ladies are concerned," he went on, assuming, as best he might contrive, a chivalrous tone. "So, if you will just hand over General Hastings' letters, why, here's your money."

Much to the speaker's surprise, there followed an interval of silence, and his puzzlement showed in the knitting of his brows. "You have the letters, haven't you?" he demanded, abruptly.

Aggie coyly took a thick bundle from its resting place on her rounded bosom.

"They never leave me," she murmured, with dulcet passion. There was in her voice a suggestion of desolation—a desolation that was the blighting effect of letting the cherished missives go from her.

WOMAN'S DANGER PERIOD

is said to be from 45 to 50. What should be a most natural change in a woman's life, is, on account of modern methods of living, fraught with most annoying and painful symptoms. Women when passing through this critical period should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it has proved wonderfully successful in carrying women safely through the change of life.

The Vicious Little Moon

To-day's Complete Short Story

THEY emerged from the ground, one, two, three, six, under the deluge of rain in darkness.

One might have believed that they came out of the water, for the torrents of rain, which had been falling incessantly for more than a month, had made the plain around Adrianople and Devanjaros look like a sea.

In the uncertain twilight each of them looked like an immense bundle of sheepskin, out of which emerged the barrel of a rifle. All six wore caps of green velvet bordered with astrakhan.

It was a patrol of Macedonians enrolled in the Bulgarian army passing through the line of outposts. Hesitating and uncertain, they moved their long arms like windmills, made the sign of the cross, pointed right and left and peered about cautiously.

A Branch for a Signal.

Fifty paces away a branch stuck into into the ground and reflected in a pool of water began to move back and forth. The Macedonians started toward the hole from which this signal was given. It was the abandoned trench. Sergeant Naritch and his five Bulgarian soldiers were down there and had given them the signal.

The six Bulgarians loved the six Macedonians.

Since the beginning of the investment these twelve men were in the habit of meeting in the hour of twilight when the guns became blind.

They met in the abandoned trench which was no longer used. There they sat down close together in the deep mud. They exchanged only few words: "The war is going to last a long time!" or "May the Lord give the Turks into our hands," was the burden of their remarks.

Then they sat silent and pondered until it was time to separate and each party went back to its camp.

Depressed and Melancholy.

On this night they felt unusually depressed and melancholy. The incessant rain, the everlasting cold and the enforced idleness and hopelessness overwhelmed them.

"The war will never end," said Kaloub, making a wry face.

"Never," said Naziff, and yawned like a hungry wolf.

They all bowed their heads and spat into the mud, then, as always happens when men are downhearted and depressed, they began to talk about mysterious things.

"The moon looks like a crescent tonight," said Kaloub.

"A bad sign," said Alexis, the venerable brigand, who knew everything between life and death. "It is a vicious little moon."

And he told the legend of the vicious little moon which kills all those upon whom it looks.

They raised their heads and gazed furtively toward the sky.

"One must not tempt the moon," said Potrof, who was newly married, although his hair was gray. "Woe unto us all."

"I am sleepy," said Reff plaintively, like a child.

Let Us Go Back.

"Let us go back," growled Alexis, and stuck his bayonet into his boot.

The Macedonians left one at a time. The Bulgarians looked after them and regretted they had let them go. They remained in the abandoned trench, oppressed by a vague sense of danger, afraid of the moon that was looking down upon them, half senseless with fatigue and superstition.

Each was dreaming his own dreams.

Sergeant Naritch saw his litle house and his wife in her gayly colored dress. He saw her looking at a golden-haired girl. He felt the fragrance of the flowering hedges and saw the long rows of willow trees standing like sentries along the bank of the brook.

Suddenly he raised his head with a jerk and rubbed his eyes. He could see nothing now but the darkness and the slender crescent of the moon.

He shook himself. What were they thinking of? It was late. Little Father Colonel would surely hear them coming back.

"Come along, boys; we must get back to camp," he said.

Crawled From the Trench.

The others yawned, stretched their limbs and crawled out of the trench.

They marched through the muddy pools with the rain beating into their faces and soaking the fur of their heavy sheepskin coats. From time to time they glanced at the moon.

They stopped. They had lost their way. It was the moon, the vicious little moon, which had led them astray with its treacherous light.

They shuddered and started again, tramping through the mud. Time and again they nearly fell into the deep mudholes made by the bursting shells. Half an hour passed and still no sign of lights or campfires.

Suddenly a shot rang out.

The sergeant raised his head, looked about and listened.

"We are inside the Turkish lines," he said.

"We ought to have set out when the Macedonians left," growled Kaloub; "they know their way here and would not have wandered astray."

"Look," said Diplovitch, "there are some soldiers over there watching us."

Felt Like Howling.

And at the faint light of the moon they dimly made out some figures a short distance away. The Bulgarians, now quite convinced that the vicious little moon had led them into an ambush, felt like howling with superstitious fear.

In a low voice Naritch commanded: "Fire!"

The enemy was quicker and fired first.

With a groan, Potrof, the newly married, fell to the ground like a log.

The firing was kept up by both sides and men dropped where they stood.

The last man to remain standing finally sank to the ground. He thought he heard somebody whisper his name from among those he had shot down. Then everything was silent.

Toward morning a passing patrol found the dead bodies of six Macedonians and six Bulgarians, who had been led astray by the vicious little moon, that kills those upon whom it looks.

SHORTS STRUGGLE FOR JULY OPTION

Fear of "Squeeze" and of Bullish Weather Report Cause of Lively Demand.

NEW YORK, May 12.—As the result of bullish weather reports the cotton market opened firm to-day, first prices ranging from unchanged to 7 points higher. Brown and Hayne, the big traders of New York and New Orleans, were on the floor of the exchange, but traders did not attribute the ruling strength in certain months to their presence.

There was no market in Liverpool, this being a holiday there.

Trading was light on and after the call. The principal feature was the strength of July. There was suspicion of bull operations against the short interest and a bullish weekly report on the weather, especially on the Eastern belt, where rains are badly needed, was expected.

The market during the forenoon trading was steady with July 10 points higher; May and other positions 4 to 5 points higher than the initial level.

Offerings were light and scattered, said to be profit-taking.

July continued under persistent demand by the same brokers who have been absorbing July contracts daily, believed to be for McFadden and other large spot interests. Shorts were nervous and the impending "squeeze" in that option is becoming more obvious day after day. The local stock is being depleted daily.

Some scattered rains fell over the eastern belt last night, but not so much as first predicted. Indications point to more showers.

Owing to the holiday in Liverpool, business was extremely light. The buying was aggressive, while the selling was light and scattered. During the afternoon session the market maintained the advancing tendency and each option increased its gain over the previous close. May was 8, July 9, October 12, December 11 and January 9 points higher than Saturday's final.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net advance of 4 to 5 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, May 12.—General showers fell over Arkansas during the past forty-eight hours and scattered showers occurred in the Atlantics. Indications are for continued showery weather in the eastern States. Dry, warm weather continued in the western half of the belt. Temperatures were high in the eastern half of the belt also, except in Northeast Tennessee and North Carolina, which had a cold spell, but the weather will become warmer there soon. Showers have been general in the dry eastern belt since the date of Haberham King's circular.

New York dry goods reports are better, a broader demand and steadier prices being reported.

Our market opened slightly lower, but showed no selling pressure and ruled very steady. It is thought that to-morrow's weekly Government report might be bulish in the eastern States, owing to the dry weather, and apprehension exists of bullish operations directed against the technical condition of the market, prevailing opinion being that the short interest is large.

STOCKS ARE DULL THROUGHOUT DAY

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Sentiment was mixed at the opening of stock market to-day and the list had an irregular appearance. Union Pacific was one of the firmest issues on the list, advancing ½ to 149. American Can preferred was about the weakest, declining a point to 92¾.

The market was without outside influences, the Stock Exchange in London and the Bourses in Berlin and Paris being closed.

Amalgamated Copper began ¼ lower, but recovered its loss and gained fractionally. Reading also began lower, but made up its loss of ⅛ and within half an hour ruled fractionally above Saturday's final.

United States Steel common was ¼ lower on first sales, but subsequently recovered. Southern Pacific, Erie, Lehigh Valley and American Can common were fractionally lower. Canadian Pacific advanced ¼, but soon lost its gain.

The curb was dull, but steady.

The market was irregular during the forenoon, with many of the leading issues on a downward movement. New Haven advanced ½ to 104. Lehigh Valley, Southern Pacific and Pennsylvania were off ¼. Copper and Steel were off ⅛. Union Pacific was up ½. Reading was unchanged.

Call money loaning at 2¾

Stocks receded fractionally in the last hour. Amalgamated Copper ruled around 74¾c for the loss of ½ from the midday level. Union Pacific was sold in considerable quantity, losing a point. United States Steel sold under 99 but later rallied. Reading was 1¼c under its midday price. Fractional declines were also scored by Lehigh Valley and St. Paul.

The market closed dull. Governments unchanged. Other bonds dull.

Condition of Oats Bad; Season Late

CHICAGO, May 12.—B. W. Snow says:

"During the past week I covered the principal oats district in Central and Eastern Illinois and West Central Indiana. These sections include the important territory in both States. Practically all of the crop was seeded late, went into ground that was wet and as a result the plant is very small and condition bad. The surface of the ground is rough and cloddy, leaving it full of cracks through which the air and drying winds draw moisture from around the roots of the plant.

"There has been no drouth and there is plenty of subsoil moisture, but the rough top is drying badly and roots of the plant not developed enough to reach the moisture, and as a result the plant is standing still in growth, losing color and getting an unthrifty start.

"Unless there is good rainfall very soon, the situation will quickly become serious."

DRY GOODS TRADE REVIEW.

Sales and shipments for the month up to date indicate conditions better than normal in the dry goods trade. Future business continues to show an increase over that of a year ago. Seeding conditions have been excellent in practically all sections of the country and there are very few spots from which any but the best reports have been heard. The status of growing crops is such as to inspire confidence in trade. Merchants' stocks are turning satisfactorily and reorders on most lines promise to leave wholesale stocks in good condition for the turn of the year.

Salesmen are finding buyers responsive to the offerings in wool dress goods for Fall and sales are well ahead of the corresponding period in 1912. On the most desirable worsteds, mills have sold their output and in many cases are oversold and have been obliged to cut down original orders and reorders can not be placed except for October and November delivery.

Merchants are buying worsted yarns for home knitting purposes freely. Proposed changes in the tariff schedule have already been anticipated in the wool market. Wools in this country of medium and fine grades are on practically a London basis and a tariff change will simply transfer this staple from a cal to a world market.

ATLANTA LIVE STOCK MARKET.

(By W. H. White, Jr., of the White Provision Company.)

Cattle receipts are heavier than usual. The market is 25 to 50 cents lower on the middle grades, with a heavy supply. Tops and choice in good demand and market steady.

One load of the E. T. Comer cattle were on the market this week and brought $7.37½ per cut, this being the top price for the week. These were mixed highbred Short Horn and Hereford young steers, fat and prime, bred and raised on the Comer farm at Millhaven, Ga., and would do credit to any beef producing section.

With the exception of this load and two loads of Short Horn steers from A. N. Brown at McDonough, all of which were sold to the Atlanta packer, the run was badly mixed, consisting principally of country pick up bunches of all sizes and kinds, which sold at prices fully as irregular as were the cattle.

Hogs continue to come freely. Market has ranged lower in sympthy with the Western markets.

Choice to good steers, 1,000 to 1,200, 5.75@6.50; good steers, 800 to 1,000, 5.50@6.00; medium to good steers, 700 to 850, 5.00@5.75; medium to good cows, 700 to 800, 4.50@5.00; good to choice beef cows, 800 to 900, 4.75@5.75; medium to good heifers, 650 to 750, 4.25@4.75; good to choice heifers, 750 to 850, 4.75@5.75.

Medium to common steers, if fat, 800 to 900, 4.50@5.50; medium to commoff cows, if fat, 700 to 800, 4.25@5.25; mixed common, 600 to 800, 3.25@4.00; good butcher bulls, 3.50@4.00.

Prime hogs, 160 to 200 average, 8.30@8.50; good butcher hogs, 140 to 160, 8.10@8.30; good butcher pigs, 100 to 140, 7.75@8.00; light pigs, 80 to 100, 7.00@7.50; heavy rough hogs, 200 to 250, 7.50@8.25.

COTTON GOSSIP

Liverpool closed.

* * *

* * *

It is said the strength in July option is due to the reduction of the local stock and fear of a "squeeze" in that option. Shorts are not inclined to be caught with many large lines and they have been covering heavily during the past week or two.

* * *

Sentiment is equally divided at the moment and the majority of traders forecast an explosion of fireworks in July and fear that the new crop is suffering considerably from the lack of moisture.

* * *

It is believed the English operators will be strong for a bull card. It is a known fact that Liverpool has tried over and over to bull the market. From the New York stock, 12,000 bales were shipped out Thursday and 6,000 bales were exported Friday. This made the short end holders believe that there was danger and they covered.

* * *

The Fall River Iron Works Mills will close for an indefinite period, beginning to-day. This will reduce stocks about 70,000 pieces weekly. Other curtailment is under consideration.

* * *

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, May 12.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows cloudy in the eastern half of the belt, generally fair in the western half, rather general light showers in the southwestern quarter. There was a good rain in the Montgomery, Ala., section and it still is raining there. There were no rains in the west. It is warm everywhere except in North Carolina, where it is unseasonably cool. Indications are for continued unsettled and showery weather in Alabama and the South Atlantics; generally fair elsewhere.

* * *

Washington forecast for week: "West of the Mississippi River generally fair weather; east of the river local thundershowers the first half of the week, generally fair the second half. Normal temperatures."

* * *

Selma, Ala., says light but general rains fell throughout Central Alabama and have proven of great benefit to the cotton and corn crops.

* * *

Habersham King's latest circular: "Facts show that temperatures have been favorable to the entire belt, while rains were in excess of needs in Western States and practically absent in Eastern belt, they were just about right in the Middle States, and the week's developments have been favorable over the entire belt. Showers have been general in the dry Eastern belt, since the date reached by this circular."

GRAIN RISES ON LIGHT OFFERINGS

Absence of Cables and Bull Circular on Oats Cause Advance in Chicago.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red ..... 103½@105
Corn—No. 2 59
Oats—No. 2 ..... 36½@ 37

CHICAGO, May 12.—Coarse grains helped the wheat market this morning and the entire list was stronger and higher. Rains are needed in Kansas in the wheat belt and the bears are slow to attack the situation in consequence. There were no cables to-day, the markets of the Old World being closed in observance of Whitmonday.

The routine statistics were about as expected and there were heavier receipts of wheat both at the Northwestern as well as Winnipeg markets. World's shipments were 12,500 bushels, against 11,700 bushels a year ago. Later prices show advances over the resting spots of Saturday of ¼c to ¼c.

Shorts were buyers of corn.

Provisions were weak in sympathy with lower hog market.

Wheat closed at the lowest prices reached to-day, but the May was ¼c higher, while the more deferred months were ½@⅝c lower. When May reached 90⅜, July 90¼@90½ and September 90, the chutes of the longs were opened and the crowd in the pit was filled up with all the wheat that it cared to absorb. Omaha reported Minneapolis as again buying hard winter wheat there for milling purposes, and Duluth was reported as a buyer of July wheat at Minneapolis.

The visible supply of wheat decreased 1,590,000 bushels and Chicago stocks increased 200,000 bushels for the week. The visible supply of corn decreased 1,457,000 bushels and Chicago stocks decreased 230,000 bushels. The oats visible decreased 599,000 bushels and there was a decrease in Chicago stocks of 300,000 bushels.

Cash transactions were small at 65,000 bushels wheat, 175,000 bushels corn and 175,000 bushels oats.

Corn closed ½@⅝c higher to ⅛c better.

Oats were ½@1¼c better.

Provisions were a trifle higher.

HOG RUN HEAVIER.

CHICAGO, May 12.—More hogs showed up than the trade expected, causing a 5c decline. Cattle trade was steady but slow, while the live muttons were 10c to 15c higher. Hogs sold largely at 8.35@8.45 and cattle at 7.75@8.25. There were 108,000 hogs at eleven markets, against 105,000 last week and 97,000 a year ago. Cattle receipts were fairly heavy here, but light at outside markets.

LIVE STOCK MARKET.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Hogs—Receipts 40,000. Market 5c lower. Mixed and butchers $8.25@8.50, good heavy $8.25@8.45, rough heavy $8.05@8.20, light $8.25@8.50, pigs $6.50@8.10, bulk $8.35@8.45.

Cattle—Receipts 20,000. Market steady. Beeves $7.25@8.90, cows and heifers $3.50@8.15, stockers and feeders $6.00@7.80, Texans $6.40@7.80, calves $7.00@9.65.

Sheep—Receipts 15,000. Market steady. Native and Western $4.75@6.50, lambs $5.75@8.50.

WORLD'S SHIPMENTS.

Wheat, 12,576,000 bushels, against 11,072,000 bushels last year and 11,744,000 bushels for the same week in 1911.

Corn, 4,617,000 bushels, compared with 3,308,000 bushels for the corresponding week last year and 5,553,000 bushels for the same week the year before.

Total wheat taken by Continental countries during the past week aggregated 6,744,00 bushels, compared with 6,496,000 bushels for the same week last year and 5,352,000 bushels during the same week the year before.

Cotton Stands Poor; Expect Short Yield

Reports From Georgia to Agricultural Department Indicate Total Crop Will Show Decrease.

Reports from all over Georgia to the State Department of Agriculture show that the stands of cotton are unusually poor this year. This condition indicates that the first estimates of the cotton crop in Georgia for 1913 did not allow for a sufficient decrease.

J. J. Connor, head of the department, thinks the decrease in acreage this year would amount to more than the 3 per cent estimated by agricultural journals. This fact, taken in connection with the prospects for a yield per acre below the average, corroborates the opinions of experts that the total yield will show a marked decrease.

The officials of the Agricultural Department Monday attributed the poor stands to the long period of dry weather which has followed the earlier torrential rains.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Serious Mistakes Of the Beginner in Poultry Business

Safe Road as Well as the One To Be Avoided—Pure Stock Necessary.

A great many serious mistakes are being made by beginners in the poultry business from ignorance. True, experience is a very good and safe teacher, but often very expensive in both time and money.

It is for this reason we desire to point out the safe road as well as the one to be avoided.

An idea prevalent with beginners in starting with thoroughbred stock is that all that is necessary is that stock be pure, so-called. In other words, they purchase stock of a neighbor who says his stock is pure, but when an expert breeder or judge looks at this stock he finds that it is anything but what high-class standard bred stock should be.

But you ask, If it is pure what can be the matter with it? A great many things can be the matter with it. The most common mode of breeding where carelessness rules is in letting all classes of the breed run in the breeding pen.

For example, take the Barred Rock which is quite familiar, in a certain way, to almost everyone. Upon the premises of this careless breeder we find hens of forty different shapes and shades of color, from light to almost solid black. These are running promiscuously with a half dozen roosters, all different in color and type of make-up. If you stop to think for a moment, can't you imagine what such a combination would produce, or as the Dutchman said, "what it would not produce?" We can not hope for anything in the shape of uniformity of the young stock we raise when all sizes, shapes and colors were allowed to run together and form the breeding stock.

Culls Bound to Come.

That the best and selected stock will breed some culls no experienced breeder of any breed will deny. They are bound to come. That the tendency is downward instead of upward, if no culling is done, will also be readily admitted by the experienced. Consequently, if we expect to improve or even maintain a high standard of excellence, we must breed from only the choicest specimens, putting those of uniform color and breeding types into the same pens. This plan, and this alone, will prove satisfactory.

Eggs at $2 and $3 seem unreasonable and too high to the average farmer or villager who has made no study of the conditions, and the temptation to buy the cheapest eggs he can get is generally more than he can stand. If he be at all progressive in his make-up, and has any idea of eventually getting the best, the change will come sooner or later when this cheap stock will be disposed of and a fresh start made. But this is expensive in both time and money wasted. True, a man might take quite a low-grade of stock and with years of patient culling and breeding get to where it would make a pretty good showing. But my, what a long and tedious road to travel!

Now, friends, you who are starting or getting ready to invest in pure bred stock and have an eye to the beautiful and the best, take my advice and open your purse wide enough to get something good. If you do not get just what you thought you would, try it again and keep on until you succeed.

WHITE DIARRHOEA is the most dreaded of all diseases in little chicks, but if taken in time it can be cured easily. We sell Conkey's and Pratt's remedies for this disease and guarantee a cure. 25c and 50c package.

DON'T let the mites and lice get a start on you; disinfect the poultry houses and runs thoroughly with Pratt's Poultry Disinfectant. No germs can live where you use it and it leaves the place nice and clean. Quart 35c, gallon $1.00.

A GREAT many people advocate feeding baby chicks on a feed that has no corn. We have the Rice special feed that is absolutely free from corn. A good, clean feed at $2.50 per 100 pounds.

A NEW LOT of canary birds imported direct from Germany at $2.75 each.

IF YOUR BIRD needs a new cage, come in and see how complete our line is; we have them ranging in prices from $1.00 up to $5.00.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Highland Avenue Sales Net $20,200

Three Brick Stores Change Hands. Workmen Demolish 301 Peachtree for Improvements.

The Realty Mortgage Company sold to a client of the Charles P. Glover real estate agency to-day the southwest corner of Highland and Greenwood Avenues, three brick stores, for $15,000, and two 20x90-foot lots adjoining the stores on Highland Avenue for $2,000, and two 80x102-foot lots adjoining the stores on Greenwood Avenue for $3,200, making a total in the three parcels of $20,200.

Peachtree Home Demolished.

Workmen began to-day tearing down 301 Peachtree Street to make way for business improvements. This property has had an interesting history in the real estate market. Luther Z. Rosser bought it several years ago for $20,000 and the Forrest & George Adair agency sold it for Mr. Rosser in the middle of March to J. S. Floyd for $100,500, or at the rate of $1,605 a front foot.

The frontage is 62 feet on Peachtree and 74 feet on Ivy Street, and the depth is 260.5 feet. The Peachtree dwelling is two stories and has been used as a boarding house. The property is on the east side of the street, half a block north of Baker Street.

The People Must Now Depend Upon the Senate for Genuine Reciprocity Provisions in Tariff Bill.

It is upon the Senate that the people must depend for genuine reciprocity provisions in the tariff bill.

The Senate will not be driven into line by a caucus whip. It will have a chance to treat a serious matter with the deliberation it deserves.

There are good reasons for believing that the Senate has ceased to be what it once was—the stronghold of party regularity and of those special interests that have for so long practiced the arts of party regimentation and applied the strangulation of the party gag. There are good reasons for believing that the Senate will respond to the well-nigh unanimous popular demand for real and efficient reciprocity.

The tariff bill was sent to the Senate tagged with the empty NAME of reciprocity, but with no SUBSTANCE of reciprocity in it. It would give away—ABSOLUTELY AND WITHOUT CONDITION—to Canada and other nations trade privileges and immunities that ought to be reserved and kept for the present in our own hands AS A BASIS FOR TARIFF BARGAINING. It would fling a long "free list" at the feet of our trade rivals—WITHOUT ASKING ANY FREEDOM FOR OUR OWN COMMERCE IN RETURN.

Thus the tariff as it stands is not merely wrong in a hundred details. It is wrong in principle. It flouts the very principle that it so loudly proclaims. It makes a mockery of reciprocity.

The fact that the tariff bill in its present shape is not only unreasonable, but in many namable respects CONSCIOUSLY and RECKLESSLY unreasonable, may be illustrated by the particular status of the schedule that has to do with the various grain staples—wheat, oats, rye, buckwheat—and their manufactured products.

When the bill first went to caucus a tax of 10 per cent or so was placed on all these staples, while in every case the foodstuffs made from them by various manufacturing processes WERE ALL PUT UPON THE FREE LIST.

The obvious effect of such an arrangement would be TO DRIVE MOST OF OUR FOOD MANUFACTURING BUSINESS INTO CANADA—with very damaging consequences not only to our manufacturers, but also to our farmers.

Now note the reckless and irresponsible character of the House's tariff tinkering, as shown in this grain schedule. It turns out that the House has been driven by pressure from certain quarters to put natural rye and buckwheat, as well as their manufactured products, on the free list. BUT IT HAS ALLOWED THE 10 PER CENT TAX TO STAND AGAINST NATURAL UNMANUFACTURED WHEAT AND OATS.

There is no earthly reason why this discrimination should have been made—at least no reason fit to print.

The whole grain schedule in its original form was topsy-turvy and preposterous—damaging to every legitimate American interest. As it now stands it outrages every principle of reciprocity and has, besides, lost the consistency and logicality of its original foolishness.

IS THERE ANY MEMBER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES WHO WILL DARE STAND UP AND JUSTIFY THE GRAIN SCHEDULE ON GROUNDS OF RECIPROCITY—OR OF RATIONALITY?

Some More Law on Canal Tolls

In a leading editorial expression in the current Bench and Bar the editors declare, as legal experts, that the provision of the Panama Canal bill to exempt from tolls American coastwise shipping does not seem to contravene any article of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. They say:

"We confess to having been much impressed by Senator O'Gorman's address before the Senate, in which the position was taken that the provision of the canal bill to exempt from tolls American coastwise shipping is not in contravention of Article III of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

"That is to say, as there is nothing to prevent the other nations, including Great Britain, from remitting or reimbursing by subsidy or otherwise all tolls paid by their citizens or subjects for vessels making use of the canal, it is unreasonable to suppose that the United States, by whose money and genius the canal was made possible, may not do likewise with reference to its own citizens.

"In other words, we can see no great difference, in principle, between the right of the United States to reimburse and its right to remit or exempt, and to hold that this country might not exempt its own shipping from tolls would, it seems to us, be to deprive it of a power which clearly resides in every other nation which may make use of the canal."

England's Insurance Against Attack

R R

No Nation Would Ever Attack This Country, He Says, if Our Navy Were Ample For Self-Defense—If It were Large Enough to Protect Both Our Atlantic and Pacific Coasts.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

DR. LYMAN ABBOTT is receiving the merited congratulations of his countrymen for the level-headed common sense of his position as an advocate of universal peace.

Dr. Abbott is constitutionally an advocate of peace. He is temperamentally a man of common sense.

And the peace societies which have sought to discipline him by dismissing him from their membership have emphasized in a very great degree the eminent soundness of Dr. Abbott's method of promoting universal peace.

The best way to promote peace is to be prepared for war.

There was never a sounder maxim in history or experience. England has been for four hundred years the prophet and exponent of that doctrine among nations. And England's evangel has gone far as the curse of war is found and has presented a great example as the vindication of a wise and far-seeing policy.

Immune From Attacks.

There can be no answer by the "peace-at-any-price" men to the fact that with the greatest navy in the world England has been absolutely immune from attacks by any foreign nation and absolutely exempt from any war which she did not choose to make.

No nation has attacked England within these four centuries. No nation would attack any other country that had as great a navy as England. No nation would ever attack this country if our navy were ample for self-defense—if it were large enough to protect both our Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

This fact is so true and so self-evident that it is worthy to be an axiom. It is so true and has been so conspicuously vindicated as true that it is simply wonderful that other nations, and particularly our own nation, has not had the common sense to follow it.

Our Own Navy.

The present size of our navy, inadequate as it is, will explain the fact that we have enjoyed a comparative exemption so long as we had no navy, and England one hundred years ago took advantage of our poverty in warships, sailed up our majestic Potomac and laid the capital of this Republic in ashes.

Germany, the most martial of European nations, realizes the common sense which Dr. Abbott has so placidly expressed, and is constantly building its navy to the standard of preserving peace.

Japan has expressed every progressive step in its modern development by the yearly reinforcement of its navy. The teachable genius of Japan is vigorously illustrated in the fact that its answer to the suggestions of the present controversy with the United States is to give an order for three great battleships at once.

For Universal Peace.

There are no sincerer advocates of universal peace than the Hearst newspapers. The editorial page of The New York American contained the article written three years ago on Christmas Day which revived the sentiment for universal peace throughout the world. Copies of that editorial were sent by distinguished hands to the rulers and chief authorities of every great kingdom in the world. It represented, I think, the spirit of the Hearst newspapers. And it was regarded and reproduced as one of the soundest and most effective arguments ever written for universal peace.

But the spirit of that utterance, like the spirit of Lyman Abbott, was the spirit of prudence and of common sense. It realized the fact that no nation can fold its hands and throw away its fighting power while other nations increase their fighting power. Dr. Abbott expressed it in an effective epigram:

An Alternative.

"There are two ways in which a nation can maintain peace. Either by being so weak that it can not fight, or by being so strong that nobody wants to fight it. Our nation should be so strong it will never have to fight."

By and by, when the great nations fully realize that each one is in the race of great navies to stay as long as the others stay, the universal common sense will bring about the universal agreement of nations to cease the building of navies and to submit all quarrels to just tribunals for decision.

But until that day there is no wise or patriotic thing to do but to keep the pace and keep up with the procession, and, as far as national resources will allow, to lead the procession as the United States can do.

The United States Congress will demonstrate the narrowness of its judgment, the weakness of its comprehension and the lack of patriotism in its ranks, if it fails to keep this country side by side with every other great country so long as great navies are the only peace-makers and the only insurance policies against the destruction of war.

We are able to pay $20,000,000 a year as an insurance against war. Let this Congress take out the policy.

.:. Sending Messages and Carrying Them .:.

By ELBERT HUBBARD.

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

IT is, of course, very necessary that when you are intrusted with a message you shall deliver it to the right party in the least possible space of time.

The man, however, who intrusts another with a message has a duty to perform quite as much as the man who is given one.

There are men who can never get messages carried, and other men there be who inspire messengers with loyalty, fidelity and courage.

It is a somewhat curious thing that the most able men are never good teachers. "The great teacher," says Emerson, "is not the man who supplies the most facts, but the one in whose presence we become different people."

Too much individuality repels, overawes, subdues. An overpowering personality is a willopus-wallopus—in other words, a steam-roller that flattens anything and everybody in the vicinity.

Making Merchants.

In the United States there are a few merchants who are discoverers of genius, but most are served by the mediocre, not to mention the time-server, the flunkey, the hypocrite and the lickspittle.

One great merchant in the United States lives in history, not only because he was a great merchant, but because he discovered to the world fully a half-dozen other great merchants. That is, he took young men, gave them an opportunity, and under his beneficent guiding influence these country boys bloomed and blossomed.

When you expect a messenger to deliver a message it is well not to hamper him with too many instructions, nor scare him into innocuous desuetude by retailing the dangers that he will encounter, describing for him the punishment he will receive if he fails to deliver the message.

It is a great man who knows when to place reliance in another, to relegate and delegate and keep discipline out of sight. To let one line of figures at the bottom of the balance sheet tell the tale. This is genius.

Genius in Selection.

Of course, if you repose confidence in the wrong man you will rue it, but genius turns on selection. Big men, nowadays, are big because they get others to do their work.

Napoleon said: "I win my battles with my marshals!" And then when he was asked where he got his marshals, he said: "I make them out of mud!"

What he meant was that he took obscure men and lifted them into positions of prominence by throwing responsibility on them.

Note the loyalty and love of Bertrand, who followed his master to St. Helena, giving up home, religion, family and all of his own private interests that he might serve his master—even refusing to leave his master when he was dead, but remaining at St. Helena in order that his own dust might mingle in the grave with this man he loved.

ELBERT HUBBARD.

Any one who can inspire another with such love cannot be obliterated by the scratch of the pen or the shrug of a shoulder.

Napoleon certainly had personality; at the same time he did not use it to destroy the personality of others.

Ben Lindsey's Boys.

Great is the man—supremely great—who does not bestride the narrow world like a colossus and cause other men to run and peep about under his huge legs to find themselves dishonorable graves.

The world is big enough for all of us, and a very good slogan is: "Make room! Make room!" And if you are bound to give an order, let it be this: "Open up that gangway!"

Ben Lindsey has entrusted a thousand boys, each with a message, and the message he gave them was their commitment papers.

These boys carried the message; and out of the thousand a scant half dozen proved derelict. And just remember that all of these boys belonged to the "criminal class!"

Let us here quote Napoleon again, who said: "The criminal class? Ah, yes, I fight my battles with the criminal class!"

To entrust a message to a messenger with the full confidence that he will do haught else but deliver it to the proper person, and this expeditiously, is a fine art that employers would do well to acquire.

A trusted messenger is fine, but a trusting employer is finer still.

A breath of suspicion will taint the whole fabric of trust. If Ben Lindsey doubted that his boys would go where they were sent, very few of them would ever reach the iron gates and hear their clanging welcome.

A Fine Idea.

The secret of Ben Lindsey's success is simple: he believes in his boys. And that is why the boys believe in him.

Ben Lindsey kissing the cheek of a bad boy and sending the lad away to prison alone, unattended, uncoerced, is a finer thing to me than Napoleon's habit of pulling down the head of one of his marshals and kissing the bearded cheek.

"Know thyself!" said Socrates.

"Trust thyself!" said Emerson.

"Trust others!" says Ben Lindsey.

When President McKinley gave that message to Rowan he trusted Rowan to carry it. There were no instructions, no threats, no implied doubts, no injunctions, Rowan asked no questions; neither did McKinley.

The big man is not the man who wants to live not only his own life but the life of others, but he is great who reposes faith in others, and thus brings out the best that is in them, that which was often before unguessed.

The Country as Seen by a City Man

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

FAR from the glad cries of the traffic policeman to the patient truck driver the pleasant perfume of the gas mains, and the joyous tumult of the shoppers' crush is a strange, weird region called The Country.

Keep away from it! For miles and miles you may wander its monotonous green wastes and never hear the reverberating music of a trolley car rounding a curve.

You will miss the kindly warning of the chauffeur as you crawl from beneath the wheels of his car; your heart will be heavy with homesickness for the freshly turned earth on the torn up streets, and the dainty plank walks around execavations for new buildings.

No Safes Going Up.

There are no flats in the country. There are no gala block-long displays of family washing swung between brick dwellings, like the fluttering pennants on a holiday-dressed man-of-war. No safes destined for the thirty-second story of a highly thatched skyscraper part their hawsers and come hurtling down to the pavement, to provide edification to all nearby populace save that portion that happens to be directly underneath. Never does a fire chief drive unconventionally down the sidewalk execrating the fleeing public as he sweeps by. Never does an ambulance on its splendid errand of mercy crash madly through a crowd, and make business for the other ambulances that follow in its wake.

Evil and savage beasts confront you at every turn. Horned monsters that cry "Moo" and leer at you with lambent fire in their fearsome brown eyes; reptiles that sit on logs chorusing "cheep, cheep," until you approach, and then plunge suspiciously into pools as if distrustful of your presence; long-eared, white-tailed creatures that flicker across your path like flashes of light or peer at you silent and sinister from behind stone walls; winged creatures with plumage copied from women's hats, that chatter in the boughs of trees at sunset, and are up at the first blush of dawn to break your rest with their shrill piping.

All Poets Are Mad!

From the earth and from the dark green woods come scents that startle and disquiet you—not the familiar smells of banana peels, and coal smoke and sewer manholes, but disturbing, unrecognized odors that proceed from tawdry, flimsy creations called flowers, that have their roots in the common dingy ground.

A mad poet—all poets are mad, but this one was madder than most of his fellows—once wrote:

"They come, the merry summer months, with beauty, song and flowers,
They come, the gladsome months that bring thick leafiness to bowers,
Up! Up! My soul, and walk abroad; fling cark and care aside;
Seek silent woods, or rest thyself where peaceful waters glide;
Or underneath the shadow vast of patriarchal tree
Scan through its leaves the boundless sky, in rapt tranquillity."

Pay no attention to this lunatic rhapsody. Keep away from The Country—especially in spring.

The Story of the Loyalists

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE hundred and thirty-five years ago a little company of men, women and children, numbering altogether some hundred and ninety-six souls, turned and struck out for the wilds of Canada.

It was the beginning of the exodus of the "Tories," or, as they called themselves, the "Loyalists." Starting soon after the American Declaration of Independence, the movement broadened and deepened until it took in tens of thousands. It has been estimated that more than one hundred thousand American colonists took refuge in Canada between 1778 and 1784.

These Tories, or Loyalists, were to be found in all the colonies, and in large numbers. Some authorities of acknowledged respectability declare that they were as numerous as the Patriots and in many localities outnumbered them. They were strong in New York State, in North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

In wealth, education and social standing they were far superior to the Whigs, or Patriots. To them belonged nearly all of the "leading families" and "distinguished individuals" of the time. The ancestors of many of the prominent New Yorkers and other influential Americans of to-day were among those who emigrated to Canada rather than live under the banner of the rebeldom.

One of the good things about Time is that it heals wounds, cools passion and opens the eyes of the understanding, so that we can see with unclouded vision the things to which we were once blinded.

The Tories believed that it was their duty to be loyal to the British King and nation, and in obedience to that conviction they stood ready to sacrifice the most precious things that "mortal time affords"—home, wealth, comfort, the good will of their neighbors—yes, and life itself.

From a sense of duty the Loyalists forsook all these things and cast themselves into the bleak, wild, inhospitable wilderness of the North, to suffer unspeakable privations and perils; and small is the mind that is not able to see in all this the highest and grandest of manhood—the Manhood of Principle, the manhood which cheerfully accepts the work in order that it may be faithful to that which it believes to be right.

Absolute truth and right is a mere chimera. The only truth and right that mortals can know anything about, or should be at all concerned about, is that which really and truly commends itself to them as such. The Eternal alone knows what is actually right, and the only thing for us to do is to stand true to that which we honestly feel to be right.

That's what the Tories did. That's what the Patriots did. And they were both right.

WILSON ASKS ANTI-JAPANESE BILL BE VETOED

Governor of California Gets Urgent Request to Delay Crisis in Acute Situation.

PRESIDENT OFFERS HIS AID

Tells Westerners He Will Be Glad to Assist in the Correction of Alien Evils.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson, through Secretary of State Bryan, has made a formal plea to Governor Johnson, of California, to veto the alien-land bill.

The message to California's Governor was framed at the White House last night. It sets forth in diplomatic language the urgency of the situation created by the demands of Viscount Chinda, the Japanese Ambassador.

The message to Governor Johnson follows:

Two Courses Open.

The President directs me to express his appreciation of your courtesy in delaying action on the land bill now before you, until its provisions could be communicated to the Japanese Government and considered by it.

His Excellency, Baron Chinda, has, on behalf of his Government, presented an earnest protest against the measure. As you have before you but two alternatives, viz, to approve or to veto, it will avail nothing to recall to your attention the amendments suggested to the Legislature; and as the President has already laid before you his views upon the subject, it is unnecessary to reiterate them.

He passes over the questions affecting treaty rights for two reasons; first, because the bill passed by the Legislature is avowedly intended to conform to treaty obligations, and, second, because any conflict complained of would be a matter for the courts, but the President feels justified in expressing again his desire that action on the subject be deferred for this session, and he expresses the desire the more freely because the Legislatur can be reconvened at any time if the welfare of the State requires it.

He is fully alive to the importance of removing any root of discord which may create antagonism between American citizens and the subjects of Oriental nations residing here, but he is impelled by a sense of duty to express the hope that you will see fit to allow time for diplomatic effort. The nations affected by the proposed law are friendly nations—nations that have shown themselves willing to co-operate in the establishment of harmonious relations between their people and ours.

President Offers Aid.

If a postponement commends itself to your judgment the President will be pleased to co-operate in a systematic effort to discover and correct any evils that may exist in connection with land ownership by aliens.

The decision of the administration to urge Governor Johnson to use his power of veto to postpone any land legislation was reached after a series of conferences between the President, Secretary Bryan and John Bassett Moore, counselor of the State Department, and frequent calls at the department by Ambassador Chinda. It was realized that any further attempt to have the bill enacted by the California Legislature amended would be fruitless, since Secretary Bryan's trip to Sacramento was unavailing and the Legislature is to adjourn next Tuesday.

Until Governor Johnson's reply is received the Government probably will make no reply to the protest of Japan further than to acquaint the Ambassador with the fact that every possible effort has been made to have action in California delayed, pending a settlement of the problems involved by diplomacy.

Senators Applaud Plea for Bigger Navy.

Her 'Fatal Beauty' Costs Actress Job

Evelyn Carter Carrington, Too Pretty for Role, Wins Suit Against Producer.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Evelyn Carter Carrington was "so handsome" she was discharged from the "Firefly Theatrical Company and she has a judgment of $166 against Arthur Hammerstein to prove it.

Miss Carrington agreed to assume the character—a widow of uncertain years—for $100 a week. She appeared once, then was dropped, and sued for two weeks' salary minus an advance.

"When Miss Carrington was engaged for the role," said Mr. Hammerstein on the witness stand, "we thought she could make up to look old, but her loveliness stuck out through the make-up and she attracted attention from the other characters when she was supposed to have only a minor part."

Underwood Boomed for President in 1916

His Friends Believe That the Tariff Bill Will Make Him Popular Candidate.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Representative Oscar W. Underwood's friends have started to boom him for the Presidential nomination in 1916. They assert that tariff bills have made Presidents and that Mr. Underwood will come to the front on the bill that passed the House last week.

They are backing Mr. Underwood in the belief that President Wilson will abide by the intent of the Baltimore convention platform which declared in favor of a single term.

These friends of Underwood are confident the Underwood tariff bill will prove acceptable to the country and will grant relief to the masses from heavy burdens of taxation.

Called From Bride By 'Irritable Papa'

Costa Rican, Parting From Canadian Girl, Explains, 'Father Kills Men When He's Angry.'

NEW YORK, May 12.—A cablegram from the bridegroom's father containing the word "scoundrel" caused Theodore Gonzales, of San Jose, Costa Rica, to part from his bride of a few hours, who was Miss Maxine Seagrave, of Toronto, after they had boarded the steamer Carrillo for a honeymoon trip to Central America.

Gonzales explained to his bride that his father was irritable at times; in fact, he had once killed a man when irritated, and the young man thought it best that he go to Port Limon alone and meet his father.

France Spain's Ally In Proposed Treaty

Alfonso's Visit Will Result in Pact Binding Two Nations if Negotiations Go Through.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 12.—Formal announcement of the inception of a treaty which will make Spain an ally of France is expected as soon as the result of the visit of King Alfonso and Premier Romanson of Spain to France is known.

It was learned to-day from an official source that Alfonso made representations to President Poincare to show that Spain is anxious to enter into negotiations without delay.

The press believes the French Foreign Office views the offer favorably.

'Woody Tiger' Is New White House Mascot

Mrs. Wade Hampton Substitutes Wilson Administration Toy for 'Teddy Bear' and 'Billy Possum.'

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The "Woody Tiger" made its official debut to-day as the official toy of the Wilson administration. As this new monarch of childhood entered the front door of the White House, escorted by Mrs. Wade Hampton, the originator of the novel idea, "Teddy Bear" and "Billy Possum," mascots of previous times looked on with brimming eyes.

The new toy is rather fierce-looking and somewhat resembles a Princeton tiger in miniature.

SHRINERS WIRE THEY'LL BRING BACK "BACON"

Yaarab Temple Boosters Take Big Convention at Dallas, Texas, by Storm.

MAY DECIDE ON WEDNESDAY

"Atlanta 1914" Drummed Into Every Delegate, and Favor for Gate City Grows.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

DALLAS, TEX., May 12.—If there is anybody in Dallas who does not know that Yaarab Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, is here, and has come to bring the Imperial Council to Atlanta in 1914, he must be deaf dumb and blind.

The campaign on behalf of Atlanta was started the very minute Illustrious Potentate Forrest Adair stepped off the train in this town, the head and front of the most enthusiastic and determined delegation that ever went out of Atlanta after something the town wanted or needed in its business.

To be sure, the immediate thing in hand is the session of the Imperial Council now on in Dallas, but the first thing an Atlanta delegate says to a brother Noble, after making himself known, is "How about this Imperial Council thing for Atlanta next year?"

Atlanta Best Advertised.

Far and away the best advertised bidder for the honor of entertaining the Shrine next year is Atlanta. The fame of the Yaarab Temple has been perfectly secure in Shrinedom for many moons, and there isn't a visiting Shriner in this Texas metropolis who hasn't heard of that great "Atlanta spirit," and the amazing things it has accomplished heretofore.

There is a feeling in the atmosphere that everything is about over, so far as next year's session is concerned, except the hurrahing for and congratulating of Atlanta.

Still, nobody is resting. There will be no sort of let up, not so much as a hint of it, until after the vote has been taken in the Imperial Council, and Atlanta officially declared the winner.

Forrest Adair's Nobles have undertaken to convince the Shriners of two things. First, that Atlanta wants the Imperial Council to be its guest next year, sincerely and earnestly, and second, that Atlanta can and will entertain and take care of the gathering most handsomely.

"We have convinced them that we have the hotel accommodations," said Mr. Adair to me to-day. "That seems to be the only thing that ever has gotten on anybody's nerves with respect to Atlanta's chances of getting the meeting next year.

"Atlanta Spirit" Helps.

"There is no difficulty in convincing people that Atlanta is a fine place to visit at any time and for any purpose. Everybody has heard of Atlanta, and knows it is a great city. The very term 'the Atlanta spirit' comes readily to the lips of people living many miles away. Some few have wondered, however, if a city the size of Atlanta can take care of the Imperial Council, and the big influx of visitors it brings into a city always.

"When I show them what we are prepared to take care of 60,000 visitors in first class shape, however, they get away from that hotel doubt in a hurry. The crowds attending the Imperial Council gatherings generally run around forty thousand.

"I hope the folks back home understand how enthusiastic our bunch is. We have come here to land the next year's meeting, and we are going to land it. You wire the Georgian that I say we are coming home with the bacon."

Working in Pairs.

It is herewith wired.

And I believe it.

Certainly there isn't a man in this outfit that isn't rooting and boosting to beat the band for the Atlanta meeting next year. Generally, the delegation works in pairs. In this fashion, they scatter all over Dallas, and stop to orate wherever a bunch of Shriners can be located.

The big guns of the Imperial Council have had Atlanta and 1914 drummed into their heads ever since they came to town.

The conviction is deepening every minute that Atlanta is to win out. Forrest Adair already has outlined a real, sure enough Georgia barbecue and a lot of other things as inducements to visitors to go to Atlanta next year.

From all quarters, I hear nothing but praise of Atlanta and its pluck in raising approximately $100,000 to receive hosts for the Imperial Council's entertainment in 1914.

Working on Decree in "Hearst Coal Cases"

Additional Suits Against the Trust Will Be Deferred for a Time.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Preparations for framing a decree carrying out the Supreme Court's decision in the "Hearst coal cases" have been made by the Department of Justice.

The decree, which will cancel the so-called 65 per cent. contracts of the coal carrying railroads and coal companies and terminate the railroad control of the Temple Iron Company, will be submitted to the United States District Court at Philadelphia during the last week of May.

While it is the intention of Attorney General McReynolds to file more suits against the Coal Trust, attacking the relationship, direct and indirect, of coal carrying railroads and coal mining companies by means of both the Sherman Anti-Trust law and the commodities clause of the Interstate Commerce act, it is not likely that any further move will be made until the decree in the Temple iron case has been entered.

MISTAKES NEIGHBOR FOR BURGLAR AND SHOOTS HIM

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—August Retting, member of a prominent family here, while attempting to enter a front window of the home of Charles Scheuermann, on fashionable Government Street, was mistaken for a burglar and shot three times. He screamed and Scheuermann, on going to him, recognized who he was.

The Retting home was two blocks away from the shooting. The wounded man had his shoes off and said he did not want his father to know he was out so late. He had mistaken the house. Scheuermann was not arrested.

PHAGAN CASE IS DELAYED

Not Likely to Go to Grand Jury This Week

More Time Taken to Strengthen Evidence

Evidence in the Phagan case may not be presented to the Grand Jury this week. This was the intimation given by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey Monday morning, as he began the process of elimination of the unimportant matter contained in the great mass of eviednce collected by the Coroner's jury and police officials.

The postponement of its presentation to the Grand Jury is to permit the collection in systematic form of all the essential details of the evidence. Dorsey declared Monday that the case would not be given to the Grand Jury until he carefully had sifted all of the evidence obtained.

He explained Monday morning that he had no idea at what time the case would get to the Grand Jury, other than at the earliest possible moment after a "case is made out." Foreman L. H. Beck, of the Grand Jury, asserted the jurymen were under orders to hold themselves in readiness for a call from the Solicitor to act on the case.

"While the jury has the right to ask the Solicitor to present the case at any ime, we will wait until he says he is reay," said Beck. "We are holding ourselves in readiness and can assemble in a compartivly short while."

The Solicitor said to-day that developments in the case the last few days led him to believe the case would get to the jury at an early meeting, and that it was not improbable it would be acted upon by Friday, but that as progress was made in the case and new evidence brought to light the necessary work in corroborating it and investigating its reliability made some delay absolutely necessary.

Mr. Dorsey also made it clear today that he was depending largely on the efforts of his private detective, "the best in the country," who was working independently of the Pinkertons or city detectives. He said the man was making progress in the baffling case.

The Pinkertons have instructions to find the murderer, no matter who he may be. Operatives of the agency employed by the National Pencil Company recently put the matter squarely up to Luther Rosser, the company's attorney. He said:

Urge Diligent Search.

"Find the murderer of Mary Phagan. Work in co-operation with the police, work with anyone, work any way that might lead you to success; let your chips fall where they may. You are employed to hunt the murderer until he is found and convicted. It matters not who is guilty."

Five men from the detective agency are working on the case, under the direction of Assistant Superintendent Harry Scott. Through City Detective Black the Pinkertons work in connection with the city police.

Leo M. Frank was visited by Mr. Rosser at his cell in the Sower Sunday. They were together only a short while. Mr. Rosser stated he had only paid a "social visit" and had not discussed the case.

Chief of Detectives Lanford said Monday that he was satisfied with the progress of the case so far. He said that the investigation unavoidably had been slow and burdened with a mass of evidence, much of which would have to be eliminated in the final consideration of the case. He was pleased with the new developments which he said added much strength to the line of evidence his men are building up.

Police Hold Mob Bent on Lynching

Negroes Threaten to Take Colored Slayer of Negro Boy From Three County Officers.

Members of the County Police Department are Monday congratulating Lieutenant J. M. Carroll and Policemen J. W. Williams and L. W. Allen on their escape from a mob of 200 negroes, who Sunday afternoon threatened their lives when they refused to hand over Doc Burnett, the negro slayer of a fifteen-year-old colored boy, Charlie Simon. The mob was bent on lynching Burnett.

The mob approached the officers on the Marietta Road as they were waiting for a street car to take their prisoner to the Tower.

"We are going to get that nigger even if we have to kill you," the leaders shouted to Lieutenant Carroll. "He stabbed Simon in cold blood and we are going to string him up."

The officers drew their revolvers and took their positions ready to fight to a finish. The negroes retired.

Burnett, in the Tower, later declared the trouble had been caused by an argument about a girl. Eyewitnesses, though, declared Burnett drew a knife and stabbed the boy without provocation. He died before medical aid could reach him.

Cyclone and Hail Do Damage in France

Vineyards Suffer Loss, Workers Injured and Aviators Are Dashed to Earth.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 12.—A terrific cyclone swept parts of the Department of Marne to-day, doing extensive damage. Following a cloudburst, there was a heavy fall of hail. Many workers in the fields were hurt by being struck by the huge stones. Serious loss was caused to the vineyards.

Two aviators, flying near Epernay, were blown to earth and suffered injuries which may prove fatal.

Girl With $700,000 Will Stay at Work

Stenographer for Curtiss Aeroplane Company Inherits Fortune, But Likes 'Job.'

BATH, N. Y., May 12.—Although Miss Helen Klecker, a pretty 17-year-old stenographer of the Curtiss Aeroplane Company, has fallen heir to a $700,000 estate, she likes her "job" so well that she is loath to quit and announced to-day that she intends to stick as long as she can.

Miss Klecker received the property, which is in New York and at Havre DeGrace, Md., from her mother's family. Her mother, who has been dead several years, was the direct descendant of a Russian who came to this country a number of years ago and accumulated a large fortune estimated at $7,000,000.

Thousands Observe Mothers' Day Here

Throngs Wear Flowers and Attend Special Services—Donations to Old Women's Home Generous.

"Mothers' Day" has passed and the world has resumed the burden of life. However, following the celebration people are finding the load not half so heavy as before it.

Thousands of white flowers apeared on the streets of Atlanta Sunday. Florists report an enormous sale of carnations and roses, the emblems worn by the celebrants.

Returns from the contribution boxes placed in hotel lobbies and other public places show generous donations for the benefit of the Home for Old Women. Thronge attended the churches and heard sermons and music appropriate for the occasion.

Dispatches from all over the United States declare that the day had been the most successful in the history of "Mothers' Day" celebration.

TAFT TO ACT AS COUNSEL FOR CINCINNATI RAILROAD

CINCINNATI, May 12.—W. T. Porter, trustee of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad, announced that he would go to New Haven in a few days to confer with ex-President Taft on the question involved in the Chattanooga rate case. The trustees of the Cincinnati Southern received a letter from Mr. Taft yesterday notifying them that he is in a position to act as advisory counsel.

The case involves the charge made by Cincinnati shippers that the company leasing the Southern Railroad is discriminating against Cincinnati and Chattanooga shippers in rates.

Freight Car Bulletin Shows Trade Is Brisk

Decrease of 17,799 Idle Pieces of Rolling Stock Regarded as a Good Sign.

No slackening in general trade is reflected by the American Railway Association's bulletin on the number of idle freight cars in the United States and Canada on May 1.

On the contrary, a decrease of 17,799, as compared with April 15, would indicate a quickening of business. The decrease for the two weeks is the largest reported since the early part of June, 1912.

On May 1 there was a total of 39,799 idle cars, compared with a shortage of 51,169 on November 7, when the railroads were congested and in need of rolling stock. A year ago idle cars numbered 138,881.

The shrinkage in cars was due largely to the brisk demand for coal cars, which caused a shrinkage in that class of rolling stock from 19,649 to 8,510 cars.

OWNER INJURED DRIVING CAR FROM BURNING GARAGE

G. C. Rogers was suffering from painful burns about the face and hands Monday, received when he drove his automobile from a burning garage at 521 Peachtree Street Sunday night.

Two automobiles, valued at about $5,000, were destroyed. One was a Chalmers belonging to Arthur Reed, and the other an Everett owned by Carl Witt.

Jersey Councilmen View Sewage Plant

Visitors From Orange Tour Atlanta on Inspection of Improvements in Municipal Departments.

Mayor Woodward and R. M. Clayton, City Chief of Construction, Monday headed a party that took the City Council of Orange, N. J., on a tour of inspection of Atlanta's sewage disposal plants.

The party left the City Hall at 9 o'clock, expecting to spend the entire day viewing the various municipal improvements in progress of construction. The visiting officials are:

P. Alden Smith, Henry T. Stetson, Charles F. Coyne, Charles A. Lemaster, John Keaster, Patrick A. Quinn, Owen C. Dolan, Owen Z. Casey, Christopher Freeman, Dan F. Gallagher and Stewart Lindsey.

GRANDDAUGHTER OF POET TO MARRY HARVARD MAN

BOSTON, May 12.—The engagement is announced of Miss Della F. Dana, of Brattle Street, Cambridge, and Robert H. Hutchinson, Harvard '10, of New York City. The wedding will take place the last week of June.

Miss Dana is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Dana, of Brattle Street, Cambridge, and a granddaughter of Poet Longfellow. She is a sister of Edmund Trowbridge Dana, whose marriage to Miss Jessie Holliday, an English artist, and subsequent experience as a vegetarian and motorman attracted considerable attention.

TAGGERS BUSY; ALL ATLANTA IS EAGER TO HELP

Lavender Badges, Offered by Society Girls for Children's Home, Go Fastt.

"Have you been tagged yet?"

Hundreds of pretty society girls of Atlanta with bundles of lavendar tacks and buckets which already are beginning to weigh down with their burdens of nickles, dimes and half dollars, are asking this question of Atlanta pedestrians Monday morning.

For the dawn of Monday saw the inauguration of Atlanta's annual Tag Day, and the campaign for contributions for the benefit of the Sheltering Arms home.

Taggers on Every Corner.

The tags, bearing the face of a child and the inscription: "Sheltering Arms Tag Day; My Annual Contribution, 1913," already have begun to appear on coat lapels and shirtwaists.

The taggers are stationed on every downtown corner, in every hotel and office building and even the "meanest man" will not have an opportunity to escape the smiles—and the tags.

And so far no report of a "meanest man" being encountered has come into the Tag Day headquarters. Every one seems to know what the splendid Sheltering Arms women are doing and realize that in contributing to this cause they are doing something really worth doing.

Chairmen of Committees.

Following are the chairmen of the various committees for the day:

Mrs. George Evans, Georgian Terrace; Marshall's Pharmacy, Miss Mary Dull; Aragon Hotel, Mrs. Charles Godfrey; Candler Building, Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale; Piedmont Hotel, Mrs. Smith Pickett; Empire Life Building, Mrs. John O. Parmelee; Peachtree Street and Auburn Avenue, Mrs. Annie Reynolds; King Hardware Company, Miss Odessa Dougherty; Nunnally's on Edgewood Avenue, Mrs. John Moody; Schaul & May's corner, Kimball House and Palmer's Drug Store.

Elkin-Watson Drug Store, Mrs. R. M. Jones; Fourth National Bank, Mrs. Preston Arkwright; Peters Building, Mrs. Jack Lewis.

MONEY REFUNDED WITH A SMILE

Leading Drug Store Will Give Money Back Should There Ever Be a Case Where Dodson's Liver Tone Fails.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a mild vegetable Liver Tonic which operates so successfully in cases of constipation, torpid liver or biliousness that it has practically taken the place of calomel—the drug which is so often dangerous. All druggists who sell Dodson's Liver Tone recommend it as a reliever of constipation, sour stomach, billousness and sluggish liver. It works gently, surely and harmlessly. If a bottle should ever fail to give satisfaction any dealer will refund the price paid without question.

The price of Dodson's Liver Tone is 50 cents per bottle. Be sure you get Dodson's Liver Tone and not some medicine put up in imitation that is not backed up by a guarantee and that may contain harmful drugs.

LILLIAN RUSSELL IS A FOE TO DRINK

"Alcohol Is Death to Woman's Good Looks," Says the Noted Beauty.

NEW YORK, May 12.—At last Lillian Russell has answered the question of how she retains her youth and beauty. Miss Russell says: "Alcohol is death to the beauty of mind, body and soul."

Miss Russell's lines in her monologue in regard to drink are such a hit that she says if she could she would like to go out and do nothing but preach temperance while she is on the stage.

"I never have drunk anything stronger than a little Madeira, the lightest of wines, and I have given that up," she says. "People regard it as remarkable that I have kept my good looks and my youth. You can't keep your health unless you live in harmony with nature.

"Most women need exercise, nourishing food and a proper amount of sleep. People who stay up until all hours do not get the proper amount of sleep, nor do they get it at the right time. I have always loathed champagne and other strong drinks and fought against the cultivation of a taste for liquor.

"Girls who refuse to touch liquor get along. Those who begin with light drinks finally cultivate appetites for whiskey and wine, and are pitiable things to behold."

ODDITIES —in the— DAY'S NEWS

THUMB PRINT INDIAN'S SIGNATURE.—Papers filed in a suit to have a deed set aside were "signed" with a thumb print by Tommy, a Creek Indian.

TOWN SELLS CALABOOSE.—Kingston, Mo., has sold its lock-up to obtain funds to light its streets. The new owner will use the calaboose as a chicken house.

TOWN HUNTS PEARLS.—Nearly everybody in Malden Rock, Wis., has quit working to fish the neighboring streams because of the finding of a $1,500 water pearl.

WEDS FOURTH TIME AT 82.—Noah W. Fleming, of Luray, Va., aged when he married Miss Lucy Eppard, 82, made his fourth trip to the altar. The bride is 32 years younger than her husband.

BAG $490,000 WHALES IN DAY.—Thirty-five sperm whales, worth $490,000, were killed in one day off Prince of Wales Island by three steamers of the United States Whaling Company.

OUT AGAIN, IN AGAIN, MR. FORGER.—Attorney Henry Cochems, former University of Wisconsin football star, caused the arrest of Alvia Dentzlein, who paid the lawyer a forged check for securing his pardon for forgery.

CIGARETTES GIVE GIRLS ADVANTAGE.—Cigarette smoking by boys in the Milwaukee public schools is declared by the school authorities to be the reason why all the valedictorians this year are girls.

UNIFORM DRESS FOR SCHOOLGIRLS.—A movement toward a uniform dress to be worn by all schoolgirls has been started at Fort Wayne, Ind., so that the children of the poorer classes will not feel ashamed in the class room with elaborately dressed children of rich parents.

TROTH ANNOUNCED AT APPENDICITIS DINNER.—At a dinner in Chicago where all the guests had been operated on for appendicitis the engagement of Miss Marjorie Mann and Dr. Roy F. Breeden was announced. The couple fell in love when Miss Mann was operated on about a year ago. Dr. Breeden assisted the surgeon. He was a hospital interne at the time.

TEDDY'S TRIUMPH

A Comic Series That Actually Happened.

The Georgian the other day told in brief form the story of Teddy.

The story of Teddy was so remarkable that one of The Georgian's artists has depicted it as "a comic series that actually happened." His pictures appear below, preceded by a brief introduction:

Mrs. H. E. Grantner, of Hammond, Ind., saw a little 3-year-old boy who was homeless. She pitied him and offered him food and a bed in her home. He looked perfectly demure and harmless.

And he made no trouble at all when sleeping, which he proceeded to do shortly after reaching the house.

But when Teddy (as he was nicknamed) awoke at 5:30 o'clock the next morning, he got busy, and in the course of 60 seconds accomplished the following:

1.—Turned the hose on Mr. Grantner, who was planting sweet peas.

2.—Painted the front of the house in yellow streaks. Painted the rear same color; different design.

3.—Emptied kerosene can in the kitchen. Scattered garden seed in the parlor.

4.—Hit Forrest Grantner, aged 7, with baseball bat, blow landing in pit of stomach. Whipped Ellis Grantner who came to rescue of Forrest.

5.—Then, while the household was recuperating from these blows, Teddy, placed for safekeeping in a room, combined a box of matches and several lace curtains, achieving a first-class bonfire. The damage was $150.

STELZLE URGES RECREATION TO KEEP VICE OUT

Commission Is Recommended to Provide Wholesome Amusement for the Masses in Atlanta.

Dr. Charles Stelzle, of New York, who will be one of the big figures in the Presbyterian assembles, and who organized the work of the Men and Religion Forward Movement in Atlanta, declared Monday there is a vast difference in the moral tone of the Atlanta to-day and the Atlanta of a year ago. But he insisted that reform go further—that the city name a recreation commission to provide amusements to take the place of harmful forms of recreation, recognized as contributory to vice conditions.

Dr. Stelzle said he did not wish to detract in the slightest measure from the great work already accomplished, but he explained that the city would be most safe from a recurrence of vice evils if it provides wholesome amusements.

"I am amazed at the results of the work," declared Dr. Stelzle. "From my observations during the few days that I have been in the city, I do not hesitate to say Atlanta is now one of the most moral cities in the South, and will rank, morally, with any city in the United States.

"A year ago vice flourished in the city and the street crowds reflected its influences. The change is apparent to even the most casual observer. Morality is in the air in Atlanta and the moral atmosphere of the city is infinitely better."

Though gratified that the movement which he organized should have been so successful in ridding Atlanta of vice, Dr. Stelzle declared the city could not continue to be morally clean unless present conditions are made more attractive to the average man. Clean, wholesome recreation he declared to be the best solution of the problem.

"I would suggest the appointment of a recreation commission," he said. "This commission shoud be composed of men who have given some study to the amusement needs of the city. This commission could call in outside recreation experts to its conferences and get the benefits of the work that has been done in other cities.

"Atlanta seems to be lacking in opportunities for the amusement of the average person, especially on Sunday. The opportunities that are here could, however, be enlarged and made more attractive. For instance, the Auditorium should be a rallying place every Sunday afternoon for several thousand people. The recitals and programs given there should be thoroughly advertised and the people should be urged to attend.

larger than the navies of Europe, is lacking in true patriotism."

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs, sitting at luncheon on Vincent Astor's yacht, Noma, at West Point, heard this statement from the lips of Representative Robert F. Broussard, of Louisiana. The committee, just about to land on the rocky slope of the war academy on annual inspection, applauded Broussard to the echo. He continued:

"International peace—yea, even the solid establishment of international arbitration will never be realized until the United States adopts a naval program that will push our navy ahead of the navies of Europe and keep it there. And that President who adopts and prosecutes such a policy will be heralded by the country and the world as a greater world benefactor than either Washington or Lincoln.

"I have just listened to Senator Johnson, of Alabama, a member of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, declare that he was not in favor of a larger army, but in favor of a larger and better trained militia, that might combine at a moment's notice with the regular army.

Wants Cadet Corps Enlarged.

"I quite agree with him, provided we so train our militiamen to work harmoniously with the regulars. Likewise, with the committee whose guest I have the honor to be now, I agree that the cadet corps here at West Point should be enlarged, whether we need them or not. It is well to be prepared. No greater insurance of peace may be found than preparedness for war.

"But how about the navy? Such a policy will do nothing to help the navy. It comes to my notice always that the men in Congress who show the greatest opposition to provisions for an adequate navy are the first in an emergency to cry for war, war, war.

"I saw men at Baltimore oppose a greater navy plank and I now hear them demand that we go to war. They talk with the wisdom of Bourke Cockran, who, once when a member of the House, declared the United States need fear no invasion because, right in his city were men who with cobblestones could repel any invading army of aliens.

"Block Navy; Cry for War."

"This idea of blocking the navy and then clamoring for the defense of our national honor was well exemplified recently in Congress when one of my colleagues, a man very dear to me and a sterling American citizen, made a fiery demand that we gird up our loins in defense of our honor. Yet this same man was opposed to a progressive battleship building policy.

"For ten consecutive terms I have been selected secretary of the American group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union for International Arbitration. This will bear me out, I think, when I claim for myself a love of peace.

"However, I realize more fully because of my studies of peace and its attainment, that peace may not be established in the world until some nation shall take the lead in battleship building. Some nation must force its navy to the front and keep it there with such persistency that the other nations of the world will hold up their hands and cry, 'Enough, enough; let us come to an understanding.'

"And the only nation that may do this is the United States."

FOUR HURT IN WRECK ON CENTRAL NEAR COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, GA., May 12.—Wrecking crews this morning cleared the track, after working yesterday afternoon and last night, near Columbus, where Central of Georgia passenger train No. 1 was wrecked at 4:05 o'clock yesterday. The combination baggage and smoking car was overturned and the engine and three steel coaches were derailed. Roy Williams, of Columbus, and three negroes were injured, Williams being seriously hurt.

ART GEM MAKES COMSTOCK BLUSH

Garbless Girl Wader in "September Morn'" Shocks Guardian of New York Morals.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Anthony Comstock, head of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, today concurred with "Bathhouse" John Coughlin, of Chicago, and opposed judgment passed by the French Academy, by declaring "September Morn," the masterpiece of M. Chabas, to be "highly indecent and totally unfit for public exhibition."

While strolling along West Forty-sixth Street this morning, the guardian of New York's morals glanced in the window of a prominent art store. The first and only thing Mr. Comstock's eye could see was the famous painting of the nude girl splashing in the cool shadows of a mountain lake.

"Take it out immediately," ordered Mr. Comstock.

"But that is 'September Morn,'" declared the art dealer.

"It should be pitch dark for a girl to go in wading in that undressed condition," announced Mr. Comstock. "Take it away immediately or I shall confiscate your entire stock."

The picture came out, but was returned a few hours later. In the meantime, art critics are weighing the combined judgment of Anthony Comstock and "Bathhouse" John against that of the judges of the French Academy, who are on record as saying that "September Morn" is one of the world's art treasures.

Widow in White for Titanic-Lost Husband

Material Still Crepe—Black Given Up on Anniversary of Disaster.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—"White Widow of the Titanic" is the title Mrs. Lucien D. Smith, the bereaved girl wife of one of the heroes of the disaster, has earned through wearing white mourning instead of black.

On the anniversary of the sinking of the Titanic, Mrs. Smith put aside her black clothes and appeared in white crepe from head to foot. The pocketbook she carried is of the same material, and her shoes are also white.

Mrs. Smith has an infant daughter born several months after the tragic loss of its father. The widow is popular socially, and forms a picturesque figure at the quiet events she attends.

WOODBERRY HOLDS FINALS THIS WEEK

The fifth annual commencement exercises of Miss Woodberry's School will be a feature in educational circles this week. The program will begin Friday with a recital. It will conclude the following Monday with the graduation of one of the largest classes in the history of the institution.

There will be a lawn fete and musical complimentary to the alumnae Sunday. The commencement sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. C. T. A. Pise. Following class day exercises at noon Monday on the lawn, there will come the delivery of diplomas at 8 o'clock in the evening.

The valedictory address will be made by Miss Amelia Carney Malone; Miss Elliott Beattie Johnson will render a violin solo; prayers and benediction will be said by the Right Rev. C. K. Nelson, bishop of Atlanta.

The graduates are Amelia Carney Malone, Ethelyn Lamar Coleman, Clarisse Zellme Ryan, Edith Howe McCool, Annie Lou Hunter, Mary Ella Gibson, Lottie Aline Hancock, Sarah Fay Taylor, Harriette Broyles, Elliott Beattie Johnson, Nan Edith Outland, Mary McAden Myers and Etta Eula Walton.

"Woman's Dress Fad Makes Living High"

Professor Sargent Says Americans Adopt Grotesque Styles.

DES MOINES, IA., May 12.—"The mad pursuit of American women for the varying fads of dress and their acceptance of designs from the European fashion centers as mandates in technique of dress are directly responsible for the high cost of living in this country to-day." So declared Prof. Walter Sargent, of the school of education of the University of Chicago in an address before the convention of the Western Drawing and Manual Training Association.

"The French send dress and home art designs to America which they themselves will not accept. One does not see those grotesque styles in Paris.

"We need in America an established bureau of design."

Straighten That Lame Back

ATLANTA PROOF

Testimony of a Resident of Whitehall Street

There's too much suffering among older folks from achy, stiff, lame backs, distressing urinary disorders, weak eyes, dropsy and rheumatic joints.

These are signs of kidney weakness, which, in youth or age, poisons the blood, disorders the urine and lames the limbs or back.

There's help for weakened kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills have brought relief to thousands. Here's Atlanta testimony.

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

James J. Fennell, 173 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga., says: "Since 1907, I have not had an attack of backache or any other symptom of kidney complaint. Doan's Kidney Pills made a positive cure in my case. I suffered a great deal from kidney trouble and it was not until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills that I found permanent relief."

WILSON SURE OF CURRENCY LAW AT THIS SESSION

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The Wilson currency bill will follow swiftly upon the Wilson-Underwood tariff. The President has said it, and there will be no failure to do his will.

With the tariff bill disposed of by the House, the Chief Executive has set his representatives to work, and by the time the House returns to its regular sessions three weeks hence, it will have for immediate consideration a bill that will embody the Wilson view of the currency.

Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, is chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, and Carter Glass, of Virginia, will be the chairman of the House Committee as soon as that position is filled.

The President expresses full confidence that he will be able to press this currency bill to enactment before the special session adjourns. He goes the full length of positive speech in declaring it will be a law before the general session of Congress. He is fully as emphatic about it as he was about the tariff bill.

Outline of the Bill.

From an inside and absolutely reliable source I have the exclusive outline of the administration's currency bill, which is substantially as follows, stated with the bias of the Administration's friends:

First, to provide a plan which will make available for commercial purposes in larger degree the reserves of the banks by permitting the reserves to go in large part to reserve banks, incorporated and located in sufficient number of places to be convenient of access to all the banks of the country.

By permitting these reserve banks to borrow and lend to each other, and by permitting them to rediscount for smaller banks commercial paper of specified standard, based on actual commercial transactions, the member banks could obtain a credit market for commercial paper from the reserve banks in which they have stock. The probable stock of the reserve banks would total 10 per cent of the present stock and surplus of the national banks, amounting to about $160,000,000.

Government Depositaries.

It is proposed that Government deposits shall be kept in these reserve banks and thus become available for use by the commerce of the country. Moreover, there probably would be an inducement held out to the member banks which would organize the reserve banks to keep larger deposits with the reserve bank by allowing them a part of the earning power of such reserve banks, apportioned to their average deposits.

By this system the reserve banks would start off when in running order with an available capital of approximately $800,000,000, and the reserve of the country will be made much more active and fluent than heretofore.

Elastic Currency Plan.

The second great object which is desired in this connection is to provide elastic currency, and this is expected to be accomplished by having the currency furnished to the reserve banks in a quantity sufficient for the needs of commerce, subject to an interest charge which will compel automatic contraction when the extra currency is no longer seriously demanded.

This currency probably will be Treasury notes, secured, however, by the additional security of the reserve banks and the member banks by being a first lien on their assets, but secured also by commercial paper of a specified class of short terms, indorsed by the original borrower, the local bank and the reserve bank, and set aside in the bill case of the reserve bank as security for such notes.

It is proposed also to strengthen the national bank system by giving its some additional privileges and providing a great improvement in the bank examiners, giving them graded salaries according to qualifications and work to be done, instead of the old fee system.

Thief Turns Poet to Sound a Warning

Benefit of "Going Straight" Told by One Who Admits "Going Wrong."

NEW YORK, May 12.—Robert J. Lawrence, formerly a bank messenger, was brought here from Los Angeles, Cal., charged with stealing $1,400. On his trip across the continent he wrote the following:

If you want a red nose and dim, bleary eyes,
If you wish to be one whom all men despise,
If you wish to be ragged and weary, and sad,
If you wish, in a word, to go to the bad—
Go wrong.

If your tastes don't agree with the "ifs" as above,
If you'd rather have life full of brightness and love
If you care not to venture or find out too soon
That the gateway to hell lies through the tombs—
Go straight.

Fair South Carolinan Lauds Georgia Barbecue

Sure One Would Reconcile Blease and His Foes

Miss Marie Fisher, of Charleston, Guest of Honor at Open Air Feast.

Miss Marie Fisher, of Charleston, S. C., visiting here, who thinks a Georgia barbecue would reconcile Blease and his foes.

The famed Georgia barbecue has won another enthusiastic friend.

The latest ally is beautiful Miss Marie Fisher, of Charleston, S. C. Miss Fisher was at a barbecue prepared in her honor at the Kimballville farm of her cousin, Will V. Zimmer, and it was here she declared that she never had tasted anything so good in her life.

"If we could transplant these typical Georgia barbecues into South Carolina we would have such an era of good-fellowship there that Governor Blease and all his opponents would become his fast friends and we'd have no more of those terrible fusses."

So said Miss Fisher as she poised a cleaver preparatory to bringing it down upon a particularly juicy piece of meat. For, with white-plumed hat slightly a-tilt and face flushed with happiness, she was entering right into the spirit of the occasion and busily assisting in serving.

"The nearest we have to a barbecue in South Carolina is a fish fry, and that's no fun at all compared to a Georgia barbecue," she complained.

Miss Fisher is of a wealthy South Carolina family and has been visiting relatives in Atlanta for several weeks. She will return home Thursday.

Disastrous Floods Sweeping Scotland

Crops Badly Damaged and Much Stock Killed by Waters in Perthshire Section.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PERTH, SCOTLAND, May 12.—Disastrous floods are ravaging the southeastern part of Perthshire, doing extensive damage. A great inland sea, 2 1-2 miles broad, has been formed near Blairgowria on Lach Erich. Bridges and railroad tracks have been washed away and roads are impassable.

Crops have been damaged greatly and much live stock has been killed.

Calls Persian Tunic Best Garb for Women

Wife of Lecturer Who Has Visited All Lands Adopts That Costume.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Mrs. R. G. Knowles, wife of the explorer and lecturer, is inclined to the belief after visiting every country in the world that for combination of art and comfort no dress excels that of the women of Persia.

To back up her opinion Mrs. Knowles has appeared at some of her soirees and afternoon receptions attired in the unusual dress of the grande dame of Persia.

It consists of a draped divided tunic, which looks like, but is not exactly, the Eastern "bloomers." The garment is of heavy silken striped material in wonderful colors. Mrs. Knowles has added an Occidental touch to this costume by wearing silk stockings and satin slippers instead of sandals.

Defeats Woman of Twenty-five in Twenty Miles—Shopping Tour Expenses the Stake.

DELMONT, PA., May 12.—As the result of some good-natured bantering over the speed of their motor cars and their ability as drivers, Mrs. George Wallace, ninety-three, and Mrs. Harry Leordon, twenty-five, raced twenty miles to Greensburg, the stakes being the expenses of a shopping tour in the latter town.

The start was made at 8:30 a. m., and 53 minutes later the elder woman drove her car into Greensburg. Two minutes later Mrs. Leordon arrived. Mrs. Wallace had never once slackened speed, and according to Mr. and Mrs. William Blose, her passengers, she took the curves and corners with the daring of an Oldfield.

U. D. C. RECORDS DAMAGED BY FLOODS IN KENTUCKY

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

Oh, Joy! Ice Wagon Really Turns Over.

Out in West End the ice wagons which ply that thriving section for trade usually are followed about from street to street by children who are looking for small bits of the congealed moisture when chipped off by the icemen. The drivers of these wagons seem to be on the job from season to season and come to know all the children by name.

Several days ago, when the weather was rather warm, a joyous catastrophe happened on Culberson Street. One of the big wagons was on the street when the mules attached to it became frightened at a piece of paper, which was fluttered about under their noses by a sudden gust of wind. The mules bolted.

Down the street they tore at breakneck speed. Then one of the wheels hit an electric wire pole and the wagon promptly turned over, breaking the wagon tongue and strewing the street with big cakes of ice. The children viewed the affair with squeals of delight. Not only had they been treated to a sure enough runaway, but here was enough ice on the ground to make their little tummies cool for a week.

So down they swooped on the wreckage. They were met by one of the icemen who politely but firmly informed the kiddies there was nothing doing. The ice, he said, still belonged to the company and he'd protect it with his life. That started something. The children surrounded him and filched bits of ice when he wasn't looking. The driver had gone to a nearby telephone to have another wagon sent out to carry off the remains of the load.

The man on guard had his hands full and realizing he was no match for the horde of youngsters, he bargained with them. Everybody got a big chunk of ice provided they'd promise to go 'way and let the rest of it alone. And the kiddies kept their promise.

Wore a Flower For Mother's Sake.

It was Mothers' Day in Atlanta, and all over the country, yesterday and lots of men wore a white flower for mother's sake. Many of the Atlanta florists anticipated a demand for flowers and laid in a big supply of white carnations.

For a long time in Atlanta men didn't like to wear flowers. The only explanation is that they might be taken for weaklings; the habit, they figured, was one for women, not men. There is one man in the city, however, who for thirty years has always worn a little buttonhole bouquet, summer and winter.

He is the confidential man for one of the big drygoods concerns and although he celebrated his seventy-seconth birthday yesterday—he is as straight and active as a man of half that age. He is passionately fond of flowers and if he were to be without his little boutonniere it is likely that the day would seem all wrong to him. His wife has made it her special duty to see that his bouquet is ready each morning, usually placing it beside his plate at breakfast.

His bouquet yesterday was a beautiful white carnation, a little token of love for the old mother who died a good many years ago in Ireland.

Important Sayings

By important people on topics of live interest

"The cancer death rate in the United States is increasing at the rate of 2½ per cent a year, and a corresponding increase is occurring practically throughout the world. The average age at death in cancer of all forms is 59 years—60.4 years for men and 58.2 for women. Of the total mortality from cancer 90 per cent of the victims are forty years old or more."—Frederick J. Hoffman, statistician of one of America's biggest insurance companies.

"The American college of to-day is between the upper and nether millstones. The German-American university has now become the home of scholarship and research. If the American college is to repeat in the twentieth century the inestimable service it rendered to American civilization in the nineteenth century it must recognize the dawn of a new era. Let the typical graduate be trained not only in scholarship and culture, but how to loaf wisely."—Henry Louis Smith, president of Washington and Lee University.

"In my judgment everything which occurs in court should be open to public hearing. The fact that an action for divorce is pending should be given the widest publicity to prevent fraud and injury to those who are innocent. I do not think, however, that the loathsome details—more humiliating generally to the innocent than guilty—should be published."—Justice Guy of the New York State Supreme Court.

"I feel as if I am making a twentieth century flight into another world. Comparisons are impossible; it will take me some time to get my breath. What a lot Europe might learn from wondrous America! But then one must consider; it is much easier to build up a new country than to change an old one."—C. de Bruyne, an Alderman of Ghent, Belgium, who is visiting New York.

The Vicious Little Moon

To-day's Complete Short Story

THEY emerged from the ground, one, two, three, six, under the deluge of rain in darkness.

One might have believed that they came out of the water, for the torrents of rain, which had been falling incessantly for more than a month, had made the plain around Adrianople and Devanjaros look like a sea.

In the uncertain twilight each of them looked like an immense bundle of sheepskin, out of which emerged the barrel of a rifle. All six wore caps of green velvet bordered with astrakhan.

It was a patrol of Macedonians enrolled in the Bulgarian army passing through the line of outposts. Hesitating and uncertain, they moved their long arms like windmills, made the sign of the cross, pointed right and left and peered about cautiously.

A Branch for a Signal.

Fifty paces away a branch stuck into into the ground and reflected in a pool of water began to move back and forth. The Macedonians started toward the hole from which this signal was given. It was the abandoned trench. Sergeant Naritch and his five Bulgarian soldiers were down there and had given them the signal.

The six Bulgarians loved the six Macedonians.

Since the beginning of the investment these twelve men were in the habit of meeting in the hour of twilight when the guns became blind.

They met in the abandoned trench which was no longer used. There they sat down close together in the deep mud. They exchanged only few words: "The war is going to last a long time!" or "May the Lord give the Turks into our hands," was the burden of their remarks.

Then they sat silent and pondered until it was time to separate and each party went back to its camp.

Depressed and Melancholy.

On this night they felt unusually depressed and melancholy. The incessant rain, the everlasting cold and the enforced idleness and hopelessness overwhelmed them.

"The war will never end," said Kaloub, making a wry face.

"Never," said Naziff, and yawned like a hungry wolf.

They all bowed their heads and spat into the mud, then, as always happens when men are downhearted and depressed, they began to talk about mysterious things.

"The moon looks like a crescent tonight," said Kaloub.

"A bad sign," said Alexis, the venerable brigand, who knew everything between life and death. "It is a vicious little moon."

And he told the legend of the vicious little moon which kills all those upon whom it looks.

They raised their heads and gazed furtively toward the sky.

"One must not tempt the moon," said Potrof, who was newly married, although his hair was gray. "Woe unto us all."

"I am sleepy," said Reff plaintively, like a child.

Let Us Go Back.

"Let us go back," growled Alexis, and stuck his bayonet into his boot.

The Macedonians left one at a time. The Bulgarians looked after them and regretted they had let them go. They remained in the abandoned trench, oppressed by a vague sense of danger, afraid of the moon that was looking down upon them, half senseless with fatigue and superstition.

Each was dreaming his own dreams.

Sergeant Naritch saw his litle house and his wife in her gayly colored dress. He saw her looking at a golden-haired girl. He felt the fragrance of the flowering hedges and saw the long rows of willow trees standing like sentries along the bank of the brook.

Suddenly he raised his head with a jerk and rubbed his eyes. He could see nothing now but the darkness and the slender crescent of the moon.

He shook himself. What were they thinking of? It was late. Little Father Colonel would surely hear them coming back.

"Come along, boys; we must get back to camp," he said.

Crawled From the Trench.

The others yawned, stretched their limbs and crawled out of the trench.

They marched through the muddy pools with the rain beating into their faces and soaking the fur of their heavy sheepskin coats. From time to time they glanced at the moon.

They stopped. They had lost their way. It was the moon, the vicious little moon, which had led them astray with its treacherous light.

They shuddered and started again, tramping through the mud. Time and again they nearly fell into the deep mudholes made by the bursting shells. Half an hour passed and still no sign of lights or campfires.

Suddenly a shot rang out.

The sergeant raised his head, looked about and listened.

"We are inside the Turkish lines," he said.

"We ought to have set out when the Macedonians left," growled Kaloub; "they know their way here and would not have wandered astray."

"Look," said Diplovitch, "there are some soldiers over there watching us."

Felt Like Howling.

And at the faint light of the moon they dimly made out some figures a short distance away. The Bulgarians, now quite convinced that the vicious little moon had led them into an ambush, felt like howling with superstitious fear.

In a low voice Naritch commanded: "Fire!"

The enemy was quicker and fired first.

With a groan, Petrof, the newly married, fell to the ground like a log.

The firing was kept up by both sides, and men dropped where they stood.

The last man to remain standing finally sank to the ground. He thought he heard somebody whisper his name from among those he had shot down. Then everything was silent.

Toward morning a passing patrol found the dead bodies of six Macedonians and six Bulgarians, who had been led astray by the vicious little moon, that kills those upon whom it looks.

SENATE WILL DEMAND REAL RECIPROCITY

Makeshift Written Into Wilson-Underwood Bill Arouses Bitter Opposition.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Genuine reciprocity, and not the makeshift written into the Wilson-Underwood bill, Senators believe, will e demanded and insisted upon by the Senate. Majority members of the Finance Committee are now endeavoring to see just how far they may go in rewriting the sections of the House bill to make it conform to what they believe the underlying principle of all reciprocal agreements should be.

Chairman Simmons, of the Finance Committee, and Senator Hoke Smith, one of the most influential members of the committee, have expressed their adherence to the doctrine of reciprocity.

Both have said they hoped the bill when it became a law would provide machinery that would enable the President to negotiate reciprocity agreements and that rates would be so arranged that the President would have an effective weapon at his command to compel concessions. The details of whatever plans they may have in mind have not been worked out.

Many Amendments Certain.

Every majority member of the committee has stated amendments to the bill and that in many items the rates will be increased.

The methods of procedure of the Senate Committee and the House differ radically.

Senator Kern, majority leader, moved last week that when the Senate adjourn it be until next Tuesday afternoon. This prevailed, and at the very threshold of debate on the tariff, by Democratic votes, a delay of three days was ordered in the face of the demand of President Wilson that not a moment be lost in rushing through the bill in the Senate.

In the Senate the Democrats are taking into consideration the difference on the cost of production here and abroad in fixing their rates. A number of articles that have been put on the free list will be shifted back to the dutiable, and a few articles made dutiable in the House will be made free. Dye stuffs and pigments are notable instances of the differences between the two houses.

The rates on high grade cotton are to be raised and a new classification arranged.

Window and plate glass as fixed by the House are deemed to be too low and will be raised.

All these changes afford opportunity of subsequent reductions under reciprocal trade agreements in line with the real Democratic tariff idea.

Senator Smith, of Michigan, bases caustic criticisms on the sugar schedule, the manufacture of beef sugar being a great industry of his State.

"After the trust has run its competitors out of business, as they will under this law," says Mr. Smith, "and competition no longer exist, the price of sugar will be increased to what it was before beet sugar was discovered. If you intend to withdraw from circulation all the money invested in sugar production and turn it over to foreigners, it ought to be done in the open. Give the people a chance to be heard, and do not do this in the dark and gloom of a secret chamber."

Can't Lose "Wilson."

Senator Smith says it is singular that all the Democratic tariff bills looking to free trade bore the name of Wilson.

"I saw Bryan help carry William L. Wilson on his shoulder from the house on the day of his 'great triumph.' It was not very long before these same shoulders carried a weight so heavy that it has taken twenty years to regain the confidence of the people.

"I don't believe that prosperity can continue under this law. In your hearts you don't believe it or you would not be so worried as you are. It was faith in your promised good works that put you in power.

"If this question were to be submitted to the people to-day you would be repudiated and thrown from office. The American people are not for free trade, and that's what you are endeavoring to force upon them."

The fight to order public hearings will come up again Tuesday.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Are You a Mason?" at Atlanta.

This week's offering at the Atlanta Theater by the Miss Billy Long Company, "Are You a Mason?" will be given its first performance at a matinee this afternoon. The management has decided to have three matinees a week—Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. "Are You a Mason?" is a farce and is said to be very funny. It was adapted from the German and the plot is a complicated one, giving abundant opportunity for amusing situations.

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

Paul Dickey, the famous football star, heads this week's bill of Keith vaudeville at the Forsyth. Other numbers are the Apollo Trio, that pose as bronze statues; Billy K. Wells, character comedian; Clarence Wilbur and the Sunny Folks in a school-room sketch; Newhorff and Phels, in new comedy idea; Mayo and Allman, singers; Macleavy's Marvel, jumper, and motion pictures. Matinee this afternoon.

Family Vaudeville at Bijou.

Four acts of family vaudeville and worth-while motion pictures make up the bill this week at the Bijou. The Four Wilhats, novelty bicycle and auto act, is the headliner. Novelty is the keynote of the bill. Two matinees today: 2:30 and 4.

GETTING OUT THE STRAW

By QUILL.

MILITANT RIOTS GIVE BIG BOOST TO INSURANCE

Damage Already Reaches Into Millions—Golf Links Are Protected Against Loss.

LONDON, May 12.—Inquiries instituted at Lloyd's have developed the fact that the insurance companies are reaping a golden harvest as a result of suffragette depredations. Business has received a great impetus both from the insurance of golf links as well as from fire risks.

Numerous golf clubs have insured against revenue losses as the result of militant interference, while others have taken out policies insuring golf greens against damage by suffragettes. The premiums charged are $5 per green per annum, the limit of the underwriters' liability being $250 on each green.

These insurances, however, were mostly for three months, because it is believed that the trouble will be settled in that time either by a triumph of the militants or by the suppression of their campaign.

Insurance against fire has been equally brisk, but owing to the great competition in this business rates have not been affected.

Damage to Date $5,000,000.

Estimates of the financial loss caused by suffragette outrages, prepared for the Home Secretary, put the amount as $5,000,000. This sum does not include the expense of employing large numbers of extra police, detectives and watchmen to protect Ministers, public buildings and meetings.

Three detectives have been assigned to protect each Cabinet Minister at all times. All suspected persons are shadowed by plainclothes men and all public buildings are under special guard.

Since the defeat of the woman suffrage bill large numbers of former constitutional suffragists have joined the militant movement. An attack on the House of Lords is one of the new plans, and this is to be accomplished by means of a suffragette typist who could get a position on the reporting staff of the upper house.

Arrests Check Riots.

In spite of the sensational outrages of the past week and although the militants are keeping up a strong bluff, their organization has been shaken by recent arrests of leaders. The militant acts now being committed are the handiwork of suffragettes working independently, and the authorities believe that the removing of the central controlling influences will soon break up the campaign of destruction.

This optimistic view is not shared by politicians generally, who believe that as long as money is forthcoming crimes will be committed.

Old Ireland Forever! Postcards to Be Green

Color Adopted by Burleson to Conform With International Union Idea.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Hereafter Uncle Sam will have green postal cards. Postmaster General Albert S. Burleson has so ordered.

The domestic library size one-cent postal card will be printed pale green to conform to the idea of the International Postal Union.

Foreign countries print cards of the lowest denominations in green. Mr. Burleson ordered a similar color to help foreign-born Americans who are familiar with the green card.

BACKACHE A WARNING ALL SHOULD HEED

It Is One of the First Signs of Kidney Troubles, if Neglected Serious Diseases Follow.

No one can be well and healthy unless the kidneys work properly and keep the blood pure. When they become clogged and and inactive, nature has a way of warning you.

Backache is one of the first symptoms. You may also be troubled with disagreeable, annoying bladder disorders; have attacks of lumbago or rheumatism; become nervous, tired, and feel all worn out; puffy swellings show under the eyes or in the feet and ankles; and many other symptoms are noticed. If they are neglected, dropsy, diabetes, or Bright's disease, which so often prove fatal, may result.

It is not only dangerous, but needless, for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely ends all such misery.

There is no more effective remedy known for the prompt cure of all such troubles than this new scientific preparation, because it removes the cause. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings; clears out the clogged-up pores; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter and sift the poison out of the blood and drive it from the system.

You will find Croxone different from other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to cure the worst backache, relieve rheumatic pains, or overcome urinary disorders.

DRIVERS BEGIN PRACTICE FOR CLIMB OF HILL

NEXT Saturday afternoon the old Stewart Avenue hill will again become a scene of lively interest when the big, powerful stripped cars tear up the mile long incline in daring attempts to lower the records set last year by L. S. Crane's Pope-Hartford and George Hanson's Studebakers.

All the latter part of this week the course will be alive with contestants on practice sprints, for the Board of County Commissioners have allowed the Automobile Association to have exclusive use of the hill on the days of May 14, 15, 16 between the hours of one and three. This generous arrangement will allow ample time for tuning up of cars and motorcycles and give the drivers an opportunity to become familiar with the road.

Entries for the contest are coming in at a rapid rate and from present indications the second annual hill climb of the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory Association will eclipse all former events.

Entries to Date.

L. S. Crane—Pope-Hartford, "Betsy."
Studebaker Co.—Three cars.
Travis & Jones—Columbia.
Johnson Co.—Stoddard-Dayton.
Atlanta Auto Sales Co.—National.
W. J. Stoddard—Lion.
Harold McKenzie—Knight Special.
Ellis Car Co., Greenville, S. C.—(Name of car not given.)
I. O. Toasley, Alpharetta—Ford.
T. B. Goodloe—Locomobile.
Stearns Co.—Stearns.

This list will be swelled to about three times the number by the closing time for entries. Secretary Elleby, of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., is receiving all applications.

Handsome Prizes Offered.

In addition to the association cup and the E. Rivers Realty cup, donations have been received that will make an attractive array of trophies. Following is the list.

Prizes and cups in automobile events have been donated as follows:
Atlanta Constitution—Silver cup.
Durham Jewelry Co.—Silver cup.
Elyea-Austell Co.—Silver cup.
Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.—Silver cup.
Fisk Rubber Co.—Silver cup.
Republic Rubber Co.—Silver cup.
Studebaker Corporation — Silver Cup.
Stewart-Warner Corporation—Auto speedometer.
Reed Oil Co.—One barrel Triple "E" oil.
Johnson-Gewinner Co.—$15.00 raincoat.
New South Rubber Co.—232x3 1-2 Southern red tubes.
Auto Supply Co.—One pair $3.50 gloves.
Motorcycle Events—
Alexander-Seawald Co.—One pair motorcycle gloves and leggins.
Elyea-Austell Co.—One Troxel motorcycle saddle.
U. S. Tire Co.—Two motorcycle tires.
Hendee Mfg. Co.—One electric motorcycle horn.
Johnson-Gewinner Co.—One pair motorcycle leggins.
Stewart-Warner Corporation—One motorcycle speedometer.
Reed Oil Co.—One-half barrel Triple "E" oil.

Women Taking Part in Outdoor Sports

Feminine Athletes Increasing in Almost Every Branch of Athletic Endeavor.

Women are now taking a prominent part in the world of sports.

In Chicago three clubs of women are engaged in athletic events. In the women's athletic club each day is marked by some exhibition of woman's prowess in the gymnasium. On Tuesdays and Fridays of each week women practice swimming at the Illinois Athletic Club.

In Jackson Park, Chicago, Mrs. Roy Barcal, wife of the Hyde Park football star, won the race for women's skippers recently. Miss Ethel Larsen is the proud possessor of a pilot's license.

In baseball Mrs. Helen Hathaway Robinson Britton is the owner of the St. Louis League club and Mrs. Charles Havenor is the owner of the Milwaukee American Association club.

Misses Mary and Priscilla Williams won championships in archery.

At the University of Chicago Mrs. A. A. Stagg, wife of the famous coach, is interested in athletics, and scores of coeds are now engaged in playing basketball.

Many more women are driving automobiles this year than ever before. The Chicago Gun Club of Women is turning out many experts with the gun.

New Trainer of Cubs Never Saw Ball Game

President Murphy Tells of Meeting Between Dr. Frederick Alex Hart and Evers.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Dr. Frederick Axel Hart, new trainer of the Cubs, never saw a ball game, according to President Charles W. Murphy, but has an unbroken record of successes in handling athletes since he left an institute in Stockholm, Sweden. This is Murphy's version of the meeting of Manager John Evers and the trainer:

Evers—Ever play ball?

Hart—I never saw a game, but I can perform an operation for appendicitis.

Evers—So can I. But the patient would die.

Hart succeeds Doc Semmens, who severed his connection with the Cubs the same day he struck Manager Evers.

COULON BOXES BRADLEY.

PHILADELPHIA, May 12.—Johnny Coulon, the bantam champion of the world, meets Frankie Bradley in a six-round bout at the Olympic A. A. here to-night.

Fighter, With Stiff Punch, Passes
Scrapper of To-day a Scientist

By H. M. Walker.

WHERE are the ring "sluggers" of yesterday—the men who could drop a right against the chin, or drive a left to the body and call it a day's work?

The "killer" has disappeared along with the lightning rod, horse car and Republican vote. In his place we have the clever boxer, scientific, but punchless, remarkably fast on his feet, but over careful with his hands.

When Ad Wolgast hit the deralling switch he left the lightweight title in the hands of a young man with but five "K's" in his whole record. And this young man, since having the championship wished on him, has done nothing but take a daily decision over a T-bone steak, and practice the toe dance.

It's the same way all along the line, from the bantam babes to the bull neck heavies. The present day boxer is light on his feet, runs well both backward and forward, is kind and considerate with his opponents, and will fight if forced—perhaps.

* * *

WHEN it comes to playing a good stiff game of tag, our bantams have the world by the windpipe.

Three more clever boxers than Johnnie Coulon, the fight fear champion, and his two trailers, Johnnie Williams and Eddie Campi, never borrowed bathrobes.

* * *

THESE boys make the hummingbird look like a barnyard duck for speed, but if they had to win their fights with one punch they would be to the fight game what the Yankees are to the American League.

* * *

FEATHERWEIGHTS Johnnie Kilbane and Johnnie Dundee gave us twenty rounds of fast and furious waltzing. Had they been using palm leaf fans instead of decorative gloves the Vernon pavilion would have been blown over into Arizona.

After watching this exhibition I believe that it is no more than right that Kilbane should be credited with originating the "Swat-the-fly" idea.

Dundee claims to carry a knockout shot but from what we have seen of the little banana tamer he is badly in need of target practice.

* * *

WILLIE RITCHIE accuses himself of being the lightweight champion of the world. A careful search of his record shows the San Francisco lad to possess the punch of a paralytic. In forty ring engagements he has floored but five, stopping such terribles as Monk Enochs, Kid French, Tony Josephs, Tommy McFarland and Yankee Schwartz.

Freddie Welsh totes the lightweight championship titles of both England and Australia, but his system is perfectly free of the knockout stuff. Frederick can't lay "Yankee Doodle" on an opponent's ribs and jab him on the nose three hundred and sixty-four times to the round without letting the other fellow know that he is in trouble.

And there's Packey McFarland, our 138-pound "lightweight." With the benefit of his extra poundage Packy is unable to break into the knockout column. He's fast, clever and has a beautiful baritone voice.

We have hope for the 133-pound division, though. Joe Rivers is great on the marble slab thing, and Leach Cross has both the punch and the control to put it over the plate. "Budd" Anderson, at present in the squab stage, can win with one slam and he doesn't require over six inches of space to work in.

* * *

THE welters and middleweights—why dig up the dead?

Luther McCarty won the heavyweight championship by mussing Jim Flynn and Al Palzer. In both these contests Luther left his punch at home on the piano.

He gave Flynn a terrible lacing. Where a Fitzsimmons or a Langford would have won in a punch, McCarty took an entire evening for the job. It was the same against Palzer. Luther had Al at his mercy, but could only whack and chop at him until Referee Eyton, as in the Flynn affair, stopped the show on account of "wet grounds."

* * *

JOHN L. SULLIVAN cracked the nail on the head when he was in the city a few weeks ago.

"What do you think of our champions of today?" he was asked by a young reporter.

"Greatest bunch of outfielders in the world," said John.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Gunboat Smith stops at nothing. Word was received from San Francisco last night that Smith sent Jim Jeffries the following telegram. "Do you want to come up North and act as my sparring partner? Answer immediately."

* * *

Smith is training for his match with Jess Willard, which will be fought in San Francisco on May 17. The winner will probably be matched to box Luther McCarty for the white heavyweight championship of the world on July 4.

* * *

Willard has engaged five sparring partners, while Smith up to date has only the veteran, Bob Armstrong to work with.

* * *

Buck Crouse and Blink McCloskey will clash in a six-round battle at Pittsburg May 19. Articles were signed yesterday.

* * *

Matty McCue and Jeff O'Connell are rounding into great shape for their ten-round scrap at Racine, Wis., Thursday night. Both boys are training for the bout in Chicago. Joe Sullivan, manager of O'Connell, writes that his protege is in the best shape of his life and is sure to cop the long end of the purse.

* * *

Pittsburg is after a bout between Bat Nelson and Ray Parker. Parks is a rough, rugged fellow and has been defeating all his opponents in decisive fashion.

* * *

* * *

Luther McCarty will meet Arthur Pelkey in a ten-round bout at Calgary, Alberta, Saturday, May 24. Tommy Burns is promoting the show and expects a banner house.

* * *

Illinois boxing fans are clamoring louder than ever for a boxing bill. Recently Mayor Harrison, Barrett O'Hara and other officials witnessed several sparring exhibitions at Springfield and were loud in their praise for the manly art.

* * *

Nate Lewis, manager of Charlie White, writes from Chicago that his protege is getting into fine shape for his return match with Joe Thomas at New Orleans, May 19. Lewis says White is sure to beat Thomas again. White will go after Jack Britton if he succeeds in defeating Thomas.

* * *

Kid Young is a frequent visitor at George Gaelelis' shoe shining parlors. Young is busy telling the various fight fans what he will do to the next boy who musters up enough courage to meet him in the roped arena.

* * *

Lost, strayed or stolen—Meyer Pries. The local bantam has not been seen around these parts ever since Jimmy Grant accepted his challenge for a bout to be staged in private.

* * *

Joe Jeannette is having trouble getting on these days. He nearly had a bout in Boston for the latter part of this month, but the club wanted Jim Flynn for his opponent and Jack Curley, Flynn's manager, wouldn't stand for it.

* * *

Fans around town are already talking about the Flynn-Savage bout to be staged here June 9. Both heavyweights are of the slugging type and should give the fans some real milling.

* * *

Danny Morgan, whose sole ambition, apparently, is declaring new champions, has broken loose once more and in the usual style. This time he is styling "Young" Ahearn welterweight champion of the world. Morgan has no particular reason for crowning Ahearn king of the 145-pound boys.

* * *

The Ad Wolgast-Frankie Burns ten-round scrap, scheduled to take place at Oakland, Cal., May 21, has been called off. Burns refused to make 133 pounds ringside for the ex-champion.

* * *

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 12.—After the first week of the invasion of the East by the Western clubs of the National League, one thing is very apparent. The East, as a whole, is stronger than the West this year, but that does not necessarily indicate the pennant winner will be a product of the East.

At first, it was thought there would be only two clubs in the East that could put up any kind of a front against the Western teams which were rated to be strong. These two were New York and Philadelphia, but now Brooklyn has come through with the best-looking team that has been developed in years across the bridge. Boston is also playing good enough ball.

* * *

I WANT to pause for a minute to discuss Boston and Pittsburg. Behind the Beaneaters this year is a shrewd manager, one who is building. "Chief" Stallings is picking up all the likely ball players he can find around loose, and then sorting them out as they come. He is constructing; and out of the twisted mass of baseball junk which he took over at the beginning of the season, he is going to have a smooth-running machine soon. The Boston club, although many good hitters have resided on the team from time to time, has long been the victim of its own sluggishness. Stallings is trying to add a little speed to his club. He realizes its value. With this notion in mind, he went out and signed Mann to play in the outfield. Stallings thinks the boy will make a great ball player if given time.

"He's the fastest man in baseball," the "Chief" told us when we were in Boston in the early part of the season, and he wasn't punning on the name, either.

* * *

STALLINGS has also picked up "Dick" Rudolph, the pitcher of the International League, and once a member of the Giants for a brief period. Rudolph will win a lot of games for Stallings. Then there is a different spirit manifested by the Stallings style. When the game gets hard, the boys do not abandon the pursuit of victory and blow up as former Boston teams did. No, sir. It is in there fighting, as proved by the fact they took two extra inning games from the Pirates last week, with Wagner in both battles.

* * *

ABOUT the Pittsburg club, I do not know what to say. I have not seen the team play this year so far, but from the gossip in the league and the box scores, it is evident that the club is all off its balance. The return of Wagner is going to help the team a whole lot, but Clarke's greatest disappointment is the failure of his pitchers to come through. Before the season, the Pittsburg pitching staff was regarded as one of the best in the league, if not the very best, both by the players themselves and by the newspaper writers who follow the teams. Many times ball players will approve a man whom the general public and the writers cannot see. For instance, Fletcher, formerly the shortstop of the Giants, was generally rated more highly by ball players than by the general public and writers. They know his ground-covering ability, and he has the finest pair of hands I ever saw on a ball player.

* * *

BUT, to return to the Pittsburg staff, Hendrix, who led the league last year; Adams, Robinson, O'Toole and Camnitz sound like a collection of world beaters. You'd think it would only be necessary to have one of those names announced as the Pittsburg pitcher, and the game would be over. Not one of these men has been going smoothly this year. Hendrix has been wild, and O'Toole has been wild, and the staff has been generally out of shape. O'Toole is back at his old job of losing games by one run. I guess he holds the record for this jointly with "Nap" Rucker.

* * *

THE Pirates were rated as a great slugging team before the season. It was on the peerless pitching and slambang slugging they were to ride through the league to an early pennant, because even the members of the club themselves concede that the team lacks speed. But the pitchers would hold the opposing teams to one or two runs, and the Pittsburg boys would pile up many with their bats, and there would be a nice little ball game for Mr. Clarke all wrapped up in cotton batting and tin foil to be put in the moth balls. However, the pitchers have been permitting many runs, and the batters have not been slugging; and the race is not destroyed yet.

"The Pirates condition slowly. Wait until the warm weather sets in," a Pittsburg rooter whispered into my ear the other day.

It will do the team little good to round into form along in September. It is my honest opinion that the club is going to get on the move one of these days and kick up a lot of dust. It yet will be a trouble-maker in the league, because those pitchers are sure to begin to twirl and the batters to hit. Therefore, it pleases the Giants immensely to see the Pirates crowded down as far as possible at this stage, especially as we are not up any too high in the ladder of the club standing ourselves.

PREP LEAGUE NOTES

Boys High and Tech High will meet for the second time this season on Wednesday. The last game resulted in a win for Boys High and the chances are that the team will repeat.

* * *

The race for second place in the local Prep League now lies between Marist and Tech High, with the percentage of games won and lost slightly in favor of the Culverites. They have won four and lost two games. Marist has won three and lost two.

* * *

There were no games played Saturday by local prep teams. A number of the members of the Boys High nine journeyed to Athens to see the second game of the Tech-Georgia series.

* * *

Meyers, of Tech High, proved a sensation in the pole vault in the Prep meet last Friday. He had been practicing for this event only two weeks and never tried to vault before. He just barely missed winning the event Friday.

* * *

A tennis tournament between the winners of the Peacock meet and the winners of the Boys High tournament will be held at East Lake some time next week. Starr, Harris, Candler and Jones are the crack players at Boys High. Sims, Sams and Black are the champions at Peacock.

* * *

The G. M. A. Cadets who were encamped at Lakewood are planing on a water polo team. The boys have been swimming during the past week and Coach Griffin says there are a number of expert swimmers in the camp.

* * *

Marist College will hold its annual field day exercises the first week in June. A medal will be given to the highest point winner. The fight for this honor will be a lively one between Allen, Lewis and Fowler.

* * *

If an all-prep track team is picked this season Marist will have its share of men on it. Allen, Lewis and Fowler are all good men and would give any prep school athlete a hard job to beat them.

* * *

There are about twenty-five amateur baseball teams in this city and many of them play good ball. The city has provided an ample number of diamonds on which these teams can play.

* * *

Over two thousand school children took part in the exercises held at Ponce de Leon Park Saturday. These exercises lasted throughout the day and many prizes were given to the winners in the different contests.

* * *

The Marist Specials, a nine made up of boys attending the grammar school and all under 16 years of age, won the championship of the city Public School League Thursday from the Formwalt Street School by the score of 7 to 3. Wrigley, Adair and Lidell were the star performers on the Specials.

Fight Referee Usually Correct
Floto Defends Charley Cyton

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, May 12.—Voicing their opinions. That's the privilege of every gathering where boxing bouts are decided. Yet how often have we found the great majority in error while taking issue with the judge who renders the decision. Many and many a time have I seen the third man in the ring absolutely correct in his judgment, and yet the crowd howled its disapproval. Then also have I seen the referee quite wrong and the crowd give him great applause for the verdict. It's all the way you look at it; it's the angle from which you view the contest.

And yet with it all I'll wager that the man in the ring is more often correct than the crowd seated about the arena. The official in the inclosure is generally one supposed to know the game, the tricks, advantages that score points and everything else that becomes necessary to make him a fair and impartial judge. For that reason he is better able to reach a correct verdict than the outsider, who comes only on occasions to view the fights, and who nine times out of ten is prejudiced. Of course, when an incompetent man officiates, then our argument is dashed to the ground—we are left without a leg to stand upon.

* * *

HOW many times have you sat at the ringside when one man's friends seemed in the majority? You've seen this favorite beaten a mile, and yet the referee, for fear of adverse criticism, either calls the bout a "draw" or awards the decision to the man whose friends are shouting for him and yet who failed to win. I've seen this occur time and again, and so have you.

Just now Charley Eyton of Los Angeles is being "panned" for calling the Dundee-Kilbane bout a draw. The press reports tell us that the verdict was unpopular and that Kilbane won. Perhaps so. But we have always found Eyton quite correct in his decisions. For years he has officiated in Los Angeles, and no complaint has been heard. He may have erred this time for all we know. But wait until the smoke of battle clears away and you'll find that his verdict wasn't so far amiss. That, at any rate, is my guess.

* * *

IF the verdict was not in accordance with the facts, then Kilbane has but himself to blame. His stalling tactics are quite unbecoming for a champion and have got him in bad in the East until his last fight, when he redeemed himself with a knockout and regain some of his standing. A champion is supposed to carry the brunt of the battle. If he allows his opponent to assume the aggressive from start to finish, how can he hope to gain the favor of the referee? Isn't the fellow who rushes the battle and makes it possible for the spectators to see real action entitled to something?

GRIFFIN SUCCEEDS WEBER AS AMERICUS MANAGER

AMERICUS, GA., May 12.—The Americus ball team left yesterday for Waycross in charge of First Baseman Hal Griffin as temporary manager. Thoroughly tired of continued defeat sustained by the Americus aggregation, the directors met this morning and relieved Manager Harry Weber of that office, temporarily at least, putting Griffin in charge.

Americus has lost seven of the nine games played already, and while Manager Weber ascribes defeat to bad luck, local fans are less charitably inclined. It is generally suspected here that the salary limit rule is not being observed by all of the clubs of the league, and as Americus is living within the salary limits she is placed at disadvantage in employment of proficient players.

Ill luck of the Americus team recently has caused interest in baseball to flag perceptibly, although a winning streak would quickly restore enthusiasm.

WE WILL GET LEAD WHEN WE RETURN HOME

—JOE AGLER.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 12.—Billy Smith will use Chappelle or Brady to open up the Memphis series, with Graham catching.

The Crackers romped on the Billiken hurlers yesterday and scored an easy victory. Gilbert Price won both games won by the Crackers in this series.

We hit the ball to all corners of the lot, for home runs, three-base hits, two-base hits and singles.

Harry Welchonce had a great day, both at bat and in the field. He got four hits out of four trips to the plate, one being a home run, and pulled down line drives that looked impossible. He had a great day.

Tommy Long nearly hit the "bull" again. His home run just missed the big sign by inches.

Bill Bailey got back in the game and was robbed of a home run by a great catch by Kutina.

Take it all in all, the Crackers hit the ball as they should, and we feel confident we will keep going, now that we have started.

Wally Smith turned his ankle and will probably be out of the game for a few days. George Rohe will go to third until Wally is able to cavort around his old position.

The Crackers travel nearly 1,400 miles in the next week, including Montgomery to Memphis, then to New Orleans and back to Atlanta.

The Crackers do not hope to regain first position till we reach home, but will hold second place, and when Mobile gets on the road they will not win so many games. With us at home we should regain the position Billy Smith's ball club should hold.

Season's Sensation Is W. Johnson

Dodgers Stir Things Up a Bit, Too

By Percy H. Whiting.

FAR be it from us to embark on that time-honored and worn argument as to the Greatest Pitcher in the World, BUT—

Just back from a chain-lightning jaunt through the upper right-hand corner of the big league territory, we voice one fact-proved conclusion: that Walter Johnson is the only genuine sensation of a good, brisk season.

When Johnson at Chicago Saturday completed 52 2-3 innings without allowing a run he added further proof to a well-known fact, said w.-k. fact being that there's only one greatest pitcher in the world alive to-day, and his initials are W. J.

Don't forget, in giving Johnson his due that Walter's support is nothing amazing. The Senators lack about ten ball players of having a great ball club. The catching staff has wabbled for years. Schaeffer at first is no Daubert. Laporte is—well, he's just Laporte, which isn't anything so marvelous. The outfield consists largely of Milan. McBride is a grand fielder, but a fright at hitting.

When Walter Johnson wins a ball game he wins it all by himself. And it takes a pretty good pitcher to do that in anybody's league.

* * *

"THE SENATORS play good ball behind Johnson," you say.

Sure they do. Why shouldn't they? Any old team can play pretty good ball behind a pitcher who NEVER flickers. But it is thunder to pitch ball all the time that's air-tight.

That's the advantage Mathewson has had all these years. His team now and then won a game FOR HIM. Johnson, when he does win, takes no chances, but keeps 'em won all the way.

Three and a third more runless innings and Johnson reaches Doc White's world's record.

* * *

NEW YORK, it appeared to me was a bit bilious on the subject of baseball. With the Yanks last, the Giants nowhere and Brooklyn beneath their dignity, the fans of the metropolis haven't a blamed thing to console them.

The opinion prevails that the Giants are a problem. As for the Yanks, everybody seems to feel that Chance will make a team of them in due time. It really is amazing the confidence they feel in the Peerless Leader.

As to just what's the matter with the Yanks, not even Chance himself seems to know. They are joy-scouting a trifle too much, no doubt. Chance's recent order against morning poker games took out one of the many kinks. The team was bottling itself up every morning and absorbing too much tobacco smoke and too little oxygen.

The real trouble with the Yanks lies deep. It must be due to rotten spirit somewhere. Chance will fire a lot of men or throw the fear of Gehenna into them before he gets a ball club.

* * *

MAYBE you don't think that placid burg of Brooklyn isn't "hawg wild" over its Dixie-developed ball club. The idea of Brooklyn sticking right up around the top, with the season a month advanced, is hard to appreciate.

About all Dahlin needs now is for "Red" Smith's annual hitting streak to crop out. That is all that is lacking. Jake Daubert and Zack Wheat, two other former Southern Leaguers on the same team, are decidedly off in hitting, too; but they are the sort who always manage to get back on after a bit. Jake is suffering from an attack of "lambasteit," and when he eases off a shade in his efforts, his average will go up like a baloon—and stay up.

Bob Fisher, the Nashville kid, is not only as good as he ever was, but he's considerably better. The stride he is hitting now will bring him high honors.

Of Rucker, nothing need be said, except that he shows no sign whatever of fading. Lefty Allen, late of Mobile, is rather better this year than ever. Strange to say, these grand southpaws have not won a game yet. Rucker has dropped three tough ones. Allen is always a slow starter.

Dahlen still believes he can make something out of "Bull" Wagner, his New Orleans recruit. This one is big and tough, and may develop.

Of all the Southerners on Dahlen's staff, none has been quite the surprise this season that Charley Stengel, the ex-Billikin, has. This lad has won several games with timely, screaming hits; has cracked out two that nicked the "bull" sign and has fielded sensationally.

I can't help feeling that Stengel is playing a good bit over his stride and is due a slump. But, then, you can't tell. No rules hold in Brooklyn. Look at Zack Wheat as an example—a shine in the Southern, a star in the National.

It would be a fine, amazing thing if the Brooklyn club should make a big showing. But, then, Washington did last year, so you never can tell.

FODDER FOR FANS

By shutting out the White Sox Saturday Walter Johnson, of the Senators, annexed a record of 52 2-3 scoreless innings, breaking the old record of 45. But just as soon as Johnson had turned the trick somebody in Chicago declared that "Doc" White, nine years ago, had pitched 54 or 56 innings without being scored upon.

* * *

Joe Jackson, of the Naps, hammered out a four-base swat yesterday when the bases were filled. He also got a double and two singles out of four times up.

* * *

For the benefit of those interested it may be said that C. Webb Murphy has not as yet looped the loop from the top of the Brooklyn grandstand, in keeping with his promise. Nor is there any reason to hope that he will.

* * *

Otis Clymer's inability to play with the Cubs Saturday was due to the fact that he ate a $3 steak in one of the gilded grills in New York and right away got ptomaine poisoning.

* * *

The Naps so far have refused to "crack," as has been widely predicted. Maybe, after all, they've discarded their old and famous trick, and will become real pennant contenders. While discussing the Naps, it might be well to look into the record of one J. Birmingham, manager.

* * *

When Birmingham took charge of the Naps late last season they were trying their hardest to skid out of the percentage column. Immediately thereafter they started to win and when the season ended they had a record of 25 victories against 6 defeats.

* * *

Jack Coombs, the star twirler of the Athletics, is recovering from his illness, but will not be able to get back into the game until June.

* * *

The Red Sox came up from behind in the game with the Tigers yesterday, making three runs, tying the score in the ninth inning. They scored the winning run in the tenth.

* * *

Falkenburg's victory for the Naps over the Yankees yesterday makes his sixth straight win of the season. Only Walter Johnson, of the Senators, with seven victories, leads this twirling record.

* * *

The showing Jim Thorpe, the disqualified Olympic athlete, has made in exhibition games has caused Giant fans to beg McGraw to place him in the regular line-up.

* * *

Shouldn't the Cubs be called the veterans? In their line-up are Schulte, Evers, Reulbach, Ritchie, Archer, Corriden, Bresnahan and a few others who have been playing for several generations.

* * *

Speaker, Lewis and Hendriksen, of the Red Sox, are going for a combined average of about .360, yet the team is down in sixth place.

* * *

The Browns, without the aid of their suspended manager, George Stovall, had an easy time trimming the Senators yesterday.

* * *

Ed Walsh pitched for the Sox yesterday against the Athletics, and won.

SIX THOUSAND FANS TURN OUT AT MOBILE

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—Mobile and Chattanooga broke even in yesterday's double-header. The crowd was almost equal to that of the Sunday's opener between Atlanta and the locals. It was estimated at nearly 6,000. Chattanooga took the first game by a score of 1 to 0, while the last was a veritable batfest for the locals, who garnered hit after hit from Troy's delivery and piled up thirteen. Hogg lost his first game of the season. He was found for five singles, fanned four and walked three.

HAS BEEN.

Time was when Jimmy Sheckard took his stand
And lowbrows hit the ball to beat the band.
He never moved, but stood there with a smile
And waited as it nestled in his hand.

Tims was when Mordy Brown stood on the mound;
The sacks were full and no one could be found
To stop the swats—he shot them at the plate
And Cobb and Crawford rolled them on the ground.

I sit to-day and freeze my youthful frame,
And yell till my esophagus is lame,
But, Oh! to see Jim Sheckard out in left
As Brown comes walking in to save the game.

There are several things which fail to excite our ambition, one of which is to throw the first ball at the first game of the Federal League.

George Stovall is a rude person and all that. The chief fault to be found with him is that he played with the wrong team.

If Mr. Stovall had been playing with a New York team he would have been slapped on the wrist and suspended a whole day—if the day happened to fall on Sunday.

It is well to make an example of a ball player if he plays for a magnate who will stand for it.

The fact that St. Louis lost the first game in the Federal League is merely a reversion to type. St. Louis does not feel comfortable unless it is at the bottom of things.

One is not surprised to hear that Ritchie demands $15,000 for a conflict in New York. If Willie does not have a care he may get himself into a fight.

We are about to have motorcycle races in our midst. We presume that they will be attended by the same persons who pay regular money to see wrestling matches.

It is getting so these days that a team that Frank Chance beats is accused of having the milk of human kindness.

Bonesetter Reese bursts out with the information that dandelion greens will cure liver trouble, but he fails to state what will cure dandelion greens.

Frank Chance arises to remark that he will not trade Hal Chase for Ty Cobb. Even David Harum would find it hard to trade a jackknife for a Derby winner.

There are various reasons why Charlie Dooin's team should win this year, one of which is that Horace Fogel is not in the way.

"A club owner must think," quoth Charles Webb Murphy. If Charles thinks before he speaks he does a heluva lot of thinking.

Some day we shall scrape up nerve enough to ask a motorcyclist whether he has been sentenced to it or whether it is his own free will.

THE ANCIENT MARINER.

It is an ancient mariner;
I grab him on the street.
He takes me by the arm and says:

He says: "Young man, I do not want
To slip you any salve,
But I am deeply jealous of
The cargo that you have."

CRIMSON-TIGER-PENNSY BOAT RACE IS ON TO-DAY

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., May 12.—The triangular Harvard-Princeton-University of Pennsylvania race, postponed from Saturday, will be rowed to-day at 4 p. m. Dr. Spaeth, of Princeton, early to-day endeavored to persuade Dean Briggs, of Harvard, to allow the race to be rowed at 7 or 10 a. m. All three crews were willing to row at the last mentioned time.

The dean refused, claiming that it would hurt the attendance in the college classes.

JACKETS HOPE TO WIN MEET FROM GEORGIA

TECH and Georgia meet this afternoon at Athens in a dual track meet, the first of its kind in some years.

Georgia laid track athletics on the shelf a few years ago, and this their first attempt at it since then. They have some mighty fine material, recruited from the football and baseball teams. Paddock, the little quarterback of the football team, is captain. He is speedy and last fall demonstrated this fact many times on the gridiron. Malone, another football man, is a weight performer, as is McWhorter, who is also a jumper and runner. Ginn, the speedy outfielder of the baseball club, is also on the team, doing the dashes.

Coach Thomas of the Jackets has taken over practically his entire squad to defend the Tech laurels. The Tech men put up an excellent showing against Clemson, and since then have been putting in extra work both on the track and field.

This meet to-day will be watched with great interest by other colleges, for it decides for Tech who will journey to New Orleans to take part in the S. I. A. A. annual meet at New Orleans on Friday and Saturday of this week.

Both colleges will attempt to make new records for their schools, and also State records, so they will put in it all they've got.

Tech is the favorite, owing to the past experience of the Jacket performers, and will doubtless roll up a goodly score over the Athens boys. But dope never counts when Tech and Georgia clash, so you never can tell.

ELBERFELD ATTACKED BY FANS; "KID" WINS

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—Fred Murphy and Sam Pritchard, two young white men, were arrested on the other side of the ball park yesterday after the double-header, and docketed for disorderly conduct at the police station. It seems the men took it upon themselves to get at Manager Elberfeld, of the Chattanooga team, for the mixup with Stock in the game, and assailed him. Some of the onlookers stated the men rushed Elberfeld and that he struck one of them after they had tackled him. Elberfeld denied having made any demonstration and his statement was verified.

FOUR MOTORCYCLE RIDERS ARRIVE FOR THE BIG MEET

Four of the speed merchants who will compete on Jack Prince's motorcycle track on the old circus grounds arrived in the city Sunday, and were on the roads around Atlanta all during the day, tuning up their racing machines.

The one-quarter-mile saucer will be in readiness for them to practice on by Friday. Mr. Prince announced last night that he would have the track proper completed by that time and would then start work on the seating.

Most of the famous motorcycle riders of this country will be in Atlanta for the race meet, and some fine sport is promised. Records are also sure to go glimmering.

Mr. Prince estimates that the riders will average 90 miles an hour on the saucer.

Evans Writes of Eyesight in Golf

Most Players Depend On One Optic

By "Chick" Evans.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 10.—There has been a great deal of discussion of late in the British golf magazines and newspapers concerning what is called the "master eye in golf." This phrase seems to indicate that each player has one eye which serves better than the other in the all-important act of keeping the eye on the ball. British periodicals therefore discourse at length upon the subject and advise a study of one's best optic. An unintentional experiment was made in England a short time ago during a team match by a member of the Cambridge University team. One eye of the gentleman had been undergoing medical treatment and at the time of the competition was bandaged closely. In spite of this handicap he halved the match with his opponent and played splendid golf at times; on occasion, however, he found difficulty in judging distances.

* * *

BEING interested in the subject I made a few experiments myself to determine which was my master eye, and I have concluded that it is my left. Perhaps I cock my head back a little on the back swing and on the down swing to the actual hitting; at any rate, I seemed in my experiment to make a greater use of my left eye. I think Vaile's weight testing machine could be used profitably in this discussion, because if a player sways backward the line from his left eye to the ball is shorter and less oblique. In any inclination there is a tendency to shorten the line from the left eye to the ball. Of course, I am arguing from the standpoint of a right-handed golfer. I should think the right eye would be more important to the left-handed player.

In the execution of the longer shots the ball is played so far away from the body that one can not get both eyes immediately over the ball and allow the club to lie naturally, which, by the way, is one of the most important things to be borne in mind. In cases where there is a marked discrepancy in the strength of the eyes the stronger must be necessarily most favored.

* * *

ONE of my great little rules has always been to keep my eyes in such a position that lines of equal length drawn from each eye will meet at a certain point on the ball. In this case, of course, no eye can be called the master eye. In putting, the hardest shot of the game, I try to keep my eyes directly over the ball. The stroke is so short that it would be hard for me to tell which eye is the better one. Maybe I could do better with only one eye; that seems to be the only thing I have not tried in my fruitless efforts to learn how to putt.

Those players who wear glasses must have special difficulties to overcome when playing golf, and it would be enlightening to know what these are and how they are surmounted; for the whole subject of the application of sight to golf playing is an interesting one.

SHERIDAN DECIDES TO GIVE UP ALL ATHLETICS

NEW YORK, May 12.—Because it interferes with his job, Martin Sheridan, policeman, former champion discus thrower, has decided to drop out of athletics.

"You can state positively for me," Sheridan is accredited with saying, "that I am through with competition for good. I would like to take part in the games, but I find it interferes with my job, so I have decided to cut it out. There is no doubt I could go back into competition and do as well as I did. I went out to Celtic Park the other day and threw the discus 13 feet with all my clothes on. I will probably go out, there sometimes for exercise, but that will be all.

M'CARTY THINKS LITTLE OF FIGHT WITH PELKEY

CHICAGO, May 12.—Luther McCarty's bout with Arthur Pelkey at Calgary on May 24, will be nothing more than a training stunt, according to the champion, who is in Chicago with Manager McCarney.

On his arrival here, McCarney found telegrams awaiting him from Promoters Coffroth and McCarney of the Pacific Coast clubs asking the champion to meet the winner of the "Gunboat" Smith-Jess Willard fight to be staged in San Francisco, May 17. McCarney said he thought Smith no great attraction on the coast, and that of the two fighters he preferred to have his man meet Willard.

A CHILD SAVED FROM A HORRIBLE DEATH

LITTLE ANNIE DONALDSON, AGE 8 YEARS, NO. 7 RICHARDS ST., CORNER TOMBLIN ST., LITTLE DAUGHTER OF MR. AND MRS. S. P. DONALDSON, AFTER 3 YEARS' BATTLE SAVED AS IF BY A MIRACLE.

Words can not describe or express the supreme feeling of joy and happiness which to-day filled the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Donaldson, who reside at No. 7 Richards Street, New Era division, this city. Little Annie, 8 years old, not larger than an ordinary child of 5 years, was saved from death and restored to perfect health in a seemingly miraculous manner. For three years this little child has been suffering from some inexplainable cause. Her stomach would at times bloat to immense proportions, high fevers would frequently attack her, followed by dreadful chills or bilious attacks, her mind was clear, but her memory weak, her sleep restless, sometimes screaming out, almost frightened to death. Her breath, especially in the mornings, was very foul, dark circles under the eyes, very nervous, her appetite was changeable, ravenously hungry at times, at other times the sight of food was nauseating. All the careful attention which loving parents could bestow was given to her, and all modest attempts were resorted to, but the child's condition grew worse. The mother did what hundreds of other people were doing. She called at Coursey & Munn's drug store and obtained a treatment of the Quaker Extract. With anxious mind she watched for results, after the child began taking the wonderful remedy, and what were the results? To the amazement of the whole family, the child expelled a monster tapeworm, head and all complete, alive and squirming. It is hard to believe this monster is 41 feet in length. How many children and people are being tortured by parasites, and how they go on for years dosing and doping for what they think is some form of stomach trouble when it really is worms of some kind that is causing all your trouble! If it is worms, Quaker Extract will expel them. If it is caused from other causes, such as catarrh, indigestion, constipation, the Quaker Extract will do more for you than any other remedies on the market to-day.

This case is so remarkable that many people will doubt it, yet all are at liberty to investigate, write, phone, wire or call at the child's residence, the above address. The father is a carpenter by occupation, was born and lived most of his life here in Atlanta, and he has a host of friends and they will vouch for his word. The Health Teacher said the people would soon realize the power of the Quaker Remedies, and such cases as this should certainly convince every sensible person. Once more the Health Teacher recommends the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm to any person who may suffer with rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder or blood trouble, and will expel worms.

So call to-day at Coursey & Munn's drug store, 29 Marietta Street, and obtain these wonderful Quaker Remedies. We prepay express charges on all orders of $5 or over.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"THAT must be some interesting, that novel you are reading there," remarked the Head Barber. "You ain't had your nose out of it all the forenoon."

"It is a beautiful story, George. I almost cry in some parts of it, and when the laughs come they are sure great. I didn't skip a line of it, either, and I have just finished the last page. The title of it is 'Starflower,' and it was wrote by Mrs. Eleanor Shirley Dewflicker. And then they say that women can't write! Maybe some women writes stories that is kind of punk and then gets made fun of by the critics, but this woman that wrote 'Starflower' is some queen of a writer. Gee, there is some love passages that is simply superfluous and almost sublimate. 'Starflower' is the name of the heroine, a little girl that always lived in the northern part of Pennsylvania. She is so pretty and sweet that she has lovers come from everywhere to try to win her hand, but she loves only one, a young man who is doing scientific farming near her father's home. Of course science is a great thing, George, and I suppose if it helps raise big crops it must help a man to make love, too. Anyhow, she loves him and some day they are to wed. Just listen to this part, where they are engaged:

Very Pathetic.

"'Starflower,' whispered Robert, placing her little trembling palm in his strong right hand. 'Little girl, I am plain and direct in my speech, as you know. I can't write poetry for you, little girl, like the Byron poems you read to me out in the orchard, and I ain't no Tennyson, but I am a man with a man's heart and two willing hands. I love you!'

"'And-I love you, Bob,' murmured Starflower, bewildered by the wonderful rush of happiness that swept over her lithe form and suffused her cheeks with the first flush of girlish love.

"An oriole flashed brightly through the crimson sumac and the brook rippled along like some soft accompaniment to the oldest, sweetest story in the world."

"Gee, George; ain't that some writing?"

"Did he marry her and make a lot of kale?" asked the practical Head Barber.

"No, George," replied the Manicure Lady. "That is the pitiful part of it. A young bridge builder named Walter Orr came to the little town where Starflower dwelt, and he kind of dazzled her with his fine English and his wonderful piano playing. He was a college man, and her Robert didn't know nothing about Virgil or Horace or Rameses or any of them old-timers, Orr knew all about them all, and he could change his voice until it got as soft as the rustling of the breeze through the autumn leaves. When he was talking to his men he spoke kind of commanding, but when he spoke to her he always spoke with the soft pedal. One night, George, she agreed to run away with him, and the next morning they were gone. Just after they eloped Orr got fired and had to take a position that paid him about one-quarter as much money as her former sweetheart made every week out of his registered milk from his registered cows.

It Sounds All Right.

"When she saw poverty staring her in the face she took some kind of a powder and they found her still in death with a note to Robert pinned on her night robe. Then Robert heard about it and went so insane that he called all his cows Starflower."

"It sounds all right," said the Head Barber, "but I wouldn't go nuts over no girl that threw me down!"

Quite Taxable

William Jennings Bryan once visited Cornell University, and while being entertained to dinner by a prominent member of the legal fraternity he told the following story:

"Once out in Nebraska I went to protest against my real estate assessment, and one of the things of which I particularly complained was assessing a goat at $25. I claimed that a goat was not real property in the legal sense of the word, and should not be assessed. One of the assessors, a very pleasant-faced old man, very obligingly said that I could go upstairs with him, and together we would look over the rules and regulations and see what could be done. We looked over the rules, and finally the old man asked:

"'Does your goat run loose on this road?'

"'Well, sometimes,' said I, wondering what the penalty was for that dreadful offense.

"'Does he butt?' again queried the old man.

"'Yes,' I answered, 'he butts.'

"'Well,' said the old man, looking at me, 'this rule says tax all property running and abutting on the highway. I don't see that I can do anything for you. Good day, sir.'"

A Charming Midsummer Hat

By OLIVETTE

A DAINTY little model this for wear with the lacy gowns of July and August. All in pure white, it tones well with the bright eyes and softly flushed cheeks of midsummer days. Draw folds of soft chiffon or mousselaine de soie over the crown and brim of a small milk-white straw shape—chip will do, though milan is better and "horsehair" best of all. Around the crown draw taffeta ribbon finishing in a "pump bow" directly in front. From under this bow, in either direction, lay sheafs of wheat in the prevailing tone of white. And now the final touch is given by the coquettish ruches of soft chiffon that face the entire under brim and appear softly at the back where the brim has a decided upward roll.

Sister's Engagement

TO-DAY'S COMPLETE STORY.

THE daughter of the household, aged 11, looked up from her book as the man caller came into the library.

"How do you do, Mr. Dearmore," she said, getting up politely. "You might as well take a comfortable chair because sister won't be down for ages. She is always slow about getting dressed and I supposed now she'll be slower than ever because she won't care if she does keep you waiting."

"Well, why shouldn't she care, I'd like to know?" inquired the caller with an assumption of surprise designed to be comic.

The young person hitched a little closer to him in her eagerness. "I just found out," she told him, "tonight. I guess they weren't going to tell me, but sister was so interested in brushing out her switch that she didn't notice me, and mother said, 'You might have done better if you'd had more ambition, but, thank heaven, you're engaged at last!' And sister said yes, it was time and she'd have to make the best of it. Why, she's engaged! Don't you understand?"

"You surprise me," said the caller, with interest.

Very Exciting.

The young person nodded her head. "It's awfully exciting to have an engaged person in the family. We never had one before. I held my hand over my mouth to keep from asking right out who it was, but I knew if I spoke they'd make me go away—and then all they said was that where the trooser was coming from if dad didn't make a killing goodness only knew. What's a trooser?"

"A sort of feminine delirium, I believe," the young man told her. Wouldn't you like to read out loud to me from your book?"

"Not when I can talk," the young person assured him, promptly. "I'd think it was Bob Samson, only he hasn't been here for ages. He's riding around a ranch out West now and he always brought me chocolates and petted the dog and waited hours and hours for sister. Mother told her one day for goodness sake when she got her hands on that huge old Samson house to burn it down and put up another one with a French gray drawing room and other things, but I guess Bob slipped a cog somehow"——

"Er—what?"

"Well, Aunt Clara said to mother that a cog in the wheels must have slipped somehow, and how did he ever get away, and wasn't it a pity! So I suppose Bob did it. I always liked his chocolates—he bought me just as good ones as he bought sister. Sometimes they try to pass off cheap candy on me, but I know! Then I feed it to the dog.

"I'm glad it wasn't that Siddens man. He always called me 'little one' and patted my head and he had bronchitis and always coughed before he spoke, and sister said she didn't care if he was rich, but she couldn't endure a man who wore brown ties and ate grapefruit with a fork and anyhow he gave her the shivers. That was the time mother scolded so and sister went to Aunt Clara's for a month.

"I'm surprised at her getting engaged, because she'll have to have a house and meals then and she says picking out things to eat is simply awful and she wouldn't wear her life away keeping down the grocery bills for any man and he might as well make up his mind to it. Anyhow, sister never loses her head, because mother says so, and she'll make him toe the mark. Mother says that with her sweet smile sister could make a man believe white was black, but that seems foolish. Wouldn't you know black if you saw it?"

"I used to think I was able to distinguish colors," admitted the caller.

A Surprise.

"But you're different," said the young person. "It isn't as though you were one of sister's trailers—that's what dad calls 'em. It doesn't make any difference to you. Only I thought if I told you about it you'd understand why she didn't hurry to get down here, now she's interested in one particular man."

"Well," said the caller, "I'll tell you a secret. I'm the particular man!"

The young person's eyes bulged. "Honest?" she squealed. "Why, I was never so sur-r-p-prised in my l-i-life! And you never petted the dog once! My, but you're quiet!"

RECIPE FOR WRITING.

THE one way to write is to do it. Sit down to your typing machine and rattle the keys till a poem slips out where mere space has just been. Sounds simple—well, listen; it isn't; it's only the way you should write. Do I do it? Well, no. I'm confessing that it's not thus my songs I indite. But I take up my little tan Faber, and cudgel my little gray brain, and I cover great sheets of white paper right over and over again with lead marks of black and with smudges which mean that I had to erase. Each "I just dashed off" chap really drudges. He denies? Then he's paid for his "space!"

:: REMEMBERING ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

IF I could just remember, when the past is on parade,
Some little deed of merit for each big mistake I've made,
The other days, long vanished, would be glad days to recall,
But Memory leans toward wilder scenes—and I can see them all.

If I could just remember, counting back a score of years,
One act that made a loved one smile—not ten that prompted tears—
I'd dream the past dreams over and forget the wasted wine,
But Memory loves to taunt me with the errors that were mine.

If I could just remember, in the twilight of my life,
One speech that made for peace and love—not ten that hastened strife—
The future might seem dreary and the present might be bare,
But the past would be an orchard with a thousand songbirds there.

How to Manage a Husband

By DOROTHY DIX.

THEY had admired all of the little bride's wedding finery, and had finally drifted over to where the tea table was set by an open window.

"Well, my dear," said the woman in the soft white gown, "I hope you are going to be as happy as the days are long, and I am sure you will, for Jack is a fine fellow, and he is well to do, and an orphan, so you are going to escape hard times and mothers-in-law, two of the principal snags that are most apt to make a big dent in the barque of matrimony, even when they don't wreck it.

"Still, you must not expect to find everything plain sailing. There are a good many storms on even the calmest sea of wedlock, and you are going to find out that lots of things that you expected to happen won't happen, and a lot of things that you were positive couldn't occur, do occur with amazing frequency.

"Also, you are going to discover, and it will give you the jar of your life, that the noble ideal of perfect manhood that you are tying up with has got faults, and peculiarities, and whims, and crochets that you have never suspected concealed about his person.

"Now you take it from me, that the great thing in married life is for the wife to begin right, to get off on the right foot, so to speak, for every man can be managed, and brought to eat out of his wife's hand, if only she goes about it in the proper manner."

"What is the best way of managing a husband?" anxiously inquired the little bride.

The Best Way.

"Well," replied the woman in the soft white gown, "I can't do better than relate to you the experiences of two friends of mine, both of whom married good men, but men who were high tempered, and tyrannical, and cross—the sort of men you know who possess all of the virtues and none of the lovable qualities of life. They are the kind of husbands who are too much gentlemen ever to strike a woman with their hand, but who leave her bruised and bleeding, and wounded to death in spirit after they have stabbed her with their tongues.

"There are lots of men like that, my dear, and when I get elected to the Legislature the very first thing I am going to do is to bring in a bill to make a man's disposition, instead of his morals, a cause for divorce.

"But back to my story. One of these women whom I am telling you is named Bertha, and she is one of those gentle, suave women who are born salve spreaders. Anything like a jolt in the domestic machinery hurts her to the very core of her being. She isn't weak. Oh, dear no. She would hang on to a principle, or a conviction, to eternity, and be loyal to one she loved to the death itself, and if you pushed her to the wall she'd fight until there wasn't an enemy left alive, but she would never argue a question with you, or say a thing that would hurt your feelings, or do anything to make the slightest unpleasantness.

"Well, when the rosy mists of the honeymoon rolled up and she discovered that she was married to a man who was twin brother to the fretful porcupine, and whose prejudices simply strewed the ground around him, she undertook to manage him by tact.

What She Did.

"She only conversed upon the subjects that she knew he agreed with her upon. She devoted her days to rubbing his fur down the right way. She kept everything that was unpleasant, and that could possibly ruffle him, hidden out of sight, and spent her life tip-toeing on eggs for fear of rousing him and exploding his infernal machine of a temper. In short, in order to keep the peace and make her home happy, she went through a very martyrdom of sacrifice of all of her desires and inclinations.

"H'm," said the little bride, "and how did the other woman manage her husband?"

"The other woman," replied the woman of the soft, white dress, "was of a different type. She had a red-headed temper of her own that was a dead ringer for her husband's, besides which she loved a scrap for the pure fun of the thing. She didn't dodge the issue when her husband flung a debatable subject into the family arena. She simply rolled up her sleeves and sailed in, and when the domestic mix-up was over she wasn't always the one who was on the mat.

"She was a good woman, and a good wife and mother, who did her full duty by her family, and she stood pat on her record. She didn't waste any time trying to jolly or cajole her husband as poor Bertha did. If he didn't like the way she did things, and her opinions, why he could lump it, that was all. She was an independent, free spoken woman, and she didn't see why she should wear herself out flattering any old husband into doing the things he ought to do, anyway.

"And she didn't mind expressing these sentiments, but the result was that their house was a dark and bloody battle ground, with no day without its spat. But that was her way of managing a husband."

"Which one of the systems work?" asked the little bride with a troubled air.

"Neither," replied the woman in the soft, white gown.

Flying Men's Mascots

CURIOUS SUPERSTITIONS OF AVIATORS.

LUCK plays a big part in the life of an aviator, and for this reason most airmen are very superstitious. The majority of aviators carry mascots when they fly, and the cleverer the pilot the more the luck-bringing emblems he seems to possess. Vedrines, the crack French flyer, always has a miniature of the famous picture "Mona Lisa" fastened to the side of his aeroplane when he starts on a flight. He carried this picture on his racing monoplane recently when he won the cup at a record speed of 105 miles an hour. Grahame-White does not trouble about mascots to any great extent, but he invariably wears a pair of check riding breeches under his flying overalls when he makes a flight. These garments are popularly supposed to be lucky, and many other aviators have adopted a similar flying garb. Notable among these is Biolovoucic, the young Peruvian airman, who recently flew over the Alps.

A Lion's Tooth.

Another favorite mascot is a little Teddy bear which is strapped to one of the wing stays on the machine. In naval flying circles a lion's tooth is considered to be a lucky mascot for airmen—a fashion created by the late Lieutenant Parke, for with such an emblem he came out of many serious smashes unscathed. Lewis Turner, the well-known pilot instructor, who flies the Caudron biplanes, has so many mascots that he is generally in doubt as to which he shall take up with him. He recently remarked that were he to wear all his mascots at once he would be mistaken for a toy dealer.

There are many quaint superstitions in vogue at the aerodromes. Chief among these is that should a pilot have one smash he will have two others on the same day if he continues flying. This belief is so firmly rooted in the minds of most aviators that after a mishap they seldom again trust themselves on a machine until twenty-four hours have passed.

Unlucky Thirteen.

Many airmen also have a superstitious dislike of flying in bright sunshine. But there is a substratum of common sense running through this belief. The hot rays of the sun when shining on a damp ground cause heat eddies in the air, which are very dangerous to flying men. These are known as air pockets, which are holes in the air that contain no support for machine or man.

Flying on the thirteenth day of the month is in great disfavor amongst many airmen. And this superstition is largely due to the fact that so many fatal accidents have occurred to airmen on this date. Last year ten pilots were killed whilst flying on the thirteenth of the different months and already this year three airmen have been killed, two on the thirteenth of January and one on the thirteenth of February.

Airmen are also influenced by the behavior of animals on the ground when they are flying over them. If horses or cattle appear terrified at a pilot's approach, and utter warning cries, then this is regarded as an omen of ill-luck. But if the animals over which he is passing are not alarmed to any extent by his approach, then he has little fear that his flight will be anything but successful.

Another bad omen is the stopping of a watch on an aeroplane when it is aloft.

Lady passengers are popularly supposed to ensure the success of an aeroplane flight. One of the most consistent luck-bringers in this respect, is Miss Trehawke Davies. She invariably brings luck to the pilot who takes her on a flight. She recently accompanied Hammel in the Aerial Flying Derby round London when he obtained the second place after a magnificent flight. Miss Davies flew on several occasions with the late Mr. Astley. A few days before his death this airman, whilst flying with Miss Davies, fell in his monoplane from a height of nearly a hundred feet. Both pilot and passenger escaped with a shaking. A few days later Mr. Astley, when flying alone on a similar machine in Ireland, side-slipped in the air at a low altitude and was killed on the spot.

Got It Regular Then.

Mrs. Subbub: "I wonder what's come over your master this morning, Sarah? Instead of being cross, as usual, he started off happy and whistling like a bird."

Sarah (the new "general"): "I'm afraid it's my fault, mum. I got the wrong package, and gave him bird seed for breakfast food."

The Girl With the Monocle

No, This Isn't English, Y'Know; It's the Rage in Paris

SURPRISING as it may seem, this is not an English fad at all, although London society is always given the credit—or discredit—for styles in monocles, but it is a novelty taken up by "smart" Parisiennes.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

GO TO AN ARTIST.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
Not a day that goes by that I am not told of the wonderfully beautiful hand I have. Artists have stopped me and apologized in the cars and commented on my beautiful hand. Of course, I paid no attention to these comments, but it seems that if I could obtain some revenue through having my hand posed I should like to avail myself of the opportunity. MISS R.

Have your mother go with you to the studio of some reputable artist and ask his opinion.

I am sure, however, that there are many ways more lucrative and ennobling by which your hands can earn you a living. Have you tried them?

DON'T GIVE IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
Is it proper for a young man of 18 to present his lady friend with a diamond ring on her sixteenth birthday? We are not engaged, but the love between us could not be broken, as we have known each other for four years.
V. A. H. F.

Eighteen and sixteen often decide their "bond of love can't be broken," and change their minds ten times before they are old enough to marry. Your love may develop into a sentiment more lasting, but don't give diamond rings till you are older, and know.

THE OUTSIDE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
"A" said that when a man is walking with two girl friends he must walk in the center. "B" said when a man is walkinw with two girls he must walk on the outside.
H. N. L. M.

A gentleman should always take the outside of the walk.

Wouldn't Be Done

Robbie met a neighbor who was smoking some fine, fragrant tobacco sent by his son in America. He took out his own pipe ostentatiously.

"Hae you a match, Sandy?" he inquired.

The match was forthcoming, but nothing more.

"I do believe," said Robbie, "I hae left ma tobacco at hame."

"Then," said Sandy, after a silence, "ye mich' gie me back ma match."

From Innocence of Thought

By Virginia Terhune Van De Water

MUCH has been written and said within the past few years in commendation of the broad lines on which the training and education of the modern girl is conducted. To add further approval to this twentieth century method would be platitudinous. To cast a slur upon it, or to hint that the latest ideal in the upbringing of women has its attendant drawbacks, is to lay one's self open to the onus of being old-fashioned.

It is a sin in the minds of most people of this generation to be old-fashioned or behind the times in ideals and theories. Yet some of us conservatives still cling to certain of the tenets that were instilled into us 20 and 30 years ago. The memory of our own girlhood sometimes leads us to compare the girl of the period with the "young person" of our early days, and the modern product does not emerge unscathed from the comparison.

It would be carrying conservatism to the limits of folly not to admit the tremendous value of the broader, and deeper, and franker training which the modern girl receives over that of her prototype of a quarter century ago. It would be the height of bigotry not to admit that by her twentieth century education, she has become a clearer thinking, more self-reliant, more useful member of society than her parent was. Yet there are some things missing in the character of the "young person" of to-day which make her elders regret that a modern education could not be absorbed by her without a radical alteration taking place in her character.

Our girl has lost much of the sentimental appeal that belonged to her aunt's or mother's girlhood days. I do not mean by sentiment the mawkish superconsciousness of sex which sometimes masquerades under that name and which can not be too soon stamped out as a menace to all that is best in womanhood. But I do mean that she has lost much of her one-time ability to call forth the highest and best in young mankind by her fresh, untarnished view of the world.

Shrugged His Shoulders.

A youth of my acquaintance called recently on a girl with whom he was much smitten—after the fashion of the male young of the species. The girl was college-bred and had the sophistication of her type. The young man was fond of reading, and the talk drifted into literature. The girl advanced her own theories concerning Brieux and other constructive European writers with absolute frankness, and before the evening ended had aired all her ideas and opinions on the white slave question. When the young man mentioned the conversation to me my face must have betrayed some surprise, for he shrugged his shoulders and laughed a little bitterly.

"Girls have changed since your day, I guess," he remarked—"more's the pity!"

They have changed since that day. They have changed for the better in many things. To a person with entirely modern views they may have improved in all things. Yet it seems a pity that in her intellectual advance our girl should have failed to retain much of the grace and sweetness that served as an inspiration to the men who were youths 20 and 30 years ago.

The Exchange.

In the course of her evolution the "young person" of to-day has exchanged innocence of thought for consciousness of morality. She no longer has manners—she has Manner. She had transformed what was once poise into Pose.

Yet the characteristics which some of us are so narrow as to deplore are doubtless only indications of the advance in the evolution of a woman far broader and better than her predecessors were. Yet, as old-fashioned folk, some of us recall the girls we knew when we were young, and sigh—but very softly, lest the Young Person of To-day should hear—and censure—us.

No Fail for Recipe.

She—I sent a dollar to a young woman for a recipe to make me look young."

"What did you get?"

"A card saying, 'Always associate with women twenty years older than yourself.'"

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON has an affectionate disposition. Unless her mouth is full of pins or hairpins, he never leaves the house without kissing his wife goodbye.

On rare occasions he has given her money as he was leaving, and when in her alacrity to accept it she has forgotten to kiss him he has been grievously pained. He has never experienced that feeling of momentary reprieve which comes to colder-hearted husbands on such occasions.

He was in a tender mood the other evening, and sought to put his arm around his wife's waist. Alas for the ignorance of man and the tyranny of fashion! He couldn't find it!

He stepped back and looked at her in a puzzled way. Then he followed the line laid out by the dressmaker and slid his arm gently around under her armpits.

The next evening, still tender and loving, this being the springtime of the year, he again put his arm under his wife's armpits, but her waist was not there!

He scratched his head in a puzzled fashion and felt a momentary rebuff. But his love is not of the kind that brooks discouragement, and, after a moment's survey of her form divine, he got down on the floor and put his arm around her ankle, the dressmaker having located her waist there in the dress she was then wearing.

The following evening Lysander John looked before he attempted to embrace, and found her waist was not at her ankles! It had been moved up to her knees!

It was then that he was overcome with a sense of the helplessness of man when opposed to the tyranny of fashion, and he bowed his head in anguish and cried aloud.

"It used to be so simple a matter," he cried, beating his hands on his breast, "for a man to put his arms around the waist of the woman he loved, but alas! it is a simple matter no longer!

"It has become a movable sacrament of love!"

Making Mother Over

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

WHEN a girl reaches 16, and her head is turned as easily as thistledown, for the reason that it is almost as light, she becomes possessed with the belief that she is superior to her family, a delusion in which her foolishly fond parents unconsciously encourage her.

She is her parents' own child; that is a stubborn fact that even romantic theories of being the stolen offspring of royalty, of which she has read in the fairy tales, can't conquer. She is a rare blossom on a parent stem that looks like a weed, and she wonders that there is no explanation of such a phenomenon.

She learns at an earlier age than one would guess that she can't change her father. She can rule him, and does, but, being a man, he is satisfied to be what he is. He admits his offspring is a rare blossom, but does not for a moment think that the father stem is a weed.

Mother is different. One reason is that she is a woman and knows not that self-content that is wrapped around a man like the bandages around a mummy. And a greater reason is that she is Mother, and, therefore, humble. She also recognizes that her offspring is a rare blossom, the quick eyes of her love making this discovery the moment her baby daughter was first laid in her arms. Because of her love she makes humble comparison, and knows also that she is a weed.

She doesn't resent her daughter's air of superiority, but weakly and foolishly encourages it, thereby turning that little thistledown head a little further out of place.

She Is Displeased.

Naturally the conditions that exist in a home where a girl has been permitted to think she is a princess do not please her, and she begins the process of making over, alternating her work of reformation between the parlor and mother, the former receiving serious attention when she expects company and the latter engaging her energies all the time.

Mother's methods of pronunciation are not those in use now, and she is corrected and called old-fashioned, a term that loses its sweetness when a princess daughter applies it. Mother is too tired when night comes to put on more becoming clothes, and daughter begins at the wrong end of the reformation by complaining about her mother's appearance instead of attaining the same end by making the work lighter.

The family purse will not support more than one peacock. Mother is glad to give daughter that royal plumage, and the girl accepts, and later complains when she struts around that her mother is not dressed as well as other mothers she knows, forgetting that in those families there are no peacocks and the sum alloted for royal plumage is more justly divided.

I do not want girls to cease in this reform of making mother over, but I want them to go at it in a better way. One can't change a mother's old-style clothes into new by complaining, but the change can be wrought by buying mother new clothes. If $10 is given a girl for a new hat and mother says she will make last season's do, the daughter can make mother over by giving her the new hat and wearing the old herself.

Another Way.

If mother shows the unbecoming traces of hard labor, another way is offered for making her over by taking the burden of the home off her shoulders.

If the latest whim in a ribbon, a tie, hat, gloves, dress or shoes will improve daughter, wouldn't they also improve mother, and isn't her need of improvement greater? One has the adornment of youth and needs little; the other is showing all the disfiguring marks of time and needs every assistance pretty clothes may give.

Make mother over by making her think more of herself and less of others! Such a reformation will be good for the whole family, but don't, girls, I implore, go at this reformation in a high-handed, selfish way. Have pride in her and she will begin to have the pride in herself of which many years of monotonous and unappreciated household work have robbed her.

Make her over! Make her young and pretty and carefree again, and use in working the transformation the fairy wand of Love!

Seeing the Pictures

WOMAN with Cerise Hat (embracing woman with headgear of bright violet)—Oh, aren't the pictures too dear? I'm crazy about them, Agnes! Just a little bit of powder on the side of your nose, dear. There—it's off, but you rubbed off the rouge, too. Such atmosphere, don't you think? No, of course, I can't make out what that one means that looks like a mud puddle stirred up with a stick, but I am sure it is something perfectly wonderful if only I could comprehend it!"

Woman with Bright Violet Hat—It certainly makes one feel so advanced to see things like these! Why, I can remember when I used to think a picture should really be a picture of something instead of merely a symbol of a thought. Goodness! Will you look at that dress—the one just coming in! Such things ought to be restricted by law!

Sweet Young Thing (in a flimsy floppy suit)—Perfectly beautiful! I simply love that picture!

Second Sweet Young Thing—So do I. Isn't it glorious to think there is an artist living who can paint a bale of shingles? If you look at it hard enough with your head tilted you get the queerest sort of feeling! Something like being seasick and falling out of a window at the same time! The man who did that is a genius. Wouldn't you simply love to know him?"

On His Nerves.

Square Shouldered Man (with an expression of pain on his face)—Let's get out of here, Genevieve. If I stay any longer I'll say things, and then the long-haired freaks sprinkled about would hang me to one of the staircase pillars and put a frame around me and call the result an impressionistic study of an apple pie. I expect I'd look just as much like a pie as a human being. Oh, help! See that one in the corner—the purple woman with blue spots on her against a scrambled background."

Genevieve—"For goodness' sake, hush! Don't let people know you're so absolutely ignorant, George! You've got to see this exhibit, because you've got to be able to talk about it, and the sooner you do so the quicker you'll be through! You don't suppose any one really likes these pictures, do you? You're not the only one that's suffering! Come on!"

Square Shouldered Man—"I'll bet that purple woman is suffering. Gosh!"

Angel Child—"Ma, I want a drink, I want a drink, ma! Say, ma, why can't I have a dr"——

His Mother (jerking him along)—"Willie, if I hear another word out of you I'll take you into a corner and whip you good! Here, I left all that sewing and brought you just for your own good, so you'd love pictures, and then you act this way! Look at the pictures and"——

Angel Child—"Aw, I'd rather go to a nickel show! Say, I want a drink"——

Confiding Young Creature (attended by pale youth in extreme garb)——"But when your pictures are exhibited, Arthur, is the time we'll see crowds! If they only knew what a genius you are! The idea of these daubs, when you have done such marvelous things!"

Pale Youth (modestly)—"Well, it'd be kind of tough on these chaps if I spring them now. Let them have their day—I can afford to wait!"

Confiding Young Creature—"Arthur, you are the noblest man alive! You need some one to push you forward—you never do justice to yourself or to your art!"

It Was Plenty.

Woman with Cerise Hat—"There, I've made the rounds. My head aches, but I don't see why. Do you know, there are three pictures back there which I am sure hung upside down?"

Woman with Bright Violet Hat—"I don't care if they are—my shoe hurts awfully. I don't mind saying that I think the pictures are crazy, and we are all geese for wasting time looking at 'em!"

Woman with Cerise Hat—"And you the president of our culture club! My dear! I think it's just your shoe."

Woman with Bright Velvet Hat—"Well, it's something—and whatever it is, it's plenty!"

BEAUTY SECRETS OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Little Viola Dana, "The Poor Little Rich Girl," Talks to Girls in Their 'Teens

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

IF you were only fifteen and had already begun climbing the high ladder that leads to success, would you be simple and natural and truly sweet? Little Viola Dana has not come to the lofty estate of "Sweet Sixteen" yet, but she has already worked her way from music hall dancing and "movies" and vaudeville skits to the enviable position of "A regular Broadway star." And the earnest little girl means to climb higher and higher, and be right at the top of her chosen profession some day if hard work can win her way to the top.

In her dainty pink dressing room at the Hudson Theater in New York the 15-year-old star of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" looks like a real little rosebud of a girl—just as real a little girl as the Gwendolyn whose life she has stepped out of after living it for three hours.

She was pulling black silk stockings over little bare feet and ankles as I came in, and with the sweetest, unself-consciousness she shook back her soft brown curls and rose to greet me with a mixture of childish enthusiasm and womanly grace.

She believes in simple clothes for young girls.

Miss Dana as she looks on and off the stage.

"Did Gwenny make you cry?" she asked.

"YOU did," I answered, deliberately.

"Oh, that was Gwenny," said little Miss Dana. "It isn't Viola Dana out there in the play—she just gets to be Gwendolyn."

Not Self-Conscious.

"Then, of course, you aren't self-conscious if you are living your part?" I questioned with assurance.

"Oh, no. Children on the stage have to be so careful about that," said this naive child. "Some of them do well, and they are told so, and think about it all the time, and get to be such stilted little things. They just MINCE through their parts and act affected everywhere you meet them. That isn't a bit attractive—do you think so?"

"What do you think of simplicity and sweetness and naturalness as prime necessities for attractiveness? That takes in your 'unself-consciousness,'" I said.

Miss Viola gave the matter her earnest consideration. She is to all intents and purposes a dear child—but ten years of stage experience—ten years of work with growing ideals and ambitions have given her a serious quality bespeaking delightfully the woman she will be in a few years.

"I think they are all very important, and if you keep busy and live sensibly and think nice thoughts perhaps you can get to be simple and sweet—for, of course, no girl who is unnatural is a bit attractive."

"Then you believe in simple clothes for young girls?"

"Yes, indeed—but I do like pretty clothes—clothes that suit you. Are mine simple enough, do you think?" pointing to a dainty little green frock and a soft greatcoat of brown that just matched her own chestnut curls. A very girly leghorn hat went with it—and I could fancy Miss Viola looking like the dear little girl she is, instead of the silly, near-young-lady that some girls fancy they can ape more successfully than they can realize the flowerlike sweetness of their own precious never-to-come-again-youth.

"Girls have to be serious about the qualities they want to cultivate," I said, after I had paid due tribute to the embryo woman wanting sartorial praise. "Does keeping well and strong require constant attention and sacrifice?"

"Well, I think you can't have everything. You can't have all the fun you want and do well the thing you want to do, too. Now, I have to have lots of sleep, and if I go along to a party after the theater my voice Voices need such a lot of care to keep them in good condition. I take a sounds strained and horrid next day. glass of malted milk before the theater and another afterward and give up the things I like—chocolate frappes, and foolish combinations, like lobster salad and lemonade, won't do for the girl who wants to accomplish things."

"Do you call late suppers and chocolate frappes a great sacrifice?" I inquired.

"Well, I like things that aren't good for me," was the frank answer; "but I think it's worth while giving up all the little separate pleasures that only stay a minute in order to have a clear complexion, and a clear voice and a well body.

"You see, I truly want to be great some day; I want to go on and on and be some one who counts. And I'm dreaming of that sometimes even when I'm with my books or playing my violin.

"I know that if I truly want to get on I shall have to DO it. Just wishing about it won't work."

Deep Philosophy.

Deep philosophy for fifteen; and yet the girls who are soon to be women must all choose whether they will live for the joy of a fleeting second or for the "durable satisfactions" that make life worth while.

"Have you set some one as your model?" I asked. "Are you working toward a goal, or have you a live ideal whose success you want to equal?"

"Not a bit of it," said Viola Dana. "I've got to be myself, anyway—and I'd lots rather be truly myself. I don't want to imitate. I just want to make my own self do bigger and bigger things all the time.

"People ought to express themselves all the time, I think, instead of imitating some one else—in clothes and voices and thoughts. Thoughts are so wonderful, I think—nice ones give such a sweet expression to the eyes—they just shine through them. I love strong, interesting faces—the kind that belong to people who do things. Girls who are willing to just stand still aren't ever truly pretty, are they?"

The little star's eyes glowed with earnestness.

Yes, those wonderful, deep eyes are green, and she frankly confesses it.

"Maybe that's jealousy," she laughed. "I am jealous if the people I love don't love me enough and show it. You have to be worthy of it, or you don't get it. And some day every girl wants to be found worthy of the biggest love. She wants to marry. I do!"

"You are planning an even fuller and fuller life, aren't you? Work—great success—and marriage?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," said this rich little wise girl. "I want to keep my body well and strong, and to train my mind to get a great deal out of life—and to put something into it, too."

The Tyranny of Criticism

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE Kingdom of Childhood is peopled with wicked elves, ghosts, ogres and hobgoblins, and we hide our heads under the bed covers and long to be grown up that we may vanquish them, little knowing that the Land of Grown-Ups has a greater terror.

It is the tyranny of criticism, and its name is "What Will Folks Say?"

"No," a girl says, "I am not going to the party. I want to go, but I would have to wear my last season's party dress, and what would folks say?"

"We can not afford to give that dinner," a woman will frankly confess, "but if I don't pay my social obligations what will folks say?"

The sickness had been long, painful and costly, and when at last the sufferer was mercifully released the family realized that the long siege had materially diminished the bank account. There were doctors', druggists', undertaker's and nurses' bills to pay, leaving scant protection against want. "But we must buy mourning," the family declares, "for if we don't, what will folks say?"

Once Again.

A girl realizes that her lover has grown cold. Perhaps, down in her heart, she also realizes that she is not so fond of him, but she refuses to give him up as long as cajolery and tears will hold him. "I don't want any one to think I have been jilted," she says, "and if he stops coming here what will folks say?"

It is this tyranny of criticism that is the hobgoblin of the grown-ups, as fearful and real as the ghosts that clanked their chains about our beds in childhood. We hide our trembling heads under the covers, just as we did then, and lose all sense of reason because of the great ogre we have foolishly conjured to torment us.

We are not honest, we are not natural, we are distressingly self-conscious, we are not kind, we are cowardly hypocrites in the presence of a hobgoblin that has no real existence. "What will folks say?" you plead in defense of foolishness. Did you ever realize that you are of the "folks" to whom you credit such powers of condemnation? And do you, as one of the "folks," despise and condemn the woman who wears an old garment because she can not afford a new? Do you look with an air of superiority at any honesty that dares to be honest? Don't you really envy the spirit of the woman who can rise above all consciousness of clothes?

Your Reply.

You will reply that you don't condemn such a person, but that others do. And in saying this, you declare you are better than others. My dear, you are not. We are all very much alike. No one who is worth knowing puts the outward show above the inward worth. If your friends are more friendly when you are a coward, a hypocrite, and extravagant, then they are not the kind of friends worth having, and it is cheapening a very precious word to call them so.

If you meet a woman you like, and whom you would enjoy knowing better, and hesitate to invite that woman to your house because hers is finer, then you do not give her credit for being broad-minded, and are narrow-gauged yourself. It is the personality that counts; not its background or adornment.

And unless you can show yourself so strong, so broad, so big, that your test question is "Is it right?" and not "What will folks say?" you are no further advanced mentally than the child that hides its head under the covers at every unusual sound.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrinse and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, becoming an orphan, is thrown on her own resources. She finds work at the Emporium, a department store owned by Edward Glider; is accused of the theft of silks, and sent to prison, though innocent. She tells George Demarest, Glider's head lawyer, that the way to stop thievery is to pay a living wage. In prison she learned from fellow convicts why girls go wrong. She understands their point of view and sympathizes with them. Aggie Lynch, a convict friend of Mary's at Burnsing, sees good "possibilities" for her in the world of crime. Upon Mary's release the slogan "once a criminal always one," prevents her from securing work. She is continually hounded and in desperation throws herself into the North River. Joe Garson, a forger, rescues her and keeps her and Aggie in luxury, though living chaste lives. Mary reads that a famous financier escapes prison through keeping within the letter of the law. She follows his example and becomes the leader of a band of swindlers, robbing only the unscrupulous. Glider's son Dick meets and loves Mary, who seeks to wreak vengeance on the father through the son. Aggie poses as her cousin, and they pretend to be respectable. They are visited by Detective Cassidy, who tries to scare Mary into leaving town through threats. He is laughed at for his pains, because she was "within the law." The detective, before leaving again, tells Aggie and Joe Garson that "there'll be trouble" for them unless they get out of town.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

There was not the change of a feature in the face of the woman who listened to the accusation. Her eyes steadfastly retained their clear gaze into his; her voice was still coldly formal, as before.

"If it's blackmail, Mr. Irwin, why don't you consult the police?" she inquired, with manifest disdain. Mary turned to the maid, who now entered in response to the bell she had sounded a minute before. "Fanny, will you ask Miss Lynch to come in, please?" Then she faced the lawyer again, with an aloofness of manner that was contemptuous. "Really, Mr. Irwin," she drawled, "why don't you take this matter to the police?"

The reply was uttered with conspicuous exasperation.

Police Wouldn't Keep It Secret.

"You know perfectly well," the lawyer said bitterly, "that General Hastings can not afford such publicity. His position would be jeopardized."

"Oh, as for that," Mary suggested evenly, and now there was a trace of flippancy in her fashion of speaking, "I am sure the police would keep your complaint a secret. Really, you know, Mr. Irwin, I think you had better take your trouble to the police, rather than to me. You will get much more sympathy from them."

The lawyer sprang up, with an air of sudden determination.

"Very well, I will then," he declared, sternly. "I will."

Mary, from her vantage point at the desk across from him, smiled a smile that would have been very engaging to any man under more favorable circumstances, and she pushed in his direction the telephone that stood there.

"3100 Spring," she remarked encouragingly, "will bring an officer almost immediately." She leaned back in her chair and surveyed the baffled man amusedly.

The lawyer was furious over the failure of his effort to intimidate this extraordinarily self-possessed young woman, who made a mock of his every thrust. But he was by no means at the end of his resources.

"Nevertheless," he rejoined, "you know perfectly well that General Hastings never promised to marry this girl. You know——" He broke off as Aggie entered the drawing room.

Now, the girl was demure in seeming almost beyond belief, a childish creature, very fair and dainty, guileless surely, with those untroubled eyes of blue, those softly curving lips of warmest red and the more delicate bloom in the rounded cheeks. There were the charms of innocence and simplicity in the manner of her as she stopped just within the doorway, whence she regarded Mary with a timid, pleading gaze, her slender little form poised lightly as if for flight.

"Did you want me, dear?" she asked. There was something half-plaintive in the modulated cadences of the query.

"Agnes," Mary answered affectionately, "this is Mr. Irwin, who has come to see you in behalf of General Hastings."

"Oh!" the girl murmured, her voice quivering a little, as the lawyer, after a short nod, dropped again into his seat; "oh, I'm so frightened!" She hurried, fluttering, to a low stool behind the desk, beside Mary's chair, and there she sank down, drooping slightly, and catching hold of one of Mary's hands as if in mute pleading for protection against the fear that beset her chaste soul.

"Nonsense!" Mary exclaimed soothingly. "There's really nothing at all to be frightened about, my dear child." Her voice was that with which one seeks to cajole a terrified infant. "You mustn't be afraid, Agnes. Mr. Irwin says that General Hastings did not promise to marry you. Of course, you understand, my dear, that under no circumstances must you say anything that isn't strictly true and that, if he did not promise to marry you, you have no case—none at all. Now, Agnes, tell me; did General Hastings promise to marry you?"

"Oh, yes—oh, yes, indeed!" Aggie cried, falteringly. "And I wish he would. He's such a delightful old gentleman!" As she spoke, the girl let go Mary's hand and clasped her own together ecstatically.

He Scowled Disgustedly.

The legal representative of the delightful old gentleman scowled disgustedly at this outburst. His voice was portentous, as he put a question.

"Was that promise made in writing?"

"No," Aggie answered, gushingly. "But all his letters were in writing, you know. Such wonderful letters!" She raised her blue eyes toward the ceiling in a naive rapture. "So tender and so—ur—interesting!" Somehow, the inflection on the last word did not altogether suggest the ingenuous.

"Yes, yes, I dare say," Irwin agreed, hastily, with some evidences of chagrin. He had no intention of dwelling on that feature of the letters, concerning which he had no doubt whatsoever, since he knew the amorous general very well, indeed. They would be interesting, beyond shadow of questioning, horridly interesting. Such was the confessed opinion of the swain himself who had written them in his folly—horribly interesting to all the reading public of the country, since the general was a conspicuous figure.

Mary intervened with a suavity that infuriated the lawyer almost beyond endurance.

"But you're quite sure, Agnes," she questioned gently, "that General Hastings did promise to marry you?" The candor of her manner was perfect.

And the answer of Aggie was given with a like convincing emphasis.

"Oh, yes!" she declared, tensely. "Why, I would swear to it." The limpid eyes, so appealing in their soft lusters, went first to Mary, then gazed trustingly into those of the routed attorney.

"You see, Mr. Irwin, she would swear to that," emphasized Mary.

"We're beaten," he confessed, dejectedly, turning his glance toward Mary, whom, plainly, he regarded as his real adversary in the combat on his client's behalf. "I'm going to be quite frank with you, Miss Turner, quite frank," he stated with more geniality, though with a very crestfallen air. Somehow, indeed, there was just a shade too much of the crestfallen in the fashion of his utterance, and the woman whom he addressed watched warily as he continued. "We can't afford any scandal, so we're going to settle at your own terms." He paused expectantly, but Mary offered no comment; only maintained her alert scrutiny of the man. The lawyer, therefore, leaned forward with a semblance of frank eagerness. Instantly, Aggie had become agog with greedily blissful anticipations, and she uttered a slight ejaculation of joy; but Irwin paid no heed to her. He was occupied in taking from his pocket a thick bill case, and from this presently a sheaf of banknotes, which he laid on the desk before Mary, with a little laugh of discomfiture over having been beaten in the contest.

As he did so, Aggie thrust forth an avaricious hand, but it was caught and held by Mary before it reached above the top of the desk, and the avaricious gesture passed unobserved by the attorney.

"We can't fight where ladies are concerned," he went on, assuming, as best he might contrive, a chivalrous tone. "So, if you will just hand over General Hastings' letters, why, here's your money."

Much to the speaker's surprise, there followed an interval of silence, and his puzzlement showed in the knitting of his brows. "You have the letters, haven't you?" he demanded, abruptly.

Aggie coyly took a thick bundle from its resting place on her rounded bosom.

"They never leave me," she murmured, with dulcet passion. There was in her voice a suggestion of desolation—a desolation that was the blighting effect of letting the cherished missives go from her.

WOMAN'S DANGER PERIOD

is said to be from 45 to 50. What should be a most natural change in a woman's life, is, on account of modern methods of living, fraught with most annoying and painful symptoms. Women when passing through this critical period should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it has proved wonderfully successful in carrying women safely through the change of life.

Feeding Chickens For Egg Production

Should Begin When the Chick Is Hatched—Lay Foundation Early.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Feeding for egg production should be commenced when the chick is hatched, and there should not be a skip or a jump from start to finish. In other words, to lay the foundation for early and continuous layers the chicken must be well nourished from the time it is hatched until laying maturity.

One of the common complaints in the fall is that the pullets do not commence to lay as early as they should. The reason is they are not ready to lay; they are not fully developed. They have not had sufficient nourishment, and therefore run a month or two over the usual laying period.

A constant and varied supply of good, wholesome foods is the remedy that should be applied, and we know of no better way to accomplish the end sought than by the hopper feeding process. Where the pullet as a chick has been hopper fed with good mixed grains and beefscrap, where a large flock is maintained and the supply of insects is not sufficient to give the animal matter needed, the chances are that it will begin to lay early and keep it up through the winter.

When the feeding is done at intervals it is a difficult matter to feed all that is needed, and as a consequence the chick does not make the best possible growth.

To make good winter layers, do not yard or confine the pullets too early, but allow them to range as long as possible. They will then settle down to steady egg production when they are cooped and will continue through the winter. A convenient size for 50 growing chicks would be 12 by 20 inches at the top and 2 by 20 inches at the bottom and 20 inches deep, with a base extending 3 inches on each side, with 3-inch side to keep the grain from falling out; an inch slit at the bottom of the hopper to allow grain to come out into the tray part, where it is picked out by the chicks. The hopper should be kept under a shelter of some sort to keep the feed dry, which prevents it spoiling. A chicken may eat a little more the first day or two, but after that I do not believe it takes as much to feed them in that way as it does to allow them to become ravenously hungry and then gorge themselves; the repeating of which often causes indigestion and serious results.

Questions and Answers.

Judge Marshall: Can you tell me of some way to get soil stain from the shells of white eggs? I keep a fine lot of White Leghorns, laying pure white eggs, but the red soil here stains them so it can not be washed off so it will not show when sent to market. If you can be of any help to me, I shall certainly be thankful for the service. R. C. B.

Rome, Ga.

ANSWER—It would be a pretty hard matter to get anything that will readily take these mud stains off the shell without injuring the shell or its contents. We see no reason why any considerable number of your eggs should be stained. You should provide good nesting places for your hens, filling them with good litter of some kind that will keep them off the ground. You might try dipping them in alcohol and then rubbing them with a clean cloth. If nice, roomy nest boxes are provided and put in rather dark or secluded places, you should have but little trouble in getting all your hens to use them. Of course, you must have a sufficient number of them, so that hens will not get tired of waiting for room and be obliged to take to the ground.

The People Must Now Depend Upon the Senate for Genuine Reciprocity Provisions in Tariff Bill.

It is upon the Senate that the people must depend for genuine reciprocity provisions in the tariff bill.

The Senate will not be driven into line by a caucus whip. It will have a chance to treat a serious matter with the deliberation it deserves.

There are good reasons for believing that the Senate has ceased to be what it once was—the stronghold of party regularity and of those special interests that have for so long practiced the arts of party regimentation and applied the strangulation of the party gag. There are good reasons for believing that the Senate will respond to the well-nigh unanimous popular demand for real and efficient reciprocity.

The tariff bill was sent to the Senate tagged with the empty NAME of reciprocity, but with no SUBSTANCE of reciprocity in it. It would give away—ABSOLUTELY AND WITHOUT CONDITION—to Canada and other nations trade privileges and immunities that ought to be reserved and kept for the present in our own hands AS A BASIS FOR TARIFF BARGAINING. It would fling a long "free list" at the feet of our trade rivals—WITHOUT ASKING ANY FREEDOM FOR OUR OWN COMMERCE IN RETURN.

Thus the tariff as it stands is not merely wrong in a hundred details. It is wrong in principle. It flouts the very principle that it so loudly proclaims. It makes a mockery of reciprocity.

The fact that the tariff bill in its present shape is not only unreasonable, but in many namable respects CONSCIOUSLY and RECKLESSLY unreasonable, may be illustrated by the particular status of the schedule that has to do with the various grain staples—wheat, oats, rye, buckwheat—and their manufactured products.

When the bill first went to caucus a tax of 10 per cent or so was placed on all these staples, while in every case the foodstuffs made from them by various manufacturing processes WERE ALL PUT UPON THE FREE LIST.

The obvious effect of such an arrangement would be TO DRIVE MOST OF OUR FOOD MANUFACTURING BUSINESS INTO CANADA—with very damaging consequences not only to our manufacturers, but also to our farmers.

Now note the reckless and irresponsible character of the House's tariff tinkering, as shown in this grain schedule. It turns out that the House has been driven by pressure from certain quarters to put natural rye and buckwheat, as well as their manufactured products, on the free list. BUT IT HAS ALLOWED THE 10 PER CENT TAX TO STAND AGAINST NATURAL UNMANUFACTURED WHEAT AND OATS.

There is no earthly reason why this discrimination should have been made—at least no reason fit to print.

The whole grain schedule in its original form was topsy-turvy and preposterous—damaging to every legitimate American interest. As it now stands it outrages every principle of reciprocity and has, besides, lost the consistency and logicality of its original foolishness.

IS THERE ANY MEMBER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES WHO WILL DARE STAND UP AND JUSTIFY THE GRAIN SCHEDULE ON GROUNDS OF RECIPROCITY—OR OF RATIONALITY?

Some More Law on Canal Tolls

In a leading editorial expression in the current Bench and Bar the editors declare, as legal experts, that the provision of the Panama Canal bill to exempt from tolls American coastwise shipping does not seem to contravene any article of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. They say:

"We confess to having been much impressed by Senator O'Gorman's address before the Senate, in which the position was taken that the provision of the canal bill to exempt from tolls American coastwise shipping is not in contravention of Article III of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

"That is to say, as there is nothing to prevent the other nations, including Great Britain, from remitting or reimbursing by subsidy or otherwise all tolls paid by their citizens or subjects for vessels making use of the canal, it is unreasonable to suppose that the United States, by whose money and genius the canal was made possible, may not do likewise with reference to its own citizens.

"In other words, we can see no great difference, in principle, between the right of the United States to reimburse and its right to remit or exempt, and to hold that this country might not exempt its own shipping from tolls would, it seems to us, be to deprive it of a power which clearly resides in every other nation which may make use of the canal."

.:. Sending Messages and Carrying Them .:.

By ELBERT HUBBARD.

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

IT is, of course, very necessary that when you are intrusted with a message you shall deliver it to the right party in the least possible space of time.

The man, however, who intrusts another with a message has a duty to perform quite as much as the man who is given one.

There are men who can never get messages carried, and other men there be who inspire messengers with loyalty, fidelity and courage.

It is a somewhat curious thing that the most able men are never good teachers. "The great teacher," says Emerson, "is not the man who supplies the most facts, but the one in whose presence we become different people."

Too much individuality repels, overawes, subdues. An overpowering personality is a willopus-wallopus—in other words, a steam-roller that flattens anything and everybody in the vicinity.

Making Merchants.

In the United States there are a few merchants who are discoverers of genius, but most are served by the mediocre, not to mention the time-server, the flunkey, the hypocrite and the lickspittle.

One great merchant in the United States lives in history, not only because he was a great merchant, but because he discovered to the world fully a half-dozen other great merchants. That is, he took young men, gave them an opportunity, and under his beneficent guiding influence these country boys bloomed and blossomed.

When you expect a messenger to deliver a message it is well not to hamper him with too many instructions, nor scare him into innocuous desuetude by retailing the dangers that he will encounter, describing for him the punishment he will receive if he fails to deliver the message.

It is a great man who knows when to place reliance in another, to relegate and delegate and keep discipline out of sight. To let one line of figures at the bottom of the balance sheet tell the tale. This is genius.

Genius in Selection.

Of course, if you repose confidence in the wrong man you will rue it, but genius turns on selection. Big men, nowadays, are big because they get others to do their work.

Napoleon said: "I win my battles with my marshals!" And then when he was asked where he got his marshals, he said: "I make them out of mud!"

What he meant was that he took obscure men and lifted them into positions of prominence by throwing responsibility on them.

Note the loyalty and love of Bertrand, who followed his master to St. Helena, giving up home, religion, family and all of his own private interests that he might serve his master—even refusing to leave his master when he was dead, but remaining at St. Helena in order that his own dust might mingle in the grave with this man he loved.

ELBERT HUBBARD.

Any one who can inspire another with such love cannot be obliterated by the scratch of the pen or the shrug of a shoulder.

Napoleon certainly had personality; at the same time he did not use it to destroy the personality of others.

Ben Lindsey's Boys.

Great is the man—supremely great—who does not bestride the narrow world like a colossus and cause other men to run and peep about under his huge legs to find themselves dishonorable graves.

The world is big enough for all of us, and a very good slogan is: "Make room! Make room!" And if you are bound to give an order, let it be this: "Open up that gangway!"

Ben Lindsey has entrusted a thousand boys, each with a message, and the message he gave them was their commitment papers.

These boys carried the message; and out of the thousand a scant half dozen proved derelict. And just remember that all of these boys belonged to the "criminal class!"

Let us here quote Napoleon again, who said: "The criminal class? Ah, yes, I fight my battles with the criminal class!"

To entrust a message to a messenger with the full confidence that he will do naught else but deliver it to the proper person, and this expeditiously, is a fine art that employers would do well to acquire.

A trusted messenger is fine, but a trusting employer is finer still.

A breath of suspicion will taint the whole fabric of trust. If Ben Lindsey doubted that his boys would go where they were sent, very few of them would ever reach the iron gates and hear their clanging welcome.

A Fine Idea.

The secret of Ben Lindsey's success is simple: he believes in his boys. And that is why the boys believe in him.

Ben Lindsey kissing the cheek of a bad boy and sending the lad away to prison alone, unattended, uncoerced, is a finer thing to me than Napoleon's habit of pulling down the head of one of his marshals and kissing the bearded cheek.

"Know thyself!" said Socrates.

"Trust thyself!" said Emerson.

"Trust others!" says Ben Lindsey.

When President McKinley gave that message to Rowan he trusted Rowan to carry it. There were no instructions, no threats, no implied doubts, no injunctions. Rowan asked no questions; neither did McKinley.

The big man is not the man who wants to live not only his own life but the life of others, but he is great who reposes faith in others, and thus brings out the best that is in them, that which was often before unguessed.

The Country as Seen by a City Man

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

FAR from the glad cries of the traffic policeman to the patient truck driver the pleasant perfume of the gas mains, and the joyous tumult of the shoppers' crush is a strange, weird region called The Country.

Keep away from it! For miles and miles you may wander its monotonous green wastes and never hear the reverberating music of a trolley car rounding a curve.

You will miss the kindly warning of the chauffeur as you crawl from beneath the wheels of his car; your heart will be heavy with homesickness for the freshly turned earth on the torn up streets, and the dainty plank walks around excavations for new buildings.

No Safes Going Up.

There are no flats in the country. There are no gala block-long displays of family washing swung between brick dwellings, like the fluttering pennants on a holiday-dressed man-of-war. No safes destined for the thirty-second story of a highly thatched skyscraper part their hawsers and come hurtling down to the pavement, to provide edification to all nearby populace save that portion that happens to be directly underneath. Never does a fire chief drive unconventionally down the sidewalk execrating the fleeing public as he sweeps by. Never does an ambulance on its splendid errand of mercy crash madly through a crowd, and make business for the other ambulances that follow in its wake.

Evil and savage beasts confront you at every turn. Horned monsters that cry "Moo" and leer at you with lambent fire in their fearsome brown eyes; reptiles that sit on logs chorusing "cheep, cheep," until you approach, and then plunge suspiciously into pools as if distrustful of your presence; long-eared, white-tailed creatures that flicker across your path like flashes of light or peer at you silent and sinister from behind stone walls; winged creatures with plumage copied from women's hats, that chatter in the boughs of trees at sunset, and are up at the first blush of dawn to break your rest with their shrill piping.

All Poets Are Mad!

From the earth and from the dark green woods come scents that startle and disquiet you—not the familiar smells of banana peels, and coal smoke and sewer manholes, but disturbing unrecognized odors that proceed from tawdry, flimsy creations called flowers, that have their roots in the common dingy ground.

A mad poet—all poets are mad, but this one was madder than most of his fellows—once wrote:

"They come, the merry summer months, with beauty, song and flowers,
They come, the glad-some months that bring thick leafiness to bowers,
Up! Up! My soul, and walk abroad; fling cark and care aside;
Seek silent woods, or rest thyself where peaceful waters glide;
Or underneath the shadow vast of patriarchal tree
Scan through its leaves the boundless sky, in rapt tranquility."

Pay no attention to this lunatic rhapsody. Keep away from The Country—especially in spring.

John Temple Graves Writes on England's Insurance Against Attack

No Nation Would Ever Attack This Country, He Says, if Our Navy Were Ample For Self-Defense—If It were Large Enough to Protect Both Our Atlantic and Pacific Coasts.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

DR. LYMAN ABBOTT is receiving the merited congratulations of his countrymen for the level-headed common sense of his position as an advocate of universal peace.

Dr. Abbott is constitutionally an advocate of peace. He is temperamentally a man of common sense.

And the peace societies which have sought to discipline him by dismissing him from their membership have emphasized in a very great degree the eminent soundness of Dr. Abbott's method of promoting universal peace.

The best way to promote peace is to be prepared for war.

There was never a sounder maxim in history or experience. England has been for four hundred years the prophet and exponent of that doctrine among nations. And England's evangel has gone far as the curse of war is found and has presented a great example as the vindication of a wise and far-seeing policy.

Immune From Attacks.

There can be no answer by the "peace-at-any-price" men to the fact that with the greatest navy in the world England has been absolutely immune from attacks by any foreign nation and absolutely exempt from any war which she did not choose to make.

No nation has attacked England within these four centuries. No nation would attack any other country that had as great a navy as England. No nation would ever attack this country if our navy were ample for self-defense—if it were large enough to protect both our Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

This fact is so true and so self-evident that it is worthy to be an axiom. It is so true and has been so conspicuously vindicated as true that it is simply wonderful that other nations, and particularly our own nation, has not had the common sense to follow it.

Our Own Navy.

The present size of our navy, inadequate as it is, will explain the fact that we have enjoyed a comparative exemption so long as we had no navy, and England one hundred years ago took advantage of our poverty in warships, sailed up our majestic Potomac and laid the capital of this Republic in ashes.

Germany, the most martial of European nations, realizes the common sense which Dr. Abbott has so placidly expressed, and is constantly building its navy to the standard of preserving peace.

Japan has expressed every progressive step in its modern development by the yearly reinforcement of its navy. The teachable genius of Japan is vigorously illustrated in the fact that its answer to the suggestions of the present controversy with the United States is to give an order for three great battleships at once.

For Universal Peace.

There are no sincerer advocates of universal peace than the Hearst newspapers. The editorial page of The New York American contained the article written three years ago on Christmas Day which revived the sentiment for universal peace throughout the world. Copies of that editorial were sent by distinguished hands to the rulers and chief authorities of every great kingdom in the world. It represented, I think, the spirit of the Hearst newspapers. And it was regarded and reproduced as one of the soundest and most effective arguments ever written for universal peace.

But the spirit of that utterance, like the spirit of Lyman Abbott, was the spirit of prudence and of common sense. It realized the fact that no nation can fold its hands and throw away its fighting power while other nations increase their fighting power. Dr. Abbott expressed it in an effective epigram:

An Alternative.

"There are two ways in which a nation can maintain peace. Either by being so weak that it can not fight, or by being so strong that nobody wants to fight it. Our nation should be so strong it will never have to fight."

By and by, when the great nations fully realize that each one is in the race of great navies to stay as long as the others stay, the universal common sense will bring about the universal agreement of nations to cease the building of navies and to submit all quarrels to just tribunals for decision.

But until that day there is no wise or patriotic thing to do but to keep the pace and keep up with the procession, and, as far as national resources will allow, to lead the procession as the United States can do.

The United States Congress will demonstrate the narrowness of its judgment, the weakness of its comprehension and the lack of patriotism in its ranks, if it fails to keep this country side by side with every other great country so long as great navies are the only peace-makers and the only insurance policies against the destruction of war.

We are able to pay $20,000,000 a year as an insurance against war. Let this Congress take out the policy.

The Story of the Loyalists

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE hundred and thirty-five years ago a little company of men, women and children, numbering altogether some hundred and ninety-six souls, turned and struck out for the wilds of Canada.

It was the beginning of the exodus of the "Tories," or, as they called themselves, the "Loyalists." Starting soon after the American Declaration of Independence, the movement broadened and deepened until it took in tens of thousands. It has been estimated that more than one hundred thousand American colonists took refuge in Canada between 1778 and 1784.

These Tories, or Loyalists, were to be found in all the colonies, and in large numbers. Some authorities of acknowledged respectability declare that they were as numerous as the Patriots and in many localities outnumbered them. They were strong in New York State, in North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

In wealth, education and social standing they were far superior to the Whigs, or Patriots. To them belonged nearly all of the "leading families" and "distinguished individuals" of the time. The ancestors of many of the prominent New Yorkers and other influential Americans of to-day were among those who emigrated to Canada rather than live under the banner of the rebeldom.

One of the good things about Time is that it heals wounds, cools passion and opens the eyes of the understanding, so that we can see with unclouded vision the things to which we were once blinded.

The Tories believed that it was their duty to be loyal to the British King and nation, and in obedience to that conviction they stood ready to sacrifice the most precious things that "mortal time affords"—home, wealth, comfort, the good will of their neighbors—yes, and life itself.

From a sense of duty the Loyalists forsook all these things and cast themselves into the bleak, wild, inhospitable wilderness of the North, to suffer unspeakable privations and perils; and small is the mind that is not able to see in all this the highest and grandest of manhood—the Manhood of Principle, the manhood which cheerfully accepts the work in order that it may be faithful to that which it believes to be right.

Absolute truth and right is a mere chimera. The only truth and right that mortals can know anything about, or should be at all concerned about, is that which really and truly commends itself to them as such. The Eternal alone knows what is actually right, and the only thing for us to do is to stand true to that which we honestly feel to be right.

That's what the Tories did. That's what the Patriots did. And they were both right.

FORMER JUDGE CANDLER ON LACK OF RESPECT FOR THE LAW

John S. Candler, now Alderman, and former Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, and previous to this Judge in the Superior Court, made an address to the graduating class of the Atlanta Law School in which he said:

"The idea of taking an ignorant man, working on him until 4 o'clock in the morning, then flarin a flashlight in his face and saying, 'We know you killed somebody,' is worse than the Spanish inquisition. Such a practice has no place in the law, and that's why the public are losing confidence in and respect for the officers of the court.

"A detective who would voluntarily go on the stand ought not to be believed. The purpose of a detective is to find evidence, and not to swear that the evidence he has is true. The detective is interested to convict the man whom his evidence involves, and, therefore, he is not a competent witness."

MILITANT RIOTS GIVE BIG BOOST TO INSURANCE

Damage Already Reaches Into Millions—Golf Links Are Protected Against Loss.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS GUARDED

Attack on House of Lords Planned by Suffrage Leaders as Next Move.

LONDON, May 11.—Inquiries instituted at Lloyd's have developed the fact that the insurance companies are reaping a golden harvest as a result of suffragette depredations. Business has received a great impetus both from the insurance of golf links as well as from fire risks.

Numerous golf clubs have insured against revenue losses as the result of militant interference, while others have taken out policies insuring golf greens against damage by suffragettes. The premiums charged are $5 per green per annum, the limit of the underwriters' liability being $250 on each green.

These insurances, however, were mostly for three months, because it is believed that the trouble will be settled in that time either by a triumph of the militants or by the suppression of their campaign.

Insurance against fire has been equally brisk, but owing to the great competition in this business rates have not been affected.

Damage to Date $5,000,000.

Estimates of the financial loss caused by suffragette outrages, prepared for the Home Secretary, put the amount as $5,000,000. This sum does not include the expense of employing large numbers of extra police, detectives and watchmen to protect Ministers, public buildings and meetings.

Three detectives have been assigned to protect each Cabinet Minister at all times. All suspected persons are shadowed by plainclothes men and all public buildings are under special guard.

Since the defeat of the woman suffrage bill large numbers of former constitutional suffragists have joined the militant movement. An attack on the House of Lords is one of the new plans, and this is to be accomplished by means of a suffragette typist who could get a position on the reporting staff of the upper house.

Arrests Check Riots.

In spite of the sensational outrages of the past week and although the militants are keeping up a strong bluff, their organization has been shaken by recent arrests of leaders. The militant acts now being committed are the handiwork of suffragettes working independently, and the authorities believe that the removing of the central controlling influences will soon break up the campaign of destruction.

This optimistic view is not shared by politicians generally, who believe that as long as money is forthcoming crimes will be committed.

Accuser of O'Hara Now Denies Charge

Maud Robinson Admits Signing Affidavit, but Says It Contained No Allegation of Immorality.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Maud Robinson, who signed an affidavit charging improper conduct against Barratt O'Hara, Lieutenant Governor of Illinois and chairman of the Senate White Slave Committee, was the first witness to-day before a sub-committee appointed to investigate the affair. She denied absolutely that there had been anything improper in her relations with the Lieutenant Governor.

She admitted signing an affidavit, but said it contained no charge of immorality.

The woman testified that she had never had improper relations with O'Hara. When she was questioned as to her making the affidavit about a trip to Chicago from Springfield, she said the affidavit was made at the instance of Samuel Davis, of a liquor firm in Springfield.

"He said the affidavit was only to make a bluff with and that it would not be made public under any circumstances," she explained.

Fight Over Tallulah Falls On in Earnest

Georgia University Professors Make Depositions—Case Comes Up for Hearing May 26.

Professors C. M. Streng and J. C. Cope, of the University of Georgia, and John D. Moss made depositions to-day in the case of the State against the Georgia Railway and Power Company.

This is the beginning of the fight of the conservationists, headed by Mrs. Longstreet, to preserve Tallulah Falls, which they claim will be irreparably spoiled as a scenic spectacle if the Georgia Railway and Power Company is allowed to operate the huge power plant it has built at the falls.

The case comes up for hearing May 26 at Clayton, Rabun County. Thomas S. Felder, Attorney General, will be assisted by R. C. Ellis and Edgar Watkins. The power company is represented by Charles Hopkins, L. Z. Rosser and Alex Kipp.

Seventh and Eighth Grades Give Folk Songs in Auditorium Gay With Class Colors.

Gay with their school colors, 1,000 pupils of the eighth grades of the public schools, assisted by picked representatives from the seventh grades, gave a choral festival at the Auditorium Friday night.

"Folk Songs of Many Countries" made up the program. Miss Kate Harralson, director of music in the schools, led the chorus, and Dr. Percy Starnes played organ accompaniments.

Thirty-five schools were represented. The seventh grade singers were from the Crew Street, Edgewood, Calhoun Street, Formwalt Street, Peeples Street, Lee Street, Pryor Street and Williams Street schools.

High School boys acted as ushers and distributed programs.

Railroad Displaces Last Illinois Stage

Drivers Lay Down Whips and Attend Dedication of New Line That Ends Their Business.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Ten stage drivers, the last of their tribe in Illinois, put aside their long whips today and attended the dedication of the 15-mile stretch of railroad from Palatine and Wauconda, Ill., 35 miles northwest of Chicago, which put them out of business.

The stage drivers made their last trips yesterday, conveying passengers, freight and mail to the nearest railroad points. To-day the last spike was driven into the railroad track that connects Wauconda with the rest of the world.

The railroad was financed and built by farmers.

TROLLEY STRIKE FAILS TO STOP CINCINNATI SERVICE

CINCINNATI, May 12.—Despite the fact that more men quit work to-day in the Cincinnati street car strike, the company had little trouble maintaining schedules on all but a few of the smaller routes. No disorder of any kind occurred this morning.

Further reinforcements are expected by the strikers during the day.

DARDEN SUES TO TAKE CHILDREN FROM HIS WIFE

Convicted Slayer of C. M. Goddard Swears Out Habeas Corpus Writ.

COURT SETS HEARING MAY 17

Injunction Served as Woman Is About to Leave Atlanta for Vermont.

Elmer T. Darden, convicted slayer, swore out a writ of habeas corpus Saturday to take from his wife, Naomi Carter Darden, the custody of their four children, on the grounds that she is not a fit person to have the care of them.

Darden is under bond pending a hearing of an appeal of his case. He was sentenced to three years on the chaingang for killing C. M. Goddard, despite his plea of the "unwritten law."

A temporary injunction, granted by Judge J. T. Pendleton, was served on Mrs. Darden Saturday at her home on Crew Street, just as she was preparing to leave for the station to take a train for Vermont. Judge Pendleton named May 17 as the date for the trial, and in the meantime Mrs. Darden was commanded not to leave the county.

The children are Naomi, age twelve; Elmer T., Jr., age ten; Rodney, age six, and Emma, age three.

Darden alleged that his wife, from whom he is separated, intended to take the children to a permanent home outside the State of Georgia. He said the responsibility for their education and care rested mainly on him and he wanted them taken from her.

Darden is represented by Attorneys John S. McClelland and W. M. Smith.

Vegetable Wagon Merely Liquor Van

Negro Seen Taking Sack From Vehicle, and, Pursued, Cornered With Contraband Goods.

When a countryman early Saturday drove through Haynes Street crying out fresh country vegetables for sale, James Crawford, a negro, was seen to step into the street and lift from the bottom of the wagon a half filled tow sack.

Other negroes thought him a thief and gave chase. Crawford ran into a building at Haynes and Dover Streets, where he was cornered and held until Police Call Officers Cochran and Long arrived. The sack was found to contain a wholesale supply of liquor.

The negro admitted to the police that he had bought the liquor from the "vegetable man," declaring the farmer was selling liquor from the wagon and was merely using the vegetables as a blind. A search was made for the farmer, but he could not be found.

Recorder Broyles fined the negro $50.75.

Bride-to-Be Was Bride-in-Fact

Wedding Date Fixed for June 1

But Miss Slater Chose April 27

MRS. HOWELL B. SCHUMPERT.

Becomes Mrs. Harrell B. Schumpert on Day She Announced Engagement.

Not content to wait until the first Sunday in June to be married, once their engagement had been announced, pretty Miss Lillian Dua Juan Slater, of 136 Rawson Street, and Howell B. Schumpert, 185 Washington Street, went to the parsonage of the Rev. W. C. Schaeffer on April 27—the day their friends were given notice of the impending marriage—and were wed. Their friends—even the bride's parents—will be surprised when they read the news to-day.

From parents, friends and acquaintances the marriage has been kept secret, Miss Slater, or Mrs. Schumpert, going to her home and Schumpert to his boarding house. Since the marriage the newspapers have published the picture of the young woman as a pretty bride-to-be of June, and both have smiled, content to wait until a little rose-bower of a cottage in Stokes Avenue was finished for their occupancy.

Confesses When Shown Proofs.

Smiling gayly, Mrs. Schumpert admitted all the interesting details today when the records in the Ordinary's office were placed before her as conclusive proof that she had married ahead of time.

"Yes," she said, "Howell and I went to church on April 27, the day our engagement was made public. After the service he said he wanted to show me something, and he pulled out a marriage license he had bought. He wanted to get married right away, and I didn't see the use of waiting until June.

"So, with two friends, Miss Inez Roart and Marvin Beddingfield, whom we knew we could trust, we went around to Rev. Mr. Schaeffer's house and were married.

Even Father Doesn't Know.

"No, even my father doesn't know about it, but I don't think he will object, because he likes Howell, but I am sorry it came out to-day, as we wanted to wait until our house is finished before we told everybody.

"It was so funny to see my picture in the paper, saying that I was engaged, when I was really married, but we had decided not to tell, so we kept mum."

Wore Other Fellow's Roses.

Miss Slater, who works in the office of the auditor of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, has been passing her husband's house in Washington Street every morning since the marriage. He has waited for her on the porch, and together they have strolled downtown, discussing the little house in Stokes Avenue, but saying never a word of the marriage.

"It was funny," said Mrs. Schumpert, "that I should have worn a bunch of roses on the night of my wedding that another fellow sent to me, but I didn't expect to get married until Howell showed me the marriage license."

Bankers Look Upon Atlanta With Favor

Joseph A. McCord and J. K. Ottley Confident Convention Will Come Here After Invitation.

Atlanta has an excellent chance to be convention city for the American Bankers' Association in 1914.

Joseph A. McCord, vice president of the Third National Bank, returned Saturday from a meeting of the Executive Council of the association at Briarcliff, N. Y., expressing confidence that the annual gathering will be held here next year. Mr. McCord and J. K. Ottley, vice president of the Fourth National, carried the Atlanta Clearing House invitation. Mr. McCord said they met with a hearty reception.

"I think we shall have the honor of playing host," said Mr. McCord. "Up to the present time, no other city has extended an invitation. Competition, though, usually is keen when the general convention meets.

Bulgaria and Servia Agree to Peace Pact

Rumor of Threatened Hostilities Started for Political Purposes, Believed in Austria.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

VIENNA, May 12.—Threatened hostilities between Bulgaria and Servia have been avoided, according to dispatches published to-day in the official press. These said the two Balkan countries had reached an agreement respecting the redivision of the territory conquered from Turkey.

As a mark of pacific intention, each country has agreed to demobilize as soon as peace is declared.

Many persons in officialdom believe recent reports of dissension in the Balkan League were encouraged by the members of the confederation for political purposes.

Three Men Held for Mysterious Stabbing

Painter Slashed at Vaduct, Unable to Tell Who Cut Him, Is Also Arrested by Police.

Three men were held in the police station Saturday as the result of the mysterious stabbing of W. C. Joiner, a painter living at 455 Whitehall Street.

Joiner, who was badly slashed across the face, said he was cut by a man he did not know, who ran past him on Viaduct Way, near Peachtree Street. L. Edge, a salesman, of 731 Woodward Avenue, and T. C. Lampkin and W. F. Lampkin, father and son, of 33 Simpson Street, on the viaduct at the time, were arrested.

Edge admitted he ran through Viaduct Way to board a car, but denied doing the cutting.

Joiner is also held in the police station.

GUARD OF SECRECY IS THROWN ABOUT PHAGAN SEARCH BY SOLICITOR

Names of Witnesses Withheld by Dorsey to Prevent "Manufacturers of Public Opinion" Getting in Touch with Them---Satisfied with Progress.

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey declared Saturday afternoon that he was very well satisfied with the progress made in the investigation of the Phagan murder mystery and made the significant remark that he would not reveal the names of new witnesses so that manufacturers of public opinion could not get to them.

The Solicitor held a conference with Dr. H. F. Harris, of the State Board of Health, who examined the girl's body. Dr. Harris said he would rush his report in time for presentation to the Grand Jury when that body takes up the mystery next week. The Solicitor would not reveal just what the physician has learned so far.

The examination of the blood-stained shirt in the back yard of Newt Lee's home was also continued, and the Solicitor was far from convinced that its significance had been rightly determined.

Mr. Dorsey worked all day Saturday on the case and announced that he would continue all of Sunday so that he could present his evidence to the Grand Jury as early as possible next week.

Confers With City Sleuths.

A conference was held with the city detectives, who are working in co-operation with the State, but none of the details could be learned. Strict secrecy is being maintained regarding new developments.

Evidence "exclusive and valuable" in the Mary Phagan case has been obtained. So much the Solicitor said to-day, and no more, declaring details of the evidence would be revealed at the proper time.

The evidence is the result of work by private detectives engaged by the Solicitor, among them one whom he termed "the best detective in America," when speaking of him Friday.

He mentioned the important evidence when he discussed the statement by Monteen Stover, the 14-year-old employee of the National Pencil Company, that is in direct contradiction to the testimony by Leo M. Frank, the suspected factory superintendent.

Other Evidence More Important.

The Solicitor was interested in the girl's statement, but declared that the other evidence in his hands was far more important and tangible.

In opposition to the testimony of Leo M. Frank in the Mary Phagan inquest was the statement of the Stover girl. The evidence that she will bear is to the effect that she was in Frank's office at 12:05 o'clock and a little later on the Saturday afternoon preceding the discovery of the slain girl's body, and that she found it deserted.

According to Frank's testimony, he was in his office from 12 o'clock until 12:25, when Lemmie Quinn, his foreman, came in. During that time, he said, Mary Phagan came in, about 12:05 o'clock, to receive her pay.

Monteen Stover is certain that she reached Frank's office at exactly 12:05 o'clock. She has been retained as an important witness.

Remembers the Time.

"The minute I got to the office floor when I went up to get my pay," she said, "I looked at the clock. I wanted to know if it was time to draw my money. I would have looked at it, anyhow, I suppose, as it is always customary for me to punch it the first thing upon entering the place to go to work.

"It was five minutes after 12. I was sure Mr. Frank would be in his office, so I stepped in. He wasn't in the outer office, and I went into the inner office. He wasn't there, either. I thought he might have been somewhere around the building, so I waited.

"The whole place was awfully quiet.

Dental Inspection In Schools Urged

Chamber of Commerce to Ask Council for Appointment of Examiners for Pupils.

Proper dental inspection of the school children of Atlanta will be urged upon the City Council by the Chamber of Commerce. The appointment of dentists to make regular inspections and to see that children having teeth complaint receive proper treatment, will be recommended.

The city already has a method of medical inspection which has given material results. It is proposed to have dentists work in connection with the physicians, many of the children's ills being laid to the fact that their teeth are being neglected.

Dr. C. M. Barnwell, chairman of the dentistry committee of the Chamber of Commerce, has called a meeting of the committee for 5:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Attorney Attacks Savannah Charity

Gazan Says Organization Does Nothing but 'Investigate' While Unfortunates Starve.

SAVANNAH, GA., May 12.—Simon Gazan, an attorney, scathingly denounced the Savannah Associated Charities in police court to-day during the hearing of Annie May Bacon, a 16-year-old girl, charged with the theft of a bicycle. Miss Helen Pendleton, general secretary of the Associated Charities, was prevented from replying by a ruling of the Recorder. The girl was finally turned over to the attorney, who promised to look after her.

"All the Associated Charities does is to investigate and investigate," he said, "and while they investigate the unfortunates starve."

Miss Pendleton was visibly excited when she left the court room.

The action of Attorney Gazan was voluntary. He had not been retained to defend the girl.

Beavers' Manager Is Fined $500 or Prison

Broyles Binds H. R. Pitts Over, Also, to State Courts for Violating Liquor Laws.

H. R. Pitts, manager of the Beavers' Club, Saturday was fined $500 or 30 days by Recorder Broyles and also was bound over to the State courts in bond of $1,000 accused of violating the liquor laws.

The case was based on testimony given by W. T. Brownlee, of Lawrenceville, who said he had purchased liquor in the club, paying for it in cash and without having to exhibit a membership card. He said he had an old visitor's card, now out of date, but did not even show this. Pitts and other attaches of the club denied Brownlee's story, declaring they had never seen him before.

DORSEY VEILS NEW CLEWS IN PHAGAN AFFAIR

It was scary. When he didn't show up in a few minutes, I went to the door and looked around the machinery. He wasn't there. I stayed until the clock hand was pointing exactly to 12:10. Then I went downstairs. I could see nor hear no one."

The testimony of Monteen Stover was obtained by detectives when they quizzed her the Saturday following the killing of Mary Phagan. The girl and her mother, Mrs. Homer Edmondson, of 171 South Forsyth Street, came to the factory to get the pay which the girl did not get the week before.

Stopped by Detectives.

In the office were detectives, eager to seize every available bit of information. They stopped Mrs. Edmondson and the girl, and were rewarded by Monteen's statement that she had been in Frank's office on the afternoon of the fatal day.

Monteen Stover said she did not know Mary Phagan, and probably had never seen her. She commended Frank as being popular with his employees, and kind.

Another development within the last 24 hours has been the elimination of another clew. The "woman in red," a mysterious figure reported to have been seen with Mary Phagan at the pencil factory, has been located. She is Mrs. Nancy Caldwell, of 10 Gray Street, an acquaintance of the dead girl. Examination revealed the fact, however, that she had not been with Mary Phagan in a year. The rumor of her association with the Phagan girl on the afternoon of the killing started in the mistaken statement of a girl at Mapleton.

Developed also evidence from a young woman whose name will not be revealed that the girl probably came to her death in the basement of the factory, and not in the upstairs lathe room. The following affidavit, subscribed to by a young woman who passed the factory about 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, April 26, is in the possession of Solicitor Dorsey, given him by Chief of Detectives Lanford.

The testimony is that as she passed the Forsyth Street entrance to the factory she was attracted by the shrill screams of a girl, coming, apparently, from the basement of the building. The cries were loud and piercing, and she stopped, hearing three sharp screams in rapid succession. Then the factory became quiet again.

Neither Chief Lanford nor Solicitor Dorsey would reveal the name of the young woman informant nor anything regarding her identity, except that she lives on Haynes Street.

600 Tech Students Parade in 'Nighties'

Celebrate Baseball Victory Over Georgia by Dervish March Through Downtown Streets.

Attired like howling Dervishes, and behaving much in the same fashion, 600 "Tech" students paraded the downtown streets Friday night celebrating "Tech's" baseball victory over Georgia.

The score was 4 to 2. If you doubted it, there it was, painted on the back of most of the night shirts. Night shirts were the costume de rigueur.

The college band, in jerseys, headed the dancing procession, but its music was drowned by the din of tin horns, dinner bells and rattles, not to mention some very creditable lungs.

MOVE TO STOP CONFIRMATION OF MRS. HAM

Congressman Bell Not Party to Fight on Gainesville Woman. President Explains.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—A movement to have the name of Mrs. H. W. J. Ham withdrawn as postmaster at Gainesville is understood to be under way here, although Representative Thomas M. Bell, Congressman from the Ninth District, says he is not a party to it.

It is well known that Congressman Bell feels keenly the turning down of his recommendation in the Gainesville matter, as he thinks, Gainesville being his home town, his wishes should have prevailed. Then, too, the Congressman had an engagement with the President the day after Mrs. Ham's name was sent to the Senate, to discuss the Gainesville postmastership.

Name Sent Accidentally.

President Wilson addressed a note to Mr. Bell, telling him the name was sent in through inadvertance, as he had not intended making the nomination that day. He, however, said nothing about changing the situation.

Since the appointment was sent in, Congressman Bell has not been to the White House. The movement to have Mrs. Ham's name withdrawn has been inaugurated by friends of all the parties concerned, in the hope of avoiding that which now seems likely to develop considerable feeling in Congressional circles.

Bell Not to Ask Recall.

Congressman Bell said to-day: "I understand there is talk of a movement to ask the President to withdraw Mrs. Ham's name, one reason being that on the President's own admission the name was sent to the Senate inadvertently. I shall make no such request. However, I would do so if I had information that my candidate, Mr. A. S. Hardy, would be appointed. I have nothing directly against the appointment of Mrs. Ham, but I earnestly and sincerely desired the appointment of the man I had indorsed."

Mr. Bell said he knew nothing of any plan to make a fight on Mrs. Ham's name when it comes up for confirmation by the Senate, and the possibility of such a fight was denied at the offices of both Senator Bacon and Senator Smith.

It is the disposition of the Georgia delegation to leave the matter in the hands of the President. If he indicates that he would appoint Mr. Hardy, then Mr. Bell will ask him to withdraw the name of Mrs. Ham, but unless such information is forthcoming, Mrs. Ham's name will probably be confirmed.

The President was not at the White House to-day and no information could be obtained there.

Mrs. Longstreet talked with a number of friends in the capital and will go before the Senate nominating committee to protest against her removal. Her protest will be that her work has not been unsatisfactory to Gainesville people.

An announceemnt from Congressman Thomas M. Bell that he would issue a statement to the public regarding the Gainesville postoffice created quite a sensation among the Georgians here.

Navy Officer, Suicide, Fiancee Is Unmoved

Betrothal of Lieutenant Hill and Miss Henrietta Erwin Had Just Been Announced.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Without a sign of emotion, Miss Henrietta Erwin, 21 years old, to-day received the news that her fiance, Lieutenant Richard Hill, U. S. N., had committed suicide at Annapolis. She gave no explanation for such an act, but secluded herself to-day, refusing to see callers.

While undertakers were performing their offices upon the body, Miss Erwin was sleeping peacefully through the night.

The engagement of Lieutenant Hill and Miss Erwin was announced last Wednesday. It was the outcome of a long romance beginning in the Philippines while Lieutenant Hill was stationed there and Miss Erwin was living with her father, Lieutenant Colonel J. B. Erwin.

Miss Erwin returned to the United States only a short time ago to prepare for her marriage next November.

Major Walter Gordon, uncle of Miss Erwin, declared the engagement had not been broken off and that he can assign no reason for Lieutenant Hill's suicide.

Socialists May Fly Red Banner in Ohio

Attorney General Rules Those Who Interfere Are Liable to Arrest. Trouble Expected.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., May 11.—Attorney General Hogan to-day gave City Solicitor Bennett a written opinion to the effect that the Socialists here are entirely within their rights in displaying a red flag over their headquarters and that persons who interfere with it are liable to arrest.

Further trouble is expected here, and the city officials are preparing to make arrests if necessary to protect the lurid banner that floats over the highest building in town.

WILSON SURE OF CURRENCY LAW AT THIS SESSION

Bill as Outlined Provides for Emergency Notes Issued Against Commercial Paper.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The Wilson currency bill will follow swiftly upon the Wilson-Underwood tariff. The President has said it, and there will be no failure to do his will.

With the tariff bill disposed of by the House, the Chief Executive has set his representatives to work, and by the time the House returns to its regular sessions three weeks hence, it will have for immediate consideration a bill that will embody the Wilson view of the currency.

Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, is chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, and Carter Glass, of Virginia, will be the chairman of the House Committee as soon as that position is filled.

The President expresses full confidence that he will be able to press this currency bill to enactment before the special session adjourns. He goes the full length of positive speech in declaring it will be a law before the general session of Congress. He is fully as emphatic about it as he was about the tariff bill.

Outline of the Bill.

From an inside and absolutely reliable source I have the exclusive outline of the administration's currency bill, which is substantially as folows, stated with the bias of the Administration's friends:

First, to provide a plan which will make available for commercial purposes in larger degree the reserves of the banks by permitting the reserves to go in large part to reserve banks, incorporated and located in sufficient number of places to be convenient of access to all the banks of the country.

By permitting these reserve banks to borrow and lend to each other, and by permitting them to rediscount for smaller banks commercial paper of specified standard, based on actual commercial transactions, the member banks could obtain a credit market for commercial paper from the reserve banks in which they have stock. The probable stock of the reserve banks would total 10 per cent of the present stock and surplus of the national banks, amounting to about $160,000,000.

Government Depositaries.

It is proposed that Government deposits shall be kept in these reserve banks and thus become available for use by the commerce of the country. Moreover, there probably would be an inducement held out to the member banks which would organize the reserve banks to keep larger deposits with the reserve bank by allowing them a part of the earning power of such reserve banks, apportioned to their average deposits.

By this system the reserve banks would start off when in running order with an available capital of approximately $800,000,000, and the reserve of the country will be made much more active and fluent than heretofore.

Elastic Currency Plan.

The second great object which is desired in this connection is to provide elastic currency, and this is expected to be accomplished by having the currency furnished to the reserve banks in a quantity sufficient for the needs of commerce, subject to an interest charge which will compel automatic contraction when the extra currency is no longer seriously demanded.

This currency probably will be Treasury notes, secured, however, by the additional security of the reserve banks and the member banks by being a first lien on their assets, but secured also by commercial paper of a specified class of short terms, indorsed by the original borrower, the local bank and the reserve bank, and set aside in the bill case of the reserve bank as security for such notes.

It is proposed also to strengthen the national bank system by giving its some additional privileges and providing a great improvement in the bank examiners, giving them graded salaries according to qualifications and work to be done, instead of the old fee system.

PLUCK WINS FOR GIRL STRANDED IN PARIS

When Miss Las Casas found herself alone and penniless in Paris, she opened up a little shop where she sold popcorn, fudge, taffy and corn cakes to American girl students. Her venture has been a success and she is planning to return to her home.

PARIS, May 1.—American pluck has solved a difficult problem for Miss Lillian Las Casas.

Some time ago Miss Las Casas found herself in a strange city without money and without friends. She did not send despairing cables to her relatives on the other side of the ocean, but, having determined to succeed through her own efforts, opened up a modest little shop where she sold popcorn balls, taffy, fudge, corn cake and other delicacies which are about as necessary to the average American schoolgirl as are her books.

There are always a number of American students in Paris and they flocked to Miss Las Casas' shop. From the start her venture was a success. She has added to her stock and, in the language of the country from which she comes, is "making good."

Miss Las Casas is a remarkably attractive girl and, with the money which her shop earns at her disposal, she dresses in the height of fashion. The picture shows her in the simple dress she wears while waiting on her customers. She has on a plaited skirt and a fish wife's blouse. Her hair is done up in the most approved French style.

FERTILIZER HIT BY NEW TARIFF, SAYS PROTEST

The following telegram, which explains itself, was received from Washington to-day by some of the leading business men of Atlanta:

"What do you think of the Democratic Congress, pledged to tariff reform, taking off of the free list an article and putting a duty of ten per cent on same? This I am advised was done yesterday when the House of Representatives at Washington passed the tariff bill putting a tax of ten per cent on sulphate of ammonia. My understanding that the ten per cent is an ad valorem tax which, at the present price of sulphate, would be over $6 a ton, and would be fully as much if not more than the old Republican tariff of 30 cents per hundred pounds, which was knocked out of the Payne-Aldrich bill and became a law in August, 1909, since which sulphate of ammonia has been on the free list.

"You must know about the increased production in this country and that this infant industry has greatly prospered in four years of free trade. The fertilizer manufacturers ought to protest to our Representatives, both in the House and in the Senate, against this tax which is directly against the farmer, and the Democratic party, having pledged itself to revise the tariff and bring about cheaper cost of living, is deliberately adding to the cost if they tax sulphate of ammonia.

"The price of sulphate of ammonia is higher to-day than it was in 1909 when the duty of $6 per ton was imposed. This material is a by-product, is healthy and needs no protection."

COW OUTRUNS HORSE ON HALF-MILE RACE TRACK

NEW RICHMOND, WIS., May 11.—To settle a controversy of long standing as to their racing ability, a contest between a cow and a pacing mare owned by rival hotelkeepers in this city drew a big crowd to the fair grounds.

The cow is the property of Anthony Meath, proprietor of the Commercial, and the horse is owned by George Cranston, of the National. The horse either was to trot or pace and the cow to go as she pleased. It was to be once around the half mile track, standing start.

The cow was a safe winner.

Great Tuberculosis Institute Is Opened

Million Dollar Gift of Henry Phipps in Philadelphia to Eradicate in Disease Prevention.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—In the presence of many prominent medical men, scientists and philanthropists, the $1,000,000 Henry Phipps Tuberculosis Institute was opened here to-day. The institute is the gift of Henry Phipps, of New York, to the University of Pennsylvania. It is in the amount of money expended the largest gift yet made in the crusade against the white plague.

Henry Phipps, who was present, was presented with a degree of Doctor of Laws. Dr. Edward F. Smith, provost of the university, presided.

The Phipps Institute is not primarily a hospital, but an institute for the study, prevention of tuberculosis and education regarding the disease. Grosvenor Atterbury was architect. Dr. Charles J. Hatfield is executive director.

JUDGE CANDLER SCORES POLICE 'THIRD DEGREE'

Judge John S. Candler rapped Georgia's criminal code and practices current among lawyers and the police in an address to students of the Atlanta Law School and members of the Atlanta Bar Friday night. Another interesting feature of his address was his denunciation of third degree methods of securing evidence and the testimony of detectives.

"So long as lawyers have success for themselves in view, verdicts of juries will be looked on as results of trickery and adroit juggling."

Other striking statements in his speech were:

"Taking an ignorant man, work on him until 4 o'clock in the morning, then flare a flashlight in his face and say, 'We know you have killed someone,' is worse than the practices of the Spanish Inquisition.

"A detective who would voluntarily go on the stand ought not to be believed. The purpose of a detective is to find evidence and not to swear that it is true.

"An odd commentary on conditions in Georgia is our penal code. The Lord thought He could run the world with Ten Commandments, but the Georgia Legislature takes 10,000.

"Strict law enforcement would repeal 75 per cent of Georgia's penal laws in 24 hours.

"I have sentenced more men to be hanged than all the judges in Great Britain combined since 1860. There's a reason. It's the law and the methods of some lawyers. People have no respect for the law when there is too much of it, when the law is used for the purpose of oppression."

"We are making too many misdemeanors; we are making too many felonies. The average man seldom knows if he is a criminal or not, and many are constantly violating the statutes from spitting on the sidewalks on down a long list of small and forgotten misdemeanors.

"As long as the lawmakers continue to turn out a new book full of laws every summer, so long will we continue to have law violations. I believe with General Grant that if a law is a bad one, enforce it."

The regular monthly meeting of the Young People's Missionary Society of St. Paul's Methodist Church will be held in the Sunday school room at 2:30 o'clock.

RAMONA BORDEN REPORTED AGAIN TO BE MISSING

Multi-Millionaire Milk Dealer's Daughter and Her Mother Leave New York Hotel.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Miss Ramona Borden, 17-year-old daughter of Gail Borden, multi-millionaire New York milk dealer, whose mysterious disappearance from a New Jersey sanitarium several weeks ago caused a big sensation, is to-day reported to be missing again.

Credence was given the report by announcement at the Vanderbilt Hotel, where Mrs. Borden and her daughter have been living, that both left the hotel and that their present whereabouts are unknown.

The first hint that Ramona had run away again came from New Haven, Conn., to which place she had gone with Mrs. Helen Seldon White, wife of a rich Cleveland, Ohio, chewing gum manufacturer, on her recent runaway escapade.

Reported in New Haven.

A dispatch from New Haven reported that a woman answering Mrs. White's description met two young girls at the railway station there, the party going to a hotel where they registered as "Mrs. W. J. White and daughters, Niagara Falls, N. Y."

One of the girls answered the description of Miss Borden; the other resembled one of Mrs. White's nieces who was a member of the previous runaway party. When Mrs. White was approached in New Haven by reporters she denied that she was the same woman who connived in the Borden girl's escape from the sanitarium.

At the offices of Mr. Borden it was said to-day by Mr. Borden's secretary that the girl's father had no knowledge of her being in New Haven.

Mr. and Mrs. Borden are separated, but not divorced. Mrs. Borden makes her home in Los Angeles, Cal., but came here when she received news of her daughter's mysterious disappearance several weeks ago.

Chamber to Work For Blue Sky Law

Bill Defeated in Past Years Will Go Before Next Legislature in More Complete Form.

The Blue Sky Law Committee of the Chamber of Commerce will meet Tusday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, H. M. Willet, chairman, issuing a call for the meeting Saturday morning.

The committee will consider a bill, drafted by Albert Howell, which it is proposed to submit to the Legislature. The measure is said to be much more complete than those the Chamber of Commerce has endeavored to have passed, and conforms more to the wishes of some of the Legislators.

The proposed Blue Sky Law is to prevent the selling of wild cat stocks.

GOVERNMENT PRINTERS PROTEST WAGE SYSTEM

MACON, May 11.—Justice Joseph of numerous transfers in the linotype force of the Government printing office, which carry a reduction in salary, the employees of the linotype division adopted resolutions of protest "against an unjust, unfair, inaccurate and oppressive system that denies to them the right to know how their averages are computed and requirements necessary to obtain a fair and accurate rating."

COUNCILMEN FOR WHITEHALL WORK

Street Committee Joins in Fight for $30,000 Appropriation to Regrade Street.

Council's Streets Committee has joined in the fight for a $30,000 appropriation for the Whitehall Street regrading. The County Commissioners have agreed to do the work with convicts and the property owners have subscribed $17,000 toward it. If Council's Finance Committee can be persuaded to give $30,000 the improvement will be assured; and leaders in the movement declare there is no doubt the Finance Committee will respond.

The Streets Committee, Friday, by a vote of eight to one, approved the plan of regrading from a point between Mitchell Street and Trinity Avenue to Forsyth Street, presented by Chief of Construction Clayton. Several more conservative regrading plans were submitted but only Councilman Jesse M. Wood opposed the original program. Councilman Wood urged that final action be delayed until all the property owners agreed on the improvement to be made.

A number of enthusiastic boosters appeared before the committee, among them being Robert R. Otis, George H. Boynton, J. Carroll Payne, M. L. Thrower, R. A. Broyles, V. H. Kreigshaber, L. C. Green, Walker Dunson, C. E. Caverly, Charles H. Black, J. R. Smith and others. They declared that the work must be begun by October 1, as the convicts had been promised and a temporary delay might mean a postponement of many years.

The principal opposition to the improvement was expressed by Judge John T. Pendleton, owner of the Capital City Laundry building, and Attorneys E. C. Meyer and L. Z. Rosser. Judge Pendleton said the regrading would greatly damage his and adjoining property. Attorney Meyer pointed out that with the improvement all the intersecting streets must be regraded. Attorney Rosser said a number of persons would be damaged unnecessarily.

Answers to these arguments were that the increase in property values would far offset any damages.

PLANS TO STOP MEN'S DODGING DUTY ON JURIES

Bibb County Representative Designs Bill to Do Away With Present Exemption Allowed.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

Representative Minter Wimberly, of Bibb County, one of the few veterans to return to the Legislature, will introduce early in the forthcoming session a bill to abolish jury exemptions.

Primarily, this measure will be designed to stop the sale of jury exemptions to members of the military companies of the State, but it also will cover some other forms of exemptions now permitted by law.

The State now allows every military company regularly enlisted in the State's service a certain number of jury exemptions, and these may be used by members of the organizations, or sold to outsiders, as the company may elect. The practice has been to sell these exemptions for $25 per annum, the revenue resulting to the company to be applied to armory rent and other company expenses.

The result has been that the exemptions generally have operated to relieve well-to-do citizens in various cities, bankers, business men of large interests, and the like, from jury service, who otherwise would be required to do jury duty the same as the common or garden variety of folks.

Representative Wimberly thinks these citizens come from a class that should not be exempt from jury duty any more than others are exempt, and he particularly believes that there are many juries that need the services of bankers and business men of large interests, in order to insure fair and intelligent verdicts in matters involving the adjustment of financial affairs.

There has been a disposition in Georgia for a good many years to do away with these jury exemptions, and there is no doubt whatever that Mr. Wimberly's bill will receive hearty support in many quarters.

A great many people will sympathize with the Bibb County man's idea that all classes of citizens should perform their share of jury duty, unless prevented by illness, physical defect, extreme old age or positive disqualification for cause or interest in the persons or issues involved.

Believing that Georgia should have another United States District Court, and that Savannah should be the headquarters of the new district, a party of Savannah attorneys is now in Washington for a conference with the Department of Justice on the subject.

Those in the delegation are Judge Samuel B. Adams, W. W. Osborne, J. Ferris Cann, Anton P. Wright and T. Mayhew Cunningham. It is understood that General P. W. Meldrim will join the party in Washington Monday.

At various times in the last several years efforts have been made to have another District Court established in Southern Georgia, but nothing ever came of these efforts. At the time of the election of President Wilson, the old agitation was revived, and despite the fact that various grand juries in the United States Court have recently passed resolutions deploring such action as is now being taken by the Savannah lawyers, it was determined to make the effort to have the new court established there.

The presence of Joseph H. Davis, of Albany, in Washington just now has revived a lot of interesting talk as to the United States marshalship for South Georgia.

It is understood that Senator Bacon has considered Mr. Davis, but that Senator Smith has lodged an objection against him. Senator Bacon has not "indorsed" the Albany man, it is explained, but he has had him "favorably in mind." Whether the objection of Senator Smith will operate to eliminate Davis is the question.

Mr. Davis, it appears, is charged with not being "progressive enough" in his politics to suit the junior Senator—at least, that is the way The Savannah Press hands out the "dope," and, presumably, it speaks by the card.

And, anyway, Davis is in Washington looking into things for himself, and the outcome of his visit is being watched with genuine interest throughout the State.

Georgia politicians have been greatly interested in the development of the Gainesville and Rome postmastership situations, and now that both have been settled, further developments are being watched with even greater interest.

President Wilson in disregarding Congressman Bell's recommendation as to the Gainesville office—Mr. Bell's home office—has set aside a precedent very few expected to see broken. From time immemorial it has been customary for the President to name without question the man nominated by a Representative for his home office. Bell's recommendation of Mr. Hardy in Gainesville, however, was passed over, even before Bell got through talking to the President about Hardy.

KEEP THE BALANCE UP.

It has been truthfully said that any disturbance of the even balance of health causes serious trouble. Nobody can be too careful to keep this balance up. When people begin to lose appetite, or to get tired easily, the least imprudence brings on sickness, weakness, or debility. The system needs a tonic, craves it, and should not be denied it; and the best tonic of which we have any knowledge is Hood's Sarsaparilla. What this medicine has done in keeping healthy people healthy, in keeping up the even balance of health, gives it the same distinction as a preventive that it enjoys as a cure. Its early use has illustrated the wisdom of the old saying that a stitch in time saves nine. Take Hood's for appetite, strength and endurance.

Vital Questions Face Presbyterian Assemblies at Atlanta Meet

Proposed Union of United and Southern Churches Interests Dixie

Mark A. Matthews, D. D., Seattle, Wash., retiring Moderator. General J. W. Foster, Washington, D. C., on Judicial Commission.

Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, D. D., Washington, D. C., pastor of President Wilson's church.

J. W. Patterson, of Atlanta, chairman of the Finance Committee of the Assemblies.

William S. Bennet, New York City, former Congressman, a Presbytery Commissioner.

Suggested Change in Confession of Faith Affecting Infant Clause Also Draws Attention.

Vital questions of worldwide interest, will come before the Presbyterian assemblies in Atlanta. Perhaps the most interesting of these to the layman is the effort to be made in the Southern Assembly to change the "elect infant clause" to remove all ground for the supposition that all infants are not saved.

This will come up in consideration of section 3, chapter 10 of the Confession of Faith and will not be new work for a General Assembly of this church. The proposed changes have been thoroughly discussed and recommended by a number of assemblies, but no change proposed as yet has met the approval of three-fourths of the Presbyteries.

The proposed change in this paragraph which was approved by the Bristol Assembly causes the paragraph to read thus: "Being elect, all infants dying in infancy are regenerated and saved by Christ through the Spirit, who worketh when, and where, and how he pleaseth. So also are all other elect persons, who are incapable of being outwardly called by the ministry of the word," this wording to be substituted that now appearing in the Confession of Faith and which reads: "Elect infants dying in infancy etc."

Presbyteries Have Voted.

The Presbyteries have taken vote on the proposed change during the spring meetings and the action of the General Assembly in ordering a change in the wording of this paragraph of the Confession of Faith will be determined by the vote of the Presbyteries. It is hardly to be expected that three-fourths of the Presbyteries will favor the proposed change and it is not unlikely this question will be discussed as thoroughly during the Atlanta Assembly as has been true during other Assemblies.

There is a growing desire upon the part of some prominent ministers of the church for this paragraph to be stricken from the Confession of Faith and thus obliterate all ground for the supposition that any infant or other irresponsible person who dies can fail to be saved, and it is probable that more than one overture to that effect will be presented to the Assembly at Atlanta.

Among the questions of particular interest to the South is the proposed union of the United Presbyterian Church with the Southern Presbyterian Church and this question will be presented in the report of the Committee on Conference, appointed by the Assembly of 1912, which committee in joint meeting with a similar committee appointed by the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church has prepared a basis of union for the two churches and this basis of union will be presented to the General Assemblies of both churches for action.

Terms Not Made Public.

Just what this basis of union is has not been made known to others than the members of the two committees. The basis of union was agreed upon several weeks ago, but the two Committees of Conference decided that as a matter of courtesy to the Assemblies of both churches it should not be given publicity until officially presented to these two bodies.

Rev. R. C. Reed, D. D., of Columbia, S. C., is chairman of the Committee of Conference for the Southern Presbyterian Church and the following named ministers and laymen constitute the other members of this important committee: Rev. S. L. Morris, D. D., of Atlanta; Rev. J. F. Cannon, D. D., of St. Louis; Allen G. Hall, of Nashville, Moderator of the Assembly of 1906; and W. F. Stevenson, of Cheraw, S. C. The General Assembly will await the presentation of no other report with a greater degree of interest than the report of the Committee on Conference, and there is no matter of greater importance to come before the body than the question of the union of these two churches.

The standards held by the United Presbyterian Church are the same as those held by the Southern Presbyterian Church and in the same sense each church accepts them. The two churches possess the same Scotch ancestry, adhere to the same policy, and administer the affairs of benevolences under the same departments. The distinct point of difference between the two churches is the exclusive use of the Psalms in the service of praise in the United Presbyterian Church and it is around this point, in all probability, that the greatest discussion will center in the consideration of the union of the two churches.

Two Other Big Features.

There are two other questions to come before the General Assembly that will constitute outstanding features: The Federal Council and the brief popular statement of Doctrine of the Church.

During the Assembly of 1912, held at Bristol delegates were appointed to represent the Southern Presbyterian Church in the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which held its quadrennial meeting in December, at Chicago. The report of these delegates will be heard with interest. It is not improbable that overtures will be presented to the Assembly urging that it withdraw again from membership in the Council, but it is likely that a second withdrawal from membership in the Council will be opposed as ably as it will be recommended.

Two changes in the form of government of the church have been proposed and will be considered by the Atlanta Assembly. One is with reference to cases of trial in the church and the proposed change, which was approved by the Bristol Assembly, would give the Synod and the General Assembly the power, at their own discretion, to commit any case of trial coming before them on appeal to the judgment of a Commission, composed of others than members of the Court from which the case shall come, this power to apply in all cases except those affecting doctrine and those shall be tried by the Court itself.

The other proposed change is with reference to the basis of representation in the General Assembly. The basis of representation at present is one minister and one ruling elder from every Presbytery except in those Presbyteries where there are more than twenty-five ministers and in those the representation in the General Assembly shall be two ministers and two ruling elders, but no additional number of churches increases the representation.

Plan Graduated Scale.

The change proposed recommends that every Presbytery shall be represented in the General Assembly by one minister and one ruling elder and that if the communicants of the churches in the Presbytery and ministers on the roll number more than four thousand, the Presbytery shall be entitled to increase its representation to the Assembly with one minister and one ruling elder and that the representation continue to increase in like proportion with the addition of every four thousand communicants and ministers.

During the year since the Bristol Assembly the Presbyteries have taken action with regard to the proposed changes in the form of government; the answers of the eighty-nine Presbyteries will be tabulated during the Atlanta Assembly and if three-fourths of the answers favor the proposed changes, the changes will become law, by the enactment of the Assembly.

The ad interim committee appointed by the Bristol Assembly to prepare a brief popular statement of the doctrines taught by the Southern Presbyterian Church is composed of fifteen representative men from all sections of the church, with Rev. R. A. Webb, D. D., of the Kentucky Presbyterian Theological Seminary, at Louisville, as chairman. This committee may be able to submit its report to the Atlanta Assembly, but it will not be cause for surprise if longer time is requested to complete this important work.

The preparation of this brief popular statement has been requested for use especially as a tract in mission territory as well as in other sections of the church; this statement will in no way displace the standards of the church, but will express the same in a simplified form and one that will be easy to handle, especially in mission territory of the church.

Navy Quartermaster To Row 2,470 Miles

Trip Down Length of Mississippi Advertisement to Attract Prospective Recruits.

ST. PAUL, MINN., May 11.—To row from Park Rapids, Minn., on the Mississippi, to the Gulf of Mexico is the task that confronts Quartermaster Andrew Koehn, of the United States navy. This he has been ordered to do as an advertisement to attract recruits, according to an announcement last night. Koehn will start June 1, and expects to cover the distance, 2,470 miles, in 90 days.

The quartermaster has a reputation as one of the navy's most expert oarsmen. He is now stationed at St. Louis. He will use a ten-foot boat, built with a wooden bottom and iron sides and having a forward end 30 inches high to provide for sleeping quarters.

DEMOCRATS PICK CAMPAIGN HEADS

Johnson of Kentucky Slated for Permanent Chairman of Congressional Committee.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The compromise reached at the meeting of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee apparently is satisfactory to all members, both in the House and Senate, and President Wilson. The meeting was short and the results accomplished were obtained by unanimous consent.

Representative Lloyd, of Missouri, and Mr. Page, of North Carolina, were selected as the temporary chairman and secretary of the committee until a permanent organization may be perfected. The motion was made by Representative Ben Johnson, of Kentucky, who is said to be slated to succeed Mr. Lloyd.

Following is the new membership of the committee:

Senators—Missouri, Stone; Virginia, Martin; Texas, Culberson; Nevada, Newlands; Alabama, Bankhead; Oklahoma, Owens; Oregon, Chamberlain.

Representatives—Alabama, Richardson; Arizona, Hayden; Arkansas, Floyd; California, Baker; Colorado, Taylor; Connecticut, Reilly; Delaware, Brockton; Florida, Clark; Georgia, Lee; Illinois, Sabath; Indiana, Cline; Iowa, Pepper; Kansas, Taggart; Kentucky, Johnson; Louisiana, Watkins; Maine, McGillicuddy; Maryland, Covington; Massachusetts, Murray; Michigan, Doremus; Minnesota, Hammond; Mississippi, Candler; Missouri, Russell; Montana, Evans; Nebraska, Lobeck; New Hampshire, Reed; New Mexico, Ferguson; New Jersey, Scully; New York, Goldfogle; North Dakota, Webb; Ohio, Sharp; Oklahoma, Weaver; Pennsylvania, Dlefenderfer; Rhode Island, O'Shaughnessy; South Carolina, Finley; Tennessee, Houston; Virginia, Flood; Wisconsin, Burke; West Virginia, no selection.

Predicts Trouble in Cuba at Inauguration

"Moral and Political Conditions Are Awful," Says Henry T. Woodruff.

NEW YORK, May 11.—"The moral and political conditions of Cuba are awful," declared Henry T. Woodruff, a veteran of the Civil War, who has arrived from Havana.

Mr. Woodruff has spent the winter in Cuba for the last fifteen years.

"I have been informed on reliable authority that the rebels have obtained 12,000 rifles which belonged to the Federal Government. The people of Havana are seeking bloodshed, and it would not surprise me if murder was committed when Menocal is inaugurated on May 20."

London Theater Managers Reject His Plan and Will Bar Smokers.

LONDON, May 11.—Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's proposal to allow smoking in the London theaters, was emphatically rejected by the Society of West End Theatre Managers, who voted against the proposal with only one dissenting voice.

Sir Arthur's purpose was to alleviate the patronage of the music halls, he believing that many men went there to enjoy nicotine rather than vaudeville.

RESINOL QUICKLY CURED HER BABY'S SEVERE ECZEMA

Had Not Had a Good Night's Rest in Eight Months.

Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 19, 1913.—"My son had been troubled with eczema for about one year. It first appeared when three months old. I tried everything that was recommended and also different prescriptions, but of no avail. For eight months my child did not enjoy a good night's rest. I was finally told to try Resinol. This I did, and from the first application the child got relief and put in a good night's sleep. In three days there was no sign of eczema—to-day he has as fine a complexion as any healthy child and is entirely cured." (Signed) Mrs. T. S. Brown, 54 Crescent Ave.

Resinol positively stops itching instantly and speedily heals eczema and other skin humors, dandruff, sores, burns and piles. Prescribed by doctors for 18 years. Sold by every druggist. Resinol Ointment in opal jars, 50 cents and $1.00. Resinol Soap, 25 cents. For generous free trial, write Dept. 19-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Slayer of Countess, Convict, Seeks Death

Guards Watch Lieutenant Paterno, Who Would Escape Imprisonment Through Suicide.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, May 11.—Lieutenant Paterno, serving a life sentence for the murder in 1912 of the queen's waiting maid, Countess Trigona, was secretly conveyed to the penitentiary in Porto Longone to-day. Owing to the prisoner's dread of solitary confinement and determination to end his life, four warders have been detailed to watch him day and night.

The doctors ascribe his suicidal mania to cowardice. They have given him morphine to cause artificial sleep and thus prolong his life. The authorities have tried to hide Paterno's resolve to kill himself lest his example be followed by others desiring to evade sentences of solitary confinement.

Other convicts who have ended their lives generally concealed their determination, but Paterno calmly announced his intention to the officials. The latter are anxious to preserve his life at all costs that he may expiate his crime according to law.

Opera Stars Deny Any Estrangement

LONDON, May 11.—Six days at sea evidently soothed the distraught nerves of the grand opera singers who have arrived from New York.

Denial was made of the report that there was any estrangement of the forces of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company which would prevent their assemblage again next season. Conductor Toscanini, about whom there have been numerous rumors, said: "My contract has two years to run and as usual I will fulfill my contract."

All the singers except Emmy Destinn, who has taken a house in London, have gone to Paris. Mme. Destinn, who is an art connoisseur, has secured a large Rivviera picture. It was so big she had to hire a truck to transport it to the railway station.

COL. J. HAM LEWIS SETS WHITE HOUSE PRECEDENT

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, set a precedent to-day for all visitors to President Wilson at the White House.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 11.—The London Morning Post, in an editorial, says:

"No doubt the action of the California Legislature in passing a bill depriving Japanese settlers of the right to own land, placed the President in a very difficult position.

"Japan resents this legislation as descriminating unfairly against her citizens, and claims it is a violation of the treaty between herself and the United States. So far as known President Wilson recognizes the justice of Japan's complaints, but he has no obvious means of compelling the people of California to accept his view of the case. * * * It is certain Japan will protest and will insist on taking some action to vindicate her rights."

"CASCARETS" MAKE YOU FEEL GREAT!

Gently Cleanse Your Liver and Sluggish Bowels While You Sleep.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver, delayed fermenting food in the bowels, or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Salts, cathartic pills, oil and purgative waters force a passageway for a day or two—yes—but they don't take the poisons out and have no effect upon the liver or stomach.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels clean and regular for months.

The Vicious Little Moon

To-day's Complete Short Story

THEY emerged from the ground one, two, three, six, under the deluge of rain in darkness.

One might have believed that they came out of the water, for the torrents of rain, which had been falling incessantly for more than a month, had made the plain around Adrianople and Devanjaros look like a sea.

In the uncertain twilight each of them looked like an immense bundle of sheepskin, out of which emerged the barrel of a rifle. All six wore caps of green velvet bordered with astrakhan.

It was a patrol of Macedonians enrolled in the Bulgarian army passing through the line of outposts. Hesitating and uncertain, they moved their long arms like windmills, made the sign of the cross, pointed right and left and peered about cautiously.

A Branch for a Signal.

Fifty paces away a branch stuck into into the ground and reflected in a pool of water began to move back and forth. The Macedonians started toward the hole from which this signal was given. It was the abandoned trench. Sergeant Naritch and his five Bulgarian soldiers were down there and had given them the signal.

The six Bulgarians loved the six Macedonians.

Since the beginning of the investment these twelve men were in the habit of meeting in the hour of twilight when the guns became blind.

They met in the abandoned trench which was no longer used. There they sat down close together in the deep mud. They exchanged only few words: "The war is going to last a long time!" or "May the Lord give the Turks into our hands," was the burden of their remarks.

Then they sat silent and pondered until it was time to separate and each party went back to its camp.

Depressed and Melancholy.

On this night they felt unusually depressed and melancholy. The incessant rain, the everlasting cold and the enforced idleness and hopelessness overwhelmed them.

"The war will never end," said Kaloub, making a wry face.

"Never," said Naziff, and yawned like a hungry wolf.

They all bowed their heads and spat into the mud, then, as always happens when men are downhearted and depressed, they began to talk about mysterious things.

"The moon looks like a crescent tonight," said Kaloub.

"A bad sign," said Alexis, the venerable brigand, who knew everything between life and death. "It is a vicious little moon."

And he told the legend of the vicious little moon which kills all those upon whom it looks.

They raised their heads and gazed furtively toward the sky.

"One must not tempt the moon," said Petrof, who was newly married, although his hair was gray. "Woe unto us all."

"I am sleepy," said Reff plaintively, like a child.

Let Us Go Back.

"Let us go back," growled Alexis, and stuck his bayonet into his boot.

The Macedonians left one at a time. The Bulgarians looked after them and regretted they had let them go. They remained in the abandoned trench, oppressed by a vague sense of danger, afraid of the moon that was looking down upon them, half senseless with fatigue and superstition.

Each was dreaming his own dreams.

Sergeant Naritch saw his litle house and his wife in her gayly colored dress. He saw her looking at a golden-haired girl. He felt the fragrance of the flowering hedges and saw the long rows of willow trees standing like sentries along the bank of the brook.

Suddenly he raised his head with a jerk and rubbed his eyes. He could see nothing now but the darkness and the slender crescent of the moon.

He shook himself. What were they thinking of? It was late. Little Father Colonel would surely hear them coming back.

"Come along, boys; we must get back to camp," he said.

Crawled From the Trench.

The others yawned, stretched their limbs and crawled out of the trench.

They marched through the muddy pools with the rain beating into their faces and soaking the fur of their heavy sheepskin coats. From time to time they glanced at the moon.

They stopped. They had lost their way. It was the moon, the vicious little moon, which had led them astray with its treacherous light.

They shuddered and started again, tramping through the mud. Time and again they nearly fell into the deep mudholes made by the bursting shells. Half an hour passed and still no sign of lights or campfires.

Suddenly a shot rang out.

The sergeant raised his head, looked about and listened.

"We are inside the Turkish lines," he said.

"We ought to have set out when the Macedonians left," growled Kaloub; "they know their way here and would not have wandered astray."

"Look," said Diplovitch, "there are some soldiers over there watching us."

Felt Like Howling.

And at the faint light of the moon they dimly made out some figures a short distance away. The Bulgarians, now quite convinced that the vicious little moon had led them into an ambush, felt like howling with superstitious fear.

In a low voice Naritch commanded: "Fire!"

The enemy was quicker and fired first.

With a groan, Petrof, the newly married, fell to the ground like a log.

The firing was kept up by both sides, and men dropped where they stood.

The last man to remain standing finally sank to the ground. He thought he heard somebody whisper his name from among those he had shot down. Then everything was silent.

Toward morning a passing patrol found the dead bodies of six Macedonians and six Bulgarians, who had been led astray by the vicious little moon, that kills those upon whom it looks.

BOY FROM COLLEGE PARK LEADS IN PONY CONTEST

Has 18,535 Votes, but When Analyzed, There is Nothing in That to Frighten Other Contestants. Many Have "Something Up Their Sleeves."

Frank Ison, of College Park, has the best start in The Georgian and American's contest for the pony outfits. He had 18,535 votes yesterday. Probably he has many more to-day.

Fannie Cook, 488 Pulliam Street, has 6,600, and Florence Greenoe, 387 Pulliam Street, has 6,045—there's a close race in District No. 4.

In District No. 1 are George Rosser, 21 East Sixteenth Street, with 5,245 votes, and Miss Margaret Lewis, 25 Baltimore Block, with 4,500 votes—another close race.

Then there is a considerable number with 2,000 and 3,000 votes.

All this may seem discouraging to the boy or girl who has simply the original, which goes with the nomination. It should not be, however.

Look at Frank Ison's lead, for instance. He has 18,535 votes. Take off 1,000 for the nomination. That leaves 17,535. Five yearly subscriptions to The Georgian and American would yield 17,500. The 35 more which make up the total may represent the coupons clipped from the daily issues of the paper.

You can get five yearly subscriptions to The Georgian and American in no time at all, can't you? Then you will have done as well as Frank Ison. The only difference is that he, very wisely, has made a flying start.

We predicted yesterday that the votes polled by the contestants will leap up by thousands at a clip. Watch and see if they do not. The names of contestants and their standing will be published frequently that they may know how they and their rivals are getting along.

George Rosser	21 East Sixteenth	5245
Miss Margaret Lewis	25 Baltimore Block	4500

Daniels Fools Old Salts in Navy Office

Department Navigators Learn for First Time That Florida Has a Panama City.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The wise old salts of the Navy Department thought they had caught Secretary Daniels in a land-lubber's blunder when they got a telegram from him ordering the gunboat Petrel to Panama City by May 10.

Even the youngest navigator at the department laughed over the message and called attention to the geographical fact that Panama City is on the Pacific side of the Isthmus, while the gunboat Petrel is now en route to Pensacola, Fla. It was suggested that the Secretary be so informed.

Then some one thought of looking up the maps. A search disclosed that there is a Panama City on the Florida coast.

Daniels Visits Charleston.

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 11.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels was here to-day inspecting the navy yard. He was entertained at dinner and on an excursion by the City Council and commercial bodies. He left this afternoon on board the torpedo boat destroyer Reid for Port Royal and Savannah. He arrived last night and was the guest of Admiral Helm at the navy yard. Mrs. Daniels and Captain Palmer, his aide, are with him.

Vincent Astor Host To Senatorial Party

Young Millionaire Entertains Vice President and Statesmen on Yacht and at Estate.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Vice President Marshall and several United States Senators are guests for to-day and to-morrow of Vincent Astor.

The program is a trip up the Hudson on his yacht, Nona, as far as West Point for the annual inspection of the military post, a night at the Astor estate and a visit to Governor Sulzer.

In addition to the Vice President the party will include Senators Johnston, of Alabama; Fletcher, of Florida; Overman, of North Carolina; Vardeman, of Mississippi, and Chamberlin, of Oregon, as well as a number of New York business men.

DOCTORS SUE CONTRACTORS FOR $40,000 MEDICAL FEES

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 10. Dr. C. Hale, of Rising Fawn, Ga., and Dr. M. M. Wagner, of Chattanooga, have filed suit against Anthony Brady, of New York, and Jacobs & Davies, contractors for the Chattanooga and Tennessee River Power Company's lock and dam at Hales Bar, Tenn., for $40,000.

The plaintiffs allege that the defendants withheld that amount from salaries of employees as medical fees, but failed to turn it over to the doctors.

GIRL, 16, TELLS POLICE SHE WAS HELD A PRISONER

INDIANAPOLIS, May 11.—Lured from the home of her mother in Hoppeston, Ill., on a pretense of going to a show in Danville, brought to Indianapolis under threats of death if she did not obey orders, and kept practically a prisoner in a house on North Capitol Avenue for almost a week, is the story of pretty Miss Maude Carpenter, aged 16. August Bessler, of Brooklyn, N. Y., is in jail.

SUFFRAGETTE BOMB IS FOUND IN POSTOFFICE

Infernal Machine Creates Panic at Reading—Another Discovered in Liverpool R. R. Station.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 11.—A suffragette bomb, with an electrical appliance similar to that found in St. Paul's Cathedral, was discovered to-day in the package sorting department of the Reading postoffice. Finding of the infernal machine created a panic among the employees. The bomb was turned over to the police.

Another was found in the passenger waiting room at the busy Lime Street Railroad Station in Liverpool.

The dynamite squad to-day exploded a bomb on the Cambridge University football field, setting the grandstand afire, but causing slight damage. This was one of the bombs planted by suffragettes which exploded. Mostly they were discovered before they went off, or, through miscalculation, were rendered harmless.

The fuse of the Liverpool bomb had been lighted, but had died out before it reached the gunpowder. The instrument of intended destruction consisted of a tin tobacco box filled with gunpowder and scrap iron.

The Reading machine was wrapped in a bulky parcel to which the attention of the postoffice employees was attracted by the sound of ticking. The police were called in and on examination found the parcel contained an electric battery connected to explosives and accompanied by quantities of suffragette literature.

The parcel was addressed to a municipal official of Reading, now on his vacation. The police believe it was timed to explode in his residence during his absence. The clockwork arrangement was in perfect working order.

Wife Watches Cell to Keep Man Awake

Keeps All-Night Vigil Under Doctor's Orders to Keep Husband From Sleeping.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., May 11.—To keep her husband awake, as directed by physicians, Mrs. Elizabeth Conley of Gibbsboro, N. J., spent the night in front of a cell door at Camden when her spouse, John Conley, 40 years old, was locked up.

Mrs. Conley said her husband had made all sorts of threats against her and was mentally unbalanced. Conley and his wife entered police headquarters, the man pleaded to be kept in a cell and asked that his wife be permitted to remain outside and keep him awake.

The police were puzzled, but when it was explained that Conley had spells of nervousness and that his wife must keep him awake at the order of his physician, the request was granted.

BERRIEN CLERK RIDICULES GAME WARDEN CHARGE

Denies People of Milltownn Tried To Intimidate Boisclair, as He Complained.

Charles S. Parham, clerk of the Superior Court of Berrien County, in a letter to The Georgian to-day, ridicules the charges that lawless and disorderly tactics have been adopted by the people of Milltown to intimidate County Game Warden Boisclair.

The letter is an answer to the fear of State Game Warden Mercer that his deputy in Berrien County is being attacked. It is an answer, also, to the charges by Warden Boisclair that the town and surrounding section disregard the laws and authority of officers.

"If Game Warden Mercer will use different tactics from those of Mr. Boisclair," the writer concludes, "he will find any amount of co-operation in punishing those who knowingly violate the game laws, and will find no better people in Georgia."

His letter in part follows:

"Conditions Misrepresented."

To begin with, conditions at Milltown are not at all as represented by Mr. Boisclair. He intimates that the entire town and section is composed of people who disregard the laws of the country or the rights of man, when in reality there are no better class of citizens in Georgia than are found at Milltown.

Mr. Boisclair says that from 200 to 300 angry men gathered about him, threatening his life, etc. This statement is simply false. The writer was on the ground as a disinterested spectator at the time of the would-be trial, seeing and hearing a good portion of what was taking place, sizing up the crowd with fair accuracy, and feels sure that not more than 50 people were gathered there. Eighteen of this number were there from having been served with warrants to so be, for trial; nearly all of the remainder had gathered there from idle curiosity and had no part in the proceeding at all.

No Demonstration.

No demonstration of any kind was evident, except that of mirth and fun which usually arises from such occasions. Those who had been arrested (or most of them, at least) took the matter as a huge joke, and had it not been that Mr. Boisclair went around there with a concealed weapon, everything would have passed off quietly and good-humoredly.

Mr. Boisclair says that Mayor Bill Pafford accosted him, leading, with vile epithets, an angry mob of 200 or 300 people, the crowd became menacing, etc., all of which the writer knows to be untrue. As before stated, there were not exceeding 50 persons on the ground and they were quiet and orderly, and had it not been for the fact that Mr. Boisclair was seen with a pistol on his person there would have been no words of any kind.

Bill Pafford is a high-toned, Christian gentleman, who is known all over this, as well as adjoining counties.

James Banks, the owner of the Banks Pond, says he has never objected to people fishing with hook and line in his waters, while R. T. Berryhill, a nephew of Mr. Banks, who has charge of the pond, has always been very liberal in his management of the fishing privilege, never refusing anyone that would ask him permission to catch as many fish as he wanted to.

RADIUM SALTS FOUND IN NEW YORK STATE SPRINGS

SARATOGA, May 11.—Radium salts have been found in considerable quantity in the mineral springs of the New York State reservation in this village, according to the United States Bureau of Mines, which has submitted a report of an investigation in thirteen of the wells owned by the State.

These results were obtained from water taken in October, 1912. Since that time the progress of recovery from the springs has been continuous.

ARKANSAS SAFE BLOWERS MAKE ESCAPE WITH $1,500

FORT SMITH, ARK., May 11.—A posse was searching the neighborhood of Bonanza, sixteen miles southeast of here to-day for three men who dynamited the safe in the First State Bank there at 1:30 o'clock this morning and escaped with between $1,500 and $2,000 in currency. The men left Bonanza on horseback, headed for Fort Smith.

GOV. M'GOVERN DENIES HE HAS QUIT REPUBLICANS

MADISON, WIS., May 11.—Governor McGovern in a bitter statement to-day denied he had left the Republican party when he announced he would not attend the forthcoming Republican dinner. He says the dinner is being given in the interests of factionalism, hinting that it is furthered by LaFollette people.

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

Friedmann's Patients Bound by Common Tie.

"Six of Dr. Friedmann's tubercular patients are convalescing in Bellevue Hospital," said a physician just back from a visit to New York. "The fact that they have been treated with the serum has naturally caused a bond of sympathy among them, and they are generally to be seen together, strolling in their bathrobes along the sunny walks in the hospital quadrangle. Other inmates of the institution who lack the distinction of contact with the syringe of the Berlin physician are inclined to interpret their alliance as aloofness, and the sextet have come to be dubbed the 'guinea pigs.'"

Wanted to Know His Other Business.

A New Yorker who is stopping at one of the Atlanta hotels, tells this one:

A member of the Stock Exchange well known for his scorn of convention pulled the bellrope of a Long Island Railroad train the other evening because, as he said, he was "tired of being a perpendicular sardine" and he was determined either to have a seat or get out. He was arrested. When the case came up in court the railroad's lawyer said insinuatingly:

"Are you a drinking man, Mr. Blank?"

"That's my business," said the broker with dignity.

"Right," said the lawyer. "Now tell the court, Mr. Blank, if you have any other business."

Rear Seats Are In Demand.

"One thing I can't get used to," said the ticket seller at a downtown moving picture house, "is the demand for rear seats. All my life I have been under the impression that folks who went to the theater wanted to get as near the stage as possible, but in the moving picture business the reverse seems true. People want to get far back so they can get a better focus on the pictures. In this house the back seats fill up long before the front ones do. I got a jolt the other day, however. A fellow came to the window and said, "'Can you give me a seat in the first row? I'm hard of hearing.'

"I told him we didn't sell reserved seats—that he would have to take his chances with the rest. Anyhow, I assured him, the pictures were being run and it didn't really make any difference if he was hard of hearing."

CROWDS VISIT REVIVAL TO HEAR EVANGELIST HAWKINS

The revival which Evangelist Hawkins is conducting at the West End Christian Church continues to attract large crowds. Five converts were baptized Friday night before one of the largest gatherings of the week.

Following are sermon subjects for the coming week: Saturday night, "The Way of Faith;" Sunday morning, "The First Lord's Day;" Sunday evening, "Salvation;" Tuesday evening, "The Thief on the Cross;" Wednesday evening, "What Must I Do to Be Lost." There will be no services Monday.

SALOONS ASK COURT TO FORCE CITY TO TAKE TAX

HAMMOND, IND., Mayy 11.—The first case on record in this State where taxpayers attempt to force a municipality to accept thousands of dollars was brought to-day in the Hammond Superior Court, where 80 Gary saloon men asked Judge Lawrence Becker to mandate the city of Gary to accept $200 apiece from them.

The Gary authorities hold saloon licenses to be $500 and refuse the $200 as provided by the City Council in an earlier ordinance.

GRAFT FOE PLANS REVENGE IF SLAIN

Directs $50,000 Insurance Be Used to Prosecute Assassins if He Is Killed.

NEW YORK, May 11.—George A. Sipp, former Raines law hotel keeper, who exposed the alliance of the police and underworld in Harlem's tenderloin, said today he had taken out $50,000 worth of life insurance and added a codicil to his will directing that the sum be spent in prosecuting his murderers should he be assassinated as the result of his exposures of the police graft syndicate.

Warden Hayes, of the Blackwells Island prison, is having a difficult time finding occupations for James F. Thompson, John J. Murtha, Dennis Sweeney and James E. Hussey, the four former police inspectors who were sentenced to a year for obstructing justice. None of the prisoners has received industrial training along any special line.

Sergeant Peter J. Duffy, charged with collecting graft for Sweeney, will be arraigned late this month or early in June. In connection with the search for more evidence, District Attorney Whitman has learned of a "clairvoyant trust" which has paid big sums for protection.

JOKERS GIVE BABY WINE; LITTLE GIRL NEARLY DIES

PERTH AMBOY, May 11.—Two men paid $45 in fines for giving a year-old girl a drink of port wine. The child went into convulsions, but was restored.

The child found her way into a barroom. Charles Webber picked her up and jokingly called for a drink. Benjamin Wonder, the proprietor, set a glass of port on the bar. Webber gave the child the wine.

Ricardi Sues Rigo For $100,000 'Loans'

Gypsy Violinist Says Woman He Eloped With Is Hounding Him to Take Her Back.

NEW YORK, May 10.—That Mme. Ricardi, formerly the Princess DeChimay and originally Clara Ward, of Detroit, is suing Janezi Rigo, the gypsy violinist she eloped with seventeen years ago in Paris, for $100,000, became known to-day. Mme. Ricardi claims this was loaned Rigo in the three years they lived together.

In his apartments here, where he is living with his latest wife, who was Kitty Emerson, wife of Caspar Emerson, Jr., of Philadelphia, Rigo declared the Princess DeChimay is hounding him because he refuses to go back to her.

"My wife knows this," said Rigo, "but I will never do it. I love my wife madly. Nothing can separate us."

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"THAT must be some interesting novel you are reading there," remarked the Head Barber. "You ain't had your nose out of it all the forenoon."

"It is a beautiful story, George. I almost cry in some parts of it, and when the laughs come they are sure great. I didn't skip a line of it, either, and I have just finished the last page. The title of it is 'Starflower,' and it was wrote by Mrs. Eleanor Shirley Dewflicker. And then they say that women can't write! Maybe some women writes stories that is kind of punk and then gets made fun of by the critics, but this woman that wrote 'Starflower' is some queen of a writer. Gee, there is some love passages that is simply superfluous and almost sublimate. 'Starflower' is the name of the heroine, a little girl that always lived in the northern part of Pennsylvania. She is so pretty and sweet that she has lovers come from everywhere to try to win her hand, but she loves only one, a young man who is doing scientific farming near her father's home. Of course science is a great thing, George, and I suppose if it helps raise big crops it must help a man to make love, too. Anyhow, she loves him and some day they are to wed. Just listen to this part, where they are engaged:

Very Pathetic.

"'Starflower,' whispered Robert, placing her little trembling palm in his strong right hand. 'Little girl, I am plain and direct in my speech, as you know. I can't write poetry for you, little girl, like the Byron poems you read to me out in the orchard, and I ain't no Tennyson, but I am a man with a man's heart and two willing hands. I love you!'

"'And I love you, Bob,' murmured Starflower, bewildered by the wonderful rush of happiness that swept over her lithe form and suffused her cheeks with the first flush of girlish love.

"An oriole flashed brightly through the crimson sumac and the brook rippled along like some soft accompaniment to the oldest, sweetest story in the world."

"Gee, George; ain't that some writing?"

"Did he marry her and make a lot of kale?" asked the practical Head Barber.

"No, George," replied the Manicure Lady. "That is the pitiful part of it. A young bridge builder named Walter Orr came to the little town where Starflower dwelt, and he kind of dazzled her with his fine English and his wonderful piano playing. He was a college man, and her Robert didn't know nothing about Virgil or Horace or Rameses or any of them old-timers. Orr knew all about them all, and he could change his voice until it got as soft as the rustling of the breeze through the autumn leaves. When he was talking to his men he spoke kind of commanding, but when he spoke to her he always spoke with the soft pedal. One night, George, she agreed to run away with him, and the next morning they were gone. Just after they eloped Orr got fired and had to take a position that paid him about one-quarter as much money as her former sweetheart made every week out of his registered milk from his registered cows.

It Sounds All Right.

"When she saw poverty staring her in the face she took some kind of a powder and they found her still in death with a note to Robert pinned on her night robe. Then Robert heard about it and went so insane that he called all his cows Starflower."

"It sounds all right," said the Head Barber, "but I wouldn't go nuts over no girl that threw me down!"

Quite Taxable

William Jennings Bryan once visited Cornell University, and while being entertained to dinner by a prominent member of the legal fraternity he told the following story:

"Once out in Nebraska I went to protest against my real estate assessment, and one of the things of which I particularly complained was assessing a goat at $25. I claimed that a goat was not real property in the legal sense of the word, and should not be assessed. One of the assessors, a very pleasant-faced old man, very obligingly said that I could go upstairs with him, and together we would look over the rules and regulations and see what could be done. We looked over the rules, and finally the old man asked:

"'Does your goat run loose on this road?'

"'Well, sometimes,' said I, wondering what the penalty was for that dreadful offense.

"'Does he butt?' again queried the old man.

"'Yes,' I answered, 'he butts.'

"'Well,' said the old man, looking at me, 'this rule says tax all property running and abutting on the highway. I don't see that I can do anything for you. Good day, sir.'"

CUP QUALITY

A Charming Midsummer Hat

By OLIVETTE

A DAINTY little model this for wear with the lacy gowns of July and August. All in pure white, it tones well with the bright eyes and softly flushed cheeks of midsummer days. Draw folds of soft chiffon or mousselaine de soie over the crown and brim of a small milk-white straw shape—chip will do, though milan is better and "horsehair" best of all. Around the crown draw taffeta ribbon finishing in a "pump bow" directly in front. From under this bow, in either direction, lay sheafs of wheat in the prevailing tone of white. And now the final touch is given by the coquettish ruches of soft chiffon that face the entire under brim and appear softly at the back where the brim has a decided upward roll.

Sister's Engagement

TO-DAY'S COMPLETE STORY.

THE daughter of the household, aged 11, looked up from her book as the man caller came into the library.

"How do you do, Mr. Dearmore," she said, getting up politely. "You might as well take a comfortable chair because sister won't be down for ages. She is always slow about getting dressed and I supposed now she'll be slower than ever because she won't care if she does keep you waiting."

"Well, why shouldn't she care, I'd like to know?" inquired the caller with an assumption of surprise designed to be comic.

The young person hitched a little closer to him in her eagerness. "I just found out," she told him, "tonight. I guess they weren't going to tell me, but sister was so interested in brushing out her switch that she didn't notice me, and mother said, 'You might have done better if you'd had more ambition, but, thank heaven, you're engaged at last!' And sister said yes, it was time and she'd have to make the best of it. Why, she's engaged! Don't you understand?"

"You surprise me," said the caller, with interest.

Very Exciting.

The young person nodded her head. "It's awfully exciting to have an engaged person in the family. We never had one before. I held my hand over my mouth to keep from asking right out who it was, but I knew if I spoke they'd make me go away—and then all they said was that where the trooser was coming from if dad didn't make a killing goodness only knew. What's a trooser?"

"A sort of feminine delirium, I believe," the young man told her. Wouldn't you like to read out loud to me from your book?"

"Not when I can talk," the young person assured him, promptly. "I'd think it was Bob Samson, only he hasn't been here for ages. He's riding around a ranch out West now and he always brought me chocolates and petted the dog and waited hours and hours for sister. Mother told her one day for goodness sake when she got her hands on that huge old Samson house to burn it down and put up another one with a French gray drawing room and other things, but I guess Bob slipped a cog somehow"——

"Er—what?"

"Well, Aunt Clara said to mother that a cog in the wheels must have slipped somehow, and how did he ever get away, and wasn't it a pity! So I suppose Bob did it. I always liked his chocolates—he bought me just as good ones as he bought sister. Sometimes they try to pass off cheap candy on me, but I know! Then I feed it to the dog.

"I'm glad it wasn't that Siddens man. He always called me 'little one' and patted my head and he had bronchitis and always coughed before he spoke, and sister said she didn't care if he was rich, but she couldn't endure a man who wore brown ties and ate grapefruit with a fork and anyhow he gave her the shivers. That was the time mother scolded so and sister went to Aunt Clara's for a month.

"I'm surprised at her getting engaged, because she'll have to have a house and meals then and she says picking out things to eat is simply awful and she wouldn't wear her life away keeping down the grocery bills for any man and he might as well make up his mind to it. Anyhow, sister never loses her head, because mother says so, and she'll make him toe the mark. Mother says that with her sweet smile sister could make a man believe white was black, but that seems foolish. Wouldn't you know black if you saw it?"

"I used to think I was able to distinguish colors," admitted the caller.

A Surprise.

"But you're different," said the young person. "It isn't as though you were one of sister's trailers—that's what dad calls 'em. It doesn't make any difference to you. Only I thought if I told you about it you'd understand why she didn't hurry to get down here, now she's interested in one particular man."

"Well," said the caller, "I'll tell you a secret. I'm the particular man!"

The young person's eyes bulged. "Honest?" she squealed. "Why, I was never so sur-r-p-prised in my l-l-life! And you never petted the dog once! My, but you're quiet!"

RECIPE FOR WRITING.

THE one way to write is to do it. Sit down to your typing machine and rattle the keys till a poem slips out where mere space has just been. Sounds simple—well, listen; it isn't; it's only the way you should write. Do I do it? Well, no, I'm confessing that it's not thus my songs I indite. But I take up my little tan Faber, and cudgel my little gray brain, and I cover great sheets of white paper right over and over again with lead marks of black and with smudges which mean that I had to erase. Each "I just dashed off" chap really drudges. He denies? Then he's paid for his "space!"

ENVOI.

A little work, a little play
To keep us going—and so,
Good-day!

A little warmth, a little light
Of love's bestowing—and so,
Good-night!

A little fun to match the sorrow
Of each day's growing—and so,
Good-morrow!

A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing! And so—
Good-bye!

:: REMEMBERING ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

IF I could just remember, when the past is on parade,
Some little deed of merit for each big mistake I've made,
The other days, long vanished, would be glad days to recall,
But Memory leans toward wilder scenes—and I can see them all,

If I could just remember, counting back a score of years,
One act that made a loved one smile—not ten that prompted tears—
I'd dream the past dreams over and forget the wasted wine,
But Memory loves to taunt me with the errors that were mine.

If I could just remember, in the twilight of my life,
One speech that made for peace and love—not ten that hastened strife—
The future might seem dreary and the present might be bare,
But the past would be an orchard with a thousand songbirds there.

How to Manage a Husband

By DOROTHY DIX.

THEY had admired all of the little bride's wedding finery, and had finally drifted over to where the tea table was set by an open window.

"Well, my dear," said the woman in the soft white gown, "I hope you are going to be as happy as the days are long, and I am sure you will, for Jack is a fine fellow, and he is well to do, and an orphan, so you are going to escape hard times and mothers-in-law, two of the principal snags that are most apt to make a big dent in the barque of matrimony, even when they don't wreck it.

"Still, you must not expect to find everything plain sailing. There are a good many storms on even the calmest sea of wedlock, and you are going to find out that lots of things that you expected to happen won't happen, and a lot of things that you were positive couldn't occur, do occur with amazing frequency.

"Also, you are going to discover, and it will give you the jar of your life, that the noble ideal of perfect manhood that you are tying up with has got faults, and peculiarities, and whims, and crochets that you have never suspected concealed about his person.

"Now you take it from me, that the great thing in married life is for the wife to begin right, to get off on the right foot, so to speak, for every man can be managed, and brought to eat out of his wife's hand, if only she goes about it in the proper manner."

"What is the best way of managing a husband?" anxiously inquired the little bride.

The Best Way.

"Well," replied the woman in the soft white gown, "I can't do better than relate to you the experiences of two friends of mine, both of whom married good men, but men who were high tempered, and tyrannical, and cross—the sort of men you know who possess all of the virtues and none of the lovable qualities of life. They are the kind of husbands who are too much gentlemen ever to strike a woman with their hand, but who leave her bruised and bleeding, and wounded to death in spirit after they have stabbed her with their tongues.

"There are lots of men like that, my dear, and when I get elected to the Legislature the very first thing I am going to do is to bring in a bill to make a man's disposition, instead of his morals, a cause for divorce.

"But back to my story. One of these women whom I am telling you is named Bertha, and she is one of those gentle, suave women who are born salve spreaders. Anything like a jolt in the domestic machinery hurts her to the very core of her being. She isn't weak. Oh, dear no. She would hang on to a principle, or a conviction, to eternity, and be loyal to one she loved to the death itself, and if you pushed her to the wall she'd fight until there wasn't an enemy left alive, but she would never argue a question with you, or say a thing that would hurt your feelings, or do anything to make the slightest unpleasantness.

"Well, when the rosy mists of the honeymoon rolled up and she discovered that she was married to a man who was twin brother to the fretful porcupine, and whose prejudices simply strewed the ground around him, she undertook to manage him by tact.

What She Did.

"She only conversed upon the subjects that she knew he agreed with her upon. She devoted her days to rubbing his fur down the right way. She kept everything that was unpleasant, and that could possibly ruffle him, hidden out of sight, and spent her life tip-toeing on eggs for fear of rousing him and exploding his infernal machine of a temper. In short, in order to keep the peace and make her home happy, she went through a very martyrdom of sacrifice of all of her desires and inclinations.

"H'm," said the little bride, "and how did the other woman manage her husband?"

"The other woman," replied the woman of the soft, white dress, "was of a different type. She had a red-headed temper of her own that was a dead ringer for her husband's, besides which she loved a scrap for the pure fun of the thing. She didn't dodge the issue when her husband flung a debatable subject into the family arena. She simply rolled up her sleeves and sailed in, and when the domestic mix-up was over she wasn't always the one who was on the mat.

"She was a good woman, and a good wife and mother, who did her full duty by her family, and she stood pat on her record. She didn't waste any time trying to jolly or cajole her husband as poor Bertha did. If he didn't like the way she did things, and her opinions, why he could lump it, that was all. She was an independent, free spoken woman, and she didn't see why she should wear herself out flattering any old husband into doing the things he ought to do, anyway.

"And she didn't mind expressing these sentiments, but the result was that their house was a dark and bloody battle ground, with no day without its spat. But that was her way of managing a husband."

"Which one of the systems work?" asked the little bride with a troubled air.

"Neither," replied the woman in the soft, white gown.

Flying Men's Mascots

CURIOUS SUPERSTITIONS OF AVIATORS.

LUCK plays a big part in the life of an aviator, and for this reason most airmen are very superstitious. The majority of aviators carry mascots when they fly, and the cleverer the pilot the more the luck-bringing emblems he seems to possess. Vedrines, the crack French flyer, always has a miniature of the famous picture "Mona Lisa" fastened to the side of his aeroplane when he starts on a flight. He carried this picture on his racing monoplane recently when he won the cup at a record speed of 105 miles an hour. Grahame-White does not trouble about mascots to any great extent, but he invariably wears a pair of check riding breeches under his flying overalls when he makes a flight. These garments are popularly supposed to be lucky, and many other aviators have adopted a similar flying garb. Notable among these is Biolovoucic, the young Peruvian airman, who recently flew over the Alps.

A Lion's Tooth.

Another favorite mascot is a little Teddy bear which is strapped to one of the wing stays on the machine. In uaval flying circles a lion's tooth is considered to be a lucky mascot for airmen—a fashion created by the late Lieutenant Parke, for with such an emblem he came out of many serious smashes unscathed. Lewis Turner, the well-known pilot instructor, who flies the Caudron biplanes, has so many mascots that he is generally in doubt as to which he shall take up with him. He recently remarked that were he to wear all his mascots at once he would be mistaken for a toy dealer.

There are many quaint superstitions in vogue at the aerodromes. Chief among these is that should a pilot have one smash he will have two others on the same day if he continues flying. This belief is so firmly rooted in the minds of most aviators that after a mishap they seldom again trust themselves on a machine until twenty-four hours have passed.

Unlucky Thirteen.

Many airmen also have a superstitious dislike of flying in bright sunshine. But there is a substratum of common sense running through this belief. The hot rays of the sun when shining on a damp ground cause heat eddies in the air, which are very dangerous to flying men. These are known as air pockets, which are holes in the air that contain no support for machine or man.

Flying on the thirteenth day of the month is in great disfavor amongst many airmen. And this superstition is largely due to the fact that so many fatal accidents have occurred to airmen on this date. Last year ten pilots were killed whilst flying on the thirteenth of the different months and already this year three airmen have been killed, two on the thirteenth of January and one on the thirteenth of February.

Airmen are also influenced by the behavior of animals on the ground when they are flying over them. If horses or cattle appear terrified at a pilot's approach, and utter warning cries, then this is regarded as an omen of ill-luck. But if the animals over which he is passing are not alarmed to any extent by his approach, then he has little fear that his flight will be anything but successful.

Another bad omen is the stopping of a watch on an aeroplane when it is aloft.

Lady passengers are popularly supposed to ensure the success of an aeroplane flight. One of the most consistent luck-bringers in this respect, is Miss Trehawke Davies. She invariably brings luck to the pilot who takes her on a flight. She recently accompanied Hammel in the Aerial Flying Derby round London when he obtained the second place after a magnificent flight. Miss Davies flew on several occasions with the late Mr. Astley. A few days before his death this airman, whilst flying with Miss Davies, fell in his monoplane from a height of nearly a hundred feet. Both pilot and passenger escaped with a shaking. A few days later Mr. Astley, when flying alone on a similar machine in Ireland, side-slipped in the air at a low altitude and was killed on the spot.

Got It Regular Then.

Mrs. Subbub: "I wonder what's come over your master this morning, Sarah? Instead of being cross, as usual, he started off happy and whistling like a bird."

Sarah (the new "general"): "I'm afraid it's my fault, mum. I got the wrong package, and gave him bird seed for breakfast food."

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON has an affectionate disposition.

Unless her mouth is full of pins or hairpins, he never leaves the house without kissing his wife goodbye.

On rare occasions he has given her money as he was leaving, and when in her alacrity to accept it she has forgotten to kiss him he has been grievously pained. He has never experienced that feeling of momentary reprieve which comes to colder-hearted husbands on such occasions.

He was in a tender mood the other evening, and sought to put his arm around his wife's waist. Alas for the ignorance of man and the tyranny of fashion! He couldn't find it!

He stepped back and looked at her in a puzzled way. Then he followed the line laid out by the dressmaker and slid his arm gently around under her armpits.

The next evening, still tender and loving, this being the springtime of the year, he again put his arm under his wife's armpits, but her waist was not there!

He scratched his head in a puzzled fashion and felt a momentary rebuff. But his love is not of the kind that brooks discouragement, and, after a moment's survey of her form divine, he got down on the floor and put his arm around her ankle, the dressmaker having located her waist there in the dress she was then wearing.

The following evening Lysander John looked before he attempted to embrace, and found her waist was not at her ankles! It had been moved up to her knees!

It was then that he was overcome with a sense of the helplessness of man when opposed to the tyranny of fashion, and he bowed his head in anguish and cried aloud.

"It used to be so simple a matter," he cried, beating his hands on his breast, "for a man to put his arms around the waist of the woman he loved, but alas! it is a simple matter no longer!

"It has become a movable sacrament of love!"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

GO TO AN ARTIST.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Not a day that goes by that I am not told of the wonderfully beautiful hand I have. Artists have stopped me and apologized in the cars and commented on my beautiful hand. Of course, I paid no attention to these comments, but it seems that if I could obtain some revenue through having my hand posed I should like to avail myself of the opportunity. MISS R.

Have your mother go with you to the studio of some reputable artist and ask his opinion.

I am sure, however, that there are many ways more lucrative and ennobling by which your hands can earn you a living. Have you tried them?

DON'T GIVE IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is it proper for a young man of 18 to present his lady friend with a diamond ring on her sixteenth birthday? We are not engaged, but the love between us could not be broken, as we have known each other for four years. V. A. H. F.

Eighteen and sixteen often decide their "bond of love can't be broken," and change their minds ten times before they are old enough to marry. Your love may develop into a sentiment more lasting, but don't give diamond rings till you are older, and know.

THE OUTSIDE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"A" said that when a man is walking with two girl friends he must walk in the center. "B" said when a man is walkinw with two girls he must walk on the outside. H. N. L. M.

A gentleman should always take the outside of the walk.

Wouldn't Be Done

Robbie met a neighbor who was smoking some fine, fragrant tobacco sent by his son in America. He took out his own pipe ostentatiously.

"Hae you a match, Sandy?" he inquired.

The match was forthcoming, but nothing more.

"I do believe," said Robbie, "I hae left ma tobacco at hame."

"Then," said Sandy, after a silence, "ye mich' gie me back ma match."

From Innocence of Thought

By Virginia Terhune Van De Water

MUCH has been written and said within the past few years in commendation of the broad lines on which the training and education of the modern girl is conducted. To add further approval to this twentieth century method would be platitudinous. To cast a slur upon it, or to hint that the latest ideal in the upbringing of women has its attendant drawbacks, is to lay one's self open to the onus of being old-fashioned.

It is a sin in the minds of most people of this generation to be old-fashioned or behind the times in ideals and theories. Yet some of us conservatives still cling to certain of the tenets that were instilled into us 20 and 30 years ago. The memory of our own girlhood sometimes leads us to compare the girl of the period with the "young person" of our early days, and the modern product does not emerge unscathed from the comparison.

It would be carrying conservatism to the limits of folly not to admit the tremendous value of the broader, and deeper, and franker training which the modern girl receives over that of her prototype of a quarter century ago. It would be the height of bigotry not to admit that by her twentieth century education, she has become a clearer thinking, more self-reliant, more useful member of society than her parent was. Yet there are some things missing in the character of the "young person" of to-day which make her elders regret that a modern education could not be absorbed by her without a radical alteration taking place in her character.

Our girl has lost much of the sentimental appeal that belonged to her aunt's or mother's girlhood days. I do not mean by sentiment the mawkish superconsciousness of sex which sometimes masquerades under that name and which can not be too soon stamped out as a menace to all that is best in womanhood. But I do mean that she has lost much of her one-time ability to call forth the highest and best in young mankind by her fresh, untarnished view of the world.

Shrugged His Shoulders.

A youth of my acquaintance called recently on a girl with whom he was much smitten—after the fashion of the male young of the species. The girl was college-bred and had the sophistication of her type. The young man was fond of reading, and the talk drifted into literature. The girl advanced her own theories concerning Brieux and other constructive European writers with absolute frankness, and before the evening ended had aired all her ideas and opinions on the white slave question. When the young man mentioned the conversation to me my face must have betrayed some surprise, for he shrugged his shoulders and laughed a little bitterly.

"Girls have changed since your day, I guess," he remarked—"more's the pity!"

They have changed since that day. They have changed for the better in many things. To a person with entirely modern views they may have improved in all things. Yet it seems a pity that in her intellectual advance our girl should have failed to retain much of the grace and sweetness that served as an inspiration to the men who were youths 20 and 30 years ago.

The Exchange.

In the course of her evolution the "young person" of to-day has exchanged innocence of thought for consciousness of morality. She no longer has manners—she has Manner. She had transformed what was once poise into Pose.

Yet the characteristics which some of us are so narrow as to deplore are doubtless only indications of the advance in the evolution of a woman far broader and better than her predecessors were. Yet, as old-fashioned folk, some of us recall the girls we knew when we were young, and sigh—but very softly, lest the Young Person of To-day should hear—and censure—us.

Making Mother Over

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

WHEN a girl reaches 16, and her head is turned as easily as thistledown, for the reason that it is almost as light, she becomes possessed with the belief that she is superior to her family, a delusion in which her foolishly fond parents unconsciously encourage her.

She is her parents' own child; that is a stubborn fact that even romantic theories of being the stolen offspring of royalty, of which she has read in the fairy tales, can't conquer. She is a rare blossom on a parent stem that looks like a weed, and she wonders that there is no explanation of such a phenomenon.

She learns at an earlier age than one would guess that she can't change her father. She can rule him, and does, but, being a man, he is satisfied to be what he is. He admits his offspring is a rare blossom, but does not for a moment think that the father stem is a weed.

Mother is different. One reason is that she is a woman and knows not that self-content that is wrapped around a man like the bandages around a mummy. And a greater reason is that she is Mother, and, therefore, humble. She also recognizes that her offspring is a rare blossom, the quick eyes of her love making this discovery the moment her baby daughter was first laid in her arms. Because of her love she makes humble comparison, and knows also that she is a weed.

She doesn't resent her daughter's air of superiority, but weakly and foolishly encourages it, thereby turning that little thistledown head a little further out of place.

She Is Displeased.

Naturally the conditions that exist in a home where a girl has been permitted to think she is a princess do not please her, and she begins the process of making over, alternating her work of reformation between the parlor and mother, the former receiving serious attention when she expects company and the latter engaging her energies all the time.

Mother's methods of pronunciation are not those in use now, and she is corrected and called old-fashioned, a term that loses its sweetness when a princess daughter applies it. Mother is too tired when night comes to put on more becoming clothes, and daughter begins at the wrong end of the reformation by complaining about her mother's appearance instead of attaining the same end by making the work lighter.

The family purse will not support more than one peacock. Mother is glad to give daughter that royal plumage, and the girl accepts, and later complains when she struts around that her mother is not dressed as well as other mothers she knows, forgetting that in those families there are no peacocks and the sum alloted for royal plumage is more justly divided.

I do not want girls to cease in this reform of making mother over, but I want them to go at it in a better way. One can't change a mother's old-style clothes into new by complaining, but the change can be wrought by buying mother new clothes. If $10 is given a girl for a new hat and mother says she will make last season's do, the daughter can make mother over by giving her the new hat and wearing the old herself.

Another Way.

If mother shows the unbecoming traces of hard labor, another way is offered for making her over by taking the burden of the home off her shoulders.

If the latest whim in a ribbon, a tie, hat, gloves, dress or shoes will improve daughter, wouldn't they also improve mother, and isn't her need of improvement greater? One has the adornment of youth and needs little; the other is showing all the disfiguring marks of time and needs every assistance pretty clothes may give.

Make mother over by making her think more of herself and less of others! Such a reformation will be good for the whole family, but don't, girls, I implore, go at this reformation in a high-handed, selfish way. Have pride in her and she will begin to have the pride in herself of which many years of monotonous and unappreciated household work have robbed her.

Make her over! Make her young and pretty and carefree again, and use in working the transformation the fairy wand of Love!

Seeing the Pictures

WOMAN with Cerise Hat (embracing woman with headgear of bright violet)—Oh, aren't the pictures too dear? I'm crazy about them, Agnes! Just a little bit of powder on the side of your nose, dear. There—it's off, but you rubbed off the rouge, too. Such atmosphere, don't you think? No, of course, I can't make out what that one means that looks like a mud puddle stirred up with a stick, but I am sure it is something perfectly wonderful if only I could comprehend it!"

Woman with Bright Violet Hat—It certainly makes one feel so advanced to see things like these! Why, I can remember when I used to think a picture should really be a picture of something instead of merely a symbol of a thought. Goodness! Will you look at that dress—the one just coming in! Such things ought to be restricted by law!

Sweet Young Thing (in a flimsy floppy suit)—Perfectly beautiful! I simply love that picture!

Second Sweet Young Thing—So do I. Isn't it glorious to think there is an artist living who can paint a bale of shingles? If you look at it hard enough with your head tilted you get the queerest sort of feeling! Something like being seasick and falling out of a window at the same time! The man who did that is a genius. Wouldn't you simply love to know him?"

On His Nerves.

Square Shouldered Man (with an expression of pain on his face)—Let's get out of here, Genevidve. If I stay any longer I'll say things, and then the long-haired freaks sprinkled about would hang me to one of the staircase pillars and put a frame around me and call the result an impressionistic study of an apple pie. I expect I'd look just as much like a pie as a human being. Oh, help! See that one in the corner—the purple woman with blue spots on her against a scrambled background."

Genevieve—"For goodness' sake, husb! Don't let's people know you're so absolutely ignorant, George! You've got to see this exhibit, because you've got to be able to talk about it, and the sooner you do so the quicker you'll be through! You don't suppose any one really likes these pictures, do you? You're not the only one that's suffering! Come on!"

Square Shouldered Man—"I'll bet that purple woman is suffering. Gosh!"

Angel Child—"Ma, I want a drink. I want a drink, ma! Say, ma, why can't I have a dr"——

His Mother (jerking him along)—"Willie, if I hear another word out of you I'll take you into a corner and whip you good! Here, I left all that sewing and brought you just for your own good, so you'd love pictures, and then you act this way! Look at the pictures and"——

Angel Child—"Aw, I'd rather go to a nickel show! Say, I want a drink"——

Confiding Young Creature (attended by pale youth in extreme garb)——"But when your pictures are exhibited, Arthur, is the time we'll see crowds! If they only knew what a genius you are! The idea of these daubs, when you have done such marvelous things!"

Pale Youth (modestly)—"Well, it'd be kind of tough on these chaps if I spring them now. Let them have their day—I can afford to wait!"

Confiding Young Creature—"Arthur, you are the noblest man alive! You need some one to push you forward—you never do justice to yourself or to your art!"

It Was Plenty.

Woman with Cerise Hat—"There, I've made the rounds. My head aches, but I don't see why. Do you know, there are three pictures back there which I am sure hung upside down?"

Woman with Bright Violet Hat—"I don't care if they are—my shoe hurts awfully. I don't mind saying that I think the pictures are crazy, and we are all geese for wasting time looking at 'em!"

Woman with Cerise Hat—"And you the president of our culture club! My dear! I think it's just your shoe."

Woman with Bright Velvet Hat—"Well, it's something—and whatever it is, it's plenty!"

BEAUTY SECRETS OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Little Viola Dana, "The Poor Little Rich Girl," Talks to Girls in Their 'Teens

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

IF you were only fifteen and had already begun climbing the high ladder that leads to success, would you be simple and natural and truly sweet? Little Viola Dana has not come to the lofty estate of "Sweet Sixteen" yet, but she has already worked her way from music hall dancing and "movies" and vaudeville skits to the enviable position of "A regular Broadway star." And the earnest little girl means to climb higher and higher, and be right at the top of her chosen profession some day if hard work can win her way to the top.

In her dainty pink dressing room at the Hudson Theater in New York the 15-year-old star of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" looks like a real little rosebud of a girl—just as real a little girl as the Gwendolyn whose life she has stepped out of after living it for three hours.

She was pulling black silk stockings over little bare feet and ankles as I came in, and with the sweetest, unself-consciousness she shook back her soft brown curls and rose to greet me with a mixture of childish enthusiasm and womanly grace.

She believes in simple clothes for young girls.

Miss Dana as she looks on and off the stage.

"Did Gwenny make you cry?" she asked.

"YOU did," I answered, deliberately.

"Oh, that was Gwenny," said little Miss Dana. "It isn't Viola Dana out there in the play—she just gets to be Gwendolyn."

Not Self-Conscious.

"Then, of course, you aren't self-conscious if you are living your part?" I questioned with assurance.

"Oh, no. Children on the stage have to be so careful about that," said this naive child. "Some of them do well, and they are told so, and think about it all the time, and get to be such stilted little things. They just MINCE through their parts and act affected everywhere you meet them. That isn't a bit attractive—do you think so?"

"What do you think of simplicity and sweetness and naturalness as prime necessities for attractiveness? That takes in your 'unself-consciousness,'" I said.

Miss Viola gave the matter her earnest consideration. She is to all intents and purposes a dear child—but ten years of stage experience—ten years of work with growing ideals and ambitions have given her a serious quality bespeaking delightfully the woman she will be in a few years.

"I think they are all very important, and if you keep busy and live sensibly and think nice thoughts perhaps you can get to be simple and sweet—for, of course, no girl who is unnatural is a bit attractive."

"Then you believe in simple clothes for young girls?"

"Yes, indeed—but I do like pretty clothes—clothes that suit you. Are mine simple enough, do you think?" pointing to a dainty little green frock and a soft greatcoat of brown that just matched her own chestnut curls. A very girly leghorn hat went with it—and I could fancy Miss Viola looking like the dear little girl she is, instead of the silly, near-young-lady that some girls fancy they can ape more successfully than they can realize the flowerlike sweetness of their own precious never-to-come-again-youth.

"Girls have to be serious about the qualities they want to cultivate," I said, after I had paid due tribute to the embryo woman wanting sartorial praise. "Does keeping well and strong require constant attention and sacrifice?"

"Well, I think you can't have everything. You can't have all the fun you want and do well the thing you want to do, too. Now, I have to have lots of sleep, and if I go along to a party after the theater my voice Voices need such a lot of care to keep them in good condition; I take a sounds strained and horrid next day. glass of malted milk before the theater and another afterward and give up the things I like—chocolate frappes, and foolish combinations, like lobster salad and lemonade, won't do for the girl who wants to accomplish things."

"Do you call late suppers and chocolate frappes a great sacrifice?" I inquired.

"Well, I like things that aren't good for me," was the frank answer; "but I think it's worth while giving up all the little separate pleasures that only stay a minute in order to have a clear complexion, and a clear voice and a well body.

"You see, I truly want to be great some day; I want to go on and on and be some one who counts. And I'm dreaming of that sometimes even when I'm with my books or playing my violin.

"I know that if I truly want to get on I shall have to DO it. Just wishing about it won't work."

Deep Philosophy.

Deep philosophy for fifteen; and yet the girls who are soon to be women must all choose whether they will live for the joy of a fleeting second or for the "durable satisfactions" that make life worth while.

"Have you set some one as your model?" I asked. "Are you working toward a goal, or have you a live ideal whose success you want to equal?"

"Not a bit of it," said Viola Dana. "I've got to be myself, anyway—and I'd lots rather be truly myself. I don't want to imitate. I just want to make my own self do bigger and bigger things all the time.

"People ought to express themselves all the time, I think, instead of imitating some one else—in clothes and voices and thoughts. Thoughts are so wonderful, I think—nice ones give such a sweet expression to the eyes—they just shine through them. I love strong, interesting faces—the kind that belong to people who do things. Girls who are willing to just stand still aren't ever truly pretty, are they?"

The little star's eyes glowed with earnestness.

Yes, those wonderful, deep eyes are green, and she frankly confesses it.

"Maybe that's jealousy," she laughed. "I am jealous if the people I love don't love me enough and show it. You have to be worthy of it, or you don't get it. And some day every girl wants to be found worthy of the biggest love. She wants to marry. I do!"

"You are planning an even fuller and fuller life, aren't you? Work—great success—and marriage?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," said this rich little wise girl. "I want to keep my body well and strong, and to train my mind to get a great deal out of life—and to put something into it, too."

The Tyranny of Criticism

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE Kingdom of Childhood is peopled with wicked elves, ghosts, ogres and hobgoblins, and we hide our heads under the bed covers and long to be grown up that we may vanquish them, little knowing that the Land of Grown-Ups has a greater terror.

It is the tyranny of criticism, and its name is "What Will Folks Say?"

"No," a girl says, "I am not going to the party. I want to go, but I would have to wear my last season's party dress, and what would folks say?"

"We can not afford to give that dinner," a woman will frankly confess, "but if I don't pay my social obligations what will folks say?"

The sickness had been long, painful and costly, and when at last the sufferer was mercifully released the family realized that the long siege had materially diminished the bank account. There were doctors', druggists', undertaker's and nurses' bills to pay, leaving scant protection against want. "But we must buy mourning," the family declares, "for if we don't, what will folks say?"

Once Again.

A girl realizes that her lover has grown cold. Perhaps, down in her heart, she also realizes that she is not so fond of him, but she refuses to give him up as long as cajolery and tears will hold him. "I don't want any one to think I have been jilted," she says, "and if he stops coming here what will folks say?"

It is this tyranny of criticism that is the hobgoblin of the grown-ups, as fearful and real as the ghosts that clanked their chains about our beds in childhood. We hide our trembling heads under the covers, just as we did then, and lose all sense of reason because of the great ogre we have foolishly conjured to torment us.

We are not honest, we are not natural, we are distressingly self-conscious, we are not kind, we are cowardly hypocrites in the presence of a hobgoblin that has no real existence. "What will folks say?" you plead in defense of foolishness. Did you ever realize that you are of the "folks" to whom you credit such powers of condemnation? And do you, as one of the "folks," despise and condemn the woman who wears an old garment because she can not afford a new? Do you look with an air of superiority at any honesty that dares to be honest? Don't you really envy the spirit of the woman who can rise above all consciousness of clothes?

Your Reply.

You will reply that you don't condemn such a person, but that others do. And in saying this, you declare you are better than others. My dear, you are not. We are all very much alike. No one who is worth knowing puts the outward show above the inward worth. If your friends are more friendly when you are a coward, a hypocrite, and extravagant, then they are not the kind of friends worth having, and it is cheapening a very precious word to call them so.

If you meet a woman you like, and whom you would enjoy knowing better, and hesitate to invite that woman to your house because hers is finer, then you do not give her credit for being broad-minded, and are narrow-gauged yourself. It is the personality that counts; not its background or adornment.

And unless you can show yourself so strong, so broad, so big, that your test question is "Is it right?" and not "What will folks say?" you are no further advanced mentally than the child that hides its head under the covers at every unusual sound.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intringe and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, becoming an orphan, is thrown on her own resources. She finds work at the Emporium, a department store owned by Edward Gilder; is accused of the theft of silks, and sent to prison, though innocent. She tells George Demarest, Gilder's head lawyer, that the way to stop thievery is to pay a living wage. In prison she learned from fellow convicts why girls go wrong. She understands their point of view and sympathizes with them. Aggie Lynch, a convict friend of Mary's at Burnsing, sees good "possibilities" for her in the world of crime. Upon Mary's release the slogan "once a criminal always one," prevents her from securing work. She is continually hounded and in desperation throws herself into the North River. Joe Garson, a forger, rescues her and keeps her and Aggie in luxury, though living chaste lives. Mary reads that a famous financier escapes prison through keeping within the letter of the law. She follows his example and becomes the leader of a band of swindlers, robbing only the unscrupulous. Gilder's son Dick meets and loves Mary, who seeks to wreak vengeance on the father through the son. Aggie poses as her cousin, and they pretend to be respectable. They are visited by Detective Cassidy, who tries to scare Mary into leaving town through threats. He is laughed at for his pains, because she was "within the law." The detective, before leaving again, tells Aggie and Joe Garson that "there'll be trouble" for them unless they get out of town.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

There was not the change of a feature in the face of the woman who listened to the accusation. Her eyes steadfastly retained their clear gaze into his; her voice was still coldly formal, as before.

"If it's blackmail, Mr. Irwin, why don't you consult the police?" she inquired, with manifest disdain. Mary turned to the maid, who now entered in response to the bell she had sounded a minute before. "Fanny, will you ask Miss Lynch to come in, please?" Then she faced the lawyer again, with an aloofness of manner that was contemptuous. "Really, Mr. Irwin," she drawled, "why don't you take this matter to the police?"

The reply was uttered with conspicuous exasperation.

Police Wouldn't Keep It Secret.

"You know perfectly well," the lawyer said bitterly, "that General Hastings can not afford such publicity. His position would be jeopardized."

"Oh, as for that," Mary suggested svenly, and now there was a trace of flippancy in her fashion of speaking, "I am sure the police would keep your complaint a secret. Really, you know, Mr. Irwin, I think you had better take your trouble to the police, rather than to me. You will get much more sympathy from them."

The lawyer sprang up, with an air of sudden determination.

"Very well, I will then," he declared, sternly. "I will."

Mary, from her vantage point at the desk across from him, smiled a smile that would have been very engaging to any man under more favorable circumstances, and she pushed in his direction the telephone that stood there.

"3100 Spring," she remarked encouragingly, "will bring an officer almost immediately." She leaned back in her chair and surveyed the baffled man amusedly.

The lawyer was furious over the failure of his effort to intimidate this extraordinarily self-possessed young woman, who made a mock of his every thrust. But he was by no means at the end of his resources.

"Nevertheless," he rejoined, "you know perfectly well that General Hastings never promised to marry this girl. You know——" He broke off as Aggie entered the drawing room.

Now, the girl was demure in seeming almost beyond belief, a childish creature, very fair and dainty, guileless surely, with those untroubled eyes of blue, those softly curving lips of warmest red and the more delicate bloom in the rounded cheeks. There were the charms of innocence and simplicity in the manner of her as she stopped just within the doorway, whence she regarded Mary with a timid, pleading gaze, her slender little form poised lightly as if for flight.

"Did you want me, dear?" she asked. There was something half-plaintive in the modulated cadences of the query.

"Agnes," Mary answered affectionately, "this is Mr. Irwin, who has come to see you in behalf of General Hastings."

"Oh!" the girl murmured, her voice quivering a little, as the lawyer, after a short nod, dropped again into his seat; "oh, I'm so frightened!" She hurried, fluttering, to a low stool behind the desk, beside Mary's chair, and there she sank down, drooping slightly, and catching hold of one of Mary's hands as if in mute pleading for protection against the fear that beset her chaste soul.

"Nonsense!" Mary exclaimed soothingly. "There's really nothing at all to be frightened about, my dear child." Her voice was that with which one seeks to cajole a terrified infant. "You mustn't be afraid, Agnes. Mr. Irwin says that General Hastings did not promise to marry you. Of course, you understand, my dear, that under no circumstances must you say anything that isn't strictly true and that, if he did not promise to marry you, you have no case—none at all. Now, Agnes, tell me; did General Hastings promise to marry you?"

"Oh, yes—oh, yes, indeed!" Aggie cried, falteringly. "And I wish he would. He's such a delightful old gentleman!" As she spoke, the girl let go Mary's hand and clasped her own together ecstatically.

He Scowled Disgustedly.

The legal representative of the delightful old gentleman scowled disgustedly at this outburst. His voice was portentous, as he put a question.

"Was that promise made in writing?"

"No," Aggie answered, gushingly. "But all his letters were in writing, you know. Such wonderful letters!" She raised her blue eysh toward the ceiling in a naive rapture. "So tender and so—er—interesting!" Somehow, the inflection on the last word did not altogether suggest the ingenuous.

"Yes, yes, I dare say," Irwin agreed, hastily, with some evidences of chagrin. He had no intention of dwelling on that feature of the letters, concerning which he had no doubt whatsoever, since he knew the amorous general very well, indeed. They would be interesting, beyond shadow of questioning, horridly interesting. Such was the confessed opinion of the swain himself who had written them in his folly—horribly interesting to all the reading public of the country, since the general was a conspicuous figure.

Mary intervened with a suavity that infuriated the lawyer almost beyond endurance.

"But you're quite sure, Agnes," she questioned gently, "that General Hastings did promise to marry you?" The candor of her manner was perfect.

And the answer of Aggie was given with a like convincing emphasis.

"Oh, yes!" she declared, tensely. "Why, I would swear to it." The limpid eyes, so appealing in their soft lusters, went first to Mary, then gazed trustingly into those of the routed attorney.

"You see, Mr. Irwin, she would swear to that," emphasized Mary.

"We're beaten," he confessed, dejectedly, turning his glance toward Mary, whom, plainly, he regarded as his real adversary in the combat on his client's behalf. "I'm going to be quite frank with you, Miss Turner, quite frank," he stated with more geniality, though with a very crestfallen air. Somehow, indeed, there was just a shade too much of the crestfallen in the fashion of his utterance, and the woman whom he addressed watched warily as he continued. "We can't afford any scandal, so we're going to settle at your own terms." He paused expectantly, but Mary offered no comment; only maintained her alert scrutiny of the man. The lawyer, therefore, leaned forward with a semblance of frank eagerness. Instantly, Aggie had become agog with greedily blissful anticipations, and she uttered a slight ejaculation of joy; but Irwin paid no heed to her. He was occupied in taking from his pocket a thick bill case, and from this presently a sheaf of banknotes, which he laid on the desk before Mary, with a little laugh of discomfiture over having been beaten in the contest.

As he did so, Aggie thrust forth an avaricious hand, but it was caught and held by Mary before it reached above the top of the desk, and the avaricious gesture passed unobserved by the attorney.

"We can't fight where ladies are concerned," he went on, assuming as best he might contrive, a chivalrous tone. "So, if you will just hand over General Hastings' letters, why, here's your money."

Much to the speaker's surprise, there followed an interval of silence, and his puzzlement showed in the knitting of his brows. "You have the letters, haven't you?" he demanded, abruptly.

Aggie coyly took a thick bundle from its resting place on her rounded bosom.

"They never leave me," she murmured, with dulcet passion. There was in her voice a suggestion of desolation—a desolation that was the blighting effect of letting the cherished missives go from her.

VOLS SCOURING UNIVERSE FOR GOOD HURLERS

NASHVILLE, TENN., May —The incessant bombardment of the Vols flingers has almost driven Bill Schwartz insane and his frenzied shrieks for "Hellup" on the hurling hill has completely upset Mr. Hirsig, who was jogging along so serenely, dreaming dreams of bunting fluttering next year in his nice, new ball park.

On the next platform we have seen Mr. Hirsig wigwagging the distressing news to every big league mogul north of the Mason and Dixon's line for an able bodied slabman who can not only get "em over, but can get em past em."

The first aid to the injured comes once more from Redland, whence cameth Cy Dalgren, who had oodles of stuff on the pill but who refused to put the pellet where any opponent could get a crack at it. Cy has been returned to Tuckertown with much thanks and in his stead comes 'Chick' Smith, who is alleged to be some pitcher.

Smith is a portsider and although this is his first season in fast society, coming from the corner lots in Cincinnati, he has shown the making of a great pitcher.

Hendee Goes to Cairo.

Sam Hendee, the titanic coal miner, has been shunted along to Cairo, Ill., in the Kitty League since no team in the Southern League could find a uniform to encompass Samuel. Charles Alabi Case, will in all probability be trade to some club in this circuit, the Turtles for instance, for Bill Bernhard, still remembers the high-grade stuff that the jinx flinger uncovered in 1908. Which was quite a few years back and old age doesn't seem to have the same effect on Case that it does on old wine.

Memphis has offered the Vols a pitcher for Case, but the deal is still hanging fire until waivers have been secured from all the other clubs.

Hirsig made a desperate attempt to land Rube Benton, the ex-Lookout from the Reds, but Reuben is one of the best ball players Cincinnati has had in some time, and although Mr. Hirsig gritted his teeth and offered a wheelbarrow full of regular money for Benton, the Reds refused to give him up.

Ebbets May Help Out.

Hirsig expects Charley Ebbets of the Dodgers to dig up a pitcher for the Vols, and Connie Mack of the Athletics has offered to help him out, too. Connie suggested that the Vols land Roger Salmon from Louisville, for Roger once wore an Athletic uniform, but if he isn't good enough for the Colonels, he surely won't be able to stop the big sticks in this league, which is just about as fast as the American Association, no matter if they do have A. A. tacked on to them.

After starting out like champions on the present road trip the Vols have suddenly developed into selling platers and poor work in the box is the cause of the whole trouble.

Beck is the only dependable slabman, and it takes more than one high-class flinger to hold any club in select company.

PELS SECURE WILSON.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, May —Pitcher Finish E. Wilson, southpaw, who came to the Cleveland club from the Knoxville, Tenn., club last fall, yesterday was released to New Orleans Southern League team.

Banish All Skin Troubles

A Remarkable Remedy That Works Wonders Against Even Weeping Eczema.

Get a Bottle of S. S. S. to-day. It is Certainly a Wonder.

If you have been fighting some blood trouble, some skin disease, call it eczema, lupus, psoriasis, malaria or what you will, there is but one sure, safe way to cure it. Ask at any drug store for a $1.00 bottle of S. S. S. and you are then on the road to health. The action of this remarkable remedy is just as direct, just as positive, just as certain in its influence as that the sun rises in the East. It is one of those rare medical forces which act in the blood with the same degree of certainty that is found in all natural tendencies. The manner in which it dominates and controls the mysterious transference of rich, red, pure arterial blood for the diseased venous blood is marvelous.

Out through every skin pore acids, germs and other blood impurities are forced in the form of invisible vapor. The lungs breathe it out, the liver is stimulated to consume a great proportion of impurities, the stomach and intestines cease to convey into the blood stream the catarrhal, malarial germs; the bowels, kidneys, bladder and all emunctories of the body are marshaled into a fighting force to expel every vestige of eruptive disease.

There is scarcely a community anywhere but what has its living example of the wonderful curative effects of S. S. S. Get a bottle of this famous remedy to-day, and if your case is stubborn or peculiar, write to The Swift Specific Company, 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Their medical laboratory is famous and is conducted by renowned experts in blood and skin diseases. Their advice is entirely free and always strictly personal.

Players Pay Tribute to Mathewson

Stars Call 'Big Six' Greatest Ever

TO HAVE a man's opponents write of his greatness is a tribute that is seldom paid a man. Christy Mathewson is entitled to a feeling of pride that he should carry to his grave.

The work of this great pitcher this spring has attracted so much attention that The Atlanta Georgian sent telegrams to all the leading batters who have faced him, asking their opinions as to his ability and their reasons for such. To a man they award him the honor of being the "King of all pitchers," and their explanation is: "An unparalleled combination of brain and physical ability." Strangely enough, on the day the opinions appeared Matty dropped his first game of the season, being beaten 3 to 2 by Chalmers of Philadelphia.

In the opinions of Matty's prowess from famous batters and players of both leagues are the following, all a gladly given testimonial to Mathewson, who, despite his thirteen years of continuous service in the National League, is regarded as the star of the game in his pitching specialty.

Matty Good For Years.

Jake Daubert, captain of the Brooklyn Club—Christy Mathewson's wonderful pitching so far this season has not been any surprise to me, for I have always regarded him as the greatest pitcher that ever stepped into a box, and after watching him pitch thirteen innings against our team at Ebbets Field recently, I feel convinced that Matty is still good for years to come. During the four years that I have been playing with the Dodgers I have had many occasions to bat against Mathewson, and I can truthfully say that I think he is just as effective to-day as he was the first time I faced him. He has everything that makes a successful twirler. He is cool-headed, whether in pinches or not; has wonderful control, speed and curves and he mixes his curves up so well that he can fool the star hitters as well as the lesser ones. Matty is not only a wonderful pitcher, but he also uses excellent judgment while at the bat.

Bill Dahlen, Manager of the Brooklyn Club—I look upon Mathewson to-day as just as good a pitcher as he was years ago. In former years he worked harder while he was in the box, but he knows more now and, of course, works much easier. After watching him pitch that 15-inning game for the Giants against my club a few days ago I can not help but say what I have always said about him, and that is that he is without any question of doubt the greatest baseball pitcher that I have ever seen in action.

Rucker Praises "Big Six."

Nap Rucker, star twirler of the Brooklyn club—When you hear people say and read in the papers about Mathewson being the greatest pitcher in the country, that is absolutely the truth, and, furthermore, it is not exaggerating things a bit. Matty is certainly a wonderful twirler, and I am sure that he will be just as good in years to come as he is at the present time. I wish him every success, and I only hope that I will be able to go along and pitch as he has for many years.

Manager Huggins, of the St. Louis team—With his wonderful control Matty does not have to use speed. The reason Mathewson is pitching such wonderful ball to-day is because he knows every minute what he is going to do with the ball. I never saw any one pitcher who could put the ball where he wanted it like the big fellow.

Ed Konetchy, St. Louis first baseman—Why, I never could hit him and expect to go along the same way. He is the most remarkable pitcher I ever batted against. Many times have I had three balls in my favor, but he would shoot the next three over and I stood flat-footed waiting for a walk. Some players have told me that they could hit him, but I can't, and that is all I have to say. Matty is as good to-day as he was ten years ago, and ranks with the best in the game.

Umpire Mal Eason—Mathewson is the greatest pitcher this or any other league ever possessed. I have seen some pretty nifty pitching in my time, but I never met a pitcher who could handle a ball like the New York twirler does. I have pitched against him and can truthfully say he is in a class by himself now and, in fact, ever since he started. His twelve years has if anything improved him, for he is doing just as good twirling now as he ever did. Any pitcher who can win games like Matty did the other day in Brooklyn is a wonder.

William Brennan, Eason's umpire partner—Mathewson would have been a success in any business he had started in. Why, he is a student of the game and he would have been the same in any other business he had tackled. I have seen Mathewson many times talking to his infielders in order to steady them in a critical stage of the game, says Brennan. It is generally the infield that is talking to the pitcher. Mathewson would have become a master at chess had he devoted as much time to that game as he has to baseball, for he is without doubt the greatest student of the game we have ever had.

Better in 1912 than 1909.

Jake Stahl, Manager of the Red Sox—The first time I ever batted against Mathewson was in 1903. The next time was during the last world's series. He was much better the last time. I think Mathewson will be one of the world's greatest pitchers for many years to come. I have seen lots of pitching, but I never saw, or expect to see again, anything like the work of Mathewson in the last game at Boston that he won. No pitcher can ever hope to get any nearer perfection. He had much more stuff on the ball in 1912 than he did in 1909, and in a week he had discovered the weaknesses of our batters that other pitchers had not noticed after working against them for several years. Matty has a wonderful brain, and his arm is just as good as his head.

James McAleer, Former Star and Now President of Red Sox—I never had a chance of facing Mathewson as a batter, but I had heard of his work for years. In the few games I saw him prior to the world's series of last fall he was not at his best, and I must admit that I had some doubt about his being the greatest. That doubt disappeared when I saw him work against the Red Sox. In the last game I sat there and took my hat off. His work was not only a revelation, but I felt that I was at last seeing what I had always longed to see—the ideal pitcher. I knew the failings of our batters, and every time I pulled for him not to pitch a certain kind of a ball that was exactly the one he pitched. His control was perfect and his brain work was uncanny. I doubt if baseball ever sees another pitcher like Mathewson. He ought to last six or seven years longer.

Manager Dooln of the Phillies—No man who has shown the remarkable pitching skill of Christy Mathewson, year after year, can do so unless he takes the best care of himself both during and after the playing season. Besides, Mathewson is a student of the game. He is always studying the strong and weak points of the various batsmen. He knows what they can hit and what they can not hit—and he feeds them what they can not get their bats against.

Wagner Puts In Boost.

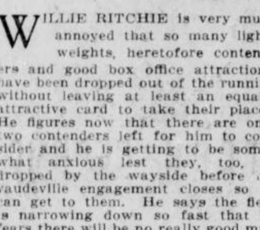
Hans Wagner, of Pittsburg, in speaking of Matty, says: "Mathewson is the greatest pitcher ever seen on the diamond. Some may differ with me, but I have batted against him many times and just when I thought I had him, he would shoot one over and I went to the bench. He has as much speed now as he ever had, but as he can win games without using it he does not resort to trying to knock the catcher down. I remember one game he worked against us last summer in which he did not use a curve ball. He had such excellent control that day that he used nothing but a fast straight one. You can say for me that I think Mathewson is just as good to-day as he ever was."

Tris Speaker, of the Red Sox, says: "Among ball players, Mathewson is generally considered the greatest pitcher that ever lived, and I understood why after seeing him pitch against the Red Sox in the world's series last fall. His control is absolutely perfect, and notwithstanding the fact that no batter is ever afraid of being hit by Mathewson, they find it exceedingly difficult to touch him in a pinch. He will last for many years because he reserves his strength until it is needed. He has a tantalizing way of giving a batter just the kind of a ball that he doesn't want and still he gets enough of it over the plate to have it counted a strike. I guess we'll have to award him the crown of king."

Clarke Calls Him a Marvel.

Manager Clarke—What do I think of Matty as a pitcher? Well, that is a pretty hard matter to say. I always considered him to be a marvel. Why, I look upon the big fellow as the greatest pitcher we have ever had, and, although I have not batted against many of the American League pitchers, I have no fear in saying that the Giant twirler is better than any of them. Some pitchers come into the league and for a couple of years set the world afire, but they depart to the bushes. Not so with Matty, for ever since he started in 1900 he has been a star.

"I do not know anything about what Mathewson was ten years ago, but I do know that he is the best pitcher in the league at the present time, and has been since I came in several years ago," said Heine Zimmerman. "His wonderful control makes it easy for him to fool the batters for he can stick the ball just where he wants to and when he wants to. He uses his head more than the ordinary run of pitchers, and knows exactly what a batter can hit and what he can not hit. I always like to face him because I know that I can feel safe and take chances on swinging on the ball. He still has a lot of speed, but does not have to use it often, because he has such a grand assortment of curves."



MUTT and JEFF COLUMN

WILLIE RITCHIE is very much annoyed that so many lightweights, heretofore contenders and good box office attractions, have been dropped out of the running without leaving at least an equally attractive card to take their places. He figures now that there are only two contenders left for him to consider and he is getting to be somewhat anxious lest they, too, be dropped by the wayside before his vaudeville engagement closes so he can get to them. He says the field is narrowing down so fast that he fears there will be no really good man left for him to fight unless a halt is called. Rivers and Cross are the only ones he now looks upon as worthy of serious consideration. He wants the public to nominate the challenger who he will meet July 4 and promises to take him on. Less than a month hence he will be ready to start preparations for defending his title Independence Day.

* * *

EVIDENTLY Ritchie does not regard either Jack Britton or Freddie Welsh as lightweights, as he does not mention them, and Bud Anderson is not even given a passing thought. Mandot and Wolgast are tossed to the discard because they have been beaten recently and their drawing powers have been given a rude jolt. It also is quite evident that Ritchie wants the public to name Joe Rivers as his July 4 opponent.

WHAT is a perfect physical man, viewed from an athletic standpoint? It's a hard question to answer. There is no settled standard. Ideals vary. Caprice and admiration have their own fixed values.

That he is the "best developed man" that ever came from Europe is the claim made by Wladek Zbyszko, brother of the noted Stanislaus Zbyszko, and, like him, a wrestler. Wladek claims that he is as near perfect, according to European models and European art standards as it is possible for one to be.

The question of "perfect physical man," the measurements of Wladek Zbyszko are interesting, as beating out his contention. Here they are:

Height, 6 feet, 1 inch.
Neck, 18¼ inches.
Chest (normal), 46 inches.
Chest (expanded), 49 inches.
Waist, 36 inches.
Biceps, 18 inches.
Forearm, 17 inches.
Wrist, 10 inches.
Thigh, 27 inches.
Calf, 18 inches.
Weight, 205 pounds.

A HOME run batted out by a high school boy in a vacant lot at Patterson, N. J., won the game for his team in the ninth inning Friday. The ball caromed off the head of Andrew Van Ninwegan, a baker, who was driving past the ball field, and landed on the back of the horse. The horse ran away and the baker, partly stunned by the blow on the head, tumbled off his wagon as it ran into a telegraph pole. The horse continued at a gallop until the wagon was wrecked.

The baker, a baseball fan, decided to make no complaint when he heard that the ball that hit him had brought in a home run and won the game.

JACK Graney, Vean Gregg and Joe Jackson have a scheme.

"Say, fellows," said Graney, do you know what I would like to do this summer? This is it: Take Joe and Vean, disguise them in some way and go to some swell summer hotel up in New York state where the college boys get away with it by playing under assumed names. Dress Joe up as a country rube who didn't know a thing about the game, while Vean and I would pose as tourists. Vean with his golf sticks and tennis racquet, me with my pup on a strap and my pants turned up. What a cinch it would be if we tipped someone off on the inside. We could get our bets down and make a killing.

"How about letting me in on that?" asked Fred Falkenberg.

"I would like to, Cy, all right," replied Graney, "but tell us how we would disguise you so they would not know you."

"As a preacher!" retorted Falkenberg as he reached for his new mackinaw coat.

'UNCLE JOHNNY' ROSS ILL; FEDERAL PRISON MOURNS

John Ross, life convict, is ill, and everybody is sorry at the Federal Prison. Thursday "Uncle Johnny" observed the thirty-third anniversary of his imprisonment. He was in the hospital then, and grew worse immediately, until his life is despaired of. C. H. Burge, Atlanta business man, is attempting to obtain a hearing before the parole board for the old man's application for a parole.

COLD WEATHER THREATENS MICHIGAN'S FRUIT CROP

BENTON HARBOR, MICH., May —The fate of more than $1,000,000 worth of fruit in the great fruit region of Michigan to-day was hanging in the balance as the result of unusually cold weather. A further drop in temperature threatened a disastrous freeze.

Smudge pots were burning all of last night. A record crop is predicted if damage by cold is prevented.

STAHL LEAVES HOSPITAL.

BOSTON, May —Manager Stahl, of the champion Red Sox, whose foot was operated on Monday, left the hospital to-day and with the assistance of a cane was able to make his way about town. Although Stahl expects to join the Red Sox in the West early next week and resume the active management of the club, it will be some time before his name will appear in the line-up.

TOLEDO GETS GOLF TOURNEY.

TOLEDO, May —Toledo was yesterday chosen as the meeting place for the Ohio Golf Association for 1913. The tournament will be held from July 15 to July 19, inclusive. Last year's tourney was also held here.

BONUSES FOR SENATORS.

WASHINGTON, May —Clark Griffith, manager of the Senators, is offering bonuses to all players who refrain from the use of tobacco during the playing season.

TALBOTTON BEATS BUTLER.

TALBOTTON, GA., May —The Talbotton boys defeated Butler here yesterday to the tune of 12 to 10. Ray Burt did the box work for Talbotton, while Chapman, for Butler, was knocked all over the field.

B. NELSON.

He fought and he fought and he fought,
That Dane with the yellowish hair.
He never knew how, with his yellow-haired brow,
But he fought all his fights on the square.
He fought like the fighter he was,
He took all the wallops that came;
But the son of a gun, when the fighting was done,
You will have to admit he was game.
He bought a seat a mile away
And laid down fifty cents.

Frank Chance is on the sick list again, but watching those Yanks in the act of perpetrating baseball is enough to make any manager sick.

We presume that baseball writers in New York have other duties aside from their daily task of trading Hal Chase.

The terrific rate at which the Pirates have been dropping has created grave fear lest the bottom be knocked out of the league.

Bonehead plays are not confined entirely to the baseball yard. For instance, there is the severe reprimand handed to Ty Cobb by the national commission.

The only conclusion to be drawn is that national commission is totally devoid of a sense of humor. Otherwise it could not refrain from laughing itself.

ROUGH HOUSE MERCHANTS.

A sack of peanuts now and then
Is relished by the best of men,
But not when peddlers block the view
And plant their feet all over you.

Mr. F. Chance is beginning to realize that it is hard to be a Peerless Leader unless there is something to lead.

In other words, Mr. Chance threatens to burst into the archives of baseball as the teamless Leader.

One is glad to hear from Ban Johnson that the American League will not tolerate roughneck conduct. One is thereby led to expect that peanut peddlers will be expunged from the grand stand.

Scientists tell us that a hole driven straight through the earth will land in China. If Frank Chance does not have a care he may become a Chinaman.

Rube Waddell is said to be broke, which financial conditions is about two bits less than usual.

Nevertheless, there are kind words to be said about the Federal League. It never will be known as a gret-rich-quick scheme.

Possibly we are mistaken, but John McGraw once hired a youth known as Jim Thorpe.

From now on it will be hard to blame George Stovall if he develops a grouch against spitball pitchers.

Still, the penalty might not have been so strong if the Browns had not been playing too strong for the good of the league.

If Tyrus Cobb had been guilty of the same stunt he might have been given three slaps on the wrist and fined $50, which the club would have paid—again.

The difference between expectorating on an umpire and spiking an innocent bystander is merely the difference as a drawing card between the expectorator and the roughneck.

If Jimmy Clabby and Eddie McGoorty were to pull off one of their terrific battles before the Legislature, said Legislature would decide that pugilism is almost as dangerous as crokinole.

There seems to be a conspiracy among American League pitchers, in restraint of the athletes alleged to be working for F. Chance.

Ed Konetchy's pitching stunt ought to put a lot of our athletes to shame. Some of said athletes can't play one position.

Looking at it from a fair and impartial standpoint, we are willing to lay one V dollar that Reuben Marquard will not win nineteen straight games this season. In fact, when Mr. Marquard wins a game it is a winning streak.

One is willing to admit for the sake of argument that Luther McCarty is the best of our white heavyweights. A milk man's horse looks speedy among a flock of hitching posts.

Jake Stahl is troubled with a bone in his foot. These tidings will cause Ping Bodie to wonder whether the world is turned upside down.

A WAIL.

And he was wondrous dense.

ANDERSON AND MANDOT ARE WORKING FOR BOUT

LOS ANGELES, May —With the arrival from Medford, Oregon, to-day of "Bud" Anderson, and Manager Dick Donald, both principals in the next lightweight battle here, are on the ground.

Anderson, who is matched to meet Joe Mandot in a scheduled 20-round bout before the Pacific Athletic Club at Vernon on the night of May 20, will reopen his old training camp at Doyle's Vernon camp.

Mandot has been in light training for the past week. Yesterday at the Venice camp he boxed four rounds, using "Dude" Clark and "Hobo" Dougherty as sparring partners.

LAGRANGE BALL CLUB WINS ATTENDANCE TROPHY

LA GRANGE, GA., May . —In addition to winning yesterday's game in a sensational manner, LaGrange has also won the attendance trophy of the Georgia-Alabama League. More than 1,900 people crowded the grounds on opening day, which is by several hundred more than any other opening game of the towns in the league. The LaGrange team is now in first-class condition. All those who have been out of the game are ready to play ball, and the outlook for the team to win from now on is splendid.

No-Rim-Cut Tires
10% Oversize

Oversize Means This

Ten per cent extra air capacity over hooked-base clincher tires.

It means the same as extra width, which costs you extra money. It means, on the average, 25 per cent more mileage.

No-Rim-Cut tires, with this 10 per cent oversize, cost no more than clinchers.

More Than 10%

The oversize of No-Rim-Cut tires is more than 10 per cent.

Actual comparison with six makes of clinchers shows the average oversize 16.7 per cent.

That means that you get in No-Rim-Cut tires about one-sixth more air capacity than you get in clinchers. And air is what carries the load.

You get this extra without extra cost. For No-Rim-Cut tires now cost the same as standard clincher tires.

Statistics show that 23 per cent of all clincher tires become rim-cut.

Those are the reasons why clincher tires must go. Men will not stand this rim-cut ruin when a new-type tire prevents it.

Men are bound to demand an oversize tire when they know what it adds to their tire mileage.

No-Rim-Cut tires now outsell all others. Their sales are doubling over and over.

When you know these tires, as legions do, you will never buy any others. Come let us show them to you.

Then Add This

You also get in this new type a tire that can't rim-cut. A clincher tire can and does.

DUNDEE MISSED GREAT CHANCE IN KILBANE GO

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, May —The results of world's championship fights from time to time have served to show that "expert opinion" is not always to be depended upon. For that matter there have been few Blue Ribbon affairs in which the wisdom of the so-called good judges has not received a rebuke.

In the latest championship event, the Kilbane-Dundee bout, there were times when the fellows who thought they knew were on the anxious seat. They feared that another Terry McGovern-Young Corbett catastrophe was in store. There were trying moments indeed for the educated sports who had bet 10 to 4 right up to the ringing of the starting bell and who were loud in their lamentations over the scarcity of short end spurts.

The outcome of the fight will mean a boost for young man Dundee and a corresponding setback for Champion Kilbane. The latter started out loaded with confidence to the Plimsoll mark—carrying a deck load of fat—but the experiences of the first few rounds played havoc with his self-reliance.

Dundee Missed Great Chance.

There are many who state that Dundee missed the chance of his life in the Los Angeles fight. Kilbane, despite his talk of excellent condition and his announcement that the Dundee go was largely in the nature of a trial polse as he intended to invade the lightweight ranks, put up one of the sorriest showings of his career. He was palpably tired in several rounds while Dundee seemed chuck full of strength and ginger. Had Dundee waded in more determinedly instead of trying to impress upon the crowd that he was equally as clever as Kilbane, New York might be boasting a world's champion at the present time.

To the writer Dundee appears in the light of a youngster who possesses fine natural fighting qualifications and does not know how to use them. He seems imbued with an inordinate desire to feint without having any object in view. He keeps ducking when there is nothing to duck from and he is slow to follow up an advantage.

He showed conclusively that he had good punching force. Some of the stiffest smashes during the bout were the body rights with which Dundee countered Kilbane's glancing right handers. Instead of piling in after landing heavily in the manner described, Dundee straightened up and feinted and fiddled because Kilbane feinted and fiddled, and you can depend upon it that the New Yorker's tactics suited the fast tiring Kilbane to a nicety.

Dundee's Blows Lack Force.

Another fault in Dundee's methods is the frequency with which he leaps in the air when trying to score with the left. This trick enables him to reach his opponent's face but when he does connect there is no force to the delivery.

Now, however, that the Easterner has earned the right to travel in select company, he may try to correct some of his shortcomings. If the does not make the attempt he will not be able to show the best that is in him.

Kilbane Was Surprised.

Kilbane, evidently, thought that all he had to do was to feint Dundee into leaving an opening and then whip the right across to the point of the chin. But whatever his shortcomings in other departments of the boxing game, Dundee has quick eyes for menacing rights. Not once but scores of times he converted Kilbane's best meant efforts into misses. I have no doubt that the frequency with which Kilbane's glove bumped into nothing but thin air had a discouraging effect upon the Champion. Old fighters used to say that the jar which follows when one's best punch plows atmosphere is almost as bad as being made the mark for a blow, and such being the case it is very likely that Kilbane's failure to find the Dundee jaw caused the champion to tire earlier than he would have done had he made connections.

MOTORCYCLE STARS WILL RACE AT PRINCE'S TRACK

Jack Prince, owner of the new motordrome being built here, stated last night that twelve of the speediest riders on the coast are now on their way to Atlanta to compete in the first night's races here. Prince expects to hold the first series of races around the twentieth of this month.

Montey, Graves, Henry Lewis, S. A. Shields and Ed Hannon are among these who will appear here.

Inquiries have also come to Prince from Birmingham, Columbus, Ga., and other nearby cities from various riders, who are seeking information concerning the races.

Nelson's Mgr. Praises McCarty Says Luther Is Best Heavyweight

By Ed W. Smith

CHICAGO, May —Not being swayed by any prejudices of section, color or previous condition, we should figure John Robinson, Bat Nelson's hustling manager, in a fine position to judge of the merits of a fighter, big or little, and when John says that Luther McCarty is the real thing in the heavyweight division we are inclined to think that John's opinion is worth considerably more than mere passing mention. Robinson was in New York the other evening when Luther lambasted Frank Moran, the Pittsburg heavyweight, for ten sharp rounds, and he got an excellent line on Luther's ring work. John's opinion is all the more valuable since he isn't friendly with Billy McCarney, Luther's manager, and hasn't been for some time.

* * *

JOHN isn't exactly "all smoked up" over Luther, but he figures him to be easily the best of the white heavyweights of the day, says his record proves it and sincerely believes that the future of a year or so will demonstrate it beyond the shadow of a doubt. Listen to some of John's chatter about the big man from Nebraska: "We had been told for months that Frank Moran was one of the very best of the latest crop of big fellows, and the Eastern friends of Dan McKetrick, who manages him, believed it. Naturally after being matched with McCarty his work was watched with the closest attention.

* * *

"NOW comes one of the interesting parts of the whole tale. After McCarty had bested Moran, and had done the job up beautifully, as I thought, he didn't get a bit of credit. He was scolded and nagged for not actually disposing of Moran more decisively, and that, too, in the face of previous boosts to the effect that Moran was one of the very best of them all. Not a bit of consistency to that line of work. If Moran was one of the best, then McCarty, after beating him, must naturally be one of the very best. Catch the line of reasoning?

* * *

"TO my way of doping it out, McCarty is a man who needs a lot of actual fighting to keep him fit. He is a lazy big fellow and inclined to slow down if he isn't punched continually. He couldn't have been at his best with Moran for that reason, because he had been idle for some little time previous to that encounter. I watched the battle carefully and in common with many others at the ringside tried to pick the flaws in this big fellow's work. I couldn't find many. Of course he is still a bit unpolished, but take it from me, he is picking up the inside stuff rapidly and is getting better every time he works.

* * *

"DURING the tenth round I saw him pull a Kid McCoy trick that enlightened me more than anything about him. Joe Jeannette, who was handling Moran, seeing the hopelessness of the cause, sent Frank out to do and die. Frank sailed in and slammed away like a threshing machine with both arms going wildly. Luther would have been a cherry ripe sucker to have mixed with him right there. Instead, he stepped in close and let go with his right exactly onto Moran's waist line. The punch didn't travel a foot, but it sunk in and instantly Moran was slowed down to a walk. I doubt if a dozen people in the crowd saw the punch or realized its importance. But Moran did. It was exactly the right thing at the right time and convinced me fully himself in any kind of company." that Luther will be able to care for

* * *

IT will not be long now before we find out what good Tom Jones has been able to accomplish with Jess Willard. Around here we figured that the chief fault with the tall man from Kansas was his disinclination to get out in the morning and do road work. Jones saw the point instantly and announced that if he got to handling Jess he would show him the error of his ways. He will get the test the middle of this month, when he slams into and is himself slammed into by Gunboat Smith, one of the toughest of the real tough trial horses of the day. It should be a grand old battle.

JENNINGS HOPES O'LEARY BATS .400 WITH CARDS

ST. LOUIS, MO., May —Hughie Jennings is hoping that Charlie O'Leary will bat .400 with the Cardinals this year.

"O'Leary is one of the finest fellows I ever met and was one of the finest players to get along with I ever heard of. He could not succeed very well any more in the American League, but he has every chance in the National, and I do not see any reason why he should not be a success."

It is a matter of record that players, after leaving the American League, break into the National and hang up good batting averages. Batting was always O'Leary's weak point, but a change of scenery may help him. Likewise have players from the National appeared in the American League and surpassed all previous batting performances.

WASHINGTON, May —The United States will not interfere in the diplomatic controversy between Great Britain and Guatemala over the payment of the claims of British bondholders.

The suspension of Stovall has weakened the playing strength of the Browns fully 20 per cent, and the Naps and White Sox are moaning because the Eastern aggregations will have an easy time trouncing the St. Louis boys.

* * *

But even without Stovall the Browns can grab off an occasional victory. They fractured the winning streak of the Athletics yesterday, driving Pitcher Houck to the cooling shed in the first round.

* * *

Luderus, the Phillies' first sacker, after going hitless for nearly a week, cracked out a homer yesterday, which enabled his team to romp home a winner over the fast-traveling Cardinals.

* * *

The Dodgers walloped the Cubs again yesterday, sliding into second place, and are only a few points behind the leading Phillies.

* * *

Too bad the Yankees can't play against the Tigers all the season. They'd emerge near the top of the American League in October if they did.

* * *

The Red Sox may win the pennant again this year, but it will require some mighty bumping. The Boston boys are over 400 points behind the flying Athletics and no club can spot the Quakertown athletes eight full games and expect to have an easy over-hauling job.

* * *

Only those who have been swatted with a crowbar can appreciate the feelings of the Pirate fans when they lamped the score boards yesterday and discovered that the lowly Boston Braves have trimmed the Pirates for the fourth successive time.

* * *

The White Sox bumped the Senators again yesterday, but Walter Johnson is due to do the flinging to-day for the Washington Athletes and perhaps there will be a different story to tell by nightfall.

* * *

Johnson, by the way, may establish a new pitching record if he goes into the box to-day. The record for consecutive scoreless innings is 45, established some years ago by "Doc" White, of the White Sox. Johnson already has pitched 42 2-3 scoreless innings.

* * *

Four decisions were rendered on one play by the umpires in the Brown-Athletics game yesterday. Ferguson called Oldring out at first and then declared him safe when Brief, the Browns first sacker, fell. The Browns rushed up to Umpire O'Loughlin, who declared Oldring out, whereupon the Athletics ran over to Ferguson, made a roar and Ferguson again declared Oldring safe. Then play resumed.

* * *

The Red Sox polished up their batting orbs yesterday, pounded out 13 hits and beat the Naps 3 to 1, it being their first victory on the Western swing.

* * *

And now will C. Webb Murphy please issue forth and perform a little volplaning stunt from the most heavenward point of the Brooklyn grandstand? The Chicago gentleman said he'd make the 100-foot leap if the Dodgers took a series from the Cubs. The Dodgers have turned the trick.

Mister Murphy, where art thou?

* * *

This is "Johny Evers Day" at the Polo grounds, and hundreds of rooters from Troy, N. Y., the home town of the Cubs' manager, went to New York on a special train to witness the first clash of the season between the ants and the scrappy Chicagoans.

MARIST FIRST IN TRACK MEET; TECH SECOND

MARIST College won the annual Atlanta prep track meet Friday at Marist field with a total of 52 1-3 points. Marist was especially strong in the distance runs and the dashes. Three teams were entered in the meet—Marist, Tech High and G. M. A. Tech High was second with a total of 25 1-3 points, while G. M. A. brought up the rear with 12 1-3.

Lewis, of Marist, was the highest individual point winner with 16 points to his credit. He won the last event of the day, the quarter mile dash, which put him 1 point ahead of Fowler.

John Roberts, of Marist, was the only winner to break a local prep record. Roberts in the pole vault cleared the bar at 9 feet 6 inches. Meyers, of Tech High, was second in this event and also beat the former record. Meyers made 9 feet 4 and just barely missed the next height. Smith, of G. M. A., and Bedell, of Tech High, were tied with 10 points apiece for third highest point winner. Smith had things his own way in the broad and high jumps.

Charlie Allen must have had a grudge against Fowler. In the quarter mile run Allen was easily leading, but held back toward the finish in order to let his teammate, Lewis, who was running second, pass him. This gave Lewis a total of 16 points, just one more than Fowler had.

FATE OF GEORGE STOVALL TO BE SETTLED SUNDAY

ST. LOUIS, May —At a meeting of the directors of the St. Louis American League club here to-morrow, which will be attended by President Ban Johnson, the fate of Manager Stovall will be decided. It is also likely that some action will be taken regarding the poor umpiring with which St. Louis has been afflicted this season.

The local club is going to have something to say about the penalty for Stovall. Colonel Hedges is the majority stockholder and the meeting of the directors seems superfluous, unless the Colonel believes there is safety in numbers.

LE MARIN TO MEET ROLLER.

CHICAGO, May 10.—Constant Le Marin, who put up a game bout against Zbyszko, the Pole, will meet Dr. B. F. Roller in a wrestling bout here Monday night.

PREP LEAGUE NOTES

Saturday morning and afternoon a monster track meet will be held at Ponce DeLeon Park by the Public Grammar Schools of Atlanta.

* * *

Both boys and girls are entered in the meet and three prizes are offered in each event. The morning exercises will commence at 9 o'clock and end at noon. The afternoon events will be finished at 5 o'clock. Moving picture men will be on hand to get some views of the drills and races.

* * *

The cadets of G. M. A. are at present encamped at Lakewood and are having a very enjoyable time. Friday they had a dress parade, which was attended by Governor and Mrs. Brown.

* * *

Emory College will meet Mercer at Macon Saturday in a dual track and field meet. Wilbur Carlton, the man who made such a wonderful showing in the inter-class meet at Emory a short time ago, is expected to win the greatest number of points for Emory. He is entered in seven events.

* * *

This meet is the first inter-collegiate contest that Emory has participated in for a number of years and a great deal of interest is being shown by the students of the school. It is barely possible that Emory will have inter-collegiate athletics in the near future, as the students and alumni of the school are working hard for it.

* * *

Prof. Alexander, of Tech, is considering a plan to enter a team picked from Tech students attending the summer school in the local city league this summer. "Aleck" says that many of the best players in school attend the summer session and a good team could be organized.

* * *

A few short weeks and the Prep baseball season will be a thing of the past. Boys' High appears to have the honors cinched this year. If they win it will be the first time in three years. The last two seasons Boys' High has finished second in the race.

* * *

The 100-yard dash in the Prep meet Friday was the closest race seen in a long time. Allen and Lewis, of Marist, were first and second, but Bedell, of Tech High, was right on their heels.

* * *

Fowler, of Marist, showed up mighty well in the meet Friday. He won three firsts—the hammer, mile and half-mile runs. A new Prep record was made in the pole vault by John Roberts, of Marist. He cleared the bar at 9 feet 6 inches.

* * *

Jim Lowery, of Marist, has been shifted from first to catcher. He was a good first sacker, but had to be sacrificed on account of lack of a backstop. He will no doubt be placed at first base on the all-prep selection this year.

* * *

Sam Armistead, the Boys High catcher, got four hits in the game with Marist Wednesday. Sam is now leading the Prep League batters with an average of over .400. He is catching a good game at present and not a man stole a base on him Wednesday.

* * *

Riverside has first place tied up in a bag in the G. I. A. A. pennant race, but the real fight is for second place between Gordon, G. M. C. and Stone Mountain.

* * *

Gordon and G. M. C. met in a double-header last week which resulted in a game each. Both are anxious to win two straight this time. Gordon is playing on the home grounds and will not take another road trip this season.

* * *

Tech High and Boys High will play again next week. If the Culverites win they still have a slim chance to cop the pennant. The defeat by Peacock was a great blow to the Tech High bunch.

FAMOUS PENN DIRECTOR IN SERIOUS CONDITION

PHILADELPHIA, May —Mike Murphy, one of the world's most famous trainers of athletes, and now director of athletics at the University of Pennsylvania, is thought to be dying at his home here. To-day the attending physicians reported that Murphy was sinking fast and that he had lost control of his faculties.

For several years Murphy has been afflicted with tuberculosis, but has refused to remain in the West, returning each fall and spring to coach the college teams.

Feeding Chickens For Egg Production

Should Begin When the Chick Is Hatched—Lay Foundation Early.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Feeding for egg production should be commenced when the chick is hatched, and there should not be a skip or a jump from start to finish. In other words, to lay the foundation for early and continuous layers the chicken must be well nourished from the time it is hatched until laying maturity.

One of the common complaints in the fall is that the pullets do not commence to lay as early as they should. The reason is they are not ready to lay; they are not fully developed. They have not had sufficient nourishment, and therefore run a month or two over the usual laying period.

A constant and varied supply of good, wholesome foods is the remedy that should be applied, and we know of no better way to accomplish the end sought than by the hopper feeding process. Where the pullet as a chick has been hopper fed with good mixed grains and beefscrap, where a large flock is maintained and the supply of insects is not sufficient to give the animal matter needed, the chances are that it will begin to lay early and keep it up through the winter.

When the feeding is done at intervals it is a difficult matter to feed all that is needed, and as a consequence the chick does not make the best possible growth.

To make good winter layers, do not yard or confine the pullets too early, but allow them to range as long as possible. They will then settle down to steady egg production when they are cooped and will continue through the winter. A convenient size for 50 growing chicks would be 12 by 20 inches at the top and 2 by 20 inches at the bottom and 20 inches deep, with a base extending 3 inches on each side, with 3-inch side to keep the grain from falling out; an inch slit at the bottom of the hopper to allow grain to come out into the tray part, where it is picked out by the chicks. The hopper should be kept under a shelter of some sort to keep the feed dry, which prevents it spoiling. A chicken may eat a little more the first day or two, but after that I do not believe it takes as much to feed them in that way as it does to allow them to become ravenously hungry and then gorge themselves; the repeating of which often causes indigestion and serious results.

Questions and Answers.

Judge Marshall: Can you tell me of some way to get soil stain from the shells of white eggs? I keep a fine lot of White Leghorns, laying pure white eggs, but the red soil here stains them so it can not be washed off so it will not show when sent to market. If you can be of any help to me, I shall certainly be thankful for the service. R. C. B.

Rome, Ga.

ANSWER—It would be a pretty hard matter to get anything that will readily take these mud stains off the shell without injuring the shell or its contents. We see no reason why any considerable number of your eggs should be stained. You should provide good nesting places for your hens, filling them with good litter of some kind that will keep them off the ground. You might try dipping them in alcohol and then rubbing them with a clean cloth. If nice, roomy nest boxes are provided and put in rather dark or secluded places, you should have but little trouble in getting all your hens to use them. Of course, you must have a sufficient number of them, so that hens will not get tired of waiting for room and be obliged to take to the ground.

What Can Be Done in Decatur
IN ONE BLOCK of the South Decatur car line, nearly four and one-half acres of as pretty property as you ever saw, with streets on all sides; shaded and beautifully located; an ideal home site, or you can build on part of it and sell the balance and make your home lot clear; price, $4,500; one-third cash.

ON CANDLER STREET, within three blocks of the South Decatur car, I have fourteen acres fronting 800 feet on Candler Street, for $5,000. This street is now being paved.

HOW ABOUT a lot in half-block of South Decatur car line, with sewer, tile sidewalks and water, 50x190, for $600? Best of neighborhoods and will double in value.

NO PLACE with the future that Decatur has; buy at these low prices and get the benefit of the enhancement.

Fourteenth Street Residence For Sale or Exchange---$3,000 to $5,000 Sure Profit
ON FOURTEENTH STREET, WEST, just a few doors from Peachtree, we own a strictly modern, up to date and practically new residence of nine rooms. This place also has a cement driveway, a garage, and the lot is 50 by 180 to an alley, and is on the south side of the street. The house itself is attractive, has all conveniences. The street, as everyone knows, is one of the most select North Side residence streets. We will sell this property $2,000 under value. On this basis, $6,000 cash will be required, balance of $6,500 will be divided into seven or eight annual payments if desired. $3,000 to $5,000 profit here sure in next three years. Several parties have applied for lease at $75 per month. This means about 7 per cent net on the investment.

Or we will exchange the property for well located income city property; accept or pay difference.

The People Must Now Depend
Upon the Senate for Genuine Reciprocity Provisions in Tariff Bill.

It is upon the Senate that the people must depend for genuine reciprocity provisions in the tariff bill.

The Senate will not be driven into line by a caucus whip. It will have a chance to treat a serious matter with the deliberation it deserves.

There are good reasons for believing that the Senate has ceased to be what it once was—the stronghold of party regularity and of those special interests that have for so long practiced the arts of party regimentation and applied the strangulation of the party gag. There are good reasons for believing that the Senate will respond to the well-nigh unanimous popular demand for real and efficient reciprocity.

The tariff bill was sent to the Senate tagged with the empty NAME of reciprocity, but with no SUBSTANCE of reciprocity in it. It would give away—ABSOLUTELY AND WITHOUT CONDITION—to Canada and other nations trade privileges and immunities that ought to be reserved and kept for the present in our own hands AS A BASIS FOR TARIFF BARGAINING. It would fling a long "free list" at the feet of our trade rivals—WITHOUT ASKING ANY FREEDOM FOR OUR OWN COMMERCE IN RETURN.

Thus the tariff as it stands is not merely wrong in a hundred details. It is wrong in principle. It flouts the very principle that it so loudly proclaims. It makes a mockery of reciprocity.

The fact that the tariff bill in its present shape is not only unreasonable, but in many namable respects CONSCIOUSLY and RECKLESSLY unreasonable, may be illustrated by the particular status of the schedule that has to do with the various grain staples—wheat, oats, rye, buckwheat—and their manufactured products.

When the bill first went to caucus a tax of 10 per cent or so was placed on all these staples, while in every case the foodstuffs made from them by various manufacturing processes WERE ALL PUT UPON THE FREE LIST.

The obvious effect of such an arrangement would be TO DRIVE MOST OF OUR FOOD MANUFACTURING BUSINESS INTO CANADA—with very damaging consequences not only to our manufacturers, but also to our farmers.

Now note the reckless and irresponsible character of the House's tariff tinkering, as shown in this grain schedule. It turns out that the House has been driven by pressure from certain quarters to put natural rye and buckwheat, as well as their manufactured products, on the free list. BUT IT HAS ALLOWED THE 10 PER CENT TAX TO STAND AGAINST NATURAL UNMANUFACTURED WHEAT AND OATS.

There is no earthly reason why this discrimination should have been made—at least no reason fit to print.

The whole grain schedule in its original form was topsy-turvy and preposterous—damaging to every legitimate American interest. As it now stands it outrages every principle of reciprocity and has, besides, lost the consistency and logicality of its original foolishness.

IS THERE ANY MEMBER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES WHO WILL DARE STAND UP AND JUSTIFY THE GRAIN SCHEDULE ON GROUNDS OF RECIPROCITY—OR OF RATIONALITY?

Some More Law on Canal Tolls

In a leading editorial expression in the current Bench and Bar the editors declare, as legal experts, that the provision of the Panama Canal bill to exempt from tolls American coastwise shipping does not seem to contravene any article of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. They say:

"We confess to having been much impressed by Senator O'Gorman's address before the Senate, in which the position was taken that the provision of the canal bill to exempt from tolls American coastwise shipping is not in contravention of Article III of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

"That is to say, as there is nothing to prevent the other nations, including Great Britain, from remitting or reimbursing by subsidy or otherwise all tolls paid by their citizens or subjects for vessels making use of the canal, it is unreasonable to suppose that the United States, by whose money and genius the canal was made possible, may not do likewise with reference to its own citizens.

"In other words, we can see no great difference, in principle, between the right of the United States to reimburse and its right to remit or exempt, and to hold that this country might not exempt its own shipping from tolls would, it seems to us, be to deprive it of a power which clearly resides in every other nation which may make use of the canal."

.:. Sending Messages and Carrying Them .:.

By ELBERT HUBBARD.
Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

IT is, of course, very necessary that when you are intrusted with a message you shall deliver it to the right party in the least possible space of time.

The man, however, who intrusts another with a message has a duty to perform quite as much as the man who is given one.

There are men who can never get messages carried, and other men there be who inspire messengers with loyalty, fidelity and courage.

It is a somewhat curious thing that the most able men are never good teachers. "The great teacher," says Emerson, "is not the man who supplies the most facts, but the one in whose presence we become different people."

Too much individuality repels, overawes, subdues. An overpowering personality is a willopus-wallopus—in other words, a steam-roller that flattens anything and everybody in the vicinity.

Making Merchants.

In the United States there are a few merchants who are discoverers of genius, but most are served by the mediocre, not to mention the time-server, the flunkey, the hypocrite and the lickspittle.

One great merchant in the United States lives in history, not only because he was a great merchant, but because he discovered to the world fully a half-dozen other great merchants. That is, he took young men, gave them an opportunity, and under his beneficent guiding influence these country boys bloomed and blossomed.

When you expect a messenger to deliver a message it is well not to hamper him with too many instructions, nor scare him into innocuous desuetude by retailing the dangers that he will encounter, describing for him the punishment he will receive if he fails to deliver the message.

It is a great man who knows when to place reliance in another, to relegate and delegate and keep discipline out of sight. To let one line of figures at the bottom of the balance sheet tell the tale. This is genius.

Genius in Selection.

Of course, if you repose confidence in the wrong man you will rue it, but genius turns on selection. Big men, nowadays, are big because they get others to do their work.

Napoleon said: "I win my battles with my marshals!" And then when he was asked where he got his marshals, he said: "I make them out of mud!"

What he meant was that he took obscure men and lifted them into positions of prominence by throwing responsibility on them.

Note the loyalty and love of Bertrand, who followed his master to St. Helena, giving up home, religion, family and all of his own private interests that he might serve his master—even refusing to leave his master when he was dead, but remaining at St. Helena in order that his own dust might mingle in the grave with this man he loved.

ELBERT HUBBARD.

Any one who can inspire another with such love cannot be obliterated by the scratch of the pen or the shrug of a shoulder.

Napoleon certainly had personality; at the same time he did not use it to destroy the personality of others.

Ben Lindsey's Boys.

Great is the man—supremely great—who does not bestride the narrow world like a colossus and cause other men to run and peep about under his huge legs to find themselves dishonorable graves.

The world is big enough for all of us, and a very good slogan is: "Make room! Make room!" And if you are bound to give an order, let it be this: "Open up that gangway!"

Ben Lindsey has entrusted a thousand boys, each with a message, and the message he gave them was their commitment papers.

These boys carried the message; and out of the thousand a scant half dozen proved derelict. And just remember that all of these boys belonged to the "criminal class!"

Let us here quote Napoleon again, who said: "The criminal class? Ah, yes, I fight my battles with the criminal class!"

To entrust a message to a messenger with the full confidence that he will do naught else but deliver it to the proper person, and this expeditiously, is a fine art that employers would do well to acquire.

A trusted messenger is fine, but a trusting employer is finer still.

A breath of suspicion will taint the whole fabric of trust. If Ben Lindsey doubted that his boys would go where they were sent, very few of them would ever reach the iron gates and hear their clanging welcome.

A Fine Idea.

The secret of Ben Lindsey's success is simple: he believes in his boys. And that is why the boys believe in him.

Ben Lindsey kissing the cheek of a bad boy and sending the lad away to prison alone, unattended, uncoerced, is a finer thing to me than Napoleon's habit of pulling down the head of one of his marshals and kissing the bearded cheek.

"Know thyself!" said Socrates.

"Trust thyself!" said Emerson.

"Trust others!" says Ben Lindsey.

When President McKinley gave that message to Rowan he trusted Rowan to carry it. There were no instructions, no threats, no implied doubts, no injunctions. Rowan asked no questions; neither did McKinley.

The big man is not the man who wants to live not only his own life but the life of others, but he is great who reposes faith in others, and thus brings out the best that is in them, that which was often before unguessed.

The Country as Seen by a City Man

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

FAR from the glad cries of the traffic policeman to the patient truck driver the pleasant perfume of the gas mains, and the joyous tumult of the shoppers' crush is a strange, weird region called The Country.

Keep away from it! For miles and miles you may wander its monotonous green wastes and never hear the reverberating music of a trolley car rounding a curve.

You will miss the kindly warning of the chauffeur as you crawl from beneath the wheels of his car; your heart will be heavy with homesickness for the freshly turned earth on the torn up streets, and the dainty plank walks around execavations for new buildings.

No Safes Going Up.

There are no flats in the country. There are no gala block-long displays of family washing swung between brick dwellings, like the fluttering pennants on a holiday-dressed man-of-war. No safes destined for the thirty-second story of a highly thatched skyscraper part their hawsers and come hurtling down to the pavement, to provide edification to all nearby populace save that portion that happens to be directly underneath. Never does a fire chief drive unconventionally down the sidewalk execrating the fleeing public as he sweeps by. Never does an ambulance on its splendid errand of mercy crash madly through a crowd, and make business for the other ambulances that follow in its wake.

Evil and savage beasts confront you at every turn. Horned monsters that cry "Moo" and leer at you with lambent fire in their fearsome brown eyes; reptiles that sit on logs chorusing "cheep, cheep," until you approach, and then plunge suspiciously into pools as if distrustful of your presence; long-eared, white-tailed creatures that flicker across your path like flashes of light or peer at you silent and sinister from behind stone walls; winged creatures with plumage copied from women's hats, that chatter in the boughs of trees at sunset, and are up at the first blush of dawn to break your rest with their shrill piping.

All Poets Are Mad!

From the earth and from the dark green woods come scents that startle and disquiet you—not the familiar smells of banana peels, and coal smoke and sewer manholes, but disturbing, unrecognized odors that proceed from tawdry, flimsy creations called flowers, that have their roots in the common dingy ground.

A mad poet—all poets are mad, but this one was madder than most of his fellows—once wrote:

"They come, the merry summer months, with beauty, song and flowers,
They come, the gladsome months that bring thick leafiness to bowers,
Up! Up! My soul, and walk abroad; fling cark and care aside;
Seek silent woods, or rest thyself where peaceful waters glide;
Or underneath the shadow vast of patriarchal tree
Scan through its leaves the boundless sky, in rapt tranquility."

Pay no attention to this lunatic rhapsody. Keep away from The Country—especially in spring.

Writes on
England's Insurance Against Attack

No Nation Would Ever Attack This Country, He Says, if Our Navy Were Ample For Self-Defense—If It were Large Enough to Protect Both Our Atlantic and Pacific Coasts.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

DR. LYMAN ABBOTT is receiving the merited congratulations of his countrymen for the level-headed common sense of his position as an advocate of universal peace.

Dr. Abbott is constitutionally an advocate of peace. He is temperamentally a man of common sense.

And the peace societies which have sought to discipline him by dismissing him from their membership have emphasized in a very great degree the eminent soundness of Dr. Abbott's method of promoting universal peace.

The best way to promote peace is to be prepared for war.

There was never a sounder maxim in history or experience. England has been for four hundred years the prophet and exponent of that doctrine among nations. And England's evangel has gone far as the curse of war is found and has presented a great example as the vindication of a wise and far-seeing policy.

Immune From Attacks.

There can be no answer by the "peace-at-any-price" men to the fact that with the greatest navy in the world England has been absolutely immune from attacks by any foreign nation and absolutely exempt from any war which she did not choose to make.

No nation has attacked England within these four centuries. No nation would attack any other country that had as great a navy as England. No nation would ever attack this country if our navy were ample for self-defense—if it were large enough to protect both our Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

This fact is so true and so self-evident that it is worthy to be an axiom. It is so true and has been so conspicuously vindicated as true that it is simply wonderful that other nations, and particularly our own nation, has not had the common sense to follow it.

Our Own Navy.

The present size of our navy, inadequate as it is, will explain the fact that we have enjoyed a comparative exemption so long as we had no navy, and England one hundred years ago took advantage of our poverty in warships, sailed up our majestic Potomac and laid the capital of this Republic in ashes.

Germany, the most martial of European nations, realizes the common sense which Dr. Abbott has so placidly expressed, and is constantly building its navy to the standard of preserving peace.

Japan has expressed every progressive step in its modern development by the yearly reinforcement of its navy. The teachable genius of Japan is vigorously illustrated in the fact that its answer to the suggestions of the present controversy with the United States is to give an order for three great battleships at once.

For Universal Peace.

There are no sincerer advocates of universal peace than the Hearst newspapers. The editorial page of The New York American contained the article written three years ago on Christmas Day which revived the sentiment for universal peace throughout the world. Copies of that editorial were sent by distinguished hands to the rulers and chief authorities of every great kingdom in the world. It represented, I think, the spirit of the Hearst newspapers. And it was regarded and reproduced as one of the soundest and most effective arguments ever written for universal peace.

But the spirit of that utterance, like the spirit of Lyman Abbott, was the spirit of prudence and of common sense. It realized the fact that no nation can fold its hands and throw away its fighting power while other nations increase their fighting power. Dr. Abbott expressed it in an effective epigram:

An Alternative.

"There are two ways in which a nation can maintain peace. Either by being so weak that it can not fight, or by being so strong that nobody wants to fight it. Our nation should be so strong it will never have to fight."

By and by, when the great nations fully realize that each one is in the race of great navies to stay as long as the others stay, the universal common sense will bring about the universal agreement of nations to cease the building of navies and to submit all quarrels to just tribunals for decision.

But until that day there is no wise or patriotic thing to do but to keep the pace and keep up with the procession, and, as far as national resources will allow, to lead the procession as the United States can do.

The United States Congress will demonstrate the narrowness of its judgment, the weakness of its comprehension and the lack of patriotism in its ranks, if it fails to keep this country side by side with every other great country so long as great navies are the only peace-makers and the only insurance policies against the destruction of war.

We are able to pay $20,000,000 a year as an insurance against war. Let this Congress take out the policy.

The Story of the Loyalists

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE hundred and thirty-five years ago a little company of men, women and children, numbering altogether some hundred and ninety-six souls, turned and struck out for the wilds of Canada.

It was the beginning of the exodus of the "Tories," or, as they called themselves, the "Loyalists." Starting soon after the American Declaration of Independence, the movement broadened and deepened until it took in tens of thousands. It has been estimated that more than one hundred thousand American colonists took refuge in Canada between 1778 and 1784.

These Tories, or Loyalists, were to be found in all the colonies, and in large numbers. Some authorities of acknowledged respectability declare that they were as numerous as the Patriots and in many localities outnumbered them. They were strong in New York State, in North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

In wealth, education and social standing they were far superior to the Whigs, or Patriots. To them belonged nearly all of the "leading families" and "distinguished individuals" of the time. The ancestors of many of the prominent New Yorkers and other influential Americans of to-day were among those who emigrated to Canada rather than live under the banner of the rebeldom.

One of the good things about Time is that it heals wounds, cools passion and opens the eyes of the understanding, so that we can see with unclouded vision the things to which we were once blinded.

The Tories believed that it was their duty to be loyal to the British King and nation, and in obedience to that conviction they stood ready to sacrifice the most precious things that "mortal time affords"—home, wealth, comfort, the good will of their neighbors—yes, and life itself.

From a sense of duty the Loyalists forsook all these things and cast themselves into the bleak, wild, inhospitable wilderness of the North, to suffer unspeakable privations and perils; and small is the mind that is not able to see in all this the highest and grandest of manhood—the Manhood of Principle, the manhood which cheerfully accepts the work in order that it may be faithful to that which it believes to be right.

Absolute truth and right is a mere chimera. The only truth and right that mortals can know anything about, or should be at all concerned about, is that which really and truly commends itself to them as such. The Eternal alone knows what is actually right, and the only thing for us to do is to stand true to that which we honestly feel to be right.

That's what the Tories did. That's what the Patriots did. And [illegible]

250 SHRINER VOTES OUT OF 460 PLEDGED TO ATLANTA

"TAG DAY" SECURES LARGE SUMS FOR UNFORTUNATE CHILDREN

MORE THAN HALF OF SHRINE VOTE PLEDGED FOR ATLANTA; BOOSTERS SURE OF VICTORY

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

DALLAS, TEXAS, May 12.—Atlanta now claims, as pledged, 250 of the 460 votes in the Imperial Council for the 1914 meeting place. Memphis still is alive and the fight has seemingly narrowed down to the two cities.

If Atlanta should lose the committee's recommendation the Georgians will carry the fight to the convention floor.

Potentate Forrest Adair declares it is all over but the shouting. "Atlanta will be the Shrine Mecca in 1914, unless I am very badly mistaken," he said.

The first cheering news received by Atlanta when the delegation arrived Sunday morning was that the seventeen votes of Texas are "sewed up" for Georgia. Then followed Oklahoma, New York, Pennsylvania, Oregon, British Columbia and Honolulu to the Georgia standard.

Memphis, however, still is a menace to Atlanta's chances. The Tennesseans claim that they were first in the field for the meeting, and they are using this argument constantly.

Memphis' tactics may result in a

U. S. to Prosecute Firms Cutting Pay As Tariff Revenge

'They'll Land Behind Bars if They Try to Intimidate Congress,' Says Senator Williams.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The criminal clauses of the Sherman anti-trust act and the prosecuting powers of the Department of Justice will be used in defense of the reductions in duty prescribed by the Underwood tariff bill.

If combinations are found among employers to restrain trade and intimidate Congress by cutting wages and closing factory doors, criminal suits will be instituted.

This is the frank intimation to-day of Senator John Sharp Williams, of the Senate Finance Committee.

"The protected interests are coming to us with the same old plea that they are threatened with ruin," said Senator Williams. "They threaten to cut wages or assert that it will be necessary to cut them. This is plainly intended to intimidate Congress. If it should be discovered the interests are combining to this purpose, the Sherman anti-trust act is sufficiently broad to cover such acts, and we may land some of these gentlemen behind the bars."

TAG DAY RECEIPTS CERTAIN TO ESTABLISH NEW RECORD; ATLANTA GIVES LIBERALLY

Atlanta capitulated Monday to an irresistible force of the city's fairest young women. It was a willing, but costly surrender.

Each of the thousands of captives, as a token of surrender, gave up some part of his or her hard-earned money and received a tag which indicated the money was for the benefit of the Sheltering Arms Orphans' Home.

One of these tags was supposed to insure the "taggee" against being surrounded again by a group of the fair soldiers and submitting to another depletion of his exchequer.

But it didn't.

The person who had any appearance of prosperity was a marked man.

Mayor Declares He Earns Pay Watching Council Politicians

Makes Hot Reply to New Attack by Thomson—Breach Continues to Grow.

"If I did nothing more than watch the Council I would more than earn my salary," declared Mayor Woodward Monday in answer to Albert Thomson's charge that the Mayor's office had become a nonenity in the city government.

"As a matter of fact," continued Mr. Woodward, "the charges are not worth the waste of breath in answering them, still I want to assure the people of Atlanta that I have my hands full watching the politicians, and I am going to continue to watch them and their activities."

Councilman Thomson's attack on the Mayor, the second he has made within a fortnight, has been much more discussed than his first, because it follows Council's vindication of the officials accused of graft.

Politicians assert that the breach between the Mayor and a number of the Councilmen is beyond hope of reunion.

CALL DETECTIVE BURNS TO UNRAVEL PHAGAN MYSTERY; HURRIES BACK FROM EUROPE

William J. Burns, the world-famed detective, probably will take charge of the Phagan case.

The man who unearthed the dynamite outrages and brought the McNamara brothers to justice, will in all probability come to Atlanta within the next few days and lend his efforts toward clearing up the mystery of the death by strangulation of Mary Phagan.

This information was made public Monday following correspondence between Colonel Thomas B. Felder and Mr. Burns since the discovery of the body in the pencil factory.

Mr. Burns is now on his way from Europe, and will arrive on Tuesday or the following day. Upon his arrival in New York he will confer with detectives there and then proceed to Atlanta.

Credit Largely Due Felder.

The services of Mr. Burns have been secured largely through Mr. Felder's efforts, it has developed. Upon Mr. Felder's retention by the citizens of Marietta and relatives of the slain girl to work on the case he journeyed to New York for a conference, with

CITIZENS OF CALIFORNIA TO VOTE ON JAPANESE LAND LAW

Democratic Leaders Decide on Referendum Following President Wilson's Request for Johnson's Veto.

SACRAMENTO, May 12.—Referendum of the anti-alien bill to the people of California has been determined on by the Democratic leaders of the State.

This was learned to-day following the receipt of a telegram from President Wilson to Governor Johnson asking hinf to veto the measure.

The bill was scheduled to reach Governor Johnson to-day from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, where it has been held up. The session of the Legislature ends to-day, and under the provisions of the constitution 30 days ensue during which time the Governor may sign or veto the bill. At the end of that time if it receives no action at the hands of the Executive it becomes a law.

Wilson Asks Johnson To Veto Anti-Alien Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson, through Secretary of State Bryan, has made a formal plea to Governor Johnson, of California, to veto the alien-land bill.

The message to California's Governor was framed at the White House last night. It sets forth in diplomatic language the urgency of the situation created by the demands of Viscount Chinda, the Japanese Ambassador.

The message to Governor Johnson follows:

Two Courses Open.

The President directs me to express his appreciation of your courtesy in delaying action on the land bill now before you, until its provisions could be communicated to the Japanese Government and considered by it.

His Excellency, Baron Chinda, has, on behalf of his Government, presented an earnest protest against the measure. As you have before you but two alternatives, viz, to approve or to veto, it will avail nothing to recall to your attention the amendments suggested to the Legislature; and as the President has already laid before you his views upon the subject, it is unnecessary to reiterate them.

He passes over the questions affecting treaty rights for two reasons; first, because the bill passed by the Legislature is avowedly intended to conform to treaty obligations, and, second, because any conflict complained of would be a matter for the courts, but the President feels justified in expressing again his desire that action on the subject be deferred for this session, and he expresses the desire the more freely because the Legislatur can be reconvened at any time if the welfare of the State requires it.

He is fully alive to the importance of removing any root of discord which may create antagonism between American citizens and the subjects of Oriental nations residing here, but he is impelled by a sense of duty to express the hope that you will see fit to allow time for diplomatic effort. The nations affected by the proposed law are friendly nations—nations that have shown themselves willing to co-operate in the establishment of harmonious relations between their people and ours.

President Offers Aid.

If a postponement commends itself to your judgment the President will be pleased to co-operate in a systematic effort to discover and correct any evils that may exist in connection with land ownership by aliens.

The decision of the administration to urge Governor Johnson to use his power of veto to postpone any land legislation was reached after a series of conferences between the President, Secretary Bryan and John Bassett Moore, counselor of the State Department, and frequent calls at the department by Ambassador Chinda. It was realized that any further attempt to have the bill enacted by the California Legislature amended would be fruitless, since Secretary Bryan's trip to Sacramento was unavailing and the Legislature is to adjourn next Tuesday.

Until Governor Johnson's reply is received the Government probably will make no reply to the protest of Japan further than to acquaint the Ambassador with the fact that every possible effort has been made to have action in California delayed, pending a settlement of the problems involved by diplomacy.

Navy Short of Coal, Battleships and Men.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Alarming developments at the State Department and the White House following the delivery of Japan's protest against the California alien land bill, regarded practically as an ultimatum, has called attention to the unpreparedness of the two offensive and defensive arms of the Government.

Summarized, the unpreparedness of the United States, as obtained from these sources, consists in the following detail:

First. There is only a deceptive preponderance of fighting strength in ships as between Japan and the United States.

Second. There is not coal enough in the Pacific coaling stations to maintain a battle fleet for one month on cruise.

Third. No preparation has been made by the Navy Department since the Japanese situation became acute to remedy the fatal negligence by establishing a sufficient coaling base anywhere outside the limits of the United States proper.

Fourth. The United States will be forced, in case of hostilities in the Pacific, to make its base at San Francisco or at Puget Sound, and it has not one-fifth the coal there that should be there.

Fifth. The Navy Department has a working arrangement with five transcontinental railroads by which they could be utilized in emergency, but, so far, no specific contract for the shipment of coal to the Pacific Coast has been made.

Sixth. The total coal on hand in the navy on July 1 last was 361,757 tons. There were contracted for 63,499 tons. Since that time, according to officials of the Navy Department competent to know, there has been no effort to get larger deliveries or to get options on coal steamers or to make preparation for the rush of material to the Pacific Coast.

Seventh. There are at least eighteen vessels of the battleship type which have been held in reserve and others in ordinary which would be necessary to put in complete commission in case the Atlantic fleet of battleships now equipped were sent to the Pacific. These battleships in reserve need about 10,000 men to fill up their complements, and Congress has not been asked for authority to recruit sufficient men for a fleet. The law limits the enrollment of the navy to 51,500 men. The present enrollment is about 47,000, and if completed up to 51,000 men would scarcely be more than sufficient to equip the emergency fleet of battleships which would have to be sent to the Pacific.

The condition of the Navy Department, as summarized above, was obtained to-day from three of the experts in the Navy Department upon whom the Government would have to depend in case there were a call to arms.

Senators Applaud Plea for Bigger Navy.

NEW YORK, May 12.—"Any man who will put in the way of the United States the slightest obstruction, either by his voice or vote, to a progressive national defense program, who can see that our safety, the peace we love so much and the peace of the world depends on a navy larger than the navies of Europe, is lacking in true patriotism."

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs, sitting at luncheon on Vincent Astor's yacht Noma, at West Point, heard this statement from the lips of Representative Robert F. Broussard, of Louisiana. The committee, just about to land on the rocky slope of the war academy on annual inspection, applauded Broussard to the echo. He continued:

"International peace—yea, even the solid establishment of international arbitration will never be realized until the United States adopts a naval program that will push our navy ahead of the navies of Europe and keep it there. And that President who adopts and prosecutes such a policy will be heralded by the country and the world as a greater world benefactor than either Washington or Lincoln.

"I have just listened to Senator Johnson, of Alabama, a member of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, declare that he was not in favor of a larger army, but in favor of a larger and better trained militia, that might combine at a moment's notice with the regular army.

Wants Cadet Corps Enlarged.

"I quite agree with him, provided we so train our militiamen to work harmoniously with the regulars. Likewise, with the committee whose guest I have the honor to be now, I agree that the cadet corps here at West Point should be enlarged, whether we need them or not. It is well to be prepared. No greater insurance of peace may be found than preparedness for war.

"But how about the navy? Such a policy will do nothing to help the navy. It comes to my notice always that the men in Congress who show the greatest opposition to provisions for an adequate navy are the first in an emergency to cry for war, war, war.

"I saw men at Baltimore oppose a greater navy plank and I now hear them demand that we go to war. They talk with the wisdom of Bourke Cockran, who, once when a member of the House, declared the United States need fear no invasion because right in his city were men who with cobblestones could repel any invading army of aliens.

"Block Navy; Cry for War."

"This idea of blocking the navy and then clamoring for the defense of our national honor was well exemplified recently in Congress when one of my colleagues, a man very dear to me and a sterling American citizen, made a fiery demand that we gird up our loins in defense of our honor. Yet this same man was opposed to a progressive battleship building policy.

"For ten consecutive terms I have been selected secretary of the American group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union for International Arbitration. This will bear me out, I think, when I claim for myself a love of peace."

LEO M. FRANK, the pencil factory superintendent, held in the Phagan mystery, in a new photograph. Mrs. Frank yesterday visited her husband in the Tower, where he is a prisoner pending the action of the Grand Jury.

BURNS CALLED ON TO CAPTURE PHAGAN SLAYER

Raymond Burns, son of William J. Burns, on the case with a view to getting the great detective to come here.

At that time the elder Burns was in Europe investigating the disappearance of Wilberforce Martin, and upon being cabled of Mr. Felder's desires replied that he would return immediately.

Monday it was announced that Burns was on his way to America and that Colonel Felder would take up the Phagan case with him. Felder, it is understood, will give up his own fee to employ Burns and will assist in raising funds for the purpose.

Mr. Burns' warm personal friendship for Mr. Felder has served in a large measure to draw the wizard into the local mystery investigation. The history of their acquaintance leads back to the South Carolina dispensary graft case, which Mr. Felder prosecuted and on which the detective was employed. It was there the two met.

When the Phagan murder was committed and its baffling details confronted Atlanta police, Mr. Felder lost no time in communicating with his friend. That the man who has struck terror to the hearts of criminals by his marvelous knowledge of their ways and his wonderful deductive powers will quickly clear up the mystery is declared certain by those who have followed his work.

With the final rounding up of the evidence against Leo M. Frank and Newt Lee nearing completion, Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey on Monday began the process of elimination of unimportant matter and the shaping of the case for presentation to the Grand Jury.

Waits to Arrange Evidence.

Whether the case will be ready for that tribunal this week is a matter of doubt. The great mass of testimony presents a tangle which will require some time before it is straightened out and arranged properly. Solicitor Dorsey declared Monday morning that he would not present the matter to the Grand Jury until it has been put into a clear, concise form and can be easily handled.

Quick disposition of the cases of the accused men is assured once the matter is placed before the Grand Jury. Should that body find the evidence sufficient to hold Frank and Lee to trial, their cases will be taken up immediately before Judge L. S. Roan, who will open the Criminal Court division of the Fulton County Superior Court on next Monday.

The evidence against both men will be placed before the Grand Jury simultaneously, according to Mr. Dorsey.

Sleuth Leaves Mysteriously.

Much importance is attached to the departure of Solicitor Dorsey's detective Monday morning for parts unknown. While the Solicitor, when questioned as to the destination and purpose of the detective's trip, would give no direct answer, it is believed that the mission is in connection with some clew in the Phagan case which has been unearthed by the mysterious investigator.

The fact that a large number of "character witnesses" are now being interrogated in Brooklyn, N. Y., the former home of Frank, and in other parts of the country bears out this supposition.

That the detective has not confined himself to the theory followed by city police officials in their accumulation of evidence against Frank and Lee, however, was admitted by Solicitor Dorsey and also the possibility that he has stumbled upon an important clew.

Wife Sees Frank in Tower.

While police are exhausting every available source of information to unravel the mystery, Frank and Lee remain in their cells in the Tower chafing with impatience.

Mrs. Frank went to the Tower on Sunday afternoon, paying her first visit to her husband since his arrest nearly two weeks ago. Mrs. Frank was accompanied to the jail by her father, Emil Selig, of 68 East Georgia Avenue. They remained in consultation with the prisoner for nearly an hour.

It was definitely learned Monday that Chief Lanford had not completely eliminated Newt Lee, the negro night watchman of the pencil factory, and that there still exists a suspicion that he may know something of the crime.

In fact, the night watchman has come to be regarded as the real puzzle in the case.

Chief Lanford is not satisfied as to Lee and any possible part he may have played in the tragedy. He declared he had lain awake at night trying to figure out satisfactorily the negro's position.

First Words Still Puzzle.

The point that prevents detectives from eliminating Lee is his first statements to officers following his discovery of the dead girl's body. When he first called the police station, he said he had found a "white woman dead in the basement." The officers who hastened to the factory declared it would have been impossible for him to have discerned whether the girl was white or black from his position when he found her.

When the officers arrived, Lee told them the girl was lying flat of her back. They went into the basement and found the dead girl lying face downward. Lee also told them that the girl had a wound in the back of the head.

Detectives say it is possible that the negro, in the excitement of finding the body, may have been honestly mistaken as to its position, but, at the same time, they find these statements a stumbling block.

Facts Hard to Explain.

"There are many apparently little things in this case that become veritable mountains when we try to get over them. Newt Lee's statements may have been entirely innocent—if they were, they are hard to explain and get out of the way."

The Chief smilingly added:

"If a fellow doesn't care to become gray-haired or land in the insane asylum, he'd better not spend too much time trying to figure out the truth of this mystery and reconcile all of its varied phases and features."

The Pinkertons have instructions to find the murderer, no matter who he may be. Operatives of the agency employed by the National Pencil Company recently put the matter squarely up to Luther Rosser, the company's attorney. He said:

Urge Diligent Search.

"Find the murderer of Mary Phagan. Work in co-operation with the police, work with anyone, work any way that might lead you to success; let your chips fall where they may. You are employed to hunt the murderer until he is found and convicted. It matters not who is guilty."

Five men from the detective agency are working on the case, under the direction of Assistant Superintendent Harry Scott. Through City Detective Black the Pinkertons work in connection with the city police.

Leo M. Frank was visited by Mr Rosser at his cell in the Tower Sunday. They were together only a short while. Mr. Rosser stated he had only paid a "social visit" and had not discussed the case.

Chief of Detectives Lanford said Monday that he was satisfied with the progress of the case so far. He said that the investigation unavoidably had been slow and burdened with a mass of evidence, much of which would have to be eliminated in the final consideration of the case. He was pleased with the new developments which he said added much strength to the line of evidence his men are building up.

TAGGERS BUSY; ALL ATLANTA IS EAGER TO HELP

Few escaped without the signs of repeated surrender. Many proudly wore as many as a half dozen of the lavender tags.

Records Sure to Go.

Before the Tag Day campaign was in progress long it became known that all records would be broken. The record last year was $5,100. By noon Monday the girls were bringing in buckets full of nickels, dimes and dollars to headquarters in the Peters Building. The huge display of wealth was soon tied up in bags and the offices began to take on the appearance of the Bank of England.

The campaign was well organized. Before the average business man had finished his breakfast, the girls were being mobilized at headquarters. By the time that this same business man was in the street car or in his automobile en route to his office, the maidens armed with hundreds of tags were in waiting for him.

Few Able to Escape.

There was no escape. On every corner there was one or more of the attractive, smiling girls stationed. If a person succeeded in getting by one of them without buying a tag it was only to be repeatedly stopped until he finally gave in.

The girls stood at the doors of all the public buildings. They swarmed into the offices in droves. Not many attempted to make any resistance. He who did was not wise. He spent an uncomfortable day. They even invaded the Capitol, tagging everyone from Governor Brown down to the most humble attache.

Heard Farmer Slain; Lynching Is Feared

Sheriff to Rush Negro From County. Killing Results From Cow Trade.

FRANKLIN, GA., May 12.—To prevent possible mob violence, Sheriff Lee Taylor plans this afternoon to take Sam Owensby, a negro, to either Atlanta or Newnan for safekeeping. Owensby to-day shot and killed Brooks Lane, a prominent young farmer, on his plantation three miles from Franklin. The trouble resulted from a trade for a cow.

The negro claims self-defense.

Sheriff Taylor when informed of the killing hurried to the scene and brought the negro to Franklin, where he was lodged in the Heard County jail. There is a large crowd in Franklin and feeling against the negro is strong.

dark horse selection. The committee on the next meeting place will make its selection Tuesday and inform the Imperial Council of its action either Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning.

Make Big Noise for Atlanta.

If there is anybody in Dallas who does not know that Yaarab Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, is here and has come to bring the Imperial Council to Atlanta in 1914, he must be deaf, dumb and blind.

The campaign on behalf of Atlanta was started the very minute Illustrious Potentate Forrest Adair stepped off the train in this town, the head and front of the most enthusiastic and determined delegation that ever went out of Atlanta after something the town wanted or needed in its business.

To be sure, the immediate thing in hand is the session of the Imperial Council now on in Dallas, but the first thing an Atlanta delegate says to a brother Noble, after making himself known, is "How about this Imperial Council thing for Atlanta next year?"

Atlanta Best Advertised.

Far and away the best advertised bidder for the honor of entertaining the Shrine next year is Atlanta. The fame of the Yaarab Temple has been perfectly secure in Shrinedom for many moons, and there isn't a visiting Shriner in this Texas metropolis who hasn't heard of that great "Atlanta spirit," and the amazing things it has accomplished heretofore.

There is a feeling in the atmosphere that everything is about over, so far as next year's session is concerned, except the hurrahing for and congratulating of Atlanta.

Still, nobody is resting. There will be no sort of let up, not so much as a hint of it, until after the vote has been taken in the Imperial Council, and Atlanta officially declared the winner.

Forrest Adair's Nobles have undertaken to convince the Shriners of two things. First, that Atlanta wants the Imperial Council to be its guest next year, sincerely and earnestly, and second, that Atlanta can and will entertain and take care of the gathering most handsomely.

"We have convinced them that we have the hotel accommodations," said Mr. Adair to me to-day. "That seems to be the only thing that ever has gotten on anybody's nerves with respect to Atlanta's chances of getting the meeting next year.

"Atlanta Spirit" Helps.

"There is no difficulty in convincing people that Atlanta is a fine place to visit at any time and for any purpose. Everybody has heard of Atlanta, and knows it is a great city. The very term 'the Atlanta spirit' comes readily to the lips of people living many miles away. Some few have wondered, however, if a city the size of Atlanta can take care of the Imperial Council, and the big influx of visitors it brings into a city always.

"When I show them that we are prepared to take care of 60,000 visitors in first class shape, however, they get away from that hotel doubt in a hurry. The crowds attending the Imperial Council gatherings generally run around forty thousand.

"I hope the folks back home understand how enthusiastic our bunch is. We have come here to land the next year's meeting, and we are going to land it. You wire the Georgian that I say we are coming home with the bacon."

Working in Pairs.

It is herewith wired.

And I believe it.

Certainly there isn't a man in this outfit that isn't rooting and boosting to beat the band for the Atlanta meeting next year. Generally, the delegation works in pairs. In this fashion, they scatter all over Dallas, and stop to orate wherever a bunch of Shriners can be located.

The big guns of the Imperial Council have had Atlanta and 1914 drummed into their heads ever since they came to town.

The conviction is deepening every minute that Atlanta is to win out. Forrest Adair already has outlined a real, sure enough Georgia barbecue and a lot of other things as inducements to visitors to go to Atlanta next year.

From all quarters, I hear nothing but praise of Atlanta and its pluck in raising approximately $100,000 in twelve hours for the Imperial Council's entertainment in 1914.

BULL MOOSERS ASK G. O. P. TO CONVENE FOR REUNION

Hadley and Cummins Lead Fight for Reorganization of Progressives and Republicans.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Representatives of the Progressive forces of the Republican party meeting in Chicago to-day voted to ask the Republican National Committee to call a national convention at as early a date as practicable to consider matters of party reorganization.

The resolution was voted through, following its advocacy by former Governor Herbert S. Hadley, of Missouri; Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa, and other Progressive leaders. Senator William D. Borah, of Idaho, opposed the resolution.

After the resolution was adopted a formal statement was issued by State Senator James S. Trautman, of Kansas, a member of the program committee. The statement follows:

Move Is Explained.

At an informal conference of Republicans from eleven States, held in Chicago May 12, 1913, it was voted that it be submitted to the National Republican Committee as the opinion of those present that a national convention of the party should be held this year at as early a date as may be practicable for the purpose of considering the expediency of changing the basis of representation at future conventions so that delegates shall proportionately represent Republican voters and not the general population to the end that the will of the members of the party may be more accurately determined; also for the purpose of changing the rules relating to delegates and members of the national committee so that the primary election laws of the various States shall be recognized and have full force, and also for the purpose of making such other changes in the method of conducting national conventions and campaigns as shall conduce to giving the utmost possible effect to the principles and policies of the party.

For Reuniting the Party.

It was further the opinion that such a convention might properly and usefully take any other action desirable to reunite the party and to give assurance that it stands for constructive and progressive activity in the affairs of government to the end that the common welfare may be advanced.

It was the unanimous belief of those present that the changes suggested should be made forthwith and that the National Committee be strongly urged to take steps to such an end.

Six Republican Senators who opposed the nomination of President Taft last year are attending the conference, which began yesterday in the Congress Hotel, in the same room where six Governors met and signed letters to Colonel Roosevelt, asking that he become a presidential candidate.

Seventy-five other Republicans who favor a reorganization of the party also attended the first session.

The Senators are Sherman, Illinois; Cummins and Kenyon, Iowa; Borah, Idaho; Crawford, South Dakota, and Gronna, North Dakota.

Captain W. P. Waite, Troop B, McIntosh.

Captain W. K. Young, Troop K, Augusta.

First Lieutenant T. P. Gordon, Troop B, McIntosh.

First Lieutenant W. E. Williamson, Troop K, Augusta.

First Lieutenant Cecil Neal, Troop F, Gainesville.

First Lieutenant H. C. Ashford, Troop L, Atlanta.

Second Lieutenant H. C. Norman, Troop B, McIntosh.

Second Lieutenant M. S. Levy, Troop K, Augusta.

The officers selected will report to the commanding officer of the post the morning of June 10.

DANIELS RETURNS EAST AFTER SAVANNAH VISIT

SAVANNAH, GA., May 12.—Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, arrived in Savannah yesterday afternoon from Port Royal, completing an inspection of the navy yards on the South Atlantic and Gulf coasts. He left at midnight for Washington via Raleigh, N. C., his home. The party was entertained informally in Savannah.

Fair South Carolinan Lauds Georgia Barbecue

Sure One Would Reconcile Blease and His Foes

Miss Marie Fisher, of Charleston, Guest of Honor at Open Air Feast.

The famed Georgia barbecue has won another enthusiastic friend.

The latest ally is beautiful Miss Marie Fisher, of Charleston, S. C. Miss Fisher was at a barbecue prepared in her honor at the Kimballville farm of her cousin, Will V. Zimmer, and it was here she declared that she never had tasted anything so good in her life.

"If we could transplant these typical Georgia barbecues into South Carolina we would have such an era of good-fellowship there that Governor Blease and all his opponents would become fast friends and we'd have no more of those terrible fusses."

So said Miss Fisher as she poised a cleaver preparatory to bringing it down upon a particularly juicy piece of meat. For, with white-plumed hat slightly a-tilt and face flushed with happiness, she was entering right into the spirit of the occasion and busily assisting in serving.

"The nearest we have to a barbecue in South Carolina is a fish fry, and that's no fun at all compared to a Georgia barbecue," she complained.

Miss Fisher is of a wealthy South Carolina family and has been visiting relatives in Atlanta for several weeks. She will return home Thursday.

Disastrous Floods Sweeping Scotland

Crops Badly Damaged and Much Stock Killed by Waters in Perthshire Section.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PERTH, SCOTLAND, May 12.—Disastrous floods are ravaging the southeastern part of Perthshire, doing extensive damage. A great inland sea, 2 1-2 miles broad, has been formed near Blairgowria on Lach Erich. Bridges and railroad tracks have been washed away and roads are impassable.

Crops have been damaged greatly and much live stock has been killed.

Working on Decree in "Hearst Coal Cases"

Additional Suits Against the Trust Will Be Deferred for a Time.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Preparations for framing a decree carrying out the Supreme Court's decision in the "Hearst coal cases" have been made by the Department of Justice.

The decree, which will cancel the so-called 65 per cent. contracts of the coal carrying railroads and coal companies and terminate the railroad control of the Temple Iron Company, will be submitted to the United States District Court at Philadelphia during the last week of May.

While it is the intention of Attorney General McReynolds to file more suits against the Coal Trust, attacking the relationship, direct and indirect, of coal carrying railroads and coal mining companies by means of both the Sherman Anti-Trust law and the commodities clause of the Interstate Commerce act, it is not likely that any further move will be made until the decree in the Temple iron case has been entered.

Cafe Manager, Cut By Boy, Near Death

Physicians Say Several Days Must Elapse Before Crisis in Gilbert's Condition Is Past.

The condition of Owen Gilbert, manager of Scherrer's cafe, who was seriously stabbed Saturday afternoon in a Peachtree Street pool room by Arthur Bridwell, is reported practically unchanged.

At Grady Hospital, where the wounded man was taken immediately after the affray, it was said his condition is critical and that it will be several days before they can say if he will survive.

Arthur Bridwell, the 18-year-old youth who stabbed Gilbert, following an altercation that arose over some remark Gilbert is said to have made about Bridwell's mother, is being held by the police, charged with assault with intent to murder.

SINGING LESSONS BY TELEPHONE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, May 12.—Steps were taken to-day to stop the practice of using the telephone for instructing pupils in singing and the hearing of recitations in languages. The discovery of these uses of telephones was made by a city telephone expert who is helping the telephone companies to cut down their expenses in order to increase the wages of girl operators.

WILSON SURE OF CURRENCY LAW AT THIS SESSION

Bill as Outlined Provides for Emergency Notes Issued Against Commercial Paper.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The Wilson currency bill will follow swiftly upon the Wilson-Underwood tariff. The President has said it, and there will be no failure to do his will.

With the tariff bill disposed of by the House, the Chief Executive has set his representatives to work, and by the time the House returns to its regular sessions three weeks hence, it will have for immediate consideration a bill that will embody the Wilson view of the currency.

Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, is chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, and Carter Glass, of Virginia, will be the chairman of the House Committee as soon as that position is filled.

The President expresses full confidence that he will be able to press this currency bill to enactment before the special session adjourns. He goes the full length of positive speech in declaring it will be a law before the general session of Congress. He is fully as emphatic about it as he was about the tariff bill.

Plan for Regional Banks.

Division of the entire country into fifteen clearing house districts, each district to have its own reserve association, or regional bank, is contemplated in currency reform legislation at the present session.

President Wilson, Representative Underwood and Representative Carter Glass, who will be chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee of the House, have reached an agreement as to the main features of this proposed legislation. They are to have further conferences to settle the details.

In the message to be sent to Congress shortly after June 1 there will be outlined the general principles of currency reforms he will favor, but will not specify details. No legislation for the Federal control of stock exchanges will be sanctioned by the President, although three members of the Banking and Currency Committee will strive to have this reform included in the bill. Glass is opposed to such legislation.

The members of the committee who favor Federal control of the Stock Exchange will seek an alliance with radical Republicans on this question and force a vote on it. They are believed to be hopelessly in the minority, but will rely on the report of the money trust investigating committee to sustain them.

Features of Reform Plan.

The general reform principles agreed to by Underwood and the President include:

Establishment of fifteen reserve associations, or regional banks under boards of control, the operation of each association to be under the clearing house system.

Each board of control to consist of nine members, three to be of local selection, three to be designated by the President and three others, one each to represent the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Agriculture. Each association may transact a general banking business under the supervision of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Each association to circulate its notes under prescribed conditions, the basis for these notes to be commercial securities of a recognized stability as well as Government, State and municipal bonds. All national banks may obtain membership in the associations and such other banks as the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller may prescribe.

The allotment of territory to each of these associations will be left in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency.

Senators See Free Wool and Sugar Defeat.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Sugar and wool Senators confidently predict that these two schedules would not be free on the tariff bill finally passed by the Senate. To-day they said enough Democrats had been lined up to defeat the Underwood program with regard to both these commodities, naming Senators Newlands and Pittman, Nevada; Shafroth, Colorado; Chamberlain, Oregon; Walsh, Montana, and Ransdell and Thornton, Louisiana, as among those who would vote against free sugar and wool.

The fight, it was declared, would come on the floor of the Senate, the Underwood bill being scheduled to go through the Senate Finance Committee without a change in either of the commodities.

It was also expected to-day that changes would be made in tariff rates on cattle, wheat, oats and many other commodities. The Democratic majority believes that cattle, wheat and oats should be put on the free list.

Manufacturers Heard In Secret on Tariff.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Members of the Senate Finance Committee have had private conferences with representatives of manufacturers on practically all of the 600 paragraphs of the Underwood tariff bill.

The privacy that has attended these conferences will be made the subject of Republican attack in the Senate.

Republicans continued to assert they will have enough Democratic support to compel the committee to listen to the pleas of manufacturers.

Wilson Predicts No Changes in Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson is not worrying about the passage of the Underwood tariff bill by the Senate. He told the members of the "newspaper cabinet" at the semi-weekly meeting to-day there was no "rough water ahead," as reported from the upper house of Congress and that he anticipated the adoption of the bill in its present form after comparatively little argument.

Cyclone and Hail Do Damage in France

Vineyards Suffer Loss, Workers Injured and Aviators Are Dashed to Earth.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 12.—A terrific cyclone swept parts of the Department of Marne to-day, doing extensive damage. Following a cloudburst, there was a heavy fall of hail. Many workers in the fields were hurt by being struck by the huge stones. Serious loss was caused to the vineyards.

Two aviators flying near Epernay, were blown to earth and suffered injuries which may prove fatal.

Her 'Fatal Beauty' Costs Actress Job

Evelyn Carter Carrington, Too Pretty for Role, Wins Suit Against Producer.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Evelyn Carter Carrington was "so handsome" she was discharged from the "Firefly Theatrical Company and she has a judgment of $166 against Arthur Hammerstein to prove it.

Miss Carrington agreed to assume the character—a widow of uncertain years—for $100 a week. She appeared once, then was dropped, and sued for two weeks' salary minus an advance.

"When Miss Carrington was engaged for the role," said Mr. Hammerstein on the witness stand, "we thought she could make up to look old, but her loveliness stuck out through the make-up and she attracted attention from the other characters when she was supposed to have only a minor part."

House Begins Task of Naming Committees

President Is Expected to Express Preference Regarding Framers of Currency Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—With practically the entire membership of the House clamoring for choice places, the Ways and Means Committee essayed to-day the gigantic task of making the committee assignments for the Sixty-third Congress.

The Banking and Currency Committee, which is to frame the kind of currency measure wanted by the President, will be among the first committees named by the steering committee. President Wilson himself is expected to express a preference regarding the formation of this committee.

There are 56 standing committees in the House, and of these only five have been organized.

We thought other fabric gloves were as good as Kayser's.

We're mistaken—hereafter in fabric gloves we shall stock nothing but Kayser's.

In the meantime—what about these other gloves? They're the identical makes that other good merchants are offering to-day at full price. Let them do it—our mind is made up.

Starting to-morrow

Every Fabric Glove in Stock (Save Kayser's) Must Go

All the gloves are spick, span, new. There are lisle gloves, Milanese lisle gloves and Chamoisette gloves. All two-clasp style, in white, black, tan, grey, mode. Full line of sizes in each color. Up to to-day their prices were 50c, 75c and $1. To-morrow the price will be 25c.

25c

All $1 & $1.50 Fabric Gloves at 59c

These are in 16-button length, in same colors and materials as above. All sizes. Sale starts at 9 a. m., with full line of sizes and colors. No phone orders, exchanges, try-ons or approvals. Extra salespeople in attendance.

A Snowdrift of Laces and Embroideries Is Melting Away Under the Spell of May Prices

It is fairly snowing laces and embroideries. They're piled heaping high on the counters, on tables, everywhere.

Scissors snipping gaily, women buying freely, complimentary remarks flying---a gay, happy throng sharing the best lace and embroidery bargains we've had in many a day.

But there will be plenty left for to-morrow, and the day after. Told yesterday how we secured these thousands of yards; to-day we can only recapitulate.

Prices run like this:

$1 to $2 allover embroideries and flouncings	59c	35c to 50c Cluny laces	19c
$3 to $5 Shadow, Chantilly and Darn lace bands	$1.69	75c to $1 allover laces	49c

Winner of 'Racer' Now in Competition for Beautiful Shetland Pony

Youngsters Know Faith Is Kept In Hearst Papers' Contests

STANDING OF CONTESTANTS IN RACE FOR PONY OUTFITS SHOWS NUMEROUS CHANGES

"I was a winner of one of your 'racers' last year, and hope to work hard now, and also to be a winner in this pony contest," writes one of the contestants for The Georgian and American pony outfits.

"We take your paper, and think it the best paper going. You shall hear from me again," the letter concludes.

Those who have won Georgian prizes in the past are pleased with them, it is plain. They have no misgivings as to the quality of the rewards offered now—they know The Georgian and American keep faith with their readers.

Meanwhile, the votes roll in.

The standing of contestants is published again today, and those in the race can see how their rivals are faring. It is plain that many are "holding back" votes. This is poor policy, for the "other fellow" can do the same thing.

Besides, nothing succeeds like success, and the fact that your name in the published list is followed by a big total of votes encourages your friends to help you. No use backing a straggler at the tailend, you know.

WOODBERRY HOLDS FINALS THIS WEEK

The fifth annual commencement exercises of Miss Woodberry's School will be a feature in educational circles this week. The program will begin Friday with a recital. It will conclude the following Monday with the graduation of one of the largest classes in the history of the institution.

There will be a lawn fete and musical complimentary to the alumnae Sunday. The commencement sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. C. T. A. Pise. Following class day exercises at noon Monday on the lawn, there will come the delivery of diplomas at 8 o'clock in the evening.

The valedictory address will be made by Miss Amelia Carney Malone; Miss Elliott Beattie Johnson will render a violin solo; prayers and benediction will be said by the Right Rev. C. K. Nelson, bishop of Atlanta.

Old Ireland Forever! Postcards to Be Green

Color Adopted by Burleson to Conform With International Union Idea.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Hereafter Uncle Sam will have green postal cards. Postmaster General Albert S. Burleson has so ordered.

The domestic library size one-cent postal card will be printed pale green to conform to the idea of the International Postal Union.

Foreign countries print cards of the lowest denominations in green. Mr. Burleson ordered a similar color to help foreign-born Americans who are familiar with the green card.

Walks 600 Miles to Have Girl Arrested

Alaska Miner Accuses His Former Fiancee of Stealing $5,000 in Gold Dust.

TACOMA, WASH., May 12.—Traveling afoot night and day, Ben Dahl, a Koyukuk miner of Hammond, reached Fairbanks, 600 miles away, in time to cause the arrest of Norah Moore, whom he accused of stealing $5,000 in gold dust.

He said she had promised to marry him and invest the money in real estate. Instead she decamped in the night for Fairbanks with a fast dog team.

Meat Is Barred at Adventist Council

Coffee, Tea and Condiments Also Taboo at Big Conference in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Delegates and visitors are coming from nearly all the countries of the world to attend the thirty-eighth session of the general conference of the Seventh Day Adventists, which will be held in a city of tents here.

No flesh foods of any kind will be served and there will be no coffee or tea there, nor condiments such as vinegar, mustard, catsup or pepper.

The first meeting will be held Thursday.

Two Slaying Cases To Be Tried.

COLUMBUS.—Superior Court of Muscogee County began its May term Monday. Bill Green will be tried for killing Otis D. Kitchens, while Jennie Mae Radcliff will answer for the death of her husband, George M. Radcliff.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

"My sister's husband had an attack of rheumatism in his arm," writes a well-known resident of Newton, Iowa. "I gave him a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment, which he applied to his arm, and on the next morning the rheumatism was gone." For chronic muscular rheumatism you will find nothing better than Chamberlain's Liniment. Sold by all dealers.

Good Home Made Bread

Put 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon Silver-Leaf Lard, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1½ teaspoon salt in large bowl. Pour on 1 pint boiling water and 1 pint scalded milk, when luke warm add 1 dissolved yeast cake and 1 quart of flour. Stir until thoroughly mixed. Add 2 quarts of flour, mix and turn on floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic and until bubbles appear under the surface. Cover and set in a warm place to raise. Cut down, knead, shape into loaves, place in greased pans, cover and let raise to double bulk. Bake in hot oven.

A good recipe, closely followed and good materials will give you good, sweet, wholesome, fine grained, tender bread.

Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard

is the best shortening you can use in your bread. It is Government inspected, guaranteed pure, put up in tight covered, new tin pails to keep it sweet and clean, until the last spoonful is used.

Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard is always good and will give you uniform, good results in baking.

Use Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard for tasty pastry.

Straighten That Lame Back

There's too much suffering among older folks from achy, stiff, lame backs, distressing urinary disorders, weak eyes, dropsy and rheumatic joints.

These are signs of kidney weakness, which, in youth or age, poisons the blood, disorders the urine and lames the limbs or back.

There's help for weakened kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills have brought relief to thousands. Here's Atlanta testimony.

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

ATLANTA PROOF

Testimony of a Resident of Whitehall Street

James J. Fennell, 173 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga., says: "Since 1907, I have not had an attack of backache or any other symptom of kidney complaint. Doan's Kidney Pills made a positive cure in my case. I suffered a great deal from kidney trouble and it was not until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills that I found permanent relief."

Strike in Cincinnati Stops Every Trolley

Mayor Threatens to Revoke Franchise Unless Traction Company Agrees to Arbitrate.

CINCINNATI, May 12.—Completely crippled and paralyzed by the strike of its motormen and conductors, no attempt was made to-day by the Cincinnati Traction Company to operate a single car. The company is preparing to break the strike with imported men.

Mayor Hunt is still waiting for his reply to the letter sent to W. Kesley Schoepf, president of the company, demanding that the company arbitrate the differences with the men. If the company does not answer by 6 o'clock this afternoon, the Mayor will begin court proceedings to annul the franchise.

OWNER INJURED DRIVING CAR FROM BURNING GARAGE

G. C. Rogers was suffering from painful burns about the face and hands Monday, received when he drove his automobile from a burning garage at 521 Peachtree Street Sunday night.

Two automobiles, valued at about $5,000, were destroyed. One was a Chalmers belonging to Arthur Reed, and the other an Everett owned by Carl Witt.

BALKAN WAR IS ENDED; PEACE TREATY DRAWN

Combatants Officially Promise to Cease Hostilities—Arbiters to Meet in London.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, May 12.—The war between Turkey and the states of the Balkan Confederation is at an end. The only thing which remains to be done now is the formulation of a treaty of peace.

The reply of the Balkan allies to the recent representations of the powers was handed in to-day and it contains a definite promise on the part of the Balkan states and Greece to cease all hostilities until a peace treaty can be drawn up.

Notification was sent to the powers from Sofia, Belgrade, Cettinje and Athens that peace plenipotentiaries will be dispatched immediately to London.

It is expected that the peace negotiations will be renewed in London within a fortnight.

France Spain's Ally In Proposed Treaty.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 12.—Formal announcement of the inception of a treaty which will make Spain an ally of France is expected as soon as the result of the visit of King Alfonso and Premier Romanson of Spain to France is known.

It was learned to-day from an official source that Alfonso made representations to President Poincare to show that Spain is anxious to enter into negotiations without delay.

The press believes the French Foreign Office views the offer favorably.

WOMEN'S PAPER LOSES IN FIGHT FOR EQUAL RIGHTS

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The long fight of the Lewis Publishing Company, of St. Louis, to have the Woman's Magazine placed on a par and accorded similar privileges with other newspapers by the Postoffice Department, was lost to-day by a final decision of the United States Supreme Court.

Calls Persian Tunic Best Garb for Women

Wife of Lecturer Who Has Visited All Lands Adopts That Costume.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Mrs. R. G. Knowles, wife of the explorer and lecturer, is inclined to the belief after visiting every country in the world that for combination of art and comfort no dress excels that of the women of Persia.

To back up her opinion Mrs. Knowles has appeared at some of her soirees and afternoon receptions attired in the unusual dress of the grande dame of Persia.

It consists of a draped divided tunic, which looks like, but is not exactly, the Eastern "bloomers." The garment is of heavy silken striped material in wonderful colors. Mrs. Knowles has added an Occidental touch to this costume by wearing silk stockings and satin slippers instead of sandals.

Woman, 93, Races in Auto and Wins

Defeats Woman of Twenty-five in Twenty Miles—Shopping Tour Expenses the Stake.

DELMONT, PA., May 12.—As the result of some good-natured bantering over the speed of their motor cars and their ability as drivers, Mrs. George Wallace, ninety-three, and Mrs. Harry Leordon, twenty-five, raced twenty miles to Greensburg, the stakes being the expenses of a shopping tour in the latter town.

The start was made at 8:30 a. m., and 53 minutes later the elder woman drove her car into Greensburg. Two minutes later Mrs. Leordon arrived. Mrs. Wallace had never once slackened speed, and according to Mr. and Mrs. William Blose, her passengers, she took the curves and corners with the daring of an Oldfield.

FOUR HURT IN WRECK ON CENTRAL NEAR COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, GA., May 12.—Wrecking crews this morning cleared the track, after working yesterday afternoon and last night, near Columbus, where Central of Georgia passenger train No. 1 was wrecked at 4:05 o'clock yesterday. The combination baggage and smoking car was overturned and the engine and three steel coaches were derailed. Roy Williams, of Columbus, and three negroes were injured, Williams being seriously hurt.

U. D. C. RECORDS DAMAGED BY FLOODS IN KENTUCKY

Members of the Atlanta Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, have been sent the following notice by Mrs. W. S. Coleman, recording secretary:

"On account of the recent floods in Kentucky, the home of Mrs. Roy McKinney, recording secretary general, of Paducah, Ky., has been inundated and her papers confused and damaged. She will send out the certificates for membership just as soon as she is able to resume business."

Delegates Here for Assemblies Come From All Parts of World

Missionary Conference Is First

Top—Dr. W. S. Kendrick, medical adviser. Below—Dr. Marion M. Hull, chairman of the hospitality committee of the Presbyterian Assemblies of Atlanta.

Canvass Shows "Elect Infant Clause" Change Has Been Defeated by Presbyterians.

From every State in the Union and practically every country in the world delegates are arriving in Atlanta to attend the great joint Presbyterian Assembly. The first "long distance" delegate reached here Monday in the person of Rev. Thomas G. Albert, commissioner from Salem, Oreg. Before night the number is expected to swell to several hundred, and from now until Thursday morning every train will bring in its quota.

Dr. B. P. Fullerton, of Philadelphia, field secretary of the U. S. A. Church in the South, has arrived and is particularly busy arranging for the Pre-Assembly Missionary Conference, which will take up the entire day Wednesday. This will be one of the most important meetings of the joint gathering. The morning session begins at 9 o'clock and the afternoon meeting at 2:15 o'clock. Both meetings will be held in the Harris Street Presbyterian Church, while the evening session will be held in the First Presbyterian Church at 8 o'clock.

Notables to Give Talks.

Several world-famous missionaries and clergymen will make addresses at this conference. Two of the most noted are the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin, of New York, and the Rev. S. Hall Young, of Alaska. Of particular discussion will be the simultaneous church-wide every-member campaign which the representatives of the United Presbyterian Church will present.

Among other prominent arrivals this morning was Rev. E. R. Sterrett, of Philadelphia, treasurer of the board of education. Like Dr. Fullerton, he found himself a busy man as soon as he reached Atlanta.

Real work of the joint assembly begins Thursday. There will be three distinct conventions with joint meetings in the evenings at the Auditorium. Meetings of the U. S. A. Church will be held in the Baptist Tabernacle; the Southern Presbyterians will gather in the North Avenue Presbyterian Church, while the United Presbyterians will meet in the Central Presbyterian Church.

Big Meeting Wednesday.

Special interest attaches to the all-day conference of the Permanent Committees of Foreign Missions from the various Presbyteries, including the committees of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, which is to be held on Wednesday, the day preceding the opening of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church. This conference will be held in the First Presbyterian Church.

The meeting of the General Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement Wednesday will be one of marked importance from more than one point of view. This meeting will mark the sixth anniversary of the Laymen's Movement in the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Business sessions will be held during the morning and afternoon, the Laymen's Movement joining with the pre-assembly conference on foreign missions, and in the evening from 6 to 8 o'clock a banquet will be held in connection with the closing business session. An inspirational meeting will follow the banquet and close the all-day conference.

Facts on Southern Church.

North Avenue Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, will be the meeting place of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, which will convene Thursday morning. Everything is in readiness in this church for the entertainment of the highest court of Southern Presbyterians.

There are fourteen synods in the territory of the Southern Presbyterian church, 83 Presbyteries, 465 candidates for the ministry, 41 licentiates, 1,734 ministers, 3,392 churches, 61 licensures. During last year there were 50 ordinations, 231 installations, 231 ministers died, the pastoral relations between 186 ministers and churches were dissolved, 31 ministers were received from other denominations and 11 ministers were dismissed to other denominations.

ART GEM MAKES COMSTOCK BLUSH

Garbless Girl Wader in "September Morn'" Shocks Guardian of New York Morals.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Anthony Comstock, head of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, today concurred with "Bathhouse" John Coughlin, of Chicago, and opposed judgment passed by the French Academy, by declaring "September Morn," the masterpiece of M. Chabas, to be "highly indecent and totally unfit for public exhibition."

While strolling along West Forty-sixth Street this morning, the guardian of New York's morals glanced in the window of a prominent art store. The first and only thing Mr. Comstock's eye could see was the famous painting of the nude girl splashing in the cool shadows of a mountain lake.

"Take it out immediately," ordered Mr. Comstock.

"But that is 'September Morn,'" declared the art dealer.

"It should be pitch dark for a girl to go in wading in that undressed condition," announced Mr. Comstock. "Take it away immediately or I shall confiscate your entire stock."

The picture came out, but was returned a few hours later. In the meantime, art critics are weighing the combined judgment of Anthony Comstock and "Bathhouse" John against that of the judges of the French Academy, who are on record as saying that "September Morn" is one of the world's art treasures.

BACKACHE A WARNING ALL SHOULD HEED

It Is One of the First Signs of Kidney Troubles, if Neglected Serious Diseases Follow.

No one can be well and healthy unless the kidneys work properly and keep the blood pure. When they become clogged up and inactive, nature has a way of warning you.

Backache is one of the first symptoms. You may also be troubled with disagreeable, annoying bladder disorders; have attacks of lumbago or rheumatism; become nervous, tired, and feel all worn out; puffy swellings show under the eyes or in the feet and ankles; and many other symptoms are noticed. If they are neglected, dropsy, diabetes, or Bright's disease, which so often prove fatal, may result.

It is not only dangerous, but needless, for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely ends all such misery.

There is no more effective remedy known for the prompt cure of all such troubles than this new scientific preparation, because it removes the cause. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the clogged-up pores; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter and sift the poison out of the blood and drive it from the system.

You will find Croxone different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to cure the worst backache, relieve rheumatic pains, or overcome urinary disorders.

Widow in White for Titanic-Lost Husband

Material Still Crepe—Black Given Up on Anniversary of Disaster.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—"White Widow of the Titanic" is the title Mrs. Lucien D. Smith, the bereaved girl wife of one of the heroes of the disaster, has earned through wearing white mourning instead of black.

On the anniversary of the sinking of the Titanic, Mrs. Smith put aside her black clothes and appeared in white crepe from head to foot. The pocketbook she carried is of the same material, and her shoes are also white.

Mrs. Smith has an infant daughter born several months after the tragic loss of its father. The widow is popular socially, and forms a picturesque figure at the quiet events she attends.

MISTAKES NEIGHBOR FOR BURGLAR AND SHOOTS HIM

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—August Retting, member of a prominent family here, while attempting to enter a front window of the home of Charles Scheuermann, on fashionable Government Street, was mistaken for a burglar and shot three times. He screamed and Scheuermann, on going to him, recognized who he was.

The Retting home was two blocks away from the shooting. The wounded man had his shoes off and said he did not want his father to know he was out so late. He had mistaken the house. Scheuermann was not arrested.

RELATIVES TO CONTEST WILL OF MRS. DODD

Fight Over $100,000 Fortune Left to Mercer Will Cause Executor Currier to Quit.

Relatives of the late Mrs. Barbara E. Dodd will contest her will which bequeathed the bulk of her fortune, approximately $100,000, to Mercer University. Charles E. Currier, executor, has been informed of the proposed contest by Mrs. Fannie T. Ackerman, of New York, sister of Mrs. Dodd.

A breach with her relatives several years ago caused Mrs. Dodd, widow of the late Philip Dodd, a wealthy Atlantan, to destroy a will executed in 1906, in which a considerable sum was set aside for her brother and sister and their children. It is said a disagreement following the establishment of a sanitarium at Mrs. Dodd's old residence on Whitehall Street, by the sons of Henry S. Dibble, her brother, led to the estrangement.

Attorney C. P. Goree, who drew the last will, said it was clearly Mrs. Dodd's intention that little be left her relatives.

"Mrs. Dodd had considerable trouble with her nephews about a loan on a sanitarium established some years ago," said Mr. Goree. "In fact, she had to take the matter into the courts for a settlement.

"That is why the Mercer bequest was not in the form of an endowment, but as a fund to be loaned deserving young men. I have not been informed of any intention to contest the will and I can not see what grounds the contest will be based upon."

It is recalled that Mrs. Dodd bequeathed to her brother, Henry S. Dibble, $5,000 to be held in trust; that he was to receive only the proceeds from its investment, and that at his death the amount was to revert to the Mercer fund. To her sister, Mrs. Fannie T. Ackerman, was left a similar sum, without incumbrance.

Charles E. Currier, president of the Atlanta National Bank, executor of the will, said Monday that if a contest is made he will quit.

Carnegie Aids Ghent Memorial Project

Agrees to Help Pay Expense of Preserving Room in Which Treaty Was Signed.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Andrew Carnegie, in Washington as conferee on the treaty of Ghent centenary, has agreed to bear a portion of the expense of setting aside as a permanent peace memorial the room in the Carthusian Monastery in Ghent in which the famous treaty was signed on Christmas eve, 1814. Portraits of the participants, famous facsimiles and historic paintings and other objects are to be placed in the room.

Mr. Carnegie is the guest of Mrs. Oliver Ricketson here. Lord Weardale, Neil Primrose, M.P., son of Lord Rosebery, and Sir George Reed, the British conferees, also are in the city.

'Woody Tiger' Is New White House Mascot

Mrs. Wade Hampton Substitutes Wilson Administration Toy for 'Teddy Bear' and 'Billy Possum.'

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The "Woody Tiger" made its official debut to-day as the official toy of the Wilson administration. As this new monarch of childhood entered the front door of the White House, escorted by Mrs. Wade Hampton, the originator of the novel idea, "Teddy Bear" and "Billy Possum," mascots of previous times looked on with brimming eyes.

Underwood Boomed for President in 1916

His Friends Believe That the Tariff Bill Will Make Him Popular Candidate.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Representative Oscar W. Underwood's friends have started to boom him for the Presidential nomination in 1916. They assert that tariff bills have made Presidents and that Mr. Underwood will come to the front on the bill that passed the House last week.

They are backing Mr. Underwood [illegible] will abide by the intent of the Baltimore convention platform which declared in favor of a single term.

These friends of Underwood are confident the Underwood tariff bill will prove acceptable to the country and will grant relief to the masses from heavy burdens of taxation.

TEDDY'S TRIUMPH

A Comic Series That Actually Happened.

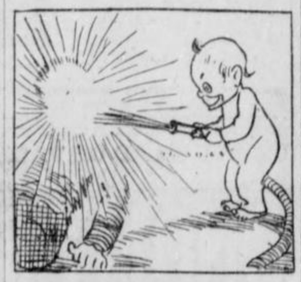
The Georgian the other day told in brief form the story of Teddy.

The story of Teddy was so remarkable that one of The Georgian's artists has depicted it as "a comic series that actually happened." His pictures appear below, preceded by a brief introduction:

Mrs. H. E. Grantner, of Hammond, Ind., saw a little 3-year-old boy who was homeless. She pitied him and offered him food and a bed in her home. He looked perfectly demure and harmless.

And he made no trouble at all when sleeping, which he proceeded to do shortly after reaching the house.

But when Teddy (as he was nicknamed) awoke at 5:30 o'clock the next morning, he got busy, and in the course of 60 minutes accomplished the following:



1.—Turned the hose on Mr. Grantner, who was planting sweet peas.

2.—Painted the front of the house in yellow streaks. Painted the rear same color; different design.

3.—Emptied kerosene can in the kitchen. Scattered garden seed in the parlor.

4.—Hit Forrest Grantner, aged 7, with baseball bat, blow landing in pit of stomach. Whipped Ellis Grantner who came to rescue of Forrest.

5.—Then, while the household was recuperating from these blows, Teddy, placed for safekeeping in a room, combined a box of matches and several lace curtains, achieving a first-class bonfire. The damage was $150.

Valdosta Thief Caught.

VALDOSTA.—Abe Courie, a Syrian, who is charged with the robbery of John Manson's fruit store and saloon here, was caught at Jacksonville, and all of the $265 stolen was recovered within a few hours after the robbery. He was brought back to Valdosta Monday.

BAPTISTS LOSE IN MEMBERSHIP RACE

Defeated Sunday School Preparing to Give Picnic to Christians. Other Contests Planned.

Preparations are under way for the great picnic to be given the First Christian Sunday School by the Second Baptist, the loser in the membership campaign that closed Sunday. The final score of the two schools was First Christian, 60,358; Second Baptist, 52,074.

At the First Christian Church Sunday morning Superintendent C. V. LeCraw, of the winning school, introduced to his audience the superintendent of the Second Baptist, John S. Spalding, who spoke on "What I Think About the First Christian Sunday School."

"You have beaten us," said Mr. Spalding, "but you had to break a world's record to do it. I want to offer the most cordial congratulations of the entire Second Baptist Sunday School."

The contest standing the closing day was:

	Second Baptist.	First Christian.
Attendance	1,233	1,673
Points scored	3,988	5,014
Final standing	52,074	60,358

It is probable that both contestants will enter another campaign with other schools in similar races for membership. To discuss this a meeting of Baptist pastors and superintendents was held Sunday afternoon.

Freight Car Bulletin Shows Trade Is Brisk

Decrease of 17,799 Idle Pieces of Rolling Stock Regarded as a Good Sign.

No slackening in general trade is reflected by the American Railway Association's bulletin on the number of idle freight cars in the United States and Canada on May 1.

On the contrary, a decrease of 17,799, as compared with April 15, would indicate a quickening of business. The decrease for the two weeks is the largest reported since the early part of June, 1912.

On May 1 there was a total of 39,799 idle cars, compared with a shortage of 51,169 on November 7, when the railroads were congested and in need of rolling stock. A year ago idle cars numbered 138,881.

The shrinkage in cars was due largely to the brisk demand for coal cars, which caused a shrinkage in that class of rolling stock from 19,649 to 8,510 cars.

Charles Smith Butts Tree While Looking to See How Far Chief Was Behind.

If Charles Smith, a negro, had not become possessed with an inane curiosity to see how far behind him Chief of Detectives Lanford was Sunday night, when that officer was giving chase to him, he might have escaped. Smith did turn his head, however, rammed a tree and fell unconscious.

Now he is at police headquarters awaiting trial for careless driving.

Smith, in a two-horse rig, while dashing down Hunter Street, nearly collided with the chief, who was driving home. Lanford gave pursuit to the negro, who abandoned his buggy and took to his heels, with Chief Lanford after him.

Lightning Kills Five In Oil Field Tornado

TULSA, OKLA., May 12.—At least five men were killed by lightning, many oil tanks and wells set on fire, power plants damaged and other havoc wrought by a terrific electrical and wind storm that swept over the Tulsa oil district early to-day.

At Collinsville, 20 miles north of here, five pipe line builders, employed by the Texas company, were killed when a bolt of lightning struck their vehicle, en route to oil fields. The wagon was demolished and horses killed.

THREW BRICK AT NEGRO HE MISTOOK FOR PUGILIST

CHICAGO, May 12.—Mistaking a negro in a lunch room for Jack Johnson, the pugilist, on trial for violating the white slave law, Amos Geiger hurled a brick through the plate glass front of the restaurant. Geiger was taken to a police station, where he begged the police to release him that he might "get" Johnson.

SEQUEL TO LOVE FOR DOLL

Maternal Instinct Greatly Developed by Teaching Children to Love Their Dolls.

The little child's doll is mother to the most romantic fairy. And in the years that pass, the doll fades into the petals of a June rose, to evolve the most wondrous of all transformations.

And now comes a more serious period when the joy of real motherhood should be as tranquil as best effort can provide.

This is accomplished with a wonderful remedy known as Mother's Friend, an external application so penetrating in its nature as to thoroughly lubricate every cord, nerve, muscle and tendon involved.

There will be no pain, none of that nausea or morning sickness, no sensation of distress or strain of expanding muscles. The nerves, too, will be calm, thus making the period one of restful days, of peaceful nights and a source of happiest anticipation.

The young expectant mother must be carefully watchful lest she become absorbed in those mental distresses which fitly prepare her for the most important event in her life.

Mother's Friend enables her to avoid all sensation of dread, worry or pain, and thus she is preserved in health and strength to take up the joyful task of motherhood.

You will find Mother's Friend on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle. Do not fail to use it regularly as directed. Write to-day to Bradfield Regulator Company, 135 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., for their most valuable little guide book for expectant mothers.

Mr. Hutcheson is survived by a wife, two sons, Carl and Fred H. Hutcheson, of Atlanta; a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Buck, of Chattanooga, and a granddaughter, Mrs. Fred Mayfield, of Atlanta.

MONEY REFUNDED WITH A SMILE

Leading Drug Store Will Give Money Back Should There Ever Be a Case Where Dodson's Liver Tone Fails.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a mild vegetable Liver Tonic which operates so successfully in cases of constipation, torpid liver or biliousness that it has practically taken the place of calomel—the drug which is so often dangerous. All druggists who sell Dodson's Liver Tone recommend it as a reliever of constipation, sour stomach, biliousness and sluggish liver. It works gently, surely and harmlessly. If a bottle should ever fail to give satisfaction any dealer will refund the price paid without question.

The price of Dodson's Liver Tone is 50 cents per bottle. Be sure you get Dodson's Liver Tone and not some medicine put up in imitation that is not backed up by a guarantee and that may contain harmful drugs.

Make Summer Dresses With Aid of

Pneu Form

The Pneumatic Dress Form

PNEU FORM is the only Dress Form that shows you exactly as you are. It will stand for you while you study your own figure, create new designs, make alterations, change trimmings, drape or redrape last year's gown. Women who possess a Pneu Form, and who have their dressmaking done at home or at the dressmaker's, need not stand for hours, nor dress and undress forty times a day at the request, "Just let me try this once more, please."

Pneu Form is the only Dress Form in existence which will reproduce absolutely any figure. There is no guesswork about it. It duplicates your exact figure by means of an individual lining made to fit you. This lining is fitted snugly over the corset, reproducing faithfully any variation in size of shoulders or hips. Pneu Form is inflated within this lining.

If your dress fits your Pneu Form it will fit you. The air is contained in a rubber cloth bag, having the general curves, etc., of the human form.

Pneu Form is a skirt form, as the lining is made well down over the largest part of the hips, giving an exact model over which skirts may be fitted and draped. Adjustable rod gives skirt length.

It is the most helpful and satisfactory dress form we have ever seen.

Ask at the pattern counter to have it demonstrated to you.

MILITANT RIOTS GIVE BIG BOOST TO INSURANCE

Damage Already Reaches Into Millions—Golf Links Are Protected Against Loss.

LONDON, May 12.—Inquiries instituted at Lloyd's have developed the fact that the insurance companies are reaping a golden harvest as a result of suffragette depredations. Business has received a great impetus both from the insurance of golf links as well as from fire risks.

Numerous golf clubs have insured against revenue losses as the result of militant interference, while others have taken out policies insuring golf greens against damage by suffragettes. The premiums charged are $5 per green per annum, the limit of the underwriters' liability being $250 on each green.

These insurances, however, were mostly for three months, because it is believed that the trouble will be settled in that time either by a triumph of the militants or by the suppression of their campaign.

Insurance against fire has been equally brisk, but owing to the great competition in this business rates have not been affected.

Damage to Date $5,000,000.

Estimates of the financial loss caused by suffragette outrages, prepared for the Home Secretary, put the amount as $5,000,000. This sum does not include the expense of employing large numbers of extra police, detectives and watchmen to protect Ministers, public buildings and meetings.

Three detectives have been assigned to protect each Cabinet Minister at all times. All suspected persons are shadowed by plainclothes men and all public buildings are under special guard.

Since the defeat of the woman suffrage bill large numbers of former constitutional suffragists have joined the militant movement. An attack on the House of Lords is one of the new plans, and this is to be accomplished by means of a suffragette typist who could get a position on the reporting staff of the upper house.

Arrests Check Riots.

In spite of the sensational outrages of the past week and although the militants are keeping up a strong bluff, their organization has been shaken by recent arrests of leaders. The militant acts now being committed are the handiwork of suffragettes working independently, and the authorities believe that the removing of the central controlling influences will soon break up the campaign of destruction.

This optimistic view is not shared by politicians generally, who believe that as long as money is forthcoming crimes will be committed.

Militants Start Week By Burning Boat Club.

LONDON, May 12.—Another week of violence was to-day ushered in by suffragettes. Militant women burned the building of the Nottingham Boat Club, damaging a number of boats. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

The police found evidences of incendiarism. A copy of the official organ of the Women's Social and Political Union, The Suffragette, was discovered near by.

Game Warden Plans 'Transplanting' Quail

Birds Trapped Where They're Plentiful Will Be Turned Loose in Counties Where There Are Few.

State Game Warden Jesse E. Mercer Monday took up the "transplaning" of quail as his latest activity.

He hit upon the novel scheme as a means of equalizing the distribution of partridges through the State. In some counties there are few of the birds. From others complaints are pouring into the game warden's office that quail are pulling up corn almost as rapidly as it is planted.

When he found in his mail Monday morning a letter signed by three farmers from Seville, Wilcox County, who said they had been compelled to make three plantings of corn because of voracious quail, Mr. Mercer at once dictated a letter giving them permission to trap as many as they wished.

"Trap them," he said, "and I shall take them to other parts of the State."

CITY'S RIGHT TO REQUIRE PURE MILK TESTS UPHELD

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The right of the Health Department of the city of Milwaukee, to require certificates from all milk dealers shipping milk into the city, showing that the cows had been given the tuberculosis test, was upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States to-day.

Health a Factor in Success.

The largest factor contributing to a man's success is undoubtedly health. It has been observed that a man is seldom sick when his bowels are regular—he is never well when they are constipated. For constipation you will find nothing quite so good as Chamberlain's Tablets. They not only move the bowels, but improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion. They are sold by all dealers.

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

Oh, Joy! Ice Wagon Really Turns Over.

Out in West End the ice wagons which ply that thriving section for trade usually are followed about from street to street by children who are looking for small bits of the congealed moisture when chipped off by the icemen. The drivers of these wagons seem to be on the job from season to season and come to know all the children by name.

Several days ago, when the weather was rather warm, a joyous catastrophe happened on Culberson Street. One of the big wagons was on the street when the mules attached to it became frightened at a piece of paper which was fluttered about under their noses by a sudden gust of wind. The mules bolted.

Down the street they tore at breakneck speed. Then one of the wheels hit an electric wire pole and the wagon promptly turned over, breaking the wagon tongue and strewing the street with big cakes of ice. The children viewed the affair with squeals of delight. Not only had they been treated to a sure enough runaway, but here was enough ice on the ground to make their little tummies cool for a week.

So down they swooped on the wreckage. They were met by one of the icemen who politely but firmly informed the kiddies there was nothing doing. The ice, he said, still belonged to the company and he'd protect it with his life. That started something. The children surrounded him and filched bits of ice when he wasn't looking. The driver had gone to a nearby telephone to have another wagon sent out to carry off the remains of the load.

The man on guard had his hands full and realizing he was no match for the horde of youngsters, he bargained with them. Everybody got a big chunk of ice provided they'd promise to go 'way and let the rest of it alone. And the kiddies kept their promise.

Wore a Flower For Mother's Sake.

It was Mothers' Day in Atlanta, and all over the country, yesterday and lots of men wore a white flower for mother's sake. Many of the Atlanta florists anticipated a demand for flowers and laid in a big supply of white carnations.

For a long time in Atlanta men didn't like to wear flowers. The only explanation is that they might be taken for weaklings; the habit, they figured, was one for women, not men. There is one man in the city, however, who for thirty years has always worn a little buttonhole bouquet, summer and winter.

He is the confidential man for one of the big drygoods concerns and although he celebrated his seventy-seconth birthday yesterday—he is as straight and active as a man of half that age. He is passionately fond of flowers and if he were to be without his little boutonniere it is likely that the day would seem all wrong to him. His wife has made it her special duty to see that his bouquet is ready each morning, usually placing it beside his plate at breakfast.

His bouquet yesterday was a beautiful white carnation, a little token of love for the old mother who died a good many years ago in Ireland.

"Woman's Dress Fad Makes Living High"

Professor Sargent Says Americans Adopt Grotesque Styles.

DES MOINES, IA., May 12.—"The mad pursuit of American women for the varying fads of dress and their acceptance of designs from the European fashion centers as mandates in technique of dress are directly responsible for the high cost of living in this country to-day." So declared Prof. Walter Sargent, of the school of education of the University of Chicago in an address before the convention of the Western Drawing and Manual Training Association.

"The French send dress and home art designs to America which they themselves will not accept. One does not see those grotesque styles in Paris.

"We need in America an established bureau of design."

Macon Union Depot Prospects Brighter

Central and Southern to Decide by May 27 on Joint or Separate Terminals.

Prospects are that Macon will get a union passenger station.

Officials of the Central of Georgia and the Southern Railways went over the situation at length with the Georgia Railroad Commission on Monday.

The Central submitted blue prints and terms under which it is willing to join with the Southern in building a union station.

The Southern officials asked for fifteen days in which to submit the proposal to the heads of the system in Washington. This was granted, with the proviso that if the Southern does not answer definitely on May 27, both sides shall have ready plans for individual stations.

Girl With $700,000 Will Stay at Work

Stenographer for Curtiss Aeroplane Company Inherits Fortune, But Likes 'Job.'

BATH, N. Y., May 12.—Although Miss Helen Klecker, a pretty 17-year-old stenographer of the Curtiss Aeroplane Company, has fallen heir to a $700,000 estate, she likes her "job" so well that she is loath to quit and announced to-day that she intends to stick as long as she can.

Miss Klecker received the property, which is in New York and at Havre DeGrace, Md., from her mother's family. Her mother, who has been dead several years, was the direct descendant of a Russian who came to this country a number of years ago and accumulated a large fortune estimated at $7,000,000.

Senate Hears Denials That Illinois Lieutenant Governor Was Member of Party in Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Denials that Lieutenant Governor Barrett O'Hara was a member of a party of four at the Hotel Sherman for three days in January were made to-day to the Senate's sub-committee investigating charges of immorality against the Lieutenant Governor.

Employees of the hotel told of serving drinks and food to a party of three, two women and one man, in a suit there. Members of the Chicago Press Club testified that they saw O'Hara at the club on the night of January 17 and the two subsequent nights.

ESTHETIC THIEF IN BEAUTY SHOP RAID

Mr. "Nancy" Burglar Shows a Fondness for Hair Nets, Rouge and Nail Bleach.

Ladies and Gentlemen: Permit us to introduce Mr. "Nancy" Burglar.

He is conspicuous among the crowd by his powdered face, his curled hair, rouged cheeks and manicured nails. If you see him, notify the police, as he is wanted for rifling the Bookhammer hair-dressing parlors, 71½ Whitehall Street, Sunday night.

This is his first appearance in Atlanta and police are bewildered by his queer tastes.

Secures Beautifying Outfit.

Here is what he secured in his raid on Bookhammer's:

One gross of hair nets; a box of eyebrow pencils; one dozen orange sticks; eight jars of cuticle ice; one dozen boxes of face powder; ten brilliant bandeaux; two bottles of brilliantine; four fancy barettes; several jars of rouge; manicure sets; cuticle knives; a gas hair-curling stove, and a large quantity of nail bleach.

Robbery Puzzles Chief.

Police Chief Beavers, when informed of the amazing robbery, scratched his head and thought for a long time.

"Now who would have thought that a thief could stoop so low as to raid a hair-dressing establishment?" he finally exclaimed in disgust. "No doubt he's going to get all 'dolled up' and parade down Peachtree Street. Will wonders never cease?"

CLERGYMAN PRAISES ECKMAN'S ALTERATIVE

People who have lung trouble are often filled with bright hopes of recovery, only to realize that improvement is but temporary. Those who had it and used Eckman's Alterative can testify to its beneficial effects. No one need doubt it—there is plenty of evidence from live witnesses. Investigate the following:

Amenia, N. Y.

"Gentlemen: On February 9, 1908, I came to Amenia, suffering with tuberculosis, that originated in a severe case of lagrippe. My physician gave me little encouragement. I was having terrible night sweats and midday chills and losing flesh rapidly, having gone from 155 to 135 pounds. I coughed and raised continually and became so weak that walking a few feet exhausted me. My father, who is a clergyman, heard of Eckman's Alterative and induced me to take it. The night sweats and chills disappeared, my cough became easier and gradually diminished and in a few days I developed an appetite, the first in months. I am now in perfect health, back to 155 pounds. I feel certain that I owe my life to Eckman's Alterative."

(Signed) E. H. COWLES.

"Gentlemen: I wish to add my indorsement to every word of his testimonial."

(Signed) REV. J. J. COWLES, Pastor Presbyterian Church.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe throat and lung affections, bronchitis, bronchial asthma, stubborn colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drug stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

ZANDERO AND CHRISTIE TO MEET IN 10-ROUND GO

CHICAGO, ILL., May 12.—Ernie Zanders, globe-trotting middleweight star of this city, has grabbed off a nice match at last. He clinched up a 10-round contest with Gus Christie of Milwaukee last night, the affair to be decided in the baseball park at Madison, Wis., on the night of May 20. There is to be no decision if the men are both on their feet at the finish. The weight has not yet been decided upon but probably will be 156 pounds at 3 in the afternoon. There is a big convention there at the time.

DELAY IN CHURCH UNION COUNSELED

Dr. Matthews, Northern Presbyterian Moderator, Fights Merger Move in Assemblies Here.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 12. "I do not think the question of a union of the several branches of the Presbyterian Church should be broached at this time, as our assembly is to be the guest of the Southern Presbyterians," said Dr. Mark Allison Matthews, of Seattle, Wash., moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. (Northern Division), here to-day. "We have always stood for closer co-operation, but we do not want to be indelicate and present the question when we are the guests of our Southern friends."

Dr. Matthews came here from Dalton, Ga., where he preached yesterday to a former congregation. He will go to Atlanta Wednesday.

"No doctrinal controveries whatever will come before our assembly," said Dr. Matthews. "The elect infant clause will not be an issue with us, as our doctrine is that every infant dying in infancy is saved. Our questions will be mostly administrative and constructive.

"We shall consider the increase of missionary efforts, enlarging the scope of the college work, larger endowments for colleges, ministerial relief, extension of the home mission work and establishing and building new churches.

"This year we plan to raise a $10,000,000 permanent endowment for ministerial relief, so that every aged minister of the echurch may receive at least $500 to $600 a year, and that widows and orphans of ministers may be provided for."

OVER $2,000 AN ARISTOCRAT.—"If your pay exceeds $2,000 you are an aristocrat," said Professor T. S. Adams, of the Wisconsin Tax Commission, at Madison, in discussing the proposed income tax. He would lower the tax exemption to a $2,000 limit.

$30,000,000 FIRM BARS 'CIGS.'—Clarence S. Funk, of Chicago, new president of the Rumeley Company, a reorganized $30,000,000 farm implements manufacturing concern, announced that his firm would not employ young men who had the cigarette habit.

Diplomas Needed to Avoid Teachers' Test

High School Instructors Not Having Degrees Must Take Exams Under New System.

A large number of Georgia's 1,500 high school teachers are squirming uncomfortably on the anxious seat as a result of the new system of certification that will become operative with the new school year.

M. L. Brittain, State Superintendent of Schools, said Monday that many teachers were inquiring as to their status under the new regulations, which for the first time require examinations for high school teachers.

The fears of some of the teachers will be allayed by the information that the degrees from accredited institutions will be accepted in lieu of examinations. Most of the others will have to submit to tests.

3 Railroads Fined $1,300 in U. S. Court

Violations of Sixteen-Hour and Safety Appliance Acts Charged in Federal Indictments.

Fines amounting to $1,300 were imposed Monday in the United States District Court on the Atlantic Coast Line and Louisville and Nashville Railway Companies, lessees of the Georgia Railroad, and the Southern Railway Company for violating the sixteen-hour and safety appliance laws.

Nineteen causes of action were included in the indictment of the Georgia Railroad lessees. The charge was that employees were forced to work more than eighteen hours. The total fine was $950.

It was shown that five Southern employees worked 22 hours. This company was fined $250.

The Atlantic Coast Line and the Louisville and Nashville were fined $100 for violating the safety appliance act.

To-morrow Brings One of Our Notable Twice-a-Year Events, The Semi-Annual

Half-Price Millinery Sale

Maybe you have been awaiting this event---well you might. It is the "Grand Prix" of all millinery sales.

Nothing Atlanta knows approximates it. The hats it offers are those accepted as fashionable this season; correct, smart in unusual ways. The greater part---about all of them---comes from the little shop, Estelle Mershon, in the very center of fastidious New York, 20 E. 46th St.

Included are

Street, Traveling and Dress Hats

Until Now $12.00 to $30.00

Now $6.00 to $15.00

Some one hundred and fifty in all---no describing them---but so varied are the shapes and trimmings that it will be like choosing from regular stock and paying just half.

Is the first spring hat beginning to look a little faded, are you going away this summer, does a newly acquired suit or dress call for a hat to match? Here are splendid affirmative answers for these questions.

The selling begins at eight o'clock when the store opens.

SENATE WILL DEMAND REAL RECIPROCITY

Makeshift Written Into Wilson-Underwood Bill Arouses Bitter Opposition.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Genuine reciprocity, and not the makeshift written into the Wilson-Underwood bill, Senators believe, will e demanded and insisted upon by the Senate. Majority members of the Finance Committee are now endeavoring to see just how far they may go in rewriting the sections of the House bill to make it conform to what they believe the underlying principle of all reciprocal agreements should be.

Chairman Simmons, of the Finance Committee, and Senator Hoke Smith, one of the most influential members of the committee, have expressed their adherence to the doctrine of reciprocity.

Both have said they hoped the bill when it became a law would provide machinery that would enable the President to negotiate reciprocity agreements and that rates would be so arranged that the President would have an effective weapon at his command to compel concessions. The details of whatever plans they may have in mind have not been worked out.

Many Amendments Certain.

Every majority member of the committee has stated amendments to the bill and that in many items the rates will be increased.

The methods of procedure of the Senate Committee and the House differ radically.

Senator Kern, majority leader, moved last week that when the Senate adjourn it be until next Tuesday afternoon. This prevailed, and at the very threshold of debate on the tariff, by Democratic votes, a delay of three days was ordered in the face of the demand of President Wilson that not a moment be lost in rushing through the bill in the Senate.

In the Senate the Democrats are taking into consideration the difference on the cost of production here and abroad in fixing their rates. A number of articles that have been put on the free list will be shifted back to the dutiable, and a few articles made dutiable in the House will be made free. Dye stuffs and pigments are notable instances of the differences between the two houses.

The rates on high grade cotton are to be raised and a new classification arranged.

Window and plate glass as fixed by the House are deemed to be too low and will be raised.

All these changes afford opportunity of subsequent reductions under reciprocal trade agreements in line with the real Democratic tariff idea.

Senator Smith, of Michigan, bases caustic criticisms on the sugar schedule, the manufacture of beef sugar being a great industry of his State.

"After the trust has run its competitors out of business, as they will under this law," says Mr. Smith, "and competition no longer exist, the price of sugar will be increased to what it was before beet sugar was discovered. If you intend to withdraw from circulation all the money invested in sugar production and turn it over to foreigners, it ought to be done in the open. Give the people a chance to be heard, and do not do this in the dark and gloom of a secret chamber."

Can't Lose "Wilson."

Senator Smith says it is singular that all the Democratic tariff bills looking to free trade bore the name of Wilson.

"I saw Bryan help carry William L. Wilson on his shoulder from the house on the day of his 'great triumph.' It was not very long before these same shoulders carried a weight so heavy that it has taken twenty years to regain the confidence of the people.

"I don't believe that prosperity can continue under this law. In your hearts you don't believe it or you would not be so worried as you are. It was faith in your promised good works that put you in power.

"If this question were to be submitted to the people to-day you would be repudiated and thrown from office. The American people are not for free trade, and that's what you are endeavoring to force upon them."

The fight to order public hearings will come up again Tuesday.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Are You a Mason?" at Atlanta.

This week's offering at the Atlanta Theater by the Miss Billy Long Company, "Are You a Mason?" will be given its first performance at a matinee this afternoon. The management has decided to have three matinees a week—Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. "Are You a Mason?" is a farce and is said to be very funny. It was adapted from the German and the plot is a complicated one, giving abundant opportunity for amusing situations.

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

Paul Dickey, the famous football star, heads this week's bill of Keith vaudeville at the Forsyth. Other numbers are the Apollo Trio, that pose as bronze statues; Billy K. Wells, character comedian; Clarence Wilbur and the Sunny Folks in a school-room sketch; Newhorff and Phels, in new comedy idea; Mayo and Allman, singers; Macleavy's Marvel, jumper, and motion pictures. Matinee this afternoon.

Family Vaudeville at Bijou.

Four acts of family vaudeville and worth-while motion pictures make up the bill this week at the Bijou. The Four Wilhats, novelty bicycle and auto act, is the headliner. Novelty is the keynote of the bill. Two matinees today; 2:30 and 4.

Police Hold Mob Bent on Lynching

Negroes Threaten to Take Black Slayer of Negro Boy From Three County Officers.

Members of the County Police Department are Monday congratulating Lieutenant J. M. Carroll and Policemen J. W. Williams and L. W. Allen on their escape from a mob of 200 negroes, who Sunday afternoon threatened their lives when they refused to hand over Doc Burnett, the negro slayer of a fifteen-year-old colored boy, Charlie Simon. The mob was bent on lynching Burnett.

The mob approached the officers on the Marietta Road as they were waiting for a street car to take their prisoner to the Tower.

"We are going to get that nigger even if we have to kill you," the leaders shouted to Lieutenant Carroll. "He stabbed Simon in cold blood and we are going to string him up."

The officers drew their revolvers and took their positions ready to fight to a finish. The negroes retired.

Burnett, in the Tower, later declared the trouble had been caused by an argument about a girl. Eye-witnesses, though, declared Burnett drew a knife and stabbed the boy without provocation. He died before medical aid could reach him.

Thousands Observe Mothers' Day Here

Throngs Wear Flowers and Attend Special Services—Donations to Old Women's Home Generous.

"Mothers' Day" has passed and the world has resumed the burden of life. However, following the celebration people are finding the load not half so heavy as before it.

Thousands of white flowers apepared on the streets of Atlanta Sunday. Florists report an enormous sale of carnations and roses, the emblems worn by the celebrants.

Returns from the contribution boxes placed in hotel lobbies and other public places show generous donations for the benefit of the Home for Old Women. Throngs attended the churches and heard sermons and music appropriate for the occasion.

Dispatches from all over the United States declare that the day had been the most successful in the history of "Mothers' Day" celebration.

Costa Rican, Parting From Canadian Girl, Explains, 'Father Kills Men When He's Angry.'

NEW YORK, May 12.—A cablegram from the bridegroom's father containing the word "scoundrel" caused Theodore Gonzales, of San Jose, Costa Rica, to part from his bride of a few hours, who was Miss Maxine Seagrave, of Toronto, after they had boarded the steamer Carrillo for a honeymoon trip to Central America.

Gonzales explained to his bride that his father was irritable at times; in fact, he had once killed a man when irritated, and the young man thought it best that he go to Port Limon alone and meet his father.

STELZLE URGES RECREATION TO KEEP OUT VICE

Commission Is Recommended to Provide Wholesome Amusement for the Masses in Atlanta.

Dr. Charles Stelzle, of New York, who will be one of the big figures in the Presbyterian assemblies, and who organized the work of the Men and Religion Forward Movement in Atlanta, declared Monday there is a vast difference in the moral tone of the Atlanta to-day and the Atlanta of a year ago. But he insisted that reform go further—that the city name a recreation commission to provide amusements to take the place of harmful forms of recreation, recognized as contributory to vice conditions.

Dr. Stelzle said he did not wish to detract in the slightest measure from the great work already accomplished, but he explained that the city would be most safe from a recurrence of vice evils if it provides wholesome amusements.

"I am amazed at the results of the work," declared Dr. Stelzle. "From my observations during the few days that I have been in the city, I do not hesitate to say Atlanta is now one of the most moral cities in the South, and will rank, morally, with any city in the United States.

"A year ago vice flourished in the city and the street crowds reflected its influences. The change is apparent to even the most casual observer. Morality is in the air in Atlanta and the moral atmosphere of the city is infinitely better."

Though gratified that the movement which he organized should have been so successful in ridding Atlanta of vice, Dr. Stelzle declared the city could not continue to be morally clean unless present conditions are made more attractive to the average man. Clean, wholesome recreation he declared to be the best solution of the problem.

"I would suggest the appointment of a recreation commission," he said. "This commission should be composed of men who have given some study to the amusement needs of the city. This commission could call in outside recreation experts to its conferences and get the benefits of the work that has been done in other cities.

"Atlanta seems to be lacking in opportunities for the amusement of the average person, especially on Sunday. The opportunities that are here could, however, be enlarged and made more attractive. For instance, the Auditorium should be a rallying place every Sunday afternoon for several thousand people. The recitals and programs given there should be thoroughly advertised and the people should be urged to attend.

Phone Report Inconclusive.

VALDOSTA.—The committee from the Valdosta Chamber of Commerce which went to Atlanta to investigate the claims of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company relative to an increase in telephone rates here has returned and has made an inconclusive report.

The largest affair of Monday was the bridge given by Miss Laura Ansley at her home in Ansley Park. Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York, who has been tendered a series of parties as Miss Helen Dargan's guest, was the honoree, and invited to meet her were Misses Helen Dargan, Mary Helen Moody, Annie Lee McKenzie, Emily Winship, Jennie D. Harris, Ruth Stallings, Caroline Muse, Isabel Kuhrt, Carolyn King, Flora Bewick, Esther Smith, Passie May Ottley, Marjorie Brown, Harriet Calhoun, Katherine Ellis, Margaret Hawkins, Emma Kate Amorous, Helen Hawkins, Charles Owens, Elizabeth High, Constance Knowles and her guest, Mrs. Echols, of Virginia; Kathryn Gordon, Marion Goldsmith, Hildreth Burton-Smith, Mary Butler and her guest, Agnes Jones, of Albany; Sara Rawson, Aurelia Speer, Frances Ansley, Mamie Ansley, Mrs. Bates Block and her guests, Misses Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Caroline Scott, of Arkansas; Lula Dean Jones, Mrs. Robert Woodruff, Mrs. Forrest Adair, Jr., and Mrs. John J. Woodside, Jr.

The card tables were placed in the drawing room, the library and the sun parlor, where the decorations were of pink and white sweetpeas, pink peonies and garden roses. The prize for top score was a friendship circle of gold, the consolation a collar and cuff set, and the honor guest was given a silver traveling cup.

Miss Ansley and her sister, Miss Mamie Ansley, wore pretty lingerie gowns, and Mrs. Edwin P. Ansley, who assisted her daughter in entertaining, was gowned in white mull and lace.

For Mrs. Dillard.

Miss Annie May Hardin gave a theater party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon for Mrs. James Spotswood Dillard, of Lynchburg, Va., who is visiting Mrs. Clarence Wickersham, in College Park. Her guests included Mrs. Dillard, Mrs. Wickersham, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Mrs. I. C. McCrory, Mrs. Alfred Murrell, and Mrs. J. B. Hardin.

Festival Postponed.

Owing to the weather, the ice cream festival which was to have been given Tuesday afternoon and night by the Ladies' Guild on the lawn of the Church of the Holy Comforter has been postponed until Friday.

At the Driving Club.

Mrs. James Hook Spratling, of Macon, was with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Collier. Miss Robyn Young, of Washington, D. C., was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. William A. Wimbish. Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York, Miss Helen Dargan's guest, was the central figure in a small party. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Smith Pickett, Judge and Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, Misses Annie Lee McKenzie, May Atkinson, Marion Achison, Messrs. Charles Sciple, Milton Dargan, Jr., Dozier Lowndes, Madison Bell, Hugh Adams and Charles Ryan.

At the dinner-dance Saturday evening one of the largest parties was that of 30 covers given by Dr. and Mrs. Bates Block for their guests, Misses Lorna Carr, of St. Louis, and Caroline Scott, of Arkansas. Three large silver loving cups, filled with white sweetpeas, adorned the table, with a corsage bouquet at each girl's place and boutonnier of the same flowers at each man's place. Other visitors present were Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York, and Miss Constances Knowles' guest, Mrs. Edward Nichols, of Virginia.

Others at the Driving Club were Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Meador, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Gentry, Mr. and Mrs. William Lawson Peel, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Lewman, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Williams, Misses Margaret Hawkins, Esther Smith, Alice May Freeman, Margaret Northen, Jennie D. Harris, Laura Ansley and others.

For Mrs. Spratling.

Mrs. James Hook Spratling, of Macon, guest of Mrs. Roy Collier, was given an informal tea Monday afternoon by Mrs. F. J. Spratling. Guests were Mrs. Collier, Mrs. Thorn Flagler, Mrs. Harry Harman, Jr., Mrs. Robert Gregg, Mrs. Ben Tye, Mrs. Wickliffe Goldsmith, Mrs. William Schroder, Mrs. Fritz Wagner, Mrs. Joseph Eby and Mrs. Charles Shelton, Jr.

Lecture on Japanese Customs.

T. Muretta, of Japan, will lecture at the Park Street Methodist Church Monday evening at 8 o'clock on "Japanese Customs."

For Mrs. McFarlan.

Mrs. R. L. Walker was hostess at bridge this afternoon in honor of her guest, Mrs. J. E. McFarlan, of Connorsville, Ind. Thirty women were invited to participate in the game and several others called for tea. The house was elaborately decorated in wild azaleas, daisies and sweetpeas. The prizes were a silver fern dish, a dainty piece of neckwear and a fan.

For Miss Phinizy.

Miss Josephine Stoney's informal bridge of three tables Tuesday afternoon will compliment Miss Marian Phinizy, of Augusta, Mrs. A. W. Calhoun's guest.

Exhibition of Paintings.

The return of Mr. H. H. Osgood from a winter's sketching in the South is signalized by the exhibition of 50 oil and water colors. The Cole Book Company has given space for a few days for this interesting collection of marines, landscapes, etc., painted in and around Savannah, Jacksonville and St. Augustine.

Miss Black Hostess.

Miss Anita Black will entertain informally at tea Tuesday afternoon on

LILLIAN RUSSELL IS A FOE TO DRINK

"Alcohol Is Death to Woman's Good Looks," Says the Noted Beauty.

NEW YORK, May 12.—At last Lillian Russell has answered the question of how she retains her youth and beauty. Miss Russell says: "Alcohol is death to the beauty of mind, body and soul."

Miss Russell's lines in her monologue in regard to drink are such a hit that she says if she could she would like to go out and do nothing but preach temperance while she is on the stage.

"I never have drunk anything stronger than a little Madeira, the lightest of wines, and I have given that up," she says. "People regard it as remarkable that I have kept my good looks and my youth. You can't keep your health unless you live in harmony with nature.

"Most women need exercise, nourishing food and a proper amount of sleep. People who stay up until all hours do not get the proper amount of sleep, nor do they get it at the right time. I have always loathed champagne and other strong drinks and fought against the cultivation of a taste for liquor.

"Girls who refuse to touch liquor get along. Those who begin with light drinks finally cultivate appetites for whiskey and wine, and are pitiable things to behold."

"The cancer death rate in the United States is increasing at the rate of 2½ per cent a year, and a corresponding increase is occurring practically throughout the world. The average age at death in cancer of all forms is 59 years—60.4 years for men and 58.2 for women. Of the total mortality from cancer 90 per cent of the victims are forty years old or more."—Frederick J. Hoffman, statistician of one of America's biggest insurance companies.

"The American college of to-day is between the upper and nether millstones. The German-American university has now become the home of scholarship and research. If the American college is to repeat in the twentieth century the inestimable service it rendered to American civilization in the nineteenth century it must recognize the dawn of a new era. Let the typical graduate be trained not only in scholarships and culture, but how to loaf wisely."—Henry Louis Smith, president of Washington and Lee University.

"In my judgment everything which occurs in court should be open to public hearing. The fact that an action for divorce is pending should be given the widest publicity to prevent fraud and injury to those who are innocent. I do not think, however, that the loathsome details—more humiliating generally to the innocent than guilty—should be published."—Justice Guy of the New York State Supreme Court.

"I feel as if I am making a twentieth century flight into another world. Comparisons are impossible; it will take me some time to get my breath. What a lot Europe might learn from wondrous America! But then one must consider; it is much easier to build up a new country than to change an old one."—C. de Bruyne, an Alderman of Ghent, Belgium, who is visiting New York.

WASHINGTON ATTRACTS EUROPE AS ART CENTER

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Washington's advancement as an art center has brought it to the attention of Europe strongly in the past few years, according to Seymour J. Thurber, a collector of Chicago. The masterpieces of the Old World adorn Washington salons, and the capital now is considered one of the most prominent art markets, he says.

'Private John' Allen Explains His Title

Cited War Record(Too, When Political Opponent, a General, Asked Veterans' Vote in Campaign.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Private John Allen, who for many years represented Mississippi in the House, has explained how he got his title. He declared that when he first was a candidate for Congress he was opposed for nomination by a Confederate general.

The general and he addressed a crowd at a town around which a battle of the war had been fought. The general told how he had fought and won that engagement and appealed for votes on that score.

Allen then spoke and declared he, too, had fought there, but as a private. He added that after the battle he had stood sentinel while the general slept. He asked that all generals vote for his opponent and all privates for him. They did so.

Thief Turns Poet to Sound a Warning

Benefit of "Going Straight" Told by One Who Admits "Going Wrong."

NEW YORK, May 12.—Robert L. Lawrence, formerly a bank messenger, was brought here from Los Angeles, Cal., charged with stealing $1,400. On his trip across the continent he wrote the following:

If you want a red nose and dim, bleary eyes,
If you wish to be one whom all men despise,
If you wish to be ragged and weary, and sad,
If you wish, in a word, to go to the bad—
Go wrong.

If your tastes don't agree with the "ifs" as above,
If you'd rather have life full of brightness and love,
If you care not to venture or find out too soon
That the gateway to hell lies through the tombs—
Go straight.

DRIVERS BEGIN PRACTICE FOR CLIMB OF HILL

NEXT Saturday afternoon the old Stewart Avenue hill will again become a scene of lively interest when the big, powerful stripped cars tear up the mile long incline in daring attempts to lower the records set last year by L. S. Crane's Pope-Hartford and George Hanson's Studebakers.

All the latter part of this week the course will be alive with contestants on practice sprints, for the Board of County Commissioners have allowed the Automobile Association to have exclusive use of the hill on the days of May 14, 15, 16 between the hours of one and three. This generous arrangement will allow ample time for tuning up of cars and motorcycles and give the drivers an opportunity to become familiar with the road.

Entries for the contest are coming in at a rapid rate and from present indications the second annual hill climb of the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory Association will eclipse all former events.

Entries to Date.

L. S. Crane—Pope-Hartford, "Betsy."
Studebaker Co.—Three cars.
Travis & Jones—Columbia.
Johnson Co.—Stoddard-Dayton.
Atlanta Auto Sales Co.—National.
W. J. Stoddard—Lion.
Harold McKenzie—Knight Special.
Ellis Car Co., Greenville, S. C.—(Name of car not given.)
I. O. Tousley, Alpharetta—Ford.
T. B. Goodloe—Locomobile.
Stearns Co.—Stearns.

This list will be swelled to about three times the number by the closing time for entries. Secretary Elleby, of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., is receiving all applications.

Handsome Prizes Offered.

In addition to the association cup and the E. Rivers Realty cup, donations have been received that will make an attractive array of trophies. Following is the list.

Prizes and cups in automobile events have been donated as follows:
Atlanta Constitution—Silver cup.
Durham Jewelry Co.—Silver cup.
Elyea-Austell Co.—Silver cup.
Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.—Silver cup.
Fisk Rubber Co.—Silver cup.
Republic Rubber Co.—Silver cup.
Studebaker Corporation—Silver Cup.
Stewart-Warner Corporation—Auto speedometer.
Reed Oil Co.—One barrel Triple "E" oil.
Johnson-Gewinner Co.—$15.00 raincoat.
New South Rubber Co.—232x3 1-2 Southern red tubes.
Auto Supply Co.—One pair $3.50 gloves.
Motorcycle Events—
Alexander-Seawald Co.—One pair motorcycle gloves and leggins.
Elyea-Austell Co.—One Troxel motorcycle saddle.
U. S. Tire Co.—Two motorcycle tires.
Hendee Mfg. Co.—One electric motorcycle horn.
Johnson-Gewinner Co.—One pair motorcycle leggins.
Stewart-Warner Corporation—One motorcycle speedometer.
Reed Oil Co.—One-half barrel Triple "E" oil.

Fighter, With Stiff Punch, Passes Scrapper of To-day a Scientist

By H. M. Walker.

WHERE are the ring "sluggers" of yesterday—the men who could drop a right against the chin, or drive a left to the body and call it a day's work?

The "killer" has disappeared along with the lightning rod, horse car and Republican vote. In his place we have the clever boxer, scientific, but punchless, remarkably fast on his feet, but over careful with his hands.

When Ad Wolgast hit the derailing switch he left the lightweight title in the hands of a young man with but five "K's" in his whole record. And this young man, since having the championship wished on him, has done nothing but take a daily decision over a T-bone steak, and practice the toe dance.

It's the same way all along the line, from the bantam babes to the bull neck heavies. The present day boxer is light on his feet, runs well both backward and forward, is kind and considerate with his opponents, and will fight if forced—perhaps.

* * *

WHEN it comes to playing a good stiff game of tag, our bantams have the world by the windpipe.

Three more clever boxers than Johnnie Coulon, the fight fear champion, and his two trailers, Johnnie Williams and Eddie Campi, never borrowed bathrobes.

* * *

THESE boys make the hummingbird look like a barnyard duck for speed, but if they had to win their fights with one punch they would be to the fight game what the Yankees are to the American League.

* * *

FEATHERWEIGHTS Johnnie Kilbane and Johnnie Dundee gave us twenty pounds of fast and furious waltzing. Had they been using palm leaf fans instead of decorative gloves the Vernon pavilion would have been blown over into Arizona.

After watching this exhibition I believe that it is no more than right that Kilbane should be credited with originating the "Swat-the-fly" idea.

Dundee claims to carry a knockout shot but from what we have seen of the little banana tamer he is badly in need of target practice.

* * *

WILLIE RITCHIE accuses himself of being the lightweight champion of the world. A careful search of his record shows the San Francisco lad to possess the punch of a paralytic. In forty ring engagements he has floored but five, stopping such terribles as Monk Enochs, Kid French, Tony Josephs, Tommy McFarland and Yankee Schwartz.

Freddie Welsh totes the lightweight champio..hip titles of both England and Australia, but his system is perfectly free of the knockout stuff. Frederick can "Yankee Doodle" on an opponent's ribs and jab him on the nose three hundred and sixty-four times to the round without letting the other fellow know that he is in trouble.

And there's Packey McFarland, our 138-pound "lightweight." With the benefit of his extra poundage Packy is unable to break into the knockout column. He's fast, clever and has a beautiful baritone voice.

We have hope for the 133-pound division, though. Joe Rivers is great on the marble slab thing, and Leach Cross has both the punch and the control to put it over the plate. "Bull" Anderson, at present in the squab stage, can work with one slam and he doesn't require over six inches of space to work in.

THE welters and middleweights—why dig up the dead?

New Trainer of Cubs Never Saw Ball Game

President Murphy Tells of Meeting Between Dr. Frederick Alex Hart and Evers.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Dr. Frederick Axel Hart, new trainer of the Cubs, never saw a ball game, according to President Charles W. Murphy, but has an unbroken record of successes in handling athletes since he left an institute in Stockholm, Sweden. This is Murphy's version of the meeting of Manager John Evers and the trainer:

Evers—Ever play ball?

Hart—I never saw a game, but I can perform an operation for appendicitis.

Evers—So can I. But the patient would die.

Hart succeeds Doc Semmens, who severed his connection with the Cubs the same day he struck Manager Evers.

GRIFFIN SUCCEEDS WEBER AS AMERICUS MANAGER

AMERICUS, GA., May 12.—The Americus ball team left yesterday for Waycross in charge of First Baseman Hal Griffin as temporary manager. Thoroughly tired of continued defeat sustained by the Americus aggregation, the directors met this morning and relieved Manager Harry Weber of that office, temporarily at least, putting Griffin in charge.

Americus has lost seven of the nine games played already, and while Manager Weber ascribes defeat to bad luck, local fans are less charitably inclined. It is generally suspected here that the salary limit rule is not being observed by all of the clubs of the league, and as Americus is living within the salary limits she is placed at disadvantage in employment of proficient players.

Ill luck of the Americus team recently has caused interest in baseball to flag perceptibly, although a winning streak would quickly restore enthusiasm.

WILLIAMS AND BETCHER WILL JOIN LOOKOUTS.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 12.—Manager Elberfeld announced last night that he had secured Third Baseman Williams from the Montreal club and Outfielder Betcher from the Newark club. Both players will report immediately.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 12.—After the first week of the invasion of the East by the Western clubs of the National League, one thing is very apparent. The East, as a whole, is stronger than the West this year, but that does not necessarily indicate the pennant winner will be a product of the East.

At first, it was thought there would be only two clubs in the East that could put up any kind of a front against the Western teams which were rated to be strong. These two were New York and Philadelphia, but now Brooklyn has come through with the best-looking team that has been developed in years across the bridge. Boston is also playing good enough ball.

* * *

I WANT to pause for a minute to discuss Boston and Pittsburg. Behind the Beaneaters this year is a shrewd manager, one who is building. "Chief" Stallings is picking up all the likely ball players he can find around loose, and then sorting them out as they come. He is constructing; and out of the twisted mass of baseball junk which he took over at the beginning of the season, he is going to have a smooth-running machine soon. The Boston club, although many good hitters have resided on the team from time to time, has long been the victim of its own sluggishness. Stallings is trying to add a little speed to his club. He realizes its value. With this notion in mind, he went out and signed Mann to play in the outfield. Stallings thinks the boy will make a great ball player if given time.

"He's the fastest man in baseball," the "Chief" told us when we were in Boston in the early part of the season, and he wasn't punning on the name, either.

* * *

STALLINGS has also picked up "Dick" Rudolph, the pitcher of the International League, and once a member of the Giants for a brief period. Rudolph will win a lot of games for Stallings. Then there is a different spirit manifested by the club now, which is a reflection of the Stallings style. When the game gets hard, the boys do not abandon the pursuit of victory and blow up as former Boston teams did. No, sir. It is in there fighting, as proved by the fact they took two extra inning games from the Pirates last week, with Wagner in both battles.

* * *

ABOUT the Pittsburg club, I do not know what to say. I have not seen the team play this year so far, but from the gossip in the league and the box scores, it is evident that the club is all off its balance. The return of Wagner is going to help the team a whole lot, but Clarke's greatest disappointment is the failure of his pitchers to come through. Before the season, the Pittsburg pitching staff was regarded as one of the best in the league, if not the very best, both by the players themselves and by the newspaper writers who follow the teams. Many times ball players will approve a man whom the general public and the writers cannot see. For instance, Fletcher, formerly the shortstop of the Giants, was generally rated more highly by ball players than by the general public and writers. They know his ground-covering ability, and he has the finest pair of hands I ever saw on a ball player.

* * *

BUT, to return to the Pittsburg staff, Hendrix, who led the league last year; Adams, Robinson, O'Toole and Camnitz sound like a collection of world beaters. You'd think it would only be necessary to have one of those names announced as the Pittsburg pitcher, and the game would be over. Not one of these men has been going smoothly this year. Hendrix has been wild, and O'Toole has been wild, and the staff has been generally out of shape. O'Toole is back at his old job of losing games by one run. I guess he holds the record for this jointly with "Nap" Rucker.

* * *

THE Pirates were rated as a great slugging team before the season. It was on the peerless pitching and slambang slugging they were to ride through the league to an early pennant, because even the members of the club themselves concede that the team lacks speed. But the pitchers would hold the opposing teams to one or two runs, and the Pittsburg boys would pile up many with their bats, and there would be a nice little ball game for Mr. Clarke all wrapped up in cotton batting and tin foil to be put in the moth balls. However, the pitchers have been permitting many runs, and the batters have not been slugging; and the race is not destroyed yet.

"The Pirates condition slowly. Wait until the warm weather sets in," a Pittsburg rooter whispered into my ear the other day.

It will do the team little good to round into form along in September. It is my honest opinion that the club is going to get on the move one of these days and kick up a lot of dust. It yet will be a trouble-maker in the league, because those pitchers are sure to begin to twirl and the batters to hit. Therefore, it pleases the Giants immensely to see the Pirates crowded down as far as possible at this stage, especially as we are not up any too high in the ladder of the club standing ourselves.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Gunboat Smith stops at nothing. Word was received from San Francisco last night that Smith sent Jim Jeffries the following telegram: "Do you want to come up North and act as my sparring partner? Answer immediately."

* * *

Smith is training for his match with Jess Willard, which will be fought in San Francisco on May 17. The winner will probably be matched to box Luther McCarty for the white heavyweight championship of the world on July 4.

* * *

Willard has engaged five sparring partners, while Smith up to date has only the veteran, Bob Armstrong to work with.

* * *

Buck Crouse and Blink McCloskey will clash in a six-round battle at Pittsburg May 19. Articles were signed yesterday.

* * *

Matty McCue and Jeff O'Connell are rounding into great shape for their ten-round scrap at Racine, Wis., Thursday night. Both boys are training for the bout in Chicago. Joe Sullivan, manager of O'Connell, writes that his protege is in the best shape of his life and is sure to cop the long end of the purse.

* * *

Pittsburg is after a bout between Bat Nelson and Ray Parker. Parks is a rough, rugged fellow and has been defeating all his opponents in decisive fashion.

* * *

Fight Referee Usually Correct Floto Defends Charley Eyton

By Otto C. Floto.

DENVER, May 12.—Voicing their opinions. That's the privilege of every gathering where boxing bouts are decided. Yet how often have we found the great majority in error while taking issue with the judge who renders the decision. Many and many a time have I seen the third man in the ring absolutely correct in his judgment, and yet the crowd howled its disapproval. Then also have I seen the referee quite wrong and the crowd give him great applause for the verdict. It's all the way you look at it; it's the angle from which you view the contest.

And yet with it all I'll wager that the man in the ring is more often correct than the crowd seated about the arena. The official in the inclosure is generally one supposed to know the game, the tricks, advantages that score points and everything else that becomes necessary to make him a fair and impartial judge. For that reason he is better able to reach a correct verdict than the outsider, who comes only on occasions to view the fights, and who nine times out of ten is prejudiced. Of course, when an incompetent man officiates, then our argument is dashed to the ground—we are left without a leg to stand upon.

* * *

HOW many times have you sat at the ringside when one man's friends seemed in the majority? You've seen this favorite beaten a mile, and yet the referee, for fear of adverse criticism, either calls the bout a "draw" or awards the decision to the man whose friends are shouting for him and yet who failed to win. I've seen this occur time and again, and so have you.

Just now Charley Eyton of Los Angeles is being "panned" for calling the Dundee-Kilbane bout a draw. The press reports tell us that the verdict was unpopular and that Kilbane won. Perhaps so. But we have always found Eyton quite correct in his decisions. For years he has officiated in Los Angeles, and no complaint has been heard. He may have erred this time for all we know. But wait until the smoke of battle clears away and you'll find that his verdict wasn't so far amiss. That, at any rate, is my guess.

* * *

IF the verdict was not in accordance with the facts, then Kilbane has but himself to blame. His stalling tactics are quite unbecoming for a champion and have got him in bad in the East until his last fight, when he redeemed himself with a knock-out and regain some of his standing. A champion is supposed to carry the brunt of the battle. If he allows his opponent to assume the aggressive from start to finish, how can he hope to gain the favor of the referee? Isn't the fellow who rushes the battle and makes it possible for the spectators to see real action entitled to something?

WE WILL GET LEAD WHEN WE RETURN HOME

—JOE AGLER.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 12.—Billy Smith will use Chappelle or Brady to open up the Memphis series, with Graham catching.

The Crackers romped on the Billiken hurlers yesterday and scored an easy victory. Gilbert Price won both games won by the Crackers in this series.

We hit the ball to all corners of the lot, for home runs, three-base hits, two-base hits and singles.

Harry Welchonce had a great day, both at bat and in the field. He got four hits out of four trips to the plate, one being a home run, and pulled down line drives that looked impossible. He had a great day.

Tommy Long nearly hit the "bull" again. His home run just missed the fig sign by inches.

Bill Bailey got back in the game and was robbed of a home run by a great catch by Kutina.

Take it all in all, the Crackers hit the ball as they should, and we feel confident we will keep going, now that we have started.

Wally Smith turned his ankle and will probably be out of the game for a few days. George Rohe will go to third until Wally is able to cavort around his old position.

The Crackers travel nearly 1,400 miles in the next week, including Montgomery to Memphis, then to New Orleans and back to Atlanta.

The Crackers do not hope to regain first position till we reach home, but will hold second place, and when Mobile gets on the road they will not win so many games. With us at home we should regain the position Billy Smith's ball club should hold.

Season's Sensation Is W. Johnson Dodgers Stir Things Up a Bit, Too

By Percy H. Whiting.

FAR be it from us to embark on that time-honored and worn argument as to the Greatest Pitcher in the World, BUT—

Just back from a chain-lightning jaunt through the upper right-hand corner of the big league territory, we voice one fact-proved conclusion: that Walter Johnson is the only genuine sensation of a good, brisk season.

When Johnson at Chicago Saturday completed 52 2-3 innings without allowing a run he added further proof to a well-known fact, said w.-k. fact being that there's only one greatest pitcher in the world alive to-day, and his initials are W. J.

Don't forget, in giving Johnson his due that Walter's support is nothing amazing. The Senators lack about ten ball players of having a great ball club. The catching staff has wabbled for years. Schaeffer at first is no Daubert. Laporte is—well, he's just Laporte, which isn't anything so marvelous. The outfield consists largely of Milan. McBride is a grand fielder, but a fright at hitting.

When Walter Johnson wins a ball game he wins it all by himself. And it takes a pretty good pitcher to do that in anybody's league.

* * *

"THE SENATORS play good ball behind Johnson," you say.

Sure they do. Why shouldn't they? Any old team can play pretty good ball behind a pitcher who NEVER flickers. But it is thunder to pitch ball all the time that's air-tight.

That's the advantage Mathewson has had all these years. His team now and then won a game FOR HIM. Johnson, when he does win, takes no chances, but keeps 'em won all the way.

Three and a third more runless innings and Johnson reaches Doc White's world's record.

* * *

NEW YORK, it appeared to me was a bit bilious on the subject of baseball. With the Yanks last, the Giants nowhere and Brooklyn beneath their dignity, the fans of the metropolis haven't a blamed thing to console them.

The opinion prevails that the Giants are a problem. As for the Yanks, everybody seems to feel that Chance will make a team of them in due time. It really is amazing the confidence they feel in the Peerless Leader.

As to just what's the matter with the Yanks, not even Chance himself seems to know. They are joy-scouting a trifle too much, no doubt. Chance's recent order against morning poker games took out one of the many kinks. The team was bottling itself up every morning and absorbing too much tobacco smoke and too little oxygen.

The real trouble with the Yanks lies deep. It must be due to rotten spirit somewhere. Chance will fire a lot of men or throw the fear of Gehenna into them before he gets a ball club.

* * *

MAYBE you don't think that placid burg of Brooklyn isn't "hawg wild" over its Dixie-developed ball club. The idea of Brooklyn sticking right up around the top, with the season a month advanced, is hard to appreciate.

About all Dahlin needs now is for "Red" Smith's annual hitting streak to crop out. That is all that is lacking. Jake Daubert and Zack Wheat, two other former Southern Leaguers on the same team, are decidedly off in hitting, too; but they are the sort who always manage to get back on after a bit. Jake is suffering from an attack of "lambasteit," and when he eases off a shade in his efforts, his average will go up like a baloon—and stay up.

Bob Fisher, the Nashville kid, is not only as good as he ever was, but he's considerably better. The stride he is hitting now will bring him high honors.

Of Rucker, nothing need be said, except that he shows no sign whatever of fading. Lefty Allen, late of Mobile, is rather better this year than ever. Strange to say, these grand southpaws have not won a game yet. Rucker has dropped three tough ones. Allen is always a slow starter.

Dahlen still believes he can make something out of "Bull" Wagner, his New Orleans recruit. This one is big and tough, and may develop.

Of all the Southerners on Dahlen's staff, none has been quite the surprise this season that Charley Stengel, the ex-Billikin, has. This lad has won several games with timely, screaming hits; has cracked out two that nicked the "bull" sign and has fielded sensationally.

I can't help feeling that Stengel is playing a good bit over his stride and is due a slump. But, then, you can't tell. No rules hold in Brooklyn. Look at Zack Wheat as an example—a shine in the Southern, a star in the National.

It would be a fine, amazing thing if the Brooklyn club should make a big showing. But, then, Washington did last year, so you never can tell.

FODDER FOR FANS

By shutting out the White Sox Saturday Walter Johnson, of the Senators, annexed a record of 52 2-3 scoreless innings, breaking the old record of 45. But just as soon as Johnson had turned the trick somebody in Chicago declared that "Doc" White, nine years ago, had pitched 64 or 56 innings without being scored upon.

* * *

Joe Jackson, of the Naps, hammered out a four-base swat yesterday when the bases were filled. He also got a double and two singles out of four times up.

* * *

For the benefit of those interested it may be said that C. Webb Murphy has not as yet looped the loop from the top of the Brooklyn grandstand, in keeping with his promise. Nor is there any reason to hope that he will.

* * *

Otis Clymer's inability to play with the Cubs Saturday was due to the fact that he ate a $3 steak in one of the gilded grills in New York and right away got ptomaine poisoning.

* * *

The Naps so far have refused to "crack," as has been widely predicted. Maybe, after all, they've discarded their old and famous trick, and will become real pennant contenders. While discussing the Naps, it might be well to look into the record of one J. Birmingham, manager.

* * *

When Birmingham took charge of the Naps late last season they were trying their hardest to skid out of the percentage column. Immediately thereafter they started to win and when the season ended they had a record of 26 victories against 6 defeats.

* * *

Jack Coombs, the star twirler of the Athletics, is recovering from his illness, but will not be able to get back into the game until June.

* * *

The Red Sox came up from behind in the game with the Tigers yesterday, making three runs, tying the score in the ninth inning. They scored the winning run in the tenth.

* * *

Falkenberg's victory for the Naps over the Yankees yesterday makes his sixth straight win of the season. Only Walter Johnson, of the Senators, with seven victories, leads this twirling record.

* * *

The showing Jim Thorpe, the disqualified Olympic athlete, has made in exhibition games has caused Giant fans to beg McGraw to place him in the regular line-up.

* * *

Shouldn't the Cubs be called the veterans? In their line-up are Schulte, Evers, Reulbach, Ritchie, Archer, Corriden, Bresnahan and a few others who have been playing for several generations.

* * *

Speaker, Lewis and Hendriksen, of the Red Sox, are poling for a combined average of about .350, yet the team is down in sixth place.

* * *

The Browns, without the aid of their suspended manager, George Stovall, had an easy time trimming the Senators yesterday.

* * *

Ed Walsh pitched for the Sox yesterday against he Athletics, and won.

SIX THOUSAND FANS TURN OUT AT MOBILE

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—Mobile and Chattanooga broke even in yesterday's double-header. The crowd was almost equal to that of the Sunday's opener between Atlanta and the locals. It was estimated at nearly 6,000. Chattanooga took the first game by a score of 1 to 0, while the last was a veritable batfest for the locals, who garnered hit after hit from Troy's delivery and piled up thirteen. Hogg lost his first game of the season. He was found for five singles, fanned four and walked three.

HAS BEEN.

Time was when Jimmy Sheckard took his stand
And lowbrows hit the ball to beat the band.
He never moved, but stood there with a smile
And waited as it nestled in his hand.

Time was when Mordy Brown stood on the mound;
The sacks were full and no one could be found
To stop the swats—he shot them at the plate
And Cobb and Crawford rolled them on the ground.

I sit to-day and freeze my youthful frame,
And yell till my esophagus is lame,
But, Oh! to see Jim Sheckard out in left
As Brown comes walking in to save the game.

There are several things which fail to excite our ambition, one of which is to throw the first ball at the first game of the Federal League.

George Stovall is a rude person and all that. The chief fault to be found with him is that he played with the wrong team.

If Mr. Stovall had been playing with a New York team he would have been slapped on the wrist and suspended a whole day—if the day happened to fall on Sunday.

It is well to make an example of a ball player if he plays for a magnate who will stand for it.

The fact that St. Louis lost the first game in the Federal League is merely a reversion to type. St. Louis does not feel comfortable unless it is at the bottom of things.

One is not surprised to hear that Ritchie demands $15,000 for a conflict in New York. If Willie does not have a care he may get himself into a fight.

We are about to have motorcycle races in our midst. We presume that they will be attended by the same persons who pay regular money to see wrestling matches.

It is getting so these days that a team that Frank Chance beats is accused of having the milk of human kindness.

Bonesetter Reese bursts out with the information that dandelion greens will cure liver trouble, but he fails to state what will cure dandelion greens.

Frank Chance arises to remark that he will not trade Hal Chase for Ty Cobb. Even David Harum would find it hard to trade a jackknife for a Derby winner.

There are various reasons why Charlie Dooin's team should win this year, one of which is that Horace Fogel is not in the way.

"A club owner must think," quoth Charles Webb Murphy. If Charles thinks before he speaks he does a heluva lot of thinking.

Some day we shall scrape up nerve enough to ask a motorcyclist whether he has been sentenced to it or whether it is his own free will.

But I am deeply jealous of
The cargo that you have."

GEORGIA-TECH TRACK MEET AT ATHENS IS OFF

ATHENS, GA., May 12.—The track meet between Tech and Georgia, scheduled to be held at Athens this afternoon, has been postponed until next week. The meet was called off by Georgia faculty, who base their claim on the fact that most of the track stars are on the baseball team and a meet at this time would interfere with the team's chances in the games with Tech in Atlanta next Friday and Saturday. The Georgia boys have devoted most of their time to baseball practice and the track team is not in shape to meet any one right now.

FOUR MOTORCYCLE RIDERS ARRIVE FOR THE BIG MEET

Four of the speed merchants who will compete on Jack Prince's motorcycle track on the old circus grounds arrived in the city Sunday, and were on the roads around Atlanta all during the day, tuning up their racing machines.

The one-quarter-mile saucer will be in readiness for them to practice on by Friday. Mr. Prince announced last night that he would have the track proper completed by that time and would then start work on the seating.

Most of the famous motorcycle riders of this country will be in Atlanta for the race meet, and some fine sport is promised. Records are also sure to go glimmering.

Mr. Prince estimates that the riders will average 90 miles an hour on the saucer.

SHERIDAN DECIDES TO GIVE UP ALL ATHLETICS

NEW YORK, May 12.—Because it interferes with his job, Martin Sheridan, policeman, former champion discus thrower, has decided to drop out of athletics.

"You can state positively for me," Sheridan is accredited with saying, "that I am through with competition for good. I would like to take part in the games, but I find it interferes with my job, so I have decided to cut it out. There is no doubt I could go back into competition and do as well as I did. I went out to Celtic Park the other day and threw the discus 13 feet with all my clothes on. I will probably go out there sometimes for exercise, but that will be all.

ELBERFELD ATTACKED BY FANS; "KID" WINS

MOBILE, ALA., May 12.—Fred Murphy and Sam Pritchard, two young white men, were arrested on the other side of the ball park yesterday after the double-header, and docketed for disorderly conduct at the police station. It seems the men took it upon themselves to get at Manager Elberfeld, of the Chattanooga team, for the mixup with Stock in the game, and assailed him. Some of the onlookers stated the men rushed Elberfeld and that he struck one of them after they had tackled him. Elberfeld denied having made any demonstration and his statement was verified.

And no bunch got them on the run!
They have the same peanuts and drink,
But all else there is on the blink.

EDDIE M'GOORTY SIGNS FOR BOUT WITH HOUCK

DENVER, COLO., May 12.—Eddie McGoorty, of Oshkosh, has signed to meet Leo Houck, of Boston, in a 10-round bout May 27. The weight agreed upon is 160 pounds at 3 o'clock. Rudy Unholz is working with McGoorty at the Arvada training quarters.

GUNBOAT SMITH TRAINING.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 12.—Gunboat Smith, in training here for his bout with Jess Willard, hunted around to-day for more sparring partners. Smith has battered up all the available huskies and none of the aspiring pugilists in this section care about swapping punches with him.

Evans Writes of Eyesight in Golf Most Players Depend On One Optic

By "Chick" Evans.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 10.—There has been a great deal of discussion of late in the British golf magazines and newspapers concerning what is called the "master eye in golf." This phrase seems to indicate that each player has one eye which serves better than the other in the all-important act of keeping the eye on the ball. British periodicals therefore discourse at length upon the subject and advise a study of one's best optic. An unintentional experiment was made in England a short time ago during a team match by a member of the Cambridge University team. One eye of the gentleman had been undergoing medical treatment and at the time of the competition was bandaged closely. In spite of this handicap he halved the match with his opponent and played splendid golf at times; on occasion, however, he found difficulty in judging distances.

* * *

BEING interested in the subject I made a few experiments myself to determine which was my master eye, and I have concluded that it is my left. Perhaps I cock my head back a little on the back swing and on the down swing to the actual hitting; at any rate, I seemed in my experiment to make a greater use of my left eye. I think Valle's weight testing machine could be used profitably in this discussion, because if a player sways backward the line from his left eye to the ball is shorter and less oblique. In any inclination there is a tendency to shorten the line from the left eye to the ball. Of course, I am arguing from the standpoint of a right-handed golfer. I should think the right eye would be more important to the left-handed player.

In the execution of the longer shots the ball is played so far away from the body that one can not get both eyes immediately over the ball and allow the club to lie naturally, which, by the way, is one of the most important things to be borne in mind. In cases where there is a marked discrepancy in the strength of the eyes the stronger must be necessarily most favored.

* * *

ONE of my great little rules has always been to keep my eyes in such a position that lines of equal length drawn from each eye will meet at a certain point on the ball. In this case, of course, no eye can be called the master eye. In putting, the hardest shot of the game, I try to keep my eyes directly over the ball. The stroke is so short that it would be hard for me to tell which eye is the better one. Maybe I could do better with only one eye; that seems to be the only thing I have not tried in my fruitless efforts to learn how to putt.

Those players who wear glasses must have special difficulties to overcome when playing golf, and it would be enlightening to know what these are and how they are surmounted; for the whole subject of the application of sight to golf playing is an interesting one.

PREP LEAGUE NOTES

Boys High and Tech High will meet for the second time this season on Wednesday. The last game resulted in a win for Boys High and the chances are that the team will repeat.

* * *

The race for second place in the local Prep League now lies between Marist and Tech High, with the percentage of games won and lost slightly in favor of the Culverites. They have won four and lost two games. Marist has won three and lost two.

* * *

There were no games played Saturday by local prep teams. A number of the members of the Boys High nine journeyed to Athens to see the second game of the Tech-Georgia series.

* * *

Meyers, of Tech High, proved a sensation in the pole vault in the Prep meet last Friday. He had been practicing for this event only two weeks and never tried to vault before. He just barely missed winning the event Friday.

* * *

A tennis tournament between the winners of the Peacock meet and the winners of the Boys High tournament will be held at East Lake some time next week. Starr, Harris, Candler and Jones are the crack players at Boys High. Sims, Sams and Black are the champions at Peacock.

* * *

The G. M. A. Cadets who were encamped at Lakewood are planing on a water polo team. The boys have been swimming during the past week and Coach Griffin says there are a number of expert swimmers in the camp.

* * *

Marist College will hold its annual field day exercises the first week in June. A medal will be given to the highest point winner. The fight for this honor will be a lively one between Allen, Lewis and Fowler.

* * *

If an all-prep track team is picked this season Marist will have its share of men on it. Allen, Lewis and Fowler are all good men and would give any prep school athlete a hard job to beat them.

* * *

There are about twenty-five amateur baseball teams in this city and many of them play good ball. The city has provided an ample number of diamonds on which these teams can play.

* * *

Over two thousand school children took part in the exercises held at Ponce de Leon Park Saturday. These exercises lasted throughout the day and many prizes were given to the winners in the different contests.

* * *

The Marist Specials, a nine made up of boys attending the grammar school and all under 16 years of age, won the championship of the city Public School League Thursday from the Formwalt Street School by the score of 7 to 3. Wrigley, Adair and Liddell were the star performers on the Specials.

M'CARTY THINKS LITTLE OF FIGHT WITH PELKEY

CHICAGO, May 12.—Luther McCarty's bout with Arthur Pelkey at Calgary on May 24, will be nothing more than a training stunt, according to the champion, who is in Chicago with Manager McCarney.

On his arrival here, McCarney found telegrams awaiting him from Promoters Coffroth and McCarney of the Pacific Coast clubs asking the champion to meet the winner of the "Gunboat" Smith-Jess Willard fight to be staged in San Francisco, May 17. McCarney said he thought Smith no great attraction on the coast, and that of the two fighters he preferred to have his man meet Willard.

A CHILD SAVED FROM A HORRIBLE DEATH

LITTLE ANNIE DONALDSON, AGE 5 YEARS, NO. 7 RICHARDS ST., CORNER TOMBLIN ST., LITTLE DAUGHTER OF MR. AND MRS. S. P. DONALDSON, AFTER 3 YEARS' BATTLE SAVED AS IF BY A MIRACLE.

Words can not describe or express the supreme feeling of joy and happiness which to-day filled the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Donaldson, who reside at No. 7 Richards Street, New Era division, this city. Little Annie, 5 years old, not larger than an ordinary child of 5 years, was saved from death and restored to perfect health in a seemingly miraculous manner. For three years this little child has been suffering from some inexplainable cause. Her stomach would at times bloat to immense proportions, high fevers would frequently attack her, followed by dreadful chills or ulcers attacks, her mind was clear, but her memory weak, her sleep restless, sometimes screaming out, almost frightened to death. Her breath, especially in the mornings, was very foul, dark circles under the eyes, very nervous, her appetite was changeable, ravenously hungry at times, at other times the sight of food was nauseating. All the careful attention which loving parents could bestow was given to her, and all modest attempts were resorted to, but the child's condition grew worse. The mother did what hundreds of other people were doing. She called at Coursey & Munn's drug store and obtained a treatment of the Quaker Extract. With anxious mind she watched for results, after the child began taking the wonderful remedy, and what were the results? To the amazement of the whole family, the child expelled a monster tapeworm, head and all complete, alive and squirming. It is hard to believe this monster is 41 feet in length. How many children and people are being tortured by parasites, and how they go on for years dosing and doping for what they think is some form of stomach trouble when it really is worms of some kind that is causing all your trouble! If it is worms, Quaker Extract will expel them. If it is caused from other causes, such as catarrh, indigestion, constipation, the Quaker Extract will do more for you than any other remedies on the market to-day.

This case is so remarkable, that many people will doubt it, yet all are at liberty to investigate, write, phone, wire or call at the child's residence, the above address. The father is a carpenter by occupation, was born and lived most of his life here in Atlanta, and he has a host of friends and they will vouch for his word. The Health Teacher said the people would soon realize the power of the Quaker Remedies, and such cases as this should certainly convince every sensible person. Once more the Health Teacher recommends the Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm to any person who may suffer with rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder or blood trouble, and will expel worms.

So call to-day at Coursey & Munn's drug store, 29 Marietta Street, and obtain these wonderful Quaker Remedies. We prepay express charges on all orders of $3 or over.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"THAT must be some interesting, that novel you are reading there," remarked the Head Barber. "You ain't had your nose out of it all the forenoon."

"It is a beautiful story, George. I almost cry in some parts of it, and when the laughs come they are sure great. I didn't skip a line of it, either, and I have just finished the last page. The title of it is 'Starflower,' and it was wrote by Mrs. Eleanor Shirley Dewflicker. And then they say that women can't write! Maybe some women writes stories that is kind of punk and then gets made fun of by the critics, but this woman that wrote 'Starflower' is some queen of a writer. Gee, there is some love passages that is simply superfluous and almost sublimate. 'Starflower' is the name of the heroine, a little girl that always lived in the northern part of Pennsylvania. She is so pretty, and sweet that she has lovers come from everywhere to try to win her hand, but she loves only one, a young man who is doing scientific farming near her father's home. Of course science is a great thing, George, and I suppose if it helps raise big crops it must help a man to make love, too. Anyhow, she loves him and some day they are to wed. Just listen to this part, where they are engaged:

Very Pathetic.

"'Starflower,' whispered Robert, placing her little trembling palm in his strong right hand. 'Little girl, I am plain and direct in my speech, as you know. I can't write poetry for you, little girl, like the Byron poems you read to me out in the orchard, and I ain't no Tennyson, but I am a man with a man's heart and two willing hands. I love you!'

"'And I love you, Bob,' murmured Starflower, bewildered by the wonderful rush of happiness that swept over her lithe form and suffused her cheeks with the first flush of girlish love.

"An oriole flashed brightly through the crimson sumac and the brook rippled along like some soft accompaniment to the oldest, sweetest story in the world."

"Gee, George; ain't that some writing?"

"Did he marry her and make a lot of kale?" asked the practical Head Barber.

"No, George," replied the Manicure Lady. "That is the pitiful part of it. A young bridge builder named Walter Orr came to the little town where Starflower dwelt, and he kind of dazzled her with his fine English and his wonderful piano playing. He was a college man, and her Robert didn't know nothing about Virgil or Horace or Rameses or any of them old-timers. Orr knew all about them all, and he could change his voice until it got as soft as the rustling of the breeze through the autumn leaves. When he was talking to his men he spoke kind of commanding, but when he spoke to her he always spoke with the soft pedal. One night, George, she agreed to run away with him, and the next morning they were gone. Just after they eloped Orr got fired and had to take a position that paid him about one-quarter as much money as her former sweetheart made every week out of his registered milk from his registered cows.

It Sounds All Right.

"When she saw poverty staring her in the face she took some kind of a powder and they found her still in death with a note to Robert pinned on her night robe. Then Robert heard about it and went so insane that he called all his cows Starflower."

"It sounds all right," said the Head Barber, "but I wouldn't go nuts over no girl that threw me down!"

Quite Taxable

William Jennings Bryan once visited Cornell University, and while being entertained to dinner by a prominent member of the legal fraternity he told the following story:

"Once out in Nebraska I went to protest against my real estate assessment, and one of the things of which I particularly complained was assessing a goat at $25. I claimed that a goat was not real property in the legal sense of the word, and should not be assessed. One of the assessors, a very pleasant-faced old man, very obligingly said that I could go upstairs with him, and together we would look over the rules and regulations and see what could be done. We looked over the rules, and finally the old man asked:

"'Does your goat run loose on this road?'

"'Well, sometimes,' said I, wondering what the penalty was for that dreadful offense.

"'Does he butt?' again queried the old man.

"'Yes,' I answered, 'he butts.'

"'Well,' said the old man, looking at me, 'this rule says tax all property running and abutting on the highway. I don't see that I can do anything for you. Good day, sir.'"

A Charming Midsummer Hat

By OLIVETTE

A DAINTY little model this for wear with the lacy gowns of July and August. All in pure white, it tones well with the bright eyes and softly flushed cheeks of midsummer days. Draw folds of soft chiffon or mousselaine de soie over the crown and brim of a small milk-white straw shape—chip will do, though milan is better and "horsehair" best of all. Around the crown draw taffeta ribbon finishing in a "pump bow" directly in front. From under this bow, in either direction, lay sheafs of wheat in the prevailing tone of white. And now the final touch is given by the coquettish ruches of soft chiffon that face the entire under brim and appear softly at the back where the brim has a decided upward roll.

Sister's Engagement

TO-DAY'S COMPLETE STORY.

THE daughter of the household, aged 11, looked up from her book as the man caller came into the library.

"How do you do, Mr. Dearmore," she said, getting up politely. "You might as well take a comfortable chair because sister won't be down for ages. She is always slow about getting dressed and I supposed now she'll be slower than ever because she won't care if she does keep you waiting."

"Well, why shouldn't she care, I'd like to know?" inquired the caller with an assumption of surprise designed to be comic.

The young person hitched a little closer to him in her eagerness. "I just found out," she told him, "tonight. I guess they weren't going to tell me, but sister was so interested in brushing out her switch that she didn't notice me, and mother said, 'You might have done better if you'd had more ambition, but, thank heaven, you're engaged at last!' And sister said yes, it was time and she'd have to make the best of it. Why, she's engaged! Don't you understand?"

"You surprise me," said the caller, with interest.

Very Exciting.

The young person nodded her head. "It's awfully exciting to have an engaged person in the family. We never had one before. I held my hand over my mouth to keep from asking right out who it was, but I knew if I spoke they'd make me go away—and then all they said was that where the trooser was coming from if dad didn't make a killing goodness only knew. What's a trooser?"

"A sort of feminine delirium, I believe," the young man told her. Wouldn't you like to read out loud to me from your book?"

"Not when I can talk," the young person assured him, promptly. "I'd think it was Bob Samson, only he hasn't been here for ages. He's riding around a ranch out West now and he always brought me chocolates and petted the dog and waited hours and hours for sister. Mother told her one day for goodness sake when she got her hands on that huge old Samson house to burn it down and put up another one with a French gray drawing room and other things, but I guess Bob slipped a cog somehow"——

"Er—what?"

"Well, Aunt Clara said to mother that a cog in the wheels must have slipped somehow, and how did he ever get away, and wasn't it a pity! So I suppose Bob did it. I always liked his chocolates—he bought me just as good ones as he bought sister. Sometimes they try to pass off cheap candy on me, but I know! Then I feed it to the dog.

"I'm glad it wasn't that Siddens man. He always called me 'little one' and patted my head and he had bronchitis and always coughed before he spoke, and sister said she didn't care if he was rich, but she couldn't endure a man who wore brown ties and ate grapefruit with a fork and anyhow he gave her the shivers. That was the time mother scolded so and sister went to Aunt Clara's for a month.

"I'm surprised at her getting engaged, because she'll have to have a house and meals then and she says picking out things to eat is simply awful and she wouldn't wear her life away keeping down the grocery bills for any man and he might as well make up his mind to it. Anyhow, sister never loses her head, because mother says so, and she'll make him toe the mark. Mother says that with her sweet smile sister could make a man believe white was black, but that seems foolish. Wouldn't you know black if you saw it?"

"I used to think I was able to distinguish colors," admitted the caller.

A Surprise.

"But you're different," said the young person. "It isn't as though you were one of sister's trailers—that's what dad calls 'em. It doesn't make any difference to you. Only I thought if I told you about it you'd understand why she didn't hurry to get down here, now she's interested in one particular man."

"Well," said the caller, "I'll tell you a secret. I'm the particular man!"

The young person's eyes bulged. "Honest?" she squealed. "Why, I was never so sur-r-p-prised in my l-i-life! And you never petted the dog once! My, but you're quiet!"

RECIPE FOR WRITING.

THE one way to write is to do it. Sit down to your typing machine and rattle the keys till a poem slips out where mere space has just been. Sounds simple—well, listen; it isn't; it's only the way you should write. Do I do it? Well, no. I'm confessing that it's not thus my songs I indite. But I take up my little tan Faber, and cudgel my little gray brain, and I cover great sheets of white paper right over and over again with lead marks of black and with smudges which mean that I had to erase. Each "I just dashed off" chap really drudges. He denies? Then he's paid for his "space!"

ENVOI.

A little work, a little play
To keep us going—and so,
Good-day!

A little warmth, a little light
Of love's bestowing—and so,
Good-night!

A little fun to match the sorrow
Of each day's growing—and so,
Good-morrow!

A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing! And so—
Good-bye!

:: REMEMBERING ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

IF I could just remember, when the past is on parade,
Some little deed of merit for each big mistake I've made,
The other days, long vanished, would be glad days to recall,
But Memory leans toward wilder scenes—and I can see them all.

If I could just remember, counting back a score of years,
One act that made a loved one smile—not ten that prompted tears—
I'd dream the past dreams over and forget the wasted wine,
But Memory loves to taunt me with the errors that were mine.

If I could just remember, in the twilight of my life,
One speech that made for peace and love—not ten that hastened strife—
The future might seem dreary and the present might be bare,
But the past would be an orchard with a thousand songbirds there.

How to Manage a Husband

By DOROTHY DIX.

THEY had admired all of the little bride's wedding finery, and had finally drifted over to where the tea table was set by an open window.

"Well, my dear," said the woman in the soft white gown, "I hope you are going to be as happy as the days are long, and I am sure you will, for Jack is a fine fellow, and he is well to do, and an orphan, so you are going to escape hard times and mothers-in-law, two of the principal snags that are most apt to make a big dent in the barque of matrimony, even when they don't wreck it.

"Still, you must not expect to find everything plain sailing. There are a good many storms on even the calmest sea of wedlock, and you are going to find out that lots of things that you expected to happen won't happen, and a lot of things that you were positive couldn't occur, do occur with amazing frequency.

"Also, you are going to discover, and it will give you the jar of your life, that the noble ideal of perfect manhood that you are tying up with has got faults, and peculiarities, and whims, and crochets that you have never suspected concealed about his person.

"Now you take it from me, that the great thing in married life is for the wife to begin right, to get off on the right foot, so to speak, for every man can be managed, and brought to eat out of his wife's hand, if only she goes about it in the proper manner."

"What is the best way of managing a husband?" anxiously inquired the little bride.

The Best Way.

"Well," replied the woman in the soft white gown, "I can't do better than relate to you the experiences of two friends of mine, both of whom married good men, but men who were high tempered, and tyrannical, and cross—the sort of men you know who possess all of the virtues and none of the lovable qualities of life. They are the kind of husbands who are too much gentlemen ever to strike a woman with their hand, but who leave her bruised and bleeding, and wounded to death in spirit after they have stabbed her with their tongues.

"There are lots of men like that, my dear, and when I get elected to the Legislature the very first thing I am going to do is to bring in a bill to make a man's disposition, instead of his morals, a cause for divorce.

"But back to my story. One of these women whom I am telling you is named Bertha, and she is one of those gentle, suave women who are born salve spreaders. Anything like a jolt in the domestic machinery hurts her to the very core of her being. She isn't weak. Oh, dear no. She would hang on to a principle, or a conviction, to eternity, and be loyal to one she loved to the death itself, and if you pushed her to the wall she'd fight until there wasn't an enemy left alive, but she would never argue a question with you, or say a thing that would hurt your feelings, or do anything to make the slightest unpleasantness.

"Well, when the rosy mists of the honeymoon rolled up and she discovered that she was married to a man who was twin brother to the fretful porcupine, and whose prejudices simply strewed the ground around him, she undertook to manage him by tact.

What She Did.

"She only conversed upon the subjects that she knew he agreed with her upon. She devoted her days to rubbing his fur down the right way. She kept everything that was unpleasant, and that could possibly ruffle him, hidden out of sight, and spent her life tip-toeing on eggs for fear of rousing him and exploding his infernal machine of a temper. In short, in order to keep the peace and make her home happy, she went through a very martyrdom of sacrifice of all of her desires and inclinations.

"H'm," said the little bride, "and how did the other woman manage her husband?"

"The other woman," replied the woman of the soft, white dress, "was of a different type. She had a red-headed temper of her own that was a dead ringer for her husband's, besides which she loved a scrap for the pure fun of the thing. She didn't dodge the issue when her husband flung a debatable subject into the family arena. She simply rolled up her sleeves and sailed in, and when the domestic mix-up was over she wasn't always the one who was on the mat.

"She was a good woman, and a good wife and mother, who did her full duty by her family, and she stood pat on her record. She didn't waste any time trying to jolly or cajole her husband as poor Bertha did. If he didn't like the way she did things, and her opinions, why he could lump it, that was all. She was an independent, free spoken woman, and she didn't see why she should wear herself out flattering any old husband into doing the things he ought to do, anyway.

"And she didn't mind expressing these sentiments, but the result was that their house was a dark and bloody battle ground, with no day without its spat. But that was her way of managing a husband."

"Which one of the systems work?" asked the little bride with a troubled air.

"Neither," replied the woman in the soft, white gown.

Flying Men's Mascots

CURIOUS SUPERSTITIONS OF AVIATORS.

LUCK plays a big part in the life of an aviator, and for this reason most airmen are very superstitious. The majority of aviators carry mascots when they fly, and the cleverer the pilot the more the luck-bringing emblems he seems to possess. Vedrines, the crack French flyer, always has a miniature of the famous picture "Mona Lisa" fastened to the side of his aeroplane when he starts on a flight. He carried this picture on his racing monoplane recently when he won the cup at a record speed of 105 miles an hour. Grahame-White does not trouble about mascots to any great extent, but he invariably wears a pair of check riding breeches under his flying overalls when he makes a flight. These garments are popularly supposed to be lucky, and many other aviators have adopted a similar flying garb. Notable among these is Biolovoucic, the young Peruvian airman, who recently flew over the Alps.

A Lion's Tooth.

Another favorite mascot is a little Teddy bear which is strapped to one of the wing stays on the machine. In naval flying circles a lion's tooth is considered to be a lucky mascot for airmen—a fashion created by the late Lieutenant Parke, for with such an emblem he came out of many serious smashes unscathed. Lewis Turner, the well-known pilot instructor, who flies the Caudron biplanes, has so many mascots that he is generally in doubt as to which he shall take up with him. He recently remarked that were he to wear all his mascots at once he would be mistaken for a toy dealer.

There are many quaint superstitions in vogue at the aerodromes. Chief among these is that should a pilot have one smash he will have two others on the same day if he continues flying. This belief is so firmly rooted in the minds of most aviators that after a mishap they seldom again trust themselves on a machine until twenty-four hours have passed.

Unlucky Thirteen.

Many airmen also have a superstitious dislike of flying in bright sunshine. But there is a substratum of common sense running through this belief. The hot rays of the sun when shining on a damp ground cause heat eddies in the air, which are very dangerous to flying men. These are known as air pockets, which are holes in the air that contain no support for machine or man.

Flying on the thirteenth day of the month is in great disfavor amongst many airmen. And this superstition is largely due to the fact that so many fatal accidents have occurred to airmen on this date. Last year ten pilots were killed whilst flying on the thirteenth of the different months and already this year three airmen have been killed, two on the thirteenth of January and one on the thirteenth of February.

Airmen are also influenced by the behavior of animals on the ground when they are flying over them. If horses or cattle appear terrified at a pilot's approach, and utter warning cries, then this is regarded as an omen of ill-luck. But if the animals over which he is passing are not alarmed to any extent by his approach, then he has little fear that his flight will be anything but successful.

Another bad omen is the stopping of a watch on an aeroplane when it is aloft.

Lady passengers are popularly supposed to ensure the success of an aeroplane flight. One of the most consistent luck-bringers in this respect, is Miss Trehawke Davies. She invariably brings luck to the pilot who takes her on a flight. She recently accompanied Hammel in the Aerial Flying Derby round London when he obtained the second place after a magnificent flight. Miss Davies flew on several occasions with the late Mr. Astley. A few days before his death this airman, whilst flying with Miss Davies, fell in his monoplane from a height of nearly a hundred feet. Both pilot and passenger escaped with a shaking. A few days later Mr. Astley, when flying alone on a similar machine in Ireland, sideslipped in the air at a low altitude and was killed on the spot.

Got It Regular Then.

Mrs. Subbub: "I wonder what's come over your master this morning, Sarah? Instead of being cross, as usual, he started off happy and whistling like a bird."

Sarah (the new "general"): "I'm afraid it's my fault, mum. I got the wrong package, and gave him bird seed for breakfast food."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

GO TO AN ARTIST.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Not a day that goes by that I am not told of the wonderfully beautiful hand I have. Artists have stopped me and apologized in the cars and commented on my beautiful hand. Of course, I paid no attention to these comments, but it seems that if I could obtain some revenue through having my hand posed I should like to avail myself of the opportunity. MISS R.

Have your mother go with you to the studio of some reputable artist and ask his opinion.

I am sure, however, that there are many ways more lucrative and ennobling by which your hands can earn you a living. Have you tried them?

DON'T GIVE IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is it proper for a young man of 18 to present his lady friend, with a diamond ring on her sixteenth birthday? We are not engaged, but the love between us could not be broken, as we have known each other for four years. V. A. H. F.

Eighteen and sixteen often decide their "bond of love can't be broken," and change their minds ten times before they are old enough to marry. Your love may develop into a sentiment more lasting, but don't give diamond rings till you are older, and know.

THE OUTSIDE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"A" said that when a man is walking with two girl friends he must walk in the center. "B" said when a man is walkinw with two girls he must walk on the outside. H. N. L. M.

A gentleman should always take the outside of the walk.

Wouldn't Be Done

Robbie met a neighbor who was smoking some fine, fragrant tobacco sent by his son in America. He took out his own pipe ostentatiously.

"Hae you a match, Sandy?" he inquired.

The match was forthcoming, but nothing more.

"I do believe," said Robbie, "I hae left ma tobacco at hame."

"Then," said Sandy, after a silence, "ye mich' gie me back ma match."

From Innocence of Thought

By Virginia Terhune Van De Water

MUCH has been written and said within the past few years in commendation of the broad lines on which the training and education of the modern girl is conducted. To add further approval to this twentieth century method would be platitudinous. To cast a slur upon it, or to hint that the latest ideal in the upbringing of women has its attendant drawbacks, is to lay one's self open to the onus of being old-fashioned.

It is a sin in the minds of most people of this generation to be old-fashioned or behind the times in ideals and theories. Yet some of us conservatives still cling to certain of the tenets that were instilled into us 20 and 30 years ago. The memory of our own girlhood sometimes leads us to compare the girl of the period with the "young person" of our early days, and the modern product does not emerge unscathed from the comparison.

It would be carrying conservatism to the limits of folly not to admit the tremendous value of the broader, and deeper, and franker training which the modern girl receives over that of her prototype of a quarter century ago. It would be the height of bigotry not to admit that by her twentieth century education, she has become a clearer thinking, more self-reliant, more useful member of society than her parent was. Yet there are some things missing in the character of the "young person" of to-day which make her elders regret that a modern education could not be absorbed by her without a radical alteration taking place in her character.

Our girl has lost much of the sentimental appeal that belonged to her aunt's or mother's girlhood days. I do not mean by sentiment the mawkish superconsciousness of sex which sometimes masquerades under that name and which can not be too soon stamped out as a menace to all that is best in womanhood. But I do mean that she has lost much of her one-time ability to call forth the highest and best in young mankind by her fresh, untarnished view of the world.

Shrugged His Shoulders.

A youth of my acquaintance called recently on a girl with whom he was much smitten—after the fashion of the male young of the species. The girl was college-bred and had the sophistication of her type. The young man was fond of reading, and the talk drifted into literature. The girl advanced her own theories concerning Brieux and other constructive European writers with absolute frankness, and before the evening ended had aired all her ideas and opinions on the white slave question. When the young man mentioned the conversation to me my face must have betrayed some surprise, for he shrugged his shoulders and laughed a little bitterly.

"Girls have changed since your day, I guess," he remarked—"more's the pity!"

They have changed since that day. They have changed for the better in many things. To a person with entirely modern views they may have improved in all things. Yet it seems a pity that in her intellectual advance our girl should have failed to retain much of the grace and sweetness that served as an inspiration to the men who were youths 20 and 30 years ago.

The Exchange.

In the course of her evolution the "young person" of to-day has exchanged innocence of thought for consciousness of morality. She no longer has manners—she has Manner. She had transformed what was once poise into Pose.

Yet the characteristics which some of us are so narrow as to deplore are doubtless only indications of the advance in the evolution of a woman far broader and better than her predecessors were. Yet, as old-fashioned folk, some of us recall the girls we knew when we were young, and sigh—but very softly, lest the Young Person of To-day should hear—and censure—us.

No Fail for Recipe.

She—I sent a dollar to a young woman for a recipe to make me look young."

"What did you get?"

"A card saying, 'Always associate with women twenty years older than yourself.'"

Daysey Mayme And Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON has an affectionate disposition. Unless her mouth is full of pins or hairpins, he never leaves the house without kissing his wife goodbye.

On rare occasions he has given her money as he was leaving, and when in her alacrity to accept it she has forgotten to kiss him he has been grievously pained. He has never experienced that feeling of momentary reprieve which comes to colder-hearted husbands on such occasions.

He was in a tender mood the other evening, and sought to put his arm around his wife's waist. Alas for the ignorance of man and the tyranny of fashion! He couldn't find it!

He stepped back and looked at her in a puzzled way. Then he followed the line laid out by the dressmaker and slid his arm gently around under her armpits.

The next evening, still tender and loving, this being the springtime of the year, he again put his arm under his wife's armpits, but her waist was not there!

He scratched his head in a puzzled fashion and felt a momentary rebuff. But his love is not of the kind that brooks discouragement, and, after a moment's survey of her form divine, he got down on the floor and put his arm around her ankle, the dressmaker having located her waist there in the dress she was then wearing.

The following evening Lysander John looked before he attempted to embrace, and found her waist was not at her ankles! It had been moved up to her knees!

It was then that he was overcome with a sense of the helplessness of man when opposed to the tyranny of fashion, and he bowed his head in anguish and cried aloud.

"If used to be so simple a matter," he cried, beating his hands on his breast, "for a man to put his arms around the waist of the woman he loved, but alas! it is a simple matter no longer!

"It has become a movable sacrament of love!"

Making Mother Over

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

WHEN a girl reaches 16, and her head is turned as easily as thistledown, for the reason that it is almost as light, she becomes possessed with the belief that she is superior to her family, a delusion in which her foolishly fond parents unconsciously encourage her.

She is her parents' own child; that is a stubborn fact that even romantic theories of being the stolen offspring of royalty, of which she has read in the fairy tales, can't conquer. She is a rare blossom on a parent stem that looks like a weed, and she wonders that there is no explanation of such a phenomenon.

She learns at an earlier age than one would guess that she can't change her father. She can rule him, and does, but, being a man, he is satisfied to be what he is. He admits his offspring is a rare blossom, but does not for a moment think that the father stem is a weed.

Mother is different. One reason is that she is a woman and knows not that self-content that is wrapped around a man like the bandages around a mummy. And a greater reason is that she is Mother, and, therefore, humble. She also recognizes that her offspring is a rare blossom, the quick eyes of her love making this discovery the moment her baby daughter was first laid in her arms. Because of her love she makes humble comparison, and knows also that she is a weed.

She doesn't resent her daughter's air of superiority, but weakly and foolishly encourages it, thereby turning that little thistledown head a little further out of place.

She Is Displeased.

Naturally the conditions that exist in a home where a girl has been permitted to think she is a princess do not please her, and she begins the process of making over, alternating her work of reformation between the parlor and mother, the former receiving serious attention when she expects company and the latter engaging her energies all the time.

Mother's methods of pronunciation are not those in use now, and she is corrected and called old-fashioned, a term that loses its sweetness when a princess daughter applies it. Mother is too tired when night comes to put on more becoming clothes, and daughter begins at the wrong end of the reformation by complaining about her mother's appearance instead of sustaining the same end by making the work lighter.

The family purse will not support more than one peacock. Mother is glad to give daughter that royal plumage, and the girl accepts, and later complains when she struts around that her mother is not dressed as well as other mothers she knows, forgetting that in those families there are no peacocks and the sum alloted for royal plumage is more justly divided.

I do not want girls to cease in this reform of making mother over, but I want them to go at it in a better way. One can't change a mother's old-style clothes into new by complaining, but the change can be wrought by buying mother new clothes. If $10 is given a girl for a new hat and mother says she will make last season's do, the daughter can make mother over by giving her the new hat and wearing the old herself.

Another Way.

If mother shows the unbecoming traces of hard labor, another way is offered for making her over by taking the burden of the home off her shoulders.

If the latest whim in a ribbon, a tie, hat, gloves, dress or shoes will improve daughter, wouldn't they also improve mother, and isn't her need of improvement greater? One has the adornment of youth and needs little; the other is showing all the disfiguring marks of time and needs every assistance pretty clothes may give.

Make mother over by making her think more of herself and less of others! Such a reformation will be good for the whole family, but don't, girls, I implore, go at this reformation in a high-handed, selfish way. Have pride in her and she will begin to have the pride in herself of which many years of monotonous and unappreciated household work have robbed her.

Make her over! Make her young and pretty and carefree again, and use in working the transformation the fairy wand of Love!

Seeing the Pictures

WOMAN with Cerise Hat (embracing woman with headgear of bright violet)—Oh, aren't the pictures too dear? I'm crazy about them, Agnes! Just a little bit of powder on the side of your nose, dear. There—it's off, but you rubbed off the rouge, too. Such atmosphere, don't you think? No, of course, I can't make out what that one means that looks like a mud puddle stirred up with a stick, but I am sure it is something perfectly wonderful if only I could comprehend it!"

Woman with Bright Violet Hat—It certainly makes one feel so advanced to see things like these! Why, I can remember when I used to think a picture should really be a picture of something instead of merely a symbol of a thought. Goodness! Will you look at that dress—the one just coming in! Such things ought to be restricted by law!

Sweet Young Thing (in a flimsy floppy suit)—Perfectly beautiful! I simply love that picture!

Second Sweet Young Thing—So do I. Isn't it glorious to think there is an artist living who can paint a bale of shingles? If you look at it hard enough with your head tilted you get the queerest sort of feeling! Something like being seasick and falling out of a window at the same time! The man who did that is a genius. Wouldn't you simply love to know him?"

On His Nerves.

Square Shouldered Man (with an expression of pain on his face)—Let's get out of here, Genevieve. If I stay any longer I'll say things, and then the long-haired freaks sprinkled about would hang me to one of the staircase pillars and put a frame around me and call the result an impressionistic study of an apple pie. I expect I'd look just as much like a pie as a human being. Oh, help! See that one in the corner—the purple woman with blue spots on her against a scrambled background."

Genevieve—"For goodness' sake, hush! Don't let people know you're so absolutely ignorant, George! You've got to see this exhibit, because you've got to be able to talk about it, and the sooner you do so the quicker you'll be through! You don't suppose any one really likes these pictures, do you? You're not the only one that's suffering! Come on!"

Square Shouldered Man—"I'll bet that purple woman is suffering. Gosh!"

Angel Child—"Ma, I want a drink, I want a drink, ma! Say, ma, why can't I have a dr"——

His Mother (jerking him along)—"Willie, if I hear another word out of you I'll take you into a corner and whip you good! Here, I left all that sewing and brought you just for your own good, so you'd love pictures, and then you act this way! Look at the pictures and"——

Angel Child—"Aw, I'd rather go to a nickel show! Say, I want a drink"——

Confiding Young Creature (attended by pale youth in extreme garb)——"But when your pictures are exhibited, Arthur, is the time we'll see crowds! If they only knew what a genius you are! The idea of these daubs, when you have done such marvelous things!"

Pale Youth (modestly)—"Well, it'd be kind of tough on these chaps if I spring them now. Let them have their day—I can afford to wait!"

Confiding Young Creature—"Arthur, you are the noblest man alive! You need some one to push you forward—you never do justice to yourself or to your art!"

It Was Plenty.

Woman with Cerise Hat—"There, I've made the rounds. My head aches, but I don't see why. Do you know, there are three pictures back there which I am sure hung upside down?"

Woman with Bright Violet Hat—"I don't care if they are—my shoe hurts awfully. I don't mind saying that I think the pictures are crazy, and we are all geese for wasting time looking at 'em!"

Woman with Cerise Hat—"And you the president of our culture club! My dear! I think it's just your shoe."

Woman with Bright Velvet Hat—"Well, it's something—and whatever it is, it's plenty!"

Visitor—I understand that you had an amateur dramatic performance in the town hall last night?

Native—Yes; the Sock and Buskin Club played "Little Mae, or the Mountain Mystery."

"Ah! And what was the mystery?"

"As near as I could make out, the mystery was how the audience stood it till the last act was over."

BEAUTY SECRETS OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Little Viola Dana, "The Poor Little Rich Girl," Talks to Girls in Their 'Teens

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

IF you were only fifteen and had already begun climbing the high ladder that leads to success, would you be simple and natural and truly sweet? Little Viola Dana has not come to the lofty estate of "Sweet Sixteen" yet, but she has already worked her way from music hall dancing and "movies" and vaudeville skits to the enviable position of "A regular Broadway star." And the earnest little girl means to climb higher and higher, and be right at the top of her chosen profession some day if hard work can win her way to the top.

In her dainty pink dressing room at the Hudson Theater in New York the 15-year-old star of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" looks like a real little rosebud of a girl—just as real a little girl as the Gwendolyn whose life she has stepped out of after living it for three hours.

She was pulling black silk stockings over little bare feet and ankles as I came in, and with the sweetest, unself-consciousness she shook back her soft brown curls and rose to greet me with a mixture of childish enthusiasm and womanly grace.

"Did Gwenny make you cry?" she asked.

"YOU did," I answered, deliberately.

"Oh, that was Gwenny," said little Miss Dana. "It isn't Viola Dana out there in the play—she just gets to be Gwendolyn."

Not Self-Conscious.

"Then, of course, you aren't self-conscious if you are living your part?" I questioned with assurance.

"Oh, no. Children on the stage have to be so careful about that," said this naive child. "Some of them do well, and they are told so, and think about it all the time, and get to be such stilted little things. They just MINCE through their parts and act affected everywhere you meet them. That isn't a bit attractive—do you think so?"

"What do you think of simplicity and sweetness and naturalness as prime necessities for attractiveness? That takes in your 'unself-consciousness,'" I said.

Miss Viola gave the matter her earnest consideration. She is to all intents and purposes a dear child—but ten years of stage experience—ten years of work with growing ideals and ambitions have given her a serious quality bespeaking delightfully the woman she will be in a few years.

"I think they are all very important, and if you keep busy and live sensibly and think nice thoughts perhaps you can get to be simple and sweet—for, of course, no girl who is unnatural is a bit attractive."

"Then you believe in simple clothes for young girls?"

"Yes, indeed—but I do like pretty clothes—clothes that suit you. Are mine simple enough, do you think?" pointing to a dainty little green frock and a soft greatcoat of brown that just matched her own chestnut curls. A very girly leghorn hat went with it—and I could fancy Miss Viola looking like the dear little girl she is, instead of the silly, near-young-lady that some girls fancy they can ape more successfully than they can realize the flowerlike sweetness of their own precious never-to-come-again-youth.

"Girls have to be serious about the qualities they want to cultivate," I said, after I had paid due tribute to the embryo woman wanting sartorial praise. "Does keeping well and strong require constant attention and sacrifice?"

"Well, I think you can't have everything. You can't have all the fun you want and do well the thing you want to do, too. Now, I have to have lots of sleep, and if I go along to a party after the theater my voice Voices need such a lot of care to keep them in good condition. I take a sounds strained and horrid next day. glass of malted milk before the theater and another afterward and give up the things I like—chocolate frappes, and foolish combinations, like lobster salad and lemonade, won't do for the girl who wants to accomplish things."

"Do you call late suppers and chocolate frappes a great sacrifice?" I inquired.

"Well, I like things that aren't good for me," was the frank answer; "but I think it's worth while giving up all the little separate pleasures that only stay a minute in order to have a clear complexion, and a clear voice and a well body.

"You see, I truly want to be great some day; I want to go on and on and be some one who counts. And I'm dreaming of that sometimes even when I'm with my books or playing my violin.

"I know that if I truly want to get on I shall have to DO it. Just wishing about it won't work."

Deep Philosophy.

Deep philosophy for fifteen; and yet the girls who are soon to be women must all choose whether they will live for the joy of a fleeting second or for the "durable satisfactions" that make life worth while.

"Have you set some one as your model?" I asked. "Are you working toward a goal, or have you a live ideal whose success you want to equal?"

"Not a bit of it," said Viola Dana. "I've got to be myself, anyway—and I'd lots rather be truly myself. I don't want to imitate. I just want to make my own self do bigger and bigger things all the time.

"People ought to express themselves all the time, I think, instead of imitating some one else—in clothes and voices and thoughts. Thoughts are so wonderful, I think—nice ones give such a sweet expression to the eyes—they just shine through them. I love strong, interesting faces—the kind that belong to people who do things. Girls who are willing to just stand still aren't ever truly pretty, are they?"

The little star's eyes glowed with earnestness.

Yes, those wonderful, deep eyes are green, and she frankly confesses it.

"Maybe that's jealousy," she laughed. "I am jealous if the people I love don't love me enough and show it. You have to be worthy of it, or you don't get it. And some day every girl wants to be found worthy of the biggest love. She wants to marry. I do!"

"You are planning an even fuller and fuller life, aren't you? Work—great success—and marriage?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," said this rich little wise girl. "I want to keep my body well and strong, and to train my mind to get a great deal out of life—and to put something into it, too."

She believes in simple clothes for young girls.

The Tyranny of Criticism

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE Kingdom of Childhood is peopled with wicked elves, ghosts, ogres and hobgoblins, and we hide our heads under the bed covers and long to be grown up that we may vanquish them, little knowing that the Land of Grown-Ups has a greater terror.

It is the tyranny of criticism, and its name is "What Will Folks Say?"

"No," a girl says, "I am not going to the party. I want to go, but I would have to wear my last season's party dress, and what would folks say?"

"We can not afford to give that dinner," a woman will frankly confess, "but if I don't pay my social obligations what will folks say?"

The sickness had been long, painful and costly, and when at last the sufferer was mercifully released the family realized that the long siege had materially diminished the bank account. There were doctors', druggists', undertaker's and nurses' bills to pay, leaving scant protection against want. "But we must buy mourning," the family declares, "or if we don't, what will folks say?"

Once Again.

A girl realizes that her lover has grown cold. Perhaps, down in her heart, she also realizes that she is not so fond of him, but she refuses to give him up as long as cajolery and tears will hold him. "I don't want any one to think I have been jilted," she says, "and if he stops coming here what will folks say?"

It is this tyranny of criticism that is the hobgoblin of the grown-ups, as fearful and real as the ghosts that clanked their chains about our beds in childhood. We hide our trembling heads under the covers, just as we did then, and lose all sense of reason because of the great ogre we have foolishly conjured to torment us.

We are not honest, we are not natural, we are distressingly self-conscious, we are not kind, we are cowardly hypocrites in the presence of a hobgoblin that has no real existence. "What will folks say?" you plead in defense of foolishness. Did you ever realize that you are of the "folks" to whom you credit such powers of condemnation? And do you, as one of the "folks," despise and condemn the woman who wears an old garment because she can not afford a new? Do you look with an air of superiority at any honesty that dares to be honest? Don't you really envy the spirit of the woman who can rise above all consciousness of clothes?

Your Reply.

You will reply that you don't condemn such a person, but that others do. And in saying this, you declare you are better than others. My dear, you are not. We are all very much alike. No one who is worth knowing puts the outward show above the inward worth. If your friends are more friendly when you are a coward, a hypocrite, and extravagant, then they are not the kind of friends worth having, and it is cheapening a very precious word to call them so.

If you meet a woman you like, and whom you would enjoy knowing better, and hesitate to invite that woman to your house because hers is finer, then you do not give her credit for being broad-minded, and are narrow-gauged yourself. It is the personality that counts; not its background or adornment.

And unless you can show yourself so strong, so broad, so big, that your test question is "Is it right?" and not "What will folks say?" you are no further advanced mentally than the child that hides its head under the covers at every unusual sound.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intringe and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, becoming an orphan, is thrown on her own resources. She finds work at the Emporium, a department store owned by Edward Gilder; is accused of the theft of silks, and sent to prison, though innocent. She tells George Demarest, Gilder's head lawyer, that the way to stop thievery is to pay a living wage. In prison she learned from fellow convicts why girls go wrong. She understands their point of view and sympathizes with them. Aggie Lynch, a convict friend of Mary's at Burnsing, sees good "possibilities" for her in the world of crime. Upon Mary's release the slogan "once a criminal always one," prevents her from securing work. She is continually hounded and in desperation throws herself into the North River. Joe Garson, a forger, rescues her and keeps her and Aggie in luxury, though living chaste lives. Mary reads that a famous financier escapes prison through keeping within the letter of the law. She follows his example and becomes the leader of a band of swindlers, robbing only the unscrupulous. Gilder's son Dick meets and loves Mary, who seeks to wreak vengeance on the father through the son. Aggie poses as her cousin, and they pretend to be respectable. They are visited by Detective Cassidy, who tries to scare Mary into leaving town through threats. He is laughed at for his pains, because she was "within the law". The detective, before leaving again, tells Aggie and Joe Garson that "there'll be trouble" for them unless they get out of town.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

There was not the change of a feature in the face of the woman who listened to the accusation. Her eyes steadfastly retained their clear gaze into his; her voice was still coldly formal, as before.

"If it's blackmail, Mr. Irwin, why don't you consult the police?" she inquired, with manifest disdain. Mary turned to the maid, who now entered in response to the bell she had sounded a minute before. "Fanny, will you ask Miss Lynch to come in, please?" Then she faced the lawyer again, with an aloofness of manner that was contemptuous. "Really, Mr. Irwin," she drawled, "why don't you take this matter to the police?"

The reply was uttered with conspicuous exasperation.

Police Wouldn't Keep It Secret.

"You know perfectly well," the lawyer said bitterly, "that General Hastings can not afford such publicity. His position would be jeopardized."

"Oh, as for that," Mary suggested evenly, and now there was a trace of flippancy in her fashion of speaking, "I am sure the police would keep your complaint a secret. Really, you know, Mr. Irwin, I think you had better take your trouble to the police, rather than to me. You will get much more sympathy from them."

The lawyer sprang up, with an air of sudden determination.

"Very well, I will then," he declared, sternly. "I will."

Mary, from her vantage point at the desk across from him, smiled a smile that would have been very engaging to any man under more favorable circumstances, and she pushed in his direction the telephone that stood there.

"3100 Spring," she remarked encouragingly, "will bring an officer almost immediately." She leaned back in her chair and surveyed the baffled man amusedly.

The lawyer was furious over the failure of his effort to intimidate this extraordinarily self-possessed young woman, who made a mock of his every thrust. But he was by no means at the end of his resources.

"Nevertheless," he rejoined, "you know perfectly well that General Hastings never promised to marry this girl. You know——" He broke off as Aggie entered the drawing room.

Now, the girl was demure in seeming almost beyond belief, a childish creature, very fair and dainty, guileless surely, with those untroubled eyes of blue, those softly curving lips of warmest red and the more delicate bloom in the rounded cheeks. There were the charms of innocence and simplicity in the manner of her as she stopped just within the doorway, whence she regarded Mary with a timid, pleading gaze, her slender little form poised lightly as if for flight.

"Did you want me, dear?" she asked. There was something half-plaintive in the modulated cadences of the query.

"Agnes," Mary answered affectionately, "this is Mr. Irwin, who has come to see you in behalf of General Hastings."

"Oh!" the girl murmured, her voice quivering a little, as the lawyer, after a short nod, dropped again into his seat; "oh, I'm so frightened!" She hurried, fluttering, to a low stool behind the desk, beside Mary's chair, and there she sank down, drooping slightly, and catching hold of one of Mary's hands as if in mute pleading for protection against the fear that beset her chaste soul.

"Nonsense!" Mary exclaimed soothingly. "There's really nothing at all to be frightened about, my dear child." Her voice was that with which one seeks to cajole a terrified infant. "You mustn't be afraid, Agnes. Mr. Irwin says that General Hastings did not promise to marry you. Of course, you understand, my dear, that under no circumstances must you say anything that isn't strictly true and that, if he did not promise to marry you, you have no case—none at all. Now, Agnes, tell me; did General Hastings promise to marry you?"

"Oh, yes—oh, yes, indeed!" Aggie cried, falteringly. "And I wish he would. He's such a delightful old gentleman!" As she spoke, the girl let go Mary's hand and clasped her own together ecstatically.

He Scowled Disgustedly.

The legal representative of the delightful old gentleman scowled disgustedly at this outburst. His voice was portentous, as he put a question.

"Was that promise made in writing?"

"No," Aggie answered, gushingly. "But all his letters were in writing, you know. Such wonderful letters!" She raised her blue eysh toward the ceiling in a naive rapture. "So tender and so—er—interesting!" Somehow, the inflection on the last word did not altogether suggest the ingenuous.

"Yes, yes, I dare say," Irwin agreed, hastily, with some evidences of chagrin. He had no intention of dwelling on that feature of the letters, concerning which he had no doubt whatsoever, since he knew the amorous general very well, indeed. They would be interesting, beyond shadow of questioning, horridly interesting. Such was the confessed opinion of the swain himself who had written them in his folly—horribly interesting to all the reading public of the country, since the general was a conspicuous figure.

Mary intervened with a suavity that infuriated the lawyer almost beyond endurance.

"But you're quite sure, Agnes," she questioned gently, "that General Hastings did promise to marry you?" The candor of her manner was perfect.

And the answer of Aggie was given with a like convincing emphasis.

"Oh, yes!" she declared, tensely. "Why, I would swear to it." The limpid eyes, so appealing in their soft lusters, went first to Mary, then gazed trustingly into those of the routed attorney.

"You see, Mr. Irwin, she would swear to that," emphasized Mary.

"We're beaten," he confessed, dejectedly, turning his glance toward Mary, whom, plainly, he regarded as his real adversary in the combat on his client's behalf. "I'm going to be quite frank with you, Miss Turner, quite frank," he stated with more geniality, though with a very crestfallen air. Somehow, indeed, there was just a shade too much of the crestfallen in the fashion of his utterance, and the woman whom he addressed watched warily as he continued. "We can't afford any scandal, so we're going to settle at your own terms." He paused expectantly, but Mary offered no comment; only maintained her alert scrutiny of the man. The lawyer, therefore, leaned forward with a semblance of frank eagerness. Instantly, Aggie had become agog with greedily blissful anticipations, and she uttered a slight ejaculation of joy; but Irwin paid no heed to her. He was occupied in taking from his pocket a thick bill case, and from this presently a sheaf of banknotes, which he laid on the desk before Mary, with a little laugh of discomfiture over having been beaten in the contest.

As he did so, Aggie thrust forth an avaricious hand, but it was caught and held by Mary before it reached above the top of the desk, and the avaricious gesture passed unobserved by the attorney.

"We can't fight where ladies are concerned," he went on, assuming, as best he might contrive, a chivalrous tone. "So, if you will just hand over General Hastings' letters, why, here's your money."

Much to the speaker's surprise, there followed an interval of silence, and his puzzlement showed in the knitting of his brows. "You have the letters, haven't you?" he demanded, abruptly.

Aggie coyly took a thick bundle from its resting place on her rounded bosom.

"They never leave me," she murmured, with dulcet passion. There was in her voice a suggestion of desolation—a desolation that was the blighting effect of letting the cherished missives go from her.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

WOMAN'S DANGER PERIOD

is said to be from 45 to 50. What should be a most natural change in a woman's life, is, on account of modern methods of living, fraught with most annoying and painful symptoms. Women when passing through this critical period should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it has proved wonderfuly successful in carrying women safely through the change of life.

The Vicious Little Moon

To-day's Complete Short Story

THEY emerged from the ground, one, two, three, six, under the deluge of rain in darkness.

One might have believed that they came out of the water, for the torrents of rain, which had been falling incessantly for more than a month, had made the plain around Adrianople and Devanjaros look like a sea.

In the uncertain twilight each of them looked like an immense bundle of sheepskin, out of which emerged the barrel of a rifle. All six wore caps of green velvet bordered with astrakhan.

It was a patrol of Macedonians enrolled in the Bulgarian army passing through the line of outposts. Hesitating and uncertain, they moved their long arms like windmills, made the sign of the cross, pointed right and left and peered about cautiously.

A Branch for a Signal.

Fifty paces away a branch stuck into into the ground and reflected in a pool of water began to move back and forth. The Macedonians started toward the hole from which this signal was given. It was the abandoned trench. Sergeant Naritch and his five Bulgarian soldiers were down there and had given them the signal.

The six Bulgarians loved the six Macedonians.

Since the beginning of the investment these twelve men were in the habit of meeting in the hour of twilight when the guns became blind.

They met in the abandoned trench which was no longer used. There they sat down close together in the deep mud. They exchanged only few words: "The war is going to last a long time!" or "May the Lord give the Turks into our hands," was the burden of their remarks.

Then they sat silent and pondered until it was time to separate and each party went back to its camp.

Depressed and Melancholy.

On this night they felt unusually depressed and melancholy. The incessant rain, the everlasting cold and the enforced idleness and hopelessness overwhelmed them.

"The war will never end," said Kaloub, making a wry face.

"Never," said Naziff, and yawned like a hungry wolf.

They all bowed their heads and spat into the mud, then, as always happens when men are downhearted and depressed, they began to talk about mysterious things.

"The moon looks like a crescent tonight," said Kaloub.

"A bad sign," said Alexis, the venerable brigand, who knew everything between life and death. "It is a vicious little moon."

And he told the legend of the vicious little moon which kills all those upon whom it looks.

They raised their heads and gazed furtively toward the sky.

"One must not tempt the moon," said Potrof, who was newly married, although his hair was gray. "Woe unto us all."

"I am sleepy," said Reff plaintively, like a child.

Let Us Go Back.

"Let us go back," growled Alexis, and stuck his bayonet into his boot.

The Macedonians left one at a time. The Bulgarians looked after them and regretted they had let them go. They remained in the abandoned trench, oppressed by a vague sense of danger, afraid of the moon that was looking down upon them, half senseless with fatigue and superstition.

Each was dreaming his own dreams.

Sergeant Naritch saw his litle house and his wife in her gayly colored dress. He saw her looking at a golden-haired girl. He felt the fragrance of the flowering hedges and saw the long rows of willow trees standing like sentries along the bank of the brook.

Suddenly he raised his head with a jerk and rubbed his eyes. He could see nothing now but the darkness and the slender crescent of the moon.

He shook himself. What were they thinking of? It was late. Little Father Colonel would surely hear them coming back.

"Come along, boys; we must get back to camp," he said.

Crawled From the Trench.

The others yawned, stretched their limbs and crawled out of the trench.

They marched through the muddy pools with the rain beating into their faces and soaking the fur of their heavy sheepskin coats. From time to time they glanced at the moon.

They stopped. They had lost their way. It was the moon, the vicious little moon, which had led them astray with its treacherous light.

They shuddered and started again, tramping through the mud. Time and again they nearly fell into the deep mudholes made by the bursting shells. Half an hour passed and still no sign of lights or campfires.

Suddenly a shot rang out.

The sergeant raised his head, looked about and listened.

"We are inside the Turkish lines," he said.

"We ought to have set out when the Macedonians left," growled Kaloub; "they know their way here and would not have wandered astray."

"Look," said Diplovitch, "there are some soldiers over there watching us."

Felt Like Howling.

And at the faint light of the moon they dimly made out some figures a short distance away. The Bulgarians, now quite convinced that the vicious little moon had led them into an ambush, felt like howling with superstitious fear.

In a low voice Naritch commanded: "Fire!"

The enemy was quicker and fired first.

With a groan, Petrof, the newly married, fell to the ground like a log.

The firing was kept up by both sides, and men dropped where they stood.

The last man to remain standing finally sank to the ground. He thought he heard somebody whisper his name from among those he had shot down. Then everything was silent.

Toward morning a passing patrol found the dead bodies of six Macedonians and six Bulgarians, who had been led astray by the vicious little moon, that kills those upon whom it looks.

SHORTS STRUGGLE FOR JULY OPTION

Fear of "Squeeze" and of Bullish Weather Report Cause of Lively Demand.

NEW YORK, May 12.—As the result of bullish weather reports the cotton market opened firm to-day, first prices ranging from unchanged to 7 points higher. Brown and Hayne, the big traders of New York and New Orleans, were on the floor of the exchange, but traders did not attribute the ruling strength in certain months to their presence.

There was no market in Liverpool, this being a holiday there.

Trading was light on and after the call. The principal feature was the strength of July. There was suspicion of bull operations against the short interest and a bullish weekly report on the weather, especially on the Eastern belt, where rains are badly needed, was expected.

The market during the forenoon trading was steady with July 10 points higher; May and other positions 4 to 5 points higher than the initial level.

Offerings were light and scattered, said to be profit-taking.

July continued under persistent demand by the same brokers who have been absorbing July contracts daily, believed to be for McFadden and other large spot interests. Shorts were nervous and the impending "squeeze" in July option is becoming more obvious day after day. The local stock is being depleted daily.

Some scattered rains fell over the eastern belt last night, but not so much as first predicted. Indications point to more showers.

Owing to the holiday in Liverpool, business was extremely light. The buying was aggressive, while the selling was light and scattered. During the afternoon session the market maintained the advancing tendency and each option increased its gain over the previous close. May was 8, July 9, October 12, December 11, and January 9 points higher than Saturday's final.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, May 12.—General showers fell over Arkansas during the past forty-eight hours and scattered showers occurred in the Atlantic. Indications are for continued showery weather in the eastern States. Dry, warm weather continued in the western half of the belt. Temperatures were right in the eastern half of the belt also, except in Northeast Tennessee and North Carolina, which had a cold spell, but the weather will become warmer there soon. Showers have been general in the dry eastern belt since the date of Habersham King's circular.

New York dry goods reports are better, a broader demand and steadier prices being reported.

Our market opened slightly lower, but showed no selling pressure and ruled very steady. It is thought that to-morrow's weekly weather report might be bulish in the eastern States, owing to the dry weather, and apprehension exists of bullish operations directed against the technical condition of the market, prevailing opinion being that the short interest is large.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: Weather will be the dominating influence.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Sentiment is too bearish.

Miller & Co.: We believe it will require decidedly bad crop news to sustain any advance.

STOCKS ARE DULL THROUGHOUT DAY

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Sentiment was mixed at the opening of stock market to-day and the list had an irregular appearance. Union Pacific was one of the firmest issues on the list, advancing ½ to 149. American Can preferred was about the weakest, declining a point to 93¾.

The market was without outside influences, the Stock Exchange in London and the Bourses in Berlin and Paris being closed.

Amalgamated Copper began ¼ lower, but recovered its loss and gained fractionally. Reading also began lower, but made up its loss of ⅛ and within half an hour ruled fractionally above Saturday's final.

United States Steel common was ¼ lower on first sales, but subsequently recovered. Southern Pacific, Erie, Lehigh Valley and American Can common were fractionally lower. Canadian Pacific advanced ¼, but soon lost its gain.

The curb was dull, but steady.

The market was irregular during the forenoon, with many of the leading issues on a downward movement. New Haven advanced ¼ to 104. Lehigh Valley, Southern Pacific and Pennsylvania were off ¼. Copper and Steel were off ⅛. Union Pacific was up ½. Reading was unchanged.

Condition of Oats Bad; Season Late

CHICAGO, May 12.—B. W. Snow says:

"During the past week I covered the principal oats district in Central and Eastern Illinois and West Central Indiana. These sections include the important territory in both States. Practically all of the crop was seeded late, went into ground that was wet and as a result the plant is very small and condition bad. The surface of the ground is rough and cloddy, leaving it full of cracks through which the air and drying winds draw moisture from around the roots of the plant.

"There has been no drouth and there is plenty of subsoil moisture, but the rough top is drying badly and roots of the plant not developed enough to reach the moisture, and as a result the plant is standing still in growth, losing color and getting an unthrifty start.

"Unless there is good rainfall very soon, the situation will quickly become serious."

DRY GOODS TRADE REVIEW.

Sales and shipments for the month up to date indicate conditions better than normal in the dry goods trade. Future business continues to show an increase over that of a year ago. Seeding conditions have been excellent in practically all sections of the country and there are very few spots from which any but the best reports have been heard. The status of growing crops is such as to inspire confidence in trade. Merchants' stocks are turning satisfactorily and reorders on most lines promise to leave wholesale stocks in good condition for the turn of the year.

Salesmen are finding buyers responsive to the offerings in wool dress goods for Fall and sales are well ahead of the corresponding period in 1912. On the most desirable worsteds, mills have sold their output and in many cases are oversold and have been obliged to cut down original orders and reorders can not be placed except for October and November delivery.

Merchants are buying worsted yarns for home knitting purposes freely. Proposed changes in the tariff schedule have already been anticipated in the wool market. Wools in this country of medium and fine grades are on practically a London basis and a tariff change will simply transfer this staple from a local to a world market.

ATLANTA LIVE STOCK MARKET.

(By W. H. White, Jr., of the White Provision Company.)

Cattle receipts are heavier than usual. The market is 25 to 50 cents lower on the middle grades, with a heavy supply. Tops and choice in good demand and unchanged.

One load of the E. T. Comer cattle were on the market this week and brought $7.37½ per cut, this being the top price for the week. These were mixed highbred Short Horn and Hereford young grass fat and prime, bred and raised on the Comer farm at Millhaven, Ga., and would do credit to any beef producing section.

With the exception of this load and two loads of Short Horn steers from A. N. Brown at McDonough, all of which were sold to the Atlanta packer, the run was badly mixed, consisting principally of country pick up bunches of all sizes and kinds, which sold at prices fully as irregular as were the cattle.

Hogs continue to come freely. Market has ranged lower in symphty with the Western markets.

Quotations based on actual purchases during the current week:

Choice to good steers, 1,000 to 1,200, 5.75@6.50; good steers, 800 to 1,000, 5.50@6.00; medium to good steers, 700 to 850, 5.00@5.75; medium to good cows, 700 to 800, 4.50@5.00; good to choice beef cows, 800 to 900, 4.75@5.75; medium to good heifers, 650 to 750, 4.25@4.75; good to choice heifers, 750 to 850, 4.75@5.75.

Medium to common steers, if fat, 800 to 900, 4.50@5.50; medium to common cows, if fat, 700 to 800, 4.25@5.25; mixed common, 600 to 800, 3.25@4.00; good butcher bulls, 3.50@4.00.

Prime hogs, 160 to 200 average, 8.30@8.50; good butcher hogs, 140 to 160, 8.10@8.30; good butcher pigs, 100 to 140, 7.75@8.00; light pigs, 80 to 100, 7.00@7.50; heavy rough hogs, 200 to 250, 7.50@8.25.

Above quotations apply to corn-fed hogs, mash and peanut-fattened hogs, 1 to 1½c under.

COTTON GOSSIP

Liverpool closed.

* * * *

* * * *

It is said the strength in July option is due to the reduction of the local stock and fear of a "squeeze" in that option. Shorts are not inclined to be caught with many large lines and they have been covering heavily during the past week or two.

* * * *

Sentiment is equally divided at the moment and the majority of traders forecast an explosion of fireworks in July and fear that the new crop is suffering considerably from the lack of moisture.

* * * *

It is believed the English operators will be strong for a bull card. It is a known fact that Liverpool has been over and over to bull the market. From the New York stock, 12,000 bales were shipped out Thursday and 6,000 bales were exported Friday. This made the short end holders believe that there was danger and they covered.

* * * *

The Fall River Iron Works Mills will close for an indefinite period, beginning to-day. This will reduce stocks about 70,000 pieces weekly. Other curtailment is under consideration.

* * * *

* * * *

NEW ORLEANS, May 12.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows cloudy in the eastern half of the belt, generally fair in the western half, rather general light showers in the southwestern quarter. There was a good rain in the Montgomery, Ala., section and it still is raining there. There were no rains in the west. It is warm everywhere except in North Carolina, where it is unseasonably cool. Indications are for continued unsettled and showery weather in Alabama and the South Atlantics; generally fair elsewhere.

* * * *

Washington forecast for week: "West of the Mississippi River generally fair weather; east of the river local thundershowers the first half of the week, generally fair the second half. Normal temperatures."

* * * *

Selma, Ala., says light but general rains fell throughout Central Alabama and have proven of great benefit to the cotton and corn crops.

* * * *

Habersham King's latest circular: "Facts show that temperatures have been favorable to the entire belt, while rains were in excess of needs in Western States and practically absent in Eastern belt, they were just about right in the Middle States, and the week's developments have been favorable over the entire belt. Showers have been general in the dry Eastern belt, since the date reached by this circular."

GRAIN RISES ON LIGHT OFFERINGS

Absence of Cables and Bull Circular on Oats Cause Advance in Chicago.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red ..... 103½@105
Corn—No. 2 59
Oats—No. 2 ..... 36½@ 37

CHICAGO, May 12.—Coarse grains helped the wheat market this morning and the entire list was stronger and higher. Rains are needed in Kansas in the wheat belt and the bears are slow to attack the situation in consequence. There were no cables to-day, the markets of the Old World being closed in observance of Whitmonday.

The routine statistics were about as expected and there were heavier receipts of wheat both at the Northwestern as well as Winnipeg markets. World's shipments were 12,500 bushels, against 11,700 bushels a year ago. Later prices show advances over the resting spots of Saturday of ⅛c to ¼c.

Shorts were buyers of corn.

The feature in oats was the strength shown by May, which was bid up from 36⅝c to 38c. The more deferred months were strong in sympathy with May.

Provisions were weak in sympathy with lower hog market.

Corn decreased 1,457,000 bushels.
Oats decreased 599,000 bushels.

HOG RUN HEAVIER.

CHICAGO, May 12.—More hogs showed up than the trade expected, causing a 5c decline. Cattle trade was steady but slow, while the live muttons were 10c to 15c higher. Hogs sold largely at 8.35@8.45 and cattle at 7.75@8.25. There were 108,000 hogs in eleven markets, against 105,000 last week and 97,000 a year ago. Cattle receipts were fairly heavy here, but light at outside markets.

LIVE STOCK MARKET.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Hogs—Receipts 40,000. Market 5c lower. Mixed and butchers $8.25@8.50, good heavy $8.25@8.45, rough heavy $8.05@8.20, light $8.25@8.50, pigs $6.50@8.10, bulk $8.35@8.45.

OPINIONS ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Bartlett H. Frazier & Co.: Wheat—We do not look for any material change in prices and anything in the way of bullish items would doubtless cause a further covering movement on the part of shorts, of which there are still a great many.

Corn—Short sellers are decidedly less aggressive, realizing to a greater or less extent. The present strength of the market lies in the firmness of the cash and May position and constantly decreasing stocks with no pressure from first hands.

WORLD'S SHIPMENTS.

Wheat, 12,576,000 bushels, against 11,075,000 bushels last year and 11,744,000 bushels for the same week in 1911.

Corn, 4,617,000 bushels, compared with 3,208,000 bushels for the corresponding week last year and 5,553,000 bushels for the same week the year before.

Total wheat taken by Continental countries during the past week aggregated 6,744,00 bushels, compared with 5,496,000 bushels for the same week last year and 5,352,000 bushels during the same week the year before.

Cotton Stands Poor; Expect Short Yield

Reports From Georgia to Agricultural Department Indicate Total Crop Will Show Decrease.

Reports from all over Georgia to the State Department of Agriculture show that the stands of cotton are unusually poor this year. This condition indicates that the first estimates of the cotton crop in Georgia for 1913 did not allow for a sufficient decrease.

J. J. Connor, head of the department, thinks the decrease in acreage this year would amount to more than the 3 per cent estimated by agricultural journals. This fact, taken in connection with the prospects for a yield per acre below the average, corroborates the opinions of experts that the total yield will show a marked decrease.

The officials of the Agricultural Department Monday attributed the poor stands to the long period of dry weather which has followed the earlier torrential rains.

Stockholders Fight Insurance Changes

Enjoin Georgia Life Company From Reducing Capital and Revising Its Name.

MACON, GA., May 12.—Three stockholders of the Georgia Life Insurance Company to-day obtained an injunction from the Superior Court restraining the company from reducing its stock from $1,000,000 to $300,000, as it was proposed to do at a meeting of the stockholders to-morrow, and also from changing its name to the Georgia Casualty Company. The court has set June 13 for the hearing.

The petitioners charge that W. E. Small, president, and R. L. Wilson, of Cordele, vice president, depreciated the market value of the stock and bought in enough to secure control of the assets.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Serious Mistakes Of the Beginner in Poultry Business

Safe Road as Well as the One To Be Avoided—Pure Stock Necessary.

A great many serious mistakes are being made by beginners in the poultry business from ignorance. True, experience is a very good and safe teacher, but often very expensive in both time and money.

It is for this reason we desire to point out the safe road as well as the one to be avoided.

An idea prevalent with beginners in starting with thoroughbred stock is that all that is necessary is that stock be pure, so-called. In other words, they purchase stock of a neighbor who says his stock is pure, but when an expert breeder or judge looks at this stock he finds that it is anything but what high-class standard bred stock should be.

But you ask, If it is pure what can be the matter with it? A great many things can be the matter with it. The most common mode of breeding where carelessness rules is in letting all classes of the breed run in the breeding pen.

For example, take the Barred Rock, which is quite familiar, in a certain way, to almost everyone. Upon the premises of this careless breeder we find hens of forty different shapes and shades of color, from light to almost solid black. These are running promiscuously with a half dozen roosters, all different in color and type of make-up. If you stop to think for a moment, can't you imagine what such a combination would produce, or as the Dutchman said, "what it would not produce?" We can not hope for anything in the shape of uniformity of the young stock we raise when all sizes, shapes and colors were allowed to run together and form the breeding stock.

Culls Bound to Come.

That the best and selected stock will breed some culls no experienced breeder of any breed will deny. They are bound to come. That the tendency is downward instead of upward. If no culling is done, will also be readily admitted by the experienced. Consequently, if we expect to improve or even maintain a high standard of excellence, we must breed from only the choicest specimens, putting those of uniform color and breeding types into the same pens. This plan, and this alone, will prove satisfactory.

Eggs at $2 and $3 seem unreasonable and too high to the average farmer or villager who has made no study of the conditions, and the temptation to buy the cheapest eggs he can get is generally more than he can stand. If he be at all progressive in his make-up, and has any idea of eventually getting the best, the change will come sooner or later when this cheap stock will be disposed of and a fresh start made. But this is expensive in both time and money wasted. True, a man might take quite a low-grade of stock and with years of patient culling and breeding get to where it would make a pretty good showing. But my, what a long and tedious road to travel!

Now, friends, you who are starting or getting ready to invest in pure bred stock and have an eye to the beautiful and the best, take my advice and open your purse wide enough to get something good. If you do not get just what you thought you would, try it again and keep on until you succeed.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Highland Avenue Sales Net $20,200

Three Brick Stores Change Hands. Workmen Demolish 301 Peachtree for Improvements.

The Realty Mortgage Company sold to a client of the Charles P. Glover real estate agency to-day the southwest corner of Highland and Greenwood Avenues, three brick stores, for $15,000, and two 20x90-foot lots adjoining the stores on Highland Avenue for $2,000, and two 80x102-foot lots adjoining the stores on Greenwood Avenue for $3,200, making a total in the three parcels of $20,200.

Peachtree Home Demolished.

Workmen began to-day tearing down 301 Peachtree Street to make way for business improvements. This property has had an interesting history in the real estate market. Luther Z. Rosser bought it several years ago for $20,000 and the Forrest & George Adair agency sold it for Mr. Rosser in the middle of March to J. S. Floyd for $100,500, or at the rate of $1,605 a front foot.

The frontage is 62 feet on Peachtree and 74 feet on Ivy Street, and the depth is 260.5 feet. The Peachtree dwelling is two stories and has been used as a boarding house. The property is on the east side of the street, half a block north of Baker Street.

The People Must Now Depend

Upon the Senate for Genuine Reciprocity Provisions in Tariff Bill.

It is upon the Senate that the people must depend for genuine reciprocity provisions in the tariff bill.

The Senate will not be driven into line by a caucus whip. It will have a chance to treat a serious matter with the deliberation it deserves.

There are good reasons for believing that the Senate has ceased to be what it once was—the stronghold of party regularity and of those special interests that have for so long practiced the arts of party regimentation and applied the strangulation of the party gag. There are good reasons for believing that the Senate will respond to the well-nigh unanimous popular demand for real and efficient reciprocity.

The tariff bill was sent to the Senate tagged with the empty NAME of reciprocity, but with no SUBSTANCE of reciprocity in it. It would give away—ABSOLUTELY AND WITHOUT CONDITION—to Canada and other nations trade privileges and immunities that ought to be reserved and kept for the present in our own hands AS A BASIS FOR TARIFF BARGAINING. It would fling a long "free list" at the feet of our trade rivals—WITHOUT ASKING ANY FREEDOM FOR OUR OWN COMMERCE IN RETURN.

Thus the tariff as it stands is not merely wrong in a hundred details. It is wrong in principle. It flouts the very principle that it so loudly proclaims. It makes a mockery of reciprocity.

The fact that the tariff bill in its present shape is not only unreasonable, but in many namable respects CONSCIOUSLY and RECKLESSLY unreasonable, may be illustrated by the particular status of the schedule that has to do with the various grain staples—wheat, oats, rye, buckwheat—and their manufactured products.

When the bill first went to caucus a tax of 10 per cent or so was placed on all these staples, while in every case the foodstuffs made from them by various manufacturing processes WERE ALL PUT UPON THE FREE LIST.

The obvious effect of such an arrangement would be TO DRIVE MOST OF OUR FOOD MANUFACTURING BUSINESS INTO CANADA—with very damaging consequences not only to our manufacturers, but also to our farmers.

Now note the reckless and irresponsible character of the House's tariff tinkering, as shown in this grain schedule. It turns out that the House has been driven by pressure from certain quarters to put natural rye and buckwheat, as well as their manufactured products, on the free list. BUT IT HAS ALLOWED THE 10 PER CENT TAX TO STAND AGAINST NATURAL UNMANUFACTURED WHEAT AND OATS.

There is no earthly reason why this discrimination should have been made—at least no reason fit to print.

The whole grain schedule in its original form was topsy-turvy and preposterous—damaging to every legitimate American interest. As it now stands it outrages every principle of reciprocity and has, besides, lost the consistency and logicality of its original foolishness.

IS THERE ANY MEMBER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES WHO WILL DARE STAND UP AND JUSTIFY THE GRAIN SCHEDULE ON GROUNDS OF RECIPROCITY—OR OF RATIONALITY?

Some More Law on Canal Tolls

In a leading editorial expression in the current Bench and Bar the editors declare, as legal experts, that the provision of the Panama Canal bill to exempt from tolls American coastwise shipping does not seem to contravene any article of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. They say:

"We confess to having been much impressed by Senator O'Gorman's address before the Senate, in which the position was taken that the provision of the canal bill to exempt from tolls American coastwise shipping is not in contravention of Article III of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

"That is to say, as there is nothing to prevent the other nations, including Great Britain, from remitting or reimbursing by subsidy or otherwise all tolls paid by their citizens or subjects for vessels making use of the canal, it is unreasonable to suppose that the United States, by whose money and genius the canal was made possible, may not do likewise with reference to its own citizens.

"In other words, we can see no great difference, in principle, between the right of the United States to reimburse and its right to remit or exempt, and to hold that this country might not exempt its own shipping from tolls would, it seems to us, be to deprive it of a power which clearly resides in every other nation which may make use of the canal."

England's Insurance Against Attack

R R

No Nation Would Ever Attack This Country, He Says, if Our Navy Were Ample For Self-Defense—If It were Large Enough to Protect Both Our Atlantic and Pacific Coasts.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

DR. LYMAN ABBOTT is receiving the merited congratulations of his countrymen for the level-headed common sense of his position as an advocate of universal peace.

Dr. Abbott is constitutionally an advocate of peace. He is temperamentally a man of common sense.

And the peace societies which have sought to discipline him by dismissing him from their membership have emphasized in a very great degree the eminent soundness of Dr. Abbott's method of promoting universal peace.

The best way to promote peace is to be prepared for war.

There was never a sounder maxim in history or experience. England has been for four hundred years the prophet and exponent of that doctrine among nations. And England's evangel has gone far as the curse of war is found and has presented a great example as the vindication of a wise and far-seeing policy.

Immune From Attacks.

There can be no answer by the "peace-at-any-price" men to the fact that with the greatest navy in the world England has been absolutely immune from attacks by any foreign nation and absolutely exempt from any war which she did not choose to make.

No nation has attacked England within these four centuries. No nation would attack any other country that had as great a navy as England. No nation would ever attack this country if our navy were ample for self-defense—if it were large enough to protect both our Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

This fact is so true and so self-evident that it is worthy to be an axiom. It is so true and has been so conspicuously vindicated as true that it is simply wonderful that other nations, and particularly our own nation, has not had the common sense to follow it.

Our Own Navy.

The present size of our navy, inadequate as it is, will explain the fact that we have enjoyed a comparative exemption so long as we had no navy, and England one hundred years ago took advantage of our poverty in warships, sailed up our majestic Potomac and laid the capital of this Republic in ashes.

Germany, the most martial of European nations, realizes the common sense which Dr. Abbott has so placidly expressed, and is constantly building its navy to the standard of preserving peace.

Japan has expressed every progressive step in its modern development by the yearly reinforcement of its navy. The teachable genius of Japan is vigorously illustrated in the fact that its answer to the suggestions of the present controversy with the United States is to give an order for three great battleships at once.

For Universal Peace.

There are no sincerer advocates of universal peace than the Hearst newspapers. The editorial page of The New York American contained the article written three years ago on Christmas Day which revived the sentiment for universal peace throughout the world. Copies of that editorial were sent by distinguished hands to the rulers and chief authorities of every great kingdom in the world. It represented, I think, the spirit of the Hearst newspapers. And it was regarded and reproduced as one of the soundest and most effective arguments ever written for universal peace.

But the spirit of that utterance, like the spirit of Lyman Abbott, was the spirit of prudence and of common sense. It realized the fact that no nation can fold its hands and throw away its fighting power while other nations increase their fighting power. Dr. Abbott expressed it in an effective epigram:

An Alternative.

"There are two ways in which a nation can maintain peace. Either by being so weak that it can not fight, or by being so strong that nobody wants to fight it. Our nation should be so strong it will never have to fight."

By and by, when the great nations fully realize that each one is in the race of great navies to stay as long as the others stay, the universal common sense will bring about the universal agreement of nations to cease the building of navies and to submit all quarrels to just tribunals for decision.

But until that day there is no wise or patriotic thing to do but to keep the pace and keep up with the procession, and, as far as national resources will allow, to lead the procession as the United States can do.

The United States Congress will demonstrate the narrowness of its judgment, the weakness of its comprehension and the lack of patriotism in its ranks, if it fails to keep this country side by side with every other great country so long as great navies are the only peace-makers and the only insurance policies against the destruction of war.

We are able to pay $20,000,000 a year as an insurance against war. Let this Congress take out the policy.

.:. Sending Messages and Carrying Them .:.

By ELBERT HUBBARD.

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

IT is, of course, very necessary that when you are intrusted with a message you shall deliver it to the right party in the least possible space of time.

The man, however, who intrusts another with a message has a duty to perform quite as much as the man who is given one.

There are men who can never get messages carried, and other men there be who inspire messengers with loyalty, fidelity and courage.

It is a somewhat curious thing that the most able men are never good teachers. "The great teacher," says Emerson, "is not the man who supplies the most facts, but the one in whose presence we become different people."

Too much individuality repels, overawes, subdues. An overpowering personality is a willopus-wallopus—in other words, a steam-roller that flattens anything and everybody in the vicinity.

Making Merchants.

In the United States there are a few merchants who are discoverers of genius, but most are served by the mediocre, not to mention the time-server, the flunkey, the hypocrite and the lickspittle.

One great merchant in the United States lives in history, not only because he was a great merchant, but because he discovered to the world fully a half-dozen other great merchants. That is, he took young men, gave them an opportunity, and under his beneficent guiding influence these country boys bloomed and blossomed.

When you expect a messenger to deliver a message it is well not to hamper him with too many instructions, nor scare him into innocuous desuetude by retailing the dangers that he will encounter, describing for him the punishment he will receive if he fails to deliver the message.

It is a great man who knows when to place reliance in another, to relegate and delegate and keep discipline out of sight. To let one line of figures at the bottom of the balance sheet tell the tale. This is genius.

Genius in Selection.

Of course, if you repose confidence in the wrong man you will rue it, but genius turns on selection. Big men, nowadays, are big because they get others to do their work.

Napoleon said: "I win my battles with my marshals!" And then when he was asked where he got his marshals, he said: "I make them out of mud!"

What he meant was that he took obscure men and lifted them into positions of prominence by throwing responsibility on them.

Note the loyalty and love of Bertrand, who followed his master to St. Helena, giving up home, religion, family and all of his own private interests that he might serve his master—even refusing to leave his master when he was dead, but remaining at St. Helena in order that his own dust might mingle in the grave with this man he loved.

ELBERT HUBBARD.

Any one who can inspire another with such love cannot be obliterated by the scratch of the pen or the shrug of a shoulder.

Napoleon certainly had personality; at the same time he did not use it to destroy the personality of others.

Ben Lindsey's Boys.

Great is the man—supremely great—who does not bestride the narrow world like a colossus and cause other men to run and peep about under his huge legs to find themselves dishonorable graves.

The world is big enough for all of us, and a very good slogan is: "Make room! Make room!" And if you are bound to give an order, let it be this: "Open up that gangway!"

Ben Lindsey has entrusted a thousand boys, each with a message, and the message he gave them was their commitment papers.

These boys carried the message; and out of the thousand a scant half dozen proved derelict. And just remember that all of these boys belonged to the "criminal class!"

Let us here quote Napoleon again, who said: "The criminal class? Ah, yes, I fight my battles with the criminal class!"

To entrust a message to a messenger with the full confidence that he will do naught else but deliver it to the proper person, and this expeditiously, is a fine art that employers would do well to acquire.

A trusted messenger is fine, but a trusting employer is finer still.

A breath of suspicion will taint the whole fabric of trust. If Ben Lindsey doubted that his boys would go where they were sent, very few of them would ever reach the iron gates and hear their clanging welcome.

A Fine Idea.

The secret of Ben Lindsey's success is simple: he believes in his boys. And that is why the boys believe in him.

Ben Lindsey kissing the cheek of a bad boy and sending the lad away to prison alone, unattended, uncoerced, is a finer thing to me than Napoleon's habit of pulling down the head of one of his marshals and kissing the bearded cheek.

"Know thyself!" said Socrates.

"Trust thyself!" said Emerson.

"Trust others!" says Ben Lindsey.

When President McKinley gave that message to Rowan he trusted Rowan to carry it. There were no instructions, no threats, no implied doubts, no injunctions. Rowan asked no questions; neither did McKinley.

The big man is not the man who wants to live not only his own life but the life of others, but he is great who reposes faith in others, and thus brings out the best that is in them, that which was often before unguessed.

The Country as Seen by a City Man

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

FAR from the glad cries of the traffic policeman to the patient truck driver the pleasant perfume of the gas mains, and the joyous tumult of the shoppers' crush is a strange, weird region called The Country.

Keep away from it! For miles and miles you may wander its monotonous green wastes and never hear the reverberating music of a trolley car rounding a curve.

You will miss the kindly warning of the chauffeur as you crawl from beneath the wheels of his car; your heart will be heavy with homesickness for the freshly turned earth on the torn up streets, and the dainty plank walks around excavations for new buildings.

No Safes Going Up.

There are no flats in the country. There are no gala block-long displays of family washing swung between brick dwellings, like the fluttering pennants on a holiday-dressed man-of-war. No safes destined for the thirty-second story of a highly thatched skyscraper part their hawsers and come hurtling down to the pavement, to provide edification to all nearby populace save that portion that happens to be directly underneath. Never does a fire chief drive unconventionally down the sidewalk execrating the fleeing public as he sweeps by. Never does an ambulance on its splendid errand of mercy crash madly through a crowd, and make business for the other ambulances that follow in its wake.

Evil and savage beasts confront you at every turn. Horned monsters that cry "Moo" and leer at you with lambent fire in their fearsome brown eyes; reptiles that sit on logs chorusing "cheep, cheep," until you approach, and then plunge suspiciously into pools as if distrustful of your presence; long-eared, white-tailed creatures that flicker across your path like flashes of light or peer at you silent and sinister from behind stone walls; winged creatures with plumage copied from women's hats, that chatter in the boughs of trees at sunset, and are up at the first blush of dawn to break your rest with their shrill piping.

All Poets Are Mad!

From the earth and from the dark green woods come scents that startle and disquiet you—not the familiar smells of banana peels, and coal smoke and sewer manholes, but disturbing, unrecognized odors that proceed from tawdry, flimsy creations called flowers, that have their roots in the common dingy ground.

A mad poet—all poets are mad, but this one was madder than most of his fellows—once wrote:

"They come, the merry summer months, with beauty, song and flowers.
They come, the gladsome months that bring thick leafiness to bowers.
Up! Up! My soul, and walk abroad; fling cark and care aside;
Seek silent woods, or rest thyself where peaceful waters glide;
Or underneath the shadow vast of patriarchal tree
Scan through its leaves the boundless sky, in rapt tranquility."

Pay no attention to this lunatic rhapsody. Keep away from The Country—especially in spring.

The Story of the Loyalists

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

ONE hundred and thirty-five years ago a little company of men, women and children, numbering altogether some hundred and ninety-six souls, turned and struck out for the wilds of Canada.

It was the beginning of the exodus of the "Tories," or, as they called themselves, the "Loyalists." Starting soon after the American Declaration of Independence, the movement broadened and deepened until it took in tens of thousands. It has been estimated that more than one hundred thousand American colonists took refuge in Canada between 1778 and 1784.

These Tories, or Loyalists, were to be found in all the colonies, and in large numbers. Some authorities of acknowledged respectability declare that they were as numerous as the Patriots and in many localities outnumbered them. They were strong in New York State, in North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

In wealth, education and social standing they were far superior to the Whigs, or Patriots. To them belonged nearly all of the "leading families" and "distinguished individuals" of the time. The ancestors of many of the prominent New Yorkers and other influential Americans of to-day were among those who emigrated to Canada rather than live under the banner of the rebeldom.

One of the good things about Time is that it heals wounds, cools passion and opens the eyes of the understanding, so that we can see with unclouded vision the things to which we were once blinded.

The Tories believed that it was their duty to be loyal to the British King and nation, and in obedience to that conviction they stood ready to sacrifice the most precious things that "mortal time affords"—home, wealth, comfort, the good will of their neighbors—yes, and life itself.

From a sense of duty the Loyalists forsook all these things and cast themselves into the bleak, wild, inhospitable wilderness of the North, to suffer unspeakable privations and perils; and small is the mind that is not able to see in all this the highest and grandest of manhood—the Manhood of Principle, the manhood which cheerfully accepts the work in order that it may be faithful to that which it believes to be right.

Absolute truth and right is a mere chimera. The only truth and right that mortals can know anything about, or should be at all concerned about, is that which really and truly commends itself to them as such. The Eternal alone knows what is actually right, and the only thing for us to do is to stand true to that which we honestly feel to be right.

That's what the Tories did. That's what the Patriots did. And they were both right.
